Three crewmen missing

MATANE, Quebec (AP) — Searchers have recovered four bodies, but three crewmen were still missing and feared dead Saturday in the icy St. Lawrence River after a Christmas Day fire that engulfed their oil tanker burned itself out.

Canadian coast guard officials said two bodies were found Saturday about 56 miles downstream from the stricken Hudson Transport and a third was later recovered near the ship. Another body had been found Friday.

At least three men who left the ship in a life raft were still missing. The coast guard said there was little chance any could have survived in the icy water, driving snow, 40 mph winds and sub-zero temperatures. The search was to resume Sunday.

FOURTEEN OF THE 21 crew members were rescued hours after the tanker, carrying about 40,000 barrels of heavy crude oil, burst into flames Friday off Matane, about 220 miles northeast of Quebec City.

"We had time to die 10 times before they came," complained survivor Pierre Lemieux, a second cook. Other survivors told of waiting up to 10 hours for rescuers.

The ship's Montreal-based owner, Halco Inc., issued a statement Saturday saying the fire apparently started in the crew's quarters, but that its cause had not been determined. It said there was no damage to the cargo and no oil had spilled.

Coast guard officials said the fire burned itself out nearly 30 hours after it was reported in a radio distress call at 3:28 a.m. EST.

Halco said all 21 crew members were successfully evacuated from their quarters below deck after the fire was discovered and all were accounted for on deck.

The company statement said the fire calmed down, then flared up again, and the crew began abandoning ship. Survivors said the fire developed so quickly that most men were roused from bed and forced to flee before they could put on warm clothing. Many were barefoot.

SEVERAL SURVIVORS watched their shipmates plunge into the river's dark, icy water.

Engine-room assistant Alfred Ralph said he watched one crew member perish after letting go of a ladder on the side of the vessel. Ralph said he spent an hour in the icy waters "holding onto a rope" on the side of the ship before being rescued. He said his inflatable raft developed a leak and sank.

"The air just went out," Ralph said.

Lemieux said he saw another sailor disappear into the swift current after trying to jump from a wooden lifeboat into a sturdier inflatable raft.

"I could hear him screaming," Lemieux said.

Chief cook Ludger Tremblay said he spent 10 hours alone in an inflatable raft drifting in a storm. He said he spent most of the time bailing water and talking to the boat.

"I told the boat not to break up," he said.

He was picked up by a freighter and then spent a few hours at a hospital, where he was treated for exposure. The rest of the survivors were resting at a motel.

Union reports force used in mines

By The Associated Press

Clandestine Solidarity publications appearing Saturday in Poland said authorities gassed protesting miners at one southern mine, brought them to the surface "on waste heaps," revived them and forced them back to work at gunpoint. Those who refused were arrested, the leaflets claimed.

The Solidarity publications did not identify the mine or provide any other details. Official government media have reported strikes at the Piast and Ziemowit mines in the Silesian city of Tychy. The government reports said the Ziemowit protest ended peacefully last week, but said strikers were still holding out underground at the Piast mine.

The secret union publications also referred to what they called unconfirmed reports that six people had been killed in street fighting in Gdansk, according to uncensored accounts reaching the West. Government officials insist that seven people killed in a clash at the Wujek coal mine in Silesia are the only deaths resulting from the current crisis.

REPORTS REACHING THE West quoted sources as saying detained Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was visited last week by a government minister who stormed out of the room minutes later. They also said a priest visited Walesa and said Mass for him on Christmas Eve.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Walesa was visited by Mieczyslaw Rakowski, deputy prime minister in charge of trade union affairs and an old opponent at the bargaining table.

The purpose of the visit was not known, but the government is believed anxious to add Walesa's voice to its appeals for calm.

Sources who provided the account interpreted it as meaning Walesa was refusing to cooperate so long as other Solidarity leaders are detained.

Wieslaw Gornicki, an adviser to Polish premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, told the West German television network ARD that many of the thousands of people swept up in mass arrests since martial law began Dec. 13 would be released "shortly." He did not elaborate.

THE GOVERNMENT HAS acknowledged about 5,000 arrests in the past two weeks. But independent Polish sources said they knew of 49 internment camps, each holding about 250 people, for a total of more than 12,000 — and that all Poland's prisons were full.

Church sources said Walesa is being held at the Warsaw headquarters of the army general staff, a large four-story building in the middle of a block cordoned off to motorists but not pedestrians. Top-floor balconies are lined with sandbags, apparently to provide cover for sharpshooters in case the building is attacked.

Official spokesmen have refused to discuss Walesa's whereabouts, saying only that he is being treated well and has access to television and newspapers.

In Washington, the White House confirmed that President Reagan had received a reply from Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, whom he told in a letter last week that he would have to carry out "concrete political and economic measures affecting our relationship" if repression continued in Poland.

Spokeswoman Kim Hoggard said she could not say what was in the Brezhnev letter or characterize it in any way.

MORE THAN 1,100 STRIKERS at the Piast mine spent their 11th day underground Saturday protesting the declaration of martial law, and Warsaw Radio said steelworkers in Katowice would resume normal production Monday.

Polish broadcasts, monitored in European capitals, could not be verified because normal communications are cut in Poland. Government censors, who had been allowing some dispatches to get out, closed their offices Christmas Eve until Monday. Western news organizations pieced together information from travelers, diplomatic sources and others.

Uncensored accounts said the latest union publications told of unconfirmed reports of six deaths on Dec. 16-17 in the Baltic port city of Gdansk, where Solidarity was born among shipyard workers last year.

Solidarity said police had dispersed large crowds using tear gas, water cannon and truncheons in retaking the shipyard from the workers.

A mimeographed Solidarity leaflet said police opened fire on the crowd on Dec. 17, and four people were hospitalized with bullet wounds. One of them died, the leaflet said, identifying the victim as Antoni Browarczyk, 23.

Reagan says referendum not realistic

By The Associated Press

President Reagan says he believes the Polish people should have had the chance to vote in the referendum proposed by the Solidarity trade union, according to accounts published in several Sunday newspapers.

The president also said a summit meeting with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev is "likely" in 1982.

Separately, the White House confirmed that Reagan has received a reply to his letter to Brezhnev on Poland last week.

Interviewed on Wednesday by reporters from several newspaper groups, the president was asked if he believed Solidarity had gone too far in pressing the Polish government for a vote on Poland's form of government.

"I'M NOT GOING TO say that," Reagan replied. "I would defend the right of the people to vote. I am going to say that maybe they should have realized that they were asking the one thing that a communist government cannot allow."

It was the demand for a national referendum that analysts believe prompted — or provided the excuse for — the imposition of martial law in Poland on the night of Dec. 12.

Reagan's observation on the referendum was published in the Miami Herald, one of the Knight-Ridder group. Knight-Ridder was one of the newspaper groups represented at the interview.

The White House is expected to release a transcript of the interview on Sunday.

The United States, Reagan said, expected a crackdown of some sort in Poland, but had "no warning of the actual timing."

IN HIS TELEVISION speech last Wednesday, the president made clear that the United States believes Soviet pressure prompted the crackdown. He said he had written to Brezhnev that he would have no choice but to carry out "concrete political and economic measures affecting our relationship" if repression continued in Poland.

Saturday night, spokeswoman Kim Hoggard said she could not say what was in Brezhnev's reply or even characterize it.

A Reagan-Brezhnev summit has long been on the back burner. Brezhnev in February proposed an East-West summit at the United Nations, but received a cool response.

Recently, however, there have been indications that the idea is coming to the forefront in both countries. Earlier this month Brezhnev said he was still interested.

And Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., said in early December that a 1982 summit conference was likely if a common approach to reducing nuclear weapons in Europe could be found.

Haig noted he is scheduled to meet Andrei Gromyko, his Soviet counterpart, in Geneva next month — a meeting U.S. officials later said may be canceled as a sign of disapproval of the Polish martial law regime.

In his Wednesday interview, Reagan also characterized a summit next year as "likely." He said intended to continue arms talks with the Soviets because "we're in the world together."

ON THE ECONOMY, REAGAN said: "People look at the national figures, unemployment rate .... and so forth. We forget that unemployment is not spread evenly across the country, that what we call a recession in some areas is actually what I said it was in the campaign, a depression."

In the interview, Reagan said he would support some form of "enterprise zones," particularly in areas suffering from unemployment caused by the depressed steel and auto industries.

Reagan ruled out any tax increase next year, although he suggested he might seek higher excise taxes on consumer products in 1983.

"There certainly will be no change in taxes in 1982, I guarantee you," he said.

This Christmas is season for joy, hope worldwide

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

SAN SIMEON — These Christmas days bring great joy to Americans. As the song has it, "This is the season to be jolly." It is a time for giving, for family gatherings, and for rejoicing over that greatest gift of all, a spiritual heritage that lasts from age to age.

It is a time to hark to the old refrain of the angels' song: "Peace on earth, good will to men."

As I was writing my Christmas message last year, that song was marred by some sour notes from Iran, where good will did not prevail. There was tragedy in Teheran, where 52 Americans had been held hostage for more than a year. That season to be jolly also was a season to be sad, and our Christmas celebrating could not be truly joyful until our prisoners were released.

That tragedy is now over, and we fervently hope nothing like it ever happens again.

This year, unfortunately, the Christmas spirit is again blighted in another part of the world. Poland is undergoing an ordeal. That nation's courageous people who have been fighting for their rights and freedom have become the victims of martial law. This is not a season for rejoicing in Gdansk, or Cracow, or Warsaw, or the homes and hamlets where 10 million members of the union Solidarity live in fear, and all 36 million Poles are being brutally suppressed.

Although Americans are not directly involved, as they were in Iran, we cannot ignore this latest tragedy. All freedom-loving nations sympathize with the Poles' brave struggle.

As Pope John Paul II said in St. Peter's Square recently, the problems of Poland are "important to all nations and all societies, to Europe and the contemporary world."

EDITOR'S REPORT

If Christmas is a time for joy, it is also a time for hope.

Let us pray that the seemingly insoluble problems of Poland, like the problem in Iran, may somehow be solved. The season can be happier in the future if we don't give up hope and keep the prayer department busy.

It is my hope that all readers of this newspaper are having a merry Christmas season, full of joy and good health.

Liability card will be required

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Presently, a motorist in Midland who is pulled over by the police is asked to show his driver's license; but in January, Midlanders and other Texans will also be required to show a liability insurance card or policy.

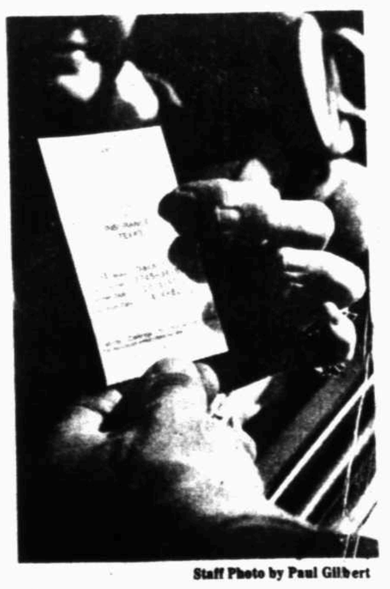

Beginning Jan. 1, Texas law enforcement agencies must require motorists to produce proof of liability insurance as a result of a new state law, according to Capt. Bobby Chaffin of the Department of Public Safety. If a person cannot produce the necessary paper, he may be fined, go to jail or both.

An amendment to the Texas Motor Vehicle Safety Responisbility Act requires evidence of financial responsibility in the form of a policy or card issued by the insurance company. This document must include the company name, policy number, effective dates and proof of at least minimum coverage.

Chaffin said the minimum liability should provide $10,000 bodily injury coverage per person with a maximum of $20,000 bodily injury coverage on each accident. He added the minimum coverage for property damage is $5,000.

Laverne Korthauer, an agent with Farmers Insurance, said the company is in the process of delivering the liability cards, with many of Farmers' policyholders having already received them in the last six weeks.

"This card, as I understand it, must stay in the automobile, not with the person," Ms. Korthauer said, adding this is important to remember because the car must be insured and lack of proof could result in a penalty.

Effective Jan. 1, 1982, Midlanders and other Texans must show proof of vehicle liability insurance coverage as a result of a new state law.

In a random survey at the Midland Post Office and at Midland Park Mall Wednesday, six people stated they had received cards; nine stated they had not received any kind of card, but had their policies ready; and 18 people did not know anything about the law.

Until all the necessary arrangements have been made to acquire the card, Chaffin suggested a photocopy of the motorist's insurance policy. However, he stressed that it should have the "limits and dates along with a statement saying it meets minimum requirements."

"Probably the best way is to keep the card or letter in the glove box of the car because anytime we check for a driver's license we will ask proof of insurance," Chaffin said.

He explained the penalties involved.

"The first time is a First Class C Misdemeanor with a minimum fine of $75 not to exceed $200," Chaffin said, adding that a subsequent violation would be a Class B Misdemeanor with a minimum fine of $200 not to exceed $1,000 or confinement in jail not to exceed 180 days or both.

"A lot of other states have had this for years," Mac Etheredge, district sales manager for Allstate Insurance, said.

He noted that when people buy their insurance from the company, they are automatically covered for liability.

"But so many people are driving down the road with protection for the car only and no liability," he said.

Etheredge's office has had calls with "questions after questions" pertaining

Exploding water heater ignites clothes

Midland Fire Department responded to two fires Friday and Saturday night.

Firemen were called out at about 4 p.m. Saturday to extinguish a blaze from a hot water heater in a closet. The water heater apparently exploded, igniting some clothes in the closet of a house occupied by James Straley, 707 S. Big Spring St., according to the MFD report.

The report stated that there was heavy damage done to the east side of the house, but there were no injuries.

In an incident Friday night, firefighters contained a blaze caused by fireworks. According to the report, the fireworks ignited trash which damaged a couch behind the house of Norman Niedecken, 3101 W. Illinois Ave.

Injunctions to be served on striking Milwaukee policemen

MILWAUKEE (AP) — In an effort to deter future strikes, city officials plan to serve preliminary injunctions to police officers who are back on the job after a 16-hour illegal walkout.

Each of the nearly 1,800 members of the Milwaukee Professional Police Association will be served individually, starting Monday, with the injunction that ordered them back to work Thursday, said Thomas Hayes, a deputy city attorney.

Serving the injunction on individual officers would enable him to obtain contempt citations if officers walk out again, Hayes said. He said the injunction would be in effect until either the city or the union sought a court order to have it lifted.

Robert Kliesmet, president of the police union, said serving the injunction papers, at an estimated cost of $10,000, was a waste of taxpayer money.

Meanwhile, patrolmen were back Friday for the first full day of duty since the walkout, which was called despite a state law prohibiting strikes by public servants.

The union said the walkout was sparked by recent criticism of police handling of several cases, culminating in a black alderman's comments Wednesday that black residents' fears of police could have been a factor in the shooting deaths earlier in the day of two white patrolmen trying to catch a holdup suspect. A 19-year-old man since has been charged with first-degree murder in the deaths and armed robbery of three persons in the tavern.

In a television interview, Alderman Roy Nabors deplored the shootings, but said they "could have been provoked by fear" of police brutality.

"Anytime a policeman approaches a person in the black community, there is that state of fear," Nabors said.

He said later his remarks as edited on television omitted his expressions of sympathy for the policemen.

But union leaders described Nabors' remarks as another example of lack of sympathy for the department and told police at 8 p.m. Wednesday to walk off their jobs.

The strike ended Thursday after the Common Council agreed to union demands that strikers not be disciplined, that the council disavow Nabors' comments and that a council committee consider 10 other union demands, several of them dealing with attempts to improve police-community relations.

Kaiser Steel Corp. town may be no more

EAGLE MOUNTAIN, Calif. (AP) — Residents of this remote ore-mining town fear the economic slump that is taking away their jobs also will bring an end to their community's days in the Mojave Desert sun.

"If you don't get ore and pellets from here, what purpose is there for this place?" asked Mary Statler, one of the 3,700 residents of Eagle Mountain who is pondering the exit of Kaiser Steel Corp., the company that props up the entire local economy.

Kaiser announced last month it would close its Eagle Mountain operations in mid-1982 or early 1983, leaving 1,000 local workers jobless and causing an economic ripple that could also eliminate most of the rest of the jobs in this company town.

It was Kaiser that, in the prosperous days following World War II, established the jobs and even homes and shops for its workers. But for five years, the huge steel company has operated mostly in the red and it says its mining operations no longer pay their way. In its announcement, Kaiser cited rising transportation costs from its inland operations and growing competition from lower-priced steel imported from Europe and Japan.

The economic crunch, Kaiser said, also forced it to schedule the closing of its basic-steel operations in nearby Fontana. Without the operations there, it said, it had no need for the ore from Eagle Mountain's ranges.

Kaiser will retain only its finished-steel fabricating operations at Fontana and will purchase steel slabs elsewhere rather than make its own.

Fontana, which has been diversifying its industrial base for the past decade amid rumors of an imminent Kaiser shutdown, is expected to survive the loss of 2,000 jobs, but Eagle Mountain is not.

"We had planned on staying here and retiring," Mrs. Statler said. "We love the desert and the small-town atmosphere. There are all sorts of rumors ... but surely this will be the last Christmas."

She and her husband, Ken, lease the town's shopping center from Kaiser under a contract that runs through the year 2000. It now appears there soon won't be any need for a shopping center, and the Statlers aren't sure what to do.

"It's the lack of knowledge that is hurting most of the people," Statler said. "... it's the uncertainty. Nobody knows what's going on."

Martha Patty, a second-generation resident whose husband works in the Kaiser mine, said "it's kind of scary to think about going away. This is home."

There are economic as well as emotional considerations. The Pattys live in a company-owned, three-bedroom home with a two-car garage, and the rent of $14.12 a week is deducted from her husband's paycheck. The low rent is one benefit the company provides.

"We can't live anywhere else for what we do here," Mrs. Patty said.

George Allen, who retired last year as a driller after 20 years with Kaiser, said the closing "just doesn't make any sense to me. They got the ore, they got the plant. If they can't make a go of it, then something's wrong. It's like admitting you're a failure."

Superintendent Joe Meler Jr. tried not to talk about the future when he made his regular holiday visit to the town's three schools.

"I don't want to rattle their cages," he said. "We're striving very hard to maintain this place the same — day in, day out — to have some stability.

"The families are going through a lot of throes right now. Everything is up in the air. I'm going to tell the kinds, 'Don't worry about next year. You don't know what next year will bring. But then, you never did know.'"

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — "We think all the time about Poland," said a couple from Krakow as they joined other Polish expatriates celebrating Christmas Mass as refugees from their homeland's political turmoil, economic chaos and military rule.

Hundreds of skilled Poles are living and working in this white-minority ruled nation, and many of them got together for the Christmas service Friday at St. Joseph the Worker Roman Catholic Church in one of Johannesburg's white suburbs.

Many hugged, kissed and cried. They sang a special hymn reserved for times of crisis: "God for a whole century guarded Poland, we pray you to give us freedom again."

The Krakow couple was among an unknown number of Poles who fled here after Poland's Communist government declared martial law Dec. 13, banning most civil liberties and suspending the independent Solidarity union.

"We had no chance to improve our lives in Poland," said the husband, a 31-year-old man who asked not to be named because he feared for relatives still in the country. "We couldn't even get our own flat."

The couple said they were university-educated chemists who obtained South African visas and work permits while vacationing in Austria two weeks ago. Both were hired by the state-owned electric utility, given plane tickets and a home.

The government says more than 400 Polish workers and their families have emigrated here since September and another 1,000 were expected before martial law. Many say they belonged to Solidarity or sympathized with the workers' movement.

"For me it is like starting all over again," said a mechanical engineer who came here via Yugoslavia two weeks ago with his wife and three sons.

Before the Polish crackdown, South Africa's anti-communist government had recruited skilled Polish workers because of an urgent need to fill jobs and a willingness by Poles to leave their country. Recruiting has been mostly done through specialized journals and word-of-mouth. Polish expatriates say.

Most Poles work in South African power plants, steel mills and factories as engineers and technicians. Some say they do not like South Africa's policy of racial separation. But they also say they earn more, eat better and live in nicer housing than in Poland, where shortages have become a way of life.

Boston runs jail on honor system

By BOB ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

ELIZABETH, W.Va. (AP) — Sheriff Lloyd "Pudd" Boston spent a recent night catnapping at a hospital in nearby Parkersburg, keeping an eye on the grizzled old man who was his prisoner.

"He slept all night," said the old man, who had been charged with malicious wounding the day before and was in the hospital complaining of chest pains. "What kind of sheriff is that anyway?"

Boston just grinned. The Wirt County Jail that he runs has become known as one of the better places to spend time behind bars. One inmate who walked off earlier this month was knocking on the door to get back in before the night was out.

"It ain't a hotel," said Boston, who is in his 60s, "but you've got to treat them human."

Boston's reputation for taking care of prisoners has brought rumblings around this northwestern West Virginia town that he is too soft. But the sheriff says that charge was put to rest when he won re-election in 1980.

A recent report to the state Supreme Court cited the jail for its "unique and humane style of management reflective of a large family."

And, the sheriff says, running a jail on what amounts to an honor system helps financially. He has only two deputies, and one of them is part-time. The county pays him $5 a day to feed each prisoner.

Boston has enlisted inmates in the operation of the jail. The prisoners sometimes cook, clean or work in a nearby garden. Until recently, it was not uncommon to find no one supervising the jail during the day, and inmates were allowed to go shopping or visit friends in the community.

Boston says he personally bought two television sets for the jail and also pays the cable TV fee out of his own pocket.

Now, however, Boston says he is tightening supervision because two inmates wandered away earlier this month. Although both were back the next day, he says the incident made him realize that a good thing can be carried too far.

But Boston's belief that a county jail need not be run like a maximum-security prison remains unshaken.

The inmates, not surprisingly, appreciate his efforts.

"It's probably about the closest thing to home you can get without being at home," said Pat Pirtle, 34. "We're locked up at night, but what the heck, all you're going to do is sleep anyway."

Pirtle, who was convicted of aiding and abetting a forgery, said he sometimes visited his girlfriend in town.

On a recent day, Pirtle was busy reading a magazine while keeping an ear tuned to the police radio. He also answered some of the calls while the sheriff and the jailer were out of the office.

"The sheriff's philosophy is 'you treat a man like an animal, he's going to act like one.' There are restrictions. They have to know where we are," says Gary Goff, 18.

Pirtle was released on probation shortly after he was interviewed. But Goff was one of those who left earlier this month, allegedly unlocking the cell of another inmate, who then took off with him.

But the "jailbreak" didn't last long. Goff was picked up a few hours later, and the other inmate got cold and was knocking on the jailhouse door before the night was out, Boston said.

to the new law. Allstate's regional office will be mailing cards to its customers before Jan. 1, 1982.

"The card will be made available to carry in the wallet, but as I understand it, the card goes with each vehicle," Etheredge said.

Agents at both insurance agencies said that people from out of state can have their insurance transferred if they are insured by a company that operates in Midland.

"Farmers is in most states, but they are not located in Indiana," Korthauer said. "Everyone moving to Texas should check with their insurance agent."

According to the Department of Public Safety, vehicles exempt from the new law include government owned vehicles, those which have a bond, certificate of deposit or securities in the minimum amount of $25,000 are on file with the Texas DPS, self insured vehicles, permits from the Texas Railroad Commission and farm and ranch implements.

Persons found in violation of the new law must prove financial responsibility for the next five years. Failure to do so will result in suspension of the driver's license and cancellation of state motor vehicle registration by the DPS.

Poor weather causes halt to search for pilot

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Poor weather prevented the Coast Guard from resuming its search Saturday for an Air Force pilot missing for nine days whose crewman was found alive after six days at sea.

A spokesman for the Coast Guard Rescue Coordination Center in Miami said that officials hoped to resume the search by noon today.

Rain and resulting poor visibility dimmed hopes that the pilot of the F4-E Phantom, 1st Lt. Michael A. Mattson, might still be alive.

His crewman, 1st Lt. Thomas W. Tiller, was rescued by the crew of a shrimp boat Thursday, about 45 miles southeast of Charleston, after he had floated in a one-man lifeboat for six days.

The search for both men had been called off Wednesday, but it was resumed after Tiller was found.

Tiller, 26, of Houston, was transferred Saturday from the Naval Regional Medical Center in Charleston, where he was hospitalized for exhaustion, exposure and a rash, to the Air Force hospital at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C., where he and Mattson were stationed.

The two had been on a routine training flight with a second jet when their plane lost power and plunged into the sea. An automatic radio locator beacon did not activate and searchers had no idea where the plane had gone down.

Two C-130 airplanes which joined in the renewed search for Mattson on Christmas Day returned to Charleston because of gusty winds and high seas Friday.

The 95-foot Coast Guard cutter Cape Knox, which put out to sea Friday looking for Mattson, remained there during the night to serve as a communications center before returning to Charleston on Saturday.

Hopes that Mattson, 24, of Joppa, Md., is still alive were based on his age and his good physical condition. The search Friday had centered on the area where Tiller was found.

Priest found beaten to death in Odessa motel

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who vanished from his small West Texas parish was found beaten to death in an Odessa motel, authorities said Saturday.

The body of the Rev. Patrick Ryan was found Tuesday at the Sage and Sand Motel, but was not identified until Saturday.

Pathologists determined in a preliminary report that Ryan could have died from a blow to the throat, said police Sgt. Mitch Haller.

Angel Perez, a member of Ryan's Denver City parish who traveled to Odessa Saturday to identify the priest, said police would not let him look at the body because "they said it was too badly beaten up."

Perez, in a telephone interview from Denver City, said he and Yoakum County Sheriff Jim Rice identified the priest from his clothes and from a photograph taken by police.

Haller said Ryan "was not beaten that badly about the face," but he refused to say anything else except that "I'm sure it's safe to say it was a homicide."

Ryan, 51, left a meal on the stove when he vanished from his parish without a word to his congregation. He was last seen on Monday, but he was not reported missing until Christmas morning.

Ryan, who was born in Doon, Ireland, lived alone in a parsonage beside St. William's Catholic Church in Denver City and was the only priest for that town of 5,000, located 85 miles southwest of Lubbock, and for the nearby community of Plains.

Stunned parishioners spread the word of Ryan's death by telephone Saturday.

"They are broken hearted. They feel terrible. Everbody is just shocked," said Pierre St. Romaine, a member of Ryan's congregation in Plains.

"He was such a good saintly man. He was such a wonderful man. He reminded you of St. Francis of Assisi. He wanted to be poor, work with the poor and didn't want anything for himself," St. Romaine said in a telephone interview.

The Rev. Bill Hanly, a fellow Pallottine priest who knew Ryan since they entered the seminary together in 1949 in Thurlus, Ireland, said Friday Ryan was a man who loved to work for the poor.

"He worked constantly to help people. He might have tried to help someone and they took advantage of that," said Hanly.

Haller said Ryan registered at the motel Monday night but declined to say whether he used his own name.

Motel assistant manager Norma Farr said detectives told her to refer all calls to police.

"There was no evidence in the house of any struggle. There was a fully cooked meal prepared and still sitting on the stove," said Rice.

Gunman kills woman, her 3-year-old son

DALLAS (AP) — Authorities say they believe the slayings of a 30-year-old Dallas woman and her 3-year-old son were the work of a lone gunman who did not know his victims.

Roxann J. Jeeves and her son, Kristopher, were found shot to death in a wooded field in a southeastern section of Dallas County about 11:45 a.m. Wednesday.

Rewards totaling $20,000 have been posted for information leading to the arrest of the gunman, according to sheriff's Capt. Gus Rose.

Ms. Jeeves had been shot twice in the face and her son was shot once in the head, authorities said.

Rose said it was a "good possibility" the killings resulted from a robbery attempt, but he said he has not definitely established a motive.

"He (the killer) may have intended to take her purse and her car," Rose said. "But I think he panicked when he couldn't get the car going because the keys weren't in it."

Rose said the car keys were found in Ms. Jeeves coat pocket and her purse was found undisturbed on the front seat.

The gunman may have left the area on foot and may have hitchhiked, he said.

"We're interested in talking to anyone that picked up a hitchhiker in that area around noon," Rose said.

Schepps Dairy Inc. has offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the killer.

Two citizens, who asked not to be identified, offered rewards totaling $15,000, according to Rose.

Natural gas processing tanks explode

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — An explosion heard across a 30-mile area of Northwest Texas set off fires in two natural gas processing tanks at a small plant 15 miles south of here, authorities said.

The blast rattled windows in Wichita Falls and was heard by residents of Burkburnett, some 30 miles to the north, according to reports received by law enforcement agencies.

Firefighters from five area departments rushed to the scene, but efforts to contain the blazes were hampered by intense heat.

No injuries were reported.

Melvin Bills, Holiday fire chief, said a 15-thousand gallon distillate storage tank was completely destroyed and a smaller tank was allowed to burn itself out.

No damage estimate was available, Bills said.

The blast took place at a small fuel plant located on a ranch near Lake Arrowhead. Authorities said the plant is owned by Coronado Gas System of Wichita Falls.

Earl Sargent, farm director of radio station KWFT in Wichita Falls, was driving to work at the time of the explosion. He said the blast was so bright it made it appear the sun was rising to the south of Wichita Falls.

Laredo man dies in gun accident

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A 20-year-old Laredo man died Friday when a rifle fell from a rack in his truck-mounted hunting stand and discharged.

Tomas Jaime Gonzalez Jr., who was shot once in the back of the head at a hunting lease 25 miles east of Laredo, was pronounced dead at Mercy Hospital in Laredo.

Austin man is accused of abducting 19-year-old woman

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — An Austin man accused of abducting a 19-year-old woman and taking her into two other states was being transferred Saturday to the Hunt County jail.

Terry Lang Marburger, 26, was held on a charge of aggravated robbery in the theft of $500 from the mobile home where Diane Tindell was abducted. Bond was set at $100,000.

Marburger is accused of abducting Miss Tindell from her parents' home in Commerce Wednesday morning. She was freed late Thursday morning when Marburger surrendered to police in Amarillo.

Police said the surrender came after Marburger barricaded himself inside a motel restaurant with Miss Tindell for almost two hours when police tried to stop him because of a routine traffic violation.

Miss Tindell said she was forced to lie on the floor of a car with a gun to her head while her abductor drove to Paris, Texas, then to Arkansas, across Oklahoma and on to Amarillo.

She said that during the trip, her abductor talked about "needing a fix" and about unidentified flying objects. She said he promised not to hurt her, and told her that he wanted to take her to California and would release her in about a month.

Woman connected with former CIA agents is free on bond

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A woman scheduled to appear before a grand jury investigating two fugitive former CIA agents is free today after a U.S. magistrate changed his mind and decided to reduce her bond.

Magistrate Alex McGlinchey said he decided to reduce Roberta Barnes' bond from $500,000 to $200,000 Friday after her father and brother-in-law agreed to sign it. He turned down a request for a reduced bond Thursday.

"She knows that her father and brother-in-law would face financial ruin if she should fail to appear," McGlinchey said. "I don't think she wants to put them through that."

Traffic accidents kill 20 on Texas roads

By The Associated Press

Traffic accidents killed at least 20 people in Texas during the Christmas holiday weekend, and all but two of the victims died in single-fatality accidents, the Department of Public Safety said.

The DPS predicted that 51 people would die in motor vehicle accidents during the holiday period, which began at 6 p.m. Thursday and ends at midnight Sunday.

Administration now has human rights policy

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It didn't come easily, but the Reagan administration has finally worked out a human rights policy. The man who runs it says the policy is based on the simple premise that what counts is the result, not the rhetoric.

Almost a year passed before the administration could come up with both a policy and an assistant secretary of state to carry it out.

The assistant secretary is Elliott Abrams, a 33-year old former Senate aide whose reputation as a conciliator should be helpful in a post that has been at the center of a political storm in the past 12 months.

Abrams, who was sworn in Dec. 11, outlined his views on the human rights question during a meeting with reporters last week.

He did not directly criticize the Carter administration's high profile policy, but he made it clear his approach will be different.

"If your human rights policy consists mostly of public speeches, then everyone will see what you're doing and you will get a great deal of credit for your efforts," he said.

"In a sense, whether or not they work, you get 'A' for effort." That, he said, "is not a human rights policy. It's a p.r. policy."

In contrast, he said, he will make more use of private diplomatic channels, particularly when a friendly country is involved. That way is likely to have a greater impact, he said.

But quiet diplomacy has its problems, he admits. One "insoluble problem," he said, is that it raises credibility questions; people won't believe that you're doing what you say you're doing.

One who scorns the low profile approach is Jacobo Timerman, the Argentine newspaper editor jailed for two years during the Carter administration by Argentina's military authorities.

Timerman calls quiet diplomacy a "policy of surrender" and says he may never have been released had the Carter administration not repeatedly called public attention to his case.

Carter himself claimed that because of his efforts, thousands of political prisoners around the world were set free.

There's no way to judge Carter's contention, said Abrams, because if a country decides to free political prisoners, "it's very hard to say what precipitated that action."

Abrams declined to discuss specific countries — consistent with his policy that behind-the-scenes efforts take priority.

But he noted with approval a recent report in the Wall Street Journal which suggested that in the Philippines, the low key approach has worked more effectively than the Carter policy.

The key to the new policy will be flexible tactics, Abrams said. "I don't have any predilliction for any particular tactic — public condemnation, diplomatic efforts, security and economic sanctions. The question is: what is likely to have the desired effect?"

Public criticism will be used, he said, but not as frequently as private approaches.

Perhaps the most serious charges against the Carter policies were leveled by United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick. She has said that public American pressure on pro-American governments in Iran and Nicaragua helped bring about their downfall and replacement by regimes which are not only more repressive, but also are anti-American.

Many analysts dispute her assertion that Nicaragua is more repressive now than it was during the Somoza dynasty.

Abrams did not allude to those two examples. But he did say that throughout the Third World, the choice "is not between paradise and an existing and troubled regime. It is between the regime in power and a much worse regime. If you replace a repressive regime with a more repressive regime, in many cases with a communist regime, you have not helped the human rights situation."

The absence of controversy surrounding Abrams appointment contrasts sharply with the debate which accompanied the nomination of Ernest Lefever, Reagan's first choice for the job. Lefever had strong support from Senate conservatives, but bowed out last June after the Senate Foreign Relations Committee rejected his nomination 13-4.

Cody back in hospital

CHICAGO (AP) — Cardinal John Cody is back in Northwestern Memorial Hospital for an undisclosed illness after he was released to celebrate Christmas midnight Mass, a spokesman said.

Hospital spokesman Greg Turner said Cody returned to the hospital Friday evening and was reported in fair condition. He said the cardinal requested no further information be released.

A spokesman for the Archdiocese of Chicago also declined to disclose the nature of Cody's ailment.

He was released from the hospital Thursday, his 74th birthday. He had been hospitalized since Tuesday for an undisclosed illness.

Cody celebrated Christmas midnight Mass in Holy Name Cathedral and issued a plea for prayers for the people of Poland.

"We are strengthened by them because we know the noble Polish people see in Christ peace, love and solidarity," Cody told a congregation of more than 2,000.

The Mass was broadcast locally on radio and television to this city with the largest Polish-American population in the nation. An estimated 700,000 Poles live in Chicago.

Teacher gets special message from defector

BURKE, Va. (AP) — When Irene Toburen learned that a defecting Polish ambassador was a fellow airline passenger, she asked for a souvenir. Instead, she got a special message about freedom addressed to her sixth-grade class in Frankfort, Kan.

The message is a letter from Zdzislaw Rurarz, the Polish ambassador to Japan who defected Thursday to the United States to protest the military crackdown in his homeland.

Mrs. Toburen, a teacher from Waterville, Kan., boarded a Seattle-to-Washington, D.C., flight Thursday night in Kansas City, Mo. She learned that Rurarz, 51, was on the plane headed to Washington with his wife and daughter under a grant of asylum from the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo.

Mrs. Toburen asked the stewardess if it would be possible to get a memento — a glass or a placemat — from the ambassador.

"She said she'd see what she could do," Mrs. Toburen said.

The stewardess returned with airline stationery and said if Mrs. Toburen would write down what class she taught, the ambassador would give her an autograph.

After about 30 minutes, the stewardess returned with Rurarz' note addressed to Mrs. Toburen's class of sixth-graders.

"It is my great pleasure to write a few words to you," Rurarz wrote. "You are a happy young generation of great and proud America. Please remember there is nothing dearer than freedom."

Reagans have become practical in gift giving

WASHINGTON (AP) — Instead of buying Christmas presents for each other, President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, will buy something for their California ranch as a 30th wedding anniversary gift, a White House spokesman says.

Over the years, the Reagans have become "more practical" in their gift giving, said spokesman Mark Weinberg.

The Reagan's 30th anniversary is March 4.

The Reagans and two of the president's four children gathered Friday morning around the Christmas tree on the second floor living quarters of the White House.

The Reagans gave son Ron a portable stereo cassette player with earphones. Ron's wife, Doria, received a pair of earrings.

And Patti, the Reagans' daughter, received a pair of boots.

Patti gave her mother an exercise suit and leg warmers and Ron and Doria gave the president and first lady special neck pillows.

The first lady's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Loyal Davis, sent their daughter a necklace that had belonged to Mrs. Reagan's grandmother and a pair of earrings that had belonged to Mrs. Davis.

Also present for the gift opening were the first lady's brother, Dr. Richard Davis, his wife, Patricia, and their two children.

Later Friday, the first family hosted a Christmas dinner of turkey with chestnut stuffing, candied sweet potatoes with marshmallow, cranberry sauce, turnips, green beans and money bread, which is an egg bread. For dessert, there was a frozen "Christmas log" with a pistachio filling.

Also dining with the Reagans were Charles and Mary Jane Wick and their five children.

More Americans identify themselves as Democrats

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Led by a shift among women, who were less likely than men to vote for Ronald Reagan in 1980 and are less likely to approve of his performance in 1981, more Americans are once again identifying themselves as Democrats than as Republicans.

The shift, which occurred during the last four months, returned to the Democrats the advantage in party identification that they long held, according to Associated Press-NBC News national public opinion polls.

AP-NBC News polls in May and July reported more Americans identifying themselves as Republicans than Democrats for the first time since national public opinion surveys began asking about party preferences in the 1930s.

In May, 41 percent said they generally think of themselves as Republicans, 40 percent said they generally think of themselves as Democrats.

Those respective totals include people who said they were independents but added that they are closer to one party or the other. The remaining 19 percent said they were strictly independent, with no leanings toward either party.

After a similar 42-41 Republican edge in the July AP-NBC News poll, the Democratic party regained slight advantages of 43-39 in August and September and 42-38 in October.

By November the Democratic advantage had stretched to 45-37, and this month it was 46-37.

The 10 AP-NBC News polls in 1981, for which more than 16,000 people across the country were interviewed, showed no party preference shift by age, income, education or any demographic category other than sex.

Women have been slightly more likely than men to identify themselves as Democrats in every presidential election year since 1968, according to University of Michigan national political surveys.

In the first four AP-NBC News polls in 1981 combined, 44 percent of the women and 41 percent of the men said they were Democrats.

But the combined September, October, November and December 1981 polls reported a significant statistical shift among women, with 48 percent identifying themselves as Democrats.

During the last four months of the year, meanwhile, the figure for men identifying themselves as Democrats was 40 percent, consistent with the poll findings for the first part of the year.

While men were evenly divided during the last four months of the year — 40 percent Democrat and 40 percent Republican — women split 48-36 for the Democrats.

There are several specific areas and issues on which women's opinions regularly differed from men's, including their attitudes toward President Reagan, the economy and war-related issues.

Only 47 percent of the women voters in 1980 — compared with 56 percent of male voters — cast their ballots for the Reagan-Bush ticket, and women have been more likely than men to be critical of the president in the AP-NBC News polls since he took office.

In the Dec. 14-15 poll, for instance, 53 percent of the men but only 43 percent of the women said Reagan is doing a good or excellent job as president. Forty-one percent of the men and only 31 percent of the women said he is doing a good or excellent job handling the economy. Fifty percent of the men and only 38 percent of the women said he is doing a good or excellent job in handling foreign affairs.

And 60 percent of the men, compared with 53 percent of the women, said they trust Reagan to do what is right all or most of the time.

Women were also slightly more likely than men to say that they are worried Reagan will get the United States involved in a war, that he and his administration talk too much about the possibility of using nuclear weapons and that such talk increases the danger of war.

Women throughout the 1981 AP-NBC News polls were also more pessimistic than men both about the future of the economy in general and the future of their personal family finances.

Women were more likely than men to say high unemployment is the most important problem for the government to help control over the next three years, while men were more likely than women to say high interest rates is the most important.

In the December poll, respondents were three times as likely to say the Democrats were more sympathetic to women's issues and problems: 54 percent said the Democrats, 17 percent said the Republicans and the rest were unsure or said neither.

Respondents who said they support the Equal Rights Amendment — favored by the 1980 Democratic national campaign but opposed by the Republicans — were more likely to say they were Democrats.

The December poll reported other shifts among all respondents in their attitudes toward the two parties.

Fifty-four percent said the Democrats and 19 percent said the Republicans can do the best job helping the poor and the elderly. In comparison, the split was less wide, 45-26 for the Democrats, in the July AP-NBC News poll.

Respondents split 35-34 for the Democrats in regard to which party can do the best job keeping the United States out of war, compared with a 38-30 Republican advantage when that question was asked in July.

The Republicans held their advantage for which party can do the best job handling the nation's economic problems, but it shrunk from 50-24 over the Democrats in July to 45-31 in December.

As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,600 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations. That is, if one could have talked this past week to all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Delaware crossing re-enacted

WASHINGTON CROSSING, N.J. (AP) — More than 8,000 people were on hand Friday to cheer the 29th annual re-enactment of Gen. George Washington's Christmas Day 1776 crossing of the Delaware River.

The band of men posing as 70 Continental Army soldiers ran into no obstacles such as last year's, when drought forced them to abandon their 40-foot boats and make the crossing from Pennsylvania to New Jersey by bridge.

Landmark building still smoulders after Christmas Eve fire

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A Christmas Eve fire which destroyed the University of Michigan's landmark economics department building was still smoldering today, officials said.

Floors collapsed in the 125-year-old wood and brick structure, making it impossible for firefighters to remain inside to battle the blaze that broke out about 10 p.m. Thursday, Ann Arbor fire department Batallion Chief Robert Murphy said Friday.

Murphy said the three-story structure — the oldest classroom building on the sprawling U-M campus — was a "total loss," along with valuable manuscripts and books it housed.

Man dressed as Santa breaks into home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man dressed as Santa Claus broke into a home Saturday, struggled with a gun-toting woman resident and ran out the front door to find police waiting, officers said.

Joyce Price, 43, phoned the police at about 4:15 a.m. to say she heard her kitchen window being opened and had grabbed her handgun. While she was talking, the man entered her bedroom, officers said.

"He lunged at her, hitting her arm," said Officer Fred Love. The gun went off, firing one round into her mattress, he said.

The man ran out the door just as police arrived, Love said.

Police said they arrested Raymond Kelly, 22, whose address was unknown, for investigation of burglary.

Police search for dead woman's husband

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Little progress has been made in a month-long search for a Michigan man whose wife died mysteriously last year, federal authorities said.

David Davis, 37, is wanted for for unauthorized flight to avoid prosecution for murder, a spokesman for the U.S. marshal's office, Paul Brison, said.

Shannon Davis, 25, formerly of Toledo, Ohio, died in July 1980 while horseback riding with her husband near their farm. Davis, her husband of 10 months, was beneficiary in six life insurance policies on his wife, worth about $300,000, and has collected about $20,000 from two policies, according to a published report.

Americans set record with phone calls

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An estimated 23 million Americans placed long-distance telephone calls Christmas Day, and about 5.3 million were placed in five western states, Pacific Telephone reported.

"I've been here for years and this is the biggest day I've ever seen," said Gordon Bull, manager of network operations at Pacific Telephone.

"Part of it is that people can't afford to travel, but I suspect a lot of people are calling instead of sending Christmas cards."

Woman charges doll ideas were stolen

CLEVELAND, Ga. (AP) — A Kentucky woman has charged in a $1 million lawsuit that local dollmaker Xavier Roberts stole her ideas for his Little People dolls.

Martha Nelson, of Louisville, filed suit in U.S. District Court earlier this month saying the Little People are substantially identical to her Doll Babies, including the marketing technique of treating them as real babies.

Ms. Nelson claims Roberts stole her design after she displayed her handmade "Doll Babies" in 1977 at a craft show at Unicoi State Park, where Roberts managed a craft shop.

Roberts, whose Little People can be "adopted" for $95 to $200, has denied the allegations.

Policeman's widow pays lawyer extra

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A policeman's widow has paid her lawyer an extra $15,000 from an out-of-court settlement in connection with her husband's death, despite a judge's ruling.

A judge had ruled lawyer William Ginsburg of Omaha was entitled to only 25 percent of the $483,750 out-of-court settlement, and he had to return some $39,000. Ruth Lipari said the ruling was unfair and paid Ginsburg an extra $15,000, according to an Omaha World-Herald article Saturday.

Ginsberg negotiated a settlement from the federal government and Sears Roebuck and Co., in the 1976 gunshot killing of Douglas County Sheriff's Capt. Dennis Lipari. The murder gun was bought at Sears, and the man later acquitted by reason of insanity had been receiving psychiatric treatment at a Veterans Administration hospital.

Woman sees children for first time

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A woman who was born blind was able to see the faces of her seven children this Christmas for the first time in 76 years.

"I didn't think I'd see what they looked like until I got to heaven," said Myrtle Gilmore in a telephone interview from her Poplar Bluff home Saturday.

Mrs. Gilmore underwent surgery this fall that removed cataracts from her eyes and enabled her to see things that had only been hazy shapes before.

In a family reunion Friday in Poplar Bluff, Mrs. Gilmore also got to see her 15 grandchildren and to watch her 3-year-old great-grandson as he opened his Christmas presents.

"I knew about what size they were, but naturally they don't look exactly as I had imagined," Mrs. Gilmore said. "To me they're all beautiful."

She said her only regret was not being able to see her husband, who died in 1972. They had been married 46 years. She was only able to see him in photographs.

"He was my eyes when he was living," Mrs. Gilmore said. "He was so good to me. In all our married life, he never said one word against my not seeing."

Although her sight is not perfect, she can see well enough to read the time on her wall clock and to see the colors in her Christmas tree.

Mrs. Gilmore, who grew up in rural southeast Missouri, said she learned self-reliance from her parents.

Her father taught her numbers and the letters of the alphabet, while her mother taught her to cook and sew. After her marriage, she learned to change diapers, keep a sparkling home and cook for a family of nine.

Third slaughter of jackrabbits planned

MUD LAKE, Idaho (AP) — Farmers planned a third mass slaughter of jackrabbits for today on eastern Idaho's snow-covered prairie, but unlike the two previous roundups, they said they would use gas chambers to kill the pests.

State officials received strong protests from animal-protection groups following the bludgeoning of about 20,000 jackrabbits in the first two weekly roundups and ordered the Idaho National Guard to dig trenches near Mud Lake for use as carbon dioxide chambers.

According to the plan, the rabbits will be baited into the trenches.

In the earlier roundups, hundreds of farmers, some from bordering states, whooped and hollered as they drove the rabbits into a huge pen and beat them to death with sticks, ball bats, golf clubs and other blunt instruments.

I looked up and there was Jim watching me through the store window.

Looking at tomorrow through the snow.

I always liked Jim Davis. Everyone did. He was a happy-go-lucky guy. His favorite saying was, "Live today, tomorrow never comes."

He lived next door and we worked in the same office. So I know I lived as well as he did for the most part. But Jim always managed to spend that "little extra" he should've been saving.

I remember the morning he roared into the driveway with a brand-new sports car.

"Hey, Jack, grab a look at this set of wheels," he shouted as soon as he could crawl out of the cockpit.

I was impressed. The car was a beautiful racing machine. But not very practical for driving through the city.

He was bubbling over with excitement. "Cost me an arm and a leg, but it's got everything. What do you think? This thing'll go 150."

I had to ask it. "Where are you going to drive at 150 around here, Jim?"

He looked as though the thought had never occurred to him.

The thing cost a fortune to keep tuned up, but that didn't change his thinking at all. I had tried many times to get him to join the Payroll Savings Plan at work and buy some U.S. Savings Bonds for the future. He agreed it might be a good idea, but he never quite got around to it.

A few days ago, I was buying some tropical clothes. I looked up and there was Jim watching me through the store window. He came in laughing. "Summer clothes? You're rushing the season, buddy; there's a big blizzard outside."

I picked up a plantation straw, tilted it over one eye and said, "Just getting some new duds for the land of sunshine. I finally decided to buy that condominium in Hawaii. Great deal. We use it for our winter vacations and rent it out the rest of the year."

"How did you ever save enough for the down payment? I couldn't come up with that. We make the same salary. Your house is like mine. Our lifestyle isn't that much different."

I gave the clerk the money as I said, "Right. I don't miss that 'little extra' I've been putting away for Savings Bonds, and you wouldn't either. But THAT is what makes the difference. That little extra. It adds up."

We left this morning for our Hawaiian vacation. We said our goodbyes to Jim and his wife. It was still snowing as we pulled out of the driveway. And Jim looked like a man that was doing a lot of thinking as he leaned on his snow shovel and waved goodbye. Like a man who might be seeing tomorrow and considering something like U.S. Savings Bonds at last.

I looked back over my shoulder. "Well, better late than never," I said.

The time to start saving for tomorrow is today. U.S. Savings Bonds make it easy. You'll be helping yourself and your country.

Phoenix-area people give house for Christmas

GUADELUPE, Ariz. (AP) — When John and Josephine Rivas discovered their home of 13 years had vanished, Mrs. Rivas cried for joy.

Gone was their rundown, one-room, 10-by-10-foot shack. In its place stood a 24-by-24-foot, two-bedroom frame home painted beige and brown.

The shack, with splintered walls and a tar-papered roof, lacked running water, electricity and heat. The new home had all three and air conditioning to boot, along with six silver-dollar eucalyptus trees outside where only dust had flourished.

"This new home will change our lives a lot," Rivas, a 47-year-old farm laborer, said Thursday when the couple returned. "At last, we have something to take care of, to come home to. Before, we had no place to sleep, cook, stretch around. Now, after working 10 or 12 hours in the fields, I can come home to a hot shower. There's nothing like a hot shower when you're sweaty and dusty."

More than 200 Phoenix-area businesses and individuals contributed time, labor, materials and money. The home was furnished, complete with a Christmas tree and dozens of gifts, through Salvation Army donations.

"I owe all of them thanks," Mrs. Rivas said, wiping the tears from her cheek. "Someday, if I ever get rich, I want to help them, too."

Ken Arrand, a partner in AMA Development Inc., a Phoenix contracting firm, coordinated the construction of the home, which he says is worth $34,000. He got the idea to build it from a story that appeared Dec. 9 as part of a series the Arizona Republic runs in conjunction with its Christmas fund.

He said he received more than 300 calls from people interested in contributing to the house.

It took just a few minutes for Brother Ivo Toneck of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, to level the shack with his backhoe, and cockroaches scurried from the dusty pile that once was their home as the cracked boards collapsed.

"It's a disgrace that anyone should have to live in a place like this," he said. "My work is with the youngsters in this community. I think if you can give them a sense of identity, of self-respect, then they will never put up with living in shacks like this."

While their home was being replaced, the Rivases and four of their children — John Jr., 13; Bobby, 11; Jose, 9; and Maria, 7 — spent the holiday free of charge at a Scottsdale motel. Daughter Carol, 16, and her 3-month-old son, Gilbert, stayed behind with Josephine's mother, who lives next door.

It wasn't clear how Rivas, who is paid a minimum wage and receives food stamps, will pay for upkeep of the new home, but the $1,235 water hookup charge was taken care of through donations.

People band together to search for missing boy

FITCHBURG, Mass. (AP) — Authorities have suspended an organized search for young Patrick Martin, who vanished six days ago while sledding, but more than 200 people who were touched by the 8-year-old boy's disappearance say they want to keep looking for him.

"It's been amazing," civil defense director Mark Kimmel said of the volunteers who telephoned him on Christmas Day and offered their services. "It's really unbelievable the outpouring of people who want to help. Fellow civil defense agencies offered help, and just people who wanted to help called."

Police said that although the hunt was suspended Thursday, officers on street beats have a description of Patrick and will keep a lookout for the boy, who has been missing since Monday afternoon.

"I've been thinking about it all day," Kimmel said. "I have two little kids at home. If we have to, we will go back for our own peace of mind."

The search by about 35 civil defense workers was suspended after volunteers simply ran out of places to look in a 5-square-mile area around the boy's home and school in this north-central Massachusetts city of about 37,000, Kimmel said.

Some workers, family and friends spent about 15 hours on Christmas Day to look for Patrick, Kimmel said. He added that he was unsure what areas any new volunteers might check.

"We have no place for them to go right now," he said. "The area has been covered to the best of our ability now."

Kimmel discouraged people from coming to look independently in the area because it includes abandoned houses, railroad tracks, a river and a chemical plant.

"People just coming into town and looking on their own is a very hazardous thing to do," he said. "You can have a whole bunch of other people lost out there."

Patrick's mother, Linda, reported him missing four hours after the boy went out to play.

Police described the boy as 4-foot-8 with blond hair and brown eyes. He was wearing a blue ski jacket with light blue stripes, blue corduroy pants, black gloves and boots when he vanished.

Patrick's parents are separated, but police said they were satisfied he wasn't with his father.

After Friday's search, patrolman Jack Murray said, "It's got to be a tough Christmas at home."

"We've combed the area," Murray said. "There's no way he's in the area. We don't know what to think."

Police said the search included the entire stretch of the nearby Boston & Maine Railroad tracks and a section of the Nashua River. Murray said the tracks run behind the Martin home and the river lies beyond the tracks.

Parrish reflects on semester

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Next to the brightly glowing lights strung through the branches of the Christmas tree in his home, Dr. Jess H. Parrish, dressed casually in slacks and a sweater, leaned back into the cushions of his couch to reflect on his first semester as president of Midland College.

"I think I've been — I hate to say surprised because I expected it to be good — but pleasantly surprised because most of the things I've looked at have been better than I expected," Parrish admitted.

The Ballinger native, who received his bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees in education from Texas Tech University, came to Midland College after serving 10 years as the founding president of Shelby Community College in Memphis, Tenn.

"When you first get here you're looking into a lot of things such as personnel, academic programs, community support — I've had the chance to look at all those things I first talked about when I got here," he said as sounds of his wife, Norma, making divinity drifted from the kitchen.

"HAPPILY, THE programs are sound and I think that our main concentration will have to be on the new programs to relate with some of the things that are happening in this area," he continued.

Parrish hopes to expand the school's petroleum programs. With a new geology teacher to begin instruction in the spring, Parrish said the college will then have two full-time geology teachers on the staff.

"We fill every class we put out there related to that (petroleum) field," Parrish said.

"The good thing about a community college is you can stop (any program) at any time you want," he explained. "And you can gear the programs to where the needs are."

The institution of a two-year Associate Degree Nursing Program to begin instruction next fall is one program the Midland College administration felt was needed. Parrish said he was excited about the program, which gained its final approval from the Texas Education Agency following a hearing in Austin Dec. 16.

WITH THREE full-time, registered nurses already hired for instruction purposes and plans laid for an individualized computer assisted program, Parrish attributed the beginning success to the donations of Midlanders and the representatives of Midland Memorial Hospital who appeared at the hearings in Austin.

"I'm still overwhelmed with the monetary support we're getting from the community," Parrish said excitedly. "I believe what does and can make the difference in Midland College and just another community college is the community support.

"What has enabled us to set our program above the rest is the donations," he continued. "For the first year (of the nursing program), we're talking about close to about half a million dollars."

Parrish said the college was already funded for the first two years, mainly due to donations of community residents.

"We'd have to wait two years if we were just relying on state fundings," he said.

ACCORDING TO Parrish, the change that will most affect all programs, including the nursing program, is a restructuring of administrative posts.

"We're reorganizing mostly in order to utilize the strengths we have," Parrish said. "Every administrator has to kind of put the things together the way he or she likes it.

"This is just a little more comfortable structure for me."

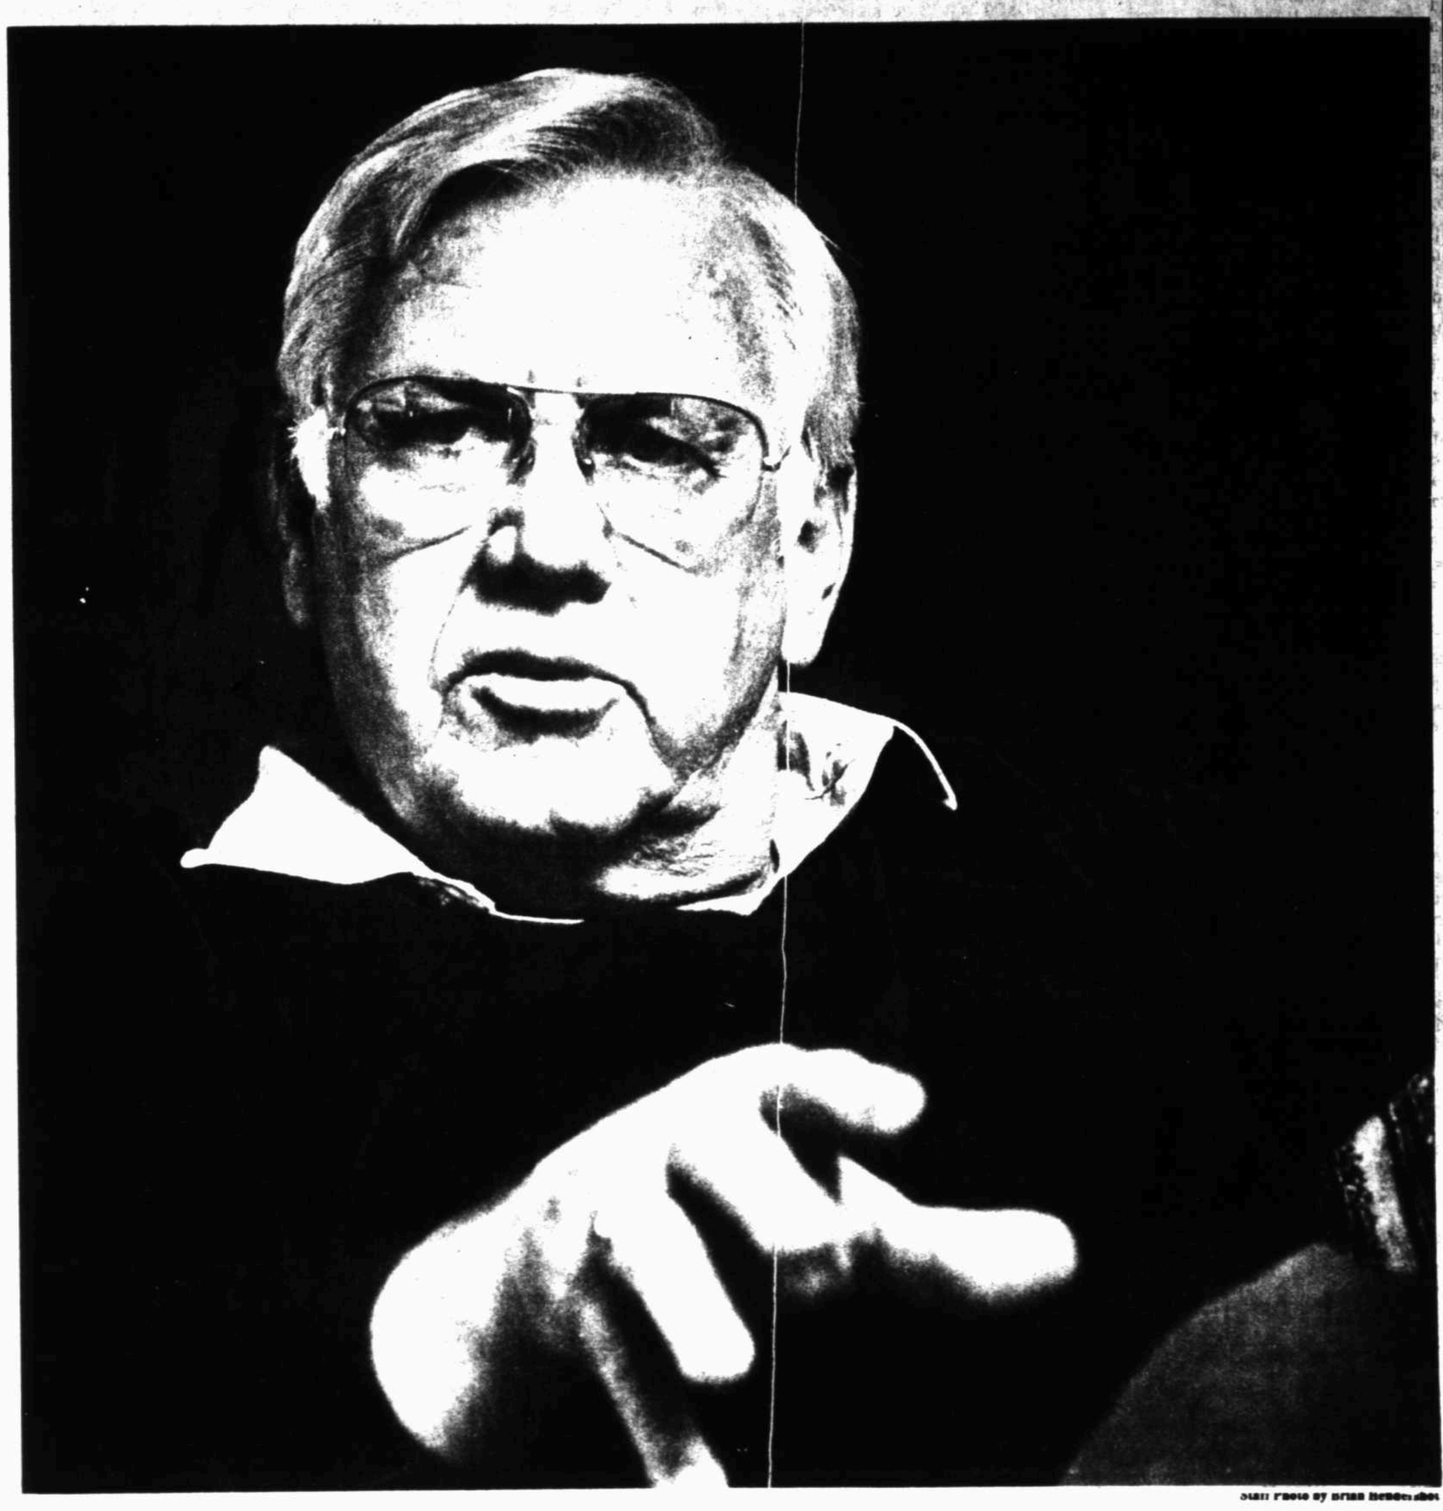

The new structure calls for the vice president in charge of instruction to be directly under the president with the dean of general and transfer studies and the dean of occupation-technical equally under him. The old structure was with the dean of occupation-technical and what used to be titled dean of academic programs directly under the president and above the dean of instruction.

Don Hunt, formerly the dean of academic programs, will serve as vice president of instruction while Raymond Yell, formerly dean of instruction, will take over as dean of general and transfer studies. Charles Wakefield will remain as dean of occupation-technical.

"WHAT IS different about that is all of the instruction comes together right here (directly below the president). The way we had it before was...there was a division at the top," Parrish explained.

Jail commission progressing despite criticism from both sides

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Ever since its creation by the 1975 Legislature, the Texas Commission on Jail Standards has been sharply criticized alternately for imposing overburdensome standards on county jails and for not being tough enough.

But despite a lack of support in the past — even from the body that created it — the agency feels it has taken significant strides in improving the lot of county jail inmates statewide.

Robert O. Viterna, executive director of the jail standards commission, says the panel has conducted a well-thought-out plan for bringing Texas jails into compliance with safety, sanitation and security standards.

"The plan of action has been thought out and planned very deliberately," says Viterna, adding that 111 jails are now in compliance with commission standards, 64 jails are under construction or undergoing major renovation, and 16 are closed.

VITERNA SAYS that's major progress from a starting point of no jails in compliance when the commission promulgated its rules in 1977.

The first step, he says, was to educate county officials on what the standards were, and to convince them the standards were good. Since then, the commission has aided, encouraged, prodded and — on occasion — forced counties to bring their jails in line.

"It's been a deliberate, evolutionary process carried out to avoid chaos," Viterna says.

Some counties fell into line more readily than others, while some voluntarily closed their jails. Counties such as McMullen, which has a population of less than 1,000, decided it wasn't cost-effective to attempt to keep its jail in operation because the facility rarely was needed more than about 40 days a year.

THE 60 OR SO jails that don't fit the above categories are in some stage of attempting to comply, Viterna says: "At some time or other, all of the jails will have achieved compliance." Keeping them in compliance will be almost impossible, he added.

"If we can get 90 percent in compliance, we will really be doing a good job," he noted.

Despite his optimism, however, the commission still faces major critics among county officials and civil rights groups, who either think too much or too little is being done to improve jail conditions.

Complaints from county officials who were reluctant to spend large sums of of money for jail improvements played a part in a 1979 Legislative Budget Board recommendation that the agency be abolished and its duties transferred somewhere else.

Grand Prairie Rep. Carlyle Smith also sponsored legislation to take away the commission's power to set standards and limit its authority to enforcing legislative guidelines passed in 1958.

> Despite the optimism, however, the commission still faces major critics among county officials and civil rights groups, who either think too much or too little is being done to improve jail conditions around the state.

NEITHER OF THOSE bills, however, ever made it to the House floor for debate, even though House Speaker Bill Clayton apparently sided with commission detractors. "A Hyatt Regency hotel couldn't pass their standards," Clayton said at the time.

But civil rights groups — particularly the Texas Civil Liberties Union - think it's time the commission began doing more to enforce its regulations with an iron fist.

"It (the commission) basically wants to enforce by agreement," says Mary Keller, TCLU legal director. "They don't want to force counties to do anything."

Keller grudgingly admits the commission has had some success, but says the jails presently in compliance "aren't enough to show for their (the commission's) activities" during the past.

Keller also claims most of the 111 jails listed as "in compliance" are operating with one or more variances from the standards, while others are often overcrowded. "These are minimum standards, not maximum," she says.

THE TCLU HAS filed a class action suit against the commission in an attempt to force more enforcement efforts, such as directing the state attorney general's office to take legal action against uncooperative counties.

TCLU Executive Director John Duncan says he hopes the suit will end the "practice of granting variances on almost anything," and adds that enforcement has been stepped up since the suit was filed.

In fact, the commission recently took a hard line with two counties that hadn't moved quickly enough to improve their jails.

One of those jails was ordered to reduce its inmate population, while the other — in Delta County — was shut down, despite pleas from county officials that they be allowed to stay in operation until the necessary improvements are completed in about a month.

Keller, who described the Delta County jail as "deplorable," argues that the commission took action in the matter only because U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice threatened to close the jail if they didn't take action.

"THEY COULDN'T do anything else," Keller says. "I don't applaud this as very courageous."

Charles Sullivan, executive director of the prison reform group CURE, isn't as critical of the jail standards commission, however.

"The commission has had a very rocky existence," Sullivan says, adding that closing down a lot of jails would not have been politically expedient during the agency's early years and might have gotten the panel abolished.

Sullivan says CURE "supports the commission's efforts toward bringing jails into compliance."

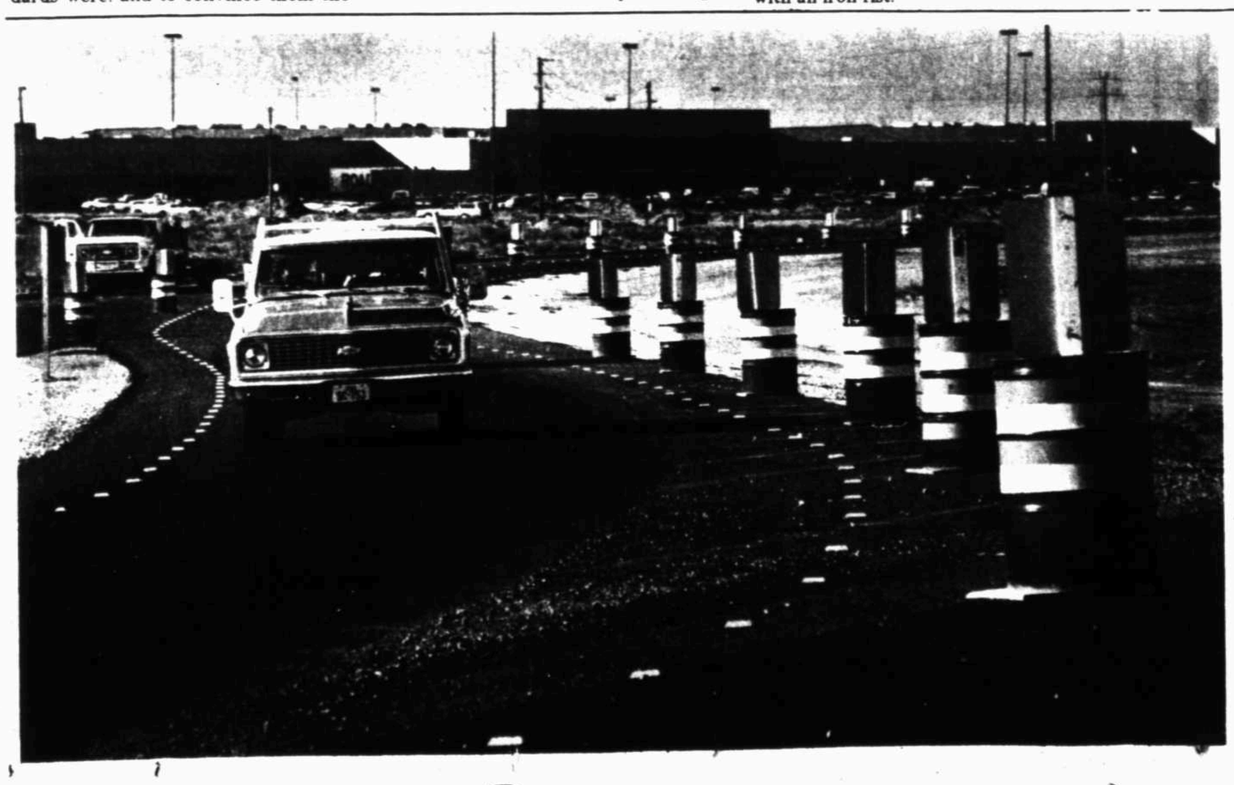

But Sullivan, who aided in drafting the legislation that created the agency, says he does expect more enforcement in the future.

"I think they have solidified enough that they're not going to be done away with. They don't have any excuse to hold back."

Sullivan says he would like to see the commission begin encouraging alternatives to constructing larger jails — such as community service programs for restitution — and for the agency to become involved with city jail standards.

THE TCLU, ON the other hand, still sees much more room for improvement in the regulation of county jails. Keller says she would like to see the commission institute surprise inspections, upgrade standards and perform more follow-ups of inmate complaints.

"I don't think they're bad people," Keller says. "They're well-meaning, but they are part of the system — friends of the sheriffs."

Dangerous construction zone

The state highway department is advising motorists to slow down in this construction zone on the new Loop 250 road just east of Midland Park Mall. The two-lane westbound flow of traffic narrows into one lane and converges sharply with eastbound traffic. Although the zone is well marked and posted at 45 mph, drivers often ignore the signs and take the curve at higher speeds, risking a headon crash with oncoming traffic. The construction is expected to be completed in six months.

Study shows garbage collectors have high self-esteem

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Bartenders and garbage collectors enjoy considerable self-esteem, despite public opinion polls that have shown a lack of status in their jobs, according to a Pennsylvania State University study.

"Social scientists frequently assume that most persons accept...the general public's opinions of their occupations when they evaluate themselves," said Dr. Edward J. Walsh, a sociology professor.

But, Walsh said, "The study suggests that notion is more myth than fact."

Along with Dr. Marylee C. Taylor, Walsh studied 961 men from Philadelphia and several Midwestern cities for a report to be published in an upcoming issue of the journal "Sociology and Social Research."

THE MEN IN the study worked in occupations ranked in public opinion polls. In the "low" status were garbage collectors, parks workers and bartenders. The "middle" status included barbers and mail carriers, and in the "high" status were high school teachers and college professor.

The men were asked to rank themselves in terms of their general self-esteem, and to look at their opinion of themselves in terms of their occupation, their family and their sociability.

The researchers measured occupational self-esteem by high pay, job pride and potential for advancement. They asked the men to look at their ability to provide for their families, their relationship with their spouses and the respect they got from their children and neighbors to rate their family self-esteem.

Sociability was gauged by the men's opinion of their own conversational talents and popularity with women.

TEACHERS and college professors scored highest in overall self-esteem, but bartenders ranked higher than mail carriers and barbers, Walsh said.

Bartenders also showed the highest rankings in the occupational and sociability dimensions of self-esteem.

"Perhaps bartenders rate themselves high in self-esteem because...they are usually at the center of a small group with its own subculture — a circle of regulars who view the man behind the bar as king of the roost," Walsh said.

High school teachers rated themselves quite low in occupational self-esteem, Walsh said.

Garbage collectors ranked lowest in occupational self-esteem, but they were second highest in their self-esteem in the family, the study said.

Mail carriers had the highest family self-esteem, bartenders ranked third, while college professors were last.

"One possible explanation for the surprisingly low family self-esteem of the professors is their deep involvement in their work to the detriment of their family life," Walsh said.

THE STUDY also shows the "the conditions of the workplace — freedom from constant supervision, the pay relative to that of co-workers, the potential for advancement and the sense of achievement the job offers — may be much more important to self-esteem than job prestige," Walsh said.

Parrish reflects on first semester

also reflect changes in duties. The general and transfer studies will include students planning to transfer to another institution as well as general education classes such as history, even though they also are required in the occupation-technical department.

Parrish said the occupation-technical program includes "I don't want to use the term 'dirty hands' programs, but a lot of people think that.

"It does include those 'dirty hands' programs, but it also includes new programs such as the nursing program and programs such as the petroleum and electronic programs."

Other changes include placing the registrar and student records under the direction of the student personnel department. Previously, the academic dean handled all registrar duties.

"We do things that make sense at the time," Parrish said. "We feel that we'll have a steady growth and we're trying to put together an organization that will handle it."

THE CHANGES REFLECT a change in the attitude of the curriculum offered as a whole.

"Our primary reason for doing this is to get so we'll think of everything we teach as instructional subject matter and not even make the separation in our minds between what we used to call academic and occupation-technical," Parrish explained.

"It's to obviously signify that everything we teach is of equal importance."

Polish dissidents claim intellectuals tortured

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A member of a Polish dissident group said Saturday that reports smuggled from Poland tell of the beatings and torture of top intellectuals taken into custody under that country's martial law.

Stanislaw Baranczak, a professor at Harvard, said he has heard eyewitness accounts that Polish dissidents Jacek Kuron and Adam Michnik, two leaders of the Committee for Social Self-Defense, also known as KOR, were "very cruelly beaten and tortured" while in police custody two weeks ago.

"Their lives are in danger, I suppose, and the cruelty of the police who beat them up is terrible," Baranczak said.

Baranczak, a professor of Slavic languages and literature, said the beatings were witnessed by another political prisoner at Mostowski Palace in Warsaw, the headquarters of the Polish secret police.

He said the witness, whom he knew but declined to identify, reported Michnik suffered a severe back injury as the result of the beatings.

"Nothing more is known of their fate," he said.

Baranczak said the witness was later released by police after he became severely ill. The witness's report was smuggled to Paris and then forwarded to Baranczak and Czeslaw Milosz, a Nobel laureate who is teaching at Harvard this year.

The two professors have sent a report on the alleged beatings to officials in Washington, Baranczak said.

Baranczak said Kuron, a KOR leader, and Michnik, a KOR member, were active in the Polish dissident movement. KOR was formed in 1976 to offer support to workers and their families after food riots that year.

Poland reminds Czechs of past

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The declaration of martial law in Poland two weeks ago evokes 13-year-old memories of Soviet tanks rumbling through this capital to end the "Prague Spring" of Czechoslavakia's reform movement.

Western diplomats and many Czechoslovaks say that, in the years since the government-led liberalization here was crushed by the Warsaw Pact military alliance in 1968, there has been worsening stagnation and little, if any, innovation.

Some say the history of Czechoslovakia — the last Soviet bloc nation to experience a major crackdown — holds uncomfortable portents for Poland.

Poland's premier, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, put the country under military authority Dec. 13 and suspended the independent labor union Solidarity. Only Polish soldiers — no Soviets — are reported involved.

THE NEW PRAGUE Communist leadership — one of the most conservative and pro-Soviet in the Warsaw Pact military alliance — has pursued the country's dissidents into prison, exile or domestic timidity.

"It is as if you ran a film backwards," said a Czechoslovak, contending that his country still is reeling backward from 1968 toward a stricter, Stalinist line.

What the outcome of the Polish crackdown will be is not yet clear.

The Czechoslovak crackdown was not accomplished overnight either.

Prague's experiment with reform was chiefly the work of the Communist Party itself, whose reforms then attracted intellectual and popular support.

In Poland, by contrast, the impetus for change came from the workers Communism was supposed to serve. Intellectuals, some of them radicals, advised and jockeyed for influence, but Solidarity was first and foremost the creation of the workers of the Gdansk shipyards in August 1980.

Solidarity's leader, Lech Walesa, apparently has been put under a form of house arrest but not actually jailed. Walesa officially is said still to be the head of Solidarity, the only independent labor union free of Communist control in the Soviet bloc.

Czechoslovak leader and former Communist Party chief Alexander Dubcek was never formally imprisoned, although he was detained during the early days of the 1968 intervention. Dubcek is now believed to be earning a modest living as a minor official in Bratislava.

IN 1969, MINOR officials and workers were asked to revise their official membership biographies, declaring the 1968 activities a mistake that would not be repeated.

Leading intellectuals were asked to pledge an oath of loyalty. Those who did so first are the top actors and artists finding official favor today.

Some opponenents of Czechoslovakia's new leaders took on manual work, hoping to buy time and survive until the crackdown passed. But it has not passed.

"Nobody would have believed that 12 years later, it would still be on," a Prague resident said.

The Communist leadership has paid a high price for the creation of what Heinrick Boell, a West German author and Nobel Prize winner, recently called "a cultural graveyard."

Party hardliners promoted a new generation of young political technocrats unequipped to challenge those above them, Western diplomatic analysts and many Czechoslavaks claim.

Reform has been blocked and the very term kept carefully out of the official vocabulary.

The lack of innovation has been particularly harmful to the country's economy, which has been slipping into steady decline, with the party the sole authority of the government.

THE FALL IN LIVING standards is evident in orders to reduce power in streetlights and cut meat consumption by 10 percent because of expensive feed grain imports from the West.

Prime Minister Ludomir Stroubal warns things will get worse.

"If the situation is complicated in 1981," he told a Communist Party Central Committee meeting last October, "then the next year will be even more complicated."

world in brief

Typhoon hits Philippine islands

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Lee lashed the central Philippines on Saturday, causing some damage but no casualties before it weakened to a tropical storm, authorities said.

Weathermen said the typhoon smashed into Sorsogon Province, 205 miles southeast of Manila, with peak winds of 103 mph. It gradually lost strength as it moved through southeastern Luzon and the central Philippine islands and then into the South China Sea.

The Civil Defense Office said 290 houses were damaged in three villages of Albay Province and 10 houses were washed out at a coastal village of Marinduque Province.

Japan unveils monument to pope

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — A monument was unveiled Saturday to commemorate Pope John Paul II's Feb. 25 peace appeal at Hiroshima, where an estimated 140,000 people died at the end of World War II when the United States dropped a nuclear bomb Aug. 6, 1945.

About 100 people, including Roman Catholic Bishop Yoshimatsu Noguchi of the Hiroshima parish, attended the brief ceremony. The 7.8-foot-tall trigonal concrete monument was put up by the YMCA, a Protestant organization.

It was inscribed with a phrase from the pontiff's appeal made when he visited Hiroshima during a four-day visit to Japan. "To young people everywhere, I say: Let us together create a new future of fraternity and solidarity," the inscription read — in Japanese and English.

French film industry improved

PARIS (AP) — The French film industry, in a slump for six years, has bounced back and movie attendance was expected to break the 180 million mark by the end of the year, industry official said.

Film attendance had dropped slowly since 1975, when a record 181.7 million people bought tickets. But unlike that year, the big gains in attendance for 1981 are being registered by French films rather than foreign — mainly American — entries.

This year's big winner has been "The Professional," a thriller starring Jean Paul Belmondo. More than 1 million people saw the film in its first eight weeks in Paris, establishing a new record.

President commutes sentences

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — President Suharto commuted the death sentences of two former top officials convicted of involvement in an abortive coup, a Justice Department spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman said the sentence for former Foreign Minister Dr. Subandrio and Air Marshal Omar Dhani, former air force chief of staff, were reduced to life imprisonment.

Administration lauds endurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is hailing the "heroic resistance" of the Afghan people, but says they are not strong enough to force the withdrawal of an estimated 90,000 Soviet troops who entered the country two years ago.

"The idea of winning is not in the cards," said a senior U.S. official, who also ruled out any new U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union to exact a price for the military intervention. The official declined to be named.

Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan Dec. 27, 1979, to support President Babrak Karmal and his pro-Moscow government. Two years later, the resistance continues to mount, said the State Department in a report.

"The regime's top priority political program to undermine popular support for the resistance movement has made little headway, and the Kabul government remains isolated and ineffectual," the report said.

A senior official, briefing reporters on condition he not be named, said the Soviets "have had a signal lack of success" and have suffered at least 5,000 casualties.

He said U.S. policy is to seek a negotiated settlement of the war and that new sanctions would not be imposed against the Soviet Union. Two of the key sanctions, on grain and phosphate sales, were lifted by President Reagan. U.S. trade with the Soviet Union has nearly doubled since.

Assistant Secretary of State Nicholas A. Veliotes said in a statement, meanwhile, that Afghanistan "will remain a major source of tension in international relations."

Japan will seek accord on Poland

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will send an envoy to Western Europe Monday to discuss possible joint action to protest the imposition of martial law in Poland, Foreign Ministry officials said today.

Prompted by President Reagan's announcement of economic measures against the Polish government, Japan has decided to send Ambassador-at-large Toshiaki Muto to West Germany, France, Belgium and Britain to "seek consensus," the officials said.

The U.S. steps included suspension of fishing and civil aviation rights and cancellation of Export-Import Bank export credit insurance.

Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki earlier said Japan would keep in close communication with the United States and other Western nations regarding possible action against the Polish military regime.

Muto is scheduled to visit Berlin, Bonn, Paris, Brussels and London before returning to Tokyo Jan. 7, the officials said.

Schmidt will meet Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and President Reagan will meet early next month to discuss the situation in Poland and other issues of common concern.

Ebberhard Heyken, press secretary in the West German Embassy here, said Friday that East-West tensions, the Atlantic Alliance and economic questions also would be on the agenda when the two leaders meet Jan. 5.

Schmidt, one of the first foreign leaders to visit Reagan in the White House, flew to the United States on Friday for a private three-week vacation on the quiet resort island of Sanibel off the west Florida coast.

Schmidt, 63, his wife Hannelore, and his daughter Susanne, 34, chose Sanibel for a "quiet vacation of sailing and rest," said security officials assigned to the chancellor.

The family members were greeted when they arrived at Lee County Airport in Florida by Sanibel Councilman Fred Valtin and his wife, Jane, who presented them with a bouquet of baby white orchids.

Schmidt, who scheduled a meeting with Reagan midway through his vacation, is eager to confer again with the U.S. president, Heyken said.

The West German chancellor has assumed a mediator's role between the United States and the Soviet Union.

He met for three days last month with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, seeking — but failing — to persuade him that Reagan was making a good-faith offer in proposing to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

There is a strong public sentiment in Germany for an end to the arms race and against Schmidt's support of plans to station 572 new American nuclear rockets in Western Europe.

In Brownhelm every person gets a present

VERMILION, Ohio (AP) — No child goes without a Christmas gift from Santa in tiny Brownhelm Township, no matter how hard the times.

It's been that way for 50 years, in fact — ever since the Great Depression.

Thrifty neighbors keep tabs on sale items all year and make sure any new infants are added to their yuletide list so no one gets left out.

This Christmas Day, as before, each of the 600 families in the rural township south of this Lake Erie city was visited by one of 16 volunteer Santa Clauses.

The small children received toys; older children and adults got fruit and candy.

"It's a nice community event" and draws Brownhelm Township together, said Betty Schmalz, the wife of a township trustee. "Everything is donated by people in the township."

The idea was born in the 1930s when the Rev. Ralph Albright and the women of the Brownhelm Congregational United Church of Christ decided to help their neighbors, said township resident Lois McQueen.

"Families wouldn't have had anything for Christmas if it wasn't for this," she said.

Over the years, according to the local folks, the church effort became a tradition for the whole community.

"The money for the gifts is either collected by the route chairmen or given at the Brownhelm general store," Barbara Cutcher, chairwoman of the committee that buys and distributes the gifts, said Friday.

"WE BUY TOYS for all the children 10 years or younger, and we buy the fruit and candy in bulk."

The committee each year divides the township into routes, each with a chairman in charge of keeping track of all of Brownhelm's families and noting the new arrivals.

This year, she said, the gifts were financed entirely from about $1,000 raised by township residents.

Elderly residents and shut-ins got baskets of fruit and a copy of the Firelands Directory, which lists local homes and businesses.

The toys generally are purchased throughout the year whenever sales occur and they are distributed by age, so each child gets a different gift each year.

"For instance, 5-year-olds get a little car," Mrs. Cutcher said. "Magic slates go to a different age group."

Young people need leadership from older blacks

With BOB TIEUEL

Another view of the Black Experience: "Dear Bob, — Our young people represent the future leadership of the black community. However, they need some guidance, and we, black adults and designated black leaders, have a responsibility to encourage and assist these leaders of tomorrow. We must remember that a college graduate of 1975 was probably born in 1953; thus he or she was only 2 when Mrs. Rosa Parks was too tired to move to the back of the bus; 10 years of age during the outrage of snarling dogs and forceful fire hoses in the park in Birmingham and the memorable 'March on Washington' and 12 when thousands marched from Selma to Montgomery.

"As a result, too many of our young don't know, or understand the thrust of the Civil Rights Movement. Too many young blacks have chosen to be guided by emotion and want to believe that all this struggle and suffering proved that black can beat white or we will get something just because we are black. We must tell our young people that they are spending too much time worrying about the word, 'racism.' It is not something new — when we were young it was 'predudice' or 'segregation' or 'jim crow.'

"We have more college-educated blacks than we have ever had and also higher unemployment. Racism is not our primary enemy. We must select courses of study that are not just 'sop' ones but courses in college that will make us competitive in today's labor market. The doors that were opened during the Civil Rights Movement are for the most part still open. We just have to go marching through them," said Joe Black, vice president of the Greyhound Corp.

CICELY TYSON, who was once one of the top 10 black hair models in the United States was also one of the first actresses to wear her hair in an "Afro" on television. She also wore braids, then known as "corn rows" and more than 10 years before Bo Derek popularized them in "10." At an NAACP Image Awards ceremony recently where she had received a best actress award of the feature film "Sounder" she startled the audience by ripping off what appeared to be an elegant coiffure, revealing a shaven head. She is now starring as Marva Collins in "The Marva Collins Story," a Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation.

DON'T FORGET to read the new book that is off the press entitled: "The FBI and Martin Luther King" by David J. Garrow. For more than two years, the FBI (under Hoover) installed wiretaps on King's home phone and on the office phones of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. The book remains a valuable contribution to history because of its exacting research and because of the questions it asks.

RECENT GREAT QUOTES: "Berbick couldn't have beaten me if I wasn't 39 years old. I'm not depressed. I'm happy because I am still nice looking...No black eyes. No broken teeth. No split lip...I don't know how I'll feel next month." (then to Berbick) "I'll get you next time," said Muhammad Ali.

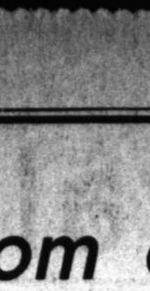

UNITED NEGRO COLLEGE Fund schools (there are 41 of them) are in the great tradition of plurality in this nation. Just as Brandeis as a Jewish institution and Notre Dame as a Catholic one have been distinguised for their contributions to our total enrichment, so too have the black colleges done this. Black colleges are open to all who wish to enroll.

Woburn: The making of a dump

WOBURN, Mass. (AP) — It started in 1853 when a chemical company needed a place to get rid of waste materials. The easiest solution was to dump them behind the plant.

Tanneries and a glue-making factory were built nearby and continued the practice. Leftover hides were piled 40 feet high, while arsenic, lead and chromium were poured into open pools near the factories.

This industrial legacy has left Woburn, population 35,000, with 60 acres of contaminated hills, lakes and fields — one of the 10 worst hazardous waste sites in the country, according to federal officials. The dump is near the top of the list for aid from the $1.6 billion Superfund, which will provide federal money to help clean up some 9,600 abandoned and current dump sites across the country. Studies on how best to spend the money are already under way.

However, Woburn, located 12 miles north of Boston, has an even bigger problem that many residents blame on the dump — the highest cancer rate of any Massachusetts community of more than 20,000 residents.

Frustrated by the government's inability to pinpoint the cause of the illnesses, about 200 area residents have joined the Harvard University School of Public Health in launching an ambitious environmental health project.

Organized as FACE, or For A Cleaner Environment, residents will start a house-by-house illness survey next month in the community. The resulting "health map," to be completed and analyzed by Harvard in April, will show geographic patterns that might link the century-old dump and the modern health problems.

The citywide study is the first known comprehensive investigation of possible links between toxic waste contamination and community health, Harvard officials said. It will serve as a model for other affected communities.

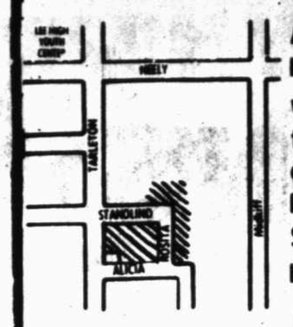

"What I expect and hope will come out of it is that the concerns and fears of a lot of citizens will be alleviated," says the Rev. Bruce A. Young, rector of Woburn's Trinity Church and a founder of FACE. "Right now there is a credibility gap between citizens and various government regulatory agencies.

YOUNG, AN EPISCOPAL priest, spent seven years trying to convince one of his parishioners, Anne Anderson, that she was wrong in blaming the number of leukemia cases in her neighborhood on contamination in the water supply. One of the victims was her son, Jimmy.

Then in 1979, state workers discovered that two of the city's public drinking wells — including one that served Mrs. Anderson's neighborhood — were contaminated by a suspected cancer-causing chemical.

But a combined state-federal study of 37 residents with cancer failed to find any common link.

Koch begins second term

NEW YORK (AP) — A bit pudgier but no less pugnacious, Edward I. Koch begins on New Year's Day his second term as mayor of the largest and — as he sees it — greatest city in America.

Once a minor clubhouse politician, Koch is now enormously popular in the city and well known nationally, appearing on network television shows and the cover of Time magazine.

Yet, lurking in the shadows is a budget gap of at least $800 million for the fiscal year beginning July 1 in a city that has rarely had a respite from fiscal woes in the past decade.

Two weeks after delivering his inaugural speech on Jan. 1, Koch will unveil a plan to close that gap. Preliminary indications are that he will call for new taxes and some sort of curb on the hiring of new city employees.

THE BUDGET GAP IS A bitter pill for a mayor who straightened out horrendous city finances during his first four-year term and promised to improve services during his second term.

Asked if fate treated him cruelly by mounting another fiscal crisis just after he'd licked one, Koch shrugs and says, "Listen, you have to expect that kind of thing when you get into politics."

A bachelor who turned 57 on Dec. 12, Koch got into politics in 1956 by joining a local Democratic club in Greenwich Village.

After years of full-time law and part-time politics, Koch led a Democratic Party insurgency that toppled Carmine Desapio, the tiger of Tammany Hall, then won a seat on the City Council in 1966, was elected to Congress in 1968 and served five terms there before being elected mayor in 1977 with 50 percent of the vote in a four-way race.

Now, the Bronx-born son of immigrant Polish Jews is one of the most visible local politicians in the country and on a first-name basis with world leaders.

BUT THIS CHUMMINESS has not stopped the mayor from criticizing the powerful. When the Reagan administration criticized Israel for annexing the Golan Heights earlier this month, Koch likened the administration to a "bully," and "a child abuser" who takes out frustrations on friends and family.

Although a life-long Democrat, Koch expanded his political clout — or so he felt — by getting Republican support for his re-election. That did not stop him from calling the economic policies of President Reagan "a sham and a shame."

His image among minorities suffered when he decided to close down Sydenham Hospital in Harlem. He was also criticized for signing into law the new City Council district lines that the U.S. Justice Department later found to be discriminatory.

The mayor has had a stormy relationship with some leaders of minorities, a factor not to be lightly dismissed by a white mayor in a city that is about 50 percent black and Hispanic.

The issue of public safety was one of the top concerns of his first term. He spoke out often against judges and was successful in getting a law mandating a prison term for illegal possession of a gun.

The mayor's outspoken style and his availability to reporters has led to heavy media coverage. Reporters seek his opinion on foreign affairs, national politics and the lastest sports developments.

In one case, some accounts had the mayor close to death when a piece of watercress became lodged in his throat during dinner with friends at a Chinese restaurant.

May pet rest in peace

By MARK KREIDIER
Associated Press Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Two rows of shrubs beckon visitors at the Pet Memorial Gardens toward a white cement statue of St. Francis of Assisi, the patron saint of animals.

Inside the 6½-acre expanse, etchings and inscriptions adorn miniature headstones, and graves are decorated with flowers and figurines presented by owners in memory of their family pets.

To the right of the cemetery and under the roof of a two-story office hang two signs: Visa and Master Charge. Leon Bateman accepts both.

Bateman owns and operates the business, which sits on a flat, sparsely landscaped piece of land about two miles west of here on Highway 9.

HIS SERVICE is a private one, through which loving pet owners can spend from $135 to several hundred dollars to see their pets buried in human-like fashion — including open-casket chapel time and graveside services.

For the owners, it is a dignified way to lay to rest an animal that may have become "part of the family." For Bateman, it's a successful business venture that may become a franchise.

Since its inception in 1974, more than 1,200 pets have been buried in the Pet Memorial Gardens here, prompting Bateman to open a 10-acre cemetery in Tulsa. Another memorial garden is opening near Denver and one is planned for the Dallas-Fort Worth area. Bateman says he will soon consider plans "to franchise this nationwide."

Dedications of appreciation and affection abound in the graveyard. A small headstone atop one of the 2-by-3-foot plots reads "Prancer. Too Well Loved to be Forgotten." Another "Skeet. Sleep, Little One. I'll Love You Forever."

Pet owners purchase the lots, for which they are issued certificates of ownership. The area is certified, surveyed, platted and legally dedicated as a pet cemetery.

THE PET, restored if necessary by Bateman's staff, is placed in an open casket in the garden's tiny chapel, where organ music is piped in through a small speaker box mounted on the wall. There the family or owners may spend final moments alone with their animal.

Cemetery staff is not permitted in the chapel, Bateman says.

Finished at the chapel, the group returns to the office. The casket is then closed and taken to the plot chosen by its owners.

The family may then attend graveside service, though no "service" actually is offered "other than what the family may care to say," Bateman says. Staff members merely perform the task of burial.

An average burial can start at $135, described by Bateman as "very inexpensive." That would include a medium-size standard casket (deluxe, extra-padded models also are available), the burial lot, opening and closing of the grave and a small, metal grave marker.

BATEMAN DECLINED to give a top estimate, but said owners can spend "several hundred dollars more" to suit their tastes. Burial of a horse, for example, would be more expensive since more than one lot would need to be purchased and a special encasement designed.

True to his business sense, Bateman offers several alternatives to his customers. A crematorium sits to the west of the graveyard for owners who wish their pets cremated.

In addition, caskets are offered in five styles and 10 sizes. Expense of the funeral varies with the size and style ordered, Bateman says.

Maddox unloads trinkets

By FRANK BLANCHARD
Associated Press Writer

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — At the height of his political career, Lester Maddox had no problem with name recognition. But the former Georgia governor is having trouble now unloading thousands of trinkets reminiscent of his segregationist days.

Maddox, 66, has advertised to try to drum up buyers for clocks, T-shirts and other souvenirs that stocked his Atlanta novelty shop during his political heyday but have been gathering dust in his home for four years. He says the items are worth $125,000, but he will take $20,000 for the lot.

"I'd get a lot more (money) if I loaded them up and sold them to some variety stores. But I just don't have the time and don't want to spend the time," says the once-outspoken segregationist who gained national attention in the 1960s for brandishing an ax handle as he drove blacks away from his Atlanta fried chicken restaurant.

Maddox now deals in real estate.

To give buyers a look at the inventory left after he closed his shop in 1977, Maddox is offering a sample package for $35.

Included is a 17-jewel wrist watch bearing a likeness of Maddox riding a bicycle backward, a stunt he often performed at the statehouse. The hour hand resembles a chicken leg and the minute hand is the shape of an ax handle.

There are two 45 rpm records and one album of Maddox singing religious and patriotic songs such as "God, Family and Country."

You also get a personalized alarm clock, wall clock and four Maddox T-shirts — two emblazoned with "Phooey," a word Maddox once used in a widely publicized retort at a news conference.

Maddox says no one has offered to buy the entire lot, but he says he has sold "several hundred" of the samples since he placed an advertisement in the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Washington Report in October.

"We've been shipping it out pretty regular," he says.

The advertisement included a money-back guarantee for unsatisfied customers, but no one has sought a refund, he says.

In 1978, Maddox tried to auction the mountain of novelties along with other memorabilia to help liquidate a $125,000 campaign debt, which he paid last June. The novelties did not sell.

Tax forms will soon arrive

WASHINGTON (AP) — An after-Christmas parcel is in the mail for millions of Americans — the 1981 federal income tax forms.

"The forms should begin to arrive no earlier than Saturday and no later than the first week in January," Rod Young of the Internal Revenue Service said today.

Printers around the country have brought the printed and addressed forms to post offices, but delivery to taxpayers is put off until after Christmas to avoid the holiday crush.

IRS spokesmen said earlier that budget cuts would restrict the agency's ability to answer taxpayers' questions or help them fill out forms.

But Young said expanded tax tables this year will allow more taxpayers to find their tax in a column of figures and not have to compute it themselves.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Quick, total relief from pain not always possible

Dear Dr. Solomon: I see medicine being advertised on television that relieves aches and pains within minutes. I'm being treated by a doctor for arthritis and it still troubles me. Don't doctors watch television? — Sara, Mobile, Ala.

Dear Sara: Would you really want your physician to practice medicine in accordance with what's shown on television? Commercials are designed to sell products. A doctor treating a patient in an office is in a real-life situation, without retakes or instant replays.

For some conditions two aspirin may provide quick and effective pain relief, but other conditions simply do not follow this kind of script. In brief, physicians would always like to provide their patients with quick and total relief from pain, but in real life this is not always possible.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor recommends an annual mammography examination. I am 56 years old. Don't you think that the risk of radiation should be considered? — Louise, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Louise: I would never say that the risk of radiation from mammography or, for that matter, from any X-ray examination should not be considered; the question is whether the benefits of the examination outweigh the risks.

Although not everyone is in agreement on this point, one person who feels that annual mammography is advisable is Dr. G.R. Howe, of the National Cancer Institute of Canada. He and his associates report that a study of women over 50 years of age showed that the benefits of annual mammography substantially outweigh the risks of yearly exposure to the low doses of radiation involved.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm very confused about the safety of the Pill. I started using it about a year ago and have had no bad effects. But my closest friend tells me she's gone off the Pill on the doctor's advice. How is the average person supposed to know what to do? — Eunice, Frankford, Ky.

Dear Eunice: A decision about the use of oral contraceptives is a very personal one. The confusion about the safety of th Pill stems from the fact there is some risk associated with its use, but the risk is not the same for all women. I might add that there is also some risk associated with pregnancy, which is not the same for all women either.

The point is that such factors as age, smoking, and certain diseases (for example, diabetes and hypertension) significantly increase the risk of oral contraceptives. In one study, for example, it was found that women who used the Pill had four times the risk of having a myocardial infarction, while smokers had seven times the risk. But women who used the Pill and smoked had 39 times the risk.

What is true for your friend may not be true for you. I suggest you discuss your concerns with your physician, who is familiar with your medical history.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Bohemian life comes to the screen

By CAROL OLTEN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — In the '20s and '30s British novelist Jean Rhys gained recognition in literary circles for a series of books using as a background the seedy hotels of Montparnasse and the flashy bohemian life that centered around them.

The first of the books was "Quartet," published in 1928, in which Rhys described a place "where brightly painted women sport silver turbans and where, for both sexes, the favorite game out of bed is the art of conversation. Sultry jazz drifts above the smoke in cafes where undiscovered painters linger with their celebrated models ..."

Now, James Ivory and Ruth Prawer Jhabvala have written a screenplay from the novel and turned it into a smashing, brilliant film that Ivory has directed as well.

The movie is a delicious feast of jaundiced Parisian cafe society on the lam — a swirl of glittering flapper-era costumes and a prayer for the wounded hearts that wear them. It's emotionally stirring — yet teasing — in style, superbly acted and immensely shrewd and intelligent.

At the core is a terribly vulnerable young heroine — once described as "a crushed petal type" — named Marya who goes to live with an arrogant couple of English art patrons in Paris in 1927 when she is left penniless after her husband, a Polish art dealer, is imprisoned for possession of stolen artifacts. Marya continues to love her husband and makes weekly visits to him in jail, but the male half of the couple she has gone to reside with is soon making advances while his wife poses cold, indifferent endurance.

Isabelle Adjani, who won the best actress award at the Cannes Film Festival for her performance, is wondrously vampish, seductive and yet innocently waifish as the girl. Alan Bates has one of the best roles of his screen career as the smooth, demanding, overbearing spoiler, H.J. Heidler, and Maggie Smith is equally remarkable as his bitter, snide wife, Lois. Completing the well-played quartet is Anthony Higgins as the young recalcitrant husband, Stephen.

The film is eloquent, satiric, erotic and, still, distinctly sentimental in mood and perspective. Describing the affair, Heidler mumbles, "it's all so abominably sordid and pitiful." And, indeed, it is.

"Quartet" is about four persons tearing each other apart because of their emotions, desires and needs while trying to make their lives into ones where all the songs come true. Seeking love, they find hurt and torment instead.

There won't be an inch of water around

OTTAWA (AP) — Not an inch of snow will fall this winter in Canada, not a gallon of heating oil will be bought, not a yard of home insulation sold. By next summer a pound of potatoes will be as rare as a pound of diamonds.

While a hesitant United States remains miles from conversion to the metric system, its closest neighbor and biggest trading partner is pushing ahead into the realm of meters, liters and kilograms, leaving behind the yards, gallons and pounds of the imperial system of weights and measures.

The depth of the ever-present winter snows are reported in centimeters only. Gasoline and other fuels are sold by the liter. Insulation and similar home products are bought by the meter or kilogram.

Highway distances come in kilometers, newborn babies in kilograms, pizza-to-go in 20-, 30- or 40-centimeter sizes.

Canada's complex conversion process began in the mid-1970s. The national Metric Commission, which is overseeing the changeover, says by its calculations the country is 56 percent converted, and predicts it will be practically all "metrified" by the end of 1983. Probably the most important step will be taken Jan. 4, when 37,000 supermarkets and other food stores across Canada begin converting their weighing scales, so that shoppers will have to buy their vegetables, fruit and meat in kilograms.

Some Canadians are fighting the switch every centimeter of the way.

"We all hate having things rammed down our throats. There should be a referendum on this," 73-year-old Grace Yonge, owner of the T.C. Yonge grocery near Peterborough, Ontario, told a reporter.

Miss Yonge has become a symbol of resistance to metric conversion. She says she would have to spend $1,500 to $2,000 on a new scale, she cannot afford it and she will not do it.

"I may go to jail yet," she said.

The Weights and Measures Act provides for fines of $1,000 to $5,000 for businesses that do not conform with measurement standards.

The defiant Miss Yonge has found some allies in Peterborough, which was one of three areas used to test food-store scale conversion in 1979.

Sally Hayes, 43, president of the local association of the anti-big government Libertarian Party, has organized something called Operation HUMBUG ("Help Undo Metrication, Bug Your Legislator"), which distributes an anti-metric newsletter.

"Metric conversion was never debated in Parliament. There was never a cost analysis. It's not representative of the will of the people, or of their representatives," she said.

A federal government "white paper" in 1970 said Canada should go metric, but the overall concept received little debate in Parliament.

Eileen Brennan plays Sara Davis, who takes on the politicians in a small Wyoming town in the Dec. 29 showing of "Incident at Crestridge." Brennan won an Emmy award for her portrayal of Capt. Doreen Lewis in the television series, "Private Benjamin."

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eileen Brennan says the sheriff she plays in the CBS movie "Incident at Crestridge" is a woman who saw a job to be done — and tried to do it.

Miss Brennan plays Sara Davis, who takes on a corrupt and entrenched political machine in a small Wyoming town. She succeeds in getting elected, but finds the battle has only just begun.

"She's a very simple woman who's raised her family," the actress says. "She and her husband move to this small town where they see a great deal of corruption. From the mayor on down.

"She goes ahead and tries to do something about it. It's a question of seeing something and wanting to do something about it. I imagine there are a lot of women like Sara Davis. That's what I liked about it."

"Incident at Crestridge," which also stars Pernell Roberts, Bruce Davison and Sandy McPeak, will be broadcast by CBS Tuesday night. Jud Taylor directed the film on location in Park City, Utah, from a screenplay by Jim Byrnes.

Miss Brennan, who is better known as Capt. Doreen Lewis of CBS' "Private Benjamin," says the movie was not meant to be a pilot. And if it does become a series, she says, it will be without her, because she is committed to "Private Benjamin ."

"She begins to make a difference," Miss Brennan says of her character in "Incident at Crestridge," "but then is voted out of office by a recall election. Her last line is, 'I just may be back.' That sounds like a series to me. Like Darth Vader. But she does make an impact; she does raise people's consciousness."

Miss Brennan worked on the movie after completing "Comics," a theatrical feature filmed in Canada. In that, she plays the owner of a club like the Comedy Store (in this case called the Funny Farm) where young comics get a start.

Most of her time is absorbed by her role as Capt. Lewis in "Private Benjamin." The movie, which starred Goldie Hawn as Pvt. Judy Benjamin, brought Miss Brennan an Oscar nomination. In September, she won an Emmy for the television version, which stars Lorna Patterson in the title role. Hal Williams also joined the series in his pivotal role as Sgt. Ted Ross.

"I've been living with Capt. Lewis for the past two years, between the movie and the series," says Miss Brennan. "It's a great comic character. The challenge of doing Capt. Lewis week after week, as opposed to the movie, is keeping up the vitality while maintaining an overlay of comedy. The thing about Capt. Lewis is that she has no sense of humor. She's like Archie Bunker. That's what makes her funny."

The character's principal function is to be the resident heavy, yet Miss Brennan does not see her as mean or vicious. "She's just military," she says, "and Benjamin is the humanist element that must be molded."

Miss Brennan says "Private Benjamin" has to be balanced between comedy and an awareness of the "powderkeg conditions" of the world today. She says she has fought any tendency to make it a mindless farce.

"You can't do 'Gomer Pyle' today because of changing times and the kids today," the actress says. "They're too aware; they wouldn't accept it. We have the responsibility to take risks and be honest with what's happening today.

Swoosie Kurtz made the most of her 'lucky' roles

By CHARLIE REINA
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Just really boring, as you can see. Exceedingly boring, colorless and uninformed."

That's how actress Swoosie Kurtz describes herself, not quite seriously, during a break in rehearsal for "Love, Sidney," NBC's new Wednesday night comedy series in which she co-stars with Tony Randall.

The network series is the latest rung in the 37-year-old actress' ladder to success, coming on the heels of her Tony-winning performance on Broadway in "Fifth of July."

Whether the TV critics will be as kind to Miss Kurtz as the stage pundits have been remains to be seen. But if they follow suit, they're likely to focus on her ability to grasp the essence of her character, Laurie Morgan, an aspiring actress and single parent.

"I think it's probably a gift of imagination," she speculates. "That's what I got as a kid, going around to all those different places and being an only child."

Miss Kurtz is more than an only child, actually. She was born a celebrity. Her father was Col. Frank Kurtz, the most decorated U.S. Air Force pilot in World War II. When his daughter was born, in 1944, the headlines dubbed her "Little Swoosie" after Kurtz's famous B-17 bomber, "The Swoose," and her birth certificate made it official.

Miss Kurtz says all the childhood publicity "went right over my head." Besides, she was too busy moving to notice, as an Air Force brat, she attended 17 different grade schools around the country.

"I had my own little world," she recalls. "I didn't have any brothers and sisters to cushion me or keep me in reality. So I was always going off into these little imaginary worlds, and I still do."

The idea of performing came to Miss Kurtz in the seventh grade, when she "found out suddenly I could make people laugh."

Later, at Hollywood High School, she studied under drama teacher John Ingle, "a great man who really tapped something in me." Having thus decided on an acting career, she soon was off to the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art.

Back in the United States, Miss Kurtz toured the regional theater circuit from 1966 to 1970 and received her first New York recognition in "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds."

A series of on-and-off-Broadway roles followed, with a wealth of attendant acclaim. Her Tony for "Fifth of July" was preceded by a Tony nomination for "Tartuffe," Obie and Drama Desk nominations for "Uncommon Women and Others," and a Drama Desk award for "A History of the American Film."

Then there were the television roles: in commercials; in the soap opera, "As the World Turns"; and in "Mary," Mary Tyler Moore's short-lived series of a few years ago.

Miss Kurtz also appeared in the film, "Slap Shot," with Paul Newman. And she's featured in the soon-to-be-released film adaptation of John Irving's "The World According to Garp," starring Robin Williams.

Broadway got $52.3 million backing

NEW YORK (AP) — Financers of theatrical productions gave their regards to Broadway with $52.3 million during the 1980-81 season, the state attorney general said Saturday.

There also were spectacular winners and losers along the Great White Way, according to the annual report on theatrical productions filed by Attorney General Robert Abrams.

The biggest hit was the musical "Annie," which earned $4.3 million. "They're Playing Our Song" made $2.2 million, and "The Elephant Man" boasted a $1.8 million profit, the report said.

Wagner thinks Wood slipped and drowned

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Robert Wagner thinks his wife, movie star Natalie Wood, slipped and drowned while trying to tie a dinghy more securely to the couple's yacht, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Wagner told a close friend that he did not believe Miss Wood was trying to leave their yacht when she slipped Nov. 29 into the waters off Catalina Island, according to an article in the Daily News.

Wagner

The friend, whose identity was not disclosed, said Wagner was initially unable to figure out what happened that night, but he eventually arrived at the "only possible" conclusion.

"Natalie obviously had trouble sleeping with that dinghy slamming up against the boat," he told the friend, according to the newspaper report. "It had happened many, many times before and I had always gone out and pulled the ropes tighter to keep the dinghy flush against the yacht.

"She probably skidded on one of the steps after untying the ropes. The steps are slick as ice because of the algae and seaweed that is always clinging to them. After slipping on the steps, she hit her head against the boat," the Daily News quoted the unidentified friend as saying.

The report characterized Wagner, star of the ABC television series "Hart to Hart," as distraught about Miss Wood's death.

The county coroner said Miss Wood was slightly intoxicated when she died.

Wagner was in Switzerland for the holidays and was unavailable for comment on the Daily News report. His lawyer in Los Angeles, Paul Ziffren, said he could not confirm the report and declined further comment.

DALTON, Ga. (AP) — The 12-year-old boy treated by Soviet doctors for a blinding eye disease will fly to California on a trip financed by people sympathetic to his ordeal, his hometown newspaper said.

According to an account in the Dalton Daily Citizens-News, Todd Cantrell will receive equipment to bolster his vision as gifts from two optical companies.

Todd's mother, telephoned at home, declined comment about the trip.

During a presentation ceremony Monday at a Los Angeles hotel, movie and television personalities will give Todd visual aids valued at more than $3,000, the newspaper said.

Todd suffers from retinitis pigmentosa, a malady that steadily deteriorates the "rods" and "cones" in the retina and often causes blindness.

Doctors in Moscow injected ribonucleic acid into Todd's retina and hip to halt the spread of the disease.

Although medical authorities in the United States considered the treatment useless, Todd's mother said his eyesight has improved.

Meanwhile, the family has been deluged by letters from people seeking information about the treatment in the Soviet Union.

BOSTON (AP) — Sculptor Kahlil Gibran, a cousin and namesake of the late mystic poet, used a pistol to foil an attacker, an action he called "completely out of character," police said.

Gibran, 59, said he was watching two friends walk away from his South End home Thursday when he saw a youth double back toward them. He said he then ran outside and saw the youth prodding one of his friends, Boston painter William Georgenes, with a seven-inch knife.

"I put my gun right up against him and I told him to drop the knife," Gibran said.

"I'm involved with sensitive things," Gibran said following the incident. "This is completely out of character for me, but it has to be done. I should be doing dreamy things."

Police said they charged Knowell Greenwood, 18, of Boston, with armed robbery.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The 21-year-old victim of "elephant man's disease" who recently underwent extensive corrective surgery says she really didn't mind spending the holidays in the hospital.

Lisa H., a false name adopted by the patient at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, had large disfiguring tumors removed from her face in a pioneering operation Dec. 9. A fever kept her in the hospital on Christmas instead of at home as doctors had hoped.

"My doctors are wonderful. The nurses are excellent. They're all terrific," Lisa said in a prepared statement.

"I know my family will come to see me, so I don't really mind."

Hospital officials said Lisa's face is swollen, discolored and aching, but that messages from hundreds of well-wishers have lifted her spirits.

For Christie fans, a killer of a quiz

NEW YORK (AP) — It's no mystery why the world loves Agatha Christie. Her detectives are non-violent eccentrics who may throw curves, but never punches. One of Dame Agatha's most intriguing tales has been adapted for broadcast by CBS Saturday night.

The story is called "Murder is Easy," and if you believe that, you might just sail through this quiz for Christie-philes, composed by Janis Hirsch:

1.Agatha Christie's Miss Marple seemed to be written expressly for this inimitable British character actress, whose combination of nuttiness and know-how untangled the most knotty problems. There was nothing like this Dame — name here for four points. She starred as Miss Marple in four different Christie thrillers. Name them for three points each. How's this for a clue? The first word of each title is "Murder."

2.In 1957, Agatha Christie's courtroom melodrama got the Billy Wilder treatment and critics hailed the show as a screen treasure. Its title sounds like it should have been a sequel to "The Defenders." Can you name it for three points? It starred a German legend who complained a lot about "falling in love again," a chubby-faced actor who, when he couldn't be quarterback, settled for the position of hunchback at Notre Dame, and a suave swashbuckler who sometimes signed his name with a "Z." If you know who they are, you've earned two points for each name — and a stay of execution.

3.This Christie-inspired movie started out as "And Then There Were None," but by the time there was a remake, there had been a small population explosion. Hugh O'Brian and Stanley Holloway starred in this flick that was serious business, although it sounds like a kiddie song. Name it, and chalk up three points.

4.There were more motives than passengers on this luxury train fueled by Agatha Christie's fiendish imagination. We'll tell you that Albert Finney starred as Hercule Poirot, and for every other major star you can name — a dozen spring to our mind — you'll win a point. Oh yes, name the movie, add two more points, then book passage.

5.One of the players in "Murder is Easy," the latest Agatha Christie tale to get the star treatment, once shared an apartment with a Martian and a personality with a hulk. Name him for two points.

ANSWERS:

1.Dame Margaret Rutherford; "Murder, She Said," "Murder at the Gallop," "Murder Most Foul" and "Murder Ahoy." 2. "Witness for the Prosecution," Marlene Dietrich, Charles Laughton, Tyrone Power. 3. "Ten Little Indians." 4. Lauren Bacall, Martin Balsam, Ingrid Bergman, Jacqueline Bisset, Sean Connery, John Gielgud, Wendy Hiller, Anthony Perkins, Vanessa Redgrave, Rachel Roberts, Richard Widmark, Michael York; "Murder on the Orient Express." 5. Bill Bixby.

SCORING:

If you scored between 45 and 60, you know how to take a hint; 30-44, your problems are solved; 15-30, you're a mystery to all; 0-14, you haven't a clue.

Two local arts organizations receive financial assistance

AUSTIN — Two Midland arts organizations received financial assistance awards totaling $25,000 at the November quarterly meeting of the Texas Commission on the Arts, a state arts agency.

Commission Chairman Mary Lou Braymer announced that Texas Nonprofit Theatres, of which Midland Community Theatre is a member, received $20,000 to provide services to the states' nonprofit theatres, and the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale received $5,000 to be used for a production of a Cabaret Pop series of concerts.

Eighty-two grants were approved in 26 Texas cities for a total of $610,836. Financial assistance awards, which must be matched by local funds, support programs in music, theatre, dance, visual arts, architecture, media, literature and education, and serve to implement TCA's goal of making the arts accessible to all Texans.

Awards are made to nonprofit organizations, educational institutions and units of government.

Sooners defeat Cougars 40-14 in Sun Bowl

Houston fumble sparks Oklahoma to strong finish

EL PASO — A seven-play 80-yard scoring drive following a Houston fumble in the end zone ignited an Oklahoma 30-point outburst in the fourth quarter and lifted the Sooners to a 40-14 win over the Cougars here Saturday in the 47th annual Sun Bowl.

The key fumble came with 1:15 left in the third quarter when Oklahoma's Albert Watts stripped Robert Durham of the football at the one-yard line and the Sooners recovered in the end zone. Durham had caught a swing pass from quarterback Lionel Wilson at scooted 60 yards before losing the pig skin. Durham, who was 15 yards ahead of the nearest Sooner after making the catch, said, "I should have changed hands with the ball but all I could think of was running down the field. I thought I was out of bounds. An Oklahoma player pushed (Lonnell) Phea into me and he hit my arm and I fumbled. There is no excuse though. I just let my teammates down."

Houston coach Bill Yeoman was blunt with his appraisal of the fumble "when you have a 20 to 30-yard head start and get caught, you are not as fast as people thought and you have to get faster. There was no excuse of the Durham fumble. He should have hung on with both hands."

IN THE Sooner lockerroom coach Barry Switzer said, "We took control of the game after we scored following the fumble. It was a swing of 14 points. If they had scored they would have went ahead 14-10 and the way it turned out, we marched 80 yards and went up 17-7 and took control of the game."

Watts stated "I didn't think I could catch him but all of a sudden there I was and the ball was right there. I just went for the ball and grabbed at it and I knocked it loose."

Houston seemed snake-bit after the fumble on their next possession, punter Lonnie Stokes, who had been averaging 41.6 yards per kick, shanked a punt that went just 14 yards.

Oklahoma capitalized on this break with a 49-yard field goal off the strong right leg of Michael Keeling to go ahead 20-10 with 8:03 left to play in the final period.

More bad luck struck the Cougars the next time they touched the ball. After a pass picked up 12 yards and a first down, Allen Poke fumbled and OU's Steve Whalley recovered for the Sooners at Houston's 29-yard line.

FRESHMAN FULLBACK Fred Sims converted the turnover into a score when he zipped 30 yards up the middle for a Sooner touchdown two plays later.

Sims, in the game for starting fullback Stanley Wilson who suffered bruised ribs at the end of the first half, gained 181 yards in the second half on 15 carries to help the Sooners outrush the Cougars 439-230.

Sims' 181 yards was the third best rushing performance in Sun Bowl history.

On his performance, Sims said, "it feels great. I was sorry to see Stanley to go out with an injury but I was ready and our offensive line was doing the job." He added, "it is hard sitting on the bench all year, it bothered me a lot. I got to thinking I wasn't good enough to play."

Switzer said, "Freddy is a tough runner. He's 5-foot-9, 202-pounds and has 4.5 speed. That makes him hard to bring down. He just came in and played very well replacing Wilson. We always thought he was a good player. He'll have a good future here at OU."

Despite Sims glittering statistics, former Odessa High star Darrell Shepard was named the game's Most Valuable Player. Shepard rushed for 135 yards on 17 carries and scored two touchdowns while directing the Sooner wishbone in high style.

SHEPARD, WHO went to the University of Houston in 1977 as one of the most highly recruited quarterbacks in the country, spent two years as a Cougar before he left for Norman two years later amid a furor that cost UH a one-year probation and an NCAA ruling that stated Shepard would be ineligible for any post season activity if he remained a Cougar.

Shepard said, "I have no hard feelings against Houston. I don't feel like the University of Houston did anything wrong. It was a deal where the NCAA was picking on one school and me also." He added, "Today I just wanted to show them (Houston) that I was a good quarterback and that a team could win with me. I don't have any hard feelings about my college career. Now I'm just ready to try playing football at a higher level."

Shepard had put the Sooners ahead in the first period when he danced outside and sprinted 34 yards down the right sidelines for a touchdown. Keeling added the PAT as the Sooners took the lead 7-0 with 5:06 left in the opening period.

Houston came back to tie the score in the second quarter. The Cougars marched 63 yards in 11 plays with Wilson's 11-yard pass to Phea and Poke's 11-yard burst up the middle being the big plays and an inerference call on Watts in the end zone gave the Cougars a first down at the one and Wilson sneaked over the right side for the touchdown. Mike Clendenen's kick tied the game with 3:39 left before intermission.

OU WENT ahead in the third quarter when Keeling toed a 32-yard field goal with 4:09 left in the quarter. With 2:55 left in the game, Donald Jordan scored on a six-yard run as the Cougars trimmed the deficit to 26-14.

The Sooners responded by scoring two touchdowns in 14 seconds to wrap up the contest. Ron Mills scored on a two-yard run and 14 seconds later end John Truitt returned an inerception 28 yards for the final score of the day.

Houston quarterback Wilson said "we just didn't get the breaks. They got the breaks and they won the ball game."

Coach Yeoman stated, "You have to give Oklahoma credit. It was the best offense we have seen this year. Oklahoma has a lot of talent and their game plan was very solid. We tried to pass early but dropped a few and a couple of others were thrown off the mark. They have a whole stable of runners and they showed it."

He added, "I know one thing, I'm sick of fumbles and we'll be working a lot harder next year at hanging on to the ball."

Oklahoma Coach Switzer said, "I though overall we played pretty well especially on defense. Our team had a great time in El Paso and we enjoyed it very much.

Oklahoma made it a complete sweep of post-game honors when sophomore defensive tackle Rick Bryant was named the Most Valuable Lineman. Bryant ended the day with four tackles for a total of 11 yards lost and broke up one pass to earn his honors.

Both the Sooners ended the year at 7-4-1.

Eagles seeking second straight Super Bowl the hard way

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles try the hard way to reach the Super Bowl for the second straight year when they meet the New York Giants Sunday in the first round of the National Football League playoffs.

Last season, the Eagles won the National Conference East, earned a week off and had to win only two games, both at home, to get to the Super Bowl. This time they lost four of their last five games and slipped into the playoffs as a wild-card team.

Starting with the Giants, Coach Dick Vermeil's Eagles would have to win three games, two on the road, for another chance at pro football's biggest prize.

Vermeil observes that the Oakland Raiders accomplished the feat last season, and became the first wild-card team ever to win the Super Bowl. They beat the Eagles 27-10.

"So, we know it can be done," Vermeil noted. "But the only thing that matters now is how you play this Sunday."

The Eagles are a seven-point favorite, although the teams split during the regular season. Philadelphia won the season opener on the road, 24-10, while the Giants started the Eagles on a four game slide with a 20-10 triumph here last month.

"We've found a way to win," says Coach Ray Perkins as the Giants head into postseason play for the first time in 18 years. "I've tried to get my players to approach this game like it was the 17th regular season game. I don't have to tell them how big it is. They know that," he said of his wild-card entry.

"It's going to be like World War V," Perkins predicted.

The Giants (9-7) won four of their last five games, including a 13-10 victory over the East Division champion Dallas Cowboys. The Eagles (10-6) lost four straight before closing out the season with a 38-0 blowout of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The game appears to be a battle of solid defenses. The Eagles were first in allowing fewest points and total yardage in the NFL. The Giants were third in giving up points. Both coaches expect a low scoring game, with crucial mistakes on offense the key for the winner.

The Eagles have the edge in experience since this is their fourth straight season in the playoffs. New York is in the playoffs for the first time in 18 years.

The defensive stalwarts are linebackers Harry Carson, Brian Kelley, Lawrence Taylor and Brad Van Pelt for New York, and the Eagles' front three of Dennis Hairston, Charley Johnson and Carl Hairston, backed by linebackers Frank LeMaster, Al Chesley, Jerry Robinson and John Bunting.

The Giants appear to have an edge in pass defense, especially if Eagles cornerback Roynell Young, is unable to play because of an ankle condition. New York punter Dave Jennings has an edge on Philadelphia's Max Runager, while field goal kickers Joe Danelo of the Giants and Tony Franklin for the Eagles are a standoff.

The Giants are led on offense by second year quarterback Scott Brunner, who replaced Phil Simms when the first-string passer separated a shoulder five weeks ago. Brunner has completed 79 of 190 passes for 978-yards, and thrown for five touchdowns. He's has 11 intercepted.

The top receivers are Johnny Perkins (51-858), Gary Shirk (42-445), and running backs Leon Bright and Rob Carpenter. Carpenter is the No. 1 runner with 748 yards on 190 carries. Danelo with a perfect 31 on points after touchdown and 24 of 38 field goals, is the leading scorer with 103 points.

Eagles quarterback Ron Jaworski will try and exploit a Giants' secondary led by safety Beasley Reece's four interceptions, and three by cornerback Terry Jackson. Jaworski has completed 250 of 461 for 3,095-yards, and 23 touchdowns.

The leading Eagles' receivers are wideout Harold Carmichael, who with 61 for 1,028 went over 1,000 yards for the third time in his career; running back Wilbert Montgomery (49-491) and wide receiver Charley Smith (38-564).

Montgomery, one of the NFL's top five rushers, gained 1,402-yards on 286 carries and was over 100-yards in eight games, the only back to accomplish that feat against the Giants.

Cornerback Brenard Wilson with five, and Young (4) top the interceptors.

Jets-Bills game could be decided at the line of scrimmage

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Jets had the most sacks in the National Football League this year, 66. The Buffalo Bills allowed the fewest sacks, 16.

And in the team's two meetings this year — a 31-0 romp by the Bills at Buffalo on opening day and a 33-14 victory by the Jets at home six weeks later — the Jets managed only three sacks.

Who wins the battle along the line of scrimmage probably will go a long way in deciding who wins the American Football Conference wild card playoff game between the two AFC East teams Sunday.

The Jets' quartet of linemen — "the New York Sack Exchange" — is well known, with Joe Klecko and Mark Gastineau at the ends and Abdul Salaam and Marty Lyons at the tackles.

But the quintet of Bills who protect Joe Ferguson so well labor in relative obscurity, no longer known as the "Electric Company" which opened the holes for O.J. Simpson during the 1970s.

For the record, the five men who have kept Ferguson's uniform so clean this year are, from left to right, tackle Ken Jones, guard Jon Borchardt (relieved on occasion by Tom Lynch), center Will Grant, guard Conrad Dobler (or Jim Ritcher) and tackle Joe Devlin.

Klecko and Gastineau, both of whom broke the Jets' single-season sack record, hold their opponents across the line in high esteem.

"I voted for Jones for All-Pro," Klecko said of the six-year veteran from Arkansas State. "I was surprised not to see him on the list. I've played against him four years now and it's a total change. He was an adequate passblocker. Now he's outstanding."

And Gastineau, stopped by Devlin in both games against the Bills this year, called him the best tackle he's faced in 1981 and almost echoed Klecko when he said, "I was shocked to hear he didn't make All-Pro."

The matchup of Dobler vs. Salaam could be pivotal. "Conrad's dedicated. He puts his heart into what he's doing," Salaam said, not without a hint of sarcasm. Dobler has been flagged more than a few times for what might be called over-exuberance. He was caught leg-whipping a couple of times in a nationally televised game this year and is a master at baiting opponents into losing their composure.

"I'll be aware of my game plan," Salaam said. "You don't lose your temper against anyone. Your main interest is to carry out your strategy."

Both Ferguson and his counterpart on the Jets, Richard Todd, had exceptional seasons. Ferguson completed 252 of 498 passes for 3,652 yards, all Buffalo records. Todd's 497 passes and 279 completions were both Jets' records and his 13 interceptions were the fewest in the club's history. His 25 touchdown passes were one short of the Jets' record shared by Joe Namath and Al Dorow. Ferguson passed for 24 touchdowns and was intercepted 20 times.

Running back Joe Cribbs and wide receiver Frank Lewis are the Bills' other big offensive weapons. Cribbs rolled up his second consecutive 1,000-yard season with 1,097, fifth in the AFC, and scored 10 touchdowns. Lewis set club record with 70 receptions (fourth in the AFC) for 1,244 yards (tied with Denver's Steve Watson for the conference lead).

The Jets' grround game is more diffuse, led by rookie Freeman McNeil's 623 yards in barely a half season, the result of several injuries. But the Jets outrushed the Bills 2,341-2,125. The Jets also employed a short passing game with running back Bruce Harper coming out of the backfield to gather in a team-high 52 passes for 459 yards. Wesley Walker, who caught 47 for 770 yards and nine TDs, was joined late in the season by Johnny "Lam" Jones. He gathered in 8 passes for 151 yards and two TDs in the final two games after catching only 12 for 191 yards and one TD in the previous 14 games.

The meeting is the 45th between the two original American Football League teams. The Bills have won 24 times.

This is Buffalo's second consecutive postseason appearance. The Bills won the AFC East championship a year ago, but were beaten in the division playoffs by San Diego 20-14 when Ron Smith caught a Dan Fouts touchdown pass on a play covering 50 yards with barely two minutes to play.

The Jets are making their first playoff appearance since the 1969 season, when they won the AFL's Eastern Division title but were eliminated 13-6 by the Kansas City Chiefs, the eventual Super Bowl winners.

Tar Heels win fight for No. 1, 82-69

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — North Carolina, spurred by the frontcourt performance of James Worthy and Sam Perkins, preserved its No.1 college basketball national ranking by defeating Kentucky 82-69 Saturday.

It was a matchup of unbeaten teams, top-ranked North Carolina and No.2 Kentucky, but in the end, it became a matchup of Tar Heel power vs. the speed of the Wildcats. Worthy and Perkins, representing the power, won out.

Worthy was the high scorer of the game with 26 points, and Perkins helped the Tar Heels break open a close contest early in the second half.

North Carolina, leading 38-35 at halftime, scored the first six points after intermission and, in the first 4:17 of the second half, North Carolina outscored Kentucky 10-2. That gave the Tar Heels a 48-37 lead with 15:43 to play, and the game was out of reach for Kentucky.

Perkins, a 6-foot-9 sophomore was matched against another sophomore, 6-foot-11 Melvin Turpin, who has been substituing for the injured Sam Bowie. Kentucky sorely missed Bowie's muscle in this contest. Perkins blocked three Turpin shots in the first half, and in the second half, the long-armed Perkins scored 17 of his 21 points.

The Tar Heels went into their famed four-corner spread with about five minutes left and up by 63-55. And Kentucky fell into the trap.

Perkins hit two free throws and Worthy slashed through the spread-out Kentucky defense for a slam dunk. Perkins hit for two more and freshman Michael Jordan got an easy basket. North Carolina had outscored Kentucky 8-4 and the Tar Heels led 71-59 with 2:49 to play.

North Carolina's largest lead was 15 points, at 57-42 with 11:14 to play. Jordan, a high-leaping guard, scored five points in a 3:25 span during which North Carolina outscored Kentucky 7-2 for that 15-point bulge.

Jordan added 19 points for the Tar Heels, 6-0, and Charles Hurt led the Wildcats, 6-1, with 18. Kentucky guard Jim Master had 14 points, but only two of them in the second half.

Bowie, a 7-foot-2 center, has sat out all seven of Kentucky's games with a stress fracture in his shinbone, and he is not expected back until February at the earliest. Without him, Worthy and Perkins were able to assure the Tar Heels of the top national ranking for the fifth straight week.

Big-play receivers Bluebonnet-bound

HOUSTON (AP) — The New Year's Eve matchup between Michigan and UCLA in the 23rd annual Bluebonnet Bowl will be a showcase for two of the nation's outstanding All-America receivers, Michigan wide receiver Anthony Carter and UCLA tight end Tim Wrightman.

Carter, a junior big play artist from Riviera Beach, Fla., caught 44 passes this season in leading the Wolverines to an 8-3 record and their seventh straight bowl appearance.

Wrightman, a senior from San Pedro, Calif., caught only 26 passes last season, but proved his mettle in blocking as the Bruins posted a 7-3-1 record and narrowly missed a shot at going to the Rose Bowl as the Pacific-10 Conference representative.

Michigan tailback Butch Woolfolk says it's a treat just being on the same team with the acrobatic Carter.

"The fans see him only on Saturday, but I see him every day in practice and he been making the same amazing catches every day," said Woolfolk, Michigan's all-time leading rusher. "And he still amazes you even after watching all this time."

Carter, who finished seventh in the Heisman Trophy voting, has averaged 16.9 yards every time he's touched the ball in his career, putting him ahead of the NCAA record of 13.8 yards set by 1972 Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska.

Wrightman caught fewer passes because of Coach Terry Donahue's balanced attack, but it hasn't kept Wrightman from calling for the ball.

"I've had a few conversations with Coach Donahue about not being thrown to but it's all been good natured," Wrightman said. "It's not an individual attitude. It gets frustrating if you're not part of the offense. It should be how best can I help the team, and the best way I can help is by catching and blocking."

The quarterback's on the other end of the passing combinations are Michigan's Steve Smith and Tom Ramsey of UCLA. Ramsey ranked 11th and Smith was 22nd in NCAA passing this season, but both ranked higher in touchdown passes.

Smith had a touchdown percentage of 7.18, third in the nation behind Pittburgh's Dan Marino and Arizona State's Mike Pegal, and Ramsey finished sixth at 6.83 per cent.

The game will mark the first time two teams from the PAC-10 and Big 10 have met outside of the Rose Bowl. Michigan and UCLA will play a regular-season game next Sept. 25 however.

Kickoff is set for 7 p.m., CST.

Nehlen readies Mountaineers for 'scary' Florida Gators

ATLANTA (AP) — West Virginia Coach Don Nehlen expresses fear when he discusses the New Year's Eve Peach Bowl matchup between his resurgent Mountaineers and the physically awesome Florida Gators.

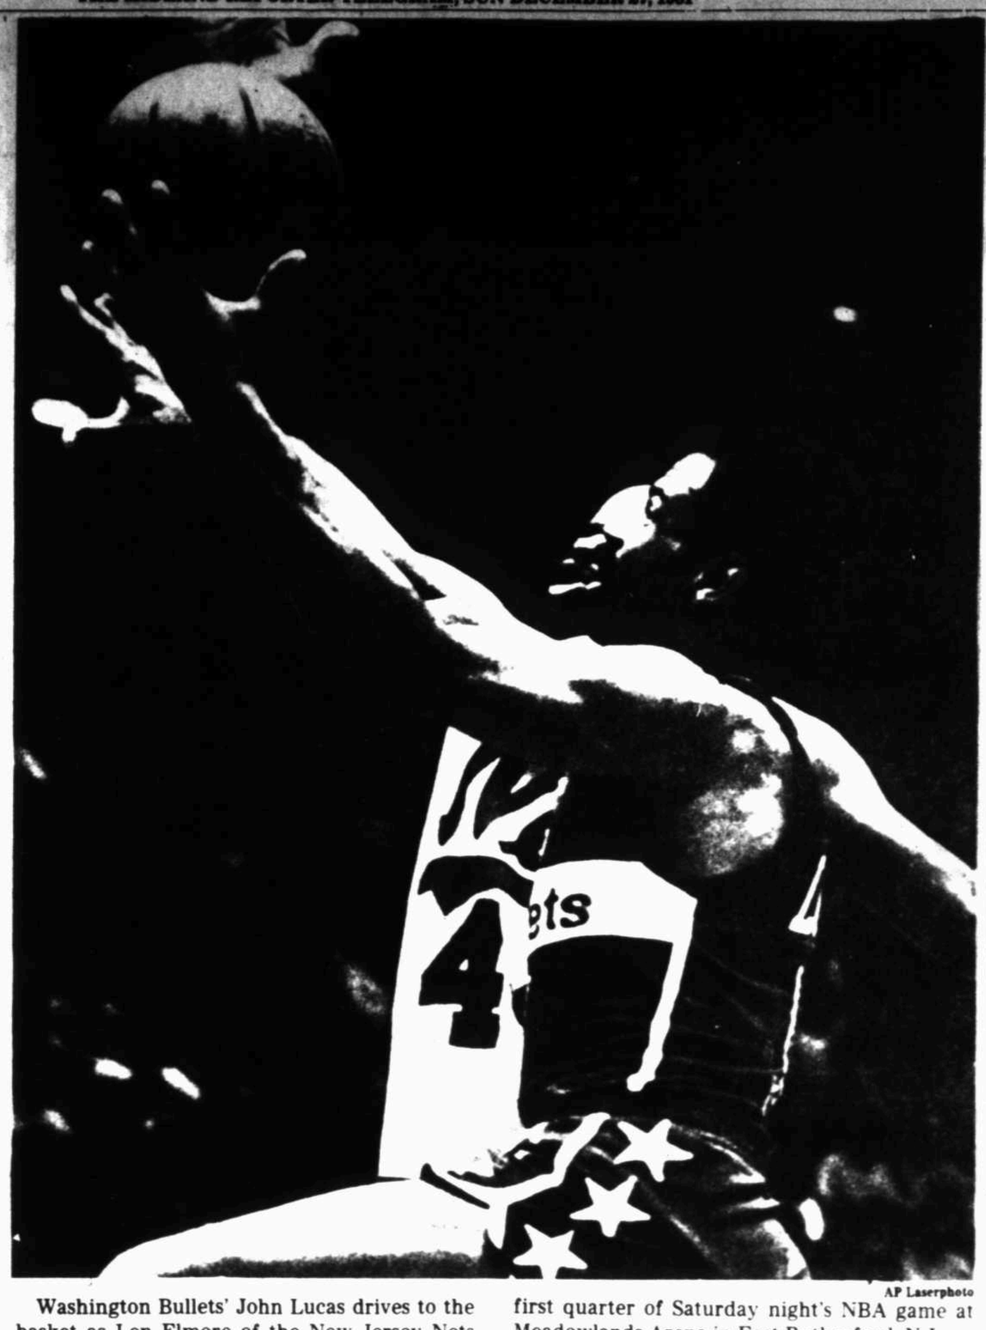

"Everything I find out about Florida is scary," Nehlen said after reviewing films of the Gators' 7-4 season.

"The more I dig, the more I find out how tough Florida is. They are a very big team and have at least six or seven dominant players on defense," said Nehlen, who is in his second year at West Virginia.

Florida is a one-touchdown favorite over the 8-3 Mountaineers in the 2 p.m. CST nationally televised contest. A near sellout crowd of 60,000 is expected at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

West Virginia will be making its fourth Peach Bowl appearance and its first since a 13-10 victory over North Carolina State in 1975 here.

Last year, Nehlen guided the Mountaineers to their first non-losing season since 1975 with a 6-6 record.

Vols lose starters to academic troubles

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Volunteers left for the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore., Saturday without starters Gary Carter and Ed Littleton, both of whom may be out for the season because of academic problems, team officials said.

Assistant coach Bob Burton made the announcement after a Christmas night practice prior to the flight to Oregon for Sunday's contest against the Portland Pilots.

Burton, speaking in behalf of head Coach Don DeVoe who already had left Knoxville, said Carter and Littleton had failed to establish their academic eligibility for the winter semester.

Neither played worked out with the team Christmas night.

Haywood Harris, Tennessee's sports information director, said he was uncertain whether the academic problems stemmed from low grades or failure to maintain hourly requirements.

New York, New York to beat the spread?

An AP Sports Analysis
By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

New York, New York, it's a heck of a town. The Jets are up and the Giants are ... too.

The Buffalo Bills have been complaining about spitting.

The Philadelphia Eagles have been crying about late-hitting.

Maybe they're just getting their excuses in early.

From this vantage point — and even though it's smack in the middle of Manhattan, that has no bearing on things — the Jets look good to beat the Bills and the Giants are solid candidates to cover the spread ... and just maybe beat the Eagles outright.

The regular-season record against the point spread was 111 winners, 110 losers.

This week's picks (home teams capitalized):

NEW YORK JETS minus 3 over Buffalo Bills: Everybody knows about the New York Sack Exchange, but not everyone knows about the nicknameless Buffalo offense which allowed a league-low 16 sacks. They pretty much cancel each other out, although you can look for the Jets to put more pressure on Bills quarterback Joe Ferguson than he's seen just about all season.

The recent emergence of speed-demon Johnny "Lam" Jones gives the Jets a devastating 1-2 aerial punch to go along with a reliable if not spectacular ground game.

Finally, the Bills come into the game on the down side after blowing a shot at the American Football Conference East championship at Miami. And they're not that hot on the road or on natural grass. The Jets play particularly well at home and on grass.

New York Giants plus 7 over PHILADELPHIA EAGLES: The Eagles looked explosive last Sunday against St.Louis. But the Cardinals had the National Football Conference's worst defense. New York's is one of the best. It allowed an average of less than 13 points per game in its final five games, starting with a 20-10 victory at Philadelphia.

And the Eagles, before that meaningless 38-0 blowout of the Cards, had scored 10, 10, 13 and 10 points in four consecutive losses.

The Giants seem to love the road. They won five of eight there, while going 4-4 at home, and they covered the spread on the road all but once. They'll cover it this time, too.

Huskies expecting unexpected from Fry, Hawkeyes

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Washington Coach Don James said Saturday he's preparing his defense to expect the unexpected from Iowa's offense in the 68th Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

The Iowa offense, like Washington's, has been overshadowed by the defense, but James said the Hawkeyes present problems because of their multiple formations. At times this year, Iowa has used a shotgun, an unbalanced line and a spread formation with five wide receivers.

James said the Huskies must be prepared not only for those alignments, but for anything else Iowa Coach Hayden Fry might throw at them.

"I think the biggest problem going into a first game of the year or a bowl game is that both opponents have such a long time to prepare that you can make a lot of changes," James said.

"We may never see the unbalanced line, we may never see the shotgun. But we're still going to prepare for it."

James said after a rough start, the Husky practices have gone well. He also said some starters have missed practice time because of injuries, but all are expected to be healthy by game time.

"The first couple of days we were having the same experiences Hayden had with his club in that we had to go out and practice under the sunshine, which we hadn't seen that much of," James said. "And we had to put on new shoes and get on grass, which is another thing we don't do a lot of normally.

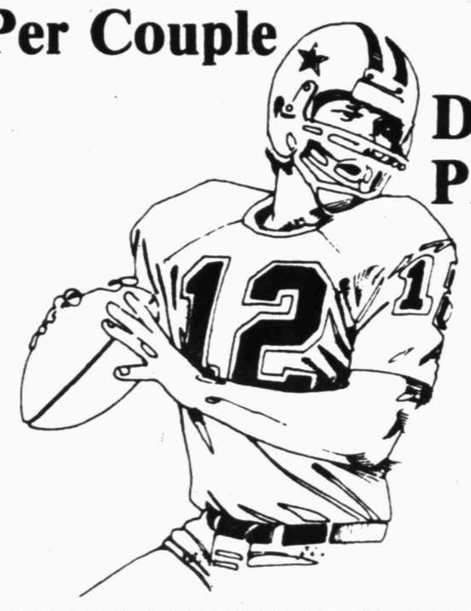

"But I think each day it's gotten a little better."

Both starting offensive guards, James Carter and Andy Bresolin, were hurt the third day of practice, James said. In addition, defensive tackle Ray Cattage bruised his shoulder on Thursday and missed the rest of that workout.

James said all three should be back in action when the Huskies resume practicing in pads on Monday.

"We want to get our players in the same program that they're in during the season," James said. "Since the game is played on Friday, that actually becomes Saturday in our practice schedule and we back things up accordingly. This (Saturday) becomes a Sunday so tomorrow is like a Monday practice."

Clemson seeks No. 1, respectability in Orange

MIAMI (AP) — The Clemson Tigers have won seven outright Atlantic Coast Conference championships, more than any team. Friday night, Jan. 1, their sights will be set even higher.

Shortly after 7 p.m. CST (NBC-TV), the No. 1-ranked Tigers will go against fourth-ranked Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, seeking the victory that almost certainly would assure the first national championship in the South Carolina school's 85-year football history.

"I wouldn't really have believed it if someone had told me in September that we'd be No. 1 at the end of the regular season," said Coach Danny Ford. "I'm looking to wake up any time now, and I hope I don't have to wake up until Jan. 2. But I didn't know things would happen like they happened."

What happened was that Clemson went 11-0 during the regular season, the only member of the NCAA's 137 major college teams not to lose.

Clemson never has won a national championship in any sport, finishing second in the 1979 NCAA soccer tournament and fourth in fencing in 1978.

"If we beat Nebraska, I don't think there will be any doubt about who's No. 1," said Ford. "But I hate to say anything before we do it because it may not happen. But if it does happen, we will have beaten the No. 4 team (Georgia, Sept. 19, 13-3), No. 8 (North Carolina, Nov. 7, 10-8) and No. 4 (Nebraska). I don't know what else we'd have to do."

Since losing to Clemson, Georgia's defending national champions have climbed to second place in The Associated Press ratings. The Bulldogs meet 10th-ranked Pitt in the Sugar Bowl at the same time Clemson and Nebraska meet in the Orange Bowl.

The victory over Georgia, Ford said, was "the game that put us over the hump," the one that made believers of the Clemson players. "It let us know early in the season what kind of team we had, or could have. Georgia is gonna have as good people as anyone else, so if you beat them, you can play with anybody. I think the players feel that way about the Georgia game."

The Tigers forced Georgia into nine turnovers and moved into the 1981 rankings for the first time. Since then, Ford said, "Everything has been perfect."

Nebraska, however, could turn out to be the best team the Tigers have faced all season. After dropping two of their first three games — 10-7 to Iowa and 30-24 to Penn State — the Cornhuskers won the Big Eight title while reeling off eight consecutive victories, four over bowl teams: 6-0 over Missouri, 31-15 over Kansas, 54-7 over Oklahoma State and 37-14 over Oklahoma 37-14.

"I'm sure there are better teams in the country than Nebraska," said Iowa State Coach Donnie Duncan, "but most of them are playing on Sundays."

Since The AP poll began in 1936, only one national champion — Minnesota in 1960 — has lost two games. But the title was decided before the bowl games in those days and Minnesota was 8-1 before losing to Washington in the Rose Bowl.

Coach Tom Osborne isn't making too much noise about Nebraska's chances for its first national crown since 1971, but there is precedent for such a jump. Just four years ago, No. 5 Notre Dame beat No. 1 Texas in the Cotton Bowl and vaulted to the national championship.

"Look, we're going out to try to be the Orange Bowl champion," Osborne said. "We want to control what destiny we can — and that's to beat Clemson. If we do that, somebody's going to vote us No. 1."

Although Clemson piled up national highs of 82 points and 756 total yards against Wake Forest, the Tigers aren't in the top 10 in any of the four major offensive categories. Nebraska, meanwhile, is sixth in total offense with 437.5 yards per game, second in rushing with 330.5 and eighth in scoring with a 31.7-point average. The Cornhuskers' 541 yards against Colorado was the best rushing performance by any major team.

Clemson's strength is defense. The Tigers finished eighth in total defense with an average yield of 251.5 yards per game, seventh in rushing defense at 88.7 and second in scoring defense at 8.1 points per game. But Nebraska is no slouch on defense, either. The Huskers ranked sixth in total defense at 240.5, first in pass defense at 47.9 and fourth in scoring defense at 9.4 points.

Clemson has an even bigger opportunity than Nebraska to control its destiny with an Orange Bowl triumph.

Said Ford, "The only people who can bother us are those red-shirted Nebraska people."

Dudley confident about success of Liberty Bowl

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — When A.F. "Bud" Dudley, the founder and executive director of the Liberty Bowl, matched up Big Ten powerhouse Ohio State with Navy for 1981, he expected criticism.

Last week, when Ohio State returned some 4,000 unsold tickets and bowl officials were admitting that for the first time in years, the game might not be a sellout, Dudley still was confident about the success of the 23rd Liberty Bowl Wednesday night.

"This isn't the first time we've taken some heat about a matchup," Dudley told a luncheon audience. "We still say we have one very fine matchup, and just as important, one with world-wide appeal."

Dudley brought the game to Memphis in 1965 after trying it out in Philadelphia and Atlantic City. The affair has been a success since the day Dudley arrived.

Some people wondered, however, when Dudley ended the game's long association with the ABC-TV network early this year and signed a contract with television syndicator Metro Sports. Then he matched the Buckeyes with a good, but far from first-rate Navy team.

Then there were signs that the crowd in the 50,180-seat Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium might have some gaps in it.

But Dudley hasn't put the Liberty Bowl among the nation's top college football postseason classics by making mistakes.

His decision on the television contract might be someday turn out to have been a masterstroke. This year's game will be shown on cable television, both in the United States and on five continents. There is a potential for a greater audience than even ABC could offer.

Leonard Klompus, a Metro Sports official who was in Memphis last week, said 23 minutes of commercial time during the game already has been sold at $40,000 per 30-second spot.

That's one reason why this year's participants will take home $450,000 to $500,000 apiece, up from about $380,000 last year.

Most of the commercial time was bought by Tennessee concerns. Holiday Inns of Memphis, Federal Express, the Memphis-based overnight air express company; and the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, are the prime sponsors.

At first glance, the game is a mismatch. Ohio State, with an 8-3 record, has one of the nation's best college quarterbacks in Art Schlichter, who has gained 2,400 yards passing this year. Navy, 7-3-1, lost to to Yale 23-19 and fell 38-0 to one of the worst Notre Dame teams in decades.

But there are some factors that could turn the game into a barnburner such as last year's Missouri-Purdue game.

"We think we've got that emotional aspect here, what with (Navy Coach) George Welsh leaving," Dudley said. "I would imagine that Navy will be just as fired up."

Welsh is leaving Navy to coach at Virginia. But Navy isn't totally lacking in an offensive threat.

Tailback Eddie Meyers has been averaging 131.9 yards a game rushing, and needs only 65 yards to go over 3,000 yard in his career.

Looking back at baseball in 1981

Pro sports' longest strike halts Major Leagues

By The Associated Press

The longest strike in professional sports history shut down the baseball industry for 50 days last summer and wiped out 714 games, turning the 1981 season into one of the darkest chapters in the game's storied history.

The strike, called by the Major League Players Association, bargaining agent for the 650 players on 26 big league rosters, began June 12 and was not settled until July 31, cutting the heart of summer out of the sport that stands center stage at that time of the year. Millions of dollars were lost by both players and clubs in the dispute, and there was no way to estimate what the long range economic impact of the walkout would be.

The strike was called over the issue of professional player compensation for clubs losing free agents. Management said it needed a system to replace players lost through the free agent machinery, while the union argued that compensation was nothing more than a naked attack on the improved salaries and mobility of the players.

The argument dragged through the federal courts and the National Labor Relations Board, in hearing rooms from Rochester N.Y., to Washington and from New York to Chicago to Los Angeles.

The adversaries were Marvin Miller, the soft-spoken executive director of the union, who had helped win huge gains for the players in 15 years as their chief negotiator, and Ray Grebey, pipe-puffing director of the owners' Player Relations Committee, who came to baseball with a reputation as a tough bargainer. Their collision brought the game to its knees for much of the summer.

When the strike began, baseball was in the midst of what promised to be another banner year for the sport. Attendances had soared past 40 million for three consecutive seasons and were headed in that direction again. There were tight races in all four divisions and the turnstiles were spinning merrily until it all stopped quite abruptly on a Friday night in June.

The two sides had been negotiating throughout the first two months of the season, a shadowy cloud hanging ominously over the sport. The early season accomplishments of teams like the Oakland A's and players like Pete Rose, Lem Barker and rookie sensation Fernando Valenzuela could not erase the apprehension that the talks were causing.

The A's, managed by fiery Billy Martin, shot in front in the American League West, setting a record by winning their first 11 games. After 18 games, the A's were 17-1 thanks in large measure to Billyball, a scrappy brand of play built around speed and daring and named after their controversial manager.

Cleveland stayed close in the tough American League East and got a tremendous lift from Barker, a fast-ball specialist who pitched baseball's first perfect game since 1968. The tall, powerful right-hander mowed down 27 Toronto Blue Jays in order on May 15, achieving only the 12th perfect game in history and the first since Catfish Hunter did it May 8, 1968.

Barker's no-hitter was one of three pitched in the majors last season. Charlie Lea of Montreal no-hit San Francisco on May 10 and Houston's Nolan Ryan pitched the record-shattering fifth of his career, this time against Los Angeles on Sept. 26.

Rose, Philadelphia's 40-year-old first baseman, tied Stan Musial's National League record for hits at 3,630 on the day before the strike and then marked time for seven weeks. On his first day back at work, Rose stroked a base hit to claim the record. He finished the season with 3,697 hits, third on the all-time list behind Cobb's 4,191 and Hank Aaron's 3,771.

Valenzuela, a chunky 20-year-old rookie from Mexico, pitched a shutout on opening day for the Los Angeles Dodgers, the first of eight consecutive victories, which tied one record, and the first of eight shutouts over the season, setting a mark for rookies. Valenzuela, who finished at 13-7 with a 2.48 earned run average, went on to win the National League Cy Young Award, the first rookie to accomplish that feat.

The National League's Most Valuable Player was third baseman Mike Schmidt, who captured the award for the second consecutive year. Schmidt accumulated figures that would be impressive for a full season, batting .316 with 31 home runs and 91 runs batted in.

His reward came Christmas week in the form of a six-year contract for an estimated $1.2 million a year.

The American League Cy Young and MVP awards went to remarkable Rollie Fingers of the Milwaukee Brewers, the first relief pitcher to achieve that difficult double. Fingers, traded twice within one week the previous December, won six games, saved 28 and posted an earned run average of 1.04. He now has 100 career victories and 272 career saves.

The other top individual achievements included pitchers Tom Seaver of Cincinnati and Steve Carlton of Philadelphia passing the 3,000-strikeout plateau for their careers. Carlton finished the season with 3,148, fourth on the all-time list behind Walter Johnson's 3,508, Gaylord Perry's 3,336 and Nolan Ryan's 3,249. Then comes Bob Gibson, 3,117, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame last August, and Seaver, 3,075.

In the wake of the strike, baseball adopted a controversial split-season concept. Teams leading their divisions when the strike hit automatically qualified for the playoffs. They were Philadelphia and Los Angeles in the NL and New York and Oakland in the AL. They were joined by second-half leaders — Montreal and Houston in the NL and Milwaukee and Kansas City in the AL — for a new tier of division playoffs, leading to the League Championship Series. Cincinnati posted baseball's best overall record, but, because of the split season, found itself locked out of postseason play.

LA came from behind in both the division and league playoffs, eliminating first Houston and then Montreal to advance to the World Series. There the Dodgers again fell behind, losing the first two games to New York. But they recovered with four consecutive victories, clinching the championship three days before Halloween in baseball's longest — and at the same time — shortest season.

Year of the Bear for Bama's Bryant

Tigers, Bulldogs threaten to steal his thunder

By The Associated Press

It was the Year of the Bear in college football, but some Tigers and Bulldogs threatened to steal his thunder as 1981 drew to a close.

Alabama's 68-year-old Paul William "Bear" Bryant became the winningest coach in college history in the Crimson Tide's final regular-season game, a 28-17 triumph over Auburn. It was his 315th victory. He tied Amos Alonzo Stagg's mark of 314 when Alabama trounced Penn State 31-16 two weeks earlier.

And, as usual, Bryant had his team in the thick of the national championship picture. Alabama finished third in The Associated Press' final regular-season poll with a 9-1-1 record. Clemson, bidding for its first national crown ever, was first at 11-0, followed by defending national champion Georgia at 10-1.

The 1981 season was the wildest in memory. Clemson was the seventh team to be ranked No. 1; never before had more than five teams been at the top in a single year.

As many as three bowl games held the possibility of deciding the national championship.

The Orange Bowl matched Clemson, the only unbeaten club among the NCAA's 137 Division 1-A teams, against fourth-ranked Nebraska. And typical of the season, Nebraska's 9-2 Big Eight kings were early 4-point favorites.

The No.2 Georgia Bulldogs, who suffered their only setback against Clemson by a 13-3 score back in September, met Pitt in the Sugar Bowl, while Alabama faced sixth-ranked Texas in the Cotton Bowl. Georgia and Alabama tied for the Southeastern Conference title, but the Sugar Bowl opted for Georgia.

SOUTHERN MEHTODIST, the No. 5 team and the Southwest Conference champion, was ineligible for a bowl game because it was on NCAA probation.

Bryant was joined in the record books by Southern California tailback Marcus Allen and Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon. Allen set a single-season rushing record of 2,342 yards — the sport's first single-season 2,000-yard collegiate ground-gainer — en route to the Heisman Trophy. McMahon passed his way to the top of the major college passing and total offense lists.

Michigan began the season as the No. 1-ranked team, but the Wolverines were beaten in their opening game by Wisconsin 21-14. Notre Dame jumped to the top, but that only lasted one week before the Irish were beaten by Michigan 24-7.

Then, in turn, came, Southern Cal, Texas, Penn State, Pitt and Clemson. The Tigers actually vaulted to the No. 1 position a week after winding up their regular season when Pitt's previously spotless record was ruined by Penn State, 48-14.

ROUNDING OUT the Top Ten at the close of the regular season were Penn State, Southern Cal, Miami (Fla.) and Pitt. The Second Ten consisted of North Carolina, Washington, Iowa, Brigham Young, Ohio State, Michigan, Arizona State, Southern Mississippi, UCLA and Washington State.

The bowl picture began on the second weekend of December with Texas A&M downing Oklahoma State 33-16 in the Independence Bowl and Tennessee outlasting Wisconsin 28-21 in the Garden State Bowl.

Brigham Young spoiled Washington State's first post-season trip in 51 years, 38-36 in the Holiday Bowl, Toledo trimmed San Jose State 27-25 in the fledgling California Bowl and Missouri edged Southern Mississippi 19-17 in the Tangerine Bowl.

The rest of the bowls featured Oklahoma and Houston in the Sun Bowl, North Carolina and Arkansas in the Gator Bowl, Ohio State and Navy in the Liberty Bowl, Mississippi State and Kansas in the Hall of Fame Bowl, Florida and West Virginia in the Peach Bowl, Michigan and UCLA in the Bluebonnet Bowl, Penn State and Southern Cal in the Fiesta Bowl and Washington and Iowa in the Rose Bowl.

Besides Georgia and Alabama in the SEC, Nebraska in the Big Eight and SMU in the SWC, other conference champions included Clemson in the Atlantic Coast, Iowa and Ohio State in the Big Ten, Washington in the Pacific 10, BYU in the Western Athletic, San Jose State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Toledo in the Mid-American Conference, Furman in the Southern, Texas-Arlington in the Southland and Yale and Dartmouth in the Ivy League.

On the debit side, Northwestern set a major college record of 31 consecutive losses — and counting — with its second straight 0-11 season. Eastern Michigan also went 0-11 and Colorado State had the dubious distinction of becoming the first 0-12 team in history.

It was a year of change in the world of sports

By The Associated Press

It echoed through all of sports in 1981, from the silence of empty ballparks in midsummer to the ringing of a cow bell beneath a Bahamian moon.

It was change.

The Oakland Raiders turned the National Football League upside down, becoming the the first wild-card entry to win the Super Bowl.

Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky, in just his second full year in the big leagues, became the National Hockey League's most prolific scorer.

The world's richest auto race, the Indianapolis 500, wound up with two winners, and for the first time its champion was decided not on the track, but in a hearing room.

Major league baseball players staged the sport's first midseason strike, shutting down the summer game for almost two months and possibly forever altering the public's perception of the sport.

Britons Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett made a shambles of the record in the mile, track's most hallowed mark, and the sport came face-to-face with the question of payments for amateur athletes.

Alabama's Paul "Bear" Bryant, the craggy-faced man in a checkered hat, surpassed the legendary Amos Alonzo Stagg as the winningest coach in college football history. As the year ended, Bryant also had a shot at another national champion in a season that saw a record seven teams climb to No.1 only to fall down.

MUHAMMAD ALI ended his career on his feet, losing a decision in a fight at Nassau, Bahamas, in which a cow bell was used to start and end rounds. The boxer whose influence had extended far beyond the ring, who had defeated the federal government as well foes from Frazier to Foreman, could not beat a journeyman heavyweight — or Father Time.

Brash New Yorker John McEnroe supplanted Bjorn Borg, the quiet Swede, as the world's top tennis player and helped the United States reclaim the Davis Cup.

Not all was new in '81, though.

The New York Islanders won the NHL's Stanley Cup for the second straight year. The Boston Celtics won their 14th National Basketball Association title behind Larry Bird, while Indiana took the NCAA basketball title for the second time in five years. The Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the New York Yankees in the World Series, the 11th time the two teams have met for baseball's championship. And Northwestern University completed another winless football season, stretching its losing streak to a major-college record 31 games.

The Oakland Raiders started the year by winning Super Bowl XV, beating the Philadelphia Eagles 27-10 behind quarterback Jim Plunkett, who had been cast off by two other teams. By midway through the 1981 season, however, the Raiders were out of the playoffs, and Plunkett was back on the bench.

Raiders owner Al Davis couldn't make the change he wanted most in 1981. Davis accused the NFL of violating federal antitrust laws in barring him from moving his team to Los Angeles. The resulting trial ran more than three months but ended in a hung jury, leaving the Raiders in Oakland.

On March 29, Gretzky became the highest single-season scorer in NHL history, his three assists in a 5-2 victory over Pittsburgh giving him 155 points, three more than the standard set by Boston's Phil Esposito 10 years earlier. Gretzky added 30 more points before the season ended, finishing with 185.

Bobby Unser crossed the finish line first, eight seconds ahead of Mario Andretti, in the Indy 500. But the official results the next day made Andretti the winner, dropping Unser to second for illegal passing. Unser appealed to the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club and was reinstated to his third Indy victory more than four months later. Unser was fined $40,000 because, the panel said, he had clearly broken the rules, but the championship was probably worth $1 million to him and his sponsors.

MILLIONS OF dollars and a third of the season were lost in baseball.

The Major League Players Association went on strike June 12 over free-agent compensation. Club owners wanted professional players in return for losing a roster player through free agency; the union said that would severely restrict the freedom of movement the players had won in earlier negotiations.

The contract settlement established professional compensation for teams losing free agents ranking in the top 20 percent statistically at their positions. Only five of 1981's 41 free agents carried that tag, but clubowners appeared to have entered a new era with none of the wild bidding that accompanied previous drafts.

In all, 714 games were canceled before play resumed Aug. 10 under a split-season format with first-and second-half champions, which was designed to heighten fan interest. This produced more controversy — a team could help itself make the playoffs by losing. The format was altered slightly, but fans stayed away from the ballparks in droves after attending pre-strike games in record numbers.

Coe and Ovett laid seige to the world record in the mile. In a remarkable 10-day span in late August, the British runners lowered the mark three times by a total of almost 1½ seconds.

Coe started the assault in Zurich Aug.16, running a 3 minute, 48.53 second race to break the 3:48.80 record set by Ovett in 1980. Ovett reclaimed the mark Aug.23 in Koblenz, West Germany, with a 3:48.40. Just two days later, in Brussels, Coe took back the mark at 3:47.33.

An old star fell and a new one rose in boxing.

Muhammad Ali, the only heavyweight to win the title three times, failed in a comeback attempt a month shy of his 40th birthdav.

He lost a unanimous, 10-round decision to Canada's Trevor Berbick Dec.11 in Nassau. The bout was almost scuttled because of financial problems.

Sugar Ray Leonard, who inherited the Ali ability to command millions for fights, unified the world welterweight title with a 14th-round knockout of Thomas Hearns.

Tennis also saw a changing of the guard.

McEnroe, whose tennis exploits often were overshadowed by his temper, broke Borg's five-year reign at Wimbledon and won the U.S. Open for the third straight year.

Then, in Cincinnati in December, McEnroe capped his year by defeating Argentina's Jose Luis Clerc in five sets to give the United States its 26th Davis Cup.

Paterno's Lions won't be keying on Trojans' Allen

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — It's not quite a New Year's resolution, but Penn State football Coach Joe Paterno says his Nittany Lions may give up trying to key solely on University of Southern California tailback Marcus Allen in the Fiesta Bowl Jan. 1.

"He's a marvelous athlete and you don't stop a guy like that. You just try to get some control over him ... and even that's a hard thing to do," said Paterno. "We don't intend to gang up on Allen. It wouldn't help anyway.

"USC can hurt you in so many ways besides just with Allen," added Paterno. "I just hope he doesn't go out and get 300 yards against us, but you know he's going to get his yards."

Allen, a 6-foot-2 senior, had eight 200-yard games this season en route to an NCAA record 2,342-yard season, capped by his winning of the Heisman Trophy.

In all, Allen set 12 new NCAA marks — causing Trojan Coach John Robinson call him "the greatest football player I've ever seen."

"Marcus has made 200-yard games commonplace," Robinson said. "He's set a standard so high, it's shocking. If he has a 150-yard game, it's considered a bad day. Imagine that."

"I guess I have set a new standard," said Allen, who reeled off five straight 200-yard games at the start of the season. "It's not something you think about. It just happens. Once you get it, you forget it and go on to something else."

Allen scoffed at the remark by Paterno that Penn State wouldn't key on him.

"Every team keys on me. I've gotten used to that. It makes me play that much harder," he said. "But I'm expecting a tough game out of them. Traditionally they have one of the best defenses in the country. It'll be a good matchup."

Both the seventh-ranked Nittany Lions and No. 8 USC bring 9-2 records into the nationally televised bowl game at 70,000-seat Sun Devil Stadium on the campus of Arizona State University.

The two squads were scheduled to arrive here Saturday to start practice for the 11th annual affair, which already is a sellout.

"It looks like it's developing into one of the best New Year's Day games," Robinson said. "Penn State is a class football team and we consider them one of the nation's best. We plan to have our hands full with guys like (quarterback Todd) Blackledge and (tailback Curt) Warner."

Blackledge, a 6-4 sophomore, passed for 1,557 yards and 12 touchdowns this season while rushing for five more. Warner, a 5-11 junior, was bothered by hamstring pulls most of the year yet still rushed for 1,044 yards and eight TDs.

Paterno's teams have won two previous Fiesta Bowls — 42-30 over Arizona State in 1977 and 31-19 over Ohio State in 1980. But Paterno pointed to USC's record of six straight bowl victories, including four in a row under Robinson.

"They know how to perform in them, that's all," said Paterno. They don't seem to change much every year. Tney're always a big, physical team that keeps coming at you.

"They have a mobile offensive line and a defense that's very rangy, aggressive and recovers so well," Paterno added. "If you can't match up man-to-man, you've got problems ... and we might."

Cummings paces DePaul past Louisville, 75-68

CHICAGO (AP) — Terry Cummings scored a career-high 37 points and Skip Dillard added 15 points Saturday to lift 13th-ranked DePaul to a 75-68 victory over Louisville in a nationally televised college basketball game.

Cummings, who also collected 19 rebounds and hit 15 of 16 free throw attempts, led the Blue Demons to their seventh win against just one loss. The Cardinals, who had not beaten DePaul since 1964, lost their second game against six wins.

Cummings, a 6-foot-9 junior forward, eclipsed his previous scoring high of 31 points, achieved against Loyola of Chicago in 1979.

The Blue Demons, who committed 12 turnovers in the first half, regrouped after the intermission as Dillard, Cummings and reserve Tyrone Corbin turned the tide.

After Louisville's Lancaster Gordon tied the score 39-39 with 14:09 remaining, the Blue Demons outscored Louisville 10-2 over the next 4:40 as Bernard Randolph canned two baskets. With 4:06 remaining, DePaul held a 65-54 advantage.

Derek Smith led Louisville with 20 points.

Cummings kept the Blue Demons in the game in the first half with a 14-point barrage and 11 rebounds, but the Blue Demons hit only 11 of 31 field goal attempts.

After falling behind 10-8 midway through the first half, the Blue Demons scored five straight points as Cummings hit two free throws and a slam dunk.

But in a 3:03 span, the Cardinals outscored DePaul 14-2 as Gordon scored four baskets and made three key steals.

The Cardinals grabbed a 31-23 lead with three minutes remaining in the half before Cummings closed the gap to 33-29 at intermission.

Is this the year for Morton to retire?

DENVER (AP) — Every holiday season in recent years, the fate of veteran Denver Broncos quarterback Craig Morton has been pondered along with New Year's resolutions by the Broncos coaching staff.

Since 1977, with Red Miller at the helm, Morton has heard rumors of his impending retirement and gone through the following training camp with new, young quarterbacks being touted as the Denver starter.

Then, a couple of games into the season, Morton would take over the team and guide it through the National Football League campaign.

IN THE just-ended season, the nearly 39-year-old Morton led the American Football Conference in passing most of the season and wound up No. 2 behind Cincinnati's Ken Anderson.

But in the season finale, Morton threw two interceptions that Chicago ran back for crucial touchdowns as the Bears erased the Broncos' playoff hopes.

Morton has indicated he wants to continue his NFL career with the Broncos and now, Broncos Coach Dan Reeves — Morton's roommate when they both played for Dallas — is pondering the fate of the NFL's oldest player.

"It is not something I'm going to do hastily. I want to sit down and talk to Craig for some time to try and get all sides of it, before we decide anything," Reeves said in a recent interview.

"He did have an exceptional year, a great year, but when a player gets up there (in years) it gets tougher to evaluate his future.

"The most difficult thing with any player is to know when to retire. People don't remember Johnny Unitas for his great years; they remember him when he was hanging on. That wasn't Johnny Unitas.

"THERE ARE lots of things to consider. How well will he perform next year? Do we move forward with him as a team? There are just lots of things to consider, so it's not something I'm going to do hastily."

"There are lots of possibilities," Reeves said, including the chance Morton could follow in Reeves' footsteps as a player-coach.

"We have to look at it from the standpoint that Craig could be very helpful to the two guys (backup quarterbacks Steve DeBerg and Mark Herrmann). He's already been very helpful to them this yer. They've learned a lot from him."

Nine of 10 running backs named to Senior Bowl

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Nine of 10 running back slots have been filled for the 33rd annual Senior Bowl and a 10th back has been invited to join after his team wraps up a post-season game, officials announced Saturday.

George Peoples of Auburn, Sammy Winder of Southern Mississippi, Dennis Gentry of Baylor, Barry Redden of Richmond, and Floyd Allen of VMI are in the lineup for the South team at the Jan. 16 football game.

Bob Meyer of Missouri, Reggie Brown of Oregon, Del Rodgers of Utah and Joe Morris of Syracuse will play for the North team. Phil Bates of Nebraska has been invited to join the North after his team plays in the Orange Bowl, officials said.

With Morris as the leader with 4,299 yards and Allen second at 3,569, the 10 running backs have put a combined 13½ miles of rushing yardage on the books during their careers.

Four in the group surpassed the 1,000-yard mark in 1981 — Redden, the nation's third-leading runner, with 1,629; Morris, 1,194; Rodgers, 1,127, and Winder, 1,029.

Pittburgh Steelers Coach Chuck Noll will prepare the South team for the battle of outstanding seniors, and Kansas City Chiefs Coach Marv Levy will coach the North.

Quarterbacks for the South team are John Fourcade of Mississippi and Mike Kelley of Georgia Tech. Jim McMahon of Brigham Young, who set 56 NCAA records during his career, will be a North quarterback. The other will be announced early this week, according to bowl officials.

Griese could be ready to make move to booth

MIAMI (AP) — Former Miami Dolphins quarterback Bob Griese's $325,000-a-year contract is coming to an end, and the one-time All-Pro may be preparing a quarterback sneak into the television booth.

Griese, unable to play since injuring his shoulder during the 1980 season, ran out the final year of his contract by serving as the Dolphins' quarterback coach. But he says he's not likely to return next season.

"I've said in the past that I enjoyed playing the game," Griese explained. "But these coaches just work too long. Their hours are the really bad part of the job."

Instead, Griese said, next year he may move from the coaching booth in the press box to the television booth.

"It would be natural for me to move right into a situation like this because I know the system, I know the language. But it's not what I want to do. I don't want to spend that much time away from my family."

However, he may try it anyway.

"I talked to both NBC and CBS and both said they were interested in doing something this year," Griese said. "I said I wouldn't be able to because I'd be working with the Dolphins. But it is a possibility for me next year."

Griese, 36, said he has to arrive at the Dolphins training camp much earlier and leave much later than the players. The time is needed to study defenses on film and develop possible plays.

During a game, he stays in touch with the sidelines while charting what the other team is doing. As smoothly as he once picked holes in enemy defenses, he carries an attache case across the field he played on for 14 years and takes the elevator to the press box, where he advises current Dolphin starter David Woodley.

"I do basically the same things I did last year as I was preparing to play in a game," he said. "I watch, I analyze, try to find out what works and why, analyze (defensive) tendencies and see if we call the right plays at the most opportune times."

He looks the same — calm, bespectacled, boyish, detached and in control. But Griese hasn't been able to play since Baltimore defensive end Mike Ozdowski slammed him into the turf on Oct. 5, 1980, ruining his shoulder and ending his career.

"I can throw maybe 10 yards," said the man who threw for 24,302 yards during his career. "But I can't throw a ball hard and I can't throw it far. I'll play catch occasionally, but not for long because the shoulder gets sore.

Ross first American since 1976 to gain OBWJTC semifinals

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — John Ross of Gainesville, Fla., became the first American since John McEnroe won the junior title in 1976 to gain the semifinals of the Boys 18s division of the 35th Annual Orange Bowl World Junior Tennis Championships.

The 12th-seeded Ross gained the final four Saturday with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-1 win over Martin Jaite of Spain. On Sunday, Ross will face top-seeded Roberto Arguello of Argentina, who easily disposed of Italy's Francesco Cancellotti 6-3, 7-5.

Other semifinalists in the Boys 18s will be 13th-seeded Renato Joaquim of Brazil — a 6-2, 6-2 victor over sixth-seeded Luca Bottazzi of Italy — against unseeded Henrick Sundstrom of Sweden, who upset third-seeded Slobadan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia 7-6, 6-7, 6-1.

In the Girls 18s, three Americans advanced to the final four.

The biggest upset winner was seventh-seeded Penny Barg, of North Miami Beach, Fla., who surprised top-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-7, 6-3.

Barg will face third-seeded Beth Herr of Dayton, Ohio, who topped Anne Gabriel of Belgium 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Second-seeded Catharina Lindqvist of Sweden was also upset, losing to sixth-seeded Lisa Bonder of Saline, Mich. Bonder will face unseeded Hana Fukarkova of Czechoslovakia, who defeated Shelly Solomon of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Carlos Chabagoity of Brazil came from behind to defeat countryman Fernando Roese in the finals of the Boys 16s, winning 4-6, 7-6 (7-2), 7-5. Chabagoity was unseeded and survived one match point in the tie-breaker of the second set.

Twelve-seeded Raffaella Reggi of Italy upset second-seeded Beverly Bowes of Lubbock, Texas.

Arkansas needs Gator(aid) against tradition-rich Heels

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — No. 11 North Carolina and unranked Arkansas, whose holiday plans were upset in the second half of the college football season, carry rich bowl traditions into Monday night's Gator Bowl game.

It is North Carolina's ninth bowl game in the past 12 years — more than any Atlantic Coast Conference team — while Arkansas is making a school-record fifth consecutive bowl trip.

The game will be nationally televised (ABC).

The Razorbacks began the string with the Orange Bowl in 1977 and followed with trips to the Sugar, Fiesta and Hall of Fame bowls. Arkansas' only Gator Bowl appearance was a 14-7 triumph over Georgia Tech in 1959.

While the Razorbacks and the Tar Heels never have met on the football field, Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz is no stranger as far as North Carolina is concerned. He was the head coach at North Carolina State for four years before moving to Arkansas in 1977, and the Tar Heels beat his last William & Mary squad 36-35 in 1971.

"We had quite a rivalry with them when I was at North Carolina State," Holtz said. "We were 2-2 against them in four years."

Holtz said this North Carolina team reminds him of Southern Methdist, and that worries him. SMU beat the Razorbacks 32-18.

North Carolina tailback Kelvin Bryant "is every bit as good as Eric Dickerson and Craig James at SMU," Holtz said. "North Carolina's offense is very similar to SMU's except they throw the ball better. Their defense is very, very strong. We'll have to play a tremendous football game in order to have a chance to beat North Carolina."

The loss to SMU cost the Razorbacks a trip to the Cotton Bowl. North Carolina, plagued by injuries all season, also had its sights set on a New Year's Day bowl until losing to South Carolina 31-13 in its seventh game and 10-8 to Clemson two games later. The Tar Heels finished 9-2, Arkansas 8-3.

North Carolina's biggest injury was torn knee cartilage and a sprained ligament suffered by Bryant in the fourth game of the season. Before that, he set an NCAA record by scoring 11 touchdowns in two games — six against East Carolina and five against Miami of Ohio.

Although he missed four games, Bryant finished the regular season with 1,015 yards and 18 touchdowns. The only other players to score that many touchdowns were Marcus Allen of Southern California with 23, Herschel Walker of Georgia with 20, Dickerson of SMU with 19 and Buford Jordon of McNeese State with 18.

Humphrey activated by Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles have added 37-year-old pass rushing specialist Claude Humphrey to their 45-man active roster to beef up problem areas for Sunday's National Football Conference wild card playoff game against the New York Giants.

To make room for Humphrey, tight end Steve Folsom was placed on the injured reserve list. Humphrey, a 14-year veteran of the National Football League, was put on the injured reserve after he suffered cartilage damage to his left knee Nov. 22 during the Giants' 20-10 victory at Philadelphia.

The big defensive lineman practiced Wednesday after resting four weeks following arthroscopic surgery.

Rowe gets freedom to negotiate

HARTFORD (AP) — The Hartford Whalers have given veteran right wing Tom Rowe permission to negotiate with other National Hockey League teams, the Whalers announced Saturday.

Rowe has not been placed on waivers or released from his contract. While he negotiates with other teams, he will continue to collect his salary from the Whalers, the team said.

Rowe, 25, has scored 78 goals in 300 career NHL games. He joined Hartford in January 1980 in a trade with Washington.

In the 1978-79 season, Rowe score 31 goals with the Capitals — the most ever in one season by 1n American player. Rowe is from Lynn, Mass., the same hometown as Whalers' Coach Larry Pleau.

This season, Rowe has scored four goals in 21 games. He served a short stint with Hartford's American Hockey League team in Binghamton.

Kansas hungry for win in Hall of Fame Bowl

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The University of Kansas, which last won a postseason college football game against Rice in the 1961 Bluebonnet Bowl, arrives Sunday hungry for a victory in the New Year's Eve Hall of Fame Bowl against Mississippi State.

Mississippi State players, equally eager to win, also arrive Sunday to begin practice for the fifth annual bowl. State posted its last bowl victory in 1974 against North Carolina in the Sun Bowl.

"I think our team and Mississippi State are fairly similar," Kansas Coach Don Fambrough told reporters recently. "Both of us are strong on defense and have a strong kicking game."

State Coach Emory Bellard says Kansas represents quite a challenge to his players and called the Jayhawks "a fine-looking, talented team."

Fambrough admitted that the Jayhawks haven't met with success in recent bowl games, losing four of their last five appearances.

"I certainly hope we can do something about that this year," he said. "A lot of people are going to be sitting at home. We're making every effort to win the football game. But it's also a reward for the players. We want it to be fun."

Kickoff, to be marked by the release of 40,000 balloons at Birmingham's Legion Field, is scheduled for 1 p.m. CST.

The Bulldogs, representing the Southeastern Conference, ended the season with a 7-4 mark. Kansas tallied an 8-3 record and represents the Big Eight Conference. Both teams finished third in their respective leagues. It is the first match between the two schools.

Fambrough announced last week that sophomore quarterback Frank Seurer, who completed 89 of 176 passes for 1,199 yards this past season, will not play in Thursday's game. Seurer suffered a dislocated elbow on his throwing arm in the season finale against Missouri and will be replaced by senior Steve Smith.

Kansas will be facing a tough Mississippi State defense on Thursday. The Bulldogs limited 11 regular season opponents to a net of 88 yards rushing per game. In areas of total defense and scoring defense, State finished in the top 20 in the nation by holding foes to 261 yards per game in total offense and 12.4 points per game.

State also produced two of the top five rushers in the SEC this fall in halfback Michael Haddix with 622 yards on 110 carries and fullback Donald Ray King with 152 tries for 581 yards.

This year's Hall of Fame game will be televised over the Mizlou television network.

Bob Lochamy, executive director of the Hall of Fame Bowl, announced last week that the payoff this year will be over $400,000 per team. During the first four years, the average payoff was $207,000 per team.

Hawks use swarming defense to defeat Spurs, 105-97

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Hawks used a swarming defense and a 28-point outburst by John Drew Saturday night to defeat the San Antonio Spurs 105-97 in National Basketball Association game.

It was only the third loss in Hemis-Fair Arena this season for the Spurs, who played with a makeshift lineup because of injuries and two new players.

Dan Roundfield added 17 points, most of them on backboard-rattling stuffs, while Rudy Macklin contributed 18 and Steve Hawes had 15 for the Hawks.

The Hawks, who controlled the tempo and outscored the Spurs in every quarter, had to fight off a furious Spur rally early in the last period.

The win raised Atlanta's record to 11-15, ands the loss was the fourth in five games for the Spurs, 17-9.

Drew scored 11 early points as the Hawks jumped to a 31-25 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Drew hit five points in the second period and Atlanta went ahead by as many as eight points twice and then held on for a 51-49 lead at halftime.

San Antonio tied the score twice early in the third quarter, but Drew canned another seven points and the Hawks spurted ahead by as many as nine en route to a 75-69 third period margin.

Mark Olberding scored nine points in the final period and San Antonio managed one-point leads three times, the last with 6:36 left.

Wes Matthews put the Hawks ahead to stay with two free throws and Roundfield had seven last-period points to help shut down the San Antonio rally.

George Gervin led San Antonio with 25 points, Mike Mitchell had 22 and Olberding wound up with 15.

San Antonio played with only nine men, with Mitchell and Roger Phegley, both obtained from Cleveland this week, seeing their first action in Spurs uniforms.

Starting center George Johnson was out with pneumonia and forward Paul Griffin had a sprained knee.

The Spurs announced during the game they would sign seven-foot center Steve Hayes to a 10-day contract to fill in for Johnson. Hayes, a 1979 Idaho State graduate, has been playing in the Continental League and will arrive Sunday, a Spurs spokesman said.

Rockets 115, Jazz 104

Moses Malone scored 42 points to lead the Houston Rockets to a 115-104 victory over the Utah Jazz in National Basketball Association action here Saturday night.

Calvin Garrett with 18 points, and Robert Reid with 14 backed Malone in the scoring column as the Rockets recovered from a 30-19 deficit after the first quarter.

Adrian Dantley sparked Utah in that first period with 14 points and wound up with 36 for the night. Darrell Griffith finished with 24 points for the Jazz.

Malone scored 13 of his total in the second quarter as the Rockets roared back and outscored Utah 40-25 and took a 59-55 lead to the dressing room.

Utah drew to within eight in the final quarter, but that's as close as they could manage and the Rockets won it going away.

Houston improved its Midwest Division record to 12-16, while the Jazz fell to 10-17 in the same division.

Nuggets 124, Mavericks 117

Alex English scored 31 points and reserve guard Billy McKinney tossed in 26 to lead the Denver Nuggets to a 124-117 National Basketball Association victory over the Dallas Mavericks Saturday night.

Maverick rookie Jay Vincent led all scorers with 33 points and helped pace Dallas to a 62-60 lead at the half.

But English, who scored 20 points in the second half, and McKinney rallied Denver in the third quarter and the Nuggets went on to lead by as much as six point.

A basket by Vincent put Dallas ahead 103-101 with 7:04 remaining.

However, English hit a basket moments to give Denver a 105-103 advantage and the Nuggets never trailed again.

The win was the fourth in five games for Denver, 13-14, which played without David Thompson who was suspended four days and two game for being late to a Christmas Day practice in Denver.

Dan Issel scored 25 points for Denver and Kiki Vandeweghe added 17.

Brad Davis scored 21 points for the Mavericks

Knicks 112, Pacers 106

Campy Russell scored 29 points and Bill Cartwright added 24 as the New York Knicks defeated the Indiana Pacers 112-106 Saturday, snapping a four-game losing streak in the National Basketball Association.

Free throws were the difference as New York hit 22 of 25 attempts while Indiana made only 12 of 21.

Russell had six of his points in a 10-point streak that gave the Knicks the lead for good, 20-14, after Indiana went more than two minutes without scoring.

Sly Williams scored 23 points and Michael Richardson added 17 for New York, which opened its biggest lead, 85-73, with 2:35 left in the third period.

Johnny Davis, who led Indiana with 24 points, hit a layup with 6:38 left in the game to pull Indiana back within two, 96-94, but Cartwright answered with a layup and two free throws and Indiana never drew closer than four points again.

New York had a 41-34 advantage off the boards with Richardson grabbing a game-high 12. Rookie Herb Williams, who along with Louis Orr scored 20 for Indiana, had 11 rebounds.

Bucks 109, Cavaliers 102

Bob Lanier scored 23 points, Marques Johnson added 19 and Alton Lister had 18 to pace the Milwaukee Bucks to a 109-102 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers in a National Basketball Association game Saturday night.

Milwaukee's triumph snapped a modest two-game losing streak, while Cleveland fell to its eighth loss in its last nine games and its 20th in the last 23 outings.

Bullets 105, Nets 90

Kevin Grevey had 21 points and Greg Ballard added 20 as the Washington Bullets easily shattered the New Jersey Nets' four-game winning streak Saturday with a 105-90 National Basketball Association victory.

Washington jumped out in front on a layup by John Lucas. The Nets tied it 6-6 on a jumper by Mike O'Koren. But for the rest of the game, the Nets played catchup.

The Nets trailed 60-42 at the half. Ray Williams and Otis Birdsong, who sparked consecutive victories over the New York Knicks last week, scored only 14 points between them.

Washington scrubbed the boards for 58 rebounds, 13 more than New Jersey. The Nets could hit only 38 of 99 tries from the floor and missed 13 free throws while the Bullets were strong from the field and the line.

Pistons 96, Bulls 94

John Long sank two free throws with 1:28 left in the game as the Detroit Pistons came from behind to score their fourth consecutive National Basketball Association victory, beating the Chicago Bulls 96-94 Saturday night.

The Pistons had rallied from an eight-point deficit, 78-70, in the third quarter.

Edgard Jones had 19 points to lead the Pistons in scoring, while Long added 18. The Bulls' Artis Gilmore had 20 points and 15 rebounds.

Celtics 124, Kings 119

Larry Bird scored seven points in overtime Saturday night to spark the Boston Celtics past the Kansas City Kings 124-119.

The Kings erased a 15-point deficit in the first half and led 111-107 with 40 seconds remaining in regulation. But a driving layup by Nate Archibald and Kevin McHale's 14-footer at the buzzer knotted it 111-111.

Boston led the entire game until Cliff Robinson's jumper made it 97-97 with 6:03 left in the third quarter. Kansas City led by six points, 100-94, with 4:22 to play.

Islanders defeat Flyers for sixth straight time, 4-2

Stefan Persson and Mike Bossy scored third-period power-play goals to give the New York Islanders their sixth straight National Hockey League victory, 4-2 over the Philadelphia Flyers.

The Stanley Cup champions extended their unbeaten streak at Nassau Coliseum to nine, the last eight of them victories. The Flyers, in the second contest of a five-game road trip, suffered their first defeat in their last five road appearances.

The win increased New York's lead in the Patrick Division to four points over the second-place Flyers. Philadelphia, however, has played one less game.

Persson broke a 2-2 tie at 45 seconds of the third period with a slapshot from seven feet after taking a pass across the slot from Bossy. Bossy then added the insurance goal at 9:58 with a 10-foot slapshot from the slot on an assist from Denis Potvin.

Rangers 4, Capitals 4

Ed Johnstone scored with 76 seconds remaining as the New York Rangers came from behind for the fourth time and tied the Washington Capitals 4-4 in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

Dave Maloney scored for New York to forge a 3-3 tie at 9:36 of the final period, but the Caps went ahead for the last time on a goal by Bob Gould at the 11:50 mark.

Washington, which had lost five of its last six games, took a 2-1 lead in the first period on power-play goals by Dennis Maruk and Darren Veitch, giving the Caps 15 extra-man goals in their last six home games.

Black Hawks 3, Jets 2

Al Secord knocked in the game-winner at 16:11 of the second period as the Chicago Black Hawks rushed to a three-goal lead and held off the Winnipeg Jets 3-2 in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

Secord took a pass from defenseman Doug Crossman, raced in all alone from center ice, deked Jets goaltender Ed Staniowski and gave Chicago a commanding 3-0 lead.

The Black Hawks opened the scoring in the first period with a goal by Tim Higgins. Doug Wilson increased the Chicago lead with the first goal of the second period. The Jets came back with third-period goals by Doug Smail and Normand Dupont.

Goalie Murray Bannerman of the Black Hawks played a strong game, facing 33 drives, while Staniowski of the Jets was tested 24 times in the fast-skating game.

The injury-riddled Black Hawks, whose victory ended a two-game losing streak, played without regulars Bob Murray, Keith Brown, Terry Ruskowski, Glen Sharpley and Darryl Sutter.

North Stars 6, Blues 3

Steve Payne scored three goals and set up a fourth to lead the Minnesota North Stars to a 6-3 National Hockey League victory over the St. Louis Blues Saturday night.

Brad Palmer scored the only goal of a wide-open first period when he ripped a 20-foot shot past St. Louis goalie Mike Liut while the North Stars were on a power play.

Payne gave Minnesota a 2-0 lead at 4:29 of the second period, but Brian Sutter got the Blues on the board 16 seconds later on a pass from Bernie Federko. Federko, the Blues' top point-getter, then tied the game when he scored from a bad angle at 9:48.

Anders Hakansson put the North Stars ahead for good when he scored his fourth shorthanded goal of the year on a breakaway at 14:15.

Payne scored the game-winner at 3:48 of the third period when he beat Liut from the slot. Perry Turnbull took a pass from Federko and got the Blues within a goal when he scored at 7:32. But Kent-Erik Andersson put the game out of reach on a feed from Payne at 14:19.

Payne then completed his hat trick when he picked up a loose puck and shoved it past Liut with 63 seconds remaining in the game.

Leafs 8, Wings 3

Right wing Rick Vaive recorded his fourth straight two-goal game and the Toronto Maple Leafs extended their undefeated streak to five games with an 8-3 victory over the Detroit Red Wings in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

The line of Vaive, Bill Derlago and John Anderson provided much of the action for Toronto. Derlago, who has 39 points in his last 25 games, helped set up four goals as the Red Wings' winless streak ran to five.

Anderson had a pair of goals and an assist and Rene Robert, Terry Martin and Darryl Sittler had single scores for the Leafs.

Sabres 7, Penguins 5

Alan Haworth's second goal of the game with 3:28 left gave the Buffalo Sabres a 7-5 National Hockey League victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins on Saturday night.

Haworth's goal, his sixth of the season, was the third straight tally for the Sabres in the final period. Craig Ramsay added an empty net goal with 12 seconds left to put the game out of reach.

Buffalo overcame an early 3-0 Pittsburgh lead, then rallied from a two-goal deficit.

With the score tied 3-3 at the start of the third period, Pittsburgh went ahead on power-play goals by Pat Boutette and Doug Shedden.

But the Sabres got a goal from Lindy Ruff at 10:56 and Mike Ramsey added his first of the year at 11:34.

All of Buffalo's goals came against goalie Nick Ricci, who was making his first start of the year after being recalled from the minors to replace the injured Michel Dion.

Bruins 9, Whalers 6

Don Marcotte scored three goals Saturday night to lead the Boston Bruins to a 9-6 victory over the Hartford Whalers in the National Hockey League.

Before the game, Marcotte, a 15-year NHL veteran, had scored only one goal this season.

The Bruins took an early lead as Marcotte and Keith Crowder scored goals 20 seconds apart in the first two minutes of the game.

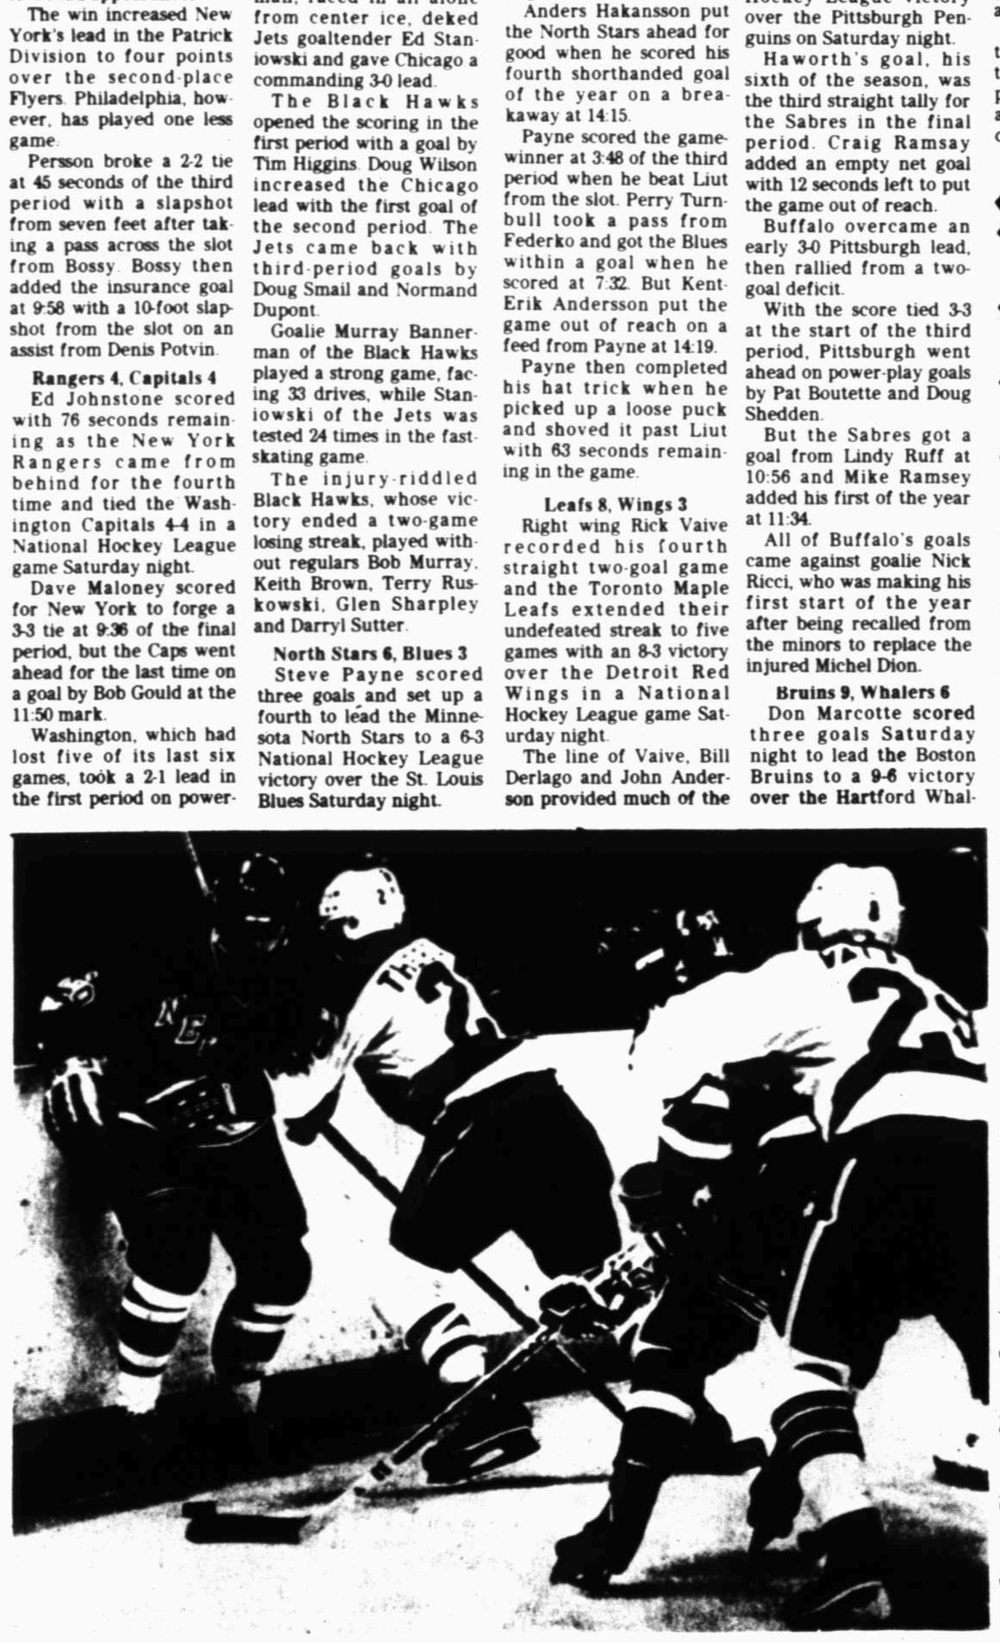

The Whalers retaliated, however, tying the game midway in the period on goals by Blaine Stoughton and Garry Howatt. Their goals came 24 seconds apart.

Boston then scored three unanswered goals, two of them on the power play by Barry Pederson and Peter McNab. Marcotte scored his second of the night and the Bruins left the ice with a 5-2 first period lead.

Hartford's Blake Wesley beat Boston goalie Rogatien Vachon on the power play with 1:36 gone in the second period but Marcotte scored his third goal at 12:26.

In the third period, the Whalers drew within one on goals by Ron Francis and Rick Meagher in the first two minutes. Francis' goal came while the Whalers had a two-man advantage, but the Bruins soon pulled further ahead.

Rick Middleton scored while the Whalers were two men short and Terry O'Reilly followed with his ninth goal of the season.

Wintertime bassin' means new tactics

Wintertime bassin' is here! That means new tactics for taking the sluggish largemouth bass. It also means fishing new waters where the cold-blooded creature lure.

For years now the jig 'n eel, as it is called, has provided tournament bass fishermen with plenty to rave about over the past few years. Talk at just about every tournament around the country this time of year centers around this favorite bass bait during the colder months.

What many anglers don't realize is that use of this method has been around for more than 60 years. And although many different manufacturers of jigs have flooded the market, only one entrepeneur of the other half of this jigbait, the pork rind, stands out — Uncle Josh.

His green and white jar can be seen in any sporting goods store and in just about every tackle box of professional anglers. Not to mention, the tackle box of man amateur bass chasers. Strangely enough, artifical lures hit the market almost on a nonstop basis and they usually leave in the same manner. Not so Uncle Josh's.

Uncle Josh puts out 34 different types of pork rinds in every shape and color. But they've all gone under rigid testing and have proven effective in the field. Ask Tommy Martin or Bill Dance, both of which have used the never fail bait countless times in bass tournaments.

The latest combo has been either a ¼ or ½-ounce Arkie jig and either a U-2, U-3 or U-4 Twin Tail, and usually in a black and brown combination. In fact at a recent B.A.S.S. tournament at Toledo Bend, where Tommy Martin was the winner, this bait was almost a household talk item before the tourney ended.

According to Uncle Josh people, the reason for their bait's success is its texture and multi uses. Since it is pork rind or skin, the fleshlike texture seem to be more appealing to a fish when taking it, as opposed to a piece of rubber or plastic.

As for uses, pork rind can be made to fit any type of fishing — from deep-water, largemouth or striper, pike, to panfish or walleye. It can be attached to jigs, spinners, spoons or any crank bait. But for bass fishing, the jig has the inside track.

Pork rind falls into three classes: the pork chunks, eels and lizards, and strips.

Pork chunks, mainly pork frogs, is one of the first patterns every cut by Uncle Josh and was originated over half a centry ago. It is thicker than most pork rinds and is a favorite for bass fishing, especially in winter months. The pork frog and silver minnow is one combo that dates back to almost the stone ages.

Eels and lizards provide a more realistic bait to fish because of their body-like construction. When pulled through the water, they wobble and float like the real thing.

The stripes are thin slices of rind which ripple through the water.

Two things to remember when fishing with pork rind: First, make certain the size of rind does not overpower that of a lure, and secondly, since pork rind can be cut down and shaped to an individual's own taste, new forms of erratically different action can be obtained to suit the fisherman's specific goals.

Besides being irresistable to bass, due to its fluid movement and fleshlike appearance, pork rind can also give off an odor to fish. Sort of like deer scent or scents used in trapping.

By soaking pork rind in cod liver oil, sardine juice or anise some fishermen believe it actually attracts trailing or finicky eating fish.

This winter give the jig 'n eel technique a real test. This method of bass fishng will normally always result in increased wintertime action and will also guarantee you larger fish. Those favorite places you fish in the spring, summer and all months and manage to catch fish will also produce in the colder months. However, you need to fish different and by all means try the jig 'n eel system.

Senators bet on Sugar Bowl

(AP) — U.S. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa. has made a friendly wager with Georgia Sen. Mack Mattingly on the Sugar Bowl football game at New Orleans New Year's Night. The game will match the University of Pittsburgh Panthers and the Georgia Bulldogs.

"After the Panthers maul Herschel Walker and the Bulldogs, my friend Mack will suffer the humiliation of sharing his Senate office with a stuffed version of the Panther mascot," said Heinz. "Alas, should Georgia pull a miraculous upset, I will have to share the space with a paper bulldog," he added.

In a press release, Heinz claimed a "near flawless track record in football bowl betting." He predicted a two-touchdown victory by Pittsburgh. "I don't know of anyone who's scared of a dog, but a whole lot of people are terrified of panthers," Heinz said...

— New York Yankees pitcher Tommy John gave a 9-year-old boy at New York's Mount Sinai Hospital a Christmas thrill he'll never forget, according to a story in today's New York Daily News. Jesse O'Reilly, who is suffering from cancer, was only hours from undergoing his second operation in two weeks when he received a telephone call from the Yankees lefty Wednesday afternoon. John wished the youngster a Merry Christmas and told him not to worry about the operation. The pitcher spoke about the worries he had last summer when his son, Travis, fell out of a window and had to be hospitalized.

"Travis came out okay," John reportedly told the boy, "and I'm sure you will, too."

Then the pitcher and the youngster talked sports for about 15 minutes...

Olympic competitors Brent Rushlaw and Jim Tyler, both of Saranac Lake, N.Y., set an American record Saturday in the opening event of the two-day National Two-Man Bobsled Championships. The event, held on the mile-long Olympic bobsled run, consists of two heats Saturday and two on Sunday. The two men's time in the first heat of 1:02.45 is the new American record. The duo ended the two heats in first place, posting a 1:02.50 in the second heat for a total 2:05.02. The official Olympic record of 1:01.97 was set here in 1980 by a Swiss sled driven by Eric Scharer...

Denver Nuggets Coach Doug Moe says he thinks suspending David Thompson might hurt the NBA team, but he had to do something.

"It is an accumulation of stuff," Moe said after he suspended Thompson without pay for two days when he was 20 minutes late for Christmas Day practice.

Moe said Thompson "missed a shoot-around at Houston (last week). But if it was one shoot-around and showing up a couple minutes late today, that would be one thing."

Halas to keep Bears' defensive staff intact

CHICAGO (AP) — George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, announced Saturday that he would retain the services of defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan and the defensive staff for the 1982 season.

The 86-year-old Halas made the announcement at a morning news conference, adding that he arrived at the decision without consulting general manager and vice president Jim Finks or head Coach Neill Armstrong.

The terms of the contract extensions signed by Ryan, defensive line coach Dale Haupt and backs coach Jim LaRue were not disclosed, although Halas said they would receive raises.

The future of both Finks and Armstrong has been the cause of considerable speculation in light of the Bears' disappointing 6-10 National Football League finish. But Halas had said in advance that he would refuse to discuss the fate of either man.

However, while admitting it was "unusual" to make such a move without consulting his general manager, Halas conceded he expected Finks to remain in his present capacity in the future.

As to Armstrong and the offensive coaching staff, Halas said a decision "will come later. Maybe in about 10 days."

Halas said his decision to retain Ryan was in large part prompted by a letter he receicved earlier this month from the Bears' defensive players. The letter, dated Dec. 9, stated the players recognized the team had a disappointing season, but wanted to express their concern over the fate of Ryan and his assistants.

"Buddy and his staff have done an excellent job improving the defensive team's performance," the letter said. "You need only look at our defensive statistics over the years to see the improvements that have been made.

"Buddy has maintained the discipline, moral, pride and effort we need in order to play well defensively, in spite of the fact that we haven't had much help from the offensive team. Our concern centers on the fact that if Buddy and his staff ware replaced, it will set our defensive team back a minimum of two years and possibly more by the time we learn a new systeam and adjust to new coaches."

Halas said he received the letter Dec. 14 and met with the players Dec. 18, two days before the end of the regular season. On Dec. 22, Halas sent a letter to each individual player of the defensive unit, thanking them for the letter.

Tanner scores win in Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — U.S. Davis Cup player Roscoe Tanner, seeded third, won his opening-round match in the $400,000 Marlboro Australian Open Tennis tournament at Kooyong Saturday, defeating Greg Whitecross of Australia 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

In other first-round action, 14th-seeded Kevin Curren of South Africa beat American Steve Krulevitz 6-2, 6-2, 6-1; New Zealander Chris Lewis downed Ilie Nastase of Romania 6-4, 6-3, 6-2; veteran Australian Davis Cupper Phil Dent overcame Australian John Fitzgerald 5-7, 3-6, 7-6, 6-3, 6-4; and Mark Edmondson of Australia ousted countryman Pat Cash 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Krulevitz was fined $350 fine for breaking his racket during his match with Curren. The umpire reported Krulevitz threw his racket to the ground, put his foot on it and pulled up the handle, breaking it in half. The incident occurred with the American trailing 0-3 in the third set.

Nastase caused a delay of several minutes in his match with Lewis when he demanded several courtside microphones be moved. Television technicians removed two of the microphones under protest and tournament referee Jim Entink removed another two after Nastase complained they were picking up everything that was being said.

Dent fell behind two sets to love and 0-4 in a third-set tiebreaker, but rallied to eliminate the 20-year-old Fitzgerald, who was just three points away from a straight sets victory. Dent, 31, had lost to American Tim Wilkison in the quarterfinals of a tournament in Sydney last week.

Edmondson, who won the tourney here in 1976, had little difficulty with Cash, the world's top-ranked junior. If Edmondson collects the $64,000 first prize, he also would pick up 350 Grand Prix points, giving him a berth in the eight-man Volvo Masters' Tournament to be played in New York next month.

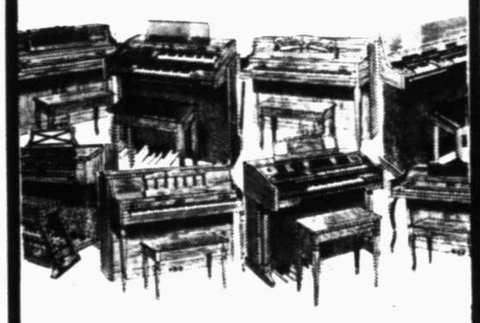

World Cup action in Singapore

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Singapore will be the site of the Jan. 10 World Cup qualifying game between China and New Zealand, the International Football Federation announced Saturday.

FIFA said Singapore was picked after Malaysia decided against hosting the game in Kuala Lumpur. Melbourne, another alternative site proposed by FIFA, had been rejected by China as "too far ... and therefore not appropriate."

Brazil's Romoaldo Arppi Filho is to referee the game that will decide which team joins already-qualified Kuwait as the second representative of the Asian-Oceanian group at the 1982 World Cup final in Madrid.

DELICIOUS, DECORATED CAKES FOR PARTIES AND POTLUCK

When the occasion is special — when there's an audience for your handiwork — what better time for you to gild the lily and present a cake as beautiful to see as it is delicious to eat. That's exactly what these recipes from the Diamond Walnut Kitchen offer you — cakes to do you proud with their delight of flavor, their perfection of texture and their fancy dress.

The decorating is such fun to do, so creatively rewarding and really quite easy when you follow the recipe instructions and the diagrams.

Since walnuts are the featured adornment as well as a major ingredient for these cakes, it's important to use the finest. The new crop of California walnuts is now available. You'll find these superb walnuts already-shelled or, if you prefer, look for in-the-shell California walnuts to crack yourself.

For sheer glamor, the Walnut Chiffon Crunch Cake is a real showstopper and a heavenly treat with its whipped cream frosting laden with crushed walnut brittle. For chocolate fans, there's a luscious Devil's Food and Rocky Road cake. And the delicate flavor and fine, velvety texture of the Orange Pound Cake is sheer delight.

On and on the recipes go. And in this array of luscious beauties, there's many a way for you to take the cake at your next party or potluck.

Walnut Devil's Food Cake

3 tablespoons butter for pans
3/4 cup finely chopped California walnuts
1 tablespoon granulated sugar for pans
2 cups sifted cake flour
1-3/4 cups granulated sugar
3/4 cup unsweetened powdered cocoa
1-1/4 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
3/4 cup shortening (half butter or margarine)
1-1/4 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 large eggs
Chocolate Buttercream Frosting
3/4 cup coarsely chopped California walnuts
Walnut halves for decoration

Heavily butter two 9-inch layer cake pans, using 1-1/2 tablespoons for each. Sprinkle bottoms with the finely chopped walnuts, then sprinkle lightly with sugar, using 1/2 tablespoon for each pan. Resift flour with sugar, cocoa, soda, salt and baking powder into a large mixing bowl. Add shortening, 3/4 cup of the milk and vanilla. Beat 2 minutes on medium speed of electric mixer (or 300 strokes by hand). Add eggs and remaining half cup milk; beat 2 minutes longer. Spoon into prepared walnut-coated pans. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes or until layers test done. Remove from oven and cool 10 minutes in pans, then turn out, walnut-side up, on wire racks to cool. When cold, place one layer, walnut side up, on serving plate and frost top with Chocolate Buttercream. Set second layer on top, walnut side down. Cover top and sides with remaining frosting.

Chocolate Buttercream Frosting: In small saucepan, combine 1/2 cup half and half (light cream) and 1/3 cup unsweetened powdered cocoa. Heat together, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened. Turn into mixing bowl and cool slightly. Add 1/3 cup soft butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla and 4-1/4 cups sifted powdered sugar. Beat together until smooth and of good spreading consistency. Makes about 2-1/8 cups frosting.

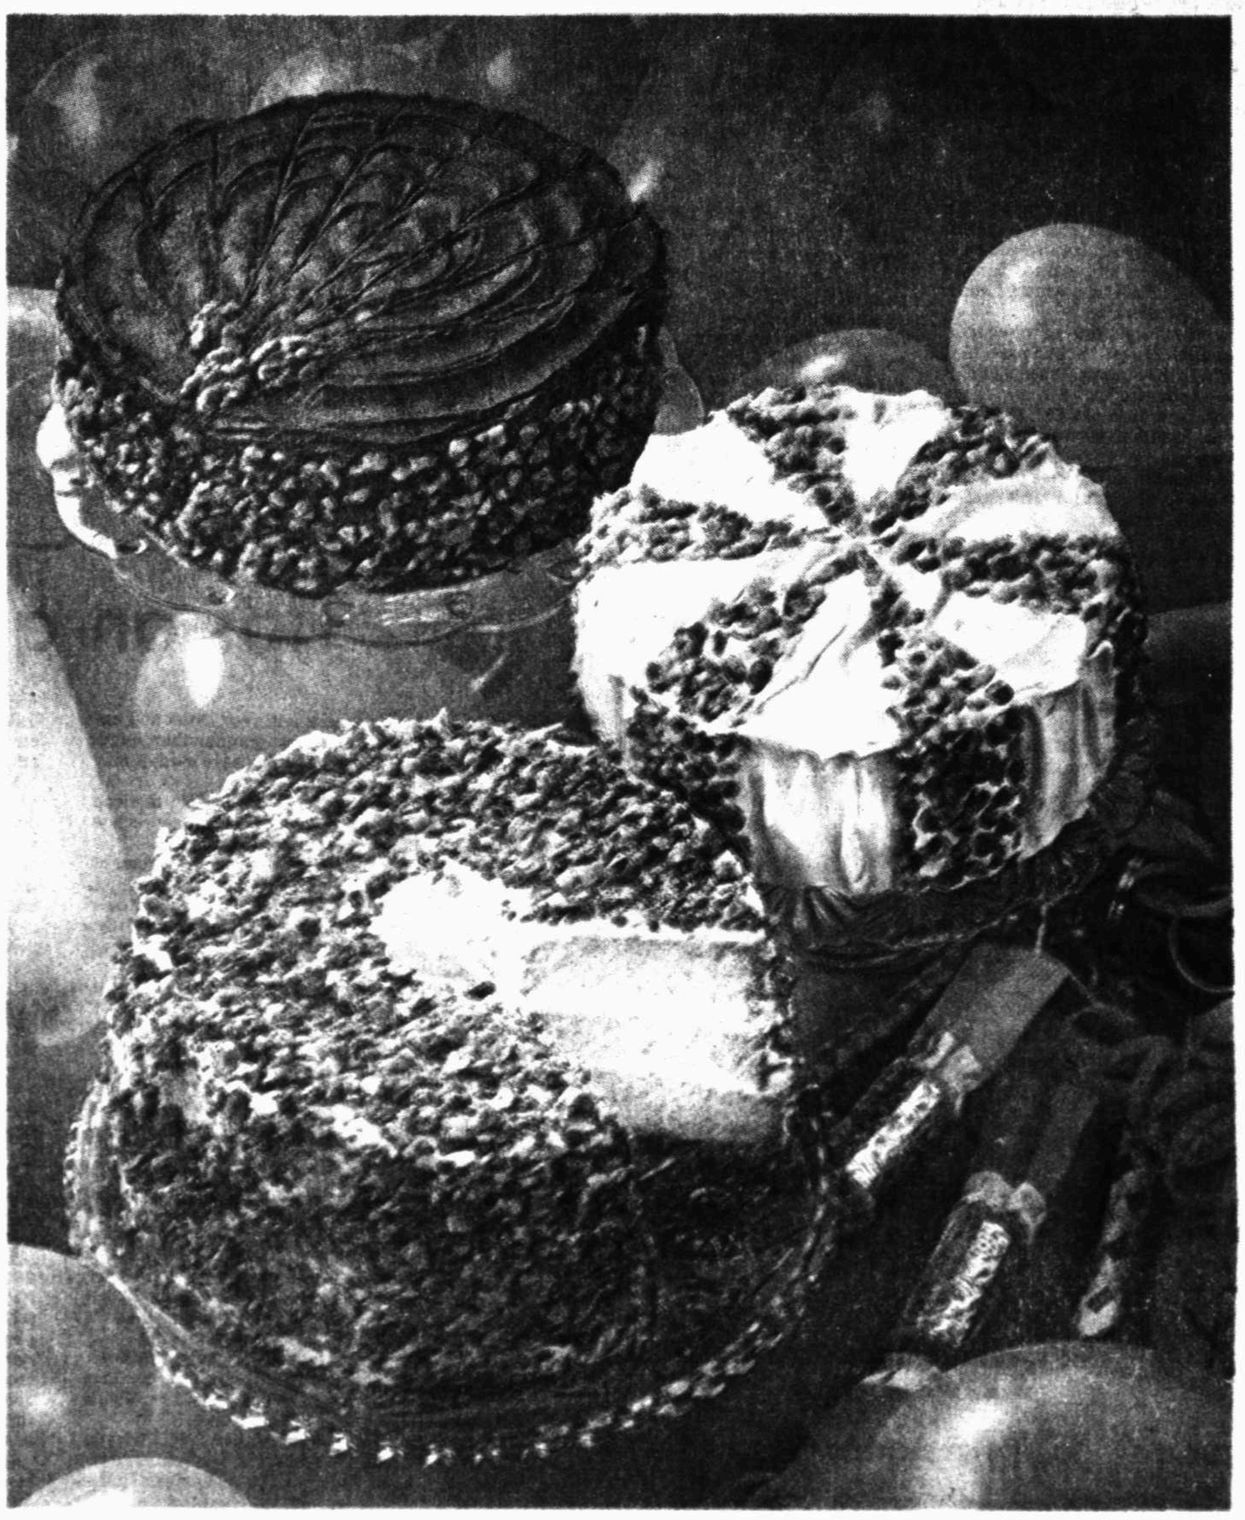

To Decorate: (Also see diagram.) Using a spatula with rounded end, make concentric swirls on top. Pat the coarsely chopped walnuts around sides of cake. Draw a large knife lightly across center of cake top. Set tip of knife or spatula about 1-1/2 inches to one side of the center line opposite you and draw a slanted mark toward the end of the center line nearest you. Continue, marking frosting in this fashion, so all ends converge at point nearest you. This makes a shell shaped pattern on top. Arrange several walnut halves at the point where marks meet. Let stand until frosting is set before cutting. Makes 10 to 12 servings, depending on size of wedges desired.

Seafoam Spice Cake

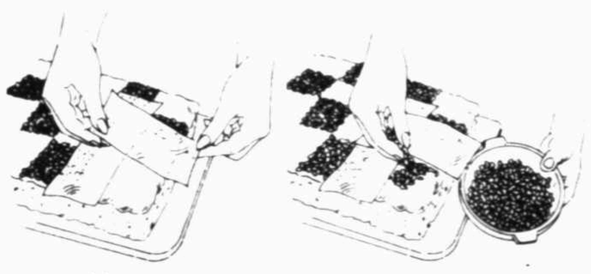

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
3/4 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon cloves
1/2 cup shortening
1-1/4 cups brown sugar, packed
2 large eggs
1 cup buttermilk
1-1/4 cups chopped California walnuts
Seafoam Icing

Resift flour with baking powder, salt, soda and spices. Cream shortening with brown sugar well. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Blend in flour mixture alternately with buttermilk, beginning and ending with flour mixture. Stir in 1/2 cup of the walnuts. Divide batter between 2 greased and floured 8-inch layer cake pans. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 25 to 30 minutes, just until cakes test done. Remove pans from oven and let stand 10 minutes, then turn out onto wire rack to cool. When cold, spread Seafoam Icing between layers and on top and sides of cake. Let stand a few minutes until frosting begins to set. Mark lightly into wedges; extend lines down sides of cake. Decorate top and sides of alternate wedges with remaining 3/4 cup chopped walnuts. (See diagram.) Makes one 8-inch cake.

Seafoam Icing: Combine 1/2 cup brown sugar, packed, 1/4 cup granulated sugar, 1/3 cup light corn syrup and 1/4 cup water in a 1-quart saucepan. Heat to boiling, stirring until sugar dissolves. Place candy thermometer in boiling syrup and cook to 242 degrees F. (syrup will spin a 6 to 8-inch thread when dropped from tip of spoon). Beat 3 egg whites stiff. Slowly pour in boiling syrup, beating constantly, until mixture holds its shape and begins to lose its gloss. Stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla. Makes 3 to 3-1/2 cups.

Cherry Walnut Checkerboard Cake

Cut 2-inch wide strips of wax paper to protect plain squares. Frosting sets quickly so wax paper will not stick.

Sprinkle walnuts evenly over alternate squares to form checkerboard pattern on top of cake.

Walnut Devil's Food Cake

Use rounded spatula to make concentric swirls of Chocolate frosting on top of cake.

Draw light line across center; then slanted lines, starting 1-1/2 inches apart and converging at center point nearest you.

Pat walnuts into sides of cake. Decorate point of "shell" with walnut halves or large pieces.

Seafoam Spice Cake

Lightly mark into desired number of wedges. Extend lines down side of the frosted cake.

Sprinkle walnuts onto tops of alternate wedges; pat the walnuts into matching sides of the cake.

Cherry Walnut Checkerboard Cake

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2-1/2 teaspoons baking powder
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup shortening
1-1/4 cups granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
*1/2 cup syrup from maraschino cherries
1/2 cup milk
3 large egg whites
1-1/4 cups chopped California walnuts
1/2 cup chopped maraschino cherries
Cherry Frosting

(Drain syrup from maraschino cherries, reserving 2-1/2 tablespoons for frosting and 1/2 cup for cake. A 16-ounce jar of cherries will have sufficient syrup for frosting and cake. If 8-ounce jar of maraschino cherries is used, add extra milk to make 1/2 cup syrup for cake.)

Resift flour with baking powder and salt. Cream shortening with 1 cup of the sugar and vanilla. Blend in flour mixture alternately with cherry syrup and milk, beginning and ending with flour mixture. Beat egg whites to soft peaks. Gradually beat in remaining 1/4 cup sugar to make a soft meringue; fold into cake batter. Fold in 3/4 cup of walnuts and chopped cherries. Turn into greased and floured baking pan (9 x 13 x 2 inches). Bake at 350 degrees F. for about 35 minutes, just until cake tests done. Cool on wire rack. When cold, turn out of pan and frost top of cake with Cherry Frosting. Makes twelve 2-inch square servings.

Cherry Frosting: Combine 4-1/2 cups sifted powdered sugar, 1/3 cup soft butter or margarine, 2-1/2 tablespoons syrup from cherries, 1-1/2 tablespoons milk and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Beat until smooth. Makes about 2-1/4 cups frosting.

To Decorate: Cut wax paper into 2-inch wide strips to place over undecorated squares. Sprinkle remaining 1/2 cup walnuts over alternate squares. Frosting sets sufficiently, almost as soon as it is spread, so that wax paper will not stick. (See diagram.)

Walnut Cupcakes

1-1/4 cups California walnuts
1-3/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 cup granulated sugar
2 large eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon rum extract
1/2 cup milk
Buttercream Frosting
Candied cherries
Colored candy sprinkles

Chop 1/3 cup of the walnuts very fine. Grease 15 cupcake pans (2-3/4 inches diameter, 1-1/4 inches deep). Sprinkle each with about 1 teaspoon fine walnuts. Chop a second 1/3 cup walnuts to medium-size pieces for cake batter. Resift flour with baking powder, salt and nutmeg. Cream butter with sugar until light. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Add vanilla and rum extract. Blend in flour mixture alternately with milk. Stir in the 1/3 cup medium walnuts. Spoon into prepared pans, filling about 2/3 full. Bake at 350 degrees F. for about 20 minutes, until cakes test done. Let stand 5 minutes, then turn out onto wire racks to cool. When cold, frost with Buttercream Frosting and decorate with remaining walnuts, candied cherries, colored candy sprinkles, chocolate shot and other trims. Makes 15 cupcakes.

Buttercream Frosting: Combine 1/3 cup soft butter, 3-3/4 cups sifted powdered sugar, 3 to 3-1/2 tablespoons light cream or milk, and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat until smooth and of good spreading consistency. Divide into several small bowls, and tint each lightly with desired food coloring. Makes 2 cups frosting.

Tips on quilt care

You may have a treasure in your closet and not know it. If your great-great-grandmother hand-stitched a quilt that generations have used, it may now be a precious antique.

An heirloom quilt is probably too old to sleep under anymore, but it isn't too old to appreciate some tender care and cautious cleaning.

The Relief Society, the women's organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has a 150-year tradition of quilting. From their experience in creating, displaying, collecting, cleaning and caring for quilts have come these suggestions.

If the quilt needs cleaning, first indentify the fabrics. Most antique quilts are cotton and wool. Randomly patched crazy quilts, popular in Victorian times, might be a combination of silk, velvet, wool or any combination of fabrics. Although this gives the quilt charm, it makes it difficult to clean and often too fragile to display. You may need to consult a textile expert to know how best to treat your quilt.

Never wash an old or valued quilt in a washing machine. To hand-wash a cotton quilt, make a flat bag of white nylon net that's eight inches wider and longer than your quilt. Leave one side open and insert the quilt. Baste the end closed with white thread and handstitch a large X from corner to corner through all three layers. This will keep the quilt flat and protect it from damage when it's heavy with water.

If your quilt is dusty, gently vacuum it through the nylon net bag just before washing. Remove loose surface dirt from both sides as carefully as possible.

A cotton quilt should be cleaned only after you test the dyed areas of fabric for colorfastness. Mix one teaspoon of fine-washable cold-water detergent in a quart of soft water. Using a clean medicine dropper, place two drops of this cleaning solution on a patch of colored cloth and wait five seconds. Firmly press the moist area between white facial tissues and check the paper for traces of dye. Rinse the area with a dropper of clear water and blot dry.

Repeat those steps for every quilt color. If any color bleeds, consult a textile expert before attempting to wash the quilt yourself.

Machine-drying is not recommended for fine-quality quilts. Instead, hand the quilt in the shade outside over three or four parallel clotheslines on a dry, sightly breezy day. Keep it in place with clothespins without metal hinges. When it is thoroughly dry, remove it from its nylon bag. Do not iron it.

Machine-washable quilts can also be washed and dried — on a gently cycle — in a nylon net bag.

Quilts with any amount of wool must be cleaned as if they were all wool. Although old woolen quilts can be washed, a careful dry-cleaning may be easier and safer. Use a reputable cleaner who does his own work. Emphasize that the quilt is not to be ironed.

If you plan to sell your quilt someday, don't mend it. Collectors often prefer items in their original condition, and alterations may lower your final selling price.

However, if you intend to keep or even use your quilt for future generations, you may need to apply new binding to worn edges and new appliques to worn areas.

The prime enemies of old fabrics are creases, dust, moisture, temperature extremes and light. Never display or store a quilt in one place indefinitely. Rotate displayed quilts so that none are displayed for more than three to six months at a time. Avoid damp basements or hot attics. To keep creases from weakening and breaking the thread on the fold, air and refold an old quilt at least four times a year. Always pad the folds with several layers of tissue paper to reduce creasing.

If the quilt contains wool, add one cup moth crystals and seal tightly. Air and refold woolen quilts twice a year, adding fresh crystals with each change.

Never staple or nail a quilt to display it. Avoid hanging a quilt in bright sun, fluorescent light or other harsh light, since long exposure can severely affect the quilt's dyes.

Lengthen with a ruffle

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

It's easy, not to mention feminine and romantic, to lengthen a dress with ribbons and ruffles. If you stitch matching ribbons to the body of the dress as well, no one will ever suspect your beautiful new touches of being homemade.

Today, most department, variety and fabric stores have an enormous selection of ribbons to choose from. In addition to plain satin and grosgrain ribbons, new styles are available with colorful print designs. They include ribbons printed with strawberries, ladybugs, smiling faces, and sayings such as "Life is the berries."

The new printed ribbons are especially perfect for little girl fashions. They add an extra helping of "sugar and spice" when they're stitched along ruffles, hems, collars, yokes or cuffs. Extra matching ribbons are ideal for hatbands, ponytail bows or hair streamers.

Ribbons are simple to sew onto most fashions. Even if you're a novice with a heedle and thread, you'll be able to lengthen with ribbons and ruffles. If you're a practiced home sewer, however, you may want to add ribbons to dresses that don't even need to be lengthened.

Here are directions for lengthening a dress with a ruffle:

MATERIALS: Dress; Fabric to coordinate with the dress; the ribbon; tape measure; sewing supplies.

When choosing fabric for a ruffle, it is not necessary for the ruffle fabric to be identical to the dress fabric. Instead, look for something that is compatible with the dress. One-half yard of fabric is enough for most ruffles.

Choose a solid-color ribbon if your dress and ruffle are prints. Choose a print ribbon for solid-color dresses and ruffles. Some good prints for children's dresses are the Strawberry Shortcake collection from Offray Ribbons.

The ribbon selection is an important as the fabric selection. Ribbons in the right colors can make two different fabrics look like they belong together.

MEASURING THE RIBBONS: 1. Measure the hem of your dress. 2. Measure collar, cuffs, yoke, or other places you plan to add ribbons. 3. Add all measurements together. Then add another yard for overlaps, tiny mistakes and hair ribbons.

MAKING THE RUFFLE: 1. Cut fabric into long strips, between 4 inches and 6 inches wide. Let the width of the stripes depend upon the length desired for your "new" dress. 2. Piece all strips together to form one long, continuous strip, about one and one-half times the hem measurement. 3. Press open seams. 4. Stitch two rows of gathering stitiches at one edge of ruffle. 5. Hem other edge of ruffle.

STITCHING RUFFLE TO HEM: 1. Take down hem of dress. 2. Cut away excess fabric to 1 inch below original hem. Press open seams. 3. Adjust gathers in ruffle to fit around hem. 4. With right sides together, baste ruffle to dress. 5. Machine-stitch along original hemline.

FINISHING: 1. Baste ribbon, right side up, over the new seam. 2. Machine-stitch ribbon to dress, as close to edges as possible. Use thread to match the ribbon. 3. Baste ribbon along collar cuffs, yoke or anywhere else desired. 4. Machine-stitch ribbon to dress.

Get smocked-look on sewing machine

COLLEGE STATION — Love the traditional yet fashionable look of English smocking?

Hand-smocking looks difficult and time-consuming, but with the touch of your machine, you can produce a similar smocked look that is just as attractive, says Ann Vanderpoorten, a clothing specialist.

Machine-smocking is not elastic like hand smocking, but it is very similar in appearance and takes less time. Only four quick steps are required, she says.

1. Press dots from smocking pattern to make stitching lines on wrong side of fabric.

2. Set machine stitch-length control for long stitches and sew horizontally across the fabric one row at a time.

3. Pull threads to the wrong side of fabric and tie two square knots at one end only.

4. Pull threads at the other end forming gathers to the measurement given on the pattern. Then tie a knot in the threads and trim loose ends.

Before attempting to machine-smock a home-sewn garment, take time to choose suitable materials, the specialist advises.

Fabrics should be made of smooth, evenly woven natural fibers, such as cotton, silk, linen or wool, she recommends.

Other good choices include rayon, challis, cotton/polyester blends and high-quality polyesters, Vanderpoorten suggests.

Select light-weight fabrics since they are easier to smock than stiff, heavy ones, she explains.

In addition, choose light-colored fabrics so stitches in the smocking will be more visible.

If you want a printed fabric, be sure to use small prints instead of large ones since large designs are distorted by smocking.

When buying thread for smocking, take along a swatch of material to match colors.

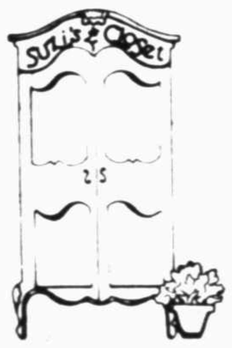

For prints, choose one or two colors of thread or the dominant color for a subtle effect, Vanderpoorten suggests.

For solids, choose two to five colors, with one the color of the fabric. The others should be lighter and darker to contrast with the solid color of the fabric.

Vanderpoorten is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Store glasses within grasp

DEAR HELOISE:

Over a period of time, I noticed that when friends' or relatives' young children wanted a drink or a bowl for cereal, they pulled up a chair and climbed up onto the cabinet counter top to reach it. I cringed for fear they would fall and hurt themselves, perhaps badly.

When our children came along, I decided I would put my unbreakable glasses and cereal bowls on the lower shelves of the cabinet where my little ones would be able to reach them without having to climb.

It worked well — no breakage of bones or dishes and they could even help put the dishes away after a meal. — Mrs. M. Jones

CUPBOARD CLEANING

Dear Heloise: Like so many others, I am faced with cleaning out my cupboards and I hate it. What I should say is I hate cleaning off the cupboard shelves when all the items are out.

My solution: I drag out my sponge mop and use it to damp mop the lower cupboards. Before this, I never could get all the way to the back of those shelves and I hated being on my hands and knees to do so. The mop does the job quite well while I stand and it takes less time.

It's also helpful to mop the upper cupboard doors, using a clean sponge in the mop head. Saves climbing on chairs or ladders. — Mrs. Eve Ritter

And, falling off: Nifty idea you've come up with, hon. Mopping out those lower cabinets sure should be easier on the old back too! A zillion thanks for sharing. — Hugs, Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: All my letters on nylon net have told you how much I think of it and the name I have attached to it. I call it "Heloise" because it is so useful — like your hints!

Painting is quite a chore. I used a roller today and got flecks all over my brown plastic laminated counter top, as well as on the woodwork and cabinets, before I noticed the damage.

"Heloise" came through for me. I just dampened the nylon net and rubbed away.

All of the flecks came loose and it helped to take all the latex paint off my brushes and other equipment. — James W. Cullings

BLENDER BIT

Dear Heloise: Being a busy housewife and mother, I've found a great shortcut for instant pudding. My blender!

I just pour in the correct amount of milk and pudding mix and turn the blender on for a few seconds!

The blender is also great for smoothing out lumpy pudding.

— Mrs. Debbie Lanier

'WALKING' MATTRESS

Dear Heloise: Our mattress tends to 'walk' off the bed. A thin sheet of foam rubber placed between the mattress and box spring helps to keep it in place. — Carol Farver

PICKER UPPER

Dear Heloise: For various reasons, sometimes one cannot bend over, making it impossible to pick up items off the floor.

Fireplace tongs allow you to retrieve anything dropped, as they are long enough and sturdy enough to do the job.

They have served me well many times — Edan Uken

TANGLE-FREE CHAINS

Dear Heloise: I screw cup hooks on both sides of a wooden clothes hanger to store necklaces and chains. The hooks can be spaced close together, if need be, without the chains becoming tangled.

Just put the hanger over your closet rod in your closet. The chains are out of the way — a good space saver. — Mrs. Carl Middendorf

Don't hoard a great housekeeping hint. Do send it to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, Tx. 78216. Heloise can't answer your letter personally but she'll use the best tips received in her column.

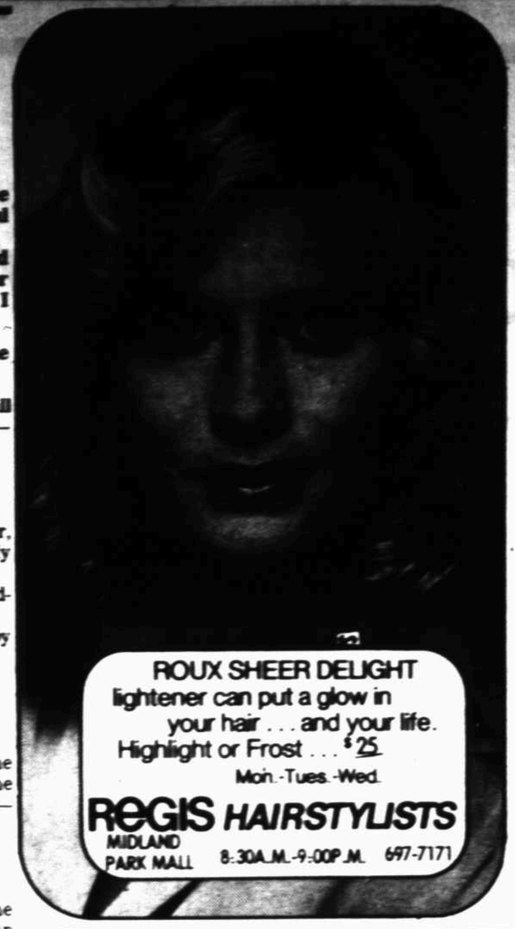

Looking far ahead at India's population

If fertility in India were to decline to two children per couple in the next 25 years, the population would eventually stablize at about 1.37 billion (double the present level) some 40 to 50 years from now, the World Bank says.

But if it takes 20 years longer to reach that fertility rate, the stable population would be 300 million larger.

Illegal immigration high

"Illegal immigration to the United States has increased drastically in recent years," says Attorney General William French Smith, "to a point where it likely equals or exceeds legal admissions."

What makes chocolate so alluring?

By JACK DENTON SCOTT
(Special From Reader's Digest)

In 1980, two employes of the famous Swiss chocolate industry were nabbed trying to sell to China and Russia some of their tiny nation's most guarded secrets: 40 recipes for making chocolate. In Switzerland, this was considered as serious as military espionage, for the Swiss make money, not war, including over $75 million a year by exporting their incomparable confections.

Actually, the Swiss "traitors" had precedent for their sneaky actions. In 1519, conquistador Hernando Cortes introduced chocolate to the world by bringing the original recipe out of Mexico's royal Aztec court to Spain. Less cautious than the Swiss, Aztec ruler Montezuma II toasted Cortes in chocolatl and permitted him to watch it being made.

Montezuma was known for tossing back 50 golden goblets of the dark bitter liquid a day. And he always drank a big beaker before entering his harem, believing that it not only gave him strength but was also an aphrodisiac.

At least in the strength and energy area, nutritionists have since proved Montezuma right. Besides having carbohydrates and fat, the average 1.5 ounce milk chocolate bar contauins four percent of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of protein, two percent of thiamine, six percent of calcium and two percent of iron.

Napoleon was a believer in the quick-energy benefits of chocolate and always carried it with him on campaigns. Chocolate has also been part of the ration of American front line soldiers. It has gone aboard U.S. and Soviet space flights and Sir Edmund Hillary took chocolate with him when he conquered Mount Everest.

More good news: Scientific tests prove that chocolate usually neither causes nor aggravates acne. And a study by the Eastman Dental Center in Rochester, N.Y. says that milk chocolate and chocolate chip cookies with their high content of protein, calcium, phosphate and other minerals are less damaging to tooth enamel than other snack foods.

The magic that is chocolate begins with a tree. Aptly named Theobroma (food of the gods) cacao , it flourishes within 20 degrees of the equator in such countries as the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Nigeria, Brazil and Mexico. Capable of growing to 60 feet, the cacao tree blooms continuously, producing blossoms, seed pods and cocoa beans.

After fermenting and drying, the beans are shipped to chocolate manufacturers, who select the kind they need for making their secret blends. The beans are then cleaned, roasted and cracked into pieces, called nibs, which contain just over 50 percent cocoa butter and are the basis of all chocolate and cocoa products. Chocolate makers follow their own recipes for the next step, which is to sweeten the liquor by adding varying amounts of sugar and cocoa butter, plus milk for milk chocolate.

After being ground fine and stirred velvety smooth, the chocolate is "tempered" - its texture varied by use of different temperatures. Then it is ready for creativity to flower as it is transformed into tasty candy. While it is still warm, nuts, fruits and other fillings are dipped in, or enrobed, in a fast method that pours chocolate over the various fillings. It may be molded into myriad forms - ranging from a model of the Empire State Building to a San Francisco cable car. To Melbourne, Australia, goes the honor of concocting the world's largest chocolate sculpture, a 4,484-pound, 10-foot-tall Easter egg.

Money is apparently no object to the chocolate addict. One fancy brand of chocolates, Godiva, can be bought in U.S. stores for about $350 a pound. For a time, Godiva's makers offered delivery of its chocolates by a woman on horseback in a flesh-colored body stocking and accompanied by minstrels. Price: just under $3000.

Some people devote their lives to chocolate - Milton Zelman, for instance, publisher of the chocolate-scented, New York-based bimonthly Chocolate News. A walking chocolate encyclopedia, Zelkman estimates that Americans eat more than 1.8 billion pounds of chocolate a year, worth about $3 billion. Over 800 million pounds of this consumption is in the form of chocolate bars, with M & M/Mars' Snickers bar probably the most popular.

And who could forget chocolate's most distinctive contribution to its multitude of harmonious marriages - its scrumptious union with almonds? Milton Snavely Hershey began mass production of this combination in 1894. Today the Hershey Chocolate Company is one of the world's largest producers of chocolate and cocoa products.

How to explain the worldwide appeal of this most magical of sweets, won from the paradoxically bitter seed of the chocolatl tree? According to a theory put forth by Drs. Donald F. Klein and Michael R. Liebowitz of the N.Y. State Psychiatric Institute, the brain of a person "in love" is awash with a substance called phenylethylamine, which brings a rosy high similar to that induced by amphetamines.

Chocolate, it so happens is loaded with phenylethylamine. Which may explain why those who have loved and lost often go on chocolate binges - in effect, self-medicating themselves to bring back the highs of love.

And can it be only coincidence that two famous lovers of history, Casanova and Madame du Barry, were chocolate freaks? Maybe, as some fans claim, chocolate is the food not only of the gods but also of love.

Tackling arthritis — seriously

ATLANTA (AP) — Mean Joe Greene, the Pittsburgh Steeler defensive lineman, is leading a new nationwide campaign against arthritis which includes a television public-service announcement that parallels his popular soft-drink commercial.

At the end of the message instead of tossing his football jersey, Greene gives a helping hand to a young boy with juvenile arthritis.

The announcement is part of an educational program launched by the Arthritis Foundation on the theme, "It's Time We Took Arthritis Seriously."

"We want people to understand that arthritis is like me — it's mean and should be taken seriously," says Greene, who is the Arthritis Foundation's new national chairman.

What makes chocolate so alluring?

By JACK DENTON SCOTT
(Special From Reader's Digest)

In 1980, two employes of the famous Swiss chocolate industry were nabbed trying to sell to China and Russia some of their tiny nation's most guarded secrets: 40 recipes for making chocolate. In Switzerland, this was considered as serious as military espionage, for the Swiss make money, not war, including over $75 million a year by exporting their incomparable confections.

Actually, the Swiss "traitors" had precedent for their sneaky actions. In 1519, conquistador Hernando Cortes introduced chocolate to the world by bringing the original recipe out of Mexico's royal Aztec court to Spain. Less cautious than the Swiss, Aztec ruler Montezuma II toasted Cortes in chocolatl and permitted him to watch it being made.

Montezuma was known for tossing back 50 golden goblets of the dark bitter liquid a day. And he always drank a big beaker before entering his harem, believing that it not only gave him strength but was also an aphrodisiac.

At least in the strength and energy area, nutritionists have since proved Montezuma right. Besides having carbohydrates and fat, the average 1.5 ounce milk chocolate bar contauins four percent of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance of protein, two percent of thiamine, six percent of calcium and two percent of iron.

Napoleon was a believer in the quick-energy benefits of chocolate and always carried it with him on campaigns. Chocolate has also been part of the ration of American front line soldiers. It has gone aboard U.S. and Soviet space flights and Sir Edmund Hillary took chocolate with him when he conquered Mount Everest.

More good news: Scientific tests prove that chocolate usually neither causes nor aggravates acne. And a study by the Eastman Dental Center in Rochester, N.Y. says that milk chocolate and chocolate chip cookies with their high content of protein, calcium, phosphate and other minerals are less damaging to tooth enamel than other snack foods.

The magic that is chocolate begins with a tree. Aptly named Theobroma (food of the gods) cacao , it flourishes within 20 degrees of the equator in such countries as the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Nigeria, Brazil and Mexico. Capable of growing to 60 feet, the cacao tree blooms continuously, producing blossoms, seed pods and cocoa beans.

After fermenting and drying, the beans are shipped to chocolate manufacturers, who select the kind they need for making their secret blends. The beans are then cleaned, roasted and cracked into pieces, called nibs, which contain just over 50 percent cocoa butter and are the basis of all chocolate and cocoa products. Chocolate makers follow their own recipes for the next step, which is to sweeten the liquor by adding varying amounts of sugar and cocoa butter, plus milk for milk chocolate.

After being ground fine and stirred velvety smooth, the chocolate is "tempered" - its texture varied by use of different temperatures. Then it is ready for creativity to flower as it is transformed into tasty candy. While it is still warm, nuts, fruits and other fillings are dipped in, or enrobed, in a fast method that pours chocolate over the various fillings. It may be molded into myriad forms - ranging from a model of the Empire State Building to a San Francisco cable car. To Melbourne, Australia, goes the honor of concocting the world's largest chocolate sculpture, a 4,484-pound, 10-foot-tall Easter egg.

Money is apparently no object to the chocolate addict. One fancy brand of chocolates, Godiva, can be bought in U.S. stores for about $350 a pound. For a time, Godiva's makers offered delivery of its chocolates by a woman on horseback in a flesh-colored body stocking and accompanied by minstrels. Price: just under $3000.

Some people devote their lives to chocolate - Milton Zelman, for instance, publisher of the chocolate-scented, New York-based bimonthly Chocolate News. A walking chocolate encyclopedia, Zelkman estimates that Americans eat more than 1.8 billion pounds of chocolate a year, worth about $3 billion. Over 800 million pounds of this consumption is in the form of chocolate bars, with M & M/Mars' Snickers bar probably the most popular.

And who could forget chocolate's most distinctive contribution to its multitude of harmonious marriages - its scrumptious union with almonds? Milton Snavely Hershey began mass production of this combination in 1894. Today the Hershey Chocolate Company is one of the world's largest producers of chocolate and cocoa products.

How to explain the worldwide appeal of this most magical of sweets, won from the paradoxically bitter seed of the chocolatl tree? According to a theory put forth by Drs. Donald F. Klein and Michael R. Liebowitz of the N.Y. State Psychiatric Institute, the brain of a person "in love" is awash with a substance called phenylethylamine, which brings a rosy high similar to that induced by amphetamines.

Chocolate, it so happens is loaded with phenylethylamine. Which may explain why those who have loved and lost often go on chocolate binges - in effect, self-medicating themselves to bring back the highs of love.

And can it be only coincidence that two famous lovers of history, Casanova and Madame du Barry, were chocolate freaks? Maybe, as some fans claim, chocolate is the food not only of the gods but also of love.

Tackling arthritis — seriously

ATLANTA (AP) — Mean Joe Greene, the Pittsburgh Steeler defensive lineman, is leading a new nationwide campaign against arthritis which includes a television public-service announcement that parallels his popular soft-drink commercial.

At the end of the message instead of tossing his football jersey, Greene gives a helping hand to a young boy with juvenile arthritis.

The announcement is part of an educational program launched by the Arthritis Foundation on the theme, "It's Time We Took Arthritis Seriously."

"We want people to understand that arthritis is like me — it's mean and should be taken seriously," says Greene, who is the Arthritis Foundation's new national chairman.

DEAR ABBY

Neighbor's 'I spy' is dangerous game

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I moved into this apartment six months ago. I like it very much. The only problem is that shortly after I moved in, I noticed that a man in the building directly across from me kept looking into my apartment. At first I ignored it, then he set up a telescope, which he has had permanently trained on my window!

It's not just my imagination; my boyfriend has also noticed it. This has made me feel very nervous and uncomfortable.

Would you consider this to be normal, harmless behavior on the man's part? Or should some action be taken on my part to put a stop to it? — UNCOMFORTABLE

DEAR UNCOMFORTABLE: Being observed constantly (and through a telescope yet) could be considered harassment. Behavior that makes you nervous and uncomfortable is not "harmless." Notify the police.

DEAR ABBY: Since my husband retired two years ago, he has started one project after another. But he hasn't finished any of them.

First he thought it would be nice if we had a vegetable garden, so he dug up the backyard and bought all kinds of seeds, but so far he hasn't gotten around to planting anything.

Then he decided we needed a patio, so he bought a truckload of sand and a load of bricks. It's been five months, and the bricks and sand are still piled on our back porch, and he hasn't started to build anything yet.

Now he is buying electric tools and equipment for a woodworking shop in our basement! Abby, he is such a dear man, and he has really earned his retirement, but all he does is read "how-to" books and whistle as he takes off for the hardware store to do some more shopping. Thank heavens we can afford it, but all these unfinished projects are getting on my nerves. Any suggestions? — MILLIE IN PHILLY

DEAR MILLIE: Look at it this way: You have a cow pasture for a backyard, a pile of bricks and sand on your back porch, and some woodworking equipment in your basement. But you have a husband who is alive, retired and happy as a lark. If the unfinished projects annoy you, quietly hire someone to finish them, and whistle as you walk around them.

DEAR ABBY: A married couple have invited my husband to their home for supper many times. Last week they called him to come for coffee and birthday cake. My husband always goes alone.

Abby, when they invite my husband, doesn't that mean he should bring his wife? How cheap can people be? They know he's married because they have met me several times.

I told my husband if I'm not good enough to be invited too, he shouldn't accept. What do you think? — CHEAP FRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: The issue is not "cheap friends," it's your husband's lack of consideration for your feelings. If you're not included in the invitation, he should not accept.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will find the enclosed piece by Henry Scott Holland worth sharing with your readers. — MARY PIKE, ADRIAN, MICH.

DEAR MARY: I do. Thank you for sending it. Since it's untitled, I'm taking the liberty of calling it "Perspective":

"I am standing on the seashore. A ship spreads her sails to the morning breeze and starts for the ocean. I stand watching her until she fades on the horizon, and someone at my side says, 'She is gone!'

"Gone where? The loss of sight is in ME, not in HER. Just at the moment when someone says, 'She is gone,' there are others who are watching her coming. Other voices take up the glad shout, 'Here she comes!'

"And that is DYING."

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

On the house

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A premixed vinyl paste for applying wallcoverings.

Manufacturers claim — That a paste brush or paint tray and low-napped roller are all that are required to apply this paste ... that it is brushed directly on the wall or poured into a tray and then brushed on the wall in sufficient quantity to hang a full strip of wallcovering at a time ... that it does away with saw horses or pasting tables and covering everything in sight with drop cloths ... that warm water cleanup makes the whole process much easier ... that the paste is fast-drying ... and that it has special properties to help it fight mildew.

THE PRODUCT — A new microelectric thermostat designed to save energy.

Manufacturer's claim — That this thermostat cuts heating and cooling costs by raising or lowering temperatures automatically up to four times a day in accordance with family activities ... that simple slide selectors set the desired day and night temperatures and the times that automatic temperature changes are desired ... that a separate on-off button for each day lets the home owner skip the temperature changes to maintain constant levels on any day or combination of days ... and that there is a backup battery power system in the event of an electrical failure.

THE PRODUCT — A new type of install-it-yourself solar water heater.

Manufacturer's claim — That this heater utilizes a 4-by 8-foot "pillow" collector of flexible plastic film which rests on plywood on the lawn adjacent to the house which it serves ... that the pillow collector has a storage as well as an energy absorption function unlike conventional collectors which require continuous operation of a pump to deliver heated water to a storage tank.

(Home handymen will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Marriage counselors anticipate higher number of friendly divorces

By ANNE BEATON
Hearst Feature Service

BOSTON — They may be the most happily divorced couple in Boston. They play tennis every Sunday morning. They have dinner together regularly. She's always calling him for advice. When he had to go to the hospital, she was the first one he called.

"She's my best friend," he says.

"He's terrific," she says.

They must mean it. When Martin Slobodkin and Riva Poor officially untied the knot six years ago, they had a party to celebrate.

"If you thought enough of someone to marry in the first place, then why bother to be enemies just because you can't live together anymore?" asks Poor, a business consultant.

At first, she says, "there was a lot of tension. But we never fight now."

Slobodkin and Poor are in the minority. Most couples fail to continue on amiable terms after they separate or divorce.

Marriage counselors, however, point out that there may be many more friendly divorces in the future. Changes in family law, no fault divorce, equitable distribution of property, mediation and joint custody of children are fostering an atmosphere in which amiable splits are encouraged.

And couples who can divorce without hostility probably will find that it's in their best interest to continue to seek each other out for advice. They may find for example, that it's in their children's best interest that they continue to attend PTA meetings together.

Why are some couples able to part amicably?

The experts say it often depends on a couple's level of maturity, their ability to let go of guilt, anger, bitterness and blame.

Says Massachusetts General Hospital psychologist Gerald Borofsky: "Some people want to feel rejected. They revel in pathos. The high point of their day is the argument they had with their former spouse."

However, for every truly friendly divorce there may be many more that simply seem that way. No matter what the legal papers say, some couples remain close not because they want to but because, psychologically, they are unable to break away.

Says Borofsky: "Some people are afraid of a break because it would mean they would have to start a new relationship. Others just want a casual relationship such as one they can have with an ex-spouse."

MGH psychologist Harry Sobel adds that friendship after divorce often is a temporary condition that allows a couple to let go slowly. "It can be a transition-period until they reach the point where they can say, 'I can handle my life alone again.' "

Job candidates

BOSTON (AP) — A person whose age-salary ratio is better than average for his job is an above-average job candidate, says an executive recruiter.

According to Steven M. Garfinkle of Richards Consultants Ltd., an executive-recruiting firm, other factors that make a person a good job candidate include:

—Schools attended and degrees earned, plus any special training or ability.

—Someone who has enjoyed a steady upward movement in responsibility for a reasonable period of time.

Desk and Derrick installs officers

The Desk and Derrick Club of Midland had its installation of 1982 officers and inaugural ball in Green Tree Country Club. Music was provided by The Roamin' Kats.

Mary Anna Brimberry, 1982 Region V director-elect, installed the 1982 board of directors. Symbolizing the 30th birthday of the organization, she used as her theme, "A String of Pearls."

The officers installed were Juanima Hamm, president; Kaye Gassie, first vice president; Lacretia Cummings, second vice president; Catherine Wilkerson, recording secretary; Linda Petree, corresponding secretary; Nancy Gray, treasurer. The two-year directors are Willie Mae Armstrong and Onie McNeese.

"Outstanding Rookie of the Year" award was presented to Ms. Petree for outstanding service to Desk and Derrick Club. This award is presented to a new member of one year or less.

Today's babies healthier

By ELIZABETH H. HOLLAND

BOSTON — These are good times for having babies, at least from the health standpoint of mother and child. Today's babies are generally bigger, healthier and fatter than those born 10 or 15 years ago.

"The general trend is to accept that it's safe, that it's a natural thing to have a baby," Dr. Robert V. Dandrow, a leading obstetrician and gynecologist, says. "Women no longer consider it dangerous."

Pregnancy and childbirth were viewed in a dramatically different light only two decades ago.

Heavy emphasis was placed on limiting sodium intake. Diuretics, drugs that cause the body to excrete fluid, were regularly prescribed. Then, doctors told expectant mothers to gain 10 pounds — 15 pounds at the most — during their pregnancy.

But just listen to the doctors now on weight gain during pregnancy:

"We've had a complete about-face," says Dr. Fredric D. Frigoletto Jr., Chief of Maternal and Fetal Medicine at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"Now we feel that women who are normal-weight women — even a woman who's a little above her normal weight — should gain an average of 24 pounds, eating a nicely balanced diet of proteins, carbohydrates and fats."

A recently released study prepared by Dr. George Tokuhata, Director of Pennsylvania's Division of Epidemiological Research, bears out the reasoning behind this advice.

This study of 13,000 pregnancies found that women who gain less than 10 pounds — or more than 39 pounds — during pregnancy run a substantially greater risk of having stillborn babies.

It is believed by many in the medical community that the incidence of toxemia of pregnancy, manifested in pre-eclampsia and eclampsia, is related to diet, and by extension, weight gain.

The disturbance known as pre-eclampsia usually develops late in pregancy and is characterized by increased blood pressure, kidney damage and accumulation of fluids in the tissues, causing swelling about the ankles, face and eyes. Without medical intervention, the pregnant woman may have one or more convulsive seizures which could cause the woman to lapse into a coma. Eclampsia can result in the baby's death and, in some cases, in the death of the mother.

Dandrow and Frigoletto say they have noticed a decrease in the incidence of toxemia, an old-fashioned term that has been replaced by "pregnancy-induced hypertension."

For years, in addition to warning women not to gain too much weight, gynecologists have cautioned women to quit smoking and limit their alcoholic intake during pregnancy.

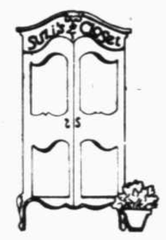

"It's more important than ever, even pre-conceptually, to get them off all the tobacco," Dandrow says. "I tell them that for every cigarette they smoke the effect is twice that on the baby. The impact is the same as putting a car tailpipe in the uterus. It's a nasty thing to have to tell them, but I don't see them smoking again."

With regard to exercise, Dandrow says, "When they say 'I take aerobics' and they wonder about where the cut-off point is, I use shortness of breath as the point where they should draw the line." And, he adds, the important question to ask is, "Is the baby is getting enough oxygen?"

Perhaps the greatest change in recent years has been women's concern and interest in the entire process, from conception to delivery.

"There's no doubt about it," Dandrow says. "The educational level of my patients has always been high, but now it's even higher. They are better informed, more affluent than their mothers were, more aware of what their rights are. They know what they're looking for."

Jerry Clower, a one-time fertilizer salesman who has used his own quick wit and tall tales from rural Mississippi, exhibits the style which has gained celebrity status for him as a country humorist.

Jerry Clower: Former fertilizer salesman turned country humorist

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Jerry Clower, a one-time fertilizer salesman who's used his own quick wit — and tall tales from rural Mississippi — for laughter and applause as a country humorist, says he sometimes forgets his celebrity status.

"I'll be walking through airports and I've got my mind on my grandson or the children, and all of a sudden somebody will come up and say they've seen me on 'The Mike Douglas Show' or somewhere," Clower says. "They'll quiver and shake and then people get in line for autographs.

"That sometimes startles me because I'm not thinking about Jerry Clower the humorist. I'm thinking about Jerry Clower the father, the husband, the deacon in the Baptist Church — it takes a minute to get back."

His ability to bring a host of country characters to life in side-splitting tales of rural society has taken Clower a long way from Route 4, Liberty, Miss., where he was born in 1928.

It's been 10 years now since he turned to the stage with the comedy he'd used on customers while peddling fertilizer for Mississippi Chemical Corp., and he's in constant demand for TV and radio as well as personal appearances.

But, Clower says, "My life style hasn't changed that much. I still put my family first, fish with a cane-pole, and prefer collards, cornbread and baked sweet potatoes."

Clower talks about folks like Marcel Ledbetter, who once opened the door of a beer joint with a chainsaw, and his stories cover the range of country happenings.

"Having more than one crop has been the key to my success," he says. "If I had to show up at one auditorium every night, it would be hard for me to love it.

"But I may do commercials one day, a state fair the next, and speak to a church the next. I do radio shows, fairs, package shows with other artists — or I might just fly over to Longview, Texas, and be the Chamber of Commerce program all by myself," he says.

Clower says personal experiences in rural Mississippi provide much of the material for his stories and one-liners.

"Mississippi is 99 percent of Clower comedy," the entertainer says. "In my first album, 'Jerry Clower from Yazoo City, Mississippi, Talkin',' I'd say almost 100 percent of it was about things that happened to me as a kid.

"That was the period in my life when things happened," he says. "I was living with mother and didn't have a daddy. When I look back, that was the roughest part of it.

"Later, I was able to put those experiences on an album," Clower says, "and I got money for doing it."

Clower joined the Navy in 1944, the day he graduated from high school, and before he was 19 he had earned three battle stars and a unit citation for bravery while serving on an aircraft carrier in the South Pacific.

After leaving the service, Clower learned to play football in junior college, and won an athletic scholarship to Mississippi State University. He started at defensive tackle in the first college football game he had ever seen.

At Mississippi Chemical, he worked his way up from field representative to director of field services.

"I started to work for them back in 1954," he says, "and I had a territory and would call on farmers. I started telling tales to improve my sales technique, and word got around that I was a pretty good talker."

His start in show business came when he entertained a dairy convention in Alabama, and his remarks were taped and sent to a record company.

"I wasn't really trying to get into show business," he says. "I just sort of backed into it."

Prescribed drugs require precautions

Use special precautions when taking prescribed drugs, advises Dr. Mary Ann Sirer, a health education specialist with the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"Certain medications interact with natural and added chemicals in foods, and this can cause an unexpected effect," she says. "Ask your doctor when to take prescribed drugs — before, after or between meals, and ask about foods or beverages to avoid. Also be sure to tell the doctor of other medications you're taking," she says.

Interfacing is important

Why use interfacing in homesewing?

First, interfacing is a separate supporting layer of fabric — it's placed on the inside of a garment's fabric, explains Nancy Brown, a clothing specialist.

Use interfacing when you want a professional-looking garment, because it adds support, shape and body. It also gives clothing longer wearability, she says.

Brown is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

AT WIT'S END

Is he or she a local call or a toll?

By ERMA BOMBECK

A lot of mothers I know are downright meddling when it comes to their children's selection of a boyfriend or a girlfriend. They want to know how old, how tall, what their father does, where they live, the scope of their education, what their plans are for the future, and how they feel about children.

I don't care about any of those things. All I want to know is, "Is he or she a local call or a toll?"

I don't remember names or faces of old flames. All I remember is their area code. One of my sons once dated an area code 513 for six months. It was marriage by Ma Bell. I figured we were spending $35 a month to share such insights as:

"What are you doing?"

"Nothing, what are you doing?"

"I don't want to interrupt you if you're doing something."

"I told you I wasn't doing anything."

"You sure?"

"I'm sure."

"So, what's new?"

Another one of my kids showed an interest in a lovely girl who lived just a few miles from us. It was great. I didn't have to worry about a deep involvement because they were never off the phone. He set his alarm to call her in the morning. At night I used to go in and remove the phone from his ear as he slept. It was like hanging up an umbilical cord. As soon as they left one another at school in the afternoon they would shout, "I'll call you when I get home." I offered to feed him intravenously. The suggestion by my husband to put a timer by the phone with sand running through was ridiculous. However, I did slip a calendar under his door and circle the month.

Panic didn't set in until one day when I was standing near and saw him dial "1."

"Who are you calling?" I asked.

"You know," he said. "The same person I've been talking with for the last month."

"But I thought she was a local call."

"Don't worry," he said. "It only costs about eight cents a minute. Besides, this isn't just some silly kid infatuation. This is a person I genuinely care for and want to spend the rest of my life with. She's important to me. She's special and there isn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," I said, "because according to the phone bill you owe us $36.86 in long distance charges."

I learned something that day. When toll charges enter the room . . . love goes right out the window.

Baby blues

COLLEGE STATION — Are you a new mother suffering from post-partum depression — more commonly known as "baby blues?"

Typical symptoms of "baby blues" include crying for no reason and feeling sad or depressed after giving birth, says Cindy B. Wilson, a family life education specialist.

"Baby blues" can range from mild to severe emotional changes due to physical changes and exhaustion, she explains.

Experiencing "baby blues" is a normal condition for many new mothers, and it can be stablized to a great extent, the specialist notes.

To control these downward feelings, new mothers can do a few simple things, Wilson recommends.

Eat well-balanced meals and rest adequately, share inner feelings with someone else — don't bottle them inside, plan "alone time" to relax, nap, read or participate in a quite, enjoyable activity and, call on family, friends and neighbors to help out with housekeeping, cooking and care for the newborn the first month after giving birth.

Wilson is with the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

If You Know What An Owner/Operator Is...

You Know It's Worth $2,500 To Become One.

The only thing stopping a lot of good truckers from becoming owner/operators is the tractor cost. That's why Aero-Mayflower developed a new tractor lease program. It's a way for owner/operators to get started. All it takes to begin is $2,500. As an owner/operator with Mayflower you'll get:
1. 56% of the line haul ($560 out of every $1,000.)
2. If the fuel goes up, so does your fuel surcharge.
3. Training (if you need it) at our expense.
4. Your own business with a very successful company behind you.

We'd like to tell you more. Call 1-800-428-1220 (in INDIANA call 1-800-382-1212) between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Paul Kirtley, Director of Administration at the Permian Basin Graduate Center "builds" a new image for the enterprise. Here he is preparing PBGC's new catalog, which will be in the mail around January 1.

PBGC finds quality cost less

BY DAVID C. SODAMANN
Energy and Business Editor

Real die hard penny pinchers are sometimes heard to say, "quality cost less." The point being that over the long haul one often does save money by investing in quality to begin with, rather that wasting dough on lower quality goods.

The staff at Midland's Permian Basin Graduate Center have learned the truth of the saying. They're glad thay did. The institution is a nonprofit enterprise, where penny pinching is a way of life. Savings are appreciated.

The graduate center is unique. There is only one other operation in the entire nation that can be compared to it. The center has helped make Midland what it is today.

PBGC offers adults opportunities to continue their education. However, unlike most public schools, universities and the like offering continuing education to the general public, the graduate center caters to the professional and business communities, with "graduate level" instruction. Classes at the center sometimes carry continuing education credits that some professionals need to stay in good standing, however, they do not carry graduate credit in the sense that a university course might carry it.

Primary emphasis is on petroleum industry management and technical subjects. General business subjects are frequently included. On a PBGC course listing you won't find things like microwave cooking and bridge playing.

For many years PBGC courses have been announced with periodic mailings of leaflets describing upcoming classes. Four or five flyers of austere appearance were stuffed in an envelope and mailed by the bundle to former students, prospective students and others throughout the region.

Being money concious, the graduate center staff had seen the mailings as the most economical way of spreading the word.

However, it isn't anymore.

PBGC executive director Judy Golasinski said the center is now offering so many courses that the usual mailouts are no longer efficient or economical. Starting with the upcoming spring semester, a new approach will be taken.

For the first time, the graduate center is issuing a catalog in book form, much like those used by universities, which will list all classes being offered during a semester. The Spring 1982 edition should be in the mail around January 1.

In addition to the catalog a monthly update will be mailed. The one-page flyer will list in order courses offered during the month, and any changes in them. It will also recap the previous months listing, and alert readers to future courses of special interest.

The catalog and the monthly updates are being professionally printed, on high quality papers. They're designed to be mailed without an envelope.

The publications have a first-rate appearance. They look expensive, and, course, in a way they are, however, it turns out they will in the long run be cheaper to repoduce and distribute than the their drab predecessors.

The grad center staff has learned the lesson of the die hard penny pinchers. They have found that quality really does cost less.

Investing in the best could have its drawbacks though.

Those used to seeing the graduate center's former drab announcments may not at first glance realize the new publications are products of the center. The staff is a little worried about this. They're hoping the new catalogs and updates won't be overlooked when they arrive in the mail. They don't want the "new look" too cause the center to loose students, when attracting students is the goal.

The old course announcements are already being missed. The center has had several calls recently from anxious followers, who are wondering why they haven't received their envolope full of leaflets.

As far as the folks at the graduate center know, there is only one other institution in the nation offering such specialized instruction. It's located in Hartford, Conn., and provides training for professionals in the aeronautics industry.

Midland's graduate center was the idea of consulting geologist Jack Elam, who is today president of the organization.

Elam got the idea for what is now PBGC while studying for his doctor's degree at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y. There, he learned of the Hartford graduate center's opperation and concluded a similar school might be worthwhile in the Permian Basin.

It wasn't until 1965 that Elam had the opportunity to launch the Permian Basin Graduate Center. He was then a vice president of the West Texas Geological Society. At that time, Elam said in a recent interview, "things were so lousey here, something had to be done."

The petroleum industry wasn't booming then. It was busted, and so was Midland and the entire Permian Basin economy.

The graduate center, Elam said, "was partly an attmept to salvage the people who lost their jobs in the petroleum industry."

"Tremendous numbers of geologists had lost their jobs. We had well site geologists working for $17.50 a day (an incredibly low wage by today's standards)," Elam remarked.

The graduate center became an avenue into new lines of work for former petroleum industry employees. The project had wide support.

"I solicited the help of the various technical societies," Elam said, "so the graduate center really is the progeny of the technical societies."

The Permain Basin Graduate Center opened for business in 1967. It was a shoestring opeation, surviving largely on donated time and money. Five courses were offered that first year to 257 registered students.

It quickly grew. The second year 44 courses were offered 968 registered sutdents.

"At one time," said Elam, "probably two-thirds of our registration was from teachers."

Through its extension program, Sul Ross State University offered classes teachers needed for certification.

"We actually had people out of junior college go on and get their degrees from Sul Ross through our efforts," Elam said.

The program came to an end with the establishment of the University of Texas Permian Basin in Odessa, and a corresponding change in state law regulating extension courses.

The past year has been a good one for the center.

"Registrations this year have broken all records," said Golasinski. "We projected 3,000 and now we have 3,750! We'll offer approximately 144 different courses this year, which is more courses I quess than we've ever offered."

The total enrollment for 1980 was 2,708 in 111 courses.

"We're quickly outgrowing our building (the old Reporter-Telegram offices at Main and Illinois) and it looks like we may expand," Golasinski said. "Right now we don't have any definite plans, but we know we're going to have to do something."

The typcial PBGC student, Gaolasinski said, is employeed in the oil and gas industry and has been sent to school by an employer. "It's impressive though when people come in and pay their own tuition, and use their own time."

"We're trying to train all the way from entry level office persons, through the intermediate level, to people who have their doctorate degree," Goalasinski said.

It takes a staff of seven to keep up with all the students four full time, three part time.

The four full time members are Golasinski; Paul Kirtley, Director of Administration; Lola Igou, Course Coordinator and Registrar; and June Ellis, Mailrooom Supervisor.

Goalasinski previously managed education programs for the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. She was instrumental in the formation of the association's distinguished lecturer program.

She is assisted by Kirtley. He has a degree in journalism from the University of Texas at Austin, where he worked nine years as coordinator of management development programs in the graduate schoool of business.

Lola Igou is, said Kirtley, "More or less the voice of the graduate center. People register with her and cancel with her. She's proably the first line of communication."

Ellis' job is a key one. Kirtely said, "Along with Lola I'd say that's one of our most critical areas ... that's where we get word out on all the courses."

In a few days, Ellis will be busy sending out those new less costly, but first-rate catalogs.

Wildcatting deep gas in northeast

By ERICH SMITH
Associated Press Writer

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP) — High in the mountains of northern Pennsylvania, a crew from Texaco Inc. is drilling what may become one of the first deep gas wells in the northeastern United States.

The $14 million, 19,500-foot gamble might seem better suited to the Gulf Coast or the Oklahoma panhandle, but geological surveys indicate this area, the Eastern Overthrust Belt, does hold pockets of gas.

Already the large rig, transported in pieces from Oklahoma on 55 trucks, has bored more than 9,800 feet into Hyner Mountain. Geologists monitoring samples brought up from the bottom have seen tantalizing traces of natural gas, but not enough to sell, said site foreman Scott Fitzgerald.

Texaco, drilling in a 50-50 venture with Marathon Oil, expects the project to last about a year. Drilling started July 10, three months after Fitzgerald staked out the site. He got an idea of what he was up against right away.

"We had a seven-foot drop from one end of the site to the other," he recalled, and his men went to level it with bulldozers.

"They went through 30 inches of topsoil and hit solid bedrock."

The problem was solved with heavier grading equipment and tons of gravel.

There have been other difficulties including the tank for the "mud" mixture that is pumped to the bottom of the hole to lubricate the drill bit and equalize underground pressure.

The 109-foot long tank had to be brought in over winding roads to reach Pennsylvania State Tract 285 in the Sproul State Forest. Dozens of narrow bridges or low overpasses had to be negotiated or bypassed.

"I thought we'd never find a route to get it up here," Fitzgerald sighed.

The next test is winter. The drilling crew, mostly from New Iberia, La., is braced for below-zero temperatures and blizzards. The $5 million rig was designed for an Alaskan site, and Fitzgerald's crewmen have been busy building insulating devices around e.

Crews, working 12 hours on and 12 off, also are scheduled for 12 days off every two weeks, plus two travel days.

Drilling, Fitgerald says, will continue 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

It had better. The bit (the 35th so far), is grinding its way through shale and limestone at the rate of about 40 feet an day.

"Drilling's a lot harder here," said Clyde Terrebonne of New Iberia, La., a member of the crew from Loffland Brothers, which owns and operates the 176-foot drilling rig for Texaco.

"At home we'd be able to drill 10,000 feet in eight or nine days," Terrebonne said.

Oil and gas wells aren't new to Pennsylvania — the state has realized more than $50 million in rents and royalty payments on oil and gas leases for state forest and game lands since the 1940s, but none has been drilled this deep.

The modern world's first oil well was drilled in western Pennsylvania near Titusville in 1859. In the 1950s, the area experienced a gas well boom but those wells, now pumped dry, serve as storage areas for a pipeline.

Those earlier wells were shallow compared to the more than 3½ miles Texaco plans to drill.

Other drillers are at work nearby. Amoco is sinking a 12,800-foot test well on state forest lands in Centre County, according to the Minerals Section of the state Forestry Department — all part of a renewed interest in the eastern oil fields from Georgia to upstate New York.

The state Bureau of Forestry has 620,000 of its 2.4 million acres under lease. The Game Commission, Pennsylvania's other big landowner, has leased 60,000 acres out of 1.3 million, and more is expected to be auctioned off.

"Leasing seems to go in cycles for Pennsylvania," said Gregory Grabowicz, of the Game Commission's division of land management.

"The last year the Game Commission auctioned oil and gas leases was 1978," Grabowicz said. "Then requests dropped off for two years. Lately, we have been receiving requests to lease new tracts."

No one keeps track of oil and gas leases by private landowners, but State Geologist Arthur Socolow estimates that as much as 20 percent of the land in the state is under lease.

Bushman buys savings firms

Ray P. Moudy, President of Transwestern United Corporation, a savings and loan holding company, announced the sale of Citizens Savings and Loan Association, Midland, Texas, and Home Savings Association, Odessa, Texas, to Permian Basin businessman, John Bushman. The sale to Bushman was recently approved by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, regulator of all insured savings and loan associations throughout the United States. Moudy stated that after the consummation of the sale, each association held a stockholders meeting at which new boards of directors were elected by Bushman.

The board of directors elected to serve at Citizens Savings and Loan Association, in addition to Bushman, are: L. Dwain Epting, C.P.A., Ed Lasater, Bill Flemons, Monte Gerig and Gordon Beyerlein, C.P.A. and attorney. At Home Savings the board is composed of Bushman, Terry Donk, Dicie Stewart, Ed Lasater, Monte Gerig and Gordon Beyerlein.

Moudy further stated that the two associations had realized substantial profits in recent months from the sale of lots in two residential subdivisions in Midland, Meadowpark and Northgate Addition. Bushman said that active development of the two subdivisions would continue and that the two associations would remain oriented toward stimulating thrift and home ownership.

New managing officers for both associations are currently being sought and an announcement will be made when their selections are made by the new board of directors.

Watt's plan 'step in right direction'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental group is calling Interior Secretary James Watt's decision to scale back his offshore oil and gas drilling plan a "step in the right direction."

But Michael Shapiro, an aide to California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., said Watt didn't go far enough. He said the areas offered for lease will still be too large to properly judge the environmental impact.

Watt had proposed leasing entire offshore planning areas, which range up to 120 million acres. But in a memo issued last week and released by the department Thursday, Watt said the leasing program should be focused on offshore tracts that the U.S. Geological Survey, oil companies or state governments judge to be of high potential.

As a result, the 1 billion acres included in Watt's original plan to open up the entire U.S. coastline for drilling would be available for consideration, but only specific tracts could be leased.

Interior Department officials said the change was made partly in response to the adverse comments generated by the original proposal. Some oil companies had said they could not handle lease sales as large as those Watt originally proposed.

Lease sales currently cover about 2 million acres.

Department spokesman Harmon Kallman said the memo was "not a major change in approach."

"We never expected to lease 1 billion acres, only to offer that much for consideration," he said.

Watt first announced his five-year leasing program last April, but a court challenge is holding up final publication of the plan. Aides say the plan won't be released before late March.

White House claims to do a good job for small business

BY VIC OSTROWIDZKE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The White House thinks it has done a good job for America's small business in 1981 and hopes to do even better next year.

"It is no exaggeration to say that small business must prosper if the rest of the nation is to succeed economically," the administration's top officials said this week as they issued a 128-page review of President Reagan's accomplishments since taking office in January.

Top Reagan advisers Edwin Meese III and James Baker III said small business produces over 45 percent of the nation's gross national product and creates over 80 percent of all new jobs and that the administration's program of federal tax and spending reductions and relief from burdensome regulations are geared to aid small business.

And they said there should be more of the same next year.

The document was so detailed it even listed "Project Partnership" demonstration programs in San Francisco, Los Angeles and New York which are designed to provide jobs for the disabled through voluntary efforts of 40 major corporations and 30 disabled constituency groups.

The document painted a grim picture of the economy prior to the Reagan presidency as the days of double-digit inflation, bleak prospects for early improvement in high unemployment rates, declining productivity, ever-increasing federal taxes and spending, a drop in personal savings rate, unbalanced federal budgets and reams of federal regulations that cost Americans more than $100 billion a year.

Where does the administration think it has improved the business climate?

The answer, according to White House spokesmen, is through the president's long range program aimed at reducing the growth of federal spending, cutting tax rates, relieving the burden of federal regulations and encouraging a stable monetary policy by the Federal Reserve Board.

While those programs have not yet paid off for business, the president's advisers express confidence that they will in the relative near future.

That view also is reflected in a nationwide poll of small business executives, conducted by the Walter E. Heller Institute for Small Business. The Heller survey reported that although small business executives see few positive accomplishments from the administration so far, they retain continued faith in Reagan's leadership.

The report said that despite the personal hardships they have encountered, some 69 percent of the executives feel optimistic about the future and are willing to make sacrifices to give the Reagam program a chance to work. But 68 percent said they don't believe benefits will "trickle-down" to help a substantial number of small businesses that are threatened with bankruptcy.

In the area of regulatory reform Reagan aides claimed credit for saving $2 billion a year in federal operating costs and about $5 billion in one-time capital investment costs.

The aides pointed out that in the first 10 months of the administration the number of new pages added to the Federal Register was one third less than a comparable period in 1981 -- from 73,061 to 51,412 pages and the number of new regulations was down almost 50 percent for the same period.

The aides said an aggressive campaign to weed graft and corruption had yielded the government more than $2 billion in savings by collecting delinquent debts owed to the government, review of construction contracts to provide safeguards against waste and fraud and reviewing the government-wide payroll system.

About $232 billion is owed the federal government and $34 billion of this amount is either in a delinquent or default status, with interest alone on the delinquent debt costing the taxpayers $14 million a day. Reagan wants the government to get back $1.5 billion a year of the money owed by pursuing an "aggressive" collection program.

The government, according to the White House, will have saved another $104 million by the end of 1982 fiscal year by cutting spending for government publications and audio-visual materials and $200 million a year by cutting back on federal employee travel.

Reagan's aides said the administration intends to do all it can to help business expand and flourish by working closely with small business through the Small Business Administration.

The administration is now claiming that the new tax law should provide busineses with enough incentives to "offset and prevent any serius decline" as operators reassess their investment plans in light of the current economic slump.

"Here we are going into a recession and plans for the first half of 1982 appear to be pretty buoyant," says Robert Ortner, the chief economist for the Department of Commerce. "They're certainly not collapsing."

The reason for this optimism? Last month's survey by the department found that the nation's businesses plan to increase their spending on new plants and equipment 1.8 percent – after adjustment for inflation – in the first half of 1982 over the last half of this year.

New evidence compiled by Rutgers University's Center for International Business Cycle Research suggests that recession has slowed inflation in not only the United States but in other major industrial countries. A composite index of consumer prices in 23 industrial countries outside the United States showed a slowing of the inflation rate from nearly 14 percent at the beginning of 1980 to 10 percent in October 1981. This almost parallels the decline in the comparable U.S. inflation rate, from about 13 percent to 9 percent during the same period.

In a separate study, the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation says that only a consistent long-term commitment by the Reagan administration in its battle against inflation will regain the confidence of the nation's investors and lead to lower interest rates. The institute, founded by Dr. Norman B. Ture, now undersecretary of the treasury for tax and economic affairs, says the economy should be on the rise and interest rates should be falling but that Wall Street is hesitant to react to the Reagan programs because of past experiences with budget battles.

"Rightly or not, the skepticism among the stock specialists is easily explained," the study insisted. "They have been burned before. They have seen past presidents come to the fore with plans for solving past economic crises and had also seen these programs abandoned at the slightest threat of an economic downturn."

According to the Department of Energy, the United States ought to weather this winter with adequate electric power unless we run into an unusually severe cold spell. In that event, it is possible there might be some curtailment of power supplies in Florida, parts of North and South Carolina, Virginia, northern Ohio and northern Pennsylvania.

The department also reported that 42 oil burning electric powerplants in 10 Northeastern states can switch to coal without exceeding air quality standards on a regionwide basis. The department intends to prepare specific site environmental impact statements before any plants are permitted to convert to coal. Among plants studied were those in Albany, N.Y.; Brandon Shores, Riverside, Wagner and Crane in Maryland and New Boston, Mystic, Canal, Salem harbor and Mt. Tom in Massachusetts.

Then there was some good news this week for American consumers and bad news for the OPEC nations from the American Petroleum Institute, which reported that petroleum imports continued to decline in November compared to a year ago while domestic crude oil production went up. Total imports fell last month to 5.4 million barrels per day – the lowest November level since 1972, with imports 817,000 barrels per day or 13.2 percent lower than November a year ago.

'Incredibly bad' energy decisions made in U.S.

DALLAS — "Incredibly bad" energy decisions have been made in the United States at least partly because of the misconception that the nation's oil and gas are rapidly running out, Houston oilman George P. Mitchell said recently.

"That myth must be laid to rest," Mitchell told persons attending the World Oil and Gas Show and Conference. "The truth is that this country — because it still has large quantities of oil and gas — is capable of becoming 85 to 90 percent energy self-sufficient over the next 10 to 15 years and of breaking OPEC's back in the process."

Mitchell said the logical order of national energy priorities would be conservation, full development of the large amounts of gas and the more limited oil resources in domestic sedimentary basins, vastly increased use of coal, steadky growth of nuclear power, and research into solar and other energy sources that have potential for the 21st century.

Oil and gas will remain mainstays of U.S. energy supplies for many years, Mitchell said, but the country's potential is greatly underrated because official estimates tend to be low or easily misunderstood.

U.S. Geological Survey estimates of conventionally recoverable undiscovered petrolleum range from 64 billion to 105 billion barrels of oil and 475 trillion to 739 trillion cubic feet of gas.

Tight gas is the industry's name for gas that is difficult to produce because it is entrapped in rock formations with low permeability and porosity. "Several years ago, we avoided those formations, but today we've got the technology and the price incentive to go after tight gas," Mitchell said.

The recent loosening of governmental controls and restrictions–and the resulting record drilling rate–proves that the oil industry is capable of doing a bigger and better job for the nation, he added.

But at a time when the country should be unleashing the industry so that it can further cut the excessive dependence on foreign supplies, Mitchell warned, producers are being threatened by a political movement to tie a windfall profits tax to the deregulation of natural gas prices.

"The gas windfall profits tax would be, pure and simple, an excise tax like that put on oil," he said. "The combined effect of the two taxes would drain away a large part of the money needed to finance a more secure energy future for the nation."

"The government obviously needs money, but there are other options for raising it. It is imperative that we get our energy priorities in order and get on with the job at hand because we cannot expect Saudi Arabia to remain stable indefinitely. And if the Saudi connection is broken before we are in much better shape than we are now, the United States will be in serious trouble, as will all Western Bloc nations."

Mitchell said there should be two immediate goals for the oil and gas industry. "First, we should increase outlays for exploration and production to $100 billion a year by the mid-1980s from the current level of about half that. At the same time, we should boost drilling from about 70,000 wells this year to a sustained rate of 100,000 per year."

Mitchell, a geologist and petroleum engineer by training, heads Mitchell Energy and Development Corp., one of the largest U.S. independent oil and gas firms.

OPEC and oil prices, the year in review

NEW YORK (AP) — Two days before Halloween this year, American consumers received a treat that once would have seemed impossible: A price reduction by most Middle East oil-producing nations.

The oil producers agreed on additional, but smaller, price cuts in December, and oil superpower Saudi Arabia called it a "Christmas gift" for the West.

The actions did not signal an end to the energy crisis, but may mark a turning point in the struggle between the world's major producers and big consumers of petroleum.

For most of the past decade, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries dictated oil prices, amassing fortunes and building enough power to shake Western economies.

But in 1981, OPEC suffered a backlash over price increases.

The 13-member cartel underestimated the ability of Americans and consumers in other oil-importing nations to conserve energy. But conserve they did: gasoline consumption in the United States fell about 5 percent in the first 10 months of 1981, and use of all petroleum products dropped nearly 7 percent.

One consequence was lower prices. The price of gasoline jumped an average of nearly 10 cents a gallon in the first three months of the year to $1.31, but then began slipping. At the pump, regular leaded gasoline averaged about $1.25 a gallon late in the year.

It was not a desire to hurt OPEC that made consumers conserve, but high prices and the fear of spot shortages like those of the 1970s. The damage to OPEC, however, was considerable.

Production by OPEC members slumped to about 20 million barrels a day, off 5 million barrels daily from the start of 1981 and less than levels in more than a decade.

That brought in fewer dollars, and while Saudi Arabia was not hurt economically, many African members were. Nigeria, for example, suffered a steep drop in export earnings.

On Oct. 29, OPEC caved in, approving the first general price reduction in its 21-year history. Saudi Arabia had been charging less than other members, and raised its price to $34 a barrel in exchange for the others' agreement to lower prices to $34.

Besides conservation, other forces worked against OPEC in 1981.

The economic slump in Europe and the United States weakened the demand for oil by industry; an increase in the value of the U.S. dollar made oil more expensive for some nations because oil is sold in U.S. dollars; and an end to price controls on domestic crude in the United States gave U.S. companies an added incentive to produce.

Many analysts believe the most important influence on U.S. oil consumption will prove to be President Reagan's decision Jan. 28 to end the price controls, which dated to August 1971.

Decontrol was followed by increases in oil and gasoline prices that were partly attributed to previous OPEC price boosts. The price of regular leaded gasoline at self-service outlets rose an average of 10 cents per gallon — to $1.31 — between January and March, according to the Lundberg Survey Inc. It later fell to about $1.25 per gallon.

Reagan's action also prompted increased drilling by U.S. companies, exploration analysts believe will push 1981's domestic oil production above that of 1980 — the first year-to-year increase in a decade.

Most major American oil companies posted sharply higher profits from U.S. operations in 1981. But their refining business was a poor performer because of sluggish demand.

Substitute fuel being tested in Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Conoco Inc. branches in Ponca City, Houston and Stamford, Conn., are conducting a long-term experiment to test methanol as a substitute fuel for powering cars.

The Ponca City test vehicles, all 1981 Ford Fairmonts, are modified to burn methanol and will be operated under normal work-day driving conditions by engineers and research specialists.

Should the vehicles stand up under two or three years' use of methanol, Conoco would consider it a prime candidate to replace gasoline in at least some engines, Conoco officials said.

Long known as a racing fuel, methanol has been tested on a limited basis as a gasoline substitute. Conoco is trying it in part of its commercial fleet to determine long-range effect on engines and lubricants.

Methanol is produced from natural gas for industrial uses and generally can be produced at less cost than gasoline. But more important, according to Conoco spokesmen, it can be produced from sources other than petroleum.

One of the other sources is coal, and Conoco spokesman Gary Shults said methano%—nol, which is 99.5 percent pure, is supplied from Du Pont's chemical plant in Deer Park, Texas.

Coquina tests gas well in Eddy County

Coquina Oil Corporation, Midland, has tested high volume gas rates in their No. 1 Vasquez, Eddy County, New Mexico. Rates in excess of 35,000 MCF of gas per day were reported on a drill stem test of the Atoka formation between 11,670 and 11,900 feet. Drilling data suggest three separate reservoirs are present. The Vasquez extends a known producing trend two miles to the south and opens up for Coquina the possibility of two additional offset locations.

Coquina and their partner, Pogo Producing each have 50% working interest in the Vasquez.

Tipperary Corporation, Midland, recently announced a participation in an 816 barrel per day well completion in Grady County, Oklahoma. The well, the Ball A-1, operated by the Cities Service Company, is an extension to the East Chitwood field. The 816 barrel per day test is based on an eight-hour flow of 272 barrels of 50.5 degrees gravity condensate with 1,122,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 11/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,000 p.s.i. The well was tested in the third Bromide and through gross perforated interval of 15,817 to 15,982 feet. Tipperary has a 11.14% working interest in the 640 acre unit.

HOUSTON — Discovery of a new natural gas field in the South Valentine area of LaFourche Parish, Louisiana, was announced recently by Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production. The presence of oil also is indicated.

The well, Tenneco Oil Fee R-1, was drilled to a total depth of 14,674 feet and encountered five Middle Miocene Age pay zones between the 11,500 and 12,200-foot depths with a total of 118 feet of productive sands.

The zone tested flowed at an average rate of 3.176 million cubic feet of gas and 34 barrels of condensate per day on a 16/64-inch choke through perforations between 12,048 and 12,064 feet. Flowing tubing pressure was 3,745 pounds per square inch.

Log evaluation and sidewall core analysis indicate additional gas zones and potential oil zones.

Tenneco plans two development wells in 1982 to offset the discovery. The Fee R-1, owned 100 percent by Tenneco Oil, is on 183,000 acres of fee property that was included in Tenneco's acquisition of La-Terre Co., Inc. in 1974.

Houston — Templeton Energy, Inc. announced the completion of the P1 Perner "31" and the P2 Perner "31" wells, as an extension of the Perner Field, in the Devonian Formation and overlying Strawn Derital, in Crockett, County.

The P1 Perner "31" well flowed 3,229,000 cubic feet of gas per day on an 18/64 choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1.713 psi through perforations in the Perner Field Pay from 8,628 to 8,822 feet.

The P2 Perner "31" well flowed 1,847,000 cubic feet of gas per day through a 12/64 choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,302 psi through perforations in the Perner Field Pay from 8,740 to 9,010 feet.

Through its PARAGON/TEMPLETON 81—B LTD., as co-general partner, and its direct ownership, Templeton Energy, Inc. shares a 25% working interest in both wells. The remaining working interest is owned 25% by the operator, International Oil and Gas and 50% by Jackson Exploration.

At least three additional wells are planned in the 1,488 acre prospect.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Continental Resources Corporation, a subsidiary of J. D. Allen Industries, Inc., recently announced it has acquired leasehold interest in 23 wells to be drilled in Comanche and Caddo Counties, Oklahoma, during the next nine months. Eight of the wells are currently drilling, Shelton said. All 23 wells are located in the immediate vicinity of the Saxon Oil-Quannah Parker discovery and the Harper Oil-Charoristah discovery. The wells will vary in depth from 19,000 to 22,000 feet with Continental Resources's interest ranging from .5895 to 25 percent.

Continental Resources will be the operator of at least one of the wells, the Patterson No. 1, to be drilled in Section 8-5N-10W where a rig from Continental Drilling Company, Inc. will be utilized. Continental Resources has a long-term contract with the latter, Shelton said.

Continental Resources Corporation has headquarters in the Mid-America Tower, Oklahoma City, with field offices in Taloga, Okla., and a Pipe Yard at Weatherfork, Okla. By year's end, the Company will employ six drilling rigs on a full-time basis drilling exclusively in the Anadarko Basin.

MINNEAPOLIS — Dyco Petroleum Corporation recently announced the completion oı an Upper Morrow gas well in the Reydon Field in Roger Mills County, Oklahoma. The Yowell P1-26, located in Section 26 of Township 14 North Range 26 West, drilled to a total depth of 15,205 feet and perforated seven feet of a 31 foot zone of Upper Morrow sand from 15,029 feet to 15,036 feet.

The well tested 4.68 million cubic feet of gas daily on a 10/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 4,680 pounds per square inch. The well is currently shut in awaiting pipeline connection.

Dyco and its 1981-2 Oil and Gas Drilling Program share a 46.80 percent interest in the well. Other joint interest owners in the well include El Paso Natural Gas (30.07%), Francis Oil and Gas, Inc., (7.42%), Commonwealth Royalties, Inc., (2.03%), and Frontier Energy Company (1.09%).

Dyco conducts exploration activities for the oil and gas programs it organizes and manages. The Company is headquartered in Minneapolis, with operations headquarters in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Other operations offices are located in Denver, Colorado and Elk City, Oklahoma.

MINNEAPOLIS — Apache Corporation recently announced it has completed the sixth successful natural gas well the company has drilled in its Merritt prospect since an Apache discovery opened the area a year ago.

The well, Gaines P1-15, Section 15-10N-20W, is located in Beckham County, Oklahoma, approximately four miles southwest of Elk City.

The Gaines P1-15 flowed at the rate of 8 million cubic feet of gas and 264 barrels of condensate per day on a 20/64-inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 2,820 pounds per square inch. Drilled to a depth of 13,300 feet, the well was perforated for testing in the Des Moines Granite Wash formation between 12,605 and 12,709 feet. Approximately 80 additional feet of Granite Wash sands, which were indicated to be potentially productive by electric logs, will not be tested at this time.

Each of the five other wells on Apache's Merritt prospect currently produces between 4 and 5 million cubic feet of gas and 100 to 200 barrels of condensate per day. Reserves totaling more than 106 billion cubic feet of gas and 1.25 million barrels of oil/condensate have been assigned to these five wells on the basis of 320-acre drainage. The Gaines P1-15 is the southernmost well to be completed on the prospect.

Currently, seven additional wells are drilling or awaiting completion on the 8,960-acre leasehold, including the first two infill wells to be drilled on 320-acre drainage on the prospect.

Apache, the operator of the well, and its 1980-1 Oil and gas Program share a 16.8 percent working interest in the Gaines P1-15 well and interest ranging from 8.7 to 47.8 percent in the five other producing wells on the leaseblock. The remaining interests in the Gaines P1-15 are held by: Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Line Co., 37.5 percent; Gulf Oil Corporation, 12.5 percent; and others.

Apache Corporation, an oil and gas program, exploration and production company wth industrial and agricultural operations, is listed on the New York and Midwest stock exchanges.

The King Ranch PB-1 exploratory well on the Kingsville Dome "B" Prospect was drilled to a total depth of 6,963 feet and perforated in the Frio sand between 6,572 and 6,584 feet. The well tested at a daily flow rate of 1.35 million cubic feet of natural gas and 14 barrels of condensate through a 10/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 2,493 psi.

A development well was drilled to a total depth of 6,692 feet and perforated in the Frio sand between 6,351 and 6,361 feet. The well tested at a daily flow rate of 940,000 cubic feet of natural gas and 10 barrels of condensate through a 10/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1,837 psi.

A second exploratory well, King Ranch Trustee PA-1 on the Kingsville Dome "A" Prospect, was drilled to a total depth of 6,842 feet and perforated in the Frio sand between 2,618 and 2,626 feet. The well tested at a daily flow rate of 804,000 cubic feet of natural gas through a 12/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1038 psi.

Omni Exploration and the Omni 1980-2 Drilling Partnership, own a 70% working itnerest in all three wells. Marxco, Inc. has the remaining interest in the wells.

The company said it plans to drill additional development wells on both the Kingsville Dome "B" and Kingsville Dome "A" Prospects.

DENVER — IREX Corp. of Denver, energy subsidiary of Integrated Resources, Inc. of New York, recently announced the completion of three natural gas discovery wells in the Anadarko Basin of northwest Oklahoma in which its IREX 81-A Exploratory Drilling Limited Partnership is participating.

Dudley Brown, IREX vice president of operations, said the discoveries include a Morrow sandstone formation gas well in Woodward County and two Hunton limestone formation gas wells in Woods County.

The Woodward County well, IREX Munson No. 1 in Section 8-24N-20W, flowed at a rate of 3.8 million cubic feet of gas per day with a surface flowing pressure of 2,550 psi from an eight-foot Morrow interval at approximately 7,200 feet. The discovery is one-half mile from nearest production. The IREX 81-A partnership owns a 50 percent working interest in the well.

In Woods County, the Madgel Smithson No. 1 in Section 26-27N-16W flowed 4.8 million cubic feet of gas per day from a 14-foot interval in the Hunton at about 6,500 feet and the Hull No. 1-11 in Section 11-23N-15W flowed at a rate of 2 million cubic feet per day from a seven foot interval in the Hunton at about 7,750 feet. Both wells are a mile from nearest production. The IREX partnership owns a 25 percent working interest in the wells.

Integrated Resources is a publicly-owned financial services company.

2C. AMARILLO — Diamond Shamrock Corporation recently reported the completion of an oil discovery in Campbell County, Wyoming.

The discovery well, designated the Elliott Fee 13-27, flowed 44-degree gravity crude oil at a rate of 479 barrels and 980,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day through a 3/4-inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 100 pounds per square inch.

Drilled to a depth of 9,775 feet, the well was perforated for testing of the Muddy formation between 9,603 and 9,612 feet and 9,636 and 9,641 feet. The oil discovery is located about 12 miles west of Gillette Wyo., in the Powder River Basin.

Diamond Shamrock, the operator, holds 100 percent interest in the well and 1,380 acres in the area. Future drilling on the acreage is being considered.

OXY to delay shale oil project

LOS ANGELES — Occidental Petroleum Corporation and Tenneco Inc. recently announced plans, based on recently completed engineering studies, to delay the development at their joint Cathedral Bluffs shale oil recovery project in Colorado to permit a reassessment of the feasibility of the project in view of current increased construction costs, oil prices and high interest rates.

Further, they said they will not file a revised application for financial assistance with the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation in response to its first round solicitation, which they had planned to do in early January.

Cathedral Bluffs Shale Oil Company, an Occidental-Tenneco partnership, has been developing an underground mine on a 5,094-acre federal lease of the C-b tract in the Piceance Basin of northwestern Colorado.

Eighty-five of the 265 Cathedral Bluffs site operations and support staff are being laid off. However, the companies remain committed to their goal of producing oil from shale on the C-b tract as soon as reasonably practicable.

Outfitting of the shafts and headframes along with environmental monitoring are to continue and engineering alternatives will be examined.

Additionally, Occidental will continue work on the Commerical-sized underground retorts at its nearby Logan Wash site. The retorts are scheduled to be ignited within the next two weeks.

State officials say '82 will be like '81

BY BILL KIDD
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State regulatory officials, looking at 1982, generally see a continuation of 1981 trends for Texas business, with a number of adjustments in rules and regulations expected in an effort to improve conditions.

Banking Commissioner Robert E. Stewart reports state-chartered banks are "still growing like crazy," with an increase in deposits of some $6 billion during the first three quarters of the year.

The "vast majority" of of Texas banks, Stewart says, "are very healthy," with the ones with problems experiencing difficulties "not necessarily created by economic conditions."

Stewart predicts the State Finance Commission, which oversees the operations of the Department of Banking, Savings and Loan Department and Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner, will be more active in 1982.

"We are finding more and more necessity for changing regualtions," Stewart reports, because "rules are going out of date as technology changes."

Also, he comments, "the housing slump is creating the need for new rules for financing ... I think you'll see several changes in methods of real estate financing in the next several months.

Securities commissioner Richard D. Latham sees "no major changes developing" over 1981 noting that the State Securities Board has experienced five consecutive years of new records in volume of securities registered.

"Looking at the last quarter," Latham says, "it looks like 1982 will be another growth year."

There has been a slight drop lately in the number of equity offerings, he reports, "but it hasn't been dramatic."

And even in spite of the declining interest rates, the money market funds are doing fairly well," Latham says.

"We do expect there will be a substantial increase in the number of partnership offerings invovling equipment leasing," he adds. "The new tax laws will be a primary contributer to that."

From the enforcement side, Latham reports, "the primary problem has been and will continue to be fraud in the sale of oil and gas investments ... Approximately 50 percent of all the new investigations that we open involve oil and gas."

Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvin Vandygriff feels "it will be at leat the middle of the year before we hit a break-even position with the present trend," as far as the savings and loan industry is comcerned.

"By the end of the year," he precdicts, "we will be seeing a few profitabel operations."

"I don't see us getting very much relief from Congress or the (Reagan) administration," Vandygriff comments.

Many of the existing regulations at the federal level, he says, were enacted when the savings and loan industry was "highly profitable."

"I think investment powers will be broadminded," he says, with some of the restrictions on associations doing business among themselves being modified.

"We're forced to do business with competitors," Vandygriff argues, adding, "that's not true of the banking industry ..."

Vandyriff also expects a number of mergers — more than in the past — among associations, but sees "no real danger" of lessened competition as a result.

Commissioner Sam Kelly notes the Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner has had an increasing number of applications for licenses to make secondary mortgage loans — a trend he expects to continue, as home-buyers and home-sellers continue to experience problems with high interest rates.

Texas Industrial Commission officials expect 1982 will show continued movement of industry to Texas and expansion of industry within the state.

In 1980, The TIC registered 96 industrial revenue bond issues, with a value of $392 million.

As 1981 ended, the agency had registered 193 bond issues with a value of over $392 million with activity continueing at high levels — apparently in part from concern that the Reagan Admistration may change provisions for such bond issues.

The number of plant locations also was increasing, with Foe Ferran, manager of industrial locations section of TIC reporting that 1981 has seen the TIC involved with 70 locations — compared to 25 in 1980.

Industrial prospects are continuing to contact the agency at an average of two per day — which the TIC calls "incredibly high."

Ferran says that industry should continue to be drawn to Texas in 1982 for the same Reason as in the past — a good business climate (including no corporate profits nor personal income taxes) and abundant supplies of energy, which may be costlier, but are more certain than in some other areas.

Economy trading inflation for unemeployment

BY DAVID W. DEITCH
Hearst Feature Service

The economy is about to trade double-digit inflation for double-digit unemployment. According to Edward Yardeni, an economist with E.F. Hutton, the jobless rate, currently 8.4 percent, will hit 10 percent by February.

Based on jobless rates alone, it appears that the current recession will be the worst of the post-World War II era. Industrial production may be in the process of bottoming out, but the unemployment trend will lag behind the recovery in industrial output.

At Argus Research Corp., a Wall Street investment research organization, analysts are impressed by the number of pay cuts accepted voluntarily by organized labor. "The increased willingness of labor to accept compensation that is tied to company performance in the form of variable wages and/or profit-sharing plans instead of the old method of compensation - annual increases in wages and benefits and variable levels of employment - is something that has not been seen in this country since the years before World War II," says a spokesman for Argus.

Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers anticipates that the Federal Reserve Board will act in response to the climbing unemployment figures. At Chase Manhattan, Philip Braverman looks for another reduction in the discount rate by the end of the year.

There's still lots of sentiment for higher bond prices, however, despite the fear that a 1982 economic recovery could send interest rates up again. With most corporations far from reliquifying their balance sheets, logic says that the Fed's first priority is to save the bond market in order to make the next economic expansion possible.

It's not clear how much additional borrowing the credit markets will have to endure from the failure of corporations to generate needed funds internally. Nonetheless, the windup to the 1981 stock market is likely to produce the usual seasonal year-end rally, analysts say. There's still lots of tax-loss selling going on, but for now, institutions, such as mutual funds, want to avoid the sale of stock that would depress prices and make quarterly reports look bad.

Standard & Poor's forecasts that its index of 500 stocks, now around 125, will trade in a 115-155 range in 1982, with the low registered in the earlier part of the year and the high in the closing months.

As long as the bond market remains on a stable track, it doesn't appear that Wall Street - and the Reagan Administraton - will be too concerned about the huge federal budget deficits: The argument that "deficits don't count" is credible only in the context of firm financial markets.

New pizza restaurant in Midland

Pinocchio's Pizza, Inc., with three stores in Lubbock and one in Odessa, recently opened its newest Pizza Restaurant in San Miguel Shopping Center in Midland. The relatively young (three-year-old) chain specializes in thick, deep-dish Italian Pizza.

Federal Express station growing

MEMPHIS — The Federal Express Corporation station serving the Midland-Odessa areas showed substantial growth in 1981.

The station is currently averaging 251 inbound and 217 outbound shipments daily, compared with 95 inbound and 43 outbound average daily shipments a year ago.

There are now 11 employees and 7 radio-equipped vans serving the Midland-Odessa area, compared with 6 employees and 3 vans a year ago.

Federal Express, Memphis, specializes in door-to-door, nationwide, overnight transportation of small packages and documents. It serves 244 major markets and 14,000 communities with 60 jet aircraft and 2,500 radio-equipped vans. The company handles more than 125,000 shipments through its system nightly.

Dallas firm supports peace effort

DALLAS (SWN) — E-Systems, Inc. has been awarded a contract to provide operations and maintenance support services for the Multinational Force and Observers (MFO), which is an international organization responsible for supervising the Egyptian-Israeli Peace Treaty. The MFO will be responsible for two bases and a series of remote sites located in the eastern one-third of the Sinai Peninsula. Approximately 3,000 personnel will be located in the Sinai MFO operations.

E-Systems Greenville Division will supply under this contract a civilian contingent of approximately 450 personnel to be responsible for the opertion of a mess hall, power plants, water and sewerage treatment plants, fire protection equipment, post exchanges, theatres, libraries, recreational facilities, laundry and dry cleaning plants, and such personal services as barber, shoe repair and tailoring shops. In addition, E-Systems will establish and operate support offices in both Tel Aviv and Cairo.

Under terms of the contract, E-Systems will provide an advance group of personnel with responsibility of mininum support to the MFO by Jan. 25, 1982. E-Systems will have most personnel in place by March 10, 1982 and will be fully operational by April 24, 1982.

Since January 1976, E-Systems has been providing a similar effort for the U.S. Sinai Field Mission (SFM). The SFM's responsibility for verifying the Egyptian and Israeli adherence to the terms of the treaty in designated areas of the western two-thirds of the Sinai will end of April 25, 1982, and at that time the MFO will assume their role in the eastern one-third of the Sinai.

Dallas-based E-Systems (NYSE-ESY) is a worldwide developer and producer of high-technology products and systems used in electronic warfare, command, control, communications, guidance, navigation and data handling. The company has eight divisions and two wholly-owned subsidiaries.

Your electricity will cost more in 1982 mainly because the fuel to make it will cost more.

In 1982, we'll have to pay more for the fuels used to produce your electricity. Partly, this is because another contract for low-cost natural gas fuel is expiring. But mainly it's because the price of all fuel continues to rise.

We spent about $200 million in 1980 for fuel to make your electricity. In 1981, the fuel bill will be about $400 million. And in 1982, we estimate we'll have to spend $640 million for fuel.

Approximate Cost of Fuel

Year	Fuel cost paid by Texas Electric	Your average annual fuel cost per kilowatt hour
1980	$200 million	1 cent
1981	$400 million	2 cents
1982*	$640 million	3 cents

*Estimated

We buy all our fuels at the lowest price available. We charge our customers exactly what we have to pay for fuel. And each month, we show on the bill the "fuel" part of the total cost of electricity.

At Texas Electric, we're trying to hold down fuel costs by making as much electricity as possible in plants built to use lignite coal — a cheaper fuel. And we're building a plant to use uranium, the lowest priced fuel available to us.

You can help hold down your electric bill by conserving at home. To learn how, please call us.

Diversifying Midland

It truly was a disappointment to learn this week that Pittsburgh Plate Glass would not be building its planned fiberglass manufacturing plant here as earlier announced. The facility would have added another dimension to the city's economy, already strongly based on the booming oil industry.

Perhaps most disturbing in the announcement by the Midland Chamber of Commerce, though, was the fact that this is the second major "diversification" company to head elsewhere. The first, of course, was the Levi Strauss jeans manufacturing plant which was already in operation here. Pittsburgh Plate Glass had acquired land in Midland Industrial Park, but had never reached the point of breaking ground.

Both those companies marked major steps forward for Midland's business economy when they were acquired. Everyone knows, of course, that Midland's economy primarily is based on oil, with heavy ranching interests. Most Midlanders are proud of our oil heritage and our present day role in helping the nation meet its energy needs.

But any economist will tell you that financially sound communities derive much of their economic stability from diversification of industry. It's risky to put all your eggs in one basket, so to speak. Particularly when that one basket is susceptible to economic variations.

And, of course, we know we're dealing with a depletable resource. So if Midland is to continue to grow and prosper, in time its economy must be diversified.

Midland is facing a number of problems that must be addressed and resolved before the future economic picture can be stabilized. The city is experiencing phenomenal growth that is generating problems for all Midlanders. There isn't enough housing to go around and what exists is expensive. There are plenty of jobs available here, but a large percentage of them are in highly specialized fields, requiring certain skills of the applicants. Living costs in Midland are pushed upward because of the skills required of workers and the influx of workers being brought in by companies.

And to top it all off, competition for workers in Midland is so great that some companies already existing here or thinking of relocating to Midland find the intertwined problems simply too overwhelming.

The overall problem is complex with no ready solutions in sight. Diversifying Midland's economy is essential for future economic stability, but there's little reason to even try to attract new companies to the city before some of the staggering problems now facing local businesses are resolved. We need more affordable housing for workers diverse companies would employ, for one thing.

While keeping the need for diversification ever present in our minds, some of the problems facing Midland's current business community must be addressed as quickly as possible.

A net for Congress

After a year of sending bad news to most government departments in the form of unprecedented budget cuts, members of Congress assumed correctly that this was not the time to raise their own pay. It will remain at $60,662.50 for at least another year.

But don't sell Congress short. Where there's a will there's a way, and our senators and representatives did not leave Washington for the holidays without voting to make their own Christmas a little merrier.

First, they amended the tax laws to eliminate the $3,000 ceiling on the deduction they can claim for the expense of maintaining a home in Washington. It is estimated this will save them $10,000 a year or more in income taxes.

Then there is the matter of fees that members of Congress collect for outside speaking engagements. A few years ago, at the high tide of ethical sensitivity after Watergate, the two houses adopted limitations on what their members could earn in this manner.

Now the House and Senate have had second thoughts. House members voted to raise their limit on fees and honoraria from $9,000 to $18,000. The Senate voted to eliminate its $25,000 ceiling on outside income altogether.

In cutting welfare programs, Congress was supposed to provide a "safety net" for the truly needy. It can't compare with the one Congress provided for itself.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Japan's trade practices undermine Americans

WASHINGTON — Forty years after the attack on Pearl Harbor, the United States has become "a virtual economic colony" of Japan, according to a report by the staff of Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y.

Jack Anderson

The Japanese sell us cars and television sets, while our exports to Japan consist largely of agricultural products and other raw materials. This is the classic situation of a colonial relationship.

How did this happen?

For one thing, Japan's economy has been spared the huge outlay for military expenditures that the United States has had to shoulder in the years since the Japanese Empire was defeated. The American taxpayers have taken the defense burden off the backs of the Japanese.

For another thing, Japanese workers are paid wages that are abysmal by American standards. A Japanese manufacturer can produce goods at a fraction of the cost that General Motors or RCA must face.

But there's another reason why the United States has been getting the short end of the stick in its competition with the erstwhile enemy: Simply put, the Japanese don't play fair.

Japanese officials were told as much by the American delegation at a recent round of trade talks in Tokyo. In the past, such deliberations had dwelled primarily on the U.S. balance-of-trade deficit with Japan. Direct discussion of Japan's unfair trade practices by the American officials was intended as a signal that the Reagan administration plans to "get tough" with the Japanese unless they ease their restrictions.

Basically, what's happening is that Japan takes advantage of our relatively relaxed import policies for its goods, while throwing up often insurmountable barriers to American businessmen trying to sell their products to Japanese customers.

Beef is just one example. The price of top-grade sirloin steak in the United States last year averaged $3.95 a pound. In Japan, steak of equal quality was going for $17.27 a pound. Clearly, there should be a market for American beef in Japan.

"We are convinced," says Agriculture Secretary John Block, "that the liberalization of Japan's restrictions on the supply of imported beef would result in lower prices and increased demand to the benefit of Japan's (beef) producers and consumers alike."

But the Japanese government keeps the amount of imported beef low — and the price to Japanese consumers sky-high.

In addition to the import quotas imposed on American agricultural products, the Japanese apply health standards so stringent as to border on the absurd in some cases.

For example, the representative of a U.S. food products manufacturer asked his company to ship him a case of newly designed salad-dressing bottles to show to potential Japanese buyers. Japanese customs officials refused to allow the shipment in, because the bottles contained salad dressing that had not received import approval under the sanitation laws.

Fair enough. It was the manufacturer's error. But the representative explained that it was only the bottles he wanted to bring in, and he offered to pour out the contents in the presence of customs officials. Nothing doing: The shipment had to be returned to the United States.

Even more frustrating for American businessmen than sheer bureaucratic obstinacy is what might be called the Japanese customs officials' penchant for "cute tricks" — changing the import rules in an arbitrary and seemingly capricious way to discourage U.S. imports. There is no doubt in the minds of the victimized businessmen that these costly whims are the result of deliberate Japanese government policy.

Consider a couple of outrageous examples:

— A U.S. manufacturer introduced a tabletop electric griddle to Japan. It was something new and obviously attractive to Japanese housewives: The American firm sold 6,000 units the first year.

But the very success of the Yankee trader was what did him in. Japanese electric products makers — caught without a comparable item in their inventories — complained to the government. Result: New standards for temperature controls on electric griddles were imposed. They were set two degrees below the capability of the American griddle.

The popular U.S. import was thus shut out of what looked like a lucrative market. It was a clever delaying tactic. By the time the American manufacturer had redesigned his product to meet the new standard, Japanese manufacturers had developed their own griddles. The market was flooded with electric griddles made in Japan.

— A Japanese import firm ordered a sample shipment of American apple butter. Customs officials passed it under the regulations applying to jams and jellies.

But when the importer ordered a second, larger shipment, Customs classified the apple butter as a fruit paste puree. As such, it was subject to an import quota. Because the importer had no prior quota allocation to work from, the apple butter was barred.

My associate Tony Capaccio found another "cute trick" in Commerce Department files. It involved another change of rules in the middle of the game — to the detriment of the American team.

An American company's potato chips, made from reconstituted dehydrated potatoes, were initially put by Japanese customs officials in the category of "vegetable, prepared or preserved." This involved a 16 percent tariff.

But once the company began to ship significant quantities of its potato chips into Japan, Customs had second thoughts. The chips were reclassified as "pastry, biscuits, cakes and other fine baker's wares." That made the import duty a staggering 35 percent.

The Japanese, who have captured 25 percent of the U.S. car market, take pains to see that American cars don't make a dent in Japan. They slap on all sorts of added costs — taxes, port handling fees, "prep" costs and other items that artificially raise the prices of U.S. cars.

For example, Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., told my reporter Monica McKenna, a Ford Escort that sells for $7,400 in this country costs $11,700 in Japan — and only about $200 of this is transportation charges.

ART BUCHWALD

There's no business like CIA business!

One of the things the CIA does is run secret businesses known as proprietaries, to provide covers for agents to "wash" money for covert operations and for other clandestine operations.

Art Buchwald

Up until recently, these businesses have been very successful, but lately many of them have been losing money. So "the Company" decided to call everyone back to Langley, Va., to see what was going wrong.

The Director of Covert Business Operations was in a foul temper.

He addressed the CIA agents who were charged with running the business covers.

"This is the worst year we've ever had," he said. "Our gross sales are down by 20 percent, and the CIA can no longer eat your losses. Now what the hell is going on?"

The agent, whose cover was president of the "Deutchsland Music Box Company, said, "It's the fault of the Hong Kong station. They stole our designs and they're flooding the U.S. market with cheap imitations. I make the best music boxes in the world, but I can't compete on price."

"Isn't that tough?" the agent from Hong Kong, whose cover was chairman of the Kowloon Toy Company, said. "If you can't compete, then get out of the music box business. I'm not making a dime on my boxes ever since the Taiwan CIA Company started to undercut us."

The director said, "Why does everyone have to make music boxes? Can't you come up with a new product like the Barbie doll?"

The agent running the South Korean Novelty Company said, "We put out a Nancy and Ronnie Doll for Christmas and it laid a bomb."

The director looked over his computer printouts. "What happened to you, Danfield? It says here your New Delhi Exporting Company dropped $2 million in the last quarter."

"That wasn't my fault. I sent one million madras welcome mats through Donnegger's shipping company in Bombay, and his stupid people unloaded them in Pakistan. Anyone here ever try to sell a Made in India welcome mat in Pakistan?"

Donnegger said, "Your company got the invoices all screwed up. You had the yak butter going to the United States and the welcome mats going to Pakistan. We're not mind readers."

"Oh, shut up," the director said. "Let's get to you, Brinkley. How do you explain the fact you still have 200,000 Lapland ski boots in your warehouse in Helsinki?"

"I had an order from Harrod's in London for the whole lot, when the KGB's Finlandia Sporting Goods Company got wind of it, and made Harrod's an offer they couldn't refuse. I've asked covert operations to burn down the Finlandia factory three times, but they keep ignoring my request. How can I run a clandestine business if our people won't get tough with the competition?"

The director said, "I'll talk to the arson people later. Now we get to Biberman. I have a report that you used CIA covert funds to cover up your losses from the Mediterranean Fruit Fly Company."

"I'm suing Jerry Brown and the State of California. As soon as I win the case, I'll replace the money. I can prove every fruit fly we sent them was sterile."

The director said, "Biberman, you wouldn't know a sterile fruit fly from a gypsy moth. I see from this readout the only one who made a profit this year for 'The Company' was Tablestone. Let him tell the rest of you dunderheads how he did it."

"He isn't here, sir. He resigned last month and went into business for himself."

"What kind of business?"

"Selling submachine guns, bombs and poison gas canisters to the Libyans. He said that as far as business was concerned the CIA didn't offer him a future, and he'd rather strike out on his own."

"Where is he getting all his stuff?"

"The same people we get it from, sir."

"Do you mean to say he is telling people he is still working for the CIA?"

"No, just the opposite. He keeps telling them he isn't. But the more he insists he has nothing to do with us, the more our suppliers believe he does."

The director said, "You have to hand it to Tablestone. He always had a talent for making a buck. I wish I had 100 more like him."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Dec. 27; the 361st day of 1981. There are four days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 27, 1927, Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Soviet Communist Party following a victory by Joseph Stalin's faction in the All-Union Congress.

On this date:

In 1945, the foreign ministers of Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union, meeting in Moscow, called for a provisional democratic government in Korea.

In 1972, Australia ended its involvement in the Vietnam War.

In 1974, 41 people were killed in a coal mine explosion and fire in northern France.

And in 1979, the Carter administration called on foreign nations to speak out against the Soviet military buildup in Afghanistan.

Thought For Today: "You must be poor to know the luxury of giving." George Eliot, British novelist, 1819-1880.

GEORGE F. WILL

There is a point to which way your pie is pointing!

WASHINGTON — A lady of my acquaintance, a resident of the sacred central region of the Great State (Illinois), has a noble dislike. This lady, endowed with the spiritedness for which that chosen race of Illini is renowned, dislikes having a piece of pie placed in front of her by a waiter who does not take care that the point of the wedge is pointing at her.

George F. Will

In an age when there is altogether too much tolerance going around, I welcome almost anyone saying about almost anything: "Fie! I shall brook no more!" It is, perhaps a small matter to have to adjust one's pie to correct a waiter's carelessness, but life is a steady drizzle of small matters, so such matters matter.

Furthermore, a large issue lurks here. After many months of reflection, I believe the lady's point is of world-historic importance. Making sure your piece of pie points at you is, I now see, a moral imperative, indifference to which can cause the social order to crumble like, well, pie crust. The lady's passion about the placement of pieces of pie is, I warrant, the linchpin of civilization because it concerns the prerequisite for all good things. The prerequisite is in short supply. It is the discipline that enables people to defer gratifications.

A piece of pie worth eating at all is especially worth eating for its crust. The principal concentration of crust is at the other end from the point. The appellation "flaky," although not coveted by the many people who have earned it, is, I believe, the encomium preferred by the better class of pie crusts. In any case, the rapture that is supposed to attend the eating of a piece of pie is supposed to peak with the eating of the crust.

Mark my words: Woe unto a society in which people promiscuously eat the crust first. It is a society susceptible to ungovernable lusts, and unable to limit government social spending to make possible adequate defense spending. It is a society that lives off its seed corn, consuming too much and saving and investing too little. It is a society rather like ours.

Furthermore, it is a society in which the institution of marriage is in increasing disrepair, and relations between parents and their offspring are even more difficult than necessary. Yes, these things, too, are related to the point-of-the-pie-wedge principle.

I did not fully understand the point about the point of a piece of pie until I read a remarkable book, "The Road Less Traveled" by M. Scott Peck, a psychiatrist whose primary interest is the psychology of love. Peck's thesis is that our romantic notion of love obscures — at great cost — the truth.

The truth is that love, including proper parenting, is not spontaneous and easy; it is complicated and effortful. Love is not an overwhelming sensation; it is not a feeling, but a sustained pattern of action. It is volitional rather than emotional. It is a thoughtful decision, the will to exert one's self to achieve the proper goal of life, which is nurturing one's own and others' spiritual growth. "Love," says Peck, "is always either work or courage....The essence of nonlove is laziness."

The destructive myth that love, between adults or between adults and children, is a simple, effortless wellingup of a passion leaves people unprepared for life's most important stresses. It suggests that what is arduous is defective, and that gratifications deferred are gratifications unattainable.

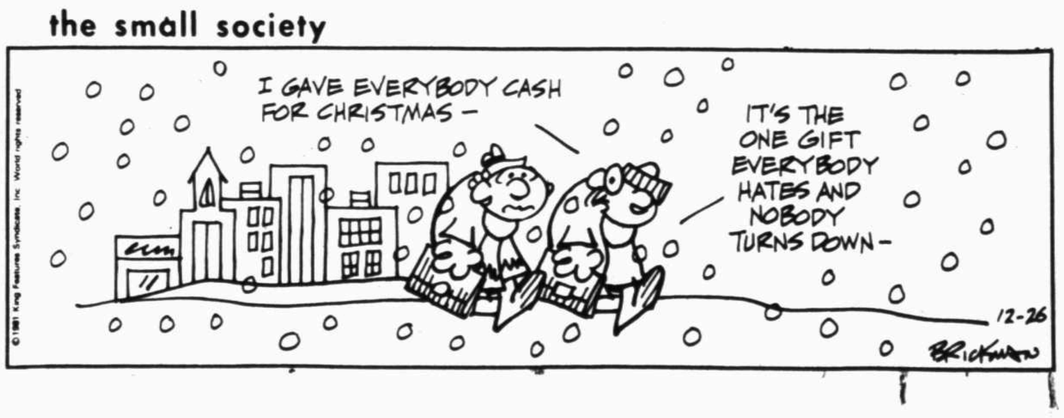

The ability to defer gratification is, as Peck says, an attribute of maturity. It is possible that this nation is becoming less mature as it grows older.

It has been said that although some books are undeservedly forgotten, no book is undeservedly remembered. That was, of course, said by an author (W.H. Auden), but it contains much truth. When first published, Peck's book sold slowly. It was no threat to elbow its way in among the books about "101 Uses for a Dead Preppy" and "How to Compute Your Taxes on a Rubik's Cube" that clog the best-seller lists and refute the notion that mass literacy is desirable. But word-of-mouth has made it a brisk seller and proof of the power of quality to prevail, at least a bit, sometimes.

Peck's book, properly understood, explains why one New Year's resolution, properly kept in all its implications, is sufficient. Resolve to eat every piece of the pie of life properly, from the point to the crust.

Officials will find state in pretty good shape

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Taking inventory is a year-end activity for many folks, and a lot of Texas politicians will be doing the same thing.

So will state officials, and it appears they will find the State in pretty good shape.

Unlike many states, Texas goes into 1982 with enough money to pay its bills, thanks to oil and gas revenues and a relatively healthy — compared to other areas — economy which has continued to provide sales tax revenues, the mainstay of the State's taxing structure.

State government in Texas is bound, under constitutional provisions, to finance itself on a pay-as-you-go basis, so there was never any possiblity of a deficit — but there is comfort for the taxpayers in the fact that the Legislature managed to bring Texas into another biennium without a tax increase at the State level.

Politicians are arguing, however, on whether, or to what extent, taxes may have been shifted to the local level during the continuing battle over property tax reform.

For State officials and politicians, perhaps the most critical aspect of 1982 is that it will be an election year — with all statewide elected officials facing the voters.

Gov. Bill Clements' attempt to return for another four years has to be rated as the premier statewide race, because of his status as the Republican's first victor in the gubernatorial sweepstakes in over a century.

Clements' win marked the emergence of Texas as a two-party state; his re-election would strengthen and help secure the GOP's gains.

But Clements is likely to find some liabilities as well as assets among his personal inventory.

Clements has a number of pluses in his re-election bid, including access to large amounts of funds, legislative victories on the law-and-order front, and continued voter acceptance — although polls indicate his popularity may have waned in recent months.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Part of that slippage, some observers believe, is due to the souring economic conditions, which have continued under the Reagan Administration — an administration with which Clements has allied himself closely.

So, just as Clements ran against the Carter Administration in 1978, he may find himself running with the Reagan Administration in 1982.

Another irony which observers have noted is that Clements' success has encouraged many other Republicans to make races in 1982 — which could have the result of causing Democratic candidates to work harder to get out their supporters, producing a larger vote against Clements.

Still, at the moment, Clements' balance sheet would seem to be definitely in the black.

For those challenging Clements, the inventorying may be a bit simpler — and perhaps a bit discouraging.

Sen. Payton McKnight, Tyler, has an early start, financial backing, and the image of a mainstream, moderate-conservative Democrat to his credit (and, of course, shares the oilman-businessman label with Clements).

But McKnight still isn't that well known in some parts of Texas, and will have to do a lot of convincing to get folks to put him into the Governor's Mansion.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong has charm and experience as a statewide candidate, but may have a tough time raising the money he needs — although Armstrong thinks the campaign won't require as much money as has been suggested by some candidates.

Attorney General Mark White insists his balance sheet is more positive than some writers have reported it.

White also has experience with statewide campaigning, winning his primary effort against former Speaker Price Daniel Jr. after most people had assumed Daniel would win against the political novice.

White's chances now are being discounted on the basis that he, too, will find it difficult to raise money, and that the attorney general's office has experienced too many defeats on too many major cases (that, some argue, is why White decided not to seek re-election.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's incumbency and support of much of the law-and-order legislation look like both assets and liabilities for him in his race with GOP challenger George Strake, who is trying hard to label Hobby as a "liberal" — which looks almost as odd on Hobby as it does on Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (despite efforts by Walter Mangden and Jim Collins to so describe the incumbent).

And there are lots of other folks across the state figuring out their assets and liabilities in a race for political office — enough so that it would appear that in 1982, voters will find themselves being looked upon as very valuable commodities indeed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Support patriots

To The Editor:

During the holiday season, it is easy for us to become complacent about our freedoms and priviledges which have been attained through negotiation, demonstration, and sadly, bloodshed.

Never in modern times, has the right to organize and operate an independent union been so severely threatened as in Poland. I, for one, believe we should support our patriots politically, morally and financially. Thus far, Polish workers have set fine examples for us to follow.

This is not an abstract event which is taking place, but one which will have far reaching consequences on the world.

While you are celebrating the holidays, remember those who are fighting and dying for rights we have already obtained. After all, when was the last time someone pointed a gun at you and told you; 'work or be shot'?...

Protests clubbing

To The Editor:

This letter is in response to your article Sunday, Dec. 20, 1981 on page 6A — Idaho Rabbit Killing Continues. I would like to say I can understand that this situation needed to be controlled. I protest how it was done. I do not feel anything deserves to be clubbed to death!

I guess these people learned how to do this from the Seal Clubbers! To permit young children to be a part of this type of slaughter is appalling! The excuse for not shooting these rabbits also is stomach turning. This appeared to be a family get together. What are we coming to in this society?

I have written to the Humane Society of the U.S. 2100 L Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037 to protest this action and urge you to do so too if you really care about animal life! We must be humane.

Without proof

To The Editor:

The editorial editor of The Midland Reporter-Telegram and the ayatollah have a lot in common. The Midland Reporter's editor has made wild editorial charges about Libyan hit squads, unprofessionally, without any responsible proof, in the same manner the Iranian ayatollah is making charges of super powers attacking Iran's clergy.

KINGSBURY-SMITH

Time is not likely to heal the breach in relations between Reagan, Begin

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Time will heal the worst rift in Israeli-American relations that has occurred since the U.S.-sponsored creation of the Jewish state in 1948.

Time is not likely, however, to heal the breach in personal relations between President Reagan and Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Officially, the administration is striving to cool the crisis by calling for an end to rhetorical attacks and urging that the leadership in both countries concentrate on restoring harmonious relations.

A working relationship will certainly continue, but it will lack the warm friendliness that marked Prime Minister Begin's first meeting with President Reagan last September. Begin, following that White House meeting, said it had been held "in the warmest atmosphere I have ever enjoyed." The only warmth he is likely to experience in his next meeting with the president, if there is one, will be the Irishman's temper.

A source close to the president said he was deeply hurt by the personal vindictiveness of Begin's blast against his administration in particular and the United States in general. This source doubted that the president will ever again trust Begin, or display genuine personal friendliness toward him.

The president was said to be incensed at Begin's charge that the Reagan administration was treating Israel like a "vassal state," and spreading anti-Semitic progaganda.

The Israeli leader's critical references to American military actions in World War II and the Vietnam war were considered by some administration officials to be hardly appropriate coming from the head of a country whose existence is primarily dependent on American military and financial aid.

Begin was responding to administration statements deploring the loss of civilian life caused by Israel raids against Palestine Arab guerrilla forces in the Lebanon. In what was clearly a reference to the atomic bombing of Japan, the massive aerial raids on Nazi Germany and the bombing and shelling of communist-held areas of Vietnam, Begin said the U.S. government had no right to preach to Israel regarding civilian loss of life because "we have read the history of World War II" and "the history of the Vietnam War" and "we know what happened to civilians when you took action against the enemy."

While the anti-American tone of these remarks was resented in Washington, what caused more concern to administration officials was the fear that the ailing Begin may be bent on taking reckless moves to try to strengthen the security of Israel's northern frontiers before he leaves political life.

He has had several heart attacks. He is now temporarily confined to a wheel chair because of a broken hip. He has said he intends to retire at 70, less than 18 months hence. He has also said his last ambition is to consolidate Israel's hold on territory he considers necessary for its security and part of its biblical homeland.

His establishment of Jewish settlements on the West Bank of the Jordan river and in the Arab sector of Jerusalem was seen as part of this determination. So was his annexation of the Golan Heights. He is also believed eager to occupy southern Lebanon up to the Litani River, which he is known to consider the natural boundary of northern Israel. His health and his narrow victory in the last elections may have led him to think he must move fast.

One of the reasons for the Reagan administration's drastic reaction to Begin's annexation of the Golan Heights was the fear that if he was allowed to get away with that, his next move might be to invade southern Lebanon to wipe out the Palestine Arab forces there and extend Israel's control to the Litani River.

He has now given assurances to Secretary of State Alexander Haig that he will not "initiate a war" in Lebanon. He once said he would not annex the Golan Heights because "you don't annex land that belongs to you."

David Ben-Gurion, one of the founders of Israel, wrote a friend before he died that if Begin ever came to power he would "bring about the ruin of the state or, at the very least, make it an abomination."

Chinese taking sides on development strategy

Los Angeles Times

PEKING — The Chinese Communist Party's policy-making Central Committee declared in a major reversal Friday that the old Maoist principle of putting "politics in command" of industry was correct. The declaration brings into the open a bitter fight within the leadership over the country's development strategy.

In a clear attack on Premier Zhao Ziyang, an advocate of modern, pragmatic management and increasing use of economic incentives, the Central Committee said that ideological and political motivation should again be stressed and the current "laxness in ideological and political work" ended.

The Central Committee held up as a model for all industry the Daqing oilfield in Northeast China — although it had severely criticized itself only 15 months ago for emphasizing politics rather than scientific planning and management and pledged to correct these "leftist errors."

Daqing, which the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung had first made a model for Chinese industry in 1964 because of its reliance of the workers' mass enthusiasm, had not been mentioned positively in more than two years, and the revival of the slogan "in industry learn from Daqing" has great political meaning here.

Hua Guofeng, while premier and party chairman in 1977, had organized a national industrial conference on "learning from Daqing" as the basis for China's economic development and his call for "10 more Daqings" in the petroleum industry typified the plans for massive projects laid down under his leadership then.

When Hua was ousted in September, 1980, and Zhao installed, these plans were scrapped, and the whole strategy criticized as "leftist" and unworkable. This criticism was repeated last June when Hua was replaced as party chairman.

But the Central Committee said Friday that "the main trend of the movement to learn from Daqing was good," according to the official New China News Agency.

In the future, the order said, the party "should give priority to ideological, political work, and particular efforts should be made to educate and help young workers." Special attention should be paid so that workers subordinate their interests to those of the state and put long-term interests ahead of immediate gains, the committee circular reportedly said.

The New China News Agency gave few reasons for the order, nor did it say whether a long-expected meeting of the party leadership had begun to discuss economic and ideological questions.

The official press had not reported any move to revive the Daqing slogan and its philosophy, and it continued on Friday to emphasize the 10 basic principles Zhao had proposed ony three weeks ago for China's future development, which would take economic incentives — not ideology — as the motor of growth.

In its 1980 self-criticism, the Daqing oilfield had described as "leftist errors" its past reliance on mass enthusiasm rather than careful scientific planning, on political rallies rather than systematic problem-solving discussions, on using "sea of people" and "swarm of bees" tactics rather than step-by-step development.

Wang Sumin, director of the Daqing Petroleum Administration, said that some of the oilfield's practices were perhaps correct when the oilfield was being developed in the early 1960s but that many no longer were. Daqing should not, Wang declared, be used as a national model for all industry and needed to work hard to correct its "leftist tendencies."

But the Central Committee said Friday that Daqing should still be a model here. "There should be no more laxness in ideological and political work."

From the report of the New China News Agency, it was unclear whether the directive was aimed at speeding industrial development, which has slowed in the past year, or at tightening political and labor discipline of workers, particularly of young workers, whose lack of motivation and outright alienation have greatly concerned the leadership.

POSITIVE THINKING

Have faith in yourself

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

He was one of the most unforgettable characters I have encountered in life. A Syracuse banker told me he was the wisest business man he had ever known. A clergyman cited him as the best example he had ever seen of a down-to-earth, practical religious man.

His name was Harlowe B. Andrews and he headed Andrews Brothers, wholesale grocers, who did business on Salina Street, Syracuse, N.Y., many years ago. He was a modern-thinking man, even that far back, and it is said he operated the first supermarket in the country, bringing in perishable goods by fast express train from California.

He drove a magnificent team of fast horses down James Street, breaking whatever speed limits they had in those days. And he won many a horse race on ice when Onondaga Lake was frozen in those cold up-state winters.

Brother Andrews, as he was called due to his religious predilections, was president of the local Rescue Mission. He became so interested in saving souls that he turned his business over to his brother so he could give full time to Christian work. But a fortune was lost, so Brother Andrews went back and made the money over again. He retired a second time to the mission work and again a fortune was lost. This time brother Andrews went back, took control of the business and kept the fortune.

I never knew a man who had a more acutely developed gift for making money. In fact, I hung around with him for a long time hoping to acquire his secret, but never did get the hang of it.

Brother Andrews also had a flair for invention. He had a big family and noticed the enormous effort required in washing and drying dishes three times daily. There was no such thing as an automatic dishwasher at the time, but Brother Andrews figured out one for himself. It really worked, although his wife complained that he broke most of her dishes in his experiments. It is said that some of his ideas were incorporated in the subsequent development of this piece of household equipment.

I was Brother Andrews' pastor, young and unmarried at the time. But I did have a young lady and one day I took her to see my elderly friend at his farm in Tully Valley. As we walked with him in his garden, he picked a peapod in which nestled two peas and he pointd out to us that "all nature goes in pairs" — a none-too-veiled hint that we should get married. We did that quite soon, to Brother Andrews' delight.

I had a problem one time about raising money for the church and went to consult Brother Andrews about it. I told him I didn't think I could raise that amount of money. He said "If you think you can't, you can't; but if you think you can, you can. So, start thinking positively."

Then he declared that one should never begin any undertaking without praying about it and he directed me to get down on my knees and he did the same. I shall never forget that prayer of his. It is printed on my memory as though it were yesterday, and it has been all of 40 years.

"Dear Lord, this young man needs to be a positive thinker. He is dedicated to Your work but his faith is weak. He needs money for Your church but doesn't know how to get it, and, in fact, doesn't believe that he can raise what's needed. Now if he will start having some faith I will give him five thousand dollars. Amen."

"But," I asked in bewilderment and still negative, "where will we get the rest of it?"

"Why, you just got that five thousand — by praying for it," he answered with a grin. He then proceeded to make a list of men who should give. "They've got it, that I know. So go to see them and show some enthusiasm; think positively, have faith, believe in your cause and in yourself and they will come through." And he added, "Tell them what I'm doing. That should shame them into doing no less."

Activated by his faith and sensing his canny approach, I made the calls. We went over the top and raised the money.

Over the years I have often heard the voice of my wise old friend saying, "You can if you think you can." And how right he was.

Reagan's chances for making inroads against inflation depend on labor

By ROBERT RENO
Newsday

NEW YORK - President Reagan's chances for making some real and permanent inroads against inflation next year depend to a large extent on the mood of organized labor.

Considering the enemies that Reagan has already made in labor's ranks, this might seem to be a particularly unhappy position for a President who desperately needs to make a credible record in the war on inflation to offset his poor showing on unemployment and on reducing the federal deficit.

Yet there is every indication that labor may be moderating its wage demands for the coming year, even though it is doing so out of no desire to save the President.

Yale's James Tobin, the 1981 Nobel laureate in economics, suggests that the inflation outlook in the United States is better now than it has been for a long time for just this reason.

"If you want to look for a silver lining in this recession, it is that the inflation outlook is pretty good, comparatively speaking," he says.

"We've had good luck. There've been no big shocks in oil prices. And next year, given that the strong unions are in the weak industries, we may get more give in wage inflation than we usually get in times of recession."

Tobin argues that figures which have shown an apparent reduction in the inflation rate this year have been illusory.

"To the extent that it hasn't yet shown up in wage disinflation, which is the core of the ongoing inflation rate, it is a mirage," he says. "Relief from oil-price inflation isn't something that you can keep counting on."

Real progress against inflation, he says, is not measured in temporarily lower oil prices or in cyclically lower food prices but in concrete evidence that workers are settling for less.

"If we get a 2-percentage-point reduction in wage inflation in 1982, that will be real progress," says Tobin. "We're paying a high price for it with this recession, however."

The first major contract to expire next year is between the petroleum refiners and the Oil, Chemical & Atomic Workers. Recent layoffs in this industry make it unlikely that the union will be making excessive wage demands.

On April 1, the contract covering 300,000 Teamster truck drivers expires. A moderate settlement is expected here also because of high unemployment among drivers.

The United Auto Workers contract covering 620,000 Ford, General Motors and Chrysler workers expires Sept. 15. With the Big 3 fighting for survival against Japanese imports, the UAW is hardly in a mood to strike for an inflationary wage settlement. There is even talk of the union accepting a temporary wage freeze.

It is these and other major labor contracts which are likely to set nationwide patterns of wage increases in 1982.

Unions in the airline, rubber, auto and steel industries have made various concessions, including actual wage reductions, which show a disposition on the part of labor to assure that the companies they deal with survive.

This is a sharp reversal in mood of labor, which until this summer had been demanding and getting higher and higher wage settlements. In 1980, major union wage settlements carried average first-year wage increases of 9.5 percent.

New teller stations added at FNB

The First National Bank of Midland announced recently the addition of four new teller stations at the Motor Bank located at the intersection of Colorado Street and Tennessee Avenue.

The teller stations will be self-contained units which use a newly constructed loop off Tennessee Avenue for entrance and exit. The original 19 lanes will still enter from Colorado Street for personal transactions and from Loraine Street for commercial transactions, but all will exit to Loraine Street for a smooth traffic flow. The expansion offers customers a total of 23 convenient drive-inl lanes.

Charles Fraser, First National's Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer explained that "the demand for motor bank services continues to grow with Midland's growing community. In keeping with growth, First National will strive to continue to provide excellent banking services by the most convenient means possible."

Banking instruments add to monetary complexity

DALLAS — New Banking instruments such as negotiable order of withdrawal (NOW) accounts and money market funds have made the M1 aggregates, the principal targets in conducting monetary policy, much harder to interpret. This has led many critics to suggest placing greater emphasis on the broader monetary measures, especially M2.

Writing in the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas' economic publication, VOICE, Patrick J. Lawler, a senior economist concludes that the broader measures are not well suited to be targets of monetary policy.

"To be a good guide," Lawler says, "a monetary aggregate used as an intermediate target should bear a close relationship with current and future economic goals." But he points out that reduced-form estimates indicate that the broader money measures have had weak relationships with gross national product growth. Asset categories are, of necessity, included or excluded on an arbitrary basis. Some shifts of funds between different types of financial assets do not have significant effects on economic activity, burt do affect the large money measures.

The large aggregates are also more difficult for the Fed to control. Since 1979 the Federal Reserve has been using bank reserve measures as guides to help it control monetary aggregates. The procedures adopted d- not appear as effective for controlling the large aggregates as for M1-B, because they are not as fast or as automatic.

There is currently another problem in controlling the large aggregates. Information on their levels is available with a longer lag than for M1-B.

Blacks who lose jobs out wait whites for new ones

DALLAS — Blacks who lose their jobs when the economy is weak must, on the average, wait longer than whites after the economy begins to expand again before they can expect to return to work. James E. Pearce, associate director of research for the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, says that "unemployment rates for blacks not only increase faster during periods of economic contraction but also fall more slowly during the subsequent recoveries. Although the mean duration of unemployment (number of weeks of unemployment accumulated over a calendar year) rises sharply in recessions for all groups, it remains high longer for blacks than whites." This occurs because blacks are more heavily concentrated in occupations that are sensitive to changes in business conditions, so their unemployment rates increase more when the overall demand for labor falls.

Writing in the Dallas Reserve Bank's November VOICE. Pearce examines the recent behavior of unemployment by decomposing the unemployment rate into incidence, which is the percentage of workers becoming unemployed during any given year, and duration. A disturbing development of the period studied, 1967-1979, was the divergence of the unemployment series for blacks and whites. In the late 1960's the unemployment rate for black adults was about 2-1/2 percentage points above the rate for white adults. In the late 1970's the differemce averaged about 4-1/2 percentage points.

The latter decade's two recessions accounted for some of the divergence, but more persistent factors also contributed heavily. The evidence in the article reveals that for the population as a whole, the higher unemployment rates of the 1980's resulted primarily from higher incidence. On the other hand, more of the increase in unemployment of blacks, particularly since 1975, has been due to a rise in duration. As Pearce points out, "the factor at work (among the general population) appears to be more frequent job changes or greater use of temporary layoffs to meet seasonal variations in demand." A rise in chronic unemployment contributed significantly to the greater increase in unemployment of blacks, however.

Faulkner's keeping pace with '80's technology

With the exception of motor operated controls and recently, built-in correction, office typewriters have changed little in performance capability since their introduction in the early 1900's. Today's office demands more quantity and quality of output. This is achieved primarily by either more personnel or longer hours. Both at higher end costs to the employer. With the introduction of electronic memory controlled equipment, routine and repetitive typing times and costs can be greatly reduced.

A normal single page document is usually retyped 3 times for the final product. After initial typing, 2 typographical errors found result in retyping a second time. After corrected copy is presented to the author, revisions in wording result in copy retyped for a third time. This typing cycle results in 70% of typing output as non productive. (Just take a look in your waste basket.) With automated typing, only characters needing correction and/or insertions and deletions are retyped by the typist. Your document is then accurately reproduced as many times as needed at 200 ■ words per minute.

Recently the market has been flooded with a new line of automated typing equipment, some good and some not so good. Faulkner's policy has always been to evaluate products both in performance and reliability before presenting to their customers. By establishing product knowledge and trained service personnel, the normal headaches associated with newly released equipment are avoided.

Faulkner Office Machine Corporation has built it's 20 year foundation on direct support to the customer via training, rapid service, "on-hand" delivery and after the sale backup. Faulkner's personnel will be glad to discuss applications and needs with you and your staff by phone, in the store or at your office. Located at 2612 W. Study urges caution on oil and gas leasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should reject an ambitious five-year offshore oil and gas leasing program unless Interior Secretary James Watt can provide better information on the economic and environmental impacts, a congressional study said Saturday.

The General Accounting Office said Watt's plan raised more questions than it answered about the ability of the federal and state governments to accommodate such an aggressive leasing effort.

Two Democrats who requested the study said the GAO review showed Watt's proposal was "half-baked."

House Energy Committee Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., and Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., said Watt's leasing plan was "rhethoric in search of a reason" and Watt would need to provide more proof before Congress would accept the changes.

"Mr. Watt's plan to allow the oil companies to lease almost a billion acres of offshore public lands is not based on any sound analysis of the impact on the treasury, competition in the oil industry or the economy," Moffett said.

Watt last April proposed substantial modifications in a five-year leasing program drawn up by the Carter administration. Under Watt's plan, the government would offer 42 lease sales over the next five years, five more than earlier proposed, and offer much more land in each sale.

The original plan would have offered almost 1 billion acres, virtually the entire U.S. coastline, for lease in sales covering up to 120 million acres — an area about the size of California.

The GAO said this was too large an area and recommended that Watt trim the lease sales down to smaller offerings that would "allow for more detailed analysis of the environmental features in an area."

Watt on Thursday announced revisions in the size of each sale in line with the GAO recommendations. He directed the leasing program to focus on those offshore tracts determined by the U.S. Geological Survey, oil companies or state governments to be of high potential. Only those areas and not entire planning areas would be offered for lease.

Interior Department officials said this change was being made to meet objectons such as those raised in the GAO study that Interior would have been unable to properly evaluate the larger tacts.

While this change could whittle the size of the lease offerings by about one-third, the amount of land being offered each year for lease is still expected to be 10 times what has been offered in the past.

GAO said the accelerated program was coming at a time when Watt planned to cut spending for environmental studies of leasing areas by $42 million over five years and reduce staffing in that area by 11 percent.

The study also charged that the changes were proposed with "little or no input" from other federal agencies, state governments or the oil companies which will bid on the leases.

The study also cautioned that one aspect of the program — extending the leases from five to 10 years in harsh terrain such as deep water and off Alaska — could end up slowing down drilling activity rather than accelerating it.

GAO said Watt would need to provide more "detailed information and analysis" before submitting the plan to Congress.

Watt had originally hoped to submit his revised plan by the end of this year, but it has been held up in a court challenge. Alan Powers, an Interior Department official with the leasing program, said the earliest the plan will be submitted now is late March.

Interior officials said they would have no comment on specific charges in the GAO report until they had time to review.

U.S. Steel can begin buying Marathon Jan. 7

A federal judge says U.S. Steel Corp. can begin buying Marathon Oil Co. shares for $6.3 billion on Jan. 7, but some analysts say another company might give Marathon holders reason to withdraw their shares before then by announcing a rival bid.

Any competing offer for Marathon, the nation's 17th-largest oil concern, would have to come from a non-oil company in light of an appeals court ruling that Mobil Corp.'s $6.5 billion bid probably would violate antitrust laws, the analysts said.

As a result of that ruling, the success of Mobil's offer is in serious doubt, they added.

"Mobil appears to be stopped unless it gets the reasoning of the court overturned," said Joel Fischer, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

Mobil spokesman Anthony DeNigro in New York said Thursday, "We're continuing to study the court opinion." He declined further comment.

The "withdrawal date" of U.S. Steel's $6.3 billion offer was considered a key factor in whether another company might join the battle for Marathon. That is the date after which Marathon holders who have tendered shares to U.S. Steel can no longer withdraw them and tender them to a rival suitor and after which U.S. Steel can begin buying the shares.

About 90 percent of Marathon's approximately 58.7 million shares already have been tendered to U.S. Steel.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati said in its rulings Wednesday night the withdrawal period "should be sufficient" to permit other offers, and it sent the case back to U.S. District Judge Joseph P. Kinneary in Columbus, Ohio.

On Thursda, Kinneary ordered the withdrawal date be extended until midnight EST Jan. 6.

The appeals court's request for a "sufficient" withdrawal period stemmed from its ruling that two options granted U.S. Steel by Marathon were illegal and had discouraged rival bids.

One option would have allowed U.S. Steel to buy Marathon's 49.5 percent interest in the rich Yates oil field in Texas if a third party acquired Marathon. The other would have let U.S. Steel buy 10 million new Marathon shares at $90 apiece — a price far below the $125 a share U.S. Steel is offering for 51 percent of Marathon's stock.

The court said those options effectively blocked others from bidding for Marathon, based in Findlay, Ohio, and that by deleting the options other companies still interested in Marathon should be allowed time to come forward before U.S. Steel can begin buying Marathon shares.

During Thursday's hearing before Kinneary, U.S. Steel lawyer Dan Hammer said the steelmaker would agree to drop the two options.

Kinneary's order leaves seven business days for another company to prepare an offer for Marathon, which some analysts said might not be enough time.

But Ellen Greenspan, an analyst with Oppenheimer & Co. in New York, said, "Anybody who has upwards of $6 billion to spend on this is probably prepared to move quickly."

She added: "There is a very high probability of another bidder."

If there is another offer, it is uncertain whether the steelmaker would continue to raise its bid for Marathon now that the two options were ruled illegal, analysts said.

Biggest containership launched at new Orleans

SAN FRANCISCO — The largest containership ever built in the United States — almost three football fields long — was recently christened the President Lincoln in New Orleans and launched in ceremonies attended by industry and government leaders.

The President Lincoln, capable of carrying the equivalent of 2,500 twenty-foot containers (enough to fill a 12-mile-long freight train), is one of three such containerships being built by Abondale Shipyards for American President Lines, Ltd. (APL). APL is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Natomas Company, a San Francisco-based energy, transportation and real estate enterprise.

"The Lincoln represents a new breed of ship in that not only is it large but it is also a substantial fuel-saver," said Dorman L. Commons, president of Natomas Company. "It will be the first U. S.-built containership to be diesel propelled, making it some 30 percent more fuel efficient than the steam-powered containership traditionally used by American operators."

With fuel constituting about one-sixth of a shipping line's total cost, the recent escalation in energy prices has prompted a worldwide trend toward larger, slower-moving diesel-powered containerships, Commons noted.

"APL's three containerships were designed to match fuel-efficiency, speed and the economies of scale necessary to serve the growing Pacific Basin market," Commons added.

Among their many design innovations is below-deck stowage of refrigerated containers, which are necessary for the transport of increasingly large volumes of fresh and frozen agricultural products. Up to one third of the overall capacity of each ship can be devoted to refrigerated cargo, or some 400 forty-foot refrigerated containers.

APL operates one of the largest fleets in the Pacific Basin and Indian Ocean, with fifteen containerships and five breakbulk ships. Aside from ocean transport, the company offers shippers connecting rail, truck or air transportaton services for intermodal cargo traveling between Asia and U. S. ports or inland cities and provides a single through bill of lading. (Use of more than one mode of transportation to move cargo from point of origin to final destination is known as intermodalism.)

The President Lincoln is 860 feet long, and when fully loaded has a displacement weight of 49,500 tons. It is propelled by the first low-speed diesel engine ever built in the United States, an engine which enables the contanership to make the round trip between the U. S. West Coast and Asia without refueling.

"This capability further reduces fuel costs because fuel is generally more expensive outside the United States," Commons said.

The 1,160-ton slow-speed diesel engines have been built in the United States by Allis-Chalmers under subcontract from a U. S. subsidiary of Switzerland-based Sulzer Brothers Limited. The engines are capable of 43,200 horsepower, turning the 24-foot, 6-inch diameter propeller at 126 revolutions per minute. Each engine can produce the equivalent of 31,800 kilowatts of energy, enough to provide power for a town of nearly 30,000 people. The engine is 80 by 35 feet, with 12 cylinders, each three feet in diameter.

The new containerships will be the largest to be exclusively deployed in the West Coast to Asia trade lanes, according to W. B. Seaton, APL's president. "In terms of trade," he said, "the United States is now more oriented toward the Pacific than the Atlantic, a reversal of historical patterns. Not only is trans-Pacific tonnage 35 percent greater today than is trans-Atlantic tonnage, but it is growing at a rate some three and one-half times faster."

When all three APL diesel-powered containerships are in operation in 1982, the company's cargo capacity will increase substantially. To meet projected trade growth and to handle the larger ships, AL has undertaken a worldwide, five-year $178 million port expansion and modernization program. This includes port dredging to accomodate the ships' maximum 35-foot drafts, enlargement of berths and modifications to gantry cranes as well as measures designed to expedite cargo handling. It will take about 20 hours, using three cranes full time, to completely load or unload one of the new ships.

In addition to the ship's fuel efficiencies, the President Lincoln produces its own fresh water supply by converting sea water at virtually no cost. Steam from each vessel's waste heat boiler provides 50 to 80% of the ship's auxiliary power needs.

The maiden voyage of the President Lincoln is scheduled for May. From its construction site at Avondale Shipyards, New Orleans, the ship, which has been designated a C-9 class vessel by the Maritime Administration, will travel through the Panama Canal, up the U. S. west coast to APL terminals at the ports of Los Angeles, Oakland and Seattle.

THE NEW IRA:

The difference between simply retiring, and retiring well.

Ring Out the Old.
IRA's (Individual Retirement Accounts) have been around for a couple of years. Originally, IRA's were designed to provide people with tax deductions now, and additional income beyond Social Security benefits upon retirement. Unfortunately, only a limited group of people qualified.

Ring Up the New.
Under the New IRA, every working American is eligible. Financial consultants call it Congress' greatest gift to working Americans in 50 years. Indeed, the New IRA could mean the difference between simply retiring, and retiring well.
Beginning January 1, 1982, you can invest up to $2,000 ($2,250 per couple with one working spouse; $4,000 with both husband and wife employed) in an IRA and deduct this investment on your income tax return. By the time a 25-year-old reaches retirement at 65, for example, he or she could retire with over a million dollars.

Age	$4,000 Annually*	$2,250 Annually*	$2,000 Annually*
25	$3,436,569	$1,933,070	$1,718,285
30	$1,933,852	$1,087,792	$ 966,926
35	$1,081,170	$ 608,158	$ 540,585

50	$ 167,013	$ 93,945	$ 83,506
55	$ 78,618	$ 44,223	$ 39,309
60	$ 28,461	$ 16,009	$ 14,230
65	$ 4,480	$ 2,520	$ 2,240

Based on an average rate of 12%. Federal regulations require a substantial penalty for early withdrawal.
Future value of dollars invested with annual deposits, annual compounding and annual interest rate of 12%. This table is for example purposes only. Actual rates, investment amounts, frequency of deposits and method of compounding interest may vary.

The Midland National Advantage.
To broaden your investment option, Midland National is introducing an 18-Month Certificate of Deposit for the New IRA. You simply open this IRA with a CD (minimum of $500), and you may add to it with deposits of $100 or more without extending maturity. The floating weekly rate is tied to the 6-Month Money Market CD.

Real Security vs. Social Security.
Midland National's 18-Month CD for the New IRA, unlike Social Security, is insured by the FDIC. And it's a sure way to get the tax break you need now, while assuring yourself a comfortable retirement later. For more information, call our IRA specialist, Venita Gaston, Assistant Cashier, 685-5292.

IRA: big gains for little man

BY LINDA KOZUB
Copley News Service

It's pronounced by financial experts as simply "eye-rah."

Call it IRA, or Individual Retirement Account, or the pot at the end of your retirement rainbow, or what is billed as the best and safest tax shelter ever created for the average American taxpayer.

But in the words of money expert Sylvia Porter, "You will be an outright fool if you don't grab for the benefits offered to you by the new tax law."

Starting Jan. 1, under the provisions of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, every American worker will be able to open an IRA tax-sheltered account.

As long as the account remains untapped, the yearly deposits are not taxable. Cash is taxed when withdrawn at retirement time, beginning at age 59½. Not only that — taxpayers can deduct from their taxable income the entire amount they put into the account during the tax year.

IRAs have been around since 1975 for workers not covered by other pension plans, but now even those with pensions can join in.

So what's the hitch?

In effect, the federal government will slap the hands of anyone prematurely reaching into the till that was created for use during old age. The slap is a hefty 10 percent penalty, plus the tax on the amount withdrawn early.

The maximum allowed contribution to this retirement savings account is $2,000 per year for a working individual who earns at least that amount annually. Another $250 annually can be added for a spouse not working outside the home (a spousal IRA account.)

If husband and wife both work, each can put in as much as $2,000 annually.

Even part-time workers, the self-employed, government workers, or students with occasional jobs can participate, so long as the workers are under the age of 70½.

Advertising pitches already have started on the many IRA plans to be offered, and this means homework ahead for smart money managers. Accounts could be opened through banks, savings and loans, brokerage firms, credit unions, or insurance companies.

So far, the only proposal that would force the saver to come up with a prescribed amount every year appears to be the annual premium for an annuity with an insurance company.

Financial institutions are encouraging flexibility, so the customer could deposit whatever he could afford every tax season — or skip a year if the home budget is especially tight.

Vicki Mion, a member of the San Diego Credit Union Managers Association suggests that smart money shoppers will check out the various interest rates, custodial fees, charges for opening an account, conveniences, and risks attached to the many programs that will be offered.

"People should check carefully how the interest is compounded. Is it quarterly, annually, or daily," Mion said. "If you're a conservative person, maybe you'll want to stick with a credit union, bank or savings account. If you're willing to risk more, maybe you should see an investment counselor."

The IRA ads and annoucements usually carry asterisks when projecting potential earnings, since final interest rates have not been set.

"Nobody is telling exactly what their interest rate will be, no one wants to be the first one to announce it," Mion said. "We're all sort of sitting around waiting on the word from everyone else. But come the first of January, we'll all have to decide what to offer our customers."

Interest rates may range from about 8 percent to 14 percent, according to an informal survey of bankers, insurance representatives and investment counselors.

The potential earnings at retirement could excite, confuse or overwhelm the IRA shopper, no matter which financial institution chosen. Here are some examples of how dollars in IRA acccounts can grow:

— Placing $2,000 at the start of each year, at 10 percent interest compounded annually, will earn about $35,000 in 10 years, and $361,000 in 30 years.

— Placing $2,000 at the start of each year for 35 years, compounding at 12 percent per year will earn about $996,926.

— Placing $500 per year will earn about $249,260, at 12 percent compounded daily in 35 years.

The tax-shelter factor makes the big difference. If $2,000 per year is contributed in an IRA at 8 percent interest for 30 years, about $265,000 will be accumulated. But if that same $2,000 annual contribution were taxed every year and taxes paid yearly on the income, it would mean only about $60,000 total after 30 years.

While the rush will seemingly be on to begin an IRA when it first becomes available in January, many financial consultants are urging people to move cautiously in determining which IRA may be best suited for them. There are no benefits tax-wise in rushing into an IRA, unless the money used to open the IRA comes from an account producing taxable interest — such as a passbook savings account.

Lila Kramer of the Kramer and Zucker accounting firm pointed out that the law allows contributions for 1982 to be made until the April 15, 1983 income tax filing deadline for 1982 taxes. The Internal Revenue Service says that timely filing extensions could push that deadline ahead until Oct. 15, 1983.

However, bankers and savings and loan officers argue against waiting. They say savers would be wise to open IRA accounts on Jan. 4, the first banking day of the new year, in order to earn maximum interest.

Fred Baranowski of Bank of America comments, "Soonest may be best, especially if the banks and savings and loans are vying for your business in January. They may offer the best fixed rates in the beginning."

Kramer comments, "Most of the advice about opening the IRAs is coming from people or institutions with a vested interest. They want your money. Shop around. Figure out what your budget can afford.

"IRA will change people's lives," believes Kramer. "The average taxpayer finally has a tax shelter. This is something the rich man has had for years, and now the middle income man can have it. The money you put in IRA comes right off the top. It is separate from your itemized deductions."

In other words, if those earning $12,000 annually place $2,000 of it in an IRA, their taxes will be figured only on an income of $10,000.

Those in the 30 percent tax bracket, as many middle-income workers are, will have their taxes reduced by $600 if they make a $2,000 IRA deposit.

It is estimated that about 3.2 million Americans now have IRA accounts. With the new law, about 116 million workers and 20 million spouses will be eligible.

Roughneck school booked for months

ABILENE — A first-of-its-kind school for oilfield roughnecks in Texas has drawn more than 3,000 applications since it opened late last summer and is now booked up for months, if not years, say officials with the Texas Engineering Extension Service which conducts the course on a 48-acre tract southeast of here.

The six-week oil rig crew training – with special emphasis on safety, maintenace and proper drilling procedures – graduates its first 22 students Tuesday (Dec. 22), said Bob Prock, manager of the rig crew training school operated by TEEX, a part of the Texas A&M University System.

Another 50 students begin the 160-hour course Jan. 4, he said.

The roughneck school gained national attention when it was established last summer to answer a growing need in the Texas petroleum industry for porperly trained drillers and crew members. Jobs are guaranteed to all course graduates.

Instruction is held at a facility valued at nearly $2.5 million, including a 115-foot rig used to drill 2,000 feet during each course, all of which has been donated by more than two dozen private companies and the local chapter of the International Association of Drilling Contractors on land donated by the Abilene Industrial Foundation.

Texas oil companies also furnish the instructors for the roughneck school, explained TEEX officials.

Students applying to the roughneck school must be at least 18 years old by the time the course ends and must supply their own safety equipment. Tuition is $500, but financial aid is often available.

Course topics range from standard rig practices and the operation of individual pieces of equipment to cardiopulmonary resuscitation and other safety training, said Prock.

In addition to the rig crew training instructors and staff, the Abilene TEEX operation will initially include representatfves of the electric power utilities and public works training divisions of TEEX.

Headquartered in College Station, TEEX provides statewide vocational training through more than a dozen training divisions, and instructs tens of thousands of citizens statewide each year.

Bengal buys KCA Oil and Gas

Bengal Oil and Gas Corporation, Midland, announced Wednesday it had completed the aquisition of KCA Oil and Gas, Inc. of Houston, Texas, for 20.6 million shares of Bengal stock. Bengal also said it closed an agreement to Manage $3 million to be used for oil and gas exploration and development in 1982.

Based on a bid of $.43 per share for Bengal stock in the over-the-counter trading on closing date December 21, 1981, the transaction had an indicated value of approximately $9 million.

The aquisition of KCA oil and gas should add substantially to the cash flow and reserves of oil and gas available to Bengal.

John Wilson, a director of KCA International Limited, was elected to the Board of Directors of Bengal.

How to get top dollar for the hidden wealth beneath your land

It's no accident that over 50 percent of mineral owners lose when they sign a lease. Most simply take the first deal offered. They then suffer a lifetime of silent pain when they learn they didn't get a fair deal.

Is there an answer?

Yes! An answer that's simple, rational and logical. An answer that's been overlooked for decades.

The Answer

The key to this new concept lies in understanding the essential keys to the other man's strategy. It means knowing the ABC's behind his deal. And the rules of the game.

Strategy for Wealth

One book tells you how. It is a fresh, new approach; the first ever written in non-technical, down-to-earth language. And the result of hundreds of interviews with the "insiders" of oil and gas leasing.

It's not a book simply for the scholarly or the super-rich.

Every person, no matter how large or small their mineral holdings, whether leased or unleased, can develop a strategy for greater security based on the simple guidelines in this book.

Learn to set the right price. Know how to get top dollar. And how to insert clauses that you and your children can live with — profitably, and without worry — for the rest of your lives.

These overlooked answers have been known only to a handful of lawyers, and to professional petroleum landmen. They have been carefully guarded secrets, buried in costly law books. Or privileged to the wealthy through costly seminars.

Total Protection

Once you've spent one hour glancing through "Look Before You Lease," you'll never have to worry again that you're making the right move, or getting a fair deal.

. . . You'll learn what the words and terms used mean! . . . How to avoid killing a deal! . . . How to get top bonus, royalty and terms! . . . How to avoid eternal surface damages! . . . And when to seek professional help.

This book is field-tested. In two months it's sold thousands of copies and resulted in over 250 letters of thanks to its author. Over 130 newspapers and magazines have also praised the book. It is also the official guide for the National Association of Royalty Owners, Inc.

About The Author

Jim Stafford is chairman of the famed NARO organization, a former Washington lobbyist, an oil investor and cattleman, who lectures throughout the world on oil leasing.
