Pipeline sector now at center of the action

By Jordan Blum
Houston Chronicle

Pipelines have traditionally operated as the dull middle man of the energy sector, a business so boring that the hard-charging Enron dumped its pipeline holdings to chase sexier businesses during its rapid, but short-lived rise.

Today, however, the once sleepy industry is where the action is, attracting billions of dollars in investment, launching new companies and spurring a wave of mergers, acquisitions and sales. Nowhere is the action more intense than in Texas, where companies of all sizes, public and private, are planning to spend more than $40 billion to build or expand almost 10,000 miles of pipelines — long enough to stretch from West Texas to China — to connect booming oil production in the Permian Basin primarily to refining and export markets along the Gulf Coast.

The players buying and building pipelines include the world's largest energy companies, such as Exxon Mobil of Irving, major Houston pipeline companies like Kinder Morgan and Plains All American, refiners such as Phillips 66 of Houston, and a growing list of startups backed by private equity investors. Over the past few years, analysts count dozens of new pipeline companies entering the market and more than 20 multibillion-dollar projects potentially getting underway.

"They seem to be announcing new pipelines every day," said Sandy Fielden, director of oil and products research at Morningstar, the Chicago investment research firm.

Texas is at the center of the action, aided by its friendly regulatory climate as well as its vast energy resources. Texas accounts for about 40 percent of the nation's record oil production — which the Energy Department estimates at 11.6 million barrels a day — with most of it coming from the Permian. Along with oil, energy companies also are producing record volumes of natural gas and natural gas liquids, such as ethane, propane and butane, which feed the petrochemical industry that's also expanding rapidly along the Gulf Coast.

But the rapidly rising production has outpaced pipeline capacity, leading many companies to leave oil in the ground and flare more natural gas until new pipelines can carry their energy products to market.

"We're feverishly trying to address the needs of the Permian Basin," said Jeff Welch, president of NAmerico Energy, a pipeline startup based in The Woodlands. "These pipeline projects can't come soon

Crude drops for 10th straight day

From staff reports

Crude prices continued to skid, closing the week with their 10th consecutive decline. On Friday, crude futures fell 48 cents to close at $60.19, while the posted price ended the week at $56.25 a barrel.

Since reaching a four-year high in early October at $76.41 a barrel, prices have plunged 21 percent to their lowest levels since March.

The week ended on a bright note for natural gas, which jumped 5 percent Friday to close at $3.72 per Mcf.

Permian rig count is up

The rig count in the Permian Basin is up five, to 492, compared to 487 a week ago, according to the oil field services company Baker Hughes.

Texas lost one rig for a total of 532, while New Mexico has 106 rigs, up four.

Midland County has 58 rigs this week, a loss of three. Reeves continues to lead the basin with 80 rigs, up one.

Other Permian counties with double-digit rig counts are: Lea, New Mexico, 58, up one; Eddy, New Mexico, 43, up two; Martin, 43, up six; Loving, 27, unchanged; Howard, 23, up one; Pecos, 23, unchanged; Ward, 22, unchanged; Upton, 20, up one; Culberson, 17, down one; Winkler, 16, up one; Reagan, 15, down one; and Glasscock, 14, up three. Andrews County, which had 12 rigs a week ago, lost four this week.

The U.S. rig count is at 1,081, an increase of 14.

Despite loss, Beto O'Rourke's run reveals a changing Texas

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Beto O'Rourke didn't turn Texas blue. But for the first time in decades, it's looking much less red.

The midterm elections in Texas ousted a Republican who carried a "bathroom bill" targeting transgender people, drove out a GOP lawmaker who called federal immigration agents on Hispanic protesters and gave Democrats in Houston run of the nation's third most populous county.

For a generation, Texas has been a laboratory of conservatism that tested legal boundaries and churned out Republican presidential candidates. But cracks in the GOP's supremacy emerged this week in unexpected ways and races. As with many things Texas, the results could reverberate nationally.

Predictions that Texas will come into play in 2020 may still be a stretch, but the signs of a subtle shift are more than mere talk.

"This is the most optimistic I've felt since high school," said Dallas state Rep. Eric Johnson, a 43-year-old Democrat who is running to become the first black speaker of the Texas House. "I know for a fact that Texas is a purple state. It hasn't been voting that way because Democrats have forgotten how to win, to a certain degree. But Beto has reminded us."

He was unequivocal about why Democrats broke through this year.

"Beto was the reason," he said.

It remains to be seen what's next for O'Rourke, who came within 3 percentage points of Republican Sen. Ted Cruz in the closest Senate race in Texas in 40 years. The El Paso congressman, who shattered fundraising records in a Senate campaign, raising more than $70 million, has insisted he's not interested in another office for now. But that has done little to dampen speculation that he could run again in 2020.

Texas' other Senate seat, held by Republican John Cornyn, is up for re-election that year. He called the midterms a "wake-up call" for his party in Texas.

"I don't know whether this is a once-in-a-lifetime confluence of events or whether this represents something of the new normal," said Cornyn, the second-ranking Republican in the Senate.

On the surface, Texas didn't change much after Tuesday. Republicans continued a 24-year streak of sweeping statewide races and lost only two seats in Congress, both of which had already been trending toward Democrats. The GOP also still comfortably controls the Texas Legislature, even after losing a dozen seats in what was the biggest single-year pickup by Democrats in decades.

But Republicans' big margins shrank in a number of places.

The massive BridgeTex Pipeline was completed in 2014 and terminates in east Houston. The pipeline — owned by Magellan Midstream and Plains All American Pipeline — carries Permian Basin crude oil from Colorado City to Houston. The pipeline was expanded to 400,000 barrels a day of capacity this year and the owners are currently weighing an additional expansion to 440,000 barrels daily.

enough."

Private equity wave

NAmerico is trying to to build the 460-mile Pecos Trail natural gas pipeline that would stretch from the Waha oil field in the Permian to just west of Corpus Christi in Agua Dulce, where it would connect to existing pipelines across the Gulf Coast or into Mexico to feed power plants and liquefied natural gas export facilities. The pipeline carries a price tag of more than $2 billion.

NAmerico, backed by the Dallas private equity firm Cresta Energy Capital, is an example of the flood of private equity money coming into the pipeline. Private equity firms pool money from wealthy institutional and individual investors and seek undervalued and emerging assets that have the potential to yield bigger returns than traditional investments, such as stocks and bonds. Private equity firms snapped up Permian acreage at discounts during the oil bust and, after cashing in, moved into the Eagle Ford shale in South Texas, where drilling activity is picking up, and the Gulf of Mexico, where offshore blocks can be acquired at bargain prices.

Now, private equity is moving more into pipelines, which hold the promise of big payouts through quick and steady cash flow — pipelines make money even before oil and gas is sold — with the potential to flip them for outsized profits.

NAmerico launched in 2014 with big goals. Rather than focus on smaller regional pipeline networks, NAmerico opted for larger, long-haul pipelines, coming up with the first proposal for a major new gas pipeline. Welch joked that he sometimes asks himself late at night why he went that route. Securing the necessary long-term contracts to finance the project is tough, especially when it's a private startup versus well-known industry players such as Kinder Morgan, Targa Resources of Houston and Williams Cos. of Tulsa, which have all since progressed competing projects.

"It's proven somewhat challenging on our part to overcome that stigma," Welch acknowledged. "We are in a pretty strong footrace."

Another new private equity-backed player is EPIC Midstream, which was launched in early 2017 with the private equity firm Ares Management of Los Angeles. EPIC is building both crude oil and natural gas liquids pipelines that will traverse the state from southeastern New Mexico to Corpus Christi. It's 700-mile NGL pipeline is scheduled to go into operation in the third quarter of 2019, but will initially transport crude oil until EPIC's crude system starts up in early 2020.

Private equity has also driven a series of multibillion-dollar deals. Houston oil producer Occidental Petroleum recently sold its Permian pipeline network and its oil-exporting terminal near Corpus Christi for $2.6 billion to two private equity Houston startups, Lotus Midstream and Moda Midstream. Much of Medallion Pipeline of Dallas was recently sold from one private equity firm, The Energy & Minerals Group, to another, Global Infrastructure Partners, for about $2 billion.

Another Houston producer, Apache Corp., is forming a partnership with the Los Angeles private equity firm Kayne Anderson to spin off its Permian pipeline into a new $3.5 billion company called Altus Midstream.

"Private equity is playing an outsized role here," said Ethan Bellamy, an energy analyst at Robert W. Baird & Co.

Raised profile

Private equity firms, however, are not the only deal makers. Last year, in the biggest pipeline deal of late, Canada's Enbridge bought Houston-based Spectra Energy for $28 billion. The Woodlands exploration and production company Anadarko Petroleum on Thursday said it would sell its pipelines — primarily in West Texas and Colorado — to its spinoff Western Gas Partners in a $4 billion stock-and-cash deal.

In the most unusual deal, the Canadian pension fund OMERS — the Ontario Municipal Employees Retirement System — recently paid $1.5 billion for a 50 percent stake in the expanded BridgeTex oil pipeline that runs from the Permian to Houston.

But the quickening pace of deals is not only raising the profile of pipelines among energy companies and investors, but also environmentalists. Concerned about climate change, activists have launched aggressive campaigns and protests to block pipelines in recent years, notably the Canada-to-Nebraska Keystone XL, whose construction was blocked again Thursday by a federal judge in Montana, and and the Dakota Access that begins in North Dakota. In Louisiana, ongoing protests are trying to stop construction of the Bayou Bridge pipeline from Port Arthur to St. James, La.

The lack of pipeline capacity in Texas is adding another complication to the environmental debate — particularly in the Permian. Unable to transport the natural gas that is a byproduct of pumping oil, producers are simply flaring it off.

Natural gas is mostly methane, a potent greenhouse gas that contributes to global warming. The Permian is approaching 400 million cubic feet of gas flared daily, which is more than $1 million of natural gas a day, analysts said.

"With the climate crisis, what's happening out there is unimaginable," said Sharon Wilson, a Texas organizer for the environmental advocacy group Earthworks. Wilson said the answer isn't building more pipelines, but rather finding cleaner energy sources and reducing the use of fossil fuels.

Energy companies and analysts have a different solution — more pipelines — but agree that flaring is a problem. Some companies are reducing oil production in Texas because they're on the verge of surpassing the amounts of natural gas they're legally permitted to flare in the state, said Sunil Sibal, an energy analyst with Seaport Global Securities in New York.

"It's really bad optics," Sibal said. "Without having an outlet for the gas, it becomes more of a critical issue. They're flaring pretty aggressively and the situation is going to get worse."

From 1A

Typically easy wins in five congressional districts around Austin, Dallas and Houston were sliced to within 5 percentage points this time. The driving social conservative force in the Legislature, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick, won just over 51 percent of the vote in his first election since pushing a failed North Carolina-style "bathroom bill" that would have required transgender people to use public bathrooms that correspond with the sex on their birth certificate. Not surviving, however, was a Republican who carried the bill in the House.

Texas' last big Republican county, around Fort Worth, also crumbled at the top of the ticket. Fort Worth is "Cowtown," with stockyards and a cowboy image that stands in contrast to Texas' other big and increasingly liberal cities. Of Texas' five largest counties — the others around Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Austin — Tarrant County was the only one President Donald Trump carried in 2016, doing so by 57,000 votes.

Two years later, O'Rourke won the county over Cruz by 3,900 votes.

"We flipped this state from blue to red. We may be shifting back a little toward the blue," Tarrant County Republican Party Chairman Darl Easton said. "But political shifts happen. I'm not overly concerned about the current trend."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Nov. 10, 2018:
This year you will have the opportunity to exhibit a willingness to head down a different trail that leads to new adventures. If you are single, you could meet someone easily, perhaps when you are standing in line at the bank or waiting your turn at the cleaners. You will enjoy a nice and easy courtship. If you are attached, the two of you naturally relish being with each other. You seem to be able to talk about nearly any topic. Turn to CAPRICORN for practical advice.

ARIES
(March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Reach out to a loved one, possibly a child, to make some afternoon plans. Consider going ice skating and topping off the adventure with roasted chestnuts or hot chocolate. Keep your plans as traditional as possible. Tonight: Use caution with money, and count your change.

TAURUS
(April 20-May 20)
★★★★ One-on-one relating helps warm up a relationship and creates a greater sense of trust and sensitivity. Others could become pushy and difficult. Just try to go with the flow. You certainly aren't going to change anyone. Tonight: You suddenly might decide to go somewhere else.

GEMINI
(May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Defer to others who seem to have too many ideas. As a result, making plans could be difficult. Be logical when making choices. Out of frustration, you could decide to do something different with different people. Avoid pushing someone away. Tonight: With a good friend.

CANCER
(June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You could be out of sorts, no matter what someone does to make you smile. Even if you are not amused, be gracious and smile anyway. Refuse to cause a problem or take off in a different direction. Today is just a wacky day. Tonight: Where you are, a party seems to emerge.

LEO
(July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Use today for an activity you love. Do not hesitate to ask someone else to join you. You could have a last-minute change of plans because of an unexpected development. Make a call and explain to others why you will not be able to join them. Tonight: Go with the flow.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Your intensity marks whatever you choose to do. You initially might be overwhelmed by the choices you have made and the direction you decide to head in. You are likely to hear news that pushes you onto a new path. Listen to what a friend shares. Tonight: Let the games begin.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Make an effort to reach out to someone. Your feelings could be changeable yet intense. Recognize how much you are cared for. Express your affection as well. Return all calls before you make plans. As a result, you might decide to adjust your schedule. Tonight: All smiles.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Be smart and clear out your errands before meeting up with others. You might have a joyous time once you finish some of your to-dos. Avoid going overboard. If someone encourages you to do just that, you should wonder about his or her motive. Tonight: Let the good times roll.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Make the most of the day. The Moon in your sign highlights you and your concerns. You could turn this day into a fun and wild period where you let go and have a great time. If you need to approach someone who is very important to you, do so. Tonight: Be a bit more spontaneous.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ If you feel like making plans that please you, do so, by all means. Your sense of humor emerges when speaking to a child or loved one. This person could say something so inappropriate in a conversation that it strikes you as hysterical. Tonight: Where the action is.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Accept an invitation that puts you right where your friends are. Whether you do some early holiday shopping or get together for a fun game of racquetball matters very little — it is the company that counts. Reach out to an older relative. Tonight: At a favorite place with friends.

PISCES
(Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Pressure builds to help others, whether you're planning a party, putting in overtime to finish a project or helping your sweetie paint the dining room. You will enjoy heading down a different path. In fact, you could be delighted to try something new. Tonight: Make plans with friends.

Immigration divides Latina governor and governor-elect

By Morgan Lee
Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. — New Mexico's Democratic governor-elect signaled a new approach to border security and immigration that emphasizes humanitarian concerns and skepticism of the White House, as the reins of state government pass from one Latina governor to another.

U.S. Congresswoman and Gov.-elect Michelle Lujan Grisham said Friday that she is worried about the well-being of women and children in migrant caravans approaching the U.S. from Mexico and may reconsider the state's decision to deploy local National Guard troops to the border.

"I worry about the women and children in that caravan," said Lujan Grisham, who won Tuesday's election in a landslide against GOP U.S. Rep. Steve Pearce.

Republican Gov. Susana Martinez in April deployed fewer than 200 troops to the state's border with Mexico at President Donald Trump's request. That was before concerns about the migrant caravan prompted a new federal deployment of more than 5,000 troops.

The Trump administration is warning that the caravans will further overwhelm asylum systems. On Friday, the president ordered that anyone who enters the U.S. illegally from Mexico by going around official border crossings is ineligible for asylum.

Lujan Grisham, who will become one of four border governors come Jan. 1, suggested the U.S. should be prepared to offer humanitarian support and asylum application services for migrants, regardless of where they arrive.

She expressed skepticism of the Trump administration's portrayal of immigration and border security situations.

"I have not been confident about the president's or Homeland Security's information, I haven't found it credible — in many details, in many ways," Lujan Grisham said. "If I can't get information in January that shifts my thinking, particularly with assignment of troops on the border, I would likely reconsider the National Guard being on the border."

The comments were made at a news conference in the state Capitol as Martinez, who leaves office at the end of the year based on term limitations, and Lujan Grisham discussed details of the transition of power.

Judge orders agency to pay $127K over removal of kids

Associated press

HOUSTON — A Texas judge has ordered Child Protective Services to pay a family more than $127,000 for wrongfully removing their children and allegedly lying to the court about the removal.

Harris County Judge Mike Schneider on Thursday announced sanctions against Child Protective Services after calling the agency "dishonest" and possibly "malicious" for removing Melissa and Dillon Bright's two young children from their care in September, the Houston Chronicle reported. Schneider ordered the agency to pay the Bright family's legal fees and to create new training for CPS workers.

"We do need to deal with the issue of how we make sure this doesn't happen again," Schneider said.

Following the ruling this week, the family's attorneys are calling for the firing of the CPS workers involved in wrongfully removing 2-year-old Charlotte and 5-month-old Mason.

The trouble started in July, when Mason fell from a lawn chair onto their cement driveway in Tomball. Melissa Bright immediately took Mason to the hospital for his head injury, but an MRI revealed that Mason had a second, smaller fracture and bleeding in his brain.

Melissa Bright couldn't explain her child's second fracture, which resulted in a child abuse prevention team determining that Mason's injuries were "consistent with child abuse." CPS workers decided that the children would need to be placed in the care of other family members.

But the Texas Children's Hospital later found that Mason likely had a blood clotting disorder, which explained his additional health issues. Mason's head injury also didn't heal as planned and required the baby to have a hole drilled in his brain to relieve pressure.

Melissa Bright needed to nurse Mason in order to prevent a second injury, but CPS wouldn't let the mother live with her child.

The family tried to work with the agency to move the child closer to home but case workers delayed getting approval, leading the family to bring their children home on their own. The move resulted in a caseworker, Lavar Jones, seeking emergency custody of the children in September without telling the court about Mason's diagnosed blood disorder and a medical opinion that explained his second injury.

Jones was questioned weeks later in court about the agency's reasons for removing the kids, and the caseworker pleaded the Fifth Amendment, which allowed her to decline to answer questions that might incriminate her.

"They lied in their affidavit, they lied in their sworn removal testimony and they have — when questioned about those lies — taken the Fifth," said Dennis Slate, the family's attorney.

The case is a sign of a "broken system" and the need for more accountability, the family's attorneys said.

CPS spokeswoman Tejal Patel said the agency is reviewing options, including an appeal.

Schneider gave CPS two weeks to develop new training for its workers.

Lockdown ordered after vehicle speeds onto Army post

Military officials say a vehicle forced its way through an Army post entrance gate in South Texas, prompting a lockdown as security forces pursued the vehicle.

Joint Base San Antonio military officials said in a statement posted to Twitter that the vehicle, containing two people, ran the gate at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio around 4 a.m. Friday.

The two people fled the vehicle. One of them was apprehended, but authorities say they're still searching for the second person.

Authorities have not indicated who was in the vehicle or what their intentions were.

The incident prompted a lockdown that was later lifted. A second lockdown was later ordered that ended about 10:30 a.m. It's not clear if the second lockdown also was related to the security gate breach.

Sheriff: Escaped inmate killed in Mexico shooting

ALBUQUERQUE — Authorities say a man who fooled officers into releasing him early from New Mexico's largest local jail this year has been killed in Mexico.

A Bernalillo County sheriff's spokeswoman says the department learned that 27-year-old Duwin Perez had been fatally shot in the state of Chihuahua on Aug. 18, and confirmed the information with federal authorities.

Authorities say Perez escaped from the Metropolitan Detention Center in Albuquerque in June. He was accused of tricking jail staff into releasing him by pretending to be his cellmate.

At the time, he was being jailed on charges of attempting to commit a felony, shooting at or from a car, aggravated battery, car theft, drug trafficking, conspiracy and racketeering.

Honeywell Aerospace to relocate operations

ALBUQUERQUE — Honeywell Aerospace is planning to move from Albuquerque, leaving potentially hundreds employees without jobs.

The Albuquerque Journal reports the company told employees Thursday that its Albuquerque operations would be moved to Honeywell sites in Arizona, Florida and Puerto Rico over the next year.

The global engineering firm's work in New Mexico is primarily focused on military and government contracts.

The company says those operations can be more efficiently managed by integrating them into other facilities.

The company says in a statement that employees are encouraged to apply for positions at other locations, and severance and outplacement assistance will be offered to eligible employees.

Albuquerque Mayor Tim Keller says he has instructed the Economic Development Department to reach out to partners to see if workers can be connected with opportunities.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg out of hospital after fall

Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg was released from the hospital Friday after having been admitted for treatment and observation after fracturing three ribs in a fall.

Supreme Court spokeswoman Kathy Arberg said the 85-year-old justice is "doing well" and working from home.

Ginsburg, the Supreme Court's oldest justice, fell in her office at the court on Wednesday evening and went to George Washington University Hospital in Washington early Thursday after experiencing discomfort overnight, the court said.

On Friday morning, before the Supreme Court announced her release from the hospital, President Donald Trump told reporters at the White House that he had good wishes for the leader of the court's liberal wing, despite harsh words between them previously.

"I wish her well. She said something very inappropriate during the campaign but she apologized for it. I wouldn't say she's exactly on my side. But I wish her well. I hope she gets better and I hope she serves on the Supreme Court for many, many years," Trump said.

In the summer of 2016, as Trump was campaigning for president, Ginsburg told The Associated Press that she did not want to think about the prospect of the Republican winning the presidency over Democrat Hillary Clinton. She escalated her criticism in subsequent media interviews, including calling Trump a "faker."

In response, Trump tweeted that Ginsburg was an embarrassment for making "very dumb political statements about me. Her mind is shot — resign!"

She ultimately apologized, releasing a statement that read: "On reflection, my recent remarks in response to press inquiries were ill-advised and I regret making them."

Ginsburg broke two ribs in a fall in 2012. She also had two bouts with cancer and had a stent implanted to open a blocked artery in 2014.

Michelle Obama had miscarriage, used IVF to conceive girls

By Laurie Kellman
Associated Press

Charles Sykes/Invision via AP

Michelle Obama participates in the International Day of the Girl Oct. 11 on NBC's "Today" show in New York.

WASHINGTON — Michelle Obama says she felt alone after a miscarriage 20 years ago and she and Barack Obama underwent fertility treatments to conceive their two daughters, according to her upcoming memoir.

In some of her most extensive public comments on her White House years, the former first lady also lets her fury fly over President Donald Trump's "bigotry and xenophobia" — dangerous, deliberate rhetoric, she wrote, that risked her family's safety.

"For this," she writes, "I'd never forgive him."

But it's her deeply personal account of her marriage to the future president that shed new light on the Ivy League-educated couple's early struggle with issues of family, ambition and public life.

"We were trying to get pregnant and it wasn't going well," Mrs. Obama, 54, writes in "Becoming," set for release Tuesday. The Associated Press purchased an early copy. "We had one pregnancy test come back positive, which caused us both to forget every worry and swoon with joy, but a couple of weeks later I had a miscarriage, which left me physically uncomfortable and cratered any optimism we felt."

The Obamas opted for IVF, one form of assisted reproduction that typically involves removing eggs from a woman, fertilizing them with sperm in a lab, and implanting the resulting embryo. It costs thousands of dollars for every "cycle," and many couples require more than one attempt.

Mrs. Obama writes of being alone to administer herself shots to help hasten the process. Her "sweet, attentive husband" was at the state legislature, "leaving me largely on my own to manipulate my reproductive system into peak efficiency," she said.

"Becoming" is one of the most anticipated political books in memory, ranking at the top of Amazon's best-sellers on Friday. That's often the case with the memoirs of former first ladies, including Hillary Clinton and Laura Bush. But Mrs. Obama defied her exalted status in the annals of history by cultivating an image of a modern woman with whom many Americans would like to sip wine and chat.

But until now, she's not extensively shared so many details. Some family struggles, such as losing a baby, are known by millions of women.

"I felt like I failed because I didn't know how common miscarriages were because we don't talk about them," the former first lady said in an interview broadcast Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"We sit in our own pain, thinking that somehow we're broken."

Mrs. Obama said they underwent fertilization treatments to conceive daughters Sasha and Malia, now 17 and 20.

She also writes about falling in love. The Obamas met at the Chicago law firm Sidley Austin LLP, and Michelle was skeptical at first. But she was then impressed by his "rich, even sexy baritone" and by his "strange, stirring combination" of serenity and power.

Their first kiss set off a "toppling blast of lust, gratitude, fulfillment, wonder," she wrote.

Confronting racism in public life — being the first black first lady, wife of the nation's first black president — has been a bracing experience, in Mrs. Obama's telling. She agonized over what she feared was a cartoonish, racist image. She remembered being labeled "angry" and, by the Fox network, "Obama's Baby Mama."

In the White House, she knew she would be labeled "other" and would have to earn the aura of "grace" given freely to her white predecessors. She found confidence in repeating to herself a favorite chant: "Am I good enough? Yes I am."

In the memoir, Mrs. Obama lets loose a blast of anger at Trump.

She writes that Trump's questioning of whether her husband was an American citizen was "crazy and mean-spirited" — and "dangerous." Trump suggested Obama was not born in the U.S. but on foreign soil — his father was Kenyan. The former president was born in Hawaii.

"What if someone with an unstable mind loaded a gun and drove to Washington? What if that person went looking for our girls?" she writes in the memoir. "Donald Trump, with his loud and reckless innuendos, was putting my family's safety at risk. And for this, I'd never forgive him."

As he left for Paris Friday, Trump chose not to respond to the former first lady, telling reporters, "Oh, I guess she wrote a book. She got paid a lot of money to write a book and they always insisted you come up with controversial." Trump instead changed the subject to his predecessor, Barack Obama, saying, "I'll never forgive him" for making the country "very unsafe."

Mrs. Obama also expresses disbelief over how so many women would choose a "misogynist" over Clinton in 2016. She remembers how her body "buzzed with fury" after seeing the infamous "Access Hollywood" tape, in which Trump brags about sexually assaulting women.

She also accuses Trump of using body language to "stalk" Clinton during an election debate. She writes of Trump following Clinton around the stage, standing nearby and "trying to diminish her presence."

Mrs. Obama launches her promotional tour Tuesday not at a bookstore, but at Chicago's United Center, where tens of thousands of people have purchased tickets — from just under $30 to thousands of dollars — to attend the event moderated by Oprah Winfrey.

Another Keystone XL setback: environmental review ordered

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a setback for the Trump administration, a federal judge has blocked a permit for construction of the Keystone XL oil pipeline from Canada and ordered officials to conduct a new environmental review.

Environmentalists and tribal groups cheered the ruling by a U.S. district judge in Montana, while President Donald Trump called it "a political decision" and "a disgrace."

The 1,184-mile pipeline would begin in Alberta and shuttle as much as 830,000 barrels a day of crude through a half dozen states to terminals on the Gulf Coast.

Trump has touted the $8 billion pipeline as part of his pledge to achieve North American "energy dominance" and has contrasted his administration's quick approval of the project with years of delay under President Barack Obama.

The Trump administration has not said whether it would appeal the new ruling. The State Department said it was reviewing the decision, but declined further comment, citing ongoing litigation.

The pipeline was first proposed by Calgary-based TransCanada in 2008. It has become the focal point of a decade-long dispute that pits Democrats, environmental groups and Native American tribes who warn of pollution and increased greenhouse gas emissions against business groups and Republicans who cheer the project's jobs and potential energy production.

U.S. District Judge Brian Morris put a hold on the project late Thursday, ruling that the State Department had not fully considered potential oil spills and other impacts as required by federal law. He ordered the department to complete a new review that addresses issues that have emerged since the last environmental review was completed in 2014.

New topics include the cumulative effects on greenhouse gas emissions of Keystone XL and a related pipeline that brings oil from Canada; the effects of current oil prices on the pipeline's viability; updated modeling of potential oil spills; and the project's effect on cultural resources of native tribes and other groups along the pipeline's route.

The review could take up to a year to complete.

Environmentalists and Native American groups had sued to stop the project, citing property rights and possible spills.

Becky Mitchell, chairwoman of the Northern Plains Resource Council, a plaintiff in the case, said her organization is thrilled with the ruling.

"This decision sends TransCanada back to the drawing board," Mitchell said, calling the ruling "the results of grassroots democracy in action, winning for water and people."

TransCanada said in a statement that it was reviewing the judge's 54-page decision. "We remain committed to building this important energy infrastructure project," TransCanada spokesman Terry Cunha said.

Environmental groups declared victory and predicted the long-delayed project will never be built.

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15-year-old girl and a sophomore in high school. Last year I went to school across the country. While I was there, I became best friends with this girl, "Amelia." We did everything together, and Amelia even flew back here to visit my family when school ended and I had to go home.

It has now been a few months since I've seen her, and so much has changed. She doesn't make time to text or call me hardly ever, and when she does, it's always a quick conversation. Because of the time difference and our schedules, I get that it's difficult, but shouldn't she make some time for her best friend?

Amelia and I were as close as sisters, and I can't stand the thought of losing her. I have already called her out a few times, and we are good for a few days, but then she goes right back to pretending like I don't exist. I'd rather not call her out again. Any thoughts? — FARAWAY FRIEND IN MARYLAND

DEAR FRIEND: Rather than "call her out," it's time to lighten up. Stop trying to make Amelia feel guilty for not giving you the attention she was able to when you were geographically closer. If there's one thing I have learned about friendships, it's that they tend to ebb and flow.

Because you now live apart, concentrate on building other relationships with people close by. This doesn't mean you can't remain friendly with Amelia; it simply means you are expecting more from her than she's able to give you.

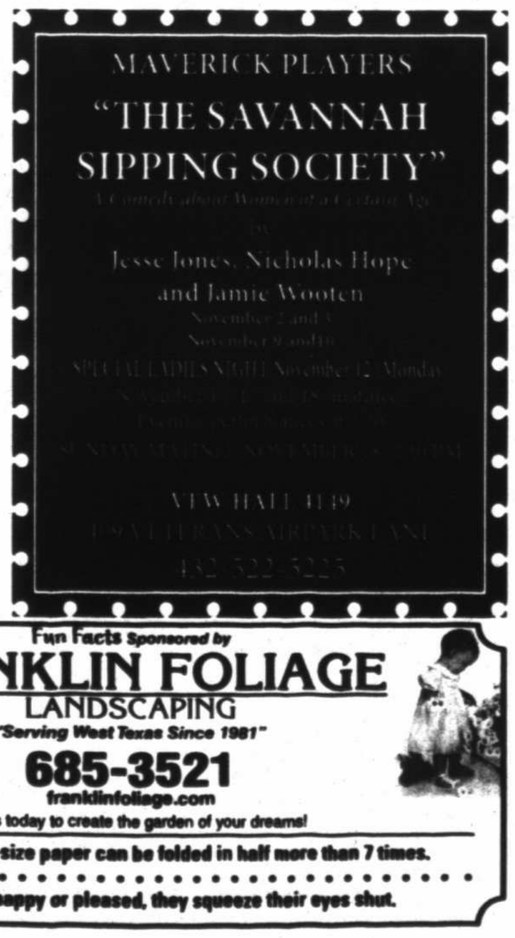

DEAR ABBY: The holidays are approaching, and with them a problem. I recently moved back to my hometown after being away for many years, and I was eagerly looking forward to spending the holidays with my daughter. She has just informed me that she's joining a religion that doesn't celebrate holidays, not even Thanksgiving or birthdays. I would never stand in the way of her chosen path, but I'd still like to be able to include her in family get-togethers. I just don't know how. Any suggestions? — MISSING HER ALREADY

DEAR MISSING HER: Although you will no longer be able to celebrate the holidays with your daughter, you and the rest of the family can still see her and socialize. Talk to her about it and let her set the ground rules. As long as you are respectful, I'm sure she will be glad to give you suggestions about what you can do together.

DEAR ABBY: Early this year my son was killed in an accident. A few weeks later I became ill and was hospitalized. My son's widow looked after me all those weeks. She was known at the hospital by her name and also as my daughter-in-law.

One of my doctors, standing close to her and right next to my bed, asked for and was granted permission to ask her a personal question — "What happened to your husband?" Was it insensitive of him to ask that in my presence? — UNSURE IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR UNSURE: Please accept my deepest sympathy for the loss of your son. The doctor asked for permission to inquire about something personal and it was granted. That said, if the doctor was aware that you had lost your son a short time ago and your daughter-in-law was a widow, the question could have been asked privately because death is often a subject that's painful to discuss when a person is grieving.

Official: Gunman went on social media during bar attack

By Jonathan J. Cooper and Michael Balsamo
Associated Press

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — The gunman who killed 12 people at a country music bar in Southern California went on social media during the attack and posted about his mental state and whether people would believe he was sane, a law enforcement official said Friday.

Also, one of the possibilities investigators are looking into is whether gunman Ian David Long believed his former girlfriend would be at the bar, the official said.

Authorities have not determined a motive for Wednesday's night rampage at the Borderline Bar & Grill.

The official — who was briefed on the investigation but not authorized to discuss it publicly and spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity — would not give additional details on what the 28-year-old former Marine posted on his Facebook and Instagram accounts.

Long, a former machine gunner who served in Afghanistan, opened fire with a handgun in the attack, then apparently killed himself as scores of police officers closed in.

As investigators worked to figure out what set him off, President Donald Trump blamed mental illness, describing the gunman as "a very sick puppy" who had "a lot of problems."

Investigators have not commented on whether mental illness played a role in the rampage.

But neighbors reported hearing frequent loud fights between Ian David Long and his mother, one of them so extreme they called police in April, and authorities at the time worried that the 28-year-old Afghanistan war veteran might have post-traumatic stress disorder, though a mental health specialist concluded there were no grounds to have him involuntarily committed.

The dead included sheriff's Sgt. Ron Helus, a 29-year veteran nearing retirement who responded to reports of shots fired and was gunned down as he entered the bar. He and other first responders "ran toward danger," Sheriff Geoff Dean said at a vigil Thursday evening, calling Helus a hero.

Also killed was a man who had survived last year's massacre in Las Vegas, Telemachus Orfanos, 27.

N. California wildfire claims 5 lives and quadruples in size

By Don Thompson and Paul Elias
Associated Press

PARADISE, Calif. — A Northern California wildfire that moved so fast firefighters didn't even try to stop it killed five people, authorities said Friday as the blaze quadrupled in size after leveling much of a town of nearly 30,000 people.

Only a day after it began, the blaze near the town of Paradise had grown to nearly 110 square miles, and investigators found the dead in vehicles that were torched by the flames.

"There was really no firefight involved," said Capt. Scott McLean of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, explaining that crews gave up attacking the flames and instead helped people get out alive. "These firefighters were in the rescue mode all day yesterday."

With fires also burning in Southern California, state officials put the total number of people forced from their homes at 157,000. Evacuation orders included the entire city of Malibu, which is home to 13,000, among them some of Hollywood's biggest stars.

When Paradise was evacuated, the order set off a desperate exodus in which many motorists got struck in gridlocked traffic and abandoned their vehicles to flee on foot. People reported seeing much of the community go up in flames, including homes, supermarkets, businesses, restaurants, schools and a retirement center.

Rural areas fared little better. Many homes have propane tanks that were exploding amid the flames. "They were going off like bombs," said Karen Auday, who escaped to a nearby town.

McLean estimated that the lost buildings numbered in the thousands in Paradise, about 180 miles northeast of San Francisco.

"Pretty much the community of Paradise is destroyed. It's that kind of devastation," he said.

The massive blaze that hit Paradise spread north Friday, prompting officials to order the evacuation of Stirling City and Inskip, two communities north of Paradise along the Sierra Nevada foothills.

The wind-driven flames also spread to the west and reached the edge of Chico, a city of 90,000 people. Firefighters were able to stop the fire at the edge of the city, where evacuation orders remained in place Friday, Cal Fire Cpt. Bill Murphy said.

Wind in the valley calmed down, but they were still shifting and erratic along the ridgetops, with speeds of up to 45 mph, he said.

With ash falling and the sky darkening to a menacing shade of black, evacuees from Paradise sat in stunned silence Friday outside a Chico church where they took refuge the night before. They all had harrowing tales of a slow-motion escape from a fire so close they could feel the heat inside their vehicles as they sat stuck in a terrifying traffic jam.

Flames burn inside a van Friday as the Camp Fire tears through Paradise, Calif.

When the order came to evacuate, it was like the entire town of 27,000 residents decided to leave at once, they said. Fire surrounded the evacuation route, and drivers panicked. Some crashed and others left their vehicles by the roadside.

"It was just a wall of fire on each side of us, and we could hardly see the road in front of us," police officer Mark Bass said.

A nurse called Rita Miller on Thursday morning, telling her she had to get her disabled mother, who lives a few blocks away, and flee Paradise immediately. Miller jumped in her boyfriend's rickety pickup truck, which was low on gas and equipped with a bad transmission. She instantly found herself stuck in gridlock.

"I was frantic," she said. After an hour of no movement, she abandoned the truck and decided to try her luck on foot. While walking, a stranger in the traffic jam rolled down her window asked Miller if she needed help. Miller at first she scoffed at the notion of getting back in a stopped car. The she reconsidered, thinking: "I'm really scared, this is terrifying, I can't breathe, I can't see and maybe I should humble myself and get in this woman's car."

The stranger ended up helping Miller pack up her mother and taking them to safety in Chico. It took three hours to travel the 14 miles from Paradise to Chico.

Concerned friends and family posted frantic messages on Twitter and other sites saying they were looking for loved ones, particularly seniors who lived at retirement homes or alone.

About 20 of the same deputies who were helping to find and rescue people lost their own homes. The department was trying to find them temporary housing, Sheriff Kory Honea said.

"There are times when you have such rapid-moving fires ... no amount of planning is going to result in a perfect scenario, and that's what we had to deal with here," Honea told the Action News Network.

He said ash in the air was so thick that it "looked like midnight" in the middle of the day.

Kelly Lee called shelters looking for her husband's 93-year-old grandmother, Dorothy Herrera, who was last heard from Thursday morning. Herrera, who lives in Paradise with her 88-year-old husband, Lou, left a frantic voicemail around 9:30 a.m. saying they needed to get out.

"We never heard from them again," Lee said. "We're worried sick. ... They do have a car, but they both are older and can be confused at times."

In Southern California, the Los Angeles County Fire Department tweeted that the fire raging through the Santa Monica Mountains was headed to the ocean. Another fire was burning farther west in Ventura County, also moving toward the ocean.

The National Weather Service issued extreme fire-danger warnings in many areas of the state, saying low humidity and strong winds were expected to continue through the evening.

Dear Chairman Conaway,

Thank you for your leadership and advocacy for farmers in Texas and across the country. This is a pivotal time in agriculture and your support of smart policies is more important than ever.

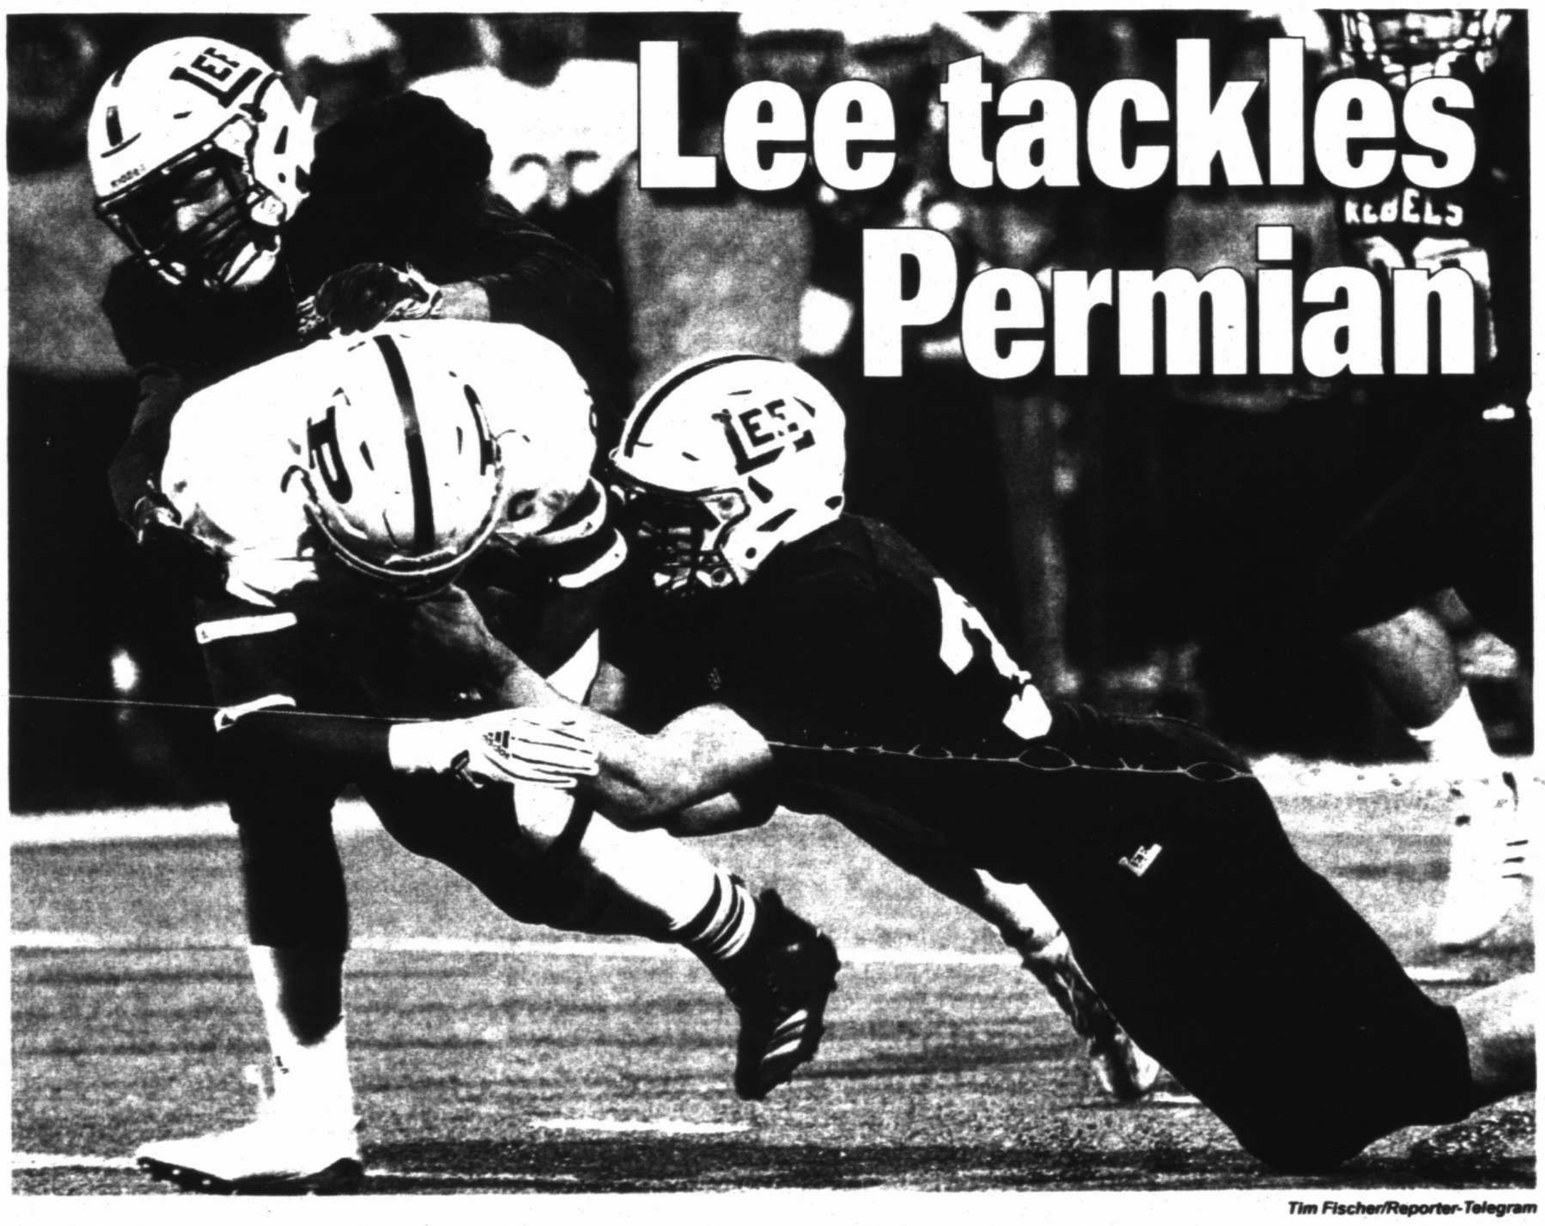

As the original stewards of the environment, farmers work hard to produce more using fewer natural resources. We owe it to them to harness the power of data already collected by USDA to help reduce risk and improve profitability. It's a win-win for farmers and the environment.

The time is now to move the farm bill forward. Farmers and ranchers deserve all the tools available to be successful. Improved data management and analysis is critical to their success.

Thank you for being a champion for agriculture and for smart policies that support farmers.

Rebels knock off Permian, claim share of 2-6A title

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

The Lee football seniors were in the seventh grade the last time the Rebels won district and beat Odessa Permian prior to Friday.

The Team 58 seniors turned the tides in the District 2-6A finale at Grande Communications Stadium.

With 1:07 left, Felix Hinojosa threw a go-ahead 16-yard touchdown pass to Sheldon Bass Jr. to push Lee to a 43-36 victory over rival Odessa Permian.

The Rebels (8-2, 4-1 in District 2-6A) will share the District 2-6A title with Permian (7-3, 4-1) and Amarillo Tascosa, their first district title since 2013. Playoff-bound Lee will face El Paso Americas, El Paso Montwood or El Paso Pebble Hills in its Class 6A bi-district playoff at a date, time and place to be determined.

Hinojosa's TD pass came six plays after a costly Panther penalty. On a third-and-5, Permian linebacker Tanner Adams intercepted Hinojosa and returned it into Lee territory. However, a penalty before the interception nullified the play and Lee was still alive.

Following Hinojosa's go-ahead TD pass, Permian had a chance to take the lead when University of Texas pledge Peyton Powell threw a deep pass to a wide-open Justin Hammond, but the Panther slot back had the ball go through his hands and fall to the turf. On the next play, Powell was sacked for a 13-yard loss, putting Permian into a third-and-23 hole at its own 12-yard line.

Lee senior running back Josh Traylor shined in his final game against Permian, rushing 27 times for 230 yards and four touchdowns.

Traylor scored on a 14-yard run in the third quarter, pushing the Rebels to a 35-21 advantage with 8:56 to play.

But Permian climbed back behind a pair of deep passes from Powell, both in the fourth quarter.

With 5:24 to play, the Panthers took a 36-35 lead when Powell tossed a 43-yard TD pass to Mason Sellers

Early on, it looked like Permian would continue its recent string of dominance, when it won four games in the series by the combined score of 187-63 from 2014-17.

Midland High's Suddin Sapien runs the ball against Odessa High on Friday at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa.

ODESSA —The longest postseason streak in the district doesn't belong to Lee or Odessa Permian but to the Midland High football team.

The Bulldogs dominated early and then hung on late to beat Odessa High Friday night in a game that amounted to a District 2-6A play-in game for the Class 6A playoffs.

The game was decided early as Midland High sprinted out to a 28-7 lead at the half. MHS senior quarterback Suddin Sapien helped the Bulldogs jump out to a 14-0 lead in the first quarter on a part of touchdown runs.

The inspired Bulldogs (4-6 overall and 2-3 in 2-6A) dominated the first half. Midland High outgained the Bronchos, 296-98, and recorded 46 plays compared to OHS' 21.

The Bronchos end their season at 5-5 and 1-4.

Midland High opens the postseason next week at El Paso Franklin. The two teams mixed it up in the regular season with Franklin topping the Bulldogs.

MCA captures state title in 5-set thriller

By Mike Waters
MRT Correspondent

WEST — The dream is now a reality.

Midland Classical Academy captured its first state championship with a thrilling, 25-21, 25-17, 21-25, 17-25, 15-11, victory over New Braunfels Christian Academy in the TAPPS 3A championship Friday afternoon at West High School.

The Lady Knights captured the first two sets, and then New Braunfels responded with mirroring results in the third and fourth sets, setting the stage for a winner-take-all fifth set.

MCA took care of business in those first two sets, and seemed poised for another sweep, taking a 7-6 lead early in the third, before New Braunfels responded with runs of 6-0 and 7-0 leaving the Lady Knights with a 21-11 deficit. A 6-1 MCA Run closed the gap to 22-17, and following consecutive points by New Braunfels, the Lady Knights answered with four straight points to stave off set point, trailing 24-21. But New Braunfels claimed set point to take the match to a fourth set.

New Braunfels prevailed in the fourth set, 25-17, as MCA's last lead was at 6-5.

Then came the decisive final set, and MCA tallied the first two points, and after an 8-8 tie, four consecutive points gave the Lady Knights a 12-8 lead. After New Braunfels closed the gap to 14-11, Lizabelle Russell's kill gave the set, match, and championship to the Lady Knights, and the celebration ensued.

MCA coach Amie Miller cited a total team effort in capturing the first state title for MCA.

"Everyone contributed," Miller said. "Incredible match. So proud of our players.

Roach hits 3-pointers late; Texas edges Arkansas 73-71 in OT

By John Erfort
Associated Press

FORT BLISS— This was exactly the kind of situation Texas had focused on, and when the Longhorns got the chance to prove it they did just that in a 73-71 overtime victory against Arkansas on Friday night in the ESPN Armed Forces Classic.

Two late 3-pointers by guard Kerwin Roach II helped Texas overcome a sluggish offensive showing in the second half and reach overtime, where the Longhorns outscored Arkansas 10-8 to pull out the victory before 1,200 people at Fort Bliss' Soto Gym.

"It was a great way to start my senior season," said Roach, who didn't play in the opener for an unspecified violation of team rules. "That's what I was ready to do. Just play basketball. I even had jitters myself."

Last year, Texas played in 17 games that were decided in the final minute or overtime. They were 8-9 in those games, and that became an offseason focus - changing the outcome of those games.

"We've emphasized all offseason long what goes into winning close games," Texas coach Shaka Smart said. "A little bit here midway through the first half our guys probably felt like this wasn't going to be a close game, but it was."

Roach led Texas (2-0) with 18 points, followed by Jericho Sims with 14 and Dylan Osetkowski with 11 and 13 rebounds. Texas led by double figures, and often by eight or nine, in the first half, and it led 36-30 at the break.

Arkansas (0-1) got a game-high 20 points from center Daniel Gafford, who also had a double-double with 12 rebounds. Joe added 17 points for the Razorbacks, while Jalen Harris and Mason Jones each had 11.

Princess is a 1-year-old female Chiweenie (about 10-12 lbs) from Midland Animal Services. We were told that she was adopted from the Odessa shelter and then later surrendered to the Midland Shelter for reasons unknown to us. Princess is friendly once she warms up in new environments. She can be very fearful of new people and places. Princess likes playing with other small dogs. Princess may do better in a home with older children due to her timid nature.

yardage totals 522-345.

Sapien had a huge game with 114 yards on the ground and three scores. He also added another 240 yards and three touchdowns in the air with tosses to Campbell Keithley, Unique Lee and Randall Blanscett.

Daniel Garcia was a nice complement to Sapien rushing as the running back racked up 122 yards and score.

The Bulldogs defense played well early on when the game really was decided. MHS held Odessa High to 98 yards and seven first downs in the first half.

In the second half, when the game became a track meet, OHS' stars came to play but the Bronchos spotted the Bulldogs too many points.

Josh Lara had 163 and three touchdowns to lead the Bronchos. Trey Smith threw for 166 yards and two TDs.

LEE

From 4B

On the Panthers' opening possession, Hammond made an acrobatic catch along the sideline on a Powell pass on third-and-15. Four plays, Permian capitalized on the big play when Ed Williams scored on a 1-yard run with 6:21 left in the first quarter.

On the Permian's next drive, Powell tossed a deep pass to a wide-open Hammond for a 54-yard TD connection, pushing Mojo to a 14-0 advantage with 3:44 on the clock.

But the Rebels were resilient, as they outscored Permian 28-7 the rest of the first half and went into intermission with a 28-21 lead.

Lee got its momentum going when Traylor rushed around the left side of the offensive line and broke away for a 63-yard TD run, cutting Permian's lead to 14-7.

The Rebels scored 21 more points in the second quarter, buoyed by two long yardage scoring plays.

"This was the first five-set match we've played all season. It was a match of adjustments. We made adjustments, they responded, and both teams made adjustments throughout the match."

Miller added she was very pleased with how her team came out with energy and confidence to begin the match.

"We had a lot of energy, with an aggressive mindset," Miller said of her team taking the first two sets. "Then we kind of lost that energy for two sets and got it back again in that fifth set.

"Those first two points for us in the fifth set were crucial. It gave us a big lift."

Russell, who had a team-high 25 kills, including four in the decisive fifth set -- including the championship point, echoed the theme of playing together and team effort.

"So proud of this team," said Russell, who is a senior. "We really wanted this. Everyone played so hard, played together."

Russell added a team-leading seven blocks, as well as 13 digs in a well-rounded team effort victory.

Jenny Coco, who played on back-to-back days on a sprained ankle she suffered in the area round, had 15 digs, 11 kills and three aces for the Lady Knights.

Her gritty performance did not go unnoticed by her teammates.

"Jenny was amazing," Russell said. "Her playing on a very sore ankle the way she did, it gave everyone a tremendous boost."

"It was frustrating not being able to have the explosion," said Coco, who was feeling a lot less pain after the championship. "We came together as a team. I did it for the team. Everyone was incredible. This feeling is incredible."

Miller added: "Whatever Jenny lacked physically she more than makes up for it mentally."

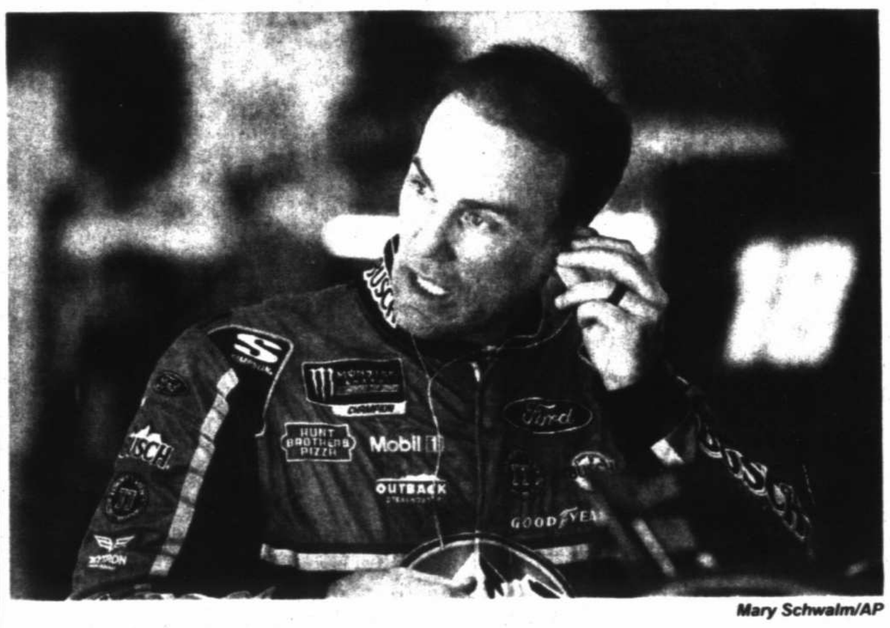

Kenna Bayley, a sophomore, came up huge for the Lady Knights, recording a team-high 41 assists to go with 12 digs, three kills, three aces and one block.

Leia Beattie and Kacy Miller each had 18 digs, Grace Coco chipped in with 12 assists.

Russell, Cammie Stokes, Jenny Coco and Bayley were selections to the All-Tournament Team.

Driver Kevin Harvick puts in an ear piece as he prepares for practice for the NASCAR Cup Series auto race July 21 at New Hampshire Motor Speedway in Loudon, N.H. Harvick's bid for a second NASCAR title suffered a massive setback when he was stripped of his berth in the championship race after series inspectors found his winning car from Texas Motor Speedway had been deliberately altered to give him a performance advantage.

Harvick on cheating: "I just show up and drive the cars

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

AVONDALE, Ariz. — Kevin Harvick shrugged off a cheating scandal to show he's still a legitimate title contender by winning the pole for his final crack at making the championship race.

As for what exactly happened with his race-winning car last week, Harvick didn't offer any new information after claiming the top starting spot at ISM Raceway outside of Phoenix.

"I don't build the cars. I can't tell you what's good and what's bad. I just show up and drive the cars," Harvick said Friday.

But his crew chief, Rodney Childers, said Stewart-Haas Racing modified the spoiler on Harvick's car because other teams were already doing similar alterations. Childers is suspended for the final two races of the season and working at the race shop in North Carolina as Harvick tries to overcome a devastating penalty issued this week for what NASCAR determined was a blatant case of cheating.

Harvick won last weekend at Texas. When the spoiler was removed from his No. 4 Ford during an extensive inspection in North Carolina, NASCAR discovered the part had been altered.

It is NASCAR's belief that SHR built its own spoiler and tried to pass it off as one distributed by the vendor. The spoiler was offset to the right and NASCAR says it gave Harvick an aerodynamic advantage.

SHR did not appeal the penalty and acknowledged "NASCAR determined we ventured into an area not accommodated by its rule book."

Childers elaborated in a series of tweets early Friday morning in which he said SHR made the decision to move the spoiler after other teams shifted their decklids and spoilers to the right in the previous 1.5-mile race at Kansas Speedway. Childers said it was too late for the team to move the decklid for the Texas race.

"This year there isn't a number or officiating on the offset of the decklid and spoiler together on the car. And at Kansas we noticed people we were racing had the spoilers and decklids further to the right than ours. And it was too late to move the decklid over more," Childers posted on Twitter.

Additional posts claimed the downforce advantage was "4 counts. That's 0.04% of the total downforce of the car. If you think 4 counts is the reason we won you're way wrong."

He also said there were no hard feelings between NASCAR and SHR, which has all four of its drivers still eligible for the playoffs and has been the most dominant organization in NASCAR all season.

Harvick leads the series with eight victories, but two were with illegal cars. His Las Vegas victory from earlier this year was disqualified, as was last week's Texas win. That disqualification cost Harvick his automatic berth into next weekend's championship race and Childers and car chief Robert Smith are suspended.

Harvick is still mathematically in contention to advance into the final four and he's a nine-time winner at Phoenix, site of Sunday's final championship-qualifying event. He won at Phoenix earlier this year.

Harvick, the 2014 champion, had no scheduled media availability at ISM Raceway but was required to attend a news conference after winning the pole. He was contentious as he declined to delve into the scandal surrounding his team, but praised the organization for its strong effort Friday.

"It's more about people than it is about cars and we've got a lot of good people," Harvick said. "You can't drive a slow car fast and you can't beat good people."

Joey Logano, the only driver already locked into next week's title race, was not bothered by the accusations against Harvick's team. He also said he's not wondering if SHR, or others, have been cheating all year.

"Everyone pushes hard and it's nothing new," Logano said. "We like making a big deal out of it, a big stink out of it, but honestly it is part of our sport. There are a lot more items on our cars than there is in football. As competitors we push to that edge and sometimes we go a little over the edge and sometimes it's all about the way you interpret the rulebook."

Logano missed the playoffs last year because his only victory of the season was disqualified when his car failed inspection. That infraction at Richmond in the ninth race of the season haunted Logano's team the entire season.

He's not expecting the fallout from the SHR penalty to slow Harvick, who typically elevates his game during times of crisis.

Harvick's 2014 championship season had brief drama because he shoved Brad Keselowski into a scrum to trigger a melee between Keselowski, Jeff Gordon and their crews. The next week, facing elimination if he didn't win at Phoenix, Harvick dominated the race and advanced into the championship finale.

He won at Homestead to claim his first Cup title the next week.

Harvick was runner-up the next season — a year in which he deliberately caused a wreck at Talladega to prevent a bad day hurting his title chances — and is trying to requalify for the finale for the fourth time in five years.

Logano thinks Harvick will be steady this weekend and the biggest deficit the team is facing is not having Childers at the track to lead the team. Childers is banned from the garage but can be in communication with his crew. He said on Twitter he plans on putting in 14-hour work days at the North Carolina shop this weekend. It is possible he could be on property at Homestead-Miami Speedway for the finale.

"I think if there is going to be a hiccup, it's not gonna be on Kevin's part," Logano said. "I think Kevin is the type of driver that rises to the occasion. There can be a hiccup in communication. Obviously, they'll be in communication with Rodney ... but it's not going to be very quick. You know the way things get lost in translation sometimes on the phone compared to being face-to-face.

"You are going to have those situations, and it's for the next two races. I'd say it's a big hit for them, but I'd also feel like that car is going to make it through (to Homestead) as fast as they are and going to their best race track."

Bryant practices with Saints, asserts he's 'not a bad guy.'

By Brett Martel
Associated Press

METAIRIE, La. — Dez Bryant wasn't about to declare himself a changed man just because he'd changed teams.

At age 30, the ninth-year NFL veteran receiver said he is comfortable with who he always has been and hopes he'll fit in with the New Orleans Saints, a team on a seven-game winning streak that looks like it's all-in to contend for a Super Bowl this season.

"I'm always going to be me, you know, who I am. I'm not a bad guy. I've always been a good guy," Bryant said after his first practice with New Orleans on Thursday afternoon. "You can ask my teammates — my ex-teammates — how I am. I love the locker room. It's like family. Every locker room that I've been in — from middle school, high school, college, to the pros — it's always been like a family."

Bryant was reticent when asked to go into detail about interest shown in him by other clubs. He is known to have met with Cleveland and Baltimore before his workout with New Orleans this week earned him a spot on a Saints offense that currently ranks seventh in the NFL and is led by the NFL's all-time leader in completions and yards passing.

"Who wouldn't want to play with Drew Brees," said Bryant, who caught passes from Brees at practice on Thursday. "Not taking away from nobody else, but you got a guy like Drew Brees, like I said, you got a guy like Michael Thomas, (Ben) Watson, Alvin Kamara, Mark Ingram. You got those types of guys."

Bryant spent his first eight NFL seasons with Dallas and in 2017 caught 69 passes for 838 yards and six touchdowns, including a 50-yard scoring play, for the Cowboys.

However, his professional reputation has been marred at times by public confrontations with coaches and teammates during games and practices.

Last season was Bryant's best since he caught 88 passes for 1,320 yards and 16 TDs in 2014, which at the time was his third consecutive season with at least 1,200 yards receiving. He signed his last Cowboys contract right after that, but has not approached that level of production since — a central reason Dallas released him in April with two years left on his five-year, $70 million contract.

Saints players sounded eager to see how Bryant might help.

Thomas, who is New Orleans' leading receiver, said he has been following Bryant's career.

"He's definitely one of those guys you have to watch if you're playing the receiver position," Thomas said. "He's a guy who's done some great things at the position, so you just have to respect it and pick his brain. I asked him a lot of questions, and it's just cool to play with a guy like that."

Saints coach Sean Payton said Thursday that Bryant would be taking the spot on the active roster vacated by receiver Cameron Meredith, a free-agent signing last offseason who is coming back from a major knee injury, and who went on injured reserve after he and the club agreed he'd benefit from undergoing an arthroscopic cleanup on that same knee.

"He kept having the swelling week in and week out and he really was pushing through it," Payton said.

Receiver Ted Ginn Jr. also is on injured reserve and cannot come back until the final few weeks of the regular season, if he's ready by then.

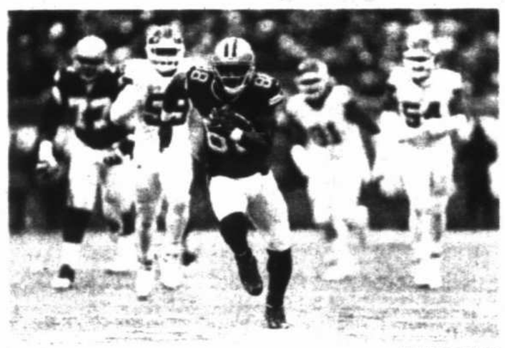

It's not clear how soon Bryant will have a regular role in New Orleans' offense. Payton said Bryant is perhaps five pounds heavier than his ideal playing weight, which would be common among players who did not go through a training camp.

But Payton added, "we felt like he did a number of things that we liked in the workout."

The signing sets the stage for Bryant to play in Dallas when the Saints visit the Cowboys for a Thursday night game Nov. 29.

"I am going to be excited. I'll get to see all the Cowboys fans. You know I still love those guys. I love my ex-teammates. They're my family," Bryant said. "But I'm here on a new chapter. It's going to be fun, but I'm the opponent now."

Bryant said he is "not at all" bitter about his departure from the Cowboys, adding, "That chapter's closed. That's something I had to accept. I accepted that and moved on."

Saints' Dez Bryant hurt, calls injury the 'ultimate test'

By Brett Martel
Associated Press

METAIRIE, La. — Dez Bryant's tenure with the Saints may have been short-lived.

In just his second practice with New Orleans, the newly acquired wide receiver indicated in social media posts Friday that he has had a significant setback.

The team's injury report listed Bryant as questionable for Sunday's game in Cincinnati with an ankle injury, but a person familiar with the situation said the team is still awaiting the results of a doctor's examination of Bryant.

The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the team has not announced any details of Bryant's medical exam.

Bryant has indicated on social media that the injury will be challenging to overcome, writing on his verified Twitter account, "Things was just starting to heat up for me ... I won't question the man upstairs ... this is the ultimate test.. thank you everyone for the prayers."

If Bryant is unable to play this season, the Saints could look to sign another receiver soon.

Take 5; Steelers get a break after drilling Panthers

By Will Graves
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Ben Roethlisberger was still in the process of picking himself up off the Heinz Field turf when the scrum started, one that sent a message that at the moment it might be unwise to mess with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Steelers center Maurkice Pouncey and right guard David DeCastro were not particularly pleased with how Carolina safety Eric Reid launched himself at Pittsburgh's franchise quarterback as Roethlisberger finished off an 18-yard scramble during the third quarter of a 52-21 dismantling of the Panthers on Thursday night.

Together the two perennial Pro Bowlers — a combined 630 pounds give or take a meal — let Reid and a handful of his teammates know they didn't appreciate Reid's approach to his job. What followed was 30 seconds of flexing, grabbing and shoving before Reid was ejected for targeting.

"You've got to be there for your guy," DeCastro said. "Just trying to stand up for him and show him we've got his back."

As the Steelers made their way back to the huddle, Roethlisberger gave his linemen peace of mind should the NFL decide to hit their wallets after sticking up for him.

"Ben came up after and said, 'If any fine gets handed out, I'll handle that,'" Pouncey said with a laugh.

Pouncey, in the fourth year of a five-year contract that will pay him $44 million, can certainly afford to write the check. He believes the fact he won't have to if it comes to that says a lot about Roethlisberger — and a lot about the current climate within the Pittsburgh locker room.

"It's cool man," Pouncey said. "I appreciate all the guys repping like that."

Those guys have found their identity over the last five weeks. Pittsburgh (6-2-1) set a record for the most points by an NFL team in the 17-year history of Heinz Field while rolling to a fifth straight victory. The reward? Five days off to rest up before starting a daunting final stretch that begins on Nov. 18 in Jacksonville in a playoff rematch that saw the Jaguars stun Pittsburgh at home in January.

"Last year is last year," Steelers cornerback Mike Hilton said. "We're a different team just like they're a different team."

If anything, Pittsburgh looks much better than while getting pushed around by Leonard Fournette and Blake Bortles in a confidence-shaking 45-42 setback that led to an exodus in both the secondary and portions of the coaching staff.

Randy Fichtner took over for Todd Haley as offensive coordinator and, even with star running back Le'Veon Bell sitting out due to concerns with his one-year contract, has put together an attack that looks as dynamic and varied as anything in the league.

James Conner, Bell's replacement, already has 11 touchdowns through nine games, as many as Bell has scored in any full season. Roethlisberger spread the ball all over the place on a night he finished with more scoring passes (five) than incompletions (three).

"We've got a lot of weapons on this team and Ben showed it tonight getting the ball to all of them," DeCastro said.

Roethlisberger's only complaint is that Fichtner may get a little too loud in the headset because he's so pumped up about the next play call.

Pittsburgh's defense kept Carolina's Cam Newton under wraps, sacking him five times while limiting the Panthers to 242 yards, the fourth straight game an opponent has finished with 275 yards or less. Save for a couple of early communication breakdowns that allowed Panthers running back Christian McCaffrey to get loose, the Steelers kept things tight.

"I don't think it's a come-to-Jesus moment where something miraculously just happened," defensive tackle Cam Heyward said. "I think everybody got back to work. It showed on the practice field and it showed ever since. This is a big win, but it's not like we don't have games after this. We'll enjoy it for tonight and enjoy it for the weekend, but when we get back in we have to get back to work."

Halfway to NFL awards: decisions and lots of candidates

On Football
Barry Wilner

By the time every NFL team has played eight games, there are some heavily established favorites for The Associated Press NFL awards that are handed out on Super Bowl eve.

Not this year.

MVP? Lots of candidates — and not just quarterbacks.

Coach of the Year? Nearly every division has a contender.

Comeback Player? Some likely Hall of Famers are in the mix there.

So the AP polled a few of the 50 voters for the awards, including genuine Hall of Famer James Lofton. The theme was clear: There isn't much clarity as we head into the final eight weeks of the schedule.

MVP

This honor has gone to a quarterback the past five seasons and 10 of 11. Two running backs, Adrian Peterson in 2012 and LaDainian Tomlinson in 2006, broke through the QB domination in the past dozen years.

Lofton and some others select Chiefs quarterback Patrick Mahomes.

"So good you just can't take your eyes off of him," the CBS analyst says.

"Maybe this opinion changes next week, given the stellar competition that includes (Todd) Gurley and (Drew) Brees," adds USA Today's Jarrett Bell. "Maybe not, as the kid keeps showing up. A first-year starter as quarterback? Hey, Mahomes is like the new Kurt Warner."

Paul Domowitch of the Philadelphia Daily News opts for Brees. Charean Williams of Pro Football Talk prefers Gurley.

Don't forget about Tom Brady, Adam Thielen or Philip Rivers, and perhaps even a defensive force such as J.J. Watt.

Coach

Another wide-open field headed by, according to Jenny Vrentas of Monday Morning Quarterback, Kansas City's Andy Reid.

"I selected Andy Reid ... for his ability to seamlessly transition from Alex Smith to Mahomes," Vrentas explains. "He's been so invested in Mahomes' development that he sits with him on the bench in between offensive series, going over what they see and how they'll attack the opponent next. Reid has demonstrated an ability to keep his offense fresh and tailored to his players, updating his West Coast system with spread concepts pulled from the college ranks."

Bob Glauber of Newsday points to last year's winner, Sean McVay of the Rams.

"He's one of the brightest minds in the game, and at 32, is proving not only to be a brilliant play caller, but an exceptional leader as well," Glauber says.

Not far behind in our little poll: the Saints' Sean Payton, the Texans' Bill O'Brien, the Bears' Matt Nagy, and the Chargers' Anthony Lynn, whose team "plays a road game every week," Lofton notes.

Comeback player

Rarely has there been such an impressive group vying for an award no one really wants to win considering the implications of a comeback.

From Watt to Peterson to Aaron Rodgers, from Andrew Luck to Carson Wentz to Deshaun Watson, from Odell Beckham Jr. to Richard Sherman — WOW!

"It's either Andrew Luck or Watt," says Williams, "but Watt has returned to being one of the best at his position. He is playing at an All-Pro and Pro Bowl level. Luck is not one of the top-five quarterbacks in the NFL and maybe not in the top 10."

Eric Adelson of Yahoo Sports goes for the Colts quarterback.

"Can't imagine the frustration he's faced," Adelson says. "A pro's pro."

Vrentas picks Watt.

"The surgery Watt had last October to put his leg back together after a tibial plateau fracture was so complicated that the surgeons couldn't even be certain that it would work, and that his leg would be able to bear the full weight of his body while running full speed," she explains. "Watt, who has nine sacks in nine games, was undeterred. He wasn't back to full strength in the season opener but has steadily gotten better each week, a scary thought for opponents."

Offensive player

Another free-for-all, with Gurley, Mahomes, Thielen, Brees, Michael Thomas and James Conner getting consideration.

"Before it's done, he could wind up as MVP," Bell says of Gurley, his choice in this category. "Ditto for Brees. Running backs don't get the same love as quarterbacks in the pass-centric environment of the NFL. But if Gurley breaks LaDainian Tomlinson's single-season TD record and the Rams keep winning big, people will have to take notice. Then again, Brees has a few records and has never been MVP."

Domowitch, a Brees supporter for MVP, puts Mahomes here. So does Williams.

Defensive player

This category could be a two-horse race between a pair of thoroughbreds previously honored with the award: Aaron Donald and Watt.

"Now that's a man who don't need no stinking training camp," Bell says of Donald.

Eric Adelson of Yahoo Sports prefers Donald, as well.

"A game wrecker on every down," Adelson says.

Adds Glauber: "Donald is a disruptive force in the middle and already has 10 sacks. The only problem for him — and the Rams — is that teams will often go to great lengths to shut him down. Thus, the constant double teams he has to fight through."

Lofton likes what Khalil Mack has done in Chicago: "Mack turned the Bears from pretenders to contenders." But this train could be a runaway for Donald and Mack.

Offensive rookie

No contest.

"He's the only good thing going for an awful Giants team," Glauber says of Giants RB Saquon Barkley. "Until the Giants figure out their quarterback situation, he'll be wasted in this offense."

But not lost in the awards prognostications..

"On pace for more than 2,000 total yards — on a bad team," Adelson notes.

Defensive rookie

Chargers safety Derwin James has gotten lots of love, but there's no runaway leader.

"Darius Leonard and Denzel Ward make this an interesting race for the award down the stretch," Williams says.

Glauber leans to Leonard: "Halfway through the season, he not only led all NFL rookies with 88 tackles, he led all NFL players in that category. He also has four sacks and three forced fumbles and has already won defensive rookie of the week honors twice."

Texas visits Texas Tech, each looking to end skid

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

LUBBOCK — No. 15 Texas has gone from Big 12 leader and College Football Playoff contender to conference chaser after consecutive losses by a combined four points.

Texas Tech has also lost its last two games, and their freshman quarterback took another hard shot last weekend. But the Red Raiders (5-4, 3-3 Big 12) can get bowl eligible with a win tonight over the Longhorns, just like they did last year in a regular-season finale last November that most likely saved coach Kliff Kingsbury's job. This game is also the final home game for Tech's seniors.

"You want them to have that moment, that memory," said Kingsbury, the former Tech quarterback in his sixth season as coach. "Three of those guys have been here every day I've been here. We have a lot of fifth-year seniors that have been through some ups and downs, and going through a lot to get to where they are at."

It is another primetime game in Lubbock, just like last week when Tech lost 51-46 to No. 6 Oklahoma. Freshman quarterback Alan Bowman, one of the nation's top passers, sustained a partially collapsed lung for the second time this season. He was hospitalized for four nights, and dual-treat Jett Duffey is expected to get his second start as Tech looks to get consecutive wins over Texas for the first time in 20 years.

Texas (6-3, 4-2, No. 19 CFP) likely has to win its last three games and get some help to get into the Big 12 championship game. The Longhorns are coming off a 42-41 loss to West Virginia, when Will Grier ran for a 2-point conversion in the final minute. The Mountaineers had more than 500 total yards, like Oklahoma State a week earlier in a 38-35 win.

"Playing a bit tentative. I think for whatever reason we haven't cut it loose at times," coach Tom Herman said of the Texas defense. "That's on us to figure out why. Maybe it's an uncertainty. Yeah, just playing tentative at times."

It doesn't help that Texas is banged up on defense. Senior defensive end Breckyn Hager (dislocated elbow) was hurt last week but was able to return to practice this week and could play tonight. Senior cornerback Davante Davis (neck) also could return. Junior safety Brandon Jones (ankle) is questionable to play while Hager's backup, Marquez Bimage is out with a shoulder injury.

Hook'em down

Penalizing West Virginia players for taunting for flashing downward "Hook'em Horns" hand signals raised new questions over whether the Longhorns get special treatment. Kingsbury this week told his players not to risk it and has issued similar instructions in the past. Texas players call it disrespectful and things could get chippy if a Red Raiders player does it in

Aggies look to bounce back against Ole Miss after 2 losses

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — After losing two straight games following a three-game winning streak, Texas A&M will try to finish better today against Mississippi.

The Aggies (5-4, 3-3 Southeastern Conference) have been outscored 28-0 in the fourth quarter of losses at Mississippi State and Auburn.

"It disappoints me like it does everyone else in that you know that you're very close," coach Jimbo Fisher said.

Fisher likes the way the Aggies have adapted to his coaching style this season since he took over for Kevin Sumlin, who was fired last November. But he says his team still must develop the kind of habits that elite teams possess.

"There's a mentality that goes with things like that that I think we have to learn," Fisher said. "I'm not disappointed as far as the way their effort is. It's just that we have to keep learning, we have to keep teaching in what we're doing ... there's another level mentality-wise and psychological disposition that we have to understand and be comfortable at."

Texas Tech calls upon Duffey to face off vs. Texas

oleroy@mrt.com

It's Jett Duffey's turn. Again.

The sophomore quarterback for Texas Tech is expected to get the start at 6:30 tonight when the Red Raiders (5-4, 3-3 in Big 12) host No. 15 Texas (6-3, 4-2) at Lubbock's Jones AT&T Stadium in a game that will televised on Fox. The visiting team has won the last four meetings of this series.

Duffey will be playing in place of Alan Bowman, who unfortunately for Tech, suffered another partially collapsed lung injury late in the second quarter of last week's 51-46 loss to Oklahoma.

Bowman suffered the injury when he scrambled and got tackled near the goal line. Some would question why Bowman would be running just weeks after suffering the initial injury. For one, he was cleared by the medical staff, and two, if there was a concern on him getting hit or tackled, he probably shouldn't have been out there in the first place.

Regardless, one of the Big 12's best young quarterbacks won't be available for the team's biggest rivalry game.

Duffey, who led Tech to a 17-14 victory at TCU on Oct. 12, will once again have a chance to prove why he was the seen as the favorite to win the starting job during the spring. He has shown flashes of brilliance with his ability to make plays with both his feet and his arm. But he has also shown the ability to be inconsistent and make crucial mistakes. He did OK against OU once he got settled in and head coach Kliff Kingsbury hopes that with him getting the majority of reps during practice will have him better prepared for the Longhorns.

"I want to get Jett to a point where he's so comfortable, he's playing like he played in high school, where he's free and he's making plays and running around," Kingsbury said. "At times, and he knows this, he's too robotic in our system, one, two, three, four, five ... that's not his game. (He needs to) get to being a feel player. If you've got it, you got it, and if you don't, work your magic. I think you've seen some of that at times. If we can get him so comfortable with the season to where he's playing and not thinking so much, that's when he's going to take the next step."

Senior running back Demarcus Felton said he believes Duffey has shown improvement this season.

"He's been working hard at practice, working at his craft," Felton said. "We trust in him and we trust in the playbook."

Texas coach Tom Herman is one that won't underestimate what Duffey can do, considering Kingsbury's track record with quarterbacks.

"It's amazing," said Herman on Tech's quarterback play over the years. "It says, one, to his evaluation of high school prospects, and what they're looking for very specifically. They're not looking for stars or ranking. They know what they value. And (Kingsbury) does a great job of developing it."

If Duffey plays up to his potential and avoids the big mistakes, the Red Raiders might be in for a good night.

My pick: Texas Tech 38, Texas 34.

Here are my Big 12 power rankings:

1.Oklahoma (8-1, 5-1) — The Sooners overcame an early 14-0 deficit to escape Texas Tech with a 51-46 victory last week. OU next hosts rival Oklahoma State at 2:30 p.m. on ABC.

2. West Virginia (6-1, 4-1) — The Mountaineers had their own escape with a come-from-behind 42-41 win at Texas. WVU looks to keep it rolling when it hosts TCU at noon on FS1.

3. Texas (6-3, 4-2) — The Longhorns have stumbled the past two weeks but a win in Lubbock tonight can help them get back on track.

4. Iowa State (5-3, 4-2) — The Cyclones are one of the hottest teams in the Big 12, having won four straight, including a 27-3 victory at Kansas. Iowa State looks to make it five in a row when it hosts Baylor at 2:30 p.m. on FS1.

5. Texas Tech (5-4, 3-3) — The Red Raiders still need to learn how to finish games, especially at home. They'll look to snap a two-game slide at home against the rival Longhorns.

6. Oklahoma State (5-4, 2-4) — The up and down Cowboys struck again last week with a 35-31 loss at Baylor. Who knows what this team will do this week when it faces rival Oklahoma.

7. Baylor (5-4, 3-3) — Speaking of head-scratchers, it's tough to figure out what this Baylor team is capable of with its inconsistent play at times. But hey, that was a good win over Oklahoma State, but now the Bears must try to cool down Iowa State in Ames.

8. TCU (4-5, 2-4) — The Horned Frogs snapped a three-game losing streak with a 14-13 victory over Kansas State. Now TCU has to go to Morgantown needing two wins in its last three games to become bowl eligible.

9. Kansas State (3-6, 1-5) — The bad news is that the Wildcats have lost two straight. The good news is that they host limping Kansas at 11 a.m. on Fox Sports.

10. Kansas (3-6, 1-5) — David Beaty is out as head coach at the end of the season. Until this program finds stability at the top, it's going to be a perennial cellar team in this conference.

UTPB wants to end season on a high note

By Jaydon Hart
MRT Correspondent

Carrigan

It's been a season of competitive games and hard-fought losses for the UTPB football team in the program's third season. In many of those games the team has not been the favorite but has gone on to contend against some of the best in the Lone Star Conference and in the country.

"Now in our third year I think we're finally getting to the point where we're truly starting to believe and see that we belong," said Falcons' head coach Justin Carrigan. "For our guys to see that they belong in this league, I think that's it's a huge confidence builder as we continue to build the program."

Going into last week's matchup against Texas A&M Commerce not many people thought the Falcons stood a chance against the reigning national champions, but they gave them a run for their money.

The Falcons (2-8, 1-6 in LSC) led 17-13 going into halftime and held that lead going into the fourth quarter, before Commerce rallied to win the game, 20-17.

"We had opportunities, but we just have to get a little bit cleaner across the board offensively," Carrigan said. "We were playing the reigning national champs and they played like it, and I thought we played like a championship program to be right there with them. It showed that we can play with just about anybody and I'm excited about the group of guys and continuing to move forward and build this program."

Today in their season finale the Falcons travel to face LSC opponent Texas A&M-Kingsville at 7 p.m. at Javelina Stadium.

The Javelinas (3-7, 1-6 in LSC) are coming off a 35-31 loss to West Texas A&M where they led for most of the fourth quarter, before the Buffs scored with under two minutes left in the game.

"They're a good team and I think they're very similar to us," Carrigan said. "This is a tough league, unfortunately, they've had a few more games not go in their direction than some of the other teams, but that's how it goes every year in this league. They've got some tremendous talent, quarterback being one of them, and it's going to be a good challenge to end the year."

Both teams enter tonight's game looking to pick up their second conference win of the season and to secure the seventh spot in the final LSC standings. If the Falcons were to collect a victory over Kingsville it would give the program its largest win total for a season, the most conference wins in a season, and would be the best finish they've had in the LSC.

"It would be nice to take another step for the program and get a win in at a place we haven't and move up in the season polls," said Carrigan. "But if you're not moving up to first at the end of the season polls then it really doesn't matter. We definitely don't want to celebrate anything but first."

Red-hot Iowa State set to host bowl-hungry Baylor

By Luke Meredith
Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Once an afterthought, No. 23 Iowa State is now the hottest team in the Big 12.

How the Cyclones handle their recent success will help determine if they can overcome a 1-3 start and be in the mix for a conference title.

Iowa State (5-3, 4-2 Big 12, No. 22 CFP), winners of a league-high four straight games, will host Baylor (5-4, 3-3) on Saturday.

The Cyclones have put themselves in position for the second spot in the Big 12 title game if they win out. Coach Matt Campbell wants his team to maintain the familiar "one game at a time" approach that has worked well during the streak.

"It's all fluff until the end of the season, where you kind of lay it all out and say 'What are we really, did we accomplish what we had the ability to be?'" Campbell said. "I think this group gets it, because having that start at 1-3, where everybody wants to tell you how not good you really are — and yet within our walls we knew how close we really were."

Like Iowa State, Baylor can become bowl eligible with a win on Saturday. It would be a milestone for the Bears, who lost 17 of 19 at one point as the program rebuilds under second-year coach Matt Rhule following a campus sex assault scandal.

"They played four quarters and that was our goal," Rhule said. "It wasn't always perfect. There was a lot we could have done better. But I am proud of their effort and intensity. Most of all I was proud of their togetherness."

Iowa State's defense

The Cyclones allow just 19.3 points in conference games, not including non-offensive touchdowns — though there have been four of given up by Iowa State. Every opponent the Cyclones has faced has scored less than its season average, and four have failed to gain 300 yards.

"Some defenses you play you'll know if they're playing man-to-man or zone, they're blitzing," Rhule said. "These guys just do a great job of disguising. They're able to do it because of the way their players play."

Baylor's defense

The Bears are 91st nationally against the pass and 96th against the run, and Baylor gives up 5.5 yards a carry. With a wind chill expected to be in the low 20s, expect Iowa State to make standout running back David Montgomery the focal point of its attack.

Brewer's status

Baylor sophomore Charlie Brewer came off the bench after time spent in concussion protocol to throw two touchdowns, including the game winner, last week. He is listed as a co-starter this week along with senior Jalan McLendon.

"I think it all centers around their quarterback, a really talented football player," Campbell said of Brewer. "I thought (that was) a really gutsy performance by him last week coming back into that game."

Extra points

Iowa State quarterback Brock Purdy, a true freshman, has led an offense that is averaging 36.3 points during its winning streak. He's also won Big 12 Newcomer of the Week three times.

... Baylor scored 17 unanswered points and won 45-42 on a last-second field goal in 2016, its last trip to Ames.

... The Cyclones have had 15 different players record a sack in 2018.

He said it

"It's a team that is very similar to Oklahoma and TCU in terms of skill that really pops off the video." — Campbell said about the Bears.

Injuries mounting for TCU, tough test at WVU next

By John Raby
Associated Press

Bob Haynes/Star-Telegram via AP

TCU quarterback Mike Collins, left, scrambles to avoid Kansas State's Wyatt Hubert during the fourth quarter Nov. 3 in Fort Worth.

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — TCU coach Gary Patterson figures all those injuries that have piled up for the Horned Frogs could present a problem for No. 7 West Virginia.

Patterson joked it might be difficult for West Virginia to put together a scouting plan against TCU's revolving-door defense.

"It's been a hard year for us," Patterson said. "This team hasn't quit battling."

TCU has seen 20 season-ending injuries and 36 players have missed playing time.

"I don't know if I've ever been down seven safeties in a three-safety system," Patterson said.

"Freshmen say they want to play, so here we go."

Patterson and West Virginia coach Dana Holgorsen have a mutual respect for each other. Their teams joined the Big 12 together in 2012. Holgorsen always pays compliments to TCU's defense when the teams meet and, injuries aside, Saturday will be no different when TCU (4-5, 2-4 Big 12) plays the Mountaineers (7-1, 5-1, No. 9 CFP).

In the high-scoring Big 12, TCU has held opponents under 20 points three times in its last five games. Despite the injuries, the Horned Frogs have the Big 12's best pass defense, allowing 194 yards per game.

"It doesn't matter who plays these spots in a Gary Patterson defense," Holgorsen said. "This will probably be the stiffest test that we've had to date for our offense."

And conversely, one of the toughest defensive challenges for Patterson.

West Virginia's Will Grier has thrown for 28 touchdowns, including three in a 42-41 win last week at No. 15 Texas. He's averaging 327 yards per game.

"I don't know if we've played anybody at this point that throws like they do," Patterson said.

Tick tock

Time is starting to run out on TCU's chances to become bowl eligible. The Horned Frogs must win two of their last three games to do that. They have games remaining at Baylor next week and at home Nov. 24 against Oklahoma State. TCU has missed a bowl twice in Patterson's 18 seasons, in 2013 and 2004.

the heat of the moment. The Red Raiders were penalized for it in Tech's win in Austin last year.

"It bothers us a lot because we take pride in what we do and that logo," Texas wide receiver Lil'Jordan Humphrey said.

Running Red Raiders

While Texas Tech has one of the nation's top passing games and leads the Big 12 with 376 yards a game, the Red Raiders' 25 rushing touchdowns are second in the league behind Oklahoma's 26.

"The quarterback and receivers get a lot of the publicity, if you will," Herman said. "You better be able to stop the run or you're going to bleed a slow death. They do it well enough to make you have to defend it."

Emerging Ehlinger

Despite the two-game losing streak, Texas quarterback Sam Ehlinger keeps getting better. He had one of his best career games last week with 354 yards passing and three touchdowns and ran for another score. He leads Texas with nine rushing touchdowns. His long TD pass to Devin Duvernay gave Texas the lead with less than 3 minutes left. Ehlinger hasn't thrown an interception in since the first game, but he had a bad one late against Texas Tech last season that set up the Red Raiders' winning touchdown.

Hello old friend

Red Raiders defensive back John Bonney played 37 for Texas the past three seasons before going to Texas Tech as a graduate transfer in August.

"John's a graduate of the University of Texas and gave us four years of his blood, sweat and tears and we're very thankful for that," Herman said.

A&M

From 1C

Texas A&M will face an Ole Miss team looking to snap a skid. The Rebels (5-4, 1-4) enter the game after dropping their last two. Ole Miss led by 3 entering the fourth quarter last week against South Carolina before falling 48-44.

"It's the attention to detail that gets us over the hump," coach Matt Luke said. "I think those guys understand that. They're not happy about losing, and they're hurting. If you want to win games in this league, the attention to detail has to be there. We can't give up explosive plays. We can't turn the ball over in the red zone. We've got to do the little things it takes to win in this league."

TA'AMU's health

Mississippi quarterback Jordan Ta'amu, who leads the SEC in yards passing, was limited in practice this week after hurting his foot against the Gamecocks. Offensive coordinator Phil Longo said he should be ready to go on Saturday. If things change and he can't play against the Aggies, the Rebels will look to true freshman Matt Corral, who has appeared in three games this season.

"If we need him, Matt's the guy, but I think Jordan is going to be fine," Luke said.

Standing by Mond

Fisher was asked if he was behind quarterback Kellen Mond after the sophomore threw an interception and lost a fumble in last week's loss.

"One-thousand percent," Fisher said. He then added that many factors played into his tough performance against South Carolina.

"We all get caught up in looking at the guy with the ball and not the cause of the play," Fisher said. "You look at why things are and there are about four or five plays in the game you wish he'd done better ... was he perfect? No. Was it his best game? No. But by far (he) was not the (only) reason why any of that happened."

Mond has thrown for 2,252 yards with 12 touchdowns and seven interceptions and has rushed for 288 yards and four more scores.

Closing in Mississippi receiver A.J. Brown needs just 63 yards to become the school's all-time leading receiver. He has 920 yards receiving this season to give him 2,584 and put him in third place in school history and within striking distance of the school's leading receiver Shay Hodge, who piled up 2,646 yards receiving from 2006-09. Brown, who is projected to be a top-10 pick in next year's draft, has four 100-yard receiving games this season and has scored five touchdowns.

On the ground

While Mond has had an inconsistent season, the Aggies have gotten steady production from running back Trayveon Williams, who ranks second in the SEC with 931 yards rushing. He ran for 107 yards and two touchdowns last week for his fifth 100-yard rushing game of the season and 10th of his career. His work against South Carolina helped the Aggies finish with 220 yards rushing, which were their most against an SEC opponent this season.

"They are very explosive in the run game, and I think that's where we'll have to start," Luke said. "We have a game plan for us to stop the run and then make them beat us throwing the football."

General Announcement

PLEASE HELP! DESPERATE IN VA!
I'm asking help to find 1965 Mustang convertible which I've traced the past 5 years and is now in Midland County area. Originally was red with black top, 289 cu. in., automatic (could be any color combination now). Much sentimental value: I got it new as graduation gift; had it during dating, honeymoon, even bringing first baby home from hospital. If you or someone you know owns one, please check VIN #. If you are a car guy or gal, you know what this car means to us. I would like to talk with you. The VIN # is 5F08D190021. My name is Ray. My number is 540-671-0233.

WORKOUT WARRIOR

Tim Fischer/MRT Media Group

Cheryl Torres, owner of 9Round Fitness, works out on a heavy bag Thursday in Midland.

FITNESS

Veteran-owned business focuses on fitness

By Simone Jasper
sjasper@hearstnp.com

Throughout her life, Odessan Cheryl Torres has stayed active. So when she exercised at an out-of-town kickboxing facility, the workout piqued her interest.

Torres, a U.S. Army veteran, eventually opened two West Texas locations of the fitness center, called 9Round. Torres said some skills from her time as a service member are useful while operating the franchises.

"With the military, I think teamwork, leadership, that all played a part in it," said Torres, an Odessa native. "It's just the respect of every individual."

At 9Round, clients go through full-body kickboxing workouts at nine stations. The 30-minute sessions include trainers and don't require class times.

For more than a year, Weslyn Standard has exercised at 9Round in Midland. She said Torres pushes her to be active while offering encouragement.

ELECTION REACTION

Perryman: Ector County residents step up in big way

A "sign of an awakening" is how Lorraine Perryman described Tuesday night's elections, which included the passage of a tax ratification election.

Perryman was one of the business leaders who helped the campaign across the finish line. Nearly 62 percent of those voting approved the TRE, a far cry from the result just one year ago.

Teacher pay increases are part of what the TRE is expected to fund.

Also on Tuesday, Ector County residents passed a sales tax for outside the city limits and called for an at-large member to be added to the Odessa City Council (Peggy Dean).

"I think it is a real sign of an awakening for Odessa that people stepped up in a big way to vote to improve our community," Perryman told 191 News this week.

Here is a question-and-answer that came from the conversation.

191 News: People in Ector County and Odessa came through in a big way in terms of TRE, sales tax elections and everything. As a community leader could you ask for anything more?

Perryman: We could not have asked for anything more. I think it is a real sign of an awakening for Odessa that people stepped up in a big way to vote to improve our community. In every way at every entity — by changing the city charter on council members and the mayor's vote, on the county getting a consumption tax to improve all the work that needs to be done. … And then people voting to tax themselves to improve our public schools.

ECISD

Interim Superintendent Jim Nelson has been busy since returning to Odessa this fall.

On Tuesday, he and the community were able to check a serious box as Ector County residents approved an increase in the maintenance and operations tax rate from $1.04 per $100 valuation to $1.279570. The proposition is expected to generate $18 million, including $16.5 million in local revenue. For the average home in Ector County, the higher total tax rate will mean about an additional $144 a year in taxes.

Raises for all employees go into effect immediately and are retroactive to the beginning of this school year, according to the district. Roof repairs and replacements will be scheduled as quickly as possible, as will the work to install access-control technology at schools' main entrances, plus fencing. In addition, 39 new buses will become part of ECISD's fleet.

The following is a question-and-answer with interim Superintendent Jim Nelson about Tuesday night's results.

191 News: How big was that victory for ECISD?

Nelson: Obviously, it was big from a financial standpoint, but I think it was big

Drop in gas prices in Odessa lags behind region, state averages

By Stewart Doreen
sdoreen@hearstnp.com

The good news for Odessa drivers is the average price of gas across the city fell this week.

The not-so-good news is the 4-cent average tied for the lowest in the state, and drivers are not experiencing the same drops as the rest of the state when it comes to the decline in the price of gas.

Over the last two weeks, AAA Texas reports an average decline around the state of about 13 cents. In Odessa, that average was 9 cents.

Odessa, where the average fell to $2.93 a gallon, also trails other communities in terms of average decline and is greater when it comes to overall price.

The average price in Amarillo has dropped 17 cents over the past two weeks and stands at $2.34 a gallon. In other cities across the region, the decrease and price are: Lubbock, 14-cent drop, $2.43; San Angelo, 14-cent drop, $2.38; El Paso, 14-cent drop, $2.59; and Abilene, 13-cent drop, $2.61.

In Midland, there also was a 9-cent decline over the past two weeks. This week, the average price of gas in Midland finally is lower than the $3 mark ($2.97)

Around the state, the average price of a gallon of regular unleaded dropped 7 cents to $2.45 a gallon. Odessa drivers also are paying more than the national average ($2.73). Last year at this time, Odessa drives were paying 9 cents less than the national average.

Distributors have told 191 News there are many complexities in the fuel business that impact pricing. They pointed to the high cost of transportation from Gulf Coast refineries and Midland-Odessa's distance from pipelines. There are also issues with the high cost of living, at least in Midland and Odessa, where rents are climbing at rates incomparable around the nation. There's also the supply-and-demand factor. There is a great demand in Midland and Odessa relative to the amount of supply.

The lowest average in Texas can be found in the North Texas area of Sherman-Denison, where the average dropped to $2.26 a gallon.

AAA Texas reported Thursday that the price drops "are happening at a time that market analysts previously thought would likely see pump price increases due to the White House's re-imposition of sanctions on Iran, some of which will target the country's energy sector and impedes its ability to export oil. This was expected to have a potential large impact on global supply and demand.

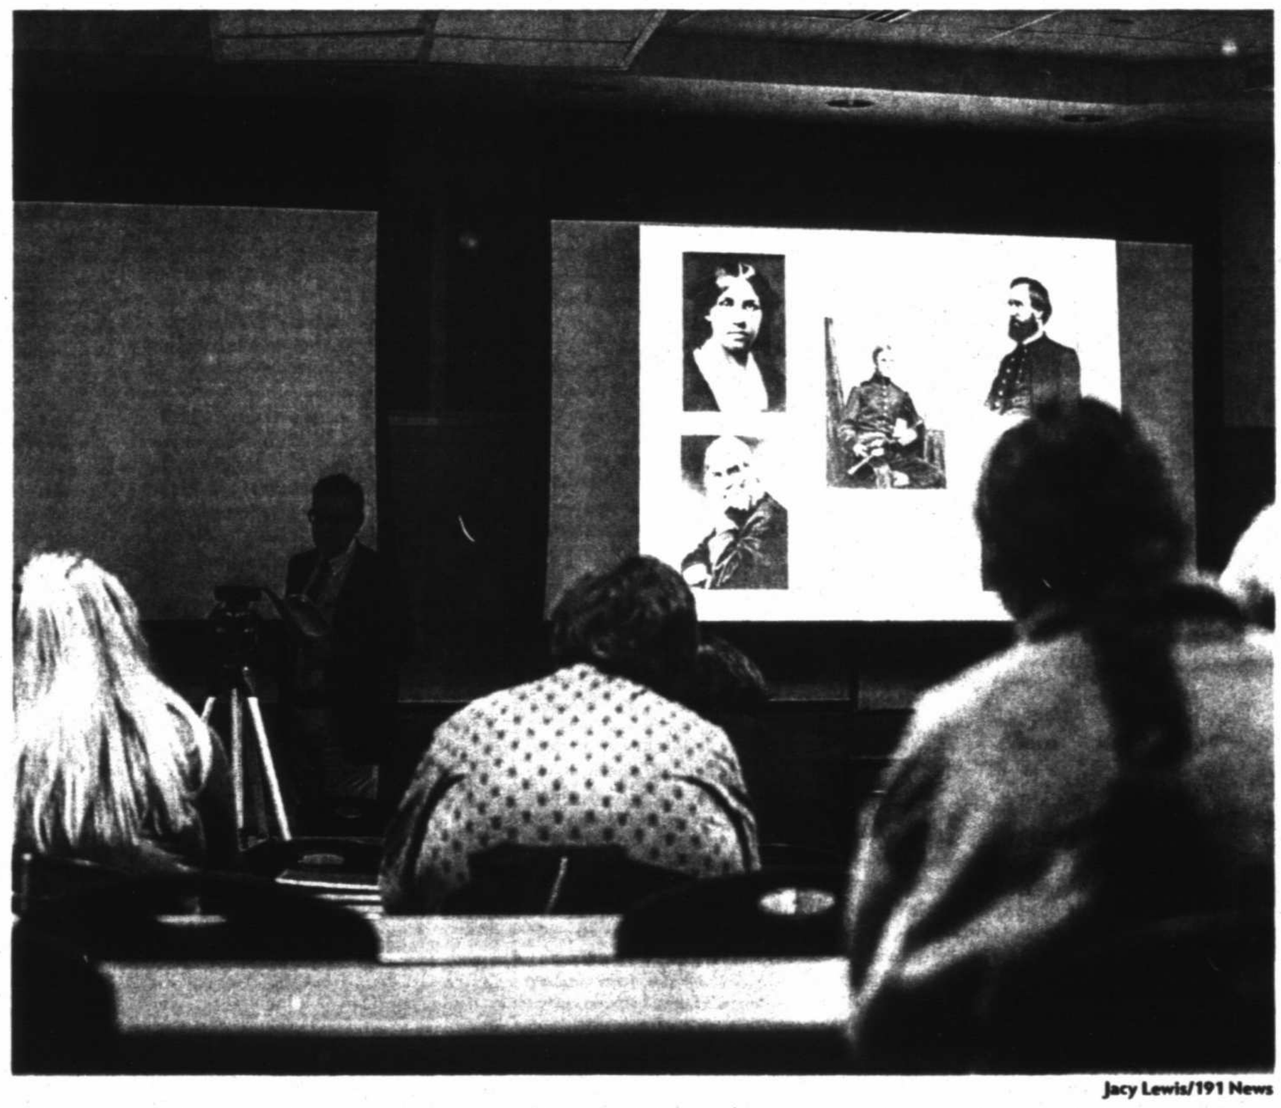

"However, in May, when the decision was announced (to take effect in November), the market reacted quickly with crude oil prices spiking as high as $77 a barrel this summer. At the same time, Iran's exports began to dip. Today, they are reported to be about one million barrels per day fewer than in May while crude oil prices have stayed below $70 per barrel for two weeks. That being said, should any factors cause an upward shift in crude oil prices, the cheaper gas prices would likely be a temporary trend," the AAA Texas report concluded.

Gas Price report
Cheapest gas: $2.63 (Valero, North County Road W/West 16th St.
Most common price: $2.89, $2.95
Cheapest prices in West Texas: Amarillo $2.17, San Angelo $2.20, Lubbock $2.21, El Paso $2.25, Abilene $2.49, Odessa $2.63, Midland $2.69

	Mid-Odessa	Texas
Thursday	$2.946	$2.411

Author brings the Civil War to life with 'Five at Fredericksburg'

John Matteson, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Eden's Outcasts," gave a lecture, "Five at Fredericksburg: How the Civil War Battle Changed Five Americans, and through them, America" on Wednesday in the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Cooper Lecture Hall.

Matteson talked about the lives of Walt Whitman, John Pelham, Arthur B. Fuller, Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. and Louisa May Alcott. Every person Matteson highlighted was involved with the Civil War on some level. Fuller was the only individual to die during the battle at Fredericksburg; Whitman and Alcott went on to produce influential literary work, Matteson said.

He signed copies of his book afterward.

Adopt-a-Classroom

Keep Odessa Beautiful recognized fifth-graders at Milam Elementary for their work on recycling.

The Scholars in Progress students at Milam developed a recycling program for the school. The program included lessons developed, recycling containers created and paper collected. The students became leaders in their school because of their work, according to the KOB.

Because of the students' hard work and dedication to the environment, KOB is rewarding them with 30 permanent recycling bins. The presentation will take place at 7:45 a.m. Tuesday at Milam Elementary School, 640 College Ave.

Aggravated assault with a deadly weapon

Odessa police are asking for the public's help in connection to a shooting that occurred last month in northwest Odessa.

At approximately 12:57 on Oct. 20, Odessa police and Odessa Fire Rescue responded to a 7-Eleven convenience store in the 600 block of West 42nd Street in reference to two gunshot victims.

Both victims were immediately transported to Medical Center Hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

The investigation, according to OPD, revealed that after a disturbance occurred, an unknown man fired one round at one victim. The bullet went through one of the victims' arms and then struck the other victim in the leg. The suspect then fled the scene in a white pickup and was last seen traveling westbound on 42nd Street.

Witnesses describe the suspect as a Hispanic male in his late 20s, approximately 5-feet-9-inches tall and weighing approximately 200 pounds.

Anyone with information in reference to this incident is encouraged to contact the Odessa Police Department or Odessa Crime Stoppers.

Aggravated assault investigation

A 19-year-old man was injured after an alleged assault took place around 3:41 a.m. on Oct. 30 at the 7-Eleven store in the 6000 block of Eastridge.

The investigation revealed that after a disturbance occurred in the parking lot, a man and a woman began assaulting the 19-year-old. During the altercation, the man began to assault the alleged victim and the woman hit him in the back of the head with pliers. Both suspects then fled the scene in a gray Ford F-250 with a sunroof. Anyone with information in reference to the identity of both suspects is encouraged to contact Det. D. Rocha at 432-335-4933 or Odessa Crime Stoppers at 432-333-TIPS and reference Case No. 18-44219.

PERRYMAN

It is says a lot about a community when they step up and say we want to see change and we want to pay to make that change happen. I think it is a sea change for our community and needed. …

(Tuesday night) is the first step. We knew we needed to pass the TRE to right our financial ship at the school district to get them the firm foundation. From that, we as a community need to continue our involvement to work with the school district when they hire the permanent superintendent. This community should continue its support to join with the district to do strategic planning for how the district will meet the challenges of the unprecedented growth that we are seeing throughout the Permian Basin. This is just step one of a lot of community involvement that will be necessary to support our school district and help with that planning so we can meet the needs of the 33,400 kids who are here and approximately 1,000 more that are added every year.

191 News: If election night had gone differently, would that have been a road block in what needs to be accomplished (in the future).

Perryman: I think it would have been a big bump in the road to turning our school district around, for sure. Everybody knows the school districts in Midland and Odessa are struggling. Our academic performances are low — Midland got a "C" on the state report card and we got a "D" — so we don't have a lot to be proud of in that regard. As is evidenced by this vote, that shook our community to the core. They needed to step up and be the change they wanted to see. We can't wait on the state to fix the crisis of school finance. They have been challenged to do that session after session, and they don't have the courage to step up and do something about it. So we as local communities — and we are used to that in West Texas — we are used to taking care of ourselves out here, and this is another example where Odessans stood up and said we are going to do that. We are going to be the resources in our school district that it needs, so that we can have competitive salaries for our teachers and all of our school employees, so we can attract and retain excellent teachers as well as giving raises to everybody in the district.

We are 220 teachers short. If you don't pay a competitive salary, we are going to continue to have overcrowded classrooms because there are not enough teachers. We have classrooms with substitutes, and we need to get certified, excellent teachers in those classrooms. That will help us turn around our academic performance, which when you get to the bottom line, that is the biggest issue. We have to give our kids an excellent education, so they can perform at the highest level.

191 News: Should the people of Odessa be excited about what UTPB said the other day — that they want to double the number of teachers they are producing?

Perryman: Absolutely. Jim Nelson, the interim superintendent, has been working with UTPB and Odessa College to beef up the number of students in teacher programs and those who will get a baccalaureate degree. So, I think that is another big piece of this puzzle. We also know in West Texas that we have to grow our own, and that is a really concrete example of all our higher education institutions working together to meet that need.

"She has a very strong desire for you to be your personal best," Standard said.

Over time, Standard has grown close to the 9Round trainers and fellow clients. She said a welcoming and positive environment repeatedly draws her back.

"They have a sense of pride in what they do and in this country and the benefits of serving the people that live in this country," Standard said.

The 9Round company is a part of VetFran, a program that helps veterans become franchise owners. While starting her businesses, Torres received a discount for serving in the military.

"I commend them … for honoring that," Torres said. "It showed respect as well. That's a big thank you."

The appreciation for veterans extends to 9Round locations in Midland and Odessa. Allie Mendoza is a trainer and said Torres has made an impact on many clients, including those who served in the military.

"We do offer discounted memberships for veterans and medical personnel because she was both of those," Mendoza said. "You can definitely tell that she has a respect for all active and retired military."

Before starting her franchises, Torres worked for 25 years as a registered nurse at Medical Center Hospital. She finds some parallels between her work in that field and as the owner of a fitness business.

"I guess that's a niche of mine, is helping people," Torres said. "And a different aspect is helping someone get well from being sick."

At 9Round, Torres finds it rewarding to see people progress with fitness. She encourages other veterans who consider becoming franchise owners to start down the path.

"If that's your goal — you want to try something different — go for it," Torres said. "It's never too late."

Torres opened her first 9Round franchise two years ago in Odessa. She noticed the facility drew Midlanders and scouted out a second location.

"I wanted to expand and help this community out as well," said Torres, who opened the Tall City fitness center in 2017. "Being that I owned the two, they can use either one with no extra fees."

Outside the fitness realm, Torres, the mother of three children, attends First Baptist Church. She and her husband, Adrian, have been married for 18 years.

Torres said Veterans Day is a reminder of her experience in the Gulf War. She said she is in awe of how much difference can be made.

"The American people are doing things that actually help our country to where we are right now," Torres said. "I commend everybody that's in the military."

from a psychological standpoint. It was a way for the community to say, 'We trust you and we will give you a chance to right the ship and help move kids to a much better place.' It is a step. Someone described it today as saying 'it is a million steps to the moon, but you have to take the first one.' I think we did that (Tuesday) night."

191 News: How much anxiety was there that maybe it wasn't meant to be?

Nelson: As the process moved along, there was less and less. There was no organized opposition, which obviously was a positive factor. The committee, this group of volunteers, did incredible work in the community; they did a great job of not only informing people, but canvassing and encouraging people to vote. For Ector County, the turnout was really strong. I felt from the beginning that the better the turnout, the better the chance we had. It helped there were some city propositions on the ballot that were viewed in a really positive way by the community. You had a positive vibe from the beginning. … I will tell you that until I saw the real numbers I had some anxiety, but I felt pretty good as we got to (Election Day).

191 News: The TRE seems to lay the foundation for the future, including for what possible needs might be out there. Is that how you see it?

Nelson: My time here will be long gone before they take any additional steps, but this had to happen first. It may lay the groundwork for the community to look at the needs in the future. As the school district continues to grow so rapidly in this economic boom we are living in, we have to have plenty of classrooms, we have to have modernized equipment, we have to upkeep the facilities we have, many of which are now — gosh, I moved out here in the 1950s and started at a brand new elementary school and it is now 70 years old. What we need to do for kids is different than when I was in school in the '60s. That is something the community will look at in the future. It will not happen tomorrow. It will not happen next month. There will be facilities' studies and group meetings as we go forward to see what are the needs and how do we address them.

Jacy Lewis/191 News

Jim Nelson poses in his office at ECISD administration building on Sept. 4.

191 News: Was there anything else that stuck out in your mind as far as the process goes?

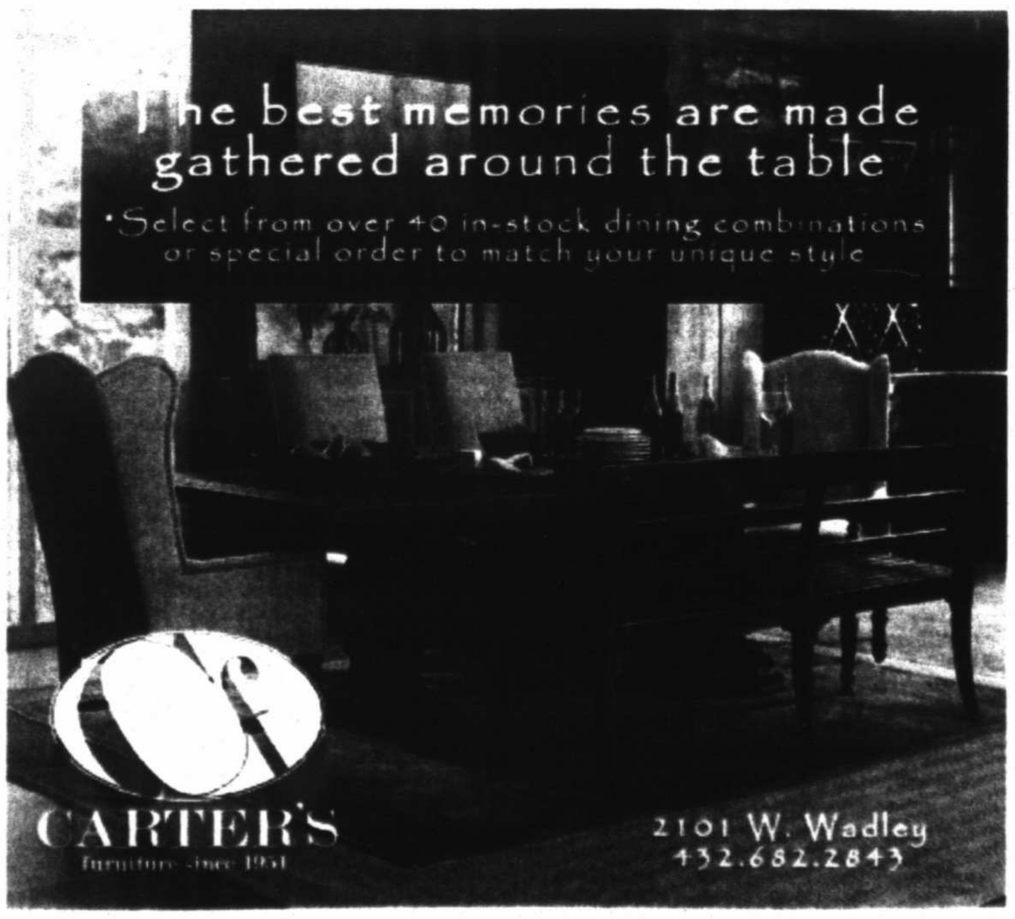

Nelson: I have been gone for 20 years, although I have been out here a lot in the meantime. I was struck at how positive everyone was that this absolutely had to be done. Everyone was on the same page. Once the committee agreed on what the money would be utilized for, everyone marched forward in-step with each other. I think that sent a message that the community leadership, the business leadership, the civic leadership, the parent leadership was singing from the same book for a change.

191 News: TREs are not the easiest things to get done.

Nelson: No. You are asking people to go raise their own taxes. You are not building buildings with it or doing other things. You are literally asking them to raise their taxes so that you can have more resources to run your school district. Sometimes that is a tough ask. I did notice the three big ones in the Dallas-Fort Worth area all passed. I'm sure others did, as well, so I think there is a sense in the state that we have to address some of these financial issues. I hope the Legislature will help out. That would be a nice thing.

191 News: Talk about what UTPB did in their announcement to double the number of teachers they produce. How big of a deal is that for Odessa?

Nelson: It is a big deal. It is a piece. If they doubled or quadrupled them, we could hire every one of them and still have a significant shortage. It is a great commitment.

UTPB hopes to double the number of teachers

■ President Woodley reveals additional institution plans during investiture ceremony

By Simone Jasper

Graduating more teachers and filling other workforce gaps are among the goals of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, according to President Sandra Woodley. She introduced a series of objectives on Monday that the institution hopes to achieve within 10 years.

One plan is doubling the number of graduates who are kindergarten- through 12th-grade teachers. Locally, a shortage of educators has led school districts to turn to virtual teaching and other strategies.

"These professionals are so badly needed here," Woodley told those gathered Monday at the Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center. "And we have a responsibility as the university to do everything that we can to ensure that our public schools have the resources that they need."

To achieve the goal, Woodley said the university will partner with local community colleges and school districts. She also shared plans to collaborate with other regional partners to address workforce needs.

The UTPB president's comments came during an investiture, a first-of-its-kind event for the university. Monday's ceremony formally installed Woodley as president and allowed community members to hear her vision.

Other goals that Woodley outlined included doubling faculty research, degrees earned and endowments. She also said the university aims to have operational excellence, transform its campus, grow athletic programs, build research institutes and focus on internships and co-ops.

"The University of Texas Permian Basin has a major responsibility, a major role to play in the success of West Texas and way beyond West Texas," Woodley said. "And we are up for the challenge."

During the event, James Milliken, chancellor of the University of Texas System, presented Woodley with a presidential medallion and a mace — a staff used during formal academic ceremonies. Milliken said he looks forward to supporting the president in her role.

"I'm convinced that Sandy Woodley is the right president for this institution to lead it to new heights and to meet the many new challenges that will come over the coming decades," he said.

Woodley took the reins at UTPB in July 2017. Since then, she joined Midland College in signing a partnership for an engineering pathway. She also requested additional funding from UT Regents for a kinesiology building, a project that is now underway.

The university president on Monday said UTPB believes in several values: extra mile service, kindhearted qualities, integrity, collaboration and innovation.

"These are the values that make up the character of our institution," Woodley said. "They represent the foundation of our ability to deliver on these aspirations."

The investiture also featured student performances and a processional of the university's faculty and delegates from other institutions. The event ended a series of festivities this month that celebrated UTPB's 45th anniversary.

OUR VIEW

Woodley, UTPB hear the call for education

The good people at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin made our day.

As they celebrated their past and looked forward to the future, they hit a home run with a plan to double the number of graduates who are kindergarten-through 12th-grade teachers.

This is a huge need. The number of overcrowded classrooms in Midland, Odessa and other Permian Basin districts require that someone step up, and President Sandra Woodley and UTPB answered the call.

UTPB has previously been a top provider of teachers in Midland-Odessa, and most people in the area know that won't change. It is much easier to keep talent here than to recruit new talent. Midland ISD saw a few years ago that even signing bonuses couldn't drastically increase the number of teachers being recruited from outside the region.

"These professionals are so badly needed here," Woodley told those gathered Monday at the Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center. "And we have a responsibility as the university to do everything that we can to ensure that our public schools have the resources that they need."

Woodley said the university will partner with local community colleges and school districts, according to the article by the Reporter-Telegram's Simone Jasper. She also shared plans to collaborate with other regional partners to address workforce needs.

The announcement of the ambitious goal was made at the school's investiture. During the ceremony, Woodley was formally installed as president, and community members heard her vision, including goals the school wants to achieve in the next 10 years.

We hope the community will work with UTPB to ensure that it doesn't take 10 years to double the number of graduates who become teachers. In our view, anyone who doesn't realize the sense of urgency in this matter isn't really paying attention. However, Woodley and UTPB are. We think that's good governing.

The need for teachers has hurt education in our region, which already performs at or among the lowest in the state. It has hurt student achievement and overwhelmed teachers.

Woodley's announcement also helps those who think about the future. As ECISD officials and supporters prepare for a possible bond referendum in the future, an obvious question they are going to run into is: "What's the good of having more buildings if there aren't the teachers to fill them?" It is a perfectly legitimate question.

However, Woodley has helped provide an answer. This community has prioritized growing teachers in our backyard, and those teachers will help fill the large void in our region's school districts.

Again, for many reasons, we congratulate Woodley and UTPB officials for answering the call, and we encourage Odessa's business community to step up and ask how it can participate as well.

Dick Saulsbury says his success is product of his employees

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@hearstnp.com

From its start as an electrical and instrumentation services contractor, Saulsbury Industries has grown into a full-service engineering, procurement contractor active in industries ranging from gas processing and treatment to nuclear power to terminals and logistics. It has grown to more than 5,000 employees.

"I didn't think it would be that way when we started," said Dick Saulsbury, who founded Saulsbury Electric in 1967, in a phone interview from his Odessa home.

Despite the various industries Saulsbury serves, "everything we are, everything we have, comes from oil. We keep that in mind," he said.

Born and raised in Smackover, Arkansas, Saulsbury recalled watching his grandmother help his grandfather pull wells. "I was raised in the oil fields," he said, starting work in the industry at age 11.

After getting married, Saulsbury left Louisiana Tech, and he and his wife hitched a trailer to their Buick and landed in Wickett in 1962, lured to West Texas by his uncle to work for Dixie Electric.

Demand for the services of his Saulsbury Electric prompted him to find employees to help with the work. As demand continued, he began to expand and formed Saulcon construction company, Eagle Instrumentation to provide pneumatic services, then Saulsbury Engineering and Construction. He eventually consolidating them into Saulsbury Industries.

Saulsbury is quick to credit his employees with the company's growth. "This is a product of the employees. What God gave us, the employees helped grow," he said.

He said he has had no specific growth targets or goals for the company. "I don't care if we had 50 employees or 150 employees, if we earned $5 million or $500 million. It was important that we work safely, that the people like what they're doing and they're happy," he said.

"We want to do good, honest work and have our employees return home safely — all employees return home safely."

Dark Skies Initiative fosters cooperation between McDonald Observatory, energy industry

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@hearstnp.com

Presented by the Bruno Hanson family and Midland College, this year's environmental excellence award goes to the Dark Skies Initiative, a collaboration between the McDonald Observatory and the oil and gas industry to reduce lighting from drilling rigs and other oil field activities to protect the night skies and help the observatory better perform its work.

Receiving this award were Bill Wren with the observatory, Pioneer Energy Services, which was instrumental in pioneering the initiative by allowing Wren access to its rigs and experimenting with lighting, and the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, which has spearheaded the initiative and helped distribute best practices suggestions to its members.

Gretchen Bakke, Bruno Hanson's daughter and a member of the advisory committee that selects each year's winner, stated, "I am proud to serve on the committee for this award named after my late father, Bruno Hanson. The McDonald Observatory, along with Pioneer Energy Services and the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, deserve the honor of receiving the Bruno Hanson Environmental Excellence Award this year. These three organizations have worked together as a team to help reduce the light from drilling rigs in order to protect our night skies. It is refreshing to see the oil and gas industry collaborate with outside agencies to help protect our environment. This award continues the legacy that my father worked so hard to establish in his lifetime while working in the oil industry: teamwork and helping protect our precious commodity, planet earth."

Curtis Helms, director of Midland College's Petroleum Professional Development Center, said, "The Permian Basin Dark Skies Initiative as an excellent example of responsible parties that have shown exceptional environmental stewardship and collaboration in the research and the development of reducing light pollution while assisting companies in improving visibility and safety on drilling locations in West Texas."

Stephen Robertson, executive vice president of the PBPA and a member of the advisory committee, said, "PBPA is humbled and honored to have our efforts involving the Permian Basin Dark Skies Initiative recognized with the 2018 Bruno Hanson Midland College Award for Environmental Excellence. Our mission is to promote the safe and responsible development of oil and gas resources in the Permian Basin. The association's work with the McDonald Observatory, Pioneer Energy Services and others to improve outdoor lighting practices in those counties surrounding the observatory, not only helps the PBPA accomplish its mission, but it helps secure the continued cutting-edge research conducted at the observatory and improves the operations of our members. These lighting recommendations may have started in a partnership between the McDonald Observatory and the PBPA, but they have now also been accepted and publicized by organizations such as the Texas Oil and Gas Association and the American Petroleum Institute. While we couldn't be prouder of our members' utilization of these recommendations to date, we know there is still plenty of work to do, so we'll continue our efforts to promote Dark Skies throughout the Permian Basin."

Advisory committee member Mark Henkhaus, Permian regulatory manager with Apache Corp., said, "The observatory is a jewel in West Texas. The Dark Skies Initiative brings the lighting problems created by the development to the forefront and enables the oil and gas industry to support the observatory in a meaningful manner. Apache is proud to be an early proponent of the Dark Skies program."

Gilbert Van Deventer, partner, project manager and senior hydrologist with Trident Environmental and advisory committee member, said, "The Dark Skies Initiative serves as a great public awareness by encouraging all landowners to use similar lighting in their own backyards. Who hasn't been in their own backyard and wish there was less stray light to better see the night sky? I plan on enlightening my neighbor — no pun intended — with this initiative as a way to motivate him to change his outdoor lights that point directly toward my backyard."

Committee member Debi Sport Moore, president, Sport Environmental Services, said, "The Dark Skies Initiative is truly deserving of recognition for its collaborative efforts in reducing light pollution. Industry benefits from improved visibility at facilities operating after dark which promotes a safer and more efficient work environment. With proper planning, oil and gas operators also see the added benefit of cost savings associated with the use of recommended lighting practices. Citizens are better able to enjoy the natural beauty of the night and scientists are able to continue world-class research that is only possible with our dark West Texas skies."

OIL PRODUCTION

Executives: Permian will be booming again

By Kevin Crowley and David Wethe
Bloomberg

The oil fields of West Texas don't sit still for long.

Take Carrizo Oil & Gas Inc.'s operations, for instance. Just three months after moving drill rigs out of the Permian Basin because of pipeline shortages, the Houston-based explorer is already talking about bringing them back in the middle of next year.

That's one of several signs the end may be near for a self-imposed slowdown executives call a "frack holiday."

The result: Carrizo will reach an "inflection point" in 2019 where both production and cash flow begin to rise together, Chief Executive Officer Chip Johnson said on a conference call Tuesday. In other words, things will soon be booming again.

Carrizo is among many smaller operators forced to slow activity in the U.S.'s biggest oil field towards the end of this year after the Permian's rapid production growth overwhelmed pipelines. The lack of conduits left oil almost trapped, lowering in-basin prices to almost $18 a barrel, or 26 percent, below the U.S. benchmark in September.

But with at least three major pipeline projects scheduled to come online next year, producers are now seeing the problem as a mere footnote in the basin's ongoing story of surging production growth. Pioneer Natural Resources Co. has enough pipe space to transport all its oil out of the basin through 2020 while Diamondback Energy Inc. has substantial capacity coming on new pipelines next year, the companies said Wednesday.

"It will be a series of events throughout 2019 that occur" to ease the bottleneck, Halliburton Co. Chief Executive Officer Jeff Miller told Bloomberg TV last week. "It'd be easy to see, as we finish the year, things being perfectly normal."

This year, the number of wells drilled but waiting to be fracked has increased 50 percent to 3,722, indicating a new wave of production is set to be unleashed once the pipes are ready, spending budgets are approved and frack crews are available.

This matters to world oil markets. West Texas Intermediate has tumbled almost 20 percent since the beginning of October as fears over U.S. sanctions against Iranian ease. Added production from the Permian would further this trend. Indeed, it bolsters the view that American oil production is in an exponential growth phase.

The U.S. surpassed Russia in August to claim the title of the world's top oil producer after posting the largest year-on-year output increase in its history. The Permian accounts for about a third of the country's output and is the world's fastest-growing major oil field. Consultant Rystad AS sees U.S. production climbing another 45 percent to as much as 16.5 million barrels a day by 2030.

Permian legend Mark Papa, who was a pioneer of U.S. shale as CEO of EOG Resources Inc. from 1999 to 2013, agrees that pipeline shortages "should go away by year end 2019" and may even turn into a surplus.

However it's not all plain sailing thereafter, Papa, who's now CEO of Centennial Resource Development Inc, said in an interview last month.

"Some of the other issues like personnel and water handling issues are some of the more long-term issues," he said. There are "insufficient people to get the work done."

Permian and Lee both claim district title

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@hearstnp.com

The Lee football seniors were in the seventh grade the last time the Rebels won district and beat Odessa Permian prior to Friday.

The Team 58 seniors turned the tides in the District 2-6A finale at Grande Communications Stadium.

With 1:07 left, Felix Hinojosa threw a go-ahead 16-yard touchdown pass to Sheldon Bass Jr. to push Lee to a 43-36 victory over rival Permian.

The Rebels (8-2, 4-1 in District 2-6A) will share the District 2-6A title with Permian (7-3, 4-1) and Amarillo Tascosa, their first district title since 2013. Playoff-bound Lee will face El Paso Americas, El Paso Montwood or El Paso Pebble Hills in its Class 6A bi-district playoff at a date, time and place to be determined.

Hinojosa's TD pass came six plays after a costly Panther penalty. On a third-and-5, Permian linebacker Tanner Adams intercepted Hinojosa and returned it into Lee territory. However, a penalty before the interception nullified the play and Lee was still alive.

Following Hinojosa's go-ahead TD pass, Permian had a chance to take the lead when University of Texas pledge Peyton Powell threw a deep pass to a wide-open Justin Hammond, but the Panther slot back had the ball go through his hands and fall to the turf. On the next play, Powell was sacked for a 13-yard loss, putting Permian into a third-and-23 hole at its own 12-yard line.

Lee senior running back Josh Traylor shined in his final game against Permian, rushing 27 times for 230 yards and four touchdowns.

Traylor scored on a 14-yard run in the third quarter, pushing the Rebels to a 35-21 advantage with 8:56 to play.

But Permian climbed back behind a pair of deep passes from Powell, both in the fourth quarter.

With 5:24 to play, the Panthers took a 36-35 lead when Powell tossed a 43-yard TD pass to Mason Sellers.

Early on, it looked like Permian would continue its recent string of dominance when it won four games in the series by the combined score of 187-63 from 2014-17.

On the Panthers' opening possession, Hammond made an acrobatic catch along the sideline on a Powell pass on third-and-15. Four plays, Permian capitalized on the big play when Ed Williams scored on a 1-yard run with 6:21 left in the first quarter.

On the Permian's next drive, Powell tossed a deep pass to a wide-open Hammond for a 54-yard TD connection, pushing Mojo to a 14-0 advantage with 3:44 on the clock.

But the Rebels were resilient, as they outscored Permian 28-7 the rest of the first half and went into intermission with a 28-21 lead.

Lee got its momentum going when Traylor rushed around the left side of the offensive line and broke away for a 63-yard TD run, cutting Permian's lead to 14-7.

The Rebels scored 21 more points in the second quarter, buoyed by two long yardage scoring plays.

Texas Tech's Jett Duffey throws a pass during the second half Nov. 3, against Oklahoma in Lubbock.

Texas Tech QB Jett Duffey seems set for a chance to shine bright

By Chuck Carlton
The Dallas Morning News

Jett Duffey will almost certainly be getting another chance to show what he can do as a starter.

For the sophomore from Mansfield Lake Ridge, his pinch-hitting assignment for the injured Alan Bowman is about more than displaying the skills that made him a top recruit or even making senior night a success today vs. Texas at Jones AT&T Stadium.

Tech (5-4, 3-3 Big 12) is trying to snap a two-game losing streak and avoid dropping to .500 while becoming bowl eligible. Another loss and Kliff Kingsbury could complete the rare coaching 180 of hot seat to safe to hot seat again in the span of less than one season.

Kingsbury, this week, was focused on Tech's seniors.

"It's really important to us as a program that we try to send them out the right way," Kingsbury said, "and do everything in our power for them to have one more great memory in Jones stadium."

So yes, it's a big deal for Tech and for Duffey. It's the second time he's been thrust into the starting lineup. The first time came when Bowman suffered a partially collapsed lung against West Virginia, leading a road win against TCU. He's back in the same role after Bowman suffered a recurrence when he was hit near the sidelines late in the second quarter at Oklahoma. He was released from Lubbock's Covenant Medical Center on Wednesday after four days.

Depending on Bowman's recovery time, Duffey or McLane Carter may have to handle the final three starts of the regular season.

Kingsbury would like to see more of the explosive talent side of Duffey that impressed him in recruiting. So far, there have only been flashes.

"I want to get Jett to a point where he's so comfortable, he's playing like he played in high school, where he's free and he's making plays and running around," Kingsbury said. "At times, and he knows this, he's too robotic in our system -- one, two, three, four, five -- that's not his game....

"If you've got it, you got it and if you don't, work your magic and I think you've seen some of that at times."

The book on Duffey is that he will probably make a big play or two with his legs, as he did against West Virginia and TCU, and that he'll be inconsistent in the passing game.

This season in limited appearances with one start, he's completing 60 percent of his passes for 627 yards with four touchdowns and four interceptions. But Duffey has rushed for at least 80 yards in three games.

When asked, Kingsbury cited Duffey's throwing ability as his greatest strength.

"He's a dynamic thrower," Kingsbury said. "He can push the ball 75, 80 yards down the field."

Kingsbury has seen more development from Duffey during the season.

"I saw him turn a corner after the TCU game," Kingsbury said. "He dealt with a lot of adversity in that game and came back in and found a way to win and lead his team to a road victory in the Big 12, which is hard to do."

Texas coach Tom Herman said his team's approach wouldn't change regardless of who played quarterback for Tech.

"I think when the runner," Herman said, pausing to double-check Duffey's name Monday, "when he's in there, I think you'll see us in more nickel personnel."

No. 15 Texas hurting on 2-game skid, trip to Texas Tech next

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — The second half of the season has turned sour and painful for No. 15 Texas.

The Longhorns have lost two in a row after a 6-1 start to fall out of first place in the Big 12. They had to endure a flurry of "horns down" signs from West Virginia after giving up the winning touchdown and 2-point conversion with just 16 seconds left last week.

And they are back at practice with a growing list of injuries on defense that could be a big factor in today's visit to Texas Tech (5-4, 3-3 Big 12). Coach Tom Herman listed four key defensive players who are out or questionable for a unit that struggled badly in the two losses.

"We're banged up," Herman said Monday.

Texas (6-3, 4-2) didn't list a depth chart and it's easy to see why. Senior defensive end Breckyn Hager (dislocated elbow), senior cornerback Davante Davis (neck sprain) and senior safety Brandon Jones (ankle) all are considered questionable this week. Sophomore Marquez Bimage, who replaced Hager against West Virginia, has a dislocated shoulder and won't play.

Hager, Davis and Bimage all left the game in the first half. Jones didn't play at all after hurting himself before the game at the team hotel.

Texas had virtually no pass rush against West Virginia. The Longhorns regularly dropped eight into coverage, and had no sacks or quarterback pressures as defensive end Charles Omenihu couldn't get to quarterback Will Grier by himself without Hager drawing attention on the other side.

The secondary that was missing Jones and Davis gave up West Virginia touchdown passes of 60, 33 and 18 yards. Texas allowed a 55-yard touchdown run, too, helped by bad tackling angles. The Mountaineers' 2-point conversion came when linebacker Jeffrey McCulloch, who was lined up to help in pass coverage, broke inside when Grier turned to run. Grier easily trotted to the corner while McCulloch was caught up in a wash of blockers.

"We're playing a bit tentative, for whatever reason is behind it," Herman said. "We haven't cut it loose at times, that's on us to figure out why ... We have to make sure we are playing with a lot more discipline."

Texas' three losses this season have come by a total of nine points. The Longhorns also haven't lost three in a row in two seasons so far under Herman. And Texas hasn't lost at Texas Tech since 2008 when Michael Crabtree's touchdown catch with 1 second left ended Texas' unbeaten streak and cost the Longhorns a shot at the Big 12 championship.

After losing two in a row, Texas needs help to get to this season's league title game. The Longhorns still have a share of second place and could still get there.

"I think we've shown progress," Herman said. "I don't think there's anybody who's watched us the last two years, or watched this program the last five or six, that would argue that we (haven't) made substantial progress."

A longer losing streak would mar a season that saw Texas rocket back into the top 10 for the first time since 2010. Just two weeks ago, Longhorns dared even to dream about an outside shot at the College Football Playoff.

"The big picture is irrelevant. We've got to make progress this week," Herman said.

Texas tries to snap losing skid at Texas Tech

No. 15 Texas (6-3, 4-2 Big 12, No. 19 CFP) at Texas Tech (5-4, 3-3), 6:30 p.m. (Fox)

Line: Texas by 1 1/2.

Series record: Texas leads 50-17.

What's at stake?

Texas is desperate to avoid a third straight loss after its great start. The Longhorns must win if they want to keep hope of an outside shot at the Big 12 championship game. A win makes Texas Tech bowl eligible.

Key matchup

Texas Tech WR Antoine Wesley against Texas freshman S Caden Sterns. Wesley has 70 catches and averages 130 yards per game. Sterns was on everyone's freshman All-America list after the first half of the season, but the secondary has been shredded the last two weeks with deep passes and long runs when defensive backs took bad pursuit angles. Sterns has to shore up the back of the defense.

Players to watch

Texas Tech: RB Ta'Zhawn Henry is the Red Raiders' leading rusher with 372 yards and eight touchdowns. His ability to find gaps in a Texas defense that surrendered 232 yards rushing last week can open up the field for quarterback Jett Duffy, who will start for Alan Bowman. The freshman was hospitalized this week with a collapsed lung.

Texas: DE Charles Omenihu has been Texas' best defender, but he disappeared in the loss to West Virginia as the Longhorns mounted no pass rush. He must pressure Duffy if the Longhorns hope to pull out a tough road win.

Facts & figures

Since Tom Herman took over in 2016, Texas is 5-7 in games decided by seven points or less ... Texas QB Sam Ehlinger has attempted 246 passes without an interception and hasn't thrown one since the first game. He had one late against Texas Tech last season that set up the Red Raiders' winning touchdown ... Texas Tech won last year and hasn't had consecutive wins over the Longhorns since 1997-'98. This is the 10th anniversary of Tech's most famous victory against the Longhorns in Lubbock on a last-second TD pass to Michael Crabtree.

Aggies look to bounce back against Ole Miss after 2 losses

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — After losing two straight games following a three-game winning streak, Texas A&M will try to finish better today against Mississippi.

The Aggies (5-4, 3-3 Southeastern Conference) have been outscored 28-0 in the fourth quarter of losses at Mississippi State and Auburn.

"It disappoints me like it does everyone else in that you know that you're very close," coach Jimbo Fisher said.

Fisher likes the way the Aggies have adapted to his coaching style this season since he took over for Kevin Sumlin, who was fired last November. But he says his team still must develop the kind of habits that elite teams possess.

"There's a mentality that goes with things like that that I think we have to learn," Fisher said. "I'm not disappointed as far as the way their effort is. It's just that we have to keep learning, we have to keep teaching in what we're doing ... there's another level mentality-wise and psychological disposition that we have to understand and be comfortable at."

Texas A&M will face an Ole Miss team looking to snap a skid. The Rebels (5-4, 1-4) enter the game after dropping their last two. Ole Miss led by 3 entering the fourth quarter last week against South Carolina before falling 48-44.

"It's the attention to detail that gets us over the hump," coach Matt Luke said. "I think those guys understand that. They're not happy about losing, and they're hurting. If you want to win games in this league, the attention to detail has to be there. We can't give up explosive plays. We can't turn the ball over in the red zone. We've got to do the little things it takes to win in this league."

Ta'amu's health

Mississippi quarterback Jordan Ta'amu, who leads the SEC in yards passing, was limited in practice this week after hurting his foot against the Gamecocks. Offensive coordinator Phil Longo said he should be ready to go. If things change and he can't play against the Aggies, the Rebels will look to true freshman Matt Corral, who has appeared in three games this season.

"If we need him, Matt's the guy, but I think Jordan is going to be fine," Luke said.

Standing by mond

Fisher was asked if he was behind quarterback Kellen Mond after the sophomore threw an interception and lost a fumble in last week's loss.

"One-thousand percent," Fisher said. He then added that many factors played into his tough performance against South Carolina.

"We all get caught up in looking at the guy with the ball and not the cause of the play," Fisher said. "You look at why things are and there are about four or five plays in the game you wish he'd done better ... was he perfect? No. Was it his best game? No. But by far (he) was not the (only) reason why any of that happened."

Texas Tech child psychiatry hub opens in Midland

■ MDC-involved project could service 9,000 from across the area

By Stewart Doreen
sdoreen@hearstnp.com

The children's and adolescent psychiatry hub in Midland is open for business.

Officials from Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, the Midland Development Corp., Midland Health and the city of Midland cut the ribbon Thursday on a new facility in central Midland. The ceremony also served as an acknowledgment of a partnership that could impact as many as 9,000 children and adolescents in West Texas every year.

The facility, the only one of its kind in West Texas, was the product of a conversation between officials with Texas Tech and the Midland Development Corp. MDC officials approached the neighbors to the north and asked about a priority for the health sciences center, and a mental health facility for youth and children was the response.

"This is an absolutely phenomenal day," said Dr. Tedd Mitchell, president of Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

TTUHSC will see a minimum of 9,720 patients each year to be served by four fellows and up to 16 medical residents, according to the contract. In return, the MDC will help fund the program with $8.4 million to be disbursed in $1 million installments each year, with an extra $400,000 in the first year to go toward renovating the program's home at 2301 W. Michigan Ave., adjacent to Midland Memorial Hospital. TTUHSC will lease the facility from the hospital. The Scharbauer Foundation also helped underwrite renovation costs.

Dr. Bobby Jain, who will head the program, previously told the Reporter-Telegram that there is great need for child and adolescent psychiatry in West Texas. He estimated there were four board-certified child psychiatrists in an area of about 250,000 people. Jain said Thursday that officials will approach local schools about providing support for students.

Mitchell said this center will provide families with a children's specialty option that doesn't require leaving the city and region. He also said this is one of those anchor facilities that will make it easier to recruit teaching doctors in the future.

MDC board member Keith Stretcher said this project is an example of the organization's attention to roads, education and health care in Midland. He also said he hopes the development corporation has other opportunities to partner with Texas Tech University and impact the city and region.

Lastly, Stretcher said the fellowship program wasn't possible without the support of state Rep. Tom Craddick, a graduate of Texas Tech.

State Rep. Tom Craddick and wife, Nadine, attend the grand opening celebration of the Texas Tech Physicians Psychiatric Clinic.

INSURANCE

It's time to get annual physical, enroll for health plan

By Stephen Bowerman
Midland Health

With fewer than 60 days left in 2018, health care shoppers can maximize the benefits of their health plan.

First, it's a great time to see your primary care physician for your annual physical. Under the Affordable Care Act, one annual physical is 100 percent covered by your health insurance. Annual physicals allow your primary care physician to determine the general status of your health. This is a good time to update your doctor on any new aches, pains or symptoms so he or she may find a potential remedy or stave off any issues lurking in your future.

There are many other preventative health services that are 100 percent covered by your insurance as part of the ACA. Annual mammograms, colorectal cancer screening and many vaccinations. For a full list of all the covered preventive health services, visit Healthcare.gov at www.healthcare.gov/coverage/preventive-care-benefits/.

Many companies offer their benefit plans on a calendar-year basis and open enrollment for these benefits are in full swing. The growth in high-deductible health plans has made early planning critical so people can meet their health care needs throughout the year. If your company offers a high-deductible plan, be sure to maximize the amount of money you put into your health savings account. The dollars you save in your HSA will allow you to be prepared to meet those early year deductibles. The HSA savings is also sheltered from taxes up to an annual maximum of $7,000 in 2019. This money belongs to you and can be carried over each year without penalty. Check with your company's human resources department because many companies provide a partial level of funding or a match plan for their employees.

If your company doesn't offer a high-deductible plan, there are other options such as the HSA that can provide tax-free savings for health care costs. Flexible Spending Accounts have been in use for many years and provide the same benefit as an HSA. These dollars can be used to pay health care costs, including dental and pharmacy expenses, as well as child and dependent care —all tax free. Currently, FSAs are limited to $2,650 per year, per employer, and $500 may be carried over each year.

If you do not have access to health benefits through your employer, consider enrolling in the health insurance exchange. There are subsidies available to assist with premiums based on household income. While many of these plans have high deductibles, you can set up an HSA with plans on the exchange and these can help cover out-of-pocket costs.

If the health insurance exchange isn't an option for you, consider all the other options available such as Medicare, Medicaid or some other third-party coverage.

If you've already met your deductible this year and have been putting off a test or procedure, now is the time to act. Most importantly for you, your family, neighbors and co-workers, get your flu shot.

Stephen Bowerman is senior vice president and chief financial officer of Midland Health.

ARTPOCALYPSE

Film festival to feature foreign, American productions

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@hearstnp.com

More than 40 films will be shown at the West Texas Film Festival later this month. Entries range from shorts to full-length features with submissions from around the globe. The festival is planned for Thursday through Nov. 18 at the Jack Rodgers Auditorium at Odessa College.

"We are excited about the broad group of films, both foreign and domestic, for this year's festival," said Harlan Whatley, festival director, in a press release.

The festival also marks the final event for the Odessa Arts initiative ArtPocalypse, an endeavor to have West Texans partake in area arts and cultural events such as theater productions, book talks and art openings.

"The ArtPocalypse was really a labor of love for me," he said in a phone interview. "I've been planning it for three years, and to see it out in the community was amazing. My greatest joy was seeing new patrons discover our amazing organizations like the Ellen Noël and the Permian Playhouse. My hope is that they return time and time again and strengthen the reach of our cultural community," he said.

Odessa Arts executive director Randy Ham sees the film festival as a prime opportunity for West Texas.

"Harlan and his volunteers work to find excellent films from all over the world to showcase here in Odessa," Ham said. "For me, it's a shining example of using the arts to bring the world to West Texas."

The festival celebrates diverse voices in films from Texas filmmakers on opening day to numerous foreign movies.

"We've come up with an international slate mixed in with Texas and American films," Whatley said.

Along with those selections, the Friday theme is Education Day, which features student pieces and appearances by filmmakers Brian David Cange, Shake Jones, Tracee Beebe, James Fite and John. L. Greer.

"We want to have opportunities for students and audiences to learn about filmmaking," he said.

Along with films and lectures, the festival will grant awards for documentary, feature, short, student film, screenplay and a new award for television pilot.

Ultimately, Whatley hopes that West Texans attend the festival for a variety of films they might not see otherwise.

"I'd like us to get some high-profile person as a guest and we may have to move the event to not compete with the fall calendar, which might boost our numbers," he said. "But I like that it brings all types of people together because everyone likes movies," he said.

SHAKESPEARE

Odessa Shakespeare Festival continues the ArtPocalypse

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@hearstnp.com

Since September, Odessa Arts has been engaged in its ArtPocalypse endeavor. Arts, music, theater and more came together for this initiative to get West Texans out for a bit of culture. With a Cultural Passport in hand, people collect stamps at a collection of events. This weekend marks a big one for the ArtPocalypse with the third annual Odessa Shakespeare Festival that began Friday. The event also ties in to the NEA Big Read selection, "Station Eleven."

Before the two performances by the touring Texas Shakespeare Festival, Odessa Arts director Randy Ham talked about the growth of the festival that his organization started in 2016.

IF YOU GO

Showtime today at 6 p.m. with the Traveling Symphony pre-show and "Macbeth" at the Great Globe of the Southwest, 2308 Shakespeare Road. $10 per show. odessashakespearefestival.org.

MRT: The Odessa Shakespeare Festival is heading into its third year. How are you feeling about that?

Ham: Each year our numbers grow. By Friday, when we conclude our school shows, over 1,800 students will have seen a show and many for the first time.

MRT: The educational aspect of this sounds impactful.

Ham: It's absolutely a crucial element to the festival. We think it's important for students to see Shakespeare onstage and so much more rewarding to see the plays performed rather than just reading and studying them.

MRT: And to be clear, the festival does have public performances?

Ham: Yes. There are public performances Friday with "Shakespeare's Greatest Hits" and Saturday with "Macbeth." By the way, Lady Macbeth is chilling.

MRT: The fest is part of the ArtPocaylpse? Guests can get their passports stamped?

Ham: Yes, they can. And this is an integral component to the novel "Station 11." On Saturday, there will be a pre-show performance by the Traveling Symphony led by harpist Vincent Pierce. So readers can see the book leap off the page with that performance. (Ed. note: The Traveling Symphony is a theater troupe in the novel that roams and performs through a near-future wasteland. When putting ArtPoc together, I knew that Shakespeare had to be a component because it dovetails nicely into what we are doing.

DIVAS AND DESSERTS

The third annual Divas and Desserts was Thursday night in Barn D at the Ector County Coliseum. Local personalities sang and performed. The event benefited the Permian Playhouse.
