Steam blasts plant's control room

AP Graphic

LAUGHLIN, Nev. (AP) — Superheated steam blasting from a ruptured high-pressure pipeline spewed into the crowded control room of a coal-fired power plant, killing one worker and burning 15 others, nine of them critically, authorities said.

The 30-inch-diameter steel alloy pipe burst at 3:44 p.m. Sunday during the shift change at Southern California Edison's Mohave Generating Plant, while 20 people, about twice the normal number, were present.

"The area where the rupture occurred looks like a bomb exploded," plant manager Stan Heard said.

The dead man was identified as Daniel Norman, 30, of Bullhead City, Ariz., said Edison spokesman David Barron.

Twelve of the injured were taken aboard five helicopters, an airplane, and an ambulance to Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital in Las Vegas, about 90 miles to the north, and one man was airlifted to Maricopa County Medical Center in Phoenix, Ariz.

Eight of the 12 victims at Southern Nevada were listed in critical condition early, said Tina Ravish, a nursing supervisor. The other four were in serious condition. The man taken to Phoenix was in very critical condition.

Two others were listed in fair condition at Bullhead City Community Hospital, officials reported late Sunday.

Airlift pilot Dennis J. Longman said some of the victims told him the control room fill with steam. "They covered their faces and tried to keep the steam from getting into their lungs," he said.

Most of the damage and all the injuries were in the control room, Edison spokesman Bob Hull said. The steam is "heated to more than 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit and about 600 pounds per square inch in pressure," Hull said.

"A lot of the men I talked to said they (the workers) saw the explosion coming and ducked behind desks," Bullhead City firefighter Dart Craytor said. "Some were able to run away and escape."

Hull said he didn't know how the workers could have anticipated the blast.

Beal said troubleshooters from Edison's Rosemead, Calif., headquarters flew immediately to the plant to investigate the cause of the break.

Laughlin, a tiny gaming resort on the Colorado River in southeast Nevada, has a population of about 2,500 that swells to about 70,000 on weekends.

The 14-year-old Edison plant has a 1.6 million kilowatt generating capacity.

Explosion sends fireball into air, rocks Pine Bluff

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — An explosion sent a huge fireball several hundred feet into the air and rocked Pine Bluff today as firefighters stood watch over the burning wreckage of a derailed train that forced the evacuation of about 4,000 people.

The blast at 6:45 a.m. sent a wave of heat to the command station 1½ miles from the site where the 42 Cotton Belt Railroad cars — 10 of them carrying toxic chemicals — derailed Sunday.

"There's been no one hurt, and you want to keep it that way," said Leon McGoogan, director of the Office of Emergency Services. "The possibility of future explosions certainly is there as long as the fire is there."

He said railroad officials were not sure what car exploded, but planned to move in slowly to take air samples. The findings could affect whether officials order more evacuations, he said.

"If there was a lot of combustion, the hazardous material is consumed and the danger is reduced from poisonous gases," he said. "We hope that it was a really good explosion in that respect."

"I think the good Lord was with us," said Fire Chief Ray Jacks, who added the explosion likely rearranged the tank cars, which could help or hinder efforts to control the fire.

"We were going to feed off of an 8-inch main there within 2,000 feet of the fire. We were going to try to extinquish it. Now, we're going to let it settle down a little while and then we're going to take a look at it," Jacks said.

Lynn Roberts, who lives across a road from the command post, said the blast "sounded just like a sonic boom."

Jim Johnson, public relations director for Cotton Belt, said shortly after the blast that authorities didn't know what had exploded. On Sunday, officials had expressed concerns about two cars containing vinyl chloride, a chemical that is flammable and can generate a poisonous gas if it burns.

"What just happened down there was that a commodity became overheated for the shell of its car," Johnson said, "and whether or not there was actually any kind of rupture to the tank car, we don't know, initially, the cause of it. But we do know the car itself became too highly pressurized to be contained."

He said the blast would "change a lot of things because we've got to think up a new game plan because we've got a different situation."

Intense heat and the threat of toxic gas and explosions had earlier forced firefighters to retreat from the derailment, about a mile southwest of this city of 56,300. Officials had said they probably would let the fire burn itself out.

Authorities began evacuating residential neighborhoods within a mile of the fire shortly after it broke out, sending up a huge column of billowing black smoke visible for miles.

Red Cross workers set up cots for evacuees at the high school gymnasium in nearby Watson Chapel.

Jail's renovation to take nine months

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The renovation of the Midland County Jail may not be completed until November 1986, Midland architect Walter Pate told the Midland County Commissioners Court today.

"We think it's realistic," Pate said. "Maybe we are being optimistic." Pate estimated a nine-month construction period beginning in early February after the architectural plans have been studied by the commissioners, approved by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and contracts awarded.

Had the commissioners built a new jail as they had planned to last year, that facility would have been completed about the same time as the November 1986 renovation, according to James Riggen, project architect. Construction time would have been 18 months and would have been started earlier this year.

Pate said he expects renovation costs to be higher than initially expected. Commissioner Win Brown has estimated that construction costs will be $2.4 million of the $3 million bond issue approved May 11 by voters.

Pate said construction costs will be higher because of the complex problem of moving material and equipment to the jail on the fifth floor of the courthouse.

"We have got to put 10 pounds of sand in five-pound bags," he said in alluding to the difficulty of renovation.

The renovation is being done to bring the jail into compliance with standards set by the Jail Commission. The jail, which has 101 bunks, would have 124 bunks after renovation. However, Pate said the Jail Commission has ruled that a jail is full once it is at 80 percent of capacity due to the classification of prisoners.

Currently, the Jail Commission has limited the Midland jail's inmate capacity to 85 under a remedial order issued earlier this year.

The first phase of renovation will include the construction of a 1,500-square-foot exercise area on the courthouse roof. The area will be secured by a vinyl-covered steel gauge fence which will have openings small enough to put a pencil through but not large enough for fingers or toes to penetrate.

Renovation also will include installing cells for 42 inmates in the bull-pen area in the undeveloped northwest corner of the jail, replacing or upgrading the plumbing, expanding the kitchen, relocating the laundry room, converting 11 two-bunk cells to 11 single cells due to space limitations, relocating the booking area from the jail to the basement, installing automatic unlocking mechanisms for cells and putting on a new roof.

In outlining the procedures for getting the renovations approved by the Jail Commission, Pate said, "I know this sounds familiar. It is exactly the same process we went through on the (proposed) new jail."

That proposed new jail would have been built on a seven-acre tract east of the city. However, the commissioners' plans to build the $8.4 million jail by issuing $9.9 million in Certificates of Obligation were stopped by the Concerned Citizens Committee, which had led a petition drive to submit the proposal to a vote by citizens.

The voters turned it down and opted for the jail renovation.

UNIFIL loses all contact with Finns

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An American professor was kidnapped in Beirut today, and U.N. officials said they have lost contact with 21 Finnish U.N. soldiers held hostage by Israeli-backed militiamen in south Lebanon.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon or UNIFIL, said the force "lost all contact" with the Finns on Sunday. The U.N. peacekeeping force had been in touch by radio with the soldiers since they were captured by militiamen of the South Lebanon Army on Friday.

Security sources said the hostages have been taken out of the UNIFIL security zone to the South Lebanon Army's main base in Marjayoun, 37 miles northeast of the U.N. force's headquarters in a Lebanese border town on the Mediterranean.

The sources said the move could mean a "prolonged period of detention" for the Finnish soldiers. Their captors had said they would free the U.N. soldiers if Shiite Moslem guerrillas hand over 11 SLA men they hold. They have accused the Finnish troops of complicity with the Moslems.

Goksel said the 19 Finns held in Adaisseh were taken to Marjayoun on Sunday, and the two held in Qantara were taken out today in a convoy with "heavy Israeli presence — mostly civilian cars," to an unknown destination.

"I presume they are with the others in the Marjayoun barracks," he added.

They previously were held in two groups in the village of Qantara near the Finnish battalion's base and a nearby village.

Goksel also said a U.N. investigation into the "whole affair" began today, including whether the 11 South Lebanon Army militiamen were defectors, deserters or captured.

He said the investigation would also deal with contentions that Finns escorted the militiamen into Shiite-held territory in the direction of the port city of Tyre without prior coordination with UNIFIL's headquarters.

Col. Jean Pons, French deputy force commander of UNIFIL, is in charge of the investigation, Goksel added.

U.N. sources said Israelis were present during the period in which the Finns were held in Qantara and Adaisseh.

Thomas Sutherland, dean of the agriculture faculty at the American University of Beirut, was kidnapped as he drove toward Beirut's Moslem sector from the city's airport Sunday, Lebanon's police commander said.

Maj. Gen. Osman Osman said gunmen shot out the tires and a window of Sutherland's car on the airport highway, grabbed the 53-year-old Scottish-born American and sped off. Sutherland lives in Fort Collins, Colo.

Von Bulow found innocent

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Claus von Bulow was found innocent today of twice trying to murder his heiress wife with insulin injections, more than three years after jurors in his first trial convicted him on the same charges.

The verdict followed about 14 hours of deliberations over four days. The jurors had deliberated just one hour and five minutes today before informing the judge that they had reached a verdict.

Von Bulow's lover, Andrea Reynolds, gasped and burst into tears on hearing the verdict, and cheers broke out in the courtroom despite the judge's request for silence.

Von Bulow closed his eyes tightly, shook his head and placed his hands on the table. Then he smiled, shook hands with his attorney and embraced Mrs. Reynolds.

Chief defense attorney Thomas P. Puccio had said he expected a verdict today and that he was confident of acquittal, based on the jury's review of testimony.

The verdict was announced to a standing-room-only crowd in Providence Superior Court. The trial had been moved from Newport, where the von Bulows maintained a vacation home, to keep from clogging the court system there.

A jury found von Bulow guilty on both attempted-murder counts after six days of deliberation in March 1982, but the convictions were overturned by the Rhode Island Supreme Court last year on state constitutional grounds.

Von Bulow, 58, a Danish-born aristocrat, had been charged with injecting Martha "Sunny" von Bulow with the sugar-regulating hormone during Christmas 1979 and 1980 visits to the family's Newport mansion. Mrs. von Bulow recovered from the first coma, but doctors say the second is irreversible.

'Only God can get' SBC together

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Baptists gathered to pick a leader are so embroiled over allegations of a "liberal drift" in the nation's largest branch of Protestantism that "only God can get us out of it," a minister said.

Discord over views of the Bible, with fundamentalists demanding strict interpretation, has divided the 14.3 million-member denomination.

A confrontation looms on opening day of the group's convention Tuesday, pitting fundamentalists against moderates in a fight for the presidency and its immense appointive powers.

An unprecedented outpouring of congregational "messengers" from across the nation — at least 30,000 — is expected.

The convention caps a year of political-style, often harsh campaigning in a conflict marked by accusations of distortions and lying.

"We're in such a mess that only God can get us out of it," said the Rev. James Pleitz of Dallas.

The heads of state Baptist conventions were working on a mediation plan but it was considered too late, barring an upset of the scheduled agenda.

Sutherland, who had flown in from London shortly before, was the eighth American kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1984. One former hostage said he escaped, but seven are still missing. No one claimed responsibility for Sutherland's abduction.

On Sunday, the South Lebanon Army seized and then released a French colonel who was trying to negotiate the release of the Finnish U.N. soldiers, and the militia's leader, retired army Brig. Gen. Antoine Lahd, called the abduction "a mistake."

Goksel announced Sunday morning that the SLA had taken Lt. Col. Jean-Michel Blemdjian hostage. The French U.N. officer, deputy chief of U.N. operations, had been sent Friday to negotiate with the mostly Christian militia.

Hours later, Goksel said the Frenchman had been freed unharmed.

The 11 SLA hostages, all Shiite Moslems like their captors, do not want to go back to the militia, said their leader Ali Jebber, 25. He told reporters the SLA threatened to kill their families unless they went back.

The militia, as well as Israeli sources in Tel Aviv, have said the men did not defect but were tricked into being captured.

BAPTISTS

Fundamentalists, a strictly conservative element in the generally conservative denomination, say there has been a shift away from the Bible in national church agencies and institutions.

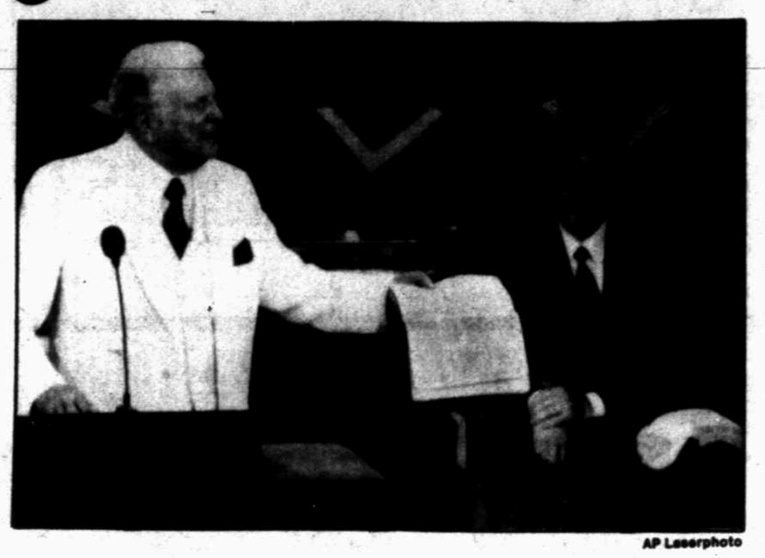

Moderates contend that the complaints about biblical views are a smokescreen for a bid for power — "a mask for other interests," said the Rev. Russell Dilday, president of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

The Rev. W.A. Criswell, fundamentalist pastor of First Baptist Church in Dallas, told an overflow crowd of more than 5,000 Sunday that certain foes are questioning the Bible's "full scientific and historical accuracy."

"God who made the universe wrote the book," he said.

Fundamentalists back the incumbent and one-time Moral Majority leader, the Rev. Charles Stanley of Atlanta, who said a liberal tendency in seminaries is undermining the faith of students.

"I don't say don't go to a Baptist school," he said, but added that it is questionable to send students to seminaries where they "come out believing what those professors believe and teach."

The Rev. W.A. Criswell, of the First Baptist Church in Dallas, waves a Bible during his sermon Sunday to a congregation packed with "messengers" to the Southern Baptist Convention in Dallas.

Stanley's daughter and son attend a seminary outside the denomination.

The Rev. Winfred Moore, an Amarillo pastor and president of the Texas Baptist convention, is backed by moderates for the top office.

He said he's often kidded for being such an "archconservative" and that he's never given credence to charges of a "liberal drift" about the Bible among Southern Baptists.

"I don't agree with some of them, but it doesn't occur to me, just because I don't agree with them, that they don't believe the Bible," he said.

That attitude is a hallmark of Baptists — individuals' "soul competency" to interpret Scripture as they understand it, without being subjected to creeds about it.

The denominational presidency has authority over national institutions and programs, appointing a committee that picks those naming trustees to 20 agencies, including six seminaries.

Fundamentalists have won the presidency for six successive years, gaining increasing strength among institutional trustees. But since only some trustees are named annually, it's a gradual process.

Fundamentalist leaders initially had set a 10-year timetable for achieving dominance, but now say the outcome at the current convention would in effect make their plan complete.

"If it isn't stopped this year, the takeover will be complete," said the Rev. Larry McSwain, a professor at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

A key fundamentalist strategist, Houston Judge Paul Pressler, said if fundamentalists win this time, "our agencies will recognize the necessity of being responsive."

Women's group won't bring up ordination

DALLAS (AP) — Leaders of a Southern Baptist women's group say the issue of ordination of women will have to be settled by a grass-roots movement in local churches.

The group, known as Women in Ministry, held its third annual meeting in Dallas over the weekend, prior to the start of the Southern Baptist Convention. Leaders said a resolution on the ordination of women should not be introduced during the convention.

"Just making a resolution has never solved any problems," said Reba Aloan Cobb, who co-edits Folio, a newsletter for Southern Baptist women. "What Southern Baptists do is on the grass-roots level. We practice something for 20, 30 years, then we vote on it."

Officially, the SBC opposes ordination of women, but local churches ordain at their own discretion.

Anne Neil, outgoing chairman of Women in Ministry's steering committee, said Sunday that the group will not sponsor any resolution on ordination.

"Our purpose has been to retain who we are in Christ and have courage to express that," she said. "And we feel...in these meetings is a much more powerful message about the wholeness of the Gospel than any resolution that could be brought to the convention floor."

During this week's convention, the resolution committee will "attempt corrective action" on a controversial resolution passed last year concerning ordination of women, SBC officials said in a statement.

The statement said it is likely the committee may rewrite portions of the resolution or address parts that were "offensive and speculative."

Delegates to last year's convention passed a resolution excluding women from ordination. The resolution argued that women bear a subservient role because of their responsibility for bringing sin into the world.

"There've probably been more women ordained this year than any year in the history of Southern Baptists," said Betty McGary Pearce, co-editor of Folio. "I hope the ordination issue won't come up. I don't think any good would be served."

Gunmen kidnap dean at American University

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen kidnapped the American agriculture dean at the American University of Beirut, after shooting out the windshield and tires of a limousine carrying him from the international airport, a university spokesman said today.

Thomas Sutherland, 53, a Scottish-born veterinarian from Fort Collins, Colo., became the eighth American to be kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1984. Seven still are missing. One apparently escaped from his captors.

Four Frenchmen and a Briton currently also are believed held by kidnappers.

The university spokesman, Radwan Mawlawi, said Sutherland, a two-year resident of Beirut, had just returned from a scientific conference in the United States to supervise final examinations.

Mawlawi said senior university officials are usually accompanied by bodyguards from the campus' security forces. But he said, "Prof. Sutherland never felt frightened and did not ask for guards."

University sources said Sutherland's limousine was one of six cars driving in a convoy for safety.

No one may ever be sure of body's identity

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Experts disagree over whether the remains of a man who died six years ago belonged to Nazi death camp doctor Josef Mengele and a Brazilian official says no one may ever be 100 percent sure of the identity.

Forensic experts today begin examining the remains of the body, which was exhumed last Thursday from a grave in a town outside Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city.

The remains have been kept in sealed plastic bags locked in a refrigerator at the Sao Paulo morgue.

In Frankfurt, West Germany, prosecutor Hans-Eberhard Klein said today he was investigating Hans Sedlmeier, a Guenzburg attorney, and his wife, for obstruction of justice. Klein would not elaborate, but on Saturday he told The AP that letters found in the attorney's house led authorities to theorize that Mengele might be dead.

Romeu Tuma, director of the federal police in Sao Paulo, said he has asked the United States and West Germany for classified war documents to conduct a handwriting analysis of notes they believe Mengele wrote. They were found at the home of an elderly Austrian couple.

Mengele, who would be 74 if alive, is the most-wanted Nazi war criminal. Nicknamed the "Angel of Death," he is held responsible for the deaths of about 400,000 Jews at the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz, Poland.

Tuma said Mengele's dental records from 1937 were at the morgue. He said authorities still were waiting for information on the height and bone structure of the Nazi fugitive.

Assistant morgue director Jose Antonio de Mello said seven teeth found intact in the skull unearthed last week would help in the identification, which he said could take up to two weeks.

Even then, "It is quite possible that we will not be able to give a 100 percent positive identification of the remains," he said.

The man believed to be Mengele drowned Feb. 7, 1979, in Bertioga, a beach resort 47 miles from Sao Paulo.

Tuma has said police are "90 percent sure" the body is that of Mengele. But Jaime Edson Andrade Mendonca, the coroner who signed the death certificate of the drowned man, told reporters the body was that of a man in his 50s. Mengele would have been 68 in 1979.

Doubts also were raised by Maria Helena Vieira de Castro, a dentist who said she treated the man police believe was Mengele. She said she treated him until April 1979.

Court approves regional banking systems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, opening the way for a significant restructuring of the nation's banking industry, ruled today that states may band together to create regional banking systems.

By an 8-0 vote, the court upheld regional banking laws in Connecticut and Massachusetts. Similiar laws have been adopted in the Southeast and are under consideration elsewhere.

Such laws are designed primarily to exclude big banks with headquarters in states like New York, Texas and California by allowing interstate mergers among banks within a region while banning all others.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, in his opinion for the court, said the regional banking systems do not violate the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection under the laws.

"Massachusetts and Connecticut are not favoring local corporations at the expense of out-of-state corporations," Rehnquist said. "They are favoring out-of-state corporations domiciled within the New England region over out-of-state corporations from other parts of the country."

Rehnquist said such laws are in keeping with the nation's long tradition of favoring "widely dispersed control of banking."

Protecting the independence and local control of banks is a legitimate state activity, Rehnquist added.

The Federal Reserve Board has said that at stake in the case was "a significant restructuring" of the nation's banking industry.

The Fed has approved merger applications based on the regional system and has maintained that regional agreements are allowed by Congress in a portion of the Bank Holding Company Act known as the Douglas Amendment enacted in 1956.

The Supreme Court today agreed.

In other cases, the court:

— Limited the federal government's power to regulate investment advice, ruling that individuals may not be banned from publishing generalized investment newsletters because of previous misdeeds.

— Refused to bar states from banning direct mail advertisements sent by lawyers to potential clients. The court, without comment, rejected an appeal by New York's lawyer disciplinary unit.

— Agreed to decide whether prison inmates may sue for monetary damages when injured by guards firing weapons to quell a disturbance.

— Agreed to provide new guidance on the power of public employee unions to decide how much money non-union workers must pay in lieu of union dues.

— Refused to hear arguments by the A.H. Robins Co. of Richmond, Va., which is facing thousands of lawsuits over its Dalkon Shield contraceptive device, challenging the impartiality of a federal judge.

Last year, Congress shelved legislation to authorize states specifically to create regional banking systems.

Reagan tells Gorbachev decision, Speakes says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has informed Mikhail Gorbachev of his decision on compliance with the unratified Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said today.

Reagan is expected to announce later in the day that he will largely adhere to the nuclear arms control pact, but also take selective action to show America will match any Soviet violations of the accord.

The president, after weighing numerous options for keeping to or rejecting the accord over the weekend at his Camp David, Md., retreat, planned to inform congressional leaders of his decision at midday, Speakes said. Members of the National Security Council staff were to make phone calls detailing the decision, he said.

"Also, a letter from President Reagan went to (Communist Party) Chairman Gorbachev," Speakes said, adding that it would be delivered in Moscow through diplomatic channels.

The spokesman said that also were sent to U.S. embassies in allied countries and would be delivered today.

Speakes refused to comment on details of the president's decision, saying only that Reagan had informed Gorbachev of it.

An administration official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said the president was ready to approve a policy of "proportionate responses" in order to keep the pact technically alive, yet also show that the United States is able to react to reported Soviet violations of the treaty.

JAIL

The proposed jail initially would have held 225 inmates, could have been equipped to handle an additional 75 and would have had space to be expanded to handle 300 additional inmates for a total of 600.

Commissioner Wally Craig favored the proposed new jail, and had supported it as well as the jail renovation in the bond election. He thought it essential that one of the proposals pass. Otherwise, the jail might be closed by the Jail Commission, and the taxpayers would be paying up to $2 million a year in farming out prisoners to other jails.

"Just everybody remember: This was all going to be very simple. We've all heard that."

"It is not simple," Pate said.

"Obviously," Craig said.

The commissioners will hold a series of meetings to discuss the renovation plans. Pate said the cost ultimately will be determined by one of two routes the commissioners may take: a Band-aid approach just to barely satisfy the Jail Commission or to do the renovation "up right." Pate said the Band-aid approach would "not be a final solution."

County Judge Bill Ahders said he would "hate to spend the money when it won't work perfectly."

Sheriff Gary Painter said there is "no way of telling how long the cells are going to last" under the renovation. "That is something we are going to have to live with," he said of the voter-mandated renovation.

"Down the road, we'll have to have a new facility," the sheriff said.

VON BULOW

The jurors in his retrial received the case on Friday. They worked through the weekend, and spent two hours in the courtroom Sunday as the court stenographer read passages from the trial transcript they requested the day before, focusing on the black bag the state says contained needles and insulin.

Jurors heard again the testimony of Maria Schrallhammer, Mrs. von Bulow's personal maid and the only person who testified to seeing insulin in the black bag, along with needles.

They also reviewed the testimony of a University of Chicago endocrinologist who said a private lab test showing traces of insulin on a needle taken from the black bag was probably wrong.

Puccio and von Bulow said the requests for testimony suggested the jurors were questioning whether insulin was involved in the comas. The defense maintained they were induced by Mrs. von Bulow's abuse of drugs and alcohol.

"If there's no insulin, I would maintain there's no crime," von Bulow said. "If you want to convict me of adultery...mind you, it is a crime in Rhode Island. They'll probably think of that next."

The jury heard six weeks of testimony from 42 witnesses during the retrial.

Meanwhile, one of the two jurors selected as alternates and dismissed Friday said she had serious questions about Miss Schrallhammer, considered one of the state's top witnesses.

Referring to the black bag, Elaine A. Aiello said: "If she found it, why didn't she question Mrs. von Bulow or Mr. von Bulow, and say 'whose bag is that?' Why was she afraid to ask her, since she was supposed to part of the family?"

Border agents anxious about Guardian Angels

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Nervous Border Patrol agents say they're not too happy about Guardian Angels' plans to expand their unarmed citizen patrols to the Texas-Mexico border.

Curtis Sliwa, founder and president of the New York-based group, is scheduled to arrive here Wednesday to discuss plans to revive Angel patrols in local housing projects, the San Antonio Light reported.

Sliwa says he also will tour border regions such as Brownsville and El Paso as a prelude to establishing new chapters to combat thieves who prey on illegal aliens.

But "with the Mexican elections coming up, it's bound to make a volatile situation even more volatile," Border Patrol Sector Chief Larry Richardson said from his El Paso office. "Mexican politics have been agitated anyway.

"All we need are these strangers running around in little red hats," he added. "Frankly, I hope it takes them a few months to find El Paso on the map."

A spokesman for the McAllen sector of the U.S. Border Patrol, which includes Brownsville, said there has been little problem with violence against illegal aliens in the area.

The Guardian Angels, best known for their presence on New York subway trains, have chapters in Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and College Station.

Sliwa says the planned Texas-Mexico border patrols, which could begin as early as July, are an outgrowth of a similar effort in Southern California, where the volunteer crime-fighting group has come under sharp attack from the Border Patrol for its activities in the canyons lining the California-Mexico border.

While Sliwa says his volunteers are deterring crime against aliens, the Border Patrol contends Angels are unwittingly assisting the bandits. On one occasion, a government spokesman told the Light, Angels gave hamburgers to people later seen robbing aliens.

Sliwa said the Texas border units will patrol on horseback, in four-wheel drive vehicles and on foot and will be trained by volunteers from the San Ysidro, Calif., program.

"The problem of the border, obviously, extends all along the border," Sliwa said. "We're not going to get on a soap box and pontificate on whether illegal aliens are right or wrong to come across. We're going to try to deal with those people who try to take them out, who rape and rob them."

From a tactical standpoint, Sliwa said, the move into the Texas border region should lessen his organizations's problems in California, where skirmishes with Mexican officials have occurred.

"In some cases, we've had to operate under cover of darkness," Sliwa said. "They've said that we're a political organization, which is ridiculous."

California volunteers initially will form the Texas units, Sliwa said, because "we could never expect new recruits to go into Mexico and take the risk of arrest, or, as agitated as things are, the risk of being shot."

"We want to use our seasoned volunteers to prove the program first, that it's effective," he said.

SBOE sets teacher test for March 10

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education has put off until July a showdown vote on stricter school discipline and alternatives to social promotions.

The 15-member appointed board agreed Saturday, after a two-day session, to arrange for a history-making reading and writing test for all Texas teachers, but sidestepped the touchy issues of school discipline and social promotions.

"This was one of the greatest disappointments of the Legislature this year," said board member Williaam McBride in reference to the recent legislative failure to agree on strict discipline in schools.

Separate bills to clamp down on misbehavior and crime in public schools passed the Senate and House, with approval of legislative leaders, but the two houses were never able to reach final agreement.

The school reform bill outlawed promotions from one grade to another for students who do not make at least a grade of 70 in every subject.

The historic teacher testing examination, ordered by the public school reform bill, will be the week of March 10, 1986. There has been nothing like it in Texas before.

"We want to ensure that every teacher has the basic skills to see that every child in Texas gets the best education possible," said Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby.

Kirby said it would take at least 250 to 300 people just to give the test, which will be given under a contract with a private firm. None of the test administrators can be students or relatives of any teacher or school administrator.

Any teacher or school administrator who fails the test in March will be able to take it over the last week in June.

The test plan calls for teachers to identify main ideas and details in reading, to distinguish between facts and opinion, to use reference sources, to "draw inference" from reading and to understand job-related words.

On writing skills, teachers must show they can capitalize, punctuate and spell, "recognize the English usage," identify errors in sentence formation and write a brief story or essay.

Teachers and administrators must pass the examination next spring if they want to retain their teaching certificates.

Those who will take the test include about 175,000 classroom teachers; 35,000 administrators, counselors and librarians; 500 college faculty members; 500 service center staff members; and 350 employees of the Texas Education Agency.

DPS celebrates 50th birthday

HOUSTON (AP) — When the Texas Department of Public Safety started chasing down crooks 50 years ago, one of the biggest dangers was the means of pursuit, a retired DPS major recalls.

"We were all riding motorcycles back then, and that was enough danger right there in itself. The roads weren't very good," said retired Maj. Glen Rose of Houston, who graduated in the second class of the State Highway Patrol in 1931.

Rose, who was head of the DPS Houston office from 1955 until his retirement in 1969, said the department, now celebrating its 50th anniversary, tried to reintroduce motorcyles a few years ago. But the idea was abandoned after a trial period.

Although the DPS was created by the Texas Legislature on August 10, 1935, its roots can be traced to 1927 when increasing truck traffic became a problem for the state.

In 1929, the License and Weight Section used 50 officers to create the State Highway Patrol. The DPS was organized in 1935 to incorporate crime prevention (the Texas Rangers) and traffic control (the highway patrol).

Honor student discovers he's an illegal alien

TEXAS CITY (AP) — It wasn't until Belgian-born Remy Poos was set to attend Austin College this fall and turned down for college aid that he discovered he's an illegal alien.

Poos, 18, graduated with honors — 36th out of 350 — from Texas City High School last week before learning the necessary papers needed for him to become a U.S. citizen were never filed by his now-deceased stepfather.

"I guess he just wasn't aware of what procedures had to be followed," said Poos, who moved to Texas City with his stepfather and mother when he was 9. "I didn't realize there was a problem with my citizenship until he died."

Poos' stepfather, Richard Bolin, was a U.S. citizen working in Antwerp when he met Poos' mother, Agnes. Bolin died of cancer last August.

"He brought us over on a visitor's passport and they got married. As it turns out, we have been living here the whole time as visitors," he said.

The snafu led to Mrs. Bolin's deportation to Belgium after her husband's death. Poos stayed with sponsors in Texas City on a student visa to complete his education.

Poos, who is fluent in English and Flemish and also speaks French and German, applied to Austin College in Sherman to study international business and journalism.

Perjury charges contested for former Sen. Jack Ogg

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal prosecutor says he will ask U.S. District Judge James DeAnda today to dismiss perjury charges against former state Sen. Jack Ogg.

The charges that U.S. Attorney Henry Oncken says he'll seek to dismiss accuse Ogg, 51, of lying to a federal grand jury investigating his role in the denial of a landfill permit.

"Because of events which have occurred following the grand jury's return of the indictment...the evidence against Mr. Ogg on these charges is now insufficient," he said, declining to be more specific.

The 5-month-old case involved a $25,000 payment to Ogg by Browning-Ferris Industries, a large Houston-based waste disposal firm.

Conservation Management Inc., a rival Houston firm, had contended in a $106 million federal antitrust lawsuit that Ogg was paid to unlawfully use his influence as a state sentator to halt its plans to build a landfill in Katy, a suburb west of Houston.

In a 1984 deposition, Feehan said that in July and August 1981, Brown & Root seriously talked with Gibbs & Hill about hiring the company to complete the lagging engineering work on the project. Gibbs & Hill served as the architect-engineer of the Comanche Peak nuclear power project near Glen Rose.

Inadequate engineering and Brown & Root's inexperience in nuclear plant design have been cited as factors in delays that have driven the project's cost from an original estimate of $1 billion to $5.5 billion.

Prisoners escape to Texas

FARRIS, Okla. (AP) — Two inmates of a minimum-security prison jumped a guard and forced him to drive them across the state line to Paris, Texas, where they fled on foot after releasing him unharmed, authorities said today.

Officer Gary Nanney was overpowered by the men about 10 p.m. while he was driving a pickup truck on the grounds of the McLeod Correctional Center, said Linda Green, a spokeswoman for the Corrections Department.

Nanney was released about 12:30 a.m., she said.

Man catches tarantulas

BEAUMONT (AP) — He calls it a "different type pet," one that doesn't need house-breaking but isn't great for date-making.

Walter Tucker, a seismic crew worker, sells tarantulas for extra income, and about 20 of the hairy, eight-legged creatures are a constant fixture in his living room.

"I have some girls that come over, and they don't particularly like them that much," Tucker said. "But then again, it doesn't bother the spiders too much."

His recent dabbling in spider sales resulted from his job as a member of a geophysical research team that conducts seismic tests for oil in Texas and Louisiana.

Last week, Tucker and his coworkers noticed the spiders were appearing more frequently.

It seems the vibrations from the machinery used in oil testing attracted the spiders, and Tucker caught several of them.

Tucker says he is selling the peculiar pets to earn enough money to buy tires for his sports car.

Plant's builder wanted out

BAY CITY (AP) — Just before getting fired, the South Texas Nuclear Project's former builder wanted a New York company to serve as architect and engineer, previously sealed court documents show.

Brown & Root Inc., former builder of the power plant, was negotiating with the engineering firm of Gibbs & Hill Inc. in 1981, according to testimony of Brown & Root chief executive officer Thomas Feehan.

Feehan said Brown & Root wanted to turn over its duties as architect-engineer to Gibbs & Hill, the company responsible for the Comanche Peak nuclear power project near Glen Rose.

Although Feehan told Don Jordan, Houston Lighting & Power president, of the plans on July 24, 1981, Jordon dismissed Brown & Root as the project's architect-engineer in September, records show.

That dismissal and Brown & Root's subsequent decision to quit as builder of the $5.5 billion project triggered a multibillion-dollar lawsuit between the company and the project owners.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ93 ♡KQ763 ◇8 ♣A62
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Dble	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You must not confuse not vulnerable with invulnerable. You can't expect much from partner—he had the chance to bid again over two spades, but declined to do so. Any action by you begs for a penalty double.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q765 ♡8 ◇QJ9862 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♡	Dble	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—We do recommend that you bid a four-card major before a five-card minor in these circumstances, but suppressing a good six-card minor is foolhardy. We suggest you make the invitational jump to three diamonds. If that ignites any spark in partner, show your spades next.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q ♡AKQJ1042 ◇K7 ♣Q32
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
Pass	Pass	?

What is your opening bid?
A.—Technically, a bid of one heart would be unimpeachable. However, in view of partner's pass we would give up all thoughts of slam, and we are not so rich defensively that we should presume that this is our hand. Therefore, our choice would be four hearts, to make it as difficult as possible for the opponents to enter the bidding.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠9 ♡AQ2 ◇873 ♣AKQ1076
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—No bid is ideal. However, your hand does rate some sort of strength-showing bid, and the choice lies between a reverse bid of two hearts to show concentrated values, or a jump to three clubs. Since we don't like lying about the length of a suit that is higher-ranking than the suit in which we want to play, we would opt for the jump to three clubs.

Another Frustaci septuplet loses 19-day fight against lung ailment

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Her grieving mother holding her as she died, Bonnie Marie Frustaci lost her 19-day fight against a lung ailment that killed two of her brothers and left just three tiny survivors of America's first septuplets.

"She was a fighter. I loved her so much," Patricia Frustaci said after her infant daughter died at 12:25 p.m. Sunday at Childrens Hospital of Orange County.

"Bonnie Marie lasted a week longer than they gave her," the father, Samuel Frustaci, said in a statement released by the hospital. "She fought long and hard. I can honestly say she was a real fighter, possessed of tremendous spirit. She joins her brothers and sisters in heaven."

"We're not going to have to go through this ever again," Frustaci vowed as he and his wife left the hospital. "I can guarantee it."

Delivered 12 weeks prematurely by Caesarean section on May 21, survivors Patricia Ann, Stephen Earl and Richard Charles continue to improve daily, said hospital spokesman Doug Wood. All three were listed in critical but stable condition. None of the infants weighs more than 2 pounds.

The Frustacis had kept a 24-hour vigil by Bonnie Marie's bed since Thursday, when doctors said the deaths of both Bonnie and brother James Martin were imminent. James Martin died that day.

Bonnie Marie succumbed to "cardio-pulmonary failure and arrest due to severe hyaline membrane disease," Wood said. The ailment is common in premature infants, whose undeveloped lungs tend to collapse with each breath.

The same disease claimed the lives of James Martin and David Anthony, nicknamed "Peanut," who died on May 24 — 64 hours after birth. One girl, Christina Elizabeth, was stillborn.

Frustaci said doctors told him Sunday morning that Bonnie Marie's condition had improved slightly, "then, not more than three hours later, they said she was dying."

"They took off the monitors at 11 a.m. Her heart still beat for more than an hour," said Mrs. Frustaci, who had taken a fertility drug to aid conception.

"There are not that many babies that continue to have a heartbeat when they don't have a lung," her husband said.

Wood said it was not uncommon to detach monitors from infants "who are beyond salvage. The monitors are removed so the baby can be in the parents' arms for the few moments before the child is pronounced dead."

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Vice President George Bush sported a Cincinnati Reds baseball cap and teamed with comedian Bob Hope, former Reds catcher Johnny Bench and former Gov. James Rhodes for a celebrity golf tournament.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music superstar Barbara Mandrell has scheduled her first live performance since September in tonight's 19th annual Music City News awards.

Miss Mandrell, a finalist for four awards including top female vocalist, was seriously injured in an auto accident that killed the driver of another car. She has done recording work since then, but no live performances.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A cargo jet carrying the first shipment of food and medicine bought with funds from the USA for Africa Foundation lifted off early today, boosted by a send-off from singers Lionel Richie and Kenny Rogers.

The supplies were bought with money raised by promotional items and the hit single record and album "We Are the World," recorded by 45 superstars who donated their talents to aid starving Africans.

The Flying Tigers Boeing 747 jet, carrying 240,000 pounds of supplies valued at $3.2 million, left Los Angeles International Airport at 12:30 a.m. Passengers included singer Marlon Jackson and USA for Africa president Ken Kragen.

The plane was scheduled to pick up additional supplies in New York and Brussels, Belgium, before arriving Tuesday in Khartoum, Sudan, and unloading half its cargo. Ethiopia will receive the rest of the supplies.

Singer Harry Belafonte and his wife, Julie, were expected to join the mission in Brussels.

The shipment, mostly consisting of medical supplies, was loaded on the plane Sunday.

"There's something startling to see a full gassed-up plane ready to go," Richie said, gazing into the huge cargo bay. "I wish the other 45 artists could be here."

Richie and Michael Jackson co-wrote "We Are the World." Both the song and the album reached No. 1 on the Billboard magazine charts.

Rogers, who arrived in Los Angeles directly from a concert in Atlantic City, N.J., described the load as "just a token shipment, but one of many shipments to come."

PLEASANTVILLE, N.J. (AP) — A 68-year-old caddy who makes a living off golfers with bad aim says he has no plans to retire from his part-time job of hunting for golf balls with his bare feet in mucky fairway ponds.

"I love it," said Grover Stokes, adding that he likes the flexible hours and independence the job offers. "When I feel tired, I sit down."

Stokes, who traps muskrats in the winter, has been hunting golf balls at the bottom of golf course ponds for 40 years and said Sunday he'll keep his job "till the Lord calls me. I'll do it as long as I'm able."

Samuel and Patricia Frustaci stop to talk to reporters at Childrens Hospital in Orange County, Calif., after the death of their daughter, Bonnie Marie.

Lady boarding

It wasn't all that many years ago when women were effectively locked out of a lot of occupations simply because those jobs were "not suitable for women." Today, a number of women probably will claim enough progress has not been made but there are women welders, sheet metal workers, doctors, police officers and, well, the list goes on.

But when Augie Felando, president of the American Tunaboat Association, first heard about it, he was knocked flatter than a flounder.

Women observers on tuna boats? That will be the day, he thought. It would be worse than, well ... getting the net caught in the propeller or running into a pier. Everybody knows women on board are bad luck.

To Felando's chagrin, coeducational commercial tuna fishing is no idle threat. There's a San Jose, Calif., woman who wants aboard. She says she has just as much right as a man does to be assigned on a tuna boat as a porpoise observer for the federal government. We think she's right.

A federal chief investigator is looking into the situation. He says that the San Jose woman has "raised a legitimate question." The case can bring to mind some scenarios. For instance:

A deckhand on watch one dark and balmy night: "How about a kiss, sweetheart?"

Female observer: "Go kiss a shark."

This is 1985 and the past 20 years have brought significant changes in the workplace for women. Obviously, there are those industries that have resisted change. Still, that change is coming — rightfully!

Augie Felando and the other tunaboaters had better get ready!

Another View:

A moment of clarity

"If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation," Justice Stevens reminds us in the words of an earlier Supreme Court decision, "it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion, or other matters of opinion or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein." Recalling this holding, the justice now writes in no uncertain terms, "The State of Alabama, no less than the Congress of the United States, must respect that basic truth."

At issue before the high court this week was an Alabama statute providing for a moment of silence in public school classrooms, in order to allow for meditation or voluntary prayer. Six justices saw the language of that statute, the legislative history and the expressed motives of Alabama legislators as in dicating a clear intention to endorse religion and return voluntary prayer to the schools.

Twenty-five states permit or require public school teachers to have students observe a moment of silence. Alabama, in fact, had exactly such a neutral law on the books when, in 1981, it enacted a second statute, explicitly suggesting that the quiet period be used for prayer. The constitutionality of the original Alabama law was not before the court in this case, nor were the similarly neutral statutes in the other two dozen states. But it seems clear from this week's opinions that a majority of the court would find no constitutional impediment to such an observance.

Alabama's moment of silence for prayer statute, however, does not meet the standard the Supreme Court set out 14 years ago for determining whether a statute violates the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. Laws having religious overtones are permissible under the constitution only if they 1) have a secular legislative purpose, 2) have a primary effect that neither advances nor inhibits religion, and 3) do not foster an excessive government entanglement with religion. A neutral moment of silence law may meet this test, but the Alabama prayer period does not.

In practical terms, this decision, Wallace v. Jaffree, may have little impact, since the earlier Alabama law — and the statutes of 24 other states — remain in force. As an indication of the justices' strong commitment to retaining the separation of church and state in the public schools, though, it is heartening. Prayer is personal, private and protected. Nothing prevents an individual child from praying silently in any place at any time, including a period during the school day set aside for silence. It would be impossible to enforce such a prohibition even if the state wanted to. But neither can the government force or encourage religious practice in a diverse and free society, especially in schoolrooms where attendance is compulsory and children are under pressure to conform. The court is clear in announcing that any state's attempt to subvert these basic and cherished principles will not be allowed.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 10, the 161st day of 1985. There are 204 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago — on June 10, 1935 — Alcoholics Anonymous was founded in Akron, Ohio by William G. Wilson and Dr. Robert Smith.

On this date:

In 1801, the north African state of Tripoli declared war on the United States in a dispute over safe passage of merchant vessels through the Mediterranean.

In 1865, the opera "Tristan and Isolde" by Richard Wagner premiered in Munich, Germany.

In 1922, singer-actress Judy Garland was born.

In 1940, Italy declared war on France and Britain.

In 1942, the Gestapo massacred 173 male residents of Lidice, Czechoslovakia in retaliation for the killing of a Nazi official.

In 1972, a flash flood in Rapid City, S.D., resulted in more than 230 deaths.

Ten years ago: The Rockefeller Commission report on the CIA was released. The report said the agency had committed "plainly unlawful" acts that included the opening of mail and the surveillance of U.S. citizens.

Five years ago: OPEC ministers ended their meeting in Algiers with a tentative agreement expected to raise the price of their oil.

One year ago: The U.S. Army successfully tested an antiballistic missile that intercepted and destroyed a dummy missile warhead in flight.

Today's birthdays: Britain's Prince Philip is 64. Columnist Nat Hentoff is 60. Author Maurice Sendak is 57. Attorney F. Lee Bailey is 52. Media commentator Jeff Greenfield is 42. Actor Andrew Stevens is 30.

Thought for today: "I believe that man will not merely endure — he will prevail." — William Faulkner.

JACK ANDERSON

Official caught feathering nest

WASHINGTON — The battle between the Nicaraguan contras and the Sandinista regime isn't being fought only in the jungles by soldiers in camouflage uniforms. It is being waged with equal bitterness by striped-pants diplomats in the Organization of American States.

Jack Anderson

We've reported on the petty politics and budgetary boodle at the OAS in the past, pointing out that it's the American taxpayers who ultimately get ripped off for the organization's extravagance, since our government pays two-thirds of the OAS budget.

After roundly denouncing us for these disclosures, some OAS officials have now decided that maybe expense-account excesses are outrageous after all.

"The situation is really difficult here," said Guillermo Piernes, the OAS public information chief. His statement was in response to our inquiry about an internal audit that charged the OAS director in Nicaragua, Jorge Arellano, with "unauthorized activities" and recommended disciplinary action.

According to Piernes, Arellano is one of those officials who are "acceptable to the Sandinistas." He replaced a Somocista after the 1979 revolution.

Does this mean that Arellano's peccadillos have been blown out of proportion in the audit? Here's what the OAS audit reported:

— Between July 1983 and January 1984, Arellano authorized a total of $2,160.55 to be paid to himself, without getting permission from Washington. He also purchased office furniture with a check for $418.18 that was both signed and made out to himself.

— Arellano bought a set of five new tires for an OAS pickup truck in Managua that was less than a year old, then tried to order a third set soon after that.

"In our opinion," wrote the auditors, "the tire purchase in January 1984, and the attempt to acquire an additional complete set in August 1984, eight months later, appears to be unwise."

— Arellano bought three air conditioners for the OAS from a relative for $1,900 — and paid for them with Yankee dollars instead of Nicaraguan cordobas, as OAS regulations require. Not only that, but "further examination of the draft disclosed that the payment was deposited by the director in his own personal account in the United States," the auditors reported.

— During 1983-84, Arellano received several thousand dollars' worth of cash credits for tax-free fuels purchased for OAS business, though headquarters had ordered the Managua office in 1981 to stop giving the staff the credit allotments.

Arellano's behavior "in our opinion reflects poor judgment and is inconsistent with the requirements set forth by OAS regulations," the auditors wrote, adding: "We believe that because of the extensive nature and scope of these activities in failing to comply with OAS regulations that disciplinary action should be considered."

Piernes said no disciplinary action had been taken, because Arellano has until the end of this week to respond to the auditors' charges. Piernes did characterize the findings as "routine," and noted that currency abuse was the organization's "most common problem."

WHO'S REALLY WHO?: The nation's financial czar, 6-foot-7 Paul Volcker, will probably give up the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve Board early next year. He lets his hair down occasionally with a few intimates whom he invites to his Washington apartment for spaghetti dinners. He has told them that government service has drained him personally and financially. His wife has a crippling form of arthritis, which keeps her in New York City. The financial and physical cost of constantly commuting between Washington and New York, he said, has depleted him.

• • •

TRADE WARS: Japan isn't the only nation that is overwhelming U.S. markets with its exports. Suddenly, Taiwan and South Korea are emerging as commercial powers, with shiploads of goods to sell to Americans. Washington has dispatched negotiators to both countries to encourage them to exercise restraint. To reduce the trade imbalance, they are also pressuring Taiwan and South Korea to relax their own trade barriers and allow more U.S. products to compete.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Can we learn something from Ghana about how to deal with white-collar crime? Two bank executives and a businessman were lined up before a firing squad and shot the other day for their roles in a $1.24 million bank fraud — a piddling swindle by recent American standards.

We don't advocate such terminally prejudicial measures, of course, but a few 20-year sentences judiciously apportioned might prove a remarkably effective deterrent the next time some finagler toys with the idea of swindling the depositors — or sticking his hand in the Pentagon cookie jar.

EVANS & NOVAK

Iacocca gives Mario the nod

WASHINGTON — Behind Gov. Mario Cuomo's unexpected presidential endorsement of Lee Iacocca is a reverse commitment: a virtual private promise from the Chrysler tycoon to support the New Yorker for the highest office in 1988.

Rowland Evans

The two second-generation Italian-Americans have become friendly in recent months. The non-political Iacocca has told Cuomo he is the kind of man he would like to see as president and the kind of candidate he could support.

Robert Novak

Cuomo's "endorsement" of Iacocca gives him an easy answer when asked about his presidential intentions. Although the governor may indeed join the race for the nomination after his 1986 re-election campaign, Iacocca surely will not enter elective politics. When asked whether he would like to be president, the popular automaker says: president no, chairman yes. That means he'd like the power without having to run for it.

BUSH COOLS TAXES

"Don't you think we're taking an awfully big chance on this?" a worried Vice President George Bush asked one of his closest associates in the administration shortly after President Reagan unveiled his tax reform.

That confirmed that the superloyal vice president, who backed the president on his Bitburg visit, is having trouble swallowing tax reform. He has not been playing a major role in pushing it and he volunteered for his forthcoming European tour, coinciding with the height of the tax campaign.

A footnote: The degree of Republican non-support on taxes was signalled when Gov. Tom Kean of New Jersey welcomed Reagan's forthcoming visit to his state but warned the White House he would have to oppose the president's call to end deductibility of state and local taxes. Kean is a runaway favorite for reelection this year in a medium-tax state, where the deductibility issue is marginal.

DOLE FORGETS RON

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole angered White House aides when he failed to delay a resolution pushed by the Senate's arms control bloc recommending another year of SALT II, the unratified U.S.-Soviet treaty due to expire Dec. 31.

Presidential aides asked for a copy of the resolution the minute they heard about it, but it was delivered too late in the day for the White House to intervene. Dole's explanation for failing to check with President Reagan was that the resolution had the backing of one anti-SALT conservative, Republican James McClure.

But McClure backed the resolution because it supported minor non-compliance with the treaty, and he thought this better than nothing. That did not go nearly far enough for Reagan. White House aides are advising the president to ignore the Senate langauge.

AXING THE CHECKOFF

President Reagan and the Treasury tucked repeal of federally-financed presidential elections into the tax reform without consulting either Republican National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf or White House political director Ed Rollins.

Although he can never criticize administration proposals, Fahrenkopf was steaming. Like most leading politicians of both parties, he favors the checkoff that gives taxpayers the option of dedicating $1 of their federal tax payment to financing presidential election campaigns.

Similarly, Republican Party leaders were neither consulted nor pleased that the tax reform would eliminate the $100 deductibility for political contributions.

REGAN VS. MCFARLANE

Potentially troublesome coolness has set in between hard-driving White House chief of staff Don Regan and national security adviser Robert McFarlane, one of the fastest-rising stars in President Reagan's second term.

The trouble started when Regan bypassed McFarlane in persuading the president to cut the new defense budget to zero growth. McFarlane was never given the chance to argue against the drastic cut, infuriating him and his national security staff.

Hard-line defense insiders are worried that Regan also may be playing too large a role against their efforts to end compliance with the SALT II treaty. They are counseling McFarlane to fight hard to keep Regan from invading his turf. The trouble with that, a McFarlane intimate says privately, is that "Regan is the boss man."

FLORA LEWIS

Romania's roses have 'thorns'

BUCHAREST, Romania — The roses are blooming deliciously along all the main avenues. And with the warm weather, people look well enough in bright summer clothes. There is still some flair in this city, which once took pride in being called the "Paris of the East."

Flora Lewis

But it is misleading. Romania is in bad shape, perhaps the worst in the Communist bloc in terms of peoples' lives and hopes. The economy was run down by more than a generation of big mistakes, crash investment in badly conceived industrialization schemes, the usual burdens on agriculture of rigid collectivization, and then incurrence of a huge Western debt.

Nicolae Ceausescu, the supreme and unchallengable leader since 1965, determined to retire the debt quickly so as to maintain national elbow room. That might sound like orthodox capitalist policy. It isn't. It is being done by reducing living standards so sharply, cutting everyday consumption so drastically that it couldn't be followed in a society with any choice.

Nobody's starving. This isn't Africa. And nobody's shooting or trampling people. This isn't Beirut or a soccer match in Brussels. In fact, there is a glum, drudging calm. But life is very difficult, with hours and hours of standing in queues just to find enough food to fill bellies.

There is a "second economy," an elaborate, unofficial system of barter and trading favors so as to ease the roughest edges of imposed austerity. There was a horrible winter with practically no heat, and even now there is scarcely any light after nightfall. Television broadcasts for only two hours so as to save electricity, and then it's mostly dreary propaganda boasting of fine harvests and fat cows when there's nothing in the shops.

Romanians, who always looked down on their Bulgarian neighbors as rather backward and constricted, watch Bulgarian television because they find it so much livelier. "Imagine," said one, "we've got to the point where we envy Bulgarians, they're better off now."

That is a reflection on the actual impact of a policy of relative autonomy from the Soviet Union. Bulgaria is Moscow's most devoted ally. Since the mid-1950s, the Romanian regime has curried popularity, at home and in the West, by occasionally thumbing its nose at the Kremlin. It seemed to work at first, but from the public's point of view it is no substitute for a reasonable diet and some breathing room.

The current economic policy tends to increase dependence on the Soviets, in any case. Soviet energy supplies are essential, and more and more they have to be paid in "hard goods," that is, food and products in demand on the domestic market. The phrase is somewhat new, extending the distinction of "hard currency" from less desirable nonconvertible money to a distinction of goods which find an eager market from those less readily acceptable.

There is no sign of serious Soviet displeasure with Romania's forays into a more independent foreign policy, such as attending the Los Angeles Olympics when all other Soviet allies had to boycott, or being the only Warsaw Pact member to maintain relations with Israel.

Neither is there any sign of moves for reform in Romania, such as those that have stirred other Eastern countries. This remains a Stalinist system, no challenge at all to the stodgiest idealogues in Moscow.

To that extent, the blast let loose by U.S. Ambassador David Funderburk just after he resigned last month was grounded. The regime here showed its pique with a peculiar gesture of dumping a thousand or more would-be emigres to America in West Berlin during the last two weeks in May. It was a defiant way of saying to Washington, "if you insist on shouting about human rights and emigration, take these." Funderburk rightly called it a "mini-Mariel." Now it has quietly ended.

But Funderburk's outburst was not only undiplomatic. His complaint that the State Department is too soft on Romania was a prime example of the futility of clumsy-noisy confrontation in foreign policy.

There's no need to wear blinders to what is going on here, to cheer the regime because it doesn't regularly echo the Soviet line. Neither does it serve an American purpose to make a verbal fist. Politicians may thrive on thunder, it doesn't achieve much abroad. Policy requires nuance, a sense of what it is possible for America to influence, and what is beyond the reach of U.S. decision.

Crime hits one of four households

Latest statistics show lowest level since 1975

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proportion of U.S. households victimized by crime last year fell to the lowest level since 1975, but still one out of every four experienced a crime of violence or theft, the government reports.

Advancing longstanding theories about crime risks, a study by the Bureau of Justice Statistics found that people living in the suburbs or countryside were safer than those living in cities.

The report, released Sunday, concluded that black households were more vulnerable than white households, but also found that high-income households were more likely to be victimized than middle-income households.

"We estimate that 22.8 million households were affected by a burglary, motor vehicle theft or household larceny or were inhabited by someone who was raped, robbed, assaulted or who was the victim of a personal larceny," said Steven R. Schlesinger, the bureau's director.

NATION

But Schlesinger also said that "there has been a gradual downward trend since this statistical measure was introduced in 1975, when 32 percent of American households were touched by crime," he said. Last year, the 22.8 million households said to have been "touched" by crime represented roughly 26 percent of the total.

Noting that the overall gauge of crime's pervasiveness was at its lowest ebb in nine years, Schlesinger said: "Many believe that recent declines in crime rates are due, in part, to greater public awareness and understanding of crime, and to citizen crime prevention programs."

The approximately 22.8 million households affected by crime in 1984 were about 800,000 fewer than those victimized in the preceding year and about 2 million fewer than in 1982, the report said.

A household is considered "touched" by crime if it experienced a burglary, auto theft or household larceny, or if a household member was raped, robbed, assaulted or a victim of personal larceny, the bureau said.

The proportion of victimized households fell to 26 percent of total households in 1984, compared to 27.4 percent the year before.

"The 1983-1884 decrease was primarily the result of declines in burglaries and personal or household larcenies," the report said.

The report was based on the bureau's National Crime Survey of some 60,000 U.S. households, or roughly 128,000 people at least 12 years of age, who were asked what crimes they experienced since the last interview.

The survey did not take into account murders.

Videotapes reveal torture

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The bones of up to 25 people and videotapes of women being tortured, including one who pleaded for the return of her baby, may link two men, including one who committed suicide while under arrest, to a three-year string of disappearances, police say.

Investigators searching the cabin shared by Leonard Lake and Charles "Chatt" Ng near Wilseyville in Calaveras County have unearthed "a truckload of bones," and found sex tapes, identification papers and women's clothing, San Francisco Police Chief Cornelius Murphy and Sheriff Claud Ballard said.

Lake died Thursday, four days after he apparently took a suicide pill while he was under arrest in San Francisco, police said.

Officials: Secrets safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's most sensitive naval secrets — how the United States finds Soviet submarines and what it does to avoid having its own subs tracked — appear to be secure despite the Walker family spy case, officials say.

Pentagon officials are concerned about serious damage to the nation's military secrets resulting from the range of information passed to the Soviets.

But the men arrested so far lacked the range of special security clearances needed to gain access to the super-secret "black" programs at the heart of the undersea game of cat-and-mouse played 365 days a year by the two superpowers, said the officials, who would speak only on condition they not be named.

New money design urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a House Banking panel thinks the government is on the wrong track in its efforts to find a way to curb what might be an influx of fake money printed on a new generation of sophisticated color copiers.

So to make certain the government doesn't change the face of currency without congressional approval, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., is pushing legislation that would require the House and Senate to vote on any plan to redesign money.

Annunzio, chairman of the consumer affairs and coinage subcomittee, does not deny that there could be some problems with office workers or janitorial employees with access to precise color copiers running off authentic-looking bogus currency.

Conditions forecast for 8 p.m. Tuesday

Midland has possibility of thunderstorms

From Staff and Wire Reports

The possibility of thunderstorms and cooler temperatures have crept back into the Midland area as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport calls for partly cloudy skies through Tuesday with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The mercury will drop to the upper 60s tonight and warm to a high near 90 Tuesday.

Forecasters expect winds to be from the south at 10 to 20 mph tonight, shifting to the northeast to east at less than 20 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 97 was eight degrees below the record set in 1981. This morning's low was 21 degrees above the 1975 record of 51.

STATE

Isolated thunderstorms were expected during the evening hours over Northeast Texas, the coastal plains and in the mountains of Southwest Texas.

But forecasters called for clear to partly cloudy skies and hot, steamy weahter over all of Texas through at least Tuesday. Highs today were to be mostly in the upper 90s, ranging to as hot as near 106 along the Rio Grande in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Lows tonight will be on the warm side, mostly in the upper 60s and 70s. Highs Tuesday will again be mostly in the 90s, ranging upward to near or slightly above the 100-degree mark.

Some isolated thunderstorms were reported early today in Northeast Texas and in Southwest Texas northward from the southern mountains through the South Plains and into southeastern sections of the Panhandle.

NATION

Widespread thunderstorms today prompted flash flood warnings in three states and raised river levels in Colorado.

Showers and thunderstorms reached from Kentucky across southern Indiana, southern Illinois, southern Missouri and northeast Oklahoma.

Heavy rain prompted flash flood warnings for sections of southern Missouri, southwest Illinois and northeast Oklahoma.

The thunderstorms dumped three-quarter inch hail on sections of Oklahoma and Nebraska on Sunday evening.

Another band of showers and thunderstorms stretched from the Nebraska Panhandle across Colorado, west Texas and eastern New Mexico.

Sweden's Mats Wilander hold high the winner's cup in Roland Garros Stadium in Paris.

Wilander steals French Open from favorites

Tennis

PARIS — With all the fuss over top-seeded John McEnroe and defending champion Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, no one paid much attention to Sweden's Mats Wilander, who sneaked into the final of the French Open tennis championships and grabbed the silver trophy for the second time in four years.

"No one thought I would win this tournament, and I didn't expect myself to win either," Wilander said. "It's easier to fight hard when there's no pressure."

The 20-year-old Swede, who had not won a tournament this season, on Sunday combined a perfect game plan with determination to upset the heavily favored Lendl 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

KEEPING THE ball deep to Lendl's backhand, Wilander patiently worked his way to the net, catching Lendl going the wrong way and pounding volleys past his long reach. As the Swede gained confidence and momentum, Lendl's hard-hitting offensive baseline game faded into defensive counter-punching.

It was Wilander's fifth Grand Slam final and fourth victory. Lendl has been in seven Grand Slam championship matches, winning just one — the French Open last year.

Golf

HARRISON, N.Y.—For Roger Maltbie, the playoff victory over Ray Floyd and George Burns in the Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Clasic was worth $90,000. And it quite possibly carried, Maltbie said, a greater value.

"It restored some self esteem," said Maltbie, who won three times in his first two years on the PGA Tour and was considered one of the game's more promising young players before going into a nine-year tailspin. His last victory was in the 1976 Memorial tournament.

His latest one did not come easily.

Two shots back with two holes to play, Maltbie had to put on a birdie-birdie finish to gain a tie with Burns and the veteran Floyd at 275, nine under par at the end of the regulation 72 holes over the Westchester Country Club course. Maltbie and Burns each had a 70 over the last round and Floyd, despite the handicap of a hooking driver, closed up with a 6-under-par 65.

MALVERN, Pa. — Alice Miller said she doesn't see herself as a dominant player on the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour, but her record this year indicates otherwise.

She won her third tournament of the season Sunday, shooting a fourth straight 4-under-par 68 to finish with a score of 272 and an eight-shot margin over Nancy Lopez in the $400,000 McDonald's Championship.

After trailing by two strokes following the opening round, Miller led by two shots at the midway point and by five after three rounds.

LAKEWAY — Scott Verplank of Dallas fired his third straight sub-par round Sunday to capture the Texas State Amateur Golf Championship for the second year in a row.

Verplank, an all-American at Oklahoma State and the defending U.S. Amateur champion, carded a one-under-par 71 Sunday for a 54-hole total of five-under-par 211 on the Hills of Lakeway course just outside Austin.

He shot 70 each of the first two rounds.

Bird shoulders blame for defeat

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — Larry Bird willingly accepted the responsibility for the Boston Celtics' first-ever playoff loss to the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I live and die with the jump shot," said Bird, who hit only 41.4 percent in the National Basketball Association championship series that ended Sunday with a 111-100 Laker victory. "That's what got me here and that's what's won us championships.

"Every one I missed, I said the next one's going in. I don't mind being the goat because there have been games we've won where I've been the hero."

Bird was the regular-season NBA Most Valuable Player the last two years and was the 1984 playoff MVP when he led the Celtics to their 15th title in 16 championship series appearances.

"I thought we were going to win this thing," he said. "We were pumped up. But a lot of us didn't play well. I don't know if they were hungrier, but the Lakers were a better team."

FROM THE start of the finals, Bird said he didn't like the new format that had the team with the best regular-season record playing the first, second, sixth and seventh games at home.

"Next year if they have a 2-3-2 series, I can guarantee we will get more rest" rather than working hard at the end of the season to earn the best record, he said.

Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said he is happy that he won't have to hear how the Lakers have never beaten Boston in the playoffs.

"Everything's been purged that should be," he said. "Our guys felt very strongly that they had to come out hard to take the championship from the Celtics."

AP Laserphoto

Kevin McHale shows the Celtics' dejection.

Riley said playoff MVP Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, 38, was the key to the series.

"I'm so proud of Kareem, who's been written off so many times and told to retire," Riley said. "He's the most unique and durable athlete around. You'd better enjoy him now because there won't be another one like him."

ABDUL-JABBAR, who had 29 points in Sunday's finale and 121 points in the four Los Angeles victories in the series, became the first NBA player to win playoff MVP awards for different teams. Abdul-Jabbar, who also was the MVP for Milwaukee in 1971, joined Willis Reed of New York and Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Lakers as a two-time winner.

"This was the sweetest one because it's the one we took from Boston," Abdul-Jabbar said. "Celtic pride was in this building, but so were we."

He said the turning point of the series was the way the Lakers came back from a 148-114 loss in the series opener.

"Everyone was able to take hold of that game and use it to motivate themselves," Abdul-Jabbar said. "We had to get tough. We've had tougher practices than we did that day.

"We couldn't let that continue. We had to realize that Boston is a talented team, smart and tough. We had to match that and I think once we did, the best team showed who it was."

Sunrise, sunset, is the Angel game over yet?

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland and Beaumont staged one of their dusk to dawn marathons Sunday and Monday. This one lasted 14 innings before, Mike Madril, who had a hitting streak going early in the game, broke out of a slump with a one-out single to score Kevin Davis from second base and give the Angels a 13-12 win and a two-game winning streak.

Perhaps it isn't quite dawn to dusk, but when Midland and Beaumont, the Texas League's answer to the 24 Hours of Daytona, play at Angels Stadium, the games always last at least three hours. In fact, only one has been less than three hours and 22 minutes.

At the end of regulation, it had gone 3:48. Before the season is over, the Angels and Gators are a good bet to get that 4:05 Texas League record for a nine-inning game.

With the extra innings, Sunday-Monday's game took five hours and three minutes. If they are going to play this long, the Angel management should consider adding breakfast to its concessions menu. As it is now, you can't even get coffee and a donut.

IT WAS 12-12 in the seventh inning. Midland had brought in Todd Fischer to pitch and Beaumont had Mark Williamson. Someone observed, "This shouldn't last long. Both these guys are short relievers."

When Madril drilled his game winner to left, it was Fischer who got the win, his fifth in five decisons and Williamson (3-5) who got the loss. Fischer had pitched eight innings and Williamson 6 2/3.

If Midland manager Joe Maddon and Beaumont counterpart Bobby Tolan had started these two, they could have done away with all those preliminaries, but then what would there have been to write about.

THE WAY they were going, it looked like the Texas League curfew rule would have to be imposed, the one which states "no inning shall be started after sunrise of the next day."

The original crowd was 872, yet, despite the hour, there were still enough around to cheer the three-hit rally that won it. Kevin Davis opened the fateful 14th with a single and with one out, McLemore came through with his fifth hit of the night to move Davis to second.

Madril had opened the game with four straight hits, but then fell into a dreadful slump. He hadn't had a hit since his run scoring triple in the sixth when he finally ended the endurance test.

It was kinda nice to win, but fans were beginning to wonder how long that Pawtucket-Columbus game went a few years ago and what it would take to break the record.

Perhaps the game's most dramatic moment came in the 13th when Beaumont loaded the bases with none out on singles by John Tutt and Greg Smith and an intentional walk to Benito Santiago. Rigo Rodriquez lined to right and Madril came in fast to take the liner and peg the ball home, holding Tutt on third. Then shortstop Kevin Davis turned Shane Mack's grounder into an inning ending double play.

THE GAME produced 25 runs, 40 hits, 12 walks and a lot of opportunities.

Dave Heath hit Midland's only homer, his sixth and second in two nights to open the third.

Miami uses 'dead tired' stopper to douse Texas, force rematch

Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Miami went to its stopper, relief ace Ric Raether, to hold off the hard-charging Texas Longhorns and force another championship game after Sunday night's 2-1 Hurricane win in the NCAA College World Series.

The side-arming right-hander had to do the same thing the night before — in Miami's 6-5 thriller over Mississippi State — to stay alive in the double-elimination tournament.

A Texas win Sunday would have given Miami its second loss of the tournament. Now, the two teams face off again tonight at 7:10 p.m. CDT, to decide the national collegiate baseball champion.

"I am dead tired. I was tired when I came in," Raether said following his 3 1-3 innings of two-hit, shutout relief against Texas, now 64-13.

"WE WENT with Raether early but tonight was our championship game," said Miami catcher Chris Magno, who scored the tying run after a lead-off triple in the sixth.

"We've had trouble scoring runs so I thought we could at least get a flyball," Magno said. "When I saw the ball head for the fence I knew I had to go for three."

Magno scored on Chris Hart's safety squeeze bunt.

"Coach told me to watch for a bunt and when it got past the pitcher, I went," Magno said.

Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson said the squeeze "was not a surprise. We were ready for it. We could have had him (Magno) at the plate if (Billy) Bates had made a good throw."

Magno's hook slide just managed to get under Texas catcher Robbie Byers.

It was Bates' dropped foul pop fly that actually gave Magno a second chance on the triple.

TEXAS, WHICH had been behind in every game of the series, took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when David Denny led off with a double down the left-field line. Denny moved to third on a groundout and scored on an infield error.

Don Rowland scored the winning run when he walked to lead off the bottom of the eighth.

"I was really surprised to get four straight balls," said Rowland, who then stole second and advanced to third on a throwing error.

"We had a hit-and-run on," he said. "It wasn't a straight steal. I saw the ball go into center field so I went to third. We've got a lot of confidence right now."

Rowland scored the game-winning run two outs later when Rick Richardi's grounder to third was bobbled by Texas' Dodd Johnson. It was third-ranked Texas' fourth error of the game and second unearned run off losing pitcher Greg Swindell, 19-2.

RAETHER, WHO improved to 7-2, allowed a two-out pinch single by Bobby Behnsch in the ninth and walked Coby Kerlin to bring up Bates, who had two game-winning hits already in the CWS.

This time Raether struck out the Texas junior to end the game.

"I'm completely drained," said Miami Coach Ron Fraser, whose 63-16, sixth-ranked team now has a chance to add another national title to its 1982 championship. "These kids believe in themselves. They came back and reached their potential. We're a come-from-behind ballclub."

Texas also will have a second chance at winning its second title in three years in tonight's championship game. The Longhorns won in 1983 and finished second to Fullerton State last year.

Hawkins passes 1984 win total, cruises to 11-0

Associated Press

Andy Hawkins, the San Diego Padres and luck make a powerful combination, one the National League has yet to solve in 1985.

Hawkins won his 11th game without a loss when the Padres broke a 1-1 tie in the eighth inning with four runs off Mario Soto and beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-1 on Sunday.

Hawkins, 25, has already won more games than he did during his 8-9 campaign of 1984. New York and Houston are the only teams in the league he has not beaten this year.

Hawkins struggled on Sunday, retiring Cincinnati in order only in the first inning. He gave up eight hits and six walks over seven innings, but only one run. Rich Gossage, who failed to save a victory in Hawkins' previous start, was touched for a pair of runs on Sunday but finished the game.

THE PADRES have averaged 5.8 runs in the 12 games Hawkins has started this year, only once scoring less than four.

A wild pitch by Soto, 8-4, brought Steve Garvey home with the tie-breaking run in the eighth. Singles by Kevin McReynolds, Carmelo Martinez and Garry Templeton produced the other runs.

With his 11th victory, Hawkins tops former San Diego reliever Butch Metzger's team record of 10 consecutive victories in 1976.

Pete Rose, the opposing manager, had two hits off Hawkins to pull within 48 hits of Ty Cobb's all-time mark of 4,191, but was still impressed by the Padres right-hander.

NL Roundup

Cubs 5, Pirates 1

Trailing 1-0, Chicago scored four runs in the sixth inning. Leon Durham doubled home a run, Jody Davis drew a walk with the bases loaded and Chris Speier singled home two runners. Keith Moreland singled home an insurance run in the seventh.

The Cubs swept the four-game series from Pittsburgh, going from 1½ games back of the Mets to a 1½-game lead in the NL East.

Winner Dick Ruthven, 3-4, pitched six innings and allowed four hits. Warren Brusstar finished up for his first save, becoming the first Chicago pitcher other than Lee Smith to save a game this season.

Mets 6-2, Cardinals 1-8

New York outfielders Terry Blocker and Danny Heep crashed while running down Terry Pendleton's fly ball with the bases loaded in the second game. The hit, which touched Blocker's glove, became Pendleton's second home run and second grand slam this season. Blocker was carried off the field with injuries to both knees.

"I could see it coming," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "Neither one of them knew if they could catch the ball. It's a hell of a way to get a grand slam, isn't it?"

Joaquin Andujar, 11-1, scattered seven hits in his fifth complete game this year. The Cardinals, top scorers in the NL, have tallied 89 runs in Andujar's victories.

The Mets snapped a three-game losing streak in the first game behind Dwight Gooden. Gooden, 9-4, gave up six hits over eight innings, striking out only three, lowering his major league-leading ERA to 1.67.

Braves 10, Dodgers 3

Dale Murphy hit a two-run homer in the first inning off Fernando Valenzuela, 5-6, walked and scored on Bob Horner's double in the third, walked and scored on Horner's double and Terry Harper's grounder in the fifth, and singled home Larry Owen in the sixth.

The Braves added three runs in the seventh on Glenn Hubbard's sacrifice fly and RBI singles by Owen and Komminsk. Owen and Chambliss had RBI singles in the eighth.

Righty Steve Shields won his first major league decision in his third appearance. Terry Forster worked the last three innings for his first save.

Mike Marshall hit his ninth homer in the second. Dave Anderson hit a two-run homer, his second, in the seventh.

Phillies 4, Expos 1

Glenn Wilson hit a three-run homer in the first inning, his fifth of the season. Kevin Gross pitched seven shutout innings before the Expos loaded the bases with none out in the eighth. Don Carman and Kent Tekulve pitched out of the inning, allowing a run on a sacrifice fly. Tekulve finished for his fourth save.

Gross, 5-6, struck out eight and did not walk a batter. The Phillies broke their losing string of four games.

Astros 5, Giants 0

Joe Niekro pitched a two-hitter to lead Houston to a sweep of the three-game series. Niekro, 3-6, walked only one batter and retired 18 of the first 19 batters he faced. He had gone six starts without a victory, taking three losses over that span.

Mark Bailey hit a three-run homer, his third of the season, as the Astros won for the ninth straight time against the Giants over two seasons.

Giant starter Dave LaPoint yielded all five runs on nine hits. LaPoint, 2-6 despite a 2.32 ERA this year, lashed out at his teammates after the game.

"If you have trouble with insomnia, you should bring a pillow into our dugout. Nobody would bother you. There's no yelling. Nobody wants to win," LaPoint said. "Some guys are already planning their winter vacation. If we go six months with this group, we'll go 30 games under .500."

Tigers pull out split with Toronto

Associated Press

The biggest series of the 1985 baseball season so far left the Toronto Blue Jays and the Detroit Tigers exactly where they started.

Lou Whitaker, Alan Trammell and Kirk Gibson, the first three hitters in Detroit's lineup, sparked the Tigers to an 8-3 triumph Sunday and moved the defending World Series champions back within 6½ games of the American League East-leading Blue Jays.

The Blue Jays took the first two games of the four-game set in Toronto and were hoping to shake the Tigers for now. But Detroit rebounded with a 10-1 victory Saturday and won again Sunday to pull into a second-place tie with Baltimore.

Doug Bair, usually Detroit's long reliever, got a rare start and won his first decision of the year. He went 5 2-3 innings and gave up three runs on four hits. Bill Scherrer and Willie Hernandez closed it out for the Tigers.

Rookie Nelson Simmons hit a two-run homer to put Detroit ahead 4-2 in the fourth. The home run came off Jim Clancy, 2-3.

Red Sox 12, Orioles 0

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd pitched a three-hitter and got the support of a 17-hit attack as Boston extended its winning streak to seven games.

Marty Barrett drove in three runs with three hits and Mike Easler, batting .450 in his last 10 games, doubled twice and singled.

AL Roundup

White Sox 5, Twins 1

Tom Seaver won the 294th game of his career by yielding one run over 7 2-3 innings. The 40-year-old Seaver, 6-4, allowed five hits, including a home run by Tim Teufel in the third inning.

Daryl Boston broke out of a 5-for-50 slump an upper-deck home run at Minnesota's Metrodome and a single.

Harold Baines hit two sacrifice flies off Ken Schrom, 4-5, and Luis Salazar homered off reliever Curt Wardle for Chicago's final run.

The Twins have lost 14 of their last 16 games.

Angels 1, Royals 0

The tandem of Ron Romanick and Donnie Moore proved to be too tough for Kansas City.

Romanick, 7-2, gave up six hits over the first seven innings. Moore took over to start the eighth and recorded his 12th save.

The Royals threatened in the ninth when a pair of singles put runners and first and second with two outs. George Brett, who was expected to miss a few games with a pulled hamstring, was sent to the plate as a pinch hitter, but he grounded out to end the game.

Mariners 10, Indians 6

Ken Phelps kept hitting home runs at a amazing ratio, while Jim Presley also connected for visiting Seattle.

Phelps, who hit 24 homers in 290 at-bats in 1984, hit a two-run shot in the second inning. The home run was his seventh of the year in just 72 at-bats. Phelps, batting only .194 this year, also doubled and singled.

Presley hit his 12th homer in the eighth inning. Phil Bradley also drove in three runs for the Mariners.

Frank Wills, making his first start of the season, went six innings to win his first decision of the year. Cleveland scored four times in the seventh, two on a single by pinch-hitter Benny Ayala, to pull within 9-6.

Rangers 8-5, A's 4-6

In Oakland, Dave Kingman hit his 14th home run of the season leading off the eighth inning to break a 5-5 tie in the second game and give the A's their doubleheader split.

Toby Harrah's two-run homer in the seventh had lifted Texas into a 5-5 tie. But Kingman connected against Chris Welsh, 0-1. Reliever Jay Howell, 4-3, pitched three perfect innings for the victory.

Dwayne Murphy, Bruce Bochte and Mike Davis also homered for Oakland.

Texas scored five runs in the fifth inning of the opening game for its victory. Cliff Johnson and Gary Ward hit consecutive, RBI singles to highlight the uprising.

Brewers 9, Yankees 4

Former Cy Young Award winner Pete Vuckovich, making his second start since coming off the disabled list, settled down after a shaky start and turned in a fine outing.

Vuckovich yielded a long home run to Rickey Henderson to lead off the game and then gave up a double to Don Mattingly. But Vuckovich, 3-5, gave up only one hit during the rest of his 6 2-3 innings against New York.

Jim Gantner and Ben Oglivie hit two-run homers and Brian Giles hit a solo shot for the host Brewers.

Third Baseman - Bill Merrifield

THIRD BASEMAN

HOT CORNER
Third base is named the hot corner because balls come down there hard and fast and because a lot of crucial plays are made there to cut off scores. The third basemen often has to deal with balls that get to him too fast for him to charge and he must be ready to go right to the ground, on one knee, in front of such blows to block them, even if he cannot always get them in his glove.

But the third baseman must be ready to field normal ground balls too, by charging and fielding them in his natural stride. He has to get rid of the ball faster than other infielders do because he has a longer distance to throw the ball.

MAKE THE TAG
If the play at third is a tag play, then you should take the throw while straddling the baseline edge of the base. Make the tag with two hands if at all possible, turning the back of your glove to the runner and getting the ball right down between him and the base. Get your head down too, right over the play, and do not let the runner scare you out of there. Wait for the throw, knees bent and glove out to give a target.

WHERE TO PLAY
The third baseman ordinarily plays just a stride or two behind the baseline. In the later innings in a close ball game, you will need to play a good deal nearer to the bag, to shut off the possibility of a batter's rifling a ball between you and the base. Those baseline hits spell extra bases, and you cannot afford to let them get by in a close game. Even if you cannot field a ball, if you knock it down and keep it in front of you, you can keep it from doing real damage in the home cause.

POP FLIES
Pop flies into fair territory behind you will ordinarily belong to the shortstop, because he can get a better line on them. But don't give up on them until you know somebody is after them. And go after fouls between third and home. You are better equipped than the catcher to handle these. If the catcher has a better shot, the pitcher will call it.

The cutting edge.

Utilizing Honda's quiet 4-stroke OHV engine for maximum performance and minimal fuel use, this premium mower also features Roto-Stop,* which stops the mower's blade when you release the handle, yet keeps the engine running. And the Automatic Decompression system means easy starting. Self-propelled units have a no-maintenance shaft drive system and large capacity grass bags. Honda mowers. The cutting edge.

each homered twice for Beaumont. Smith, a lefthander swinger, hit both homers to the wrong field, which was left. Wasinger, a right-handed hitter, hit both his homers to the right field, which was left, where the wind was blowing.

Wasinger's three-run homer in the seventh gave Beaumont a 12-10 lead and ruined Fischer's runless season. Fischer, who relieved Julian Gonzalez with one on and no one out in the seventh, had appeared in six games without giving up a run.

Midland tied it in the home seventh when Key beat out an infield hit, stole second and raced home on a McLemore hit. With one out, Devon White grounded to short and McLemore was tagged out in a rundown between second and third as White took second.

JAMES RANDALL then greeted reliever Williamson with a single to right, but was out trying to sneak into second on the play at the plate.

After that, it became a question of which short reliever would crack first. And after that, a question of whether either short reliever would ever crack.

HALO HOOPS—McLemore and Madril gave Midland 10 hits in the top two spots and Key had his second three-hit night...Wasinger and Tutt were the three-hit men for the Gators...Just for the record, Midland's Don Timberlake and Beaumont's Mike McClain were the starters on the first day of play ...Lefthander Ken Angulo goes into tonight's fourth game of the six-game series....Bob Kipper has been throwing hard and may start later this week. Down from California, Kipper has pitched twice on the road, but has been sidelined by back problems for more than a month...As a reward to fans who toughed out, the ones who stayed were invited back to tonight's game free...

Independents score big gain in Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Independent candidates have scored their biggest gain since the country came under Communist control at the end of World War II, winning 25 seats in the Communist-dominated 387-seat Parliament.

Results released Sunday showed the losers to unofficial candidates included Jenoe Fock, a former prime minister, and Bela Biszku, a former interior minister.

Independents had been permitted to run since the 1970s but only one had previously been elected to Parliament since 1949, when Hungary held its first election under Communist rule.

The Saturday elections were the first since a 1983 law mandated that at least two people had to run for 352 of the seats. Thirty-five seats are reserved for top government or Communist party officials.

The Patriotic People's Front, the Communist organization that dominates Hungarian politics, nominated two of its own candidates for most seats but voters nominated others in 71 districts.

Voters in some districts nominated a third and in some cases a fourth candidate and in a few cases replaced a front candidate with one of their own nominees.

Parliament, which meets in full session for less than two weeks a year, regularly approves the policies laid down by the Communist party, known officially as the Socialist Workers' Party.

All candidates were required to sign a Front pledge saying they would abide by the rules of a socialist society.

Imre Pozsgay, general secretary of the People's Front, said he was confident there would be no conflict between the front's legislators and the others.

"We have every confidence in them (the non-front candidates)," Pozsgay said. "They accepted the Front's program."

Forty-five districts will hold a second round of elections on June 22 since no candidate received the majority required by law to win.

Hungary's small community of dissidents had tried without success to put candidates on the ballots in four districts. When they failed, they accused authorities of manipulating the electoral process. They initially called for a boycott of the balloting, but later withdrew the appeal, saying most people would be afraid to stay away even though voting is not compulsory.

Among the dissidents, Laszlo Rajk came within 67 votes of being nominated. His supporters claimed there were counting irregularities at the nominating meeting in his district and others.

Ferenc Koeszeg, who helped organize Rajk's campaign, questioned the accuracy of the official reports, saying in an interview that it "seems strange that there were so few invalid ballots, considering the newness of the procedure and that so many were on a long weekend."

Turkish Cypriot leader elected president of Cyprus ministate

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktash has been elected president of the breakaway mini-state in northern Cyprus which he declared independent of the island's Greek-speaking majority 18 months ago.

The Election Board announced today that the 61-year-old Denktash received 55,352 votes, or 70.5 percent of those cast in Sunday's election, defeating five opponents.

His chief rival, Ozker Ozgur, leader of the leftist Republican Turkish Party, received 18 percent of the votes.

"The responsibility for the Turkish Cypriot cause is on my shoulders," Denktash said today in a brief victory speech. "I invite the opposition as well to work with me in this mission my people have given me."

Political analysts in the Turkish sector of this divided capital said Denktash's resounding victory resulted from his popular November 1983 declaration of full independence for the Turkish part of the island.

The self-proclaimed Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus is recognized only by Turkey, which has troops in the northern half of the island. The United Nations Security Council has condemned it as "legally invalid."

The analysts, who spoke only on condition they remain anonymous, also said voters viewed Denktash as a skillful and tough bargainer, and preferred to have him negotiate with Greek Cypriot leaders for a settlement to re-unite the island in some kind of federation.

The Mediterranean island has been divided into northern Turkish and southern Greek zones since 1974, when Greek Cypriot national guard officers seeking union with Greece toppled the late President Makarios, and Turkey responded by sending in troops.

A year later, Turkish Cypriots set up a federated state with an elected head of state and Parliament, independent courts, a small army and police force. The Turkish Moslems are about 20 percent of the island's population of 750,000. The rest are Greek Christians.

Denktash was elected president of the federated state in 1976 and again in 1981.

Turkish Cypriots approved a new constitution for their republic in a referendum five weeks ago. Parliamentary elections are scheduled for June 23.

Both the referendum and the presidential election were denounced by Greece and Greek Cypriots as promoting partition of Cyprus and undermining the efforts of U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to mediate the Cyprus problem.

In the last election in 1981, Denktash received only 51 percent of the vote, the minimum required for election on a first ballot.

U.N.-sponsored talks between Greek Cypriot President Spyros Kyprianou and Denktash in New York last June broke down when the Greek leader rejected a draft agreement that the Turkish side had accepted.

Denktash has not ruled out the possibility of returning to the conference table. But after casting his vote Sunday, he said new negotiations would have to wait until after the new Turkish Cypriot government is seated.

The stillborn U.N. draft agreement last year called for the establishment of a loose federation of the two zones. In return, Turkish Cypriots agreed to reduce the territory they hold from 37 percent to 29 percent.

Perez de Cuellar reportedly has been discussing changes in the draft agreement with Greek Cypriot leaders.

Walesa testifies Solidarity members innocent of charges

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa, wearing a T-shirt from the outlawed Soldarity labor federation, told a court today that three of his associates are innocent of charges they incited civil unrest by allegedly plotting an illegal strike.

Walesa told reporters after his 50-minute appearance in Gdansk provincial court that he was asked what he knew about the Feb. 13 meeting, at which prosecutors say the illegal strike was discussed.

"I told them (the court) I know that three innocent people are sitting in the defendants' bench," Walesa said. "There is no civilized country in the world in which one is unable to meet with his friends."

The trial is closed to Western reporters. Defense attorneys have been briefing the reporters on developments.

Prosecutors charge the three defendants, Adam Michnik, Bogdan Lis and Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, all Solidarity leaders, discussed plans at the meeting for a 15-minute general strike to protest food-price increases.

The three face up to 7½ years in prison if convicted of illegal union activity in connection with the strike call. The work stoppage was subsequently canceled.

The defendants have pleaded innocent.

In his testimony, Walesa denied calling the meeting to discuss strike plans, according to a defense lawyer who spoke to reporters on condition of anonymity.

"Until the police came in we were not talking about anything specific since not all the people who were invited had arrived," the lawyer quoted Walesa as saying. "Until that moment we were telling jokes and

WORLD IN BRIEF

Nicaraguan rebel group launches appeal for aid

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A Nicaraguan rebel group has launched a broad appeal for aid after being battered by a recent offensive launched by the Nicaraguan army near the Costa Rican border.

The Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, known as ARDE, said rebel fighters and civilians in the area had suffered numerous casualties in recent Nicaraguan army attacks.

ARDE said it did not have enough supplies to contain the military offensive or to help the farmers and other civilians who had sought the group's protection.

In a statement released here Sunday, the group asked nations, political parties, organizations and individuals sympathetic to their cause to donate supplies, including weapons, ammunition, medicine, food and clothing.

The U.S. Senate last week voted to contribute $38 million in non-military aid to anti-Sandinista rebels, known collectively as Contras. The Reagan administration is trying to win Congressional approval to restore U.S. aid to the rebels. The House of Representatives is to consider an aid plan this week.

Peres warns Washington

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres says he has told Washington that preliminary U.S. talks with a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation could jeopardize direct Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Peres told his Cabinet that in his letter to U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz he had also praised the Reagan administration for its "devotion" to efforts to get the peace talks started, a government statement said.

The letter was in response to a message from Shultz on his talks with Jordan's King Hussein.

Reading the text of his reply at a Cabinet meeting Sunday, Peres said, "Preliminary negotiations between the United States and a Jordanian-Palestinian group would be liable to constitute an obstacle to direct talks," the communique said.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, at a news conference Sunday on his return from the United States, said he objected to preliminary talks, even "at a low level."

Dispute ends in deaths

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A dispute over a border that dates from British colonial days has resulted in the death of 50 policemen and the destruction of thousands of homes in mortar and machine gun exchanges in eastern India, United News of India reported.

Meanwhile, in the Punjab city of Amritsar, extremists disrupted a rally packed by an estimated 15,000 Sikh moderates Sunday, and several people were injured in clashes between the two groups, witnesses said.

And in the western state of Gujarat, at least 17 people were reported killed in weekend fighting over proposals to increase government quotas in jobs and education for the socially disadvantaged.

Afghan: Rebels regrouping

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — An Afghan rebel commander says more than 2,000 guerrillas are regrouping to counterattack Soviet forces that reportedly have gained full control of Afghanistan's Kunar Valley.

Barhanuddin Rabbani said Sunday the anti-communist insurgents were reassembling in Kunar province.

Officials block pop festival at Stonehenge

New York Times News Service

LONDON — The chairman of the National Trust says his group is determined to prevent a pop festival from being held at Stonehenge despite plans for one by members of Britain's counterculture, whose attempts to reach the area recently led to battles with the police.

The National Trust chairman, Lord Gibson, also rejected suggestions on Friday that his organization should help set up a festival elsewhere to prevent further trouble at Stonehenge. Dozens of counterculture members are still parked near Stonehenge.

Green CND, a rural offshoot of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, suggested earlier last week that a festival could be held at an alternative site.

But Gibson dismissed the idea of a festival role for the National Trust, a 90-year-old organization that promotes the preservation of land and buildings of historic interest or beauty. "To start running pop festivals to avoid damage seems to me an extraordinary travesty of the duty and function of the National Trust," he said.

On June 1 police officers in riot gear stopped a "peace convoy" of counterculture members in old trucks, buses and trailers as they approached the ancient monument on Salisbury Plain in defiance of a High Court order. More than 500 people were arrested, filling jails for miles around.

After the incident, several hundred of those trying to get to the site were given refuge in a forest 20 miles north of Stonehenge by the Earl of Cardigan.

The controversy surrounding the incident grew as witnesses, including reporters and the Earl of Cardigan himself, said the police had attacked the convoy indiscriminately.

The earl, who is 32 years old, told reporters that he had traveled with the convoy on his motorcycle and saw the police operation. "They felt the only way to do it was to smash every pane of glass with their truncheons and pull the occupants out," he said.

Revisited

On March 3, 1836, Col. William B. Travis made a remarkable speech to his command in the Alamo, offering his men a chance to escape or face certain death.

Text by Georgia Temple

Graphics by Suzan Conder

Do you remember...

— The Frenchman Moses Rose escaping the Alamo?

— A battle in Texas when one guy said, "I'm so hungry I could eat okra?"

— Texas history taught with the aid of the Dallas News (now the Dallas Morning News) cartoon strip beginning in the fall of 1926?

— A six-by-nine abridged paperback version of "Texas History Movies" furnished to Texas school children by Magnolia Petroleum Company (now Mobil Oil) for about 30 years?

"Cartoons have always been an excellent way to learn anything," says Spaulding Jones, publisher of the new edition of "The Texas History Movies."

"Many of those kids grew up, of course," Jones said, referring to those who were exposed to the paperback edition of "Texas History Movies." "And for some of the older kids like one former history teacher from Wichita Falls by the name of Sen. John Tower it was their primary source of wanting to learn history. He (Tower) still reads it regularly.

"The important thing about this book is that it's a motivator; it's not the end result of learning history but it's the real reason that most kids want to read more history and literally that's kids of all ages."

After 58 years, in A.C. Green's new book "The Fifty Best Books Ever Published," Spaulding said, it's still right up there at the top of the list.

Jones is a part of the publishing company Pepper Jones Martinez Inc., Publishers, who publish textbooks for the state of Texas. The company is reissuing the book, beginning with a collector's edition which is exactly like the original 1928 edition.

"It is the complete work and we have redone it, and it's available at the moment. The binding, the cover, everything's the same."

The red, blue and gold cover shows the Alamo on a screen with an audience and orchestra seated in front. Jones explained that although the name has become a misnomer today, back in the 20s "movies were cartoon movies."

Regardless of the possible confusion among those who were not familiar with the fact that "Texas History Movies" is Texas history captured in a cartoon strip, Jones wanted to remain true to the original edition.

"And, because it is a historical document, we wanted to preserve it and we wanted it to be important, so it's rather expensive, $250. It's a limited edition, and it will never be published again. And, of course, that's not meant for everybody."

This fall the publishing company will issue an abridged, revised 6 by 9 paperback edition which will sell for $5. Then, this winter an edition will be issued with foreign subtitles: German, French, Italian and Japanese.

"The cartoons will be in English, but the subtitles will be in the language of the country. The reason we think that will be very popular is because English is the first language of most countries, and this is a good way to practice their English and learn Texas history."

Jones' enthusiasm for the project comes from his love for Texas history and his remembrance of "Texas History Movies" from his days in school. And as a publisher of textbooks for the state, he knows that every child is required to take Texas history in the seventh grade.

When he acquired an original copy from a man who sold real estate in Fort Worth, who had received the book as a bequest from his grandmother's will, he knew he wanted to reissue the book.

The original company that owned the right to "Texas History Movies" was Turner Publishing Company. Graphic Ideas bought Turner Publishing and Jones' company aquired the rights from Graphic Ideas.

Both originators of the cartoon strip, cartoonist Jack Patton and writer John Rosenfield Jr., are dead. However, Jones has heard from Patton's daughter who told him "how happy she was we were carrying on this work." Rosenfield later became "the premiere" art, music and literary critic in Dallas.

"No one knows how much time they spent doing it," Jones said. "It started in the Dallas News in 1926 and ran a year. Then, due to its popularity, the teachers in Dallas requested the newspaper not run it in the summertime because the kids were out of school. And then it ran through 1927, and the book came out in 1928."

Plans are being made now to begin reissuing the strip in June in Texas newspapers which have an interest in running it from beginning to end.

Out of the 11,000 limited edition copies printed, 6,000 have been set aside for school and public libraries.

"I think it ought to be in every library," Jones said. "That way it will be available to all Texans in its original form."

The libraries' cost is 25 percent off the base price. In addition, Jones is trying to find individuals or foundations that will help with this project.

Those who purchase the limited edition also receive seven framable documents, Jones said. These documents include Houston's report from San Jacinto, Travis' letter from the Alamo and the Texas Declaration of Independence.

To date, Jones' company has "about $500,000 or $600,000 invested in this project. The company hopes to break even on the limited edition," Jones said. "We plan to make money off the $5 edition."

Jones considers his interest in Texas history and "Texas History Movies" not unlike the interest some people have in automobiles or paintings. "It's something you love to do and it's a fullfillment.

"The other thing I like very much about 'Texas History Movies' is that not many people will spend their time to read adult history books, my own included, but they will spend a couple of hours to read a book that is historically accurate and fun to read."

Furniture-makers rage after 'leave US' tip

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Commerce Department official has suggested to furniture manufacturers complaining about foreign imports that they might want to move to another country where labor is cheaper.

Timothy J. Hauser, director of the Office of Multilateral Affairs at the Commerce Department's International Trade Administration, made the suggestion in an April 22 letter to Don H. Flanders of Fort Smith, Ark., president of the Southwestern Furniture Manufacturers Assn.

"If U.S. producers are to compete successfully at home and abroad, they must adapt their production and marketing efforts to meet the economic challenge of their competition. In some cases, this necessitates adjustments such as the transfer of manufacturing facilities to foreign countries where production costs, primarily labor, may be less expensive," Hauser wrote.

Texas furniture makers sent copies of the letter to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Democratic Working Group on Trade Policy.

"We find it totally appalling and unacceptable," wrote Gary G. Mayo, president of Mayo Manufacturing Corp. of Texarkana.

Paul Brandt of A. Brandt Co. Inc. in Austin wrote, "I cannot imagine that our Washington elected officials are advocating bureaucracy wanting us to put the American voters out of work."

Brandt said his 85-year-old company employs 1,200 people in Texas and Arkansas.

Hauser said in his letter that manufacturers are unable to compete with imports because of the strong U.S. dollar and "relatively high U.S. wages." He said moving manufacturing operations overseas must remain an option in order to preserve free trade.

Crash short of runway leaves Cessna pilot unhurt

From Staff Reports

A twin-engine Cessna airplane crashed short of the far east runway at Midland Regional Airport Sunday, but its pilot was unhurt, according to the Department of Public Safety.

The Cessna 310 was being flown by its owner, John Ezell of Houston, who tried to land in Midland about 3 p.m. after being notified by Andrews Airport of possible trouble with his nosegear. He crashed about 150 feet short of the runway, and the plane traveled about 100 feet before coming to a stop, according to DPS reports.

There were no other passengers aboard the plane. The Federal Aviation Administration has been notified of the crash, reports said.

Woman, mother jailed after bodies found buried near home

ATHENS (AP) — A Balch Springs woman has joined her mother in jail and also been charged with two counts of murder in the wake of a probe that turned up two bodies buried in sleeping bags, police say.

Shirley G. Stegner, 26, was arrested in Dallas Sunday and is being held in the Henderson County Jail in lieu of a $1 million bond, said sheriff's investigator Rick Rose.

Her mother, Betty Branson Beets, is also in the East Texas jail on two murder charges and a $1 million bond, Rose said.

Mrs. Beets, 48, was arrested Saturday after a body believed to be Jimmy Don Beets, a Dallas Fire Department captain missing after an apparent boating accident in August 1983, was found buried under a homemade wishing-well garden outside her mobile home.

After finding Beets' body at about 6 p.m. Saturday, sheriff's officials uncovered a second body believed to be that of Mrs. Beets' ex-husband, Wayne Barker, a construction worker who had been missing since November 1982.

The second body was found nearby buried beneath a storage shed that relatives say Beets built. Although the cause of death hasn't been determined, both men had been shot with a small-caliber pistol, police said.

Henderson County Sheriff Charlie Fields said the bodies were found in the Cherokee Shores subdivision west of Cedar Creek Lake. He said the bodies were sent to a Dallas forensic laboratory for identification and other tests.

Rose, who has been investigating the case since Beets was reported missing, said discovery of the bodies climaxed an intensive six-week inquiry begun after an informant provided information about Beets' death.

"We looked where we were told to look, and the bodies were right there," Rose said, adding that he doesn't expect to find any more corpses near the burned-out mobile home.

While Rose said he has not established a motive in the killings, Henderson County Chief Investigator Jim Brewer said he believes Beets' death involved insurance payoffs.

Brewer said Mrs. Beets was the sole beneficiary of insurance policies, several which paid $20,000 and one or two that paid $30,000.

"I've always contended he's (Beets) missing," Brewer said, "He was not in the lake, not in a boating accident."

The sheriff's department spent 13 days dragging and diving into Cedar Creek Lake after Beets' pleasure boat was found floating empty Aug. 6. Authorities later assumed he drowned.

Brewer said Beets apparently died before the supposed boating accident.

Poles escaping hardships smuggled across Texas border

McALLEN, Texas (AP) — Polish citizens, trying to escape political and economic hardships in their homeland, are entering the United States through South Texas with the help of smugglers operating out of Mexico City, authorities say.

This year, the Border Patrol sector based in McAllen reports the arrests of about 150 Polish aliens, more than any other sector, said Chief Silvestre Reyes.

Reyes said agents began arresting Polish aliens about two years ago, but the numbers have increased this year.

Most of the Polish aliens pay at least $1,500 — including air fare from Poland to Mexico City and fees to a smuggler — to get to the United States, Reyes said.

U.S. immigration officials said they are gathering more information on various smuggling operations and decline to discuss specifics. But officials said most of the Polish aliens are trying to reach Chicago or New York.

"What we're seeing is a proliferation of organized smuggling," Reyes said. "They are coming in, I would say, 95 percent of them as an organized smuggling operation. They are paying money up front for smugglers to get them into the country."

A recent arrival from Poland, who asked to be identified only as "Andy," said he paid $1,500 to get to the United States and now will be paying more because he was detained.

Andy, who is scheduled to testify against his alleged smugglers, said he was afraid of reprisal from others and his own government. He said he would soon apply for political asylum.

"I left for political and economic reasons," he said through an interpreter. "There is no freedom in Poland. As a taxi driver I only made about $30 a month. Here, I can make a lot more."

"What we're seeing is a proliferation of organized smuggling. They are coming in, I would say, 95 percent of them as an organized smuggling operation. They are paying money up front for smugglers to get them into the country."

— Chief Silvestre Reyes
Border Patrol

Tony Pogerzelski, a Harlingen businessman who also works as an intepreter, coordinates the release of the Polish immigrants after he contacts friends or relatives who send him bond money.

The Polish aliens, most of whom are charged with illegal entry, are released on bond and must appear before an immigration judge for a deportation hearing. Many just blend into large Polish communities in the United States, hoping they won't be arrested again, Pogerzelski said.

Pogerzelski posts bond for the Poles and some stay at his home until they can arrange to stay with relatives in other parts of the country.

Andy, for example, spent two days at Pogerzelski's home before boarding a plane to New York, where he will stay until the trial of his alleged smuggler.

Pogerzelski said most Poles go to Mexico because tourist visas to that country are plentiful. But Andy said his government is planning to cut off passports to Mexico.

"They're getting tough," Andy said of his government. "I hear they are not going to issue any more passports to Mexico after June."

Pogerzelski said recent arrivals told him they couldn't get visas to Canada so they enter the United States through Mexico and write home to friends and relatives and encourage them to leave Poland.

Although the number of Polish immigrants entering through South Texas has increased, immigration officials decline to call it a trend.

"We're going to keep monitoring it. The numbers are not significant enough for us to call it a trend," said U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman Mario Ortiz in Dallas

Last year, the 20 Border Patrol sectors arrested 1.1 million illegal aliens, mostly Mexicans, and the McAllen sector led the nation with 67,000 arrests.

Arrests in the McAllen sector included 9,000 aliens from 80 countries other than Mexico, mostly from El Salvador and Nicaragua.

Authorities said they are projecting the arrests of some 80,000 illegal aliens before the end of the year, including more Poles.

Reyes said the increasing number of aliens entering through his sector is because of its proximity to metropolitan areas — and not because of lack of enforcement by his 200 officers in an 85,000 square-mile area.

He also said many other eastern European aliens ave entering through South Texas, hoping their light complexion will help them slip past Border Patrol agents.

"The thinking behind it is that since they don't look Hispanic they got a better chance of getting through there," Reyes said. "But intelligence officers are trained to spot non-Hispanic looking aliens."

Fire damages garage, roof, car

From Staff Reports

A Saturday night fire in the garage of a house at 1200 W. Storey Ave. caused heavy damage to the garage, part of the roof, and a car in the garage, but didn't injure anyone, according to fire reports.

Responding to the 8:57 p.m. alarm were six fire units, which used 800 gallons of water to extinguish the fire at the house belonging to A.T. Wheeler. Apart from the damage in the garage, there was minor smoke damage throughout the house, reports said. Cause of the fire was undetermined.

To ensure the historical accuracy of "Texas History Movies" Jones had a staff of historians go through every cartoon in the book over a period of four years. "We found very, very few inaccuracies historically. In approximately 1,800 cartoons, there were less than 50 that even had a misspelled word.

"There's 350 years of history there and the costumes of every period are accurate, whether it's LaSalle who came over as an explorer or Jean Lafitte the pirate. They did a magnificent job researching this."

Author advises mothers to stop constant guilt feelings

By CAROLINE DREWES
Hearst News Service

"You may remember me," Lynn Caine begins her tale, "the shattered widow, coping with the problems of earning a living and with the raising of two children whose needs I could not meet."

Indeed, one remembers Caine, a deeply wounded, desperately honest woman who found she was able to fight with all the means she could muster. She became memorable to a lot of people 11 years ago when she wrote an eloquent book called "Widow," chronicling her journey through grief and fear and anger after her world fell apart. It was one of the first books of its genre, and "Widow" made her a mini-celebrity.

In 1978, she wrote a second book, "Lifelines," about how she emerged from the loneliness and despair engendered not only by her emotional and financial troubles, but by her success. And now Caine has a new book on a subject that will touch a chord in the heart of every mother who reads it. Just published by Arbor House, it is called — and the capital letters are by design — "WHAT DID I DO WRONG?" It is obviously about mothers, children, guilt. Stop blaming yourself, is the gist of Caine's advice. The book is based on Caine's own life, on her experiences with two troubled children who have turned out splendidly, and on interviews with women and researchers all over the country.

TODAY, MORE THAN a decade after "Widow," Caine looks a little bit older and a lot more tranquil, her fine-boned, exotic face all points and ovals, skin still chalk-white, hair still black as ink. She is a small woman with a low voice. The trembling quality once noticeable is gone; only occasionally is she desperate these days, although she acknowledges that "Life is very scary. Many a night I wake up in sheer terror, thinking to myself 'What if?' "

The new book asks the universal question: "What is every mother afraid of?" and Caine answers it.

"That her kids will turn out to be no good and that it will be all her fault. I was afraid that the mistakes I had made in raising my children would damage them for life. My son was flunking out of high school, my daughter was searching for substitute mothers. Though I had done the best I was capable of doing, I blamed myself for their actions and asked myself 'What did I do wrong?' "

"Motherhood is a bum rap," she says. "Mom is America's punching bag. Society has told us ever since Philip Wylie attacked mothers 40 years ago in 'Generation of Vipers' that we are guilty for almost everything wrong with the American family. And we believe it. I lay a lot of blame at the feet of child experts who give conflicting advice, set impossible standards and reinforce negative feelings. I think the average mother is the best expert on her child, and I wish women would trust themselves."

CAINE NOTES THAT during her research she seldom met a guilty father.

"Somehow, they seemed insulated by the distance they managed to achieve from most of their children's problems."

The writer talks about anger.

"It's wonderful when you can make immediate contact with rage. I try to be more aware because my instinct is to stifle it, a hangover of 'it's unfeminine to be angry.' Guilt is an allowable emotion for women. Anger isn't. A woman angry is either a bitch or hysterical. Anger in a man seems to mean power.

"Guilt is a mask for other unallowable emotions. The fact is that there is a place for anger in mothers. Being angry is part of being human. And being angry with children doesn't destroy them. Mothers can have rousing battles with their kids and work things out."

Caine agrees with the friend who tells her, "The world is an irrational and insecure place. It causes us to look for ways to assign guilt. If you can point fingers at guilt, you are finding ways to impose order. Everybody is very quick to assign guilt to other mothers. If we were less judgmental of other mothers, we could be more forgiving of ourselves. We're all suffering from Victorian hangovers: If we're not patient and kind and loving all the time, if we're not what we are supposed to be, we're monsters."

CAINE CONCLUDES: "In this mother-blaming culture, it is not mother who is primarily to blame for what her children become — or what becomes of her children. She is a major element in their lives, but she is not the only one. Other elements exist within the children themselves. We still don't know very much about these secret ingredients. We don't know why some children rise above their environment to become superkids, or why others distance themselves from decent, caring parents to become antisocial and destructive. I know really bad mothers who have good kids."

She says that what she needed and didn't have during her children's difficult growing up was a network of mothers in the same position.

"Don't suffer in silence," she urges. "Talk to other mothers. Chances are they are feeling the same way you do. Join a mothers group. And if there isn't one available, start one."

Seven years ago, deciding she was not making enough money to support her family, Caine departed her job with a New York publishing house and struck out on her own. Likewise, deciding that she needed to deal with anxiety "in a healthy way," she also cured herself of an addiction to Valium, acquired during the years after her husband died of cancer. Typically, she did this "cold turkey," which meant going without sleep for two brutal weeks.

A SURVIVOR, TODAY she writes, teaches, lectures widely on women's issues, exercises her wit, dispenses wisdom and is co-director of New Images for Widows, a nonprofit organization. And her children are fine.

"Maybe somewhere in my heart or mind, I have had a blueprint for what my kids were supposed to be, and perhaps they haven't turned out the way I thought they would. They've turned out to be real people, their own selves, not the products of my imaginings. I am so happy with them as they are."

Common sense helps in parenting

Hearst News Service

Lynn Caine says that in her crash course among the experts she picked up several common themes:

— Self-indulgence and feelings of omnipotence are expressed in the question, "What did I do wrong?"

— Women do not instinctively or automatically know how to take on the role of motherhood. Mothering is learned.

— It is a given that, at times, mothers do not like their children.

— It is not a given that mothers and children should necessarily love each other.

— Nearly all mothers are afraid that, through ignorance or rage, they will do something to damage their children.

— There aren't any experts in child development, only people talking from their own bias or their own world view.

— Most mothers do the best they are capable of doing at the time.

— You have every right and reason to trust your feelings. No one knows your child as well as you do.

— Self-sacrifice is a one-way deal.

— Guilt, when not overelaborated or used as a screen for less acceptable emotions, is a positive and necessary emotion, "the guardian of our goodness."

"Feel guilt, by all means," advises Caine. "Recognize it. Talk about it. And realize that your guilt has little, if any, basis in reality. If none, get rid of it. If some, make reparation."

Stepmothers often have parenting problems

Associated Press

The stepfamily may eventually become the dominant form of the American family, but for many new stepmothers the honeymoon is over when they face the reality of their husband's children.

One out of every two American marriages ends in divorce, according to an article in the June issue of Cosmopolitan, and more than half a million new stepfamilies are formed every year.

"Many of the things you endure as a new stepparent have little to do with you personally," said psychologist Bonnie Maslin, coauthor of "Loving Men for All the Right Reasons." "You're really a blank screen on which the child projects conflicts and problems he is experiencing vis-a-vis the divorce."

She told of a recently remarried father who, in his new wife's presence, asked his daughter to set the dinner table. She set the table with two places.

The stepchild also may be torn by the feeling that to like his stepmother is to be disloyal to his real mother.

"Helping him understand that he can love both parents and still be loyal to both is terribly important," Maslin said.

Jeannette Lofas, founder and executive directed of the Stepfamily Foundation Inc., a New York counseling center, was a stepchild herself who now has four stepdaughters of her own.

"The more I would step back and let my stepdaughters be with their dad," she said, "the more they would want my presence."

The presence of stepchildren means a new wife must deal with her husband's ex-wife. "When children are involved," Maslin said, "divorce doesn't terminate the relationship."

The ex-wife is a "living reminder to the new stepmother of a previous life, a previous marriage, a previous family," said Aphrodite Clamar, psychologist and stepmother. "She appears everywhere in the new family, especially in the children's behavior, dress, personalities and general appearance." She also may try to drive a wedge between stepmother and children.

"As children get older, they recognize that as divisive behavior and dislike it," said Lois Meredith, a Gestalt therapist and stepmother of five. "At first, though, it makes their loyalty conflict more pronounced."

DEAR ABBY

Some offended by woman's hairy legs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old woman who prefers not to shave her legs or underarms. My hair is naturally quite dark and plentiful — too plentiful to maintain every two days. I find shaving a nuisance and uncomfortable.

My problem? Non-acceptance at public and private swim centers and exercise clubs. I was asked to (a) cover my legs with tights; (b) wear shorts with leg-warmers; (c) wear slacks; (d) resign from a swim class. So far, I have done none of the above.

Isn't this a form of sex discrimination? Or am I living in a geographical area that is out of step with the rest of the nation?

I would like to hear how other women handle this sort of public insult. — RAPUNZEL LEGS IN EVERETT, WASH.

DEAR RAPUNZEL LEGS: They're your legs, and if you want to braid the hair or stuff it into a snood, it's your choice.

Since no man would be asked to hide his hairy legs from public view, I agree, it is indeed a case of sex discrimination. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: On Mother's Day, you reprinted a prayer the Jews recite on Yom Kippur to honor the memory of a deceased mother. It was a most poignant one for me; it was my wife's birthday, my parents' anniversary, and the first anniversary of my mother's death.

As I lit the Yarzeit candle and said Kaddish, I looked up at my mother's picture on the wall and recalled what you have said so many times: "Show love to your parents; it's later than you think."

I was good to my mother. I told her and showed her by my actions that I loved and appreciated her. But, Abby, I could have done even more.

When I see my young son, so cute and mischievous, I realize how my mother must have loved me as a toddler, even as I love my son. She once said, "You will never really appreciate your parents until you are one." Now I know she was right, but there is no way to let my mother know.

She died a slow, painful death caused by lung cancer. A heavy smoker all her adult life, she knew the risks, but was unable to break the habit. It broke her. And it broke my heart.

Please keep plugging away at the two points you mention periodically: Don't smoke — it'll kill you; and love thy mother and father. When they die, they're gone forever. — M. IN MIDLOTHIAN, VA.

Youngster's game aims at compromise

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Michelle Alexander, 9, has created a board game she calls "Give Peace a Chance" for a third-grade class project at her school for gifted children in Fresno.

The game is weighted toward compromise by superpowers, with 20 points going to the country that declares itself a nuclear-free zone.

Two players roll dice to move their pieces, carrying flags of the United States or Soviet Union, around the edge of a board divided into eight spaces. At the center is a world map to remind players of the fate they hold.

"I invented this game to stop war," Michelle wrote in a paper explaining her project. "The object is to get the most points, hopefully by compromising and making your country a nuclear-free zone. This means the children of the world will be able to grow up."

House committee calls for tougher banking rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the House Banking Committee, saying some independent banks aren't really independent, is calling for tougher federal rules governing informal bank chains.

Dozens of supposedly independent banks are actually part of chains that evade interstate banking rules by never formally joining together, according to a study released Sunday by the panel.

"What may appear as a small, hometown bank, may actually be a member of a large, interstate bank chain," the study said.

Rep. Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the banking panel, said the recent collapse of the Butcher family banks in Tennessee and Kentucky pointed out a danger of chain banking.

The study of 6,900 bank ownership changes between 1967 and 1982 found 1,426 independent banks were actually part of 535 chains, 128 of which crossed state lines. The chains were made up of separate banks, often with different names, that had common owners and management.

The Federal Reserve, under the Bank Holding Company Act, regulates corporations that own multiple banks. However, independent banks can be part of informal chains, related through individuals and not corporate ties, and can avoid rules designed to keep the banking system secure, the study said.

"The effect of these interstate chains appears to be a clear circumvention ... of state and federal laws governing interstate banking, market concentration, and participation in commercial activities unrelated to banking," the study said.

The Butcher case "highlights the need for greater disclosure of the ownership linkages and operating relationships among so-called chain banks, and a resultant increase in federal regulations," St Germain said.

When Knoxville's United American Bank failed in 1983, it touched off a chain reaction in the $1.5 billion Butcher financial empire. A total of 22 banks controlled by Jake Butcher or his family eventually were closed, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was left with $700 million in uncollectible debts.

"Because the Butcher brothers chain of approximately 40 loosely-affiliated banks in Tennessee and Kentucky fell within the supervisory authority of seven different federal and state agencies, overall supervisory effectiveness was hampered" and suspect transactions within the chain went unnoticed, the committee said.

Jake Butcher pleaded guilty to bank fraud in April for diverting $20 million of depositors' money to his use. He was sentenced last week to 20 years in prison, the stiffest sentence ever for a person pleading guilty to a white-collar crime, according to the Justice Department.

Hotel owners, striking workers schedule own negotiating session

NEW YORK (AP) — Hotel owners and striking workers scheduled their own negotiating session in an effort to end the 10-day-old walkout after both sides declined Mayor Edward I. Koch's invitation to bargain at Gracie Manion.

Union chief Vito Pitta and Albert Formicola, president of the Hotel Association of New York Inc., were to meet today at the New York Athletic Club, said Hank Sheinkopf, spokesman for the Hotel-Motel Trades Council.

The strike against 53 of Manhattan's plushest hotels began June 1 and now involves about 16,000 maids, bellhops, waiters, and other employees.

The union is balking at management's bid for contract concessions to be able to move employees from job to job within a hotel. The owners have declined to meet workers' wage demands.

Shortly after the beginning of the strike, Koch said he would not intervene unless asked to do so by both sides. However, on a Sunday television interview program, he invited both sides to meet in his offices.

Koch may have been prompted by a warning Saturday from the head of the New York State Mediation Board, Monsignor James A. Healy, that if the strike is not settled by Tuesday, he would appoint a five-member panel to hear the issues.

The panel would have authority to subpoena witnesses and take testimony and evidence for a report that the chairman could make public.

"We're monitoring the negotiations and we are going to keep the pressure on until there's a settlement," Healy said.

Koch, appearing on WCBS-TV's "Newsmakers" program, said he had sent telegrams to Formicola and Pitta saying: "Don't wait until Tuesday. Come to Gracie Mansion at 4 (o'clock). I'll serve the coffee and sandwiches and why don't the two of you sit down and try and resolve your differences."

Formicola, contacted by telephone, said, "We don't need Gracie Mansion at this point. We left on a very, very amicable basis Friday" when negotiators met for three hours.

The union also declined the invitation, said Sheinkopf.

Gasoline prices show four-month increase

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices, which have risen steadily for four months, will continue the trend because of increased summer driving and new federal lead-content regulations, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg predicts.

The average price of all grades of gasoline stood at slightly more than $1.23 last week, up nearly half a cent from the last survey May 24, according to Lundberg's tally of 17,500 service stations nationwide.

At self-serve stations, the average price of regular leaded gasoline was nearly $1.12, while regular unleaded sold for almost $1.20 and premium unleaded retailed for just over $1.31, Lundberg said Sunday.

In the May 10 survey, overall gasoline prices went up .78 of a cent. The May 24 survey showed an increase of .43 of a cent, and the survey released Sunday showed an increase of .48 of a cent.

This time last year, the average price of all grades of gasoline was less than $1.21, Lundberg said.

Besides increased fuel demands for summer vacation driving, Lundberg said a federal law requiring less lead in leaded gasolines will continue the upward price trends. On July 1, the amount of lead in leaded gasolines must be reduced from 1.1 grams per gallon to .5 grams per gallon as the federal Environmental Protection Agency attempts to reduce the amount of lead in the air.

Once pilots' friend, United Airlines chairman now their foe

CHICAGO (AP) — In the friendly skies of United, Richard J. Ferris once was known as the pilots' pal. He attended union meetings, earned his wings and wooed his workers with personal charm.

John LeRoy, a spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association, remembers the enthusiasm well. He recalls a meeting at which a pilot, a Vietnam veteran, said of the chairman of United Airlines: "'I'd go back to Vietnam with him.'"

"He really had the pilots' hearts," said LeRoy, a United captain whose father also flew for the airline.

Pilots say Ferris, who had a reputation as a man of his word, persuaded them to fly more hours and delay pay raises, among other things, to meet the challenges of upstart competitors following airline deregulation.

The pilots were not alone in their admiration. United not only posted a healthy profit in 1984, but a business magazine rated Ferris the best investment for shareholders among 10 chief executives.

Richard J. Ferris

But now with a strike by 5,000 pilots its fourth week, the pilots' good will has all but vanished, United is losing millions, and the 48-year-old Ferris is facing what may be the most turbulent time of his career.

"This is certainly a supreme test for him," said Alfred Norling, an analyst with Kidder Peabody & Co. Inc. in New York. "He certainly is being watched, probably with growing respect on the part of airline people."

In the strikers' view, Ferris is a double-crosser who said he wanted to make United pilots the highest paid in the industry, then refused to share the wealth after they made sacrifices to help the company.

When Ferris asked for more cuts last year when the company posted a $564 million operating profit, "his shining image began to tarnish," LeRoy said. Net profit was $258.9 million.

When he refused to negotiate a back-to-work agreement, promising instead to rebuild the airline with strikebreakers and new employees, he was accused of union busting.

Said LeRoy: "He was a friend of the pilots as long as we were making deep concessions."

Ferris' admirers and United spokesmen don't see it the same way. The company says it is keeping its word — to pilots who crossed the picket lines and were promised better assignments. As for ALPA's concern for 500 pilot trainees who refused to work, United says that's not the union's business.

"This corporation's word, this corporation's promise to its people that it would not forsake them is worth an awful lot," Ferris said a few days after the talks over returning to work broke down.

He's a man who "does stand by his word," said James Guyette, a senior vice president at United. "He's what one would call a tough-minded manager. He's goal oriented, hard driving, very ethical."

"He's determined. He has opinions of how things should run and how things should operate," said Hal Binyon, a longtime friend who attended Cornell University with Ferris and now owns a Chicago restaurant.

The pilots' strike is not Ferris' first labor confrontation. In 1979, there was a 58-day machinists' walkout. After it was over, Ferris said he'd work to find a system to prevent further strikes.

GM buy will have little impact on Hughes Aircraft employees

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — General Motors and union officials has said that the company's acquisition of Hughes Aircraft will have little if any impact in the near term on the labor agreements or the company-paid benefit plans covering the 74,000 union and non-union workers at Hughes.

GM officials also said the wage and benefit programs for the 24,000 employees of the existing GM operations, which are being combined with Hughes to form a new, independent GM subsidiary, will not be altered either.

GM spokesman Don Postma said Thursday that the auto maker does not plan to transfer workers between Hughes and GM's existing defense and electronics operations, and so the current benefit plans covering both Hughes and GM employees will remain intact.

Union leaders representing Hughes workers also said the $5.2 billion acquisition, announced Wednesday, would not affect either their labor agreements with Hughes or their dealings with management.

"I don't anticipate any major changes in the relationship between the company and the union," said James Whitten, business representative for Local 933 of the International Association of Machinists at Hughes' Tuscon, Ariz., missile plant.

A Hughes spokesman agreed, saying that "Our understanding is that we will be part of a separate subsidiary from the rest of GM, and so I don't think we will have to renegotiate our contracts with the unions."

The spokesman noted that the company's contracts with the Machinists in Tuscon and with Local 1553 of the Electronic and Space Technicians Union, representing more than 12,000 Hughes workers in the Los Angeles area, include "successor" agreements requiring any company that buys Hughes to honor the company's existing labor accords.

But since only about 18 percent of Hughes' work force is unionized, the acquisition still could provide an opening for the United Auto Workers union, which represents almost all of GM's blue-collar workers, to begin an organizing push at Hughes.

With members at Rockwell International, McDonnell Douglas, General Dynamics and LTV, the UAW already has a significant presence in both the aerospace and defense industries, and is looking to further diversify away from its eroding base in the auto sector.

"I'm certain that the (UAW's) GM Department, Organizing Department, and Region 6" — the union's Los Angeles-based regional office handling the Western United States — "are going to be desirous of getting Hughes organized," said Carlton Horner, a UAW organizing coordinator who helped gain union representation for workers at many GM plants in the South and who is now involved in defense and aerospace organizing for the union.

"I'm certain they are going to be looking at the facilities involved in this merger" to find organizing opportunities, he added. "Since we have 99.9 percent of GM organized, I'm sure we will want to keep it that way."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Brokerage firms' 'remote checking' could prompt SEC investigations

By BILL DOYLE

Q. All my stocks and bonds are held by a brokerage firm. That firm collects my dividends and interest and then sends checks to me. However, the brokerage firm's checks are written on an account at a bank thousands of miles away from my home. Obviously, the brokerage enjoys the float. Is this practice allowed?

Isn't this the same as the E. F. Hutton & Co. case when that brokerage kited checks? Should I complain to the Securities and Exchange Commission?

A. It's not exactly the same as the massive fraud case in which Hutton was caught and penalized for a patently fraudulent scheme of writing checks for more money than it had on deposit in hundreds of banks. But there is some similarity.

Doyle

You're being victimized by a scam known as "remote checking." The term is pretty much self-explanatory. Brokerage firms using that technique send customers checks drawn on banks far from the customers' homes.

Between the time such a check is written, mailed, deposited by the customer and sent to the bank on which it was written to be cleared, the brokerage firm certainly does "enjoy the float."

The brokerage house has the use of the money until the check clears, which might take weeks. The brokerage can put the money to work earning interest and fatten its profits.

Meanwhile, as the customer, the bank at which you deposit the check probably puts a hold on the check. You're deprived of the use of the money during the hold period. Worse yet, some banks don't even pay interest on the money behind checks that are on hold.

From time to time, the SEC has issued warnings to the brokerage fraternity not to use remote checking. But letters such as yours indicate some brokerages are still getting away with that ploy.

In your shoes, I would gripe to the SEC. Let's see if that federal agency lives up to its reputation of being the hard-nosed cop on the securities beat.

* * *

Q. My broker never sends me checks for the dividends on the stock I own, unless I inquire. He "forgets." Sometimes, my checks don't arrive until six weeks after the dividends are paid.

Isn't the brokerage firm required to pay interest on my money until it is sent to me? Also, how can I have the dividend sent directly to me?

A. It's clear you have your stock in "street name" — registered in the brokerage firm's name. Because of that, the company in which you own stock sends the dividends to the brokerage, which credits the money to your account. Brokerage firms are not required to pay interest on money they hold as "free credit balances" in customers' accounts. Some do. Most don't. It's a constant amazement to me that many people have free credit balances earning absolutely nothing.

If you want your money to earn something while it is being held by a brokerage house, you should instruct your broker to open a money market mutual fund for you and put your money there — where it will accumulate dividends.

If you want your dividends forwarded to you as soon as they are received, order your broker to have that done automatically. However, many brokerage firms refuse to forward customers' dividends and interest more frequently than once a month. There's not much you can do about that other than transfer your account to a different brokerage house. But you can have the dividends on your stock sent directly to you. Simply tell the broker to have your stock registered in your name. The certificate will be delivered to you and all future dividend checks will arrive by mail from the company's dividend paying agent.

* * *

Q. Is the brokerage firm with which we leave our stocks allowed to put our stocks out on loans?

A. Yes, if you have signed a hypothecation agreement. Otherwise, no. You must sign such an agreement when you have a margin account, through which you put up only part of the cost of stocks you buy and borrow the rest through the brokerage house.

Many people sign hypothecation agreements, without realizing it, when they open brokerage accounts — even whey they have no intention of buying on margin.

Q. You wrote, "A stock dividend and a stock split are the same thing as far as investors are concerned." My experience shows this to be untrue.

When a $100 stock I owned was split two for one, I became the owner of twice as many shares, with a new value on the stock exchange of $50 per share. However, when a stock I owned paid a 10 percent stock dividend, I received one additional share for every 10 shares I owned. But the value of the shares did not drop 10 percent on the exchange. Therefore, a split is no gain; a stock dividend is a gain. True or false?

A. False, based on your reasoning.

If you check that second stock's quotations on its ex-dividend date, you will see that its market price was automatically adjusted downward 10 percent at the opening of trading that day to reflect the stock dividend. That adjustment takes place for a stock dividend, just as it does for a cash dividend. It also happens in the case of a stock split.

That stock's price could very well have risen before and-or after the ex-dividend adjustment. By the time you received your certificate for additional shares, its price could be back up to where it was at the time the dividend was declared.

Q. Shouldn't I be able to get a prospectus of a new unit investment trust, before I place an order to buy?

A. Yes. Even though sponsors of unit investment trusts bring out new "series" in rapid-fire order — sometimes two or more in the same week — they also make bulk deliveries of the prospectus to brokers handling the sale.

Reagan's tax plan may change many rules of the investing game

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — No matter how much they may welcome the idea, Americans with money to manage are faced with some baffling problems posed by President Reagan's tax-reform plan.

The proposal seeks to overhaul an enormous system of rules, regulations and exceptions that is understood only by tax professionals and amateur aficionados who take a kind of perverse enjoyment in playing financial chess with the government.

But if it is enacted, it would have the effect of changing the layout of the board, and significantly altering the powers of many of the individual pieces, in the midst of the game.

What's more, people trying to plot financial strategies today have no way of knowing which, if any, of the changes the president proposes will ever become law.

"Passage of tax reform similar to the president's proposals now looks like a 'gimme' for some time later this year or in early 1986, after changes and compromises along the way but with similar contours," says Allen Sinai, economist at the Wall Street firm of Shearson Lehman Bros.

"We're going to have parts of it," asserts Neil Alexander, a Los Angeles financial planner.

Most students of the subject agree that it would be ill-advised to change your money-management strategies drastically now, basing your actions simply on the prospective changes Reagan has outlined. At the same time, they do not necessarily advocate a do-nothing approach either.

They suggest doing a thorough evaluation, either on your own or with a professional adviser, of what tax reform could mean to your financial strategies and goals — and paying close attention to the progress of action on it by Congress in the months ahead.

An executive at one mutual-fund management firm said recently that his company's money managers weren't doing any significant reshaping of their portfolios simply because of the Reagan proposal. However, he added, the firm's economist was hard at work on a detailed study of the plan's potential effects.

While public attention is focused on tax questions, experts say, it may be rewarding to look for investments that have strong economic merits.

If, for example, you have the means and desire to buy a second or vacation home for personal enjoyment rather than tax benefits, advisers say it might be worth your while to investigate properties on the market now. In some resort areas, prices of such homes may have fallen significantly already because of the Reagan plan's proposed curbs on tax breaks for such properties.

In cases such as this, Alexander says, the period of debate over changing the tax system may provide a "window of opportunity" for enterprising, venturesome investors.

Because the Reagan plan would allow unlimited deductions for interest paid on mortgages for primary residences, while putting a cap on other interest deductions, some people have already begun looking into refinancing their homes to pay off other debts.

Before you rush into this kind of maneuver, experts say you should consider several factors — including the difference between the interest rate on a new mortgage and the rate on your old one. A dollar saved on taxes is obviously not worth two spent on extra after-tax interest costs.

But if the math works out, advisers suggest, it also might pay not to tarry too long in considering such a switch.

Nation's Bob Josephs now bobbing along together

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Joseph of Napoleon, Ohio, who never before knew anyone else with his name, now has met 35 Roberts, one Roberta and two "Future Bob" Josephs.

They met Sunday in Brooklyn's Prospect Park at the first Bob Joseph picnic, where they ran a one-mile Bob-A-Thon, bobbed for apples, ate shish-ka-Bob, staged a battle of the Bobs in volleyball, and sang a theme song with lyrics by — who else? — Bob Joseph.

Roberta Joseph of Framingham, Mass., and New York Bob helped lead the songfest, highlighted by "I Want to Be Bobby's Girl," and the theme, sung to the tune of the Beach Boys' "Barbara Ann":

"Went to a picnic that had a special name,
"Found everybody there had all the same.
"Oh, Bob Joseph, Bob, Bob, Bob,
"Bob, Bob, Bob, Bob, Bob, Bob."

The youngest Bob Joseph, 3½, came with his father, Bob, 36, and his grandfather, Bob, 62, all from Hampton Bays.

The oldest Bob, 71, an insurance salesman from East Meadow, said he used to get the mail of another Bob Joseph, but that Bob didn't show up at the picnic.

Much of the afternoon was taken up with introductions, "Hi, Bob," being the most common. Then came the "Bobbed" humor, and some soul-searching on the importance of being Bob.

"You look a little young to be a Bob Joseph," Bob of Grand Blanc, Mich., told one of two Staten Island Bobs on hand, to the amusement of six or so Bobs within earshot.

Bob Joseph of Anaheim, Calif., was unable to attend, but sent a photograph and a "Hi, Bob" cassette tape that was played to general amusement.

Bob-day was organized by Robert Thomas Joseph of Brooklyn, a senior vice president with William Esty Advertising, who conceived of the idea after a business associate was unable to telephone him one weekend.

"The information operator told me there were seven Bob Josephs in Brooklyn, and they all had unlisted numbers," said the associate, Chuck Hyman, who was present as an "honorary Bob." "I called Bob the next Monday and told him that everybody named Bob Joseph must be crazy."

Brooklyn Bob said he sponsored the picnic for $1,000 "because I wanted to make us all famous. To help our business. And it's working."

The Bobs wore blue T-shirts bearing their names and tags with their home states. Their spouses and non-Bob children wore tan "Friends of Bob" shirts and the crew serving Bob-a-que wore red "I Wish I were Bob Joseph" shirts.

Judi Joseph of Queens and Alice Joseph of Chicago, both pregnant with "future Bobs," wore T-shirts that proclaimed their expectations, although they said they might balk at passing the name to their offspring.

"Today convinced me that there are too many Bob Josephs. And Roberta is definitely out," said Chicago Bob's wife, Alice. "It's confusing enough around the house now."

At the close of the day, the group elected the Bob from farthest away — Alba, Okla. — to run the newly created "Bob Joseph Society for the Discovery and Advancement of Bob Josephs Everywhere," and to organize next year's picnic.

"It'll be in Alba or Oklahoma City," he said. "We're looking for 100 Bob Josephs. We can't go backwards.",

One of the last Bobs to arrive drove up in a police car with his wife, Lucille, and their two daughters.

"The cab drove us to the park at 110 mph and we were in a state of shock," Lucille said. "So we just asked him to let us out and found a policeman to bring us here."

The policeman had no trouble finding the gathering, held right next to a parked van emblazoned: "Bob Joseph Inc., Electrical Contracting, Edison, N.J."

Central American aid, budget take center stage in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress continues its year-long struggle over the administration's Central America policy, as the House votes this week on a plan to provide so-called non-lethal aid to the CIA-trained Contras battling the Nicaraguan government.

The House rejected one such plan earlier. Many Democrats, however, want to be on record in favor of some type of aid, and approval of a revised proposal is given a good chance, with a vote expected Tuesday or Wednesday.

House GOP Leader Robert Michel will offer a $27 million plan to provide "nonlethal" aid. There will be several Democratic alternatives, including one to cut the amount to $14 million and direct much of the money to refugees.

By a 55-42 vote, the Senate approved a $38 million aid plan Friday, which calls for spending $14 million now and $24 million later to provide "non-lethal" assistance to the rebels.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn, said Sunday on ABC television's "This Week With David Brinkley" that terms of the measure enable senators to tell pro-Contra constituents they voted for the money while telling opponents of deeper involvement they opposed military aid.

"It's a very nice policy for domestic political consumption here at home" said Dodd, an opponent of the measure. He said, however, that U.S. policy is failing and the measure amounted to "the political equivalent of rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said on the same program the measure was " a very straightforward bipartisan resolution to assist the Contras."

Lugar said he could not "imagine any set of circumstances" under which the United States would invade Nicaragua. But he drew a distinction between an invasion and "a surgical strike," which he would not rule out if the Sandinista government stockpiled sophisticated Soviet weapons.

Meanwhile, Social Security and President Reagan's defense buildup are expected to be the main points of dispute as House and Senate negotiators compromise talks Tuesday on a budget for the 1986 fiscal year.

Both houses have approved budgets designed to trim the deficit by $56 billion next year, but they differ sharply on how to acheive those savings.

The plan approved by the Republican-controlled Senate proposes a one-year freeze in Social Security benefits and other pension programs. It would permit the defense budget to rise with inflation.

The Democratic-controlled House countered with a plan that safeguards the Social Security increases slated for next year. It provides no inflationary increase in spending authority for the Pentagon, although actual outlays would still rise by $15 billion.

The Senate plan terminates more than a dozen domestic programs. The House blueprint is more generous toward programs for the needy.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said late last week he is "pessimistic" about chances for a swift agreement with the House.

Domenici indicated the Senate might be willing to make concessions on defense spending for next year. But he said agreement on a longer-term Pentagon budget would be a problem.

As for Social Security, he said, "I go there assuming that we have to have some kind of savings in the pension programs."

Domenici said savings on Social Security and other pension programs total $33 billion over three years under the Senate bill and are required as "fairness" to complement other elements of the Senate GOP plan that would freeze federal pay and reduce spending elsewhere.

But Democrats view Social Security differently, and the party's leaders, sensing a political issue for the 1986 mid-term elections, have vowed an effort to resist any curtailment.

"I'm bitterly opposed to that and I will hold my ground as far as any cuts in Social Security are concerned," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters even before the House passed its own version of the budget. "I will be adamant."

Center security tightened after fires

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Security has been tightened at the 197th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) following two deliberate fires at the convention center where the group is meeting.

The fires Saturday were confined to waste containers and caused minimal damage, authorities said. One was discovered in a men's restroom near the front entrance of the Indiana Convention Center; the second set off the center's sprinkler system in a dressing room.

The Rev. Arnold Lovell, a Presbyterian minister from South Charleston, W. Va., who assisted in coordinating the assembly's security, said he blames the fires on a news broadcast last week that mentioned the issues of abortion and homosexuality "out of context."

Those topics are only two of the issues the church has been discussing since its assembly began June 4. It will conclude Wednesday.

Virgil E. Griepp, a press officer for the assembly, said one controversial issue the church will debate this week is a personnel directive that allows no discrimination with regard to sexual orientation.

"There is a group that wants those two words (sexual orientation) removed," he said.

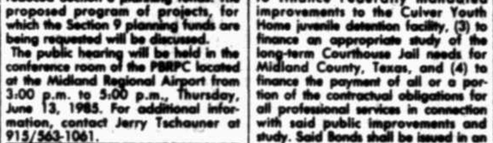

The church's policies do not allow affirmed homosexuals to be ordained to the offices of clergy person, elder or deacon.

Dean H. Phillips, executive director of the convention center, said additional security forces, either police or private, would be be added for the remainder of the assembly.

Those forces were on hand Sunday night as more than 100 protestors organized by the Indianapolis Baptist Temple demonstrated outside the Presbyterian ecumenical service. The Indianapolis church is headed by the Rev. Greg Dixon, a former national officer of the Moral Majority.

Why you should look for a real estate agent before you look for a house.

There are a lot of homes out there. Great ones. Could be great ones. Nowhere near great ones. That's why when you're ready to look, you need the right real estate agent to help you find the right home.

So it's important you choose a real estate company with people you can trust. People who know the neighborhood like the back of their hand. People who offer you professional advice, hard work and support. People who are there for you from start to finish. People who do the job right.

The kind of people you find at Coldwell Banker Real Estate.

We've grown to be America's largest full service real estate company because we have different and better ways to help people find and buy the right home.

We know buying a home is probably the biggest investment you'll make in your life. Just finding the right one is a big job.

But at least now you know where to start.
