Huck heads home

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The two halves of the original manuscript of Mark Twain's classic "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," separated for about a century, will be reunited at a Buffalo library. The Buffalo and Erie County Public Library, which has possessed the second half since the 1880s, announced Wednesday it had reached agreement to obtain the first half, which was discovered in 1990 in a California attic. The agreement makes it likely that a new episode, contained in the first-half manuscript but not in the published version of the book, will come to light.

Billy the Kid's gun

LINCOLN, N.M. — A Redlands, Calif., family has loaned the Lincoln County Heritage Trust's Historical Center a Colt .45 "Peacemaker" revolver believed to have been carried by Billy the Kid. The pistol, which will be displayed at the center beginning Saturday, was acquired from the family in 1951. The previous owner claims to have received the pistol from "Cherokee" Davis, a cook for famed Lincoln County rancher John Chisum.

Lottery auction

NEW YORK — He was born poor into a large family, but he died rich — and without a will. So on Wednesday, the $3.8 million remaining to be paid from from Solomon Keith's winning state lottery jackpot was auctioned in court. The lottery proceeds that turned a janitor from Harlem into a millionaire brought a winning bid of $2.075 million. That will give the winning bidder, Presidential Life Insurance of Nyack, Keith's remaining 16 annual payments of $240,245.

Caroline is 'free'

VATICAN CITY — After 10 years of deliberations, a Vatican court annulled the first marriage of Princess Caroline of Monaco, officials announced Wednesday. The annulment of the princess' 1978 marriage to Frenchman Philippe Junot leaves Caroline free to wed in the Roman Catholic Church. Church courts ruled the wedding invalid because of the couple's "insufficient consent" to marriage, said Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro.

Bush's 1st foray into TV politics reveals 'glitches'

By Andrew Rosenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — President Bush made his reluctant first foray into breakfast television politics on Wednesday, an event that gave a taste of the potency of presidential imagery but at the same time underscored the narrowness of the domestic policy agenda on which he is running.

For nearly 90 minutes on the CBS program "This Morning," Bush sat among the flower beds and crab apple trees of the majestic Rose Garden, the colonnaded veranda of the Oval Office framing the shot, and took

Knife-wielding assailant kills 2 women in hospital

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A man stabbed two elderly women to death in their hospital beds Wednesday because he thought one of the patients had placed a curse on him, police said.

Carlos Lopez surrendered to a security guard at Riverside Hospital and told authorities he had repeatedly stabbed Estefana Munoz and Mary Kocurek.

Lopez, 37, was being held Wednesday in the Nueces County jail in lieu of $200,000 bail bond set by Robert Vargas, a county judge.

A single charge of capital murder was filed with the District Attorney's office, police Capt. J.D. Brewer said.

"It's capital murder because it was more than one victim," said Brewer. "That's what differentiates it from homicide."

Both victims were repeatedly

FORT WORTH — A spectator in a courtroom stood up and without a word opened fire Wednesday, killing two attorneys and seriously wounding two of three appellate judges, authorities said.

The gunman then fled the Tarrant County Courthouse and was the subject of a huge manhunt. But an attorney who claimed to be the gunman turned himself in later at Dallas television station WFAA and was arrested.

George Lott, 45, said he attacked courthouse workers to draw attention to his troublesome divorce and child custody dispute.

"It's a horrible, horrible thing I did today. . . . I've sinned," he calmly told WFAA on tape. He showed station workers a semiautomatic handgun hidden under his shirt and said it was the weapon used in the shootings.

It was the latest in a series of violent incidents in courthouses around the Three Midland state district court judges expressed shock Wednesday at the courtroom violence in Fort Worth that left two people dead and two appelate court judges seriously wounded.

But despite immediate calls from Tarrant County courthouse employees to tighten security there, local officials have no immediate security-strengthening plans for the Midland County Courthouse — besides the recent addition of a new courthouse bailiff.

"It's a real tragedy, of course, and it definitely underscores the need for courthouse security," said Judge Dean Rucker of the 318th District Court in Midland.

According to Judge Pat Baskin, presiding judge of the 142nd District Court, local officials don't feel metal detectors are needed at the courthouse.

"If anybody is bent on attacking a lawyer, judge or witness, there is not anything that can keep that from happening," he said. "There are limits to what one can do. Things of this kind are going to happen from time to time. All we can do is have the appearance of addi-

Customs officials seize abortion drug at airport

NEW YORK (NYT) — Customs officials seized one dose of the abortion drug RU486 from a pregnant woman who brought it into the United States on Wednesday in defiance of the Bush administration's import ban.

The woman, who gave her name only as Leona, said she brought the drug into the country to force a court challenge "so that women can benefit from this drug."

She flew into New York's Kennedy International Airport from London and was met by customs officials, who searched her and her baggage, then confiscated the envelope in which she was carrying 12 pills, just enough for her to end her pregnancy.

Even though the airport confrontation was planned, the woman began to cry during the Pathologist investigation prompts second autopsy

Authorities in Dallas performed a second autopsy Wednesday on the body of Sumner Pendleton, 10 months after he apparently died of carbon monoxide poisoning in the garage of a vacant Midland house, officials said.

Pendleton, 23, died on Aug. 31, 1991, less than two weeks after his former girlfriend, Elizabeth Henry, disappeared. Despite extensive searches, including a nationwide mailing campaign, Ms. Henry is still missing.

Pendleton was one of about 200 people police had questioned about the disappearance of the girl.

Clinton dodges questions about his running-mate search

Area political leaders react to poll shift

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Does the latest presidential poll — with Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton leading, followed by Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot, and President George Bush trailing — indicate a continued dissatisfaction with the current administration? Or is it still too early in the campaign to make predictions? Or, perhaps, are the results merely a temporary fluke for Clinton?

Varied interpretations were suggested Wednesday by local party leaders and a Perot supporter.

Clinton, the presumptive Democratic nominee, garnered 33 percent in the poll; the still-unannounced Perot, 31 percent; and Bush, 28 percent.

The poll, published Tuesday by The Washington Post and ABC News, was conducted June 24-28 among 785 registered voters.

Chris McCormack, Midland County Democratic Party chairman, said the results continue to reflect what other polls in recent months have indicated.

"What you have to look at (in past polls) is the significant number of people here who want change . . . and that holds today as

Gov. Bill Clinton

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Gov. Bill Clinton dodged a flurry of questions about his intensified search for a running mate on Wednesday, acknowledging only that he had narrowed the field.

Clinton spent much of the day renewing his attacks on the Bush administration, telling a Hispanic political group here on Wednesday that a Clinton administration would improve the lives of working people.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the League of United Latin American Citizens, Clinton criticized the Bush administration for failing to do enough to improve education, reduce crime and otherwise support the questions from 125 slightly bewildered tourists who had been plucked by CBS producers from the White House tour line on Tuesday.

They questioned him politely but persistently about education, the budget deficit, crime, drugs and family values and seemed hungry, in an amiable, supportive way, for the president to offer new ideas about leading the country.

Bush, who remarked more than once with evident relief that the audience's questions were less "controversial" than reporters' queries, responded by promising action in each area. But instead of offering sweeping initiatives aimed at pressing national problems, Bush harkened back to legislation that he has long talked about and complained that it was was being blocked by Congress.

"How are you going to educate your children? We've got a wonderful program on that," he said, adding that he also had "a great anti-crime, anti-drug program hung up in the Capitol."

In the end, the president was forced to retreat to his "trust" argument: that he should get another four years because he has worked hard and shown he can handle international crises.

Bush, who has ridiculed Gov. Bill Clinton for playing his saxophone on late-night television and complained about Ross Perot's appearances on call-in programs, rounded up the children in the audience afterward and gave them a tour of the Oval Office while their parents gaped in astonishment.

White House strategists had designed the event to turn the video politics of 1992 to Bush's benefit, to show him at ease and in command. Members of the audience, who gave Bush a standing ovation, said they had been impressed by merely being at the White House and in the presence of the president, who they said seemed personable and eager to answer their questions.

But their enthusiasm and broad questions only seemed to underscore how much trouble the Bush team has had in making the power of Bush's incumbency work for him, and in developing a public relations strategy that will depict the president as engaged in offering big solutions to big problems.

Torie Clarke, Bush's campaign press secretary, said the president "talked about the accomplishments of the last 3½ years. He talked about low inflation and low interest rates, about historic arms-control agreements, and he said there are more things we need to do."

But Gary Bauer, head of the Family Research Council, a conservative political organization, said the television appearance seemed to crystalize what he believes is wrong with the Bush campaign.

"This is a year when the trappings of the presidency are not enough to cause the president to win re-election," Bauer said. "He's got to come up with a more sharply defined program to offer broadly to the American people, and it just didn't strike me that the vision was there (on Wednesday)."

While the Arkansas governor and Perot have been getting vast amounts of television time, the president has found it hard to get a flattering sound bite on the evening news. He agreed only reluctantly to the sort of television appearance he made on Wednesday because he had considered such programs beneath the dignity of his office.

Bush was clearly reaching for a sense of connection with his audience. "I think people are worried about their future," he said. "People that have a job wonder whether they're going to have it tomorrow."

But Bush continued to blame Congress for his problems. "I think we've got good programs to correct that," he said. "I will admit to having great difficulty getting them through the Congress."

And in his evident desire to demonstrate sympathy, the president made one political misstep. Asked at the end of the program about interest rates, Bush said, "I think every American would like to see them lower — that includes the President — because that will stimulate economic growth."

His comments did not take into account the tens of millions of retired people as well as other Americans who live at least partly on investments, such as certificates of deposit, on which income has been cut sharply as banks lowered interest rates to stimulate other sectors of the economy.

The participants' comments — "warm," "nice" and "trustworthy" were used frequently — suggested that Bush managed to project at least part of the image he was seeking.

But his reliance on blaming Congress for what some voters perceive as his own failings seemed to strike a sour note with some members of his audience.

Pat Cardel, a computer programmer from Franklin, Tenn., said she was impressed by Bush's willingness to answer a variety of questions, but she added that she had heard little she had not heard before.

Lonnie Thomas, 11, told The Associated Press after the Oval Office tour that Bush was "cool" but long-winded. "He kept going and going and going, just like an Energizer bunny," he said.

Asked bluntly by one member of the audience for a reason to vote for him, Bush responded with a rambling discourse on his election strategy.

"I think in the final analysis, people are going to say, 'Who has the experience, who has the temperament to take on these big problems day in and day out?' " he said.

"Sometimes at night, the phone rings over there, and I'm going to try to make that case to the American people. Not that I'm perfect, but that I've got a proven record of being tested by fire, and I, I think that's a good qualification. I think that's a good — good reason to ask for some more time as president."

Michael McCurry, a Democratic political consultant, suggested that this approach may be inadequate at a time when the other candidates are working to sharpen their own ideas.

"Clinton seems to be working on getting some type of message together," he said. "Perot has a lot of message but not a lot of substance. Clinton will continue to work at it, and if Perot comes forward and says, 'I've been working on this hard for the last two months, and this is what I'm going to do,' what is Bush going to say? They have no mechanism in that campaign right now to break through the gridlock that traps them."

CLINTON: Dem dodges queries

family values it espouses.

"If this administration believed in family values, why do they keep us so out of step with the rest of the world in valuing families?" Clinton said, pounding the podium.

"It's harder to raise a kid in dignity and success and work for a living in this country than in any other advanced country in the world because this administration has not valued families.

"Where is the child care?" he said. "Where are the preschool programs? Where is the tax system which values people who work hard and are still in poverty raising their children?"

Clinton has hit his stride in recent days as he prepares to accept his party's nomination at the Democratic nominating convention in New York in two weeks. A new poll commissioned by Cable News Network and USA Today showed Clinton in a statistical dead heat with Bush and Ross Perot. The poll, with a margin of sampling error of three percentage points, showed Bush with 33 percent, Perot 32 percent and Mr. Clinton 27 percent. One thousand voters were interviewed nationwide.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, Democrat of Indiana, told reporters on Capitol Hill on Wednesday that he met with Clinton at a Washington hotel shortly after dawn on Wednesday. The Clinton campaign has drawn a cloak around the process of his vice-presidential selection, but the list is thought to include about a half-dozen people, including several members of Congress.

"I have been in contact with Governor Clinton but I don't think he's reached any conclusion," Hamilton said. "As you know, there are several names on the list. I don't know who those names are other than myself."

Hamilton, who is a senior member of the House Foreign Relations Committee, said that if Clinton offered him a spot on the Democratic ticket, he "would give it very serious consideration."

Clinton would not discuss the process of his vice-presidential decision-making on Wednesday, and his aides refused to even confirm that he had met with Hamilton. "I have no comment on the short list," Clinton said.

Here is a look some of those mentioned as potential running mates:

■ Gore, a 44-year-old senator from Tennessee, would bring environmental and foreign policy credentials and would add another young, dynamic component to a Clinton ticket. Because he ran for president in 1988, he would bring campaign experience, too.

■ Kerrey, 48, could also help Clinton make the case for change in Washington, but he wasn't given high marks as a campaigner in the primary season. In addition, there's not much affection between the two. During the primary season, Kerrey predicted the Republicans would open up Clinton like "a soft peanut" on allegations that the Arkansas governor had evaded the draft.

■ Wofford, 66, a former college president who won a stunning upset in Pennsylvania last year. Clinton aides on Tuesday sought to quell speculation that Wofford might not meet Clinton's requirement that his running mate support abortion rights. They stressed that while Wofford supported Pennsylvania's restrictions on abortions, he has voted with abortion-rights forces in the Senate.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards was at his San Antonio appearance. Asked if she was going to be Clinton's running mate, she said, "No s'reee."

South African labor group calls for strike

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT) — South Africa's largest labor federation called Wednesday for a nationwide general strike next month to bring the country's troubled economy to a standstill until President F.W. de Klerk surrenders power.

Jay Naidoo, general secretary of the Congress of South African Trade Unions, vowed that it would be the most severe disruption the country had ever seen, surpassing last year's three-day anti-tax strike, which jolted South African industries and cost scores of lives as militant unionists tried to enforce the walkout on reluctant mine workers.

While the labor federation was announcing this latest intensification in the battle to end white rule, its African National Congress allies were backing away from a threat to invoke new sanctions against South African athletes, including the team bound for the Olympics in Barcelona this month.

The ANC had threatened to seek the banishment of South Africa from the Olympics and other international sports tournaments to protest the June 17 massacre in the black township of Boipatong and the political impasse over the transition to majority rule.

The ANC did not explain its decision, but there were widespread doubts whether it has the international influence to enforce an athletic boycott. Moreover, any serious such attempt was likely to damage the organization's popularity at home, where the public eagerly awaits South Africa's first participation in the Olympics after 32 years of ostracism.

The general strike, scheduled to begin on Aug. 3, now seems the most serious threat facing de Klerk's government as it struggles to salvage negotiations on the country's future.

The labor federation, whose unions represent 1.4 million workers, predominantly black, has been an engine of militancy within the negotiating alliance headed by Nelson Mandela's ANC.

With negotiations broken off, the unions have assumed a prominent role in what Naidoo called "the final push to democracy."

"The issues are simple," he said in an interview. "The government must resign. It must make way for an interim government of national unity. It must agree to majority rule. It must take action to end state-sponsored violence."

De Klerk has agreed in principle to yield power to a coalition government that would write a new, nonracial constitution, but he has insisted that the white minority retain power to veto policies threatening its interests.

The strike threat seemed intended to frighten South African employers into bringing pressure on de Klerk for concessions. Business leaders have, in fact, been meeting with the president to underscore their alarm at the collapse of negotiations, although they insist that they have not been telling him how to resolve the impasse.

"The breakdown in the negotiating process is having a seriously detrimental effect on an economy which is already in very bad shape," said Brian Angus, executive director of the steel industry's federation, which met with de Klerk on Monday.

Angus said a general strike would threaten many companies with bankruptcy and undermine efforts to lure back foreign investors who fled during the apartheid years.

The country is already enduring a wave of strikes, some of them related to the campaign against white rule. Among these have ben a work stoppage by 30,000 unskilled hospital workers, which has created chaos, and a strike over pay by black workers at the state television network, which has halted production of new programs in African languages and raised some doubt about broadcast of the Olympic Games.

Many question whether the unions can sustain a general strike for long in a country with a 40 percent unemployment rate.

Israeli helicopters raid Palestinian bases

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — Two Israeli helicopter gunships blasted a Palestinian guerrilla base in southern Lebanon Wednesday and a support helicopter crashed into the Mediterranean, security sources said.

The Israeli military command said one crewman died and five were injured in the crash, but said the helicopter was on a routine mission.

The security sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the helicopter went down off the border town of Naqoura shortly after the strike on the base in the Palestinian refugee camp of Rashidiyeh. The camp is on the outskirts of Tyre.

One source said the U.S.-made Bell helicopter was a rescue craft. These normally fly at a distance during raids to provide quick rescues if airmen in attacking aircraft run into trouble.

An Israeli military source, also speaking anonymously, said the crash was "clearly an accident."

The helicopter gunships fired rockets into a deserted house that had been used by the Syrian-supported Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, led by George Habash.

There was no immediate report of casualties in the raid, the second in three days.

In Jerusalem, the military command said that a "target was hit and all planes returned safely to their base."

Police say at least 37 people have been killed and 82 wounded in 21 previous Israeli raids on Lebanon this year.

On Monday, Israeli helicopters fired rockets at a house belonging to a member of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, Lebanese security sources said. The house was empty, said one of the sources, who also spoke on condition of anonymity.

It was not clear what provoked Wednesday's raid. Israel normally sends its aircraft to strike targets in Lebanon in retaliation for attacks on troops in its so-called "security zone."

Israel carved out the buffer in southern Lebanon in 1985 to guard against cross-border guerrilla infiltrations. The 440-square-mile strip is patrolled by about 1,000 Israeli soldiers and 3,000 men from an allied militia, the South Lebanon Army.

Four recent Israeli air raids have targeted two Palestinian groups allied with Hezbollah in its guerrilla war to dislodge the Israelis from the security zone.

It was not clear what provoked Wednesday's raid. Israel normally sends its aircraft to strike targets in Lebanon in retaliation for attacks on troops in its so-called 'security zone.'

WEATHER SUMMARY

Expect sun, high near 100

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 100 and west wind at 10 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly sunny with a high near 90-95. The holiday weekend outlook calls for sunny skies with highs in the 90s and lows in the mid-to-upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 73, Wednesday's high reached 103 compared to the record for that date of 112 set in 1989. The record low for that date is 60 set in 1936.

STATE

Skies were clear and sunny across parts of South and West Texas on Wednesday, though scattered showers threatened to dampen the southwest portion of North Texas near Brownwood.

Skies were clear across the Rio Grande plains and generally partly cloudy throughout the rest of the region, except along the coast and far East Texas where skies were mostly cloudy.

A ridge of high pressure in the gulf and strong southerly winds produced hot and humid conditions in most of South Texas. Heat indexes were high and ranged from 107 at Corpus Christi to 120 at Laredo.

A dryline pushed through the Panhandle areas Wednesday morning, giving the region sunny skies and warm westerly winds.

The air mass over North Texas continued to be moist and unstable. Skies were generally partly cloudy over the Piney Woods and north central sections of North Texas.

Skies are expected to remain partly cloudy with breezy and hot days through Friday in South Texas.

In West Texas, expect mostly clear skies through tonight. North Texas should have early morning low cloudinesstoday and Friday, otherwise partly cloudy warm and humid.

NATION

Wet, stormy weather was scattered Wednesday from the Gulf of Mexico to the mid-Atlantic states and over the Rockies and northern Plains.

At midday, rain and thunderstorms extended across the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the Ohio Valley, and the central and southern Atlantic Coast states. Northern Maine also had rain.

High wind in thunderstorms damaged trees and power lines at Americus, Ga., and caused tree damage near Swainsboro, Ga., the weather service said.

Heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT was 0.73 of an inch at Texarkana, Ark., and 0.70 inch at Valdosta, Ga.

Rain and thunderstorms also were scattered over the northern half of the Rockies and into the eastern Great Basin, the northern half of the Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley.

Thunderstorms rolled across eastern Nebraska during the morning after pounding the western part of the state during the night. One tornado touched down late Tuesday near Chadron, causing minor damage at a ranch.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SHOOTING: Spectator in courtroom opens fire country this year and the second fatal shooting in the Tarrant County building in three years.

Shooting erupted at about 10 a.m. and was heard throughout the courthouse. Employees and visitors scattered and sought shelter, witnesses said.

The gunman "was simply seated in the gallery. He stood up without any word and began shooting," said police spokesman Ralph Swearingin. He said Lott could be the gunman.

No charges were immediately filed against Lott, who remained in police custody.

A courthouse employee, Robert Smajstrla, said he was about to get on an elevator in the basement when he heard gunfire and screaming. He ran upstairs and spotted a victim in a stairwell.

"A lot of people were running and people were everywhere," he said.

Killed were Assistant County District Attorney Chris Marshall, 41, and John Edwards, 32, a Dallas attorney who was shot in a stairwell near the courtroom. Judges John Hill, 45, and Clyde Ashworth, 69, were hospitalized in serious condition.

An assistant prosecutor, Steve Conder, 27, suffered a gunshot abrasion to his right shoulder. He was treated at a hospital and released.

The third judge, David Farris, dived under the bench and escaped unharmed.

Lott said on the WFAA tape he fired all 17 rounds in his 9-millimeter Glock handgun, then reloaded and fired several more times.

"I basically went in the courtroom and sat for a while and then got up and shot apparently five people," Lott said.

"I was shooting at the court, essentially, but other people got in the way or did things," Lott said. He said he then walked down stairs and shot a man there, apparently Edwards, because he was in the way.

He said he wasn't aiming at a particular judge but carried out the shootings to draw attention to his divorce and custody dispute.

State Bar of Texas records show Lott became a licensed attorney in 1981 but became inactive in 1988 and isn't currently eligible to practice, said bar spokeswoman Marcy Goodfleisch. There was no record of any disciplinary action against him.

Lott's former wife, Margo Best, was also an attorney, said Maryellen Hicks, the Tarrant County Family Court judge who handled the divorce about two years ago. She said a jury awarded custody of the couple's son, Neal, to Ms. Best.

Lott told WFAA his wife and son moved to Peoria, Ill., after the divorce, and he had traveled back and forth to visit his son. But Lott said his wife had accused him of abusing the boy.

Peoria police Sgt. Phil Benne confirmed that Ms. Best had filed charges of aggravated criminal sexual assault of a minor against Lott in March. Lott told WFAA he was innocent.

Lott also said he wanted to shoot up the courtroom before he possibly being incarcerated on the abuse charge.

"It came down to my window of opportunity was closing," Lott said. "I mean, obviously, if I'm in the Illinois penitentiary, I can't do this.

The shooting prompted a call for stepped-up security at the courthouse.

"You go in a federal courthouse and a calculator will set off a security device," said Joe Shannon, a former prosecutor who was in an adjacent court building at the time of the shooting. "You can walk into this courtroom with a Uzi under your coat and no one would know the difference. It's ridiculous."

In 1989, an ex-sheriff's deputy, Manny Cabano, killed himself and his former girlfriend, Juanita Hermosilla, after taking her hostage in a courtroom at the same courthouse. She had obtained a restraining against him the day before.

DRUG: Customs agents seize French abortion pills

press conference after the drug was seized, saying that she was "angry and stressed out."

She said she is six weeks' pregnant, and that she will have a surgical abortion if she cannot get the drug back.

No charges have been filed against her, though the Food and Drug Administration could cite her for bringing in contraband. It was not clear Wednesday whether there would be further action.

The drug, an antiprogestin manufactured by a French company, Roussel-Uclaf, prevents the hormone progesterone from maintaining the pregnancy. It is accompanied two days later by the hormone prostaglandin in pill form, which encourages uterine contractions.

Researchers say the drug is a safe and effective abortion method up to seven to nine weeks after a missed menstrual period, but it must be taken under a doctor's supervision because in rare cases it can cause excessive bleeding or other complications.

The FDA allows Americans to import some drugs approved in other countries but not in the United States, if the drugs are only for their own use. But even though RU486 has been approved for marketing in several European countries, it may not be imported.

A representative of Abortion Rights Mobilization, which arranged the woman's trip and helped her get the drug, said it would challenge the seizure.

The government argues that it has the authority to keep unwanted drugs out of the country, and has treated this one no different from others.

A top FDA official said the agency put the drug on the special-alert list because "if we allow this drug in for personal use, we believe there is a substantial risk to women."

But the woman and the Abortion Rights Mobilization said the FDA listed the drug on its "import alert" for political reasons.

Lawrence Lader, head of the Abortion Rights Mobilization and a founder of the National Abortion Rights Action League, escorted the woman to Britain to pick up the drug.

"This was the first time outside research that an American woman by her own choice has decided to import RU486 and have an RU486 abortion," Lader said.

Advocates of abortion rights say RU486 would give women a simple, private method of ending pregnancies. It is somewhat safer than surgical abortion and potentially much cheaper.

It is now used widely in France and Britain. But Rousell-Uclaf says it will not seek approval in the United States if it faces violence or boycotts.

Marshall Beil, the woman's lawyer, said the courts have permitted unapproved drugs into the United States when they are for use by one person under a doctor's supervision.

"This drug is approved in other countries and safer than some of the highly-experimental AIDS drugs which the agency permits to be imported," he said.

RU486, which has been found by French health agencies to have been safely used by about 110,000 women in France, was singled out in 1989, when conservative members of Congress sent wrote to Frank Young, who was then the Commissioner of Food and Drugs. He immediately put the drug on the special-alert list.

A high FDA officials familiar with that decision said in an interview earlier this year it was not based on the risks, but on the politics alone.

The drug does carry some risk. In less than 1 percent of women it causes bleeding more than would be the case with the usual menstrual cycle.

Another drug taken along with it, to help induce the uterus to contract and expel the embryo, also has a small risk of loss of blood pressure, chiefly in women who are heavy smokers.

In France and Britain, the manufacturer has taken care not to let any of the drug out of the clinics where it is administered, and the doctors who use it agree to take special precautions. It is not supposed to be available by prescription.

REACT: Area political leaders eye shift in polls

well," McCormack said.

That is evident in the high combined percentage of voters who favor either Clinton or Perot, he added.

"The majority of people are dissatisfied with the Republican administration and want change and aren't sure what agent they want. . . . I think we will continue to see a swing between Clinton and Perot," McCormack said.

Although it is difficult to predict what will happen in November, McCormack said he does think "more people are recognizing that Bill Clinton has the capability to be the leader we need.

"He's the only one who's come out with a plan of action for what he will do if he is president," he said.

As a result, people are finding out that Clinton is showing to be a "true and meaningful agent headed in the right direction," McCormack said.

Perot, on the other hand, may have good intentions and be a good patriot, but people are discovering he doesn't have the qualities to be president, McCormack added.

Hal Rachal, who spearheaded the Midland petition drive for Perot, said he sees Clinton's surge in popularity as temporary, pending what he sees as an inevitable return to last place.

"I'm expecting Clinton to be at his top right now because of the (Democratic national) convention coming up. I think he has gained (in the polls) because he has come out with an economic policy. He has announced that and the others haven't," Rachal said.

"But following the convention (July 13-17 in New York), from the time the running mates are announced, I believe Perot will be in the lead because I believe he will announce a running mate of the opposite sex," he said.

Rachal said he anticipates Perot to officially announce his candidacy sometime this month following the Democratic convention.

Rachal also believes Perot will choose Jeane Kirkpatrick, United Nations ambassador during the Reagan administration, as a running mate.

After that, "I think he (Perot) will stay in the lead with Bush second and Clinton third," Rachal added.

Rick Davis, Midland County Republican Party Chairman, said Bush's lagging in the polls is only indicative of a slow start on the campaign trail.

"It's still early and polls at this time don't mean that much," he said.

"I'm sure things will change after Labor Day and that's when things count," Davis said.

"President Bush hasn't started to campaign. . . . Clinton has been campaigning full-time for two years and this is about as good as it will be for him," he said.

Davis said he expects Bush to begin campaigning after the Republican National Convention, to be held August 17-20 in Houston.

"I think the issues will come more in focus" then, Davis said.

For now though, Bush is busy doing his job — being president, Davis added.

STABBINGS: Knife-wielding assailant kills two stabbed in the chest and face with a large, bone-handled lockblade pocket knife, according to a police report.

Police Capt. Gene Frobish said Ms. Munoz, 80, was the grandmother of Lopez' girlfriend.

"He says that Munoz had put a hex on him — a witchcraft thing," Frobish said. "He made several comments at the scene. He believed she had put a curse on him.

"The other woman (Ms. Kocurek) had the bad luck to be in the same room as the first victim, and she started screaming. So he attacked her."

Ms. Munoz was stabbed 13 times. She was in the hospital recovering from a broken hip.

Ms. Kocurek, 89, suffered eight stab wounds. She was in the hospital for treatment after breaking some ribs.

Officials at Riverside Hospital refused to issue a statement Wednesday on the attack.

"The family members requested that we share no information on the victims, and we are complying with that request," said Roylene Edwards, house supervisor at Riverside.

She said no other details on the attack were available.

Frobish said the suspect appeared to be obsessed with the occult and was muttering in a hospital hallway shortly before the 10:15 a.m. attack.

"He was seen earlier mumbling about witchcraft. He told several witnesses afterward that, 'If you want to see what witchcraft is, go to room 109.' That's where the women were," Frobish said.

SECURITY: Area judges express shock at violence

tional force."

'Last week, the Commissioner's Court announced the selection of Sid Corley, 58, to fill the newly created post of courthouse bailiff to bolster security.

Corley, a 30-year law enforcement veteran — 26½ served on the Midland Police Department — began his duties Wednesday.

"I had no problems today but, then again, I'm just one man and I can't be everywhere at once. I'm just a roving security guard," Corley said. "I think it takes something like this to get everyone to be more security conscious. It's a shame an incident like this always brings it up."

According to County judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer, plans to increase courthouse security were formulated after the Sheriff's Department moved from the building in June 1990.

"Until that time we had their presence, at least on a sporadic basis. When they moved out, Judge Rucker asked the U.S. Marshal's service how we could make the courthouse more secure," Seltzer said.

The U.S. Marshal's recommendations included limiting public access to one door, installing metal detectors at each courtroom door — equaling seven detectors — and hiring a "roving" guard.

"It was determined that the roving guard would be the most cost-effective solution," Seltzer said. "The main benefit of his position is the no-notice aspect of his job. We think his continuous presence roving through the courthouse and courtrooms will serve as a significant deterrent to someone who has it in his mind to harm someone."

Hand-held metal detectors have been used at the courthouse in "high-profile" cases, Seltzer said.

But rumors of people carrying guns into the local courthouse were downplayed by Corley.

"There is no gun problem that I'm aware of," he said. "And to ensure the safety of the public and the judges, I certainly hope to be aware of them first."

According to Judge John Hyde of the 238th District Court, courthouse employees should recognize the potential security risks.

"What concerns me is the general public could be put in danger or put in a situation where they could be killed," Hyde said. "There are rumors of guns being brought into the courthouse occassionally here, but I haven't seen it."

Baskin and Hyde agreed that violence seems to be on the rise throughout the country — particularly in courthouses.

"In my opinion, it's symbolic of the progressive violence occurring across the country," Hyde said. "And with this being in a sister city — hitting so close to home — it really strikes a nerve and alerts us of the necessity to provide security."

Already in 1992, there have been been five reported shootings and stabbings in courthouses nationwide, leaving four dead and four wounded. Wednesday's incident in Fort Worth is the most violent courthouse crime this year in the United States.

said. Erdmann is accused of performing several faulty autopsies.

Erdmann officially ruled Pendleton's death last August a suicide but has since been accused of losing body parts, falsifying autopsies and performing autopsies to meet prosecutors needs.

"The (Pendleton) family had expressed concerns because of the continuing investigation with Erdmann, who performed their son's autopsy," Midland District Attorney Al Schorre said. "Everybody involved has raised questions and we figured it would be easier to have Dallas County do it."

Results of the second autopsy may not be available for another week.

"Obviously the goal is to confirm Erdmann's carbon-monoxide death report. But the results of the toxicology could be difficult or impossible to determine because of the time that has passed since his death," Schorre said.

The autopsy was performed at the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office Wednesday afternoon.

Food, medicine reach besieged capital

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Tuna fish and tomato soup from relief flights reached besieged neighborhoods Wednesday and heavily armed French U.N. reinforcements arrived to keep the airport lifeline secure.

Dodging sniper fire, relief workers began distributing 30 tons of military combat rations delivered by French planes Tuesday and Wednesday. More flights were expected hourly, and the European Community announced it would begin a six-plane operation today to ferry in food, blankets and tents.

In Belgrade, capital of Serbia and of the new, shrunken Yugoslavia, federal President Dobrica Cosic proposed Serbian emigrant Milan Panic, now a U.S. citizen and owner of a California pharmaceutical company, as premier.

Panic said late Wednesday that he would announce his decision Thursday morning in Washington. Two weeks ago he said he was approached about the premiership, but would not be a candidate. His ICN Pharmaceuticals Inc. company is based in Costa Mesa, Calif.

About 20,000 demonstrators, chanting "Slobo go!" and "Slobo, Saddam!" meanwhile marched to the federal parliament building in Belgrade on the fourth day of protests demanding the ouster of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and equating him with Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

Protesters cheered as they passed the offices of the independent B-92 radio station and the Borba daily, virtually the only news media in Serbia which have kept up their criticism of Milosevic's regime.

Monthlong U.N. sanctions on Yugoslavia were brought on by the worldwide perception that Milosevic is mainly responsible for fomenting violence in neighboring Bosnia.

Proposing Panic as premier appeared aimed at appeasing Western outrage with Serbia, which, with Montenegro, now comprises what was once the six-republic federation of Yugoslavia.

In Sarajevo, two transport planes brought 125 French marines to help the 80-member U.N. contingent that opened the embattled airport Monday.

But 840 Canadian peacekeepers pushing toward Sarajevo along a mountainous, 180-mile route from Croatia were held up trying to pass through disputed territory, U.N. sources said.

Securing of the airport in Sarajevo, landing of relief flights and distributing the food and medicine mark the first break in the 4-month-old civil war for the isolated and hungry residents of the Bosnian capital.

"This is a drop in the ocean, but it is an important drop," said Fabrizio Hochschild, a U.N. refugee official.

He said 30 tons would feed 30,000 people for two days. He estimated about 400,000 people were still in Sarajevo, which is desperately short of food and medicine because of the siege by Serb militants opposed to Bosnia's secession from Yugoslavia.

International pressure was growing for a cease-fire so relief supplies can be moved safely. German Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel said a land corridor also should be opened to Sarajevo, and Secretary of State James A. Baker III repeated that U.S. warplanes would be available if needed to protect U.N. aid operations.

President Bush said he had no plans to use U.S. military forces in the former Yugoslav states. But Baker said Bush was referring only to ground troops.

The French rations brought tears to 300 refugees living in an underground garage. Each received two days' worth of cheese, tuna, soup, biscuits and instant coffee.

"I never dreamed I would be reduced to this," said Envera Mujanovic, who sobbed as she received her food. She said she and her two children had nearly eaten up the food hoarded by her husband before he was killed three weeks ago.

U.N. armored personnel carriers guarded trucks moving supplies into the city center. One convoy was fired on but no casualties were reported.

The food was taken to warehouses and then given to charity groups for distribution. A truckload of medical supplies made it to the main hospital.

Haitian exodus slows to trickle, U.S. says

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Faced with the Coast Guard's refusal to take refugees fleeing Haiti to a safe haven at a U.S. naval base in Cuba, the exodus from Haiti has virtually stopped, Bush administration officials said Wednesday.

Since President Bush's order on May 24 that all Haitians intercepted at sea be returned immediately to Haiti without checking to determine whether they were escaping political persecution, the Coast Guard has picked up 3,031 refugees, but only about 120 since June 5, according to a Coast Guard spokesman, Petty Officer Steve Sapp.

The lull has allowed the Coast Guard to relax its patrols around Haiti and has permitted U.S. military officials to nearly empty the Haitian refugee camp they had set up at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Refugees have been sent to the United States if they qualified for political asylum, or back to Haiti if they did not.

Brig. Gen. Richard I. Neal of the Marine Corps, the commander of a military task force at Guantanamo Bay, said in a telephone interview that the number of refugees still left in the camps had dropped to 848 Wednesday from more than 12,000 a month ago.

He said the eight-month program to shelter the Haitian refugees, which has cost $34 million, could end in the next few weeks.

"We're finishing the responsibilities that apply to the migrants and down-sizing the population here," Neal said.

Of the 36,985 Haitians who have been processed at the Guantanamo Bay base since last November, 10,736 refugees have been approved to come to the United States to seek permanent asylum, said a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Duke Austin. The remainder have been or will be sent back to Haiti, he said.

Administration officials Wednesday called the month-old program a success. But senior State Department officials refused to comment publicly on the policy of repatriation, which critics have called a violation of internationally recognized human rights.

Refugee advocate groups said Wednesday that the administration's policy has served only to bottle up the problem in Haiti, and that efforts to process asylum applications at the U.S. embassy in Port-au-Prince were woefully inadequate.

Balkan feuding urges caution

President Bush says he is not prepared now to use U.S. troops in Yugoslavia, but since the Pentagon has already ordered six Navy ships carrying 2,200 Marines to patrol off the Adriatic coast his assurance raises the question of whether the United States is stumbling toward involvement in the ethnic feuding there. We hope it is not.

The U.N peacekeeping force of a thousand Canadians is already deployed in Yugoslavia, attempting to gain control of the Sarajevo airport so that food supplies can be flown in, but Serbian strongman Slobodan Milosevic's deadly attack on Bosnia continues.

While from a humanitarian standpoint, the Serbian attack is reprehensible, feuding between the Serbs and other ethnic groups on the Balkan Peninsula dates to the 1918 formation of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes. For most of that time, Croatia and Bosnia have strived for independence. Ethnic feuding of that duration will not be resolved quickly. The breakup of the Soviet Union only fueled the fires of those pushing for independence in the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

The ethnic fighting in Yugoslavia must be resolved by those involved and all that likely can be accomplished by the injection of U.N. peacekeeping troops is to stop the fighting and begin negotiations aimed at reaching an acceptable settlement. That should be the thrust of U.N. involvement.

Bush appropriately noted that "it's right for the United States not to go ramming in as the sole perpetrator of force." The United States really has no business in Yugoslavia's internal affairs since the fight there does not threaten United States security or safety in any way.

It's best for the United States to stay out of the internal affairs of other nations unless the warring threatens the U.S. Bush should be cautious in treading on the internal affairs of other nations.

GEORGE WILL

Hysteria-mongers prepare for battles

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court is most prolix when least principled. On Monday the court produced one pound 14 ounces of opinions about abortion. It's mostly pseudo-constitutional reasoning traces back 19 years to 57 words by which the court severed its original abortion decision from the Constitution:

Will

"The right of privacy, whether it be founded in the Fourteenth Amendment's concept of personal liberty and restrictions upon state action, as we feel it is, or, as the District Court determined, in the Ninth Amendment's reservation of rights to the people, is broad enough to encompass a woman's decision whether or not to terminate her pregnancy."

In that Roe vs. Wade decision in 1973, the court announced a "fundamental" right to abortion. That right is a subsidiary of the "privacy" right that the court discovered in the Constitution in 1965. As for attaching those two rights to a particular part of the Constitution's text, the court treated that as a trivial detail — almost a matter of taste.

You say the Ninth Amendment, I say the Fourteenth. You say Tomato, I say Tomahto. How suitable that the decision subsequently defended by "pro-choice" rests on a judicial invitation to choose where you say the Constitution contains the "fundamental" right to abortion.

By this 1973 decision, at once frivolous and arrogant, the court "constitutionally disentitled" (Justice White's words in dissent) 50 state legislatures from deliberating about the proper balance of the many values involved in protecting, or not protecting, fetal life. Now the court has compounded its muddle by affirming the 1973 decision while granting legislatures latitude to enact regulations that do not place an "undue burden" on the abortion right.

Pro-abortion forces say this test gives scant guidance to legislators. They are right and it serves them right. The "undue burden" test is just another flight of judicial legislating. But that is exactly what the pro-abortion forces welcomed 19 years ago when, doing an end run around democratic processes, they incited the court to manufacture an abortion right out of the manufactured privacy right.

Where will the court, which pretends to be construing the Constitution, find its criteria of "undue burden?" In the Ninth Amendment? The Fourteenth? No, it will find the criteria where it really found the abortion right itself, in the personal preferences and social agendas of various justices.

This "undue burden" test guarantees a third decade of litigation. Chalk up another triumph of "moderation."

The media probably see none of their prejudices in descriptions of this court as "moderate" when it plods along paths strewn with precedents of judicial extremism. Last week the court, faithful to the illogic of earlier "establishment of religion" decisions, decreed the annihilation of a tradition as old as public school graduations — prayers at graduations.

Now the court's refusal to overturn the extremism of Roe vs. Wade is commended as "moderation." Still, liberals did not get the "worse is better" decision they wanted. An explicit overturning of Roe would have made it easier for them to surf toward electoral victories on a wave of synthetic hysteria: "We are all that stand between you and the imminent peril of 50 state laws banning abortion."

Since Monday morning the hysteria-mongers have been hard at it, but they are unconvincing. The culture has moved. More than 90 percent of abortions occur in the first trimester (12 weeks); half occur in the first eight weeks. Even if Roe had been overturned, few if any states would have enacted laws significantly impeding such abortions.

The culture was moving before the court moved in 1973. Michael Barone, author of The Almanac of American Politics, notes that in the five years before 1973, 18 states (including Governor Reagan's California) — states with 41 percent of America's population — liberalized abortion laws. By 1973 two-thirds of Americans lived in those states or within a 100-mile drive of one of them.

The process of persuasion and accommodation, sometimes called democracy, was working. Then the court aborted the process, nationalized the issue and made litigation rather than legislation the medium by which abortion policy would be made.

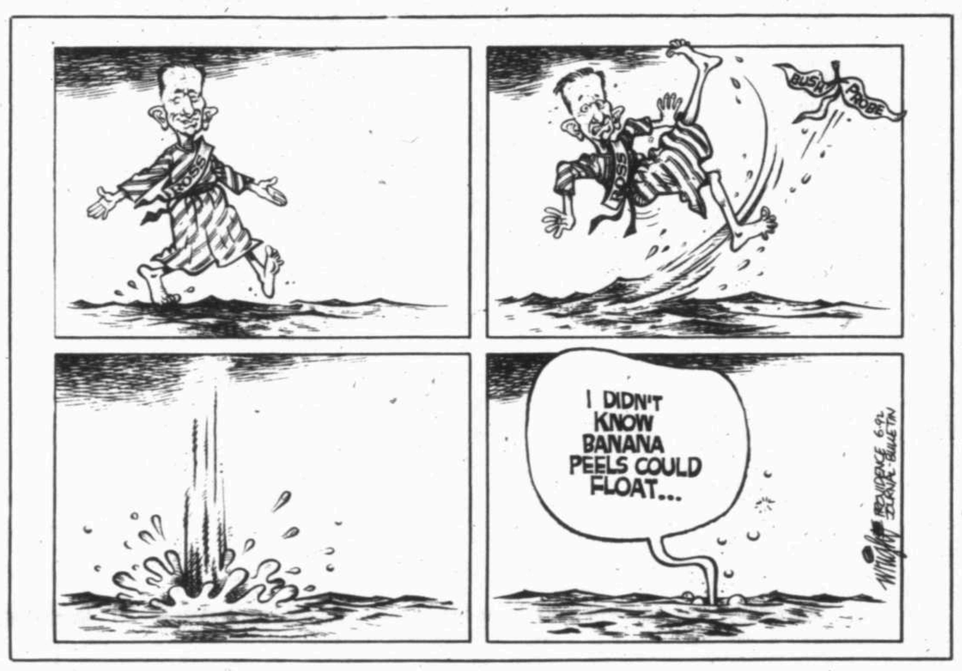

The core of Monday's ruling is contained in the opinion by Justices O'Connor, Kennedy and Souter. They say respect for precedent explains their refusal to overturn Roe.

The arrogance that is the essence of all this is revealed when the three justices say the court has called "the contending sides of a national controversy to end their national division by accepting a common mandate rooted in the Constitution."

That is: Children, shush. Your arguing is giving us a headache. Democracy is too noisy. Obey the mandate we find "rooted" in the Constitution.

Rooted where? Oh, in the Ninth Amendment. Or the Fourteenth. Whatever.

Congress needs new blood

With political prognosticators pegging congressional turnover this election year on the order of 100 seats — a not unrealistic prospect — it seems that the 30,000-plus people who work on Capitol Hill are having a tough time of it these days.

The Congressional Management Foundation has come to the rescue with a daylong seminar led by two psychologists. Organizers hope that the seminar will help cure widespread depression and frustration among the thousands of faceless staffers who wield much behind-the-scenes power on Capitol Hill. If current predictions hold, many of those staffers will lose their patrons in November and, more importantly, their power and their jobs.

If a few thousand aides depart Capitol Hill along with those who retire or are defeated this year, it probably will be a net gain for the country. New blood is needed on Capitol Hill, and nowhere is it more necessary than among the semipermanent cadre of aides who spend their days telling their bosses that certain things, like cutting spending and taxes, simply "can't be done."

Motivation exists for POW search

Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin certainly upstaged himself and the historic arms reduction agreement with his bombshell assertion that U.S. prisoners of war may be alive in Russia.

And it's no wonder; embedded deep in American psyche is admirable determination that fellow Americans, especially those who fight under its flag, should never, ever be abandoned by their country.

We'll leave to others just how much Yeltsin understood this trait, and whether his bombshell was a calculated attempt to help win billions in U.S. aid for Russia.

Yeltsin himself disclosed the possibility, which makes it hard to imagine why he'd partake in any cover-up now.

A joint U.S.-Russian commission, already in existence since last January, will examine all information available in Soviet archives.

There will be no lack of motivation in any corner for pressing ahead with the investigation. But it must be done calmly and rationally, as well as with a healthy respect of the facts, wherever they lead us.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 2, the 184th day of 1992. There are 182 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 2, 1881, President James A. Garfield was shot by Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed office-seeker, at the Washington railroad station. Garfield died the following September.

On this date:

In 1566, the French astrologer, physician and prophet Nostradamus died in Salon.

In 1776, the Continental Congress passed a resolution saying that "these United Colonies are, and of right, ought to be, Free and Independent States."

In 1890, Congress passed the Sherman Antitrust Act, designed to prevent restraint of interstate trade or commerce with foreign nations through trusts.

In 1892, 100 years ago, the first populist party convention opened, in Omaha, Neb.

In 1917, 75 years ago, rioting broke out in East St. Louis, Ill.

In 1926, the United States Army Air Corps was created.

In 1937, aviator Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, disappeared over the Pacific Ocean while attempting to make the first round-the-world flight at the equator.

In 1955, the "Lawrence Welk Show" premiered on ABC television.

In 1961, author Ernest Hemingway shot himself to death at his home in Ketchum, Idaho.

In 1976, the Supreme Court ruled the death penalty was not inherently cruel or unusual.

You too can unlock secrets of spelling

I, too, was shocked to learn that the vice president of the United States didn't know how to spell potato.

He was in front of a group of kids in a school and, mistakenly, advised a 12-year-old boy to put an "e" at the end of potato.

Grizzard

I don't think that little slip-up will hurt the Quayle-Bush ticket (they've reversed it for now), however, because the people who get most upset about misspelled words, besides teachers, are editor

And most editors aren't Republicans, so that's that.

But I happen to be one of the great spellers of all time, and if the vice president needs any help before holding a spelling bee with another group of kids, perhaps he might want to call me for advice.

Regardless of whether he calls me or not, on second thought, I'm going to try to tell Dan Quayle, and anybody else who can't spell, my secrets to Spelling Correctly:

SECRET 1: If you're not sure whether or not a word ends in "o" or "oe," it's best to go with just "o."

You don't spell stereo, cameo, go-go (as in the late dance), polio, portfolio, potato or tomato with an "e'."

You don't spell buffalo with an "e" either. Off the top of my head one of the few words I can think of that ends in "oe" is canoe, and the "oe" is pronounced "oooo." So there.

SECRET 2: (Which rhymes with what the end of canoe sound like, in case you're still confused). It's "i" before "e" following a "c." Like in recieve. Or is it the other way around?

SECRET 3: If you're not sure about a secret, just go past it as fast as you can and maybe nobody will notice.

SECRET 4: The way to remember how to spell Mississippi correctly is to memorize the following: "M-i-crooked-letter-crooked-letter-i-crooked-letter-crooked-letter-i-hump-back-hump-back-i."

SECRET 5: The way to remember how to spell Chicago is to memorize: "Chicken's in the car and the car won't go."

SECRET 6: My grandfather taught me secrets 4 and 5. Good spelling runs in our family.

SECRET 7: Never try to outspell anybody with a last name like Zyskowadawitz.

SECRET 8: If you're trying to spell the name of a city in China, but haven't got a clue, add a lot of "x's" and "pings" in there. Even most editors don't know how to spell Xpingdingxping, where they make bicycle tire pumps.

SECRET 9: Ignore the British spelling of certain words. They might spell color as colour, for instance. Remember they also spell elevator as lift, too, and we might be doing the same thing if Paul Revere hadn't had a good hourse. I mean, horse.

SECRET 10: The "g" in gnat is silent, but you have to put it there anyway. I don't know why exactly, but I also don't know why there's an "h" in rheumatism or why the "n" in Clemson stands for knowledge.

SECRET 11: If somebody asks you to spell a really long word like antidisestablishmentarianism, take your best shot, and if you miss it, like I probably did, ask them to spell a means of transportation that is spelled the same way backwards.

SECRET 12: Eskimos ride in them.

SECRET 13: In spelling any word that begins with a "q" a "u" will always follow. As in quagmire, quotation and quapotatoe, which is what you get if you cross Dan Quayle with a guy from Idahoe.

ART BUCHWALD

There's no reason to fear bantam billionaire

It probably doesn't make sense, but Rotweiler told me that he has a fear of Ross Perot.

I said, "Ross Perot is a great American, and there is no reason to be afraid of a bantam billionaire."

Buchwald

"What scares me is that during his business career Ross kept hiring investigators to check up on people he didn't trust. He even signed on a detective agency to look in on George Bush and his family when Bush was vice president of the United States."

"Every businessman hires people to check out the country's leaders. As I understand it he and Bush were in disagreement on how to run the country. After Perot met with Bush he decided he ought to find out more about the vice president in case someday he ran against him for the presidency. There is nothing illegal about that."

"I'm not worried about Bush. I'm worried about myself. Would it surprise you to know that I think I'm being followed?"

"Why would Perot take the time to follow you?"

"He may believe I know something he doesn't know. No one knows what Perot knows, so if he finds out what I know he'll claim he thought of it first."

"That's absolutely paranoid. Do you really believe that Perot is going around spying on American citizens?"

"What would you do if you had all his money? Look, he spied on his employees, and he has photographs of American ambassadors with Vietnamese women. How can you guarantee that he isn't going through my garbage right now?"

"Just because he is a law-and-order candidate doesn't mean that he has no respect for the Constitution. If he's elected there won't be a lot of coddling of criminals or the media. This country is dying for a president on a white horse who will give us back the America we knew. Rotweiler, how often does a man come along who is rich enough to do anything he damn well pleases, without being beholden to all the special interests? Instead of worrying about Perot following you, thank your lucky stars that you have a man who wants to change the way the wind is blowing."

"He doesn't approve of people who fool around."

"Neither does Dan Quayle. The difference between the two is that Perot knows how to spell 'bimbo.'"

Rotweiler kept walking around the room looking for an electronic bug. "He could be listening in on this very conversation," he whispered.

"That's not true. If Perot is going to bug anyone it'll be Bill Clinton."

"Why Clinton?"

"Perot already has enough stuff on Bush."

I felt that I had to defend Perot because if he's elected all of us in the media business will have the time of our lives.

I said, "When a man runs for the highest office in the land he has to expect people to say bad things about him. Perot's honeymoon was over a month ago. Now he has to face the same dirty political mudslingers, but it doesn't bother Ross because he has a mission."

"So did Mussolini," Rotweiler said.

I protested. "You can't compare the two. Mussolini was much fatter and he always wore a uniform."

Handling of Medicare claims is 'thievery' inspector says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has virtually given private insurance companies a license to steal hundreds of millions of tax dollars by contracting with them to process Medicare claims, according to the administration's own watchdog of the program.

The use of outside contractors to handle Medicare claims "is an inherent conflict of interest," and amounts to "thievery," said Richard Kusserow, inspector general of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Kusserow, who is leaving after 11 years in the inspector general's post, discussed is concerns at a parting breakfast gathering with reporters.

Medicare, providing health care coverage to the nation's elderly, has long relied upon private health insurance companies to process its claims. But these contractors often fail to catch bills that first should be submitted to private insurance companies — perhaps themselves — and let the government pick up the tab, Kusserow said.

"They're not going to go after themselves," Kusserow said.

He estimated the problem is costing the government at least $100 million a year.

"What they should be is honest about it and apply for a license to steal," said Kusserow.

When asked about Kusserow's remarks, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan said he thought the system needed "streamlining." But when asked if he thought the companies were stealing from the government, Sullivan replied: "I would not go so far as to say that."

Medicare is under the Health Care Financing Administration, which is an agency of Sullivan's department.

"It's a system that can be improved and we want to improve it," Sullivan told The Associated Press.

Kusserow said the system dates to the 1965 birth of Medicare, when the government lacked the expertise to process medical claims, and computer systems were still in their infancy.

Kusserow said he's been "harping on this for years" within the department and hasn't gotten any action because of bureaucratic inertia and politics.

He said millions of dollars are lost to inefficiency because the claims process varies from state to state, because different contractors using different rules, and incompatible computer systems are handling the paper.

"My personal preference is they should get out of it entirely," Kusserow said of Medicare's contractors.

He has suggested turning over the claims business to a handful of data processing companies. Better paperwork efficiency and sharper screening of claims alone would save the government $250 million a year, Kusserow said.

Utah will stop defending abortion ban

Associated Press

Utah's governor said Wednesday the state will stop defending its outright ban on most abortions, while Alaska's governor ordered an end to state funding of abortions not required for medical reasons.

Gov. Norm Bangerter saidUtah won't ask the federal judge hearing a legal challenge to its 1991 anti-abortion law to ignore the U.S. Supreme Court's reaffirmation Monday of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

But he said the high court's decision, which upheld parts of a Pennsylvania law regulating access to abortion, sustains the constitutionality of several provisions of Utah's law.

"We are not abandoning the case," he said.

The Utah statute bans abortion except in cases of reported rape or incest, when the mother's life and health are in danger, and in cases of grave fetal defects. The GOP-dominated Legislature had hoped the law ultimately would overturn Roe vs. Wade.

In Juneau, Alaska, Gov. Walter J. Hickel said he had asked Health Commissioner Ted Mala to propose regulations by Tuesday to end state funding of all abortions except those needed for medical reasons. After public hearings, the regulations could become effective by mid-September.

Alaska is one of 12 states that fund most or all abortions for poor women through the state-federal Medicaid program. The right not to use state money to fund abortions has been upheld previously and wasn't at issue in the Supreme Court's latest abortion case.

In 1982, Alaska voters handily defeated a ballot measure that would have ended state funding of abortions. The latest move by Hickel, a Roman Catholic who has long opposed abortion, enraged abortion-rights advocates.

Randall Burns, executive director of the Alaska Civil Liberties Union, said his group will challenge the issue in court once the regulations take effect.

"Once again the white majority is imposing its will on those who have the least defenses against the bureaucracy," Burns said. "It's just appalling."

In Utah, the American Civil Liberties Union is backing a lawsuit filed by Utah women and abortion providers.

The state's lawyer, Mary Anne Wood, wrote late Tuesday to U.S. District Judge J. Thomas Greene to concede the apparent unconstitutionality of the part of the law that prohibits non-therapeutic abortions in the first 20 weeks of pregnancy.

The judge was away and not expected to return until July 10.

Greene had been awaiting the Supreme Court's ruling in the Pennsylvania case to decide whether the Utah law violates a woman's fundamental right to abortion.

Panel clears Bush of wrongdoing in hostage release

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A special House investigative panel concluded Wednesday that George Bush did not travel to Paris in 1980 to take part in any discussions aimed at asking Iran to delay the release of American hostages.

The notion that Bush, then the Republican vice-presidential nominee, might have made such a trip in an effort to damage President Jimmy Carter's prospects in the November election that year has been part of a persistent but unproved broader theory that has long swirled around Washington.

But Wednesday the House panel, the bipartisan October Surprise Task Force, created in February, issued an interim report whose only conclusion was that Bush did not travel to Paris in late October 1980, when, the theory goes, such a meeting with Iranian representatives took place.

"I can now report that all credible evidence leads to the conclusion that President Bush was in the U.S. continuously during the October 18 to 22 time period and not attending secret meetings in Paris, France," said Rep. Lee H. Hamilton of Indiana, the ranking Democrat on the task force.

Hamilton said the panel's conclusion had resulted from its examination of the logs of the Secret Service detail assigned to Bush and from interviews with the agents themselves. The panel did not release copies of those logs or transcripts of the interviews along with its report Wednesday.

Hamilton noted that the panel's interim finding did little to establish the truth or falsity of the broader conspiracy theory: that the 1980 presidential campaign of Ronald Reagan, for whom Bush was the running mate, persuaded Iran not to free until after the election more than 50 Americans taken hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran the year before.

"I must emphasize," Hamilton said, "that the whereabouts of President Bush in 1980 does not in itself resolve the many allegations under investigation by the task force."

The hostages were ultimately freed by Iran on Jan. 20, 1981, the day that Reagan was sworn in as president. The theory that the Republican campaign had engineered a delay in that release gained heightened public interest a year ago, when Gary Sick, who had been a national security aide in the Carter White House, said he had reached the conclusion that it was true. Under the theory, it was in exchange for the delay that Tehran later received American arms shipped through Israel.

The Reagan campaign had been fearful that Carter would salvage his re-election through an 11th-hour arrangement to have the hostages freed just before the voting — that is, that he would spring an "October surprise," a phrase that has become a catch-all to describe the entire episode and the many accusation surrounding it.

Bush has firmly denied both the existence of any such conspiracy and particularly the role attributed to him in some accounts. At the White House Wednesday, the presidential spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said, "We are glad that Congress, in a bipartisan report, concluded what we knew all along: that President Bush had no involvement with any alleged meetings in Paris in October 1980."

The story that Bush took time off from the campaign to travel secretly to Paris to consummate such a deal has always been one of the more extreme subplots of the startling "October surprise" accusations. Indeed, that story had been promoted by people widely recognized as having limited credibility.

Yet the accusation about Bush once so tantalized Ross Perot that last February he sent investigators to interview a state prison inmate in Missouri who claimed to have flown Bush to Paris aboard an SR-71 Blackbird spy plane. Perot said he realized the man was a fraud when he was unable to describe how to start the SR-71.

The heart of the conspiracy theory, a part that remains unresolved, revolves around William J. Casey, who was Reagan's 1980 campaign chairman and became director of Central Intelligence in the Reagan administration.

This story holds that Casey, who died in 1987, traveled twice to Madrid in the summer of 1980 to meet a delegation of Iranian officials and negotiate a delay in the hostages' release.

When that accusation about Casey was first made by Sick, Casey's friends insisted that he had not left the country during that period.

But it was later disclosed that he attended a conference in London that summer, and much of the ensuing debate has focused on whether he used that trip as a cover to travel to Madrid.

California sends out thousands of state IOUs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California on Wednesday issued its first state IOUs since the Great Depression as a budget standoff left the state cashless on the first day of the fiscal year.

"California doesn't need any more bad news," said state Controller Gray Davis, who signs state checks and on Wednesday sent out 13,000 IOUs instead. Most were for tax refunds.

"In the last year alone, we've had riots, earthquakes, fires. The last thing we need is to compound these problems by declaring insolvency and paying our bills with IOUs," Davis said.

Three other states — North Carolina, Illinois and Rhode Island — started the July-to-June fiscal year without budgets. Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles signed a $31.5 billion state budget Wednesday, 17½ hours into the new fiscal year.

North Carolina enacted an emergency resolution that kept the state running while budget negotiations continued.

Although Ohio passed its budget on time, Gov. George Voinovich started the fiscal year by cutting state spending by $315.7 million to help offset a projected $520 million deficit. He said there was more fat to be trimmed.

In Oregon, the Republican-controlled House defeated a plan by Democratic Gov. Barbara Roberts to introduce a 3.5 percent sales tax. Oregon is one of just five states without a sales tax.

Cashless California, with no budget agreement in sight after six months of bitter infighting between Republican Gov. Pete Wilson and the Democrat-controlled Legislature, last issued IOUs in 1936 during the Depression.

It is in its worst economic downturn since then, with 700,000 lost jobs since 1990 and an 8.7 percent unemployment rate. About 1 million people in California are jobless.

The IOUs, dubbed "registered warrants" by bureaucrats, are numbered checks for state workers, vendors and others that can be cashed only with the permission of the state treasurer. The treasurer would periodically publish the numbers of the checks that can be redeemed as money flows into state coffers.

AT&T, union reach contract agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone and Telegraph and its two biggest unions reached tentative agreement Wednesday on a new three-year contract, company and union officials said.

The agreement affects 125,000 workers represented by the Communications Workers of America and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Their previous three-year pact expired May 30, but its terms were extended as talks continued. Over the last two weeks, negotiations have been assisted by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Officials said details of the new contract would not to be released until today, but AT&T spokesman Herb Linnen said it would "enhance AT&T's competitiveness and give employees an impressive range of wage and benefit improvements."

"We think it is a fair contract," said CWA spokesman Jeff Miller.

Union ratification will not begin until negotiations over local issues are resolved, said Miller. He said those talks will start Monday and should be resolved within a week.

They involve work rules, overtime and job titles that are specific to each of AT&T's individual business units, such as manufacturing plants, heavy switching equipment installation and new technology research.

County, city work to keep residents dry

■ Enrollment in a federal flood insurance program may benefit homeowners with property in flood plains.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Water on the West Texas plains is a welcome sight most of the time but not when pouring rain turns into a flood.

And if your house is in a 100-year-flood zone, it's a candidate for drenching.

Damage caused by flooding is something Midland city and county officials are trying to prevent by requiring the issuance of floodplain permits for any housing developments and additions in rural Midland County.

And there is good cause, as Rene Franks, design engineer for the city of Midland, noted:

"There's one (playa lake) in everybody's backyard — practically," Ms. Franks said.

Playas, old buffalo wallows and draws are usually dry year-round.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Midland design engineer Rene Franks

But there are exceptions, such as Monahans Draw and Midland Draw, and unusually wet years, such as 1968 and 1986 — and the last two years.

When heavy, steady rains come and flood waters start rising, homeowners in low-lying areas get worried not only about water damage and their own survival but about costs — particularly if there is no flood insurance on their houses.

Now that Midland County is participating in the National Flood Insurance Program, county residents may get flood insurance, which is a requisite to selling their houses particularly if their loans were funded by federal money.

Grand jury probe likely for Erdmann

LUBBOCK (AP) — Indicted pathologist Ralph Erdmann, who has been accused of losing body parts and performing autopsies to meet prosecutors' needs, will likely face a grand jury investigation, a district judge said Wednesday.

Judge John R. McFall listened to closing statements in a three-day inquiry examining Erdmann's troubled career Wednesday, but deferred a ruling until today.

When asked outside of court if the evidence presented against Erdmann will be sent to a grand jury, McFall responded: "I think it probably will."

A Hockley County grand jury indicted Erdmann in February, accusing him of falsifying an autopsy. The 65-year-old Lubbock doctor has since been accused by Odessa police of losing a murder victim's head.

Erdmann did not attend any of the hearing this week, which was not a trial, but simply a gathering of evidence to determine probable cause of wrongdoing by the doctor.

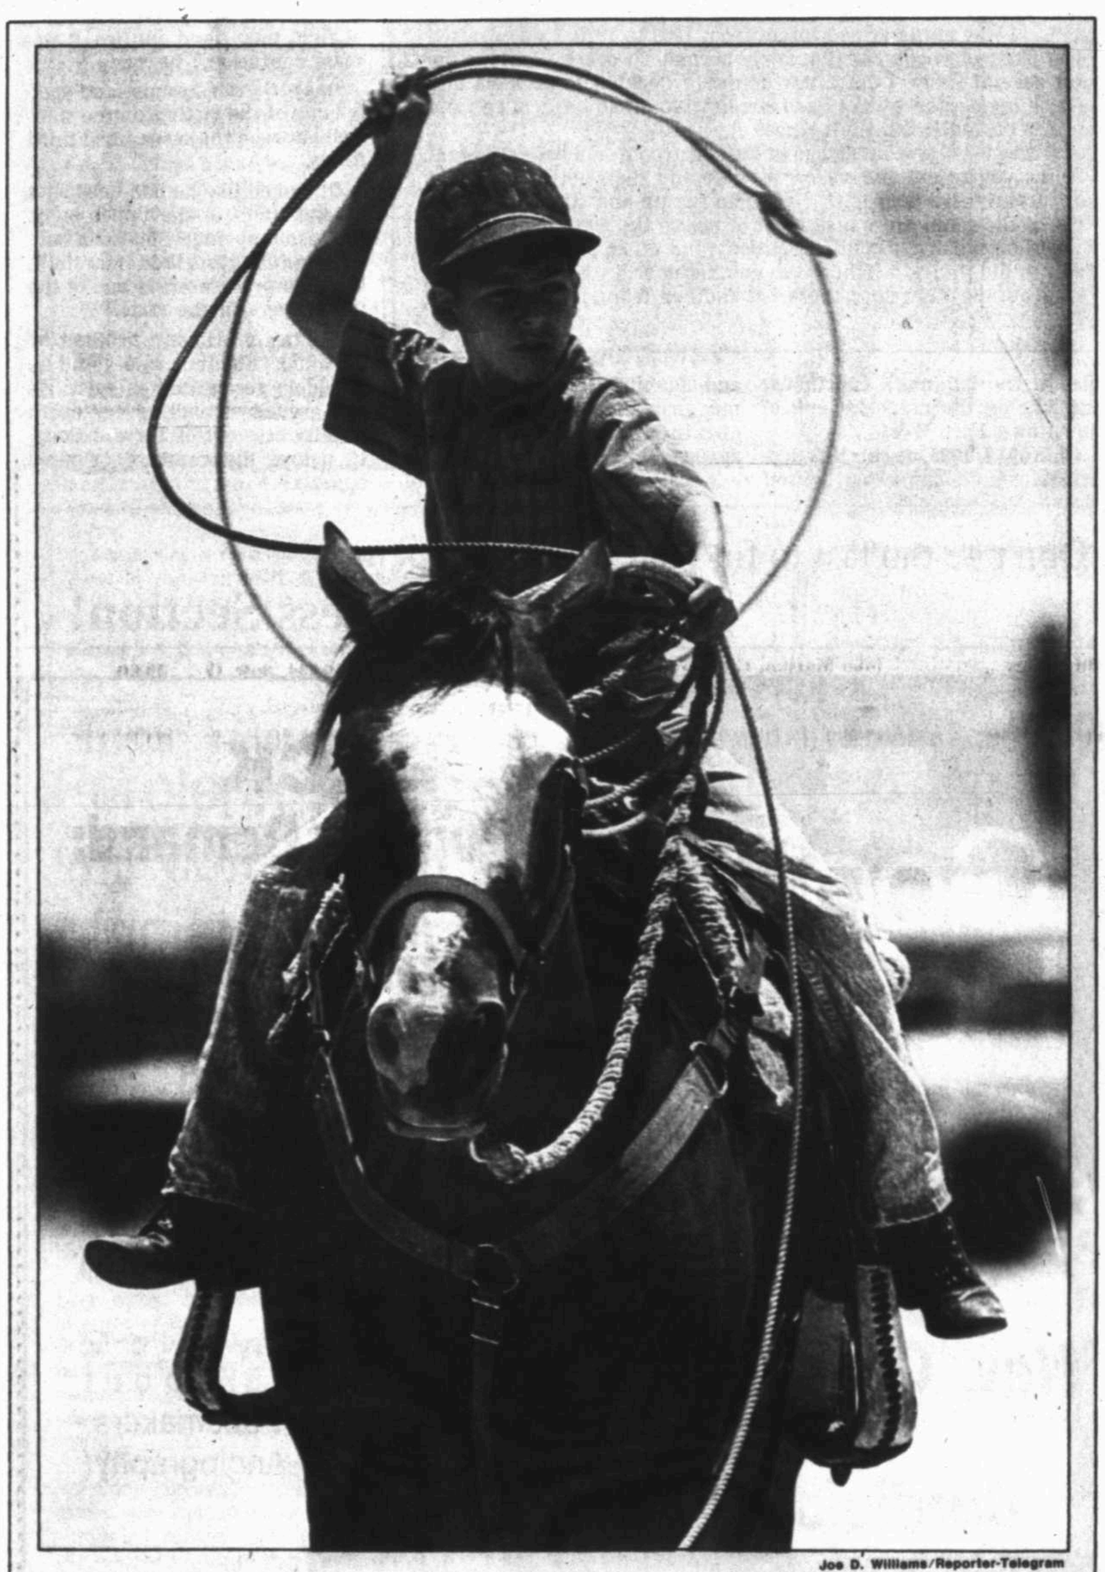

Repeated phone calls to Erdmann's Lubbock residence by The Associated Press went unanswered Wednesday.

Testimony in the hearing described a pathologist without any sense of order. Erdmann documented scars on bodies, brain abnormalities and even teeth that medical experts now say were never on the bodies Erdmann examined.

Lubbock police detectives testified they have delved into an investigation of more than 100 questionable Erdmann autopsies.

Investigators said 42 autopsies contain inconsistencies between Erdmann's findings and conclusions by funeral home directors.

After-school program stretches safety net under 'latch-key kids'

■ On-site after-school care pilot program is set to expand from two schools to six.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

After a day at school, a television for a baby sitter isn't good enough.

"There are still developmental needs that are not being addressed," said Karen Campbell, child care coordinator for the YMCA.

That situation was identified during a survey of Midland's human service needs several years ago and a task force was formed to look at the problem.

"We planned on an on-site after-school program. It's kind of a wave of the future," said Joan Baskin, who chaired the task force prompted by Midland Introspective in 1988.

"It's a wonderful marriage of the school district . . . and the nonprofit provider," Ms. Baskin said of the program that resulted.

As a measure against the growing number of children home alone, after-school day care will be provided at six elementary schools this fall. Midland Independent School District will share the responsibility with the YMCA and Camp Fire, each involved in three programs.

Although the youngsters will remain at the school building, it won't be a school-like atmosphere, said Ms. Campbell, director of the YMCA programs.

"We just feel with our program we are going to target the needs of a school-age child . . . he needs activities that are different, he doesn't need to be taught again . . .

Haley library celebrates founder's 91st birthday

Staff report

Acclaimed historian J. Evetts Haley of Midland will reach his 91st birthday Sunday and in recognition, a birthday celebration open to the public is set for 3-4:30 p.m. today at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library hosted by the library's board of trustees.

Haley came to Midland in 1906 and developed a strong interest in history while attending West Texas State Normal College in Canyon. His interest in history and cattle ranching led him to write his first book, "The XIT Ranch of Texas and the Early Days of the Llano Estacado," which detailed the operation of the largest ranch in the world enclosed by a single fence.

The historian's second book, which was the author's first to be released by publisher Houghton-Mifflin, was "Charles Goodnight: Cowman & Plainsman." It brought Haley acclaim and set the stage for even more historical works.

Haley unleashed a firestorm of controversy in 1964 with publication of "A Texan looks at Lyndon: A Study in Illegitimate Power." The book was branded as a political tome, although the author insisted it was merely a modern work assessing the political maneuvers of Johnson stating the facts. Political operatives and the press castigated the author, labeling "A Texan looks at Lyndon" a "hate book."

In recent years, however, the tide of public sentiment began to turn. More information came to light about Johnson's political career and, particularly, the publication in 1982 of Robert Caro's first volume of an expansive biography on Lyndon Johnson confirmed what Haley had reported 18 years earlier. Suddenly, Haley's work had been redeemed.

Even today the redemption process continues. The most recent example was publication of the book "Crossfire" by Jim Marrs on which the movie "JFK" was based. That work, examining the assassination of President

Bond set at $50,000 per crack charge

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

A 21-year-old Los Angeles gang member, who was arrested at Midland Park Mall Tuesday for allegedly dealing crack, faces two bonds of $50,000 each for possession and delivery of the drug, officials said.

Kenneth Douglas Bright surrendered to two off-duty sheriff's deputies after the officers saw him allegedly handing another man two packets of crack cocaine in exchange for $1,000, officials said.

A subsequent investigation led police to Bright's temporary residence at Fairmont Apartments where an additional pound of crack was discovered. The seized drug has an estimated street value of $40,000, Sheriff Gary Painter said.

Charles Larry Griffith, 1204 E. Chestnut Ave., led guards on a chase through the mall before he was apprehended. Griffith, 39, was charged with possession of a controlled substance and remains in the Midland County jail on a $50,000 bond.

The deputies, who also work part-time security at Dillard's, observed the transaction at about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, officials said.

According to Painter, $2,500 cash was also recovered at the apartment.

Bright's arrest is at least the 10th arrest of a gang member since the sheriff's department began targeting the problem about two years ago, Painter said.

Cool West Texans have it made in the shade

Todd

It's hot. Not as hot as it is going to get, but it's summertime hot. Comes every year, just like the autumn cooling-off season, the winter cold, and the springtime breezes. Sometimes those seasons are jazzed up with cyclones, tornadoes, thunderstorms, showers, snowfall, sleet, dust storms, high winds, sweat-shop heat.

Hot, hot, hot.

Nothing new.

Today, there's an industry to keep the season outdoors, to keep the environment on the outside. Windows in most moving cars and trucks are rolled up. Office and house windows are shut tight. Air-conditioner units are ordering air around, cooling it, and taking the heat away for a nifty price.

Another convenience.

Conveniences cost. That's one reason why the increasingly chain-dominated convenience food-and-stuff stores are thriving. Power and energy companies cater to conveniences and, in many cases to necessities. People, like their friends up in the air, in the backyard, out in the pasture, and in the wild, like to be comfortable.

Your beloved pets and other animal friends, be they dogs, cats, horses, mules, goats, lambs, pigs, birds, turtles or gerbils, demonstrate that. Come heat of the day, and they head for the shade, a bit of breeze, and a drink of water.

As big as West Texas is, you'd think we could have a bit of nature indoors. It's good for your health which, if you want to convert that to money, is worth more than any bank account or insurance carrier you could name.

Those independent West Texans, Clayton and Modesta Williams, were on the mark, and into the money, when they put a lot nature into their atrium of their bank building in the early '80s. It's a wild but tamed environment of flowering plants, trees, fish and birds.

There's a lot of room in West Texas to spread out and do things right. We're not exactly New York City, Chicago, Tokyo, London or even Dallas. We've got room to spare. We don't have to build tall, though the price of prime real estate might encourage that.

Looking back, you'd think that town planners could have been more generous in laying out homesite lots. But, as always, money comes into play. The more lots you sell, the more money you make. That's the idea. But if we think we are hard-pressed for space, then our imagination and eyesight need adjusting. Next time you fly over the Midland area, you might contrast the city with the wide-open space where ranchers and their hands and wildlife roam. There's a lot of territory out there.

Well, it's still hot, whether you are in town or out in the country.

And summertime, in town or country, reminds me of open windows, ceiling fans, oscillating table fans, rolled-up sleeves, hats and bonnets, ice-cold water in burlap-wrapped jugs, ice houses, ice boxes, hand fans pushing the air about in church and in revivals.

And if you were progressive enough way back to go to the moving-picture show, if it wasn't against your parents' religion, you might go to the show on Saturday afternoon, certainly not on Sunday, and hear and smell the old water-coolers laboring to keep you comfortable so that you will come back next Saturday.

And when you walked back home in the heat of the day, you'd pass under as many shade trees as you could to keep reasonably cool and comfortable.

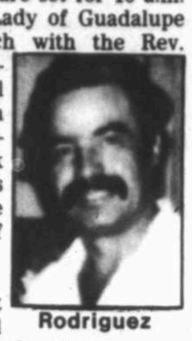

The hot-and-sweaty part of summer was nothing really to fuss about. But you really appreciated a shade.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

DEATHS

Leonard Rodriguez

Services for Leonard Rodriguez, 52, of Midland are set for 10 a.m. today at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with the Rev. Jose Lugo officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park with Thomas Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Rodriguez

Rodriguez died Tuesday at a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born July 3, 1939, in Midland and had lived here his entire life. He was a charter member and the first president of Midland's Chicano Golf Association. He was an independent painting contractor for many years.

He was a Catholic.

Survivors include: his wife, Mary Rodriguez of Midland; seven sons, Joe Rodriguez, Leonard Rodriguez Jr., Gilbert Rodriguez, Jerry Rodriguez and Louis Rodriguez, all of Midland, and Danny Rodriguez and Rudy Rodriguez, both of California; one step-son, Ruben Cruz of Midland; one step-daughter, Maria Linda Cruz of Midland; his father, Felipe Rodriguez of Midland; four brothers, Felipe Rodriguez and Manuel Rodriguez, both of California, Henry Rodriguez of Midland and Arnold Rodriguez of Odessa; one sister, Olivia Velarde of Midland; and 19 grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Manuel Rodriguez, Larry Rodriguez, Eric Contrerreas, Frank Juarez, Hector Corrillo and Manuel Munoz.

Honey Machacek

Graveside services for Honey Baby Machacek, infant daughter of Kenneth and Ramona Machacek of Midland, are set for 10 a.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with Tim Walker of Golf Course Road Church of Christ officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

She died Monday in an Odessa hospital.

Survivors include her parents; one brother, J.D. Machacek of Midland; one sister, Loni Machacek of Midland; her grandparents, Lewis and Ginger Brown and Fred and Doris Machacek, all of Midland; and great-grandparents, Sybil Randolph of Midland and Ethel Brown of Andrews.

Steven Rogers

Services for former Midlander Steven Ray Rogers, 26, of Lawton, Okla., are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday in an Oklahoma hospital.

Ruth Hefren

Services for Ruth (Mrs. Ted) Hefren, are set for 3 p.m. Friday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Stephen Schorr of First Presbyterian Church officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral.

Mrs. Hefren died Wednesday at a local retirement center.

She was the widow of F.N. "Ted" Hefren, an early Midland drilling contractor.

Employees demand tighter security

FORT WORTH — Workers fearful for their lives demanded more security Wednesday after a courtroom shootout that left two dead and three wounded, the third violent incident at the Tarrant County Courthouse in six years.

County officials need to immediately consider how to keep employees safe, said former prosecutor Joe Shannon, who was in an adjacent courts building at the time of Wednesday's shooting.

"You can walk into this courtroom with an Uzi in your coat and no one would know the difference. It's ridiculous. And a shooting like this will bring out the copycats," Shannon said.

"You go in a federal courthouse and a calculator will set off a security device," he added.

Killed Wednesday when a gunman stood up in the tiny courtroom and wordlessly opened fire were Tarrant County Assistant District Attorney Chris Marshall, 41, and John Edwards, 32, an attorney with a Dallas law firm.

Appellate judges John Hill, 45, and Clyde Ashworth, 69, were both wounded and taken to Harris Methodist Hospital, where Ashworth was in critical condition and Hill in good condition. Also wounded was Steve Conder, 27, an assistant prosecutor, who had an abrasion to his right shoulder. He was treated and released.

A third judge, David Farris, escaped unharmed after diving under the bench. "I expected to come around and let me have it," he said.

George Lott, a 45-year-old man claiming to be the gunman, was taken into police custody after he turned himself over to a Dallas television station.

Lott was held Wednesday night in Tarrant County Jail on six arrest charges: two capital murder charges, three charges of deadly assault on a court participant and one charge of carrying a weapon in a place where weapons are prohibited.

Fort Worth police spokesman Lt. Ralph Swearingin said the arrest charges are not formal charges. Swearingin said he expects authorities to present evidence to the district attorney possibly Thursday.

Wednesday's shootings brought grim reminders of previous tragedies at the landmark courthouse that sits on the northeast end of downtown Fort Worth.

On Aug. 1, 1989, ex-sheriff's deputy Manny Cabano killed himself and Juanita Hermosilla, his former girlfriend, a day after she had obtained a restraining order against him.

A call for more security followed that shooting but District Judge Sue Koenig said few improvements were made.

Koenig, whose then-husband was shot at in a shooting at the courthouse in 1986, said although costly, security measures would be worthwhile.

"Maybe our society has become more violent and perhaps we need to re-evaluate the costs versus the benefits," she said.

For those who were in the courthouse during Wednesday's shooting, it was a horrifying scene they won't easily forget.

"We heard several gunshots," said Robert Smajstrla, a clerk in the Tarrant County criminal division who was in the basement when the shots rang out.

"There was horrible screaming at first, then rapid gunfire. It was mass confusion," he said.

Smajstrla ran upstairs and spotted one of the victims on the stairwell between the second and third floors.

"It looked like he had been shot several times in the upper body. He wasn't moving," Smajstrla said.

Shannon described Marshall, the slain prosecutor, as one of the top lawyers in the state.

"He has a brilliant, brilliant legal mind," Shannon said. "And he is widely recognized as such. He had argued virtually every death penalty case out of Tarrant County before the court of criminal appeals."

Gunman's statement recalled

DALLAS (AP) — Here is the transcript of George Lott's statements taken by WFAA-TV of Dallas after the suspected gunman turned himself into the station on Wednesday. Lott said he drove to Dallas and requested to speak with anchor Tracy Rowlett after the shootings that killed two people and injured three others. Lott showed the weapons he was carrying and then spoke on tape to the station. WFAA contacted police who took Lott into custody:

"It's a horrible, horrible thing that I have done today. It's a horrible thing. I've sinned, and I may have failed completely. Somebody needs to look into what's happened to Neil.

"In these days and times you can't just simply ask people. You can't come to people and say, 'Here's my evidence; here's the judge — Maryellen Hicks — fixed the case for her friend ... We don't want to hear that, it's boring. We want to see a nuclear bomb go off. You have to do a very, very horrible thing to catch people's attention ...

"I'm sorry. That's the way I see the world. Maybe I'm wrong. That's what I've run into thus far.

"Nobody has control over the judicial system. There are checks and balances for everybody but the judicial system. They check and balance themselves. That's great, however, it really doesn't do the job. Nobody's there to say, 'Well hey, you people went too far.'

"It came down to my window of opportunity was closing. I have to do it sometime when I'm out of jail for the sexual abuse business. I mean, obviously, if I'm in the Illinois penitentiary, I can't do this. So basically, they don't meet every week and this week was the week I could catch them, basically, that's what it comes down to.

"I was shooting at the bench and the judges.

"Well, the clip I had in it held 16 and I had an extra round already chambered when I put the clip in, so that's 17. I ran through that, I maybe went through three or four more after that.

"Something's wrong if they're trying to hide him out. I understand it's a very tenuous thing to put a child under, it's another horrible thing to put a child up there, particularly if they've been sexually abused. But unfortunately, I know that I'm innocent of that charge.

"... I was in the armed forces from 1968 to 1970. I was drafted just like everybody else. I'm fairly normal. I worked construction for several years. I got a law degree. I decided to go back and finish my degree when I had been drafted. I had quit college and proceeded to finish my degree.

"There were several people in the courtroom ... I basically went in the courtroom and sat for a while and then got up and shot apparently five people. One of them got up and started running out of the room. He was in front of me on the way I was going. I was shooting at the court, essentially, but other people got in the way or did things.... There was another door, I wish they guy had gone out the other door, there was another door a lot closer to him ..."

'You can walk into this courtroom with an Uzi in your coat and no one would know the difference. It's ridiculous. And a shooting like this will bring out the copycats.'

— Joe Shannon, former prosecutor

State claim angers landowners

WALLIS (AP) — Anger and frustration are growing among landowners who have been told the state is claiming an interest in nearly 5,000 acres because an original settler didn't fulfill Mexican land-grant requirements.

In letters written to landowners, the state General Land Office claims the state has one-third interest in mineral and surface rights to land straddling Austin and Fort Bend counties.

"You kind of feel like a person that's been burglarized or robbed," Wallis farmer Tim Raska told the Houston Chronicle in Wednesday's editions. "You're fighting mad, but you're fighting the state."

Some of the roughly 150 landowners involved in the dispute met with Land Commissioner Garry Mauro in Austin for two hours Wednesday. Mauro's spokesman Ron Calhoun said the land commissioner said the issue could be settled either with a state constitutional amendment or an agreement of parties that would have to be approved by a judge.

"Each of the alternatives carried some risk," Calhoun said.

Calhoun said the attorney general would have to determine whether Mauro would be shirking his duties to the Permanent School Fund by giving up mineral rights to property used to fund public school programs, the primary responsibility of the land office.

PARTY: Historian's work noted

John F. Kennedy, even cited Haley's work, "A Texan looks at Lyndon," as have other recent works on the Kennedy assassination and Lyndon Johnson.

It's also worth noting that several of the incidents depicted in the popular television mini-series, "Lonesome Dove," which was written by Larry McMurtry, were based on real-life incidents written about first by Evetts Haley in the Charles Goodnight biography.

FLOOD: Better flood maps lie ahead

(From 1B)

"Most people are really not aware of water problems," said Midland County Commissioner Win Brown, who said he abhors "federal control in any step or fashion, but we have to have this."

Even so, flood-plain permitting through the city of Midland's Engineering Department may prevent the building of houses in low areas subject to flooding. Houses may be built in those areas if they are built on piles or on fill dirt above the flood plain.

"I know people who have built (houses) in buffalo wallows," Brown said. "I can't believe developers sold people land in the middle of wallows."

The permitting is an "effort to ensure that people are building in correct places and can get (flood) insurance," Brown said.

Ms. Franks, who is handling flood-plain permits for the city and county, noted that Midland County homeowners, now without flood insurance and unable to sell or refinance their houses, may get flood insurance due to recent action of the Commissioners' Court to place Midland County in the National Flood Insurance Program.

A Midland County topographical map prepared by the United States Geological Survey in 1965 and somewhat updated through the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) depicts a flood plain even in some cases where it does not exist.

"A lot of people have complained about the bad flood-plain mapping, especially outside the city," Ms. Franks said. "But with the budgets that are available to federal agencies and what data exactly exists out there, they did the best they could with what they had."

Meanwhile, with resources at her control, Ms. Franks is working on updating sections on the Midland County maps which denote the more populous areas, such as the Greenwood community east of Midland, the housing development just south of Midland and north of Monahans Draw, the communities west of Midland, and other rural housing developments.

"The county is so huge (939 square miles), and the population is so small that the County Commissioners' Court can't really afford to pay us to do that kind of (updating) job throughout the whole county. We are going to concentrate" on the more populous regions of the county, Ms. Franks said.

"We are going to try to do some good flood-plain maps ... to make it easier to tell if somebody is in a flood plain," she said.

"Within the city," Ms. Franks said, "we are making a concerted effort to improve the mapping by doing our own studies, by updating (maps), by getting better contours inside the city."

Within Midland, about 3,000 properties, including lots, are in flood plains, which were highlighted in 1968 in a 100-year flood. The term really is a misnomer.

"That's little deceptive," Ms. Franks said. "A 100-year flood plain doesn't mean it (a flood) happens once in a 100 years" and that because "we had it in 1968, therefore, we are safe until 2068. That's not true. It really has a 1 percent chance of occurring any year.

"Your chance of getting a fire in your house is much less than 1 percent," Ms. Franks said. "Nobody complains about getting fire insurance, but, if you look at a flood plain, supposedly, your chance of flooding is 1 percent. And a lot of people complain about flood insurance."

Yet, there are people, mostly ranches, who might benefit from the drenching of a flood plain.

"When you are talking about ranches, who really cares if a ranch is in a flood plain?" Ms. Franks asked. "They (ranchers) are delighted to have playas, because they hold water" for their livestock. "The problem (arises when you want) to build your house in one."

NET: Programs grew from Introspective

(From 1B)

there should be a wide range of activities," she said.

"We're not just baby-sitting. We are helping for problems down the road like dropping out" of school, Ms. Baskin said.

At the YMCA programs, youngsters will build socializing skills, have role models and positive guidance, practice success and failure, and learn to make selections on their own, Ms. Campbell said.

That is opposed to the "latch-key" child, who may be "afraid, lonely ... with no one there to help make choices, develop values," Ms. Campbell said.

"The intent was to provide care and a safety net for these children after school," she emphasized.

A similar program with the same goal is the focus of the Camp Fire programs, said Glenna Adams, child care administrator for Camp Fire.

"We help them make right choices in today's world," Ms. Adams said.

"We bring our Camp Fire program into the day care ... (and) work on all types of skills ... and different kinds of activities," she said.

Youngsters can also receive homework help if desired, Ms. Adams said.

In addition to offering quality day care for youngsters, all six programs offer affordable costs to parents.

Costs run about $20 a week with financial aid available and accessible, Ms. Campbell said.

"The idea is to make this service available to all children, not just children whose parents can afford it. It's that important," she said.

The three elementary schools providing after-school day care by the YMCA are Milam, Bowie and DeZavala. Camp Fire will provide the service at Jones, Henderson and Long elementary schools.

Last year, the two non-profit agencies ran one pilot school program each.

"We hope we will have it in all 24 elementary schools" eventually, Ms. Campbell said.

State in brief

■ Houston ACT UP pursues parade permit

HOUSTON (AP) — AIDS activists banned from marching during the Republican National Convention by a statute that limits the number of parade permits say the policy violates their rights.

The AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power wants to march from a Houston park to the Astrodome on Aug. 17, but a parade permit already has been granted for that day to All Peoples Congress and for every other day of the convention.

Ray Kennedy, director of the city department that handles parade permits, said he is willing to talk with ACT UP leaders about other options for demonstrating during the convention.

Kennedy said the activists could demonstrate at a city-approved site during the convention or hold a neighborhood parade, which does not require a city permit.

■ Appellate court rejects parents' lawsuit

AUSTIN — The 3rd Court of Appeals has rejected a lawsuit against the state agency in charge of local jails by the parents of a man who killed himself in the Tom Green County Jail.

Michael Valles committed suicide in the Tom Green County Jail in June 1986 by hanging himself with material torn from a pair of jail overalls, according to the court opinion.

He had earlier slashed his wrists, and had been confined to the jail infirmary, the opinion said.

His parents sued the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, saying the agency was negligent and reckless because it knew of staffing and facility problems at the jail and did not force any changes. Before Valles' death, the commission had cited the jail for violations of standards for care of detainees exhibiting suicidal tendencies.

■ Dismemberment slaying charges reduced

HOUSTON — A man originally charged with capital murder in the slaying and dismemberment of a woman has been indicted on a lesser charge of murder.

Prosecutor Dan Rizzo said the lesser charge was chosen because he said he cannot prove Cecelia Reyes was kidnapped — a necessity for a capital murder conviction.

The lesser charges means that instead of the death penalty, Marquez faces a maximum penalty of life in prison if convicted.

Gerardo Ruz Marquez, a 36-year-old Cuban national, was arrested April 3 in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Reyes. Several days before his arrest, a highway crew found Mrs. Reyes' mutilated torso and right arm stuffed in a cardboard furniture box.

Police have claimed that Marquez, a fence maker, killed Mrs. Reyes because of his "unrequited love" for her.

Mrs. Reyes, who was two months pregnant, was last seen March 26, when she left her job at the Fiesta Beverage Mart to drive home.

■ Former Dallas policeman seeks damages

DALLAS (AP) — A former Dallas police officer who accidentally shot a black florist is accusing the city of pressuring him into quitting his job because he is white.

Vincent A. Reetz, 26, has filed a federal lawsuit seeking $280,000 in damages to recover lost income, prospective retirement benefits and emotional distress. He also is asking to be reinstated to the force.

Reetz was a rookie when he accidentally killed R.L. "Gunny" Rose at his Oak Cliff florist shop.

In his lawsuit, Reetz says he became "nothing more than a sacrificed pawn" for the city so it could avoid racial problems stemming from the incident.

Aging-disorder victim dies on 20th birthday

LONGVIEW (AP) — Mickey Hays, one of the oldest persons to live with a rare aging disorder, died late Tuesday, his 20th birthday.

Hays died in a Longview hospital he had entered earlier that day with chest pains. His grandfather, Algie Callahan, said Hays' lungs failed after heart troubles that were complicated by progeria, a lifelong genetic disorder that causes rapid aging of the body.

Hays brought worldwide attention to progeria 11 years ago when he met a South African boy with the same affliction.

Most children with progeria die before reaching their teens, usually of a stroke or heart-related problems associated with the elderly.

There are fewer than 20 persons worldwide known to have the disorder, said Bill Sample, president of Orlando-based Sunshine Foundation, a non-profit organization that annually sponsors a reunion of children and teen-agers with progeria.

"He was just one of those fantastic guys," Sample said. "Some of the other children, the illnesses hit them earlier and hit them harder and they cannot overcome the obstacles Mickey did and go out to do things they really want to do."

Hays suffered congestive heart failure in 1986 at age 13. Until recently, his only health problems were arthritis and a sensitivity to light for which he always wore a hat.

Hays

Doctors in March found his heart had deteriorated and he was hospitalized twice since then, his grandfather said.

On Monday, Hays told the Longview News-Journal, which was preparing an article about his birthday, that he might make it another year.

"Then again, I might die tomorrow. None of us are promised tomorrow. None of us are guaranteed 20 years, 30 years, 40 years," Hays said.

"I live my life one day at a time, and that's my best advice. Why worry about tomorrow? I don't think about it and there's nothing I can do about it anyway."

The Sunshine Foundation in 1981 arranged for Hays to meet Fransie Geringer, a South African boy with progeria, at Disneyland. After seeing news accounts of that meeting, parents of other children with progeria called the foundation and started the annual reunions.

Hays did not attend the latest reunion, held last week in Lake Wales, Fla.

He kept in touch with Geringer and once went to South Africa to visit him. They last saw each other at the Sunshine Foundation reunion in 1989, a few months before Geringer died at age 16.

In 1985, Hays played a space alien in the movie "The Aurora Encounter." His wrinkled skin, wispy hair and 3-foot stature made him perfect for the part, which he later said helped build his self-esteem.

"People before always used to notice me as somebody different. Now I go somewhere and people recognize me as Mickey Hays, someone who played in a movie," he told The Associated Press in 1988.

Hays dropped out of school in the ninth grade but lived like most normal teen-agers, mowing lawns, riding four-wheelers, going to concerts and drag races. He drove his own pickup, which was specially fitted with extended controls.

In recent years, Hays often gave testimonial and inspirational speeches to church groups.

Parole probe will continue, official says

AUSTIN (AP) — A grand jury investigation into the parole of Kenneth Allen McDuff will continue amid allegations of improper parole practices, an official said Wednesday.

On the last day of a Travis County grand jury's tenure Tuesday, a former parole board official said she testified about her connection with convicted killer Kenneth Allen McDuff.

McDuff was paroled in 1989. Last week, he was indicted on charges of capital murder in the deaths of two women in McLennan County. He is wanted for questioning in the deaths or disappearance of a half-dozen other women.

Travis County Assistant District Attorney Terrence Keel said a grand jury investigation will continue, but refused to comment on the nature of the probe. The next grand jury will be impaneled in mid-July.

On Tuesday, Helen Copitka, a former parole commissioner, told WFAA-TV that she was questioned about McDuff before the grand jury. She said she had "evaluated" McDuff's case for possible parole while working as a paralegal for an East Texas lawyer.

Prosecutors have subpoenaed "any and all records concerning Kenneth Allen McDuff" from Ms. Copitka.

They also have subpoenaed state records of employment of Ms. Copitka and former chairman of the parole board, James Granberry. Granberry, a former Lubbock mayor who now lives in Tyler, did not return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Granberry resigned as parole board chairman in May 1991 after being criticized for voting to parole inmates convicted of violent crimes.

Questions about how McDuff was released from prison have been at the center of a call from top state officials into the Texas parole system.

Gov. Ann Richards has said she wants an investigation into allegations that some former parole board officials are improperly working as paid consultants to help prisoners win early release.

State sues to stop Sierra Blanca sludge dumping

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Wednesday filed a federal lawsuit seeking a court order to stop the proposed dumping of New York City sludge in West Texas.

The lawsuit by the attorney general's office against the Environmental Protection Agency came the same day railroad cars bound for Texas were to be loaded with New York sludge.

State officials claim that spreading the treated municipal sewage could endanger the environment and public health.

A hearing on the temporary court order is scheduled for Monday before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton in Pecos.

The lawsuit demands that the EPA conduct an environmental impact study of the project, and consult with state historical officials about archaeological sites on the Hudspeth County site.

It accuses the EPA of not abiding by federal law in allowing the dump project.

"We want nothing more than the EPA to follow the law, and that is to determine whether the sludge and the methods for its disposal, particularly on such arid land, will harm the environment and create a hazard for the citizens of West Texas," Attorney General Dan Morales said.

The project entails dumping about 250,000 pounds of sludge — which includes arsenic, cadmium, lead, zinc, and pesticides — per day, the lawsuit said.

MERCO Joint Venture, based in Oklahoma City, has a six-year, $168 million contract with New York to transport city sludge by rail and spread it over a 128,000-acre ranch the company owns near Sierra Blanca.

The project entails dumping about 250,000 pounds of sludge per day, the lawsuit said.

The sludge includes heavy metals, such as arsenic, cadmium, lead and zinc, and pesticides, according to the lawsuit.

State officials said they are worried that the sludge will run off into local waterways that lead to the Rio Grande, and that sludge-laden dust could be blown all over the area and later ingested by people.

According to a sworn statement by Kirk Brown, a soil and crop professor at Texas A&M University, "The proposed application of sewage sludge on this particular site is not a beneficial use, but will cause irreparable environmental damage."

A spokesman for the EPA said the agency had not yet reviewed the lawsuit, but defended the sludge dumping process proposed by MERCO as "proven technology" that helps enrich and replenish the soil.

"It's a good alternative to ocean dumping," said EPA spokesman Roger Meacham of Dallas.

Scott Jones, a spokesman for MERCO, said the company was studying the lawsuit and was not prepared to comment yet.

Roy Griffin, a member of a group opposed to the sludge, said of the lawsuit, "This is great because it's related to our claim that this is an experimental project that requires information before it can be deemed safe."

PROBE: Many autopsy reports cause concern

(From 1B)

In 29 of those cases, Erdmann said he opened the skull to examine the brain, while funeral home reports show the heads were never opened.

Lubbock police detectives Doug Davenport and Randy McGuire testified that Erdmann had faked three autopsies and tried to cover up one of them after learning police were investigating.

McGuire also testified Erdmann's work may have been influenced by money his wife received for organizing bone and tissue donations from bodies he autopsied.

Tommy Turner, who was appointed prosecutor pro-tem for the inquiry, told McFall in closing statements enough evidence was presented to charge Erdmann with tampering with evidence, tampering with governmental records and misuse of official information.

"When you take 107 cases and get back 42 with inconsistencies, I think that kind of percentage return shows there is a lot more than speculation of wrongdoing," Turner said outside of court.

Erdmann's attorney, Travis Shelton, a former Lubbock County district attorney in the 1950s, said the inquiry was unfair.

"This kind of inquiry is abhorrent," Shelton said. "Any kind of evidence is admissible — hearsay, third-hand, fourth-hand speculation and pure guesswork," Shelton said. "A person can be forever destroyed without the safeguards of justice in place. There was never a presumption of innocence."

McFall agreed in part with Shelton, but said Erdmann's rights were protected.

"The inquiry is unique in that almost anything is admissible and that bothers me," McFall said. "But the final say comes with the grand jury, and the person's rights will of course be in tact."

Lubbock resident Vicki Steen Wednesday testified Erdmann's autopsy of her mother was filled with errors.

Erdmann's autopsy report shows his examination was done a day before Mrs. Steen's mother, Barbara Gardner, died. It also shows Mrs. Gardner, who died of respiratory failure Feb. 12, 1990, as having her upper teeth in tact.

Mrs. Steen said her mother wore a full upper denture that was out of her mouth at the time of the autopsy.

"She didn't have any teeth," Mrs. Steen told the court.

Supreme court demands order be dissolved

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court on Wednesday ordered a state district judge to remove a protective order that prohibits a newspaper from printing the name of a rape victim.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram has said it has no intention of printing the woman's name, but that it fought the prohibition on the grounds that it violates constitutional guarantees of press freedom.

Known as "Jane Doe," the victim sued the Star-Telegram last year. Two articles about her being raped in 1989 invaded her privacy, she said, claiming that while her name wasn't published, enough details were given that could identify her.

The newspaper has pointed out that the victim was named in the indictment, and that she agreed to testify under her real name in court after prosecutors told her it would help convict her attacker. The man was found guilty.

California quake triggers debate among scientists

By Keay Davidson
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Quake experts quarrel more than most scientists, and Sunday's shakes gave them another chance to bicker.

Their latest dispute: Were the twin temblors that clobbered Southern California really two separate quakes? Or just a quake followed by a nasty aftershock?

In a sense, the dispute is semantic — a quibble over the definition of "aftershock."

But that verbal quibble could influence a larger debate over an important question — can an earthquake on one fault trigger a quake on another fault?

The outcome of that debate isn't irrelevant to Bay Area residents. They weathered the Loma Prieta quake on the San Andreas Fault in 1989, a quake that, some speculate, might have released energy that boosted the chance of another quake on another nearby fault, such as the Hayward.

And history encourages such speculations: Twice in the 19th century, a major quake on one side of San Francisco Bay was followed a few years later by a major quake on the opposite side.

At the least, the dispute over Sunday's shakers is an amusing reminder that seismology remains an inexact science — more like economics than physics.

The dispute began Sunday when seismologists at the U.S. Geological Survey and Caltech in Pasadena reported two separate quakes had hit Southern California. Early clues indicate the tremors struck on two different faults — one in the San Bernardino Mountains, the other in the Mojave Desert.

The first quake measured 7.4 magnitude on the Richter scale and struck 20 miles north of Palm Springs. The other quake, measuring 6.5, hit three hours later, six miles south-southeast of Big Bear.

The Southern Californians labeled each tremor a "quake," period. But opinions were different at the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

"We are actually calling it a 'main shock' and an 'aftershock,' " said geophysicist Bruce Presgrave of the center.

Part of the disagreement stems from semantics — namely, what is the difference between a "quake" and an "aftershock?"

The trouble is, different seismologists define "aftershock" differently. Some say that to qualify as an aftershock, a quake must (among other things) occur on the same fault as the original quake. Otherwise, they insist, it's a separate quake.

Other seismologists take a more laid-back view. To them, if the second quake occurs in the same general area as the first, then to heck with semantic nitpicking — let's call it an aftershock.

"A very similar kind of question occurred with the 1985 earthquakes in Mexico," Presgrave said. "We tend to talk of the 'great Mexican earthquakes of 1985.' But actually, there's a debate about whether it was one quake with a very large aftershock or two separate earthquakes."

A similar debate swirls around the cluster of three quakes near Eureka in April, Presgrave said. "Two of the (Eureka area) quakes were so nearly the same in magnitude that we prefer to talk of them as 'a series of quakes.' That sort of gets us off the hook," Presgrave said with a laugh.

But Greg Anderson of the Berkeley Seismographic Station sides with the Southern California scientists. "I would tend to go with Caltech (in calling each temblor a 'quake') because they've got better (seismographic) coverage of that area (than scientists in Colorado). They have (seismographic) stations all over Southern California and they have very rapid access to those stations."

Conceivably, the second shake might have fit some experts' definition of an aftershock if the two faults were connected by a "hidden" fault, running underneath the mountains to the desert. But the hidden fault would have to be so deep — around 30 miles — that such a link is "pretty hard to believe," Anderson said.

It's a friendly disagreement, Presgrave stressed.

Refugee shelter plans conversion to homeless center

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Brownsville shelter for Central American refugees will close this week after 10 years of harboring tens of thousands of people seeking haven from their native governments.

The Casa Oscar Romero, a national symbol of opposition to U.S. foreign policy, likely will become a center for the Rio Grande Valley's homeless, officials said.

The need for a refuge isn't great anymore, they said, because far fewer Central Americans are fleeing to the United States.

"I think if you read the writing on the wall of whom we're serving, and our reason for being, that has changed," said Hernan Gonzalez, director of Christian Services for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, which operates the 200-bed shelter.

Starting Wednesday, Sister Juliana Garcia Redondo said, no newcomers were allowed to enter. Those on hand will be asked to move along within a about a week, she said.

"They found this place like heaven. Peaceful. They could rest. They sang. They played guitar," said the nun, who has worked seven years at the facility.

"Many of them write back and say they enjoyed the morning prayers and singing. They said it made them come back to their faith, and that was a consolation to me, to hear those reflections."

Casa Romero was founded in 1982 by Catholics in San Benito in the name of the assassinated archbishop of San Salvador.

Back in the rainy spring of 1989, images of Casa Romero were broadcast worldwide when thousands of Nicaraguans overran the Valley, overflowing the six-acre facility to form a tent city of plastic bags and cardboard.

"Casa Romero, in my opinion, was a rallying point for the sanctuary movement nationally," said Silvestre Reyes, who became sector chief of the U.S. Border Patrol in McAllen in 1984. "We had groups coming from northeastern states to look at the situation, lend moral support, to actually work in the Casa."

NAME: Steve Arnold
OCCUPATION: Senior VP Cashier, First City, Texas
VOLUNTEER POSITION: President of Campfire Board of Directors (5th year on the board), Solicitor for United Way

Steve got involved with the United Way by taking on a job as an employee-solicitor at the bank in 1984. The next few years he continued to work as solicitor, then as a coordinator. Then a friend asked him to serve on the Board of Directors of Campfire Boys and Girls. Last year he became president of that board.

"But you don't know -- you can't know -- what it means to be a volunteer, until you're actually involved," he says.

That involvement shifted into high gear last year when campfire was chosen by Midland Introspective along with the YMCA for a pilot program to provide after-school child care. The program took an enormous chunk of time and work, but Steve says it was well worth it. "We're expanding the program next year, going to two additional schools--and the YMCA is getting two more. Planning and funding of those activities are major goals,"he said.

Steve is also involved with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Leadership Midland and Midland Introspective

"There are just so many good people in Midland to work with on volunteer jobs. Good causes, good people."

When asked what he would advise Midlanders to do next year, he grinned. "Buy candy," he said. "Campfire candy."

Man's performances seek to educate public about Indian culture

DALLAS (AP) — Ken Brown has one mission in life: teaching non-Indians what it means to be an Indian.

Brown travels the state beating a bass drum and dressed in the traditional brightly colored clothes of his Kiowa Indian tribe, trying to eradicate stereotypical images of Indians.

"A lot of people are surprised to meet an American Indian face to face," says Brown, who admits that his classic Indian features and braided waist-length hair somewhat belies an otherwise typical urban upbringing.

"They all think we live on reservations in Oklahoma," he said. "A lot of people don't know there are Indians around. I've lived here all my life. I work at the library. I pay taxes. I go to powwows and I try to live a balanced life," he said.

Even though more than 500,000 of the nation's 1.9 million Indians now live in the country's major urban areas, the federal government still targets most of its funding to reservations.

Most Indians come from Oklahoma, Texas' neighbor to the north, which has a reported 252,420 Indians.

In Texas, Native American Indians number fewer than one-half of 1 percent of the state's population.

Because of those figures, and because Native Americans were almost eradicated by settlers to Texas and Oklahoma, Brown says there is even more reason to let people know there are still Indians around.

"This is my view. . . . It makes me feel good that we're approaching the year 2,000 and we still exist," he says. "That there's been 500 years of trying to obliterate us and we're still thriving."

There are 65,877 Native Americans reported living in Texas, and most live in the state's five major metropolitan cities, not on reservations.

Slightly more than 40,000, or about two-thirds of all Indians in the state, live in Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston-Galveston, San Antonio, El Paso and Austin. Only 1,520 Native Americans live on the state's three reservations. The rest live in rural parts of the state.

During his dance performances, Brown often stops to explain to audiences the history behind everything from the song lyrics to the feathers and beads on the clothing he wears.

Still, Brown acknowledges to his audiences with a good-natured grin, "We're different than we used to be. We drive cars. And we don't have to sit on the grass at powwows anymore. We own lawn chairs now."

Texas town's calendar keeps track of its citizens' birthdays

By Lee Schexnaider
Associated Press writer

GHOLSON — There is no excuse for forgetting someone's birthday in Gholson.

It's easy to keep track of birthdays — if you have the town birthday calendar.

"People who have them enjoy them," said Rickey Adair. "They really keep up with things."

Adair is president of the Gholson Baseball Association — the equivalent of Little League — which puts out the Gholson Community Birthday and Activity Calendar.

The association has sold the calendars as a fund-raiser for the league the past two years.

Along with Adair's birthday (Dec. 30), the calendar sports the birthdays of people in and near the city of 692 people as well as a few anniversaries. The calendar also notes City Council meetings and school, water and cemetery association board meetings.

The black and white calendar has a top page — actually the back page of the previous month — that is covered with advertisements. But the lower page is a normal enough looking calendar grid.

Except for the names, 964 in all, some days are blank. Other squares are packed with names.

The two biggest birthday days come in August. Eight birthdays each are listed for Aug. 21 and Aug. 24. However, the busy month for birthdays in Gholson is September with 99.

Adair and his wife, Molly Adair (birthday on Sept. 18), do all the updating of the names and dates on the calendar. Rickey said it's mainly Molly's project.

She said most of the work takes about two months, with the calendar finished in October or November.

"Organizing it is what's hard," Rickey said, leaning against a green fork lift at his Security Products safe building company in Elm Mott. "Molly, she does all that."

The baseball league keeps track of births and deaths in the rural community of about 700 people in northwestern McLennan County.

"We don't take them off (the calendar) unless someone requests it or they are deceased," Molly Adair said.

AP Laserphoto

Justin Roller, 12, stands next to a calendar listing the birthdays of everyone in the small community of Gholson.

Once in a while someone will ask to be taken off the calendar, Rickey said, but more often, friends and neighbors are passing along birthdays to be included. Keeping track of it all is the problem.

"I write them on scraps of paper here, scraps of paper there," said Molly.

Most of all, the calendar is an enjoyment, said Rickey. "It's not a big money maker."

But it is, he said, "good for the community."

The calendars sell for $2 each, and the sales raise about $250 to $350 each year.

"It's too much work for what you get out of it (financially)," he said. The money is spent on "uniforms, hats, shoes — whatever you need."

The calendar is printed by American Speedy Printing Center in Waco. Anita Sandles, an assistant manager with the printing company, said the Gholson calendar is "the only one we've ever done."

"I've never seen a whole community where they put out a calendar for birthdays and anniversaries," Sandles said.

The calendar actually began as a project of the Gholson Volunteer Fire Department and its auxiliary, which started the calendar in the early 1980s.

"We wanted something to make some money," said auxiliary member Peggy Walker (Nov. 21).

The fire department approached Universal Publishing Company in Brookfield, Mo., to publish the calendar, Walker said.

Sue Wilson, a secretary with Universal, said the company has been making community and birthday calendars for about 30 years. The calendars have found their way into Michigan, Wisconsin, Louisiana and Texas.

She said they print them for schools, churches, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts, American Legions, Elks lodges, senior citizen groups and fire departments.

Walker said Gholson folks were enthusiastic about the calendar idea.

"People were glad to give (their) birthdays," she said.

"The original idea was to charge so much a birthday" to have them put on the calendar. But the group decided to sell the calendars to raise money instead.

"We sold it in the stores and by individuals," she said.

Walker said Bill Adams of Gholson was one crackerjack salesman who would take 30 to 40 of the calendars and sell them door-to-door.

Adams, 77 (and born on April 27), said he had "no problem" selling the calendars to his friends and relatives.

Eventually updating the calendar became too time consuming for the fire department. After eight years as a department project, the town calendar lay dormant for a year before the baseball association picked it up.

Adair said as soon as someone no longer puts out the calendar "150 people will say 'What about the calendar?' "

But the Adairs both said the calendar will probably be around as long as people really want it.

"One day they are not going to have it and they are going to regret it," he said.

Teen takes seat on school board

By Robert Guevara
Associated Press writer

SANTA MARIA — Nineteen-year-old Frutoso Villarreal thought he had left public school behind him when he graduated from high school in May of 1991.

One year later Villarreal was summoned back to school, but not because he lacked a credit to graduate, failed a high school exit test or forgot to return a textbook.

Rather, Villarreal heard a calling to serve on his hometown school board.

Last month, Villarreal filed for election, campaigned hard and won a seat to the Santa Maria School Board, becoming one of the youngest school board members in the state, if not the youngest.

"It kind of feels weird," Villarreal said of his near-two-month-old experience. "Yesterday I got called by the business office to sign some payroll checks. Some of them were for my former teachers!"

Villarreal said he decided to run for the board to give Santa Maria students opportunities he and his graduating class didn't have.

Because the district lacks a four-year high school, Villarreal and his classmates graduated from the Progreso School District.

"The main issue here has been getting a high school," Villarreal said. "It's been an issue since my older sister went to school here and she's 35 years old now."

Villarreal said students get tired of being shifted around from school district to school district. He said the problem should be resolved when the district completes its current building program.

"Because we haven't had a full high school, the town hasn't gotten the recognition it deserves," he said. "We have too much talent here, so why don't we leave it here instead of sending it to another high school?"

Increasing parental involvement and lowering the dropout rate are other issues Villarreal would like to address. Poverty and the migrant status of many families don't help matters, he said.

"We have a lot of parents who don't take part in school," he said. "They don't even know who their children's teachers are. They have to get involved."

Though he lacks the expertise of older, experienced board members, Villarreal said his youth is an asset to him on the board.

Villarreal said he can understand the problems students have in school after having been a high school student recently.

"The thing is, you don't necessarily need an education to be a school board member," he said. "You need common sense. You have to decide what's best for the students and the community."

Villarreal's own school experience wasn't exactly squeaky-clean. He's not ashamed to admit he skipped school sometimes and liked to talk a lot in class. "I wasn't exactly an angel," he said.

Villarreal is active in his own education interests.

He attended Texas State Technical College last year and plans to pursue a communications degree at the University of Texas-Pan American this fall.

Summer styles have 'checks appeal'

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Bandanna prints and gingham checks are bustin' out all over this summer.

Both are throwbacks to frontier days and are most recognizable in white with red or blue — the gingham in a light cornflower blue and the bandanna in navy. But less traditional colors fly, too. DKNY mixes them up in black and white: A silk wrap skirt in black bandanna print topped by a black and white cotton gingham baseball jacket and black stretch bustier.

Gingham is riding high at the Limited's Express stores. For the city sophisticate there are bra tops, stretch pants and sexy little dresses. The country look includes rompers, sarong and tie-front blouse. All are priced under $50.

"Anything gingham in our store is really selling," says Philip Monaghan, a vice president at Express headquarters in Columbus, Ohio. "The customer is looking for a no-pattern kind of pattern. She's tired of last year's floral baroque prints."

Black and white gingham from Guess includes a long-sleeved, tie-front shirt, about $56, and a short-sleeved, scoopneck dress, about $94.

One of the most polished looks is Gucci's chocolate and creme gingham separates. A blazer is $635, or $695 double-breasted; pleated pants, $295; and box-pleated skirt, $365.

Also designed with the city sophisticate in mind is a black and white cotton gingham chemise with cord-trimmed jewel neckline and sleeves, $130 by Santa Fe. Then there's Chaus Sport's pink or blue gingham jacket and city shorts, about $100 for both.

One of the best specimens of country chic is Tom and Linda Platt's long rayon sundress with full skirt and suspender straps. In aqua, lime and ivory, it's about $400 at Saks Fifth Avenue.

"We think of gingham as an old-fashioned, old Americana pattern that's suddenly very modern," says Tom Platt. "We call it picnic check because it suggests lounging around with a loaf of bread and a jug of wine."

Bandannas are more closely associated with the sweat of the brow than a summer afternoon in the shade. Hard-riding cowboys tied one across nose and mouth to filter out the dust of cattle stampedes. The less righteous used it to conceal their identity when liquidating the local bank. The 24-inch cotton square also served as a tourniquet for rattlesnake bites.

Now, this relic of the rodeo is being put to gentler, more stylish use.

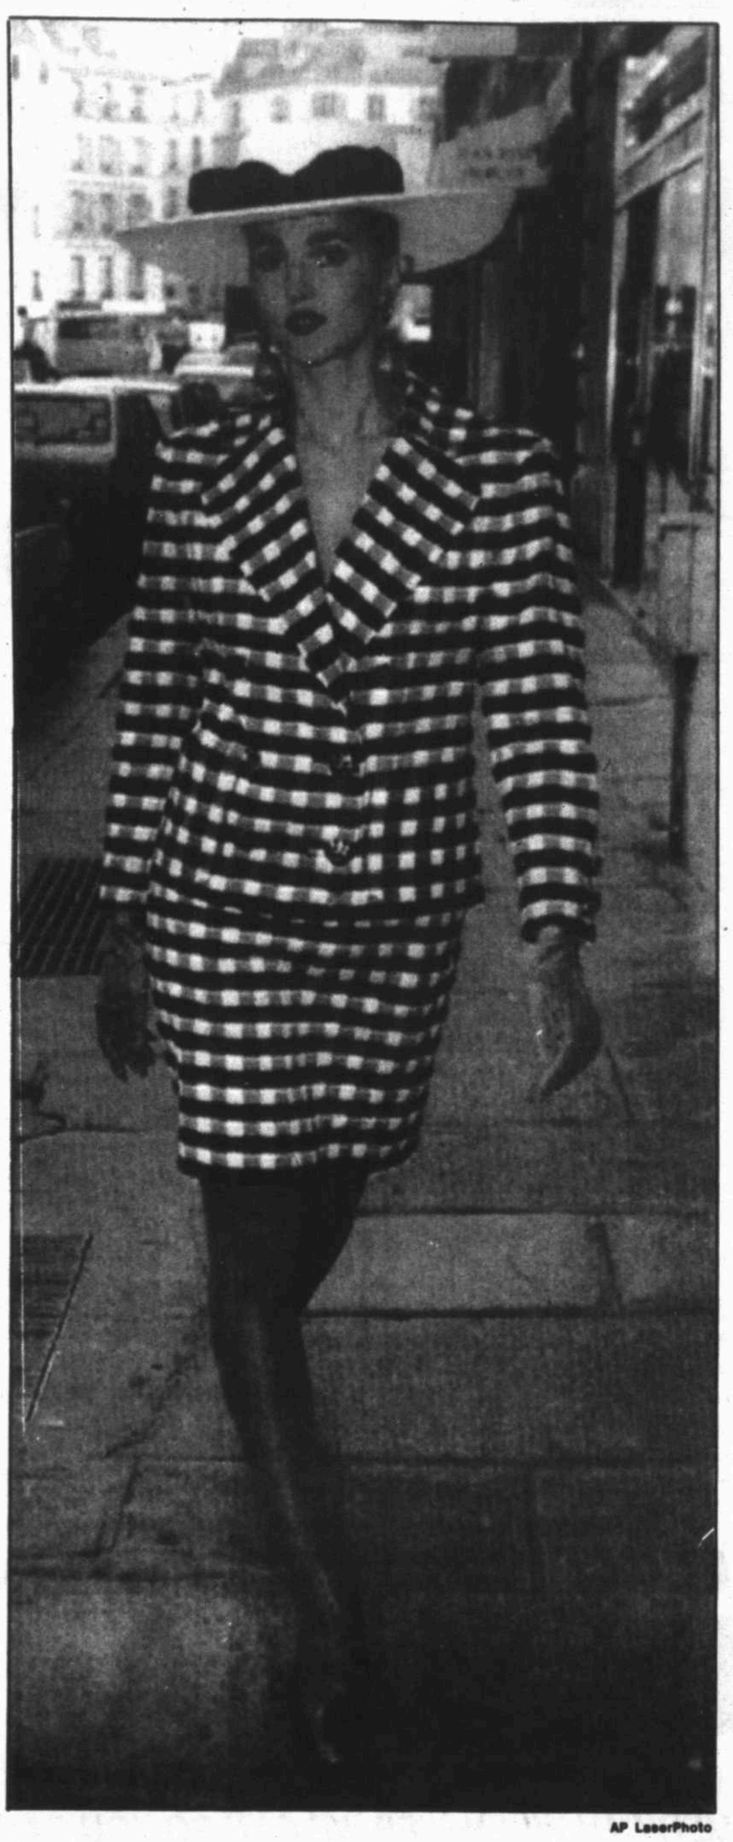

"PRINTS ARE definitely happening this summer, and bandanna prints are selling because they offer the best in a country-Western look," says Allen Schwartz of Los Angeles, design director for a.b.s., the sportswear company.

The a.b.s. line includes both short and long rayon bandanna sarongs, $125 to $160. A sarong dress with button-front white shirt is $190. All in navy or red with white.

Other sportswear options include Lizwear's cotton pique separates in red bandanna print. The camp shirt is $48; drawstring rompers, $64; walking shorts, $44.

Bandannas are also showing up in a parade of other colors. Polo Ralph Lauren has a short cotton sarong in salmon, $85, and matching sleeveless blouse, $95. Lime and ocean blue bandanna maillot swimwear comes from Harbour Casuals, about $60, with matching camp shirt and pull-on shorts.

Bandannas are going out after five, too. Marc Jacobs, designer for Perry Ellis, ushered in the trend at his spring fashion show with a bandanna print sarong skirt paved with sequins. Modi makes a sequinned bomber jacket in red, black and white bandanna print, about $400 at Hannah in Denver.

Shoppers find fashion bargains

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — This is utopia time for those who take their fashion seriously. New fall styles are filling store racks. American designers, toting their fall collections, are crisscrossing the country to promote them. But best of all, top designer merchandise from spring is on sale.

Anyone looking for something in an animal pattern will find Azzedine Alaia's big bathrobe coat, with a swashbuckling collar and a sash to cinch the waist, at Barneys New York. It's made of fake fur that feels like a teddy bear but is spotted like a leopard. It was more than $1,500. Now it's $760.

Barneys New York also has black leather (a "must" for fall) on sale. Chanel's celebrated leather jeans are down to $1,535 from $2,325, while Claude Montana's zippered tunics hover around $1,000, down from $1,725. Not cheap, but then, leather is leather.

At Bergdorf Goodman, Montana's crisply cut silk-twill pants suits are selling for about $1,000 less, though they still cost $1,000 or so. And Chanel's thick white terry-cloth pullover, emblazoned with the signature double Cs, is down to $469.

The hardest thing to find anywhere, though, is a new, longer black skirt. Whenever they come into a store, they immediately sell, no matter what the price.

DEAR ABBY

Affairs with married men are not about sex

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Don't ever stop printing letters about how destructive "affairs" are to marriage.

Van Buren

I'm another woman who became sexually attracted to a married man. I was 30, attractive, and had a handsome, intelligent husband who adored me. I'll admit, he wasn't the greatest lover in the world, but instead of addressing my needs to him, I looked elsewhere.

I met a man 20 years my senior, and the sparks flew! Before I knew it, we were intimate. It wasn't lovemaking — it was cheap, unsatisfying sex on the floor of his office! I couldn't believe I was capable of such degrading, sluttish behavior. It happened several times, and each time I felt worse about myself, so I finally ended the affair.

Almost immediately, I became attracted to another man closer to my age (also married) and the same feelings started up again. Fortunately, nothing happened, but I came close. I was so confused by then, I was disappointed that nothing had happened.

Finally, with the help of God and a good therapist, I was able to end my self-destructive behavior.

Abby, thanks for telling your readers to get professional help before they become powerless over their own behavior. Affairs outside of marriage are not about sex — they are escapes from a multitude of problems to which there are constructive solutions. Keep telling people to get counseling, Abby. It saved my life. — NO NAME, NO CITY, U.S.A.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently divorced and have moved to another state from where my family and ex-husband live.

After I moved, I got an unlisted telephone number. I gave this number to my two sisters and our mother, and asked them not to give the number to anyone else.

So far, I've changed my number three times, only to have one of my sisters or my mother give it to my ex-husband, who then calls to harass me!

I have explained my reasons for paying extra for an unlisted telephone number, but my wishes were ignored. My mother and sisters have my work number in case of emergency. Abby, would I be justified in changing my number again, and not giving it to ANYONE in my family? — FRAZZLED IN FLORIDA

DEAR FLORIDA: Not only would you be justified, you would be very wise.

DEAR ABBY: Now that I am retired and home all day, my wife and I chat frequently. Our house has several rooms and, as we roam about, one of us may continue talking while the other has moved out of hearing range. When this happens, it creates hard feelings, and sometimes anger.

What is the solution? I have read about a beeping device that police attach to the ankles of prisoners to monitor their movements. Perhaps a pair of such devices could solve the problem of letting a spouse know when one has moved out of hearing range. It would certainly reduce domestic friction. — J.E.V.

DEAR J.E.V.: It sounds like a great idea, but after checking out the cost of such a "monitoring device," the idea of talking to someone who is out of hearing range may not seem so traumatic.

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Road to good health can be crowded with detours

By Erma Bombeck

I live in a city that is blessed with bike paths. On weekends there is a parade of exercise enthusiasts, all vying for right of way.

Bombeck

Who has to move to the right? Who must stop and give passage? Who is king of the mountain?

It reminds me of a trip we took to Indonesia a few years ago. There is a pecking order on the highways that explains why religion is such an important part of the people's lives.

There are seven modes of transportation. A horse and carriage is at the lowest end of the spectrum. It must give way to pedicabs, which are little buggies on two wheels. However, if a becak (powered tricycle) wants to pass, it has the right of way — unless the driver encounters a motor scooter approaching, and then he must hit for the ditch. If the motor scooter meets a taxi, the scooter knows instinctively he loses. Taxis give way to trucks, and trucks don't even want to think where they must go if they meet a bus. A bus is king of the road.

It's pretty much the same on bike paths. Your basic walkers are at the bottom of the heap. They must be alert and listen and be ready to get off the path with anything oncoming.

If the path is paved, rollerblade skaters are next. They plow through out of control and are more intimidating than dangerous. Walkers tend to get out of the way, visualizing their bodies in two pieces.

Bicyclists take the words "bike path" literally. They figure it was created for them and everyone else is there at his own risk.

Next comes runners with big dogs nipping at calves and bicycle spokes. They have precedence over bicyclists, especially if the animals are not on leashes. Even more so when the owner says, "He doesn't bite."

Runners with earphones top the runners with dogs. They have no fear of death or any of the aforementioned. They are oblivious to anything and just tear along the path.

Horses dominate. They're like the buses of Indonesia. No one wants to meet a horse.

Rules for bike paths are never recorded anywhere. But everyone knows instinctively who has to move out of the way.

I'm a mere walker. I brake for anything — squirrels, cars backfiring, sprinklers. The other day I saw a man wearing earphones on a horse with a big dog running alongside. Whoa! I not only stopped, I dropped to my knees until he passed.

Canseco on DL

SEATTLE (AP) — Jose Canseco was placed on the 15-day disabled list by the Oakland Athletics on Wednesday because of sore right shoulder and outfielder Troy Neel was recalled from Triple-A Tacoma.

Canseco is the second A's star to go on the disabled list in two days, joining 35-year-old right-hander Dave Stewart, who has a sore elbow. Canseco's move came with Oakland tied with Minnesota for first place in the AL West.

Canseco, who hit his 18th home run in Tuesday night's 4-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners, flew back to the Bay Area from Seattle Wednesday morning.

Greats to gather

Young sluggers prevail

■ Former champions Michael Stich and Stefan Edberg fall by the wayside as the men's field narrows at Wimbledon.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Defending champion Michael Stich, out. Two-time champ Stefan Edberg, out. Three-time champ Boris Becker, almost out.

Only one old master, John McEnroe, survived unscathed the coup of champions mounted Wednesday at Wimbledon by slugging young dudes Pete Sampras, Goran Ivanisevic and Andre Agassi.

McEnroe, a three-time Wimbledon winner, inched closer to the semifinals for the first time since 1989 by taking a sweetly played first set from Guy Forget, 6-2, before the match was suspended by rain at 5-5 in the second set.

Forget helped McEnroe by double-faulting on the last two points of the first game. McEnroe showed him the way in the next game with a pair of service winners and a pair of aces to win at love.

For all of the Frenchman's power and eight previous years at Wimbledon, he seemed a clumsy novice on the grass compared to McEnroe, whose soft, touch volleys and low, sweeping serves are perfect for the surface.

McEnroe never lost service, and lost his temper only once, yelling at the umpire over a call in the second set. The beeper on the electronic eye line machine had signaled a fault by Forget, but the umpire overruled it and called the serve an ace, giving Forget the game and a 3-2 lead.

McEnroe, claiming the umpire had said before the match that he would not overrule the machine, argued for several minutes with him, a Grand Slam supervisor and the assistant referee. The crowd clapped in annoyance during the delay — even McEnroe's wife, Tatum O'Neal clapped and yelled, 'C'mon, John' — while Forget stretched his legs and bounced behind the baseline. Eventually, the umpire's call stood, the machine was shut off, and play continued.

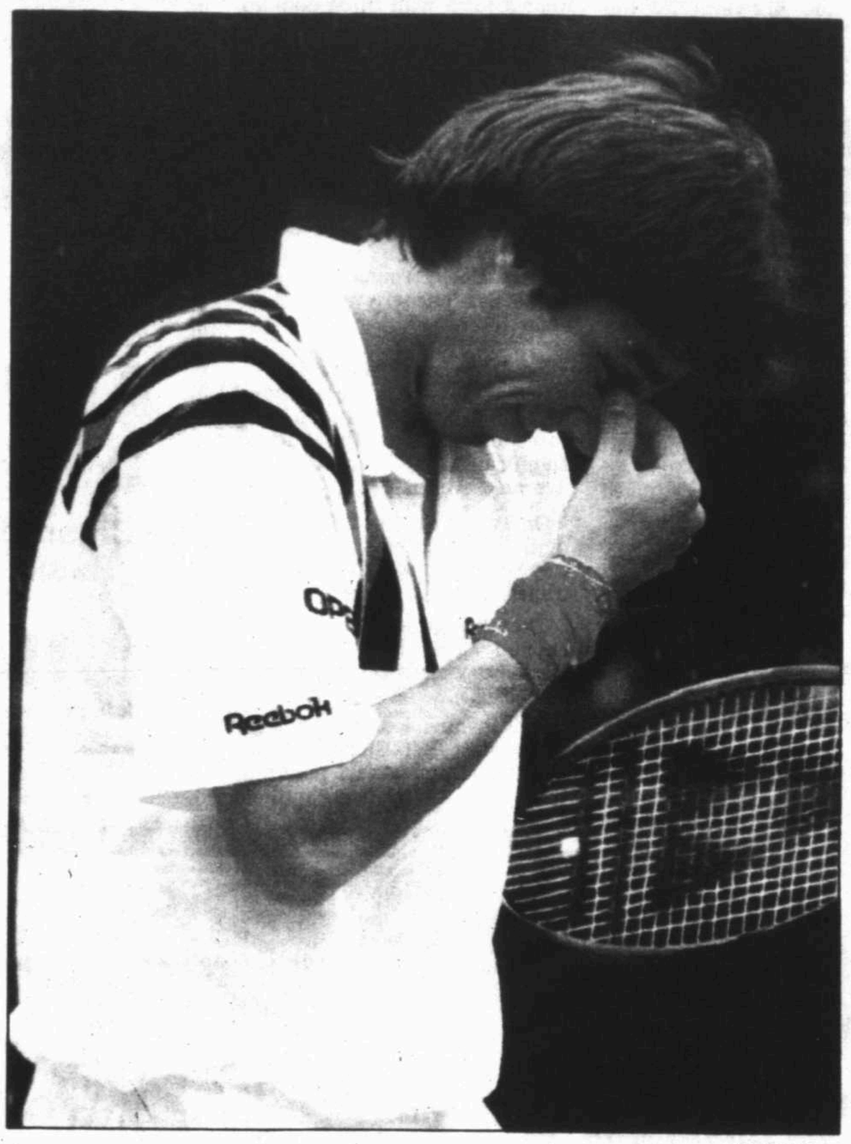

A 66-1 longshot at the start of the tournament, McEnroe reckoned his only chance of winning this year was a collapse by all the top players. So far, he couldn't have contrived a better scenario.

Stich was the first to fall in the quarterfinals, succumbing to Sampras 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

"He just killed me," Stich conceded. "I was happy if I hit a ball in the middle of the racket, and that didn't happen too many times. He just played perfect grass-court tennis."

Usual cast of women in semifinals

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — After 124 matches, 263 sets and more than 2,000 games, guess what?

It's the usual cast of characters.

The top four seeds, the same women who have dominated the game in recent years, are pitted in the Wimbledon semifinals Thursday.

No. 1 Monica Seles faces No. 4 Martina Navratilova and No. 2 Steffi Graf, the defending champion, meets No. 3 Gabriela Sabatini.

Sabatini needed just two minutes Wednesday to keep her place in the group, the time it took to win her suspended match against Jennifer Capriati, the 16-year-old American still battling to join the elite.

Needing only to hold her serve, the Argentine put away four quick points to wrap up the victory, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Unlike the men's tour, enlivened by frequent upsets, there's little movement at the top among the women.

"Mentally I think they are a lot tougher," was Sabatini's explanation of why the same faces dominate the women's tournaments.

Sabatini, beaten by Graf in a three-set thriller in last year's Wimbledon final, is looking for her first title on the grass.

Graf leads in career meetings 21-11, but Sabatini has beaten the German seven of the last eight times they have played.

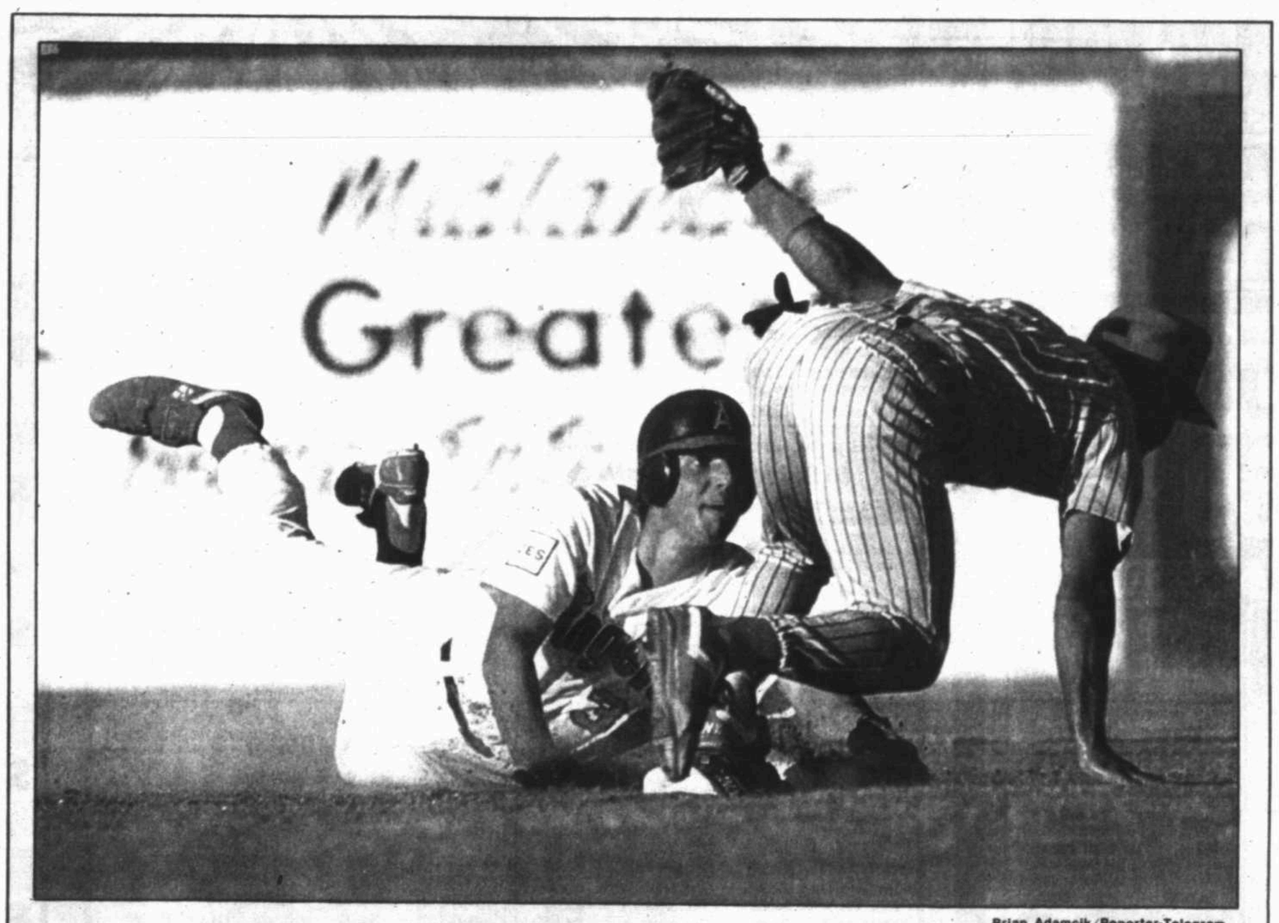

The Argentine said she looked forward to the matchup.

"I know this is a Grand Slam," Sabatini said. "This is Wimbledon and everything is a little different."

The other semifinal offered a contrast in playing styles and goals.

Navratilova has a record of nine Wimbledon singles titles won with

NFL juggled books in '90, prof testifies

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — A Stanford University economics professor testified Wednesday in the NFL antitrust trial that the league's reported $1.3 billion in revenue for 1990 is understated because of the way the owners do their books.

Roger Noll, testifying for the plaintiffs, said the teams record certain money as operating costs to make themselves look less profitable.

As an example, Noll used the salary of Philadelphia Eagles owner Norman Braman. Noll said his analysis of the NFL's financial statement showed that Braman paid himself a salary of $7.5 million for 1990. That salary was recorded as general expenses, when it could have been counted as profit for the Eagles' owner, Noll told the jury.

A $7.5 million salary to the president of a company that earned $45 million in revenue isn't justified, Noll said.

The average revenue for each NFL team was $45 million in 1990, he said.

"That is definitely an understatement of the total revenue in the National Football League," Noll said.

The economist also said his research found that Buffalo Bills owner Ralph Wilson paid himself a $3.5 million salary for 1990 and the owners of the Atlanta Falcons, the Smith family, paid themselves a $1 million salary that year.

Spurs acquire Dale Ellis in three-team swap

■ The Trail Blazers trade for the rights to San Antonio's first-round draft choice, Tracy Murray.

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Trail Blazers acquired the rights to first-round draft pick Tracy Murray in a three-team trade Wednesday that sent Dale Ellis to San Antonio and Alaa Abdelnaby to Milwaukee.

Murray, a 6-foot-7 sharpshooter from UCLA, was picked by San Antonio as the No. 18 selection in this year's draft. He averaged 21.4 points and shot 54 percent last season as a junior,

"The desire to acquire an outside shooter is what prompted the move," said Bucky Buckwalter, the Blazers' vice president for basketball operations.

"Tracy is a terrific perimeter shooter with a very bright future in the NBA," Buckwalter said. "Most observers feel that Tracy would have been a lottery pick in next year's draft had he not come out early this year."

Murray shot 50 percent from 3-point range (78 for 156) and 80 percent from the free-throw line last season. Buckwalter said he sees Murray playing as a reserve at both big guard and small forward.

Ellis, a 31-year-old guard, will be playing for his fourth team in 10 NBA seasons. He is fifth all-time among NBA 3-point shooters and shares the league record with Michael Adams for most 3-pointers in a game at nine.

Ellis played three seasons in Dallas and 4½ in Seattle before being traded to Milwaukee for Ricky Pierce in February of 1991.

"We're sure he's going to fit into San Antonio's system extremely well because their weakness has been a lack of outside shooting," Milwaukee coach Mike Dunleavy said. "Dale will certainly be able to provide that for them."

Ellis has a career average of 17.9 points. Last season, he averaged 15.7, tops for the Bucks but his lowest figure since 1986. He was used mostly as the team's sixth man.

His best season was 1988-89, when he averaged 27.5 points.

The 6-10 Abdelnaby, chosen out of Duke as the 25th player in the 1990 draft, fell out of favor with the coaching staff in his two seasons with Portland.

He played briefly in the regular rotation as a backup power forward and center midway through the 1991-92 season but otherwise spent most of his time on the bench.

The Egyptian-born Abdelnaby averaged 4.9 points, 3.1 rebounds and 10.7 minutes of playing time in his two NBA seasons. Last season, he averaged 6.1 points and had career highs of 13 points against Detroit on Dec. 13 and 13 rebounds against Orlando on Dec. 4.

"I think coming from a winning organization like Portland has been over the past few years and playing every day in practice against those quality players has him ready to be able to step into a bigger role with another team," Dunleavy said.

Blue Jays edge Rangers

Associated Press

TORONTO — Greg Myers doubled home the winning run in the 10th inning Wednesday and, following two days of slugfests, the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Texas Rangers 3-2.

Toronto won the opener of the three-game series 11-4 Monday night. Texas bounced back to win 16-13 Tuesday night in the highest-scoring game in the Rangers' history.

Starters Todd Burns of Texas and Juan Guzman of Toronto both pitched well Wednesday, although neither got the decision.

Derek Bell opened the 10th with a single off Jeff Russell (2-3) and Myers followed with his double.

The Rangers threatened in the 10th, loading the bases on three straight one-out walks by Duane Ward (4-4). Ward got Dean Palmer to pop out and Bell caught Rafael Palmeiro's fly ball to left-center.

Yankees 7, Royals 6

NEW YORK — Matt Nokes hit a two-run, pinch-homer in the seventh inning and the New York Yankees overcame an early six-run decifit and rallied past Kansas City.

Wally Joyner's three-run homer in the second inning off Tim Leary put the Royals ahead 6-0. Leary, pitching for the first time since AL president Dr. Bobby Brown cleared him of cheating allegations filed by the Baltimore Orioles, gave up six runs on five hits, three walks and a wild pitch in 1⅔ innings.

The Yankees began their comeback in the third on sacrifice flies by Roberto Kelly and Danny Tartabull. New York made it 6-3 in the fourth on Kelly's RBI single.

American

Orioles 7, Brewers 4

BALTIMORE — Bill Ripken had a homer and three RBIs and Ben McDonald won his first game in a month as Baltimore beat Milwaukee.

Sam Horn and Brady Anderson also homered for the Orioles, who pounded the Brewers 12-3 the night before. Baltimore amassed 28 hits in the two games.

McDonald, 0-3 with a 6.75 ERA in his last five starts, allowed four runs, eight hits and two walks in six-plus innings. He departed in the seventh after giving up his major-league high 20th homer, a two-run drive by Franklin Stubbs.

Athletics 3, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Mark McGwire hit his major league-leading 27th homer, a two-run shot in the eighth inning that gave Oakland a victory over Seattle.

The $106 million sale of the Mariners by Jeff Smulyan to The Baseball Club of Seattle was completed late Tuesday night and some of the new Mariners owners watched the game from Smulyan's old owner's box. John Ellis, chief executive officer, and Chuck Armstrong, club president, were in the Kingdome for the game.

Twins 2, Angels 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Chili Davis snapped a tie with a sacrifice fly in the sixth inning and Minnesota's pitchers came up with another fine performance.

The Twins have won 13 of 15, and have pitched shutouts in five of the last 11 games. They are 6-0 against the Angels, who have lost four in a row.

Jim Abbott (4-10) lost again because of a lack of hitting support. He gave up the two runs on eight hits, striking out seven and walking one in his fifth complete game, only one of them a victory.

White Sox 8, Indians 5

CLEVELAND — Craig Grebeck went 5 for 5 with three doubles, two RBIs and two runs scored as the Chicago White Sox won for the ninth time in their last eleven games.

Grebeck is hitting .462 during the 11-game span. The five-hit game was the first time he had more than three hits in a contest.

Winner Kirk McCaskill (6-6) allowed four runs on five hits in six innings. Bobby Thigpen, the fifth White Sox pitcher, went 1⅔ innings for his 19th save.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 4

BOSTON — For the second straight game, Boston won on a bases-loaded, extra-base hit as Tom Brunansky's double capped a five-run seventh.

On Tuesday night, Bob Zupcic's ninth-inning grand slam gave the Red Sox an 8-5 win after they had trailed 5-0.

They trailed 4-1 on three unearned runs after the fourth Wednesday night before staging a comeback.

NFL: Economist explains research at trial

(From 1C)

Players lawyer Jeffrey Kessler said Braman paid himself more in one year's salary than any of the eight plaintiffs in the case made over the course of their careers.

Many of the financial figures in the lawsuit are being made public for the first time, although the NFL is disputing the numbers and challenging their release to the jury.

Noll testified that the NFL's monopoly on professional football in the United States has brought higher broadcast rights fees, higher ticket prices, fewer teams, fewer games on television, fewer jobs for players and less money for the top players.

His research found that the NFL reported 1990 total operating expenses of $411 million. Operating profits were reported as $163 million, which Noll called "substantially understated."

Astros make it a sweep of the Reds

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Eric Anthony homered off Scott Bankhead leading off the ninth inning to lead the Houston Astros over Cincinnati 3-2 Wednesday for a three-game sweep of the Reds.

Cincinnati starter Tom Browning injured his left leg in a sixth-inning collision with catcher Scott Servais and had to be assisted off the field.

Doug Jones (5-5) pitched two hitless innings for the victory, Houston's fourth in five games.

Anthony, who has 33 RBIs in his last 47 games, hit his sixth home run of the season on the first pitch of the ninth by Bankhead (8-2), who had won his five previous decisions.

Paul O'Neill of the Reds was ejected by home plate umpire Mike Winters in the third after striking out with the bases loaded.

Steve Finley's RBI single and Jeff Bagwell's sacrifice fly put Houston ahead in the first.

Troy Afenir hit a run-scoring groundout in the second, and the Reds tied the score in the sixth on an RBI double by Browning. The pitcher was thrown out at the plate trying to score on a single by Hal Morris, injuring his leg in the collision. Servais left the game in the eighth with a stiff let knee.

Pirates 1, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Zane Smith, who had not won in nine starts since May 9, pitched a five-hitter as Pittsburgh shut out St. Louis for the second straight day.

Smith (6-7) had not won since a seven-hit shutout against Houston and had lasted just 1⅔ innings in his previous start. He struck out one and walked one in his third shutout and fourth complete game this season. It was the 14th shutout of his career.

Pittsburgh got its run in fourth when Andy Van Slyke doubled and Gary Varsho singled. The Cardinals, who lost 2-0 on Tuesday night, never got a runner past second base.

Mark Clark (0-3) allowed four hits in eight innings, struck out four and walked none. He retired the final 14 batters he faced.

National

Giants 2, Braves 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Bud Black gained his 100th career victory as the San Francisco Giants shook off their June swoon by opening July with a win.

San Francisco, which lost 19 of 26 games last month and fell from first place to fourth, scored two first-inning runs and won for the second time in eight games. Atlanta lost for the fourth time in five games after winning 16 of 19.

Black (5-2) evened his career record at 100-100 and won for the fifth time in six decisions. He held Atlanta to five hits in 7⅓ innings, struck out season-high five and walked one.

Terry Pendleton hit his 13th home run with two outs in the eighth, and Rod Beck finished with one-hit relief for his fifth save.

Mets 6, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — Howard Johnson hit a go-ahead single in the 12th inning and Junior Noboa hit a sacrifice fly as the New York Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 6-4 Wednesday and stopped a three-game losing streak.

Todd Hundley opened the 12th with a single off Jim Bullinger (0-1), and pinch-hitter Willie Randolph and Johnson followed with singles. Bill Pecota walked, loading the bases, and Noboa flied to medium center.

Lee Guetterman (1-0) pitched 1⅔ innings for his first National League victory and Anthony Young got three outs for his first major league save.

Padres 6, Dodgers 2

LOS ANGELES — Craig Lefferts won for the ninth time in 12 decisions, and every San Diego starter had at least one hit off Orel Hershiser.

Hershiser (6-6) allowed four runs and 13 hits in seven innings, the most hits he has allowed in a game in his career.

Lefferts (10-5) became the National League's third 10-game winner, allowing both runs and seven hits in 6⅓ innings. He struck out five and walked two.

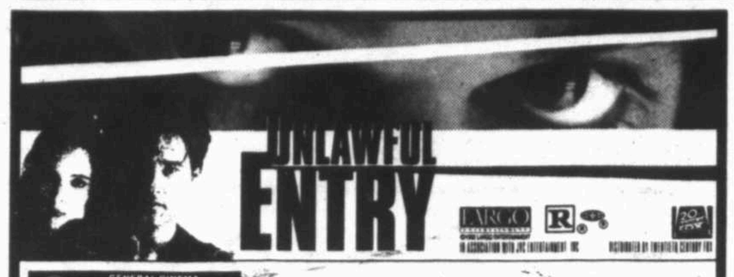

Lefferts, who pitched 6⅔ innings of no-hit ball Friday night against San Francisco, gave up a two-run homer in the fifth to Mike Sharperson, his second home run of the season. It was the Dodgers' first home run in 115 innings since June 16, when Eric Karros connected off Juan Berenguer at Atlanta.

Expos 6, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Dennis Martinez won for the eighth time in 10 decisions as the Montreal Expos sent winless rookie Kyle Abbott to his 10th loss.

Martinez (9-6) allowed two runs and six hits in six innings, struck out out four and walked one. John Wetteland pitched 1 2-3 perfect innings for his 13th save.

Abbott, formerly with the Midland Angels, moved within two of Ken Reynolds' 1972 Phillies record for most consecutive losses at the start of the season.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose Wednesday, rebounding partially from Tuesday's big drop as traders learned the U.S. supply of crude oil had fallen sharply last week.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $21.86 per barrel, up 26 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

A day earlier, oil fell 64 cents a barrel as speculators staged a panicky sell-off. But the American Petroleum Institute reported a sharp drop in the U.S. supply of crude oil and prices moved higher on Wednesday.

Natural gas prices were mostly higher, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $1.551 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 3.3 cents.

Bonds 'called'

NEW YORK — A record volume of tax-free municipal bonds were redeemed before their scheduled maturity date, as issuers refinanced older, higher-paying bonds with new, less expensive securities.

Traders said about $8 billion of the bonds, which are debt sold by states and cities to finance everything from schools to sewers, were "called" Wednesday.

That meant many holders who had been receiving tax-free yields of about 12 percent on the so-called "munis" will have to settle for today's yields of about 6 percent on long-term high-grade bonds.

Citicorp moves

NEW YORK — Citicorp sold a credit card bill processing business to an investor group for $175 million.

Sale of the Citicorp Establishment Services business Wednesday had been reported in trade publications for several months. The business provides the authorization, processing and settlement of credit card charges for merchants.

The business is the third largest in the industry, handling annual sales volume of about $30 billion. Citicorp will continue to provide credit card services to consumers.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mostly higher Wednesday in foreign exchange, erasing an earlier fall as traders bought the currency to cover short positions.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 125.43 yen, down 0.12 yen from Tuesday's close.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.9111 from $1.9030 late Tuesday.

2nd quarter hits books as lackluster

■ Bank stocks star in unlamented period that sees more stock go down than up in price.

N.Y. Times News Service

You can bank on it.

In fact, if that was your investment strategy in 1992, you have probably done quite well. Otherwise, it hasn't been much of a year so far.

In the second quarter of 1992, an unlamented period that saw more stocks go down than up in price, while Wall Street kept looking for signs of economic recovery, the bank stocks starred.

The Nasdaq bank index, a collection of mostly regional banks, zipped up 11.8 percent in the quarter, and has risen 26.3 percent this year. Of the 18 best-performing stocks on Nasdaq in the second quarter, 16 of them, including all of the top 7, are banks.

And big banks also moved up. Bank of Boston gained 36 percent in the quarter, while Citicorp added 29 percent.

The reasons for that good performance include takeovers and, in some cases, relief that a bank whose survival had seemed shaky now looks as if it will make it.

But the Federal Reserve has played the largest role. The Fed's efforts may or may not prove sufficient to produce a decent recovery, but the strategy of pushing down short-term interest rates has raised profit margins and saved a lot of money for banks.

In addition, there is a belief on Wall Street that bank mergers will drive down costs and push up profits for years to come. Chemical Banking, which is digesting its acquisition of Manufacturers Hanover, rose 13.4 percent and by the end of the quarter was being hailed by Thomas Hanley, First Boston's bank analyst, as a growth stock.

Unfortunately, there is more to the stock market than bank shares, and the rest of the list was something less than scintillating. Areas like health care and pharmaceuticals did poorly, and there were disturbing signs that consumers are not especially eager to spend their money.

The Standard & Poor's 500 edged up 1.1 percent in the quarter, and the Dow Jones industrial average gained 2.6 percent, but the Nasdaq composite fell 6.7 percent, despite the big gains by banks and smaller ones by other types of financial stocks.

Among the Dow stocks, economically sensitive stocks continued to do well, as investors showed they were willing to bet that the recovery will endure, come what may.

General Motors was the best performer of the Dow 30 for the second consecutive quarter, rising 20.1 percent after adding 26.8 percent in the first three months of 1992. Double-digit gains were also shown by IBM, at 17.2 percent; McDonald's, at 15.4 percent, and Exxon, at 13 percent.

The worst performers of the Dow 30 had one thing in common: a dependence on consumers. Woolworth sagged 12.1 percent, Sears, Roebuck slipped 11.4 percent and Procter & Gamble dropped 10 percent.

Carriage Inc., the Big Board's best performer (among common stocks that began the quarter at $5 or more), reported rising profits from its carpet operations, but a part of its 93 percent rise came on the news that Carriage's chief executive and principal shareholder, Clarence E. Harris, was suffering from prostate cancer.

The company has a large insurance policy on his life, most of whose proceeds will be used to repurchase his stock.

The three worst performers on the Big Board for the quarter were all dependent on the clothing business, and found it tough. Financially troubled Gitano, the maker of women's clothing, fell 61 percent, while Aileen, a maker and retailer of clothes, dropped 59 percent and Fabri-Centers, a retailer of fabrics and patterns, fell 55 percent.

In 1991, some of the best stocks to own were small growth stocks. There were exceptions, but in many cases they were among the worst this year. The Nasdaq industrial average, which is dominated by technology companies, fell 11 percent.

Key economic gauge takes a sharp dive

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's manufacturing economy grew in June, but at a slower pace than the month before, according to a survey released Wednesday. It was the latest sign that the economy is recovering in fits and starts.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said its monthly index of business activity fell sharply to 52.8 percent last month from 56.3 percent in May.

While a reading above 50 percent indicates the manufacturing economy is expanding, the June drop signifies a slowdown in the rate of growth.

The association, which tracks the economy through a poll of its members, said the decline followed four months of increases and was due to a slowing in orders for new business and in production.

The drop adds to a spate of confusing economic statistics that analysts say point out the uncertainty of the nation's recovery from recession.

Builders boost spending in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Builders boosted construction spending in May for the fifth straight month, the government reported Wednesday, but analysts said the 0.2 percent increase was anemic compared to gains after previous recessions.

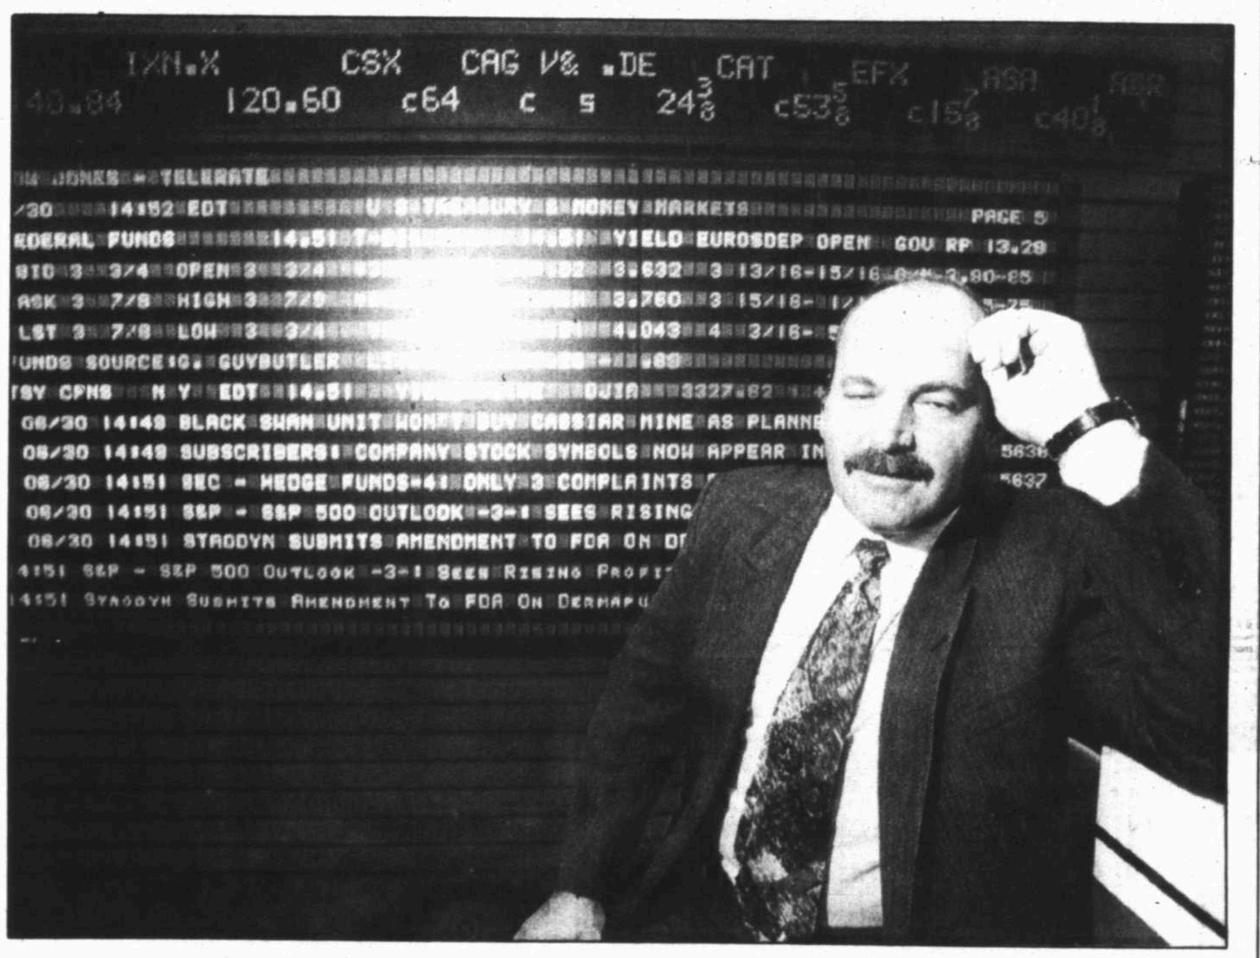

"This whole recovery is shaping up as a more modest one than usual, particularly in housing," said economist Mark Obrinsky of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Spending on residential, non-residential and government projects totaled $423.2 billion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, up from $422.4 billion in April, the Commerce Department reported.

It was the highest level since the value of new construction totaled $425.6 billion in November 1990.

Outlays in May were 6.8 percent above those in the same month a year ago. But that was less than half the 13.2 percent increase in spending in 1983.

Although the revised April increase was a similarly puny 0.2 percent, it was an improvement over the department's original estimate that spending had fallen 0.3 percent.

Looking brighter

Senate OKs tightening oversight of mortgages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved legislation Wednesday aimed at preventing massive taxpayer bailouts of two government-backed enterprises that together stand behind $900 billion worth of home mortgages.

The measure, approved 77-19, would tighten federal oversight of the Federal National Mortgage Association, called Fannie Mae, and the Federal Home Loan Mortage Corp., or Freddie Mac.

Both enterprises are privately owned and operated, but they also are congressional chartered and back loans that are implicitly guaranteed by the federal government.

The bill would create a new office within the Department of Housing and Urban Development charged with regulating the two enterprises, and require the two firms to retain capital to cover potential losses. It also would require them to increase their business with low- and moderate-income families.

Critics said the measure did not go far enough. They complained that Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac should be required to hold more capital to protect themselves against losses, and questioned whether HUD was too close to the enterprises to aggressively regulate them.

But Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac both supported the measure.

The bill also carried unrelated amendments dealing with hazardous waste cleanups.

One would limit efforts by polluters to force municipal governments to help them pay for cleaning up waste.

Another would make it easier for lenders to avoid having to pay for environmental cleanups on foreclosed property they obtained, if the lender learned of the pollution problem after taking over the property.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Leaving brokerage behind not an easy task

By Bill Doyle

Q: The brokerage firm with which I have done business for 12 years instituted a new policy two years ago. A $50 service retainer is debited to my account annually if I do not produce enough commissions for the broker handling my account. This is in addition to the firm's regular $75 annual asset management account service fee.

Doyle

Other than a small amount in a money market mutual fund, my investments — one bond and four certificates of deposit — are spread out to come due over five years. I have budgeted myself so these investments will support me as they mature.

As I no longer have money available to generate commissions, I would like to close the brokerage account. Then, I would open a money market account with check-writing privileges elsewhere and take possession of my bond and CDs, so that their interest payments are mailed directly to me.

Is this possible?

A: At least part of it is. But you might be stymied trying to move everything you own out of the brokerage account and into your direct ownership.

It will be easy to empty your money market mutual fund account: Simply write a check for all the money you have there and use that check to open a money market deposit account at any bank, savings and loan association or credit union.

Or you could use the check to open an account at a money market mutual fund not affiliated with a brokerage firm. Funds of that type are called "general purpose" money market funds. If you don't see their ads — and they do advertise extensively — you'll find them listed in financial manuals at most public libraries. They all have toll-free phone numbers.

Moving your other investments could be a different story.

If your bond is available in registered form, you can "order it out" and receive a certificate in your name. With that accomplished, the bond's interest payments will come to you.

However, many bonds come only in book-entry form, with ownership recorded on computers and no certificates printed. Although book-entry U.S. Treasury bonds can be in each owner's name in a "Treasury Direct" account, most other book-entry bonds must be held in an account at a brokerage or bank.

And CDs purchased through brokerages usually can't be moved directly into your name.

Considering the fees the brokerage charges, your plan makes sense. To complete it, however, you might have to wait until all the CDs mature.

Q: The 125 shares of stock I own cost me $4,325.90, and the dividend I received was $105.20. How do I find the percentage rate of return I am receiving on that stock?

A: First, find out if the $105.20 is an annual dividend — the only one you are going to get this year. If that's so, divide $105.20 by $4,325.90 to learn the yield on your original investment: 2.4 percent.

That's low. Chances are the stock pays dividends semiannually or quarterly. So, you'll have to do some arithmetic again. Divide the dividends paid during the last 12 months by your purchase price to get the yield on your original investment.

To get a fix on how the stock is treating you now, divide the last 12 months' dividend payments by the stock's most recent market price. That will tell you the stock's current yield.

Angels return home in first place

Staff report

WICHITA, Kan. — The Midland Angels return home today the first place team in the Texas League West Division after a 5-4 win Wednesday to close out a six-game series against the Wichita Wranglers.

Midland, with a 7-5 record through the first two series of the second half, opens a six-game set against the same Wranglers tonight. First pitch is scheduled for 7 p.m. at Angels Stadium.

The Angels used a four-run fourth inning to power past the Wranglers. Catcher Fausto Tejero had an RBI double in the inning, and Rod Correia drove in his second of two runs in the frame.

Midland manager Don Long was booted from the game after arguing a strange call. Wichita batter Ray Holbert was awarded first base after allegedly being hit by a Hilly Hathaway pitch. Home plate umpire Tim Vessey couldn't make the HBP call and appealed to second base umpire Ted Barrett, who said Holbert had indeed been hit. Long was told he could not argue the call with Barrett and was shown the way off the field.

Hathaway ran his record to 2-0, allowing five hits and three runs in seven innings. Pedro Martinez (7-4) was the loser, giving up six hits and five runs in eight innings.

ANGEL NOTE: Angel outfielder John Jackson, a two-sport star and wide receiver for the Phoenix Cardinals, left the team for the season Wednesday in order to prepare for the upcoming NFL season. Jackson will take a couple of weeks for rest before reporting to the Cardinals' training camp.

U.S. basketball team Barcelona bound

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — It's official now. The United States basketball team is Barcelona bound.

What has been a foregone conclusion since NBA players were accepted into the international arena in 1989 was confirmed Wednesday night when Team USA beat Argentina 128-87 to clinch an Olympic berth.

The Americans' fourth straight blowout victory in the Olympic qualifying tournament advanced them into Friday night's semifinals, in which all four teams are assured of spots in the Olympics later this month.

Michael Jordan scored 24 points, Charles Barkley 23 and Chris Mullin 18 for the U.S. team, which has won its four games by an average margin of 56 points. Magic Johnson had nine points, six rebounds and 14 assists.

In other games in the Tournament of the Americas, Canada beat Panama 71-62 to gain a berth in the quarterfinals, Brazil routed Uruguay 139-93 and Mexico played Venezuela in a late game that determined another quarterfinal spot. Brazil already had clinched an Olympic berth in Group B.

Argentina had already qualified for Thursday's quarterfinals and will play Puerto Rico.

Mullin had 11 points and Jordan 10 in the first eight minutes as the Americans opened a 28-10 lead after trailing 5-3. Barkley then scored 14 points in the final 11 minutes of the half as Team USA rolled to a 68-37 halftime lead.

The United States, which had nine 3-pointers in the first half of Tuesday's game with Panama, hit six more in the first 20 minutes of the Argentina game.

Canada 71, Panama 62

Canada (2-2) clinched a quarterfinal berth behind the 16 points for former Syracuse star Leo Rautins. Panama (1-3) never recovered from a first half in which it shot 31 percent (9 for 29). Canada led by between six and 12 points the entire second half. Mario Butler led Panama with 16 points.

Brazil 139, Uruguay 93

Brazil (4-0) had already clinched the trip to Barcelona but still hung up the tournament's highest point total. The game was a matchup of the 10-team field's top two scorers. Brazil's Oscar Schmidt, who came in averaging 30 points per game, had 35, while Horacio Lopez, who averaged 31.7 in the opening three games, finished with 41 on 16-for-25 shooting. Uruguay finished as the only team not to win a game.

WOMEN: Seles looks for first triumph at Wimbledon her mastery of a serve-and-volley game.

She has reached the semis for the 15th time and, at age 35, says she's just happy to have gone so far.

Seles, whose game is built around devastating groundstrokes, has won five of the last six Grand Slam tournaments she entered and is halfway to a Grand Slam sweep this year.

The only Grand Slam event Seles hasn't won is Wimbledon, which she skipped last year at the last minute, blaming injury.

Seles has never won a big one on grass — her best showing at Wimbledon was the quarterfinals. But can she do it without grunting?

After Nathalie Tauziat complained that the high-pitched "scream" was keeping her from hearing the ball in their quarterfinal Tuesday, the umpire told Seles to keep quiet.

Capriati, whose debut on the pro circuit two years ago was accompanied by great expectations, has been disappointed by her inability to make a breakthrough.

She said she finds Sabatini particularly tough because of the Argentine's ability to change pace and mix up her shots.

"You know, one minute she is like top-spinning and next she is giving me volleys," she said.

There is, she admitted, much to learn.

"Even if you won 15 Wimbledons, I think you can still learn, you know, so it is always going to be a learning thing for me," Capriati said.

MEN: Ivanisevic has 133 aces in five matches

(From 1C)

ly got this grass thing figured out after growing up on hard courts in California. In three previous Wimbledons, he lost in the first round twice and the second round last year.

"The biggest shot I was having trouble with the last couple of years was my return of serve," he said. "That is a shot guys like Edberg and Becker hit well. This year I feel I am returning as well as I can."

Sampras sympathized with the pressure Stich was under as defending champion. When Sampras lost at the U.S. Open last year, he said he felt as if a weight had been lifted from his shoulders.

"I think that is what happened today," Sampras said. "The pressure got to him. He was just a little off. I was really on top of my game."

Edberg was the next victim, spinning out dizzily from Ivanisevic's 33 aces in a 6-7 (12-10), 7-5, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 duel.

So impressed by Ivanisevic, who has 133 aces in five matches, Edberg wondered whether Sampras in the semis, or anyone else in the final, could stop him.

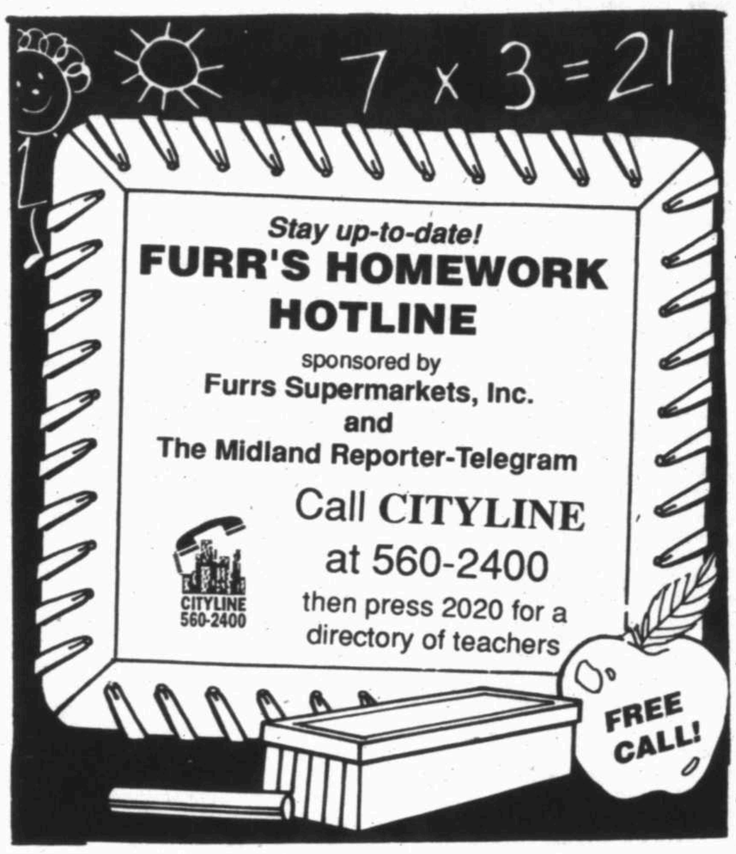

"If he is serving like he did today, I think it is very difficult for anyone. I don't think it matters how well you return," said Edberg, who failed to make the semifinals for the first time since 1986.

Becker was the third former champion to hit the skids — literally on the slippery Centre Court and figuratively on the scoreboard. Agassi led 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 3-4 with Becker to serve when the rain came.

The men's matches were interrupted briefly at midday by the wrap-up of a women's quarterfinals duel suspended by darkness Tuesday night, with Gabriela Sabatini leading Jennifer Capriati 6-1, 3-6, 5-3.

Sabatini waited more than 17 hours before serving out the final four points in just two minutes to reach the semis.

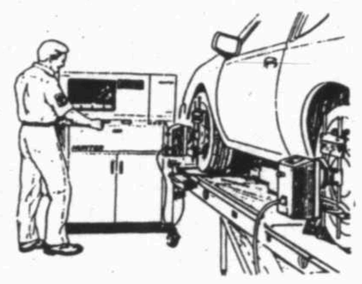

"It was kinda weird," Capriati said. "Before the match you are all ready and psyched and say, 'Come on, you can come back and do it. Just play well.' Then you're out there and it's four points."

Long term fish consumption helps to fight heart disease

By Jean Carper

Need more proof that eating fish can prevent artery damage and heart attacks? Danish researchers have discovered some of the most persuasive evidence yet. They examined the arteries and fat tissue obtained from 40 consecutive autopsies at Frederiksberg Hospital in Denmark.

Carper

Then they compared the amount of fish oil in fat tissue with the degree of disease of the coronary arteries. They found the most severely clogged arteries in those with the lowest amounts of omega-3-type fish oil in their fatty tissue. This indicates that the skimpiest fish eaters had the most damaged arteries. This is the first strong evidence directly linking levels of fish fatty acids in humans with more healthful arteries.

Another Norwegian study explains how fish oil may fight heart disease. Those who ate more fish had lower bad-type LDL cholesterol, higher good-type HDL cholesterol and much lower triglycerides, another potentially dangerous blood fat.

How much fish? In the Norwegian study, best protection came from three fish dishes per week. But even one fish dish weekly was beneficial. Conclusion: Long-term consumption of small amounts of fish fights heart disease.

Starchy PMS Diet

If you suffer from premenstrual syndrome, here's a diet that may help relieve it, according to new research at the PMS Clinic, University of College Hospital in London.

It's no secret that PMS sufferers often crave carbohydrates and go on sugar binges. This may be because of rises and dips in blood glucose caused by irregular eating of carbohydrates, speculate the British researchers. In a study of 84 women with severe PMS, they discovered that typically seven hours passed between consumption of starchy carbohydrate foods during the day and 131/2 hours overnight.

To correct these long carbo intervals, they had the women eat a small portion of a starchy carbohydrate, such as bread, potatoes, pasta, oats and rice, every three hours and also within one hour of going to bed or getting up. This meant six small daily meals. The idea was to maintain a steady blood sugar level throughout the waking day.

The diet helped relieve symptoms in about 70 percent of the women. Twenty-three percent controlled their PMS symptoms with diet alone. The researchers say the every-three-hour starch regimen "should be the first line of treatment for PMS patients."

Cranberry Controversy

Should you drink cranberry juice to ward off bladder infections? Many urologists have long recommended such a home remedy. The theory was cranberry juice makes urine more acid, killing infection-causing E. coli bacteria.

Indeed, a new study showed that a daily four to six ounces of cranberry juice cocktail (30 percent juice) helped prevent recurring infections in two-thirds of a group of elderly people.

But some experts now fear cranberry juice's acidity may irritate the inflamed bladder, making symptoms worse. William Graham Guerriero, M.D., professor of urology at Houston's Baylor College of Medicine, disagrees. "Any acidic effect of cranberries is very mild, not likely to be harmful," he says.

Further, to what degree eating cranberries really acidifies the urine is questionable. One study found it takes at least three cups of cranberry juice a day to acidify urine; even then the acidity was not sufficient to inhibit bacteria.

If fact, acidity may not be the reason cranberries prevent bladder infections. New studies suggest the berry really works by keeping bacteria from sticking to the lining of the urinary tract. "If cranberry juice works for you, drink it," says Dr. Guerriero.

Women must combat heart disease in different manner

CHICAGO (AP) — Heart disease may be an equal opportunity killer of women and men, but women need different strategies to elude it, starting with their knowledge of the enemy.

"Most women, if you ask them what's their single biggest disease risk, they'd say breast cancer. They don't realize how important cardiovascular disease is," says Dr. Robert D. Langer of the University of California, San Diego, School of Medicine.

"It dwarfs breast cancer, and all cancers," he says.

Cardiovascular diseases, including heart disease, kill 500,000 women and 475,000 men yearly, the American Heart Association says. The figures are based on 1988 data, the latest available.

Breast cancer by contrast killed 42,200 women in 1988, and lung cancer claimed 46,400 more.

While cardiovascular diseases tend to claim females about 10 years later in life than males, 23,000 women under 65 died from them in 1988, and more than a quarter of those women were under age 55.

Menopause is the great divide for women in terms of cardiovascular danger. Before menopause, death rates from heart disease, strokes, high blood pressure and related ailments remain relatively low. Afterward, those death rates zoom up because women lose the protective effect of the hormone estrogen.

Many women fail to appreciate that, says Dr. Mary Ann Malloy, a professor at Loyola Stritch School of Medicine and organizer of the American Heart Association's first conference on heart disease in women, in 1989.

"I think women see all the other implications of menopause," says Malloy, also a practicing cardiologist.

Women's hazard of cardiovascular death rises more than fivefold between ages 34 and 44, another fivefold during the next decade, and fourfold more the following decade.

Estrogen-replacement therapy can dramatically reduce an individual woman's risk, but whether all women should get it and whether estrogen alone is sufficient are still being researched.

"The state of the art (on hormone replacement) varies from woman to woman and doctor to doctor," says Trudy Bush, associate professor of epidemiology and gynecology-obstetrics at Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore.

Estrogen replacement confers "a remarkable protective effect" against heart disease death — a 40 percent to 60 percent reduction in risk compared with postmenopausal women who don't take it, Bush noted. But estrogen replacement also increases the likelihood of developing cancer of the womb lining.

That increase can be canceled by adding the hormone progestin, a synthetic version of progesterone, also lost after menopause. But progestin has possible side effects such as depression, mood swings and undesirable changes in breast tissue. It also may slightly increase breast-cancer risk.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take pride in your creativity. By September, you will again taste the professional and financial successes you once enjoyed. Refrain from making the same mistake twice! Think carefully before accepting the first offer dangled in front of you; there may be too many strings attached. Early in 1993, let others know that you will fight to protect your interests. Taking a strong stand will ward off a takeover bid. Next spring brings a happy new romantic connection.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: slugger Jose Canseco, actresses Cheryl Ladd and Polly Holliday, actor Jimmy McNichol.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): When someone paints a picture that seems overly rosy, you can almost bet that there is a catch to the deal. Take your time when assessing a marital proposal or job offer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Tell no one of your great ambition lest it arouse envy among those who could try to undermine you. Take special care of your health. This is not a good day to sign contracts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pay serious attention to any symptoms or remarks that give you cause for concern. A counselor's advice proves timely. Reflect carefully before plunging forward in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A fight for control may be the real reason partners clash. You can anticipate the usual ups and downs on the ferris wheel of romance. Hang on to your hat!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have the determination you need to achieve your ends. Seek the cooperation of people who share your views. Put key business negotiations on hold. Postpone signing a long-term agreement until next week.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Although you long to be swept away by a new partner, you recognize the need for caution. Worrying only decreases your efficiency. Focus on what is going right in your life!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not let a setback discourage you. Versatile and talented, you can bounce back. Act with daring. The element of surprise is essential to the success of your plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Couples who work hand-in-glove to control expenditures will soon enjoy new peace of mind. Put the finishing touches on a pet project. Defer to your romantic partner's whims this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop tiring yourself out trying to solve a problem that your intuition is already grappling with. Sharing your concerns with your loved ones may raise an interesting reaction.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Creative impulses should be encouraged. Someone close to you is a source of inspiration. Learn from your mistakes but resist brooding over them. You are on the right track.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use any extra funds constructively to help the greatest number of people. Continue to listen to the intuitive promptings of a close ally.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Better cash management will help you to cope with higher prices or overheads. There are things you can easily do without. Exercise self-discipline. Being your own boss helps you stay serene.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are quick-witted and persuasive, able to convince others of almost anything. Parents should encourage these spotlight-seeking youngsters to develop their public speaking skills. With the right training, these quietly confident Cancerians will make excellent journalists, lawyers or labor mediators. Romantic and sentimental, they will remain single if they cannot find a true soul mate. "Second best" won't do!

The textbooks will tell you that you need at least 33 points for a small slam to be a reasonable proposition; 37 points for a grand slam. These generalizations are accurate enough when the distribution is normal. But when freak hands abound, all guidelines can be tossed out the window, vividly illustrated by this hand from a recent rubber bridge game at the YMPL Card Association in New York.

There was nothing remarkable about the first two bids in the auction. We are not sure, even at this vulnerability, whether we would have had the courage to act immediately with the South hand. However, North would have reopened with a double and the final contract might well have been the same.

West led the four of hearts and South, Nadine Warfield, carefully ruffed the opening lead with the jack of clubs. The closed hand was entered with the king of diamonds, and the ten of clubs was run. The trump finesse was repeated and, after drawing the last trump, declarer claimed 12 tricks—five diamonds, six clubs and a heart ruff.

Note that the slam will be defeated if declarer carelessly ruffs the opening lead with a low trump. Declarer can come to hand with a diamond to take a trump finesse, but then has no fast entry back to repeat the finesse. The defenders can win the first spade and force dummy with another heart, and West must come to a trump trick.

Singleton set to direct film about South Central L.A.

LOS ANGELES — "Boyz N the Hood" director John Singleton is going to make a Home Box Office television series about impoverished South Central Los Angeles.

Singleton, 24, whose first feature film won him an Oscar nomination as best director, will begin shooting the series this summer. A statement released Tuesday by The Kushner-Locke Co., which will produce the program, said Singleton will film in South Central, the area hardest hit by rioting two months ago.

Singleton's 30-minute drama series will be his television debut. Titled "The Champ," the program will chronicle a black boxer's struggle in the inner city. An HBO spokeswoman said it most likely will premiere next year.

LOS ANGELES — Actor Tom Hanks got an early birthday gift from his wife: a star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame.

Comedian Jon Lovitz of "Saturday Night Live" was among the more than 300 people who turned out for the Hollywood Boulevard dedication ceremony Tuesday.

Shouts of "Happy birthday!" rang out for the actor, who turns 36 on July 9. He received the 1,958th star on the Walk of Fame.

Hanks, nominated for an Academy Award for his role in "Big," co-stars in the newly released "A League of Their Own" with Geena Davis and Madonna.

His star was sponsored by his wife, Rita Wilson, as a birthday gift, said Hollywood Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Ana Martinez-Holler.

Star sponsors pay $4,800 and ensure the recipient's presence at the dedication ceremony. A Chamber of Commerce board selects those to be honored.

INDIANAPOLIS — Jeanne White says Michael Jackson's upcoming video to the song "Gone Too Soon" will show how much the pop star cared for her son, Ryan White.

The video, to be released sometime this summer, will include images of Ryan White culled from family home movies and photo albums. He died two years ago at age 18 of complications from AIDS, which he contracted from a blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia.

"People don't think that celebrities and normal people can be friends, but they were friends and I think the video will show how much Michael misses him," Mrs. White said Tuesday. "I'm anxious to see it."

The song was included on "Dangerous," Jackson's latest album, as a tribute to White, who became a national spokesman for AIDS awareness and was befriended by Jackson.

LOS ANGELES — Rob Morrow, star of CBS' hit drama series "Northern Exposure," has refused to report to the set because of a contractual dispute, a source close to the series said Wednesday.

CBS and series studio MCA Universal refused comment.

USA Today reported that Morrow, who plays Dr. Joel Fleischman in the quirky series about small-town life in Alaska, failed to show up this week in Washington state, where the show is filmed.

Details of Morrow's contract problems were not divulged. The source close to the show, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press Morrow had been due on the set Tuesday. Fall season production began last week.

Calls to Morrow's agent in New York were not immediately returned.

Morrow has starred for two years in the show about a New York doctor forced to serve his residency in Alaska.

SAN FRANCISCO — Film maker Francis Ford Coppola has filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection for the second time in three years.

The director, whose films include the "Godfather" movies and "Apocalypse Now," was undone by the 1982 box-office flop "One From The Heart," a statement said Tuesday.

Coppola

Papers were filed in federal court for Coppola, his wife, Eleanor, and two of his production companies.

"This bankruptcy filing closes the book on a complicated decade-long series of financial and legal problems arising from the making of 'One From The Heart' in 1982," Coppola said in a statement. Assets were listed at $52 million, and liabilities at $98 million.

"One From the Heart," a film romance starring Frederic Forrest and Teri Garr, cost $27 million, but earned only $4 million. Re-creating a version of Las Vegas accounted for much of the cost for the film.

The filing, which included Zoetrope Corp. and Zoetrope Productions, does not affect American Zoetrope, Coppola's film and television production company formed in 1991.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan takes a hand at making potato salad at a news conference.

Adding vegetables, fruits to diet can cut cancer risk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans could significantly cut their risk of cancer by adding a green salad and a glass of juice to their daily diet, the National Cancer Institute said Wednesday.

Kicking off a five-year, $33 million program to get people to eat five servings of fruits or vegetables daily, the institute said a new survey shows that most adults already eat an average of 3½.

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away," was good advice, said Bernadine Healey, director of the National Institutes of Health. "We're extending that."

A glass of orange juice in the morning, a lettuce and tomato salad at noon, apple or carrots for a snack and broccoli or another vegetable at dinner would put a person over the quota, said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.

"Let me stress, five-a-day is a minimum," he said. "If you can eat up to nine servings a day, all the better."

The government will provide $18 million in grants to local and state organizations with projects to promote the message, Sullivan said.

The Produce for Better Health Foundation, an industry group, will spend $15 million more in advertising and store promotions, said Bruce Obbink, president of the foundation.

It is the largest-ever government and food industry nutrition program.

Many studies show that nutrients in fruits and vegetables protect against cell damage that leads to cancer, said Dr. Peter Greenwald, director of cancer prevention at the National Cancer Institute.

He emphasized that the five-a-day plan is based on findings that people are better protected if they eat a wide variety of fruits and vegetables.

Studies of populations around the world show that the more fruits and vegetables consumed, the lower the cancer rate, Greenwald said.

The cancer institute's survey of 2,837 Americans over age 18 showed that Hispanics eat fewer fruits and vegetables — an average of three servings daily — than do blacks and whites, with an average of 3½.

The survey said only 23 percent of all adults eat five or more servings a day.

Other findings:

■ People with less than a high school education eat about half a serving less per day than those with more education.

■ Adults aged 18 to 34 eat about tnree servings of fruits and vegetables a day while those 65 and older consume four on average.

■ Although men consume more food than do women, men eat fewer servings of fruits and vegetables — three a day, compared to four for women.

■ Women are more likely to think they should increase their fruit and vegetable consumption than are men.

■ Four in 10 Americans believe that eating fruits and vegetables will help prevent cancer; five in 10 think it will help prevent heart disease, and six in 10 believe it will help maintain weight.

■ In general, about a quarter of Americans usually eat vegetables cooked in fat and about a fifth usually add fat, such as butter, cream or cheese sauce, when a vegetable is served.

■ People who ate lots of fruits and vegetables as children continue to eat lots of them as adults.

■ Generally, Americans consume more vegetables than fruits, but seem to like fruit better.

The most popular fruit and vegetable dishes, in decreasing frequency:

■ Green salad; orange or grapefruit juice.

■ Potatoes; string beans; peas; corn; tomatoes.

■ Bananas.

■ Apples or applesauce; tomato juice or salsa.

■ Other fruit juices.

Holiday spurs full planes, low revenues, infrequent fliers

NEW YORK (AP) — This will be a booming Fourth of July for the travel industry, at least when it comes to sheer numbers of people hitting the road or taking to the skies.

But the nation's troubled airlines aren't ready to set off any celebratory fireworks. Although airline traffic has jumped because of the recent half-price fare war, carriers aren't happy with the way the summer is turning out.

They sold too many tickets for too little money, and many first-time air travelers are causing headaches for airline employees as they show up at airports with little or no understanding about modern air travel.

"When asked to board the plane, do it!" American Airlines advises in a list of holiday travel tips released several days ahead of Independence Day, which is Saturday.

"We're getting people who show up to the airport very close to the departure time, sometimes laden down with luggage," American spokesman Marty Heires said. "They're very infrequent travelers. Some of them have never traveled before, and it's causing us some difficulty."

American has redeployed some workers to help the neophyte air travelers learn the intricacies of baggage checking, boarding passes and airport security systems.

Delta Air Lines reports a similar influx of infrequent fliers but takes the optimistic view that maybe some of them will come back for more.

"It's a good problem to have," Delta spokesman Neil Monroe said. "You can expose your product to new customers."

This Fourth of July weekend should be the busiest since 1988, according to projections from the American Automobile Association.

The auto club acknowledges the air fare war has a lot to do with the increase, but points out trips in motor vehicles are expected to rise by more than 4 percent over last year's numbers.

WHAT!
NEWSPAPER ROUTES?
That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your 'day job.' Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Call 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!
