Instructress of Men

(By Ella W. Peattie.)

Madame Adams dominated Morris-town. She was the potentate—and the boast—of that arrogant and complacently provincial village.

Her dinners, her fetes, her anniversaries, furnished the standard of elegance and of formality for a community, which, but for this imposing example, might have been simply, merely sociable, and unconsciously democratic. She was an aristocratic patron of the church—the church being, of course, the Anglican—the founder of the young ladies' seminary which crowned the modest western hill beyond the town, and the owner of more, more, more than her share of good town properties. As the feudal lady looked after manors, fields and vassals, this chatelaine of the modern time looked after her shares in surface transportation, in the waterworks system, in the village bonds, the several business blocks and the rows of sanitary cottages. Nor did her interest end with material things. She was the friend of the health department, she had a civic interest, and she was the most obliging of neighbors. Nevertheless, she was not democratic. She expected all persons to approach her with respect, and, when she was most kind, she revealed a hint of patronage.

From time to time, Madame Adams had relieved the elegant solitude of her domicile by the introduction into it of a charming protege. First, her sister's child had come to live with her, had been married in her house, and had gone her way. Then had followed the reign of two vivacious Canadians, sisters, and the daughters of a deceased school friend. One had gone to her grave, the other to her bridal chamber.

A pale, French girl, the child of some melancholy and mysterious tragedy, had then found shelter with this benevolent patroness. It was said that Madame had not known her, but had heard of her sad story, and offered her hospitality as one gentlemanman to another. Eventually, this girl had gone to a convent.

Then came a commonplace, merry, freckled grandniece, who skated and flirted and danced, and who ran away, finally—and no harm meant—with a genial, bright and quite plebeian son of a school principal. This offended Madame Adams deeply, and for several years she lived alone. Then, quite ceremoniously, she announced to all callers that she was presently to receive under her roof Miss Danglefield, of Maryland, a kinswoman. She did not confide in her listeners the precise relationship of Miss Danglefield, though not a little curiosity was felt upon that point. It had not been known that Madame Adams had Southern relatives.

Miss Danglefield arrived at midnight, and was taken out to the Aspens in a driving rain. For three days the roads were soaked, and even the most neighborly or curious refrained from venturing along the two-mile drive that led through groves and meadows to Madame Adams' home. Then, before they were able to demonstrate their sociability, cards came for a garden fete. The old patroness was bent, evidently, upon introducing her protege to her neighbors in a proper manner.

"I wonder how long before we'll be invited to another wedding at the Aspens," said the ladies. They had faith in the generosity of Madame Adams, and they looked with mingled apprehension and expectation at their sons.

ed to niceties, nor to playing the elegant for the delectation of ladies. True, he had had his incipient love episodes with girl neighbors before he went away to college, and his more alloussed flirtations while there, and he had returned with the consciousness that he felt biased. It was a feeling for which he made no apology to himself. He looked upon women as trivial incidents in the life of man; but, along with all this folly, he had some sense. He had come home with the intention of learning the details of business in his father's factory. He meant to be a good son, an excellent business man, and, eventually, a pillar of society. In the meantime, he was diverting himself in his own way, and, for several years past, his diversion had been, as he was pleased to term it, a "sporty" nature. However, he had condescended to drive out to Madame Adams' tea. It always gave one a feeling of sophistication to call at the Adams mansion, and Dick liked a feeling of that sort.

"She's thirty," one of the fellows warned him, as he went to receive his presentation to Miss Danglefield. "Eleven help us!" said Dick, absently, and went on.

He always made elaborate court to Madame Adams, for he was still enough of a boy to like the old anecdote of think well of him. Today, he kissed her fingers, and she presented him, with a great deal of embarrassment, to Miss Danglefield.

The latter looked at him languidly out a pair of blue-green eyes. She extended a long, slender hand for his grasp, and her tall, slight figure, draped in violet, gave the impression of elegance and refinement, of the art that concealed art, and of an intelligence that masked strength. She said something polite and trifling, in a tone which flattered Dick's self-esteem. She evidently regarded him as a young man of experience and of thought. He came to speak with her from time to time, and she asked him his ideas about various things. He could not remember that any one had previously solicited his opinion.

"You must tell me who these people are," she said to him once, when he approached her. "That young girl there, with the brown hair and the large eyes—who is she?" She looks very—mildly.

"Miss Nelson," she said, engaged to be married to Reginald Fayden. He's over there, chinning with the fortune teller. Reggie went up to live with me, and we kept together for better or for worse—it was for worse for Reggie—through the whole four years. Reggie's much brighter than I am."

"He's outstripped you—in matters of sentiment?" she said, laughing lightly. She put up her lips and looked at Reggie and his sweethearts.

"They are quite charming," she said, with a little sigh. "Are you serious?"

"Envious?" repeated Dick blankly.

"No," said Dick, stoutly, but with some embarrassment. "I haven't time for that sort of thing just now."

Miss Danglefield regarded him quietly and closely. Dick felt her gaze resting as it rested, with a sort of compassion on him.

"I dare say you will know a great deal more about that sort of thing some time than your friend Reggie," she said. "There was a peculiar significance in her words. Dick had not the faintest notion of recognizing her statement. He was surprised that she should see in his faces any indications of emotional depths, but still it would be difficult to gain any appreciation of hers."

"I hope you are not going to like the Aspens so well that you will turn your back on society," he said, making a tremendous conversational effort, as he came to speak his adieu.

"Does it seem so?" she asked, waving her hand to indicate the growth of society. "Dick's any better practically her and improve all the town to be good to me?"

"But she did not say it quite as she meant it. There was a light and a shadow in her tone."

"I'd like to ask you to be good to me," Dick said. "I'd like to ask you to let me call."

"Afternoon is better than evening, for we are away down this long, dark road. Come and have a cup of tea with us tomorrow. May not be so good to drink tea with us tomorrow, aunt?"

"Is she really your aunt?" asked Dick, after the engagement had been made.

"I have never been able to discover just how we are related," laughed Miss Danglefield; "but it doesn't matter. Perhaps we're each other better for not knowing."

Madame Adams took the young woman's hand in hers with that excess of department which characterized her acts.

"She called me aunt," she said, smiling at the departing guests, "but really I should like to consider her as my daughter."

The company looked embarrassed, or interested, sympathetic, or annoyed, at this imposing manner, according to their diverse temperaments; but Miss Danglefield still smiled with her benevolent stillness.

"That is a woman," said Dick DeLand, as he drove off, "who could lead a man to hell!" He was very young and had no account to his first suspicion of an emotional nature in himself. It was not surprising that he developed a melancholy eloquence. "She has had her experience, too, one can see that. Perhaps she has outlived them, or—"

His thoughts became confused. But one thing was definite and clear—the want to call the following afternoon.

SAID TO HAVE CARRIED A GUN WHILE IN WHITE HOUSE.

When President He was on the alert for Any Possible Assault by an Assassin, Having Been Found a Lesson by the Killing of McKinley, Wife's Fears Have Been Realized.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 21.—Colonel Roosevelt, while he was president, was always on the alert for any possible assault by an assassin. The lesson of President McKinley's death was regarded by Colonel Roosevelt as having a peculiar and particular application to himself and he protected himself accordingly.

Shortly after he succeeded Mr. McKinley, Colonel Roosevelt correspondents to discuss with them the matter of covering important points affecting the White House. In their conversation, reference was made to McKinley's assassination, and Colonel Roosevelt made this remark concerning the assassin Czolozar:

"I'll bet he wouldn't have shot me twice."

Sometimes Showed Weapon.

The inference from the remarks taken in connection with other remarks made by Colonel Roosevelt, was that he would have returned an assassin's bullet. It was plain from what he said then that he went armed constantly and presumably made it a practice previously to carry a revolver.

That Colonel Roosevelt during his seven and a half years as president never went on the streets without a revolver in his pocket was shown by incidents known to several of those who saw him frequently. On numerous occasions Colonel Roosevelt while president exposed the revolver unconsciously.

When Senator Root, then secretary of state, was retiring from the cabinet, Colonel Roosevelt walked from the White House to Mr. Root's residence with a revolver exposed in his hip pocket.

Show He Protected Himself.

When the corner stone of the Masonic Temple in Washington was laid by Colonel Roosevelt, the revolver in his pocket was inadvertently in sight during the ceremonies.

Incidents like these occurred frequently during his seven years in the White House, showing that Colonel Roosevelt lived up to his original determination to be prepared to protect himself.

Wife in Constant Dread.

New York, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt was attending a musical comedy at a Broadway theater at the time the attempt was made to kill her husband in Milwaukee. The news was broken to her as she sat in a box with a party of friends.

It is feared that the announcement of the attempted assassination might be made from the stage and be an unnecessary tragedy. I have seen the wife of George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the national progressive party, who was among the first to receive the news, had sent a messenger to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Although assurances were given in the first dispatch that the Colonel had not been seriously wounded, Mrs. Roosevelt was alarmed and immediately left the theater, driving to the headquarters of the national progressive party.

Alarmed by Late Reports.

There she awaited further details from Milwaukee. She was considerably relieved by the early bulletins reporting that the Colonel had been so slightly wounded that he was able to proceed with his speech.

She was more than later, however, when the wires told of the removal of the Colonel to a hospital and doubt among his physicians as to the seriousness of the wound. As to how Mrs. Roosevelt received the news, Mr. Perkins only said:

"Just as such a strong woman as Mrs. Roosevelt would receive it."

"RATTLE SEASON" IS UNUSUALLY PRODUCTIVE.

Among the Strange Stories Is That of an Arizona Miner Who Has Been Cured of Sleeplessness by Wound From Fangs of Rattlesnake-Gila Monster Is Victor in Death Duel.

Dalhart, Tex., Oct. 21.—The 1912 "rattlesnake season" has had the family productivity of fatalities and unusual stories. No accurate records are obtainable of deaths due to rattlesnake bites, but it is believed that more than fifty persons have died from this cause in the Texas Panhandle, New Mexico and Arizona this year. Several have recovered.

One of the strangest stories comes from Flagstaff, Ariz., where John Gustafson, a miner, has not only recovered from a rattlesnake bite in the palm of his hand, but has been materially benefited in health. For five years Gustafson had been a victim of insomnia, but since he was bitten by the usually deadly snake he has slept soundly from eight to ten hours a day. He accounts for this on the theory that the snake poison acted as a serum against the poison that was deranging his nervous system.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Nelson of Jerome Junction, Texas, tell of the family cat being bitten on the jaw by a rattler and escaping under the house, where she remained until she recovered from the wound. Members of the family saw the cat, but her head was greatly swollen. After recovery the cat was seen hunting among the prairie dog dens where she was attacked and later she appeared at the house dragging a rattler. The cat destroyed the last vestige of serpentine life while her kittens looked on. Samuel Dunlap says that he was bitten on the hand by a rattler when he was sleeping soundly from eight to ten hours a day. He accounts for this on the theory that the snake poison acted as a serum against the poison that was deranging his nervous system.

DEATH A RESULT OF HIS SELF-SACRIFICE

Skin Grafting Operation Saves Young Woman's Life, But Is Fatal to Man.

Gary, Ind., Oct. 21.—"I guess I turned out to be some good after all," sighed Bill Rugh, this morning. Then he turned his face to the wall and died.

It was Rugh who, a few days ago, submitted to the removal of a withered leg that material might be provided for a skin grafting operation that saved the life of a young woman he never had seen.

Physicians said pneumonia was the cause of Rugh's death, but the ailment resulted directly from his self-sacrifice, due to irritation of the lungs caused by ether administered when his leg was cut off.

Rugh had no relatives and, since coming to Gary, a tramp, several years ago, had made his living selling newspapers on the streets of Gary. The girl, Miss Ethel Smith, for whom he sacrificed his leg and later his life, had been horribly burned in a motorcycle accident. It is just two days since her recovery advanced sufficiently to permit her removal from the hospital in which Rugh died.

A FARMER'S GREAT NERVE

Takes Severed Hand to Doctor After Hour's Trip.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Oct. 21.—Ray Morgan, a young farmer, after cutting off his right hand cutting an engine, tied a handkerchief around the wrist and wrapping up the hand that had been completely severed, brought it to Muskogee to see if it could not be adjusted to the wrist and saved. The accident occurred at Keeton, a small town near here, and young Morgan waited some time for a train and reached Muskogee an hour later. He walked from the depot to a doctor's office. He was taken to the Muskogee hospital and some of the crushed bones adjoining the wrist joint were removed.

INSANE; SLEEP CURES HER

Papers for Her Admission to Hospital Had Arrived.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Myrtle Douthett was declared insane by a physician Friday and ordered to the state asylum. She was kept here awaiting the arrival of papers for her admission to the hospital. She went to sleep Friday night and did not awaken until Monday afternoon. When she awoke her mind was clear and she did not recall anything she had done during the previous week when she was adjudged insane.

When the hearing was held the physician advised Judge Osborn to rush the woman to the State hospital as soon as possible, as they thought a short treatment would cure her. The papers for her admission had arrived when she again became sane.

TOMBSTONE CAUSES RAGE

Town Which Objects to Epitaph May Be Helpless.

MORRISVILLE, Va., Oct. 21.—Protests are being made by residents of Morrisville against the shaft at the head of the grave of Samuel McCracken, because the inscription reads: "If politicians and priests all go to heaven, I am bound to stop at some other station."

McCracken died in 1862 and made a contract with the cemetery owners that his tombstone should never be disturbed. A legal way to remove the shaft is being sought, because its inscription is considered sacrilegious.

WHITE HAT A SMOKE GUAGE

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 14.—If Paul McMichael, city inspector, can't abolish city smoke he can at least defuse it, as Atax did the lightning. And defuse it he does in the most picturesque manner.

The official whose special province it is to inspect the big chimneys and other smoke producers is actually going about wearing a snow white hat. The cleaner his hat is the nearer Atlanta is to a solution of the problem. But, needless to say, the hat is pretty well of color before the day's work is done.

KANSAS TOWN RENO'S RIVAL

One Divorce for Every Two Marriages in Topeka.
 Topeka, Kan., Oct. 21.—Topeka would not be known as "divorce city" if there has been one divorce for every two marriages in the last three months. Statistics for the last year show that throughout the state and the country the ratio is one divorce to each eight or nine marriages. In July, August and September, eighty-eight divorces had been asked for in the Topeka courts and in the same period there were 199 marriages.

LIGHTNING PLAYS PRANK ON SHIP

BOLT HITS MAST AND SHATTERS SKIPPER'S PIPE.

Man at the Wheel Is Hurled to Deck. Unconscious, Gold Cross Is Burned on His Chest and Every Hair on the Freightler's Cat Stands Erect. Iron Ore Blamed for the Freak.

New York, Oct. 21.—The freight ship Dinsdalehall has arrived from Huelva, Spain, with a cargo of iron ore and a tale of an electric storm which played weird pranks on members of the crew and shattered the foremast of the vessel.

The Dinsdalehall left Huelva on September 15. Her hold filled to the hatches with pyrites. She was commanded by Captain Clark and manned by a crew of thirty-five men. For nearly two weeks the weather held good and all was serene. But one night the sky suddenly became overcast and the distant roll of thunder was heard.

The storm broke with a bombardment of hail. The upper decks were soon covered with hailstones as large as hickory nuts which descended with such force that the men were driven to shelter. The ship, laden with metal seemed to be the storm's center of attraction. The lightning played particularly close to her, and the roar of the thunder was deafening.

Steers by Guesswork.
 The man at the wheel had to steer by guesswork for the most of the compass was spinning first one way and then the other in a startling and bewildering manner.

The storm's height at midnight. Captain Clark was on the bridge, anxiously watching, with his pipe clinched between his teeth. There was a blinding flash which was almost simultaneous with a cracking sound followed by a roar like the booming of a great cannon. The vessel trembled under the shock and the foremast fell to the deck with a crash.

Captain Clark said that for several minutes after the ship was struck he was stunned and could not move. His pipe, he said, had been knocked from his mouth, and he found later that his watch had stopped, and the balls in the head of fire as big as he melted. Except for the temporary shocks he himself was uninjured.

Cross Burned on His Chest.
 The man at the wheel found something worse. He was hurled violently to the deck and did not regain consciousness for several hours. He said he could remember nothing but a blinding flash of light. He wore a gold cross hung on a chain about his neck and this was shrouded in his hair. The marks did not disappear for several days.

The cook, who had covered in the gallery during the storm, swore that he had seen a ball of fire as big as an orange jump out of the stove and explode in the air. It was noticed later that every hair on the ship's cat was standing on end. The telltale herself was in a perfectly peaceable mood.

The Dinsdalehall proceeded to Erie Basin for repairs. About twenty feet of her foremast was missing and the stump was blackened as if by fire. Her crew thinks that her cargo, which was apparently not affected, was responsible for her being struck by lightning.

WHO IS WHO IN THIS FAMILY, ANYWAY

Hardie's Sister Is the Second Wife of His Brother's Father, and—Oh, Fshaw!
 Miss L. L. Oct. 21.—Harold A. Leek, son of Joseph Leek, and Miss Smith, daughter of Ezzert Z. Smith, were married at the Smith home in Isip Thursday night in local Presbyterian church. After a short wedding tour, the young couple will live in Isip.

Now, as the first step toward explaining the little tangle this marriage has caused, let it be known that the bride is the daughter of Mr. Smith by his first marriage. His second marriage was with a daughter of Joseph Leek, who is the father of the bride's father-in-law. Therefore, Smith's bride is the present bridegroom's sister. Therefore, the bridegroom's father-in-law is also his brother-in-law. The bridegroom is a stepson to the bride, who naturally is the bridegroom's step-sister.

The bride's father-in-law is her own father's father-in-law. The bride's step-mother is her sister-in-law. The bride's sister-in-law being the wife of her father, her father is her brother-in-law. Her father-in-law is her step-grandfather.

BEAR BOXES LOCOMOTIVE

Lands Just One Punch and Is Ready for Coroner.
 Salamanca, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Standing in the middle of the Pennsylvania railroad tracks on the Salamanca division, near Salamanca, a big black bear struck at the boiler head of an onrushing freight locomotive. The bear's aim was to get money to watch the battle between the forest fighter and the iron horse would have been disappointed. The combat didn't last one three-minute round. In fact, the bear's one punch was the only real thrill. The locomotive countered swiftly in the solar plexus and in other sections of the bear's anatomy and he was sent down the railroad embankment, his head sliced off at the shoulders. The conductor, acting as referee, declared the fight out. The bear weighed 300 pounds.

WANTED—27 loads of wood on subscription.—CITIZEN

If you want to buy, sell or trade anything in real estate see M. S. Nichols at Citizen Office He may have just what you want

The other day a man happened to stroll into a store where they don't advertise, and was looking around among the relics of ancient days stored there, when he found a man who was wanted on a charge of murder, and who had remained safely hidden there for years.

Do you know that an editor or a reporter for a newspaper can in his rounds stop and ask a hundred persons, "What is the news?" And ninety out of the hundred will reply, "Nothing special" and yet fits out of number know something that if not found in the next paper will astonish them greatly and disappoint them more and perhaps make them madder than hermits. Don't be afraid to let the newspaper man know it.

The annual value of poultry and eggs sold is more than that of the silver, gold and pig iron produced. There is millions of money in poultry and eggs, and but small capital required. The annual imports of eggs in England approximate 100,000,000 dozen, and into the United States 17,000,000 dozen a year. Here is an industry in which the demand is greater than our home supply. Look well to the poultry, and they will assist you to find the "golden egg."

The schoolma'am is the guiding star of the republic. She takes the little bending fresh from the home nest, full of his pouts, his pets and his passions, ungovernable in many cases, a rampant, riotous little wretch whose own mother often admits she sends him to school purposely to get rid of him. The schoolma'am takes a whole carload of these little anarchists, half of whom singly and alone cannot be handled by their own mothers, and she puts them in the way of becoming useful citizens.

A father—not a millionaire—left at his death a number of children and a certain sum to be divided among them as follows: The eldest to receive $100 and one tenth of the remainder; the second child $200 and one tenth of what then remained; and so on each child to receive $100 more than the one immediately preceding, and then one tenth part of that which still remained. When the division took place it was found that all the children received the same amount. How many children were there, and what sum did each receive?

A good country road is always to be desired and is a source of comfort and convenience to every traveler. Good roads attract population, as well as good schools and churches. Good roads improve the value of property, so that it is said that a farm lying ten miles from market, connected by a bad road is of less value than an equally good farm lying ten miles away from market connected by a good road. A larger load can be drawn by one horse over a good road than by two over a bad one. Good roads encourage the greater exchange of products and commodities between one section and another.

Almost a Miracle

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Texas, was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all of our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for coughs and colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottle free at J. A. Heyman's.

LET ME SHOW YOU HOW TO DO AWAY WITH THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

Will you trade a few minutes of your time for some good hard American dollars?

If you will, we'll tell you how. Some of your neighbors are supplying their table from my store.

Look at my goods, compare prices, and you will find that you not only get the best, but save money at my store.

Largely due to waste is the high cost of living. My policy is large volume, small profits and elimination of waste.

How can you complain of hard times and high costs and never look around and make comparisons?

Are you willing to compare prices and quality in buying your supplies? If so we can trade some.

Nothing worries you more than the high cost of living. I can help you reduce it. See me about it.

Keep your eye on this space for bargains for cash. If you want to reduce expenses, give me your orders.

I make a large difference in prices on cash orders. Our prices I drop with the market—net a month later.

Nowhere else will be found more of real value for every dollar expended than at my store. QUALITY TELLS.

So if you want to reduce the high cost of living, come around and let me talk the matter over with you.

Little Mary Lily Mudge, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Mudge. Born October 20, 1910, died October 15, 1912, after two weeks severe illness.

"Ah, Oh, when away, may we be so blest, And sink like the innocent child to rest, And feel ourselves clasped to the Infinite breast."

This beautiful baby life was so precious, so fraught with blessing to her parents that she seemed a flower of a brief season permitted to bloom for a brief season by their side, then recalled to its native skies, leaving the earth road for them dark and lonely indeed.

Death came with friendly care. The opening bud to heaven conveyed, And bade it blossom there.

IN PRISON GARB, GOES TO HIS SON'S FUNERAL

Man Serving Life Term Is Permitted to Go Home for a Day Without Guard.

Wesson, Miss., Oct. 21.—Garbed in prison costume and without guard, Tom G. Wallace, serving a life sentence in the state penitentiary, was allowed to come to attend the funeral of his son, Fred, 19 years old, killed by a logging train at Natabany, La.

Wallace was marshal of Wesson for two years and was re-elected August, 1910, to serve for the years 1911 and 1912, but on October 8, 1910, he shot and killed a Robert Price of this city, on the main street. He was tried in the Copiah county circuit court, convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

It is said a petition will soon be presented asking for his pardon.

The liberty allowed Wallace had never before been given a prisoner in the state penitentiary.

FLOWERS BY ELECTRICITY

100,000 Volt Machine at Electrical Show Works Miracles Among Plants in Greenhouse.

That the use of electricity for stimulating plant growth is more than an idle fad has been proven by no less an authority than the United States Department of Agriculture. A complete demonstration of the department's experiments in one of the fascinating and novel features of the electrical show in the Grand Central palace—the most "unusual" show, probably, which New York has ever seen.

Inside a greenhouse built especially for the occasion, an electrical machine stimulates the growth of many varieties of beautiful flowering plants in most extraordinary fashion. A current of 100,000 volts is passed through a mesh screen and its rapid action as traced in the development of the flowers savor of magic. The blossoms are unusually large and richly colored, and even their fragrance seems intensified.

The contrast is made all the more evident by comparison with an ordinary flower bed on the other side of the greenhouse, which has received only the usual stimulation of the hoe and the watering pot. It looks almost faded beside the electrically treated plants.

CAN'T KILL THIS DOG

Falls Into Well and Explosion Lets Him Out in Time to Meet Sad Owner at Home.

CHICO, Cal., Oct. 21.—"A dog's life might not be so bad, after all," meditated William Meek, as he dodged the muddy carcass of a valuable hunting dog that had just rescued himself from a seventy-five foot well.

When the dog fell into the abandoned well, Meek desisted of rescuing him, so he threw three sticks of dynamite down the shaft to end his misery. When the noise of the explosion died away, the dog was still whining and sniffing around the walls. Meek started home for a run. As he approached the house, the dog ran out to meet him. Investigation showed that the dynamite had opened up an old tunnel running into the well, and the dog had escaped with the rush of water.

SULLIVAN, OLD SLAGGER, DOES FINE AS FARMER

Ex-Prizefighter Produces Some of Best Crops of Section at His First Attempt.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 21.—To the wonder and envy of his neighbors, John L. Sullivan, famous old prizefighter, who followed the bright lights in the large cities for years, has shown what a man in his first year's experience can do with Nature by producing some of the prize crops of this section.

"Although this is the first year I have done any planting on my farm," the ex-champion said, "this is the second summer I have lived here. I knew last summer if I was to get anything worth while from my farm in the future that must nourish the soil. To that end I bought on it tons and tons of fertilizer and plowed it in thoroughly. During the winter and the spring the earth was getting something to eat, as we might call it, and was ready to do work for which it is intended.

"I am back to Mother Earth for keeps and hope to spend the rest of my days on this place. No more bohemia life with its bright lights. You can bet your last dollar on that."

San Antonio Prospers

From Christian Science Monitor, Boston, Mass., Oct. 3, 1912

Thriving City of Southwest Texas Has Good and Growing Transportation Facilities—Irrigation.

San Antonio, Tex.—Miles along the southern route between the big cities of the north and the Pacific coast, the city of San Antonio, metropolis of the state of Texas, is becoming more and more popular each year as a mecca for winter tourists. Time was, not so many years ago, when San Antonio was on the edge of a frontier, a border trading post, way apart from commercial and most from modern life. It was reached only by stages and ox wags, the latter bringing freight from the coast, about 160 miles distant to be distributed in like manner throughout many miles of country, the north, northwest and west, a country dotted with ranches and devoted to live stock raising.

But the San Antonio of today is very different. While it retains its color and its Spanish savoring of the Latin and old-world customs and architecture, with modern improvements and convenient added, it is now a people of progressive and progressive citizens. It is a busy mart of trade and a people say, soon will become a railroad center of Texas. It is active and its resources are being developed. The people are active and today's development and plans are made for immediate execution to be deferred until some future convenient season.

Characteristics.—San Antonio is sited in southwestern Texas, about 150 miles from the border of Mexico and about 100 miles from the Gulf of Mexico. Its elevation above the sea level is 651 feet above this level and the heights about it 768 feet. It is just at the base of the Edwards plateau, which extends down to the sea. To the north and northwest the slope is rapid to the top of the plateau, which rises from the city where the altitude is about 2900 feet. Above the city, the waves break the shore about where the house of the some force drops the sea back and from the depth appeared the land which for many years was hunting ground of the wild deer and the range for its herds of cattle. This land has been found to be unusually fertile and now seems destined to become the garden spot of this great country.

San Antonio's historic interest to the tourist's mission, erected about two centuries ago, are for the most part well as in a mysterious past.

Prosperity.—Since reconquered by San Antonio, the city has prospered steadily and rapidly. For many years the country to the city in every direction was given over to ranching, the raising of cattle and sheep and the product of hides and wool. Excepting that the city, where the means of irrigation, irrigated by means of ditches from the San Antonio river and the San Pedro creek, no irrigation was given to the country. In development was slow at first, but in a few decades great change has taken place, due to the development of irrigation. The soil is very fertile, the climate mild and agreeable and no finer grazing country exists anywhere in the world. Lands formerly thought fit only for range purposes and which brought the cattle raiser a profit of about $1 or $2 a year produce farm crops under early methods yielding profits of $25 and $50 an acre under intensive cultivation, in 1912, between $100 and $500 an acre.

Irrigation is provided in three ways in many parts of San Antonio. The head is sufficient to force the water above the surface, are obtained at depths varying between 200 and 2000 feet. At other places wells that are apparently inexhaustible, but which do not flow, are utilized with motor pumps, the expense of operation of which is small. At other places and this is expected eventually to be the means of irrigating the greater part of southwest Texas—immense dams have been constructed so as to form extensive reservoirs in which flood waters are collected.

In the lower Rio Grande valley an extensive system of irrigation ditches has been built and these are supplied with water pumped from the Rio Grande. In that part of the state, formerly given over to the cactus and chaparral, semi-tropical and citrus fruits are grown with great success.

Irrigation Plant.—The largest irrigation plant in Texas, and one of the largest in the country, now being built, is 95 miles west of San Antonio. This when completed, will store sufficient flood waters to irrigate in one year about 300,000 acres of land. This project is being carried out by the Medina Valley Irrigation Company, which is expending between $5,000,000 and $12,000,000, provided by British capitalists. The work is being done under the direction of Dr. Frederick Stark Pearson, formerly an instructor in the College, Ford, Mass., and later a professor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The enterprise embraces construction of dams, canals and irrigation ditches, and clearing the lands of water every 24 hours, but during the spring and fall months millions of gallons of water go hurtling down the channel, the stream sometimes becoming one mile wide and 50 to 60 feet deep.

The main dam of the Medina Irrigation company will be 1260 feet long at the crest and 165 feet from the river bed. The lake or reservoir will be about 18 miles long, will cover an area of 4700 acres and will have a depth ranging from an average of about 45 feet to a maximum at the dam of 150 feet. It will contain 100,000,000 gallons of water. In addition to being used as a storage reservoir this lake will be stocked with fish and is expected to prove a very attractive resort for fishermen. Boats and small skills will be placed on it also, and connected with San Antonio by an interurban line. It is likely to be a popular pleasure resort for residents of and visitors to the city.

San Antonio is attractive to tourists because of its history, and to winter residents because of the delightful climate, and the opportunity for outdoor sports throughout the winter. The climate is to be unsurpassed in America.

Before the Spaniards came the Indians occupied the country where San Antonio now stands and had villages at the head waters of the San Antonio river and the San Pedro creek, both now within the corporate limits of the city. Since the days of the Indians five flags have waved over San Antonio. Disturbed conditions existed until within the past few years, when the Spaniards came the French, but they occupied the country a very little while when it returned to Spanish rule. Later, it was dominated by the Mexicans.

In 1836 Americans here had become very numerous and, tiring of the dictatorial and domineering government given them by Mexico, they arose in rebellion, drove out the Mexican soldiers that came to re-occupy the country and established the republic of Texas. They entered the union of states in 1845.

Visitors have been coming in such numbers during the last few years as almost to exceed accommodations. San Antonio has risen to the emergency and now has hotels that claim to compare with the finest in the country, and apartment houses that please exacting guests. San Antonio has kept ahead of the tide all the time and by concentration of forces and activity, is forging ahead ambitious to be the leading city in the south.

Fort Sam Houston, the largest army post in the United States, is located here. The government property here is valued in excess of $7,000,000. It is equipped as a brigade post. It is the headquarters of the department of Texas and the home station for two regiments of infantry, one regiment of cavalry and one regiment of artillery, as well as several squads of the signal corps. Always one regiment band is stationed here and frequently there are three or four, so there is no lack of music and dress parades, drills, maneuvers, reviews and band concerts almost daily are attractions for residents and visitors.

Railroads and Industry.—San Antonio now has five railroads and numbers of trains daily come east and go to the north, south, east and west. Two new railroads are being constructed to extend between San Antonio and the coast, touching the new deep water port at Aransas Harbor, which is expected to become one of the most important ports on the gulf, and two new railroads are to be constructed within the next 18 months from San Antonio and the lower Rio Grande valley, one of them to extend through the Tampico country to the City of Mexico, and northward from San Antonio to extend to San Angelo, to a connection with the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient railway. These and others projected will make San Antonio at least one of the great railroad centers of Texas, if not the greatest.

While little publicity has been given to industrial features in San Antonio, the manufactures of the city total in value more than $30,000,000 annually. There are many natural advantages here to attract manufacturers and the attention of investors, more especially British capitalists, has recently been attracted to the many opportunities here awaiting the attention of investors in anticipation of great industrial activity in the near future a belt and terminal railway has been chartered and has begun constructing a belt railway providing many desirable factory sites.

Another company has been organized to develop the water power of the Comal river, said to be the best power stream in Texas, proposing to build an interurban railway to connect with various cities and towns, one of which is 85 miles distant, and also to provide electricity for manufacturing purposes.

Very recently natural gas was discovered about 11 miles southwest of San Antonio. Within a few miles are extensive deposits of lignite coal said to be excellent for fuel purposes and a gas producer, while along the Rio Grande, about 150 miles away, an excellent quality of bituminous coal is mined.

Conditions in southwestern Texas are considered very favorable to industrial development. Living conditions are so simple and inexpensive that they appeal to laboring people; raw material is here in abundance, cotton, wool, hides, iron from various Texas mines and wood of different kinds, and other materials come from Mexico.

The Chamber of Commerce has taken hold of the industrial proposition and is doing much to develop the place as an industrial center. The several railroads and the new deep water port at Aransas Pass, it is believed, will give this city the most advantageous freight rates of any city in Texas.

The city appeals to the residents because of its many attractions and its splendid schools, declared to be the equal of any city in the south. With the development also of all of southwestern Texas' agricultural wealth, making this part of the state famous for its vegetables, fruits, nuts and other products, San Antonio people believe their city will become not only great in itself but the center of a great country, and that its destiny as the metropolis of the south is certain.

SIDE LIGHTS ON IRRIGATION.

Meaning of Irrigation.
Herbert M. Wilson, Mem. A.S.C.E., in his "Irrigation Engineering" has the following to say on the meaning of irrigation:

"The word irrigation implies a condition far more imposing than is intended. In dry weather you take a watering pot and sprinkle such plants and flowers as you consider most valuable, or perhaps with a hose or watering barrel moisture more or less of your garden truck. This is irrigation pure and simple. The only difference between this form and that more generally im- plied by the word irrigation as used in the arid west is that in the latter region the application of water to crops becomes a business in it- self, and the farmer and the en- gineer unite in the employment of methods whereby water may be ap- plied in the safest, least expensive and most certain manner. This is by aid of the action of gravity, and irrigation by natural flow in the arid west. Ditches are constructed which lead the water from the source of supply, be it well or reservoir, or stream; and they are so aligned and graded that the water shall flow through them into the minor chan- nels, and from there again be led by ploughed or drilled furrows through the field.

The mistake is too commonly made of regarding the work of ir- rigation as a hardship, and the ne- cessity for it as a misfortune. In point of fact, the necessity for ir- rigation and the ability to irrigate make a fortunate combination of circumstances. They imply a warm dry climate, and that of the arid re- gions; and this means that the crops are not liable to destruction by sudden, violent storms, or by the lack of sufficient sunshine or by the failure of the water supply, as some- times results from dependence on rainfall alone. All of this for- tunate combination is not found where the rainfall is sufficient to mature the crops. As a result there is not the ever-present sunshine and immunity from damaging storms, yet irrigation may fulfill one of its most important functions—that of helping nature through the drought periods, or, in other words, that of an insurance on the crops."

THE EXTENT OF IRRIGATION.
The extent to which irrigation can be practiced is enormous. The fol- lowing will give an idea of the acre- age of irrigated lands in the world, their cost and productive value:
In India there are about 45,000,000 acres; in Egypt, about 9,000,000; in Italy, 5,000,000 acres; in Spain, about 3,000,000; in France, 500,000 acres and in the United States about 12,000,000. This means that in these countries alone, there are nearly 75,000,000 acres of land producing crops with clockwork regularity, that without irrigation would be bare and unproductive. In addition to the above there are mil- lions of acres of irrigable lands in other parts of the world.
The above mentioned acreage rep- resents an outlay of probably $500,000,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—"The Congress of New York" is complete.
It was a foregone conclusion from the moment that Rear Admiral Osterhaus sailed into the Hudson with his vanguard of eight battleships and anchored off the city. But the climax came yesterday, when 6000
blue jackets and marines, the flower of the naval fighting force of the United States, "took possession" of
Manhattan Island, and its inhabitants, to a man, woman and child, captivated willingly by the gallant invaders.

Promptly at noon with one accord the cutters bearing the picked men from each of the big ships put off from the sides of the vessel and anchored off the city. But the climax came yesterday, when 6000
blue jackets and marines, the flower of the naval fighting force of the United States, "took possession" of
Manhattan Island, and its inhabitants, to a man, woman and child, captivated willingly by the gallant
invaders.

public library, where Mayor Gavner, Rear Admiral Osterhaus and their respective parties were waiting to greet the invaders. Traffic of all kinds other than that of the parade was diverted as far as was practicable to allow the procession the right of way.

Ida Crowe, 14, Oct. 21—While filling the ice box of the Walsh Bros. saloon, Oscar Dessel, a bartender, opened a case and around the first two bottles he picked up found a ten dollar bill wrapped around the labels. Just how the money came there is a mystery here.

"Clean Up the Bowels and Keep Them Clean"

There are many remedies to be had for constipation, but the difficulty is to procure one that acts without violence. A remedy that does not perform by force what should be accomplished by persuasion is Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets. After using them, Mr. N. A. Waddell, 315 Washington St., Waco, Tex., says:

"Almost all my life I have been troubled with constipation, and have tried many remedies, all of which seemed to cause pain without giving much relief. I finally tried Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and found them excellent. Their action is pleasant and mild, and their chocolate taste makes them easy to take. I am more than glad to recommend them."

"Clean up the bowels and keep them clean," is the advice of all physicians, because they realize the danger resulting from habitual constipation. Do not delay too long, but begin proper curative measures. Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are a new remedy for this old complaint, and a great improvement over the cathartics you have been using in the past. They taste like candy and work like a charm. A trial will convince you.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory after trial, return the box to your druggist and he will return your money.

Don't Suffer!

"I had been troubled, a little, for nearly 7 years," writes Mrs. L. Fincher, in a letter from Peavy, Ala., "but I was not taken down, until March, when I went to bed and had to have a doctor. He did all he could for me, but I got no better. I hurt all over, and I could not rest. At last, I tried Cardui, and soon I began to improve. Now I am in very good health, and able to do all my housework."

TAKE The CARDUI Woman's Tonic

You may wonder why Cardui is so successful, after other remedies have failed. The answer is that Cardui is successful, because it is composed of scientific ingredients, that act curatively on the womanly system. It is a medicine for women, and for women only. It builds, strengthens, and restores weak and ailing women, to health and happiness.

If you suffer like Mrs. Fincher did, take Cardui. You will surely do for you, what it did for her. At all druggists.
