Turner seeks FCC approval of CBS bid

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Broadcast maverick Ted Turner told the Federal Communications Commission today he will try to take control of CBS Inc. and asked federal approval for the unfriendly takeover.

Papers filed by Turner's attorney said CBS stockholders would be offered stocks, notes and other securities in his Turner Broadcasting System worth $2.98 billion, or $175 for each share of CBS stock, which closed Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange at $109.75.

No cash would be paid.

The FCC filing acknowledged that CBS opposes the takeover bid. On Wednesday, CBS Chairman Thomas Wyman told a stockholders' meeting in Chicago that any attempt to compromise the "independence and integrity" of CBS News would be fought.

An announcement read on Turner's Cable News Network and attributed to him said the offer was conditional on acquiring 67 percent of CBS stock, or about 21 million voting shares.

Industry analysts have been skeptical that Turner, who owns 80 percent of Turner Broadcasting, would succeed in an unfriendly bid to control CBS. He was scheduled to meet with a group of analysts later in the day.

One analysts, Fred Anschel of the investment firm Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said about the offer:

"It's a complex package. Very complex packages sometimes run into problems, especially when there's no cash and the liquidity of the securities is not immediately clear."

Anne Luzzatto, a CBS spokeswoman, said in New York that "the unusual number and complexity of Turner's proposed securities make it difficult for CBS to comment at this time.

"Once we have evaluated the material, CBS will inform its shareholders of the merits of Turner's proposal.

"Our shareholders and the public will have ample time to evaluate Turner's proposal...(and) CBS will have opportunities to express its position regarding this matter."

Turner's lawyers said that they also were filing formal notices with the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Justice Department to comply with securities and antitrust laws.

Turner said he would seek a seat on the CBS board as soon as he can acquire the stock.

The papers constituted a formal application for FCC consent to transfer control of CBS to TBS, a necessary step because the commission has authority over broadcasters and networks. The commission will now open the matter to public comment for 50 days before responding to Turner's filing.

The application asks for a year to complete the acquisition of CBS stock, and two years to divest the combined companies of radio and television stations that exceed the number allowed a single owner under federal regulations.

Turner said in a statement that if he succeeds in taking over CBS he would sell CBS's non-braodcasting businesses. He also would sell CBS's FM and AM radio stations in several major markets and CBS's television station in Philadelphia, WCAU-TV.

Midland's quality of life among top five in state

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A study released Tuesday by the University of Texas at Arlington ranks Midland fourth in quality of life among the 52 largest Texas cities, behind Austin, San Antonio and Dallas and just ahead of Houston.

"Midland was kind of an unusual city," said Richard Cole, dean of UTA's Institute of Urban Studies, which conducted the survey. "It wasn't number one in any of the categories, but when you added it all up it did real well."

The ratings were grouped into eight "quality of life" categories — transportation, culture and recreation, public safety, housing, politics, education, economic opportunities, and health and the environment. Midland did well in economic opportunities, education, housing and culture, and earned its lowest ranking in the transportation category.

"I think it probably confirms a lot of things which we have believed but which have not been documented," said Grant Billingsley, executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. "Somebody finally confirmed it for us."

"I'm happy" with the ranking, said City Manager Jim Brown. "Some cities have lots more physical amenities," such as water, hills and trees, "but when you look at all the factors, I think we came out great."

Mayor G. Thane Akins said he wasn't surprised Midland did so well — "I'm surprised we're not number one" — but welcomed the high ranking as a public-relations tool which "might be influential" in attracting new kinds of industry to the area.

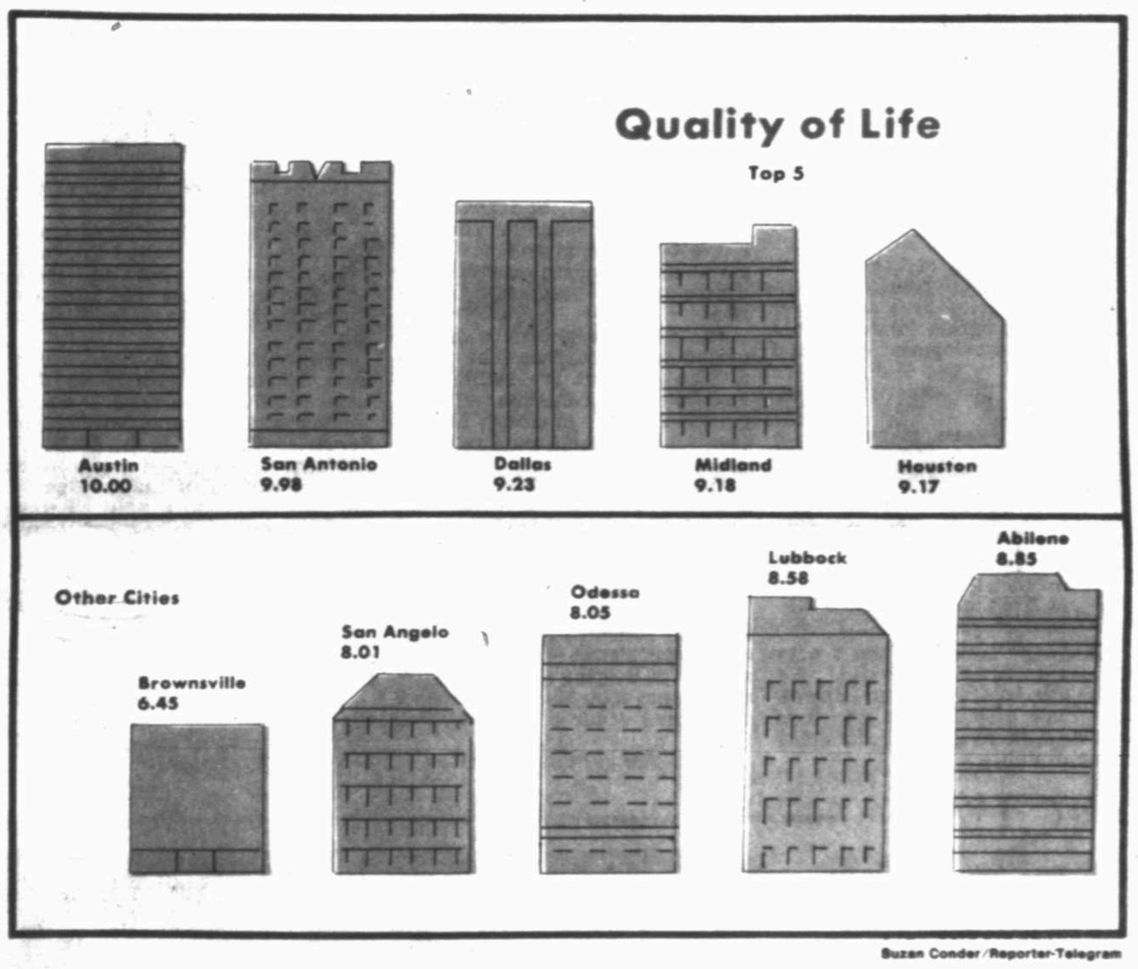

Odessa placed 29th, San Angelo 31st, Lubbock 17th and Abilene 10th, among nearby cities, and Brownsville was dead last.

"I'm not sure of the criteria they used to rank us, but I think you need to take into account our location, the beach, the (Mexican) border — our different way of life," Steve Bosio of the Brownsville Chamber of Commerce told the Associated Press. But Cole said the rankings must be taken "with a grain of salt — maybe a large grain of salt."

"There's more to living than can be measured," he said. "We think we've got a complete statistical picture, but there's clearly another side."

As an example, Cole mentioned that Arlington only ranked 23rd on the UTA survey, "But we think it's a good place to live."

The 52 cities, ranked in order of quality of life, were: 1. Austin; 2. San Antonio; 3. Dallas; 4. Midland; 5. Houston; 6. Denton; 7. Temple; 8. Corpus Christi; 9. Amarillo; 10. Abilene; 11. Fort Worth; 12. El Paso; 13. Hurst; 14. College Station; 15. Kingsville; 16. Garland; 17. Lubbock; 18. Nacogdoches; 19. Carrollton; 20. Mesquite; 21. Plano; 22. Waco; 23. Arlington; 24. Irving; 25. Victoria; 26. Del Rio; 27. Richardson; 28. Wichita Falls; 29. Odessa; 30. Beaumont; 31. San Angelo; 32. Duncanville; 33. Sherman; 34. McAllen; 35. North Richland Hills; 36. Bryan; 37. Port Arthur; 38. Galveston; 39. Texarkana; 40. Baytown; 41. Haltom City; 42. Pasadena; 43. Lufkin; 44. Harlingen; 45. Grand Prairie; 46. Longview; 47. Laredo; 48. Tyler; 49. Texas City; 50. Paris; 51. Killeen; 52. Brownsville.

Reagan ready to consider Nicaraguan aid alternatives

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Facing stiff opposition to resuming military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, President Reagan appears willing to look at alternatives to his plan for $14 million in new aid, House Democrats say.

As congressional head-counters gave Reagan's plan little hope for House approval, even some longtime supporters of "Contra" aid began publicly calling Wednesday for an approach that would withhold military assistance from the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, a moderate Democrat who has backed Contra aid in the past, proposed a compromise he said would keep pressure on the Sandinistas while putting "military action on the back burner."

"The perception is — right or wrong — that the military option through the Contras has been on the front burner and is the president's course of first resort," Nunn said in a speech to the Coalition for a Democratic Majority, a group of moderate Democrats.

Nunn proposed giving the Contras non-lethal supplies, such as food and medicine, demanding the Sandinistas accept a dialogue with their opponents, and enlisting U.S. allies in an economic embargo on Nicaragua to keep pressure on the Sandinistas. He added if the Sandinistas still refuse to moderate their behavior, Congress should consider resumption of military aid.

■ FBI queries questioned; Related story — Page 2A

Nunn's proposal reflects a growing sense among past supporters of Contra aid that a new approach may be needed to avert Reagan's first major congressional defeat in his second term. The House votes on Contra aid next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Other moderate Democrats who met with Reagan on Wednesday also noted that the president seemed willing to compromise. "He said there is room for negotiation," said Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga.

But Democratic House members said the president discussed no details of any possible compromise and indicated no intention to reduce the amount of the $14 million in Contra aid, which would start as non-lethal help but could be made military assistance if proposed peace talks fail.

In the Senate, sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said Republican leaders were looking for a way to sidestep any showdown vote at all.

A proposal under discussion by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Intelligence Committee, would call for a statement of support for the Contras, but end all military assistance, the sources said.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., who claimed a head count shows Reagan's plan will lose, said Democrats are considering an alternative to that proposal under which the United States would provide Red Cross assistance to Central American refugees.

But Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said he believes the $14 million will be approved without change. "I think we can approve it as is," said Dole.

The Senate is to vote next week.

A DPS helicoptor, equipped with an infra red heat-sensing camera, searched far west Ector County after sundown Wednesday for a body, possibly that of Lois Ann Lloyd, 27, who has been missing since the night of April 12. Her car was found burned in Midland County. DPS pilot Wes Wood, right, and DPS Officer Billy Burfrind attach the infrared unit after arriving at Air Terminal, then searched a wide area of West Ector County for about an hour. The search was to resume today. Hair and blood samples found in Midland and Ector counties have been positively identified as those of Ms. Lloyd.

Program to focus on victim's needs

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

An effort to compensate local crime victims for their loss of property and self-esteem and to show more concern for their feelings was announced Wednesday at a news conference by the Midland County District Attorney's Office and Midland crisis centers.

"It's a very needed program," said Debra Pocket, executive director of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and their Children. "The thing we tend to look at is what happened to the person who did the crime. We have a houseful of victims who have had to leave their homes because they have been victimized."

"We're starting slowly to see the pendulum swing toward the victims, who have been kind of ignored," agreed District Attorney Al Schorre. "A lot of times, the victims have felt they were being left outside of the process, which they usually were. It was like they were being victimized again."

Body of 20-year-old man found

From Staff Reports

The body of a 20-year-old Midland man was discovered this morning at an eastside wrecker-service lot.

The man was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry. Police investigators said it appeared he had stumbled about 100 feet from the old Fire Department training tower, where traces of blood were first found.

Scuffle marks in the gravel at B.J. Wrecker Service, 1603 Orchard Lane, indicate the man crawled onto several cars between the tower and the place where his body was found.

England expels Soviet diplomat, airline employee

LONDON (AP) — The Foreign Office announced today that two Soviets — a diplomat and an employee of the Soviet airline Aeroflot — were being expelled, apparently for alleged espionage activities.

The Foreign Office said in a statement that Soviet Ambassador Viktor L. Popov was called in this morning and informed that the two men must leave within seven days.

They were identified as Capt. Oleg Alexandrovich Los, assistant naval attache at the Soviet Embassy, and Vyacheslav Anatolyevich Grigorov, a member of Aeroflot's London staff. They are the 11th and 12th Soviets to be expelled from Britain in the past 3½ years.

The statement said Los, who is married and has been posted in London since November 1982, "had been found to have engaged in activities incompatible with his status." Grigorov was found to have engaged in "unacceptable activities," it said.

The reason given for the expulsions is traditional diplomatic terminology for spying. The Soviet Embassy said no one was available to comment.

Popov was told that Los should leave Britain within seven days and that if Grigorov, who does not have diplomatic status, was still in the country in seven days "appropriate measures would be taken against him," the statement said.

Asked what would happen if the Soviets retaliated by expelling two Britons from Moscow, a Foreign Office spokesman said: "Her Majesty's government would take an extremely serious view of any attempt to retaliate." The spokesman, according to British custom, spoke on condition he not be identified.

The expulsion of Los reduces to 42 the number of Soviet diplomats in Britain, and the expulsion of Grigorov reduces to 104 the number of Soviets in organizations such as the Soviet state airline.

Britain does not allow the Soviet Union to send numerical replacements for people it expells.

The Standard newspaper, citing "a report in London," said the Kremlin had been advised to withdraw two men quietly in order not to damage the current thaw in East-West relations. It did not identify them.

It said the low-key method of getting them to leave "applies to minor and almost routine spying activity."

Popov was called to the Foreign Office by Derek Thomas, a deputy secretary of state, who spoke with the Soviet ambassador for 15 minutes.

Popov was told that while Britain wished to improve its relations and expand contacts with the Soviet Union "this does not mean any relaxation of our policy on the sort of activities in which Capt. Los and Mr. Grigorov have engaged," the statement said.

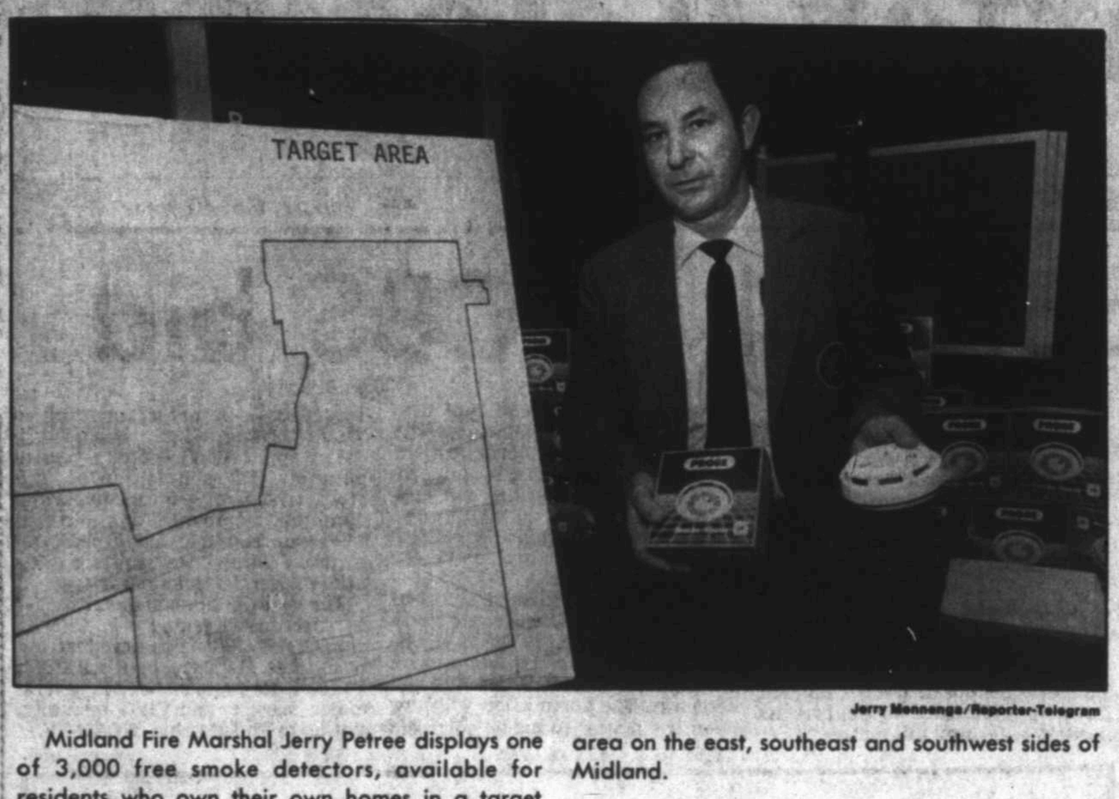

The expulsion of the two Soviets comes amid a drive by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to improve relations with the Soviet bloc.

Last week Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe visited East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Poland. He has made trips to the Soviet Union and all the East bloc countries in the past 18 months.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev visited Britain in December and since he took over in March there have been hopes of improved relations in Britain.

Last May Britain expelled First Secretary Arkadi V. Gouk of the Soviet Embassy, who had been named as a recipient of unsolicited secret information from Michael Bettany, a British intelligence officer. In April 1984 Bettany was sentenced to 23 years in jail for espionage.

At the same time that Gouk was ordered out of Britain, the Foreign Office said two Czechoslovak diplomats also had been expelled last May.

Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree displays one of 3,000 free smoke detectors, available for residents who own their own homes in a target area on the east, southeast and southwest sides of Midland.

Smoke detectors available

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Three thousand smoke detectors will be available to homeowners living in a targeted area at no cost through a program funded with a community development grant and distributed by the Midland Fire Department, fire department officials said today.

"For many years, many of us in the fire service have stood outside the burned remains of a house and watched the terrible reactions and felt the feelings of someone losing their lives in a fire," said Fire Chief James Roberts. "Of course, words cannot explain the feelings you have at a time like that — feelings of helplessness and wondering why.

"But we've known for years ways to prevent it," Roberts said. "We know properly installed and operating smoke detectors will save lives and now we're going to do something about it."

According to Fire Marshal Jerry Petree, the free smoke detectors will be available to homeowners living in a targeted area and who meet financial income requirements that were drawn up by volunteer organizations.

The simple applications may be picked up at any of the four organizations and both low income and moderate income families will be eligible if they live in certain parts in east, southeast and southwest Midland.

"They not only will provide the detectors, but the fire department will also install the warning devices in homes," Petree said, adding installation will be on a first-come, first-serve basis.

"Each alarm will be installed in locations recommended by national standards," Petree said, "(which are) near or in sleeping areas of a home as statistics show that a majority of fatal fires occur during sleeping hours."

Once the smoke detector is installed, it is the property of the home owner, officials said.

Because state law requires smoke detectors to be installed in rental properties at the owner's cost, those who live in a house they own are targeted in this program, Petree said.

Applications can be filled out at Casa De Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane, 682-9701, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays; Community and Senior Services, Wall and M St., 682-7577, 8:30 a.m. to noon, and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays; Our Lady of Guadalupe, CCD Building, 1204 Cherry Lane, 683-8908, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays; and the Salvation Army, 300 S. Baird St., 683-3614, 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Installation will begin as soon as enough applications are approved, Petree said.

"We don't want to keep these at the station," Roberts said. "Where (the organizations) say they should go, we'll get them there."

Colombian leader, pope oppose aid to guerrillas

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's Nicaragua plan has been dealt a potentially serious setback by revelations that two key leaders, Pope John Paul II and President Belisario Betancur of Colombia, both oppose military aid for anti-government guerrillas.

Reagan had asserted as recently as Wednesday he had the pope's support.

The development came as the House Democratic leadership claimed sufficient votes to defeat Reagan's proposal for $14 million in new aid to the Contra guerrillas battling Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government. A vote is scheduled next week.

The new setbacks to his plans were unexpected, as Reagan had consistently maintained he had widespread support among leaders of the Western Hemisphere for his plan.

On Wednesday, he told reporters that the pope "has been most supportive of all of our activities in Central America."

Asked whether the pontiff specifically supported military aid to the rebels, a key feature of his plan, Reagan said, "I'm not going into detail, but all our activities."

But the Vatican's embassy in Washington later put out a statement saying there was no change in the pope's frequently expressed position that would "exclude the possibility of his support or endorsement of any concrete plan dealing, in particular, with military aspects."

On Capitol Hill, Archbishop James A. Hickey of Washington reiterated the Catholic Church's opposition to aid to the Contras.

"Military aid is counterproductive. ... It gives the excuse to the current government of Nicaragua to take all measures of a restrictive nature," he said.

Betancur sent a letter to Reagan opposing renewed military aid for the anti-Sandinista rebels. Colombia plays the lead role among the four so-called Contadora countries, which are trying to forge a peace plan for Central America.

Betancur was at the White House on April 4 when Reagan unveiled his new plan, which calls for $14 million in humanitarian aid for the Contras, a cease-fire and negotiations between the Sandinistas and the U.S.-backed rebels. If there was no agreement after 60 days of negotiations, the $14 million could be spent for weapons.

Most critics regard the plan as simply a new strategy for supplying military aid to the Contras.

Although Betancur had said at the White House that he thought the plan was "very positive," he has said subsequently that he didn't realize that the military aid was part of it.

In his letter to Reagan Wednesday, Betancur said the proposals for a cease-fire and negotiations were "positive and constructive." But he added that "military aid to the groups opposed to the Nicaraguan government worries me."

"We know that a stable peace is possible through civilized dialogue and not through the force of weapons," Betancur said. Betancur's office sent a copy of the letter to The Associated Press office in Bogota.

Betancur also said, "The bases for customary inter-American rights are countries' self-determination, nonintervention and the peaceful solution of disputes."

Webster says harrassment not intent of queries on Nicaragua

By ROBERT L. JACKSON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — FBI Director William H. Webster said Wednesday that his agents have sought out and interviewed about 100 Americans who have traveled to and from Nicaragua in the last two years.

But Webster, testifying before the House Judiciary subcomittee on civil and constitutional rights, denied charges by Democrats that the interviews represented harassment of U.S. citizens for visiting a country whose leftist government is opposed by the Reagan administration.

"I can assure you there was a legitimate counterintelligence purpose for every interview," said Webster, who made the disclosures in response to questioning.

Webster indicated that some of the interviews were conducted at the request of the CIA and the National Security Council. The CIA is prohibited by its charter from gathering intelligence within the United States. By law, the FBI is charged with protecting the United States domestically from the threat of foreign espionage.

Webster did not disclose when or where the interviews took place, but some subcommittee members said constituents had complained about being contacted by the FBI after returning from Nicaragua. Associate FBI Director William M. Baker said after the hearing that most travelers were interviewed after they had returned home.

"The mere travel to or from Nicaragua did not cause us to interview them," Baker said, adding that persons were selected based on their experiences in Nicaragua and whom they may have contacted while there.

"Part of our counterintelligence authority is to determine the capabilities, interests or activities of the Nicaraguan government," Baker said.

VICTIM

Announced during National Crime Victims' Awareness Week, Midland County has made the first attempts to help local victims with new programs instigated when Schorre took office Jan. 1.

Rose Mary Flores of the District Attorney's office has taken on the added responsiblity of victim-witness coordinator, Schorre said. Once charges against a person are accepted and filed, Ms. Flores sends notices to the victims with information about when their case will go to court, how to act if they are to testify, how the grand jury works and other information, he said.

"Hopefully, it lets people know about their case," Schorre said. "In the past, that wouldn't happen. If someone got their house burglarized or was raped, for that matter, they wouldn't know what was happening with their case unless they read it in the paper."

Because 80 percent of the cases are settled in plea-bargain negotiations, which do not require court appearances by witnesses, Schorre said victims of these cases usually were not aware of the outcome of the case. Ms. Flores, with the assistance of volunteer crisis centers and the county probation office, has also helped make available restitution for loss of property or wages, or compensation for medical bills.

"Besides making sure the letters get out to the public, she's been setting up court appearances and making sure people get rides," Schorre said. "We've filed over 200 felonies this year where (victims) have been invited to participate. We've had some say they would love to testify, but they need someone to sit for their children. We have a case coming up next week where the victim's husband is an invalid" and will need a sitter, he said.

Although an application has been filed for a state grant which provides federal funds for a full-time victim-witness coordinator, Schorre said he doesn't expect it to be accepted until next year.

Meanwhile, the county program, an extension of one begun by the National District Attorney's Association two years ago, will expand.

A state-wide crime victims' compensation program, which aids victims of violent crimes who don't have sufficient income to pay medical bills or need compensation, is also available, according to Schorre.

Sponsored by the Texas Industrial Accident Board with the cooperation of the Texas Attorney General's Office, the program provides up to $25,000 for victims on an "as-needed basis," Schorre said. Last year, the average amount of payment per victim was $3,400.

The program also encourages victims to report offenses and helps them be better witnesses, which leads to better prosecution of cases, Schorre said.

"We've had 127 (sexual assault cases)," said Nan Gordon, executive director of the Midland Rape Crisis Center. Victims, she said, have ranged in age from 1 to 80, with the average victim 17 years old or younger. "I know the district attorney's office has been very successful in these court cases."

Schorre attributed the success of the prosecutions to Tom Morgan, assistant administrative district attorney, who handles all child abuse cases.

"There has been a change where more attention is being focused on the victims and the impact the crime has on them," Schorre said. "Not only in the jurisdiction process, but also to personally help them resolve the problems they are going through."

Senators join critics of cemetery visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan group of senators has added its voice to the chorus of criticism over President Reagan's plan to visit a German cemetery where Nazi soldiers are buried.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, on Wednesday released a copy of a letter to Reagan signed by 53 senators, saying the president "should not honor soldiers who fell in defense of the Third Reich and its many atrocities."

In the letter, dated April 15, the senators urge Reagan to find a more "appropriate gesture of reconciliation."

White House aides were searching Wednesday for a concentration camp site Reagan can visit during his trip to West Germany, and were expecting a decision later in the week.

Reagan, meanwhile, blamed "speculation and rumor" for the furor over his initial decision not to visit a concentration camp site. At a state dinner for visiting Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid Wednesday night, he added: "I will take some of the blame."

Reagan explained to reporters at the dinner, as he has before, that he originally did not think such a visit was within the scope of hi trip, in which he is attending an economic summit conference in Bonn.

"I didn't feel I could go off that way," he said.

He said he changed his mind after being assured by West German Chancellor Helumut Kohl that a stop at a concentration camp would be "also part of the official visit."

The president has said he plans to visit the cemetery at Bitburg as a gesture of solidarity with the West German government, a key U.S. ally.

In their letter, the senators noted that many of those interred at the cemetery were killed during the 1944 Battle of the Bulge, a German assault which led to 81,000 U.S. casualties, including 19,000 dead.

BODY

The man's body, clad in black boots, brown pants and a black sweater, was found lying on its back between two cars parked on the west side of the lot when a wrecker-driver pulled another car in this morning. He appeared to have suffered two broken ankles, multiple abrasions and internal injuries, according to police, who speculated the man fell from the fourth floor of the 45-foot tower. A chained watchdog may have frightened the man who appeared to have dragged himself into and over several cars in an attempt to get to safety, police said.

The man was believed to live near the wrecking-service yard, but was not employed there. The body was transferred to Thomas Funeral Home for X-rays and an autopsy was expected.

Controversy on German agenda seems 'out of control'

By DAVID HOFFMAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — For the first time in President Reagan's second term, the White House is struggling with a controversy that appears to have spun beyond its control. At issue is Reagan's plan to lay a wreath at a German military cemetery.

Several White House officials privately acknowledge that the problem should never have arisen, that mistakes were made and that it has been allowed to fester into a major embarrassment threatening to overshadow Reagan's scheduled 10-day European trip.

Six days after the announcement that the president would visit Bitburg cemetery May 5, the controversy remained unresolved Wednesday as deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver, in response to protests by Jewish groups and veterans, searched for a Nazi concentration-camp site to be added to Reagan's itinerary.

Also Wednesday, 53 senators, led by Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, asked Reagan in a letter to drop the cemetery visit. They cited reports that 30 members of Hitler's elite SS troop are buried there and noted "massive participation" by the SS in the Battle of the Bulge, in which 19,000 Americans died. The letter was signed by 42 Democrats and 11 Republicans.

The White House reaction to the controversy was slower than on many similar occasions. In the past, "they would have pulled the plug immediately," said one senior official who has been in the White House since the early days.

The flap also seemed out of character for a White House team that has prized symbolism in Reagan's travels and in his presidency. "It's such a loser. It's not the sort of thing they usually do," the same official said.

The official said that, if Reagan insists on going to Bitburg, the White House will have to deal with a "photo opportunity" in which television cameras pan from the president to the tombstones of Nazi SS officers.

Another senior official familiar with all of the internal discussions said there was no fast way to end the controversy when it erupted last week. He said Reagan told chief of staff Donald T. Regan in Santa Barbara late last week that he felt he had made a commitment to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl to visit the cemetery and could not withdraw from it.

"It's not that we didn't realize that we were going to have to do something," this official said. "We recognized we had our work cut out for us. We knew it was a tough one. But we couldn't pull the plug unilaterally."

Informed officials said the episode originated when Kohl asked Reagan last year to join him in a "reconciliation" ceremony marking the end of World War II. Kohl told the president about a similar ceremony he had held last year with French President Francois Mitterrand at Verdun, site of a bloody World War I battle.

One official said Kohl asked Reagan to visit a cemetery but did not specify one.

Lucas faces more scrutiny from state probe, grand jury

WACO (AP) — After already spending nearly four hours before a special grand jury, Henry Lee Lucas faced more scrutiny into whether his claims to hundreds of murders are true.

Jurors summoned the self-professed mass killer behind closed doors Wednesday as Attorney General Jim Mattox tried to lay the foundation for a statewide investigation into the drifter's confessions.

The Waco probe was prompted by Lucas' confession to the 1981 murder of Dorothy Collins at a time when officers believed another suspect was on the verge of confessing, authorities said. Lucas was expected to return for more testimony before the grand jury today.

With Mattox' assistance, the McLennan County grand jury is also looking into Lucas' confession to the 1977 killing of Glen Parks.

Mattox said Wednesday that one of his greatest concerns is how Lucas knew enough facts to convince law enforcement officers that he committed hundreds of slaying.

"There's two ways you can get information about a crime," Mattox said. "You either committed it or...someone has been given the information."

Mattox said that any number of law enforcement agencies could have been responsible for "tipping him off."

Nationwide, authorities closed the books on 210 murders because of Lucas' confessions.

Mattox declined to speculate on the number of killings that Lucas may have lied about, but he added that "I think there are a number of crimes that he has confessed to that he clearly could not have committed.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, center, meets with reporters outside the McLennan County Grand Jury Wednesday morning before confessed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas testified to the 1977 and 1978 murders of two Waco residents. Mattox said he doubts that Lucas committed all of the murders which he has confessed to.

"The inconsistencies indicate that there are murderers that are still on the loose," he said.

Lucas, 48, was quoted earlier this week as saying he committed only three of the as many as 600 murders he has claimed. He says he was trying to embarrass authorities with the exaggerations.

The testimony given to the grand jury would be used to determine "where the state will go" in an investigation of Lucas' confessions, Mattox said.

Mattox said state District Judge George Allen had granted a 90-day extension of the grand jury term after jurors requested it. Their term was to expire at the end of the month.

Lucas' recall convinces Bexar County officials

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas' recall of details surrounding six Bexar County slayings is too accurate to dismiss, sheriff's officials say.

Authorities say they are so convinced Lucas was telling the truth about his involvement in the slayings, they plan to question him about four other unsolved Bexar County killings.

The one-eyed drifter confessed to the six slayings on a visit to San Antonio three weeks ago. He has said he is responsible for hundreds of other killings nationwide.

However, the Dallas Times Herald reported this week that Lucas now claims he killed only three people. The newspaper said Lucas claims he lied about the other slayings to make police look bad.

"Just because the newspapers print stories, there is no reason to discount one or more murders," said Joe Davis, executive administrator to Sheriff Harlon Copeland.

On his trip to San Antonio, authorities say Lucas admitted killing Nancy Freese Dec. 17, 1976; Linda Hopwood April 27, 1977; Elsa Gonzales July 31, 1977; and Kathryn O'Conner July 27, 1979.

He also said he was involved in the slaying of western nightclub owner Bobbie Lee Barker and the woman's maid Frances Machado on Sept. 23, 1982.

Investigators said Lucas led them to the locations where the bodies of Ms. Hopwood, Ms. Gonzales, Ms. O'Conner, Ms. Barker and Ms. Machado were discovered. He led them to a spot in a wooded area near where the body of Ms. Freese was found.

"Everything the man said points to the fact that he was there during the times the killings occurred in Bexar County," Davis said.

Farm workers' benefits bill ends 'one more vestige of plantation life'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill that would extend benefits to jobless farm workers, ending what a civil liberties spokesman said was "one more vestige of plantation life."

Since it was started in 1936, the unemployment benefit system has excluded farm workers.

Legal Director Jim Harrington of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, which has mounted two successful lawsuits on behalf of farm workers, said the Senate vote Wednesday was "a historic vindication of the farm worker struggle for justice in Texas."

The House-approved bill was sent to the governor on voice vote Wednesday, after it passed a 25-6 Senate test vote.

"The workers have overcome one more vestige of plantation life, which has subjected them to years of discrimination," Harrington said. "It has been a long, hard and oftimes bitter road from the first cry for justice during the 1966-67 strike at La Casita Farms in Starr County."

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, who opposed the bill, said it would be another financial blow for Texas' farmers and ranchers who would have to pay unemployment taxes.

The measure would force farmers and ranchers to pay unemployment taxes if they pay wages of at least $7,500 or more in any quarter of 1985 or 1986 or employ at least four workers for 20 days in those years. Those figures would drop to $6,250 and three workers in 1987.

Sen. Hector Uribe, bill co-sponsor, described the measure as a compromise among farm workers and farmer groups, but Sarpalius said, "I'll tell you right now, major commodity groups have not signed off on this bill."

Uribe, D-Brownsville, said 81 percent of Texas farmers would not pay unemployment compensation taxes until Jan. 1, 1987, even though the bill becomes effective Jan. 1, 1986. He said the phase-in was necessary to avoid bankrupting the Unemployment Trust Fund, from which benefits are paid.

Harrington said the Texas Employment Commission had estimated that the bill would extend jobless benefit coverage to 145,900 workers, with 35,000 employers.

Sarpalius, D-Canyon, said the bill would allow illegal aliens who had worked for one day to collect unemployment benefits, but Uribe responded, "That's not correct, senator."

The bill would cover migrant and seasonal workers, Uribe said.

"This is going to include almost every small farmer and rancher in Texas," said Sarpalius. "It will only exclude what I call the 'hobby farmer.'"

Asked why it was so important to pass the bill at this time, Uribe noted that a state district judge in Austin had ruled the ban on unemployment benefits for farm workers was unconstitutional.

Judge Harley Clark's ruling in January has not been appealed, and Senate Republicans questioned whether Attorney General Jim Mattox had made a "political decision" not to appeal the case.

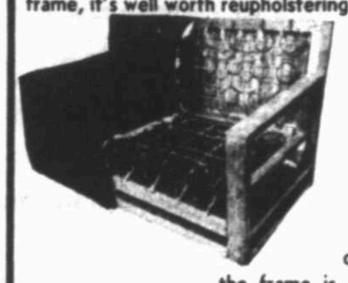

"If he were to appeal it, the state would lose, because he really doesn't have a defensible position," said Uribe.

Sarpalius described Clark's action as a mandate to the Legislature, and said "I don't support that tactic."

IDEAS IN DECORATING
"THERE'S GOLD IN THAT OLD SOFA."

If your old sofa looks as though it's on its last legs, don't be too quick to bundle it out of the house. Resourceful home-owners are discovering that many old pieces have a value you can't buy today. And they are restoring them through reupholstery. The economics of reupholstery works for them, too. For dollars and cents it can be one of today's best buys.

THE VALUE IS IN THE FRAME. If your old sofa (or chair) has a good frame, it's well worth reupholstering. A frame is the essential element in the structure, and if it's solid there's no point going out and buying a new one. So, what's a good frame? One that's made of hardwood—Oak, or maple, for example. Hardwood is strong and has longevity. A clue is its weight: Hardwood is heavy. That's why furniture salespeople will often lift up one end of a sofa when showing it to a customer. They are demonstrating the frame's weight. And the frame is what your upholsterer can check out.

THE ART OF REUPHOLSTERY. Building on your old frame (where you save big dollars), the upholsterer re-ties the springs, puts in new webbing, all new padding and filling, and totally re-creates the sofa. This is all hand-work involving a high order of skills. What you get back is a piece of furniture in the class of a custom-made.

THE FABRIC ADVANTAGE. A significant advantage in reupholstering is fabric selection. You choose from a practically panoramic range of colors and textures. So you can find just about any fabric, at any price, to fit any decor.

All of the above advantages, are available at Hines Wood Upholstery Co. They have served the upholstery needs of the Permian Basin for the past 34 years. Come by 1105 N. Midkiff or Call 694-8891 for more information on solving your furniture problems.

Texas, Israel join forces in agriculture, irrigation

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas farmers could be learning a lot about irrigation of arid lands from their Israeli counterparts under a new agreement between that nation and the state, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says.

"Israel's a good 10, 15 years ahead of us in having addressed their water needs in agriculture, so we have something to learn there," Hightower said.

"They have the technology. They're willing to share that with us."

The agreement was signed Wednesday by Hightower and Abraham Katz-Oz, a member of Israeli's parliament and that nation's deputy agriculture minister.

The pact calls for a Texas-Israel Exchange committee, composed of Texas and Israeli civic and agricultural leaders, to work jointly on projects from which both sides can benefit.

Hightower said he expects the projects to include swaps of information and technology on water use, marketing, processing of farm products, energy and research data. Direct trade links also may be established through the program, he said.

Israel and parts of Texas have similar climates and similar water shortage problems, said Hightower, who visited that country last year.

The Israelis have developed drip irrigation techniques for arid areas, as well as methods for irrigating with salt water and using city wastewater for irrigation, he said.

"Water is one area that we've found we have a very logical connection in," Hightower said.

"We also definitely are going to see some crop research projects. We're going to discuss trade possibilities. We are interested in talking about grain shipments to Israel and the possibility of some beef (export) potential in there," he added.

Katz-Oz made a three-day tour this week of Texas agricultural areas — including Hereford, Lubbock, Littlefield, Weslaco, Harlingen, San Antonio and the LBJ Ranch at Stonewall.

He said he was impressed by what he found and predicted that Israel will be very interested in working with Texas agricultural researchers.

Telephone measure 'tax shift' not tax hike

AUSTIN (AP) — It increases state revenue and extends the sales tax to previously exempted services, but the House sponsor of a telephone tax bill insists it's not a tax-hike measure.

The House gave tentative approval in a Wednesday voice vote to Cleburne Rep. Bruce Gibson's bill that would make Texans pay sales tax on intrastate long distance calls and special telephone services, such as call forwarding.

But the tax "reform" bill, as Gibson called it, also does away with the gross receipts tax now collected on those services. It's a tax shift bill, he said.

"It is not a tax bill," according to Gibson.

Gibson said that for many customers, the increase in sales tax would be balanced by gross receipt tax decreases that could mean lower rates.

Legislative budget aides' fiscal note on the bill shows it would raise state revenues by $8.4 million in 1986 and then level out at $4 million-$5 million a year. Local government could realize a total of about $20 million a year, officials said.

Under the current telecommunications tax law, passed in 1907, phone companies pay a tax based on gross receipts. Telephone services bought by consumers are exempt from the sales tax.

Gibson said the 1907 law is outdated because of the multi-layered phone system that resulted from the break-up of American Telephone & Telegraph and deregulation that has resulted in scores of competing long-distance companies.

The newer long-distance companies claim the gross receipts tax on their business is unfair because the local phone companies they buy "access" from already have been taxed.

"They agree they ought to be taxed but they say the present tax scheme is unfair, and they're right," Gibson said.

One long-distance company got a court injunction barring the state comptroller from collecting the tax. AT&T also has challenged the tax system by paying about $30 million under protest.

The measure was worked out during eight months of negotiations with telephone companies.

"If you're the average homeowner, with a low telephone bill because you don't do a lot of long distance calling, over the long run your taxes will be less," Gibson said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis agreed the measure is not a tax hike.

"It's just an adjustment, making everybody operate on the same level," he said.

Asked if the net result is more money from taxpayer-ratepayer pockets, he said, "Not necessarily, no. Well it will, sure. Any kind of fees or tax or whatever you want to call it will be be out of the ratepayers' pocket."

Corporate tax considered as spending alternative

NATION

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — House Majority Leader James C. Wright Jr., D-Texas, said Wednesday that House Democrats are considering including a minimum corporate income tax in a Democratic alternative to President Reagan's 1986 budget proposal.

Wright said that freezing most federal programs has strong support, but that "less than 10 percent" of House Democrats would go along with postponing for a year the annual cost-of-living adjustment for Social Security and other benefit programs.

As a sign of the growing support for a spending freeze, the House voted 407 to 4 Wednesday to hold the 1986 budget authority for the National Science Foundation at its 1985 level.

Reagan and the House Science and Technology Committee had recommended increasing NSF's current $1.5 billion budget by $100 million next year.

But a bipartisan group of lawmakers, including liberals and conservatives, proposed an amendment to eliminate the increase, arguing that the only way to control the federal deficit was to cut out all requests for higher spending.

"Before we can deal with the deficit we have to deal with requests for increased spending," said Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, D-Conn., who wrote one of the freeze amendments. "Now we are in position to say (to the House Budget Committee) there is a mood for a freeze."

It was the second time in the last two weeks that the House has voted for a spending freeze. On April 3, the House voted 369 to 36 for an amendment by Morrison and Rep. Carl D. Pursell, R-Mich., that froze spending for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at this year's level.

Lawmakers and congressional officials said Wednesday that it was unclear whether sentiment for a freeze would hold firm when legislation authorizing spending for more politically popular programs, such as education, defense and housing, are brought to the floor.

"There's clear sentiment for a big freeze," one congressional official said, "it's just that these votes so far aren't the tough ones."

The minimum corporate tax proposal is drawing increased support from Democrats, Wright said. He mentioned a 15 percent minimum rate and said that would provide nearly $11 billion in deficit reductions.

Wednesday's vote occurred as Budget Committee Democrats met privately and agreed to come up with a Democratic alternative to Reagan's budget that would produce about $50 billion in deficit reductions next year.

"We're aiming for that," said Wright, who is a member of the committee. "We will reduce the deficit submitted by the president by a substantial amount ... but in a much fairer manner."

Senate Republican leaders and the White House two weeks ago agreed to a budget compromise that would result in $52.2 billion in deficit reductions by eliminating 17 domestic programs and substantially reducing others. Spending for defense, however, would be increased by 3 percent above inflation.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., took a dim view of pressure from some GOP senators for restoration of domestic programs that were cut in the budget compromise.

"I don't believe there's any need to make changes," Dole said as he continued a week-long series of meetings aimed at assuaging GOP concerns about proposed domestic spending cuts. He met Wednesday with senators from urban states and reportedly held firm against modification of planned cutbacks in urban programs.

But Dole also indicated that the deficit-reduction plan may need some "help" from Reagan in order to survive an anticipated barrage of challenges from Democrats and dissident Republicans when it comes to the Senate floor early next week.

He said he had urged White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan to persuade the president to make a television speech on behalf of the plan. "I'm still hopeful there'll be a big TV effort," Dole said.

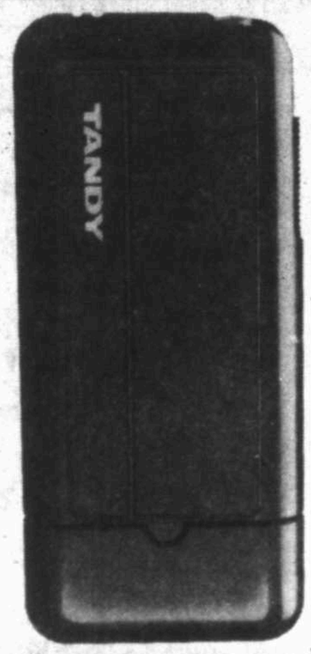

Dole and some other Senate Republicans have expressed concern that the administration's big push for release of $14 million in aid to anti-government insurgents in Nicaragua is getting in the way of White House lobbying efforts for the deficit-reduction plan. House and Senate votes on the Nicaragua issue are expected next Tuesday, a day after the Senate begins work on the deficit package.

Dole said there is a "pretty hard core" of 35 to 40 Republican votes for the package as of now, which is considerably short of a majority in the 100-member Senate. But Dole said he thought some Democrats will break ranks to support the plan.

State waited two weeks to test dairy workers

CHICAGO (AP) — Health inspectors waited more than two weeks after the start of a six-state salmonella outbreak to test workers at a dairy for infection, although state law requires tests immediately, a newspaper reported today.

The lapse undermined repeated assurances by state officials that every test possible was being conducted to find the source of milk contamination suspected in more than 7,000 salmonella cases in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin, the Chicago Tribune said.

Dr. Robert Northrop, an epidemiologist at the University of Illinois, said he assumed that employees at the Hillfarm Dairy in Melrose Park were tested for infection as soon as officials learned the dairy was producing tainted milk.

Had a worker had been found with a salmonella strain identical to that in the milk it could have provided a significant clue in pinpointing the source of the contamination, he told the Tribune.

But by testing the employees 15 days later, after thousands of people had been infected, finding a carrier among workers would not tell investigators much about the source of the contamination, Northrop said.

Tests at the dairy, which was closed April 9, were order Monday.

Algerian president receives warm welcome

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid received a warm welcome at the White House Wednesday at the start of the first state visit by any leader of Algeria since it became independent 23 years ago. The visit marked the start of a new era in relations with the United States.

At an arrival ceremony on the South Lawn, President Reagan hailed the new "positive direction" in U.S.-Algerian relations. He said the United States will seek to expand cooperation between the two governments through a joint economic commission and a cultural-exchange agreement.

Reagan also expressed "the collective gratitude" of the U.S. government and people for Algeria's role in obtaining the release of the Americans held hostage in Tehran five years ago, noting that an earlier Algerian leader, Abdel Qadr, had played a similar role in protecting Americans caught up in internal strife in Syria in 1960.

Bendjedid said he had come to Washington with "a message of friendship and respect" from the Algerian people to the American people and that he looks forward to the development of a "dynamic cooperation" between the two nations.

A senior administration official said later the two presidents discussed at length the Middle East peace process and the role of Palestinians in the process. "We and the Algerians both suspected this was going to be very high on our agenda," the official said.

The official said Reagan had told the Algerian leader that "the Palestinian question" is "an important one that has to be addressed."

Repairs set for damaged navy carrier

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The carrier Coral Sea will move to a shipyard by the end of the week to undergo repairs to damage caused when it collided with a tanker off Cuba, the Navy says.

The 973-foot carrier, its bow partially crushed and splattered with oil from the collision, docked at the Norfolk Naval Station on Wednesday as a crowd of well-wishers cheered from shore..

The Navy has yet to estimate the cost of the repairs, which are expected to take four to six weeks at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth.

The 37-year-old ship just left the shipyard in January after a 15-month, $200 million overhaul.

Navy spokesman declined to comment on published reports Wednesday that the Coral Sea may have turned before colliding with the Ecuadorean tanker Napo off Cuba on April 11.

Capt. Robert Eugene Tucker Jr., the carrier's skipper, was taking a shower in his cabin when the officer of the deck ordered a left turn, putting the carrier on a collision course, The Washington Post cited unidentified Navy officers as saying.

Traditionally, the ship's captain is responsible for everything that happens aboard a ship, even if he is not on the bridge at the time, said Lt. Cam Martin, a Navy spokesman.

The Navy is investigating the cause of the collision, which caused no injuries but damaged both ships.

While Navy spokesmen had said that no fuel spilled in the collision, "we later confirmed that the tanker lost oil," Martin said.

The spill apparently created a 5-mile-long oil slick about 20 miles from the site of the collision 45 miles southeast of Cuba, he said.

Along with the bow damage, the carrier has several holes punctured in its starboard side at the midsection. That damage occured after the ships struck at their bows and swung into each other, Martin said.

Airliner's engine found in New Mexico

Copley News Service

The engine that fell from a San Diego-bound airliner was found Wednesday in a remote New Mexico desert area. Authorities have begun an inspection there for clues to the cause of the incident.

"It must have made quite a noise when it hit, but it is miles from the nearest ranch," said Capt. Guy Dunivan of the New Mexico State Police. "The engine didn't appear to even bounce much or bore into the ground — it was just sitting there."

An aerial search party organized by American Airlines located the Boeing 727 engine at about 9 a.m., PST, 26 miles southeast of Deming, N.M.

The engine weighs about 3,000 pounds, about as much as a typical subcompact automobile. It plummeted from an altitude of more than 30,000 feet Tuesday as the jet traveled from Dallas-Fort Worth with 90 people aboard.

The point of impact was in rugged southwest New Mexico, a few miles north of the Mexican border near the Potrillo Mountains.

It was pinpointed with the help of Federal Aviation Administration personnel. They detected the quickly descending object on a tape made of the radar screen while the plane was flying west over the area.

"It was (on the tape) very briefly," said Ira Furman, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board. "An engine has no aerodynamics characteristics. It does not glide. It dropped."

The nine-person crew of the 727, believed only that the right engine of the three-engine plane had stopped working. In a move later questioned by some passengers, the pilot decided to continue the flight into San Diego.

"They didn't know they had lost the engine and were not aware of it until they reached San Diego," Furman said.

The plane landed without incident at Lindbergh Field shortly after noon, PST.

The NTSB is investigating the incident. An inspector from the board's regional office in Los Angeles finished an examination of the plane Wednesday and released it to the airline.

American Airlines technical foreman Tom Sepulveda checks the grounds around the engine of a 727 that broke off the plane and landed 23 miles southeast of Deming, New Mexico.

American Airline officials said the plane is being refitted with another engine and will be ferried to the airline's maintenance headquarters at Tulsa, Okla., for more inspection before resuming service.

The NTSB dispatched another investigator from its Fort Worth office to the site where the engine landed.

After inspection at the scene, the engine is tentatively scheduled to be removed to Tulsa for further analysis of its failure, an NTSB spokesman in Los Angeles said.

Airline representative Linda Johnson said the inaccessible location was causing difficulties in the effort to remove the engine. A determination has yet to be made on whether it will be airlifted or trucked from the site, she said.

Law enforcement officers in the region said the airline contracted with area pilots, who began systematic aerial flights over southwest New Mexico at sunrise Wednesday.

The engine was found several hundred miles east of the western Arizona location first reported by American Airlines as the likely site of the incident.

The pilot went through a time-consuming and complicated series of damage checks of the aircraft's systems, Johnson said. This carried him over Arizona when the first contact was made with officials on the ground — leading to the initial belief that the engine had fallen off in that state, she said.

The oval-shaped, tapered engine separated from its mounts, which extend from the tail section of the aircraft.

Boeing spokesman Tom Cole said the engines are designed to do just that in emergencies. He said it is a safety feature of the 727, which uses shear bolts designed to separate in the event that one of the engines suddenly "locks up" in flight.

Without the breakaway feature, the tremendous shock of a sudden engine halt could otherwise twist the aircraft out of control and likely cause a crash, he explained.

NTSB officials concurred, saying the engine apparently sheared away from the aircraft as it was designed to do.

Boeing has built 1,831 of the 727 models, with 1,770 of them estimated to still be in service. Of those, 167 went to American Airlines.

Garn ill first two days aboard shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Jake Garn, who volunteered to help scientists study space motion sickness, said during an in-space news conference today that he was indeed ill during his first two days aboard the shuttle Discovery.

Garn also said the job of his crewmates in trying to salvage a dead satellite showed the "professionalism" of space agency planners and astronauts and demonstrated that "man is needed in space. You can't do the things we did up here with unmanned probes. You need brains, you need minds that can think and be innovative."

The crew members did not revive the satellite, through no fault of their own, and had to abandon it as an $85 million space derelict.

The news conference was held on Discovery's final full day in space. Landing at the Kennedy Space Center here is scheduled for 7:16 a.m. EST Friday.

"I'll be honest with you, I didn't feel good the first two days," Garn said in a response to a question from reporters at Mission Control.

The Utah Republican, who came aboard as a congressional observer, volunteered to do anything NASA wanted him to. Flight surgeons asked him if he'd be willing to conduct experiments to help determine why nearly half the shuttle astronauts have suffered periods of space motion sickness.

Garn said he'd deliberately try to get sick, prompting Garry Trudeau to depict him in his "Doonesbury" cartoon strip as "Barfin' Jake." His fellow astronauts have since called him "B.J."

"I certainly hope what the experiments I did will add to the knowledge we have about space motion sickness," the senator said.

Most questions during the 30-minute conference from Discovery were directed at Garn, who is chairman of an appropriations subcommittee which oversees NASA's spending.

Of the attempt to save the Syncom communications satellite, which was powerless after it was released from the shuttle, Garn said, "I watched a fantastic crew do a remarkable job under very difficult and unscheduled circumstances. This crew never gave up...The space walks, the rendezvous with the satellite was a masterful job.

"To see that satellite hanging a few feet above the cargo bay and to watch Rhea (Seddon) operate the arm...this crew did everything it could to save that satellite."

Syncom could not be fixed because the power switch which Mission Control thought was in the wrong position was noty at fault. And the astronauts had concentrated on moving that switch.

Ms. Seddon said she gave the switch two good raps with the handmade tools on the end of the 50-foot robot arnm, but that it didn't budge.

"It was a big disappointment after we had gone through that unplanned training and then not to have it come out the way you expect," said Discovery. commander Karol Bobko.

The seven-member crew, having asked for an extra day in space, were enjoying a relaxing day, completing experiments, packing to come home and sightseeing.

The mission originally was scheduled for five days but was extended one day because of the saterlilte repair effort and a second at the crews' request.

Mission Control and Hughes Communications Services, which owns Syncom, believed a power switch on the side of the satellite did not extend properly after Syncom rolled out of the cargo bay.

During a three-hour space walk, astronauts David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman attached two makeshift snaring tools to the end of the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm.

On Wednesday, Bobko and pilot Don Williams steered Discovery to within 30 feet of the eight-ton satellite and Ms. Seddon remotely guided the arm, twice tugging at the power switch without budging it.

State waited two weeks to test dairy workers

CHICAGO (AP) — Health inspectors waited more than two weeks after the start of a six-state salmonella outbreak to test workers at a dairy for infection, although state law requires tests immediately, a newspaper reported today.

The lapse undermined repeated assurances by state officials that every test possible was being conducted to find the source of milk contamination suspected in more than 7,000 salmonella cases in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin, the Chicago Tribune said.

Dr. Robert Northrop, an epidemiologist at the University of Illinois, said he assumed that employees at the Hillfarm Dairy in Melrose Park were tested for infection as soon as officials learned the dairy was producing tainted milk.

Had a worker had been found with a salmonella strain identical to that in the milk it could have provided a significant clue in pinpointing the source of the contamination, he told the Tribune.

But by testing the employees 15 days later, after thousands of people had been infected, finding a carrier among workers would not tell investigators much about the source of the contamination, Northrop said.

Tests at the dairy, which was closed April 9, were order Monday.

Algerian president receives warm welcome

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid received a warm welcome at the White House Wednesday at the start of the first state visit by any leader of Algeria since it became independent 23 years ago. The visit marked the start of a new era in relations with the United States.

At an arrival ceremony on the South Lawn, President Reagan hailed the new "positive direction" in U.S.-Algerian relations. He said the United States will seek to expand cooperation between the two governments through a joint economic commission and a cultural-exchange agreement.

Reagan also expressed "the collective gratitude" of the U.S. government and people for Algeria's role in obtaining the release of the Americans held hostage in Tehran five years ago, noting that an earlier Algerian leader, Abdel Qadr, had played a similar role in protecting Americans caught up in internal strife in Syria in 1960.

Bendjedid said he had come to Washington with "a message of friendship and respect" from the Algerian people to the American people and that he looks forward to the development of a "dynamic cooperation" between the two nations.

A senior administration official said later the two presidents discussed at length the Middle East peace process and the role of Palestinians in the process. "We and the Algerians both suspected this was going to be very high on our agenda," the official said.

The official said Reagan had told the Algerian leader that "the Palestinian question" is "an important one that has to be addressed."

Repairs set for damaged navy carrier

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The carrier Coral Sea will move to a shipyard by the end of the week to undergo repairs to damage caused when it collided with a tanker off Cuba, the Navy says.

The 973-foot carrier, its bow partially crushed and splattered with oil from the collision, docked at the Norfolk Naval Station on Wednesday as a crowd of well-wishers cheered from shore..

The Navy has yet to estimate the cost of the repairs, which are expected to take four to six weeks at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth.

The 37-year-old ship just left the shipyard in January after a 15-month, $200 million overhaul.

Navy spokesman declined to comment on published reports Wednesday that the Coral Sea may have turned before colliding with the Ecuadorean tanker Napo off Cuba on April 11.

Capt. Robert Eugene Tucker Jr., the carrier's skipper, was taking a shower in his cabin when the officer of the deck ordered a left turn, putting the carrier on a collision course, The Washington Post cited unidentified Navy officers as saying.

Traditionally, the ship's captain is responsible for everything that happens aboard a ship, even if he is not on the bridge at the time, said Lt. Cam Martin, a Navy spokesman.

The Navy is investigating the cause of the collision, which caused no injuries but damaged both ships.

While Navy spokesmen had said that no fuel spilled in the collision, "we later confirmed that the tanker lost oil," Martin said.

The spill apparently created a 5-mile-long oil slick about 20 miles from the site of the collision 45 miles southeast of Cuba, he said.

Along with the bow damage, the carrier has several holes punctured in its starboard side at the midsection. That damage occured after the ships struck at their bows and swung into each other, Martin said.

Airliner's engine found in New Mexico

Copley News Service

The engine that fell from a San Diego-bound airliner was found Wednesday in a remote New Mexico desert area. Authorities have begun an inspection there for clues to the cause of the incident.

"It must have made quite a noise when it hit, but it is miles from the nearest ranch," said Capt. Guy Dunivan of the New Mexico State Police. "The engine didn't appear to even bounce much or bore into the ground — it was just sitting there."

An aerial search party organized by American Airlines located the Boeing 727 engine at about 9 a.m., PST, 26 miles southeast of Deming, N.M.

The engine weighs about 3,000 pounds, about as much as a typical subcompact automobile. It plummeted from an altitude of more than 30,000 feet Tuesday as the jet traveled from Dallas-Fort Worth with 90 people aboard.

The point of impact was in rugged southwest New Mexico, a few miles north of the Mexican border near the Potrillo Mountains.

It was pinpointed with the help of Federal Aviation Administration personnel. They detected the quickly descending object on a tape made of the radar screen while the plane was flying west over the area.

"It was (on the tape) very briefly," said Ira Furman, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board. "An engine has no aerodynamics characteristics. It does not glide. It dropped."

The nine-person crew of the 727, believed only that the right engine of the three-engine plane had stopped working. In a move later questioned by some passengers, the pilot decided to continue the flight into San Diego.

"They didn't know they had lost the engine and were not aware of it until they reached San Diego," Furman said.

The plane landed without incident at Lindbergh Field shortly after noon, PST.

The NTSB is investigating the incident. An inspector from the board's regional office in Los Angeles finished an examination of the plane Wednesday and released it to the airline.

American Airline officials said the plane is being refitted with another engine and will be ferried to the airline's maintenance headquarters at Tulsa, Okla., for more inspection before resuming service.

The NTSB dispatched another investigator from its Fort Worth office to the site where the engine landed.

After inspection at the scene, the engine is tentatively scheduled to be removed to Tulsa for further analysis of its failure, an NTSB spokesman in Los Angeles said.

Airline representative Linda Johnson said the inaccessible location was causing difficulties in the effort to remove the engine. A determination has yet to be made on whether it will be airlifted or trucked from the site, she said.

Law enforcement officers in the region said the airline contracted with area pilots, who began systematic aerial flights over southwest New Mexico at sunrise Wednesday.

The engine was found several hundred miles east of the western Arizona location first reported by American Airlines as the likely site of the incident.

The pilot went through a time-consuming and complicated series of damage checks of the aircraft's systems, Johnson said. This carried him over Arizona when the first contact was made with officials on the ground — leading to the initial belief that the engine had fallen off in that state, she said.

The oval-shaped, tapered engine separated from its mounts, which extend from the tail section of the aircraft.

Boeing spokesman Tom Cole said the engines are designed to do just that in emergencies. He said it is a safety feature of the 727, which uses shear bolts designed to separate in the event that one of the engines suddenly "locks up" in flight.

Without the breakaway feature, the tremendous shock of a sudden engine halt could otherwise twist the aircraft out of control and likely cause a crash, he explained.

NTSB officials concurred, saying the engine apparently sheared away from the aircraft as it was designed to do.

Lucas crimes

There's a new game under way in Texas. It has plenty of participants, but it really isn't much fun. It's called, for lack of a better name, Lucas's Folly and the object is to make the law enforcement community look as ridiculous as possible.

Anyone who has been in the United States in the past couple of years or so should have heard of Henry Lee Lucas by now. It's hard not to hear of someone who has claimed at various times of killing as many as 600 people. That sort of reality — if it is — or insanity — if it's not — is difficult to avoid.

What's even more revealing about the one-eyed drifter's revelation is that numerous law enforcement officers have said on more than one occasion that Lucas' details of the various killings were too specific, too revealing to be mere fabrication given to satisfy the maniacal pleasures of a multiple killer. In fact, nationwide lawmen now credit Lucas with 189 murders.

What motivates an individual to kill hundreds of people or, as the case may be in this situation, to claim to kill hundreds? Is it the attention? Has Lucas lost the ability to derive pleasure from the taking of human life? Does he get that pleasure now from claiming other murders — murders the details of which he may be privvy to that the actual perpetrators cannot claim as their own?

Or has it become nothing more than a game of cat-and-mouse for Lucas? Does he now get his "kicks" from leading the law enforcement community around by the nose — one day claiming to have killed 600 people, the next to have killed only three?

What happens in the future? Does Lucas claim that he's never killed anyone and is really being held captive by the criminal justice system against his will? Does he claim he's really killed a thousand? Ten thousand, maybe?

Lucas obviously is seeking, more than anything, the attention that he's amply receiving and one thing is certain at this point: As long as he holds the "hole card" in this game, he'll probably continue receiving it.

That's sad because it's a morbid game. Lucas is holding hostage the law enforcement community and the loved ones of all the people he claims to have killed. He obviously believes this game is a fun time.

This game is sick and growing increasingly tiresome.

Tax-time turmoil

Millions of Americans woke up with tax hangovers on the morning after one of the most fouled-up income tax seasons in memory. Not only were taxpayers forced to wrestle with complicated, perplexing, weekend-wrecking tax returns, they were treated to news reports of the Internal Revenue Service struggling to reduce a backlog of unprocessed returns and botching those that were processed.

Glitches in a new $103 million computer installed last year are blamed for mistakes and the fact that only 36 million of 60 million returns had been processed with a week to go before the deadline. Even worse were unconfirmed horror stories that overworked IRS employees had dumped thousands of returns into the shredder in a novel attempt to catch up on their work.

Not that the IRS was the only target for brickbats. Congress must shoulder much of the blame for creating scores of exclusions and exemptions in response to the pleas of special interest groups. This has resulted in a tax return that is a mare's nest of confusion for the taxpayer and, worse, in the inherent unfairness of taxing people with similar incomes at different rates.

And President Reagan came in for criticism April 15 from the president of the labor union representing IRS employees for assertedly trying to get along with 6,000 fewer employees to process returns compared to 1980 personnel totals. He adds that instead of reducing the IRS work force further, as planned next year, the government would be ahead of the game by adding personnel who could collect some of the estimated $90 billion a year in lost tax revenues from legal activities alone.

We would hope the Reagan administration is exploring such moves, but it is especially important for the federal government to restore the confidence of honest taxpayers in the efficiency and fairness of the tax system. Columnist Nicolas von Hoffman pointed out a few days ago how the IRS slapped liens on the property of taxpayers even though they had paid their taxes. If taxpayers get the idea that their house can be seized by obeying the law, he noted, many people would simply stop paying their taxes.

Presumably IRS computers will eventually be de-bugged so that such errors are eliminated. But the fairness issue will remain, and taxpayers can only applaud President Reagan's promise to press for basic tax reform legislation next month. He criticized present loopholes and tax shelters and proposed a reduction in the top income tax rate to 35 percent or lower and to give "most Americans a tax cut."

But it will be up to Congress to trim the federal deficit if such a basic tax reform is to work. A compromise agreement between the president and the Senate Finance Committee to cut $300 billion over the next three years was a responsible step in the right direction. Dare we hope for the best of two worlds, tax reform and tax reduction?

Today's highlight in history:

On April 18, 1775, Paul Revere began his famous ride from Charlestown to Lexington, Mass., warning the American colonists that the British were coming.

On this date:

In 1906, a devastating earthquake struck San Francisco, followed by raging fires. About 700 people died.

In 1942, four months after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, an air squadron led by James H. Doolittle bombed Tokyo and other Japanese cities.

In 1946, the League of Nations went out of business.

In 1949, the Irish Republic was proclaimed.

In 1956, actress Grace Kelly married Prince Rainier of Monaco in a civil ceremony. A church wedding came the next day.

Today's birthdays: Movie composer Miklos Rozsa is 78. Actress Barbara Hale is 63. Actor Clive Revill is 55. Actor Robert Hooks is 48. Actress Hayley Mills is 39.

Thought for today: "The crisis you have to worry about most is the one you don't see coming." — Mike Mansfield of Montana, former Senate Democratic Leader and U.S. Ambassador to Japan.

Miami: America's 'end of the line'

MIAMI — "Look," says the mayor, turning at the lunch table and gesturing toward the window and beyond at this city's erupting skyline. "If it's so bad, how come the big players in real estate are here?" And he rattles off a list of those players.

George F. Will

Well, maybe some of the real-estate boom derives from the fact that there is a lot of bad money looking for things to buy. And one reason many banks and corporations have offices here is the same reason a few things are bad here: Latin America is just over the horizon. So are the drug traffickers.

"Look," says Mayor Maurice Ferre, 49, using a knife to draw a line on the tablecloth. "Draw a line due south to the South Pole. Every major airport in South America is to the east of Miami. If you want to fly from Lima to Los Angeles, the quickest way is through Miami." And among the things coming through Miami is a flood of "controlled substances," which barely are. Controlled, that is. The drug traffic continues in spite of Crockett and Tubbs, the characters — and how! — on the television show "Miami Vice."

Viewing that program is like being locked inside a rock video with two boys who, having overdosed on chocolate donuts, are hyperactive and should be sent to their rooms. Crockett and Tubbs are police officers. Sure they are. When not roaring around in a speedboat, they are roaring around in a Ferrari, and in $500 Italian linen jackets and sleeveless, peach-colored T-shirts.

Does this shoot-'em-up portraying Miami as crime-ridden bother the mayor? No, he says equably, people are trying to explain Miami's vitality in terms of the wrong chemicals. It started with Dow, not drugs.

About 15 years ago, he says, Dow Chemical Co. decided it could not efficiently run its Latin American operations out of Michigan and did an elaborate study which highlighted Miami's advantages. That study circulated widely, and soon the city's commercial base achieved a critical mass, with European and American banks and corporations creating "symbiotic energy." The mayor is in his sixth two-year term, and like the city, is revved up.

Energy, symbiotic or other, Miami has, some people think, in excess. It had ample energy even before Castro flooded it in 1979 with refugees lacking proper character references. But the mayor insists that Miami is a Latin American city only the way Boston is Irish or Milwaukee is Polish and German.

Miami has been called "the Hong Kong of Latin America," but the mayor prefers to compare it to Beirut — before the civil war, he hastens to add. He says Miami is to Latin America what Beirut was to the Arab World: a center for commerce, pleasure and cosmopolitanism. The big difference, the mayor says, is "the American flag" — the FBI, the Constitution, the law. But some Miamians think the difference is not as big as it should be.

Of the drug money sloshing around Miami, the mayor says: "Is it a great part of Miami? Of course." Look, he says, Miami is the cocaine capital of the world only because the United States is the main cocaine market.

If all international cocaine merchants formed a single American company, that company would rank with the Ford Motor Company near the top of Fortune magazine's list of largest corporations. It would be three times larger than the movie and recording industries — combined. Recently some cocaine was found here in the cargo on a Colombian 747 airliner. The street value of the cocaine was $600 million — five times the value of the 747.

Drug runners have the best boats, planes and electronic equipment. Miami, says the mayor, can not help but be awash with drug money. Dealers can load the cash into jets and deliver it to numbered accounts in Bahamian or other "offshore" banks and then have it transferred, electronically, back to Miami. And such laundering is not always necessary. If someone comes into a showroom offering $60,000 cash for an automobile, not many salespersons are going to call the police.

Look, the mayor says cheerfully, geography is destiny and Florida always has attracted adventurous spirits because it is "the end of the line." So it is, and so it has been home for aviation pioneers, land speculators and other high-spirited folks including, it is safe to say, America's only mayor who compares his city to Beirut — before the roof fell in, of course. The end of the line: That was the Wild West when it was a frontier. Miami is a sort of frontier. It is the Wild South and the sheriff wears a sleeveless, peach-colored T-shirt.

CHARLEY REESE

America's interests always come first

I share with most Americans a profound lack of interest in the rest of the world. I do not fret much about the absence of democracy in Africa, the question of apartheid, the political fate of the Philippines president, Brazil's debt, the resolution of the Turkish-Greek dispute over Cyprus and whether Israel did indeed violate international law by hauling a few hundred prisoners over the Lebanese-Israeli border.

Charley Reese

It's not that I have any hard feelings toward the rest of the world. As Tiny Tim said, God bless them each and everyone. It's just that I am an American. I not only love my country, but I like it and I'm interested in it. Practically all the people, places and things I love are located right here.

For that reason my only interest in the world beyond our borders is simply how that world out there is going to affect my country. The first and last thing I want to know about a foreign government is whether it's friendly or hostile to the United States.

I think it would be nice and I believe it would be beneficial if other countries followed our example of a constitutional republican form of government. But whether they do or not is their business. Furthermore, I know enough about the rest of the world to know that our forms which reflect our traditions don't fit the traditions and values of some other people.

Japanese, just to cite one example, do not value individualism the way Americans do. To single out a Japanese worker for praise would make him feel extremely uncomfortable.

Among the Smart Set, you are not supposed to be nationalistic. National is out, global is in. Independence is out, interdependence is in. This silliness started right after World War II and unfortunately was given a push in education. Even today there is a formal movement to provide American kids with a "global education."

Hogwash. The effect of this misguided thinking has too often been to deprive an American youngster of knowledge and appreciation of his own country.

Furthermore, it — the notion of downplaying nationalistic education — has been sold on the false premise that the alternative to globalism is isolationism. More hogwash. The world is not a whit more interdependent today than it was 400 years ago.

Nations have always engaged in international trade. That's why Marco Polo went to China. Almost no nation is self-sufficient in all the things it needs or would like to have. World trade pre-dates the current globalism malarkey by thousands of years.

The push to downplay America for Americans is really a scam to justify taxing Americans and involving American diplomacy and military forces in areas that really are of interest only to the international corporations which do business there.

It is not the job of the American taxpayer and the American soldier to make life easier for international corporations. The relationship between the U.S. Government and a foreign government should have nothing to do with how that foreign government treats American-based international corporations operating in the foreign country. That affair is strictly between the corporation and the foreign government.

If I had to choose one single reason for the fouled up foreign policy of the U.S. in the last 50 years, I would have to say it is influence which was deliberately sought and gained by international business over the U.S. State Department.

The Council on Foreign Relations, which is probably the key consensus building organization on foreign policy issues, was created by the old Morgan-Rockefeller interests in the 1920s. Most of the foundations which concentrate on foreign policy are funded by big business.

I have nothing against big business or against international corporations. In the economic sphere, they do a lot of good. I just believe that for the same reason we keep church and state separate, we ought to keep business and state separated. If we did, it would be much easier to state honestly just what American interests are and to construct an honest foreign policy which could protect those interests and which the American people would wholeheartedly support.

As I said, my concern is with America and American business, not with international affairs and international business.

ART BUCHWALD

Healing wounds isn't painless process

President Reagan couldn't understand what all the fuss was about when it was announced he was going to visit a German military cemetery next month and pay tribute to German soldiers killed in World War II.

Art Buchwald

The White House said the president had decided not to visit the Nazi concentration camp at Dachau or an Allied war cemetery because his trip was being made in the "spirit of reconciliation" and Mr. Reagan did not want to open old wounds.

While no one doubts that the president is a great communicator, every once in awhile he does fall on his face. How did he make his most recent blooper? One theory, advanced by Bill Greider of Rolling Stone, is that Mr. Reagan's advance team was so busy buying BMWs at half price that they didn't check out the political ramifications of the decision.

"Mr. President, here is the itinerary for your trip to West Germany in May. We've got you down for a trip to the Bitburg Military Cemetery. The Germans thought it would be a nice gesture if you visited a place where only German soldiers are buried. It would show that you are willing to let bygones be bygones."

"I have no objection, but shouldn't I visit Dachau and an Allied cemetery as well?"

"That would be opening up old wounds, Mr. President. We can't send a wrong message to the Germans at this time."

"How can I send a wrong message to the Germans if I visit Dachau?"

"Because you don't want to remind them of all the bad stuff they did during the war. It would be a mistake to lay a guilt trip on Germany just when we got them to take our Pershing missiles."

"There's something in that. At the same time you are aware there is going to be a tremendous amount of flack from our veterans and also the victims of the Nazis. How do I handle that?"

"You can say at your press conference we can't hold today's Germans responsible for things that their ancestors did in World War II."

"Ancestors?"

"Of course. All the Germans involved in World War II are dead. They told me so at the BMW showroom."

"I thought there were quite a few ex-Nazis alive."

"There are none in Germany. The only ones left are living in Argentina."

"Won't our ex-GIs be upset if I go to a German military cemetery without stopping by an Allied one?"

"There are hardly any of our veterans from World War II alive either. We're talking about something that happened over 40 years ago. Besides, if you go to an Allied cemetery after visiting a German military graveyard, Bonn will feel you are rubbing salt in the wounds."

"How can you be so sure of this?"

"They told me so at the BMW assembly line."

"I'll take your word for it. What do I say at the Bitburg cemetery?"

"The thrust of your speech will be that both sides were wrong."

"I can't say that. We weren't wrong. They were wrong."

"Okay. How about just saying 'War is hell'?"

"That's all you want me to say?"

"Well, you have to make it short, because I promised them you would make your major speech at the BMW factory."

U.S. drafting guidelines on national security information

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is drafting guidelines to classify all national-security-related information throughout the federal government — including civilian agencies — as part of an effort to increase computer and telecommunications security.

Much of the information now in government computers is not protected and widely available. A special-national security committee will decide how much of that information needs protection and how that protection should be fashioned.

"We are going to be issuing guidelines for protecting sensitive information for every federal system," said Donald C. Latham, assistant secretary of defense for communications, command and control. "Every system will require some level of access control."

Latham is chairman of the 8-month-old interagency National Telecommunications and Information Systems Security Committee that was established to devise policy on electronic security for the government.

This new push for information security also propels the top-secret National Security Agency, the country's largest intelligence organization, into a major role as the nation's arbiter of security technology standards for civilian agency systems as well as military ones.

The guidelines, which will be released over the next few months, promise to rekindle debate over the extent of classification as well as how best to protect sensitive data. The Reagan administration has been vigorous in bringing many different kinds of information, including scientific research papers and various kinds of high technology, under a security umbrella.

"It's very difficult to define classified information," said Robert Conley, deputy assistant Treasury secretary for advanced technology and analysis and a member of the security committee. "There's basically three categories of information: national security, public domain and sensitive. Sensitive information falls between national security and public domain — it's defined by omission.

"Now you have to decide by what mechanism you want to protect that information," he said.

As the federal government relies on computer networks and ordinary telephone conversations to conduct even the most sensitive business, traditional methods of classification for paper files and documents are seen by administration officials as no longer adequate.

The fact that computer and telecommunications technologies can be breached by electronic intercept and entry has prompted the decision to launch a set of security countermeasures in both classification and technology.

One result could be that sensitive information now stored in civilian-agency computers would fall under a new national-security classification umbrella. For example, the guidelines may require the Commerce Department to store information on export licenses of high-technology items in a more secure computer system, or insist that certain defense contractors install new procedures to deny unauthorized computer access to their data.

Presumably, implementing the new guidelines would prevent the recurrence of such episodes as the one in which Milwaukee teen-aged computer hackers used their home computers to tap into the files of a Los Alamos National Laboratory computer more than a year ago.

This new emphasis on electronic-security policy springs from National Security Decision Directive 145, signed by Reagan last fall, which publicly identified Soviet electronic eavesdropping — particularly on telephone calls — as a national security threat. It called for a top-level comprehensive approach to protecting both telephone and computer communications.

NATION in brief

Federal officials stumped over chemical makeup

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — Federal officials said they have not figured out how to regulate a chemical that was blamed for the death of a mother of three who bought it at an adult bookstore as an aphrodisiac.

Gail Buscher, 43, died Wednesday at John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital after lying in a coma since using the isobutyl nitrate, sold as a room deodorizer under the name Primo, on Sunday, said Lake Worth Police Sgt. Bob Walton.

The federal Food and Drug Administration can do little to stop the distribution of the chemical as long as it is not sold as a drug, said FDA spokesman Ed Nida. "It's one we've been scratching our heads over for quite some time."

Prison guards attacked

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Six guards were attacked today by a group of inmates at the state penitentiary here, resulting in injuries to some guards and prisoners, authorities said.

The incident was reported about 7:30 a.m., said Duncan Brogan, an assistant to Corrections Director Allyn Sielaff. Brogan did not know when the attack occurred or how many prisoners were injured, but he said at least three of the guards were hurt.

He did not know the extent of injuries.

A lockdown at the prison was under way, Brogan said.

Four ambulances were parked outside the prison this morning, and police had blocked off the street near the prison in downtown Richmond.

Ships' status questionable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, responding to a report that Iceland will join New Zealand in banning U.S. warships equipped with nuclear weapons, has reiterated its policy of refusing to confirm or deny the existence of such weapons on Navy vessels.

"We can only state that longstanding U.S. policy on nuclear weapons overseas remains fully in accord with existing bilateral agreements in conformity with NATO defense plans," State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said Wednesday.

Icelandic Foreign Minister Geir Hallgrimsson was quoted as saying: "As Iceland excludes nuclear arms generally from its sovereign area, it is a natural conclusion that nuclear-armed ships are barred from entering ports or even sailing in the country's territorial waters."

New chairman voted in WASHINGTON (AP) — Beryl W. Sprinkel has been unanimously confirmed by the Senate as the new chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., in a floor speech before Wednesday's vote, called Sprinkel's views on the economic impact of the huge federal deficit "laughably wrong." However, he added: "Mr. Sprinkel is probably the best we can expect from this administration for the Council of Economic Advisers."

Sprinkel succeeds Martin Feldstein, who left the job last year after disagreeing with President Reagan and other administration officials about the impact of large, continuing budget deficits.

FEC wants limits scrapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — State-by-state primary spending limits on presidential candidates should be scrapped, the Federal Election Commission has told Congress.

In a package of proposed legislation sent to Capitol Hill Wednesday, the panel also recommended allowing individuals to give up to $2,000 and political action committees up to $10,000 to a candidate in each election cycle.

The law now allows individuals to give a candidate $1,000 for a primary and $1,000 for a general election; PACs can give $5,000 for a primary and $5,000 for a general election.

Blood donations screened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting this summer, all blood donations by military personnel will be screened for the presence of an antibody associated with AIDS, the Pentagon says.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is an affliction in which the body's immune system becomes unable to fight disease.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cooling trend possible with thunderstorms

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures are expected to cool Friday as a chance for thunderstorms continues.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy skies through Friday with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms, increasing Friday to a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms.

The expected low in the lower 60s tonight will warm to a high in the middle 80s. Tonight's 10 to 15 mph southerly winds will increase Friday to 20 to 30 mph and become gusty.

Wednesday's high of 91 was 6 degrees below the record high set in 1975. This morning's low was 20 degrees above the record of 37 set in 1980.

STATE

Scattered showers were reported across Texas today as a low-pressure system in southeastern Colorado pulled south winds and moisture from the Gulf of Mexico.

Low cloudiness was beginning to blanket the southern and central sections of the state. some patchy ground fog was forming over southeast texas due to light winds and increasing moisture. It was clear over most of North Texas.

Winds were from the south around 10 miles an hour over much of Texas.

Temperatures overnight were generally in the 60s with a low extreme of 58 degrees at El Paso and a high extreme of 68 at Dallas Love Field.

The forecast for today called for mostly cloudy to partly cloudy conditions with isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms over West Texas. Warm temperatures are expected.

NATION

Temperatures in cities only 100 miles apart varied more than 30 degrees as a warm front pushed into the Mississippi Valley today, while freezing rain iced northern Michigan and high winds churned desert sand in California.

Thunderstorms rumbled across the central Plains and rain was scattered today across the northern and eastern Great Lakes region, southern Plains, the Rockies and northern Pacific Coast.

As the warm front extended across the upper Mississippi Valley, early-morning temperatures were in the 30s to 40s north of the front and in the 60s to 70s south of it.

Midland's Angels lost their sixth game of the young Texas League season 5-4 in 10 innings, but this one hurt more than any since that opening game loss in El Paso when a two-run lead in the last of the ninth disappeared over the fence and into the night.

In this one, Midland fell behind early, battled back to tie and then let-it-get-away in extra innings. And along with the game went that budding two-game winning streak.

"We had our opporunities," lamented Manager Joe Maddon, "but we didn't take advantage of them.

"After the first couple of innings, we got good pitching from everybody...Doug McKenzie, Eddie Delzer and the winning hit off Tom Bryden came off a pitch on which the batter was jammed."

JAMMED THOUGH he was, Benito Santiago, the night's villian as far a Pack-the-Park night crowd of 2,396 was concerned, got a ball past second baseman Juan Cruz and Mark Wasinger scored from second when the ball was bobbled briefly by right fielder Tito Nanni.

Weird as it may seem, left hander Eddie Delzer, who still has an 0.00 earned-run-average for the season, was the loser. Wasinger reached first on a wicked shot through short. So the runner, although scoring on an error, was put on base by the Fullerton-State, Calif., product.

MCKENZIE WENT six innings, but the way it started out, it didn't look like he'd last two. A single by Ricky Coleman, a stolen base and wild pitch set up Wasinger's sac fly. Gregg Smith tripled and Santiago homered to left, 3-0 before Midland ever came to bat.

Coleman singled in the fourth run in the second.

"McKenzie got a breaking ball up to Santiago," said Maddon. "That was his big mistake. He seemed to get stronger as the game went on."

McKenzie and Delzer, as a matter of fact, held the Gators to two scattered hits over the next seven innings.

Meanwhile, Midland came back with a run in the first when Devon White singled, stole second and scored on Reggie Montgomery's hit to left. In the third, Greg Key walked went to third on White's second single and scored on an errant pick off throw to third.

Midland tied it in the fifth as Ken Davis legged out a hit to short, scored on Juan Cruz' double and Cruz scored on a fly by Key after being balked to third.

Beaumont Manager Bobby Tolan wasn't around at the finish as a result of the balk. Umpire Mike Winters gave him the thumb during a debate on the subject of pitchers' motions, legal and illegal.

"I can't understand it," Tolan said of the ejection. "I didn't swear at him or raise my voice. I really didn't say anything for which I should have been ejected."

Even with the six stolen bases and the win that tied the series at 2-2 going into tonight's rubber game, Tolan wasn't satisfied with his team's effort. Like Maddon, he felt too many opportunities had been squandered.

But Tolan has a young club, compared to last year's TL West Division champions, "We our young and feeling our way around. We'll be better once we learn how to play. We've had the lead in every game and all of our losses have come in the eighth and ninth innings."

Dodger defense does in Astros

Associated Press

Mike Marshall got the winning hit and the Los Angeles Dodgers' defense got the credit Wednesday night in their 1-0, 11-inning victory over the Houston Astros.

"You have to give the defense credit," said Marshall after he singled home the winning run in the 11th. "After last night (a 7-3 loss to Houston) it's nice to win a game like this. It looks like all our wins are going to come tough."

NL

Marshall alluded to Tuesday night's game in which Los Angeles took a 3-1 lead into the ninth inning only to contribute two errors as the Astros scored six times.

Defensively, Marshall singled out third baseman Pedro Guerrero.

"Guerrero was particularly outstanding," said Marshall. "He is playing very well at third base."

Guerrero handled eight chances and took an apparent base hit away from Dickie Thon to save a run in the sixth inning.

Marshall's game-winner was a looping single to left-center field that scored rookie Mariano Duncan from second base.

Duncan had led off the 11th with a single to center and was sacrificed by Bill Russell. After Ken Landreaux struck out, Guerrero was walked intentionally. Marshall, who had fanned in his previous three at-bats, then singled to score Duncan with the only run of the game.

Orel Hershiser, 1-0, who retired the nine batters he faced in relief, earned the victory. Frank DiPino, 0-1, the fourth Houston pitcher, took the loss.

Dodger starter Rick Honeycutt pitched eight shutout innings, allowing Houston but three hits, struck out three and walked one. Mike Scott, the Astro's starter, blanked the Dodgers for eight innings, allowing four hits while striking out five.

The Astros had two runners get as far as second base in the early going. In the second inning, Jose Cruz led off with a double. After Jerry Mumphrey grounded out, Enos Cabell popped out to shallow left field and Cruz was doubled off second on the play.

In the sixth inning, Alan Ashby led off with an infield single and was forced at second by Bill Doran. Scott sacrificed Doran to second. Dickie Thon then sent a sharp grounder in the hole between short and third, but Dodger third baseman Guerrero gloved the ball and threw out Thon at first.

Los Angeles did not get a runner past first until pinch-hitter Terry Whitfield, batting for Honeycut, doubled to center with two outs in the eighth inning. But he was stranded when Duncan grounded out to second.

Mets 10, Pirates 6

Darryl Strawberry and Rafael Santana each belted home runs, doubled and scored three times as the streaking New York Mets built a seven-run lead before holding off the Pittsburgh Pirates 10-6.

Strawberry doubled to lead off a three-run New York third inning, then hit a solo homer to start a three-run fourth against loser Larry McWilliams, 0-1, as the Mets won for the seventh time in eight games.

Mets' starter Bruce Berenyi drilled a run-scoring double in the third, but couldn't survive seven walks and 113 pitches over 4 2-3 innings and was lifted for Doug Sisk during a three-run Pittsburgh fifth.

Sisk, 1-0, worked 3⅓ innings for the victory despite giving up a pair of Pittsburgh runs in the sixth. Mets reliever Jesse Orosco struck out the side in the ninth to run his streak to six straight stikeouts in two games.

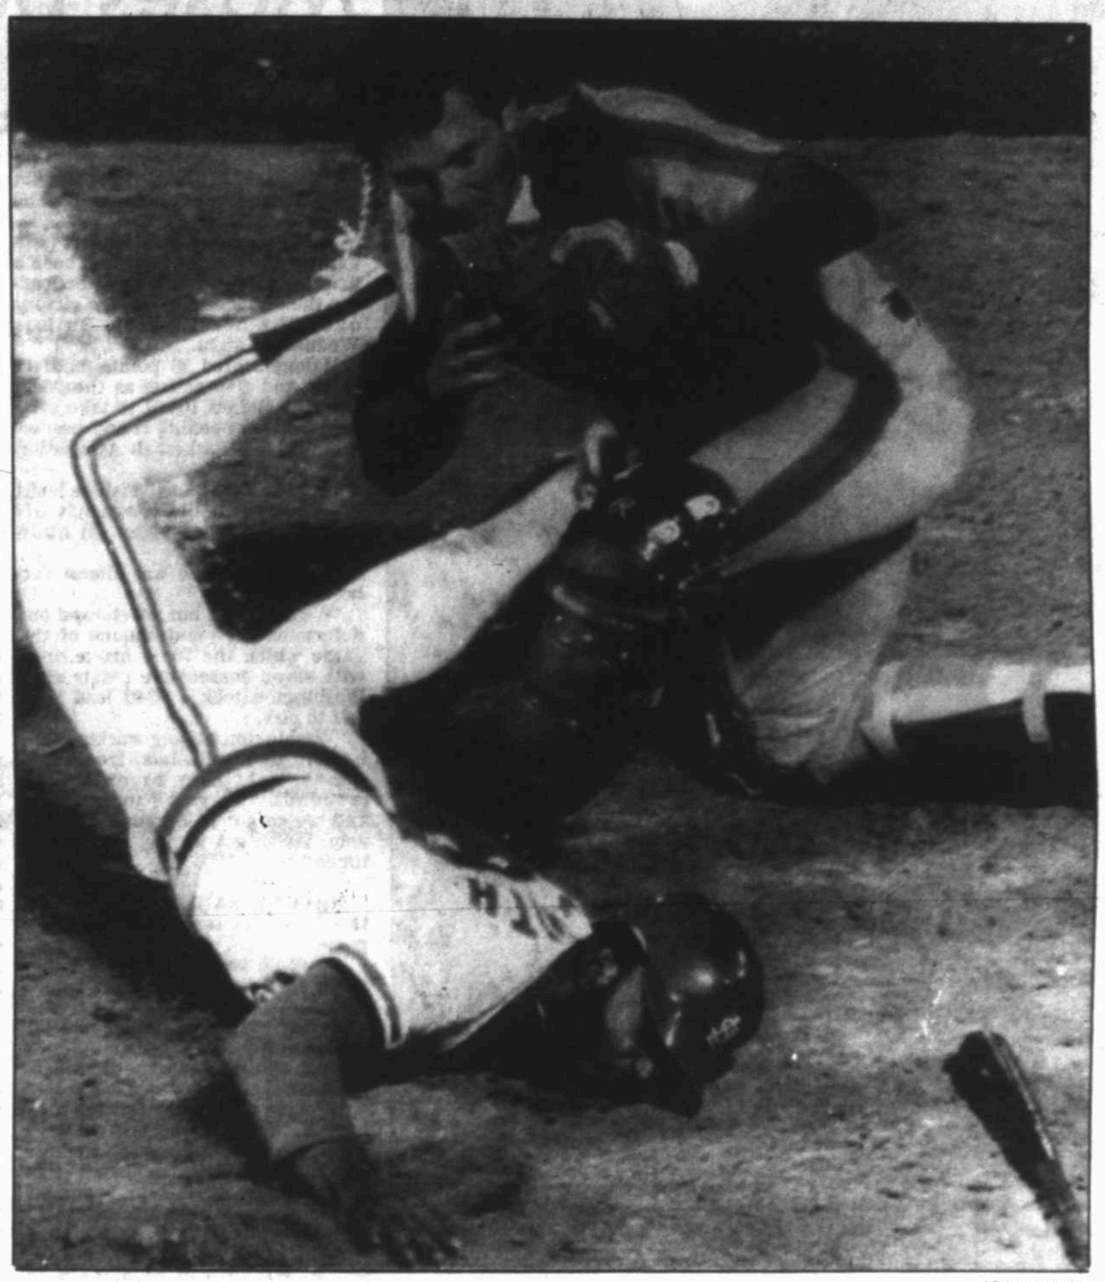

Reds 6, Braves 1

Surging Nick Esasky drilled three hits and drove in two runs and Tom Browning scattered six hits as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Atlanta Braves for a sweep of their three-game series.

Ahead 2-1 after five innings, the Reds broke the game open with three runs in the sixth. Dave Parker led off with a double, took third on Cesar Cedeno's single and scored on Esasky's single. Dave Concepcion followed with a single to drive in Cedeno and Esasky eventually scored on Dave Van Gorder's sacrifice fly.

The Reds added a run in the ninth on Eric Davis' home run off reliever Craig McMurtry.

Browning, 1-0, struck out three and didn't walk a batter in going the distance for the Reds in his second major league start. The losing pitcher, Bedrosian, 0-1, allowed five of the Reds' runs on eight hits. He also walked one and struck out four in five innings.

St. Louis Cardinal Lonnie Smith falls across the plate face first while attempting to score from third on an Andy Van Slyke grounder to Montreal first baseman Razor Shines Wednesday. Smith was out as Expos catcher Mike Fitzgerald takes the throw in time to make the tag.

Cubs 5, Phillies 4

Keith Moreland atoned for three errors with a three-run seventh-inning double that gave the Chicago Cubs a victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and their seventh win in eight games this season.

Ozzie Virgil's two-run homer off Chicago reliever George Frazier, first of the season for the Phillies, had given Philadelphia a 3-1 lead in the top of the seventh.

But in the bottom of the inning, the Cubs chased Phillies' starter Shane Rawley with singles by pinch-hitter Steve Lake and Bob Dernier. Then Ryne Sandberg singled off reliever Kevin Gross, 0-2, to load the bases with no outs.

Lake scored on a passed ball and Dave Lopes walked to load the bases again and set the stage for Moreland, who had four RBI and three hits in the game.

Frazier, 1-0, picked up the win in his first appearance of the season, while Lee Smith recorded his third save, giving up the Phillies' final run in the ninth on Greg Gross' double, the third error of the game by Moreland and Glenn Wilson's groundout.

Brewers end Tiger string at six straight

Associated Press

The Detroit Tigers won't go 9-0 — like they did in 1984. And Manager Sparky Anderson insists they won't go 35-5 — like they did in 1984.

But that doesn't mean they won't repeat as world champions — in 1985.

Just when the American League East was starting to fret about another Detroit runaway, the Milwaukee Brewers slowed things down Wednesday by nipping the previously unbeaten Tigers 2-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Danny Darwin.

AL

The 1984 Tigers didn't lose until their 10th game. The 1985 edition only went 6-0 before succumbing. So?

"This is a better club than 1984, I'll answer that for you right now," Anderson said. "I can't even compare the two; this team is just better. But in the American League East you'd better be better.

"We're going to lose one like we did today. Anybody can beat you once in a while. We're going to lose three, four in a row. But when you stretch this thing over 162 games, we're going to be all right because we've got a good product."

The Tigers' division lead was trimmed to one game over Milwaukee and Baltimore, which defeated Cleveland 6-3. Elsewhere, Toronto shaded Texas 3-1 in 10 innings, Kansas City trimmed Boston 6-1, Oakland whipped Seattle 8-4 and California edged Minnesota 4-3. Chicago and New York were not scheduled.

Darwin, who lasted just 4 2-3 innings in his first start, walked one and struck out two in besting Detroit ace Jack Morris, who scattered six hits. Jim Gantner singled home the first run in the fifth inning following two-out singles by Ben Oglivie and Bill Schroeder. Gantner tripled to lead off the eighth and scored on Paul Molitor's sacrifice fly.

"This is a big confidence builder," said Darwin, who came over from Texas in an off-season trade. "There's nothing like pitching a shutout against the world champions to make you feel good."

The Brewers, coming off a disastrous, injury-filled 1984 campaign, are as confident as they can be.

Ramsey, Motta make first playoff encounter

DALLAS (AP) — Dick Motta of the Dallas Mavericks and Jack Ramsay of the Portland Trail Blazers have coached in the National Basketball Association 17 years but will be going against each other for the first time in the playoffs tonight.

"Ramsay has done an excellent job of holding this team together," said Motta. "The Blazers seem to be peeking as we enter the playoffs."

Portland won 12 of its last 16 games going into the best-of-five Western Conference semifinal series against the Mavs.

"We've had six new players on this team, including five rookies," said Ramsay. "But we have everyone playing together now."

Portland beat Dallas 131-111 the last time the two teams met.

The Blazers last won in Reunion in 1982. The Blazers are 3-9 all-time in Reunion and the Mavs have won seven of the last eight.

"We feel very confident against them, particularly in Reunion," said Dallas guard Rolando Blackman. "They played very well against us the last time, but we're not going to count it in our minds. We think we can beat anybody in Reunion Arena."

Dallas beat Portland four out of five times this season with reserve Dale Ellis scoring twice his average in games against them.

Ellis scored 27 points against Portland on Jan. 13 and hit six three point field goals. He's averaging 18 points a game against the Blazers.

Portland has been in the NBA playoffs eight of the last nine years but has five players on the current roster without NBA playoff experience.

The Mavs advanced to the second round last year before bowing to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Dallas finished the regular season with a 44-38 record while Portland was 42-40.

Portland finished the regular season with a 117-112 victory over the Denver Nuggets behind Clyde Dexler's 35 points.

Dallas knocked off the Los Angeles Clippers 96-92 and set an NBA record in the process.

The Mavs set a record for the fewest turnovers in one season, an average of 14.4 per game to 14.8 by the 1970-71 New York Knicks.

Motta said he's not certain whether his team is playoff ready.

"We lost to Los Angeles by 43 points last year but came back to beat 'em in game three," he said. "You just can't tell about this game."

Midland's Lacy gains tie for 20th at Firestone TofC

From Staff and Wire Reports

AKRON, Ohio — Midland bowler Charlie Lacy, who qualified for the Professional Bowlers Association's $200,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions last fall with his victory in the True Value Open, completed his first 16 games to move into a tie for 20th place with Sam Zurich of Hernando Beach, Fla., at 3,278.

Lacy's position in the tournament after 16 games is four places than Wednesday's earlier eight-game standing of 24th, 1,632.

Bob Handley of Pompano Beach, Fla., moved into the early 16-game lead, posting a score of 3,512. He moved to first from 13th place after the first eight games.

Mike Durbin of Chagrin Falls, Ohio is second at 3,487 followed by Bob Chamberlain of Auburn Hills, Mich., and Brian Voss, of Tacoma Wash. tied for third at 3,376 and Art Trask of Fresno, Calif., is in fifth at 3,374.

The tournament, the most prestigious on the PBA tour because of it's champions only format., concludes on Saturday with the top five finishers during the week's play meeting in step-ladder television elimination matches.

Each of the 52 bowlers competing in the tournament will take home part of the $200,000 total purse.

Pizza Hut wins with Hagler

BOSTON (AP) — A pizza chain's bet on its star, Marvelous Marvin Hagler, paid off when the middleweight boxing champion defeated Thomas Hearns last Sunday.

The night after Hagler's victory, Pizza Hut aired a commercial made in January showing the Brockton boxer chomping a slice of pizza and remarking: "I wonder what what's-his-name is eating tonight?"

Answering his own question, Hagler says: "Probably soup."

"Everything was primed for a Hagler win," Jim Fisher, the chain's advertising director, said Wednesday. "We knew there was a risk involved, but it was a good spot, so we took the chance."

He said that the commercial would have remained on the shelf if Hagler had lost or Hearns had been seriously injured.

Fisher said the commercial will air for about a week, until the company can record another Hagler message not so directly linked to the bout.

Although the chain's bet on Hagler paid off, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who represents Hagler's home state, struck out.

Q-tip or mechanic? Reuss shrugs it all off

LOS ANGELES — The thing about Jerry Reuss as a pitcher is, you can never tell from looking at him whether he has just given up a bases-loaded home run or has struck the side out. He doesn't look bored, exactly, just sort of bemused. As if it were happening to someone else.

The pitches are served up with the kind of deadpan detachment of a croupier at a casino, as if the outcome were of minimal concern to the player. His attitude seems to be, "You win a few, you lose a few." He doesn't greet success or failure with a shrug altogether, but neither does he show an excess of emotion.

He is the archtypical veteran pitcher, the kind who would be grizzled on the sports pages, if only he had graying hair.

He is tall, blond and blue-eyed, so fair as to look bleached and so slender as to look like a flagpole. In another life he might have been a Potsdamer Guard or a hussar in the Austrian cavalry. The ballplayers, in their casual cruelty, call him Q-Tip.

His pitching is methodical, mechanical and analytical, as he is, never emotional. He approaches the job of pitching the way a plumber might approach a leak. He probes for weaknesses, exploits them, solves them. It is as impersonal as fixing a sink.

HE IS A mechanic. His hours are 7 in the morning to 9:30 at night, his fees are reasonable and all his work is warranted. Watching him pitch a game is like watching a guy make a watch. Every piece fits.

He never seems to get angry, excited or, sometimes, even particularly interested. You almost imagine him whipping out an order sheet and giving estimates. "This guy I'll strike out. This guy will hit to short. This guy might get a single. I would estimate I can get this job done in 2 hours and 10 minutes, maximum, with no more than seven hits or two runs. Sign here."

Nothing in baseball surprises him. He has pitched in 484 major league games, nearly 3,000 innings. He has thrown probably 30,000 pitches. He knows he is probably never going to get to the Hall of Fame, although he has outdueled some who will. He is four no-hitters behind Nolan Ryan but one no-hitter ahead of such immortals as Grover Cleveland Alexander, Lefty Grove, Mordecai Brown and Dizzy Dean, all of whom never had any.

He is the consummate professional. He gets people out – which is what pitching is all about. His 178 victories put him in an echelon of consistency not many pitchers achieve. There are pitchers at Cooperstown with fewer.

He is not only right around the plate, he is right around the clubhouse, the hotel, the dugout, the cage. No one ever had to hold any planes for Jerry Reuss. He's never missed the national anthem or the team bus.

HE GIVES up the ball without a fuss when he doesn't have his stuff. For him, pitching is not so much an art as a craft. It responds to refining, to product control like any other industry.

"When I first came here (to the Dodgers), I was a high fastball pitcher," recounts Reuss. "I threw the ball for strikeouts. And I had a bunch of them, nearly 180 every year. Then, I noticed I also had a lot of walks, well over 100 every year.

"It was inefficient. I had seven guys standing around me with nothing to do. I was throwing 150 pitches by the seventh inning. I would get nine strikeouts and 50 foul balls.

"I thought, 'Hey! If I throw low fast balls, these guys are going to beat them in the ground and everybody gets in the game. I can get out of some innings on three pitches, instead of 20.'"

Jerry Reuss became a full professional that day. The velocity of his pitches didn't change, just the philosophy. A new calmness, a new confidence took over. Reuss became a dealer out on that mound. He was the house, he had the percentage. The deck was with him. Like every good gambler, he never blamed the cards, just the player.

"When you're young, you figure nobody should hit good pitches," he said. "When you settle down, you realize even poor hitters occasionally hit good pitches. Then, you realize the times good hitters don't hit bad pitches and it evens out. How many times you let go of a pitch you wish you had back, you say 'Oh-oh, there goes a gopher ball!' – and the hitter pops it up.

"You learn to make the hitter hit your pitch – the one he's not looking for, the one he can't hit. You do that, the hitter's overmatched."

WHEN JERRY Reuss first came to the Dodgers, he was not the contemplative, unflappable pro he became. He used to try to blow hitters down. That's so tough to do that his former employers, the Pittsburgh Pirates, wondered if he wouldn't be better off in a capacity known as long relief. It is a kind of complicated rear-guard action in which you attempt to hold the line, to keep a fallback from becoming a rout and keep the game close till the real hero, the stopper, the short relief man can take over.

It was kind of a demeaning task for a guy who had won 18 games two seasons before, but baseball is a copy-cat sport.

"When I told the Dodgers, 'Hey, I'm not a relief pitcher, I'm a starter!' they said 'Yeah? Well how come Pittsburgh didn't start ya?'" Reuss said.

Fortunately, Reuss got his chance when the staff grew thin at an All-Star break and the new low-ball lefty turned the league into a congress of carpetbeaters, swept to an 18-6 record, threw a no-hitter, had an earned-run average of 2.52 and finished second in the Cy Young balloting.

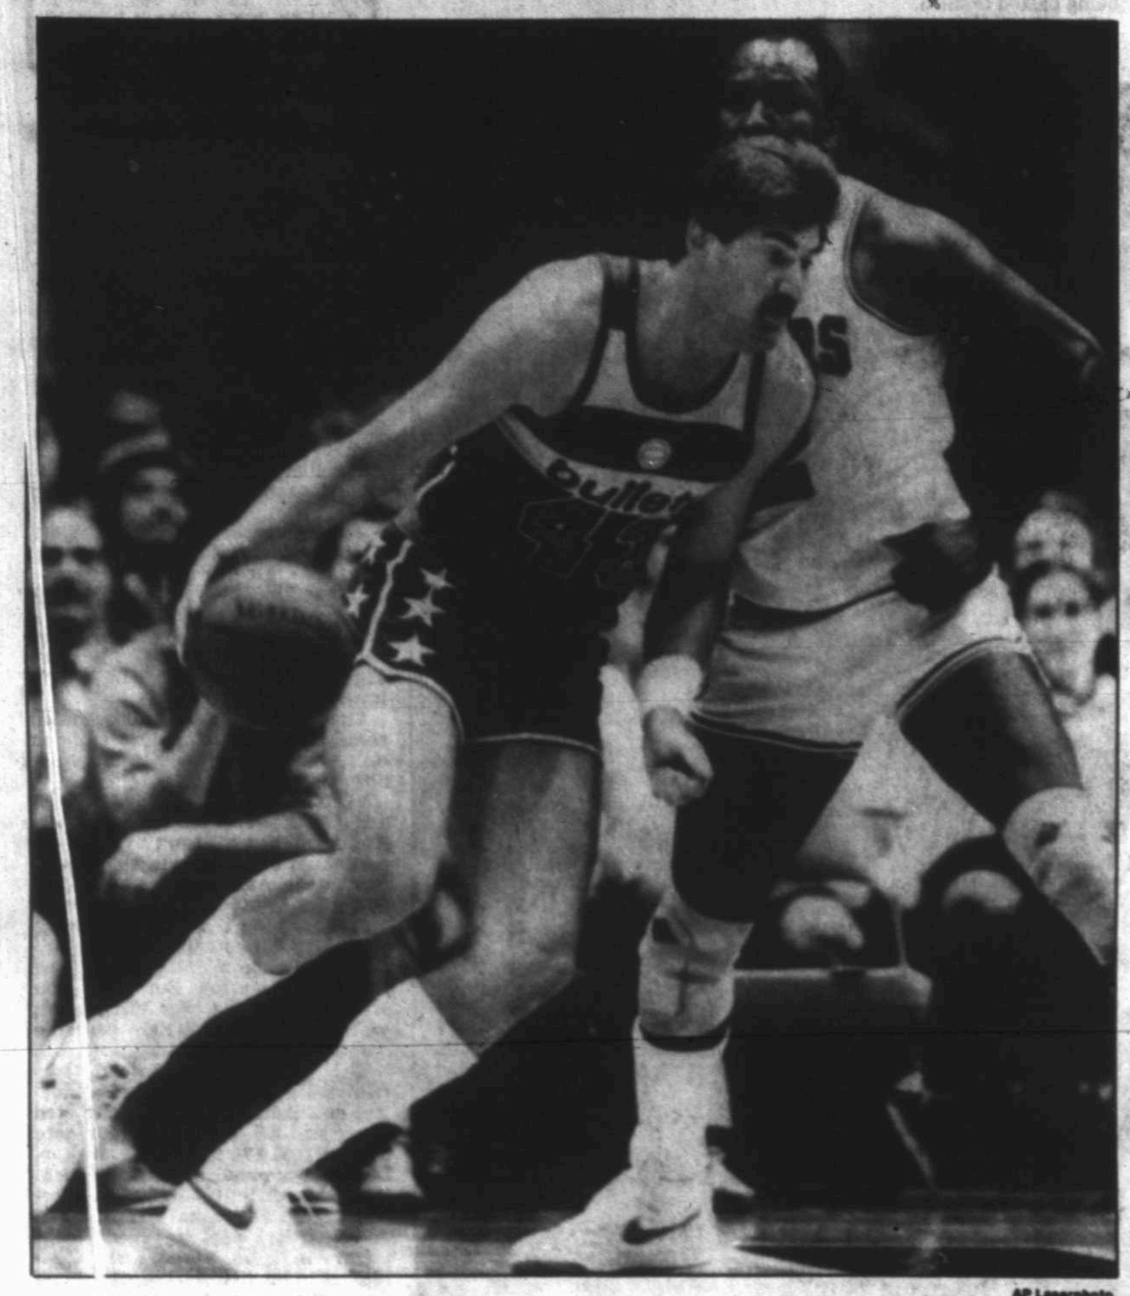

He was almost the key in the world championship year, 1981, outdueling Nolan Ryan, no less, to put the team into the playoffs, and Ron Guidry to put the team into world championship position.

For the Dodgers, he's a pro's pro. To a pitcher, he's a pitcher. To the hitters, he's a ground ball to third, or a low strike.

To Reuss, it's a living.

W'ashington Bullet Jeff Ruland drives against Philadelphia 76er Moses Malone during Wednesday's NBA playoff action in Philadelphia.

Moses paces Philadelphia

Sixers up 1-0 in best-of-five series

NBA Playoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Moses not only shoots and rebounds, but he talks. Honest.

Moses Malone, whose loudest postgame remark this season has been a grunt, was in good voice after leading the Philadelphia 76ers to victory over the Washington Bullets Wednesday night.

Malone scored 26 points, had six steals and five assists as the 76ers beat the Bullets 104-97 to take a 1-0 lead in their opening round best-of-five National Basketball Association playoff series.

Usually, the 6-foot-10 Malone leans his 255-pound body against his locker and turns away all questioners after games.

But last night he was almost verbose.

"We struggled but we showed our determination," said Malone of the game which the 76ers broke open with seven consecutive points after Washington took a 93-92 lead with 4:21 to play.

"Washington has big workhorses," he said of the Bullets' front line, which held him to only five rebounds. "It's going to be tough and we've got to be good defensively. We've got to play hard at all times."

MALONE SAID he hated to see the 76ers let leads slip away all game.

"It would have been much better if we piled up a whole lot of points early."

Malone, who was double-and triple-teamed during the 41 minutes he played, said the strategy didn't surprise him.

"It made me play better defense," he said. "The Bullets made me work hard. I've got to play tough defense and make (Jeff) Ruland work. He's going to score, but I think I can neutralize him and keep him below his scoring average (18.9)."

Ruland, 6-11, who missed 43 of the last 44 Washington regular-season games with a shoulder injury, played 37 minutes, scored 20 points, had seven assists and four steals.

Nevertheless, Malone expressed confidence in the 76ers.

"We've got a lot of talent on our team, and if we stay together we will win it (this series). We can win the whole thing. Winning the first game gets the monkey off our back."

THE VICTORY was the 76ers' first playoff triumph at home since the second game of the 1983 championship series against the Los Angeles Lakers. They were defeated three times at home last season by New Jersey en route to first-round elimination.

The 76ers led 28-21 after one period, 55-48 at halftime, and were tied at 76 after three quarters.

In a heated final period, Washington went ahead 93-92 on a free throw by Gus Williams with 4:21 left.

But Maurice Cheeks, who had 17 points and six assists, scored a basket that started a seven-point Philadelphia rally that made it 99-93 with 2:11 to play.

After Ruland converted two free throws, Andrew Toney made three from the foul line to make it 102-95 and it was all over.

In addition to Malone, the 76ers got 24 points from Julius Erving and 17 points and 12 rebounds from rookie Charles Barkley.

Cliff Robinson led the Bullets with 24.

Washington lost guard Jeff Malone in the second period with back spasms. A Bullets' spokesman said the sharpshooting Malone should be ready for the second game of the series here Sunday afternoon.

A rhubarb developed in the late minutes of the final period when Washington was charged with a full timeout for a break that Shue said lasted only 20 seconds.

"The table screwed up and the official screwed up," insisted Shue, who had to watch the last two minutes tick away with no timeouts left.

Shue felt his team was hurt by turnovers.

"I think seven of our last 10 possessions we turned the ball over," observed the Bullets' coach.

This by a team that averaged 15.6 in the regular season — the second fewest turnovers in the NBA. Ruland accounted for eight of the 24 Washington turnovers, but indicated the loss of Jeff Malone was critical.

"We really missed Jeff Malone because of his great outside shooting," Ruland said. "We need him if we're going to win this series."

Five of the NBA's eight first-round series open tonight, with last year's championship opponents expected to breeze into the second round.

THE BOSTON Celtics, attempting to become the first team since the 1968-69 Celtics to successfully defend an NBA title, open at home against Cleveland.

Boston posted the best regular-season record at 63-19, while Cleveland, 36-46 during the season, enters the 16-team playoffs with the worst record.

Meanwhile, on the West Coast, the Phoenix Suns provide the opposition as the Los Angeles Lakers look for a berth in the championship finals for the fourth straight year.

Lakers Coach Pat Riley, a player with LA's 1972 champions, an assistant coach with the 1980 champs and head coach of the 1983 winners, has a good feeling heading into the best-of-five clash with the Suns.

"I think we're focused now," he said. "I think the team is older now, and we've benefited from what happened in the past."

What happened in the past two seasons were final-round losses to Philadelphia and Boston, respectively, in the championship series.

"I don't think we seek any kind of redemption," said Riley. "We're just going out to play, and play hard. We look at it as another opportunity."

Flyers seeking second sweep of a New York team

Associated Press

The Philadelphia Flyers, conquerers of the New York Rangers in three straight games, look for a sweep of New York teams when the Islanders come to town tonight for the start of a National Hockey League Patrick Division final series.

But the Flyers aren't expecting an easy time.

"As far as I'm concerned, the Islanders are champions of the Patrick Division until they're dethroned," said Dave Poulin, the captain of the Flyers. "They've been there so often, they've done it so many ways. They don't have to prove anything."

Maybe not, but the Islanders did a little proving against the Washington Capitals, just to show they've not lost the knack. Down 2-0 in the five-game Patrick Division semifinal, the Islanders rallied for three straight victories to earn the berth opposite Philadelphia.

Stanley Cup Playoffs

"We have the kind of hockey team that never gives up, and that says it all," said Islander goaltender Billy Smith, who made 39 saves in a series-ending 2-1 victory over the Capitals on Tuesday. "I think this game and our performance compares to all the rest (of the Islander comebacks), and I remember them all. You can go down the list and we have won a lot of big games."

THREE OTHER division championship series open tonight. In the Adams Division, Quebec calls on Montreal, Minnesota visits Chicago in the Norris Division and defending Stanley Cup champion Edmonton hosts Winnipeg in the Smythe Division.

Quebec and Montreal each needed five games to advance past Buffalo and Boston, respectively, while Minnesota and Chicago swept St. Louis and Detroit in three games.

Edmonton rolled past Los Angeles in three games while Winnipeg needed four games to get past Calgary.

Philadelphia won a lot of big games this year in rolling up the NHL's best regular-season record despite being the youngest club in the league (average age 24.5 years).

High-scoring Tim Kerr, who rifled in a playoff-record four consecutive goals in the finale against the Rangers, said the club has matured through the season, and pointed to the seven games against the Islanders as proof.

Sports in Brief

Sutton finds relief from jam before game

Veteran pitcher Don Sutton didn't balk when trapped in a traffic jam shortly before he was scheduled to start pitching for the Oakland A's against the Seattle Mariners Wednesday.

When traffic ground to a halt behind a burning truck Wednesday afternoon, Sutton says he drove off the highway, zigzagged through some bushes, abandoned his car and got an emergency lift from a highway worker.

The relief driver rushed Sutton to Oakland Coliseum in a pickup truck along the shoulder of the highway.

"This is the only time in baseball when a man out of uniform gets an assist," said Sutton, giving partial credit for the A's 8-4 victory to highway worker Terry Costa. "He's coming to watch us on Saturday if I have to buy out the stadium."

Although the highway error cost Sutton half his usual warm-up time before the game, he picked up his second consecutive victory by allowing five hits over seven innings.

BOXING — Pete Rademacher says his idea of fighting world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson blossomed two decades too early.

Rademacher, after winning the Olympic heavyweight championship in 1956, made his professional debut against Patterson a little more than a year later. He stunned the champion with a second-round knockdown before losing in the seventh.

Patterson fought for a $250,000 guarantee. Rademacher had no guarantee at all in their Seattle bout in August 1957.

Mindful of the multimillion-dollar bouts of today, the 58-year-old Rademacher said, "I had a great idea 20 years too soon. The only regret I have is that there couldn't have been the kind of media coverage back when I fought that there is now."

Softball tournaments set to go

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, April 19, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Take the same good care of yourself that you show your valuable possessions. Good health habits are a must! Romance becomes more rewarding when you and mate plan together for the future. Look at your options more carefully. An offer you receive in the fall is very attractive but may not serve your long-term interests. Encourage a young person to serve an apprenticeship before striking out on his own. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Minnesota Twins' ace Frank Viola, actor Dudley Moore, Los Angeles Dodgers' rookie R.J. Reynolds, actors Hugh O'Brian and Don ("Get Smart") Adams, tennis' Sue Barker, football's Jack Pardee.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your creativity brings in new profits. An acquaintance makes a valuable suggestion -- follow it and you will smooth some ruffled feathers. Your good humor and patience serve you well now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The time is right to cash in on a money-making idea. Authority figure will be happy to climb on the bandwagon if you are willing to share the profits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You become decisive when you feel something intuitively. A great day to launch a joint venture. A business trip could bring new clients and happy romance. Make your reservations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You obtain financial backing from old friends. Although it is possible to expand a family business, try to form a partnership with a brother or sister. Self-improvement activities are recommended.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Let others know your priorities and they will make fewer demands. Writers and artists enjoy greater success now. Be honest with your employer if you need to take some time off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Taking an evening class sharpens your skills. Keep abreast of new financial developments. A legal decision will soon be made in your favor. The ability to speak a second language brings unusual opportunities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stick to your original plan and you can accomplish a lot today. Negotiate contracts and sign useful agreements. Be patient when trying to find the answer to a parent-child problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A phone call or letter promises financial help. Make the most of an unusual business or social opportunity. New contacts mean new profits. A family gathering gives you an opportunity to relax.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Travel and children play larger roles in your life now. Weigh all the pros and cons in thinking of changing jobs. You meet some wonderful people when you accept a last-minute invitation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Examine your goals and motives. Others need to be consulted before you invest jointly-owned funds. Read the fine print when signing contracts and agreements. Romance has its ups and downs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep abreast of new developments in your fields. A conflict between two friends could cause a minor rumpus. Mate or partner offers some excellent advice. A business project begins to pay off.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You find it difficult to keep your mind on business when in the company of an attractive member of the opposite sex. Let romance wait! Those in authority are evaluating your work performance.

Top-level partnerships in the U.S. are not noted for their longevity. An outstanding exception is that of Edgar Kaplan of New York and Norman Kay of Philadelphia, who have been playing together, and winning together, for more than a quarter of a century. Note their defense on this deal from the trials to select the U.S. team more years ago than we would care to mention.

When North doubled his overcall of one no trump, Kaplan prudently retreated to two diamonds—a contract that would have been made as the cards lie. North-South reached four spades in quick time and Kaplan got off to the good lead of the queen of hearts.

The defense was superlative. Declarer played low from dummy, and Kay overtook with the king of hearts to shift to a club. Declarer won the king and his problem was to avoid a loser in each suit—obviously, West was marked with the king of spades and queen of clubs for his overcall. Declarer's plan was to strip the red suits from his hand and dummy, then throw West on lead with the king of trumps to force a ruff-sluff or a club lead into declarer's tenace.

Declarer led a low diamond, and Kaplan made a fine play when he inserted his jack. Dummy's king won and Kay signaled with the ten. The ace of hearts was cashed, a heart was ruffed and declarer then exited with a low diamond. Had West been forced to win this trick, the end play would have succeeded. But because of his earlier ducking play he was now able to follow low on the diamond and allow his partner to win. Another club from East set up the queen of clubs as the fourth trick for the defense.

Cary Grant critical of explicit films

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Veteran actor Cary Grant says today's films are all "blood and heavy breathing."

The 81-year-old star's remarks at Princeton University Wednesday night came in an evening billed as "A Conversation With Cary Grant."

Grant declined to name his favorite female co-star. But he called Grace Kelly the "best actress."

"She was never aware that the camera was on her," he said.

Grant also praised director Alfred Hitchcock. The two worked together in several films including "North By Northwest" and "Notorious."

"It was never difficult to work with Alfred Hitchcock," Grant recalled. "I whistled going to work."

* * *

ROME (AP) — Jean-Luc Godard's film depicting the Virgin Mary as the daughter of a gas station operator is caught in a controversy involving a film club and Roman Catholics offended by the work.

Protesters — including nuns and priests — and supporters marched outside a downtown theater where the film "Je Vous Salue, Marie" (Hail, Mary) made its delayed premiere Wednesday.

The film depicts Mary, played by Myriem Roussel, as a modern woman and shows her nude in some scenes. Joseph, her boyfriend, is a cab driver, and the archangel Gabriel takes a jet to give Mary the news that she will give birth.

* * *

WASHINGTON (AP) — A corporation and some individuals will be honored at a White House luncheon Tuesday as the first recipients of the National Medal of Arts.

The winners of the award, established by Congress last year and announced Wednesday by President Reagan, are: Composer Elliott Carter, author Ralph Ellison, actor Jose Ferrer, modern dance pioneer Martha Graham, environmental sculptor Louise Nevelson, opera star Leontyne Price and artist Georgia O'Keeffe.

Also, Hallmark Cards Inc., sponsor of the Emmy Award-winning Hallmark Hall of Fame on television, School of American Ballet founder Lincoln Kirstein, art collector and philanthropist Paul Mellon, arts patrons Dorothy Buffum Chandler and Alice Tully.

* * *

Gavin MacLeod

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The purser's desk on the set of "Love Boat" became a temporary post office when Gavin MacLeod, who plays the captain on the series, helped unveil the U.S. Postal Service's new "love" stamp.

Deputy Postmaster General Jackie A. Strange, who joined MacLeod Wednesday at the Hollywood set of the long-running ABC television show, told hundreds of cast and crew members that their show typifies the spirit the Postal Service wanted to convey with the new 22-cent stamp.

Workers on the set could buy the stamps at the special "Love Boat" post office a day before nationwide distribution, said Nancy Paul, a publicist for the show.

* * *

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ruth Westheimer, host of "Good Sex" on cable television, says she believes in being explicit when talking about sex but does not say things in order to shock.

People realize "that having a sexual problem is not any different from having a problem with your digestion," the 4-foot-7 sex counselor whose show appears on the Lifetime cable channel said in an interview here recently.

"I do believe in being sexually explicit when I talk about sexuality," she said. "I do believe in speaking directly, saying the proper terminology."

But she says: "I don't say things in order to shock, and that's why I'm successful."

* * *

Rosalynn Carter

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter never asked the first lady for advice during their four years in the White House, Rosalynn Carter said.

"I had input and told Jimmy of the things I saw and encountered throughout America," said Mrs. Carter, answering a question after a speech Wednesday at Washington University.

"But as far as him saying, 'What should I do?'...Well, that's just not Jimmy Carter."

* * *

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Warren Beatty, who won the right to keep ABC from cutting six minutes out of his movie "Reds," said the arbitration decision would discourage what he called the mutilation of films by the networks.

Beatty, 48, who won an Academy Award for his direction of the film, in which he also starred, said Wednesday that most TV viewers believe that notices on the screen saying "edited for television" mean the networks have cut out only "the dirty stuff."

But he said many cuts are made to fit a film in the commercial network time slot. "What it means is the film is mutilated," Beatty contended.

The three-hour-and-20-minute picture had been scheduled for telecast by ABC on April 28-29. ABC wanted to cut the movie by about six minutes so it would not delay 11 p.m. newscasts on affiliated stations.

An arbitrator ruled in favor of Beatty on Monday.

* * *

Scott Brady

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scott Brady, an actor whose career spanned Broadway, movies and television, died Tuesday of respiratory failure. He was 60.

Brady's first starring role in movies came in 1953 in "Born to Fight, Star of Tomorrow." Other films credits included "Canon City," "He Walked by Night," "In This Corner," "Yankee Bucaneer, "Bronco Buster," "Montana Belle," "Untamed Frontier," "Vanishing American," "Mohawk" and "The Loners." Brady most recently appeared in "China Syndrome" and "Gremlins."

* * *

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Donato "Don" Rico, a comic book artist who became a cult figure to fans of modern adventure comics, has died of cancer, his family said. He was 72.

Rico, who died March 27, wrote and illustrated such comics as The Claw, Captain America, Captain Marvel, The Human Torch and Daredevil. He was a co-founder and first president of the Comic Arts Professional Society, wrote about 60 mystery and Western novels and produced wood engravings.Many of the engravings, used to print illustrations, are in New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art and in the Library of Congress, said his wife, Michele Hart-Rico.

* * *

BOSTON (AP) — Leon Collins, 63, a tap dancer who performed with Count Basie and for last summer's Olympic Games in Los Angeles, died Tuesday of cancer.

Orioles 6, Indians 3

Fred Lynn had three hits and scored twice and Cleveland committed two eighth-inning errors to help Baltimore score three runs.With the score tied 3-3, Lenn Sakata singled to open the eighth. Reliever Jose Roman threw wildly to second on Rick Dempsey's bunt and Dan Ford then bunted safely to fill the bases.

Sakata scored when Cleveland third baseman Brook Jacoby, who had homered to tie the game in the sixth, booted Wayne Gross' grounder and Dempsey scored on Cal Ripken's grounder. Dave Von Ohlen walked Lynn to reload the bases and Gary Roenicke's infield hit drove in the final run.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 1

Jesse Barfield smashed a three-run homer off reliever Dave Stewart in the bottom of the 10th inning after Texas had broken open a scoreless game in the top of the inning on Toby Harrah's bases-loaded sacrifice fly off Bill Caudill.

Buck Martinez and Len Matuszek started the Blue Jays' 10th with singles and Barfield followed with his second home run of the season.Texas knuckleballer Charlie Hough allowed three hits in 8 1-3 innings while Toronto's Jimmy Key yielded four in 6 2-3.

"I'd rather hit against Stewart than Hough any day," said Barfield. "I was looking for a fastball and he gave me one up and away. I knew I'd hit it out as soon as it left the bat. We didn't hang our heads after they scored their run. We came into the dugout and said, 'Hey, if they can score one, we can score two.' "

Royals 6, Red Sox 1

Charlie Leibrandt pitched a four-hitter and light-hitting Buddy Biancalana drilled a three-run homer to lead Kansas City.Leibrandt lost his bid for his first major-league shutout since 1981 with one out in the ninth when Jim Rice singled and scored on Mike Easler's double.

With one out in the Royals' second, Steve Balboni was safe on a throwing error by shortstop Jackie Gutierrez. Pat Sheridan walked and, after Jim Sundberg popped out, Biancalana tagged Al Nipper for his third major-league homer.Jorge Orta doubled two more unearned runs across in the fifth and Wilson singled a run home in the eighth.

Athletics 8, Mariners 4

Mike Davis belted his fourth homer and scored three runs as Oakland completed a sweep of a three-game series against Seattle, which had won its first six games. Oakland also got three hits from Alfredo Griffin to overcome the continued torrid hitting of Seattle's Jim Presley, who drove in four runs with his sixth homer and a double.

Presley's two-run homer in the fourth was the 14th by Seattle in six games against Oakland this year and gave the Mariners a 4-3 lead. But the A's went ahead 5-4 in the bottom of the inning on an RBI double by Donnie Hill and Dave Collins' sacrifice fly. They made it 7-4 in the fifth on a walk, singles by Davis and Griffin and an error by center fielder Dave Henderson. Davis' solo shot in the seventh made it 8-4. He leads the league with 14 RBIs, 12 runs scored and 27 total bases.

Angels 4, Twins 3

Gary Pettis, who struck out four times in California's previous game, stroked a two-out, two-run single to cap a three-run second inning as the Angels handed the Twins their sixth consecutive setback.Doug DeCinces drove in the decisive run in the fifth inning with a sacrifice fly that scored Rod Carew, who tripled. Winner Jim Slaton went six innings for the Angels and Donnie Moore pitched one-hit relief over the final three innings for California's first save of the season. Roy Smalley homered for Minnesota.

Tulane board deciding basketball fate

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the wake of allegations of point shaving and payoffs, the demise of men's basketball at Tulane University was imminent as the school's Board of Administrators prepared to meet.

When the board convenes today, it will take the final step in abolishing men's basketball at the school forever, in accordance with the recommendations of President Eamon Kelly.

Kelly's stance caused an uproar among many students and fans, but that didn't seem to matter.

"When a president who is running something like Tulane comes out with a firm recommendation like that, he's on pretty solid ground that his recommendation is going to be followed," said board member Kent McWilliams, chairman of the board's committee on intercollegiate athletics.

Boatner Riley, chairman of the board, said he would advise passage of Kelly's recommendation.

"In this case, I think Dr. Kelly's strong position on academic integrity is precisely what the board is looking for for Tulane University," he said.

He said "forever" means at least the duration of Kelly's tenure and as long as the current Board of Administrators remains as constituted.

"What subsequent boards or administrations may decide is, of course, the responsibility of that duly-constituted board," he said.

"Actions of one group are not binding on a new board."

McWilliams was one of Tulane's first scholarship basketball players, and he has supported the program financially and emotionally.

However, he said, the board doesn't want the sort of confrontation with Kelly that would result from refusal to endorse his position on basketball.

"If someone wanted to restore it (basketball,) you can bet I'd support that," he said.

"I'd be 100 percent behind a whole new setup to do the program like we wanted to do it. But I think it's going to take some time."

"The only way we're going to reverse that (abolition of basketball) is to build up enough credibility in the athletic department to re-establish basketball," he said.

"Dr. Kelly didn't leave any escape routes at all. He said permanent is permanent. That's naturally further than I'd like to see him go."

When the University Senate met on Monday, the vote was 42-5 to endorse Kelly's recommendation.

The five negative votes came from the five students on the Senate.

ANGELS

Even with the expected improvement by the Gators, Tolan expects the West to be a close race. "The Dodgers are winning the close ones and that builds confidence. El Paso has a good hitting club, although I'm curious to see how they do in Beaumont. It should be much closer than last year and that's good for the league."

HALO-UCINATIONS — Steve Finch, a 6-3 righthander from Phoenix who was 5-7 at Edmonton, Pacific Coast League last year, will start for the Angels in tonight's 7 p.m. Ladies Night game...Tolan will counter with Mike Mills, St. Petersburg, Fla., who was 11-8 at Reno, California League, last year...Left-fielder Greg Key turned in two miracle catches, racing to left-center to rob David Corman with a diving catch in the first and then going in the opposite direction to make another diving one-handed theft on Jim Thomas in the fourth...The Angels pulled off two 6-4-3 double plays, a pitcher's best friend, their first twin-killings of the homestand...Tonight is another Pack-the-Park night, closing out the series...Friday the El Paso lumber company invades Angels' Stadium for five games...What might have been: Cruz and White walked in the seventh and both were picked off first...White was 2-for-2 with three walks...

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Doc Severinsen blows in for symphony concert

Trumpeter Doc Severinsen joins the Midland-Odessa Symphony in its Seventh Subscription Concert of the season for an entire evening of Pops entertainment beginning at 8:00 p.m. Saturday at Chaparral Center.

Tickets are available at Texas Commerce Bank in Midland and Odessa.

Though most closely identified with "The Tonight Show," on which he has been the trumpet-playing musical director since 1967, Severinsen has also been voted Top Brass at least ten times in Playboy's annual music poll.

He also headlines several weeks each year in Las Vegas and Atlantic City, where, besides playing trumpet, he entertains audiences with his singing and comedic flair.

He spends many weekends as guest soloist with symphonies or in performances in small clubs and on college campuses with his fusion group Xebron. In addition, he finds the time to be resident conductor of the Phoenix Pops.

Severinsen has been with NBC since 1949, but it was as musical director of "The Tonight Show" that his trumpet playing and quick-witted banter made the nation's viewers aware of him as a personality.

For more information on Saturday's performance, call the Symphony offices at 563-4269.

MC teachers read poetry

Larry D. Griffin and Greg Glazner, instructors of English at Midland College, will be featured readers at a Midland Centennial Poetry Reading in the McCormick Gallery of the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College at 7 p.m. today.

In keeping with the theme of the reading, both Glazner and Griffin will read their own poems about Texas and Midland.

Glazner is the 1984 Recipient of the Bess Hokin Award for poetry published in "Poetry" magazine. His chapbook, "Walking Two Landscapes," was published in 1984 by State Street Press of Pittsford, New York.

Griffin has published two chapbooks: "New Fires" in 1982 by Full Court Press of Edmond, Oklahoma, and "The Blue Water Tower" in 1984 by Poetry Around Press of Norman, Oklahoma.

Both poets' chapbooks are available at the MC Bookstore.

Admission for the performance is $10.

TV executive makes dream come true

ENTERTAINMENT

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — John H. Mitchell, a tall, rangy, nearly bald television executive and nonstop talker, doesn't look like a dreamer.

But he is. "I had a dream," he said. "I began to believe it could take shape and form and come alive."

His dream was the Television Academy Hall of Fame, which is now in its second year and will induct seven more legendary figures in a two-hour telecast Sunday on NBC.

Those being honored this year are Carol Burnett; Sid Caesar; Walter Cronkite; Joyce Hall, chief booster of the "Hallmark Hall of Fame"; Rod Serling; Ed Sullivan, and Sylvester L. "Pat" Weaver, father of the "Today" show, "The Tonight Show" and the TV special.

The first inductees were Lucille Ball, Milton Berle, Paddy Chayefsky, Norman Lear, Edward R. Murrow, CBS founder William S. Paley and David Sarnoff, the founder of NBC.

"I thought it was time we honored our own," said Mitchell. "The Emmys are for individual achievement in a given year, but I felt we needed a means to recognize lifetime achievements. I know the Motion Picture Academy doesn't have a Hall of Fame, but television is made up of so many different parts there are many ways that people can contribute to the fabric that makes up television.

"I knew it would take somebody to drive this through. I made up my mind I wanted to accomplish this and I set about doing it. One thing that helped was the support of NBC and its chairman, Grant Tinker. He said it was a good idea and he would put it on the air."

Mitchell is the chairman of the Hall of Fame. The idea came to him when he was president of the Television Academy of Arts & Sciences. He is also a former president of Columbia Pictures Television who now runs a consulting company.

This year's Hall of Fame presentations were made during ceremonies at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium March 24. They were taped for later telecast. Among the guest stars were Woody Allen, Mel Brooks, Mike Wallace, Elizabeth Taylor, Julie Harris, Alan King, Garry Moore and Neil Simon.

Mitchell set up a committee to lay down the rules for the Hall of Fame and the selection of its honorees. "I wanted something that was prestigious and tamper proof," he said.

The number of inductees each year was arbitrarily set at seven. That allows 14 minutes for the presentation of each honoree in a two-hour program.

"The mechanism of the selection is that each of the 48 members of the board of governors of the academy has the opportunity to nominate 10 people," he said.

Sesame Street Live comes to Chap Center

Big Bird gets misplaced in "Missing Bird Mystery," Sesame Street Live's stage spectacular, playing at Chaparral Center April 26 through April 28.

Big Bird's disappearance does not go unnoticed. Throughout the 90-minute musical, Bert, Ernie, Prairie Dawn and the rest of the yellow canary's cohorts set out in search of their feathered friend.

Inspector Fortescu Farguar and rascally P.T. Barnswallow, two Muppets created especially for Sesame Street Live by Jim Henson, head up the hunt — each with quite different motives for finding this very rare bird.

Written by Jon Stone, director and creative consultant for the Emmy award-winning "Sesame Street" television series, Sesame Street Live is presented by VEE Corporation in cooperation with Children's Television Workshop.

Original director and choreographer is Anita Mann, who has been choreographer for the TV series, "Solid Gold," for the past two years. Performance Director Shelby La Branche is choreographer of "Missing Bird Mystery's" current version.

"Missing Bird Mystery" is produced by Bob Shipstad, who for 14 years, produced Shipstads & Johnson Ice Follies.

Original arrangements of such Sesame Street standards as "Sunny Day," "C is for Cookie," "Doin' the Pigeon," " I Just Adore Four" and "What's the Name of that Song" were supplied by composer-arranger Paul Walberg, whose credits include similar work for Disneyland and Ice Follies. Walberg also wrote special music for the production.

Showcasing the talents of the nineteen young actors, actresses and dancers who make up the company are stage settings by Jim Waters, Minneapolis, Minn., art director for the show.

"'Sesame Street Live'" contains all the aspects of good theater — humorous dialogue, tuneful music, excellent staging and innovative costuming," according to Shipstad, "and transcends both the children's and adults' worlds."

Tickets, priced at $8, are available at the Chaparral Center Box Office, Sears, Midland and Odessa. Children 12 and under get $1.00 off regular ticket prices April 27 and 28, courtesy of Coca-Cola. Opening night is McDonald's and Big 2 Family Night; all tickets are $2.00 off with coupon from McDonald's. For information, call (915) 684-9811.

Odessa College's Jazz Band presents spring concert

Odessa College's Jazz Band will present a spring concert featuring Peter Appleyard at 8 p.m. April 26 at the Globe Theatre.

Appleyard, Canada's foremost vibraharpist, played with Benny Goodman for eight years. A native of England, Appleyard began playing the piano at age 14 and took up the vibraharp after he moved to Canada.

During his career he performed with the Benny Goodman Sextet at every major concert hall in the world. Appleyard recorded with Goodman in "On Stage," and "Benny Goodman Into the 70s." He was featured with Count Bassie, Ella Fitzgerald and Frank Sinatra for a special engagement at the Uris Theatre in 1975.

Since 1976, Appleyard has hosted his own award-winning TV show "Peter Appleyard Presents," a weekly jazz show seen throughout Canada. He has also appeared on other TV shows such as "The Tonight Show" and "Andy Williams Show."

From his home in Toronto, Appleyard performs and contracts film scores for Henry Mancini, Robert Farnon, Maurice Garr, Percy Faith and Gil Mellie. He has recorded "Percussive Jazz," "The Vibe Sound of Peter Appleyard," and "Peter Appleyard Presents."

The Odessa College Jazz Band will perform with Appleyard and the concert will also feature the Odessa High School Stage Band.

Admission to the concert is $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

Brokaw helps save family farm from creditors

NEW YORK (AP) — When Tom Brokaw reports on the nation's farm problems, he could draw on some family experience.

About a year ago, the anchor of the "NBC Nightly News" bailed out his cousin Jim Brokaw, a farmer and state legislator from North Dakota, by buying 120 acres of farm land in North Dakota, thus saving the family homestead.

"Tom helped me out, or I'd be out in the cold, too," said Jim Brokaw, who, like many farmers, suffered from overextended borrowing.

Tom Brokaw, who is not involved in the management of the farm and makes no money from it, declined to discuss details of the purchase.

"It really is a family, personal matter," he said. "It was fairly undramatic anyway, something between the two of us."

Craft Center site of Fiesta Arts Fair

SAN ANTONIO — One of San Antonio's most unusual historic settings, the Southwest Craft Center, will give Fiesta '85 a spirited sendoff on opening weekend.

The 12th annual Fiesta Arts Fair, a mix of art and entertainment, food and family-oriented activity, will be held at the art school's five acre campus on the San Antonio River, from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Built in 1851 to house the Old Ursuline Convent, the Craft Center today is the city's only remaining authentic French architecture.

During the fair the grounds will be dotted with artists' booths and food stalls, entertainment and craft project areas, including:

— Original art and fine handcrafts for sale in every medium, representing top regional and Southwest talents, plus artists from all over the country.

— A wide variety of food specialties, reflecting the city's multi-ethnic heritage, available throughout the grounds, at reasonable prices.

— The Craft Experience Courtyard will offer informal learning sessions in a variety of craft techniques, with trained volunteers to guide participants. Children and adults will work side-by-side to experience weaving, ceramics, easel painting, puppet-making, leather tooling and more.

— Continuous entertainment will feature music and dance groups performing in the River Garden gazebo, on the bandstand and in the Frost Garden (set up as a sidewalk cafe serving pizza and beverages.)

— Exhibitions include the Greater San Antonio Quilt Guild show and sale in the former chapel; a show of two-dimensional fiber sculptures in the Emily Edwards Room; works by artists from across the country, for sale in the Ursuline Gallery; faculty artists exhibiting their works and demonstrating techniques in the studios; a children's art exhibit on the balconies overlooking the Craft Experience Courtyard.

Arts Fair visitors can board river taxis at Casa Rio (across from the Hilton), to dock at the Craft Center's River Garden. Free parking is available in lots adjacent to and across from the Craft Center.

Admission to the fair is $2.50 for adults, free for children under 12.

For more information, call the Southwest Craft Center, (512) 224-1848.

Actors Shaun Gilstrap and David Johnson listen as director Michael Jordan shows them what he wants during rehearsals for Midland Opera Theatre's production of "Johnny Sneaky," set to open April 26.

Midland Opera Theatre stages 'Gianni Schicchi'

Midland Opera Theatre is presenting Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" at 8 p.m. April 26 and 27 at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

Well-known for its 13th century setting, medieval costumes and a greedy band of relatives hovering around the not-so-cold body of their rich relative, the upcoming performance has had several changes made. The costumes have become Western, the setting has been moved to Midland circa 1925, the Italian names have been modified to ones with a twang and the opera is now titled "Johnny Sneaky."

"The Opera Theatre wanted to do a performance that was uniquely Midland, that could be performed by local talent and that could be understood easily," says Nancy Anguish, president of MOT.

"After much research, Puccini's 'Gianni Schicchi' was the committee's favorite piece for adapting to the Midland Centennial. We really wanted to give Midland a unique birthday present and an opera that captures the flavor of West Texas life and locales is a perfect way to do it."

Tickets for "Johnny Sneaky" are $10. They can be obtained by writing Midland Opera Theatre, P.O. Box 4504, Midland, Texas, 79704. Tickets can also be purchased at Theatre Midland Monday through April 26 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or at the door the nights of performances.

Grass-roots group backs quality television

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — In a totally unscientific poll, CBS' "Cagney & Lacey" was named the best quality drama series and NBC's "The Cosby Show" was named the best quality comedy series.

The key word was quality. The poll was conducted by Viewers for Quality Television, a grass-roots organization formed last fall to encourage better television.

The group was put together by two women who have never met. Donna Deen lives in Plano and works in a real estate office. Dorothy Swanson is a housewife with three children who lives in Hillsdale, Mich.

"Dorothy read about me in a Detroit newspaper when I was conducting a campaign to boost the ratings of 'St. Elsewhere' in 1983," said Ms. Deen in a telephone interview. "Dorothy sent me a letter of encouragement and told me about her campaign to save 'Cagney & Lacey.'

"We found we liked the same shows and we got to wondering if there were other people out there who also supported quality television. We organized VQT last December and we now have about 800 members around the country."

Mrs. Swanson said by telephone, "What we're trying to accomplish is involving viewers of quality shows in the decision-making process at the networks. We feel the networks rely exclusively on the Nielsen numbers, with the exception of NBC. We want viewer participation and we want the networks to be more aggressive in discovering the views of the public."

But first the results of the First Annual VQT Awards:

Best quality drama series — CBS' "Cagney & Lacey."

Best lead actress, drama — Sharon Gless, "Cagney & Lacey."

Best lead actor, drama — Daniel J. Travanti, NBC's "Hill Street Blues."

Best supporting actress, drama — Veronica Hamel, "Hill Street Blues."

Best supporting actor, drama — Bruce Weitz, "Hill Street Blues."

Best quality comedy series — NBC's "The Cosby Show."

Best lead actress, comedy — Shelley Long, NBC's "Cheers."

Best lead actor, comedy — Bill Cosby, "The Cosby Show."

Best supporting actress, comedy — Rhea Perlman, "Cheers."

Best supporting actor, comedy — Nicholas Colasanto, "Cheers." (Colasanto died earlier this year.)

Ms. Deen said Viewers for Quality Television sent out 534 ballots and got 190 back.

In some categories the vote was very close, she said. "Cagney & Lacey" edged out NBC's "St. Elsewhere" by only six votes. Betty Thomas, also of "Hill Street Blues," trailed Veronica Hamel by just several votes. For lead actor in a drama series, second place was a virtual tie between William Daniels and Ed Flanders of "St. Elsewhere."

"Many members wrote that they had a very tough time choosing a favorite among favorites," she said.

Ms. Deen said the group's aim was to encourage viewers to write letters to the networks and advertisers in support of quality television.

VQT has received notice in the press and Mrs. Swanson was brought to New York in March for a one-minute segment called "What Makes Me Mad" on ABC's "Good Morning America." She talked about the Nielsen families and their influence over network programming.

Spanish dance company to perform flamenco

BIG SPRING — The Maria Benitez Spanish Dance Company will perform a concert of flamenco and classical Spanish dance at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Big Spring Municipal Auditorium.

Maria Benitez has been hailed in Spain as among the finest of flamenco dancers. She has been referred to as "a Baryshnikov of Spanish dance."

Ms. Benitez and her husband, Cecilio, founded the company in 1972. In addition to the annual season in Santa Fe, N.M., where they are based, they perform in New York yearly and tour nationally and internationally.

Ms. Benitez has taught at the Boston Conservatory of Music, the Verde Valley School, Arizona, the University of Utah and the Institute of American Indian Arts in Santa Fe. She is a performer and choreographer for opera, including "La Vida Breve" with the Opera of Santa Fe and Sara Cauldwell's Boston Opera; and "La Traviata" with the Opera of Santa Fe and the St. Louis Opera.

She is the recipient of the New Mexico governor's Award for Excellence in the Field of Dance and the Classical Spanish Dance Award from the Cultural Institute of Puerto Rico, New York City.

For four years, she served as a panelist for the National Endowment for the Arts Dance Program and serves as a consultant.

Others in the company include dancers Roasa Mercedes, Susana Aranda, Manolo de Cordoba, singer Luis Vargas and guitarists Guillermo Rios and Rafael Rosas.

Tickets, priced at $10 reserved and $8 general admission, may be purchased at the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, Third and Gregg streets. There is a $2 discount for seniors, students and groups of 15 or more.

This performance is made possible under the sponsorship of the Cultural Arts Council, Big Spring, in cooperation with Advance Performances, an Austin-based arts organization.

'One Flew Over Cuckoo's Nest' to open

"One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest" will open May 3rd at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The production will run through May 18th.

The play is an adaptation of Ken Kesey's novel and was written by Dale Wasserman, author of "Man of La Mancha." The film version of this adult comedy/drama won a host of Oscars in 1976, including Best Actor, Best Actress and Best Picture.

"Cuckoo's Nest" is set in a psychiatric ward of a state mental institution. The major conflict of the piece is found between "Randal P. McMurphy," played by Gary Askins and "Head Nurse Ratchet," portrayed by Carole Newton.

McMurphy is a cocky, free-wheeling, rowdy who has manipulated himself into the asylum in preference to serving a jail sentence. He expects this hiatus will be a lark but he hasn't anticipated the vengence with which nurse Ratchet extracts the complete submission of her charges. The effect of their battle upon the other characters, both inmates and staff alike, is the emotional drive of this remarkable dramatic offering.

Supporting roles are played by Brian Schwanitz, Jim Slaughter, Marc Slattery, David Willis, Mike Butler, Paul Talbot, John Phillips, Susan Barker, Carolyn Torres, Cecil Beare, Chris Willis, Tim Rasborough, David Houston, Jim Bartlett, Edwin Gibbs and Lorie Fitzgerald.

Midland Community Theatre's Executive Director Don Bachmann will be directing this production. The sets will be designed by David Layman and technical direction will come from John Michael Warburton. Warburton will also design the lighting.

Costumes will be designed by Mae Dawson. Stage manager will be Joan O'Grady, assisted by Mike Loftis. Kemit Moulton is the construction chairman. The paint crew is headed by Marilynn Weaver. Rick Davidson is chairman of the stage crew and Sara Patterson chairs the dressers.

Other committees include props (gathering), Linda Hicks, Anne-Marie Bachmann; props (running), Robin Hodges; soft scenery, Martha Lassetter; sound, Grace Dana; lights, Judith Cain; publicity, Colleen Scury; house managers, Act IX members and spouses.

The box office will open Wednesday to Theatre members and April 27 to the general public. Reservations may be made at that time by calling 682-4111. This is an adult comedy and not suitable for children.

Trudeau doesn't air dirty linen

NEW YORK (AP) — Garry Trudeau does not air his wife's dirty linen in public.

Trudeau is the creator of the satirical "Doonesbury" comic strip; his wife is Jane Pauley.

In one "Doonesbury" last month, the bubble over journalist Rick Redfern noted that Joanie "was up last night with Jeffrey and had to call in sick at work."

About the same time, Ms. Pauley, the mother of 1-year-old twins, was missing from "Today," suffering from what co-anchor Bryant Gumbel called "a temperature." Could Joanie be Jane?

"No," said Ms. Pauley. "It was utterly coincidental."

Concert proceeds to aid drought victims

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer and actress Melba Moore, song stylist Roberta Flack and the jazz-pop group Manhattan Transfer have joined the legion of other artists who are donating their time or profits from their records to benefit drought victims in Africa.

They will give a concert April 28 in the General Assembly Hall of the United Nations.

CDU's name, completion date announced

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The name of a new behavorial health center under construction in west Midland, its scheduled completion date and the future appointment of a board of directors have been announced.

"The official name is Clearview Behavorial Health Center, Camelback Samaritan Group Inc.," said Joe Dominey, a spokesman. Dominey stated the chemical dependency facility is scheduled for completion in August.

A board of directors will be announced in the near future, said Dominey. Administrative offices for Clearview have been set up temporarily in the Paragon Building, with Phillip H. Lundberg named as administrator.

The new facility will provide treatment for three age categories — adults, young adults and adolescents, according to Dominey.

"There will be four areas of abuse treated," he said. "Alcohol dependency, cocaine addiction, prescription drug addiction and 'poly-drug' or alcohol and other drugs."

The CDU is recruiting staff members, who will include psychologists, nurses, social workers, occupational therapists and other therapists.

"Clearview hopes to hire a psychiatrist as staff administrator," said Dominey.

The need for a CDU has been expressed by Midland medical leaders.

"There was a significant unmet need in the Permian Basin for treatment of alcohol and drug abuse," said MMH president Ray Branson at the facility's November 1984 groundbreaking ceremony.

"Folks needing the service have had to travel great distances to get it."

Dominey, a volunteer for Palmer Drug Abuse Program of Midland, agreed.

"Most of our adolescents must go to Houston or Dallas for treatment," he said. "The average stay is about six weeks, with stays often lasting longer. It can be very traumatic for them and the family. The family has to go back and forth and the separation alone is traumatic enough."

The new center is a joint venture between Midland Memorial Hospital and two Arizona firms, Camelback Hospitals of Scottsdale and Samaritan Health Service of Phoenix.

MMH will rent the land to Camelback and Samaritan for $1 a year.

Plans for the chemical dependency unit first were discussed in 1980 when a feasibility study was conducted by Midland Memorial Hospital. Original plans were to add 20 beds for chemically dependent patients as part of an expansion program. Those plans were changed when the oil boom of 1981 brought fears of bed shortages and a 50-bed, $3.4 million project was set for construction at Wadley and Tremont Streets for the chemical dependency unit.

In 1983, the hospital board approved a plan for a 77-bed expansion at a cost of $15 million. This decision, coupled with competition from other groups also seeking approval of chemical dependency facilities, caused MMH to shelve the plans.

In early 1984, MMH began searching for a joint partner to develop the chemical dependency unit. A conceptual agreement with Camelback and Samaritan was reached in July and finalized Nov. 8, 1984, in Phoenix.

The 36,500-square-foot facility is being constructed on a 10-acre tract donated by the Scharbauer family near Loop 250 and Thomason Drive. Included in the plans are an auditorium, four classrooms, exercise rooms and group therapy rooms, whirlpool, locker rooms and conference room.

Jury finds city, church custodian equally negligent

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A nine-woman, three-man jury Wednesday evening determined in a 10-2 verdict that the City of Midland and a 34-year-old church custodian were equally negligent in the April 6, 1983, incident in which the hiding custodian was mauled by a police dog searching for burglars.

Raul Paredez, 608 N. Dallas, No. 9, had filed a civil suit against the city, Police Chief Wayne Gideon, dog handler Officer Richard Edens and police K-9 coordinator Sgt. Ed Nicks after Paredez suffered injuries in the attack which left him permanently scarred on the face and left ear.

Named in the original suit filed July 12, 1983, but dropped before the case went to court Monday before 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp, were former police officer J.D. Luckie, now an investigator with the District Attorney's Office, and police Detective Sgt. Alan Inmon.

The jury deliberated more than two hours before awarding Paredez $42,500 in compensation for physical pain and mental anguish suffered during the incident and permanent scars and disfigurement. His attorney, Gayle Shackelford had suggested to the jury that "$100,000 is not an unreasonable sum."

According to co-counsel Darrell F. Smith, "at the very least," Paradez will receive half of the $42,500 in damages and medical bills, which he said were stipulated before the trial began.

SMITH SAID he and Ms. Shackelford will make a motion requesting that Culp not consider the comparative issue.

"We'll urge upon him that being present in a church is not a negligent act," Smith said.

The officers involved declined to comment after the verdict with Nicks only expressing deep disappointment and Gideon maintaining the K-9 program is "an excellent program."

Terrence Patrick Cahill, an expert police dog trainer in Washington, D.C., who helped establish the Midland K-9 unit, testified Nicks ranked a "10" as a dog handler and the Midland program ranked "8-9" on a scale of 1-10 in the country.

Despite a grand jury investigation April 15, 1983, which concluded no charges should be filed in the incident and that the K-9 operation should be continued and expanded as funds permit, the jury Wednesday found the dog in question was unfit; Gideon, Nicks and Edens knew he was unfit; and the dog was the cause of the incident at the First United Methodist Church, 306 N. Baird.

The jury also found that the city negligently failed to properly train the dogs and that that negligence was the cause of the incident. Also, Edens negligently failed to properly warn Paredez of the presence of the dog, and failed to properly control the dog, according to the verdict.

THE JURORS, however, also found Paredez was negligent for hiding in the closet and that his action was the cause of the incident.

During the three-day trial, Paredez testified he was staying in the church without permission when the incident occurred. He denied hearing officers warn him to leave the church or they would send the dog in and said he hid in a closet when he heard footsteps because he was afraid it would be the minister or a member of the congregation.

No burglary charges were filed against the church employee.

Testimony from officers indicated Edens had given the required warning before entering the church with his dog, Rowdy. The K-9 unit was called to the scene of the church after Luckie said he saw a man matching Paredez's description walking around the building. Luckie testified he searched the parking lot of the church for Paredez before he found open windows and called the K-9 unit for backup.

Edens testified the dog entered the closet on the second floor after about 35 minutes of searching other areas in the church. When the dog got in, he pinned Paradez against the door, preventing Edens from entering.

Paredez's attorneys contended Rowdy had a history of bites, holding too long and disobeying commands. The dog was handled by former officer Lonnie Payne, who was fired after being found guilty of using excessive force in an off-duty incident not involving the dog.

MS. SHACKELFORD, noting Rowdy had been handled by Edens for only a month, said the dog's previous handler had no experience and very little training in the K-9 program.

"Did they know the animal was not fit?" she asked jurors. "Of course they knew, everyone knew."

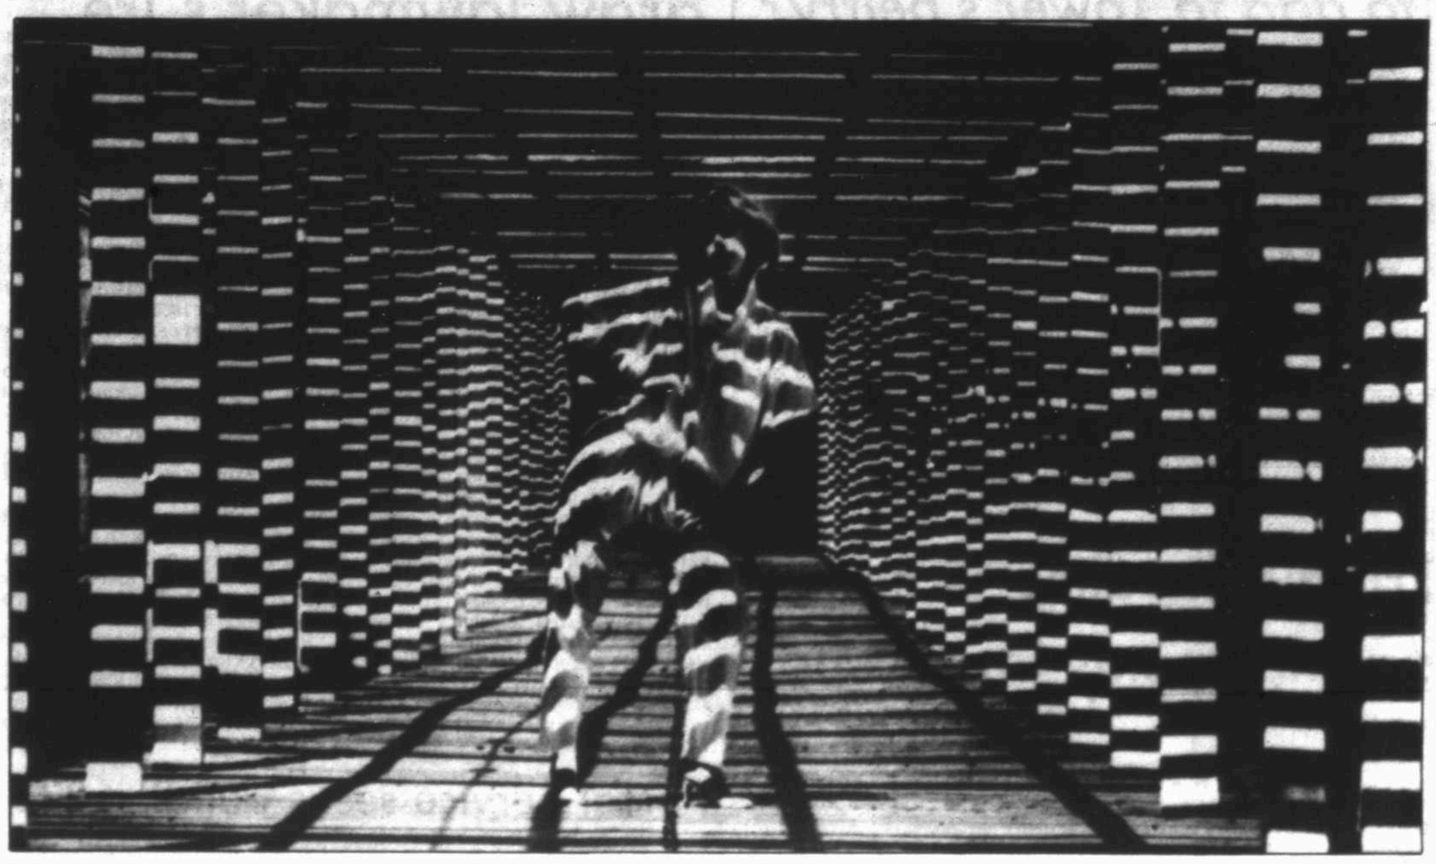

She reminded jurors of testimony from officers at the hospital where Paredez remained for nine days that one officer had said, "I don't want to be around that dog," and another officer had said, "the dog wouldn't respond to commands."

Under questioning from defense attorney Charles Tighe, one officer said he meant he didn't want to be around any of the dogs and the other said he meant Rowdy didn't obey the commands because he couldn't hear them behind the closed door of the closet.

Ms. Shackelford argued that Paradez was not negligent in hiding in the closet.

"It's late and it's scary" alone in the church, she said. "I think it is in the ordinary world of prudence to know who was out there before exposing himself...There was no way to foresee this kind of attack at 2 a.m. in the morning."

Tuition bill cleared for Senate debate

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — A Senate-House lawmaking effort that would add $285 million to state revenue over the next two years by raising state college tuition has been cleared for Senate debate, probably next week.

The Senate Finance Committee approved the Senate version, 8-1, Wednesday after a "face-to-face" talk between Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, chairman of the committee, and Rep. Wilhelmenia Delco, D-Austin, author of the House-approved tuition increase bill and chairman of the House Higher Education Committee.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said he voted against the measure, which has been touted as a compromise between House and Senate thinking, because it would obligate future lawmakers and it hit medical school students the hardest.

"I got as much as I could on compromises," Mrs. Delco told reporters earlier. "If they don't change the (compromise Senate) bill, I will support it."

The House bill would raise tuition an estimated $235 million to $273 million.

Under the compromise plan, tuition rates for Texas resident undergraduates would jump from $4 to $12 per semester hour this fall and $16 next year. Out-of-state students would pay $120 per semester hour instead of the current $40.

Tuition for non-resident medical students would go from $2,400 a year in 1986 to $15,800 in 1987. Beyond 1988 tuition rates would be 40 percent of the cost of their education.

Resident law, architectual and engineering school students would pay $24 per semester hour in 1986 and $36 in 1987. Non-resident students of these schools would pay $150 per hour both years.

Rep. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, said "That (the senate proposal to triple tuition costs) is excessive for a one-time move. I do feel that we should bring tuition in line with what it should be."

Godwin, who voted in favor of the House proposal to double tuition rates for in-state students, said "If we raise tuition one step at a time and it still looks too low, we can always go back in next session and raise it some more. As it stands (under the senate proposal) it would be a disservice to the students of this state."

Fifteen percent of the in-state and 5 percent of the out-of-state tution increases would go into scholarship funds for needy students.

House acceptance of the Senate version could do away with a conference committee, an almost unheard of step for major legislation.

Calling a tuition-hike of any kind "just another tax increase," Rep. Tom Craddick, R—Midland, said, "We shouldn't look at any tuition increase until we cut the fat out of the budget at some of these schools."

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-College Station, who voted for the compromise, said he was concerned that higher rates for foreigners might drive away foreign students from Texas colleges and universities.

Brooks said he was particularly worried about rates for medical students that would rise from $1,200 a year in 1986 to $3,950 in 1987.

"That's too much of a change," Brooks said, and promised to have a series of amendments ready on medical school rates when the Senate debates the bill.

"Figures will show that most of these non-residents settle and practice within 50 miles of where they take their training," he said.

The Legislative Budget Board had recommended a 26 percent cut in state college and university budgets before Lt. Bill Hobby and others began looking for additional revenue from tuition increases and other state fees.

Ex-Midlander looks at U.S. business, apartheid

Bo Baskin

From Midland to Kakamega, Kenya to Oxford, England to New Haven, Conn.

It seems as though 29-year-old Bo Baskin has done it all.

Not quite.

Baskin, currently an investment banker with First Boston, apparently is making a name for himself in the literary world as well.

A collaborator in the book, "Business in the Shadow of Apartheid" has attracted the attention of the business community, government and the editors of "Fortune" magazine, in particular.

In an April 29 issue, "Fortune" writer Robert Lubar takes a look at Baskin and his partners, attorney Stefan Underhill and Jonathan Leape, a Harvard economist. He notes that the three editors and 10 authors "collectively made a powerful case" for a proposition: Whether U.S. investment in South Africa ought to be increased.

Lubar wrote, "The book presents a picture of South Africa at variance with the notion that the country is just one big concentration camp, frozen in place," adding that corporate executives and directors, portfolio managers, and trustees of universities and other pension funds are getting heat from activists who want them to pull out of South Africa to liquidate any and all investments in the country.

What Baskin and the other collaborators did in "Business in the Shadow of Apartheid" is "put several different perspectives on display," Lubar wrote.

The book germinated in an unusual way, he said. "Its three editors (Baskin, Underhill and Leape) are young Americans of diverse backgrounds...What they had in common was a ravenous curiosity about South Africa, and, apparently, the spare time to indulge it."

Baskin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Baskin, is a 1973 graduate of Midland High School. He earned a bachelor of arts degree in economics, graduating cum laude from Davidson College in Davidson, N.C.

ED TODD

Is romance limited to the past?

For most of my life, I've always figured that the romance, the excitement, of life is in the past.

I think I might have been mistaken in some respects, but I'm not totally convinced.

I see less and less of the past around me. The future sort of tantalizes me, though I have reservations about it. And I don't always know what to do with today. But, I've noticed, each day pretty well takes care of itself if I give it just a little bit of direction. But I have to move.

My advisory corps called "they" tells me the future will do just fine if my days are marked by sanity and good orderly direction. The philosophy sure sounds reasonable, but I haven't found myself always to be the sterling example of a sane and reasonable person.

Not unlike every other bloke out there, I grew up in the past. And by that I don't just mean yesterday. My grandfathers, particularly the one who farmed but had rather be railroading and traveling, spoke of the adventuresome past. I vicariously lived his life on the rails, in the steamship to England and in roaming this country in the late 1890s and early into the 1900s.

For the most part, I had delightful times listening and dreaming. The other grandfather, the more pragmatic one who had no visible regrets, only occasionally delved into the past, but he didn't drift. He somewhat related the past to "the now" and to the future in a progressive and evolutionary sense. I wasn't aware of it then, but he did.

His inspiration was this: One invention leads to another just as one idea begets another. From the wheel and fire came the automobile, and from the winged creatures and boomerang came the idea of man in flight. From the stick in the sand came the pen, and from the stars and the magnetic North Pole came the compass and navigation.

My father yearned for the romantic life as reflected in folk songs, ballads, antiques and the pastoral life. The maternal side of my family seemed to be the more practical and didn't look back longingly.

In school, we learned about the past. What else was there? I wasn't always certain what bearing the past had on today. But I was convinced, perhaps subconsciously, that the past must have been far more exciting and adventuresome than anything in the present. In fact, I wasn't convinced the past was for real. Just like monuments, old scrolls and Sanskrit, literature, songs and poetry often dwell on the irretrievable past, the romantic past. I reached out for adventure but could only find it in my fantasy.

Perhaps I've evolving. The past still is intriguing, but, thanks to powers beyond me, each day is becoming an adventure.

Restraining order filed against man for DWI

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The first step in what prosecutors in the Midland County District Attorney's Office hope will be a deterrent to drunk drivers was made Wednesday afternoon when a temporary restraining order was filed against a Midland man facing a fourth driving while intoxicated charge.

The temporary restraining order filed against Robert Wayland Valentine, 3606 Amelia, prevents him from selling or disposing of the 1969 Ford LTD he owns and was driving when he was arrested on DWI charges March 29.

"It's part of the 1983 sweeping legislative DWI reforms," said Tom Morgan, Midland County administrative assistant district attorney.

According to Art. 67011-7 of Vernon's Annotated and Civil Statutes, the restraining order may be filed against a person who has three DWI convictions and has been charged with a fourth offense.

Valentine, who could not be reached for comment, was convicted in Dallas County on DWI charges April 29, 1983; Feb. 20, 1980; and April 15, 1977, according to the order.

If convicted on the fourth charge, Valentine may forfeit his car to Midland County, where it will be sold at a public auction directed by the county sheriff, according to the law.

"Some people are going to lose some expensive vehicles," Morgan said. "This office thinks this is good legislation and is a deterrent."

Fewer than 10 persons with two prior DWI convictions have been charged in Midland County with DWI offenses this year, Morgan said.

City police investigate theft of pickup

From Staff Reports

The theft Tuesday of a $5,000 pickup is being investigated by Midland police.

According to reports, Dan Lynde, 4407 Robin Lane, said his 1981 Chevrolet Silverado pickup was parked at Dan Lynde Concrete, 3209 Commercial. The theft occurred between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tuesday, reports said.

Don Ray Shockley, 4422 Roosevelt, told police $915 worth of tools were stolen during the past six weeks from a trailer parked in his driveway. There were no signs of forced entry, according to reports.

A $400 electric cash register containing $300 in cash and two checks was reported stolen from Gonzalez Grocery, 1102 E. Walnut. According to Benito Mata, who reported the incident to police, entry was gained between 1 a.m. and 6:50 a.m. Wednesday by removing a screen and coming in an open window.

A $700 jackhammer, rented from Ken's Rent-It Center, was reported stolen Wednesday afternoon from a repair site at 2439 Whitmire. Randy Greiner, maintenance worker for Autumn Woods Apartments, told police he was using the jackhammer at about 4 p.m. to repair pool pumps east of the club house and had left the site for 15 minutes to check on the pool area. When he returned, the jackhammer was gone.

George Bloss reported a 1979 Chevrolet one-ton truck was burglarized between 9:30 a.m. Tuesday and 4 p.m. Wednesday while it was parked at J&S Oilfield Electric, 3216 Commercial. Taken from the unlocked truck were a citizen band radio and equipment valued at a total of $700.

Karen Thomas, 1213 E. Wadley, Apt. 823, reported her 1978 Chevrolet Camaro was burglarized sometime Friday night while parked in the parking lot. According to reports, entry was gained by using an instrument to unlock the door. A $75 stereo equalizer and three hubcaps valued at $100 were stolen, reports said. Another $400 damage to the console area and $35 damage to a chrome stripe on the door were reported.

Faye Coonce, 2401½ W. College, reported a $300 color television set was stolen between 6:45 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Tuesday from Room 436 of the Holiday Inn Country Villa, 4300 W. Highway 89. About $250 worth of damage to a chest of drawers also was reported.

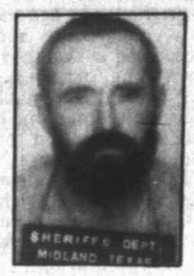

Five contracts with payments attached were reported stolen between Monday and Wednesday from the Golden Life Fitness Center, 3200 Andrews Highway. The items, taken from a drawer in the office, were valued at $460.

Michael Traylor, 1005 S. Mineola, told police a cassette stereo and equalizer valued at $213 were stolen between 8:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday from his 1973 Chevrolet Monte Carlo. Entry was gained through a rolled-down window, according to reports.

Will UT get more bats to add to Tower's belfry?

AUSTIN (AP) — An organization dedicated to saving bats around the world is considering moving from Wisconsin to Texas to be close to the biggest bat colony in the world.

"This is bat nirvana-land," Dr. Merlin D. Tuttle said Wednesday as he took in Central Texas with a sweep of his arms.

Tuttle, curator of mammals at the Milwaukee Public Museum and organizer of Bat Conservation International, is in Austin this week to talk to University of Texas officials and others about moving the bat-saving organization and his research to Austin.

Tuttle said he probably will move to Austin even if he and UT officials cannot work out an affiliation.

Within an hour's drive of Austin, privately owned Bracken Cave is home to 20 million bats, the largest colony in the world, Tuttle said. The Austin area also offers "the best diversity of bats," and is more convenient to the bat-rich tropics than Milwaukee, he said.

Tuttle, 43, claims to have researched more than 300 species of bats during the past 20 years. One-fourth of all the mammal species in the world are bats, Tuttle said. Among about 1,000 bat species are fruit bats that pollinate fruit trees, bats that resemble hummingbirds in size and hovering ability, bats that have 6-foot wingspans and travel by day instead of night.

Judges' luxury lunches draw lawmaker's ire

DALLAS (AP) — Some felony court judges' lunch tabs — as high as $565 for a single outing — are drawing criticism from a Texas legislator, who has called them "blatantly improper."

Between April and August 1984, 11 Dallas County felony court judges spent a total of $3,564 on lunches and dinners with probation officers, The Dallas Morning News reported Wednesday.

State District Judge Mike Keasler, for instance, selected one of Dallas' priciest restaurants, the four-star Calluaud's, for a luncheon business meeting with 24 probation officers. The bill was $554.30, or about $22 apiece.

"It is blatantly improper to spend money — any state money — on meals at a four-star French restaurant where prices aren't even printed on the menu and where valet parking costs more than a McDonald's hamburger," said state Rep. Steve Wolens, D-Oak Cliff.

The Dallas-area legislator called the expenses from the training sessions and other probation-related meetings ill-conceived and extravagant uses of public money.

"It doesn't pass the fish test," Wolens said. "It smells."

The food expenses for the "judicial training sessions" were paid from a fund used by the felony court judges to operate the Dallas County Adult Probation Department.

The most expensive lunch tab was $565. The cheapest was $151, according to county records.

An additional $3,100 was spent on meals for other probation-related business meetings between August 1983 and March 1985.

About 60 percent of the fund comes from state appropriations, and the rest is from fees paid by probationers. The meal expenses have prompted Wolens to introduce a bill to put controls on such funds.

But several judges said the money for the training sessions was well-spent.

Besides allowing judges a chance to meet face-to-face with the probation officers assigned to their courts, the judges said the meetings give them a chance to discuss their probation philosophies and policies.

"Perhaps we should have gone to McDonald's or had it in the courtroom, looking back," Keasler said. "But at that time, it seemed perfectly innocent and productive. And it was productive."

Friday deadline to make arrangements for pickup

From Staff Reports

Deadline to make arrangements with Clean Midland for free pickup of large items such as old furniture, appliances and tree limbs is Friday.

To request a pickup, call 682-2821. Request forms also are available at Albertson's, Safeway, Furr's, M System, Sundown Market, Casa de Amigos, Community National Bank, City Hall cashier and customer service areas, Clean Midland and the Chamber of Commerce. The city's street division will devote three weeks, from April 29 through May 17, to answering these requests.

Neighbors may request pickup of large trash items from anywhere in the area, as long as they can provide a description of what is to be hauled, transport the items to an alley and provide an exact address for pickup.

"The city is undertaking a massive project in a very short period of time," said Jane Leslie, executive director of Clean Midland. "They need everyone's cooperation in order for the campaign to be effective."

To speed up the pick-up process, citizens are being asked to bundle items neatly and stack them in the alley beside the dumpster they normally use. Normal trash service will continue as usual. The street crews will begin at the northwest side of the city and work their way to the southeast sector. Residents who live south of Golf Course Road won't have their requests answered until after May 6.

"The phone lines have been busy constantly," said Ms. Leslie. "At this stage in the campaign, we're already estimating we will surpass the number of requests made in 1983 and 1984. We're pleased with our anticipated results for 1985."

Postal Service seeks building site

From Staff Reports

The U.S. Postal Service is seeking a suitable site on which to build a new Northside Station postal facility in Midland, according to Postmaster Bill Williams.

The "preferred area" for site consideration is bounded on the north by Loop 250, on the east by Lamesa Road, on the south by Wall Street, and on the west by North Garfield Street. Where streets or highways are used as boundaries, sites on either side of the street or highway are considered within the preferred area. All utilities and access to a two-lane paved public street must be available.

Site size needed is approximately 179,685 square feet of land, or a lot with minimum dimensions of 346 feet by 519 feet.

Property owners are asked to submit their site offerings no later than April 25 to: Bill Wright, real estate specialist, Field Real Estate and Buildings Office, U.S. Postal Service, P.O. Drawer 239, Dallas, Tex. 75221-0239.

After a suitable site has been located and the Postal Service has accepted an offer to sell from the owner, an architect will be hired to design the building.

The proposed new postal-owned building will have approximately 28,109 square feet of interior floor space.

BASKIN

In 1978 Baskin entered the Yale School of Organization and Management and two years later, entered Oxford University in Oxford, England, where he received a bachelor of arts degree in economics and politics.

In 1981 he returned to Yale and completed a masters degree in public and private management with an emphasis in finance, accounting and risk analysis. He went on to become president of Nasada Energy Inc. where he managed an investment group that placed $2 million in venture capital in the cash-poor 1982 oil and gas market.

In 1982 Baskin, Underhill and Leape organized a conference on South Africa at the Yale School of Management. It brought together a group of U.S. executives, all of them bearing some responsibility for decisions about their companies' commitments in that country and a broadly representative delegation of black and white South Africans.

Nine of the papers presented by the South African participants were assembled and updated to form the book which suggests, "Apartheid is doomed not because it is cruel and unjust, or because world opinion will no longer stand for it, but because it is fundamentally incompatible with a modern industrial economy," according to Lubar.

"A persuasive case for deeper involvement is made by some of the contributors to 'Business in the Shadow of Apartheid'...Only a couple of dozen firms are rated as 'making good progress;' however, these include the largest (for example, IBM, GM, Ford and Merck), and so the impact of their behavior is significant."

DWI

If convicted of their third offense and then arrested on a fourth DWI charge, they, too, will be filed against, he said.

"This is the first of many to come," Morgan said. "We will continue to do this."

A hearing on the application in the Valentine case has been scheduled for 8:30 a.m. May 3 before 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin. The law states an application for the temporary restraining order must be filed within 20 days of the fourth arrest. A hearing on the temporary injunction must be held within 20 days after the application is filed.

If Valentine denies that his car is subject to forfeiture, Baskin will hear evidence and make a decision. If the judge determines the car is subject to forfeiture, an order prohibiting Valentine from selling or disposing of the car in which he was arrested will go into effect.

The injunction expires if Valentine can prove "by document or other evidence satisfactory to the court that prosecution for the offense has been dismissed," or if he is acquitted of his fourth DWI charge.

If he's convicted, however, the car goes to the county.

SUIT

"The fact is this incident would not have happened if Mr. Paredez had not acted as a burglar," Tighe argued. "Officer Edens, at 2:30 in the morning in a building, is he supposed to know what kind of threat (Paredez) is?

"In the real world, I would suggest they are perfectly reasonable in exercising ordinary care," Tighe said.

Citizens asked to don Western wear

From Staff Reports

Western Days reflected in worktime and leisure attire are to be celebrated in Midland each Friday through July 5 to highlight the Midland Centennial.

The Midland County Commissioners' Court has proclaimed that each Friday through July 5 will be called "Centennial Friday."

"The Midland Centennial Commission wants to have sanctioned ways for the citizens of Midland County to participate in the Centennial year," said a resolution passed by the court.

The Commissioners' Court is encouraging Midlanders to dress up in "proper attire," defined as Western wear, period dress or similar attire, each Friday 'til mid-year. In addition, many men are sporting beards in recognition of the 100th anniversary of the founding of Midland County. The Centennial's big-bang celebration will coincide with the fanfare of July Fourth, the nation's Independence Day.

"It's a great way to raise civic awareness and civic pride," County Judge Bill Ahders said of the wearing of Western and period dress. "I hope everybody participates in this awareness program."

Pool maintenance school slated

From Staff Reports

The Midland Health Department and the Texas Department of Health will conduct a swimming pool operation and maintenance school from 8 a.m. to noon April 23, at the Midland Center, 501 N. Main Street.

This instruction is designed for commercial pool operators who are responsible for public and semi-public swimming pool operations. Swimming pool operators of apartment complexes, motels, hotels, spas, schools, and city pools are invited to attend the free seminar.

Those subjects to be covered include Midland city code and state regulations/requirements, water chemistry, pumps and recirculation systems, proper pool maintenance, and public health concerns with pools.

Metered parking will be available one block east of the Midland Center.

For more information contact the Midland Health Department 683-4281, ext. 423.

Poet performer appears at city's Unitarian church

From Staff Reports

Ric Masten, a poet performer, will appear at the Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland, corner of Neely and Midkiff streets, at 7:30 p.m. today.

Although he has eight books of poetry to his credit, Masten says his work is best heard live whether it's spoken or sung. "My favorite audience is made up of people who would normally regard an hour with a poet as cruel and unusual punishment," Masten says.

Since 1968, Masten has traveled across the country giving readings, concerts and workshops in hundreds of colleges, churches, prisons and hospitals. He's been called "a roving humorist," "a street philosopher" and "a stand-up poet."

His poems, stories and songs speak to the human condition, the loneliness, "I'm Not Waving Baby, I'm Drowning," and the joy, "Let it be a Dance." Masten's readings are funny and poignant by turns and always improvised. Masten says this makes every program different and gives the audience the sense of being engaged in a conversation rather than watching a one-man show.

"Poems composed for the ear are like music," Masten says. "People should listen moving along with them as such, without pausing to reflect as you would the printed word. What I do is more song than manuscript."

The public is invited to attend.

Midland resident spends week with state senator

From Staff Reports

M. Allday III

A Midland resident has taken advantage of State Sen. Bill Sims' intern program designed to help citizens understand the State Legislature.

Martin L. Allday III, a graduate of Midland High School and a student at the University of Texas at Austin majoring in government and public law, spent a week monitoring the Senate Finance and Natural Resources committees.

Sims launched the strictly volunteer program this year, which is open to residents of the 25th Senatorial District. Sims represents Midland in the State Senate.

"The primary benefit of this program for me is the chance to get to know some of the people in the district who aren't necessarily elected officials or those you meet on the job," said Sims, a Democrat from San Angelo. "Our office gets an enthusiastic and knowledgeable helping hand without costing the state a dime."

For Allday, working with the Legislature had a few surprises. "When I first decided to apply to Sen. Sims' office, I thought the internship would be very educational. Once I reported to work Monday morning I found out that not only was I right, but that interning was a lot of fun."

Residents of the 25th Senatorial District who are interested in working a few days during the legislative session that ends May 27 may submit a resume, photograph and convenient working dates to the senator's office. The address is P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Tx., 78711.

"Marty was a real help to us," Sims said. "In fact, I've been very pleased with the whole program. I'd like to encourage anyone who has ever been curious about the Texas Legislature to give it a try."

Area colleges set seminar on small-business survival

From Staff Reports

A seminar entitled, "Business Survival in Difficult Times" will be conducted May 9 in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium at Midland College.

Co-sponsored by Midland College, Odessa College, the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and the Small Business Council of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the seminar is designed to assist small business owners and operators in the Permian Basin. Sessions including bankruptcy, creditor and financial advice will he held from 8:15 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

Heading one panel will be Joseph C. Elliott, United States Bankruptcy Court judge for the Western District of Texas. He will discuss the court's role in bankruptcy matters.

Other panelists will include attorneys W.N. Reese Jr., John Leslie, Robert R. Truitt Jr., all of Midland; and Odessa lawyers Blake Hanson and Randall House. The panelists will discuss secured and unsecured creditors, debtors and financial aspects of bankruptcy.

In addition, Houston financial consultant Bettina Whyte; Odessa attorney Mike Atkins, Odessa Certified Public Accountant Dale Hamilton, Dr. Thomas Schaefer of UTPB and John Walz of the SBA, Lubbock division, will speak. Stan Clark of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation will be present.

Deadline for registration is April 26 and the fee is $15 per person, including lunch.

TWC OKs cloud-seeding operations

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Applications by North American Weather Consultants for cloud-seeding operations in Corpus Christi and San Angelo have been approved by the Texas Water Commission.

The Salt Lake City firm is seeking approval of another project on behalf of the Edwards Underground Water district for work in the Edwards Aquifer region. A hearing on that application was set for last Tuesday in Leakey.

The project for Corpus Christi involves Uvalde, Media, Atascosa, Zavala, Frio, La Salle and McMullen counties.

The San Angelo project is for Glasscock, Sterling, Coke, Reagan, Irion, Tom Green, Crockett and Schleicher counties.

Both projects are aimed at increasing rainfall to "bolster water supplies" for the sponsoring cities.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Allergic youngster may react to hamster, as well

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son has been pleading with us to get a dog, but he has an allergy and we have refused to go along with his request. Some of my friends' children have hamsters for pets. I know from reading your column that dogs and cats can aggravate an allergy, and I would like to know if a hamster would pose the same problem. I think my son would settle for one. — Mrs. J.P., Dearborn, Mich.

Dear Mrs. P.: Researchers at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., who have studied the subject, say that individuals who are allergic to dogs and cats often are also sensitive to hamsters, as well as to rabbits, guinea pigs and other laboratory animals.

This is not to say that everyone who has an allergy will necessarily be allergic to these laboratory animals; however, those who are already sensitive to dogs and cats are at greatest risk of being allergic to other animals.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What is the significance when a microscopic examination shows blood in the urine of a 28-year-old man? My son has written to me about this, and he says that there is nothing to worry about and there is nothing he has to do about it, but I would like some reassurance. — Mr. Y.P., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mr. P.: You can be reassured that your son is not hiding anything from you. Microhematuria, which is the condition you describe, does not call for further exploration of the urinary tract in men under 40 years of age.

In one study involving about 1,000 men, almost 39 percent were found to have microhematuria unaccompanied by symptoms. The incidence of urologic malignancy was 0.1 percent, which is about the same incidence as that found in men of similar age in the general population.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I an well aware of the importance of breast self-examination, and I practice it regularly. But I would also like to know what other kinds of tests are best for detecting breast cancer when it is still in its earliest stages. — Mrs. G.L., Montreal.

Dear Mrs. L.: Investigators from the Massachusetts General Hospital Cancer Center report that X-ray mammography is the best method for detecting early breast cancer, even before it becomes clinically evident; however, other techniques may also be helpful. In cases in which the mammogram and a physical examination do not provide a definitive diagnosis, both ultrasound and computerized tomography may prove helpful.

I should emphasize that mammographic examination does not rule out the need for routine self-examination and physical examination. Furthermore, a clinically suspicious area should be investigated even if the mammogram does not show that there is any cause for concern.

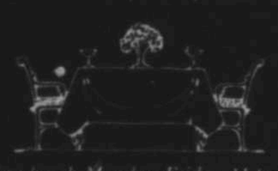

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine noticed that I was using a nasal decongestant, and she mentioned that my condition would get worse if I used it too long. If a person's nose is stuffed, it makes sense to me to use a decongestant. How can something that is meant to unclog the nose have the opposite effect? — Mrs. G.U., Torrance, Calif.

Dear Mrs. U.: A nasal decongestant in the form of nose drops or a spray can provide temporary relief. After a few days' use, however, there may be a rebound effect characterized by irritation and congestion of the nasal passages, which cause the stuffiness to return.

For Darryl, Springfield, Illinois: Antidepressant medication has been suggested for the treatment of sexual phobias, however, this form of treatment is to be used in addition to — not instead of — psychological counseling.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Dollar increases

LONDON (AP) — The dollar, following an overnight rally in New York, firmed against all major currencies in early trading today. Gold prices fell.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before it begins in Europe, the dollar rebounded strongly to close at 250.50 yen, up two yen from Wednesday's close of 248.50. In later European trading, the dollar was quoted at 250.42 yen.

The comeback halted a slide in which the dollar had declined by more than five yen against the Japanese currency since last Friday.

The dollar firmed against the British pound which cost $1.2637 in early trading, cheaper than $1.2797 late Thursday.

Early dollar rates against other key currencies compared with late rates Wednesday:

– 3.0550 West German marks, up from 3.0230.

– 2.5565 Swiss francs, up from 2.5260.

– 9.3150 French francs, up from 9.2350.

– 3.4602 Dutch guilders, up from 3.4240.

– 1.955.50 Italian lire, up from 1,934.50.

– 1.3575 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3567.

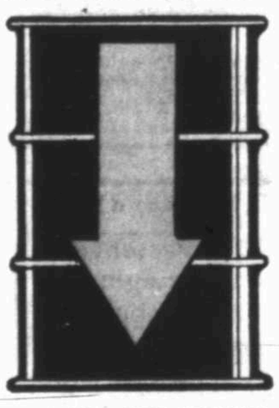

Gold opened in London at $323.60 bid an ounce, down from $327.50 at the close Wednesday, but firmed in later trading. London's five major bullion houses set the midmorning "fixing" at $325.50.

In Zurich, gold opened at a bidurice of $324, $3.50 down from Wednesday's close of $327.75.

In Hong Kong, gold closed at $325.59 bid, down $3.76 from Wednesday.

Silver was quoted in London at $6.400 bid an ounce, down from $6.515 late Wednesday.

MORTGAGES

Rates compiled

CHICAGO (AP) — Average mortgage rates for single-family homes in 14 metropolitan areas as of Apr. 17, as compiled by the Chicago Title Insurance Co. The rates are for 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages for 80 percent of the value of the house. A point is a one-time fee equaling one percent of the mortgage.

Economy grows at slowest rate in two years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at an anemic annual rate of 1.3 percent in the first three months of the year, the government said today. The expansion, even more sluggish than first thought, was the slowest in more than two years.

The Commerce Department's new estimate of growth so far this year compared to an initial projection of 2.1 percent made a month ago, before the first quarter had ended.

Not since the last three months of 1982, when the economy was beginning its climb out of the 1981-82 recession, has the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, grown so slowly.

When the initial first quarter forecast was made, many economists said they believed the government was overstating the weakness in the economy and predicted the growth calculation would be revised upward, possibly to 4 percent.

Since that time, however, a string of other business barometers have confirmed that the economy performed very sluggishly in the first three months of the year.

The 1.3 percent growth pace compared to a 4.3 percent rate turned in during the final three months of 1984 and was the meekest since the 0.5 percent annual rate registered for the last quarter of 1982.

For all of last year, the GNP grew 6.8 percent, the best performance in more than three decades.

The Reagan administration is predicting growth this year will reach 3.9 percent. But given the weak start, many private economists feel the country will be lucky to achieve a growth rate of between 3 percent and 3.5 percent — about half last year's pace.

The consequence of the slower growth could well be rising unemployment and a so-called "growth recession," some economists are predicting. A growth recession occurs when the economy is expanding at such a sluggish pace that it is not creating enough new jobs to take care of a growing labor force.

For the Reagan administration, slower growth could also translate into bigger budget deficits than the record $213.3 billion already anticipated for the current fiscal year.

The Commerce Department report showed that inflation also picked up in the first three months of the year. A GNP price index which takes ito account the changes in the types of goods being purchased rose at an annual rate of 5.3 percent in the first quarter, almost double the 2.8 percent pace turned in during the final three months of 1984.

However, government analysts said this index overstated the inflation pace because it was skewed by a big shift to purchases of energy products in the first three months of the year.

Another GNP price index, which measures price changes in the same market basket of goods each month, rose at an annual rate of 4.4 percent in the first three months of 1985, only a slight deterioration from the 3.6 percent rate turned in during the final three months of the year.

Analysts blamed half the acceleration in prices in the "fixed-weighted" index to a pay raise federal employees received in January.

Most analysts agree that the GNP indexes are overstating the increase in inflation, pointing to the fact that two more commonly used inflation measures, the Consumer Price Index and the Producer Price Index, have shown only modest changes in the first three months of the year.

The GNP report showed that a flood of imports siphoned sales from domestic manufacturers and continued to be a big drag on the U.S. economy.

Imports increased at an annual rate of 26.1 percent in the first quarter while exports were falling at an annual rate of 8.2 percent as U.S. manufacturers were further battered by a high dollar, which makes their goods more expensive overseas.

Most forecasters expect the deterioration will continue with the country's merchandise trade deficit likely to reach a new record of $140 billion this year.

The report showed a slight pickup in consumer spending but a sharp decline in the growth of business investment during the first three months of the year.

Consumer spending was growing at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the first quarter, compared to 3.6 percent in the fourth quarter. Business investment, however, was growing at a rate of 3.5 percent, down from an 8.5 percent pace in the final three months last year.

The various changes show the GNP after adjusting for inflation. Before this adjustment, the GNP grew at a rate of 6.7 percent in the first quarter, down from a 7.1 percent pace in the fourth quarter GNP.

Unions end Continental strike

Strikers: 'No closer than we were'

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines machinists and flight attendants have decided to end lengthy walkouts against the carrier because after 18 months off the job "we're not any closer than when the strike began," officials say.

The announcement Wednesday by Union of Flight Attendants Local 1 and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers leaves only the Air Line Pilots Association on strike against the carrier.

The strike, which began Oct. 1, 1983, was "no longer effective because it has placed no pressure on the company to come to the bargaining table with us and reach an agreement," said UFA spokeswoman Linda Downing.

The machinists union, which went on strike in August 1983, said it can best achieve "fair and equitable working conditions" by returning to work. Pilots struck at the same time as the flight attendants.

Continental spokesman Mike Cinelli said the carrier had not been notified that the machinists were returning to work.

"We have notified the company that we're available immediately," Ms. Downing said. The union did not insist that the carrier reinstate the striking attendants immediately.

"We just decided to fight in a different way," said Claudia Lampe, another UFA spokeswoman. "We're not any closer than when the strike began."

The pilots and flight attendants walked out in protest against pay cuts, work rules and longer hours about a week after Continental filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

The airline hired several hundred replacement pilots, sparking a long-running controversy with the pilots' union.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge R.F. Wheless last year gave Continental permission to cancel its contracts with the pilots and flight attendants, saying they would be "burdensome to any successful reorganization."

All three unions are appealing Wheless' decision and Ms. Downing said, "It's obvious that the battle is going to be fought in the courts."

About half of the 2,100 mechanics have returned to work, AIM representative Wilbur Spurlock told The Los Angeles Times. About 50 percent to 60 percent of the 2,600 attendants have gone back, said union chairwoman Claudia Lampe.

Both unions suffered defections in their ranks as the strike wore on and Continental continued flying.

A spokesman for Continental's pilots told The Times that they would continue their walkout "until we can achieve an equitable agreement with the company."

Continental said it was pleased that the attendants' strike was ending and "would be happy to discuss an orderly return to work" of the union's striking members. However, it said "there will be no displacement of current employees under any circumstances as a result of the union's action."

Since filing its Chapter 11 petition, the airline slashed its route structure and cut its payroll. The airline has been rebuilding and earned $17.6 million from operations in the third quarter of 1984.

OSHA under fire after farm decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration and its director are facing increasing criticism on several fronts in what could become a problem for Secretary of Labor-designate William Brock.

Brock next Tuesday faces what otherwise was to have been a routine Senate confirmation hearing.

But OSHA director Robert A. Rowland, facing a court-imposed deadline, announced Friday he was rejecting sanitation standards for more than half a million migrant farm workers across the nation. The move angered farm workers' groups who have been trying to force the reluctant agency for 13 years to require farmers to provide toilet facilities and drinking water for field hands.

On Wednesday, two congressmen called for Rowland's resignation, adding to the mounting criticism by labor unions, which contend he is dragging his feet on issuing regulations for a number of dangerous workplace chemicals, including formaldehyde and benzene.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee has set aside just a day for Brock's confirmation hearing and no challenge to his nomination is expected. However, now he likely will undergo close questioning from Democrats on the panel about his plans for OSHA and its director.

Dennis Whitfield, who will be Brock's chief of staff at the Labor Department, said no decisions on the future of agency officials will be made until Brock takes office.

Reps. John Conyers, D-Mich., and Bill Richardson, D-N.M., appeared Wednesday at a rally on the steps of the Labor Department, where protesters, including some union members who work in the department, demanded that Rowland resign. A legal services group representing migrant workers, meanwhile, filed a petition seeking to overturn Rowland's decision on sanitation standards with the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

OSHA came in for additional criticism Wednesday when a congressional agency, the Office of Technology Assessment, concluded in a report that the agency performs infrequent inspections and imposes low penalties that provide limited incentives for companies to comply with health and safety regulations.

"In part because of the slowness of OSHA standard writing, many OSHA standards seriously lag behind recommendations and voluntary standards issued by professional societies and voluntary standards organizations," the report said.

Also, Rowland has come under fire because of his stock holdings of at least $300,000 in chemical, petroleum and other companies affected by his decisions at OSHA.

The chairman of the House Labor Committee has asked for an inquiry by the Comptroller General into whether Rowland violated the federal conflict of interest law when he participated in regulatory matters affecting companies in which he holds stock. A decision is pending on whether there will be such an investigation.

Economist: All areas have stake in industry

DALLAS — Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Austin and San Antonio dominate high-tech manufacturing in Texas, but every metropolitan area — and many nonmetropolitan areas — has a stake in the industry, says RepublicBank Corp. Regional Economist Dr. Edward L. McClelland.

One reason for this broad geographical base is that high technology is very much a part of the petroleum industry; plus, many new factories that employ high technology area being built outside of major urban areas where wage rates are lower, Dr. McClelland says in the new April issue of the corporation's monthly Economic Perspective.

Refining and petrochemicals often are excluded from the Bureau of Labor Statistics' narrowest definition of high technology. But they become a much larger factor under the Bureau's definition which includes manufacturing industries with a proportion of technology-oriented workers that is equal to or greater than the average for all manufacturing industries.

High technology has in fact been an important part of the development of the petroleum industry, dating back before World WAr II, when increased demand for petroleum products led to scientific breakthroughs in refining and petrochemicals and the development of seismographic equipment and electronics for use in searching for crude oil and natural gas.

"World War II elevated the production of petroleum products and military hardware, but it was the rise in peacetime demands that followed that firmly set the state on its current high-tech path," Dr. McClelland states. "The substitution of such synthetics as plastics for natural meterials sparked a plethora of refined and chemical products. Electronics and other high-tech goods and services advanced on new innovations in both defense and consumer markets. And the highlight of this development was the invention of the microelectronic chip."

In addition to having the largest concentration of refineries and petrochemical plants in the nation, Texas ranks second in the number of semiconductor plants and fourth in the number of computer factories.

In Texas no one manufacturing group is the dominant high-tech industry, as reflected in the mix of high-tech companies in the major urban areas, Dr. McClelland says. Dallas-Fort Worth is concentrated in electronics, communication equipment and aircraft parts. Houston, in addition to petroleum processing industries, has a number of firms in cimmunication equipment, electronics and scientific instruments. Electronics is the key high-tech industry in Austin, and biotechnology and health sciences form the core of San Antonio's high-tech future.

P&G hires investigators to quiet rumors

NEW YORK (AP) — Private investigators are trying to track down people who spread rumors linking the Procter & Gamble Co. to Satanism and those who are caught may be sued, company executives say.

The Cincinnati-based household products manufacturer also has established a toll-free hotline to combat a nationwide resurgence of the rumors, W. Wallace Abbott, a senior vice president, said at a news conference Wednesday.

"This is a serious matter to us," Abbott said. "And we as a company are serious about putting an end to these false and malicious stories."

He said the company has been receiving an increasing number of inquiries about the allegations, which generally are printed on handbills. He said people who believe the flyers apparently make photocopies and circulate them.

Seven people apologized after P&G sued them in 1982 and the company may file more suits to squelch the rumor again, Abbott said. He said the company has not found any organized attempt to discredit it and has found it impossible to track down the rumor's source.

Hotline operators explain the history of the P&G crescent-moon logo in an attempt to dissuade callers from believing it endorses devil worship, he said.

Treasury undecided on tax-simplification plan

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Less than one month before President Reagan is to make public his revised tax-simplification plan, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III has yet to decide what he will recommend to the president on most of the proposal's important provisions.

Sources said such crucial issues as whether to tax employee fringe benefits, the deductibility of charitable contributions, the levels of personal and corporate tax rates and the size of the personal exemption remain unresolved. Although officials said the principal options are being drafted, the number of decisions remaining to be made raises questions about whether the administration can meet its goal of announcing the plan just after the president returns from his European trip May 11.

Treasury officials said they are fairly firm in their intention to terminate the deduction for state and local taxes and wipe out the investment tax credit. But Treasury is considering easing the pain of eliminating the credit, which runs up to 10 percent of the cost of the investment, by phasing it out gradually.

One of the most important undecided issues involves how to let companies write off their investments. One option is to stretch out the period during which investments can be written off, while still lumping tax benefits in the early years. Whatever Baker proposes, it is expected to be considerably more generous than the system laid out in the original version of the Treasury plan.

Pressure to retain business tax benefits increased Wednesday as 58 executives of blue-chip companies and associations wrote Baker, asking him to retain "essential capital formation provisions of present law" while reducing corporate rates.

In a meeting Tuesday with Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee, Baker expressed sympathy with senators who made the same point.

"My impression is it is going to be a substantial improvement over the first Treasury proposal," said Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa.

Baker told the senators that Reagan is serious about his pledge to try to reduce the top individual rate even further than the 35 percent proposed in the first plan, and he again said that rates can only be reduced if deductions and credits are cut back to expand the tax base, according to sources at the meeting.

Responding to an objection about ending the deduction for state and local taxes, Baker said it benefits only the 34 percent of taxpayers who itemize deductions.

He also appeared sympathetic to senators who said they did not like shaving the deduction for charitable contributions and ending lower tax rates for small businesses. The Daily Tax Report, a Bureau of National Affairs trade publication, reported that Treasury also has decided to retain the mortgage interest deductions for second homes as well as primary residences.

The letter to Baker was generated in reponse to a similar one sent a few weeks ago by 10 other corporate executives who endorsed the general idea of tax revision, especially a reduction in the corporate tax rate.

White says Texas to have hard time getting GM plant

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Gov. Mark White says Texas will have a difficult time landing the much-sought General Motors Corp. Saturn plant and the only reason GM is even looking at the state is because Texan H. Ross Perot is GM's largest shareholder.

White, speaking Tuesday at a Beaumont Chamber of Commerce banquet, said even though he feels Texas may have no chance of getting the plant, communities in the state now are working together, instead of against each other, in the effort to attract industrial development.

He noted that Midland and Odessa have a mutual economic development effort.

Strawn well flows 129 barrels

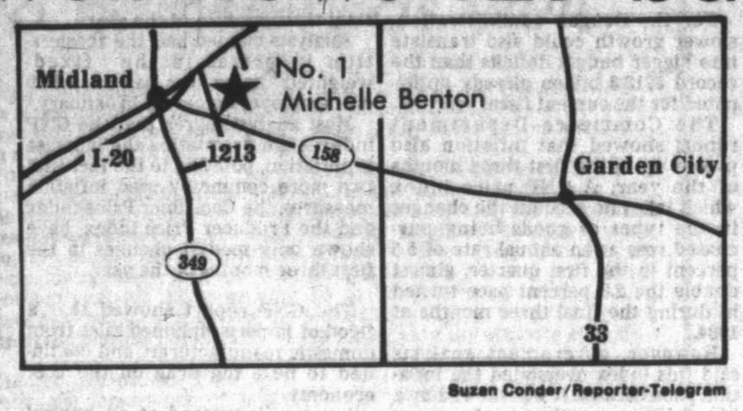

From Staff Reports

A fifth Strawn producer was added to the Betty Sue field of Midland County with completion of WILSON ENERGY, INC., Midland, No. 1 Michelle Benton.

The Benton was potentialed to flow 129 barrels of 46 gravity crude, 362 Mcfd and no water through Strawn perforations 10,509 to 10,616 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 440 psi on a 14/64 inch choke. The interval was treated with 1,500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

The well was drilled to 10,792 ft. and plugged back to 10,760 ft. Seven inch casing was set at 10,790 ft.

The location is 1,980 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 2, Block 38, T-2-S, T&P survey, four miles east of Midland. Ground elevation is 2,728 ft., with the top of the Spraberry at 7,534 ft., Wolfcamp at 9,082 ft., and the top of the Strawn at 10,470 ft.

Halley field gains four Yates producers

Since purchasing production in the old Halley field of Winkler County approximately four years ago, Wichita Falls operator E.H. WORTHAM has drilled six wells, recently completing four in the Yates formation on the west side.

The No. 19 S.M. Halley "B" was tested to pump five barrels of 34.2 gravity crude and 26 barrels of water from perforations 2,813 to 2,901 ft.

Drilled to 3,108 ft., the well is plugged back to 3,107 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,107 ft.

Location is 1,620 ft. from east and 1,630 ft. from south lines of Section 25, Block B-12, PSL survey, six miles southeast of Wink.

The No. 23 S.M. Halley "B" was potentialed to pump six barrels of 33.7 gravity crude and 41 barrels of water through perforations 3,256 to 3,402 ft.

Drilled to 3,500 ft., the well is plugged back to 3,497 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,497 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from east and north lines of Sectin 25, Block B-12, Pitt survey, Abstract 163, six miles southeast of Wink.

The No. 24 S.M. Halley "B" potentialed to pump 22 barrels of 33.8 gravity crude and 36 barrels of water through perforations 2,840 to 2,894 ft.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 3,223 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,223 ft.

Location is 330 ft. from south and 1,620 ft. from west lines of Section 25, Block B-12, PSL survey, six miles southeast of Wink.

The No. 25 S.M. Halley "B" tested to pump 18 barrels of 34 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water through perforations 2,843 to 2,906 ft.

Drilled to 3,100 ft. the well is plugged back to 3,099 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,099 ft.

Location is 990 ft. from south and 2,300 ft. from west lines of Section 25, Block B-12, PSL survey, six miles southeast of Wink.

Shafter Leke field gains four producers

MONSANTO OIL CO., Midland, has completed four San Andres producers in the Shafter Lake field of Andrews County.

The No.1509 University Block 19 Cons. tested to pump 30 barrels of 29 gravity crude, 10 Mcfd and 69 barrels of water from perforations 4,554 to 4,812 ft., which had been acidized with 11,000 gallons of 20 percent acid.

Drilled to 4,900 ft., the well is plugged back to 4,868 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,895 ft.

Location is 2,590 ft. from south and 2,690 ft. from east lines of Section 15, Block 14, ULS survey, 10 miles northwest of Andrews.

The No 1510 University Block 19 Cons. was tested for 21 barrels of 29 gravity crude, 9 Mcfd and 85 barrels of water from perforations 4,553 to 4,673 ft., which had been acidized with 10,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe.

Drilled to 4,900 ft., the well is plugged back to 4,876 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,900 ft.

Location is 2,590 ft. from south and 3,960 ft. from west lines of Section 15, Block 14, ULS survey, 10 miles northwest of Andrews.

The No. 2015 University Block 14 Cons. was potentialed to pump 27 barrels of 29 gravity crude, 11 Mcfd and 51 barrels of water from perforations 4,562 to 4,760 ft., which had been acidized with 11,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe.

Drilled to 4,900 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,893 ft. the well is plugged back to 4,883 ft.

Location is 3,960 ft. from south and 2,590 ft. from west lines of Section 20, Block 14, ULS survey, 10 miles northwest of Andrews.

The No. 2016 University Block 14 Cons. was tested to pump 25 barrels of 29 gravity crude, 12 Mcfd and 57 barrels of water from perforations 4,578 to 4,832 ft., which had been acidized with 11,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe.

Drilled to 4,900 ft., the well is plugged back to 4,875 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,897 ft.

Location is 3,960 ft. from south and 1,320 ft. from west lines of Section 20, Block 14, ULS survey, 10 miles northwest of Andrews.

In March, while the Stock Market declined, clients on our Standard & Poor's 500 Index Futures Program made $925.

That's the average profit made by our clients trading one contract of that commodity for the entire month. Whether prices rise or fall, our program has the opportunity to make money. Dillon-Gage has operated managed futures programs for five years. We charge discounted commissions, take no management fees nor percent of profits.

Contact us and find out what this and other futures contracts are doing now.

Program performance does not guarantee future results.

Serving clients since 1976

Harper makes first donation to energy library

The first donation of data to the Midland Energy Library has been made by Harper Oil Co. of Midland.

Garner L. Wilde, division manager, Permian Basin Division, presented a geologic card file consisting of over 43,000 cards in West Texas and New Mexico to Hugh Frenzel, president of the board of directors of MEL.

The new library, which will be located on the 11th floor of the Midland Savings Building, is a non-profit corporation established to house and maintain geologic and engineering data.

A drive is currently being conducted to obtain all types of data. It is estimated that the library should be operational within nine months.

Columbia Gas to have annual meeting

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Columbia Gas System Inc. holds its annual meeting Thursday in Wilmington, Del., and in light of recent developments, the dividend policy of this major pipeline company promises to be a lively topic of discussion.

On April 4, Columbia agreed to cut prices by as much as $1 billion, or 11.5 percent, to settle a number of private lawsuits charging that it had paid producers imprudently high prices for natural gas since 1981. As a result, more than 4 million homeowners and businesses in eight states and the District of Columbia will pay lower monthly bills over a two-year period.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is expected to give its formal approval after a period for public comment ends on April 26.

This settlement, which Wall Street analysts said would have "a substantially adverse effect on Columbia's earnings over the near-to-intermediate term," also raises questions about the safety of its dividend.

In the past, the dividend has enjoyed a long string of annual increases. The current payout is 79.5 cents a share quarterly, or $3.18 a year. How long this rate can be maintained by Columbia is now a matter of conjecture, according to followers of the company.

This uncertainty, in turn, has caused selling pressure in the stock. And as the shares have dropped in price, the yield — now about 11 percent — has increased. Most other major pipeline stocks, in contrast, yield around 6 percent or 7 percent.

"For the time being, Columbia's stock will trade on a yield basis, but it must be watched carefully," said Foster H. Corwith, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "In another month or so, investors must focus on whether the current dividend will be maintained at the June meeting of directors. But people should realize that Columbia is no longer a widow's and orphan's stock."

David N. Fleischer of Prudential-Bache Securities said, "In light of the present situation, I can visualize the possibility of a reduced dividend by the company perhaps six months out."

In Wednesday's trading on the New York Stock Exchange, shares of Columbia fell 1⅛, to 28¼. Earlier this year, the stock sold at 34 and its price reached as high as 47 in early 1980.

In an unusual step taken at a special meeting of directors, Columbia announced on April 2 that its dividend to be paid in the spring quarter would remain at 79.5 cents.

James T. Connors, the company's secretary, said Wednesday in Wilmington that the normal procedure was for this quarterly dividend to be declared at a board meeting that follows the annual meeting. "However, a number of shareholders and analysts had asked about the security of the dividend," he added. "So we just decided to go ahead and declare the regular dividend so that there would be no anxiety on this matter."

The root cause of Columbia's problems, according to Fleischer, stems from the cost of natural gas. "Columbia is the highest-cost pipeline in the country, both in terms of what it pays for gas and what it charges customers," he said. "As a result of the gas surplus in the last several years, the company has lost volume as some wholesale customers have chosen cheaper sources of energy."

Management itself cited the "new highly competitive marketplace" in the company's annual report for 1984. John H. Croom, who became chief executive officer last August, said in the report, "To be quite blunt, we find ourselves with an oversupply of high-priced natural gas to which we are committed and a shrunken market."

According to one estimate, Columbia's gas sales dropped to 738 billion cubic feet in 1984, from 1.1 trillion cubic feet three years earlier, mainly because it lost industrial customers that switched to fuel oil.

"The declaration of the regular dividend in April buys the company some time to negotiate with its major suppliers, such as Exxon, Chevron, Amoco and Mobil," Corwith said.

Trapped miner rescued through tunnel

PALISADE, Colo. (AP) — A miner trapped in a coal mine cave-in for 37 hours walked out unhurt today, after rescuers inching through sliding rubble rebuilt a tunnel to reach him.

Curtis Sanders, 32, the father of six children, had been hunched over and nearly waist-deep in water in the cab of a large mining machine since 4 p.m. Tuesday, when the roof collapsed at Powderhorn Coal Co.'s Roadside mine in DeBeque Canyon.

He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, where nurses in the emergency room said he was in good condition. It was not immediately determined whether Sanders would be admitted.

"We held hands with him about 3:30 this morning and he finally came out about 5 a.m," said Garry DeGarmo, who was the second man to reach Sanders.

Darrell Malone, the first rescuer to dig through the rubble to Sanders, said the trapped miner was wet and tired, but "real glad to see us."

"He said to get him ... out of there," Malone said.

DeGarmo said Sanders had only a small cut on the left side of his head.

The two men gave water and a candy bar to Sanders. It was the first time since he was trapped that Sanders had had anything to eat or drink.

The rescuers worked around the clock in crews of 12, pumping air to Sanders as they tunneled through rock and gravel near the cab of the continuous mining machine, which chews up the wall at one end of a tunnel and moves coal and rock back for transport.

Workers used another continous mining machine to bite through 20 feet of debris, but were frustrated when they switched to pick-and-shovel work for the last six feet of loose rock, said Dale Fenwick, assistant general manager of the mine.

"You know what happens when you shovel gravel? You take out a shovel full and more falls in," he said Wednesday.

Those last six feet took 18 hours of the rescue effort, DeGarmo said.

Malone said Sanders told him he "never slept a wink because there was rock falling all the time" and that the water was the "only thing he really worried about. He thought he might drown."

The rescue crew used a steel tube and a concrete culvert to drive through some of the final six feet. The tubes sheltered the rescuers from falling rock as they dug toward Sanders.The final few feet were reached by "cribbing" wooden timbers in a makeshift tunnel.

DeGarmo said Sanders is "a real good man, very cautious — and that saved his life."

Sanders was trapped in the machine's cab when the roof of the 20-foot-wide, 7-foot-high tunnel collapsed, said Fenwick. Air was pumped in through a hose attached to the mining machine which normally carries water and rescuers had communicated with Sanders by shouting since early Wednesday, he said.

Sanders complained about being wet, but Fenwick had said Wednesday that the water was probably not very deep because rescuers hadn't noticed major seepage on their side of the rockfall, which was two miles inside a mountain.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective May 6, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. The Public Utility Commission of Texas has received the application as Docket 6200.

While proposals as to specific rates vary, it is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 10.5 percent increase in the Company's unadjusted test year intrastate revenues or a 9.7% increase in test year revenues as adjusted for test year customer growth and annualization of test year rate increases. The rate application seeks an annual increase of $323.9 million in revenúes. All customers and classes of customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company within Texas will be affected by the proposed changes.

Most rates proposed for increase would increase by about 18.5 percent, including local exchange rates. However, there are some exceptions. For example, those customers residing in cities that will be reclassified into larger rate groups will experience local exchange rate increases greater than 18.5 percent. Also, the rate increases proposed for private line services in El Paso, due to a proposal to restructure such rates, are greater than 18.5 percent.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas and with each affected incorporated municipality served by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's rate application. This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for local exchange service, intraLATA long distance, intraLATA interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for intraLATA long distance and for intraLATA, interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide certain services in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's tariffs.

Notice to All Customers Concerning Access Charges and Certain New Service Charges

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, as a part of this filing, is also proposing to reduce certain access rates charged such customers as AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI and other carriers. The resulting reduction in revenues is proposed to be offset by revenues from two new service charges, late payment charges applicable to business customers only and for certain operator services such as busy line verification, plus stimulation of access service charge revenues. Since this portion of the filing, if granted, would have essentially a zero net revenue effect on Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company is proposing that this portion of the filing be expeditiously handled by the Commission and not await Final Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso Público

En conformidad con las disposiciones de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company anuncia mediante el presente aviso su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel de tarifas telefónicas en Texas, con vigencia a partir del 6 de mayo de 1985, salvo disposición en contrario de la Comisión. La Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas a registrado esta solicitud bajo el Docket 6200.

Si bien existe variación entre las propuestas en cuanto a las tarifas precisas, se anticipa que el arancel tarifario solicitado aumentará en un 10.5% los ingresos intraestatales no ajustados de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company durante el año de prueba, o sea, un aumento del 9.7 por ciento en los ingresos del año de prueba, después de realizar el ajuste por la expanción de los usuarios y por la anualización del aumento de tarifas para el año de prueba. El objeto de esta solicitud de tarifas es lograr un aumento anual en los ingresos de $323.9 milliones. Los cambios propuestos afectarán a todos los usuarios y grupos de usuarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company en el estado de Texas.

La mayoría de las tarifas que resultarían afectadas por el propuesto aumento aumentarían aproximadamente en un 18.5 por ciento, incluyendo las tarifas de centrales locales. Sin embargo, existen algunas excepciones. Por ejemplo, los usuarios que residen en ciudades que se reclasificarán para formar parte de grupos tarifarios mayores experimentarán aumentos mas elevados del 18.5 por ciento. Por otra parte, los aumentos de las tarifas propuestas para servicios de línea privada en El Paso aumentarían en más de 18.5 por ciento, como resultado de una propuesta para reestructurar tales tarifas.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel de tarifas se halla archivada en las oficinas de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos en Austin, Texas, así como en cada municipalidad incorporada afectada que tenga servicio de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa se halla sujeta a cambio toda vez que Southwestern Bell Telephone Company solicite nuevas tarifas. El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de centrales locales, de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada interLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso.

Aviso a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono

El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada intraLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso. Los cambios en dichas tarifas también afectarían a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono, puesto que dichas compañías proporcionan ciertos servicios de acuerdo con las tarifas especificadas en los aranceles tarifarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Aviso a todos los clientes con respecto a los cargos de acceso y a determinados cargos nuevos de servicio

Al registrar esta tarifa, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company también propone reducir ciertas tarifas de acceso que se les cobran a clientes como AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI y otras compañías de larga distancia. La consecuente reducción de ingresos se piensa compensar por medio de dos cargos nuevos de servicio (cargos por pago atrasado que se aplicarían solamente a usuarios comerciales, y cargos por ciertos servicios de operadora, tales como verificación de línea ocupada) además de la estimulación de los ingresos por cargos por servicios de acceso. En vista de que, en caso de otorgarse esta parte del arancel tarifario registrado, su efecto real en los ingresos de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company sería igual a cero, ésta propone que la Comisión tramite dicha parte de la tarifa en forma expeditiva sin esperar la Orden Definitiva.

Toda persona que desee intervenir o participar en el presente proceso debe notificar a la Comisión lo antes posible. Las solicitudes de intervención, participación o información deben dirigirse a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Para obtener mayor información debe llamar a Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223, o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para personas con impedimentos de audición.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Tax obligations don't end come April 30

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Tax Freedom Day, that day on which, theoretically, the average toiling taxpayer finally will have worked long enough and earned enough money to pay his 1985 taxes, will fall on April 30 this year.

But it is hardly a cause for celebration.

It is, in fact, one day later than last year, when taxpayers had to work only to April 29 to earn enough cash to support their indigent, spendthrift uncle in Washington, and his cousins in state and local offices.

That means that in theory the ordinary taxpayer will have worked 17 weeks without having given a cent directly to his or her family — nothing at all for food, clothing, shelter. No milk for the baby. Not a dime for the movies.

After that date, suggests the Tax Foundation, which picked up Tax Freedom Day from Dallas Hostetler, a somewhat irritated Florida businessman, the ordinary taxpayer can go about the business of earning his or her own living.

If only it were true.

Government's "needs" are the basis on which taxes — federal, state and local — are assessed. But governments — well, the federal government, anyway — spend beyond needs, which means citizens pay in ways other than taxes.

They may pay, for instance, through the hidden tax of inflation, which most people agree is at least partly a consequence of the government's big budget deficits.

Taxing by inflation can be worse than taxing by law, particularly to savers, even if it is now running at only 4 percent or so.

The 13.3 percent inflation of 1979, for example, was double the return from interest earned by many savers. At that rate, it whittled a $10,000 savings account to about $9,335. And then Uncle Sam taxed the "profits."

Uncle Sam's overspending taxes people in other ways too, such as in higher interest rates to those who borrow money for houses. Economists generally agree that mortgage rates would be at least a couple of percentage points lower if those annual budget deficits, and a big national debt, weren't overhanging the market.

What does a couple of percentage points mean to a homebuyer? A lot, such as $79.12 a month on a $50,000 loan with a 30-year maturity. Assuming the homeowner keeps the mortgage for 10 years, not far from average, the cost approaches $10,000.

The hidden tax applies to renters as well, because landlords also must pay those high interest rates, and few of them have been known to absorb added costs. It is only good business to pass them on to tenants.

What is the cost of jobs lost?

The reasoning here is that deficit-induced interest rates contribute to the high value of the dollar, which makes it easy for foreigners to export to the United States but difficult for American manufacturers to sell abroad.

Several hundred thousand domestic manufacturing jobs have, in effect, been exported to foreign countries because — in view of the dollar's high value — it is less expensive to manufacture there and ship to the United States.

Economists argue that imported goods at relatively low prices have helped spur the American economy in a non-inflationary way. And that imports also have generated as many jobs as have been lost.

Maybe they are correct, but what then is to be made of Uncle Sam's costly programs to protect domestic manufacturing jobs, which some economists estimate at as much as $250,000 per job, paid by taxpayers?

There are offsets to all this, of course.

A lot of the excess money spent by Uncle Sam goes right back to the taxpayers in the form of jobless benfits, retraining, food stamps, medical help and the like.

And it is true that many people benefit from high housing prices and double-digit borrowing costs.

But there is, it seems, a net loss of funds — if only because of bureaucratic processing costs — when Uncle Sam handles taxpayer money rather than allowing taxpayers to spend the money themselves.

The moral is: No, you cannot relax and just work for yourself on April 30, having satisfied your tax obligations. The take doesn't end then. It continues, but in more mysterious ways.

Banks, S&Ls free to set own interest payments

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My bank refused to pay any more than 7.5 percent interest on my money market deposit account. What can I do about this?

A. Nothing, at the bank. Each bank and S&L is free to set its own interest rate on money market deposit accounts, as well as on super NOW checking accounts.

Doyle

However, you can move your account to a different bank or S&L. Shop around and pick a depository institution paying the best rate you can find.

Q. I invested in three mutual funds 20 years ago and they have never come back to the prices I paid. I have been around for 88 years and have never seen anything so crooked. What is your opinion?

A. "Crooked" is more than a strong word. It's an accusation of a crime. Mutual funds are closely regulated. It's most unlikely their managers could get away with crimes for two decades.

If the values of your investments are below your original cost, my opinion is that the funds' managers have been doing rotten jobs.

However, I suspect you're judging your investments only by the per share value of the funds. You shouldn't go by that, alone. You should add to the per share value all the capital gains distributions on each share. That's the correct way to measure the loss or gain of your invested capital.

Using that measurement, I can't find even one mutual fund with a loss for the last 20 years.

Cereals researched

By LINDA ANDERSON

Getting off to work and school in the morning is no easy task, especially when the kids resist any attempts of waking them up, short of setting off a cannon in their bedrooms. And any help in making this early-morning chaos easier to live through is greatly appreciated.

Ready-to-eat cereals provide just such help. Although many of them are not as nutritious as they should be, even the most junk-food-type cereal provides more nutrition than no breakfast at all — which is what many kids would otherwise eat because they either: a) don't get up in time to eat a proper breakfast, or b) won't eat anything but cereal for breakfast.

And at least most cereals taste better when floating in milk, which is good nutrition.

Many new ready-to-eat breakfast cereals have been introduced lately, and several old ones have been blossoming with new flavors and shapes. The two small children cereal experts at our house recently checked out two of these breakfast foods. One cereal was a new product, the other was an old friend with a new flavor.

Rice Krispies toasted rice cereal has been a favorite of children for years. Snap, crackle and pop have sent generations of children off to school. Now the Kellogg's cereal has been fortified with marshmallow bits. We tested these Marshamllow Krispies for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

One of the recent additions to the supermarket cereal aisle is Crispix corn and rice cereal, also a Kellogg's product. Advertised as having corn on one side and rice on the other, the cereal looks almost like rice or corn chex. According to its commercials, which show people debating which side is "crispier," this cereal is supposed to stay crisp in milk (they all say that).

An 11.4-ounce box of Marshamllow Krispies cost $1.73. Crispix in a 14-ounce box sells for $1.85. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

A serving of Marshmallow Krispies, about 1¼ cups, according to the label, contains 140 calories (220 with milk). The Crispix contains 110 calories in a ¾-cup serving (180 with milk). Both cereals contain 25 percent of the vitamin A, vitamin C, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, vitamin B6 and folic acid, and 10 percent of the iron and vitamin D listed in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

Marshmallow Krispies are advertised as having "gobs of marshmallows," which, in fact, they do. The small children found marshmallows in every bite, and thoroughly enjoyed eating them. This cereal was so popular with the taste-testers that they were able to finish the whole box in about four days, a new family record. (The 4-year-old tester was eating them for breakfast, lunch and before-bedtime snack, at one point.)

The Crispix, while politely eaten by the children, seemed to have more adult appeal than the Rice Krispies. The young testers rarely finished an entire serving; in fact, the last serving became stale in the box and was thrown away. Crispix was a good cereal — it just wasn't interesting enough for the children to really enjoy. (One adult tester conducted an independent study and found the corn side to be crispier.)

While we may purchase Crispix again for the older members of the family, the Rice Krispies with marshmallows is likely to become a staple in our pantry.

Serving children nourishing, low-sugar, low-fat, healthy foods is very important — but it's difficult for them to gain nourishment from something they won't eat.

Horowitz covers 'consumer beat'

By MARY LOVE
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — It wasn't a good day for David Horowitz.

Shirley Woods, Horowitz's secretary, flurried about their suite of offices, fielding telephone calls, assembling piles of documents, preparing correspondence, retrieving material for her boss and scheduling visitors.

The frantic pace seemed not to ruffle Horowitz, who patiently sat down with a visitor for an interview.

Whether he's talking about his family, or discussing his background, his manner is totally devoid of the abrasiveness normally associated with television's best-known consumer advocate.

Could it be that the host of "Fight Back with David Horowitz," the nationally syndicated program that battles — not in a shy way — the Great American Rip-Off and Scam, is a pussycat at heart?

His eyes narrow at the mere suggestion.

"I want to tell you something," he says, his voice beginning to assume the edge he uses when disemboweling corporate giants. "You NEVER want to get involved with me in a problem because ... I just don't take any stuff from people."

AN EXAMPLE streams forth. "I was in a supermarket because I do the hard marketing. You know, I can't go out and buy the meat every day and the produce, but I can do the hard marketing.

"When I do the marketing, I have my coupons with me. I keep coupons of all kinds in here," he says, opening a small, black leather case and holding them out, "my double coupons, and my ads, you know, that I rip out of the newspapers, my coffee coupons, all that kind of stuff, and I went to a market that had all sorts of good things on sale.

"The market was completely disorganized. I was looking for mozzarella cheese and they didn't have it in the cheese case or the gourmet cheese case. It was in a separate part of the market where they sell Italian foods. Now, how stupid. I'm chasing all over the market and my wife is with me and is becoming more anxious than I am. She hates to go to the market. I love to go to the market.

"They had none of the specials on sale. I overpaid on a cooking dish — $2, it was $2 more at this market than it was at my local neighborhood market. I found that out because I had to go to my local neighborhood market to buy the things I needed that were on special at this (other) market and that they didn't have. Now, what would you do in a case like this?"

GET MAD AND forget it, thought the visitor, while speculating aloud that perhaps a letter of complaint to the market manager would be in order.

"I picked up the phone and I called the marketing manager for this whole chain of 80 supermarkets and I just laid him open on the telephone," says Horowitz. "And he thanked me because, he said, 'You know I can't get to every supermarket.'"

And maybe because it was David Horowitz calling?

"No, that's not why," he insists. "If people knew who to call, they'd listen to them. And I don't shout, I don't scream or shout. I said, 'I want to tell you what went on in the market.'"

Unlike the average consumer, Horowitz takes notes on such occasions — even jotting down his emotional state at not being able to locate the mozzarella cheese (frustration).

"I don't take these things lightly," he says. "Now it's not that I'm an obsessive-compulsive, which I am, but I feel that I have a raison d'etre and that's what I am and I've always felt from the time I was a kid growing up in New York City to now, I've always felt that way, I've always felt that I want to feel that I'm contributing to something."

The incident underscores his basic philosophy as a consumer advocate.

"The bottom line is try to teach people how not to get taken and how to be able to survive and cope," he says.

Those skills come naturally to him.

"I've been doing this all my life," he says, referring to his role in the consumer arena. "I'm just one of those guys who had a mother and father who were the kind of people who would never take no for an answer, one, and, two, would always go out and investigate what was going on and if there was something that was wrong they would try to take care of it."

HE HAS HAD an impressive career in all phases of journalism, beginning his professional career at a small weekly in the heartland of America.

He began as a printer, a skill he had picked up in one of New York City's famed "blackboard jungle" vocational high schools, where he was an honor student, president of the student council and director of the body that set policy for 86 school newspapers.

After winning a scholarship to Bradley University, in Peoria, Ill. ("I couldn't have attended college without a full scholarship and I wanted to get out of New York"), he started working as a linotype operator on a weekly in Henry, Ill.

He graduated to other larger papers, then went on for his master's at the prestigious Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University. After that he turned to television news, learning from the bottom up at a small station in Demoines, Ill., where he "did everything."

He did postgraduate work at Columbia University in New York in public law and government and was chosen to be a CBS News fellow in 1962. He served as public affairs director for a radio station in New York, then returned to NBC in 1966, covering national politics, switched to educational reporting and in between covered Watts and East Los Angeles (he speaks fluent Spanish).

David Horowitz

In 1974 he was asked to become consumer reporter and develop a concept for the new area of consumer reporting. He started Action 4, asked viewers to write in with consumer complaints "which became very successful because everyone's got a problem."

Consumer activist label notwithstanding, Horowitz sees himself as a reporter "covering the beat."

Granted, he does things a "little bit different," but believes that his heavy background in traditional news reporting "should not stop me from being able to communicate in public in a way that becomes 'infotainment' — information and entertainment."

Curing solution regulated

By MARIAN FARR

Marian Farr

Beginning this week, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will regulate the amount of curing solution in ham and other cured pork products by requiring minimum protein levels. The new rule requires measuring the protein in the finished product instead of estimating the amount of curing solution used in processing.

Current regulations permit no more than 10 percent curing solution in a finished pork product labeled "Water Added." Under the new regulations, consumers will be able to choose from four categories of canned ham:

— "Ham" is defined as at least 20.5 percent protein. This is the same amount of protein found in fresh ham.

— "Ham with Natural Juices" is at least 18.5 percent protein.

— "Ham — Added Water" is at least 17 percent protein. Hams with a 10 percent curing solution added contain this amount of protein.

— "Ham and Water Product" is any canned ham with less than 17 percent protein. The actual percentage of added ingredients must be stated on the label.

Many consumers prefer a more moist pork product and this new rule responds to that market demand. The new rule also assures consumers of minimum protein content in a cured pork product. Since the curing solution dilutes the protein content of the fresh, uncured pork, the rule provides control over the amount of solution used.

Curing solution consists of a mixture of water, salt, nitrate and phosphate, and is added to pork during processing to help preserve the meat and to impart the traditional flavor and color.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Label terms confusing

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. So much of the food in the supermarket has either "fortified" or "enriched" written on the package. What is the difference between them and why is this being done?

A. Long ago the words "fortified" and "enriched" had different meanings. Enrichment used to mean putting back nutrients that become lost in the processing of the food. Fortification meant adding nutrients that were not in the food in the first place. Now both words are used interchangeably and simply mean adding nutrients to food.

Fortification of food began in the U.S. in 1924 when salt became iodized in order to prevent goiter, which was a health problem at that time. In 1933 the milk industry began adding vitamin D to milk for better calcium absorption to prevent rickets. In 1943 all white flour was enriched with iron, niacin, thiamine and riboflavin. In this case, bakers were returning to the product most of the nutrients lost in the milling process.

In 1952 margarine was fortified with vitamin A, the same amount that is naturally present in butter. Since then many other foods such as cereals, candy, cookies and juices were fortified as Americans equated "fortified" and "enriched" with goodness and health.

Although the Food and Drug Administration believes that widespread fortification of the food supply is unnecessary, there is no law which prohibits it. But unwarranted fortification of so many foods has a tendency to mislead consumers into believing that such fortification is necessary or appropriate.

In a nutrition bulletin from Cornell University's Division of Nutritional Sciences called "You Should Know," we're reminded that both deficiencies and excesses of nutrients that are stored in the body, such as vitamins A and D, is undesirable because toxicity is possible.

Q. Are chick peas and garbanzo beans one and the same thing? Where did the names come from?

Q. Chick peas and garbanzos are the same legume. Garbanzo is the Spanish word, derived from the Greek. In Rome chick peas were known as cicer arietinum. Cicer comes from Cicero, and arietinum from a Latin word which means ramlike. If you look at this seed closely, it resembles a ram's head with curling horns.

As to why this bean was named after Cicero, Harold McGee in the book "On Food and Cooking" makes this observation:

"A remarkable and as yet unexplained sign of their status in the ancient world is the fact that each of the four major legumes known to Rome lent its name to a prominent Roman family: Fabius comes from the faba bean, Lentulus from the lentil, Pisco from the pea, and Cicero — most distinguished of them all — from the chick pea. No other food group has been so honored."

Q. I have ulcers and I am on a diet. I would like to know how many calories are in a spoonful of ketchup and how can I tell which ketchup has the least amount of sugar? I also love homemade chili, so I would like a recipe that is not spicy and doesn't have much sugar. S.M.F., Duluth, Ga.

A. Ketchup manufacturers won't tell us exactly how much sugar, in the form of corn syrup, is in their ketchup because the recipes are trade secrets, but you can be assured there's a bit in it. As far as calories are concerned, the major ketchups are pretty much the same: Heinz has 18 calories per tablespoon, Hunt's has 16 and Del Monte has 15.

My first reaction to someone with ulcers asking for a chili recipe was surprise, since handling fresh chili peppers can actually produce a burning sensation on bare skin. But then I remember reading that chili peppers contain an ingredient called capsaicin which acts against pain by affecting a brain chemical which is thought to be a key to the transmission of pain.

In any event, there are hundreds of recipes for chili in varying degrees of hotness.

My advice would be to take a good recipe and cut the spices down to suit yourself.

In "The Dictionary of American Food and Drink," John Mariani says that in 1974 Arizona's Senator Barry Goldwater challenged Texas Senator John Tower on the floor of the Senate to a chili cookoff. Five experts judged the results and Senator Goldwater won. Here is his recipe for chili with beans:

Brown 1 pound coarsely ground beef and drain off excess grease. Add 1 pound pinto beans (if dried, soak overnight in water), 1 (6-ounce) can tomato puree and 2 cups chopped onion. Into ⅓ cup water stir 3 teaspoons chili powder, 1 tablespoon cumin, and ½ teaspoon salt. Bring to a boil, add meat, reduce heat and simmer till meat is tender.

Readers are invited to send in their favorite not-too-spicy sugarless chili recipes to share.

BETTER BUSINESS

BBBs form national network

By LINDA TRUITT

One benefit of having a local Better Business Bureau is its connection with more than 150 other BBBs across the nation. The agencies work closely together to develop and share information on companies operating locally and out-of-town.

A good example of how the system works is evidenced with a mailer received by people locally, and nationwide, from American Heritage Redemption Center in Los Angeles, containing an offer that sounded extraordinary. The offer stated that if respondents sent back the AHRC-enclosed "$1500 vouchers" along with personal checks or money orders for $89, postmarked no later than March 15, they would receive RCA 45-inch giant screen TVs worth $1589, according to the mailer. If recipients sent back the vouchers and personal checks or money orders for $264, two Honda ATC-110 three-wheeled motorcycles would be shipped. All this was possible, stated the promotional letter, because of an "advertising test."

The Los Angeles BBB was swamped with telephone calls from people wanting to know if the offer was legitimate. Immediate investigation by the L.A. BBB turned up no known location for the company.

The mailing address given by the firm turned out to be rented postal drops.

The listed telephone number was an answering service which soon stopped taking calls.

Both American Honda and RCA informed the L.A. BBB that they had never heard of AHRC. Since no evidence of credibility could be found for AHRC, the U.S. Postal Service Investigative Division, along with other law enforcement agencies, were contacted.

The Postal authorities kept the postal drops under surveillance in hopes of apprehending the operators. When that failed, federal search warrants were executed and the mail was taken into custody. Although the search for the operators continues, 3,000 pieces of mail containing between $400,000 and $500,000 worth of orders were retrieved. The USPI will request permission from the courts to return all the mail to its senders.

The BBB routinely investigates offers made by companies to provide consumers enough factual information to make a sound decision on whether or not to spend their money. If consumers receive an offer that seems just "too good to be true," they are advised to assume it is and contact their BBB.

Savings bonds' interest rate difficult to calculate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once upon a time it was easy to calculate the interest on U.S. Savings Bonds, which paid at a flat rate over a set period of years. Today, however, bonds pay variable interest to attract consumers.

Persons considering investing in savings bonds can learn the current interest rate by calling a new, toll-free, hotline to get the facts and figures about bonds.

The recorded message givers the current interest rate and how long the rate will be in effect. The number is 800-US-BONDS. In Washington, D.C., the number is USA-8888.

While the variable interest rate bonds have become more attractive to buyers, figuring out the value of bonds already purchased becomes more complex.

The Government Printing Office publishes a pair of booklets every six months which can be used to calculate the value of bonds sold in years past.

Entitled "Tables of Redemption Values for United States Savings Bonds," the edition for Series E bonds costs $3.75, while the Series EE booklet sells for $1.25.

The booklets can be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402.

The booklets are issued for the period January to June and for July to December, and a $10 subscription will get both editions.

Product protected by packaging

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — There's no such thing these days as a simple package.

Several years of research often go into developing many of the materials used to package hundreds of familiar products on supermarket and drug store shelves.

The time and care given to perfecting a single packge is well spent, though, contends RJR Archer Inc., a packaging producer. It says, "Rigorous testing of product packaging helps assure consumers that the items they buy are in top condition."

Silver pennies more valuable in past

Copley News Service

In the 12th century, a silver English penny would pay the rent of a cottage for a year.

In 1257, King Henry III caused gold pennies to be struck to represent the value of 20 silver pennies — which probably would have paid a castle's rent.

DEAR ABBY

Grandparents fail 'duty'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem? I feel slighted because neither my parents nor my husband's have ever offered to watch our children so we could get away for an evening or a weekend. In the four years that "Gary" and I have been parents, my folks have taken our kids for a grand total of two hours! And Gary's parents have had them overnight five times.

Both sets of parents live an hour away, and all four grandparents are healthy, able to drive, semiretired and fairly well-to-do.

I realize our parents don't owe us anything, but when our friends tell us how often their parents ask to keep their grandkids (sometimes four and five days at a time!), I resent the fact that Gary and I get help from our parents once in a blue moon — and then only when we ask for it. — NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: You're right; your parents owe you nothing. But since they respond when asked for their help, count your blessings, and don't push the issue.

DEAR ABBY: My parents will be married 40 years next month. It has been a rough marriage for our mother because all through their marriage, Dad was a tyrant who ruled with an iron fist. The only reason Mom stayed with him was because of us kids. The last five years Dad's health has been failing, and Mom has practically been his nurse.

Now comes their anniversary, and we kids want to give them a party, but Mom says, "What's to celebrate? It would be hypocritical at least, and a farce at best."

Even an anniversary card that says "Many more happy years" would be a mockery when there have been very few happy moments in their marriage, let alone years.

I suppose there are other grown children with the same dilemma. What's the answer? — DAUGHTER WITH A DILEMMA

DEAR DAUGHTER: Have a small family dinner to honor your parents' union, which gave you life — even if the marriage wasn't harmonious. It will be a landmark for survival, if nothing else, and should not be ignored. Who knows, perhaps your father will mellow and grow more loving in the twilight of his life. I hope so.

DEAR ABBY: "Offended" says she goes to a high-class nightclub, talks to a stranger for five minutes, then he asks her to go to bed. And when she says no, she's told not to play "hard to get."

I believe I have a suggestion for such women, as there seems to be a lot of them with this problem.

After the nervy proposition, ask the guy this question: "What is really in it for me? I don't even know you, so I can't have any feelings for you, so why should I risk getting some kind of disease or becoming pregnant, or both, just to provide you with some temporary physical relief?"

Abby, let him think up an answer to that one. It's a lot more effective than just saying "No." Right? — A MALE READER

DEAR READER: Yes!

Bunk beds can be dangerous, safety experts warn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most children love bunk beds, and for parents they are often a needed space saver, but the Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that consumers also need to be aware of dangers associated with some of the beds.

The commission says it has received reports of mishaps and injuries associated with three problems: weak mattress supports, space between the guardrails and the mattress, and entrapment of children between the bed and the wall.

The commission says a hazard may exist on those beds with mattresses which rest only on narrow ledges attached to the side rails.

Owners of beds with this type of mattress support should fasten additional cross-ties underneath the mattress supports of both beds, the agency suggested, or permanently screw the mattress supports into the bed frames.

The second danger occurs on beds which have a space between the lower edge of the guard rail and the top surface of the mattress.

A child's weight pressing down on the mattress can allow the tot to slip through, officials warned, or the child's head may become caught between the guardrail and the mattress causing strangulation.

The solution calls for attaching additional boards to the bed, closing the gap to less than 3½-inches between the lower edge of the guard rail and the top of the bed frame.

The commission said it has also received reports of 10 deaths of children who became trapped between bunk beds and the wall

These accidents can occur on beds which lack a rail on the wall side, allowing youngsters to roll over and have their head or chest become trapped.

To avoid this problem, youngsters under age 2 should be placed in a crib, rather than a bed, the commission recommended.

Compound effective against roaches

Copley News Service

Researchers have found that the most effective overall control of cockroaches is boric acid at 97 percent to 99 percent pure power. Roaches have not shown resistance to this compound. They have resisted some household pesticides.

Boric acid powder can be directed into nooks and crannies with plastic squeeze bottles. The acid doesn't have a dramatic knockdown effect, but it will reduce the roach population within a week or 10 days.

A single application can eradicate or substantially reduce the number of roaches for six months to two years.

Safety of food dyes still debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The debate over the safety of a unique food dye used to color maraschino cherries red is no closer to being resolved than when it began 25 years ago.

Food processors say there is no substitute for Red No. 3, but public health activists are calling for an immediate ban because of a link between the dye, when ingested in large quantities, and thyroid cancer in rats and mice.

On April 2, for the 27th time, the Federal Drug Administration extended the deadline for a decision on the safety of food dyes. The agency said it needed more time to study the issue.

At issue is the safety of 10 dyes, most used for drugs and cosmetics. But the debate has focused on Red No. 3.

"By failing to immediately ban these dyes, the Reagan administration is making a mockery out of its alleged cancer reduction goals and is completely demoralizing dozens of FDA employees who know these dyes are too dangerous for continued use by the public," says Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Public Citizen Health Research Group.

WOLFE CITES a March 30, 1984, memo from Mark Novitch, then the acting FDA commissioner, to Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, saying that test results "clearly demonstrate that each of these color additives induces cancer in properly conducted animal feeding studies."

Public Citizen says FDA studies have concluded that more than 95 percent of children eat some foods containing petroleum-based food dyes, with some consuming as much as three pounds of dyes by age 12.

Wolfe's organization has sued FDA in federal court, seeking an immediate ban on the dyes.

The food industry, however, says any link between Red No. 3 and cancer is indirect. At any rate, the industry says, it would take at least 10,000 times the maximum ordinary human consumption to trigger a problem.

The National Food Processors Association submitted new animal testing data to FDA in November arguing that the dye does not directly cause cancer.

THE STUDY suggests that Red No. 3, in huge quantities, may cause the thyroid to produce more of a hormone called thyrotropin. Thyrotropin, in turn, may stimulate the growth of tumors in the thyroid.

The intermediate step puts Red No. 3 in the same position as beverage alcohol, the processors argue. Alcohol, in huge quantities, can cause cirrhosis of the liver, which in turn has been linked with an increased risk of liver cancer.

The processors, in a legal brief filed with the FDA, say such a "secondary carcinogen" need not be banned under the strict standards of the Delaney amendment to federal food laws, which requires any substance that causes cancer to be banned.

Instead, the processors argue, the risk of use of a "secondary carcinogen" can be weighed against the value. And with Red No. 3, the association says, the tiny quantity of dye a person might eat is nowhere near the amount that might cause a problem, making the risk virtually nonexistent.

"If there were a public health threat, believe me, the industry just would not use it," argued Dr. Harry Mussman of the National Food Processors Association.

THE INDUSTRY used about 464,000 pounds of Red No. 3 in 1983, coloring some 2,000 products ranging from cereal and pet foods to ice cream and vitamins.

But its most famous role is coloring the cherry in fruit cocktail. In its natural state, the maraschino cherry is rather pale, yellowish-ivory in color. Red No. 3 turns it bright red without allowing the color to "bleed" into the other fruits in the mix.

"There is no substitute for Red No. 3," says Mussman. "It's the only red color which will fix to the tissue properly in the cherry. If it were any other red, all the rest of the product would turn pink."

The debate over Red No. 3 and the nine other food and drug dyes began in July 1960, when Congress passed the Color Additives Amendment to the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

The FDA was directed to determine by 1963 if all color additives then on the market were safe for human use. Dyes being studied could continue to be sold if they were on a so-called "provisional list." Dyes found to be safe went on a permanent list.

In the 25 years since the act passed, 17 of the 24 food dyes once used in the United States have been banned or no longer are produced, says Public Citizen. Of the seven remaining, three are involved in the current dispute — Red No. 3, Yellow No. 5 and Yellow No. 6.

Those three dyes accounted for 53 percent of all food dyes used in the United States last year. Yellow No. 5 is used in pet food, beverages and baked goods; Yellow No. 6 is used in beverages, candy and desserts.

Gorbachev meets with workers

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev was shown on television Wednesday visiting Moscow's factory district, stopping at a truck plant, a school, a hospital and the apartment of a young working couple.

Gorbachev's man-of-the-people tour to the Proletarsky neighborhood in southeastern Moscow was seen on the evening television news and reported by Tass, the official news agency.

He gave a pep talk, on the need for harder work and increased productivity, that Tass reported in Marxist jargon.

"When tackling the problems of intensification, one should see to it that enterprises function more rhythmically and that technological, planning and labor discipline is observed more strictly," Tass quoted Gorbachev as telling a group of auto workers.

The 54-year-old Gorbachev has made improvements in the economy one of his major goals since he succeeded the late Konstantin U. Chernenko as the Soviet Union's top leader March 11.

Tass said Gorbachev visited the Likhachov truck plant and showed detailed interest in workers' living and working conditions. "The participants in the conversations exchanged views on questions of production management and perfecting the economic mechanism," Tass said.

Addressing workers in the factory, Gorbachev told them that the Communist Party, "true to the Leninist tradition, constantly takes counsel with the people." Tass said he proposed to provide cash bonuses for industrial workers with long service at the same enterprise, saying, "This would result in a stabilization of work collectives, encourage personnel to stay and facilitate a noticeable growth of their qualification."

Gorbachev also visited the Nagatino residential area and the school which serves the area, and spoke with teachers and pupils about new courses to prepare them for the future, such as computer training.

He heard suggestions from shoppers on how to improve a self-service food store and also visited a city hospital.

Doctors reportedly complained to him about their low wages and shortages of needed equipment and medicines. Later, Gorbachev accepted an invitation from Vyacheslav and Tamara Nikishin to visit their apartment for tea.

As he sipped tea at the apartment, the televised report showed him appearing relaxed and at ease.

Shia, Sunni Moslems again fighting in Beirut; Lebanese Cabinet resigns

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Karami

MANAMA, Bahrain (DPA) — News of fighting breaking out between Sunni and Shia Moslem militiamen in West Beirut — accompanying the resignation of the Lebanese Cabinet — has prompted Arab fears of sectarian warfare exceeding past violence in the city's recent bloody history.

Saudi Arabian King Fahd issued an urgent appeal to "the legitimate authority" in Lebanon and to the several Lebanese factions to protect Palestinian refugee camps and prevent attacks on Lebanese civilians by "armed elements."

Arab newspapers in the Persian Gulf area joined today in describing the West Beirut clashes as probably the most menacing since the eruption of the Lebanese civil war 10 years ago.

Some reports predicted that Syria would be asked to send its army back into Beirut and resume its "peacekeeping role," which was brought to an end by the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in 1982.

Sunni Prime Minister Rashid Karami, who resigned Wednesday, had addressed his resignation directly to Syria and the Lebanese people, rather than to President Amin Gemayel.

Some reports said Karami, who has been asked by Gemayel to remain on as a caretaker, would go to Damascus later today to formally request Syria's intervention on behalf of Lebanon's Sunni Moslems.

Karami has described his war-ravaged country as an economic shambles, admitting that the government had been unable to collect taxes and revenues because of armed gangs roaming the country and collecting the cash for themselves.

Karami's one-year stint as prime minister was recently criticized by his predecessor, Shafik Wazzan, who noted that the Lebanese lira had reached its low est level with Karami in office.

Both Wazzan and Karami have repeatedly appealed for financial aid from the oil-rich Arab countries of the gulf to salvage Lebanon economically. But these countries have been hesitant because they fear that aid would be dissipated in the present lawlessness.

The latest clashes pitted pro-Iranian Shias, supported by Druse militiamen, against Sunni Moslems, thus threatening to trigger similar fighting in other areas of Lebanon particularly in the south.

Government leaders themselves were at odds before Karami announced Wednesday the collapse of the Cabinet, according to Education Minister Selim Al-Hoss who resigned last week. He said Karami and Gemayel had clashed over who should control the state security apparatus.

There has been increasing talk recently about redeployment of the Syrian army in Beirut.

But Arab diplomatic sources say they doubt that "turning the clock back" in this way would help, especially after the Shias, the biggest minority of the Lebanese population, have established strongholds in various parts of the country.

Soviet ships heading home after exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a Pacific ocean exercise headed up by the biggest ship in the Soviet navy, the Soviet vessels appear to be heading back to port, U.S. Navy sources say.

"This exercise was the most extensive and realistic we've ever seen the Soviets perform in the Pacific," one high-ranking officer said Wednesday. "They were concentrating on training to oppose a U.S. aircraft carrier battle force."

The Soviet task group, led by the carrier Novorossiysk, passed through the La Perouse Strait north of Japan on Tuesday, apparently on its way back to the Russian port of Vladivostok, said the sources, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified.

The United States and Japan have kept track of the Soviet force ever since it was detected leaving Vladivostok late last month. The deployment attracted immediate attention because of the presence of the Novorossiysk, one of only three Kiev-class carriers operated by the Soviets.

The carrier is much smaller than a U.S. carrier, since it carries only vertical-takeoff jets as opposed to conventional jet fighters. Nonetheless, it is the largest ship operated by the Soviet navy.

U.S., Mexican officials discuss their ongoing campaigns against drug traffic

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Top U.S. and Mexican officials met to reinforce their long-standing cooperation in the battle against narcotics traffic — a relationship strained by the kidnap-slaying of an American narcotics agent.

U.S. Assistant Attorney General Steven Trott, Drug Enforcement Administration Director John Lawn, Ambassador John Gavin and other U.S. Embassy officials met Wednesday with Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez and top aides and Manuel Ibarra, director of the Federal Judicial Police, according to the Attorney General's Office.

The officials discussed programs that are under way and agreed to continue exchanging information in their campaigns against illegal drug traffic, a statement by the office said. They also examined methods of detecting, preventing and "correcting problems of irregularity in any actions against narcotics traffic."

After the kidnapping and killing of Enrique Camarena Salazar, a Drug Enforcement Administration agent based in Guadalajara, Lawn said corruption in Mexico had stalled the investigation in Mexico City.

At least 40 people arrested in the subsequent investigation, including reputed narcotics empire kingpins Rafael Caro Quintero and Ernesto Fonseca and numerous current and former policemen, have been ordered to stand trial on various charges.

Three of the Jalisco state policemen arrested are charged with kidnapping and homicide.

Betty Jo and Samuel Hardy sit with 18 of their 22 children at their eight-room home in Lineville, Ala. Although the children often quibble, Hardy says the house is usually filled with laughter.

One big, happy family

As a girl, Betty Jo Hardy complained about baby sitting and told her mother and sisters she would never have children when she grew up.

She was wrong. She is now the mother of 22 children, with 20 of them still living in the family's wood-and-tarpaper home in Lineville, Ala.

"I've had a baby about every 11 months since we've been married," said Mrs. Hardy, 41, who has been married to Samuel Hardy, 46, for 25 years.

The Hardy family roll call: Rita, 24; Roger, 22; Samma, 21; Andrew, 20; Veronica, 19; Emma, 18; Loretta, 17; Betty Jean, 16; Nancy, 15; Anita, 14; Greg, 13; Felicia, 12; Jeff, 11; Regina, 9; Tad, 8; Tony, 7; Jill, 6; Tina Jo, 5; Kim, 4; Jan, 3; Windy, 2; and Kris, 10 months.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy share a laugh outside their wood-and-tarpaper home.

All but Rita and Roger still live in the Hardy's eight-room, seven-bed home, filled with the sound of children constantly laughing and bickering as they bustle in and out of doors.

The children bathe in shifts. A mountain of laundry is heaped by the washer and rows and rows of clothing hang on the line to dry.

The clothes, said Hardy, "get worn again and again and again, right on down the line."

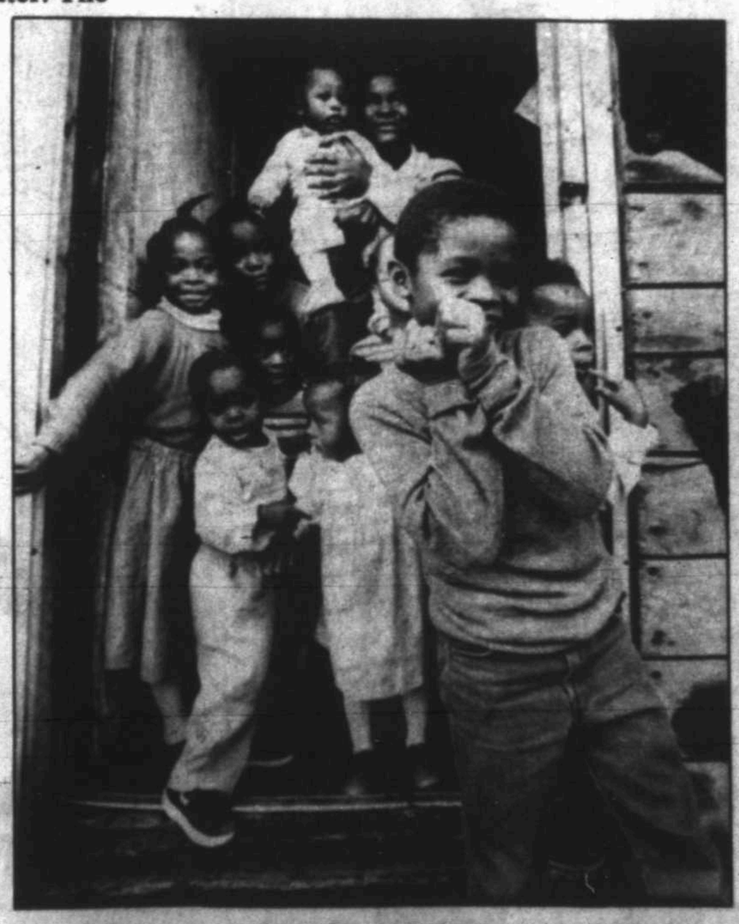

The Hardys receive a monthly allotment of food stamps, but Hardy's job at a sawmill provides most of the family's income. While their material possessions are modest, the Hardys voice few complaints to visitors.

"It's a sight," said Hardy. "But everybody gets along real well. We really are one big, happy family."

Mrs. Hardy does laundry every day. The Hardys have a washing machine, but the clothes are hung to dry on a line outside or near a heater. The clothes, said Mrs. Hardy, "get worn again and again and again, right down the line."

Mrs. Hardy and several of her 22 children wait for Hardy to come home from work, left. Four of the Hardy boys, above, bath together to conserve time and water. From left are Jeff, Tad, Greg and Tony.

WORLD in brief

Couple rewarded for helping arrest attempted assassin

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — A woman received a $25,000 reward and her policeman husband was promoted for their part in arresting a presidential guard who tried to assassinate head of state Samuel Doe on April 1.

The defense minister, Maj. Gen. Gray D. Allison, on Wednesday awarded the money to Sarah Drow, and Police Director Wilfred Clarke promoted patrolman Edward Drow to captain.

Mrs. Drow told the Associated Press that she recognized the presidential guard, Lt. Col. Moses M.D. Flanzamaton, on April 3 when he bought a loaf of bread in her grocery store near Monrovia.

Her husband said he arrested Flanzamaton in the early hours of April 4.

Flanzamaton is said to have raked Doe's jeep with machine gun fire. Doe was not hurt. A firing squad executed Flanzamaton April 8 on Doe's orders.

American finally returns home

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Bernard Lamport, an American-born scientist who lived in the Soviet Union for 51 years, departed today for New York with his family after waging a five-year battle for exit visas.

Leon Hendel of the Hebrew Immigration Aid Society confirmed the departure of the Lamports. The family arrived Friday and Lamport, 55, told the Associated Press in a later interview that he had faced anti-Semitism and job discrimination in the Soviet Union because he is Jewish.

He was accompanied by his wife Elita, also 55, his three daughters and his 83-year-old mother-in-law.

"I was fighting very hard daily to get permission to leave," he said.

Lamport said his father moved to the Soviet Union during the depression of the 1930s in hopes of finding a better life. Lamport earned a Ph.D. in medical science, worked for three years as a physician in central Asia and later as a writer and researcher in Moscow.

He said he was confident that he could find jobs for himself and his children in the United States.

"When relatives began visiting with us...and when my mother came back from the United States, I knew I would return home. We have a very good family relationship, and I knew it would be good there," Lamport said.

Arrests made in poster hanging

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Four Dutch men have been arrested for allegedly hanging posters offering a $4,400 reward for anyone who "liquidates" the pope during his visit here next month, police said.

The four, who were not identified in accordance with Dutch police practice, were held in custody Wednesday on suspicion of "inciting an attack on a foreign head of state," said police spokesman Klaas Wilting.

Dozens of the posters had been affixed overnight to walls throughout the inner city area of the Dutch capital. They carried the names of three radical Dutch splinter groups — the Militante Autonomen Front, the Northern Terrorist Front, and the Autonomen 30 group.

Death of priest protested

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 150 Roman Catholic nuns and priests marched to a suburban military camp to protest the recent killing of an Italian priest and what they called military persecution of the church.

At the Vatican, Pope John Paul II deplored the murder and offered condolences to the priest's family.

Acting armed forces chief Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos issued a statement denying the killing of the Rev. Tullion Favali was part of a military plot against Catholic priests and nuns critical of alleged military abuses and violation of human rights in rural areas.

Favali, 38, a member of the Pontifical Institute for Foreign Missions, was killed last Thursday in the village of La Esperanza in Cotabato province, 590 miles southeast of Manila.

Military authorities identified his killers as members of the 40-man Integrated Civilian Home Defense Force, a paramilitary unit armed and organized by the government to help fight Communist insurgents.

Belgium expells ex-diplomat

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The government has expelled a former Libyan diplomat linked to the fatal shooting of a policewoman outside the Libyan Embassy in London last year, the Justice Ministry said.

Police arrested Omar Mohamed Ehmeida on Tuesday after they found he had a forged passport, and put him aboard a Libya-bound plane a little more than 24 hours later, the ministry said Wednesday.

Ehmeida was the spokesman for his embassy in London when a policewoman was killed in front of the building last April during a demonstration by Libyan dissidents against Col. Mommar Khadafy, Libya's leader.

British authorities said the shots, which were aimed at the anti-Khadafy protesters and struck the officer by accident, came from inside the embassy. Britain expelled all of the embassy's personnel in retaliation.

Ex-officer convicted of spying

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A court has convicted a retired navy commander of spying for East Germany and sentenced him to six years in prison.

The Bavarian State Court on Wednesday found Wilhelm Reichenburg, 64, guilty of accepting the equivalent of $266 a month over 14 years to give state secrets to an East German agent. The type of information was not revealed in testimony.

The former staff officer admitted he gave sensitive information to a man he identified as Manfred Schneider, but said he did not know Schneider was an East German spy.

Reichenburg said Schneider claimed he was an American who worked for a research institute in London when the two met in 1970, and that he began giving him information the following year.

RAF jet crashes into cottage

NEDGING TYE, England (AP) — A Royal Air Force jet trainer crashed into the roof of a thatched cottage, but a woman in the house escaped unhurt, authorities said.

Monica Chatters, 39, was downstairs when the Hawk trainer plowed through the roof and landed in a field 400 yards away Wednesday.

"I was in the bathroom when there was a terrific explosion and I was thrown to the ground. I ran out of the house and realized a plane had crashed," she told reporters.
