MEN GO BACK TO WORK AT STEEL PLANTS

By United Press
CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 28.—Attempts of the federal government to settle the steel strike apparently collapsed today.

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward McGrady, only member of the steel mediation board remaining in Cleveland, announced he would leave for Washington late today.

The decision was made after a telephone conversation with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

More men returned to work throughout the Ohio-Pennsylvania area, where national guards and police protected those wanting to return to their jobs as well as to guarantee peaceful picketing.

Union leaders insisted their strike was effective and guaranteed funds for steel workers who would "stick it out."

But from Johnstown, Pa., came an announcement that Bethlehem Steel corporation's Cambria plant is now on a normal operating basis.

Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube company said their plants were working between 85 and 90 per cent normal.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 28.—Violence occurred on the Cambria steel strike front today as thousands of workers disregarded reinforced picket lines and went to work.

Two men were beaten by pickets, a group of negroes were escorted to safety by state troopers and the windows of workers' automobiles were broken with rocks.

Sculptor Confesses To Triple Murder

By United Press
NEW YORK, June 28.—Robert Irwin, who killed three persons because of his passion and hatred for a fourth, obtained a conference with a psychiatrist today before he dictated a confession to the police.

The 29-year-old former insane asylum inmate was arraigned and held without bail.

Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine said he was "delighted" with the sculptor's confession of the slaying of Veronica Gedeon, artist model; her mother, Mrs. Mary Gedeon, and a lodger at the Gedeon home, Frank Byrnes.

Irwin had said the one he intended to kill was Mrs. Ethel Kuder, Veronica's sister, who ignored his attentions and married another man.

Police Captain Ed Muir refused to name the man she selected from pictures. He reportedly was an ex-sailor, four times arrested on morals charges.

The three girls apparently were lured away from a park here by a loiterer known as "Eddie."

More than 700 men joined in a search of the city and surrounding hills for the three girls, missing since Saturday.

Ranger Girls' Team Wins Over Cisco by The Score of 9 to 5

Fans who stayed away from the Ball Park Saturday night when the Ranger Girls' softball team played the Cisco girls, missed a treat. From the first batter to the last out every play was a thrill. If there ever was an example of "hustle" the Ranger girls showed it—every member of the team hustled on every play. Dorothy Gray pitching the entire nine innings allowed only one run until the ninth inning, when she began to tire and Cisco tried to overcome Ranger's lead with a rally, made 4 runs and with none out and the bases full she found her old form and retired the side to save the game.

Cisco started the fireworks in the second inning, with one run. Ranger came back in the third with two runs and there it stood 2 to 1 until the 6th inning when Ranger girls went wild and with 7 hits made 6 runs. From then on until the first of the ninth, Cisco was blanked, but managed to stage a short rally in the 9th, but lacked the punch.

Strike outs by both pitchers were numerous, but Dorothy Gray, Ranger pitcher had full control of the situation and could not be hit safely. Hot grounders, running catches and the fast work of the entire Ranger Girls' team all went towards making this a real thriller and those who missed it, really missed a treat. This was the second game with the Cisco girls. Cisco having won the first game in Cisco last week.

Plans are under way to bring girls' teams here from Strawn, Gorman and Eastland at an early date. And since the Ranger Girls have demonstrated that they can play real baseball. Good games are promised.

The Ranger Girls' team has recently been strengthened by the addition of Miss Morris who played with the Woods Grocery team last year and by shifting around a few other players to different positions and now presents a real appearance.

TEXAS ENTERS 12TH DAY OF HOT WEATHER

By United Press
DALLAS, June 28.—Texas entered its 12th day of scorching heat today with temperatures near the 100-degree mark and little relief in prospect.

The only cheering note in the government forecast was a prediction of showers in the Upper Rio Grande Valley. "Partly cloudy" was the forecast for the remainder of the state.

Dallas reported 100 degrees on Sunday. Fort Worth had a recording of 101 degrees and Wichita Falls 100. Nearly every city in the state had a temperature of above 90 degrees.

In the second game of the evening Montgomery Ward will play Dr. Pepper.

Much interest has been created in the games recently, due to the keen competition that was noted during the last two weeks of the first half of the split season. Several teams that started off slowly when the season opened, showed remarkable improvement and at least four of the five of the eight teams entered in the league promise to be real contenders during the second half.

Tuesday evening Strawn will meet Caddo at Caddo and Killingsworth. Cox will play TeePee in the game scheduled for the local diamond. To complete the two-game schedule for Tuesday night a game with the Gorman girls has been matched by the Ranger girls.

A total of 749,879 "woolies" were unloaded at Fort Worth yards during May, 1936. The total was almost twice as high as that of any other American market. The total number of cattle, calves, sheep and hogs received during the month was 1,391,642, more than 400,000 greater than for the corresponding month of 1936.

Hogs receipts were 191,856, about 20,000 less than for May of 1936.

By United Press

Value of Not Healing the Democratic Split

The deserving Democrats who gather with President Roosevelt on Jefferson Island, in Chesapeake Bay, at the end of this month seem fated to do a lot of very pleasant eating; but whether they will sew up the growing rift in the Democratic party—or, indeed, whether it is actually the best interests of the party and the country that they should do so—is quite another question.

This serial get-together is commonly spoken of as a love feast, despite the fact that precious little love is involved. Since the last election the party has been splitting wide open. This three-installment feast is supposed to get it back together again.

Now every President runs into a certain amount of party dissension in his second term. That is inevitable, from the nature of politics. He is on his way out, even though the date when he steps down is a long way off. The party leaders in Congress have their own futures to look after. Naturally, they begin to pull away from the presidential leading strings.

But what Mr. Roosevelt and his party leaders are up against is something quite different. It is no mere second-term restlessness that is dividing the party; it is a deep and fundamental difference of opinion over principles of the most vital importance.

Mr. Roosevelt is trying to lead his party in a direction which, whatever you may care to say about historic traditions, Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and so on, is at least quite different from the direction it has been following in the last few decades.

A good many responsible party leaders do not believe that it ought to go in that direction, and have parted company with him—most notably, on the matter of revision of the Supreme Court.

Should a breach like that be healed, in the best interests of all concerned? Might we not have a more healthy and responsive political setup in this country if the breach widened, instead of narrowing? Ought not a political party, in other words, to stand for a clearly defined set of principles to which all members of the party can give unqualified adherence?

A realignment of political parties has been long overdue. For many years the difference between the two parties, as parties, has been less noticeable than the difference between the two wings within the parties. The sooner the realignment takes place, and is formally accepted by a widespread shifting of party labels, the better off we shall be.

And so, while it is to be hoped that the Democrats feast well and enjoy themselves, it is quite possible that both the feasters and the country they serve will be in better shape if the expected reconciliation does not take place.

LEGISLATURE HAS FUN

By United Press

HONOLULU. — Samuel B. Kemp, attorney general of Hawaii, is convinced that the Hawaiian legislature really enjoyed law making. He has found that in some cases the same bill was passed three times, others failed to appropriate necessary funds and still others contradicted themselves. He is trying to straighten it all out. Two bills for example reduced the marriage license fee from $5 to $2.

THE SPIRIT OF '37

Startlingly reminiscent of a famous Revolutionary painting is the above picture, taken as color bearers with the American flag and regimental banner flying led troops into the strike-torn Ohio steel areas after martial law was declared. The guardsmen went in 4800 strong to preserve a "status quo," while mediators sought to effect a peace.

SURE IT IS

...and mighty strenuous too!

"SPORT, even for the fun of it, can be tiring," says Miss Gloria Wheeden, who here shows her skill at aquaplaning. "Yes, I smoke," she says. "When I feel a bit let-down, I light up a Camel and get a 'lift' in energy." A suggestion: When an active day drains physical and nervous energy, you can get a delightful "lift" from a Camel. They never get on your nerves.

20 MILES AN HOUR on a skittery board is thrill enough! But Gloria Wheeden is a daring miss who hikes it up to 40 (upper left picture). Executes a hand-stand (above). Sles around a fast turn with two aboard (right). There's no doubt about her nerves being healthy. "Camels are head and shoulders on top for mildness," she says. "Much as I smoke, they don't bother my nerves a bit."

FIRST realization that you are lost usually brings mild hysteria. Such emotion gripped both Carolee and Stuart for a few moments when they looked about on range forest. Neither, however, showed nor admitted it.

"This is a lot of fun, but not very efficient," said Stuart, after quarter-hour of riding. "See anything familiar, Carolee?"

"No, I don't. It's rather confusing, isn't it?"

"Ha ha!" Stuart had relaxed. "Naturally optimistic, he decided to entertain danger. We ought to make swell headlines—LOST ON HORSEBACK IN LURE GIRL TO MYSTERY MOUNTAIN. Anyhow I'd like to see a Chicago newsboy right now; I'd know my way around."

Carolee smiled a little. "Are you ever afraid of anything, Stuart?"

"It was the first time she called him that. 'You laughed when one of my brothers and you and the other shot at it.'"

"Oh yes! Yes indeed! I was not silly when you snapped at me in the store. But you soothed me. You don't look nervous now; you look a little frightened yourself."

"I am, just a little. But it's silly now; two grown people losing themselves like little children. I get out. Somehow."

"Check. We will say, it's so hot here with brush that we can't see far enough. I have field glasses in the saddle pocket. Let's use that rock and study the landscape."

"All right. The horses need a rest anyhow."

The climb took 20 minutes or more. Some of the going was almost straight up, with scanty foot and toe holds. It was like adventuring. Carolee thought even to the background thrill of danger and fear. They sat down at last on a ledge which commanded a view over everything near except the main bulk of the mountain behind them.

"Plenty of room," observed Stuart. "Look at that sea of hills!"

He lifted the glasses and looked through them a long time. He could see nothing in the wave-like masses stretching miles to the west, north and east. Superstition blocked the south.

"That road is down there somewhere," he said. "We would be bound to find it if we rode directly away from the mountain. I mean, if we could find trails or canyons that aren't blocked."

"Maybe we could go on foot," suggested Carolee.

"It would be nearly 10 miles, and awfully rough walking. We'd better try to locate the flat canyon where Superstition Lodge is, is it left or right?"

"I don't know," admitted Carolee. She was sadly confused now.

"Great gold hunters we are!" Stuart growled. "Can't even find ourselves, much less a nugget. Let's ride again."

They started back down, and found the descent almost as hard as the climb. Carolee slipped once, almost cutting her knee on a rock. She was trembling a little when she stood up again, but she went gamely on, declining Stuart's offer to aid her. Finally Stuart and Carolee were back where they had dismounted.

She pursed her lips and whistled. Instantly Chieftain whinnied, not more than 100 feet away. "I wasn't a farm lass for nothing," she laughed, and Stuart applauded. They were soon mounted again.

From his saddle Stuart took one more look through the glasses before returning them to the pocket. He swung the field of vision both high and low, without any definite hope, and then a white dot caught his attention. It wasn't down the narrow canyon, or on any of the nearby boulders, or on any of the hazily distant peaks which they could barely see. It was high, and seemingly on the very face of Superstition.

"There's something, Carolee!" he announced, intently. "Something white up there. I thought it was a white rock at first, but I'm a Chinaman if it's not moving. A Chinaman!"

She took the glasses and adjusted them to her eyes.

"O-o-oh!" she was gleeful. "I've home! That's where I live! I know it. I recognize it. That's our clothes line, I know. Mother has hung out sheets or something. And that green clump of trees is where I live. It's home!"

Stuart was amazed.

"Your home? Away up there?"

"Yes, Stuart! We're camped there, in a shack. We're going to stay until father and the boys find their silly gold mine. Oh gee-e-e!"

CHIEFTAIN turned his head to look at her, she was giggling so in her excitement. Stuart, too, was beaming again now.

"It's away up," she continued. "At least 3000 feet, Father says. It's marvelous but it's—lonesome. I'm a little afraid sometimes."

The distant dot of the Colter home, almost like an eagle's eye from the riders' position, gave them just the direction they needed. Their horses, in fact, had instinctively been headed approximately right all the time. Carolee, and quietly gave Chieftain free rein. He soon plodded them back to trails that they recognized, and from which they could catch glimpses of Superstition Lodge still further below. They agreed it was well past noon now.

"I should be afraid you'd fall off," mused Stuart, gazing upward.

"It's not that," she laughed. "I just have vague fears about—about the whole thing, sometimes. The gold business, I mean. But it's nothing. Did you know I can see the roof of your lodge from our cliff?"

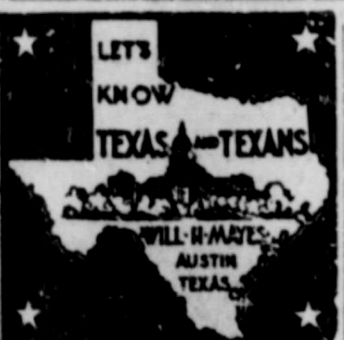

"No! Can you? Say, that's great. Carolee! Listen, let's arrange a signal. Hang out a flag or something, maybe a sheet, when you can meet me down the trail. Will you?"

"You wouldn't be a Boy Scout in disguise, would you, Stuart? But it's all right. I'd love it. I'll meet you where I met you and your sister today. We could ride again."

"A trying place!" He was sentimental about it. "I've never had one before."

"Nor I," and she laughed again, sweetly. "I feel as if I were 16 again." She spurred Chieftain to a gallop.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayer, Austin, Texas.

Q. Who was Alexander (Sandy) Horton, mentioned in some histories as chief adviser to Sam Houston?

A. Col. Horton was aide to Houston at San Jacinto and otherwise prominent in the Texas revolution. Born in North Carolina in 1810, he came to Texas with his mother in 1824, his father having died in Louisiana en route. The family settled at Ayish Bayou. He was in Jas. W. Bulloch's command that defeated Gen. Piedras at Nacogdoches, Aug. 2, 1832; was a member of the San Felipe convention of 1835; accompanied Houston as aide from Washington to the Brazos to Gonzales; in the Cherokee War of 1839; marshal of Republic, four times, sheriff at San Augustine, mayor, customs collector.

Q. When and under what conditions was Green DeWitt granted a Texas empresario contract?

A. April 15, 1825. The grant was for settling 400 Catholic families of good moral character within six years, the government to be notified as each 100 families were located so that they might be placed in possession of their lands. All transactions were to be in Spanish, schools were to be established, national militia was to be maintained by the empresario, who was also to promote church buildings and supply them with ornaments and sacred vessels.

Q. Where did Gov. Allred's ancestors settle in Texas?

A. Gov. Allred's grandparents came to Texas nearly a century ago and lived in what is known as the "Cherry Mound" community in Grayson county, where they died and were buried.

Q. When was the Texas "homestead law" passed?

A. It was passed by the Congress of the Republic in 1839.

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—The desire of some labor leaders to collect everything possible in the way of union dues appears alongside the unwillingness of many manufacturers to pay higher wages as a factor in the opposition to the Black-Connelly wage and hour bill.

The most contentious point in the bill is its section five, which would give the proposed labor standards board power to fix a "minimum fair wage" in individual industries up to the equivalent of $1200 a year.

It is probable that the blank spaces in previous sections will be filled in so as to fix a general minimum wage and hour standard of 40 cents an hour and 40 hours a week, which would be the equivalent of $800 a year or $16 a week for anyone who had 50 weeks of employment.

The theory behind the measure is that there is no collective bargaining worth talking about for the wage group which earns less than $800 a year, and that many workers in the range between $800 and $1200 have no money with which to organize and bargain collectively. Thus, after the bill previously has authorized the board to vary its non-oppressive standards upward or downward, section five authorizes the board to establish a minimum fair wage in cases where facilities for collective bargaining are inadequate or ineffective, and where lower wages paid by some employers threaten to undermine the labor standards of other employers. But there are labor leaders who foresee that many unskilled workers will feel less incentive to join unions if and when the government fixes wages for them at between $16 and $25 a week.

So, they shy away from it. On the other hand there are labor leaders who say that the head of family who makes less than $25 a week is unlikely to have enough in his stomach to make good gitting union material.

SEEMS a shame that a college sophomore doesn't know any better than to join the St. Louis Browns.

And it's no wonder that Coach Sam Barry of the University of Southern California complained about his star center fielder, John Berardino, leaving the Trojan campus to join up with the latter-day forces of Rogers Hornsby.

Coach Barry, however, complained to the wrong party. He should have gone to the professor of economics, or psychology, or something, better than to know not to join the Browns, of all things.

But, instead, Coach Barry made his complaint into the shaggy gray mane of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis. "This," said Coach Barry, "is an out and out violation of the major league agreement not to tamper with college athletes. It is another case where an inexperienced youngster with plenty of prospects passed up an education at the sight of major league money. I have protested vigorously to Judge Landis."

WELL, it's just an opinion, worth as little as 2 cents on some newsstands, but this bugaboo can't see where it's any of Coach Barry's or Judge Landis' business what Center Fielder John Berardino does with his time or talents.

Of course, there is an agreement between the major leagues and the colleges that no team shall lure an athlete away from the campus before he has completed his varsity athletic career. The agreement might specify "until he has obtained his college degree," which would make a difference of from one to two years because many college athletes play out their three years of varsity before they finish Chemistry III or English II.

But if the agreement does make any such stipulation the coaches don't enforce it. Which makes the whole thing most insincere. They, as a rule, aren't interested in whether Fullback Joe Spagnoli or Second Baseman Y. Taggart has his college degree—they just want his athletic services for the maximum length of time.

There is no reason, to be sure, to suspect that this is the case with Coach Barry and his center fielder, but the fact remains that if John Berardino wants to quit school to associate with the St. Blooey Browns it's his own funeral and nobody else's.

After all, it's quite possible that he needs the money. And then, too, waiting three more years until he has completed his studies, or campus athletics, might prove disastrous to the youth.

You see, many a fine young athlete has been burned to crispy ashes in the hot furnace of collegiate competition—unable when he graduates to capitalize on his wasted ability.

Scrap Iron Puts Port Houston In The Boom Class

HOUSTON.—Boom days have returned to Port Houston because of the heavy export demand for scrap iron.

During the first five months of 1937, more than 160,000 tons of scrap iron and scrap rails have been exported.

The five-month total was compared with the entire 1936 total of 153,000 tons.

The scrap iron rush caused the port to establish a record for the number of locomotive cranes in operation on American waterfronts, according to Director J. R. Wait.

"The 11 cranes, nine owned by the navigation district, are working 24 hours a day," he said.

"Although I checked closely the records of other ports, I could not find any port having as many in operation at one time."

Wait discounted re-shipment as the cause of heavy exports from the United States.

"War has something to do with it, but many countries which are leading in exports do not seem to have much ambition to enter war. Countries not having their own iron ore reserves are the leading importers from America."

"Our industry progresses so rapidly that new processes follow one another and daily require new machinery for production," he continued. "From these industries come the millions of tons of scrap iron and steel that is exported."

Wait said it was impossible to forecast the duration of scrap movement.

"General building programs in all countries were curtailed due to the depression, and these nations are attempting to catch up now."

"Consequently, as long as they demand iron for commercial enterprises and armaments, it will continue at a high rate."

Commencement speakers who told graduates they were a promising lot didn't mean that they should all be salesmen.

Closed Bryan Bank
To Be Liquidated
By F.D.I. Corporation

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Within a short time the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is expected to begin payments to depositors of the Union State Bank and Trust Company of Bryan, Texas, which closed on June 16th.

The bank held total deposits of approximately $220,000.00 at the time of suspension and it is estimated that about $120,000.00 of that amount was insured by the Corporation. There were more than 620 depositors in the bank.

This was the eighth closing of an insured bank in the State of Texas since the beginning of deposit insurance on January 1, 1934. Up to December 31, 1936, payments had been made available to the 88,912 depositors of 75 closed insured banks in all parts of the country.

Two Phases of the Security Act Are Explained to Public

For the purpose of making clear certain provisions of the Social Security Law, the Collector of Internal Revenue stated today:

That the Social Security Act provides for the payment of taxes under two separate sections called Titles VIII and IX. Title IX applies only to those employing eight or more persons for certain periods of time and with which we are not here concerned. Title VIII is the one least understood and concerns every employer of one or more persons not specifically exempted by the Act itself.

Title VII of the Social Security Act imposes an income tax upon the wages of every individual and an excise tax on the wages paid by every employer. The term "employment" means service, of whatever nature, performed within the United States by an employee for his employer. "Wages" on which the taxes are levied is held to mean all remuneration for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash.

Who are employers? The act defines them as follows: "Every person is an employer who employs one or more individuals for the performance of services not specifically excepted."

While both employer and employee are subject to the tax, the employer is required to collect or deduct from his employee's wages the employee's share of the tax, which in every instance is one per cent of his pay. This the employer must do on every pay day. To this employee's tax, the employer adds a like amount, based on a one per cent tax of his pay roll, and the employer is liable for both amounts even if he fails to deduct the one per cent from the employee's wages.

A Texan predicts we may drill 15,000 feet deep for oil, which would almost call for a refill for the lamps of China.

Civilian Pilots to Register for Service In National Crisis

PORT SAM HOUSTON.—The registration of all civilian pilots in the Eighth Corps Area holding Department of Commerce licenses who wish to serve in the U. S. Army Air Corps in time of national emergency or mobilization now is being effected at corps area headquarters here.

Those eligible for registration must hold a Department of Commerce pilot's license of "private pilot" or higher; must be male citizens of the U. S., and must have at least a high school education.

It is contemplated that those who signify their willingness to serve in the Air Corps in time of war or other national emergency who possess the necessary qualifications will be commissioned in the Air Corps-Reserve when they are called to duty in time of emergency or mobilization.

Civilian pilots who are registered also are being offered the opportunity of securing commissions in the Air Corps-Reserve at the present time. Information as to the necessary qualifications for immediate affiliation with the Air Corps Reserve can be obtained from the Air Officer, Eighth Corps Area Headquarters.

The registration of civilian pilots is not a move toward expanding the Air Corps Reserve at the present time, but is being done to provide potential source for Air Corps pilots in time of war or emergency. Major Charles A. Pursley, Air Officer for the 8th Corps Area, pointed out today.
