Kidnap victim buried alive for four days

BURIED ALIVE
...Michael Baucom

SANTA FE, Texas (AP) — A man entombed by kidnapers for four days says he thought he would die in 10 or 15 minutes if he ever fell asleep inside the wooden box in which he was buried.

Police have three men in custody and are searching for a fourth. They also fear another man may have been abducted Sunday.

Michael Baucom, 21, was abducted shortly before midnight Tuesday and buried alive early Wednesday in a remote East Texas oil field. He was rescued about 5:30 a.m. Sunday.

Baucom told a news conference Sunday night said he was forced to lie in his own waste, was bitten by insects, and poked by nails driven through the lid of the coffin-like box.

His abductors, who demanded but never got $75,000, left him with only a Coke bottle full of water to drink and a loaf of bread to eat. He drank the water, but ignored the bread.

"It's hard to believe that somebody would treat another human being like that, but I guess that's why, they're really not human beings themselves," Baucom said Sunday night.

Authorities, however, said today they feared a second man may have been abducted shortly before they rescued Baucom from his grave.

Montgomery County Sheriff Joe Corley said deputies arrested Timothy Michael Connelly, 19, of Burlington, Iowa, early Sunday and he led them first to a campsite where they arrested Mark Oler, 21, and Deborah Williams, 29, both of Conroe, and then to a oil field where Baucom was buried.

Justice of the Peace James Buckner said the three were charged with aggravated kidnapping and held in the Galveston County jail on bonds of $100,000 each.

A fourth man eluded capture and may have abducted a Houston Chronicle newspaper carrier, commandeering his car to escape, said Corley.

Buckner said he issued an arrest warrant Sunday charging Ronald White, 40, of Santa Fe, with aggravated kidnapping.

Police Lt. Mike Barry said White, a former employee in an electronics company founded by Baucom's father, was still at large and was considered "armed and extremely dangerous."

Corley said the fourth suspect might have abducted Coby Garland Hamilton, 27, a Houston firefighter who did not return to his Montgomery County home Sunday after delivering newspapers in North Harris County.

"He (Hamilton) called his wife and said he'd met a friend and they were going to Lufkin. But Mrs. Hamilton said her husband sounded strange and called authorities," said Sheriff's spokesman Ed deForest.

"No one has heard or seen him since. We're assuming, along with the FBI, that he was abducted since he was in the same area where the other three were arrested," deForest said.

Baucom said he was kidnapped by two men he had never seen.

"Someone knocked on the door and when I went to answer it I put my hand on the door handle and asked who it was. When the door swung open, there was a gun at my head and a rifle pointed at me," said Baucom.

He said he did not resist. "I did not want to give them any reason to take my life," said Baucom.

Barry said the kidnapers forced Baucom to tape-record messages to his family, tied his hands in front of him and then buried him in the box 31 inches wide, 25 1/2 inches deep and 8 feet 1 1/2 inches long.

"I must have said 'I love you' to everybody I knew at least a million times, feeling that I would die in 10 or 15 minutes if I ever fell asleep. I thought about my job, about how I would change if I ever got out," said Baucom.

"I prayed quite often for the welfare of myself and my family," he added.

He said his abductors were "courteous in a very professional manner. ... I was never harmed except for being buried."

Truck accident kills woman

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

A 19-year-old Big Spring woman died today from injuries received in an early morning car accident, police said.

Sabrina Marie Hatfield of 1012 E. 21st died about 2:15 a.m. — the second traffic fatality in Big Spring in two weeks — when the Chevrolet pickup truck she was riding in went out of control in the 100 block of Cedar, crashed through a fence and struck a tree and a residence, police said.

The driver, Johnny Ray Hash of 1504 E. 17, and two other passengers remain in stable condition at Malone-Hogan Hospital, a hospital spokesman said. David Scott Brooke, 23, of 1214 E. 17th and Mike Kreuse, 19, of 1506 Stadium suffered serious injuries and are in stable condition, a hospital spokesman said. Kreuse underwent surgery this morning, an emergency room nurse said.

The accident apparently occurred when Hash lost control of the vehicle as he turned onto Cedar from F.M. 700. The truck skidded into a curb on the north side of Cedar, struck a tree and crashed through a fence and into the side of a 1615 Indian Hills residence. Police said Hash was speeding when he lost control of the 1983 truck.

Services for Ms. Hatfield are pending with Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

She was born Aug. 27, 1963 in Big Spring. She grew up in Big Spring and attended Big Spring schools. She was employed as a clerk in medical records at Malone-Hogan Clinic and was a Baptist.

Survivors include her father and his wife, Bennie E. and Sandy Hatfield of Big Spring; her mother, Bobbie Evans of San Diego, Calif.; her stepmother, Jody Horn of Big Spring; a brother, Timothy Hatfield; three stepbrothers, George Robbins of Big Spring, Michael Dennis and Ron Dennis, both of Austin; her paternal grandfather, W.P. Hatfield of Ranger; her maternal grandmother, Hertha Walker of San Diego, Calif.; two half-brothers; and several uncles.

Focalpoint

Action/Reaction: Mail pick-up

Q. What is the rule concerning mail pick-up at homes?

A. On rural and star routes, mailmen are required to pick up mail if the flag is up, says Big Spring Postmaster Frank Hardesty. On routes within the city limits, they are not required to pick up mail, even if the flag is up, unless the mailman has mail to leave, Hardesty said.

Normally, the regular mailman on a route will collect regardless, he said. Hardesty said the rule was probably because city collection boxes are more accessible.

Unemployment rate rises in 1982

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

According to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission Big Spring's unemployment rate for 1981 was 3.5 percent, whereas so far this year the rate has averaged 5.6 percent.

The rise can be attributed to several things, but the hot and cold situation in the oil patch is the main factor.

During 1981 when the Permian Basin and Big Spring were in the midst of a boom in the oil industry and jobs were fairly abundant. The civilian work force averaged 14,690 persons for the year with 14,180 of that number having jobs. The jobless rate for the year averaged 3.5 percent or approximately 500 people.

Texas continued to enjoy a sunny economic climate while the northern states were in the throes of a recession and layoffs and high unemployment were common. And beginning in January of 1982 Big Spring saw a large increase in job immigrants from other parts of the country as the civilian labor force leaped from 14,543 in December '81 to 15,832 in January '82 — an increase of 1,300 people. The unemployment rate soared from 2.9 percent to 5.7 percent in just one month.

Unfortunately, in January the recession also began to creep into Texas leaving many, who were searching for employment, high and dry as a worldwide oil glut made it unprofitable for companies to drill for oil.

So far in the eight months of 1982 the civilian labor force in Big Spring has averaged 16,000, while the number employed has leveled out at 15,100. 1982 is averaging approximately 1,300 more people in the labor force and 923 more in the employment column. Big Spring has been able to absorb a large number of those seeking work, but with the oil industry slowdown it seems impossible that everyone coming here will find a job.

Latest figures released show the Big Spring jobless rate has stabilized at around 5.5 percent, which local TEC manager Gerald Damm says "is not that bad considering the labor force has grown that much."

Fair sets new record Over 23,000 view Howard County Fair

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

The 1982 edition of the Howard County Fair is now history, and more people than ever before participated in that history, according to attendance figures.

Howard County Fair president Paul Hopper released final figures for attendance at the six-day gathering Monday at 23,467. Approximately 7,080 of those counted attended Saturday night's edition of the fair.

"We promised you the biggest and best ever fair," Hopper said, "and we did it."

Hopper relaxed underneath his straw hat in the fair office, looking like a man who had spent a long week.

"We had a bigger and better carnival, a bigger steer show, a bigger lamb show, a bigger horse show, a bigger goat show, and more and better exhibits," he said. Rather than claim all credit for the betterment of the fair, he was quick to spread praise.

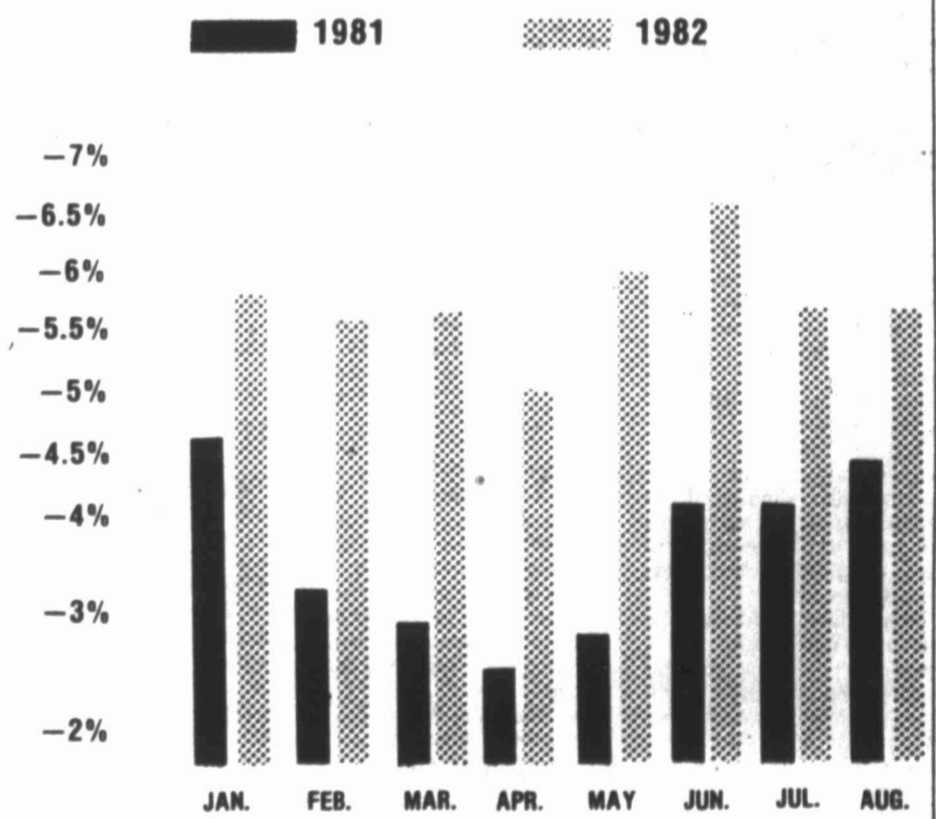

"It's only through the work of interested people that this can be done — that this can go on," he said. "I would like to personally thank our office secretary Janie Blizard, and directors Neil Fryar, Arnold Marshall, Smitty Smith, Jerry Phillips, Skipper Driver, Geraldine Posey, Howard Armstrong, Charles Phillips and Repps Guitler. Without these people, the fair would not be the quality that it is."

"We hope more people will volunteer their time and efforts so we can use the work this year as a springboard for a second decade of community service," Hopper said.

Hopper also thanked a list of people connected with the fair for ten years or more. Those who had been on the board for 10 years are Neil Fryar, Arnold Marshall, Bill Read and Delbert Donelson. Persons who have been with the fair for 10 years and are now on the board of directors are La Vern Gaskins, Skipper Driver, Geraldine Posey, Jerry Roman, Loyd Underwood, Howard Armstrong, Zula Rhodes, and June Nichols. People who have served with the fair in some capacity for 10 years include Reith Mitchell, Mrs. Neil Norred, Myree Soles, Bruce Wright, Bertie Shaw, Gail Earls, Lola Mitchell, Montey Bunn, Jen Davidson, Pearl Armstrong, Terry Patterson, Ireba Griffith, Mrs. Odele Womack, Mrs. J.F. Sanders, Mrs. Garland Morrison, Neva Clinkscales, Mrs. A.C. Moore, and Maurine Mendenhall.

Telephone system considered

By CAROL DANIEL, Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council is scheduled to consider buying a new in-house telephone system and to hold a public hearing on the 1983 city revenue sharing budget at its regular Tuesday night meeting.

A memorandum from the city telephone committee cited "numerous" equipment problems with the present system, advanced technology and both short and long-term cost savings as reasons for installing a new system.

The city presently has 13 trunk lines (total of incoming and outgoing) in its phone system, the memo said. "We have reached the point where it is often difficult to obtain an outside line from within the phone system," the committee said.

The committee — composed of City Finance Director Tom Ferguson, Personnel Director Emma Bogard and Assistant City Manager Paul Feazelle — recommends that the council approve specifications for a new telephone system and authorize advertising for bids.

Bid opening is scheduled for Oct. 19 and award of bids is tentatively set for Oct. 26.

The council will also conduct a public hearing and first reading of an ordinance adopting an interim budget for fiscal year 1983 that includes revenue sharing funds.

Other items on the agenda include:

- City board and committee appointments.
- Executive session to discuss personnel matters and action on matters discussed in the session.
- Final reading of an ordinance levying assessments for installing curbs and gutters on Wasson Road. The council decided at their last meeting to assess the cost in sixty equal monthly installments, the first payable a month after the improvements are completed approved by the council. The 59 other payments are due the same day each month after, bearing eight percent interest.
- Approval of specifications and authorization to advertise for bids for the new water office building. Architect Daryle Roberts will present plans and specifications for review and approval. Bid opening is scheduled for Oct. 20.
- Award bid for water and wastewater utilities chemicals for fiscal year 1983. Public Works Director Tom Decell recommends bids be awarded to Russ Chemical Co. for aluminum sulphate, Dixie Petro Chemical for Liquid chlorine, Austin White Lime Co. for hydrated lime.
- Final reading of an agreement to lease building 5, .43 acres of unimproved land, .61 acres of improved ramp area and five rooms of building 1106 to Mullins Equipment Co.

Pilot in Midland crash carried extra passenger

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A Louisiana Corrections Department official said today that the pilot of the department plane that crashed at Midland could be suspended or fired for allowing an unauthorized passenger aboard.

Mike Martin, undersecretary of the department, also dismissed as "sour grapes," a charge by a former department employee that pilot Alex Sheets is incompetent.

Meanwhile, Sheets was in critical condition in a Lubbock, Texas, hospital with second- and third-degree burns over 40 percent of his body after the Friday crash.

Martin said at a news conference that a family member was told by Sheets Sunday night that one of the engines on the twin-engine Beechcraft went out moments after he took off from Midland Airport.

The plane, ferrying two prisoners to Louisiana, slammed into an apartment building, injuring five people and setting the complex ablaze. One of the injured was on the ground.

The two prisoners, George Gibbs and Burnell Bell Jr., are in satisfactory condition in a Midland hospital, Martin said.

Ken Hornsby, a close friend of Sheets and the unauthorized passenger on the flight, was in critical condition with burns over 70 percent of his body, said Martin.

"There is great concern" about Hornsby being allowed on the flight, said Martin, who acknowledged that Sheets could be suspended or fired for violating regulations.

But, Martin called the news conference chiefly to respond to allegations by Donald Murray, a former department pilot, who called Sheets incompetent.

Over the weekend, Murray released a copy of a letter he wrote to aviation officials in July, in which he made the charges.

Murray was laid off in September because of budgetary problems, said Martin.

"But, Mr. Murray knew prior to writing the letter that he was losing his job," said Martin. "This is all sour grapes."

In the letter, Murray listed eight examples of why he thought Sheets couldn't handle his job, including an incident when "Mr. Sheets lost two prisoners in El Paso, Texas."

Sheets also started an engine of a plane that was grounded and flew on a trip with "flaps extended," said the letter.

In addition, Sheets left El Paso once without paying a fuel bill and on another flight, had a "boiling battery," said the letter.

"Of the eight incidents cited by Mr. Murray, only four had to do with flying," said Martin. "Mr. Murray hired Mr. Sheets and after the five-month probationary period, recommended that he be permanently employed."

"He listed these incidents as going back to October of 1981 but he never notified his superiors and we didn't find out anything until after he wrote the letter."

Meeting slated for finance board

By CAROL DANIEL, Staff Writer

The newly-formed Permian Basin Housing Finance Corp. — Big Spring's hope for low-interest, tax-free housing loans — is scheduled to hold its first board meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 20, according to City Manager Don Davis.

The HFC unites 13 counties and the city of Big Spring in a non-profit housing finance corporation, making them eligible for low-interest, tax-free housing loans should funds become available. The HFC was formed to issue mortgage revenue bonds (MRBs) on the local governments' behalf.

Assistant City Manager Paul Feazelle said the corporation's formation is "a shot in the dark" towards low-interest housing loans in Big Spring, "but its worth it if it comes through."

The doubts surface because the corporation is formed under a federally regulated program that determines a specific dollar amount of bonds that may be sold in the state as a whole, Feazelle said.

Thus, although funds are generated through local bond sales and not through the government, each housing finance corporation in Texas must apply for whatever percentage of that amount is needed in its designated area. A lottery, probably on January 2, will determine which of the state's HFCs will get a go-ahead for bond sales, Feazelle said.

"We just want to get a foot in the door. No funds from any of the entities will be expended" in the effort, Feazelle said.

Proceeds — a maximum of $33,738,000 — will finance the loans for single-family home buyers. The amount of money available to the Permian Basin was determined by a federally regulated formula based on population, Feazelle said.

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission has received documents from 11 out of the 14 entities that had expressed interest in the corporation, verifying their participation, Davis said. The other three counties' documentation should be received soon, Davis said.

Police Beat

Man reports assault

Police said they arrested five men this weekend on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. Those arrested were Ronald Hays, 21, of Route 3 Box 70; Gerald Cyfert, 34, of 2603 Dow; Gregorio Aguirre, 36, of 1500 Sycamore; Kyle Neighbors, 26, of 3225 11th Place; and Mario Gomez, 34, of 1503 W. First.

Police said Hays, Aguirre, Neighbors and Gomez also were cited for traffic violations.

Police reports also showed the following: Verner Stanhope of 1208 Mesquite said four white males entered his residence at 11:30 a.m. Saturday, beat his 16-year-old son with their hands and a club, kicked holes in the walls and damaged a shower door and a car windshield.

Maria Gregio of 1207 Madison said someone stabbed her 18-year-old son, Martin, in the right arm at Quatros Copas Lounge at 8:45 p.m. Saturday. Police said Gregio was taken to Hall-Bennett Hospital.

Jerry Wilson of Ocean Plaza Motel, 1106 W. Third, said someone stole a Zenith black and white television from his residence between noon and 7 p.m. Saturday.

Joy Fowler of 624 Caylor said someone stole a piggy bank full of pennies and a large can with an undetermined amount of Mexican and Canadian money from his residence between Sept. 15 and Saturday.

Sheriff's Log

Suspects released on DWI charges

Howard County sheriff's deputies said they arrested Katherine Mae Auwarter, 18, of 1709 Aylford, in connection with a county warrant for issuance of bad checks. Records show she was released after posting a $750 bond set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin.

Marl Daniel Roman, 20, of 4463 Armstrong, was released on $1,500 bond after being arraigned before Heflin on a charge of making alcohol available to minors.

The following persons posted $1,000 bonds each on separate charges of driving while intoxicated and were released: Kyle Lindsay Neighbors, 26, 3223 11th Place; Mario H. # Congress runs toward recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress, eager to recess for the November elections, will rush this week to keep money flowing to the federal government while staging some final pre-election rhetoric on the House and Senate floors.

In observance of the Jewish Yom Kippur holiday, the House is out of session today, and the Senate, although scheduled to meet, will not take any roll call votes.

But work begins in earnest Tuesday so that legislators, anxious to campaign full time back home, can leave town by Friday.

The most important chore this week will be enactment of a stopgap spending measure to keep money flowing temporarily to the government when the new fiscal year begins Friday.

The House already has passed such legislation carrying a Dec. 15 expiration date. The Senate Appropriations Committee is drafting its own version which carries a Dec. 22 expiration date, and action by the full Senate is expected to begin Tuesday.

Negotiators from each chamber will work out the differences between the two measures.

The funding bill is needed because none of the 13 regular appropriations bills necessary to provide money for government operations has been signed into law. Without a stopgap measure, the government technically would be without money at the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Congress will continue considering several of the regular appropriation bills this week, but work on the bulk of the money bills will wait for a post-election lame-duck session that congressional leaders say will begin in mid- or late-November.

Meanwhile, Democrats and Republicans are expected to snipe at each other over President Reagan's economic program, the condition of the economy and which political party is to blame for the nation's 9.8 percent unemployment rate.

Reagan has asked Congress to approve a compromise multibillion-dollar job training bill to replace the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act which expires at the end of the week.

Democrats support the measure, but they say it is no substitute for a $1 billion measure they are pushing to create 200,000 temporary public service jobs.

While the Senate works on the stopgap measure and other items held up during the filibusters over abortion and school prayer, the House will:

—Vote Tuesday on legislation to repeal the Reagan administration's economic sanctions against the Soviet natural gas pipeline. Republican Leader Robert H. Michel, whose central Illinois district has been hard hit by the loss of heavy equipment business due to the sanctions, has announced his support for the legislation.

—Consider a bill proposing the first major changes in the nation's immigration law in 30 years. A similar measure, establishing fines and jail terms for employers who hire illegal immigrants and granting amnesty to illegal aliens already living here, passed the Senate last month.

—Seek to pass legislation setting a national nuclear waste disposal policy. Three House panels have approved some version of the legislation, but their differences must be resolved so that a single bill can be brought to the full House.

National power failure possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's electric power systems are "highly vulnerable" to sabotage and the federal government has done little to improve the situation, a new study says.

"While electric power systems are very dependable, they are also highly vulnerable to damage from acts of war, sabotage and terrorism," said a General Accounting Office report scheduled for release today.

"Should the nation or a region suffer a major, long-term disruption... the consequences would most likely have national impact. Neither utilities nor state-local governments can reasonably be expected to effectively manage such situations," said the agency, the investigative arm of Congress.

The GAO noted past warnings about the inadequacy of contingency plans for electrical emergencies and said it found "little substantive progress made at improving federal... preparedness programs and plans."

In previous studies, the GAO said federal plans for managing electrical emergencies arising from war, sabotage or terrorism were "inadequate or non-existent."

In the latest report, the agency said the Department of Energy "has not developed nor has plans to develop national-regional electrical power contingency plans."

It said federal research into the matter "seems to focus only on the vulnerability of military activities to electrical disruptions and will not develop the type of contingency plans we believe are needed to respond to a major electrical disruption."

While the Reagan administration stresses its reliance on state action in an emergency, the GAO report says, "States are not capable of managing major electrical power disruptions of national consequence."

The agency reviewed the statutes of 27 states and discussed contingency plans with officials in 11 states.

Eskimos thought pilot crazy

DALLAS (AP) — Ross Perot Jr., the 23-year-old helicopter pilot trying to circle the globe in 30 days, says a village of Eskimos thought he and his co-pilot were spies, and the French thought the pair was crazy.

The Egyptians pointed guns at them. The Pakistanis made them apologize. Army officers in Burma almost arrested them.

"I really look forward to getting back to the United States where you can pretty much fly where you want to," Perot told the Dallas Morning News in a static-filled trans-Atlantic phone call from the Orient.

Perot, with co-pilot Jay Coburn, is more than three-fourths through his quest to become the first to circle the earth in a chopper.

Despite the foreign policy problems, Perot said the most treacherous part of the journey was a delicate landing atop a container ship in the North Pacific between Japan and the Aleutian Islands.

The landing was necessitated when the Soviet Union said "nyet" to Perot's request to enter Soviet airspace to refuel.

Perot set his chopper, a two-seat Bell 206 Long-Ranger dubbed "Spirit of Texas," on the deck of the American Presidents Line container ship President McKinley. The ship's owner is a customer of Perot's father's computer firm, Electronic Data Systems of Dallas.

"Getting across the North Pacific was the most critical part of the trip," said father H. Ross Perot Sr. "You have no idea how hard it is for a helicopter pilot to hit a moving target. They had to make sure they found that ship."

Dam bursts

BISHOP, Calif. (AP) — Muddy waters that pushed through an earthen dam and forced at least 800 people to flee their homes began receding today, but authorities warned that the danger had not passed.

"The water is just a little lower, but it's nasty," said John Ferguson, head of the California Department of Forestry in the Inyo-Mono County area. "It's still moving fast."

"There's danger to homes everywhere because of the constant erosion and the debris," he said.

At least 800 people were evacuated in Bishop and nearby Big Pine Sunday when the powerful surges of water in overflowing North Lake burst through an earthen dam built during the early 1900s.

Eight homes sustained heavy damage when the dam burst, sending Bishop Creek racing out its banks and into streets, gulleys and smaller creekbeds, Ferguson said.

No injuries were reported, and there were no official damage estimates.

Residents of the mountainous area 225 miles north of Los Angeles and 15 miles from the Nevada border — including people on two nearby Indian reservations — spent Sunday sandbagging their homes. There was substantial water damage to some homes on the reservations, said Ferguson.

Bishop Mayor Ron Kiston said the flood was the worst to hit Bishop, but added "It's not that devastating."

John Corwin said he was awakened about 6 a.m. Sunday to the sound of water outside his house.

State's roads need maintenance

Texans have long prided themselves on having the best highway system in the nation. But in the coming months they will be hit with appeals for support of much higher gasoline taxes — all to pay for new roads.

Supporters of the higher taxes say that the state needs to spend at least $2 billion, not the estimated $750 million, to pay for maintenance and expansion of the state's roads.

RIGHT NOW, TEXAS has the smallest gasoline tax in the nation — it's 5-cents-per-gallon. Twenty percent of that revenue goes to other expenditures than roads.

An increase in that tax would not be a frivolous waste. Good as they may be compared with other states, many of Texas' roadways are in need of replacement or significant repair.

There are still areas where better roads need to be built. For instance, Texas still has no good complete highway between Houston and Austin. Many metropolitan areas have terrible traffic problems because existing highways can't carry the load.

Dallas' Central Expressway (better known as Central Distressway) and Houston's entire freeway system approach the crisis stage.

PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION is not popular in Texas; the car is still our favorite means of getting around. An increased gasoline tax would not be inappropriate, and users should be the ones paying for the work.

It's not a great problem in West Texas, but a rough ride in other parts of the state, or a frustrating fight with traffic in the larger cities will likely make opponents of the tax more sympathetic.

Israel is blood-stained

WASHINGTON - The blood of the Beirut massacre is on the hands of Israel, and the stain cannot be washed away by the usual arguments of power politics and the double standard.

In conscience, Prime Minister Menachem Begin ought to resign. Failing that, he should at least try to cut Israel's losses by moving toward a settlement with the Arabs.

The killers, to be sure, came from Christian militia forces raised by the Phalange around Beirut, and by Major Saad Haddad in southern Lebanon. They had scores aplenty to settle with the Palestinians, including the murder of President-elect Bashir Gemayel. But the Israelis, having equipped and supported both Christian militias, knew that better than anybody else. By letting the killers through their lines to the Palestinian camps, the Israelis made themselves accessories to the crimes.

The whole course of recent events in the Middle East, furthermore, has been shaped by the Israelis. They first invaded Lebanon, next advanced to Beirut, and then entered West Beirut after the assassination. Those actions were not mere panicked responses to untoward developments. Lebanon, in that sense, has not been "Israel's Vietnam," or even a "quagmire." On the contrary, the Israelis have been seizing opportunities in a measured way. Each move was a connected link in a deliberate policy.

THAT POLICY, which early found favor in this quarter, has now ended in disaster. The aim was to shatter the Palestine Liberation Organization, and thus reduce the influence of the Arab radicals and the Soviet Union.

Then, the argument ran, it would be possible to rebuild a unified Lebanon, pry Syria loose from the Soviet grasp, strengthen the security of the Persian Gulf and — eventually — promote a settlement between Israel and the Palestinians. Events for a while did run in that direction. But Begin made it plain he would not go the distance by rejecting President Reagan's peace program. Now the chance of reconciliation has been drowned in a spasm of vengeful hatred.

In the process, the last line of Israel's moral defense — the double standard argument — has been breached. Other armies of other countries, of course, have allowed massacres to happen. But Israel is not just another country. Begin himself has insisted in season and out on Israel's special honor as a state bound by religious commitment and democratic principles. The Israelis asserted their claim to unique status anew by entering West Beirut as the keepers of laws and order. If they are now judged criminally deficient, it is by their own standards.

Many have long waited to cry shame against Israel, and their moment has come 'round. But it is no bad thing that they should rage at this point. For a lesson needs to be driven home, especially to the leaders of Israel. They are not supermen. They cannot accomplish everything by force. They cannot even control the passions of their own men and allies. "When blood is their argument," as Shakespeare put it, they cannot "charitably dispose of anything." Perhaps the howling will force the ouster of the Begin government. So much the better. A new regime under the leader of the labor opposition, Shimon Peres, would serve the general interests. But the more likely probability is that the present stir will first swell the ranks of the Israeli peace movement, and then beget a rallying of Israelis around Begin and his government. So it is not enough to cry woe and rend garments. New policies need to be framed so that the Middle East can pass from shipwreck to safety.

A FIRST STEP is bringing order to Beirut. Clearly, Israeli troops have to get out. The dispatch of the United Nations forces is impractical. That leaves as the right step redeployment of the multinational force of Americans, French and Italians. Indeed, it is clear, in retrospect, that that force should not have been withdrawn so hastily.

A second necessary step is withdrawal of Israeli forces from all of Lebanon. In that connection, sending the President's special ambassador, Philip Habib, back to the Middle East makes sense. But Habib can succeed only if there is a change in the Israeli approach. The right action now, as it has been for weeks, is a coordinated withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli occupation forces from Lebanon. In view of what has happened, however, the Syrians can hardly be expected to grasp Begin joyfully by the hand. On the contrary, the overture has to come from Jerusalem. It is up to Begin to show that he is a chastened leader who has learned from events and is now ready to live with the realities in the Middle East. For if he cannot adjust to those realities, he will be broken by them, and with him, the state of Israel.

Suspicion of Israel

WASHINGTON — White House suspicion of Israel has become so intense that President Reagan's top advisers are now wondering whether Prime Minister Menachem Begin is planning the eventual annexation of southern Lebanon.

Secret reports shown to my associates Dale Van Atta and Ron McRae indicate why the White House is disturbed. One secret State Department report, for example, had this to say on Sept. 15, as the Israeli invasion of West Beirut was proceeding apace: "There is a danger that Israel's 'logistical operations will evolve into permanent administrative agencies.'"

In other words, the suspicion is that Israel is in the process of building a military-civilian government for Israeli-occupied Lebanon.

The same pattern of Israeli infiltration that has been seen in the West Bank territories seems to be evolving in Lebanon. The ultra-nationalist extremist group, Gush Emunim, is planning to put Israeli settlements in southern Lebanon, according to U.S. reports.

If Begin follows his past action, he will not denounce these settlements for fear of criticism from hardline Israeli factions that are the bedrock of his political support. Instead, he will see that the bootleg settlements are hooked up to water and electricity to make them permanently viable.

The Gush Emunim and the Israeli Army's chief rabbi, Gen. Gad Navon, believe that God may be giving them southern Lebanon to compensate for Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai.

The chaplain's support would be a key element in transforming temporary military governments into permanent civilian bodies. Sensing an opportunity, Israeli businessmen are already beginning to establish themselves in occupied Lebanon.

A SIGNIFICANT historical note should be mentioned here. It adds fuel to the White House suspicions.

A former Israeli prime minister, Moshe Sharett, published an intriguing account in 1978 of a meeting of Israeli defense and foreign-policy officials. The meeting occurred 27 years ago, and quotes the late Moshe Dayan, then army chief of staff, as saying Lebanon was ripe for the picking.

"The only thing that's necessary is to find an officer, even just a major," Dayan said, according to the account. "We would either win his heart or buy him with money, to make him agree to declare himself the savior of the Maronite (Christian) population."

"Then the Israeli Army will enter Lebanon, will occupy the necessary territory and will create a Christian regime which will ally itself with Israel," Dayan reportedly continued. "The territory from the Litani (River) southward will be totally annexed by Israel and everything will be all right."

The Dayan scenario was followed to the letter — even to the choice of the cooperative Christian leader's military rank. Maj. Saad Haddad, a cashiered Lebanese officer, has been acting as Israel's puppet warlord in the Litani River area for years. THE SECRET Sept. 15 report predicted that Israel would try to bestow legitimacy on Haddad, possibly by insisting that he be included in any future Lebanese regime. His role in the massacres at the Palestinian refugee camps in West Beirut may have destroyed his chances, however.

Israel's covetous designs on southern Lebanon are explained in a top-secret CIA report, which states: "Hardliners in Israel have for years pointed out that Israel, by seizing territory up to the Litani River, would gain a more defensive border and a greater supply of water." In fact, Israeli engineers are already working at the Litani, exploring its potential for irrigation.

At the start of the West Beirut invasion, Begin assured Reagan in a private message that Israel "did not covet one inch of Lebanese territory." In early June, he had publicly declared in the Knesset that Israel didn't want "one square millimeter of Lebanese territory."

The White House no longer has faith in these assurances.

Footnote: An official of the Israeli Embassy said that Israel has "no intention of annexing any part of Lebanon or setting up any settlements."

I believe in astrology

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I know you have sometimes said that astrology is wrong, but I believe that astrology is a gift of God to help us to live better. Why do you think it is contrary to the Christian faith? — L.C.

DEAR L.C.: There is much interest in the occult today, including astrology. But it needs to be said very clearly that such things are explicitly forbidden in the Bible for those who are seeking to follow God. At times, the Bible mocks those who try to follow such practices, because they give no certain and secure guidance. (A look at the different predictions of different so-called astrologers for a given year will make this clear.) At other times the Bible strictly condemns such practices (such as in Deuteronomy 18:9-14).

Why is this? For one thing, astrology has its origin in ancient pagan religion, which sought to substitute the worship of gods which were false for the worship and service of the one true God. God, however, has revealed to us all we need to know and we can discover his truth by reading the Bible, which is his Word. We don't need to look to the stars for the answers to life's problems, because Christ has come to help us and save us.

Furthermore, the Bible tells us that God loves us and he wants to show his will to us every day as we look to him. I want you to notice that so-called fortune-telling (whether by stars or by some other means) almost always appeals to our selfish instincts, such as greed. We yearn to know what the future is, because we want to control it or take advantage of it for our own selfish purposes. But Christ calls us to follow him and live for him. We are to serve him, not ourselves.

Get your guidance from God. Learn to walk with him every day as you read his Word and apply its truth to your life in the power of the Holy Spirit. Then you will know the joy of Christ's presence and purpose in your life every day.

TV mutants

The new television season is upon us once more and nobody seems to care except the TV critics. Never before have I seen the critics so eager to rip into the menu of viewing that the networks are attempting to pass off as entertainment.

I haven't seen but a handful of the 25 new shows this year reviewed favorably. The rest are ripped and clawed into bloody shreds by columnists and critics whose job is to watch TV. The critics have already been driven into a twisted frenzy by such gems as LaVerne and Shirley and the Dukes of Hazzard, so it's no wonder they're ready to strike out at the medium which has subjected them to so much cruel and unusual punishment.

ONE CRITIC in Time Magazine who was so disgusted with the fall lineup said the biggest ratings winner this year will be Atari video game shows people can play on their sets instead of watching them.

Another called the new adventure shows "The Gold Monkey" and "Bring 'Em Back Alive" patterned after the hit movie "Raiders of the Lost Ark." "The Plain Old Turkey" and "Raiders of the Fast Buck," respectively.

The industry itself already is predicting that 13 of the 25 new fall shows will fail. Maybe this is a stupid question, but why put something on you know is lousy in the first place? In all likelihood these 13 shows will be replaced by even worse shows and the shows in the second wave usually stay on because the networks have nothing else left in reserve.

THE OTHER NIGHT on the Emmy Awards four or five shows garnered all the nominations, in fact in some categories one show received every nomination, which points up the weakness in programming. And out of those handful of shows, two are going off the air.

The networks are wondering why people are turning in droves to the special channels on cable that cater to movie buffs, music lovers and sports nuts. They only have themselves and their uninspired shows to blame. If the TV executives could only see how tired the shows about private eyes, wisecracking maids and cute kids are.

I cringe every week when I see the top ten Nielsen ratings showing inane and tired sitcoms ranking at the top. However, viewers are a fickle bunch as quality shows like "60 Minutes" and "Hill Street Blues" are also in the top ten. It appears box watchers will look at anything whether it be good or bad.

Viewers must still be watching the networks out of remote control from spending so many years in front of the set. It's just like any other bad habit. You still do it even though it isn't any good for you.

AFTER ALL these years of TV people have lost the art of conversation and forgotten how to read. So it's TV or nothing, and TV is getting close to nothing so we may be mutating into a hollow-eyed, out-of-shape physically and mentally race.

Hey, that might be a good premise for a new TV show. A show about TV mutants. Cute Gary Coleman could be married to voluptuous Lonnie Anderson and Rock Hudson could be their neighbor next door who just happens to be a private eye and they could all become mindless from too much TV and...

Dear Abby

Red head offered support

DEAR ABBY: The reader signed "Better Dead Than Red," who complained that because he was a redhead he "can't get a girl and felt like a freak," might be pleased to know that he was not the first young man to write to someone such as yourself with this problem.

Seventy years ago, Jewish immigrants often wrote to the Yiddish daily The Forward for help with their problems. Their letters were printed in a column called "Bintel Brief" (a bundle of letters). One letter, written in 1909, read as follows:

"I am a young man of 22 and have every reason to be happy, but I am unhappy because nature saw fit to give me red hair. Because of the color of my hair, I endure many insults in the shop and on the street. When I hear someone say to me, 'Hello, Red!' I am hurt and offended. I am unhappy and lonely and I've even consulted doctors about it. One of them advised me to dye my hair. Another told me not to do it because first of all it has a bad effect on the scalp and, second, the color would not be natural. I would be very happy if you could advise me. Respectfully, Unhappy."

The editor answered Unhappy: "A person is not valued by the hair on his head, but by what is in his head."

Abby, you might be pleased to know that today when teachers of history, such as myself, want to describe "Bintel Brief" to someone who has never heard of it, we say, "It was sort of the original 'Dear Abby.'"

Dr. Donohue

Liver ailment probed

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently, a male member of my immediate family was diagnosed as having primary biliary cirrhosis. As I understand it, this is a disease predominantly of women. Can you explain why he has it? Are there drugs that may cause this? Please share with me any information you might have regarding this problem. —J.L.

Primary biliary cirrhosis is a rare condition and it is mostly a disease of women. More than 90 percent of people who have it are females. I cannot explain why your male relative has it, and for that matter why it happens to anyone is somewhat obscure. One thought is that it is one of those illnesses in which the body begins to attack its own tissue, a form of self-allergy. In this case, it involves the bile ducts within the liver. Bile, as you know, is made by liver cells, then drains from there through a series of small channels called bile ducts. Those ducts join to form one large duct leading to the gall bladder.

In primary biliary cirrhosis the small ducts are destroyed, so bile cannot drain and accumulates in the liver. Scarring (cirrhosis) may occur. The person notices an itching sensation, a result of the undrained bile. When the accumulated bile gets into the blood, there is a yellowish cast to the skin (jaundice).

Other consequences stem from the problem. Because bile is needed to absorb vitamin D from the digestive tract, there may be a deficiency of that and bones may weaken, soften. Likewise, bile is needed for vitamin K absorption, and because that is an important part of the clotting process there may be bleeding problems.

You ask about drugs. There are none that we can use of actually causing the problem, but there are certain ones, like the birth control pill, that can make it worse. Those drugs need an intact liver to work and handle them properly.

In the absence of any specific cure for this illness, treatment is directed at alleviating the problems that come from undrained bile generally. Vitamin D and K supplements may be needed, and anti-itching medicines are sometimes helpful. And because fat requires bile for digestion, decreasing the amount of that in the diet can be a helpful part of treatment.

What can vitamins really do for you — and what can't they do? In his new booklet, Dr. Paul Donohue separates the common sense from the nonsense about this controversial health aid. For your copy of "Vitamins: Facts You Need To Know," send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611.

Florida twister kills camper

BASINGER, Fla. (AP) — A tornado swept down on a religious camp around dawn, killing one woman, injuring seven people and causing an estimated $200,000 worth of damage, officials said. A house, eight mobile homes and a church were damaged by the twister early Sunday, said Okeechobee County sheriff's dispatcher Lisa Bishop. She identified the victim as Pat Godwin, 53. Officials said the tornado ripped Mrs. Godwin's mobile home from the ground and tossed some of its contents into a hammock behind the trailer. Oliver Godwin, the victim's husband, was among the seven people injured. He was in the intensive care unit of H.H. Raulerson Jr. Memorial Hospital Sunday night. The hospital refused to release his condition. "It's incredible those people lived through this," said Sheriff John Collier. Officials said the tornado, moving from southwest to northeast, hit the New Covenant Christian Outreach religious camp at about 5:15 a.m. EDT. The other injured people also lived in trailers at the camp. They were released from the hospital after being treated for cuts and bruises, officials said.

Palestinian women weep at mass grave

By The Associated Press
Hundreds of weeping women marched through Beirut's Chatilla Palestinian refugee camp today to pray at a mass grave for victims of the Sept. 16-18 massacre that has raised an international furor and shaken Israel to its core.

The final units of French and Italian contingents of the reconstituted multinational peacekeeping force also arrived in Beirut today, but U.S. Marines continued to wait offshore for the departure of Israeli forces.

The peacekeeping force was requested by Lebanon after discovery that at least 320 Palestinian and Lebanese civilians were slain by Lebanese Christians in two refugee camps under Israeli military control.

The contributing countries, however, say none of the international troops will be deployed until Israeli forces are removed from both the east and west sectors of Beirut, as the United States has demanded.

The Tel Aviv military command announced Sunday that its forces would pull out of the capital's Moslem western sector by Wednesday, but gave no indication of when the whole city would be cleared.

Relatives of the victims gathered at the mass grave in Chatilla at a ceremony marking the Moslem Feast of Sacrifice. A few hundred women sobbing and carrying wreaths of flowers and photos of the dead marched down the main street and men chanted prayers from the Koran, Islam's holy book.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin scheduled an emergency Cabinet meeting for Tuesday, and Israeli radio predicted he would have to concede to growing pressure from his Cabinet and dissident Israelis for a full-scale investigation of the country's role in the massacre.

The Israeli army's announcement of the pullout date for west Beirut was made a few hours before Israel radio and television went off the air and public and private businesses shut down for Yom Kippur or the Day of Atonement, holiest day on the Hebrew calendar. It began at sunset Sunday.

The killings caused a protest demonstration in Tel Aviv by 400,000 Israelis on Saturday and demands for the resignations of Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

Israel radio said five of the 20 members of Begin's Cabinet have decided that the government's proposal of a limited inquiry into the massacre was not good enough because it would not let investigators subpoena witnesses and force them to testify under oath.

Israeli Justice Minister Moshe Nissim was quoted in the daily newspaper Maariv as saying a formal judicial inquiry "now seems inevitable."

The Israeli army, which entered Beirut's Moslem sector Sept. 15 after a successful three-month drive against Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon, announced Sunday that the pullback from the former guerrilla stronghold was being coordinated with the Lebanese army.

About 800 U.S. Marines had been scheduled to land in Beirut Sunday to join an estimated 1,100 French soldiers and about 670 Italian troops in an effort to help the Lebanese government reassert its authority.

No ground gained at Sunday's strike talks

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Players union leaders disagree that management's latest guarantee of $1.6 billion over a five-year period could help settle the National Football League strike.

Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the NFL owners, said after a six-hour negotiating session Sunday that the Management Council had offered to distribute, in the form of bonuses, the difference between $1.6 billion and the amount of money teams spend in salaries in the next five years.

In return, the players union would drop its wage-scale demand and return to the system of individually negotiated contracts.

"That sounds more like what we were talking about," said Gene Upshaw, president of the players union, who nevertheless said the meetings — the first since talks broke off Sept. 17 — were unfruitful.

"The session ended just as it started," Upshaw said. "There is no change in the owners' position in almost all the players demands."

Ed Garvey, the NFL Players Association's executive director, was unenthusiastic about Donlan's proposal.

"It's essentially a false guarantee," Garvey said. "We still don't know where the money is going to go and to suggest to an active player today that you're going to divide it up five years from today is ludicrous."

Garvey also suggested that the bonus money would be given to rookies to keep them from signing contracts with the new United States Football League.

"There is no new offer from the owners," Garvey added. "What they had on the table Sept. 8 is still there. I'm amazed that they wouldn't put something on the table that would entice the players to come back."

Garvey said he didn't believe owners would get serious until Oct. 6, after television money runs out.

"The networks have funded them for two weeks so they haven't felt the pinch yet," the union leader said. "When they see that nobody comes in, then maybe they'll get serious."

Donlan, however, said Sunday's proposal was bona fide.

"We made a move today which we are very hopeful and very optimistic is going to end the dispute," he said. "We hope to be back negotiating early this week," probably in Washington.

Donlan said any of the $1.6 billion not spent on salaries would be "put in a kitty" and distributed according to a formula to all players active during the five-year term of the agreement.

He said this would solve the players' complaint that management would have an incentive to cut higher-priced veterans in favor of rookies.

Before Sunday's talks resumed at Hofstra University, Upshaw and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who has stayed away from the negotiating sessions, gave generally bleak outlooks in television interviews.

Upshaw said on CBS' "Face The Nation" that the strike "may go on a lot longer than anticipated because the networks are involved."

The three networks have said they will pay the NFL about $30 million for this weekend's games and another $30 million for next weekend's, the money to be refunded next year only if the games are eventually canceled.

Upshaw said the union, which has threatened legal action because of what he termed the networks' "funding of the strike," would testify next Thursday before Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

Rozelle said on "The NFL Today" that the strike would have to be settled by Thursday in order to rescue next Sunday's and Monday night's games.

Also at the bargaining session were Chip Yablonski and Dick Berthelsen, counsel for the union, and executive board members Mark Murphy (Washington), Tom Condon (Kansas City), Dan Jiggetts (Chicago), James Lofton (Green Bay), Jeff Van Note (Atlanta), John Bunting (Philadelphia) and Stan White (Detroit). Jimmy Cefalo (Miami) was delayed when his flight from Florida was fogged in.

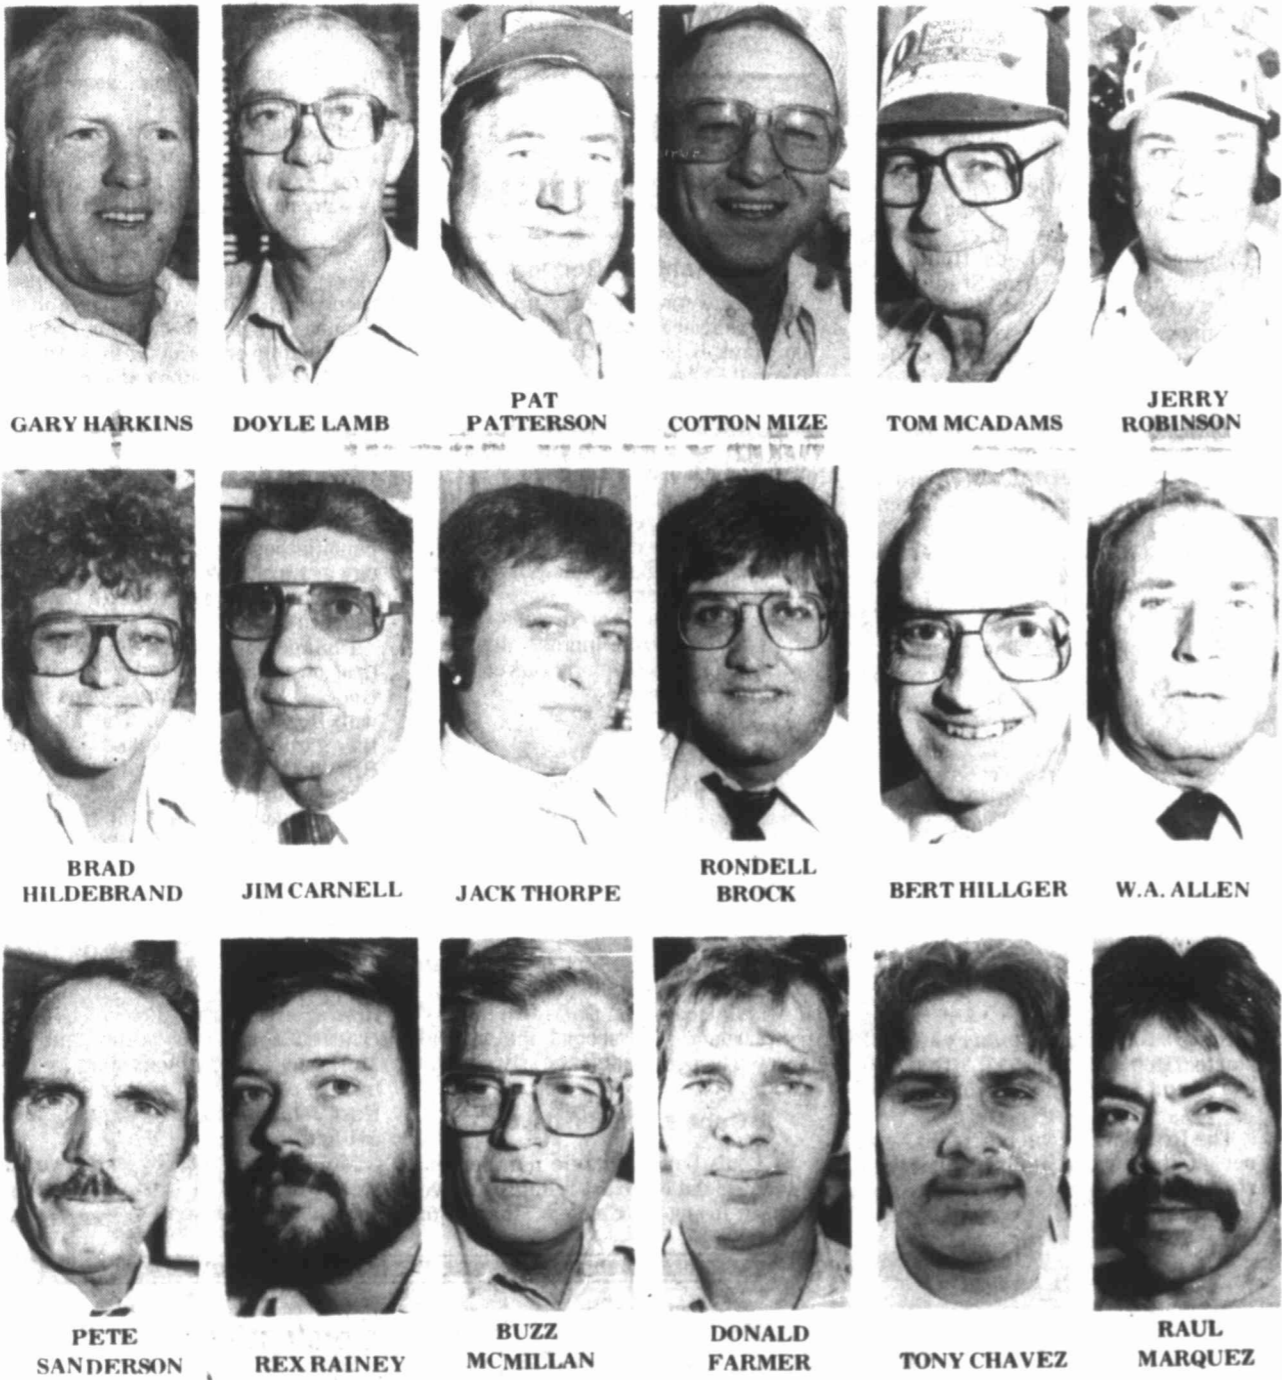

In his interview on "Face The Nation," Upshaw denied there was "erosion" in the union's solidarity. "In every labor position, there's always disagreement within the ranks," he said. "When there's no football being played, that's living proof we're solid."

Upshaw also said he expects that within the next few days, "the owners will open the doors and will try to bribe players, invite them in. But the players are too smart... I'm not saying no players will go in, but I'm saying enough will stay out that we'll hold together."

STEELER FANS CELEBRATE — Despite having Sunday's game cancelled, Pittsburgh Steeler fans cheer their team in front of an empty Three Rivers Stadium.

Clampett swings at Southern

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Young Bobby Clampett got the monkey off his back at the $250,000 Southern Open golf tournament, the same event that launched another career 11 years ago for close friend Johnny Miller.

Clampett, clad in gray knickers, matching argyle socks and a white hat, shirt and shoes, earned his first Professional Golfers Association victory Sunday by battering the 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course with a 64 and a 14-under-par 266 total to win $45,000.

Hale Irwin, who shattered the tournament record with a 61 Sunday, including nine birdies, slipped past third-round leader George Burns to take second-place money of $27,000 with a 268. Burns, with a finishing 68, was next at 269.

"I felt like I was going to win but I didn't know when," said the 22-year-old Clampett. "It's been a weight on my shoulders."

With the victory, Clampett, a slim, curly haired blond, now has earned $379,500 in only two years on the tour. He had come close twice, losing in playoffs during that time, and has six second places and three third places, including a third in the U.S. Open.

"It's a great feeling, it really is. I've felt like this before, but never as strong as now," said the smiling youngster.

"Johnny Miller called me twice while on the course," said Clampett of his friend who won his first ever PGA title here in 1971 and has since won 20 others and hauled in nearly $1.7 million on the tour.

He said Miller left messages of encouragement and wished him luck on the seventh and 10th holes.

"I then went out and birdied 7, 10, 11, 12 and 13. John's a very good friend. He's like a big brother," said Clampett.

"Some days are just your day and this was one for me," Clampett said of his round that included seven birdies and a lone bogey.

The birdies came on putts ranging from five feet and included long ones of 45, 25, 23 and 18 feet.

Irwin's 61, which included nine birdies and nine pars, bettered the previous tournament record of 62 set in 1971 by Bobby Mitchell.

"Hale started so far back (six shots off the lead). But he had an incredible round. Strange, but I had a 61 in mind today and I thought about it again when I was 7-under after 13," said Clampett.

"Being six back was not enviable but I thought if I shot 63 or 64 it would force the leaders to play hard. But they forgot the script," said Irwin.

Rookie Hal Sutton shot a 66 to finish alone in fourth place, while Andy Bean, also with a 66, was next at 271.

Defending champion J.C. Sneddy ended at 281 after a 65 that included a hole-in-1 on the par 3, 226-yard seventh hole.

Steward wins golf

Howard Stewart fired a two-day total of 144 to overcome Saturday leader Royce Cox and win the Big Spring Golf Association Grand Tournament Sunday afternoon at the Comanche Trails Golf Course.

Cox had a 71 Saturday but fired a 74 Sunday into the strong West Texas wind. Stewart roared back to take the tourney, after losing the city championship earlier this year.

Jerry White was third at 148 and Nile Cole fourth at 150.

Winning the first flight was Lynn Walling with a 151, five shots better than Jimmy Stewart's two-day card of 156. Burl Dennis and Eddie Acri deadlocked for third at 157.

Keith Hamilton recorded a four-stroke win in the second flight with a 155. Second was John Stanley at 159 while Lloyd Duncan was third at 162 and Sammy Simms and Jimmy Foresyth fourth at 163.

Homer Decker and Bill Davey each had 168's in the third flight. Henry Mexia carded a 170 while Steve Hedges and James Stewart had 172's for a third place tie.

Steer awards

Big Spring senior noseguard Pat Burke was named Top Steer by coach Quinn Eudy for his defensive performance in Friday night's 20-6 district loss to Abilene High.

Other award winners were Doug Walker, Conan; Dale Crenshaw, Golden Spike; and George Bancroft, Bullet.

Runnels claims football victories

Quarterback Carey Fraser fired two fourth quarter touchdown passes, the last with just six seconds left in the game, to lift the Runnels White team to a 20-16 victory over Pecos Saturday.

Runnels trailed 10-0 at the halftime and 16-6 after scoring on a 21-yard pass from Fraser to Mitch Griffin. With 3:20 remaining, Fraser hit Eric Thompson on a 15-yard gain and Matt Garrett on a 20-yarder to set up a 15-yard throw to Garrett for the touchdown. Garrett also caught the two-point conversion throw to make it 16-14.

Pecos got the ball back but Mike Cahill recovered a fumble with 50 seconds to play. A pass interference call put the ball at the Pecos 22 and with six seconds left, Fraser lofted a desperation pass to Bernard Williams who was triple covered in the end zone. Williams made the catch and Runnels had the victory.

The Red team topped Pecos 12-6 in another weekend game.

Pecos scored first but Runnels came back on a six-yard touchdown pass from Cedric Banks to Chad Wash. The game remained a defensive battle until Banks ran a punt back 40-yards to provide the difference in scoring.

Runnels is now 3-0 for the year. The White team plays Coahoma at 5:30 p.m. Thursday at Blankenship Field while the Red team battles at Lamesa Thursday evening.

In an earlier game, the C team dropped a 32-22 contest to Greenwood. Runnels scoring came on a 25-yard pass from Banks to John Renteria, a 45-yard interception return by Jerry Paradez and a 37-yard scoring pass from Banks to Joe Beasley. Ronnie Miller scored on a pair of two-point conversions.

BSHS freshmen win tournament

The Big Spring Lady Steers freshman volleyball team won their own tournament this weekend with a 16-14, 15-2 victory over Snyder in the championship game.

Tami Green scored 13 points and Monique Jones served nine more in the finals. Green, Jones and Traci Wilkerson were note for their offense by coach Anna Ezzell while Kerri Myrick and Libby Hernandez played solid defense.

Big Spring defeated its Gold team 15-3, 15-1 and Colorado City 15-1, 15-4. In the first set against C-City, Green served 15 straight points after the Wolves led 1-0.

Snyder advanced with a 15-11, 15-5 decision over Sweetwater and 15-4, 8-15, 15-11 victory over Fort Stockton. Fort Stockton defeated C-City 15-10, 15-8 for third place.

Big Spring is now 9-2 on the year. Green scored 48 points in the three games.

Goliad teams win

The Goliad A team lost 15-7, 15-9 to Monahans to finish second in the Goliad Volleyball Tournament this weekend.

The B team won consolation honors with a 15-6, 15-11 victory over Sweetwater.

The A team defeated Sweetwater 15-11, 15-0 and then C-City 15-8, 15-11 to advance to the championship match. After losing their first match to the eventual tourney champs 15-13, 13-15, 15-4, the B team swept past Palins 15-0, 10-15, 16-14 to get into the consolation finals.

Both teams are now 7-1 for the year and play at Runnels this week against Snyder.

Football to meet

A meeting of team representatives for the Big Spring fall industrial football league is scheduled for Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at K-Bob's Restaurant.

Spokesman Steve Barker says all teams must be represented at the meeting or will not be able to participate in the league this year.

For the record

In Sunday's sports section, the Garden City-Robert Lee game had the headline "Bearcats bust Forsan, 14-7." Fortunately for Forsan fans, the Buffaloes were open this week. The sports editor was still thinking of the previous week's game between Forsan and Robert Lee and the incorrect headline slipped by. Excuse us, Forsan fans. — GREG JAKLEWICZ

So what did you do Sunday?

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

So what did you do Sunday afternoon without the Cowboys and the rest of the NFL on the tube?

Well, some played in the Big Spring Golf Association Grand Tournament where Comanche Trails pro Bobby Maxwell said a few people glanced at the Canadian Football League game on the clubhouse TV set.

Others around town watched the CFL doubleheader on NBC, the re-run of the 1982 Super Bowl on CBS or just did something other than prop their feet up in front of the TV like they usually do on Sunday afternoons.

Here's what a random sampling of Big Spring residents did Sunday besides watching the NFL and a few added comments on the NFL player's strike:

Gary Harkins — "I visited my inlaws and my mother and dad. I even saw an aunt I haven't seen in a couple of months."

Bob Peercy — "No, I never watch football. If they don't want to play for those fabulous salaries, then they can work like everyone else."

Doyle Lamb — "I worked. I usually watch football but I chose to come back to work. I missed it, I really did."

Pat Patterson — "I watched a little of that Canadian football. I don't like it. I'm for the union all right but they're getting out of hand. I hope they have to go out and pick cotton."

Cotton Mize — "...or sell potato chips. I'm on the side of the owners. They are trying to price themselves out of the market. I turned on the Canadian football and watched it five minutes. I'd rather not watch any football than have the owners give in."

Tom McAdams — "We watched a little bit of that Canadian football. That's about all. It takes a lot of getting used to."

Jerry Robinson — "We were on a trip but I probably would have watched the Canadian football. I enjoy it pretty good. It's not like the NFL. I love the NFL."

Brad Hildebrand — "I love football and watch it every Sunday. I missed my Cowboys. Bad. I went to the 7-11 and played Robotron. I hope they get that mess straightened out. I can't stand it."

Jim Carnell — "I watched the rerun of the Super Bowl...part of it, anyway."

Jack Thorpe — "I watched the Super Bowl, too. I never had seen it before. I didn't watch it the first go-round because I was so disappointed in the Cowboys."

Bert Hillger — "I went bird-hunting. If the Cowboys had been playing, I would have probably watched them."

Rondell Brock — "I went dove-hunting, too. I'd have probably watched the Cowboys if they had been on."

W.A. Allen — "I rode horses. I thought the Cowboys should have been national champs the last 15 years. If it'd been 4 of 7 like in baseball, they would have."

Pete Sanderson — "After church, I went to the farm and worked so I could hurry up and get back to church again. I the Dallas Cowboys had been playing, I'd been there."

Rex Raine — "I built a fence. If they (the Cowboys) had been on, I most definitely would have watched them."

Buzz McMillan — "I went and visited with my grandchildren. I'm not really a Cowboys fan."

Donald Farmer — "I played with my little neices. I usually watch the Dallas Cowboys if they're on."

Tony Chavez — "Am I a football fan? You bet. I was on the road for the weekend. I've been a Cowboys fan all my life."

Raul Marquez — "I saw a little of that Canadian football. We could have all enjoyed the NFL better, though. Tell them to get that strike over."

Volcano erupts

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — Thousands of people flocked to the site of a brief, spectacular eruption of Kilauea Volcano, with park rangers allowing visitors to approach the cooling, encrusted lava flow.

However, the heat generated by the molten rock on the floor of the huge summit crater kept the sightseers at a safe distance.

The eruption, which created a curtain of fire in the night sky, occurred Saturday night after about two hours warning in the form of a series of mini-earthquakes and a swelling of the volcano summit.

The quakes marked the opening of a crack about three-fourths of a mile long in the southern part of the crater floor near the Halemaumau Firepit.

At 6:44 p.m., lava started spewing from the fissure and after several hours, the molten rock was reaching an average 100 feet in the air, with some bursts of 200 feet, according to observers.

The activity began to die down at about midnight Saturday and ended completely by 9 a.m. Sunday.

'Ma Bell' must love new political phone banks

By JAY ROSSER
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Ma Bell must love the latest advent in political strategy.

It's called the phone bank, a political gimmick first used extensively in Texas during Bill Clements' successful 1978 Republican gubernatorial bid.

Clements, not one to ignore success, is wielding the tool again, and Democrats are following suit.

Through the use of phone banks, Democrats hope to reach out and touch about 2.1 million potential voters, targeting the state's 34 largest cities. Clements' workers hope to reach 2.5 million.

Representative of the Clements' and Democratic efforts say it's likely that residents of Howard County who voted in the 1980 general election will receive a call from at least one of the camps.

The goal is simple: Call and identify as many political supporters as possible and turn them out on election day, Nov. 2.

Democrats are hoping to avoid a 1978 pitfall when they failed to counter Clements' get-out-the-conservative-vote campaign. That, coupled with a poor Democratic turnout, cost them the governor's mansion for the first time in more than a century.

Three more Democratic votes in each of the state's 6,129 voting precincts, for example, would have kept the governorship out of Republican grasps for at least four more years.

Democrats, this time around, are willing to spend money to get those 18,387 votes and, they hope, many more.

"This is found money to the phone company," said Dan McClung, a political consultant masterminding the Democrats phone bank operations. "It's not an inexpensive proposition. WATS lines and local lines aren't cheap."

Democrats — led by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and gubernatorial hopeful Mark White — will dump more than $1 million into phone bank operations by election day, McClung said.

In all, he said, 18 Democratic candidates are plugged into the phone operation, including land commissioner hopeful Garry Mauro and numerous congressional aspirants.

Insiders say Bentsen has agreed to finance 30 percent of the phone bank operation while Hobby and White will pay 25 percent each.

"A lot of elections have hinged on phone banks," McClung said. "They're important enough that some pretty smart guys like Bentsen, Hobby and White have committed to them."

So far, Democratic phone banks have opened in Austin, Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio with plans to expand to four or five other large cities soon, McClung said.

The Democrats have hired about 600 workers to man the phone banks, he added, with "tens of thousands of volunteers" assisting.

Clements' phone bank, estimated to cost in excess of $1 million, is much narrower in scope, but much broader in ambition. There are no plugs for other Republican candidates in the phone calls.

Clements' campaign has opened 50 phone bank operations across the state.

IN ADDITION, according to Clements' spokesman Tony Garrett, volunteers phone from homes in almost every Texas county.

Garrett touts a volunteer workforce of about 32,000 in addition to a 50-employee supervisory staff.

The Democrats' paid phone bank staff outnumbers Clements', a twist of an old political axiom that holds Democrats use more volunteers to counter Republican money.

In all, the Clements' operation has contracted for about 500 telephone lines, he said.

"You wouldn't believe our phone bills," Garrett moaned.

"But these things are very important. They can make a definite difference in turning out support. They're not designed to persuade anybody. That's just not the point."

Undecided voters contacted by the Clements' phone banks, culled from 1980 voter registration lists, are offered information through the mail to help sway them to the governor's camp, Garrett said.

Clements' isn't just courting Republican voters, either. Clements is hoping for a repeat of 1978 when a large number of conservative Democrats moved into GOP ranks.

"If we depend only on Republicans, we lose," Garrett said.

Astronomer proves theory

FORT DAVIS, Texas (AP) — A 26-year-old astronomer at the McDonald Observatory says he did not realize such a "big deal" would be made when he proved his theory that a new class of pulsating stars exists.

But Donald Winget was thrust to the forefront of his profession with the theory, which one of his professors called "almost unique."

And Sfar GD358, a helium-coated "white dwarf" near the end of its stellar life, will probably be called the "Winget Star," according to the young astronomer.

Last spring, Winget said he could not foresee that his discovery would be a "real career-maker." Instead, he sat in the observatory's empty cafeteria worrying about whether more experienced scientists would take him seriously.

Nearby, a colleague sat watching instruments attached to the 30-inch telescope, monitoring ancient light from a dying star and hoping to find the pulsations that would prove Winget's theory.

other way round. The theorists were out front.

The discovery set Winget apart from the dozens of new Ph.D.'s scrambling in a field where there are only about 2,000 full-time jobs in the country.

He isn't guaranteed a tenured academic position, but the discovery "should make chances pretty good to stay in the field," Winget said.

R.E. Nather, one of the co-discoverers of GD358 said Winget's work was a rare combination of a "fresh mind uncluttered by a lot of dogma, with a great deal of insight into how things happen, and a roving curiosity and boldness."

"Most of the outstanding contributions by scientists in history happen when they are really young," Nather said.

Winget said he thought that at most, one out of every 50 helium-coated white dwarfs pulsates.

"I could have been right in my theory and the star could have been out there pulsating without us finding it for a couple of years or never," he said.

GD358 was the 11th star they looked at.

Then, the colleague shouted, "We got one of those suckers!"

The helium-coated "white dwarf" star was visible to the astronomer. What Winget had theorized, and GD358 proved, was that some of these stars pulsate.

White dwarfs are small but extremely dense stars whose nuclear fuel is burned out. They have collapsed in on themselves, but continue to shine with residual energy, like a glowing brick.

Scientists already knew that some hydrogen-coated white dwarfs pulsate. Winget theorized that some helium-coated white dwarfs did, too.

Winget said the pulsations let scientists glimpse into the stars' interiors, revealing a kind of "archeological history of the galaxy which, in turn, provides clues to how the star and the universe were formed."

One of Winget's teachers, Carl Hansen of the University of Colorado, said Winget used a fresh approach with his three colleagues in the May 26 discovery.

Usually, he said, "the theorists try to figure out what observing astronomers saw. But this time it was the Winget first became interested in astronomy when he was 9, reading articles in popular magazines at home in Champagne, Ill. Visits to a local observatory whetted his curiosity and led him to build a telescope "that never worked very well."

"I've always been curious and had a drive to understand why things work," Winget said. "My folks are fairly religious Southern Baptists, so, partially because of that, I grew up wondering why we are here and the reasons behind everything."

In graduate school, Winget's thesis on helium-coated dwarf stars attracted the attention of University of Texas astronomers and led to a two-year appointment as a post-doctoral research associate at Austin.

"One of the reasons we wanted him to come was he has a darn good theory," said Nather. "We've developed the tools here to explore his theory, and Don (Winget) wanted to help with the observations."

Now, Winget says of the star that will soon bear his name in scientific journals, "I guess that will be nice, but really, what's in a name?"

Remains of body discovered

BUENA VISTA, Colo. (AP) — The remains of a Dallas man missing since a plane crash last Christmas Eve were retrieved Sunday from rugged terrain in the Collegiate Peaks Wilderness southwest of here, authorities said.

A spokesman for the Civil Air Patrol said the bones and clothing of 42-year-old Gary Meeks were found by accident Saturday while CAP members were conducting a practice search near Cottonwood Lake about 30 miles southwest of Buena Vista.

The Chaffee County sheriff's patrol and other rescue workers climbed to the area Sunday and retrieved the remains — found a little less than a mile away from the crash site.

Authorities said they were convinced the remains were those of Meeks but said efforts would be made to verify the identity through a check of dental records.

Meeks, a pilot, was last seen Dec. 24 when he left the crash site to get help and vanished into a driving blizzard. Repeated attempts to find his body had failed until this weekend.

The four passengers on board, including his wife Patricia, sons Gary and Darren and a friend, Steven Smart, also of Dallas, survived the crash but suffered severe frostbite after spending several days in the open. Officials say Smart recently had both legs amputated below the knee because of the frostbite he suffered.

The group had been on its way to a skiing holiday in Aspen when the plane went down on Christmas Eve.

New algebra text book stirs controversy

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

NORMAN, Okla. — John Saxon's blue eyes flash with visionary zeal as he promises to lead high school students from the mathematical wilderness where results on standardized tests continue to decline.

He blames "the mathematics establishment" for the dismal state of the so-called "Queen of Sciences" in the country's schools. "These people have totally destroyed mathematics education," says the 58-year-old junior college algebra teacher.

His solution: his new Algebra I textbook, which he says is now in use in more than 500 school systems although it was published only last year.

Some studies in Oklahoma have suggested that Saxon's book can make a remarkable difference in student performance, but some academics are skeptical.

Dan Yates, supervisor of academic programs at the Math and Science Center in Richmond, Va., has read everything he can find on Saxon and his method. He is not yet convinced: "We would like to see more evidence and a little less rhetoric."

Saxon, a former combat pilot, says the experts who prepared most algebra texts now in use "have left the real world. They hold themselves aloof from the ninth-grade classes, where a teacher might get hit occasionally by a spitball."

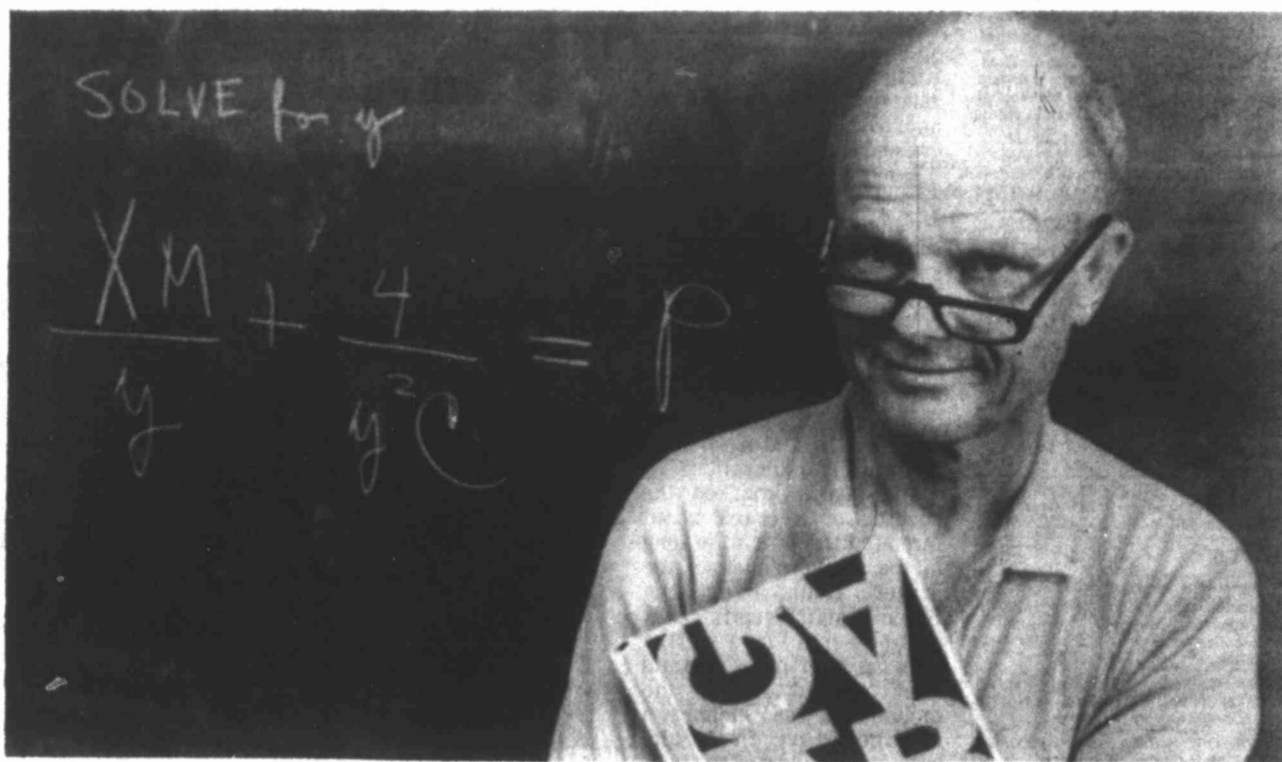

As a result, he says, their texts are "inadequately conceived and abominably executed" to the extent they are full of abstract terms that beginning algebra students can't understand and then move from subject to subject so rapidly that retention is impossible.

Also, he says, after one year of algebra, students are thrown into geometry and don't get another taste of algebra — Algebra II — until the following year.

"Geometry interferes," he says. "It should be postponed until the 12th year, when it can be truly appreciated."

Algebra is termed the watershed in mathematics, dividing those who can make it into the more esoteric forms of math — and into science — from those whose low scores have produced anxiety and, ultimately, a hatred of the subject.

It is here that the 1949 West Point graduate departs from standard texts. Where the others "intimidate and frighten" students, Saxon says, his book will make currently in use is constant reinforcement. "It's not review," the ramrod-straight Saxon says. "I don't ever review. I never drop it."

CONTROVERSIAL TEXTBOOK — John Saxon poses in his junior college classroom with a copy of his algebra textbook he says will teach the subject better to high school students. Some members of the academic profession have their doubts.

As a result, a ninth-grade algebra student on the last day of the term will do at least one homework problem on the topic he studied on the first day.

"We start with signed numbers, the function that makes algebra different from all the math the students have had before," Saxon says. "These are the positive and negative numbers."

"There will be at least one signed number problem included in every homework assignment during the term."

The same follows for every other major function of algebra — finding the volume or the perimeter of various figures by changing exponents and adding, multiplying and dividing fractions.

"In algebra, as it is taught now, the teacher goes through one subject on one day, and all the homework problems that night are just alike. The next day they move on to another subject, and all the homework that night will be the same."

"There will be a review section in the textbook eventually, but by the time there is, the kids have forgotten everything that went before."

Saxon developed his textbook after discovering students he was teaching at Oscar Rose Junior College in nearby Midwest City had little grasp of algebra.

Since his thrust is on incremental development, building on what has gone before with constant reinforcement, his text has no chapters. Each topic is introduced gradually as a natural outgrowth of the preceding sections.

And instead of being told that one basic property of real numbers is "commutative," Saxon writes simply that four and two always equal six, regardless of the order in which they are added.

After being turned down by major textbook publishers, Saxon brought out his book himself, mortgaging his home in this college city to help pay the costs. He then was able to get 20 teachers in various Oklahoma schools to run a test during the 1980-81 term using a prototype of his textbook and the one they regularly used.

The test was overseen by the Oklahoma Federation of Teachers. There was a control group of 841 pupils who used the regular textbook and an experimental group of 519 using Saxon's book. Each teacher taught one section using Saxon and one or more using the regular text.

A battery of 16 tests showed that students using Saxon's text had an overall gain of 159 percent compared with the control group. In addition, the students in the lowest ability group as classified by California Achievement Tests outscored their control counterparts by 246 percent — and even outscored the high-medium control students.

But Yates said he has trouble with the methods used in testing Saxon's book, and adds that literature on it leaves many questions unanswered.

Dallas commissioner seat vacated

DALLAS (AP) — Citing a law barring a candidate from running for more than one office in an election, Dallas County Democratic officials plan to challenge Jim Jackson's nomination to run as the Republican candidate for Dallas County commissioner.

Jackson's seat on the commissioners court was declared vacant Sunday by a U.S. District Judge Robert Porter, who approved an agreement hammered out between county GOP and Democratic officers.

Porter ruled Jackson automatically resigned his post under Texas' "resign-to-run" law when he lodged an unsuccessful campaign for Congress earlier this year. Anticipating an unfavorable court ruling, a GOP executive committee nominated Jackson for the county commission last week.

But Dallas County Democratic Chairman Bob Greenberg said he doesn't think the incumbent commissioner is eligible to run.

"I don't think Jackson will be qualified to be on the ballot," Greenberg said. "We have a law in Texas that says you only can run for one office in any one election, and he's already run."

Jackson brought the suit on Sept. 8 in an effort to keep his job following an unsuccessful bid for Congress earlier this year.

Jackson had been fighting to keep his seat since June 25, when the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the state's "resign-to-run" law. The law states that certain officeholders automatically forfeit their positions when they announce candidacy for another office.

Last week, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas decided that the high court ruling was retroactive.

Ben Lewis, a Richardson attorney and former state legislator, is the Democratic candidate. Dallas County Judge Gary Weber will appoint Jackson's replacement.

Vietnam casualty to join famous tomb

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An unidentified Vietnam War casualty probably will become the fourth body to be placed in the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, according to the national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

James Currie said Sunday that federal officials are on the verge of changing a rule that has made it difficult to find a body for the tomb in Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

The tomb now contains the remains of unidentified veterans of World War I, World War II and the Korean War. Department of the Army regulations require bodies for the tomb to be unidentified and 80 percent intact.

Currie, a Korean War veteran and resident of Sierra Vista, Ariz., said improvements in medical science have made it difficult to find the remains of an unidentified Vietnam veteran to place in the tomb. Bodies that are 80 percent intact are easily identified, he said.

"Today's medical science can identify small fragments of bodies," Currie said during a visit here for a celebration of the 35th anniversary of a local VFW post.

Army spokesman Maj. M.L. Bruce in Washington declined to comment on the report Saturday.
