Perez brings new sound to Odessa venue Saturday night

■ Tour marks new beginning for Chris Perez, with first release since death of wife, Selena.

By Richard Acosta
Staff Writer

Starting over after the loss of a loved one is not easy. One former Tejano star, however, has picked up the pieces and is making a run for the charts with a new band and a new sound.

For the first time in four years, Chris Perez has a new release appropriately entitled, "Resurrection." The new CD is the first release for Perez and his keyboardist, Joe Ojeda, since they recorded, "Dreaming of You" with EMI Latin in 1995 as part of Selena y Los Dinos.

The CD was the last recorded by the group before Perez's wife, Selena Quintanilla-Perez, died after being shot by the president of her fan club.

The group will be performing live at Graham Central Station in Odessa Saturday night as part of a "mini-tour" before they head for the East Coast.

Perez said that initially he was just having fun making music with his friends, Ojeda and John Garza, who is now the lead singer for the band. He said that it wasn't long before he thought the trio may have something worth recording.

Perez

"We were writing all our songs and wanted to have our focus on that, rather than dealing with trying to look for a bass player and a drummer," Perez said. "Once we got the songs down, I got ahold of Adriel (Ramirez). He liked what we were doing and liked our sound so he decided to join the band."

Perez said that soon after, Jorge Palacios came on as the band's drummer to make the Chris Perez band complete.

The band put together a demo and shopped it around to record companies, according to Perez; however, the group's rock 'n' roll sound was not what the Latin market was looking for at the time.

"It was early 1997 and our demo was out there, but no one knew what to do with it," Perez said. "At that time, Ricky Martin, Luis Miguel, Enrique Iglesias were all at the top of the Latin charts. Don't get me wrong, I like those guys, but their CDs were full of ballads. We could have done that, but it was not the sound we wanted for the band."

Ojeda said that while looking for a label to sign with, the group was asked to perform at the Tejano Music Awards in San Antonio last year in front of a crowd of more than 40,000.

"We were shopping for a deal and we were asked to play, so we went for it," Ojeda said. "There were a lot of important people at the awards and I think that performance was what really got the ball rolling for us."

The group eventually signed with Hollywood Records in Burbank, Calif. Perez said that one of the things that attracted him to Hollywood was they allowed the band to play the type of music it wanted to play.

Primarily known for his work as a Tejano artist, Perez said the group's rock sound may surprise those who are expecting corridos or cumbias.

"I think a small group of people thought I would play Tejano,"

Oil prices pull local air travel out of stall

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

While total passengers, coming and going, at Midland International Airport are down by more than 58,000, or 7.5 percent, from a year ago, there is a glimmer of brightness in Midland-based air travel.

Enplanements and deplanements are in a slight monthly increase but still falling behind last year's boardings and deplanements.

"The bad news is that we are down for the (fiscal) year" by 7.5 percent from 779,321 to 720,854 passengers, said Carroll Thomas, business-development manager at Midland International Airport. "Our total boardings — enplanements and deplanements — are down."

The city's fiscal year runs from Oct. 1 through Sept. 30, which means that June was the ninth month of the city's 1998-1999 fiscal year.

"But the good news is that we have started coming up on a month-to-month basis," Thomas said. "The good news is that June of this year compared to June of last year, (total passengers) went down only 7.7 percent whereas in the month of May, the previous month, we were down 10 percent."

In June 1999, airport passengers totaled 87,306; in June 1998, passengers reached 94,633 — a decline of 7.7 percent.

However, the 10 percent decrease in the previous month reflected 83,182 passengers in May 1999 and 92,374 in May 1998.

"That's coming up," Thomas said of the June numbers. "Our low point was May" when the passenger decline exceeded 9,000. June's decline was about 7,300.

Thomas figured that the relative upswing is "related to the price of oil," which now is at $20 per barrel and which makes air-travel more affordable and which generally stimulates business.

"That bodes good for the economy (which) has just barely turned around," Thomas said.

The airport, which, like the city's municipal waterworks, is self-sustaining and profitable, Thomas said. "We are in the business of making money. That's why we don't have taxes (to support the airport)."

Enplanements this fiscal year to date totaled 362,576, and deplanements added up to 358,278. Of those, Southwest Airlines carried the vast majority: 255,827 enplanements and 253,637 deplanements. American Eagle had 58,803 enplanements and 57,794 deplanements; Continental Airlines, 43,351 and 42,339, and American West Express, 4,595 and 4,508.

Grand jury report on MISD meetings may never see light of day, DA Schorre says

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Three weeks after the grand jury chose not to indict MISD school board members, nothing has been seen of the report.

"They're basically not going to take further action on it today, but they're going to issue a report on it in the next couple of weeks," said District Attorney Al Schorre in the June 23 edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

Yet, the report is not out and the possibility exists that the public may never see it.

Schorre, who was asked by the jury to draft the report, is currently awaiting its approval by the grand jurors.

"I've heard from one grand jury member but I have not heard from the others," said Schorre, who has distributed the report to the jury and is waiting to hear if any corrections are needed.

Once the report has been approved, it will be presented to State District Judge Willie Dubose.

Even when the grand jury approves the report, District Attorney Al Schorre said, it is State District Judge Willie Dubose's decision whether to release it.

Jury sentences man to six years in prison in death of deaf cyclist

By Art Sinclair
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — A 20-year-old Big Spring man was sentenced to six years in prison and one year in Howard County jail Thursday after the jury convicted him in the death of a deaf bicyclist.

After deliberating for 1 1/2 hours, the jury in 118th District Court found Antonio M. Rodriguez guilty on felony counts of intoxication manslaughter and failure to stop and render aid in the death of Jessie Lee Walters, 19, a student at Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf.

In the punishment phase of the trial, District Attorney Hardy Wilkerson called two witnesses, Jim Rutland, with the Howard County Probation Department, and Charles Harrington, a state parole officer. Wilkerson demonstrated to the jury that the defendant could receive the same alcohol rehabilitation program in prison that he would receive if he were granted probation.

Defense attorney Rick Hamby, who spent 19 years as district attorney, presented a number of witnesses, including Rodriguez's mother and his wife, Frances. Both women tearfully pleaded with the jury to grant Rodriguez probation.

Eight West Texas women file fen-phen lawsuits

By Rick López
Staff Writer

Eight West Texas women have filed two separate lawsuits against doctors who prescribed to them or their family the diet drug combination known as "fen-phen."

Fen-phen is how the combination of fenfluramine and phentermine is commonly known. The drugs, prescribed by doctors, were used for weight loss.

In September 1997, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration pulled fenfluramine from the market, citing evidence it may have scarred users' heart valves irreversibly and sometimes fatally.

An estimated 6.6 million people have used the diet drug combination. Phentermine has not been linked to illnesses.

The lawsuits also name another diet drug, dexfenfluramine, commonly known as Redux, also taken off the market in September 1997.

In one lawsuit filed Wednesday in the 238th District Court in Midland, Seminole resident Jackie Earl claims that the drug combination killed one of her family members — Jessica Juanell Earl. Her lawsuit seeks damages in excess of $50,000 for wrongful death and mental anguish.

Defendants in the case include Dr. Paul Slaughter of Andrews and the manufacturers of Redux, Wyest-Ayerst laboratories. The lawsuit claims that Slaughter failed to educate himself on the drug's long-term effects. Jessica Earl was on the drug in 1997, according to the lawsuit.

The other case was filed Friday in the 385th District Court and involves seven Midland women: Candy Armstrong, Mable Blake, Wenonah Frasier, Terri Hobbs, Becky Rosser, Mary J. Thomas and Kathy M. Torres.

They hired Houston attorney Robert A. Schwarz to represent them.

The plaintiffs' claims are that fen-phen caused valve damage and neurotoxic injuries.

Named as defendants are Midland doctors G.R. Albertson, D. William Davidson and Dipakumar Patel and 12 out-of-town labs and pharmacies.

According to the lawsuit, the plaintiff's attorney said the case has been filed in district court here because this is where the patients took the medicine and where the doctors were practicing at the time.

Thousands of lawsuits have been filed across the nation against the makers of fen-phen. Schwartz alone is representing more than 3,300 Texans who are involved in fen-phen lawsuits, he said Thursday.

At least two Texas trials have ended in settlements.

In Houston last month, the relatives of Mary Marisa Smith agreed to settle their case for an undisclosed amount three weeks into trial. The family claimed the once-popular diet drug killed the 35-year-old Ms. Smith. The lawsuit originally involved her doctors, who were dismissed from the lawsuit.

OBITUARIES

Jean Moore

Jean W. Moore was born in Vienna, Austria, on December 17, 1914. At the tender age of 16, she traveled alone to America and upon landing in Galveston, Texas, refused to get off the boat due to the high humidity and heat. However, she relented and learned English, as well as accomplished the equivalent of 12 years of schooling in her first year in Houston. A short time after that she became a U.S. citizen and gained a degree from a business school in Houston. She met Charles "Red" Moore, who was attending Rice University, shortly thereafter. She and Red had three sons and spent their married life traveling with Humble Oil & Refinery Co. throughout New Mexico and Texas, finally settling in Midland in 1956.

Jean established The Moore Realtors, one of the successful long-term real estate companies in Midland. She was joined in her real estate business by her sons, Charles and John, and her husband upon his retirement from Humble Oil and Refinery in 1966.

Jean died at her home on Tuesday, July 13, 1999, after a lengthy illness.

She is survived by one sister, Hedwig (Hedi) Franek; a sister-in-law, Dagma Franek; two nephews, Wolfgang and Verner Franek, all of Vienna, Austria; three sons; seven grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren, whose families consist of the following:

He loved his grandchildren unconditionally and tried his best to live an exemplary lifestyle, because he wanted to be a better person in the eyes of his grandchildren. The Cure May Be Worse For Some Folks

The old saying used to be, "if the sickness don't get you, the cure may kill you!" But sometimes there's just no other way.

Reminisce magazine offered this look at old-time remedies shared by readers. "For chest colds, my mother would spread lard on a piece of flannel, and pin it inside my shirt." "Curing hiccups was a snap. We'd quickly drink a 4 ounce glass of dill pickle juice which worked every time !" "For a sty, my mother would place a warm, wet tea bag over the eye." Finally, one reader told, "a woman whose grandmother had been a herb doctor healed a burn by covering it with a slice of fresh tomato. I've tried it and it works" If it don't kill you, it may cure you!

Now, what is the remedy for our world today where cheating is common and lies considered "normal?" Simply put, it's time for the cure to be serious enough to make an impression. Romans 6:23 warns, "for the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord." As per Jesus, the cure is repentance when He says, "unless you repent, you will all likewise perish!" Luke 13:3.

MIDLANDERS' Braggin' Rights

Jessica Castillo, 15 months, recently won the sweepstakes trophy at the West Texas Baby Pageant at Odessa College.

THERE SHE IS...

ODESSA — Tiny 15-month-old Jessica Castillo literally stole the show, and the sweepstakes trophy (one of four) at the July 6 West Texas Baby Pageant conducted at Odessa College. The tiny tot, the daughter of Jesse and Elsa Castillo of Midland, was asked by judges to perform simple tasks such as waving, clapping and blowing kisses. Then when some music came on, in an impromptu moment, Jessica started dancing, delighting the audience, her mother said. The first-place winner in category of 13-18 months, Jessica also won Miss Curly Top, an additional trophy for beauty, and advanced to the queen's court.

"We knew she had a good chance of winning in her age group, but we were really surprised when she was the overall winner against all the older ones," the proud father said.

Preparing for the pageant was "a lot of hard work," Mrs. Castillo said. But both parents said they recognized that their daughter has a natural talent and they won't hesitate to enter her in other events, especially since the beauty queen winner enjoyed being in the limelight. Even more exciting for the toddler, however, was spending her gift certificates at a toy store.

ROUND UP

Brandy Crawford and Jessica Welch participated in the County Government Illustrated Talk Category in June at the Texas State 4-H Round-up on the campus of Texas A&M University in College Station. They progressed through county and district competitions during the spring so that they could represent District 6 (which covers the West Texas region) at the state level. Their presentation explained cattle branding laws and procedures in Texas. Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association Foundation sponsored the girls' trip.

Miss Crawford is a 1999 graduate of Midland High School and the daughter of Diana and Lex Crawford. Miss Welch is an honor student and is scheduled to graduate from MHS in 2000. She is the daughter of Vicky Welch and Scott Welch.

DOCTORS IN THE MAKING, CHAPTER IV

Hosts will be sisters Pearlie Fitzgerald Morris of Midland and Betty Fitzgerald McGilbra of Kermit and their families, including nieces, nephews and cousins.

ONE GREAT COOKIE

Midlander Pat Zimmerman's recipe for Lemon Drop Cookies has been published in the new "Best of Country Cookies" cookbook, published by Taste of Home Books. According to information from Taste of Home, "... each of the 277 recipes was selected from over 34,000 family favorites entered in Taste of Home magazine's 'Cookie of All Cookies' Contest."

Recipes that were chosen to be included in the new cookbook were chosen through a national competition that asked readers to help make the selections. First the recipes were screened by the magazine's food staff; then visitors to the publishing company's Visitor Center tasted cookies made from the recipes chosen and voted for their favorites.

ANNUAL GRANT

Midland Habitat for Humanity was the recipient of a $1,000 grant from Exxon Volunteer Involvement Fund. Sam Harrill, retired Exxon engineer and longtime Habitat volunteer, has written an annual grant for Habitat for several years.

Disconnected circuit switch causes panic at MISD

From Staff Reports

A loud explosion and smoke caused some panic at the Midland Independent School District Administration Building in downtown Midland Thursday morning.

Spokesman for MISD, Barney Welch, said a circuit switch had disconnected on the telephone pole outside the building, causing the loud sound.

Witnesses said they heard a loud explosion followed by a loss of power in half of the building. Technicians for TU Electric fixed the disconnection, and power was restored to the building.

PEREZ: Singer starts over with tour

(From 1A)

Perez said. "Most know that I would play rock 'n' roll. The way I see it is, I have already played Tejano with the best. If I am going to get back on stage it has to be with something different and it is going to be rock 'n' roll."

Perez said that he likes all the songs on the CD but that "Best I Can" and "Another Day" were given to him from a "higher source."

"I had no trouble writing those songs. I just sat down and they wrote themselves," Perez said. "I also like the song 'Solo Tu.' I think that one best represents how we are live in concert."

The Chris Perez Band will be joining the "Watcha Tour," which currently will feature Molotov, Cypress Hill, Voodoo Glowskulls, Illa Kuryaki, Maldita Vecindad, Puya, Control Machete, Plastilina Mosh and Royal Crown Revue on Aug. 1, in Miami.

Perez said the group has been able to attract crowds to its shows. However, he said that he is not sure if people are coming out of curiosity or because they like the band's music.

"We just want people to like our CD," Perez said. "We have put our hearts and souls in the songs and we have a good show. I know Tejano fans like all kinds of music and I think people will come out to see us. What makes me a little nervous is whether people will come back and see us again."

Concert ticket winners

The following is a list of winners in the Midland Reporter-Telegram's "Win Chris Perez Concert Tickets Contest:"

Midlanders Rosie Garcia, Jenette Tevarez, Mary Peña, Maria Keil, Melissa Velasquez, Michael Franco, Ross Reyes, Benjamin Rodriguez and Odessans Frances Sanchez and Rosa Levario.

Perez will be playing live at Graham Central Station's outdoor plaza Saturday night. The only way to attend the concert was to win a ticket from the Reporter-Telegram or KMRK Tejano 96.1.

REPORT: Riggans lawsuit set for July 27

(From 1A)

"It will be the judge's decision whether or not to release that report," said Schorre, adding that it's hard to tell what the judge will do.

He said that a grand jury issuing a report is not a common occurrence and that he has seen judges go both ways.

"He could say 'No I'm not going to publicize this report, not going to send it out for distribution.'

"I just can't say. There isn't a long track history of a usual practice in that grand juries don't routinely issue reports."

School Board President Becky Oekerman said, however, that she at least is anxious to see the report.

"It's been very stressful and we are anxious for the community to know that we are doing what we need to do in our board meetings. We want the community to have confidence in our members because we do know what we're doing."

She added, "If the report is not released that will be fine, too. Either way, that will show that we are conducting our meetings in an appropriate manner."

The grand jury investigation arose from two allegations of open meetings violations in connection with a regular May 11 school board meeting in which a student's discipline appeal was denied.

Casey Gold Riggan, now a Midland High School graduate, was challenging a disciplinary decision made by his principal, Neil Richmond.

Witnesses claimed the vote rejecting Riggan's appeal occurred in a closed meeting.

According to the Texas Open Meetings Act, "A final action, decision or vote on a matter deliberated in a closed meeting under this chapter may only be made in an open meeting."

The second allegation involved then-board president, Martha Manulik, who allegedly contacted board members before the meeting in an effort to quash Riggan's appeal before it was heard.

"I do talk to board members about issues affecting us but I haven't done anything to set a vote before a meeting," Ms. Manulik said Thursday. "From my conversations with lawyers, there is no illegality involved in talking to other board members."

Under the Texas Open Meetings Act, it is not illegal for one board member to talk to another unless a quorum (four or more) is established, "which I did not do," Ms. Manulik said.

According to Schorre, both matters were brought before the grand jury but he would not say whether both would be addressed in the report.

He added that the report could be ready as early as next week but would not commit to that or any concrete expectations of a date.

The release of the report, however, won't end the board's legal battles.

Riggan has filed a lawsuit against Midland Independent School District and Richmond, claiming his rights to due process and freedom of speech were violated by punishment administered by Richmond and enforced by MISD.

For possessing two photos of Richmond's car parked on a public street outside a female teacher's house, Riggan was suspended for three days, put in an alternative education program for five days and ordered to write two letters of apology for "disrespect to an adult."

That lawsuit is set to go before U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson July 27.

AIR: Oil price climb helps local airline ticket sales

(From 1A)

Year-to-year total fuel sales in gallons to general-aviation, airline-cargo and government-military were up slightly from 4.75 million gallons to 4.78 million gallons, according to the airport's monthly progress report.

There was a 33.3 percent increase in those sales in June 1999 contrasted with June 1998's sales: 478,112 to 637,110 gallons.

However, comparable military fuel sales leaped by 86 percent from 71,006 gallons to 132,265 gallons pumped into aircraft.

The city grosses four cents per gallon on fuel sold to the military and to general aviation, Paul Erdmann said.

Since he became Midland's military consultant in the early 1990s, Erdmann said that the city has sold 16 million gallons of fuel to the military, and the city earned about $640,000 on those sales.

General-aviation fuel sales are in a slump, Erdmann noted — a 15 percent year-to-year decrease. "Remember when oil was $8 a barrel?" Erdmann asked. "Well, you can't afford to run your plane" based on income that $8 oil brought West Texans.

There's a lag before $20 oil substantially impacts the economy.

City's airport parking revenue increased 17.5 percent from $902,528 in 1998 to $1.06 million in 1999, Thomas said.

"People are using that (more costly) new covered parking and liking it right across the street from the terminal," he said. "More people are using it just on a short-term basis" and especially in the summertime when it is so hot." They prefer to pay higher prices "to park in the shade" rather than in sunny open areas.

While airline-passenger numbers lagged last year's figures, Joe Luther, an airport visitor-information volunteer, said that he is busier than ever in visiting with airport patrons.

"It seems like to me we are busier," he said. "I tell people how great West Texas is, and I emphasize Midland."

Airport patron Mildred Callihan of Big Spring was with her husband, Ross Callihan, to pick up a friend at the airport on Thursday.

"You have a wonderful new building," she said of the $35 million domed terminal. "You need to put in a water fountain" in the ground-floor lobby area.

Thomas agreed. "We're working on it," he said. "We are putting one in."

Meanwhile, Don Evans, chief of the airport's skycaps, noted that the inflow of passengers "dropped off after the Fourth of July holiday.

"It will be moderate until October," Evans said, and will pick up with conventions, the Permian Basin Oil Show, and the Confederate Air Force Air-Sho'99. "Hopefully, it will pick up like the oil business."

FEN-PHEN: Area women file diet-drug lawsuits

(From 1A)

In April, Sandra Moore settled for a reported $500,000 one week into the trial in Cleburne. She had sought $110 million in damages. As in the other settlement, the doctors named in the lawsuit were dismissed before the week-long trial.

Also this week, 12 women in the Rio Grande Valley have filed individual personal injury lawsuits against fen-phen manufacturers, claiming the drug caused irreparable and life-threatening internal injuries.

The women are seeking unspecified damages from 15 drug manufacturers including, American Home Products Corp. and Smithkline Beecham Corp.

SENTENCE: Man gets 6 years in cyclist's death

(From 1A)

Most of Hamby's argument in the punishment phase was attacking the testimony of lawmen, especially that of a Department of Public Safety trooper. Hamby criticized the trooper for waiting several months before reconstructing the accident scene and because his work was during the day instead of at night. The accident occurred the night of Feb. 27.

The jury received the case at 2:40 p.m. and returned with a verdict at 4:05 p.m. Judge Robert Moore gave jurors the option of retiring for the evening or continuing with the punishment phase; they opted to continue. The jury retired for its final deliberations at 6:20 p.m. and returned at 8:15 p.m. with the punishment.

Rodriguez stood mutely as Moore read the punishment verdict: "Mr. Rodriguez, on the first count of the indictment, intoxication manslaughter, they have ordered you to spend six years in an institutional facility of the Texas Department of Justice. On the charge of failure to stop and render aid, you must spend one year in the Howard County jail."

Rodriguez will be eligible for parole in 18 months, although as Wilkerson pointed out, "most cases are resulting in the person serving 70 to 80 percent of the time mandated by the court."

Neither family would comment after the verdict, although Walters' grandfather said Wednesday that all the family wanted was to get through this painful experience and get on with their lives.

Afterward, Hamby said, "The jury did what they believed to be right. There was nothing more that I could do; the defendant had already given two confessions in the case admitting his guilt."

"I feel the jury rendered what they considered to be the best judgment they could," Wilkerson said. "They put in some long hard hours, and the nature of the case was an extremely emotional experience."

Amish country is ground zero for new gene therapy

STRASBURG, Pa. (AP) — Lancaster County's Amish and Mennonite people, the plain folk who mostly live, work and dress the way they did during the 19th century, are nevertheless serving as test subjects in one of the most advanced areas of medicine — gene therapy.

Scientists hope to learn more about genetic diseases by studying members of the insular community, people who often ride in horse-drawn buggies and don't have electricity but are willing to climb into an MRI machine.

"I can see how it could be confusing if you don't understand our beliefs," said Leon Newswanger, a Mennonite whose son will be one of the first participants in human trials of a new gene therapy. "But if we don't do whatever it takes, if we know what could help — then that is worse."

The Amish and Mennonites, known as the Plain community for their simple, dark clothes and rural way of life, have a higher rate of certain inherited diseases than other people.

They have become instrumental in genetic research because the estimated 75,000 sect members are descended from just 47 families. The sects have been providing blood samples and family histories to geneticists for years.

Similarly, scientists have studied Ashkenazi Jews, Cajuns in Louisiana and other groups with a high degree of genetic uniformity.

"Amish people know the reality of genetic diseases and so any advances are welcomed," said Dr. Holmes Morton, who opened the Clinic for Special Children in the heart of Pennsylvania's Amish country in 1990.

On March 21, off-duty Officer Tabitha Stanley, 25, witnessed a shooting at Officer Paula Bynum's house. Officer Laura Gilmore, 31, heard the shots from her house across the street from Ms. Bynum's residence.

The two officers were misidentified in a story in Thursday's edition.

Big Spring Salvation Army gets some help but still needs fans

By T.E. Jenkins
Big Spring Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Salvation Army has declared war on the unbelievable heat that racks West Texas each year, and their primary weapon is ... fans?

Salvation Army Major Roy Tolcher said the number of West Texans without any type of relief from the searing heat is alarming.

"You just wouldn't believe how many families in the Big Spring area don't have fans, much less air conditioning," Tolcher said. "These folks just don't have the money to buy fans for their homes."

With only two fans left in the Salvation Army's supply last week, Tolcher said donations were the only hope the organization had to keep the program alive and low-income families cool.

"Donations are pretty much the backbone of everything we do here at the Salvation Army. We rely heavily on them not just for projects like this, but for everything we do. We get some assistance from FEMA, and TU Electric gives us a small monthly donation to help with the utilities, but the bulk of the money we use to help the less-fortunate comes from the people of Big Spring.

"We are hoping some of the other groups and businesses will help out with the fan drive. The people in Big Spring have always been a great help when it comes to projects like this, and I bet if most of them check their garages, they'll find an old fan that they don't use anymore. We need all of the help we can get."

Tolcher got the help he and the Salvation Army were looking for this week.

"We received a $700 donation for the fan drive," said Salvation Army director of social services Danelle Castillo. "That amounts to about 70 fans for our program."

She said the $700 donation was from Fiesta Dodge in Big Spring.

"They gave us the initial donation and have pledged to supply one fan for every car they sell this summer. I think it's a really nice way for them to help out."

Ms. Castillo said that although that donation, as well as the summer-long pledge, will help her organization continue the drive, the battle to beat the heat is far from over.

"It's very important that everyone in the community that is in a position to help with the fan drive do so. One person, or one group can't do it all. It's going to take a community effort."

Ms. Castillo said the demand has become so high the Salvation Army has scheduled one day each week to pass the fans out to local residents.

"We will be giving out the fans on Mondays from now on," she said.

Tolcher said his staff is also gearing up for the fall, when several of the agency's biggest programs of the year will get under way.

"We have our annual back-to-school drive coming up, and we will be taking donations of book bags, pencils, paper ... pretty much anything you can think of these kids will need to go back to school. After that, we have the Make A Difference Program, which has always been a success in the past, but we are looking at really taking it a step farther this year. Of course, there is also Christmas, with the Angel Trees, Toys for Tots and the bell ringers."

Officials trying to decide how to distribute more than $100,000 reward for Resendez

HOUSTON (AP) — Law enforcement officials are meeting with each other to determine who gets the more than $100,000 reward for the capture of a suspected serial killer, an FBI official said Thursday.

Brian R. Loader, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI's Houston division, said federal, state and local law enforcement officials have been discussing the issue this week to decide "how much there is, who's going to get it, (and) timeliness of distribution of the money."

A decision could be announced this week.

The possibility that relatives of Angel Maturino Resendez might receive a reward for their part in his surrender Tuesday prompted objections from some residents in cities where he is alleged to have killed. Maturino Resendez is charged in four murders in three states and suspected in five other slayings.

Speculation that the reward money could be spent on Maturino Resendez's defense drew even more of an outcry.

"We really don't like the idea," said Mark Kloesel, president of M-G Inc., a company that donated $5,000 in reward money in Weimar, Texas, where three people were slain.

"That's kind of crazy ... to offer money to catch him and then once he's caught use the money to defend him. That to me doesn't make much sense," Kloesel said.

Allen Tanner, the court-appointed attorney for Maturino Resendez, said there are no circumstances in which he could be paid with reward money.

"The court system pays me," he said. "Any reward money they receive can be used by family for whatever they decide. It's unrelated to the case."

Tanner acknowledged, however, that the family could hire additional attorneys for Maturino Resendez.

At least $125,000, and possibly more, posted by at least seven organizations awaits distribution to anyone who is determined to have assisted in Resendez' arrest. The FBI and Texas Rangers have indicated that Maturino Resendez's sister and other relatives who brokered his surrender qualify as recipients.

Loader confirmed that the FBI and U.S. Marshal's Office have posted rewards of $50,000 and $10,000, respectively.

Donations from residents and businesses in Weimar, Lexington, Ky.; and West University Place, Texas, total an additional $75,000. Crime Stoppers of Houston, a private organization, gave $2,500.

Maturino Resendez is alleged to have committed three murders in Weimar, one in West University Place, one in Houston and one in Lexington.

"The federal money is purely for his apprehension. Other awards can be for both apprehension and conviction, so it may not be distributed right away," Loader explained. "We will not get involved in any of the direct payments of reward money being offered by those local agencies. It's their money and they can pay it out as they wish."

With $30 million in the bank, Bush gives up federal funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — With his campaign's bank balance bulging at $30 million, George W. Bush said Thursday that he would forgo federal matching funds in his race for the Republican presidential nomination, freeing him from the spending limits that his poorer rivals will have to abide by.

Multimillionaire publisher Steve Forbes, who is largely financing his own campaign, is the only other GOP candidate to reject the matching funds.

Bush reported raising a record $37 million during the first six months of the year — more than either Bob Dole or President Clinton took in during their entire 1996 campaigns.

It was more than the rest of the Republican field combined and also eclipsed the Democratic front-runner, Vice President Al Gore, whose campaign raised $17.5 million, plus an additional $2 million for legal and accounting expenses.

The Republican front-runner has three times more cash on hand than Gore, who reported $9.4 million in the bank. Gore's Democratic challenger, former Sen. Bill Bradley, reported raising $11.7 million and had $7.5 million in the bank as of June 30.

Under the Watergate-era campaign finance laws, the federal government will match the first $250 of each individual's contributions to a candidate. In exchange, candidates agree to limit the amount of money they spend on their campaigns — the cap is expected to be about $40 million next year — and how much they spend in each state.

If he wins the nomination, Bush could still choose to receive full federal funding for the general election, which was $61.8 million for each major party candidate in 1996.

Bush already has raised almost as much as he could spend under the limits. By forgoing the federal matching funds, he frees himself from any restriction on campaign spending during the primaries, although he still can't accept individual contributions of more than $1,000 each.

Campaign 2000

"You've got limits that constrain a candidate," Bush said. "I want to be in a position to respond. I want to be in a position to plan, and I want to be in a position to plan according to need."

He can spend millions, for example, in Iowa and New Hampshire, where other candidates will be limited to an estimated $1.1 million and $660,000 respectively.

"In what will be in all probability just a three or four-week race, he will have the funds needed to run a full-fledged campaign," said Anthony Corrado, a professor of government at Colby College in Waterville, Maine.

Arizona Sen. John McCain, also seeking the GOP presidential nomination, quickly criticized Bush's decision, saying he may be "unintentionally adding to the already widespread cynicism of the American people regarding the influence of special interest money in politics."

Corrado noted, however, that the other candidates would benefit somewhat. The federal election fund faces a shortfall this election cycle because fewer Americans are contributing through their income tax returns. Candidates had faced the prospect of delayed payments, but taking Bush out of the pool means the other candidates will get their money sooner.

Among the other 2000 presidential candidates, Forbes also is turning down federal funds, as he did in 1996, but he is financing much of his GOP campaign himself. Through June 30, Forbes had raised $2.9 million and contributed $6.6 million of his own money.

Forbes outspent Bush during the first half of 1999, $8.3 million to $7.1 million.

Bush relied on a broad network of contributors. His campaign reported that more than 74,000 people have given an average of $467 so far this year. Nearly 27,000 have given the maximum of $1,000.

Texas was Bush's most fertile fund-raising ground, an Associated Press computer analysis of his quarterly spending report found. Bush took in 10,269 contributions totaling $7 million from the Lone Star State from April through June.

California was second, with 4,132 contributions totaling $3.6 million. In Florida, where brother Jeb is the governor, 2,949 contributors kicked in $2.6 million.

Bush took in almost $700,000 from political action committees and more than $110,000 from members of Washington lobbying firms.

Barnes denies report he helped Bush get into National Guard

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes denied a magazine report Thursday that he helped George W. Bush get a place in the Texas Air National Guard at the urging of Bush's father.

Bush, the Republican presidential front-runner, has repeatedly denied that he received preferential treatment in being accepted into the Guard during the Vietnam War.

Rolling Stone cites a source close to Barnes as saying that while George Bush was a Texas congressman, he asked Barnes to place a call to facilitate the younger Bush's acceptance into the Guard. At that time, there was a nationwide waiting list of 100,000, according to the magazine.

Barnes, who was the speaker of the House in Texas in 1968 and elected lieutenant governor the same year, was considered one of the most powerful men in Texas politics at the time.

"I never spoke to Congressman Bush about his son," Barnes said Thursday. "The story is false."

The Aug. 5 issue of Rolling Stone will be available at newsstands today.

"We stand by the facts of our story," said Paul Alexander, who wrote the article.

Amid questions over his Vietnam-era military service, the younger Bush — now Texas governor and the Republican presidential front-runner — has said he would have served in combat had his guard unit been called.

"Gov. Bush wanted to be a pilot. There were openings. He applied. He met all the qualifications and was accepted," said Bush spokeswoman Mindy Tucker. "The commander who interviewed and accepted him into the Guard has said that anyone who alleges there was special treatment is, quote, 'a damned liar.'"

Walter B. "Buck" Staudt, a retired brigadier general who was Bush's commanding officer in the Guard, repeatedly has denied that any influence was involved. "Neither his daddy nor anybody else got him into the Guard," he told the Los Angeles Times.

Clinton: 'America will walk with' Israel for peace

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak presented himself to President Clinton on Thursday as "a messenger of change" in the Middle East and promised to carry out accords to give the Palestinians control over another chunk of West Bank territory.

"America will walk with you," Clinton told the new prime minister, as they stood together in the Rose Garden under a broiling summer sun, taking questions from American and Israeli reporters.

They then walked purposefully to the residential part of the White House where Barak laid out his priorities for peacemaking with the Palestinians while Clinton used the 2 1/2 hour session to encourage Israel's most decorated soldier to recapture lost momentum.

"We are approaching the moment of truth," Barak told the president, according to a senior Israeli official. "There are dangers and there are hopes and we have to find a way to approach the risks and enhance the hopes."

On specifics, Barak was quoted as telling Clinton that he was prepared for "a painful compromise" with Syria over the Israeli-held Golan Heights, which President Hafez Assad is intent to recover after 32 years.

While Barak did not outline the steps he would take in peacemaking with Syria, Lebanon and the Palestinians, he told Clinton that Israel would not return to the pre-1967 lines — its boundaries before capturing the West Bank, Gaza and the Golan Heights in the Middle East war that year.

"Most of the settlers will remain under Israeli sovereignty and Jersualem will remain Israel's capital," Barak was quoted as telling Clinton.

Later they flew with their wives by helicopter to Camp David, Md., the presidential retreat identified with Mideast peacemaking ever since an agreement between Israel and Egypt was reached there two decades ago. After dinner, Clinton and Barak were to resume discussions.

Easing away from public statements supporting Palestinian aspirations for a homeland and a right to return many thousands of refugees to Israel, the president said in a joint news conference earlier , "We certainly should be doing nothing to prejudge the final status issues."

Clinton also reconsidered the ebullient statement he made in a Democratic fund-raiser Tuesday in Coral Gables, Fla., that he was as eager as "a kid with a toy" to receive a new Israeli prime minister.

This was translated in Hebrew to suggest Clinton intended to deal with Barak as if he were a plaything — an allusion Clinton rejected Thursday.

"In American English it means I am very excited about the prospect of the rejuvenation of the peace process, and that's all it means," Clinton said.

Indeed, in their statements and body language, Clinton and Barak projected a joint determination to work together toward a peaceful resolution of conflict in the Mideast.

"For more than a half-century," Clinton said, referring to the birth of Israel with the support of President Truman in 1948, "the United States has stood proudly with Israel and for the security of its people and its nation."

And now, he said, as Barak proceeds with implementing the Wye River accords, "America will help as you move forward."

For his part, Barak pledged to "inject new momentum into the peace process, and to put it back on all tracks."

While he had urged the United States on his way here to back off trying to be the "judge" of issues between Israel and the Arabs, Barak declared "we need American leadership and support all the way."

On two thorny issues, meanwhile, Barak took a tough stand.

He said that while he was not going to authorize any new Jewish settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza, where the Palestinians plan to establish a state, Barak said he was also not going to dismantle any existing ones.

The 200,000 Israeli Jews who live among 2 million Arabs had the approval of the Israeli government and "we are responsible for them," Barak said. "I believe in strong blocks of settlement that will include most of the settlers in Judea-Samaria and the Gaza Strip," he said, using the Old Testament Hebrew name for the West Bank.

Also, Barak said he would like to see the embassies of all countries relocated to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv. Clinton has blocked transfer of the U.S. Embassy, saying that was part of the issue of Jerusalem's future that depended on negotiations with the Palestinians.

NAACP wants S. Carolina boycott because Confederate flag still flies

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The NAACP is supporting a tourism boycott of South Carolina because the state flies the Confederate flag at the Statehouse.

The NAACP voted Thursday at its national convention in New York to boycott the state at the urging of the South Carolina chapter. The resolution still must be ratified by the national board in October.

Tourism is a top industry in South Carolina and visitors spent $6.8 billion in the state last year, according to state figures.

"We're asking African-Americans and others who believe in fairness to consider relocating their family reunions, conventions, church groups and other meetings outside of the state as long as the Confederate flag is flown over the state Capitol," said James Gallman, president of the South Carolina chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

South Carolina is the only state that flies the flag over its Statehouse. Mississippi and Georgia incorporate the rebel flag in their state flags.

Democratic Gov. Jim Hodges supports a compromise to take down the flag and place it near a Confederate memorial on the Capitol grounds.

"However, the political will to enact such a compromise does not exist today in the South Carolina Legislature," the vacationing Hodges said in a statement released by his office.

Lawmakers in 1995 passed a law giving the Legislature sole power to remove the flag.

The flag was raised over the Statehouse in 1962 to commemorate the Civil War's centennial. Opponents say it is an offensive reminder of slavery. Supporters say it celebrates the state's heritage and the sacrifice of South Carolinians during the war.

A boycott likely wouldn't have an immediate effect on the state, said tourism department spokesman Lou Fontana.

Reno, Cuomo announce lead protection measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maurci Jackson's daughter was just 15 months old when she ate a piece of lead-based paint. Now 10, Maurissa Jackson is hyperactive and has problems paying attention. But her mother considers herself fortunate.

At least Maurissa told her immediately that she had eaten the paint so her mother could get her to a doctor, the Chicago woman said Thursday.

Thousands of parents across the country are not aware when their children are exposed to lead poisoning and are unable to save them from serious harm, including diminished intelligence, hearing loss and, in extreme cases, death.

Attorney General Janet Reno called lead paint "one of the biggest environmental threats facing children today."

Reno, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Andrew Cuomo, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Carol Browner and District of Columbia Mayor Anthony Williams announced results Thursday from stepped-up enforcement measures aimed at protecting children from lead poisoning.

The 1992 Residential Lead-Based Paint Hazard Reduction Act requires landlords to notify new tenants or buyers if an apartment or house could cause lead poisoning. The Department of Justice, HUD and EPA began joint enforcement of the law last August and started with the district, Los Angeles and Chicago.

Court actions totaling more than $1 million have been filed against landlords across the country violating the law, Reno said. Four companies owning real estate in the district have agreed to pay penalties, and HUD has initiated 45 cases against companies in other cities.

"We can eradicate this danger to our children," Reno said.

In the district, Chris Leonard, a spokesman with ACORN, the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, said the legislation does not go far enough. He said landlords should be required to make the apartments safe from lead poisoning.

Cuomo called lead poisoning "a silent enemy" that leaves as many as 890,000 children per year with elevated levels of lead in their blood. Most of those children are from low-income families living in housing built before 1978, when lead-based paint was banned, according to information from HUD.

Conservation of water supply 'must' for area

If anyone happens to tell you that all the rain Midland has received this year means the long-running drought is over, don't you believe it!

After all, you've lived in West Texas longer than a day. You realize that drought is more a way of life here than rainy spells.

If you need a bit more statistical evidence of the need to conserve water, take a look at the water levels of area lakes from which Midland purchases much of its drinking water.

The rains in recent weeks did the most good at Lake J.B. Thomas, southwest of Snyder, and boosted that drastically depleted reservoir from a little under 6 percent full to about 22 percent full. But at E.V. Spence Reservoir at Robert Lee and O.H. Ivie near Ballinger, the two main suppliers of water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District to cities such as Midland, Odessa and San Angelo, there was little runoff and the lake levels continued to drop.

If you need a bit more statistical evidence of the need to conserve water, take a look at the water levels of area lakes from which Midland purchases much of its drinking water.

J.B. Thomas is the smallest of the three reservoirs, having a capacity of only 204,000 acre-feet, and as of July 11 it was at less than 20 percent full. But E.V. Spence, which has a capacity of 488,760 acre-feet, is dangerously low at less than 16 percent full and currently it is not being used as a supply for Midland.

The largest of the three reservoirs, O.H. Ivie, has a capacity of 664,340 acre-feet and is currently about 70 percent full. As a result, it is this region's "ace in the hole" where water needs are concerned, but the demand for water has been pulling the water level in Ivie gradually downward for weeks. That is not good. It indicates this region still needs more rain to increase the level of water in area lakes.

So Midlanders still need to think conservation where the water supply is concerned. If your lawn doesn't need water, don't turn the sprinklers on. If your car isn't dirty, don't wash it.

What are Americans really paying in taxes?

WASHINGTON — Obfuscation is the hallmark of an American tax system that so conceals our true tax burden that Americans will be shocked to discover that they are paying between 40 and 50 percent of their incomes in taxes. The system is so complex, so convoluted, so pervasive that it is time to shine a bright light on the dark shadows. That light could come in the form of a Tax Index (TI) that, much as the Consumer Price Index (CPI) documents inflation, will tell us how much the average citizen's federal, state and local taxes have gone up or down each month.

Anderson

Most of our elected leaders do not set out to deceive us, but our system creates an incentive, an insatiable compulsion, that causes them to do so.

Take Social Security. This is an intergenerational transfer tax (each generation pays for the preceding generation's retirement), not a savings account, yet Congress discovered the mother lode in the Social Security Trust Fund. It began with the creation of the Unified Budget during the Johnson administration. This allowed the government to treat surpluses held in the Social Security Trust Fund and other trust funds as part of the federal budget.

This was nothing more than codifying reality because these surpluses were invested in government bonds, which the government then spent. And because the money was spent, it could only be replaced by future taxes or borrowings. The Unified Budget simply removes the charading veil and calls surpluses what they really are: taxes.

Congress then went into high gear, increasing the Social Security tax year after year, until the surplus exploded and balanced our budget. But it was balanced on the backs of average Americans, because the Social Security tax is only levied against the first $72,600 of income, making it the most regressive tax in U.S. history.

(A side note: We hear about the marriage tax penalty that is inherent in the tax tables, but the real marriage tax penalty is in the Social Security tax, because a one-income household earning $90,000 pays the tax on $72,600, whereas the two-income household earning the same amount pays the tax on the full $90,000.)

Did Congress intentionally set out to deceive us in this way? Of course not. The tax system itself drew them in. They hit the mother lode and just kept digging.

Now with the American Treasury projected to be awash in surpluses, tax-cut plans abound, and plans to replace the income tax with a national sales tax, such as the just-announced Fair Tax, are constantly floated, yet most Americans are left to make uninformed decisions because they have no idea what they are paying in taxes. There are now so many taxes at all levels of government, including direct taxes like income taxes and indirect taxes like import duties, that it is virtually impossible for American citizens to determine their true tax loads.

So we have compiled what can only be considered an incomplete accounting for a typical two-income family, and the result is a whopping tax burden of more than 43 percent of earnings.

(Note: We have used a self-employed example because self-employed people pay the full 15.3 percent Social Security tax, whereas employees theoretically pay half and their employers pay half. The reality is that any amounts employers pay for employees are viewed the same as if they were paid to the employees. In fact, any employer would prefer to pay the money directly to their employees.)

Taxpayers: self-employed two-income couple with two children

Earnings: $90,000

Primary deductions: $9,600 real-estate interest, real-estate taxes, etc.

Exemptions: $10,800 for four, at $2,700 each

Federal income tax: $13,976 (filing jointly)

Federal Social Security and Medicare tax (FICA): $13,770

Federal and state gasoline taxes: $600 for two cars each driven 15,000 miles per year

Federal excise taxes (telephone, transportation, etc.): $500

Federal and state sin taxes (alcohol, tobacco, etc.): $500

State income tax: $5,300

State sales tax: $675 for 4.5 percent of $15,000 in purchases

State automobile tax: $300 based upon the purchase of two cars every four years

State and county property taxes: $300

County real estate tax: $2,600

Miscellaneous taxes: $300

Total tax burden: $38,821

Americans may choose to tax themselves at a 43 percent rate, but it is wrong for the government to tuck a tax here and surreptitiously spend a surplus there. We need to know our true tax rate. We need a TI.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

It might take laws to bring back manners

Well, if it takes a law, it takes a law: For instance, the new Louisiana enactment requiring public school students to address teachers as sir and ma'am; and further obliging them to refer to adults as Mr., Mrs., Miss, Ms., whatever.

Murchison

Old-fashioned manners! Wow! And all it took was an act of the legislature. Shows us where things have got to in our time. If it shows us likewise where things might be headed, so much the better for everyone.

Maybe Mrs. Rodham Clinton is in some sense right; it can take a village to bring about certain desired results, as, in this case, the enforcement of reasonable standards of speech.

Can such an enactment — intended, I gather, as a response to the Columbine massacre — be construed as government intrusion into private choice? Not so. The schools to which the rules apply are public; the legislature has every right, as well as duty, to say what goes on in the classroom. If you can make a rowdy middle-schooler raise his hand to ask a question, you can prescribe the words with which he frames that question.

That we never before had to go this far explains the odd undertaste of an otherwise savorsome law. The Legislature of Louisiana has to get in the manners business? Sadly, sorrowfully, the answer is yes, it has to. The original proprietors — families — have about shut down the old shop.

These past couple of decades, the manners business may have become the most deregulated enterprise in modern America. It's no longer what others tell you to do that counts; it's what you yourself decide to do, or, alternatively, not do. Laissez-faire, laissez-passer turns out, unfortunately, to be a principle better suited to economics than to human relations.

Why so little attention these days to manners, a k a the civilized code of respect for others (such respect as Messrs. Harris and Kleybold signally failed to display)? These days the manners thing is regarded as prissy and suffocating, an affront to the cult of equality. In such an environment you certainly don't relish hierarchical forms of address: "Yessir," not "yeah;" "beg pardon" instead of "huh?".

"Yeah" implies equality, the rejection of hierarchy. We're all for that, right? Maybe we would be, in a society where everyone's needs and deserts were roughly identical, as in the baseball bleachers or on a dance floor. Not every human coming-together has these earmarks; some situations prescribe a certain distance in the relationship. Schools have to enforce a sometimes unfair but more often right-on presumption: that teacher is better than her students. (Get over it, Megan.)

Hierarchy clearly isn't what society relishes. Self-expression is what it prefers: the use in common conversation of words denoting the anatomical feature used for sitting down; the wearing on airplanes of whatever clothes — muscle shirts, shorts, etc. — a passenger feels like wearing; inattention to table manners, such as the duty not to park elbows on the table.

Small matters, these could be called. Then we notice how fast little matters add up to big ones.

The asseveration that Things Ain't as Good as They Used to Be is the mark of the aging crank. So sue me for crankery (but hold those age-ist remarks)! I offer, I hope, a pragmatic point: namely, good manners make society work the way it's supposed to work; i.e., those you treat with respect instead of indifference or disdain are likelier to treat you with respect.

This is the Self-Esteem Society, is it not? It only makes sense in such a context to acknowledge that manners is a device — perhaps the prime device — for assuring all of us our due. Manners assumes off the top that because one is breathing, one deserves a certain justice.

The Louisiana sir-ma'am law aims at preserving that assumption, and thus at making schools work better. Respect for knowledge, respect for those who impart knowledge — it works together, as Louisiana's legislators appear, almost uniquely, to discern. Thank you, gentlemen; much obliged, ladies.

CHARLEY REESE

There's no such thing as a free lunch

One of the most important things for an ordinary citizen to understand is that there is no such thing as a free lunch. You pay for everything — including those things you do not receive.

Reese

Many people try to play class politics, pitting one class against another. This is part of the intellectual stains left by Marxism. In fact, though, there are only individuals, and individuals pay all taxes, pay for all settlements and awards in lawsuits and pay for all regulations. You name it, individuals pay for it. Most Americans have no idea how much better off financially they would be if they didn't have to pay for everything.

Tax business, some folks say. OK, businesses are taxed and guess where those taxes end up — in the prices of their goods and services. Business don't pay taxes. Customers of businesses pay taxes. Ditto for the settlements, fines, costs of complying with regulations, etc. It all goes into the prices of goods and services to be picked up by the individual.

Sue business, some folks say. OK, whatever the costs of the suits, win or lose, they will be passed onto the customers. And so will insurance payouts, as insurance companies will spread the cost to the premiums of all their customers to cover losses. The cost of stolen goods are passed on to consumers. Even the cost of bribing public officials is passed on to consumers.

An old-time contractor once said over bourbon, "There ain't a road in any state that doesn't have a governor's mile in it." The governor's mile is the extra money charged to the taxpayers to cover the cost of greasing the right palms to get the contract.

The guy who proclaims, "Sock it to big business, sue the so-and-so's," is the biggest sap. He is, as we used to say down South, being screwed, blued and tattooed, and he's too dumb to know it's even happening to him.

A General Accounting Office study, for example, estimates the Environmental Protection Agency's ham-handed assault on business costs $160 billion per year. That costs Americans about $2,000 a year per family of four.

If I listed all of the taxes levied by federal, state and local governments, it would take two columns. You are taxed from the moment of birth to long after your death. Everything you earn, save, buy, invest, touch, eat, drink or use is taxed, often multiple times, including your coffin and the hole in the ground where they plant you. If you manage to have much left, after a lifetime of taxation, the government takes part of that away from your heirs who, of course, are also being incessantly taxed every day of their lives.

So think about it. Individual men and women pay for every government service, every government regulation, every lawsuit, every crime, every facility, every service, every so-called benefit. It's no wonder Americans have to work until July just to pay for the taxes.

The lesson to be learned is simple. Shed the delusion that you can get something for nothing by shifting the cost to somebody else. Shed the delusion that government "gives" benefits.

The 20th has been a bad century for the individual. The only way to make sure the 21st will be better will be to shed the delusions and illusions of the old one. The free lunch is one of the most damaging of those illusions.

Hopes of Belfast government set back months by disastrous day

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — The struggle to form a Northern Ireland government imploded Thursday in chaos and anger, as the main Protestant party boycotted a crucial vote because of the Irish Republican Army's refusal to disarm.

The British and Irish governments, which have spent months trying to coax the Protestants of the Ulster Unionist party to accept the Catholics of Sinn Fein as government colleagues, conceded that the damage could take months to repair.

Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble, designated to lead the administration, defended his party's surprise refusal to even attend Thursday's session of Northern Ireland's year-old legislature, called to elect the government's 10 other Cabinet ministers.

Trimble insisted his party's legislators could not vote to admit "an active and fully armed terrorist organization into government" — a reference to the fact that Sinn Fein is allied with the banned IRA.

He said the Ulster Unionists required a firm commitment from the IRA to disarm before Sinn Fein could receive its two posts in an unprecedented four-party Cabinet for Northern Ireland.

That institution, critical to the success of the 1998 Good Friday agreement, is supposed to receive substantial powers from the British government, which has directly ruled Northern Ireland since abolishing a Protestant-dominated parliament here in 1972.

In Washington, President Clinton bemoaned the lack of trust.

"This is a difficult day for those of us who have worked for years and over the last several weeks," he said. "(The two sides) are having a fight over who goes first and acting today as if the whole thing could be abandoned over that. That cannot be allowed to happen."

He vowed sooner or later "we will get this thing back on track."

Trimble's defiant stand drew scorn and fury from the province's major Catholic politicians. They noted that the British and Irish governments had spent agonizing months trying to reassure the Ulster Unionists, most recently by promising to hold the IRA accountable to a fixed timetable for disarmament.

"Regrettably, and I say this more in sorrow than in anger, those efforts have not just been spurned. They have been scorned," said Seamus Mallon, who promptly announced his resignation as Trimble's would-be Catholic deputy.

Mallon, deputy leader of the pacifist Social Democratic and Labor Party, which represents most of the province's Catholics, said the Ulster Unionists had opted "to use this crisis to bleed more concessions out of the governments."

Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams called the Ulster Unionists' strategy "disgraceful" and demanded that British Prime Minister Tony Blair strip Trimble of his status as "first minister" in the planned government.

Adams, a reputed former IRA commander, declined to speculate about the future of the outlawed group's truce, which will mark its second anniversary Tuesday.

But Canadian Gen. John de Chastelain, who leads the independent disarmament commission charged with securing the gradual destruction of the IRA's hidden weapons bunkers, said he remained confident that both the IRA and outlawed pro-British groups would eventually cooperate.

"If I didn't believe that, I wouldn't continue in my position," he said.

Blair, who since last October had delayed attempting a Cabinet election in the certain belief that Protestants would refuse, announced plans for a damage-assessing summit next week with Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern.

But neither prime minister held out expectations of a quick fix. Both suggested the peace process could be put on ice until September.

"I hope that I am right in thinking a summer break for dialogue and time to consider the deal will help," Blair said in London.

Blair said he ultimately believed the Ulster Unionists would share power with Sinn Fein and that the IRA would "relinquish the gun."

Study shows breast-feeding cuts chances of obesity

LONDON (AP) — Babies are less likely to grow up into fat children if they are fed breast milk exclusively, a new study shows — providing powerful ammunition for the campaign to encourage mothers to choose the breast over the bottle.

German scientists say their findings, which were published Friday in the British Medical Journal, are the result of the largest study to date investigating the link between breast-feeding and obesity later in life.

The findings suggest breast-feeding could turn out to be a powerful strategy for fighting the spiraling level of childhood obesity, said Dr. Robert H. Eckel, chairman of the American Heart Association's nutrition committee, who was not connected with the study.

"This is one of the highest impact studies I've seen in obesity research in the last year," he said.

The study, which tracked 9,357 children in Bavaria, found that the longer babies were breast-fed exclusively before being switched to formula or food, the lower their chances of starting school as overweight children.

About 60 percent of mothers breast-feed in industrialized countries, but most give up by the time their babies are 2 months old.

The German study found that infants given only breast milk until they were 3 to 5 months old were more than a third less likely to be obese by the age of 5 or 6 than babies given only formula from the start.

Those breast-fed exclusively for 6 months to a year fared even better — they were 43 percent less likely to be obese, the study found.

Breast-feeding beyond a child's first birthday was better still, giving babies a 72 percent lower chance of turning out to be obese children, the researchers said.

Even just some breast milk proved to be better than none, according to the study. Children who were breast-fed for only the first month or two of their lives were 10 percent less likely to be obese by the time they entered elementary school.

Besides being more likely to be obese, bottle-fed children also had a greater chance of being simply overweight by elementary school, the study said.

Senate passes Republican HMO bill, veto threatened

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans, rolling over Democrats in a week of party-line votes, approved a modest set of patient protections Thursday aimed at millions of Americans who fear cost-conscious HMOs may deny them needed care.

"This bill addresses the real problems many Americans face," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss.

The final vote was 53-47, with two Republicans joining Democrats in opposing the plan as too little.

Looking toward next year's elections, Democrats promised to revive the politically potent issue. Polls suggest Americans overwhelmingly favor new rules for health maintenance organizations and other managed care plans, which try to save money by eliminating unnecessary care.

The White House threatened a veto, though Republicans noted that President Clinton has changed his position on other issues.

That won't happen this year, Vice President Al Gore said Thursday.

"It has zero chance of going past his desk because it's a fraud," Gore said on a visit to Capitol Hill.

Neither side seemed particularly interested in a bipartisan group's last-minute attempt to fashion a compromise.

Throughout the week, Republicans argued that the Democratic plan would sharply increase the cost of health insurance. Democrats derided the Republican bill as a sham.

On the final day of debate, Republicans defeated several Democratic provisions, including one that would have allowed patients harmed by medical decisions to sue their health plans for damages.

The HMO debate has attracted heavy lobbying from all sides, with insurance companies and businesses backing Republicans, and doctors and consumer groups siding with Democrats. All ran television and radio ads intended to influence the debate.

The final GOP measure offers an array of new rights to the 48 million Americans whose health plans are exempt from state regulation. They include easier access to specialists, emergency rooms and obstetricians-gynecologists. In most cases, the rejected Democratic provisions were broader and covered more people.

The GOP bill also would require health plans to pay for overnight hospital stays when women are being treated for breast cancer if a doctor recommends it. It would require that health plans give consumers more information about their plans and the right to appeal denials of coverage for specific treatments.

It also would change the tax code to make it easier for people to buy health insurance and long-term care insurance, although the bill provides no way to pay for those changes.

The House also is working on HMO legislation,. but conflict among Republicans on its scope has kept it tied up in committees.

Democrats compared the Senate debate to last month's legislative action on gun control and predicted that rank-and-file Republicans would defy their leaders and support at least some of the Democratic provisions.

But the GOP majority held firm, never losing more than three members on any given vote. Without exception, Democrats stayed together, but they needed at least five Republicans to win on any given issue.

While Congress has been able to agree on other health issues, this week's debate was the most contentious fight over health care since President Clinton's plan for universal health coverage died in 1993.

Republicans defeated outright the most sweeping Democratic proposals, including an effort to apply the new rights to all 161 million Americans with private health insurance and to give doctors final say over what care is medically necessary.

But on other issues, the GOP offered modest alternatives. Democrats, for instance, wanted to force insurance companies to pay for routine health costs when patients go into clinical trials on experimental treatments. On Thursday, Republicans offered their own version, which only included cancer trials.

'I have loved Tom Cruise since I saw him dancing in his underwear in "Risky Business." He had that cute little-boy look.'
—Kathy Alexander

It all began with an A student in his jockeys

By Georgia Temple

After 18 movies and portraying a greaser, an A student, a football player, a Navy pilot, a hustler, a race-car driver, a bartender, a younger brother, a youth who saves a unicorn, a disabled U.S. veteran, an officer, a lawyer, a vampire, a spy and an agent, Tom Cruise plays the screen again: this time with his "Eyes Wide Shut" in Stanley Kubrick's final film.

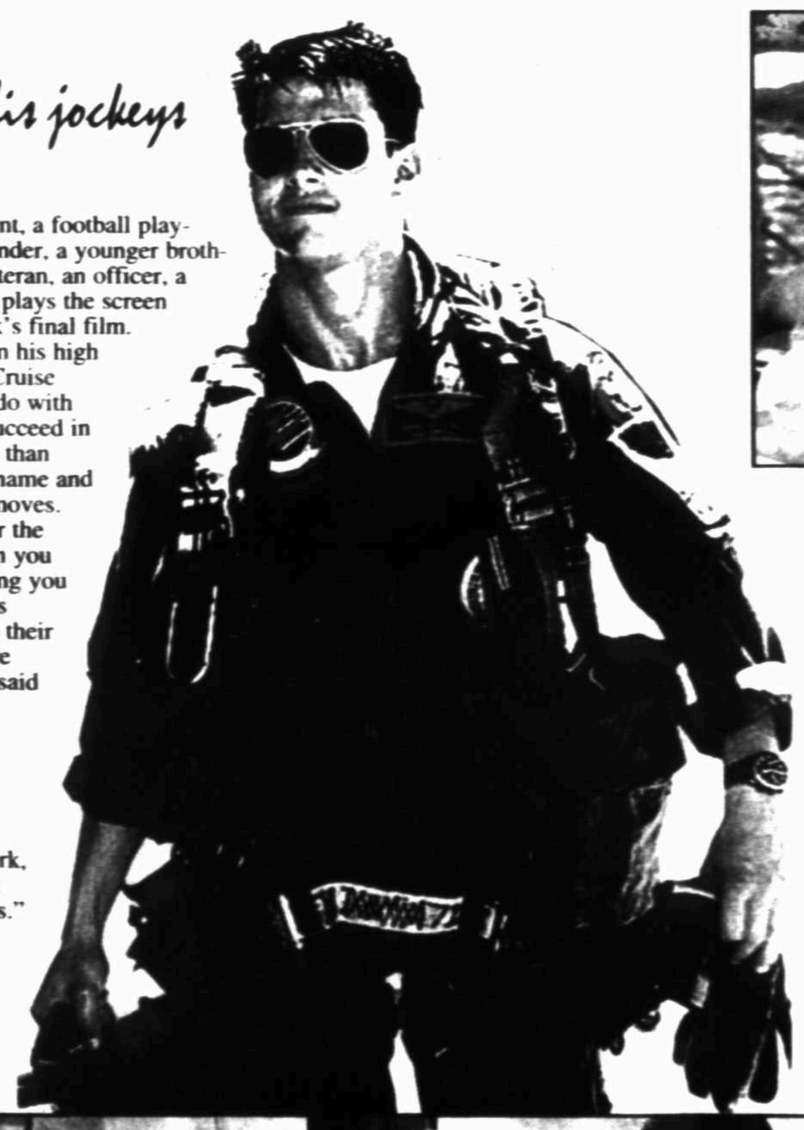

From the time he stepped onto the stage as Nathan Detroit in his high school production of the musical "Guys and Dolls," Thomas Cruise Mapother IV knew what he wanted to do with his life. In a profession in which few succeed in leaping from obscurity to stardom, less than three years later, his face, abbreviated name and talents had made most all of the right moves.

In recalling his first experience under the lights, Cruise has said, "All of a sudden you are up there, and you're doing something you really enjoy, and you are getting all this attention, and people who never turned their heads or said anything to you before are now saying, 'Gee, look at him.' And I said to myself, 'This is it.'"

Five months later, the opportunity to pursue his dream came in the form of a bit part in the 1981 release "Endless Love," a story of teenage love starring Brooke Shields and Martin Hewitt. Although his role took only a day's work, his performance landed him another bit part, this time in the 1981 release "Taps." He was originally cast as the friend of the hotheaded cadet David Shawn, but wound up playing Shawn.

"Cruise was moved into the role when the actor playing Shawn wasn't making the grade," wrote Marie Cahill in her

Kubrick was in touch with man's dark side long before Darth Vader

By Nancy Adamson

The late Stanley Kubrick was the director of "Eyes Wide Shut," starring Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman.

Few directors in film history have enjoyed household-name status. For every Hitchcock or Speilberg, there are dozens of Hustons or Leans who have left a legacy of great films and gone virtually unrecognized by the general public. Somewhere in the region between falls the career of Stanley Kubrick.

Four times nominated for Best Director at the Academy Awards, the only Oscar Kubrick ever won was for Best Visual Effects on "2001: A Space Odyssey." Labeled a recluse and a rebel, Kubrick shied from media and refused to leave his adopted London home to make his films.

"Eyes Wide Shut" features soundstages designed to look like New York City streets.

Many Kubrick films may require a special palette to digest. As a director and writer, Kubrick was in touch with man's dark side before Darth Vader was even a figment of George Lucas' imagination.

Certain character types that recur in several Kubrick films may attest to this. They feature an antihero whose undoing draws sympathy despite his or her evil intentions, and some whiny or overbearing type whose demise is

CRUISE: Actor has sought variety in roles he's undertaken

(From 1A)

book "Tom Cruise." "Director Harold Beckner was impressed with Cruise's intensity, but Cruise himself was hesitant. A genuinely nice guy, he was reluctant to take a part from a fellow actor."

In 1983, Cruise made "All the Right Moves" and three other films which offered him opportunities he took to heart.

"Losin' It" with Shelley Long of "Cheers" fame Ms. Cahill called "a blemish on an otherwise flawless career," which gave the actor "a valuable lesson."

"I realized," Cruise said. "that if you want to grow as an actor, you have to work with the best people. Then you'll be able to have more control over what you do."

The next film, "The Outsiders," based on S.E. Hinton's novel, was directed by Francis Ford Coppola.

"Cruise played a greaser and reportedly got into the role by giving up bathing and removing a cap from a tooth," Ms. Cahill said.

He also was dubbed a member of the Brat Pack, a term first used by David Blum in New York magazine to describe the group of rising young male stars with box-office magnetism.

His third film that year was a box office success, grossing $65 million in theaters, and gave him the leverage to demand script approval and a million-dollar salary.

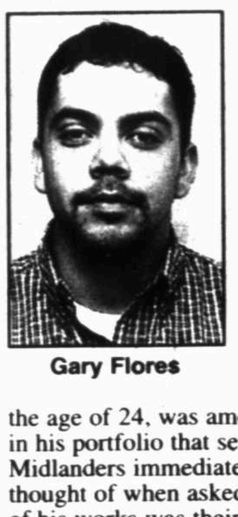

"A decade earlier that was unheard of, even among established leading men," Ms. Cahill said. "In contrast to the rebellious youth as portrayed by Marlon Brando and James Dean a generation earlier, the hero of the 1980s was the wholesome, all-American boy. Angst had been replaced with earnestness; self-doubt with self-confidence."

Of the film and of Cruise, one Midlander, who insisted on remaining anonymous, said, "He could slide into my hallway in his jockey shorts any time."

This sentiment about "Risky Business" was echoed in the comments of another fan of Cruise's. "I guess if you had to talk about favorites, you'd have to mention 'Risky Business' and him sliding across the floor in jockey shorts and his socks," said Odessan Carole Johnson, who works as a librarian at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Both comments reflect how many female fans feel about Cruise in his portrayal of a straight A high school student, who hoped he was attending Princeton, and the life lessons he learned when left home alone. One of those trials involved taking Dad's car for a spin.

"I loved 'Risky Business' except when they dumped that Porsche into the water," Ms. Johnson said. She laughed and expressed a sentiment that many viewers felt. "It could have been worse. It could have been mine."

Gary Flores

The film that made Tom Cruise a major box office draw at the age of 24, was among those in his portfolio that several Midlanders immediately thought of when asked which of his works was their favorite.

"Absolutely, 'Top Gun' because it had all the elements that at that time in my life I was just in awe of," said Lurene Spear. "It had the military and competition and romance. The kiss, I thought, was the best in a movie."

Jack Pallick, who said he has seen all of Cruise's films, didn't think he had a favorite until "Top Gun" was mentioned.

"I did like 'Top Gun,'" Pallick said. "I really did. That probably would be my favorite for him."

"Top Gun" also got Robert "Robbie" Barker's vote.

"It's the only true romance I've ever seen," Barker said. "It's entertaining throughout the whole thing. One of those movies you can watch 100 times, and it wouldn't bother you to watch it again. One of the all time greats."

Cruise's next move at age 24 was "The Color of Money" with Paul Newman. The 1986 Martin Scorsese film netted Newman an Oscar for best actor.

"Both Scorsese and Newman had high praise for Cruise," said Ms. Cahill. "Like Simpson and Bruckheimer, the producers of 'Top Gun,' they were impressed by Cruise's commitment to excellence and determination to succeed. Whatever the project, Cruise is totally focused on what he is doing, approaching each role with a perfectionist's eye."

After playing a rescuer of a fair damsel and a unicorn in Ridley Scott's 1985-86 fantasy "Legend," Cruise mixed "Cocktail" in 1988 with director Roger Donaldson and co-starring Bryan Brown and Elisabeth Shue into his repertoire. And yet another film he made in that year netted 1988 Oscars for the film and his co-star: "Rain Man" with Dustin Hoffman.

"I loved that movie," Barker said of "Rain Man." "It's one that's starting to slip through the cracks, but if you bring it up to anyone, they've seen it. It was a great movie, but they are starting to forget about it."

"Rain Man" was Midlander Barbara Pallick's first choice as her favorite Tom Cruise film.

"He just did very well in it," Ms. Pallick said. "I was surprised he didn't get an Academy Award plus it was a very good movie about a subject that needed to be done."

"Rain Man" opened the door for Cruise to play Ron Kovic in the 1989 Oliver Stone film "Born on the Fourth of July."

"That's the one I remember him for," said Midlander Neal Allen.

The role earned Cruise an Academy Award nomination, a Golden Globe Award with Ron Kovic and the People's Choice award. His passion for the project led him to agree to work for scale rather than his multi-million dollar fee.

"Cruise's depiction of life in a wheelchair is infused with authenticity," said Ms. Cahill. "To prepare for the part, Cruise spent time with paraplegics at a VA hospital. He lived in a wheelchair for days on end and would have taken a serum that induces temporary paralysis had the film's insurers allowed him to do so.

"This is typical Cruise behavior — for 'Top Gun' he went up in a jet (and did his own stunts for the rescue at sea sequence), for 'The Color of Money' he spent eight weeks learning to shoot pool and for 'Cocktail' he went to bartending school and tended bar a few night at a Manhattan hot spot."

In the 1990 film "Days of Thunder," for which Cruise wrote the original outline for the story and shares story credit with screenwriter Robert Towne, the actor worked with his current wife, Australian actress Nicole Kidman. The two have teamed up twice since then in "Far and Away" and in Kubrick's "Eyes Wide Shut," which opens today nationwide.

"They seemed like they were really in love," Barker said of their previous collaborations. "It shows in the movies that they do love each other."

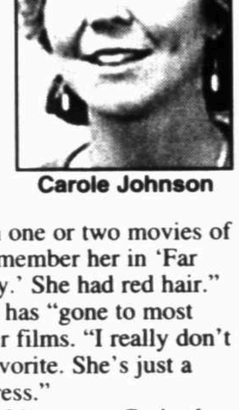

Since "Days of Thunder," Miss Kidman has been seen in such movies as "Dead Calm," Malice," "Peacemaker, "Portrait of a Lady," "Practical Magic" and "To Die For."

"She's never really struck me as a stand-up kind of actress; not one of the names that jumps up and grabs a hold of you," said Barker. "I really liked her in 'Practical Magic.' I liked the part she played. I think 'Practical Magic' was her breakthrough film."

Gary Flores also found Miss Kidman's role in "Practical Magic" with Sandra Bullock appealing. "I like that one. She's good looking."

Other Midlanders agree with Flores's assessment of Miss Kidman's looks.

"She's just gorgeous," said Mrs. Pallick. "She's a very good actress."

Carole Johnson

Mrs. Spear doesn't have a favorite film that she's seen Miss Kidman in. "I really don't. I've probably only seen one or two movies of hers. I remember her in 'Far and Away.' She had red hair."

Pallick has "gone to most all" of her films. "I really don't have a favorite. She's just a good actress."

During his career, Cruise has sought variety in the roles he has undertaken. After "Born on the Fourth of July," he starred in the 1992 release "A Few Good Men," the 1993 film "The Firm," and the 1996 films "Jerry Maguire" and "Mission Impossible."

Although Flores said he doesn't watch Cruise's movies "that much," he mentioned liking "Mission Impossible" and "Cocktail," saying, "'Mission Impossible' was a good movie, and 'Cocktail,' I just liked that one."

Perhaps the most startling role he has played came in 1994 when he appeared as Anne Rice's vampire Lestat in "Interview with the Vampire," also starring Brad Pitt.

"It was definitely different," said Barker. "It's not a role you expect Tom Cruise to be in. All together, it was a good movie that presented a different outlook on vampires in general."

The Cruise persona seems to be a mix of solid decision making skills, enthusiasm for and dedication to a project, the willingness to risk and the ability to act.

"I like him because he never plays a super hero that can karate 15 people and hasn't had a scratch on him," Jack Pallick said. "He's a good actor."

"His looks," said Mrs. Spear. "But personally, I probably wouldn't like him as a person based on the most recent movie he did (Eyes Wide Shut). The nudity stuff. It's hard to respect actors that do that."

Although Cruise is not one of Ms. Pallick's "favorites," she described him as "a terrific actor. There is no doubt about that. I really don't think he's that attractive, but he's a great actor. But don't get me wrong, he's not ugly."

"He's a pretty good actor," Allen said. "He seems like a young squire type, clean cut most of the time."

Perhaps Kathy Alexander gave his the greatest compliment when she said, "'Jerry Maguire' is the first video and the only video I have ever bought.

"I have loved Tom Cruise since I saw him dancing in his underwear in 'Risky Business.' He had that cute little-boy look. And, in 'Jerry Maguire,' I liked him because you can see him grow from a boy to a man that will accept responsibilities."

Midland Reporter-Musicgram

My name is Max Howard-, and music is my business. Good jazz is very strong in the Permian Basin as it has been for as long as most of us can remember.

There is a theory that if you can "sing it or hum it, you can enjoy it. If you can't, it's not worth listening to anyway." My objective today is to speak of the music that is worth listening to.

Howard

Take for instance an album by Harry Allen that has been available since 1996 — in Japan. John Pizzarelli gave me a copy — Japanese with all of the language characters in the liner notes — in 1996, but copyright laws did not permit its release in this country until recently. Many of you have met Harry and heard him at the Midland and Odessa jazz gatherings. Now this album is available in the United States and well worth the listening.

The title of the album is "Harry Allen Meets the John Pizzarelli Trio" and the last selection, "Limehouse Blues," is worth the price. Also, "These Foolish Things" ain't no slouch either. The other 11 selections are well up to the standards of Harry and the Pizzarelli Trio's reputation.

And get ready for another album along the same musical lines that is already in release.

Now I want to extract one of the John Pizzarelli Trio members for a listener's delight if you are not already there. The release is called "The Kennedy Brothers" and represents Ray Kennedy, pianist with the John Pizzarelli Trio, with his brother, rather than the usual recordings available that include Ray.

Most of the jazz clan in our area are aware of Ray's magnificent quality from his keyboard work, but I hear a closer representation of his own ability toward being a stand-out performer on his own when I listen to the Kennedy Brothers' offering.

On the album, Ray takes "Soft Winds," Benny Goodman's composition, and makes it almost his own. "Secret Love" is not to be denied its daffodil in listening either. With Ray on piano, brother Tom Kennedy on bass, and Todd Strait on percussion, this is another listen to "many times again" album.

Ray is super, and his brother, Tom, adds a close-relation musical experience that apparently both enjoyed — and so does the listener. All selections are familiar but with a new Kennedy interpretation, and that is what jazz is all about — is it not?

These albums are just samples of some of the greatest things we have to offer to the world today. Do remember that good jazz is not played, it is felt — by the musician and the listener.

I am, Max-.

Max Howard- hosts Breakfast in ... Jazz from 7 to 10 a.m. Saturdays on AM 1510 KMND and Cox Cable Channel 2 and co-host of Daybreak on KMND weekdays. He also writes and speaks for money or a good dinner or just a big, hearty hug and thank you. He signs off his column with the following: "Don't applaud ... throw money." KUBRICK: Many of director's films now out on VHS, DVD formats almost encouraged.

But they also have heroes.

Most of Kurbrick's films were rereleased on VHS and DVD formats in late June and are available at many local video stores for sale or rent.

"Barry Lyndon"

Ryan O'Neal stars as an Irish rogue determined to sleep his way into nobility.

O'Neal gives one of his best performances ever in this 1975 film. Its slow pace does not detract from it at all. A beautiful period film ideal for fans of "Dangerous Liasons."

"A Clockwork Orange"

A teen whose hobbies include rape, robbery and listening to classical music signs up for radical brainwashing therapy while in prison. Malcolm McDowell is delightfully nasty as the misbegotten youth.

A skillfully sculpted social satire, this movie is just as lethal as it was in 1971.

"Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb"

An Air Force general goes insane at the height of the Cold War and sends his bombers to destroy the U.S.S.R.

This might be Kubrick's masterpiece. A rolicking black comedy with Peter Sellers playing three characters to the hilt. The closing scene with Slim Pickens is one of the most memorable in film history.

"Full Metal Jacket"

Follows a Marine from basic training to a combat unit in Vietnam. This 1987 film is about the hearts of men facing their own mortality and the madness it can create within them while at war.

R. Lee Ermey, a real former drill instructor, and Vincent D'Onofrio give vibrant, powerful performances in the first half of the film about training on Parris Island.

The film then shifts to Vietnam, where it loses steam. Possibly overshadowed by Oliver Stone's "Platoon" the year before, some of the battle scenes lose their surprise. Still a must see.

"The Killing"

A complicated race track heist is foiled by a host of unforseen mishaps. Quentin Tarantino must have had Kubrick's1957 classic film in mind when he wrote "Reservoir Dogs." An eccentric group of characters played to perfection by an ensemble cast.

"Lolita"

Loosely based on the Vladimir Nabokov novel, a stolid British professor falls for a precocious 16-year-old and marries her mother to be near her. The performances of Shelley Winters as the trashy, overbearing mother and Peter Sellers as Clare Quilty make this worthwhile.

"Paths of Glory"

A general randomly selects three of his men to be tried and executed for cowardice after a battle charge fails.

Kubrick's 1957 gem uses World War I as the backdrop for a story based on fact. The first of Kubrick's trilogy dealing with the military, war and the insanity they can create.

"The Shining"

Kubrick's 1980 adaptation of the Stephen King novel.

Stars Jack Nicholson as Jack Torrence, a writer who takes a job caretaking an isolated Colorado resort. His wife and clairvoyant young son tag along. Torrence starts hearing the voice of a former hotel employee, who is encouraging Torrence to murder his family.

Originally panned by many critics, this film survived to achieve cult classic status. Most of the thanks for that go to Jack Nicholson's performance. Far better than the 1997 TV remake.

"Spartacus"

A slave leads a revolt against the Roman Empire.

KIrk Douglas stars in this 1960 epic tale of rebellion. A bathing scene with Tony Curtis and Lawrence Olivier created some controversy when the fully restored version was released in 1991. and the battle scenes haven't aged well, but still a fine film.

"2001: A Space Odyssey"

A mysterious monolith is uncovered on the moon and a crew — in a ship controlled by an 'intelligent' computer — is sent to investigate.

A harsh look at the possibility that evolution was generated by an artificial intelligence. Still a visual marvel 31 years after its original release, it is best viewed on a big screen.

The HAL9000 computer is probably one of the most villainous characters ever created. The unblinking red eye never showed mercy, yet wound up begging for his own life.

THE MOVIE GUYS'

Black Gold Review

A gusher: good to excellent

Dry well: Fair to poor

By David R. Allen, MC drama instructor, and Tim Jebsen, MCT executive director

"American Pie", starring Jason Biggs, Chris Klein, Tara Reid, Shannon Elizabeth and Eugene Levy, opened nationwide this past week.

TIM: Every once in a while, we are privileged to attend a frank and funny movie that is as American as hot dogs and Chevrolets. Fortunately, "American Pie" turns out to be as fun as it is funny. It's the story of four high school seniors trying to score at their senior prom before graduating. It's the material from which many a bad movie has been made.

Fortunately, this great movie makes all the right moves to score.

DAVID: Tim, you are correct when you say that this material forms the basis of many a bad movie. Unfortunately, this is one of them. "American Pie" relies on every hackneyed cliché about teenagers, beer and sex. The only reason one might want to see this movie is to catch a few good performances by the next generation of actors. Of particular note are Chris Klein, as Oz, who also did well in "Election" and Chris Owen, as Sherman, whose work in"October Sky" reflects what he can do with a really good script. However, except for a few moments of sweetness, an original idea about computer voyeurism, and a gag (figurative and literal) about a bodily fluid reminiscent of last summer's "Something About Mary," "American Pie" doesn't compare favorably with other comedies in current release.

TIM: Although both "Notting Hill" and "Austin Powers" should appeal to a wide variety of audience members, "American Pie" has more hard core laughs than either of these movies, and will be especially pleasing to the teenage audience. When I attended this movie, an audience filled with people in their 20s and 30s was rolling in the aisles — I should know as I was rolling there too. The only problem — an R rating will limit who can attend this movie.

DAVID: No doubt this movie will appeal to a younger audiences. Isn't it interesting that the two movies clearly designed to appeal to that audience, "South Park" and "American Pie," both rely so heavily on crude language and sexuality that they warrant an R rating? Is this a problem, or have I finally forgotten what it is like to be young?

TIM: Generation X does not have a hang up with crude language and situations. I think we may have discovered a movie, David, that defines our age differences. I would agree that the over 40 crowd may not care for the tone of this humor. If you still remember the horror and heart ache of young lust, then this movie will appeal to you. It has good performances, and a strong script and many funny moments. This movie will gush all across the nation throughout the summer. A full throttled gusher!

DAVID: Tim, as a Baby Boomers who came of age with Mel Brooks, Lenny Bruce, George Carlin, Cheech and Chong, and Richard Pryor, those of us over forty are far from being "hung up" with crude language and situations. Besides, I really do remember the horror and heartache of young lust and middle age lust for that matter. Shouldn't a good movie be ageless anyway? More to the point, I am just tired of a summer comedy season that has been full of little else but gross-outs, bodily function jokes, and infantile humor. Can't we please have more movies like "Notting Hill" that appeal to our thoughtful, warmhearted, kinder and gentler selves? With that in mind, I advise my fellow Boomers and the rest of you who can legally get in to to see "American Pie" to stay away from this dry hole.

One gusher (Tim) and one dry hole (David).

'Big Daddy': Not a must-see, but good for lazy afternoon

By Emily Baker

When a comedy movie is even only sort-of funny these days, it's very refreshing. "Big Daddy" is one of those movies; sort-of funny, but good nonetheless.

Adam Sandler stars as Sonny Koufax, a law school graduate who now works as a toll-booth operator. One day in October, a 5-year-old boy, Julian, shows up at his doorstep with a note saying his mother can no longer take care of him. Due to some circumstances, Sonny ends up taking care of Julian, and so the story begins.

The parts of the movie that are actually funny come from a nameless homeless man played by Steve Buscemi, and an immigrant delivery guy played by Rob Schneider. Buscemi starred with Sandler in "Airheads," and proved to be a much better actor in "Big Daddy." He portrays his character with style, claiming more personality than most homeless people do in the movies, and though his lines offered perfect opportunity for sappiness, he never falls into the trap. Schneider's character does his best to help Sonny, but things don't always work out and often offer some needed laughs.

The rest of the "comedy" is in the form of teaching a 5-year-old cuss words, and urinating on public property, which happens at least five times in the hour and 15 minute movie.

Sonny does have an enemy, and their relationship generates some laughs. George of the Jungle's Leslie Mann plays Corinne, a podiatrist who used to work for Hooters. Sonny's and Corinne's insults to each other never get old, but really aren't too funny.

The end of the movie might leave you wondering what happened if you don't notice the wedding band on Sonny's hand. In fact, the entire ending kind of flies by and wraps the story up in a hurry.

"Big Daddy" isn't that funny, but it definitely pulls the ol' heartstrings. The characters are charming, and Julian has got to be the cutest on the silver screen this summer. Julian, played by "Grace Under Fire's" identical twins Cole and Dylan Sprouse, believes in super-heroes and has a bit of a small-child's trouble with talking.

"Big Daddy" is a good movie for a lazy afternoon, but not a must-see. My advice, wait until it goes to the dollar-movie or rent it when it gets to video.

Volunteer: Sense of humor important

By Lana Cunningham

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Bill Mewhorter, a retired bank officer, puts his skills to work as a volunteer — a "Pink Gent" — for Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

Leaning over the windowsill "desk," the man scrutinized figures on the narrow pieces of paper before clipping them together.

Bill Mewhorter jokes that he has come a long way in his retirement. As a bank officer, he enjoyed a large executive office and private restroom. Today, as treasurer of Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, he scrunches his tall body under the "desk" made of a board stretched across the windowsill, his chair often being hit from behind by the storage closet door.

Serving as treasurer of the hospital auxiliary is one of those numerous volunteer jobs Mewhorter performs that keep interrupting the naps he plans but seldom can take. He enjoys working on the computer at least two hours a day, volunteers at the Confederate Air Force, turns the dials on his ham radio set and also spends a few hours each day at the hospital.

"I have my occasional coffee breaks with my buddies, usually radio guys. Other than that, it's pretty dull," he deadpanned, then added, "I have a hard time finding time to read. An occasional nap is mandatory."

Mewhorter worked 42 years in the banking industry before retiring in 1989 from what had been The First National Bank of Midland when he first joined it. Today, he jokes that he worked for four banks and never left that building.

His light-hearted personality has made Mewhorter a stand-out. Few people can be in his presence five minutes without laughing. The Minnesota-born Mewhorter said he inherited that sense of humor from his Irish-born mother who immigrated to the United States as a young woman. Not only did her heavy Irish brogue make her memorable, but also her levity.

Growing up, however, wasn't one big laugh. His parents moved to Amarillo in 1935. "It was the middle of the Dust Bowl; it was terrible." Mewhorter left in 1942 at the age of 17 to join the Navy. After World War II, he attended Texas College of Mines (now University of Texas at El Paso), on an athletic scholarship, playing football and basketball. He graduated in 1948 with a bachelor of business administration degree.

Not knowing what he really wanted to do, Mewhorter found himself low on cash and went to the employment office in El Paso. He was sent to State National Bank, where the economics major found a job as a teller.

Banking was a different world 50 years ago, he recalled. "People didn't really have checking accounts back then. People got their paycheck and came in and cashed them. They paid their bills with cash. When stores brought their deposits, it was all in cash." Numerous tellers were needed to handle that cash.

Today, he joked, "I tell people my banker is Mr. 1-800."

While in El Paso, he was married to Anne, and the couple will celebrate a golden wedding anniversary next year. "Anne is a really nice person. She still laughs at my stuff."

After 18 years in El Paso, the couple moved to Roswell, N.M., for three years before heading east to Midland in 1966.

About 15 years ago, Mewhorter turned on to the ham radio hobby. He had served as a radioman in the Navy, and after talking with a local ham radio operator one day, his interest was kindled. "I studied and got my license. I've talked to people all over the world."

He uses that talent as a volunteer with the CAF during the October Air Show. As chair of the communications committee, his volunteers handle all radio communications on the base during the show, Mewhorter said. "I enjoy seeing all those old planes. Even as a kid, I daydreamed about flying," said the volunteer who eventually studied and earned his pilot's license. He flew his own plane for many years. "I always loved flying. I can remember my Dad taking me out to watch the barnstormers when they would come through Amarillo. That must have been about 1937 or '38."

And then there's the computer, where he spends at least two hours each day. "It's fascinating." Like the ham radio, Mewhorter uses the computer to communicate with people in other parts of the world, including a daughter in Florida.

He also utilizes a computer program to keep the Auxiliary's accounts updated. "Primarily, the job as treasurer involves keeping track of the receipts from sales in the Gift Shop. I count the money, make deposits and pay the bills." His second term as treasurer expires in September, and he's planning to turn the job over to someone else.

Mewhorter was directed to the Auxiliary by his wife, who has been involved about 20 years. Known as a Pink Gent, he first started in Surgery Waiting Room one morning a week. "Being my age, I run into a lot of old friends and acquaintances up there. I enjoy the contact with these people and with the hospital staff."

With his work as treasurer and in the Surgery Waiting Room, Mewhorter finds himself at the hospital at least three times a week. On other days, he picks up the mail and drops it by the office.

Mewhorter works to keep his mind active — the computer, the ham radio, the crossword puzzles, the volunteer positions. Those aren't the only ingredients to staying young, he contended.

"A sense of humor will keep you young. It's the greatest thing in the world," he said before returning to his windowsill desk.

Hospice provides care for seriously ill, their families

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

The term "hospice" dates from medieval times, when it was used to describe a place supplying food, rest and shelter plus aid for sick and tired travelers (ill crusaders) returning from religious pilgrimages. The tradition has continued to this day in the form of St. Bernard dogs in the Swiss Alps rendering succor to one and all.

The modern concept was founded in 1960 by Dame Cicely Saunders in England. Midland proved to be fertile ground for this idea in 1980 when Bishop Hulsey established a search committee composed of priests, physicians, nurses pharmacists, lawyers and financiers to garner first-hand all information on this subject worldwide.

This resulted in Hospice of Midland, the initial home health care in West Texas and among the first such institutions serving as a role model for Texas and the nation. Its humanitarian and nonprofit nature appealed to all aspects of Midland's residents who provide outstanding support as volunteers along with financial aid, thus enabling it to be the country's only non-profit hospice.

As with all worthwhile projects, it inspired the creation of several others, including Family Hospice, Vista Hospice, Home Hospice, all helping to answer the need. About 3,000 hospices now exist in the United States, serving 450,000 patients with more than 70,000 volunteers contributing more than 5,000,000 hours of service.

To qualify for hospice, patients must accept that their life expectancy will be less than six months, whether due to cancer or end-stage medical conditions with no reasonable hope of remission.

Hospice is far superior to ordinary nursing homes or ordinary home health care, which provide no volunteers or counseling and are not governed by Federal Hospice standards.

Hospice care covers not only the patients, but also the patients' families. The staff consists of a physician, a registered nurse, a social worker, a homemaker, clergy and trained volunteers.

It is comfort oriented, keeping the patients pain free yet alert if possible. Volunteers help the patient and his or her family cope with the pervading sense of loneliness and fear of abandonment. Bereavement counseling, when indicated, can continue for at least a year after the patient's death.

It is important that the hospice is certified by Medicare. Care is a covered benefit under Medicare, and about 36 states (including Texas) offer coverage under Medicaid.

Access provides pay for medical equipment such as catheters, dressings and special therapies such as speech, occupational, respiratory and musical as ordered by the physician. Telephone support is available day and night.

Thank God and all His able cohorts for creating a guiding light to ameliorate man's darkest hour!

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Manor Park Inc.

FAMILY MATTERS

Blending two families into one can be challenge

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I have been married to my husband barely a year. He has three teen-age girls from his first marriage and I have a son (3 years old) from my first.

May

His girls hate me and are rude to me whenever I answer the telephone. I have only seen them at a distance and have never actually met them (they didn't want to meet me). I do have to admit that I had been seeing their father before his divorce was final (BIG mistake), so they blamed me for the divorce.

Their mother has been civil to me (she knows I'm not the cause), but she was so upset at the time that they moved to (another city in Texas).

Now the big problem: I have never ever been around these girls and they are supposed to come and visit for two weeks at the end of July. How am I supposed to deal with them? I think that they hate me without even knowing me.

I have talked to my husband about all of this, and he just buries his head in the sand. He thinks that it will be fine because I'll be at work most of the day and they can stay at home with my son. He wants them to get to know him (plus save himself some money).

I don't think that would be a good idea, do you? Leaving a 3-year-old with three strange girls who don't like his mother has got to be a problem.

I'm open to any suggestions you can give. This thing has "DISASTER" written all over it. WORRIED BIG TIME

DEAR WORRIED: You reason to be worried. Looking at the easiest one first — I suggest you leave your son with your present day care arrangements. After you have had an opportunity to evaluate the situation with you and him and the girls, you may consider your son staying with them for half the day, if appropriate. Too many unknowns in this situation make it unwise to subject his daughters and your son to this situation "sight unseen."

Discuss the visit plan in great detail with your husband. You may assume that his daughters will harbor ill-feelings towards you. His girls have had their entire world turned upside down — losing their father, friends, home, school, activities, church, etc. — all at once. To make things worse, they had no say or decision-making in these life-altering decisions. So yes, they will most likely be upset.

You can help them by understanding their pain, which will most likely be expressed as anger towards you and perhaps your son.

You and your husband should create a written plan for their visit, including a list of possible things to go and do. He should plan on activities with each girl individually and as a group, and then (fewer) activities with all of you together. So many distant parents forget that when their children visit, they must rearrange schedules to make the visit special for the children.

Include regular — maybe even daily — family meetings to discuss what went on that day and plans for the next day. Establish some forum where safe discussion can be conducted, which will give you and your husband an opportunity to be proactive rather than reactive. If there are problems during the day, changes can be made for the next. For example, three teen-aged girls will probably find hanging out at home for two weeks to be boring. And that can result in even more anger. Your husband may want to consider taking home time to do some activities with them.

With effort and creativity, you and your husband can help his girls deal with some of their pain, as well as form new and positive relationships. Most kids do want to like and be liked by their parents and step-parents.

A final thought: Go to the library or bookstore and find some books on blended families for you and your husband. This is a well-researched subject with many good ideas and tips available to improve the transition. Good Luck!

DEAR ABBY

Widower has trouble getting on with life

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Like so many of those who write to you, I have been involved for quite a while with a married man who keeps making promises about our future together, but those promises are never kept. The difference is, this one is married — to a corpse. She's been dead for 2-1/2 years, and he still can't let go and get on with his life.

Van Buren

For almost a year, he promised we'd spend a weekend together; however, by Thursday, he always had a reason to cancel. When we finally did get together for a weekend, he walked out and got another motel room where he and the ghost could spend the night together, while I cried my eyes out alone in the king-size bed in my room. Do you have any idea how much rejection there is in learning that the man you love would rather sleep with his memories than with you?

I finally persuaded him to get counseling, but he's still doing the same things: promising we have a future together, then squelching any plans for physically consummating our relationship. He insists he doesn't need Viagra, that he's capable of doing it, but then he comes up with another hokey excuse why he can't make time for a weekend together.

He's really a nice man, Abby. He treats me well and has a delightful sense of humor. He'd be the perfect companion if he could just accept that his wife is dead, she's not coming back, and he's not cheating on her if he sleeps with another woman. What should I do? — SEXLESS IN SEATTLE

DEAR SEXLESS: If you love him, give him a little more time. My experts tell me that he could be suffering from pathological grief. In most people, the grieving process lasts about one year — but if it lasts longer than that it requires professional help. I don't know how long this man has been in counseling, but if it has been any length of time and he still has not progressed in mourning (mourning is the reparative process associated with grief) — then he should consult another professional counselor. His inability to be intimate with you sexually may have nothing to do with sexuality, but rather overwhelming mourning and overwhelming guilt. If he's as terrific as you say he is, he's worth waiting for a little longer.

"How do you get down to business when you can barely walk?"

The future of my store was on the line. And my knee was killing me. That's when my doctor said I needed surgery.

Knee surgery is hard enough without worrying about whether or not your business will survive while you're gone. So I breathed a sigh of relief when I found out I was going to Memorial Hospital for surgery and rehabilitation.

The experienced staff took good care of me. They had the equipment and know-how to put me back on my feet fast. And they even worked my rehab appointments around my busy schedule.

I had no business being in pain. But, thanks to Memorial Hospital, I'm back to my old routine – and business is booming.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, July 16, 1999:

Be willing to make changes in areas of your life with which you aren't satisfied. You know better than anyone where you are being pushed beyond your limits. Take better care of yourself emotionally, professionally and physically. However, avoid any radical diet or health changes. If you are single, a relationship could be weighty and demand more commitment than you are willing to give. However, another option or person could easily come around the bend. Know what you want, then you will make the proper choice! If attached, work as a team. Keep the lines of communication flowing. VIRGO helps you get your message across.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Sometimes even you get tired of the work ethic. Changing plans doesn't suit you, but you know what you have to do. Finances seem tight right now. Mix in a long lunch or promise yourself a special indulgence once you're done. Tonight: Schedule a massage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ A problem with an associate challenges you. Slow and steady is your best course. Tap into your ingenuity; you'll find ways of bypassing the immediate situation. A flirtation that has been building puts pressure on you. Tonight: Make fun happen!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Deciding to be a recluse just might be the way to go. Get work done. Consider a home office; you might need it in order to flourish professionally. Your intuition helps you deal with your own feelings and a domestic matter. Tonight: Order in.

CANCER (Jun. July 22)
★★★★ Work is busy, with the amount of phone calls that come in and the number of people seeking you out. Popularity peaks. Establish new ground rules. Make time for a gathering of friends; you need a break. You set the pace. Tonight: TGIF!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Check out what is going on with a child or loved one. An emotional and/or financial risk would be best not taken. Walk a more conservative line. Be aware of the demands of your profession. Think seriously about the image you are projecting. Invest in your future, rather than taking a gamble. Tonight: Make a must appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A family member kicks up his heels and lets you know how he feels. Managing personal and domestic matters presents a challenge, but it's one you can handle. Magnetism is high; with compassion and understanding, you'll become a sure winner. Tonight: As you like it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ A misunderstanding arises from nowhere. You have a difficult time convincing another that you are right. Listen to feedback. Be willing to take a leap of faith. A partner might be overly serious, but he certainly means well. Tonight: Spend time with your best friend.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Remain directed, but recognize the cost of a project. You might be going way overboard right now. You often go to extremes simply because it's in your nature! Friends who generally support your wildness could blow a whistle. Tonight: Bring special people together.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ You might have to deny a few pleasures right now in order to complete your work and please a superior. You might not be happy about what is happening. Still, recognize the value of endurance. Think about an exercise program to up your energy. Meanwhile, a steady pace is best. Tonight: Handle responsibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Allow creativity to surge forth. You might be very serious about a fun project. Infuse more laughter and joy into your life. Make plans to take off in the near future. A lot is presented to you; picking and choosing is a different story! Schedule a seminar or workshop. Tonight: Take off ASAP.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Matters involving a friendship could be most disappointing. Lighten up! Know what you want and where you are going. A partner, however, remains key to your security and well-being. Deciding to share important feelings and thoughts requires a commitment. Tonight: Get cozy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Express your ideas, even though a boss may put them down right now. If you're unhappy at work, consider making a change. Explore options with those you trust. You make headway and can finally break a difficult pattern. Initiating talks might not be easy, but it is important. Tonight: Accept an invitation out.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	2◇	2♠	3♣
3♡	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

West's problem is simple. You know how to defeat the contract, but how do you get the message across to partner?

Note North's and East's bidding. Not only did North deem the hand worth a free raise — a must when you hold four-card support for partner's major — but he then judged that the double fit and king in the overcaller's suit rated a jump to game. East's lead-directing bid of three clubs en route to raising diamonds is also worthy of emulation.

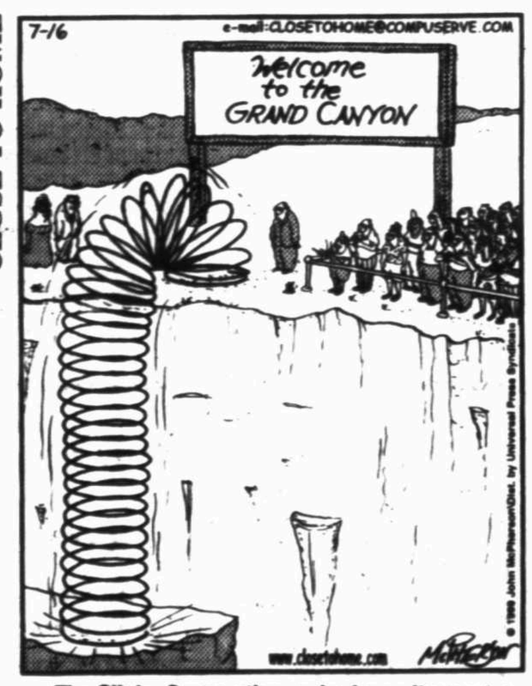

West led the queen of clubs and continued the suit. East took the king and ace, and West had to find the right discard to ensure the contract's demise.

Just looking at dummy, it is obvious how the contract can be defeated. All East has to do is lead a fourth club, and the queen of trumps will be promoted to the setting trick. However, East does not know this and, unless told what to do, will probably shift to a diamond. That would normally be good enough, but what if declarer is void in diamonds?

West's first thought was to discard a low diamond. While that discourages a diamond return — a play that partner might not heed — it could suggest a heart shift, something West did not want. Then the light dawned — West discarded the ace of diamonds!

With the king in dummy, a diamond shift was out of the question. West's unusual action alerted East to the need for drastic action, and another club was now obvious. Whether South ruffed high or low, the queen of spades became the setting trick.

Harrelson's father to get new hearing

SAN ANTONIO — Woody Harrelson's father will get another hearing in his battle to have his murder conviction overturned.

Attorneys for Charles Harrelson will focus on whether his original defense failed to reveal other plausible suspects, including a San Antonio lawyer, in the slaying of a federal judge. Harrelson's lawyers also argue that prosecutors concealed evidence that could have led to an acquittal.

On Monday, U.S. District Judge Orlando Garcia ruled that Harrelson will get a hearing in September in Denver. He has served 16 years on a life term for the 1979 slaying of Judge John Wood Jr. in San Antonio.

Prosecutors said Harrelson was hired by a drug dealer facing trial before Wood. Harrelson claimed he was in Dallas at the time.

BANGKOK, Thailand — Leonardo DiCaprio is starring in a new ruckus in Thailand — Customs officials want a piece of his gift to a school.

Last year, activists began hounding DiCaprio because they claimed his movie "The Beach" caused environmental damage to an island.

Now Customs officers have seized a parcel containing 120 videotapes DiCaprio sent to students at a private school on the outskirts of Bangkok. The officials said $324 in duty is owed, but the school doesn't have the money, the Thai Rath newspaper reported Thursday.

The videos are mostly a profile of the star and copies of "Titanic."

A spokesman for DiCaprio was unavailable for comment.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Getting the boot in Hollywood isn't always a bad thing.

Kirk Douglas, James Garner and the late DeForest Kelley are among this year's recipients of Golden Boot Awards honoring the best in Westerns, organizers said Thursday.

The 17th annual awards presentation is scheduled for Aug. 7, at a gala dedicated to the late Gene Autry and benefiting the Motion Picture & Television Fund.

Presenters will be James Coburn, Henry Darrow, Dennis Weaver, Fess Parker and Janet Leigh.

LOS ANGELES — Sting is recording a new version of the Oscar-winning song "The Windmills of Your Mind," the theme of "The Thomas Crown Affair," for Pierce Brosnan's remake of the movie.

"Sting is an amazing artist and a great friend. His daring musical career and personal fearlessness in life echo some of the themes of this film," Brosnan said Wednesday in a statement.

Brosnan plays a billionaire who steals a Monet painting, then falls in love with the investigator, played by Rene Russo, who is trying to solve the crime.

It's a remake of the Steve McQueen and Faye Dunaway movie, which got the best song Oscar in 1968 for composer Michel Legrand and lyricists Alan and Marilyn Bergman.

LOS ANGELES — Marilyn McCoo and Billy Davis Jr. say they're still going strong after 30 years of marriage.

The couple, who met as members of The Fifth Dimension in 1967 and later won a Grammy as a duo for "You Don't Have To Be A Star," celebrate their anniversary on July 26.

"I credit our friendship. We went into this marriage like everyone else — we loved each other, we were friends, we fought and we had emotional problems," Davis said Wednesday.

"But our commitment to each other was so strong that we just didn't want to do it without each other. Plus, we have the Lord in our lives, and that's an important part of our relationship."

Ms. McCoo said starting off as friends was a big part of their success.

"You can't spend this many years with another person if you don't like them," she said.

SCIO TOWNSHIP, Mich. — Jeff Daniels bared his buns on the ninth hole to raise money for his Purple Rose Theater.

Daniels wore a kilt and lifted it upon request Tuesday during the wacky Comedy Golf Jam, which raised $110,000 for the project in the actor's hometown of Chelsea.

Not only did Daniels bare his backside — he offered it up for photographs. The tournament also featured players in their underwear and the chance to putt through cow pies.

Generals ambush 'Hounds, 18-6

Jay Peden
Sports Writer

In the first 90-plus games of their season, the Jackson Generals scored as much as seven runs in an inning only once. On Thursday night at Christensen Stadium, they matched that feat twice.

The Generals scored 10 runs in the second inning and seven in the sixth on their way to an 18-6 beating of the Midland RockHounds. Jackson manager Jim Pankovits wasn't too surprised that his team had that kind of outburst at this stadium.

"The likelihood of that happening here is as good as anywhere," Pankovits said. "The conditions were right."

The wind was blowing out fairly strong to center field at Christensen. The Generals got only one homer out of it — a three-run shot by J.J. Johnson in the second — but they also hit five doubles. Johnson added a three-run double in the sixth inning to give him six RBIs — production which he doubted he'd equalled in any other game this year.

"I went up there with a plan and stayed aggressive," said Johnson. "Our guys were being really aggressive in the strike zone. We (didn't swing) at bad pitches, and we were aggressive when we got good pitches.

"Hitting is contagious," he added.

Hitting may be contagious, but the one who must have felt ill after the game was Midland's starting pitcher Randy Niles. He started with a perfect first inning, then couldn't get anyone out in the second. Two singles and a walk led to Ric Johnson's two-run double, then J.J. Johnson followed with his three-run homer.

After that, Niles didn't get much help from his defense. Shortstop Josue Espada, who played Wednesday night in the Double-A All-Star game in Moblie, Ala., made errors on back-to-back plays, allowing the inning to go on longer. In all, Niles faced 11 batters in the second and didn't retire one.

Chris Gorrell relieved Niles and immediately coaxed a double play. He got out of the second without any more damage, then pitched three more scoreless innings before getting into trouble in the sixth. The Generals started the sixth with three straight hits, putting them well on their way to a seven-run inning.

Pankovits seemed more impressed with how

Get ready for new umpires

■ Major Legue Baseball officials say they're prepared to replace resigned umpires.

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — As umpires began what might be the final eight weeks of their baseball careers, management officials said they are prepared to let the men in blue resign en masse and replace them all.

And in an escalation of the conflict, officials of the Major League Umpires Association planned a conference call Friday with minor league umpires that could lead to a walkout by them.

Pat Campbell, a lawyer for the umpires, said 220 of the 230 minor league umpires had voted to form a union but management refused to negotiate with it.

"If they decided to walk out, I would assume it would happen sooner rather than later," Campbell said Thursday.

Sandy Alderson, executive vice president of baseball operations in the commissioner's office and a foe of umpires union head Richie Phillips, said the minor league move was expected.

"I'm not surprised by it," Alderson said. "I heard he might make an effort like this in the near future."

At some major league ballparks, including Yankee Stadium, The Ballpark in Arlington and the Oakland Alameda County Coliseum, umpires were booed when they took the field Thursday night.

"We're going to get killed. Sandy Alderson has bashed us, and people believe what they read or see," National League umpire Ed Montague said. "They're going to believe the umpires are always the bad guys. We're on the bottom of the list."

Baseball officials said they are not inclined to challenge the umpires' decision to quit over the tension that began when Roberto Alomar spat at an ump in 1996.

"It's sad. It's very, very sad," commissioner Bud Selig said. "I will have plenty to say in the future."

While baseball is leaning toward hiring a new set of umpires, Selig will make the final decision, said several officials who spoke on the condition they not be

Former greenskeeper survives carnage at Carnoustie for lead

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland — Tiger Woods trudged down the home stretch in the first round of the British Open, locked in his own world as he tried to get off Carnoustie Golf Links with a minimal amount of damage. That was no small task Thursday.

What finally caught his attention was not the rough that resembled wheat fields, not the haunting echo of the wind off the Firth of Tay, not even the scantily dressed woman who ran onto the 18th green to give him a kiss.

No. What made him look up was a roar from the gallery. Somebody had made something called a birdie.

"I kind of rolled my head out of surprise, because I really hadn't heard anything today," Woods said.

The first round was not one for much cheering, especially for those who had to play.

At times, it was painful even to watch.

"You could seriously injure yourself," Woods said.

Indeed, Carnoustie Golf Links put a big hurt on the first round of the British Open, and the only player to match par was a former greenskeeper from Australia whom hardly anyone knows.

While defending champion Mark O'Meara and more than one-third of the field couldn't even break 80, Rodney Pampling made 11 straight pars and an eagle for a 71 and a one-stroke lead after the cruelest round in recent major championship history.

How tough?

Listen to David Duval, whose par on the 18th hole kept him from being one of 57 players to sign for an 80 or worse. Two players were in the 90s.

"If the average player had to play out there, he'd

O'Meara goes from champ to feeling like a chump

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland — The last time Mark O'Meara walked off the 18th green in the British Open he was holding the claret jug. On Thursday at Carnoustie Golf Links, he left in a state of shock.

It's not very often that a defending champion has to sign for an 83. It was no surprise that O'Meara walked briskly past reporters and took a few minutes to compose himself.

"Your pride is hurt a bit when you shoot in the 80s," he said. "I mean, I'm a professional."

Carnoustie had a way of making everyone look like amateurs in the first round. In the case of O'Meara, it made a champion feel like a chump.

Fierce winds off the Firth of Tay proved to be a lethal addition to a course reputed as the toughest in championship golf. O'Meara was not the only player who had a round in the 80s, nor was his the worst score of those who figured to put up a fight.

"I'm disappointed that I shot 83, but I tried on every shot," he said. "Tomorrow, all I can do is try to play a bit better and restore some of my pride."

O'Meara, who had to return the claret jug to the Royal & Ancient when he arrived in Carnoustie, showed quickly that he had no intention of taking it back home with him.

After a nice par save on the opening hole, O'Meara was even more wild off the tee than Seve Ballesteros, the three-time Open champion who played in the same threesome. Aside from putting, O'Meara didn't play a shot from the fairway until the third hole — and that was

Australians happy to see Sampras only playing doubles at Davis Cup

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Pete Sampras wasn't kidding, after all.

The Australians barely suppressed their glee Thursday when U.S. captain Tom Gullikson made it official at the Davis Cup draw: Sampras, arguably the greatest singles player in history, will play only doubles in the quarterfinal duel starting Friday.

Sampras chose team camaraderie over the common sense that his presence in singles would make the U.S. team stronger. Gullikson, forced to accept that decision, wore the worried look of a man who knew he would face a lifetime of second guesses if the gamble fails.

More than a few skeptics expected Gullikson to announce that Sampras had changed his mind, or had been persuaded by his teammates, to join the singles fray.

But when Gullikson submitted his lineup at noon — which cannot be changed except for injury — Sampras was posted in the doubles with Alex O'Brien, and Todd Martin and Jim Courier were posted for singles.

After tennis balls bearing the players' names were drawn from the magnificent silver Davis Cup, Martin was set to open against fast-rising 18-year-old Lleyton Hewitt on the hardcourt of the Longwood Cricket Club. That match will be followed by Courier vs. two-time U.S. Open champion Patrick Rafter.

In Saturday's doubles, Sampras and O'Brien will take on Mark Woodforde and Sandon Stolle.

On Sunday, Martin is scheduled to play Rafter before Courier takes on Hewitt.

"I am very sensitive as far as being here this week," said Sampras, who originally hadn't planned on playing Davis Cup this year, but changed his mind after being inspired by the U.S. team's victory over Britain in April.

"After what Jim and Todd did in England, the last thing I wanted to do was kind of come along and jump on the bandwagon. That is why I have said for the past couple of months that I was just going to play doubles. Jim and Todd deserve to play singles. They have shown, not only this year but the past couple of years, their commitment to Davis Cup. I haven't been in the same boat. ... I just never felt comfortable, two months ago, a month ago. I don't feel comfortable now."

Gullikson said the decision was made by "consensus" of all the players and himself. Martin said he would have stepped aside if Gullikson thought that would make the Former Midlander John Adams moved up in the standings Wednesday at the Liberty Mutual Texas State Open, shooting a 71 for a three-round total of 211, tying him for sixth place with one round to play.

Adams sits eight strokes behind the leader, Stuart Wallace at 203. Chad Campbell, formerly of Midland College, followed an excellent 64 Wednesday with a 77 Thursday to fall well off the pace at 213.

Northern Blue vs. Jim Parker

In a matchup of Odessa teams, Jim Parker defeated Floyd Gwin 11-1 Thursday in the 9-10 year old District 3 Little League Tournament at Butler Park. Midland's Northern Blue will face Jim Parker at 6 tonight at Butler Park for the district championship.

his pitchers handled prosperity than how his hitters exploded. Starter Bryan Braswell (6-5) went six innings, giving up four runs, and two relievers limited the 'Hounds to only two more runs.

"We were somehow able make some pitches — with Bryan Braswell — to keep them (the 'Hounds) from getting back in the game," Pankovits said. "There's been a few times that we've scored early, then let teams back in the ball game. That (Thursday's performance) was good to see."

The 'Hound highlights were few. T.R. Marcinczyk and Mario Encarnacion both hit their 17th homers of the season — Marcinczyk's was a three-run shot in the third inning, and Encarnacion's was a two-run job in the seventh. Willie Morales had an RBI double in the fourth inning. And Marcinczyk moved over from first base to pitch the ninth inning, giving up two hits but no runs.

'Boys gear up to negotiate with draft picks

By Clarence E. Hill Jr.
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — With training camp scheduled to begin in 10 days, Cowboys vice president Stephen Jones said the club will likely extend initial contract offers to their eight draft picks before the weekend.

Despite the short window, Jones said he expects to have all the players, including top pick Ebenezer Ekuban, signed and in camp on time. Rookies and selected veterans are scheduled to report to training camp in Wichita Falls on July 26.

"That's our goal," Jones said. "We've just got to get it done."

Jones won't have to worry about finding room under the league's $57.28 million salary cap to sign any picks. Jones said the Cowboys, who cleared $2 million by signing cornerback Deion Sanders to a new deal last month, have enough money to sign the rookies and still pursue some free agents before the start of the season Sept. 12.

Jones, however, plans to focus on Ekuban, the former North Carolina defensive end who is expected to get significant playing time in a rotation with Greg Ellis and Kavika Pittman.

Jones would not comment on what the Cowboys plan to offer Ekuban. Ekuban's agent, Marvin Demoff, was unavailable for comment.

A good benchmark for Ekuban, the 20th pick, is the contract Green Bay defensive end Vonnie Holliday, the 19th pick in 1998, signed last season. Holliday received a deal worth $5.61 million over five years, including a $3 million signing bonus. Playing-time incentives could increase the value of Ekuban's contract to $7.7 million.

UMPS: Umpires booed in Arlington identified.

"That reaction typifies the smugness, the arrogance that has led us to where we are, and it exemplifies the lack of appreciation for the umpires," Phillips said.

Phillips says umpires are caught in the fight over who will supervise them. Selig wants to shift authority after this year from the league presidents to Alderson.

Alderson is expected to take a harder approach with the umpires, who would get up to $400,000 each in severance pay.

"This is either a threat to be ignored, or an offer to be accepted," Alderson said after Phillips made his announcement Wednesday.

Phillips said he had submitted the resignations of 57 of the 68 major league umpires, effective Sept. 2, 4 1/2 weeks before the end of the regular season. The American and National League offices said Thursday they hadn't received them yet.

"I hope that doesn't happen, because that's when the pennant races start heating up and you want your best back there working the games," said catcher Jeff Reed, whose bumping incident with umpire Tom Hallion led to the latest escalation in tension.

Six of the remaining umpires will soon add their resignations, Phillips said. Three haven't been heard from and two, John Shulock and Darryl Cousins, aren't union members because they joined the AL staff as strikebreakers during the seven-week walkout in 1979.

If the umps do quit, owners could hire umpires from minor leagues, high schools and colleges, as they have during previous work stoppages. Phillips has attempted to organize minor league umpires.

Players agreed the quality of umpires would go down.

"It's a big difference, there's no doubt about it," Chicago Cubs first baseman Mark Grace said. "They are the best at what they do."

While hiring new umps, owners could use legal maneuvers to avoid or delay handing over $15 million in termination pay.

"When push comes to shove, the fans know the umpires are the real people of baseball," Phillips said. "They are not phonies; they go out and work hard. They are blue-collar workers, like the fans. The fans understand there's a certain amount of grime and grit that's associated with the job."

That's not the view held by some players. After umpire Greg Kosc had to leave in the middle of a game on a hot and humid afternoon earlier this month, New York Yankees catcher Jorge Posada said: "They're not prepared, they're not in shape. It's a shame."

Kosc was hospitalized, and Phillips said the umpire was diagnosed with diabetes.

"I'm sure they'd like every umpire to weigh 175 pounds," AL umpire Jim McKean said. "But that's not going to happen."

Posada apologized the day after his remark. Nonetheless, Phillips called him "a jerk."

"Greg Kosc, who doesn't have an ounce of body fat on him, is in better shape than Posada," he said. "But I think the relationship between the players and the umpires is good. There are some players who are jerks. There are some pitchers who make $11 million who think every pitch they throw is a strike."

It was unclear whether all umpires would follow through on their threat. In March, about 50 umpires voted to give Phillips a new five-year contract, but about a dozen voted against him, wanting to bring in Ron Shapiro, the agent for Cal Ripken and many other players.

Shapiro is much less confrontational in negotiations than Phillips, but Shapiro told umpires he wouldn't become involved as long as the majority of them backed their longtime leader.

Umpires have been angry since Alomar spat at John Hirschbeck three years ago and was suspended for five games, a punishment they deemed too lenient.

Houston Astros manager Larry Dierker signs autographs in his first game back Thursday in Houston. Dierker has been out since suffering a seizure during a June 13th game against the San Diego Padres.

Dierker back in Astros dugout

By Micheal A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Astros fans welcomed back Larry Dierker with a big Astrodome "aloha."

The manager, who missed a month following a seizure and brain surgery to repair malformed blood vessels, is fond of Hawaiian shirts. Some fans entered the Astrodome on Thursday night wearing Hawaiian shirts in tribute. The Astros distributed 10,000 leis to fans as part of the theme.

Dierker got a standing ovation when he appeared in the dugout shortly before the game and was greeted warmly by the umpiring crew when he took out the starting lineups.

One sign in left field read, "Welcome back Dirk." Another down the right-field line said: "Welcome back Wrangler," referring to a nickname given Dierker by Astros announcer Milo Hamilton.

"I'm not nervous but I've had this thought creeping up in my mind: Will I be the same when situations come up?" Dierker said before the Astros played the Detroit Tigers. "Sometimes they say the game is slow, but after the sixth inning, when you need a pinch-hitter, sometimes the decisions come quickly."

Dierker, who collapsed in the dugout June 13, tried to remember he wasn't viewing the game on television anymore.

"Watching at home, I could yell and scream, but in the dugout you want to give the impression that you are in control," he said. "In the dugout, you can't always see if the umpire blew it. On TV, you can tell and sometimes that can be really distressing."

Dierker reclaimed his No. 49 jersey, which had been hanging the Astros' dugout since his collapse.

"You see what he went through, and you see how badly he wants to be out here, and it makes you thrilled," Derek Bell said. "It's good that he's able to be out here and not stuck around the house screaming and hollering."

The Astros, 13-14 under interim manager Matt Galante, the team's bench coach, rallied from a 6-0 deficit to defeat the Tigers 8-6.

"My philosophy is to trust people to do the job and Mattie did," Dierker said. "One of the reasons you have a bench coach is if something like this happens. It's like having a vice president in a large corporation."

Dierker said he had answered about 500 cards that wished him well, and still had more responses to make.

"That has been the overwhelming part," Dierker said. "I can't even explain how it makes me feel. I think it helped me get healthy sooner."

Johnson can't escape jinx in loss to Texas Rangers

Associated Press

■ Baseball Roundup

ARLINGTON — Randy Johnson can't escape his jinx.

Mark McLemore's bases-loaded double with two outs in the ninth drove in all three Texas runs Thursday night, giving the Rangers a 3-2 victory over the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Johnson, who had pitched great his last four starts but got zero runs from his teammates, shut out Texas on six hits over eight innings. Newly acquired closer Matt Mantei replaced him to start the ninth and was the goat.

Mantei (1-3) got the first two outs on a strikeout and a comebacker, then became only the second major league pitcher ever to walk three straight pinch hitters.

McLemore got the count to 2-2 before driving the ball into the right-center field gap. Speedy right fielder Tony Womack couldn't get there in time for the catch, but he knocked it down.

Center fielder Steve Finley threw home, but Lee Stevens slid in before the ball arrived. McLemore, who had slid into second base, jumped up and joined a wild celebration in the middle of the diamond.

Mike Venafro (3-1), pitched a scoreless ninth for the victory.

Astros 8, Tigers 6

HOUSTON — In manager Larry Dierker's return to the dugout, Derek Bell hit a go-ahead, two-run single in the seventh inning as the Houston Astros overcame a six-run deficit to beat the Detroit Tigers.

Dierker collapsed in the dugout on June 13, and two days later had brain surgery to repair malformed blood vessels. Houston went 13-14 under interim manager Matt Galante, the team's bench coach.

Trever Miller (1-1) pitched a two-hit seventh for the victory, and Billy Wagner pitched the ninth for his 23rd save in 24 chances. Willie Blair (1-8) was the loser.

Red Sox 6, Phillies 4

BOSTON — Five homers flew out of Fenway Park on Thursday night as the Boston Red Sox held on for a 6-4 win over the Philadelphia Phillies two days after Mark McGwire and all the other All-Stars fell short of the fences.

Bobby Abreu's two-run homer in the sixth cut Boston's lead to 5-3 and drove winner Brian Rose (5-2) from the game. Brian Daubach, who had three RBIs, hit another leadoff homer, giving Boston a 6-3 lead in the seventh. Paul Byrd (11-6) was the loser.

Marlins 8, Blue Jays 6

TORONTO — Mike Lowell hit a tiebreaking RBI single in the ninth inning as the Florida Marlins continued their dominance in interleague play with a victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Billy Koch (0-1), who had allowed just one earned run in his previous 18 appearances, gave up a leadoff homer to Kevin Millar in the ninth that tied it 5-5. One out later, Preston Wilson singled, Danny Bautista doubled and Lowell followed with his go-ahead hit.

Braden Looper (2-1) pitched one-third of an inning for the win.

Reds 10, Rockies 7

CINCINNATI — Greg Vaughn homered and drove in three runs as the Cincinnati Reds pounded Darryl Kile and added to their one-month surge by beating the Colorado Rockies.

Cincinnati scored seven runs in the first three innings off Kile (5-8). Steve Parris (6-1) matched his career high for wins in a season by limiting Colorado to three runs — only one earned — in seven innings.

Mets 8, Devil Rays 7, 10 innings

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Roger Cedeno's RBI double in the 10th inning led the New York Mets over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

Cedeno, who was 2-for-5 with three RBIs, lined a 1-0 pitch over the head of center fielder Randy Winn, one out after Benny Agbayani doubled to left-center off Norm Charlton (0-1).

The Mets scored four runs in the seventh to go ahead 6-3 and took a 7-4 lead into the ninth before Armando Benitez (1-2) blew an opportunity for his seventh save.

Braves 6, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — In just the second-ever matchup of reigning Cy Young winners, Tom Glavine pitched the Atlanta Braves past Roger Clemens and the New York Yankees.

Behind Glavine (8-8), Atlanta won its third in a row in the meeting of first-place teams.

But Clemens (8-4) struggled, and the fans showed no sympathy. Still waiting for him to show his Hall of Fame stuff in pinstripes, they booed loudly when he was chased during a three-run seventh inning that left him with a 4.98 ERA.

Cubs 9, Twins 3

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa snapped out of a slump with his major-league leading 33rd homer and a double, and Henry Rodriguez hit a three-run shot as the Chicago Cubs beat the Minnesota Twins.

Sosa, who earlier snapped an 0-for-12 skid with a seventh-inning double, hit a two-run homer in the eighth off Bob Wells. It was Sosa's first homer since July 4. Scott Sanders (3-4) was the winner while Brad Radke (6-8) took the loss.

Indians 2, Pirates 0

PITTSBURGH — Bartolo Colon regularly hit 101 mph on the radar gun during eight shutout innings, extending his scoreless streak against Pittsburgh to 17 innings as the Cleveland Indians beat the Pirates.

Colon (8-3) was dominating after winning only once in his previous nine starts. He struck out eight and limiting the Pirates to three singles in his best start of the season.

Roberto Alomar's double in the third off Jason Schmidt (8-7) drove in both runs as Cleveland improved to 3-1 in Three Rivers Stadium.

Orioles 8, Expos 2

BALTIMORE — Albert Belle homered and drove in four runs and Sidney Ponson scattered 11 hits in his AL-high fourth complete game as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Montreal Expos.

Ponson (8-6) struck out three and walked four in earning his first victory since June 16. Mike Thurman (3-6), who gave up five runs in three innings, failed to reach the fifth inning for only the second time in 12 starts.

Woods gets hug, kiss by scantily clad woman

By Stephen Wade
AP Sports Writer

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland — What a reception Tiger Woods got on the 18th green in Thursday's first round of the British Open.

As Woods was standing on the green talking with Ian Woosnam, a scantily clad young woman raced up and gave the American a hug and a kiss.

"I looked up and there she was," Woods said. "She ran over, gave me a hug and quick kiss and ran off."

Woods said he was startled but never worried for his safety.

"When I looked at her I could see that she didn't have anything in her hands because her hands were up," he said. "She didn't have a whole lot on so I guess I assumed it was a pretty benign situation."

Did he get her telephone number? Woods was asked.

"No, she ran off."

18-OVER AND COUNTING: David Duval's back-to-back 75-75 — 10-over par — in the last two rounds of the U.S. Open looks pretty good in the face of what happened Thursday.

Duval, hanging in against the wind and wheatfield rough at Carnoustie, was only 4-over after 11 holes, but bogeyed four of the last five for an 8-over-79 in the first round of the British Open.

Duval was the harshest critic of Carnoustie on Wednesday, calling it "a great course spoiled" by knee-high rough and fairways as narrow as 14 yards. He was even more pointed after his first round as the tabloid Sun Thursday called him and fellow American Mark Calcavecchia "Pampered Whiners."

"The Royal and Ancient ... I don't know what they're trying to accomplish," Duval said.

"The U.S. Open was very difficult but it was enjoyable. It shouldn't be stress free, but if you can't enjoy an event like this, then you've got to question what's going on."

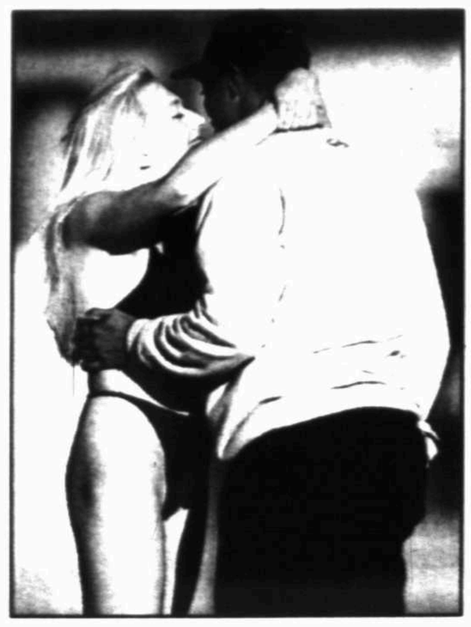

"When the guys said 300 would be the winning score, everybody thought they were crazy. But you never know."

Duval, whose score was about average, was echoed by dozens of slump-shouldered players coming off the course like U.S. Open champion Payne Stewart and Tom Watson, who won the last British Open played at Carnoustie in 1975.

"It could actually be a place where people wish they'd missed the cut," said Stewart, who had a 79.

"This is the easy wind," said Watson, who had an 82. "If it was blowing in the opposite direction ... it would be tougher."

O'MEARA: Golfer gets frustrated

after taking a drop out of Jockie's Burn.

The exasperation began to show on No. 6, a 578-yard hole that played closer to 700 yards because of the prevailing wind. He hit his drive into the rough so thick on the right that he had no choice but to chop out.

With a 9-iron, a gust knocked down the ball, which trickled into a pot bunker. He blasted out into more rough, then hit a terrific shot left of the green, about 100 feet from the hole. Two putts kept him from another double bogey, although there were still another one of those waiting for him.

On No. 10, O'Meara again tried to play out of the rough only to have his ball roll into a burn, which resembles a nicely carved ditch only 3 feet wide and 4 feet deep.

"Did that go in?" he yelled to a marshal?

Disgusted, O'Meara dropped his head and then dropped another ball. When he hit up to the green, he smacked his iron against the side of the bridge. He finished a round to forget with a triple bogey on No. 17 and his lone birdie on No. 18.

"I made three double bogeys and a triple so it was pretty much those four holes that hurt me most," O'Meara said. "But I drove the ball pretty bad and felt I got the score I deserved."

If O'Meara wanted to put a good spin on his round, he could have taken consolation in the fact his 83 was not the worst opening score by a defending champion — Willie Park had a 94 in the 1876 British Open. He finished third that year.

And here's more good news. A defending champion once had an 83 in the first round of the British Open and still managed to win. Of course, the Open was only 36 holes when Bob Ferguson pulled that off in 1882. And it should be noted that Ferguson's 83 was good enough for a three-stroke lead.

At Carnoustie 117 years later, a score like that made a champion feel like a chump.

U.S. beats Uruguay

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Kevin Garnett showed everyone the new, younger look of the U.S. national team, capping a 20-point performance with a crowd-pleasing burst of raw talent Thursday night in a 118-72 victory over Uruguay.

It was the first game of the Olympic qualifying tournament for the Americans, who toyed with the awestuck, undersized Uruguayans from the get-go and led by as many as 52 points.

Gary Payton, who opened the game with a 3-pointer, also scored 20 points and assisted on several of Garnett's baskets. None pleased the crowd more than a between-the-legs, no-look bounce pass to Garnett on a fast break that ended in a resounding dunk and a 99-46 lead.

Garnett scored the Americans' next basket, too, capping a 90-second burst of eight straight points from the 22-year-old. He almost made it 10 straight, but was unable to handle yet another alley-oop pass from Payton.

Both players left the floor moments later to a loud ovation from the crowd in half-filled Roberto Clemente Coliseum.

Tim Hardaway added 13 points and Elton Brand had 10. Jason Kidd had nine points, 14 assists and four steals for the Americans.

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil futures finished above $20 a barrel for the second time in three days on the New York Mercantile Exchange amid concern about new refinery problems in the important West Coast market.

Investors said cargos were being shifted to California as Chevron made heavy cash purchases because of problems at its Richmond, Calif., refinery near San Francisco.

Chevron's 65,000 barrel-a-day gas-making unit was shut down over the weekend because of mechanical trouble. A fire in March also reduced gasoline production at the plant. The new problem means production now has been reduced by about 70 percent, Chevron said in a statement.

The California market, which is the single-busiest for consumption of cleaner-burning gasoline, has been hit by a spate of refinery problems this year that has sent prices soaring.

August crude rose 24 cents to $20.16 a barrel; August unleaded gasoline rose 2.19 cents to 61.70 cents a gallon; August heating oil rose 1 cent to 51.73 cents a gallon; August natural gas rose 3.3 cents to $2.179 for each 1,000 cubic feet.

New highs

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks rose Thursday, lifting some market indexes to new highs, as another report showed that the economy's surprising strength still hasn't sparked inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average advanced 38.31 to 11,186.41, finishing the day less than 15 points from Monday's record close of 11,200.98.

Broader stock indexes also advanced. The Nasdaq composite rose 21.24 to 2,839.37 for its second straight record close, and the Standard & Poor's 500 rose 11.45 to 1,409.62, topping last Friday's record high of 1,403.28.

Investors were cheered for the second day in a row by an encouraging report on inflation.

Before the start of Thursday's trading, the Labor Department reported that consumer prices held steady in June for the second straight month — the best showing since 1986, when prices fell for three months in a row.

Economists had been expecting a slight increase of 0.1 percent in the Consumer Price Index. The data, along with Wednesday's news that prices at the wholesale level fell 0.1 percent in June, should help calm fears about an inflationary spurt back in April.

Euro edges dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — The euro edged higher against the dollar Thursday, bolstered by statements from the president of the European Central Bank.

In late New York trading, the euro was quoted at $1.0219, up from $1.0209 late Wednesday. It reclaimed ground for a second day after hitting a low of $1.0108 against the U.S. currency during trading on Tuesday.

Wim Duisenberg, president of the European Central Bank, supported the euro in comments following the regular monthly meeting of the ECB and hinted at higher interest rates.

The bank council left its key interest rates unchanged Thursday, as widely expected, and no further changes are expected this year.

But asked whether the bank was moving toward a bias in favor of tightening monetary policy — meaning raising rates — Duisenberg said "you could see a tightening bias slightly creeping in."

Only two large cities Y2K compliant

By John C. Henry
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Only two of the nation's 21 largest cities — Dallas and Boston — are fully prepared to deal with anticipated year 2000 computer glitches, according to the General Accounting Office, the audit arm of Congress.

Houston is among nine cities scheduled to be validated as Y2K-compliant by the end of September, a margin of three months before critical systems could begin failing with the dawn of 2000.

Ten other cities — including El Paso, San Antonio and Washington — reported to the GAO that all their computer systems would be ready for the historic date change by the end of December, timing that raised concerns among lawmakers and GAO staff members.

"Completing Y2K activities in the last months of the year increases the risk that key services will not be Y2K-ready in time for 2000 because there will not be enough time to deal with unanticipated complications," warned Joel Williamssen, head of the GAO team that monitors information systems.

Officials are concerned that some computers will crash or render data unusable by misreading 2000 as 1900, a programming characteristic originally intended to save space by reducing the year-date to two digits.

For local governments, the loss of computers could mean disruptions in emergency services — such as police, fire and ambulance — transportation, and water and wastewater treatment facilities.

In Houston, city officials earlier this month declared their various computer systems ready for the arrival of 2000. Mayor Lee Brown had set June 30 as date for the city's systems to be ready "and that deadline has been met," said his press secretary Lauri Fickman.

Meanwhile, the city is awaiting the arrival of new computer hardware and software that will make the Aviation, Public Works and Engineering, Fire, Housing and Community Development, Parks & Recreation departments and the Library fully Y2K compliant. Also, a private consultant currently is verifying that all the city computer systems are free of the so-called millenium bug, and the tests are expected to be finished by Sept. 30.

In testimony before the Senate's Special Committee on Y2K issues, Williamssen reported that telephone surveys of the nation's largest cities early this month found that 45 percent of their various computer-reliant systems have been prepared and tested for the date-switch.

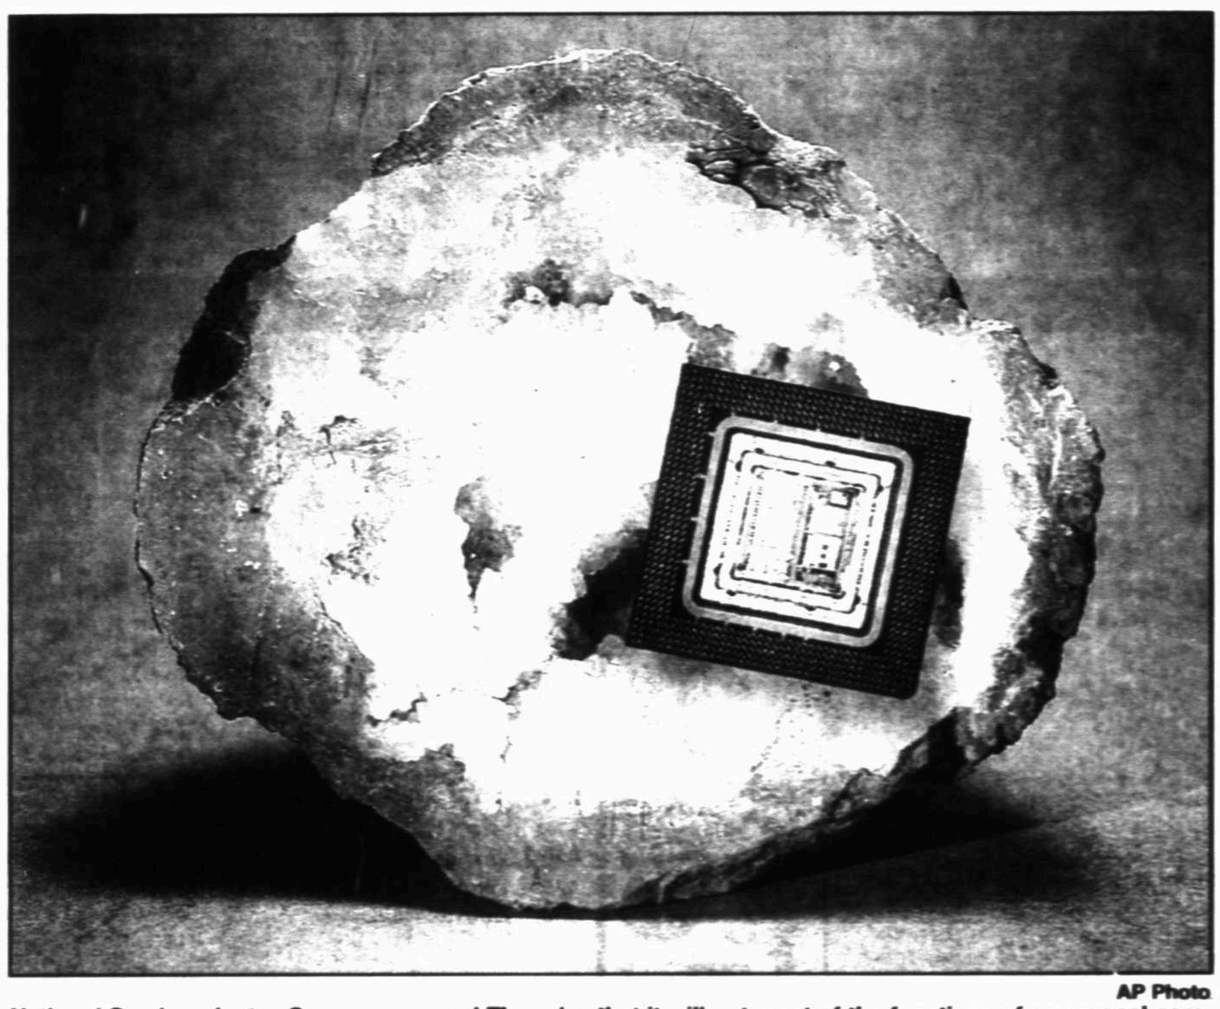

In Dallas and Boston, all municipal computer systems have been converted and validated. The nine cities whose systems are expected to be verified as ready by Sept. 30 are Houston, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, Fla., Memphis, Tenn., Milwaukee, New York, Philadelphia, San Diego and San Jose, Calif.

In addition, Williamssen said, nine states — Alabama, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Louisiana, New Mexico, New Hampshire, Ohio and Wyoming — were found to have addressed the problem in less than 70 percent of their most important computer systems.

Considering how much work remains to be done, Williamssen said, "contingency plans are critical to ensure that cities will continue to provide key services through the year 2000 date change."

Sen. Robert Bennett, a Utah Republican who heads the special Y2K committee, said he feared that many state and local governments were "leaving little room for testing, contingency planning and unexpected problems."

More power, new small size

AP Photo

National Semiconductor Corp. announced Thursday that it will put most of the functions of a personal computer on a postage stamp-size chip. The new Geode SC1400 chip, shown next to a natural geode in this undated photo, will do the work that would usually require six different chips, according to the company. It is designed to bring more power and functionality to small information devices.

Office 2000 expected to boost profits

By Laura Raun
N.Y. Times News Service

REDMOND, Washington — Microsoft Corp. is likely to beat estimates for the fiscal fourth quarter when it reports earnings on Monday, driven by the introduction of its Office 2000 group of business software.

The world's biggest software maker is widely expected to top by a penny or two the average forecast of 36 cents a share from analysts surveyed by First Call Corp., for the quarter ended June 30. That's up from 25 cents a year earlier. Revenue will rise to about $5 billion, analysts said, from $4 billion a year earlier.

The Office 2000 group of word processing, spreadsheet and presentation software was the single biggest revenue-generator in the quarter, analysts said, continuing the tradition of previous Office versions. Windows NT, the industrial-strength version of the flagship computer-operating system, also was a major growth driver.

"It will be a solid quarter," said William Epifanio, an analyst at J.P. Morgan Securities Inc., who has a "buy" rating on Microsoft. "The biggest contributor should be sales of Office."

Redmond, Washington-based Microsoft will report the quarterly results after the close of trading on Monday. It beat earnings forecasts for the past six quarters.

Office 2000, which includes word processing, spreadsheet and presentation software, was introduced last month. The Office line of products commands nearly 90 percent of the market for business-productivity software.

About $200 million of revenue related to Office 2000 has been pushed to the fourth quarter from the third quarter, Epifanio said. That's because the product didn't reach customers until the fourth quarter though they paid for it earlier.

The movement of revenue from one quarter to another prompted the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission to investigate Microsoft's accounting practices earlier this year, the company said on June 30. Sometimes called "cookie jar" accounting, the practice is used to smooth out earnings by recognizing less revenue in bountiful quarters and more in lean ones.

Chief Financial Office Greg Maffei said the company was changing its accounting principles to recognize more revenue from new products sooner, which would add about a penny a share to fourth-quarter earnings.

Air Force: F-22 delay will cost billions

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — 5/8A key House subcommittee's move to halt initial production plans for the Lockheed Martin F-22 would delay the program at least two years, cost taxpayers $6.5 billion and increase the risk American pilots will face in the years ahead, Air Force officials said on Thursday.

"We are very concerned that without the F-22, we will mortgage the future of our air dominance capability while we fund the systems that we currently have and that we think will not be as capable as they need to be in the future," said Lt. Gen. Greg Martin, principal deputy assistant secretary for Air Force acquisition.

A House Appropriations subcommittee that oversees military spending recommended earlier this week that the Air Force reevaluate its plans for the $70 billion F-22 program and that $1.8 billion in the Pentagon's 2000 budget intended to produce the first six Raptors be slashed. The committee left in $1.2 billion for continued development.

Lawmakers on the subcommittee, who voted unanimously in favor of the move, said readiness, personnel issues, and other problems within the Air Force are not being addressed properly because the service is putting a huge portion of its budget into production plans for the Raptor.

Martin said he met on Thursday with several subcommittee members, including its chairman, Rep. Jerry Lewis, R-Calif.

"I think that we will be able to convince people we need it," he said.

Lewis could not be reached for comment on Thursday.

The subcommittee's suggestion that the program, which has already cost taxpayers $20 billion, be delayed was a shock to many at the Pentagon, since three other congressional panels had approved production spending for the airplane.

"It's astonishingly short-sighted and it just goes to show that it is all about pork," said Richard Aboulafia, an industry analyst with the Teal Group, a Fairfax, Va. based company that follows aerospace programs.

The subcommittee's budget improved Clinton administration proposals to order current generations aircraft, such as the Fort Worth-made F-16 and St. Louis-made F-15, a plane that, without much international interest, has teetered on the edge of extinction for several years.

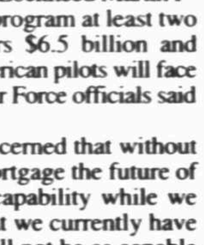

The full House Appropriations Committee will meet today to vote on the subcommittee's proposed budget, including its plans for the F-22. Members are expected to pass the measure setting up a fight on the House floor next week.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Several options available for retirement accounts

By Eric Tyson

Q: Both my wife and I work for employers, and I run my own business on the side. Can you explain what retirement account options we might have?

Tyson

A: If you earn employment income (or receive alimony), you have options for putting money away in a retirement account that compounds without taxation until you withdraw the money. In most cases, your contributions into retirement accounts are tax deductible.

If you work for a for-profit company, you may have access to a 401(k) plan, which typically allows you to save up to $10,000 per year. Many nonprofit organizations offer 403(b) plans to their employees. As with a 401(k), your contributions to these plans are generally federal-and-state tax deductible in the year that they are made. If one of your employers matches contributions, you should absolutely fund that account first.

If you're self-employed, you can establish your own retirement savings plans. Simplified employee pension individual retirement account (SEP-IRA) plans allow you to sock away about 13 percent (13.04 percent, to be exact) of your self-employment income (business revenue minus expenses), up to an annual maximum of $24,000. Each year, you decide the amount you want to contribute — no minimums exist.

Keogh plans are another retirement-savings option for the self-employed. Keogh plans require a bit more paperwork to set up and administer than SEP-IRAs. The appeal of certain types of Keoghs is that they allow you to put away a greater percentage (20 percent) of your self-employment income (revenue less your expenses), up to a maximum of $30,000 per year.

Unlike SEP-IRAs, Keogh plans allow vesting schedules, which require employees to remain with the company a number of years before they earn the right to their retirement account balances. If an employee leaves prior to being fully vested, the unvested balance reverts to the remaining plan participants. Keogh plans also allow for Social Security integration, which effectively allows those in the company who are high-income earners (usually the owners) to receive larger percentage contributions for their accounts than the less-highly compensated employees.

With all types of self-employed retirement plans, employees need to be covered as well. However, if you take the time to educate employees about the value and importance of using these plans to save for the future and reduce taxes, they'll see it rightfully as part of their total compensation package. Many plans allow you to exclude employees from receiving contributions until they've completed a year or two of service.

If you work for a company that does not offer a retirement savings plan or if you've exhausted contributing to your company's plan, consider funding an individual retirement account (IRA). Anyone with employment (or alimony) income may contribute up to $2,000 each year to an IRA, or the amount of your employment or alimony income if it's less than $2,000 in a year. If you are a nonworking spouse, you're eligible to put up to $2,000 per year into a spousal IRA. Your contributions to an IRA may or may not be tax deductible.

If you can't deduct your contribution to a standard IRA account, consider making a contribution to a new type of nondeductible IRA account called the Roth IRA. Single taxpayers with an AGI less than $95,000 and joint filers with an AGI less than $150,000 can contribute up to $2,000 per year to a Roth IRA. Although the contribution is not deductible, earnings inside the account are shielded from tax, and, unlike a standard IRA, qualified withdrawals from the account are free from income tax.

Consider a nondeductible IRA only after you have exhausted the possibilities of contributing to retirement accounts that do provide an immediate tax deduction, such as 401(k)s, SEP-IRAs, Keoghs and so on.

Belgian wins 11th stage

■ Tour de France

By Ian Phillips
Associated Press Writer

SAINT-ETIENNE, France — Belgian champion Ludo Dierckxsens won the 11th stage of the Tour de France today as the leading contenders were happy to sit back and recover from their mountain exploits.

The results had little effect on the overall standings, because Dierckxsens was 77th overall going into the stage — one hour, 14 minutes and 33 seconds behind the race leader, American Lance Armstrong, who easily retained his yellow jersey.

In second place was Dmitri Konyshev of Russia, 1 minute 27 seconds behind, who narrowly edged out Kazakstan's Alexandre Vinokourov.

The main pack finished more than 22 minutes later, including Armstrong, Richard Virenque, and other top contenders. Dierckxsens, a 35-year-old veteran, smiled in delight as he crossed the finish line.

The 11th stage was a relatively flat 124-mile ride from Le Bourg d'Oisans in the Alps to Saint-Etienne, capital of French bicycle manufacturing.

Before the stage, Frenchman Richard Virenque summed up the mood of many riders after Armstrong extend his already commanding lead on Wednesday.

"If Armstrong doesn't crack, the rest of us will simply be playing for podium places in Paris," said Virenque, who finished sixth in Wednesday's 10th stage in the Alps.

Armstrong, the 27-year-old Texan making a remarkable recovery from testicular cancer, began the day with a lead of 7 minutes, 42 seconds over Spain's Abraham Olano. The American finished fifth Wednesday in the stage won by Italy's Giuseppe Guerini.

"After two stages in the mountains, I've got to be happy," Armstrong said. "I'm in a good position. After yesterday I was tired, so I just tried to control my competitors. ... The only objective today was to hold onto the yellow jersey."

Armstrong was not happy about some of the press coverage, with several French newspapers hinting that he might be taking performance-enhancing drugs.

Last year, a doping scandal brought the race to a temporary halt, and the sport's image was severely damaged. Fifty-one riders underwent blood tests early Wednesday, and all turned out negative.

"I saw today's headlines. Yes, they have many questions," Armstrong said.

"It's incredible that they print this. Why do they print this?" he said of unfounded reports that he has tested positive for drugs. "They don't print the truth."

OPEN: Scores take beating on very difficult golf course probably quit the game — a lot of pros, too," Duval said.

Listen to Woods, whose patience, control and a few sensational, Tiger-like par saves gave him a 3-over 74. He had played only seven holes when he turned to caddie Steve Williams and said, "Are we even close to being done?"

Wishful thinking.

"The best players in the world are playing the most difficult course in the world in the most difficult conditions," said Hugh Campbell, chairman of the Open championship committee. "At the moment, the most difficult course in the world is winning."

By a landslide.

Teeing off in the second group, two hours before the winds reached their full strength, Pampling took only 10 putts on the front nine, made an eagle putt from 25 feet on No. 14 and then got out of harm's way.

"I didn't know it would be leading," he said.

It was the first time no one broke par in a major championship since the British Open in 1986 at Turnberry.

Two-time Masters champion Bernhard Langer and Scott Dunlap, who played the Nike Tour a year ago, were at 72.

"It takes a lot out of you," Langer said. "I'm just glad to get the first round over."

Former British Open champion Justin Leonard was in the group at 73, while Woods missed two mid-range par putts down the stretch to slip back at 74 along with Ernie Els, Colin Montgomerie and Davis Love III.

Pampling, who won his first Australian PGA Tour event in February, didn't even start hitting practice balls until he had completed a three-year apprenticeship as a greenskeeper at Caboolture Golf Club in Queensland.

Perhaps the better training came Wednesday, when he played a practice round with Woods and O'Meara.

"He struck the ball well," Woods said. "He controlled his trajectory, made a few bombs ... and obviously continued that today. To shoot the round he did was quite remarkable."

Given the conditions, it may have been even better than that. The scoring average was 78.312, more than seven strokes over par.

When Tom Watson won the first of his five British Opens at Carnoustie in 1975, 37 players failed to break 80 — for the week. Watson had an 82 Thursday, not surprising given his recent play. But this is not the Carnoustie he remembers from 24 years ago.

"It's an unfair golf course," he said. "It's too narrow for the penal rough. Bobby Jones once said it's not meant to be a fair game, and we're not on a fair course. Add the wind, and it's not unexpected to see scores this high."

Garcia sure didn't expect to open with an 89 — 27 stroke higher than his start in last week's European event in Loch Lomond. He hacked through the hay for a triple bogey on the first hole and never recovered.

When it was over, the 19-year-old known as "El Nino" walked off the course in the arms of his mother.

"Today is forgotten," he said in a statement released two hours after his round.

Sorry, Sergio. There's still another round left. And three more for those who survive the cut.

Woods managed just fine. A winner in three of his last four tournaments, he made a 20-foot putt to save par from a pot bunker on No. 2, then hacked out of weeds on No. 12 to 5 feet for another crucial par save.

"It was a pretty good one," Woods said, flashing a smile that showed he's right where he wants to be. Woods has never won a professional event when he led after the first round.

The Open has not been played at Carnoustie since Watson won in '75. Don't blame some players if they campaign to have it dropped from the rotation, or at least the way it has been set up.

"It could actually be a place where people wish they'd missed the cut," U.S. Open champion Payne Stewart said after his round of 79. If the wind blows as hard again Friday, the cut might be in the vicinity of 14-over.

DAVIS: Pressure added on Todd Martin to win singles team better.

"Obviously, we have come to a decision that I think most of the guys are very comfortable with, and we will make the most of it," Martin said.

"We all feel good about it," Gullikson said, not very convincingly. "I feel good about it. The players feel good about it. If other people don't feel good about it, that is their problem."

The Australians certainly feel good about it.

Australian captain John Newcombe said if he had been in Gullikson's shoes with, say, Rafter making a decision like Sampras, he would never have considered benching Rafter in singles.

"I wouldn't like to be in Gully's shoes if we win, either," Newcombe said.

Woodforde, one of the world's best doubles players, thought Sampras would have a difficult time adjusting to doubles.

"Obviously he is one of the best singles players around at the moment, but that doesn't necessarily mean that he is going to be a great doubles player," Woodforde said. "I think, given the opportunity to play more matches, sure, he definitely could be with that serve. It is a big, big plus. I just can't see how he can just walk out there and believe he can play good doubles."

Woodforde's regular doubles partner, Todd Woodbridge, is injured, but Stolle has plenty of experience playing doubles.

Sampras didn't seem too worried about not having played doubles much. He's won only two doubles titles in his career — in 1995 with Martin on the grass at Queen's Club, and in 1989 with Courier on clay in Rome. He's 3-1 in Davis Cup doubles, the loss coming with Martin against Woodforde and Woodbridge on hardcourt in Washington in 1997.

"It is still the same sport out there — keep it in the lines and serve big and return well," Sampras said. "I have practiced quite a bit with Alex this week, and I think we feel pretty good. I can play good doubles. I know I can. So I think we are going to be ready."

The best-of-five match format will put a lot of pressure on Sampras and O'Brien if the opening singles are split. But Newcombe thought the opening match — Martin vs. Hewitt — would be the key.

"I think the draw came out very well for us," Newcombe said. "It is a must-win situation for them in that first match, which puts a tremendous amount of pressure on Todd."

Martin will have the added pressure knowing that he is on the court instead of Sampras, who is fresh from winning his sixth Wimbledon title, and that, on paper, he is expected to beat Hewitt.

"There will be some anxious moments for them in that first match," Newcombe said. "If we lose the first match, we are not going to be as worried as they will be if they lose the first match."
