MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

"I want to tell you we have to have somebody in this country that will wait to hear both sides," remarked Judge John C. Kay Sunday morning to his downtown Bible class of men at the Olympic theatre. Judge Kay is a lawyer as well as teacher of a Bible class. He had in his mind the condemnation by the public of Superintendent King of the Gainesville Training School, this without waiting for the evidence. Judge Kay uttered a great truth as well as a warning when he said, "I want to tell you we have to have somebody in this country that will wait to hear both sides." Now, H. N. F. has no brief to defend Superintendent King. He has no brief to defend Messers. Cowell and Tittle of the board of control, but he is opposed to lynch law. He is opposed to returning a verdict of guilty against any man who hasn't been given a trial. He is opposed to a verdict of guilty being returned on heresay testimony. Superintendent King has resigned. He refused to resign under fire. Two of the three members of the board of control investigated the charges. Two of the three members of the board of control exonerated King and gave him a clean bill of health. Then King sent his letter of resignation to the board of control. Before he had been given a trial or a hearing by the board of control King had been lynched by certain Texas newspapers; he had been lynched by many good men and women who are vociferous reformers and who never see but one side to any question; he had been lynched bby womens clubs—good women, mind you, whose hearts bled for the desperate young outlaws who had been put away for the good of society; he had been lynched by all of that public at large willing to condemn a man without trial. Many years ago Charles Reade gave to the world a novel that created a sensation. This was its title, "Put Yourself In His Place." Never convict or condemn until you have given the accused a fair hearing and have heard all the evidence. This is why the written law should be the law of the land; this is why a person accused of crime is guaranteed a fair trial by a jury of his peers. This is why lynch law is infamous, a relic of barbarism. A man does not have to be hanged or sent to the electric chair to be lynched. Public opinion, when it lynches a man without a fair trial by a jury of his peers, is just as cowardly, just as barbaric, just as blood thirsty as the mob that places the rope about the neck of the man who has not been given an opportunity to face his accuser in a court of justice. H. N. F. never visited, as a correspondent or in any other capacity, the Gatesville Training School or reformatory but once and that was years ago. What he saw and what he heard or rather what honest men told him convinced him that when it comes to total depravity the incorrigible young criminals of this country, are as dangerous and as hard to handle as wild beasts of the jungles. Regardless of this, they should be given humane treatment; if possible they should be reclaimed and transformed into law abiding citizens but the man or the men who handle the institution and these penal wards of the state have a job that no self respecting man should envy. Now that King has taken himself out of it, the board of control and the governor should select his successor and the prayers of the good people should be with the successor. He will have a rocky road to travel and after he has given the state the best service at his command there will be public lynchers in the newspaper offices and elsewhere who will be clamoring for his scalp. But remember the words of the judge who teaches a Bible class during his leisure hours on Sunday, "I WANT TO TELL YOU WE HAVE TO HAVE SOMEBODY IN THIS COUNTRY THAT WILL WAIT TO HEAR BOTH SIDES." Of course the judge has flowers in his own garden or hothouses but this time the winter roses go to him.

Tom A. Key of the City National Bank of Commerce reads the Record News every morning. Judge Kay's pointed remarks to his Bible class appealed to Mr. Key who is a banker and a churchman and a Georgian and a Democrat among other things too numerous to mention. This story of Paul going down to Rome where he was charged with running from a prosecution caused Key to do some rapid thinking. "Condemnation without trial is neither Christ-like nor does it bespeak even a low degree of civilization," said the placid Key. "S. B. Cowell of Whitesboro, Grayson county, is a member of the board of control. He heard the evidence; he investigated and he voted to exonerate Superintendent King. All this reminds me that Mr. Cowell and I were business competitors in the town of Whitesboro for a number of years. He was cashier of one bank; I was cashier of another. He is a churchman and a Christian gentleman. His record is spotless. His personal integrity is of the highest. He would not do any man a wrong or an injustice. I was chairman of the committee that waited upon him and asked him to become a candidate for state senator in the district composed of the counties of Grayson and Cook. We prevailed upon him to make the race. He was elected by an overwhelming majority. His record as a lawmaker is a most enviable one. Cowell is big enough to be governor. He is a progressive, justice loving and God-fearing man and from what I have heard of Mr. Tittle, who voted with Mr. Cowell to exonerate Superintendent King, he too is a Christian gentleman of the highest character and one who would vote his honest convictions though the heavens fall."

POWERS AGREE ON REDUCTION LAND FORCES

Spokesmen Unanimous in Declaring for Small Armies for Defensive Purposes Only.

Hughes Seconds Briand's Declaration That What World Needs Is "A Will to Peace."

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Acting in unison again spokesmen of the great powers at the arms conference today pledged themselves to reduction of land armaments, but, according to the varying conditions which they outlined as affecting their assurance of national security.

In a dramatic hour, Aristide Briand, seven times premier of France, outlined the fears of France of an attempt at restoration of Prussianism in the former central European empires, and Arthur James Balfour, heading the British delegation, in solemn words practically pledged Great Britain to the aid of France in any future threat of the lust of military domination.

Speaking for Italy, Senator Schanzer expressed sympathy for the situation of France and said his country was planning further reduction in her land forces.

For Japan, Baron Admiral Kato declared his country had no intention of maintaining land forces greater than those absolutely necessary "for purely defensive purposes" made necessary by the Far Eastern situation.

Other leaders spoke in the same vein and in conclusion, Secretary Hughes assured Premier Briand that France was in no sense in a moral isolation and that the United States fully realized her position.

The heart of America, said Mr. Hughes, carried an imperishable memory of France's sacrifices for liberty. He agreed with M. Briand that what the world needed was "a will to peace."

"And there can be no will to peace" he added, "until the institutions of liberty and justice are secure. May I say in reply to M. Briand that there is no 'moral isolation' for the defenders of liberty and justice.

"No words ever spoken for France had fallen on deaf ears in the United States," said Secretary Hughes, amid loud applause, "the heart of America was thrilled by her valor and her sacrifice and the memory of her stand for liberty is imperishable in this country, devoted to the institutions of liberty. It is evident from what M. Briand has said that what is needed at this time in order that there may be attained this great ideal is the will to peace and there can be no hope of a will to peace until the institutions of liberty and justice are secure to all peoples.

"There is no moral isolation of the defenders of liberty and justice. We understand the difficulties. What he has said will be read throughout this land by the people with a determination to understand.

"We cannot go into a statement of details," said Secretary Hughes. "Fortunately the conference is so organized that the question will have a place in our discussions. The expressions we have heard from the representatives of the powers make us confident that here will be generated that disposition which is essential to national security, a security which armies can never supply.

"We shall find, too, that if they most desire it, peace will be enduring among the people of the world."

HOUSE PASSES REWRITTEN TAX REVISION BILL

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—By a vote of 232 to 109 the house late today approved the tax revision bill as rewritten in conference. The measure immediately was sent to the senate where it will be taken up tomorrow with Republican leaders determined upon its final enactment in time for the ending of the special session of congress, Wednesday night.

Before adopting the conference report, the house defeated a motion from the Democratic side to send the measure back to conference with instructions to house managers to accept the senate amendment increasing the inheritance taxes. Forty-two Republicans voted for the motion while four Democrats voted against it.

Four hours debate preceded the voting.

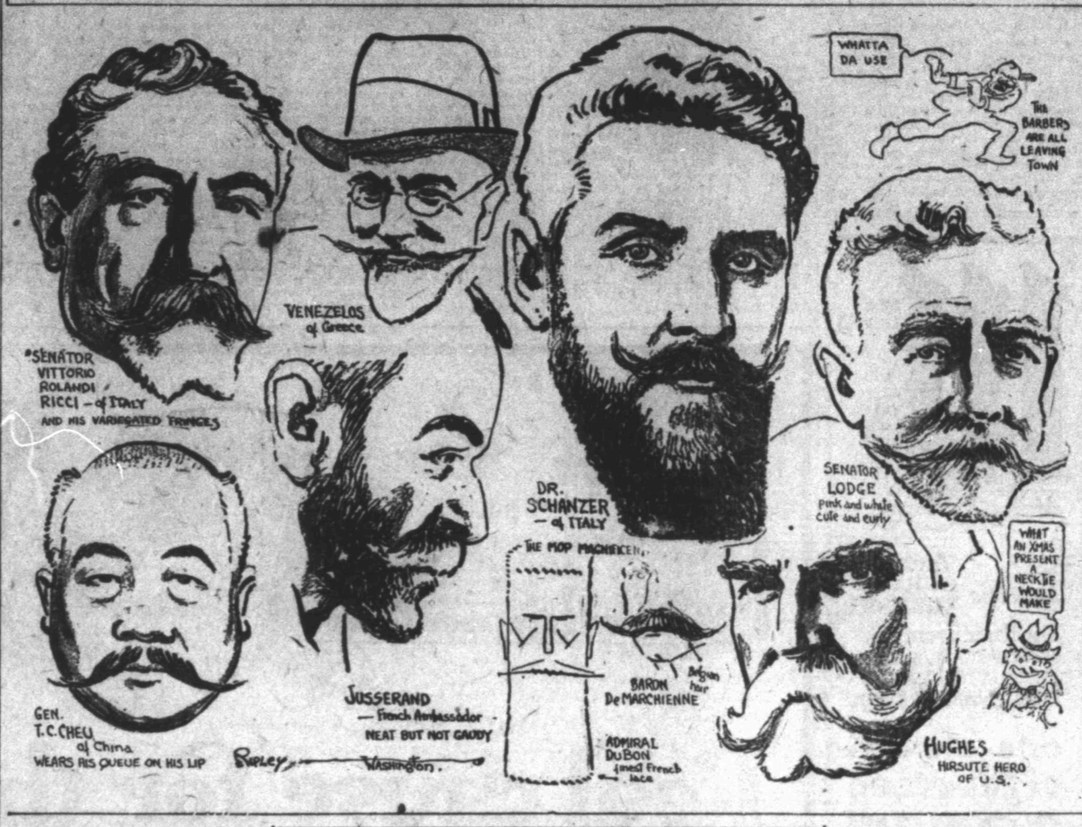

Representative Garner of Texas, ranking Democrat on the ways and means committee, made the principal attack on the bill from the minority side.

PRES. HARDING FAVORS BILLS ON IRRIGATION

Approximately $5;000,000 Acres in Texas Subject to Terms of Proposed Measures.

Special to the Record News

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 21.—President Harding today gave his approval of legislation making huge appropriations for the irrigation of arid and the reclamation of swamp and cutover lands and said that if the Disarmament Conference concludes its work by December 1 he will make a reccommendation for such legislation in his annual message to congress on December 6.

His approval was voiced to members of the House Irrigation committee including Representative Hudspeth of Texas, who called on him this morning with a view to obtaining his attitude on the Smith-McNary and the Bankhead bills. The former measure would appropriate $225,000,000 for irrigation while the Bankhead measure would combine irrigation and reclamation and carries an appropriation of $300,000,000. The President told the committee that he favored a combination of the two measures.

Representative Hudspeth estimated that at least 5,000,000 acres of land in Texas would be subject to the terms of the two bills with the President's endorsement. Hudspeth said the combination bill should be passed by the House by January 1.

Crowds Filling Hotels in South Bend and Graham

Graham and South Bend hotels are filled and each day brings it's host of new arrivals, representing outside capital interested in the field by reason of the latter part of last week in the Bunger district and also the opening up of a new sand in the field immediately south of the town of South Bend.

The activities promised by these latest developments show signs this early of eclipsing anything of the sort the South Bend pool has known up to the present, though it has not been without sensations, during it's eighteen month existence.

Monday's contribution was an extension of the new Bunger pool to the southwest a nice distance, effected by the No. 1 Whittenberg of Burton et al, making from 125 to 150 barrels, in the oil sand at 1825 feet. The top of the sand has just been drilled.

The Applegate and Hedrick No. 1 Whittenberg, the extreme north test in the pool, and the Brooks No. 1 Grimshaw, in the east part of the pool, are both testing out sands at 2600 feet. This test is in the northdefinite developments this week. The Browning Hodges and Kerbow No. 1 Durham is reported drilling around 2600 feet. This test is in the northwest part of Bunger.

The North American's new well on the B. F. Scott, Smith survey, in a new sand, 3490 feet, is making around 200 barrels daily, it is reported, with a strong gas pressure.

Shu-sh! Then Some More Shu-shes!! Diplomatic Sleuths Are on the Job Of "Guarding" Delegates to Parley

By HERBERT COREY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—There is no doubt about it at all. We are an adaptable nation. We have fallen right into the forms and customs of European diplomacy. If you do not believe it, go to the Shoreham Hotel any lively morning and look about you.

"At your right," the barker would say, if there were a barker, "we see a sleuth from the State Department. This is the dish-faced sleuth who is supposed to be impersonating a man from one of the seaboard states. At your left, sitting on the settee, wearing an overcoat as a disguise and with a muffler high up on his chest, is the other sleuth. Now and then strangers sit down alongside them, whereupon they fall into conversation with what is technically known as a glass crash."

From time to time other sleuths come in and relieve this pair of sleuths. They are absolutely relentless. They sit on their settees grimly. So far as the lay eye can detect they do nothing else.

There are other State Department sleuths, of course. One of them, according to the story, had been told off to "tail" one of the visitors from a far country. No one knows why he was told to "tail." Not even the sleuth. So he tailed around industriously. Every time the visitor turned around a large gentleman was ostentatiously taking a glittering eye away from him. The visitor is said to have had his curiosity aroused.

"Why are you following me?" he asked the sleuth.

"To protect you," said the trailer.

"From what?"

The detective didn't know. The visitor wanted to know who he was and where he came from, and the detective told. He said that he had been ordered to follow the visitor wherever he went.

"Everywhere?" asked the visitor, in dismay.

"Yes," said the sleuth.

"Good Heavens!" said the visitor. "Surely not everywhere?"

"Yes," said the detective.

It looks as though the conference is spoiled for one visitor.

The Japanese sleuths do it better. They may or may not be excellent detectives, but they are reputed to be very excellent trailers, indeed. There are about 200 Japanese known to be here, and others who are not officially known. The Nippon Club has been opened on Sixteenth street, not far from the Castleton, for the accommodation of the lesser Japanese visitors—the journalists and the subsecretaries of legation and the attaches of various sorts. Here the sleuths make their headquarters.

"They follow every one worth following," I was told.

Their business is to know just who sees who, and when, and, if possible, why. It is a perfectly reputable part of diplomacy. All diplomatic establishments use sleuths, though some use them more perfectly than others. No one knows just how many secret service men the British have here, but it is a certainty that they are here and that they know their business. The same may be said of the

PLAN DRIVE ON TEXAS BORDER RUM RUNNING

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Appointment of four federal prohibition agents in Texas was announced today by Federal director David H. Morris, after a conference with commissioner Haynes. They are W. H. Myers, Galveston; G. M. Floyd Madisonville; Fred Wilson, Houston; and T. M. Gonzaullaus, Austin.

Mr. Morris reported to Mr. Haynes that the boundary situation in Texas has promise of early solution and was said to have recommended federal legislation governing smuggling across the Mexican border which would put rum running on the same basis with merchandise smuggling which is subject to a two years prison sentence. He also took up with the commissioner the question of liquor reaching this country from Canada via Mexico.

"Whiskey is shipped from Canada to Mexico as medicine," he said, "and is smuggled into this country for bootlegging purposes. Rum runners travel in high powered cars with women companions, make perhaps several trips before being caught and then go free by paying maximum fines. This will be stopped by amending the federal smuggling laws."

MOTIVE SOUGHT FOR AN ATTACK ON MISS RAPPE

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—A deposition that Virginia Rappe who died following a party in Roscoe Arbuckle's rooms in a San Francisco hotel, never was ill in her life was made today by Mrs. A. M. Fox, who said she was the girl's foster mother. The deposition was made at the request of prosecuting officials from San Francisco and will be used in Arbuckle's trial, it was said.

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Nov. 21—The Arbuckle trial took on a new angle today with the calling of a witness, by whom, the prosecuting attorneys announced that they hoped to prove a motive for the alleged attack on Virginia Rappe, which it is charged, caused her death. This new witness was Jesse K. Norgard, janitor of a motion picture studio.

Norgard and Alice Blake and Zeh Prevost, show girls, occupied most of the session today. Both the show girls were present at the party in the rooms of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle in the Hotel St. Francis here at which it is charged he inflicted fatal injuries on Miss Rappe.

ARGUMENTS IN BOUNDARY CASE ARE POSTPONED

Supreme Court Denies Right of Indians Claiming Texas Land to Intervene in the Case.

Special to the Record News.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 21.—The Supreme court, on motion of Thomas W. Gregory of Texas, counsel, today postponed until Monday, March 6, argument on the main issue in the Texas-Oklahoma boundary dispute. Both Texas and Oklahoma had filed motions with the court to postpone the argument from the original date Tuesday, January 9.

The court today also issued an order directing the receiver to pay the following salaries incurred in connection with the administration of the property: Nagel and Kirby, $6,000; McKenney and Flannery, $15,000 and F. A. Delano, $35,000.

The court denied the right of the Texas-Cherokees and associate bands to intervene in the case. The bands claimed a large territory in Texas by right of settlement when Texas was a Mexican province.

Many Wish to Succeed King At Gatesville

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 21.—Since the resignation of Superintendent C. E. King of the Gatesville juvenile training school was announced approximately fifteen applications for the position have been received at the governor's office. About six others are on file with the board of control received before the board announced its decision as to the charge of cruel treatment of inmates.

Secretary Walthall said today that he was advising the applicants to place their applications with the board of control as the governor has no say in the selection of Mr. King's successor. The law makes the board of control the directing body of the institution.

A plan to levy $25 a share on common and preferred stock also was considered.

Makes Bum Trade On Belief Spirit Said "Yes," Tells Court

Spiritualistic Medium Collects Commission On Trade, Plaintiff Avers; Court Here Called to Pass Legally on Spiritualism.

Do the spirits of the departed dead ever communicate with the living? Can one or more persons by the power of concentration bring about desired happenings? Can chairs and tables be made to walk and otherwise appear life like.

These are a few of the questions arising in the case of Mrs. Ada Holden against Mrs. Ida Alexander and Dr. Elma M. Gill the trial of which opened Monday afternoon in the 78th district court with jury before Judge Ed Napier.

The plaintiff asks $3,000 damages and the cancellation of certain notes from the defendants who she claimed defrauded her when she purchased a rooming house at 806 Scott street.

According to the testimony at the trial Monday, Mrs. Holden purchased the lease of the rooming house from Mrs. Alexander after Dr. Gill, a widely known spiritualist medium formerly of this city, had told her that she had communicated with the deceased husband of the plaintiff who said that she should make the purchase. Dr. Gill, the plaintiff charges, received a commission for the sale of the lease for which she said she paid an exhorbitant price due to the supposed message from her dead husband.

Mrs. Holden on the stand Monday said she relied implicitly on the representations of Dr. Gill that her deceased husband approved the transaction. She said that up to the time she found out that she could not hope to pay expenses on the lease, she believed in spiritualism as taught by Dr. Gill and others. She declared she believed Dr. Gill when the latter told her that by concentration they would get Mrs. Paul Fowler of Fort Worth owner of the rooming house, to permit the transfer of the lease to her. She said they all "concentrated" and Mrs. Fowler did permit the transfer although she at first was supposed to have refused.

The witness said that in the light of the fraud of which she was the alleged victim she no longer believed in Dr. Gill or her supernatural powers.

Inject Edison and Lodge

The defense at adjournment Monday had not introduced any testimony but in cross examination of witnesses it was brought out that such luminaries as Thomas Edison and Sir Oliver Lodge believe in what is popularly termed spiritualism. Just before the court adjourned the defense asked for an instructed verdict on the grounds of estoppal, the plaintiff having made payments on the sale contract after she had discovered the alleged fraud, according to her own testimony.

Several witnesses were placed on the stand by the plaintiff who testified regarding Dr. Gill's supposed powers in communicating with the dead and the benefits to be derived from "concentration." Several witnesses told of a birthday party at the home of Dean Holden, son of the plaintiff.

At the party, Dr. Gill, according to the witnesses, professed to be in touch with an "Indian Guide or "Little Bright Eyes" or some deceased relative or friend. One witness testified that the "medium" told her and her husband "to hold on to their land in Arkansas," that it had oil and would "make them rich." She said "they were still holding" but did not have the promised wealth.

The witness said that in her opinion, Dr. Gill was just "stalling around and did not believe a word of what she said."

Again Urged, Say

She and other witnesses testified that Dr. Gill at the birthday party while in a "trance" said that the deceased husband of Mrs. Holden with whom she was in communication was still urging her to buy the lease.

According to the testimony of Mrs. Holden she first became acquainted with Dr. Gill, a woman, through an advertisement in local papers.

In the advertisement Dr. Gill said she wanted to employ a pianist for her public readings. She testified that she soon came under the influence of Dr. Gill, becoming a firm believer in spiritualism within a short time. It was at this time she said that the question of her buying the rooming house lease from Mrs. Alexander arose. She said she did not agree to purchase it until she was led to believe that her deceased husband was in favor of it. The lease including furniture was sold to the plaintiff in April, 1920, for $3,500.

A deposition of Mrs. Paul Fowler of Fort Worth, owner of the house, was read by the plaintiff's attorneys. She testified as to the value of the furniture in the house when she sold it to Mrs. Alexander and explained her reluctance to sign the lease over to Mrs. Holden as being due to a desire to sell the property.

The case is said to involve probable issues that have never been adjudicated in the courts of the state. The trial of the case will continue this morning.

NATIONS SIGN GUARANTEE OF CHINA'S RIGHTS

Resolution Declaring for Chinese Territorial and Administrative Integrity Adopted.

Adoption of Resolution, Presented by Root, First Concrete Action of Arms Conference.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A resolution declaring for the territorial and administrative integrity of China was adopted unanimously late today by the conference committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions.

The resolution, the first concrete action of the armament limitation conference, was drafted and presented by Elihu Root, one of the American delegates.

An agreement embodying the resolutions was signed by eight powers. China refrained from attaching her signature, it was said, because she could not very well pass upon a document expressing a policy concerning herself.

One of the delegates declared with reference to the agreement that "a long step" already had been taken toward formulating of the Far East questions.

"The firm intention" of the eight signatory powers was asserted "to respect the sovereignty, independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China."

The further intention "to provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China" to develop an effective and stable government was asserted. The purpose of the powers, it was declared, was to use their influence in "establishing and maintaining the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China."

A pledge was made to refrain from taking advantage of the present conditions, "in China to seek special privileges which might abridge rights of friendly nationals and also to refrain from countenancing action inimical to the security of certain states."

The declaration in the Root resolution for administrative integrity of China was declared by the delegates to be very significant and important. While there have been declarations in the past for the territorial integrity for China, such declarations, it was said, never before have they gone to the extent of declaring for administrative integrity.

In the Root resolution was said to have the principal topic at the committee meeting today. Other Chinese questions are to be taken up at another meeting of the committee tomorrow.

I. C. C. ORDERS DECREASE IN GRAIN RATES

Railroads Required to Make Approximately 16 Per Cent Reduction by December 27.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A positive order was issued by the interstate commerce commission today requiring railroads to put the approximately 16 per cent decrease in hay and grain rates into effect on or before next December 27.

The order follows up the decision given October 20 by the commission which declared grain and hay rates from the Mississippi valley to the Pacific coast unreasonably high, but which did not carry compulsory orders. The October decision instructed the railroads to make the reduction by November 20, which was not done because the railroads opened negotiations with the commission suggesting that a ten per cent decrease in freight rates on all agricultural products be substituted for the larger decrease on grain products and hay alone.

The western group mentioned in the order includes territory between the Mississippi and Illinois rivers and the north and south boundary line on which the states of North Dakota, Montana, South Dakota, Wyoming and Nebraska join and extending south to El Paso, Texas. The mountain-Pacific group lies between the western group and the Pacific coast.

FORD DAMAGES TWO CARS, THEN WHIZZES ALONG

Another queer caper was laid at the door of the Ford automobile with an unobstructed street in front Monday in a report made by motorcycle Officer Morgan.

The Ford was reported to have crashed into a large touring car driven by Mrs. E. E. Taylor, 1004 Scott street, Monday morning at Eighth and Lamar, from which sliced a hub cap before bouncing off it From the touring car teetered at a rapid gait slightly toward the other side of the street where it crashed into the rear wheel of a Spis Water Co. truck driven by J. H. Hall from which it jerked a rear tire, bounced off again and taking a new start whized merrily away.

The Ford which was thought to have been undamaged. Morgan got the license number.

Chiefs of the Huron and Iroquois tribes recently buried the hatchet in Canada in old-time Indian fashion, pipe of peace and everything. This settles a feud between them that had lasted 271 years.

SHRINE CEREMONIAL TO BE IN KEEPING WITH DIGNITY OF THANKSGIVING DAY

The Shriner's Thanksgiving ceremonial is to be in keeping with the spirit of the day, and will be so arranged as to fit in with the religious services to be held on that day, according to a letter sent by Potentate Walter D. Cline to all members of the Maskat Temple.

The letter follows:

Dear Sir and Noble:—After consultation with the Divan Officers of your Temple, we have made the following decision:

FIRST—You will be held responsible by your Potentate for the conduct of the members of your organization on our ceremonial day, Thursday, November 24, 1921; and are now instructed to report any misconduct on the part of any member of your organization to the Potentate.

SECOND—No novice is to be taken charge of or interfered with in any way until he has registered at the Masonic Temple and been placed in charge of Noble M. D. Rowe, class director. No novice shall be disturbed after registration except on order of Noble Rowe.

THIRD—There will be no stunts permitted on the streets during the forenoon of Thursday, November 24, it is the suggestion of your Potentate because it is Thanksgiving Day; and that all nobles who can should attend the religious ceremony incident to the proper observances of Thanksgiving Day.

permitted either in the parade or on

FOURTH—There will be no stunts the streets during the afternoon. We have decided that this Thanksgiving Day parade should be a formal parade of Maskat Temple Divan, uniformed bodies, nobility and novices, but should be in keeping with the spirit of the day.

FIFTH: You shall deem it your duty, and you are now instructed, to report to the Potentate of your Temple any violations of these instructions, any rowdyism or misconduct on the part of any noble (whether he be a member of this temple or a visitor,) with the assurance that violators of these insructions will receive the prompt attention of your potentate and his officers.

We plan to have a real party at Call Field at our ceremonial; and following this, we expect a most enjoyable dinner with the nobles and the ladies of the temple, followed by a dance.

It is the hope of your officers that this arrangement will meet with the approval of the officers of the several organizations of the temple, as well as the nobility, and that we will receive the same hearty co-operation in this plan that has been given us in the past.

Fraternally yours,
W. D. CLINE, Potentate.

Change In Program

There has been a slight change in the program of the ceremonial session for Maskat Temple to be held on Thanksgiving Day, as the parade will be held at 1:30 instead of at 2:00 o'clock, as formerly announced.

Potentate Cline has requested all shriners who have dress suits to use them on Thanksgiving Day.

One of the interesting features of the program is the buffet dinner to be served at Hangar 8, Call Field, to which all shriners and their ladies are invited. There has been some misunderstanding with reference to the buffet dinner, but every shriner is expected to see that his lady is in attendance.

Mrs. R. E. Shepherd has been appointed chairman of the ladies entertainment committee.

Following is the program in detail:

12:15 p. m. Business session and registration of novices. All novices report to Recorder at his office, second floor Masonic Temple, Tenth at Scott.

1:30 p. m. Parade to form on Scott street, south of Tenth. All Nobles having dress suits are requested to wear them in the parade. DIPLOMATIC SLEUTHS ARE ON THE JOB

French and the Italians. No need to fuss about it. It's perfectly correct.

Gossips have it that the British Intelligence Department operates in a really intelligent way. The British sleuths are hand-shakers rather than trailers. They do not stand on corners in the rain watching front doors. Not they. They are inside the front door talking to the host and hostess and the honored guest. That's real diplomatic secret service. It makes one think of the Oppenheim stories. It's only a matter of time before the wicked countess and the horrible duke and the rest of the stage properties show up.

The social end of this conference is to be a very important end, too—which might be said of most conferences. Luncheons, dinners, receptions, Scotch-small-and-earlies, teas, dances—the entire social programme is being set on wheels. Perhaps the leading delegates may not have the time to spare for many such affairs, but the minor ones will have all the time there is. According to precedent, the leading delegates will do all the work and the minor ones will merely dress the stage.

But the minor ones are bound to get a line on what is going on—as will the secretaries and the attaches and the more minor lesser ones—and they will be subjected to pumping at the dinners, dances, teas, and so on. Each delegation industrially pumping each other delegation.

SUN DODGERS TO PLAY PENN. STATE DEC. 3

By Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 21.—University of Washington's football team meets an almost traditional rival in the stadium here December 3, when Coach Hugo Bezdek brings his Pennsylvania state eleven to meet the Sun Dodgers in the second intersectional gridiron struggle played in Seattle.

On the basis of early season results, Penn State will be the stronger when the two teams begin play December 3. But one team had been able to score on Bezdek's crew this fall until the Nittany Lions met Harvard, October 22. Bezdek's men had the edge on the Cambridge eleven until the closing minutes of the contest, when the Crimson put over the tying touchdown of a 21-21 score. October 29, in its first intersectional game, Penn State defeated the strong Georgia Tech eleven, 28 to 7. The records of the team this season include victories over Lebanon Valley 53-0; Gettysburg, 24-0; North Carolina 35-0 and Lehigh 28-7.

Coach Bagshaw took over the direction of a green squad when he came to Washington this year. Comparatively easy victories were scored over the Ninth Army Corps team, 24-7; White man College 7-0; and University of Montana 28-7. Then the Oregon Agricultural College defeated Bagshaw's eleven, 24-0. Every effort of the Washington team has been bent toward defeat of Penn State, and Purple and Gold supporters are confident their eleven will make its best showing of the season December 3. On November 5 Washington upset predictions by holding the strong Stanford eleven to a scoreless tie.

SWIFT'S EMPLOYES AT FORT WORTH TO VOTE ON WAGE CUT

By Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 21.—Whether more than 2,000 employes of the Fort Worth plant of Swift and Company will agree to a cut in wages as recently asked by the "Big Five" packers in Chicago will be determined here before tomorrow afternoon, when the "employes' assembly" at the local plants will hold a meeting.

Agree to Buy Gravel From Local People

The county commissioners court in session Monday agreed to buy gravel for the construction of the Burkburnett concrete road from gravel owners near that city provided the quality of the material came up to requirements and the price was not in excess of that obtained from pits outside the county.

The action was taken after S. B. Spence, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce at Burkburnett, and John E. Haynes and A. M. Abbott also of that city, had apepared before the court and asked that the gravel owners be given an opportunity to furnish the entire amount needed. County Engineer Isbell was authorized to furnish the owners with data regarding the cost of gravel to the county from out of county pits. He will also analyze the sand as to quality.

W. T. Harris, county clerk, will take the $75,000 hospital bonds to Austin to secure final approval from the state comptroller's department. The court also passed an order to buy the bonds from the interest and sinking funds of the county. It is expected that the money will be available from the bonds by next Monday when the bids for the erection of the $150,000 addition to the general hospital are opened.

TRAGEDY LURKS ALL ALONG THE PRIMROSE PATH

Drink and Drugs and False Promises of Bright Lights Luré Many Women to Sordid Death.

"I Am Tired of Life," Said Evelyn Nesbit, as She Swallowed Morphine—Procession of Ghosts.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—"I am tired of life," said Evelyn Nesbit, after swallowing a dose of morphine in New York.

At 35, not yet down to bare poverty, although unable at the moment to pay a debt of $300, the woman who fourteen years ago was the most discussed of her sex, was desperate. She was finding conditions unbearable. She hated the past, and the future seemed to hold nothing for her.

Her life was saved. Quick medical treatment removed the poison. She goes on facing the years to come. But an unhappy death—of the sort which has overcome many and many a once beautiful girl who strayed early into pleasure's side alleys—was very close to her.

Evelyn Nesbit's attempt at suicide brought to memory a long succession of women who are now gone; women who rode high on the waves of riches, popularity and gayety, whose exploits and expressions held public attention at focus, but who invariably in the end crashed down to sorrow and death.

Josie Mansfield's Career.

It is a long way back to the days of Josie Mansfield, but many of the elder of the citizenry can remember that famous beauty who flashed dramatically across the scene in the early '70s. Helen Josephine Mansfield she was, New England born, brought up in California, married first to an actor named Frank Lawler, divorced by him, and then in 1867 becoming the protege of James Fisk, Jr., known as "Admiral Jim" of the Erie railroad. He installed her in a brownstone house and lavished upon her money, jewels, gowns, horses, anything she desired.

So far did Fisk go in his devotion that on one occasion, boasting of his political power and his affection for her, he vowed:

"I'll have New York's name changed to Helena in your honor."

But there was another man to whom Josie Mansfield's attractions appealed—Edwin S. Stokes, rich and powerful like Fisk, whose friend he was. She "played" both men. A feud grew up between them. They fought in the stock market and in the courts. On January 1, 1872 they met on the stairway of the Grand Central hotel. There was a pistol shot and Fisk fell mortally wounded.

Fled to Europe.

After an unsuccessful suit for $200,000 against Fiske's widow, Josie Mansfield fled America and went to Paris to live. In 1891, over there, she was married to Robert Livingston Reade, a society and clubman of New York, who told his friends: "I am drinking myself to death and only Josie can save me." They were divorced four years later. Reade, reduced to poverty, died in 1910. A short time previously Josie Mansfield, faded and white haired, returned obscurely to this country, and, in ill health, went to Philadelphia and made her home with a married sister.

She is dead now. Just where, when or in what circumstances she died were matters kept secret by her relatives. But there were few to mourn and Josie is almost forgotten.

The "Slipper Toast" Girl.

Bettina Girard is another name with which New York was familiar in a somewhat later period. Betty Ordway was the daughter of Gen. Albert Ordway, U. S. A. At 17, tiring of convent life, she went upon the stage in Washington and her ravishing young beauty and exquisite voice caused a tremendous sensation.

She was the heroine of the "slipper toast." A young attache of the French embassy at a supper party told her: "I will make you famous," and pulling off her little pump he filled it with champagne and drank her health.

Bettina Girard soon was married to Arthur Padelford, a handsome young millionaire. They went abroad to live. Three months later he was separated from her, and later he won a divorce and at the same time repudiated the fatherhood of a child born to her.

The Gutter Claimed Her.

The woman came back to America. For a time she was an attraction on the stage, but she began to drift downward. She drank heavily, and the news that "Betty Girard was picked up unconscious on the street" became rather commonplace. Often she was arrested; oftener sent to hospitals.

Man after man married her, only to have the bonds severed in a short time. She had seven husbands altogether, many of them actors. In 1904, after a prolonged drinking bout, she was placed in Roosevelt hospital suffering from acute pneumonia, and there she died, almost friendless.

Clara Ward's Meteoric Life.

Clara Ward was a native of Detroit, but she spent much time in New York, and her escapades interested the greater part of the United States. Possessed of a great fortune left by her father, she was married in the early '90s to the Prince de Chimay, a Belgian nobleman. Indeed, she was one of the first "American princesses."

Tiring of court life she ran away to Vienna and startled the world by eloping with a Hungarian gipsy violinst, Janczi Rigo, to whom she later was married after Prince Chimay had divorced her. She lavished a fortune upon Rigo, but after a time left him and took up with various other men. The Hungarian came to this country and fiddled in restaurants and cabarets all over the country.

In 1917 the former Clara Ward died poor and unhappy in Padua, Italy, the wife of Albano Cassolata, who had become her husband after she and Rigo had parted.

Florence Schenck's "Gay Career."

A still more recent follower of the gay life who came to a miserable end was Florence Schenck, a beautiful Virginian.

She was the daughter of Dr. Powhatan Schenck of Norfolk and granddaughter of a governor of the state. At 17 she ran away from home with Charles Henry Wilson, manager of Alfred Vanderbilt's stable of show horses, and went with him to England. This was in 1906. She said later that she believed she was married to him, but he denied there had been any ceremony.

She returned after a short period and became one of the gayest of the gay in New York. A "party" in the lively circles where the word means a drinking bout was never complete without the tall, blue-eyed beauty. She tried the stage, but was untalented and before long abandoned it and became one of those whose means of livelihood no one speaks about. But she did not abandon drinking, and before long was a confirmed dipsomaniac.

She died early in 1914, forgiven at the last moment by her father, and whispering words of advice to young girls to keep away from alcohol and the stage, and beware of the promises of men.

She was 25.

Sarah Cowen's End.

Only a few months ago—on the last day of July to be exact—New York heard of still another tragedy of the same general sort. Miss Sarah Camellina Cowen, daughter of the late John K. Cowen, who had been president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, was found dead in the Hotel Maryland from alcoholism and morphine poisoning. She had gone there with a chauffeur and they had registered as "S. Cowen and wife."

Sally, as her southern friends knew her, had been one of the most popular girls in Baltimore, where her high social position was unquestioned. At the death of her father she had inherited about one-half million dollars in her own right. She "went the pace" and became not only a confirmed drinker but a drug addict. She was registered as such in New York.

She went to New York to be cured of the drug habit and went voluntarily to Blackwells Island. Coming out, she became a probationary nurse at Bellevue hospital, but her cure was not permanent and she went into various forms of dissipation. She was 33 when she died. The belief was that while intoxicated she took more than her customary dose of morphine.

And Now Evelyn.

Evelyn Nesbit's career is almost too well known to need any recounting here. It was over her that Harry K. Thaw, the eccentric young millionaire from Pittsburgh, shot and killed Stanford White on the roof of Madison Square Garden in 1906. When Thaw was first tried, a year later, it was her story on the witness stand—to the effect that White had ruined her—which undoubtedly saved Thaw from the electric chair and caused the jury to disagree. On the second trial he was found not guilty because of insanity and has been in asylums ever since.

Evelyn Nesbit tried the stage and failed. Officials of various cities barred her from their theaters. She tried photo plays, but did not succeed there. Her latest venture was a tearoom, which also failed and it was because the furniture of this place was about to be seized for rent that she sought self-destruction.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Polo is rapidly becoming one of the most popular of sports on the University of Chicago campus. Every Tuesday is known as "Polo Day" and students and residents gather in a nearby field and engage in spirited contests.

The game is now a part of the military curriculum at the university. "There is nothing like it to teach aggressiveness," said a major in charge of the activities.

Self Confidence

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A Derby employer advertised a vacancy on his staff at $12 a week. He received 800 applications, among which was one enclosed in an ordinary envelope which had a border marked in red ink.

Printed across the top were the words, "As this envelope is unique and stands out from the rest, so does my application."

He got the job.

MAY INSTALL THIRD GLASS PLANT HERE

One of the principal plate glass companies of Pittsburg, Pa., plans establishment of a southwestern branch at Wichita Falls within the near future, according to information here Monday—the plan having been formed sometime back and at this time being so far matured that they plan to have a representative in Wichita Falls in the near future.

While none of the details have been made public, it is expected that the plant located here will be of considerable size. The company, which also handles glass other than plate glass, is a large customer of one of the local glass plants.

The two present plants are now working at full blast, and giving employment to several hundred persons. The window glass plant, as noted in a recent issue of the Record News, is employing 100 highly skilled workmen, outside of the office force, and has an output of about 200,000 square feet of window glass per week. The Ball Brothers plant is also going at good speed.

Fuel is one of the biggest items in glass manufacture. Use of fuel oil in the plants located here over those located elsewhere, and use of natural gas as a fuel, as permitted at present, gives an even greater margin. Natural gas for industrial plants is expected to be available here for years to come.

TRIALS OF OFFICERS POSTPONED

Judge Ed Napier of the 78th district court Monday, postponed the trial of L. S. Brannon, deputy constable at Burkburnett, charged with murder, until Friday. The special venire of 60 men that had been ordered to report Wednesday will report at that time.

Failure of either the state or defense to be ready caused postponements in several criminal cases set for trial Monday morning. Judge Napier fined H. N. Bond, J. T. Taylor and C. N. Cox witnesses in the case of Anderson Lancaster, $25 each for failure to report. The trial of the case was postponed until this morning.

The case of Tom Sharp charged with theft of over $50 is also set for this morning. The case of Tom Walton charged with theft was postponed until Friday. The cases of C. C. Williams and Lawler Smith, two negroes charged with receiving and concealing stolen property was continued for the term.

COMMISSIONERS INSPECT COUNTY FARM MONDAY

The members of the county commissioners court and Pat Murphy, county auditor, Monday afternoon visited the county farm. The visit which was in the nature of an inspection was made at the request of Louis Jernigan, county farm superintendent.

The court inspected the new dormitory recently completed at the farm for inmates. The building will accommodate fourteen men and women and is so constructed that in case of emergency accommodations could be made for a larger number.

Mr. Jarigan has recently added to the attractiveness of the farm by a driveway around the several buildings. A large number of trees are to be planted during the coming month on both sides of the driveway.

The Woman Citizen

Boulevards.

A boulevard is a glorified highway. It is used mostly for pleasure driving, and heavy traffic is prohibited or diverted from it. Originally, it was the connecting street between parks in a system, but we have learned its value both as an artistic asset and commerciall and it is a shrewd real estate man who now devotes space for the boulevard in the addition he lays out, because such beauty streets attract the most desirable home-seekers and the most beautiful houses.

Sometimes the boulevard is bordered on both sides with grassy stretches, sometimes a park-like center reaches its whole length, with here and there a fountain or a statue to gladden the eye.

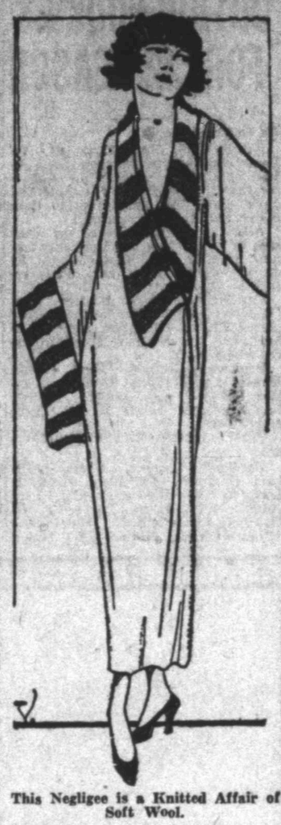

Many cities are building boulevards along their water fronts, in some cases redeeming low lands or even building land by filling in low places. In some cities slums have been torn out and supplanted by boulevards, breathing spaces in crowded sections for the enjoyment and health of the people. The boulevard in the business section does not cripple business, as it merely regulates the kind of buildings, the course of traffic and provides that all shall be beautiful and pleasure giving. Piers, terminals, and ware houses are being beautified along such boulevards with no loss of business value.

Europe has some cities which were formerly walled. When the walls were torn down wide spaces were left and converted into "ring streets" which encircle the business section and provide beautiful drives and opportunity to get easily from one side of the city to the other without passing through the congested section. Vienna has one such wonderful "ring street." Beautiful public buildings have been grouped on it according to a plan and make it a convenience and delight.

The Assyrians were the first to equip an army with iron weapons.

Fashions for Americans

The enthusiastic knitter will find many hours' employment for her busy fingers in the fashioning of a negligee garment such as the one shown in the sketch. It was developed in all-white, with cuffs and shawl collar of white striped with robin's egg blue. The garment was made in a plain stitch, and a reasonably light-weight yarn was used.

This Negligee is a Knitted Affair of Soft Wool.

The correct washing of knitted garments of all kinds is very important, indeed, if they are to last long enough to justify the time and patience required for their fashioning. Naturally they must not be washed in very hot water nor in cold, but in water that is just a little more than lukewarm.

Avoid rubbing soap on the garments. Make suds first. Of course such garments must not be hung out to dry, but placed in a little hammock made of a good-sized towel or piece of cloth, and tossed about until no suspicion of moisture remains.

The garment shown, except for the very wide sleeves, is knitted on the same general lines as a Tuxedo sweater.

A very lovely and simple silk negligee seen recently was made by taking a section of material twice the length of the finished garment, folding it in the center, and rounding out a space for the neck. The under part of each sleeve was then cut out, and the sections secured in this way were used to piece out the short sleeves that were cut in one with the garment, forming long wing sleeves finished with silk tassels.

Corduroy and velveteen are frequently used for warm, practical negligee garments, with trimming of self cording or narrow silk braid.

WOMAN-I-TORIALS

Lack of sufficient refreshing sleep is a cause of malnutrition, according to Lucy Cordiner, nutrition expert of the University of Minnesota. "Little children should not be taken to exciting picture shows in the evening, or sleep will not be the restful institution nature demands for the growing child," she says. She would encourage the Saturday afternoon matinee when the mother knows the character of the play to be given, but that we keep them at home and really become acquainted with them in the evening hours. In the line of pleasure, they will not suffer if we save something for their later years.

The female of the species is more sensible than the male; e. g., she adjusts her raiment to the temperature. The masculine persuasion wears the same, indoors and out at eighty fahrenheit or thirty-two.

THE PROP

By CAROLYN BEECHER

CHAPTER V.

"Mother, how much money have you and dad got in the bank?" It was a troubled Ruth who asked the question. It had been three months since Henry Browning came home and told his family he had been discharged. Three months of straining to keep what Ruth called "a stiff upper lip," three months of wrangling and nagging at home, and of hard work at the office.

Her question was caused by reading the slip of paper her father had thrust into her hand while she was taking off her hat and coat.

"I don't dare tell mother," he had whispered, and she had made an excuse to go to her room to see what had caused him to fear the effect upon her mother.

"Mr. Henry Browning: Dear Sir —The interest on your mortgage falls due the 21st of this month. This is but a reminder. Yours faithfully, H. G. Harden."

That was all. An innocent looking communication enough. But it blanched Ruth cheeks, caused her to tremble with apprehension, even as it had her father.

Her father was in the hall when she came down. Going to him she laid her hands on his shoulders.

"We'll meet it, dad." She looked into his eyes, rather she tried to. He avoided her clear glance. "We'll meet it somehow. Then you'll soon get another job. Perhaps with bigger pay. You must be worth it or they wouldn't have given you so much the last three years."

This last remark showed how little Ruth knew of the economic conditions which governed this country at that time.

This was it that had caused her question the moment she found herself alone with her mother.

"I asked him yesterday," her mother replied in a sort of whisper. Her fears had dominated even her voice. "He said there was just eighty-five dollars left in the bank."

"Thank God!" Ruth reacted to the strain of the past half hour by laughing nervously, then wiping her eyes. "The interest on the mortgage is ninety dollars. We'll have to take the other five out of my salary this week."

"But—Ruth—how can I feed you all, pay the gas bill, if you take out five dollars?"

"We'll have to live on crackers, on air. But that interest must be paid. Why, mother, think what it would mean if we lost the house, if we hadn't a roof to cover us. The poorhouse, or something worse," she laughed almost hysterically. Her relief had been great. She had feared there was nothing saved. It was typical of both mother and daughter that not one word of blame of Henry Browning passed their lips. Ruth never openly blamed him—although at times she did in her thoughts. She couldn't help it. Mary, his wife, scolded, nagged, fretted at him, but never about him. She would have considered it beneath her dignity as a wife, and as a Peabody. The Peabodys had been a very influential family when she was a girl.

When Ruth told her father he must have been worth the large salary he had received for the three years previous to the opening of our story, she really believed she was right. But as the time passed and she read of the turning off of men, of the great unemployment in the country, she began to reason things out.

"They let those they can easily spare go first," she said to herself. "They separate the wheat from the chaff," she added remembering a Bible lesson she had a few Sundays previous. "Dad said Mr. Hart called him 'driftwood' when he discharged him. If he hadn't told me that, I would go to that Mr. Hart and ask him why he discharged dad. That letter of recommendation never would get dad anything in face of that disseems that they expect something that he is honest and faithful. It more than that nowadays."

It was like Ruth that she only conversed with herself in this matter. She would not have belittled her father, would not have increased her mother's and Sam's animosity against him for the world. He looked so old, so helpless. She felt an overwhelming pity for him. It destroyed all indignation. He had been a good dad, kind and indulgent—as far as he could be. She would try and repay him by being a good daughter. Then, too, the girls must have a chance, especially Betty. She was so sweetly pretty, so bright.

"I've been thinking, Ruth, and can't you write them to let the interest go over for once. Your mother tells me the girls have to have new dresses. Betty is going to be graduated this term. She is the prettiest girl in her class ,so your mother says."

"No, dad! That interest must be paid. I'll help the girls out some way." And directly in her mind her own graduation dress was given to Betty, changed a bit so no one would know it. She winked away her tears. She had loved that dress, and it would be so useful if she wanted to go anywhere.

Open Doors In Business

Poultry Raising.

This form of agriculture is one from which many women are earning profit in connection with general farm-home life. It requires knowledge and experience, some investment, a good market, and almost constant care and attention to detail. If a woman has tried it for several years and knows all about chickens, there is no reason why she may not profitably enlarge the business; but many people fail when they attempt it on a larger scale, who have succeeded well at it on a small scale. The labor problem may make the difference, for it is hard to find any help who will give it the close and careful watchfulness which is necessary.

It permits of three forms of specialty: The raising of early spring broilers, the developing of fine stock, and the egg business. To the one who delights in it, probably more is made by raising fine stock, as both these fowls and their eggs bring high prices in season.

This is a good business to carry on in connection with some other phase of agriculture or for the girl on the farm who has grown up with a practical knowledge of it. It is a mistake to put all one's capital into the plant and leave no reserve fund for running expenses. This has often been a cause of failure in the poultry business.

SUFFERED SEVEN LONG YEARS

Finally Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ravenswood, W. Va.—"For seven long years I suffered from a female trouble and inflammation so that I was notable to do my housework. I consulted several doctors but none seemed to give me relief. Now I am very well and can do my own housework. I can gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine to suffering women." —Mrs. BERTHA LIERING, R. F. D., Ravenswood, W. Va.

RECORD NEWS SPORTS

EDITED BY C. F. (NICK) CARTER

U. S. GOLF ASS'N TO RESTORE STYMIE AT ANNUAL MEETING

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 21.—Aiming at the unification of rules here and in England, with the idea, eventually, of the creation of a world governing body in golf, the United States Golf Association at its next annual meeting will restore the much-abused stymie in this country. . . . ..

Two years of stymieless golf in America have shown the governing powers that some of the "punch" of the game is eliminated by the absence of the famous rule, which has won and lost many championships, both of minor and major character, in addition to drawing many frowns from the powers that be across the water, in England, where the royal and ancient game had its origin. The leaders of the sport in this country are now said to be ready to go back to the days when the stymie played a very important part in competition throughout the nation.

The executive committee of the United States Golf association, which this season made an exhaustive study of the new stymie rule—golfers say it is really no rule at all—has reached the decision to go back to the old order, it is said.

May Mean Discord

Whether this will mean another war with the Western Golf association, which a few years back threatened to usurp authority of the parent organization, is a matter that is causing some little concern among the followers of the game, but it is generally believed that an understanding has been reached between the executives of the national body and that which holds sway in the west, so that the restoration of the rule is expected to be effected with little or no trouble.

It will be remembered that when the stymie rule first came in for general discussion in American golfdom there was considerable of an eruption, the Western Golf association refusing to abide by the ruling of the parent body. Open war was imminent for a time, but eventually this passed off. Last winter, while the U. S. A. G. was amending the new stymie rule somewhat, the Western association was restoring it for all competition under Western rules, so that the past season saw a division on the subject, but with all national tournaments, of course, being played according to the national body's rules.

Under the original rule it was compulsory to play all stymies and very often, in a close match, one player, by laying another a stymie, was enabled to win out. This, it is said, was one of the original reasons for abandoning the rule, for some players became very adept at laying another a stymie at a critical moment, thus staving off defeat.

How Rule Applied

Under the rule which has been in vogue this past season a stymie could be laid, but it was optional with the opponent whether or not it should be played. The player had the option of playing the stymie or conceding the putt. In some instances players ten feet from the pin, facing a dead stymie and absolutely unable to run down the putt, have been known to concede an opponent a nine-foot putt, which is a fair-sized putt on any green, and follow it up by running down their own ten-footer for a half or even a win, whereas, with the old rule in force, they could have won or halved the hole only by negotiating the stymie, a feat which only a few golfers could accomplish from that distance. Thus some of the real sport was taken from the game, and the player who had perfected the art of jumping an opponent's ball and thus negotiating a stymie found he was no better than the man who had never learned that art, which caused dissatisfaction in many quarters.

In addition the rule caused much confusion. When American players went to Europe this year they were forced to play under the old stymie rule, for the English golfers have always considered it a very important part of the game, while English players who came over here for the national championships were benefited by not having to play stymies unless they wanted to, which was a distinct advantage, though it did not help the invaders insofar as winning titles was concerned, for they won none.

So American golfers might prepare themselves by rigging up a hothouse green and practicing the art of negotiating stymies this Winter, for the "old man" is coming back next summer.

A Denver woman applied to the district attorney for a "permit" to shoot a rival for her husband's affection.

MOVIES TO BE USED BY YOST FOR COACHING

ANN ANBOR, Mich., Nov. 21.—Motion pictures are to play an important part in the future coaching of the Michigan 'varsity football squad, Coach Fielding H. Yost announced following an investigation along this line.

Coach Yost discovered the value of motion pictures to a football coach by accident. He asked a local motion picture cameraman to take 1,500 feet of film of the Michigan-Ohio State game. It was Yost's intention to compile a pictural record of important Michigan games to be shown about the state and at class reunions in the future.

When the pictures were delivered a small room adjoining Yost's office was converted into a projection room and the pictures shown upon a small cardboard, the motion picture machine being focused to show all of the play on the cardboard. Although the figures in the pictures appeared to be but a few inches in height, Coach Yost, by standing close to the cardboard, obtained as good a view of his team in action as though he had been playing in the backfield. The value of motion pictures for training purposes became apparent to the "hurry up" mentor. By turning the machine slowly he found he could obtain the results of a rapid action camera. Yost turned the reel through the machine over and over again, studying the manner in which each of his charges conducted himself in the Ohio State game. He learned which of the men followed the play at all times and which lacked aggressiveness. After the demonstration was over Yost had accurate information concerning the good and bad points of each member of his squad who appeared during the game.

"I cannot say that motion pictures will revolutionize coaching but they will aid us considerably in giving us close-ups of the men under fire," Coach Yost said. "The camera records fact that cannot be discerned from the sidelines during a game. A coach knows his men better by having seen them on the screen."

Yost will attempt to procure a screen record of the Wisconsin and Minnesota games.

The pictorial record will not be confined to football, the mentor said, but pictures will be taken of games in all 'varsity sports.

TIDAL LEADS BASKETBALL RACE IN BURK

BURKBURNETT, Texas, Nov. 21.—The Tadal Western quintet increased its lead in the city basketball league race here this evening by trouncing the Gulf team 32 to 21 in a game that was unusually fast and hard-fought. Carrie and Graves starred on the offense for the winners, Graves in particular being all over the floor and caging five baskets from his position of guard. Carrie caged the ball six times in open play, but was weak on foul tosses, missing six attempts on free shost.

Line-up and summary:

Tidal Western		Gulf

Goals from field: Carrie 6, Graves 5, Collins 1, Shaffer 1, Pulliam 3, Coyle 3, Carmelie 3, Reeves 2. Goals from fouls: Coyle 5. Referee, Roche.

By NORMAN E. BROWN

The now fading football season has been the most disastrous one in the game's history for the eastern colleges, taken as a unit. The indisputable supremacy of the western elevens is the primal cause.

The west has had the greatest year in its history. It is loaded with great teams and great stars.

What men in this array stand out as the best? In the accompanying lineups represent the cream of the west—the mythical all-western team. These men are chosen not to heap praise on them or detract from the glory due others. They are chosen in the spirit in which one balances his books at the end of a given period. For every position there are several men that could be chosen and impress me as being the best of those who came under my attention.

As to the ends, Myers of Ohio State University stands out not only for his brilliant defensive and offensive work, but for his braininess. He is the logical man to captain as well as play on this team.

While the great work of "Brick" Muller, great star of the University of California, isn't well know east of the Mississippi, he has won fame in the far west while California has been winning the Pacific coast championship. His part in the team's aerial attack featured the team's triumph over Washington U. Belding of Iowa might well replace either man.

Great Line Pairs Retained

The way the tackle and guard positions are handled may draw criticism. But I do not believe the two greatest pairs of lineamen in the west should be broken up. Cappon, at tackle for Michigan, and Dunne at guard as a team, have played an important part in Michigan's unexpected show of strength. They showed thier greatness when they halted Wisconsin's plunges and blasted Wisconsin's hopes in that tie game. They work in perfect harmony. To separate them would be illogical.

Huffman, tackle, and Pixley, guard, with O. S. U., are on a par with Dunne and Cappon. To relegate one of the four to the second team would be an injustice to the one so placed. Although Pixley and Huffman played on the left side of the line, the shift to the right side would not weaken their efficiency.

Wallace of Iowa State, mentioned as an all-western choice by some critics last year, despite the brilliant work of Vick of Michigan and Bunge of Wisconsin.

Hosts of Good Backs.

Choosing the backfield is a more difficult task. The list of eligibles includes, besides the four chosen, Romney of Chicago, Wilkins of Indiana and Walquist of Illinois. Andrey Devine of Iowa, to my mind, is the greatest team general of the decade. He is without a par. His resourcefulness in attack was a prime factor in Iowa's great work this year. Iowa stands out as the team with the most powerful attack in the western conference. As to the half backs, there is more cause for discussion. Mohardt's worth with the Notre Dame team was shown clearly when the Indiana team annihilated the Army. Elliott's versatility makes him a great half. A ten-second man, he is fleet in circling the ends and in forward pass plays. But he also is a wonder at line plunging—making him doubly effective in offense.

Locke of Iowa and Sundt of Wisconsin are both wonder fullbacks. Locke's work, however, has been a bit more brilliant. He, too, is a powerful plunger as well as a heady player.

In ordinary seasons young Johnny Stuart of Ohio State might well have won his place on the all-western team. He may be placed there by many this year. He deserves praise. Johnny Kyle did wonderful work with a weak team.

Would this all-western team defeat any other team sent against it from the west? Undoubtedly not as an all-star team. They would lack the perfect teamwork any all-star team lacks. But I believe they would prove to be the best team in real action after a fair period of training.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

Why didn't Wichita high trounce Vernon Saturday? I asked Coach Viner the question, and he merely grinned and told me not to worry. So I went to another source very close to Saturday's game, and was told that the red and black had instructions to play a defensive game against Vernon; that Viner had told the boys before the game he would be satisfied with one touchdown—and also that two representatives of Polytechnic high, of Fort Worth, were on the sidelines sizing up Capt. Haney's crew, with the result that Viner instructed his men to stick to old-fashioned football and to keep their trick formations under cover.

The one touchdown failed to materialize, a fumble losing the opportunity when the red and black eleven had the ball on Vernon's five-yard line. It should be taken into consideration also that Vernon has a far stronger team than many football fans realize. While I do not recall the exact score, Vernon poured it on Quanah not long ago by a bigger score than the Electra team was able to make against the same eleven—which in itself indicates considerable.

Viner is pointing the local eleven toward this Thanksgiving battle, and it's a safe bet that the Polytechnic coaches also are seriously concerned with preparation for the game here on that date. A defeat by Wichita Falls would wreck a splendid record Polytechnic has made this season, while it is equally true that the locals will hate to taste defeat at the end of a season which has seen their goal line crossed but once.

The "Golden Bears" of California university again have won the Pacific coast football championship. Now the question arises: What Eastern eleven will be invited to tackle e'm at the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena on New Year's day? It won't be Harvard, Yale or Princeton, that's a cinch. Will it be Centre? Perhaps. And it might be Cornell, or Iowa. The dope bucket has been overturned so frequently this season that no man can figure what eleven ranks highest this side of the Pacific coast.

This office is a bedlam every Saturday night when the football scores begin coming in over the wire. The telegraph editor is a graduate of S. M. U.; the city editor hails from Austin college; one reporter got his sheepskin from T. C. U.; another was graduated from Ohio State, and a third gives three cheers every time Rice Institute is mentioned—and almost every Saturday night some football foe kicks these institutions in the face. Then the sneers, the jeers and the jests at one another's expense start. The telegraph editor began it, with the following poem (?):

"Violets is red,
Roses is blue,
Ohio's in a class
With T. C. U."

And the Ohio State "grad" came right back with the following literary masterpiece:

"Roses is red,
Violets is blue,
Who in hick ever heard
Of Rice Institute and S.
M. U.?"

That got the Rice Institute alumnus peeved, and he pecked his old typewriter with the following brilliant result:

"Violets is blue,
Roses am red,
Ohio State, neck up
Is dead."

And then the telegraph editor remembered that T. C. U. had booked a game with Centre college, so he proceeded to fire the other barrel:

"I'd rather be hit
By a Katy southboun'
Than to be a 'Christian'
When Centre comes down!"

So the Texas Christian University graduate shot a mean look at the telegraph editor, and then wasted some more typewriter ribbon, thusly:

"S. M. U.
Never goes scoreless;
Touchdown or two
Each year—more-or-less."

Just when the row was at its worst an outsider added this gem to the collection of Old Masters:

"Hoo-ray, hoo-ray,
Hoo-ray for Rice!
They beat Terrell school;
Wasn't that nice?"

And then the Big Boss had to issue an order to cease firing, reminding the gang that they were supposed to be working on a morning paper, and not getting out a monthly magazine. It's going to be rather tough this week, however, as we'll get it twice—Thanksgiving and Saturday nights both, I reckon!

WINNING ELEVEN GOES UNNOTICED

It always happens that in the mad whirl of the short football season some of the teams that make enviable records receive little notice.

The Detroit University team is such a team this fall.

The jitney city team defeated Tulane University from the south 14 to 10, beat Ohio Northern 35 to 0, trounced West Virginia Wesleyan 55 to 0, whitewashed Marietta 34 to 0, licked Springfield 21 to 0 and beat Boston college.

Which is a fair record for most any college.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 21.—St. Louis clubs of the major leagues are busy obtaining recruits in preparation for the 1922 season. The Nationals have added 15 new players to their roster and the Americans, 14.

COACH WILCE SAYS ILLINOIS PASS WAS QUITE LEGITIMATE

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Nov. 21.—After seeing moving pictures of Saturday's football victory of Illinois over Ohio State announced at noon today that in his opinion the disputed forward pass which resulted in the lone Illinois touchdown, was perfectly legitimate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Nov. 21.—Much interest was evidenced here today in the claim of some Ohio State followers that Illinois defeated Ohio State in their annual football game here last Saturday by a touchdown on a forward pass play that was completed after the ball had been grounded.

Motion pictures of the game displayed at a downtown theater last night showed apparently that after the ball had been passed it struck the ground twice before it was scooped up by Walquist of Illinois, who then ran several yards for the only touchdown of the game.

BURKBURNETT HIGH TO PLAY ALL-STARS THANKSGIVING DAY

BURKBURNETT, Texas, Nov. 21.—The Burkburnett high school will meet the local All-Stars, representing the business men, in a return football game here on Thanksgiving day. A large crowd is expected, as there is keen rivalry between the two teams. The high school boys feel confident, following the game with the strong Hastings, Okla., eleven, which they held to a scoreless tie.

The All-Stars are equally expectant of victory, in view of the fact that they defeated the high school in their first game recently 13 to 0, and will have practically the same lineup Thursday.

YALE BETTER FIXED FOR 1922 THAN TIGER AND JOHN HARVARD

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Yale with all but six of the twenty-one first string men who played against Harvard available has apparently the brightest prospects of the three teams for 1922. Coach Fisher of Harvard will have to build a new line and find some new backfield material, while Princeton will be without its greatest stars. Captain Malcolm Aldrich, hailed as one of the greatest captains that ever led the Blue, will be graduated in June.

MAYOR MAKES APPEAL FOR UNITED DRIVE

The United Charities Drive for funds to carry on the work next year presented by Mayor W. D. Cline and B. F. Johnson took the attention of the members of the Kiwanis club at the regular weekly luncheon Monday noon at the Kemp hotel. The regular talk by Judge Guy Rogers was postponed until next week on account of the time taken up by the pleas for support of the drive.

"We know that now, as during the war, Wichita Falls people are 'driven' to death by different appeals, but this centralized campaign, which includes the Welfare Council, Salvation Army, Red Cross and every branch of public welfare and charity will save a great deal of time and accomplish more than separate appeals for money," Mayor Cline declared, explaining why the United Charities were making only one appeal for funds to carry on their work this year.

Following the strong appeal of the mayor for the help from Kiwanians individually and as club members for time and money during the campaign, B. F. Johnson passed out tiny capsules in which had been placed assignments of members to different teams.

Number of Visitors

An unusually large attendance of members and quite a few visitors were present at the Monday luncheon. Among the latter were J. Wilkie Talbert, candidate for the Shrine ring, Porter Ramsey, of Richmond, Va., a charter member of the Kiwanis club of that city and a personal friend of Sergeant York, world war hero, and Rev. J. H. Groseclose, newly appointed pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church. Ramsey and Groseclose made short talks. Rev. Groseclose showed as a preacher he did not mind cracking a good wheeze occasionally, and he acquitted himself very creditably even in repartee with the Rev. Fred Datson, the official parson of the club.

J. Wilkie, although not permitted to advance his candidacy for the Shrine ring, was allowed to collect the attendance cards. In drawing for the winner of the $15 credit with the Wichita Building & Loan Association, given by Dan Lundien as the attendance prize, he at least made a friend in Wylie Brown.

Ben Neal, Julian Bobo, Carter McGregor and others are unopposed for their respective offices, according to the second ticket for officers of the club to be voted on the first Monday in December. The second ticket presented with a few exceptions was identical with the first ticked announced by the "regular" committee. It follows: Ben Neal, president; Jim Waggoner, vice president; Carter McGregor, treasurer, and Al Ellis, Dr. M. W. Hoover, Frank Quiesser, Sayles Leach, Harry Baum and Homer Lee, board of directors.

C. G. Manuel was chairman for the day. Silent boosts were "Smacking good cheroots" donated by Cap Jordan.

Students Bring Provisions for Thanksgiving

One of the first announcements of plans for spreading the cheer of Thanksgiving in an effort to place viands for a Thanksgiving dinner in the homes of the less fortunate was made Monday at the San Jacinto school.

On Wednesday every student who can is planning to bring some gift, be it a potato, a handfull of raisins or a small bit of money. The collection is then to be turned into the hands of a well informed charity agency for distribution among the needy, according to the announcement.

Newberry Row Is Sidetracked By U. S. Senate

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Ford-Newberry senatorial election contest in Michigan was laid aside by the senate tonight, probably not to come formally before the body again for several weeks.

After a day of discussion, in which Henry Ford, who is contesting the seating of Senator Newberry, was both denounced and defended and which was enlivened by a heated tilt between Senators Williams of Mississippi and Watson, Georgia, democrats, the election controversy was sidetracked to make way for the conference report on the revenue bill.

No agreement as to a date for a vote was reached but the understanding developed that little further consideration would be given the case until late in December.

RHEUMATISM CAN BE CURED!

But You Must Clear Your Blood of Waste Products.

Lack of exercise and improper diet causes waste products to accumulate in the blood. You will at once realize that unless the blood is pure, some part of the body will become diseased.

Rheumatism, with its pain and agony, is one of the most serious diseases caused by waste products in the blood. You know, of course, the blood is not confined alone to arteries and veins. It passes out of these channels to all parts of the body. This is how sediments or waste products are deposited in the muscles and joints. Genuine relief can be had only by correcting the basic trouble—waste products.

Thousands and thousands of men and women during the past 50 years have cleared their blood of waste products with S. S. S. It is the ideal remedy for rheumatism, because it removes the poisonous waste matter which is causing the trouble. There are no bad after effects and the result is wonderful. Begin taking S. S. S. today and write for 56 page illustrated booklet, "Facts About the Blood"—free.

Dog Bones Play Part in Trial of "Blue Beard"

VERSAILLES, Nov. 21—Bones of two dogs which belong to Mlle. Marchandier, one of the eleven alleged victims of "Bluebeard" Landru again figured prominently in today's session of Landru's trial for murder here.

Landru, having admitted he had killed the dogs, Judge Gilbert insistently pressed the prisoner to explain in what manner.

"I strangled them," Landru finally shouted. Then he explained that he had used a waxed cord in the strangling process.

Prosecutor Godefroy, who insisted that that particular point be brought out, declared it would aid the prosecution in proving that Landru, during fits of excited frenzy, had strangled the missing women, cut them up into bits and then, after regaining his normal mind, sold a few of their cheap belongings.

Inspector Riboulet today told the jury that every hamlet, village, town and city in France had been searched by the police without result for traces of the women.

The crush of people to gain admission to the court room today was so great that many women fainted. Two women hurled themselves against the bayonets of the soldiers keeping guard at the door and one was severely wounded while the other suffered slight injuries.

Negroes Break County Jail

Walter Brown, Eli Perkins, and Thomas Bruce, three negroes charged with felony offenses who escaped from the county jail Saturday night had not been apprehended late Monday night. The escape of the three negroes was not generally known until Monday officers of the sheriff's department making no announcement in the hope of apprehending them before they left the city.

According to information from Jess Tarver, jailer, the negroes made their escape some time Saturday night through the hole in the rear of the jail building made several weeks ago by another negro who escaped and has not yet been apprehended.

According to Tarver he had the three negroes aiding him Saturday in cleaning out the jail. In some manner one of the negroes is believed to have crawled on top of the "bear cage" on the second floor without the jailer detecting him.

After the jail was locked for the night it is presumed that the negro unlocked the door to the cell where the two other negroes were held, the three then escaping out of the hole in the rear of the . Sheriff Smith said Monday that he had tried to have some one repair the jail but had not been successful.

Two of the negroes are charged with burglary and one with theft.

Pipeline Company. Paul Gage was vice-president and general manager of the Lone Star Gas Company until that concern formed an oil division when he took charge of that in the field. He has had many years of experience in petroleum and pipe lines and is a close personal friend of Dr. Edward Allan McPherson, who married the daughter of the late Daniel O'Day and has built pipe and gas lines galore in the southwest. Walter C. Teagle of the Standard Oil Company is touring Texas. This is what he is reported to have said to a newspaper correspondent at Tulsa, "I can safely say that the Mid-Continent field will be called on for more crude than ever before." The Sinclair Consolidated Corporation and the Prairie Oil and Gas Company are preparing to extend their pipe lines into the Mexia oil fields. Several of the larger oil companies earlier in the year investigated the territory of the Mexia field but failed to take acreage pending further investigation. Many companies are building loading racks along the railroads entering the field as the oil now being taken from the district is shipped by tank cars. Walter B. Pyron of this city is the new vice-president of the Kansas-Oklahoma division of the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association. A wire from Ranger says the construction of the first pipe line from Mexia was started Saturday by the Texas Pipeline Company. This line will be eight inches in diameter and will connect 15 miles west of Mexia with the trunk line of the company which starts in Tulsa and has its southern terminus at Port Arthur. It is announced that the company expects to have the line completed by the first of the year as the first main line into Mexia.

Coppers Give New Name to Downtown Alley

Wichita Falls police report that a new name has been found for an alleyway in the downtown section of Wichita Falls. The location of this alley is not divulged by the police, but it is believed to be near the source of certain activities from which it derives its newly applied cognomen.

The name conferred by the coppers is "Yew Dee," a supposedly vernacular rendition of "Eau de" in the names of French and allegedly French perfumes and toilet waters popular with those who imbibe at any cost. Some of the most popular of these are fluid compounds, which, speaking in terms of international consumption, are guaranteed to grow hair on an egg in five minutes, and which has been found to produce a ready and voluble kick when used by persons who are at that time unable to find or purchase a fruit jar filled with the well known "corn."

Five men were reported to have been arrested Monday afternoon in the vicinity of this alley under the influence of this dually effective scalp cleansing compound. The five men arrested were lodged in jail under charges of drunkenness.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 21.—Taking of testimony began here today in the trial of W. C. Hanner, Harris County school teacher, charged with altering examination papers for state teachers' certificates.

Hanner was formerly a member of the board of examiners of Harris County and it is alleged that he altered questions of applicants.

Miss Annie Webb Blanton, superintendent of education, and W. G. Smiley, superintendent of the Harris county schools, were the only witnesses heard today. Mr. Smiley testified that the defendants reputation was "good."

Immigrant Camps.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Transmigrants from Europe to Canada and America who travel through England will shortly be housed under ideal conditions while awaiting embarkation from Southampton.

Instead of the temporary accommodation now provided in scattered homes of East London they will in the near future be concentrated in one big camp a few miles outside Southampton.

Mrs. Mollie Smith, of Smithton, Ark., has the distinction of being the only woman member of the Independent Order of Hoo Hoo, the national fraternal society of the lumber and allied industries.

PAVING ON INDIANA IS AUTHORIZED

The paving of Indiana street from Tenth to Thirteenth street was authorized at a brief session of the city council Monday night. The petition of property owners concerned requesting the paving has been before the council several weeks, action being withheld. W. J. Nolen headed a party of several property owners present at the meeting requesting the paving at once. It is the first paving to be ordered in by the council since the decision several months ago to cut down public improvement work to a minimum pending lower prices for construction materials.

The expenses of the police department for November will be $4,500 according to Police Commissioner Fitts who made what he termed a "four minute speech" regarding his department.

He commented on the fact that a previous report of the finance department had shown that the expenses of the police department had increased since he took office in July. He explained this by asserting that he had been compelled to pay some back bills of the department together with payments on some automobiles and insurance.

"It is not my purpose to commercialize the police department," Commissioner Fitts declared. "We will never go out and arrest persons simply to collect fines to aid in paying the cost of the department."

Mayor Cline expressed approval for this attitude stating that he frequently had complaints made to him by local residents who claimed that arrests were being made to collect fines.

The council took no final action regarding the payment of delinquent taxes where property owners have an abstract showing that the taxes have been paid. Tax Collector Anderson presented a long list of property owners who claim to have paid their taxes but of which there is no record at his office.

The council in on case where the abstract showed the tax to have been paid ordered the supposed delinquent taxes cancelled.

MAIL BANDITS, BEWARE! DEVIL DOGS, ARMED TO THE TEETH, ARE ON THE JOB

U. S. marines guarding mails in Washington, D. C.

If you don't get your Christmas parcels it won't be because of mail bandits—not with these marines guarding the mails. This chap, armed with service rifle, bayonet, and big automatic, is guarding the mails in the passage between the Washington postoffice and the Union station. Similar scenes are now enacted in nearly every large city in the country.

Luscious Fruits On Exhibit at Produce House

Shining red apples, luscious oranges, overgrown bananas and in fact every holiday item which is carried by a well stocked produce house, including holiday fruits and vegetables of all kinds and candies make up a special Thanksgiving exhibit which has been arranged by George Keith and which he invites the public to view each night until Thanksgiving at the Wichita Produce company on lower Ohio avenue.

Although this firm does not handle anything retail, Mr. Keith is anxious that local housewives see this complete exhibit for educational reasons if nothing else as it is on the order of blue ribbon specimens of fruit and vegetable affairs. Among the less commonly seen lines which are represented in the exhibit are artichokes, alligator pears, satsuma organes, fancy Washington apples and California fruits.

Girls Watch News Events.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21.—A census just completed by Radcliffe college of its 600 enrolled students reveals that 96 per cent of the young women read the newspapers regularly. Seventy per cent read one or more "home town" papers as well.

Sixty-two per cent of the Radcliffe girls said they read the editorials of their newspaper regularly. The news columns ran second as a "favorite section."

Said to be the only Chinese woman banker in the world, Miss Dorothy Gee, a native of Canton, is in charge of the credits and loans of the oriental department of one of the leading banks in San Francisco.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC TO NEGOTIATE WITH WORKERS ON WAGES

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, California, Nov. 21.—The Southern Pacific has called conference of all its railway employes to "negotiate a revision of rates of pay" it was announced officially last night at company headquarters here.

The management's wage proposals in practice, it is believed will amount substantially to re-establishment of wage scales that were in effect at the end of the period of federal control, March 1, 1920. The statement was given with the authority of J. H. Byer, general manager.

HOUSTON, Nov. 21.—The Southern Pacific lines in Texas and Louisiana today gave formal notice of its desire to reduce wages effective January 1 and asked for conferences with representatives of the different classes of men affected. No schedule of reductions was announced and it was stated that efforts would be made to adjust rates of pay in such a manner as to remove differentials in favor of some classes as against others. Conferences will begin within the next two weeks.

KATY RAILROAD HAS PLAN FOR RE-ORGANIZING

Exchange of Over $2,000,000 in Securities Involved to Eliminate Present Receivership.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Details of the reorganization plan of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad company, which has been operated under receivership since 1915, were announced today by J. and W. Seligman and Company and Haligarten and Company, the reorganization managers.

The plan involves exchange of over $200,000,000 of securities and is said to embrace dealings with more interests, domestic and foreign, than any similar undertaking since the Southern railway reorganization in 1894. It is stated that about sixty per cent of the various holders of the old securieties have given their assent to the proposed rehabiltation.

Outstanding features include a reduction of the fixed interest bearing debt from $146,543,142, to $100,320,913 and of fixed annual charges from $7,429,376 to $4,197,717. In addition the new company will issue $57,000,000 five per cent convertible adjustment mortgage bonds.

Total capitalization of the old company, stocks and bonds, of $248,095,000, is to be replaced by the new company's bonds and preferred stock aggregating $182,320,000 and 783,155 shares of common stock without par value.

The plan calls for an assessment of $20 per share on the $13,000,000 old preferred and $25 per share on the $63,283,257 old common. This will provide $18,420,000 new cash for reorganization purposes, about $4,000,000 will be used to pay off receivers certificates and bank loans; $1,275,000 to pay deferred interests under the plan, $1,000,000 to meet next year's equipment trust maturities; $4,000,000 to provide the new company with a working balance and $8,103,000 to be reserved for additions, betterments and expenses of reorganization.

For each $1,000 of principal and accrued interest on existing securities the plan offers new securities and cash. Included in this offering besides the securities of the main line, are those of the Kansas City and Pacific railroad; Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma railroad, Missouri, Kansas and Eastern railroad, Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad of Texas; Dallas and Waco railway; Wichita Falls and Northwestern railway; Southern Coal and Improvement Company, and Boonville Railroad Bridge company.

The $18,400,000 certificates, provided under the reorganization were offered today for participation and the amount was almost immediately oversubscribed.

President of Morgan Co. to Go Over Project

L. L. Hidinger, widely known engineer of Memphis, Tenn., and as president of the Morgan Engineering Co. associate of Arthur E. Morgan, engineer who was sent to Wichita Falls to approve the general lines of the project prior to the purchase of the construction bonds, will arrive in Wichita Falls today in connection with engineering features of the project.

Mr. Hidinger's visit, his first, will be for the purpose of attending to engineering details connected with the project, and the visit is in the interest of the purchasers of the bonds, R. A. Thompson, chief engineer for the irrigation board said Monday.

E. S. Heyser, vice president of the Callahan Construction company, successful bidders for the construction, and the man who will be in charge of the project, returned to Wichita Falls from Dallas, Monday—while in Dallas letting the contract for the concrete work, amounting to about $1,500,000, to a Dallas firm as told in a previous issue of The Record News.

Mr. Heyser expects, as soon as possible, to sublet excavation work for the project. This work will be largely let to teaming contractors, he said on his arrival here, this being deemed as a method more satisfactory in some respects than through the use of machinery principally, and a method which is thought will prove more beneficial to Wichita Falls and surrounding territory through benefitting a larger number of workers.

Mr. Heyser is negotiating for offices for his company here. At present he is at the Kemp hotel.

Married But Still "Infant."

WOOSTER, Nov. 21.—Although she was married to Clarence Mowrer on January 13, 1918, nearly four year ago, Mrs. Mabel McGregor Mowrer is still "an infant" in the eyes of the law. Her petition for divorce was filed by her mother. Mrs. Mowrer is still under eighteen years of age. She was married when she had just passed her fourteenth birthday.

"Vegg" Pleads Guilty.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 21.—Rather than go to jail on a charge of robbery, Joe Call, a confessed highwayman, pleaded guilty to attempted robbery and was given a prison sentence of twenty-five years by Superior Judge Avery. Conviction on the robbery charge would have brought a sentence of fifty years.

MADAME X IS WELL RECEIVED ON FIRST NIGHT

"Madame X", a melodrama which has been accorded a place among the greatest plays, has perhaps been played by more different companies with varying degrees of ability than any of this type except "Camille" but with such material to work with, the actor and the actress becomes incidental and the individuality is forgotten in the theme of the whole. That is the impression after witnessing the first night presentation Monday evening by the Lewis-Worth stock company at the Wichita theater.

To say the performance is creditable means that the tear ducts of the audience the opening night were overworked. For "Madame X" is one of those plays which, regardless of efforts to stem the rising emotion, will play on the imagination and touch the heart chords. The parting advice before speaking a word about the good work of the characters, is "take an extra handkerchief along when you go".

Ted Brackett, as Floriot the proud husband, who loves his pride more than his wife, plays his part with a strength that is moving and sincere. His is not the kind of stage hokum heaves its chest and tears its hair. The restraint which is the better part of acting is there, also.

Olga Worth, as "Madame X" especially in the court room scene, mounts to the peak of her dramatic powers. Before starting to write the review the reporter thought he would get off a little fun, quoting Fannie Brice's takeoff of Camille in the current "Follies" where she said "I've been a bad woman, Armanda, but I've been awfully good company" —but somehow or other it seems out of place after going through the ordeal of those last few minutes in "Madame X". You will think so too.

Gene Lewis, besides possessing an unusually good memory evidenced when he recites the long plea for mercy for the poor woman, seems entirely in earnest about it. He is a little too handsome for the average lawyer, but perhaps they are different in France.

What a relief from the strain is the clownish actions of the two slyster lawyers, Laroque and Parissard, played by Klock Ryder and Charles Lammers. Mr. Ryders work is especially good. These few bits of comedy are well portrayed by these capable actors.

There is not even a hint of a happy ending.

Life is not always ended that way Even the chambermaid goes off with her lover regardless of the advice of Madame X, who knows. And the hardhearted husband no doubt keeps on paying in his memory. And women who sin will no doubt continue to be ejected from home or run away with the man, until the millenium arrives. But even at that "Madame X" is "Madame X" and the stock company does darn well with the play. So there you are.

The rest of the cast including Miss Pauline De Roy, Jack Doty, who deserves extra credit for his serious study of the part, Edward Leach, Jack Emmerson, Joe Remington, Misses Irene Daniel and Lee Smith were chosen well and acted their parts well.

"Madame X" will continue throughout the week with matinee performance on Thanksgiving.

Repeal North Dakota Recall Election Asked

By Associated Press.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 21.—A petition asking the nullification of the North Dakota recall election of October 28 in which three state officials elected with the endorsement of the non-partisan league, ousted in favor of independents was filed in the state supreme court today.

The petition was filed by Attorneys representing five "taxpayers". The attorneys asked the court to hear them tomorrow morning on the question whether the court will accept original jurisdiction.

The petitioners allege that the petitions asking for the recall election were not signed by 30 per cent of the qualified electors who voted at the preceding election for governor and that the recall election itself therefore was illegal.

TIGER CLEMENCEAU.

Tiger Clemencean of France is a wise old man. He has been on the firing line of action for sixty years. He was the war god of France when France was being bled white. He never wavered. He fought on. He was worth more to France than a dozen field marshals. He saw the war won. Decades before he saw Bismarch compell the representatives of France to sign the treaty which robbed their country of Alsace and Lorraine. He had his revenge when the representatives of the German people signed the treaty at Versailles which restored to France the lost provinces taken by Bismarch. Of course the Tiger has his doubts. He does not believe that human nature can be changed. This is his latest: "What ever may be accomplished at the Washington conference two or three years hence President Hardings' opponents will say he betrayed his country. So they are going to end wars by scrapping battleships. It would be a fine thing to save money, but remember that small boys who can't find stones to throw at each other will go to it with their fists. I don't know what will come out of the Washington conference but as a participant in the last world conference I can say with dead certainty that whatever may be accomplished two or three years hence Harding's political opponents will say he betrayed his country. You will find people calling Arthur Balfour a fool and if I knew Japanese I could tell you some choice names they will apply to the Japanese delegates in Washington." Tiger Clemenceau knows. In war time France acclaimed him the god of the land of the lilies. When peace time came and they thought they did not need him his countrymen set him aside. This is what happened to Woodrow Wilson. He was a war president of the United States. He was one of the makers of the Versailles treaty. He came home. It was peace time. His opponents said that he had betrayed his country. They rejected his treaty and spat upon his name. Now they are endeavoring to create an association of nations instead of the league of nations that will lead to the scrapping of battleships for ten years. Tiger Clemenceau is a prophet with honor save in his own country. When they need him, his countrymen work him. When they don't need him, they forget him.

WHERE THERE ARE MORE MEN THAN WOMEN.

If the statistician of the Philadelphia Enquirer is correct, Japan has two hundred thousand more men than women, according to the revised official census returns just published.

The total population is placed at 55,963,053. The population of the principal cities is as follows:

Tokio	2,173,201
Osaka	1,252,983
Kobe	608,644
Kyoto	591,323
Nagoya	429,997
Yokohama	422,938
Nagasaki	176,534
Hiroshima	160,510
Hakodate	144,749
Kure	130,362
Kanazawa	129,265

The total number of households in Japan is estimated at 11,223,053, Tokio leading with 456,823.

At present the eighty-three cities of Japan contain 18 per cent of the total population. The average ratio of masculine and feminine population in the urban districts is 100 women to 98.7 men. The total population of the city of Tokio has decreased by about 190,000 since 1918. A decrease of about 80,000 in Kyoto since 1918 has brought that city below the rank of Kobe, while Nagoya has surpassed Yokohama in recent years.

CHATTERER HAS A DREADFUL DAY

Chatterer the Red Squirrel was feeling quite like himself—his saucy, impudent self—as he peeped out of his doorway at daylight. He felt that he had got the best of Sammy Jay the day before. To be sure, he had had to get corn for Sammy, but he had not had to go to Farmer Brown's cornecrib for it, and he knew that it was the fun of seeing him take that risk that Sammy wanted more than he did the corn. He felt that he had been smarter than Sammy, and the feeling made him quite like his old self.

Chickaro and chickaree,
Who is there as smart as me?
Chickaro and chickaree,
Sharper wits you'll never see.

Now that was boasting, and boasting is one of the most foolish habits in the world. But Chatterer always was a boaster, and probably always will be. So he whisked in and out of the old stone wall and said this over and over while he waited for Sammy Jay to appear. He had not gone over to Farmer Brown's corncrib this morning for his breakfast, because he left sure that Sammy would come and send him for corn, and he knew that he would have to go. But he meant to go down to his own storehouse in the hollow rail on the edge of the cornfield and he could eat his fill there. So he scampered about and wished that Sammy would hurry up, for he was hungry.

At last Sammy came, and, just as Chatterer expected, he demanded the corn that Chatterer had promised to get for him whenever he should ask for it. Right away Chatterer started for the cornfield, running along the fences. He always did like to run along fences, and though it was a long way down there he didn't mind, for it was a sharp, cold morning, and the run made him feel fine. As he ran he kept chuckling to himself to think how smart he had been to think of that storehouse and a way to keep his promise to Sammy Jay without running any risk to himself. He was whisking along the fence on the edge of the cornfield and had almost reached the hollow rail when he had stored the corn. He stopped to sit up on a fence post and boast once more

Chickaro and chickaree,
Who is there as smart—

He didn't finish. Instead, his tongue seemed to stick to the roof of his mouth, and his little black eyes looked as if they would pop out of his head. Sitting on a post close to the hollow rail was a straight black form watching him with cruel, hungry looking eyes. It was Roughleg the Hawk! Chatterer gave a little gasp of fright. He whirled around and started back along the fence as fast as he could make his legs go. Instantly Roughlegs spread his great wings and sailed after him. Chatterer hadn't gone the length of two rails before Roughlegs was over him. With his great cruel claws spread wide he suddenly swooped down. Chatterer dodges to the under side of the rail just in time, the very nick of time! Roughleg screamed with disappointment, and that scream had such a fierce sound that Chatterer shivered all over.

How he ever got back to the Old Orchard he hardly knew himself. Ever so many times he just managed to dodge those great claws. But he did get there at last, out of breath and tired and frightened. There sat Sammy Jay waiting for his corn. He pretended to be very angry because Chatterer had none and threatened to go straight to the Green Forest and tell Shadow the Weasel where Chatterer was living. There was nothing for Chatterer to do but to go over to the cornerib as soon as he rested a little.

"It's been a dreadful day, a perfectly dreadful day," said Chatterer to himself as he curled up in bed for the night. "I wonder—I wonder how old Roughlegs happened to be sitting on that fence post this morning."

But Sammy Jay didn't wonder—he knew.

Where America Meets Europe

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

It is in the little occupied territory around the German city of Coblenz that America meets Europe.

What Europe will think of us tomorrow depends upon our little group of Americans there to a great degree.

Most people in the U. S. A. think about this small Army of Occupation not at all. They who do think of it misconceive it as a rule.

Hence we should note these ten points:

1. American soldiers in our occupied territory in Germany are not walking about with muskets on their shoulders terrorizing the inhabitants. To any one who will come and visit the place this idea is simply funny.

2. The Germans like the American soldiers. Of course it is not a pleasant thing to have any foreign soldiers in one's home territory, but as long as some are necessary in order to carry out the Treaty of Peace, the German people much prefer Americans to any others. Their relations with our soldiers are very friendly. The Germans in this territory are carrying on their own business as they always have done. They manage their own affairs, hold their own courts, are in nowise intimidated.

3. American soldiers like the place. Those who have to go home hate to leave. They are not suffering privations, and indeed are leading about as pleasant lives as it is possible for soldiers to lead.

4. The American soldiers are not idle. They have to work hard every day. They are kept in the pink of condition by constant attention to duty. They are not living in luxury and idleness and degenerating.

5. The leisure of the soldier and all their recreation is taken care of by the Y. M. C. A., which works in perfect harmony with the officers of the Army. The Y. M. C. A. runs all the canteens, manages the games and sports, and otherwise sees to the soldiers' recreation. And every soldier in the territory swears by the Y. M. C. A. None of them swear at it. There is no other welfare organization except the Salvation Army and the Red Cross.

6. The American army in the occupied territory is the finest army in the world in point of discipline, morale, and intelligence.

7. Although there is no prohibition in this territory there is little or no drunkenness. No native is allowed to sell brandy or other strong liquors to the soldiers, and if he does so, his place is closed up. Most of the soldiers frequent the Y. M. C. A. canteens, where no alcoholic liqors are dispensed.

8. If the American army moves out of this territory, the French will move in. This will make friction and trouble, as there is bad blood between the French and the Germans. This hostility does not exist between the Germans and the Americans. We are very friendly.

9. Most people hope that some day all of the foreign forces will be taken off of German territory, but it is quite essential that the Americans stay as long as any other forces, for as long as we stay the situation is much more hopeful. There is a strong feeling among the French that they never expect to leave the Rhine. The presence of the American troops, therefore, in the Rhine territory is one of the best guarantees that the seeds of another war will not be planted.

10. To sum up: the presence of the American troops in the occupied teritory of Germany carrying out the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles is a good thing for the peace of the world, it is a good thing as a guarantee of future peace between France and Germany, it is a good thing for the Germans and they like it, and it is a good thing for the boys of the American army. Any mother whose boy is in this army may be comforted with the assurance that he is living in conditions about as favorable to his morale as could be found under any military conditions.

Rippling Rhymes

OVERWORKED BLESSINGS.

The greatest boon becomes a bore when it's not wisely handled; and now my head and heart are sore, for I've been Gothed and Vandaled. I like the tuneful phonograph when cultured people grind it, and long I lean upon my staff and bless the guys who wind it. I love to hear it sending out fine songs of sense and feeling, composed by some accomplished scout, ere jazz bands broke the ceiling. I like to hear it in the dusk, its strains are most consoling, before the watchman, grim and brusque, his curfew bell is tolling. When curfew rings I go to bed, as do a seemly number, and, with a pillow 'neath my head, invite refreshing slumber. Then all the phonographs on earth proceed to make night horrid, and, lying sleepless in my berth, I hand out language torrid. I hear the swirling swish and swash of jazz strains most befogging, I hear the whine of Uncle Josh, who's busy monologuing. I hear the counter-tenor squeak as though his voice needs greasing, I hear the high soprano shriek, and thus it goes, unceasing. And when the hour of midnight's struck, the racket's still proceeding; what wonder if I run amuck, and leave some victims bleeding? There is a time to dance and preach, remarked the wise apostle, and there's a time to can the screech of every human throstle.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

MAINLY ABOUT MOLARS

It was only after the new baby began to cut its teeth, when it was seven months old, that its mother realized how very little she knew about teeth.

It was the motherly woman in the big gray house across the street who gave her a little friendly lecture one afternoon about teeth in general and her own baby's teeth in particular. And the young mother was very glad in the days that followed to profit by the experience of this older, wiser mother.

"Gladys, my dear, don't be deceived by what people will tell you about these first teeth of baby's not being important. They must be well cared for, otherwise bacteria will reach their roots and bring about conditions that will prove injurious to the permanent teeth when they appear."

How the Teeth Appear

"And when do the permanent teeth appear?" asked Gladys, who was still a child to the woman across the street.

"Generally between the sixth and seventh years," said Mrs. Grant, who was the woman in the big gray house.

"The baby's first teeth, the ones he is triumphantly displaying now, are the two lower central incisors. Between the eighth and twelfth months he will probably cut his two upper central incisors, and also the two upper lateral incisors. After the twelfth month come the lower lateral incisors, then the four anterior molars, some time before his sixteenth month."

"The poor darling. Such dreadful names for teeth," said his mother. "Please tell me what incisors and molars are."

"My son isn't a dentist for nothing," smiled the older mother. "What I didn't know about teeth in his babyhood I have learned from him since he grew up.

Position of the Teeth.

"The incisors are the central teeth, there being four in each jaw. The canine teeth are the pointed teeth, and there are two in each jaw, one on either side of the incisors. Then the anterior molars, known also as the bicuspids, are behind the canine teeth, and the posterior molars are behind the anterior molars."

"Why do some babies get their teeth so slowly?" asked Gladys, sewing busily on her boy's new sleeping suits.

"Very often delay in cutting the teeth is due to poor nutrition," said the other woman. "Though I am sure there is nothing in your baby's appearance to indicate under-nourishment."

"No; he is a healthy little soul, isn't he?" smiled his mother, thinking of the way in which her small son's weight crept satisfactorily along in ounces gained week by week. "He just eats and sleeps and smiles and gurgles."

Effect on Permanent Teeth.

"And that is exactly what healthy babies should do," said her companion. "But speaking of teeth, don't forget that, though the permanent teeth do not appear through the gums until your child is six or seven years old, they begin to form in the gums in earliest infancy. And if the milk teeth are lost too soon the shape and condition of the cavities through which the teeth come and in which their roots remain may be altered so as to interfere with the shape and normal condition of the permanent teeth."

"I shall institute tooth brush drill with my small son as soon as he has enough teeth to brush," said the younger mother.

"And he will thank you for it when he is older. Too many mothers neglect their children's first teeth," said Mrs. Grant.

Fair Play

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

He was a vigorous, forceful man of early middle life. By the usual road of keen endeavor he had traveled upward until he now held an important executive position. Serenity and optimism were among his outstanding traits.

But the other evening when I chanced upon him in the street car he was manifestly disturbed in mind. And he welcomed an opportunity to speak of what was troubling him.

"I am wondering," he told me, "what is going to happen to the country unless those who work for wages learn to play fair with their employers and the public. They're certainly not playing fair today. That is, great numbers of them are not.

"What they seem to be trying to do is to get as much as they can and to give as little in return as possible. Certainly that is the attitude of the workers in the office of which I have recently taken charge, and I have no reason to think that it is exceptional.

"Only this afternoon my stenographer asked me if she might attend to some private business before coming to the office tomorrow, saying that it would make her about an hour late. I told her that I had no objection whatever to her doing this.

"It happened that some important mail came in that could not be answered today without keeping her at the office a little beyond her usual time for leaving. Did she offer to stay and help to finish it up?

"She did not. At five minutes to 5 she was reaching for her hat. At 5 exactly the door closed behind her. And at that same moment everybody else in the office, except the boss, was streaking out.

"Is that fair play? And can any one say that a clock-watching office force have their hearts in their jobs? Believe me, some changes are going to be made soon in my office force. They have to be made."

As a matter of fact, workers who so plainly make it evident that quitting time is among the most precious of all things to them are playing unfairly to themselves and their dependents no less than to their employers, the men who pay their salaries and wages.

They are making it certain that, so far from prospering, they will always be on the ragged edge of unemployment. And, no matter how firmly they may think they have entrenched themselves through unionization or other processes, life is bound to be difficult to them.

Picture what it means if scanty giving of effort is the rule in all vocations, as some observers declare it to be the rule.

It means unnecessary cost in the production of everything. Hence it also means an unnecessarily high price to be paid for the purchase of any commodity.

And these clock-watching workers are, one and all, consumers as well as producers. They must pay out their wages as well as take them in. Can they justly grumble if they have to pay them out with excessive rapidity?

Fair play, the giving of full value for wages drawn, will, I verily believe, do more than anything else to make life comfortable for the masses.

Japanese women have begun an active campaign to secure the vote. Suffrage is not universal in the Island Kingdom, even among the males at the present time.

The Daily Story

THINKING BIG

Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

Letty looked pleased as Ralph turned in at the store where she clerked. The young man was back home on a visit and he had some wonderful tales to tell of the city where he now lived.

"Oh, yes," he said in reply to the girl's question, "I make a lotta money. You see," he sat up on the ribbon counter lazily, his dark eyes fixed on her rapt face, "we work in big figures there. A deal of a few hundred dollars would mean nothing to the men in our office. We think big and as a consequence we do big things. Why, only last week we turned over a deal that netted the firm $3,000 clear. Not bad for the day's work?"

The pretty store that always had seemed to Letty a splendid place to work in suddenly assumed a drab appearance, the counter was nicked and the big heating stove at the back end was very different from the tall gilded radiators filled with clean sizzling water to heat the city stores. She rarely went to the city and, heretofore, the crowded, noisy streets and overheated public buildings had not been in the least attractive to her, but, through the glamor of Ralph's glib tongue, the rambling town crowded with wonderful buildings and filled with worth-while people seemed the mecca of life.

"Three thousand dollars! And how many are in the firm?"

"The two Smiths and myself," he replied with a modest smile.

Letty, accepting the implied partnership, mentally computed the enormous profit in one day's work. She felt that the opportunities for money-making must be unlimited in town.

"It must be wonderful to do big things like that," she murmured.

"It's all in thinking big." Ralph shrugged his shoulders arrogantly. "This small-town stuff leaves me cold. Here a man has no leeway. There one incurs debts and swings deals that would make a country man gasp."

Letty was thoughtful as she went up the maple-lined street to her house, which was next door to the doctor's home.

"I won't be able to go to the movies tonight after all, Letty," said the doctor's wife, who was weeding her poppy bed. "I'm going out into the country with the doctor. The Smiths are all ill and they cannot get a nurse, so we're going to do what we can."

"I'll go with you if you don't start too early," cried Letty instantly. "It won't take me long to eat my supper."

"We shan't need you this time," said the neighbor, her eyes kindling with satisfaction at the ready helpfulness of the girl who worked all day in the store.

"I wish I had a chance to do big things," reflected Letty, going on to her gate. "Alice wrote me that she could get me in the store where she works. I wonder—"

"Say, Letty," hailed her younger sister, "have you seen Ralph yet? The girls are all crazy about him. He's making wads of money in the city and we just jog along doing little things and don't do much more than keep even. I should think you'd coax Ben to go to the city when you are married. "If you think small you'll never do big things, that's what Ralph says."

The charm of the quaint village, with its natural, kindly neighbors, was momentarily obscured by the blinding vision of easily procured gold. The half-finished cottage at the south end of town that Ben worked on evenings and Saturday seemed to shrink. Letty was not consciously disloyal to her fiance, but the contrast between the two young men occurred to her. Ralph had only finished grammar school and had run away from home to seek his fortune. Ben had plugged on and finished high school with honors and yet he was only a partner in the hardware store in the town where he had been born.

"I wish Ben," she said later in the evening, "that we could think of some way to get rich more quickly. There's something in the saying about thinking big."

"There's nothing in it, to my mind," interrupted Ben decisively. "It's better to build slowly and carefully than to plunge and lose all."

"Ralph made a thousand dollars in one deal last week. There are three of them in the firm and—"

Ben hammered a nail sturdily drowning the rest of Letty's sentence. There was an odd expression on his thin, strong face had the girl been looking, but her round black eyes saw only a gold-edged vision, where eager workers did great things and piled up stupendous fortunes.

"Letty, does that window frame look real straight to you?" demanded Ben, ruthlessly arousing her from her dream. "Looks a mite crooked. Hand me the spirit level, will you?"

Silently she handed up the instrument, but her face wore a blankness that was not unnoticed by her silent but observant fiance.

"Too bad you missed the movies," he said, hoping to distract her attention. "Doc's wife doesn't say much, but she's always running out on country cases, helping out sick folks. He could have made a fortune in the city, but he wouldn't leave here where the folks depended on him."

The next afternoon Ralph dropped in at the store again and again he recounted tales of the large deals he had made in the city. In every case his shrewdness and business acumen had been amazing. "Ben must have a tidy sum saved," he hazarded, casting a disparaging glance down the street at the hardware store.

"Yes," admitted Letty. "How I'd love to see the lights on automobile row at night."

"You're giving up your position here soon, aren't you, Letty?"

"In July," she replied.

"Maybe I can put Ben in the way of some easy money," he said thoughtfully. "Is his money on call at the bank?"

"Yes. He's going to buy Liberty bonds, they are so safe."

Ralph laughed amusedly. "What an old granny he is. I'm surprised he doesn't hide it in a stocking," he said. "I'll have to help him out. I'll stroll down street and chat a while. You see, Letty," he stared at her until she reddened, "I think a lot of you and I want him to make good so you'll have money to spend."

Letty stood confusedly dusting off her already speckless counter as Ralph swung out. She started as her employer rose from a rocking chair in the rear of the store. She had supposed him to be absent.

"I heard him asking you about Ben's savings," he said sternly. "I happen to know that he was fired from the under clerkship he held in the city. He first tried to borrow money from me and then fished around to know if he could get your job when you're married. He's no good, Letty, and you're a lucky girl to be engaged to a man like Ben. He's dependable. Not many young men would build his cottage in spare times when he had money in the bank. This talk of big thinking makes me tired. A fellow who doesn't make good in the small everyday affairs of life is going to be found lacking when he attempts the big things."

Letty recalled with a frightened penitence her sensations of the evening before and she wondered if Ben had been angered. Ben was slow to anger, but apt to be implacable when really vexed. "I guess," she smiled up faintly at the white-haired old man, "that I'll have mother invite Ben up to supper tonight. He's going to putty in the window panes in the cottage and he'll enjoy something extra nice."

"I daresay he will," returned her employer, turning away to hide the twinkle that had sprung into his eyes as he read her frank face.

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

I used to own the most costly hen in the world. And she didn't cost me a cent. And I had forgotten all about her until yesterday.

When I was a kid I went through that phase of culture which goes by the name of chicken-raising. It was just luck that my errant fancy did not turn to goats or Belgian hares. But a friend had a pen of fancy chickens and his father paid the feed bills and he sold the eggs to his mother. It was such a profitable undertaking Lloyds would underwrite that sort of a proposition at tuppence per cent—that I became enthusiastic.

"All right," said my mother. "I'll buy my eggs off you."

"So I bought my hens. As I recall them now they were large, snuff-colored beauties with the most affectionate disposition in the world. They were not monomaniacs on the subject of laying eggs, as far as I can remember. I can recall several large, lovely brown eggs, but the sensation produced by those eggs was so extreme that there can not have been many more of them. You can't remember individual eggs if you are doing a wholesale business in them.

Anyhow, I didn't pay for one hen. I wasn't any more dishonest than any other kid is. If I had had the money I would have paid for the hen. I didn't have the money, and by and by something happened to the hens. The original owner of the hens used to meet me on the street sometimes and speak rather bitterly about my business methods I was so sorry for him that I used to go to considerable pains not to harrow him up by meeting him on the street. Then we moved away and I forgot him, debt, and trouble.

But the creditor didn't. A week ago he walked in to make a deal. Before we got through talking, the matter of the long dead hen came up and I paid him. Then he refused to buy what I had to offer.

I know why he refused to buy. He had not forgiven that hen. That's why I say she was the most costly hen in the world.

Uncle George had been abroad for three months, and the amount of adventure he had crowded into the time was surprising.

"Yes," he was saying, "there's nothing like travel for developing coolness and presence of mind. One day I was walking along a road on the outskirts of Cario, when a little way ahead, I heard a cry of agony!

"It was a very narrow street, and suddenly a camel came tearing round the corner, pursuing a native. Its open jaws were terrifying. Had I never been out of my own back garden I might have lost my head and done something silly. As it was I —"

"I can guess what you did, uncle!" said a small nephew.

"Well, what do you think I did, my boy?"

"A hundred yards in nine seconds!"

With a smile on his rubicund features the hotel manager was peacefully enjoying forty winks. Business was booming; the place was full.

Knocks on the door of the sanctum, however, brought him back to earth. In staggered a perspiring waiter.

"P-p-please, sir," he stammered. "I'm in a terrible fix. A gent has just ordered roast mutton."

"Well, what of it?" came the exasperated answer, "There's plenty of it, isn't there?"

"Yes, sir," breathed the distracted knight of the napkin. "b-b-but he's already had one portion of it as venison!"

Two London pavement artists were boasting about their skill.

"Do you know," said one, "I painted a sixpence on the ground one day, and a boy broke his finger trying to pick it up."

"That's nothing," said the other. "I painted a leg of a mutton on a stone and it was so real that a hungry dog ate half the stone before he discovered his mistake."

"Have you noticed that Dauber has changed his style of painting lately? From his former meticulous method he has turned to a sort of slapdash impressionism."

"Yes. It's the influence of golf, I think—he now tries to do his work with the fewest number of strokes."

"Are you ever troubled with sleeplessness?"

"I am. Some nights I don't sleep for three hours."

"I pity you. I've been afflicted for about two years. The doctor calls it neurasthenia and insomnia."

"I've had it about six months and the doctor calls it a baby!"

Trading raw sugar futures was light and prices showed little change with operators inclined to hold off and wait developments. Closing prices were unchanged to two points net lower. December closed at 2.32; March 2.21; May 2.31; and July 2.40.

Refined was unchanged at 5.20 to 5.30 for fine granulated.

Refined futures were nominal and without transactions closing unchanged to 10 points net higher. December closed at 5.50 and March and May at 5.30.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Mixed conditions prevailed in the stock market today, favorites showing an uncertain trend though. Lacking more plausible explanations, the uneven tone was attributed to firmness of money rates and developments at the armament conference.

Among active shares the only noteworthy and in most instances temporary gains were made by coppers utilities with the usual springling of miscellaneous issues. Sales amounted to 735,000 shares.

Demand loans opened at 5 per cent against last week's final quotations of 5½ per cent but the latter rate was posted toward the end.

British exchange hovered around its recent maximum but French bills were heavy with the Belgian rate, each forfeiting about ten points. German marks eased only a trifple, notwithstanding their acute weakness in London.

The investment market continued strong and broad as indicated by large subscription to Consolidated gas notes, totalling $20,000,000 and the strength of the general list. In the railway division, Missouri Kansas and Texas issues rose in anticipation of the new re-organization plan. Total sales par value aggregates $1,875,000.

Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—With stocks of wheat being reduced bulls in the wheat market today showed an increase of confidence. Owing to profit-taking, however, advances which took place were not fully maintained. The close was unsettled ⅝ to 1¼ net higher with December 1.09 to 1.09⅜ and May 1.11 to 1.11⅛. Corn gained ⅜ to ½ and oats lost a shade to ¼. In provisions the outcome varied from 7 to 10 cents decline to a raise of 15 cents.

Expectation of a big falling off in the domestic visible supply of wheat was more than fulfilled by a decrease of 4,500,000 bushels for the week. Exports for the season to November 1 were given as 16,000,000 bushels more than for the corresponding period last year. Northwestern millers were after hard winter grades in Kansas, whereas advices on farm reserves in Kansas and in Nebraska as well, indicated realtively small holdings.

Export demand helped strengthen corn. Trade in oats was mainly local. Packers selling of lard did a good deal to counter balance in the provisions market the effect of higher quotations on hogs.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 21—Through sympathy with advances at all markets cattle sold readily here today at a very satisfactory gain. Steers were 15 to 25c higher and cows, heifers and yearlings the upward trend was close to 10 to 15c higher. Calf values were fully steady. Very moderate cattle receipts arrived, only 2,500 head being booked, but the calf offering was fair, close to 3,500 head being yarded. Cotton

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The ginnig report of the census seemed to cause no material change of sentiment as to the size of the crop today. Prices, however, ruled generally firmer owing partly to a more optimistic view of British trade prospects and there was an advance of about 2.50 per bale with January contracts selling up to 177.45 or 53 points net higher. That delivery closed at 17.25 with the general market closing steady at net advances of 23 to 32 points.

The market opened firm at an advance of 27 to 45 points in response to higher Liverpool cables and there may also have been some scattered buying on the ginning report which was slightly under the forecast.

The opening advance met considerable southern selling as well as realizing which caused reactions of fifteen to twenty points shortly after the call, but as soon as these offerings were absorbed the market turned firmer on renewed covering while local brokers also reported a better commission house demand and there were also advices from the south claiming that there was more inquiry for spot cotton. December sold up to 177.59 and March to 17.45 during mid-afternoon, making net advances of 44 to 53 points, but there was more realizing around this level, which represented a recovery of about 140 points from recent low prices. This caused reactions of 18 to 20 points from the best in late trading.

New Orleans Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—Nearly everything was turned to bullish account in the cotton market today and prices were higher from the opening. There were periods of rather extensive realizing by recent buyers which caused material recessions, but new buying always caused recoveries and the close was at net gains on the session of 31 to 40 points with December at 16.62.

The opening was strong under the effect of much better Liverpool prices than due combined with a report on ginning slightly under average expectations. Prices bulged 40 to 60 points before the upward trend was checked, carrying December up to 17.00. The census bureau figures of 7,270,575 bales ginned to the 14th of November was accepted by the many traders as coming within about a quarter of a million bales of counting the crop, although bearishly inclined traders claimed they confirmed crop estimates of 8,000,000 bales. Recessions of the middle part of the session reduced the advance ten to 23 points, but at one time there was a new rise which put the list 43 to 69 points over Saturday's close, this being due to the official report that the pink boll worm had been found in Ellis county the largest producing section of the belt and to the rumor that the boycott against British goods in India had collapsed. Toward the close trading appeared to be restricted somewhat by the nearness of the first notice day for December, which is Friday.

GINNING REPORT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Total ginnings of the 1921 cotton crop up to November 14 amounted to 7,270,575 bales, an addition of 625,000 bale in the two weeks prior to November 14, the census bureau announced today.

Ginnings as recorded by the census bureau now exceed by 733,575 bales the quantity forecast in preliminary estimate of the crop made by the department of agriculture early in October. A final estimate of this year's crop will be announced by the department of agriculture December 12.

SHRINE COMMITTEE REFUTES ASPERSIONS ON CHARACTER OF FAVORITE CANDIDATE

The committee backing J. Wilkie Talbert for the shrine ring have heard several rumors lately concerning Mr. Talbert's character and reputation, and desire at this time to brand those rumors as false. We challenge anyone, whether he be an opposing ring candidate or not, to produce uncontrovertible evidence showing that J. Wilkie Talbert is not as pure as an innocent babe and as open minded as the morning sun.

Some peculiar type of the genus homo is spreading around that J. Wilkei does not pay his debts, and therefore, does not deserve the ring. Let us suppose, for argument's sake that little J. Wilkie does not pay his debts. Then, for heaven's sake, wouldn't he be in a better shape to pay them if he had a diamond ring that he could hock! However we will not concede for a moment that Wilkie owes any one. This same malicious specie goes further and says, that not only does J. Wilkie owe this debt, but that he owes it to a bootlegger.

We ask you in all justice to study his platform, and then tell us how such a strong prohibitionist could be accused of owing such a debt.

Some one has reported that all of these rumors come from County Attorney Fulton who is to be in the Thanksgiving shrine class. Really, we are not surprised. Fulton has tried in every way possible to get the members of this committee to back him for the shrine ring. This was before J. Wilkie had announced his candidacy. However, just before he approached us, Mr. Fulton had put maximum fines of $200 on some 300 shriners who drove over to Electra to attend the recent musical revue given by the shriners. These 300 shriners (of whom we were an integral part) are ready to swear that they were not going over 5 miles per hour. In spite of this preponderance of evidence no one was allowed to testify, and some 300 shriners were fined $500 apiece. Lots of money isn't it? So much for Fulton.

We are informed that this particular specie is also telling that J. Wilkie is too self-centered and vain and selfish to get the ring. They say under such circumstances that it would not be right or just to let him have it. "They say" that always, on any occasion whenever anyone is called upon to speak, no matter how serious that occasion nor how foreign the subject to be talked upon is, J. Wilkie will be the first on his feet and will deliver a steady flow of unmitigated hot air about some kind of a Building and Loan Association for two or three hours.

They even say that he has been known to attend prayer meeting for no other purpose than to seize the opportunity to advertise some Building and Loan Association.

How unjust, how inaccurate such a statement is. If you could only see Wilkie each night at 7:30 after he has donned his nightie and kneels down by his little bed; if you could see the beatific look on his dimpled countenance; if you could stroke his curly locks and look into his beautiful brown, bovine eyes, then you would know how far from the truth such a statement was.

We, his campaign committee, therefore, ask all shriners to consider this innocent, peace loving, whiskey-fearing young man. Be sure to remember J. Wilkie Talbert next Thursday. Give him his just dues on that day. Get a line on him so that you won't forget him when the time comes to vote for the ring candidate. We appeal to every shriner to be sure not to overlook this promising young neophyte, and to mark him well.

Nobles, we offer you a man. Take him. Other candidates compared to him are as the bray of a jackass to the song of a nightingale; as the sounding of brass to the tinkling of silver; as the pimson-weed is to the lily. After you have given the other candidates the once over then come back to our Wilkie, and as Shakespeare says "Lay on McDuff, and damned be he who first cries 'Hold, enough'."
