WICHITA BATTERY HANGS UP NEW RECORD

Build Home to Save

HERE'S ONE FOR $3000 THAT WILL SURPRISE Y O U

Now Is Ideal Time to Put Money in Real Estate

BY HOME BUILDER

After we once begin thinking of homes, and looking for plans, we find any number of attractive styles and convenient arrangements of rooms. But Record News plan number three, printed today, blends the economical and attractive features that the home builder of moderate income and means desires.

It can be built for $3,000. By exercising strict economy on electrical and plumbing fixtures, it could be erected for $2,500, and by using more expensive fittings, the cost might be brought up to $3,500, but for the average family, it could be finished very attractively for $3,000.

There are two plans submitted with this photograph. One of them includes a sleeping porch in addition to the five rooms, and this would probably bring the cost up about $200, as there is considerable more room in this plan.

The house has five rooms, large enough for the ordinary family, and small enough to be convenient for the housewife. It is built on the popular bungalow lines. It looks home-like. The rooms are conveniently arranged, and best of all, it combines with these features, economy of cost.

Any house built on square lines is more economical of construction. The advantage of this house is that the overhanging porch, slope of the roof, and break in the front arch of the house break the economical lines and lend it a distinction not always found in the small home.

In short it is a home. It is planned to live in. And it is finished in such a way that any family might be proud to call it home.

Now we have been discussing, for the past two days, methods of financing the small home. We have found that it is within the means of every family to own its own home, and that the only reason anyone need rent, now, is that it cares to do so. Everything is provided but the desire. You must provide that yourself.

You have probably heard a great deal about the "expense" of owning your own home. Let us discuss this today.

You have probably heard considerable comment here about high taxes, insurance rates, and depreciation. These things are facts in some instances. They are contributory reasons for high rents.

But they do not apply to the new home owner. Let me point out why.

First, from the standpoint of depreciation. Many homes were built here when the city was undergoing a phenominal growth. Wichita Falls became a city almost overnight. People had to have some place in which to live, and the construction of homes was rushed, regardless of cost, at a time when prices of both material and labor were at their highest. As a result, many houses were built at that time, at a cost much greater than building costs today. Consequently, when that man who built a house for $5,000 a few years ago, finds he could build it today for $3,000 he counts on a huge depreciation cost. It is only natural that he should. He must.

But that condition is now a thing of the past.

Building materials today are at rock bottom prices again. Labor costs are as low as they are apt to be in years. This huge depreciation, the main item in the argument against construction, is gone.

And when this is gone, an insurance and tax rate, based on the actual value of the house, will not be found prhibitive. Wichita Falls has a competent fire department, and for this reason, the fire insurance here compares favorably with that of any city in this section, for its size. Where then, have these arguments gone?

Now, after having taken up the arguments against home owning, let us take up the arguments for it.

Setting aside, for the moment, the greatest consideration of all, the satisfaction and independence of the home owner, let us take it up from an investment standpoint.

In the first place, he man who builds a home builds it from the money he saves, which his neighbor spends on odds and ends, for which he has nothing to show, and from the money he saves in rent. That, I believe, has been clearly brought out in the preceding articles. In other words, Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith, both receive the same salary and both live in the same block. Their families are of the same size, and their living expenses are about the same.

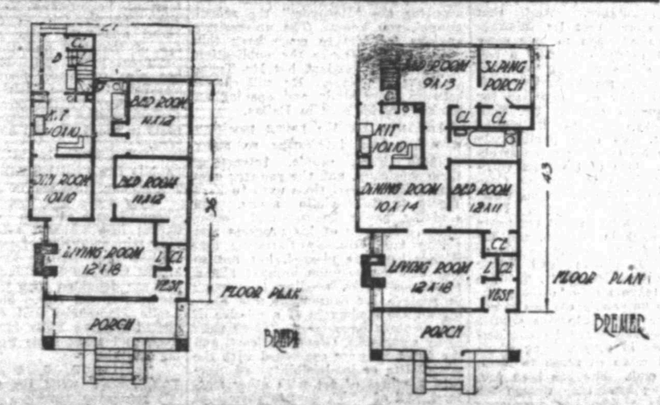

Jones decides to own his own home. Smith thinks he can't afford it. This isn't the old, re-told story of the ant and the grasshopper, although that fable would apply very well. Smith does not waste all his time and money. It simply has never been brought forcibly to his attention that he can own his own home; that he is in a position to do it, and that the money he spends on rent will do it, if he will just give it a chance.

Jones, on the other hand, takes advantage of the opportunity as pre-

THE HOME YOU'RE GOING TO BUILD

This is another Record News Plan of THE HOME YOU'RE GOING TO BUILD. This one can also be constructed for $2,500. In the plans, you will notice space for a basement stairs. In case this is not desired, this space can either be saved, converted into a pantry, or utilized as a closet, with a bank entry. Either of these plans are practicable.

Metropolitan Air Of City Amazes Editor of Alvord

Editor R. H. Richardson of the Alvord (Wise Co.) News was amazed at the growth or Wichita Falls upon his recent visit to the city, attending the Northwest Texas Press association, he says in the current issue of his paper.

"It has been many years since this writer had stopped in Wichita Falls, and he was amazed at the metropolitan appearance of the town," he says, "with its fine wide, clean streets and skyscraper buildings, not to mention its excellent newspapers."

What's Your Name Got to Do With Wichita Falls, Anyhow? Read It—

Wichita Falls has always prided itself on being a city of varied and diversified accomplishments, but it is doubtful if anyone other than those possessed of a most insatiable curiosity really know just what this community is and has. For instance, did you know that by looking through the pages of the city directory you could find, in the matter of seasons, Summers, Winters, Springs and Falls? It has a Moon and Stars and it has an East, West, North and South. And when you come around to the weather we can furnish on short notice, Raines, Snows, Dews, Hale and Clouds, and of course we have Weeks and Days, and occasionally a thought for the Morrow.

Switching around to bodily needs, "the City That Faith Built" has a Body, which necessitates its having Bones, a Head, Hipps, Shinn, Cheeks and, of course, Hair and Hyde.

If you want to take the trouble to comb the directory pages asidiously you might find that we are in little danger of starving. Rail strikes and continued drouth should concern us not in the least, for we have in our midst many Farmers and Grounds and on the Grounds we have, in addi-

TITUS COUNTY WETTEST SPOT

Farmers Get Good Money for Corn

If an interview with "a tourist" published in the Quanah Tribune-Chief is anywhere near the truth, then Titus county and particularly Mount Pleasant must be about the wettest place in the United States. According to the interview the farmers there raise corn to market by the gallon and not by the bushel. The story in the Tribune-Chief, follows:

"A tourist passing through Quanah a day or two ago, in conversation said that he had asked the porter at his hotel the night before if he could get him any whiskey. The porter replied that he could not, but he could get him some "Titus Corn" if that would do.

"Which reminds me," said the tourist, "of the Texan who was recently in New York. He stepped into a soft drink parlor and fell in conversation with the bar-keeper, who asked him where he was from.

"Dallas," said the Texan.

"Dallas, Dallas. Oh, yes, th t's just a little way from Mount Pleasant in Titus county," said the bar-keeper.

"Take it from me," said the tourist, "Titus county, Texas, is the booze making center of these United States. Corn whiskey, too, and from pretty good to real good stuff, both white and colored. It's no trouble to get all the whiskey you want in Titus coun-

2 SCHOOL BOYS CONSTRUCT OWN AIRPLANE HERE

Is First Machine to Be Entirely Built Here

Verna Ross and William Lewis, two local high school students, will soon take the air in the first airplane to be built by amateurs in this city. The plane is a full sized two seater and is completed with the exception of final painting and tuning up. Last touches will be applied soon and it is expected that the first flight will be made within a few days.

The ship is a biplane and is especially designed for stunt flying. It is built entirely of spruce and plywood of a type to insure strength and light weight. The wings will measure 20 feet from tip to tip and the length of the fusilage will be 15 feet. When empty the plane will only weigh 450 pounds, and when loaded and provisioned for flight will tip the scales at 650 pounds. This is a noteworthy accomplishment in airplane building as it is seldom that a successful plane is built weighing less than 1000 pounds. A Lawrence 40 horse power rotary motor will turn a 5½ foot propellor which will move the plane at a rate of 90 miles per hour. The arrangement of the wings and the motor will allow an unusually low landing speed of 35 miles per hour.

Cast Own Metal Parts

The plane was constructed entirely by the two young enthusiasts every part being made and put together by them with the exception of the propellor, wheels and motor. All the metal parts were cast in their own shop at 1614 10th street, and every part given rigid inspection and pronounced perfect before it was put in the body.

The body will be painted oriole, accounting for the name "Baby Oriole." The wings will be white with black trimmings and the whole will present a very neat appearance in flight.

The builders are both high school students and will receive their diplomas next spring. Their studies were interrupted early in their courses when they left school to answer the call to the flag.

They entered the navy together and were sent to the school of electricity at camp at San Diego. While there they had the opportunity to work about the aviation field and were soon ardent flying students.

Began in October

They received their discharge in March, 1921, Lewis going to Washington, D. C., where he continued his studies. In September he returned to Wichita Falls and reentered high school. Ross joined him there again and in October they began work on the plane which is now ready for flight.

As well as amateur aviators the youthful scientists are experts in the operation of radio and wireless in which branch of the service they served during the war. Their work shop is equipped with a powerful radio set and messages have been received by their station from ships at sea and points as far distant as Chicago and Detroit.

'Gamble 'till You're 25 If You Would Succeed' Young Druggist Says

McCumber Passes On Formula He Used for Success; Hopes to Own Chain of Stores

"Gamble, young man, until you're 25—and then if you haven't made anything on your investments at that age, settle down to some salaried position and save your money."

A. D. McCumber, 24 years old, is probably the youngest big business man in Wichita Falls. He is proprietor of the Owl drug store, corner of Ninth and Indiana, and, one year prior to the deadline of the motto he has followed for several years, McCumber has gambled and thus far has won.

The feature of Mr. McCumber's life is the fact that he started into the business world when he was young, and that he has been fighting his way through, taking chances on his investments, ever since he received the advice he's passing along to other young men he knows.

"I made the first dollar I ever made in my life when I was a kid. I hauled groceries after school hours—pulling them in a little express wagon.

Gets Advice From Banker

"The advice that a banker gave me before I had finished my high school education, I believe, has been the beneficial factor in my career and has endowed me with the spirit of thriftfulness. That banker told me to gamble until I was 25, and then, if I had not made money on my investments, to settle down to some salaried position and save what I earned.

"That is the advice I pass along to all young men. Gambling holds a certain enchantment for all of us, but the gamble of life in business is the most interesting of all games."

McCumber came to Wichita Falls a year ago, and entered the real estate business. His education was limited to some extent, he having received a high school diploma and having finished a business course in a

LOCAL GUNNERS SET RECORD AT FORT SILL SHOOT

Artillerymen Pleased With Man Who Handled Food

Back home again, healthy and proud.

Battery D, 131st field artillery, the Wichita Falls unit of the Texas national guard, had reasons for returning from the annual 15-day encampment at Fort Sill, Okla., both healthy and proud.

For the 57 local boys composing the company made the best record of any of the 800 to 1000 Texas guardsmen that attended the camp.

And as far as health was concerned, the boys report they had every reason in the world to be healthy. Plenty of fresh air, exercise and fun did their full share, but the real reason, according to the boys themselves, was their "chow." They claim they had the best chow in camp, and for this they give credit to detail mess Sergeant Thomas H. Clayton. Clayton himself, modestly says, "I did the best I could," but the boys all say his best was the very best in the camp.

"If an army travels on its stomach," said one rooky. "Battery D is in good shape to walk around the world."

As a sample of their chow, the following menu for Sunday, Aug. 6, was submitted.

Breakfast

Dinner

Steak, with cream gravy, creamed mashed potatoes, cream peas, apple sauce, iced tea, ice cream.

Supper

Spuds a la peel, stewed tomatoes, hominy, iced tea, bread.

The ice cream for the Sunday meal, 10 gallons of it, was provided by Captain John Fletcher, who surprised all the boys with the treat.

"We had more than we could eat," one of the boys said, "and when you give a gang of hungry soldiers more ice cream than they can eat, believe me, buddy, that's some ice cream."

The soldiers of battery D have all laid particular stress on the fact that they were not called out on strike duty, and that they spent the entire two weeks at their annual encampment at Fort Sill.

Following is a roster of the battery making the trip: Captain John H. Fletcher, First Lieutenant Wm. J. Plathe, and Charles R. Nolen; second Lieutenant George W. Lee; Sergeants J. H. McGinnis, John R. Schroeder, Herman Vass, Nicholas Haid, Curtiss D. Harper, T. H. Clayton; Corporals F. P. Donis, J. H. Sellers, S. C. West, W. R. Watkins, and R. P. Johnson; Cooks Finderburg and Richardson; Mechanic A. R. Thompson; Musician John Voss; Privates V. M. Bohm, Rush P. Beasum, William A. Branum, E. W. Brannan, S. R. Burns, Archie Boyd, A. H. Chewnig, P. W. Cosh, B. W. Crawford, G. G. Church, O. L. Devee, H. M. Deens, George Carlington, O. A. Cauble, M. Jones, L. V. Jarvis, F. E. Lancaster, C. Launders, H. T. Loy, Gilbert Long, C. R. Kates, W. W. Moody, S. T. Powell, C. R. Perry, E. R. Poal, C. H. Pruitt, James Pruitt, W. H. Rogers, T. H. Smith, J. E. Tyson, J. E. Tosear, H. R. White, John W. Windham, E. H. Wood and John Ryan.

Pumper Realizes $500 Acre on Truck

ELECTRA, Aug. 19.—By devoting his spare time to irrigating two acres of land, J. C. Anderson, a pumper for the Texas company at its water station on Beaver creek, realized $500 an acre from truck. That is the record of Mr. Anderson four years ago when conditions were favorable. He does not expect to do so well this year for the market price for vegetables has dropped. The Beaver creek man devotes most of his land to tomatoes and melons and declares that he experiences little difficulty in marketing his stuff locally.

The achievement of this man is particularly noteworthy for the reason that he did his cultivating without aid of a team.

One Life Worth Salary Of Dozen Cops Wichita County Editor Stoutly Says

Editor W. Dickson of the Iowa Park Herald in the last issue of that newspaper protests against what he describes as flagrant violations of the traffic laws of Wichita Falls and Wichita county.

He has the following to say:

Just what Wichita county expects to gain during its crazy practice of economy in cutting off the pay of several motorcycle cops remains to be seen. The writer makes several trips to Wichita Falls during a week and has not seen a motor cop on the road for the past month. However, we have seen several drunks attempting to drive cars. Reeling from one side of the road to the other is very dangerous and will ultimately result in someone's death. Only Monday we met three cars whose occupants were beastly drunk and cared little of other travelers who were passing them. In the city of Wichita Falls accidents are happening daily on the busy thoroughfares on account of the lack of motor cops. One life is worth the salary of a dozen motorcops and Wichita county should cease its economizing and put on additional peace officers.

Stumbling, the New Dance, It May Bé Okeh in Little Old New York, But It'll Never Get Over In Wichita Falls Dancing Circles

There's too much of the synonomous in stumbling and falling for the approval of Wichita Falls dance censors. Therein lies the doom of this, the newest of dances, which combines a name with an alibi.

It is distinctly taboo here, at least in its official version as illustrated, and particularly where chaperones let popularity suffer in the name of propriety.

"Here's one on me," admits the song which has helped make the dance famous, and so echoed the clever couple who tried it out on local dance floors. Hints of it can be seen in irregular dance steps when the most versatile stepper of the J. B's. leads the daringest of flappers; but it's just the least bit of a slumping and can be righted at the first tilt of the chaperon's eyebrow.

"They'd do it if they dared" pines one as authoritative on flapper philosophy as only J. B's. can be, and the song stumbles on to a confession at the end:

"I like it just a littl. bit, quite a little bit."

And so it would be dangerously popular because taboo if it were not for the difficulty of the step itself. Try it with the help of a banana peel and a cracked Victrola record. A scientific stumble is one of the things the movies offer millions for, and when it comes it pairs it might be the ambition and the fortune of a lifetime.

Even official condemnation seems likely to fail to make universal the highly delightful but complicated stumble and local dancers must still toddle on, cheek to cheek, to the antiquated air of some expurgated fox trot, until Charlie Chaplin publishes his volume of "Systems of Simplified Stumbling."

Fall Dancing Season Outlined by Social Clubs Announcements

Cypher Club to Open Fall Dancing Season At Kemp Hotel Sept. 5

Aspects of the coming social season began to take definite and highly promising shape with the announcement of the complete schedule of 1922 Cypher club dances on Saturday afternoon.

The fall dancing season will be formally opened by the club with a dance in the Kemp hotel ball room on Tuesday evening, September 5. Club officers have secured the famous and greatly sought after Doc Davis orchestra of Oklahoma City, and a particularly brilliant season will be indicated in the first dance which officers plan to make elaborately successful.

In October, the Cypher club will give the anniversary formal dance which has played so important a part in social affairs previously. The Kemp Ball room has also been secured by the club for the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year nights.

The opening dance of Tuesday will be followed on Saturday evening, September 9, with a Comus club dance, at which Doc Davis and his orchestra will be heard again. The orchestra will stop here on the ninth on its way from a trip to Dallas, returning to the Oklahoma University at Norman, where all its members are enrolled. Other Comus club dances are scheduled at monthly intervals during the pre-Christmas season.

Timely Little Talks Over the Teacups An Individual on the Inside Impresses Her Opinions on Friend People Peggy Piedmont Meets During Week

DEAR KITTY: Would you ever forgive me, dear, if I should write you a poem instead of a letter? You've no idea how narrowly you escaped receiving a verse this week. Only my respect for real verses restrained me. You see, I've been talking to and about such an extensive group of artists and student artists here that I've been almost moved to efforts of poetic fancy myself. Seriously, Kitty, there is a developing movement for both creative work and appreciative study in the fine arts among Wichita Falls people that is sending complacent fogies scurrying to library shelves and into music and art shops to avoid beng entirely out-moded.

Maybe women's clubs once were really corporations for gossip distribution, maybe graduation from college did use to put an end to all cultural development for the woman in the home, but those accusations are certainly no longer true. Wichita Falls club women are in earnest and are arranging important developmental work for this

FUNNY to be talking about the clubs in August when you couldn't find a trace of one of them in all the social annals, but the fact that they aren't meeting doesn't mean that their leaders aren't busy with plans, and I've just heard of one plan that seems to me of special importance to the artistic development of the town. You know the Players club which was so successful in its first years performances last season? Leaders in the organization have asked Mrs. Charles William Wallace to conduct a play writing course for the club during the year to come, and Mrs. Wallace has promised her assistance. And that means, you know, that Dr. Wallace will be prevailed upon to help some too, at least to the extent of a lecture or two and some play reading.

And, of course, you know how eminently fitted both of them are for conducting such a course. Dr. Wallace, on furlough from the University of Nebraska, has been particularly successful in his teaching of constructive writing. One of his most widely known students is Dorothy Canfield, author of "The Brimming Cup" and other well known novels. Both Dr. and Mrs. Wallace spent ten years in research work in London, and the instructors training includes study at Leipsic, Berlin, Vienna and other European universities. Mrs. Wallace herself has taken all her distinguished husband's university courses in addition to her other extensive studies and is particularly fitted for conducting the course in play writing which I think will mean so much to members of the club. She has been prominent among local club women for several years, particularly in directing the study of Shakespeare, for she has specialized in an intensive examination and interpretation of his work.

Besides the course in play writing, the club has a brisk years work ahead the program to include extensive reading and a number of performances. Mrs. Will Pagan is to again have the directorship of the organization. You will remember her success last year.

But by no means all of the city's artistic resources lie in its women's organizations for study and performance. Leslie Turner has just returned from a visit in California where he went following the close of S. M. U. this spring, and with him has come whispers of the really distinguished work he has been doing. Mr. Turner is a cartoonist, you know, and the very slyest of them, and it is only by hook and crook and by virtue of a persistent curiosity and interest that one learns of his success and the praise he has merited, for as a matter of fact, I believe he's more interested in its adventurous habits of traveling about the country than in the crys of "genius" he's been hearing from his instructors and classmates. He taught two art classes in S. M. U. last year, though he's only a student himself you know. But the most important of his work was for the "Rotunda," the school annual, you know. The university's anxious for him to come back this year and help make the publication the success it was last, but Mr. Turner has other plans. He will choose between more study and opening an art shop of his own in Dallas.

And now for the young musician who has been interesting so many Wichita Falls people. Interesting them musically, and the younger ones personally. Jarrel Gose went to Fort Worth to study violin music, and studying music he is, and other things. Reports of his progress and ability are extremely flattering and friends here are pleased, but not so long ago the postman brought him a ponderous letter, needing four cents in postage for overweight and bearing all the landmarks of a missive of documentary importance. There were many signatures, twenty at least, and the messages were concerned with the advisibility or inadvisibility of certain mixtures of art with other matters. All of which goes to show that musical and social genius' are not impossible at all, for Jarrel is in earnest about his music and his friends here were merely teasing him by way of recognizing his versatility.

SPEAKING of students, there is a great stir of preparation these days, for being a student requires a great deal more than a supply of books, and the girls, most of them, are picking out fall wardrobes for the winter in school. There are other wardrobes being packed too, and more important ones, no doubt, ones more concerned with delicate beauty than the sturdy utility of school clothes. Announcements, one, two, three of them at least are due within the month, Kitty, and Im aching to tell you of them. But you can guess them, two of them at least, I think.

BUT the school girls won't mind my telling you of their Alma Mater engagements. A number of the girls will study in New York this winter, among them Miss Catherine Moore. She expects to take a few courses in Columbia, but to live in the city and enjoy the other fascinating educational facilities it offers. Miss Gay Gwynn expects to study music again in the metropolis and Miss Ley Y. Larkin will be accompanied by her mother, Mrs. W. B. Larkin, in an entire season's study.

THE state university will take Miss Margaret Duncan and Miss Ethel Moran among many others. Miss Lurline Turner will return to S. M. U. Miss Jewell and Josephine Cummings are both planning to attend the university at Austin. Friends of Miss Florence Devors, until recently a member of the younger set here, but now living in Alabama, is planning to study at Ward Belmont this winter.

SCHOOL catalogues are lying about on library tables these days and there is talk of rush week and of things, besides courses, which the colleges promise for the year. For, in spite of this later rise in temperature, Kitty, the summer is practically over. There's a sure sign of it when the travelers begin coming home. This week brought Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Frits and children home from a tour of Yellowstone National park. They traveled by automobile you know, and were delighted with the fun of the road and the beauty of the great park. Mrs. Harry Weeks has also returned, though prematurally from Colorado Springs. She was called away by the recent death of her step-father, Mr. Cameron, and expects to spend the rest of the summer here.

AND I've been hearing from a few of our travelers in other states. This week Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Chenault and children crossed the border into Canada, after a steamship trip up the St. Lawrence and a visit Niagra Falls. They are now at the Chateau Faontenac in Quebec and are delighted with the beauty of the quaint old city. Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Humphries and children also visited Niagara Falls during the past week and spent some time sight-seeing Buffalo.

BY NEXT week the vanguard of returning travelers will have greatly increased in numbers, I'm thinking, and I expect to hear great tales of the sport and delight the summer has brought the travelers. In the meantime we stay-at-homes are strengthened for this return of hot weather by the cold week we have enjoyed and the sure promise of permanent coolness to come.

2000-FOOT TEST TO BE SUNK HERE

Noble Co. Will Drill On Woodall Farm

A new derrick is up for the test o fthe Noble Oil and Gas company, to be drilled close to the city limits on the Woodall farm, and drilling is to start as soon as the machinery can be moved in.

The test is to be drilled to 2,000 feet, it is stated. Reports from eight different geologists are said to have been secured on the location, these reports showing unusually favorable chances for getting gas, and also prospects of oil.

The new test is to be drilled just across the line from the Keystone-Ringer tank farm, some distance to the east from previous tests drilled on the Woodall, that had shallow showings, but failed to make a real test. These were abandoned around 1,300 feet.

The new test is of particular interest at this time, since it will be one of the few wildcats drilling in the district as well as because of it's proximity to Wichita Falls.

sented in one of the preceding articles in this series. Two years pass. Now let's drop in for a little call on our friend, Smith.

"By George, I see Jones has his own home now," I'll say just to get the conversation started.

"Yes. Don't know how he did it, either," says Smith. "I thought he was making just about what I am. He must have struck it lucky in something or other. Pretty soft for some people."

And Smith has told the whole story. It is pretty soft for some people. The only point he is missing is that it would be just as soft for him, if he wanted it to be.

Wichita Falls is full of men just like Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith. It doesn't take any miracles to get ahead in this world. It is to dispel the idea that "it can't be done" that this series of articles is written. It is to show you how it really can be done much more easily than you ever had thought.

Wichita Falls has the facilities and the desire to help every one of its citizens own their own home. It is entirely up to you. If you don't believe it, talk it over with your banker today, or drop into the office of one of the building and loan associations and ask them about it. You'll be surprised to find out how glad they will be to help you, if they find out you are sincere.

Ten per cent more of the people of Wichita Falls could own their own homes in three months from now, if they wished to do so. Everyone in Wichita Falls could own their own homes in three years from now if they wanted to bad enough.

ty. You can get it at the drug store, at the restaurant, and in some cases at the grocery store. It comes in fruit jars, and I reckon a car load of quart jars are used a week in Mount Pleasant, if they can't get enough bottles. Why, there are stills in every direction. Down in Sulphur bottom the woods are full of 'em. That's the way the farmers selis his corn crop. The price is from $2.00 to about $3.50 a quart, which makes a pretty good price for corn on the cob. They don't have to put in lye to give it the kick, and they don't use wood alcohol, nor resort to freezing lemon and vanilla extracts for the alcohol. You can get as drunk as you want to without having to sneak off to a big city and hide out in a room on the top floor of a hotel and pay $6 to $8 a quart for your booze. Those Titus county moonshiners are right on the job, and it is said that no county officials have ever been able to locate a still or make an arrest where a conviction has been had."

tion to Holmes, big Barnes built of Stone, Steele and Wood in which are Wheat, Corn, Pease, Rice, Oats, Hays, and Greens, while on adjacent territory might be found Berrys, Melons and any variety of other stuff.

Plenty to Eat

All the foregoing brings joy to the vegetarians, no doubt, but for those whose gastronomical scruples are not so pronounced we can provide Lambs, Bullocks, and Pigues. Furthermore, the Penns around our Barnes confine Jacks, Kerrs, Katz, Burrows, Coons, and Foxes, while in a pinch we might hike out in the Woods and find a Rabbit or Hare or so. Getting back to the subject of dietary, quite a dainty repast could be provided from the Fowles around the Groundes of the house, Cox and Quayles abound in profusion, and while not exactly palatable there is always an abundance of Birds, Wrens, Crows, Drakes, Woodcocks, Cranes and Robbins.

Honestly now, you didn't imagine Wichita Falls was such a homogenous concoction of variety, did you? But Shute, you've forgotten all about the House we have, with its Sellars and Walls and Garrets and Kitchen and Halls where hang the Potts, Kettles, Hatchitts and Files. In one room we can find a Davenport with Sheets and Linnen and even Silk counterpanes and in others there are of course Karpets and Cuertons.

Amusements, Too

But it is not only in necessities that Wichita Falls is well provided. Not by a Long Shott. What about our Parkes with their Brooks and Glenns, Lanes, Rhodes, Hills and Dales? And the Lake, with its Shores and Fish—Bass and Pike, provides ample recreation for such an exacting populace.

The Americanization committee should pay attention, too, for we have White, Blue, Black, Brown, Greene and Gray among us, with a family of French, English and Irish thrown in for Goode measure. Kings there are, with Knights, Earls, Dukes, and Squires, and of course Popes, Abbotts and Priests. The afflicted scribe compiling this Record made a Hunt for angels but was unable to locate any. We are probably too secular to pay much attention to such things anyway.

Concerning notable personages our community is more than well supplied, Starting with Adam back in the dim and distanct past and coming on down to the present day, Wichita Falls can trot out for inspection Adams and Cain and Abel, while a little later Abraham, Isaac and Jacob find their modern counterparts as does Noah and his herd of Lyons, Wolfes, Bears and Campbells. Of course we have plenty of Wilsons and a Harding with a Hughes, Hoover, Bryan and others mixed in. Emerson, Stevens and Keats give us the proper literary touch.

Our Fords and Franklins and other cars have Geers and Glass and Fenders and Lights, and when they get smashed up we Howell and go off in a Huff because we're in Payne.

Tehre's a lot Moore we could Wright, but what's the use of toothing our own Horne? We're a great little city, and we don't need to advertise our merits by such outlandish atrocities. If you don't believe everything we've said in here is 100 per cent proof, you're welcome to do so, and if you want to sit down and check through the directory in an attempt to make us out a prevaricator—why just go ahead. We'll at least have the satisfaction of knowing that we've aroused some interest.

TWO JAILED ON CHICKEN PLOT

Fowl Transported to Frederick Mart

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Aug. 19.—Two men were arrested last night after a wild chase by Deputy Marshal S. J. Goode and are being held for investigation on charges of theft. Three other men seen with those arrested and who are thought by the officers to be accomplices were not apprehended.

These men are believed to be members of a gang of chicken thieves that has been operating in this county for the last several weeks. The theory of local officers is that they take chickens stolen on this side of the river to Frederick to sell and probably bring the fruits of their raids on that side to Texas for disposal. Three different local parties have identified chickens sold in Frederick.

Deputy Goode also arrested two negroes yesterday charged with having intoxicating liquor in their possession. The former is being held for investigation but the latter escaped. According to Mr. Goode a 50-gallon barrel of choc beer was found in one of the men's home.

ENDEAVORERS PLAN BIG CONVENTION.

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Aug. 19.—Local Endeavorers are making preparation for the entertainment of what is expected to be the largest assemblage of young people ever in attendance at such an occasion in this part of the state when the district convention convenes here Friday, September 1, for a three days' session. Jack Dale, of Henrietta president of this district expects at least three hundred delegates representing all denominations.

The convention will open Friday with inspirational services with Dr. Cary L. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Graham, as the principal speaker. Conferences and methods classes will have the attention of the delegates Saturday and able leaders will be assigned to the three divisions, juniors, intermediate and seniors. This day's program also includes a playlet by local Endeavorers, entitled "The Way of People" and an address by Dr. J. F. Holmes of Quanah.

Sunday has been designated as consecration day with the morning to be spent in outdoor prayer service. The afternoon will be taken up by an address by Arthur A. Everts of Dallas on "100 Percent Citizenship" and a demonstration of the Quanah juniors under the leadership of Mrs. Holmes and supervision of Miss Emma McCaren, southwestern office secretary of the Christian Endeavor. In the evening Jack Hupperts, Texas' field secretary will deliver an address.

Others who will probably speak during the convention are: Rev. J. E. Weans, of Graham; C. C. Dooley of Wichita Falls; E. S. Goodner of Wichita Falls; Miss Katherine Taylor of McKinney, president of the Sherman district; Miss Clara Mae Green of Lockhart, president of the Austin district.

A splendid program of social events includes a trip through the oil fields and a parade through the down-town section of the city.

GAMBLE—

school in Montana, near his home at Great Falls.

The real estate business, he says, has always appealed to him, and it was for that reason that his advent in Wichita Falls became a factor in his life.

Enlists In Navy

McCumber went overseas in the United Sttaes navy when he was 18 years old—that was the first time he left his home in Montana for "keeps" as he asserts.

After having spent two and one-half years in service he was discharged with a clear record and $750 in his pocket that he had saved during his enlistment.

That money went down in oil, and McCumber tells the best story as to how he lost it, because it was one of his first gambles.

"I came to Texas and became secretary-treasurer of the Texas United Oil company at Dallas, staying with them one year," he asserts. "My first investment with that organization was the $750 I had brought from the navy with me—I lost that. But the next investment—$270—tripled itself on oil lease holdings, and since then I have made and lost on my investments, my winnings exceeding my losses."

Has New Ambition

The youthful drug store proprietor declares proudly that he has changed his ambition from real estate ideas to drug stores, and it is his assertion that "by the time I am 40 I hope to have a chain of 25 drug stores."

When he first came to Wichita Falls, he stayed in the real estate business from February 24, 1921, until April, 1922, and possibly would never have entered the drug store business had it not have been for the bankrupt sale of the drug store owned by the Sansburys.

McCumber purchased their place of business at his present location in April of this year, changed the name of the store from Sansbury's to the Owl drug store, and has been "doing a thriving business ever since."

McCumber declared recently that his business has averaged an income of $5,000 per month, gross returns on his investment.

"That isn't a bad business for 24 years of experience in the world," he smiled, in discussing his intentions for future years. "I hope to be trioling that and then some when I'm 40."

Senate Halts to Eulogize Sergeant

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, August 19. — Charles P. Higgins, former sergeant at arms of the senate, whose death in St. Louis was reported today, was praised by Senator Reed, democrat of Missouri, in the senate as "one man who had made a friend of every member of the senate and all others with whom he came in contact."

Senator Robinson, democrat of Arkansas, also expressed the regret of the senate at Mr. Higgin's death, saying that as an official of the senate, he had maintained a record of efficiency that always would stand as a monument.

COULDN'T FIND VICTOR RECORD HE WANTED, SO HE OPENS UP HIS OWN GRAPHOPHONE SHOP

Young Business Man Making $10 Day to Pay His Way While Studying Law Course

Ten dollars a day profit isn't bad business for a fellow who is gathering coin to send him on through two more years of college education.

That is the average profit that Ben Pearson Proctor, proprietor of the Graphophone shoppe, is deriving from his business—an undertaking that he instituted through his own initiative, and which will probably net him sufficient funds to send him on, gaining the realization of the dreams he has of making a famous lawyer of himself.

Proctor, a youthful figure of 21 years, made his advent into the business world of Wichita Falls July 12, of this year, and chose to become a manager and work for himself, rather than to take action at the orders of a "boss."

There are several men in the world who have built hotels of their own just because they got peeved at the way the one they were living in was operated, but there are few men in Wichita Falls who started a play house because they couldn't find the music they looked for.

Proctor is one of those fellows who starts things for himself, and incidentally he has started something now that is both profitable and entertaining.

Unable to find a record he wanted one day, after he had come here to visit his brother, who is a dentist of this city, Proctor conceived the idea that he would build up a modern record shop and carry graphophones as well for his business.

The idea grew stronger when his brother urged him to act on this thoughts, and thus the Graphophone Shoppe was a thing of reality.

Proctor secured the rear end of the Owl Drug store on July 12, and received the same day exclusive right to represent Columbia graphophones in this city.

His average business since that time has netted him an income of $10 a day.

"What are you doing with the money?" he was asked recently.

"I'm saving it, and some day I'm going to have enough to send me on through college and get the degree I'm after."

"What are your ambitions for a life avocation?" he was asked again.

"To become a famous lawyer," was his solemn reply.

Proctor has always been ambitious and an active exponent of personal initiative, although he is just 21. His home is located in Birmingham, Ala., where he received his grammar school education and high school degree, but he left that home when he was 17 to take a job in the construction of the famous Muscle Shoals plant, in order to secure money to attend the University of Alabama.

He came to Wichita Falls this summer for his first trip to Texas, on a visit to his brother who lives here, and it is through this trip that, after having been a student of law in the University of Alabama two years, he became a proprietor in the local business world.

"I have all the records in my shop that I can use," he said recently in speaking of the day he decided there should be another phonograph shop here to carry an assortment of records that would meet every whim of the critical public, "and I don't believe another fellow will come to town while I'm here and not be able to find the record he's looking for."

Proctor is not only an ardent admirere of good records, but he's an exponent and ardent fan of wrestling, tennis and golf, and he looks over the paper every day for the latest "sport dope" on those three sports.

MORSE STILL FREE

By Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, August 19.—Edwin Frederick Morse, accused of absconding with $78,166 from the International Trust company of Denver, is still at large and so far as officers know is enjoying the pleasure which money can buy. With the arrival in San Antonio of A. W. Copeland, chief clerk of the Denver bank, the man held here for the last week following his assertion that he was Morse was positively identified as not being Morse. The identification settles a question which has disturbed federal officers' minds since the man in custody waded the Rio Grande at Laredo a week ago, and subsequently said that he was Morse, "the man you want."

pened to a well known Wichita Falls banker.

Several years ago C. E. Basham, vice president of the City National Bank of Commerce, came into possession of a 15-pound note on the state of Massachusetts Bay issued June 1, 1779. The face value of the note at the time of issuance was equivalent to about $65 of our money today and it bears interest at 6 per cent.

It was issued before the state of Massachusetts had dropped the "Bay" and when Mr. Basham came across the note he got it because he wanted it as a relic to add to his collection. He has a splendid collection of old coins and paper money. For many years he has had it in his collection and only a few months ago he read in the news dispatches where there was a value attached to the old Massachusetts Bay money.

He wrote to his friend, Dan Wing, president of the First National Bank of Boston, describing the note and sent him a photograph of it. In a few days he heard from Mr. Wing saying that a bill has been introduced in the state legislature calling for the redemption of the notes at par and interest. Since the not in Mr. Basham's possession has been drawing interest at the rate of 6 per cent for 143 years it now has a value of almost $50,000 and that amount will be paid for it under the bill pending. So there you are—perfectly good fairy story that is true.

We Never See Enough of Marie! So We Welcome "Don't Get Personal"

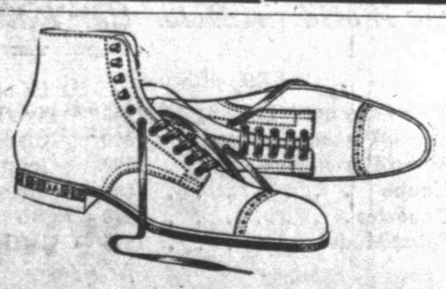

Don't Get Personal" is of the sparkling quality that is bound to make it popular with any audience, and then the star, Marie Prevost, is one of the most attractive young women on the screen, as well as one of the most talented.

Miss Prevost has the same sensous magnetism that prevails in the personality of Gloria Swanson, plus a mischievous smile that makes her seem always on the verge of a flirtation.

The story of this production is very interesting, partly from the nature of its plot, which causes the pretty heroine to take pity on a less charming sister, and fight a vamp with the deadliest of vampish weapons, that the other girl may retain her lover unharmed.

Miss Prevost will be seen in "Don't Get Personal" at Majestic theater, Monday and Tuesday.

Wednesday and Thursday, Gloria Swanson will be seen in "Station Content," which is positively a first run production in Wichita Falls, and one of the most thrilling railroad stories ever screened, packed full of thrills, and Miss Swanson never worked harder in her career than in this picture, and all admirers of Miss Swanson will be pleased with her part, and those who love railroad stories, where the heroine saves the Limited train from running into the burning trestle, and other thrills that go with a good railroad drama, will be swept out of their seats with this one.

The Tailored Frock Is the First Choice for Early Fall

In addition to its beauty and smartness there is the added attraction of convenience in the cloth frock for early Fall. With the first tinge of Autumn one wishes to discard the summer frock and the cloth frock comes naturally into the breach with surprising trimness. Easy to slip on and decidedly attractive and fashionable in appearance.

Ready here for your selection are many modes in frocks that embody the latest dictate of fashion for early Fall wear.

Twill Cords in soft finish and with supple draping qualities are leaders in popularity.

Vivid hues in reds, tangerine, caramel, French blue or emerald are used in embroidered designs of wool, facings of panels and sleeves or in pipings of sashes and panels. These bright colors add a dashing touch that is decidedly effective on the otherwise somber dark colors.

Embroidered designs in the attractive colorings adapted from the peasant costumes of Russia and the Balkans are artfully used on sleeves, collars, panels and medallions.

The cloth frocks, of course, are only part of the many new things that are now assembled here for your inspection and you will be well repaid for a visit to our big ready-to-wear section on the second floor.

OAKLAND GOES 21 ON GALLON

2111 Miles Covered On Tour

The Oakland car covered the total 2,111 miles in the recent Michigan Pike association tour around Lake Michigan on 97 gallons of gasoline or an average of 21.76 miles per gallon. This information is contained in a report of the entire trip by E. W. Lyons of the Oakland Motor Car company.

"At the end of the first thousand miles, I drained the oil from the crankcase," reads the report in part. "Before draining I measured the amount in the crankcase and was unable to add any to bring it to the level mark. In other words, the level guage showed full at the end of 1,000 miles. At the end of the trip I measured the oil and was unable to add any. The guage registered full.

"During the entire trip it was not necessary to add any water, and, in fact, I did not have the radiator cap off during the entire trip until the finish, at which time I was able to add three pints of water to the radiator.

"It was not necessary at any time to make any mechanical adjustment on the motor or tighten any part of the chassis or car."

The pacemaker on the tour set a pace of 35 miles an hour when the roads permitted. As the Oakland was the 12th car in line it was necessary to run above 35 miles an hour at all times. At some places the Oakland ran from 50 to 55 miles an hour to keep in line. Many rough roads were encountered, particularly the 75-mile stretch between Marquette and St. Ignace composed of heavy sand which often came as high as the running board.

Stops were made at 77 different towns, which did not include the regular stops for meals and for the night. The Oakland encountered no tire trouble during the entire trip and the only work done on the car was the lubrication of universal joints, front and rear wheel bearings, distributor and generator.

Blowouts On Auto Row

BY TERRY

Bill Lampe spent a considerable part of the past week down in Graham. Bill has made several good sales down in that part of the country and reports a keen interest in the Wills Sainte Clair everywhere he has demonstrated it.

Jim King, of the King & Weaver company, is spending his vacation in the mountains of Colorado.

Carl Waelder, manager of the Franklin Sales Co., accompanied by Mrs. Waelder, is touring West Texas on a business and pleasure trip.

Frank Queisser, formerly manager of the Wichita Motors company, began his duties as manager of the Fritz Motor Co., last week. Both Mr. Fritz and Mr. Queisser are optimistic over the prospect for Marmon sales. New prices, new models, and a live organization. "Nothing can stop us," says Frank.

M. P. Hyde, Dodge Brothers representative, accompanied by J. A. McFall, of McFall Bros. spent the week calling on McFall Bros., associate dealers in this territory.

"Fire Chief" Roy Miller, the record-breaking fire truck salesman for McFall Bros., has just placed another order for a Dodge Brothers chemical apparatus with the city of Sweetwater. The Sweetwater truck is the same type apparatus as that recently purchased by the city of Abilene, and of the type in use in Wichita Falls and Vernon.

An influx of vacationists was noted along Auto Row last week. Frank Keim returned with his family from an eventful and pleasant month spent in Corpus Christi. L. L. Dixon of the Dixon Motor Co., also drove in last week in one of the new Buick sport tourings. Mr. Dixon reports a big trip, covering several thousand miles. While gone he and Mrs Dixon visited in Michigan and northern cities, returning to Wichita Falls by way of California.

Clarence Dodge hasn't returned from his sojourn in Colorado, although Manager Cregor of McFall Brothers has been expecting him for several days past. Mr. Cregor says, however, he doesn't blame him, as from all reports received, he and Mrs. Dodge are enjoying a big outing there.

Captain Langford of the Motor Supply Co., has added a new Ford truck to his fleet of Fords now in operation. The new car is equipped with bright nickel disk wheels, and painted in light blue, with the advertisement of the company on both sides. It's a neat job and has called for much comment along the streets.

Tuesday was field day at the Dixie Tire Service company. Side bets were made by Pat Jarratt and B. G. Sharpe as to which could sell the most General tires for the day. Competition was keen and both partners were on their toes, with the cash register playing an accompaniment to the tune of 26 tires sold for the day. Those boys are sure putting out the Generals these days.

Helen Keller Describes Motoring Joys After Trying Her New Marmon

It has remained for Helen Keller, deprived of those senses which, to most of us, are so absolutely essential to touring pleasure, to give, what critics agree, is one of the most unusual and beautiful descriptions of a motor ride that has been written. Nothing escapes her, whether it be the car itself or the country through which she is passing. She is even more keenly alive to it all than the average person, who though seeing, is yet unseeing.

"The first thing I did on my return home the other day was to take a long ride in my new "Marmon," and I want to tell you how delighted I am with it. It is, indeed, a beauty. I am glad it is blue, for I love that color. To my touch the workmanship seems perfect. Borne along on deep, springy cushions, you find a long drive lulling and alluring. The "Marmon" does not require you to hold on to keep your balance. No, it asks you to enjoy—it invites you to regard the landscape from its comfortable observatory. I knew we were in the Catskill Mountains by the atmosphere and the keen odors peculiar to high altitudes, but to my "Marmon" all roads were level. In my long tour across the continent I have ridden in many automobiles, and I have almost always been keenly conscious of curves, but in this car I hardly know when we turn a sharp corner. You will see from all this that I am perfectly satisfied with my new car.

"You call it 'the foremost fine car' 'You call it 'the foremost fine car,' and I think you are right. Anyway, if there is a finer car, I have no longing for it. I have compared mine with a car which costs three times as much, and I would not trade."

Consult Good Mechanic Before You Take That Trip Says Fritz

"August marks the high tide of the touring season and is the great vacation month as well," says Mr. Fritz of the Fritz Motor company.

"In case you are about to embark upon an auto trip of any length be sure that you are 'all set' before you go," he cautions.

"First of all, be sure that your car is mechanically right. We do not mean that your car should have a general overhauling before starting, but if there has been any little noticeable (not imaginary) irregularities existing, consult a good mechanic.

"Don't judge the condition of your car by the mileage it has covered. The number of miles registered on the speedometer of some cars may show a five hundred century mark, yet be in far better mechanical condition than some showing 50 or 70 per cent less.

"Careful and systematic lubrication is always necessary, but be sure your car is well lubricated before starting on your trip. Be guided in the lubrication of your car, by the lubricating chart in your instruction book. Don't overlook a single point of lubrication shown on the chart. It appears to be common practice to lubricate what seems to be the most important places, ignoring the balance. You might get by with this during town or short distance driving, but by no means take chances when touring. You cannot foretell what might happen if a brake shaft sticks or a steering connecting rod runs dry.

"The old saying, 'if a job is worth doing, it is worth doing well' surely applies in the lubrication of your car.

"Tires are usually the bugbear of an extended auto trip. Your car should be equipped with the best tires in your possession, the poorer tires to be used as spares. Keep your tires inflated, according to the recommendations of the manufacturers. Don't run on partly inflated tires. This breaks the casing and the increased friction generates more heat. For proof of this, place your hand on a properly inflated tire and on one under-inflated after a drive of 15 miles or more and note the difference.

"It would not be possible to even attempt to suggest what should be taken, other than to be sure your tool and tire kits are complete, also include tire chains, mud or sand hooks that can be easily applied, since the average auto jack is made small and compact for ease in storing and the base is too small to be of much use in sand or soft roads. Would recommend including a hardwood block, one and a half inches thick and six or eight inches square to prevent the jack from sinking when attempting to raise the car. It may be found necessary to dig down into the soft road a little for placing the block if the jack does not go under the axle as would happen with a flat tire."

Tears Flow When Gas Breaks Loose

By Associated Press

JUNCTION CITY, Kan., August 19.—Tear gas, used by Kansas national guards encamped on the Fort Riley military reservation for demonstration purposes, caused discomfort to scores of motorists last night when a change of wind spread it over a large area. Many women, ignorant of the cause of their tears, became frightened when they entered the gas belt and began to weep copiously.

THE NUT MOTORIST

The following article was awarded first prize in a recent "Knocker's Contest," conducted by TheSyracuse Journal:

I knock the nut motorist.

He leaves the curb without signal—stops suddenly in traffic without warning.

He uses his horn instead of his brakes in a street filled with ipaying children.

He steals places in traffic and "cuts in" regardless.

Overtakes and passes another car near the brow of a hill, or on a curve.

Stops his car on a curve in the road without getting out of the roadway.

He hogs the road.

His lights are blinding, nor will he dim them, damn him.

He drives with a snoot full.

He is a curse—an abomination—an affliction to humanity.

CHEVROLET SETS LOW GAS MARK

Goes Over 35 Miles On Gallon

Thirty-five and one-third miles to the gallon of gas is some record, but nevertheless that is the record claimed by J. W. Smith for his new superior Chevrolet, according to the information given Paul Von Allmen, manager of the Von Allmen Motor Sales Co., local dealers for Chevrolet.

Mr. Smith is an engineer on the Fort Worth & Denver Ry., and purchased his second Chevrolet in April. While on a trip which covered several thousand miles and practically every important point in Texas, Mr. Smith kept an accurate record of his oil and gas mileage for the new Chevrolet. The speedometer showed a distance of 1791.

Seventy-one gallons of gas was used on the trip or an average of 25 1-4 miles to the gallon. Mr. Smith states that a part of the trip was through sand and over hills and rough roads.

Even better records were made over good roads, Mr. Smith reports, and on the pike from Longview to Tyler, Texas, a distance of 106 miles, only three gallons of gasoline was required, an average of 35 1-3 miles to the gallon.

"This is only one of the many reports of low gasoline consumption the Chevrolet owners are reporting to us daily," says Paul Von Allmen, "Mr. Sehorn, a tourist from Los Angeles recently called on us during his tour through this section and reported equally as good results on a coast to coast endurance test. Mr. Sehorn, accompanied by Mrs. Sehorn, made a trip from Los Angeles to Miami, Fla., under the auspices of the Chevrolet dealer at Los Angeles covering a distance of 3,452 miles. For this trip 142 gallons of gas was used or an average of 24 1-3 miles to the gallon, and seven quarts of oil, or an average of 500 miles to the quart. Bedding and full camp equipment were carried in the new superior Chevrolet.

"Every day new records are being reported and the new superior Chevrolet continues to break all records for low gasoline and oil consumption, dependability and general service."

7-REEL COMEDY AT THE STRAND

Funny Picture With Well Written Plot

"Too Much Business" is one of the funniest comedy films ever screened It is based upon Earl Derr Bigger story, "John Henry and the Restle Sex," which appeared in the Satu day Evening Post, and is a Jess Rob bins production, which will be shown at the Strand theaer on Monday.

During the making of the production Jess Robbins felt that he was having too much business. (Several of the sequences called for the use of 50 children, half boys and half girls. These children were engaged for several weeks and between the time they were working it was necessary to keep the children amused and educate them. For a while it was easy to entertain the children and no trouble was experienced. But soon the little ones grew restless. They wanted to play tag, hide-and-seek, blind man's bluff and a thousand and one other games in the studio. The piles of properties and partitions made the studio an ideal spot for hide-and-seek.

The first thing Mr. Robbins knew a child would dash across the set in front of the camera and spoil a scene. This would necessitate a retake and, as he started to take the scene, another child would butt in from another angle and spoil the scene. In desperation the director took a half dezen childre nand conducted them to the dressing room and locked them in. The next day new rules were put into effect and two play rooms, thoroughly squipped, provided in the studio. When the children were not at work in a set they were forced to remai nin one of the play rooms provided.

FAMOUS MINE SHOWN IN FILM

Where Men Are Men True to Life

A famous old mine known in history and started in the days of '48, during the gold rush to California, is seen in the William Duncan production, "Where Men Are Men," which will be shown at the Gem theater on Monday. This mine has been worked for many years and has turned out tons of valuable ore.

The shaft was erected in the days of the gold rush, and it stands today practically the same as it dod in the early days. While the mine is fairly well petered out, there are still traces of ore which would prove valuable if found in large quantities.

The mine at present is abandoned, but every few years prospectors work in the shaft and secure considerable pay dirt. It is believed by many old settlers that a rich vein lies just beyond the present diggings, and several are convinced that soon this mine will be in full swing and one of the principal sources of ore in the state.

The story of "Where Men Are Men" deals with a plot to jump a claim owned by the hero, who, according to circumstantial evidence, believes the girl with whom he is in love is acting as tool of the villain. He later learns, however, that she is the daughter of his head partner and that a former sweetheart is responsible for his misfortunes.

Duncan fights his way to success through the entire film, and the production is one that will be enjoyed by all red-blood Americans.

TOMMY COMING

"Thomas Meighan in the Paramount Picture 'If You Believe It, It's So'"

THOMAS MEIGHAN

Faith is a tremendous factor in promoting the success of men in all walks of life, according to Thomas Meighan, star in "If You Believe It, It's So," his new picture which comes to the Olympic theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"We believed in this story from the very start," said Mr. Meighan. "There's nothing like confidence in a thing to make it come out right. If you believe a thing firmly enough it will very likely be a fact before you're through believing in it and in a way that's the theme of the picture. After all, the big things that take place in the world all have a mental origin and, because somebody believed in them sufficiently, they were realized. If somebody hadn't believed that motion pictures were a possibility, there wouldn't be any such thing. Things don't happen—they're developed through consistent effort based on conviction. Every great discovery and every great world movement comes about in just this way.

"So I feel that I am willing to bank on my statement that this picture will be one of the best in which I have ever appeared. Paramount be-

If you want to know the fate of the thousand or more girls who seek fame and footlights in the big city go to see "Polly of the Follies," the First National attraction starring Constance Talmadge, which will open at the Olympic theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. It isn't half as promising as some people think and at the same time it isn't half as tragic as others would have one believe.

The star portrays the role of Polly Meacham, country girl of broad ambitions and little experience, in her own inimitable style of humor.

One of the unusual features the picture presents is the training of a Broadway beauty chorus for the annual opening of the follies; and the renowned Mr. Flo Ziegfeld has been drawn upon for this character. Bernard Randall, accomplished screen actor, plays the role of the beauty connoisseur with gifted ability.

The leading man is Kenneth Harlan who filled a similar role in Miss Talmadge's previous pictures. George Fewcett comes in for more prominence in his excellent rendition of a society leader's husband. The remainder of the cast includes Horace Knight, Thomas Carr, Harry Fisher, Frank Lalor, Ina Rorke, Mildred Arden, Paul Doucet, Theresa Maxwell-Conover, Billie Dove, James Gleason and John Daly Murphy.

lives in it, and to prove it gave me a supporting cast that couldn't be beaten. Just consider the list. Pauline Stark is leading woman; Joseph Dowling was 'The Miracle Man' in the picture which proved enormously popular; Theodore Roberts, one of the greatest actors in the profession; Charles Ogle, another fine character actor; Charles French, Tom Kennedy, E. J. Brady and Lura Anson, where could you find a finre line-up? Tom Forman directed the picture,

SCENE FROM "THE PRODIGAL JUDGE"

Jean Haige, Maclyn Arbuckle, Ernest Torrence and Charles Eaton, head the all-star cast in the Edward Jose production, "The Prodigal Judge," adapted from Vaughan Kester's famous novel, which will be shown at the Empress here soon. This is the picture that has been termed "the Rembrandt of the screen" by critics, because it is typically American and intensely human.

ESKIMOS ENJOY NORTHERN FILM

When you will see "Nanook of the North," which comes to the Strand Thursday, creep upon the mighty and dangerous walrus, spear him, slay him, and Nanook, his wife and tiny children eat him raw, you will be surrounded by the comfort and [illegible] of the Strand theater, where this marvelous, true life story of the barren snowlands will be shown.

But the first time this thrilling episode in the story of "Nanook of the North" was ever projected on a screen and witnessed by an audience was 500 miles north of civilization, on the east coast of Hudson Bay. The theater was a shed belonging to a fur post. It was about forty feet long. On the walls and rafters hung bear and fox skins to dry; deer horns and dog harness. The odor would nauseate the unaccustomed.

On the rough wooden floor squatted Eskimos—men, women and children. The projection machine was not in a fireproof booth—it was a portable machine set upon a table. It was run by a gasoline engine. The noise was ear-splitting.

It was the first time the Eskimos had ever seen a motion picture. But it was not the fact that they were witnessing anything so novel as a reproduction of themselves in action that interested them most as it was the walrus hunt itself. They forgot it wasn't real, and shouted directions and warnings to their pictured selves.

"Nanook of the North" is a Pathe feature picture, photographed in the frozen land of Hudson Bay by Robert J. Flaherty, mining engineer and explorer. It is a real and true drama of the life and love of the Eskimo.

'TOO MUCH BUSINESS' COMES TO STRAND

John Henry Jackson, the hero of this delightful seven-reel comedy, "Too Much Business," never forgets that he is a business man. When he is run down by an automobile, he immediately tries to sell the owner of the car his own make of brake lining, an automatic auto horn and some special enamel varnish. And even when he clasps in his arms for the first time "the only girl" he retains enough presence of mind to sign an important contract. At the Strand Monday.

SUGAR GAVE MAY M'AVOY CHANCE

Advertising Film Proved Her Worth

It was a very "sweet" picture, the first photoplay in which May McAvoy ever appeared. For the young star who will be seen at the Empress theater next Monday in "Through a Glass Window," made her picture debut in a one-reel affair advertising a popular brand of sugar.

She took that advertising job because the casting directors for regular legitimate drama couldn't "see her." They thought she was too small and failed to recognize the remarkable appeal of the girl. When the "sugar" photoplay appeared, however, they revised their ideas and she leaped into instant popularity, a popularity which led to stardom, following her appearance as "Grizel" in Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy."

"Through a Glass Window" is a Realart picture released by Famous Players-Lasky corporation. It was written by Olga Printzlau and directed by Maurice Campbell. Raymond McKee is the leading man and heads an unusually strong supporting cast of players.

Roberts After Smoking Record

Theodore Roberts who plays the character of "Sky Blue" in Thomas Meighan's Paramount picture, "If You Believe It, It's So," which will be presented at the Olympic theater next Thursday says that his record for cigars smoked in one scene was seventy in a picture made several years ago. "M'Liss." In "Old Wives For New" he smoked one cigarette through twenty-three scenes. His hardest job smoking was in "Forbidden Fruit," where he had to keep a cigar at a certain length for a dozen scenes.

Hill Crest Country Club Big Asset to Vernon

LAKES ADD TO CLUB'S CHARM

Fishing and Golf Attract Many

By ERIC G. SCHROEDER

VERNON, Aug. 19.—"A little bit of heaven" is the invariable comment of the visiter as he pauses at the entrance to Hill Crest Country club in Vernon, glances over the rolling golf course before him and sees in the distance the substantial club house where it commands its view of the wooded lake and the prairie for miles around.

The scene, to be sure, suggests that an Omnipotent one, gazing out over a quite treeless domain devoid of bodies of water, chose a bit of paradise to place on the plains in order that men might find rejuvenation after the ordinary toils of life had been disposed of each day. He selected the refreshment of ice cold springs, several acres of clear, sparkling water, a gentle, undulating landscape clothed in fine trees and scrubbery—to bestow on the spot of his choice on the northwest Texas plains.

Complete country clubs are organizations rarely found in towns of small size, and assuredly there are few to be seen in communities the size of Vernon, a town of 5,500 inhabitants. Visitors from all parts of the country, many of them prominently known, who have stopped over in Vernon during recent years have expressed their surprise and admiration over the recreation spot here.

Resort Older Than Town

Years ago, ere Vernon even existed, Condon Springs, as the location of the country club was then called, was the favorite heaven of cowboys and Indians for miles around. Cattle were watered, hot and dusty bodies bathed in the cool lake, and camps pitched in the shade of the willows and cottonwoods. Before civilization had nosed its way into this section the unerring instincts of man and beast had sensed the delights of a natural playground afforded by nature.

In August, 1917, Hill Crest country club was formally organized with W. H. Anderson president, and J. V. Townsend, secretary. Shares at that time as at the present were disposed of for $500 with annual dues in addition. Although there were no improvements on the acreage and the assets of the club were but those provided by nature, stock was sold readily.

Fine Clubhouse Built

Plans were immediately considered for the erection of a clubhouse and the building of a golf course. They both stand as mute evidences of the determination and resourcefulness of the club's directors. The home of the members was erected at a pre-war cost of $27,000, and has been completed since the spring of 1921. A broad, screened veranda stretches across the east and north sides of the building. Within there is a large ball room, two dining rooms, kitchen and ante rooms. There are locker rooms for men and women, shower baths, billiard room, and bed rooms in the basement of the house. A copious supply of water is maintained from a huge well on the premises and supplied through the pipes from a giant reservoir. Electric lights, fans and telephone complete "all the comforts of home" at the estate a mile and a quarter west of Vernon.

One approaches the clubhouse down a long avenue bordered by trees in heavy foliage. To the right is the golf course, a six hole affair with three more greens to be constructed within the next few days. A brook running through the grounds provides an admirable hazard for several of the holes, and there are three lakes to be crossed, one of appreciable dimension. A flock of sheep grazing over the spacious grounds has been found invaluable in keeping down the growth of rank vegetation.

Good Fishing, Too

In the lake are the finest of bass, perch and catfish, and their number is augmented from time to time by liberal importations. Every day throughout the season of warm weather finds its bevies of bathers who are in the water from the earliest hours of the morning until well after nightfall. Three tennis courts contribute further to the pleasures of the members.

Meals are served regularly at the clubhouse, and are the products of Mrs. J. N. Grimes, considered far and wide as the "best cook in these parts." A caretaker, with a home supplied on the premises, looks after the grounds. W. D. Berry, prominent local attorney, is president of the organization, R. E. Martin is secretary, and L. E. Piper, treasurer.

The doors of the clubhouse are being continually thrown open for the enjoyment of visitors to Vernon, and Hill Crest has assumed in many respects the role of a community enterprise. When shriners of this district, hundreds in number, came to Vernon last summer, it was to be entertained with a delightful barbecue at the country club and with the privilege of making the most of its appointments. The trans-continental shrine caravan last spring camped on the grounds and took its meals at the clubhouse. Odd Fellows of the panhandle were extended the hospitality of the club during their annual convention during the past week.

Hill Crest country club is regarded as one of Vernon's most material assets. It is serving a great purpose in its daily contribution of relation and enjoyment and is ably characterized by thme common expression that it is a "whole summer's vacation in itself."

New Wells Add to Electra Production

ACTIVITY AIDED BY EXTENSIONS

Shutdowns Caused By Heavy Runs

New wells in the south and west side extensions from the main south Electra pool, and in the new east Electra pool made the past week such an active one in this section as to make depression from the crude cuts seem a thing still far off. The shutdowns that were necessary in the south field, where the Texas company is serving a large number of operators were caused by the heavy oil runs, and there has been a large crew of men at work laying extra lines so that the new production can be cared for without congestion, and that water may be run, at the same time.

Electra's activity, on the surface, would seem to belie any suggestion of a reduction in operatons, but in reality the operations have already about reached a settled basis, and the present status of activity will probably be continued indefinitely, thanks to the conservative program of operations that operators had already mapped out, before the stronger suggestion was made by those who fix the crude oil market.

Electra production climbed again, in daily totals, for the past week, 2,000 barrels above the previous high mark. The daily runs from this pool are now within 6,000 barrels of the runs from the Burkburnett pools, and only a little more than 10,000 barrels barrels under all of Stephens county, while they are in excess of the Ranger-Eastland and Pioneer production.

New Well at 1900 Feet

The newly opened 1900 foot pool joining the townsite on the east had it's first new well in several weeks, when the Gulf Production company's No. 4 Mrs. Grace Jennings was brought in, with 250 barrels production. This same company's No. 3 Douglas, north of the road, reached the 1900 foot sand during the week, and now has casing set, and is preparing to drill in. Other important developments in this pool are expected next week.

A second well in the 1600 foot sand in section 34, and the striking of what promises to be a producing sand at 1830 feet in the same section, marked the week's developments in the southwest extension from the main pool.

Hockaday and Shaw have a well showing up for 200 barrels in the 1,600 foot sand an eastern offset to the McCallister, Brown and Grisham discovery well.

West of the 1600 foot discovery well the No. 2 of McCallister, Brown and Grisham, after missing the shallower sands, now has a seat for the casing at 1830 feet, and is expected to be ready for a test in a short time.

Ready For Test

Southeast of the 1600 foot well on the above lease the Gulf Production company's No. 1 is on the 1600 foot sand, with casing set, and preparing for a test.

Hockaday and Shaw have made location for their No. 2, other new locations as the result of the bringing in of the second well are reported on the Texhoma lease, just south of Hookaday nd Shaw, and Riner and Bailey to the north.

These new 1600 foot wells are a little over a mile west and slightly south of the extreme southwest producers in the main pool. The nearest production is in the 1900 foot sand ,on the Shamrock and Griswold Oil company leases.

O'Neil Test In

Another interesting development of the past week was the bringing in of the cable tool test of John O'Neil in the 1900 foot sand, a half mile from the first producers in this section, and a quarter of a mile from the far northwest wells, completed recently by Harvey and Cullum and the Rio Bravo Oil company,.

The new O'Neil well is the second producer on the lease, but the first to be considered a real test, the No. 3, while making oil in the 1900 foot sand, had so many difficulties in completing that the owner is calling the cable tool test the real extension well. This well came in producing at the rate of 300 barrels. It is planned to drill the sand a short distance deeper.

The No. 1 fee of the Rio Bravo Oil company is now producing at the rate of 125 barrels, but is expected to make around 200 barrels on the pump, according to reports from the field.

Two New Derricks Up

The Rio Bravo company has two new derricks up, and is preparing to drill as soon as conditions warrant. The No. 2-A offsets the No. 9 of the Harvey Cullum interests, which came in last week and gave a half mile extension north. The No. 10-E offsets the John O'Neil No. 1, complete tih week. John O'Neil is preparing to drill his No. 4.

The Rio Bravo company made plans for an extensive drilling campaign weeks ago, before the cuts in crude, and made their locations on the map. They will confine their drilling at this time, however, to offsets, it is understood.

There has been no further effort to test out the sand between 1400 and 1500 where the Troxel test in the northwest corner of section 31, showed oil, as the casing was being pulled to abandon, but this will offer a point of interest for operations when there is a general revival of semi-wildcatting possible.

On the east line of section 31 the Texas company has made two new locations, No. 239 and No. 240 Waggoner, both inside locations.

The Hereford Oil company's No. 5 Allingham, section 32, is shut down, on the sand, for water.

HARRELD ASKS FOR OIL TARIFF

Charges Monopolies Control Congress

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS
Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Is the Standard Oil company powerfully entrenched in Washington?

Is the United States government under the control of the Standard Oil company and its associated monopolis?

Are members of congress, some of them "high in administrative circles," subject to the influence of the great oil monopoly?

Is the influence of the oil monopoly used to punish its enemies in congress, as well as to reward its friends?

Speaking in the senate today, Senator John W. Harreld, republican, Oklahoma, strongly intimated that these things are true. every one of them, and that the government is being used by the oil monopoly to strengthen its control over the petroleum production of the nation.

"The passage of this tariff bill, (including a duty on petroleum) said Senator Harreld "would convince the country that the Standard Oil company is not entrenched in Washington, as many people now believe it is."

People Don't Know Strength

"I feel it my duty," continued Senator Harreld, "to say that they (the Standard and allied companies) are more strongly entrenched in governmental affairs than a great many people realize—An exhibition ending to show that this government is not controlled or influenced by t se monopolists would be refreshing to the public.

"I have wondered at the influence they (the oil monopolies) have over certain members of congress, only to find later that there was a reason. They seem to be able to employ the friends and relatives of members of congress in a way that gives them friends in high administrative places. Members high in administrative circles are either stockholders in these monopolistic companies or have relatives who are, and I have ceased to wonder that they sometimes get favors from unexpected quarters."

Panhandle's Latest Wildcat Due To Reach Silk Well's Sand Soon

The Panhandle district's latest wildcat strike, the Smith well in Gray county, is due to be down to the Gulf and Silk well's oil sand within a short time ,according to the owner, J. I. Harvey, of Wichita Falls, and Amarillo, who is in Wichita Falls, after leaving the well with orders to drill on down from the present sandy lime, entered at 2875, and drilled to 2915 feet.

The Smith well, 40 miles southeast of the Carson county producers, is running true to the geological logs mapped in advance, according to Mr. Harvey, who with other Wichitans interested in the panhandle field possibilities, prefaced his drilling operations with an extensive and exhaustive survey of the field, with the aid of geologists. The drilling well's log has been compared carefully with the logs of the producing wells, and the results have been very gratifying.

The Harvey well got the lime at 2170 feet, which was shown in the Gulf well at 1970 feet, the owner stated. The first gas show was encountered at 2610 feet. There was another showing at 2675 feet. Then at 2875 feet the sandy lime, showing oil and gas was encountered, and 40 feet of this formation was drilled. The drill is in rotten blue shale at present.

This test is 40 miles southeast of the Gulf and Silk. Bullington and Clark well, and 40 miles northwest of the Sayre wildcat, in Beckham county, Okla. The Sayre well got the oil sand at 2750 feet, the difference in elevation in the three points making the formations tally almost exactly, it is stated.

Harvey is preparing to drill his second well in Gray county at present. He has a second block of some 20,000 acres platted around LeFors, 14 miles northwest of Alanreed, where the Smith well is located. The LeFors well will be drilled on the Saunders tract, close to the town section, and according to the contract, drilling will start by September 7.

The structure which this well is testing is located in a bend of Red river which is almost identical with the bend that Red river makes in the Burkburnett northwest. The geological report is said to show similary of structure and formation as well, as a physical similarity in the surface. This coincidence will make the second test even more interesting to Wichita county operators.

A number of the larger companies have taken acreage around both the Smith well and the projected Le Fors test. The Mid Kansas, Gulf, Empire, Texas, Magnolia and Texhoma are among those with close in tracts. A number of other individuals from Wichita Falls are also holding acreage.

The Magnolia is reported to have recently purchased 8 sections in fee in Gray county.

Big Extension For Eastland

Following up the recent extensions to the south by the Eastland Oil company, the Cordezzone Oil company's No. 1 Hough, a mile and three-fourths south of the far south producers blew itself in Thursday, giving the field a big extension, and with a natural flow of 1,000 barrels gave Eastland one of its biggest wells in some weeks. This well constituted the feature of operations in the south end of the district and was the only really important large completion with the exception of the two 3,800 foot wells in Young county, completed earlier in the week.

Early in the year the Eastland Oil company began extending the old pool with its operations on the Martin tract several large wells being brought in. The new well was drilled into a gas lime at 3,300 feet the first of the week and came in for a gasser, later blowing itself in. It is highly probable that it's production will be still further increased if it is drilled deeper.

After five months the 3,800 foot lime opened up by the Dalco No. 1 Roark, south part of the Bunger pool has produced some more big wells. The Texas company's No. 1 Jake Jones came in on Sunday, with an initial flow of 1,500 barrels. Today the Ralco's No. 2 Roark came in, producing at the rate of 1,000 barrels.

If the two new wells hold up at the rate of the discovery well, the total of Young county production will show a considerable increase.

Several other tests drilling for the 3,800 foot lime are due to be completed for producers, or abandoned within the next week or so in this part of the field.

The City National Bank of Commerce has been helping West Texas people for years to save their money and has helped to finance factories, stores, farms and homes. It helps its community and keeps pace with its progress in facilities, service and safety.—adv.

HOLLIDAY POOL GETS NEW WELL

Merrill Blair Has 30 Barrel Pumper

The new shallow pool just north of the town of Holliday in Archer county, had another completion this week.

Merrill Blair drilled in his No. 2 Morrison, a 30 barrel pumper, at 670 feet. This well is a better producer than the No. 1 which came in for 200 barrels. The No. 3 on this lease is drilling around 500 feet.

The first well in this new pool was drilled by Carl Parker on the Morrison, to the west of the Blair wells.

L. T. Burns and F. M. Gates are drilling their No. 1 on the Chilson tract, north of the Blair wells. Parker is still drilling to the west, with indications that a nice shallow pool will be developed here.

Oil Sand at Vernon Sought

VERNON, Aug. 19.—Proceeding slowly and with the utmost caution, with casing being carried along as progress is made, drillers on the Heinzerling test, south of Vernon, are feelin gtheir way foot by foot toward a depth of 1,400 feet, where an oil bearing sand is confidently expected. At present the standard bit is thumping its way in the neighborhood of 1,350 feet, and the strata sought for is not expected before Tuesday or Wednesday.

Every indication, drillers on the test say, favors a producing well. Several good sands have been pierced thus far, and one, which could not be tested due to a lack of equipment, is said to have been 101 feet in thickness.

Zacquesta drillers are continuing progress at well over 1,400 feet, and at present the bit is in shale. The test, on section 90, block 14, is regarded as one of the most promising in the Wilbarger field.

Advices from the office of the Sigler Oil Co., are to the effect that for the present all operations have been suspended on the holdings in the local field. An offset to the discovery well, the former completed several weeks ago, is said to have been taken off the pump. Lloyd Sigler, former head of the company, is engaged in pulling casing from the west Vernon test three miles from town. It is rumored that control of the company which he formerly headed will revert back to Mr. Sigler through the inability of the offset to meet expectations.

All eyes in Wilbarger oil circles are centered on the Heinzerling and Zacquiesta tests. The locations are considered as among the most favorable to be chosen in the field, and showings in both holes thus far have been exceedingly gratifying.

A new test in Wilbarger county will probably be started within sixty days on the S. H. Field place three miles east of Harrold. Mr. Adams, an independent driller, will use a rotary in an effort to reach pay sand, and a rigid geological survey indorses his judgment fully. Four hundred acres have been donated to Mr. Adams by the owner of the land.

OIL MEN INTERESTED IN DEEP DUNCAN TEST

Special to the Record News.

DUNCAN, Okla, August 19. — Much interest is being manifested among oil men in the deep test being made by the Lone Star company in the J. W. Martin No. 1 in Sec 7-2s-6w. The well is making very little gas at 3486 feet, 14 feet in the sand, and is now good for 250 barrels daily. It has been decided to drill deeper into what is ebelieved to be the Hewitt formation, before swabbing. The Hewitt sand is 50 feet in thickness and the prospects of the well, when cleaned out and deepened will be a big production. This is the deepest test in the southeastern part of Stephens county and the owners in fee, the lessors and the drilling company are going to make the supreme test of this part of the field and they have utmost faith this test will result in a drilling of that field. J. W. Martin, Duncan, the owner in fee, has 2800 acres about the well. The location is nine and one-half miles southeast of Duncan and eight miles northeast of Comanche.

Super-power stations as designed by a German engineer call for the use of turbo-generators three times as large as the largest yet built in any country.

TEXAS CO. GETS SEMI-WILDCAT

Completing Well on Waggoner Ranch

The Texas company's No. 220 Waggoner, a semi-wildcat located a short distance from the Wilbarger county line got an oil sand at 1,850 feet, and is now completing. This well is some distance from production and is within a half mile of the Waggoner ranch house.

The Magnolia Petroleum company's No. 55 H. & T. C., in Wilbarger county, is a 40 barrel well in the 970 foot sand.

In the main pool two new wells are reported for the Planet Petroleum company. The No. 49 Burnett is a 250 barrel well, sand at 1920 feet and the No. 58 Burnett is reported a 350 barrel producer sand at 1940 feet.

15 Bbl. Pumper In

Th Pathfinder Syndicate, drilling in section 5, in the east side of the main pool, has completed it's No. 8 Burnett in the 490 foot sand, a 15 barrel pumper.

Bridwell and Heydrick's No. 16 Waggoner is completing in the 1900 foot sand.

The Cline Oil company's No. 3 Waggoner, Gibson survey, in the south edge of the pool is reported drilling below 1,800 feet.

The Gulf Production company is drilling it's No. 4 J. D. Melton, more than a half mile south of the new producers. The 1400 foot sand only has been developed this lease, but the new well is to test for the other sands found in the south Electra pool, it is understood. On the Mrs. E. D. Collett lease, joining the Gulf Melton on the north, and the Griswold, Gladiolus and Planet Burnett leases on the south, there are 1900 foot producers, as well as the shallower wells.

Type 61 Achieves Greatest Success in Cadillac History

IT was almost inevitable that Type 61 should bear out its reputation as the greatest Cadillac by establishing a remarkable sales record.

That much was apparent immediately following its introduction, when Type 61 enjoyed a reception such as is seldom accorded an automobile.

But in the last few months this initial enthusiasm for the new Cadillac quickened to a demand that was little short of phenomenal.

Seemingly the entire public had become intensely aware of Type 61 superiority, and sales attained a volume which promised to surpass all previous Cadillac records.

As month followed month, and the unprecedented demand for Type 61 increased, that promise became a fact and a certainty.

Now with the figures compiled, it is possible to announce that Cadillac in 1922 has achieved the greatest success in all its history.

We believe that this unparalleled advance in Cadillac business, and the continuing vogue of Type 61 among buyers of high grade cars, can mean but one thing:

It signifies that the public considers Type 61 the greatest motor car value in the world.

LONG-BELL CO. TO MOVE PLANT

Buys Huge Tracts in Northwest

The Long-Bell Lumber company of Texas, one of the largest manufacturers of southern pine lumber, is arranging a gradual transfer of its interests from the southern states to the fir forests of the northwest, according to information given out yesterday by D. M. Jones, local manager.

The Long-Bell company, Mr. Jones asserts, owns and operates more than 70,000 acres of what is said to be the finest stand of lumber in the world, in the northwest, the Wichita Falls representative of the organization ascribing this as the reason for the transfer.

Will Build Big Camp

Speaking of the acreage owned by the Long-Bell company which it now plans to operate more extensively, Mr. Jones said yesterday that "at the confluence of the Columbia and the Cowlits rivers, just opposite Kelso, Wash., the company has purchased several thousand acres of land, on a part of which construction will presently begin of sawmills, docks, storage yards, railroad yards, machine shops, hotels, homes, retail businesses, amusement centers and all the incidental equipment and conveniences of the most modern logging communities."

The announcement concerning the new plans was made recently by R. A. Long, founder and chairman of the board of directors of the organization, according to Mr. Jones, who said that Mr. Long made known immediate construction plans for the new project.

On Three Trunk Lines

The plant will be located fifty miles inland from the Pacific ocean, about half way from Portland, Ore., to the ocean. Large ocean freighting vessels traverse the Columbia river from Portland to the Pacific, passing this location and will find loading for same at the docks of this company. Three trunk line railroads, the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Union Pacific, will distribute Long-Bell lumber to the interior points of the United States. This means that the entire world will be a market for the product of the lumber company's new manufacturing centere.

The Sensational Sequel to the Drugging of Dixie Dixon

She Was Only a Fluffy Little Chorus Girl, But the Probe Started by the Parents, Who Wouldn't Believe She'd Killed Herself, Has Revealed the Suspicious Death of One Other Girl, and Has Led to the Seizure of Vast Hoards of Dope.

"Dixie Dixon," Mabel Dixon Terrell, Virginia Belle, Whose Death from a Drug, the Police Say, Was Brought About by a Gang of International Dope Vendors Who Feared She Would Tell the Authorities What She Knew of Them.

A CHARMING, spirited southern girl rebelled against the restrictions of her home town, married almost immediately upon graduation from a finishing school and went to live in Chicago. "I just overflowed," she said, when explaining to a friend why she left the place of her birth. Within a short time she was again swept from her moorings by the high tide of her emotions. She moved on to New York—where life offered more of a challenge.

Not so long ago a chauffeur carried into the Harlem Hospital the inert body of this girl dying of drug poisoning.

Such was the beginning and the end of Dixie Dixon, a "Virginia thoroughbred, a creature gone crazy with the joy of living."

"Who drugged Dixie Dixon," and "why," are still unanswered questions. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Terrell of Danville, Va., say their daughter was drugged to death. They are supported in this belief by the opinions of both American and Canadian investigators who declared, almost immediately after her death, that Dixie Dixon was murdered by a clique of international drug smugglers, now being shadowed under the direction of Dr. Carleton Simon, chief of the narcotic squad, New York city.

Scarcely had they voiced these opinions when Dorothy Wardell, who, like Dixie Dixon, had gone on the stage, died from causes exactly similar. The body was discovered when the Montreal express steamed into the Grand Central that morning. Mrs. Winifred Bruce, Miss Wardell's companion, was apparently in a dying condition and was sent to Bellevue Hospital. An examination of their effects revealed that the two women had been engaged in smuggling drugs and liquor from Canada.

Dorothy Wardell and Dixie Dixon were friends. And while the police do not say that Miss Dixon was in league with the dope smugglers, they had what they considered indisputable evidence that Miss Dixon, like the Wardell girl, knew the smugglers' secrets.

And so the sensational sequel of Dixie Dixon's drugging has not been limited to her own tragic death nor even to the death of Miss Wardell. Hundreds of other persons, both men and women, are threatened with the same fate. The Canadian secret service has intercepted letters showing that the smugglers are using Dixie Dixon's death as a warning to whatever persons may have an incriminating knowledge of their operations. Not only that, but a threat heard in a railroad station north of the line was:

"Dixie Dixon is out of the way and never will talk again."

These words were whispered into the ears of a young and pretty girl by a man whom the police suspected of being implicated in drug running. The girl started, and drawing away from the man made a break for a train that was drawing out.

Vast Extent of Operations

These drug operations are represented as being of such a vast nature that even the police can only make rough estimates of the extent and personnel of the ring. Already drugs appraised at $3,000,000 have been confiscated by Dr. Simon. Outside of the agents themselves there are hundreds of young girls, who inadvertently or through design, have been mixed up with this traffic, it is known.

Occasionally one of these girls talks to the wrong person. Some idea of what happens to the girl then may be gained by referring to the case of Dixie Dixon.

The real story of her death may never be known. The police can only supply such information as was contained in the testimony of Martin J. Ryan, a chauffeur, who carried the dying girl to Harlem Hospital.

According to his story, he met Dixie Dixon the night of her death when she was searching vainly for something with a "kick in it." Ryan did not say that he was a close companion to the girl. He knew, of course, she had had her days of grandeur, but she didn't appear to be particularly depressed over her lost estate.

He made the rounds of the down-town cabarets with her, Ryan said. About 10 o'clock the girl exclaimed:

"I simply must get some dope; let's go to a place uptown where I can get it."

She jumped into his car and he drove her to Harlem. At her direction he stopped in front of a house the address of which he could not remember. After they were there a few minutes three men came out of the house and one of them handed Dixie a package.

She examined it, after they had driven off, and made an exclamation of annoyance.

"It's the wrong stuff," she said, "but I'll try it."

Soon afterward she lost consciousness. Ryan was alarmed, but he thought he would wake her up by driving around a bit, which he did. When she didn't recover, he took her to the Harlem Hospital and carried her inside in his arms. She died without recovering consciousness. An autopsy was performed by Dr. Benjamin Schwartz, of the medical examiners' office of New York, and her death was attributed to heroin poisoning.

Opposed to the theory that Dixie Dixon was the victim of a drug smugglers' plot, is the belief held by Mrs. Kitty Jennings, of the Bronx, New York, that she committed suicide. Mrs. Jennings knew her well and was able to rescue her from many serious predicaments. She said:

"Dixie Dixon was the most irresponsible girl I ever knew. She was charming, fascinating and beautiful. She was the true Irish type, with dark blue eyes, long curling eyelashes and raven black hair. She always had a host of admirers.

"Her married life was an unhappy one, for her husband's family was conservative and Dixie was the most Bohemian person imaginable. About a couple of years ago, she told me she was going to get a divorce and marry a New York business man with loads of money of whom she was very fond. This dream was shattered when he married some one else. She became more reckless than ever. She had times of dreadful remorse and tried more than once to take her life. Still I did not then believe that she would really commit suicide. I think that when one intends to take one's own life one doesn't attempt it with others around. Once she tried to throw herself out of the window and I caught her just in time.

"She would disappear for months at a time. When she called us up after these intervals of silence it was, as a rule, for financial help.

Given Another Chance

"Of course, it was a dreadful thing to do, but last September when she had run up a big bill at one of the best hotels in New York and didn't have the money to pay for it, we thought it would be a lesson to her if we allowed the hotel people to have her arrested. She was in the Tombs for nearly nine days. Even that didn't feaze her. So we engaged Robert Connor to defend her. The judge let her off on a suspended sentence after sending for her husband—R. M. Bliss, who, though separated from her, was sending her a regular allowance—and advising him to take her home. The next thing we heard about Dixie, was her death.

"I don't believe Dixie had anything to do with smugglers. She was so irresponsible that her reputation as a chatterbox would have saved her from any such criminal alliance."

Other friends of Dixie Dixon say that no matter how she came to her end, her real tragedy was in her life. She had an insatiable lust for living. The ordinary habits that men and women fall into and which enable them to live comfortably and pleasantly, could get no grip on her fugitive nature.

She wanted the shock of new sensations; she was, according to all who knew her closely, like a fiercely burning flame. She could find no satisfaction in the pleasant respectability of a small town, so she married and went to Chicago. But the discipline of marriage was equally onerous. She rebelled again and again, but a separation was avoided by Bliss's having to go to France with the American forces.

Dixie Dixon as She Appeared on the Stage.

When he returned they had a second honeymoon and for a while she seemed happy. But the old urge was soon lashing her onward. She and her husband were finally separated. She came to New York, lived expensively on money that he sent her, went on the stage, passed with kaleidoscopic rapidity through a hundred hectic experiences and finally, when the rest of life had degenerated into hopeless dulness—she took to drugs and the unreal world that they led her to. With her it was not degeneracy. Her moral fibre was not any weaker. She plunged into this newest vice as one who is hot and perspiring and confined will plunge into cold water.

A naval officer who knew her well declared upon hearing of her death:

"Dixie Dixon was mad with the joy of living. In spite of her escapades she was a thoroughbred—a Virginia thoroughbred. It doesn't seem possible that she could have had anything to do with the people who are named in connection with her life in New York. But, if she really had taken one step downward, she is just the sort to have tobogganed. When I knew her she was white clean through."

A similar story might be told of Dorothy Wardell. She came from Kearsarge, a small town in New Hampshire. Her father, E. G. Wardell, owns the Kearsarge Mountain Inn, a well-known resort. Tales of big cities were poured into this little girl's ears. Her life had been one of repression. One day, she couldn't stand it any longer. She fled to the cities. Not only did she involve herself, but her wild tales brought her half-sister, Dolly Baker, to live with her.

The latter is now living in Montreal as Mrs. Cassie Burke. Dr. Simon is trying to make Mrs. Burke rejoin her parents.

BRICK

THE story of a girl called "Brick", was told recently in Wichita Falls by Dr. J. C. Hardy, president of Baylor college at Belton.

Dr. Hardy said that "Brick," as she has come to be known to all the students, was an orphan in Louisiana before she was taken into the Buckner Orphans' home at Dallas. She has no control of her limbs, walks poorly on crutches and because she cannot control her hands at times she frequently stumbles and falls as she walks along level ground. She does not know anything of her parents or relatives. The only life she knew before she went to Belton was orphanage life.

"Brick" graduated from the orphanage at Buckner's and because of a special fund available at Belton she was taken there. She will never be able to teach or to work for her living because of her physical deformities. But her mind is bright. She will graduate from Baylor college in a few years.

"'Brick' is worth a price that cannot be estimated to Baylor college," said Dr. Hardy, "because of her cheerful disposition. She is always cheerful. Frequently when she falls to the ground and struggles up to her feet and crutches again there will be tears in her eyes because of the pain but there will be a cheerful smile on her lips. That poor girl is going through life smiling and lending cheer to others who are strong and well. She smiles because Christ is in her soul and because she has a heart that is pure. During the years as students come and go 'Brick' will be there to cheer them. And then the end will come and 'Brick' will go smiling to her reward."

How many of us could smile if we were in "Brick's" condition physically? Many of us grumble and snarl through life when we are able-bodied and healthy with nothing real to worry about. If we all had sunshine in our hearts and lives we would go smiling through life like the unfortunate girl who keeps smiling through her tears to cheer others on. Only people with the love of God in their hearts can smile from the heart in the face of adversity and affliction.

THE MEN OF THE OLD DAYS

THE old settlers' reunion at Iowa Park Wednesday was a very successful event. There were gathered together many of the old-timers of the county who came here when this was the wild and wooly west and they swapped yarns about the old days. These hardy pioneers are the men who are really responsible for the starting here of the city that faith built.

They braved the hardships of the early days, fought off Indians and outlaws, killed their meat from the buffalo herds and builded homes in a domain that they knew would some day justify their sacrifice. Now they are living to meet once each year in that vast territory developed in natural resources and in which one of the richest cities in the state has sprung up and many smaller substantial cities have grown and prospered.

It must be satisfaction for the old-timers to look over the past and the hardships they underwent then to look over the same territory they settled years ago and see the richness of its development, for they can truly say, "we started it, boys—we laid the foundation."

WICHITA FALLS AND PUBLICITY

WICHITA FALLS is right now getting publicity throughout Northwest Texas that it would be impossible to buy.

Here is a sample of it, clipped from the Wichita County Promoter:

"Wichita Falls is known the world over as 'the city that faith built' and no less than 30 newspapermen from all parts of West Texas gathered in that city last Friday for a two days' session of the annual meet of the North Texas Press association and before they departed for their respective homes voiced that they had great faith in the metropolis of Wichita county and would ever remember the cordiality and courtesy shown them while there."

This is the sort of stuff that is right now appearing in practically all of the semi-weekly and weekly newspapers of this section of the state. The name of Wichita Falls is being linked with the terms "hospitality," "friendship" and others that will impress thousands of people who will feel more inclined to come to such a good town.

Was It You?

By ROBERT W. SERVICE

ILLUSTRATED BY HUBERT MATHIEU

"HULLO, young Jones! with your tie so gay
And your pen behind your ear;
Will you mark my check in the usual way?
For I'm overdrawn, I fear."
Then you look at me in a manner bland,
As you turn your ledger's leaves,
And you hand it back with a soft white hand,
And the air of a man who grieves. . . .

"Was it you, young Jones, was it you I saw
(And I think I see you yet)
With a live bomb gripped in your grimy paw
And your face to the parapet?
With your lips asnarl and your eyes gone mad
With a fury that thrilled you through. . . .
Oh, I look at you now and I think, my lad,
Was it you, young Jones, was it you?

"Hullo, young Smith, with your well-fed look
And your coat of dapper fit,
Will you recommend me a decent book
With nothing of War in it?"
Then you smile as you polish a finger-nail,
And your eyes serenely roam,
And you suavely hand me a thrilling tale
By a man who stayed at home.

"Was it you, young Smith, was it you I saw
In the battle's storm and stench,
With a roar of rage and a wound red-raw
Leap into the reeking trench?
As you stood like a fiend on the firing-shelf
And you stabbed and hacked and slew. . . .
Oh, I look at you and I ask myself,
Was it you, young Smith, was it you?

"Hullo, old Brown, with your ruddy cheek
And your tummy's rounded swell,
And your garden's looking jolly chic
And your kiddies awf'ly well.
Then you beam at me in your cheery way
As you swing your water-can;
And you mop your brow and you blithely say:
'What about golf, old man?'

"Was it you, o'ë Brown, was it you I saw
Like a bull-dog stick to your gun,
A cursing devil of fang and claw
When the rest were on the run?
Your eyes aflame with the battle-hate. . . .
As you sit in the family pew,
And I see you rising to pass the plate,
I ask: Old Brown, was it you?

"Was it me and you? Was it you and me?
(Is that grammar, or is it not?)
Who groveled in filth and misery,
Who gloried and groused and fought?
Which is the wrong and which is the right?
Which is the false and the true?
The man of peace or the man of fight?
Which is the ME and the YOU?"

WICHITA SHOULD FEEL PROUD

IT is gratifying to Wichita Falls residents to know that the Texas Conservation association, organized in Waco Wednesday, is in more ways than one closely related to this city. Had it not been for the fight for flood control and irrigation of arid land which J. A. Kemp has waged for more than 25 years this organization more than likely would not have been formed so soon.

Mr. Kemp is the father of irrigation by flood conservation in Texas and it is due to his efforts and the efforts of other far-sighted men who fought with him that the matter has reached the stage of organization. Then again Wichita Falls has taken the lead in flood control by starting one of the largest projects of its kind in the country—the Wichita valley irrigation project. This, too, was the child of Mr. Kemp's brain and he fought for it over a period of many years.

WE'LL KNOW SOON

EARLE B. MAYFIELD was here this week and spoke in his own behalf in his race for the United States senate. He says he is going to carry Wichita county. Wednesday night supporters of James E. Ferguson had a rally. They say Ferguson will carry the county.

The public has the satisfaction of knowing that we do not have to try to dope out the two conflicting statements because we soon will have the election and find out which one of them was telling the truth.

THE PUBLIC MUST BE SERVED

EVERYBODY in Wichita Falls would like to see the railroad strike settled. While the strike so far has not materially affected this city other than that it has put a number of men out of work and cut off their sources of income besides causing others some inconvenience in traveling, still it could be worse and it might grow worse if prolonged.

With winter approaching the best interests of all the people are centered in peaceful relations between every class and functioning of public utilities.

The public as a whole and no one class must be served. The public has been patient thus far, but if transportation continues to be curtailed until it is entirely inadequate then the public will be heard from. The public must be served.

WE CAN GROW PRUNES

PRUNES and raisins come high in Wichita Falls now because they have to be shipped here from California. But just wait until the Wichita valley irrigation project is completed and we can have all the prunes and raisins we want right here at our door and furnish a good portion of the United States with them.

The fact that grapes and plums thrive here is ample indication that this a prune and raisin country. The hot weather here is just the kind of weather needed and the season is right for harvesting and drying the grapes.

THE ONLY TREASURES

FORTUNE smiles today and frowns tomorrow. This is aptly illustrated in the case of a once wealthy oil man found by the Red Cross—the greatest mother in the world—living with his family in a tent and in dire need.

Theirs is a sad story, but it is a story of life. Every generation tells hundreds of the same stories over and over again.

We are rich today and poor tomorrow; we have friends today and tomorrow we are deserted by our friends of yesterday; those who feasted with us when we had plenty are feasting with others now. But the old world goes on just the same and time erases all sorrow except sin.

Those who are poor have the satisfaction of knowing that Jesus Christ was a pauper and that he chose to be a pauper. But though poor in pocket the followers of Christ are rich in soul and even if the world will raise no monuments to them when they are gone and they soon will be forgotten on earth, still the good they did will live on and on as one little seed planted grows a field of wheat after years. Their treasures are laid up in heaven.

FLOWERS FOR LIVING

MAYOR COCKRELL is to name an air board for Fort Worth. If nominations are in order the writer submits the name of that gallant warrior of the skies and political Achilles of the hour, Maj. Leonard Withington of the Fort Worth Record. Flowers for the living.

STAY WITH THE SPUDDERS

"THE SPUDDERS"—password of thousands of baseball fans throughout Texas today.

Why, because they have fought their way to recognition in one of the greatest bursts of speed ever shown in the Texas league.

They crushed every team in the league during their home stay, swept seven of the eight series cleanly, and took the first four of the five-game go with Dallas, the last team on the list.

They were stopped after 25 consecutive wins.

Those 25 games represent one of the greatest fighting spirits West Texas has ever known. Eighteen fighting united for a common cause and fighting for the honor of Wichita Falls.

The boys are not native born Wichitans, nor do they even claim this as their home after the playing season. But they represent something tangible, the fans' hearts. The Spudders realize the hope of Wichita Falls fans and have undertaken to give them a winner.

There cannot be found a cleaner bunch of supporters anywhere than those who back the Spudders.

The two combined spirits, the hope of the fan and the determination of the Spudders, have sent thrill after thrill over Texas during the last month as they established precedent after precedent.

The unity of spirit and purpose has forced recognition.

The fans are all for the Spudders and they in turn are all for the fans.

That is the spirit that wins and a "team that faith built."

A SLIM RECORD

UNITED STATES MARSHAL R. A. Harvin of Houston has a small army of deputy marshals of his own. He had 60 on guard when he decided that he needed another hundred and Federal Judge J. C. Hutcheson notified the marshal to appoint the additional hundred. There are 180 rangers on guard at most of the open port towns of the state. And each of the four United States marshals has his own battalion of guardsmen. Now President Harding has notified the interstate commerce commission to fully enforce the law on deteriorating motive power.

Now what is going to happen? There is going to be a serious withdrawal of motive power from service. Engineers and firemen are not going to take out engines which have been pronounced unsafe or in bad order. Why should they? An engineer is a hero when his body has been taken from a wreck.

His virtues are lauded by the newspapers but the people forget all about him and his widow and orphans 24 hours later. It is the same with the fireman. When he has given his life to the service he receives a beautiful obituary notice—that's all.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE left behind him properties valued at $100,000,000 and seven healthy and ambitious brothers. These properties include more than 100 publications.

First among the publications is the London Times, known for 70 years as the Thunderer of the daily papers of Europe. His widow will inherit an estate of almost fabulous worth but each of the seven brothers has fallen heir to a big newspaper. Lord Northcliffe was the most famous and the most powerful newspaper publisher that ever lived since time began. Incidentally, he wasn't worth 100 pounds when he was 20 and he carved out his own fortune and constructed his own road to the mountain top known to men as Fame. He left behind him hundreds of editors of his publications.

He picked the brainiest of the tribe and he paid them handsome salaries. He was jealous of only one man or the power wielded by one man and Lloyd George was the man. Northcliffe is in his grave; Lloyd George continues prime minister, the most successful opportunist that the world has ever known and the all controlling figure on the world's stage of action today. Northcliffe was born a commoner; Lloyd George was born a commoner. These super-men of Albion were the history makers of Great Britain—the Great Britain of today.

VARDAMAN AND WILSON

FORMER PRESIDENT WOODROW Wilson advised the democrats of Mississippi that James K. Vardaman should be kept at home. Vardaman made a hot reply to the effect that Woodrow Wilson was not a citizen of Mississippi and should attend to his own business.

There is to be a run-off in Mississippi. There were three candidates before the regular primary. Vardaman received 51,266 votes; Hubert Stephens, 51,207; Miss Belle Kearney, 14,129 votes. Now Vardaman, who leads Stephens 58 votes, must get some of the Kearney vote to put him over. At this distance, Vardaman appears to be the best betting proposition.

Woodrow Wilson has many followers in Mississippi, but Vardaman has a greater number. There are many funny people in this funny old world.

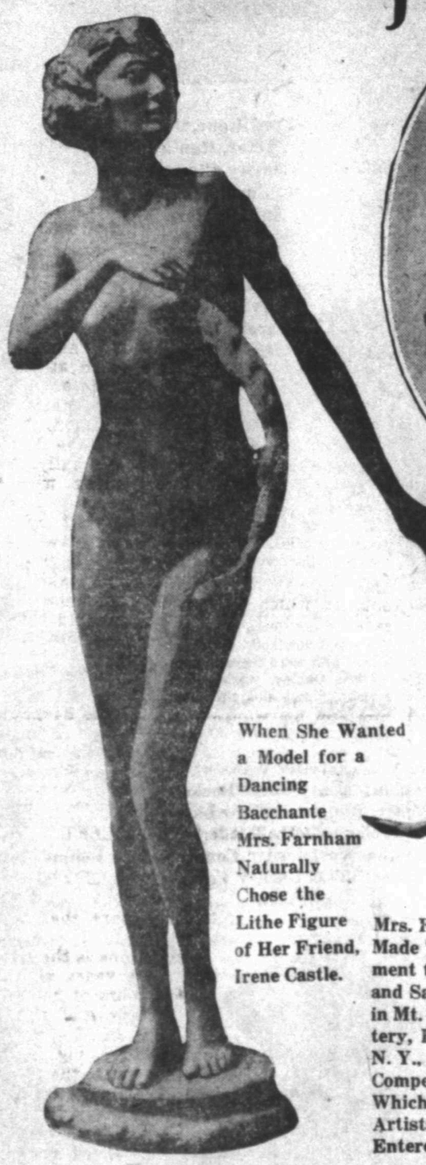

There's one good thing about being defeated for office, anyhow. You'll at least know that you won't have to keep all the promises made during your campaign.

The Sculptress Who Studied Art on Horseback!

At Least, Sally Farnham Was Breaking Horses on Main Street When Most Artists Are in School, and She Did Her First Modeling in a Maternity Hospital.

When She Wanted a Model for a Dancing Bacchante Mrs. Farnham Naturally Chose the Lithe Figure of Her Friend, Irene Castle.

"He's a Knockout as a President, but Too Busy to Be a Good Model."

Mrs. Farnham Made This Monument to Soldiers and Sailors, Now in Mt. Hope Cemetery, Rochester, N. Y., After a Competition in Which 50 Noted Artists Were Entered.

Returning from a Theatre Mrs. Farnham Began This Head of Marshal Foch at 1 A.M. and Had It Done by Breakfast.

"Ugly as the Devil, but Full of Pep. Go Home and Do Some More," the Late Frederick Remington Told Mrs. Farnham When He Saw This Spanish Dancer. Her First Cast Work.

Mrs. Sally James Farnham, Who Feels That One of Her Proudest Moments Was When Her Own Home Town Selected Her to Do Its Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument.

Joan of Arc Is Her Favorite Heroine, So It Is Logical That One of Her Cherished Works Is a Reverent Statue of the French Saint.

BY all the laws of logic Mrs. Sally Farnham should have been a professional horsewoman. Her father was a lover of horses and she grew up, as the phrase goes, in the saddle. But a fortuitous twist of circumstance placed a mound of clay in her hand while she was convalescing in a New York hospital. A sick woman's caprice became a work of art—and Mrs. Sally Farnham became America's foremost woman sculptor.

But even when she found that she had the gift of making images out of clay, Mrs. Farnham didn't take to art in the usual way. "I never really studied art," she said. "I rode horseback."

The person to whom she made this remark looked a little blank. He didn't exactly see the connection between art and horseback.

"Well, it's this way," Mrs. Farnham explained. "Things come to you on horseback. False values fade away and the true proportions of your life and your world become apparent to you. I never have such an intense feeling for objects and for people as when I'm galloping through the park."

"Art, I've always loved it," says Mrs. Farnham. "Why, at the age of four, I was so devoted to a huge marble bust that my father, Col. Edward E. James, had imported from Italy, that I took a chair one day, crawled up to embrace the object of my affections, lost my balance and the world nearly lost an artist."

Mrs. Farnham, who has stepped to the front, outpacing all other competitors, is a sincere, gracious woman, devoted to her three children, John, Judie and Jimmie, respectively; adores her dogs and horses, and is the favorite of the mounted police at Central Park, New York City, where, every day, she goes riding at a furious clip.

Her studio is at 47 West Forty-seventh street, and there, hours at a stretch, she works, her lovely dogs surrounding her; her cat, Charlie Young, stalking majestically upon his mistress' masterpieces, leaving long, silky, black cat hair, doubtless omens of good luck.

Whatever has caused it, Mrs. Farnham has had luck. "How did it all come about?" she puzzles in answer to my questions. "I don't know, sheer boredom of the moment, I guess, while convalescing in a New York hospital.

"I had never studied art; I was born and bred an athlete. I lived in Ogdensburg, N. Y., where I was a scandal for breaking in my horses along Main street.

"I've a statue there now, the soldiers' and sailors' memorial. I'm terribly proud of it, for it's hard to 'put over' anything on your own home town."

But Mrs. Farnham doesn't "put it over," in the sense she refers to, for nearly every one of her most famous monuments have been selected after competition with forty or fifty other celebrated artists.

While lying in a New York hospital fate sent her the inspiration to make her first sculpture—a tiny nude figure. The house physicians were her critics, their instruments were her sculptoring equipment. The results were so encouraging that she established herself in a studio, children, dogs and cats included, and all went in for art.

It is perfectly apparent that Mrs. Farnham has an intense feeling for her art. This feeling shows in every line of her work—from that first figure she modelled in the hospital to the Bolivar statue or the bust of President Harding.

The figure she made in the hospital, a nude, Mrs. Farnham still has. But she dates her artistic career from the time she made a Spanish dancer, for it was this that elicited a stimulating compliment and criticism from the late Frederick Remington.

It had been arranged that Mr. Remington would look at this figure when she carried it to the plant where a bronze cast was to be made. Somehow she lost the address she was seeking and had a difficult time in finding it.

When she finally arrived, the legs of the Spanish dancer were broken off. The attendants had to wait while Mrs. Farnham supplied new ones. She finally finished it, placed it on the stand and asked Mr. Remington his verdict.

"'Ugly as the devil, but full of pep," he declared. "Go home and do some more." She did.

After that her career was a bit of straightaway course to Mrs. Farnham. Her ascent was gradual but sure. Four years after she made that first figure in the hospital Sally Farnham's name was a power in the world of art.

Her first order was for a large fountain to be set up in Baltimore. Later on, the Venezuelan government ordered a statue of Bolivar to be chosen from among the works of as many contestants as cared to enter. Two original statues which had been ordered were rejected. Thirty famous sculptors competed in the final trial and Mrs. Farnham's statue was chosen. This statue was set up in Central Park and presented to the United States government. President Harding made the principal speech at the unveiling.

Shortly before Marshal Foch was to arrive in New York, Mrs. Farnham was approached by the American Legion and asked to make a bust of the great French general. Arrangements were made with the General, but when the time came her model did not arrive. After waiting a long time she set about doing it without him.

When the Marshal finally came, the bust was completed. He was amazed at its fidelity as a portrait.

It afterward developed that Mrs. Farnham had completed the entire job one night after returning from the theatre. She went to work at 1 o'clock and had finished the bust by daybreak.

Another most effective portrait was that of President Harding. Mrs. Farnham attempted to model in the executive offices during the recent Arms Conference. The President was so busy that she finally returned to her New York studio and completed the modelling there.

"How did you like having the President as a model," she was asked.

"As a President he's a knockout," she answered. "But I could hardly recommend him as an artist's model. He's too busy."

Herbert Hoover proved more satisfactory in this last regard. He sat so well that she was able to finish her bust of him in about two hours. Other interesting productions of her studio are the frieze adorning the board room of the Pan-American Union in Washington, statues of Neysa McMein and Irene Castle, both of whom are great friends of hers, and Joan of Arc in armor with her white charger.

When Society Plays Circus

It's a Positive Thrill for a Rockefeller to Wait on a Table, a Pell to Ride Bareback, a Vanderbilt to Walk on Stilts, or a Belmont to Sell Hot Dogs---So Society Just Loves to Cut Up on the Sawdust.

and Motor Hippodrome, and was held at Mineola, L. I., and six thousand persons attended. Fifteen thousand dollars was raised for charity. William Collier, Mae Murray, Eddie Foy, Raymond Hitchcock, Katherine and Jane Lee and Adele Rowland appeared. But society folk were there in numbers. Annie Oakley, world champion woman pistol and rifle shot, also performed.

HOW Society does love to play circus! The smell of the sawdust was first wafted into blue-blood nostrils three summers ago. This season finds it established as a serious business of fun-making, with charity the beneficiary. Through the acts pass the Rockefellers, the Astors, the Vanderbilts, the Mackays, the Belmonts. They are the clowns, the bareback riders, the wild animal trainers and the peanut venders.

From a lark held at Southampton, L. I., in the summer of 1920 the idea has spread so that this season has seen the circuses at Long Beach, New Rochelle, Pocantico Hills, Mineola, Southampton, Greenwich, Park avenue, Manhattan; Manhasset, Bay Shore and Philadelphia. As an integral part of blue-blood affairs of note the society circus makes its stand beside the horse show.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. Cornelius Bliss, and other society leaders have just made the circus even more of an institution by promising Herbert Evans, entrepreneur of the society circuses, to help produce something that may be taken up country-wide—a Christmas holiday circus for kiddies in New York City.

Mr. Evans really does Mahomet one better when he stages the society circus. Mahomet went to the mountain. Mr. Evans transports Coney Island into the gathering places of the elite. Society likes Coney Island just as much as the hoi polloi. And with Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte as a ticket-taker, Vincent Astor as a barker, Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., clad in oriental costume, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., as circus ringmaster, and John D. Rockefeller in the flesh distributing shiny ten-cent pieces as gratuities among spectators, Coney Island, transplanted, becomes Coney Island more bewitching and entertaining.

Society was suffering very badly from an overdose of ennui when Mr. Evans, amusement manager of Luna Park, Coney Island, was called to the rescue. Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Mrs. Littleton Fox and Mrs. Gallatin complained that "things were so dead." So Mr. Evans told them he'd move Luna Park to Southampton, L. I., if they would help him. And they did. He set one to work selling peanuts and another as ringmaster and another in charge of the freak show. He had the late Enrico Caruso making sketches of visitors. Vincent Astor barked about "Psyche at the Spring," and fancy prices were paid to see the spectacle. But those who paid to witness it saw a beautiful young society maid take a medicine dropper and let fall three drops of water on her ankle—after she'd taken off her shoes and stockings. Then those who were "stung" for charity's sake went out and told everyone else how fine the show was just because they wanted someone else to be fooled, too. That side-show was profitable.

The most spectacular circus was held on Park avenue, between Forty-sixth and Fiftieth streets, New York City, for the benefit of the tuberculosis fund. The four city blocks were converted into an immense arena. Miss Isabelle Pell as an equestrienne gave a startling exhibition, as well as Mrs. Pierce Butler, Miss Bay Morris, and Miss Margaret Trimble, whose photograph, as they appeared in their acts are on this page.

Society circus performers are not content with receiving instructions from Mr. Evans during rehearsals at the places where the shows are staged. They study the shows and the freaks and the animals so as to get local color. Mrs. Jay F. Carlisle, Mrs. Bayard C. Hoppin, Mrs. Gerald Vanderbilt Hollins and Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., are depicted on the page "looking over" the "Daddy Long Legs" at Luna Park. The society equestriennes also trained at Luna Park.

Occasionally a group of society folk get up a circus of their own without the aid of the Luna Park animals and freaks. Such a one was held this season at Manhasset, L. I., and was highly successful. It was really the annual country fair for the milk fund of the Nassau County Association, but the stunts strongly reflected the genius behind the other society circuses. Miss Adele Ryan wandered about the country estate of the Payne Whitneys with a lamb on a leash and Miss Emma Louise Smith sold chances on a pedigreed calf and barked the qualities of the prize in excellent and convincing style.

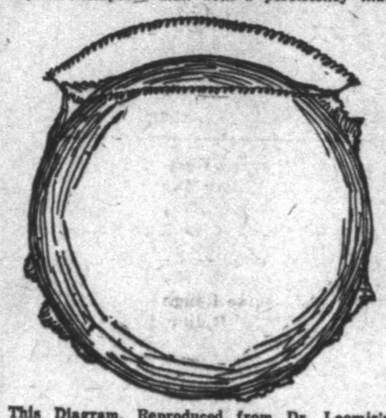

At Bayshore, L. I., the South Side Hospital, under construction, received much financial help out of the proceeds of the Chinese fete and the society circus which occupied the attention of the vacationists summering there for three days. Baron Collier conducted the circus, personally. Mrs. Gerald Vanderbilt Hollins, garbed as a Chinese woman, sold bird cages; Mrs. E. Duer Reeves took charge of a cute little 250-pound elephant; Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., and her daughter Alice were a big hit in their oriental costumes, and Mrs. Horace Havemeyer also made an effective Chinese belle.

The idea of the circus also was taken by the theatrical profession, with Fred Stone in the role of producer. It was called the Fred Stone Circus

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

Did American Dentist Invent the Radio Sixty Years Ago?

ON file in the archives of the United States patent office in Washington are a number of sensational documents, some of them dating from the year 1855, which prove almost conclusively that the radio was invented by an American long years ago. This man was a certain Dr. Mahlon Loomis, a dentist in Washington, whose struggles against adversity is a sad chapter in the romance of invention. Dr. Loomis was characterized as a wild, impractical dreamer, and his claims and ideas were ridiculed and belittled. As a matter of fact, he was a faithful, kind-hearted, mild-tempered man with a persistency that commanded the greatest respect. He walked steadfastly into the teeth of opposition, never once losing sight of his object and finally was granted a patent on his wireless telegraph on July 30, 1872.

As a pioneer in radio Dr. Loomis's work presents an epoch-making chapter in the development of civilization and forms one of the most sensationally interesting events in the history of invention and the perfection of wireless communication.

Back in the sixties Dr. Loomis had a dental office in Washington at 907 Pennsylvania avenue. The man had missed his calling. He was an inventive genius and a practical dreamer. Consequently, the gentle art of extracting aching molars and the manufacture of "store teeth" did not appeal strongly to him. He was a keen student of electricity and he gradually became obsessed with the idea that it was possible to transmit intelligence between two points without the use of metallic wires. He set about the development of a system which gave some results long before Marconi was born.

The personal records of Dr. Loomis are set forth in a recent volume entitled, "The Complete Radio Book," published by the Century Company of New York City. The authors of this book, Raymond Francis Yates and Louis Gerard Pacent, in reviewing the personal records of Dr. Loomis's work, have taken the greatest care to choose the notes that are most pregnant with facts, and they are presented in an effort to give "honor where honor is due." In their presentation of Dr. Loomis's work as a pioneer in radio the authors make it clear that they do not wish to be misunderstood. They are by no means asserting that Dr. Loomis discovered radio telegraphy, as it is understood today. The interesting records are presented for what they are worth.

In Loomis's day electrical science was in its infancy, and it is therefore very difficult to give Loomis's notes the proper interpretation. Quite naturally he speaks vaguely in many instances, and even the most thoughtful consideration does not seem to reveal the facts that he had in mind. As the authors point out later successful radio telegraphy was finally brought about through the use of high-frequency currents. Such currents were not known at the time of Loomis's experiments. It cannot be said with certainty that he did not use such currents. If Loomis did use them, he is, without doubt, the discoverer of radio telegraphy. In his patent specifications it is interesting to note that he mentions the word "pulsations," but the specifications, in the light of present-day knowledge, are so ambiguous that it is difficult to get their real meaning.

If Dr. Loomis did not use high-frequency currents, he must at least be credited with an idea that marked him as a genius. According to his records the system of radio telegraphy that he evolved was successful in transmitting signals over no small distance, and the world owes this wonderful man a great debt, which unfortunately it has never paid.

Dr. Loomis called his system "aerial telegraphy." His first public demonstration was made in 1866 from two peaks of the Blue Ridge mountains in Virginia. These peaks were 18 miles apart. The following notes, which describe this demonstration, have been extracted from Dr. Loomis's personal diary:

"From two mountain peaks of the Blue Ridge in Virginia, which are only about 2000 feet above tidewater, two kites were let up—one from each summit—18 or 20 miles apart. These kites had each a small piece of fine copper wire gauze about 15 inches square attached to their under side and connected also with the wire 600 feet in length which held the kites when they were up. The day was clear and cool in the month of October, with breeze enough to hold the kites firmly at anchor when they were flown.

"Good connection was made with the ground by laying in a wet place a coil of wire one end of which was secured to the binding post of a galvanometer. The equipments and apparatus at both stations were exactly alike; it was arranged that at precisely such an hour and minute the galvanometer at one station should be attached, to be in circuit with the ground and kite wires. At the opposite station the ground wire, being already fast to the galvanometer, three separate and deliberate half-minute connections were made with the kite wire and the instrument. This defleted or moved the needle at the other station with the same vigor and precision as if it had been attached to an ordinary battery. After a lapse of five minutes, as previously arranged, the same performance was repeated with the same results until the third time. Then 15 minutes precisely were allowed to elapse, during which time the instrument at the first station was put in circuit with both wires while the opposite one was detached from its upper wire, thus reversing the arrangements at each station.

"At the expiration of the 15 minutes the message or signals came into the initial station, a perfect duplicate of those sent from it, as by previous agreement. And although no 'transmisting key' was made use of, nor any 'sounder' to voice the messages, yet they were just as exact and distinct as any that ever traveled over a metallic conductor.

"A solemn feeling seemed to be impressed upon those who witnessed the little performance as if some grave mystery hovered there around the simple scene, notwithstanding the results were confidently expectcd, although the experiments had been continued for nearly two days before the line would 'work,' and even then it continued to transmit signals only about three hours, when the circuit became suddenly inoperative by the moving away of the upper electric body. Hence it is that high regions must be sought where disturbing influences cannot invade, where statical energy is stored in a vast unbroken element, enabling a line to be worked without interruption or possible failure. No speculation need be indulged as to whether the theory is correct, for theory and speculation must stand aside whether they will or not, and square themselves with the demonstrated truth."

Many of the sketches made by Dr. Loomis are very interesting. One of them, given herewith, shows how he used a kite to elevate his aerial. It is generally believed that Marconi was the first man to employ an aerial of that type, but here is definite proof that this American pathfinder, Loomis, used such a device several years before Marconi was born. Dr. Rogers of Hyattsville, Delaware, who is the inventor of an underground telegraph system, recently said to a relative of Dr. Loomis:

"Dr. Loomis had the aerial and he was the first one who had it. He sent up kites and hung copper wires on them. He also had the underground idea, and it was after talking with him that I started out to try to perfect the underground system of communication which I finally did, and which assisted considerably in the late war."

Inspired by the success of Samuel Morse, Loomis carried his idea to Congress and made an appeal for financial assistance. He worked with that body from 1869 to 1873, when there was passed a bill incorporating the "Loomis Aerial Telegraph Company," which was subsequently signed by President Grant. Congress, however, overlooked the matter of appropriating $50,000 which had been asked for, and which was necessary to cover the experiments that had been planned to bring the [redacted] apparatus to a state of commercial perfection.

Dr. Loomis's ambition floundered upon the rocks of destiny. He died broken-hearted, unsung and unhonored, in 1886. Some time before his death he made the following remarks to his brother. They are indeed not only pathetic, but today are prophecy fulfilled:

"George, I know that I am regarded as a crank, perhaps a fool, by some, and as to the latter possibly I am, for I could have discarded this thing entirely and accumulated a few thousand dollars and then be considered a success. But the time will come when this discovery will be regarded as of more consequence to mankind than was Columbus's discovery of a new world. I have not only discovered a new world, but the means of invading it, not with little frail boats of human build, but with the 'invisible chariots of the Almighty.' I shall never realize anything from it, neither money nor fame—as to fame I care nothing; so the world gets the benefit of it. As to money, I only want it for my family. They have necessarily been neglected more or less while I have devoted the best energies of my life to this, the grandest conception that ever occupied a human mind. My compensation is poverty, contempt, neglect, forgetfulness. In the distant future, when the possibilities of the discovery (as I see them) are more fully developed, public attention will be directed to its originator; and the congressional records will furnish the indisputable evidence that the credit belongs to me.

"But what good then? Still, there is a present satisfaction in knowing that some time the proper credit will be given. In the mean time, others will reap the benefit in worldly wealth and worldly honors. Monuments will be reared to their memory—costly monuments—in token of the world's appreciation of their genius. I ask but a rose-bush to mark my grave, affording a brief resting place for passing song birds, and I have a feeling that I shall even then be conscious of their carolings."

Does a LIBERAL MEAT DIET Make MEN GROW TALL?

NOTWITHSTANDING the contention of vegetarians, science has proved the great value of animal proteins in tissue building and in the substance of life when consumed in reasonable quantity. There is a quality in animal proteins that stimulates cell life and function and promotes physical and intellectual development that does not exist in fats, carbohydrates or minerals, unassisted, probably operating through pituitary stimulation. The population of the central powers in the recent war suffered intensely from the lack of fats and proteins especially, and now it is found, after the starvation period, that an abundance of fats and carbohydrates does not rebuild without the addition of meats. Even when inbreeding, selection and restrictions of climate are considered, it must be admitted that the Japanese stature has been limited by their age-long restriction to vegetarianism.

Dr. J. S. Landford, writing in the New York Medical Journal, points out that in moderately cold countries, where large quantities of meat are consumed, other things being equal, man is of large stature, as the North Chinamen, some of the Russians, the Teutonic peoples, Anglo-Saxons and other North country mixed breeds.

The same proposition applies to other island peoples similarly situated, and many less striking examples can be found. A fact of singular interest is that where oriental races have drifted away in early periods to more productive lands, where game and fruit were abundant, a larger growth has been attained. No finer physical men exist than some of the Pacific Islanders, especially the Polynesian New Zealanders.

The small stature and slender build of most Asiatic peoples, such as the Chinese, the Hindus and others, as related to food supply, is due to several causes; overpopulation and hunger over long periods; a monotonous rice diet; the lack of animal proteins, the meat animal in the Orient being absent or held sacred, aesthetic tastes barring animal foods.

The races that have attained the best development and made the greatest intellectual and commercial progress have been favorably located, with ports open to all the world, attracting ample supplies of a great variety of foods, including proteins, as the Greeks and Romans, and the well favored modern peoples.

A monotonous food, though of animal protein, is not wholesome, for the Arctic peoples, the Eskimos, Laps and others, whose food is highly nitrogenous, are of short stature. It is probable, however, that this is in part due to the hunger of the long winters, recurring famine and the age-long conflict with the cold. Dr. Helen Churchill Semple, a profound student of races and a distinguished authority, says that the dwarf races of Africa live almost exclusively on meat, a monotonous diet, and that the supply is often precarious. She is referring to the Bushmen, who are desert hunters, the Watmas, who are hunters of big game, and to the Hottentots, who are herders on uncertain grass lands. These races have all suffered much from scant supply and monotony of food, and while they have not had to contend with intense cold, they may have had to endure a good deal from climatic disease.

Alpine people are of short stature, and the higher the altitude the shorter the measurements. In the more moderately high altitudes they have a little meat and some vegetables, but in the higher altitudes the lack of pasturage makes it too expensive to raise food stock, and they subsist largely on dairy products.

The Honey BEE as an AID to CROPS

THE average person's conception of the bee is that it is a thing which gathers honey and has a sting. Now, the bee does not really gather honey, but merely the nectar, out of which honey is made. The conversion of this nectar into honey is one of Nature's subtle processes, of which even the scientific mind has but a hazy conception.

Its value in life's economy is not to be gauged by the amount of honey which the bee produces—that in itself is valuable—but by the fertilizing power it exerts on fruit crops throughout the country. No insect is of greater value than the bee; without it the fruit crops are an uncertain quantity.

If you bear in mind that a bee during its short life of six weeks must take nectar from sixty-two thousand clover blossoms to produce one pound of honey, involving two million seven hundred and fifty thousand visits, you can to some extent realize how important they are both to horticulturists and agriculturists.

It is almost impossible to produce healthy clover seed, or to secure fruit fertilization, apart from insect life. Bees are therefore the most useful workers in this field of Nature's economy. Watch them enter the flowers, gather their wads of pollen, even rolling themselves in the rich dust. Watch them fill their baskets and flit from flower to flower, distributing from stamen to pistil the essentials for the making of mature fruit.

But for this bee activity many trees and flowers would remain entirely barren. It is well known that in certain districts from which bees have disappeared fruit trees have ceased to bear, or bear very indifferently.

It is possible, of course, for the grower of fruit crops to assist materially in the production of healthy fruit by hand fertilizing. This can only be done in gardens where fruit growing is practised on the bush principle, the blossom being within easy reach from the ground. It will surprise anyone who has never tried the experiment, which is described by a writer in London Answers, to note the much better results obtained when Nature is assisted in distributing the pollen.

A small brush fastened to a stick is the method of hand fertilization. With this the blossoms are gone over from time to time when the pollen is in a dry state.

LOVE Story WILLOW Ware TELLS

IN nearly every household throughout the land may be found one or more pieces of china bearing the traditional willow-tree pattern. This quaint Chinese design which has existed hundreds of years, tells a simple love story from the dim past.

If you will examine one of these plates you will see that its blue pattern is made up of numerous pictures. To the right you see a lordly mandarin's country house. In the foreground is a pavilion, in the background an orange tree, and to the right of the pavilion a peach tree in full bloom. There is also a bridge and at the end of that a humble willow tree. On the water is a boat and on the other side is a peasant's cottage, lowly, poor and neglected. At the top of the pattern scheme, on the left-hand side, is an island with a cottage. The two birds on the landscape are, of course, turtle doves. The three figures on the bridge are the haughty mandarin's lovely daughter, the fond, true lover and the cruel mandarin.

The story which, according to Chinese tradition, originated this pattern is this: Once there was a mandarin whose only daughter fell in love with a poor young man. The latter lived on the island home portrayed on the top of the plate. He was employed by the mandarin. One day the mandarin heard the two pledging their love under the orange tree and forbade the match. However, they eloped "when the willow began to shed its leaves" and hid themselves in the gardener's cottage.

The mandarin followed, so they made their way by boat to the island home. The cruel mandarin still pursued them vowing to beat them both to death. He finally caught them but the gods of old China saved the loving couple by changing them into the doves that are pictured on your willow-tree ware.

Two Thousand Years to Improve an Idea

ARCHIMEDES is credited with the invention of the screw. Since 236 B. C. metal screws have been made. The shank of the screw has been turned from a bar of metal having the diameter of the screwhead, literally wasting a large percentage of the metal by reducing it to shavings.

How an American screw manufacturer has decided to change this practice is described in Popular Science Monthly. A metal bar the diameter of the shank is put in a matrix and subjected to enormous pressure. The head of the screw is thus expanded in the confined compartment, which gives it the desired shape. The only waste is in threading the screw and finishing the head.

A Metal Bar, the Diameter of the Shank, Is Subjected to Great Pressure in a Matrix to Form the Head of the Screws. The Only Waste Is in Threading and Shaping the Head of the Screw.

Two thousand years seems a long time to wait for an improvement, though.

Why Men Say, "Go to Halifax"

WHEN, in ancient days, the weaving industry of Halifax was a cottage craft—a farmer's family working on clumsy handlooms—the "pieces" used to be spread out on the hillsides, and were therefore peculiarly liable to theft.

Particular crimes lead to particular remedies, and a custom, which had the authority of a local law, grew up, that anyone convicted of stealing cloth to the (then) value of thirteen pence halfpenny was liable to immediate execution, a drastic law which naturally safeguarded the cloth industry.

Punishment was carried out, not by hanging, but by a sort of guillotine. This was the Halifax Gibbet Law, the name of which is preserved by a still standing street in the town, while the actual knife of the gibbet may be seen in the old Manor Rolls Office at Wakefield. Halifax thus acquired a reputation among thieves and vagabonds as the last town in England desirable to visit. And to tell anyone to go to Halifax is equivalent to bidding him "Go hang!"

How the Injury, "LAWN TENNIS LEG," Is CAUSED

HOW a tennis player may develop what in medical parlance is called a "lawn tennis leg" is explained by Dr. H. Kuttner, writing in the Deutsche medizinische Wochenschrift (Berlin) and quoted as follows by the Journal of the American Medical Association:

In the midst of a tennis game, a player suddenly stops short on feeling a sharp pain in the calf or farther down on the leg, Kuttner states. A muscle or a tendon (the Achilles tendon) has been torn. Usually the player is able to limp off the court, but sometimes has to be carried off.

A roentgenogram will confirm the usually certain diagnosis, and will reveal the details in regard to the site and extent of the laceration, as the tendon casts a distinct shadow on the roentgen plate. The roentgenogram is also useful in following the healing process in the tendon or muscle. Formerly such injuries were treated with splints or plaster bandages or even surgical therapy, with operative exposure of the injury and suture. The results were not good, or at least, recovery was delayed, as is shown by Dr. Fane's own experience, since it was 19 months before he could walk without embarrassment.

The only correct treatment is that which lays stress on the rapid restoration of function, does not confine the patient to bed, and induces him to begin walking at once. In mild cases, with a partial rupture of a muscle, this causes no difficulty. With the aid of a cane, the patient should at once make an attempt to walk, which will be painful at first, but after two or three days it will be easier, and after a week a normal gait can usually be reached.

In the mild cases, bandages are unnecessary and massage is superfluous. For nervous patients, if the pain is severe, a bandage may be used. For three or four weeks all violent exercise, including tennis, should be avoided; especially in older persons, as the lacerated muscle or tendon will otherwise break down again. Even in severe cases—total rupture of the Achilles tendon—walking should be begun at once, but here, since the pain is great and the foot is weak, the treatment introduced by Hood in England should be instituted.

The patient reclines on a sofa and the injured leg is kept in an elevated position. This suffices to check the hemorrhage, to bring down the swelling and ease the tension. The patient is admonished to walk more and more each day. In the severe cases the bandages may be renewed until the patient feels that he can dispense with them.

The prognosis is excellent even when the Achilles tendon is severed, but partial rupture of the muscle heals much more rapidly, though pains in the muscle may be felt for months.

DAN CUPID IS AN ENTERPRISING LITTLE CUSS

(By Central Press)

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Aug. 17—Frank Becker and Theresa Frank were married here but there were no wedding bells pealing out the joyous tidings.

Instead there was a salute of hoarse whistles. For a roundhouse supplanted the usual church in this case and greasy mechanics in their overalls took the place of the usual immaculately dressed guests.

Becker is a sergeant in Co. I, 121st Illinois Infantry on duty here guarding the shops of the Chicago and Alton. He's from Chicago and so is his bride.

Way back before the strike they planned their wedding. The date was set. Then Becker was called down here with his outfit.

But cupid was not to be denied and as the big day drew near with no prospects of Becker getting back to Chicago why it was simply another case of moving Mohammed to the mountain.

A military wedding was planned by officers of Becker's command. A player piano was imported to play the wedding march. Girls from the rail offices agreed to furnish the vocal music.

And so Miss Frank came, saw and became Mrs. Becker.

Of course a military wedding has its drawbacks and this was no exception—from the grooms point of view—for Lieutenant Colonel Richman and Major Haines claimed the perogatove of being the first to kiss the bride, due to their superior rank and—well, Becker is only a sergeant.

After the ceremony the company cook perpared the wedding breakfast and "they lived happily ever after."

(By Central Press)

CHICAGO, Aug. 17. — A romance which bloomed and blossomed into marriage on a college campus here, nurtured by bewitching moon, apparently has withered under the blistering rays of Mexico's tropical sun.

And Mrs. Guillermo Bergaro, 18, formerly Miss Helen Stohren, has sought aid of the Mexican consul here to aid her in finding her husband of ten months.

The former Miss Stohren, now just turned 18, succumbed to the irresistable ardor of the young Italian's wooing and married Borgaro here. For a time all was serene.

Borgaro regaled his wife with tales of his home in Guaymas, Mex., where his father, a retired banker and wealthy, at one time was Italian consul.

But his bride, perhaps, did not enthuse as much as he expected, over the prospects of a sun-baked home in Guaymas. Anyway last October Bergaro left here for a visit to his southern home.

Mrs. Bargara was lonesome, but letters and telegrams came almost every day to cheer her. That is up until two months ago. Since that time letters and telegrams sent to young Borgaro and his father have remained unanswered.

Now Mrs. Borgaro has appealed to the Mexican consul to assist her in locating her missing husband.

Mainly About People

This Interests You—
You Use a Knife—
You Also Pay for It—
Blame the Repubs—

ALL THE PEOPLE USE knives, carving, kitchen, bread and similar. All the people use pocket knives. All the boys of the land use pocket knives. Now the republican congressional tariff makers are going to make happy all these users of knives, including the housewives of the land by placing from 100 to 218 per cent advalorem tax on knives of foreign manufacture.

Seven republican senators led by Lenroot of Wisconsin voted to limit to 60 per cent the tariff on knives. They joined the democrats but the stand-patteres won the fight. And all table knives and they are found in every American household, must bear the brunt. That is, an American manufacturer of knives is to have no foreign competition. He is given 218 per cent protection. This tariff tax will fall on all the farmers of America, all the wage earners of America. As this is a political campaign year and the women have the ballot, they are reminded that Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin also lost a fight to limit the duties on scissors and shears to a hundred per cent ad valorem.

NOW ISN'T 100 PER CENT SUFficient? It is taken out of the pockets of the women of America, the homes of America and it is placed in the pockets of the gentlemen who manufacture scissors and shears. There should be a tariff for revenue and revenue alone. It should be levied alike on raw materials as well as finished products.

These congressional leaders of the republican party are framing a tariff bill that will indirectly rob the masses of the people and all for the benefit of those who are not in need of protection.

Last spring when the independent oil producers of America asked for a tariff on oil importations President Harding and his congressional leaders declared that all the people need petroleum products both crude and refined. Petroleum products remained on the free list. And three gigantic American companies control the oil fields of Mexico. All the big men with one exception, who are playing the oil game are republicans. Those who are democrats voted for Harding and Coolidge. They were promised protection against the pauper produced oil of Mexico and other foreign lands.

TEXAS CATTLEMEN DEMANDed a tariff on hide importations. They were told that all the people wore shoes. Hides are on the free list. All the people who have the money to buy it use meat. Meat is not on the free list.

All the people use knives. They are household essentials and necessities. Now why should all the people who use knives stand for a tariff of from 100 to 218 per cent on foreign importations? Why should the kingly manufacturers of Aemrica be given all the velvet? Why should they be given special privileges and special protection? Why overlook the buyer or consumer? Senator Broussard of Louisiana voted for the 218 per cent tariff on knives. Broussard is a sugar planter. His closest friends and most influential constituents are sugar planters. There isn't a manufacturer of knives in the state of Louisiana. Broussard is a political trader. He is a champion of a high

ARMY HURT BY BILL TO PLUCK OUT OFFICERS

Curry Has Plan to Remove What He Terms Danger

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Declaring a "serious error" was made in the last army appropriation bill, resulting in many injustices through the method prescribed for reduction of officer personnel, Representative Curry, republican, California, announced in a statement tonight that he would ask congress to pass an emergency corrective measure at the present session.

To support his plea for immediate action, Mr. Curry said he had made a thorough investigation of the present "plucking" process against which war department officials repeatedly have protested, and called attention to the recent letter written by General Pershing to Chairman Madden of the application committee declaring actual operation of the law would result in a much greater officer reduction than congress apparently had realized.

"I know that congress is not inclined to consider any new legislation at this session," said Representative Curry's statement, "but after considerable investigation, I am convinced the bill I shall introduce should be regarded as an emergency measure.

"After reading General Pershing's letter to the committee on appropriations I carefully investigated the matter and I am fully convinced a very serious error has been made by the congress; an error which strikes at our national defense policy in a vulnerable spot.

"If it is not immediately corrected, we cannot hope to recover from its effects in years.

"It is not entirely a question of reduction, but the manner in which the reduction of officer personnel is provided for in the act. The only officer in the army who is assured of retention is General Pershing. If this reduction of the number of officers were on an efficiency basis of merit, it would not be so serious, and the army could possibly recover quickly. It is no such basis.

"The act of congress specified the number of officers of each grade (or rank) who are to be retained.

"The practical result is that of the large number of officers to be dropped the greatest proportion are captains and colonels. Every one familiar at all with military affairs knows that they are closer to the troops than officers of any other grade or rank.

"The act will necessitate the dropping of highly trained and well qualified officers because their ranks are overcrowded and we are then to fill up the numbers by holding examinations from civil life for second lieutenants, most of whom know practically nothing of warfare or military science."

YOUNG TIDWELL DIES OF WOUND AFTER SHOOTING

Girl Witnesses Tragic Affair on Scott Street

Stanley Tidwell, 21 years of age, 2513 Grant street, died in the Call Field hospital at 2 o'clock this morning from the effects of a gapping head wound inflicted by a .38 Smith and Wesson revolver. The shot entered the head slightly behind the left ear, ranged upward and came out over the right eye. No hope was held out for his recover from the first.

The shooting took place in front of the residence at No. 501 Scott street, at 11:30 last night.

Following the shooting police questioned Miss Grace Phillips, 20, an employe of the Western Union and formerly of Bowie; W. R. Taylor, of Durant, Okla., with rooms at the Coleman hotel, and Charles Harrison.

According to Miss Phillips version of the shooting, Tidwell drove up in front of her home in company with W. R. Taylor at about 11:30 o'clock.

Tidwell sounded the horn of his car, according to Miss Phillips and she came out into the street.

The Girl's Statement

As she started toward the machine, Tidwell got out of the front seat, on the opposite side of the car and called to her to come to him, according to Miss Phillips. He went to the rear of the car.

According to Miss Phillips, Tidwell said to her:

"Grace, are you going to tell me that you're through witn me?"

"Stanley, I've told you that I was," Miss Phillips says she replied.

"As I spoke, I saw him take a gun from under his coat", Miss Phillips said. She then screamed, according to her story to the police, and ran to the house.

Just as she reached the porch a shot rang out and she ran on into the house.

Taylor, after hearing the report of the revolver, called to Tidwell, he says, telling him to come on into the car and behave himself.

When Tidwell failed to answer, Taylor says he looked around the side of the car and saw the body of Tidwell in the road. He then started the car and came on to town, finding Officer Graham at Eighth and Scott street. The two went back to the scene of the shooting. Upon their arrival several neighbors, who had heard the report of the gun, had gathered. An ambulance was called and the body was taken to Call Field hospital.

Dr. L. D. Parnell, who attended Tidwell, explained that the bullet went in over the left ear and came out over the right eye.

Tidwell Met Girl Twice

According to W. R. Taylor's version of the shooting, Taylor, Tidwell and two other boys had been riding earlier in the evening in Tidwell's car.

While they were riding they passed Miss Phillips with Charley Harrison riding in another machine.

After passing the couple Tidwell and Taylor drove down to the girl's house and parked their machine, to await her arrival. When she and Harrison drove up, Tidwell asked her if she still thought that "she was through with him." When the girl replied in the affirmative, according to Taylor, they drove off. They went to Tidwell's house and as he started into the house, he told Taylor that if his brother came up while he was indoors to tell him that he had a load for Archer City. (Tidwell was driving a rent car.)

They came back to town and met Harrison in his car, according to Taylor, and after seeing him, Tidwell said that "he reckoned Grace was home now" and started toward her house. They drove on down past the front of the house, and not seeing a light, they turned down Fifth, toward Indiana, as they went by the side of the house they saw a light in the back of the house from Fifth street and drove back in front of the house and stopped. Tidwell then sounded his horn, according to Taylor, and the girl came out. The shooting followed.

REV. KEEVIL SERIOUSLY ILL

Rev. J. Lem Keevil, pastor of the First Christian church, who is suffering from a virulent attack of pneumonia, was in a serious condition.

The illness is a result of a cold taken when Rev. Keevil was returning from Mayo brothers' sanitarium where he had been operated on for throat infection several days ago.

The operation came after a small pearl button had been coughed up, presumably the cause of the abscess which necessitated the operation.

Rev. Keevil made a short address to his congregation Sunday morning, but was suddenly stricken with a severe chest and lunk attack. Rev. Walter Tyson was called and reported last night the serious condition of the minister.

Members of the congregation are in attendance at the bedside and hopefully watching developments.

Rev. Keevil has been pastor of the church here for the past several years. He is one of the most widely known ministers of this section of the state

Attorney Gets 7 Years for Killing Sweetheart's Dad

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Ark., August 20.—Willard Pendergrass, attorney of Altus Arkansas, and former state mine inspector, today was found guilty of second degree murder, by the jury trying him for the shooting of C. Clay McIlroy, merchant of Ozark, Ark., last January 13. He was sentence d to seven years imprisonment and was released on $10,000 bond pending an appeal.

The jury deliberated 13 hours in reaching a verdict. Evidence at the trial indicated that the shooting, which occurred on a sidewalk in front of an Ozark bank, had grown out of the attorney's alleged intimacy with his victim's 19-year-old daughter, to whom a child was born, in Oklahoma City, ten days before the killing. The girl on the witness stand accused Pendergrass.

HUGHES UPHOLDS NEWBERRY RACE

Says He Was Victim Of Unjust Trial

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Secretary Hughes, in a letter made public tonight by the republican national committee expresses the conviction after a review of the Newberry case "that Senator Newberry was wrongly and most unjustly convicted."

The secretary, writing to the Rev. Hugh B. McCaulley, of Patterson, N. J., in response to an inquiry as to the "facts" in the Newberry case gives in detail the findings of the courts, especially the supreme court, which set aside the conviction of Mr. Newberry and then concludes:

"Despite the long period of preparation, the rigid investigation, the careful choosing of their ground, the long drawn out trial, the attempt in every possible way and the zeal, ability and even bitterness of his pursuers, their endeavor to establish a violation of law on the part of Senator Newberry completely failed and accordingly Senator Newberry stood as a senator duly elected by the people of the state of Michigan and entitled to his seat in the senate of the United States."

Mr. Hughes expressed the belief that 'there seems to be a general misconception of the nature of the litigation and its result and Senator Newberry has suffered in consequence a most serious injustice."

CHICAGO KLANS INITIATE 4650

25,000 Gather to See Ceremony

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Beneath the red glare from a blazing cross what was said to be the nations biggest class of new ku klux klansmen—4,650 candidates—were initiated in a huge field just out of Chicago late last night.

While thousands of voices chanted the surging roll of "Onward Christian Soldiers," the candidates still garbed in their working clothes, faced the cross and its circle of white-clad intiators and pledged their allegiance to the "invisible empire."

The mystic rites were held in a great field, thousands of automobiles being parked in a circle a quarter of a mile in diameter. In the center of the circle outlined by the glaring headlights of the cars was the cross, 20 feet high and wrapped in cotton from the southern fields. It was estimated that 25,000 persons witnessed the ceremonies, representing the 18 klans in Chicago and the 12 outside the Cook county in the state.

REWARD PUT UP FOR ARREST OF RAIL WRECKERS

Two Enginemen Are Taken Out of Mass Of Debris Dead

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—The wrecking of express train No. 39 en route from New York to Chicago, with the loss of two lives near Gary Indian, early this morning, resulted from the deliberate removal of 27 spikes from one of the rails, Michigan Central railroad officials announced tonight. A $1,000 reward was offered for the arrest of those responsible.

The wreck took place about a mile east of Gary at 2:10 a. m., while the train which carried no passengers was traveling at a speed estimated at more than 50 miles an hour in an effort to make up lost time.

When the heavy engine struck the rail from which the spikes had been removed it plowed along on the ties for some distance and then turned completely over. The two enginemen were dead when removed from the wreckage.

The cause of the wreck remained a mystery some hours because of the confusion at the scene and because of the fact that the rails had been ploughed up and tossed about like match wood for hundreds of feet by the locomotive. Eight cars loaded with merchandise followed the engine into the ditch, the others remaining on the track.

An investigation by Martin Quinn, special agent of the road revealed that while the road bed had been ground into an unrecognizable mass from the spot where the train had left the rails, enough remained at the place where the engine had been thrown from its course to furnish evidence of the work of the train wreckers.

Everything ahead of gap, however had been destroyed.

Edward Coy, engineer, Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Frank Lubbs, fireman, Niles, Michigan.

The injured are:

C. H. Stockwell, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

A. B. Heath, Buffalo, N. Y.

ENGINEER SURVIVED BY INVALID WIDOW

NILES, Mich., August 20.—Edward Coy, engineer, and Frank Lubbs, fireman, who were killed in the wreck of the New York-Chicago express train near Gary Sunday morning, both lived in Niles.

Coy, who was nearly 60 years old, had been on the Chicago run for 16 years and had been an employe of the Michigan Central for 30 years.

He is survived by a widow, an invalid, who is prostrated. It is feared she cannot live.

Lubbs was married last April. His bride recently left here to visit Lubbs' parents in Iowa.

A party of railroad officials and friends of the dead men who visited the scene of the wreck report that 17 spikes were removed from the ties. A crow bar stolen from the Gary street car line whose tracks parallel the Michigan Central tracks at the point where the accident occurred, was found near the tracks.

Hale County May Get Farm Agent

PLAINVIEW, Aug. 20.—It looks as if Hale county will have to employ a woman demonstration agent regardless of the opposition voiced by a number of voters on the score that the treasury is lean and taxes are mounting. The women espousing the cause have asked the commissioners' court to give them a month in which to secure signatures to a petition to that end. The county would have to dig up $1200.

German Glider Soars Through Air For Two Hours in Motorless Plane

By Associated Press

GERSFELD, Germany, Aug. 20. Herr Hentzen a student flyer of the Hanover technical school, late Saturday afternoon in the glider tests on the Rhoen mountains, established a new glider record by remaining in the air two hours and ten seconds.

Hentzen used the same single deck sail plane in which another student named Maertens previously had made a flight of 66 minutes. He reached an altitude of 100 meters above the summit of the Wasser Kuppe which is at an elevation of 950 meters and later mounted to a height of 200 meters, which he maintained throughout his uniform flight, cruising with a wind velocity of from seven to nine miles.

The German achievements are cited as results of the theories advanced by Justav Lilienthal, pioneer constructor of the motorless plane.

Lilienthal was one of the early students of aviation who went deeply into the problem of maintaining equilibrium. Natural air currents were utilized and the aviators obtained balance and stability through the movement of their own bodies or through the action of portions of their aircraft which they had under control. In a machine with but wings and depending upon gravity as its motive power Lilienthal made more than 2,000 glides safely, but finally was killed in 1896 when his machine was overturned by a sudden gust of wind.

Auto Wreck Victim Tells of Crash Five Days After Fatal Accident

Saturday morning, a week after he was seriously injured in an automobile accident, E. Blatchley, chief clerk of the Kemp hotel, sat up in his bed and asked where he had been for the past five days.

"Right here in bed," a nurse who attended his bedside at the Jones-Lee-Kiel hospital, informed him.

It was the first time Blatchley had been conscious for any length of time since the wreck at the Katy-Electra road crossing which ended fatally for T. I. Smith, tailor, who died an hour and a half after the accident.

Mrs. Blatchley, wife of the man who drove the car, was removed from the hospital Saturday at the instance of her sister, Mrs. Ida Slayton of Oklahoma City, who arrived here Saturday morning. It was learned last night that Mrs. Blatchley's shoulders and back are bruised, while the bones in her left arm are broken as a result of the crash. Mrs. Nora Watkins, also an employe of the Kemp hotel and who was in the wreck, is still confined to the sanitarium, three of her ribs being torn loose, while her kidney is crushed and her left collar bone is broken.

Mr. Blatchley's injuries have not yet been determined, the physicians expressing the belief that he is suffering seriously from concussion of the brain.

Blatchley described the accident to attendants Saturday, stating that he remembered the left front wheel of his Sayer automobile collopsed when he had struck the high portion of the Katy trackage Sunday at midnight, a week ago.

He will be removed from the hospital this morning to his rooms in the Hoffman apartments.

Prohi Sleuth Will Dress Up After Convicting Officer of Bootlegging

Archie Tyler, prohibition enforcement officer, who returned here yesterday following a 10 days' vacation trip to his parents' ranch in Hood county, has gained for himself new honors.

Tyler has captured the prize offered by Rev. Atticus Webb, president of the Anti-Saloon league of Texas, and now awaits orders from the leaders of that organization to make a hurried trip to Dallas, Texas, where he will "collect" a brand new suit of clothes that Rev. Webb must purchase.

No, it isn't a "bet" that Archie has won. Rev. Webb sometime ago offered a new suit of clothing to the first prohibition enforcement officer in Texas that placed under arrest and successfully convicted any peace officer for violations of the prohibition statute who was operating in a field where the Volstead act was not properly enforced.

Taylor, aided by Chief of Police J. W. McCormick, some time ago arrested and helped to convict a peace officer for selling whisky. The officer, it became known, served 98 days in prison upon conviction, and now Tyler is the winner of the offer, this being the first case in the state of Texas where a prohibition agent convicted any peace officer for such an offense.

Tyler received notice some time ago that he was the winner of the clothing, information to this effect reaching him prior to his departure for Hood county on his vacation. However, he must make a trip to Dallas, shake the hand of Atticus Webb, and then be fitted for the new suit before he has fulfilled his part of the contract.

NO INITIAL PAYMENT REQUIRED TO BUILD HOME ON OWN LOT

Wichita Firm Makes It Easy For People to Build Homes; Will Furnish Lots And Build Houses

BY HOME BUILDER

Many people wish to own their own homes, but do not know exactly how to go about doing it. And yet, it is a very simple matter if you really wish to own your own home.

Since the start of the Record News home building campaign, more than a week ago, several plans by which the building of a home may be financed have been discussed. Today I will take up the plan perfected by one local firm since the beginning of the Record News campaign.

Realizing the need for more homes here, and the actual lasting benefit to the city through such a campaign, this firm has perfected a plan for home ownership that makes it possible for every family in Wichita Falls to live in its own home, if it wishes to do so. The plan has such merit, and offers such opportunities to the prospective home owner that I am going to discuss it in detail. It is another good solution to the housing problem here.

Low Initial Payment

Any family, with an initial payment, as low as $750, can have its own home, the other payments are arranged like rent, and are in monthly payments of from $50 up. The size of the payments is arranged on the ability of the purchaser to pay.

The firm is building homes in various sections of the city, some to cost as low as $1500, well adapted to the pocketbook of the laboring man, many costing from $2,500 to $3,500 and more expensive homes, in exclusive residence sections, costing as much as the purchaser wishes to pay.

Let me stress this low initial payment. This makes it possible for anyone to own their own home. $750 will not buy the lot on which the majority of these houses are built. Some of the lots are worth more than $2,000.

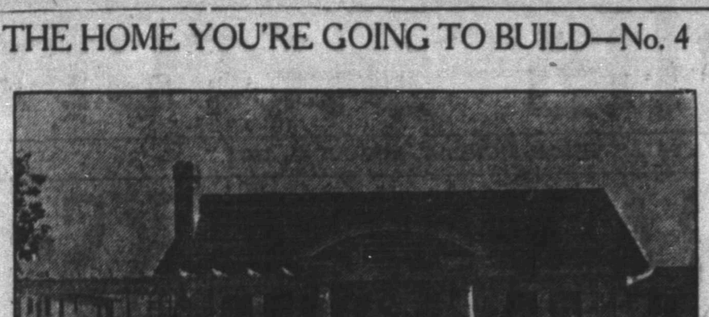

Build On Your Own Lot

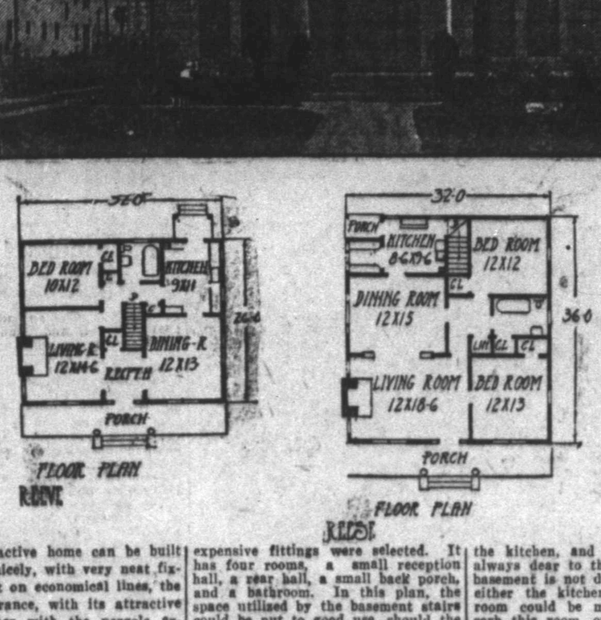

Another feature of the plan is this. While the firm has lots located in many sections of the city, and in any sort of neighborhood desired, it is not necessary to build on these lots. If you have a lot of your own, or another which you wish to buy, they will build the house without any initial payment, on your own lot.

The firm, which specializes in the building of houses, has a number just completed, and several under construction. These houses may be purchased at once, or if the buyer wishes he may select his own plans, and the company will build accordingly.

While the payments seem small, and are stretched over a period of five years, they draw but eight per cent interest, as low if not lower than any other form of home financing. "This is possible," says the head of the firm, "because we believe in the future of Wichita Falls, and because we do not believe we are taking any risk in tying our money up in real estate here."

THE HOME YOU'RE GOING TO BUILD—No. 4

There are two floor plans submitted with this model. First let us discuss the four-room plan. This would be the cheaper of the two, and could probably be built for $2,200 unless expensive fittings were selected. It has four rooms, a small reception hall, a rear hall, a small back porch, and a bathroom. In this plan, the space utilized by the basement stairs could be put to good use, should the owner not desire a basement. The closet at the rear of the reception hall could be extended all the way across, and the space in the rear hall could be converted into a very convenient linen closet.

The larger plan would cost from $2,500 to $2,800 at the most. It has considerable more floor space, one additional bedroom, a breakfast nook in the kitchen, and more closet space, always dear to the housewife. If a basement is not desired in this plan, either the kitchen or the rear bedroom could be made larger to absorb this room, or a large cupboard could be built in the kitchen. The living room and the dining room in this plan connect with double doors, a very convenient arrangement which is desirable for the family that entertains.

This home would be hard to beat, at any price, yet it can be constructed at a price within the reach of everyone.

DEMOLAY CLASS TO BE INITIATED

Special Meeting to Be Held

William R. McClure, master councilor of Hope chapter, order of De Molay for boys, has announced a special meeting for September 5, at which time a large class of candidates will be initiated. The meeting will be held at the Shrine auditorium at Call field at 7:30 p. m., and all the degrees, including the third, under the direction of Albert Ellis, will be conferred. Mr. McClure states that this meeting has been arranged in the evening to give every Mason in this section of the country an opportunity to attend.

The De Molay boys entertained the Shriners at their last ceremonial with a tableau from the De Molay degree. This made a great impression on the Shriners and many of them have indicated that they would like to have an opportunity to see the work put on. This opportunity will be afforded them on September 5.

George Rose, the scribe of the order, advises that he has more than 60 petitions on file now and it is expected that the number will exceed a hundred by September 1.

The order of De Molay is a junior fraternal order for boys between the ages of 16 and 20 years who are the sons of Master Masons or the chums of such. The order, although young, has a very large membership in all parts of the United States.

DATES SET FOR FALL REUNION

J. L. Stephens, secretary of Dallas consistory No. 2, announces the dates of November 21 to 24, inclusive, for the fall reunion, which will cover a four-day period this fall, instead of five days.

The indications are favorable for a very large class for this fall, as a great many of the petitioners were unable to attend the spring reunion. New petitions from Wichita county have been mailed to the secretary in large numbers and the present outlook is very flattering for a large representation from this section of the country.

Secretary Stephens advises that special arrangements are being made for the comfort of the class, one outstanding feature being that all meals will be furnished at the expense of the consistory.

Frank Collier, J. D. Avis, J. A. Kemp, Walter D. Cline, Otto Stehlik and C. O. Frits, as well as other Scottish Rite Masons, will attend the reunion.

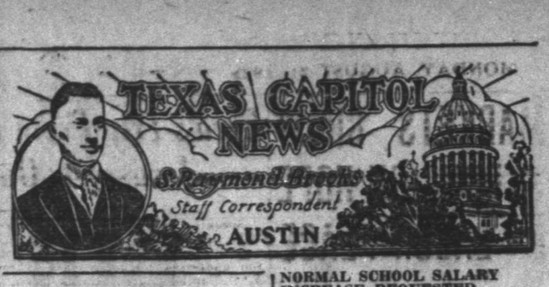

MASKAT TO HOLD CEREMONIAL IN FALL

Maskat Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., will hold its fall ceremonial during Thanksgiving week. It may be held on Thanksgiving day, although the date has not been definitely decided upon. The local temple, which will be two years old on the 31st day of August, has 1450 members. At the time the temple was instituted, its membership consisted of the signers of the petition for dispensation, numbering 425. Since that time, the increase has been 1025, or an average of over five hundred a year.

The Shrine temple is one of Wichita Falls' largest institutions, creating a fratrenal and friendly spirit between this and all the surrounding towns.

One of the greatest undertakings of the temple will be the trip by special train next June to attend the imperial council session to be held in Washington, D. C. Equipment has been ordered and hotel reservations have been made. At least one hundred and fifty shriners will make the trip, which will include the band, patrol, chanters, imperial representatives and others.

TEXAS CAPITOL NEWS

NORMAL SCHOOL SALARY INCREASE REQUESTED.

Special to the Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 20.—A ten per cent increase in salaries at all Texas normal schools for the coming two years has been asked in budget estimates filed by heads of the schools wit hthe state board of control. and mother, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Tidwell, 2313 Grant avenue, and two brothers, Cliff and William.

Young Tidwell is well known here, having driven service cars for his brothers for several years during the boom days.

At the time of his death he was driving a car and stated shortly before the affair that he had a load to take to Archer City last night.

Following the death at Call Field hospital, W. S. Tidwell, brother of the dead man, went to police headquarters and identified the gun found beside the man when officers reached his side after notified of the affair.

The brother corroborated the story told of young Tidwell's trip home at midnight and also that he had declared he was going to make a drive to Archer City. When told this, the brother insisted that young Tidwell take his gun for safety. This was the gun found, with one exploded shell, beside the victim.

All persons questioned by officers were permitted to return to their homes.

At 2:30 no inquest had been held over the body.

The body was taken the Hine's undertaking parlor where it will be prepared for burial. Funeral arrangements had not been completed at a late hour.

Following the incident Miss Phillips became almost hysterical and was hardly able to talk to officers who were investigating the case. She seemed very badly broken up over the affair and when permitted to return home, was barely able to walk. While her condition is not serious, a physician who was called, stated that it would be best that she not be questioned at all.

Promoter of Dempsey Bout Bows To Governor for Name of Boxing

By Associated Press

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., August 20.—Floyd Fitzsimmons, promoter of the boxing exhibition to be staged on labor day between Jack Dempsey and Bill Brennan, today made public a letter to Governor McCray in which he formerly notified the governor that the bout had been called off.

"While I do not admit that it had been my intention to violate the law by putting on a prize fight contrary to the statutes of Indiana, yet I am bowing to your will," the letter said. "As governor of the state of Indiana you have spoken and your word with me is law even though in yielding without a struggle, as I do, I am sorry to admit that I am financially embarassed far more grievously than you can imagine.

"It requires courage to make this decision," the letter continued, "and I only hope that you appreciate that first and above all things that myself, Mr. Dempsey, Mr. Brennan and Mr. Kearns are men who have respect for authority and who desire to maintain boxing not only in this state but elsewhere on the highest level possible.

"The publicity given not only as to the boxing exhibition, but primarily to your decision was national, and now that I have publicly spoken there will be no blazing head lines carrying defiance to the wishes of the governor of the state of Indiana.

"Dempsey, who went to Chicago to visit friends is expected to leave for California after a conference with Manager Kearns who will leave here tomorrow. Brennan said he expected to remain here for a few days before going to Chicago to see what his manager had in view."

"We want no delay in getting back on jobs. We are confident the call will not be later than Monday." The message had Mr. Jewell's name signed to it and was addressed to all general chairmen of the federated shop crafts.

Code Message Used

Shop crafts officials at strike headquarters here said that in case a decision was reached to call off the strike it would not be according to union procedure for Mr. Jewell to send a telegram and even had he sent it, it would have been in code or would have been preceded by code messages.

tariff on sugar immportations. He knows that he must trade.

ALL THESE STAND-PAT SENators of the republican party who believe in taxing the backs and bellies of the people are not the vast wealth of the country voted for a high tariff on sugar importations. Broussard of Louisiana had to stand bitched. They had him hobbled. He voted to make the women of America pay a hundred per cent tariff tax on scissors and shears.

He voted to compel all the knife users of the country, from palace to shack, and from mansion to cottage to pay 218 per cent duty if they had dared to buy a knife of foreign make. This is what Col. John Henry Kirby calls protecting the homes of the people and the pockets of the people from competition with the pauper labor of the world.

There must be revenue raised to pay the cost of government. Then why not a tariff for revenue? Only a tariff that gives incidental protection to the products of the farm and ranch as well as to the finished products of the manufacturers of America? Crude petroleum is on the free list. Refined products of petroleum are on the free list. Hides are on the free list. Now why shouldn't knives and scissors and shears be on the free list? All the people use them. All homes must have them.

MARKETS GROW STRONG ON HOPE OF LABOR PEACE

Hesitancy Vanishes During Week's Operations

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—While the last week has brought little news of a constructive nature, hopes for settlement of existing labor controversies have mounted and the country's leading markets have shown an undertone of quiet strength.

Hesitancy which was in the ascendancy as the week opened, vanished as reassuring notes were struck from several quarters.

The breaking of the London reparations conference had an adverse effect here. Anxiety was also occasioned by delay in announcing an agreement for settling the coal strike and by fear that other railroad brotherhoods might join the shopmen's strike added another cause for alarm.

Several favorable influences soon turned sentiment into more optimistic channels, however.

Among them were the news from Cleveland that a basis had been reached for a soft coal strike settlement, calling of a meeting at Philadelphia to settle the anthracite difficulty and agreement of the railroad executives to meet the leaders of the "big four" brotherhoods.

More hopeful news from abroad and a favorable cotton consumption report also had a stimulating effect.

Coal production for the week ending August 12 approached the 5,000,000 mark and union mines which are already re-opening will add a million tons or more to present operating capacity. This is far below normal output, stocks are low and coal rationing will be necessary for some time to come.

Ezra's Trip From Babylon To Jerusalem Outlined By Robertson

Speaking from the golden text, "The hand of God is upon them that seek him for good," W. L. Robertson addressed his bible class in the First Baptist church Sunday morning on the subject of Ezra going from Babylon to Jeruselum 80 years after the first return to Jews to their native city.

"Ezra started from Babylon on the first day of B. C., 458," said Mr. Robertson, "and departed from the river Ahava on the 12th day of the first month, reaching Jeruselum on the first day of the 5th month, making the trip in exactly four months. This was 80 years after the first return. It was 70 years from the time of captivity of the Jews to the first return making it 150 years from the captivity to the second return of the Jews.

"Ezra was probably born in Babylon in the reign of King Darius and grew to manhood under Xerxes. He was a Levite, a descendent of Levi. He was possessed of a splendid education being well grounded in the knowledge of Hebrew law, the books of Moses and as a Jewish boy it is likely that he was taught music, sacred poetry, the interpretations of the law and Hebrew history.

"Aside from being the author of the book of Ezra it is generally held that Ezra wrote the Chronicles also. He was a true student of the word of God and so studied that he could put the word into practice in his life.

"In the fulfillment of his highest ambition Ezra's heart was filled with thanksgiving and as is recorded Ezra broke out into praises for his God. This Jewish leader was no more favored by province than we may be during the present time. But Ezra longed to serve his master and he was a man whom God could honor because he honored God in the first place. He was a man of purpose and of much the same character as Daniel. Of him it is recorded that he purposed in his heart to be true to God and without purpose there can be progress in religion or anything else.

"Had it not been for the Jews in Babylon Judaism might have perished in Palestine. Ezra was the great champion of the law and the old faith which God raised up and sent to call the Jews in Palestine back to true religion.

"Many of the first party that went back to their native land had passed away. The temple had been neglected and was on the road to decay. Inter-marriage with other people was common and the worship of Jehovah was seriously neglected. This shows what a state existed in Palestine when Ezra went there to revive his people. The Jews in Palestine and their descendants had formed associations among people not true to their God and in that day as in this day associations had led to neglect the worship of their God. Jerabbel is remembered for his works in re-establishing the people in their homes and for rebuilding the temple. But Ezra was not a builder. He was not an administrator of government but was primarily a teacher. After him there appeared Nehmiah, the third leader, who came in the year B. C. 444 who was noted for his administrative ability and for rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem. But Ezra came to instruct his people in the Law of Moses. Without his instruction the works of the other leaders would have come to naught. This was proven many years before by Nebachednezar who, from a human standpoint, had built up a great kingdom having wealth and prosperity. But his life proved a failure because he had neglected the most important thing—he did not worship the true God. There are many men in this day and time who apparently have all that could be desired in the way of earthly goods but their lives are a blank and can be counted as nothing because they have not God in their heart. "For what profit a man if he gain the whole world and yet loses his soul. But coming back to Ezra, we find a man who knew that the worship of God was the greatest thing in life. There appears to have come to him a definite call to teach and he was true to that call. He studied that he might teach correctly. The Jews in Jerusalem needed the brethren in Babylon telling of the forgetfulness and deplorable condition of the Jews who had gone back to their native soil. When Ezra reached Jerusalem he was greatly astonished at the conditions prevailing among his people. In his heart there came a more decided determination to impart the spirit of the law of God and lay a foundation for knowledge and obedience. Teaching with him, became a passion and a sacred task.

"Henry Drummond says: "To become like Christ is the only thing in the world worth caring for. The thing before which every ambition of man is folly and all lower achievements vain. We can have no nobler ambition than to do as Ezra did, to love and do the works of God.

What others think of thee, stay not to ask
Rather than please the many, serve the few,
Knowing that life's most glorious regal task,
Is never quite too hard for thee to do.

Mr Robertson told in detail of the work of Ezra in bringing his people back to God and in fact saying them from a degredation to which they were falling. He told of the faith of Ezra who when he left Babylon did not ask for an escort of horsemen to keep away the maurading bands so common in that day, but asked his followers to fast and pray for their safe journey. And God heard their prayers and watched over them. More faith and more prayer today with more work for God would accomplish much for humanity, Mr. Robertson said and would make the world a much better place in which to live.

In conclusion Mr. Robertson summoned up the work of Ezra and what it meant to his people and how the one man through his faith in God and work had done so much.

Texans in Washington Society

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The all-too-brief vacation being over, the house of representatives reconvened Tuesday and its members hurried back in order to be here when the speaker's gavel fell on Tuesday morning.

Somewhat reluctantly, however, they assembled, for election looms in many districts and the campaign is more engrossing than the tariff—especially if it happens to be one's own campaign for re-election.

President Harding's gentle hint that he would like to have congress on the job after August 15, gave the house a bit of a jolt, as they had been perfecting plans which, by means of a series of three-day recesses and a "gentlemen agreement" not to "start anything" in the way of legislation for the present, might give them more time to devote to mending their fences. They proposed to put off their return, most of them, until the primaries were over, and to hustle back in time for a vote on the tariff and the bonus bill, which is next in order of business, and then to be off again for an intensive pre-election drive back home during the last days of October. But the president would seem to feel that he may need the backing of congress in handling the rail and coal strikes, so the members of the house came back to Washington Tuesday, some of them elated by victories in the primaries, some of them elated by victories in the primaries, some of them east down by defeat, and many undeniably anxious as to what the outcome of primary fights might be—and joined the members of the upper house who have been toiling away at the tariff these many weeks while their colleagues have been away.

However, the congressional women folk are lingering on at home or selling this opportunity to go to the mountains or the seashore for a little holiday. They were very late in getting away and don't feel that they need hurry back to town until the time comes to put their houses in order for the winter or to get their children ready for school, even if their husbands must return.

SEYMOUR NEWS IN BRIEF

SEYMOUR, Aug. 19.—Rev. W. M. Scott of Gustine, Texas, has been assisting Pastor H. A. Martin in a revival meeting with the Red Springs Baptist church. Mr. R. C. Brinkley of Westover led the song service.

The meeting closed Monday with a baptizing in Rev. D. D. Badgett's tank at which time 12 were baptized. There were 22 conversions during the meeting, and a number joined by letter. Two surrendered to preach, one being the singer, Mr. Reuben Brinkley, and the other Rev. Badgett's son, Dolphus. Mr. Brinkley preached his first sermon during the meeting and several Benjamin people came over to hear him. He had been singing in a meeting at Benjamin just previously.

T. A. Parsons and family arrived last Thursday from Kansas City and spent a few days with Mrs. Parson's sister, Mrs. S. L. Webb. They were on their way to Bunger, Texas, where they have oil interests. We are glad to hear that Mr. Parson's health seems to be improving, and the family are in high hopes of his complete recovery. He has been in the sanitarium at Kansas City for seven months and also went to Mayo brothers at Rochester.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Clark and daughter, Kathleen, and Nadine Lankford returned Thursday of last week from an auto trip to the Arbuckle mountains of Oklahoma. They went to Oklahoma City, where they were joined by three sisters of Mrs. Clark, who accompanied them the rest of the distance. Headquarters were at Sulphur and they went on to Davis. At the latter place a big Baptist encampment was going on and about 5,000 people were camped there. The scenery is delightful and they had a magnificent swimming pool. Mr. Clark says this makes a nice outing, and it takes only one day to go each way. Between Wanrika and Ardmore there is one stretch of fine gravel road straight ahead for 38 miles and another one for 35 miles.

Two DeGraffenreid brothers were up Sunday from Breckenridge to go into details concerninpg the rodeo to be held here next month. These men will be contestants and they were accompanied up from Throckmorton by Mr. Frank Rhoade, one of the contest managers. One of the DeGraffenreid men is on the police force at Breckenridge. They came up in their car with Mr. Sam Baccus, grocer of Breckenridge, who spent the day with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Baccus.

Rev. J. O. Haynes and family of Dallas were visiting W. C. Hinds and family the first of this week. Mrs. Haynes is a sister of Roy Hinds. Rev. Haynes is pastor of Trinity Heights Methodist church of Dallas.

Miss Delta Lee of Dallas is here on a summer visit with her relatives. She is making headquarters with her sister, Mrs. D. A. Holman Jr. Miss Delta has lived in Seymour a good part of her life, and having so many relatives here, she feels very much at home. Also, it seems very natural to have her here.

Miss Millie Halsey, home demonstrator for this county, has returned from a trip in her car to the plains. She visited for the most part in Lubbock county, where she was demonstrator for three years. She met many old friends and had a great time. She was met at Slaton by her father, Mr. H. Halsey of Rogers, and the latter accompanied her back to Seymour. He was in a hurry to get home, though, and stayed here only one day. He was well pleased with our country.

S. L. Gwinn, who came in last week from Swisher county, says he is not going back there and does not know just where he will be located. His brother-in-law sold out there and that left him without a job. Mr. Gwinn says conditions on the plains are far from ideal.

"PEAK OF THE LOAD"

It comes at the breakfast, luncheon and dinner hour. The demand is sudden, tremendous.

"Peak of the load," says the gas engineer. "What a convenience," comments the housewife. And both refer to the biggest service problem in the public utility business.

To get gas service when, where, and how you want it without warning, without telephoning for it, means that we must have "peak of the load" equipment to meet "peak of the load" demands.

This equipment is costly. It takes a lot of money to keep it in good condition, ready at all times to serve you. And the maximum number of men must be employed to operate it whether the call comes or not.

Vital things, these. And they must be paid for if you are to get the gas service you demand, in the way you demand it.

Little Stories For Bedtime

FARMER BROWN'S BOY TAKES GREAT PAINS.

Old Man Coyote was a stranger to Farmer Brown's Boy. Ever since he had come to the Green Meadows to live he had been very careful that Farmer Brown's Boy should never see him. So while he knew all about Farmer Brown's Boy, for from safe hiding places he had watched him day after day, Farmer Brown's Boy knew very little about Old Man Coyote, and what he did know was what he had read. He wouldn't even have known that Old Man Coyote was living on the Green Meadows but for the sound of his voice. Now he had found Old Man Coyote's home and he fully intended that Old Man Coyote should howl no more. So he set traps all about Old Man Coyote's home, and in doing it he took the greatest pains.

'I've heard that he has a very wonderful nose," said Farmer Brown's Boy, talking to Bowser the Hound, who sat watching him, "such a wonderful nose that if I should touch one of these traps with my bare hands he would be able to smell me and so be warned. You've got a pretty good nose yourself, Bowser, but it isn't in it with old Man Coyote's. So you see I've smoked the traps and I've smoked the gloves I am wearing, and I don't see how he is going to smell me, do you?"

Now Old Man Coyote had three doorways to his home, and in each of these Farmer Brown's Boy set a trap, a cruel steel trap with widespread laws to see Old Man Coyote by a leg. To each trap was attached a chain, and the end of the chain was fastened to a heavy stick of wood. The sticks of wood Farmer Brown's Boy buried just under the surface of the ground, and he sifted the sand and dust over the chains and the traps themselves so that they could not be seen. When he was through you never would have guessed that there was anything there. Then just as carefully he set more traps in the little paths by which Old Man Coyote was in the habit of going from and coming to his home.

"Now, Bowser, you'll have to stay away from here or you'll be getting caught your own self," said he as he looked at his completed work with a satisfied air.

"I guess that will get him," he continued. "It seems kind of mean to put traps right in his doorways and not give him any chance at all. I don't like to do it, Bowser. No, sir, I don't like to do it. I wouldn't if it wasn't for those ducks and chickens. I just can't afford to raise 'em for a good-for-nothing wolf. If he had known enough to leave them alone I wouldn't have had to do this. You understand, Bowser, I'm not strapping him for fun, but because we've got to get rid of him. Now I think we'll go home and, tomorrow morning we'll find him caught fast and waiting for a bullet to end his mischief making. Just you take warning, Bowser, and keep out of trouble."

With that Farmer Brown's Boy, with Bowser at his heels, started for home, leaving the far corner of the Green Meadows, where Old Man Coyote's house was, as quiet and peaceful seeming as if such dreadful things as traps and guns never had been invented. And high overhead in the blue, blue sky Ol' Mistah Buzzard looked down with anxious eyes and tried in vain to think of some way to warn Old Man Coyote, for he had seen all that had been done. But he couldn't think of any way, and so he sailed round and round and round watching to see what would happen.

Reporter Recalls His Most Gruesome And Dangerous Murder Assignment

News item under Texarkana date line: "The jury in the case of Tom F. Horton, accused of the murder of C. G. Norton and M. H. Boren, has returned a verdict finding the defendant insane and sentencing him to serve a life term in the state insane asylum."

The item recalls to the memory of a newspaper reporter, now living in Wichita Falls, one of the most gruesome sights ever seen as a result of the murder, and one which it was his mission to investigate soon after the heinous killing.

The shooting, according to the reporter, occurred in a residence on Lelia street, Texarkana, Texas, and both men were slain in the same room, where, only five minutes prior to the fatal shots, they had been in conversation with Horton, an aged man around 65.

Norton and Boren were both carpenters and had been employed to renovate a grocery store which stood adjacent to the dwelling in which the pair met their death.

Yesterday, in speaking of the murder, the reporter told it in the following language:

"The Reverra-Fewell undertaking company had a morgue next door to the newspaper with which I was employed and they received a call that night to go to Lelia street, their informant having stated to them that some one had been killed. It was the custom of the undertakers to always call the paper and a reporter usually accompanied them.

"I accompanied the ambulance to the spot and was with the first to enter the death chamber.

"There against the door on the right from the front entrance, a man's body leaned against the wall. His head had been totally blown away. Just in front of him another man's body half lay and half sat in a chair—his head had also been blown completely off.

"Blood stains covered the room—an eye lay at this point, a tooth at that, and pasted to the door through which I had entered was a portion of a man's ear.

"I stayed long enough to take in the details of the positions of the body and then a woman out in the front yard hallooed to me that I was in danger and that the murderer of these two men was in the adjoining room and that unless I left at once I would be shot.

"That was enough warning to send me hurriedly out into the yard, where I waited until the officers, a coroner and the county attorney arrived. The murderer, Horton, was then overpowered, the officers taking two shotguns away from him, both of which he had reloaded and was threatening to use.

"The dead men's bodies were removed to the undertaking parlors and Horton was carried to the city prison where he refused to make a statement.

"Half for the sake of a feature and half for the sake of adventure, I agreed with the chief of police to spend an hour in a padded cell with Horton and from him I learned that he had fired a double-barreled shotgun at the heads of the two murdered men. He told me in his cold-blooded way that they plotted to take my life, and I overheard them. I went in there and asked them for a drink of whisky and when they refused to give it to me, I walked back to my room, got my gun, came to the door and pointed it at Boren. He smiled and I shot the smile off his face. Then I turned it on Norton. He smiled, and I shot the smile off of his face.'

"The shooting occurred one Saturday night, and the examining trial of Horton was held the next Sunday afternoon.

"When the case was called, it was discovered that several of the state's chief witnesses had disappeared, and a search for them revealed the fact that they had been seen to board a train, leaving the city.

"It was several weeks after that before any of the witnesses were located, and when they were, they were placed under bond, assuring their appearance at the next preliminary hearing, which resulted in Horton being bound over to await the action of the Bowie county grand jury, in the sum of $10,000, charged with murder.

OPTIMISM ON COAL MENACE

SECRETARY HERBERT C. HOOVER is optimistic again. He says that if the miners in the middle west fields return to work within the next few days there should be no serious shortage of coal during the winter, although there may be some minor inconveniences.

Production of approximately 10,000,000 tons of coal weekly made up of four-fifths bituminous and one-fifth anthracite will be needed. Even with adequate production, the secretary says, action by congress will be necessary to enable federal price control temporarily and to facilitate the distribution of anthracite and supply the needs of the northwest. Collapse of the fair price agreements made with producing operators when the union mines resumed production was prophesied by the Californian. There may be no serious shortage of coal during the winter, but there is certain to be an advance in the price of coal unless government price fixing should prevail.

There is an interesting story going around the haunts of the politicians in the city of Washington and elsewhere. They say that to a man the mine owners' association made large subscriptions to the republican campaign fund. This happened in the spring and summer of 1920. There were only three of these mine owners who voted a democratic ticket that year. They made large subscriptions but they haven't paid the subscriptions. They knew that there was a strike coming in 1921 or 1922. Then the agreements with the miners expired. They were determined on making it a showdown, a fight to the finish, to smash many features of their old contract with the coal diggers.

Well, the strike has been on since last spring. Have the mine owners paid their subscriptions to the republican campaign fund? Are they going to pay their subscriptions? Of course when they signed up their notes were as good as gold. Their notes are as good as gold today. Are they watching and waiting? Did they have a secret understanding with the powers that be? Did the national bagman of the republican party make the mine owners certain promises? If he did, how will it be possible for a republican senate to agree to coal price fixing this winter? Those who are all powerful in senate halls say that price fixing is all right in war time but an unheard of thing in peace time.

There are many independent senators. They know that there is a political revolt all along the line. They know that the people are ugly. President Harding is not a dummy. He is able to read the signs of the times. He knows that public opinion is more powerful, more aggressive and more vindictive than the combined army of mine owners and miners of America. Public opinion makes two-thirds of the senators and the congressmen jump from pillar to post. And the women are voters now. They handle the family pocketbook. They are keeping up with the procession. They read the magazines and the newspapers. They know what it costs to produce coal. They know what it costs to transport coal from the mine to the consumer. They are not in the humor to be trimmed this winter. Should the government permit them to be trimmed, there is going to be another political landslide in 1924 and after it has hit the earth the elephant will be going on three legs and there will be a new administration holding the reins of government. These are the signs of the times everywhere.

"COMPLETE VICTORY"

PRESIDENT JOHN L. LEWIS of the United Mine Workers of America has announced a "complete victory for the miners." They have been idle since last spring. They have exhausted their strike fund. Thousands were facing famine when many of the big operators signed up. Now how can the victory be complete for the miners?

BROOKS FOR CONSERVATION

DR. SAMUEL PALMER BROOKS of Baylor university remarked to the delegates who attended the Waco convention "Let us trust God ourselves, follow wise leadership, spew out cheap suggestions and undertake a big task in a big way." There are thousands of Texans who are sorry that Samuel Palmer Brooks did not make the race for senator this year and there is a large army of Texans who would be at peace with themselves and the world if the president of Baylor was in the run-off.

DR. CRANE EDITORIAL

WHAT'S ALL THE SHOOTIN' FOR?

WE are liable to forget what all this trouble is about between capital and labor.

The thing that we forget is that it is not a great moral issue nor a political issue, nor a passional issue, nor an oratorical issue.

It is simply and only a business issue.

In any business, if it is to continue, there must be profits. Its profits are to be divided between the men who furnish the capital, without which the business could not be carried on, and the men who furnish the labor, including the management and the hand work.

The only question between labor and capital is what part shall go to Mr. Capital and what part shall go to Mr. Worker.

That question is purely a business issue. It is not moral, any further than that it ought to be honest, fair, and with a decent regard to human values. And that much morality ought to enter into every act that a human being does.

The question being what share goes to the man who furnishes the money and what share goes to the man who furnishes the brains and the brawn, it will be seen at once that it is a question to be settled by experts, engineering minds, and business men.

It is not a subject to be treated in literature by authors. It is not a subject to be pulled and hauled around by politicians. It is not a subject to be settled with guns by soldiers.

Some day or other we are going to give the engineers their due leadership in this country.

The division of the profit is not a matter of theory about labor and capital. Any such theory is usually an artificial and fallacious simplification. It is a complex question to be continuously adjusted by practical, clear-headed and honest men.

ELECTRA POINTS THE WAY

SUPT. B. M. DINSMORE of the Electra schools proposes to give credit to pupils for Bible study if the plan he has outlined meets with the approval of the people.

Whether or not the Bible is used in the schools it certainly is a fact that children growing up should know more about the Bible. There are far too many homes in which the Bible is not studied or even read and there are hundreds of children growing up in every town of any size without knowing of the life of Jesus Christ. How can a child be expected to grow into manhood or womanhood of the best type unless they have before their minds the ideal life such as was lived by Jesus Christ?

Superintendent Dinsmore's plan does not bring the Bible study in the schools, but allows each pupil to study under the pastor of his or her choice and the school simply gives credit rating on Bible study. This looks like a good plan to accomplish a splendid purpose without embracing those elements which have so often brought out bitter discussion and opposition in many places.

WHO RULES, ANYHOW?

SECRETARY HERBERT C. HOOVER has notified congressional leaders that he needs legislation to curb coal profiteers. When he did it, Secretary Hoover started a terrific row between the so-called republican progressives and the old guard senators. All the old guard senators say that such legislation amounting to federal price fixing might be all right in war time, but would not be countenanced now. Of course the old guarders are of the opinion that it is better for the people who buy coal to be bled white financially than to enact legislation which would prevent coal profiteers from trimming the buyers of coal. Is this a government of the people?

WRITE YOUR FRIENDS ABOUT FAIR

LET'S all do what we can to draw the biggest crowd possible to the Texas-Oklahoma fair.

Let's make the fair in Wichita Falls a sort of reunion. Bring your relatives and friends to Wichita Falls during the fair every year.

Let's write them now to plan to come.

Remember the dates. The opening is September 30. The exposition will run through October 9.

Let's make it a big event from the start.

OIL WELLS

Nine times I bought some oil wel stock, from salesmen with the gift of tongues; they said with Croesus I would walk—they said it till they sprained their lungs. Nine times my hopes were running high, and I had dreams of princely state; I thought of gorgeous things I'd buy, when I had rubles by the crate. Nine times my visions knew a slump; the drillers only found hot air; and I was left upon the dump, a hopeless picture of despair. Then came a salesman from Long Beach, who wished to sell me sundry shares; he said, "Our prospect is a peach, we do not deal in fakes or snares. There's oil, my friend, 'neath Signal Hill, there's oil in windrows, heaps and piles; and when our boys begin to drill, the oil will squirt at least five miles." "Nine times," I said, distraught and blue, "I've listened to that line of bunk; nine times to blithe young men like you I've handed out my bottom plunk. I'm done with all your oil well stuff that cost me many hard-earned beans; I am no hog. I've had enough, and now I'll play the slot machines." The Long Beach wells are squirting oil, and men with shares draw princely pay; and I, though wearied by such toil, still kick myself five hours a day

Lesson No. 48
THE VARIO-COUPLER

Short wave reception is accomplished in a very efficient manner by the use of the vario-coupler. This type of inductive tuner, or loose-coupler, consists essentially of a stationery primary winding and a movable secondary winding, which is arranged as to revolve within the magnetic field of the primary.

The number of turns in effective use in the primarydary and consequently the amount of inductance, is made variable through the medium of taps taken from the winding and brought out for connection to multi-point switches. The secondary winding may also have taps for increasing or decreasing the number of turns but the usual method of securing a variation of inductance, in the secondary circuit of a receiver containing a vario-coupler, is by means of a variometer.

Diagram 1 shows the mechanical construction of the variou-counpler. The secondary winding is mounted on a shaft and may be rotated through an angle of 90 degrees in the field of the primary winding. By this arrangement a close variation in the coupling of the coils is secured, the inductive relationship at a maximum when the coils are concentric and at a minimum when they are at right angles to each other. The resultant effect is similar to sliding the secondary in and out of the primary winding as described in a previous article which explained the use of a loose-couper in a two circuit receiver.

Diagram 2 shows a very popular and efficient combination for short wave reception. This circuits uses the vario-coupler in conjunction with a vacuum detector tube and two variomenters, one of the variometers being in the grid circuit and the other in the circuit containing the plate.

In a simple form the vario-coupler may consist of a section of tubing four inches long and three and one-half inches in diameter on which is wound 60 turns of No. 24 S. C. C. wire. Taps are taken off diagonally along the coil for each ten of the first 50 turns, and for the remaining ten, the taps are connected for each two turns. The groups containing ten turns and those containing two turns are then connected to separate multi-point switches.

For the secondary coil a section of tubing one and one half inches long an dtwo and one-half inches in diameter may be used, on which is wound 50 turns of No. 24 S. C. S. wire, half of the turns being placed on each side of the shaft on which the secondary rotates. This shaft is mounted approximately one-half inch from the top of the tube on which is wound the primary coil, as shown in Diagram 1.

"La Traviata" by Rudiophone.

Verda's famous opera "La Traviata" produced so many times by famous stars of the operatic stage, has recently been successfully "broadcasted" bl excellent artists specially trained in the radio technique of the wireless studio. Every stage setting, the costumes, and the action in all its detail was carefully explained in advance that the large and unseen audience could picture the individual movements and the surroundings. This operatic success, perfected in all its detail, was carried on the tiny electric waves of the radiophone and is but another marvel produced by this wonderful science.

The Once Over

KU KLUX KLAN AGAIN

FLOUR bags are continuing to be big sellers for men's suitings in various parts of the country. The ku klux klan movement, reviving after congressional and newspaper investigations, is spreading again. There are evidently plenty of male persons who like to dress so they look more like vanilla ice cream cones than human beings.

From many sections of the country come reports of weird ceremonials and demonstrations by the Sheet and Pillowcase Hussars, Knights of the Knightgown and Pantless Fusileers. It looks like a white Christmas.

The klan not only is spreading in the south, but staid sections of the country like Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Ohio are being visited with the Knightgown Tyranny. Disciples of the Hit and Run school of fighting are joining the klan on all sides.

He who strikes and runs away unidentified will live to masquerade another night, as the old slogan says.

Just what is responsible for the ku klux klan growth is a mystery. Our guess is that it is the result of a reaction against the pajama influence in American night life.

For years America has been wandering away from the plain muslin loose-leaf nightgown of its forefathers. The pajama, creeping in shortly after the civil war, had become quite common about the time of the Spanish-American conflict. Roosevelt with his new-fangled notions almost made pajamas compulsory on the part of 100 per cent Americans. At the end of his second term there was hardly a nightgown left in the United States.

Under President Taft there was a sort of nightgown revival, Mr. Taft being physically unadapted to pajamas. The pajama movement took on further life after his term, however, and for the past eight years it has been decidedly a pajama nation. There have been pajama farces, pajama novels, pajama songs, pajama murder mysteries, pajama parties and pajama dansants.

A reaction was inevitable. A rush to the ku klux klan was assured from the moment the first kookoo rushed out onto the lawn in flimsy attire and shouted "back to the nightgowns!"

All the original kookoo had to do to give the order further appeal to the American people was to supplement the nightgown with a white hood, paint a strange monogram on the front of the garment and propose a ritual that would give twice as much excitement and mystery as the provided the night you join in the royal order of eagles, the redmen of the world, the Knights of Phythias, or Elks.

There is a certain fascination in picking a fight with a man when you have your gang with you and your face carefully wrapped up so there is no chance of his identifying you the following week and asking you for a return bout.

The ku klux klan represents the real safety-first movement in the fight business. The klan never starts a fight without making certain that only one man can get hurt. This popularizes the fight and lets in a lot of weak sisters who couldn't be driven into a battle under any other circumstances.

The imperial grand wizard insists the ku klux klan has no program of violence or race hatred and that its only purpose is "to solve certain well-defined problems concerning the interests of those whose forefathers established this nation."

But why solve them while hiding in 12 and a half yards of white muslin?

Kan't a ku klux klanner koncentrate without his kovers on?

It is important to have clear vision. Even the potato may not have sound eyes.

HINTS TO HELP SCENARIO WRITERS FROM AN EXPERT AT THE HOLLYWOOD GAME

This question is one now frequently asked, because of the great number of people interested in the new art of writing for the screen.

Cinema plays are not published like stage plays and the picture on the screen reels off so fast that the cinema student does not have time to absorb the technique involved in the mechanical structure of the swiftly changing scenes before him and gets only a confused, jumbled idea of how it is done. He gets the effect rather than the substance. Therefore, one of the hardest obstacles in the path of the aspiring photodramatist is the procedure by which he can become familiar with the fundaments of the new literary art.

The question which opens this discussion was put to Frank E. Woods, chief supervisor of Paramount pictures at the Lasky Studio, president of the Screen Writers' Guild, and himself one of the earliest writers for the screen. In answer, Mr. Woods gave a short literary recipe, which if strictly adhered to should prove highly valuable to the student of cinema writing.

"Select a good picture—one of which the continuity has been pronounced good," says Mr. Woods, "and go down to the theatre and see it. The first time one sees a picture, one is engrossed in its entertaining qualities, provided it has that virtue, and cannot concentrate attention on mechanics. Then go down again and see the picture, this time studying it from the angle of the way it is constructed, scene by scene, the characters playing in each scene and noting how the scene changes from a group to a close-up of one or perhaps two of the characters, in order that their expressions may be more forcibly registered and that all the attention may be concentrated on one or two particular characters who have the important action in that particular spot of the story.

"See the picture a third time, and a fourth, studying closely mechanical details, effects, settings, camera angles, the uses of the dissolve, the vision and the fade-out, and the interpolation of spoken and descriptive titles. Then, after seeing the picture several times, go home and sit down and try to write the story from memory, scene by scene. Translate into words what you have seen on the screen. The result will be virtually a screen continuity. Then go back to the treatre and see the picture again and note the result of your efforts, your mistakes, what parts you have omitted and their importance in the story. Then make another attempt at translating the picture into words. Remember the distinctions between fiction, plays and cinema plays. The novel describes settings and characters and puts words into the mouths of those characters. The play describes settings and sets forth lines for the characters, they conforming their action to agree and synchronie with their lines. The cinema play tells what the players do, how they act and how they express the ideas involved in the story, principally by action and with as little dialogue as possible.

"After studying the picture from this angle, if you have natural literary talent and the intuitive gift of dramatic values, you will be able to draw conclusions of why the story was developed in a certain way, why the action was carried on as it was, why the titles were put in at certain places and the purpose they served and make other important deductions.

"The art of cinema writing is a difficult, intricate study and even those successful writers who are gifted with dramatic genius, have found it necessary to study it for three or four years before becoming entirely familiar with the secret of how it is done. Of course, there have been exceptions, but it is the exception that proves the rule.

"The chemist takes a compound and ascertains ingredients by analysis—by a dissection of the whole whereby he arrives at a formula. In the same way, the student of the cinema writing can best become familiar with cineam drama by taking a completed motion picture and thus dissecting it, taking it to pieces, and acquainting himself with the dramatic ingredients which have been fused into the finished production.

FILMING SCENES OF "WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

Laddin Rock farm, near Stamford, Conn., has been selected as the natural background for the great tournament scenes in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," with Marion Davies as the star, and the Cosmopolitan company under direction of Robert G. Vignola has begun work on that location. These will be the final scenes of what is claimed to be the greatest motion picture ever filmed.

Seven "knights" in armor will tilt against each other as did the "sport of kings" in Tudor times.

The armor is genuine antique, and the "knights" have been practising their perilous feats of arms for many weeks.

Two hundred and fifty citizens of Stamford impersonate the old English populace, who used to crowd the sidelines at such affairs and cheer their favorites, much as modern "rooters" do at ball games.

Marion Davies as Princess Mary Tudor, in whose honor the tournament is given, will be present to encourage the gallant knight to do their utmost "for honor and favour of ladys fayre."

MOVIE STUFF

Victor Hugo's masterpiece, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," will shortly be put into production by Universal. An all-star cast is being chosen for this internationally-famed story.

Frank Mayo's next picture for Universal is to be "The Altar Stairs," by G. B. Lancaster. In this production Dagmar Godowsky, who is Mrs. Frank Mayo, will return to the screen as a South Sea "vamp", while Louise Lorraine will have the feminine "lead."

The second series of "Leather Pushers" prize-ring pictures is starting at Universadl City, with Reginald Denny again cast as Kid Roberts, the part which he created in the first of these H. C. Witwer stories. Elinor Fields has been engaged to play opposite Denny.

It has been definitely decided that Norman Kerry is to play the male lead in "Merry Go Round," Erich von Stroheim's next super-Jewel of prewar days in Europe. Kerry's role is that of an Austrian count, and he is busy having his uniforms fitted and cultivating a military strut.

Jack Lodon's stories of the sea, "Tales of the Fish Patrol," will be picturized by Universal in a series of two-reelers. Jack Mulhall will have the leading part in these adventuresome tales.

Hoot Gibson will soon be seen "Ridin' Wild" in an original story of that name, written by Roy Myers. Nat Ross, who directed the smiling western star in "The Galloping Kid," will again supervise his work in "Ridin' Wild.".

"One Wonderful Night," a swiftly moving romance by Louis Tracy, has been purchased by Universal for Herbert Rawlinson's use after he finishes work on his present picture, "Another Man's Shoes."

In addition to Ralph Graves, who heads the cast, Marguerite De La Motte has been added to the players in "The Jilt," a Saturday Evening Post story which Irving Cummings is directing for Universal.

Marshall Neilan has selected Eleanor Boardman for the part of John Keogh's flighty wife in his picturization of Donn Byrne's "The Strangers' Banquet." Miss Boardman, who has just finished work in Rupert Hughes' "Gimme," for Goldwyn, was selected as the best movie type from among more than two thousand young women by Robert E. McIntyre, Goldwyn casting director.

Youthful William Haines, who has gone to Tahiti with the "Passions of the Sea" company as understudy to Antonio Moreno, is regarded as the "find" of the year in motion picture circles. He was discovered by Miss Bijou Fernades, "new faces" scout for Goldwyn, and chosen for development by Robert E. McIntyre, casting director, who is in charge of the "new faces" hunt.

"Hungry Hearts" which has not yet been released by Goldwyn, has appeared in all lists of the "best pictures of the year" which have been compiled by writers who have been pictures in pre-view. "Hungry Hearts" is an example, it has been pointed out, of how dramatic effects can be gained without deviating in the slightest from the realities of everyday life.

Bescher's Single With Bags Full Wins Third From Buffs

KEENE AND GOODWIN BATTLE SEVEN BITTER ROUNDS BUT HOUSTON WEAKENS IN EIGHTH

Four Hits and Two Errors Give Spudders Five Markers; Summa Again Leads Hitters; Buffs Score in Ninth For First Run In 18 Innings; Spuds Turn in Perfect Game

Special to The Record News.

HOUSTON, Aug. 20.—Victor Keene and Marvin Goodwin hooked up today in the third game of the Spudder-Buff series and as a result the greatest pitchers' battle of the season lasted through the first seven rounds.

The Buffs were unable to stand the strain, however, and two errors, coupled with four safe hits, netted the Spudders five runs, enough to win. Doubles by Bribeck and Doyle in the ninth gave the Buffs their only run of the 5-1 game and the Spudders had taken the third game of the series.

Goodwin was more effective than Wheeler in the seven round battle and yielded but three safeties, all singles, two of which were poked out by Homer Summa, the league leading Spudder. Keene had been touched for five blows, hit one batsman and walked two hitters in his portion of the go, but by tightening down in the pinches had held the Buffs from the plate.

The Spudders threatened to count in the first when after two were down, Adams and Summa singled in succession. Adams taking third on the second hit of the game, but Miller could not come through with the necessary punch and only one other Spudder got on base until the eighth.

Eighth Inning Victory

As the eighth opened, Beck sent a single to right. Bischoff hit to Bailey who threw to first to get Bischoff, but Bribeck dropped a perfect throw and the bags were loaded and no hitters out. Keene fanned, but Bescher came through with a single to right and the parade had started. Tanner was out, pitcher to first, but Adams and Summa each drove safe blows to the outer gardens and when the round had finished, five Spudders had chalked up.

When Bribeck and Doyle doubled in the ninth, the Buffs scored their first run since the seventh inning of the first game, a total of 18 scoreless innings at the hands of Spudder hurlers.

Homer Summa was again the hitting star of the day and hammered three safe blows in four trips to the plate, bringing his still nearer the new record he is expected to set up. The terrific hitter has but 20 hits to go and has 28 games to get them in. He has proven himself a better road hitter than when on the home lot and will likely boost Kraft's .212 mark, several points.

Keene was forced to pitch himself out of several difficult situations, the most threatening of which was in the sixth when the Buffs sent runners to second and third with only one out. Whiteman drew a pass, filling the bases, but Bribeck and Doyle were unable to deliver and the short rally counted nothing.

The win today brought the Spudder total for road games to six won out of seven played.

INDUSTRY BOOM IN WEST TEXAS

Utilities Company Is Spending Money

ABILENE, Aug. 20.—The West Texas Utilities company is expending several hundred thousand dollars in extensions and betterments over central west Texas, being one of the largest forward programs in public utilities companies ever started west of Fort Worth, according to the West Texas chamber of commerce.

Improvements, extensions and betterments under way briefly enumerated are:

Connecting Sylvester with the highline with 126 regular patrons; installation of a new substation at Plaster-co with capacity of 1,000 h. p.; building high tension line from Abilene to Albany and installation of electric service at Albany; erection of fireproof office building, ice vaults, etc. at Munday; stringing a 33,000 volt high tension line from Stamford to Haskell, a distance of 17 miles; extension of high line to Tuscola and Buffalo Gap; betterments to the Abilene traction line, and sundry improvements.

The Public Utilities company with its million dollar electric generating plant here, another large plant at Stamford and still another at Cisco, is now serving 28 towns in central west Texas towns. The company is also preparing, it is said, to considerably augment its power station at Stamford to take care of emergency drains on the central plant at Abilene.

Chisox Drop Third Straight Under Coogan Bluff

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A dramatic home run by Babe Ruth with Witt and Dugan on base in the ninth inning, enabled the New York Americans to make it three straight from Chicago by a score of 7 to 5. Ruth had a day of upsets and downs. In the first inning he hit a home run with Dugan on base, but handed these two runs back to Chicago in the third when his muff allowed two men to score. Ruth struck out in third and beat out a bunt in the fifth, only to be caught napping. After his second home run in the ninth won the game for New York, a crowd surged on the field and carried him off the field on it shoulders. Ruth has hit four home runs in the last three days, bringing his total to 26.

KANRAD AVERAGES OVER SEVEN MORE BUSHELS TO THE ACRE

Here's What Farmers Prove In Tests of Grain Near Wichita

Farmers who grew kanred wheat in a test with other varieties well established in this county made an average of 7.2 bushels more per acre on kanred than on any other variety, according to a communication sent out Saturday by M. B. Oates, agricultural agent of the Fort Worth & Denver railroad.

His communication follows:

"These farmers grew an average of 93 acres of wheat other than kanred. The difference of 7.2 bushels per acre on 95 acres equals 684 bushels. It is, therefore, plain, according to their own test, on their own farms, that if they had their entire crop planted to kanred they would have each have been $684 better off today. Furthermore, the average test on kanred was 1 3-4 pounds better than the average of the other varieties. On the 14 farms considered kanred had an average test of 56½. The other wheats grown on these same farms had an average test of 57¾. The average yield for kanred is 18 6-10 bushel. This is the average for 847 acres on 14 different farms. The average yields of other varieties on these same farms was 11.4 bushels for an acreage of 1,339 acres, the difference being 7.2 bushels less.

Kanred Beats Turkey Red

"In order to be entirely fair in comparing kanred with other varieties it is well to notice a comparison of two hard winter varieties. On five farms where kanred and turkey red were both grown the kanred averaged 23.8 bushels and the turkey red averaged 13 bushels or 10.8 bushels less than kanred. Kanred tested 60½ and turkey red tested 59 1-3. There was 281 acres of kanred and 484 acres of turkey red on the five farms. These men lost about 11 bushels per acre by not having their entire crop in kanred. Farmers who grew two varieties of wheat on the same conditions may figure out their loss this year according to the yield they made from the two varieties grown.

Do Not Expect Too Much

"The figures on yields and tests have been given as reported in writing by the growers themselves. It is not hearsay and for that reason much confidence is placed in reported yields. However, wheat growers should not expect in the future such large increase over both varieties as we have had this year. The average increase is too large to depend upon. The average increase in other states, over large areas, the past few years, has run about three to four bushels per acre. I never have claimed more than four bushels increase on the average, yet this year the increase is nearly double that.

figure. This very favorable increase is probably due to the unusually hard conditions under which the wheat crop was made, for it is known that Kanred is resistenet both to drougth and rust and that it stools more freely than other wheats. That probably explains its remarkable showing this year. The other varieties could not stand the unfavorable season this past year.

"Next year conditions may be favorable and if so other varieties will not suffer and may therefore approach Kanred in yield closer than during the past season. Growers should not gamble on 7 to 10 bushels extra per acre from Kanred, but it does seem reasonable to expect about 3 to 4 bushels more per acre. That is it's history and record."

The following reports were received by Mr. Oates during the last week: The explanations following the figures on yields and tests are those made by the growers themselves in reporting the results. Their explanations are indicated by the quotation marks.

E. H. F. Rathke, Iowa Park, made an average of 9 3-4 bushels on 15 acres, testing 57 with Kanred. Just across a ten foot road he had 20 acres of Maricle wheat making 8 3-4 bushels, testing 56. "Land was prepared alike and at the same time. The Maricle was sown about October the 1st, the Kanred about the last of October. The Maricle was up when the Kanred was sown. If I sow any wheat I shall sow all Kanred."

S. D. Adrian, Chillicothe, had 100 acres of Kanred which made 24½ bushels per acre, testing 60. His 250 acres of Turkey red made 11 bushels and tested from 57 to 60. "Same preparation and seeded the same time."

W. A. James, Jerico, (Donley county) had 14 acres of Kanred making 15 bushels per acre, test 60. He had 100 acres of Mediterranean which made 10 bushels per acre, testing 58.

G. C. Holland, Amarillo, made an average of 8 bushels on 600 acres, testing 58. He had no other kind but Kanred. He says "I like Kanred and grow it exclusively."

C. L. Moore, Oklaunion, had 200 acres of Kanred which made 8 bushels, testing 59. He had 100 acres of soft wheat which made 11 bushels per acre testing 59. He adds "This is no test for Kanred as the land it was on was not prepared as well as the other. I don't think you will go wrong with Kanred."

C. M. Smith, Oklaunion, had 325 acres of Kanred which averaged 3½ bushels per acre and tested 52. He had no other variety. "Was dusted in and consequently did not come up until this spring. I prefer Kanred seed as I got fine results last year."

R. V. Crowder, Quanah, had 40 acres of Kanred which made 11 bushels testing 61. He had no other variety. "I am going to sow Kanred."

AMARILLO, Aug. 20.—For 1922-23 the Potter county scholastic budget is $10,848 less than last year. This year's budget will be $25,312. The scholastic population of the county is 3,616. The apportionment was cut from $10 to $7 by the state for this year.

Paducah Proud of Amateur Band

PADUCAH, August 20. — Two years ago Paducah's band was in its toddling infancy. A band-full of men whose wish it was to estbalish a band for their town, assembled themselves at their prescribed meeting place and begun by making queer noises. People criticized the "fuss" as they termed it and referred to the beginners' efforts as barnyard variations.

Nevertheless, under the instruction of the sturdy old "hoss," E. A. Carlock, the eager aspirants forged steady ahead and lost no time in converting the sounds that gurgled from their wind horns, into real music. After 18 months of patient application, Mr. Carlock stepped into the ranks of the band and turned his job over to C. E. Osborne, who has had various experience in orchestra and bank work. Mr. Osborne whipped the rookie wind-jammers into astonishing shape in less than six months time.

Paducah now has a 20-piece band, and it is the intention of the instructor, Mr. Osborne, to augment his band to 40 pieces, such that will measure up to a full military band standard.

PLAN HIGHWAY TO CROWELL

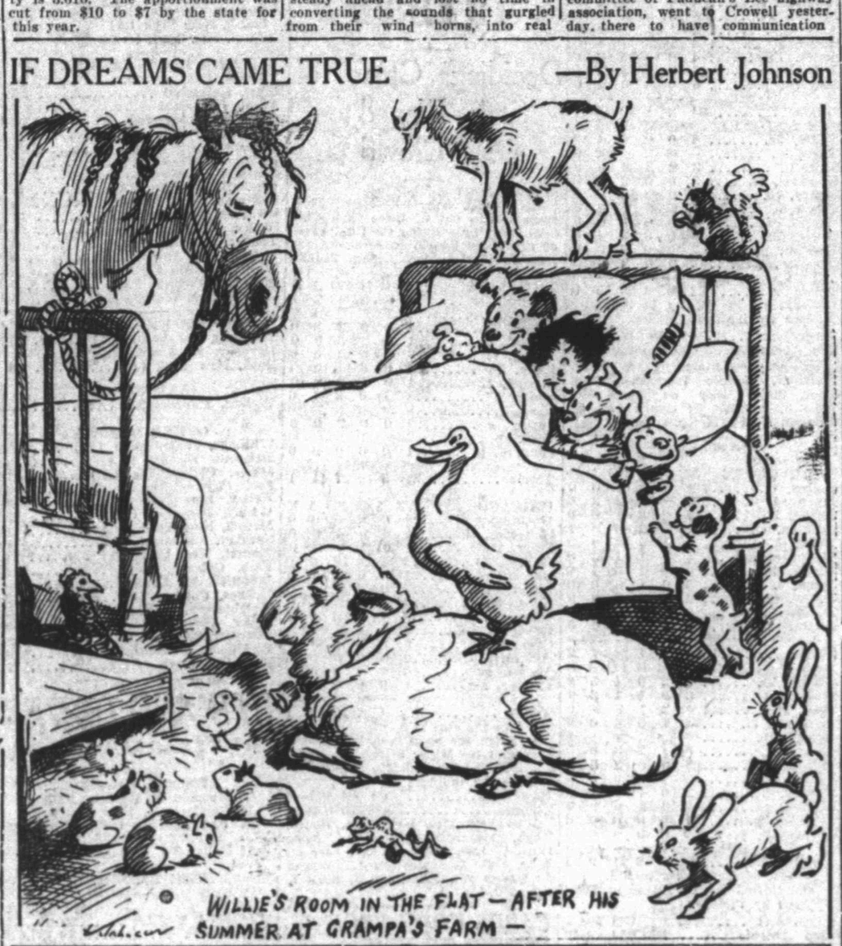

PADUCAH, August 20.—A select committee of Paducah's Lee highway association, went to Crowell yesterday, there to have communication with the Lee highway unit of Ford county. Their purpose was to determine the nearest route in the shape of a highway, that could be run from Crowell to Paducah.

It was decided at this meeting that Ford county had as near a direct route across her territory as could be obtained. Cottle county, according to the report of the committee, will have to make several changes in her road in order to have a shorter and more direct route.

BUCKNER HEARD HERE SUNDAY

Faith of Childhood Is Explained

Dr. Hal Buckner, president of Buckner's orphans home at Dallas, preached a sermon in the First Baptist church Sunday morning which had a strong appeal to every heart. He took his text from the entire of chapter 18 of St. Matthews and particularly from that part in which Christ says that we must become as little children to enter the kingdom of heaven.

Dr. Buckner explained the simple faith of childhood. He told how christians who trust Christ simply as children trust are the greatest among all christians. He explained how when the disciples asked who was to be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven they were looking to the kingdom as one similar to an earthly kingdom and did not understand thoroughly that Christ established a spiritual kingdom.

They were surprised and at first could not understand when he took a little child and put it in the midst of them telling them that whosoever became as a little child would be greatest in heaven.

Dr. Buckner mentioned that part of the chapter which described the fate of those who cause little children to fall into the wrong kind of life. He told of the nobility of work to uplift little children and how the future of the world will be helped by teaching the little children the true spirit.

Dr. Buckner told of his work with the 700 orphans. He said that the home has to turn down 100 each month because it can not care for them. He said it takes $300 per day as a minimum to run it and that now all funds are gone. He pleaded for his hearers to help the children and help build up the home.

Dr. Buckner told of the agricultural course, the domestic science course, the business course and other instruction given at the Buckner home and told also what should be done to help more children who are being turned away. He said that the home should be made to care for 3,000 and that if the Baptists in the state would each do their part it could easily be put on a firm basis to take in the children who should be taken in.

Politicians Seek Majorities, Statesmen Want Righteousness, Judge Kay Tells His Bible Class

Delivering one of his characteristic common-sense sermons on "Leadership," Judge John C. Kay addressed 158 members of his Sunday school class Sunday.

The text, as reported by L. A. Ward follows:

"The lesson this morning is about leadership. How are we going to know a real leader when we look for him? There have been many in the world, both in sacred and profane history, but the public always knows when he comes along. They may get fooled with many a one that is not a leader but when a real ones comes, they know it. You are helpless in the presence of a leader.

"Old Oliver Cromwell goes down to the parliament; they didn't suit him in England and he said: "You all get out of here and give way to men that are honest,' and they got out.

"Leadership, to be good leadership, must be a leadership that feels warm toward humanity and, no man is fit to be a leader whose heart doesn't beat in an honest, strong sympathy for all his fellowmen.

"That's the reason I don't take up a hundred little rows and riots, that are going around this country, with this class. It is because I respect the opinions of other men. And, as time goes on, I sometimes find that they are right and that I was wrong. You have to do that.

"You, young men, did you know that these strong opinions are mostly peculiar to youth? People overlook it in you when you as a boy have an immense strong opinion, but they won't in me, because they know that I mean what I say, and they have got a suspicion that I know what I am talking about. We don't want to bring into our class any of these factional troubles, anything like that. We are not here for any such a business. And, I wouldn't be here at all if I didn't love every member of this class and every man that comes in here; hoping that, in my poor way, I may do him at least some little good. And, every man is welcome to come and no man is compelled to accept my view about things.

"How are you going to tell a big man when you see him? Why, it's easy. Look at some of these fellows in the bible.

"Let's take a look at Abraham. His cowboy got in a row with another great cowman's cowboy over a water hole, like has been done many a time right here in Texas. Abraham says: 'Now don't let's have any row. The whole country is before you. If you want to go east, I'll go west, and if you want to go west, I'll go east.' What are you going to do with a man that's that big? How many of us ever got up on the scales that weigh that kind of a man? It is no wonder that Abraham is respected in all nations as a great man. And, what could Lott do, but do one or the other? And, went wrong at that.

"Now, this man Ezra, in this lesson, was doing an important thing that we are so apt to miss the effect of.

He never said anything about making some new laws; he never had any platform; he didn't denounce anybody; but, he says: 'We are going to take the laws, the statutes and the judgments that we have got and enforce them.'

"Here we are, with 8,000 laws and politicians going all over the country, telling you that we have some more and, some of these old laws are so dry that a bookworm wouldn't eat them.

"So, this fellow dug up the statutes and laws that they already had and proceeded to enforce them. But, a man wouldn't get anywhere now, in Texas, if he didn't offer an entirely new program.

"What were some of these old laws? I don't know what they all were, but part of it was the ten commandments. I have always had a great sympathy for that old Frenchman who, when Wilson got out his 14 points during the war, said: 'The Good Lord only had 10.'

When we talk about the laws in Texas, we ought to begin with the ten commandments. It looks like somebody would say 'amen' to that. That's where this old Ezra begun and came to be a leader, and a great leader.

Where We Get the Word

"Now, we haven't got a good word for leader. This English duke, that you read about—member of the nobility—his title 'duke' means leader, but it comes from a Latin word that, with us, would be a compound word and the Latin idea was 'to lead out.' In other words, it means to lead to some place; to get out on safer and higher ground. Lead out! Lead out! But, here in Texas they are just leading us around and around in a circle. I am beginning to feel like one of Columbus' sailors who it is reported said, 'Why, Columbus, (or admiral, whatever he called him), I have recognized one place in the sea that we have already passed seven times.' That is no leadership—that doesn't lead out.

"Now, what is the difference, then, between Abraham, Moses, Ezra and all these men, and the ordinary politician? A politician is satisfied always with a majority, put that down as a fundamental principle in your book. But, a statesman is satisfied only with the establishment of a righteous cause.

"What about the courage of this fellow, Ezra? I talked to you last Sunday about 'One Man,' and what one man could do, or ought to do, and when we try to do something, we say we can't get ahead. The sheriff says: 'Send the ranger.' The constable says: 'Send the sheriff' and the state says: 'Send the federal army.' But, here's a real leader that says: 'I was ashamed to ask for soldiers.' That's what he says right here in the book.

"You know I have always admired one Texas ranger at least. They telegraphed that they had a big riot and asked for a company of rangers.

"When one man got off the train, they said: 'Nobody but you?' He said: 'There isn't but one riot, is there?'

"Let me read what that fellow said there about soldiers. (I'll bet there are five or six fellows here that didn't know that was in there.)

"Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before God, to seek of Him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.'

"Wasn't that a pretty prayer?

"For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way . . .'

"Learn something there, men! The man that said that lives in history, and in song, and in story. But, old Napoleon, who said that God was on the side of the heavy batalions died on a desert island, with a broken heart, and with no hope, and no help.

"Of course, there ought to be cooperation, but a man ought never send for the army to do something that he could do himself. That's what Ezra meant. 'I was ashamed to send for the soldiers.' Why? Because it would show that he had no faith in himself and no faith in his Maker. Leaning on somebody else.

"I said the political was satisfied with the majority, but the greatest of all leadership, was the Master. He spoke, not about minorities, not about majorities. He had no army, no navy. He had no constable nor magistrate, but he thought that sublime thought, not about majorities, but he arose to that height which is beyond the conception of man, and said: 'There are 90 and 9 that are safely in the fold, yet, there remaineth out in the frosty mountains one that I must go to see, lest he perish.' That's the most sublime thought, I think, in the new testament; or, one of the most. That he was not willing that even one should be lost. And, His religion, and his gospel, is not for the rich; it is not for the poor, it is not for the educated, or for the ignorant, but it is for everyone, that whosoever should believe on Him should not perish.

"There's a platform not made for a faction, not made for a few, not made for a majority, but broad enough and basic enough to carry to safety the soul of all men and of every man.

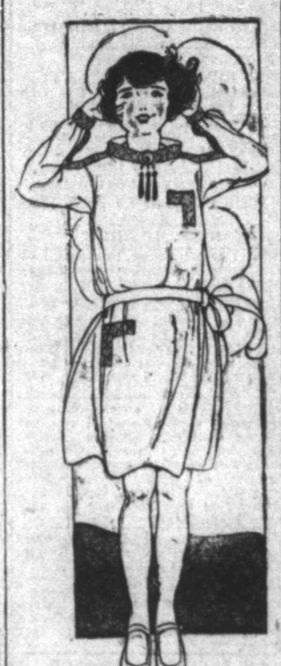

"Then, how little does a man become, as it seems to me, when he comes and speaks of a narrow creed, or a narrow doctrine; a doctrine that has been wrought out by humanity; when he comes to face this doctrine that 'grace is enough for all of you.'

"Men! Get that thought, and when you get that, you come in sight of the only leadership that ever offered to all of humanity redemption. That is the only leadership that humanity has ever had that offered to lead out.

"Our politics change from age to age, and our law, from year to year, and our conceptions of these things change from time to time, but His doctrine that 'Who believes on Him shall have everlasting life,' remains as the one steadfast and sure doctrine; not for his party, a faction; and, not for one church, but for all men! And, that's my creed, if it can be called a vreed, which is as universal as that doctrine is.

"Leadership? Then there is but that leadership, and, if men would accept His gospel, these other troubles would disappear, as I think, and the failure to accept His gospel is the reason that we wander around in the wilderness, and follow from age to age, false ideas and false leadership.

FASHIONS

Here's a Modish School Frock for a Young Girl

Discovering styles that are both smart and practical for the twelve or fourteen year old girl is always more or less of a problem, as girls of this age are inclined to be either too fat or too thin. When too fat they are all waist line and when too thin have a "leggy" look that makes it difficult to dress them becomingly.

The first and most important thing is to select clothes that are actually designed for girls of this age instead of selecting styles that belong properly to the girl of sixteen or seventeen who has attained to more grace of line. Designers are each year offering more and more attractive styles for the girl of awkward age, with simplicity always the guide.

The dress shown in the sketch, an excellent early fall model, is made of navy tricotine or other twill. Its claim to distinction depends upon the trimming and to a very large extent also on the clever arrangement of the two little pockets.

A pocket appears on one side of the skirt of the frock and on the opposite side front of the waist. These pockets are set in, with bands of self-fabric, made gay and colorful by cross-stitch embroidery done in various bright shades such as green, red, yellow, purple, etc., outlining them. The neck without the collar is a simple round one, the upstanding band collar matching the pocket of facings. A similar finish extends down each upper sleeve, and also forms the cuffs.

This design might be used for a canton crepe or crepe de chine frock if a silk material is preferred, but the wool fabrics are to be in high favor for young girls for fall and winter and it is interesting to observe that one-piece frocks seem to be taking precedence over smocks or middies and separate skirts.

PITTENGER RAPS MUD SLINGING

Passion for Justice Our Need

Dr. Pittenger declared in his Sunday morning sermon, the text of which was taken from Matthew 16:24 that what we as a state and nation need is not more wealth or legislation, but more of a passionate desire to serve God, and that this state deserves more men who can run for high offices and be able to discuss the great issues of the day, instead of going around slinging mud at each other and bringing up all the evil things against each other possible. He clared that we were given too much to scandal and rumors of it and not enough to constructive thinking and acting.

Taking as his theme, "Bearing the Cross" he declared that Christ did not appeal to the cupidity nor to the desires of men, but that He told them they would have to lay aside their pleasures and life work and would have to endure hardships that would befall them if they were to follow Him and bear the cross. This brings to my mind several things," declared that we were given too much which is that men must restrain themselves. God has given us a new principle, namley, that we should lay aside our desires and methods of doing things to accept His.

"Christ said all men would be lifted to Him when He was lifted from the cross, but even today we are still trying to settle our troubles by wars, by legislation and by our own ways and are still laying up and hoarding great wealth. God has permitted this generation to make wonderful discoveries, to unearth wonderful wealth from the earth and to do marvelous things. I want to ask, if these things are known, with all the knowledge and wealth that we possess, why are we not approaching the establishment of the kingdom of righteousness. Because we are depending upon wealth, upon legislation and upon organization.

"Christ had told Peter that He was to suffer death, but Peter said no, that Christ should establish a kingdom and that the 12 should be His followers, but after pondering Christ's words, Peter said "Thou hast the words of eternal truth." What we need today is a passion for justice, clean handed, merciful justice. It would be easy for me to say something that strikes the strikers, but I will not, because I do not know enough about it to say what properly ough to be said, but before this strike is settled these men ought to get together and get close to the great heart of God in a spirit of brotherhood and ask God for divine guidance.

"After we have found the spirit of brotherhood comes a desire for service, so that there shall be no more Herrin disasters, no more East St. Louis troubles, nor any Colorado mine disasters, but so the business of the world may be run as Christ would have them run, so that all may feel the desire for service.

"Christ has the only universal flag that has ever been or ever will be in the world. Our stars and stripes are wonderful to us, but the man in Russia does not glory in them, and the amn on the sea merely respects it because of the power behind it, but whether a man is white, brown or black, he can glory in the flag of the cross, because it is his flag, if he but follows Jesus Christ.

"First we need a passion for justice, then for brotherhood, and then for service."

PHELAN KILLED BY TWO GUNS

Schenck Gives View Of Shooting

The opinion that two pistols probably played a conspicious part in the fatal shooting of Ed Phelan near Jolly some time ago was expressed by District Attorney Walter F. Schenck, who returned to Wichita Falls yesterday following the preliminary hearings of Tom Niles, his wife and G. R. Fuller.

The preliminary hearings, he said, resulted in the trio being bound over to await the action of the Clay county grand jury, their bonds being fixed in the sum of $1,000 each on whisky and murder charges.

The district attorney said it has always been his belief that Phelan's body was riddled with a small pistol and a larger one, and he intimated that he holds the opinion Phelan was killed by probably two different persons.

Phelan's lifeless form was found in a field near Jolly seevral weeks ago, soon after Mrs. G. A. Fuller had been picked up by tourists on the roadside, where she had been lying helpless for some time, she asserted.

Although a thorough investigation has been made concerning the mysterious shooting of Phelan, who was killed, according to Mrs. Fuller's story, by a hold-up man wearing a straw sailor hat and a green suit of clothing, the officials have been unable this far to clinch the guilt on any individual.

FIGHTS BROKEN UP

Two fights were interrupted by local police yesterday, and the participants were placed behind steel bars until they could make bond for their appearance in corporate court this morning.

The four principals of these affrays, added to two vagrants and a man charged with selling whisky aggregated the total or arrests made since late Saturday night by the local police department, the record show.

Spiking 'Em

By "SPIKE" COOPER

Spudder fan (before Record News score board Saturday afternoon following second Houston victory): "Some o' dese here fans said when de Spudders got away from home dey wuz goin' to lose lots o' games." Maybe so, but dey sho' mus' live in Santone and Houston too."

Somebody gave us a bum deal.

Fans sends in "doping it out" story and says Arna Raley is a rabid Cat fan.

Saw Raley yesterday and d—— near got whipped about it.

Says it's a frame up or something. He admits figuring out the games he thinks the Cats will win, but did it at the request of a friend, just to be honest and frank in his opinion.

Raley says he wants the world to know he's not a Cat fan, but one of those pulling so hard for the Spuds.

Alright, Raley, we apologize and won't ever do it again.

And still they're talking about the creosote episode.

Even Galveston has heard it and made no bones about pouring in on the "smellers" when they hit the Gulf city.

"Angel" Parker, sport scribe of the Galveston News, lead a story thusly:

"The Galveston brand of creosote worked to perfection yesterday in the second game of the Marine-Sand Crab series and Snipe Conley lasted but a little better than three innings.—Said creosote, coming in the form of Sanderab base hits, drove Conley from the mound in the fourth—"

Even though Galveston is fighting for a place in the sun, and are yet in threatening distance, they did not take issue with the "howlers" and "smellers."

At least there must be a few clean sports in the league and we're glad to know that the Galveston bunch are numbered with them.

And even though the "grand trt-bunal," sitting behind closed doors, found the Spudders guilty of doping the ball, there is one sport scribe who has not said the act was malliciously perpretrated.

Bill Ruggles, Dallas News sport scribe and editor, took issue with the Spuds when he wrote at length Sunday on "The Grand Razz."

Yes, the Spudders will hear "creosote" everywhere they go during the remaining part of the season. If they can stand that gaff, they deserve to win.

There are thousands of fans throughout the state who do not believe the Spudders guilty.

And Bill, Wichita Falls thanks you for your attitude.

Down went our friend "Red" Johnson yesterday.

It took the Gassers 12 long rounds to send him to the last column, but they did just that little thing.

Johnson is the only hurler thus far since the Spudders started on their trip around the world, to humble them in defeat.

And "Slim" McGrew outdueled him in a 12 inning battle that went 11 desperate stanzas before the first tally was counted.

Probably 750 Santone fans saw the game. At least that is about in proportion to their week day crowds.

But the Spudders can beat that.

H. S. Ford, manager of the [illegible] stated yesterday that more than 800 saw the play by play Houston-[illegible] der game.

That is the kind of support it takes to win. The fans were pulling just the same as if in the stand at Athletic park watching the real thing.

Only One Arrest by Rangers at Childress

Ranger Captain J. B. Wheatley, who is stationed at Childress, passed through here yesterday en route back to that place, stopping over for a short while to visit Police Chief J. W. McCormick, with whom he served a number of years in the ranger service.

Ranger Wheatley, while here yesterday, asserted that despite the fact that Childress is a strong union center, that little difficulty has been encountered with the striking shopmen there. Only one man, he said, has been arrested, he having been placed in prison because he interfered with train traffic and working men employed by the railroad to take the places of the strikers.

Small Thievery Cases Reported

Thieves broke into and robbed the Coca Cola Bottling works Saturday night at a late hour, according to a report made to local police, yesterday, carrying off clothing belonging to A. M. Bedinghorne.

No trace of the thieves has been obtained, Chief McCormick intimated yesterday afternoon.

Some time during the same night robbers looted the home of H. M. Black at 503 Bridge street, stealing a gold Elgin watch.

EXTRA FOR COLOR

"I am an author and I desire to spend my vacation on your farm in order to get local color. How much will the board be?"

"Twenty per week, and $10 extra if you expect us to go around chewing straws and talking dialect."—Dorchester (Mass.) Beacon.

Don't Be Fooled—

"Fool me once," says the proverb, "and it's shame on you. Fool me twice and it's shame on me."

Don't be fooled when it comes to spending your money. Patronize the merchants who have a reputation for fair dealing and honesty. Such motives must actuate the consistent advertiser. The man who invests real money in building a reputation for himself and his merchandise cannot afford to risk any of it by taking unfair advantage of his patrons.

The consistent advertiser pays money to tell you about his goods. He knows they are good—he backs them with his money because he believes they will satisfy. Only merchandise which is consistently good can be consistently advertised.

So advertising protects you against fraud and inferiority. It tells you what is new and good, making you a wise buyer. It saves you money by pointing out for your consideration only the best products and the best places to buy them.

Thrifty men and women read the advertisements. To them it is a plain every-day business proposition—a duty they owe to themselves and to their pocketbooks. Don't be fooled.

Don't spend your money blindly. Read the advertisements.
