Recurrence of ridge could cloud state's chance for rain

DALLAS (AP) — Developing weather patterns over the next couple of weeks will determine if most of the state will be drier than the West Texas sands over a summer that forecasters already are predicting will be soggier than usual for the Rio Grande Valley.

Last summer's drought was caused by a stubborn upper-level high-pressure ridge that implanted itself over the Midwest and such a system could form again this year, meteorologist James Wagner said Wednesday.

"There could be a recurrence of the hot and dry conditions...but it's unlikely statistically to be quite as severe or quite as long lasting as the one" Texas experienced last summer, he said.

Last year, the string of 100-degree-plus temperatures began about the middle of June, and Wagner said if such an upper-level system forms, it should do so within the next two weeks.

But the Rio Grande Valley has about an odds-on chance of receiving more rain than normal through August, Wagner said.

"Indications...suggest there could be more storm activity of one sort or another.... That type of a pattern usually favors an outbreak of showers, even a rainy spell in that area," said Wagner, of the NWS Climate Analysis Center in Camp Springs, Md.

"The overall pattern that we are predicting could steer hurricanes into the Rio Grande area if there was one in the general vicinity."

West Texas should receive near-normal amounts of rain, he added.

But if a high-pressure ridge develops over the United States, Wagner said, north and east Texas will be even more likely to see less precipitation than normal.

He said because the system would be more likely to form in the Mississippi Valley or Central Plains area, it would make the northern half of Texas more arid and "would have a tendency to steer moisture around the southern periphery" of the state.

"Subtropical ridges will come up to their summertime intensity and won't change too much after that buildup comes about the middle of June" until August or September, he said. "Of course, what determines whether or not you have a heat wave is where the strongest part of the ridge is."

Higher-than-normal temperature readings are predicted in the northern Panhandle in June, but Wagner said near-normal temperatures are expected for the rest of Texas. Temperatures should rise to warmer than average readings statewide beginning in July, he said.

"Normal" temperatures are compiled from average readings over 30 years and are revised every decade, Wagner added.

Recent heavy rains should keep lake levels from falling as low as last year, even if an entrenched high-pressure system does bring another drought to North Texas, said Tom Donaldson, chief of the lake control unit of the Army Corps of Engineers in Fort Worth.

Some of the state's reservoirs are still low, but others already have returned to normal levels, he said.

"The rain has been so scattered that it varies from project to project," Donaldson said.

Six-hour summit sets more time for talks

OFIRA, Israeli-Occupied Sinai (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he accepted a request by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat today to give more time for American diplomacy to resolve the crisis over Syria's deployment of missiles in Lebanon.

Begin told a joint news conference with Sadat after a six-hour summit that the two of them had "made important agreements, we reached serious solutions," but apologized for not disclosing the results.

"The solutions," he said, "will develop and become known in the process of their realization.

Begin said he had accepted "the request of my friend President Sadat to give more time to Mr. Philip Habib to try to solve the crisis in Lebanon, caused by the Syrians, by peaceful means."

Habib is the special U.S. Middle East envoy who is seeking to resolve the crisis. He spent three weeks last month shuttling between Mideast capitals, and is expected to return from consultations in Washington shortly.

In Washington, the White House announced that Begin and Sadat had been invited to meet separately with President Reagan in early August.

Israel Radio earlier quoted Egyptian sources as saying Sadat wanted Begin to promise not to escalate the tension over Syria's deployment of missiles in Lebanon.

Begin made no substantive comment when he emerged from the morning session of the summit, and Sadat met alone with a group of Ofirans who presented him with a request to be allowed to stay in the area on the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula after Israel's withdrawal next April.

Egypt has refused similar requests in the past, pointing to the Camp David peace treaty's requirement for all Israelis to leave the Sinai Peninsula.

Israeli newspapers said the leaders would discuss Egyptian requests for a quicker Israeli withdrawal from Sinai. The Jerusalem Post predicted a declaration concerning the multinational peacekeeping force for the peninsula, to which the United States is expected to supply more than 1,000 troops.

After the morning summit session, Begin brought up the strange situation resulting from Israeli election laws that forbid showing him on television during the four weeks before Israel's June 30 national voting for Parliament.

Construction could start on apartment complexes

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Three apartment complexes have been approved under the new revenue bond program and could be under construction in about 60 days, according to the chairman of the Midland Housing Finance Corporation.

Harry Clark told the Housing Authority of the City of Midland, of which he is also chairman, that the city's finance corporation had approved the applications for complexes in the north part of Midland. The Housing Authority was meeting in a regular session Wednesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

The three complexes are: Midland Crest Apartments, 290 units, Andrews Highway near Loop 250, Gary Whitehead and Carl Stephens; Midland Wildflower Apartments, 264 units, Loop 250 west of Midkiff Road; Paragon Apartments, 220 units, Midland Drive north of Wadley.

TOTAL APARTMENT UNITS to be funded by the low-interest bond money is 774. Clark recalled that originally the MHFC had received a nod of approval to go ahead with the program from the Midland City Council for 1,000 apartment units. But Clark said the corporation panel had decided to up the limit to 1,500 apartments.

"The demand (from builders) has been so great," explained Clark. "We expect two or three more applications to come before us for approval within a week." He added that another 10-15 applications have been picked up and are being filled out, but he doesn't know when they will be submitted to the MHFC panel.

A fourth complex for 350 units probably will be approved at the panel's next meeting, pushing the total number up to 1,124, he said.

Clark estimated that the apartments probably will rent for about 50 cents per square foot, putting a 700 square foot apartment on the market for $350 a month.

Each approved applicant has received a "letter of intent" which gives him the authority to seek someone to purchase the tax-exempt bonds. "Then we (MHFC) sell the bonds and make the money available to the applicant."

Odessa to appeal THFC ruling

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Representing Medical Center Hospital, Austin attorney Joe Webber said Wednesday he expects to file a motion for a rehearing or a reconsideration Friday with the Texas Health Facilities Commission appealing its recent decision to deny MCH's application for a new cancer machine.

THFC commissioners rendered its negative decision on Odessa's certificate of need application for a 6 Million Electron Volt linear accelerator two weeks ago. The "state-of-the-art" radiation machine application came under fire by Midland officials who said the presence of a second such machine would hinder the economic feasibility of the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center's machine.

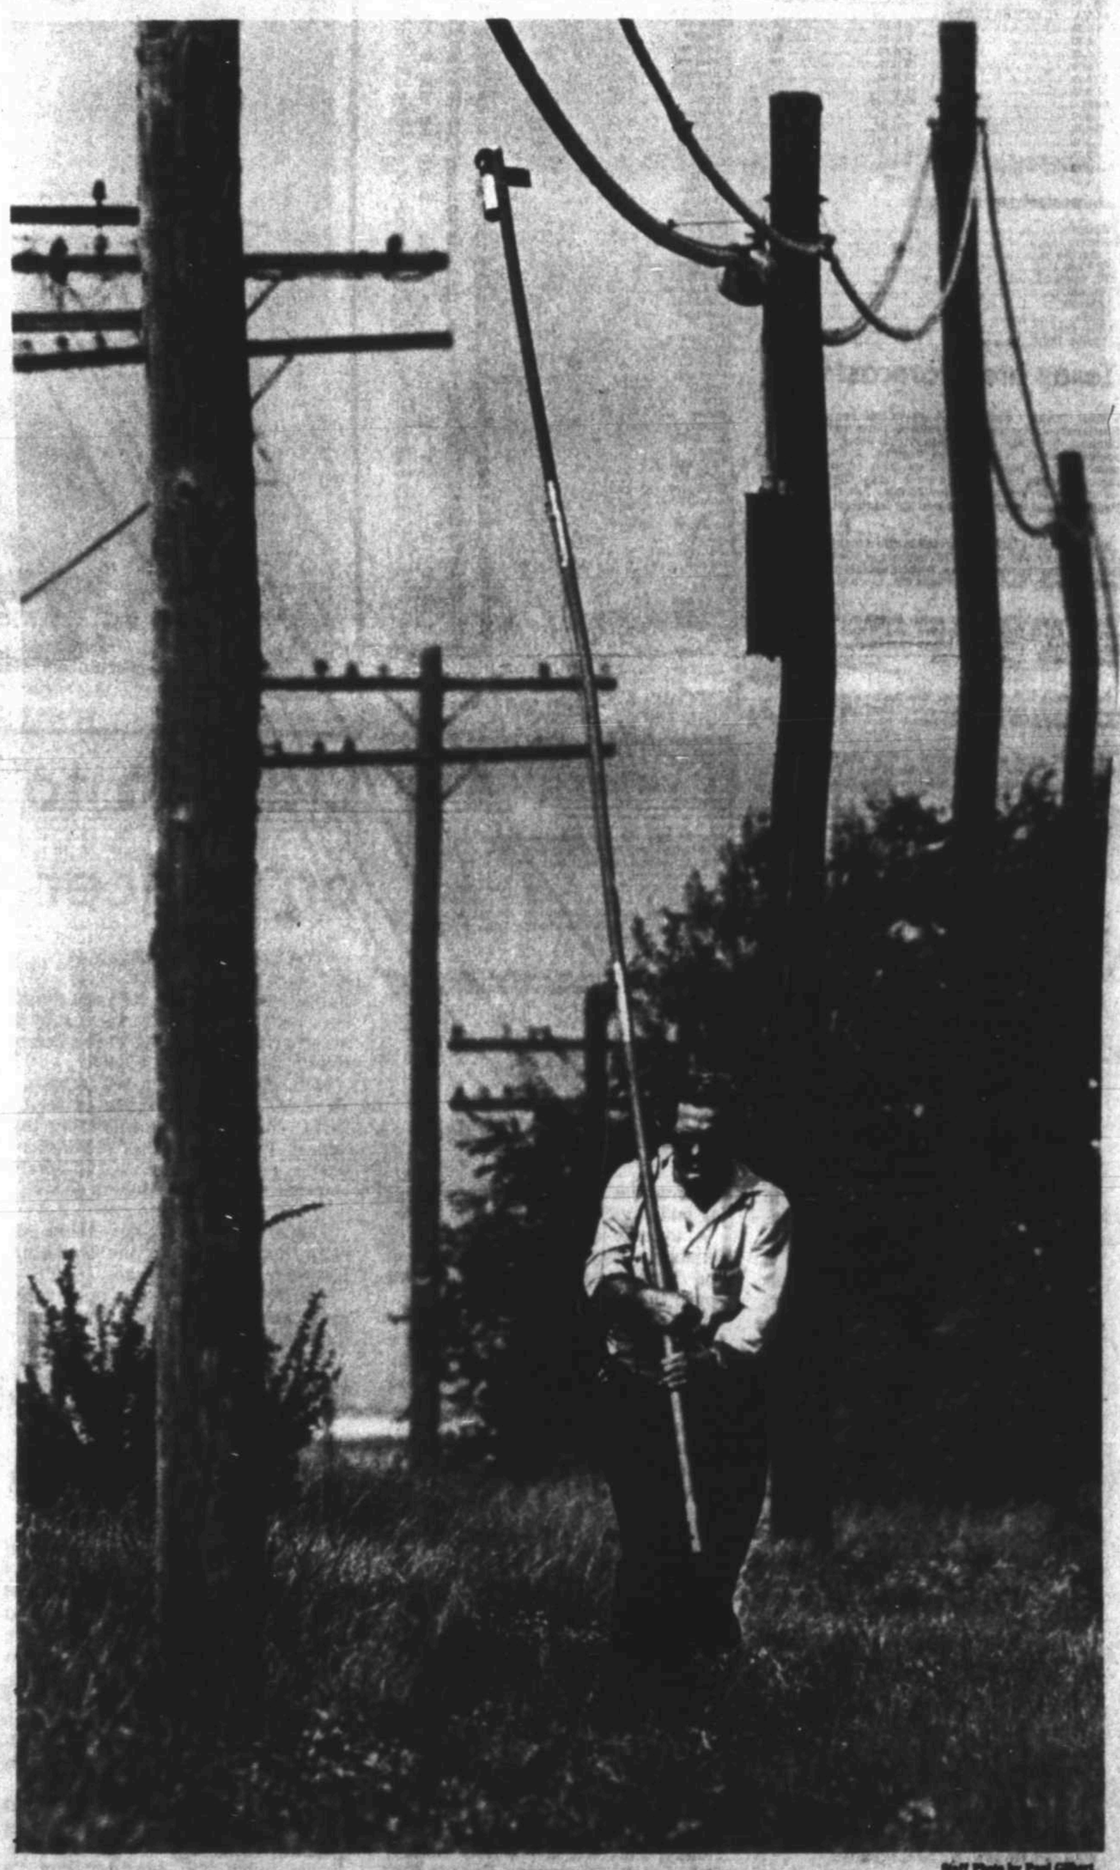

Although Webber said he did not want to elaborate on reasons he would present the commission for the appeal, he did say the THFC would have 25 days in which to approve or disapprove the appeal.

The three-member board of commissioners would then have an additional five days to allow a partial or full new hearing, reconsider the previous order or deny the appeal. If no action is taken by the July 5 deadline, Webber said the original decision would stand.

Administration rejects alternative tax cut plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pledging a fight for its three-year tax-cut plan and claiming the votes to win, the Reagan administration is rejecting a two-year, 15 percent Democratic alternative that would target extra relief toward lower-and middle-income families.

President Reagan was reported today to be preparing specifics of another compromise tax-cut plan, and planning a nationally televised appeal to the public to support his proposals.

While Reagan held a series of White House meetings with likely supporters of his plan to solidify their backing, a split developed in the ranks of one congressional faction he is counting on — conservative House Democrats.

After a lengthy morning caucus, the 47-member Conservative Democratic Forum emerged divided about equally between Reagan's three-year tax cut proposal and the Democratic leadership's two-year, 15 percent alternative.

"We have reached no consensus," said Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, the forum chairman, told reporters. Forum members then headed for the White House to confer with Reagan. Most of the conservatives supported the president in crucial voting on his budget-cutting plan earlier this year.

Only those conservatives who favor Reagan's approach appeared at a post-caucus news conference. Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, a leading supporter of the Reagan plan, predicted victory, as did Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va.

Reagan "is committed to a three-year tax cut and will make a fight for it," says Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, signaling an apparent end to efforts to negotiate a compromise with congressional Democrats. "We think we have the vots."

t the White ouse, Reaan met in seprate, hurriedly arrange session with Rep. Jak Kemp, RN.Y., a cosponsor of the GOP's original three-year, 30 percent tax cut plan; Republican members of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees and conservative Democrats.

After his meeting with Reagan, Kemp told reporters the president was "quite firm" behind a tax cut of no less than 25 percent over three years. Kemp said Reagan was making plans to bid for public support in a national television appearance at an undetermined time.

"You might say this is consensus building," deputy press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters.

The alternative proposed Wednesday by Democrats on the House Ways and Means Committee is not acceptable to Reagan "because it is a two-year program and he wants a three-year bill," Reagn said. "And it's only a 15 percent cut."

works on the same principle as three previous issues of the Single Family Mortgage Revenue Bond Program in which the city or county sold bonds to obtain funds. This money then was given to persons buying single-family homes who qualified for the loans. These loans, however, had a lower interest rate than did conventional loans.

When the apartment program was initiated in April, Clark explained there was a need for more apartments in Midland, but the high interest rates were prohibitive to building the multi-family housing units. The lower-interest bond program makes construction possible without pushing the rents up too high, he had said.

Clark said that legal paperwork required for this bond program makes it prohibitive for someone to build only a few units. "The cost is about $70,000 to $100,000, whether it's four units or 300."

A 1½ percent commitment fee will be going into a pot for a low-income program. Clark said the MHFC is designing that program now and it looks as if the money will go for building and interest payment subsidies primarily for persons living in south and east Midland.

Looking at the three complexes already approved, Clark said it should put about $500,000 into the fund. "With that kind of money available, we can come up with some kind of program."

ANOTHER STIPULATION of the low-interest bond program is that the builders set aside 20 percent of their units for persons making less than 80 percent of the median family income, which is $17,000 in Midland.

In other action, Clark explained a bill dealing with the bond program for single-family homes is on Gov. Bill Clements' desk after passing the Legislature. Saying he supported HB 2350, Clark explained it changes the formula for allocating funds to the state housing finance corporation.

Under the new bill, Midland would be eligible for $24 million in revenue bonds; under the current formula the Tall City could qualify for a maximum of $11 million and possibly get only $5 million.

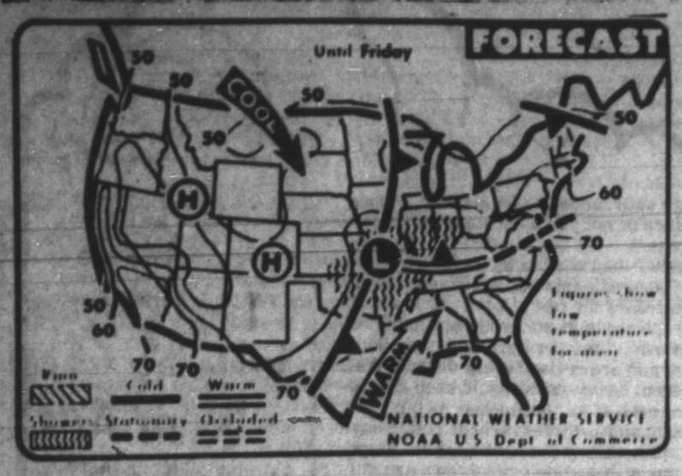

The Housing Authority also approved a 25-year-old applicant to be qualified for Hillcrest Manor, a federally-subsidized housing complex for elderly and handicapped persons.

Fred Kester, secretary of the Housing Authority, explained that the person is working full-time and makes $691 a month. Take-home pay is far less than that. "The applicant says there is no way they can afford their own apartment in Midland" because of the high rents. "But this person wants to be self-sufficient."

Hillcrest Manor already has two handicapped persons living there, he said, and when they moved in neither one was working. Now, one person is working full-time and making more money than this applicant, who has cerebral palsy.

The panel also decided to purchase aluminum doors to replace the wooden ones on the cottages at Hillcrest Manor. Kester said the aluminum doors will cost $51.50 each, and lightweight wooden ones would have been about the same. However, he noted the wooden doors are falling apart and he felt the aluminum ones would last longer.

Award goes to Biggs

Former Peace Justice John Biggs was presented with the Liberty Bell award Wednesday by the Midland County Young Lawyers Association for his contribution to the judicial system. The award is annually given to a lay person "who contributed significantly to the judicial system," said Jerry Prothro, who presented the plaque to Biggs, who was peace justice for 20 years.

Ray victim of stabbing at prison

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, who pleaded guilty to killing civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., was stabbed several times in the chest, arm and neck early today in the law library at Brushy Mountain Penitentiary, officials said.

Ray, 53, serving 99 years for King's murder in 1968 in Memphis, was taken to Oak Ridge Hospital under heavy guard and was undergoing surgery, according to Debby Patterson, deputy press secretary to Gov. Lamar Alexander.

He was in stable condition, and the operation was expected to last 1½ hours, she said.

Four inmates, three black and one white, were held after the stabbing at 8:58 a.m. EDT, she said. Their names were not released. Guards also confiscated a weapon fashioned from a 12-inch metal brace taken from a window frame.

The maximum-security prison was locked down after the stabbing, but there were no disturbances, said Warden Herman Davis.

"These suspects will be held for investigation," he said. "I have in turn notified the Morgan County sheriff and we have sealed off the law library."

Davis said it would be up to the sheriff and district attorney general to pursue charges.

No motive was known, according to Ronald Bishop, director of institutional programs for the Correction Department.

"Ray was in the general prison population and had no known problems with the suspects," he said. The law library is accessible to entire population, he added.

Armed guards were stationed outside the hospital, 15 miles from the prison, Ms. Patterson said.

Barbara Washburn, a hospital spokeswoman, said Ray came into the emergency department, "was evaluated as having multiple stab wounds which he received at the prison" and sent into surgery.

Ray was a fugitive from a Missouri prison at the time King was slain April 4, 1968. He pleaded guilty to the slaying in March 1969, after his arrest in London, England, in return for a 99-year sentence. There was no testimony at his trial, only the statement by the prosecution outlining evidence against him.

He later recanted and has been trying periodically ever since to win a new trial or hearing in the case.

Odessa to appeal THFC ruling on cancer therapy machine

mittee, sent letters to its 1,650 members soliciting help by means of a letter-writing campaign to the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

In the chamber letter, Williams and Francell urge members to write THFC commissioners endorsing the appeal. The letter makes recommendations of points to be used in correspondence to commissioners as well.

Among reasons given are:

—MCH has been the only source of radiation therapy in the Permian Basin for the past 28 years.

—MCH still offers the only complete cancer management program in the Permian Basin.

—Both the Cobalt-80 unit currently in use and the proposed linear accelerator have been donated by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

—The application was approved by the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency under the THFC.

—The Permian Basin Health Systems Plan for 1980-1985 recognizes and includes the continued existence of a Type 3 radiation therapy center in Odessa. (The Allison Center is a more advanced, Type 2 facility)

Gregory Craig, assistant administrator at MCH, said, "We were pleased to hear that the chamber has joined us." He said although the hospital did not request the aid, hospital officials were grateful for the help. "It was the committee that requested the rest of the support. I feel sure that there was no official request (of the hospital for the letter-writing)."

Although he said he was not sure what effect the letters would have on the commissioners, Craig said, "in a request for a rehearing, you can use all the support you can get for a rehearing appeal."

Webber said he also did not know what effect the letters would have. "The effect of anything is for the commissioners to determine."

If the commission denies the appeal, MCH would still have an opportunity to file a lawsuit to get the application approved. Whether such a step will be taken will be decided when it becomes necessary, Webber said.

More rain, severe storms still possible in Midland area

The threat of rain will hang over the Permian Basin through Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

There is a 40 percent chance of rain tonight, decreasing to 30 percent on Friday. Some of the storms may be severe tonight.

The weathermen reported 0.42-inch of rain at the airport from the early morning storms that moved into the area today.

Area towns also received rain, with the Snyder area doused with 5.5 inches during the night. Coahoma recorded .52-inch in 25 minutes. Hobbs, N.M., was reported to have eight inches of water in the streets. Lamesa had three inches of rain and damaging hail that was the size of tennis balls.

Winds tonight should be out of east at 10-15 mph. The low tonight be in the low 60s with the high on Friday reaching the low 80s.

The high Wednesday was 90 degrees, which didn't quite make the record temperature of 102 degrees set in 1950.

The low this morning was 61 degrees. The record low for this date was set in 1970 at 50 degrees.

Locally heavy rain caused flooding in the northern parts of Texas and Louisiana early today, while rain also fell from Arkansas to the Great Plains, and from the East Coast to the Ohio Valley.

Violent storms and up to a dozen tornadoes struck Colorado Wednesday, killing one person and injuring 42 others. The twisters struck several communities around Denver, damaging buildings, trees and power lines.

A tornado also touched down in Oklahoma City, injuring one person and damaging several buildings and power lines.

Showers and thunderstorms are forecast today for the Plains, the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the upper Ohio Valley and the Atlantic Coast.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 42 in Butte, Mont., to 90 at Luke Air Force Base in Phoenix.

Eastern U.S. — Atlanta not available; Boston 62 showers; Buffalo 68 partly cloudy; Caribou not available; Charleston, SC 78 cloudy; Cincinnati 71 foggy; Cleveland 64 partly cloudy; Detroit 62 foggy; Miami 82 fair; Nashville 74 partly cloudy; New York 63 foggy; Philadelphia 67 foggy; Pittsburgh 69 hazy; Washington 75 hazy.

Central U.S. — Bismarck 60 cloudy; Chicago 66 partly cloudy; Denver 58 partly cloudy; Des Moines 63 partly cloudy; Fort Worth 68 partly cloudy; Indianapolis 72 cloudy; Kansas City 67 partly cloudy; Mpls-St. Paul 57 fair; New Orleans 78 fair; St. Louis 72 fair.

Western U.S. — Albuquerque 54 fair; Anchorage 51 windy; Los Angeles 64 hazy; Phoenix 86 fair; Salt Lake City 54 fair; San Diego 68 fair; San Francisco 58 fair; Seattle 53 rain.

Black man may still be suspect

ATLANTA (AP) — A black man who was questioned for nearly 12 hours about some of the slayings of 28 young blacks and then was released today denied any connection with the case but said, "I still think I am a prime suspect."

The 23-year-old man said he was given a polygraph test when he was questioned by Atlanta police Wednesday night and early today and officers had searched his home and car.

"I have nothing to hide," he said at a news conference in his northwest Atlanta home, but he added he believes police still consider him "a prime suspect."

He invited to reporters to the conference on the condition they not use his name.

Officers armed with a search warrant went through his home late Wednesday, confiscating a yellow blanket, purple robe, green carpet fibers, fibers from a bedspread, carpet sweepings and dog hairs, he said.

They also used another search warrant to seize a tape recorder and brief case from his car, he said.

Published reports have said crime lab investigators found fiber evidence in several of the 28 slayings.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said a man questioned in connection with some of the slayings was released early today because the interview produced no information "that would result in an arrest."

The man said, "They did call me a suspect. They said, 'You killed Nathaniel Cater. And you know it and you're lying to us.'" Cater is the 28th victim on the list of slayings being investigated by a special police task force.

The man told reporters he had been under surveillance since May 22, and "considered it harassment."

Whenever he left his home, he was followed by six to eight cars, he said. "We timed them going up and down the street 15 to 20 times in one hour," he said.

Technicians who have analyzed trace evidence in the cases worked through the night at the Georgia Crime Laboratory examining materials retrieved at the man's home, authorities said.

After FBI agents and members of a special police task force investigating the slayings had questioned the man at FBI headquarters, a haggard-looking Brown held a news conference at 3:15 a.m. EDT and announced, "Tonight we have made no arrest." He said the man was "free to leave."

"If there was information that would indicate that anyone we were interested in was responsible for any of the homicides and we had sufficient information to present that before the courts and obtain a conviction, we will make an arrest," Brown said.

Task force recommends doubling of some immigrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House task force is recommending that President Reagan consider granting permanent amnesty to more than a million illegal aliens in the United States and that be double the number of immigrants permitted to enter the country from Mexico and Canada.

In a final draft of the report, obtained by The Associated Press Raio Networ, the President's Task Force on Immigration and Refugee Policy also suggests that Reagan establish an experimental guest worker program.

The task force, headed by Attorney General William French Smith, recommends that the number of immigrants allowed to enter the country each year from Mexico and Canada be increased from 20,000 to 40,000.

The report said "there is no practical way to round up and deport" the 3 million to 6 million illegal aliens estimated to be in this country. As one option for dealing with that problem, it suggests granting permanent resident status to about 1.2 million illegal aliens who could prove they were in the United States prior to Jan. 1, 1980, and that they have lived here for five consecutive years.

The task force also suggests granting temporary worker status for another 1.5 million illegal immigrants.

A Justice Department spokesman said the report would be sent to the White House later this month, and other sources said Reagan is expected to act on its recommendations following his meeting next week with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

"Illegal immigration has caused impatience in Congress and the public with all migration into the United States," the report said, adding that some members of Congress and the public are especially concerned with the ethnic makeup of the latest waves of immigration, which was dominated by Hispanics.

In an attempt to bring the high level of legal and illegal immigration under control and encourage more diversity among the newcomers, the task force report puts forward a series of options for Reagan to consider. The president will make the final decisions.

The report recommends that the current immigration ceiling of 270,000 admissions a year be retained. In addition, spouses, children and parents of U.S. citizens would be admitted without regard to the ceiling, which would add another 150,000 newcomers annually, the report estimates.

Canada frontier provides back door for illegal aliens

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While border agents try to curb a tide of aliens crossing the Mexican border, the Canadian frontier is a convenient back door for tens of thousands of other "illegals" sneaking into the United States.

Haitians, Jamaicans and other aliens using Canada as a stepping stone head south hidden in automobile trunks or secret compartments of trucks. They scamper through the border's piney woodlands, or cruise across the lakes and rivers strung along the frontier.

Others, more confident of their "documents," openly drive through crossing points or fly to U.S. airports.

But, unlike the flood from Mexico, it is more of a seepage from Canada.

In 1980, a total of 92,896 undocumented aliens were turned back at the U.S.-Canadian border or were caught trying to sneak across, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service reports. The figure for the Mexican frontier was approximately 1.6 million.

However, U.S. officials concede privately that thousands must be getting across the northern border, making it a significant second source of the United States' underground population of illegal aliens, which some estimates put as high as 10 million people.

The Canadian border is not yet a major problem, said Vern Jervis, an INS spokesman in Washington.

"But it's logical that there might be an increase" in illegal traffic from the north, he said. "More and more people are anxious to enter the country."

The biggest problem is at the eastern end of the 3,200-mile line between Canada and the lower 48 states.

"We have a steady stream of people coming through illegally," said George Lara, district director for the INS in St. Albans, Vt.

In the East, the "illegals" generally are from Haiti and other poor Caribbean islands. In the West, they include many people from India or Pakistan, and the Phillipine Islands.

George Tranberg, a deputy chief patrol agent in the border town of Blaine, Wash., said the flow from British Columbia of fraudulently documented people from India is "steadily on the increase."

The advantage of the northern route is that it can be far easier to enter Canada than the United States, and the lightly patrolled U.S.-Canadian frontier is one of the world's most open borders.

The route is well-known around the world. Haitian officials say it is openly advertised in that country. At her 1978 trial for entering Vermont from Canada, suspected West German terrorist Kristina Berster said she learned of the route from Latin American refugees in Paris.

U.S. authorities say professional smugglers in Canada charge $1,000 or more to sneak an alien into the United States.

Often the smuggler drops off his clients in an isolated woods on the Canadian side, drives through the border crossing alone, then picks them up after they have walked to a remote spot on the U.S. side, agents say.

"Sometimes we detect it by the fact that the driver has extra clothes in the car," said James Harrigan, INS chief at Champlain, N.Y., on the border 30 miles south of Montreal.

Immigration officials said others come by boat across Lake Champlain, the Detroit River and waterways. Many simply head south down the highways.

"Last month we stopped a tractor-trailer hauling wood," Harrigan recalled. "The trailer had a space below it that would accommodate 15 to 20 people. We found a Haitian in there.

"Once they get into the United States, they go live with relatives or friends, get work and settle down."

The "back door" clearly is more attractive than the perilous sea voyage thousands of Haitian "boat people" have risked to reach Florida.

For a $544 round-trip ticket — the two-way air fare "proves" to Canadian immigration officers he is not staying — a Haitian can fly to Montreal and put himself in the hands of a smuggler or of friends who can arrange his illegal passage to America.

Many caught at border posts have been supplied fraudulent documents — passports with visas allowing U.S. entry but doctored with substitute photographs, or papers supposedly proving permanent residence in Canada. Canadian residents generally can cross freely into the United States.

American officials say a recent six-month Canadian "amnesty" for undocumented Haitians in Quebec province — granting them immigrant status — apparently helped stem the flow of Haitian "illegals" from Montreal. Almost 4,000 Haitians came forward under the amnesty, but it has ended and the southbound Haitian tide could rise again.

"We could help ourselves with more men," concludes Donald Russell, deputy INS director for the Seattle district. Three hundred Border Patrol agents cover those areas of the US.-Canadian border between highway crossing points. More than eight times that number — 2,500 — patrol the U.S.-Mexican frontier, which is half as long.

The Reagan administration is considering a national commission's recommendations that the border force be expanded. Bills in Congress call for doubling its size. But those standing watch in the north say they expect any boost in manpower to go south.

Cockapoo not a bad pool player

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

DUNLAP, Calif. — Heide spends most of her time hanging out in a pool hall. And for a 7-year-old cockapoo she's not a bad player.

"I didn't teach Heide. She picked up the game herself," swears Vince Vaskantas, 59, who owns both the dog and the tavern in this High Sierra town.

"When Heide was a puppy I sat her at the end of the pool table while I practiced shots," Vaskantas said.

"Then one day when Heide was 8 months old she started knocking the balls into the pockets with her nose and paws and she's been playing pool ever since."

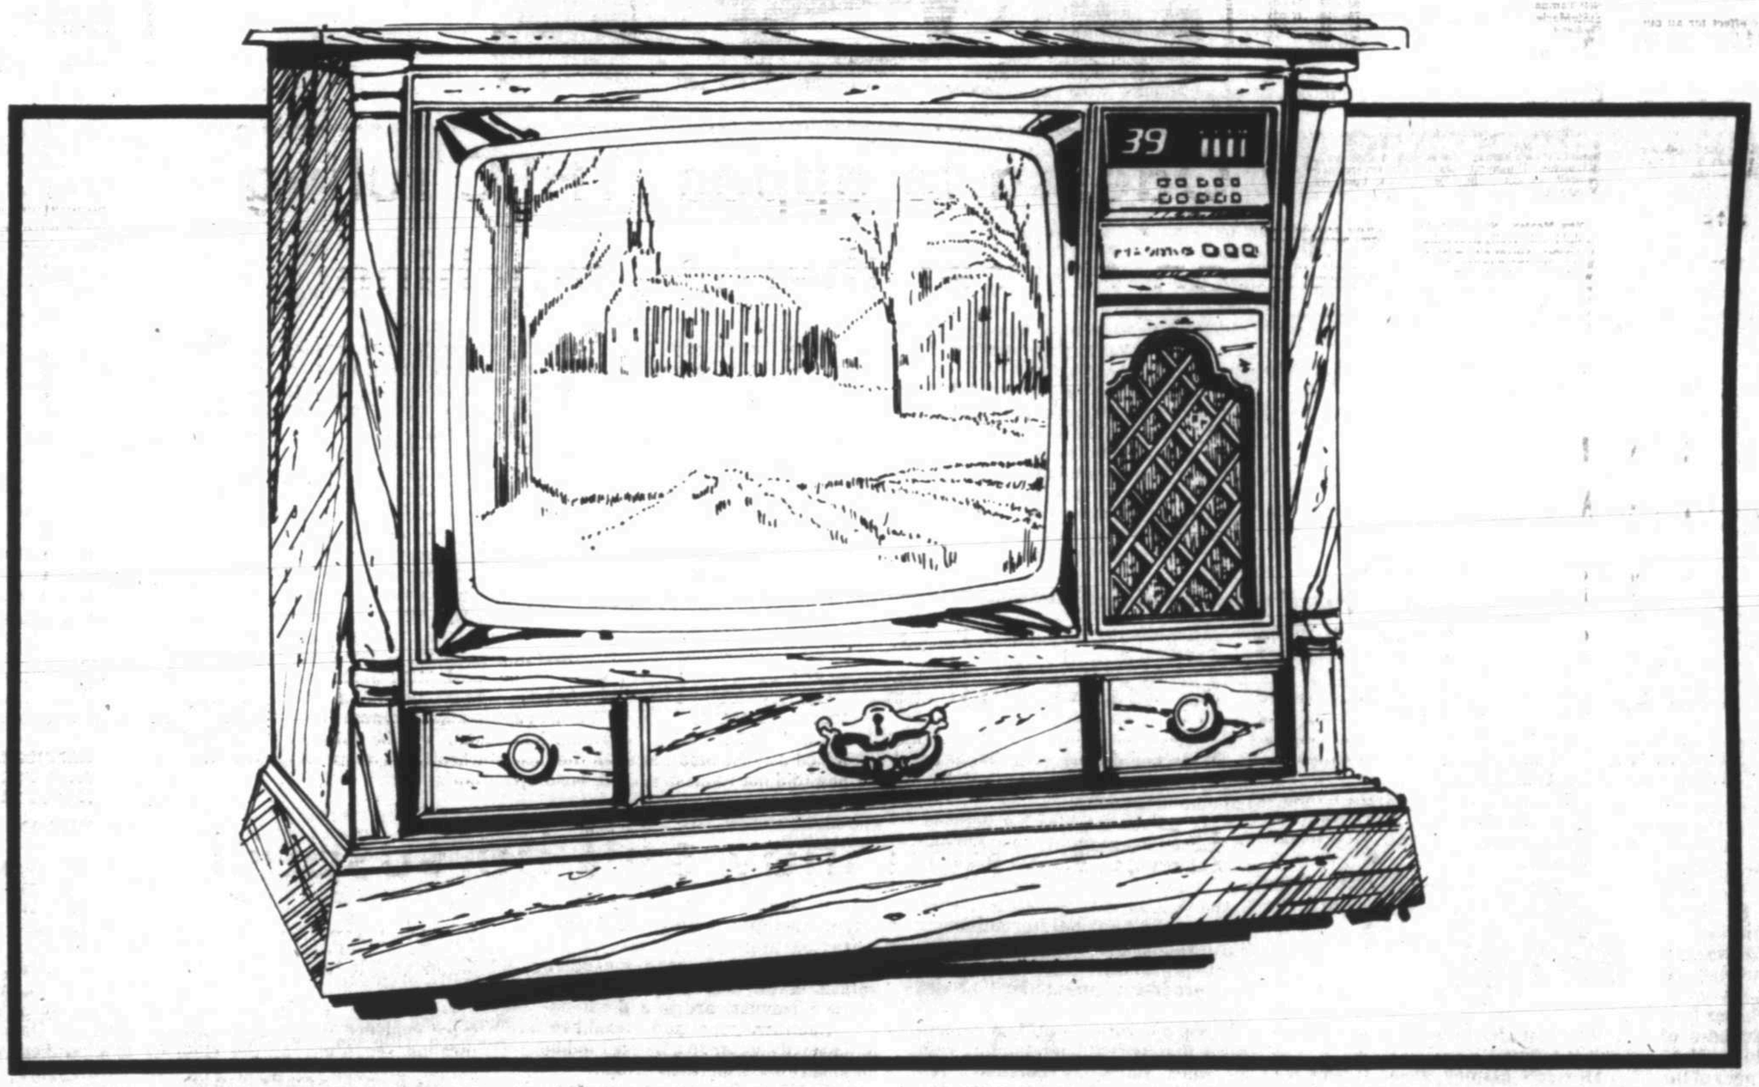

When she hears anyone rack up the balls Heide leaps onto a chair and then to the pool table.

She doesn't know about taking turns. She just noses and paws until she sinks all the balls.

Recognizing the need

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen had some encouraging words for the oil industry when he addressed the annual meeting of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association in Fort Worth earlier this week.

What Sen. Bentsen told the independent oil industry executives was that the nation's thirst for foreign oil is diminishing, that domestic drilling activity is increasing and that the energy picture, generally, isn't as bleak now as it was four years ago.

"To those who have become addicted to the mistakes of the past, to the doubting Thomases and prophets of doom, I can only say: If you want proof that the American economy responds to incentives, just take a look at what we have done in the area of energy production," the senator said.

U.S. oil imports have dropped about 40 percent in the last four years, Sen. Bentsen noted, and there are now more than 3,800 drilling rigs operating in the United States, more than 1,000 more than the number of rigs turning at this time last year.

The increasé in exploration activity came about because legislative incentives were extended and, financially, such drilling activity became profitable. Evidence of this fact can be witnessed throughout the sprawling Permian Basin where the rig count has increased tremendously.

Despite the brighter energy picture for the nation at the current time, it would be a mistake to be satisfied with the progress that has been made. To do so would be to fall back to those "mistakes of the past" of which Sen. Bentsen spoke.

Rather, the direction the nation should be moving is forward. No one group of people was responsible for the gains made during recent years — the reduction in gasoline consumption and the increased domestic drilling. It was a successful effort because many Americans pulled their weight and did their part.

There's more to be done, not the last of which is the repeal of the windfall profits tax. Sen. Bentsen already is fighting to exempt independent producers from that highly unjust burden which continues to restrict drilling activity.

The fight for energy independence in the United States will be a long and unpleasant one. But, as history graphically has illustrated, it is a most necessary one. We must not be at the mercy of another nation. It's as fundamental to our way of life as the freedoms our forefathers died for in years gone by. Having recognized that fact we really shouldn't continue to stymie our efforts.

Small means vulnerable

Opting for a compact car has obvious advantages.

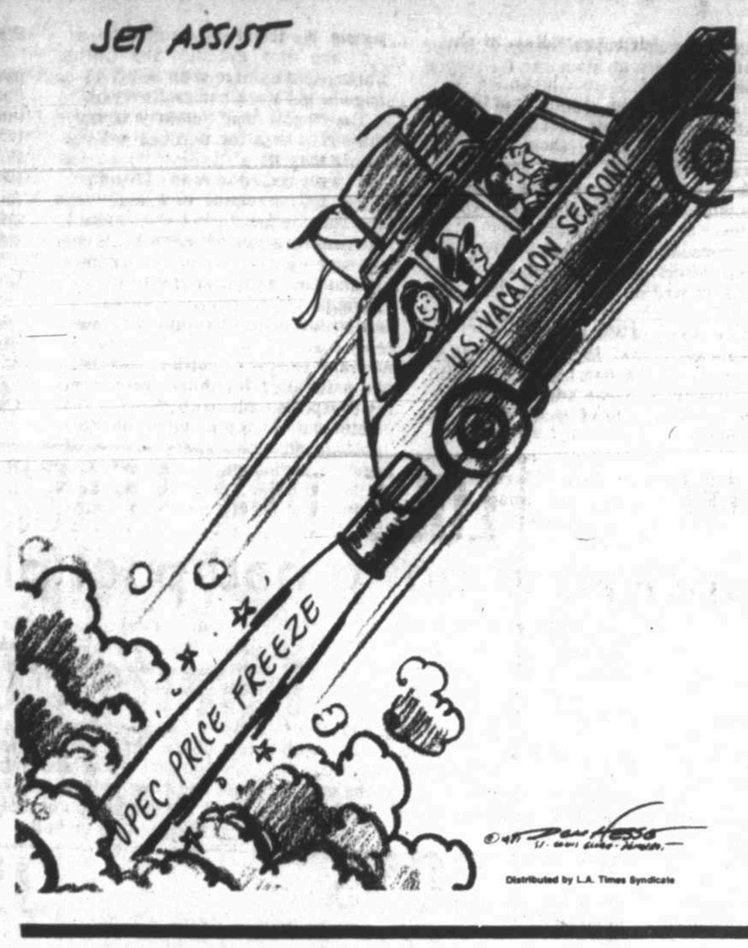

First there are tremendous fuel savings. The older Detroit models get about 14 miles a gallon while some of the new compacts can deliver more than 40 miles on the same amount.

Then there's the parking advantage. Little cars can zip right into those spaces that were always a foot too short for standard vehicles.

Now the bad news. The Highway Traffic Safety Administration points out that even though only 38 percent of the cars on the road are compacts, they are involved in 55 percent of the fatal accidents.

Despite the safety problem, more and more motorists are switching to smaller cars. Last year 64 percent of auto sales were compacts or subcompacts. Within five years, compact cars will be in the majority.

In the meantime, it would behoove the small car operator to drive defensively. Keep an eye on the road and that safety belt fastened.

Art Buchwald

"Hey, Pa, they're going to have to make some changes in Social Security to keep the program from going bankrupt."

"Makes sense to me. Am I still under the safety net?"

"Not sure yet. It depends on the compromise. Ain't enough money to go around so they have to change the rules again."

"What went wrong, son?"

"You want to know the truth, Pa? You didn't die when you was supposed to."

"Never intended to, son, heh, heh, heh."

"It ain't no laughing matter, Pa. You see, when the Social Security program started, them smart fellas in Washington figured you to die when you was 62, so they wouldn't have to give you more'n you put in. But you lived to be 75 and you still don't look ready to go."

"You bet your sweet life I ain't ready to go. I didn't promise them fellas in Washington nothin' about when I'd kick the can. I feel better now'n I did when I was 50."

"It ain't how old you feel. It's how old you are that has them fellas in Washington biting their nails. Ma's hanging on a lot longer than she's supposed to, too."

"When did they have her snuffed out?"

"When she got to be 67."

"They don't know your Ma. She's going to be kicking up her heels until she's 90."

"Them stat-as-tissions are starting to find that out, Pa. Nobody is dying when they're supposed to. You and Ma ain't cooperating with the ax-chew-aerial tables one lick. And neither are any of your friends."

"Wal, maybe they shouldn't have invented penicillin and all them new-fangled drugs. Maybe them smart fellas in Washington didn't figure on new breakthroughs in medicine which would keep us all alive."

"They didn't, Pa, and now they have to bite the bullet. Not their bullet — yours."

"How they plannin' to do that, son?"

"It ain't clear yet, but they're trying to set up new regulations for people that wants to go on Social Security."

"What kind of regs?"

"Wal, if you're 62 years old and want to retire, you can get 55 percent of your pension, providing you agree to serve in the U.S. Army for four years."

"That seems fair."

"If you're 70 years old and have been paying into Social Security since you was a teen-ager, you're entitled to have every third filling in your mouth paid for, providing you ain't on a football scholarship."

"No one can argue with that."

"If you're over 75 years old — and can prove you're an orphan, you can get 100 percent of your benefits — unless you have a newspaper route and you don't declare your tips."

"That won't affect me. Your Ma is the one who has a newspaper route."

"If you win more than $2.50 a day at gin rummy, you have to pay the first $100 of your Medicaid bill."

"There goes my safety net."

"I'm sorry, Pa. But that's just the way it's got to be."

"I thought that fella Reagan said he wasn't going to mess with anyone's Social Security if he became president."

"He got no choice, Pa, what with you and Ma hanging on the way you've been doin'."

"Wal, your Ma and I ain't about to die just to balance the country's budget."

"Nobody wants you to die, Pa."

"Then what do them smart fellas in Washington want us to do?"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Loyalty test' eased for women, minorities

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's doctrinaire conservative supporters will be surprised to learn that the White House is practicing a kind of political "reverse discrimination." Political loyalty tests apparently have been relaxed in the case of minority candidates for top jobs.

The idea of boosting an administration's image by seeking out women and minority nominees is nothing new, of course. In his recently published memoir of Cabinet life under Jimmy Carter, Joseph Califano claims that Carter ordered that all incompetents be weeded out of the government — with the exception of women and minorities.

The Reagan White House hasn't gone that far. But its policy on minority appointments was explained by Vice President Bush at the April 2 Cabinet meeting three days after Reagan was shot. Bush's remarks behind closed doors were reported in a private memo to Energy Secretary James Edwards by the man who sat in for him, W. Kenneth Davis, the deputy designate. The memo has been reviewed by my associate Jack Mitchell.

"The vice president ... stressed the fact that the president had pledged to incorporate a substantial number of minority people at the top level in the new government," Davis reported. "The vice president said that we were clearly not doing the job we had promised to do and that we needed to do a lot better for the remaining jobs. The point was raised that many of the minority candidates cannot pass the political tests. The vice president said that the tests were being modified in the case of minority candidates ...."

Davis had other news from the Cabinet meeting. "The vice president mentioned that there were a lot of business people coming in with special interests seeking to get special concessions with respect to taxes and thought this was quite unfortunate and that the members of the Cabinet should do what they could to resist this type of pressure and counteract it," Davis wrote.

What makes this particularly interesting is that a top corporation executive was sitting in on that very Cabinet meeting. It was Davis himself. At the time, he was still a vice president of Bechtel Power Corp., which has more than $100 million worth of energy-related federal contracts.

After his appointment as Edwards' deputy, but before his confirmation by the Senate, Davis assumed his duties at DOE. The propriety of allowing a private corporation executive to run a federal agency is questionable when the executive's company is heavily involved in projects of sending a corporate bigshot to sit in on a meeting of the supreme policy-making body in the federal government.

Davis' views on a potential conflict of interest between his corporate past and his government position were subsequently made clear during his confirmation proceedings. He outraged Senate investigators by asking for a waiver that would permit him to take an active part in DOE policy decisions affecting Bechtel. A compromise was worked out, and he was eventually confirmed.

Footnote: Davis was unavailble for comment, but a DOE spokesman stressed that Davis merely "sat in" for Edwards at the Cabinet meeting, but did not otherwise participate.

A Bush spokesman acknowledged that progress on minority appointments was of concern to both Reagan and Bush, and that the White House had hired aides to recruit women, blacks and other minorities to the administration.

BAD NEWS ON BAD DEBTS — President Reagan has given high priority to the recovery of billions of dollars owed to the federal government. Yet the Department of Education is quietly sabotaging this worthy endeavor.

The department is owed more than $1 billion by students who skipped out on government-backed college loans. Its loan collectors have managed to track down about 823,000 of the deadbeats and recover more than $159 million for Uncle Sam.

In a congratulatory memorandum, Education Secretary Terrel Bell praised his collection staff's "impressive record" and said: "Our collectors have returned more than $3 for every $1 of cost to the taxpayer. We should be proud of our accomplishments."

Bell then announced that 565 of the loan collectors would be fired.

The secretary believes that private collection agencies should do the job. Yet his own department's studies show that private firms will cost more and be less successful.

Because they operate on commission, the private firms tend to go after the delinquent loans that are easiest to collect. The tough ones are turned back to the government to handle.

WATCH ON WASTE — The federal government doesn't subsidize sports generally, even our Olympic athletes have to pay their own way. But there's one flagrant and incredible exception: rifle shooting. Since 1903, the "civilian marksmanship program" has been generously supported by the taxpayers. Last year, more than $1 million in public funds were spent — $845,000 to the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, and $329,000 in free equipment and ammunition. ... Secretary of Agriculture John Block recently took a 10-day trip through Europe, stopping at such renowned agriculture centers as Paris, London, Amsterdam and Hamburg. While he was away, his undersecretary for Small Community and Rural Development, Frank Naylor, took seven assistants for a three-day stay in historic Harper's Ferry, W. Va., where they reportedly held meetings on "training and policy."

HEMISPHERE REPORT

William Giandoni

Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo seems to have decided, again, that things would go better for Mexico with, rather than without, the United States.

The decision cannot have come easily for Lopez Portillo. He tried once before, with former President Jimmy Carter, and was rebuffed.

Remember, Lopez Portillo was the first foreign head of state to visit the White House after Carter's inauguration. Remember, too, that Lopez Portillo then ordered extra supplies of Mexican natural gas to help the United States through the shortages of the cold winter of 1977.

What did Mexico get for his efforts? First, a Washington announcement, warmly appreciated in Mexico, that the United States was going to help finance a costly natural gas pipeline from Mexican oil and gas fields to the U.S. border and, then, a Carter administration decision against the project. The pipeline was subsequently completed with Japanese and other help and Mexico is selling gas to the United States.

With that in mind, Lopez Portillo's willingness to try again, may be considered a measure of the strength of his conviction that closer alignment with the United States could be in Mexico's best interest.

Of course, to President Ronald Reagan must go credit for influencing the feisty Lopez Portillo to accept another invitation to visit Washington.

Clearly, Reagan and some of his closest associates, from Vice President George Bush on down, are fully aware of how important to the United States Mexico is now and will, increasingly, be in the future.

That there are obstacles to greater comprehension between the United States and Mexico there is no doubt.

One of the ongoing problems is that Mexicans know much more about each and every one of the points of conflict between the two countries than people north of the border.

Why that should be so is not difficult to fathom.

Mexico's history, since independence in 1821, is, for the most part, dominated by what the United States has done or failed to do. U.S. history, as studied in the United States, is mostly concerned with Europe or Asia, with only passing reference to Mexico, and no details of what to Mexico were momentous events.

That was first made evident to me in 1947 when, as a newly arrived foreign correspondent in Mexico City, I had to write a few paragraphs about the surprise stop President Harry S. Truman, then visiting President Miguel Aleman, made at the monument to Mexico's "Ninos Heroes" in Chapultepec Park. Not even the White House press corps was able to determine the meaning of Truman's gesture.

The only person in the United Press office who could explain the significance of the Ninos Heroes was Miguel Lozano Charles, a Mexican newsman who as a youth had been a cadet at the Colegio Militar, Mexico's West Point. He told us that the "boy heroes" were military college cadets who wrapped themselves in the Mexican flag and jumped to their deaths from the parapet of Chapultepec Castle rather than surrender to the invading U.S. Army under Gen. Winfield Scott in 1847.

So it is with all points of contention, be they migrant labor, trade, border problems or whatever. Mexicans have studied them in detail, whereas the United States has seemed, at best, to start considering each problem anew, with every change of presidential administration.

What makes the meeting between Presidents Reagan and Lopez Portillo even more important is that Mexico is fast approaching the time, probably in late October or in November, when the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party will choose the candidate who, in all probability, will be Mexico's next president, during the 1982-1988 period.

If Lopez Portillo is able to demonstrate that better understanding with the United States has benefited Mexico, the likelihood that his successor be a man a similar thinking would be enhanced.

If, however, as his many eloquent critics insist, closer ties with the United States bring Mexico no improvement, no change for the better, both nations will suffer.

By now, the United States must know that it has to count on some considerable help, some understanding, some cooperation from the rest of the world if it wants to get the U.S. economy back into shape and guide less-developed countries along the path to greater well-being.

Not much more than sympathy and good wishes can be expected from West Germany, Japan and other industrialized nations. They are in direct competition with the United States.

But the contradictions between U.S. interests and those of countries that still consider the dollar to be the valid measure of the worth of things are not so great.

Mexico is probably foremost among that group of countries, followed closely by Canada, Brazil and other hemisphere nations. Like it or not, their progress or impoverishment depends on the dollar.

Obviously, President Reagan has been thinking along those lines. At least he has often spoken of the benefits of a common market that would link Mexico, Canada and the United States, despite the fact that both Mexico and Canada have said they were not interested because, in effect, they feared the United States would swallow them.

Clearly, though, if a solution is ever to be found to world, hemispheric and regional economic problems, Washington must take the lead. And what better partners in the effort than Mexico and Canada, and the other nations of the Western Hemisphere whose economies are to a great degree complementary and whose peoples not only aspire to a better life but also share the American dream?

If President Reagan can convince President Lopez Portillo, by deed as well as word, that the United States can be trusted, an era of true hemispheric solidarity, and prosperity, could be opened up.

Mr. Reagan's task won't be easy, although Lopez Portillo appears to want to believe in the United States.

But if the U.S. president succeeds in gaining the confidence of his Mexican counterpart, many of the other Latin American countries may be expected to jump on the bandwagon.

A source of puzzlement elsewhere in the hemisphere long has been the inability of the United States and Mexico to behave like good neighbors.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On June 4, 1942 the Battle of Midway began. The naval battle ended in Japan's first decisive defeat of World War II.

On this date:

In 1805, the United States concluded a peace treaty with Tripoli.

And in 1961, President John Kennedy met with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in Vienna.

Ten years ago: thirteen disabled North Vietnamese were forced to go back to war prisons in South Vietnam after the Hanoi government refused to allow them to return home.

Five years ago: the United States lost its fight to keep the Palestine Liberation Organization out of the 132-nation World Employment Conference.

As debate heats up, Lefever's position still 'hot'

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ernest W. Lefever, who has run into a buzz saw of controversy on his nomination as the Reagan administration's human rights expert, closely parallels his superiors in views on the subject.

In part, Lefever's outspoken manner may have exacerbated his problems in the Senate.

The 61-year-old Lefever has demonstrated time and again that he doesn't hesitate to speak his mind, even on matters of great sensitivity. Even many of his supporters described him as having an abrasive personality.

But the fact is that Lefever does reflect the administration's view of human rights as a foreign policy issue. It is for this reason that the White House has decided to back him to the hilt, because a retreat on Lefever would look like a retreat on policy.

In an interview with The Associated Press in late February, Lefever said there have been instaces where Roman Catholic nuns hid machine guns for guerrillas in Latin America.

The comment came at a time when U.S. public opinion was still seething over the slaying of three American nuns and another churchwoman in El Salvador last December.

While Lefever said he wasn't referring specifically to nuns in El Salvador, it appeared as though he felt the crime was less heinous because nuns may have aided guerrillas in the past.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was alarmed enough at these and other comments that he passed the word that Lefever should be less vocal in the future.

In fact, State Department officials are known to have strongly urged Lefever to cancel an appearance on a network interview program last week. While they stressed the final decision was up to Lefever, he cancelled.

The Associated Press reported Wednesday that two of Lefever's brothers say he has expressed himself privately as believing that blacks are genetically inferior to whites in intellect. Lefever issued a statement denying he had ever said such a thing.

Lefever also had a pointed exchange with Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, at a committee meeting May 18.

Percy wanted Lefever to expand on a previous complaint that communists were orchestrating the opposition against his appointment as assistant secretary of state for human rights and humanitarian affairs.

Lefever said he was certain he hadn't use the word communist, but Percy claimed he had — during a meeting in Percy's office. Lefever then said he didn't think there was any conspiracy against him.

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee planned to ask Lefever in a closed session today if Nestle helped his non-profit research center distribute an article favorable to infant formula sales in developing countries.

However, the White House has made clear it doesn't believe there is any serious conflict, and despite advice from some key senators that Reagan withdraw the nomination, aides say the president has decided to stay with it because Lefever's views do reflect the administration's view on human rights.

The administration has rejected the Carter administration policy of openly pressuring other nations to correct human rights abuses in favor of a policy of quiet diplomacy. Abuses are to be dealt with privately and won't be used as a reason to disrupt relations with otherwise friendly nations.

Anti-communism has replaced human rights as a chief criteria for good relations with the United States. That is the policy of Reagan, the policy of Haig and the policy of Lefever.

The administration already has moved to improve relations with South Korea, Argentina, Chile, Guatemala and South Africa, whose human rights policies and abuses resulted in severely strained relations with the Carter administration.

Nestle lawyer admits gift to Lefever's research center

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Nestle Corp. lawyer told Senate investigators he gave $10,000 to a research center headed by Ernest W. Lefever, whose nomination as President Reagan's human rights adviser is clouded by conflict of interest questions involving the same company, Senate sources say.

The contribution was in addition to $25,000 that Nestle donated to the Lefever's Ethics and Public Policy Center in 1980 while the center was preparing and distributing an article that Nestle considered favorable to its sale of infant formula in Third World countries.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., a leading opponent of Lefever's appointment as assistant secretary of state for human rights, said he would question the nominee about the additional $10,000 during a closed-door hearing by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today. Tsongas has called the $25,000 donated earlier an "ethics question."

The lawyer, Thomas J. Ward, said the money, divided into two $5,000 donations, was contributed to the center through his Washington law firm of Ward and Grow, the sources said. The sources added that it was still unclear whether the money originated from Nestle.

Tsongas said if the donation did come from Nestle, "that would be laundered" money.

Ward was unavailable for comment Wednesday as was his law partner, Michael A. Grow.

At his confirmation hearing May 18, Lefever was asked if Ward was the source of a $20,000 donation that Nestle had made to the center in August 1980. Lefever, who is president of the center, answered that he was not.

Lefever said he had solicited a donation from Ward but was not asked whether Ward had contributed any other money — and Lefever did not volunteer such information.

Lefever, who has insisted that the center's work on the formula controversy was not influenced by Nestle's donations, was unavailable for comment Wednesday night.

Nestle has been criticized for marketing infant formula in poor countries where, critics contend, the milk substitutes contribute to the deaths of millions of babies because the formula is mixed with contaminated water or mothers dilute the mixture to save money.

The World Health Organization voted last month — with the United States dissenting — to discourage the sale of infant formula in Third World countries.

According to a memo, purportedly signed by Nestle vice president E.W. Saunders and dated Aug. 10, 1980, the giant food manufacturer hoped to use "independent third parties" — like the Lefever center — to argue Nestle's side of the infant formula controversy.

Portions of the memo were read at the May 18 Senate hearing. Nestle, which refuses to comment on the Lefever nomination, has not denied the authenticity of the memo, which surfaced publicly in January. However, Lefever suggested at the hearing that it might be a forgery.

The memo states that "Mr. (David) Guerrant (president of Nestle-USA) is somewhat concerned that Nestle should not be seen to be the dominant subscriber to the Ethics and Policy Center."

"Mr. Ward informs us that there are ways in which this matter can be satisfactorily handled, and in view of his own contacts with Dr. Lefever and his presence in Washington, I suggest that Mr. Ward remain closely involved in the followup activity with the center."

Lefever faces more Senate questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's embattled human rights nominee, Ernest W. Lefever, is facing new Senate questioning on his Nestle Corp. connection, his racial views and two senators' report that he called opposition to his appointment "communist inspired."

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said those were the chief questions they had for Lefever at a closed-door meeting this afternoon.

The committee planned to vote on the nomination Friday morning, and Senate leadership sources say the vote may be 12-5 against recommending Lefever's confirmation as assistant secretary of state for human rights.

But Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said he told Reagan again Wednesday that he believes Lefever still can be confirmed by the full Senate after "a difficult struggle."

Baker said he is taking a head count to find out how much opposition Lefever has in the full Senate.

Survivors include a daughter, Euna Fay Rasure of Midland, and three grandchildren.

Protest ends peacefully

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Led by a station wagon carrying the body of a martyred leftist, about 1,500 grim protesters marched through downtown Juarez on Wednesday to protest a dispute among residents at a squatters' village.

There was no violence, although Carlos Gonzalez, chief of the state judicial police in Juarez, had said earlier that police expected more trouble from the leftist Comite de Defensa Popular.

The march was staged by the committee, which is headquartered in the squatters' village, or colonia. Leading the parade was a van that blared accusations against Juarez Mayor Jose Reyes Estrada and the station wagon carrying the casket of Jose Fernandez Mejia, 39.

Fernandez was shot to death and 10 other people were injured Sunday when members of the committee attempted to evict some residents of the squatter's village, or colonia.

Two people were charged in the incident Wednesday, Gonzalez said. He said Jose Victor Zigarroa was charged with murder in the slaying of Fernandez and Humberto Soto Grajeda was charged with assault and battery for allegedly cutting five people with a knife. Gonzalez said another man may be charged if ballistics tests showed he also fired shots during the incident.

The suspects are residents of the colonia who were being evicted when the incident occurred, Gonzalez said. Fernandez was described as a "lieutenant" of Pedro Matus, the leader of the committee.

The committee runs the colonia, which has grown from a cluster of cardboard shacks a few years ago to a neighborhood with a school and medical facilities.

Committee members evicted about 45 people from the colonia earlier this week because those evicted had accepted titles to the land where they live from Reyes Estrada.

Matus and the committee members have blamed Reyes Estrada for the shooting, saying his actions led to the evictions and the conflict.

As the protestors marched, demonstrators carrying buckets of paste made from flour plastered posters along the parade route which read: "We denounce Reyes Estrada as a murderer and demand his suspension and punishment."

During an impromptu news conference before the march, Matus called the mayor "the intellectual perpetrator of the crime."

Reyes Estrada has said he doesn't understand the accusations, adding that he was trying to help the squatters by securing the land titles for them.

Horse owners may try daring rescue attempt

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A Dallas woman who owns four horses being held at the Juarez Race Track said owners of some of the animals being held hostage there had discussed trying to remove them today.

Another owner and the son of the former operator of the track, which is now closed, predicted there would be trouble if the owners made the attempt.

Pat Limage of Dallas said Wednesday that a loss of electricity and an endangered water supply at the track may lead the owners to take action.

About 150 horses and about 600 greyhounds have been held at the track for a month because of a strike by track employees.

The 325 employees of the track went on strike May 4 after the government announced it would award the track franchise to another operator. The strikers, fearing for their jobs, set up picket lines at the gates of the track.

Under Mexican law, no traffic can cross such a picket line so the owners of the animals have been unable to remove them. Most of the owners are United States citizens, which has led to frantic attempts to negotiate the release of the valuable animals.

Talks were under way late Wednesday in Mexico City, where Oscar Flores Jr. of El Paso apparently was attempting to intervene with the government. Flores, son of the former governor of the state of Chihuahua, has been reported to be in line to get the track franchise.

Demetrio Sotomayor Jr., son of the man who formerly held the track franchise, said his father also was in Mexico City on Wednesday night, attending the negotiations at the Mexican equivalent of the Interior Department.

Ms. Limage said the owners were "discussing the possibility of bringing out their animals en masse" to prevent the possible death of the horses and dogs that could occur because the electricity was cut off Wednesday.

Navy tests new aircraft carrier landing system

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy says it has just completed testing an aircraft carrier landing system that could help prevent accidents such as last week's crash of a Marine jet on the nuclear carrier USS Nimitz.

The landing system, which includes extra reference lights to let a pilot know when he is descending properly, was undergoing tests for for the last week on the Norfolk-based nuclear carrier USS Dwight D. Eisenhower, the sister ship of the Nimitz, Navy officials said.

The officials said they are pleased with the results and predict that the system might be implemented on all carriers by 1983.

In last week's accident, a Marine EA-6B Prowler jet killed 14 men, injured 48, and damaged or destroyed 19 other planes as it crashed in a night landing on the Nimitz near the Florida coast. Damage has been estimated at $100 million or more.

Officials have said that preliminary findings show that the Marine pilot landed too far to the right and didn't respond to a call for extra power that would have gotten the radar plane airborne again.

Tests on the Eisenhower began two days after the accident aboard the Nimitz, but Navy spokesmen said this was coincidental, and the system had been scheduled for at sea testing long before the crash.

Shuttle worker's widow files suit

MERRITT ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The widow of a technician who was fatally injured in March while working on the space shuttle Colombia has filed preliminary papers for a negligence suit against the space agency.

Nancy Cole signed a one-page form accusing the National Aeronautics and Space Administration of negligence for failing to remove nitrogen from the spacecraft before allowing her husband to enter the chamber.

Forrest Cole of Merritt Island died April 1 at Shands Teaching Hospital, 10 days after he and four other Rockwell International Corp. technicians entered a nitrogen-filled compartment of the space shuttle.

John Bjornstad of Titusville, who was the first to enter the orbiter, died the day of the incident.

The form signed Friday also accuses NASA of "other acts of negligence not yet discovered by the claimant or her attorneys."

It places the government on six months notice, during which time it can negotiate a settlement or deny the claim and prepare for trial, said Mrs. Cole's attorney, James Nance of Melbourne.

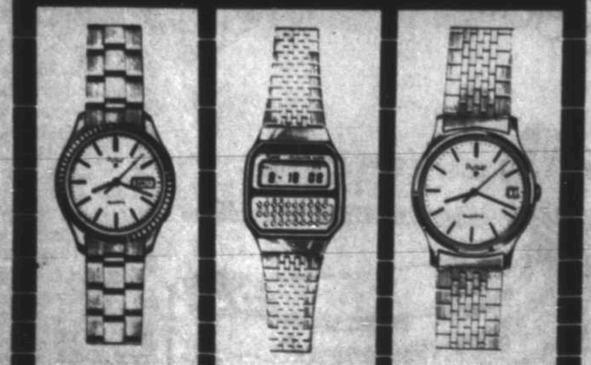

There was no immediate comment from NASA officials.

Farming still important to Midland area

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Farming and ranching aren't exactly in the same economic league with oil and gas producing.

Not yet.

"Our income sort of varies with the weather and the market," Midland County Agent Charlie Green said Wednesday in speaking on agriculture to the Downtown Lions Club.

Green noted the market's favorable effects on the petroleum industry, on its upward and downward effects on agriculture, and on the significance of agriculture in an energy-conscious world.

"Agriculture (in Midland County) pales in comparison to petroleum and allied industries," Green said, "but we still think we're important."

Green noted the $961 million cash receipts to farmers in the 19-county South Plains area and the $2.65 billion economic impact which agriculture had on the West Texas area in 1976-79.

"Now we're talking about figures oil people will listen to," Green said.

"Agriculture is important and will continue to be important," he said, "and if you don't think so, try doing without food for three or four meals."

AGRICULTURE'S mainstay in Midland County is cotton, cattle, alfalfa, and "with a little dairying thrown in." The Roy-Roy Dairy just southwest of Midland is "probably one of the biggest and most modern in the state," Green said.

Green made reference to Midland's skyline, to the out-cropping of skyscrapers and to the petroleum-fueled economy.

"Well, agriculture has changed, too...(for) both good and bad," said Green, who, in his almost 32 years as the Midland County agricultural agent, has witnessed changes and phenomena from drought to rain-soaked years and from famine to bumper crops. All the while, agriculture's importance to life and living has remained unchanged.

"Our cities cannot exist without agriculture, and we could exist without cities but in a primitive fashion," he said.

"This (agriculture) is a basic industry and one which we'll depend upon" for as long as man and civilization are extant.

In Midland County, cotton is the leading cash crop and accounts for about 65 percent of the gross yield. Ranching accounts for about 25 percent. In the past decade, agricultural income in Midland County has varied from about $6 million to $17.5 million annually...depending on the market and the weather.

The fluctuation in the cotton market was pronounced in two contrasting years: 1979 and 1980. In 1979, a bumper year, the yield was about 40,000 bales and the price per pound was about 50 to 55 cents. In 1980, which was a disastrous year, the yield was about 10,000 bales and cotton brought about 65 cents a pound here but upwards of 75 to 80 cents a pound in other areas where the quality of cotton was higher.

"We were droughted out, wormed out, hailed out (in 1980)," Green said.

Likely, though, cotton will be remain the basic cash crop for years to come due to its durability and to the hardiness of the cotton plant, which he likened to the mesquite shrub. "Cotton has a root system similar to a mesquite tree," Green said.

But two products — grapes and pecans — have the potential of coming to the fore. Both may be watered by the drip-irrigation method, which is many times more efficent than flood irrigation.

"Agriculture (in Midland County) pales in comparison to petroleum and allied industries, but we still think we're important."
— County Agent Charlie Green

Grape-growing has been pioneered in Midland County by John Crosby Jr. who in the mid-1970s launched his experiment in vineyards for both table grapes and wine grapes.

"A vineyard should return all costs of development within seven years to 10 years, as compared with 14 to 17 years for pecans," Green said.

"The most exciting thing is the grape potential in Texas," he said.

But he was not particularly excited about the market for farmers and ranchers, who often operate losing enterprises, and who have not enjoyed an economic windfall which has befallen the oil and gas operators.

"We (in agriculture) are going to have to have some of that $30 a barrel oil" to survive, Green said in alluding a need, which he deems as urgent, for higher prices which food-and-fiber producers get for their products.

GREEN MADE reference to Midland's rising water table, to its paradoxical abundance of water in a semi-arid country where good water is precious, and to agriculture's role — via irrigation — of disposing of effluent water from the Midland sewage treatment plant in southeast Midland.

Much of the effluent is being spread over about 2,500 acres of alfalfa farmed by Gene Jones and his sons. But the cost of electricity to power pumps to disperse the water is becoming prohibitive in cost despite the $1 million to $1.5 million gross revenue generated by the crop.

"We can't afford to pump it," Green said. And Midland can't afford not to get rid of the effluent.

"We're kind of busting at the seams," Green said. "We're just flushing too many toilets, by golly."

Green's talk to the Lions was preceded by an introduction by Bill Collyns, who lauded Green was "one of the nation's outstanding county agents."

"He's had some difficulty controlling the weather and insects, but he's still working at it," said Collyns.

Reform critics declare support for renewal

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Katowice Forum, a group whose criticisms of recent Polish reforms have been published prominently in the Soviet press, has issued a new document supporting some of the changes known in Poland as "renewal," Warsaw Radio reported.

A broadcast Wednesday said the new forum document "states at the beginning that it supports the consistent renewal of socio-political life in our country, the road to which was paved by the working class manifestations of the summer of 1980."

The summer labor strikes and demonstrations resulted in the formation of Solidarity, the Soviet Bloc's first legal independent labor union. Since then Solidarity has been pushing for sweeping economic, social and political changes, and a reform movement is also under way among the rank and file of the Communist Party .

The Katowice Forum document described renewal as "the broad democratization of social life, the consistent elimination of the distortions of the previous period and the implementation of the program for the construction of socialism in Poland," Warsaw Radio said.

Previous forum documents charged that Solidarity is seeking to share power in Poland with the Communist Party, that the nation's news media have been captured by "anti-party forces."

These charges were rejected by many party organizations, along with speeches by hard-liners charging that the party leadership was weak and ineffective because it did not root out the reformers within the party ranks. But the charges were extensively reprinted in Moscow newspapers, an action amounting to an endorsement from Soviet leaders.

Radio Moscow took a new line of attack today. It charged that a representative of Solidarity "brazenly demanded" that the municipal council of Zawiercie, in Katowice province, remove the red flag from the council building and change the names of streets and buildings honoring the Soviet Union. The Solidarity man warned that otherwise there would be "violence against the Communists," the report said.

Storms, tornadoes rip through Colorado towns

DENVER (AP) — National Guardsmen were posted by the governor to watch for looters today after violent storms and at least a dozen tornadoes tore roofs off buildings, cut houses in two and scattered trees, killing one person and injuring at least 42 others.

The twisters sliced through a 30-mile arc Wednesday, leaving the most damage in the Denver suburb of Thornton, where the 42 were injured. The one fatality was a woman in another part of the state who was hit by lightning.

Gov. Richard Lamm declared a "disaster emergency" and assigned National Guard troops to Thornton after some looting was reported, said Lamm's press secretary, Sue O'Brien. Lamm planned to fly over the area today, she said.

Extra police officers were stationed in southwest neighborhoods of Denver to discourage looting.

"It started way up in the air and then all kinds of clouds gathered and it came down fast," said Peter Baker, who was standing in his Thornton yard when the tornado hit. "We could see it moving straight at us across the roofs of the houses.

"Then we ran into the neighbor's house and huddled in a corner. When the roof starting coming off, I prayed to God for my life."

Baker's house was cut in two by the twister. Across the street, a two-ton camper was thrown 10 feet by the wind and flipped onto its roof. A light aluminum boat next to where the camper had been parked was untouched.

A spokeswoman for Valley View Hospital, Sonia Weiss, said Kim Franck, 18, of Thornton, was in critical condition with multiple fractures. Ms. Weiss said the hospital treated 33 tornado victims for minor injuries.

Several others were treated by other hospitals.

Mary McCarthy, 21, of Wharton, N.J., was killed after being hit by lightning near Brainard Lake about 50 miles northwest of Denver, and two other women with her were injured, officials said. Although no tornadoes were reported in the area, it was hit by heavy rain.

The first twisters touched down in the Lakewood suburb and at a busy southwest Denver intersection, scattering trees and broken glass and destroying the roof of an apartment complex. Some cases of looting were reported there, prompting local police to tighten security.

Minor injuries were reported from several car accidents.

Then the twisters skipped and churned for about 1½ hours, hitting in Thornton, Northglenn, Fort Lupton, near Platteville and out into the farmland northeast of the city.

Heavy rains and golf ball-size hail in Thornton forced some creeks over their banks, and scattered electrical and telephone outages were reported.

No damage estimates were availble.

The worst damage was reported at the D&B Shopping Center in northeast Thornton. Roofs were torn off the center and a nearby bank, and windows were blown out of an apartment building.

Meanwhile, a tornado touched down Wednesday night in Oklahoma City, damaging several buildings and knocking out power lines. A small girl reportedly was injured when high winds hurled a concrete block through her home.

The Oklahoma Highway Department closed a 12-mile stretch of Oklahoma 58 when risng waters threated to wash out bridges.

Del Feenstra of Thornton, Colo., stands in the kitchen of his home, which was demolished by a tornado that tore through northern Denver suburbs Wednesday, injuring more than 40. The eggs in the pan, which were cooking when the tornado hit, were untouched — about the only thing in the house that was not damaged.

Supreme Court asked to reject suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has asked the Supreme Court to promptly reject a suit alleging that then-President Carter lacked authority to freeze Iranian assets in retalliation for the seizure of the hostages.

The court was expected to consider the suit, filed with it Monday by a subsidiary of Electronic Data Systems Corp., at its closed conference today.

The firm is seeking to protect a $20 million award it won against the Iranian government five months before Carter froze the assets on Nov. 14, 1979.

As part of last January's agreement leading to the release of 52 hostages, Carter nullified all suits filed by American firms against Iran. The assets are supposed to be transferred to an international arbitration panel by July 19.

Government lawyers told the court Wednesday that the EDS case is not the one for it to use to rule on the authority issue because Carter's order applied only to court attachments of Iranian assets made after Nov. 14, 1979.

The EDS case is still pending before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. In a rarely used procedural move, EDS lawyers asked the Supreme Court to rule first on the suit, one of more than 450 court actions resulting from Carter's order.

"Because the assets to (EDS') attachment are not covered by the president's executive order ... this case is plainly not one of such imperative public importance as to justify the deviation from normal appellate practice," government lawyers said.

Federal appeals courts in Boston and the District of Columbia have said that Carter acted within his authority in ordering the freezing of the assets and their subsequent transfers.

First tornado takes path through southwest Denver

DENVER (AP) — When the first tornado touched down in a busy commercial district, it hurled roofs, metal shards and broken glass through the air, then roared off through a neighborhood before disappearing back into the clouds.

It was one of about a dozen tornadoes and funnel clouds sighted in the Denver area during a one-hour period on Wednesday, and it was the most powerful.

Denver police officer John Lawrence was there when the tornado began its destructive journey through southwest Denver and three nearby suburbs.

"I was cruising west on Alameda when I saw the tornado coming and to tell you the absolute truth, I turned back around and went east," said Lawrence. "I stayed around in the area, though, and then there were (tornado) sightings left and right, roofs being thrown around, accidents and debris all over the place. It was as if a dam had broken with all this water pouring down the road. It was intense, let me tell you."

The black, funnel cloud touched down at the intersection of Sheridan Boulevard and Sixth Avenue between Denver and Lakewood just after 2 p.m.

The most severe damage in that area was inflicted on businesses and one apartment complex that were clustered around the intersection. Many of the windows of the apartment complex were smashed and its roof was a mass of twisted metal, but rescue teams said they could find no bodies inside.

Shopkeepers, reporters and the curious investigated the debris stepped around downed electrical lines. Helicopters circled. Police, anticipating looting, set up a command post at the intersection.

One Denver police officer said several homes in the area had been looted, and Lawrence confirmed that the looting was becoming a problem in the nearby residential area.

Damage was heavy in this middle-class section of southwest Denver. Chimneys were toppled, porches and swing sets lifted away and one roof was dropped in the middle of a neighborhood park.

Three quit anti-abortion panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two representatives and a senator, saying they don't like hit lists, resigned from an advisory panel of a national anti-abortion committee after the group targeted nine members of Congress for defeat in 1982.

Reps. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., the chief congressional champion of anti-abortion legislation, Rep. Robert A. Young, D-Mo., and Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, said they hadn't been consulted by the National Pro-Life Political Action Committee about the propriety of listing some of their colleagues for electoral elimination.

Another congressman, Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill., ordered his staff to draft a letter saying he is resigning from the advisory board, but an aide to Russo, Carol Gallant, said she did not know if the letter had been signed and mailed.

"Mr. Hyde thinks it is inappropriate to lend his name to an organization that seeks to defeat Republican members (of Congress) whose views on some issues may differ from his own," said Donna Harper, a spokeswoman for Hyde, who for years has led the effort to restrict Medicaid funds for abortions.

Young said, "I remain strongly committed to the pro-life movement ... but I also strongly believe that my name should not and will not be used in this sort of campaign tactics against other members of Congress."

A spokesman for Garn said the senator was quitting the advisory panel, too.

Peter B. Gemma Jr., executive director of the political action committee, said he wasn't concerned about the congressmen's resignations, attributing them to a lack of communication.

"The names have done nothing more than grace the page with a lot of others," he said. "We've established our credibility using their names."

The committee's announcement was accompanied by a statement on stationery bearing the names of advisory committee members, including 10 congressmen. The nine targeted races "could have dramatic and successful reults for anti-abortion political activists," Gemma said.

William McKenney, spokesman for Rep. Thomas N. Kindness, R-Ohio, another dvisory board member, said he spoke to Kindness about the list "and you can say he called it 'stupid.'"

A spokeswoman said Rep. Harold L. Volkner, D-Mo., also considered resigning but decided to confer first with leaders of the committee.

The reaction came after Peter B. Gemma Jr., executive director of the political action committee, announced the names of four senators and five representatives the panel will try to defeat in primary and general elections next year. He said $650,000 had been earmarked for the 1982 election.

"We're out to influence those congressmen, senators and candidates from both parties who are ambivalent or undecided on this matter of life versus death," Gemma told a news conference.

"If we can knock off some highly visible officeholders, it sends a signal to the mushy middle, as I call them," he said.

Those targeted for defeat were Sens. George Mitchell, D-Maine; John Chafee,R-R.I.; Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Harrison Williams D-N.J., and Reps. James Jones, D-Okla.; Morris Udall, D-Ariz.; Stephen Neal, D-N.C.; Marc Lincoln Marks, R-Pa., and Paul Findley, R-Ill.

Gemma said the advisory committee members were not told in advance because when they were signed up four years ago they were told they would not be responsible for any actions the committee took.

"We just needed a laundry list of names that would give us some credibility as a new entity," he said.

Members of Congress are increasingly sensitive about "hit lists" issued by special interest groups. Since all congressmen are susceptible to being listed by one group or another, at one time or another, the tactic is often decried as unsavory.

Gemma defended the practice of rating candidates on a single issue.

"I don't think black people in the South would vote for a guy who was pro-segregation even if he was a nice guy in every other way," he said.

Business school said tough but worth it

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — At Harvard Business School, where fear is "designed into the learning process," Robin Krasny says the two-year grind to get her degree was worth the struggle.

Ms. Krasny, a 30-year-old New Yorker, is among some 750 graduates receiving degees today from capitalism's West Point.

"I'm really glad I came here. I'm really glad it's over," said Ms. Krasny, whose diary of her first year at HBS was published last month in "Savvy," a New York-based magazine.

Under Harvard's "forced-curve grading system," 10 percent of the students must fail any given course, she said. "Since some must fail, this is real-life Russian roulette. ... Fear is virtually designed into the learning process at HBS, and for me, the fear was surprisingly acute.

"The diary keeps the Harvard Busines School myth going," she said in an interview. "It's a tough place to get through. The myth is a reality."

To earn her degree, Master of Business Administration, she spent two years poring over hypothetical case studies for classes in Managerial Economics, Control, Organizational Behavior, Marketing, Production, sleeping only four to five hours a night.

Now she joins an elite group of graduates, some of whom earn starting salaries of $40,000 or more.

Prospective employers flew her to California or put her up in $100-a-night New York hotel suites for interviews. In August, she will start work for a New York investment bank.

Today's HBS graduates included 168 women.

Before entering the school in 1979, Ms. Krasny, a Princeton graduate, worked for a New York bank, an advertising agency on the L'Eggs panty hose account, Avon Products and as a buyer at New York's Bloomingdale's department store.

She said a professor told her the pressure was a deliberate learning tactic.

"'We want you to devote your entire life to this program,'" Ms. Krasny quoted him as saying. "'We have to crowd everything else out.'"

"You really do feel that you are not going to make it," she added. "If you survive this, you can survive anything."

Sterilization case settled

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Attorneys for the state of Utah have agreed to an out-of-court settlement of $50,000 for a woman who was sterilized without her knowlege when she was a teen-ager.

Vickie Delores Caldwell, also known as Vickie Delores Keele, had sued the Utah Division of Family Services, the State Welfare Commission, the Uintah County Commission, the Uintah County Hospital, three doctors and her former foster mother, Sadie McConkie, in a U.S. District Court suit.

The suit said Dr. Paul Stringham performed a tubal ligation on the girl, who thought she was having her appendix removed.

Producers may pay for grading

Panel seeks program improvements

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee is telling tobacco, cotton and grain producers to pay the full cost of the federal grading, inspection and licensing programs partly responsible for the high reputation of their commodities.

But the committee, in endorsing President Reagan's plan to impose the user fees, also is directing the Agriculture Department to improve the efficiency of those programs so the producers' costs are at a minimum.

"We're dedicated to trying to keep the fees at a bare minimum," Assistant Agriculture Secretary William McMillan assured the panel on Wednesday. He said ways of cutting costs already are being investigated.

The industry already had been generally resigned to accepting the user fees, which would save the government about $50 million next year.

But while they were approved by the committee with dissent as part of the administration's budget-cutting program, several members said the savings would be paid for by others.

"A lot of what is being done in reducing federal expenditures is a pass-on proposition," said Sen. Walter Huddleston of Kentucky, the ranking Democrat on the panel.

"We're just shifting costs to the state and local governments and the consumers," he said.

The fee proposal would mean charges to producers of about $1 a bale for cotton classing and one-half cent a pound for tobacco grading. Those services are now almost solely taxpayer supported.

Grain inspection, for which the industry now pays around one-half cent a bushel, would cost another one-third cent, and warehouse licensing and inspection fees would range from $1,600 to $2,400, according to Agriculture Department estimates.

Backed up by congressional investigators from the General Accounting Office, Reagan argued that the industries should pay for the services directly benefitting them.

The committee slapped a $15 million lid on the amount that could be spent to administer the grain inspection program and put an overall $400 million cap on the cost of cotton classing operations. Administration officials, while not supporting either limit, indicated they felt the programs could be operated within them.

AGRICULTURE

Cotton industry officials hope efficiencies will cut the anticipated $1-a-bale fee to 70 cents or less, claiming a higher fee would reduce participation in the voluntary government classing program.

That, they claim, would mean the end of classing by an objective third party, which could harm the standing of American cotton in the international market.

Dairy price support changes could milk other programs

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee is looking at a plan to give dairy farmers substantially higher price supports than envisioned in the strict 1982 budget guidelines Congress approved last month.

But if the proposal is enacted, it could drastically reduce the amounts available for the remaining price-support programs, leaving the other commodities to scramble for what's left.

"Through the back door, we may be taking enough money out," said wheat-belt Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., "so there won't be much left for the other commodities."

Acceptance of the dairy proposal, under fire because of its high costs, also could remove that program from committee consideration later this year when it must make significant cuts in overall farm supports for 1982.

Reagan administration spokesman Dawson Ahalt voiced strong opposition to the plan, contending the higher support level would increase the already-large dairy surplus and force more goverment purchases. The government spends about half its farm support budget to maintain milk prices.

The House plan offered Wednesday calls for price supports at 75 percent of parity, which is the theoretical amount a product must bring to give producers the same buying power they had in 1910-14. President Reagan wants a 70 percent support level, and the Senate Agriculture Committee has endorsed that. The present level is 80 percent.

But efforts to quickly win even tentative approval were unsuccessful after further consideration was postponed when House members began asking questions about the ramifications.

Pushed by Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, chairman of the dairy subcommittee, the House plan is intended to meet the first of two spending mandates the committee will have under the complicated budget plan most of its members supported.

It would require the committee to cut almost $700 million in the 1982 budget for current farm commodity and loan programs.

Harkin said the dairy support plan would head off the need to phase out farm storage facility loans and cut back lending by the Farmers Home Administration. A number of members had criticized both proposals.

Retail food price, net farm income projections reduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is cutting back its projections for both net farm income this year and the increase in retail food prices.

"Farm prices are being dampened by many factors, including weaker-than-expected U.S. and world demand, large 1980-1981 Southern Hemisphere crops, prospects for large 1981-1982 crops and general inflationary trends," department analysts reported Wednesday.

"Net farm income is now forecast to range from $22 billion to $27 billion, compared with $22 billion in 1980," they said in the monthly Agricultural Outlook. "Retail food prices are now expected to average about a tenth higher than last year."

Just a month ago, the department projected net farm income in a range about $1 billion higher than the lastest estimate. Food prices had been expected to increase about 11 percent, compared with last year's increase of 8.6 percent.

High interest rates, a strong U.S. dollar and more meat supplies than anticipated also are dampening farm prices, the report said.

"Partly reflecting sluggish consumer demand for food, the first-quarter rise in retail food prices at 9.6 percent, unadjusted annual rate, was the smallest in five years," according to the report, prepared by the Economics and Statistics Service.

It noted, however, that reduced pork production prompted hog prices to begin climbing three weeks ago, which will mean higher meat prices and more rapid increases in retail food prices this summer and fall.

Cattle prices, the analysts said, are likely to peak this fall, "but the overall rise will be moderate."

The favorable conditions for the U.S. crop this spring indicate yields may recover from last year's drought-reduced levels with feed grain production approaching the 1979 record, the analysts said. But that could possibly cause prices to fall slightly.

Some call it loco weed, and that's no bull

But when his hoofprints were found next to some nibbled marijuana plants in a pasture, it was plain to see what had made the 1,200-pound bull act up.

Deputy Chuck Clayburn said the department is investigating to determine who cultivated the plants on the farmer's land.

A truce was holding today across the so-called "green-line" that divides the Lebanese capital of Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors. Random shelling earlier in the week claimed 27 lives on both sides of the line, viewed here from the Christian side.

Israeli soldiers hit Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An Israeli commando force moved into the southern Lebanese village of Kfar Hamam before dawn today and blew up the house of someone they suspected of collaborating with Palestinian guerrillas, Lebanese provincial authorities reported.

The authorities said there were no casualties in Kfar Hamam, a town five miles north of the Israeli border which is controlled by the Norwegian contingent of the U.N. peacekeeping forces.

A police spokesman in Beirut said Syrian forces and Lebanese Christian militias traded nightlong artillery and rocket fire at the southeastern flank of the Lebanese capital near the Presidential Palace.

The spokesman said six people were wounded in the exchanges, which subsided into sniping at daybreak.

The spokesman said three people were killed and 27 wounded in renewed fighting between the Syrians and Christian militiamen of the Phalange Party in east Lebanon's Christian city of Zahle, 30 miles east of Beirut.

But the Beirut-based Phalangist radio station claimed 10 inhabitants were killed and 25 wounded since mid-morning Wednesday in the renewed Syrian bombardment.

The Syrians, who maintain a 22,000-man army in Lebanon to oversee a Moslem-Christian civil war armistice, have been besieging Zahle since April 1 and demanding that the Phalangist militias abandon the city.

Israel intervened to ease the Syrian pressure on the Christians on April 28, when Israeli jets shot down two Syrian military helicopters east of Zahle.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib is due back in the Middle East this week to resumed his shuttle diplomacy in quest of a peaceful solution.

Haig to confer with French minister

WASHINGTON (AP) — Claude Cheysson, foreign minister of France's first socialist regime in more than two decades, is traveling to the United States to reassure the Reagan administration that France will remain a steadfast ally.

Despite some early concern over the direction of France after the election of socialist President Francois Mitterrand last month, there are no apparent major differences between the two nations.

"We have no bones to pick with France," one U.S. official said. "There are no open wounds, no quarrels that need to be patched up. I would expect the talks would be smooth, frank, informal, friendly — an intensive get-acquainted session."

CHEYSSON'S schedule includes a number of meetings over three days with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., beginning today. He also is to meet with President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, officials of the Federal Reserve Board and three cabinet members: Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, Secretary of the Treasury Donald T. Regan and Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldridge.

He is expected to raise European complaints that high U.S. interest rates are artificially weakening European currencies, including the French franc.

BUT THE MAIN purpose of the visit appears to be an attempt to establish ties with Reagan and his administration and to assure the United States that France will remain a reliable ally, even as it expresses its independence on a number of issues.

These include Mitterrand's well-known view that the Reagan administration is on the wrong course when it supports authoritarian right-wing regimes in Latin America.

Some U.S. officials initially expressed concern about the prospect of communists in a French coalition government under Mitterrand. That development may occur following the French parliamentary elections later this month.

OTHERS SAID, however, that Mitterrand's views on a number of key global policies are closer to Reagan's than were those of the man he replaced, Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

"We are standing prepared to work with the new French leadership in the protection of the interests of the West," said one White House official shortly after Mitterrand's election.

Cheysson, 61, a veteran French career diplomat not well known in Washington, had been a commissioner to the European Economic Community, specializing in problems of the developing Third World.

His first official visit outside France was to West Germany earlier this week, and he used the trip to insist that the Soviet Union reduce its force of mid-range nuclear weapons aimed at Europe.

The statement was well received in Washington, where the Reagan administration has pressed for a two-pronged policy of deploying modern U.S theater nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

U.S. to fight Cuban support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charging that Cuba has declared covert war on its neighbors, a top State Department official says the United States "will join with them to bring the costs of that war back to Havana."

The statements were made Wednesday by Thomas Enders, assistant secretary of state-designate, to a meeting of the Council of the Americas, a private group which promotes U.S. business interests in Latin America.

Cuba has sent 600 to 800 military advisers to Nicaragua as part of an attempt to use that country as a "forward base of operations" in Central America, Enders said.

"Cuba has declared covert war on its neighbors," said Enders, who added that armored personnel carriers, tanks and jets are reported to be on their way from Cuba to Nicaragua.

Enders did not say what specific action the administration is considering, but he outlined a general four-point response:

—Help threatened countries defend themselves. "Once insurgents take arms with outside support, there is no alternative to an armed response," Enders said.

—Assist these countries to preserve their people's right to self-determination. Political and social progress "must go hand-in-hand with military assistance," he said.

—Help the countries of the Caribbean basin to achieve economic success. "However well they do against the armed threat, genuine stability can only be based on economic prosperity," Enders said.

—Focus on the source of the problem — Cuba.

"Those who said that Cuba with time would become a status quo power must now recognize that they were wrong," Enders said. "In 1977, when the U.S. raised the question of normalization, Cuba intervened in Ethiopia and then launched out on its offensive in the hemisphere."

In several hemispheric countries — first Nicaragua, then El Salvador, then Guatemala, now Colombia — Cuba has been "systematically creating a machine for the destruction of established institutions and governments," Enders said.

He said one of its principal activities has been to bring together leaders of different guerrilla factions from target countries, with Cuban President Fidel Castro often "personally worked out their differences in long negotiating sessions.

"He forged unified directorates, counseled the formation of broader fronts to manipulate legitimate opposition groups and unleashed a global propaganda campaign," he said.

Once the organizing is done, "the stage is set for the training of guerrillas and the infiltration of weapons," he said. "That happened in Nicaragua in 1978, in El Salvador in 1980, in Guatemala in 1980, in Colombia this winter."

Pale, thin Pope returns to Vatican

AP Laserphoto

Pope John Paul II sits in his convertible car after leaving Policlinico Gemelli Hospital in Rome Wednesday evening, three weeks after he was shot in an assassination attempt. Note in foreground left index finger in plaster.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — "You thought you had changed me, but I'm still the same old rascal," Pope John Paul II told his doctors and nurses as he returned to the Vatican three weeks after the attempt on his life.

The 61-year-old pontiff looked pale and thinner, but he walked unassisted out of the Gemelli Polyclinic Hospital on Wednesday and blessed hundreds of patients waving to him from balconies.

Wearing white robes, a white skullcap and a gold cross, he climbed into a black convertible Mercedes limousine. A small group applauded as he arrived at the Vatican, and minutes later he came to the window of his apartment overlooking St. Peter's Square and raised his arms to greet a cheering applauding crowd of about 300, many of them pilgrims from his native Poland.

The pope is scheduled to return to the hospital in about three weeks for a second operation to reverse the intestinal bypass performed after he was shot in the abdomen on May 13. In the interim, a member of the six-man medical team treating him will check him each morning in his apartment on the third floor of the apostolic palace.

The doctors said in a medical bulletin they discharged him from the hospital because his vital signs were normal and his strength was gradually returning.

His departure was announced less than an hour in advance by the Vatican. Earlier, the doctors refused to predict when he would be released. Rome newspapers reported last week that he might be sent home last weekend, but the doctors said he had been exerting himself too much and they were keeping him in the hospital to slow him down.

John Paul has canceled all major appearances for June, including a bishops' conference Sunday on ecumenism that he termed one of the most important Vatican gatherings in recent years.

Vatican officials said he may be able to resume official duties soon, perhaps starting with Sunday appearances at his apartment window to bless the crowd that gathers each week in St. Peter's Square.

For the past three weeks, he recorded his Sunday blessing in his hospital room. It appears certain that he will deliver the Angelus this Sunday from his window.

One of the two Americans injured in the attack on the pope, Ann Odre, 50, of Buffalo, N.Y., is to be discharged from Santo Spiritu hospital this weekend. The other victim, Rose Hall, 21, of Shirley, Mass., returned to her residence in West Germany on May 24.

Italian authorities have charged a Turk, Mehmet Ali Agca, 23, with shooting the pope and the two Americans. No date has been set for his trial.

Agca escaped from a Turkish prison in November 1979 while he was awaiting trial on a charge of murdering a liberal newspaper editor. He was sentenced to death in absentia five months later. Turkish police believe he had ties to extreme right-wing groups. The Italian police are trying to determine whether he was paid to kill the pope.

Paper says administration has authorized building of missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has authorized the Navy to build its new cruise missiles with the long-range capability to strike deep inside the Soviet Union, the Washington Star reported today.

The newspaper quoted unidentified senior Navy officials as saying the Navy hopes to have the first of the missiles, which can carry nuclear warheads, on submarines and surface vessels by mid-1982, with full deployment by 1985.

The missiles would have a longer range than the 372 miles specified in a protocol to the Salt II strategic arms limitation treaty agreed to by the United States and the Soviets in 1979 but still not ratified by the U.S. Senate, according to the newspaper.

The protocol expires next Dec. 31, four years before the scheduled end of the basic Salt II treaty. The Carter administration insisted on the limited duration as a compromise between the Pentagon's desire to proceed with sea- and land-based cruise missiles and Soviet pressure to restrict them.

The Reagan administration has taken the position that Salt II is not legally binding because it has not been ratified. The administration has said, however, it would abide by its terms as long as the Soviets do.

The Star said that Pentagon officials believe the United States has a technological advantage over the Soviet Union in the area of cruise missiles, which are small jet-powered, computer-guided bombs which fly at treetop level.

"We want to capitalize on this and put them on as many ships as possible," an admiral was quoted as saying.

avy offiials indicated that they have been assured by the administration that they do not have to worry about further restrictions on the range of cruise missiles launched from vessels and land sites, according to the Star.

Bani-Sadr facing showdown

By CHARLES HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's political enemies are escalating a power struggle in Iran, threatening to put him on trial, but they seem to be shrinking from a climactic showdown.

The president's foes — the fundamentalist clergymen of the Islamic Republican Party — may fear that supreme revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini will come down decisively on Bani-Sadr's side, according to American students of the Iranian scene.

These analysts are skeptical that the IRP leaders would actually prosecute Bani-Sadr for blocking their Cabinet choices.

"It's getting nastier," said Barry Rubin, an Iran specialist at the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Washington's Georgetown University. But "as long as Ayatollah Khomeini is alive, I'm convinced he will maintain the balance of power."

BANI-SADR and the fundamentalist clergymen have been feuding for a year over the direction of the Iranian revolution, the place of the clergy in government, and more recently the conduct of the war against Iraq. The isolationist, conservative clerics distrust the foreign-educated and left-leaning technocrats and intellectuals Bani-Sadr represents.

On Monday, the IRP representative on a three-man commission set up to mediate disputes between the two factions said the "majority" of the panel had decided Bani-Sadr was "acting at variance with the constitution" by rejecting Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai's appointment of several Cabinet ministers. The IRP supports Rajai and dominates Parliament, which has ratified the appointments.

Bani-Sadr also was accused of violating Khomeini's ban on provocative statements by top political leaders. This apparently referred to Bani-Sadr's written and verbal attacks on the IRP.

THE COMMISSION was handing its evidence for the findings over to Iran's prosecutor-general, the IRP representative said — a clear threat to put Bani-Sadr on trial.

But Richard Bulliet, a Columbia University history professor and Middle East expert, believes the IRP is more intent on pressuring Bani-Sadr than on actually trying him.

Iranian President Bani-Sadr

The normal constitutional procedure for removing the president would be by impeachment by Parliament, a vote that must then be endorsed by Khomeini, Bulliet said in an interview.

The IRP leaders probably worry Khomeini would not back them, he said.

"It would be a great fiasco for the IRP if they got a vote of impeachment and then Khomeini decided he was going to defend Bani-Sadr, which I think is entirely likely," Bulliet said.

KHOMEINI HAS stepped in previously to protect Bani-Sadr from the clergymen.

Nor can Rajai and his clergymen mentors count on popular support if they move directly to oust the president.

Bani-Sadr was elected president in January 1980 with an impressive 75 percent majority. He seems to have solidified his popularity by taking charge of the war effort against Iraq.

Many Iranians — at least middle-class city dwellers — blame Iran's severe unemployment and other economic ills on the clergy's meddling in politics.

The left-wing Moslems of the Mujaheddin Khalq have stepped up anti-IRP protests in recent months, some ending in bloody clashes with pro-clergy elements. Khomeini has warned the clergy against taking too strong a political stance, and his leftist grandson, Seyyed Hussein Khomeini, has spoke. % against the danger of "totalitarianism in the color of religion."

IF BANI-SADR is put on trial, "I would imagine that the left would probably try tactics like street demonstrations...an attack against clerical hegemony in Iran," said Professor Michael M.K. Fischer, a Harvard University anthropologist and author of a book on Iran's revolutionary politics.

Bulliet agrees.

While the IRP ponders its next moves against Bani-Sadr, it has not hesitated to snipe at those around him.

American families lagging in economical comparison

By Denise Romand
Hearst Special News Service

Washington - American families with children fare worse economically than families of workers in seven other industrial nations, a study has shown.

The study, by two Columbia University professors, found that American families lag financially in comparison with those in France, Sweden, England, Australia, Israel, West Germany and Canada.

Dr. Alfred J. Kahn and Dr. Sheila B. Kamerman of the university's School of Social Work used earned income and governmental benefits in computing the relative standings.

The researchers said that families in states such as New York, which provide high levels of government benefits, ranked sixth in the comparative international standings. American families living in states with average levels of benefits ranked eighth.

Single parent families with two children and a non-working head were found to fare best in Sweden, France, and Germany. Families with four children fared best in France and Sweden and the worst in the United States and Australia.

The study, which will be publishd later this year, showed the foreign trend is toward an increase in universal programs and a decline in social assistance comparable to U.S. welfare programs.

In Sweden, for example, the researchers said universal family allowances and broad-based housing allowances provide between 30 and 56 percent of an average worker's pay to the family types studied.

Selected cash transfer programs were reviewed in the eight-nation study, with respect to their impact on 15 hypothetical "family types." Ten core income transfer programs, including children's allowances, unemployment compensation, housing allowances, social assistance and refundable tax credits also were considered in the study.

In-kind transfers, including medical aid and public housing subsidies were not incorporated in the findings.

Erosion of benefits due to inflation was a common problem among the nations studied. With a 1980 inflation rate of 140 percent, Israeli families were found to have had the greatest financial difficulties.

House may be auctioned because renovations slow

BALTIMORE (AP) — A homeowner who began renovating a rundown, four-story Victorian mansion here nine years ago soon may find his unfinished dreamhouse on the auction block because his neighbors felt the work was going too slowly.

Ken Kravitz lost his legal fight Tuesday to delay a court-imposed timetable allowing the city to sell his house if renovations were incomplete.

He says he's given up his ambitious project, hoping only to sell the house before the city steps in.

"This would have been quite beautiful," said Kravitz, a landscape architect who was doing the work himself to save money. "I wanted it to be something the neighborhood would be proud of."

But the Mount Washington neighborhood, a secluded, wooded section of large, older homes at the city's northern edge, felt Kravitz's house was "a mess," one neighbor said.

Believing "nine years is long enough" to fix it up, the group tried to "support the city in enforcement of housing codes," according to Mimi Joseph, president of the neighborhood association.

The city cited Kravitz for a host of housing-code violations from holes in the roof to storage of oil drums in the yard without a permit. And when Kravitz failed to carry out the improvements, housing officials said, the city took him first to Housing Court and then to Criminal Court.

Kravitz "thinks he can live any way he wants and not worry about how it affects people," said John Huppert, head of housing inspection for the city.

"This is an urban location. And we have to enforce the codes.

In December, Baltimore District Judge Hilary Caplan ordered Kravitz to make the repairs by May 1. The work included cleaning up debris outside, fixing the roof, gutters and downspouts, completing the siding and installing the windows.

If by May 1 Kravitz had not completed the work, Caplan ordered the city to hire a contractor and have the work done. The bill for the work — estimated at close to $50,000 — would be sent Kravitz for payment within 15 days.

If Kravitz failed to pay, the house was to be sold at auction, with Kravitz getting anything over and above the cost of repairs.

The judge Tuesday denied Kravitz' motion to stay the order. But he said the city must return to court before it actually signed an agreement with a contractor.

Kravitz, who said he could not pay the city for the work, had cleaned up the yard and asked in his motion for time to try to sell the house at a fair market value.

"I want to sell the place," he said. "I have given up on any plans to finish it."

He had planned to put Belgian cobblestones over the house's exterior and brickwork inside. Half the exterior work some of the interior brickwork is finished.

Kravitz jacked up the house, turned the basement into an entranceway and gutted the second floor, intending to make it a grand room with floor-to-ceiling windows.

But he said that "hassles kind of started at the beginning. I wasn't getting any direct complaints. They (the neighbors) never came over and said, 'How come you can't fix this,' or 'That really bothers me.'

"I kept getting calls from the housing department, and finally I got dragged into court.

"The condition of the house isn't really bothering anybody," he maintained. "It isn't dangerous or an eyesore to anybody else."

Nimitz victims 'stable'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Four Navy men severely burned in the USS Nimitz crash are reported "stable and responding to treatment" at Brooke Army Medical Center.

All four are still listed in critical condition, Brooke spokesman Jerry Du Bois said Wednesday.

Airman Recruit Richard Simpson, 22, Gray, Me.; Petty Officer Second Class Richard M. Hokanson, 21, Hauppace, N.Y.; Airman Apprentice George W. Butz, 23, Hockens, Del., and Seaman Apprentice Stephen Pass, 21, Calhoun, Ga., were airlifted here on May 28 from Jacksonville, Fla.

Relatives of the four men have been allowed to visit and talk with them.

Vietnam War veterans protesting medical treatment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The festive mood and upbeat attitude at an encampment of some 35 Vietnam veterans belies the real reason the makeshift community has sprung up outside the Wadsworth Veterans Administration Medical Center here.

While brightly colored tents draped with American flags and guitar music greet visitors, the subdued energy of the residents of "Veterans Village" reminds onlookers that protesters here are in the midst of a hunger strike to proclaim their outrage over medical treatment for participants in the Vietnam War.

Leaders of the protest say at least 12 veterans are refusing to eat, and an unknown number of "backup" hunger strikers are ready to take the place of those who back out or die.

Even as a delegation of top VA officials from Washington promised Wednesday to assign a team of non-VA physicians to examine conditions at two VA hospitals, two of the senior hunger strikers — paraplegic Max Inglett and Chuck Bass — collapsed and were taken to the Wadsworth emergency room. They were reported in stable condition, but were still refusing solid food.

The hunger strikers — some of whom now are only drinking water — spend much of their time dozing on sleeping bags, talking with friends, brewing tea and coffee on a portable stove, listening to music on large portable radios or playing guitars.

The VA group, headed by Nick Longworth, special assistant to the acting administrator, promised an investigation of Wadsworth and nearby Brentwood VA hospitals. They also said there would be a probe of VA treatment of James Hopkins, a former Marine whose May 17 death sparked the protest.

Hopkins died of an apparent drug and liquor overdose two months after he drove a Jeep into the hospital and shot up the lobby to protest his treatment there.

After the VA officials' news conference Wednesday, the protesters said they are still waiting for a White House response to their demands for outside evaluations of all VA hospitals and improved diagnosis and treatment as well as disability benefits for service-related physical and psychological ailments.

Protest leader Ron Bitzer of the Center for Veteran's Rights indicated for the first time that the group may be dropping a demand that President Reagan meet with them personally, settling instead for a letter on White House stationary signed by Reagan.

That opinion was not shared by all residents at Vietnam Village.

"Most cats here say, 'Hey, we're staying until we talk with Ronnie,'" said Bill Rigole, a 30-year-old college student and one of six senior hunger strikers governing the encampment.

Living in Veterans Village is cheap. "None of us has spent any money," said Rigole, who is married, has two children and is working on a master's degree.

Supporters were contributing the fruit juice that some of the hunger strikers have been drinking. Those who aren't fasting leave the settlement for their meals.

Visitors are asked to sign a petition in support of the veteran's protest.

"We've even had vets wanting to protect us with their weapons, their .45s," Rigole said.

Asked whether the protesters feared they might eventually be evicted by the authorities the way Bonus Marchers who descended on Washington during the Depression were attacked by the Army, Rigole said he wouldn't be surprised.

The mood at Veterans Village remains "elated, together," Rigole said, adding that, "There's a comradeship, a brotherhood here. This could never break up. We're already planning our reunions."

Frazier defense lawyers call final witnesses

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Final defense witnesses have told a state district court jury that murder defendant Patricia Ann Frazier was not resonsible for her actions at the time she cut the heart out of her four-year-old daughter.

The 25-year-old Wichita Falls woman has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the gruesome slaying of her daughter last year.

Dr. Sethurama Srinivasan, Director of the Maximum Security Psychiatric Hospital in which Ms. Frazier was incarcerated while awaiting trial last year, told the court Wednesday that the impact of the movie "The Exorcist" on Ms. Frazier's unstable personality contributed to her actions.

The two-week-long trial is the second for Ms. Frazier, whose first trial in Wichita Falls in November, 1980 resulted in a hung jury.

The case was moved to Denton when District Judge Keith Nelson ruled defense attorneys could not find an impartial jury in Wichita County because of publicity surrounding the first trial.

Jurors viewed "The Exorcist" earlier in the trial as defense attorneys argued that the movie caused Frazier to believe her daughter was possessed.

"I believe the movie contributed to the tragic killing," Srinivasan said.

Clinical psychologist and lawyer Robert Gordon, the defense's last witness, said after an evaluation of Ms. Frazier a week before the trial began, he concluded that she was unable to understand the legal consequences of her behavior at the time of the killing.

"She (Frazier) was suffering from delusions and hallucinations, a fantasy that someone was commanding her, so compelling that she was unable to act rationally and love her daughter," Gordon said.

In his cross-examination, Wichita County District Attorney Tim Eyssen suggested that Ms. Frazier might be a sociopath, consciously trying to escape the consequences of her actions.

Radio station joins memorial efforts

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 50,000-watt station has joined in an effort to raise $7 million to build a memorial to Americans who served in the Vietnam War.

WOAI radio announced it was planning a continuous 39-hour radiothon Friday and Saturday to raise money for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund. Donations to the fund will be used to build a memorial at Washington, D.C., in honor of the 2.7 million Americans who served and 57,692 who died in the Southeast Asia conflict.

Officials of WOAI-AM radio said it was the second radio station to join in the effort to construct the memorial on a two-acre site, provided by the government across from Lincoln Memorial. Names of the war dead will be inscribed on a monument at the site, they said.

WPKX Radio of Alexandria, Va, raised $256,000 during a three-day event last month and the fund has now grown to $1.5 million, according to WOAI program director Pat Rodgers.

Rodgers said more than 40 guests — including Vice President George Bush and Texas Gov. William Clements — would be heard on the radiothon beginning at 6 a.m. Friday and ending at 9 p.m. Saturday.

Other guests will include Pittsburgh Steelers running back Rocky Bleir, Gen. William Westmoreland, Texas Medal of Honor recipient Roy Benavides, former prisoners of war, pilots, authors of books about the war, combat news reporters, and nurses who treated military men wounded in the conflict.

"We don't have a goal," Rodgers said. "We don't know if we can evaluate the potential of this area even though we have a huge military-related population," Rodgers said.

Daughter of Minneapolis mayor found dead

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Mayor Donald Fraser's 26-year-old daughter, who relatives say may have blamed herself for the death of her young sister 15 years ago, has been found dead in her Minneapolis apartment.

Lois M. Fraser "was struggling to cope with it (depression) and it just didn't work," said Fraser.

He and his brother, John, found Ms. Fraser's body in her Minneapolis apartment Wednesday evening after learning she had not reported for work at a temporary clerical-help agency where she was employed.

Police and the Hennepin County medical examiner's office have not ruled on the cause of death pending the results of an autopsy, but a police spokesman said there were no signs of foul play.

"The substance of it (the note) was that she loved us all and that she didn't want to cause us any suffering, but she felt that dying may be the best way," Tom Fraser was quoted in the Tribune as saying. The note was turned over to police.

He added that his father believed Lois was dead less than 24 hours before her body was discovered.

Fraser said his daughter had been receiving help recently from the outpatient clinic at Hennepin County Medical Center in Minneapolis.

She was one of six children born to Donald and Arvonne Fraser. A sister, Anne, died in 1966 at the age of 8 when she was hit by a car on her way home from school.

Fraser said Lois may have blamed herself for Anne's death, since Lois was responsible for walking her younger sister home.

"She was supposed to have waited for Annie at school, but she didn't on the day Annie was killed," the mayor said. "The death of her sister affected Lois. We always worried about that. We tried to work with her on that, but there was some reason to think we didn't succeed."

Ms. Fraser later developed a speech impediment that relatives suspected was linked to her emotional traumas, Fraser added.

Ms. Fraser held a bachelor's degree from the University of Minnesota and a master's degree in English from Catholic University in Washington. She also had studied filmmaking.

She moved back to Minneapolis about a year ago in hopes of finding a job making films, but did not have much luck and took the job at the temporary help service, Fraser said.

Ms. Fraser had accompanied other family members to their cabin on the St. Croix River last weekend. The mayor said that was the last time he saw her alive, although he talked with her Tuesday night.

Fraser recently announced plans to seek a second term as mayor of Minneapolis. He was elected to the post in 1979 after 16 years in Congress, beginning in 1962.

Lucia Pallanes

When Lucia Pallanes, originally from Eunice, N.M., developed her baking interests into a full-time business, she was careful to maintain the same individualized touch she had refined from years of experimentation at home.

Although the small bakery at 431 Andrews Highway produces cakes, cookies and pastries in mass quantities daily, Lucia prefers to start all her recipes from scratch, using natural ingredients. One of the more popular items among customers, is the Italian Cream Cake which Lucia reports is usually requested for formal occasions such as birthdays or anniversaries.

The cake can be prepared with additional decorations which may focus on a person's hobbies or interests for special celebrations, Lucia adds.

ITALIAN CREAM CAKE

¼ lb. butter
½ cup shortening
2 cups sugar
5 eggs
2 cups flour
1 teasp. baking soda
1 cup buttermilk
1 teasp. vanilla extract
5 egg whites stiffly beaten
1 cup pecans
3½ oz. diced coconut

Add shortening, flour, butter, sugar, baking soda, vanilla extract and eggs into medium-sized mixing bowl and combine ingredients with mixer for 2-3 minutes or until mixture is smooth.

Stir in half portion of coconuts and pecans and set remaining aside. Add egg whites and mix well.

Pour ingredients into 8" lightly greased and floured cake pan and bake at 350 degrees Farenheit for 25 minutes. Allow cake to cool and place on cake rack. Lucia suggests the cake be placed in the refrigerator to speed up the process.

ITALIAN CREAM CAKE ICING

8 oz. package of cream cheese
1 egg
1¼ lb. powdered sugar
½ teasp. salt
½ teasp. vanilla extract

Mix all ingredients together in small mixing bowl and add remaining coconut and pecans. Spread layer of icing over cake. Serves 10-12.

DEAR ABBY

Native talent marks good lovers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: It's true! The American Indian has it all over the white man when it comes to lovemaking. Ask any squaw who is familiar with the "Apache grip" or the "Kickapoo twist." — MINNIE HA HA

DEAR MINNIE: Not according to this San Francisco divorcee who's been around:

DEAR ABBY: This is for ED, who lost his girlfriend to an American Indian because they were supposed to be better lovers. (He had heard that closely guarded tribal secrets on how to please a woman were passed down from father to son.)

I'm an attractive divorcee, living in San Francisco and teaching at a nearby university. I've had highly touted Italian lovers, black lovers and even an Asian lover whom I met at the Hong Kong Hilton. (He was a lawyer from Wyoming.) In addition to the above, while visiting Mt. Rushmore, I met a tall, handsome Indian from a tribe near Rapid City, S.D. He was a good lover, but no better than the others. But he WAS exceptionally gentle.

No one ethnic group holds the secret to superior lovemaking. The best lover I ever had was an American (Scotch-Irish-English) whom I met in Louisville, Ky., at the Kentucky Derby. Sign me ... BEEN AROUND

DEAR ABBY: What's more frustrating than standing in a long checkout line, and when your turn comes, the clerk gets a telephone call, then starts fumbling around under the counter to find the newspaper so she can check the ad and help the person on the phone! Meanwhile, I'm waiting there with cash in my hand.

This always happens to me. I went to our local department store, found what I wanted, and after waiting for 15 minutes to pay for it, the clerk got a telephone call and I was kept waiting another five minutes while she helped the person on the phone!

Who is more important? The customer on the phone, or the person who has spent $1.40 a gallon on gas to get there? Why can't sales clerks tell the phone callers to wait until their customers with cash in their hands are waited on?

Even if you don't print this, I feel better writing it down. — OFF MY CHEST IN WAYCROSS, GA.

DEAR OFF: I'm sure everyone has been in your shoes. (I have.) But haven't you also been the party on the phone? (I have.)

DEAR ABBY: The B.C. Forbes definition of money is only adequate. Here's a much better definition by T.P. O'Connor, the editor of the once famous British weekly, "TP'S."

"Although money may not buy happiness, I know of no misfortune in the world that HAVING money does not mitigate, and the LACK of money does not aggravate."

It may sound cynical, but when you think about it, it makes sense. — FELIX DE COLA

DEAR FELIX: It makes no sense to me. Ask anyone who has lost a child if his or her pain would have been mitigated by any amount of money.

Vegetarian specialities with frittatas

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

The frittata can be considered the Italian equivalent of the French omelette, although its preparation differs slightly. It is a thick and hearty vegetable and egg dish, cooked flat and cut into wedges to be served hot or at room temperature. A frittata can be a quick and simple supper, served with crusty bread and a salad, or it may be served as a first course or part of an antipasto in a more sumptuous Italian feast.

Frittatas are usually cooked in a mixture of butter and olive oil, rather than butter alone. When the bottom part has cooked, with a lid, to start the top surface coagulating, a plate is put on top of the skillet, and the pan quickly upturned onto the plate. A little more butter (or oil) is added to the skillet, then the upturned frittata is slid from the plate into the skillet to finish cooking. An alternative method is to place the skillet under the broiler for about two minutes after the bottom has cooked to finish cooking and lightly brown the top.

GENOESE FRITTATA

2 lbs. fresh chard or spinach
One-half cup breadcrumbs
3 large eggs
One-half cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 clove garlic, minced or put through a press
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
1 tsp. marjoram
One-half tsp. nutmeg
One-fourth tsp. coriander
Salt and pepper to taste
One and one-half tbsp. each, butter and olive oil

Wash the chard well and remove stalks. Place the leaves in a large skillet with only the water that clings to them from the washing, and cook, uncovered, stirring frequently, until they are wilted and tender. Remove from heat and drain thoroughly, pressing the leaves against the sides of a colander to remove as much liquid as possible.

Beat the eggs together with the seasonings. Add the breadcrumbs, chard and grated cheese. Mix well. Heat the oil and butter in a heavy 9-inch skillet. When hot, pour in the mixture, flattening the top. Lower the heat, cover, and let it cook until the bottom is firm and sides are beginning to brown (check this by gently separating the mixture from the sides of the skillet with a knife). Put the skillet under the broiler for one to two minutes. Allow to cool at least five minutes, then turn upside down on a serving platter. Serves four.

ZUCCHINI FRITTATA

One and one-half lbs. firm zucchini (about 4 cups diced)
1 med. onion
5 eggs
1 tsp. grated lemon peel
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tbsp. breadcrumbs, plus additional breadcrumbs
2 tbsp. milk
2 tbsp. grated Romano cheese
2 tbsp. olive oil

Cut the zucchini into a fine dice and chop the onion. Heat the olive oil in a 9-inch heavy skillet and add the nion and zucchini to it. Saute these vegetables, stirring frequently, until they are tender and golden. Beat the eggs with the remaining ingredients. When the zucchini is just tender, spread the vegetables evenly in the pan and add the egg mixture. Cover and cook over a low heat until the eggs are completely set, about 15-20 minutes. Check it now and then to see if it is puffing up in a bubble — if so, pierce it once or twice with a sharp knife.

When the eggs are firm, loosen the frittata carefully by sliding a spatula around under it. Then place a plate upside down on top of the pan like a lid and invert it, dropping the frittata out onto it. Slide it carefully back into the pan and brown it for a few minutes, then turn it out onto a serving plate. Serve hot or at room temperature, cut in wedges. Serves six as a first course.

Tips for kitchen

Wait. After you've finished using a meat grinder, run a slice or two of bread through it before washing. The bread will do half the cleaning job for you.

In a pinch, if you need a rolling pin, use a round, tightly capped bottle filled with water.

To clean burnt food from a pot without scrubbing and scrubbing, sprinkle baking soda inside the pot, add a quart of water and simmer on the stove. Then let stand a few hours and clean.

Want to buy a sweeter eggplant with fewer seeds? Pick a Mr. instead of a Ms. Check the eggplant's sex by examining the bottom end of the plant opposite the stem. There you'll see a grayish "scar" or dime-sized indentation.

Special strawberry recipes for summer

Surely no one could suggest a fruit more delicious and totally refreshing than a plump, juicy, red-ripe strawberry. We've all been beguiled by its appeal just as the New World Colonists were who called it the "wonder of all fruits."

Not only are strawberries scrumptuous, they are also an excellent nutritional source. One cup of strawberries supplies about 150 percent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance of vitamin C for the average adult. Surprisingly, the strawberry also adds a significant portion of iron to your diet. But, one of the strawberry's nicest attraction is its low-calorie content. One cup contains only 60 calories. What a delicious way to diet.

Strawberries are also a very good buy pricewise, especially now.

Strawberries don't ripen further after they've been picked, so when making your selection, look for strawberries that are bright, fresh, plump, well-shaped and solid in color. And the caps should be attached.

It's a good idea to use strawberries as soon as possible after purchase to ensure the utmost flavor and nutritional value. Unused berries should be stored in the refrigerator.

Be sure you don't wash or remove caps of strawberries until just before serving. Wash gently as washing tends to remove the natural protective outer layer. Never allow strawberries to soak in water. Leaving caps on until serving aids in preserving the flavor, texture and nutrients of strawberries.

There are many ways to enjoy this versatile berry. A strawberry morning always starts the day on a rosy note. Served simply and deliciously by themselves, on top of cereal or whirled into a frosty morning frappe, strawberries offer more than just juicy-sweet taste.

Strawberries also make wonderful desserts and are great in main meal salads.

Here are just a few of the ways to enjoy strawberries this summer.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

¾ cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
3 beaten egg yolks
2¼ cups sifted flour
½ teasp. salt
3½ teasp. baking powder
¾ cup cold water
¼ cup crushed strawberries
1 teasp. almond extract
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 cup whipping cream, sweetened with:
2 tblsp. powdered sugar
2 pints fresh strawberries, sweetened with:
½ cup powdered sugar

Cream shortening and granulated sugar; add egg yolks, beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with water, crushed strawberries and almond extract (and a few drops of red food coloring, if desired). Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in 2 waxed-paper-lined 9-inch round cake pans at 350 F. for about 20 minutes, or until cakes test done. Cool and put together with a layer of whipped, sweetened cream and a layer of sliced, sugared strawberries. Top with more cream and garnish top and sides with whole strawberries. Serves 8 to 10.

STRAWBERRY CHICKEN SALAD

2 tblsp. chopped chutney
1 tblsp. lime juice
1 teasp. each of lime peel, salt and curry powder
2 cups diced cooked chicken
1 cup sliced celery
¼ cup chopped red onion
1½ pints fresh strawberries, stemmed
Lettuce leaves
Mint sprigs

In large bowl, mix together mayonnaise, chutney, lime juice and peel, salt and curry powder. Add chicken, celery and onion; toss, cover and chill. Just before serving, slice 1 pint of the berries; gently toss with chicken mixture. Line platter or individual serving plates with lettuce. Mound chicken in center. garnish with whole strawberries and mint. Makes 4 servings.

ELEGANT STRAWBERRY ROMANOFF PIE

1 package (4-serving size) vanilla flavor pudding and pie filling
1 package (3 oz.) strawberry flavor gelatin
2 cups water
3 tblsp. orange liqueur or orange juice
1 container (8-oz.) frozen whipped topping, thawed
1 pint strawberries, hulled
1 baked 9-inch pie shell, cooled

Combine pudding mix, gelatin and water in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil. Add liqueur and chill until thickened. Beat in 2 cups of the whipped topping. Arrange whole strawberries, with pointed ends up, in pie shell, reserving several for garnish, if desired. Top with filling and chill about 2 hours. Garnish with remaining whipped topping and reserved strawberries.

STRAWBERRY-CHOCOLATE MOUSSE

2 squares semi-sweet chocolate
¼ cup water
2 packages (3-oz.) each cream cheese, softened
¼ cup milk
1 tblsp. sugar
1 container (8-oz.) frozen whipped topping, thawed
1 pint strawberries, sliced

Heat chocolate and water in saucepan over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture is smooth. Remove from heat and cool. Beat 1 package of the cheese until smooth. Add milk and sugar and blend well. Fold in 2 cups of whipped topping and cup of the strawberries. Spread evenly in 1½-quart souffle dish. Beat remaining cheese until fluffy. Gradually blend in chocolate mixture and fold into remaining whipped topping. Spread evenly over strawberry mixture. Chill about 3 hours. Dip dish in warm water for a few seconds and unmold onto plate. Garnish with additional whipped topping and remaining strawberries. Makes 5 cups or 6 to 8 servings.

For a delicious treat, try strawberries in main-meal salads. This strawberry chicken salad is sure to become a favorite for lunch or a light summertime supper. The berries add colorful spirit and a burst of juicy flavor to chicken. The secret to this complementary blend is a light curry dressing. Serve with hot, crusty rolls and iced tea for a complete meal long on flavor and relatively modest in calories and cost.

Curriculum is love at parenting school

By CRAIG HORST
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tinker-Toys and crayons are the tools at the school of parenting. The curriculum is love — a cure to frustration, tears and bruises.

Linda was on the floor with her three children learning to be a parent at the Family Resource Center one day recently. She hopes to understand the emotional needs of her children by helping them build a Tinker-Toy house.

That kind of understanding can eliminate the tragedy of battered and neglected children, counselors say.

But it's an immense task facing the tiny Family Resource Center. While 54,000 reports of abused and neglected children flooded the Missouri Child Abuse Hotline last year, Linda and her children represented one of only 100 families in the year-long counseling session.

"We'll never get to all the people that need us," says Phyllis Rocansky, the center's director.

Increased awareness of the problem, better methods of reporting and declining economic conditions all apparently contribute to rise in calls to the hotline. But Miss Rocansky says in many cases, parents simply don't know how to be parents.

"There's more information available on how to care for your dog than there is on how to raise children," she says. "Emotional development is a very sophisticated process. We do not instinctively know how to be parents."

Some parents turn to abuse out of frustration, while others simply "tune out" when they have problems handling their children.

Often, abused children must be hospitalized and ultimately placed in foster homes. The Family Resource Center, meantime, attempts to help parents.

"We've just finished our mural," says Gene Meyers, the counselor working with Linda and her children. "Unless we know how the parent and the children interact with each other, we can't begin to help.

"Teaching communication is the first step," he says.

Later, Linda puts down her infant and crawls on the floor in the "simulated" living room with the two older children. Abusive parents don't know how to play with children, counselors note.

The family then sits down to dinner with counselors. Mealtimes often are difficult for families, counselors say, because parents and children can't avoid each other.

The time it takes to create bonds between parents and children is evident. Linda rarely smiles or touches her children. One of the youngsters screams and runs away when a stranger tickles her behind the ear.

In the severe cases, courts order children taken from their parents and placed in foster homes. The foster home often is "double jeopardy" for the child, Miss Rocansky says.

"Some foster parents are just not equipped to deal with the emotional problems of children," she says. "They may have a lot of interest, but they just can't cope with the problems. That leads to frustration and frustration can lead to more abuse."

The result often is severe emotional difficulty later in life, Miss Rocansky says. "They say, 'I don't belong to anybody, nobody wants me.' The sense of belonging is fundamental to a human being.

"It's essential to a child."

Your social security: New address must be noted

Copley News Service

Q. I get a Social Security check each month and I elected to have it sent to my bank. If I move from my present address is there any need to notify the Social Security office? — K.P.

Yes. Even though your checks go directly to your bank, your home address is necessary so that you can be advised of changes that might affect your monthly payment amount, for example, benefit increases or the amount you can earn and still get all of your monthly payments changes.

Q. How can Social Security grant a civil service retired employee half of his wife's Social Security when he's never paid one penny on to it? This is going on here, and has been for several years. They have a good retirement also. — T.C.

A. It would appear from your brief outline of the problemthat benefits may not be payable. Ordinarily, in the situation you describe, the husband would have to be dependent for more than half of his support on his wife.

If you supply the name and address of this man to your Social Security office they will investigate.

Q. If a widower over age 70 marries a woman under age 62 who has never worked, are there any benefits payable because of this marriage? — M.S.

A. No. However, the wife will be eligible to receive benefits on his account when she reaches ae 62, provided she has been married to him for one year.

Q. I would like to know if I can receive Social Security payments from my late husband's Social Security?

I am 60 years old with very little income which is about to run out. How do I get his Social Security number? He has been dead 10 years. — D.B.

A. As a widow you may elect to receive reduced benefits at age 60. If you elect to receive benefits beginning with the month you attain age 60, you will receive 71.5 percent of the full widow's benefits.

By accepting tthe benefit at age 60 you would be ahead, insofar as total cashs benefits are concerned, for the first 17 years the benefits are paid.

Your deceased husband's Social Security number may be on some documents in your possession, e.g., tax returns, the death certificate, etc. If not, your Social Security office will help you to locate it.

Questions on Social Security may be sent to Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. This column is based on information provided by the Social Security Office in San Diego, Calif.

Lemon Layer Cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: For some years I used a lemon layer cake recipe of yours that had a delicious filling and frosting. But alas, I lost the recipe. I have never encountered it in cookbooks, so I very much wish you would give it again for the new crop of cake bakers. Older cooks who may have missed it on its first time around will appreciate it as well as those who, like myself, loved and lost it. — GRATEFUL.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I was delighted to be reminded about that good lemon layer cake and to have you urge me to use the recipe again. Here it is. It works as well as it always did. — C.B.

LEMON LAYER CAKE

3 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup (1½ sticks) butter
1½ cups granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 large eggs
1¼ cups milk
Lemon Fill and Frost, recipe follows
1½ cups heavy cream
1-3rd cup confectioners' sugar

Sift together the flour and baking powder. Cream the butter, granulated sugar and vanilla. Thoroughly beat in the eggs, one at a time. Stir in the flour mixture in 4 additions, alternately with the milk, just until smooth each time. Turn into 3 greased and floured round 9-inch layer-cake pans. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 20 to 25 minutes. Cool cakes in pans on wire racks for 5 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out on racks. Cool completely. Spread one layer with ½ cup of the Lemon Fill and Frost; add another cake layer and spread with another ½ cup of the Lemon Fill and Frost. Add the last cake layer. Whip the cream with the confectioners' sugar until stiff; fold in the remaining Lemon Fill and Frost and use generously to cover top and sides of cake. Store in refrigerator.

Lemon Fill and Frost: In a 1-quart saucepan over low heat, stir together about 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind, ¼ cup lemon juice, 1 and 1-3rd cups granulated sugar and ½ cup (1 stick) butter until sugar is dissolved and butter melted. Off heat, gradually whisk in until blended 3 slightly beaten large eggs. Over medium heat, stirring constantly, cook until slightly thickened — do not boil. Cover and chill. Use as directed in Lemon Layer Cake recipe.

Camp cooking with baked beans

So you've been elected camp cook. You're now faced with the challenge of cooking hearty meals for enormous appetites.

Fear not. There are many ways to prepare delicious outdoor meals without much fuss.

Shop for easy-to-cook foods. Rely on a variety of quality canned meats and vegetables such as baked beans.

Beefy Bean Burgers offer a new twist to making hamburgers. Simply heat the beans with ground beef, green pepper and onion and spoon on a roll. What a welcome treat after those strenuous hikes!

Remember too that baked beans are a good source of nutrients and are especially rich in iron and dietary fiber, important elements for those who love the outdoors and exercise.

BEEFY BEAN BURGERS

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped onion
1 tblsp. salad oil
1 28-oz. can of baked beans
6 hamburger rolls, split and toasted

In a large skillet, fry ground beef, green pepper and onion in oil 5 minutes. Drain off fat. Stir in baked beans; heat 10 to 15 minutes until piping hot. Spoon misture over bottoms of hamburger rolls and cover with tops of rolls. Makes 6 bean burgers.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Cornstarch has many economical uses

DEAR HELOISE:

As a money-saver, the uses of cornstarch are many and varied. Use it as a substitute for bath powder. It's especially valuable for those whose skin is sometimes irritated by the perfumes in commercial products.

On those hectic days when your schedule demands that you have a quick, dry shampoo, just sprinkle a generous amount of cornstarch on your scalp instead of the more expensive products made for this purpose.

Let it remain on the hair for a few minutes and then vigorously brush the white powder out of your clean locks.

When you need a colorless face powder to take the shine off your nose, put on a thin layer of cornstarch. Inexpensive and effective. — Carol Moog

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: Noticed recently you admit to not liking liver. Can't say I agree with you, but my wife does! You would appreciate (I hope) a story my dad used to tell on his anatomy teacher in medical school many years back.

The professor was asked if life was worth living. His answer was, "It all depends on the liver."

+ + +

CORD STORAGE

Dear Heloise: The empty cylinders from paper towels are great to keep your electrical cords neat.

If the tubes are too long, which they are, just snip off as much as you need to in order to tuck the cord neatly inside.

LABEL LEFTOVERS

Dear Heloise: When I put leftovers in containers for the refrigerator, I tape a small piece of paper on the lid, noting the contents and date.

If it is shoved to the back of the fridge and found later, I can tell how old it is. Saves time too in removing the lids to see the contents. — Mrs. Elinor Abolt

INK SMUDGES

Dear Heloise: Baffled as to why my light-colored rug got soiled so fast in a certain area, it became very evident that the spots marked the spot where I habitually flopped down and spread out my newspaper to read. The ink from the paper was rubbing off onto the carpet.

Now, when I want to spread the paper out on the floor, I lay something under it to protect the carpet. I do the same thing for upholstered furniture if the paper is going to be on the couch, etc.

Sure saves on cleaning bills. — Janis Pierson

+ + +

Don't forget to wash your hands (with soap!) as well after reading the newspaper. Helps to keep smudgy fingerprints off woodwork and your face. — Heloise

LESSON IN NEATNESS

Dear Heloise: To speed up the laundry process, I purchased three very inexpensive, large plastic hampers in different colors. (Plastic baskets could be used.)

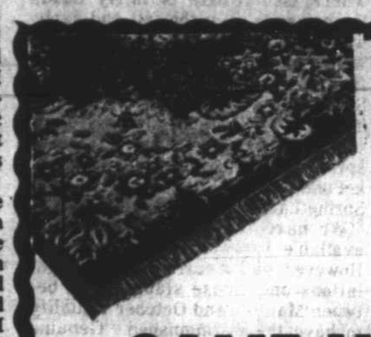

Each member of the family separated his own wash at the end of the day — white clothes in one hamper, colored clothes in another and towels in the other one. I also provided a small basket for dark socks.

My three sons learned how to be neat and saved Mom a great deal of work. — Mrs. Howard Schober

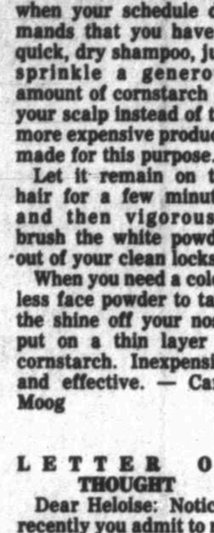

+ + +

The butcher: Spring lamb becoming seasonal product

By MERLE ELLIS

This year may well be the last in which it will be possible to obtain "Genuine Spring Lamb." So if that particular meat item is something that you wait for with gastronomic juices flowing from one spring to the next, you'd best make the most of spring lamb this spring, because it will probably be a thing of the past come October.

The nation's sheep producers are seeking the replacement of the term "Genuine Spring Lamb" with what they feel would be a more appropriate name, according to John Morrison of the American Sheep Producers Council. The terms under consideration are "Fresh American Lamb" or "Genuine U.S. Lamb" or something non-seasonal like that with no "spring" involved.

I am very much in favor of such a change; it is long overdue. The term "Spring Lamb" in this country is as outdated as the term "spring chicken," and its use has caused a great deal of confusion in the minds of consumers. The use of the term has led people to believe that the lamb available in the spring of the year is somehow better than that available in the summer, fall, or winter months, and that, very simply, is not true.

It may have been true 50 years ago, when most lambs were born in the fall and marketed in the spring, but that is not the way it is in the lamb production business these days. Lamb is raised in virtually every state in the Union and marketed throughout the year, depending upon the climate of the area in which it was raised.

In the South and West, for example, where the climate is fairly mild, lambs are born in the fall and early winter. These have reached market weight by early spring and are the first to qualify for the "Genuine Spring Lamb" mark of distinction. They are no better, however, than lamb born on an Iowa farm in early spring, which won't be ready for market until long after the term "Genuine Spring Lamb" no longer applies.

We have top-quality fresh lamb available to us 12 months a year. However, under current USDA regulations only those slaughtered between March 1 and October 1 qualify to have the distinguished "Genuine Spring Lamb" stamped in purple ink on the side of the carcass. Let's face it — July, August and September are hardly spring, and the lambs marketed during those months are no more "Spring Lamb" than those available in December, January or February.

Lamb sales boom and prices go up when markets can advertise "Genuine Spring Lamb now available." Yet 45 percent of the lamb in this country is marketed during the five months when the term "Spring Lamb" cannot be applied. In time, doing away with the outdated term will, it's to be hoped, level off the demand for lamb so that consumers can get good, fresh American lamb at a reasonable price any season of the year. Goodbye and good riddance to the myth of "Spring Lamb."

There are a number of myths that have kept some people in this country from discovering the gastronomic delights of one of the most delicious meats on the market. The myth I hear most often is this: "It tastes like mutton." The fact of the matter is, most of us have never tasted mutton. The period between 1925 and 1940 witnessed the almost complete elimination of mutton from the American diet.

So, unless your memory is extremely good, there is no way to compare today's lamb with yesterday's mutton.

If the lamb you have had recently has even the hint of a strong flavor, it has been cooked wrong. Lamb has what is called "hard fat," which means lamb fat burns at a lower temperature than other meats. Anything burned has an unpleasant odor and taste. If you cook lamb at 275 or 300 degrees instead of 375 or 400 degrees, you'll have good, tender, subtly-flavored lamb that cannot be compared to mutton, even by someone with an excellent memory.

Another myth I hear from time to time, even from professional chefs who should know better, is that lamb is hard to digest. False! Lamb is the most easily digested of our commercial meats and, therefore, finds wide use in the diet of convalescents.

It is also true fewer lamb carcasses are condemned by USDA meat inspectors than any other class of livestock. And there is less religious prejudice against lamb than any other meat.

If you are hung up on "Spring Lamb," you had better stock up before the myth goes away. If some other myth has kept you from enjoying lamb, you're missing something!

Wine tasting not as pushy

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

When Heublein Inc., decided in 1969 to stage a wine auction, it also felt potential bidders should have a chance to taste some of the wines being offered. Thus was created the pre-tasting, an event that began as a means to an end which has since evolved into an end unto itself.

About 2,000 auction catalogues are sold each year, and they give buyers admission to pre-tastings. But only 300 normally show up at the auction, so it's clear most catalogues are sold tasters, not bidders.

In 1969, most viewed the pre-tasting as an elite function — black ties, tiny pours, delicate sniffs.

But some years ago, a pre-tasting was held in New York, and there was so much pushing and shoving someone termed it 'a zoo' — a phrase that has described pre-tastings ever since.

Until Los Angeles. A few weeks ago, a pre-tasting there was smooth, orderly, well-planned, showing that Heublein may have the solution to putting these things on.

There was a good deal of very good wine to taste, the room was roomy and people were actually polite. Instead of the pushing and shoving I've seen in the past, folks said, 'Excuse me.'

Sandy McNally, organizer of the auction and tastings had the Beverly Wilshire Hotel chill the room to 60 degrees the night before, both to protect the wine and to get the room cool enough so that when 435 people barged in the next day, the room would remain cool.

Critical to the small number who attended this function was the price. Last year, the auction catalogue was $20. This year, mail price was $30, $35 at the door.

Credit must go, too, to the people of Los Angeles, who obviously view events of this nature more civilly than those of other, more frantic cities.

Best wine I tasted? Hard to say, so much was good, but I remain enchanted by a 1947 Bouchard Pere et Fils Mercurey — a young, vibrant wine with superb fruit despite its age. It last sold in 1979 for $820 a case.

On another subject, Napa Chardonnay has broken the $1,000 barrier.

The recently released California 1980 grape crush report shows the weighted average price for a ton of Chardonnay grapes from Napa County was $1,005.35 — meaning that just the juice in a bottle of 1980 Napa Chardonnay now averages more than $1.30.

That doesn't count costs of picking, transporting grapes, barrels, plus the cost of keeping the wine in the winery until it's ready to drink.

Mother Teresa of Calcutta receives a kiss on the hand from Bob Merkle, a Justice Department employee who named his daughter after her, just prior to a speech before The American Family Institute Wednesday in Washington. Mother Teresa, who received the Nobel Price for her work among India's poor, spoke strongly against abortion.

Mother Teresa to open facilities in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mother Teresa, the Roman Catholic nun who won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work among Calcutta's destitute, plans to open two missionary homes and a neighborhood center in one of Washington's poorest areas.

Mother Teresa could open the facilities in Assumption parish in Southeast Washington possibly by the end of this month, officials said. She was asked to open them by Washington Archbishop James Hickey.

Hickey and Mother Teresa chose Assumption parish because half of the city's welfare recipients live in the area.

A spokesman said nuns in the order will minister to the community, probably concentrating on prisoners at the city jail, the elderly and ill at D.C. Village, a home for the mentally retarded, and mental patients at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The Washington homes are among 20 Mother Teresa wants to open this year around the world as part of her missionary work. She already has homes in Detroit, St. Louis, Los Angeles and the South Bronx, N.Y.

Blast hurts three

PINE GROVE, Pa. (AP) — Three miners were hospitalized with burns after an underground explosion ripped through a small hard-coal mine near here, officials said.

Norman Wolfe, 60, of Pine Grove, told workers at Pottsville Hospital that he was blown 30 feet by the blast Wednesday at the Honey Coal Co. anthracite mine, officials said.

Wolfe and Kenneth C. Herring, 24, of Joliett were in critical condition with serious burns.

The men reportedly were extending the depth of the mine, located in the hamlet of Molleystown, when the explosion occurred in a shaft 600 feet underground.

Family finally reunited

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — For many years, Janis Clark had sought her brothers, from whom she was separated in 1957 when each were sent to foster homes.

On Wednesday, she found them. Jerry and Joe Wilson met their long-lost sister at El Paso International Airport Wednesday with warm embraces.

Despite the 24-year separation, the brothers knew "Sissy." The 29-year-old Hayward, Calif., woman was wearing a lavender dress, as promised.

She picked them from the crowd because they told her they both have beards.

"My search is over," said Mrs. Clark, who has been looking for her natural family since she was 14. "No more gray hairs."

"It feels great. I'm just glad she's home," he said.

"I'm pretty excited," 27-year-old Jerry Wilson said. "It's been a long time."

Mrs. Clark plans to stay a week in El Paso to reminisce about childhood days and discuss the years since their separation.

The trio spent Wednesday afternoon with the Wilsons' El Paso parents — Andy and Elaine Wilson, who adopted the brothers when they were 7 and 3.

They also plan to visit the house in central El Paso where they lived before their separation.

Mrs. Clark said she was in El Paso about five months ago looking for her brothers. The search was unsuccessful because she did not know their last name.

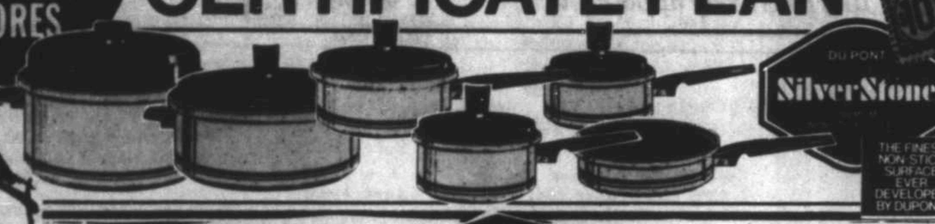

In a letter to The El Paso Times newspaper, Mrs. Clark said she and her brothers were placed in foster homes when they were young because their mother was told she was dying from cancer.

In March, Mrs. Clark was reunited in San Francisco with her younger brother, James "Jimmie" Van Cleve, serving with the Navy aboard the USS Midway.

In April, Mrs. Clark found her natural mother, Gladys Savage, in Louisiana. Her mother told her to look for two older brothers named Johnston in El Paso — the place of their adoption.

Skull of another volcano victim found

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — Construction workers digging near the north fork of the Toutle River have unearthed the remains of what is believed to be a victim of the Mount St. Helens volcano, authorities said.

The skull, vertebrae and rib fragments of an apparent victim of last year's eruption, which left 60 people missing or dead, were found Tuesday morning in a 20-foot area atop a mud flow by surveyers for Elting Inc., a contractor for the Army Corps of Engineers.

"We assume it is one of the victims," of the May 18, 1980, eruption, said Gary Lee, chief criminal deputy of the Cowlitz County sheriff's department. "We expect periodically we are going to find things like this."

Other human remains have been found in the past in the area, although most have not been identified.

Coroner D.F. Winebrenner said the lower jaw was not attached to the skull, but by matching the upper jaw with dental records an identification may be possible.

He said it would take about a week to make the identification.

The skull is that of a mature adult with extensive dental work, said sheriff's deputy Mike Nichols.

A boot and a sock were found about 100 feet downstream, but Lee said it may never be known if the finds are related.

The bones were found some 10 miles from Toutle near Weyerhaeuser's Green Mountain sawmill, about 25 miles from St. Helens.

The volcano has been quiet recently. U.S. Forest Service spokesman Thom Corcoran said the mountain exhibited only low-level seismic activity Wednesday, but cloud cover prevented a spotter plane from observing it.

Urban proposal separate from other programs

WASHINGTON (AP) -- A bill establishing "Enterprise Zones" to create jobs in the nation's worst slums is not intended to substitute for other programs being cut by the Reagan administration, according to the bill's chief sponsors.

"There's no hidden agenda. This is not a replacement for anything," Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said Wednesday as he and Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., unveiled a revised version of their package of tax breaks for businesses in distressed areas.

"There's no debate that, by itself, this is not enough. This is augmentation" for other efforts, Kemp said.

During the election campaign, President Reagan made the idea of tax-sheltered enterprise zones the centerpiece of his program to aid cities.

In February, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the zones could take the place of other programs that the administration planned to eliminate, such as the Economic Development Administration, which gives direct grants to job-producing business projects.

Baldrige issued a statement Wednesday that reaffirmed the administration's support for the idea of enterprise zones but stopped short of endorsing the Kemp-Garcia bill. A department spokeswoman, Mary Nimmo, said officials want more time to study the details of the measure.

Kemp and Garcia said they planned hearings both in Washington and in neighborhoods which could be affected by the bill, such as Garcia's South Bronx district.

They pledged, however, that they would not allow the bill to be used to help businesses get around environmental and safety controls or to pay employees less than the federal minimum wage.

Kemp said the measure would authorize the designation of 10 to 25 zones a year for three years.

Cities could apply to the Department of House and Urban Development to have low-income, high-unemployment neighborhoods designated as enterprise zones.

Businesses in the zones would be required to hire 40 percent of their employees from those who qualify as hard-core unemployed under existing federal programs.

In return they would be exempt from capital gains taxes and half their corporate income taxes for activity within the zone. They also would be able to write off early losses against taxes years later, when the businesses become profitable.

The employees would get a 5 percent personal income tax credit, up to $1,500, which could be refunded if they owed less than $1,500 total tax.

Iranian escapes kidnappers unharmed

CINCINNATI (AP) — The son of an Iranian businessman escaped unharmed after he was allegedly abducted by two men, one of them another Iranian, authorities said.

Mehrdad Ameli, 24, a former Xavier University student from Iran, and Kirke Yarnel Tibbs, 20, of Cincinnati, were charged with kidnapping and aggravated burglary following the Wednesday morning abduction, said Hamilton County Sheriff Lincoln Stokes.

Both men were scheduled for arraignment today in Hamilton County Municipal Court.

Authorities said the kidnapping of Hossein Karim, a student at the University of Cincinnati, had no "international ramifications" but was an attempt to obtain a $50,000 ransom, which was not paid.

Ameli's surrender was arranged by his attorneys, who have been representing him during an investigation by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, the sheriff said.

Karim, 20, told police he was abducted from his parents' home by two masked men, but he escaped unharmed six hours later when he jumped from the back of a truck where he had been held.

Karim's father, Hadi, his mother and three sisters were at home when the incident occurred, said Alfred E. Smith, special agent in charge of the FBI's office here.

The family has lived here since 1977.

Judge asks state to pay for trial

HUNSTVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Walker County judge says he is asking Gov. Bill Clements to place a measure on the agenda of the special legislative session that would make the state pay for the trial of an inmate accused of killing two prison officials.

Grand jury indicts four men

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Four people, including three men identified by authorities as members of the Ku Klux Klan, have been indicted by a federal grand jury on conspiracy and weapons charges after a 10-month federal investigation of the Klan.

The indictment returned Wednesday in Wilmington charges that two undercover federal agents, identified as Richard Schoerner and Richard Markowski, arranged to buy several guns from the defendants.

The four were arrested May 21 when the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms conducted simultaneous raids in Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, capping the investigation into Klan activity.

Charles W. Sickles, 39, of Ramblewood, a convicted felon identified as the imperial wizard of the Adamic Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, was charged with conspiracy and 19 federal weapons offenses.

Sickles' wife, Patricia, 48, and Frank Stillings, 30, of Paulsboro, N.J., were charged with three counts of aiding in the unlawful transfer and sale of a firearm, one count of dealing in firearms and conspiracy.

The indictment charges Alfred C. Weakland, 26, of Woodland Heights, with conspiracy and weapons offenses including unlawfully receiving a firearm and unlawfully transferring, selling and delivering a firearm.

Weakland has been identified by authorities as Delaware leader of the Adamic Knights, but he has denied any involvement with the Klan.

U.S. Attorney James W. Garvin Jr. said that the maximum penalty for all but one of the charges is a $5,000 fine and five years in prison. A charge against Sickles of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon carries a maximum two-year prison term and a $10,000 fine.

Five shot

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Authorities say a Denver couple, their two small children and a teen-age girl have been found shot to death in a motel room apparently after making a murder-suicide pact.

The victims were identified as Bruce McKinley, 28; his wife, Mary Jo, 25; their daughter, Jennifer Ann, 3; their son, Marc Dana, 1, and Dana E. Greenup, 15, of Seattle. All were shot with a .22-caliber weapon. A .22-caliber rifle was discovered in the room, officials said.

Miss Greenup was not related to the family but apparently had lived with tem for abut a year, police said.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Bud Bowman's child is hoping for a tricycle before it's too late, but otherwise the Bowman family and about 50 others here say they're ready to rise to heaven on June 28.

That's the day, according to spiritual leader Bill Maupin, when God will bodily lift up his followers and Jesus will be awaiting them at cloud-level. Members of the sect won't be gathering at any special place on the 28th; they believe they will rise from wherever they happen to be.

"Oooo, glory, I get bliss just thinking about it," Maupin said. "We're not just going to some mountain hideaway; we're leaving the earth."

"We're ready," said Bowman, a laborer who became a believer only in recent months. "My little one sort of wants a three-wheeler before it happens, but we're ready to go."

To prepare for their ascent, others have sold their homes and cars, quit their jobs and devote their eforts to spreading the word that the time of "rapture" — the ascent into heaven — is almost at hand.

John Vickers, 32, quit his job as a glass worker and is living off some of the money from the sale of his home. He said he donated the remaining cash to the group to spread its message to the world.

"I've never known such peace, such joy," said James McCullough, a Nogales doctor who donated a classic Porsche automobile to help pay for the pamphlets the fellowship distributes.

Maupin says some of the money raised when group members have sold their belongings has gone to perpetuate the work of the group. But Maupin says he never asks the members for contributions.

Maupin, founder of the church-like "fellowship" called the Lighthouse Gospel Tract Foundation, and other members say their Bible studies have convinced them that the second coming of Christ will take place in 1988.

By then, however, the group will already be in heaven, they say.

Maupin said he began his Bible study in the early 1960s, but became dissatisfied with the answers he was getting from ministers and began his own study.

He said the Bible tells of a coming war in the Mideast to precede the "rapture." A multinational power headed by an American "anti-Christ" will dominate the world until Christ returns in May 1988, Maupin added.

But before then, believers — including those now dead and even those of the faithful who don't believe in the June 28 event — will be transported to heaven, according to Maupin.

Those who remain on earth after June 28 will have to decide between going into league with the devil — assuring their eternal damnation — or professing faith in Jesus, Maupin said.

He said the devil's forces will kill remaining believers but they will be resurrected later.

Asked what would happen if the group is still be on earth after June 28, Maupin replied: "I can't even answer a question like that. Come back and see us on June 29 and we'll talk about it."

At least one member of the fellowship — Jerry Walker of Tucson — is less convinced, although he attributed his doubts to his "inability to interpret the Bible."

Walker said, however, that his fellow members "are honest, sincere Christian people, and I pray that they are right."

Reagan may be needing more cufflinks

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be time for the White House to order a new batch of presidential cufflinks — the kind handed out to the Democrats when President Reagan wants some help on Capitol Hill.

Reagan is making it clear that he may try to win approval of his tax cut plan by taking the same tack used when Democratic leaders in Congress balked at supporting his budget plan.

The cufflinks, along with tickets to the presidential box at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, became symbols, if not factors, in Reagan's courtship of conservative Democrats whose support helped him win approval of reduced budget increases.

There have been no signs of success in Reagan's different approach on taxes, working directly with the Democratic leadership in search of a joint program.

"He's staked out a position," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, talking about the president. "He's come as far as he can in the absence of something from the other side."

As for the president, he's keeping his own secrets. Asked during a brief encounter with reporters Tuesday what his next move would be on the tax cut, Reagan responded: "We'll see."

The administration seems to be facing a decision about following one of the two courses: If its efforts over the past few weeks to work out a bipartisan plan are fruitless, the conservative Democrats will be counted to join the president and leave the liberal Democrats — particularly House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. — out in the cold.

Because Reagan held firmly throughout the political campaign last year to the Republican proposal for a three-year, 30 percent tax cut, there is little inclination within the White House these days to portray Reagan as anxious to compromise.

"I did not see much give" on the president's part, Speaks said after Reagan was reported to have indicated he would settle for a 5 percent tax cut for the first year and 10 percent for each of the next two years.

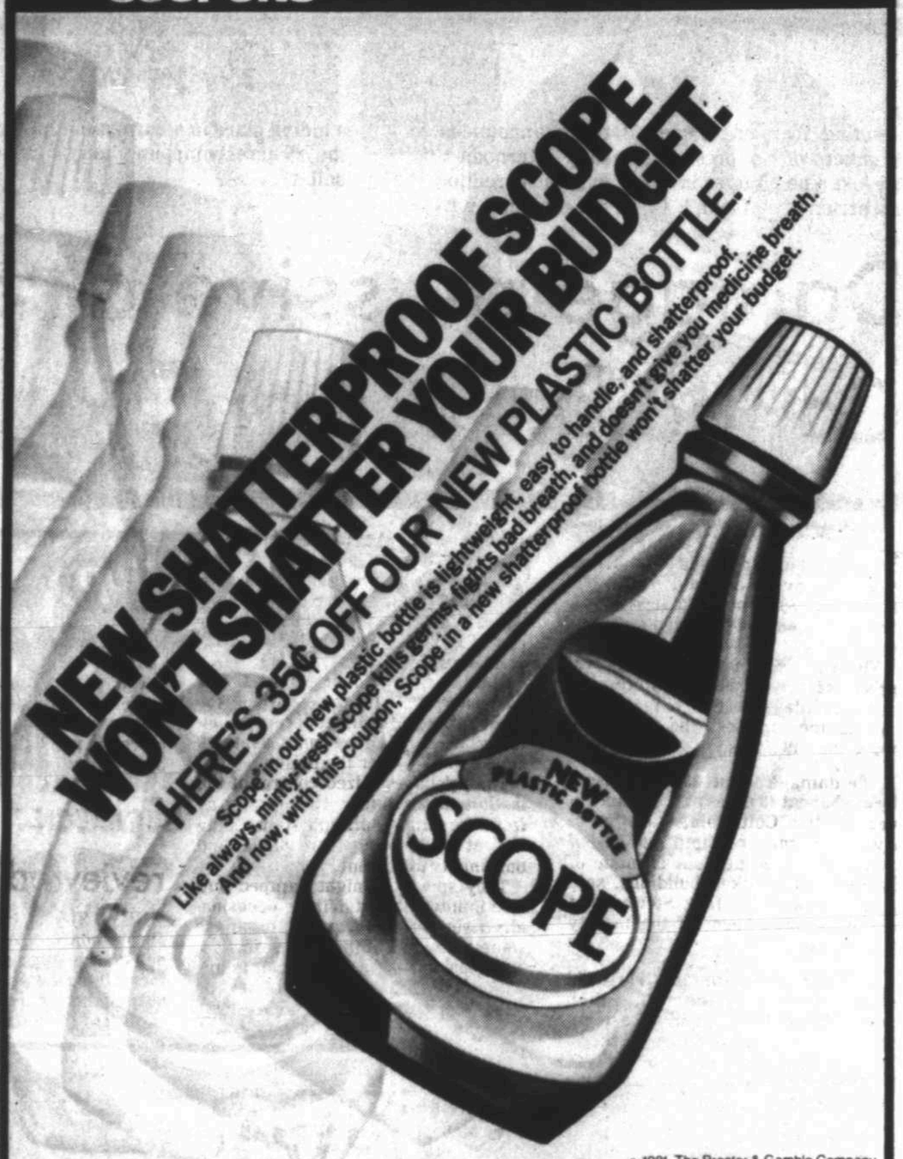

The target of the administration's affections this week has been Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Rostenkowski is a handy focus. He is more liberal than Rep. Jim Wright, the Texas Democrat who is the House majority leader, and therefore is appealing to Northerners who might like to see an alternative to Wright when it comes time to replacing O'Neill.

Acting Warden Norman Blamire announces to members of the press Wednesday afternoon that the last nine inmates involved in an insurrection at the prison at Matsqui, B.C., have been flushed from a hiding place in a burned-out building. Damage to the 25-acre compound may run into millions of dollars.

Damage massive after Canadian prison riot

MATSQUI, British Columbia (AP) — Prisoners were living in makeshift tent shelters today and eating "spartan meals" of sandwiches and boiled eggs after guards and soldiers quelled a riot by 288 inmates that inflicted "massive" damage to a federal prison.

The warden of the medium-security prison said Wednesday it may take days to identify the ringleaders among the inmates who rioted for more than 19 hours.

The damage to the 25-acre prison, located about 40 miles east of Vancouver, British Columbia, was "massive," and may run into millions of dollars when an account is made of burned and wrecked buildings, said prison spokesman Jack Stewart. At one point, 40 percent of the facility was ablaze.

At least seven inmates suffered minor injuries in the riot, which began Tuesday night and apparently was triggered by kitchen workers' complaints over low pay. No hostages were taken in the disturbance and the rioters offered no demands, officials said.

Prison officials said they were surprised by the "spontaneous" riot and said ringleaders probably will face criminal charges.

Soldiers and guards equipped with riot gear flushed out the last nine inmates, who offered only "token resistance," from a hiding place in a burned-out three-story dormitory by noon PDT Wednesday, Warden Norman Blamire said.

Most of the prisoners, armed with baseball bats and pipes when the incident began, surrendered voluntarily Wednesday morning as thick smoke drifted over the prison.

The prisoners seized control of the institution at dinner time, bursting from the dining hall and stampeding into other buildings, smashing and burning as they went.

They spent the night camped outside in intermittent drizzle, occasionally rising in small groups to smash something else, authorities said.

"It looked like a hippie commune, with makeshift tents, sides of beef on a barbecue and lots of cigarettes," said one helmeted, billy club-toting policeman.

"There was no ultimatum" to force surrender, just the implied threat of using 200 heavily armed Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 20 Matsqui police officers and about 180 members of the Canadian Forces, Blamire said.

"Because there were no hostages, the inmates really had no bargaining power or strength to force us into any sort of treaty," he added.

At one point, eight prison staffers were evacuated by helicopter from a building rooftop, where they barricaded themselves for more than an hour Tuesday night, Stewart said.

Authorities said the riot probably was sparked by an unpopular pay scale for kitchen work, which increases wages to just over $3 a day but eliminates some overtime and bonuses.

"The adjustment has proved traumatic to some of the inmates and this led to ... this incident," Blamire said.

The Canadian Armed Forces was asked to lend 10-man tents to temporarily house many inmates. Others will be sheltered in a relatively undamaged academic compound.

"They will have spartan meals of sandwiches and boiled eggs," Stewart said.

The prison, opened in 1966 as a center for criminal drug addicts, now houses every type of criminal sentenced to more than two years behind bars, Blamire said.

Blanton jury to resume deliberations

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal jury asked the judge several questions in former Gov. Ray Blanton's liquor-license payoff trial, and a prosecutor said the jurors "seem to know what evidence is important."

The jury deliberated for about seven hours Wednesday and then adjourned for the night without reaching a verdict. Jurors were scheduled to resume deliberations today.

The U.S. District Court panel, sifting through testimony that lasted six weeks, began deliberations Wednesday to consider charges against Blanton, his 1974 campaign manager, James Allen, and former special assistant, Clyde Edd Hood Jr.

The three defendants are charged with conspiracy and mail fraud. Blanton and Hood also are charged with extortion for allegedly taking a cut of the profits from licensed liquor stores.

All three defendants pleaded innocent to illegally influencing the state's Alcoholic Beverage Commission to approve 12 suburban Nashville liquor licenses in 1976. If convicted, they could face sentences of 35 to 70 years and fines up to $29,000.

Blanton on Wednesday exuded an air of confidence reminiscent of his early days in office. Since he left office Jan. 17, 1979, Blanton has shunned public appearances.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Lynch, chief prosecutor at the trial, said he also was encouraged. Jurors several times asked U.S. District Judge Bailey Brown for advice and for specific evidence or exhibits introduced during the trial which began April 20.

"At least they're asking questions," Lynch told reporters. "They seem to know what evidence is important."

One question sent to Brown by the jury involved extortion: "Must money actually change hands or is intent sufficient?"

The judge said the jury could convict for extortion "if and only if you find beyond a reasonable doubt" that money was actually paid as a bribe.

The jurors also asked for several exhibits relating to charges of mail fraud and conspiracy.

Liquor dealer Jack Ham, the government's star witness who received one of the 1976 licenses, testified that he paid $23,000 on a Blanton loan. He said the payment represented 20 percent of his 1978 profits.

Ham has since been indicted as a co-conspirator for allegedly lying to federal investigators and a grand jury about skimming liquor store profits.

Evidence reviewed

New boom leads to an unexpected Japanese gold rush

By HIDESUKE NAGASHIMA
Copley News Service

TOKYO -- Traditionally, the Japanese have not been sophisticated investors of personal wealth. Most Japanese still put the bulk of their money in savings accounts at local banks or post offices, leaving purchases of stocks, bonds or precious metals like gold to a limited number of seasoned investors.

But that is beginning to change. People from all walks of life, including salaried men, merchants, office girls and housewives, are rushing to buy gold and creating a new gold boom in Japan.

With gold business fast expanding, there are predictions that Japan will emerge as a major participant in the world gold market in the coming years.

The boom has come despite recent roller-coaster ups and downs in gold prices and uncertainties clouding future price trends.

The present boom in fact started after a price downturn, unlike the two previous booms which came amid rocketing prices.

The new boom has not caused a rise in the Japanese gold price, which is based on international prices rather than local supply and demand. The Japanese price is largely determined by the international political situation, global inflation and the dollar-yen exchange rate.

Basically, Japanese are buying more and more gold to hedge against inflation and dodge tax.

The buying and holding of gold bars in Japan, which still has no official gold market, is free of tax unlike stocks and land. Profits from gold trading are taxable under the income tax law, but that stipulation has no teeth since there is no record-keeping system on gold trading.

"We are in the midst of a third gold boom in Japan," says Hironori Kubo, public relations manager with Tanaka Kikinzoku Kogyo (Precious Metals Industries) Co., the nation's top gold dealer. "People are now buying mostly small billets, typically 100-gram (3.2-ounce) ones. This indicates popularization of investments into gold."

Customers crowd Tanaka Kikinzoku's shops daily to buy or sell gold. Unlike in foreign countries, gold is not sold at banks in Japan.

Japanese investors, apparently sensing a bargain at that price level, began to flock to gold shops nationwide.

In December, the amount of gold billets sold by member shops of the Japan Gold Bar Distributors Association to private customers shot up to 7.8 tons from 3.2 tons the previous month. Monthly sales ranged from 7.4 to 10 tons between January and March.

"Most people buy gold to try to protect the value of their personal wealth, rather than speculate in gold," says Tanaka Kikinzoku's Kubo.

It would be hardly surprising if people tried to do that. There are widespread fears in Japan that inflation might flare up again from the present level of around 6 percent if oil prices are hiked, and erode the value of savings.

In addition, an increasing number of Japanese are looking for a tax shelter in gold.

This is because the Japanese government plans to introduce in 1984 an identification system for tax-free deposits at banks and post offices to crack down on tax evasion on income from interest through bogus and multiple accounts.

At present, each Japanese is eligible for tax-free privileges on bank deposits of up to 3 million yen ($14,000) and postal savings of up to the same amount.

Boston the exception in coping with new proposition

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Hearst Special News Service

Washington--Virtually every city and town in Massachusetts is coping well with the impact of Proposition Two and a Half except Boston, Gov. Ed King says.

He downplayed the problems from the tax-cutting proposition in a White House appearance as the only Democratic public official among 12 brought in for a briefing--and favorable review of--President Reagan's economic program.

He continued his steadfast endorsement of Reagan's plan although he revealed for the first time that the state is expected to lose up to $200 million in federal funds when categorical programs are combined into bloc grants and reduced in overall funding.

Boston already has estimated its loss at $54 million or more. Asked what he thought would be the impact of that on the city, King said the state has increased its money to the city and then he added: "They are going to have to face the reality and reduce their payrolls down to realistic levels."

He repeated that no other cities or towns in the state were having trouble with the state funding cutbacks from Proposition 2 and a half.

Asked to elaborate afterward, King ratttied off the names of a dozen cities and towns he said are having little trouble coping with the effects of Proposition 2 and a half, ranging from Lowell to Waltham to Medford.

What does he mean to insinuate about Boston, then? That Mayor Kevin White should cut his own staff more severely than he now has?

"Oh, I won't comment on what he should do," King said with a wave of his hand.

King appeared at the White House with four other governors, six mayors and a councilwoman. The subject was bloc grants but the officials also made a pitch for Reagan's overall economic program, including the three-year tax cuts that the Democrats are fighting.

The timing could not have been more propitious. Only a hour earlier, King's fellow Democrat, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill had left somewhat grumpily after a 90-minute meeting with Reagan that he called unproductive and "more of a media event than anything else."

Reagan proposal represents reversal of federal policies

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Special News Service

WASHINGTON -- The Reagan administration's proposal to trim early retirement pensions represents a fundamental reversal of federal policies that have encouraged ever-earlier retirements for more than 20 years.

The Reagan plan, which would reduce Social Security benefits of people who retire at age 62 - from 80 percent to 55 percent of the amount they would receive at 65 - has shaken up Congress so much that it is unlikely ever to be enacted.

Statistics provided by the Social Security System, the Census Bureau and a new independent study bear out the fact that there has been a trend and what some view as a deliberate policy to encourage early retirements.

In 1960, says the Social Security System, 85.2 percent of men aged 55 to 64 and 32.2 percent of those 65 and over were in the labor force.

By 1980, those rates had dropped to 73.3 percent and 19.3 percent, respectively, following congressional modification of the system's procedures to allow people to take early retirement at 62.

A new Census Bureau report last week disclosed that there are 28 percent more Americans over 65, some 25.5 million more than there were in 1970.

In the decade ending 1980, the bureau said, the number of children under 15 dropped from 58 million to 51 million.

At the same time, the median age of the nation--the age at which half the population is younger and half is older--rose from 28 to 30.

One of the reasons why the Social Security System is in trouble, said the bureau, is because America's population is getting older and because the ratio between the number of workers who are paying into the system and of older retirees who are benefiting is widening.

The bureau said that back in 1945, some 42 workers paid into the system for each retiree.

In 1977 the ratio of workers to beneficiaries had shrunk dramatically and it is now around 3.2 to 1.

The figures speak for themselves: the earlier the retirement age, the more people take advantage of it, and the less people there are to support the system.

An Upton Institute study suggested that liberal benefits of the past two to three decades have encouraged Americans to quit work earlier.

Entitled, "Leaving Earlier," the study concluded that a variety of problems created by early retirements, including financial problems of the Social Security system, "point to a need for reconsideration of current policies which influence the trend."

"Early retirement had been enshrined, for some at least, with those long sought and hard won benefits which help assure a decent working and post-working life," the study said.

"But it is likely that these resources may become drastically reduced in another two decades and perhaps completely exhausted should the trend toward early retirement continue at its present level," the study added.

The study pointed out that the aging of societies and the problems of retirement are very modern phenomena.

"In the course of human history, only a handful of persons could expect to reach the normal span of life, 70 or more years, before death. A vast majority failed to reach 35 years of age," the study said.

Both business and social security experts have long urged a change in the system to encourage later retirements.

In proposing the changes, the president was generally responding to the pleas of the system's actuaries and those sociologists who view early retirement as counterproductive.

In his appeal, Reagan pointed to the dire financial needs of the social security trust fund and the prospects of an active work force shrinking in size relative to the retired population.

The Social Security System is divided into three parts: Old Age and Survivors Insurance, Hospital Insurance and Disability Insurance.

The hospital and disability insurances currently have surpluses and are not in immediate danger of going bust.

BY TED BATTLES

With ball players and managers coming and going seemingly in droves, it was more like Grand Central Station during the War years than a ball park. Maybe that's why lefthander Craig Lefferts got off to a shaky start and wound up with his sixth loss as the disrespectful San Antonio Dodgers beat the Midland Cubs, 6-1, for the sixth straight time Wednesday night.

Certainly, the Cubs Stadium debut of umpire Pam Poestema would have been much more enjoyable if the Cubs had won the opener of the five-day, six-game series. After a welcoming round of applause, Pam, who worked behind the plate, was soon "just one of the boys" as the sharp-eyed critics in the stands second-guessed her ball and strike calls, especially when they went against the home team.

Pam handled herself ably behind the plate, but if Al Rosen had been around, he'd have fired her on the spot the first time she threw the ball out to the mound...sidearm, with gusto. Al hated sidearmers with a passion.

Cubs at Home

Tonight San Antonio 7:30 p.m.

Thursday San Antonio, 2, 6 p.m.

Friday San Antonio, 7:30 p.m., 25-cent Beer Night.

Saturday San Antonio, 7:30 p.m.

Sunday San Antonio, 6 p.m., San Diego Chicken Night.

FOR A GUY who found himself combed for seven hits and behind 6-1 after three innings, Lefferts didn't pitch a bad game. He allowed just two hits over the final six innings. Only trouble, three San Antonio pitchers didn't allow the Cubs a run after the first and managed to snuff out several promising threats as the Cubs stranded 11.

"I got a couple of pitches up and they hit a couple of good pitches," Lefferts said in explaining the Dodgers' four-run first. "Later, my control got better and I began to hit spots."

By then it was too late as Steve Marsden, retiring after 2 2/3 innings with arm tightness, winner Tom Neidenfeur, 4-1, and Orel Hershiser held the Cubs in check.

Steve Sax, the Texas League's leading hitter, opened the game with a fly off the batter's eye in center for two bases. Mark Bradley doubled him home and then after a single by Dave Sax, Leo Hernandez tripled home two more runs and scored on Dale Holman's singled through the left side.

IN THE third, it was a triple by D.Sax, Hernandes' sacrifice fly and Holman's homer over the scoreboard in left center that produced two more runs. Holman has three homers, two of them in Cubs Stadium.

Midland's run came on a first inning walk to Craig Kornfeld and singles by Javier Fierro and Jack Upton, knocking in the run and keeping alive his 10-game hitting streak.

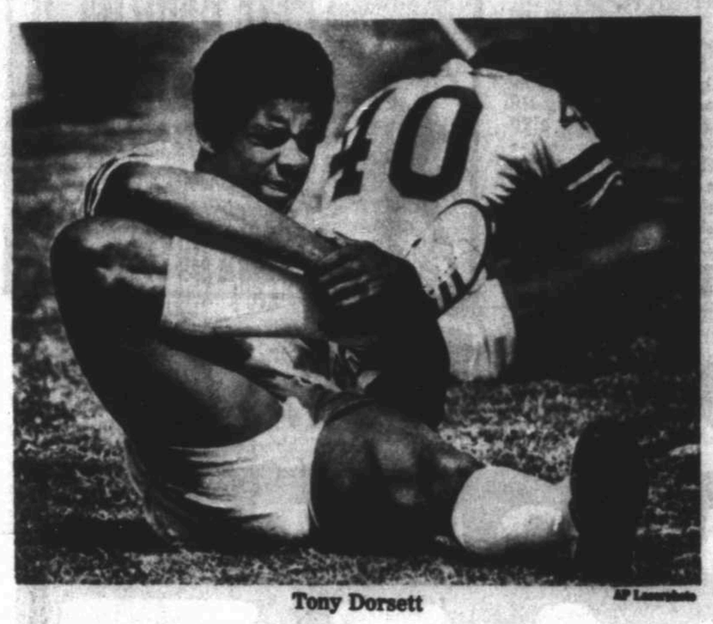

But the Cubs' locker room and dugout these days bears a marked resemblance to the Boston Celtics' transition game. Lots of movement. Roy Hartsfield is gone, and George Enright hasn't arrived from Sarasota, Fla., to take over the club, so Bobby Adams served as interim manager for one night before heading for home in Scottsdale, Ariz., after a month on the road.

New faces in the Cubs lineup included third baseman Fritz Connally, who showed a nifty glove, and rightfielder Jeff Burton, who replaces Tom Grant. Connally was with the club on the recent road trip, but Burton, a 23-year-old from Salt Lake City and a graduate of Brigham Young University, just joined the club. Both are up from Quad Cities.

And how are the Cubs reacting to the rush hour scene? "Most of the players are excited about the change," said Lefferts. "We're happy Roy had a chance to move up to Iowa. Things have got to get better. We can't do any worse and most of us believe this is a better club than its record."

BRUIN BREWIN'S—A year ago at this time, Lefferts was pitching in the College World Series, pitched the championship game for Arizona, in fact, and he can't be blamed if a little

Hard work is key for Tony Dorsett

By JIM DENT
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — "My philosophy is that you can burn yourself out. I'm a young man. I don't feel that I have to work that hard to stay in top condition." Tony Dorsett, June, 1978.

"I've learned a lot through the years and I think I'm a lot more mellow. I've sat down and figured out that the best years I've had are after I've worked out hard." Tony Dorsett, June, 1981.

With summer training camp approaching in 1978, the charts at the Dallas Cowboys practice field showed six workouts for Dorsett. Some players were working out six times a week.

THERE WAS a special concern because Dorsett had injured a calf muscle during the previous season. Everyone was worried — except Dorsett.

"I really don't know why it's such a big issue," he said at the time.

The last three years have brought changes. If he continues at his present rate, Dorsett will have one of the best attendance records when off-season workouts close late this month. He is no longer conspicious by his absence at the club's practice facility.

"If I was a betting man, I would bet on him having a lot better season next year," said Bob Ward, the Cowboys' conditioning coach, said.

Ward's program is one of the most progressive in the National Football League. At contract time, Cowboy players often discover that off-season workouts can be measured in dollar and cents. Only three players do not live in Dallas year round.

DESPITE A conditioning fanaticism displayed by players like Charlie Waters, Randy Hughes and Dennis Thurman, Dorsett was only a part-timer until this year.

For the last four years, Dorsett's careet has been a series of philosphical changes. By the end of his rookie season in 1977, the million-dollar running bakc from Pitt had so many endorsements and money-making opportunities that football was sometimes a secondary interest.

By the end of his second season, Dorsett was talking seriously about an acting career.

No one has complaiend about the results. Last season, he became the first NFL running back to gain 1,000 yards in each of his first four years. At times, Dorsett has made it look easy.

THIS, HOWEVER, is suppose to be the new Dorsett, one who has been changed by his marriage to Julie Simon April 7. After meeting at training camp last summer, the couple decided to get married in Hawaii on Dorsett's birthday. She is from Oxnard, Calif., about 15 miles from the Cowboys training camp at Thousand Oaks.

"Marriage has added a lot of stability to my life," Dorsett said. "Life is a little more settled. I'm going to be a little more serious about my job, about my life."

Dorsett now spends more time at the practice field than at Dallas discos. Instead of trips to Hollywood for sessions with his acting coach, he drives about 12 miles from his country home in Wylie to pump weights.

Lady ump homeless wanderer

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Pam Postema, the first female umpire ever to reach the heights of Class AA baseball, is a homeless wanderer all alone in a world of hostile men. She is, in fact, on a great adventure.

Like Columbus, Miss Postema, 27, is on a voyage through unchartered waters because no lady has ever accomplished what she has. But unlike Columbus, Pam is treading those waters without members of her own sex with which to communicate. And the men she meets on this trip are not ready to open any doors for her.

BEING ONE of a kind in anything has its drawbacks, but being a lady umpire in the minor leagues can be like having a catchable disease.

But there are no complaints coming from Postema. She understands her role and apparently her job. She had an uneventful game Wednesday behind the plate in her Midland debut. She seemed to have complete control of the game, but she was never really tested with a tough call.

Pam is the only active female umpire on the professional level right now. There have been a few before her, but none has made it as far as she has. But has she been a target in the male dominated society in which she works?

"If I'm tested at all, it's because its my first year in the Texas League. I don't think it is because I'm a woman. All first year umpires are going to be tested. That's part of the job and I feel I'm a professional at what I do," Postema said.

According to Pam, it's not her confrontations with men that is the roughest thing in her life. It's the travel. "Teams in the Texas League are so far apart that the travelling can be brutal. It may be the toughest league to work," she says.

Being an umpire on any level of professional baseball can be brutal. You only associate with members of your crew. No one else wants to be around them. The long trips and endless motel rooms can get old in a hurry. The pay is not all that great either. Pam gets $1300 a month. That amounts to $500 in salary and $800 for expenses. So if it is not for the money, why is Pam putting herself through all this.

"IT'S NOT like I always wanted to be an umpire," Pam states, "I found out about Al Somers' umpire school in an ad in the Gainesville paper one day in 1977 and decided to give it a try. I really didn't know what to expect. The course was six weeks long and they threw a lot of stuff at us.

"I was lucky because professional baseball took a lot of new faces that year and I had my chance. I have some long range goals for myself, but right now the most important thing is to work hard and improve every time out. I will stick with this as long as I feel that I am improving."

Pam's first assignment came in 1977 in the Gulf Coast League, a rookie league, where she worked a 60-game season. In 1979 she was promoted to the Florida State League and now has advanced to AA ball in the Texas League.

Since breaking into the umpiring business, Pam has not planted any firm roots. "My father lives in Ohio and I still have my mail sent there, but I really don't have a home. In the winter months, I just go to the part of the country that appeals to me at that time. I think I will go to Arizona or California this winter.

"I do whatever there is to do. I've worked for UPS, I've been a waitress and bus driver. I've done a lot of things."

Pam does get a lot of razzing from the fans on every stop, but she says that doesn't bother her. "I hear a lot of different comments from the fans, but the women seem to like me. Many women have told me that they like what I am doing. This is not an ego trip for me or anything like that. I just want to do my job."

BEHIND EVERY great woman is a man — or so the new saying goes these days as women continue to invade occupations previously dominated by men. The man in this case is Pam's working partner Larry DeGate. It seems to be a compatible combination.

"Larry and I work together as a team and we travel together in his car. He gets 20 cents a mile for the travel," Pam says. "Larry and I get along well and I think we make a good team on the field."

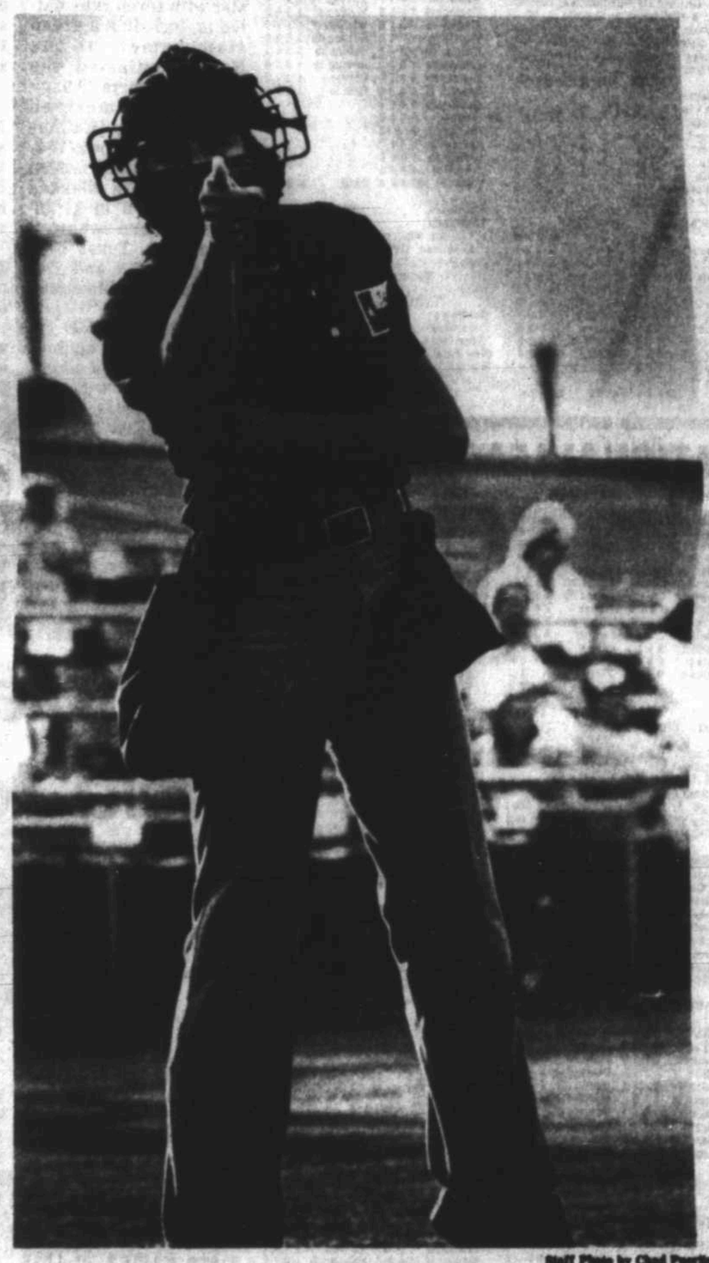

Naturally, Pam receives a lot of publicity in every city she enters. Larry is the one who is usually ignored.

"The publicity she gets doesn't bother me," DeGate said. "We both understand that it is part of the job. I understand why people are interested in her."

DeGate doesn't seem to mind working with Pam, saying, "I think she is a good umpire. She's been able to handle herself and doesn't look to me for help. In fact, she wouldn't want me to step in. She can hold her own on calls. I've got no complaints."

Umpires have to share dressing facilities at all ball parks, but this hasn't produced any major problems either. "One steps out while the other dresses or showers. It probably adds about 10 minutes to a regular setup with two men, so it's really no big deal," DeGate said.

DeGate admits that it might be easier if he was working with another male. "Yea, I think it might be a little easier at times, but things are going well. We both have a job to do and I think we work well together. They told us in umpire school that this job wasn't going to be easy. They told us about some of the towns and parks we would work in and they told us about the travel involved. No one got into this business with a blindfold on."

Martin charged with assault on umpire

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland A's Manager Billy Martin was charged by a Canadian court Wednesday with common assault in connection with the on-field bumping of umpire Terry Cooney in a game in Toronto last week.

MEANWHILE, RICHIE Phillips, an attorney and the executive director of the Major League Umpires Association, said his group planned to take civil action against Martin in the United States, seeking an unspecified amount of damages.

Phillips, in a telephone interview from Philadelphia, said the criminal charge was filed "at Cooney's request." He said the umpire had met with Canadian authorities prior to the issuance of the summons.

Martin was not immediately available for comment.

In Toronto, Justice Donald Begley said that Martin would be served with a summons when the A's next play in Toronto Sept. 21. The summons will order Martin to appear in court at a date not yet set, Begley said.

IF CONVICTED of the assault charge, Martin could face a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $500 fine, according to Phillips.

Films showed Martin charging out of the dugout, bumping Cooney with his stomach and chest, kicking dirt over the umpire's shoes and, when Cooney turned away, picking up a handful of dirt and throwing it at his back.

AMERICAN LEAGUE President Lee MacPhail suspended Martin for seven days, beginning last Saturday, and fined him $1,000, the stiffest penalty he has ever imposed against a manager.

Martin appealed the suspension, however, and was back managing the A's in Chicago Tuesday night.

Pleasant Colony ran as good in afternoons

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer John Campo was worried that the colt might be a "morning glory, a horse that runs good in the morning, but don't race good in the afternoon."

However, Pleasant Colony has bloomed into a top race horse, a runner who picked the Kentucky Derby roses and the Preakness Black Eyed Susans.

SATURDAY, THE gangly colt will try to win the carnations of the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park and become thoroughbred racing's 12th Triple Crown champion.

It will be only Pleasant Colony's fourth start for Campo, who replaced P. O'Donnell Lee as trainer after the Buckland Farm runner placed fifth in the Florida Derby March 6. In his first start for Campo April 18, he was impressive in winning the 1⅛-mile Wood Memorial, and the rotund trainer brashly predicted the Triple Crown.

Now Pleasant Colony is 1½ miles away from making Campo a prophet, and the trainer is confident the colt has the physical soundness and the ability to get to the end of those 1½ miles ahead of what is expected to be nine rivals.

"THIS HORSE hasn't been extended yet. His last three races really were easy races," Campo said Wednesday after Pleasant Colony, with exercise rider Muffy Mauger up, worked a half-mile on a muddy track in 461-5 seconds and galloped out five-eighths in 591-5.

"That the horse. He does everything easy," Campo said of the fast move.

An interested observer of the workout was Jorge Velasquez, who until this year had never won a Triple Crown race although he had ridden in many. The Panamanian, who has won more than 4,000 races, was looking forward to this year's Triple Crown as rider of 1980 2-year-old champion Lord Avie, but that colt was sidelined by injury.

"I'm kind of surprised because I was not expecting to get all three races in one year after I've been chasing them so long," said Velasquez.

HE IS confident he will become a Triple Crown jockey and says he does not feel as much pressure as he did in 1978 when he frustratingly chased Affirmed and Steve Cauthen home in the Derby, Preakness and Belmont with Alydar.

"There was probably a little more pressure then because I was second choice (with Alydar in the Belmont)," said Velasquez. "Now I'm on the first choice, and the other riders have to worry about me."

Judge promises ruling shortly after hearing

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's comments on baseball's financial condition bear no relationship to management's ability to pay for hefty free-agent contracts, according to Ray Grebey, director of the owners' Player Relations Committee.

Grebey testified Wednesday at a federal court hearing in which the National Labor Relations Board is seeking a preliminary injunction ordering the owners to rescind for one-year their controversial free-agent compensation proposal.

A key part of the NLRB case being heard by Judger Henry Werker is built around Kuhn's "gloom and doom" speech delivered at baseball's winter meetings in Dallas last December. The commissioner said at that time that teams would have to "discover oil wells under second base," in order to continue to operate. "There are those who argue that baseball's increased operating revenues are more than adequate to meet the rising costs of our business, particularly player compensation," Kuhn told the convention. "This simply is not so."

The judge scheduled closing arguments for today and has promised a decision within 48 hours of the completion of hearings. If he grants the injunction, it would put the free agent compensation question on hold for one year, something Grebey contends management cannot afford. If Werker denies the injunction, it could mean a player strike within 48 hours of his decision.

But Grebey told he court that Kuhn's remarks were strictly personal and did not reflect owner policy.

"He spoke not as an agent of the bargaining committee," Grebey said. "It doesn't express the policy of the Board of Directors of the Player Relations Committee."

Grote is offensive star in Royals win

Associated Press

Jerry Grote, who was playing softball in a bank league a year ago, made his reputation as a defensive stalwart as starting catcher for the pennant-winning New York Mets in 1969 and 1973.

ON WEDNESDAY night, he made his mark on the Kansas City record book as an offensive star with seven runs batted in, including a grand slam homer, as the Royals outlasted the Seattle Mariners 12-9.

In other American League games, California bombed Toronto 17-6, Cleveland topped Boston 4-1, New York blanked Baltimore 2-0 in 11 innings, Oakland swamped Chicago 8-3, Texas beat Minnesota 6-3 and Detroit defeated Milwaukee 4-1.

GROTE DROVE in two runs with a double, one with an infield single and four more with the second grand slam of his career, off Ken Clay in the fifth inning, giving him the single-game Royals RBI mark.

Rich Gale, 4-3, was the winner while rookie Bryan Clark, who entered the game with a 2-0 mark and a 2.15 earned run average, took the loss, allowing seven runs in 41-3 innings.

Angels 17, Blue Jays 6

Rick Burleson, Dan Ford and Brian Downing were the big guns in California's 19-hit attack against Toronto.

Burleson was 5-for-5 with three RBI, Ford knocked in four runs and Downing blasted a three-run homer, while Rod Carew and Butch Hobson pitched in with three hits apiece. Geoff Zahn snapped a personal three-game losing streak.

Yankees 2, Orioles 0

Graig Nettles gave New York its second straight extra-inning victory over Baltimore, both coming on two-run homers in the 11th inning.

Dave Righetti and Ron Davis shut out the Orioles — who got their lead-off man on base seven times — on nine hits, with Davis allowing one in the final three innings for his second victory in four decisions.

Indians 4, Red Sox 1

Toby Harrah doubled his home run production for the season with his third and fourth to pace Cleveland over Boston.

Harrah hit a two-run homer in the second inning, scored a run on Tom Veryzer's single in the fourth and homered again in the sixth.

Tigers 4, Brewers 1

Steve Kemp homered, Richie Hebner doubled in a run and Kirk Gibson and Lynn Jones hit sacrifice flies to pace Detroit over Milwaukee.

Dan Schatzeder, 3-3, who retired 13 Brewers in a row after yielding two first-inning hits, had a shutout until the ninth, when Gorman Thomas doubled and scored on Don Money's single.

A's 8, White Sox 3

Wayne Gross slammed a three-run homer and Brian Kingman scattered seven hits to give first-place Oakland its second straight victory over Chicago, which fell to third in the West.

Rickey Henderson singled and Dwayne Murphy walked to start the game, and Gross hit his fifth homer to give the A's a 3-0 lead before Francisco Barrios had retired a batter.

Rangers 6, Twins 3

Bump Wills knocked in three runs with a triple and a single, Buddy Bell homered and Rick Honeycutt won his fifth game in six decisions to lead Texas over Minnesota.

It was Honeycutt's second victory of the season over the Twins and improved his lifetime record against them to 8-2.

Candlestick winds yield to Pastore

Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds have been complaining of late about the brutal winds at San Francisco's Candlestick Park. But when Frank Pastore pitches, the wind always seems to blow Cincinnati's way.

"I SURE do well here," said the Cincinnati pitcher after Wednesday night's 6-2 victory over the Giants. "Can anyone tell me why? I just don't know. All I know is I've got a 4-0 record with four complete games in this park."

Leading the Cincinnati offense, as he has been most of the season, was Dave Concepcion, who had three hits and drove in two runs to boost his RBI total to 40 for the season.

Ron Oester opened a two-run rally in the first for the Reds with a double off Vida Blue, 5-4. Oester took third on an infield hit by Ken Griffey and scored on Foster's single. Concepcion followed with a single that loaded the bases and Griffey scored on a sacrifice fly by Ray Knight.

CONCEPCION DROVE in a run in the fifth with a double, giving the Reds a 3-1 lead. They added a run in the sixth, when Dan Driessen scored from third on a wild pitch, and two more in the seventh, one of them on Concepcion's 18th double of the season.

Pastore allowed a run in the first on Jack Clark's RBI single and another in the seventh on Dave Bergman's homer.

Braves 4, Dodgers 2

Brian Asselstine homered, doubled and singled to back the four-hit pitching of Phil Niekro and Rick Camp as Atlanta defeated Los Angeles.

Asselstine hit his first homer of the season, a two-run shot, in the first inning when the Braves knocked out loser Burt Hooton, 7-2. Dale Murphy also homered in the first inning, his sixth of the season, to help the Braves take a quick 3-0 lead and score their evental winning run.

Niekro, 4-3, allowed only a two-run homer to Pedro Guerrero in the fourth inning before needing Camp's relief help in the eighth.

Mets 6, Phillies 2

Rookie right-hander Greg Harris allowed just two hits over seven innings and New York took advantage of some loose Philadelphia fielding to beat the Phillies.

Philadelphia's Pete Rose had two singles and now needs only eight more hits to break Stan Musial's National League record for career hits of 3,630.

Cardinals 3, Expos 2

Orlando Sanchez tripled to open the 11th inning and scored one out later on Tommy Herr's single, leading St. Louis over Montreal. Sanchez's wallop and Herr's game-winning hit came off Elias Sosa, 1-1, the fourth Montreal pitcher.

Bruce Sutter, 2-3, picked up the victory by pitching the final three innings for St. Louis.

Pirates 3, Cubs 2

Jason Thompson smacked a two-run pinch homer in the eighth inning off Randy Martz to lift Pittsburgh over Chicago.

The Cubs had taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the eighth when Hector Cruz had blasted a two-run homer off Pirate starter Jim Bibby. But Thompson, hitting just .157, batted BATTING — Jerry Grote, Royals, drove in a club-record seven runs with a grand-slam homer, a two-run double and a run-scoring single to lead Kansas City to a 12-9 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

PITCHING — Dave Righetti and Ron Davis, Yankees, shut out Baltimore 3-0 on nine hits for 11 innings, with Davis getting the victory with three innings of one-hit ball to take over the American League lead in strikeouts with 57 in only 40 2-3 innings.

No more tape-delayed NBA finals

Later start will take playoffs past tv 'sweeps'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The often-shaky image of the National Basketball Association has received a welcome boost from CBS' announcement that it was fading out its tape-delay telecasts of the playoff finals.

The move, announced at the league's annual summer meetings this week, came as no surprise to insiders.

WHEN THE league announced in February that it was pushing back the start of next year's schedule by 20 days, that moved the playoffs beyond the May "sweeps" period during which ratings determine commercial rates. And the only reason CBS had relegated the NBA to tape-delay telecasts in the first place was that its affiliates did not want to bump prime-time programming during the sweeps period.

Herb Gross, vice president of CBS Sports, admitted that, had the NBA not changed its schedule to push the finals beyond the sweeps peroid, the network would not have changed its tape-delay policy. And regardless of how attractive next year's early round playoff matchups might be (such as Milwaukee-Philadelphia and Philadelphia-Boston this year), since they'll take place in May, they won't be shown in prime time.

BUT NO matter. Having its championship decided on tape-delay had given the NBA a minor-league image, and league officials are happy that all games of next year's finals will be shown live.

Unfortunately, the schedule change means next year's finals won't end until June 5 or so, by which time many people will be thinking about the beach rather than basktball. But that's the price the league had to pay to get the title series back on prime time, and to avoid opening its season in conflict with baseball's playoffs and World Series.

Television, and not just the network variety, was a key topic at the league meetings. Many team officials are convinced that the only way they will remain financially solvent is by cashing in big on the burgeoning cable TV market.

TOWARD THIS end, the league plans to engage a marketing reseach firm for "a major economic impact study" on how the NBA and its teams can best benefit from cable and pay TV, according to Milwaukee Bucks president Jim Fitzgenald, chairman of the NBA's television committee.

"We're just like everyone else in the telecommunications business when it comes to cable — we're all confused," admitted Fitzgerald. "I've been in the cable business 16 years and I still haven't figured it out. We're just trying to get a handle on it."

Some teams already have cable deals, many of them quite lucrative. Others have over-the-air "superstations" beam their games by satellite to cable systems around the country. Thus, teams like Atlanta, New York and Chicago get national exposure — and extra revenue.

THE SEATTLE SuperSonics are selling a unique cable package in which the customer will receive all 90 of next season's games — 82 regular-season plus eight exhibitions — for $120, which comes to $1.33 per game.

This has raised concern about the effect on attendance at the Kingdome. Why pay $12 for a ticket, or even $2 for a seat in the upper regions of the building, when you can watch it for less in your living room?

"Yes, it concerns us very much," said Ted Bowsfield, the Kingdome's stadium director. "It's the unknown quantity in professional sports today."

Campbell ends threat; will play Oiler football

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers running back Earl Campbell, after accepting some advice from blues singer B.B. King, has ended his threat to sit out next season if the Oilers did not give him a $6 million contract.

"I'D STILL like to get it, but if I don't get it here, maybe I can get it in the hereafter," Campbell told Houston sportscaster Barry Warner of KIKK-FM on Tuesday. "Whatever I deserve, the Good Lord is gonna see that I get it. If not here, then in the hereafter. That's what B.B. King said."

CAMPBELL, WHOSE contract was renegotiated last year by the Oilers to give him a possible $500,000 annual salary including incentive bonuses, had been pressing for a six-year contract at $1 million per year.

"Sure, I'd still like for some good to happen out of the deal, but sometimes you've gotta learn that money is not the most important thing in life," Campbell said.

Campbell said that since the Oilers loss in the 1980 National Football League playoffs, he has been working out daily.

WITT STEWART, Campbell's agent, could not be reached for comment, but said recently he was working on another phase of the renegotiation.

New Oiler Coach Ed Biles said he was not surprised by Campbell's decision.

"I'VE BEEN saying Earl would be there all along," Biles said. "Earl and I have a very good relationship. I knew he'd be with us. I suppose I had confidence in Earl's ability to recognize his obligation. He knows right from wrong.

"I've talked to Earl quite a bit. He knows what our plans are and I think he's excited about the season. I know he's working out awfully hard, just like most of our players," he said.

Cowboys route Miami

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Oklahoma State is on a roll. In two College World Series baseball games, the No. 3 Cowboys have belted 32 hits and scored 20 runs.

"For the past seven or eight games we've been on a roll," said John Cardinali, OSU third baseman who drove in the eventual winning runs in a 12-6 whipping of second-ranked Miami, Fla., in the Wednesday night winner's bracket semifinal.

The loss sends 61-9 Miami against No. 4 ranked Texas in Thursday night's elimination game to feature the nation's two first team All-American pitchers. The Hurricanes will go with 16-0 lefty Neal Heaton against 17-1 right-hander Tony Arnold for the 59-10-1 Longhorns. That game will follow the 45-14 South Carolina matchup with 46-16 Mississippi State.

Mexican fishing hotter than summer weather

Believe it or not Mexico fishing is hotter than the weather in the summer months. If you can stand the heat, you can catch a lot of braggin' size Mexican bass.

Take Lake Dominguez for instance. This lake is located on the west coast of Mexico, 40 miles inland from Los Mochis and situated four miles from the tiny Mexican town of El Fuerte.

The lake level in the summer months are down at their lowest level. This plays an important factor in locating large concentrations of bass. The months of June, July and August are prime months for catching large bass at Dominguez.

MANY SPORTSMEN don't take advantage of this fishing due to the exteme heat. However, heat conditions are not nearly as bad if very little humidity is present. You might compare the summertime conditions at Lake Dominquez to that of Texas' Big Bend country.

All experienced Dominguez fishing guides enjoy the summer months. They all agree fishing is at its best. They like to fish shorelines early of morning and late in the evenings with topwater baits. When the bass are really taking topwater baits, it's the finest fishing going. Best topwater baits are the chugger type baits and the suface buzzin' baits. It's not uncommon for anglers to snag two bass on one lure. The fish are very aggressive at Dominguez and topwater fishing can provide a lot of angling entertainment.

AS THE day progresses, the Mexican guides resort to locating deepwater bass holes. Plastic worms are the only bet. It's not uncommon for a boat of three anglers to fish one hole and pull out 40 to 50 bass averaging three pounds. And there are some six and seven pounders to boot!

Fishing conditions aren't bad either. You will usually fish from daylight until about 11 a.m., take a siesta in an air-conditioned room for two or three hours, then return to the lake for late evening fishing. Most any angler can take the heat for those few hours.

For more information on fishing Lake Dominguez, you may contact Joe Don Scott, P.O. Box 1180, Plainview, 79702.

LAKE GUERRERO — You might not catch as many large fish at this huge Mexican lake as, say, Lake Dominguez, but numberwise, you can load the boat. Fishing conditions are basically by the same means and methods as Dominguez, but topwater fishing remains good throughout most of the day. Guerro fishing guides resort to fishing in and around hydrilla patches. Topwater lures, mostly buzzin' topwater baits, work well, even near mid-day. If, for some reasons fishing slows on topwaters, they resort to fishing deep, dark holes with plastic worms and deep-diving crank baits.

For more information on Guerrero fishing you may contact: Hacienda Alta Vista, P.O. Box 2186, Harlingen, 78550.

DON MARTIN — This lake has no motels, lodges or conveniences, but it's loaded with bass. Elroy Krueger, one of Texas' finest bass fishermen who resides in San Antonio says, "Don Martin could be the finest bass lake in the world."

He fishes the lake, located 160 miles south of Eagle Pass, in the summer months. He says the fishing this summer should be prime. The lake is full of water and the fish are fat and sassy. "I like to fish spinnerbaits over drowned mesquite trees and topwater baits over moss beds," Krueger said. "It's very possible for me to catch more than 100 bass per day, and we're taking about big bass. I've never caught a bass from Don Martin over eight points, but I believe there are in there", said Krueger.

SUGAR LAKE —One of the oldest lakes in Mexico still produces some nice catches of bass, but recent reports say fishing is extemely slow. In May, the fishing has been bad. The lake level is dropping at an alarming rate. While this is happening, fishing is slow. If the Mexican government gets enough water and will stablize the water level for a period of time, Sugar Lake should regain some spunk. But until this happens, better stay away from the lake.

Jimmy Conners concentrates on returning a service during his match Wednesday against Argentine Jose Luic Clerc at the French Open. Clerc upset the second-ranked Conners 4-6, 7-5, 6-0 to gain a spot in the semifinals.

Upsets highlight French Open

PARIS (AP) — Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia completed an upset victory over American John McEnroe 6-4, 6-4, 7-5 today for a place in the semifinals of the French Open tennis tournament.

The match began Wednesday night and Lendl won the first two sets, but McEnroe led 3-2 in the third when rain halted play.

McEnroe, seeded No.3, briefly led when play resumed today on the center court of Roland Garros stadium. Leading 30-0 overnight, he won the first two points to break service for a 4-2 lead. Then he held his own service with the loss of only one point and led 5-2.

But Lendl, the No.5 seed, broke back and closed the gap to 4-5, driving every shot deep to the baseline.

Two games later McEnroe, 21, dropped his service again. He tried going forward, but sent a backhand volley yards out of court, and then double faulted. Lendl, also 21, finished off the service break with a backhand return down the line.

The semifinals lineup pits Bjorn Borg of Sweden, the defending champion, against Victor Pecci of Paraguay, and Lendl against Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina.

Jimmy Connors, the No.2 seed, lost his chance to advance to the semifinals Wednesday when he was defeated by Clerc. They battled for four hours and 26 minutes before No.7-seed Clerc put it away 4-6, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5, 6-0.

In another major upset Wednesday, the No.2 women's seed, Martina Navratilova of the United States, fell to No.6 seed Sylvia Hanika, 21, from West Germany. Hanika completed her 6-2, 6-4 victory after the match had been halted Tuesday night by rain with Hanika leading 4-1 in the first set.

SHS leads NAIA golf

The Sam Houston State team posted a 290 score, followed by Texas Wesleyan College with 297. Wesleyan's defending co-medalist Danny Mijovic had the low round of 67, one stroke off the course record.

He and Sam Houston's Phil Estep, who scored 68, were the only two of the 173 golfers to better the course's par 71. The other defending co-medalist, Tommy Allbright of Sam Houston, shot a 78 on his team's home course.

Second-round play began on schedule Wednesday after rain and lightning delayed the first round twice on Tuesday.

Ten second barrier expected to be broken

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — This could be the week — maybe even the day — an American collegiate sprinter breaks the 10-second barrier in the 100-meter dash, said Mel Lattany of Georgia.

Lattany said he and Houston's Carl Lewis had a good chance to break the barrier today in preliminary heats at the NCAA Track and Field Championship.

LEWIS RAN a 10.0 100 meters earlier this season to establish the American collegiate record.

"The way Carl's been running and the way I've been running we could push 9.9," Lattany said after a light workout Wednesday evening.

Lattany's best time in the 100 meters this season was 10.04, which equalled the previous collegiate record set by Lennox Miller of Southern Cal in 1968.

Lewis has the second longest long jump in history. He soared 28-3¼, assisted by a wind, earlier this year.

Lattany said he respects Lewis and enjoys his company off the track, but he also said he is not awed.

"HE RAN a 10 flat and I ran a 10.04. Anybody can be beaten on any given day," he said.

The friendship, he said, ends when they step into the starting blocks.

"Nobody remembers the guy who came in second," Lattany said.

LPGA tour has new pot of gold

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — The ladies' professional golf tour has a new pot of gold.

McDonald's, sponsor of the $150,000 tournament starting today at White Manor Country Club, is putting up an additional $100,000 if the winner comes in first again next week in the LPGA Championship.

THIS BONUS for winning two straight tournaments has been used by the men, but it's the first time the women have had the opportunity at the "double dip."

Nor are Kathy Whitworth, who needs little more than $13,000 to become the first woman to earn $1 million on the tour, Cathy Reynolds, who won her first tournament two weeks ago, and Patty Sheehan, the 18th top money winner.

LOPEZ-MELTON is resting for the LPGA, Whitworth is passing the tournament, Little is in Florida being treated for an ailing back, Reynolds reports bronchitis, and Sheehan pleaded fatigue.

The tournament, however, has 15 of the top 20 women listed as starters, led by Amy Alcott, JoAnne Carner, Pat Bradley, Donna Caponi, Beth Daniels, Jane Blalock and Sandra Palmer.

There have been several back-to-back champions over the years, most recently three in 1980 — Carner, Alcott and Caponi. Blalock did it in 1979, and Lopez won five straight during a spectacular stretch in 1978.

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The troubled Chrysler Corp., which has not been in the black since 1978, has "a good shot at reporting a profit" in the second quarter of 1981, chairman Lee A. Iacocca said today.

"We've overhauled the entire corporation, improved all of our operations, and lowered our break-even point to nearly half of what it was just one year ago," Iacocca said in remarks prepared for the automaker's annual meeting.

"We will demonstrate our improvement when we announce our second-quarter results in July," he said.

The No. 3 U.S. automaker, which lost a record $1.71 billion in 1980 and another $298.4 million in the first three months of this year, has not reported a quarterly profit since the final quarter of 1978 when it earned $43.13 million.

But Chrysler's sales have been improving steadily in recent months and Iacocca's address to the stockholders came just one day after the company reported a 34 percent increase in sales for the month of May.

For the year, Chrysler's sales are 23 percent ahead of 1980 and, when Mitsubishi imports sold by Chrysler are included, have accounted for about 10.2 percent of the total U.S. market.

Chrysler had predicted 8 percent to 9 percent share when it presented its reorganization plans to the federal Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board. On the basis of those plans, the board gave its approval to a total of $1.2 billion in federal loan guarantees.

David Healy, an auto industry analyst with the New York firm Drexel Burnham Lambert, called Chrysler's May sales performance "respectable," although he noted the automaker had lost a little ground following a price increase announced in April.

In his speech, Iacocca outlined the measures Chrysler has taken to reorganize itself, including wage concessions from its employees, price concessions from its suppliers, capital spending cuts and white-collar staff reductions.

But he said the federal government must take a firmer hand in dealing with the country's economic problems if Chzy½lire auto industry are to recover from! the rion.

He said the government should put a lid on taxes, cut government spending and reduce the number of regulations affecting automakers.

Also at the meeting, Chrysler officials announced that stockholders had approved increasing the number of authorized shares of common stock from 120 million to 170 million.

The approval means each stockholder will get less of a share of any future profits. Without the approval, however, the automaker would have been in default on its federally guaranteed loans.

Stop-gap fare hikes sought for railroads

CHICAGO (AP) — With rail shutdowns looming for the already crippled Chicago-area transit system, a top lawmaker says he'll ask a federal judge to keep a major commuter line running until the Legislature can consider a stop-gap measure allowing railroads to raise fares.

The appeal by Illinois House Speaker George Ryan came as agitation over the Regional Transportation Authority's money woes, which already have affected 60,000 commuters, became more vocal.

One Chicago newspaper — the Chicago Tribune — called on readers to give "the boot" to politicians responsible for the crisis, and Chicago Alderman Robert Shaw called on the governor to resign.

"We need more time," Ryan said Wednesday in Springfield. "We need more time in an environment free of crisis and panic."

Ryan said he would meet today with U.S. District Judge Thomas McMillen to ask that the Milwaukee Road commuter rail line, which serves about 20,000 riders daily, be ordered to continue operations, at least during weekday rush hours.

McMillen oversees the Milwaukee Road's operations because the line has filed a bankruptcy petition over an unrelated matter.

A hearing before McMillen on the Milwaukee Road's plans to suspend service at 2 a.m. Saturday also was scheduled today. The RTA, which subsidizes railroad and bus lines in a six-county area, has filed a petition seeking to block the shutdown.

Other commuter railroads also have threatened to shut down as early as this weekend if no solution to RTA's money woes is found. Four suburban bus lines already have halted service and a fifth has slashed service by 25 percent.

Declining sales tax revenues and rising costs forced RTA to cut off subsidies to the bus lines and railroads last month. Most suburban bus lines depend heavily on the subsidies to keep running.

Ryan appealed for time so the House could consider a Senate-passed bill that would keep commuter railroads running by allowing them to raise fares to cover operating costs.

The Senate bill would permit commuter railroads to bypass the RTA and raise fares whenever needed to meet expenses, Ryan said. He said he would tell the judge the Legislature can pass the bill as a temporary bailout measure, and it can be enacted by Friday.

Gov. James R. Thompson, reached at a reception late Wednesday, told reporters he was "all for the plan" on a temporary basis. "We are going to solve this state's transportation problem, and we will give a square deal to everyone," he said.

Larry Long, a Milwaukee Road spokesman in Chicago, said the company probably would have to raise fares by about 50 percent during rush hours in order to keep its trains running. Other estimates of possible fare increases went as high as 75 percent.

Long said weekend service might have to be cut under Ryan's plan until a long-term solution could be found for the RTA's cash problems.

One of the bus lines that shut down, the Burlington Northern, filed suit Wednesday in Cook County Circuit Court against the RTA, seeking $2.4 million in overdue subsidies. It was the 10th lawsuit filed in Circuit Court by transit systems or private individuals seeking either overdue RTA subsidies or continuation of service.

Two other suits filed Wednesday sought to keep the Chicago & North Western commuter service in operation after this weekend. The suits were filed as class actions on behalf of the line's riders.

Also Wednesday, the Waukegan-North Chicago Transit Co. was granted permission by the Illinois Commerce Commission for a 70 percent fare increase. The Waukegan-North Chicago fare will be increased from 50 cents to 85 cent.

District judge issues restraining order

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Ship repair workers for private companies began showing up for work at the Swan Island repair yard after Port of Portland employees obeyed the orders of a U.S. District judge and removed their picket signs from certain gates at the port.

Acting on a request by the National Labor Relations Board, Judge Robert Belloni on Wednesday issued a temporary restraining order, saying the 83 striking port employees must confine their picketing to a port gate.

Nearly all work was stopped because employees of private companies repairing ships at the yard refused to cross picket lines at three gates used by the ship workers.

About 1,600 laborers were idled by the strike as five ships awaited repairs.

Port spokesman Darrell Buttice said about a dozen workers had arrived for the Wednesday night shift but that full operations probably would not begin until later today.

Meanwhile, the District Council of Trade Unions, which represents the strikers, filed an NLRB complaint charging that two companies, Northwest Marine Iron Works and Dillingham Corp., were acting in collusion with the port.

The two companies earlier this week filed lawsuits against 14 unions, charging that honoring picket lines of the port employees constituted an illegal secondary boycott.

The two companies had sought, through an NLRB complaint, to have pickets moved away from certain gates.

The strikers are the port's only employees at the repair yard. Negotiations have been going on since the old contract expired in June 1980.

The port wants to contract with private companies for work done by 12 of the strikers, and wants the pay for all 83 port employees brought in line with salaries of workers covered by the Pacific Coast Master Agreement.

Big Spring schedules 'Alice'

BIG SPRING — "Alice in Wonderland" will be presented by the Dallas Theatre Center in Big Spring's Municipal Auditorium June 16.

The production will be done by the center's MimeAct. The founder and director of the troupe is Robyn Flatt, actress, director and designer who has been a member of the Dallas Theatre Center resident company since 1962. Ms. Flatt received her training from Juana de Laban, Etienne Decroux, Angna Enters, Hanya Holm and Martha Graham.

At the Theatre Center and on tour, MimeAct has presented "Lady Liberty," "Grimm's Fairy Tales," "Raggedy Ann and Andy" and "Interweave." MimeAct also has performed in children's hospitals and schools.

With the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, the group has created "Hansel and Gretel" and "Peter and the Wolf," as well as "The Love of Three Oranges" with the Richardson Symphony Orchestra.

One of MimeAct's most popular undertakings has been its series of free performances in the Dallas city parks, sponsored by the City Arts Program division of the Dallas Parks and Recreation Department. During the past five years, The Park Bench Plays have grown in popularity.

Dallas Theatre Center tour is made possible in part through support of the Texas Commission on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts. The Big Spring production is sponsored locally by Spring City Theatre and tickets are available either at the door or by calling 1-263-2321.

Woodward to attend New York conference

Sam Woodward, manager of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, will be among those attending a conference sponsored by the New York University School of the Arts in New York City Friday through Sunday.

The conference will be devoted to a scrutiny of the future of the performing arts in relation to cable television. It marks the first time that representatives of opera, theater, dance and music as well as producers, directors, marketing experts and cable television executives have addressed the issues of cultural programming through cable television in a systematic, comprehensive manner.

Among the performing arts groups to be represented are New York's City Center Opera, the New York Shakespeare Festival, Pacific Northwest Ballet, Alvin Ailey Dance Theatre, Chicago Lyric Opera, Cleveland Orchestra and Arena Stage of Washington, D.C.

Speakers and discussion leaders include Les Brown, author and editor-in-chief of "Channels of Communications;" Charlotte Jones, head of marketing for CBS Cable; Lou Moore, president of ELM Video Theatre; Michael Bronson, head of media production for the Metropolitan Opera; and Arthur Whitelaw, head of the Theatre Division of Home Box Office.

Panelists include John Gault, president of Manhattan Cable; Vivian Horner, vice president of Warner Amex; and John Goberman, producer of "Live from Lincoln Center." Research analysts from Neilson and major pay channels will also be represented.

Jerry Jeff to perform at Six Flags

ARLINGTON — Six Flags Over Texas will stage its second annual All-Night Armadillo Party Saturday with operating hours for the event from 10 a.m. Saturday to 4 a.m. Sunday.

Featured entertainer for the all-night affair will be country music entertainer Jerry Jeff Walker. Walker achieved popularity with such hits as "L.A. Freeway" and "Up Against the Wall." He also wrote the popular song "Mr. Bojangles."

Other special activities during the event will include armadillo races, starting at 5 p.m. in the Good Time Square, quick-draw competition with the Six Flags gunfighters, hat-stomping and belly-bumping contests. Fireworks will be at 9:30 p.m.

Seating for the Walker show and guest participation in the various contests will be on a first-come-first-serve basis.

Humperdinck plans visit

EL PASO — Englebert Humperdinck will perform in concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the Grand Hall at El Paso Civic Center.

Tickets are priced at $9, $12 and $14. For more information call Ticket-Master at 1-532-4661.

The movie will go into production in early June in Utah. It will cover a period of less than 20 years, including the courtship of George Osmond and Olive Davis, who was 18 in 1944 when they met.

Brand New Opree set

ODESSA — Odessa's Brand New Opree, held at the Globe of the Great Southwest, will feature Sessions as the house band Saturday.

Also appearing will be yodeler Hal Goodson of Midland, Janie McPhearson, Melody and Chere Tone and First Corinthians, a local gospel group. The host for the evening will be Jim McCray.

Admission is $3 for adults, $1.50 for students and senior citizens and $1 for children under 12. Tickets may be purchased at the Globe ticket office prior to the 8 p.m. performance.

Jackson to star

Franklin J. Schaffner will direct from an original screenplay by Norman Steinberg.

Midland Theatre plans Monday open house

Midland Commmunity Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., will hold an open house from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday.

Tours of the facility will be given and the behind-the-scenes activities of one of the areas most active arts organization's can be observed firsthand.

The first rehearsal of this year's Summer Mummers's melodrama, "Treachery on the Thames," will be in progress. Class in tap and jazz dance will be on-going as well as an acting class for the experienced actor. In addition, volunteers will be building the set, props and costumes for the Summer Mummer extravaganza.

All those attending the MCT open house will have the opportunity to get involved in either the Summer Mummers' show or a future MCT production.

Tours will begin and end in the theater's main lobby where refreshment will be served. For more information call the theater's business office at 682-2544.

ENTERTAINMENT

Two good plays showing in Permian Basin theatres

Midlanders currently have the opportunity to see two good plays being presented on stage in the area.

Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., is now staging Ernest Thompson's "On Golden Pond," which won the Broadway Drama Guild's "Best Play" Award in 1979. The play is humorous with many funny lines and deals with the subject of aging and love.

The cast includes Glen Thomason, Pat Griffith, Gloria Stephenson, Jim Hicks, John Phillips and Don Stroud. It is directed by the theater's executive director, Don Bachmann.

For more information or to make reservations for "On Golden Pond" call the box office at 682-4111.

The Country Squire Dinner Theatre, east of Odessa on Highway 80, is presenting Neil Simon's "Come Blow Your Horn." This funny comedy, which deals with growing-up and out-growing, stars Doug McClure, Michael Cornelison, Nathan Adler, Helen Ackerman, and Permian Basin residents Sidney Armentrout and Delores Blackwell.

For more information or to make reservations for "Come Blow Your Horn" call the box office at 563-4111.

Each production has a strong cast. Cast members carry their lines effectively and portray their respective roles with enthusiasm and conviction.

Beatle Celebration set

HOUSTON — The Southwest's first official Beatles Celebration will be held in Houston June 13-14 from noon to midnight each day at the Galleria Plaza Hotel.

Since 1974, Beatlefests have been held annually in New York, with Chicago and Los Angeles hosting Beatlefests for the last five years. A Beatlefest is the official convention of Beatles fans of all ages.

Entertainment will be continuous in six seperate ballrooms of the Galleria Hotel. The complete concerts of the Beatles at Washington Coliseum in 1964, Shea Stadium in 1965, Tokyo in 1966, their feature films "Help," "Yellow Submarine," "Let It Be," "Magical Mystery Tour," promotional films such as "Hey Jude," "Revolution," "Penny Lane," "Strawberry Fields Forever," "Junior's Farm," "Instant Karma," "Crackerbox Palace," "Only You," "Mull of Kintyre," "True Love," "Hey Baby," "Silly Love Songs," "Ding Dong," "Beatles Cartoons," "Newsreels" and "Documentaries" will be shown during the two-day fest. The Beatles' first performance on the Ed Sullivan Show will also be shown.

Both evenings' entertainment will be highlighted by a live concert by Liverpool, a Beatles sound-alike band from New York.

Also included in the fest will be over 20 hours of Beatles video in three screening rooms, panel discussions, contests, sing-a-longs, a Beatles Flea Market and Beatles Museum.

Over the past seven years, Beatlefest has raised almost $20,000 for various Bealtes chosen charities. This year, at each convention, the money raised will go to John and Yoko's Spirit Foundation. The money is raised through charity raffles and dealer donations.

Tickets are available through Ticketron for $9 each day or $16 for both days. Tickets may be purchased at the door the day of the show for $9.50 daily. For more information call 1-713-789-6886.

The remaining conventions will be held Aug. 14-16 in Chicago at the Hyatt Regency Chicago; Sept. 25-27 in New York City at the N.Y. Statler; and Nov. 28-29 in Los Angeles at the L.A. Bonaventure. For more information about the remaining fests call 1-201-666-5450.

NEW YORK — Jewels from the estate of Mrs. Leigh Block of Chicago will be among the jewelry auctioned by Christie's of New York, 502 Park Ave. The two session sale, organized by Francois Curiel, Christie's vice president for jewelry, will take place at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The most important single stone to be auctioned is from Mrs. Block's estate. It is a rare diamond of the finest water which was probably mined in the now extinct Golconda diamond fields in India and is expected to bring over $300,000. It is a unique example of the Cartier Panther series.

Among the other 38 pieces from the Block estate are three particularily fine sapphire and diamond pieces by Van Cleff and Arpels. The highest pre-sale estimate is for a ring set with an octagoncut sapphire of 24.85 carats which is estimated to bring up to $300,000.

A very rare pair of pear shaped cabochon sapphire earrings with a gross weight of 82.25 carats may bring up to $150,000 while another unique piece to come up for auction, an invisibly set flower brooch, is estimated to bring between $50,000 and $60,000.

Recent auctions in New York as well as Geneva, have shown a strong desire for Art Deco jewelry, particularly for pieces designed by Cartier. This auction will include several examples of this type of work.

For collectors of more modestly priced jewelry a good range of cogarette cases, evening bags and jeweled watches will be offered. A yellow gold and diamond evening bag by Bulgari may bring up to $15,000 while a rare art deco lady's gold and black enamel wristwatch by Cartier is expected to bring between $8,000 and $12,000.

This sale may be previewed Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m., Monday by appointment only and Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. On Sunday a walk-around will be conducted by Curiel at 1:30 and 3 p.m.

Round Top Festival slated

Saturday will mark the fourth appearance of the Houston Symphony at the festival and the introduction in Texas of the American-born conductor, Gerard Schwarz. Pianist will be Dick, founder and director of the festival.

Saturday's program will include Copeland's "El Salon Mexico," Rachmaninoff's "Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini, Opus 43," and Brahms' "Symphony No. 4 in E, Opus 98."

The final concert of the weekend will be a chamber music program with student artists and faculty Sunday at 4 p.m.

Sixteen performances are scheduled weekends in the five-week festival period, including chamber orchestra, chamber music and solo recitals. Artists appearing for the first time are Peter Zazofsky, top prize winner in the 1980 Queen Elizabeth Competition; Weilerstein, first violinist of the Cleveland Quartet; cellist Rejto; pianist Mrs. Weilerstein; and the 1981 first prize winner of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition will perform June 19.

Other soloists include Jeannette Haien, Eugene Rowley and Patricia Zander, pianists; Isidor Saslav, violinist; Yehuda Hanani, cellist; James VanDemark, double bassist; Thomas Bacon, French horn; Leon Fleisher, conductor and pianist; and the Texas Festival Chamber Orchestra.

Seminars will be given by Robert Finn, music critic of The Cleveland Plain Dealer; Paul Hume, music critic of The Washington Post; John Dewards, general manager of the Chicago Symphony; and musicologist Carl Schachter.

Performances are presented on the Mary Moody Northern Pavilion stage, one of the largest outdoor facilities in the United States. Other concerts are given at the William Lockhart Clayton guest house, both in the outdoor courtyard and in the indoor parlor.

Round Top is located on Route 237 between Austin and Houston. For more information call or write Lamar Lentz, P.O. Box 89, Round Top, Texas, 78954, 1-713-249-3129.

Another Cuban was added to the list Wednesday, said prison spokesman William Noonan. One man has refused food for a week,

Noonan said a detainee must refuse food for 72 hours before being considered on a hunger strike.

Music Teaching workshop planned by NTSU faculty

DENTON — "The Art and Craft of Instrumental Music Teaching," a workshop designed for elementary and secondary school band directors, will be held Monday through June 12 at North Texas State University.

Dr. Roger W. Warner of the NTSU music faculty and Dr. James O. Froseth of the University of Michigan will conduct the workshop. They will introduce participants to new audio and visual teaching procedures and diagnose and assist in correcting problems in instrumental music performance.

Fee for the workshop is $60. Reservations and information can be obtained by contacting the University Center for Community Services at NTSU. For $85, participants can earn an hour's extension credit for the workshop.

Ballet presenting world premiere

HOUSTON — The Houston Ballet will present the world premiere of "Peer Gynt," choreographed by Ben Stevenson, Houston Ballet's artistic director. The performances set for today through Sunday mark the close of the 1980-81 season.

Sets and costumes were designed by Peter Farmer, with music arranged by John Lanchbery from the Edvard Grieg score and lighting by John B. Reed.

Stevenson has been working on "Peer Gynt" for seven years. He initially began the project while at the National Ballet and it is his first original, full-length ballet created especially for the Houston ballet.

Tickets are available by calling 1-713-227-2787.

Conoco Inc. schedules wildcat test

Conoco Inc. of Midland will drill the No. 1 James A. Drane Jr. as a 16,500-foot wildcat to test the Wolfcamp. The Reeves County project is located 660 feet from the north line and 660 feet from the east line of section 158, block 13, H&GN survey 3 1/2 miles southeast of Berhalen.

The test is approximately 4 miles northwest of the depleted multipay No. 1 Eloise Waters et al which was drilled to a total depth of 14,073 feet and 19,000 feet northwest of the No. 1 Ikino which was plugged dry and abandoned at a total depth of 11,250 feet.

Libya cuts crude oil prices

By FLOYD NORRIS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — American motorists heartened by recent reports of a glut on the oil market have some more good news — several oil producers reportedly have decided to slash prices, likely meaning lower costs at the gasoline pump.

Wednesday's reported reductions by two members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and one American producer came on the heels of a $4 per barrel cut on Mexican heavy oil the day before and were expected to signal more crude-oil price cuts.

Among those that reportedly decided to cut prices Wednesday in the face of falling consumption and a growing oil glut was Libya, a militant OPEC member previously opposed to any price reductions. Libya has charged $41 a barrel, the world's highest price, for its best oil.

But Platt's Oilgram Price Reporter, a trade publication, said Wednesday a contract was being offered for Libyan oil at $36.

Iraq, whose oil exports are growing as its war with Iran slows, shaved 57 cents off its price by reducing pipeline fees, bring per-barrel prices to $36.93. The reduction was disclosed by a government official in Japan, a major Iraqi customer.

And Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), the largest producer of oil on Alaska's North Slope cut its price by $2, reducing the price to about $33 a barrel. There are 42 gallons in a barrel.

The Platt's report surprised some companies that buy oil from Libya, and a senior trader at one company said he doubted it was accurate. Several companies said the reported deal, providing 50,000 barrels a day of oil for the rest of 1981, had not been offered to them.

Libya and other high-priced oil exporters have come under increasing pressure to cut prices — by oil companies and from Saudi Arabia, which charges the least for oil among OPEC members at $32 a barrel.

Saudi Arabia, which has helped to cause the worldwide oil glut by keeping production high, tried to persuade OPEC members at a meeting last month in Geneva to set a common price for oil. But Libya and other high-price producers balked.

"We told them (the Libyans) we just couldn't keep buying at that price," said an official for one major company whose contract to buy Libyan oil is expiring. He said Libya had not yet offered to reduce its price.

A Libyan price cut, therefore, could be seen as a way of forcing other major producers to follow suit.

"This probably means we're going to see a round of (price) cuts," said Ernest McClelland, a senior editor at Platt's. He predicted Libya "will be dropping their price to everyone. They'll have to."

Libya has been producing about 1.6 million barrels of oil a day, more than 20 percent below production last year, as its high prices have driven some customers away. The United States gets about 500,000 barrels a day from Libya, the nation's fifth-largest foreign supplier.

Gasoline prices in the United States have been slipping since March as drivers cut back on consumption and supplies mount. The new cuts in crude oil prices "will continue the competi...ve pressures that have been building up," said Kenneth Haley, an economist with Standard Oil Co. of California. "I think reductions are likely to continue."

Memo warned of friction

HOUSTON (AP) — A 1977 memo warning of friction between quality control inspectors and construction workers at the South Texas Nuclear Project has been introduced at a hearing over the protests of a lawyer for Houston Lighting & Power.

HL&P attorney Jack Newman objected vigorously to the admission of the memo as evidence Wednesday, saying intervenor lawyer Robert Hager had laid no legal foundation for its authenticity.

Intervenors who oppose granting the utility a permit to operate the $2.7 billion project introduced the memo at a Nuclear Regulatory Commission hearing.

Committee wants Texas to set new standards

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An advisory committee wants Texas' top elected officials to consider statewide standards for all new buildings — including homes — and tax breaks to persuade Texans to save energy.

The Advisory Committee on Energy Efficiency also went on record Wednesday as favoring possible legislation — rather than regulatory agency action — to help the poor with rising utility costs.

The committee possibly was thinking of proposed federal budget cuts in recommending state funds for such programs as those that provide money for low-income people to insulate their homes.

Committee members overrode a builder's protest that they were favoring a "Big Brother state" in recommending statewide energy standards for in new buildings.

"I don't want you to think the Texas Association of Builders is against saving energy," said C.L. Reeves, Austin. "What we're basically afraid of is being regulated to death."

Reeves said he objected to a "Big Brother state that says 'thou shalt!' "

He said he oposed a single building code "for an outhouse in Podunk City and a 15-story office building in Houston, Texas. It gets to be a quagmire and an anthill. Every locale should be allowed to adopt its own ordinance."

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, committee chairman, said, "I fear that if the committee takes a hands-off approach" cities would seek new industry by advertising they had no building ordinances. "That's something we would want to avoid," he said.

Reeves cast the lone vote against a recommendation that the Legislature endorse statewide minimum energy standards for buildings. Cities would be required to enforce the standards by local ordinance.

Armstrong said the building recommendation and others will be submitted to theTexas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council — TENRAC — on June 24.

A subcommittee chaired by Alan Erwin, former public utility commissioner, recommended encouraging utility companies to submit an analysis of conservation programs along with proposals for rate increases.

The subcommittee also recommended that if the Legislature feels utility rates are too high for "some ratepayers," it should consider setting up social welfare programs to resolve the issue and not depend on rate structures, such as life line rates.

"Utility rate structures should not be used to subsidize the energy costs of low- and fixed-income ratepayers," the subcommittee said.

Susan Dirks, Austin, submitted a minority report to encourage the Public Utility Commission to develop "conservation programs aimed specifically toward the low income residential user."

She and Reeves clashed over her recommendations, including a proposal that utility regulatory agencies consider requiring electric utility companies to investigate spending money on conservation as a possible alternative to building new plants.

"I don't think one person's opinion should represent a mass unless it really does," objected Reeves.

"It is the opinion of many consumers in the state," responded Ms Dirk, the consumer representative on the committee.

Her motion to submit the minority report to TENRAC was approved by the committee, with only four of the 14 committee members present voting "no."

The committee also recommended that the Legislature give all political subdivisions taxing power to operate transit authorities, regardless of population.

Other advisory committee recommendations included:

— Temporary property tax exemptions as an incentive to make energy-efficient building improvements.

— State funds for cities to start energy planning and management programs.

— Authorizing local governments to require ordinances that would promote the use of solar energy. Armstrong said Port Arthur already does this.

— State funds for low-income persons to make their homes more energy-efficient.

— A law that would allow any political subdivision or recognized transit authority to participate in the Public Transportation Fund.

The committee said TENRAC should sumit to the Legislature report every two year on energy conservation.

Land board approves actions

AUSTIN — The School Land Board has approved an application by Border Exploration Co. to pool for gas 180.41 acres of state land and 523.59 acres of privately owned land in the Howe, South Field in Pecos and Ward counties.

Border plans to drill an Ellenburger test well with a permitted depth of 14,800 feet in the 1801 Amigo-State Unit.

Participation is based on surface acreage and the royalty was set at one-eighth and one-fifth.

Border also was denied an application to pool 5.66 acres of state land and 698.34 acres of privately owned land in the 17-1 Amigo-State Unit in the same field.

****

The School Land Board has approved an application by Getty Oil Co. to pool for gas 166.84 acres of state land and 537.16 acres of privately owned land in the Section 12, Block C-26, PSL Unit in the Brunson Ranch Field in Loving County.

Participation is based on surface acreage and royalty was set at one-sixteenth.

Getty is currently completing the well for the proposed unit in the Morrow Formation. The well blew out several months ago after completion in the Atoka Formation.

Shell Oil signs Thai contract

HOUSTON (AP) — A Shell Oil subsidiary has paid a $1 million signature bonus for a contract allowing eight years for exploration of 6.5 million acres in Thailand, Shell reported Wednesday.

If the Pecten Thailand Co. is successful in its explorations, the contract allows the firm 30 years of production.

Shell said Pecten expects to begin seismic work within three months and start drilling operations by the end of the year.

Housewife does computer work

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

KINGSTON, Okla. (AP) — Norma Posey works for an Oklahoma City bank but her office, complete with easy chair, washer, dryer, television set and computer terminal, is in her home, 150 miles away.

"If there had to be a guinea pig, I'm glad it was me," Mrs. Posey, a computer programmer and analyst for Liberty National Bank and Trust Co., said in a recent interview.

Her office is in the den of her home in this southern Oklahoma town near the shores of Lake Texoma. Next door, her husband Gene operates a welding business.

"I can just get out of bed and walk to the den and I'm at work," said Mrs. Posey, who has worked for the bank for 18 years.

It's a lot easier than when she lived in Moore, an Oklahoma City suburb, and battled the traffic to and from the office every day.

And there were the night calls.

"If there was some sort of problem, I'd have to get out of bed, get dressed, drive 1 miles tothe office, clear up the problem, drive home, get back in bed and try to get a little sleep," she said.

Now, if there is a problem at night, she pulls on a robe, sits down at her computer console — it looks like a TV with a typewriter keyboard — and works the problem out.

"I try to work a normal 9-to-5 job," Mrs. Posey said. "But the other night, I got called about 11:30 p.m. I worked for over a half-hour to clear up the problem, so I'll just take 30 minutes off some day when I want to go shopping or something."

"There are three computers at the bank, and my terminal is hooked up to one," she explained. "I can communicate with that computer, or with the other people who work in that department."

The Poseys decided to change their lifestyle after spending at least two weekends a month, summer after summer, at Lake Texoma "and meeting the friendly people around here," Mrs. Posey said. They grew to love the area so much, they decided to move here.

Mrs. Posey intended to look for computer work in towns near the lake but then came her going-away party at the bank.

"Someone — I'm not sure who it was, one of the auditors, I think — spoke up and said, 'Why don't you take a computer with you?'"

There were some giggles at first, she said, but the idea caught on with the bank's officials.

Among the first visitors after the Poseys arrived were a computer serviceman from the bank, who installed her terminal, and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. workers who wired it to the telephone line.

"The telephone people said they had never done anything like that before, but they did it real quick and without any problems," she said.

Her job is to maintain and change programs in the bank's computer.

"If a change has to be made in the program, my bosses at the bank will call me or send a written request," Mrs. Posey said. "I can write a new program or make changes in current programs right here at this terminal."

Liberty National does the data processing for about 80 Oklahoma banks, including some in this area. "The computers work 24 hours a day, seven days a week, all year long," she said.

A courier service goes to the member banks after the close of business to pick up the data processing information, she said, and take it to Liberty, where the work is done overnight.

Mrs. Posey said she sometimes misses seeing her co-workers, "but I wouldn't trade places with them for anything.

"My family likes having me at home with them. We get to spend time together that we would otherwise spend going in separate directions.

"And if I have a particularly long program to run, I can dump a load of clothes in the washer while it's running," she said.

Young boy strikes gold delivering sweets to rigs

At an age when city kids are setting up lemonade stands, the young farmboy has set up shop at a 100-foot oil drilling rig, catering to the crew's love of sweets.

Almost daily, after returning from third grade classes in nearby Lindsay, population 40, Mark bakes a batch of cookies and cupcakes to sell to the oil workers for a quarter apiece.

His savings account has grown to over $65 since the rig arrived earlier this spring. The profits, minus 10 percent for the church, will help pay for two summer camps he plans to attend.

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, June 5, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those born on this date have a special need for change, challenge and vigorous action! In the months just ahead, you will not have to worry about work being monotonous. The outlook for business, career is promising, and you will have several brand-new projects to tackle. Co-workers and friends will have a greater influence than family members on your financial affairs. Where investments are concerned, be careful not to put all of your eggs into one basket. Get-rich-quick schemes should be given a wide berth. Romance is fulfilling for those who know what they want.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get away from the crowds and relax—a visit to the seashore can be pleasant and productive. If vacationing, keep track of expenses so you do not run short of cash.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A financial surprise is a happy one! Share the good news with loved one. Romance may become more serious now. Real estate transactions can be highly profitable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day for making business offers and signing contracts. You are now able to consolidate gains made in the past. Insist that your boss live up to his or her promises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Travel plans come into focus following discussion with family member. A small windfall will help ease the financial burden. You must move with the times to advance your career.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may want to visit a place of special interest today. Higher-ups could have other priorities. Avoid conflict by adopting a practical attitude.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A busy work day lies ahead. Important conferences may be part of the picture. Dress conservatively but smartly. Welcome a visitor from a foreign country; enjoy the comfort of your home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A lucky day for finalizing agreements and signing contracts. Others are willing to go along with your plans. New business markets open up. Domestic problems lessen.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A great day for anyone involved in sales. Make amends to someone you may have slighted. Do not worry about the extra expense. Tend to older person's needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Distant affairs require careful handling. Influential people may insist on having facts and figures before giving their financial support. Have them handy!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make certain insurance policies are up-to-date. Mate or partner's cooperative attitude makes difficult tasks seem easier now. Show your gratitude in meaningful ways.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You receive news about an interesting career move. Someone overseas may provide the key to understanding certain bewildering events. Sales and real estate transactions deserve careful scrutiny.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Self-discipline is a must when trying to sort out your priorities. Fulfill any promises made to small fry. Romance holds great promise if you are patient.

Opening lead: Nine of ♡.

There is more than one way to lose a finesse. Sometimes a finesse can fail and you will still show a profit, as this hand illustrates.

The bidding is shown as we were told it occurred at the table. We like North's jump shift to three clubs, but feel that three hearts would have been adequate at his second turn. However, there is no disputing the fact that the final contract was a good one.

West wisely led a trump. We venture to guess that most declarers would win, draw the last trump and then try the diamond finesse. This loses, and let's assume that West returns a club. Declarer wins and cashes his remaining high diamonds. If the suit breaks 3-3, declarer will be able to discard a spade on the thirteenth diamond and make his slam.

Unfortunately, diamonds divide 4-2, so declarer has to fall back on a spade finesse. When this finesse also fails, declarer is left bemoaning the fates.

The expert technician realizes that if the diamond finesse is going to succeed, he does not need it! He wins the opening trump lead in dummy, cashes the ace and king of clubs, and ruffs a club with a high trump. Next, he cashes the ace of diamonds before drawing the last trump.

Now declarer leads a low diamond from the table. If East has the king and goes up, declarer gets a spade discard on one of his diamonds. So East will have to play low and declarer's jack wins. Declarer gets back to dummy with a trump to lead another diamond, and the contract is home.

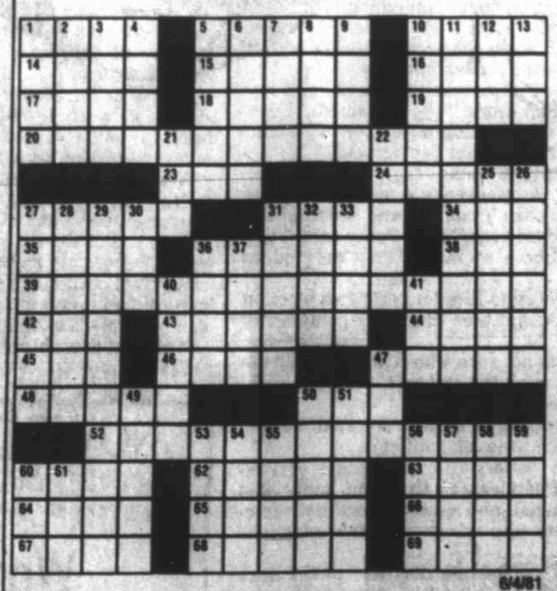

As the cards lie, West wins the king of diamonds, but he has no safe exit. A spade is into declarer's tenace, and a club gives declarer a ruff-and-sluff.

But what if West has a diamond exit? Declarer still makes the slam if diamonds are 3-3 or if the spade finesse succeeds.

Bible, ring presented

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Air Force Col. Thomas E. Schaefer, one of 52 Americans held hostage in Iran for 14 months, was given a surprise when he returned to his alma mater — a Lehigh University class ring and leather-bound Bible to replace those taken from him by his Iranian captors.

The presentation of the Class of 1953 ring and Bible by Air Force ROTC student-cadets and the alumni association was made Tuesday at Lehigh's 113th commencement.

"I'm just enthralled...tickled to death," said Schaefer, who said his own ring and Bible were taken by Iranian militants three weeks after they seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4, 1979.

"I have lived in an environment where just opening a door and walking out into the fresh air was denied for over 63 weeks, where free conversation with a fellow American was denied 5½ months, and where living with a fellow human being was denied for over 100 days," Schaefer told the Lehigh graduates.

Schaefer said he spent much of the 444 days he and the other Americans were held hostage singing all of the church hymns and Lehigh songs he could remember.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The First Family will be represented at the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer by Mrs. Reagan, the White House announced.

Nancy Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate, said the president had decided not to attend. It will be Mrs. Reagan's first trip abroad as wife of the president.

"I'm very happy and flattered to be asked and I am excited at the prospect of being present at such an historic and romantic occasion," Mrs. Tate quoted Mrs. Reagan as saying.

PARIS (AP) — Astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen, who piloted the space shuttle Columbia for its maiden space flight last April, visited the 34th Paris Air Show at Le Bourget Airport.

They were greeted Wednesday at the U.S. Pavilion by its director, Richard E. Cohen, who showed them the exhibits that will be open to the public Friday through June 14.

Young and Crippen then were given a standing ovation by the participants in an international aerospace symposium organized by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics.

The two astronauts will meet at Le Bourget on Saturday with Soviet cosmonauts Valeri Riumin and German Titov, together with French test pilots Patrick Baudry and Jean-Loup Chretien, who are training in the Soviet Union for an upcoming Soyuz mission.

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — To avoid disturbing patients at a nearby hospital, country-western singer Mickey Gilley has agreed to move his Fourth of July picnic for as many as 10,000 whooping cowboys from his famous nightclub to the city's secluded fairgrounds.

Religious leaders, who presented a petition bearing the signatures of 1,112 opponents to the City Council, also argued the festival would tarnish the moral fiber of this Houston suburb.

"Pasadena would be just fine if Gilley's burned down," said Ron Briggs deacon of Allendale Baptist Church.

Mayor Johnny Isbell told the council Tuesday night the decision by Gilley and club co-owner Sherwood Cryer to hold the picnic at the Pasadena Rodeo Grounds represented "an open effort to get along with the community."

Only 46 remain in spelling bee

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-six youngsters toed the mark again today, the survivors of 120 who began the 54th National Spelling Bee.

The first day of competition Wednesday started slowly with only 30 youngsters eliminated in the first three rounds.

Youngsters scurried through hallways, eyes buried in spelling books. They studied them at breakfast and lunch, and still they found they just didn't know every word.

Meanwhile, Jill Hurley, 13, of Denver, Colo., sought to maintain a brief tradition, as the last two winners have been from the Mile High City.

She, too, made it through the first day, spelling "tamale," "abusively," "quaternion," and "hawthorn."

Sometimes, scientific terms were the undoing, as in "pelagic," which means living in the ocean. Scott Allen McDermott, 12, of Mayfield, Ky., spelled it "pillagic," to become the eighth youth eliminated.

Words that sound like something else also caused problems. Tiny Claudia Mueller, 10, a West German native now from LaPorte, Ind., thought the word was spelled "toxin." But it should have been "tocsin."

And there were the foreign words to trip the unwary, such as "campanile," meaning a bell tower. Jeff Tomlin, 14, of Rochester, Ind., spelled it "campenili."

Bridgit Clarke, 13, of Grand Rapids, Mich., also was caught off guard by foreign pronunciation, offering "docea" when asked to spell "dossier."

Religious terms also felled contestants, with Andrew Hamel, 12, of Houston offering "novina" for "novena," and Richard Schultz, 14, of Grafton, N.D., misspelling "synod" as "sinedd."

The youngsters who made it to the finals here are the top spellers from an estimated 8 million entrants in local bees sponsored by 118 newspapers across the country and in Mexico, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The winner receives a trophy, $1,000 and other prizes and there are also prizes for the other contestants.

HAPPINESS IS....

As for Philip, an angel of the Lord said to him, "Go over to the road that runs from Jerusalem through the Gaza Desert. So he did, and who should be coming down the road but the Treasurer of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace the queen. He had gone to Jerusalem to worship at the Temple, and was now returning in his chariot, reading aloud from the book of the prophet Isaiah.

The Holy Spirit said to Philip, "Go over and walk along beside the chariot!" Philip ran over and heard what he was reading and asked, "Do you understand it?"

"Of course not!" the man replied. "How can I when there is no one to instruct me?" And he begged Philip to come up into the chariot and sit with him! The passage of Scripture he had been reading from was this: "He was led as a sheep to the slaughter, and as a lamb is silent before the shearers, so He opened not his mouth; in his humiliation, justice was denied him; and who can express the wickedness of the people of His generation? For His life is taken from the earth."

The eunuch asked Philip, "Was Isaiah talking about himself or someone else?"

So Philip began with this same Scripture and then used many others to tell him about Jesus. As they rode along, they came to a small body of water, and the eunuch said, "Look! Water! Why can't I be baptized?"

"You can," Philip answered, "if you believe with all your heart." And the eunuch replied, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

He stopped the chariot, and they went down into the water and Philip baptized him. And when they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, and the eunuch never saw him again, but went on his way rejoicing.

There are ways to counter violence

By V.H. KRULAK
Copley News Service

The attempt on the life of the pope is a symptom of an international sickness. It is a sickness, moreover, that the world has not addressed with sufficient seriousness.

Less than seven weeks before the tragedy in St. Peter's Square, the American people had been shocked by the blood of their president and three fellow citizens on a Washington sidewalk -- the work of an assassin. And, in those ensuing seven weeks the record of what the United States -- severally and collectively -- has done to curb the terrible sickness is a poor record indeed.

Certainly, we, in this country, can do little to prevent a violent attack on the pope in Rome, nor to curb murderous violence in Paris, Manila or Buenos Aires. But we can do a lot to thwart and discourage terrorism here at home and it is time we set about doing it. Fortunately, we have the tools if we will but use them.

While the terrorist who gunned down the pope and two other innocents at the Vatican declared that he was not interested in life, most such men have no desire to die. It is this human hunger for survival that gives us the weapons to meet terrorism with actions they understand.

Do you believe that swift justice is a deterrent to crime? If you do, there has to be a sense of fearful revulsion at the procession of delays and legalistic maneuverings that accompanies every case of violent conduct today. Rules, procedures and judicial customs all focus inordinately on the rights of the accused while the rights of the people, the rights of the aggrieved, take second place.

The practitioner of violence has to take comfort in the knowledge that today's system is fine-tuned to protect him against the actions of his victim, rather than the reverse. The Constitution did not intend it to be that way and there is no reason for us to tolerate it now.

Do you believe that the death penalty has a place in deterring acts of premeditated high crime?

If you do, there must be deep moral misgivings in theknowledge that scores of vicious murderers -- open practitioners of terror -- are patiently taking their ease inprison, awaiting the day when they may be considered for parole.

Affronts to society like Sirhan Sirhan, convicted assassin of Robert Kennedy, and Richard Speck, Chicago murderer of eight nurses, are both soon to be parole-eligible.

It's the current system, but it doesn't have to be. The Supreme Court has stood behind the death penalty. Despite that fact, some state governments and courts have blocked its application, often in the face of popular sentiment favoring it.

Do you resent the fact that violent and vicious conduct often takes refuge behind the fact that the perpetrator is technically a minor?

Considering the number of senseless and bloody crimes committed by minors the time has come where major crimes of violence should automatically, and as a mandatory matter, be tried and punished as if committed by adults.

Do you believe that bail should be allowed or withheld based on the prospect of the prisoner doing something dangerous if set free?

The federal government does. Some states do not. The man who tried to assassinate President Reagan was turned loose in Nashville without any consideration being given his propensity for violence if freed. If he had been kept in jail instead of being awarded bail of $62 -- which he quickly forfeited -- he would not have been at the Washington Hilton with a gun in his hand.

Most think SS should be changed

Hearst Special News Service

Washington--Most Americans are aware that the Social Security system is in "financial trouble" and believe it ought to be changed, the 600,000-member National Federation of Independent Business said Wednesday.

Releasing findings of a nationwide poll, James D. McKevitt, director of federal legislation for the California based-association admitted that proposals to alter Social Security are like a "political hot-potato."

"They are moving like a giant chain letter between the administration, members of Congress, and the American public," he said.

McKevitt said the administration and Congress are aware that Social Security is in serious trouble but are "sharply divided on the proper course of action" to remedy the financially failing system.

He said that the NFIB is interested in taking the "third party" position in the dispute, and it hopes to develop a framework "from which politicians can proceed."

Wilson S. Johnson, president of the association, argued that a "split system" is the only equitable approach, with one part "a true retirement program funded by payroll taxes, and the other an expanded program funded by from general revenues."

Teamsters gather to elect Williams

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Roy Lee Williams' election today to a full five-year term as president of the Teamsters was considered inevitable despite his troubles with the Justice Department and a Senate subcommittee.

Under convention rules, each of the 2,200 delegates would have to be polled separately in the event that Peter Camarata, the challenger from Teamsters for a Democratic Union, refused to step aside. The process could take several hours.

In a grand jury indictment resulting from a Justice Departent investigation, Williams, 66, was charged with conspiring to bribe Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., in a 1979 land transaction at about the time the Teamsters was fighting legislation to deregulate the trucking industry. Williams called the charge "a damned lie" and said that Cannon has denied it as well. Cannon was not charged.

On May 21, the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee issued a report that accused Williams of being a tool of organized crime and suggested he was unfit for high union office. The Senate panel urged the Labor Department to seek Williams removal from office if the Teamster leader refuses to answer the panel's questions about his alleged ties to organized crime.

Williams, who became interim president of the union upon the death of President Frank Fitzsimmons earlier this year, declared before the Teamster convention on Monday that those allegations are not worthy of a response.

The TDU also is mounting a challenge to the union's No. 2 officer, Teamster secretary-treasurer Ray Schoessling, whose election also is a foregone conclusion. Schoessling is being challenged by Jack Vlahovic of the Teamsters' Vancouver, British Columbia, local.

During a midday break in deliberations on constitutional amendments Wednesday, Camarata called a news conference in which he charged that Teamster international vice president Jackie Presser "unleashed his squad of thugs to roam around the convention gallery, buildings and grounds to intimidate reform delegates and supporters ...."

When asked if he had anything to do with the circulation of flyers assailing Camarata's political beliefs and his qualifications for the presidency, Presser said he knew nothing about it, "but it's time someone spoke up about the TDU."

Camarata also said that in convention floor debates Tuesday, "reform delegates were shouted down, prevented from speaking, and had their mikes turned off on them."

TDU delegates were booed and jeered when they rose to push for creation of an internal ethics practices committee.

Judge won't seal Billie Jean King file

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Superior Court judge who several years earlier sealed a court file in the Patty Hearst Shaw case has refused to do the same in the controversial suit filed against tennis star Billie Jean King by her former lover, Marilyn Barnett.

"I think the order of that nature is unconscionably broad and would be absolutely contrary to everything the (court) system stands for," Judge Earl F. Riley said at a 30-minute hearing Wednesday, refusing to order the files sealed.

The sealing was requested by N!rry is star's husband and business manager, who is also a defendant in the lawsit filed April 28 by Ms. Barnett, a 33-year-old paraplegic hairdresser who said she lived with Mrs. King in the early 1970s. Mrs. King supported her husband's request to seal the files.

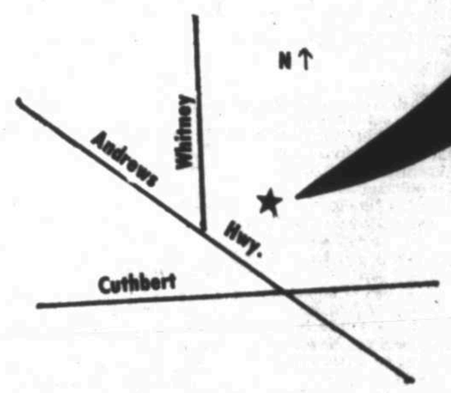

Henry Holmes Jr., King's lawyer, said his client already has lost $200,000 in potential earnings because of publicity about the lawsuit. He added that scrutiny by the press of future dispositions or other information about King's finances and relationship with his wife could "ruin his career, marriage and personal life."

Attorney Joel Belway, representing Mrs. King, claimed the tennis star had lost $600,000 in potential earnings because of the suit. He also argued that the suit and publicity surrounding it have placed a "tremendous strain" on the couple's marriage.

But Riley concluded that, "These people are in the public eye and while people in the public eye would like to have certain of their actions kept private, I understand that is precisely the kind of people the public wants to know about."
