Deliberations begin

SAN ANTONIO — An eight-woman, four-man jury began deliberating Wednesday the fate of 11 Branch Davidians accused of ambushing and murdering federal firearms agents. Prosecutor Ray Jahn left the federal court jury with a few final grim words about the killing of four agents at the Waco-area compound of doomsday minister David Koresh. "These individuals died because they made one fatal mistake. They misjudged the zeal and the murderous intent of those who followed 'David Death,' " Jahn said. Earlier, defense lawyer Dan Cogdell clinched his teeth, glared at prosecutors and told jurors the federal officers and scores of Branch Davidians died senselessly because of law enforcement misconduct.

Snow: Not again

Blowing snow snarled airline schedules again Wednesday as the latest in a series of winter storms whistled from the central Plains into New England, causing power outages and traffic accidents. The Federal Aviation Administration ordered airlines to cut arrivals and departures at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport by two-thirds because of blowing snow and poor visibility on the ground, Howard said. She said O'Hare typically handles 100 flights each way per hour.

High living by CIA agent accused of spying was unnoticed for years

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The breakup of the Soviet empire had little effect on Aldrich Hazen Ames. He went right on spying for Russia even after the KGB was gone, the FBI alleges.

"You have probably heard a bit about me by this time," court documents suggest Ames wrote to the Russian agency that replaced the KGB.

The slim, graying CIA official accused of espionage left paychecks uncashed in his office, bought a $540,000 home and a Jaguar with cash and made frequent trips overseas — hardly the lifestyle of a typical civil servant. But the high-rolling habits of the CIA official and his wife apparently went unnoticed for years.

Former Cowboy great Staubach takes snaps for United Way works

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

A football Hall of Famer showed Midlanders one of the qualities that makes him great — his dedication to people and helping others through his work with the United Way.

Former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach impressed more than 650 guests at the United Way of Midland's annual meeting and awards luncheon Thursday with football anecdotes as well as personal triumphs.

The Cowboy great spoke with members of the media before the luncheon and answered questions about his participation with United Way as well as his involvement in sports.

'This is a great organization allowing us to show that internal self . . . it's a spirit of perserverance.'

— Roger Staubach

Staubach said he first became involved with United Way while serving in the U.S. Navy. His involvement grew deeper with the public service announcements (PSAs) he made with the National Football League.

Folks who watch Sunday afternoon or Monday night football are familiar with the United Way PSAs made by professional football players. Staubach said he was one of the first players to be asked to make a United Way PSA, which air during NFL games.

Staubach said he made his first PSA with a 7-year-

Kerrigan dazzles; Harding wobbles

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

HAMAR, Norway — Now it's clear why someone wanted Nancy Kerrigan out of the way.

■ Bonnie Blair skates into record books/1C

By the time she finished an elegant, nearly perfect skate with an electrifying spin Wednesday night, even Tonya Harding couldn't help but applaud a magnificent Olympic performance by a brave rival.

Lillehammer '94

Seven weeks after an attack that Harding's ex-husband admits he planned, Kerrigan skated a splendid technical program Wednesday that entranced a sellout crowd and put her in position for a gold medal on Friday.

Harding, after bungling two jumps and skating tentatively throughout, landed in 10th place, her chance for a medal all but gone. Seated in a VIP booth high above the ice with her coach and her lawyer, Harding stared stonily at Kerrigan's performance, applauding politely.

The showdown, one of the most-anticipated in Olympic history, turned out to be no showdown at all.

"As I stepped out there," Kerrigan said, "I felt it. And I was ready."

Was she ever! Forgotten for the moment was the controversy that has gripped a nation for nearly two months. Gone was any doubt about her guts or grace under pressure.

Kerrigan allowed none of that to intrude this night, her night.

"I guess I've dreamed about it," she said. "But just dreams won't get you here. A lot more than that goes into it."

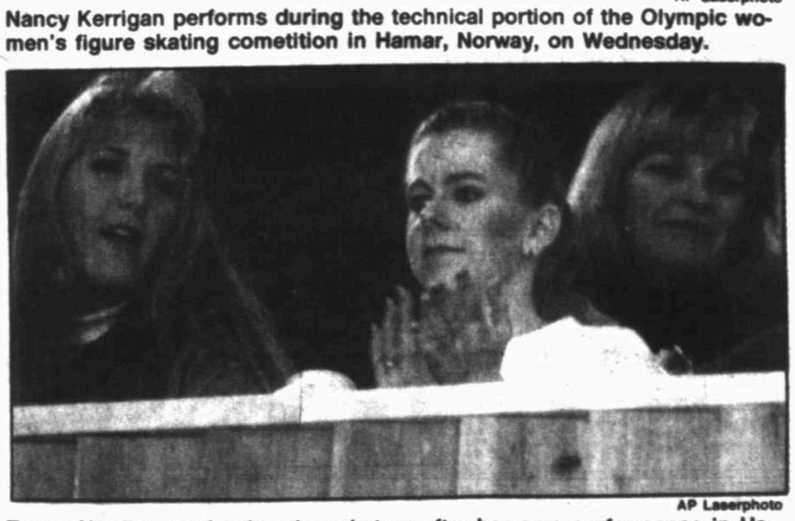

What came out of it was the performance of her life. It was more than enough to finish

Victim's friends cite unallowed evidence in Harrell murder trial

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A confession by a co-defendant not introduced at the recent trial of 18-year-old Ramsey Blake Harrell may have meant the difference between the 12-year sentence for murder and the possibility of the death penalty, according to an Odessa minister and a companion of the victim.

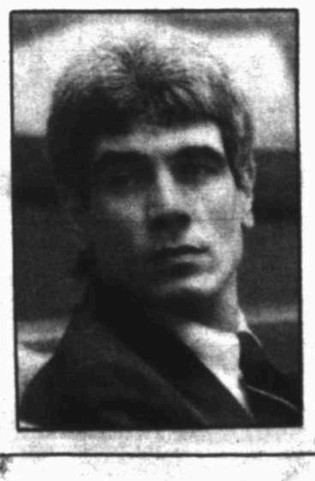

The Rev. Billy Charles Cawley of Prodigal Ministries Community Church said that critical evidence — contrary to what came out at the trial — has caused the uproar in the gay community and not the fact that the victim was homosexual.

The Lesbian/Gay Rights Lobby of Texas has planned a rally at Centennial Plaza on April 9 to protest the sentence handed

Fossil discovery sheds light on man's evolution

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The discovery of pre-human fossils from Java — at 1.8 million years, the oldest ever found outside Africa — suggests that human ancestors lived in Asia much earlier than once believed and raises new questions about our history.

New chemical dating shows a fossilized piece of skull from a hominid called Homo erectus is 800,000 years older than previously believed, geologists C. C. Swisher III and Garniss H. Curtis announced Wednesday.

The finding shows that Homo erectus lived in Africa and Asia at the same time and casts doubt

Bosnian government, Croat forces sign peace accord

By Snjezana Vukic
Associated Press Writer

ZAGREB, Croatia — Under growing diplomatic pressure from the West, the military chiefs of Bosnia's Muslim-led government and their second-strongest foes, Bosnia's Croats, signed a truce Wednesday.

Many truces in Bosnia have collapsed, but the accord between the former allies against Bosnia's Serbs is likely to gain strength from diplomatic efforts to extend across Bosnia a NATO-enforced truce in Sarajevo.

A new note of discord, however, emerged between Russia and the West when Boris Yeltsin lashed out at NATO for threatening air strikes against Russia's traditional allies, the Serbs, without asking Russia first.

The Russian president reiterated his proposal for a summit between Russia, the United States, France, Britain and Germany to end the war. But the United States and Germany were cool to the idea Wednesday, indicating it was premature.

Foreign diplomats consider an end to fighting between Croats and government forces crucial to an overall peace settlement.

The cease-fire, which takes effect at noon (6 a.m. EST) Friday, covers central Bosnia and Mostar and other areas in the south where Muslims and Croats have fought bitterly since their alliance collapsed last April.

"The U.N. hopes and trusts that it will be respected and implemented by both sides, which is essential in this moment," said Yasushi Akashi, head of the U.N. mission in former Yugoslavia. Akashi participated in the four hours of talks that produced the accord.

The agreement is the most precise and serious in a long list of cease-fire accords. Its signing came amid renewed efforts by the United Nations, NATO and especially the United States and Russia to bring peace to Bosnia.

Yeltsin's proposal, announced Tuesday, would build on the Russian initiative last week that persuaded Bosnian Serbs to withdraw heavy weapons from Sarajevo following NATO's ultimatum to do so or face air strikes.

The Russian initiative averted the strikes, and Yeltsin said Wednesday that Russia must not be left out of international security decisions.

Yeltsin, speaking on a holiday honoring the armed forces, said the attempt by NATO "to make a decision about bombing the Sarajevo region without asking Russia caused indignation not only in the leadership of Russia but in all her citizens."

Yeltsin's press secretary, Vyacheslav Kostikov, said some NATO leaders had shown "barely veiled disappointment" that Russian diplomacy made the bombing unnecessary.

The United States and Germany were cool, however, toward Yeltsin's summit proposal.

Asked about the Russian proposal, White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the United States had not made a formal response. She said, "... if that's an appropriate step, we'll certainly take a look at it."

Germany's Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel said such a meeting was "an end goal" after lower-level talks are successfully completed.

Other mediation efforts continued. In Zagreb, Croatia's capital, senior U.N. officials and the international mediators for Bosnia met to discuss further peace moves, but they did not reveal any details.

The session included mediators Lord Owen of the European Union and Thorvald Stoltenberg of the United Nations, Akashi and Kofi Annan, overall head of U.N. peacekeeping operations. American envoy Charles Redman and Russian envoy Vitaly Churkin had been expected to take part but were not present.

The peace plan currently on the table would divide Bosnia between the Muslim-led government, Bosnian Croats and Bosnian Serbs. But the Muslim-led government has rejected the plan as failing to give it enough land.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd reportedly said "the positions are already closer" in the peace talks.

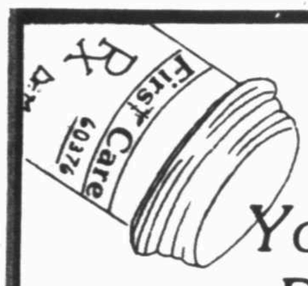

The conservative daily Le Figaro also quoted Hurd on Wednesday as urging the Serbs to give up about one-quarter of the 70 percent of Bosnia they hold in Bosnia.

At least 200,000 people are dead or missing in the fighting that began when Bosnia seceded from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Croats and the government were initially allies against the Serbs when the war began in April 1992, but they later started battling over the 30 percent of Bosnia not controlled by Serbs.

The cease-fire pact was signed Wednesday by Rasim Delic, the Bosnian government commander, and Ante Roso, the Bosnian Croat commander. Significantly, the talks at a U.N. base at Zagreb airport were attended by Gen. Jean Cot, U.N. commander in former Yugoslavia, and Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, commander of U.N. forces in Bosnia.

ANC supporters run de Klerk out of township

By Sahm Venter
Associated Press Writer

POSTDENE, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk lashed out at the African National Congress on Wednesday after young rock-throwing protesters disrupted one of his campaign appearances and forced cancellation of another.

De Klerk was hit in the neck, reportedly with a paper wad, and the South African Press Association said a youth was arrested later for pointing a toy gun at de Klerk's motorcade.

Groups of supporters of de Klerk's National Party later clashed with ANC rivals at the site of the canceled appearance Wednesday night. De Klerk wasn't present, but when a National Party official announced the rally in the Roodepan township was called off, the opposing groups threw rocks at each other and some shots were fired.

Police fired tear gas to separate the groups, and one man seen shooting an automatic pistol was arrested. Police Maj. Johan Hickman said one woman was killed in the clash, but that some people had been questioned but none remained in custody late Wednesday night.

"This is proof to me of one chilling fact: that the ANC leadership has no control whatsoever over its youthful followers," de Klerk told reporters.

He called for the Independent Electoral Commission, a panel overseeing the nation's first all-race election in April, to investigate the disruptions.

An ANC spokesman said the group condemned the disruptions and would discipline any ANC member proven to have taken part.

The scenes Wednesday were similar to several others that have dogged de Klerk as he attempts to campaign in black areas. ANC supporters see de Klerk as a symbol of the apartheid era and reject his claims that the National Party, which implemented apartheid, has changed.

Officials: Bomb set by Egyptian militants wounds 11 on train

CAIRO, Egypt (NYT) — Muslim militants detonated a bomb on a tourist train from Cairo to Aswan Wednesday, slightly wounding six foreigners and five Egyptians.

The bomb, which was left on the luggage rack in the first-class carriage, exploded at 3:00 p.m., about half an hour after the train left the southern provincial capital of Asyut, a militant stronghold 200 miles south of Cairo, an Interior Ministry statement said.

It was the second attack along the same rail line since Saturday, when gunmen belonging to the Islamic Group sprayed a train with automatic gun fire.

Two Germans, two Australians, two New Zealanders and five Egyptians were wounded by the explosion, the ministry said.

The victims were taken by minibus to Cairo after being treated for superficial shrapnel wounds and cuts, said Dr. Samweel Wilson, the director of Abu Tig Hospital.

In a statement faxed to the Cairo office of The New York Times, the Islamic Group, the main militant Muslim organization in Egypt, said it had exploded a time bomb to avenge the death sentences handed down against an army officer and two conscripts charged with plotting to kill President Hosni Mubarak.

"This operation is part of a policy targeting the tourist industry in Egypt, and tourists should leave the country to save their lives, or else they will die in this ongoing struggle," the statement said.

The attack, the fourth on foreigners this month, follows three recent statements from the Islamic Group warning all foreigners and investors to leave Egypt for their own safety.

The militants, undeterred by a government crackdown, have killed three foreign tourists and wounded about two dozen in their drive to topple the government.

STATE

Volatile weather hit South Texas and a cold snap blew into North Texas, but West Texans enjoyed sunny skies and moderate temperatures Wednesday.

Residents of Beeville awoke Wednesday when tornadoes tore apart at least nine mobile homes and destroyed the hangar at Beeville Municipal Airport. Five people were treated for minor injuries.

The twisters struck around 4 a.m. and caused scattered damage to a 12-square-mile area west and south of town.

Later in the day in South Texas, skies became clear to partly cloudy over most of the region. Skies were cloudy and a few showers prevailed over the deep south and along the coast.

Winds were north from 15 to 25 mph with gusts up to 30 mph. Temperatures were in the 50s and 60s.

STAUBACH: Football great speaks in city

old Dallas girl who was having open-heart surgery. Three follow-up spots were created to show the success the girl had made, he said. Those spots showed the girl at her prom, her wedding and the birth of her first child.

He said NFL players joined forces with United Way to "give something back" to the community. Staubach said by endorsing and supporting the United Way, the NFL players, in effect, helped a number of organizations.

"It has been a good marriage between the NFL and the United Way," Staubach said.

He called himself an "old-timer" in the United Way spots, having done one of the first and four altogether.

The former quarterback, who now owns a real estate company in Dallas, said he helps United Way organizations and individual businesses kick off their fund-raising campaigns.

"This is a form of agape giving, where you get nothing in return," Staubach said.

Staubach said he started his own business in 1978 because he wanted to create something and not have to rely on his past. He said he enjoys the challenges of owning and operating a business, calling it "just as challenging as football."

On the question of whether he'll throw his hat into the political ring, he wavered. He said he wants to be "more than just a Cowboy quarterback" but he hasn't considered politics at this point.

But, he said if he feels comfortable with the idea in the future he might consider a career in state politics. But his "gut" would have to tell him if it's the right thing to do.

Staubach was introduced by Tom Wageman, a former Midlander and a friend of Staubach.

Wageman described Staubach as a "Yankee by birth, Texan by choice." He further described him as a man who lifts people with his talent and spirit. But, he said it's been Staubach's "heart" rather than his talent that has endeared him to the public.

He concluded the introduction by saying Staubach was the kind of man "all of us" wants as a friend, a husband, a father and a son.

Welcomed by a long round of applause, Staubach said "it's fun being an old Cowboy."

Staubach said the Cowboys of the '70s, the winningest team of the decade, has been overshadowed by the Cowboys of the '90s because of their back-to-back Super Bowl victories. But, he said he was "come to grips with that."

He told some football anecdotes, including one about Cowboys owner Jerry Jones using him as a good-luck charm by naming him honorary captain at the coin toss before the championship game vs. the San Francisco 49ers.

"I guess I've come a long way ... to being a good-luck charm," he said with a chuckle.

Staubach recalled the five Super Bowls he led the Cowboys to, as well as the two of the five the team won. He spoke of the Cowboys' history of winning and noted "America's team is back and it's fun being a part of that."

He spoke of a poem written by an Indiana student that makes references to an external self, which considers "what's in it for me," and the internal self, which thinks about others in addition to self.

He said he learned the lesson about considering others with the 1971 world championship team. He said the team was falling apart with finger-pointing and no teamwork until one of the players, Mike Ditka, spoke up and told the team to get its act together.

He then turned to topics off the field.

He said people today show a lack of respect to each other, but through the United Way people can show they care.

"This is a great organization allowing us to show that internal self ... it's a spirit of perserverance," Staubach said. "There are always going to be obstacles, you just need to learn how to deal with them."

He recalled a mortar attack he dodged while serving in Vietnam. He said it was scary and stressful, but he got through it. He likened life to a series of mortar attacks.

"It's a long siege — life. But you persevere," Staubach said.

He encouraged Midlanders to continue making the best of their city through their generous contributions to the United Way.

Charity names its 1994 officers

Staff Report

The United Way of Midland's annual meeting and awards luncheon was loaded with recognition of top contributors and the announcement of the new officers.

More than 650 people attended the luncheon that featured former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach as the speaker.

Awards were presented to companies for the per capita gifts given as well as to an outstanding volunteer.

Patricia Q. Garcia of Casa de Amigos was awarded "Communicator of the Year" award for "giving unselfishly to promote the United Way."

During the meeting, 1993 board President James Henry turned over the gavel to the 1994 President K. Michael Conaway. Elected to the board of directors were L.H. "Larry" Bohot, Mary Lou Cassidy, Jerry M. Hilton, Terry O. McCarter, Mike McGregor, Deane H. Stoltz and Modesta Williams.

Re-elected to the board were Joe Bandsma Jr., Ruth S. Bell, William P. Franklin, L.R. "Randy" Howard, Dean L. Lusk, Thomas W. Ortloff and Josie D. Ramirez.

Retiring from the board were Barbara Bauernfeind, Joanie Holt and Jess Parrish.

During the meeting, a video to recap the year was shown. It featured volunteers and the beneficiaries of United Way agencies.

The lead caption of the video stated, "Never give up on anybody ... Miracles happen every day."

One of the verses in the accompanying music stated, "The hero lies in you."

CITE: Evidence was suppressed, friends say

down earlier this month.

Harrell, who will be eligible for parole in three years, shot 48-year-old Tommy Edward Musick in the back of the head four times on April 14. At his trial, Harrell was portrayed by the defense as a terrified teen-ager confined to the back seat of a car and afraid of being attacked by Musick, a homosexual believed to have had AIDS.

A co-defendant, Michael Scott Thomas, awaits trial in connection with the death of the Midland hairdresser.

During Harrell's trial, the prosecution had hoped to show that the murder was part of an intended robbery. Murder during the commission of a robbery is a capital offense, punishable by up to life in prison or the death penalty.

Cawley said that during the trial, he and others were reviewing character witness subpoenas in the district attorney's office, when Jerry Hon, longtime companion of Musick, inadvertently came across a transcript of Thomas' confession. Hon said that the contents refuted key evidence presented at the trial.

"If this statement was allowed to be entered into court, this boy (Harrell) would have been found guilty of capital murder," Hon said. "This will all come out eventually."

Cawley said the reason for the outcry was due to the confession not being allowed as evidence.

"It's never been a gay issue but a legal issue," he added.

Thomas, who awaits being tried for the crime, reportedly gave two confessions.

District Attorney Al Schorre, who prosecuted Harrell, said he could not comment on Thomas' confessions but did say there exists "evidence the homosexual excuse Harrell used was fabricated and only to mitigate his killing."

One of Harrell's defense attorneys, Jim Eubank, said he only saw the first confession, which collaborated Harrell's story.

"My understanding is he (Thomas) gave another confession days later and changed the story for whatever reason," he said. Eubank added that he believes the first confession to be accurate and would have paralleled testimony of Thomas if he had testified.

Harrell's other attorney, Vern Martin, said the confessions would not have been admissible and anything not introduced as evidence would not have affected the outcome.

"We won that case fair and square," he said.

Martin said he saw the second confession, but could not recall the differences. He also said he would respect the privileged information of the confession and not reveal its contents.

Glen Aaron, Thomas' defense attorney, said he could not comment on the confessions pending his trial strategy — which will be substantially different from Harrell's attorneys.

"I think what I could say is that I'm aware of substantially all the facts in both cases and I am not aware of either an intent to rob Mr. Musick or of a homosexual issue in relation to my client," Aaron said.

Prosecutors have expressed concern whether the protest of Harrell's sentence will cause a change of venue in the Thomas case.

"A lot of people think a thousand gay people are going to storm onto Midland. This has been carefully arranged. . . . It's about a peaceful assembly," Cawley said.

Since plans of the rally became public late Tuesday, Cawley has received threats of violence and Hon has received death threats, Cawley said.

DAZZLES: Tonya Harding skates tentatively ahead of world champion Oksana Baiul of Ukraine, who was second, and European champion Surya Bonaly of France, who was third heading into the free skate, worth two-thirds of the total score. Two-time Olympic champion Katarina Witt was sixth.

More than 100 million Americans and another billion viewers around the world were expected to watch. And win or lose Friday night, Kerrigan was every bit a champion on a night that couldn't have been more magical.

The next-to-last skater, she was introduced to the loudest ovation. Dressed in a white chiffon outfit accented with black velvet, she smiled widely at a banner pleading "Marry Me Nancy," hanging inside the 6,000-seat Olympic Amphitheatre.

"I said to myself, 'OK, this is it. This is the Olympics,'" she said.

The bronze medalist at the 1992 Olympics was nearly perfect. She hit everything, from a double flip to dizzying spins. Before she finished, the crowd was clapping and cheering. And when the music stopped, flowers cascaded on the ice and American flags waved in the stands.

Kerrigan beamed. Her coach, Evy Scotvold, leaped in the air, then gave her a bearhug as she came off the ice. The Jan. 6 attack in Detroit and the severely bruised knee seemed to be the furthest thing from their minds. Kerrigan was named to the Olympic team even though she was unable to compete at the national championships.

"This was my goal, to be here," she said. "It would have been great to have the chance to defend my (national) title. I'm so glad I could be here anyway."

A thunderous roar greeted her marks, which included six 5.9s. Seven judges had her first. Kerrigan made their job easy by outskating the field and erasing any notion she would need any sympathy votes.

"I didn't expect anything, really, in the placement," she said. "I expected myself to do what I came here to do, which I did. It's lucky for me it's first."

If anyone in the crowd regarded Harding as a villain, it was not apparent from the cheers and applause she received. Two banners — "Frank Loves You Tonya" and "USA Go For the Gold Tonya" — provided inspiration.

Wearing her trademark gold blades — as close as she is likely to get to gold here — Harding repeatedly pumped her fists as she warmed up. As she stepped on the ice, she folded her hands in prayer and gazed heavenward, but her performance was uninspiring.

Her medal hopes were shattered by the step she took in between her triple lutz-double toe loop combination jump, and by the wobbly landing on a double flip.

Harding, 23, sneezed as marks ranging from 4.8 for technical merit to 5.6 for artistry were flashed on the scoreboard. Then she walked out.

"You can't be perfect every time," Harding said. "I was happy with it."

Now she'll have to be happy without the Olympic title she wanted so dearly and sued to pursue. Harding threatened the U.S. Olympic Committee with a $25 million suit if it tried to stop her from competing here.

Baiul was every bit the ballerina in her rendition of "Swan Lake." She might have been first after superb spins and exquisite footwork. The 16-year-old was first with the British and Ukraine judges, but not satisfied with her performance.

"I could have skated better," was all she would say.

Bonaly, considered an acrobat on ice with little artistry until recently, performed flawlessly. Her jumps, as usual, were huge, including a unique double flip on which she held the sides of her head. Her spins also were smooth, but the presentation was stiff enough that her marks generally were 5.6s and 5.7s.

"With the Kerrigan history, there is no pressure on me and I felt relaxed," she said.

SHEDS: Find alters timeline

on a theory that these hominids left Africa only after the invention of a new type of tool.

"This means that we have to look for new reasons of why Homo erectus got out of Africa," Swisher said.

A report on the finding is to be published Friday in the journal Science.

Swisher and Curtis, specialists in the age-dating of geologic specimens at the Institute of Human Origins in Berkeley, Calif., announced their research results at the national meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which publishes Science.

Clark Howell, an anthropologist at the University of California, Berkeley, said in a commentary in Science that the new date "opens a whole new vista" about pre-human history.

Bernard Wood of the University of Liverpool agreed. "The whole pattern of human evolution is much more complicated" than once thought, Wood said.

Previously it was believed that Homo erectus evolved from earlier pre-humans in Africa and stayed on that continent until the invention, before 1.4 million years ago, of implements called the Acheulean tools. These tools had double edges and were much better than flaked stone used earlier.

"The theory is that this gave Homo erectus a new weapon and enabled him to explore other parts of the world," Swisher said.

Examples of Acheulean tools have been found in Europe and Africa, but none have ever been discovered in Asia. Homo erectus tools found in Asia are of a different design.

This suggests, Swisher said, that some Homo erectus left Africa before the tools were invented and migrated to Asia. After the Acheulean tools were developed in Africa, another group of Homo erectus then migrated to Europe, taking the tools with them.

If the new date for the Asia fossil is confirmed, it suggests "people were on the move out of Africa much earlier than we thought," Philip Rightmire of the State University of New York at Binghamton said in Science.

The fossil dated by Swisher and Curtis was found in Java in 1936. The specimen is called the Mojokerto child because of the location of the find and because it appears to be a skull fragment from a 4- or 5-year-old.

Earlier analysis, based on geologic sediments, placed its age at about 1 million years.

Swisher and Curtis learned that the fossil was uncovered from a volcanic deposit on the bank of a creek.

In an editorial appearing in Wednesday's edition it was stated that Paul McCollum of Odessa was a Republican candidate for the 8th Court of Appeals. That is incorrect. He is a Democrat and faces two challengers in the March 8 Primary.

SPYING: High living was unnoticed emerged of the 52-year-old career intelligence officer who was the son of a CIA spy and who spent nearly his entire adult life with the CIA — the whole time with a "top secret" security clearance.

"This man was not just a spy," President Clinton told reporters on Wednesday. "This is a person who was a 31-year veteran of the CIA. So quite apart from the Russians, this was a very serious offense against the United States of America by one of its citizens."

Court documents and information from associates paint a picture of a man who appeared to make little effort to disguise his taste for the good life and who lived far beyond his $69,843 CIA salary.

A neighbor, William Rhoads, called the Ameses "very, very nice people" and suggested no one in the affluent suburban Arlington, Va., neighborhood paid much attention to whether they were living beyond their means. He said he assumed there was family money.

Intelligence analysts expressed surprise that warning flags hadn't been raised earlier at the CIA. Ames is accused of spying as early as 1985, when he was head of the CIA's Soviet counterintelligence branch.

An FBI tap on his phone shows repeated phone conversations with his wife, Rosario, 41, in which she allegedly urged him to be more careful about some of his practices, an FBI affidavit suggests.

In an October 25, 1993, conversation, she is quoted as expressing concern that he would lose his suitcase on a trip to Bogota, Colombia — a trip that the FBI says was one of the times he sold information to the Russians.

"You're putting the bulk of the stuff in the suitcase, right?" she allegedly asks him. "Sometimes, yeah, but I think I'm going to use the carry-on," is his seemingly casual response. She tells him: "You cannot afford to lose your suitcase."

Then she lectures him, according to the FBI affidavit: "You are going to have to be a little more imaginative ... you always have this envelope with this big hunk, I mean really."

Court documents suggest that the Ames couple also recruited Mrs. Ames' mother, Cecilia, who was in Colombia, to help them transfer funds into a bank there.

The couple kept thousands of dollars in bank accounts in Switzerland, Colombia and Italy, owned two condominium apartments and a farm in Colombia, made $455,000 in credit card purchases since 1985 and paid $29,800 in telephone bills over the past three years.

Rebels, government reach tentative agreements

By John Rice
Associated Press Writer

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico — Rebels and government negotiators reached tentative accords Wednesday on the insurgents' demands for bettering life for impoverished Indians in southern Mexico.

"We have arrived at several fundamental points," said Zapatista rebel leader and spokesman Subcommander Marcos after a third day of peace talks. He said the agreements will have to be approved by the indigenous communities involved.

"The talks are giving their first results," said government negotiator Manuel Camacho Solis. Although "the work has been very complex," the negotiations were moving at a "greater speed than I had hoped," he added.

The speed may be due to flexibility on both sides.

Camacho has expressed willingness to discuss any rebel demands, although only to negotiate on regional problems. And Marcos said Wednesday that the longterm political changes the rebels seek cannot be decided at the talks in San Cristobal.

Marcos said the talks had covered about 25 percent of the issues the guerrillas of the Zapatista National Liberation Army want negotiated before they will disarm.

He said the agreements reached Wednesday dealt with issues of health, housing, education and "respect and dignity" for indigenous people in Mexico. He did not give details.

The Zapatistas seized San Cristobal and other towns in southernmost Chiapas state on Jan. 1, then withdrew into the jungle. The government declared a cease-fire on Jan. 12 after more than 100 people had died. Peace talks began on Monday in a cathedral in this southern town.

Earlier, Marcos asked for allies in seeking political change. He said the rebels alone could not bring greater democracy to a country governed by one party since 1929.

"We have neither the moral authority nor the strength to tell the nation: This is the Mexico that we want," Marcos said. "There are others who do. And we say to them: Take us into account. That this will not be necessary again . . . killing and dying just so they will listen."

He said fair elections are impossible when run by a government so closely identified with a single party — the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

"The central point is . . . democracy, justice and liberty," Marcos said, speaking to Mexican radio reporters.

"What happens is that we can't negotiate that at the table in San Cristobal."

His remarks were the most detailed explanation by Marcos yet about his movement's aims.

Parliament votes to give freedom to Yeltsin's foes

MOSCOW (NYT) — In a sharp rebuke to President Boris Yeltsin, the Russian parliament approved a sweeping amnesty Wednesday that would free those accused of leading the armed insurrection against his government in October.

Yeltsin cannot veto the resolution or legally prevent the release of any of the prisoners covered. Thus Yeltsin's arch-enemies, former Vice President Alexander V. Rutskoi and the speaker of the old Parliament, Ruslan I. Khasbulatov, could be back on the streets of Moscow as early as today.

The vote also brought to an abrupt end the prosecution of 12 men for attempting to overthrow Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in August 1991.

By granting amnesty to Communists and others who tried to overthrow Yeltsin's government, along with scores of others accused of lesser crimes, the Duma, the new parliament's lower house, issued its most direct challenge to the president.

The resolution immediately inflamed political tensions that had been heating up since Yeltsin's opponents won a majority of seats in elections last December.

The move also underscored Yeltsin's political weakness just months after he dissolved the old parliament and began campaigning for a new constitution that would give him broad executive powers.

The 253-67 vote came a day before the president is to deliver a major speech to parliament on the state of the nation.

The fact that the leaders of the October uprising have remained in prison has rankled his opponents in parliament. About 140 people died during the insurrection, which ended when Yeltsin ordered tanks to attack the parliament building and force the surrender of Rutskoi, Khasbulatov and their supporters.

Communists and nationalists in particular have complained that it was Yeltsin who broke the law in the first place by dissolving the old parliament in September.

Amnesty has been fiercely debated in the lower house. Granting amnesty not only frees people many lawmakers still regard as colleagues; it also gives parliament a chance to use one of its few uncontested powers under the new constitution.

Parliamentary leaders proudly insisted after the vote that the lawmakers had the final word on amnesty and even the president's aides conceded that Yeltsin is all but powerless to prevent the release of his enemies.

Treasurer, RRC will offer interest

Contested races for nominations to two seats on the Railroad Commission and for the position of state treasurer will get the attention of voters in the March 8 primary elections.

Railroad Commissioner

Democratic — Two seats are available on the Railroad Commission — the full term now held by James E. "Jim" Nugent and the unexpired term being served by Mary Scott Nabers, who was appointed to the RRC in 1993 following the resignation of Lena Guerrero. The only contested races are on the Democratic ticket.

Nugent, who was appointed to the commission in 1979 by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, is being challenged by Rep. Robert Earley, a Democrat from Portland. Last session in the Legislature, Earley teamed up with Rep. Tom Craddick, a Midland Republican, to enact legislation beneficial to the oil industry. That helped bring him name recognition in the oil patch, where Nugent is respected but not always loved.

The winner of the Nugent-Earley race will face Republican candidate Charles R. Matthews in November's general election.

Nugent's close ties with the trucking industry and his longterm service on the commission will ensure him a hefty turnout at the polls that oil industry spokesman Earley likely will not overcome. Still, we think it's time for change on the RRC and encourage voters to cast their ballots for Robert Earley.

Mary Scott Nabers, widely viewed as an environmental activist when appointed to the commission, has proven much more responsible in balancing environmental concerns against industry and business needs. That sensitivity to business concerns harks back to her time on the Texas Employment Commission, which began in 1984.

Her seat on the commission is being contested by David Young, an Austin bureaucrat. Winner of that race will face GOP candidate Carole Keeton Rylander in November.

Ms. Nabers said her three top concerns for the RRC are to (1) try to gain tax incentives for the industry at the federal or state level, (2) deal with concerns arising from increased use of highways as well as the need for more regulations because of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), and (3) promoting alternative fuels.

We think Ms. Nabers has a logical, clear-eyed view of the energy and transporation needs of Texas and encourage voters to cast ballots for Mary Scott Nabers.

State Treasurer

Democratic — Martha Whitehead, appointed state treasurer in 1993 after the election of Kay Bailey Hutchison to the U.S. Senate, has raised some eyebrows by actively campaigning on a proposal to abolish the treasurer's office by merging it with the comptroller's office and passing a constitutional amendment to that effect. Her proposal may be an unusual way to campaign for election to a state agency post, but it makes good sense.

Ms. Whitehead, who is opposed in the primary by Grady Yarborough, says the state could save three of every four dollars through such a change. That's the kind of innovative approach to government that is needed today. We encourage voters to cast their ballots for Martha Whitehead so that she can continue trying to eliminate her job.

Republican — The Republican ticket also features a candidate making the same proposal as Whitehead — David Hartman. As chairman and CEO of Hartland Bank of Austin and director and investment advisor for Montwood Bank, Hartman is well qualified for this position. He's opposed in the GOP primary by Mike Wolfe, but we believe voters should cast their ballots for Hartman.

Opponents can't make up their minds

Will

WASHINGTON — Opponents of the constitutional amendment that would encourage — no more than that — balanced budgets rely on arguments that devour one another. They say the amendment is an inconsequential gimmick — and they say it would eviscerate government. They say the amendment is unnecessary because Congress can be trusted to act responsibly — and they say Congress cannot be trusted to respect the amendment if it is put into the Constitution.

The wizards in the White House, tightly in the grip of the conceit that the future is to them an open book, say the amendment would force grim choices costing the average Social Security or perhaps Medicare recipient at least $1,000 a year, and they have listed the annual cost of the amendment to each state. Vermont? $418 million. How does the White House know so much about choices the nation would make under a constitutional requirement to aline revenues and outlays?

Besides, another argument made against the amendment is that instead of making grim choices, Congress would make a mockery of the Constitution. This argument, coming from members of Congress incapable of blushing, is: Trust us, not the amendment, to achieve fiscal discipline, because we are so untrustworthy we would treat the amendment as more loophole than bridle. "Emergencies" would be declared promiscuously, programs would be put "off budget," receipts and outlays would be redefined, cost and revenue projections would be cooked — in short, there would be even more of the trickery that now goes on.

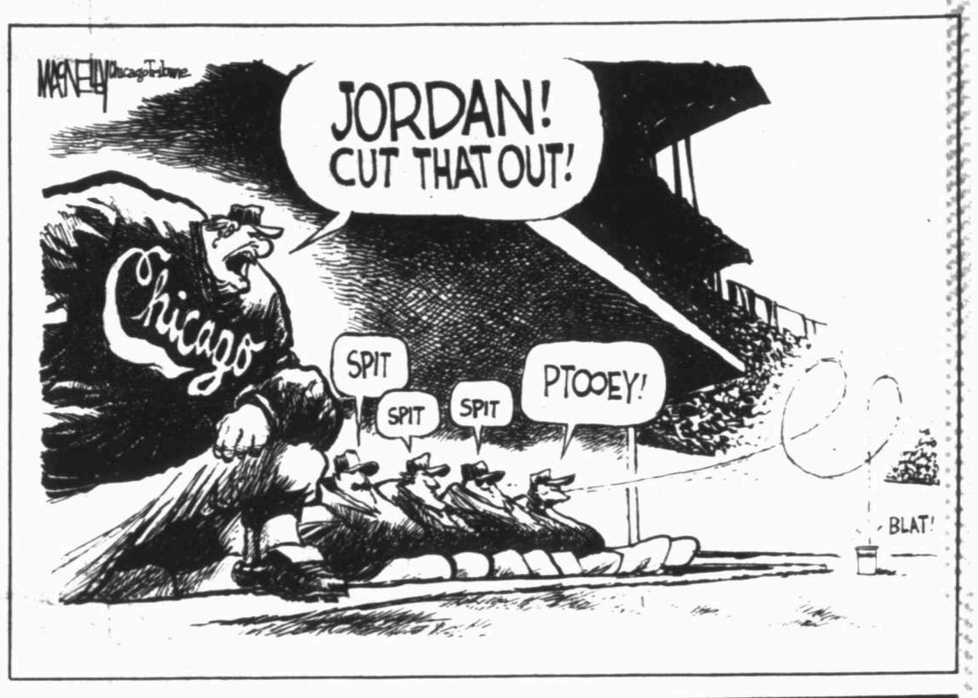

Sen. Carl Levin, a Michigan Democrat opposed to the amendment, notes that it "relies on statutory definitions that can easily be changed," such as the definition of "fiscal year." He warns that Congress might redefine "fiscal year" to mean "eleven months or three years." Oh. Congress is so cynical, don't bother trying to bind it with constitutional fetters? Does Levin have such a low opinion of his colleagues that he thinks it would be easier to fiddle the meaning of "fiscal year" than to get 60 percent of both houses of Congress honestly to authorize a deficit, as the amendment allows?

The word "crisis" has become another classification used so casually that it no longer classifies. Even so, it is peculiar to say (as does Lloyd Cutler, who was counsel to President Carter) that there would be a "constitutional crisis" if an "emergency" — say, many hurricanes and earthquakes — necessitated spending that required a constitutional supermajority to authorize a deficit. If the "emergency" could not catalyze 60 percent of Congress, would it really be much of an emergency?

When the deficit was around $300 billion, critics said the balanced budget requirement was ruinously draconian. Now that the deficit has temporarily dipped below $200 billion, opponents say the requirement is unnecessary. And opponents say that projections of rising deficits by the end of the decade mean that the requirement soon would be ruinously draconian.

Which is to say, the balanced budget amendment can inconvenience legislative careerists but cannot make them virtuous. Which brings us to the source of the real passion against the amendment: deficit spending is, in effect, public financing for the campaigns of incumbents, enabling them to charge only 75 to 85 cents for every dollar of government they dispense. So the vote on the amendment is a referendum on a political style: borrow and borrow, spend and spend, elect and elect.

Reform hovers over Texas Legislature

AUSTIN — Two questions — one obvious, one only whispered — linger in the turbulent political air here by the pink granite dome.

Whither ethics for state officials?

And what to do about tax reform?

What you have there are two legislative issues taking shape, one for 1995 and one for 2001, or later. Guess which one will be decided first?

Correct. Ethics is the front-burner item, even 11 months from the convening of the 74th Legislature. Until then it'll just be so much talk, but talk they will and act they might in 1995.

The repercussions of Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's acquittal are sure to continue this year, forcing lawmakers to ponder how best to police ethics in state government. No committees have been summoned to Austin yet, but you watch.

By the end of the year, the lame-duck 73rd Legislature will have proposals ready to abolish the Public Integrity Unit of the Travis County district attorney's office and move its role to the Texas Ethics Commission. It's the same proposal that was turned down in 1993 and 1991.

But the new 74th Legislature, which convenes in January, will be the one to vote on any proposed changes. With 181 lawmakers — 31 in the Senate and 150 in the House — there will be many approaches to the ethics questions.

Some members with vengeance on their minds might want to end state subsidies of the Public Integrity Unit, but that's no surprise. It happens every two years as part of the budget-writing process. The standard refrain is that the office is run by Democrats for Democrats, and at least half of that statement is true.

Others might want to keep the status quo and even bolster the unit's budget. The logic would be that the unit needs more money to keep it from being outgunned by top-dollar defense lawyers and to do justice to the numerous complaints brought to that office.

By June 1995, after some gnashing of teeth, we'll either have status quo or a whole new ethics ball game. Either way, one hopes there will be a viable mechanism to meaningfully enforce state ethics laws.

Keep in mind that the ethics rules themselves could be amended, for better or worse, in 1995. The Texas Penal Code, where the "ethics laws" can be found, was heavily revised last year, and no major overhaul is scheduled next year, but there's always someone willing to fiddle with the existing definitions and penalties for official misconduct, bribery and other key provisions.

If nothing else, somebody might try to clarify what political activity is proper in state offices. Thank-you notes? Phone calls? Trips of marginal state interest? Where should the lines be drawn?

Naturally there will be a partisan undertow to any tidal wave of ethics "reform." Republicans are waiting to ambush Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle, a Democrat whose term extends through 1996. Earle will be on hand to defend his track record again, but this is likely to be his hardest fight ever. Even his fellow Democrats were disappointed in him, often saying that they expected a full trial for Hutchison, not the implosion of a legal case that took eight months — and lots of taxpayer money — to produce.

It didn't get much ink, but Earle's personal political struggle got more interesting last week. Austin attorney Jim Sawyer, a Democrat, announced that he'll oppose Earle in 1996 because of the way Earle disposed of the Hutchison case.

The tax "reform" question is quite another story. It's certainly less dramatic than the ethics dilemma; this quandary is without the flashy heroes and villains. But it's just as important.

Gov. Ann Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney have renewed their "no-new-taxes" vows for the 1995 session. Rites were performed at the winter meeting of the Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Bullock, however, cautioned the business community to get with it on the tax-reform question or risk consequences. He's not the only one warning that a comprehensive approach must be contemplated, especially with vexing uncertainties about federal financing levels for health and other programs.

But any realist will tell you that tax "reform" won't be tackled in 1995 because of the electioneering under way this year. Tinkering with the franchise tax? Maybe, but wholesale reform — including a serious run at a personal income tax — forget it. See you next century.

Actually, 1997, which is in between elections for most statewide offices, carries a slight possibility for a ways-and-means restructuring. That's if events from under the white dome in Washington don't force the issue even sooner.

ART BUCHWALD

Newspapers provide more than stories

Not long ago I read that the San Jose Mercury News had published its first electronic edition of the paper on a computer. It is predicted by some that the computer will eventually replace newsprint as the bearer of bad news.

Buchwald

As someone who has been working with news on paper for decades, I can only say: "Fie on computers and their information highways. The newspaper as we know it will never die."

Let me make my case. Not a day goes by without us reading bad news. The only thing that keeps us from panicking is that we can hold on to the pages with both hands while we scan the grim headlines. There is no way you can get the same grip on your nerves by clinging to the sides of a computer.

The electronic newspaper is cold when it appears on the screen, while a newspaper is hot, particularly when you start a fire with it.

The advantage of a newspaper is that you don't have to sit down in a particular place and stare at a screen to find out what's happening in the world. Some people read it in bed, others at the breakfast table and still others on the train. It is lightweight and portable and designed to be reader-friendly.

Needless to say a computer is useless for lining a garbage pail or for the bottom of a bird cage. There isn't a machine on the market that you can safely take a swipe at the dog with when he does something bad.

The promoters of electronic news are trying to sell us on the convenience of clicking a key instead of browsing through the pages by hand.

That shows how dumb they really are. The joy of a paper comes from being surprised. Your eye scans the page and suddenly you discover that Sen. Packwood won't release his diaries. Bingo! On page 6 is an item you never dreamed of — Safeway is having a sale on asparagus. You can't enjoy these kind of discoveries electronically.

One of the arguments for computer news is that the reader can talk back to the screen and vent his anger immediately at the editors.

This is a joke. I don't know one editor who pays attention to reader mail, and he sure as heck isn't going to do it reading some guy's electronic bulletin board.

Now here is the other downer when it comes to computers. To read the news on your screen, you will need to be connected to the telephone company by modem, and it is going to charge you an arm and a leg to tell you what Michael Jackson is up to that day. You'll be tied up on the line for hours until you finish the comic strips. This means that you will feel financially pressured to read the publication as fast as possible so that it won't cost you a bundle.

A newspaper charges one price and you get to read everything at your own pace. You can put it down, drive the kids to a soccer game and come back and pick up right where you left off without paying a dime to the phone company.

To sum up, there is no advantage to having a computer replace a printed newspaper. Let the computers do your subscription billing, but leave the delivery of the news to something you can wrap fish in.

McDonald's bans smoking in wholly owned restaurants

WASHINGTON (NYT) — McDonald's Corp. said Wednesday that all its 1,400 wholly owned restaurants would ban smoking immediately. At the same time, the association representing 90,000 chain restaurants backed a bill to end smoking in all restaurants and other buildings used by the public.

The announcements were prompted by the increasing numbers and outspokenness of nonsmokers who have demanded freedom from smoke in restaurants, said Terrie Dort, executive director of the trade association, the National Council of Chain Restaurants.

She said 30,000 of the nation's chain restaurants already banned smoking, and the proposed law "provides a level playing field that our industry needs to reach the 100 percent mark."

Until now, restaurant managers have been afraid to ban smoking for fear that their smoking customers would rebel, giving their competitors an advantage.

Ms. Dort said Wednesday that "the only way to resolve this issue fairly" was for Congress to ban smoking in all buildings in one stroke.

Brennan Dawson, a spokeswoman for the Tobacco Institute, which represents the major tobacco companies in Washington, said of the restaurant group, "These people really have overstepped their bounds, and are trying to decide what is best for everybody, from the bingo halls to every workplace in the United States."

She said that if smoking was banned in all restaurants, smokers would not be the only ones to suffer. She said a ban would hurt restaurateurs too. She cited polls by the tobacco industry in which smokers have said that they might go to fast-food restaurants less often if smoking is banned there.

The council of chain restaurants and McDonald's both said they would support the Smoke-Free Environment Act of 1993, sponsored by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who is chairman of the House Health and Environment Subcommittee.

CIA spy's disclosure cost two lives, officials say

By Robert Burns
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — At least two Soviets who spied for the United States were killed after being exposed by the career CIA officer who has been accused of selling national security secrets, American officials said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the accused officer's wife has been cooperating with the government since she was arrested along with her husband on Monday, according to one official, commenting only on condition of anonymity.

The official would not say what Maria del Rosario Casas Ames has disclosed. But her cooperation could be crucial to the government's effort to learn how much damage she and her husband, CIA operations officer Aldrich H. Ames, might have done.

The Clinton administration seemed determined not to allow the issue to ruin relations with Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

President Clinton said the case involved a "very serious" breach of security "because of issues that I am not at this time at liberty to discuss." But he cautioned against a drastic change in U.S.-Russia relations.

"I do not think the facts of this case at this time undermine in any way shape or form the policy we have followed the last year toward President Yeltsin and his government and the forces of change in Russia," Clinton said.

The administration has asked the Russians to defuse tension over the spy case by voluntarily removing from Washington one or more of the Russian intelligence officers connected to the alleged 1985 recruitment of Ames and his wife, Rosario.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas called the case "as damaging as any in U.S. intelligence history." He said that at a minimum the Russians should "cease and condemn efforts to penetrate American intelligence."

In Moscow, officials played down the importance of the case and said it should not provoke "excessive political emotions." Some said the United States continues to spy on Russia.

Russia's Foreign Intelligence Service chief, Yevgeny Primakov, told The Associated Press he had never heard of Ames.

The Ameses were charged Tuesday with conspiracy to commit espionage, a charge that carries a potential penalty of life in prison. The couple are scheduled to appear at a hearing in federal court in Alexandria, Va., on Friday.

The Justice Department accused Ames, 52, and his wife, 41, of funneling U.S. national security secrets to the Soviet Union and later the Russian government in exchange for cash payments totaling $1.5 million. The spy operation is alleged to have continued until the two were arrested by FBI agents on Monday.

Vincent Cannistraro, a retired CIA officer, said in an interview Wednesday that the Central Intelligence Agency knew of at least two U.S. agents — officials in the Soviet government who were working for the CIA — who were killed after being revealed by Ames.

A congressional official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said separately that at least two U.S. agents allegedly revealed by Ames had been killed. CIA spokesman Dave Christian said he could not confirm the deaths.

■ More national news/8B

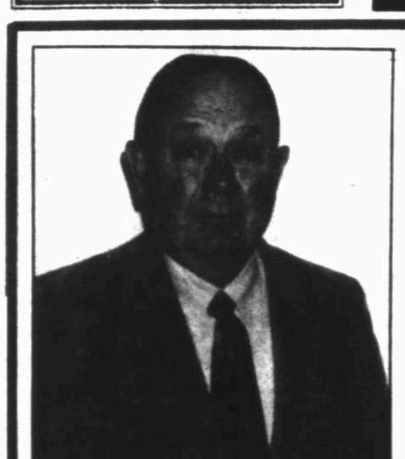

An FBI affidavit released Tuesday alleged that Ames in 1990 had passed to the Russian intelligence services the identity of a Russian counterintelligence officer who had been working as an agent for the United States.

Cannistraro, who said he had known Ames slightly at the CIA, said that judging by the duration of Ames' alleged association with the Kremlin and the scope of his access to top secret information, the damage to U.S. security interests probably was "massive."

"This is the first time a serving staff officer in the clandestine service has been a mole — that we know of," Cannistraro said. He added that unless Ames chooses to cooperate with the Justice Department, the government may never be able to fully understand the damage caused.

Hospital reviews agreement

■ Directors, trustees work on amending management agreement to ensure mission of hospital is carried out.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Directors of the Midland County Hospital District are amending a management agreement between them and the board of trustees of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

The agreement has been reviewed periodically since it was first drafted after the formation of the hospital tax district in 1977. The agreement is to ensure that "the mission of the hospital is carried out," said Jean Pittman, president of the board of directors.

The amended agreement, noted hospital attorney Ted Kerr, is to "better define the roles" of the trustees and the directors.

The trustees, who are appointed by the the board of governors — the hospital's founders — are involved in the day-to-day management of the hospital. The board of directors is elected by the voters.

"The agreement has been in place for 17 years," Matthew Murphy, chairman of the board of trustees, said Wednesday night.

"And it has worked very well. From the trustees' viewpoint, we think it is fine."

The agreement is reviewed annually.

"It is a normal procedure," Murphy said.

The hospital's board of governors operates Midland Memorial Foundation.

Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, a director and former board-of-directors president, noted that the directors set the ad valorem — or property-tax rate — which this year is 17.79 cents per $100 valuation, and delegates

Board debates policy changes

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Policy changes increasing the work hours of teachers and allowing early-graduating seniors to receive valedictory honors were debated by members of the Midland Independent School District's board of trustees during a meeting Tuesday at the MISD offices.

Proposed changes in the official teacher job description are intended to ensure that teachers are available to properly supervise students both before and after the school day.

This would require the addition of the following sentence to the job description: "Assist before, during and after the school day in the supervision of students as assigned by the principal."

Some board members voiced concerns that requiring all teachers to be present whenever a principal assigns

2 GOP Senate candidates speak out on issues, against Hutchison

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Two Republican candidates for the U.S. Senate spoke out Wednesday on issues such as gun control and health care at a discussion conducted by United We Stand America.

Roger Henson and Tom Spink are both hoping to unseat Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison in the March 8 primary and both had sharp words for the senator.

"When I questioned Kay Bailey Hutchison about inequities in the NAFTA program, she told me it was no different from (trade) agreements we have with other countries," Henson said. "We need someone in the Senate who is not satisfied with this status quo. And we need someone who doesn't take PAC money and have to legislate with all the strings that comes with that money."

"It doesn't seem right that we have a

Gardeners to give people something to chatter about

Todd

You know the old line that's repeated over and over: "I don't know much about nothing, but I've got plenty to say."

That's politics.

It's also world affairs

It's street talk.

It's cafe chatter.

It's courthouse-square lingo.

It's hometown, down-home talk.

It's just ordinary talk, something like gossip, which nowadays is getting plenty of play in the popular press and probably always has. When two personalities with similar goals are at loggerheads, you've got yourself something to talk about if not to write home about. That's the story line of politics.

The Tonya Harding, Nancy Kerrigan showcase, which developed into a mix of the bizarre and the spectacular, became a media event both off and on the ice arena. Both were desirous of the gold in Olympic figure skating. While their goals paralleled, how they pursued their dreams clashed.

Lots of folks have much to say about that event, which developed out of a dastardly baton blow to Miss Kerrigan and a futile whack to dampen on her spirits.

The sassy and spirited Miss Harding kept on skating as if oblivious to the tragedy.

The news media created a glitz.

And people talked just like they surely did back in 1804 when Alexander Hamilton fell mortally wounded in a duel between him and Aaron Burr. Hamilton had severely criticized Burr's character as a politician.

But there are duels going on everyday in a world-wide play called "the human condition."

The best are lighthearted but quite serious, well, sort of. And they are coming up soon, most visibly this spring at gardening time.

Gardeners, if they have been tilling the soil for at least a few seasons, know what they are talking about. After all, if they planted seed, and the seed sprouted into a plant and bore fruit, then they must know of what they speak.

That's the real test: the fruit.

If they are into organic gardening, gardeners will tell you what to sprinkle around the plots to keep the potato bugs, tomato bugs and all other no-good critters out of the patch.

Is it dried armadillo blood or ashes?

Maybe they'll yak about the best planting time. It is at full moon? On Good Friday?

What do you plant when, how far apart, how much loose soil on top, in what direction? Do you plant north-south, east-west or at set angles in between?

Any gardener can tell you more than he or she knows about the science and the art of planting, weed-could cause problems — especially with teachers getting their own children to school.

"Most people who have jobs know when to be there and when to go home," board President Jack Hightower said. "With this clause in there you don't know," he said.

Board member Gary Willis said teachers are professional salaried employees and therefore must work "until the job is finished."

Willis said he, as a professional, must complete his work whether it takes 30 hours a week or 50 hours a week.

"You're in management — you don't get to go home," Hightower said jokingly.

"You make them bring a doctor's excuse if they get sick — is that professional?" Hightower said.

Board member James Fuller made a motion to table the matter for further study and the board agreed.

Also at the meeting, Bobby Henry and his wife asked the board for a change in board policy. Their son graduated early and is therefore ineligible to escort a female Midland High School student at the Catoica Court.

A student shouldn't be excluded from such activities simply for graduating early, Henry said. The parents asked the board to consider changing school policy, removing a sentence that states, "Elections and honors restricted to seniors (court, class favorites, etc.) will not be open to early graduates."

Several board members were sympathetic.

Willis also questioned the validity of another sentence in the policy that states, "Early graduates will not be eligible for the position of valedictorian or salutatorian in the class with which they graduate."

Board members suggested the matter be presented for action at a later meeting.

TODD: It's time to talk gardening

(From 1B)

ing, watering, cultivating and reaping.

Regardless of who knows the most or the least about gardening, most any gardener will tell you just about all he or she knows, and that's mostly based on experience and hearsay.

So, here are few hints from an amateur, occasional gardener:

Try to find a tolerable, if not happy, mix of garden plants and weeds. They all have to be somewhere, so why not let weeds flourish where they seem to grow best: in the vegetable-garden patch. They are a study in tenacity.

Be fair to everybody. Welcome the beneficial bugs, such as the ladybug and the praying mantis, and don't shut out the aphids. They've got to eat, too. And if they and their ilk are well fed, then the ladybug and the praying mantis and their good kind will eat well, too.

Play a game with the bugs, particularly the bad guys. Plant your seed and seedlings in the most richly fertile on the home-place, and treat them royally.

The theory, borne out in practice, is that the bad bugs won't bother healthy plants organically grown on, for instance, composted soil. There's talking going around that that is so.

That will give folks something to chatter about.

There has even been research on organically growing cotton, highly-productive cotton, of all things, on fertile soil and not passing around the pesticides and factory-produced fertilizers. Leave them bottled up or sacked up.

That will give the industry and its sales people something to groan about.

Anyway, part of the joy of life is just talking — generally talking about nothing in particular. Who's the wiser? Time is spent and fun is gained.

senator who seems to forget that she's from Texas when it comes to important votes," Spink said in reference to Ms. Hutchison.

Both candidates spent a majority of their allotted time on President Clinton's proposed health-care plan, which they said was not the answer to the country's health-care woes.

"Physicians have long felt that the responsibility of paying for a service should be put back into the hands of the user, not in the hands of a company," Henson said.

"Countries that have used this idea have dropped their health-care costs by 33 percent, in some cases.

We don't need to worry about setting up another government regulatory entity," he said.

"We need to worry about taking care of things such as efficiency and unending malpractice suits. If we would just take care of the problems in our existing health-care system, we won't need the government to take care of things for us," Henson said.

"We have the finest doctors and facilities in the world and we are losing the freedom to choose which ones we want," Spink said.

"The reform doesn't need to start with the health-care system, it needs to start with the government. The liberals leading the countries point their fingers at our health-care system and at crime and say that those are our problems. Our problems are with the leaders."

Both candidates said they were against gun control.

"I am against gun control, or crime control as they are calling it these days," Henson said. "If you take guns out of the hands of law-abiding citizens, the criminals are still going to have them. I believe in truth in sentencing, for putting them in there for as long as it says they should stay. And, I don't think we should take major offenders out of jail to make more room for first-time offenders who could possibly be rehabilitated."

AMEND: Hospital officials review agreement

(From 1B)

"management of the hospital to the board of trustees."

The hospital tax generates about $6.6 million on a $3.7 billion tax base to fund the hospital's treatment of indigent-care patients.

"It's for indigent care," Wiesenfeld said. "Every dollar goes for indigent care."

While Wiesenfeld noted that the hospital and the directors have "held the line" on the tax rate and on indigent care, he said that the district "cannot afford a (tax) rollback because indigent-care costs keep rising.

"The hospital is never going to ask money for brick and mortar. That's just not fair; nor it is necessary. And it will never ask the public to repay any indebtedness even though it's a public debt. We use that money solely for indigent care. It doesn't go for brick and mortar. It doesn't go for equipment."

Wiesenfeld credited "creative" hospital management for containing indigent-care costs through obstetric, pediatric, and adult and senior-citizen medical and preventive-medicine programs.

Though it is lawful and permissible to do so, none of that tax money has been used for paying off the hospital's bonded indebtedness or for making capital improvements.

Those funds ultimately come out of hospital revenue.

However, Charles Coffman, vice president of the board of directors, noted that the district, through its taxing powers, has "that obligation to pay off general-obligation bonds if the hospital can't. That's statute," he said.

While Mrs. Pittman's request for an early or tentative vote on the proposed agreement was blocked since it was not on the agenda, she said that the proposed agreement between the boards of directors and trustees is basically revised every year.

The amended agreement "is not etched in stone," Mrs. Pittman said.

She said that bringing the agreement for public discussion was premature.

"Basically, our board wants the hospital to succeed in every way," Mrs. Pittman said.

And Wiesenfeld, too, said he wants to help maintain Memorial Hospital as a first-class hospital.

"If we cut the tax rate, the money (for indigent care) is going to have to come from hospital revenue," Wiesenfeld said. "Then you can't keep your equipment up, and you can't keep your facilities up, and the doctors will go elsewhere."

However, Mrs. Pittman noted that a tax cut "has never been discussed in our meetings."

Wiesenfeld said a "new hospital" is to be built in Midland and that hospital, unlike Memorial Hospital, would not have an emergency room, would not take indigent or poor patients, but would be receiving "gold-plated insurance patients."

And Memorial Hospital would be facing "a further revenue cut.

"I think that we have to preserve this hospital as a first-rate institution," Wiesenfeld said.

Trustee Frank Cahoon said Wednesday night that "it is very important" that the three entities — the boards of governors, trustees, and directors — "work out a contract (agreement) that is acceptable to all parties.

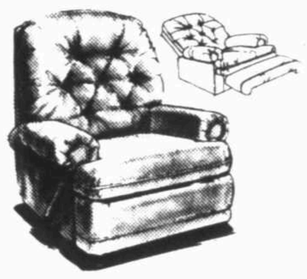

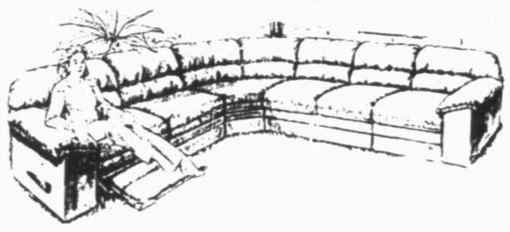

Memorial Hospital and Medical Center was chartered in 1945 as a community not-for-profit hospital and was completed in 1950 as a four-story, 75-bed facility then called Midland Memorial Hospital. Today, the complex is a 321-bed regional hospital.

MC to present 2 concerts March 1

Staff Report

Midland College's music department is presenting two concerts in one evening on Tuesday, March 1. Both the MC Community Band and the MC Jazz Ensemble are doing their spring concerts at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts auditorium with Walter Osadchuk conducting. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

The Community Band program includes marches by Henry Fillmore, R.B. Hall, K.J. Alford as well as a march from the Suite in B Flat by the English composer Gordon Jacob; a Mexican Suite by Earl Hagen; a composition entitled Blasenfest, which was written by the well-known composer and former area band director Tommy J. Fry; "Scenario" by Jared Spears; and "Montenido" by Jay Chattaway, the Spanish title for "Nestled in the Mountains". It describes the area of East Stroudsburg, Pa., for whose band the composition was written. A special treat includes "Frolic for Trombones" by Reginald Heath that's being performed by a trio of trombonists from the band, including former MC president Jess Parrish.

Rounding out the program will be excerpts from Richard Wagner's opera, Rienzi, scored by Eric Osterling.

The Jazz Ensemble program will be chosen from such well-known jazz standards as "You've Lost That Lovin' Feeling", Cole Porter's "Love For Sale", "Stolen Moments", "Take the A Train" by Billy Strayhorn, I.G.Y. What A Beautiful World), "American Patrol", "Harlem Nocturne", Johnny Mercer's "Blues in the Night", "My Funny Valentine" by Rogers and Hart, and "You've Got A Friend".

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Good things lie just ahead, both spiritual and financial. By late spring, you will be ready for a new challenge. Launch a business in July. September is the ideal time to overhaul longtime relationships. Use sweet reason when dealing with work colleagues. Your resourcefulness will receive widespread attention in December. A carefully-planned reunion will help restore family unity. Welcome a wanderer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball player Eddie Murray, actor Edward James Olmos, Italian soprano Renata Scotto, CBS news anchor Paula Zahn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make certain you are following a healthy lifestyle. Loss, accidents or quarrels could result if you persist with a negative habit. Treat sensitive friends with kid gloves.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone's presence may irritate you. Remember to keep your cool. Your warm personality will work a special magic on a new acquaintance. Stick to your plans without going off on a tangent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be intent on getting your own way. Reflect on what you really want in the way of romance and companionship, then balance your dreams with reality. Long-distance journeys prove lucrative.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Use the day to reconnect with old friends. Give yourself time to come up with a money-making strategy. The ball is in your court. Independent moves put you in the catbird seat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good news from one source will cancel out disappointing tidings from another. Someone at a distance is sure that your hopes will be fulfilled. Tonight, meditate for clarity. Big decisions lie ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Let your loving side dominate! Wear your feelings on your sleeve; other people will understand. Your popularity soars when you learn to laugh at your foibles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day to supply what is missing, answer correspondence and get the house in order. Entertaining friends at home could be a family affair. To avoid rash moves or decisions, slow down.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What you plan now, with the aid of an interested party, will have great value in the future. Remain as close as possible to those who lift your spirits. Avoid all forms of gambling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop the arguments! Go directly to the source for needed information. Obstacles are falling away. Frequent consultations with experts may be necessary.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more careful when in transit. Refrain from voicing your views or vexations when this could offend. Maintain a busy schedule. Mail letters, return phone calls and run important errands.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Harmony marks domestic decisions made now. You could decide to resume a relationship you abandoned long ago. Your careful research begins to pay off. Live for the moment; try to act more spontaneously.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Maintain the status quo in your career. The future looks brighter than you think; let things develop naturally. Remain loyal to friends and family. Gather with loved ones for a night on the town.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Dbl
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Two of ◇

You might ask why this hand should appear in a bridge column. Your Aunt Nellie could make four spades with the North-South cards. Unfortunately, your Aunt Nellie was not at the helm when this hand was played in the Irish Trials.

South's pass was uncommonly cautious by the standards of bridge in the Emerald Isle. But when North could make a takeout double of West's opening bid, South bid the full value of the hand.

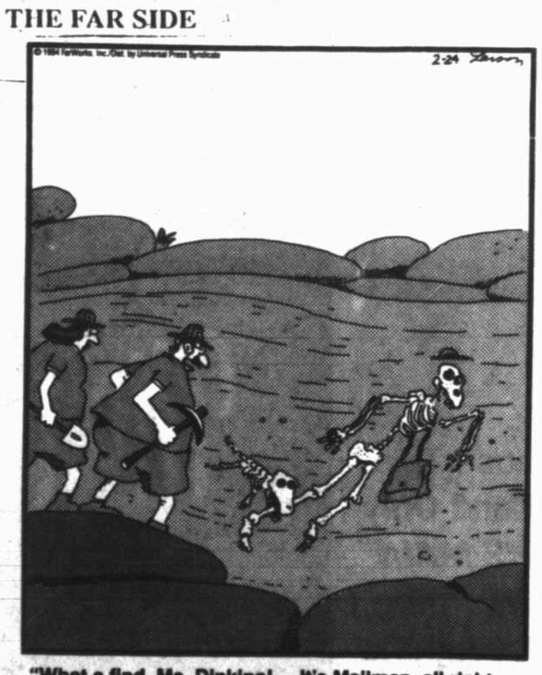

West led the two of diamonds, an obvious singleton. Declarer won in dummy and cashed the king of spades, fetching the jack from West. To protect against a singleton jack of spades with West and prepared to lose a trump trick to a doubleton Q J, declarer continued with a trump to the ten.

It will be a long time before declarer tries anything like that again. West won the queen of trumps, led a heart to East's ace and ruffed the diamond return. The king of hearts was cashed for the setting trick.

Had declarer had a combined total of nine trumps the finesse of the ten on the second round would be the technically correct play, based on the Principle of Restricted Choice. That does not hold true when the combined trump holding is only eight because the extra trump in the defenders' hands allows them to falsecard—as was the case here.

Motorist accuses Jack Nicholson of using club to batter Mercedes

LOS ANGELES — Jack Nicholson is being sued and faces possible criminal charges for using a golf club to batter a Mercedes-Benz that supposedly cut him off in traffic.

Motorist accuses Nicholson of flailing away at his car.

A motorist accused the legendary star of such films as "The Shining," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Five Easy Pieces" of flailing away at his car, breaking the windshield and denting the roof, police said.

The city attorney's office may determine this week whether to file a misdemeanor vandalism charge, said spokesman Rick Schmidt.

In a Superior Court lawsuit filed last week, Robert Blank, 38, said he feared for his life during his Feb. 8 confrontation with Nicholson. The lawsuit alleges assault and battery and claims Blank was "severely injured" but does not say in what manner.

Messages left for Nicholson spokesman Sandy Bresler weren't returned.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Comedian John Henton gets to swap his microphone for a baseball bat and a stint in the Montreal Expos' spring training camp on Friday.

"It's just something I've always wanted to do since I was a kid," said Henton, whose real shot at fame is as a co-star in the Fox network sitcom, "Living Single."

In return for Henton's batting practice, Expos' third baseman Sean Berry gets to perform with comics David Brenner, Richard Belzer and Henton on Saturday at the Just for Laughs ... on Vacation comedy festival.

Berry jumped at the chance to do a comedy routine, "so it's only fair that I get a chance to get in some batting practice," Henton said. "Besides, I might get more laughs at batting practice than he'll get on stage."

HOUSTON — When Wynonna Judd beckoned, two fans responded eagerly. But instead of getting to dance on stage with the country singer, they got tackled.

Wynonna's trademark — aside from going by her first name — is to invite a cowboy from the audience to join her on stage at the end of her concerts. She did just that Monday night at the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo in the Astrodome.

Jeff McDonald, 23, started sprinting toward the stage but was intercepted by a security guard. Across the Dome, another security officer was wrestling with 25-year-old Michael Ackerman, who also heeded Wynonna's call.

"Mr. Security Guard, you can let than man go," Wynonna trilled in a hurried but still-musical voice.

The guards, who apparently had not heard Wynonna's invitation, held the two men down as the crowd booed, but released them shortly afterward.

Rodeo officials apologized and offered to buy the two men a trip to another Wynonna concert.

Wynonna, formerly part of the mother-daughter Judds duo, received a Grammy nomination last month for best female vocal performance in "Only Love."

RALEIGH, N.C. — Retired Gen. Colin Powell, a surprise guest at a high school's career day, was grilled on his own career plans.

In a wide-ranging, 45-minute exchange Tuesday with Broughton High School students, the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff side-stepped questions about whether he might run for president.

"I'm enjoying my retirement and being a good husband and a full-time grandfather," he said.

But a few minutes later, he added, "I want to do something in service to the nation, and politics is an area I'm looking at."

Powell, who retired Sept. 30, 1993, said he still feels "like a soldier in civilian clothes."

Powell, former Vice President Dan Quayle and former Housing Secretary Jack Kemp were brought to Raleigh this week by the Shavano Institute for National Leadership. The Michigan-based institute sponsors lecture series.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jane Alexander, chairwoman of the National Endowment for the Arts, admits not everyone will be happy about art projects the government helps fund.

"We'll not be able to please all of the people all of the time, but I don't think the arts ever have," Alexander said Tuesday. But she also said grants are awarded through a "highly democratic process."

More than 200 people turned out for Alexander's appearance Tuesday night at a town hall-style meeting on the arts.

Jury begins deliberation in case of World Trade Center bombing

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press Writer

■ More national news/3D

NEW YORK — The jury in the World Trade Center bombing trial began deliberating the fate of four Muslim fundamentalists Wednesday after a judge warned them that political beliefs are not on trial.

U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy instructed the federal court jurors to put aside "sympathy, suspicion or prejudice" and to suspend "any personal feelings you may have about any political beliefs."

He urged them to use their common sense to decide if the men are guilty of the Feb. 26, 1993, attack that killed six people, injured more than 1,000 others and caused $550 million in damage to the world's second tallest buildings.

Charged with conspiracy are Mohammad Salameh, 26, of Jersey City, N.J.; Nidal Ayyad, 26, of Maplewood, N.J.; Mahmud Abouhalima, 34, of Woodbridge, N.J.; and Ahmad Ajaj, 28, of Houston. If convicted, they face life in prison without parole.

Soon after deliberations began, jurors asked to hear readbacks of testimony from two witnesses and to view a model of the Trade Center parking garage. They worked about 2½ hours before recessing for the evening.

Deliberations, which were to resume today, could last weeks. There were more than 1,000 exhibits presented and more than 9,000 pages of testimony from 207 witnesses.

The judge has said he will not sequester the jurors.

During closing arguments that ended Wednesday morning, lawyers urged the jury to review various parts of the trial transcript and to look at certain exhibits from the trial that started Sept. 14.

Defense lawyers had tried to put special emphasis on the testimony of a gas station attendant, Willie Hernandez Moosh.

Moosh pointed out two jurors — instead of two defendants — as the men he saw the morning of the blast putting gas in a yellow van like the one that prosecutors said carried the bomb.

In its rebuttal, the prosecution noted that Moosh later corrected himself, pointing to two defendants and insisting it was them he had seen.

Blair snares second gold

Bonnie Blair won her second gold medal at the Olympics Wednesday.

■ American skater Bonnie Blair captures a record-breaking fifth gold medal; hockey team loses to Finland 6-1.

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — It was a day for Olympic goodbyes — a fond farewell to Bonnie Blair and her five gold medals. A too-soon sendoff to the U.S. hockey team and its hopes. A harsh see-you-later for Tonya Harding and her longshot bid.

Throw in a big hello for Nancy Kerrigan, who put seven nightmarish weeks behind her to grab first place in a women's figure skating competition rife with intrigue and excitement.

With Harding looking on, Kerrigan flashed a wide grin after completing a near-perfect Wednesday night run over the ice in Hamar. Once the best scores of the night were posted, she stood — clutching an armful of flowers — and waved to a cheering crowd, relishing her moment of triumph.

Harding stared stonily from a private box and applauded politely at the end of Kerrigan's program.

Kerrigan's answer to Harding's promise to "whip her butt" at the Olympics was a breathtaking two minutes that erased an almost endless parade of grand jury probes, FBI investigations, confessions and denials.

It was the first head-to-head competition between Tonya and Nancy since the shot heard 'round the world: A telescoping baton cracking across Kerrigan's knee on Jan. 6. It drew more attention and more security than any other event at the Games, which hosted the kings of Norway and Sweden at different times.

Blair, in her farewell after four Olympics, skated to a record-breaking fifth gold medal Wednesday to emphatically end the greatest career of any American Winter Games athlete and any U.S. woman Olympian ever.

Blair got the medal, but Harding and Kerrigan got all the attention — and Harding took the ice first, her hands folded in silent prayer. "Go for the gold, Tonya" read one sign in the Rebs find forward to second 'Nunn'

■ Midland Lee coach Jon House is counting on Michael Nunn's recent scoring spree to continue as they face El Paso Hanks Friday night.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

No one gave the Midland Lee Rebels much of a chance at being alive and well at the Class 5A area stage of the state basketball playoffs for the second year in a row, but they will be meeting El Paso Hanks at 6 p.m. Friday in Alpine at Sul Ross State University.

One of the reasons the Rebels are still playing is the fact that no one convinced one 6-1 Michael Nunn that it couldn't happen. Nunn is on a scoring tear for Lee, and that has been an unexpected touch.

Dawg duo turn up defensive heat

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Karie Cornelius (44) and Amy Alcala (24) apply defensive pressure.

■ Midland guards Karie Cornelous and Amy Alcala are key to the Lady Dawgs fullcourt pressure.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

At first glance, the backcourt duo of Karie Cornelius and Amy Alcala doesn't exactly strike fear into the hearts of Midland High's opponents. But when the two team up on the Lady Dawgs' daunting fullcourt press, the results can be deadly for anyone that tries to take the ball up the court.

The fullcourt press will be a key element if the Lady Dawgs are to make it through this weekend's Region I-5A Girls Basketball Tournament. Midland takes the court at 6 p.m., Friday against Euless Trinity. A win would send the Lady Dawgs to the finals Saturday and set up a chance for a state tournament berth.

In pregame warmups, 5-foot-6 senior point guard Cornelius and 5-9 junior shooting guard Alcala don't seem all that threatening. After all, Cornelius has a sweet face and smiles and giggles a lot. Although Alcala has a more serious visage than her teammate, she looks more like a fashion model than a bruiser.

"A lot of people tell me that I'm too fragile and that if somebody hits me, I'm going to break," Cornelius said.

Baylor gives thumbs up to unification

■ Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Texas regents to meet by Friday on issue of mergering with Big 8 Conference.

By John McFarland
Associated Press Writer

WACO — Baylor voted Wednesday to become the first Southwest Conference school to accept a merger offer from the Big Eight, starting a process that is likely to dismantle the nearly 80-year-old league.

"We are delighted and excited that our board unanimously voted to accept the invitation that's been offered," Thomas Powers, chairman of the Board of Regent, said after a 2½-hour board meeting. "We think the financial possibilities of this new alliance are exciting."

Two other original SWC members, Texas and Texas A&M, and longtime member Texas Tech all had regents' meetings scheduled this week to consider the offer from the Big Eight.

A formal announcement of the merger appeared to need only the rubberstamp of the regents at the schools.

"We're looking forward to the challenge," Baylor president Herbert Reynolds said. "I believe it's a new era for

Roger likes new Cowboys, popularity

■ Former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach visits Midland and shares his thoughts on the Cowboys over the years.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Even Captain America is wrong about some things.

Roger Staubach, in Midland Wednesday to speak at a United Way luncheon, talked about his career with the Cowboys and the current edition of "America's Team." Has he had last year, he predicted the Cowboys would win another Super Bowl, and he credited the current Dallas team with his reemerging celebrity status.

"It's fun being popular again because the Cowboys are successful," Staubach said.

What's that? Since when did Roger the Dodger's popularity run out among long-time Cowboy fans, anyway?

"Unless Troy Aikman was here, you (the media) wouldn't be (here) just for the United Way," the for-

DAWGS: Backcourt tandem provides pressure

From 1C

"That used to bother me, but I don't think about it too much anymore."

Midland coach Jim Raughton added, "When my mother saw her play earlier this year she said she couldn't believe that frail little girl was out there. But Karie doesn't back down. She leads the team in taking (offensive) charges. She's definitely not frail."

There's not doubt Cornelius spends her share of time getting her uniform dirty on the hardcourt, taking offensive charges by players biugger than she is. But to this point, she's only had to come out of the game once for an injury — a knee to her kidney — but she was back the very next game at her familiar position at the point of the Lady Dawg offense.

"Both of them are not afraid to get in there and mix it up," Raughton said. "With Amy, the bigger the game is, the more glassy her eyes get. You don't coach that."

After leading the team in offense during her sophomore year, Alcala was named the Most Valuable Player in District 4-5A. That season forever ingrained her shooting skills in the minds of Midland's opponents. But when the Lady Dawgs' opponents started concentrating on keeping Alcala from scoring, that's when her defensive skills came to light.

"Everybody thinks about Amy's offense," Raughton said. "But that's what is so deceiving about Amy. They don't talk about all the steals she gets or all the assists she gets. She's a very unselfish player. Sometimes she's almost too unselfish. She'll give up the 2-foot shot and pass it to somebody else and I don't always want her to do that."

Alcala leads the team in steals (6.2 per game) and assists (4.8) and increasing those averages from last season was one of her goals this year since she knew the pressure would be tremendous for her to repeat her scoring feats.

"At the beginning of the year at the Tall City Tournament, I felt a lot of pressure," Alcala said. "But I went home and had a good cry and got it out of my system. Then after we beat (Lubbock) Monterey (in the tournament) everything fell into place."

Alcala went on to score 25 points that game which was the first time Lady Dawg fans had seen the scoring brilliance they witnessed last season. She said she knew this year would be different because her teammate, senior and three-year starter Julie Chancellor, had experienced the same in 1993 after becoming the 4-5A Newcomer of the Year in 1992.

"But I wasn't that worried about other teams concentrating a lot on me because that just opens the other people up," Alcala said. "Last year it was more important that I had a big offensive game. This year we have good shooters all over the place and we can give the ball to pretty much anybody on the floor."

That made it all the more important that Cornelius was able to step up and earn the starting point guard position after playing in a reserve role as a junior.

"She's come a million miles since the beginning of the season and there were a lot of questions about the guard position at that time," Raughton said. "We knew coming into the season that we were going to have to establish other people in the offense. There was no doubt we were going to see a lot of combination defenses on Julie and Amy. We had to get another guard that could step up and create some offense. Karie has done that all season long."

With the regional tournament looming, however, Cornelius knows that the Lady Dawgs will have to rely on the meat and potatoes of the Midland game plan — the press. It was a game plan which caused Monterey, Midland's bi-district foe Tuesday night, to commit 30 costly turnovers.

"I'm a little nervous about this weekend," Cornelius said. "But if we just keep playing like we have been I think we can make it all the way to state. We've just got to keep pressuring the ball."

REBELS: Nunn gives Lee offense spark

From 1C

"We looked at Michael this year to help us in a big way defensively," noted Lee coach Jon House. "He's probably the best athlete on the team and is a great leaper and he can always be counted on to come up with some big defensive plays. But I don't think you could ever predict just how much his overall game would develop."

And develop it has. He is coming off a 19-point effort from Lee's 75-71 bi-district win over Lubbock Coronado. That was just an extension of recent weeks where he has been averaging over 20 points per outing.

"He averaged just over 20 points per game over our last six games of regular season," House said. "He had 27 points on the road against Abilene High in the game that put us in the playoffs. He's had big games when we had to have it, and he is continuing to do that."

But Nunn never really figured to be this big of a scoring threat on the floor.

"Going into the season, my goals were assists, rebounds and steals," Nunn notes. "I figured my part of the team was rebounding and defense while getting six to 10 points per game.

"However, as my defense improved, the offense started coming to me. I started getting layups off steals and then my shot came to me. Anywhere in the 15-foot range — and every now and then a three — I can hit. I don't know why, but I just can't miss that shot now. I have a lot of confidence shooting the ball."

Nunn has been one of the pleasant surprises for House in the unexpected season for Lee.

"Nunn played on the junior varsity last year and was sporadic in his performance," House said. "I really think that he is just now coming into his own. He has worked hard on his shooting and has developed a shot he is comfortable with and has confidence in it."

Prior to Tuesday's game with Coronado, Nunn said that the only player he had trouble shooting against in his torrid run was against Abilene Cooper 6-8 giant Andrae Patterson.

"Patterson was the only one that made me change up my shot from 15-foot," Nunn said. "He could get up there an block it. And I know the farther we go in the playoffs, the taller some of the post players will be and I'll have to be able to change."

He was prophetic. Against the larger Mustangs of Coronado, Nunn got few shots in his zone. Still, he came away with 19 points as Lee found a way to bust Coronado's 1-3-1 front-court trap by reversing the ball across court to Sean Low (game high 29 points) or finding the wide open Nunn underneath for a bevy of low-key layups. Coronado was powerless to stop the combination.

El Paso Hanks is the team that eliminated Lee from the playoffs last season, so this is a special rematch set again for Sul Ross, the site of the Lee fall a year ago in the region quarterfinals. Hanks went on to the Region I finals before falling to state champion Fort Worth Dunbar.

Nunn wasn't part of that game last year, so he doesn't see this game as a rematch like his coach, who was part of the game last year.

"We're both different teams than last year," Nunn said. "We don't even have any returning starters back from last season. It's a different game."

It may take some convincing to get House in that line of thinking. He would like nothing better than to get a small taste of playoff revenge against Hanks.

Jazz halt Spurs winning streak in double OT

■ Spurs lose first game in over a month as their 13-game winning streak is stopped by Utah.

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The San Antonio Spurs' franchise-record 13-game winning streak came to an end Wednesday night as Karl Malone and John Stockton each scored 31 points for the Utah Jazz in a 106-103 double-overtime victory.

■ NBA Roundup

It was the Spurs' first loss since Jan. 20 and their third loss in as many games this season against Utah.

Stockton and Jeff Malone each scored six points in the second overtime, and Utah took the lead for good on a layup by Stockton that made it 97-95.

Jeff Malone then hit a 16-footer from the baseline to put the Jazz in front 99-95, but Vinny Del Negro made a jumper to make it 99-97 with 1:49 left.

Stockton again answered with a drive and layup on the left side, and Dale Ellis missed a jumper before Jeff Malone hit from 18 feet to put Utah up 103-97 with 43 seconds remaining.

Lloyd Daniels brought the Spurs to 103-100 with a 3-pointer from the corner with 28 seconds to play, but Karl Malone hit one of two free throws, Willie Anderson missed a 3-point attempt and Stockton made two free throws to wrap it up. David Robinson added a meaningless jumper with 1.2 seconds left.

Robinson led San Antonio with 25 points and 16 rebounds. Ellis scored 15 points, including a 3-pointer with 6.2 seconds left in regulation that sent the game into overtime.

Nuggets 102, Celtics 94

DENVER — LaPhonso Ellis scored a career-high 29 points and Dikembe Mutombo led Denver's defense with 16 rebounds and six of the team's 21 blocked shots as the Nuggets defeated Boston.

It was Boston's 10th straight defeat, tying a franchise record for consecutive losses set in January 1949.

Reggie Williams finished with 18 points and Mutombo and Bryant Stith each scored 16 for Denver, which won for the fourth time in five games.

Rick Fox led the Celtics with 20 points, Sherman Douglas had 17, Dino Radja 16 and Acie Earl 15.

Bulls 123, Warriors 100

CHICAGO — Pete Myers scored 20 of his career-high 26 points in the first half to pace Chicago to a victory over Golden State, ending the Warriors winning streak at six games.

Scottie Pippen added 20 points and four other Bulls scored in double figures. Avery Johnson led the Warriors with 17 points.

The Bulls used a 13-5 run in the last 4:18 of the first quarter to go ahead 32-22. Myers, averaging only eight points, was 6-for-6 from the field and had 13 points in the period.

Chicago stayed hot in the second quarter and built its biggest lead of the half, 63-39, with 1:37 left. The Bulls led 63-46 at halftime, and Golden State got no closer than 16 in the second half. Pippen scored 16 points in the third quarter as the Bulls improved their home record 20-4.

Golden State's Billy Owens sprained his right shoulder late in the third period and did not return.

The win was the Bulls' fifth straight over the Warriors, who have not beaten Chicago since November 1991.

Chris Mullin added 15 points for the Warriors. Latrell Sprewell, who entered with a 22-point average, was held to 13.

Prior to the game, the Bulls traded forward Stacey King to the Minnesota Timberwolves for center Luc Longley.

Magic 103, Pacers 99

ORLANDO — Shaquille O'Neal survived a knee injury scare and scored 28 points to lead Orlando to its fifth straight victory.

O'Neal banged knees with Indiana's Derrick McKey just before halftime and lay sprawled on the court for three minutes. After x-rays showed no injury, O'Neal returned to the game early in the third quarter.

The Magic led by as many as 17 in the first half, but Indiana got back within three, 94-91, with 3:40 to play. O'Neal had three dunks and a steal down the stretch to keep Orlando safely in front.

Hawks 99, SuperSonics 92

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins, former Midland College standout Mookie Blaylock and Craig Ehlo scored all the Hawks' points in a 19-0 fourth-quarter run that helped carry Atlanta past Seattle.

Wilkins scored nine of his 24 points in the run and Blaylock, who led the Hawks with 25 points, and Ehlo each added five.

Gary Payton led the SuperSonics with 23 points and Shawn Kemp added 16 points and 15 rebounds before fouling out in the final half-minute.

Nets 106, 76ers 102

PHILADELPHIA — Kenny Anderson had 29 points and 11 assists and Derrick Coleman added 18 points and nine rebounds as New Jersey sent Philadelphia to its seventh straight loss.

Coleman, who missed the two previous games with an ankle injury, made a key three-point play to give New Jersey a 99-96 lead with 2:05 to play. Anderson followed with a long jumper with 1:23 left to give New Jersey a 101-96 edge.

After Dana Barros made two free throws for Philadelphia, Coleman made a foul shot and Chris Morris had a slam dunk to seal the victory.

Cavaliers 106, Bullets 96

LANDOVER, Md. — Mark Price scored 22 points and sparked a third-quarter run that sent Cleveland to its fourth straight victory.

Price had 11 points and three assists in the third period, including two baskets, an assist and a steal in a 14-3 run that enabled Cleveland to take an 83-75 lead into the fourth quarter.

The Bullets never got closer than seven points after that in losing their fourth straight.

Trail Blazers 121, Clippers 112

LOS ANGELES — Clifford Robinson had 22 points and 13 rebounds and Clyde Drexler became Portland's all-time leading rebounder in the Trail Blazers' win over the Los Angeles Clippers.

It was Portland's fourth straight victory and its second in as many nights against Los Angeles, which lost its fifth in a row despite a 32-point effort from Ron Harper.

Danny Manning added 26 points in what may have been his final game with the Clippers. Manning, who will be an unrestricted free agent at the end of the season, is expected to be traded before Thursday's 9 p.m. EST trading deadline. Portland is one of the teams rumored to be in the bidding for the sixth-year forward.

Buck Williams contributed 21 points and 12 rebounds while Rod Strickland had 15 points and 13 assists.

Pokes plan surgery for star 'back

DALLAS (AP) — Emmitt Smith is expected to finally get some relief from the separated shoulder he has nursed through the Dallas Cowboys' second straight world championship season.

The running back was tentatively scheduled for surgery next Wednesday, said Cowboys owner Jerry Jones.

"We expect a full and complete recovery before training camp," said Jones, adding it could take Smith about four weeks to recover.

The operation by Dr. James Andrews was scheduled at the Alabama Sports Medicine Clinic in Birmingham, Ala., Jones said.

Smith, the three-time defending National Football League rushing champion and league Most Valuable Player, separated his right shoulder when New York Giants safety Greg Jackson tackled him from behind.

The impact slammed him to the artificial surface at Giants Stadium during the final week of the regular season.

But Smith started all three of the Cowboys' playoffs games and was chosen Super Bowl MVP for a performance in which he rushed for 132 yards and two touchdowns against the Buffalo Bills.

From 1C

crowd, which applauded as she skated out.

Wearing a gaudy red outfit with matching makeup, she stumbled on her first jump — a triple lutz combination. She did not fall, but wound up in 10th place — out of the running for a medal with Friday's free skate still to come.

"You can't be perfect every time," Harding said. "I was happy with it. ... When I have a gold medal around my neck, that's when I'll feel I've achieved what I came here for."

Not likely.

Kerrigan was followed in the standings by Oksana Baiul of the Ukraine, Surya Bonaly of France and Lu Chen of China. The sentimental favorite, Katarina Witt, wound up with sixth and an outside shot at a medal.

Harding's routine was a victory of sorts, since only the threat of a $25 million lawsuit and a last-minute deal with the United States Olympic Committee cleared the way for her appearance.

More than 100 million Americans were expected to tune in for the on-ice conclusion to the off-ice soap opera, which concludes Friday with the free skate.

Witt, making her Olympic comeback after six years away, was unruffled by the massive scrutiny. Despite a good-looking routine, she received a series of unimpressive scores — including one from the American judge that left her asking in disbelief, "Four-point-nine?"

Blair's victory in the 1,000 meter speedskating, with her second-best time ever, provided a fitting swan skate as the 29-year-old again put the world's best competition on ice. She has one bronze to go with her five golds; twice she finished fourth, just missing out.

"I've had a lot of great memories at all of my Olympics," Blair said. "I will miss it very much, but I think I will definitely come back and be a spectator."

Blair can't win another medal in Lillehammer, and neither can the American hockey team. Undefeated Finland cruised to an easy 6-1 victory in the quarterfinals, ending U.S. hopes of their first hockey medal since 1980's gold.

"It's tough to take," said forward Craig Johnson, summing up the team's mood after one win, two losses and three ties. "It's tough to look at your buddy next to you, to look at the sorrow in his face and know it's in your face, too.

"We wanted to win the gold medal."

Instead, they win nothing, and America's longest stretch ever without a hockey medal continues. Finland — which has outscored opponents 31-5 — now plays Canada.

Tomba, with one Lillehammer race left, failed to win his unprecedented third straight Olympic giant slalom as "La Bomba" bombed out. The Italian superskier missed a gate to drop out of the giant slalom, where German Markus Wasmeier surprised with his second gold in seven days.

Blair's medal lifted the U.S. total to nine (five gold, three silver, one bronze). The Americans stood fifth behind Russia's 21 (10-7-4), host Norway's 17 (8-7-2), Germany's 16 (6-4-6) and Italy's 15 (4-3-8).

Where Tomba failed, Wasmeier flourished by the slimmest margin of victory in Olympic Alpine history — two-hundreths of one second.

"I leave tomorrow, but now I want a great big party," said Wasmeier.

Huskers hand Jayhawks third straight loss

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Eric Piatkowski scored 33 points and Nebraska sent No. 10 Kansas to its third straight loss, 96-87, Wednesday night.

■ Top 25 Roundup

Nebraska (15-8, 5-6 Big Eight) led by 24 points at halftime. The Jayhawks (21-6, 6-5) rallied within 90-87 on Patrick Richey's layup with 32 seconds left, but Piatkowski made four foul shots to keep the Cornhuskers ahead.

Kansas lost for the fourth straight time at the Bob Devaney Center. The Jayhawks made only 17 of 33 free throws while Nebraska made 23 of 31.

No. 2 Duke 84, Florida State 72

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Second-ranked Duke, sparked by the outside sniping of Chris Collins and Marty Clark, rallied in the second half to beat Florida State and clinch a tie for the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season title.

Florida State, which went to a four-guard lineup for most of the game, led 45-40 at halftime. But Duke (20-3, 11-3) adjusted in the second half, holding the Seminoles (12-12, 5-9 ACC) to just 27 points.

No. 4 North Carolina 80, Notre Dame 71

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Eric Montross, a 54 percent free-throw shooter for his career, made 11 of 14 and scored 23 points to lead No. 4 North Carolina past Notre Dame.

The Irish (10-16), seeking their fourth upset of a ranked team this season, battled on nearly even terms until the final minutes. There were five lead changes and three ties in the second half before Jeff McInnis put the Tar Heels (22-5) ahead to stay, 59-57, with a pair of free throws with 7:39 to play.

No. 6 Missouri 83, SE Missouri 61

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Melvin Booker made up for a slow start with 17 points, including 11 in a span of 1:35, as No. 6 Missouri took a break from its unbeaten Big Eight season and beat Southeast Missouri State.

It was the final non-conference game for the Tigers (21-2), who resume Big Eight play Saturday when Oklahoma visits. Missouri is 11-0 in conference play for the first time since 1922 and has clinched a tie for the league title with three games to go. Southeast Missouri (9-15) was within 11 points with 11 minutes left.

No. 7 Kentucky 77, Tennessee 73

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Roderick Rhodes scored all 13 of his points from the foul line, the last seven for No. 7 Kentucky, and the short-handed Wildcats downed Tennessee.

Kentucky (21-5, 10-3 Southeastern Conference) won despite the absence of Travis Ford, Jared Prickett and Gimel Martinez. The three were suspended for one game by coach Rick Pitino for swapping free-throw shooters in a game Saturday at Vanderbilt.

Tony Delk led Kentucky with 21 points and Andre Riddick battled inside for 18. The Wildcats rallied from a 14-point deficit early in the second half. Tennessee (5-18, 2-11) was led by Cortez Barnes with 20 points.

No. 13 Louisville 82, LSU 64

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Clifford Rozier had 23 points and 15 rebounds as No. 13 Louisville snapped a two-game losing streak and sent LSU to its fifth straight loss.

Rozier, who has been slowed by a back injury, scored only one point in a loss to Temple on Sunday. But he looked fine against LSU (11-12), dunking off an alley-oop pass from DuJuan Wheat during a decisive 12-0 run in the second half by the Cardinals (21-4).

No. 14 Purdue 95, Ohio St. 85

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Glenn Robinson scored 40 points and 14th-ranked Purdue held Ohio State to five points in the last four minutes.

Robinson, the nation's scoring leader, hit 10-of 21 shots, missing all five of his 3-point attempts. He made 20 of 22 free throws, and finished two points under his career high.

Cuonzo Martin added 25 points for Purdue (22-4, 10-4 Big Ten). The Boilermakers the Buckeyes (11-14, 4-10) by 101-63 a month ago.

No. 18 Syracuse 91, Seton Hall 69

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Lawrence Moten had 25 points and Lucious Jackson broke out of a seven-game scoring slump with 19, leading No. 18 Syracuse past Seton Hall.

The loss kept Seton Hall (13-11, 6-10 Big East) winless in 14 games at the Carrier Dome since the start of the Big East. Syracuse (18-5, 10-5) moved back into a second-place tie with Boston College, 2½ games behind Connecticut.

No. 19 Saint Louis 70, Cincinnati 67

ST. LOUIS — Erwin Claggett hit a 3-pointer from the corner with 1:40 left and No. 19 Saint Louis overcame LaZelle Durden's 33 points to beat Cincinnati.

After Claggett's basket, Durden missed a 3-pointer with 1:08 remaining and Dontonio Wingfield missed a 3-pointer for Cincinnati with five seconds left.

Donnie Dobbs led St. Louis (21-3, 7-3 Great Midwest) with 16 points. Wingfield and Curtis Bostic scored 11 points apiece for the Bearcats (17-9, 5-5).

Michigan St. 85, No. 20 Minnesota 68

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Shawn Respert tied a school record with eight 3-point baskets and had a career-high 43 points to lead Michigan State over No. 20 Minnesota.

Respert, 16-of-24 from the floor, set Breslin Arena records for scoring, field goals and 3-point goals.

Voshon Lenard topped Minnesota (18-9, 8-6 Big Ten) with 25 points. Michigan State (16-10, 7-7) went on a 9-0 run early in the first half to take the lead for good.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished slightly higher on Wednesday in a quiet session in which traders largely awaited weekly inventory figures due after the market closed.

West Texas Intermediate for near-month delivery settled at $14.41 per barrel, 2 cents higher at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $12.75 a barrel.

After the market closed on Wednesday, the American Petroleum Institute reported that stockpiles of gasoline and distillates, which include heating oil, fell last week and crude oil supplies rose. The trade group also said refineries cut their operations to 90 percent of capacity from 90.3 percent the week before.

The distillate drop of 3.2 million barrels to 110.15 million wasn't as much as some had expected and sent heating oil prices another 0.22 cent lower early Wednesday evening.

Crude oil inventories rose 2.23 million barrels to 333.9 million and gasoline stocks fell 630,000 barrels to 228.14 million.

Near-month delivery prices for unleaded gasoline finished Wednesday's session 0.28 cent lower at 43.32 cents per gallon.

Natural gas prices fell 6.4 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to $2.232. After natural gas trading ended for the day, the American Gas Association said gas storage levels fell 8.7 percent last week from the week before.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar finished higher against most foreign currencies on Wednesday after spending most of the day trading in a narrow range influenced mainly by technical factors.

Gold prices fell domestically after finishing mixed overseas. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $377.70 a troy ounce, off 30 cents.

In New York, the dollar ended at 105.55 yen, down from 105.60 yen on Tuesday.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell on Wednesday, giving back most of Tuesday's gains, after investors decided they were concerned about inflation and interest rates after all.

Stocks were also pushed lower by a drop in bond prices that was tied to an unsatisfactory auction of 2-year notes.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 19.98 at 3,891.68.

Declining issues narrowly outnumbered advancing ones on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,177 down, 951 up and 642 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 309.9 million shares, against 270.67 million in the previous session.

Crandall wants U.S. to drop air pact

■ American chief says British Airways enjoys unfair advantages over competitors.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The head of American Airlines wants the United States to scrap its aviation treaty with Britain in hopes of drafting a new one that would give U.S. airlines more access to London's most popular airport.

Speaking Wednesday to the British-American Chamber of Commerce, American chairman Robert L. Crandall said British Airways enjoys unfair advantages over its U.S. competitors.

American Airlines has been unable to get the landing times it wants at London's Heathrow Airport and has been frustrated in efforts to get permission to pick up passengers in London and continue on to third countries.

Crandall's comments come less than a month before U.S. Secretary of Transportation Federico Pena is to decide whether to give final approval to an alliance between USAir and British Airways. Pena gave tentative approval to the link-up less than a year ago and made final approval conditioned on British willingness to allow U.S. airlines more access to Europe.

"It appears that nothing short of U.S. renunciation of the U.S.-U.K. bilaterial will send a signal clear enough to drive home U.S. unwillingness to tolerate the continuing imbalance of economic opportunities," Crandall said.

The American Airlines chief says alliances like those between USAir and British Airways or United Airlines and Lufthansa effectively protect the foreign market from more competition by U.S. airlines while giving them more access to U.S.-based passengers.

American has sought similar alliances with European carriers and has an agreement with British Midland Airways, a regional European Airline.

Central to Crandall's gripe is a practice common in such alliances called code-sharing. In effect, two airlines agree to use the same reservation code, which makes it appear that connecting flights between the airlines are actually on the same carrier.

One effect of using a single code for two airlines is to gain a higher position for a particular pair of flights on travel agents' reservation screens, where they are more likely to get a booking.

Crandall has previously called such arrangements a fraud on consumers, but said he participates to remain competitive.

He conceded his view, particularly a call for renunciation of the air treaty, is not shared by other U.S. airline leaders. The Department of Transportation had no immediate reaction to Crandall's suggestion.

American Airlines executives were pilloried by a House of Commons transportation panel in London recently for seeking only the most advantageous access to Heathrow and claiming anything less constitutes unfair competition.

Mayor urges active efforts to stir growth

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Growth of the chamber and the Midland — and Permian Basin — economy was the dominant theme at Wednesday's monthly board meeting of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

But those attending were given a word of caution from Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth.

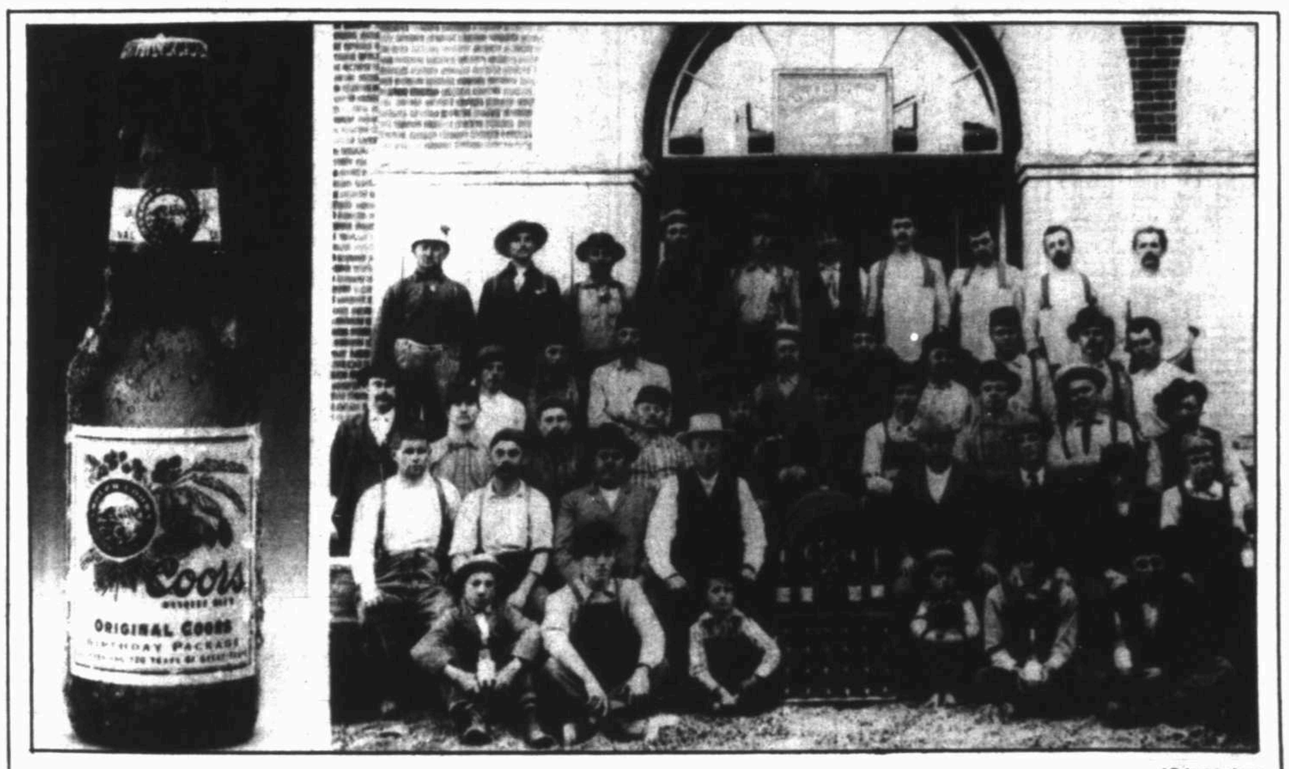

Faircloth told board members and chamber officials that while he is delighted that Midland's sales tax receipts are at record levels, he is concerned that Midland's December sales tax receipts were down 5 percent from the previous year while Odessa's receipts were up 5 percent. He speculated that Odessa's new Sam's Club and Wal-mart Supercenter attracted Midland shoppers during the Christmas season and he hoped Midland's new Wal-Mart Supercenter — now under construction — would be ready for the 1994 Christmas season.

He cautioned that, in talking with Odessans, they seemed to have a more aggressive, welcoming attitude towards new businesses and "this could be harmful to us in terms of attracting businesses to this area."

He urged members to talk to their friends and other businesses and be more welcoming and positive about new businesses coming to Midland.

Focus for chamber staff and volunteers for the next two weeks will be on growth through a membership drive that got under way Monday, according to Bruce Partain, communications director for the chamber. He said 60 volunteers from 18 businesses and organizations are busy selling membership. The goal is to sell 100 memberships before the March 3 afternoon deadline, and Partain said 45 already have been sold.

Growth through economic development was also a major focus of the meeting. James G. Smith, a chamber volunteer serving as vice president of economic development, reported that volunteers are currently visiting the San Diego and Los Angeles areas to recruit businesses to relocate to Midland.

Jury finds Microsoft guilty of patent infringement

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — A federal court jury found the Microsoft Corp. guilty of patent infringement Wednesday and awarded $120 million in damages to a small California company that had accused Microsoft of appropriating its technology for increasing the storage capacity of computer disks.

The judgment in favor of Stac Electronics Inc. came in the first patent infringement suit against Microsoft ever to reach a trial.

The decision involving Microsoft's MS-DOS 6.0 software, the operating system under which application programs runs, is likely to fuel a controversy about whether the nation's patent process is appropriate for the rapidly changing software industry. The Patents and Trademark Office, which began issuing software patents only a decade ago, has been accused of having inadequate expertise in software to judge what is truly novel.

Microsoft and analysts said the verdict would have a minimal financial impact on the company, which had $2.3 billion in cash as of the end of its fiscal 1993 year. But analysts and intellectual property lawyers said the verdict might temper Microsoft's aggressive treatment of smaller companies.

"It's not a landmark case in any sense for the law or the industry; its interest is in how it will affect Microsoft's behavior or the behavior of companies that compete with Microsoft," said Gary Reback, a lawyer specializing in software patents and copyrights with Wilson, Sonsini, Goodrich and Rosati in Palo Alto, Calif.

Microsoft said it would file a motion to overturn the verdict in a federal district court in Los Angeles, and, if necessary, would file an appeal. The company said it would immediately begin shipping versions of its MS-DOS 6.2 software without the infringing code. Microsoft said the decision would have no effect on current users of its software or products currently in stores.

Microsoft, which is based in Redmond, Wash., also said that it would take a one-time charge for the judgment that would reduce its third-quarter earnings by 26 cents a share.

Stac's shares rose 12.5 cents, to $4.375, in NASDAQ trading, and Microsoft's shares gained $1.50, to $81 on NASDAQ.

Stac, which is based in Carlsbad, Calif., filed a patent infringement suit against Microsoft in January 1993, claiming that Microsoft had appropriated Stac's data compression technology, which roughly doubles the storage capacity of computer disks. It asserted that Microsoft was illegally distributing the technology as an integral feature of its MS-DOS 6.0 software.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Fund covers customers if brokerage fails

By Bill Doyle

Q: My wife and I are of retirement age and get a fair amount of our income from stocks. I have memories of the financial difficulties some brokerage houses experienced in previous "bear markets," when stock prices plunged. I recall that many investors who left their stock certificates with brokers had considerable time delays in retrieving their assets when brokerage firms went bankrupt or worked out mergers.

Doyle

What is your opinion about the safety of having securities in "street name" at a brokerage or simply leaving certificates at a brokerage?

A: Unless you are talking about tremendously large amounts, your certificates are safe.

When a brokerage goes bust, the Securities Investor Protection Corp. steps in and bails out the firm's customers, up to the limit of SIPC coverage, which is $500,000 per customer, no more than $100,000 of which can be in cash.

So, if your brokerage firm fails, SIPC will see to it that your certificates and money held by the brokerage, up to those limits, are returned to you.

SIPC was created by act of Congress in 1970. Since then, it has fulfilled its purpose of protecting investors who leave securities with brokerages either in street name or just for safekeeping. Delays have been rare and usually short.

With a street-name account, the securities are registered in the brokerage firm's name. The customer is the "beneficial owner" — the real owner.

With a safekeeping account, the securities are registered in the customer's name. The brokerage simply holds the certificates.

Many brokerages provide coverage with commercial insurance firms, up to several million dollars above and beyond SIPC coverage. That also has worked out well.

Every time this subject is mentioned it must be noted that SIPC and other insurance does not protect customers against losing money if the market values of the securities left with brokerages fall.

SIPC and the other insurers of brokerage accounts do not perform the same function as the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Q: I retired recently at age 65. For years, I have read that, as a person gets older, he should be switching out of stocks. My wife and I have not followed this advice, because of the size of our capital gains.

The total market value of our stocks is $725,000. Except for less than $30,000 worth, all these stocks have more than doubled. Some are up fivefold and higher.

We also have $60,000 in corporate and municipal bonds, $30,000 in money market mutual funds, $30,000 in certificates of deposit, $72,000 in individual retirement accounts, $50,000 in a 403(b) retirement plan, $16,000 in a single-premium annuity and $50,000 in life insurance, none of which has been drawn on yet.

We have annual income of $18,000 from Social Security benefits and $12,000 from two defined-benefit pension plans. Our $150,000 home is mortgage-free.

Should we continue to stick with what seems to be a successful investment plan?

A: Absolutely! Keep handling the family investments as you have to date, and you should have a delightful retirement.

Because you are in better financial shape than most folks, you can't be faulted for bragging a bit.

The advice to shift out of stocks and into more conservative investments holds for most senior citizens. But you are an exception. You are so well-fixed, you can afford the moderate risk of continuing to own the quality stocks you named in your letter.

And that ol' demon tax would clobber you if you sell. The federal capital gains tax would take 28 percent of your profit, leaving you with less money to reinvest.

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:

CHAPS: MC looks for playoff momentum

From 1C

steer clear of the northern conference's toughest competition in the region tourney's first round: ninth-ranked, 26-1 McLennan Community College.

The motivation may be different, but the desired results are the same. Both teams are looking for a win to end the regular season as the Chaps meet the Hawks at Big Spring's Dorothy Garrett Coliseum at 7:30 p.m.

"A win tonight would give us momentum going into the tournament," said Howard coach Tommy Collins. "We could end up a third-seed going into the region tournament, but that doesn't concern me."

Midland College is assured of the west's second-seed in the tournament and will face either Weatherford or Grayson County College on Saturday, March 5 at 10 a.m. The Chaps, ranked seventh nationally, are currently on an eight-game winning streak that includes wins over then-top-ranked Odessa College and Howard. Midland defeated the Hawks 97-76 at the Chap Center on Jan. 31.

"The first time we played them I felt they dominated us," said Collins. "Their guards outplayed our guards, and John Brown was just super. We didn't play well and they had a lot to do with that."

Brown led five players in double figures with 21 points and MC shot a blistering 59.7 percent from the field.

In the first meeting, Howard was led by Charles Poe with 23 points on 10-of-12 shooting from the field. Guard Kavossy Franklin was held to just nine points, 11 points below his seasonal average.

"Kavossy has been our offensive leader all year along, but the last few games we have had to put him at the point because of injuries and foul trouble and that has affected his offensive game," Collins said.

Midland (26-2 overall, 9-2 in WJCAC) rolls into tonight's game on an eight-game winning streak after a 40-point win over New Mexico College Monday at the Chap.

Six Chaps are scoring in double figures. Kirk Ford leads the way with 14.4 points per game. The Chap inside game and bench have come alive during the second half of the conference season. Brown and Ford combined for 29 points in the first 12 minutes of Monday's 117-77 win.

"I think tonight's game is a big game going into Waco," said Ford. "I think we have to play really well to have the confidence and mental edge going into Waco."

The Chap bench, which has been inconsistent all season long, accounted for 62 points and 29 rebounds against the T-Birds Monday. Reserve forward Calvin Morris scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to lead the bench.

"We've been playing pretty hard and aggressive the last few games," said point guard Andre Owens following Monday's game. "The guys that have been struggling have been coming on. Morris had a good game against NMJC. Guys like Ben (Radford) and Richard Edwards have been coming around. Tellas (Lampley) has been playing well consistently for us. If we can get those guys going and playing well for us I think we are going to be a very hard team to beat."

CHAP NOTES: Midland College leads the overall series with Howard 26-17... Howard has won three of the last four meetings between the two schools... Tonight's game will be the last regular season contest for seven MC sophomores including guard Andre Owens who transferred to MC after attending Howard. "I guess you could say its kind of strange," said Owens, who transferred to Howard in Jan. 1993 and redshirted before deciding during the summer to play for Midland College. "I was there last year, going over there playing my last game, getting to see a few people that I met. I think its going to be fun and I'm looking forward to it."

ROGER: Staubach praises current Cowboys

(From 1C)

mer Cowboy quarterback told a press conference before speaking at the United Way's meeting and awards luncheon at the Midland Center. "In a room of 100 people there might be a couple asking for my autograph if Troy Aikman were standing over there."

Staubach paid high compliments to today's Cowboys and their quarterback.

"I think they have assembled as good a team as has played in the NFL. I think they're that strong," he said. "They have as good a quarterback as I've seen throw the football ... and you add a player like Emmitt Smith who's going to be a Jimmy Brown, Tony Dorsett-type player and there's only been a few of those over the years."

At the luncheon Staubach used terms like "innerself, destructive achievers, impowering" and "bonding" in addressing the importance of volunteer work. Those phrases were a bit surprising coming from football player who was so competitive he shunned shaking hands with opponents after games.

He kept the large United Way crowd's attention with humorous stories about the Cowboys first Super Bowl winning year. He joked that after a superstitious Jerry Jones asked him to participate in coin-toss ceremonies before the last two NFC championship games, both of which Dallas won, he might "hold out" if Jones asks him to do the same next year.

The long-time United Way volunteer made his predictic for the 1994 Cowboys both at the press conference and the awards ceremony.

"Last year I predicted they'd win a second in a row and I'm still saying I think they're going to do it again," Staubach said. And later: "I think Dallas will dominate Super Bowls for years to come."

Staubach seemed to contradict a recent magazine story that said he wished he had played five more years.

"I would still like to be playing ... But I was also realistic. I was 38 years old and I had had five concussions. I definitely decided that when I retired I did not want to have anyone tell me to retire and I wanted to leave something on the table. I really felt that was the right time," he said.

The Super Bowl VI MVP believes the 1970s Cowboys have not received their due in the NFL history. He even compared them to the Buffalo Bills, a team he said fans haven't given their due because of their four Super Bowl losses.

"I think we were really the best and most consistent team of the 70s," Staubach said of the Cowboys squad that made five Super Bowls and won two of them. "We were in more Super Bowls than anyone but we happened to lose to a great football team: the Pittsburg Steelers."

Sixteen years removed from his last game as a Cowboy, Staubach still thinks of himself as one of the team.

"America's team is back and it's fun being part of America's team," Staubach said.

BIG 12: Leagues near unification

From 1C

us."

Reynolds said Baylor received the invitation late last week and the Big Eight schools voted unanimously to invite his university, Texas, Texas A&M and Texas Tech.

Disintegration of the SWC, which began in 1990 after Arkansas joined the Southeastern Conference, would leave Houston, Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian to fend for themselves.

The offer was designed to find the best possible television contract beginning in 1996-97. The Big Eight, with other conferences already signed with networks, decided having the four SWC schools would make for a more lucrative offer.

Texas A&M regents are to speak by conference call Thursday, with boards at Texas Tech and Texas to discuss the offer Friday.

That's the Big Eight's deadline for the SWC's so-called "haves" to accept or reject its invitation, sources told The Associated Press.

"We're on the very first step of a long ladder toward this merger," said Baylor athletic director Dick Ellis.

He said the four SWC schools would still have two years remaining to work out details of their transition to the expanded league, which would begin play in 1996.

But Ellis said several details of the agreement, including what to do with each conference's agreements on football bowl games, still must be worked out.

"There have been a lot of moving pieces to the puzzle the last few weeks, but at this time I'm almost certain that the proposed merger will happen," a Texas board member, who declined to be identified, told the AP on Tuesday night.

"I won't deny that," Ross Margraves, chairman of Texas A&M's board of regents, said Tuesday from Washington. "I know our president (Dean Gage) has expressed the feeling to me that it's a good move for Texas A&M, and I understand the other three presidents feel accordingly."

Reynolds acknowledged that Baylor would have to spend more money to compete with the larger schools. He said the athletic budgets at the 12 schools ranged from $10 million to $20 million. Baylor's budget is about $10 million.

"We'll have added costs of joining the new conference, but we'll also have increased revenue," Ellis said.

However, at the so-called "have-not" SWC schools, officials were trying to figure out what to do after Baylor's action.

The Cotton Bowl's future could also be in limbo. The SWC has had a representative in 57 of the 58 New Year's Day games, but that could change with defections.

Chicago deals King for Timberwolves' center

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Chicago Bulls traded backup power forward Stacey King to the Minnesota Timberwolves on Wednesday for backup center Luc Longley.

The deal was announced about 24 hours before the NBA trading deadline of 9 p.m. EST Thursday. Timberwolves general manager Jack McCloskey said he had another possible deal in the works.

King, a four-year veteran, averaged 17 minutes, 5.5 points and 4.3 rebounds for the Bulls and missed 15 games while on the injured list with a sprained right ankle. King has career averages of 6.6 points and 3.3 rebounds.

Longley, a 7-foot-2 center from Australia, was the Timberwolves' first-round pick (seventh overall) in 1991. He was averaging 6.6 points and 6.0 rebounds in 49 games this season, 29 as a starter.

"Hopefully this deal will be good for both clubs," McCloskey said. "Stacey King is a low-post player and we are looking forward to getting him in here and playing him as soon as possible."

King learned of the deal when he arrived at Chicago Stadium for the Golden State-Chicago game. He left the arena before tip-off.

The Timberwolves also will receive future considerations from Chicago.

In fashion world, bald becomes beautiful

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Toss the toupee. Nix the hair weave and deliver yourself from any remedy that promises to sprout hair where none now grows.

Bald is beautiful.

Ask former pro basketball star Michael Jordan, who shaves his head bare, as do Charles Barkley of the Phoenix Suns, Vincent Askew of the Seattle Supersonics, Alvin Robertson of the Detroit Pistons, Xavier McDaniel of the Boston Celtics and Derrick Coleman of the New Jersey Nets. Darryl Strawberry of the Los Angeles Dodgers and boxer George Foreman also opt for the cue-ball cut. It's likewise gaining favor among trendy musicians and models. Peter Garrett, lead singer of Midnight Oil, sports a shaved head, as well as members of the hip-hop group Onyx.

"It used to be a no-no, and now it's definitely happening," says Andre Aleu-Pavon, booker for Webb Models in Los Angeles. "People are more open to bald models than ever before.... It's a very sensual look that adds to your facial features."

Aleu-Pavon encouraged one of his models, Vladimir Tomljenovic, better known as Mick T., to shave his thinning hair. The rest, as they say, is history.

"As soon as I shaved my head, I started getting work left and right." Tomljenovic says. "I turned my weakness into my advantage."

Bald babes include singer Sinead O'Connor, Sigourney Weaver in "Aliens III" and French Canadian fashion model Eve Salvail who has a dragon tattooed on her head.

Some 35 million American men have male pattern baldness, according to the American Hair Loss Council in Tyler, a non-profit organization of hair industry professionals.

Michael Mahoney, executive director of the council, says about 20 percent of these men start losing hair by age 25. By their 30s, the figure is 30 percent, and with each subsequent decade, it increases by 10 percent.

Common male pattern baldness is caused by hormones in those with a genetic predisposition for it. Baldness may creep from the crown forward, from the hairline back, or from both directions.

Whatever the direction and no matter the cause, Dennis Boyles says, no man relishes the moment his kids compare him with Ronald McDonald.

"I prefer to think of myself as prematurely eggheaded. Nothing else matters on a guy between his eyebrows and the top of his sneakers," says Boyles of Everett, Pa., editor-at-large for Men's Health magazine. "You can be fat, have a caved-in chest, wear a $5,000 suit. But as long as you have a great head of hair, you're a great-looking guy."

Mahoney says hair is one of the few ways for men to make a fashion statement and when he loses it he "feels deprived of his ability to make that statement. It can bother you to the point of becoming suicidal."

For some men with a receding hairline, shaving the head is like going for broke, making the most of what they have.

"You can be bald and cool," says Ross Goldstein of Generation Insights, a San Francisco consulting firm that tracks baby boomer trends. "There is something about shaving all your hair that says, 'Look how far I'm willing to go.' It's in-your-face, confrontational, almost aggressive."

Goldstein, who is keeping what hair he has, says that while a shaved head shows that bald is OK, a toupee is a "pathetic attempt to avoid the obvious, a rejection of who you are."

If you plan to shave your head, start with a barber.

"Have it done professionally for a more precise job, since it's hard to see everything when you do it yourself," says Tony Geneva, barber at the Brown Palace in Denver. He says electric clippers every two to four weeks should suffice. His maintenance-free 'do plus after-shave and moisturizer is $13.

Mahoney says a shaved head is the next best thing to reversing the aging process.

"If a young man at the onset of hair loss had the nerve to shave his head," he says, "he would be in a very good position 20 years later to go to his class reunion and have people say, 'You haven't changed a bit.'"

AP Laserphoto

Bald may be beautiful, but for these guys it's not forever. They're executives from Reebok International Ltd. who bared it all for a marketing meeting in Miami. While they resorted to Conehead domes for the short run, head-shaving lasts longer — unless, of course, you're genetically inclined.

Jewelry designer makes eclectic accessories

N.Y. Times News Service

For 25 years, Robert Lee Morris has been working toward his vision of the '90s: globalism in the form of jewelry and accessories that bring together copper and coconut shells, beads and talismans, runic symbols with Hebrew, Hopi with Peruvian.

His latest collection is a veritable Tower of Babel: bangles with lettering quoting everything from the Dead Sea Scrolls to the Serenity Prayer. "More than ever, I'm being an anthropologist in my work," he said.

He soon will be a historian as well, when he assembles a retrospective of his work to be shown in the fall of 1995 at the Fashion Institute of Technology museum.

"His is very continuous work," said Dorthy Twining Globus, director of the museum.

"He keeps exploring ideas and changing them without losing touch with what's been seen before. He combines forms with a sensitivity toward materials, variations on themes, simplified geometric forms and mythic forms."

Morris's earliest jewelry looked like shields or weapons, parts of armor, Indian or African artifacts and sometimes even prothesis. He created pieces for Geoffrey Beene, Kansai Yamamoto, Calvin Klein, Donna Karan, Anne Klein and Karl Lagerfeld.

In 1977 he opened Artwear, a sort of gallery for jewelry design, showcasing his colleagues. And although he closed Artwear recently, he still wants to make a place in fashion for accessories.

This season, Morris worked with the Council of Fashion Designers of America so that instead of being excluded from the shows, accessory designers will open the New York collections on April 6. There will be a film about the history of accessories, sponsored by Elizabeth Arden, and a party, and a resource book will be given out.

"The lack of accessories being shown in magazines hurts our market so much," Morris said of this minimalist era. "Women aren't being taught how to wear accessories and what to do with them."

Nicole Miller sent this pink stretch matte jersey slip dress down the runway as a solo, but it can be worn with a tiny T-shirt under it or a cropped sweater or bolero jacket over it.

Slip dress is little nothing with big look

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Another piece of innerwear has been adapted as ready-to-wear.

The full slip, a relic since the 1960s when, well, it slipped into fashion oblivion, joins undershirts, bustiers, camisoles and long johns as lingerie reincarnated.

The slip dress, in fact, is shaping up as a must-have for spring and summer. It is most likely made of a silky or filmy fabric cut on the bias with spaghetti straps and above-the-knee hemline.

But beware. Because it requires a near-perfect body, Sarah Davies says it's one of the toughest, least wearable looks for the new season.

"The slip dress is not grounded in reality," says Davies, fashion director for Nordstrom in Seattle. "The fabrication is quite filmy and revealing. It's completely unforgiving. Your body has to be tight everywhere, and that limits the number of people who should wear it."

If you're going to wear it, consider a T-shirt, a body suit, or both, and maybe even a cropped sweater.

Calvin Klein likes his clients to wear slip dresses two at a time, in clouds of tissue-weight fabrics. Mark Eisen made a matching skinny tee for a pink silkscreen rose pattern dress.

But your best layer, says Bud Konheim, CEO of Nicole Miller, is a bolero. "The first accessory it's absolutely screaming for is a cropped jacket," Konheim says, "since a long jacket interferes with the body of the dress. And the idea of jacket as accessory becomes even more interesting when you take it off to reveal just the slip dress. It's like a strip tease."

Nicole Miller opened her spring runway show with a pink stretch matte jersey slip dress. Other solo styles include Todd Oldham's flame pattern stretch polyester and Richard Tyler's design for Anne Klein Collection, a military camouflage print on silk chiffon.

For something a little more casual, Adrienne Vittadini put a sporty striped rib knit with anklets and oxfords. Norma Kamali created an athletic look over white tank undershirts.

On a more formal note, Richard Tyler for Tyler Trafficante paired satin slip dresses with embroidered chiffon nightshirts as coats.

Such styles make the slip's original purpose — to smooth any lumps and provide an element of modesty under sheer clothing — seem oddly out of sync.

Yet because it allowed women to present a modest but sexy front, it was the favorite state of undress in the early days of the silver screen. Recall Jean Harlow, Myrna Loy and Marilyn Monroe in satiny charmeuse. Think Elizabeth Taylor in a full slip under a fur coat in "Butterfield 8."

No doubt about it, the slip dress is born of lingerie, says innerwear designer Josie Natori in New York. "There's no zipper," she says. "You just put it over your head. It came from the sensibility of a night gown and is supposed to look like lingerie as outerwear."

DEAR ABBY

Teen promotes abstinence as safest sex

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I applaud your response to "17 and Well-Informed." You said that abstinence is the only foolproof protection against venereal disease and unwanted pregnancies.

Van Buren

In an era and in a society where it is assumed that adolescents and young adults are having sex anyway, your statement bears repeating. If all sexually active young people would be motivated to cease their sexual activity outside of a committed, monogamous relationship, a host of national crises such as teen-age pregnancies, abortions, and unwanted and abused children could be virtually eliminated.

Today's youth needs to realize that sexual activity does not need to preclude finding an identity and proving maturity. It can, in fact, inhibit both. I challenge my peers to take offense at the assumption of our educators that we do not have control over our own bodies.

I am not writing from a nursing home or a monastery. I am a 19-year-old college girl who recently met a wonderful man whom I hope to marry someday. And when we do marry, we will consummate our marriage in complete confidence that neither of us is infected with a venereal disease, nor will we have to struggle with guilt feelings from past sexual encounters. He is 20, and also a virgin. — 19 AND PROUD TO BE A VIRGIN, LEBANON, PA.

DEAR "19 AND PROUD": Thank you for helping to convince sexually active young people that the only safe sex is no sex. And although condoms reduce accidental pregnancies and venereal disease, they are not foolproof.

DEAR ABBY: Here is what happened to me: I sat down one morning and wrote out Christmas cards. When I got to the W's in my address book, my fingers were numb. (I have the start of carpal tunnel syndrome.)

I sent my brother and his wife a Christmas card, but on the envelope, I addressed it using his first and last name. On the inside of the card, I addressed it to all the family and sent a gift certificate, and wished them a happy trip, as they were going away.

Two weeks went by, and I got the card back marked "refused." I checked the address, and it was right, so I phoned my sister-in-law who said she rejected it because it had only my brother's name on the envelope!

Was I wrong to have addressed it that way? I addressed it like that on several other holiday cards and no one complained. (They were happy to get a card.) Is my sister-in-law hung up on manners and protocol? — PATTY H., CALIF.

DEAR PATTY: You should have addressed the card to both your brother and his wife: Mr. and Mrs. ( ). However, your sister-in-law was petty and rude to have returned it marked "refused."

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to Patricia Murchek's letter regarding the abortion issue. I don't understand how, after editing five years worth of videos and writings concerning abortion, she could have come to a conclusion about the pro-life movement that is so completely wrong.

Pro-life DOES encourage information on birth control (not just abstinence) and sex education. It also promotes the fact that all children, born and unborn, are precious — and all human life should be afforded the respect and dignity that it deserves. — MARY MASSINPOLE, COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: When I saw your column with the headline "Nice Guys Don't Always Finish Last," I had to write.

I am a 35-year-old white male, average looking, and I have never been married. I would like to meet the right woman and have a family, but I always seem to strike out.

I have been involved with different groups in the community and I have met many very nice women, but I can't tell you how many times I've been told, "You're really a nice guy ..." or, "You're a sweetheart, but —."

Abby, it seems that in order to get a girl, you have to have looks or money. If you have looks, you don't need money — and if you have money, you don't need looks. — A LOSER IN KANSAS

DEAR LOSER: Never call yourself a "loser." If you label yourself a loser you will never be a winner. Your self-esteem could use some pumping up. Surely you have one friend or relative who will level with you and tell you why you have a history of "striking out." If you don't ask, you'll never learn.

Shoulders back, chin up, and get going!

DEAR ABBY: I think this story tops all the "weird restaurant requests."

When I was a waitress at Herb's La Casita in Grants Pass, Ore., a man came in carrying a live duck, and asked us to prepare it for him. Abby, he was dead serious. — DEBBI IN GRANTS PASS, ORE.

DEAR DEBBI: Was his request honored? (Or did you duck it?)

Grandmas change, but their photos don't

By Erma Bombeck

You can't tell a grandmother just by looking anymore. Some pop a Centrum Silver and climb on a motorcycle, others run businesses, and a few even bump into their grandchildren at rock concerts.

Bombeck

I was hanging out at lunch with a group of my friends recently — all grandmothers — who assured me some things haven't changed.

"We still take a marriage vow of sorts the day a grandchild is born," said one of my contemporaries. "I, grandma, take thee, baby, to be my newest diversion, to have and to spoil from this day forward, through a bad PMS mommie to unreasonable punishment, through forbidden late hours to subsidizing your pitiful allowance, in diarrhea and in hypertension as long as we both shall live."

"What does all that mean?" I asked.

"It means you're a force in their lives who is too old to be shocked, too young to be out of it, too prejudiced to be unforgiving, too familiar with the parents to be on their side, too eager to be loved, too distanced to take any of the responsibility."

"Grandparenting is great," volunteered another woman. "You can look at your grandchild with a diaper dragging on the floor and say to his mother, 'That kid is carrying a load! Change him!'

"Or when he's throwing a temper tantrum in a store and everyone is looking, you can walk away and pretend you don't know him."

"Isn't there a downside?" I asked. "My grandmother thought the term made her old, and we called her Emma until the day she died."

"Not anymore," they said. "Liz Taylor is a grandmother. So is Gov. Ann Richards and Priscilla Presley."

"Well, there is the sucker factor," said another friend. "You have to buy every packet of flower seeds, candy bars, and enough Girl Scout cookies to fill a garage."

"I bought five tins of peanut brittle and I wear dentures," said one.

"That's nothing! I bought five chances on a pony and I live in a condo."

"And you are expected to show up every time they appear in anything at school. I sat through three hours of a cavity-fighting program where my Jennifer was a bad tooth."

"I can top that," said another. "I videotaped a musical where my Robyn was a participle."

After the lunch, all whipped out their billfolds and snapped the picture insert from their wrists like yo-yos. The photos were as current as today's newspaper.

Some things never change.

Nation in brief

■ Attorneys want Mrs. Bobbitt released Monday

RICHMOND, Va. — Lorena Bobbitt should be conditionally released from a mental hospital on Monday, attorneys in the case said.

Mrs. Bobbitt, who cut off her husband's penis, was placed in a mental hospital Jan. 21 after a jury acquitted her of malicious wounding by reason of insanity. Her lawyers said domestic abuse had left her temporarily insane.

"We're very hopeful the judge is going to release her based on some type of conditional release program," said Lisa Kemler, Mrs. Bobbitt's lawyer.

Mrs. Bobbitt is due in court Monday so Prince William County Circuit Judge Herman A. Whisenant Jr. can decide if she must remain in the hospital for further treatment.

Whisenant could free Mrs. Bobbitt outright, return her to the hospital or free her conditionally. Both Kemler and a prosecutor in the case, Mary Grace O'Brien, said the third option is most likely.

■ City Council in Arizona town repeals gun ban

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. — It's legal once again to strap a six-gun to your hip and stride down the wooden sidewalks of this old Wild West town where Wyatt Earp shot it out at the OK Corral.

The City Council in "the town too tough to die" has settled a lawsuit backed by the National Rifle Association and repealed its ban on carrying guns in public.

The ordinance was adopted in 1977 for fear that the mock gunfights staged regularly to entertain tourists could lead to real bloodshed. Folks were worried that someone packing iron could be spooked into drawing when the actors start firing blanks, Mayor Alex Gradillas explained Tuesday.

"Now everybody's kind of leery, because anybody can be carrying loaded guns if they wish," Gradillas said.

The council's unanimous vote Monday to repeal the gun ban brings the town's law in line with the rest of Arizona, which allows anyone to carry a gun anywhere in public as long as it's carried openly.

Earp, a deputy city marshal, was in part enforcing an earlier no-guns law when he, brothers Virgil and Morgan Earp and Doc Holliday shot it out with the Clanton gang, killing Billy Clanton and Tom and Frank McLaury on Oct. 26, 1881.

■ Government prepares to charge Honda officials

NEW YORK — The government is preparing to charge more than a dozen current and former American Honda Motor Co. officials with accepting bribes from dealers in exchange for franchises and cars, the New York Times reported Thursday.

The charges, which include racketeering, bribery, extortion and obstruction of justice, will probably be filed before mid-March, the paper said, citing officials close to a year-long investigation by federal prosecutors in New Hampshire.

The officials, who spoke to the Times on condition of anonymity, said prosecutors believe the Honda executives will plead guilty.

Honda is not being investigated and is cooperating with prosecutors, the Times said.

Jeffrey Smith, a Honda spokesman, declined to discuss the anticipated charges, saying the company had been asked by the U.S. Attorney in Concord, N.H., not to comment until the investigation is complete.

The alleged crimes took place between 1986 and 1991, when popular Honda models, such as the Accord, where in short supply because of voluntary import restraints adopted by Japanese automakers.

Since customers were willing to pay big premiums for the cars, dealers had funds to bribe Honda executives with cash and gifts in exchange for Honda and Acura franchises and larger vehicle shipments.

Jury finds Cook guilty in third trial for 1977 killing

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Kerry Max Cook was found guilty Wednesday in his third capital murder trial in the 1977 slaying of Tyler secretary Linda Jo Edwards.

After an initial conviction was thrown out in 1991 and a second trial ended in a hung jury, Cook was again convicted in the fatal beating and stabbing of Ms. Edwards, 21.

Jurors who deliberated the case over four days sent out several notes saying they were split before finding Cook guilty.

The graying, 37-year-old former bartender showed no reaction as the verdict was read. He kept his eyes on his mother, who sat in the audience.

The punishment phase of the trial begins today. Prosecutors and defense lawyers, who are under a gag order, did not comment on the verdict.

Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

Jurors deliberated about 29 hours over four days, interrupted by a long weekend.

On Wednesday morning, the six-man, six-woman jury sent out a note saying they still were divided and that a "very small number" of jurors were not convinced the prosecution had proven its case.

The jurors asked to again hear testimony from a state expert witness, David Gomez, an FBI special agent who does crime-scene analysis.

After working through lunch, they found Cook guilty.

Cook, who was originally sentenced to die for Ms. Edwards' murder in 1978, served 13 years on death row before his conviction was thrown out in 1991 by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The state's highest criminal appeals court found that a psychiatrist who interviewed Cook had not warned him that their conversations could be used in court.

Cook was tried for a second time in 1992, but a mistrial was declared when the jury deadlocked.

Ms. Edwards was beaten in the head with a small plaster statue and stabbed with a knife and scissors. Prosecutors also say her assailant cut off part of her lip and vaginal area.

Two die in Pennsylvania hotel fire, four remain missing, police say

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — A man listening to music by candlelight fell asleep Wednesday and accidentally started a fire that killed at least two occupants of a residential hotel, police said. Four people were still missing.

Alexander Corder, 31, of Erie told police he dozed off after lighting a candle in his first-floor room at the Station I Hotel. When he awoke, the corner of his room was in flames, said police arson investigator David Bagnoni.

Two unidentified bodies were removed from the rubble of the three-story red brick hotel, where the fire broke out at about 3:30 a.m.

Seven people suffered minor injuries and two people were hospitalized. An unidentified 59-year-old man in serious condition was being treated for burns and smoke inhalation, and Howard Eyster, 83, was in good condition after inhaling smoke.

Smoke detectors sounded soon after the fire broke out, but the hotel's 16 residents didn't leave immediately because they thought it was a false alarm, Assistant Fire Chief Tom Lawson said.

By the time firefighters arrived, the blaze had already destroyed parts of the first and second floors.

Fletcher Wilson said he was awake when he heard a hallway alarm.

"I looked out the door, and the smoke and fire was so intense, it blew me back into the room," he said. He tried to close the door but the force of the smoke and fire blew it back open, he said.

He woke up his fiance, Bettye Graham, helped her jump from the third-floor window, then jumped out himself. Graham broke two ribs and Wilson hurt his back. They were treated at a hospital and released.

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member. or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

¿Que Pasa?

Students from Odessa College where asked for their opinions on President Clinton's proposed three strikes bill?

Juan M. Herrera, electronics major — "I think they should pass it."
Rafael Ortega, art major — "It'll help the problem but it's not going to solve it."

Eric Evaro, advertising major — "I think it's a good idea. It'll give criminals a chance to think before committing another crime."

Juanita Carrasco, student — "I think it's a good idea, but I don't know. We'll just have to see if it works."

Devona Hernandez, chemistry major — "I think it's a good idea if it's going to be toward big offenders, like repeated drug dealers or rapists, things of that level, but if it gets down to just minor incidents, I don't think it will help at all."

Jeff Prieto, registered nurse major — "I think it's a good idea."
Miguel Maynez, law enforcement major, future DPS — "A pretty good idea, because right now criminals just say 'Awe, it don't matter if I go back, I'm just going back for a little while.'"

The majority of students agree the bill is a good idea but they are realistic of the fact it will mean higher taxes because of the prisons that will be needed to house all the life sentences.

Making History With Excellence

By Loenela

A little bit of history was made in the West Texas advertising market this past Saturday, when the Permian Basin Advertising Federation held it's annual ADDY Awards presentation ceremony.

Television promotions for Colores del Barrio, which is produced by KWES-TV, channel 9, and Tiempo Tejano, which is produced by KOSA-TV, channel 7, both received awards for outstanding production. Colores also went on to be named Best of Show, and that was where history was made.

"The purpose of the ADDY Award is to recognize creative excellence in advertising. These are not necessarily the commercials that bring the most people in the door of a business," explained Molly Murphy, President of the Permian Basin Advertising Federation. "The entries are judged by a panel of professionals in the creative field, who are brought in from outside this [the West Texas] market."

"This is the first time that a Spanish-language entry has been made in the Permian Basin Advertising Federation awards, and the first time that one has been so honored. And what's really exciting is that it went on to win Best Of Show. This is the one entry that stands out from the others."

"It feels great," said Richard Esparza, of KWES-TV, who accepted the award Saturday night. "Yes, I was very surprised by the Best Of Show award. I was just hoping that it would win an ADDY."

Esparza is quick to point out that the award-winning television promotion, which was one of two that were received that evening, is the result of teamwork.

Derek Baucum was producer of the promotion, with Manuel Torres producing the graphics, Ben Hernandez and Richard Valdez on photography, and Esparza as copywriter and associate producer.

"I think this feels as good as when you win your very first ADDY," said Esparza. "I started in 1981, so it's been thirteen years now. The thirteenth year was a lucky thirteen! We took it!"

Also celebrating that evening was the staff of KOSA-TV, which received an award of excellence for a television promotion for Tiempo Tejano.

"Well, I was honored and very pleased to accept one," said Mark Salazar, producer of Tiempo. "And it's always very nice to be recognized for your work, to be recognized by your peers."

Again, the promotion was the result of teamwork. Salazar was director and editor of the Tiempo promotion. He was assisted by Raul Villesca, who was photographer and co-producer.

Salazar believes that these awards will serve to promote the local television programs that are already on the air, and perhaps encourage new programs.

"I certainly hope so. I think it will," he said. "It shows that there's some local Hispanic talent, and that there's interest in that talent, in this program."

It's an opinion that channel 9's Esparza shares.

"I hope so. I hope it does, because we need a lot more of it," he said. "Not necessarily the Spanish-language program, but programming directed at the Hispanics."

The Permian Basin Advertising Federation's award is only the first step for the Colores promotion. It now goes on to the next level of competition, where it will be placed against promotions and advertisements from other television markets in the region.

Where perhaps a little more history will be made.

EL PRESUPUESTO DE CLINTON MEZCLA NOTICIAS BUENAS Y MALAS PARA LA COMUNIDAD LATINA

Por Christian R. González y Jonathan J. Higuera

Los presupuestos por valor de trillones de dólares no son fáciles de digerir. Ni tampoco son fáciles de leer y analizar. Esa es la razón de que muchos defensores de la comunidad latina, como otros que andan en busca de la línea final, estén todavía deliberando sobre documento de 1,331 páginas, por valor de $1.25 trillones para gastar y recortar, para el año fiscal de 1995.

En tres campos de especial interés para los hispanos — la enseñanza, el empleo y la inmigración — los analizadores son los más rápidos en ofrecer sus evaluaciones. Estan son un surtido mezclado:

ENSEñANZA

Los programas de enseñanza bilingue reciben un aumento del 12% en los fondos sobre el año anterior, desde $227 millones hasta $254 millones. Sin embargo, el presupuesto de Clinton señala varios programas de enseñanza para eliminarlos o recortarlos. Estos comprenden los fondos para las Subvenciones de la Fórmula de Enseñanza para Inmigración ($39 millones); la Ayuda a los Idiomas Extranjeros ($10.9 millones); las Subvenciones de Estímulo para los Estudiantes de los Estados ($72 millones); la Enseñanza Vocacional, Organizaciones Basadas en la Comunidad ($12 millones) y el Adiestramiento Vocacional Bilingue ($3 millones).

Eugene García, director de la Oficina de Enseñanza Bilingue y Asuntos Idiomáticos Minoritarios en el Departamento de Instrucción PuDblica del Gobierno Federal, defiende los recortes de su jefe al decir que muchos de los programas fueron recortados sólo en nombre y serán re-estructurados bajo diferentes programas.

"¿Es dónde nos gustaría estar? No. Pero cualquier aumento de la enseñanza es un beneficio," dice él.

La re-estructuración proporcionará más ayuda a las comunidades latinas mediante programas tales como el adiestramiento para las iniciativas de trabajo, la Ley del Servicio Nacional y Head Start, dice García.

ASPIRA, una asociación nacional de entidades juveniles latinas basadas en la comunidad, está manifestando su preocupación de que el presupuesto propone fundir los Centros de Recurso para Enseñanza Bilingue con otros centros de ayuda técnica y elimina el programa de Demostración para la Prevención de la Deserción Escolar.

"El gobierno está pidiéndonos que tengamos fe en que ellos pueden abarcar cierto nuDmero de programas más pequeños en su estrategia conjunta para la enseñanza sin pérdida de servicios para los estudiantes sobre quienes se enfocan esos programas," dice Elizabeth Weiser Ramírez, directora de promoción de ASPIRA. Los estados tendrán mayor latitud para prescribir los programas de enseñanza.

Clinton budget mixes good, bad news for latino community

By Christian R. González and Jonathan J. Higuera

Trillion-dooo,ooo,ooo,ooollar budgets aren't easy to digest. Nor are they easy to read and analyze. That's why many Latino community advocates, like others in search of the bottom line, are still deliberating over President Clinton's 1,331-page, $1.25 trillion spend-and-snip plans for fiscal year 1995. In three areas of special Hispanic concern — education, employment and immigration — analysts are quickest to offer their assessments. They're a mixed lot:

EDUCATION: Bilingual education programs receive a 12 percent increase in funds from the previous year, up from $227 million to $254 million. However, Clinton's budget slates several education programs for elimination or cutbacks. These include funding for Immigration Educational Formula Grants ($39 million), Foreign Language Assistance ($10.9 million), State Student Incentive Grants ($72 million), Vocational Education, Community-Based Organizations ($12 million) and Bilingual Vocational Training ($3 million).

Eugene García, director of the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Languages Affairs in the U.S. Department of Education, defends his boss' trims by saying many of the programs were cut in name only and will be restructured under different programs.

"Is it where we'd love to be? No. But any increase in education is a benefit," he says. The restructuring will provide more assistance to Latino communities through programs such as work-initiative training, the National Service Act and Head Start, García says.

ASPIRA, a national association of community-based Latino youth agencies, is expressing concern that the budget proposes merging Bilingual Education Resource Centers with other technical assistance centers and eliminates the Dropout Prevention Demonstration program. "The administration is asking us to have faith that they can fold a number of smaller programs into their overall education strategy with no loss of services to the students targeted by those programs," says Elizabeth Weiser Ramírez, ASPIRA's director of advocacy. States will have greater latitude to prescribe educational programs.

Weiser Ramírez also questions the budget's proposal to reduce staff at the Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights: "This is particularly serious since OCR already has an enormous deficit of staff who can handle the discrimination complaints of limited-English-proficient students and parents."

Jim Lyons, executive director of the National Association for Bilingual Education, observes that while the increase for bilingual education is one of the largest given to a department in Clinton's budget, the office started out with a smaller cash base. He measures the budget as "inadequate in every respect ... very constrained in terms of overall spending. It's not a surprise in light of the budget agreement Clinton and Congress worked out last year."

On a positive note, he points out that under current congressional reauthorization, funds cut from the Immigration Educational Formula Grant ($39 million) will be redirected to Chapter 1, a federal subsidy to poor school districts, which, if Hispanic legislators are successful, will be made available to Limited-English-Proficient students and distributed on a competitive basis.

LABOR: In order to add $116 million to the Job Corps and make way for a $3 billion Workforce Security Act, which beefs up six programs at the Department of Labor dealing with retraining for displaced workers, Clinton cut several training and assistance programs, including some for disadvantaged persons. Program cuts included short-term training for disadvantaged teens, training for those who lose jobs as a direct result of trade policies and treaties, tax credits for employers who hire disadvantaged workers and job training for food stamp recipients.

"The Workforce Security Act retrains those who are already working. It doesn't focus on those who are disadvantaged with few skills to begin with," explains Ruth Pagani, director of advocacy and public policy analysis for the National Puerto Rican Coalition. "This is a majo. policy shift and could have major consequences for the Latino community."

In a Jan. 27 speech, Labor Secretary Robert Reich cited government studies that said all of the programs slated to be killed were not effective.

"The programs getting cut have not done a good job serving the Latino community," agrees Lisa Navarrete, spokeswoman for the National Council of La Raza. "The budget refocuses some of this money."

IMMIGRATION: The Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund applauds Clinton's plan to increase funding for naturalization and speeding up the asylum process, which has a backlog of 300,000 cases, with 45,000 new applications annually.

MALDEF also supports spending proposals for increased training in ethics and civil rights of Border Patrol agents, efforts to move undocumented criminals back to their country of origin and tougher measures to combat identification fraud. A Golden Opportunity for Young Boxers

By Amarante Cordova

It's a process that begins in gymnasiums across West Texas, but could end in the top boxing arenas in the world.

The 50th Annual Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament kicks begins with quarter-final competition, Saturday, February 26, at the Mansion Theater, in Odessa.

"The thing about the Golden Gloves is that it's a national tournament," explained David Rodriguez, an Odessa boxing coach and a promoter for this year's event. "When you win at the local level, the West Texas level, you move on to the state level. And when you win at the state level, you move on to the national level."

"And it's a great way for the kids to get national exposure, national attention. Especially the attention of the United States Olympic Boxing Team."

As is the case for many amateur athletes, the Olympics may provide a springboard into professional athletics. But even those who do not share Olympic glory may go on to successful professional careers.

Many of the reigning champions in professional boxing were at one time Golden Gloves champions. Heavyweight boxing champion Evander Holyfield is only the latest example.

"A bunch of them who have not won medals in the Olympics gave gone on to turn pro," said Rodriguez. "And they make good money at it."

He adds that the young men competing in this year's tournament are just the right age to take a shot at the boxing team in the next Olympics. That tomorrow's champions may be competing today.

"They should be the right age, and ripe enough, and experienced enough for the next Olympic trials, for the 1996 Olympics," he said. "We may see some of these boys in Atlanta."

Rodriguez points out, though, that in boxing, just as in all amateur athletics, only a portion of today's young competitors will reach the Olympic team, or the ranks of professional boxers.

But even those who don't proceed beyond the Golden Gloves will learn valuable lessons that they will carry with them throughout life.

"These kids become real close," he explained. "They know each other, and they hang out with each other."

"They'll go in that ring, and they'll compete against each other. But when the bout's over, they're shaking hands, and holding arms like they were brothers. They've made a friend for the rest of their life."

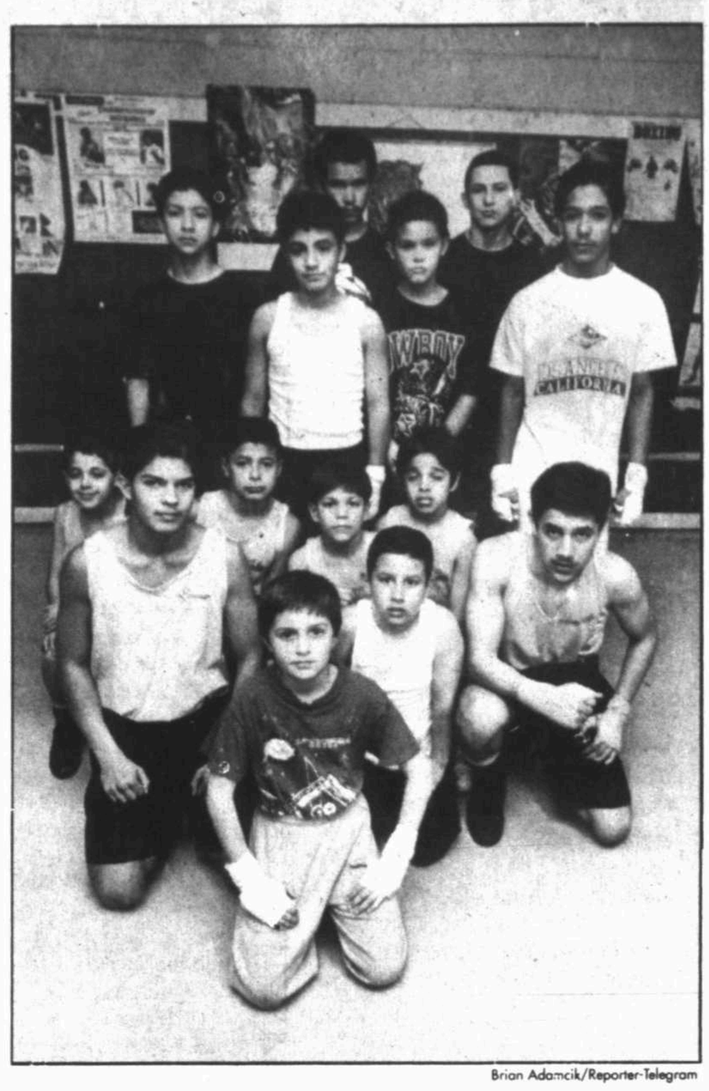

In some families, the sport of boxing has become a family tradition. Rodriguez fought in the Golden Gloves as a youngster during the 1960's. He is a coach today, and often encounters the sons of his former opponents.

"If you get involved in it, it's hard to pull away," he said.

The 50th Annual Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament begins Saturday, February 26th, with quarter-final competition at Odessa Mansion Theater. Semi-final competition takes place Saturday, March 5th, at the Reeves County Community Center, in Pecos. Final competition takes place Friday, March 11th, at the Civic Center, in Lubbock.

For more information about the tournament, you may contact David Rodriguez, at 570-6712.

COMUNIDAD

Ella cuestiona igualmente la propuesta presupuestaria de disminuir el personal en la Oficina de los Derechos Civiles del Departamento de Instrucción Pública. "Esto resulta especialmente grave, ya que dicha Oficina ya tiene un déficit enorme de personal que pueda manejar las quejas por discriminación de los estúiantes y padres con dominio limitado del inglés.

Jim Lyons, director ejeeutivo de la Asociación Nacional para la Enseñanza Bilingue, hace notar que, mientras que el aumento para la enseñanza bilingue es uno de los mayores dados a un departamento en el presupuesto de Clinton, la oficina comenzó con una base de efectivo menor.

El mide al presupuesto como "insuficiente en todos los respectos ... muy limitado en términos de gastos conjuntos. No es una sorpresa a la luz del acuerdo presupuestario que Clinton y el Congreso elaboraron el año pasado."

En una nota positiva, él señala que a tenor de la actual re-autorización congresional, los fondos rebajados de la Subvención de la Fórmula de Enseñanza para la Inmigración ($39 millones) serán re-dirigidos hacia el Capítulo 1, una subvención federal a los distritos escolares pobres que, si los legisladores hispanos tienen éxito, será puesta a la disposición de los estúiantes con Dominio Limitado del Inglés y distribuída sobre base de competencia.

TRABAJO

A fin de agregar $116 millones al Cuerpo de Trabajo y abrir camino a la Ley de Seguridad de la Fuerza de Trabajo, por valor de $3,000 millones, que refuerza a seis pi gramas del Departamento de Trabajo que tienen que ver con el re-adiestramiento para los trabajadores desplazados, Clinton rebajó varios programas de adiestramiento y ayúa, incluyendo algunos para personas con desventajas. Las rebajas de programas incluyeron al adiestramiento a corto plazo para los adolescentes desventajados, el adiestramiento para aquéllos que pierdan sus empleos como resultado directo de cursos de acción y tratados sobre comercio, créditos fiscales para los empleadores que contraten a trabajadores con desventajas y adiestramiento para el trabajo para los beneficiarios de los cupones para alimentos.

"La Ley de Seguridad para la Fuerza de Trabajo vuelve a adiestrar a aquéllos que ya están trabajando. No se enfoca sobre los que tienen desventajas con pocas habilidades para empezar," explica Ruth Pagani, directora de promoción y análisis de cursos de acción públicos de la Coalición Puertorriqueña Nacional. "Este es un cambio importante de política y podría tener consecuencias importantes para la comunidad latina."

En un discurso del 27 de Enero último, el Secretario del Trabajo, Robert Reich, mencionó estúios gubernamentales que decían que todos los programas señalados para su eliminación no eran eficaces.

"Los programas que van a ser rebajados no han hecho un buen trabajo para servir a la comunidad latina," concuerda Lisa Navarrete, portavoz del Consejo Nacional de La Raza. "El presupuesto relocaliza a una parte de este dinero."

INMIGRACION,

El Fondo México-Americano para la Defensa Legal y la Enseñanza (MALDEF) aplaúe al plan de Clinton de aumentar los fondos para la naturalización y acelerar el trámite del asilo, que tiene un retraso de 300,000 casos, con 45,000 solicitúes nuevas cada año.

MALDEF también apoya a las propuestas de gastos para el aumento del adiestramiento en ética y derechos civiles de los agentes de la Patrulla Fronteriza, las gestiones para trasladar a los delincuentes indocumentados de regreso a sus países de origen y las medidas más estrictas para combatir el fraúe de las identificaciones.

Nation's First "Three Strikes" Law Has Its Snags

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Larry Fisher is charged with stealing $151 from a sandwich store. If convicted, he would get life in prison with no chance for parole or time off for good behavior.

The possible sentence is the result of the nation's first three-strikes-you're-out law involving a broad range of crimes. It was passed by 76 percent of voters in November.

They may not have envisioned Fisher's case.

In two earlier robberies, he stole $390 from his grandfather and less than $100 from a pizza shop. The sandwich-store robbery, in which police say Fisher pretended to have a gun, would be his third strike if he is convicted next month. No one was hurt during the robberies.

The second-degree robbery charge against the 35-year-old Fisher of Bellingham is on a list of more than 40 violent and nonviolent crimes that qualify under the law.

Illinois has a similar law, but it doesn't cover nonviolent crime. Since 1978, the state has mandated a life sentence without parole for people convicted of their third so-called "class X" felony. Fewer than 100 people are serving sentences under the 1978 law.

Snohomish County Prosecutor Seth Dawson said he supports the Washington law even though it goes against his best instincts in some cases, including Fisher's.

"No one made me king," Dawson said. "The public has overwhelmingly said he should do life if he's convicted, and we're not going to go around that."

As nationwide anxiety rises over crime, three strikes laws embrace a simple concept with popular appeal.

But possible life sentences for petty criminals are not what many supporters wanted. Opponents also warn that criminals could be reluctant to plead guilty in plea bargaining if a life term hung over their heads, increasing the number of trials — and the cost. Others say already overcrowded prisons don't have the space for more lifers.

The concerns could shape similar proposals in other states and on the federal level.

"We don't want to turn the prisons into geriatric wards long after the individual has ceased to be a danger to the community at large," said House Speaker Thomas Foley. "We ought to be cracking down hard on violent crime."

The Democrat hopes Congress addresses such concerns as it considers whether to keep a federal three strikes provision in a Senate anti-crime package. President Clinton backs the measure but has warned against making it too broad.

Debates aside, the three strikes concept is gaining momentum.

"I would venture to say in all probability they (states) will all start looking at three strikes laws," said Newman Flanagan, executive director of the Alexandria, Va.-based National District Attorneys Association.

"It's the in' thing to do. The public is fed up with the criminals."

A second Washington state case also raises questions, like whether juvenile offenses and crimes committed in other states should qualify as "strikes."

Michael Elton Johnson of Reardan was convicted of rape in Montana in 1976 when he was 17. In 1980, he was convicted in Washington of second-degree burglary and second-degree attempted rape.

His lawyer, John Troberg, plans to argue at an April 6 sentencing hearing that Johnson shouldn't fall under the three strikes law, primarily because he was a juvenile when convicted of rape and Montana and Washington have different legal standards.

Troberg also argues that the law violates the U.S. Constitution because it doesn't allow judges to consider circumstances meriting a lighter sentence. Only the governor can do that by granting clemency.

Stevens County Prosecutor Jerry Wetle, contends the law has sufficient checks and balances.

"Why not make it two strikes?," he asked.

"I think people are getting a little bit disenchanted with the revolving door some of the criminals have been going through," he said. "If it is unfair, then the governor can do what he has to do."

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's gross domestic product grew by a moderate 0.4 percent in real terms during 1993 over 1992, the government said.

"During 1993, despite the slowdown seen at the beginning of the third trimester in some sectors, the Mexican economy registered a moderate annual growth rate," said a weekend statement from the Treasury Department.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The cost of public transportation will rise substantially next month, with bus and subway fares soaring 50 percent and the price of a ride in a taxi or small passenger bus going up 27 percent.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Interamerican Development Bank will lend Mexico $1 billion this year, up $400 million more than last year, to fund development programs, the official Notimex news agency said.

Los Patitos Capitulo Sexto

Por Edwin Sotomayor
Especial para NuevaVista

• Narda termina de leer la carta de su mamá, pero Quino reacciona coléricamente golpeando a la niña y luego a Mirito. Pone en el tocadiscos la canción 'Sombras', y en ese momento llega Genoveva Grau.

La señorita Grau alcanzó a escuchar las quejosas estrofas de Sombras, y su rostro tomó una expresión de contrariedad.

— Señor Zabaleta, ¿cómo espera dejar el alcohol, si se dedica a escuchar esa clase de canciones tan tristes? Que le «envolverán las sombras», sólo sombras y nada más que «sombras». ¿No le da vergüenza aficionarse a esa cursilería?

— ¡Y a usted qué le importa! Dejaré la bebida cuando usted no me esté presionando. Y escucharé siempre lo que me plazca. ¿Ha entendido, distinguida trabajadora social?

La señorita Grau miró con displicencia a Zabaleta, y se dirigió al tocadiscos. Levantó cuidadosamente la aguja, y la depositó en el soporte, retiró el disco, y lo guardó. Luego caminó hacia Quino, y le pidió que se acomodara cerca de ella. Quería hablar seriamente con él.

Se sentó y aguardó a que él lo hiciera. No obstante, el padre de los patitos se mantuvo de pie y montó en cólera.

— Pero, ¿quién se ha creído usted que es? ¡Devuélvame ya ese disco!

— ¡Escúcheme bien, señor masoquista impenitente! Si le devuelvo su pañuelito de lágrimas, usted seguirá con su actitud autocompasiva, y se pondrá a beber. Si sigue así, informaré a la corte la verdad sobre usted: que es un borrachín sin visos de volver al buen camino, un pésimo ejemplo para los niños. Y no volverá a ver a sus hijos hasta que la Corte compruebe que usted ha cambiado. ¿Me ha oído bien?

Joaquín Zabaleta no dijo ahora una sola palabra. Se desplomó en su sillón favorito y, tomándose la cabeza entre las manos, se quedó un buen rato en silencio. Genoveva suspiró y aguardó a que el hombre hablara.

Tania entró en ese momento en la sala. Saludó brevemente a la trabajadora social y, entrelazando nerviosamente las manos, le comunicó al ensimismado padre una noticia nada agradable.

— Quino, Mirito no está bien. Le sale sangre de la nariz y no se le contiene con nada. Dejé a la niña atendiéndolo. ¿Te parece bien si llamo a un médico?

Genoveva se levantó en el acto. Zabaleta continuó abstraído.

— ¿Ya le puso hielo? — Inquirió la trabajadora social.

¿No. Sólo lo hice acostar y le coloqué algodones, pero no se acostumbra a ellos y cuando se los quita le sigue saliendo sangre.

La señorita Grau pidió unos cubitos de hielo, y una bolsa de plástico, con lo cual preparó una compresa. Acto seguido fue a la alcoba de los niños y, con una gran sonrisa que agradó a Mirito, le aplicó el hielo sobre la nariz.

Mientras el sencillo tratamiento hacía su efecto, la capaz mujer le explicó al pequeño paciente, con palabras sencillas, cómo estaba reparándose su organismo. Narda, que ya había dejado de llorar, también puso atención. La salida de sangre se contuvo enseguida.

— Mirito, ahora quiero pedirles, a ti y a tu hermana, un favor. — Dijo la señorita Grau, sonriendo a sus infatiles interlocutores.

— Diga usted. — Expresó el pequeño, contento de poder hablar como un adulto.

—Quiero que los dos me tuteen, que me digan Beba a secas. Así me llaman mis amigos, y yo quiero que ustedes sean mis amigos. ¿De acuerdo?

—¡De acuerdo, Beba! — Exclamaron los niños al unísono.

En ese instante, Quino apareció bajo el dintel de la puerta de la pieza.

Tenía el semblante descompuesto, las manos en los bolsillos y un pie sobre el otro, posición extraña que solía adoptar cuando enfrentaba una duda. Ahora vacilaba entre pedir perdón, o, simplemente, preguntar cómo estaba. Los niños y la trabajadora social lo escrutaron en silenció. Tampoco sabían qué decir o hacer.

Los cuatro estuvieron así por varios embarazosos segundos, hasta que Genoveva decidió romper el silencio.

—¡Venga! Abrace a su hijo y no diga nada. Mirito ya esta bien. La hemorragia se detuvo por completo. — La señorita Grau retiró la bolsa que había servido de compresa.

A Trust Fund has been set up for Ofrael Granado, 14-year old son of Alicia and Oscar Granado.

On December 22, 1993, Ofrael was accidently shot in the head with a gun. He is currently in a comatose condition at the Midland Memorial Rehabilitation Center. The medical expenses Ofrael's family has incurred since the accident have been extensive and will continue to rise. Their best hope for Ofrael is to bring him home with them, where they can love and care for him without the cost of being hospitalized.

As much as the family would like to provide Ofrael the care he needs at home, they are unable to do so because of the special needs he will require. Ofrael's only hope for recovery at home lies within the community and people who care enough to help.

The Trust Fund has been set up at the Texas Commerce Bank, 1030 Andrews Hwy, in Midland, Texas 79701. The account number is 04900124404.

Maybe, owing to my simple mind, I'm the only taxpayer in Midland County that does not understand what you are really saying, but, in the event that other voters don't comprehend the legal talk, Please! Use every day words to explain what you mean, when you say::

The county judge would "preside not only over Commissioner's Court, but would preside, as the Constitution of Texas requires, as a judge in misdemeanor criminal matters and juvenile matters and probate matters and civil matters up to $5,000 (in dispute)."

" Since, eighty five+ percent of the county judges in Texas are not attorneys, are you saying those judges are not performing their duties as required by the Texas Constitution?

And when you say: "Midland can't afford to have a purely administrative county judge,"

? What do you mean by the use of the word " administrative"?

? Is someone that has used their leadership experience and ability to successfully move businesses to a new city and/or county, referred to as an administrator?

Maybe, some government employees will say " Yes", but I doubt that a member of the highly competitive business world would agree.

? Don't taxpayers of Midland county deserve a leader that has successful experience and the ability to strive for a brighter future and more jobs by steering "Grow Midland"?

? When do the citizens get something for their taxes from the one elected office, county judge, that could benefit all, by that person setting a goal to work more than full time to solve problems, be it the jail or the creating of jobs, or is it to be understood by us that court matters are so demanding that the county judge should not aspire to improve economic conditions?

Somewhere in my more than half a century of living and learning, I heard that if you want to get a job done, you give it to the busiest person, assuming they are qualified.

?Is it just possible, that someone other than an attorney could perform the duties of county judge, and at the same time using their ability and successful experience increase what you refer to as: "limited tax base" by increasing the value of vacant properties by new firms to Midland building and hiring workers, and not by raising property taxes again?

Thanks, in advance, for your answers in simple language.

West Texas in East Texas

Jane Paredes/NuevaVista

The Roman Brothers gave San Antonio more than a little taste of Tarillas, they gave them the whole enchilada of West Texas! Performing at the Henry Gonzales Coliseum on January 20, 1994, the Roman Brothers of Pecos, Texas, winners of the West Texas Battle of the Bands, came in second at the Battle of the Bands in San Antonio. After weeks and weeks of preparation, the support of their families and almost no funding from their sponsors, they were the first and only West Texas band to ever have an opportunity to perform at the Tejano Music Awards Presentations. Although they came in second, they are the pride and sound of West Texas, or rather a sample of the talent West Texas has.

A finale with finesse is enjoyed by all

By Jane E. Paredes

The Hispanic Heritage's presentation of 'Noche de Estrellas * Night of the Stars' came to a finale Sunday afternoon and what a finale it was!

By the time Sunday afternoon came around, all the performers had been on stage several times before singing their songs, so the last show was no problem, in fact, the finale probably had more heart and soul than any other performance.

The hard work and effort everyone put in it paid off. The production crew which made sure the audience had all the effects needed included Dee Ann Harris in charge of the lights, spot lights were under the control of Carmelo Lopez, Brandy Harris and Emily Harris.

With the magic and artistic talent of Christina Padilla and all her make-up crew, the audience was able to see every smile and every wink the performer made. The thump and sweet sound of the music was well in hand with Greg Cox at the controls.

Stage directors, Pete Almanza and Rosario Sanchez, and stage managers, Fred and Yolanda Sotelo, were recognized for a job well done. Pete Almanza added a very special thanks to Valerie Orona, Luis Carlos Mendoza, Jaime Mendoza and Gabriel Bustamante for the special touch they added to the show. And of course, the program would not have been as big a success had it not been for the parents of these very talented West Texas!

Very traditional Mariachi songs were performed by Cindy Brito & Jackie Salazar - 'Las Mañanitas', Valerie Guerrero - 'No Vale la Pena', Valerie Castillo - 'Que Creias', DeeAnna Velasques - 'Los Laureles', Dana Vuelvas - 'Toro', Lupe Serrano - 'Gritame Piedras del Campo', Marie Gomez - 'Dos Arbolitos', Amanda Soto - 'Volver, Volver', and Jose Luis Manchaca - 'En Mi Viejo San Juan'.

A bailable (dance) Mariachi style was performed by Marlene Flores to the song 'El Son de la Negra' and another bailable Flamenco style (from Spain) was performed by Cindy Brito.

Tropical was performed by Reyes Rodriguez - 'La Boa', and Jackie Salazar - 'Apaga la Luz'.

Baladas were performed by Jose Gonzales - 'Te Adoro', and the Ramirez family - 'De que Manera te Olvido'.

Even Rock-n-Roll had a place with Gabby Enriquez singing and dancing 'El Dia Del Amor'. International music was a delight with Ysenia Menchaca performing 'Sangre'.

The latest in Tejano music was represented well with outstanding performances by Marina and Amanda - 'Como una Flor', Khrisma Torres and Christian Arcides - 'Robaste mi Corazon', Raul Roman - 'Lo Que Tu Tienes', Sonny Garcia - 'Me He Dado Cuenta', Christian Arcides - 'Por Vida', and Kimberly Vasquez - 'Hay Amor'.

The finale was as energetic as it gets with Viviana and Carla Soliz dancing the Charanga away! Even the whole cast joined in and invited the audience to get involved Charanga with them as well.

It's great when you see so many people excited and actually enjoy a show filled with local talent, especially if the show is meant to encourage young people to grow and enrich themselves with the culture they were born with.

The Globe Theatre was very pleased to be host to 'Noche de Estrellas', a family event for the whole family. A very special 'thanks' goes out to all the volunteers whose effort made a production of Hispanic Culture in West Texas a reality and hopefully, a tradition!

Tejano Music at It's Best

Emilio's #1 fan, Christian Arcides, performs 'Por Vida', a popular love song the audience enjoyed lisening to by a very talented young man. Maybe even a future 'Tejano Cowboy?
