Group Claims Blasts

NEW YORK (AP) — A militant Puerto Rican group early today claimed responsibility for two bomb blasts at the Gulf & Western and Chrysler buildings that turned windows into glass missiles, blew a taxi driver out of his cab and were heard blocks away.

Summit Meet Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western diplomats are talking about the possibility of President Carter visiting some key European capitals if two spring time summit meetings in London can be arranged.

U.S. officials reported the idea is now in the talking - not the planning - stage with nothing definite for either of the conferences.

Cities Aid Expanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major program of aid to the cities is being expanded and revamped by the Carter administration to channel more money to the poorest and neediest communities.

Officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development disclosed Friday that the administration proposes to expand the program by spending $4 billion in the fiscal year beginning next October, compared to $3.2 billion in the current fiscal year.

Vance In Saudi Arabia

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance Saturday flew to Saudi Arabia, the fifth stop on his Middle East factfinding tour, after a daylong visit in Jordan with King Hussein.

The Scurry County Coliseum and agriculture-livestock building have been busy the past week.

Two livestock shows and four basketball games have been played this week, with three of the basketball games involving playoffs between out-of-town teams. The Slaton-Wylie girls playoff on Monday night and the Jayton-Roby girls playoff on Tuesday night both attracted good crowds to the coliseum. Then, WTC and New Mexico Military Institute played in the coliseum on Thursday night, followed by Stephenville and Canyon in a Class AAA girls basketball playoff on Saturday night.

Meanwhile, the Snyder FFA youngsters had their chapter project show in the agriculture-livestock building on Saturday, Feb. 13, and the big county show followed Wednesday and continued through Saturday.

These events brought a lot of people to town, and that is precisely what these facilities were built for---to provide facilities for such activities.

Some of the workers at the playoff games early in the week were surprised that the Jayton-Roby game drew almost as many fans as the Slaton-Wylie game the night before.

Continuing at the coliseum, did you notice how many coaches from major senior colleges and universities were here Thursday night for the WTC-NMMI game? The Western Junior College Athletic Conference has established a reputation as a training ground for top flight college basketballers, and of course WTC has been in the thick of it, having won the national junior college crown two years ago and going to the regional tournament last year. And, the Westerners are right back in the picture this year, having already clinched the conference again.

Bill Clayton has been watching the major golf tournaments on television with more than passing interest lately. He is personally acquainted with Rik Massengale, who won the Bob Hope classic last weekend and appeared to be making a strong bid for the Los Angeles Open title this weekend. The Massengale family lives in Jacksboro, Clayton's old home town, and Clayton says they have been good athletes since they could walk. He noted that Rik has a brother Don, who also was a fine athlete. Both Don and Rik played quarterback on their high school football team.

OF US INTELLIGENCE OPERATIONS

Carter Launches Review

By DAVID C. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has begun a sweeping review of U.S. intelligence operations amid reports that more than half a dozen past and present foreign leaders received secret payments from the CIA.

King Hussein of Jordan, Willy Brandt of West Germany, Nguyen van Thieu of South Vietnam, Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya, Joseph Mobutu of Zaire and Forbes Burnham of Guyana are identified in a still-secret manuscript as recipients of CIA funds, according to sources who have seen the manuscript.

Cypriot Archbishop Makarios and the Tibetan Dalai Lama also have received secret payments according to the Washington Post.

The CIA several years ago went to court to block former intelligence officials Victor Marchetti and John D. Marks from revealing the names of foreign leaders who have received secret payments in their 1974 book "The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence."

Agency lawyers claimed that publication of the names would "result in grave and irreparable injury to the interests of the United States."

The White House and State Department declined to comment Friday on a report that the CIA secretly paid millions of dollars to Hussein over a 20-year period. Instead, Press Secretary Jody Powell announced that the administration has begun an "intensive and comprehensive review" of all foreign intelligence operations.

Carter reportedly ordered the secret payments to Hussein stopped when he learned of them.

One former intelligence official defended the payments as essential to preserving Hussein as a stabilizing influence in the Middle East.

Marchetti, former executive assistant to the State Department's director of intelligence, are still prohibited by a court order from discussing the contents of the deleted portions of their book.

However, Marchetti said he had previously identified Kenyatta and Brandt as recipients of CIA funds.

The payments to the former West German chancellor were used to strengthen the Social Democratic party, Marchetti said. Brandt, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, is still the party's leader.

But Kenyatta, still president of Kenya, diverted much of the money to his personal use, Marchetti said.

who's withholding now?

A dramatic chapter has been added to the big federal energy comedy.

U.S. District Judge Jack Weinstein nullified contracts that were headed toward initial taps into natural gas reserves off the coast of New Jersey and New York. If it stands, this decision will preclude development of one of the biggest known untapped sources of natural gas on this Continent.

The decision came as reports continued about the hardships an unusually cold winter had inflicted upon residents of the Northeast, with New Jersey being singled out as an area of widespread suffering from the cold.

Almost simultaneously, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus announced that he probably would order increased gas deliveries from producing fields on the Gulf Coast (Louisiana and Texas). He hinted that an investigation had revealed that gas was being withheld from interstate pipelines, although he was careful to emphasize that at this time he was not accusing anyone of willfully holding back gas.

Judge Weinstein's decision reportedly was based on environmental considerations. It seems that there still are many people in the non-producing regions of the Northeast who do not want any of that dirty old oil and gas coming out of their ground. But they do want oil and gas and present trends indicate that the federal government is going to try to see that they get it from someone else.

Perhaps it is time for Texas and Louisiana to reassess the environmental impact of the pipelines pointing north.

And then there is this question: What is the difference between withholding supplies from proven fields and refusing to tap known reserves?

upgrading is not easy

Beginning last year, heads of households with adjusted gross incomes of less than $8,000 could file for an "earned income credit" of up to $400, either in the form of a tax credit or rebate or as an outright bonus if no tax was owed.

The Internal Revenue Service reports that despite an expensive publicity campaign aimed at low-income persons, 1.2 million heads of households - or about one of every seven believed to be eligible - did not claim the credit. The total amount involved is no less than $227 million.

One can suggest any number of reasons why so many people who are so greatly in need of little extra money failed to claim it.

Maybe the tax forms are so complicated they can't understand them. Maybe they are alienated from the government and want as little to do with it as possible. Maybe they don't want "charity." Or maybe they simply don't read the newspapers or don't believe what they do read.

Whatever the explanation, the phenomenon illustrates the fact that the problem of upgrading the lives of poor Americans can be even more difficult than leading the proverbial horse to water.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The best after dinner speech is when the guy with you says, "Waiter, bring me the check."

Last week we mentioned the history of the 55 mile per hour speed limit and the thought of traffic safety brought the following response from Mrs. Travis Burleson at Hermleigh.

She sent in the following traffic safety thought which had been previously printed in an unidentified publication. Nevertheless, it had some sobering thoughts: "With the coming of a new year and the beginning of a new set of traffic records, we should start now to lower the toll in 1971. Whether this will be accomplished depends on how well each individual behind the wheel does his job.

"Perhaps these words written by Sam Taylor, City Traffic Engineer for Los Angeles, in which he borrows from Kipling's "If" can help give us the answer.

"IF everyone who drives or walks could lie a month in bed with broken bones and stitched-up wounds, or fractures of the head, and there endure the agonies that many people do, They'd never need preach safety any more to me or you.

"If everyone could stand beside the bed of a close friend, and hear the doctor say 'no hopes,' before that fatal end, and see him there unconscious, never knowing what took place, the laws and rules of traffic I am sure we'd soon embrace.

"If everyone could meet the wife and children left behind, and step into the darkened home where once the sunlight shined, and look upon the vacant chair where Daddy used to sit, I'm sure each reckless human would be forced to think a bit.

"IF everyone would realize pedestrians on the street have just as much the right of way as those upon the seat, and train their eyes for children who run recklessly at play, this steady toll of human lives would drop from day to day.

"IF everyone who drives or walks would heed the danger signs placed by traffic engineers who also marked the lines to keep all traffic in its lane and give it proper space, the accidents we read about could not have taken place.

"IF every pedestrain would follow the Golden Rule, and exercise due caution whether home near shops or school, while children and the aged now are the major toll, life and limb conservation would then move toward safety's goal.

"AND last-IF he who takes the wheel would say a little prayer, and keep in mind those in the car dependent on his care, and make a vow and pledge himself to never take a chance, the great crusade for safety then would suddenly advance."

Incidentally, did you about the lawyer who was attending a funeral. A friend, also an attorney, arrived late and took a seat beside him, whispering:

"How far has the service gone?"

The lawyer nodded towards the minister in the pulpit and said, "He just opened the defense."

more fun at home

In island hopping the Caribbean since long before Castro, visitors have discovered two kinds of natives.

Jamaica is a fairly typical example--an island of 2 million about the size of Connecticut.

For generations Jamaicans have been divided in their attitudes toward wealthy outsiders.

Some responded with happy anticipation of sharing the wealth.

Others reacted with envy, resentment, angry--the surly cabdriver, the waiter who spat in the soup.

Fifteen years ago from Jamaica I wrote of the emergence of the 'Rasta,' the growing number of Red-led, ganja-smoking, wild-haired haters. They drove the British out.

Now they are driving Americans out.

Because now the resenters--the "haters"--have their own prime minister.

Prime Minister Manley regularly broadcasts to the people his hate-the-rich rhetoric--denouncing what he calls "capitalist imperialist foreigners," denouncing even the home-grown Jamaican wealthy.

To the preconditioned rebel it sounds like an invitation to steal and to rape and to kill.

Jamaica's climate is as near perfect as Hawaii's--and some handier. So more than 7,000 Americans have vacation homes there.

But now those beautiful homes overlooking Montego Bay are locked and bolted and fenced and guarded by large dogs.

When Lady Sarah Spencer-Churchill was assaulted and robbed in her fashionable winter home recently the exodus was accelerated.

Now the "For Sale" signs are everywhere.

In the past eight weeks the number of British subjects applying for permission to leave Jamaica has more than doubled. It's not so much "anti-white" violence as it is "antirich." It is not exclusively outsiders who are terrorized and beaten and robbed; it's anybody who lives well. Even native Jamaicans who can afford to get out are doing so.

There were 53,000 fewer tourists in Jamaica last year than in the preceding year.

Jamaica--when this orgy is over--will get tough with itself. When Manley has let the restive ventilate their wrath, he will imitate the disciplinary devices of his buddy, Castro, and inforce order.

The Bahamas went through a similar ferment a few years ago when an all-black government took power there for the first time in 300 years. Then, after a while of self-assertion, they began to re-realize their need for tourism--and managed to restore order.

Only thing is that visitors to the Bahamas are now subject to another kind of rip-off: grotesquely inflated prices--$2.60 for a Coke!

With Mexico in ferment and visitors there increasingly endangered, I'm watching several indicators that indicate Americans are about to rediscover America.

WASHINGTON - (NEA) - The hearing of the House Science and Technology Committee Feb. 17 won't be specially telecast to room 1015 of nearby Bethesda Naval Hospital - and therein lies a tale of the relationship between the infamous "special interests" and members of Congress.

The term "special interests" usually is applied to private organizations seeking to influence congressional policy making. But it also ought to refer to the federal departments and agencies which constantly lobby members of the House and Senate for more of everything -money, staff positions, programs, influence and prestige.

"The "special interest" in this case is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. NASA's administrator, Dr. James C. Fletcher, is an appointee of President Richard M. Nixon who reportedly is very anxious to retain his directorship under President Carter.

One man whose support could be crucial in that effort is Rep. Olin E. Teague, D-Texas, a 16-term veteran of the House and the highly influential chairman of its Science and Technology Committee for the past four years.

Teague checked into Bethesda naval Hospital late last year for treatment of a World War II wound, and he probably will remain hospitalized for several more weeks.

Fletcher and his staff concocted a scheme which would demonstrate not only NASA's dazzling technical capabilities but also its concern for Teague. The committee session would be the subject of an elaborate, satellite-relayed, closed-circuit television broadcast whose entire audience would consists of one convalescing congressman.

A detailed plan was drafted and hundreds of NASA employes, at both the Washington headquarters and the agency's Lewis Research Center in Cleveland, were assigned to work on the project.

Cameras, sound equipment and special lights would be set up in the committee hearing room in the Rayburn House Office Building. Cables would snake form that room, down a corridor, into another congressman's office, then out a window to a bus and trailer parked outside the building. (The bus would be brought to Washington fromCleveland for the occasion.)

From there, the signal would be beamed to a satellite hovering 23,000 miles above the earth, then re-transmitted back to the ground to a special receiving antenna mounted outside the hospital. Finally, another set of cables would carry the program into Teague's room.

Although the distance from Capitol Hill to Teague's hospital room in suburban Maryland is only seven miles, the picture and sound from the routine hearings would have travel more than 46,000 miles.

The cost of the project was incalculable, certainly running to tens of thousands of dollars and possibly hundreds of thousands of dollars all of it coming from the country's taxpayers.

Fortunately, Teague rejected the entire plan. (NASA says it abandoned the project after realizing the astronomical costs involved, but that version was disputed by every other source we interviewed.)

"It's my understanding that Dr. Fletcher originally broached the idea with Mr. Teague," said John L. Swigert, executive director of the committee. "Mr. Teague himself turned it down after we looked at the costs and complications."

The outcome of that episode has broader ramifications because of the frequency with which members of Congress are routinely criticized for accepting questionable favors from interest groups.

In most cases, the big campaign contribution, the golfing weekend at a lush resort of the VIP treatment for the legislator was an idea concocted and an offer proferred by an interest group anxious to curry favor with the intended recipient.

That doesn't justify acceptance of largesse designed to purchase "access" or "influence" on Capitol Hill. But if the recipients are to be judged harshly, more attention ought to be paid to the source of those oversized gratuities.

The Search

I have searched for similarities in people who were having troubled marriages. I want to find things these people have in common so that I can help them and others prevent the need for ruptured relationships.

The Findings

It turns out that I have seen some patterns which are common to many people with troubled marriages and recent divorces. This search has helped greatly by the writings of others who have conducted similar searches, especially Don Jackson in Mirages of Marriage, and Albert Ellis in various works.

It seems to me that troubled people often live by certain assumptions which are false. Some are likely to cause things to blow up pretty quickly, as when you put gasoline in the car's raditor; some will block the action and cause things to come to a halt, as when you pour water into your gasoline tank.

Most of these false assumptions are two-sided, like a coin or a record. Usually people are pretty fair. They apply an assumption equally to themselves and to their mates. Of course, if an assumption is false, any way it is applies is bound to cause trouble.

These assumptions come to us from some pretty good people: our parents, our churches, our schools, and motion pictures and TV programs. Therefore, even though we have been taught an error and have lived by it, it does not mean that we are bad people for believing something false. It is important to say this, because it seems to me that people who believe themselves to be bad have a much harder time making changes and learning new things than people who assume that they are basically OK, but who want to correct an error.

Unwarranted Assumptions

The first assumption troubled people make is, "If I am not right, I am bad." The flip side is, "If you make a mistake you are bad." Since mistakes are a part of our everyday experiences, this assumption must inevitably result in embarrassment and despair toward yourself, and contempt and bitterness toward your mate.

The second assumption is "Love gives a special knowledge. Therefore, if you love me, you will know my needs without me having to tell you about them." With that goes, "Because I love you, I know what you like and what you are thinking." With almost every problem marriage I have dealt with one or the other will inevitably say, "But I shouldn't have to tell him/her, (s)he should know that kind of thing."

The third: Love is a special kind of feeling. If you love me, you will always be nice to me, and you will always approve of everything I do. If I love you, I will always feel you are right."

The fourth: "Love is doing. So, if you love me you will do what I want, and I will do what you want."

Conclusion

There are others: I have to love everything about you, or nothing," but this will give us a start. In the next few articles, we will look at each one of these unwarranted assumptions to see what effect they have on a marriage, and how we can move from what we have toward a better relationship.

President Seeks Help Of Education Officials

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter asked a group of 10 university presidents and other education officials Saturday for help with national problems and pledged in return to help them directly as president and through the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"I want to form a relationship with you that's continuing so that you might help me with problems that affect our nation from an academic and also practical standpoint and so that I might help you as president," Carter told the educators, who met with him in the Cabinet Room at the White House.

He did not specify the help he wants from them.

He also pledged help for higher education from HEW Secretary Joseph Califano and Mary Berry, assistant secretary for education. Both attended the meeting.

Carter pledged to cut down the paperwork and reports the government requires from the educational community.

"We would like to have your initiatives on that," said the President, requesting particularly the educators' opinions about the volume and subject matter of those reports.

Carter also pledged anew to have his comprehensive tax reform package ready for Congress by the end of September.

Attending the meeting were:

President Kingman Brewster of Yale, who heads the Association of American Universities; President Robin Fleming of the University of Michigan, who heads the American Council on Education; President David Saxon of the University of California; President Robert Lahti of William Rainey Harper College in Palatine, Ill., who heads the American Association of Community Junior Colleges; President Bill Friday of the University of North Carolina.

Also, Director Roger Heyns of the American Council on Education; Ernest L. Boyer, U.S. commissioner of education; President John Marvel of Adams State College in Colorado, who heads the American Association of State Colleges and Universities; Norman Francix of Xavier University in New Orleans, La., a board member of the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education; and President Barbara Newell of Wellesley.

13 Paper Boys Burn To Death

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Thirteen young newspaper vendors burned to death at a Cape Town intersection early today when the delivery van in which they were riding collided with a fuel truck.

The van burned fiercely for about 15 minutes while police and residents tried unsuccessfully to free the screaming youths, all described as colored, the South African term for people of mixed race.

Police said the youths were being taken to their points of sales and were trapped in the truck when piles of newspapers were ignited by burning gasoline. One rescuer tried to fight the fire with a garden hose and others tried unsuccessfully to cut a hole through the side of the truck.

Two youths escaped. One, 17, was seriously burned. The other, 15, was listed as slightly injured.

Anti-Alcohol Laws Proposed

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) - Some of the nation's harshest anti-alcohol laws have been proposed here to curb hard-drinking Alaskans, who drink 57 per cent more booze than the national.

Gov. Jay Hammond, who proposed the legislation, says he has "quit counting" the number of people he knows who have murdered or been murdered during drinking binges.

AHA Sets 'Kick-Off' Coffee

Sylvia Voelkel, local campaign chairman for the Ammerican Heart Association, has announced that the AHA will have a "kick-off" coffee Monday, Feb. 21 at the Snyder Savings and Loan.

The coffee will be from 7:30 a.m. until 11 a.m. in the community room of the Savings and Loan building.

Materials will be distributed to volunteer workers at that time. All persons interested in working with the American Heart Association are urged to attend the meeting.

Pleas Heard In County Court

Two cases were handled Friday in county court.

Charles Steven Freeman, 27, of Snyder, had his probation revoked in the court proceedings. He was sentenced to serve a 30-day jail term that had been probated in connection with a May 7, 1976 arrest for driving while intoxicated.

Freeman's probation was revoked for failure to report to his probation officer.

Freeman and his brother, Larry, were also indicted here earlier this month by a grand jury in connection with the Nov. 12, 1976 burglary of the Timely Pawn Shop.

In other court proceedings Friday, Steven Craig Alexander pleaded guilty to a DWI charge.

Alexander, 25, was fined $100 and sentenced to serve 30 days in the county jail, probated for six months. He had been arrested for the offense July 5, 1976 by city police officers.

Hermleigh Lions Have Ladies Night

The Hermleigh Lions Club met February 17 at the Hermleigh Community Center for a 'Ladies Night' meeting. Secretary Foster Watson presided at the meeting.

Watson reported that a total of $145.00 has been collected by the club for benefit of the West Texas Rehabilitation Center. Other projects of the club include the sponsorship of the Hermleigh F.F.A. Stock Show Barbeque, the purchase of sound equipment for the Hermleigh High School auditorium, and the construction of a flag pole for the Hermleigh football stadium. The flag pole is a joint project of the Lions Club and the Hermleigh Chapter of the Future Farmers of America.

Guests at the meeting were Miss Wanda Hudgins, teacher in the Snyder Public Schools; Mrs. Irene Hudgins; and Mr. Harold Fick, teacher in the Hermleigh Public Schools.

Miss Wanda Hudgins presented a program of slides and commentary on her year as an exchange teacher in Sheffield, England during the 1975-76 school year.

Celtic House Is In Order

NEW YORK (AP) — "We now have our house in order," says Irv Levin, owner of the Boston Celtics and the new chairman of the National Baseketball Association's Board of Governors. "We are moving forward on a united front. We look forward to nothing but good things in the future."

The NBA has some problems, to be sure, but they are relatively minor considering the way things go in pro sports these days.

One year after the landmark agreement between the league and its Players Association, things have gone pretty smoothly on the labor front. That's quite a contrast to pro football, where a labor agreement has yet to be clinched, or baseball, which has yet to feel the full effects of the free agent grab-bag.

The Atlanta Hawks, the franchise with the most pressing financial problems, have found a new and enthusiatic owner in colorful Ted Turner.

The merger with the American Basketball Association has added a large measure of excitement to this season.

"The four new teams have added talent and competition to the league," said Commissioner Larry O'Brien, who was rewarded with a new seven-year, $2-million contract at the Board of Governors meeting during the All-Star break.

"Something is happening across the country," O'Brien said. "We are showing improvement across the board."

Attendance around the league is up. Julius Erving has attracted big crowds and many sellouts, while the Denver Nuggets top the NBA in home attendance and are a big draw on the road, too.

The caliber of play is stronger than ever, since the demise of the ABA put a lot of players out of work. Those players then battled both the holdover NBA players and the college crop for spots on the rosters of the 22 NBA teams.

Television ratings, on a downward slide the past three years, are up by 35 per cent over last year. The NBA on CBS has beaten college basketball on NBC each week.

The NBA does have some problems, of course. Perhaps the biggest is a conflict over schedule policy. This came up during last weekend's board meeting, but no agreement could be reached and the matter was tabled.

That means that the current balanced schedule, where each team plays each other the same number of times regardless of division, will be in effect next year.

Among other matters which league officials must deal with are the proposal to add a third referee; the selection process for the All-Star Game, which has the fans choosing the starters, and outbreaks of violence on the court, either among players or also involving fans.

Jets To Play In Shea

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Jets will play ball in Shea Stadium this year, according to Mayor Abraham Beame, but according to a New York Jets' spokesman, that may not be entirely true.

And, according to the National Football League; the final gun hasn't been sounded yet.

After a long meeting with both sides, Mayor Beame announced at a City Hall news conference Friday night that the Jets football team and the New York Mets baseball club reached "tentative" agreement on a plan that will allow the Jets to remain at Shea. Beame said details of the agreement still must be initialed by representatives of both teams.

In the wake of the mayor's optimistic announcement, a spokesman for the Jets said it would be impossible for the teams to reach any kind of agreement, if the controversial "rain clause" was involved.

This was the logjam in earlier talks between the teams. M. Donald Grant, the Mets' chairman of the board, had insisted that the National League baseball team or "an independent committee" be allowed to postpone for one day any football game in the event of possible rain damage. The Mets are afraid that the Jets will damage the Shea Stadium field if they play there under adverse conditions during the baseball season.

The Jets and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle have refused to permit an outside body to determine whether a game should be played.

After Beame's dramatic City Hall announcement, a spokesman for the NFL had no comment.

Jazz Sign Mo Howard

The signing of Howard brought the Jazz to the team maximum limit of 12 players.

Spring Drills Begin

By The Associated Press

Montreal Expos pitchers and catchers report to their team's base at Daytona Beach, Fla., Sunday signaling the start of baseball's spring training season.

The Expos will be the first team pitching camp and get a two-day jump on the California Angels, who'll open in Holtville, Calif., and the Minnesota Twins, opening in Orlando, Fla., both on Feb. 22.

Three days after that, on Feb. 25, the full squads of the Expos and New York Mets, who will work at St Petersburg, Fla., are due in camp. They will be the first clubs to welcome their full teams.

Baltimore has the latest reporting date for its entire camp. The Orioles, who train at Miami, aren't due to have their full squad on hand until March 4.

A total of 361 exhibition games is scheduled with the Angels' March 7 date against California State-Fullerton opening the Grapefruit and Cactus League seasons. The first exhibition game matching major league opponents is scheduled for March 8 with the Angels playing the San Diego Padres at Yuma, Ariz.

Howard Payne Is Tourney Favorite

BROWNWOOD, Tex. (AP)—Defending champion Howard Payne University will be the favorite when the third Lone Star Conference Championship basketball tournament tips off here Sunday afternoon, but Yellow Jacket coach Bob Derryberry doesn't exactly savor the honor.

Derryberry's HPU team, the West Zone winner with a 12-2 record, and East Zone winner Stephen F. Austin University 8-6, can relax a bit Sunday with first round byes, while the other four entries fight for survival.

Pre-season favorite East Texas State will meet Sam Houston State at 2 p.m. in the opener, and Southwest Texas State and Abilene Christian tangle at 4 p.m. In Monday's semifinals, SFA plays the winner of the Sam Houston-ET game at 6 p.m., and Howard Payne catches the SWT winner at 8 p.m. Finals will be 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. All of the games will be in Brownwood Coliseum.

"I guess we probably ought to be the favorite, but I hate to be in that spot," Derryberry said this week. Derryberry ought to be getting used to seeing his Stingers in tight spots.

HPU, 21-4 and 11th in the NAIA last week, molded its fine LSC record with three overtime wins and three other victories were captured by a total of five points. The latest close call came Thursday against ETS in a game which HPU came from behind to win 69-67.

If Derryberry is a little nervous, ET's Jim Gudger should be at ease. His Lions have been overwhelming favorites in each of the two previous tournaments, but have failed to produce. This time ET finished second in the West with a 10-4 record and they already hold two easy wins over Sam Houston 6-8.

SFA coach Marshall Brown, and other LSC followers, find the Lumberjacks a puzzling entry. "Inconsistency is definitely our biggest problem," he said this week. Brown, and Derryberry agrees, says SFA's Ken Beasley could be a determining factor in the tourney-if he too gains consistency. Beasley has blocked 17 shots in two games, but he has also had games in which he hasn't even played much. SFA will be making its first tourney appearance as the 'Jacks were on probation during the first two playoffs.

Abilene Christian, 9-5 and third in the West, holds perhaps the hottest hand. The Wildcats have whipped East Texas, Howard Payne and Angelo State in succession and the 81-65 win over Angelo came on the road and got ACU a tourney ticket.

SWT, 6-8 and second in the East is a team without a coach and has lost its last two starts. SWT coach Vernon McDonald will be in Brownwood, but he won't be allowed to coach or watch his team as he is still recovering from a heart ailment which recently prompted him to announce plans to resign and then sent him into a hospital for five days.

Sam Houston comes into the tourney off an 84-83 win over SFA on Thursday.

Swimming Statistics

DALLAS (AP) — Five swimmers have the best times in two events in the latest statistics issued by the Southwest Conference.

Houston's Peter Dawson and Mike Miles pace the 200 and 400-yard individual medley and the 100 and 200-yard freestyle, respectively, and Jeff Krumwiede of Texas has the best times in the 1,000 and 1,650-yard freestyle. Bill Glasstetter of SMU leads the 100 and 200-yard butterfly and Eric Muehlberger of Texas Tech is tops in the 100 and 200-yard backstroke.

MEET SUNDAY IN DENVER

Western Governors To Discuss Water Shortage

By The Associated Press

Governors of 11 Western states will hold an emergency meeting in Denver Sunday to discuss a severe water shortage that some say may be one of the worst natural disasters in recorded history.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus also is scheduled to attend.

Governors of Oregon, Idaho, Washington, California, Montana, South Dakota, Utah, Oklahoma, Nebraska and North Dakota will meet at Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm's mansion to discuss solutions to the drought.

Representatives of the governors of Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Arizona, Nevada and Wyoming also are expected to be on hand.

"It will be a loose working session. We'll try to get opinions out on what should be done about western water problems," said Jim Monaghan, Lamm's chief environmental side.

"The drought we face is worse than anything in recorded history," said California Gov. Edmund Brown on Friday. Brown, who was wearing a "Save Water" button, wants a 25 per cent statewide cut in personal water use.

Utah Gov. Scott W. Matheson has declared a state disaster emergency because of the drought and has asked President Carter to take similar action.

He asked for $3.5 million in federal economic injury loans for seven Utah counties and also has asked the state Legislature for a $5 million reserve emergency drought fund.

Colorado's agricultural industry will suffer more than $100 million in losses this year because of irrigation water shortages, a state official predicted.

"It poses an economic disaster for the farmer," said Felix Sparks, Colorado Water Conservation Board director.

Colorado state officials began drawing up plans to draft an emergency water proclamation that would suspend regulations on the distribution of water in the state.

Such a proclamation would not affect Colorado's water committments to nine other states and Mexico under interstate compacts and U.S. Supreme Court decrees.

Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray is asking her state legislature for standby powers to distribute and ration energy.

One of her aides said, "We are in a precarious situation. I'd have to say we are in an alert because the governor is calling for a 10 per cent cutback in energy use."

The legislatures of Oregon and Washington are working on bills that would establish cloud seeding operations, even though the state of Idaho has threatened to file suit.

On Friday, three weather experts said cloud seeding programs would not rob Idaho or Montana of rain. If anything, seeding clouds to create rain would increase rainfall to the east, said a University of Washington professor of atmospheric sciences.

Officials of the Bonneville Power Administration Friday expressed concern that taking water out of the Columbia River to irrigate parched lands in the Yakima Valley could reduce power available on the lower Columbia.

"It's a choice for society to make," said Hector Durocher, BPA power manager. "Irrigation of the Yakima Valley is tremendously important to the Pacific Northwest."

Durocher said water withdrawal upstream would mean a definite reduction in the amount of power that could be generated by four dams downstream.

He said the energy required to pump 800 cubic feet of irrigation water per second for 100 days, plus the loss of generating capability in downstream dams, would equal the amount of electricity required to supply between 15,000 and 16,000 homes for a year.

The Washington state Senate's Agriculture Committee has approved the plan to divert water to the Yakima Valley from the Columbia River. A similar proposal was introduced in Congress by Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash.

That plan calls for diversion of up to 2,000 cubic feet of water per second.

Residents of Salt Lake County in Utah were warned Friday that failure to cut back water usage by 20 per cent this year could result in dry water taps at home and empty lines to fire hydrants.

A 20 per cent cutback will be necessary even under the most optimistic conditions, said an official of the county's Water Conservancy District.

"I LOVE YOU"—President Carter sign language that says "I love you" as he addresses Interior Department employes in Washington. Behind the President is Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus. Carter visited the department as part of his continuing efforts to visit the different agencies. (AP Wirephoto)

Hospital Cost Control Measures To Congress

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Joseph A. Califano Jr., says it would be "reprehensible" for any hospitals to increase their charges to thwart the Carter administration's planned cost-control measures.

He admonished hospital administrators not to "rush to increase charges simply because we are coming forth with a proposal like this."

But Califano did not say whether the administration would seek to roll back or cancel any increases it considered pre-emptive or unjustified.

In an interview with reporters, his first since taking office, Califano said the administration has decided to take a hospital "cost containment" proposal to Congress but that details have not yet been worked out.

"The fact that we're going to go with a proposal to in one way or another put a cap on the rate of increase of hospital charges is settled," Califano said. "But details of that proposal I have deliberately left open because I want an opportunity to talk with several people" in the health care industry.

Those talks began last week with the heads of Blue Cross, the American Hospital Association and the American Medical Association.

"Now, what I hope is that, pending a resolution of that and the fact that I'm willing to be open and let them come in here and give us their specific suggestions and go over our thoughts with them, there won't be increases in hospital charges," Califano said.

"I think for hospitals to increase their charges on the basis of anything other than cost increases between now and the time any such program becomes effective is reprehensible."

Rising hospital charges are a major factor in the runaway inflation that has plagued the $140-billion health care industry, and the administration believes those costs must be brought under control before its promised National Health Insurance program can be implemented.

On other topics, Califano said:

—He assumes the administration's national health insurance proposal will exclude payments for abortions when it goes to Congress next year.

—He would like the power to penalize school administrators who violate civil rights laws but, lacking such a tool, will cut off federal funds if necessary to force an end to racial and sexual discrimination.

—He has "absolutely no objections" to busing school children and wishes Congress would give him more authority to desegregate schools.

—He made a mistake by not putting any welfare recipients or their representatives on his interagency task force on welfare reform, and when that became clear, he reversed his decision.

—President Carter, "at least through these early weeks of the administration, has more than lived up to his pledge of letting his Cabinet run their own departments."

—Family planning "should be pushed much harder than it is, and we will push it much harder" along with sex education.

—He believes he is not as well-versed about the problems of sex discrimination, but he is learning and hopes to help women's groups achieve their goals.

Califano, a Roman Catholic who was an architect of many of the Great Society programs during the Lyndon B. Johnson administration, said his opposition to abortion is "obviously a reflection of religious belief."

Asked about busing and the limitations Congress has imposed to prevent his department from compelling widespread use of it as an antidiscrimination tool, Califano said:

"My children are bused in the sense that they get bused to Montgomery County, a Maryland suburb of Washington, to go to a Catholic school because I want them in Catholic schools. So I don't think busing does any damage at all to anybody.

"I wish I had more flexibility than the law allows. Will I make a major fight to try to get those restrictions lifted? I can't answer that question now. I mean there are only so many major fights that any of us can make."

ANNIVERSARY

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary to Cogdell Memorial Hospital will soon celebrate the second anniversary for the Medical Students Scholarship Fund. This fund was established to help a deserving medical student or students through school and come to Snyder to practice medicine in the community after he had completed medical school and residency. In February and March 1975 two students who were attending medical school in Galveston were signed. Stanley Allen and Paul Thompson. Dr. Thompson is now in residency at the Bexar County Hospital in San Antonio. At this time the Auxiliary made the initital donation to the fund in the amount of $2,500.00. In January 1977 two more medical students were signed, Don Rinker and Bid Allen Cooper. Each of the four students is and has been in the upper 10 per cent of their class in medical school. The Auxiliary made another large donation to this fund in January 1977 in the amount of $5,000.00. Total donations by the Auxiliary to date has been $13,631.00 This fund is regarded as a tremendous undertaking for the Auxiliary, however, with the help of many generous and cooperative citizens, professional people and organizations donating time and expense, the administration of the hospital and the efforts of all members, the project has been successful. Mr. Cyrus Miller, Administrator of Cogdell Hospital works continuously with the Auxilians on this project. His patience and guidance is unexcelled. Each Student is screened by Mr. Miller and a screening committee. Other than volunteer hours inside the hospital, the auxiliary keeps busy with the Medical Students Scholarship Fund. Some of the projects sponsoring the fund include making and stuffing monkeys and toys, also other small animals which are offered for sale,baseball games, rodeos, musical festivals, bridge tournaments, bonnet sales, raffling of antique quilts, watches, paintings, macrame planter, stainless steel tableware and car washes and cake and pie sales by the Junior Auxiliary. An unlimited number of volunteer hours have been contributed to this fund by Auxilians and at the same time the Auxiliary has maintained the standard practice of donating money for life-saving equipment to the hospital in the amount of several thousand dollars. The medical facilities of Cogdell Hospital are among the best and can be compared with most large hospitals in Texas. Revenues for equipment donated to the hospital by Auxilians is provided by work inside the hospital, such as television rental collections, telephone rentals, snack bar and the Rememberance Fund. The Rememberance Fund is a memorial fund, in memory of loved ones, and all proceeds are used for life-saving equipment. Telephone and televisions are optional for patients and are not billed with the price of the room. With the help of many dedicated citizens, professional people, civic clubs and others with their generous donations, knowing it would help to bring better medical care to the county and surrounding area the fund has been successful. Many have donated in memory of a loved one. All donations are tax deductible.

Kissinger Considers Job Offer

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is considering a job offer as full professor at Columbia University, The Associated Press has learned.

A faculty committee in the Political Science Department has approved the university's offer, and Kissinger has been told, a source said Friday. The typical salary for such a position would be about $35,000 a year, the source said.

Kissinger was not immediately available for comment.

On Thursday, Kissinger signed a five-year agreement with NBC as a special consultant on world affairs standing in July.

Fred Knubel, a spokesman for Columbia, said no professorship had been offered to Kissinger "either formally or informally."

"But there have been discussions between President William McGill and Dr. Kissinger. The discussions are continuing," he said.

Munden's Names New Manager Here

Don Parsons is the new manager of the Munden's Discount Center. He replaced the former manager, Hank Brown, who died earlier this month.

Parsons began his managing duties at Munden's Feb. 7. He was formerly employed as the manager of the Munden's store in Brownfield and came to the Snyder store from that post.

The 27-year-old Parsons is a native of Roby. He has been employed by the Munden's chain for seven years.

Parsons was graduated from Cisco Junior College in 1972. He received his degree in psychology.

"I like Snyder very well," Parsons said of his new home. "It's my kind of country. I was raised near here and I know the people in this area are friendly," he said.

Family Taken Hostage

FALFURRIAS, Tex. (AP) —A lone gunman shot a border patrol officer at a checkpoint near Sarita in South Texas Saturday morning, then took a family hostage and drove about 40 miles to Falfurrias, Kenedy County Sheriff's officers said.

Dispatcher Gilbert Andrade said the armed man stopped at a grocery store-gas station in Falfurrias to fill the car's gas tank. He entered the store with one female hostage, Andrade said.

Persons inside the store tried to talk the man into surrendering.

County and state law enforcement units followed the captive vehicle at a distance, and helicopter surveillance was maintained.

The man and the hostages were reported traveling in a 1972 brown station wagon.

None of the names of those involved was known at once.

Chemical Spill Threat To Water Supplies

By ANDY LIPPMAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — A 75-mile-long spill of a toxic chemical, believed discharged in West Virginia, is flowing down the Ohio River and threatening water supplies as far south as Louisville, Ky.

Public officials urged people to boil all drinking water.

Joseph Harrison, chief of water supply at Chicago's Environmental Protection Agency branch, said the chemical - carbon tetrachloride - can damage the liver and has caused cancer in laboratory animals.

"If you drink it, you probably won't be acutely affected right away. There is a risk, it could cause cancer eventually. It's a high risk," Harrison said.

Meanwhile, two Ohio University chemists warned that boiling water contaminated by carbon tetrachloride also could be dangerous.

"If there is an appreciable amount and you're standing right over it, it certainly wouldn't do any good to inhale" the vapors, said Dr. George Serif, chairman of the biochemistry department at Ohio State University.

"The best thing probably would be to bring in an outside source of water," he added.

"The main thing you have to be concerned about is the toxicity of the vapor - would it come off more easily by boiling it?" said Dr. Leon Dorfman of the OSU chemistry department.

"They're public health officials are probably more concerned about separating it" from the water.

Serif and Dorfman did not advise against boiling small quantities of water.

Health officials in affected areas report public concern over the water situation.

"We've been getting a lot of calls to the emergency rooms at the hospital," said Tom Nichols, Portsmough, Ohio, health commissioner. "At a basketball game, there were people thinking they were getting sick from the water they had been drinking."

There have been no reports of illness due to the chemical.

In Portsmouth, the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility, which houses 2,200 prisoners, was immediately switched to an alternate water source.

"We have a good idea at this point what company is the source," said James Manwaring, EPA director in Philadelphia, but he declined to identify the firm.

He said that carbon tetrachloride was found in three discharge pipes of the FMC Corp. plant in South Charleston, W. Va., one of four producers of the chemical in that area.

FMC was the only one of the four plants that refused to allow EPA inspectors to make tests Feb. 8. FMC did agree to testing Friday during a federal district court hearing at Parkersburg, W. Va., Manwaring said.

The other three plants - Diamond Shamrock, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Allied Chemical Co. - all agreed to discharge tests after the chemical began slowing up downstream in drinking water at Huntington, W. Va., Manwaring said. He said tests at the three plants showed no discharge of the toxic chemical.

FMC spokesman Bill Currey said: "Reports linking FMC's South Charleston operation to carbon tetrachloride problems in the Ohio River have not been confirmed by FMC plant officials in South Charleston. No major spill of carbon tetrachloride has been recorded at the plant."

Manwaring said tests on the Kanawa River, a tributary of the Ohio, upstream from the four plants showed no trace of the chemical.

Americans Expected To Top Meat Eating Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans ate more meat in 1976 than ever before and probably will break that record again this year, particularly if the nation's economy improves and consumers have more to spend, according to the Agriculture Department.

"However, layoffs due to the energy shortage, plus larger home heating bills, are cutting into consumers' income," officials said Friday. "This could hurt the demand for meat early this year."

But the analysis, included in a new livestock and mat situation report, said that demand for meat "should be strong during mid and late year if the general economy improves as expected."

Further, consumption will stimulated by tax rebates, Carter's plan to create jobs, provide tax rebates and other plans to ease federal income taxes, if those are carried out, the report said.

"However, the enactment of any of the proposals will probably not have any impact on meat purchases and prices until some time during the spring," the report said.

"The current concern is the cold weather which has struck much of the United States and is slowing economic activity and reducing consumer spendable earnings," it said. "This situation will continue to be a dampening factor on meat demand and prices until the weather improves."

Last year, as the result of farmers and ranchers culling their cattle herds and sending more animals to market, beef production rose to a record of 25.7 billion pounds, up 8 per cent from 1975.

Pork output, triggered by stepped-up hog production, rose to 12.2 billion pounds, also up about 8 per cent. In all, red meat output last year was a record of 39 billion pounds, including beef, pork, veal, lamb and mutton.

On a per capita basis - using carcass weights before meat is carved into retail cuts - Americans ate an average of 193.1 pounds each in 1976, up from 181.1 in 1975 and from the previous record of 191.8 pounds in 1971.

As usual, beef accounted for most, a record of 128.9 pounds last year against 120.1 in 1975. Pork consumption on a per capita basis averaged 58.2 pounds, up from 54.8 in 1975.

Veal consumption dropped to 4.1 pounds per capita in 1976 from 4.2 pounds the previous year when producers were sending more calves to slaughter plants.

Dinner Worth Vacation Money

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — George Strohl, his wife and three other couples had saved $2,000 for a vacation in Las Vegas. But when the opportunity came to spend it all on the greatest meal of their lives, they couldn't resist the gamble.

"It was worth every cent," said Strohl, a San Francisco bank executive, after the gourmets' delight. "I'm convinced no one ever has had a better dinner."

The meal had been donated by Narsai's Restaurant here for public television station KQED's fund-raising auction.

It was billed as a re-creation of the dinner served last year to New York Times food critic Craig Claiborne at Chez Denis in Paris. That meal was donated to WNET's auction by American Express, simply as a meal for two at any restaurant accepting the company's credit card. Claiborne's bill came to $4,000.

When Strohl heard that the donated meal was on KQED's auction menu, he got on the phone and asked the group's approval to bid the vacation money.

One of the couples was vacationing in Paris, touring gourmet restaurants, coincidentally - but Strohl managed to reach even them.

The four couples' bid of $2,000 was the winner, and the eight gourmets sat down in Narsai's on Thursday to a 25-course dinner that lasted five hours.

Restaurant owner Narsai David was reluctant to put a price tag on the meal, but guessed that the diners got more than their money's worth.

The wines also, he said, would have cost $800. They included a 1945 Chateau Gruaud-Larose, an 1897 Malvasia Madeira and a 1945 Chateau Suduiraut.

David said some of the wine had been flown from the Chez Denis cellar.

Among the other delicacies served were mousse of quail in tartlet pureed quail baked and served in a pastry shell, blue point oysters with Buerre blanc a white butter sauce, quail en brochette, breast of capon, chartreuse of partridge in a mold with vegetables, filet of beef, and ragnodade de veau veal kidneys in a pastry shell.

The diners tended to over-eat during the early courses of the dinner, Strohl said, but "we all managed to eat a little of everything."

Crosland Dies Early Saturday

LONDON (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland, an articulate and sometimes unconventional socialist who was hard at work trying to solve the Rhodesia crisis when he collapsed with a stroke last Sunday, died early today at the age of 58.

The Foreign Office announced that Crosland, who had been in a coma since Monday, "died peacefully" at Oxford Radcliffe Infirmary.

"Mrs. Crosland was with him at the bedside when he died," the announcement said. "Her family is with her."

Crosland, who became foreign secretary last April had been engaged in the most vital work of his political career just before his stroke.

He was coordinating efforts to obtain black majority rule in the rebel British colony of Rhodesia, he was negotiating the fishing limits of Europe's offshore waters, and he was chairing Common Market ministers' meetings in Brussels.

Crosland had gone out for a walk last Sunday before returning to his Oxford country home to settle down to work on papers on Rhodesia.

"Susan, something has happened," he told his wife.

He was rushed to the hospital where his condition rapidly worsened in what doctors called a "progressive stroke." He had been listed as dangerously ill since Monday.

Family sources said he suffered "massive brain damage" and government officials said his condition ruled out brain surgery.

Mrs. Crosland, an American born journalist who writes under the name Susan Barnes, said her husband had "always been an extraordinarily hard worker. He would not have wanted to live any other way."

Crosland's personal friend and political adviser, David Lipsey, told reporters Crosland died without ever regaining consciousness.

Tributes began to pour in after Crosland's death was announced.

Prime Minister Callaghan said: "I am deeply saddened by the tragic death of Tony Crosland. For 30 years he was a close colleague and friend and a major political figure whose death is a great loss to the government, the country and the labor Party."

American Ambassador Anne Armstrong said: "I saw firsthand his service to his country and personally have come to value greatly his friendship and counsel."

DR. E. LINN DRAPER JR.
...Symposium Speaker

Symposium Set At High School

Senior science students from Snyder, Hermleigh and Ira high schools will participate in an energy science symposium Tuesday at Snyder High School.

Featured speakers will be Dr. E. Linn Draper Jr., director of the Nuclear Reactor Laboratory at the University of Texas at Austin, and Monta Zengerle, research biologist for Texas Electric Service Co.

Draper will speak on "Energy Outlook and Future Energy Sources." Zengerle will discuss "Energy and the Environment."

The symposium, sponsored by Texas Electric, will begin at 1 p.m. About 290 students from the three high schools are expected to attend.

Draper, who is also an assistant professor of mechanical engineering at the university, received his doctorate in nuclear science and engineering from Cornell University.

Zengerle received his M.S. in fisheries science from Texas A&M. He worked with Ozark Fisheries in the Missouri Ozarks before joining Texas Electric in 1973.

'Hike-Bike' Plans Announced Here

Teresa Walker, secretary of "Teens Aid Retarded," has been named chairman of the Scurry County 1977 Hike Bike for Retarded Citizens, it was announced Saturday by Glenda Treat, president of the TARs.

"On April 2, residents of Scurry County will have an opportunity to take part in this worthwhile event," said Ms. Walker. "We hope everyone who can will join us in the 'Hike-Bike' either as participants or sponsors."

The Hike-Bike Campaign calls on volunteer citizens to either "hike" or "bike" for retarded citizens over a measured course of 22 miles. Businesses and individuals are asked to pledge so much per mile for the distance walked or ridden by participants.

The Hike-Bike will begin at 8 a.m. on April 2.

Hikers and bikers will rally at the Humble-Smith School and the measured course will run for 22 miles from that point. Check points will be set up at intervals along the route to accurately clock miles walked or ridden by participants.

"Walks and bike rides have been very successful in other parts of the county," Ms. Walker said, "and they have raised thousands of dollars for the mentally retarded. I know we count on the citizens of Scurry County to make the campaign here an outstanding success."

Interested walkers, riders and sponsors have been urged to contact Barbara Miller at 573-7271 for further information.

Carson Wants To Go Live

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson, host of the "Tonight Show," wants to go back to live broadcasts, despite the unpredictability of some of his celebrity guests.

The "Tonight Show" was broadcast live when it began in 1954 but has been taped since Oct. 1, 1962, when Carson became host. The live shows will begin March 15.

"It was Johnny's idea to go live and we are delighted," Robert Howard, president of NBC-TV, said Friday.

NBC said, however, that the West Coast will continue to get each night's show on tape.

HEALTH TIP
from DEAN

The rate at which a wound heals can be controlled by the amount of oxygen reaching the injured area, a professor of surgery informs. Oxygen can be applied directly to the wound, or systemically, by face mask or nasal tube. As an example, a woman's ulcerated heel resisted skin grafts, and amputation seemed necessary. Instead, the doctor encased her foot in a plastic bag, and pure oxygen was continuously piped in. Within 24 hours there was evidence of healing.

Canceled Leases Probe In Spotlight Last Week

By Terry Kirkpatrick
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Natural gas trapped in rock under the nation's seabottoms became the subject of bitter controversy in two government arenas this past week.

A federal judge here declared that the Interior Department's leases with oil companies for the development of oil and natural gas fields in the Atlantic Ocean violated environmental law.

At the same time, in Washington, the new secretary of the interior, Cyrus Andrus, launched an investigation to determine whether oil companies were delaying production of gas in Gulf of Mexico fields.

These events were significant for two reasons.

The gas produced on federal leases in the Gulf of Mexico goes to interstate pipelines, where this winter's shortfall of some 2.5 trillion cubic feet is concentrated.

The mid-Atlantic leases in dispute are thought to cover land holding a lot of natural gas, near the Northeastern states most in need of it.

The Interior Department is considering an appeal of U.S. District Judge Jack Weinstein's ruling.

If the ruling stands, drilling in the mid-Atlantic, previously scheduled to start this spring, will have to await revision of Interior's environmental impact statement and a new lease sale, lawyers in the case say.

A second sale covering the same tracts leased last Aug. 17 would put the oil companies in an untested position, since this is the first time that leases have been voided.

The companies have already made public, through their bids, their evaluation of each tract.

In other business news this past week:

Home mortgages in January were cheaper and of longer duration than in December.

The nationwide average cost of a home mortgage, which includes the interest rate on the contract plus the initial fees, fell to 9.05 per cent from 9.10 per cent. The average term rose to 28.2 years from 27.7 years in the previous month.

The Federal Home Loan Bank board, which complies the national figures, said the easier credit terms in January were the result of large savings flows into thrift institutions and fewer mortgage buyers during an abnormally cold month.

The severely cold weather in January also resulted in sharply higher food and fuel prices and lower industrial activitiy, as expected.

The prices of goods that make up the government's Consumer Price Index rose .8 per cent in January, the fastest rise in the CPI in 18 months. Price increases for food and fuel were important factors in the overall rise.

American Telephone & Telegraph Corp., the nation's most widely-owned company, raised the quarterly dividend on its common stock by 10 cents to $1.05 a share following its record earnings last year.

Pilot In Crash Not Licensed

TULSA (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration (FFA) has confirmed that the Oklahoma City man who piloted the airplane which crashed and killed the daughter and son-in-law of evangelist Oral Roberts did not have the proper license to fly the twin-engine plane.

Lowell Sandquist, an inspector at the FAA's national records center in Oklahoma City, has written the FAA office in Wichita, Kan., that a search of pilot Lewis E. Taylor's records has failed to reveal the necessary multi-engine rating to fly the Piper Navajo which crashed near Anthony, Kan., a week ago Friday.

Taylor's rating was only for a commercial single-engine landplane with instrument privileges, Sandquist said in the letter.

A spokesman for Catlin Aviation of Oklahoma City, Taylor's employer, couldn't be reached for comment on the disclosure.

A Catlin spokesman had earlier described Taylor as an outstanding pilot who was qualified to fly the Lear jet, which has more than one engine.

The victims of the crash were Marshall Nash and his wife, Rebecca Roberts Nash, Oral Roberts' eldest daughter; Mr. and Mrs. Marion C. Buzzard, a Grove, Okla., banker who was Nash's business associate, and the pilot and his wife.

The FAA has said the plane broke apart in the air during a heavy rainstorm. It had left Aspen, Colo., for Tulsa.

Jaycees Kick Off Membership Drive

Snyder Jaycees kicked off a membership drive Friday at their regular luncheon meeting at the Smorgasbord.

Lynn Smith, membership committee chairman, proposed that the Jaycee who brings in the most new members receive a registration, room and $25 expense money for the State Jaycee Convention in Dallas. The second prize would be registration and room fees for the convention and third prize would be convention registration fees.

In other business, the club approved payment of expenses for the delivery of a gas range to the Jaycees Hospital in Gaonzale, which was donated through the Jaycee-ettes.

Jerry Richardson reported on a dinner given to Scurry County Junior Livestock participants, and labeled it a "complete success."

It was announced that Bill Urban and Jerry Richardson will serve as co-chairman for the annual Jaycee Radio Day at KSNY on March 19.

President Bob Clifton reported that the board had approved participation in the city's vaccination program again this year. Bill West was named chairman of the project, with Fred Castillo to serve as co-chairman Jonathan Jensen was the guest of Bob Clifton at the meeting.

Farm Exports To Set High

WASHINGTON (AP) - The value of farm exports this fiscal year is expected to set a record of $23.2 billion, eclipsing the old mark of $22.8 billion in 1975-76, according to the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Friday that the actual tonnage of major bulk commodities may drop 5 to 10 per cent from last year's 107 million metric tons but that higher prices of some products will more than make up for the decline in volume. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

"Wheat, feed grains, soybeans and protein meal comprise over 90 percent of this tonnage, and reduced exports of all these commodities are anticipated," the report said.

"However, for many higher-valued products, volume gains are expected," it said. "These products range from cotton, animal fats, non-fat dry milk and poultry meat to processed potatoes and beverage-base syrups."

Asia, as a region, will be the largest buyer of U.S. farm products this year with purchases estimated at $8.2 billion, followed by Western Europe with $8 billion.

Japan will continue as the largest single-country market with purchases estimated at $3.7 billion.

Andy Devine Dies At 71

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) - Andy Devine, the gravel-voiced sidekick "Jingles" to television's Wild Bill Hickok, died at the University of California Irvine Medical Center of cardiac arrest, a family spokesman said.

Death came to the jovial 71-year-old character actor at 6:38 p.m. Friday. He had a history of leukemia and recently had been treated at several California hospitals for that disease and related ailments.

When told by doctors that he had the disease but that they had diagnosed it as not being serious, Devine said, "I might die of two or three other things before leukemia gets me."

The actor was best known as the fat friend of Wild Bill Hickok, played by actor Guy Madison. His most recent performance was a cameo role last year in "Won Ton Ton, The Dog That Saved Hollywood."

Devine, born in Flagstaff, Ariz., on Oct. 7, 1905, came to Los Angeles in 1925 after working as professional football player, telephone lineman, lifeguard and news photographer.

His movie career, which spanned two generations, began when he was approached on Hollywood Boulevard by a talent scout who noticed his husky form and told him he might be able to work at Universal Pictures.

Devine's portly figure stayed with him through life.

"When I was working with Roy Rogers and Dale Evans at Republic, I hit a high of 358 pounds," he recalled.

His first film role was in "The Collegians" series. Later, he appeared in "The Spirit of Notre Dame," the original "A Star is Born," and "Stagecoach," among others.

From 1935 to 1940 he appeared on the Jack Benny radio show, playing Benny's cheerful sidekick. He worked on the Wild Bill Hickok TV series which ran for 118 episodes in the 1950s and later on his own children's show, "Andy's Gang."

His voice, which sounded like the squeaky wheeze of a badly played accordian, slowed his acting career for a time. But because of his football experience, he was given a role in "The Spirit of Notre Dame," in which his rasp enhanced the part and assured his film career.

Texas Firms Prepare To Send Gas To Northeast

HOUSTON (AP) - Texas Electric utility firms are preparing to divert about 9 billion cubic feet of natural gas to the winter-stricken Northeast.

State officials announced the voluntary program Friday as Richard Dunham, Federal Power Commission chairman, briefed producers, pipeliners, and distributors on the Emergency Natural Gas Act.

Dunham also is administrator of the emergency act.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said an unspecified number of utility firms had reached a voluntary agreement that commits 300 million cubic feet of additional gas a day to interstate pipeline systems.

Hobby said this would approximate 9 billion cubic feet over the next month, but Alan Erwin, a member of the Texas Utility Commission, indicated the agreement could go beyond a month.

"We intend to continue this voluntary program as long as it is needed or as long as we can do so without impacting the liability of deliverability of electricity to Texas consumers," Erwin said.

Dunham told Erwin federal regulations should not prevent the utility firms from obtaining a fair price for the gas so their now surplus supplies can be replaced later.

"We need some assurances the gas we release comes back at a fair price and that we are going to be able to replace that gas," Erwin said.

"We are talking about voluntary sales so it seems to me replacement cost will have to be mutually agreed upon by the parties involved," Dunham responded.

Hobby said the Emergency Gas Act "is a workable short range plan but it is not a long range national energy policy which this country so desperately needs."

"While working to alleviate the miseries caused by this year's shortages, we have to look beyond next month's utility bill and the next election," Hobby said.

"It is obvious we have some uncomfortable and expensive decisions to make. This winter should have convinced us political expediency will not suffice for a national energy policy."

Hicks On Texas Tech Dean's List

Greg Hicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. T.A. Hicks, a petroleum engineering major, was named to the dean's list at Texas Tech. He had a grade average of 3.85.

Workers Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — An estimated one million workers idled earlier this winter because of natural gas shortages have returned to their jobs after a break in the weather, the government says.

But the report was balanced by unfavorable economic developments and a word of caution that the effects of the cold weather probably will be felt for weeks.

Federal Energy Administration figures released Friday show about 242,500 workers still unemployed because of the gas shortage caused by the coldest winter in the nation's history.

An estimated 32,000 workers remain off their jobs in West Virginia, with 30,000 still idle in Alabama because of the shortages, the FEA reported. But all those who lost their jobs temporarily in Maryland, Michigan and Wisconsin are back at work.

As the number of unemployed (because of the lack of natural gas) dwindled, Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus said he was postponing action designed to grant new petroleum leases off the Pacific Coast so officials could get a better idea of what areas should be open to development.

The announcement came on the heels of Andrus' earlier cancellation of petroleum leasing in Cook Inlet in Alaska and a decision by a federal judge to invalidate leases sold off the Atlantic Coast.

Water District's Margin Increases

The margin of operation for the Colorado Municipal Water District increased sharply in January, compared with the same month a year ago, according to the monthly Revenue Fund statement. Revenues, however, are based on billings for the previous month's delivery of water.

Revenues for January amounted to $466,690 compared to $358,413 a year ago. At the same time, expenditures of $150,053 were less than $181,030 for January 1976, leaving an excess of revenue over expenditures of $316,637 as opposed to $177,383 last year. Of this excess, $300,000 was transferred to the Net Revenue fund for debt service and other indentured purposes.

For the first time since the energy crisis, power costs were down. The January figure was only $55,212 (including a $1,294 credit for a previous overbilling), which compared with $181,030 for January in 1976.

Major source of revenue was based on 1,301,290,000 gallons, off slightly from the 1,376,009,000 in January a year ago. Of the water produced in January 996,877,000 came from Lakes J.B. Thomas and E.V. Spence, whereas a year ago these sources yielded 1,065,973. The balance of production in both cases came from district and city wells.

Administration expense of $27,260 was well under the $49,690 a year ago when there was a non-recurring item of $27,414 contributed to the employee retirement fund. Recreation expense was $6,700 for the month, up slightly from $5,370 in January 1976.

Pair Nabbed In Drug Death

LUDINGTON, Mich. (AP) — Mason County authorities say a Ludington couple sought on manslaughter and drug charges has been arrested in Huntsville, Tex.

Warrants have been issued naming Wayne Kittle, 30, and his 27-year-old wife, Yulanda, in the drug death of a 19-year-old Ludington woman last year.

Police say Kathleen Fulton died from an overdose of heroin Sept. 1.

A one man Mason County grand jury issued warrants against the Kittles last December, charging them in the death and with conspiracy to possess with intent to deliver heroin.

ANCA Looking Forward To Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American National Cattlemens' Association says it is looking forward to a hearing scheduled by Sen. George McGovern, D.-S.D., for the purpose of presenting the "Other side" of meat eating and its relationship to heart disease.

McGovern has set March 16 for his nutrition committee to hear the association and others on the meat issue.

Wray Finney, association president, said that the committee's recent staff report on the effects of meat eating, "is a collection of preformed biased opinions" without scientific support.

"There simply is no valid evidence that a decrease in the consumption of beef, including grain fed beef, will result in less heart disease," Finney said Friday in a statement.

A Family Favorite

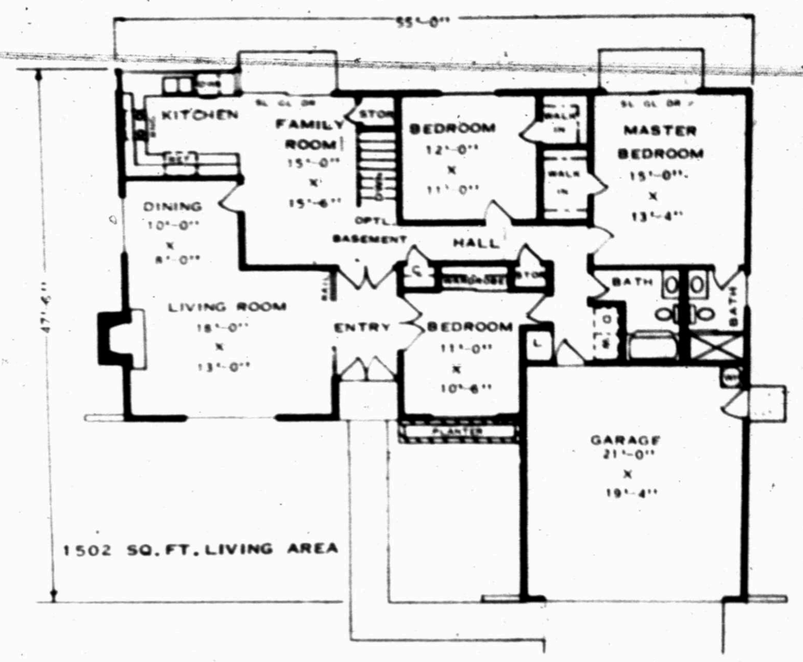
HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth



MODEL BCX1502

Here is a model universally favored by families who give comfortable living top priority.

It is an attractive house, too—its basically efficient rectangular living area delightfully accented by the right-angled placement of the attached double garage. And note, too, the recessed entrance and the good looking roof line. This model can be built either with or without a basement.

Within the double front doors a formal entry competently channels traffic to the front-of-the-house living room, to the family room at the back, or to a well placed bedroom which easily could do double duty as a den.

And what a living room this plan offers. It is comfortably sized and highlighted both by its attractive fireplace and by the interesting railing effectively dramatizing its entrance. A dining ell at the back lends spaciousness yet retains its essential separateness.

Those who cook in this model's delightful U-shaped kitchen never need fear missing out on family fun, for the family room is happily adjacent. And a large sliding glass door here allows inside fun to blend naturally with outdoor pleasures. The family room dimensions include the optional basement entry.

Opening from an L-shaped central hallway are this model's three attractive bedrooms and the main bath. Of course, the big, back-of-the-house master bedroom has its own bath, too, as well as a private garden entry and a large walk-in wardrobe.

The adjacent bedroom has walk-in closet facilities, too, and note the second entrance to the front bedroom, conveniently located just steps beyond the inside hall door to the garage. Laundry facilities, too, are happily placed here, efficiently close to the main bath. Note, also, the hall storage closets.

This model, obviously, deserves the acclaim which homebuilders everywhere have lavished upon it. For livability, for total family comfort, it is hard to beat.

Cookie Monster Pays Off

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — It took about a week, but the man who stole Girl Scout cookies from a 10-year-old apparently has thought better of it.

Stacey Hamsen received a $5 bill and a letter Friday in an envelope that had "The Thief" where a return address would go.

The note said: "I was merely the victim of circumstances as my brain was clotted with alcohol. The young whipper's hard work should not go unrewarded. I wanted to come back but the heat was on. Please forgive my uncommon and unjust crime."

Susan Hamsen, mother of the fourth grader, said Stacey was "just bowled over" by the letter.

She said Stacey was selling Girl Scout cookies Feb. 10 when "this car pulled up and one of three men asked her for some cookies. When she approached the car, one of the men grabbed the cookies and the car went speeding off."

Stacey was not injured. Several days later, members of the police department bought 55 boxes of cookies from her, presented her with an assistant chief's badge, and apologized for "not having caught the bad guys."

Iowa Poet Volunteers

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A state senator has suggested that the Hawkeye state hire a poet laureate at $1,000 a year. But Rep. Betty Jean Clark has volunteered to take on the duties for nothing.

"Of course, you must remember that one gets what one pays for," she said.

Rep. Clark presented this sample of her work:

"Oh hail to Iowa, the state of tall corn:
Oh hail to all efforts to rid her of porn:
Oh hail to Bob Ray, her untiring chief,
Whose photogeneity defies belief:
Oh hail to this House with its wisdom sublime:
And hail to the Senate if you have extra time:
Oh hail to House Staff and pages and clerks,
Without whom we'd all end up looking like jerks:
Oh hail!!"

DRT Has Program On Early-Day Texas Editor

ROTAN — Miss Naomi Ray Morey of Fort Worth, a past President General of the daughters of the Republic of Texas, presented an interesting account of her grandfather, Ferdinand Flake, a pioneer German journalist, of Galveston, to the Col. John H. Moore chapter of the DRT here Tuesday.

She quoted at length from the American German Review in an article titled "Ferdinand Flake: German Pioneer Journalist of the Southwest," by Earl W. Fornell. Miss Morey showed an album with copies of pages from Flake's Bulletin, the early Galveston Daily newspaper.

"Ferdinand Flake, a native of Germany, was the founder and editor of Flake's Bulletin in Galveston, the first successful daily newspaper of the Southwest and the most influential publication in Texas during the first decade following the Civil War," Miss Morey said. "If death had not terminated his career when the editor was but 49 years old, Flake's Bulletin, in the opinion of his contemporaries, would have become one of the dominating journals of the Southwest.

"The moving grace of his English prose placed this German emigrant editor in the immortal fraternity of fearless publicists. The narration of this gentle, but courageous man, has lain much too long in the archives of the State of Texas.

"Flake courageously supported Houston's efforts to keep Texas in the Union. To have been an advocate for the Union in Galveston required the particular convictions which were the hallmark of Flake and his newspaper."

The meeting was held in the home of Josie and Delila Baird. Mrs. Jimmy D. Hale, president, presided. Mrs. J.L. McCright, chaplain, led the prayer, and Delila Baird, secretary, led in pledges to the flags of Texas and the United States.

Following a business session, Miss Morey told of the purposes and accomplishments of the DRT, of her past presidency, and of the significance of her several pins.

Attending were Mmes. Bill Graham, J.L. McCright, Charlie Joe Helms, Jimmy D. Hale and Josie and Delila Baird, all of Rotan, and Mmes. Gene Dulaney, a new member from Snyder, and Mrs. Leland Herod, a guest from Snyder. Another new member from Snyder, Mrs. Jonisue Stiff, was unable to attend.

Grand Jury Probing Mystery Money Recesses

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer

ALICE, Tex. (AP) — A state grand jury probe into the source of $500,000 two youths claim they found on a ranch in South Texas has taken a recess with the source of the money still a mystery.

The panel began its probe last week by questioning the two boys and the father of one of them about the case, which authorities feel somehow might have ended up on the ranch as a result of illegal drug activity.

Dist. Atty. Arnoldo Garcia said after Friday's grand jury session "I recommended that we come back next Thursday primarily to properly prepare for the possibility of contempt."

An offer of immunity was granted to James H. Hiroms, the father of one of the boys and the owner of the land where the money was found.

"The question is whether the immunity fully protects my client," said Phil Westergren, Hiroms' attorney.

Percy Garcia, 16, and Dean Bridges, 15, were stopped on a traffic violation Jan. 31 by Waco police, who found the boys' driving a new car that had just been purchased in Dallas.

State District Court Judge C. W. Laughlin granted immunity to Hiroms and the two boys. The boys maintain that they found the money in an ice chest of Hiroms' ranch north of this South Texas city.

The two boys have not been charged with any drug-related activities in connection with the money.

The Garcia youth testified for nearly 45 minutes. Bridges was in the grand jury room for 70 minutes.

Hiroms, a sheet-metal worker and welder for a petrochemical company, did not testify. When asked if this meant his client feared possible federal prosecution later, attorney Westergren said: "I meant just what I said."

Garcia said, "We actually filed for immunity so there is no delay in the investigation. In effect, it means he Hiroms has to testify or go to jail."

Hiroms, a red-haired man of ruddy complexion, wore a western shirt, blue jeans and boots as he appeared in the courthouse.

"He was prepared to go to jail today. He brought a carton of cigarettes and everything," a courthouse source said.

Once a witness is granted immunity, he must testify before the grand jury or face a contempt of court citation.

If the client lies, he faces possible perjury indictments.

"When they grant that little gift immunity you have to take it," said George W. Shaffer, Percy Garcia's attorney. "Once you are granted immunity, you can't go before a grand jury and take the Fifth Amendment."

If a witness decides not to testify after being granted immunity, he is put in jail until he is willing to talk," noted the district attorney.

Percy Garcia, a stocky sandy-haired high school linebacker, came to the grand jury room wearing a brown leisure suit and accompanied by his attorney, parents and sister.

He left the grand jury room and only smiled when approached by newsmen.

Bridges, in blue jeans and a light jacket, did not appear with his father. He came to the courthouse accompanied by his attorney.

The grand jury was empaneled to seek answers to the question from and who the owner is and any possible illegal activities connected with it.

The boys were stopped by Waco police nearly 300 miles north of here, for running a red light. In the car police found the money, a pistol, and less than four ounces of marijuana.

The money is currently in a Waco bank awaiting the outcome of the grand jury investigation. The Internal Revenue Service has placed a tax lien against it. The state of Texas says it will claim it all if it is found to be illegal funds.

The boys are scheduled to appear in Waco Thursday on a juvenile petition accusing Percy of marijuana possession and Bridges of illegal possession of a firearm.

Ex Policeman Is Sentenced

NEW YORK (AP) — Former New York policeman Tony Ulasewicz has been sentenced to one year of unsupervised probation for failing to report as income the $40,000 he was paid for delivering $200,000 in hush money to the Watergate burglars.

Ulasewicz, 58, told reporters on Friday outside federal court in Brooklyn that he was pleased that the "sting" of the Dec. 22 jury conviction was offset by the lenient sentence.

His attorney, Dana Winslow, said an appeal would be filed.
