Bush likely will replace CIA director, aide says

■ 'The Plum Book' lists odd jobs to be filled by new administration — 7A

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect George Bush, determined to "put his own stamp on things," is looking for a new face to replace William Webster as CIA director, a source on the Bush transition team said Friday.

Former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, still is the front-runner for secretary of defense while Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser in the Ford administration, could assume the same job in the Bush presidency, said the source, who demanded anonymity.

Speculation about high-ranking personnel in the new administration came as Bush and his wife, Barbara, spent the first full day of a four-day holiday in Gulf Stream, Fla., at the home of Houston millionaire William S. Farish III.

Bush said the transition effort was going "great," but reiterated previous statements that no personnel decisions would be finalized until he returns to the nation's capital Monday or Tuesday. Asked if he was compiling lists of potential appointees, he replied, "No, no."

While Bush vacationed, his transition aides worked Veterans Day — a federal holiday — preparing to open the transition office on Monday.

Robert Teeter, co-director of the transition team with Craig Fuller, chief of staff in the vice president's office, said the two men planned to spend the weekend mulling over procedures for the personnel selection process. They will confer early next week.

"We'll go to him (Bush) on Tuesday or Wednesday when he gets back and give him some recommendations," Teeter said in a telephone interview from his home in Michigan.

Among other things, transition aides must decide how to ensure Bush's appointees meet the government's financial disclosure requirements. C. Boyden Gray, the transition team's attorney, will play "a key role in terms of legal and ethical considerations," said Sheila Tate, team spokeswoman.

Also crucial in the transition is Chase Untermeyer, the personnel director. Untermeyer met Friday with Vice President-elect Dan Quayle.

A Bush insider said Fuller might be tapped for the chief of staff job at the White House. The contest is between Fuller and retiring New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, and "it could go either way," said the aide, speaking on condition of anoymity.

Teeter and Tate refused to comment on speculation about Bush's possible personnel choices. So far, Bush has named only one Cabinet member: former Treasury Secretary and campaign chairman James A. Baker III as secretary of state.

Teeter said the talk was "speculative," and he could not say when the initial appointments would be made. Bush "will be making announcements as decisions are made...We have not established a timeline yet," he said.

On his return to Washington, Bush has other items on his agenda besides the transition. He meets with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Tuesday and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on Wednesday. Bush has promised to work closely with the Western allies.

Bush, who served as CIA director in 1976, is expected to take a keen interest in filling that job. His desire to look at other people does not necessarily mean he is dissatisfied with Webster's performance, the transition source said. But "the vice president want to put his own stamp on things," he said.

Bush said as much at a news conference on Wednesday. "I will for the most part bring in a brand new team of people from across the country," he said.

Associates of Webster have said privately that the CIA director is eager to stay on in the post he took over in May 1987. Earlier in the Bush campaign, Webster was told he could keep his job, but since then all he has read in published reports are the names of possible successors, the sources said.

Capital could look a little like Texas

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — This city is bracing for yet another influx of Texans in the wake of the election which sent their adopted brother, George Bush, and his wife, Barbara, to the White House.

New restaurants are touting quesadillas and fajitas, and country-and-western station WMZQ has become No. 1 in local radio.

Not that all the Texans Lyndon Johnson brought with him ever left, mind you. Many are ensconsed here in big law firms, think tanks, government agencies, universities and congressional offices.

Former Democratic Party chief Robert Strauss' law firm has more lawyers in Washington than in Austin, Houston and Dallas, San Antonio and Fort Worth combined.

Liz Carpenter of Austin, who was Lady Bird Johnson's press secretary, has frequent-flyer status here. Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association; lawyer Harry McPherson; TV journalist Bill Moyers; interior designer Robert Waldron; Lynda Robb, Johnson's daughter and wife of Virginia Sen.-elect Charles Robb; and political consultant Horace Busby have all taken root in Washington.

While the president-elect's credentials as a Texan still are suspect in some quarters, it appears Bush is intent on strengthening his Texas ties.

That doesn't mean he's going to put the summer White House in Houston, not while he still owns that enormous spread at Kennebunkport on the cool Maine coast.

But it looks as if Bush could place three Texans in his cabinet. He already has named James A. Baker III of Houston to be his secretary of state. Former Sen. John Tower is the apparent favorite for secretary of defense. And pressure from the Hispanic community, if nothing else, will make it almost mandatory that Bush keep Lauro Cavazos, the former president of Texas Tech in Lubbock, as secretary of education.

Reagan signs tax bill providing $4.1 billion in benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed legislation providing $4.1 billion in tax benefits to farmers and other groups and a taxpayer "bill of rights" against overzealous agents of the Internal Revenue Service, the White House said Friday.

The "Tax Corrections Act," aimed initially at making refinements in the massive tax overhaul legislation of 1986, also contained a provision ordering the government to buy more than 540 acres of property bordering the Civil War battlefield at Manassas, Va. Developers planned to build a shopping mall and business complex on the tract.

The "taxpayers' bill of rights" was inserted by lawmakers who wanted to rein in what some said was an overly aggressive IRS.

The legislation, among other things, would require the agency to give 30 days' notice before seizing bank accounts and other property. The IRS also would be barred from promoting employees on the basis of how much they collect from taxpayers.

The tax bill, which Reagan signed on Thursday night without comment before a weekend visit to Camp David, Md., was the last major measure Congress passed before adjourning on Oct. 23.

The president must still act on several other bills, including bipartisan legislation to pour more money into the anti-drug effort and to authorize the death penalty for drug kingpins who murder law enforcement officers during the commission of narcotics-related crimes.

The tax bill initially was designed to clear up confusing language and to correct errors in the landmark tax overhaul. But after it was amended, the measure ended up extending some expiring tax benefits, adding some new ones for selected groups, and raising approximately $4.1 billion in taxes, including a 45-cent-a-pound tax on pipe tobacco, to raise the revenue.

The measure would have no effect on the federal deficit. Although it would cut taxes by $4.1 billion over three years, it would raise others by the same amount.

Other major provisions:

— Extend expiring tax benefits to help lower-income families buy their first home, reward businesses for increased spending for research and experimentation and boost incentives for investment in low-income rental housing.

— Renew an expired provision that allows workers to exclude as taxable income tuition payments made by their employers; most graduate study would not qualify.

— Extend an exclusion for the value of employer-financed legal-service benefits.

— Prohibit a business deduction for the basic monthly cost of a home telephone.

The major non-tax provision seizes land to block construction of a shopping mall adjacent to the site of the First and Second Battles of Manassas, about 35 miles west of Washington, D.C. The administration initially had indicated that it opposed the provision, estimated to cost more than $50 million, but it made no direct veto threat.

George Berklacy, a spokesman for the National Park Service, said in a telephone interview that, while officials disagreed with the strategy of protecting the battlefield exclusively through a so-called "legislative taking," Interior Secretary Donald Hodel concluded there should be no "concerted effort by the Interior Department to urge a presidential veto."

Fossil believed to be oldest known insect

CHICAGO (AP) — To the uninitiated, it looks like two small specks. But to paleozoologist Conrad Labandeira and colleagues, the fossil of a pop-eyed bug represents the oldest insect known, dating back some 300 million years.

Their findings, reported in Friday's issue of the journal Science, describe the remarkably well-preserved fragments of a wingless bug found in a chunk of mud on the north shore of Quebec's Gaspe Bay. A member of the most primitive order of insects, it was similar to modern-day silverfish.

Even more significant than the fossil's age, scientists say, is that similarity to modern bugs, suggesting that insects originated many millions of years before the specimen lived.

President Reagan looks on as his wife, Nancy, reaches out to touch the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington Friday. They visited the memorial as part of Veterans Day commemorations and left a written personal message at the base of the monument

Reagans leave note at Vietnam Memorial

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, walked hand-in-hand past the names of the Vietnam War dead on Veterans Day and left a hand-written note addressed to "our young friends" at the base of the distinctive black granite memorial.

On his last Veterans Day as president, Reagan declared that service in Vietnam is now "universally recognized as a badge of pride."

A crowd of several thousand people standing on the wet grass and autumn leaves around the memorial cheered and applauded when Reagan said in a speech, "Young Americans must never again be sent to fight and die unless we are prepared to let them win."

He said that despite honest argument over the Vietnam War, the flow of boat people from Vietnam, mass killings in Cambodia and other postwar events indicate the cause was just, "however imperfectly pursued."

■ Gov. Bill Clements presents mobile home to unemployed Texas veteran in Austin ceremony, related story — 8A, 1D

"You fought for your country and for its safety and for the freedom of others with strength and courage," said the brief note the Reagans laid alongside flowers, letters, flags, medals and other items left by memorial visitors. All non-perishable items are collected and kept by the National Park Service.

Earlier, Reagan placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington National Cemetery, across the Potomac River in Virginia.

Making elephant harnesses keeps ex-performer within circus circle

NORTH HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Clarence Canary's career as a harness maker and rodeo performer started the day he ran away from his Indiana home at age 12 and joined the circus.

Now, in this tiny Adirondack Mountain community he says is the closest thing he's had to a home, Canary, 72, still announces rodeos, and he's still making harnesses — for elephants, zebras, giraffes, camels and, of course, horses.

"My favorites are the elephant harnesses," says Canary, a wiry, strong man in classic cowboy attire. "I've made harnesses for practically every elephant act that's on the road today."

Canary and Bud, a big 11-year-old black dog of uncertain heritage, live in a blue shingled mobile home set back from North Hudson's main road. In front of their home is the old farm granary that Canary converted into a leatherworking shop, the Canary Saddlery.

Sitting in the shop, its rich leather smell a warm contrast to the fall mountain air, Canary says he wasn't trying to live every kid's dream when he left home and joined the circus.

"It wasn't so much a big daydream of being a circus performer," he says. "It was a matter of survival."

The young Canary started out driving a six-horse team, and in winter he worked in the circus harness shop. He eventually graduated to doing just about every circus job there was — except the aerial acts. His specialty was riding high-jumping and dancing horses and performing in the Wild West shows.

His circus work led to rodeo work, where he rode broncos and bulls. Over the years, he rode the circus and rodeo circuit across the country and around the globe.

It was in 1956 that his travels brought him to Frontier Town, a western theme park here in North Hudson, a sparsely populated, rugged town that has seen its fortunes rise and fall with the logging and mining industries.

Every summer, he announced Frontier Town's daily rodeos, took the role of "Hanging Judge Bean" in the train holdup, and operated a leather shop, where he made hand-tooled souvenirs and all of Frontier Town's saddles and harnesses, and he took care of his circus customers.

Frontier Town closed two years ago, but there are plans to reopen under new ownership next spring, and Canary says he will return in his old jobs.

"When I came to Frontier Town I fell in love with this country," he says. "I have a feeling for this country. You might say that the Adirondacks is as near home as I ever felt."

Canary is known thoughout circus circles, especially for his elephant harnesses.

"To the best of my knowledge, I'm the only one still doing this," he says, except for those on staff at Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Canary is in the process of passing his craft on to his neighbor, a young state trooper who is interested in carrying on the circus harness trade.

"I don't want to detract from some of the finest harness makers in the world who are down in Pennsylvania, among the Amish," he says. "But you ask them to make an elephant harness — they wouldn't know where to start."

The Amish harnesses are unadorned, which hardly describes a Canary harness.

He has 60 shades of leather dye and several forms of glistening metals for extra-glitzy animal fashions.

Canary will travel any distance to measure the elephants — an adult elephant's neck can reach 80 inches — and often relies on ladders to help him navigate the huge animals.

He returns to North Hudson to craft the harnesses, slicing the Indiana-tanned leather, carving patterns with a thin stylus and sharp blade then stitching the leather and buckles together with powerful sewing machines. Often, the headpiece is made of several layers of contrasting leather, which is cut out for a multicolored effect.

The final product is as flamboyant as any other circus performer's costume, sparkling with glistening metals, the leather cut and dyed into designs that appear to move like flames across the animals' heads.

Diamond-studded field may be opened for mining

By LISA BELKIN
New York Times News Service

MURFREESBORO, Ark. — This is a town caught between a rock and a hard place.

The rocks are honest-to-goodness diamonds. Tourists can pay $3 for the right to dig all day in a muddy 40-acre field, taking home any raw diamonds they may find.

What is hard is deciding whether the muddy field — apparently the only operating source of diamonds in the United States — should be opened to commercial miners.

"Are strip mining and a state park compatible?" asked Jim Cannon, superintendent of Crater of Diamonds State Park, which surrounds the field. "Will it ruin the town, or will it save us? I wish I knew."

The field brought 70,000 tourists to town last year, and they spent about $4 million eating and camping and buying souvenirs. They took home 989 diamonds, weighing on average of just less than a quarter of a carat.

But that is far too few tourists, most people in town agree. There were 120,000 tourists 10 years ago.

Tourism is the largest industry in Murfreesboro (population 1,883) since the Weyerhaeuser Co. timber mill closed in 1982. And the poultry plant, Diamond Country Foods, is threatening to close.

So the debate over commercial mining goes something like this:

Those who favor it say the town needs the tax dollars and the jobs that the operation would bring.

Those opposed say mining is noisy and dirty and would chase the tourists away.

Those in favor say the tourists could watch the miners at work.

But those opposed warn that the diamonds will run out one day, the miners will move on and the town will be left with no mine, no tourists and a 600-foot-deep pit that will take decades to fill with water and become a lake.

The field was operated as a mine from the 1920s to the 1940s. But the owner lost his fortune on the project. The "finders keepers" rule was developed by owners in the 1950s and 60s. The Arkansas Department of Parks and Tourism now owns the land.

Over the years, some hefty diamonds have been discovered. The largest, found when the mine first opened, weighed more than 40 carats. Two weeks ago, a digger found a 6-carat diamond.

But no one knows how rich a diamond deposit is under the field, which is the result of a volcano eruption 95 million years ago.

The value of the mine could be anywhere from $2 million to $2 billion, said John Morgan, a diamond-mining consultant hired by the state, and it could take 5 to 100 years to remove the diamonds.

More precise figures, he said, depend on the shape of the diamond deposit. Is the diamond field like the shallow basin of a champagne glass extending into a narrow, diamond-bearing stem, or is it the top of a deposit th. extends straight down for hundreds of miles?

"The only way to tell is to test," Morgan said. "And the only way to test is to dig."

There has been talk of doing exactly that since the state first bought the park in 1972, but few took it seriously until business in town turned sour.

Last year the Arkansas Legislature passed a bill that would allow the state to lease the Crater of Diamonds property to a commercial mining operation. A study group was established to evaluate the proposal, and debate has raged loudly ever since.

"We need the jobs," said Tammy White who has been looking for one for a year and a half. "I read somewhere that there would be 400 new jobs with the mine."

"Is Arkansas so hard up for a few temporary jobs and a bit of additional short-term revenue that we would sacrifice the one thing that Arkansas has unique in the world?" Kay Killgore asked at one of the nearly dozen task force public hearings in the past 10 months.

"We can't just sit and hope that tourism will pick up," said Clifton Crews, owner of the Ka-Do-Ha Indian Village, Murfreesboro's other major tourist attraction. Ticket sales there are dropping by $200 each month, he said, in a trend that could be reversed if the mining contractor was required to build elevated walkways around the mine and offer public tours.

Current state proposals include such a provision and suggest that several feet of soil from the current pit be moved elsewhere so that the tourists could continue to sift for diamonds.

Now the question is out of the residents' hands. The study group has recommended to the Parks Department preliminary testing on the park to determine the shape and value of the diamond deposits. The department's decision is expected at the end of the month.

But the fact that the choice is no longer theirs to make has not stopped the debate among the residents of Murfreesboro.

"Diamonds are just diamonds," said Howard Kidd, who would like a mining company to come into town. Kidd owns the Mauney House Petting Farm across the street from the park entrance and says the business would bring more tourists. "What we're talking about is more important than diamonds."

It will be mostly sunny with highs expected in the mid 70s and winds out of the north-northwest at 5 to 15 mph.

Tonight and Sunday will be fair and sunny with an overnight low in the low 40s and a daytime high in the mid 70s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The record high for Friday was 83 degrees in 1964. The lowest temperature on record occurred in 1932 when the thermometer dropped to 19.

STATE

A cool front on Friday brought rainfall across wide sections of West Texas and forecasters predicted more precipitation, some heavy, through this weekend.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms covered the South Plains, Permian Basin and eastern Trans-Pecos, while widely scattered showers were over North Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Skies were partly to mostly cloudy over the state. A low-pressure trough over eastern New Mexi o was approaching Texas as moisture continued increasing over the Lone Star State.

The weather service posted a severe thunderstorm watch until late Friday night for parts of West Texas, with a chance of showers and thunderstorms elsewhere in the state. Lows were expected from near 40 degrees in the Texas Panhandle and Big Bend mountains to the upper 70s along the lower coast.

NATION

Snow fell Friday in the Rocky Mountains, dumping 10 inches on Summitville in southern Colorado and whitening the ski slopes at Alta, Utah, with 6 inches.

Most of the nation had dry, seasonably cool weather, but showers and thunderstorms struck northern Texas and southern Oklahoma, and there was rain at the lower elevations of Colorado and northwestern New Mexico.

A snow advisory was in effect for the mountains of Colorado and south-central mountains of Wyoming, where 4 to 6 more inches of snow was expected at elevations above 8,000 feet.

INSECT

"What we have is two fragments. We have a head capsule 0.7 millimeters wide and we have a thorax 1 millimeter long," Labandeira, a 36-year-old graduate student at the University of Chicago, said Friday.

"Even though they're separate, we're very convinced that they belong to the same individual," he said.

Insects are a class of animals characterized, as adults, by a body divided into head, thorax and abdomen, three pairs of legs on the thorax, and usually two pairs of membranous wings.

According to scientific convention, class is the third division of living beings, following kingdom — plant or animal — and phylum. Each class is further broken down into orders, orders into families, etc. to the level of species. The earliest representative of mammals, the class to which humans belong, dates back about 200 million years.

The prehistoric bug described in Science was found by Francis Hueber, a noted Smithsonian Institution paleobotanist who retrieved the specimen about five years ago while examining a mud sample he had found on the Gaspe Peninsula.

Its importance was only recently discovered when he and other scientists compared notes.

Hueber's interest was in prehistoric plant fragments in the dirt, but what looked like ancient insect parts caught his eye.

"He had an idea that there was something very important" about the fragments, Labandeira said.

Through sophisticated dating techniques, Hueber "determined that it was an early arthropod and probably an insect," said Bret Beall, a scientist at Chicago's Field Museum who has been working with the specimen.

Paleozoologist Conrad Labandeira explains his drawing of a silverfish-like insect, which resembles what is possibly the world's oldest insect, dating back 390 million years.

The arthropod phylum — invertebrate animals with jointed legs and segmented bodies — includes spiders and crustaceans like shrimp and crabs, for example, as well as insects.

"He knew that if this was an insect fossil it would be very significant," Beall said.

So Hueber handed the specimen over to Beall, who, with Labandeira's help, determined that it was in fact an insect and what they believe is the oldest one known in the world.

It lived 390 million to 362 million years ago and predates what was previously believed to be the oldest insect — an eye fragment found in upstate New York — by about 15 million years, they said.

Its most imposing features were its two disproportionately large eyes on each side of its head. It also had two antennae and two armlike appendages that appear to have been equipped with sensors to detect odors and vibrations.

"The significance is that they have a head, so it's really a clincher that there were insects at that time," said William Shear, a biology professor at Hampden-Sydney College in Virginia, where the New York specimen is being studied.

BUSH

Watch what happens to these Texas lawyers who are friends of Bush: former Rep. Thomas G. Loeffler, Wales H. Madden Jr., O. Donaldson (Don) Chapoton and his twin brother, John E. (Buck) Chapoton, and James Cicconi.

You can bet a significant percentage of the deputies, assistants and aides to top officials will be Texans.

Bush tapped Bobby Holt, a Midland oil man, and Penne Korth, formerly of Waco, now of Washington, to organize the inauguration festivities. In telephone interviews they said that they will meet here Monday to start planning the galas. It will be interesting to see if the floor-length minks and sables will beat the record number at Ronald Reagan's first inaugural in 1981.

After the austere years of Jimmy Carter's administration, during which he required most officials to ride in mid-size cars or take cabs, the Reagan folks imported all the spare limousines from Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Richmond and Baltimore for their inaugural.

This year the hottest tickets in town are those to the quadrennial Black Tie and Boots Ball to be hosted by the Texas State Society of Washington on Jan. 21, the day after the inauguration.

No kidding. The men really wear tuxedos with cowboy boots while the women wear the usual glittery evening dresses and pointy-toed shoes. Holt said that four years ago, he wore bluejeans with his tux jacket

The society, which had 1,800 members earlier this year, now is exceeding 2,300. To be a member, you have be a Texan, former Texan, be married to a Texan or work for a Texas-based business or Texas congressional staff.

This will be the third Texas ball at which George Bush is the star attraction. Four years ago, the ball drew about 2,000 revelers; this year the society has booked the Washington Hilton's International Ballroom, which can accommodate 4,500 people.

The door prize will be a red pickup truck, with a gun rack in the back window, donated by Texas Ford dealers.

In 1985, Bush was presented with a steer that was ultimately auctioned off with the proceeds doing to leukemia research, in the memory of the Bushes' daughter, Robin, who died from the disease.

"No more steers," said a Hilton official. Four years ago, maintenance men spent days taking hinges off doors, preparing the stage, and cleaning up after the steer, which made a personal appearance with Bush in the International Ballroom.

State Society president Charles W. Stenholm, Democratic congressman from Stamford, and his administrative assistant, Lois Auer, from Runge, are returning dozens of phone calls from erstwhile Texans who want to make sure their dues are paid.

While low- and middle-income Washington area folks are hungry for housing, at prices twice those being advertised in Houston and Dallas, a lot of mansions are going begging, according to local real estate people.

Some are anticipating the arrival of Bush appointees from Texas with a great deal of glee: They figure not everyone went bust in the oil price skid of 1986.

A few bargains are available. One big house, on a five-acre, park-like spread in the fashionable northwest part of the city, recently sold for $4 million, marked down from $4.5 million.

Ordinary Texas homebuyers should hurry because prices went up in the last year more than 15 percent. A few months ago the median home price here was $131,800, contrasted to $85,700 in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and $61,850 in Houston.

REAGANS

President-elect George Bush, in a statement issued from Florida, where he is vacationing, noted that it was the first Veterans Day since Reagan signed into law the bill creating the Cabinet-level Department of Veterans Affairs.

"This is a distinction that America's veterans have earned and richly deserve," Bush said. "It guarantees that those who have worn the uniform of our armed forces will always have a strong voice in our government."

The Vietnam memorial, which includes the names of 58,156 American war dead, was fenced off for the ceremonies. The Reagans waved and smiled to a large crowd behind the fences as they walked briskly along half the wall and then back. The Air Force Band played "America the Beautiful" and "The Marine Corps Hymn."

People fell silent after the Reagans left, with a bagpipe player leading a line of wreath layers. A lone bugler played "Taps."

Many in the crowd wore military jackets hung with medals and insignias of veterans groups. One woman was draped in a black banner honoring POWs.

Bonnie McKeown of Capon Springs, W.Va., passed out literature on Tom Bennett, who she said was a conscientious objector who died in the war as a medic and won the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Reagan, in his speech at the site, expressed gratitude to the "gentle heroes" of Vietnam and said the government was doing everything possible to learn whether American soldiers are still captive in Southeast Asia.

He said unless the government of Vietnam gives assurances that there aren't any who are alive, "we will assume some are and will do everything we can to find them."

Several men wearing military jackets heckled Reagan during his speech. What they said was inaudible to most bystanders, and the president took no note of the heckling.

Another man in the crowd, Dan Reed of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, who described himself as a Vietnam veteran, said veterans appreciated the ceremony, but didn't think the government was doing enough to combat the effects their exposure to harmful chemicals or to find prisoners of war.

CIA

One possible candidate for CIA director is James Lilley, the ambassador to South Korea, whom Bush has known since Lilley was the chief of the CIA station in Peking — now Beijing — China, while Bush was U.S. envoy there in the 1970s.

As for Tower, a source said, he is in the running for defense secretary, although the mention of Paul H. O'Neill, chairman and chief executive of Alcoa, is "no accident." Former Rep. Jack Edwards of Alabama has also been mentioned for the job.

Tower is expected to get a good job because he worked so hard during the campaign. "He really worked, and he has the smarts and credentials...He will be in line for something," the source said. Tower is a former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a strong supporter of the Reagan administration's defense buildup.

The source said Scowcroft, a member of the commission chaired by Tower that investigated the Iran-Contra affair, "is the kind of person, with the kind of outlook, that Bush is looking for."

Another source said Bush has not ruled out keeping Attorney General Dick Thornburgh on in the job he assumed in August after Edwin Meese III resigned. And there has been speculation that Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, a Bush confidant, will remain in the job.

Meanwhile Friday, Commerce Secretary C. William Verity said he will not seek reappointment in the Bush administration.

"He wants younger people and I applaud him for that," said Verity, who is 71. "I was retired when I took this job, and I guess I'll be retired again." Verity was named commerce secretary in August 1987 after Malcolm Baldrige was killed in a rodeo accident.

TAX

The tax legislation also includes tax relief for farmers, freelance writers, owners of mutual funds, recipients of employer-financed tuition and a variety of other interests. It also includes selected tax increases to pay for those benefits.

Also accepted by negotiators was a Senate provision allowing families to avoid tax on interest earned on U.S. Savings Bonds that are redeemed to finance a college or vocational education.

Most of the pressure for passage of the bill came from farmers. They will benefit in two ways: winning exemption from paying the federal tax on diesel fuel and getting authority to deduct some expenses of producing livestock even before the animals begin generating income.

Pressure also came from accountants and other tax professionals, who are seeking corrections for hundreds of errors and ambiguities in the tax-overhaul.

Presidential 'stock market' predicts election's winner

NEW YORK (AP) — A presidential "stock market" in which professors and students gambled cash to buy and sell shares of the candidates accurately reflected public opinion and correctly predicted the election's outcome, its creators say.

The stock traders' profits and losses had not been tallied by Friday, but one trader claimed to have earned a 30 percent profit and another said he had lost $40 of $150 wagered, said Forrest Nelson, one of four University of Iowa researchers who set up the market.

Most of the 168 traders' profits and losses were probably less than a few dollars, Nelson said.

Nelson and economists Robert Forsythe and George Neumann and political scientist Jack Wright set up the market to see whether it might do a better job of registering public opinion than polls do.

"In theory it's more accurate (than polls) because of the financial incentive people have to put their money where their mouth is," said Forsythe.

Prices of the candidates' shares could be converted easily into numbers showing what percentage of the public favored each candidate, Forsythe said.

Since shortly after the second debate on Oct. 13, the stock market showed Republican George Bush with between 51.2 percent and 53.6 percent of the vote, and with a margin of between 5.2 percent and 8 percent over Democrat Michael Dukakis. Bush won with 54 percent of the vote and an 8 percent margin in Tuesday's presidential election.

"Starting Oct. 17 the market has been predicting about this outcome all along," said Forsythe. "If you look at the polls over that period, they've been a heck of a lot more volatile."

Gallup polls, for example, gave Bush a 6 percent advantage early in October, a 10 percent advantage near the end of October and a 9 percent advantage just before the election, said Coleen McMurray of the Gallup Organization in Princeton, N.J.

The market differs from polls in that it does not reflect the traders' preferences, but rather their impressions of how well each candidate is doing.

Each stock trader is, in effect, a private pollster, surveying friends and following news reports.

The market prices respond to the information traders pick up. Economic theory predicts that because the traders aren't being asked their preferences, they don't have to be a representative sample of the population to accurately reflect public opinion.

The researchers are far from proving that the market is an effective means of surveying public opinion, but they were encouraged when the market did not show the wild swings in public opinion that were registered in polls.

Jack Ludwig, chief methodologist of the Gallup Organization in Princeton, N.J., said an educated group like the Iowa stock traders "would be less likely to show the kind of swings in popularity that the candidates do on a general population basis."

Ludwig also said he didn't believe that the small sample of white, educated Midwesterners could be used to estimate public opinion nationwide.

A potential advantage of the market over opinion polls is that it provides a continuous record of public opinion, Forsythe said.

John Eighmey, a senior vice president and market survey expert at the Young and Rubicam advertising agency in New York said he had seen the market demonstrated and found it "really quite intriguing and impressive."

"It's one thing to ask a person, 'What do you think about this subject?' It's quite another when they have a personal stake in the answer," he said.

Forsythe said the market initially confounded the university's lawyers. "Our lawyers said, 'You either fall under state gambling laws or state securities laws, and we're not sure which.'"

The lawyers finally decided that gambling laws applied and the university would be exempt if participation was limited to university faculty, students and staff.

Small percentage of animals die in forest fires

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Forest fires this summer and fall in Yellowstone National Park killed 254 large animals, a small fraction of the population, officials said.

Of the 254 large animals determined to have died, 248 were elk, four were deer, two moose and five bison, Superintendent Bob Barbee said Thursday.

There is no evidence black or grizzly bears in the park were killed by fire, although a black bear that suffered burns to its paws was killed by a Montana State Highway patrolman near Cooke City, Mont., to the east of the park, Barbee said.

"The number of ungulate (moose, bison, deer) deaths caused by the fires is a very small percentage of total wildlife populations within the park," Barbee said in a statement. "Yellowstone's elk population is currently estimated between 30,000 and 35,000 and bison and deer at 2,700 and 2,000, respectively."

Forest fires first were spotted in Yellowstone in late June. Several fires still are smoldering and one, on the northeastern side of the park, has yet to be declared under control.

The mortality survey showed that 213 of the animal carcasses were found within the perimeter of the North Fork Fire.

Soviet dancer reunited with family

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Soviet dancer whose wife and daughter were refused permission to join him in the West for nearly 12 years was reunited with them in a joyous meeting at Jackson's Municipal Airport.

Fridrikh Begelmakher, 37, hugged his 38-year-old wife, Irina, and the daughter he had last known as an infant and spoke softly to them in Russian at their reunion Thursday. Begelmakher handed his wife red roses and a love poem and gave their daughter, Olga, 13, some daisies.

"What is going to be special is that we will be together. That is what is special," said Begelmakher, a Jew who emigrated from the Soviet Union during the exodus of the late 1970s.

The family had seen each other only once since Begelmakher left the Soviet Union with his parents on Feb. 21, 1977. He had expected his wife and daughter to quickly follow, but they were repeatedly denied permission to leave until this summer.

"The miracle we are witnessing today is something we worked hard for for a long time. My wife kept applying to leave but was given unreasonable excuses," said Begelmakher, who is chairman of dance for Jackson Public Schools' Academic and Performance Arts Complex.

He greeted his wife wearing the black shirt he wore the last time he danced a ballet with her in the Soviet Union. The shirt is the last piece of clothing remaining that he took from his homeland.

Begelmakher said he had penned the poem early Thursday morning. It read in part: "I want to learn to talk — to tell how much I love you. But most of all I want to learn to love — to love you."

Begelmakher had to divorce his wife, who is not Jewish, in order to leave the Soviet Union, and the couple plans to remarry here, he said.

On July 24, the mother and daughter left the Soviet Union for Vienna, where they waited for permission to enter the United States. Begelmakher met them there Aug. 8. On Tuesday, they arrived in New York, where they stayed with Begelmakher's parents.

Since he came to the United States, Begelmakher has taught ballet in many places, including Pennsylvania, Utah, Massachusetts, Vermont, Idaho, Nebraska and New York. In September, he began teaching ballet to students in the Jackson Public School system and leading a four-member dance faculty.

Astronauts return to home state

CLINTON, Iowa (AP) — Two astronauts who flew aboard the space shuttle Discovery returned to their home state Friday to the cheers of hundreds of flag-waving parents and children.

A high school band struck up the national anthem while George "Pinky" Nelson and David Hilmers stood at attention on a flatbed truck bearing a sign, "Welcome Heroes. The Pride of Clinton County."

"Thank you for playing the national anthem," Hilmers said. "Ever since the mission, hearing the national anthem gives me a particular sense of emotion."

Hilmers said he felt anxious on the launch pad moments before the Sept. 29 liftoff, but thoughts of home calmed him.

"I knew back here in Clinton County that many prayers were going up with us," he said. "It made the launch much, much easier."

Nelson, 38, born in Charles City, and Hilmers, who was born in Clinton but reared in DeWitt, were greeted by an enthusiastic crowd as their airplane landed at the tiny airport here.

"Those two men are real heroes who were willing to go up in space after that tragic Challenger accident," said Paul Eastland, 73, of Clinton. "We're all proud of them."

Antique collector finds best wood in tools

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — For many people, antiques mean furniture. But to Sam Palmer, antiques mean the tools that made the furniture.

"Old-time furniture makers used good wood in what they produced," says Palmer, president of the Mid-Atlantic Tool Collectors Association. "But the very best wood they could find went into their tools, because the tools had to last a long time."

The tools around his living room back him up — an early hand drill made of ebony wood and brass; a small plane made of lignum vitae, a wood so dense it won't float; the rosewood handle on a small Stanley plane.

For Palmer, old tools are a passion he developed in Massachusetts after he was forced by illness to retire in 1970.

"I am absolutely the last person in the world you would expect to be interested in tools," says Palmer. "I graduated from Virginia with a degree in business administration and spent my whole career in electronics.

"When I had to retire, I didn't know which end of a hammer to use to hit the nails. I started going to flea markets around the Boston area and found the old tools to be just fascinating.

"For a while, I was the only one around the Cape Cod area who was buying them at auctions, and you could buy them for next to nothing. Then other people started getting interested in them, and the prices started going up."

Soon after Palmer moved to Raleigh, he found others who shared his passion. He and three other collectors started the association four years ago. It now has about 300 members in 21 states.

"It is the most diverse group you could imagine, everything from ditch diggers to neurosurgeons," Palmer says. "We have people whose primary interest is in using tools, who love to see them work. And we have the true collector, whose primary interest is in researching and restoring old tools and then putting them in a showcase."

The association, he says, is a way to help educate people about tools.

"Most people have no concept of how much tools are worth," Palmer says. "That's the thing about it, you know there are old tool boxes laying around in basements that people don't think are worth anything."

For example, he says a Stanley No. 1 plane in good condition is worth $1,000 to $1,400. But, he adds, it has no markings, so you have to know what you're looking for.

"There's no one left that even knows why they made that plane," says Palmer. "It's too small for a man's hand, too small to use. Some think it may have been used to show children about tools, or maybe as a salesman's model."

Palmer says most people narrow their focus soon after they start collecting.

"When you first get the bug, you collect every old tool in sight," he says. "But after a while, you find out there are too many tools out there and you aren't going to be able to collect them all. So you start specializing in one way or another."

Palmer says the association wants to research distinctly Southern tools.

"All the studies of early tools I've been able to find are on tools from Baltimore north," Palmer says. "There are none that I know of that have been done in the South.

"Take the turpentine industry in North Carolina, for example. There are a lot of tools associated with that industry, unique tools, and the number of people who know how they were used and what they were used for is dwindling."

Class of '39 to celebrate squeezing past hard times

MALDEN, Mass. (AP) — Some people call the Class of 1939 the Lost Generation; a generation where childhood was lost between wars, and lost in the Depression.

The girls and fellas who graduated from Malden High in that year are now trying to find each other for a 50th reunion, a celebration of endurance for those who made it through an unusually tough time in America.

As Ben Averbook, reunion co-chairman and one of the nearly 500 graduates, put it: "The clock runs...The more you are away from people, the more you want to be with them. There is a common bond...The class is diminishing and you want to grasp the straws. We have a common bond. We understand life as it is."

Malden is a city of 56,000 people seven miles north of Boston. Settled in 1640, it's a place of striking ordinariness that doesn't show its age. Houses have porches, and people still sit on them. Shade trees are big and old.

The Class of '39 wore saddle shoes and played post office. They left their doors unlocked and remember the advent of refrigerators and radios and how anyone lucky enough to own a telephone let the neighbors use it too.

Vivian Caras, nee Goldman, still has her yearbook in which an editor with a sense of history noted some occurrences during their high school days:

Life magazine made its debut. Franklin Roosevelt was re-elected president. A Boston doctor bought a ticket for the first scheduled round-the-world airplane flight; it cost $2,358.68. "Gone with the Wind" won the Pulitzer Prize.

Benito Mussolini showed off his military might when Adolph Hitler came to visit, and the Civil War in Spain began and ended. In April 1939, Roosevelt gave a speech suggesting 10 years of world peace.

Sometimes it was enough just to get through those times.

Classmates are being alerted about the reunion through local radio and newspaper ads. Reunion co-chairman William Forman also puts his faith in the grapevine. When he sees anyone he knows from the old days, he gives them his telephone number.

The 50th reunion is important, says Forman, who retired after 42 years in a supermarket.

"It is a milestone in your life," he says. "...We want to see each other ...Let's see if we made a better world for our kids."

Forman remembers the day he was drafted into the Army. "I was only 20 years old. June 12, 1942, and boy do I remember that day. They took us over (to Boston for a physical).

"It felt kind of funny, but I knew I had to go. We fought the war in North Africa 'til it ended in May. One of my memories of that was we had a parade. There was Ike Eisenhower, wearing riding britches. They got us up at 5 o'clock in the morning in Tunis to go parading for them."

Couple finds second tour with Peace Corps easier than first

CHICOPEE, Mass. (AP) — The second time around in the Peace Corps is easier, say Catherine and William Derrenger, who met and married during a stint in Sierra Leone in the 1960s and have just returned from two years in the Fiji Islands.

"We had always planned on doing it again, and when our children went off to university, we just decided to do it," said Mrs. Derrenger, 47. The couple has a son who graduated from the University of Chicago and a daughter who is a senior at Western New England College in Springfield.

No figures were available on Peace Corps volunteer re-enlistments, but corps spokesman James Flanigan said from Washington that it's happening more and more. Many of those who volunteer a second time first joined right out of college and then decided to return after retiring from their careers.

"It's a trend that's just begining to manifest itself as the Peace Corps enters its third decade, but we have a number of people in both categories," he said.

"The first time we were a lot younger," Derrenger said. "This time we were no less enthusiastic, but we were a lot better equipped to really provide useful skills to the people."

It was more difficult the second time for the Derrengers to break away from their everyday lives. He owned an eight-store shopping center in Billings, Mont., and she ran a pre-school there. At the time of their first Peace Corps tour they were newly graduated from college. But for the second go-round neither found it hard to cast off their possessions.

"It was like taking the ultimate shower. You felt so clean afterwards," Derrenger said. "I had been walking around with two pockets full of keys and when we were through getting rid of the stores, the house, the vehicles, and everything, we had two keys left to the footlockers that held everything we owned."

Said Mrs. Derrenger: "It's kind of fun to be starting over again, just like our kids.

"When we decided to go, we got rid of everything down to the things that we were going to pass on to the children after we died. It took us two years to do it, but it's a marvelous, wonderful feeling to sell everything."

In 1968, Mrs. Derrenger, a Chicopee native, headed to Sierra Leone to teach in a girl's school in Segwema. Her future husband, who grew up in South Dakota and graduated from Baylor University in Texas, arrived in West Africa a few months later to work on a program to build roads and a water supply.

"It wasn't love at first sight," he said, recalling how she, with more experience, got the front seat in the truck carrying them from the airfield, leaving him "to breath dust and grumble for 200 miles."

"It was easier this time, because we were a team and had some life experience behind us," said Mrs. Derrenger. "The first time I taught school. The second time I trained teachers."

Her work in Fiji included developing a program to train 150 preschool teachers and establish 90 schools. His involved adapting a program teaching management skills to chiefs and other tribal leaders.

"It was something I thought about during the 25 years we were back in the states," he said.

'The Plum Book' lists odd jobs to be filled by new administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking to earn more than $60,000 next year? If so, here are some possibilities:

— Special negotiator in the State Department's Bureau of Economic and Business Affairs.

— Associate commissioner in the disability office at the Department of Health and Human Services.

— Director of the intergovernmental affairs office at the Education Department.

These positions and thousands more are contained in an oversized, 300-page manual that Washington insiders call "The Plum Book," a compilation of political jobs published with the change of administration.

The book, formally entitled "Policy and Supporting Positions," sells for $14 a copy and more than 500 had sold Thursday, the day after the manual was put on sale at bookstores run by the Government Printing Office, GPO spokeswoman Carlyn Crout said.

The stores were closed Friday, a federal holiday.

William G. Norton of the Office of Personnel Management said there are differences between this year's book and the edition that came out four years ago.

For one thing, fewer jobs are listed.

OPM sought to make the book "a document that is more realistic and didn't contain a lot of extraneous positions," Norton said. As a result, 8,000 jobs outside the competitive civil service are listed, compared to 10,000 four years ago.

The book came out the day after Vice President George Bush was elected to the presidency, whereas four years ago job-seekers waited until February for the book.

Although the book has about 8,000 jobs, Norton said the Bush people will only have about 3,000 to 4,000 full-time slots open because of laws governing the civil service. Also up for grabs on are about 1,400 positions on presidential boards and commissions that are generally compensated at a daily rate, he said.

Civil service laws prohibit politicians from filling all the top jobs with non-career people.

For instance, no more than 10 percent of the senior executive service jobs — those paying between $88,700 and $80,700 in 1989 — can be filled by non-career people. So, the book lists all the jobs available, but only a set number may be taken by people outside the civil service, Norton said.

Additionally, the book lists all senior Foreign Service jobs. Yet non-career people are only allowed to occupy 5 percent of those positions.

Bush's transition office opens for business on Monday, but plenty of people have already submitted resumes.

Unemployed Vietnam veteran receives home from HOBO

AP Laserphoto

Gov. Bill Clements presents mobile home keys to decorated Vietnam veteran Jesse Rodriguez. The group Helping Our Brother Out made the home available as part of their effort to ease the plight of Austin's unemployed and homeless. The presentation was part of Veteran's Day ceremonies.

STATE

Associated Press

Decorated Vietnam veteran Jesse Rodriguez said receiving the keys to a mobile home during Veteran's Day ceremonies Friday means more to him than having a place his family can call their own.

The ex-artilleryman said it represents another step in putting behind him the horrors he saw in Vietnam 19 years ago. Gov. Bill Clements gave the mobile home keys to Rodriguez in a presentation on the Capitol steps.

In San Antonio, meanwhile, where thousands of soldiers and airmen live and work at five military installations, about 600 people gathered at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery for the color guard and wreath-laying presentation and memorial service to the war dead.

Ret. Air Force Brig. Gen. Wilma L. Vaught said many veterans went to boot camp and to war, fearing the worst, but came back to tell their families that "it wasn't so bad."

Today, Veterans Administration officials are scheduled to honor four Medal of Honor recipients at San Antonio National Cemetery.

Rodriguez, accepting his mobile home keys in Austin, said: "I still have nightmares from it (the Vietnam experience)." Rodriguez had been told he would get a mobile home from the group Helping Our Brother Out. HOBO is working to ease the plight of Austin's unemployed and homeless.

"For a lot of years, I tried to hide myself from the problem by drinking, using drugs and isolating myself from the real world," he said.

"Now I'm starting to confront those problems, and I realize there are a lot of other veterans who also need help. I don't think the nightmares will ever end, and I won't ever forget, but at least I can face them, and I am very proud of that," Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez credits his wife, Maria Elena, with encouraging him to get professional help for the post-traumatic stress disorder he had after Vietnam.

"I'm just overwhelmed. No other person in the world deserves a break more than my husband. He has had a long, tough time," Ms. Rodriguez said.

During shelling of the Green Beret camp at Ban Het in July 1969, Rodriguez suffered shrapnel wounds to both legs and lost some of his hearing because of the shelling. He received a Purple Heart.

A bricklayer before he went overseas, Rodriguez said he returned to that trade when he came home but often worked only sporadically. During slow periods, he worked as a shadetree mechanic, he said.

Rodriguez gets $384 a month disability for his combat injuries and hopes to one day complete vocational training to become a certified auto mechanic. He and his family have been living in a low-income federally subsidized apartment.

Practice of occultism up among West German youths

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The popularity of occultism, including devil worship, is growing among West Germany's young and a newspaper said some even engage in the practices during breaks at school.

Parents, public officials and church leaders say 10,000 teen-agers may be involved in occult practices ranging from seances to "black sabbaths" in which animals are sacrificed at cemeteries.

A front-page report Oct. 8 in the influential Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung carried the headline, "The Occult is Spreading in Our Schools."

It cited instances of pupils using breaks between classes for occult practices and said: "Participants withdraw from other teen-agers. Their thoughts constantly revolve around the puzzling world of the spirits."

A recent meeting of the national parents' council issued a statement declaring: "The rise of occultism and magic practices (among pupils) indicates spiritual and psychological deficits in our society."

Hans-Joachim Neuser, spokesman for the North-Rhine Westphalia state culture ministry, said: "Teens are using occult beliefs as they would a drug. This is more than just an individual case or a passing fad."

He said officials the number of reports from schools was growing, especially from religion teachers.

"Often the pupils themselves get scared they might have gone too far in their occult practices and turn to their religion teachers for help," Neuser said. Religion is a subject in most West German public schools.

Occult practices among teen-agers "range from experimentation with pendulums or glasses to devil-worship ceremonies calling for animal sacrifice," Neuser said.

One of the practices involves calling on spirits to guide a dangling pendulum to letters or words placed beneath it. In other ceremonies, spirits of deceased friends or relatives are asked to move a glass, coins, or a table in response to certain questions.

Among factors blamed for the turn to occultism are youth unemployment, broken homes and pessimism about the future.

Two teen-age members of a group practicing devil worship were convicted of murder by a Muenster regional court in October 1987. They slit the wrists and throat of another cult member in what was to be a group suicide.

Youngsters killed a cat during a "black sabbath" at a Dortmund cemetery and ripped out its intestines, the Hamburg newspaper Welt am Sonntag reported on Feb. 21.

Spiegel, the weekly news magazine, published a photograph Oct. 12, 1987, of a note it said was written by a ninth-grader in Lahnstein and intercepted by her teacher.

"I asked Lucifer yesterday who is possessed by the devil," it said, and listed the names of 11 other pupils, the magazine reported.

The Rev. Walter Schmidt of the Lutheran Central Organization for World Views in Stuttgart said: "At least 10,000 teen-agers are involved to one degree or another in various occult practices."

A Lutheran pastor in Stuttgart, the Rev. Hans-Juergen Ruppert, said teen-age adherence to traditional religions is declining in concert with occultism's rise.

"Teens are in increasing numbers turning away from traditional religion and turning to the occult as a replacement," he said. "We have to increase contact with them through church youth groups and by strengthening their bonds to religion. The danger is that these children may continue drifting away from society."

Neuser expressed fear of a deeper effect:

"This involvement happens while the youngster is still forming a sense of values and responsibility. If distant powers are supposedly controlling his behavior, he never has to take responsibility for his actions."

Controversy surrounds handling of Japanese treasures

By ERIC TALMADGE

TOKYO (AP) — As Japan readies itself to enthrone its first emperor under the postwar constitution, three treasures symbolizing the monarch's birthright are caught in controversy over just how far the government can go in supporting religious ceremony.

The treasures — curved jewels and replicas of a sword and mirror that legend holds were handed down from the gods — have been the property of each emperor since ancient times. Aside from royalty and top government officials, only a select few individuals have actually seen the imperial regalia.

Conservative politicians and government officials say the treasures should be passed on to Crown Prince Akihito in a rite called the "Kenji Togyo no Gi" as soon as possible after the death of Emperor Hirohito, who is 87 years old and has been seriously ill since September, to ensure a smooth transition.

And, they say, the ceremony should be a state function.

Opposition lawmakers, Christian groups and many historians claim the conservatives actually plan to use the treasures to give new credence to the supposedly defunct cult which, until the end of World War II, worshiped the emperor as a living god.

"It is a very delicate subject," said conservative legislator Shoji Nishimura, head of the governing Liberal Democratic Party's Shinto-Politics Alliance of Parliamentarians.

Nishimura told The Associated Press the government should follow precedent set in 1926, when Hirohito received the treasures in a state function held only hours after the death of his father on Christmas Day, the first in a series of funeral and ascension rites spanning a period of two years.

Holding the ceremony as a state affair, however, is likely to spark debate and re-open wounds caused by those who used government-sanctioned emperor worship to fuel Japan's war machine and oppress the followers of other faiths.

"If it's not done simply as handing over the treasures and is carried out as an official imperial Shinto ceremony, it will constitute a serious violation of the constitution's church-state division," contended Hirokatsu Sasagawa, professor of law at Tokyo's International Christian University.

The Japan Socialist Party, the second-largest bloc in the Diet, or parliament, opposes state backing of the rite.

"This ceremony is meant to stress the idea that the emperor is a descendant of the gods and is therefore himself divine," said Kazushi Kondo of the private Historical Research Association, a group made up mainly of professional historians and teachers.

Kondo added that the rite and another called the Daijo-sai, in which the emperor is symbolically reborn as a deity after eating rice with the gods, weren't important until the beginning of this century, when nationalists strengthened the role of the monarchy.

Following Japan's surrender in 1945, U.S.-led Allied occupation forces sought to discard the official brand of Shinto, Japan's indigenous religion, which worshipped the emperor as a descendant of the sun goddess, Amaterasu.

Shinto encompasses the worship of nature and ancestors, and today most Japanese partake in Shinto rites of some sort, including marriage ceremonies or local festivals, but they often follow the teachings of other religions, too, especially Buddhism.

At the urging of the Allies, Hirohito renounced his divinity in 1946, and the postwar constitution, drawn up in large part by the Allies, guarantees the separation of church and state.

The previous constitution of 1889 declared the emperor "sacred," and vested in him sovereign power because he was descended "from a line of emperors unbroken for ages eternal."

Nishimura agreed that it might seem strange to hold the same kind of ceremonies as when the monarch was considered a living deity, but said, "It's a very subtle point whether (Hirohito's renouncing divine status) means he's the same kind of human as any other citizen, and I don't think his renunciation of divinity means the ascension ceremonies should be simplified."

Shizuka Kamei, a member of the Diet and a leader of the governing party's right wing, said, "The rites don't violate the constitution because they are more folkways than religion."

Kazushi Sano, head researcher with the Association of Shinto Shrines, which promotes Shinto and supervises most of the nation's shrines, said the emperor has traditionally been seen as Shinto's high priest, but has no official role in Shrine Shinto, the religion's main branch.

"In folk thought the emperor is a kind of priest, but imperial Shinto and its ceremonies are more tradition than anything else," Sano said.

Sano acknowledged that the basis for the emperor's divine status can be found in Shinto, but explained: "Foxes, badgers and trees can be gods in Shinto, and in that sense so can the emperor and so can I."

He also brushed aside claims that the transfer of the treasures and other rites could revive the absolutist state Shinto of pre-1945 days.

"There was a time when the emperor was the object of fanatical worship, but the idea that he was an absolute god in the Western sense wasn't Shinto to begin with, it was a tool used by the militarists," he said.

"This ceremony is meant to stress the idea that the emperor is a descendant of the gods and is therefore himself divine."

Greenwood's Jayme Teddar sacks Denver City Quarterback Chad Sefcik.

Rangers bow to Mustangs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Greenwood's first ship into state Class 3A playoff waters sunk quickly in bi-district play here Friday night at Ratliff Stadium with a 13-6 loss to the Denver City Mustangs, but the Rangers didn't go down quietly.

It took a disaster of the magnitude of the Titantic for the Mustangs to eliminate the aggressive Rangers, who came to show that the playoff waters may be uncharted for the school, but far from an impossible dream.

This same Denver City team blasted Greenwood 26-6 earlier this year in a non-conference game, but the Mustangs escaped with their lives in this one. In fact, it took an unbelieveable 14-point swing in a tragic fourth quarter to send the Rangers home.

Greenwood held a one penetration edge against Denver City after the Mustangs tied the score at 6-6 with 11:34 left in the game on a 33-yard field goal by iron-footed Wade Roberts. Then came the ship sinking.

On the ensuing kickoff, Greenwood's Randy Donnell returned for what looked like a 95-yard touchdown right up the Mustang middle. It would have given Greenwood at least a 12-6 lead, but a lonely yellow flag was left on the artificial turf up field and the play was cancelled.

Two plays later, however, quarterback Donnell and Brian Aylor couldn't connect on a pitchout and Denver City's Sammy Barrientes jumped on the ball to set up the Mustangs at the Ranger eight-yard line. Two more plays and Denver City held a 13-6 lead as Luis Urias scored from three yards out and Roberts tacked on the extra point with 10:07 left in the game. That was the way it ended as Greenwood never worked itself into good field position again.

"This was just a huge win for us," said Denver City coach Alan Cornelius, "but I have to give a lot of credit to Greenwood. They are a much better team now than when we played them the first time."

Buffs trample Winters, 24-12

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

WINTERS — Individual heroics added up to a 24-12 bi-district win for the Stanton Buffaloes against the Winters Blizzards here Friday night.

The Buffs, 9-2, advanced to an area playoff game with Eastland this coming Friday at Abilene. Eastland was a 42-6 winner over Anson in their bi-district game Friday night.

Heroes?

There was quarterback Randy Nevarez, who got the Buffs rolling with a 72-yard TD run on the third play from scrimmage and later threw a touchdown pass that all but sealed the victory.

Other standouts included...

Tight end Lance Jenkins, who fought through three Winters' tacklers after receiving the aforementioned pass from Nevarez...

Defensive end Jeff Hall, whose two sacks late in the game stopped the rallying Blizzards...

And linebacker David Mendez, who was simply everywhere he needed to be.

The Buffs used big plays to overcome a strong game by Winters' quarterback Chris Rives, who completed 10 of 18 passes for 129 yards and two touchdowns.

It looked like a long night for Winters when Nevarez came out of the Buff wishbone, faked a pitch outside, and threaded through the left side of the Blizzard defense for his 72-yard scoring run.

The junior quarterback, who guided the Buffs to seven straight wins since taking over at QB in the fifth game of the season, used the same play for five scoring runs last week against Marfa.

"We knew we needed a big play or two to beat them," Stanton coach Dale Ruth said. "It was just a great team effort."

Mendez keyed the Buff defense that stalled Winters' first drive at midfield, then the Buffs drove down to the Blizzard 10 before Tony Moses kicked a 28-yard field goal on the last play of the first quarter.

Winters got on the board with 8:43 left in the half on a 27-yard pass from Rives to split end Tommy Selby. Ruben Hernandez set up the score with a 43-yard punt return.

But the Blizzards were wide on their extra point attempt.

After Stanton ran for 193 yards in the first half, Winters stopped the Buffs' running game cold in the second half. The Buffs only managed five net yards after the intermission.

So what happens? Nevarez went to the pass, completing three of five in the second half, including the big TD play to Jenkins with 1:19 left in the third period. The Buffs couldn't get another meaningful drive going and the Blizzards got another chance when James Carrillo recovered a fumble with 8:23 left in the game.

Rives then capped an 11-play, 67-yard drive with a 20-yard scoring pass to wingback Bryan Green.

Fort Stockton tops Big Spring, 28-20

By DEENE EHLIS
MRT Correspondent

FORT STOCKTON — A sluggish first half cost Big Spring their season finale in Fort Stockton last night, the Steers falling to the Panthers 28-20. Quarterback Pete Martinez tossed three touchdown passes in leading Fort Stockton to the win. Martinez was 8 of 17 for 176 yards.

The Panthers built a 21-6 halftime advantage with four of the five scoring plays happening in the last one and a half minutes.

With 9:26 left in the second period, Fort Stockton's Cesar Fuentez capped an 81 yard, 14 play drive with a four yard touchdown run, giving the Panthers a 6-0 lead. Fort Stockton had six first downs during their TD march, taking six minutes off the clock.

It remained at 6-0 until the Panthers tallied again with 1:25 remaining before halftime on a Martinez 31 yard screen pass to Phillip Houston. That made it 12-0.

Following the Panther kick-off, Big Spring would gain only two yards on four plays, turning it over on downs with 44 seconds left at their own 29 yard line. Two plays later, Martinez passed to Joe Parks for the score and an 18-0 edge on the Steers.

Instead of heading for the locker room, Big Spring bounced back as Dennis Hatfield took the kick-off and raced up the middle 80 yards for the TD. It was 18-6 after a two point conversion failed.

The Steers attempted an on side kick, but it went out of bounds at their own 44 and three plays later, Aaron Ramirez booted a 22 yard field goal, making it 21-6 halftime. Martinez had set up the score with a sensational 30 yard pass completion to Alex Ramirez. Martinez was sacked as he released the ball, and roughing the passer tacked on a half the distance to the goal line penalty before the field goal.

Big Spring would not have a first down in the first half, only 15 yards in total offense and no pass completions. At halftime, Big Spring Coach David Thompson said he "yelled, screamed, and challenged his team to play better". The Steers had given up 15 first downs and 250 first half yards to Fort Stockton.

Sweetwater rushes past Andrews

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — The Andrews Mustangs made a whale of a try.

Not one Andrews fan could be found leaving until the final gun, as they all clung to their slim chances at playoff hopes and what would have been a major upset of the state's top ranked 4A team.

The Sweetwater Mustangs, who finish the season at 10-0 overall, 7-0 in district, downed Andrews 17-14, but not before Andrews put everything they had into a last minute scoring attempt.

Andrews' Ronnie Seals grabbed a 10-yard pass from halfback Joe Don Finley with 1:45 left in the fourth quarter for the home team's second touchdown and what would prove to be the final 17-14 margin.

Sweetwater knew all it had to do to secure its victory was run out the clock following Seals' TD grab.

But Andrews' Mike Hernandez jumped on the ensuing onside kick-off, and the Mustangs had one final chance with just over 90 seconds left.

From Sweetwater's 45, Andrews quarterback Robert Morris was dropped for a 10 yard loss on a first and 10. He then followed that with

Hawks' new coach calls WJCAC big time

Returns to Juco ball after UH, Lamar, Arkansas stints

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Steve Green hasn't been involved with a junior college program since he played for his dad Cletus at Northeastern Oklahoma A&M in the early 1980's. But the new Howard County Junior College basketball coach says the West Texas Collegiate Athletic Conference isn't just any juco league.

"West Texas (junior college basketball) is head and shoulders above the rest of the state," Green said. "This is a big-time atmosphere."

Green got used to the big time during stints as an assistant coach at Arkansas, Lamar and the University of Houston. All three programs reached the NCAA tournament during Green's tenure.

BUT ASSISTING even the likes of Eddie Sutton and Pat Foster isn't like having your own program, Green said.

"I've been an assistant for nine years, and I just wanted to do something different," he said. So he took the HC job June 1 — his first head coaching assignment since a stint in Welch, Okla, during the 1978-79 season.

"If you're going to coach junior college, this is the place to go," Green said. "There's more big-time junior college players in this conference than anywhere in the country."

Green's contribution to that list is Terrence Lewis, a former Mr. Basketball from Alabama who signed a letter-of-intent to Providence College but was a Proposition 48 casualty. The Hawks also have former University of Houston recruit Michael New, who sat out his freshman year due to Proposition 48, the tougher scholastic guidelines enacted by the NCAA three years ago.

NEW PLAYED for the Cougars last season, but never could get untracked while playing under then-freshman Craig Upchurch, one of the best freshman in the Southwest Conference last season. Therein lies a lesson for non-qualifiers that Green hopes will bolster his recruiting.

"Unless you're a surefire pro, you should go to a junior college so you can play," Green said. New looks to be a contributor for HC this season, as do Brazilian junior national team members Carlos Thumm and Natan Vierriea.

Green learned the Brazilian connection during his years at Houston, when the Coogs recruited future NBA draftee Rolando Ferreira from South America. The new Hawk mentor indicated that he may continue to tap foreign lands for the Hawk program.

"They like to come here, because there's an extreme value in being able to speak English down there."

GREEN, WHOSE Hawks lost two of three games in the recent Chap Classic, still thinks his team has a chance to be a factor in the WJCAC race.

"Our goals are to make the playoffs, win 22 to 23 games and have a chance to go the national tournament," Green said. But the Hawks sometimes have trouble filling out their non-conference schedule — a key to getting ready for league play.

"Who wants to drive 14 hours to play three games," Green asked. But that's what the Hawks have to do when they go to Pratt, Kan. later this month. And, the Hawks have to play several games against junior varsity teams from four-year schools to fill out their 31-game schedule.

While coming to Howard isn't a homecoming for Green, it's still a welcome break from his years on the Texas Gulf Coast.

"I've spent a lot of time out in this area and have a lot of friends out here."

STEERS

The second half was a different story. Coach Thompson said his team "pulled together and played with intensity the second half, we showed some character."

The Steers would need a lot of character as Fort Stockton drew first blood the second half, scoring on a 36 yard pass from Martinez to Parks on the Panthers first possession. They even made the extra point on an Aaron Ramirez kick. It was 26-6 and time for Big Spring fans to think basketball.

Coach Thompson though was thinking "Bumarookie." With 4:39 left in the third period, that's the play the Steer mentor had called for, a deceptive run where Quarterback Rance Thompson hands off to Neal Mayfield with Mayfield stopping as if he doesn't have the ball. Thompson then rolls right with the rest of the offense, taking the fooled defense with them and allowing Mayfield to scamper 53 yards for a touchdown. Thompson then completed his first pass of the game, to Joe Downey for a two point conversion and it was 28-14.

In the fourth quarter, the Steers scored on a 15 yard Thompson to Downey pass midway through the period. A two point conversion failed and it was 28-20. The TD pass came on a fourth a four situation.

The Steers held Fort Stockton on four straight plays and started a drive at their own 27 that would carry to the Panther 7 yard line before penalties pushed Big Spring back. The first penalty nullified a touchdown run by Rodney Brown. Finally on a fourth and fifteen play, a pass failed, sealing the Steers fate.

The second half comeback was sparked by Senior runningback Rodney Brown. He carried for one yard in the first half, but finished with 107 on 16 carries. Coach Thompson said Brown had a "great game." He concluded things by saying the Steers "made strides this year and we'll make more next year." Defensive coordinator Dwight Butler, pleased his defense showed up for the second half, said " Jason Phillips did a super job for the game, and for the season, especially after we switched his position".

RANGERS

Cornelius also thought the two fourth quarter plays were the keys to the outcome.

"There is no question that the penalty and the fumble recovery did it for us," said Cornelius. "But I have to give some credit to our kids. We probably wouldn't have gotten the clip on that touchdown play if our kids hadn't been hustling down field. And if we hadn't been playing hard and hustling, we probably wouldn't have forced the fumble two plays later.

"Some people will say we were lucky and there was some of that, but you make your own luck. Sometimes there are reasons you have good luck and that comes from hustling."

Greenwood marched 51 yards on 12 plays to take a 6-3 lead in the third quarter when Jimmy Cox crashed in from a yard out. The extra point bid was blocked.

Denver City led 3-0 at the half after a 39-yard field goal by Roberts. But this was a tough defensive struggle that saw both teams with helmets at the ready.

Denver City's Lee Clare was all over the field, making key penetration that hurt the Rangers from his defensive line position. DC's Urias also came up with two interceptions and Russell Hulse had another.

Greenwood's Sean Holcomb had a big first half interception in which the Rangers got a penetration, but were unable to get points on the boards. Also, Greenwood's Jason Lough, Jayme Teddar, Dave Dixon and Garry Popham all came up with big defensive plays.

Denver City dominated the overall statistics, leading in first downs 15-8, yards rushing 197-75 and passing yards 72-21. Still both teams had two penetrations and it came down to the big fourth quarter turnaround that was the margin of difference in the score.

Greenwood coach Bob Purser and his staff held a long, emotional postgame talk with their gutty Rangers, who cried openly as the coaches talked. Due to the length of that meeting, Purser could not be reached for comment, but it was easy to tell that he was not disappointed with this effort.

Each Greenwood coach took turns praising the Ranger troops for what they had done this season and in this game.

For Denver City, it's on to the area playoffs against Littlefield, a victor Friday over Childress. Cornelius didn't know Friday when or where that game will be played next week.

SI labels Chaparral Center best JC arena

Williamson

Did you happen to see the latest college basketball preview edition of "Sports Illustrated?" SI named Midland's Chaparral Center as the best junior college basketball arena in the country.

SI says of the Chap, "This impressive rotunda...would do many four-year colleges proud."

Mike Stevens, manager of the Chap, said of SI's report, "We're thrilled that Sports Illustrated would say this about our facility, but we are just happy that the rest of the country knows what we already knew."

SI also says in the edition that Odessa College's Larry Johnson, who already has a 51-point game this year, is the best Juco player in the nation and that OC is the best Juco team in the land.

The Chap deserves this recognition. It is without question the best basketball facility I've ever seen for viewing a game. It's just a good thing SI didn't wonder how Midland can have such a great basketball arena and such a shoddy football stadium.

And speaking of football, Midland Lee's bi-district meeting with Amarillo Palo Duro at 1 p.m. today in Amarillo is almost like a homecoming game for me.

Palo Duro coach Doug James grew up in Snyder, playing for the Tigers in 1956. If Midland High had drawn this matchup, it would really have been old home week since Bulldog assistant Bernie Hagins is also an old Snyderite.

Coach James' brother, Robert, who is now an assistant coach at Baylor, used to coach at Lamesa in the mid-70s. I became good friends with Robert James when he was at Lamesa, producing some fine Class 4A playoff teams.

Doug James, who was then coaching in San Antonio, used to come to Robert's playoff games and work with him from the press box.

After a district victory against Snyder one year, Robert James made me sing the Snyder alma mater with his assistant Tim Marcum, a guy I played some high school ball with in Snyder. Marcum is now coaching Arena football and won the championship last year.

District 4-5A has been tough on Doug James. This is the fifth year in a row he has put his Dons in the playoffs, but he hasn't gotten past the bi-district round, losing three times to Permian and once to San Angelo. This is the first time he has faced Lee.

"You know you are going to be facing one of the best teams in the state when you go up against that district down there," said James. "If there is a silver lining, you know you've got a major playoff hurdle out of the way early if you can find a way to win the game. We just haven't found the way yet."

So here is how District 4-5A will fare today with the Amarillo bi-district twinbill.

Midland Lee 35, Amarillo Palo Duro 14: Us old Snyderites always stick together — until we get our brains kicked in. The Rebels have found themselves over the past month. These youthful Rebels are no longer youthful if you think about it. The playoffs are just like starting a second season. It's time juniors can play like seniors...

Odessa Permian 40, Amarillo Tascosa 7: Old Mojo is still screaming over a certain upset. Just looking at another Rebel puts goose bumps on those black jersies. The feeling here is that Permian wants to reach the quarterfinals just in case another Rebel makes it that far...

Terry Williamson is assistant sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Cowboys' Sweeney doesn't believe in unaided miracles

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Kevin Sweeney has been a quarterback long enough to know that the only miracle workers at that position are surrounded by 10 good men.

Although Sweeney is the new starting quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys, he knows he will play only as well as the team plays against the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday.

"Let's just put it all in perspective," Sweeney said. "Vinny Testaverde was the first pick in the entire draft (in 1987) and Vinny wasn't the savior of the Tampa Bay Cubs. He hasn't turned things around, nor has he ended their struggle. It's still a game where there are 11 people on the field."

The Cowboys, 2-8, turned to Sweeney after Steve Pelluer was the quarterback for six consecutive losses. Dallas converted only 1 of 13 third-down conversions.

Dallas has lost six games in a row, the first time the Cowboys have done that in a season since 1960.

"To say Kevin will pull magic out of the gate Sunday will depend largely on how our team reacts," said Dallas coach Tom Landry.

Club president Tex Schramm said Sweeney will be a hero in Dallas through "about two interceptions" and must prove he can be a starter.

"You have to remember that Gary Hogeboom became a folk hero for playing one-half of a football game that we lost (1982 NFC championship game against Washington)."

Aggies, Horned Frogs face long-time football hexes

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas A&M and Texas Christian have two big jinxes to overcome on Saturday before they can celebrate rare victories over the teams they are playing.

Texas A&M coach Jackie Sherrill has never defeated the Arkansas Razorbacks in Arkansas.

TCU has lost to the Texas Longhorns for 29 consecutive seasons. The Frogs haven't beaten the 'Horns since 1958. Their last win in Amon Carter Stadium over Texas was in 1951.

Texas A&M claims the Razorbacks won't be the true SWC football champions unless the Hogs beat them.

A&M figures it can claim the SWC title with an asterisk by defeating the Cotton Bowl-bound Hogs in Fayetteville.

"This is not a bowl game for us," said Texas A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson. "It's a game for the Southwest Conference championship. We're still the champs. They have to take it away from us."

A&M has won three straight SWC titles and is unbeaten in league play this year. However, NCAA probation has knocked A&M out of post-season play and the legal right to claim the league title.

The unblemished, 11th ranked Razorbacks have only A&M to beat to sweep through the SWC unbeaten. They have already clinched their first outright league title since 1965.

Arkansas coach Ken Hatfield believes the games of a team on probation shouldn't count in league play.

A&M hasn't won in Fayetteville since 1967. Sherrill is 0-9 in Arkansas and has been outscored 77-10 by the Hogs in the state.

Arkansas rated a two-point favorite over A&M for the 1 p.m. clash. In other games, Texas was a one-point favorite over Texas Christian in a noon (Raycom Television) game in Fort Worth; Baylor was a four-point pick over Rice in Houston in a 1 p.m. game, Texas Tech was a four-touchdown favorite over Lamar in a 1 p.m. game in Lubbock; and Wyoming was a two-point favorite over Houston in a 7 p.m. nationally televised game (ESPN) in the Astrodome.

Texas running back Eric Metcalf (ankle) was doubtful for the TCU game. Houston is fresh off a 66-15 slaughter of the Longhorns in which Andre Ware threw five touchdown passes. Houston could all but clinch an Aloha Bowl bid with a victory over the 10th ranked Cowboys.

A four-hour game was forecast because both teams like to pass.

"There ought to be plenty of scoring to keep it interesting," said Houston coach Jack Pardee.

Polls, fooey; Azzi-Ratem is only way

Battles

After three months of daily election polls, America is about polled out, even on college football polls. And how reliable are they, anyway?

Consequently, it's not too surprising that this corner has been besieged by those seeking something more substantial in analyzing college football powers.

"We've read all about these polls with their eastern press bias," readers write. "Now, how about something a little more scientific....we haven't seen your Azzi-Ratem rankings this year. Whassa' matter, your computer break down?"

It's a little surprising any one remembers. Azzi-Ratem hasn't been used since last season. So, in response the public's clamor for knowledge and enlightenment....

AS YOU KNOW, Azzi-Ratem is a highly scientific study of the nation's football elite and sometimes produces some startling results.

Azzi-Ratem, devised, I believe, by a nomad refugee of the Third Egyptian Camel Corps, reflects not only the won-lost record but incorporates the strength of opponents played.

No taint of human emotion seeps into the impartial, unbiased and sometimes harsh evaluation of teams and results from dissatisfaction with the inconsistencies of AP, UPI, CNN, USA-Yesterday polls, which frequently rank a team above a team to which it is lost.

Of course, such travesties on justice are not evident in the Azzi-Ratem.

As the season heads into the final weeks, the Azzi-Ratem rankings.....

1. USC 89.128.
2. Florida State 86.66.
3. Michigan 82.22.
4. Notre Dame 51.66.
5. Wyoming 50.00.
Washington State 50.00.
7. Clemson 49.44.
8 UCLA 48.88.
9. LSU 47.77.
10. Miami 47.50.
11. Oklahoma State 47.50.
12. Oklahoma 46.66.
13. Nebraska 46.50.
14. Auburn 46.00
15. Houston 43.15.
16 Indiana 42.77.
16. Arkansas 41.11.
18. West Virginia 40.55.
19. Georgia 37.44.
20. Alabama 36.75.

Uh, er, ah...Well, obviously something went wrong. It's not the way I would have picked them. Still, scanning the results, what has happened is explainable.

Rankins are based on performance to date, who you play and not on what might have been, would could be or what a polister wishes.

For example, Notre Dame paid the price of playing Rice and Navy, two teams from which it derived minimal credit.

USC, playing in the toughest conference in the country and meeting Oklahoma in a non-conference game, is only a mild surprise as the country's leader.

Florida State is a real shocker. This team lost to Miami, 31-0, and played what was presumed to be a weak schedule, but not nearly as untaxing as Miami's Wisconsin, Missouri, Cincinnati, East Carolina and Tulsa walk over.

The Big Eight is murder on Oklahoma and Nebraska and the Sooners didn't even benefit this year by facing a representative Texas team.

Notre Dame with Penn State and USC left, will pick up ground and OU and Nebraska will benefit by playing one another. Others, likewise, will move up with tougher finishing foes, but USC, with Arizona State, UCLA and Notre Dame left, will be tough to catch. Florida State, meanwhile, will suffer in Virginia Tech, Florida closers.

And the line for this week....

The pros. The record against the pros has been pretty discouraging, or was, until perusal of a metropolitan papers' panel of experts revealed every member of the board was below .500 against the spread....

Vikings minus 3 1/2 over Cowboys- Kevin Sweeney gets his chance, but....

Oilers plus one over Seahawks-Houston must guard against post-Browns letdown.

Saints plus 3 1/2 over Rams-Close, so take the points.

Bears plus 3 1/2 over Redskins-Even without McMahon.

Eagles minus 3 over Steelers-These teams once played for the NFL championship....

Browns plus three over Broncos-What happened to Denver....is there dissension between Elway and Dorsett?

Andrews' Matt Carroll grabs for Kenneth Norman (20), Sweetwater, and comes up with air in Friday's action at Andrews.

ANDREWS

an incompletion.

On third and 20, with time quickly evaporating, Sweetwater's Gregg Little intercepted a Morris pass, and from then on all Sweetwater had to do was fall on the ball.

Sweetwater preserved not only a slim win, but also the District 4-4A championship and a perfect 10-0 record.

With the loss, Andrews' season came to an abrupt end, yielding playoff chances to Monahans, which now advances as District 4-4A runner-up; the Loboes will play Levelland, 15-14 winners over Frenship. Sweetwater, as district champs, will meet Hereford; the Whiteface's destroyed Dumas, 56-0 Friday night.

Up 10-6 in the fourth quarter, Sweetwater made what appeared to be a clinching touchdown with just over 5:00 remaining. Toby Tovias grabbed a 25 yard pass from quarterback Robbie Pierce to put the visitors up 17-6.

The pass, highly unusual for the run oriented Sweetwater offense, was the only completion out of only two attempts for Sweetwater. The remaining 261 yards in offense was gained on the ground. Not surprisingly, heralded tailback Kenneth Norman, the leading ground gainer and scorer in Class 4A, racked up 138 of those yards.

The Andrews defense keyed on Norman in the second half, holding him to just 27 yards in the final two quarters. Norman, though, had done his damage with 111 first half yards, including a 31 yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

Andrews was unable to score until the third quarter when Seals caught his first touchdown pass of the night, an 11-yarder, also from Finley.

Finley and Morris combined for 98 yards through the air; Andrews rushers were held to just 129 yards, 50 of which came from Morris, the QB.

As has been its habit all year, Sweetwater was again subject to infraction, called 11 times for a total of 85 yards. The two teams combined for at least seven face mask penalties, many of which were unintentional.

Andrews' only other score came in the fourth quarter when back-up punter Greg Ruffin ran out of the end zone for a safety. Andrews missed both of its point-after attempts, the more hurting of which occurred following their final touchdown.

Andrews had what appeared to be a perfect two point conversion which was called back after a penalty. A second try for the two-points also was negated following a second penalty. Still, had the 'Stangs not been called for the two penalities, they likely still would have fallen a point short.

Andrews finishes the season at 7-3 overall, 5-2 in district.

Harper, who had 10 points in the third quarter, scored 25 to lead Dallas. Sam Perkins added 18 and Mark Aguirre 17.

Darwin Cook led San Antonio with 19 points and Greg Anderson contributed 16.

Pistons 116, Celtics 107

BOSTON — Adrian Dantley and Isiah Thomas keyed a decisive rally down the stretch and the unbeaten Detroit Pistons streaked to their fifth victory in a fight-interrupted 116-107 decision over the Boston Celtics.

The Pistons posted their first regular season victory in 15 Boston Garden visits since Dec. 19, 1982.

Dantley, Thomas and Joe Dumars took charge after centers Bill Laimbeer of the Pistons and Robert Parish of the Celtics were ejected for fighting late in the first period.

The fight between the 6-foot-10 Laimbeer and the 7-foot Parish broke out after the Boston center was struck on the head during rebounding action. They threw wild punches before being spearated by other players. Laimbeer had 11 points and Parish eight when they left.

Rockets 121, Heat 100

MIAMI — Rookie Derrick Chievous scored 22 points, including 12 in a seven-minute span of the second quarter, to lead Houston. The Rockets' Akeem Olajuwon added 19 points, 12 below his average, and 13 rebounds. Tim McCormick had 17 points and Buck Johnson 15.

Rookie Rony Seikaly had 18 points and Billy Thompson 13 for Miami, 0-4.

Bulls 97, Nets 85

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 36 points and ignited a fourth-quarter surge as Chicago defeated New Jersey Nets. Jordan, who entered the game as the NBA's leading scorer with 35 points per game, had 12 points during the decisive stretch.

STANTON—

Rives then completed an extra point pass to Richard Lett, but a penalty nullified the two points and Rives was sacked on the second try.

The Blizzards then tried an onside kick, but Stanton's Barry Cain recovered with 2:26 left. But the Buffs gained three yards on their next three plays and the Blizzards took over on their own 39 with 70 seconds left in the game.

Rives went to the air on the first play, but Stanton cornerback Steve Scuriark picked off the bass at midfield and ran it all the way back for the clincher.

It may have just been fitting that Mendez dragged Rives down from behind on the last play of the game.

"We just had to tough it out at the end," Mendez said.

Purdue to hide data about virus

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Purdue University has complied with a government agency's request to hide its information about the virus program that jammed thousands of computers across the country last week, a researcher said Friday.

However, such action isn't likely to prevent a determined computer hacker from wreaking havoc again, said Eugene H. Spafford, an assistant professor and computer scientist at Purdue.

"The worry of the National Computer Security Center...is that if somebody gets even a significant portion of the source code, then they could turn out something more dangerous," Spafford said.

Since hundreds of copies of the errant program already are out, Spafford believes trying to control the information "is a losing battle."

Last Thursday, the "worm" program rapidly duplicated itself in computer systems nationwide, spreading like a virus, slowing the computers' processing speeds and filling up their memories.

At Purdue, the worm entered a computer connected to Internet, an international computer network on which researchers from universities, computer companies and some government installations share information and resources.

Officials from the National Computer Security Center, a division of the National Security Agency, contacted Purdue this week and asked that worm data be removed from a file where others could have access to it.

The Purdue file had "copies of the worm program and somewhat disassembled, somewhat reverse-compiled versions of the code," Spafford said. "This could be used to understand how it worked, but it wasn't in a form that could be used to contruct a new version."

He said the university did not consider the data potentially harmful, but removed it "in an attempt to be cooperative."

However, people who run the thousands of computers affected by the virus believe they "need to see the code so they can feel comfortable that no damage was actually done...so they can be sure they plugged all the holes that could be exploited. That's also a valid viewpoint," Spafford said.

"One approach might be to widely publicize the fixes, without distributing the code; then, after a reasonably short period of time, say three to six months, release the code," he said.

Morrell wins $24.6 million

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — A jury has awarded John Morrell & Co. $24.6 million in damages from the meatpackers' union for three strikes at its processing plant in Sioux Falls, and the union has promised to appeal.

The award issued in U.S. District Court on Thursday stemmed from a $40 million lawsuit the company filed claiming the often-violent strikes were illegal because the Sioux Falls union local had a labor contract in effect.

A previous federal jury agreed in March, but a federal arbitrator said Monday that 2,400 union members were legally refusing to cross a picket line set up by striking Morrell workers.

Morrell also is fighting a $4.3 million fine, the largest ever against a single employer by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Angry Strange keeps two-stroke golf lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Curtis Strange, angered and distracted by a clicking camera, salvaged a 71 and retained a two-stroke lead Friday at the halfway point of golf's richest tournament, the Nabisco Championships.

"It's like a baseball game out there," the U.S. Open champion fumed after completing two trips over the Pebble Beach Golf Links in 9-under-par 135.

Strange complained of "cameras and gallery in the fairways. We should be able to administrate better," he said. "After all this time, we should be able to control these things."

Strange said he was distracted by two camera clicks while playing the par-5 18th hole.

"It got me on my second shot and it got me on my third shot. You hear that click on your backswing and a warning light goes off in your head," he said.

Strange, who led by three shots beginning the day, stroked three good shots to the green and had a 10-foot putt for the birdie that would have retained the margin.

But he missed it.

Barber sizzles with 64

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — Miller Barber birdied eight of the first 12 holes Friday on his way to an 8-under-par 64 and a two-shot lead after the first round of the $225,000 Senior Classic at the Suntree Country Club.

Barber, 57, finished with nine birdies and a bogey on the par-72, 6,590-yard course to lead Homero Blancas by two strokes and Jim Cochran, Larry Mowry and Rafe Botts by three.

"I played as well today as I have in a long time," Barber said.

Blancas, a Senior Tour rookie, shot into contention with a hole-in-one at the 178-yard par-3 fifth hole. He finished with one eagle, six birdies and two bogeys.

"I'm a very streaky player," said Blancas, 50, who ended the day with a 66. "I get into a groove and I think I can knock everything into the hole."

Walt Zembriski and defending champion Dave Hill were tied for sixth at 68, while Bobby Greenwood, Charles Sifford and Jim King shot 69s.

Sun Devils block USC's ambitions

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

You can't really blame Southern California for looking ahead to its showdowns with UCLA and Notre Dame the next two weeks.

But in light of past history, that might not be such a good idea.

The second-ranked Trojans have a date with Arizona State today and the Sun Devils are the only Pac-10 team with a winning record (5-2) against Southern Cal. The Trojans are 1-3 in Tempe, Ariz., where their only victory was a 6-3 squeaker in 1984.

"It's November, and you've got to win all your games in November if you expect to be a championship team," Southern Cal coach Larry Smith said.

IF THE Trojans are snake-bitten in Tempe, Smith isn't. Before coming to USC last year, he coached at Arizona and was 5-2 against Arizona State, twice knocking the Sun Devils out of the Rose Bowl.

While top-rated Notre Dame and Miami are idle, two games match AP Top 20 teams — No. 19 Colorado at No. 7 Nebraska and No. 17 Georgia at No. 9 Auburn.

No. 4 West Virginia visits Rutgers, No. 5 Florida State entertains Virginia Tech, No. 6 UCLA plays host to Stanford, No. 8 Oklahoma is at Missouri and No. 10 Wyoming at Houston under the lights.

In the Second Ten, it's No. 12 LSU at Mississippi State, Illinois at No. 13 Michigan, Kansas at No. 14 Oklahoma State, No. 15 Syracuse at Boston College, No. 16 Clemson at Maryland, Southwestern Louisiana at No. 18 Alabama and Oregon State at No. 20 Washington State.

Either Southern Cal or UCLA will be the host team in the Rose Bowl. The Big Ten representative will be Michigan (6-2-1, 5-0-1), provided the Wolverines beat Illinois (5-3-1, 4-1-1). If the Illini win, they can make it to Pasadena by defeating Northwestern next week.

The bowl committees will be out in force and, if they can't issue "official" invitations until next week, they at least can dispense a few RSVP's.

This is the likely bowl scenario, subject to change.

Fiesta — Notre Dame vs. West Virginia.

Rose — Pac-10 champion (Southern Cal or UCLA) vs. Big Ten champ (Michigan or Illinois).

Orange — Miami vs. Nebraska-Oklahoma winner.

Cotton — Arkansas vs. Florida State or UCLA.

Sugar — SEC champion (Auburn, LSU or Georgia) vs. Southern Cal or Florida State.

Florida Citrus — Nebraska-Oklahoma loser vs. Atlantic Coast Conference champion (Saturday's Clemson-Maryland winner).

Gator — Auburn or LSU vs. Syracuse (the Orangemen may be leaning toward the Hall of Fame Bowl), a Big Ten or Pac-10 team, or, perhaps, Colorado.

Holiday — Wyoming vs. Oklahoma State.

Hall of Fame — LSU or Georgia vs. Syracuse.

Sun — Alabama vs. Army, if the Cadets beat Vanderbilt; otherwise Pitt, if the Panthers beat Penn State.

Aloha — Washington State vs. Houston.

All American — Florida-Kentucky winner vs. Duke or a Big Ten also-ran.

California — Western Michigan vs. Big West champ (probably Fresno State).

College Roundup

Freedom — Brigham Young vs. Saturday's Arizona-Oregon winner or Colorado, with Penn State a possibility if the Nittany Lions beat Pitt.

Independence — Southern Mississippi vs. Texas-El Paso, if the Miners beat San Diego State on Saturday.

Liberty — Indiana vs. South Carolina.

Peach — Iowa vs. North Carolina State, if the Wolfpack beats Duke. Otherwise, an ACC, Big Ten or Pac-10 team.

West Virginia, 9-0 for the first time in its 96-year football history and hoping for a national championship Fiesta Bowl shootout with Notre Dame , is a three-touchdown favorite over 4-5 Rutgers.

"Rutgers is a traditional team on our schedule and they're tough as nails," WVU coach Don Nehlen said. "I don't think our kids would ever take Rutgers very lightly because if they did they'd get killed, and they know that."

Georgia will go the Sugar Bowl if its beats Auburn but the Bulldogs are eight-point underdogs against a team that leads the nation in scoring defense, total defense and rushing defense. In addition, Georgia coach Vince Dooley is seeking his 200th career victory.

Colorado, shut out of the bowls last year despite a 7-4 record, probably can guarantee itself a bid by upsetting Nebraska. But the Buffs have dropped 24 of the last 28 against the Huskers.

Nebraska is coming off a 51-16 rout of Iowa State which Coach Tom Osborne described as "about as solid a game as we've played on both sides of the ball."

Wyoming and Houston do most of their best work on the offensive side of the ball. They rank second and fifth nationally in scoring (45.9 and 42.9 points a game, respectively), first and fifth in total offense (538.3 and 497.3).

NORTHWESTERN BAPTIST CHURCH

November 12, 1988

Three-year old Jennifer came into her grandmother's bedroom early one morning. "Nanny," said the moppet, "it is time to get up." Grandmother protested that it was still dark. Jenny went to the window and peered out, then, over her shoulder, said, "But Nanny, I can see a little bit of light mixed in with the dark."

On the blackest of days, our eyes of faith can see the laser beam of divine light "mixed in with the dark."

BLESS THIS HOUSE

There is a family somewhere who will live in this house.

God surely wants to bless this house. But God generally seems to accomplish His aims through the lives of people.

So, when that family somewhere finally moves in—God can begin right away to bless this house. As their faith is expressed here . . . as their hopes and fears are spoken in prayer . . . as they gather in Church with their neighbors to worship, and learn, and grow . . . as they strive earnestly to serve God and to share His love.

And that's precisely the way God wants to Bless Your House.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Midland Family Week proclaimed

Mayor Carrol Thomas proclaimed Nov. 13-19 as Midland Family Week in conjunction with National Family Week, which was established in 1970 by former President Jimmy Carter. The joint congressional resolution calls attention to the importance of the family in a free and orderly society.

To highlight the week, a Midland family will be selected and honored as the 1988 Midland Family of the Year, sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A special program will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the L.D.S. chapel at 4805 Gateway, in which all nominated families will be honored and the mayor will announce and present an award to the 1988 Family of the Year.

The families nominated this year are: the Wayne Hathaway family, the Dr. Bobby Henry family, the Curt Parsons family, the Sal J. Pagano family, the Gary R. Hall family, and the John G. Arthur family. These families are nominated because they exemplify strong family solidarity, high moral standards, religious involvement and community involvement.

Previous recipients of the Midland Family of the Year award have been the Melvin Dunn family, the Doc Dodson family, the Lynn Hunt family, the Pat Baskin family, the Homer Jackson family, the George Patton family and the H.N. "Bud" Hensley family.

Veteran to speak Sunday

Highly decorated Vietnam veteran Clebe McClary will be the special guest Sunday on Veteran's Day at Kelview Heights Baptist Church, 402 W. Scharbauer Dr.

"Critically wounded while leading a 13-man patrol, Lt. McClary lost an arm and an eye, but not his courage or his patriotism," says a release from the church.

Clebe's indomitable spirit and contagious zest for life are renewed daily through a profound devotion and love of country.

Clebe is the recipient of, among other honors, the Bronze Star, Silver Star, and the Omar Bradley Award. He also holds the record for the Balke treadmill stress test at the Cooper Clinic in Dallas — the same record shot at and missed by the collective membership of the Dallas Cowboys. Considering this record-holder has experienced the loss of an eye, his left arm, 39 reconstructive surgical operations and a full three years hospitalization, his assertion to "press on, regardless" seems truly triumphant.

The Rev. Frank Johnson, the church's pastor, invites you to be part of this special day at Kelview at 9 and 10:15 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Prison ministry to perform

Joe Whitten Prison Ministries will present "His Children" at 7 p.m. Sunday at the First Baptist Church, 2104 W. Louisiana Ave.

Joe Whitten, founder and executive secretary for the "Joe Whitten Prison Ministries," is a native of Oklahoma with a Texas education. He is a graduate of West Texas State University with a masters degree from Texas Tech University.

"His Children" has appeared in 155 state and federal prison concerts as well as 70 churches across 20 states during the last few years.

They also were featured at the 115th Congress of the American Correctional Association in New York City in 1985, the 116th Congress in Las Vegas in 1986, and at the 117th Congress in New Orleans held in 1987.

This group is comprised of eight college students who donate one year of their lives to this special service.

A special feature of the program will be Vicki Nieto, a former maximum security inmate, who will share her testimony and experiences.

The public is invited at no charge to this concert.

Local women to host group

The Northwest Texas Women's Missionary Society of the African Methodist Episcopal Church will be hosted by Greater St. Luke Missionary Society, Mrs. Katherine Thomas, local president, said.

Mrs. Annie Dale Jones, conference branch president of the Northwest Texas Conference, will be the presiding officer of this meeting.

After a continental breakfast, meetings of the budget and finance committee and the executive board will be held. The general session will begin at 10 a.m. The Y.P.D.'ers (Young People's Department) under the direction of Mrs. Al Pearl Jones of San Angelo, will be held from 9:30 to 11:30.

Visiting presidents will make progress reports as they implement the theme "Empowered by Christ for Change", focusing on "Personal Growth" through missionary service. The missionaries of other churches are invited to the general session. A luncheon will be served after the session. Tickets for luncheon is a $9 donation.

The host pastor is Rev. S.V. Ferguson and host Presiding Elder, Rev. I.C. Cooper.

The Episcopal Supervisor of A.M.E. Women's Missionary Society is Mrs. Theodora Mayo, wife of 10th Episcopal Bishop, Rev. James Haskel Mayo.

Series III starts Wednesday

First United Methodist Church's Wednesday Night Live series is open to all interested parties. Series III began Wednesday and continues through Dec. 14.

Classes being offered include basic woodworking, taught by Rod Stephenson; Advent Bible Study, "Remembering Messiah," taught by Vaughn Jones; "Hidden Keys to Loving Relationships," a video-tape program of the Gary Smally Seminar, discussion led by Jim Cox and Becky Billingsley; and "Understanding the Medicine You Buy," led by Melissa Thompson, pharmacist at Bellwood Pharmacy No. 9, and by Dr. Thomas McIntosch this Wednesday and Nov. 30.

In addition, the youth group for junior and senior high school students meets the same evening. Leding the group is Rob Montgomery.

The evening begins with a 5:15 to 6:15 p.m. meal. Classes are held from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. Then, at 7:30 p.m. the Chancel Choir rehearses and other meetings are held.

The Fall Semester of Wednesday Night Live ends Dec. 14 for children's choirs and all classes. The Winter-Spring Semester will begin in January, offering new classes that will continue through April.

Church sponsoring crusade

The Church of God of Prophecy is sponsoring a "Voice of Salvation Crusade" at the Midland Hilton beginning at 7 p.m. Sunday and continuing through Friday.

The Monday through Friday services will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Evangelist will be D. Elwood Matthews.

Matthews is speaker for the "Voice of Salvation," the international radio and television broadcast for The Church of God of Prophecy. The radio program is aired over some 240 radio stations in 36 states and 18 countries. The program is heard on Saturdays at 11:30 a.m. on radio station KKKK 99.1 FM. The television program is seen at 6 p.m. on Channel 31 cable and the new TBN channel 42 Midland/Odessa.

"Matthews and his wife, Roberta, form a dynamic team in the ministry of the master in word and song," says a release from the church.

Their ministry has taken them around the world on different occasions to minister to the military and in city-wide crusades.

Leading the singing for the crusade will be Ruby Stewart, state music director for The Church of God of Prophecy in West Texas.

John Miller, pastor for The Church of God of Prophecy in Midland, invites the public to attend all services. For more information, call 697-5512.

Center offers workshop

The Samaritan Counseling Center of West Texas, Inc. is offering a one-day workshop from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 19, using the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator to help participants understand, accept, and appreciate the uniqueness and strengths of their personalities.

In the workshop, the eight preferences — Extraversion, Introversion, Sensation, Intuition, Thinking, Feeling, Judgment and Perception — will be defined and experienced by the participants.

Information on developing opposite preferences will also be shared. In addition, practical ways to use personality type in communicating, managing stress, and decision-making will be explored.

The workshop will be conducted by the Rev. Norman Godfrey, who is a pastoral psychotherapist with 15 years counseling experience. In addition, he has successfully completed the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator Professional Qualifying Program and uses it regularly for individuals, couples, and families in therapy.

For registration and information, please call the Center at 563-4144.

Thanksgiving service set

RANKIN — On Nov. 10, 1963, a group of Lutherans gathered in the home of the Rankin High School band director, James Mabry, to attend the first Lutheran church service in Rankin, led by Card Baden of Midland.

Baden served as lay minister for the congregation for eight years.

Sunday a celebration of Thanksgiving service will be held at 4 p.m. at Immanuel Lutheran Church, 705 Elizabeth, Rankin, and the Rev. Donald Hafemann of Midland, pastoral advisor to Immanuel for many years, will be the guest speaker.

The Rev. Dean Kelm, pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church of Odessa, has also been the pastor of Immanuel for 14 years.

Special music and refreshments will be part of the program.

All the friends and former members of Immanuel are invited to help the congregation celebrate this joyous occasion.

Crouch planned to speak

ODESSA — Pastors Don and Paulette Caywood of Odessa Christian Faith Center, 8880 N. Andrews Highway, announce that Van Crouch will be speaking at the 6 p.m. evening service Sunday.

"Van Crouch is one of the most sought-after motivational speakers in America today," says a release from the center.

He is a former scout for the Dallas Cowboys and now serves as the chaplin for the Chicago Bears, Cubs, and White Sox.

He has recently spoken at the national conventions of such companies as Xerox, AT&T, and Texaco. He also speaks for Nightingale-Conrad, the largest producer of motivational tapes in the world.

"Crouch's humorous and knowledgable approach to life appeals to all ages," the release says.

Everyone is invited to attend. A nursery will be provided.

A graduate of Texas Tech University, Ms. Carr entered the ministry in 1976, served as associate pastor at St. John's UMC, Lubbock, and as pastor at Cooper UMC, Woodrow UMC, and Christ UMC, Levelland, before moving to Crosbyton in June of 1988.

She has written for Upper Room Press, Friendship Press and has coauthored several books with Imogene Sorley for Abingdon Press, including "Bless This Mess and Other Prayers" and "The Intentional Family."

Before entering the ministry, she spent five years as a missionary in Rhodesia and more recently as an English professor at Texas Tech.

She calls her years in Rhodesia "exciting" and refers to the time as one of living "on the frontier of high adventure."

The mother of five and grandmother of four, Ms. Carr says, "I'm happier than I've ever been, luckier than I deserve to be, and am grateful for many things — like churches and kids and books and friends and sunrises and this great surprising world of wonders in which God caused us and calls us to live."

Twenty-three years ago, when the youngest of her five children entered first grade and after she had been married for 20 years, she was divorced.

"That's nobody's first choice of a lifestyle," she says. "But sometimes that's the way the cookie crumbles, and for us it was. The years following were good ones, though, with all of us discovering that single parent families are, indeed, still families, and that their corporate life can be a good one."

Bert Bostic, minister of music, has arranged special music for the preaching mission which includes St. Luke's many choirs. A nursery will be provided and a reception will be held following each evening service.

The public is invited to attend. The church is located at 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

First Baptist Church unveils 'Bible from 26 Translations'

DALLAS — After more than a quarter century of research and work, "The Bible From 26 Translations," in one volume, has been unveiled at First Baptist Church here and endorsed by its pastor, Dr. W. A. Criswell, for use in his Sunday School.

The concept for this unique Bible was created more than 25 years ago by Jack Hamm, Dallas artist, whose religious cartoons are seen on a nation-wide basis.

He compared various translations to the King James to gain insights from the Word that would enable him to communicate in his artwork the message of a passage in the most powerful way possible. Unable to find a multi-translation Bible, Hamm was inspired to initiate the work on this product.

Hamm stated at the unveiling of this one-volume edition, "This Bible could be the greatest religious publishing event of this century."

This one-volume condensation of the world's most popular Bible translations is expected to become the only Bible available that will appeal to Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths. This is accomplished by using the King James Version, Jerusalem and New American Bibles, plus the Knox translation and The Torah, along with other translations.

"The Bible From 26 Translations" contains every word of the King James Version in boldface type and every significant variation from 25 additional translations in lighter print line by line or verse by verse.

The first printing of the one-volume bonded leather edition will retail for $79.95. As a special introductory offer, churches and ministries may order eight or more Bibles at $39.95, plus $2. shipping and handling. A free Bible will be given with an order of 15 or more. These Bible are now available from the publisher. A second printing in hardback will be available soon.

For more information contact Dr. Byron E. Mathis, P.O. Box 621, Moss Point, Miss. 39563, or phone 1-601-475-1973.

Congregations of the conference have been invited to send a delegation to experience the Mission celebration and then be encouraged to have one of their own in their congregation.

Guest preacher will be the Rev. Paul Hoffman, Mission Developer, from Christ the Servant Lutheran Church in Allen.

Worship services will be at 8:30 and 11 a.m. Education classes begin at 9:45 a.m. Theme of adult classes will be "Mission Partners Program." The noon covered dish dinner will be followed by an afternoon Mission Hymn Festival and the "Mission Development" slide program.

Rather recalls viewing home video of JFK assassination

Rather

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather, then a young bureau chief for CBS News, recalled Friday the rush of emotion when he was one of the first outsiders to see a dramatic home movie of the Kennedy assassination.

"I was up and wanted to take the hinges off the door to tell somebody what I'd seen. I blew out of that office and ran down the stairs. I didn't wait for the elevator, and I went back to the station," the CBS-TV anchorman recalled at a news conference to discuss CBS News' Nov. 17 documentary marking the 25th anniversary of the John F. Kennedy assassination.

Rather learned shortly after the Nov. 22, 1963, shooting that Abraham Zapruder had it on film. Rather contacted the family, but they already had a lawyer.

The newsman said the only other person who showed up at the attorney's office two days after the assassination to try to buy rights to the film was from Life magazine.

The attorney, Rather recalled, "said we're going to show it to you once, no notes, then it's going up for bids."

Rather said network executives authorized him to offer up to $10,000. When he got back to the attorney, Rather said, the film had been sold.

"I grabbed him by the lapels and said, 'What do you mean, it's been sold?' " Life had paid $150,000.

Rather also recalled that Don Hewitt, now executive producer of "60 Minutes," had suggested, "grab the film, just grab it and run back to the studio and we'll put it on the air and let them sue..."

Later, Rather said, Hewitt said to forget his advice, and added, "and furthermore, don't you ever tell anybody I told you to do that."

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson and his actress-wife Robin Givens failed to reach a divorce agreement in a Las Vegas meeting, but a split of the couple's finances should be finalized this month, her lawyer said Friday.

The Tyson-Givens get-together Saturday prior to the Sugar Ray Leonard-Donny Lalonde fight was the last meeting the couple had before the divorce goes through, said attorney Raoul Lionel Felder.

"The next step now is the figures, which the lawyers will go over. It should be finished in a week to 10 days," he said.

The attorney denied a report that Givens asked the undefeated heavyweight for a reconciliation. They married in February, and Givens filed for divorce after eight months.

Givens will keep her pledge not to ask for any of Tyson's money, said Felder, who blamed the settlement delay on problems in figuring out how much in joint accounts belonged to each.

LIBERTY, Miss. (AP) — Several hundred people turned out to welcome country comedian Jerry Clower to his home town for a ceremony that was put off for 16 years.

"When I look out and see the faces of these people, I know I'm home," Clower said. "It all started here — and when they place me in the East Fork Cemetery and I go home to glory, it'll all end here."

Thursday's activities, which included a chicken dinner on the grounds and a special Clower performance at Southwest Mississippi Community College, was in sharp contrast to a derailed homecoming for Clower 16 years ago.

In 1972, a similar gala was canceled for fear Clower's support for public schools would threaten fund-raising efforts for a racially segregated private academy.

"That's all water under the bridge now," said Clower, who recently moved back to Liberty after 34 years in Yazoo City.

"Those days are over with, thank God," said Clower, who has been honored as the top country comic for nine consecutive years. Both black and white residents attended Thursday's celebration.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Comedian Dennis Miller, who says West Virginia is so backward it "makes Mayberry look like a think-tank," says his jokes about the state aren't personal.

"I went to see Burt Reynolds' film 'Cannonball Run 2' in West Virginia. At the end of the movie, everybody broke up into individual discussion groups," Miller says on his new album, "The Off-White Album."

The Pittsburgh native, a performer on "Saturday Night Live," said he didn't intend to upset West Virginians.

"It's not as deep or as vindictive as people would tend to think," Miller said this week. "I had a line about 'Mayberry think-tank" and I thought, 'Hey, West Virginia, why not?' referring to the television show about backwoods life.

Miller said he made frequent trips to West Virginia as a youth.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Kurt Russell says there's only one movie he ever wanted to make about baseball, his former career.

It was "Bull Durham," and someone else got the leading role.

"I agreed to do the movie and left town. When I came back, I found out Kevin Costner had been cast," Russell said in the December issue of Mademoiselle magazine.

"I wrote him telling him how good I thought he was," said Russell, 37. "But there were real pangs. I'll never have a chance to do a picture like that again. That was my life on the screen."

Russell played minor league ball until he was 22. At age 9, Russell successfully auditioned for a role in the movie, "Safe at Home" so he could meet Mickey Mantle.

"If you've lived the life of a player...then everything else in life is very tame. That's why I like the reckless abandon of acting," he said.

INDIANOLA, Miss. (AP) — Soviet visitors and their American hosts wasted little time bringing up the subject of food as they gathered for a meal at a traditional Southern home in this Mississippi Delta town.

The visitors were three chefs who are touring the United States cooking Soviet delicacies and learning about American foods.

"Ketchup," Louisiana chef John Folse told the three during Thursday's meal as he explained what had gone into a bowl of barbecue sauce. "It's a very good English word."

Folse, who attracted attention in June by serving blackened catfish to international dignitaries at the Reagan-Gorbachev Summit in Moscow, said the culinary exchange with the Soviet chefs was another step in opening relations between the two countries.

The tour also will include stops in Baton Rouge, New Orleans, New York, Atlanta and Los Angeles.

The Soviet chefs toured a catfish farm and the Delta Pride catfish processing plant in Indianola on Thursday.

50 year-old New York community center faces ills of '80s

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Two years ago, Nan Geist, a 34-year-old single mother of five, was working for a temporary service, trying to make ends meet while spending a lion's share of her income on day care for her three youngest children.

Things weren't going well — until a friend told her about the Crispus Attucks Community Association.

The association's day-care program accepted Geist's children at a reduced rate, and the employment center helped her find a better-paying job with benefits.

Without Crispus Attucks, Geist says, "I'd probably be working a job rather than trying to establish a career. I would be living, literally, day to day."

While the Crispus Attucks Community Association is best known as a recreation and community center, it is also a model for fighting poverty and improving city neighborhoods during times of government austerity and cutbacks in social programs.

The association's programs address the problems that keep people in the cycle of poverty and remove hope of progressing with the community.

Except for state subsidies for its day-care center and occasional grants for its housing rehabilitation program, the center does not rely on government money. Most of the $1.5 million budget comes from donations.

The association takes the approach that addressing the woes of urban neighborhoods begins with the neighborhood and its residents.

Founded in 1931 as a recreation center for blacks, Crispus Attucks is named for a black man who was killed March 5, 1770, by British soldiers in Boston. The massacre was among the factors that sparked the Revolutionary War.

Crispus Attucks remained a traditional community center through the 1970s, offering recreation, day care and some tutorial services. But by the end of the decade, housing in the city's southeast neighborhood was deteriorating, unemployment among blacks was high and there was a breakdown in the sense of community.

"Housing came out of the concern of the center about the direction our neighborhood was going," Simpson says. "We had to look at what could we do about it. Do we blame white folks? Do we blame city hall? Or do we look in the mirror?"

Crispus Attucks' initial attack on housing, while well intentioned, was a failure. The group lacked expertise for rehabilitation and was spending more money on "gut rehabs" — in which homes are gutted and rebuilt — than the projects would be worth when completed.

But the center learned from its mistake. In 1986, the Enterprise Foundation, a private foundation run by millionaire developer James Rouse, agreed to work with Crispus Attucks.

The Enterprise Foundation provides the center with technical assistance and training for its housing and employment services.

Housing is just one aspect of Crispus Attucks' assault on urban decay and poverty.

Two years ago, the center began an employment service.

"We've knocked a lot of doors down," Simpson says. "There were a lot of companies that wouldn't hire minorities. We've helped open those doors. And we tell our people, if the door's open, be ready."

In the past two years, the center has placed 382 people in entry-level jobs with opportunity for advancement. The Crispus Attucks' budget absorbs the $850-per-person cost to keep the service free to job-hunters and businesses.

The focus now is on keeping those people working and helping them advance. "We don't want a person to be flipping hamburgers for two, three, five years, or to be in maintenance," says Michael Jefferson, who runs the employment service. "We want that person to have the skills to move to the next level."

Day care at Crispus Attucks is more than the baby-sitting provided when the program was begun 13 years ago.

The center, which provides state-subsidized day care for 165 children, charges fees based on the parents' earnings. For some parents, that may mean a fee of as little as $5 to $10 a week. This year, the center will receive about $600,000 from the state toward the program.

The day-care program is also intended to prepare future generations to continue progressing.

Depending on the child's age, says Robert Hollis, who operates the day care program, children receive anywhere from between two to four hours of instruction each day. Lessons are geared to the child's development with the aid and blessing of the city school district and the child's parents.

Of the 35 children in city schools who attended preschool at Crispus Attucks, 17 made the honor roll in third, fourth and fifth grades, Hollis says. Seven made the distinguished honor roll.

"What we show parents and the children," he says, "is that the ability is there."

Grizzlies among world's most playful animals

PACK CREEK, Alaska (AP) — A husband and wife who study brown bears from a tree stand in the Alaska wilderness believe the huge carnivores are among a small group of intelligent animals that are playful all their lives.

Brown bears, or grizzlies, play games with each other and appear captivated by tree limbs, stumps, stones and tall grass. Their hijinks don't stop as they grow from cubs into adults, says Bob Fagen, an animal behavior specialist and associate professor of biometry at the University of Alaska.

"It looks like the brown bears of Pack Creek may be one of the rare species that play the same amount through all of their lives," Fagen said.

That puts them in the company of chimpanzees, lions, wolves and several domestic animals, those Fagen calls "a small select group of intelligent, social, cultural species.

"The bears stand out because they don't have a very cooperative relationship, like wolves."

Brown bears are reputed loners. At Pack Creek they chase each other, snap and trade growls. Sometimes the growling turns into fighting.

Fagen has spent four summers at Pack Creek, 30 miles south of Juneau on Admiralty Island, to observe about 30 bears that gather to catch spawning salmon. His wife, Johanna, a biologist, has spent three summers.

In July and August, the Fagens live in a tent on an island off the creek mouth with their 8-year-old son, Kevin, and a rotation of graduate students who help keep track of the bears. They monitor bears 12 to 15 hours a day from the tree stand, a tarp-covered platform about 15 feet above ground.

In addition to their studies of play, the Fagens monitor all the bears' movements and interactions with people.

The records help wildlife officials determine how bears are affected by the crowds of people who show up every summer to photograph them. Bears disturbed by clicking shutters, overflying aircraft or other activity show changes in their behavior.

"The most sensitive indicator we know is play," Fagen said. "Play tends to be inhibited by any kind of stressful or strange experience."

Though one researcher at Pack Creek thought the bears' play was inhibited when people were around, the Fagens say they have not found the same result.

Mrs. Fagen has watched cubs playing chasing games, and she saw an older bear lie on its back and roll a huge, rotted stump atop its upended paws. "They are very oriented to objects. They like to push and pull stones. They play-fight with a clump of grass or an overhanging branch."

The Fagens saw an adult male and female sliding down a patch of snow, apparently in fun, during the mating season.

Mrs. Fagen also suspects that bears indulge in pleasures humans might not recognize as such: rolling in dead fish, for instance. She said the bears seem to appreciate smell, being attracted to fish and gasoline and fond of rolling in a sawdust pile.

The Fagens hope their study of play will add to broader research into how bear behavior is molded.

"We want to look at the little ways and big ways that behavior is passed between generations, other than genetically," Fagen said.

The Fagens know that cubs tend to use their mothers' fishing territory even after they leave her side at 2 to 3 years of age. By tracking play and foraging patterns, they hope to find out if cubs also adopt their mother's fishing techniques and personality traits.

The studies at Pack Creek were pioneered in 1981 by Ken Post of the U.S. Forest Service. "After five more years here, we will be observing the daughters of the first bears (observed)," Fagen said.

This research, too, may help wildlife managers. The Fagens hope to find out if "problem bears," those that are aggressive to humans, learn the behavior from their mothers. If so, managers may be able to better predict bears' behavior and avoid confrontations between them and people.

Texan honored for volunteerism

San Antonioan on food stamps helps the needy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Morning sunlight filtered through trees into the rooms of shabby homes and government-subsidized apartment complexes in the city's west side as Juanita Valdez rifle sifted a bearded man in soiled, tattered clothing.

Ms. Valdez could only speak to the man in a hoarse whisper because the removal of a tumor from her throat has made speaking almost impossible. But she didn't need words — the pair of pants that she thrust at him was communication enough.

Ms. Valdez had noticed the man's torn pants as he sat in Inner City Development Inc.'s bright-green wood-frame headquarters on Chihuahua Street eating a free meal of mashed potatoes, beans and hot sauce. While the man ate his meal, she had walked out to the small metal trailer behind Inner City and sorted through piles of donated clothing to find him a better pair of pants.

"I always just have to guess at their sizes," she said.

Ms. Valdez, 36, is supporting five children on food stamps and Social Security benefits, and sometimes is too sick to leave the modest wood-frame home built for her by a San Antonio community project. Nevertheless, she often spends six days a week cooking meals for as many as 150 of the city's homeless and helping needy families fill out the necessary paperwork to receive food and clothing.

Juanita Valdez, 36, who supports five children on food stamps and Social Security benefits, often spends six days a week cooking for as many as 150 of San Antonio's homeless and helping needy families fill out the necessary paperwork to receive food and clothing.

IT WAS her dedication to the 20-year-old, nonprofit organization that prompted her fellow volunteers to nominate her for the 1988 JCPenney Golden Rule Award, which honors individuals for their volunteer efforts. Ms. Valdez was selected for the award from 3,600 nominees and was honored recently during ceremonies in Washington.

"Everybody was just tickled to death," said Inner City volunteer Pat Bone, 62. "A bunch of kids and supporters went out to the airport to meet her with a bunch of balloons."

Although Ms. Valdez met celebrities, such as actress Shari Belafonte Harper, who presented her with the award, and was interviewed by reporters, she maintained her laid-back style.

"At the airport in Dallas, she met with reporters and her slip fell down," said Mrs. Bone. "I said, 'Juanita, what did you do?' and she said, 'I just reached down and picked it up.'"

But Ms. Valdez's down-to-earth personality at times has gotten her into trouble. Her habit of bringing Inner City clients home with her has sometimes annoyed her children and boyfriend.

"I get into trouble because of that," she said with the help of an interpreter. "My boyfriend says, 'What's going on?' And my kids say, 'Mom, do you have to bring them home?' One time my son said, 'We're going to have to put up an apartment house.'"

ROD RADLE, a social worker who serves as director of Inner City with the help of his wife, Patty, said Ms. Valdez seemed the perfect choice as a nominee for the award.

"Juanita typifies that spirit of wanting to give back to society," he said.

Ms. Valdez, who often walks the few blocks from her home to Inner City, shops for groceries, cooks meals, counsels clients, sorts clothing and helps the needy fill out applications for assistance.

"I do everything from social work to cleaning the toilets," she said.

On a recent fall morning, she used hand signals and whispers to instruct volunteers on how much soap and food to give to a man in blue jeans and a gimme cap who had come in asking for assistance.

Ms. Valdez said she knows what it is like to be poor — she lived for 10 years in a nearby housing project, has depended on food stamps since her divorce to feed five of her seven children (two are grown) and dries her laundry from a clothesline in her back yard. To her, the needy people she counsels are not clients — they are her neighbors.

"IT'S A very proud community," she said. "My father never did ask for food stamps. We needed it so bad, but he wouldn't ask."

Within a mile of Ms. Valdez's home and the Inner City facility are 10,000 children, many of whom have parents who are unemployed, Inner City officials said.

Each summer, Ms. Valdez and other volunteers plan daylong recreational activities for the youngsters and during the school year offer an afternoon tutoring program in hopes of encouraging the kids to remain in school.

Ms. Valdez believes keeping children in school will help bring the neighborhood out of poverty.

"This neighborhood is like a cycle," she said. "Grandmothers are on welfare, mothers are on welfare and their kids go on welfare...Many of these people live under bridges and in torn-down houses."

During September, 125 families were assisted by Inner City, Ms. Valdez said, and each family had from two to 12 children.

BECAUSE THE organization is run strictly on donations, care must be given in the distribution of supplies, she said, so that those who receive no other assistance do not go hungry. A sign on the wall near the kitchen door bears the message: "This soup kitchen is for those who do not receive food stamps, SSI or other assistance."

Radle said Inner City staff members try to stretch dollars while at the same time providing healthy meals.

"You make do with what you've got," he said. "The first year we had to be real creative."

When the charity began and workers were struggling to get donations, he said, volunteers had to build meals with potted meat, cheese and a few vegetables.

Although Ms. Valdez said her children are proud that their mother won a national award for her work with the poor, her 14-year-old daughter, Maria, said a teacher suggested that her mother should have kept the $10,000 prize money instead of giving it to Inner City.

Maria, who often works with her mother at Inner City dishing up plates and helping to process clients, said the teacher asked if her mother would use the prize money to get her family out of poverty. When Maria told the teacher that the money went to Inner City, the teacher was exasperated. •

Piano tuner likens job to doing puzzle

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — George Stokes doesn't believe in wasted motion.

With one hand he moves quickly but efficiently down the keyboard of a piano, playing chords. His other hand moves simultaneously over the corresponding strings in the belly of the piano, tightening and loosening them with a tuning hammer.

Stokes is a speed tuner, a person who can tune a piano in less than an hour, or even 45 minutes when he has to, compared to the three or four hours some tuners require.

He is also blind.

Stokes, 43, of Owensboro, learned his skill as a student at the Kentucky School for the Blind in Louisville. Now he supplements his income as a snack bar manager by tuning pianos for the Owensboro Symphony Orchestra, among others.

"An instructor I had said once I got proficient at tuning, the only way to increase my speed was to decrease lost movement," Stokes says.

Some piano tuners use a device that shows whether a note is sharp or flat with electrical impulses on a screen. But Stokes thinks his way is more efficient.

"To me," he says, "it would be a lot of trouble. It's whatever you get used to."

He keeps tapping out the note on the keyboard while raising or lowering the pitch with his tuning hammer. Getting the sound just right takes only a moment or two.

"Tuning is sort of like putting a puzzle together," Stokes says.

Not being able to see doesn't mean his hearing is any keener than another's, Stokes says. He does have an advantage, though, because he isn't as distracted by his surroundings as a sighted person would be.

Stokes learned his craft as part of an industrial arts program in junior high. He was born with only partial vision because his optic nerves were not fully developed. He lost the remainder of his eyesight at 16.

By the time he was a sophomore in high school, he was tuning pianos professionally for a music company. He represented the company full-time for several years.

Stokes doesn't play the piano, but he does play the drums for a country-western dance band and can play some guitar.

Though a sharp ear is important on the job, it can be a bother when he's listening to music for fun.

"Even when an instrument is out of tune, you have to learn not to listen for that sort of thing," he says. "You have to learn to listen to the music for what it is."

Billy Bob's party to celebrate state winning SSC

FORT WORTH (AP) — Boots will be scooting again at Billy Bob's Texas as the huge honky-tonk is revived Thanksgiving weekend to celebrate the state winning the giant atom-smasher project.

The weekend party also could be a prelude to many more weekends of two-stepping, because a local group is attempting to reopen the 100,000-square-foot nightspot in the historic Fort Worth Stockyards.

The Fort Worth group, headed by city councilman Steve Murrin and former Southfork Ranch general manager Ken Brixey, is arranging credit to reopen Billy Bob's. The group said it hopes it will be able to announce during the Thanksgiving weekend that plans are complete.

"My interest in the Stockyards and Billy Bob's Texas is because of the heritage it represents," Brixey said. "The cowboy is the only true American image. And the place that you see this all-American hero is in Fort Worth and the Stockyards."

The Stockyards grew up around cattle drives and meat packaging plants and are now an national historical entertainment district featuring country and western nightclubs, shops and an indoor rodeo. Billy Bob's has been reopened in the past for other city festivals such as Pioneer Days.

Billy Bob's Texas was opened in 1981 and has featured performers such as Willie Nelson, Merle Haggard and Bob Hope. But the club's namesake and owner, Billy Bob Barnett, fell into financial difficulty and closed it on Jan. 7.

City officials have been debating ways to reopen the nightspot and several other adjacent Stockyards attractions. The nightclub is currently under control of Landmark Bank.

"We want to have something in the daytime too, to make it available to tourists around the world," said Brixey, saying daytime musical shows may be added as early as next summer.

The nightclub's name will remain the same, but it will be operated by LINK Management, Brixey said.

Brixey said the management company already is shopping for good bucking bulls.

"They had live bull riding and we plan to do that again," Brixey said. "We never had mechanical bulls."

Airman: Court martial punishment for 'whistleblowing'

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Navy airman who said he was court-martialed for being a "whistleblower" has been ordered to begin a 30-day sentence imposed by a military court.

Bryan Sims, the airman, said he has audio tapes and other evidence that will prove he was court-martialed last month in an attempt to punish him for allegations he made against the Navy.

Three Navy-related agencies are investigating Sims' allegations that untested parts from a wrecked helicopter were installed in working rescue helicopters at Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi in 1986. Sims, a helicopter mechanic, said he refused a superior's orders to install the parts, but that they were installed by others at the base.

As Sims entered confinement Thursday, his family asserted that the Navy was reneging on earlier promises to delay the sentence until three independent agencies completed an investigation of his allegations.

Navy officials deny that parts were reused without being tested.

A spokesman for NAS said Sims was court-martialed on unrelated charges.

The start of confinement, said Lt. Robert Stephenson, public affairs officer for NAS, "has absolutely no bearing into the allegations regarding helicopter parts. We see them as totally unrelated."

At the Oct. 28 court martial, a military jury found Sims guilty of disobeying a command, making false statements to supervisors and losing gear. He was fined $200, reduced one grade in rank and ordered to serve 30 days in what the Navy calls its discipline barracks.

Stephenson said base commander Capt. C.L. Reynolds completed a standard review of court-martial proceedings and found no irregularities.

Lt. Harold Register, legal adviser to Reynolds, said Sims had 10 days to submit any new evidence, and did not.

But the airman's wife, Debbie Sims, said the family was told by a Navy prosecutor that they would not have to submit that documentation.

23 lawmakers agree to sponsor 'official language' legislation

AUSTIN (AP) — Twenty-three of Texas' 181 lawmakers have agreed to sponsor legislation making English the official language of Texas, the founder of the American Ethnic Coalition said Friday.

Zaeske

Founder and chairman Lou Zaeske also said he would run as a Republican for the state Senate in 1990 for the seat held by Democrat Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

Zaeske said at least 70 percent of the senatorial district supports "Official English," but Caperton "refuses to even support, yet alone sponsor, Official English legislation."

Caperton said it is a little early to be planning for 1990, and he has not decided whether he will seek re-election or, perhaps, run for another office.

But he said, "I agree with President (-elect) Bush that official English is ill-advised and should not be part of our Constitution or our law."

Zaeske at a news conference called attention to three states — Florida, Colorado and Arizona — voting in the recent general election to establish English as their official language.

"We are happy about the three victories...we're disappointed Texas couldn't be the 17th state" to do so, he said. "Had our Legislature in its infinite wisdom — and I use that term advisedly — if they had just let the people speak to the issue in Texas, it would have passed overwhelmingly," Zaeske said.

He said the American Ethnic Coalition had identified 51 legislators who promised they would sponsor, or co-sponsor, legislation making English the official language of Texas, if they were elected. Of that total, 23 were elected to the Legislature and four to Congress, he said.

"We feel we have a pretty good base to work from there."

According to Zaeske, the coalition would work in the 1989 Legislature to:

— Repeal a law that provides lower tuition rates for Mexican students attending public colleges in Texas.

"We really can't understand why the citizens of this state should be required to underwrite foreigners going to school here, when many of the children of citizens of this state are unable to go to college here because of not being able to pay the tuition," Zaeske said.

"For the state to provide services like that to one ethnic group in this country is discriminatory in and of itself."

— Allow public schools to discard bilingual education.

— Require foreign instructors at Texas public colleges to pass an English proficiency exam before being allowed to teach.

— Stop all state agencies from engaging in bilingual governmental operations except in unusual emergencies.

— Ask Attorney General Jim Mattox to issue an opinion on the constitutionality of the state "engaging in bilingual operation."

— Repeal a law that requires the Texas Employment Commission to print its forms in English and Spanish.

— Require the state comptroller to report "on the current extent of government bilingualism in Texas and its cost to the state, agency by agency."

Nearly half of B-1Bs inspected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force had completed safety inspections of nearly half of its B-1B bombers by late Friday in the effort to return the grounded fleet to flight status in the wake of a crash in Texas.

Two days after the fleet was grounded following Tuesday's crash near Abilene, 48 of the 98 long-range bombers had passed the mandatory inspections, said Capt. Julie Holland, a spokeswoman for the Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb.

The check-ups, which require about three hours per plane, were going smoothly, she added.

The bombers were grounded Wednesday, one day after a B-1B crashed and burned near Dyess Air Force Base. The crew of four managed to eject safely.

The plane was the second B-1B to be lost in 14 months.

There has been no official comment on the cause of Tuesday's accident, although witnesses reported seeing fire around the plane's left two engines before the crash. The grounding order specified a mandatory inspection of electric, fuel and hydraulic fluid lines.

SAC, which is responsible for land-based nuclear bomber and missile forces, has described the grounding and inspection order as a "normal precaution" in the wake of a major accident.

The bombers have been deployed at Dyess; Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D.; Grand Forks Air Force Base, N.D., and McConnell Air Force Base, Kan.

Rallies in Poland mark anniversary of independence

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — More than 20,000 Poles chanting "Solidarity!" and "Independence!" poured into the streets of Warsaw on Friday after an evening Mass marking the 70th anniversary of the rebirth of the Polish state.

Marches and rallies also were held in at least four other cities: Krakow, Wroclaw, Lublin and Poznan.

In Poznan, police battled about 4,000 demonstrators and arrested scores of people, according to a Solidarity activist, but no violence was reported at the other marches.

Opposition spokesmen said that in both Wroclaw and Krakow an estimated 10,000 people participated in rallies. "Police were absolutely invisible" during the Krakow demonstration as thousands of people marched to the Old Market from Wawel Castle, said opposition activist Zygmunt Lenyk.

Worshipers left St. John's Cathedral in the Warsaw's Old Town area and marched down a historic street, past the restored Royal Castle, to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Led by Boy Scouts carrying lighted torches in the freezing evening temperatures, they carried banners bearing the names of various illegal opposition groups: Solidarity, Confederation for Independent Poland, the Independent Students' Association, the Polish Socialist Party and Fighting Solidarity.

At the Mass, Warsaw Bishop Wladyslaw Miziolek told worshipers, "The independence of Poland is the concern of every generation."

The demonstration followed a day of gala celebrations sponsored by Polish authorities, including a rare televised Mass and legions of goose-stepping soldiers on Victory Square.

It was the most elaborate celebration ever under communist authorities to mark the 1918 creation of the capitalist, anti-Soviet republic in Poland between the two world wars. It was the first time such lavish attention has been paid to Poland's interwar leader, Marshal Josef Pilsudski.

On Nov. 11, 1918, a civil council in Warsaw turned over military power to Pilsudski, who had just been released from a German prison. He proclaimed an independent Polish state and disarmed the remaining German troops in the capital.

The re-establishment of Poland after 123 years of being partitioned between Prussia, Austria and Russia fulfilled the dream of generations of patriots.

A Roman Catholic "Mass for the Fatherland" celebrated by the country's chief military chaplain was televised Friday, one of the few such services ever shown on state-run TV outside of Christmas and papal visits.

The celebrations sharply contrasted with treatment of the anniversary in the past. Private groups who tried to organize marches on the date every year after 1974 faced sharp repressions.

There was no police interference in the Warsaw march. Last year, police allowed only a few of about 5,000 marchers to reach the tomb. The rest were dispersed by baton-swinging officers.

In the western city of Poznan, a battle erupted between riot police and about 4,000 demonstrators, said Alexandra Bessert, a Solidarity activist. She said battle lasted about two hours and described police as "unusually aggressive and brutal."

Ms. Bessert said scores of people were detained.

The officer on duty at city police headquarters denied there was any police action. "Poznan is a very peaceful city," he said, before hanging up.

In Wroclaw, Josef Pinior, a leader of the banned Polish Socialist Party, said marchers walked to a street-car depot where the local Solidarity chapter began in 1980, carrying signs saying, "We want free elections" and "Reform through democracy."

He said the crowd started with 3,000 people and grew to 10,000.

In Lublin, in southeastern Poland, Bishop Boleslaw Pylak celebrated Mass and Ryszard Bender, a parliament deputy who has called for making Nov. 11 a national holiday, addressed a rally on the city's main square, Bender said by phone.

Official attitudes toward the anniversary have softened since the 1981 declaration of martial law, with the military government embracing popular patriotic symbols and urging unity in the name of the "Ojczyzna" or "Fatherland."

On the broad expanse of Victory Square, Polish Communist Party leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, wearing his army uniform and accompanied by Prime Minister Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, presided at hourlong official ceremonies.

Honor guards representing various branches and divisions of the military paid homage to the nation, and ambassadors to Poland laid wreathes at the unknown soldier's tomb, which was guarded by soldiers in uniforms from different epochs of Polish history.

Search ended for tanker crew

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — Canadian rescuers called off their search Friday for the 27 crewmen missing from a Liberian oil tanker that broke in half in stormy weather in the north Atlantic.

The search officially ended as of 1:30 p.m. EST, said John Hughes of the Canadian Search and Rescue Coordination Center.

The 65,700-ton Odyssey, with 27 Greek and Honduran crew members aboard, burst into flames after it broke Thursday and sank about 700 miles east-northeast of Newfoundland and 1,200 miles west of England.

Hughes said the Canadian military aircraft that flew over the area Friday morning saw an oil slick about 30 miles by 10 miles. He said the plane was able to relocate the site of the disaster but the ship's bow was "just barely afloat" and there was no hope of survivors.

The Odyssey was carrying crude oil to the refinery at Come by Chance, Newfoundland. It was operated by Polembros Shipping Ltd. of London.

A Soviet weather ship that had been aiding the search remained in the area but it was expected to leave later Friday.

"Based on information we have gleaned from the Russian ship and the aircraft, the conclusion is there's no chance of survivors," said Maj. Bill MacMillan, spokesman for the Search and Rescue Coordination Center.

Coping with diabetes, arthritis can be difficult

By Sharon Williams
Copley News Service

During the golden years, many seniors can finally afford things they put off buying earlier, such as recreational vehicles, home improvements or even airline tickets to exotic destinations.

Yet, many long for the one thing that can't be purchased — freedom from health concerns such as diabetes, arthritis or hearing loss.

Health professionals agree there's no simple cure for many of the common ailments seniors experience.

But, whether it's learning to live with a hearing aid or remembering to take a doctor's prescription every other day, many seniors are finding it easier to cope, thanks to advances in medical treatments and technology.

Diabetes, a physical condition characterized by inappropriate levels of blood sugar and insulin, is a common concern among seniors.

Type I diabetics — about 5 to 10 percent of all diabetics — are insulin-dependent. But 95 percent of the diabetic population falls into the Type II category. These people produce insulin, but either the quantity is not sufficient, or their bodies do not use it properly.

The likelihood of developing Type II diabetes increases with age. About 85 percent of people with Type II diabetes are 45 years of age or older.

Experts agree the best safeguard against long-term complications of diabetes is a controlled lifestyle. Control can be achieved by creating a careful balance among:

Medication: All people with Type I diabetes take insulin, and some people with Type II diabetes also are given insulin to help control the disease. In addition, about 35 percent of patients with diabetes take another type of medication, usually one that helps lower glucose levels in blood.

Diet: People with Type I and II diabetes rely on diet therapy to control their disease. The nutrition goal for diabetics is to avoid blood sugar highs and lows.

Exercise: The benefits of regular exercise to diabetics include a decreased chance of developing heart and blood vessel problems; improved circulation, especially to extremities; and lower blood pressure.

Self blood glucose monitoring: The most convenient, accurate means of maintaining control of blood sugar levels is with regular glucose monitoring. Test strips, monitors and meters make self blood glucose monitoring a quick and easy test that can be done just about anywhere.

Arthritis is a lot more than a few aches and pains. The term "arthritis" is used to refer to at least 100 different rheumatic diseases.

Some people believe arthritis is a disease that afflicts only the aged. In reality people of all ages become victims of the disease. No age group is spared. However, of people over 60 years of age, 97 percent have enough arthritis to be detected in X-ray examinations.

There are many treatments available for those suffering from arthritis, depending on the individual need of the patient. Pain and the crippling effects of the disease can be controlled, and arthritics can live productive and happy lives.

Treatment often involves exercise, heat, physical therapy, and, maybe, a change in lifestyle. Medication is sometimes necessary. Many cases may call for the use of splints, walking aids and braces. Although surgery is considered a last resort, severe cases may require reconstructive surgery.

Besides family physicians, there are other experts can help those suffering from arthritis. For instance, rheumatologists focus on disorders that cause pain and inflammation in the bones, muscles and joints.

Hearing impairment is a serious problem among seniors, with approximately 28 percent of those over 65 suffering from some degree of hearing loss, according to the American Academy of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery Subcommittee on Hearing.

The best way for seniors to cope with hearing loss is to establish a hearing conservation and preservation program. The academy recommends seniors use the following tips as part of a regular health regimen:

Have regular ear examinations and hearing tests along with regular physical examinations.

If there is any change in hearing, see an ear, nose and throat specialist immediately.

Avoid excessive salt and products containing nicotine or caffeine.

Avoid exposure to excessively loud or prolonged noise.

Watch people as they speak. This gives extra clues for understanding speech.

Although there is no cure for most hearing loss, the academy suggests people obtain hearing aids, which will restore much of their hearing and, most importantly, help them continue communicating. There are a variety of assistive devices available which can make life more comfortable.

Today's hearing aids can be as small as a nickel, are individually molded to fit inside the wearer's ear and are flesh-colored — making them almost invisible to the eye.

Many seniors have a collection of medicines to rival their neighborhood drugstore.

To get the best results from all those prescriptions, Linda Esposito, a pharmacist with Walgreen's, a nationwide drug store, suggests seniors:

Know the name of medications and what each is used for.

Be ready for emergencies by carrying a prescription list in a wallet or purse.

Ask questions about medicines and their side effects.

Follow directions and drink lots of water while taking medications.

Pay attention to possible side effects, especially when taking new medicine.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

By Van Pearcy

It's important to consider our current position in life when making investment decisions.

Age is one of those factors which strongly influence investment decisions. Have you ever noticed, the older we get the more conservative we become? We like to think of it as just being smarter. It is smarter, or has our position in life changed?

As we grow older, we become aware that a serious investment error could jeopardize the savings we've worked years to accumulate. The closer we get to retirement, the fewer years we have to rebuild our reserves. Thus, we become more conservative in our investment approach. Our position is a safe one aimed at preserving what we have.

In our youth, many of us might have said, "shoot the works," because we realized if we lost, we'd have more years ahead to rebuild - certainly, this is not to be criticized. In our free enterprise economy, we must have those who are willing to take a calculated risk in hope of growth. Without this pioneer spirit, advanced thinking could never be reality. The point is, our age bears strongly on how much risk we're willing to accept.

A strong consideration in our investment approach should be family responsibilities. A young person starting out in life with the responsibility of one or more children must consider that responsibility. Maximum necessary protection for the fewest dollars should supercede any forced savings whereby family protection is reduced.

It's wise to set funds aside for emergency use. These funds should be ones that can easily reached without penalty or loss.

Our financial needs are always changing and how we address them at a particular time will depend on our position in life.

Midland YMCA's offer a wide variety of classes, activities for older adults

By JILL HANCOCK
Advertising Feature Writer

During the past few years, The Midland YMCA's have started various exercise classes and activities for the "prime time" adult who is 55 years and older. According to Gennie McCartney, marketing director, the YMCA began to meet the needs of a generation of adults who were wanting to exercise but needed classes to be designed that would fit their health and social requirements. The YMCA offers many classes for active older adults at four convenient locations throughout Midland. A highly trained and certified staff is responsible for the delivery of each program.

Traveling is sometimes difficult for an older adult who doesn't like to make travel arrangements or to travel alone. Betty Child is the senior service director and she oversees all senior Y activities, one which includes a Travel Club.

"The Silver Wings Travel Club takes the worry out of traveling because all of the arrangements and activities are very well planned and the only thing a person has to do is show up," explained Child. "We have seen that many 'prime time' adults aren't able to take short trips due to the hassles of making hotel accommodations or because of the driving."

The Travel Club has been to Ruidosa where they attended the horse races and stayed for four days. They have also been to Palo Duro Canyon where they went to the museum, shopped and attended a play. According to Child, there are plans in the works for a trip to Las Vegas and Hawaii. The club also meets for lunch once a month and the cost is $10 per year.

The various YMCA's have many exercise classes that are targeted for older, active adults that include water aerobics, low impact aerobics, and an arthritis class. These classes are fun, positive and afford participants a special time to feel good and visit with new friends.

Many of the participants in the Arthritis class are women who suffer from osteoporosis, other have had falls and were informed of this class by their doctors. According to Debbie Erdwurm, the Metropolitan acquatic director, "This class is run in conjunction with the Arthritis Foundation and fits the needs of a person who suffers from arthritis. The water in the pool is warmer because cold water would really affect an arthritis suffer. We also have a chair lift to aid adults while getting in and out of the water."

Irma Celine started this class when it began last February. She had been told by a doctor to get ready for a wheelchair because of curved spine that she had suffered from since childhood and osteoporosis. That was two years ago and although Ms. Celine could get around, she suffered a great deal of pain.

"I can really tell a difference in how I get around in a lot less pain since I started attending this class. If I miss just one class, I immediately notice that I don't get around as well," explained Ms. Celine.

After a fall which hurt her knees and shoulder, Jeannette Clyde began this class after hearing about it through the Red Cross. Since she is not able to take any pain medication, she has found that the arthritis class has really made a difference for her.

"I was able to get around without a walker or cane after I had been in this class for three weeks. I enjoy the fellowship and new friends that I have made in this class. I even have three or friends from the Senior Citizen Center that are now coming to this class with me," stated Ms. Clyde.

Another factor that Ms. Clyde wanted me to know was that she has lost 20 pounds since beginning the class in July. And she isn't the only one. Thelma Gardner who says she has suffers from any type of "itis" has lost 15 pounds.

Roni Perry who is the YMCA fitness director and teaches water aerobics said that the reason for the weight loss is because many adults aren't able to exercise out of the water. "Water aerobics allows a person that has a bad back or knee to exercise, and due to these physical limitations they may have not been able to exercise. Water aerobics gives them the opportunity to be active and many will begin to lose weight," Perry explained. In keeping up with older adults who attend exercise classes, music from the big band era is played during the class.

For an adult who has had a heart attack, open heart surgery or heart disease, YMCA Cardiac Care Therapy (YCT) is a class which consists of exercises that focus on improving cardiovascular fitness. "Exercises are done on a class basis, buy each participant training guideline are different," said Judy Reuter, fitness program director. A referral by a physician is necessary before beginning this class and Reuter pointed out that it is supervised by volunteer paramedics.

The Midland YMCA's have other classes and activities that are offered for 'prime time' adults:

■ Y's Way to a Healthy Back–The National YMCA developed this program which combines relaxation, stretching and strengthening exercises to relieve back pain. This program is progressive, and class size is limited to allow the instructor to closely monitor class participants.

■ Specialized Strength Training–Strength and flexibility programs are designed to aid in injury or surgical rehabilitation. Programs can be set up to have each session individually supervised. Physician referral is required.

■ Water Rehab Therapy–This class is done in conjunction with doctors' orders. Rehab Therapy is a very specialized class with one on one attention. Rehab therapy has been used for participants who have had strokes, hip replacements, back surgery, car accidents or any problem that needs supervised therapy for rehabilitation.

■ Adopt a Grandparent program matches children in the YMCA child care program with residents of Midland retirement homes. Once a month participants get together for a visit to the duck pond in the park or for a snowcone. This program is wonderful for both the children and grandparents who are involved.

All programs are carefully supervised by certified instructors and information on these programs can be obtained by calling any of the following YMCA's: Central YMCA, 682-2551; Alamo YMCA, 694-2528; Northeast YMCA, 682-8469; Town West YMCA, 694-6821.

These arthritis sufferers have been greatly helped by attending an arthritis aerobic class that meets three times a week at the Alamo YMCA. Not only does this class help their arthritis, they also enjoy the fellowship with other class members.

Simple steps to prevent falls

Older persons who fall and end up in the hospital are at high risk of losing their present health status. Treatment processes are often lengthly and involve orthopedic sugery and extended rehabilitation. Since most falls occur at home, taking these simple steps will help you to prevent them from happening.

■ See that hallways and stairs are well lighted. Have light switches installed at the top and bottom of stairs.

■ Keep all stairways and walkways free of obstacles and in good repair. Use handrails on both sides of stairs.

■ Arrange furniture so that you can move easily about your home.

■ Use night lights. Don't try to find your way in the dark.

■ Keep electrical and telephone cords safely out of the way.

■ Remove scatter rugs.

Easterners claim 'spiked' snake blood can cure variety of ills

By HARI S. MANIAM

BIDOR, Malaysia (AP) — It's snake blood, not snake oil, but the Bidor Snake Shop says it cures the same aches, arthritis, asthma, acne and mysterious maladies of a sexual nature.

The proprietor, Loi Chee Long, sells the blood of cobras and other poisonous snakes to those who find his shop in this jungle town 90 miles north of Kuala Lumpur and can pay the fee of up to $120.

Customers buy the snake, then Loi kills it and drains the blood, mixing it with brandy for taste and wallop.

Most of his customers are from Malaysia and Singapore, but some tourists drop in from Korea, Japan, Taiwan and Hong Kong and there is the occasional Western curiosity-seeker.

"The white man comes, but I think it is all too disgusting to him," said Loi, 27. "He inquires about the whole thing with great enthusiasm, but when we ask him to have a drink he says 'Not for me, thanks.' "

As he spoke, Loi had a firm grip on the neck of a cobra longer than he was. Loi is about 5 ft. tall and the reptile's tail thrashed the ground.

The commotion continued while he explained calmly that people drink snake blood because it can cure "rheumatism, body aches and skin diseases, improve the eyesight and increase your sexual prowess, among other things."

He said a snake's venom is in its mouth and the blood contains no poison.

Loi explained the procedure like a surgeon conducting class:

"I hold the snake by the neck, find the main blood vessels on the underside, slit them with a sharp knife and gather the blood in the glass.

"Pieces of the snake's gallbladder are thrown in and an equal amount of brandy is added. The brandy is to give the whole thing a kick as you drink it. Beer and stout won't give that.

"This drinking cobra blood is nothing new. The Chinese have been doing it for years."

With his free hand, he plucked a snake from another cage.

"Am I scared?" he said. "No. I have been catching snakes since I left school at the age of 16.

"At first I used to creep quietly behind the snake, hold its head with a stick and grab it by the neck and dump it into a cage. Now I just grab it by the neck. After so many years, it would be amateurish to use the stick."

He has never been bitten, Loi said, because he is a professional snake catcher whose rule is: "Your hand grabbing the neck has to be quicker than the cobra's head to bite you."

"We catch only poisonous snakes like the cobra, black cobra, king cobra and pit vipers because only their blood will have the proper effect."

About 30 to 50 people come to the shop for blood every month, which Loi said was healthy traffic considering the price.

Prince, Mitterrand review parade for Armistice Day

PARIS (AP) — Welsh Guards in bearskin caps and American "doughboys' in vintage uniforms marched past Prince Charles and President Francois Mitterrand on Friday in ceremonies marking the 70th anniversary of the end of World War I.

Thousands of people lined the Champs Elysees under sunny skies during the Armistice Day parade. Soldiers dressed in World War I uniforms and modern French military units took part.

Princess Diana, dressed in a black coat and veiled hat, stood near her husband as bells rang out at the precise moment they sounded on Nov. 11, 1918, announcing the surrender of Germany.

The Armistice Day parade came on the last day of the British royal couple's five-day visit to Paris. They also attended a ceremony at Notre Dame Cathedral honoring British killed during World War I.

Mitterrand planned to visit the Armistice monument at Rethondes, 50 miles north of Paris, where French presidents pay homage every 10 years to countrymen killed in both world wars.

The last president to make the Armistice pilgrimage to Rethondes was Valery Giscard d'Estaing in 1978.

Rethondes is where France surrendered to Hitler in 1940, beginning four years of Nazi occupation.

More than 10 million people died in World War I, one of the bloodiest wars in history. The Treaty of Versailles and other treaties that ended the war radically changed the face of Europe and the Middle East.

In Belgium, the Duke of Kent and several British World War I veterans attended an Armistice Day ceremony at the Menen Gate in Ieper.

The arch, which straddles a road leading to the nearby town of Menen, bears the names of nearly 55,000 British soldiers who fell in the trenches of Flanders but whose remains have never been found.

Princess Diana

Buglers from the Ieper fire brigade played "Taps" to honor those who fell.

The Duke also attended services at Ieper's Anglican Church and at the town's cathedral before visiting some of the many thousands of war graves that dot the Flemish countryside.

The ceremonies were attended by several British World War I veterans, now in their nineties.

The area around Ieper saw some of the fiercest fighting of the war, culminating in the battle of Passchendaele on a muddy ridge eight miles away.

The area around this West Belgian town still lives with the legacy of the war. The Belgian army uses a special bomb squad that regularly retrieves explosive devices left from the war, including unexploded cannisters containing poison gas.

Last week, the squad found 156 German mustard gas shells at Schoonaarde, 40 miles east of Ieper. The shells were discovered by a contractor who was leveling a building site.

Army seals off West Bank, Gaza Strip

JERUSALEM (AP) — Hundreds of troops poured into Jerusalem's walled Old City Friday and the army sealed off the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to prevent violence linked to the expected proclamation of a Palestinian state.

Soldiers detained hundreds of Palestinians in anticipation of anti-occupation riots during the four-day meeting of the Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament-in-exile.

The council is expected to declare an independent Palestinian state during its meeting, which begins Saturday in Algiers.

In the Gaza Strip, troops shot and wounded three Arab protesters with plastic bullets, hospital officials said. There was no immediate comment from the army.

Israel television said two boys, aged 12 and 15, were shot and wounded by live ammunition in A-Tur, an Arab area in East Jerusalem.

It was not immediately clear who fired at them, and police were investigating whether they were shot by a civilian responding to a stoning attack on a car, the television said.

Hundreds of soldiers dressed in combat gear and armed with assault weapons streamed into Jerusalem's Old City, which has a large Arab population. Many carried backpacks and bedding, apparently to set up temporary camps inside the ancient walls.

The army announced the entire Gaza Strip was closed at 9 p.m. and placed an indefinite curfew on the coastal area's 650,000 Arab residents. Journalists are from entering Gaza without an army escort.

The actions did not affect Gaza's 6,000 Jewish settlers.

Troops also barred West Bank Palestinians from entering Jerusalem, erecting roadblocks at all entry points to the city. Army officials said the West Bank's 850,000 Palestinians were confined to their own districts.

The army put up three checkpoints on the Bethlehem-Jerusalem highway, turning away Jerusalem-bound cars with blue West Bank license plates.

In an unusual move, troops also questioned drivers of yellow-plated Israeli cars and in one instance ordered an Arab laborer riding in a car with his Israeli employer to stay behind.

An army spokesman said journalists were free to enter the West Bank, but state-run Israeli radio reported Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin was considering banning media from the area.

A number of journalists were turned back Friday from the West Bank cities of Ramallah and Nablus.

At checkpoints outside Ramallah, troops barred residents from leaving for Jerusalem and soldiers checked identity cards. Graffiti sprayed on walls read: "Yes to the PNC" and "Yes to the independent state."

Arab reports said the army disconnected the loudspeakers of seven Gaza mosques to prevent Moslem preachers from reaching worshipers during noon prayers.

Throughout the occupied areas, hundreds of Palestinian activists were rounded up overnight, Arab reports said.

An army official said only that Israel has "ongoing initiatives to round up troublemakers," but would not elaborate.

A group of Jewish settlers in the West Bank declared stones a murder weapon and called on settlers to shoot stone-throwing Palestinians, Israel radio reported.

A settler opened fire Friday on Palestinians who stoned a bus he was traveling in near the Jelazoun refugee camp, the radio said. No one was injured.

The army said it was looking for the settler and would take action against him for violating laws that allow civilians to fire only in self-defense.

A spokesman for PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, Bassam Abu Sharif, said a declaration of independence for the West Bank and Gaza Strip would be a key legal move in transforming the territories into Palestine.

Israeli officials say such a declaration would incite more violence in the occupied territories.

Unclaimed victims buried year after subway fire

LONDON (AP) — Two victims of Britain's worst subway fire — one unidentified and the other unclaimed — were buried in the same grave on Friday, nearly a year after they died.

The single headstone at St. Pancras Cemetery says they died in "the terrible fire."

The men were buried a day after an official report blamed management complacency and lax safety measures for the Nov. 18 blaze that killed 31 people in the King's Cross subway station.

The fire was found to have been caused by a lighted match dropped on a wooden escalator.

Gerald Isaaman, chairman of the King's Cross Disaster Fund, said the fund's trustees "decided to bury them on Armistice Day — a day of remembrance." Armistice Day commemorates the end of World War I.

"It is sad to think that two people can die and never be missed in our community," said Canon Douglas Bean, vicar of St. Pancras Church, who conducted the funeral service. "It is a reflection of city life in the age in which we live."

One man is still known only as "115" — the registration number his body was given at the hospital. Police couldn't identify him, even after checking 5.5 million fingerprints and circulating photos of an expert reconstruction of his face.

The other victim was identified as Ralph Humberstone by a former employer, but no family or friends were traced.

"We felt that they ought to receive a proper, decent burial, and that they should be remembered," said Douglas Platts, manager of the disaster fund. "We chose a single grave because they were two lonely souls who died together and therefore we thought it appropriate they should be buried together."

The 13 mourners included the mayor and former mayor of Camden, the borough which includes King's Cross, members of the trust fund and Aileen Walker-Smith, director of the King's Cross Support Group which has been helping families and survivors.

A 250-page report, based on an inquiry that went on 91 days, was released Thursday and prompted the resignation of the subways' two top managers.
