Money, Man's Freedom Sought

Hijacked Jet Lands In Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) - A very calm, very cool" gunman seeking $3 million and freedom for a jailed friend hijacked a Frontier Airlines jetliner carrying 33 persons at a Nebraska airport today. He forced the plane to fly to Kansas City, released about half his hostages and then flew on to Atlanta where the friend had been held, authorities said.

The Boeing 737 made a normal landing at 12:04 p.m. EDT, several hundred yards in front of the main terminal at Hartsfield Airport. It sat at the end of a cleared runway, then moved off slowly and was expected to go into a freight terminal where the FBI, Federal Aviation Administration and security officers had set up a command post.

FBI spokesman Bill Williams said that while the plane was on the ground in Kansas City, the hijacker, who carried a sawed-off shotgun, released unharmed 18 passengers-eight women, eight children and two men. He kept 15 hostages-two male crewmen, two stewardesses and 11 male passengers, Williams said.

The Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta said the plane was slightly late getting to Atlanta because of minor pressurization problems which forced it to fly at a slower speed and lower altitude than normal.

The FBI in Kansas City said the hijacker, identified as Thomas Hannan, 29, of Grand Island, Neb., demanded $3 million, two parachutes, two machine guns, two pistols and the release from an Atlanta jail of his partner in an alleged robbery last month at a bank formerly headed by resigned budget director Bert Lance.

The FAA said the plane took off from Kansas City just after 10 a.m. EDT on the 600-mile trip to Atlanta.

In Atlanta, officials at Hartsfield Airport were preparing a runway for the hijacked jet. "We do not plan on closing the airport, we will have to play it by ear," said John Braden, assistant administrator of the airport.

The FBI said Alvin Feldman, president of Frontier Airlines, guaranteed the hijacker that the $3 million would be waiting for him in Atlanta. A bank spokesman in Atlanta said an effort was under way among banks there to raise the cash.

A spokesman for the Fulton County Jail in Atlanta said he had been notified the hijacker sought the release of George David Stewart, 29, of Mobile, Ala..

Briscoe To Lead Talk

AUSTIN (AP)-Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Oklahoma Gov. David Boren will lead a discussion among the nation's governors on oil and gas at a White House conference, Nov. 3-4.

"The governors will also discuss specific energy concerns with President Carter, who will open the two-day work session," said a statement from Briscoe's office.

Other topics at the conference will include nuclear energy, coal production and development of resources in the outer continental shelf.

Christie Announces

AUSTIN (AP)-Joe Christie made his long-awaited announcement today that he was running for U.S. Senate because he thinks Texans want a change in Washington.

"Too many important challenges are not being met in Washington; utility bills are too high, inflation and unemployment plague us, our schools need help, our farmers and ranchers are going broke, our elderly are neglected, and our government is too big and too wasteful," the former El Paso state senator and former chairman of the State Board of Insurance told a news conference in Austin.

4 Escape In Odessa

ODESSA (AP)-The escape of four prisoners from the Ector County Jail was discovered early this morning, county authorities said.

Officials said the breakout was discovered at 7 a.m. and theorized the escape was made about midnight.

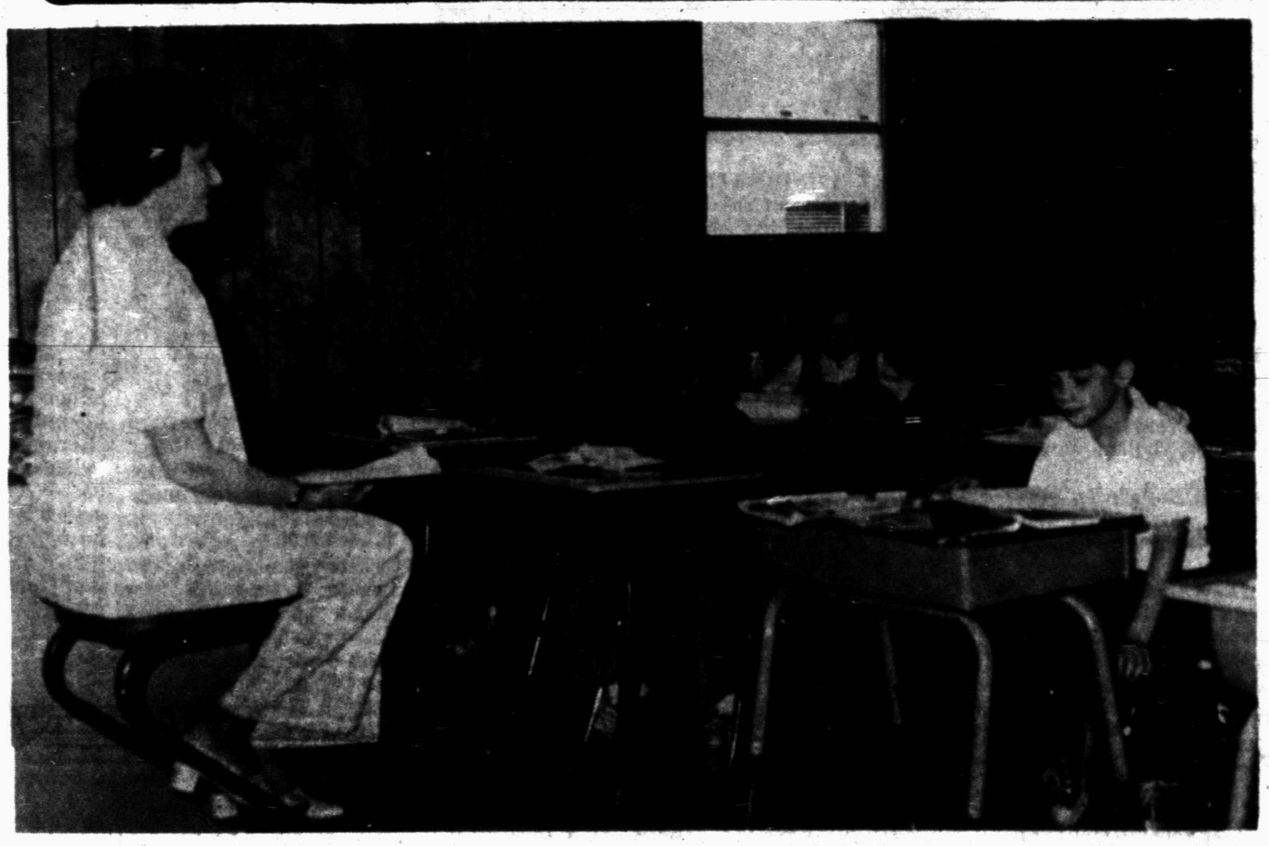

Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught declined further comment about the breakout.

The escapees were identified as Roy Day, 22 held on a theft charge; Robert Lee Dawson, 37, jailed on a burglary charge; Jack Wilson Roman, 26, being held for violation of probation; and Stanley Perrins, 22, who had been sentenced to 14 years in the state prison in Huntsville and was awaiting transtransportation there.

Coup In Thai

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)-A military-dominated "Revolutionary Committee" seized power in Thailand today, toppling the year-old government of Prime Minister Tanin Kraivixien, Radio Thailand announced.

Tanin had been put in power by a group of military leaders who staged a coup Oct. 6, 1976, against a democratically elected government.

Minimum Wage Bill To Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House completed congressional action today on a bill raising the national minimum wage from the current $2.30 an hour to $3.35 an hour by 1981.

Nearly five million workers will get increases in their paychecks Jan. 1 when the first stage of the four-step, 45-percent increase takes effect, going up to $2.65 an hour.

The House voted 236 to 187 to send the bill to the White House, ignoring arguments from Reps. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, and John H. Rousselot, R-Calif., that the bill would put hundreds of thousands of workers out of jobs.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Tex., had asked the House to reject the compromise worked out by a Senate-House conference committee because it greatly weakened a House provision exempting more small businesses from paying the minimum-wage benefits.

The House showed no inclination to push harder for its position, however, and with its vote ended a six-month fight for the minimum wage increase by organized labor and others.

The committee voted to exempt by 1982 firms with gross sales of less than $362,500. Pickle wanted to

4 Former Policemen Indicted

HOUSTON (AP)-Four former Houston police officers, including two recently convicted of negligent homicide, were indicted today by a federal grand jury here on charges of violating the civil rights of a Mexican-American prisoner who drowned in a Houston Bayou last May.

The four former officers are Terry Denson, 27; Stephen Orlando, 21; Louis G. Kinney, 27; and Joseph Janish, 22.

A fifth officer, Glenn Brinkmeyer, 25, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

Denson and Orlando were convicted in state court of negligent homicide and a jury assessed a probated one year sentence and fine.

The Snyder delegation attending the Texas Municipal League's big meeting in San Antonio got a chance to witness a metropolitan blackout and they report it wasn't anything like the one shown on television in New York City.

Actually, City Manager George Patterson figures that a lot of city officials got a chance for some first-hand observations that will be of benefit to them if their own cities face a similar problem.

The convention center itself was hardly aware of the blackout because it had an emergency backup generating system of its own which took over as it was programmed to do. However, the business area was blacked out.

But San Antonians took it in stride. Peace officers reported that there was probably less looting during the blackout than on a normal evening when all the lights were on. Eating establishments brought out candles and continued to serve meals, although their menus were limited to cold foods. In general, Texas' second largest city and the nation's 10th largest, took the power interruption in stride.

A revision of budget categories and forms resulted in a misunderstanding for some when the proposed new budget for the Snyder Chamber of Commerce was presented to the organization's board Tuesday night. At first glance it appeared that personnel would get a 30 per cent salary hike, but actually it boiled down to around 4½ per cent. Also, the overall budget hits a figure of nearly $850,000, but this, also is misleading, because it includes some $800,000 for administering the boll weevil control program, which the chamber and BCD have done for two years in a row. The actual operating budget is under $50,000 for purely Chamber of Commerce activities.

Economic Growth Slows

Tax Cuts Step Closer

WASHINGTON (AP)- Tax cuts for businesses and individuals next year appear a step closer with release of government figures showing the nation's economy is growing too slowly to keep unemployment from getting worse.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday the nation's economy grew at an annual rate of only 3.8 per cent in the three-month period ending in September, compared with 6.2 per cent in the second quarter of the year and 7.5 per cent in the first three months.

The scale measures growth of the gross national product, which is the value of the total production of goods and services in the economy. Most economists believe a 4 per cent growth rate is necessary to keep up with the expanding labor force.

Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps said the low third-quarter growth "strongly suggests the need for further tax reduction."

It was the strongest statement to date by a top administration official on the need for a tax cut to stimulate the economy.

The Commerce Department's chief economist, Courtenay M. Slater, agreed with the secretary, saying, "the logic points to the need for a tax reduction. There is mounting evidence that some time next year would be the appropriate time."

President Carter has said he will consider a tax cut to stimulate the economy if the economy needs special help next year. But he said he wants to further assess the performance of the economy before deciding on the timing or the amount of the tax cut.

Ms. Slater said the third quarter slowdown was primarily due to reduced consumer spending, especially spending on automobiles and on food.

She said the growth report was "just one more piece of evidence-a fairly important piece of evidence-that we appear to need a tax reduction if we want to maintain the kind of growth rates we're talking about."

Treasury Secretary Michael W. Blumenthal appeared less convinced, telling the American Banker's Association in Houston that, "We must learn to ignore month-by-month ups and downs that yield neither to our understanding nor to our control."

He told the bankers the nation's "important economic woes are long-term and chronic in character. They will not yield to the quick fix."

In its economic growth report Wednesday, the Commerce Department also reported a reduction in the nation's inflation rate in the third quarter to 5.1 per cent annual rate, down from a 7.1 per cent rate in the second quarter.

Steak Or Beans Contest To Close Friday Night

Will it be steak, or will it be beans and cornbread?

That's the question to be answered Friday night when results of a membership contest between the Snyder and Sweetwater Chambers of Commerce are determined.

For the second year in a row, the neighboring chambers are in competition in this event. If the Snyder Chamber reaps the most new members by tomorrow's deadline, its team members will feast on steak at a dinner session to be scheduled soon. If Sweetwater's team should sign the most new members for its Chamber, the Snyder team would get the beans and cornbread diet.

The Snyder membership team is composed of officers and directors of the Chamber and members of the Gold Coaters. The campaign began on Oct. 11, and the results will be announced Friday night during half-time of the Snyder-Sweetwater High School football game in Tiger Stadium.

Although no defenite count was available, it was estimated this morning that around 35 new members had been signed for the Snyder Chamber. However, local Chamber officials said that they felt certain that some team members had some new memberships that had not been turned in.

The final report session is set for noon Friday. All of the local team members have been asked to come to the Chamber office for lunch and turn in their reports.

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce team won the event last year and went to Sweetwater to dine on steak while their hosts had beans and cornbread. The locals scored an easy victory, recording some 112 new members while Sweetwater was signing 45. However, it had been some time since a membership drive had been conducted here, and there were more potential members than now. So, the local team is literally beating the bushes for new members during the final hours of this year's contest.

$22,540 Is Paid For 49 Herefords

Cattlemen from as far away as New Mexico, Oklahoma, Nebraska, and Colorado were in Snyder Wednesday afternoon to buy or sell Hereford stock in the thirtieth annual sale of the National Anxiety 4th Hereford Breeders.

A total of $22,540 was paid for 35 bulls and 14 females, reported John Jarrell, vice president of the association.

The highest selling bull was consigned by Angus Garey of McCook, Neb., and sold for $2,215. The bull was purchased by the 4-J and Pied Piper Ranches of Hamlin.

The champion outcross bull was consigned by the V-Bar Ranch of Stanton and was purchased for $875 by J.D. Patterson of Aspermont.

Billy Huddleston, a Snyder man, bought the champion straightbred bull for $775. The bull was consigned by Thomas A. Rosson of Sweetwater, the president of the Hereford association.

The average selling price of the 35 bulls was $496, reported Jarrell. Female breeding stock in the auction fetched an average price per head of $370.

The sale was held at the agriculture pavilion adjacent to the Scurry County Coliseum.

Local purchasers buying stock at the auction were Huddleston, Jess Everett, Bill Eiland, Don Stoker, Annette Smith, and the Winston Hereford Ranch.

Cullen Davis Wouldn't Hesitate To Testify

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO (AP)—Millionaire murder defendant Cullen Davis says he does not yet know if he will testify in his own behalf, but he adds, "I wouldn't hesitate a moment to do it."

The wealthy Fort Worth industrialist, on trial in connection with the slaying of his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12, said he doubted it would be necessary because the defense intends to call witnesses who will establish his innocence.

It is possible the state will rest its case at the conclusion of testimony by Frank Shiller, director of the Fort Worth crime lab.

Shiller has been on the stand seven days, five of them under defense cross-examination by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

"I don't know whether I will testify or not. I'll do whatever my attorneys want me to do," Davis, 44, said.

"I don't look forward to getting on the stand, but I wouldn't hesitate a moment to do it... there won't be any significant holes to testify to after all our witnesses have been called.

"But I'm not saying either way. We have never really discussed the pros and cons of whether I should or should not."

Davis told newsmen Wednesday that he did not, as widely reported, build his $6 million mansion for his now-estranged wife, Priscilla.

"I built that mansion for myself," he said. "I started drawing up the plans before I ever met Priscilla."

Davis said the blonde socialite's contention that he built the 19,000-square-foot home as a "dream house" for her is part of the "big lie" he contends she and others perpetrated after the shootings.

The couple separated two years before the August 1976 carnage and Mrs. Davis won temporary possession of the 181-acre estate.

Mrs. Davis, 36, was wounded in the midnight gunfire that killed her lover, Stan Farr, 30, and left a chance visitor, Gus Gavrel, Jr., 22, crippled with a bullet lodged in his spine.

Defense lawyer Phil Burleson conceded Wednesday the exhaustive cross-examination of Shiller has been essentially technical, but he said, "A lot of information is being developed."

And, he said, "We feel like we're showing to the jury exactly what was not done in connection with the investigation and that the investigative agencies were less than professional in the manner in which they attempted to gather evidence.

"We think the evidence does not in any way conclusively or even by strong inference show that Cullen Davis is guilty."

Search For Pieces Of Meteorite

ELMORE CITY, Okla. (AP)-Space scientists have asked everyone within a 15-miles radius of this Garvin County town to look for pieces of a meteorite that is believed to have hit near here Tuesday night.

Dr. Everett Gibson, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientist in Houston said scientists want a piece of the meteorite, but lack the funds to come here and search for it themselves.

Gibson asked local farmers and ranchers who are out in the remote areas to watch for pieces of the meteorite, which flashed across the sky Tuesday night.

"It will have a black burned looking surface and the interior may be a lighter colored material," he said.

"They're of little commercial value, but give us additional samples of the solar system. They're about 4½ billion years old."

He said the pieces probably came to earth within a 10-to-15-mile radius of Elmore City.

Persons finding samples should contact Dr. Gibson, Geochemistry Branch, NASA, at the Johnson Space Center, Houston, Tex., 77058.

Guy And Ralna To Sing For TT Club

LUBBOCK—Guy and Ralna Hovis of the Lawrence Welk Show will be guest performers at the Texas Tech University Century Club dinner Friday, Nov. 4, 6:30 p.m., in the University Center, according to Larry Byrd, 1977 club chairman.

All Century Club members are invited. Membership is based on an annual gift of $100 or more to the Texas Tech Loyalty Fund.

Any individual or couple joining by Nov. 3 for the first time are eligible to attend the dinner, Byrd said.

"We're extremely pleased to have Guy and Ralna as our featured entertainers," Byrd said. "This is a different, less formal, type of entertainment than we've had in the past."

Ralna (English) Hovis, former Texas Tech student and graduate of Lubbock High School, started singing professionally at age 13. While attending Texas Tech she performed at Six Flags Over Texas.

She then began a career as a nightclub entertainer in Dallas. She moved to California in 1966 to expand her singing career.

Guy Hovis, a native of Mississippi, worked part-time on his singing career while obtaining an accounting degree and serving in the United States Army. He moved to California in 1966 and ultimately signed a contract to sing regularly on the Art Linkletter "House Party" show.

She joined the Lawrence Welk Show in May, 1969, and he in December of that year. They are the only married couple to have performed on the Lawrence Welk Show.

The couple has also sold over half a million records.

A reception will be held in the University Courtyard at 5:45 p.m., prior to the dinner, for members of the Century Club.

Witnesses Describe Schemes

WASHINGTON (AP)-A South Korean ambassador allegedly delivered envelopes stuffed with $100 bills in one influence-buying operation in Congress and the country's president, Park Chung Hee, was kept informed of another operation, according to congressional testimony.

Witnesses described the alleged schemes to the House ethics committee, which heard more testimony today from a former Korean Central Intelligence Agency officer in Washington, Kim Sang Keun.

The committee said the next witnesses will be B.Y. Lee, a former aide to Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park, the wives of Rep. E. de la Garza, D-Tex., and John T. Myers, R-Ind., and former KCIA director Kim Hung Wook.

Mrs. de la Garza and Mrs. Myers were called to testify about offers to them of money while they were visiting Korea with their husbands.

Kim Sang Keun has testified about a $600,000 influence-buying operation he said was directed from KCIA headquarters in Seoul.

Patton TurnsOver Command

FORT HOOD (AP)-Maj. Gen. George S. Patton III has ended a tour in command of the 2nd Armored "Hell on Wheels" Division, the division his father made famous during World War II.

Patton, urging soldiers to "develop the warrior's soul," turned over command Wednesday to interim commander Brig. Gen. Walter S. Ulmer, assistant division commander.

Patton has been reassigned to the VII U.S. Army Corps in West Germany.

The new division commander, Maj. Gen. Charles P. Graham was stricken with appendicitis last Thursday in Washington D.C., and will assume command after a period of recuperation.

Speaking to more than 2,000 soldiers of the division and about 200 guests, Patton said: "Once again, for the last time, I challenge you to honor courage, punish weakness, disgrace cowardice, and with that approach, develop the warrior's soul."

Guests at the ceremony included retired Gen. William H. Simpson, 89, who commanded th 9th Army during World War II, and Lt. Gen. Robert M. Shoemaker, commander of III Corps and Fort Hood.

exempt by mid-1978 companies with sales under $500,000. The exemption is now $250,000.

There was virtually no debate as the bill won Senate approval Wednesday on a voice vote.

Nearly five million workers would have bigger hour in 1980 and $3.35 an hour in 1981.

In other action Wednesday, the Senate passed an extension of the mandatory retirement age for most private employes by a vote of 88 to 7.

Only tenured college professors and high-paid business executives could still be forced to retire at 65 under the Senate bill.

The legislation, which raises the mandatory age to 70 for about 70 per cent of the work force, must now be meshed with the House-passed version.

The conference committee will have to deal with a House-passed prohibition that would remove the age requirement for federal workers. The Senate bill lets stand the current provision that forces such workers to retire at age 70.

Another difference between the two versions involves the provision dealing with executives. The Senate wants the mandatory age raised to 70.

Bergland Is Stalling On Corn Set-Aside

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland is wavering on announcing an acreage set-aside program to cut back 1978 corn production.

"We won't have a set-aside unless we see we're going to be overrun with corn," Bergland told a group of Delaware farmers here this week.

Farmers this fall are harvesting what the Agriculture Department estimates to be a record corn crop of 6.3 billion bushels, more than experts now believe will be used in the coming year.

But sources in USDA say Bergland and some of his top advisers feel that world export demand for feed grains - including a potential increase in sales to the Soviet Union - may be larger in 1977-78 than currently expected.

Also, with an upsurge in cattle feeding and other livestock operations, domestic feed grain use may turn out to be larger in the coming year.

Right now, however, USDA projects the corn carryover supply next Oct. 1 - the beginning of the new 1978-79 marketing year - at around 1.35 billion bushels, up from 876 million this Oct. 1.

Bergland earlier this fall indicated that a decision on a 1978 feed grains set-aside program would be made by Oct. 1. Then it was decided it put it off until after the Oct. 12 crop report showing the new corn harvest estimate. As of last week, however, officials say a decision probably will be made around Nov. 1.

The 1978 wheat set-aside decision was announced Aug. 29 requiring farmers to reduce plantings from 1977 and then to set aside land equal to 20 per cent of the wheat they plant for next year's harvest to be assured of full benefits under the Food and Agriculture Act's target price provision. A 10 per cent set-aside for corn and other feed grains has been under consideration.

One of the most important reasons for Bergland now wavering on whether to have a 1978 corn set-aside at all involves a rather complicated relationship between price support loan rates and the target prices for next year's crop.

The 1978 corn target price is set by law at $2.10 a bushel. The loan rate will be $2 a bushel.

Under the program, if market prices are depressed as they are now - corn averaged $1.59 a bushel at the farm nationally last month - farmers who participate in the set-aside program, if it is announced, will be the difference between the loan rate and the target price.

Germans Hunt 16

BONN, West Germany (AP) - West German police today launched what they called their most extensive hunt since World War II for six men and ten women sought in the kidnap-murder of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

As the search for the 16 began in Germany, violence flared across Europe to protest the prison deaths of three German radicals. German terrorists vowed the violence "has just begun." Bombings and other incidents were reported in Britain, France, Holland, Italy, Austria and Greece.

In Paris, two German tourist buses were firebombed in the Latin Quarter and police said two persons were arrested. There were no reports of injuries. Explosions ripped German auto showrooms in a Paris suburb and two southern cities, including a Mercedes-Benz dealership in Moutauban and a showroom in Toulouse. The bombs caused heavy damage but no reported injuries.

"One-hundred-thousand explosive attacks will destoy the structures of West German capitalism in Europe," said a man who identified himself as a spokesman for the West German Red Army Faction in a call to the Marseilles office the French news agency Agence France-Presse.

The Red Army group claimed responsibility for the Schleyer kidnaping.

Dr. McSpadden Has AAFP Fellowship

KANSAS CITY – Dr. W. B. McSpadden of Snyder has been named a Fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians.

The degree of Fellowship may be attained in either two ways: successful completion of 600 or more hours of accredited continuing medical study, or achievement of diplomate status in the specialty of family practice as a result of passing a certifying examination administered by the American Board of Family Practice.

Fellowship entitles the conferee to use the title "Fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians," or "FAAFP." The degree was conferred October 11 upon more than 1,000 members of the Academy in conjunction with the AAFP's annual convention and scientific assembly in Las Vegas, Nevada. Ceremonies were held in Rotunda of the Las Vegas Convention Center before some 2,500 persons. Fellowship candidates wore academic robes and mortarboard caps. They were recognized according to state chapter groups and the oath of fellowship was recited en masse.

The Academy, representing more than 38,000 family doctors, pioneered among national medical groups in requiring members to take continuing study, a minimum of 150 accredited hours every three years. The AAFP, headquartered in Kansas City, is the largest of medicine's specialty groups.

More Ride City Buses

AUSTIN (AP)-More persons rode city buses in 1976 yet the rate of increase in net operating costs slowed down, the State Department of Highways and Transportation reported Wednesday.

Publicly owned or operated transit systems carried 122.2 million passengers in 1976, an increase of 1.5 million over 1975 even though Houston had a 55-day bus drivers' strike, the department said.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

We are going to describe the complicated bidding used by North and South to get themselves a bottom score. Their bidding was really brilliant, but we strongly recommend that none of you readers try to learn the system.

South two notrump showed a balanced 21 or 22 points. North's four clubs was Gerber; South's four hearts showed one ace; North's four spades asked for kings; South's five clubs showed three. Four notrump would have shown two since it was impossible for South to hold 21 high card points with just one ace and one king.

North's five-diamond bid asked for South's lowest ranking four-card suit, so North knew that South could not hold four cards in any suit except spades. The five notrump bid asked for the missing king so North could see that a spade finesse would be needed to make seven. He settled for six.

At the other tables no one had this series of over-complicated bids at his disposal and somehow or other almost everyone just bid the grand slam and wrapped it up when the finesse worked.

Ask the Jacobys

A Tennessee reader wants to know if in standard American, a two-heart opening bid is forcing when you have 40 on score.

In standard American and general expert play this two bid is treated as a one-round force and partner should respond once.

THDA State Meeting Results

Sept. 20-22, 765 dauntless Texas Home Demonstration men and women met for the 51st state meeting that was held on the Treasure Isle. The them of the program was "Hope for a Changing World."

As a welcome Nolan A. Sagebiel, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, Port Arthur, gave an inspiring devotion stressing sympathize, "joyize" and harmonize, to be a happier you.

Dr. Jennie Kitching, assistant director for Home Economics A&M University, address was on "Choices," entitled: How Do You Choose." The six major projects of Extension work are: 1. nutrition, 2. clothing, 3. management, 4. family life, 5. housing and 6. health. We learn by doing and by responses from others through personal requests. She concluded by asking "Are you able to make changes?"

The committee chairman of Citizenship, Family Life, 4H, Safety, Cultural Arts and Recreation and Health, each presented programs that were educational. Diversified program ideas on nutrional meals, sewing, both basic and tailoring, arts and crafts, choral singing, family life, safety and ect. are given in suggestive programs by the club ladies of the county. The year-book committee then selected appropriate demonstrations for each month of the year.

Mrs. Lucille Witten, chairman of Cultural Arts and Recreation displayed the latest in handiwork with explanations on each. Helen Thornburg of Rotan, former of Snyder, chairman of Health presented Health Care in U.S. as the third largest big business industry in U.S. Prices have risen 10 fold the last 25 years and doubled since 1970. It was stated that the health of women affect the home, community and the nations.

The 1,213 T.H.D.A. Clubs of Texas and the 19,488 club members are urged to especially study hypertension, cancer of colon and rectum and menopause, with county-wide clinics to be held on any or all of the above.

Quite a bit of time was spent updating the hand book and by-laws of the association. Mrs. J.D. Blankenship of Ira, and Mrs. Roy Staton of Snyder, represented Scurry County. A creed for better TV was advocated. Mmes. Jack Drake, Jack Dunn, Frank Nachlinger, Jess Koonsman and Ruth Weathers attended workshops.

Parlimentary procedure, based on Robert's R.O.R. is available for teaching by brochures and slides from the county agent.

Of the $1 from each club members six scholarships are given to deserving 4-H Texas club members. Proposed 1978 budget of the association is $18,206.52.

The 4-H Club aims are fourfold: improving head, heart, hands and health. It is to instruct young people in modern practices and in good citizenship. Scurry County as nine 4-H clubs with 192 members.

In the Moody Center, the last night a formal banquet was held. Dr. John Knox, a leading dermatologist of Texas, was the highlight speaker. His main advice was that most people bathe in water that is to hot plus de-oiling their bodies. An economy factor too. A drop of baby-oil to a tub of bath water or shower does wonders for the skin.

Galveston Co. T.H.D.A. Council entertained at the banquet with a burlesque musical comedy that would equal characters of the professional world. Table favors were jeweled seashells and a seafood cookbook.

Upon invitation the 1978 State Meeting will be held in Dallas. The National Meeting will be in Seattle, Washington. An open invitation is extended to any man or woman of any race or creed to become a County, State or National T.H.D.A. Club member.

Bulldogs, Panthers To Face Top Competition...

Area 3-B Warriors Battling Back

By BILL McCLELLAN

Area six-man teams will find the going tough this weekend in all but one case, while Borden County gets a much needed break almost.

Headlining the area are Borden County and Hermleigh, both undefeated in their respective district battles and facing apparently light duty this weekend. Meanwhile, Ira faces the 3-B six-man strong horse in Trent, while Hobbs and Highland go against each other in a 'do-or-die' affa'r.

Highland at Hobbs

In perhaps the best balanced battle area-wide Friday, the Panthers host Highland in a 7 p.m. clash.

It's a must-win situation for both squads, who each stand 1-1 in district play. Highland fell 42-40 to Trent last week, while Hobbs got knocked down by a bigger margin at the hands of Hermleigh.

Highland comes equiped with star player Ivan Kerjei, a "real accurate passer with accurate range", notes Panther coach, Vic McElrath. The Hornets rely on their passing for a balance offense, and it is an aerial attack McElrath will have to stop. Last week, his Panthers outlasted McCaulley 58-17 despite 308 yards in the air, so defending against the pass will be nothing new.

"Our kids read their (McCaulley) keys real well," notes McElrath, whose Panthers intercepted six Eagle tosses. "If we can do that against Highland I don't think their passing will be as dominant as it has with other teams they've played."

Unlike McCaulley, Highland can run well also, and the Hobbs team will also be faced with that line of opposition. The Hornets although not excessively quick or fast, are "real fundimental" notes McElrath, pointing out they "block real well and tackle real well"

Doubtful for Friday's game is center and defensive lineman Don Denman, a junior. "Don has done a real good job for us this year and in the McCaulley game," praises the coach. "He suffered a deep hip and leg bruise against McCaulley and we're not sure whether he'll be able to go or not."

If not, Todd White, a sophomore, will fill the center spot, while freshman Walter Cave will check in as defensive linemen.

A loss Friday night would mean almost certain exclusion from the district 3-B six-man race.

"This is a must game for both ball clubs," Coach McElrath points out. "If we can put together four consistant quarters back to back, this can come down to a real close ball game either way."

Sands at Gail

Borden County celebrates homecoming this week by hosting Sands 7:30 p.m. Friday. Planned activities included a bonfire at 4 o'clock, followed by a barbeque dinner in the school cafeteria.

The game is scheduled to kickoff the normal homecoming pomp and hulaballo with selection of a football sweetheart and beau, and the queen.

Fortunately, these events will stave off the boredom promised by the game itself. Sands, 0-7 for the season and 0-2 in district 3-B competition, looks to be little competition for Coach Bill Killian's Coyotes. In a less-than-spectacular season, Sands has felt the hurt of almost 400 points scored against them, while finding the end zone only twice themselves.

It's good break for Borden County, however, who tune up with Klondike next week before meeting rough n' tough New Home the following Friday.

Trent at Ira

Long heralded as a zone powerhouse, Trent defeated Highland last week by two points to remain in a tie with Hermleigh for the 3B six-man south zone lead.

Meanwhile, Ira can claim only one win for the year, and a winless 0-2 mark in zone play. For Coach Gary Fox, who leads his Bulldogs through a rebuilding season, Friday's 7 p.m. meeting may be less than pleasant. They've been whipped badly by Hermleigh and Highland, and this week's program fails to indicate any let up.

Still, Fox is a veteran coach, though in his first year at Ira, and local fans can be assured the Bulldogs will do their best against the visiting Gorillas.

As Homer Rice of the Rice Owls would comment, "We're two years away, but the game is today." Or Friday for the Bulldogs.

Hermleigh at McCaulley

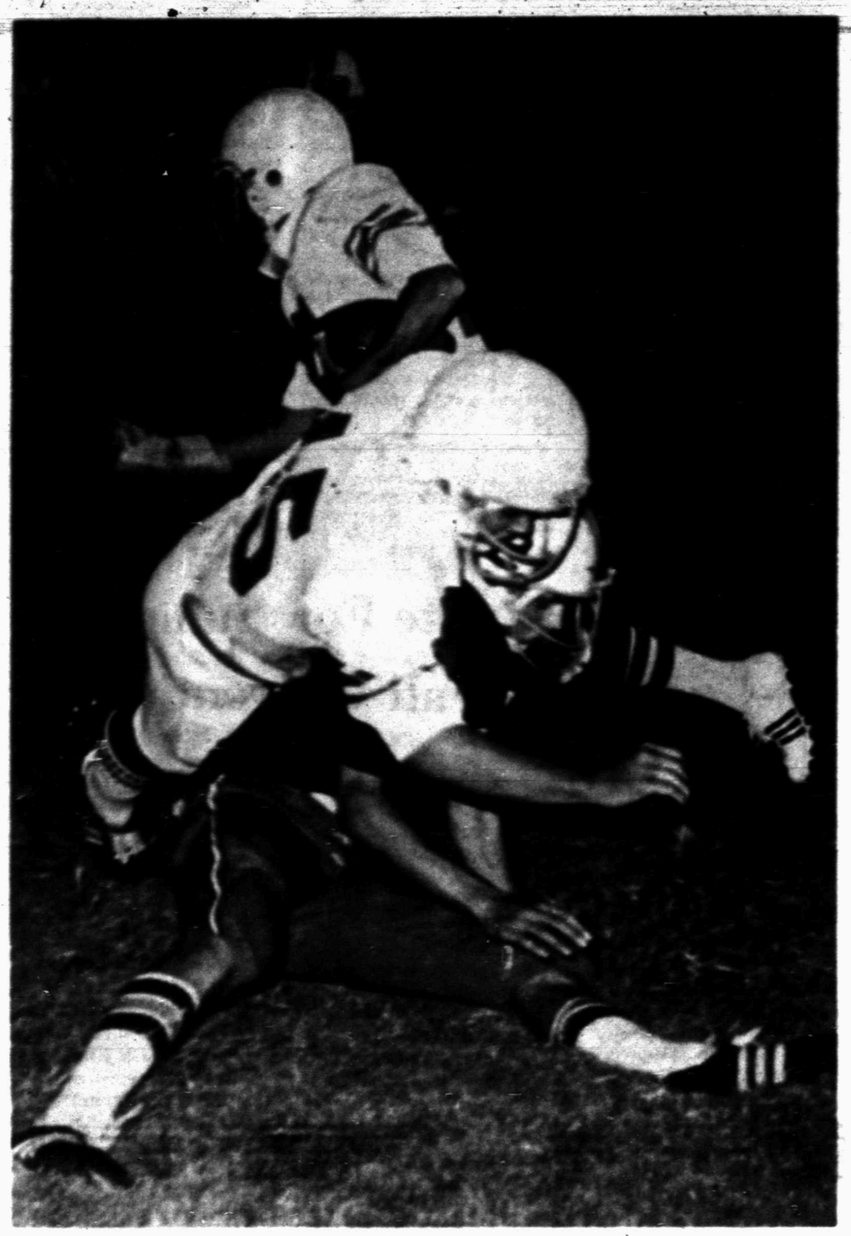

McCaulley, the zone doormat, fell to Hobbs by big margin last week on their homecoming. It's nobody's celebration this Friday, but it's a good bet the outcome will remain the same.

Hermleigh leads the south zone, or a share of it anyway, with both the Cardinals and Trent sporting 2-0 conference records.

Coach Clarence Spieker will have to have his anti-aircraft crew ready, however. McCaulley bombed Hobbs 308 yards through the airways last week, despite losing 57-18.

James Jefferies is the fancy passer, who put the pigskin up 45 times last week.

Area-wise, Hermleigh has the toughest defnese around, and their offense is getting better every time out. While the Eagles can pass, a weak defense and lean running game are too few ingrediants to use against the Cards.

Money-Made Yanks Had It All Together

NEW YORK (AP)-All season, the pundits delighted in calling the New York Yankees "the best team money can buy."

Only in the wake of their World Series victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers did they realize how right they were.

All the nonsense and ludricous shennanigans that swirled around this turbulent team from the start of spring training served to obscure the fact that the additions of right fielder Reggie Jackson, pitcher Don Gullett and shortstop Bucky Dent made the Yankees a stronger club than the one the Cincinnati Reds swept in four games a year ago.

Just before the third game of the Series in Los Angeles, when the papers were full of Jackson blasting Manager Billy Martin for pitching Catfish Hunter in Game 2 after a month's idleness, outfielder Lou Piniella said disbelievingly, "The only thing I haven't read around here is if we're going to win or lose the Series."

It was so much more fun writing about turmoil and controversy that few people realized how easily the Yankees might have won the American League East had their pitching been sound all season.

As it was, they won 100 games and lost 62, finishing 2½ games ahead of the Baltimore Orioles and Boston Red Sox with a furious stretch drive. A year ago, when they romped home 10½ games in front of the Orioles, they had a 97-62 record.

The Yankees won in 1977 with Catfish Hunter slipping from 17 victories to nine, with Ed Figueroa dropping from 19 to 16, with Gullet spending a good deal of time in the sidelines with an ailing shoulder, with Mike Torrez in-and out except for one brilliant seven-game stretch, with Ken Holtzman a body but not an arm.

"We were shooting craps," Martin said after starting the sore-shouldered Gullett in Game 1, and the seldom-used Hunter in Game 2, and coming away with a split. Indeed, he was shooting craps with his pitchers all season, except for the remarkably consistent newcomer, Ron Guidry, and a bullpen featuring the rubber-armed Sparky Lyle and, until he was needed as a late-season starter, Dick Tidrow.

But elsewhere, catcher Thurman Munson, first baseman Chris Chambliss and second baseman Willie Randolph produced seasons comparable to 1976 while Dent provided added punch and Graig Nettles set club record for home runs and RBI by a third baseman.

In the outfield, Roy White was his usual reliable self in left until a late-season slump. Mickey Rivers was even more productive than 1976 in center despite a drop in stolen bases, and Jackson, even with all the furor surrounding his every breath, stil managed to belt 32 homers and drive in 110 runs.

When help was needed, Paul Blair provided brilliant defense and clutch hitting and Piniella led the team with a .330 batting average while switching between designated hitter and left field.

When Sweet Lou played left, Cliff Johnson, a June steal from Houston, DHed his way to 12 home runs and a .296 average in just 56 games.

Stoll Keeps His Humor

MINNEASPOLIS (AP) - Minnesota Gopher Coach Cal Stoll was in good humor at the weekly media luncheon Wednesday, telling of his team's preparations for their game Saturday against undefeated and No. 1-ranked Michigan.

"We had a squad meeting Monday night,' said Stoll. "After the meeting I said, 'Everybody who isn't afraid, follow me.' I went out to practice and they all followed me so I guess we're going to be there."

Added Stoll: "There's no secret to trying to beat them. You just line up and get at 'em. We're going to play to win."

And the Gopher coach asked, "Have any of you got any plays that will work? If you have, I'll take them."

Jack Youngblood and Jim Youngblood play for the Los Angeles Rams but are not related.

Snyder Gives Good Effort

Snyder and Monahans were the only 3-A tennis teams "brave" enough to enter the 4-A Regional Team Tournament sponsored by the Texas Tennis Coaches' Association in Midland and Odessa Friday and Saturday, Oct. 14-15. Other teams entered were Odessa High, Odessa Permian, Abilene, El Paso Eastwood, El Paso Coronado, El Paso Irvin, Midland Lee, Midland High, and Big Spring.

Syder tennis players won very little in the matches but gained fine experience in playing the state-ranked players from 4-A teams in the area.

Snyder drew last year's state champs, Midland High School, in the first round and lost 18-0. However, Coach Bill Boles expressed his appreciation for the fine effort put forth by all the Snyder players.

Margaret Womack gave Vicki Vasicek, Midland's top girl ranked 7th in the state, a "run for her money", and then Margaret and Donna McGee played Vasicek and Mary Morgan, ranked 8th in state doubles in 4-A, losing 2-6, 1-6.

Zane Sterling played well against state ranked No. 5 Jeff Bramlett. In the second round of play Monahans forfeited to Snyder, and the locals met Abilene High School in the final round. Snyder won 3 and lost 11 matches to Abilene. Jay Wesson and Mike Greenfield defeated Thad Decker and Greg Hodges in doubles, 7-6, 6-0. Mike Greenfield also won in singles over Todd Hunnicutt, 7-5, 6-1, as did Jay Wesson over Decker, 6-3, 6-3. It took 3 sets for Mike Redwine to defeat Zane Sterling, 6-4, 1-6, 3-6. Stan Pavlik and Neal Paige also went three rounds with Hunnicutt and Merchant, losing 6-3, 4-6, 2-6.

A number of Snyder parents went along for the matches as usual, and Coach Boles expressed his appreciation for their backing the team.

Tigers Defeat C-City, 8-3

Snyder High School tennis team defeated Colorado City 8-3 in matches played after school recently on local courts.

Snyder won all of the boys' singles matches as Zane Sterling defeated Tony Franco, 8-2, Stan Pavlik won over Randy Anderson 8-3; Mike Greenfield defeated Doug Jones, 8-2; Scott Marler won over Carey Culbertson, 8-5, John Smylie defeated Dale Adams, 8-1, and Mike Hammack won over John Boyd, 8-5. Pro sets were played due to the shortage of time in having to play after school hours.

In boys' doubles Franco and Anderson defeated Sterling and Scannicchio, 6-3, 4-6, 3-6; Wesson and Greenfield defeated Culbertson and Jones, 6-2, 6-1, and Scott and Edmiason lost to Adams and Reeves, 1-6, 6-3, 4-6.

Colorado City had only two girls to play. Zenda Ball lost to Lisa Bobo, 5-8. In doubles Cathy Cypert and Zenda defeated Donna Lain and Bobo, 8-3. Snyder will return the dual match to Colorado City on Tuesday, Oct. 25th.

Little Rock Battle For Keeps, Indicates Holtz

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

You've heard of that light at the end of the tunnel that means things may be getting better.

Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz concludes that "sometimes the light turns out to be an oncoming train."

While Southwest Conference co-leaders Texas and Texas A&M are heavy favorites Saturday, Arkansas could have one of those "oncoming trains" of which Holtz speaks in the form of a humiliated University of Houston team.

Two weeks ago there was probation. And last week there was lowly Southern Methodist scoring 20 points in the last 39 seconds to whip the defening Cotton Bowl champions 37-23.

Holtz said it's difficult to bounce back from an emotional loss like the one Arkansas suffered to Texas 23-19 last week.

"When you lose one you either sit around feeling sorry for yourself or you push yourself and get back," said Holtz.

Since both Arkansas and Houston each own a loss, the loser in Saturday night's game at Little Rock will be, for all practical purposes, eliminated from SWC title consideration. Houston, because of NCAA probation, can't go to a bowl game.

Arkansas is a 10-point favorite.

The No. 2-ranked Longhorns are 14-point favorites over SMU as they make their second visit to the Cotton Bowl. Texas knocked off Oklahoma earlier in October, 13-6 in the same stadium.

"I'd like to be back a third time," said Texas Coach Fred Akers, meaning New Year's Day for the Cotton Bowl.

SMU quarterback Mike Ford, who leads the SWC in passing will have to play hurt against the Longhorns. Ford hurt his elbow in the victory against Houston.

Texas' Earl Campbell, the SWC's No. 1 rusher, missed practice early this week with an ankle injury but was expected to be at full form for the 1:30 p.m. kickoff.

Some 40,000 fans are expected and SMU Coach Ron Meyer said, "Texas is great...the best team we've faced this year."

The Aggies are 29-point favorites over Rice for the night game in Houston. Rice Coach Homer Rice has been teaching his Owls karate but tire tools would be more appropriate in tackling 270-pound Aggie fullback George Woodard.

Rice scored 34 points on the Aggies last year. However, the Cadets got 57.

In the final intersectional clashes of the year, Baylor is a 12-point choice over Air Force on homecoming at Baylor Stadium while Texas Christian is a 17-point underdog to Miami of Florida.

Grambling Star 3 Shy Of History

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)-Gov. Edwin Edwards has made Grambling quarterback Doug Williams an honorary colonel, but says it probably will go unnoticed when Williams throws three more touchdown passes.

"Just three more and he will have thrown more touchdown passes than anyone in college football history," Edwards said Thursday.

William has thrown 69 so far. Ed Buzzell threw 72 while playing for Ottawa, Kan., University in the mid-1960s.

"I'm proclaming Saturday Williams and Alexander Day since Louisiana boasts two Heisman Trophy candidates," Edwards added.

Charles Alexander, the nation's leading rusher, is expected to spearhead Louisiana State's offense in a homecoming game Saturday against Kentucky. He's a junior.

Williams, a senior, will try for the passing record Saturday when his team faces Mississippi Valley State at Grambling.

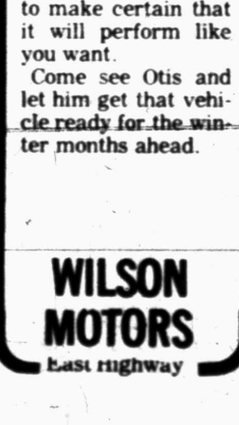

Pro-Am Tourney Sites Selected

The World Invitational annually attracts 40 of the top amateur and professional teams in the United States. The amateurs will play 54 holes over the two rugged Monterey courses while the club professionals compete in a special 36-hole event for the $2,500 prize money.

Tiger Teams Prowl

Local teams go near and far today and tonight as volleyball and football action continues.

Heading the list is Snyder varsity and junior varsity court teams, which file into Denver City for matches at 6 and 7 p.m. Denver City is the class AA state runnerup from last year, and promises to give Coach Joyce Elrod's Tigerettes some good competition.

At home, but also against Denver City, Snyder ninth grade and eighth grade Black play host. The eighth grade team goes into action at 6 p.m., followed by the freshmen at 7.

In prelude for Friday's varsity football clash against Sweetwater here, Snyder junior varsity travels to Mustang land tonight for a 7:30 meeting. Meanwhile, the local frosh host the Ponies at 7 p.m., while the eighth grade Black squad entertains Runnels White at 5:30.

Hitting the road will be Snyder's eighth grade Gold team, which buses to Stamford for a 6:30 p.m. kickoff.

Barring schedule changes, Snyder eighth grade football squads end season play in early November; the Gold team at Sweetwater on the 5th, and the Black squad hosting Stamford on the 3rd. The freshmen also end their season on the 3rd, hosting Brownfield.

Meanwhile, Snyder volleyballers close out their schedules a little earlier. Both eighth grade teams halt action with the end of the Snyder Tournament which takes place the 29th of October, while the ninth grade girls close out by hosting Big Spring on Nov. 1.

National Basketball Association Wrapup....

'Seconds' Fill Big Shoes Easily

By The Associated Press

So the Los Angeles Lakers didn't have Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, winner of the National Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player Award, a record-tying five times.

They had James Edwards.

And the Philadelphia 76ers were without superstar Julius Erving.

It didn't matter.

Both the Lakers, the winningest team in the NBA last season, and the 76ers, the losing finalist in the 1977 playoffs, played without their top performers Wednesday night - and won easily.

Los Angeles, with the overlooked Edwards, a 7-foot rookie center from the University of Washington, replacing the injured Abdul-Jabbar and scoring 25 points and grabbing 14 rebounds, beat the Indiana Pacers 133-120.

And Philadelphia, minus the ailing Erving, got 32 points and 22 rebounds from George McGinnis in trouncing the Detroit Pistons 113-96.

In other NBA games, the Denver Nuggets whipped the Milwaukee Bucks 133-115, the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Boston Celtics 114-109, the Chicago Bulls downed the Houston Rockets 107-103, the Buffalo Braves topped the Kansas City Kings 112-108, and the Golden State Warriors walloped the Seattle Super Sonics 116-84.

"Edwards did a super job," Los Angeles Coach Jerry West said of his young third-round draft choice who played a team-high 40 minutes and hit 11 of 22 field goal attempts and three of four foul shots against Indiana.

Edwards started because Abdul-Jabbar has a broken bone in his right hand, suffered in a fight with Milwaukee rookie Kent Benson Tuesday night, and will be sidelined indefenitely.

McGinnis, a flop in last season's final playoff series against Portland, made up for the absence of Erving, out with a sprained knee, by firing in 20 points in the first half against Detroit as the 76ers opened a commanding 63-38 lead. "McGinnis was devastating," said Pistons Coach Herb Brown.

Nuggest 133, Bucks 115

David Thompson and Bobby Jones led a surge that enabled Denver to break away from a 100-100 tie against Milwaukee with less than 10 minutes remaining and beat the undermanned Bucks, playing without Benson, sidelined with a mild concussion. Thompson finished with 36 points and Jones had 26.

Spurs 114, Celtics 109

A standing-room crowd of 10,466 in San Antonio watched the Spurs, led by George Gervin's 39 points, beat Boston for the first time in history.

Bulls 107, Rockets 103

Mickey Johnson scored 19 points, including a field goal with less than six minutes left that put Chicago ahead for good 98-97 helping the Bulls win their second road game in two nights, against Houston.

Braves 112, Kings 108

Buffalo made new Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons' debut a success, beating Kansas City as Billy Knight scored 31 points and grabbed 15 rebounds, and Chuck Williams, replacing injured Tiny Archibald, had his NBA career high of 21 points.

Warriors 116, Sonics 84

Golden State ruined the coaching debut of Seattle's Bob Hopkins, routing the Sonics behind Rick Barry's 28 points and Phil Smith's 20.

Sideline Glances....

This 'n' That

By BILL McCLELLAN

A LOT of interesting things have been happening in and around the area that are worthy of attention; and some, like my predictions, which probably aren't so worthy, but we'll include them anyhow.

FIRST of all, we might make note and congratulate Borden County's Tim Smith, who made the Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll this week. Tim, a tackle, "made 16 tackles, recovered two fumbles, sacked the quarterback three times, one for a safety, and kicked a 40-yard field goal" in the Coyotes' 27-8 win over Wilson last week.

ON ANOTHER note, we figure by now you've read somewhere, hopefully here, that Estacado and Dunbar won't be joining the district 3-AAA lineup next fall. The University Interscholastic League has moved them over to 1-AAA in a series of changes which include dropping Seminole down to AA ball.

Can't really say that will hurt the Tigers any, especially in track and basketball, where the speed of those two Lubbock teams has held an edge over Snyder in the past.

We hadn't heard who will fill up the season schedule yet, though Monahans, Andrews and Big Spring will remain on the football ticket. Roy Carter and company will have to come up with three other non-district opponents; hopefully nearby.

A WORD on WTC's 'Meet the Athletes' program Tuesday night. Thanks to the folks who gave up meetings and the World Series to support the college athletic department.

Of course Snyder Daily News won the basketball games as predicted, with ease. Our praise to KSNYers Larry Genuchi and Glenn Polk however, who highlighted the action off court, supplying a pie to Dr. Sid Simpson's head, and a bucket of water to Coach Nolan Richardson. It was a fun night, and we enjoyed it.

FINALLY, this week's predictions.

Never one to sit back and rest on his average, I have decided a number of upsets will occur this week. Watch out Milton, this is your big chance!

Okay, first off, and rather easily I'd say, let's go with Dunbar over Brownfield, Hermleigh over McCaulley and Trent to whip Ira. In some closer battles, Lake View will leap Lamesa, and Highland will outdistance Hobbs in a crucial battle for both teams.

'Drubbing of the week' goes to Sands, who have the hapless task of meeting Borden County.

In professional action, Dallas should clip the Eagles without too much trouble and ... and here's the first upset ... Houston will edge past Pittsburgh. Some may not feel this is much of an upset, but the Steeler defense has got to be one of the best in pro ball today. They lost to Houston two weeks ago, but most circles have that outcome reversed. Not here ... Houston 24, Pittsburgh 20!

Running over the college games, I'll go with Colorado over Nebraska by 8, Kentucky to beat Georgia by 14, Southern California over Notre Dame by 5, and Oklahoma over Iowa State by 6.

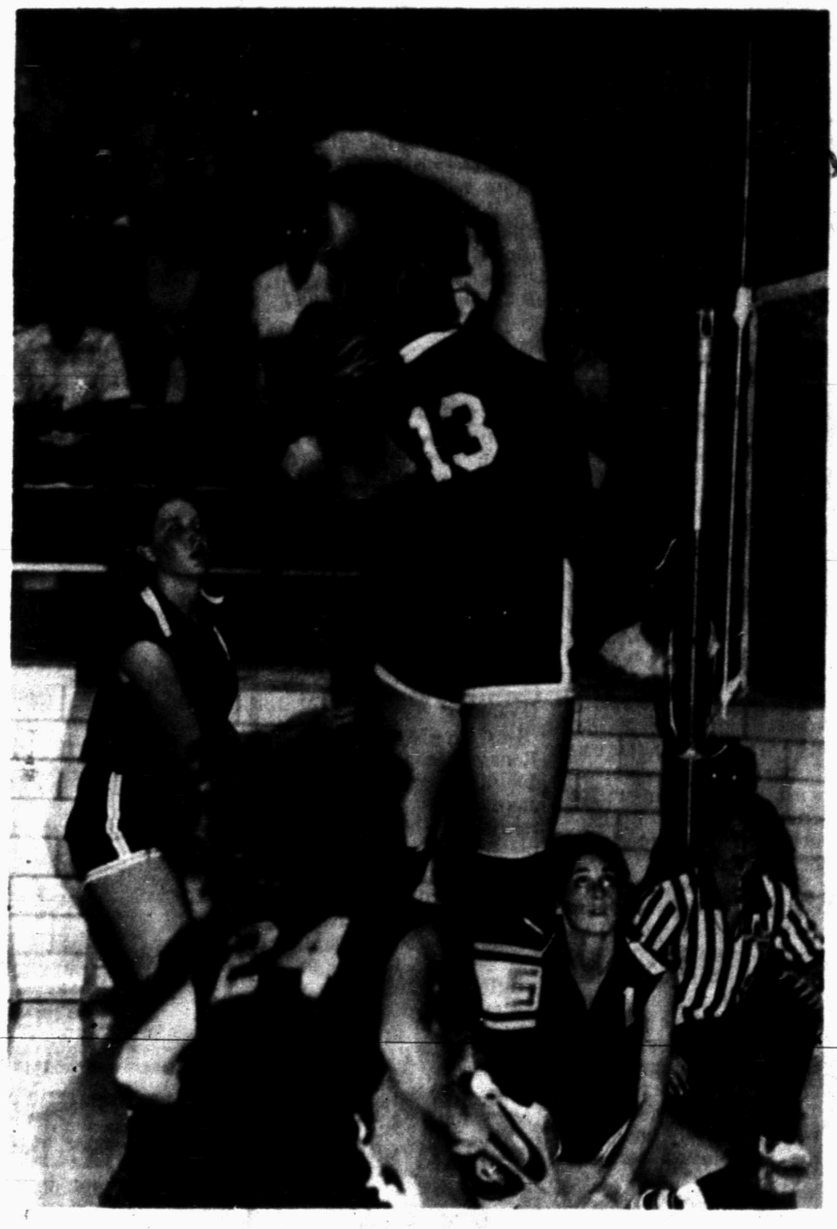

Throughout the SWC, Miami will roll over TCU by 14, A&M will snap Rice by 22, Baylor will squeak past Air Force by 3, Texas will handle SMU by 14, and ... and here we go again ... Houston will upset Arkansas (Yes, believe it or not.) by EIGHT points.!!

ONE THE HOME front, Snyder gets their second district win of the season as they halter the Sweetwater Mustangs, 19-7.

China Team Will Have Security Check

MIAMI (AP)-A soccer team from the People's Republic of China was denied permission to board an airplane for Jamaica after players refused to pass through a metal detector at Miami International Airport.

An Air Jamaica spokesman, after meeting with State Department representatives at the airport, said arrangements would be made to allow the 27 players to take a 7:30 p.m. flight tonight to the Caribbean nation. But he insisted there would be some kind of security clearance.

GOING BACK - Andra Crenshaw sends a return, set up by Dana Elrod (1) in a recent Tigerette volleyball game. The local varsity group, 24-3 for the season and undefeated in district play, travel to Denver City tonight to meet last year's Class AA state runnerups in non-conference action. NBA Reaches 3-Year Pact

NEW YORK (AP)-The National Basketball Association reached an agreement with its referees on a three-year contract, NBA Deputy Commissioner Simon P. Gourdine announced.

Terms of the pact were not revealed.

The contract is the first to be signed by the NBA and the National Association of Basketball Referees, which was formed last year shortly before the game officials walked out to protest salary and working arrangements.

Allison Returning

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Texas Tech officials say injured star quarterback Rodney Allison is expected to return to practice Monday.

Allison has been out since Sept. 16 with a broken leg suffered in Tech's loss to Texas A&M.

Coach Steve Sloan said flanker Godfrey Turner, who has been nursing a leg injury, is expected to rejoin the team Friday.

Pearson Probable

DALLAS (AP) - Preston Pearson, the Dallas Cowboys running back who has already had a bruised forearm, bruised back and a jammed neck this season, left the practice field Wednesday with a toothache.

Pearson was listed as a probable participant in Sunday's game with Philadelphia.

Lineup Shuffle

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -- Sophomore Chris Judge will start at free safety Saturday for Texas Christian as the Frogs take on Miami, says Coach F.A. Dry.

Dry also promoted freshman center Eddie Grimes and freshman offensive tackle Bud Conway to the first team.

Akers Talks

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas Coach Fred Akers says his team's win over Arkansas last week was more important than its besting of Oklahoma earlier.

Akers also noted that Southwest Conference foes Texas Tech and Houston both have a week off before tangling with the Longhorns.

"I don't understand all that scheduling," Akers said.

Smith To Start

WACO, Texas (AP) - Baylor Coach Grant Teaff says freshman Scott Smith will start for the Bears Saturday against Air Force.

Injuries have hampered the Baylor quarterback situation, and Scott will be the first sign-caller to start consecutive games this year.

Razorbacks

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) - Center Rick Shumaker and wide receiver Donny Bobo were back at practice for Arkansas Wednesday for the first time since suffering injuries in last Saturday's loss to Texas.

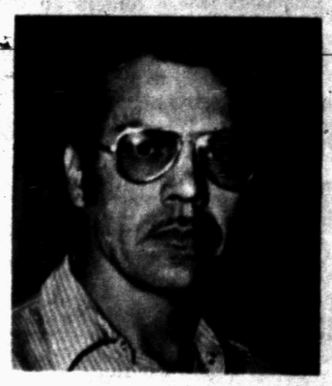

Coach Lou Holtz said he expects Shumaker to be ready for this Saturday's Houston game, but is uncertain whether Bobo will be ready or not.

Haley Nodded Over Barrato

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)- Irish Leroy Haley of North Las Vegas raised his record to 31-1-1 Wednesday night by scoring a unanimous 10-round decision over Victor "Barrata" Hernandez of Culiacan, Mexico.

Haley, who weighed 141 pounds, scored the bout's only knockdown, flooring Hernandez, 138, with a left hook in the first round.

Colleges Provide Various Fringe Benefits

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The fringe benefits of a college education range from athletic competition to a happier, ore creative family life, says a new study, undertaken in part to counter the allegation that too many Americans are overeducated.

The study was directed by economist Howard Bowen and financed by the Sloan Foundation and the Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in higher education.

Bowen, former president of Grinnell College, the University of Iowa, and Claremont University Center, says he conducted the study in part to answer a number of books questioning whether many college students actually belong there.

The study contends that the $85 billion a year spend on higher education returns about three times that amount in intellectually and socially broadened graduates.

"One of the benefits of attending college is simply the satisfactions that come from the attendance itself - from the learning, the stimulus of interesting people and ideas, the sociability, the pleasant surroundings, and the memorable experiences," the study concludes.

"College also opens up to many people new interests, new awarenesses, and new understandings that are an important basis of lifetime satisfactions."

Although the report finds that the college experience will add meaning to the rest of a student's life, it recognizes that the experience can vary from student to student and college to college.

It can be negative for some.

"Students learn to smoke, to drink, to use drugs, and some ruin their knees playing football," Bowen said in a recent interview.

Of all the contributions of college, Bowen finds the enhancement of family life the most significant, particularly in fostering an attitude of intellectual curiosity in the homes of college graduates. That curiosity and its effects, he feels, contributes markedly to future generations.

For example, the study finds that more time and thought are given to raising children in college-educated families. The children tend to do better in school and in turn are likely to attend college, as well as their children, building a solid base for a better-educated America.

Fawcetts File Suit Over Skit

HOUSTON (AP) - A lawsuit asking $7 million in damages has been filed by the parents of actress Farrah Fawcett-Majors in connection with a skit last month on comedian Redd Foxx's variety show.

James and Pauline Fawcett of Houston filed the suit Wednesday against the American Broadcasting Co. and Houston television station KTRK-TV.

The Fawcetts claim in the suit that the skit, aired Sept. 22, depicted them in such a way to cause them damage, ridicule, embarrassment and humiliation. The suit seeks $2 million in actual damages and $5 million in punitive damages.

An ABC spokesman in New York described the skit as one that fictitiously depicted an interview with Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett. The spokesman said Redd Foxx portrayed Mr. Fawcett and wore a Farrah Fawcett wig, as did his dog and bird.

"We have no comment on the lawsuit at this point," the spokesman said.

Texan Dies In Plane Crash

Officials identified the victim as Russell Barrie Green, 39, Pasadena, Tex. They said he was headed for Valparaiso to pick up passengers. They said the plane was registered in Freeport, Tex.

The Federal Aviation Administration was called to investigate.

Witnesses said the plane crashed during a heavy fog near the spot where another light plane crashed Aug. 1, killing a man and his son. Both planes were attempting to land at the airport two miles east of here.

The plane, which sheriff's deputies said could seat five to nine persons, was demolished.

Winter Gas Supply Ample

DALLAS (AP)-Barring another extra-cold winter and federal intervention, Lone Star Gas Co. says it has enough gas in storage to avoid cutbacks as severe as last year.

"We don't anticipate the same amount of curtailment this year as last, but then, we don't anticipate a winter like last year either," said Harry King, Lone Star vice president.

Underground storage in East Texas has been increased 4.6 percent this year, the company said.

"This means an increased daily gas availability for Lone Star customers," said King.

"We injected gas into our storage areas earlier than in our previous years' storage injection patterns.

"In addition, the Federal Power Commission approved the company's plan to serve the Wichita Falls area from its intrastate system, which will improve the available interstate gas to fewer customers on the interstate system."

Last winter's assault on Texas was so intense, King said, that the additional gas supplies would not have made any difference in last winter's curtailments of some businesses and schools in Wichita Falls "because they were on the interstate system, which has a limited supply."

Reasons for the increased gas availability, according to King, include expansion of a gas treatment plant at Teague, east of Waco, and increased gas supplies anticipated from suppliers.

"Barring weather-related interruptions, these additional gas supplies could reduce the level of industrial curtailments in the 1977-78 winter heating season," King said. "Nevertheless, industrial and power generation users should expect normal curtailment patterns when residential and commercial customers, our highest priority users, experience heating demands."

King said he could not comment on the speculation in Washington that could force Lone Star and other southern-based fuel companies to ship a percentage of their products to northern states.

However, he agreed the current rosy picture for Texas gas customers would probably change if the speculation becomes fact.

"We have found out that in the last four weeks of the election the biggest single issue became Watergate," Reagan said Wednesday in a taped interview on KQED-TV.

At Quarter Century Banquet

Personnel Of TESCO Praised By President

SWEETWATER--Area employes of Texas Electric Service Co. last night heard their company president emphasize that they are providing a vital service to TESCO customers and that nobody else can do it.

This was the crux of the message presented by W.G. Marquardt, TESCO president, at a banquet honoring members of the company's Quarter Century Club and recognition of eight additional employes who have been associated with TESCO for 25 years.

The eight new Quarter Century members are Gene Bowlin of Snyder; E.A. Davenport, M.L. McDonald and R.R. Sylest, all of Sweetwater; and P.D. Wright, W.E. Smith Jr., J.L. Hopper and C.E. Hammack, all of the Morgan Creek Plant at Colorado City.

Marquardt raised the question, "Who is looking after our customers?" and then proceeded to use a process of elimination to put the responsibility on the employes.

Marquardt said there "are a lot of different groups who say they are, but who really is?"

He said the federal government, environmentalists and the anti-nuclear groups are involved, but that they do not look after the power needs of the TESCO customers.

As for the federal government, he said that instead of deregulating oil and gas to encourage production and discourage waste, some want to merely slap a tax on it.

"And that tax will hurt Texans more than anybody," Marquardt declared.

He said federal regulations decreeing that power plants must stop using natural gas by 1990 will cost each TESCO customer $280 to meet an arbitrary deadline.

He deplored federal proposals to interconnect Texas utility companies with everybody else. He said such a program would cost Texans "lots and lots" and it would lead to shipping electricity from Texas to states that haven't planned ahead.

He divided environmentalists into two groups, calling one group environmentalists and another group kooks.

"Thanks to these overboard environmentalists we've got this air quality law that makes it extremely difficult to build a new industrial plant anywhere in Texas," Marquardt said.

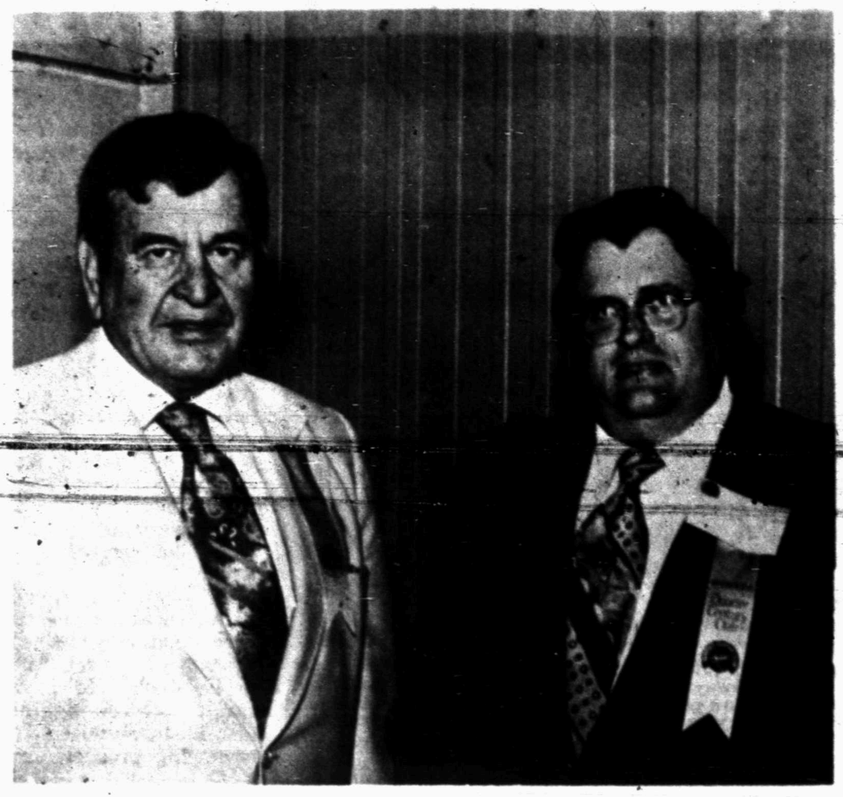

"And then there are these unnecessary 22 million dollar scrubbers on our lignite plants. They are not needed. They send 390 tons of sludge out the back door of the power plant every day and make the electricity coming out the other side about 18 per cent more expensive."

He said the federal government has been scared into heaping regulation upon regulation on the energy people. He was particularly critical of regulations concerning nuclear power. He said nuclear power needs safety guidelines "but not the kind that make it take 11 years to build our Comanche Peak nuclear plant while other countries are building them in five."

He said unnecessary regulation just forces up the price of electricity.

He urged TESCO employes to continue concentrating on service to customers, declaring that the confidence of customers cannot be measured in monetary terms.

Ray Rhodes, district manager, presided at the banquet, and entertainment was presented by The Levee Singers. A dance for TESCO employes and guests followed the banquet in the Nolan County Coliseum.

AWARD PRESENTED - Gene Bowlin of Snyder, right, was one of eight employes of Texas Electric Service Co. who received Quarter Century Club watches at a company banquet Wednesday night in Sweetwater. The awards to personnel completing 25 years of service with the company were presented by W.G. Marquardt, left, president of TESCO.

New Device For Cancer Patients

HOUSTON (AP)-A simplified blood cell separator has been designed to allow doctors in small cities to treat cancer patients, a Houston hospital has announced.

Such patients have been sent to larger medical centers for treatment, said M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute, which developed the device over the past two years with International Business Machines Corp.

Dr. Jeane Hester, chief of supportive services for leukemia patients at the hospital, said Wednesday the device is in effect a centrifuge, which spins whole blood to separate the needed components, then returns the remainder of the blood to the donor.

Until now, she said, the equipment for separating these blood components from whole blood was cumbersome, tedious to handle and sterlize, and needed specially trained personnel to operate.

Because of the complex equipment, she said, many small hospitals were reluctant to use some cancer treatments because of the fear that platelets, components of whole blood that aid clotting, and white cells, which fight infection, would not be available.

IBM and the National Cancer Institute developed the first blood cell separator 15 years ago and two years ago IBM asked Anderson to help develop the new separator.

The new design separator is about the size of a moderate-size office desk. It will cost $20,000 to $30,000. Dr. Hester said it would cost about one-tenth as much to operate as older designs on the market.

IBM expects the first of the new blood separators to be ready for delivery next summer.

Mayor Fed Up With Alligator

PALMETTO, Fla. (AP)-If the state doesn't hurry and find a new home for Gertrude, the mayor of this tiny city says he'll turn the 14-foot alligator into 20 pairs of shoes.

"I don't care what the yo-yos in Tallahassee say about killing alligators," says Mayor J.J. "Toby" Holland.

Holland says the ornery creature, which lives in the Palmetto sewer system's settling pond, ate an Irish setter, attacked a weeding machine, then nearly knocked down a fence trying to get a small dog who happened to stray near the pond.

Two weeks ago, agents of thr Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission removed another gator from the pond in this Manatee County community and took it to a less populated area.

Then they tried to get Gertrude.

To entice her, they baited an iron hook with a dead rabbit. The hook came back empty-and looking like a huge iron straight pin.

Holland says he wasn't surprised. Gertrude tried to eat a backhoe last week.

Sanitation workers were using the machine to scoop weeds and cattails from the settling pond when Gertrude leaped from the water and grabbed the hoe. Holland says.

Workers raised it in the air, hoping to shake the gator loose. Gertrude's bite held, and she rose into the air along with the hoe. She finally let go after apparently finding it indigestible.

"We've had to chase a number of neighborhood children away from the pond," says Holland.

Holland says the unfortunate Irish setter was swimming across the pond when Gertrude attacked.

"Gertrude decided she wanted dog meat and that was that," Holland says.

Holland says he'll ask wildlife officers once more to move Gertrude to a less populated area. Alligators are a protected species in Florida and killing one is illegal.

If the state doesn't respond he vows: "I'll take a 30-30 rifle and solve the problem myself."

"All the alligators in the world are not worth the life of one child."

Group Thrives On Bad News

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) – A landslide leveled three small villages high in the mountains of Yugoslavia, and eight people took notes in a basement near Harvard Square.

The next day, they darted after details about an earthquake shaking eastern Romania, 682 rare red-necked grebes winging along the Massachusetts coast and a volcano spouting eight streams of lava in the Aleutian Islands.

Pestilence, catastrophe and assorted acts of God are the daily concerns of this curious group. It is the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena, perhaps the world's strangest news service.

For a yearly fee, they inform scientists, corporations, libraries and amateur naturalists around the world about oddities of man and nature.

Unlike the sooner-or-later approach of scholarly journals, this group thrives on immediacy. And depending on how much its subscribers are willing to pay, it will send daily telegrams or weekly packets of reports.

"We try to report everything around the world," says Richard Golob, the center's director. Everything boils down to about 300 "event notification reports" a year.

Typically, half of the reports concern natural events: earthquakes, tidal waves, fireballs, red tide, dolphin strandings, meteorites, mudslides, forest fires, epidemics and rat infestations.

The rest tell about pollution accidents. They range over chemical leaks in Chicago, oil spills in the Strait of Malacca and the escape of dangerous gas from a refinery in Houston.

The center was set up nine years ago as part of the Smithsonian Institution. It was intended to let the institution's scientists know about volcanoes and other natural outbursts so they could dash off to study them.

Two years ago, however, it split from the government and now is struggling to meet its $150,000 annual expenses as a private, non-profit organization.

It is trying to build a reputation of impartiality that will make it as trusted by conservation groups as by oil companies.

"Newspapers take a very man-oriented view toward the world," Golob says. "It's a different type of information that we provide. It doesn't focus on individuals. It focuses on events."

"We report all earthquakes 6.5 on the Richter scale and above. The reports are pieced together in a small suite of offices in the basement of a building on the fringe of Harvard University. Golob, 26, directs a staff that deals by mail and phone with a scattered global corps of correspondents.

The number of these contributors, 2,000, rivals the list of subscribers, 2,200.

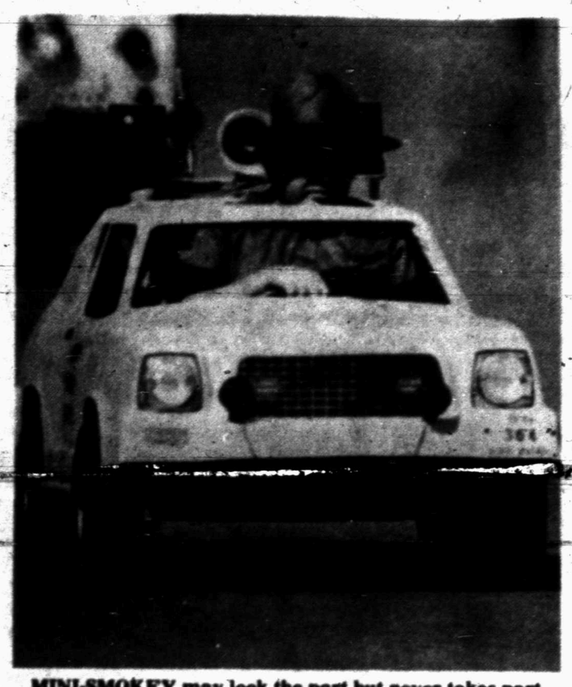

Most contributors are government scientists and college researchers. But they also include common folk who happen to see the unusual. A cab driver in Chicago, for instance, calls with reports on pollution spills, and a radarman in Alaska watches vapor clouds over volcanoes.

"I always had a great conflict between doing work in a laboratory and being in the outdoors," Golob says. He has a biochemistry degree from Harvard, but the environment is as much a concern as molecular formulas. "So this organization is a very exciting marriage between my interests."

Dealing with nature on its most terrifying scale has given him a feeling about how man fits in.

"The constant exposure to volcanic eruptions, earthquakes and infestations does provide a very real sense of man's niche in the ecosystem," he says. "Man is one of many species occupying the planet and the forces of the planet are so powerful that man cannot deal with them."

Most of the people who subscribe to the service receive the reports in weekly packets of postcards. The costs range from $35 a year for reports on natural science to $600 for telegrams on all of the center's reports.

MINI-SMOKEY may look the part but never takes part in highway chases. An Iowa state trooper puts the miniature patrol car through its paces at the state fair in Des Moines. Powered by a small gas engine, the vehicle is equipped with red lights, siren and two-way radio.

FTC Eyes 'Sweet Ads'

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The federal government, saying many products advertised for children are unhealthy, is moving toward controlling ads for such items as candy, soft drinks and cereal.

"We're not talking about research anymore. We're now talking about the legal problems of which way to go," said a spokesman for the Federal Trade Commission, which regulates advertising to assure it is not deceptive or unfair.

FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk said in an interview Wednesday that he is "convinced that action has to be taken" to guard small children against television advertisements promoting products containing large concentrations of sugar.

Options available to the commission range from requiring labels on such products as cereals, soft drinks and candy warning about their sugar content, to requiring the televising of public service messages emphasizing good nutrition and eating habits, to a total ban on the advertising.

The options are to be presented to the full commission in early November, the FTC spokesman said.

An FTC spokesman said the sugar products are the focus of the commission's attention right now, but the FTC might aim in the future at television advertising of drugs during children and family viewing hours and at ads promoting toys.

"Why single out one industry? What's the difference between a snack and a toy? You're appealing for the same kind of child instincts," said the spokesman.

Last week Pertschuk met for 90 minutes with 25 board members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, a trade group representing the largest advertising firms. The advertising firms had sought the meeting.

Pertschuk, according to one source, "raised the most serious warning flag to the industry since this issue was born," telling them the commission is seriously considering a total ban on children-oriented advertisments of products containing large amounts of sugar.

The FTC spokesman said that though it could take years to get rules into effect, officials are hoping the fact the rules are being considered could prod the industries to act by themselves.

Humphrey To Be Honored Tonight

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - In glasses raised warmly to an old friend, in tributes spoken and unspoken, the life and times of Hubert H. Humphrey will be celebrated in style tonight by a few of his friends.

About three thousand of them.

They will gather for an "Evening in Honor of Hubert H. Humphrey," an affair Humphrey is too ill to attend. He has not returned to Washington since surgeons discovered inoperable pelvic cancer Aug. 18.

And they will seek to remember Humphrey's admonition to "not make anything maudlin of this ... It should be an evening of fun, a happy time for everyone."

"He told us not to make this a sad affair," said longtime friend Joe Dillon, the former mayor of St. Paul, Minn., who is now a Washington attorney.

"And that's why we're going to have dancing and dinner and cocktails and entertainers and all the rest. But you know and I know that it will be very sad, for all of us ... how could anybody help it?"

Until a few days ago, Humphrey planned to attend, even if he had to go right back to Minnesota for the treatments he has been undergoing for the cancer. But Dillon said Humphrey's "just physically unable" to attend.

"We still hope he can talk to us via telephone," Dillon said.

Vice President Walter Mondale, the senator's protege, is the host for the affair.

The guest list includes Cabinet members past and present, Chief Justice Warren Burger and a long line of congressional colleagues from both sides of the aisle.

President Carter, who calls Humphrey "the greatest living Democrat," may also stop by to join tonight's tribute.

Conservative Republican Bob Dole and George McGovern, the liberal Democrat who dashed Humphrey's last real run at the presidency, will both be there.

While there will be glowing words from Mondale and actors Lorne Green and Vincent Price it may be left to political satirist Mark Russel, who has made Humphrey the butt of a thousand one-liners, to remind the assembled that the senator possesses, to this day, the most unsinkable good cheer in government.

The estimated $75,000 profit from the $50 price of admission will be given to the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

Contributions for the institute, announced earlier this year, already exceed $3 million

High Death Rate For 4-Year Olds

VIENNA (AP)-Four-year-olds had the highest death rate in automobile accidents in Austria last year, with 14 fatalities.

Of the 6,419 children injured in traffic accidents in 1976, 131 died. Those children between 13 and 14 were statistically the most accident prone.

Panel Told

Military Pay Hikes Needed

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP)-A presidential commission has been told that military pay and benefits need to be upgraded and protected if the United States wants to keep a strong defense.

More than 30 witnesses - all with ties to the military - testified before the President's Commission on Military Compensation at a public hearing here Wednesday.

They said pay and benefits should be increased, not trimmed back as some members of Congress have suggested recently.

"In peacetime, the Congress needs a whipping boy and the military is it," said the wife of one Air Force enlisted man.

"I serve proudly. It is a shame that I cannot afford to do so any longer," said Air Force Senior Master Sgt. Thomas C. Wisausky, who said he makes about $1,000-a-month.

He said he plans to retire soon after 20 years service, because he can make three to five times as much money as a physical therapy supervisor in civilian life.

Gen John F. Roberts, commander of Air Training Command at Randolph Air Force Base, said cutbacks in benefits, such as the GI Bill and medical care, have made it more difficult for the services to retain quality people.

"All the military asks is that we be treated with equity and fairness when the President and Congress decide what changes will be made in military compensations," he said.

The wife of an Air Force enlisted man complained that her family will receive about $5,000 annually-below the federal poverty level-in pension benefits when her husband retires after 20 years service while still in his 30s.

Other witnesses complained of insufficient housing and clothing allowances, only partial reimbursement for moving expenses and long working hours.

One Army enlisted man complained that he could not afford to buy a new car on his present salary.

The hearing in San Antonio, home of five military installations, was the second of four planned around the country by the commission, chaired by Charles Zwick, director of the Southeast Banking Corp.

Southeast Texas Due Showers

By The Associates Press

Widely scattered showers were expected in Southeast Texas today, but most of the state was expected to continue having warm, dry weather with mostly clear skies.

Skies were clear over most of the state this morning, but some patches of fog were reported in the Houston area.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 40s in the Panhandle and in the mountains of Southwest Texas to the middle 60s along the gulf coast.

Some early morning readings included 52 at Amarillo, 55 at Wichita Falls and Texarkana, 58 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 65 at San Antonio, 61 at Lufkin, 55 at Houston, 68 at Corpus Christi, 67 at McAllen, 66 at Del Rio, 64 at San Angelo, 56 at El Paso and 59 at Lubbock.

Ohio Is Using 'Shock Parole'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)- Many states try to grapple with crime through tougher sentences and longer prison terms. In Ohio, they work on the theory that a short dose of prison life often is a better deterent than a long stay behind bars.

That's the rationale behind the state's "shock parole" and "shock probation," aimed at jolting felony prisoners into socially acceptable behavior.

"By early release, the prisoner avoids the typical contamination by seasoned criminals and gets out before he becomes part of the inmate subculture," says John W. Shoemaker, chief of the Ohio Adult Parole Authority. "Prolonged imprisonment, we are informed by criminologists, does not reform."

Shock probation allows a felony prisoner to apply to the courts for release within 130 days, and since it became law in 1965, about 7,000 convicts have been freed under it. Shoemaker says about 15 percent are returned to prison for new crimes or parole violations.

Shock parole, enacted in 1974, allows release of "non-dangerous" first-time felons after six months' confinement. About 1,600 inmates have been freed on shock parole and 180 returned to prison. Inmates who have not served time for a previous felony are eligible.

Ohio State Rep. Alan E. Norris, a critic, believes there's a place for shock parole but contends it's been used too freely in the past, as a routine rather than extraordinary measure.

Social policy apart, the shock treatment has saved the state a bundle, both in keeping a lid on prison populations and in prisons that didn't have to be built.

Shoemaker says it costs at least $30,000 a cell to build a prison and $5,000 a year to keep a person confined.

"If his family is on welfare, and another $2,500 per year," he says. "So, locking up the 8,600 felons released under shock treatment for an additional year would have cost taxpayers an astronomical $299 million.

The first criterion for shock treatment is the length of a sentence. Ohio law fixes degrees of felony offenses with minimum and maximum sentences for each degree.

Except for those doing time for a first degree felony, such as murder or rape, which carries a minimum sentence of four years, any inmate is eligible.

Norris says shock parole was enacted on the grounds that state oversight was needed because some judges were denying early release to deserving offenders.

Carlos Aleman Jr. was among the early beneficiaries of shock parole. He was released on Oct. 15, 1974, shortly after the board geared up to handle the new program and after a court decision that it was retroactive.

Aleman was sentenced to a 50-to 100-year term for attempting to sell more than $250,000 worth of heroin in Cleveland. His release on shock parole after 18 months provoked an outcry over the "shock concept."

The uproar faded after the parole authority acted in 1975 to tighten shock eligibility. In its infancy, the program excluded only those convicted of murder, but that was broadened to include other felonies and serious drug offenses.

Aleman was arrested again last May in Chicago, accused of pushing heroin. His two-year parole expired in October 1976, but Ohio officials lost track of him when his jurisdiction was transferred to Puerto Rico. He never was officially "released" from parole.

"The way we handled that was a mistake," says a spokesman for the Department of Rehabilitation and Correction. "We blew it and we should just have admitted it."

Visual Strains In Mod Music

NEW YORK (AP)-If people think she's a nut, Doris Hays can take it in stride. "As someone wrote in a book review I read, the extraordinary or unusual has become breakfast cereal. We eat it every day."

If people think her SensEvents, with its lightbulb-encrusted orange styrofoam figures and avant-garde music is funny, she's delighted. "I'm quite happy if people laugh at it. I certainly had fun making it."

Doris Hays is an artist, a composer of classical music, working in the most modern styles, but with an artist's ancient problem of more work than income.

She created SensEvents because modern music like she writes is unfamiliar to listeners' ears and she reasoned it might be easier to listen to if something pleasurable, visually, also is going on.

She asked friends for money, gleaning $400. She bought orange marine styrofoam, used to make things float, and sculpted six humanoid figures. Each has light blubs sticking out for arms and head and each has a pedal. Step on a pedal and the lightbulbs light. Two of the figures - Miss Hays calls them sets - also move.

In a performance, three strings players, a horn player, an oboist and a flutist is assigned to his own set. When the flutist's set lights up, he plays; when the lights go out, he stops. He ignores what is going on with the other five players.

Miss Hays wrote an hour-long, 12-part suite, so the musicians play the notes she told them to. But it's the audience, stepping on pedals, which decides the timing.

SensEvents was a popular offering of this year's Lincoln Center Out-of-Doors in New York, an Exxon-sponsored arts festival. Some 3,000 persons showed up at an Atlanta shopping center when it was done there last year. Children sat down on the pedals so the lights stayed on and the musicians never rested.

"The way I set up the music each performer is a soloist. Because of the looseness of structure, it is going to be possible not to have things precise and still have them work out," she says.

"You're in a framework. you try not to hurt other people. Within that, you're allowed to work as you can and will."

Congressmen In Texas Not Extravagrant

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -- If Texas congressmen are wisely spending the taxpayer's dollars on strange expenses, they are not reporting it to the House clerk.

The clerk's report of expenditures for the first six months of 1977, a thick volume released this week, reveals that the 24 Texas members generally tend toward parsimony rather than extravagance.

Rep. Ray Roberts, a Democrat from McKinney, listed only one person on his office staff making more than $20,000 annually, and that person left the staff in May. Rep. Jim Collins, a Dallas Republican, also listed only one individual over the $20,000 mark. Collins also had a high staff turnover.

The average salaries for top staff members in Texas congressional offices was much higher, about $30,000. Some made much more. The highest salaries for Texas staff members, were paid to the two top aides of Rep. Jim Wright, the House majority leader from Fort Worth.

Marshall Lynam and Craig Roupe each drew $49,000 annually, a salary that is set by statute for the majority leader's top aides.

Most of the delegation members spend their $2,000 allowances for contingency expenses outside Washington on such things as subscriptions to hometown newspapers and miscellaneous supplies. But there are exceptions.

Wright spent $320 on 700 glassy photographs of himself. Democratic Reps. Jim Mattox of Dallas and Bob Eckhardt of Houston also had photography bills, with Mattox spending $263 and Eckhardt $95.

Rep. Bob Krueger of New Braunfels, who is running for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate, spent a total of $968 at the House Recording Studio, paying for tapes to be broadcast back home.

Rep. Jack Hightower, a Democrat from Vernon, used his office fund to spend $60 for a year's dues in the Wichita Falls Board of Commerce.

And how much does it cost to take the Carter administration's energy chief, James Schlesinger, to lunch?

Eckhardt said he spent $28 to feed himself and Schlesinger at Washington's Madison Hotel in May. Whether Eckhardt convinced Schlesinger of anything, the report did not disclose.

New Candy Bar Named For Reggie

CHICAGO (AP)- Standard Brands Inc., the company that makes the Baby Ruth candy bar, says it's accelerating its schedule for marketing a candy bar named "Reggie, Reggie, Reggie," after Reggie Jackson, the New York Yankee slugger.

Tuesday, as the Yankees were winning the World Series, Jackson slammed three home runs, tying Babe Ruth's record for the most homers in one World Series game.

"Today would have been the perfect day" to begin marketing the new bar, Charles Tate, product manager for new projects said Wednesday.

The company agreed to name a candy bar for Jackson after he signed with the Yankees last year.

The Baby Ruth Bar wasn't named for the Yankee slugger of yesteryear, Babe Ruth, but for the daughter born to then-President Grover Cleveland.

Interest Grows In Advisory Line

By Ink Dipper

Channel One, as an advisory channel for CBers, is truly feasible and interest in creating this designation has growing support. This column has talked with the FCC and the Federal Highway Safety Department as well as CB-oriented officials in various states across the country.

"Anything that will get the pressure off Channel Nine has our vote," says Lt. Rod LaNore, of the Michigan State Police. "Getting Channel One recognized, as an advisory channel wherever you are, could certainly go a long way toward accomplishing that."

In Washington, D.C. one of the authorities at NEAR (National Emergency Air Radio), Joe Bernard, reports his agency was interested in anything which made Channel Nine more effective.

"The Federal Highway Safety Program was designed to make fullest use of CB, even to the point of helping states fund their portion of the project," he explains. "There are 24 states now participating, one — Illinois — is fully operational, and 23 are in various stages of development."

The idea for Channel One as an advisory channel evolved with the efforts of three states using it as a promotional device in their tourism campaigns. Tennessee, Maryland and Georgia have located base units in their Welcome Centers. Attendants there monitor Channels 9 and 19 for inquiries from CBers passing through and ask them to go down to One, the HOT line, so questions can be answered.

All states report the program, conceived in the spring, has enjoyed definite success. "The response has been good," says Tom Jackson, head of Tennessee's Tourism Department. "As more CBers have become aware of Channel One when they visit Tennessee, the more queries we have been getting. In a year I think we'll have it established."

Neither of the three states utilizing Channel One for advisory services are participants in the NEAR program. However, though the reasons for establishing Channel One as a place to go for information wherever you travel are different, the result is essentially the same. It takes the pressure off Channel Nine, the designated emergency channel, and helps to relieve Channel 19, the truckers' channel. It should be noted, too, that the FCC has designed only one channel for specific use: Channel Nine: EMERGENCY!

"The FCC has felt that any efforts to establish a channel for a certain purpose should come from the CBers themselves," says John Small, FCC executive in the personal communications section. "That is how Channel 19 became known as the truckers' channel. To get Channel One known as the advisory channel sounds like a great idea to me, and it certainly would help Channel Nine."

The combination of state tourism departments and highway safety programs which are worked in cooperation with the Federal government make a nationwide network of information and advisory sources on Channel One a very real objective. This utilization of Channel One would also mean the beginning of the evolution of CB into the highly personal communications form for which it was intended.

Write your governor and let him know CBers can help the state through the greatest communications device ever: Citizens Band Radio!

One Of Seven Amendments

Texas Voters To Decide On Appellate Court Expansion

EDITOR'S NOTE-This is the first of two stories analyzing the seven proposed constitution amendments that will be on the Nov. 8 ballot in Texas.

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)- Texas voters decide Nov. 8 whether to increase the size of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in hopes of getting speedier handling of criminal case appeals.

Some sources say the state's highest appellate court for criminal cases is at least one year behind on its docket.

Proposition No. 1 to expand the court from five to nine judges is one of seven proposed constitutional amendments sent to the November ballot by the 1977 Legislature.

Other proposals would provide an additional $200 million for the Veterans Land Fund, expand grounds for denial of bail to persons already convicted of felonies, provide tax relief for cultural, historical and natural history resources, allow assessment of fees by agricultural or marine commodity groups, allow banks to set up electronic banking machines in shopping centers, and change the name and powers of the State Judicial Qualifications Commission.

Eight other proposed amendments approved by the 1977 Legislature will be voted on in November 1978.

The effort to change the size of the Court of Criminal Appeals follows numerous attempts in recent years to do something about overloaded dockets that persistently plague the Texas high courts.

The Court of Criminal Appeals was created in 1891 with three judges. But in 1925 two commissions were added to help them and in 1966 voters adopted a constitution change enlarging it five judges. Two additional commissioners were added in 1971.

All these efforts have not been able to handle the flood of appeals from criminal cases in district courts, particularly from Dallas and Houston. The court carried over 1,075 cases from 1976 to 1977. By Aug. 31, 1977, however, 1,920 new cases had been added to those carried over.

In 1975, voters were offered, and defeated decisively, a plan to integrate the Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals, along with a series of regional courts of appeals, handling both civil and criminal cases.

The resolution offered Nov. 8 does not effect the Supreme Court or the regional courts of civil appeals. It would enlarge the Court of Criminal appeals from five to nine judges.

The entire court would hear all cases involving capital punishment and certain other cases, but for other cases the court could be split into three separate bodies to hear appeals.

Proponents say this would be cheaper than setting up a system of intermediate criminal appeals courts that would be separate but similar to the present courts of civil appeals.

Backers include all of the present Court of Criminal Appeals justices, the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, the Texas Judicial Council nd the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

Some opponents, including former Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert W. Calvert, oppose the amendment because they want a unified system with just one high court for both civil and criminal cases.

They argue that a dual system not only increases the number of judges but produces judges with narrow points of view.

Texas already has twice as many judges on its highest courts as any of the seven most populous states.

Proposition No. 3 on the ballot would expand the grounds by which a person accused of a felony may be denied freedom on bail. Currently a person may be denied bond if he or she has previously been convicted of two separate felonies.

The new proposal would permit denial of bail to anyone who is accused of committing a felony while out on bail for an indictment of a prior felony. It also would allow denial of bail if the person, convicted previously, commits another felony while using a deadly weapon.

Proponents argue this would reduce crime and provide safeguards against abuse of the bail procedures. The Dallas district attorney's office and others said it is common for someone to commit felony while out on bail, particularly on burglary indictments. Those accused of robbery, hot checks, and forgery are frequent repeaters, they said.

Prosecutors also say defendants usually do not want a speedy trial, hoping the witnesses will disappear or forget.

Opponents say the amendment would have little impact on the crime rate and that is would place too much power in the hand of the police as a form of preventive detention.

The bail amendment is supported by the Texas District and County Attorney's Association. It is opposed by the Criminal Defense Lawyers Association and the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

The last amendment on the ballot, No. 7, would change the name of the State Judicial Qualifications Commission to the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, and enlarge the body from nine to 11 members by adding a justice of the peace and another citizen member.

Since the commission was created in 1965 it has investigated about 600 complaints about Texas judges. It has recommended that three district judges be removed. Eight judges have retired while under investigation and nine more have resigned.

New changes in the commission's authority would allow it to suspend a judge, with or without pay, if he is indicted for a felony offense or after receiving a sworn complaint of judicial or public misconduct. The commission would be able, for the first time, to publicly reprimand an errant judge.

The amendment also would allow the Texas Supreme Court, which is the administrative head of the judicial system, to bar a judge from holding any future judicial office once he is removed by the court.

Proponents said the changes would make the commission more modern and effective, including more supervision of the state's 903 justices of the peace.

Opponents say there would be only four judges on the 11-member body and that would be a threat to an independent judiciary. They also object to suspending a judge on a sworn complaint, possibly made by one of his political enemies.

Why I Back The Chamber

By TOMMY DAVIS

Our Snyder Chamber of Commerce is composed of a group of people who have voluntarily banded themselves together so that they may work for their community much more effectively than as individuals.

I am a member of the Chamber of Commerce because I believe we can accomplish more by joining forces and combining our efforts than we ever could with each going his own way.

It takes two --- your chamber and you, to make Snyder the kind of place we want it to be. Won't you join us during investment week?

oh, how they forget!

We are like children, so often, lost along the way, unable to tell just what it is we want our government to do for us, unsure of how to measure when it has gone too far and needs restraint, unable to fit our sense of right and wrong against some set pattern.

Our lives need benchmarks, points of reference by which to measure what is happening to us. Without them, we cannot make sound judgments, find ourselves adrift. So we do the best we can in the immediate situation. Perhaps that's called situational ethics. Patchwork replaces principle.

With our government it is the same.

We have been in a period of political patchwork for many years - making our national and international policies fit the particular pressure of the particular moment. Perhaps that's better called pragmatism.

President Carter, with a deep Biblical background, seemed to hold the promise of such guidelines. But he has now nestled down among the Washington pragmatists and the guidelines and principles are melting here and there.

"What do you mean?" snaps an angry politican. "What's this about guidelines? What is it you want me to do?"

We cannot give him a straight answer for there is no one thing. So we struggle to give him a guideline:

"We think American society must be kept free enough from government control and from excess private power so that those men and women who want to make something out of their lives are able to do so."

We want people to have those chances. That is the important point. That is what our whole political and economic system should be about.

That is what we want to leave for our children and to give to people all over the world. We want to give them the chance.

We all instinctively realize it. We cheer the politicans who promise to go to Washington in our name and clear out the government's clutter of paperwork and bureaucrats that weigh us down. And in business we cheer the Davids who topple Goliaths.

We do it because we feel the need for room to breathe, room to take chances, room to risk it all and perhaps fail.

But the politicans fall prey to a loss of vision when they spend time in Washington. The system of passing bills, of reviewing legislation, tends to narrow their focus constantly. From the President down, they concentrate on an issue at a time, seeing the trees one at a time and forgetting the blazing forest.

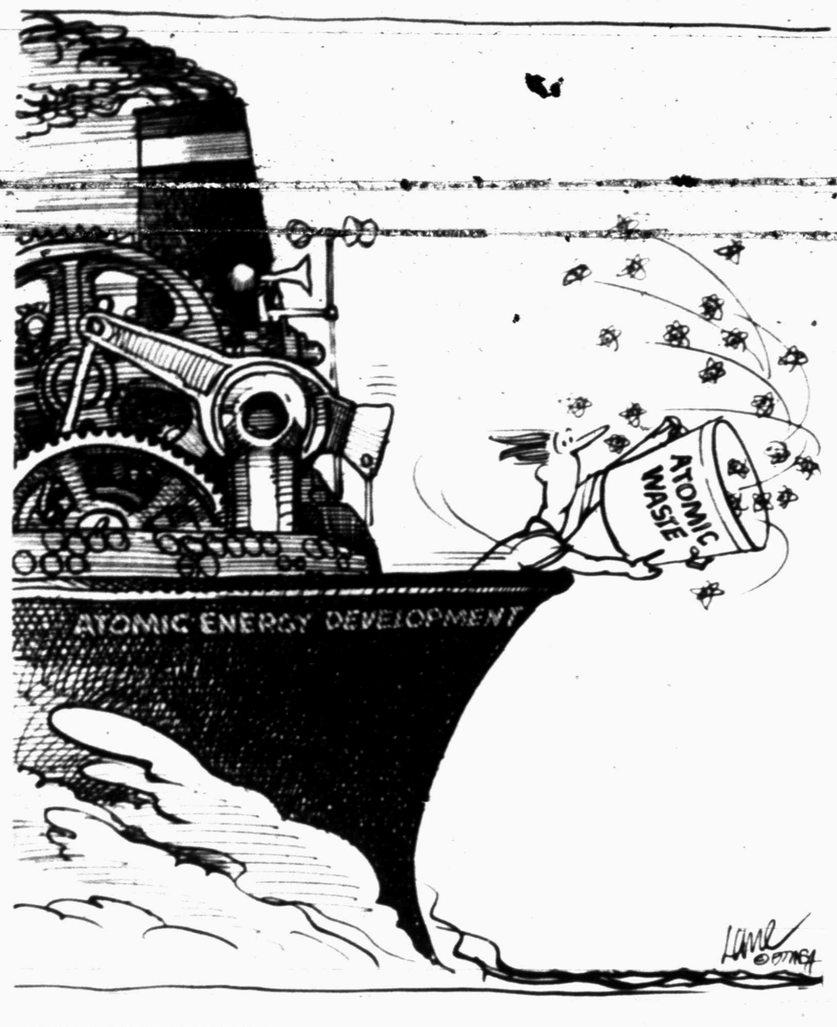

So it is up to us who treasure the American idea of individualism to pull them back.

We must say, "I don't care what bill you've passed this session, Mr. Politician, or what dam they're going to build for us or what highway. I want to know what you've done to keep the country free for my children's chances and mine. What have you done for hope?

"I'm sick and tired of hearing what you've done to control, to restrict, to deny, to punish. I want to know what you've done to encourage, to open, to lift, to create.

"We want this society open to possibilities, not closed to risk."

We must constantly remind them. They go to Washington and they forget.

americans recovering a fumble

Americans are recovering a fumble.

At every station where air and water pollution are measured both are measurably less than five years ago.

It is safe to swim in San Francisco Bay for the first time in decades.

The Cuyahoga River in Ohio does not catch fire anymore.

And have you heard about the fish we're catching in once dead Lake Erie?

And Lake Michigan fishing is again "the best in the world."

I'm sure you have never known a fisherman to exaggerate. But just in case this one might, what I am about to relate can be confirmed by the United States Department of Interior.

Eleven years ago the original trout population of Lake Michigan had been wiped out.

Some ocean fish had moved in through the Welland Canal and upset the ecological balance; eels attacked the trout.

Alewives took over the lake and littered the beaches, making a smelly mess.

Industrial and other pollution--seepage from landfills, sewage treatment plants, incinerators--tended to decimate the game fish population and render others inedible.

Stricter environmental controls began to undo pollution while Michigan's Department of Natural Resources began stocking the lake with coho salmon, an ocean fish which adapts to fresh water.

If our game and fish people don't do everything right, they did this right!

The salmon ate the unwanted alewives and prospered. They now average 6½ pounds.

Other sport fish were then introduced into the lake. The chinook salmon now taken from Lake Michigan average ten pounds!

Since 1966 the four states surrounding Lake Michigan have added a hundred million fish to the lake. Michigan alone has spent 22 million dollars.

But today the sport fishing industry harvests 350 million dollars a year. It's an angler's paradise and an economic bonanza!

It includes charter boats, bait and tackle shops, marinas, hotels and motels and taxidermists.

Minutes from Chicago we're catching 12 pound rainbow and five other kinds of trout--plus three kinds of salmon.

The Wall Street Journal calls it "the best fishing in the world."

There is no place else anywhere that you can catch this many fish this big within minutes of a metropolis.

From a lake that was nine-parts dead to "the best fishing in the world" in eleven years!

These next are the words of John McKetta, professor of chemical engineering, University of Texas:

"We are not on the brink of ecological disaster. Our oxygen is not disappearing. There is no buildup of poisonous carbon monoxide. The waters are being made purer. Let us continue to use our knowledge and not our fears to solve the problems which remain."

big fiscal mystery

NEW YORK (AP)-For the past year and a half the federal government has been battling a fiscal puzzle equal to the medical mystery of the Legionnaire's Disease.

How is the disease transmitted, by air or water or through some unknown medium? Just as baffling is the fiscal mystery, which could have equally dire consequences for susceptible bureaucrats.

The mystery concerns the money that wasn't spent. It was budgeted, allocated and put into the pipeline, but evidence of its use didn't show up at the other end. Where did it go? What happened it it?

A known fact is this: Estimates made last June put federal spending for fiscal 1977 at close to $408 billion. More recently the Carter administration estimated the figure at $404 billion to $406 billion.

But now it appears that spending in the fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30, came to no more than $403 billion, so even by White House estimates about $1 billion to $3 billion somehow was left over.

The federal government unable to spend money: What kind of ineptness is that, asked the critics, who had become accustomed to seeing Washington dispose of funds with elan and professional polish.

Such lack of spending might be attributed to bureaucratic ineptness, but this is not the case with the money unspent by our federal government. Every effort was made to spend it.

Still, the problem was widespread. Merrill Lynch Economics, which looked into the rare phenomenon, reports that "underspending has been spread throughout many functions and departments, including defense, veterans programs, the new job programs, etc."

To what can the situation be attributed? Economists at ML believe the government's desire was bigger than its ability-that in part the explanation is that officials simply over-estimated their ability to quickly run through funds.

They overestimated, says ML Economics, in these separate areas:

-The cost of established programs.

-The demand for certain services of the federal government.

-The speed at which new programs could begin.

"The cost of established programs, such as defense man-power and procurement, have fallen below expectations. Military personnel expenses are going to run about $500 million below the official January budget," it reports.

In the category of "demand for services" the economists note that "the Department of Labor overestimated the number of people requiring unemployment insurance, and those outlays are $2 billion below that department's January estimates."

The Department of Transportation expected state governments to apply for more highway funds than they did. And Veterans Administration outlays apparently were far over the mark.

In the third category, that of overly ambitious estimates of how soon new programs could be implemented, a prime example is said to be the local public works program, under which the federal government offers grants to municipalities.

There are other reasons, these are only a few. But now that at least part of the mystery has been unraveled, critics say another one remains.

"Can it be done again?" they ask.

jury experiment

WASHINGTON, D.C.--To help overhaul what is obviously an antiquated concept, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is financing a new jury experiment for Federal Courts called "one day-one trial."

Under the system, a prospective juror would spend only one day or the length of one trial at the courthouse and their "public duty" would be fulfilled for the year.

As it is now, John Doe is called for jury service and may report every day for a full month and never be chosen to serve. He loses money and, in some instances, has actually lost his job.

There are cases where a prospective juror works at night and attends Court during the day. John Doe's woes are shared by at least two million people called for jury duty each year. Reports say that many of them are bored, frustrated and suffer financial losses because of the traditional 30-day jury system. Experiments have been conducted in Michigan and are being tried in other places. Thus far, after eighteen months, judges and other Court officials say that it is working very well, not only for the juror but that it saves money.

In the system, a juror is selected from a master list of registered voters by a computer. The computer also mails a personal history questionnaire to determine if the person is qualified and acceptable. If qualified, he or she would be either in the regular or standby juror pool. In the latter, the prospective juror would telephone and be told by a recording whether or not to report for duty.

On their reporting day, the jurors are shown a 16-minute film, acquainting them with legal procedures and their role as jurors. They then await assignment. If they are not accepted, they are dismissed at the end of the day and that fulfills their jury responsibility.

If a juror has a legitimate excuse for not serving, it can be determined without his waiting around days before that determination is made.

Officials of Wayne County, Michigan, say that in the first six months of the new system's operation, $330,000 was saved. Jurors are paid $15.00 a day and the cost per trial has decreased from $862.00 to $646.00. Indications are that the new system has brought about a broader community representation on juries since seven times as many citizens are summoned and 75 percent actually serve. This compared with 45 percent under the old system in Michigan.

No suggestion is made that the federal system be imposed on State Courts but if this new approach clearly proves itself across the Nation, a similar practice might be adopted in all jurisdictions.

A student can certainly learn a lot at college these days. Much of the learning is confined to the formal education of the classroom, but much can also be learned outside the regular classroom in self edification-type classes the student may choose to take on his own time.

The Associated Press recently reported on an experimental college being operated by students at the University of Connecticut. Among other things, the college offered classes on subjects ranging from how to grow marijuana and how to build your own atomic bomb to basket-making and star gazing.

Although not all colleges offer courses in atomic bomb construction and marijuana growing, many informally offer a wide spectrum of courses outside their regular curricula.

The courses are optional and the student does not receive any college credit for taking them. They are usually free of charge or the expenses are nominal. The student takes such a course merely because he is interested in it.

Texas Tech offered what it called the free university. There, a student could take courses ranging from conversational Arabic to fencing and wine tasting.

While at Tech, I took an old movies class where all we did was sit and watch old movies.

Watching old movies may hold little appeal to some people, but if you are interested in that sort of thing the course was a blessing.

We got to see the original Tarzan movie, the original vampire movie, and some very old cartoons. We also got to see a 1950s science fiction film and comedies featuring Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton.

Western Texas College offers what it calls community service courses featuring a wide range of classes a person may take for self improvement.

For a person wishing to learn something merely for the sake of learning it, the courses are excellent.

Life can be made so much more enjoyable by the seemingly aimless pursuit of knowledge. Classes do not have to be rigidly structured and accredited to be personally beneficial.

Air Cargo Survey Made

WASHINGTON (AP)-The electronics industry has become the biggest single user of air freight, according to a survey by the Air Transport Association on air cargo statistics of U.S.-scheduled airlines.

The ATA said the electronics industry was followed closely by producers of printed matter, machinery parts, cut flowers and wearing apparel.

Auto parts, photographic equipment, fresh fruits and vegetables, tools and hardware, and office machines rounded out the list of the top 10 air freight commodities.

To The Daily News:

Recently the Snyder Daily News printed a front page story over the situation of having or hiring homosexual teachers in public schools. I was rather disappointed, though not very surprised by the stand Texas and Snyder have taken. It seems to me that when the word homosexual is used the image that comes to mind is a feminine man totally preoccupied by sex, or in this case, making "unnatural" passes at his students.

This is totally absurd. Although I'm sure there are those who do present the mental image I have described, I do not feel that that is none the worse than some of the crudeness displayed among many heterosexuals today. While I do not wish to offend anyone, I will not go into the case of it being "sinful" or "unnatural" for that is not the point nor is it my purpose in this letter.

What I'm trying to say is this: What a person does with his love life (note I said love, not sex. And yes, I do believe they love.) is none of anyones business.

Also I would like for you to think very carefully on this last part of my letter. What if Socrates, Plato, da Vinci and other could come alive to lecture and teach in Snyder. Some of the greatest teachers of all time! What a pity they would be unemployed! With that I believe I have made my point.

In closing I would like to say that a very wise teacher of mine once said, "Don't put your mouth in gear before your brain." I believe that this is exactly what Texas and Snyder have done.

CDC Chief For Jogging, Preventive Medicine

EDITOR'S NOTE - The nation's chief strategist against flu, measles, and other communicable diseases is a towering former medical missionary. Dr. William F. Foege believes in jogging, preventive medicine and the continued forward march of the health sciences.

BY JACK STILLMAN
Associated press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) – More than a decade ago, Dr. William H. Foege was buddled over maps and miscroscopic slides, plotting his next step in the war against smallpox.

A medical missionary then, the 6-foot-7 Foege was among the frontline fighters against a disease that was killing between 500,000 and a million people a year.

Today his hopes of wiping out smallpox are all but realized. By next year, says Foege - now director of the national Center for Disease Control - smallpox will have just about disappeared from the Earth.

He has new enemies to keep him busy. Legionnaire's disease, for example. His CDC researchers painstakingly tracked it down to a bacterium. Now they are finding it was not just an isolated strain in an outbreak following the Pennsylvania American Legion convention in Philadelphia last year.

The latest incidence was in Burlington, Vt., and Columbus, Ohio, and the same strain of bacterium has been identified in other outbreaks over the past 15 years. Foege is confident that CDC researchers eventually will discover how it is spread.

Foege became director of the CDC after last year's ill-fated swine flu immunization program. He says he plans no changes in the center's mode of operation, but he'd like to see the government do more to get people to stop smoking.

That ties in with Foege's stress on prevention medicine.

"Preventing disease has been the most significant factor in our current longevity," he says. "It's been more important than curative medicine.

"The effects of cigarette smoking may turn out to be the No.1 preventive medicine problem in the country. The health people discuss this as a health problem. There are others who discuss it in terms of the economy. The implication is that the economy is more important than the health aspects. I don't think the argument makes much sense."

He'd like to see tobacco advertising "much more restricted" and believes the government should find ways to help people who want to stop smoking but can't, and also to aid farmers who give up growing tobacco.

Foege pronounced Fayghee) is a vigorous 41, jogs two miles each day and considers a backpacking trip into the wilderness with his wife and three young sons as the ideal vacation.

Unlike the fashionable pessimism of many, his view of the future is that life - and the quality of it - will steadily improve.

Life expectancy in the United States now is 72 years, six more than a generation or so ago, and Foege likes to think the CDC had something to do with it.

Foege is the ninth director of the CDC, which was formed in 1946. He directs the activities of its 3,500 employees scattered throughout the world.

A graduate of Pacific Lutheran University, he was named assistant director in 1975 after two years as director of the World Health Organization's smallpox eradication program. He became CDC director last spring.

Even in the beginning Foege wanted to get in the middle of things. As a recruit in the CDC's Epidemic Intelligence Service he asked to be assigned in the field. Most wanted jobs in the Atlanta center.

After two years as an epidemiologist with the State of Colorado, where he was assigned by the EIS, he resigned to become a medical missionary to the Immanual Medical Center at Bansara, Nigeria. It was there that Foege began to plot his war against smallpox.

"He used battlefield tactics," says Millar, who was in charge of the CDC's smallpox eradication program at the time. "He plotted where the disease broke out and that's where we attacked it.

"We had just gotten our field people into West Africa. The civil war broke out in Nigeria and we got a contract with him to help us as a consultant."

Foege's family was sent home as the civil war spread, but Foege and the small band of disease fighters worked on.

Finally, the doctors and other missionaries were pulled out of Nigeria in 1968, and Millar talked Foege into working for the CDC.

Foege likes to talk about what medical science has accomplished generally in reducing disease, but the old enemy hasn't run out of tricks. New viruses keep cropping up - lassa fever, marburg fever ane ebola fever among the more recent. All are often fatal, but only lassa fever has occurred in the United States, an import from Africa.

"We'll continue to see new viruses and each time we'll react as fast as we can to see how they spread and how to control them, he says. "No one will be foolish enough to say we will know all the answers. But the more we plan the more we will be prepared. We have access to the whole world - we get cooperation from everybody, including Russia and China."

And there's always influenza, mild at times, severe at others. While the swine flu program, troubled from the start, gave CDC a black eye in the view of many, Foege notes that it was the first time that epidemiologists detected a shift in the flu virus fast enough to develop a vaccine quickly to fight it.

"The epidemic didn't occur, so we couldn't prove it," he says.

Dentist Could Solve Her Kissing Problem

By Abigail Van Buren

1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I can't sign my name because I don't want to humiliate my husband, but I need some suggestions.

We've been married for 20 years and have a lovely family. We've had our ups and downs, but the biggest problem now is my husband's refusal to brush his teeth. It's repulsive.

He's a heavy smoker, which doesn't help his breath any, and he's always having problems with sore gums. He hasn't been to a dentist in years, and his teeth are rotting away.

His breath has gotten so bad lately that I told him I had a sore throat and he could kiss me only on the cheek. Now he's complaining that I've had the longest "sore throat" in history, and he's stopped kissing me altogether.

I love my husband and would like to kiss him, but that terrible breath turns me off.

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: If you could drag him to a dentist, I'd be all for it. But a grown man who refuses to clean up his act doesn't deserve to be kissed on the lips, so don't feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend stood me up last night. He didn't call me before work this morning to explain, and when I called him later, he got mad at me for being mad at him for standing me up. He said I should have "understood."

Tell me, what are the ethics in such a situation?

STOOD UP

DEAR STOOD UP: Your boyfriend has learned that the best defense is a strong offense. It's bad enough that he stood you up, but if you could reach him by phone later, he could have reached you by phone to explain.

Lose him, unless you are prepared to "understand" a lot of other things you can't understand.

DEAR ABBY: A lady with whom I was well acquainted passed away last week after a lingering illness. Her family was well aware of the hopelessness of her condition. The day after her death, her two teenage daughters were back in school going about their business as usual, without showing signs of their loss or sorrow in any way.

Their friends and teachers were shocked at this apparent lack of feeling. Am I wrong to feel that, out of respect to their mother's memory, they should have stayed at home for the one day between her death and her funeral?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: How other people handle their grief and react to their losses is a very personal matter. Judge not, lest ye be judged.

Farrell Happy With M-A-S-H

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)- Mike Farrell went into "M-A-S-H" much the same way a soldier is reassigned from a replacement company.

Wayne Rogers-Trapper John McIntyre-left the hit CBS show in its fourth year, rotated stateside from the Korean War, so to speak. He wanted out because he felt he was playing second fiddle to Hawkeye-Alan Alda.

Farrell, as Capt. B.J. Hunnicutt, moved in. That was the same year that Harry Morgan, as Col. Sherman Potter, replaced McLean Stevenson.

"It was terrifying," recalls Farrell, now in his third year. "I was convinced that if the show sank it was going to be my fault."

Farrell had no need to fear. "M-A-S-H" remains one of the most popular shows on TV.

This year there was another replacement. Donald Ogden Stiers came in after Larry Linville, who was Maj. Frank Burns, left to seek his fortune elsewhere.

"This has been the best group to work with," Farrell says. "I am so in love with these people."

One of his major worries was that Loretta Swit-Hot Lips Houlihan-wouldn't accept him because she and Wayne had been so close.

Toward the end of that first year, Loretta said she had a present for Farrell. "She said she had been saving it because she didn't know how I would take it.

"You know the line of clothing designed by the other Wayne Rogers? Loretta had cut out a clothing ad and gave it to me. It said, 'Wayne Rogers, get off my back.' I've got it up on my wall at home. It's terrific.

"I was concerned about her reaction to me because of Wayne, and here she was concerned I was going to be sensitive."

A year later Farrell met Rogers at a party. "He said, 'I want to tell you something. One time Elliott Gould came up to me and said are you doing me or are you doing Donald Sutherland?' Wayne said he was doing Gould. Gould said, 'I like me better.' He said, 'What I want to tell you is that I've seen what you do and I like you better.' Now, that's class!"

Gould was Trapper and Sutherland was Hawkeye in movie that inspired the series.

Farrell, previously starred in two other TV series, "The Interns and "The Man and the City," said he had no problems taking a secondary role.

"I think it's clearly Alan's show, but I've never objected to that. You see Wayne may have had a gripe going in that he thought it was to be evenly divided or that there was a possibility of its becoming his show. With that understanding, I can see how he was dissatisfied.

"I knew going in that it was Alan's show. That I was going to be secondary. I felt all along if I did the right kind of job with the right kind of character it would be secondary yet important."

What is a calorie?

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB – Recently I read that most people do not really know what a calorie is. That started me to thinking and it is true. I know it has something to do with whether a food will make you fat or not but I really do not understand exactly what a calorie is. That sounds strange in a nation of calorie counters but how about telling us in terms we can understand what a calorie really is.

DEAR READER – A calorie is simply a way of measuring heat energy. The kind of calories we use in discussing food and your body's use of calories is a kilocalorie. That is the amount of heat you would need to raise the temperature of one liter (a little more than a quart) of water one degree centigrade. To help you visualize that, 100 calories would raise the temperature of one liter of water from freezing level to boiling.

The heat energy absorbed by the cold water to reach the boiling point can be from electricity. This is a good example of converting electrical energy into heat energy. Energy can neither be created nor destroyed but it can be transformed into different forms of energy, including heat, electrical, mechanical or chemical energy.

Since a pound of body fat contains about 3500 calories it follows that a pound of body fat has locked in it enough energy to heat 35 liters of water from the freezing level to the boiling level.

A tablespoon of butter or margarine contains 100 calories, enough energy if it is released to heat a liter of water from the freezing (0 degrees C) to boiling (100 degrees C).

If you walk one mile and use 60 extra calories doing so, that would use the mechanical energy which could be transformed to enough heat energy to heat about two-thirds of a liter of water from freezing to boiling.

The energy stored in a food or in body fat is released by complex chemical actions. This energy is used to heat your body. The heat released is usually more than we want so the body has to constantly rid itself of the heat released from food. If it is unable to do so the body heat builds up and may even cause heat stroke.

Part of the released energy is used to build important chemicals, including enzymes and hormones. Growing children use the energy in building their bodies, which is why they can eat foods containing so much energy and still not get fat.

Some of the energy is converted to mechanical energy to enable you to do any physical activity.

If you consume 2,000 calories a day you are taking in enough calories to heat 20 liters of water from freezing to boiling. If you are a normal person and reasonably active you may use all of them to keep your body working properly, to keep your body warm and to perform physical activity.

If you take in more calories than you can use the body simply stores calories by forming body fat. When you are ready to use that energy the body fat is broken down to release the calories for use.

To give you more information I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-2, Understanding Your Energy System. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019

oh, how they forget!

We are like children, so often, lost along the way, unable to tell, just what it is we want our government to do for us, unsure of how to measure when it has gone too far and needs restraint, unable to fit our sense of right and wrong against some set pattern.

Our lives need benchmarks, points of reference by which to measure what is happening to us. Without them, we cannot make sound judgments, find ourselves adrift. So we do the best we can in the immediate situation. Perhaps that's called situational ethics. Patchwork replaces principle.

With our government it is the same.

We have been in a period of political patchwork for many years - making our national and international policies fit the particular pressure of the particular moment. Perhaps that's better called pragmatism.

President Carter, with a deep Biblical background, seemed to hold the promise of such guidelines. But he has now nestled down among the Washington pragmatists and the guidelines and principles are melting here and there.

"What do you mean?" snaps an angry politican. "What's this about guidelines? What is it you want me to do?"

We cannot give him a straight answer for there is no one thing. So we struggle to give him a guideline:

"We think American society must be kept free enough from government control and from excess private power so that those men and women who want to make something out of their lives are able to do so."

We want people to have those chances. That is the important point. That is what our whole political and economic system should be about.

That is what we want to leave for our children and to give to people all over the world. We want to give them the chance.

We all instinctively realize it. We cheer the politicans who promise to go to Washington in our name and clear out the government's clutter of paperwork and bureaucrats that weigh us down. And in business we cheer the Davids who topple Goliaths.

We do it because we feel the need for room to breathe, room to take chances, room to risk it all and perhaps fail.

But the politicans fall prey to a loss of vision when they spend time in Washington. The system of passing bills, of reviewing legislation, tends to narrow their focus constantly. From the President down, they concentrate on an issue at a time, seeing the trees one at a time and forgetting the blazing forest.

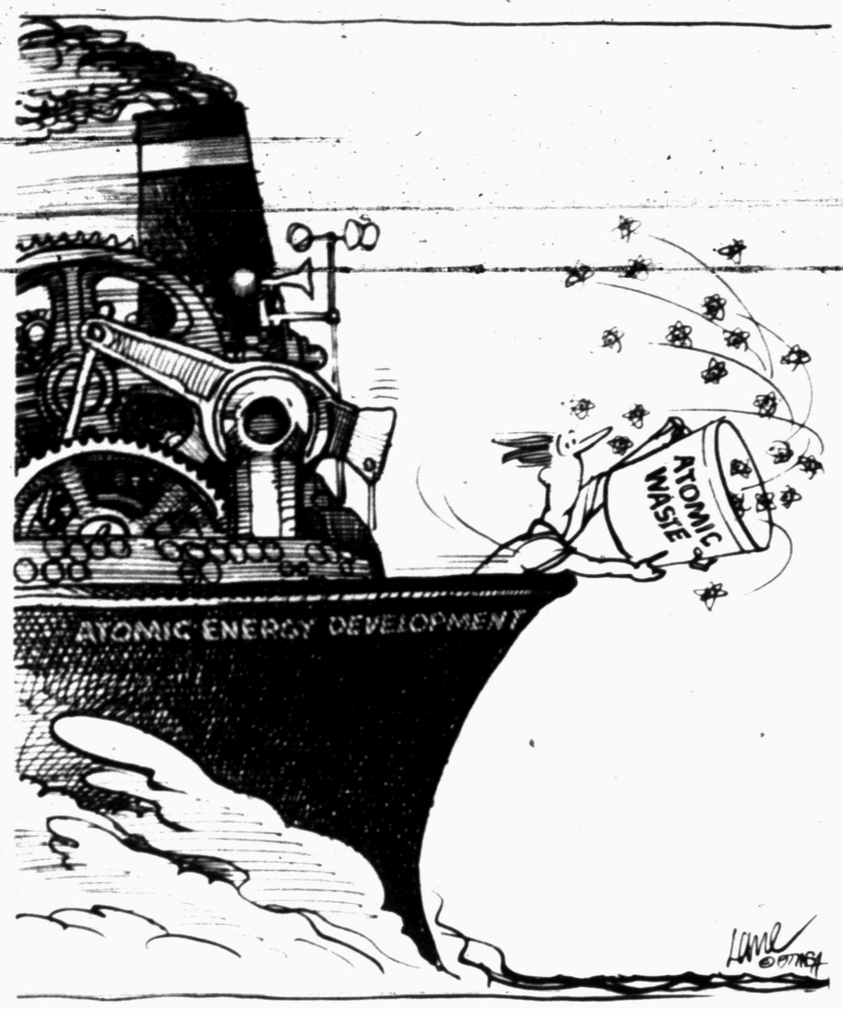

So it is up to us who treasure the American idea of individualism to pull them back.

We must say, "I don't care what bill you've passed this session, Mr. Politician, or what dam they're going to build for us or what highway. I want to know what you've done to keep the country free for my children's chances and mine. What have you done for hope?

"I'm sick and tired of hearing what you've done to control, to restrict, to deny, to punish. I want to know what you've done to encourage, to open, to lift, to create.

"We want this society open to possibilities, not closed to risk."

We must constantly remind them. They go to Washington and they forget.

americans recovering a fumble

Americans are recovering a fumble.

At every station where air and water pollution are measured both are measurably less than five years ago.

It is safe to swim in San Francisco Bay for the first time in decades.

The Cuyahoga River in Ohio does not catch fire anymore.

And have you heard about the fish we're catching in once dead Lake Erie?

And Lake Michigan fishing is again "the best in the world."

I'm sure you have never known a fisherman to exaggerate. But just in case this one might, what I am about to relate can be confirmed by the United States Department of Interior.

Eleven years ago the original trout population of Lake Michigan had been wiped out.

Some ocean fish had moved in through the Welland Canal and upset the ecological balance; eels attacked the trout.

Alewives took over the lake and littered the beaches, making a smelly mess.

Industrial and other pollution--seepage from landfills, sewage treatment plants, incinerators--tended to decimate the game fish population and render others inedible.

Stricter environmental controls began to undo pollution while Michigan's Department of Natural Resources began stocking the lake with coho salmon, an ocean fish which adapts to fresh water.

If our game and fish people don't do everything right, they did this right!

The salmon ate the unwanted alewives and prospered. They now average 6½ pounds.

Other sport fish were then introduced into the lake. The chinook salmon now taken from Lake Michigan average ten pounds!

Since 1966 the four states surrounding Lake Michigan have added a hundred million fish to the lake. Michigan alone has spent 22 million dollars.

But today the sport fishing industry harvests 350 million dollars a year. It's an angler's paradise and an economic bonanza!

It includes charter boats, bait and tackle shops, marinas, hotels and motels and taxidermists.

Minutes from Chicago we're catching 12 pound rainbow and five other kinds of trout--plus three kinds of salmon.

The Wall Street Journal calls it "the best fishing in the world."

There is no place else anywhere that you can catch this many fish this big within minutes of a metropolis.

From a lake that was nine-parts dead to "the best fishing in the world" in eleven years!

These next are the words of John McKetta, professor of chemical engineering, University of Texas:

"We are not on the brink of ecological disaster. Our oxygen is not disappearing. There is no buildup of poisonous carbon monoxide. The waters are being made purer. Let us continue to use our knowledge and not our fears to solve the problems which remain."

big fiscal mystery

NEW YORK (AP)-For the past year and a half the federal government has been battling a fiscal puzzle equal to the medical mystery of the Legionnaire's Disease.

How is the disease transmitted, by air or water or through some unknown medium? Just as baffling is the fiscal mystery, which could have equally dire consequences for susceptible bureaucrats.

The mystery concerns the money that wasn't spent. It was budgeted, allocated and put into the pipeline, but evidence of its use didn't show up at the other end. Where did it go? What happened it it?

A known fact is this: Estimates made last June put federal spending for fiscal 1977 at close to $408 billion. More recently the Carter administration estimated the figure at $404 billion to $406 billion.

But now it appears that spending in the fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30, came to no more than $403 billion, so even by White House estimates about $1 billion to $3 billion somehow was left over.

The federal government unable to spend money: What kind of ineptness is that, asked the critics, who had become accustomed to seeing Washington dispose of funds with elan and professional polish.

Such lack of spending might be attributed to bureaucratic ineptness, but this is not the case with the money unspent by our federal government. Every effort was made to spend it.

Still, the problem was widespread. Merrill Lynch Economics, which looked into the rare phenomenon, reports that "underspending has been spread throughout many functions and departments, including defense, veterans programs, the new job programs, etc."

To what can the situation be attributed? Economists at ML believe the government's desire was bigger than its ability-that in part the explanation is that officials simply over-estimated their ability to quickly run through funds.

They overestimated, says ML Economics, in these separate areas:

-The cost of established programs.

-The demand for certain services of the federal government.

-The speed at which new programs could begin.

"The cost of established programs, such as defense man-power and procurement, have fallen below expectations. Military personnel expenses are going to run about $500 million below the official January budget," it reports.

In the category of "demand for services" the economists note that "the Department of Labor overestimated the number of people requiring unemployment insurance, and those outlays are $2 billion below that department's January estimates."

The Department of Transportation expected state governments to apply for more highway funds than they did. And Veterans Administration outlays apparently were far over the mark.

In the third category, that of overly ambitious estimates of how soon new programs could be implemented, a prime example is said to be the local public works program, under which the federal government offers grants to municipalities.

There are other reasons; these are only a few. But now that at least part of the mystery has been unraveled, critics say another one remains.

"Can it be done again?" they ask.

jury experiment

WASHINGTON, D.C.--To help overhaul what is obviously an antiquated concept, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is financing a new jury experiment for Federal Courts called "one day-one trial."

Under the system, a prospective juror would spend only one day or the length of one trial at the courthouse and their "public duty" would be fulfilled for the year.

As it is now, John Doe is called for jury service and may report every day for a full month and never be chosen to serve. He loses money and, in some instances, has actually lost his job.

There are cases where a prospective juror works at night and attends Court during the day. John Doe's woes are shared by at least two million people called for jury duty each year. Reports say that many of them are bored, frustrated and suffer financial losses because of the traditional 30-day jury system. Experiments have been conducted in Michigan and are being tried in other places. Thus far, after eighteen months, judges and other Court officials say that it is working very well, not only for the juror but that it saves money.

In the system, a juror is selected from a master list of registered voters by a computer. The computer also mails a personal history questionnaire to determine if the person is qualified and acceptable. If qualified, he or she would be either in the regular or standby juror pool. In the latter, the prospective juror would telephone and be told by a recording whether or not to report for duty.

On their reporting day, the jurors are shown a 16-minute film, acquainting them with legal procedures and their role as jurors. They then await assignment. If they are not accepted, they are dismissed at the end of the day and that fulfills their jury responsibility.

If a juror has a legitimate excuse for not serving, it can be determined without his waiting around days before that determination is made.

Officials of Wayne County, Michigan, say that in the first six months of the new system's operation, $330,000 was saved. Jurors are paid $15.00 a day and the cost per trial has decreased from $862.00 to $646.00. Indications are that the new system has brought about a broader community representation on juries since seven times as many citizens are summoned and 75 percent actually serve. This compared with 45 percent under the old system in Michigan.

No suggestion is made that the federal system be imposed on State Courts but if this new approach clearly proves itself across the Nation, a similar practice might be adopted in all jurisdictions.

A student can certainly learn a lot at college these days. Much of the learning is confined to the formal education of the classroom, but much can also be learned outside the regular classroom in self edification-type classes the student may choose to take on his own time.

The Associated Press recently reported on an experimental college being operated by students at the University of Connecticut. Among other things, the college offered classes on subjects ranging from how to grow marijuana and how to build your own atomic bomb to basket-making and star gazing.

Although not all colleges offer courses in atomic bomb construction and marijuana growing, many informally offer a wide spectrum of courses outside their regular curricula.

The courses are optional and the student does not receive any college credit for taking them. They are usually free of charge or the expenses are nominal. The student takes such a course merely because he is interested in it.

Texas Tech offered what it called the free university. There, a student could take courses ranging from conversational Arabic to fencing and wine tasting.

While at Tech, I took an old movies class where all we did was sit and watch old movies.

Watching old movies may hold little appeal to some people, but if you are interested in that sort of thing the course was a blessing.

We got to see the original Tarzan movie, the original vampire movie, and some very old cartoons. We also got to see a 1950s science fiction film and comedies featuring Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton.

Western Texas College offers what it calls community service courses featuring a wide range of classes a person may take for self improvement.

For a person wishing to learn something merely for the sake of learning it, the courses are excellent.

Life can be made so much more enjoyable by the seemingly aimless pursuit of knowledge. Classes do not have to be rigidly structured and accredited to be personally beneficial.

Air Cargo Survey Made

WASHINGTON (AP)-The electronics industry has become the biggest single user of air freight, according to a survey by the Air Transport Association on air cargo statistics of U.S.-scheduled airlines.

The ATA said the electronics industry was followed closely by producers of printed matter, machinery parts, cut flowers and wearing apparel.

Auto parts, photographic equipment, fresh fruits and vegetables, tools and hardware, and office machines rounded out the list of the top 10 air freight commodities.

To The Daily News:

Recently the Snyder Daily News printed a front page story over the situation of having or hiring homosexual teachers in public schools. I was rather disappointed, though not very surprised by the stand Texas and Snyder have taken. It seems to me that when the word homosexual is used the image that comes to mind is a feminine man totally preoccupied by sex, or in this case, making "unnatural" passes at his students.

This is totally absurd. Although I'm sure there are those who do present the mental image I have described, I do not feel that that is none the worse than some of the crudeness displayed among many heterosexuals today. While I do not wish to offend anyone, I will not go into the case of it being "sinful" or "unnatural" for that is not the point nor is it my purpose in this letter.

What I'm trying to say is this: What a person does with his love life (note I said love, not sex. And yes, I do believe they love.) is none of anyones business.

Also I would like for you to think very carefully on this last part of my letter. What if Socrates, Plato, da Vinci and other could come alive to lecture and teach in Snyder. Some of the greatest teachers of all time! What a pity they would be unemployed! With that I believe I have made my point.

In closing I would like to say that a very wise teacher of mine once said, "Don't put your mouth in gear before your brain." I believe that this is exactly what Texas and Snyder have done.

CDC Chief For Jogging, Preventive Medicine

EDITOR'S NOTE - The nation's chief strategist against flu, measles and other communicable diseases is a towering former medical missionary. Dr. William F. Foege believes in jogging, preventive medicine and the continued forward march of the health sciences.

By JACK STILLMAN
Associated press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) -- More than a decade ago, Dr. William H. Foege was buddled over maps and miscroscopic slides, plotting his next step in the war against smallpox.

A medical missionary then, the 6-foot-7 Foege was among the frontline fighters against a disease that was killing between 500,000 and a million people a year.

Today his hopes of wiping out smallpox are all but realized. By next year, says Foege, now director of the national Center for Disease Control - smallpox will have just about disappeared from the Earth.

He has new enemies to keep him busy. Legionnaire's disease, for example. His CDC researchers painstakingly tracked it down to a bacterium. Now they are finding it was not just an isolated strain in an outbreak following the Pennsylvania American Legion convention in Philadelphia last year.

The latest incidence was in Burlington, Vt., and Columbus, Ohio, and the same strain of bacterium has been identified in other outbreaks over the past 15 years. Foege is confident that CDC researchers eventually will discover how it is spread.

Foege became director of the CDC after last year's ill-fated swine flu immunization program. He says he plans no changes in the center's mode of operation, but he'd like to see the government do more to get people to stop smoking.

That ties in with Foege's stress on prevention medicine.

"Preventing disease has been the most significant factor in our current longevity," he says. "It's been more important than curative medicine.

"The effects of cigarette smoking may turn out to be the No.1 preventive medicine problem in the country. The health people discuss this as a health problem. There are others who discuss it in terms of the economy. The implication is that the economy is more important than the health aspects. I don't think the argument makes much sense."

He'd like to see tobacco advertising "much more restricted" and believes the government should find ways to help people who want to stop smoking but can't, and also to aid farmers who give up growing tobacco.

Foege pronounced Fayghee) is a vigorous 41, jogs two miles each day and considers a backpacking trip into the wilderness with his wife and three young sons as the ideal vacation.

Unlike the fashionable pessimism of many, his view of the future is that life - and the quality of it - will steadily improve.

Life expectancy in the United States now is 72 years, six more than a generation or so ago, and Foege likes to think the CDC had something to do with it.

Foege is the ninth director of the CDC, which was formed in 1946. He directs the activities of its 3,500 employees scattered throughout the world.

A graduate of Pacific Lutheran University, he was named assistant director in 1975 after two years as director of the World Health Organization's smallpox eradication program. He became CDC director last spring.

Even in the beginning Foege wanted to get in the middle of things. As a recruit in the CDC's Epidemic Intelligence Service he asked to be assigned in the field. Most wanted jobs in the Atlanta center.

After two years as an epidemiologist with the State of Colorado, where he was assigned by the EIS, he resigned to become a medical missionary to the Immanual Medical Center at Bansara, Nigeria. It was there that Foege began to plot his war against smallpox.

"He used battlefield tactics," says Millar, who was in charge of the CDC's smallpox eradication program at the time. "He plotted where the disease broke out and that's where we attacked it.

"We had just gotten our field people into West Africa. The civil war broke out in Nigeria and we got a contract with him to help us as a consultant."

Foege's family was sent home as the civil war spread, but Foege and the small band of disease fighters worked on.

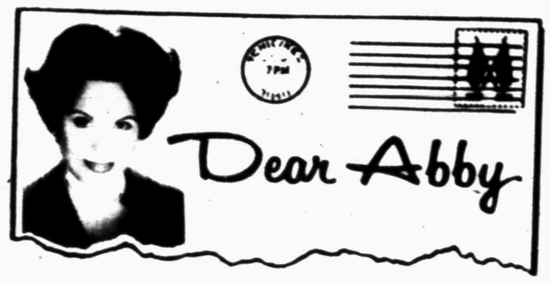

Finally, the doctors and other missionaries were pulled out of Nigeria in 1968, and Millar talked Foege into working for the CDC.

Foege likes to talk about what medical science has accomplished generally in reducing disease, but the old enemy hasn't run out of tricks. New viruses keep cropping up - lassa fever, marburg fever ane ebola fever among the more recent. All are often fatal, but only lassa fever has occurred in the United States, an import from Africa.

"We'll continue to see new viruses and each time we'll react as fast as we can to see how they spread and how to control them, he says. "No one will be foolish enough to say we will know all the answers. But the more we plan the more we will be prepared. We have access to the whole world - we get cooperation from everybody, including Russia and China."

And there's always influenza, mild at times, severe at others. While the swine flu program, troubled from the start, gave CDC a black eye in the view of many, Foege notes that it was the first time that epidemiologists detected a shift in the flu virus fast enough to develop a vaccine quickly to fight it.

"The epidemic didn't occur, so we couldn't prove it," he says.

Dentist Could Solve Her Kissing Problem

By Abigail Van Buren

1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y.News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: I can't sign my name because I don't want to humiliate my husband, but I need some suggestions.

We've been married for 20 years and have a lovely family. We've had our ups and downs, but the biggest problem now is my husband's refusal to brush his teeth. It's repulsive.

He's a heavy smoker, which doesn't help his breath any, and he's always having problems with sore gums. He hasn't been to a dentist in years, and his teeth are rotting away.

His breath has gotten so bad lately that I told him I had a sore throat and he could kiss me only on the cheek. Now he's complaining that I've had the longest "sore throat" in history, and he's stopped kissing me altogether.

I love my husband and would like to kiss him, but that terrible breath turns me off.

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: If you could drag him to a dentist, I'd be all for it. But a grown man who refuses to clean up his act doesn't deserve to be kissed on the lips, so don't feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend stood me up last night. He didn't call me before work this morning to explain, and when I called him later, he got mad at me for being mad at him for standing me up. He said I should have "understood."

Tell me, what are the ethics in such a situation?

STOOD UP

DEAR STOOD UP: Your boyfriend has learned that the best defense is a strong offense. It's bad enough that he stood you up, but if you could reach him by phone later, he could have reached you by phone to explain.

Lose him, unless you are prepared to "understand" a lot of other things you can't understand.

DEAR ABBY: A lady with whom I was well acquainted passed away last week after a lingering illness. Her family was well aware of the hopelessness of her condition. The day after her death, her two teenage daughters were back in school going about their business as usual, without showing signs of their loss or sorrow in any way.

Their friends and teachers were shocked at this apparent lack of feeling. Am I wrong to feel that, out of respect to their mother's memory, they should have stayed at home for the one day between her death and her funeral?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: How other people handle their grief and react to their losses is a very personal matter. Judge not, lest ye be judged.

Farrell Happy With M-A-S-H

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)- Mike Farrell went into "M-A-S-H" much the same way a soldier is reassigned from a replacement company.

Wayne Rogers-Trapper John McIntyre-left the hit CBS show in its fourth year, rotated stateside from the Korean War, so to speak. He wanted out because he felt he was playing second fiddle to Hawkeye-Alan Alda.

Farrell, as Capt. B.J. Hunnicutt, moved in. That was the same year that Harry Morgan, as Col. Sherman Potter, replaced McLean Stevenson.

"It was terrifying," recalls Farrell, now in his third year. "I was convinced that if the show sank it was going to be my fault."

Farrell had no need to fear. "M-A-S-H" remains one of the most popular shows on TV.

This year there was another replacement. Donald Ogden Stiers came in after Larry Linville, who was Maj. Frank Burns, left to seek his fortune elsewhere.

"This has been the best group to work with," Farrell says. "I am so in love with these people."

One of his major worries was that Loretta Swit-Hot Lips Houlihan-wouldn't accept him because she and Wayne had been so close.

Toward the end of that first year, Loretta said she had a present for Farrell. "She said she had been saving it because she didn't know how I would take it.

"You know the line of clothing designed by the other Wayne Rogers? Loretta had cut out a clothing ad and gave it to me. It said, 'Wayne Rogers, get off my back.' I've got it up on my wall at home. It's terrific.

"I was concerned about her reaction to me because of Wayne, and here she was concerned I was going to be sensitive."

A year later Farrell met Rogers at a party. "He said, 'I want to tell you something. One time Elliott Gould came up to me and said are you doing me or are you doing Donald Sutherland?' Wayne said he was doing Gould. Gould said, 'I like me better.' He said, 'What I want to tell you is that I've seen what you do and I like you better.' Now, that's class!"

Gould was Trapper and Sutherland was Hawkeye in movie that inspired the series.

Farrell, previously starred in two other TV series, "The Interns and "The Man and the City," said he had no problems taking a secondary role.

"I think it's clearly Alan's show, but I've never objected to that. You see Wayne may have had a gripe going in that he thought it was to be evenly divided or that there was a possibility of its becoming his show. With that understanding, I can see how he was dissatisfied.

"I knew going in that it was Alan's show. That I was going to be secondary. I felt all along if I did the right kind of job with the right kind of character it would be secondary yet important."

What is a calorie?

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB -- Recently I read that most people do not really know what a calorie is. That started me to thinking and it is true. I know it has something to do with whether a food will make you fat or not but I really do not understand exactly what a calorie is. That sounds strange in a nation of calorie counters but how about telling us in terms we can understand what a calorie really is.

DEAR READER -- A calorie is simply a way of measuring heat energy. The kind of calories we use in discussing food and your body's use of calories is a kilocalorie. That is the amount of heat you would need to raise the temperature of one liter (a little more than a quart) of water one degree centigrade. To help you visualize that, 100 calories would raise the temperature of one liter of water from freezing level to boiling.

The heat energy absorbed by the cold water to reach the boiling point can be from electricity. This is a good example of converting electrical energy into heat energy. Energy can neither be created nor destroyed but it can be transformed into different forms of energy, including heat, electrical, mechanical or chemical energy.

Since a pound of body fat contains about 3500 calories it follows that a pound of body fat has locked in it enough energy to heat 35 liters of water from the freezing level to the boiling level.

A tablespoon of butter or margarine contains 100 calories, enough energy if it is released to heat a liter of water from the freezing (0 degrees C) to boiling (100 degrees C).

If you walk one mile and use 60 extra calories doing so, that would use the mechanical energy which could be transformed to enough heat energy to heat about two-thirds of a liter of water from freezing to boiling.

The energy stored in a food or in body fat is released by complex chemical actions. This energy is used to heat your body. The heat released is usually more than we want so the body has to constantly rid itself of the heat released from food. If it is unable to do so the body heat builds up and may even cause heat stroke.

Part of the released energy is used to build important chemicals, including enzymes and hormones. Growing children use the energy in building their bodies, which is why they can eat foods containing so much energy and still not get fat.

Some of the energy is converted to mechanical energy to enable you to do any physical activity.

If you consume 2,000 calories a day you are taking in enough calories to heat 20 liters of water from freezing to boiling. If you are a normal person and reasonably active you may use all of them to keep your body working properly, to keep your body warm and to perform physical activity.

If you take in more calories than you can use the body simply stores calories by forming body fat. When you are ready to use that energy the body fat is broken down to release the calories for use.

To give you more information I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-2, Understanding Your Energy System. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

And now... another plus from us

A new service that allows you to dial all Long Distance calls yourself.

Now you can dial all Long Distance calls from Snyder yourself. Of course, you're accustomed to dialing your own station-to-station calls the fast and convenient One-Plus way. But now, you also can dial your own collect, person-to-person, credit card and bill-to-third-number Long Distance calls with Zero-Plus dialing. Zero-Plus can be used at home or office or from coin telephones. Zero-Plus is fast, easy and convenient.

Zero-Plus Dialing . . . How it works:

Just dial "0" (zero), plus the Area Code if it's different from 915, plus the distant number. For example, suppose you want to call person-to-person to 621-8997 in St. Louis. You will find St. Louis in the Call Guide section of your directory with Area Code 314.
So when you hear the dial tone, dial:
"0" (zero) + 314 + 621-8997
When the operator asks, "How may I help you?", explain the type call you've dialed and give the necessary information. (Regular operator-handled rates apply for all Zero-Plus calls.)
To make a call within the 915 area, just dial "0" (zero) plus the distant number.
You don't need to dial the Area Code.
