High Court deals blow to abortion counseling

Some clinics to continue advising

N.Y. Times News Service

Officials at the South Bronx health clinic that challenged the federal ban on abortion counseling and officials at many other family-planning programs around the nation said they would continue to provide abortion information even though the Supreme Court's decision Thursday meant they would lose federal financing.

Dr. Irving Rust, medical director of the Hub, the South Bronx clinic run by Planned Parenthood of New York City, said the regulations violated medical ethics that require doctors to provide patients with complete information about their choices.

"This case is about supressing information between a patient and her doctor," he said

WASHINGTON — A splintered Supreme Court on Thursday upheld government regulations that forbid pregnant women from being advised about abortions at federally funded family planning centers.

Justice David H. Souter, the court's newest member, voted with the majority in the 5-4 decision.

Writing the majority opinion, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist rejected arguments that regulations written by the Department of Health and Human Services violate the First Amendment right to free speech as well as abortion rights.

"The government has no constitutional duty to subsidize an activity merely because the activity is constitutionally protected," wrote Rehnquist.

The ruling is a victory for the Bush administration, which de-

Judge protects owl

SEATTLE — A federal judge late Thursday blocked timber sales on 66,000 acres of national forests in three Northwest states, saying the northern spotted owl could be irreparably harmed if those trees were logged. U.S. District Judge William Dwyer had issued a temporary order halting the sales on March 1. On Thursday he made the ban permanent. Dwyer also ordered the National Forest Service to come up with a plan by March 5, 1992, to protect the spotted owl, which has been listed as threatened under the federal Endangered Species Act. He told the agency to submit a timetable for completing the plan by June 15. Dwyer's order covers 66,000 acres of forest service land in Washington, Oregon and northern California on which the agency wanted to allow logging.

Bush gains fast-track authority

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The House handed President Bush a major victory Thursday in his quest for a landmark trade agreement with Mexico by agreeing that the administration should be able to negotiate trade treaties without congressional interference.

Bush

In a 231-192 vote that cut across party lines, lawmakers beat back an effort by Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., to repeal the "fast-track" negotiating authority that would limit Congress to accepting or rejecting the final package.

The Texas delegation overwhelmingly supported the fast-track approach by a vote of 23-4, with Reps. Martin Frost, D-Dallas; Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont; Craig Washington, D-Houston; and Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, siding with organized labor and consumer groups.

The Senate began debate on the issue late Thrusday, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the point man for the negotiating authority, said that he expected the vote to be close but that his side would win.

Abandoning the fast-track authority, he said, "would be a unilateral disarmament on trade."

Supporters say Texas will benefit more than any other state from greater Mexican trade because of its proximity and ties to Mexico. Opponents said a free-

A study in sludge

■ Study marks beginning of hoped-for end to foul-smelling problem at Dynagen chemical plant.

ODESSA — A pilot study of sludge removal and sludge treatment is under way this week at one of seven solar evaporation ponds at the Dynagen petrochemical plant south of Odessa.

However, the study is not considered a substantial sludge removal project, said Tim Gorman, manager of the Dynagen complex, which produces synthetic rubber for General Tire & Rubber Company, the world's No. 4 tire maker.

Instead, the major sludge-removal project is to follow the pilot study.

Dynagen is a subsidiary of the 1915-founded General Tire, which is headquartered in Akron, Ohio, and which has been owned by Continental A.G. of Germany since 1987.

In mid-May, Dynagen and General Tire officials agreed to remove the sludge from Dynagen's seven ponds covering 165 acres and to build a multi-million-dollar state-of-the-art waste-water treatment plant to curb any sludge buildup.

The agreement was precipitated by a Texas Attorney General lawsuit that alleged Dynagen was violating the Texas Clean Air Act. The 1989-filed lawsuit claimed the sludge and chemical wastes in the ponds were producing offensive odors.

After residents in south Odessa complained of obnoxious and irritating odors from the plant, the Texas Air Control Board sent field investigators to talk to Dynagen officials.

Subsequently, Dynagen was cited for violations of the Texas Clean Air Act and Texas Air Control Board regulations.

In the pilot study, sludge is pumped from the 32-acre Dynagen Pond 3A near Interstate Highway 20 south of Odessa. Pond 3A was selected for the pilot study, Gorman said, since "more odors" reportedly have emanated from that pond.

Once sludge samples have been removed from the pond, the sludge is treated with a flocculant, a polymer, which helps to solidify the sludge. The sludge is placed in a centrifuge to remove most of the water.

Then, the sludge is to be analyzed.

"You have to characterize the sludge and determine how to properly dispose of it," Gorman said.

Dynagen is committed to doing its "level best to continue this (pilot)

Epithet, survey upset Permian students, NAACP

■ Odessa NAACP members plan to meet with ECISD officials to talk about controversial yearbook.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Another controversial book has caused a stir over racism here, but this time the publication comes from within.

Several articles and a student poll in the 1990-91 Permian High School annual are aimed at debunking charges of racism leveled by H.G. "Buzz" Bissinger in his book, "Friday Night Lights."

The book, published last year, chronicles the 1988 Permian Panther's football season and paints Odessa as a city awash in bigotry and football fanaticism.

A pie graph in the Permian yearbook, "Panther 1991," shows results of a survey asking 200 of the school's juniors how often they hear the word "nigger."

In the publication released this week, yearbook staffers state that the poll was meant to show that the epithet rarely was heard.

But minority leaders and some PHS students found the survey, and particularly the use of the epithet, inappropriate and derogatory.

Gene Collins, an Odessa-based NAACP member, said the annual puts Bissinger's book on a historical pedestal, albeit one of disdain.

"They have immortalized 'Friday Night Lights,'" Collins said. "Just about everything in there has something to do with 'Friday Night Lights.'"

Collins said local National Association for the Advancement of Colored People members plan to meet soon with Ector County school district officials to discuss the yearbook.

"I'm also going to talk with some of the students," he said. "If they want to demonstrate, I'll be right beside them, even if it's just one student."

Collins said the epithet survey shows insensitivity toward the black community.

"They should have had the maturity not to put it in there," he said. "It's no wonder some of our kids are dropping out or having trouble adjusting in that environment."

Collins said he already has brought his concerns to PHS Principal Jerald McClary, whom he claimed was surprised and displeased with the poll.

"I'm going to ask for a meeting with the sponsors of the yearbook," Collins

WEATHER SUMMARY

BULLY: Funnel cloud threatened Balmorhea; no damage reported

day but no damage resulted, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Following that tornado sighting, hail damage was reported in the Saragosa-Balmorhea area. Golf-size hail broke windshields and sky-lights, as well as causing roof and crop damage, NWS officials said.

Much of West Texas — from Terrell County to just east of Lubbock — was under a severe thunderstorm watch Thursday night.

Meanwhile, high winds ripped through parts of Midland County with gusts up to 58 mph reported at Midland International Airport at 6 p.m. However, no wind damage was reported.

Other areas under that massive storm were pelted with pea-size hail, including Wickett and Lamesa. No damage was reported.

Recent bad weather — including the tornado warnings that have been experienced here in recent weeks — is fairly typical for this time of year, weather officials said.

"May is typically our most busy month" for tornados, hail and thunderstorms, a NWS spokesman said.

May also typically brings the heaviest rainfall in Midland with an average of 2.05 inches. However, only .47 of an inch of rain has been recorded here so far this month.

And, for the entire year to date, only 2.53 inches has been reported in Midland.

Despite the stormy conditions for the month of May, the upcoming Memorial Day weekend looks promising.

Sunday and Monday are expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the 90s and a low in the 60s.

Still, the chance of some inclement weather does exist, especially for the next couple of days.

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a high in the upper 80s, southerly winds 10 to 20 mph, and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-60s and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Saturday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-80s. The chance of thunderstorms will decrease to 20 percent.

After an overnight low of 62, Thursday's high was 89 compared with the record high for that date of 106 set in 1989. The record low for today's date was 48 set in 1940.

STATE

Parts of the Texas Panhandle resembled a driving range Thursday as hail the size of golf balls pounded Northwest Texas.

A tornado warning was issued for Hall County and another funnel was spotted in Reeves County of Southwest Texas. No damage was reported from the thunderstorms.

The storms stemmed from the dry line in West Texas and the moist Gulf air being pumped into the rest of the state. Most of Texas was cloudy although sunny skies prevailed in the far west.

Some showers dampened North Central Texas before moving into Oklahoma. Other rain was reported along the Gulf coast.

Winds were southeasterly to northeasterly at 5 to 15 miles an hour.

Temperatures were on the warm side with highs in the 80s and 90s. Midafternoon extremes ranged from 81 degrees at Killeen and Wink to 92 in Del Rio.

Forecasters expected thunderstorms to spread today across Texas as the dry line and a cold front advanced into the state. Otherwise, skies were predicted to be partly cloudy with highs ranging from the upper 70s in the Panhandle to near 100 in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

Rain was scattered across the Plains states Thursday, flooding some streets and highways, and into the Midwest and the South.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over eastern North Dakota, eastern South Dakota, southeastern Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Iowa, and Minnesota.

South-central Nebraska got extra-heavy rain that flooded side streets in Cozad up to car doors and had water running over roads in Lexington.

Up to 8 inches of rain fell in Cozad from Wednesday night into Thursday morning and up to 5 inches fell in Lexington, said Dawson County Civil Defense Director Merle Morgan.

"It's about the worst I've ever seen and I've been doing this for 17 years," Morgan said. "It was just more water than the drains could take care of."

Cozad's schools were open but absenteeism was up because of the flooding, said Bill Gettman, high school principal.

Central and southwest Oklahoma also got heavy rain and authorities in Lawton had to rescue occupants of stalled cars.

Showers and thunderstorms also spread over Wisconsin, Lower Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, southeastern Louisiana, southern and central Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CST included 2.57 inches at West Palm Beach, Fla.; 2.15 inches at Fort Sill, Okla.; 1.84 inches at Titusville, Fla.; 1.41 inches at Grand Rapids, Mich.; 1.09 inches at Altus, Okla., and 1.00 inch at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Elsewhere, rain fell across northwestern Utah and northeastern Utah into northwestern Colorado.

LIMITS: Pro-choice advocates condemn ruling

fended the controversial restrictions and which supports a reversal of the court's landmark 1973 Roe v. Wade decision affirming women's right to an abortion.

Abortion rights advocates immediately attacked the ruling, warning that it will limit the choices of millions of poor women who use the federally funded Title X family counseling centers. Those who lobbied unsuccessfully against confirmation of Souter last fall said his vote on this case, Rust v. Sullivan, confirmed their worst fears.

"This decision is callous and will have a devastating impact on the health and well-being of women who rely on federally supported health care facilities," said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League (NARAL).

"Perhaps the most ominous development is that Justice Souter joined in this opinion robbing poor women experiencing crisis pregnancies of the right to hear all their options," said Arthur Kropp, president of the liberal advocacy group, People for the American Way.

Members of Congress already have introduced legislation to kill the disputed regulations, and Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said that if a bill were passed only to be vetoed by President Bush, "We'll make a heck of an issue out of it in the next election."

Abortion abolitionists hailed Souter's vote, however, and said the ruling was a step in their direction.

The court "has rejected the bizarre concept that the Constitution or medical ethics require that abortion be treated the same as contraception," said Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the National Right to Life Committee. He said the group is "delighted" that Souter joined the majority.

The case centers on a federal family planning program enacted in 1970 by Congress as Title X of the Public Health Service Act. Nationwide, the program funds about 4,000 clinics serving more than 4 million low-income women each year.

The program has always been banned from using federal money to perform abortions, but until 1988 women visiting the clinics could receive abortion information and referrals. The Reagan administration then issued regulations forbidding abortions from being encouraged or even mentioned as an option to ending an unwanted pregnancy.

The regulations said women who asked about an abortion at a federally funded clinic were to be told that the staff "does not consider abortion an appropriate method of family planning." The regulations continue to be enforced by the Bush administration.

Of the four justices voting in the minority, three wrote dissents giving an assortment of reasons why federal family counseling centers should be able to dispense advice about abortions.

The strongest language came from Justice Harry A. Blackmun, with Justice Thurgood Marshall joining.

"In its haste further to restrict the right of every woman to control her reproductive freedom and bodily integrity, the majority disregards established principles of law and contorts this court's decided cases to arrive at its preordained result," Blackmun charged.

Referring to the First Amendment implications, Blackmun said, "The court, for the first time, upholds viewpoint-based suppression of speech solely because it is imposed on those dependent upon the government for economic support."

Blackmun, author of the Roe v. Wade ruling, said the increasingly conservative court is nibbling away at the right to an abortion.

"If a right is found to be unenforceable, even against flagrant attempts by government to circumvent it, then it ceases to be a right at all," wrote Blackmun. "This, I fear, may be the effect of today's decision."

While joining in part with Blackmun and Marshall, Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and John Paul Stevens also wrote separate dissents.

Justices Anthony M. Kennedy, Antonin Scalia and Byron R. White joined with Rehnquist and Souter in the majority.

CONTINUE: Court ruling affects 4,000 clinics

at a news conference at the center after the 5-4 ruling in Rust vs. Sullivan. "The government has interfered in that relationship."

Similar comments condemning the ruling came from directors of federally financed clinics that provide health care and family planning from Vermont to California. Planned Parenthood alone would forgo more than $30 million a year in federal funds, it said.

Planned Parenthood of West Texas Inc. reported that it receives about 12 percent of its budget, or $182,000, from the federal government.

Jane Hellinghausen, education and community development director for West Texas Planned Parenthood, said the ruling violates free-speech rights by barring care-givers from discussing certain issues with patients.

She added that cutting off federal funds to organizations like Planned Parenthood could backfire in a number of ways. First, by reducing the number of people served by such organizations before they become pregnant.

"I think that people think that it will reduce the number of people having abortions, but it will result in more unplanned pregnancies and therefore a higher abortion rate," she said.

Furthermore, she said, elimination of federal funding will mean fewer poor people will be able to receive primary medical care and screening at Planned Parenthood clinics.

Those people could end up costing the taxpayers' money as indigent hospital patients, she said.

If Planned Parenthood decides not to receive federal money, she said, the local organization will attempt to make up the loss through private contributions.

Jill June, president of Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, said "The government is putting us in the position of choosing between our ethics and our budget.

"Women and their rights and our principles are not for sale, so we will do without the money rather than comply."

Her organization, which provides services to 87 rural counties in Iowa, receives $500,000 a year, 10 percent of its annual budget, from the federal program that will now carry restrictions on the use of its money for abortion counseling. It was these pending restrictions that were upheld Thursday by the court.

Abortion opponents, including the Bush administration and Roman Catholic bishops, applauded the ruling.

"It's just going to be that many more babies that are not going to be killed," said the Rev. Paul Weymouth, senior pastor of Odessa's Parker Heights Christian Church. "It's a fair decision. Why should pro-abortionists be upset? No one is shutting down their abortuaries."

He added that allowing federally funded organizations to discuss abortion as an option with clients is tantamount to paying for abortions with public money.

Counselors are required to say that abortion is not an approved method of birth control.

trade accord would mean a loss of U.S. jobs and a deterioration of the environment along the U.S.-Mexican border.

Bentsen has been a key ally of Bush's as the president pursues his vision of uniting the United States, Canada and Mexico in a North American free-trade zone that would counterbalance the European Community and Pacific nations.

Supporters of the fast-track authority maintained that other countries would refuse to negotiate with the United States if Congress could amend every negotiated deal. The negotiating authority automatically kicks into place June 1 for two years unless Congress blocks it.

"You cannot move the Great Wall of China and place it around the U.S.," said Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-McAllen.

The AFL-CIO and environmental groups said the lack of legislative oversight would enable administration negotiators to give little more than lip service to job protection and environmental standards.

Organized labor and consumer groups say that companies will take advantage of looser Mexican regulations and lower wages to move plants to Mexico. The results, they say, will be the loss of skilled jobs to Mexican workers.

The trade experiment known as the "maquiladora" program along the Texas-Mexico border has stirred powerful emotions, and opponents of the fast-track authority pointed to the movement of U.S. companies to Mexico's border as an example of how business could exploit lax child labor laws and unenforced air and water pollution statutes. More than 2,000 plants are on the border, taking advantage of lower tariffs and, opponents say, squalid conditions, to boost profits.

In acknowledging these concerns, the House approved 329-85 a non-binding resolution by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., that calls on negotiators to abide by Bush's commitments on safety and health and on making payments to workers who might lose their jobs.

On May 1, Bush sent a plan of action for the upcoming Mexican negotiations, pledging to provide worker adjustments and to seek guarantees that Mexican goods are locally produced and not just assembled products. He also promised to keep tougher U.S. standards on health and the environment.

Bush added Thursday that free trade would boost Mexico's standard of living and that "a more prosperous Mexico can do a lot more on border problems, environmental problems and labor wage problems."

Dorgan said the president had lobbied so many lawmakers personally that "the White House almost ran out of eggs Benedict."

AFL-CIO lobbyists said they believed they had redirected the debate, even if they lost the final vote. The labor organization's legislative director, Bob McGlotten, said: "It is clear we have been able to raise consciousness of the House on labor, environment and consumer issues. We'll hold the leadership to its words."

The House leadership was united behind the fast-track authority and promised to keep close tabs on the negotiations.

said. "Then we'll see what further action the NAACP might take."

Asked whether use of the epithet would be appropriate for a news article about the yearbook, he replied, "I think it (use of the epithet) is essential to the story."

McClary would not comment on the yearbook, entitled "A Closer Look," but said he did not review it before publication.

"I'd rather keep what I talked about with Mr. Collins between ourselves," he said. "Anyone has a right in the United States to be upset or not."

Collins invited PHS journalism teacher Flo Lambeth, yearbook and school newspaper adviser, to speak to the black community.

Ms. Lambeth said she felt the survey and related articles were necessary to balance claims in "Friday Night Lights."

"I was furious with the book," she said. "The yearbook feature was an attempt to deal very honestly with some ugly charges against Permian.

"The yearbook is a history of that year at the school. We try very hard to have comprehensive coverage. I think it is a great deal more salutary to air issues instead of letting them fester."

Some PHS students, though, said the annual has needlessly rekindled students' hard feelings over "Friday Night Lights."

"I didn't like the yearbook at all," said senior Arica Lewis, a black 18-year-old. "To me it's not solving the problem of racism. Most blacks don't want to hear the word or see it."

Junior Tony Daniels, a black 18-year-old, said the epithet has no place in a high school publication, no matter what the reason.

"I don't think they should have put it in there," Daniels said. "They shouldn't have used the word."

Sophomore Dewayne Gib said, "I wasn't offended, but I don't think they should have put it in there."

But Dewayne, a black 15-year-old, said other black students were offended by it. "They felt like they brought it up for no reason," he said.

Senior Devoron Carroll, 19, said, "I don't see how it has anything to do with the Permian annual. It doesn't have anything to do with going to high school. I was shocked to see it in there."

Some white students also were displeased with the survey, in which 20 percent of those polled said they heard the epithet daily, 19 percent heard it weekly and 18 percent heard it monthly. Nine percent said they heard it three or four times annually, while 35 percent heard it "less often."

"It doesn't matter how many times you hear it," said sophomore Holly Hargraves, a white 16-year-old. "It was a racial remark and it shouldn't have been printed."

Sophomore Joe King, 16, said, "I don't think it was right to put it in there. Black people are pretty cool."

study to completion, to evaluate its effectiveness and/or failure and to determine" how best to dispose of the sludge," Gorman said Thursday. "I'm very interested in improving our plant."

Dr. Neil Carman, an investigator for the TACB, has been monitoring the pilot study this week.

Carman, who noted that a 1989 study suggested that 19 million gallons of sludge were in the seven ponds in 1989, said he could detect the rotten-egg odor of hydrogen-sulfide gas when a tank was being filled with the sludge from the 32-acre pond.

The "low reading" of hydrogen sulfide was just "enough to be odorous and obnoxious," Carman said. Otherwise, he said, there wasn't "much of an odor problem."

And the water being returned to the pond from the centrifuge was "almost like pure water," Carman said.

"I think it is looking very optimistic," he said of the pilot study.

Subsequent testing of the sludge is to determine how hazardous or non-hazardous the processed sludge is, how best to remove sludge from the seven ponds, and where and how to dispose of the sludge.

"The solar water-evaporation ponds and the rest of the wastewater treatment system are under the primary jurisdiction of the Texas Water Commission," said Carman, who has been monitoring the Dynagen plant since 1981.

"But when the ponds begin to emit horrendous air pollution such as the citizens complain to the Texas Air Control Board, the Texas Clean Air Act allows the Texas Air Control Board to investigate the air-pollution on industrial waste-water."

Lawmakers attack, Bush backs Baker's settlement stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional friends of Israel chastised Secretary of State James A. Baker III Thursday for singling out Israeli settlements as a leading obstacle to Middle East peace talks, but President Bush buttressed Baker's stance.

"It would make a big contribution to peace if these settlements would stop," Bush told reporters at an impromptu news conference.

And Baker, testifying before the Senate Appropriations foreign aid subcommittee, reiterated his criticism.

"I will say there is no bigger obstacle than the continuing, enhanced settlement activity going on in the territories," Baker said, repeating essentially the same words he used Wednesday before a House panel.

The settlements, Baker said, make Arab countries think "Israel is not interested in negotiations, but only in creating facts on the ground."

AP Laserphoto

Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Sen. Patrick Leahy D-Vt, left, talk Thursday.

In Jerusalem, a close aide of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Thursday that Arab refusal to accept Israel's existence — not the settlements — is the main obstacle to peace.

The pro-Israeli legislators tried to refocus debate from the settlements to what they called the intransigence of Saudi Arabia.

"It seems to me that the Saudis owe the United States something, and beyond that the Saudis owe Israel something," Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said in a reference to U.S. leadership in the war against Iraq.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said Baker had done "a disservice" by complaining publicly a day earlier about Israeli settlement activity in the occupied territories. Such comments were "not even-handed," he said.

Baker said concessions from all sides would be needed to spark the stalled peace process.

"I'm not in the business of pinning blame," he said. "Both sides are going to have to take action, or we will not have a peace process."

Bush said Baker, who returned last week from his fourth Mideast peace mission since early March, is "knocking himself out, going the extra mile for peace. And one way to get there is to get this settlement policy under control."

The issue of Israeli settlements in the lands it occupied after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war has long been a sore point with the United States, which believes they make chances more remote that Israel will ever give up the land in return for peace.

Israel regards Jewish settlement there as a matter of historic right.

A recent State Department report noted that settlement activity was increasing, and Baker said Wednesday that each of his recent trips to Israel had been accompanied by announcement of yet another new settlement.

Baker said Thursday that "there are other obstacles that are every bit as big" as the settlements issue, including the continuing refusal of Arab states to suspend the state of war that technically exists with Israel or to suspend their economic boycott of Israel.

But he did defend Saudi Arabia from criticism that it hasn't responded to appeals for concessions.

The Saudis, Baker said, led the way in getting Persian Gulf states to agree to send observers to the proposed international peace conference. And they have agreed to negotiate region-wide issues such as arms control, water and the environment.

That "is a very forward-leading step," Baker said.

Subcommittee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., signaled that he would help Baker keep up pressure on the parties by not moving forward with next year's foreign aid bill "until I can get a clear sense of what prospects there are to revive the peace process."

President reappoints Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush asked Gen. Colin Powell on Thursday to stay on for a second two-year term as head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, lavishing praise on Powell's performance during the Persian Gulf War.

"I can think of no one more qualified to lead our armed forces as we prepare them for the challenges of the 21st century," Bush said.

The president said his top military advisor "spoke his mind" and laid out all options for responding to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait — a subject of controversy since the recent publication of a book on how the administration moved toward war.

"It was Colin Powell, more than anyone else, who I think deserves the credit for the time we had to ... draw the line in the sand. It was he that suggested (it) to me," Bush told reporters.

The president spoke to reporters gathered in the Rose Garden on a sunny and muggy morning. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney stood by, smiling but saying nothing.

Although Bush's move had been widely expected since most chairmen serve for four years, the announcement was notable for its timing and the attention Bush drew to it.

It came soon after publication of an eyebrow-raising book by Bob Woodward that described Powell as favoring economic sanctions over military action in order to force Saddam Hussein from Kuwait. The book suggests Powell did not fully present his opinions to the president on the issue.

Bush's action also could serve to dampen any speculation that Powell might replace Vice President Dan Quayle on the Republican ticket in 1992.

Democrats announce economic 'action plan'

WASHINGTON (HNS) — Top congressional Democrats Thursday announced an "action plan" they said would lead to economic recovery and growth but it contained no specifics.

The 2 1/2-page "action plan" pledged to provide tax relief to middle-income Americans, revamp the unemployment insurance program and enact a new highway-construction bill that would create jobs throughout the nation.

"We have set forth a comprehensive program that sets an important direction and course for our country and which contrasts sharply with the total absence of any program or policy or proposal or plan by the president and the administration," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

Asked "where's the beef?" and quizzed about the time, perhaps years, it would take to enact portions of the plan, Mitchell responded, "Compared to the Bush administration's plan, this is filet mignon supreme."

Mitchell appeared at a news conference with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash, House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The plan also called for addressing health care costs, strengthening education, more money for so-called "safety-net" programs for the poor and unemployed and an environmentally sensitive energy policy.

No specifics were offered. Mitchell said it would be up to the various committees to develop the plans.

Democrats said some provisions, such as changes in unemployment benefit rules and the highway funding bill, could be enacted fairly soon. Other proposals, such as health care costs and perhaps a tax cut, could take a long time.

McGovern urges reform; says he won't run in '92

WASHINGTON (HNS) — Former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern urged the Democratic Party Thursday to embrace its liberal past in order to reclaim the presidency, but said he would leave it to "younger, less battle-scarred" Democrats to carry the party's banner into the 1992 election.

In announcing that he would not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination, McGovern, 68, unleashed a vicious attack on President Bush and upbraided his own party for what he called its "tendency to go along" with the conservative Reagan-Bush policies of the last decade.

"I say to my fellow Democrats, do not run away from liberalism. It is our historic heritage and it is the very ground of our being," said McGovern, who gathered only 17 electoral votes in his 1972 bid for the White House against Richard Nixon.

In a speech at the National Press Club, McGovern, who also made a brief run for the Democratic nomination in 1984, chided some of his colleagues for trying to recast the party's image in a more conservative vein.

He specifically criticized the efforts of the Democratic Leadership Council, a self-described centrist group whose positions often resemble those of conservative Republicans.

Justices OK search of containers in cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police allowed to search cars also may open closed containers in the passenger compartments, the Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices said that when police are allowed by an owner to search a car they generally do not need separate permission or a court warrant to search luggage or other containers inside the car.

The court overturned a Florida Supreme Court ruling that said separate authorization is required before police may open a container found in the car's interior other than the trunk.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court, said the Fourth Amendment's ban on unreasonable police searches does not shield closed containers inside cars.

Justices Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens dissented.

In a 1982 decision, the court ruled that police can search even closed containers in a car's trunk anytime an officer has "reasonable cause" to believe the car contains drugs, weapons or other contraband.

No warrant is needed for such trunk searches, the court said in 1982.

The court on Thursday essentially extended the nine-year-old decision to consensual searches conducted in passenger compartments.

The ruling allows prosecutors to introduce as trial evidence the cocaine found by a Miami officer in a car owned by Enio Jimeno during a 1989 search.

Officer Frank Trujillo became suspicious of the car driven by Jimeno and followed it until it made an illegal turn. Trujillo, who had overheard Jimeno arranging on a public telephone what the officer thought might be a drug deal, then stopped the car and asked to search it.

Jimeno consented. Trujillo's search turned up a brown paper bag on the floor on the front passenger side. Trujillo did not ask for permission before he opened the bag and found cocaine inside.

Senate passes limits to campaign spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed a campaign finance bill Thursday to cap what Democrats called a "seemingly endless money chase" after special interests.

Instead, candidates would be offered limited taxpayer subsidies. The vote was 56-42, split largely along party lines.

On Wednesday, President Bush said he would veto the bill if it contains spending ceilings and provides for public financing of congressional campaigns.

Leaders of both parties said they expect the bill to be significantly rewritten once the House passes its version and the White House enters into direct negotiations on a compromise.

Republicans contend the bill would create "food stamps for politicians."

Party in disarray as Gandhi's widow declines leadership

NEW DELHI, India (NYT) — Sonia Gandhi, the widow of Rajiv Gandhi, rejected an offer on Thursday by the Congress Party to succeed her husband as its president, leaving the nation's largest political party in turmoil and deepening the political crisis here.

Two days after Gandhi, who was prime minister from 1984 until 1989, was killed in a bomb blast in the south, his widow said that because of "the tragedy that has befallen my children and myself," she was declining the party's offer to become president.

Friends and associates said the Italian-born Mrs. Gandhi, 43, was too shocked and bereft to step into the political limelight after years of playing a relatively subdued role in the shadow of her husband.

But a few party politicians and diplomats, none of whom had spoken directly with Mrs. Gandhi about her future, said they thought she might yet reconsider and make herself available if the Congress Party, riddled by factional differences, failed to find a leader.

Friends said Mrs. Gandhi was too shocked and bereft to step into the political limelight after years of playing a relatively subdued role.

With India in the midst of national elections, now delayed until mid-June, the killing of Gandhi has stunned the nation. Gandhi, 46, had hoped to emerge once again as prime minister, rebounding from his defeat in 1989.

Thousands of Indians, standing in the pulsing heat, lined up on Thursday beneath tamarind trees and royal poinciana near Teen Murti House, where Gandhi's coffin rested on a raised platform.

Gandhi will be cremated today at the site where his mother, former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, was cremated in November 1984, after she was shot to death by her Sikh bodyguards.

On Thursday, the government's law minister, Subramanian Swamy, said that although there was no proof, leads on the assassination of Gandhi pointed to a Sri Lankan militant group, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, or Tamil Nation. The group is fighting for independence in the north and east of Sri Lanka, an island republic off the Indian coast that is dominated by its Sinhalese majority.

Indira Gandhi supported the Tamil call for independence, and her son followed suit at the beginning of his administration in 1984, arming and training the rebels. But in his last years in power, Gandhi aggressively sought to crush the Tamil rebels, who have used the southern state of Tamil Nadu, where Gandhi was slain on a campaign stop on Tuesday, as a base. In 1987, Gandhi sent Indian soldiers to the island as peace-keepers, but they became embroiled in the civil war.

In a statement in London, a spokesman for the Tamil militants denied any role in the assassination.

The government said on Thursday that an official inquiry into the killing was under way. The authorities now say a woman on a suicide mission, carrying a bomb wrapped in a waist belt, may have bowed down to touch Gandhi's feet as a gesture of homage, and, in the process, set the timer that triggered the bomb. At least 18 people died in the explosion, including the woman, the authorities now say.

The face of the woman believed to have set off the explosive was intact, the Press Trust of India reported, quoting Home Ministry officials. The special investigating team is comparing her photograph with those of suspected militants, the officials added.

The decision by the Congress Party to name Mrs. Gandhi as its president on Wednesday prompted speculation and even derisive comments that the party was seeking sympathy votes by exploiting Mrs. Gandhi's name and widowed status.

There was more explicit commentary on Thursday than on Wednesday, the day that Gandhi's body was returned to the capital. Ramakrishna Hegde, vice president of the Janata Dal, a strong rival of the Congress Party, said on Thursday that the selection of Mrs. Gandhi was "a joke."

U.N., Iraq sign agreement for Kurdish camps' guards

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. and Iraqi officials Thursday signed an accord to send up to 500 U.N. guards to northern Iraq, occupied by allied troops seeking to resettle hundreds of thousands of Kurdish refugees, U.N. officials said.

The United Nations announced the accord had been signed in Baghdad, but U.N. Secretary-General Javiar Perez de Cuellar later told a reporter that the announcement had been premature. However, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said late Thursday that Perez de Cuellar had simply not been informed of the accord when he spoke to the reporter.

Asked if the agreement would pave the way for allied withdrawal from Iraq, U.N. Secretary-General Javiar Perez de Cuellar said, "I hope so ... but it all depends on the allies."

The agreement was signed in Baghdad by U.N. representative Bernt Bernander and Iraqi authorities, said U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani.

An estimated 8,000 allied troops have carved out a security zone in northern Iraq to encourage Kurdish refugees to return from harsh mountain camps along the Turkish border.

More than 400,000 Kurds fled to the border area after Iraqi troops crushed their postwar rebellion in March. Another 1.5 million Kurds took refuge along the Iranian frontier to the east.

The Baghdad government has opposed the allied intervention, but Iraqi troops have put up little resistance as the U.S.-led forces slowly advanced from the Turkish border.

There have been no definitive plans announced for an allied withdrawal from northern Iraq. But aid workers have said Iraq's Ministry of Health has given allied military forces and relief workers 60 days starting today to work in Dohuk, a major Kurdish city in northern Iraq.

"After that we're supposed to pack our bags," said Stuart Willcuts, an official with Northwest Medical Teams, a Portland, Ore.-based medical group.

Under the agreement, between 400 and 500 lightly armed U.N. guards will go to Iraq to replace allied soldiers, said U.N. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity. Ten U.N. police officers arrived in Dohuk last week.

Under the agreement, between 400 and 500 lightly armed U.N. guards will go to Iraq to replace allied soldiers, said U.N. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Privately, however, the allies have said 500 police would not be enough to replace allied troops in northern Iraq. Kurdish village leaders are afraid to lead their people home without the protection of foreign armies.

Kurds have attacked some Iraqi outposts, including the storming and looting of a police station in the city of Zakho on Thursday.

U.S. special forces already have begun pulling out of the mountains on the Turkish-Iraqi border. Several of those camps have already closed, and several more are scheduled to shut this week.

The military said the number of refugees in the mountains has dropped to just under 100,000.

Since the allies crossed into northern Iraq — then urged the United Nations to come in and take control of the refugee camps — there have been ongoing disputes over who has authority over the Kurdish resettlement.

While U.N. and Iraqi officials were conducing negotiations over U.N. administration of the area, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has been meeting with Kurdish leaders seeking autonomy in northern Iraq.

Some Kurdish leaders have indicated they will be willing to accept the departure of U.S. and allied troops once they are certain Saddam will respect any agreement with them. Others have sought international guarantees of their autonomy.

More than 1,400 U.N. peacekeepers already patrol the Kuwait-Iraq border, in southern Iraq, as part of the Persian Gulf war cease-fire accord.

Despite failure Patriot was star

Modern computer technology is marvelous in warfare — when it works. But computers are machines and when they fail, as all machines do, the results can be sobering.

So the fact that two Army investigations have concluded that an Iraqi missile which struck an American military barracks and killed 28 people during the Persian Gulf War comes as no surprise. The acknowledgement, however, does nothing to ease the pain of those whose loved ones died in the barracks.

The Patriot missile system, touted as one of the high-technology success stories of the war, has undergone close scrutiny since the war. But it's doubtful whether the review will fault the missile system, other than for those occasional "glitches" that occur and spell tragedy.

The Patriot, which works by locking its ground radar to an incoming missile and relaying the information to a computer at a control station that tracks the target's speed, trajectory and predicted course, was successful in shooting down all the Iraqi Scud missiles fired towards cities or military installations during the war. The missile's success did seem to lend credence to President Ronald Reagan's call a few years back for a space-based missile defense system, dubiously dubbed "Star Wars."

Recently, some scientists asserted that use of the Patriot in Israel and Saudi Arabia might actually have increased the amount of explosive debris scattered over the landscape.

While the questioning is valuable and should continue as long as there is a mystery to unravel, that the Patriot missile proved to be a tremendous tool in helping prevent civilian casualties in the Iraq war is certain. Without the Patriot, Saddam Hussein could have carried out a bloody terrorist war against innocent neighboring countries.

The Patriot also proved that Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) is, in fact, practicable and in that regard it should not be overlooked in future national defense planning.

Computer failures such as the one in the Iraq war have tragic results, but how much more tragic the death toll from that war might have been without the Patriot missile.

Saudi Arabia expects pilgrimage riots

WASHINGTON — U.S. and other Western intelligence officials are predicting Iranian-instigated riots and deaths at the annual pilgrimage to Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia next month.

Anderson

The Iranians have done little to disguise their design. They have appointed as their pilgrimage leader a top terrorist who has secretly for several years headed the "Organization of the Islamic Revolution of the Arabian Peninsula," a codename for using terrorism and other means to overthrow the governments of Saudi Arabia and other Gulf states.

Security in Saudi Arabia will be tight. But intelligence experts are dumbfounded that the Saudis are courting this kind of trouble once again. "They (Saudis) wanted renewed relations with Iran and this was part of the price," one source told us.

Saudi Arabia re-established relations with Iran in March after a three-year break, which resulted from repeated efforts by Iranian pilgrims to cause disturbances at the hajj, the annual religious pilgrimage to the two holy cities. In 1986, the Saudis discovered more than 100 Pasdaran guards disguised as pilgrims bringing in plastic explosives and other arms. Finally, during the hajj in 1987, a riot was sparked and 402 people were killed, mostly Iranians.

It was after that debacle that Iranian President Rafsanjani released his special brand of invective and threats to the Saudi leadership by declaring in August 1987: "The martyrs' blood (dead Iranian pilgrims) should be avenged by drying up the roots of the Saudi rulers in the region. The sacred blood of martyrs should be avenged by ridding the Holy Shrines of the existence of the evil Saudi rulers."

The Saudis have agreed to accept 110,000 Iranian pilgrims during the June 14 to 24 hajj period (a pilgrimage that's one of the main pillars of Islam and is a required ritual for male Muslims to perform at least once in their life.)

Thousands of fanatical Iranian Revolutionary Guards have already been called up to go to the hajj next month on assignment from the Iranian leadership, and one group has been formed to serve as a control and coordination unit. Saudi nationals have been recruited and have received military training in the holy Iranian city of Qom to help Iranians infiltrate Saudi Arabia.

The darkest omen of violence was the appointment of the man assigned to lead the pilgrims, Mohammed Reyshahri. He's a man who is always ranked in the top 10 of the Iranian's rogue gallery when it comes to fanatical murderers. Reyshahri was once one of the most despicable hanging judges of the new Khomeini regime. He operated in six different cities, executing hundreds — including many top military leaders whose loyalty was suspect.

In late 1984, Reyshahri became Iran's intelligence chief. He was involved in anti-Western terrorist actions, such as the taking of American hostages still being held in Lebanon. He held the top spy post until 1989, when he was appointed prosecutor general of Iran. He also concurrently served, beginning in 1987, as the head of a special clerical court that has meted out imprisonment, torture and execution to more than 400 Iranian clerics not toeing the official line.

Reyshahri has been instructed by Iran's top spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, to "carry out to the letter all of Khomeini's orders in previous years, stipulated in decrees to his representatives in charge of the hajj." Those previous orders called for wreaking havoc at the holy sites, partly to make it appear that the Saudi royal family can no longer be entrusted with the sites.

TRADING PLACES — The U.S. Trade Representative's Office has had one of the fastest revolving doors in government. Our trade representatives routinely rotate between jobs with conflicting interests. Before our current trade representative, Carla A. Hills, took office, she represented companies from South Korea, Canada, Japan and Europe. In a more egregious conflict, former U.S. Trade Representative Robert Strauss played a key role in the $6 billion deal that sold MCA Communications, including Paramount Pictures, to the Japanese company Matsushita. For his role in the deal, Strauss' firm collected more than $8 million.

OTHER VIEWS
ASNE poll results shocking to media

The American Society of Newspaper Editors sponsored a poll which caused heads to turn at a recent ASNE meeting. It revealed, among other things, that if Americans voted on the issue today, there probably would be no free-press clause in the First Amendment.

America's media may have brought on themselves a large measure of disrespect.

The public has been offended by the media's insensitivity to its needs, to the concerns of ordinary citizens. Too often, newspapers and other media have set themselves up as the final arbiters of taste and judgment, leaving their readers little role in setting the agenda for public discussion. ...

The ASNE study recognized that citizens differentiate between the right of ordinary citizens to free speech and the right of the media. They would grant broad freedom to ordinary citizens, less freedom to the media, which they do not view as being a part of themselves. ...

Finally, another word of caution seems important. That is, America's schools and America's media have not done a good enough job of selling citizens on the benefits of a free press. ...

It's frightening indeed to think that Americans, most of whom have never seen a totalitarian state firsthand, would be willing to opt for a controlled press because it offends them sometimes.

Craddick 'speeding bill' should go nowhere fast

At last, the Texas Legislature has come up with a proposal so ingenious — nay, brilliant — that we can bestow upon it our wholehearted endorsement and perhaps even enhance it with a few innovations of our own.

We are referring, of course, to a bill introduced by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, that would give Texas motorists the opportunity to purchase, for a mere $5, a coupon that would allow them to travel up to 70 mph on most interstate highways. ...

And here's the really great news: The incident would not go on their driving record or affect their insurance premiums.

The state would sell the coupons in books of five and pocket the money. According to Craddick, if one-third of the licensed drivers in Texas bought just one book each, the state could raise about $100 million in a year.

So why limit a clever revenue-producing scheme like that to such piddling transgressions as speeding along the state's highways? ...

The attorney general's office could establish a sliding price scale under which a variety of state-sanctioned indulgences could be purchased, ranging from $100 for simple assault to as much as $1,000 or more for shooting holes in people. Given the popularity of such sport in these parts, Texas could turn a tidy profit overnight — and solve prison overcrowding. ...

Now, aren't all of you out there sorry for thinking the Legislature does only dumb things?

CHARLEY REESE
Uncle Sam maintains a double standard

Now that the war fever has subsided, perhaps we can take a cooler look at our own behavior on the international scene with a view toward improving it.

More than 150 nation-states share this planet and there are a great many cross-border problems, such as ocean pollution, that cannot be solved without cooperation. The continued diversion of scarce resources into armaments and the destructiveness of wars only intensify problems and create new ones.

Reese

In short, without an increased degree of international cooperation, any rational forecast of the future must necessarily lie on the pessimistic side for all of us.

So, how does one increase cooperation among sovereign nations? Well, the same way you increase cooperation among individuals. Each must treat the other with respect and as equals. Each must forgo substituting armed force for persuasion. Each must refrain from exploiting the other.

Because of power and size and wealth — red ink notwithstanding — the United States is looked to for leadership, and for that leadership to be effective in the long-run, it must be based on respect.

Sure, we can patch together a temporary alliance with bribes and threats, but in the long run, if we expect to be listened to, we must earn the respect of other nations and other people by acting, on the international scene, honestly and justly. Empires based on force, coercion and financial exploitation don't last. See the former British Empire, as an example.

Some recent administrations, including the present one, have been acting like the British Empire. Unless we the people change this attitude in Washington, we will end up a fifth-rate country like England.

When we get annoyed at a government in Grenada and just send the army down to crush it; when we get annoyed by a two-bit dictator in Panama and send the army down to crush it; when we decide to bomb Libya because maybe the Libyan dictator had something to do with a terrorist incident, the world is watching us and taking note of how we treat weak nations.

When we apply a double standard in dealing with powerful nations, like China and the Soviet Union, they take note of that, too.

When we cite the United Nations as authority for war when we want to go to war and otherwise ignore the United Nations, people take note of that, too. When we claim Kuwaiti sovereignty is so precious, we will go to war to preserve it, but then ignore Israeli violations of the sovereignty of Lebanon and Syria, not to mention our own violations of Panama, Grenada, and Libya's sovereignty, people remember that. When we proclaim a self-righteous interest in human rights sometimes in some places but not at other times in other places, people add that up.

And the message is that the United States, morally, is no different from any other great power which acts as it damned well pleases to pursue its own selfish, usually financial interests and drapes the whole thing with a quilt made of hypocrisy.

The sad part is that the real interests of the American people are being ignored in favor of corporate and financial interests. It is not our interest to break nations or to alienate people who intended us no harm or to pit one nation against another in stupid balance of power games.

It is in our interest to treat people fairly and equally in commercial relations, if they want them, and to otherwise leave them alone.

The American Establishment, however, which has always envied the British aristocracy and tried to ape them, prefers an empire, and they are foolish enough to think they can succeed where the British failed.

Live another ten years and you'll see how wrong they are.

WILLIAM MURCHISON
Quotas, goals are un-American delusions

When is a quota not a quota?

When it's a hiring goal, silly. Or an objective. A hope. A dream. Or when it's part of any linguistic smoke screen masking the machinations of the civil rights establishment.

Murchison

Congress and the White House have been hung up all year over a civil rights bill intended to bypass several Supreme Court decisions that restrict in minor ways the operation of the quota system. President Bush vetoed the bill last year, objecting that it would necessitate racial and sexual quotas in hiring. This was because the bill required work forces to reflect community demographic makeup. How could this be achieved without strict quotas?

Backers of the bill are horrified naturally at the imputation that they — they! — have job quotas in mind. They point to language specifying that the act shouldn't "be construed to require or encourage" quotas. House Democrats, to get the bill through, say they'll toughen the language.

Oh! That's a good story! Tell me another, please, Mommy.

In the real world — the world on the other side of the microphones — you can't write language explicit enough to outlaw schemes for racial balance. Experience supports this view.

Return with us now to those thrilling days of yesteryear — 1964 — when Congress passed the Civil Rights Act, a sledgehammer blow at racial discrimination.

The bill wasn't supposed to require racial balance. In "Disaster by Decree: The Supreme Court Decisions on Race and the Schools," University of Texas law professor Lino A. Graglia writes: "Every title of the (civil rights) act, indeed, was defended by its proponents, with what proved to be irresistible force, on the ground that it did no more than prohibit racial discrimination. The possibility that a requirement of racial discrimination to achieve integration or racial balance might somehow result from the act was the strongest argument of its opponents and was repeatedly and emphatically denied by its proponents."

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, liberal of the liberals, declared that two amendments to the bill had ruled out "the busing of children." Sen. Robert W. Byrd of West Virginia rose to his feet. Could his distinguished friend, the senator from Minnesota, assure him that "school children may not be bused from one end of the community to another end of the community at the taxpayers' expense to relieve so-called racial imbalance in the schools"? His distinguished friend was happy to relieve the senator's anxiety. No, the bill wouldn't require racial balance.

All this notwithstanding, Graglia notes, a racial balance requirement in school attendance "was soon imposed by the Office of Education and upheld by the courts." The big yellow school buses started rolling.

We should excuse the leeriness of the White House — speaking for the majority of Americans, if polls are an indication — concerning hiring "goals." Once bitten, twice shy, is folk wisdom of the highest order.

Government-imposed quotas — or quotas imposed in order to stay out of trouble with government — are intolerable and unfair: not least to the employee unlucky enough to get tagged the affirmative-action hiree.

The guardians of enlightened opinion went bananas last year when Sen. Jesse Helms, running against a black Democrat, ran anti-quota ads on television. The ads were said to embody the new racism or something.

Sen. Helms, in truth, spoke for a silent majority sick of hearing that, to do a good thing we must do a bad thing. Federal judges, bureaucrats and civil rights lobbyists may think thus. Much larger numbers know we don't operate that way in America — or at least we didn't used to.

Rebels advance on Addis Ababa

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The government deployed tanks and hundreds of soldiers around the presidential palace Thursday to protect it from rebel forces, who claimed to have advanced within 22 miles of the capital.

Diplomats on three continents, meanwhile, sought to halt the fighting in advance of U.S.-mediated peace talks scheduled to begin Monday in London.

In Addis Ababa, the acting government, seeking to placate its foes and obtain a cease-fire, freed 171 political prisoners. Most were arrested following a coup attempt against former President Mengistu Haile Mariam in 1989.

Mengistu resigned and fled the country Tuesday, leaving power in the hands of his vice president, Lt. Gen. Tesfaye Gebre-Kidan, and a council of advisers. The new government has appealed to the major rebel groups to observe a cease-fire pending peace talks.

But the Eritrean and Tigrean rebels have rejected the government's call, saying they will continue fighting until either a peace agreement is reached or the government in Addis Ababa is destroyed.

Hundreds of armed soldiers roamed the streets of the capital Thursday, many in dirty uniforms that betrayed them as stragglers from the Western front.

Military police were seen rounding up about 30 at one city square and herding them into trucks.

The MPs, identifiable by their armbands, waved reporters away with their weapons.

The army is made up largely of conscripts, many of them illiterate youngsters taken from villages by army squads. They receive little training and generally show little willingness to fight.

Late in the afternoon, tanks and hundreds of soldiers took up positions at the presidential palace's sprawling grounds on the city's north side.

Five tanks were seen guarding its three entrances.

Serbs unite as war threatens

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Serbian opposition leaders united Thursday in a front aimed at toppling the ruling Communists, who they claim are pushing Serbia toward civil war in its political fight with Croatia.

In the western republic of Slovenia, meanwhile, territorial defense units were ordered partially mobilized after half a dozen federal army tanks encircled a militia training camp at Maribor, near the Austrian border.

The move, announced at a news conference in the Slovenian capital of Ljubljana, illustrated the growing tensions in the collapsing Yugoslav federation.

Slovenia and Croatia are governed by center-rightist regimes strongly at odds with Serbia's ruling Communists.

Serbia's largest opposition party, the Serbian Renewal Movement, and three other center-right groups banded together Thursday to demand new elections for Serbia within six months. They called for a government of independent experts to run the republic until then.

"Serbia has never been more unpopular abroad and in Yugoslavia than at present under the Communist regime," said Vuk Draskovic, leader of the Serbian Renewal Movement.

He said the new force, the United Serbian Democratic Opposition, would use all legal means to try to topple hard-line Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, including a boycott of Parliament and demonstrations. With the Communists holding 200 of Parliament's 250 seats, a boycott would be largely symbolic.

Draskovic accused the Communists of dragging Serbia to the brink of war with Croatia, which is threatening to secede.

Public speaks out on sex ordinance

■ Committee hears testimony concerning Ector County law governing sexually oriented businesses.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Owners of sexually oriented businesses were conspicuously absent from a meeting here Thursday concerning revisions to an Ector County ordinance regulating their trade.

All of the 20 or so speakers at the forum at the Ector County Administration Building voiced support for the ordinance and urged county officials to continue enforcing it.

A five-member citizen committee appointed by the Ector County Commissioners Court heard two hours of testimony concerning the ordinance and the problems associated with adult bookstores and lounges.

"We find over and over cases where the perpetrators of sex crimes...have fed their minds on pornography," said Julia Hartman of the Odessa Rape Crisis Center. "I realize that the law is limited, but I believe that we need the strongest ordinance possible and we need it thoroughly enforced."

Enforcement of the ordinance has been curtailed in the wake of U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III's April ruling that portions of the law are unconstitutional.

Bunton ordered the county to pay $1,500 in damages, plus attorneys' fees, to the adult-bookstore owner and employees who challenged the ordinance in court.

Sharon Lee Wright, owner of the B&L Adult Bookstore at 5890 W. University Blvd., filed suit against the county last June after sheriff's deputies arrested her and five of her employees for disobeying the ordinance.

Those arrested — Ms. Wright, Terry Dale Miles, Loretta Mae Johnson, Jimmy Wayne Wright, Wanda Jean Barrett and Paul Eugene Hudson — claimed the law was unconstitutional and that the arrests violated their civil rights.

Although Bunton declared that there was no conspiracy to violate the plaintiffs' civil rights, he agreed with their contention that the ordinance requires revision.

County commissioners approved the ordinance in February 1990 and began enforcing it the following June. It requires inspections and licensing of sexually oriented businesses, including adult bookstores, massage parlors and nude dance clubs.

Among other things, Bunton said, the ordinance needs to be altered to include:

■ A provision stating why such an ordinance is needed in Ector County.

■ A requirement that the sheriff's office make a specific ruling on each license application it receives rather than "implicitly" denying licenses by refusing to rule on them.

■ A requirement that a business be allowed to continue operating while its license renewal application is pending.

■ A provision for "prompt judicial review" for a license applicant should a license be denied.

Bunton also pointed out that the ordinance does not define the terms "church" and "school," although it forbids sexually oriented businesses from locating within 1,000 feet of such institutions.

Hale released on bond

■ Former Glenwood administrator returns to Midland from psychiatric evaluation in Missouri and was fitted with electronic monitoring device.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Bryan Allen Hale was free on bond Thursday following his return to Midland from Missouri, where doctors were to determine his competency to stand trial on child pornography charges.

"I just praise the Lord for the wonders he's done in the last 34 days," a handcuffed Hale told reporters at Midland International Airport after his arrival.

He declined to elaborate before deputy U.S. Marshals loaded him into a waiting car for the trip back to Midland, where he was reportedly fitted with an electronic monitoring device and released on bond.

Hale, 47, the former administrator of Midland's Glenwood Psychiatric Hospital, was sent to the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Mo., on April 20.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III said Thursday that he had not received results of Hale's competency evaluation.

Hale was released on $25,000 bond in connection with federal charges of receiving child pornography. He is free on $50,000 bond in Ector County on burglary charges.

A hearing to determine whether his federal bond should be revoked is scheduled for this morning before U.S. Magistrate Robert R. Sykes. The U.S. Attorney's Office is expected to cite evidence that has emerged since Hale's arrest April 8.

Sykes originally set bond for Hale on April 12. Four days earlier, federal agents had arrested Hale at his Glenwood office for allegedly receiving an illegal videotape entitled "Educating Valerie."

According to investigators, Hale also mailed an obscene book detailing his sexual fantasies to an undercover U.S. Customs agent in Florida.

He was subsequently indicted on counts of receiving child pornography, sending obscene material through the mail, and on counts relating to the forfeiture of evidence seized during the investigation.

Hale, who has been replaced at Glenwood, also faces burglary charges in Odessa stemming from the theft of some documents from a Glenwood employee's home in March.

If convicted on the Ector County charges, Hale could face up to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

Receiving child pornography carries a maximum punishment of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Sending obscene material through the mail carries a maximum penalty of five years and a $250,000 fine.

Homestead could be exempt from taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Voters could save their partial homestead exemptions from school district property taxes under a proposed constitutional amendment approved 124-17 by the House on Thursday.

The measure, which earlier passed the Senate, was returned to senators for consideration of House changes. If it wins final legislative approval, it will go on an Aug. 10 statewide ballot.

The measure is needed because the state's new school finance law created countywide education taxing regions for school districts. A minimum local property tax is imposed, and revenue is shifted among school districts within the regions.

However, the governing boards for the new taxing regions don't have the same authority as school boards currently do to grant homestead exemptions.

The constitutional amendment would allow voters in a county education district to exempt from property taxes a percentage of the market value of the residence homestead, or at least $5,000.

Voters also could exempt at least $3,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of a person who is dis-

Odessa woman charged with robbing bank

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 39-year-old Odessa woman was arrested Thursday morning following the robbery of the Bank One Motor Bank at 3800 E. 42nd Street, Odessa police said.

Karen Lynn Lopez went before a U.S. Magistrate in Midland Thursday afternoon where a motion was filed to detain her pending a detention hearing on Wednesday, federal officials said.

Ms. Lopez remained in the Midland County jail Thursday evening.

Police responded to an alarm from the bank at about 10:35 a.m. and discovered that the facility had been robbed by a woman dressed in a purple shirt and purple shorts.

The woman, on foot, was arrested shortly afterwards at the Briarwood Village Apartments, 3904 Englewood Circle, by two officers who were in the immediate vicinity at the time of the robbery.

An undisclosed amount of cash that was taken in the robbery was recovered, police said.

According to a FBI spokesman, Ms. Lopez was unarmed but had passed a note to a bank employee demanding the money. The exact details of the note were not revealed.

Ms. Lopez was turned over to the FBI for federal prosecution.

Childhood 'stolen' from unhappy campers

■ Boys who have trouble functioning in society learn self-respect and group-reliance at DHS' Woodside Trails camp.

By David Matustik

SMITHVILLE (AP) — These are society's throwaway children — boys who have been recycled through the juvenile system until they have ended up here, in the piney woods of Bastrop County.

Already stripped of their childhood and their dignity, the two dozen boys learn self-respect and group-reliance in rudimentary surroundings — a camp without electricity or enclosed shelters.

"Certain kids need a different approach," said Jeanne Wilson, who oversees Woodside Trails Therapeutic Camp for the Texas Department of Human Services. "A wilderness camp by its very nature is very heavy on responsibility.

"Nobody eats if the fire isn't built. The fire isn't built if the wood is not cut," she said. "There is no way to con a tree into falling over. It's nature. It's just the way life is."

Life has been anything but natural for these 10- to 17-year-old boys.

Many are victims of abuse or are abusers themselves. All come from dysfunctional families.

Each has a gut-wrenching story.

By age 2, Ron's parents had abused him so badly that he was taken into state custody. Then came a series of foster homes, including one in which he was sexually abused by the foster parents. He then was adopted by another family, but he never could adjust. His last stint living with his adoptive parents failed when he was caught stealing from the family.

At age 10, Abraham became a sex abuse victim turned assailant. He was accused by Williamson County officials of sexually assaulting cousins and siblings. Now at age 16, he says he's straightened out his life.

Mark, 15, was abandoned in 1989 at an airport by his mom who called authorities and said she had had enough of her son.

Another youth, who camp officials say cannot be identified in any manner, is being hidden from his parents for his safety.

But protection from their past isn't always so simple.

"Somebody stole their childhood," said Bebe Gaines Patterson, program director. "They have no belongings. They don't belong."

Austin psychologist David Poole said the boys have a profound inner rage that can be just below the surface.

"They need to develop the real confidence to tolerate when they are disappointed — to deal with limits," said Poole, who is the camp's consulting psychologist.

"The thing about Woodside Trails is that they (staff members) don't just do therapy. They raise them. The staff gets authentically involved in a personal way.

"The only thing that will cure these kids is personal relationship," Poole said. "Their basic terror is that when people know how terrible they are they will leave them."

Campers say the Woodside program teaches them others will stick by them even when things go wrong. Abraham said, "To me, they give me a lot of respect. This is my real home."

Woodside Trails was established in Blanco County in 1980, then moved to Lake Travis in 1981. Campers moved to the 120 acres between Bastrop and Smithville in the spring of 1984.

Two campsites have been developed — each with four shelters that house three boys, a dining hall, a cooking shelter, a shelter for counselors and an area for group discussions.

Neither camp has electricity or walls on the shel-

Offices, banks to be closed Memorial Day

Staff Report

Midland city and county government offices will be closed on Monday in observance of Memorial Day.

Federal government offices, including postal serives, will also shut their doors for the holiday.

In addition, banks will remain closed until Tuesday morning.

Public school students, however, won't have the day off. All schools and Midland Independent School District administrative offices will be open.

Many area retail businesses are also expected to remain open on Monday.

In addition, the annual Memorial Day Service, sponsored by the American Legion, with the assistance and participation of several veteran and patriotic organizations from Midland, will be conducted at Resthaven Memorial Park at 4616 N. Big Spring St.

The ceremony will be held Monday, and will commence at 6:30 p.m. The public is encouraged to attend.

DEATHS

James Black

Memorial services for James Black, 71, of Midland have been set for 7 p.m. today at Baker-Jackson Funeral Home Chapel.

Funeral services will be at St. John Baptist Church in Grapeland at 2:30 p.m. Sunday with Rev. C. Ferguson officiating. Burial will be at Grapeland Cemetery, near Crockett, on Sunday with Rev. J.T. Session officiating. Baker-Jackson Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Black was born Nov. 13, 1919, in Grapeland. He worked for Borden's Milk Company for 10 years, as an MISD custodian and in the construction field.

Survivors include two daughters, Margaret Lewis of Lubbock and Dottie Mae Johnson of Washington, N.C.; one brother, Wiley Black of Midland; and two sisters, Allie Mae Johnson and Laverne Walker, both of Grapeland.

Myrtle Trotter

Myrtle I. Trotter of Midland died Thursday at a local nursing home.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Hunting, fishing, park fees to go up

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans will pay more to hunt, fish, camp and use state parks under increased fees approved Thursday by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

"We've got major projects put on hold due to cutbacks in state government," Commission Chairman Charles "Chuck" Nash of San Marcos said.

The new fees, expected to produce from between $20 million to $30 million in additional revenue per year, take effect Sept. 1.

Under the new fees, entering a state park will increase from $2 per vehicle to a range of $2 to $6.

The commission took no action on a proposed annual $10 fee to use state parks — called a conservation permit. A bill allowing the commission to adopt the fee is being considered by Gov. Ann Richards.

Parks and Wildlife officials have said more money is needed to improve the state parks, offset slumping or flat revenues from hunting licenses and the cigarette tax, and wean the agency from general tax funds.

State parks received about 21 million visits last year, officials said.

Under the new fees, entering a state park will increase from $2 per vehicle to a range of $2 to $6.

Resident hunting and fishing licenses will increase to $13 each; a $3 increase in the hunting license and a $5 increase for the fishing permit.

A combination hunting and fishing license will increase from $15 to $25.

Registration fees will rise from $12 to $18 for a motorboat under 16-feet long and $18 to $27 for boats 16-feet to 26-feet.

Campsite fees will range from $6 to $16 depending on utilities offered.

The commission also adopted hunting and fishing regulations for the 1991-92 season, which also take effect Sept. 1. Those include:

- Reducing the deer bag limit in the East Texas pineywoods to one buck and two antlerless deer.
- Allowing does to be harvested only during the first nine days and last nine days of the general hunting season in Cherokee, Nacogdoches, Shelby, Rusk, Panola, Harrison, Marion, Cass, Morris, and Bowie counties.
- Eliminating the special antlerless-only deer season, which has been in effect in six East Texas counties.

LOCAL/ AREA REPORTS

Throwing bricks

Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Two men were arrested Thursday for criminal trespass in connection with bricks being thrown off the roof of the 16-story Settles Hotel, 301 Runnels St., earlier that day, Big Spring police reported.

A 19-year-old man and a 20-year-old man were released after both posted $1,000 bonds, jail officials said.

According to police reports, people were throwing bricks off the building at about 7 a.m. Thursday and later seen inside the building. A search by police, however, failed to find anyone in the building.

About 10:40 a.m., police returned to the building and at that time apprehended the two suspects, reports stated.

Drug arrest

A 28-year-old Midland man was arrested Thursday for possession of cocaine with intent to deliver after Midland County Sheriff's Office SWAT executed a search warrant at his residence, officials said.

The man remained in jail Thursday night awaiting arraignment this morning.

He was arrested after a substance believed to be powder cocaine valued at about $400 was found at his residence at 1800 Walnut Lane.

The search warrant was issued as a result of a Crime Stoppers tip.

CAMP: Boys learn they are wanted

ters. In winter, the sides are covered with plastic and the boys are given extra blankets. They can go to a school building on the grounds to escape inclement weather.

The Shady Oaks camp is for incoming campers. When the boys reach certain objectives — such as being able to establish relationships with the counselors and their peers — they graduate to the Twin Pines camp.

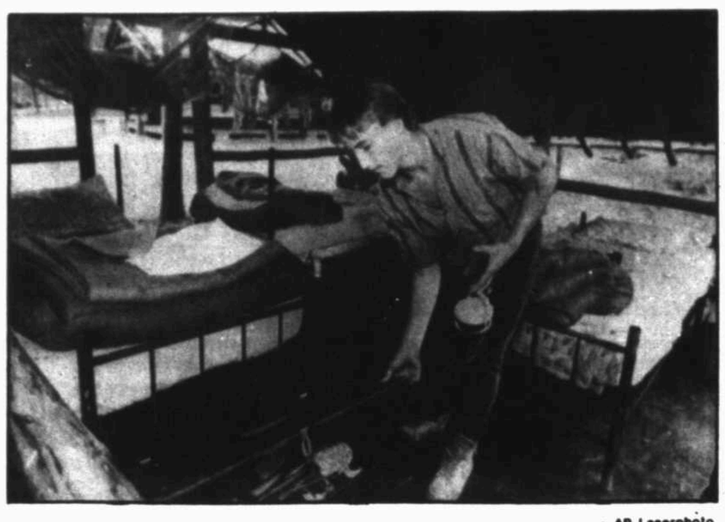
The boys generally are referred to Woodside Trails from the Texas Department of Human Services or county probation departments. Those coming in are interviewed by staff members and other campers to determine if they will fit into the program.

Jeannette Burke, camp administrator, said most boys stay in the program for about 18 months, though some have been there more than three years. Campers leave when they reach long-term goals established when they come to Woodside, such as being able to handle school work and themselves.

"We don't have any walls or fences," Burke said. "They have to give us their word that they are going to stick it out no matter how difficult."

Of the 95 who have been exposed to the program — excluding the 24 currently enrolled — 17 did not complete it.

Generally, each camper's day starts about 6:30 a.m. and ends between 10 p.m. and midnight. Campers must do chores such as chopping wood, cooking meals or doing laundry. The incoming boys in the Shady Oaks group have the option of working all day or working half the day and going to school at the camp the other half.



AP Laserphoto

Woodside Trails in Bastrop is a camp for troubled teen-aged boys who have been recycled through the juvenile court system. Many of the youths, like Ron — who is shown stowing his gear — are victims of abuse or have been abusers before arriving here.

Camp officials say the arrangement teaches the boys that school is a privilege.

The Twin Pines boys, the more advanced campers, go to school a full day. Some take certain classes in Smithville schools.

The Shady Oaks campers earn points for achieving certain goals including having a good attitude. The points, awarded by fellow campers and their counselors, can be cashed in for extras such as karate classes or outings at Barton Springs pool.

Group discussions — called circle ups or square ups — are an integral part of camp life. All activities — including meals — stop when a gathering is called by a camper or counselor to work out a problem.

Recently, Cedric had had it with Derrick. The two had a shoving match at the water spigot. Cedric called the other campers together to talk it out. The beans-and-franks lunch could simmer awhile on the wood-burning stove.

Derrick was defiant. He was right. Cedric caused the problem, he said. He felt picked on. Derrick kept playing with a pair of shoestrings in his hands. When asked to put the shoestrings up, he refused. When a counselor moved to take them, Derrick exploded.

Two counselors wrestled him to the ground. One counselor, while talking to Derrick about his problems, sat on the youth for about 40 minutes — a restraint method geared to calming him down.

Finally, Derrick and Cedric began to talk things out. It turned out Derrick's anger had festered since earlier in the day when one of his shelter mates — not Cedric — failed to do a chore.

The restraint procedure is accepted within the child services community, and psychologist Poole said it is preferable to putting the child in isolation.

Wilderness Trails is one of eight camps of its type in Texas. Earl Stuck, director of residential care services for the Child Welfare League of America, said more facilities like Wilderness Trails are being set up across the country.

A consultant asked by Wilderness Trails to do a critique of the camp said the program is successfully turning around boys' lives and its ideas for aiding troubled youths could become national models.

But the review also found that the program lacks an effective monitoring system of the youths who leave the program. Wilderness Trails plans to help bridge the gap between the camp and society by establishing a group home in Smithville this summer.

The group home will be built with a $100,000 donation the camp received with help from a member of the Austin-Balcones Kiwanis. Wilderness Trails plans to spend $30,000 on the group home and use the remaining $70,000 to set up a permanent endowment to meet camp needs.

Wilderness Trails administrators say the way to judge the effectiveness of the camp is to note how many graduates keep in touch. Five graduates showed up at the camp for spring break, Burke said.

"It was time to visit the family," Burke said. "This is the family. They came back."

BILL: Homestead could be exempt from taxes

abled or at least age 65.

Of the state's 1,050 school districts, 259 currently grant homestead exemptions.

"Your homeowners' property taxes will go up unless we pass this constitutional amendment," said Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston.

Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston, tried to amend Colbert's measure to allow voters to nullify the state's new school finance law, and to virtually eliminate the possibility of successful court challenges to the public school funding system.

Culberson's proposal would have said that as long as a school finance law is rational, it is constitutional.

However, his proposal was ruled out of order and not considered.

The school finance law was passed after poor school districts sued the state, and the Texas Supreme Court ordered lawmakers to even out education funding available to school districts.

The House also tentatively approved a bill that would give teachers and other public school employees access to a statewide group health insurance plan. The state would put no money into the program.

"There are a lot of school districts in this state that simply cannot get a good insurance plan," said Rep. Elton Bomer, D-Palestine.

In other Thursday action, the House:

- Gave its final approval, 115-23, to bill to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. with a full state holiday. The measure, which earlier passed the Senate, returns to senators for consideration of amendments.
- Tentatively approved a bill that would create a defense to prosecution for unintentionally doing something that injured a child, elderly person or invalid.
- Sent the governor a bill on a waste tire recycling program that would add a $2 fee to each new tire purchased.

SEX: Public urges continued enforcement of ordinance

(From 1B)

He wrote that while the distance rule is not necessarily unconstitutional, it is not sufficiently justified in the ordinance.

Ector County Attorney Tracey Bright said the comments and concerns of the citizens at Thursday's meeting will be used as justification. County Commissioners will take citizens' comments into consideration when deciding on the content of a revised ordinance, she added.

Ms. Bright said she hoped an amended ordinance would be in place within a month. Meanwhile, she said, the county will continue to accept applications from sexually oriented businesses and enforce those sections of the ordinance not affected by Bunton's ruling.

For some in attendance on Thursday, however, enforcement of the ordinance did not represent an effective solution to the perceived problem of pornography in Ector County.

"I am suggesting that we eradicate this trash from Odessa," said county resident Don Robinson. "And if it takes changing the legislation, then let's change the legislation."

He echoed the sentiments of the Rev. George Garnett of Odessa's King Solomon Baptist Church, who said sexually oriented businesses "should have no place in society as a whole. No place at all."

Precinct 1 County Commissioner Jack Crider said that the elimination of the businesses is unlikely, barring changes in state and federal laws that offer broad protection to free-speech rights.

"We have taken a pretty good lesson as to what we can do and what we can't do under the present situation," he said, referring to the lawsuit challenging the ordinance. "The best we can do is regulate...and we are limited as to how much we can regulate."

After the meeting, Ms. Bright said she was surprised that no sexually oriented business owners had addressed the committee. She called on owners to make their opinions known within the next two weeks, before commissioners decide on an amended ordinance.

Local students take Latin test honors

Staff Report

The results of the National Latin Examination were recently released. Administered on March 15 to over 80,000 students nationwide, the exam tests knowledge in Latin grammar and reading comprehension, etymology (history and background of words), and history of Latin-speaking peoples.

Several Midland high school students garnered honors in the test.

Two students, Kathy Kang of Lee High School and Kristi Pearson of Midland Freshman High School, earned the summa cum laude honors for their test results.

Levels of recognition are 1st, gold or summa cum laude; 2nd, silver or maxima cum laude; 3rd place, magna cum laude; and 4th place, cum laude.

Local honoreees are: Philip Barron, LHS, maxima cum laude; Lauren Beal, MHS magna cum laude; Tim Beard, MHS, cum laude; Clay Brown MFHS, cum laude; Angela Buchanan, LHS, cum laude; Michelle Butler, LHS, maxima cum laude; Michelle Dull, MHS, magna cum laude; Kevin Edwards, LHS, maxima cum laude; Whitney Elkins, LHS, maxima cum laude; Aaron Ellison, LHS, magna cum laude; Taresa Hawkins, MFHS, magna cum laude; James Henderson, MFHS, cum laude; Adela Hernandez, LHS, magna cum laude; Celeste Hoggan, MFHS, magna cum laude; Gary Holdridge, LHS, cum laude; Rifle Hughes, LHS, magna cum laude; Kathy Kang, LHS, summa cum laude; Shara Kimbrell, LHS, cum laude; J.P. # Parents, students protest Confederate flag ban

Others think banner racist symbol

The State

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Angry parents and students at Robert E. Lee High School are protesting a decision to remove the Confederate flag as a school symbol.

But other students say the flag represents racism and said they are glad it won't be part of school activities.

Principal Bill Fish told the school's 2,000 students Tuesday the flag would not be used next year. By Wednesday, about 150 parents and students rallied outside the school in protest.

"Some minority students aren't comfortable with the Confederate flag on their uniform and opted out of sports and other activities because of it," Fish said before the rally. "So I see the flag as fostering exclusivity because it stops people from participating. We can't accept that."

The flag has graced football and band uniforms, a school gymnasium wall and has been waved during athletic events since the school opened 32 years ago. Nicknamed the Volunteers, the school has a Confederate soldier as its mascot.

As school ended Wednesday, students waving rebel banners shouted: "Keep the flag." Some parents and students said part of the school's heritage has been lost.

'This is just racist toilet paper now.'
— Black student who tore up flag

But one unidentified student, who is black, grabbed a Confederate flag and tore it to shreds.

"This is just racist toilet paper now," he said, wiping his brow with one of the scraps.

"I'm not racist, I'm the descendant of Polish peasants who had nothing to do with slavery," shouted a red-faced student waving a rebel flag at several black students. "It's a symbol of defiance when the South fought for state's rights against the North."

Some black students shouted that the flag stood for slavery.

"It may not seem racist to them, but it is to us," said Onzelo Harison, a senior, who is black. "It represents slavery, it represents people who treated Blacks cruelly for no good reason. It was a great decision by Mr. Fish to bring it down."

Fish said students would be allowed to wear clothes with the Confederate flag or to wave the flag at games, as long as they were not representing an official school group.

Senate OKs spousal assault bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate approved a bill Thursday which, according to its sponsor, would make it a "bit easier" to prosecute someone who sexually assaults his or her spouse.

The initial response, however, was that the Senate had weakened the bill sent over by the House.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, added an amendment which said that prosecution against a spouse would require "a showing of bodily injury or the threat of serious bodily injury."

Brown said such language would enable prosecutors "to make a clear determination" whether to pursue a complaint.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said the measure "makes it a bit easier for someone who has been raped to file a suit and be successful against their spouse."

"Obviously, it's not the best of all worlds," Ellis said. "I would have preferred the language that came over in the original House bill. I would prefer there be no conditions. "

He said accepting Brown's amendment was the key to Senate passage, but he did not think the House sponsor, Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, would approve of it.

"If there's enough time, we'll end up going to a conference committee," Ellis said. "But I think today, for the bill to make it through the Senate by unanimous vote, is a major policy shift."

The bill was passed on voice vote.

"I think my colleagues in the Senate who have gone on record in support of it at least showed there is some sensitivity to the fact that rape is rape," Ellis said.

Ms. Danburg said of the amendment, "I don't like it a bit."

"It makes it harder for people to make good, clean arrests. It makes it harder for DAs to prosecute," she said.

But she added that she would accept the change, which would send the bill to the governor.

Ms. Danburg said although Brown and Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, have worked hard to cultivate a pro-victim, anti-crime image, "They obviously could care less about the victims of crime when those victims are married to their assailant."

Ms. Danburg said Lyon would not let the bill out of committee without the amendment. "Who's he trying to protect? Rapists?"

Lyon said through a spokesman that Ms. Danburg, "After further checking out the truth, has now publicly retracted her statement and has personally apologized to me."

Ms. Danburg said, "I didn't go that far," but confirmed that she had apologized.

'It (amendment) makes it harder for people to make good, clean arrests. It makes it harder for DAs to prosecute.'

— Rep. Debra Danburg

Ex-inmate convicted of killing woman as she sat in her car

HOUSTON (AP) — A former inmate was convicted of capital murder Thursday in the death of a woman who was gunned down in her car as she waited at a stoplight.

Jurors took just 90 minutes to convict Lionell Rodriguez, 20, in the death of 22-year-old Tracy Gee, shot to death Sept. 5. Rodriguez threw the woman in the street and fled in her car, prosecutors said.

The punishment phase of the trial began Thursday afternoon and was expected to last several days. Rodriguez could be sentenced to life in prison or death by injection.

According to a three-page confession read to jurors Wednesday, Rodriguez and his cousin, James Gonzales, then 17, were driving around looking for any robbery target.

Rodriquez had been paroled from prison only three weeks before the shooting. He was armed that night with his stepfather's shotgun and an M-1 carbine.

Gonzales, who was driving, came to the stoplight where Ms. Gee was sitting in her Honda.

"I decided to take her car and her money," Rodriguez said. "I told James I was going to take her car and for him to follow me. I picked up the rifle and James kind of sat back in his seat so I could shoot her.

"I raised the rifle and aimed at her, for like her shoulder or something, and fired the rifle one time. I saw that the shot had made a little hole in her passenger's side front window and that her head fell over to the front."

Rodriguez said he wanted to dump the body in a parking lot, but became unnerved by Gonzalez yelling at him.

Drug rehabilitation counselor accused of marijuana trafficking

McALLEN (AP) — A drug rehabilitation counselor is accused of involvement in a marijuana-trafficking and money-laundering ring that operated between South Texas and Tulsa, Okla.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents this week arrested Leo Palacios, 31, of Pharr, a counselor at Edinburg Tropical Texas Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation. A spokesman at the center told the Valley Morning Star that Palacios is a full-time counselor in the Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services unit.

A 15-count grand jury indictment unsealed Tuesday implicated eight people including Palacios: James Caudill, 44, Edinburg; Francisco R. Lara, 48, Edinburg; Jose Quesada Jr., 34, Donna, and Ralph Cole, of McAllen. They are accused of engaging in a conspiracy to transport more than 100 kilograms of marijuana between Oct. 1, 1987, and last November.

Palacios' father said his son denies any involvement with the others.

"He tells me he didn't know any of those guys (arraigned with him) and they didn't know him," said Leopoldo Palacios Jr., a probation officer with Hidalgo County and a Pharr city commissioner.

Tropical Texas Center MHMR officials in Edinburg said no official action had been taken concerning Palacios' employment.

Marion Shirah, executive director of Tropical Texas MHMR, said employees who face charges are routinely reassigned until charges are proven or disproven.

"Our general policy is to remove that person from working with clients and wait for the court to decide," said Shirah.

Palacios is charged with one count each of drug conspiracy, drug possession and a money laundering count accusing him of selling 90 kilograms, or almost 200 pounds of marijuana for $90,000.

Morales sees need to restrict judicial appeals

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A man who helped stage a bloody prison takeover nearly 17 years ago was executed Thursday, and the state's attorney general said the case shows the need for restrictions on appeals.

The execution by injection of Ignacio Cuevas came after three capital murder trials that cost the state more than $500,000.

"I'm troubled and I suspect citizens are troubled that it's taken 17 years in order to ultimately conclude this tragedy and this case," said Attorney General Dan Morales, who witnessed the execution.

"Many of these (appeals) are filed for the sole purpose of delaying the execution," he said. "I question whether that's the way most Texans and most Americans would like to see their judicial system operate."

"I think everybody who has any sense of justice at all is discouraged at how long it takes to execute a man who had been convicted twice," said W.J. Estelle, who was director of the Texas prison system at the time of the siege at the Walls Unit in downtown Huntsville.

Cuevas, 59, was convicted of killing one of two captives slain during one of the nation's longest prison sieges. He was executed just a short distance from where he and two other inmates held 16 hostages.

Cuevas spoke briefly before the sentence was carried out.

"Beautiful faces," he said in English, then switched to Spanish, adding, "I'm going to a beautiful place."

He turned his head toward Jack Pursley, the prison warden, and said: "OK, warden, roll 'em."

He was pronounced dead at 12:18 a.m., about 5 minutes after the drugs were administered.

"What a surprise!" Linda Woodman, who was among the hostages held by Cuevas, said when told of the execution. "It is over. I'm a little surprised they went ahead with it. I guess it's over and I'm relieved."

Cuevas, the illiterate son of a Mexican peasant, was serving a 45-year term for murder when he, Fred Gomez Carrasco and Rudolfo Dominguez tried to escape on July 24, 1974. Armed with pistols and smuggled ammunition, they took over the prison library and put their hostages in handcuffs.

When the siege ended in a shootout on Aug. 3, Carrasco, the leader of the takeover, and Dominguez were dead, along with librarian Julia Standley and prison teacher Elizabeth Beseda.

Cuevas was convicted of Mrs. Standley's slaying.

■ Jury debating Lewis DWI case

HOUSTON — A six-person jury Thursday began deciding whether Olympic gold medalist Carl Lewis was drunk when he was arrested in January as Houston police watched him slam his car into a curb, blowing out two tires.

Lewis, a six-time gold medalist in running and long jumping, faces up to two years in jail and a $2,000 fine if convicted of the charge of driving while intoxicated, a Class A misdemeanor.

After three days of testimony, a final defense witness Thursday challenged the accuracy of blood-alcohol tests administered to Lewis in the early morning hours of Jan. 11.

"In my judgment, it is an approximate device," said Ken Smith, a researcher and consultant with Rice University. "If an individual has had some alcohol on his breath, it is accurate. But as far as being an actual measure of a person's blood-alcohol level, I do not think it is accurate."

Tests conducted at the police station showed Lewis had a blood-alcohol level of 0.12. In Texas, the legal intoxication limit is 0.10.

Authorities said Lewis failed several sobriety tests.

■ Capitol project needs more funds

AUSTIN — The restoration of the century-old Capitol will cost more than expected and can't be completed unless the Legislature provides more funds, officials say.

Dealey Herndon, executive director of the State Preservation Board, told board members Wednesday that the project runs higher than the initial budget.

Since the Legislature allocated $149.5 million two years ago for the work, engineers and consultants repeatedly had said it could be finished on time and within that budget.

Without additional funds, she said, "The only way that it could be finished would be to leave off some significant part, and that would be to either leave off a wing or leave something else off. We dont' think that's wise."

New cost estimates on the restoration are being compiled and should be submitted to the board in June, she said.

■ Newborn boy has heart transplant

SAN ANTONIO — A Nueces County infant received the heart of another baby in a transplant operation to correct a birth defect, hospital officials said.

Joshua Limon of Robstown received the donor heart May 16 at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio just 18 days after he was born, officials said Wednesday.

He was in good condition in the hospital's pediatric intensive care unit and could be released within a week, officials said.

Surgeons from the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio transplanted a 5-month-old boy's heart into the infant. Joshua suffered from hypoplastic left heart syndrome, a condition in which the left chamber of the heart is defective.

■ New director named to head DPS

AUSTIN — Lt. Col. James Wilson, an 18-year veteran of the Texas Department of Public Safety, was appointed its director to replace Col. Joe Milner, who is retiring, officials said.

Milner, who has served for 37 years on the DPS, will retire Aug. 31. Wilson, 49, has served as assistant director of the agency under Milner since Aug. 1, 1988.

"Replacing a man like Joe Milner will be a hard act to follow, but I'm looking forward to the challenges that lie ahead as Texas approaches the 21st century," Wilson said.

Wilson, a graduate of the South Texas School of Law, will become the eighth director of the DPS, which was established in 1935.

Ex-convict testifies in former guard's trial

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A ex-convict testified he once saw a Texas Syndicate gang member pass $400 to former Texas prison guard Luis Sandoval in a drug deal.

Sandoval, 27, is accused of helping the gang carry out the Dec. 17, 1986, slaying of inmate Joe Arredondo at the Ellis I prison unit near Huntsville. Prosecutors contend Sandoval collaborated with the Texas Syndicate by unlocking a door that gave gang members access to the victim.

Ortiz said he was not a member of the gang himself, but was privy to the group's plans and activities because he was close to his cellmate, reputed Texas Syndicate member John Hernandez. He said Hernandez told him about the plot to kill Arredondo, who had failed to deliver drugs to the gang when he returned to prison from a furlough.

Arredondo, 33, was serving 20 years for a Williamson County murder.

Ortiz served 11 years on a murder conviction before being paroled two years ago.

On Tuesday, inmate Carlos Rosas testified he stabbed Arredondo to death while inmate Andres Martinez Cruz held the victim.

Burr happy to be identified with Perry Mason role

By Scott Williams

NEW YORK (AP) — Raymond Burr is slowing down.

Sure. And Perry Mason is going to lose his latest case.

He did 22 interviews in one day for "The Case of the Glass Coffin," which aired last month. But, then, this is the actor who made 90 movies — remember "Rear Window?" — between 1946 and 1956.

Burr was 40 on Sept. 21, 1957, when America first heard that angst-ridden, suspensive, theme music and got its first look at Perry Mason, a stocky saturnine criminal lawyer with dark circles under his eyes.

Nine seasons and almost 300 hourlong episodes later, "Perry Mason" left the air, but America had fallen in love with Perry Mason.

Even eight years as the star of "Ironside" didn't diminish Burr's identification with the character created by writer Erle Stanley Gardner.

"There's something special about Mason," Burr said.

"Mason came on the air at a time when most of us were buying television sets. Our important television set. And most of us were sitting down to a pattern of watching continiuous shows, or series," Burr said.

'There's something special about Mason. Mason came on the air at a time when most of us were buying television sets. Our important television set. And most of us were sitting down to a pattern of watching continiuous shows, or series.'

— Raymond Burr

Burr is grayer and heavier today, but his reprises of Perry Mason are so popular that the network saves them for the "sweeps," the quarterly viewership samplings that help local stations set advertising rates.

Barbara Hale, who's always played Mason's secretary, Della Street, also reprises her role in the TV movies. "She will kick me for this, but in two more years, Barbara and I will have known each other 50 years," he said.

He's happy to be identified with Mason, but said he's also proud of "Ironside," his portrayal of Pope John XXIII in a TV docudrama, and the films "Rear Window," and "A Place in the Sun."

What about "Godzilla"? In that classic Japanese monster movie, Burr plays a courageous newsman who witnesses the Big Guy's destruction of Tokyo.

"And 'Godzilla,'" he adds. "I loved 'Godzilla.'"

"You know the first 'Godzilla' was done in the United States and I worked 24 hours," he said. "I got the highest pay at that time for any actor for 24 hours work.

"What I wanted them to do was give me part ownership of the picture, because then I would have retired long ago," he said.

The producers bought the U.S. rights to the Japanese picture, cut it, edited it, and shot Burr's scenes in a tiny studio on Los Angeles' Vermont Avenue.

"It was a small studio, but we had every scene — the mountains, the climbing scenes, the hospital scenes, the hotel scenes with me looking out a window watching all the conflagration of Tokyo — all done in that one studio."

The producers hired Japanese-American lookalikes to help blend Burr's scenes into the action with the original Japanese cast.

Burr was worried about working against the language barrier, but the producers assured him that his fellow actors would be Japanese-Americans.

"Well, 99 percent of them spoke no English," he said. "I almost went out of my mind."

Burr said "When we started doing these (Perry Mason) movies I was going to do two," he said. "We are now working on number 20, and we will do number 21 in the month of May. Then ... I don't know."

"I have plans, I must say, until the year 2003, but nothing definite after that," Burr said. "I don't plan to retire in my life, but ... there are other things besides television."

Disc jockeys can be seen and not just heard

■ Two Los Angeles DJs will be the stars of an NBC series chronicling their wild and crazy antics.

By Deborah Hastings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sometimes when television runs out of ideas, it turns on the radio.

The Golden Age of Television was filled with radio legends-turned-TV stars, including Lucille Ball, Jack Benny, Milton Berle and Bob Hope.

Times have changed. Today we have Mark and Brian.

Mark Thompson and Brian Phelps host the No. 1 morning radio show in Los Angeles. Their advertisements are plastered across city buses and billboards. Their on-air antics are frequent subjects of water-cooler chatter.

In Southern California, that is. In the rest of the country, most people have never heard of them.

Now NBC has given them their own, prime-time television show.

Thompson and Phelps are not the only local disc jockeys to be given a network series in recent years. They are, however, the newest recipients and though radio comedians once stepped into television with great success, few do so now.

The reasons are fairly simple. In the 1940s and 1950s, when Ball and Benny brought their talents to television, they were already known to radio audiences across the country who tuned in national network broadcasts.

Radio doesn't function that way anymore. It is basically a local medium now. And in the cut-throat competitiveness of 1990s television, more than three-fourths of all new shows fail.

Thompson and Phelps know this. They hope it doesn't happen to them.

"There is a pretty big failure rate," Phelps said during a recent break in taping "The Adventures of Mark and Brian." "If we try it, cool, and if it fails, OK. We just don't want the radio show to fail."

Thompson chimed in, "If we do fail, at least we tried something different. We didn't go down doing the same thing that everybody else is doing."

For the past four years, Phelps and Thompson have been filling the 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. weekday slot on KLOS-FM. They are a local phenomenon and count among their fans NBC entertainment president Warren Littlefield, outgoing NBC entertainment group president Brandon Tartikoff, actress Dana Delany, "Cheers" star Kelsey Grammer, ex-"Rifleman" Chuck Connors and Vegas crooner Robert Goulet.

AP Laserphoto

Los Angeles DJs Mark Thompson, left, and Brian Phelps, are filming a television show, "The Adventures of Mark and Brian," which is scheduled to air on NBC this summer or fall.

Their humor runs a gamut from sweet to sophomoric. On Valentine's Day, the pair convinced Goulet to serenade downtown Los Angeles from a helicopter. Last week, the two spent large segments of their morning talk show discussing masturbation.

"We're not shock jocks," said Thompson. "We're really like a family and we talk about whatever comes up."

Thompson and Phelps' TV show is currently in production and will debut this summer or fall. Shot in documentary style, the series chronicles the duo experiencing a different wild and crazy thing each week.

So far they have become circus trapeze artists (sort of) and sung with the Temptations (sort of).

Neither is an accomplished athlete. Nor can they sing.

"They're just cute," said network entertainment president Littlefield. "They're adorable."

Said NBC comedy development vice president Leslie Lurie, "We're just major fans of theirs."

But some of Phelps' and Thompson's colleagues found they didn't have enough fans when they made their own jump from radio to TV.

Shadoe Stevens, host of the syndicated radio program "American Top 40," lasted only eight episodes last year as the star of CBS' "Max Monroe: Loose Cannon." ABC declined to pick up "Anything for Laughs," starring Los Angeles disc jockeys Frazer Smith and Jay Thomas, after airing a half-hour pilot last May.

Thomas, however, has found TV success as an actor. He plays the conservative talk-show host wooing Candice Bergen on "Murphy Brown." He also played Rhea Perlman's hockey-playing husband on "Cheers" and has guest starred in a number of other series.

Rick Dees, host of the early morning KIIS-FM show in Los Angeles, is struggling to make a go of his late-night variety show on ABC. "Into the Night Starring Rick Dees" competes with NBC's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," drawing marginal ratings and bad reviews.

Phelps and Thompson know they can't act. They also know that television is an entirely different medium than radio. They admit to being nervous about their upcoming series, but say they hope it's different enough (and funny enough) to surpass the recent efforts of disc jockeys who have tried TV.

"The network is really nervous about this, too," said Thompson. "They have no idea what will happen with us."

'There is a pretty big failure rate. If we try it, cool, and if it fails, OK. We just don't want the radio show to fail.'

Jury still out on Fernando

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Angel general manager Monty Hoppel said late Thursday that former Cy Young Award winner and National League Rookie of the Year Fernando Valenzuela will likely be added to the Midland roster in time to pitch for the Angels' in Jackson, Miss., Monday.

Hoppel said Valenzuela, released earlier this season by the Los Angeles Dodgers, and signed to one-year contract this week by California, is scheduled to make two appearances in a Midland uniform.

"They (California officials) will know (Friday) for sure what day it's going to be," Hoppel said of Valenzuela's first appearance as an Angel.

'They know the interest here. The agreement is three minor league starts ... the timing they just can't do anything about.'

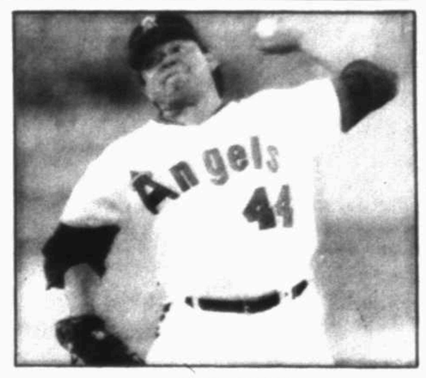
— Midland Angel general manager Monty Hoppel, on the possibility of Fernando Valenzuela pitching in Midland



Valenzuela

■ Related story/2C

California Angels also say it's too early to speculate on when Valenzuela's second start in a Midland uniform would be, but it appears likely, at least at this point, that it would come on the road. If a regular five day rotation is followed, and if Valenzuela pitches Monday night in Jackson as tentatively planned, his next start would likely be the last day of the Angels' road trip, June 1, in Arkansas. Midland and the Travelers are scheduled to play a doubleheader that afternoon.

Following a two day break, the Angels return home Tuesday, June 4, to open a five game home series against San Antonio.

"We've gone over that and over that," Hoppel said of his discussions with officials in Anaheim concerning the possibility of Valenzuela pitching in Midland. "They know the interest here. The agreement is three minor league starts. The timing they just can't do anything about."

Valenzuela's contract states his agreement to three minor league starts. The first was Wednesday night when Valenzuela gave up four hits, one unearned run and walked three in four innings for the Angels' Class farm club in Palm Spring, Calif.

The final two starts will be with Midland: Edmonton is apparently not a possibility. The Trappers are in Vancouver, and according California officials, the weather is too cold for the left-hander.

The possibility of Valenzuela throwing in Midland "would be greatly increased," Hoppel said, if Valenzuela doesn't feel well enough to pitch on a particular day or if it is determined a fourth minor league start is needed.

"I think after two more games, I'll be ready," said Valenzuela, who has struggled since developing arm problems in 1988.

Joe Maddon, the Angels' minor-league hitting instructor, was assigned to monitor Valenzuela's performance.

"At times, he spotted his fastball real well and he threw a couple of good screwballs and curveballs," Maddon said. "I don't think anybody could expect much more after two months off.

"He's not as sharp as he will be after three or four more starts. He didn't have a good feel for the curve, but that will come."

Last season, Valenzuela was 13-13 for the Dodgers with a 4.59 earned-run average, second worst among National League starters. Over the past three years, he was 28-34 with a 4.08 ERA.

Valenzuela may no longer be a great pitcher, he remains a great draw — at least in the minor leagues.

His appearance on Wednesday night drew an overflow crowd of 5,188 to the small stadium, where the attendance was 604 the previous night. And when Valenzuela left the game, so did most of the fans.

When told that many of the fans drove

Chaney awarded

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Chaney, who guided the Houston Rockets to the best record in franchise history, was named NBA Coach of the Year today.

Chaney

Chaney received 69 of a possible 96 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Portland's Rick Adelman finished second with 11 votes, followed by Boston's Chris Ford with seven votes, Chicago's Phil Jackson with four, San Antonio's Larry Brown and Milwaukee's Del Harris with two each and Detroit's Chuck Daly with one.

Although Houston star Hakeem Olajuwon missed 25 games with an eye injury, the Rockets finished with a 52-30 record, 11 victories more than the previous season. That was the second biggest improvement in the league behind Orlando.

"Don took a tough situation and turned it into something extremely positive," said Rockets guard Sleepy Floyd. "When we lost Olajuwon, he made sure nobody hung their heads. Don established how we were going to play, and we followed that plan and became successful."

Philadelphia starter Tommy Greene celebrates final out.

Phillies' Greene throws no-hitter

N.Y. Times News Service

Tommy Greene, a substitute starter on a Philadelphia Phillies staff best known for wild pitches, pitched the second no-hitter of the season Thursday, putting major league pitchers 10 days ahead of last year's pace that created a record nine no-hitters.

Greene, starting for only the second time this season, became the first visiting pitcher to hurl a no-hitter in Montreal's 23-year history as the Phillies defeated the Expos, 2-0, before a sparse Olympic Stadium crowd of 8,833.

The 24-year-old right-hander ended his dream game with a flourish, snatching Tim Wallach's hard-hit bouncer at the mound, jumping in the air, then running toward first base and flipping the ball to Ricky Jordan for the final out.

"As soon as I grabbed it, I just yelled, yeah," said Greene, who hugged Jordan as soon as he made the out. "I'm just glad we played on turf because it gave the ball a true hop."

On May 1, when Greene started for the first time this season — he allowed no runs and two hits in six innings against the Giants — Nolan Ryan of Texas pitched the seventh no-hitter of his career. Last year Mark Langston and Mike Witt combined for a no-hitter on April 11, and Randy Johnson of Seattle pitched the next one on June 2.

The Phillies needed Greene for Thursday's game because Danny Cox suffered a pulled groin in his last start last Saturday. Greene was not exactly the picture of perfect control, walking seven batters, but he also established a personal high by striking out 10 in his 15th career major league start.

The Expos hit only three balls out of the infield: flys by Wallach in the fourth inning, Ron Hassey in the seventh and Marquis Grissom in the eighth.

"I think I really got into a groove around the third inning, but I actually felt pretty good all day," the 6-foot-5-inch, 225-pound pitcher told reporters in Montreal. "I realized about the sixth inning what was going on, but you can't really think about it. You have to just do your job."

Greene continued doing it in the

Another manager gets ax

■ Frank Robinson has been "reassigned" to the Baltimore Orioles' front office Thursday, becoming the third field boss in three days to be fired.

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Frank Robinson became the third major league manager fired in three days when the Baltimore Orioles told him Thursday that he was being reassigned to the team's front office.

Oates

Robinson, baseball's first black manager when he took over the Cleveland Indians in 1975, was replaced by first-base coach Johnny Oates. The 55-year-old Robinson was given a front-office job involving the evaluation of player talent, trade negotiations and planning for spring training and the Orioles' new stadium.

"He has done a tremendous job for our ballclub," Orioles general manager Roland Hemond said. "We will forever remember and enjoy and cherish the memories of the 1989 season — the why-not season."

Robinson became the fourth manager fired in a month. Philadelphia replaced Nick Leyva with Jim Fregosi on April 23 and the Chicago Cubs fired Don Zimmer on Tuesday and replaced him a day later with Jim Essian. Kansas City fired John Wathan on Wednesday and Hal McRae is said to be the probable successor.

Baltimore is last in the American League East at 13-24 after finishing a disappointing fifth last season with a 76-85 record, 11½ games behind first-place Boston. In 1989, Robinson's first full season, the Orioles finished second at 87-75 and contended with division-winning Toronto until the final weekend.

"Things have not been going well and all of us share some responsibility for that," Hemond said. "We are hopeful that a change of managers will lead to improvement in the way our team in performing."

Robinson replaced Cal Ripken Sr. as manager in April 1988, six games into

Jim Hall: Driven to succeed

EDITOR'S NOTE: Midland has a four-way ownership connection in the Indianapolis 500 this year. The Reporter-Telegram takes a look in a four-part series at the four co-owners of the Hall/VDS team. Today, in part four, we profile Jim Hall.

Staff Report

In American racing, he's the legend of Rattlesnake Raceway.

For two decades Jim Hall stirred up the racing establishment with more original ideas than any other figure in the sport. He did it out of his intense desire to win and through his unique ability to translate curiosity into innovation.

Now Hall is returning to the front ranks of Indy car racing with a new team and a fresh outlook. He is fielding the Pennzoil Lola Chevrolet, driven by John Andretti Sunday in the Indianapolis 500 under the Hall/VDS Racing banner in collaboration with another celebrated winner, Franz Weis of VDS Racing.

Weis, a former colleague of Hall's, has been the leading engine builder on the Indy car circuit since he and Hall surprised the racing establishment by winning all three 500-mile races (Pocono, Ontario and Indy) in 1978.

Hall also joins his son, Jim Hall Jr., and Count Rudy van der Straten, the founder of VDS Racing, in a co-ownership role in an effort to put his name on a third Indy 500 title. Hall won with Al Unser in 1978 and with Johnny Rutherford in 1980.

Born in Texas in 1935 and raised in Colorado and New Mexico, Hall was a student at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, Calif., when he started driving his brother's Austin Healey sports car at weekend road races in 1954.

That led to the purchase of a state-of-the-art modified sports car from the best builders in the business in 1961, but the results didn't satisfy him. Hall decided to set up his own race car building operation. Thus was born Chaparral Cars of Midland.

During the years from 1963 to 1970, Hall's engineering genius, with enthusiastic help from General Motors technicians, turned out a series of

MC begins quest for individual titles

Staff Report

TYLER — Tyler Junior College claimed the men's national junior college team tennis championship here Thursday with a 5-4 victory over Anderson (S.C.) College.

While Tyler took its win after bouncing top-ranked Midland College from the title chase earlier this week, the Chaparrals put their eyes on crowns of a different sort — the individual titles.

All six MC singles players took victories in Thursday's first round of individual play and advanced to the semifinals, while all three Chap doubles teams drew first-round byes. Doubles quarterfinals and semifinals are set for today, with finals in both singles and doubles slated for Saturday.

In a match with special interest, No. 4 Toby Curtis defeated former MC player James Homan, currently of Palm Beach Community College, 6-1, 6-1.

Tonny Van de Pieterman took the win for the Chaps in the No. 1 position, while MC's Greg Muller claimed two wins to earn his way to the semifinals.

Other MC players competing today are David Draper in the No. 3 hole, Toby Curtis at No. 4, No. 5 Berhe Serekebrhan and No. 6 Robin Van Beveran.

The sites of next season's NJCAA tournaments have also been announced, with the men's event to be played at Corpus Christi and the women's tournament set for Tyler.

Rangers move into first in AL West

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Texas Rangers extended their club-record winning streak to 10, beating the Minnesota Twins 10-6 behind Ruben Sierra's bases-loaded double in the 11th inning.

Kirby Puckett went 6-for-7 for the Twins, getting five singles and a triple. The major league record for hits in an extra-inning game is nine by John Burnett of Cleveland in an 18-inning game in 1932.

Jose Guzman started for Texas, his first major league appearance since Sept. 21, 1988. Guzman missed all of the 1989 season and most of 1990 with shoulder problems before making 10 minor league appearances last year. Guzman walked nine in 3 2-3 innings, one short of the club record, and allowed two runs and four hits.

Sierra was 4-for-6 with five RBIs for Texas. The Rangers' 10-game winning streak is the longest in the majors since Boston won 10 straight last Aug. 24 to Sept. 2.

Geno Petralli led off the Rangers' 11th with a double. Steve Bedrosian (2-2) walked the bases loaded and Sierra's three-run double broke a 5-5 tie and Juan Gonzalez's two-run double made it 10-5.

Kent Hrbek hit an RBI single in the bottom of the inning before Jeff Russell (1-0) retired the side.

White Sox 11, Athletics 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Frank Thomas had a career-high five RBIs and Greg Hibbard pitched a five-hitter as the Chicago White Sox beat Oakland, knocking the Athletics out of first place.

The loss, Oakland's third in four games, dropped the A's a half-game behind Texas in the American League West. The Rangers won their 10th in a row when they beat Minnesota 10-6.

Four of Chicago's hits went for extra bases, including a run-scoring double by Carlton Fisk in a three-run fifth inning.

It was second time in three games and seventh time this season that the A's have given up runs in double figures.

Tigers 5, Red Sox 3

DETROIT — Pete Incaviglia, who had struck out in all 11 previous career at-bats against Roger Clemens, hit a go-ahead double in the seventh inning and the Detroit Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox.

Clemens (6-2) allowed four runs and five hits in seven-plus innings, struck out 10 and walked two. He won his first six decisions, then was pounded for nine runs and 13 hits in five innings against Texas on Saturday night.

After a 29-minute rain delay in the top of the seventh, Clemens walked Rob Deer with one out. Incaviglia broke a 2-2 tie when he lifted a fly down the left-field line that hit the wall and bounced past Mike Greenwell into the Tigers bullpen area.

Milwaukee 7, Cleveland 3

MILWAUKEE — B.J. Surhoff hit a two-run single in a four-run first inning and the Milwaukee Brewers ended a three-game losing streak with a victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The game started 55 minutes late because of rain and both starting pitchers struggled in the first inning.

Don August (3-2) allowed three runs and seven hits in six-plus innings, struck out three and walked two. Darren Holmes pitched three innings for his second save.

Charles Nagy (1-4), winless in six starts since April 22, was knocked out after 1 2-3 innings. He gave up five runs and seven hits.

Calcavecchia, two others tie for lead at Colonial in Cowtown

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — A return of his old-time putting touch — and confidence — propelled Mark Calcavecchia into a three-way tie for the first-round lead Thursday in the Colonial tournament.

Calcavecchia did not have a 5 on his card and did not make a bogey in a 5-under 65. He shared the top spot with Peter Persons and Fred Funk.

More important than the lead, Calcavecchia said, was the return of that special feeling, the putting touch and brash confidence that once marked his play.

"That's probably the best I've felt on the golf course this year," Calcavecchia said. "It sort of reminded me of a couple of years ago, when I was playing great. It wasn't much of a struggle. I was just swinging the club and doing it.

"I know that's the way you're supposed to play golf, but it's hard to do when you're playing bad and struggling and always working on something," said Calcavecchia, whose last victory came in the 1989 British Open.

The big turnaround, Calcavecchia said, was in his putting. Only a week ago, it was his biggest problem.

"Last week I flinched, absolutely flinched, on five putts of six feet or less," he said, and, as an aside, added: "If I was a little older you'd call 'em the yips."

Immediately after that nervous experience in the first round of the Memorial, Calcavecchia put in a three-hour practice session with one of the elongated, 50-inch putters so popular on the Senior Tour.

AP Laserphoto

Peter Persons

"I'd gotten too wristy," he said. "I had to quiet down my hands a little. The long putter is a shoulder stroke and that's what I needed.

"I even put it in my bag for Friday. Took out the 1-iron and carried my old putter, too.

"I didn't pull the Long Daddy, but it was there if I needed it," he said.

He abandoned it over the weekend, however, and said he has no intention of using it "for the next 15 or 20 years."

Using his shoulders more and his hands less on this hot, muggy day, he began to see some results that have been missing for two years.

"This was kind of like the way I used to play," he said. "I didn't have to think about it, just kind of put it on auto-pilot."

ninth, striking out Andres Galarraga and getting Larry Walker on a grounder to third base.

Pausing for a breath or two, Greene said he let his mind wander back to a conversation he once had with a minor league pitching coach, Leo Mazzone.

"I had three no-hitters that I lost with two outs and two strikes in the last inning," he related. "And I remember after the last one, Leo Mazzone telling me, 'When are you finally going to get one?' Well, today, I finally hung onto it."

He did it by inducing Wallach to hit the ball back to him, completing the first Phillies' no-hitter since Terry Mulholland pitched last season's eighth one, against San Francisco on Aug. 15.

"It was certainly no fluke," Buck Rodgers, the Expos' manager, said of Greene's feat. "He was handcuffing us. He deserved it."

Reds 6, Giants 2

CINCINNATI — Jack Armstrong pitched a four-hitter and Paul O'Neill hit a three-run homer in a five-run first inning as the Cincinnati Reds beat the San Francisco Giants.

San Francisco has lost six consecutive games, including three straight to the Reds. The Giants, who have not led in any game during the streak, had not been swept at Riverfront Stadium since July 1985.

Armstrong (4-2) struck out three and walked one in his first complete game since last July 29 at San Francisco, a game he lost 4-0.

Trevor Wilson (0-4) gave up all six runs and seven hits before he was removed with one out in the second.

Chris Sabo walked to start the first and Mariano Duncan and Hal Morris followed with singles for a 1-0 lead. Eric Davis struck out, Glenn Braggs hit an RBI double and O'Neill hit his ninth home run of the season, the third in his last four starts.

Cincinnati matched its best inning of the season with the five runs. The Reds added another run in the second when Sabo doubled and Morris tripled, chasing Wilson.

Jose Uribe hit his first home run of the season in the third and Will Clark hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth.

Dodgers 2, Astros 0

HOUSTON — Tim Belcher won for the fifth time in six career Astrodome decisions and Lenny Harris drove in two runs, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers over Houston.

Belcher (4-4) allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings, struck out two and walked four. Harris had run-scoring hits in the fourth and sixth off Xavier Hernandez (0-4). Eddie Murray also had hits that figured in scoring both runs.

John Candelaria, who has not allowed a run in his last 14 appearances over 6 1-3 innings and stranded all 12 inherited runners in his last nine outings, retired pinch-hitter Mark Davidson on a fly ball with two men on to end the eighth. Jay Howell worked a perfect ninth for his eighth save, making the Dodger bullpen 12 for 12 in save opportunities.

Cardinals 8, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Jose DeLeon won for only the second time in 27 starts, and Felix Jose had three of 15 St. Louis hits and scored twice as the surging Cardinals beat the sputtering Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Cardinals, also getting three hits from Todd Zeile and two and two runs scored from Ozzie Smith, took two of three games from the Pirates to win their fifth consecutive series. The Pirates have lost four of their last five games.

The victory was the first for DeLeon (2-3) since April 20, snapping a string of two losses and three no-decisions.

Cubs 4, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Doug Dascenzo's squeeze bunt with two strikes scored Shawon Dunston in the ninth inning, giving the Chicago Cubs a victory over the New York Mets and keeping manager Jim Essian unbeaten.

Luis Salazar led off the ninth with an infield single off John Franco (1-3) and was forced by Dunston. Pinch-hitter Hector Villanueva, a slow runner, followed with a grounder to deep shortstop and Kevin Elster made a throwing error that moved Dunston to third.

Padres 11, Braves 10

ATLANTA — Darrin Jackson homered on the first pitch of the 11th inning as the San Diego Padres — scoring six unearned runs in the game on five Atlanta errors — beat the Braves in a 4-hour, 44-minute marathon.

Jackson's second homer of the season — and 15th Padre hit — off Jeff Parrett (0-1), cleared the left field fence.

Penguins win 6-4, put Stars back in a hole

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Mark Recchi is back. Paul Coffey is back. Mario Lemieux definitely is back. And the Minnesota North Stars are back to where they were when the playoffs started — in the role of undisputed longshots to win the Stanley Cup.

The Pittsburgh Penguins moved within one win of the first NHL title in their 24-year history, taking a 4-0 first-period lead Thursday night on two goals by Recchi and one each by Lemieux and Kevin Stevens, and holding on for a 6-4 victory in Game 5 of the finals.

Ron Francis scored in the second period, before Minnesota cut the deficit to 5-4 by taking advantage of the absence of Tom Barrasso. The league's top playoff goalie, Barrasso left after the first period with a slightly pulled groin and was replaced by Frank Pietrangelo.

The North Stars, 27-39-14 during the regular season, are trying to become the third losing team in major professional sports history — and the first in 42 years — to win a championship.

To do so, they need a two-game winning streak, beginning Saturday in Game 6 at Met Center, where they lost Tuesday to snap an 8-0 home playoff run.

Minnesota, the league's 16th-ranked regular-season club, used early offense to beat No. 1 Chicago, No. 2 St. Louis and defending champion Edmonton in the first three rounds.

Hershiser to start Friday for Missions

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser will be the star attraction Friday night when he pitches for the San Antonio Missions as part of a shoulder rehabilitation program.

A sellout crowd of more than 3,500 is expected at the minor league game between San Antonio and Shreveport at V.J. Keefe Field.

Tickets sold out Tuesday morning after it was announced the right-hander would be on the mound.

"We sold an incredible amount ot tickets for this game," said Missions general manager Burl Yarbrough. "I don't think it had anything to do with the 1,500 frisbees we are giving out."

Hershiser had reconstructive surgery on his right shoulder April 27, 1990. He is on a 30-day rehabilitation assignment in the minor leagues.

He has made three starts — on May 8 in Bakersfield, Calif., on May 13 in Phoenix and Saturday in Bakersfield. He pitched a total of 16 innings, allowing 10 hits and two runs while walking one and striking out 11.

Hershiser, the 1988 Cy Young award winner, made four starts for the Dodgers early last season before the surgery. He hasn't been in a big-league game since then.

what developed into a 21-game losing streak at the start of the season. Robinson, a Hall of Famer, managed the Indians from 1975-77 and the San Francisco Giants from 1981-84.

The 45-year-old Oates has been an Orioles coach since 1989. He coached for the Chicago Cubs from 1984-87 managed in the minors for three years. He was chosen as the International League's manager of the year with Rochester in 1988.

"We've got a lot of work to do," Oates said. "We cannot come back to be a .500-level team in one inning or one game. We're going to have to go one game at a time."

The Orioles, like the Cubs and Royals, were in last place on the day they changed managers. Baltimore is 10 games behind first-place Boston.

"I never wanted to come at someone else's expense," Oates said. "I'm excited by the challenge, I look forward to it, I hope it can be a long tenure here in Baltimore."

Of the 26 major league managers, nine — including Oates — were catchers during their playing days.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, MAY 24, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your desire to combine comfort with style can be realized. Look forward to higher profits beginning in August. Fall should prove an especially happy time for marriage. Romance will lead many singles to the altar in November. Take a long-range approach and your business gains will multiply by January 1992. Early next spring is the best time for a vacation.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Gary Burghoff, singer Bob Dylan, actress Priscilla Presley, singer Patti LaBelle.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not let a temporary financial crunch depress you. Good financial news comes from abroad. Do more things for yourself to save money. A loved one shares a splendid profit-making idea.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New freedom gives new meaning to your life. A school chum wants to help you deal with a personal problem. A stock tip bears investigation. Domestic amusements hold special appeal this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Career progress demands that you display your talents to best advantage. Your co-workers will offer valuable support. Visitors arrive from afar. Use tact when dealing with difficult relatives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone in authority is keeping a close eye on you. Do not despair. You work well when under pressure! New production methods that save time on the job will help you increase profits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Curb a tendency to be overly critical. Do not look for flaws in every situation. Flights of fancy could prove costly. Realism should be your guide. Save your money and invest it wisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Cooperation and amity are of prime importance today. Avoid stressing your individualism at the expense of your colleagues. Teamwork can help swell profits! A kind word is a healing balm now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A fortuitous event will have considerable impact on your finances. A household purchase or repair will bring you greater domestic comfort. A candid chat improves a parent-teen-ager relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An unexpected phone call, meeting or letter will make your day! Someone who plays a major role in your life is trying to tell you something. Be more solicitous of older people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make needed home repairs and you will increase your property's value. A private meeting can help you resolve your differences with an associate. Your mate is attuned to your needs and desires.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Refuse to let a temporary cash shortage eclipse your creative talents. Get innovative ideas down on paper, then research them thoroughly. Give a teen-ager time to work out an inner conflict.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hold a steady course in both career and romance. Tangible and intangible rewards are forthcoming. Changes in your environment reflect a change in what you want out of life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Trust your intuition. Friends may lean on you for financial aid — be charitable within reason. Getting better organized will help things go more smoothly at work. Try a new approach to a problem!

TODAY'S CHILDREN are versatile, intellectual and curious. They are able to manage several projects at one time without turning a hair. Parents may be puzzled by these Geminis' shifting moods! One moment they are happy, the next wistful. Academic challenges whet these youngsters' appetite for knowledge. They will be "news hounds" from childhood on. Once they latch on to something that interests them, they never let go.

| 6 ◇ | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: King of ♡

Good players always look for something better than a finesse for their contract. Sometimes there's no alternative; occasionally, the cards lie favorably and you can increase your chances considerably by maneuvering skillfully.

North bid the hand well. Once partner has made a jump shift, two aces and three-card support are enormous assets. To announce slam interest North cue-bid the ace of spades, then raised diamonds when South showed a six-card suit. South could hardly do less than press on to slam.

West led the king of hearts, and most players would be happy to settle for either a 2-2 trump split or the spade finesse to land the slam. Fortunately, declarer saw deeper into the position.

After discarding a spade on the ace of hearts, declarer ruffed a heart and then cashed the ace and king of diamonds, revealing the fact that there was a trump loser. Next came three top clubs, and declarer had a stroke of fortune when West showed out on the third round. The jack of clubs was then ruffed in dummy for an entry to ruff another heart. Now declarer presented East with his trump trick.

If this hand proves one thing, it is that good players make their own luck. Down to nothing but spades, East was forced to lead away from the king into dummy's major tenace. Making six-odd.

What if East still had a heart in the end position? Declarer would ruff and fall back on the spade finesse, and would have been no worse off than if he relied on the spade hook from the word go.

Michael Landon's surgeons treating blood clot in his leg

LOS ANGELES — Michael Landon, battling cancer of his liver and pancreas, has been hospitalized for surgery to deal with a blood clot in his leg, a spokesman said.

Landon, 54, entered Cedars-Sinai Medical Center late Monday for the surgical procedure performed Tuesday, said his spokesman, Harry Flynn.

Landon was expected to go home to Malibu on Friday.

"He was supposed to go home right away, but he now has the flu and they won't release you if you're sick," said Flynn.

Landon, star of "Highway to Heaven," "Little House on the Prairie" and "Bonanza," learned last month that he had inoperable cancer of the liver and pancreas. The father of nine is undergoing chemotherapy and experimental treatments.

AUSTIN, Texas — The Internal Revenue Service auctioned off tax-plagued entertainer Willie Nelson's golf course and country club for $230,000 Thursday.

Nelson's property in several states has been seized and sold by the IRS to help pay $16.7 million he owes in back taxes, penalties and interest.

The IRS last month bought back the 9-hole Pedernales Country Club and Golf Course from Darrell Royal, former University of Texas football coach and friend of Nelson.

Royal bought the 76-acre property west of Austin for $117,350 during a bank foreclosure sale in March.

But the IRS redeemed the golf course and scheduled Thursday's sealed-bid auction after officials received offers for more than Royal's purchase price, said IRS spokeswoman Valerie Thornton.

The successful bidder was James Noryian, owner of Investors International of Austin, which mostly buys foreclosed commercial real estate. He said he didn't have any immediate plans for the golf course.

NEW YORK — Olympic gold medal gymnast Cathy Rigby says her stage role as Peter Pan has helped her overcome her fear of failure.

Rigby has been nominated for a Tony award for her Broadway role as the boy from Never-Never Land who won't grow up.

"At the Olympics, I needed to please, to live up to expectations," Rigby says in an interview in this weekend's issue of Parade magazine. "This time, I just wanted to do the best I could. I wanted to pass on the magic of this role."

Freer U.S. trade with Mexico could boost sales of offal, processed meat, A&M says

Kiker

Freer trade with Mexico won't cause a stampede of livestock across the border, but U.S cattle feeders, meat packers and consumers might get moderate gains from such an agreement.

Livestock traditionally have been the main commodity traded between the United States and Mexico. In 1990, the United States bought $419 million worth of Mexican livestock and livestock products. Mexico in turn spent $643 million on U.S. livestock and livestock products that year.

But a new study by Texas A&M University's Agricultural Market Research Center says there is room for improvement.

"Potential gainers from freer trade include cattle feeders and meat packers who will export additional products to the Mexican market," said a report by Dr. C. Parr Rosson III, the center's assistant coordinator. "U.S. consumers will have access to a wider variety of products at a lower cost."

The assessment of the livestock and meat industry under a free trade agreement is one of 11 issue papers compiled by a team of agricultural economists at the center. The study, released last week, examined the impact of trade negotiations on major U.S. and Texas commodity and non-commodity topics.

U.S. trade talks with Mexico could begin in June if Congress grants "fast-track" negotiating authority, set to expire at the end of May, according to Dr. Gary Williams, the center's coordinator.

Since negotiations have not begun, no clear terms have been set forth. The Texas A&M study pinpoints issues that should be considered to best serve both nations.

Rosson said the biggest increase in U.S. livestock products exported to Mexico likely would be processed meats and edible offal.

Mexicans eat more beef than other meats, with a per capita consumption of 55 pounds in 1989, the most recent figure released. U.S. per capita beef consumption was 67 pounds in 1989.

Mexico also bought $63.4 million worth of U.S. edible offal in 1990 and $89.8 million in animal fats, oils and greases.

More U.S.-fed cattle could be shipped across the border if duties are lowered and Mexican demand for higher-quality meats increases, Rosson said.

Losing the most as a result of freer trade would be U.S. cow-calf producers, especially those in Texas, because 75 percent of Mexico's exported feeder cattle enter Texas. The United States imported 1.14 million head of feeder cattle from Mexico in 1990, which represent about one-third of the cattle on feed in the Texas Panhandle.

Rosson said that if the Mexican feeder cattle exports increase, U.S. feeder cattle would draw lower prices because of the additional numbers on the market. But cattle feeders in the United States would have more business.

Trade inbalance should be a key issue in the livestock negotiations, he said.

"Given the overall importance of this sector to the Mexican economy, it is not clear that a continuation of this situation (of trade imbalance) is in the best interests of developing a strong market for U.S. products there," Rosson said.

Other issues to address are investment reform, import competition, animal health and sanitary regulations, domestic agricultural and trade policies, the importance of the general economic conditions and the availability and accuracy of Mexican market information and data.

NRDC: Farmers could slash chemical use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers could reduce the use of some farm chemicals by as much as 80 percent without affecting productivity, a private study said Tuesday.

The Natural Resources Defense Council said its two-year research project showed pesticide use can be reduced in several ways, including rotating the crops planted each year and using selected "integrated pest-management" techniques.

Researchers concentrated on nine crops grown in California and Iowa, two of the nation's largest agricultural producers.

For example, it said 25 percent of the insecticide and 50 percent of the herbicide used to produce tomatoes in California could be eliminated if farmers used alternative methods.

In Iowa, researchers found that corn farmers could reduce insecticides by 80 percent and herbicides by 50 percent.

Jennifer Curtis, NRDC research specialist and principal author, said environmentalists have long contended that significant reductions of pesticide use are possible.

"Our study quantifies these pesticide reductions and verifies they can be achieved without threatening productivity or profitability," she said.

Although the report did not include comparative yield figures for the specific crops examined, another of the report's authors, Tom Kuhnle, said a review of the research showed the alternative methods generally had "negligible effect" on crop output.

The NRDC describes itself as a private, non-profit organization with more than 170,000 members "dedicated to protecting public health and the environment."

There have been several studies involving alternative agriculture in recent years. Environmental interests like the idea, while some scientists and farm groups say the problem is a lot more complex.

In 1989, the National Research Council's massive report on alternative agriculture cited case studies of farmers who were able to sustain crop yields without the indiscriminate use of chemicals.

But the 1989 study and similar reports have drawn criticism from within the scientific community as well as from some agricultural groups and the chemical industry itself.

The latest study drew immediate response from Jay J. Vroom, president of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association, who said the report "significantly overstates the potential adverse impacts of pesticide use on water quality and human health."

Further, he said, the study "proposes a return to old-fashioned, unscientific agricultural techniques."

The NRDC report disputed that assertion.

"Alternative agriculture is not a step backwards to older farming methods, but instead encompasses traditional conservation-minded farming techniques with modern innovations," the report said.

It added:

"Common practices included integrated pest management (IPM), biological control, crop rotations, cover crops, soil and water-conserving tillage practices, and genetic improvement of crops resistant to insect pests and disease."

With integrated pest management, a number of control measures are used, including the use of improved crop varieties, better timing for the application of pesticides and the use of more specific chemicals instead of those that destroy on a broad front.

The NRDC report said the Environmental Protection Agency recently estimated that 10 percent of the nation's community water wells and 4 percent of rural domestic wells contain at least one pesticide.

Vroom said the report overlooked an important EPA finding that "bacterial contamination from barnyard runoff and faulty septic systems poses the major threat to public health from drinking water."

As earlier studies and reports have done, the NRDC cited a number of barriers it said stand in the way of farmers turning wholeheartedly to methods embodied in alternative agriculture.

Perry taps group to examine bluetongue livestock disease

AUSTIN (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry has appointed a task force to study bluetongue as a result of a request by several countries importing Texas livestock to have the animals tested for the disease.

Bluetongue is a virus found in the south and southwest that is spread by biting insects to cattle, sheep and goats. It primarily affects the animals' reproductive ability.

"More than 600,000 head of Texas livestock were exported last year, and bluetongue could significantly alter these numbers," Perry said Tuesday.

The disease has blocked U.S. cattle, sheep, and goat exports for about 30 years to Australia and New Zealand, Perry said.

But TDA officials say other countries, such as Guatemala and Paraguay, are now asking that the bluetongue test be administered.

The task force appointed by Perry will determine the prevalence of the disease and whether a more reliable test is available.

"We do not want to sit back and let this become an even greater trade issue that shuts down the Texas livestock exporting industry," he said.

NOTICE OF CONSERVATORSHIP OF
BELL INDEMNITY COMPANY, INC.

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-0755, effective May 17, 1991, placing Bell Indemnity Company, Inc., Dallas, Texas, in a state of conservatorship. This company is a domestic insurance company authorized to write workers' compensation insurance in Texas, pursuant to Chapters 2 and 8 of the Texas Insurance Code. The company was an insurer exclusively for Wyatt's Cafeteria.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5, Texas Insurance Code, the company has requested and consented to the appointment of a conservator. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts will be directed to the orderly wind up of the affairs of the company for the protection of policyholders, creditors, and the public without the necessity of the appointment of a receiver, if possible.

Covered claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amount specified in Article 21.28-C, Texas Insurance Code. Provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Any outstanding claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Claimants will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, State Board of Insurance rules, Texas Workers' Compensation Commission rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-0755. If any action should be required in the future, claimants will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

Prices rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices moved moderately higher in very light trading Thursday as the market wound down before the Memorial Day weekend.

Analysts said many traders were adjusting their holdings in advance of the weekend, and many market players were expected to take Friday off.

The July contract for West Texas Intermediate rose 19 cents to $21.02 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract traded in a narrow range, falling only as low as $20.90 a barrel and climbing only to $21.08.

In natural gas trading, the July contract closed at $1.330 per 1,000 cubic feet, up from $1.320 late Wednesday. Gas futures set a volume record, reaching 3,229 contracts traded, up from the previous high of 2,720.

GTE cutbacks

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A merger between GTE Corp.'s Telephone Operations unit and Contel Corp. of Atlanta caused GTE's cutback of 4,900 employees, GTE spokesman Robert N. Brand said Wednesday.

GTE, based in this Dallas suburb, will reduce its workforce by 4 percent over the next three years.

The jobs will be cut by not filling positions when workers leave the company, Brand said.

The first job cuts will occur at Contel's headquarters, Brand said.

Dollar weakens

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar weakened Thursday against major foreign currencies in thin pre-holiday trading as dealers shrugged off the latest government report on durable goods.

Gold prices also declined.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $355.20 an ounce, down $1.10 from late Wednesday.

Currency dealers said technical factors, exaggerated by a thin trading environment before the Memorial Day holiday, were largely responsible for the dollar's decline.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.50 yen to close at 137.95 yen.

The dollar was weaker against the British pound compared with Wednesday. Sterling fetched $1.7345 in London, up from $1.7270.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late rates Wednesday, included: 1.71265 German marks, down from 1.7227; 1.4555 Swiss francs, down from 1.4602; 5.8185 French francs, down from 5.8455; 1,273.50 Italian lire, down from 1,279.00; and 1.14935 Canadian dollars, down from 1.14975.

Refuge drilling gains approval of energy panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Energy Committee approved a national energy blueprint Thursday that would allow drilling in a pristine Alaska wildlife refuge and ease the way toward building new nuclear power plants.

The package, expected to be vigorously debated on the Senate floor, was endorsed on a 17-3 vote after the panel narrowly approved the expanded Alaskan drilling.

The blueprint includes many of the measures pushed by President Bush in a national energy strategy announced earlier this year. Energy Secretary James Watkins called it "a very fine bill" that the administration could support.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., the committee chairman and the bill's chief architect, called it a "balanced and comprehensive" approach to reducing America's dependence on foreign oil through conservation measures and production incentives.

But some other senators, including Sen. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., said it falls short of what is needed to ease the country's reliance on foreign oil by failing to include steep increases in automobile fuel economy.

Environmentalists quickly denounced the legislation as focusing too much on production with too few measures to curb America's thirst for energy and attacked provisions opening Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) to drilling.

"This is the rape-and-pillage approach with nothing substantial on conservation," declared Sierra Club lobbyist Daniel Becker.

Supporters and opponents alike acknowledged that several controversial provisions, including the drilling and attempts to improve automobile fuel economy, will be decided on the Senate floor

The 264-page legislation also calls for:

—Streamlining the approval of nuclear power plants by allowing the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to establishing a "one-stop" licensing process covering construction and operating permits. Nuclear-power critics argued it would reduce the public's ability to scrutinize plant safety.

—Deregulating key parts of the electric utility industry so that independent power producers may play a larger role.

—Easing restrictions on the construction of natural gas pipelines to make the fuel more readily available as an alternative to oil.

—Expanding the use of alternatives to gasoline by requiring fleet operators in cities of more than 250,000 people to use alternative fuels such as compressed natural gas.

—Putting into law the ban on offshore drilling near California announced last year by the Bush administration. The panel rejected attempts to expand the ban to the southern Florida coast.

No indication has been given when the bill will be considered by the full Senate. Several other committees have indicated they want to examine parts of the legislation.

The House is in the early stages of considering energy legislation.

"I see a tremendous debate (before the full Senate) on ANWR," predicted Johnston, who managed to gain only a narrow margin of approval for drilling in the Alaska refuge when the panel rejected attempts to scuttle the provision by an 8-11 vote.

Another battle left unresolved in the committee's package is over proposed improvements in automobile fuel economy. Johnston failed twice to include specific fuel economy improvements for new cars.

House panel endorses most of bank proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration's sweeping plan to reorder the banking system cleared its first legislative hurdle Thursday with the unanimous endorsement of a House panel.

The House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions voted 36-0 to approve a bill that would, for the first time in nearly 60 years, permit banks to go into business with securities firms and insurance companies.

It would also, within three years, lift remaining restrictions to interstate banking, allowing a bank in New York, for instance, to open branch offices in California.

"It's a long process and this is the first step, but we're very pleased on balance with the way it's going," said Assistant Treasury Secretary Jay Powell.

Before Thursday's action, some legislators predicted battles among competing financial industry lobbyists would prevent the subcommittee from passing comprehensive legislation.

The bill, considered the broadest banking measure since Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, goes next to the full, 52-member House Banking Committee, which is expected to vote in June.

The committee will consider it with a separate bill already passed by the subcommittee that shores up the dwindling Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. with $25 billion in additional taxpayer-backed borrowing.

The bill also likely will be referred to the House Energy and Commerce Committee, whose members are less sympathetic to mixing banking with the securities and insurance businesses.

The administration is pressing for final congressional approval by mid-August.

AT&T is near agreement to lease its 35-story midtown Manhattan headquarters to Sony Corp., according to a published report Thursday. The proposed deal calls for a 20-year lease with an option for the Japanese consumer electronics giant to buy the 8-year old skyscraper, shown Thursday.

Sony lease report highlights problem for New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports that AT&T may lease its Manhattan headquarters to Sony Corp. show that while some big companies favor maintaining a major presence in the nation's business center, others think it's too expensive.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s interest in shopping its architectural gem has been the subject of speculation for months in the New York City real estate market.

AT&T hasn't said it would abandon New York as its headquarters city, but the bulk of its corporate staff already is located in suburban New Jersey.

Meanwhile, Sony, the Japanese consumer electronics giant, is looking for a headquarters to showcase its growing U.S. operations, which include Columbia Pictures and the former CBS Records, in addition to assembly plants.

Neither company would comment Thursday after The New York Times reported a deal was near, but AT&T spokesman Walter Murphy confirmed that AT&T may vacate its landmark headquarters building as part of any lease arrangement.

Previously, AT&T said it was trying to lease out all but two of the building's 35 floors. That would allow the company to keep its headquarters at the rose granite structure while reaping lucrative leasing fees.

Murphy said that in discussing leasing arrangements with prospective tenants the phone company discovered it probably would have to lease out the entire building to reach a deal.

The majority of the 1,200 employees at the building are sales and support staff for New York City customers. If AT&T leases the building, it would relocate them to other sites in the city, Murphy said.

Murphy said AT&T has held internal discussions on where its headquarters would be located if it moves out of the building, but reached no decision.

AT&T will not abandon its commitment to the city to keep in New York the employees now at the headquarters, he said. AT&T won $13 million in city tax breaks by putting up the building and agreeing to keep the workers in the city.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Management fees remain below half-percent

By Bill Doyle

Q. In response to a reader's question about mutual fund management fees, you wrote, "At most funds, it's about one-half of 1 percent (0.50 percent) annually."

Doyle

I enclose a financial magazine's tabulation of 200 taxable bond funds. You will see that 18 of the 200 (9 percent) have annual expenses of 55 basis points (0.55 percent) or lower. Take out three funds whose expenses are being temporarily subsidized and the traditionally low-expense Vanguard Funds and only eight of the remaining 190 make the 55 basis point cutoff. The annual expenses of all the other funds are higher.

I use 55 basis points because that is 10 percent above your "about one-half of 1 percent" figure. It is clear the qualifier "most" does not apply here and "a very select few" would be more appropriate.

Do you plan to respond to this evidence?

A. Have to, in order to show your "evidence" is faulty. The almost sad thing about this is that your letterhead discloses you are a securities broker. You don't know the difference between a mutual fund's management fee and its total expenses. Shame on you.

The column about which you gripe explained all mutual funds have management fees and added, "That's the biggest expense a fund incurs. It pays the people who run the fund."

Most mutual funds have additional expenses. The exceptions are the small number of funds where all expenses are paid out of the management fee.

I have a typical mutual fund's report to shareholders, open to the "statement of operations" page, in front of me. It shows, besides the management fee, which is almost exactly one-half of 1 percent, the fund's expenses include costs of shareholder servicing, fees for custodian, accounting, legal and audit work, prospectus and shareholder report printing, registration fees, trustee fees and that far-reaching term "miscellaneous."

Total annual expenses for that particular fund are just under nine-tenths of 1 percent of the fund's assets. That's known as the "expense ratio" and, at that level, it's reasonable.

You'll find the total expenses, investment performance record and sales charges, if any, on the first two inside pages of every mutual fund's prospectus, where the Securities and Exchange Commission insists those numbers appear.

Let's hope your customers read those statistics. As a broker, you surely are aware you are required to present the effective prospectus at or before the time you make a mutual fund sales effort.

Q. I have used money market mutual funds to get high yields. Recently, I invested in a "short-term global income fund," thinking it was the same. I was surprised to find that the share price does not stay at a flat $1.

Is this as safe as a regular money market mutual fund?

A. No, for the simple reason it is not — repeat, NOT — a money market mutual fund. Because the fund people invest in very short-term interest-paying securities — limiting the average maturity of their overall holdings to 120 days — money market mutual funds are permitted to use accounting techniques that keep their share values constant.

A global short-term income fund holds bonds with somewhat longer maturities issued in the United States and abroad. The value of your shares will rise or fall in line with the market prices of the bonds in the fund's portfolio. That's "market risk."

In return for taking that risk, you should expect the global income fund to pay higher dividends than money market mutual funds. You should also expect the value of your shares to increase, rather than staying unchanged in price. Note I wrote "expect." Things don't always work out that way.

Q. Our gin rummy group would like you to settle the argument. Do mutual funds pay interest or do they pay dividends?

A. Dividends. A mutual fund collects dividends from stocks it holds and interest from bonds and other debt securities it holds in its investment portfolio. Then, after deducting its operating expenses, the fund passes the rest of that money along to shareholders — as dividends.

Come January, the fund sends to each shareholder (and to the Internal Revenue Service) a Form 1099-DIV, for "dividend," listing the amount of his or her dividend. Mutual funds don't send out Forms 1099-INT, for "interest."

Freer U.S. trade with Mexico could boost sales of offal, processed meat, A&M says

Kiker

Freer trade with Mexico won't cause a stampede of livestock across the border, but U.S cattle feeders, meat packers and consumers might get moderate gains from such an agreement.

Livestock traditionally have been the main commodity traded between the United States and Mexico. In 1990, the United States bought $419 million worth of Mexican livestock and livestock products. Mexico in turn spent $643 million on U.S. livestock and livestock products that year.

But a new study by Texas A&M University's Agricultural Market Research Center says there is room for improvement.

"Potential gainers from freer trade include cattle feeders and meat packers who will export additional products to the Mexican market," said a report by Dr. C. Parr Rosson III, the center's assistant coordinator. "U.S. consumers will have access to a wider variety of products at a lower cost."

The assessment of the livestock and meat industry under a free trade agreement is one of 11 issue papers compiled by a team of agricultural economists at the center. The study, released last week, examined the impact of trade negotiations on major U.S. and Texas commodity and non-commodity topics.

U.S. trade talks with Mexico could begin in June if Congress grants "fast-track" negotiating authority, set to expire at the end of May, according to Dr. Gary Williams, the center's coordinator.

Since negotiations have not begun, no clear terms have been set forth. The Texas A&M study pinpoints issues that should be considered to best serve both nations.

Rosson said the biggest increase in U.S. livestock products exported to Mexico likely would be processed meats and edible offal.

Mexicans eat more beef than other meats, with a per capita consumption of 55 pounds in 1989, the most recent figure released. U.S. per capita beef consumption was 67 pounds in 1989.

Mexico also bought $63.4 million worth of U.S. edible offal in 1990 and $89.8 million in animal fats, oils and greases.

More U.S.-fed cattle could be shipped across the border if duties are lowered and Mexican demand for higher-quality meats increases, Rosson said.

Losing the most as a result of freer trade would be U.S. cow-calf producers, especially those in Texas, because 75 percent of Mexico's exported feeder cattle enter Texas. The United States imported 1.14 million head of feeder cattle from Mexico in 1990, which represent about one-third of the cattle on feed in the Texas Panhandle.

Rosson said that if the Mexican feeder cattle exports increase, U.S. feeder cattle would draw lower prices because of the additional numbers on the market. But cattle feeders in the United States would have more business.

Trade inbalance should be a key issue in the livestock negotiations, he said.

"Given the overall importance of this sector to the Mexican economy, it is not clear that a continuation of this situation (of trade imbalance) is in the best interests of developing a strong market for U.S. products there," Rosson said.

Other issues to address are investment reform, import competition, animal health and sanitary regulations, domestic agricultural and trade policies, the importance of the general economic conditions and the availability and accuracy of Mexican market information and data.

NRDC: Farmers could slash chemical use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers could reduce the use of some farm chemicals by as much as 80 percent without affecting productivity, a private study said Tuesday.

The Natural Resources Defense Council said its two-year research project showed pesticide use can be reduced in several ways, including rotating the crops planted each year and using selected "integrated pest-management" techniques.

Researchers concentrated on nine crops grown in California and Iowa, two of the nation's largest agricultural producers.

For example, it said 25 percent of the insecticide and 50 percent of the herbicide used to produce tomatoes in California could be eliminated if farmers used alternative methods.

In Iowa, researchers found that corn farmers could reduce insecticides by 80 percent and herbicides by 50 percent.

Jennifer Curtis, NRDC research specialist and principal author, said environmentalists have long contended that significant reductions of pesticide use are possible.

"Our study quantifies these pesticide reductions and verifies they can be achieved without threatening productivity or profitability," she said.

Although the report did not include comparative yield figures for the specific crops examined, another of the report's authors, Tom Kuhnle, said a review of the research showed the alternative methods generally had "negligible effect" on crop output.

The NRDC describes itself as a private, non-profit organization with more than 170,000 members "dedicated to protecting public health and the environment."

There have been several studies involving alternative agriculture in recent years. Environmental interests like the idea, while some scientists and farm groups say the problem is a lot more complex.

In 1989, the National Research Council's massive report on alternative agriculture cited case studies of farmers who were able to sustain crop yields without the indiscriminate use of chemicals.

But the 1989 study and similar reports have drawn criticism from within the scientific community as well as from some agricultural groups and the chemical industry itself.

The latest study drew immediate response from Jay J. Vroom, president of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association, who said the report "significantly overstates the potential adverse impacts of pesticide use on water quality and human health."

Further, he said, the study "proposes a return to old-fashioned, unscientific agricultural techniques."

The NRDC report disputed that assertion.

"Alternative agriculture is not a step backwards to older farming methods, but instead encompasses traditional conservation-minded farming techniques with modern innovations," the report said.

It added:

"Common practices included integrated pest management (IPM), biological control, crop rotations, cover crops, soil and water-conserving tillage practices, and genetic improvement of crops resistant to insect pests and disease."

With integrated pest management, a number of control measures are used, including the use of improved crop varieties, better timing for the application of pesticides and the use of more specific chemicals instead of those that destroy on a broad front.

The NRDC report said the Environmental Protection Agency recently estimated that 10 percent of the nation's community water wells and 4 percent of rural domestic wells contain at least one pesticide.

Vroom said the report overlooked an important EPA finding that "bacterial contamination from barnyard runoff and faulty septic systems poses the major threat to public health from drinking water."

As earlier studies and reports have done, the NRDC cited a number of barriers it said stand in the way of farmers turning wholeheartedly to methods embodied in alternative agriculture.

Perry taps group to examine bluetongue livestock disease

AUSTIN (AP) — State Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry has appointed a task force to study bluetongue as a result of a request by several countries importing Texas livestock to have the animals tested for the disease.

Bluetongue is a virus found in the south and southwest that is spread by biting insects to cattle, sheep and goats. It primarily affects the animals' reproductive ability.

"More than 600,000 head of Texas livestock were exported last year, and bluetongue could significantly alter these numbers," Perry said Tuesday.

The disease has blocked U.S. cattle, sheep, and goat exports for about 30 years to Australia and New Zealand, Perry said.

But TDA officials say other countries, such as Guatemala and Paraguay, are now asking that the bluetongue test be administered.

The task force appointed by Perry will determine the prevalence of the disease and whether a more reliable test is available.

"We do not want to sit back and let this become an even greater trade issue that shuts down the Texas livestock exporting industry," he said.

BELL INDEMNITY COMPANY, INC.

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-0755, effective May 17, 1991, placing Bell Indemnity Company, Inc., Dallas, Texas, in a state of conservatorship. This company is a domestic insurance company authorized to write workers' compensation insurance in Texas, pursuant to Chapters 2 and 8 of the Texas Insurance Code. The company was an insurer exclusively for Wyatt's Cafeteria.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5, Texas Insurance Code, the company has requested and consented to the appointment of a conservator. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts will be directed to the orderly wind up of the affairs of the company for the protection of policyholders, creditors, and the public without the necessity of the appointment of a receiver, if possible.

Covered claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amount specified in Article 21.28-C, Texas Insurance Code. Provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Any outstanding claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Claimants will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, State Board of Insurance rules, Texas Workers' Compensation Commission rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-0755. If any action should be required in the future, claimants will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

Prices rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices moved moderately higher in very light trading Thursday as the market wound down before the Memorial Day weekend.

Analysts said many traders were adjusting their holdings in advance of the weekend, and many market players were expected to take Friday off.

The July contract for West Texas Intermediate rose 19 cents to $21.02 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract traded in a narrow range, falling only as low as $20.90 a barrel and climbing only to $21.08.

In natural gas trading, the July contract closed at $1.330 per 1,000 cubic feet, up from $1.320 late Wednesday. Gas futures set a volume record, reaching 3,229 contracts traded, up from the previous high of 2,720.

GTE cutbacks

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A merger between GTE Corp.'s Telephone Operations unit and Contel Corp. of Atlanta caused GTE's cutback of 4,900 employees, GTE spokesman Robert N. Brand said Wednesday.

GTE, based in this Dallas suburb, will reduce its workforce by 4 percent over the next three years.

The jobs will be cut by not filling positions when workers leave the company, Brand said.

The first job cuts will occur at Contel's headquarters, Brand said.

Dollar weakens

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar weakened Thursday against major foreign currencies in thin pre-holiday trading as dealers shrugged off the latest government report on durable goods.

Gold prices also declined.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $355.20 an ounce, down $1.10 from late Wednesday.

Currency dealers said technical factors, exaggerated by a thin trading environment before the Memorial Day holiday, were largely responsible for the dollar's decline.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.50 yen to close at 137.95 yen.

The dollar was weaker against the British pound compared with Wednesday. Sterling fetched $1.7345 in London, up from $1.7270.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late rates Wednesday, included: 1.71265 German marks, down from 1.7227; 1.4555 Swiss francs, down from 1.4602; 5.8185 French francs, down from 5.8455; 1,273.50 Italian lire, down from 1,279.00; and 1.14935 Canadian dollars, down from 1.14975.

Refuge drilling gains approval of energy panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Energy Committee approved a national energy blueprint Thursday that would allow drilling in a pristine Alaska wildlife refuge and ease the way toward building new nuclear power plants.

The package, expected to be vigorously debated on the Senate floor, was endorsed on a 17-3 vote after the panel narrowly approved the expanded Alaskan drilling.

The blueprint includes many of the measures pushed by President Bush in a national energy strategy announced earlier this year. Energy Secretary James Watkins called it "a very fine bill" that the administration could support.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., the committee chairman and the bill's chief architect, called it a "balanced and comprehensive" approach to reducing America's dependence on foreign oil through conservation measures and production incentives.

But some other senators, including Sen. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., said it falls short of what is needed to ease the country's reliance on foreign oil by failing to include steep increases in automobile fuel economy.

Environmentalists quickly denounced the legislation as focusing too much on production with too few measures to curb America's thirst for energy and attacked provisions opening Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) to drilling.

"This is the rape-and-pillage approach with nothing substantial on conservation," declared Sierra Club lobbyist Daniel Becker.

Supporters and opponents alike acknowledged that several controversial provisions, including the drilling and attempts to improve automobile fuel economy, will be decided on the Senate floor.

The 264-page legislation also calls for:

—Streamlining the approval of nuclear power plants by allowing the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to establishing a "one-stop" licensing process covering construction and operating permits. Nuclear-power critics argued it would reduce the public's ability to scrutinize plant safety.

—Deregulating key parts of the electric utility industry so that independent power producers may play a larger role.

—Easing restrictions on the construction of natural gas pipelines to make the fuel more readily available as an alternative to oil.

—Expanding the use of alternatives to gasoline by requiring fleet operators in cities of more than 250,000 people to use alternative fuels such as compressed natural gas.

—Putting into law the ban on offshore drilling near California announced last year by the Bush administration. The panel rejected attempts to expand the ban to the southern Florida coast.

No indication has been given when the bill will be considered by the full Senate. Several other committees have indicated they want to examine parts of the legislation.

The House is in the early stages of considering energy legislation.

"I see a tremendous debate (before the full Senate) on ANWR," predicted Johnston, who managed to gain only a narrow margin of approval for drilling in the Alaska refuge when the panel rejected attempts to scuttle the provision by an 8-11 vote.

Another battle left unresolved in the committee's package is over proposed improvements in automobile fuel economy. Johnston failed twice to include specific fuel economy improvements for new cars.

House panel endorses most of bank proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration's sweeping plan to reorder the banking system cleared its first legislative hurdle Thursday with the unanimous endorsement of a House panel.

The House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions voted 36-0 to approve a bill that would, for the first time in nearly 60 years, permit banks to go into business with securities firms and insurance companies.

It would also, within three years, lift remaining restrictions to interstate banking, allowing a bank in New York, for instance, to open branch offices in California.

"It's a long process and this is the first step, but we're very pleased on balance with the way it's going," said Assistant Treasury Secretary Jay Powell.

Before Thursday's action, some legislators predicted battles among competing financial industry lobbyists would prevent the subcommittee from passing comprehensive legislation.

The bill, considered the broadest banking measure since Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, goes next to the full, 52-member House Banking Committee, which is expected to vote in June.

The committee will consider it with a separate bill already passed by the subcommittee that shores up the dwindling Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. with $25 billion in additional taxpayer-backed borrowing.

The bill also likely will be referred to the House Energy and Commerce Committee, whose members are less sympathetic to mixing banking with the securities and insurance businesses.

The administration is pressing for final congressional approval by mid-August.

AT&T is near agreement to lease its 35-story midtown Manhattan headquarters to Sony Corp., according to a published report Thursday. The proposed deal calls for a 20-year lease with an option for the Japanese consumer electronics giant to buy the 8-year old skyscraper, shown Thursday.

Sony lease report highlights problem for New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Reports that AT&T may lease its Manhattan headquarters to Sony Corp. show that while some big companies favor maintaining a major presence in the nation's business center, others think it's too expensive.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s interest in shopping its architectural gem has been the subject of speculation for months in the New York City real estate market.

AT&T hasn't said it would abandon New York as its headquarters city, but the bulk of its corporate staff already is located in suburban New Jersey.

Meanwhile, Sony, the Japanese consumer electronics giant, is looking for a headquarters to showcase its growing U.S. operations, which include Columbia Pictures and the former CBS Records, in addition to assembly plants.

Neither company would comment Thursday after The New York Times reported a deal was near, but AT&T spokesman Walter Murphy confirmed that AT&T may vacate its landmark headquarters building as part of any lease arrangement.

Previously, AT&T said it was trying to lease out all but two of the building's 35 floors. That would allow the company to keep its headquarters at the rose granite structure while reaping lucrative leasing fees.

Murphy said that in discussing leasing arrangements with prospective tenants the phone company discovered it probably would have to lease out the entire building to reach a deal.

The majority of the 1,200 employees at the building are sales and support staff for New York City customers. If AT&T leases the building, it would relocate them to other sites in the city, Murphy said.

Murphy said AT&T has held internal discussions on where its headquarters would be located if it moves out of the building, but reached no decision.

AT&T will not abandon its commitment to the city to keep in New York the employees now at the headquarters, he said. AT&T won $13 million in city tax breaks by putting up the building and agreeing to keep the workers in the city.

Management fees remain below half-percent

By Bill Doyle

Q. In response to a reader's question about mutual fund management fees, you wrote, "At most funds, it's about one-half of 1 percent (0.50 percent) annually."

Doyle

I enclose a financial magazine's tabulation of 200 taxable bond funds. You will see that 18 of the 200 (9 percent) have annual expenses of 55 basis points (0.55 percent) or lower. Take out three funds whose expenses are being temporarily subsidized and the traditionally low-expense Vanguard Funds and only eight of the remaining 190 make the 55 basis point cutoff. The annual expenses of all the other funds are higher.

I use 55 basis points because that is 10 percent above your "about one-half of 1 percent" figure. It is clear the qualifier "most" does not apply here and "a very select few" would be more appropriate.

Do you plan to respond to this evidence?

A. Have to, in order to show your "evidence" is faulty. The almost sad thing about this is that your letterhead discloses you are a securities broker. You don't know the difference between a mutual fund's management fee and its total expenses. Shame on you.

The column about which you gripe explained all mutual funds have management fees and added, "That's the biggest expense a fund incurs. It pays the people who run the fund."

Most mutual funds have additional expenses. The exceptions are the small number of funds where all expenses are paid out of the management fee.

I have a typical mutual fund's report to shareholders, open to the "statement of operations" page, in front of me. It shows, besides the management fee, which is almost exactly one-half of 1 percent, the fund's expenses include costs of shareholder servicing, fees for custodian, accounting, legal and audit work, prospectus and shareholder report printing, registration fees, trustee fees and that far-reaching term "miscellaneous."

Total annual expenses for that particular fund are just under nine-tenths of 1 percent of the fund's assets. That's known as the "expense ratio" and, at that level, it's reasonable.

You'll find the total expenses, investment performance record and sales charges, if any, on the first two inside pages of every mutual fund's prospectus, where the Securities and Exchange Commission insists those numbers appear.

Let's hope your customers read those statistics. As a broker, you surely are aware you are required to present the effective prospectus at or before the time you make a mutual fund sales effort.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today as traders looked for signs of life in the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 16.55 points to 2,893.78 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 638 up, 813 down and 524 unchanged.

The Commerce Department reported that new factory orders for durable goods increased 2.9 percent in April, recording their first gain in four months.

The figure, which came in a shade above analysts' estimates, was taken as tentative evidence that the worst of the recession might be past.

But economists also noted that orders for capital goods excluding defense items fell.

Separately, in a survey of its members taken in early May, the National Association of Business Economists found a majority view that the recession will bottom out in the current quarter.

Many worried bulls in the financial world have been hoping for signs of economic improvement to support the enthusiasm that carried the stock market sharply higher in the early stages of the year.

Losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, down ⅝ at 104; Exxon, down ⅝ at 58¾; Pepsico, down ½ at 32, and Boeing, down ¾ at 46.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.02 to 204.92. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .44 at 360.32.

Volume on the Big Board came to 129.76 million shares with two hours to go.

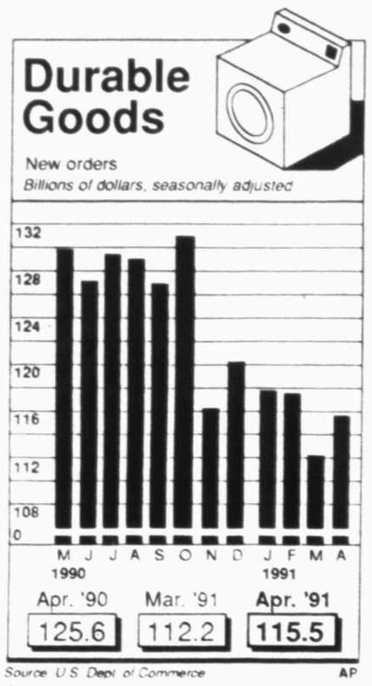
Report: 'Big ticket' orders show increase



WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for "big-ticket" manufactured goods advanced in April for the first time in four months, the government said Thursday in a report welcomed as a cardinal harbinger of economic recovery.

President Bush told a group of retailers he believes the recession is "bottoming out." And "there's an awful lot of economic forecasters that would agree with what I just said," he added.

Indeed, a new survey of the nation's top economic forecasters released on Thursday showed that nearly 75 percent of them believe the recession will be history within five weeks.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable goods — industrial products like aircraft, cars, computers and other items expected to last more than three years — rose 2.9 percent to a seasonally adjusted $115.5 billion, up from $112.2 billion in March.

Orders had not risen since a 3.5 percent advance last December. They dropped 2.0 percent in January, 0.2 percent in February and 4.5 percent in March. They tumbled 7.4 percent over the past year.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan had said earlier this week "the first sign" that the economy is turning around "will show up in the order books of major materials producers."

Another suggestion of economic improvement was the Labor Department's report on Thursday showing that new claims for unemployment benefits fell by 5,000 in early May to 454,000. Last March, claims had topped the half-million mark for three weeks in a row.

Laurence H. Meyer, head of a St. Louis forecasting firm, said the durable goods report was "is another piece of evidence ... that the recovery may be around the corner."

Richard D. Rippe, president of the National Association of Business Economists, agreed, saying it was "one more hint, along with a few other pieces of data, that the recession may be ending in the near future."

Rippe said the consensus of the 58 professional economic forecasters in his association's survey "was that the recession would end soon." In fact, 11 percent said it already had ended and another 60 percent said it would hit bottom in the quarter ending June 30.

At the same time, 93 percent of the forecasters said the recovery would be slower than average and Michael K. Evans, head of a Washington economic forecasting firm, said the slight decrease in unemployment benefit claims supports that forecast.

"We should have had a sharper fall," he said. "The fact that we didn't suggests that it's going to be a very anemic recovery."

Still, all categories in the durable goods report posted gains except transportation.

Excluding aircraft, non-defense capital goods orders — a barometer of industry plans to expand and modernize — rose 3.5 percent, the first advance since January.

Defense orders, which had fallen 14.1 percent in March, rebounded 9.4 percent jump, to $7.4 billion. But even excluding the spurt in that category, overall orders advanced 2.5 percent.

Orders for electronic and other electrical equipment shot up 11.0 percent, to $17.4 billion.

FAMILY MATTERS

Child worries that mother may drink too much

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My best friend's father had to go for treatment for alcoholism to (treatment facility). We are both sophomores and have been best friends since the fifth grade. We have both spent lots of nights at each other's houses. We had talked about her dad's drinking but it never seemed all that bad to me. When (friend) got back from family week at the hospital she told me that she thought that my mother was an alcoholic too!

May

At first it hurt my feelings but we've talked some more about it and maybe she's right. My mother may drink too much but she can usually fix our meals. How do you tell if someone in your family is an alcoholic? SCARED NOW

DEAR SCARED: There is no simple way to determine if someone is alcoholic. While there are several evaluation tools, none are foolproof. In his book, "A Gift To Myself," Charles Whitfield, M.D., offers a family drinking survey to help make that determination. Answer Yes or No to the following questions:

- Does someone in your family undergo personality changes when he or she drinks to excess?
- Do you feel that drinking is more important to this person that you are?
- Do you feel sorry for yourself and frequently indluge in self-pity because of what you feel alcohol is doing to your family?
- Has some family member's excessive drinking ruined special occasions?
- Do you find yourself covering up for the consequences of someone else's drinking?
- Have you ever felt guilty, apologetic or responsible for the drinking of a member of your family?
- Does one of your family member's use of alcohol cause fights and arguments?
- Have you ever tried to fight the drinker by joining in the drinking?
- Do the drinking habits of some family members make you feel depressed or angry?
- Is your family having financial difficulties because of drinking?
- Did you ever feel you had an unhappy home life because of the drinking of some members of your family?
- Have you ever tried to control the drinker's behavior by hiding the car keys, pouring liquor down the drain, etc?
- Do you find yourself distracted from your responsibilities because of this person's dirnking?
- Do you often worry about a family member's drinking?
- Are holidays more of a nightmare than a celebation because of a family member's drinking behavior?
- Are most of your drinking family member's friends heavy drinkers?
- Do you find it necessary to lie to employers, relatives or friends in order to hide your spouse's drinking?
- Do you find yourself responding differently to members of your family when they are using alcohol?
- Does some family member's use of alcohol make you fear for your own safety or the safety of other members of your family?
- Have you ever thought that one of your family members had a drinking problem?
- Have you ever lost sleep because of a family member's drinking?
- Have you ever encouraged one of your family members to stop or cut down on his or her drinking?
- Have you ever threatened to leave home or to leave a family member because or his or her drinking?
- Did a family member ever make promises that he or she did not keep because of drinking?
- Did you ever wish that you could talk to someone who could understand and help the alcohol-related problems of a family member?
- Have you ever felt sick, cried or had a "knot" in your stomach after worrying about a family member's drinking?
- Has a family member ever failed to remember what occurred during a drinking period?
- Does your family member avoid social situations where alcoholic beverages will not be served?
- Does your family member have periods of remorse after drinking occasions and apologize for his or her behavior?

If you answered Yes to any two of these questions, someone in your family may have a drinking problem. If you answer Yes to four or more of the questions, that's definite indication that someone in your family does have a drinking problem.

Addressing this issue in your family takes courage, which you are showing. If your mother may or does have a drinking problem, I encourage you to contact Alcoholics Anonymous (682-4721) for more information.

DEAR ABBY

Retiree is glum about being only friend of a self-centered bore

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am at the end of my rope. Actually, I am mad at myself because I just came home from another boring evening. I am a 74-year-old retired widower with time on my hands. I belong to a golf club where I hang out to kibitz with the card players.

Van Buren

A retired professional man about my age, also a widower, also kills time at the club. I felt sorry for him because he was always alone, so I started having lunch with him — then he suggested we have dinner together (Dutch), so I said OK. Now I can't get rid of him.

He is the most boring person I've ever met. He talks about himself, his investments, his assets, his this, his that, and no matter how hard I try to get off his favorite subject (himself), he manages to get back on it.

I can't get rid of this obnoxious guy. He sticks like glue, and doesn't have one other friend at the club. Everybody avoids him because he is so egotistical and boring.

If you can solve this problem, Abby, you are a genius. For obvious reasons, I can't sign my name or location. Sign me ... TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: You could do yourself and your boring friend an enormous favor if you sat him down and told him very frankly that he would not be so lonely if he made a few major changes in his personality.

Tell him that nobody wants to listen to a person who talks about nothing but himself and his assets. If he's all that well-heeled financially, he could benefit enormously from a few sessions with a psychologist. The truth may hurt, but it could also solve your problem.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I go to a restaurant, we are served such large portions that we either have to ask for a doggie bag to take home what we can't eat, or we leave it on our plates to be thrown out.

At times we have ordered only one meal and an extra plate so we can split the dinner. This isn't always convenient because we both don't always want to eat the same thing.

The few restaurants that offer "lighter fare" serve diet foods. Why can't these restaurant owners realize that all people don't eat like harvest hands? I sometimes wonder if they realize how much food is wasted.

How can we get the restaurant owners to offer only half-portions? I can't be the only person who hates to see food wasted. How about it, Abby? Any suggestions on how to get this problem corrected? — NOT THAT HUNGRY IN ORLANDO

DEAR NOT THAT HUNGRY: If you are suggesting that restaurateurs offer half the food at half the price, please read on: Restaurant owners could not survive on half the profit. Better leave things the way they are and give their customers doggie bags to tote home their leftovers.

DEAR ABBY: I am married, have two young children and am 4½ months pregnant. I also weigh 270 pounds. The problem (besides my weight) is that I can't find any maternity clothes to fit me! Are fat women not allowed to get pregnant? Do designers feel that fat women who become pregnant don't deserve maternity clothes?

What am I supposed to do for maternity clothes, Abby? Also, I'd love to name my baby Abigail after you, if it's a girl — but my husband won't let me. — UNCLOTHED AND PREGNANT

DEAR UNCLOTHED: Find a person who can make something for you to wear. A man or woman who sews professionally will be the answer to your prayers. Inquire at your local fabric shop if you don't know such a person.

Sorry your husband won't let you name your baby after me. Since "Abigail" was good enough for the Old Testament, it should be good enough for your husband.

CONFIDENTIAL TO NO GAMBLER IN LAS VEGAS: When it comes to birth control, the only method that's 100 percent effective is self-control.

Common sense not always sensible

DENVER (AP) — Investors who take a "common sense" approach to investments may be feeling the brunt of some common mistakes, some specialists say.

Many widely held generalizations about investing aren't merely misleading, but are just plain wrong, said Jim Kuttner, an investment planning specialist at the non-profit College for Financial Planning in Denver.

"These investment misconceptions are the products of folk wisdom — and many of them may not be wise," says Kuttner. "Many commonly held notions about investments need to be re-examined. Unfortunately, investors make decisions based on these fallacies every day."

Kuttner offers an analysis of seven myths of the investment world:

■ YOU CAN'T lose money on Government National Mortgage Association Securities.

Thought to be rock-solid investments because of the government guarantee of principal interest payments, GNMA securities aren't as fool-proof as most investors believe.

"The value of the GNMA security itself can go up and down," says Kuttner, depending on interest rate fluctuations and mortgage prepayments by the individual homeowners whose loans make up the GNMA pool. In this respect, they fluctuate much like a coupon bond."

While the monthly payment of principal and interest is guaranteed, the value of the pool can vary depending on market actions in response to economic events. Even though the value of a GNMA security declines over time due to the repayments of principal on the underlying mortgages, if the securities are sold their value may be even less than was expected. "That's where you can lose money," Kuttner says.

■ ONLY BUY zero coupon bonds if you plan to put them in an IRA.

Many investors hesitate to purchase zero coupon bonds because the interest is recognized and taxed as though it was received during the life of the bond.

"People think they should only buy zero coupon bond when they can shelter this 'unpaid' interest in an IRA," says Kuttner. "This is a fallacy, because there is absolutely no tax difference between how a zero works and how a stock mutual fund operates if your earnings are automatically reinvested. In both cases, the earnings are taxable, even though you didn't actually receive that money until you investment was redeemed."

■ THE DOW JONES Industrial Average in the best indicator of stock market health.

"The Dow Jones Industrial Average includes only 30 industrial stocks of the approximately 1,700 stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange," Kuttner says. He recommends keeping an eye on the Standard & Poor's 500, an index based on 500 stocks spread across the NYSE, the American Stock Exchange, and the over-the-counter market.

■ GOLD IS a good inflation hedge.

"Gold tends to track the rate of inflation, but it doesn't protect against the cumulative effect of inflation," says Kuttner, who offers an example. In the high inflation times of the late 1970s, gold prices skyrocketed to nearly $800 an ounce. When inflation rates pulled back to near zero in the 1980s, gold prices dropped through the floor. But costs that had been pushed higher by inflation — such as housing prices — stayed at their inflation-fed levels.

'These investment misconceptions are the products of folk wisdom — and many of them may not be wise. Many commonly held notions about investments need to be re-examined. Unfortunately, investors make decisions based on these fallacies every day.'

— Jim Kuttner
investment planning specialist

■ MOST MUTUAL funds beat the stock market.

In fact, only about 25 percent of all equity mutual funds outperform the market, Kuttner says.

"Mutual funds are still a sound way to invest, but people's perceptions of them may be too high," Kuttner says. Instead, investors should look at the fund's characteristics — be it balanced fund or an aggressive growth fund — before adopting expectations about its performance.

■ YOUNGER INVESTORS should take more risk because they have a longer "time horizon."

"This isn't always true," Kuttner says. "It depends on their underlying goals and needs."

"Younger investors may need their money to buy a house or send their kids to school themselves," Kuttner says. "Unless you're talking about investments for retirement, younger investors often must plan for goals that are, in fact, of a shorter-term nature and they shouldn't take the risks more suitable for long-term goals."

■ YOU'LL BE in a lower tax bracket when you retire.

Again, Kuttner says, the truth of this depends on your financial situation and the nature of your investments.

"Suppose you own income-producing property that you hope to sell upon retirement," he says. "It may produce little current income, while its capital appreciation is deferred until it is sold. When you convert this asset to cash and place the proceeds in bonds or CDs, suddenly this wealth is producing a significant amount of taxable current income. When something like this happens, your taxes may, in fact, go up during retirement."

Investment truisms, says Kuttner, often aren't true at all, and may mislead many investors. "Like everything else, investing takes research and experienced counsel, so that you are acting on real information — not just accepted generalizations."

Good skin care important for seniors too

By Dr. Henry F. Page

With the passage of time we age all over, but the one place you can actually see and feel it is the skin. For those among us who insist on remaining "young," life becomes a relentless battle — somewhat like King Canute trying to sweep out the ocean with a broom.

Page

How facinating it is to critically observe a highfalutin' stage or media star and note the thinning, dyed, receding hair; the codfish eyes and fixed, flat facial expression denoting repeated "lifts;" the neck and hand wrinkles, and alligator legs. The real old timers did better by pasting powder on their face a la Tammie Baker and putting sandpaper on their knees to make their skirts swish.

The aging skin becomes thinner, loses elasticity, blood supply and some sweat glands. Reduction in fat content results in folds, lines, wrinkles and a lax appearance. For these reasons, the immune system and wound healing is compromised, less vitamin D is manufactured causing fragile bones, and sensory perception becomes impaired. It is interesting that as hair recedes from the top of the head, it pops up in the nose, ears, and in some women, on the face.

The one important skin thing for those of us in West Texas is photoaging — chronic exposure to sunlight. Exposure to ultraviolet radiation accelerates age changes in the skin, which in fact explains the youngish appearance of old time Southern Belles with their wide-brimmed hats, flowing gowns and parasols.

It is vitally important to note that most skin cancers are photodistributed, being most common on the face, bald scalps, ears and neck.

Half of the population over 50 years of age have gray hair — an unappreciated statistic colored by hair rinses and dyes. At 70 years, substantially 80 percent of men are bald — another partially hidden fact. For example, an original Chinese rug actually proved to be Charlie Chan's hairpiece.

Dermatologists have developed considerable skill in treating aging skin problems, Minoxidil regrows wispy hair on 25 percent of bald areas. Tretinoin can partially reverse photoaging wrinkles as can Collegen injections and chemical peels. The use of these modalities demands careful, long-term professional guidance because of numerous possible complications and reactions.

Prevention — as in so many health situations — constitutes the best approach to photoaging, preferably commencing in the relatively young age group, but it is never too late to start. Avoid going outdoors when ultraviolet radiation is strongest at mid-day.

Sun screens can constitute part of your daily hygienic routine, but remember that they can block ultraviolet induced vitamin D formation. To offset this, be careful to consume dairy products or vitamin D supplements.

New Jersey report shows boarding homes in crisis

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Thousands of older residents of boarding and care homes live in "squalid, unhealthful and unsafe" conditions despite a decade of reform efforts, according to a state report.

The report, by Public Advocate Wilfredo Caraballo, urges that the state provide an extra $17 million to supplement residents' Supplemental Security Income benefits, and streamline its inspection system.

"Despite overwhelming evidence that our boarding home and residential-care system is seriously flawed and needs to be changed, virtually no action has taken place in the past 10 years," Caraballo said.

The system of investigating boarding home abuses, he said, "is a confusing and inefficient regulatory bureaucracy that performs overlapping and duplicative functions."

About 14,000 people live in regulated boarding homes and residential health-care facilities in New Jersey.

The report released earlier this month said most of the residents are elderly, half suffer from mental illness and an additional 20 percent have physical handicaps.

More than half rely on SSI as their sole source of income.

A spokeswman for Gov. Jim Florio, Emma Byrne, said more money would not be forthcoming.

"We understand there is a need to raise the SSI payments," she said. "Unfortunately, in the tight fiscal times we face, it's something we can't afford to do."

The report also said the state should relieve the Department of Health of the licensing and inspection responsibility of residential health-care facilities, which are akin to boarding homes except that they include a requirement that all residents receive at least 12 minutes of nursing care per week.

It suggested that the Department of Community Affairs, responsible for boarding homes, take over these duties.

Inmates grow fond of gardening

By Mark England
Associated Press writer

WACO — Doing time was a snap for the red-necked men hunched over picking rows of vibrant green peas in the garden at McLennan County's minimum security jail.

"I'm getting me a little tan," Jack Bartenstein said.

Time in the garden isn't like the days of working on a chain gang. Prisoners usually work from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. In return, the prisoners get more food, the freedom — during certain hours — to roam one wing of the jail on Highway 6, which gives them access to a Coke machine, a pay phone and a basketball court.

The men in the garden volunteer, according to the sheriff's department. It depends on your definition of volunteer.

"First, you have to get arrested," said one prisoner, who asked not to be identified.

How many prisoners are in the county's garden depends on whether it's harvest time or not. On Monday, 25 prisoners inched among the peas, beans, onions, lettuce and peppers, putting the bounty into buckets.

"They work pretty hard, considering they're doing it to kill time and get extra privileges," said Deputy Dean Bass.

Lt. Coy Jones said food produced at the garden goes to the county jail, the minimum-security jail, the Caritas charity and local half-way houses, among others. The garden saves the county money, Jones said, plus it satisfies the public's desire for prisoners to pay for their crimes.

"I think the public likes to see prisoners working," Jones said. "It's good PR. Also, it gives the prisoners something to do. You'd be surprised how many volunteer to work rather than stay cooped up. It keeps them busy and keeps their mind off why they're in here."

The garden was started in 1987. This year, the 12-acre garden has produced 6,730 pounds of vegetables, Bass said. On Monday alone, prisoners picked 578 pounds of zucchini. Last year, the garden produced about 23,000 pounds of vegetables.

Prisoners have different reasons for wanting to tend the garden.

"You take fresh air for granted until you get locked up," said Charles Colston.

"You get to look at the sky without wire being in the way," said a prisoner, who asked not to be identified.

"This way, we get to know where we're eating," Jack Bartenstein said.

Only two prisoners have tried to escape while working in the garden, Bass said. They ran along a nearby railroad track. For enjoying about 10 minutes of freedom, they had 10 years added to their sentences.

McLennan County minimum security jail inmates harvest pinto beans from the garden, which last year produced about 23,000 pounds of vegetables.

Bass, who grew up on a farm in Missouri, watches over the garden and the prisoners. He said most of the prisoners are eager but unskilled.

"A lot of these youngsters apparently haven't worked a day in their life," Bass said. "They don't know how to work. I have to go out in the field with them and show them how. Some of them wear out in a few minutes the first day."

Not all the prisoners are neophyte gardeners, though.

"It's not my first time in a garden," Bartenstein said. "My mom always had a garden, whether it was for flowers or plants. It's not that hard. Nature does all the work. We just do the picking."

Another prisoner said he, too, was familiar with gardening. He had to learn the hard way.

"It's not my first time," the man said. "Unfortunately, I've been out here before."

Troublemakers take mental odyssey

By Heidi Nolte Brown
Associated Press Writer

DINWIDDIE, Va. (AP) — A year ago, 15-year-old Chris Smith would have sooner punched you in the face than have somebody suggest he dress up like a flower and dance to the "Flight of the Bumblebee."

He spent more time in suspension than he did in class. So did most of his fellow students in Sharon B. Yates' alternative class at Dinwiddie Middle School.

Then teachers at the school got an idea: Take the students on an Odyssey of the Mind, a creative problem solving competition between schools around the world.

The contest was founded in 1978 by Samuel Micklus, a New Jersey college professor who wanted to make learning fun. Micklus said the competition challenges students to find imaginative solutions to problems. In the process, they learn about teamwork, risk-taking and how to think.

"I like to instill in kids an excitement in learning," he said in a recent telephone interview from Glassboro, N.J. "Students tend to do things the way they think the teachers want. They've been so ingrained to do exactly what they're told to do. But life isn't that way."

Teams of students choose one of six or seven creative problems dreamed up by Micklus each year. The teams spend months working on the problem, then pit their solutions against other teams at local, regional and state finals, leading to world finals.

The solutions are presented in skits and creativity of presentation is one of the things the judges look for. They are scored on the effectiveness of their problem-solving and on style.

About 12,000 participants from the United States, Hungary, China, Japan, Mexico, Poland, Canada and the Soviet Union will assemble Thursday for the three-day 1991 world finals in Knoxville, Tenn.

The IBM-sponsored program has spread from 28 New Jersey schools in 1978 to nearly 10,000 worldwide.

The Dinwiddie team was comprised of Smith; Damien Shands, 16; Mike Swanagan II, 16; Shawn Elder, 15; Telly Parham, 15, and Donnie Lewis, 14.

Their task was to design, construct and drive a lightweight, battery-powered vehicle — all for under $75. As part of their skit, the teenagers donned flower and bird costumes, sang "Flight of the Bumblebee" and drove their "lightning bug" vehicle all the way to the state finals in Blacksburg on April 27.

The team missed winning the event by two points, and didn't make it to the world finals in Knoxville.

"They all had their special problems," said Susan S. Nunemaker, guidance counselor and state director for Odyssey of the Mind. "They were children that, for one reason or another, school just wasn't real important to them. They would get in trouble."

Each of the Dinwiddie team members had repeated grades at least twice.

"The teachers knew we could do the work, but we just weren't putting our heads to it," Smith said. "I failed three years because of trouble."

Smith said he would have bristled a year ago at the suggestion he dress up as a flower.

"I would have fought them. I would have gotten mad," he said.

Last year, Smith served five in-school suspensions and three out-of-school suspensions, Mrs. Yates said. This year, he is on the honor role.

Smith's teammates also made strides.

"I was a troublemaker," Shands said. "Last year, I'd fight anybody. I didn't care. Then this year, once I got into the alternative education program. ... I looked at my friends and decided I had to switch some of them around."

310 General Help Wanted

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
