Local molestation cases concluded

Karate teacher acquitted of assault charges

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland jury late Friday acquitted karate champion Juan Antonio Lopez of two counts of sexually assaulting a long-time student, after more than seven hours of deliberations.

A mistrial was declared after the panel could not reach a unanimous decision on the third count.

A wet-eyed Lopez hugged his wife Terry, family members and attorney Tom Morgan after the verdicts were read by 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin.

"I'm elated," Morgan said outside the courtroom. "It was a hard-fought trial. And I look very much forward to the re-trial."

Jurors felt Lopez, 35, did not assault the former student, now 16, on Jan. 20, 1986, and Feb. 24, 1989. They disagreed about an assault which allegedly occurred on March 24, 1989.

Prosecutor Randy Fluke had little comment on the verdicts or prospects for a retrial.

"The amount of time the jury spent deliberating on the case shows that they took their task seriously," Fluke said. "The (remaining) case is pending, so I am really not in a position to comment on that."

Lopez still faces a sexual assault charge in Odessa involving the same victim. That assault allegedly occurred Dec. 20, 1983, at an apartment complex when the girl was 11 years of age, Odessa police said.

In closing arguments, prosecutors and Morgan took turns questioning the credibility of the other side's witnesses.

Morgan portrayed the girl, who watched in the courtroom, as a chronic liar. He told jurors the girl had lied several times, and had urged her boyfriend to lie for her.

Testimony from defense witnesses, including the defendant and members of his family, proved the assaults could not have occurred because they refuted statements by the victim, according to Morgan.

But in his argument, Fluke said: "His (Morgan's) logic is twisted and he misses the point."

Testimony showed the Lopez, a former world and national titlist, first instructed the girl when she was 8. Their relationship remained close — including living in the same household for months at a time — until the girl went to police in the spring of 1989.

The girl told jurors she did not resist the sexual advances because of respect and obedience for her long-time instructor.

But Lopez and others testified the girl was obsessed with him and vowed to marry him.

Court date

Donald Allen Turner, center, leaves court Friday after pleading guilty to three counts of indecency with a child in return for a 10-year probated sentence. His wife Susan and attorney Paul Williams flank him as they exit the 142nd State District Courtroom.

Geologist given probation after pleading guilty

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Donald Allen Turner, the Midland geologist a jury failed to convict on 10 counts of child molestation three months ago, avoided a retrial Friday when he pleaded guilty to three of the charges.

The 47-year-old Turner received a 10-year probated sentence from 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin as part of a plea agreement with prosecutors. He will also have to undergo and pay for 30 days of psychiatric testing at a San Antonio facility, Baskin said.

"Are your pleas of guilty free and voluntary?" Baskin asked Turner, who was accompanied by his attorney, Paul Williams.

"Yes, sir," the U.S. Navy veteran said in a soft voice.

Turner cannot "initiate" contact with any of the nine girls he was accused of molesting, and cannot go to Midland's Butler Park, where one of the incidents allegedly occurred, the plea agreement states.

"I think Don was at the end of his rope both financially and emotionally," Williams said, estimating that Turner spent well over $50,000 for his defense.

Final adjudication of the sentence was deferred, which means the conviction will not be on his record if the probated term is fulfilled.

"All things considered, this was the best for him," the attorney said.

Turner and his wife Susan are planning to leave Midland, Williams said.

Turner pleaded guilty to three counts of indecency with a child which occurred on Oct. 1, 1987, July 16, 1988, and Sept. 30, 1988. There was a separate victim in each case.

Two counts of aggravated sexual assault and five counts of indecency with a child were dismissed by Baskin.

"I regard them as disposed of and permanently disposed of," the judge said.

Williams said neither side "won."

"There were compromises made on both sides," he said.

Prosecutors Robin Sams and Randy Fluke said they were pleased with the agreement.

"The pleas of guilty indicate the District Attorney's office, the families and the children themselves were on the right track," Ms. Sams said, referring to Turner's October 1989 trial.

"I'm glad for the children because this confirms their testimony was truthful," she said.

Permit hearing focuses on effluent's effects on draw

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Water is sometimes unwanted — even in parched West Texas where water is not only as vital as air and soil but is piped in from afar.

People want water when they want it. Otherwise, they turn it aside.

In Odessa, it's flushed, cleaned up and discharged down a creek called Monahans Draw.

How that cleaned-up wastewater from Odessa's two sewage treatment plants affects the meandering draw and people downstream has been crucial in the 2½-day Texas Water Commission (TWC) hearing in Odessa.

The TWC hearing was to focus on the effectiveness of the two plants in cleaning up volumes of wastewater.

"Every solution is full of problems," said Earnest Casstevens, an Austin lawyer who argued in favor of Odessa's permit renewals. He quoted former Houston Mayor Louie Welch to reflect attitudes toward wastes:

"Everybody wants me to pick up the garbage, but nobody wants me to put it down."

That's the problem with most of the treated wastewater.

Opposing Casstevens was Midland lawyer Paul Bohannon, who represented protesters of the permit renewals. Bohannon argued that effluent commingled with rainwater runoff to flood acreage farmed by Lee Bell and Mike Payne and worked by horse stabler Louise Gay.

"We are open-minded," Bohannon said. "We don't care what the solutions are" as long as the effluent doesn't flood private property along the draw's eastward flow south of Midland.

Casstevens surmised that not many farmers, or anybody else, want to pay for moving the effluent for irrigation because of the expense of building pipelines and lagoons and pumping the water.

But if, for instance, cotton prices were to soar, more people would get into farming. And more farmers would want the water for irrigation.

"In time, it may well become economical," Casstevens said.

Most of the water coming into Midland and Odessa is pumped from lakes owned and operated by the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Some landowners along the draw complained of the draw's flooding in the 1980s — the "wettest" decade in the Midland-Odessa area since the 1930s.

Odessa contends that the flooding was caused by natural rainwater runoff and that the city was not liable for the flooding.

And whether or not Odessa will get its discharge permits renewed, denied or modified will be decided this spring in Austin by the three TWC commissioners: Buck Jim Wynne III of Dallas, Cliff Johnson of Palestine, and John Birdwell of Lubbock.

Odessa City Manager Bill Brown recently said city leaders "feel very confident" that the discharge permits will be renewed.

But TWC wastewater engineer Louis C. Herrin III, who has prepared many permits, said he has "no idea what the commissioners will do."

Herrin and TWC Hearing Examiner Leslie Limes will make recommendations to the commission on Odessa's renewal requests.

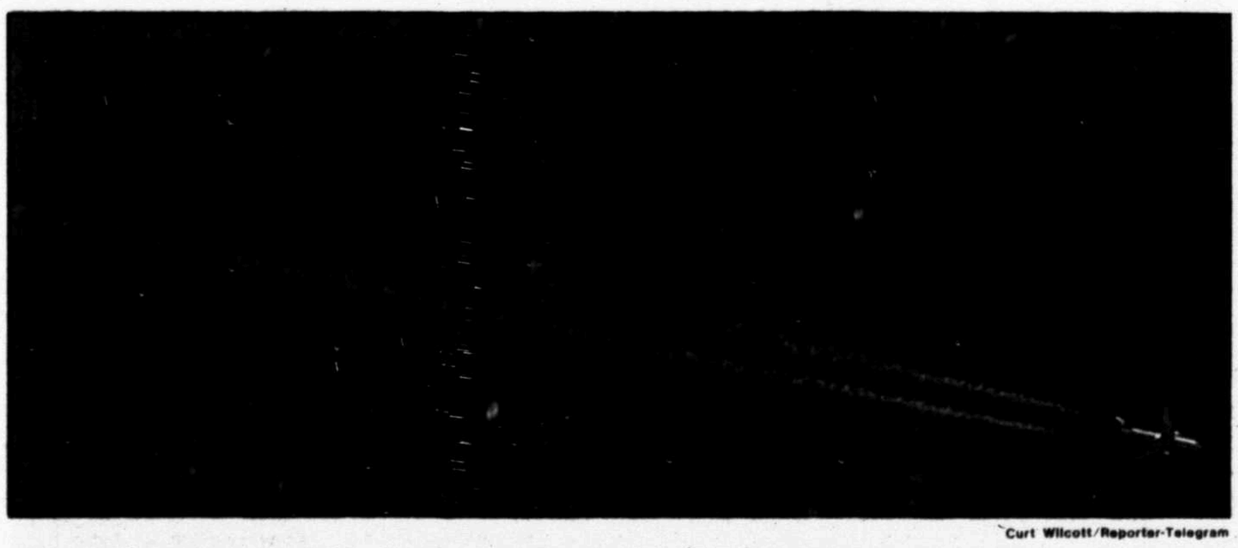

"I can't speculate," Herrin said. "I've seen the commission do all types of things."

Ms. Limes will submit transcripts of the 2½-day hearing, along the written closing arguments by attorneys, to the commissioners. She is to prepare the material in the 30 days after Feb. 26 — deadline for closing arguments.

And between three and six weeks after that — in April or May — the TWC will render its decision on the permits.

Whether discharge from Odessa's older South Dixie and newer East Water reclamation plant are causing flooding or resulting in property damages "are properly decided by the courts," Casstevens said.

Twin trails

A high-flying jet leaves twin trails across the bright West Texas sky. Unseasonably warm temperatures are expected to continue today, but Sunday's highs are expected to climb only to the upper 40s.

Cheney would cut some Texas bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has recommended closing or reducing the missions of several military installations across Texas, including dismanting a 12,204-troop division at Fort Hood and closing Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin, officials said Friday.

Capitol Hill officials said Cheney's sweeping list also targets for closure the environmentally troubled Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant at Karnack and the Navy's Chase Field in Beeville.

At Fort Sam Houston, a congressional source said Cheney planned to eliminate the Health Services Command as a major command and transfer the functions to tactical medical units, resulting in the loss of 181 military and 311 civilian jobs beginning in 1993.

Cheney would also scrap a $156 million modernization of the Red River Army Depot's central distribution center, robbing the Texarkana facility of its supply role but keeping intact its maintenance functions.

Statewide, thousands of military and civilian employees, reservists and National Guardsmen would be affected by Cheney's proposals, which the Pentagon plans to unveil Monday as part of its 1991 budget request.

Stanton stirring up state soup cook-off

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

STANTON — This West Texas town, which proudly guards its "Old Sorehead" reputation, is conjuring up "The Great Texas Soup Cook-Off" to expand its small-town fame.

And the community is bent on making a dollar in the name of restoring an old convent — a former Catholic monastery.

The Martin County Convent Foundation is sponsoring the cook-off at 5 p.m. today in the Martin County Community Center. Funds from the cook-off are to go toward restoration of the Old Convent, which began as a monastery for Carmelite monks in the 1890s when the settlement was named "Marienfeld." The convent and academy were abandoned following a tornado which struck Stanton in 1936.

"I think we are going to have quite a bit of soups," said Kathryn Burch, cook-off promoter and a convent foundation board member.

Soups will be prepared by individuals and groups.

The people will be the judges of the best-tasting soups.

"Everyone who comes to taste the soup will get to judge," Mrs. Burch said. The tasting-judging fee is $3 per person.

"Hopefully," she said, "by the time you taste all of the soups, you will be full."

Mrs. Burch expects the soups to be infiltrated by some Texas chili and stew.

"We'd love for it (the cook-off) to become a nice, annual, statewide event."

Among the notable soups to be palate-tasted will be a batch concocted by Stanton's Methodists. It's called "Sorehead Soup."

"You can vary the fresh vegetables in this soup to suit what's (or who's) available," says the church's recipe. For "heartier" soup, two cups of diced, cooked chicken may be added.

More than just to raise hard cash to restore the plank-adobe building, the cook-off is to get "the people out and get them back in the convent project," Mrs. Burch said.

"We are going to raise some money with the soup," she said. "The reason we are doing this is to be get people involved in supporting the project."

"We don't have a lot of history out here in West Texas," Mrs. Burch said. "But what we do have, we would like to share."

Warm weather anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport predicts warm weather today, with a high near 70. Gusty north winds 15-25 mph are forecast for this afternoon.

The low tonight is forecast in the low 20s, and Sunday will be clear and cool, with a high in the upper 40s.

Yesterday's high of 75 missed the record of 81, set in 1953, by six degrees. The overnight low of 35 was 26 degrees off the record of 9 set in 1948.

STATE

A high-pressure system in the Gulf of Mexico brought unseasonably warm temperatures and mostly sunny skies to Texas, with forecasters Friday predicting the trend to moderate through the weekend and into early next week.

Moisture and cloudiness were low under the influence of a low-pressure trough located in the Panhandle, helping to reinforce a dry southwest flow of air into Texas from Mexico, the National Weather Service said.

The warm front brought afternoon temperatures into the 60s and 70s, except for readings in the 40s and 50s in the Panhandle, according to the weather service. The mercury reached 72 degrees at McAllen and Alice.

Winds were mostly variable across the state at 15 to 25 mph and gusty. The weather service said a grass fire danger exists across most of North Texas after humidities fell into the teens and 20s.

It should be fair to partly cloudy statewide through early Saturday, then mostly cloudy later in the day. Overnight lows were expected in the 40s to 50s in South Texas, 40s in northern sections and 20s and 30s in the Panhandle.

Highs Saturday should be in the 50s in North Texas, 70s in the south and 40s to 60s in West Texas and the Panhandle.

NATION

A windy storm blew snow and rain across parts of the Northwest on Friday, and rain and snow also were scattered over the Northeast.

At midday, snow showers extended over south-central and western Montana, Western Wyoming, northern Nevada, the mountains of northern California and southern Oregon, and west-central Washington state.

To the south, rain showers reached across northwestern Oregon and along the northern coast of California.

Up to 3 inches of snow fell overnight and during the morning at Jackson Hole, Wyo., and as much as 8 inches of snow fell in the Tetons and Absaroka mountains of northwestern Wyoming.

Winter storm warnings were posted into Saturday over the Washington Cascades and Olympics.

A high wind warning was in effect through Saturday over the eastern foothills of Colorado, where gusts reached 90 mph Friday morning at Rollinsville.

Rain fell over much of New England, southeastern New York state and New Jersey. Snow extended from west-central New England across southern New York state, northern and western Pennsylvania and northeastern Ohio. Rain over southern Maine changed to snow by early afternoon.

Three inches of snow fell at Binghamton, N.Y., during the 6 hours up to noon.

The greatest impact of the plan in Texas would be felt by Killeen's Fort Hood, the largest military installation in the free world, which stands to lose its 2nd Armored Division of 12,204 military employees, along with some civilian workers, officials said.

But Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said he was hopeful Friday that if the Soviets agree to President Bush's conventional force reduction proposal for Europe, that those losses could be offset by the return of U.S. troops in Europe to Fort Hood.

"We can offset the troop loss at Fort Hood and virtually eliminate the impact by bringing home troops from Europe to replace them," Gramm said. "That is vitally important in a county with a 13 percent unemployment rate."

Gramm said the plan calls for phasing out 3,000 troops this year and another 9,000 in 1991.

Depending on the outcome of the U.S.-Soviet negotiations on European troop strength, Fort Hood could be back to full strength by 1994, congressional officials were told.

Austin would also take a big hit with the loss of Bergstrom, which employs 5,433 military and 983 civilian workers.

Should Austin fail to convince Cheney to preserve the base during a Pentagon feasibility study, Gramm said, officials would move to ensure that the city is allowed to use the land immediately for a new airport.

Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, said Cheney's decision was "distressing news for Austin."

"I take some comfort in the fact that this type of procedure may be the price for peace, but I am still convinced that we can make a good case for Berstrom remaining a fully operational base," Pickle said.

Bergstrom's reserve unit would remain in Austin, officials said.

In East Texas, the Red River Army Depot would lose its supply distribution functions between 1991 and 1994, Gramm said, along with 1,905 of its approximately 5,300 civilian employees.

A congressional source said East Texas would also lose the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant in Karnack by 1994. Established in 1941, the plant employs about 800 workers. Its primary mission is to load, assemble and pack solid propellant rocket motors and phyrotechnic and illuminating ammunition.

PLEA

The October trial ended in a mistrial when the jury could not reach a unanimous verdict on any of the 10 counts against Turner. Prosecutors said a the time there would be a retrial.

The president of TEAM Exploration was accused of assaulting the nine girls between the ages of 7 and 12, all but one of them in his backyard swimming pool as they played rambunctious games with names like "Tickle Man," "Alligator," and "Shark."

The alleged assaults took place from 1987 to 1989.

After the 15-minute proceeding, Turner, his wife Susan and Williams met with a probation officer.

He then walked out of the courtroom and ducked into a doorway to avoid reporters and cameramen.

WATER

That's for the courts to worry about — not the commission."

Though Bohannon discussed those issues at the TWC hearing, he also has taken them to court and won. A jury in Stanton last year found Odessa liable for the 1980s flooding of Bell's cropland about 15 to 20 miles east of the two plants.

Bohannon said that if the TWC's only concern is "water quality" and not water quantity, then "We lose."

The lawyer is recommending increased irrigation to reduce the discharge into Monahans Draw and, he said, to curtail any flooding caused by effluent.

In testimony on Friday, Odessa consulting engineer John Landgraf reviewed proposed plans for disposing of the effluent.

Landgraf cited a $21-million proposal since rejected by the city, to build a 354-acre lagoon about 15 miles south of Odessa to receive the discharge. The projected costs would include $9.5 million for the pond, $5.7 million for the transfer lines, $759,000 for an effluent-pump station, $1.47 million for a center-pivot irrigation system, $1.26 million for a pump station, almost $2 million for renovation of the waste-water treatment plants and miscellaneous costs.

"It that a panacea — a perfect fix?" Casstevens asked Landgraf.

"No," he replied.

"If there a perfect fix?"

"I don't have the technological answer for a question like that," replied Landgraf, "but no."

The pond concept has flaws, Casstevens noted. Salts and other minerals would saturate the land.

"So, what you are creating is a dump site," Casstevens said.

Landgraf said no one "indicated interest" in farming adjacent to the plants or south of Odessa.

However, farmer W.T. Averitt III diverts water from the draw to irrigate. And Rexene Products Co. has a contract with the city to draw up to 6 million gallons of effluent daily for industrial purposes. However, the company has been drawing less than 3 million gallons daily but is under no quota, testimony indicated.

Under questioning by Casstevens, Landgraf said Odessa uses a dual cleansing system — primary and secondary — to clean up the wastewater. The secondary treatment, which is a step beyond Midland's primary wastewater treatment, turns out a "much higher quality of water" than just the primary treatment. Water treated by the additional secondary process has "many less suspended solids in it and is better quality water."

Following the hearing, Bohannon said "the farmers are flexible on what may be the solution" to holding down the flow of effluent into the draw.

However, Casstevens said that the effluent that gets into the draw is very little compared to the rainwater runoff and the storm-drainage system runoff.

Bohannon said he was not asking for 100 percent diversion of effluent from the draw. The $21-million proposal, since rejected, called for a 100-percent diversion.

Bohannon noted that the TWC in 1984 had ordered Odessa to fine ways to recycle effluent.

"The only effort for re-use has been studies?" he asked Landgraf.

"No, sir," said Landgraf, who cited Rexene's 6 million gallon contract.

"That's the potential amount," Bohannon noted.

In re-focusing on Monahans Draw, Bohannon later asked Landgraf if he would agree that "Monahans Draw was not created to carry wastewater plant discharges."

Replied Landgraf: "I certainly wouldn't try to presume what the Good Lord was intending."

Hance calls for quicker justice, expanded victims' rights

AUSTIN (AP) — Calling for expedited Death Row appeals, Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance said Friday too often the state talks tough but doesn't follow through on executing convicted murderers.

"There is no crime that's more unforgivable than murder," Hance said in releasing four proposals to expand crime victims' rights in Texas.

"While the state will talk tough about sending these thugs to Death Row, all too often the row becomes nothing more than a permanent holding pen," Hance told a news conference.

He said of more than 300 persons on Death Row, three were sentenced more than 15 years ago and more than 40 others were sentenced to death more than a decade ago.

Distributed with the Hance proposals were recommendations of his Anti-Crime and Drug Task Force, which said it costs the state $57.69 a day to care for each Death Row inmate.

"The concept of swift and sure punishment has become a joke to those that are on Death Row, but it's certainly no laughing matter for the families of the victims who must play the waiting game for too long," Hance said.

Hance said as governor he would encourage the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals to require that all Death Row appeals be decided within two years of conviction. He proposed that post-conviction writs of habeas corpus appeals, which are now unrestricted, be limited to two.

To help victims Hance also proposed:

■ Establishing a $1.5 million state matching grant program to develop support services.

■ Requiring judges to issue public statements explaining why they sentenced violent offenders to deferred adjudication or probation rather than prison.

■ Having a crime victims' advocate to notify crime victims of pending appeals or appeals decisions.

The victim, Hance said, "has become the one group in the process with little or no voice or representation."

In other political news Friday:

■ Former Gov. Mark White took his gubernatorial campaign to the Lower Rio Grande Valley on Friday, touting his role in reforming the state's public schools.

"I made every teacher and administrator mad in the state (in his 1982-1986 term)," White said Friday in McAllen. "Today, we are seeing a slight decline in dropout rates because of the efforts of administrators and teachers. We will be working with them to help them make changes. We must heal all wounds and work together."

White, seeking the Democratic Party nomination in the March 13 primary, told supporters he is being endorsed by several prominent coaches and teachers. He said he would meet with teachers and administrators to see whether education reforms he promoted need to be modified for improvements.

The former governor has said on numerous occasions that Republican Bill Clements was elected governor in 1986 because of White's support for requiring athletes to pass their courses and for teacher competency tests.

He said grades seem to have improved since the controversial no-pass no-play rule was implemented.

White also said schools should support the Spanish language.

"Texans need to promote the culture we enjoy in South Texas," he said. "If you go to another country and you don't speak two languages, you are not educated."

■ A break-in at the Travis County Democratic Party headquarters in Austin was not politically motivated because the burglar took only cash, officials said.

Executive Director Diane Russell said someone searched through drawers and took $150 in cash after breaking into a side window between 7:15 p.m. and 9:40 p.m. Tuesday.

"I tried to see if anything smacked of Watergate down here, but so far it's not," Ms. Russell said.

Bunton hearing trade secret case

AUSTIN (AP) — A trade secrets trial between two electronics giants started out with promises of high-tech trickery, but drew to a close with the judge counting down the seconds and some attorneys snoozing in their seats.

The trial began Monday. Its ho-hum finish came shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday with no decision.

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland, who heard the case, gave both sides until Feb. 5 to submit final written arguments. A decision is expected after that, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

Motorola, the Illinois-based electronics company, sued Hitachi last January, accusing the company of stealing some of the secrets used to make the computer microprocessors that are designed and built in Austin. Motorola claims the alleged technology theft cost the company $8 million in lost profits.

Hitachi, a former Motorola partner, countersued and claimed Motorola swiped its patents and damaged Hitachi's reputation. On Wednesday, an accountant for Hitachi testified that Motorola owes the company $3 million in past-due royalty payments plus other damages for lost business.

Plot delays sentencing

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — An investigation into an alleged plot to kill a federal agent has delayed sentencing of a Swede and a Canadian convicted in a plot to export arms illegally to Iran.

During a sentencing hearing Thursday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Berg told U.S. District Judge Hayden W. Head Jr. of an alleged plot by Swedish businessman Karl Erik Nissen to kill the federal agent who arrested him.

Nissen's sentencing was rescheduled for Feb. 26.

Fake documents taken

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Mexican nationals were arrested and more than 25,000 fake identification documents were seized at a home where an alleged smuggling ring made the counterfeit documents and sold them to illegal aliens, immigration officials said Friday.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials said it was the largest such seizure for the Southern Region.

Hobby feels income tax solution to school ills

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, speaking at a business conference Friday, called for a "rational" approach to solve the state's education ills, including more state aid and greater school efficiency.

"Schools that fail to educate kids should no longer be permitted to commit education child abuse," said Hobby.

The lieutenant governor repeated his belief that additional money needed for education should come from a state income tax, which would replace local property taxes and the business franchise tax.

But while that idea represents "the only rational answer," Hobby expects the Legislature instead to approve other revenue-raising measures when lawmakers consider the issue starting Feb. 27.

Gov. Bill Clements has called the Legislature back into session starting on that date to respond to a state Supreme Court decision which found the way Texas finances public education unconstitutional.

Clements' has said that the current state budget holds "ample" money to solve the problem, but Hobby said Clements "to be responsible" should outline which cuts should make room for more education spending.

"I have not been able to find any senators to sponsor a bill providing for those cuts," said Hobby, who is serving his last term in office.

The lieutenant governor said his advisors have identified $375 million in what he called "the most attractive" cuts.

They include reduced spending on prison construction, eliminating a 3 percent higher education pay raise and lowering the state's contribution to teacher and employee retirement systems.

Other savings could come in canceling the $100 million earmarked for state Capitol renovation and cuts in the junior college and remedial education budgets.

Surveying legislative alternatives involved in reaching consensus, Hobby said, "I think the situation has probably got to get worse before it gets better."

The lieutenant governor also was unsure what to expect from a special task force with members appointed by Clements, House Speaker Gib Lewis and himself that is studying the issue.

The task force is scheduled to release its recommendations Feb. 27.

California task force recommending more self-esteem teams

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A state task force that's been lampooned as an emporium of New Age buzzwords completed its three-year mission with a report enshrining self-esteem as a "social vaccine" that "empowers us to live responsibly."

Much of the rest of the country may be snickering, but 42 of California's 58 counties, including conservative rural ones, already have formed local self-esteem teams.

In its 144-page final report issued Tuesday, the California Task Force to Promote Self-Esteem and Personal and Social Responsibility recommended more parenting courses, smaller school classes and pro-family worksite policies.

When the task force was created with the blessing of Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, it was met with scorn. Cartoonist Garry Trudeau poked fun in "Doonesbury," having his bubble-headed character Boopsie named to the task force, which she called "the first official study of New Age thinking."

The 24 task force members "have brought the matter of self-esteem from a matter of ridicule to a subject of respect," said Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, the Democrat who sponsored the bill creating the group.

Twenty-three of the members signed the report. The 24th, David Shannahoff-Khalsa, called it "incredibly superficial and naive."

"Self-esteem cannot be administered, injected, nor given to any one," he said in a telephone interview from his Del Mar home. "This elusive term ... is being promoted as a universal remedy for a society that is becoming increasingly complex and disfunctional."

The report compared self-esteem to a "social vaccine, something that empowers us to live responsibly and that inoculates us against the lures of crime, violence, substance abuse, teen pregnancy, child abuse, chronic welfare dependency and educational failure."

But Shannahoff-Khalsa, a consultant to the National Research Council, said the commission did not address the subconscious mind adequately.

"Without probing the depths, one will never reach the heights," he said.

At a March 1988 hearing, the first of nine, the $750,000 task force heard San Jose high school principal Ruben Trinidad testify: "I love you, I really do."

The hearings drew testimony by small-business owners in the timber-fishing town of Eureka near the Oregon line, AIDS patients in San Francisco, and masked members of rival street gangs in Los Angeles.

Vasconcellos has said he created the task force because, as chairman of the budget-writing Ways and Means Committee, he saw much of the state's budget going to repair Californians with problems such as violence, drug and alcohol abuse, teen-age pregnancy, child abuse, welfare dependence and school failure.

The task force's job was to research whether lack of self-esteem contributes to those problems and, if so, recommend ways society can improve individuals' self-esteem.

Vasconcellos said he plans to send Trudeau a copy of the report. Trudeau, he said, satirizes things that are important, and his cartoon "elevated the task force from an obscure California venture to one everyone knew about."

Famed Napa Valley nixes any new wineries

Hearst News Service

NAPA, Calif. — Napa County, concerned over burgeoning tourism in the wine country, has had enough.

The county Board of Supervisors this week slammed the door on new wineries that lure tourists with tasting rooms, souvenir shops, restaurants and music festivals.

The decision comes in response to a proliferating winery industry and the traffic it has produced. Since 1960, the number of Napa Valley wineries has more than doubled to 235.

For five years, citizens have debated the proper balance between the agricultural nature of wine production and the tourism generated by so-called "boutique" wineries.

John Mikolajik, chairman of the board, characterized the ordinance adopted Tuesday as "something we can live with. We need tourists, but we want them in an orderly manner. Tourists can get out of hand."

The ordinance reflects a compromise between growers and vintners that is expected to protect the valley's rural qualities.

Originally, Napa growers wanted to restrict wineries to processing functions, while the wineries insisted that gift shops and tours were vital to their business. The farmers also had pressed for requiring wineries to buy Napa Valley grapes, but the wineries argued such rules would be unfair.

Supervisors "grandfathered," or exempted from the new rule, the 70 existing wineries with tasting rooms, food, souvenirs or entertainment, but declared that any new winery must be no more than an "agricultural facility for the fermenting and processing of grape juice into wine."

Would-be vintners will be required to undertake costly environmental impact reports, including estimates of how much traffic would be generated along Highway 29.

"It means you can't start a winery here on $10,000 anymore," Mikolajik said.

Lowell Smith, five-time mayor of St. Helena, said, "We have first and foremost committed ourselves to agriculture while we still have a handle on it. Tourism now is second."

After 50 years in exile, Albanian king still dreams of going home

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — From a rustic suburban house with a yard full of overgrown weeds, five dogs and a rusting pickup truck, the man who would be king of Albania plots a return to the homeland he scarcely knows.

King Leka I, an exile for all of his 50 years, believes the rapid political reforms in Eastern Europe will light a fire in long-isolated Albania, the last hard-line Stalinist state in the region.

If a revolution comes, Leka said in an interview, he would be proud to follow the footsteps of his father, the self-made monarch King Zog I.

If the people don't want a king, he'd settle for the chance to return to the country he left in 1939, when he was 3 days old, to escape invading Italian troops during World War II.

"My only home is Albania," said Leka, who has lived in seven countries and speaks eight languages. "But I've learned to feel at home wherever I have my family and my dogs."

He's 6-feet-8-inches tall, with glasses and a full head of graying hair. For a meeting at his home, he wears a pistol and a combat knife in his holster, and his military-style shirt has an Albanian crest pinned on his collar.

Leka, in a statement issued in December, called on Albanians inside and outside the country to "rise up, acting in unity and cohesion against the tyrannical and atheist regime that has for so long misruled our beloved homeland."

He said the message has been broadcast to Albania from radio stations in Yugoslavia's adjacent Kosovo region, and also has been reported on Radio Moscow and the Voice of America.

Albania's Communist Party chief, Ramiz Alia, says he will resist reforms in the rigidly controlled nation, the poorest and most rural in Europe. The country has been largely cut off from the outside world since the Communists came to power in 1946 under Enver Hoxha, who ruled until his death in 1985.

The Communist Party daily newspaper, Zeri I Populit, recently accused Albanian exiles of trying to foment an uprising that would bring Leka to power. Yugoslav newspapers have published reports of unrest in Albania, which have not been confirmed and which the Albanian government has denied.

Leka said that more than four decades of repressive rule will make it difficult to mobilize opposition forces. But he and his supporters have offices in France and elsewhere in Europe, and maintain clandestine contacts with government and military figures disgruntled with the Communist leadership, he said.

Because Albania is such a closed society, no accurate measure of Leka's support within the country can be made. But he believes he could serve as a unifying force among Albanians opposed to Communist rule and is confident of his stature despite his family's long absence.

But for now, Leka can do little more than wait.

Leka and his Australian-born wife, Susan, left Spain in 1979 when communist states put pressure on the Madrid government. Leka claims the communist governments acted on behalf of Albania because he had been building strong support inside and outside his homeland.

A year later, the couple rented a ranch-style house at the end of a dirt road here in the far northern suburbs of Johannesburg, intending to stay only six months.

During his exile, Leka's backers have included the late President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi of Iran, Saudi Arabia's King Faisal and Belgium's King Baudouin. He honored their support in naming his 8-year-old son, the crown prince, Leka Anwar Zog Reza Baudouin.

He has used his contacts to support himself as a businessman, exporting minerals and heavy machinery to the Middle and Far East. He also travels extensively to maintain contacts with the estimated 3 million ethnic Albanians who live outside the country's borders.

"It has been difficult to wear several different hats — to try to be a businessman and lead a normal family life and to head an opposition movement," said Leka.

U.S. government sponsors songs to discourage Third World sex

WASHINGTON (AP) — In languages from West African pidgin English to the Tagalog of the Philippines, popular music financed by the U.S. government aims at discouraging young people from having sex.

Critics have long complained that many pop songs promote sex, but the songs commissioned by the U.S. Agency for International Development seek to do the reverse.

"Wait for Me," the title song of a best-selling album in Nigeria last year, says in pidgin English:

"Dis tin them call love
"Na serious affair,
"Make you think well
"Before you gree."

Translation: "This thing they call love is a serious affair. Think well before you agree."

The song was recorded by King Sunny Ade, known in West Africa for a style called ju-ju, and Onyeku Onwenu. He has three wives and 12 children. She is a graduate of Wellesley College who tried journalism before turning to the stage. The agency said she wrote both music and lyrics, in pidgin and traditional English.

Another song, "Choices," presents an alternative policy:

"Yes we shouldn't make children
"We cannot take care of
"There are ways of making love
"Without making children."

Many people who work to raise the living standards of poor countries see the rapid growth of their population as the chief obstacle.

"Growth rates in developing countries will remain high for several decades even if couples have fewer children," said a study by the World Bank, the chief source of aid for the Third World.

"Absolute annual increases will be close to ... 80 million people a year well into the next century."

The U.S. agency's population program also provides donations of contraceptives, including 6.9 billion condoms over the past two decades.

The Nigerian album's popularity has spilled over into neighboring countries. The next step will be another record for nearby French-speaking republics like Zaire, Senegal and the Ivory Coast, the agency says.

The agency said it was too early to say what effect the African music has had, but a study will be made later.

Two songs recorded earlier for Latin America were the subject of an analysis by the Population Communication Service of Johns Hopkins University. The idea for the project came from a conference of the service in 1983.

With the government agency's support it blossomed into two musical videos, television commercials, radio spots, records and jackets, posters and press materials. The songs were recorded by Tatiana Palacios of Mexico and Johnny Lozada Correa of Puerto Rico.

The agency said the songs topped the charts in Mexico and Peru and reached the top 10 in nine other countries.

"We made an investment of about $350,000 and got about $5 million worth of free air time," said Duff Gillespie, the agency's director for population.

The university's study said that although no data were collected, attitudes about delaying sexual relations may have been strengthened, especially among young women in Mexico.

Think about it.

Ancestral ties, rights to native status in Hawaii at issue

N.Y. Times News Service

KAILUA, Hawaii — Ruby Keahaaina McDonald spends much of her day here in the Office of Hawaiian Affairs trying to figure out who is a native Hawaiian and who is not.

In a state where the echoes of history are loud and ethnicity is multilayered, the question of aboriginal authenticity is not an idle one.

For years, Congress and the courts have been grappling with the definition.

Now, those who claim some ancestral ties to the people who lived here before the arrival of Capt. James Cook, the British explorer, in 1778 are trying to decide who is a genuine Hawaiian. They are voting on whether to change the definition to anyone with some Hawaiian blood.

Under current law, only those with 50 percent or more Hawaiian blood are entitled to land, medical and legal benefits. Perhaps no more than 60,000 of the state's 1 million people can prove such a pedigree.

State officials say 150,000 other people have some Hawaiian blood but are without legal native status because they fall below the 50 percent threshold established by Congress in 1920.

To Mrs. McDonald, who serves as a liaison for the agency that represents native people, the job of ethnic detective has not been an easy one.

Before she can enroll a person in a benefits program here on the island of Hawaii, the largest of the eight major islands in the Hawaiian archipelago, she must first check birth certificates or research family histories.

At times she has been asked to investigate reports of someone misrepresenting himself as a 50 percent native. "It's been very difficult," she said. "Sometimes the birth certificates just say, 'part Hawaiian,' and I'm supposed to decide what that means."

Any registered voter listing himself or herself as Hawaiian, without consideration of blood percentage, is entitled to vote in the current referendum. The deadline for returning the ballots was Friday.

In a similiar vote taken in 1988, 80 percent of the voters registered as native Hawaiians approved of abolishing the blood percentage rule in favor of a single definition of anyone who can trace his lineage to the time of Cook's arrival.

But that vote did not mention opening up the benefits program, so the Legislature mandated another vote on the issue of who should get native benefits.

Some residents of the 50th state say blood alone does not define a Hawaiian. Among the 30 percent of the islands' Asian population are many descendants of Chinese and Japanese laborers who worked the sugar plantations 120 years ago.

Hawaii also has some sixth generation haoles, as Caucasians are called in the Hawaiian language. Their forefathers were the Christian missionaries who, in James Michener's words, came here to do good and ended up doing well.

Historians believe more than 250,000 people, most of them of Polynesian descent, lived on the Hawaiian Islands when Cook arrived. Hawaii was ruled by a native monarchy until 1893, when Queen Liliuokalani abdicated under pressure of a revolt led by American plantation owners.

A campaign to help dispossessed Hawaiians was led by Prince Jonah Kuhio, the queen's nephew, who served as the islands' delegate to Congress from 1900, when Hawaii became a U.S. territory, to 1920. His bill would have allowed anyone with one thirty-second of Hawaiian blood to receive land and benefits.

But lobbying by five companies that owned most of the land in Hawaii convinced Congress to pass the current law, which stipulated that only those with 50 percent or more native blood could lease small plots of government land.

Virgilio Alberto Meneses Cruz works on a mural depicting his homeland of Nicaragua as other refugees watch at the Casa Romero shelter in Brownsville.

Immigrants capture homelands in art

By REBECCA THATCHER

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — One might think the last thing on the mind of a newly arrived immigrant would be art.

But refugees at the Brownsville Catholic Diocese's Casa Oscar Romero say the creative outlets provided for them at the church shelter are a welcome distraction in their lives.

"It's a method of distraction," said Virgilio Alberto Meneses Cruz, a Nicaraguan who has covered two panels at Casa Romero's entry with brightly colored scenes from his homeland.

Meneses, who after six months at Casa Romero calls himself "the ancient one" said he began the paintings when he was "looking for a way to pass the time and not be bored."

There was a time when the Central American refugees waiting at the shelter had little to do but wait. Now, five years after the diocese took over the running of Casa Oscar Romero, refugees staying there have access to a well-equipped woodworking shop and have turned out hundreds of crucifixes, ornaments and signs.

Also available to them are sewing machines, guitars, a volleyball court, a soccer field, daily prayers, English lessons and a garden.

The woodwork created by refugees who have stayed at the "casa" is displayed in a glass case at the facility's office.

"We (Nicaraguans) are experts in the carving of wood," said Jose Saavedra, a 23-year-old Nicaraguan who works in the woodshop every day. "We come voluntarily to work."

Saavedra said he learned carpentry while serving a six-year prison sentence in Nicaragua for burning ballots in an effort to sabotage the 1984 elections. Because he worked in carpentry every day, he was able to finish his sentence in only three years, he said.

"I'd like to continue with this (carpentry) but we are ready to do any kind of work," said Saavedra, who has been at Casa Romero for 2½ months.

He would have applied for political asylum already, but he said he left proof of his imprisonment at home because of fears that the Mexican police would rob him of it.

Saavedra and his friend, Julio Cesar Rocha, 26, showed how they had improvised the creation of a lathe out of a bench grinder.

A lathe is a machine that whirls a piece of wood on a horizontal axis so that it can be shaped with a chisel.

> "We've made benches for the classrooms ... if a window breaks, we fix it. We try to compensate for all that Casa Romero has done for us...."
>
> — Ramon Torres

Because of the U.S. economic embargo of Nicaragua, the Sandinista government has encouraged its citizens to "innovate" and make parts and machines that they were accustomed to being able to buy.

Although Saavedra and Rocha are against the government, they said they picked up the ability to improvise in order to have the tools they needed.

Sister Norma Pimentel, co-director of Casa Romero, also is an artist who oversees the workshop and other activities.

She laughed when reminded of the improvised lathe. The refugees asked her to provide a few parts and one day they were making cups and ornaments on the lathe, she said.

The woodshop was started about a year ago.

"My original idea was for them to spend their time doing creative things, most of (the refugees) are very artistic," she said.

Sister Pimentel said visitors to Casa Romero, who number between five and 15 a day, often ask whether the refugees are provided with psychological counseling considering that many have faced the horrors of war up close.

Though there are no social workers or counselors, per se, the nuns who run the shelter try to create an environment that will help people heal psychologically, she said.

"Everything we do is leading toward that indirectly," she added.

Though handicrafts are popular with those who work in the shop, the carpenters also are responsible for doing repairs on Casa Romero's many buildings in addition to building tables and chairs, said Ramon Torres, the coordinator of the shop.

"We've made benches for the classrooms ... if a window breaks, we fix it," Torres said. "We try to compensate for all that Casa Romero has done for us. There is no pay, it is a question that springs from each individual's heart."

MHS, Lee take one to the buzzer

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

It took yet another buzzer-beating effort by Midland High, but the "find-a-way-to-win" Bulldogs pulled out a 53-51 victory over rival Midland Lee Friday in District 4-5A boys basketball play.

MHS is now 18-9 overall and 6-1 in 4-5A, and still tied for the district lead with Abilene High, an 82-81 victor over Abilene Cooper Friday. The loss dropped the Rebels to 11-13 and 2-5 in 4-5A.

Paired with two previous wins over Lee this season, Friday's victory in front of about 2,000 fans at the Chaparral Center gave the 'Dogs a sweep over the Rebels in 1989-90. But, as the final score indicates, by no means did MHS walk away with the win.

The game saw the lead switch sides 10 times, the score tied on six occasions and a largest lead of only five points.

That five-point bulge belonged to MHS several times, the latest of which was with the score 47-42 and 3:05 to play in the game. But down the stretch Lee came back and got four of Eugene Hicks' 22 points in the last minute. Mike Connally's three-pointer brought the Rebs to within two points (51-49) and set up David Meade for what appeared to be the role of hero.

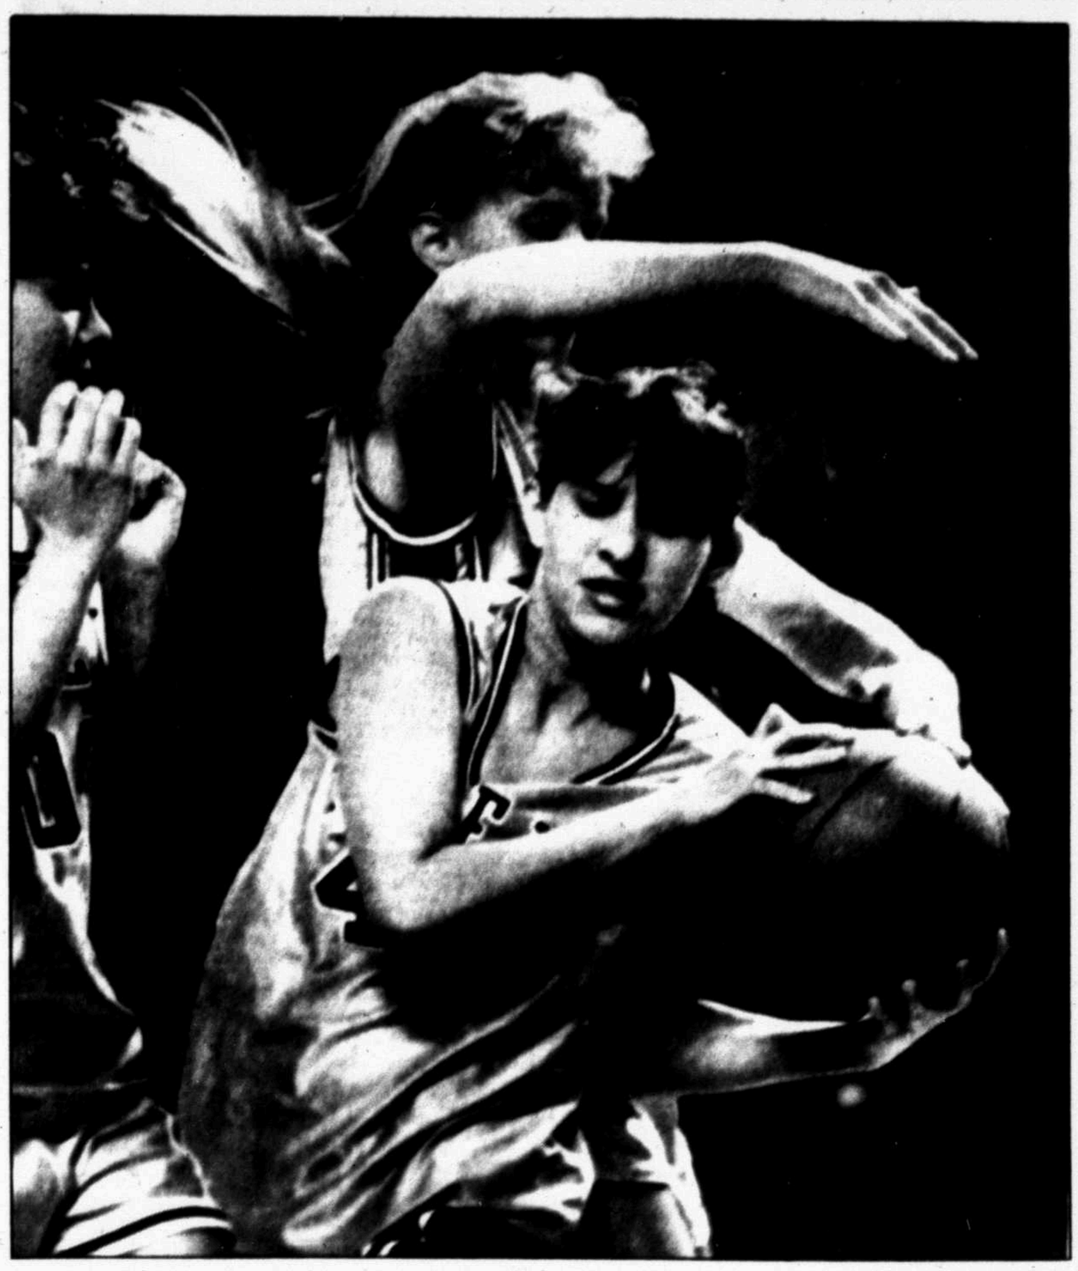

Meade sank both ends of a one-and-one shooting foul to tie the game at 51 with 12 seconds left, and apparently send it into overtime.

But MHS, which has made a habit of winning games in the final seconds, had plenty of time to make talk of an overtime moot.

Scott Melzer took the inbounds pass, drove the length of the court and put up an errant three-pointer. However, 6-0 Bulldog post Michael Wright was under the basket, grabbed the rebound and hit the game-winner with scant seconds on the clock.

"Scott was bringing the ball down court and I though he was going all the way. When he jacked the three-pointer, I just happened to be in the right place at the right time," said Wright, who scored eight of his 16 points in the second quarter.

Lady Rebs walk over MHS girls

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

Midland Lee's Lady Rebels won District 4-5A's "Cellar War", 43-26, over Midland High's Lady Bulldogs Friday night at Chaparral Center as MHS scored only eight second half points.

Never in the history of Midland girls basketball had these two teams battled this late in the season for the right to stay out of the 4-5A cellar. Both teams went into the game with 1-7 league marks.

Now 1-8 MHS stands alone at the bottom of the league standings while 2-7 Lee sets its sights on 2-6 and fifth place Odessa High, who lost to Odessa Permian Friday.

Lee has now won two of three meetings between the two teams, but unfortunately for MHS, the two losses to Lee were in district play.

But to the credit of these two teams, they played like more was on the line for one half before the scoring wheels fell off for the Bulldogs.

With the game tied at 18-18, Lee's Mary Ann Isom, who led the Rebels with 12 points, hit a 12-foot jumper with three seconds left in the half to give the Rebs a 20-18 lead.

Then came the second half, one MHS would just as soon forget. Lee rolled to nine unanswered points before Tiffany Grafa hit the lone basket for MHS in the third period at the 5:10 mark. MHS didn't score again in the period and trailed 31-20 going into the final period. The game was over.

"I don't know what happened," said MHS coach Jane Young. "With the boys, you see them come from behind all the time, but with us, we look up and see we are down by seven or eight and we're scared to death. We don't have a lot of experience and that's part of it. It's not like they intentionally get out there and not try."

Lee coach Shirley Stephenson agreed, "Midland High just couldn't buy a basket in the second half. It's happened to all of us.

"But I thought we had a great team effort. Marcia del Llano was the spark plug for us in this one."

Del Llano scored 10 points in the game, including a three-pointer in the first quarter that kept Lee from getting too far behind the Bulldogs. MHS held a 10-8 lead after the first period, but del Llano and Isom each canned three pointers to keep it from being worse.

'The rings are there forever'

Associated Press

DENVER — Like a child opening his presents on Christmas morning, like a parent watching his offspring perform onstage, like an inventor seeing his creation work, Dan Reeves was beaming.

The coach of the Denver Broncos had a captive audience as he displayed his seven championship rings. Seven, with another on the way.

"The money you win, if you're married, it's gone very quickly, most of the time before you see it," Reeves said as he set the rings on a table, side-by-side, a tableau of a career of pro football rewards. "The rings are there forever.

"That's what the players want to see. The money doesn't mean anything. They want to see the rings."

So they did. Reeves showed them to the Broncos on Saturday, the day before they beat the Cleveland Browns, 37-21, to advance to the Super Bowl for the third time in four years.

"It was the third time I've seen them," John Elway said with a shrug. "Maybe he got a rise out of the young guys."

If he did, it's exactly what Reeves had in mind.

And it worked, apparently, because the Broncos played their best game of the season in the AFC title game.

Now Reeves is headed back to the Super Bowl for a record eighth time.

Making a name for himself

N.Y. Times News Service

George Seifert recently went to the annual boat show in San Francisco as if nothing had changed in his life. He always goes to the show this time of year, and he happily wanders around, just one of the mob.

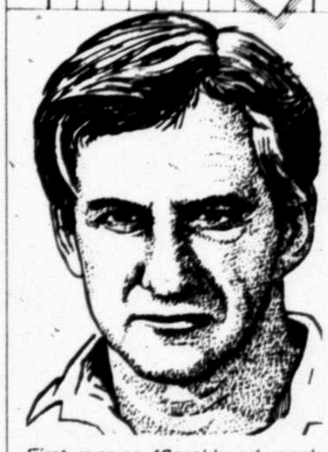

Just before Seifert got into his car to drive to the show, his son, Jason, said people would mob Seifert at the show. Seifert laughed innocently. Mob him? No way.

Surprise. The second Seifert walked into the arena, the crowd spotted him. "Hey, let's win the Super Bowl, coach!" some would shout. Others asked for autographs. When Seifert finally escaped after an hour, it had dawned on him that — do we dare say it? — he's actually famous.

He's not used to being famous, or even well-known. Until this season, he was a career assistant coach, Bill Walsh's sidekick, a background man. He was terrific at mapping out a defensive game plan — your typical, colorless "Xs and Os" guy — but he was rarely called upon to show leadership or to have any public persona. Even now, people are constantly asking if the 49ers are his or Walsh's team, as if he's a front for Walsh who is actually calling the shots.

Graf captures third-straight Grand Slam title

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Steffi Graf survived a surprisingly tough match against gritty American teenager Mary Joe Fernandez to win the Australian Open women's singles Saturday and capture her third straight Grand Slam title.

Graf, winning the Australian for the third successive year and notching her 48th consecutive match victory, came back from a break down at 1-4 in the second set to beat Fernandez 6-3, 6-4.

"I didn't play my best, but I won it," the top-ranked Graf said. "Mary Joe played as I expected her to. When you're in a Grand Slam final, you tend to play your best."

Fernandez, ranked 11th, was justifiably proud of being able to play a close match against Graf.

"In the second set, it was a point here and a point there. I should have won it," Fernandez said. "I played pretty much with her during the match."

Only a few key points made the difference in the well-played, tense duel in which Fernandez, 18, of Miami, displayed poise and savvy as she exposed a weakness in the 20-year-old West German's game.

Fernandez, playing her first Grand Slam final, pounded her two-fisted backhand into Graf's relatively weak backhand side, then came back with winners down the line to Graf's forehand.

Graf made 14 of her 27 errors in the second set on her backhand, as Fernandez kept the ball deep and generally prevented Graf from attacking the net, as she likes to do.

Graf, winner of Wimbledon and the U.S. Open last year and nine Grand Slam titles overall, put away only two volleys in the match, both in the second set. But if Fernandez found a chink in Graf's armor, Graf almost exposed one in Fernandez's.

Virtually all of Fernandez's errors came off her forehand — 17 of 22 in the first set and 17 of 25 in the second set. The match thus came down to each trying to use her strengths — Graf's forehand, Fernandez's backhand — and exploit the other's weakness — Graf's backhand, Fernandez's forehand.

Graf broke Fernandez only once in the first set to go ahead 4-2, then went on to take the set in 33 minutes.

Fernandez finally broke Graf in the second game of the second set when Graf hit one of her many wide backhands on break point. But Graf broke back in the seventh game, went ahead with another break in the ninth game and served out to win the match in 1 hour, 21 minutes.

Graf picked up $190,000 for the victory, while Fernandez got $94,500.

'Dogs, Rebels open soccer year with wins

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Midland High junior Bryant Mueller was an All-District 3 goalkeeper last season. But if Mueller's Bulldog teammates continue to dominate offensively as they did Friday against Amarillo Tascosa, nobody will be able to gauge Mueller's worth.

The visiting Rebels were unable to get a shot off in MHS' 2-0 win in non-district action Friday at the Midland Freshman field, making Mueller an extremely bored young man.

Oh sure, Mueller occasionally had to retrieve an errant ball that got past his defenders. But MHS controlled the midfield area so well that the visitors never challenged either Mueller or second-half keeper Whit Sumner.

So, Mueller will have to wait until today's match against Amarillo High to see if he has improved as much as he would like.

In Friday's other local game, Midland Lee braved cold, wind and dust to score two late goals in a 2-0 defeat of Brownwood at the Hogan Park Soccer Complex, the Rebels' second win over the Lions in as many weeks.

It may not seem like an all-district keeper would have much room for improvement, but Mueller dissents.

"I need to figure out a way to distribute to the offense better," he said. "I'm working pretty well with the defense, but I need to help the offense, too."

The Bulldogs took 23 shots, but could only manage one score in each half against the outmanned Rebels, who were missing five starters and played five freshman. In addition, the visitors haven't been able to practice outside this month.

Jason Farr gave MHS the only goal it needed with a header in the second minute of the game. Chris Lanning set up Farr's first goal of the season with a corner kick in front of the goal.

Reeves' superstitions growing

Denver coach has problem with helmet placement

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Dan Reeves noticed the other day that the helmet of the San Francisco 49ers was to the left of the helmet of his Denver Broncos on the facing of the Superdome. That's where where the winners of the previous XXIII Super Bowls are listed.

"Maybe someone's anticipating something," Reeves said. "We're going to have to do something to make them switch the helmets."

Friday was the final meeting of coaches and media before the Broncos take on George Seifert's heavily favored 49ers in Sunday's NFL championship game.

Reeves announced that running back Bobby Humphrey, nursing cracked ribs from the AFC title game, will start but will need to take a couple of hard hits to determine if he'll be able to go at full speed.

Seifert announced that nose tackle Michael Carter, who injured a foot midway through the regular season, will make his first start since then, that running back Roger Craig is ready after a couple of days with the flu, and that safety Ronnie Lott's bruised right thigh is still aching but that he, too, will play.

Seifert and Reeves agreed on one thing. The next two days will be tough.

"The emotion before this game is almost indescribable," Seifert said. "A great deal of emotion and and anticipation goes into this game."

Both were asked about the allegations by a Washington television station that "three white quarterbacks" had once tested positive for cocaine but had never been given counseling. The program also alleged that the NFL drug testing programs protected whites and discriminated against blacks.

Reeves talked longer on the subject and from experience — one of his tight ends, Clarence Kay, missed three games in the 1986 season while undergoing drug rehabilitation and another, Orson Mobley, was suspended for four games this year after testing positive a second time.

"Our program has never been racial in any way, shape or form, and we've had some success with it," Reeves said. "If anyone is discriminated against, it's the players who aren't treated. We don't look at it as punishment. These people need help."

Then, Joe Montana's name and "unconfirmed" allegations of drug use by him came up. Montana, who in November 1985 called a news conference to explicitly deny drug rumors, emphatically denied on Thursday that he had ever used illegal substances.

"I think the key thing you said is 'unconfirmed.'" Seifert said, seemingly showing a bit of anger for one of the few times this week. "It's an injustice that anyone's name would be mentioned in this connection at this time."

For perhaps the hundredth time this week, Reeves was asked what has become known as "the monkey on your back," the fact that Denver lost by wide margins in 1987 and 1988, is nearly a two-touchdown underdog this time and would match the Minnesota Vikings of a decade ago at 0-4 if it loses Sunday.

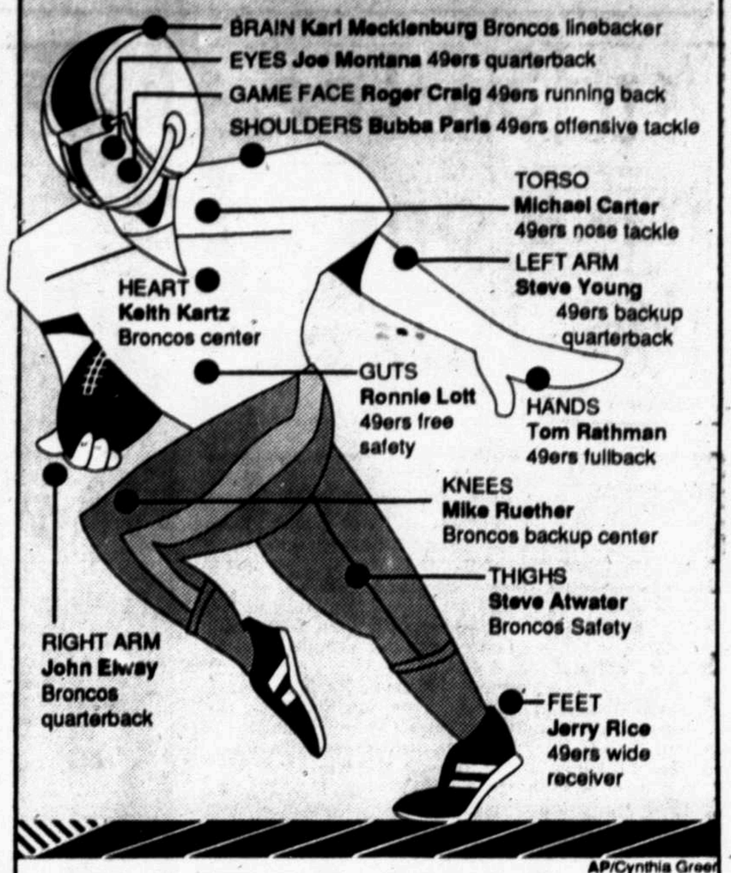

He replied by citing his experience as a running back with the Dallas Cowboys, who from 1966 through 1971 were known as "next year's team," losing narrowly to Green Bay in two NFL title games, then losing in overtime in the 1971 Super Bowl. They finally broke through with a 24-3 victory over Miami in 1972.

For perhaps the hundredth time this week, Seifert played down the spread, called the Broncos "the best team we've faced this year," and cited his concerns about the scrambling abilities of Denver quarterback John Elway.

"There's the realization that at some point in the game, he's going to break the pocket," Seifert said. "We have to realize that even when he does, we have to maintain our coverage."

The Super Super Bowl Player

The composite player in Sunday's big game

The Composite Super Bowler

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The composite player in Sunday's Super Bowl:

BRAIN — Karl Mecklenburg, Broncos linebacker. Son of Ph.Ds, graduated from Minnesota with degree in biology. As 12th-round draft pick, didn't expect to make it in the NFL and wanted to go to medical school. Made Pro Bowl this season for fourth time in five years.

EYES — Joe Montana, 49ers quarterback with full-field vision. NFL MVP hit 70.3 percent of his passes this season, often throwing to second or third receivers, sometimes even a fourth. "His eyes go to the right guy," marvels Broncos defensive coordinator Wade Phillips. "What's great about him is he does it so quickly — 1-2-3: bang!"

GAME FACE — Roger Craig, 49ers running back. Backfield partner Tom Rathman describes it simply as "those big bug eyes." Linebacker Keena Turner elaborates: "You see a very focused look, and when he's on the field and about to make things happen ... the eyes seem like they're about to pop out of his head."

SHOULDERS — Bubba Paris, 49ers offensive tackle. Wears size 50 52 shoulder pads, largest on the team but not noticeably wider than his waist. Reported to New Orleans somewhere around 350 pounds and growing.

TORSO — Michael Carter, 49ers nose tackle. Wears size 54 jacket. Says center Jesse Sapolu, who lines up opposite Carter in practice, "He takes up two spaces."

HEART — Keith Kartz, Broncos center. Has 15-inch scar across his chest from two operations for cancer of the stomach and lymph nodes after his freshman season at California in 1981. His weight dropped to 175 pounds during chemotherapy, but he was up to 220 by spring practice in 1982. "I don't think Joe Kapp thought I'd live this long," Kartz said of his coach at Cal. Now at 6-foot-4, 270, was named first alternate for Pro Bowl this season, despite losing hearing in his right ear due to an infection in October. "When Kartz goes out there on Sunday, you don't worry about his laying it on the line," said offensive line coach George Henshaw, "because he's already laid it on the line."

GUTS — Ronnie Lott, 49ers free safety. In 1986, to avoid rehabilitation time and distractions from his ailing right pinky, had doctors amputate the end of it. "It was no big deal," Lott says. "Rocky Bleier went to Vietnam and got shot. People like that have suffered a lot more than I have."

RIGHT ARM — John Elway, Broncos quarterback. Has a 36-37 inch sleeve and once threw a ball 75 yards in a game but insists, "I've never really turned it loose." Receivers proudly show off the Elway Cross, the "X" left by the point of the ball on their chests. After his worst season since he was a rookie (53.6 completion percentage and 18 interceptions to go with 18 touchdowns), Elway had the best playoff game of his career in the AFC championship game: 386 yards and three TDs.

LEFT ARM — Steve Young, 49ers backup quarterback. In relief of Montana, including three starts, completed 64 of 92 passes for 1,001 yards and eight touchdowns. Actually had a higher average gain per attempt than Montana (10.88 vs. 9.12) as well as a higher touchdown percentage (8.7 vs. 6.7). Set a team record completing 11 of 12 passes on two separate occasions.

HANDS — Tom Rathman, 49ers fullback. Team's second-leading receiver with 73 catches and second-leading runner with 79 carries, 305 yards. Fumble that led to loss to Rams was only his second in four year pro career and only one all season. Dropped just four passes.

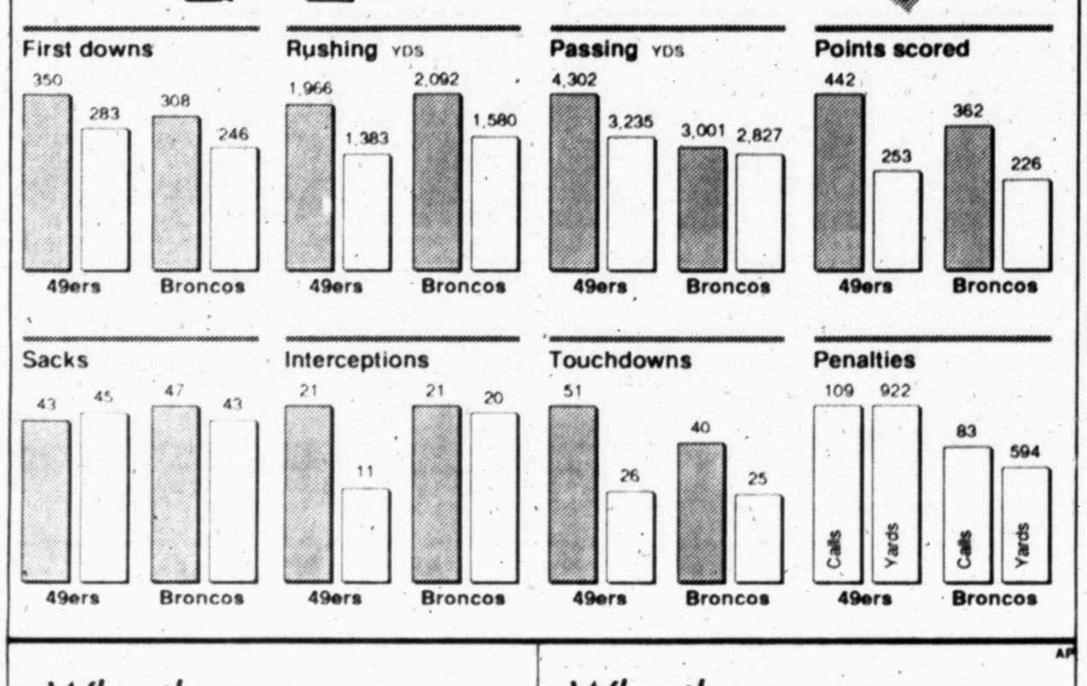

THIGHS — Steve Atwater, Broncos safety. At 6-3, 217, has upper body of a wide receiver, thighs of a linebacker. Has to buy size 36 pants to fit the thighs and then have the waist taken in 6 inches.

KNEES — Mike Ruether, Broncos backup center. Drive blocking power comes from hips, knees and legs, and Ruether uses his to squat lift more than 500 pounds.

FEET — Jerry Rice, 49ers wide receiver. Speedy broken field runner after the catch and a master at getting both feet in bounds on the out patterns. "It's almost like doing a dance," Rice explains. "Almost like a ballet, walking the sidelines."

Why the Broncos will win Sunday

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — So you don't give the Denver Broncos a chance in this Super Bowl? You're expecting a blowout, just like in 1987 against the Giants and 1988 against the Redskins. You go along with the oddsmakers and the thousands of people who are betting millions on the 49ers.

We've heard this all before. Remember 1969? Joe Namath? Guarantee?

Or 1970? The Purple People Eaters getting eaten alive by the Offense of the 70s?

Isn't it about time for another of those monumental upsets? At least, everyone but Broncos owner Pat Bowlen would deem it an upset.

"I'd call it an upset if WE lose," Bowlen says.

OK, Pat. How are you going to win?

"This is the strongest team we've taken to the Super Bowl," Bowlen adds. "We have a better running game than ever. Our defense is stronger. We have more experience. We're simply better."

But are you great? Are you capable of being a dynasty? The 49ers are.

"We're capable of winning the Super Bowl," he says. "Judge us after we do that."

To win against San Francisco — which is 0-4 against Denver since Joe Montana was drafted in 1979 — the Broncos defense must be as stingy as it was all season. The best way to be so is to not let the 49ers have the ball.

That puts the onus on the offense. San Francisco will score points, maybe lots of them, on Sunday, no matter how tough Denver's defense is.

"We can't get in a scoring contest with them," Broncos coach Dan Reeves says.

But you probably can't avoid it.

"We'll try to put a lot of points on the board and keep our defense off the field because nobody has contained them."

To get those points, Elway must be as sensational as he was against Cleveland in the AFC title game. That means throwing, scrambling, maybe even catching a pass.

It also means Bobby Humphrey, the 1,000-yard rookie rusher, has to be healthy. Humphrey cracked two ribs against the Browns. Without him, the running game dies. So does ball control.

Elway will have to look more to his wide receivers than his backs and tight end for two reasons. First, the 49ers are stronger at safety than on the corners, which means Ronnie Lott or Chet Brooks will be on Steve Sewell, Mel Bratton or Orson Mobley.

Also, the Broncos are weak at tight end, particularly if Clarence Kay still is bothered by a thigh muscle pull.

That makes Vance Johnson, Mark Jackson and Michael Young key figures.

But the game won't turn on their matchups with Don Griffin, Darryl Pollard and Tim McKyer. It will turn, possibly early, on how inexperienced corners Wymon Henderson and Tyrone Braxton deal with Jerry Rice and John Taylor.

If they — with help from star safeties Dennis Smith and Steve Atwater and nickel backs Mark Haynes and Kip Corrington — can slow down Rice and Taylor, the Broncos have a chance. If they can't, particularly early, Denver's offense will have to keep pace, which is unlikely.

Why the 49ers will win Sunday

Why the 49ers will win the Super Bowl....

Why the 49ers will win the Super Bowl????

How can the 49ers NOT win the Super Bowl when half the population of Colorado half-hoped the Broncos would lose to Cleveland so they wouldn't have to be subject to another humiliation at the hands of an NFC team. The local papers have even dragged out shrinks to explain a municipal psyche that so fears humiliation.

Worse.

This may be the best of the NFC teams the Broncos have faced in the Super Bowl, where they've lost twice by an aggregate total of 81-30. They hung in until the third quarter against the Giants three years ago and hung in until the second quarter against the Redskins in 1988.

This year, it figures that they'll hang in the first quarter.

Okay, so a lot will be made of the Joe Montana-John Elway comparison. How the opposition doesn't want to give either the ball with time left and a chance to win.

One problem.

John's not likely to be in that situation. Neither, for that matter, is Joe — the 49ers are likely to be far enough ahead by the fourth quarter that Steve Young will be in the game.

Look at it another way.

San Francisco got to New Orleans by beating Minnesota 41-13 and the Los Angeles Rams, 30-3. That was in the NFC, where all five playoff teams (plus Washington and New Orleans) were probably as good or better than anything that the AFC could offer, even 11-5 Denver.

Examples.

The five NFC playoff teams were 16-4 against the NFC. The five AFC playoff teams were 12-8 against the NFC. On the final week of the season, AFC playoff aspirants were blown out of the playoffs by NFC teams — the Colts to the Saints; the Raiders to the Giants, the Bengals to the Vikings.

Moreover, the Broncos were 8-2 this season (counting at Mile High Stadium, where since 1986 they've gone 30-5 in non-strike games. The two losses were to the two NFC playoff teams they faced there — 28-24 to the Eagles and 14-7 to the Giants.

But why go on.

It's boring.

For example, why mention the cracked ribs of Denver running back Bobby Humphrey. Humphrey provided the first ground alternative ever to Air Elway, and while he'll probably play ... well, the 49ers don't let anyone run on them anyway.

In fact, boring is likely to describe this game, just as it describes most Super Bowls. Unless Denver owner Patrick Bowlen can find someone else to offend.

As a guy familiar with both boxing and football puts it:

"Buster Douglas has a better chance of beating Mike Tyson than the Broncos have of beating the 49ers."

And he's a Steelers fan.

49ers, 37-10.

"There is always pressure when you are playing Midland High, but we really hustled tonight and that was good to see," said del Llano.

Isom said, "We worked hard as a team and we haven't played that well in a while."

MHS senior Robin Landreth scored all of Midland's 10 first quarter points, but ended the game with only 12 points after being shutout in the second half.

"Robin had a great first period, but then some of her shots didn't fall," said Young. "Maybe we depended a little too heavily on her for our scoring."

Lee also got nine points from Sheena Parker, who hit for seven of those points in the second half. MHS got eight points from sophomore Sally Gibson, but outside of Landreth and Gibson, no Bulldog scored more than two points.

Lee will miss the state playoffs for only the second time in 12 years, but del Llano says the season isn't over.

"We've got three games left and there isn't much we can do in the race, but we can pull off a few upsets down the stretch," said del Llano.

BOYS

"We're just happy to win," said Jack Stephenson, MHS head coach. "I thought we played hard, but they pressured us out of our half-court game. We got some turnovers off our press (nine of Lee's 11 turnovers were credited to the MHS press), but we also gave up some easy baskets. So in the second half we went more to a full-court man defense."

Aside from the second quarter, when the Rebs went 0-for-6 from the free throw line and scored only nine points, Lee outscored MHS 42-39.

The 'Dogs went to the free throw line 20 times and converted 20 shots into points. Keith Gilbreath, who led the Bulldogs with 18 points, was 8-of-9 from the charity stripe and missed only his last shot in the fourth quarter.

But, according to Lee coach Paul Stueckler, the Rebels' 8-of-19 free throw effort in the game was the difference.

"I think that was the single most important factor in the game — our missed free throws," Stueckler said. "I think our turnovers and easy baskets off their press just about evened out. But I'm proud of how our boys hung in there. Midland High is a lot quicker than we are, but we stayed with them and had a chance to win the ball game."

Lee earned that chance by shutting down a Bulldog offense that was averaging 81.7 points a game since the last time the two teams met. After one period, the score was tied at 10-10, and MHS led by only 24-19 at half time. When the paced quickened opening the third quarter, ironically, it was to Lee's advantage.

The Rebels scored six unanswered points before MHS got untracked and took a 39-36 edge into the fourth quarter.

"What we need to do now is have a practice just as soon as possible. Moral can really get low after a game like this, so we need to give them some goals and motivation," Stueckler said.

Following Hicks in Lee's scoring were Greg Crowe and Mike Connally with 10 points apiece, and Meade with nine. Meizer finished with nine points for MHS.

SOCCER

Shane Barden added an insurance goal for the Bulldogs on a penalty kick in the 43rd minute. But MHS had more serious scoring chances than those, and Coach Tom Esikhati knows it.

"I told them if they don't shoot better Saturday, they're going to get some extra practice," Esikhati said. "We need to concentrate better on our finish.

"The way we shot today could be fatal against a better team," the coach added.

But it was painfully apparent from the get-go that Tascosa was not going to give the Bulldogs much of a tumble, especially since the Rebels only had a week to prepare for a match scheduled on the spur of the moment.

"I brought 18 players down, and played 18," Tascosa coach James Kile said. "That was more important than winning for us."

Midland Lee 2, Brownwood 0

The Rebels dodged a couple of bullets, but stuck it out under adverse weather conditions to run their record to 2-0 going into today's noon kickoff against Amarillo Tascosa.

Lee got a break when a pair of Lions beat Rebel keeper Joel Renner, only to see their shots bounce off the crossbar. Brownwood's Paul Van Pelt saw his attempt bounce off the bar in the final minutes of the first half, then John Millican came oh-so-close — but with the same result — in the game's 41st minute, just after the second half kickoff.

The Rebels kept Brownwood scoreless despite working into a stiff wind. But Lee couldn't do much after the teams switched sides until Brownwood keeper Ryan Fenton let a direct free kick by Lee's Greg Pepper go through his hands in the 68th minute of play. Mark Ferguson shoved the loose ball to Jordan Reed, who pushed the ball in for his third goal of the season.

The Rebels added insurance when Russ Moore cashed in on a penalty kick in the 78th minute for his first goal of the season. The penalty situation was created when Fenton fouled Pepper while going for a loose ball to the right of the goal.

Measles epidemic threatens El Paso basketball programs

Associated Press

EL PASO, Texas — A measles outbreak that forced Coronado High School to ban extracurricular activities for the next two weeks likely will bring an early end to the boys' and girls' basketball season.

The ban particularly affects the girls' team, which is among the top three in District 1-5A and in contention for a playoff spot.

Seven students have been infected with measles and three more cases are viewed as possible at the school. The outbreak prompted the city-county health department to give mass inoculations to students, faculty and staff Friday morning.

With the ban on activities, the basketball teams will be unable to play scheduled games before Feb. 9 or 10, if the number of infections does not increase.

But the El Paso Independent School District must certify the girls basketball playoff teams by Feb. 13 and boys teams by Feb. 20. University Interscholastic League restrictions prevent teams from making up missed games or extending the certification date.

El Paso leads District 1-5A with an 11-1 record, followed by Andress (10-1), Coronado (8-2) and Bowie (7-4). The regular season ends Feb. 9.

Coronado's boys have a 4-4 district record, trailing Bowie (8-1), Irvin (6-4) and Austin (5-4).

Motta suffers rude reunion in Dallas

Associated Press

Sam Perkins scored 19 points and Derek Harper had 18 as the Dallas Mavericks spoiled the return of former coach Dick Motta with a 106-93 victory over the Sacramento Kings Friday night.

Motta, who was Dallas' first coach and once led the team to a Midwest Division title, was booed in pregame introductions. He resigned without giving a reason in May 1987 after seven years as coach of the Mavericks.

Sacramento trailed only 50-49 at halftime but the Mavericks poured it on the second half despite Rodney McCray's game-high 22 points. Harold Pressley and Danny Ainge each scored 15 for the losers.

Perkins scored six points in the third quarter as Dallas outscored the Kings 26-18.

Harper contributed six steals as the Mavs kept Motta's offense off balance.

Rolando Blackman scored 15 points, Herb Williams added 13, and Roy Tarpley scored 12 points in his second game after missing 34 games because of an NBA-mandated drug suspension.

Dallas had only one turnover in the second half.

Motta is now 4-7 since being named the Kings coach earlier this month. Sacramento has now lost 10 consecutive road games.

Pacers 115, Heat 105

Reggie Miller scored 17 of his 34 points in the third quarter and the Indiana Pacers broke a three-game losing streak by defeating the Miami Heat.

The Pacers took control midway through the first period, running off 11 straight points for a 22-10 lead with 6:07 remaining. Center Rik Smits, who had only seven points in a 121-111 loss at Miami on Jan. 17, set the pace by scoring eight of Indiana's first 15 points.

Indiana shot 67 percent in the first quarter to extend its margin to 35-20, and Miami never seriously threatened the lead.

Pistons 107, Suns 103

The Phoenix Suns saw their team-record 10-game winning streak snapped as Bill Laimbeer had 31 points and 23 rebounds to lead the Detroit Pistons.

The win, coupled with Chicago's defeat at Philadelphia, earned Pistons coach Chuck Daly his first Eastern Conference coaching berth in the All-Star game at Miami on Feb. 11.

Laimbeer hit five of eight 3-pointers and Isiah Thomas scored 27 points for Detroit, 13 in the first quarter.

Kevin Johnson scored 22 of his 34 points in the first half for Phoenix and Tom Chambers added 29 for the Suns, whose winning streak was the longest in the NBA this season.

The Pistons, trailing by three at halftime, opened the third quarter with a 16-2 run, including two consecutive 3-pointers by Laimbeer, and led 72-61 before Johnson scored the Suns' first basket of the half with 6:21 remaining in the period.

Chambers scored nine points to help Phoenix narrow the margin to 80-78 with 1:38 left in the third quarter, and Detroit led 85-81 as the fourth period began.

Warriors 114, SuperSonics 102

Mitch Richmond scored 25 points and Tim Hardaway added 23 as the Golden State Warriors won their 12th straight home game, over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Sedale Threatt led the Sonics with a career-high 36 and Xavier McDaniel grabbed a season-high 15 rebounds, but it wasn't enough to prevent Seattle's 11th straight road loss.

The Sonics led 82-80 entering the fourth quarter, but Rod Higgins put the Warriors ahead to stay by hitting an 18-foot jumper for an 88-86 lead. Hardaway made a driving layup to put Golden State up by four with 9:09 remaining.

The Warriors led 96-88 on another Hardaway jumper before the Sonics scored six straight points to cut the lead to 96-94 with 5:56 left.

But Higgins and Chris Mullin each sank 3-point shots to build the lead to 102-95. Derrick McKey brought the Sonics to within four points with a three-point play, but that was as close as Seattle could get.

76ers 120, Bulls 109

Charles Barkley had 37 points and 21 rebounds and Hersey Hawkins scored 28 points as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Chicago Bulls for their seventh consecutive victory.

The 76ers moved into second place in the NBA's Atlantic Division, one game behind the New York Knicks, despite a 31-point performance by Chicago's Michael Jordan.

Jordan vaulted past Bob Love for the all-time Bulls scoring record. Jordan, in his sixth NBA season, has scored 12,625 points, two more than Love in seven seasons.

A 24-5 run in the second period broke the 76ers away from a 35-35 tie to a 59-40 lead with 4:40 left in the half.

But with Jordan scoring 12 points and Scottie Pippen and Bill Cartwright seven each, the Bulls rallied to cut the deficit to 91-85 with 33 seconds left in the third period. They trailed 93-85 at the end of the quarter.

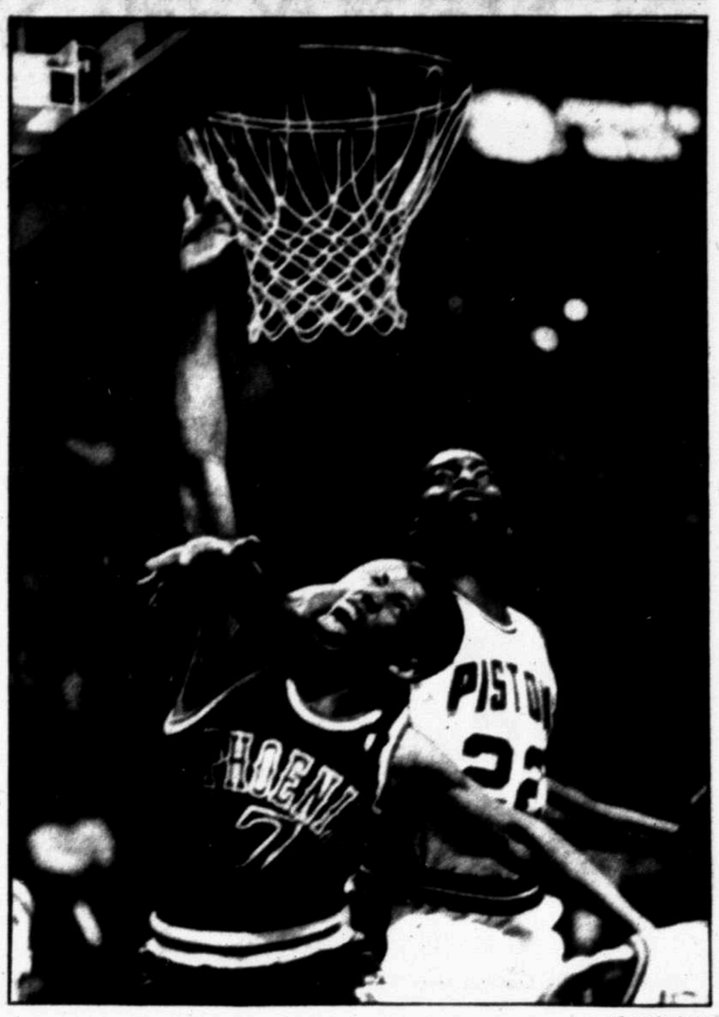

Chicago then scored the first five points of the final period to pull within three points. But the 76ers scored the next five points, starting a 17-9 run that gave them a 110-99 advantage with 4:47 left. Hawkins had 12 points during the surge.

Cavaliers 85, Timberwolves 84

The Cleveland Cavaliers gave Lenny Wilkens his 700th coaching victory and snapped a five-game losing streak by edging the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Mark Price scored 20 points for the Cavaliers, who made Wilkens the sixth NBA coach to reach the 700-win milestone. It was the Timberwolves' eighth straight loss and their 20th in the last 22 games.

Price's 3-pointer with three minutes left gave Cleveland the lead for good at 81-79.

Seven Chap netters still in contention at ITCA

From Staff Reports

CORPUS CHRISTI — Midland College kept four women and three men alive in singles competition after the first day of the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association Junior College Indoor Championships.

The matches are being played at The Athletic Club of Corpus Christi. The Chaparral men's and women's squads both came here with the nation's No. 1 rankings, according to the Volvo ITCA national listings. But the other teams at the tournament are taking dead aim at the Chaps and have knocked off several in early action.

Due to the size of the tourney, play continued until almost midnight Thursday without finishing the first day's schedule.

The tournament concludes Saturday night.

MHS swimmers jump to forefront

From Staff Reports

The Midland Invitational swimming meet kicked off Friday with preliminaries and diving finals, but the fun comes at 10 a.m. today when the rest of the finals take place.

The Midland High boys were impressive in first day action, owning the top qualifying times in seven of 10 events, but MHS coach Larry Ridge said that San Angelo's depth still makes the Bobcats the team favorite today.

MHS' Matthew Houston set a pool and school record in the 100 butterfly with a 52.33 while teammate Matt Seay, both undefeated this year, set a pool record in the 100 breaststroke with a 1:03.09. Houston also had the top time in the 100 backstroke while Seay was tops in the 200 individual medley. MHS' Moss Fennell was tops in the 500 freestyle and is also unbeaten in the 200 free. MHS also had the top 200 medley relay team with Houston, Seay, Fennell and Rob Neatherlin.

The Lee girls had four top qualifying times with Stephanie Reed scoring best in both the 500 and 200 free. Lee's Mimi Morrison was the top qualifier in the 100 fly and Lee was tops in the 200 medley relay.

MHS' Carrie Henry, who is undefeated in two events, was tops in the 100 and 50 free races.

The Lee girls got on the scoreboard Friday when Caryn Kelly won the diving competition and Lee's Melissa Gibson was third. Andrews' Christy Boren placed second. Chad Wilkinson of Pampa won the boys while Amarillo Caprock's Heath Burns was second and Amarillo Tascosa's Scott Lee third.

Shell solves Montana

Los Angeles Raiders Coach Art Shell, one of the Hall of Famers who will participate in the coin toss at Sunday's Super Bowl, was asked how to contain San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana.

He paused for a moment.

"I guess," he said, "you call in the troops we sent to Panama."

SEIFERT

Listening to those questions, 49er assistant coach Lynn Stiles says he wants to cringe. "Bill was the best, a great coach," Stiles says. "But that's over with. Now it's George Seifert. It's that simple."

The issue confronting Seifert when he took over the 49ers was whether he had enough charisma and vision to lead a whole organization. "I don't think anyone knew," Stiles said. Walsh, who says he would not have surrendered power to anyone but Seifert, senses an insular quality in Seifert's makeup. "He's introspective, self-contained, even brooding," Walsh says. "He isolates himself from things."

In minicamps, the players had their doubts. Steve Wallace thought Seifert was too "laid back," that he let the players talk too much on the field. Wallace couldn't imagine the team going all the way with a man like that in charge.

Early in the season, Bubba Paris thought Seifert was groping for his own style and sometimes acted inappropriately. Seifert once yelled at the players for not running up the field fast enough. Paris thought Seifert was doing a poor imitation of Walsh, and he wondered if he'd ever develop his own style.

The style came slowly, but Paris believes it finally solidified at halftime of the second Rams game, which the 49ers won, 30-27. The 49ers were behind at the half, 17-10, and one assistant coach wanted Seifert to tear into the team in the locker room. Instead, Seifert calmly talked to the players about their formations and duties.

"That defined him as a coach," Paris said. "The Rams game established him as a dominant motivator without screaming. He makes men motivate themselves. They don't need an omnipresent force (Walsh) to make sure they're well-prepared."

Seifert vividly recalls his decision not to go wild in the locker room. "I wanted to focus on the specifics of the game and not be so emotional that the players couldn't function," he said. "It's fine to yell, but you'd better tell them, in fact, how to move the ball. A player might not be able to knock a man on his ass. The guy he's facing may be a better player. So you'd better have some scheme to help him."

REEVES

He might not get the acclaim given Bill Walsh, Joe Gibbs, Chuck Noll and Don Shula, but he belongs in their class. Sure, he hasn't won the big one as a head coach. But the job Reeves did getting the Broncos back to the Super Bowl this season was as masterful as any of the work done by Walsh, Gibbs et al.

"There's no question about it, this was Dan's best year coaching," Broncos owner Pat Bowlen said. "We were 8-8 in 1988, we were being picked to finish third or fourth in our division. We knew we had a lot of improvement to make, and Dan made the necessary moves."

Some of those moves were painful for Reeves. He revamped his coaching staff, firing defensive coordinator Joel Collier, who held the position for 20 years, and four longtime assistants. He cut popular placekicker Rich Karlis and replaced him with untested David Treadwell. Mike Harden, the leader of the secondary and Denver's most versatile player, also was released at the end of training camp to make room for top draft pick Steve Atwater at free safety.

Wide receiver Steve Watson, another popular veteran, was released. So was tackle Dave Studdard.

"The coaching staff we had was all very fine coaches," Reeves said. "They were willing to take the bullets and catch the hand grenades thrown at you, and then you have to make changes and go in a different direction. It's very difficult.

"Always the most difficult part of being a coach of any team is having to make decisions that affect people's lives. I remember talking to Chuck Knox when I first took over here and he said, 'Wait until you're in the league a number of years and you have to release a player who has been with you the entire time. It hurts.'

"These guys have been a big part of your success, then you have to let them go and it's painful.'

But essential.

"Yes, they had to be done, but that doesn't make it any easier," Reeves said. "With all the changes we had and the new faces coming in, and coming off a poor season, the way we were competitive was an indication of how a team can go from a bad year to being in the hunt to play in the Super Bowl. It's been a very satisfying year."

Not the whole year, however. At midseason, Reeves wasn't showing off any jewelry. The Broncos were 6-2, headed for a romp in the AFC West, but Reeves was unhappy.

"I've been here nine years and this is the least amount of fun I've ever had," he said. "It should be rewarding to see a young team play the way this one has. But, even at 6-2, it's been more negative than ever.

"You win a game and people only want to know why you didn't do this better, why this other thing was bad. When you lose, you expect the tough questions. When you win, you don't expect that.

"It's not just the press. We'll walk into the dressing room at halftime and I'll be called everything but 'coach' (by the fans).

"It's no fun to deal with the negative part all the time. This game has to be fun."

It was Reeves' yearly blowup. The tune has changed completely, of course. How could it not with a team that was in the playoffs with four games to go and had the best record in the conference?

"Dan went out and got quality people to come here," nose tackle Greg Kragen said. "Obviously, Wade Phillips (the new defensive coordinator). And my coach, Earl Leggett, is highly respected.

"We were kind of undisciplined at times last year. Now, we are very disciplined, and the coaching has something to do with that."

Reeves, 45, joined the Broncos in 1981 after a decade as Tom Landry's assistant at Dallas. He served as defensive coordinator for Landry from 1977 — when Dallas beat the Broncos for the NFL title — until Edgar Kaiser, then the Broncos' owner, hired him to replace the popular Red Miller.

Only in the 1982 strike season, when Denver was 2-7, did Reeves lack security. But he survived and his record for the 1980s was 86-54-1.

He gets along well with Bowlen, who bought the team in 1984, and his players. His relationship with the media has been hot and cold — as is the case with all NFL coaches — ranging from cordial to adversarial. Reeves' sense of humor has become more evident in recent years and he can be almost hilarious at times.

When told that the Browns expected a wet field last Sunday and that at least one Cleveland player accused the Broncos of heavily watering it to slow down the pass rush, Reeves said, "If it will bother Mr. Modell, we'll do it."

He also tried to explain, to laughter throughout the news conference, how the thin air in Denver "gets in, there and makes the field all wet and soft. It's part of the homefield advantage."

There won't be any homefield advantage — or many edges at all — for the Broncos in New Orleans. They are heavy underdogs, but Reeves doesn't mind. He's happy he'll be there.

"You never get tired of it, heavens no," he said. "It's what you work for all year. I'm very honored and I hope this is not the last time."

With his track record, it probably won't be.

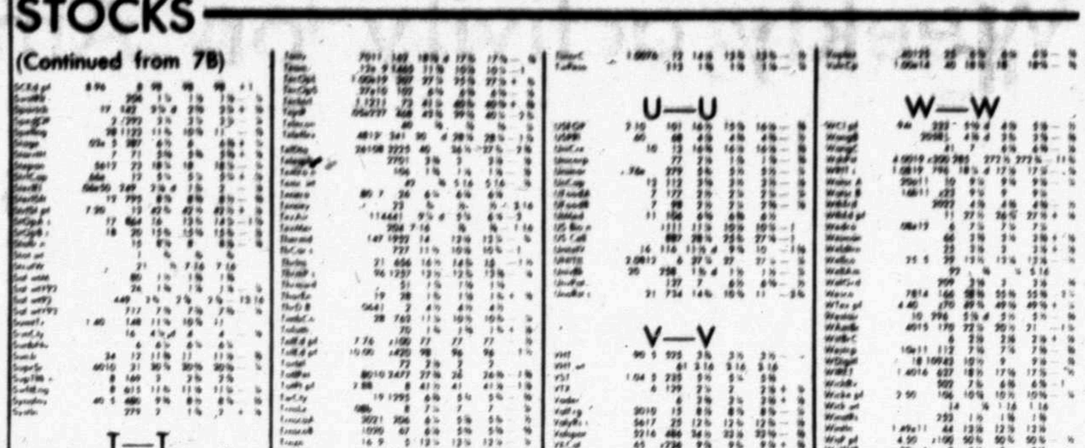

"I've thought about it in the past, why the good Lord has been so good to me, do I deserve all this? People I played against who were great players didn't get there. It's unbelievable. You dream about it and it becomes true."

He looked at the collection of rings — two Super Bowl championships with Dallas (1971 and '77), three NFC championships as a Cowboy (1970, '75 and '78), two AFC titles with the Broncos — and that smile returned.

"I'm amazed at the opportunities," he said, "but I can't answer why."

Bad green, darkness mars Phoenix Open

Associated Press

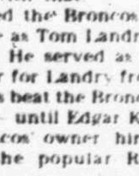

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — A ragged, tracked-up green foiled Tom Purtzer's last-hole birdie bid and let Tommy Armour III escape with the lead Friday in the uncompleted second round of the Phoenix Open.

Moments after commenting to playing partner J.C. Snead about how the greens had improved, Purtzer stroked a 15-foot putt for the birdie he needed to tie Armour for the 36-hole lead.

Inches from the cup on the final hole, the ball hit a spike mark, skidded to the right and missed the cup.

"Come again?" Snead said.

Smelly bags meant as reminder

HOUSTON (AP) — Common scents has convinced several students at Post Oak School that they need to recycle.

Six students have been carrying around garbage bags filled with their own garbage for a week as part of a science experiment designed to illustrate the growing solid waste crisis.

Seventh-grader Carlin Brady, 13, said Thursday that her cumbersome load "is filled with everything not good for you or the environment. I'm surprised at how much trash one person can collect in one weekend."

Scriptures Selected by The American Bible Society

Sunday John 11:1-44	Wednesday John 15:1-17
Monday John 12:20-36	Thursday Colossians 2:1-10
Tuesday John 12:37-50	Friday Colossians 1:3-14
	Saturday Colossians 2:11-19

The weather is cold. The chocolate is hot. In the living room, the fireplace pops and crackles while snow falls silently against steamed windowpanes. Oh, how wonderful to be in our cozy home, laughing at the cold, daring it to enter our warm haven.

Most of us are fortunate. We have shelter and food. We snuggle up close to those we love. One flick of the thermostat creates our chosen environment.

Everyone is not so fortunate. Some huddle over sidewalk grates for temporary warmth. Others beg on street corners for enough change to buy a hot cup of coffee or a frugal meal. We may view them with disdain, assuming that they do not care enough to better themselves.

God tells us not to judge, but to love even "the least of these . . . ."

Enter God's house this week. Thank Him for His blessings and pray for those less fortunate.

Religious community plans to 'honor Israel'

From Staff Reports

Leaders of Midland's Jewish community and interested Christians are planning "A Night to Honor Israel."

Midland's third event bearing that name will be staged Monday, March 5, at the Holiday Inn Convention Center. Spearheading the program are Jack and Judy Stone, with help from Bob Anson, Stanley Saikin and Noah Fishman, and a group of interested Christians.

The programs purpose is "for Jews and Christians to come together on the common ground of their historical roots and their support for the nation of Israel," said Mrs. Stone. "The Christians involved in bringing this program to the community are acting out of their belief in the God of Abraham, people to be their homeland forever.

"Christians have a responsibility toward Isarel and Jewish people because the Christian faith did not begin in the first century. It began with the first chapter of Genesis and encompasses the entire Bible."

The format for "A Night to Honor Israel" will differ from past programs, which drew audiences of of more than 1,000 in May 1987 and May 1988.

Featured performer will be Randall Bane of Kansas City, Mo., who will dance both solo and with a singing group. Since 1980, Bane has served as choreographer and production manager of the Feast of Tabernacles celebration in Jerusalem, sponsored by the International Christian Embassy.

Lively music with an Israeli flavor will be performed by singers and instrumentalists, with opportunities for the audience to sing along.

Serving lines for purchase of the Middle Eastern pita sandwich known as felafel and booths offering souvenirs from the Holy Land will open at 6:30 p.m. Entertainment will begin at 7:30. The public is invited at no charge.

Funding for the event is through private solicitation prior to the program. A free-will offering will be donated to two causes: planting trees in the Permian Basin Grove, dedicated outside Jerusalem by the Stones in July 1988, and aiding Soviet and Ethiopian Jews immigrating to Israel.

Events to mark First Christian's centennial

From Staff Reports

Two historic events for several Midland churches are scheduled for Wednesday and Feb. 3. The events are part of the year-long centennial celebration of First Christian Church.

The congregations of First Christian, Golf Course Road Church of Christ, Christian Church of Midland and other Churches of Christ will join Wednesday for a covered dish fellowship dinner. The event will be held at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ Family Life Center, 3500 W. Golf Course Road.

The dinner will begin at 6:00 p.m.

"This is the first time these congregations have come together for any kind of activity or program," said the Rev. Ray Bristol, senior minister of First Christian Church. "We will be celebrating our common heritage as Campbellites."

Campbellites is a reference to Alexander Campbell and the 19th century movement to which these organizations owe their origins.

Doug Parsons is the minister of Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Special entertainment for the dinner will be provided by the Rev. Royce Makin, pastor of Central Christian Church in San Antonio. He will provide exerpts from sermons of Alexander Campbell. A talented author and actor, Makin will be dressed in full makeup and costume to dramatize the life of Alexander Campbell.

First Christian Church will join with Memorial Christian on Saturday at 6:30 p.m. for a catered dinner at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, 4300 Highway 80. In addition to First Christian's centennial, Memorial Christian is observing its 36th anniversary.

First Christian members founded Memorial Christian Church. Clark Ford is the church pastor.

Master of ceremonies for the event will be former Midlander Delbert Downing. Also scheduled to speak is Charles Jarvis, a nationally-known humorist and speaker. The Rob Hunt Trio and Cathy Horn will provide music for the special event.

LIFESCOPE

Is There Another Testament Of Jesus Christ? Lifescope Says, "Understand 'Testament' And The Answer Will Be Clear!"

Now the first agreement had certain rules for the service of God . . . Under this arrangement the outer tent was habitually used by the priests in the regular discharge of their religious duties. But the inner tent was entered once a year only, by the High Priest, alone, bearing a sacrifice of shed blood to be offered for himself and for the sins of the people which they had committed unwittingly.

By these things the Holy Spirit means us to understand that the way to the holy place was not yet open . . . in which both gifts and sacrifices are offered and yet are incapable of cleansing the soul of the worshipper. For now Christ has come among us . . . and has passed through a greater and more perfect tent which no human hand had made (for it was no part of this world of ours). It was not with goats' or calves' blood but with His own blood that He entered once and for all into the holy place, having won for us men eternal reconciliation with God.

Christ is consequently the administrator of an entirely new agreement, having the power, by virtue of His death, to redeem transgressions committed under the first agreement: to enable those who obey God's call to enjoy the promises of the eternal inheritance. For where there is a testament, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is in force after men are dead, since it has no power at all while the testator lives. But God showed His great love for us by sending Christ to die for us while we were still sinners. But He, because He continues forever, has an unchangeable priesthood. Therefore He is also able to save to the uttermost those who come to God through Him, since He ever lives to make intercession for them.

For Christ has entered into heaven itself, to appear now before God as our Friend. It was not in the earthly place of worship that He did this, for that was merely a copy of the real temple in heaven. Nor has He offered Himself again and again, as the high priest down here on earth offers animal blood in the Holy of Holies each year. If that had been necessary, then He would have had to die again and again, ever since the world began. But no! He came once for all, at the end of the age, to put away the power of sin forever by dying for us.

Group hopes members increase

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A leader of the mainly black National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., says attempts are being made to lure members and pastors into the mainly white Southern Baptist Convention to increase its black membership.

Cecilia Adkins, head of the National Baptist publishing board, said at a recent meeting of educators at the denomination's new headquarters that the group needed counter-tactics against losing members to the Southern Baptists.

The National Baptist Convention has about 5.5 million members, the Southern Baptist Convention about 14.8 million, of whom about 300,000 are black.

Olivia Cloud of the Southern Baptists' black church development section, denied the group sought to "go after National Baptists."

"If anybody switches convention it demonstrates a need is being met," she said.

Rabbi says American Jews lack compassion

NEW YORK (AP) — Rabbi Max N. Schreier, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, says American Jews lack passion for helping Jews from the Soviet Union resettle in Israel.

"It would be tragic indeed if we failed to make Israel the center of Jewish life, demographically," he said at a midwinter conference of the Orthodox branch of U.S. Judaism.

Some church officials don't like to admit they make mistakes

By ROBERT DI VEROLI
Copley News Service

If the guide's purpose was to get people talking about sex, it was a resounding success — though probably not in the way its authors intended.

Like most people, church officials don't like to admit their errors.

As a result, they often choose to let a difficult situation die of its own weight instead of facing it — and the unpleasant fallout — head on.

The Episcopalians did it last year on the issue of sexuality guidelines. The Roman Catholic bishops did it last week on AIDS.

In both cases, controversial statements issued by church-affiliated committees were reduced to virtual non-entity status while new, more acceptable guidelines were being adopted.

No one's wrists were slapped. No one was publicly hung out to dry.

When the Episcopalians assembled last year for their General Convention in Detroit, lay and clerical delegates were abuzz over a church study guide that spoke approvingly of homosexuality and non-marital sex.

The report, "Sexuality: a Divine Gift," had been prepared by the church's Task Force on Human Sexuality and Family Life for use in parishes and schools.

Co-sponsored by the National Association of Episcopal Schools, the study guide rankled many Episcopalians who charged that it condoned non-marital sex, homosexual acts and masturbation and suggested that the Bible and Christian tradition treat sex as an evil.

Some suggested that if its purpose was to get people talking about sex, the guide had been a resounding success, though probably not in the way its authors intended.

In Detroit, the august Episcopal House of Bishops commended the committee that wrote the study guide — but asked it to please come up with something better.

They didn't exactly kill the study guide, but a spokesman for the bishops said that the guide was basically dead.

"It's out of print and there are no plans to reprint it," Bishop William C. Frey of Denver said after the vote.

Thus was a controversial church document buried without being killed.

Recently, the American Catholic bishops did something similar at their semiannual meeting in Baltimore. This time the issue was a December 1987 statement, "The Many Faces of AIDS," issued by the bishops' 50-member administrative board.

What upset many bishops was the statement's advice that while Catholics were morally forbidden to use condoms, non-Catholics with a different moral view of such things might consider their use as possible protection against AIDS.

To be sure, it was felt that the 1987 statement said a good many of the right things — that abstinence outside of marriage, fidelity within marriage and avoidance of intravenous drug use are "the only morally correct and medically sure ways" to prevent the spread of AIDS.

But the reference to condoms and non-Catholics didn't go over well with many Catholics, including many members of the Catholic hierarchy.

Enter Archbishop Roger Mahony of Los Angeles, who was named chairman of a committee charged with preparing a new statement to replace the offending administrative board creation.

Recently in Baltimore the Mahony committee was ready to present a new statement for the bishops' consideration. Adopted by an overwhelming vote the main difference between the two statements was that the second omitted any reference to condoms and non-Catholics.

Mahony said there was "no substantial difference" between the two.

But church teaching is "more fully and clearly enunciated" in the new document, said Archbishop John May of St. Louis, then president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

"Furthermore," added May, "that was a statement of the administrative board, of 50 bishops. The present statement is a statement of 300 bishops and therefore has that much more authority."

Thus was another controversial church document buried alive.

"They don't like to admit they make mistakes," said a portent and veteran bishop-watcher.

Economy slows to a crawl, bringing new talk of recession

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy slowed almost to a standstill in the last three months of 1989, registering a barely perceptible 0.5 percent annual growth rate that was the poorest since the spring of 1986, the government said Friday.

The weak growth in the gross national product, the country's total output of goods and services, raised fears among private economists that the record seven-year-long peacetime expansion was in danger of ending, especially if jittery financial markets drive interest rates higher.

The Bush administration was more upbeat, however, predicting that the sluggishness will be followed by an economic rebound, although Vice President Dan Quayle called the GNP report disappointing, adding, "These numbers this morning were not what we had hoped for."

The Commerce Department blamed the big drop-off in growth from October through December on a rare decline in consumer spending, a deteriorating trade deficit and a slump in business investment spending.

For the year as a whole, the GNP grew by 2.9 percent, following a much more rapid 4.4 percent increase in 1988. It was the slowest annual growth rate since a 2.7 percent rise in 1986.

Even with the slower growth, inflation was slightly worse during the year with a price index tied to the GNP rising by 4.5 percent, up from 4.2 percent in 1988 and the worst showing since 1982, when it was 6.2 percent.

While the fourth quarter GNP advance was in line with expectations, many economists questioned where the economy will get strength for a rebound.

"The economy ground to a virtual halt in the fourth quarter with signs of weakness everywhere," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co. "My own view is that we are near and possibly headed into some sort of a recession."

Other economists were not as pessimistic, believing that the Federal Reserve would provide another dose of lower interest rates if necessary to spur growth.

"We are on the bottom edge of the famous soft landing, although it is somewhat softer than one might have wanted for comfort," said Robert Dederick, chief economist of the Northern Trust Co. "Nevertheless, the odds are against a full-fledged recession."

Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, told reporters at the White House that the credit easing engineered by the Federal Reserve since last June was one of the reasons he was optimistic that growth will rebound and the fourth quarter weakness will turn out to have only a "modest" impact on the budget deficit.

The administration is basing its $1.23 trillion budget for 1991, due to be unveiled Monday, on a forecast that the GNP will grow 2.6 percent this year, when measured from the fourth quarter of 1989 to the fourth quarter of 1990.

But private analysts, even the majority, who are not forecasting a recession, are decidedly less optimistic, projecting a lackluster GNP increase this year of around 1.8 percent, which would be the slowest growth rate since the recession year of 1982.

Economists were split on how quickly the economy will regain strength. Michael Darby, Commerce undersecretary for economic affairs, predicted that GNP growth would rise above 1 percent in the current quarter.

About 500 United Mine Workers members rally against use of non-union workers at a coal-processing plant near Dehue, W.Va.

500 union miners march to Appalachian plant site

DEHUE, W.Va. (AP) — More than 500 United Mine Workers members from three states marched two miles up an Appalachian hollow Friday to demand the removal of non-union workers from a coal preparation plant.

Union coal miners chanting "UMW all the way" marched up Rum Creek to a private bridge leading to the Rum Creek Coal Sales Inc. plant, site of confrontations and arrests earlier this week.

"We're here to show solidarity in a peaceful manner and show the community of Dehue that it needs a rabies vaccination to rid of some bad dogs," said Roger Nelson, a UMW strike organizer.

Miners struck Rum Creek in mid-August after the company re-opened the coal preparation plant with non-union contractors. UMW members men had run it before.

It was the largest gathering of UMW miners since June, when a rally in Charleston in support of miners on strike against the Pittston Coal Group, attracted more than 1,000 people, the union said. That march triggered wildcat strikes the next day, which eventually idled 43,000 miners in 10 states.

"Our focus is to bring public attention and bring justice to people in the coal fields," said Bob Phalen, president of UMW District 17.

Cars and pickups lined a state highway about 70 miles southeast of Charleston, and state police escorted the miners, from West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky, two miles from a parking lot to the coal company bridge.

No violence was reported. Rum Creek officials told U.S. marshals at the site that no coal trucks would make runs Friday. Marshals were present because the UMW is under court order not to block access to the coal company property.

Many miners said they were prepared to be arrested.

Teen husband kills wife, child before his suicide

By ROBERT IMRIE

GREENVILLE, Wis. (AP) — Young marriages face tough odds, but Todd and Bonnie Longsine seemed off to a good start and headed away from some of the troubles of their adolescent years.

The two teen-agers owned a three-bedroom mobile home, a car and a pickup truck and had a happy 14-month-old son, Josh, whose blond hair and blue eyes charmed their friends.

But Longsine, 19, turned against his family this week, fatally shooting 18-year-old Bonnie, setting a fire that killed Josh and then ending his own life. Their bodies were found Thursday by a repairman making a service call to their trailer.

No suicide note was found, leaving their neighbors in the Country Estates Mobile Home Park in Greenville, a town of 225 in northeastern Wisconsin, without explanations.

"From what I could tell from Todd and Bonnie, everything seemed to be fine," neighbor Kathy Nichols said. "It seemed like he had it together. He was happy to be a father."

The couple married in October 1988, a month or so before Josh was born, and bought their trailer home a year later. Todd graduated from Menasha High School in 1988, worked at a warehouse for a brief time and then enrolled in a trade school to learn metal welding. Bonnie was a waitress in nearby Appleton, hoping to move up to management.

Their actions seemed to be cutting a path away from their rocky adolescence, when Todd had some skirmishes with the law and Bonnie dropped out of Menasha High before her junior year.

But not everybody believed that all was well with the couple.

Wendy Reiland, a friend of Mrs. Longsine's, said the young mother wanted out within months of the marriage, then changed her mind. The couple filed a joint divorce petition a year ago, then withdrew it last summer.

A neighbor, Krista Vollmer, saw a "for sale" sign in the window of their trailer one day earlier this month. Officials at Fox Valley Technical College said Todd failed to register Jan. 19 for the spring semester.

Outagamie County Sheriff Thomas Drootsan said the .22-caliber rifle that Longsine used was bought just this week. He shot Bonnie, set the fire outside Josh's bedroom that asphyxiated the toddler as he slept, and then shot himself, authorities said. The deaths went undetected until the repairman's call Thursday because the fire burned itself out.

Sheriff's Capt. Gary Barrington said Friday that Longsine had a juvenile record, including an arrest for disorderly conduct, but had not been in major trouble. There were no reports of wife or child abuse during the marriage, authorities said.

Todd and Bonnie Longsine

Josh Longsine

"I wish we had a real good motive to lay on you, but right now we don't," Barrington said.

Longsine's step-grandmother, Irene Stoeger, said she remembered her grandson's being in trouble while growing up. His mother "reported him to the police department a lot," Ms. Stoeger said. "Quite a few years ago, Todd went on a rampage. He got mad."

Police in Menasha said they investigated Longsine to see if he was helping Bonnie hide when she ran away from home in spring 1988 at age 17. He was not charged with anything and she eventually came back home.

Mrs. Longsine's mother, Barb Godeck, said Friday that the family had reservations about Longsine when the two married later that year. The couple had met at a dance, she said.

"There were probably a lot of things we weren't pleased about," she said. "Sometimes you think you know someone and you really don't.

"Bonnie was a very loving person," her mother added. "Anyone who knew her liked her. She had no enemies."

Mrs. Longsine's boss at Marc's Big Boy restaurant, Dave Anderson, called her a hard worker. He said she seemed quieter, somewhat tense the last two weeks.

"We had ideas she was having marriage problems, but to what extent? Everybody goes through marriage problems," he said. "As far as we knew, they were doing OK financially."

NATION IN BRIEF

Bush reveals spending plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Friday announced another big increase in proposed spending — this time for Head Start — in a $1.2 trillion 1991 budget he said was designed to provide "opportunity for all."

At the same time, however, economists were saying the optimistic deficit projections underpinning Bush's spending plan were threatened by signs of a weakening economy.

The anemic 0.5 percent growth in the gross national product reported Friday for the final three months of 1989 could make meeting the new budget's deficit-reduction goals all but impossible, some analysts contended.

From proposed increases in spending for wildlife and recreation to tougher terms for home-buying military veterans, details of Bush's budget were sprouting all over official Washington in advance of Monday's official release of the spending plan for the year beginning Oct. 1.

Noriega will be held

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge ordered deposed Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega held without bond Friday after his attorneys asked that their client be declared a prisoner of war and transferred to a neutral country.

Prosecutors listed homes, bank deposits, sports cars and other assets worth up to $30 million, including $5.8 million in cash found in Noriega's Panama ranch, to bolster their argument that Noriega would flee the country if necessary.

They also said Noriega is an expert in counterterrorism and covert actions and still has a loyal band of armed followers.

"Mr. Noriega is an extraordinary danger to the community," prosecutor Myles Malman told U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler. He also said Noriega faces 145 years in prison.

Canned confetti recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Friday announced the recall of three million cans of an aerosol string confetti because the propellant used in the product may be highly flammable.

The product, "Extra Thick Super String," often used at children's birthday parties and other celebrations, is hazardous if sprayed near an open flame, said the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The commission received consumer hotline reports of six children who were burned when fires started after the string was sprayed in the area of birthday cakes with candles, said CPSC spokesman Ken Giles.

Approximately three million cans of the string were sold nationwide from December 1988 until October 1989, when the New Jersey-based manufacturer, E. Davis, Inc., developed a new nonflammable propellant formula, the agency said in a written statement.

Did man mislead pigs?

CANTON, Miss. (AP) — A man has been charged with trying to pickle his neighbor's porkers.

Charles Myers, 19, of Canton, was in the Madison County Jail on Friday after giving whiskey and wine to a neighbor's hogs Saturday, said sheriff's investigator Carroll Phelps.

Myers was arrested Sunday after Mattie Mae Randall accused him of giving the hogs the alcohol despite her pleas to stop, Phelps said. He threw whiskey on Randall and left only when she threatened to get her gun, she told authorities.

Randall said Thursday her hogs apparently were unharmed and didn't appear drunk. "I really don't know if it took effect on them or not," she said.

Myers has been held in the jail since Sunday because of outstanding warrants on unrelated charges, authorities said. In the pig incident he was charged with trespassing, malicious mischief and three counts of simple assault, all misdemeanors.

AVIANCA CRASH: The Aftermath

Probe focuses on charge jetliner ran out of fuel

COVE NECK, N.Y. (AP) — The crew of a Colombian jetliner warned controllers repeatedly they wer running out of fuel before the Boeing 707 crashed on its second approach to Kennedy Airport, killing 72 people, investigators said Friday.

Avianca Airlines Flight 52 from Bogota had been delayed by air traffic and appeared to have barely enough fuel to land before it slashed into a suburban hillside Thursday night, officials said. The jet may have lost power in three of its four engines before it went down.

The plane's crew, however, never declared an emergency or requested an emergency landing priority, Lee Dickinson, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said at a Friday evening news conference.

Eighty-nine people survived the crash and 72 died, including the entire nine-member crew except for the chief steward, Dickinson said. Only nine victims had been positively identified, he said. The Boeing 707 carried 152 passengers.

Hospital officials said at least 25 of the injured were in serious or critical condition, and more than two dozen children were among the injured.

Some of the children were being adopted by American parents and were making their first trips to their new homes.

Investigators picking through the wreckage of the jet in the woods of this isolated, wealthy suburb found gauges indicating it had 10,000 pounds of fuel left, Dickinson said. That corresponds to about 6 percent of the plane's capacity. Investigators had not checked the actual tanks, he said.

After aborting their first attempt at landing, the cockpit crew told the control tower repeatedly that "they were running out of fuel or that they were low on fuel," Dickinson said.

In Seattle, Boeing Commercial Airplanes spokesman Jack Gamble said the 10,000 pounds would have been roughly the amount the jet needed to get to the airport, "but not much more."

Gamble said 10,000 pounds equals about 1,500 gallons, "enough to land an airplane when it's three to five minutes out" from the field and the plane is in a normal landing configuration. A 707 can carry up to 23,855 gallons.

Three to five minutes flight time equals about 17 miles in a landing configuration, Gamble said. The Avianca jetliner, nearing the end of a 2,400-mile flight, crashed about 15 miles northeast of the airport.

Dickinson said investigators flew over the site early Friday and determined the wreckage was on course for another Kennedy approach. In addition, the landing gear was up and the flaps were "somewhere between fully extended and retracted ... indicating that the airplane was in some phase of approach," he said.

Before the crash, the plane was put in a holding pattern over Norfolk, Va., and New Jersey for 75 minutes, NBC News reported. Dickinson and an FAA spokeswoman said they could not confirm that.

When it finally reached Kennedy International Airport, the jetliner was forced to abort an initial landing in fog and rain because of warnings that it was "sinking too fast" — descending too quickly and at the wrong angle, Dickinson said.

It was making a second approach shortly after 9:30 p.m. when the crew reported to the airport tower that it was having trouble with its number two engine. The crew then reported two engines out, and shortly thereafter the jet disappeared from the radar screens, Dickinson said.

Prior to the first landing attempt, the pilot, Laureano Caviedes, told passengers that because of heavy air traffic at JFK, the plane would have to circle for 20 minutes, according to statements by one witness.

The Colombian radio network RCN reported that the 23-year-old plane had been plagued by mechanical problems recently.

Community jolted by plane crash

COVE NECK, N.Y. (AP) — Paramedic Jeff Race didn't have enough time to be startled when a jet plane crashed a half mile from his home. Too many people needed help.

"There were bodies on top of bodies on top of bodies," said Race, 26, the first rescuer to reach the secluded wooded area where Avianca Flight 52 crashed Thursday night.

"People were screaming, 'Help me, help me, help me.' Limbs were bent every way you can imagine. I just started pulling people from the wreckage," said Race.

The wreckage was located off Tennis Court Road, the only road into and out of the affluent section of Long Island. Race borrowed a flashlight from a neighbor and pulled out six children while ambulances were called to the scene.

Through several hours in the dark and drizzle, Race freed 12 more people.

"One guy pinned in the wreckage had a little boy next to him. He said, 'Get the kid out first.' I'll never forget that," said the paramedic.

"I had to hold the flashlight strap in my teeth to carry another kid out. There were bodies all over the place — outside the plane, and buried in the wreckage. It was all mangled metal, aluminum, steel, and wires," he said.

Race, a New York City paramedic and volunteer member of the Oyster Bay Fire Company, spooned soup from a foam cup and munched cookies after his exhausting night. He stood in the rain in his Docksiders because he didn't have time to put on his fireman's boots.

"We're trained to prepare for the worst, but my first reaction was that this was a dream," Race said.

"I think it was a miracle for anybody on the plane to be alive," said Race. "Hero? Everybody who was there was a hero."

The plane crashed in a secluded hamlet of 400 residents that covers three square miles on OysterBay Harbor, which is part of Long Island Sound. Any new home requires four acres for a building permit.

The parents of tennis pro John McEnroe have an estate here and a temporary morgue was set up on their lawn across from a private outdoor tennis court.

Avianca plane reportedly plagued by problems

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The Avianca airlines Boeing 707 that crashed on Long Island, N.Y., killing at least 66 of the 158 people aboard, was plagued by mechanical problems in recent months, a national radio network reported Friday.

The RCN network, quoting airport sources, said Avianca sent the 23-year-old, four-engine jet into the maintenance workshop 37 times in the last four months.

The Civil Aviation Authority does not permit news media to review aircraft maintenance records, but RCN indicated it spoke to someone with access to the records.

RCN gave no details on the maintenance records, such as what the problems were and whether any Civil Aviation Authority rules were violated.

The radio network said the Colombian agency and Avianca sent a team to New York City to take part in the investigation of Thursday night's accident.

The plane crashed in the town of Cove Neck as it approached John F. Kennedy international airport.

Some reports said the plane had lost an engine, but Alfredo Parra, a airline pilot instructor inteviewed in Bogota, said that the aircraft could have continued to fly even if it lost two engines.

"Why the aircraft didn't try to land at an alternate airport even if one or two of its engines was inoperative is an important question to be asked in the investigation," Parra said in an interview with the Caracol radio network.

Colombian aviation experts said in radio interviews that investigators should try to determine why the plane, which according to CNN ran out of fuel, was circling New York instead of heading for an alternative airport where weather conditions were better.

Avianca and airport officials have declined to comment on the possible cause of the accident.

"People were screaming, 'Help me, help me, help me.' Limbs were bent every way you can imagine. I just started pulling people from the wreckage."

Crash survivor says he 'had time to say a prayer'

MANHASSET, N.Y. (AP) — Jorge Lozano felt the flight turn bumpy.

"The ladies and kids started screaming," the 59-year-old Bogota businessman recalled Friday, hours after he was rescued from the wreckage of Avianca Flight 52. "I thought we were going to crash.

"I had time to say a prayer. I put my attache case over my knees because I didn't have a pillow. I bent over in the crash position. In about five seconds we were crashing into the trees."

The Boeing 707 plunged into a hillside Thursday night on the north shore of Long Island, killing 72 people and injuring 89. Lozano, a gray-haired man who works for the American Cargill grain company in Bogota, escaped with a cracked vertebra, a gash on his head and a swollen tongue.

Whispering in English from his bed at North Shore University Hospital, Lozano spoke about curious aspects of the disaster — a low pass over Kennedy Airport, a lack of communication from the cockpit and the possibility that the jet ran out of gas.

"I'm so lucky," he said. "My wife is flying in today to see me from Bogota. When the whole thing ended, I saw a big hole. I took my seat belt off. I slid down the hole. It was an opening in th plane, right where I was. It was a miracle."

Lozano said Flight 52 was already running late when it reached the fog-shrouded metropolitan area.

About 9:15 p.m. or 9:20, he said, "we tried to land. We flew low. I recognized the highways. I thought we were going to land. We flew by — apparently the runway was not visible. We went up, circling very high. Then, 10 minutes later, it was bumpy."

And then, the screaming started.

"The pilot or stewardess didn't say a thing. I think the guy ran out of gas," Lozano said. "Inside, the lights went off. Outside, the lights were off. But there was a little light inside the plane. I guess it was run by battery."

Then came the impact. Residents heard no jet engines roaring and there was no explosion. Authorities on the scene speculated the plane had no fuel left.

Libel trial investigating bimbos, 'hommes serieux'

By ROBERT BARR

LONDON (AP) — When the editor of The Sunday Times sues the former editor of The Sunday Telegraph for libel, fascinating issues are aired in court.

Does it behoove "hommes serieux' to be seen in nightclubs?

Should two editors pursue the same woman?

If a bimbette is a younger bimbo, then what is an "aging bimbette?"

Those issues arose this week as Andrew Neil, editor of The Sunday Times, waged his libel suit against Peregrine Worsthorne, former editor of The Sunday Telegraph.

It's jam for the tabloids, of course, but the usually sober quality papers also are enjoying a wallow in a case rife with the personal and professional passions of Fleet Street, London's historic newspaper district.

Neil alleges that Worsthorne and The Sunday Telegraph falsely implied that he knew that Pamella Bordes, his girlfriend for four months in 1988, was a prostitute.

Miss Bordes, a former Miss India, was a low-paid researcher in the House of Commons a year ago when a tabloid broke the story of her other life.

That created a hot market for photos of Miss Bordes, including one of her on the dance floor with Neil and another of her holding hands with Neil's Sunday competitor, Donald Trelford, editor of The Observer.

In an editorial titled "Playboys as Editors" in the March 19 Sunday Telegraph, Worsthorne thundered that "anybody who finds the company of bimbos ... indispensable to their professional fulfillment might do well to conclude that editorial chairs were not designed for them."

Neil, a stocky, 40-year-old bachelor, alleges that the editorial, a cartoon and a subsequent article by another writer falsely implied that he knew that his girlfriend was a prostitute.

The principals in the case are all well-acquainted. Rupert Murdoch owns The Sunday Times as well as The News of the World, which broke the Bordes story. After Worsthorne's editorial, Neil acknowledged, The Sunday Times had tried to hire him, and it has hired the author of the other Sunday Telegraph article cited in the suit.

The defendants say Worsthorne's editorial was fair comment and not, as opposing counsel suggested, "an overwritten piece of humbug."

"Newspapers are not in the business of being particularly tolerant or understanding about public figures when they get into a scandal," testified Worsthorne, a patrician figure with flowing silver hair.

Neil met Miss Bordes at a club called Tramp, which the 66-year-old Worsthorne regards as no fit milieu for the editor of The Sunday Times.

It is not a place where one is apt to meet the archbishop of Canterbury, the prime minister "or even an archdeacon," Worsthorne said, but a place where most men go "for one reason — to pick up girls." At least, he said on cross-examination, that's why he used to go to nightclubs.

Editors, Worsthorne said, once were "hommes serieux," serious men who frequented "learned seminars, European chancelleries, establishment dinners."

Neil said he had become aware that the 52-year-old Trelford also was interested in Miss Bordes, but Neil warned Trelford away "because I thought no newspaper could resist a story of two editors and the same woman."

After a headline in The Sun, Murdoch's big-selling daily, called Trelford "Dirty Don," Trelford publicly wondered why there was no mention of "Randy Andy" Neil.

The Sun made amends with Thursday's screamer headline:

"DIRTY DON TRIED TO PULL MY PAM SAYS RANDY ANDY."

Earlier in the week, Mr. Justice Michael Davis was puzzled by the terminology in the gossip columns. "Mr. Neil," the judge interjected, "we heard yesterday the word bimbo. I presume a bimbette is a young bimbo. But can you help us? What is an 'aging bimbette'?"

Neil said he did not know.

Worsthorne was at least prepared to define a bimbo: "An obviously very attractive young girl who tends to bat her eyelids and has a very attractive frontal — whatever the correct word is."

Yazov says troops prevented overthrow

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY

MOSCOW (AP) — The Red Army moved into Baku to destroy the structure of the Azerbaijani People's Front and other informal organizations that were about to seize power, the Soviet defense minister said in remarks published Friday.

The minister, Dmitri T. Yazov, told Soviet journalists in Baku, the capital of the republic of Azerbaijan, that on Jan. 20 — the day after soldiers took control of the city — "a meeting was planned at which it was proposed to declare the transfer of power into the hands of the People's Front."

Also on Friday, opposition members of the Soviet parliament and an official newspaper questioned the Kremlin's use of force in the Caucasus to quell the ethnic attacks between Armenians and Azerbaijanis that began Jan. 13-14.

The People's Front had declared its own state of emergency in Baku a full day before the soldiers moved in, and "in many regions of the city ... Soviet and party organs had ceased to control the situation," Yazov said.

Yazov, in the remarks published by the government newspaper Izvestia, appeared to stress the need to control the political situation in the republic rather than the need to stop the ethnic warfare in which dozens of people were killed.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other top officials have cited public safety as the reason for the military assault and the battle with nationalists that followed in which at least 80 people died.

The defense minister said that the military's task now is to destroy the power structure that the People's Front and other informal political organizations had set up in factories and state-run institutions.

Critics of the military move against well-armed Azerbaijani nationalists have said that attacks against the Armenian minority had ended well before the army moved. Azerbaijani nationalists have accused Moscow of seeking to crush their movement against the Communist Party and government apparatus.

Yazov said 80 "extremists" from the People's Front and other informal organizations had been arrested.

Baku journalist Tuuzala Kasumova said by telephone that after meeting with Azerbaijani deputies, Yazov had pulled some tanks and other military equipment off the streets of Baku. She said the situation in the city was less tense.

Yazov said: "The army's actions are directed at breathing new life into Baku's fading economy, confiscating weapons from the population and destroying the organizational structure of the People's Front leaders who are keen on seizing power."

"According to our estimates, about 40,000 militants armed with submachine guns, rifles of various systems, machine guns and shotguns are loose in Azerbaijan," he said.

Yuri N. Afanasyev, a member of the Congress of People's Deputies, was one of the opposition figures who called for an emergency session of the parliament to settle the Caucasus dispute before it ecompasses the entire country.

"From our point of view, we should have a Supreme Soviet session to hear all groups, to regulate the conflict," he said at a Moscow news conference.

"We need to call a session so that the threat of the south does not touch all of society," he said.

Under current law, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet has the power to call the Supreme Soviet into session. A session of the Supreme Soviet is scheduled for mid-February.

Despite Gorbachev's reforms that have opened up Soviet society, Afanasyev likened the decision to send soldiers into Baku to the secret decisions to crush democracy movements in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, and to send troops to Afghanistan.

Afanasyev and 12 other legislators signed a document urging a special session of the Supreme Soviet legislature to discuss redrawing the border between the republics of Armenia and Azerbaijan, which have been locked in a bitter territorial dispute for two years, and a deadline for withdrawal of the soldiers in Baku. They said they were "categorically against the use of force."

Afanasyev is a leader of the Interregional Deputies Group, the formal parliamentary opposition that claims about 400 members and was created largely through the inspiration of the late human rights activist Andrei Sakharov.

The newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said two veterans of the Afghanistan war, Cols. A. Savelyev and A. Rusakov, sent a telegram to Gorbachev Jan. 19 that said bringing in troops would lead "to a total break in relations and put their families in danger," as well as "creating a rise in the anti-Russian mood."

Since then, thousands of relatives of Soviet soldiers have been evacuated from Baku and there have been reports of threats and attacks against Russians in the Azerbaijani capital.

Bringing Russian families into the conflict could spread unrest far across the Soviet Union.

Troops search village for separatist Moslems

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — Troops searched from house to house Friday for pro-Pakistan Moslems waging a violent separatist campaign in Kashmir, and the government imposed a virtual news blackout.

At least 70 people, most of them Moslem militants, have been killed since the government began a crackdown Saturday to try to halt separatist violence.

Witnesses in Srinagar, summer capital of Jammu-Kashmir state, said soldiers and paramilitary commandos of the elite National Security Guard were searching the city. Similar searches were reported in the nearby towns of Anantnag and Baramulla.

Many residents of Srinagar refused to switch on lights after dusk in protest of the crackdown.

Journalists were confined to a hotel and told they would be arrested, or even shot, if they stepped outside. They were denied access to telex and telephone lines after the warning.

In Muzaffarabad, Pakistan, Premier Sikander Hyat Khan of Pakistani Kashmir said he would launch a Moslem "holy war" unless the United Nations schedules a special session to address the Kashmir issue.

Muzaffarabad is the capital of Pakistani Kashmir and near the ceasefire that has divided the region between India and Pakistan since 1947, when the subcontinent became independent of Britain and the two nations were created. India and Pakistan have fought four wars, three of them specifically over Kashmir.

Most of the 5 million people in the Indian State of Jammu-Kashmir are Moslems. It is the only state with a Moslem majority in India, a predominantly Hindu nation.

"If the United Nations is not ready to play its role ... I will tell them to go and fight," Khan warned of the people in Pakistani Kashmir.

He gave the world organization until Feb. 17 to schedule a special session. He said the deadline coincided with a scheduled meeting all Pakistani political and religious parties in Islamabad.

Tariq Mahmood Butt, head of the student wing of the militant Jammu-Kashmir Liberation Front, said thousands of its members would cross the frontier Feb. 11 if the United Nations did not promise action.

Indian state television described the situation in Jammu-Kashmir as "by and large peaceful," but said paramilitary troops fired on rioters Thursday in Handwara, 40 miles northwest of Srinagar. A government spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said 11 people were killed and 14 wounded.

Troops in Srinagar tightened restrictions under the 24-hour curfew and prevented residents from opening windows, said witnesses.

From various vantage points in Srinagar, a city of 1 million, only heavily armed troopers and an occasional government official could be seen on the streets. Several people reached by telephone from inside and outside Srinagar said they had not heard gunfire.

Polish Communist Party seeking revival in congress

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's beleaguered Communists begin a party congress Saturday at which they are expected to change their name, shed the old ideology and declare themselves champions of parliamentary democracy.

They also intend to choose new leaders they hope can mold the new incarnation into the main left-wing party of Poland's new political spectrum.

About 1,600 delegates will attend the 11th congress of the party, which ruled Poland from its founding in 1948 until the government of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, led by Solidarity, took over last year.

The congress will continue at least until Monday, and insiders say the party is in such disarray it is difficult to predict what will happen.

Politburo member Janusz Reykowski said no one in the party advocates a split, but it is possible either orthodox Communists or extreme liberals may bolt and form their own group.

Reykowski said in an interrview Thursday the party now claims 2 million members, but the new party will be much smaller.

"It is a necessity to lose a great majority of the members," he said. "It is inevitable. ... The problem is rather what kind of people remain, whether those who remain are based on the old guard or are those oriented toward a completely new way of political activity."

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and Communist members of Parliament have expressed support for Tadeusz Fiszbach as leader of the new party. He is a former party chief in Gdansk, Walesa's hometown, who was dismissed because he opposed the imposition of martial law in December 1981.

Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, the current leader, said early in January he would be a candidate, but he appeared to be reconsidering this week because of arguments that only new leadership will give the party a chance.

When asked at a news conference Friday whether he would seek the job, he replied: "I don't have the answer to this question today."

Reykowski, the Politburo member, said neither Rakowski nor Fiszbach would be chosen if delegates felt the time had come for a "clear generational change."

Possible candidates from the new generation are Slawomir Wiatr, founder of a liberal party faction called the 8th of July Movement, and Leszek Miller, a Rakowski loyalist and party secretary.

The Communist Party, formally named the Polish United Workers Party, was created by a forced merger in Stalin's days of the Polish Workers Party and the Polish Socialist Party, a left-wing group founded in the 19th century.

Government confirms it received peace proposal from Mandela

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government confirmed for the first time Friday that it had received a written peace proposal from jailed black leader Nelson Mandela, but said its contents were secret.

The country's most powerful right-wing politician, Andries Treurnicht of the pro-apartheid Conservative Party, demanded the government halt its consultations with Mandela. The prisoner's goal was "white surrender," Treurnicht said.

Mandela, South Africa's best-known black leader, is expected to be freed within weeks after more than 27 years in prison. He is serving a life sentence for helping plan the start of an anti-government sabotage campaign by the outlawed African National Congress.

Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee said Friday that he received from Mandela on Dec. 12 a proposal titled "A Document to Create a Climate of Understanding."

"The document is confidential and enjoys the status of a useful background document," said Coetsee.

The same document reportedly has been forwarded to the ANC's exiled leaders. It is believed to suggest steps to bring about negotiations between the government and the ANC, which has the largest following among South Africa's black majority.

Mandela has met regularly in recent months with government and anti-apartheid leaders. Coetsee, one of the officials involved in these meetings, said last week the government might accept Mandela's offer to serve as mediator in negotiations with the ANC.

On Thursday, South newspaper, an anti-apartheid weekly in Cape Town, published a policy document written by Mandela urging such negotiations. Both Mandela and Coetsee said Friday this was not the peace proposal submitted in December.

Mandela said he wrote the policy document early last year, handed it to a team of government officials, and informed the ANC of it. He denied news reports that he had presented the document to then-President P.W. Botha when they met in July or to President F.W. de Klerk when they met in December.

De Klerk, who took office in August, says he wants to ease restrictions on political activity to the extent that the ANC will agree to talks.

Mandela wrote that the negotiators' crucial task will be to reconcile blacks' demands for majority rule with whites' desire for protection from black domination.

"Most Africans, black and white, hope to see the ANC and the government working closely together for a new era in our country in which racial discrimination and prejudice, coercion and confrontation, death and destruction, will be forgotten."

hwôrf wharf (noun) — Other words synonymous with "wharf" are dock or pier. "Wharf" is probably the oldest of the terms. It applies to any structure projecting from the shore that permits boats or ships to lie alongside for loading or unloading. Some wharfs are also popular destinations for individuals who enjoy fishing. "Wharf" is a Middle English word, but variations evolved in many cultures throughout history — Middle Dutch, Old Norse, Old English, Old High German, and Gothic. The word came ultimately from the ancient Greek.

European storm sinks ship

By AUDREY WOODS

LONDON (AP) — A powerful storm that killed at least 94 people in northwest Europe swept into the Baltic Sea on Friday, sinking a Danish ship and leaving behind hundreds of injured and damage estimated at more than $1 billion.

The storm, with winds recorded Thursday at 110 mph, knocked out communications and power and paralyzed transportation in large areas of Britain and the Continent.

Shipping was badly disrupted and $29 million worth of greenhouses were shattered in Holland's flower-growing region.

With winds diminished but still at gale force, the storm moved across the Baltic on Friday, hitting Scandinavia, northern Poland and the Soviet republics of Latvia and Lithuania, Britain's meteorological center said.

Britain was hardest hit, with 46 people reported killed by collapsing roofs, falling trees, and in traffic accidents.

Official reports said 19 people died in Holland, 10 in Belgium, eight in France, seven in West Germany and four in Denmark.

Crews scrambled on Friday to restore power to a million homes and clear toppled cars from cluttered highways.

On Thursday wind tore a hole in the roof of Parliament in London and toppled a nuclear plant chimney in France.

The European Community said it would aid victims of the storm after it completes an assessment of the damage.

In the Baltic Sea, the Danish boat Jotun sank Friday off East Germany in heavy seas. A Danish helicopter rescued three crew members, but one later died. Three others were missing and presumed dead after their lifeboat was found empty.

Dutch authorities said hundreds of Dutch were injured in the storm, the worst in a decade. Four main rail lines remained closed Friday.

The death toll in Britain far exceeded that of Oct. 16, 1987, when the country's worst storm in centuries left 17 people dead.

That storm struck late at night, when most people were indoors. The storm Thursday caught motorists on country roads where falling trees caused many deaths. Trucks flipped over on major highways, making them impassable. Children were at school, and two died and 16 were hurt when roofs collapsed.

Roof tiles, scaffolding and heaps of brick from collapsed chimneys littered sidewalks around London. The government said at one point 1 million people, mostly in western England, were without electric power.

Subway, rail, bus and air services halted in the London area Thursday but transport workers were out through the night clearing debris from the tracks and were able to restore much of the rail service by Friday.

The London newspaper The Independent said insurers put early estimates of damage to property in Britain at more than $1.3 billion, compared with $1.8 billion for the 1987 storm.

In Sweden, winds uprooted trees and damaged houses, but no injuries were reported.

In Belgium, winds reached 105 mph, bending or knocking down power, radio and television towers and destroying countless buildings in towns and rural areas. At least three people were crushed by trees, cyclists were swept under trucks and people were blown from roofs while trying to make repairs.

The storm struck a large area of West Germany, from Hamburg, in the north, where streets were flooded; to Bavaria in the south, where damaged cars and fallen trees littered roads.

A West German Navy helicopter rescued 29 people from the Soviet fish factory ship Briz, which ran into rough seas off the Dutch island of Terschelling. A Belgian helicopter picked up another 19 crew members.

A helicopter and rescue boat searched the English Channel for three French sailors missing since their catamaran capsized while being towed Thursday.

The storm disrupted ferry services across the channel on Thursday.

On Friday morning, ferries were back on the channel, and service was restored between Scotland and Northern Ireland, where heavy snow added to road problems.

"These are the worst weather conditions I have ever seen in well over 20 years of service," said Capt. James Martin, skipper and P and O's Pride of Kent ferry.

A chimney was blown down at the Paluel nuclear power plant in France. State-owned Electricite de France said the plant was shut down immediately.

France's Central Service for Protection against Ion Radiation issued a statement Friday saying there was no danger of a radiation leak, but said it would increase surveillance at the site until the stack is rebuilt.

Asia celebrates lunar new year

HONG KONG (AP) — With a deafening burst of fireworks and the gongs of an antique bell, Asians welcomed the Year of the Horse on Saturday after jamming airports, ferry terminals and train stations for the four-day getaway.

Hong Kong's noisy street markets filled Friday with last-minute shoppers purchasing food, flowers, nuts and candy from merchants happily charging up to three times normal prices before the city shut down for the holiday.

Family feasts on the eve of the Lunar New Year traditionally kick off the holiday, which for Chinese and Vietnamese is the most important festival of the year. In China, the Lunar New Year is known as the Spring Festival.

The eve is the one day of the year Chinese police can drink alcohol on the job, and officers in the Beijing Train Station, long emptied of departing holiday travelers, toasted the holiday with 120-proof firewater during lunch.

Fruits from temperate climates, such as oranges, bananas, and even kiwi, were brought into the capital to ensure bountiful feasts.

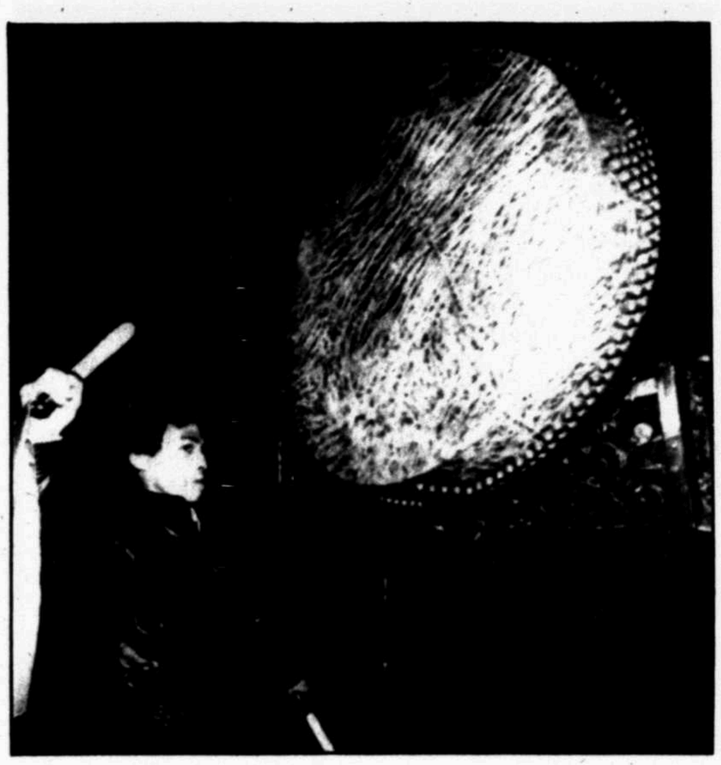

Each lunar year is represented by one of 12 animals of the Chinese zodiacal calendar. The Year of the Snake gave way to the Year of the Horse at midnight Friday.

As the clock struck 12, Beijing Mayor Chen Xitong revived an imperial tradition by striking the capital's 500-year-old bronze bell — China's largest and heaviest — 12 times.

Nearby, a worker and a soldier beat two large, red drums atop Beijing's Drum Tower, but both the drums and the bell were drowned out by a cacophony of firecrackers that continued unbroken for about 15 minutes.

In Taiwan, the new year was greeted with a barrage of firecrackers. Hong Kong forbids firecrackers but put on a spectacular fireworks display over its famed harbor.

Buildings in the British colony were adorned with colorful New Year's greetings, and tangerine trees, narcissus and other plants considered auspicious adorned doorways.

As the Year of Horse approaches, Zhang Jingchun raises a stick, ready to beat the drum marking its arrival in Beijing's ancient Bell Tower.

Hundreds of thousands of Hong Kong's 5.7 million people jammed the airport, ferry terminals and the Chinese border crossing as they left to visit relatives or take vacations.

Most businesses closed Friday and will not reopen until Tuesday.

The most popular New Year's greeting — "Kung Hei Fat Choy," which means congratulations and be prosperous — will be repeated countless times, and children will receive "lai see" — red packets stuffed with money.

Hong Kong astrologer Andrew Yau predicted the coming year will bring more rainfall, some instability, and rising gold prices.

After fluctuating for the first half of the year "the gold price definitely will rise very much, perhaps more than 50 percent," Yau said.

Both Yau and President Lee Teng-hui of Taiwan predicted political instability, but for different reasons. Yau cited a complicated formula involving the Chinese calendar, while Lee looked to the upheaval in Eastern Europe.

"Several Communist authoritarian regimes were overthrown in the past year. We believe Chinese communists will face the same fate soon," Lee said.

He said that as "long as Chinese Communists exist and Chinese reunification problems remain unresolved, we will not enjoy real stability and security."

Chinese Premier Li Peng and Communist Party chief Jiang Zemin were shown on television bringing holiday greetings to their nation at midnight Friday. The unusual appearance was part of an annual prerecorded, four-hour New Year's Eve variety show, one of China's most-watched television shows.

The leaders traveled to the provinces during the week to bring holiday greetings to workers and to thank soldiers for putting down last spring's pro-democracy movement.

During a six-day tour of Shanxi province, in northern China, Jiang said socialism will triumph in China if "we learn from (their) spirit of fearing no hardship and quietly contributing to the country and the people."

Such exhortations have been common in the wake of last year's pro-democracy movement, which was violently crushed by the military.

This year's Spring Festival celebrations in Beijing seemed more subdued than past years, when the sound of firecrackers could be heard all night long.

Traditionally, Chinese set off firecrackers for almost any special occasion but especially at the Lunar New Year because it is supposed to ward off evil spirits.

The official Xinhua news agency said Beijing's huge bell and drums will be sounded on the eve of every Spring Festival from now on. The Bell and Drum Towers were the timekeepers for imperial Beijing, but until now, neither had been used for 66 years, since the last emperor left the Imperial Palace.

"In the old society, that's how we knew the time," said a 60-year-old woman who lives near the towers.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Havel suggests European union

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — President Vaclav Havel of Czechoslovakia suggested Friday that Eastern Europen countries emerging from Communist domination form an informal, market-oriented union.

"It is clear that our countries, which only recently were Soviet satellites, are now seeking the path to democracy and to rejoining Europe," Havel told reporters at the end of a one-day visit to Hungary. "It only stands to reason we should see about coordinating our moves."

Havel said he planned to organize a meeting in April of government and opposition leaders from Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia. He said the foreign ministers of Austria, Italy and Yugoslavia also would be invited to the conference in Bratislava, capital of Slovakia.

"The purpose would be to discuss not only the possibilities of our return to Europe, but also the sort of Europe we want to return to," said the Czechoslovak president, a playwright who was his country's leading dissident before Communist rule crumbled last month.

Havel did not mention precise areas of possible cooperation and said policy coordination would not interfere with individual projects involving outside countries.

Noriega aide surrenders

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Fugitive Lt. Col. Luis "Papo" Cordova, a close associate of Manuel Antonio Noriega and No. 1 man on the U.S. most-wanted list here, gave up after five weeks of hiding and was in U.S. Army custody Friday.

Cordova, who surrendered late Thursday, had been the most important member of Noriega's inner group still on the loose. Panamanian authorities want him in connection with the execution of officers involved in the failed coup against Noriega on Oct. 3.

He had been in hiding since U.S. forces invaded Panama on Dec. 20 and overthrew dictator Noriega. At one time Cordova sought refuge in the Peruvian Embassy but was turned down.

U.S. Army officials said Romulo Escobar Bethancour, a leader of the Revolutionary Democratic Party that backed the previous government, also surrendered to the U.S. military.

Bulgaria plans platform

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Communist leaders, under pressure to end one-party rule in Bulgaria, hurriedly adopted a new platform embracing a multiparty system and social democracy, the BTA news agency said today.

The program was drawn up late Thursday during a meeting called after several days of labor unrest, the official news agency said.

BTA gave few details of the hastily convened Central Committee meeting. It said only that 20 members spoke and heard a concluding speech from party leader Petar Mladenov, the former foreign minister who took over after hard-liner Todor Zhivkov was ousted Nov. 10.

The report said the platform commits the Communists, who have ruled alone since the late 1940s, to pluralism and social democracy and is to be voted on at a party congress next week. A showdown between reformers and more orthodox Communists is expected at the congress.

New relationship sought

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Premier Hans Modrow of East Germany said today that his country wants to restore diplomatic relations with Israel and is prepared to discuss reparations for Nazi victims.

East Germany "has proposed the resumption of diplomatic ties with Israel" that were broken off in 1967 during the Six Day War, Modrow told a news conference after talks with Austrian leaders.

"There will probably be negotiations and the problem of reparation will be aired," he told reporters asking about ties with Israel, now being revived throughout East Europe as more liberal governments take over from orthdox Communist regimes.

Unlike West Germany, East Germany has refused to pay reparations for Nazi atrocities and confiscations, claiming that its people constituted the anti-Nazi resistance during the war and bore no responsibility for Hitler's actions.

U.S. may close bases

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The United States will close two of its four major military installations in Greece, political party leaders said today.

The disclosure came after leaders of the three parties that support the coalition government met with Premier Xenophon Zolotas.

Constantine Mitsotakis, leader of the conservative New Democracy grouping, confirmed a report by Athens newspaper Ethnos that U.S. envoy to Athens Michael Sotirhos advised the Greeks on Thursday of the U.S. decision to shut the bases.

Panhellenic Socialist Movement leader Andreas Papandreou told reporters that Zolotas had discussed the U.S. advisory at their meeting.

Pope decries hardships

MINDELO, Cape Verde (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday decried the hardships that have forced hundreds of thousands of citizens of this African archipelago to emigrate to the United States and Europe.

In a speech to tens of thousands of people gathered on a dirt soccer field, the pope said the former Portuguese colony had been "greatly tried by suffering" as a result of its harsh climate, scare natural resources and problems of hunger and malnutrition.

"In this situation, the lack of real prospects for the future lead many of your brothers and sisters to a forced emigration toward other nations and continents, with all the problems involved," he said on the second day of his eight-day, five-nation African tour.

As a light rain fell in Cape Verde's cultural and economic capital on Sao Vicente Island, the pope said he understood the problems of trying to adjust to a new society without losing one's cultural identity.

Lights may be rejected

ZERMATT, Switzerland (AP) — A project to illuminate the Matterhorn seems headed for official rejection after citizens came out strongly against it, officials said Friday.

Engineer Herbert Schoettl had submitted to municipal authorities a proposal to instal laser projectors on two glaciers that, he said, would turn the famous mountain into a "grandiose light sculpture."

The project, according to Schoettl, would be an "essential contribution to the festivities planned next year to mark the 700th anniversary" of the Swiss Confederation.

Radiation, chemotherapy have Walton feeling better

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Sam Walton, founder of the Wal-Mart discount store chain, said Friday his cancer treatments are making him feel better and that he's got a good chance of recovery.

Walton, 71, talked about the treatments for multiple myeloma in an interview in his Bentonville office with Fort Smith-Fayetteville television stations KHBS-KHOG. He is receiving radiation and chemotherapy for the condition, which is a form of bone cancer.

"There seems definite improvement in the way I feel and the way I'm walking," he said. The treatments at M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston are "making me feel better and so that's the reason I was able to come home this weekend."

A company spokesman had said Walton was to attend an executive committee meeting on Friday and a meeting of Wal-Mart managers on Saturday.

"If this doesn't make the corrections that need to be made in the development of the blood through the bone marrow, then I'll have to take heavier doses of chemotherapy with greater side effects and all the rest," he said. "We're trying to do it with a lesser type of treatment at this point."

Walton said the reaction of the company's employees has been overwhelming.

"I just walked in and it looks like everybody in the company sent me cards. With everybody in the company pulling for you ... I don't think I can do anything but go up," Walton said. "I've got a good chance of recovery."

Walton said he was eager to get back to work.

"I've got to get caught up," he said. "But I've got a lot of good help around here."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's hard to imagine, but Paul Newman became eligible for Social Security on Friday.

Newman

The ageless actor with the cobalt-blue eyes said he planned to celebrate his 65th birthday by having "a quiet dinner with my lady," according to his publicist, Warren Cowan. The lady is his wife and frequent costar, Joanne Woodward.

On Thursday, Newman was doing what he loves best: racing fast cars, this time at Daytona, Fla. "Joanne is tolerant of my racing," he once remarked, "especially since I repay her by going to the ballet."

A dozen years ago, Newman lamented, "If only I had started racing 10 years ago, I could have been a national champion by the age of 50."

The chances of Newman needing Social Security payments are slim. Producers are still willing to pay him $3 million to appear in their films. This despite the fact that his two 1989 releases failed to ignite the box office.

The actor portrayed two real-life figures: Gen. Leslie Groves, head of the atomic bomb project, in "Fat Man and Little Boy"; and Gov. Earl Long, the hell-raising Louisiana governor in "Blaze."

The third film he made last year, "Mr. and Mrs. Bridge," will be released this summer. Ms. Woodward is costar in the story of upper-middle-class life in Kansas City from 1914 to 1944.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Star Trek" actor William Shatner said a woman suing him for palimony is a onetime friend trying to a make some money off of his stardom.

Vira Montes, 28, contends in a lawsuit filed by celebrity divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson that she was the 58-year-old Shatner's "companion, confidante and homemaker" from 1984 until earlier this month.

Shatner

"It's a shame this had to happen," Shatner said in a statement released Thursday. "The case she presents is ridiculous. She was a friend whom I tried to help. Someone obviously got to her and convinced her that she could possibly make a killing by suing me."

Shatner, on vacation with his wife, Marcy, and three daughters, was unavailable for further comment, said his publicist, Cheryl Kagan.

In a lawsuit filed Wednesday, Ms. Montes claims she gave up her career as a medical assistant in exchange for Shatner's promises to provide her financial support.

She claims that Shatner agreed to provide her a California house, a car, horseback riding lessons, an Arabian horse and another horse for her 8-year-old son.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan will receive $1,000 a minute for a one-hour talk to owners of Hardee's franchises meeting in Orlando next month.

Reagan

"We had our sights on him before he was even out of office," said spokesman Ted Schlutow of the fast-food restaurant chain. "Our biggest growth pattern was during the Reagan years."

Schlutow said he didn't know what Reagan's topic would be when he speaks Feb. 5. The convention, expected to attract 1,400 Hardee's owners, will also feature a speech by Lou Holtz, Notre Dame University's football coach.

Reagan has been commanding hefty appearance fees since leaving office. His take-home pay here will pale in comparison to the $2 million a Japanese media conglomerate reportedly paid for a Reagan visit last October.

The night before his planned speech here, Reagan and wife Nancy will attend a dinner benefiting House of Hope, a home for teen-age runaways. They will receive the House of Hope's first humanitarian award.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge has ordered Washington Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke to pay his ex-wife $29,000 a year to support the couple's 2-year-old daughter, far less than the $110,000 she had requested.

"It means I'm going to appeal," a tearful Suzanne Martin Cooke told The Washington Post in an interview Thursday from her home in Fauquier County, Va. "It means I'll have to move to D.C. ... It means I've got to go to work."

Cooke's attorney, however, had a different opinion of the decision handed down this week after a drawn-out and rancorous child support battle in Fauquier County Circuit Court.

"I'm speaking for Mr. Cooke. Mr. Cooke and I think it's fair and equitable," said Milton S. Gould.

Beaumont mayor urges focus on youth services

By ANDREW EDISON
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Beaumont Mayor Maury Meyers told the U.S. Conference of Mayors on Thursday that America's cities should recognize the positive contributions of the nation's youth.

"Every night on our TVs, everyday in our papers, we read about the problems of young people, particularly with drugs," Meyers said. "I believe that we have really been shortchanging the wonderful things that young people are doing in communities across America. Unfortunately, all too often we only hear the negatives."

Meyers urged more than 200 fellow mayors attending the conference's annual meeting here to recognize the "talent and energy" of America's young people by proclaiming April 27th as National Youth Service Day.

"National Youth Service Day gives us that single opportunity to focus on how many wonderful things are being done by young people," Meyers said.

The mayor cited the participation of young people in Beaumont's 1987 and 1988 economic summits as an example of the positive role played by the nation's youth. Besides school representatives, those attending the summits included members of labor, church, business and civic organizations.

"Without the help of young people, our economic summits would not have carried the excitement and the feeling of power that we could take control of economic conditions within our city and transform them for the better," Meyers said.

"Through involving young people in leadership opportunities we found a way to tap energy and enthusiasm. The young people in turn have claimed the city for their own. Their willingness to get involved has made a difference in the future of Beaumont," the mayor added.

Meyers, who is in charge of organizing the first National Youth Service Day for the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said that he sent letters to 450 of the nation's mayors earlier this month explaining the concept of National Youth Service Day.

He said about 50 mayors have already expressed interest in the idea and that he expects more to sign up soon.

No events have yet been formally planned for Beaumont's celebration, Meyers said. But he said his office would soon be "putting together an agenda."

" We know we will have a forum. We will probably highlight some specific program activities. We will certainly have a proclamation and, more than likely, a lunch where we will bring together some of the outstanding young people with various organizations," Meyers said.

Winfield-Renfro divorce case opens in Houston on a sour note

By JULIE MASON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A Houston judge ruled Thursday that a lawyer for New York Yankees slugger Dave Winfield cannot introduce to a jury testimony concerning the lifestyle of his common-law wife, Sandra Renfro.

Winfield and Renfro are embroiled in a divorce trial that is focused on division of property and child support for Winfield's daughter by Renfro.

While Winfield insists that he never intended to marry Renfro, a Houston flight attendant, a jury last summer found that a common-law marriage did, in fact, exist from 1982-85. Winfield has said he plans to appeal that jury's decision.

District Judge Allen J. Daggett Thursday said the matter of Renfro's lifestyle is "inadmissible." He also said he would prevent the eight-man, four-woman jury selected Thursday to hear the divorce case from considering Renfro's "mental anguish" in making their decisions.

Winfield's attorney, Tom Alexander, said outside the courtroom after Wednesday's preliminary hearing that Renfro's behavior since 1982 and issues pertaining to her lifestyle should be presented to the jury.

"She claims to be the common-law wife of Mr. Winfield, but her conduct has been inconsistent with that, and that inconsistency has been relevant to the case," he said.

Renfro's attorney, Earle Lilly, countered that Alexander is attempting to retry the case that resulted in the jury's finding that Winfield and Renfron had a common-law marriage.

He called the lifestyle issue "irrelevant" and added: "The valuation and division of certain property is what's relevant here. Anything else is just camouflage to inflame the jury," he said.

Winfield, who came here from California for the trial with his wife of two years, Tonya Turner, said it is frustrating for him not to discuss the case but that his lawyer advised him not to.

"People don't get a real perspective because you are so limited in what you can say," Winfield said. He described the long-running court drama as an ordeal for him and his wife.

"When you hear something so — I would use the word contrived — it's a shock," he said. "You'll probably see a movie or read a book about all of this sometime soon."

The divorce trial was originally scheduled to begin soon after the jury's decision last June. But legal wrangling — including disputes over temporary alimony and child support for Winfield's and Renfro's daughter — kept the divorce from going to trial at an earlier date.

Cause of spill in gulf eported

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard reported Friday that a collision between a Panamanian tanker and a tank barge that spewed 6,000 barrels of crude oil into Galveston Bay last summer was caused by a combination of pilot error and shoaling in the ship channel.

The collision, which spilled 240,000 gallons of crude oil along the Houston Ship Channel on June 23, involved the Panamanian tanker; Rachel B, and a barge, Coastal 2514, that was being towed with two other barges by the Gayolyn Ann Griffin.

In its report Friday, Coast Guard officials said the Rachel B could not make its complete turn into the Houston Ship Channel because of silt as deep as four feet in the channel. In addition, the pilot failed to notify the Gayolyn Ann Griffin of the steering difficulties, the Coast Guard said.

"Had the channel been dredged, the accident most probably would not have happened," Coast Guard officials said. They suggested dredging begin in the area in the next four to five weeks.

The Coast Guard report "recommended that further investigation of the pilot's actions be conducted for possible civil penalty action."

Fake explosives used in Benbrook robbery

BENBROOK (AP) — A bandit wielding what he claimed was an explosive device took an undetermined amount of money from a bank here Friday, but authorities later determined the bomb was a fake.

Witnesses at Citizens National Bank told police the robber placed a black satchel on the teller's counter, opened it and pulled out the device, containing a hold-up note. The man then stuffed money into the satchel and fled on foot shortly after noon, leaving the device on the counter.

"He was leaving one way, and the employees were running another way," said Detective Craig Lemin. "They were in as big a hurry to get out as he was. They didn't want to take any chances with what they thought was a bomb."

But the Fort Worth Fire Department's bomb squad determined that the satchel had not contained an explosive device.

Lemin said police had not released the contents of the note found with the fake bomb.

It was the second bank robbery in the Southwest Fort Worth suburb in nine years, he said. No customers were in the bank at the time of the heist.

Police as yet have no suspects in the case.

"We are working on a few things," said Lemin. "We are still interviewing witnesses and trying to get some things together over there."

Houston chief wants fire pay to top that of police officers

HOUSTON (AP) — Fire Chief Robert Clayton has urged the city to pay firefighters more than police officers and drop the parity system linking salaries in both departments.

In a "special bulletin" to Mayor Kathy Whitmire, the City Council and his own employees, made public Friday, Clayton said he believed firefighters deserved a raise.

"I am confident that Fire Department personnel deserve a rate of pay greater than that of police," Clayton wrote in the letter dated Jan. 24. "My confidence stems from the fact that the Houston Fire Department has established a high standard of professional conduct and service to the public and, despite difficult financial problems, has actually improved the quality of service."

Houston Police Chief-designate Elizabeth Watson said last week she believed the police and firefighters should not be linked in salary negotiations.

"They are two different jobs," Mrs. Watson. "I never understood why there should be parity in pay."

In his letter, Clayton said, "let's not stop on the parity issue. It is my contention that this department is operated in a far more cost-effective and efficient manner than the Police Department."

Clayton suggested the council commission an outside management study of the police department comparable to a 1985 study of the fire department.

"I am very pleased that Chief Clayton acknowledges that there is no basis for parity, and I am certain he is sincere when he speaks proudly of our Fire Department," Mrs. Watson said late Thursday. "And I never meant to suggest that our Fire Department is in any way ... a poorly run organization.

"I think that any department head believes their own personnel are finest," Mrs. Watson said. "And I think it's up to the mayor (and) the council members of the city of Houston to determine appropriate wages."

Paul Mabry, spokesman for the mayor, said Mrs. Whitmire would have to make her own decision on the matter.

"The chief has very strong opinions and goes to great lengths to defend the firefighters and the excellent job they do," Mabry said. "I'll leave it to the mayor to discuss with him the appropriateness of his tactics."

Mrs. Whitmire has been in Washington attending the Conference of Mayors, which she heads.

Smoky fire near Dallas Love Field injures three

DALLAS (AP) — A smoky, five-alarm blaze at an aircraft supply company near Dallas Love Field, fanned by wind gusts of more than 25 mph, injured three firefighters on Friday.

Smoke from the fire at Gem Aircraft Supply Inc. on the west side of Love Field drifted over runways, but did not impede flight operations, authorities said.

The supply company was destroyed and a dry cleaners in the same office and industrial building complex was heavily damaged, with fire officials estimating damage at about $1 million.

One firefighter was overcome by smoke, another injured a knee and a third hurt his back, authorities said.

Geral Moffett, owner of Gem Aircraft, said the fire began shortly after 3:30 p.m. after flames accidentally spread from an asphalt pot that workers were using to replace the building's roof.

About 150 gallons of solvent and alcohol, along with other supplies, were engulfed in flames after the fire spread from the building's north end, authorities said.

"I thought there would be a little water damage but I didn't know we would be burned out," said Moffett.

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★
Home full of love & a nursery filled with stuffed animals await your baby. We live in a Connecticut country home near the shore, where children always play nearby. Unable to have a child of our own, we long to give your baby all the security our loving family can offer. This will make our home complete. If through magic we could enable you to see what a terrific family we are, perhaps it would help you make this difficult decision. All expenses paid. Call Amy & Jon 203-968-8724.
