Business Harmony

A. C. Bull, councillor of Austin Chamber of Commerce, reported back from attending the convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington, a conspicuous abandonment by the big business leaders of this national organization of the tendency in the past two years of bitter recrimination toward official policies of the federal government.

There was a disposition both on the part of the government and of the leaders of American business back toward conciliation and co-operation, this Texas delegate reported. The friendly spirit shown in that U. S. Secretary Daniel C. Roper was one of the featured speakers on the U. S. C. C. program. He championed one suggestion also favored by officials of the organization, that for a cooperative survey of unemployment, with a view of remedial policy and legislation.

Prompt Action of Our Governor

Some experience with federal red tape caused Governor and Orville Carpenter, old age pension director, to hasten to Washington on undisclosed reports of some hitch in plans to have federal and state pension money ready for distribution July 1.

Much has been said about cumbersome federal bureau procedure. Much criticism has been made, despite the way in which President Roosevelt has cut the heavier burden of routine and red tape and given the country direct action unprecedented in government experience.

The decisive way in which Governor Alfred attacked the threatened delay seems to have produced results. Texas beneficiaries at least will not suffer from inattention of the state officials.

And while Governor Alfred and Carpenter sought to rectify details of the pension arrangement, they also were to plan procedure by which they will gain for Texas participation in other federal benefits for unemployment insurance and a greater share in the crippled children's allotment of social security money.

Adam's Old Alibi

The head of a big surety company, who has studied youthful criminals and their motives, lays much of the blame for their downfall upon the "gold digger" type of women. This type, he says, is becoming more numerous all the time, and "her demands for jewels, fur coats and other things that take money are one of the most fruitful causes of crimes such as embezzlement, forgery and theft." This is doubtless true. But it isn't necessary to lay all the blame, or half of it, upon the women. The present generation doesn't take much stock in Adam's alibi. Blaming the woman, as many an errand man does, is recognized as a sign of weakness. The temptress does wrong, and must make her own moral reckoning; but the man doesn't have to steal or forge or kill because she wants him to, or because she wants the things his crime will provide.

Ever Present Science

Human beings, at this stage of their civilization, have queer prejudices. It is not hard to find in almost any community one or more individuals who profess great distrust of modern science. Its bad influence on human beings and the belief that "the world would be better off without it" are forcefully expressed by the doubters. And in the meantime—the very people who bitterly decry the badness of science are using in their daily lives, for their health and comfort, to earn their livings and to provide for their pleasure, things which would not exist today if it were not for that same much-distrusted science. They cannot escape ever-present science. Nor do they really wish to. Light, transportation, radio, the telephone, eye glasses, moving pictures, clocks, soap, clothes, heating systems, and so on indefinitely, are all the results of science. Let any one make an inventory of the things used in his home or office and the things he sees about him daily, and most of them will be revealed as the offspring of science.

W. D. R. OWEN IS CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY JUDGE

To The Citizens of Eastland County:

In making my announcement as a candidate for the office of county judge of Eastland county, I realize that the position is one of great importance and the man who is entrusted with the same has great responsibilities resting upon his shoulders. Knowing such to be true, before offering myself as a candidate, I have sought diligently to qualify myself thoroughly to discharge all the duties of such office.

In this my formal announcement, I earnestly solicit your investigation and consideration of my reputation for honesty and far dealing for diligence and energy, and for education and experience.

Though my life has been spent in private pursuits, and though I have never held a public office in my life, I feel that I have become well enough known in Eastland county, during the 42 years since my father brought me here, to enable the people to find out about me in every way. If my fellow citizens will investigate me from the standpoint of qualifications for the office and will give me their earnest consideration as their prospective county judge, and if they find me worthy, will give me their vote and influence, it will be greatly appreciated. If I am elected as your county judge I pledge my diligent efforts to show my appreciation by the manner in which I discharge the duties of the office.

I was reared on the farm, and assisted in cultivating a crop every year from the time I was eight years of age until I was 25. I have a high school and university education, a large part of which I paid for myself with money earned by farming the soil of Eastland county. I have had 20 years experience in the practice of law.

I am making this race upon my qualifications and merits and soliciting the support of the voters of Eastland county upon that basis alone. I am a life-long Democrat and shall abide the decision of the people at the Democratic primary on July 25, 1936, and whatever the decision of the majority may be, I shall accept the same with friendship and appreciation in my heart toward all.

It is my desire and expectation to see all the voters of Eastland county between now and the time of the primary and I shall be working diligently toward that and all the time. However, if I should fail to see any of you, please accept this as my personal request for your vote and influence.

Respectfully yours,
W. D. R. OWEN.

Royal Welcome for Budding Queen

If Princess Elizabeth should become England's queen, as is possible since she is second in line of succession to the throne, she is apt to prove a democrat as well as pretty monarch. There's not the slightest difference in her manner as she shakes hands with an official at the Royal Tournament in London. Tiny Princess Margaret Rose is at right, and behind them stand the Duke and Duchess of York, their parents.

CHAPTER XXV

FORTUNATELY Linda was able to get a drawing room. She didn't know how she could have escaped accepting Honey Harmon's invitation to share here. And the last person in the world that Linda wanted to share any intimacies with was Honey.

When she had said good night sweetly to the other girl and was at last in the privacy of her own company with the miles toward Pete growing shorter, Linda went back, step by step, over the way she had travelled since Honey Harmon had come to Newtown and changed the design of her life. Ironically enough, Honey could have been on the train that was to bring her back to a final readjustment.

Linda was almost a fatalist. She did not think for one moment during that searching review that had she stayed in Newtown, she would have found the key to happiness. She knew that she had had to have the lesson in disillusionment to find her real love. Perhaps it had been painful for Pete but now that she knew for all time that she loved him, that he was the only man she had ever known who was a real man, she would have her lifetime to make up to him for the pain she might have cost him.

Remembering the lean line of his jaw, the easy grace of his walk, she fell asleep with a song in her heart, its echo reaching out to her tomorrow.

She had been without a purpose all her life until now and, waking the next morning, she lay back in her pillows with the serene relaxed satisfaction of a woman who has made the first step in accomplishing the great purpose of her life and from whom no action can now be expected. She would like to have dreamed her way to New York, passing time with nothing more exciting than window- and star-gazing. She knew it was quite impossible.

HONEY proved it to be so. About 11:30 Honey's maid invited Linda to lunch with Honey. Linda accepted.

She might have been Honey's dearest friend. "Darling, why didn't you tell me you were coming east on this train?" "I didn't know it until the last minute myself," Linda answered, applying herself to her grapefruit. "Really? How exciting. Romance? New job or clothes?" "Why . . . er . . . a story. I'm . . . I'm going to buy a new story." Linda shouldn't have hesitated over her answer. It was a long and dull trip and Honey pounced on any possible kernel of interest. She tried to remember what she might have heard about Linda in the last few weeks. There had been that story about Basil Thorne, but did she really believe it? Honey wasn't sure, but remembering it, her smouldering dislike of Linda broke into little flames of anger.

"I think you're simply wonderful," she said to Linda. "Just think, if it hadn't been for Pete Gardner re-writing that script that I first bought, you never would have come to Hollywood and been so successful."

Pete had rewritten that first script! So, she actually owed her whole career to him! Swift color rose in Linda's cheek and hurriedly she spoke of something else.

WHEN they arrived at Kansas City with a short stop-over, she was with Honey when the reporters arrived to catch what news of Hollywood they could pick up by interview. They pounced on Honey.

"Will you tell us why you are going east?" Honey, radiant in mink and orchids, was gracious, flashing her famous smile and elongated eyelashes. "I expect to desert pictures for a little while," she admitted, smiling apologetically.

"And what for?" her interviewer asked.

HONEY pondered thoughtfully for a moment. Should she or shouldn't she tell him? At last:

"I am going to do a play. I think every actress should try the legitimate theater, and I've always wanted to, but they simply wouldn't give me time away from Hollywood."

"Have you decided what you are going to do? Any play in mind?" Again the hesitancy and the gracious reluctance and an unseen sly look at Linda. "I . . . I expect to play in Peter Gardner's new play that Holbein is producing."

Linda did only one thing when she heard that. She held her pocketbook with fingers that bit into it and somehow stilled the rocking of her being.

"Gardiner?" The reporter had read his Hollywood columns. "That's . . . er . . . I hope you'll excuse the question, Miss Harmon, but wasn't there a rumor that you were engaged to him?"

Honey actually giggled, but just for a moment. Then she looked confused, happy, struggling for the right answer and finally it came with a please-don't-quote-me-because-I-trust-you-gaze of innocence. "Not really engaged," she said, and left them feeling that Pete Gardner was waiting at Grand Central with a marriage license in his hand.

Not one thing outwardly about Linda was changed. They left Kansas City sitting together in Linda's drawing room. They dined together, played cards and said good night to each other.

Linda didn't tell her that she was getting off at Chicago. One thing off to go back to the train leaving her heart at the end of the journey she had set out upon so confidently.

She couldn't bear a moment of thinking. There were hours before the train westward-bound would carry her back. She walked until she was exhausted and the rain had drenched her once chic suit. It was warm and noisy and hurried in the railroad station; she preferred there until bored by her study of people who meant nothing to her and afraid of her own blank thoughts, she went to the newsstand. At the booth where outdoor town newspapers were sold, she bought a copy of the Newtown Blade.

And over a warming cup of coffee in the station restaurant she perused its once-familiar columns until coming on a headline, she sat bolt upright, pushing check and change over the counter.

BLADE SOLD TO NEW PUBLISHER. The words danced before her eyes.

In her pocket was her return ticket to Hollywood. It remained there, forgotten, as she slept wearily for the six hours that the train to Newtown sped over the road out of Chicago.

It was scarcely 9 in the morning when she opened the door to the outer office in the old Blade Building. She didn't know the girl at the desk.

"Can you tell me whom I should see about getting a job here?" she asked.

"You'll have to see the publisher," the girl said, noting the ingratitude of Linda's smart suit and her face, without make-up, weary from lack of sleep but alight with an inner glow.

"That's what I really came for," Linda said, gravely.

"I guess you can go right in," the other girl said, opening the swinging gate.

Linda walked through and opened the door without knocking. She walked softly and softly closed the door in back of her.

She scarcely breathed the words "Excuse me, please. I used to work on this paper. I was happier here than anywhere I've been in my life. I'd like to apply for a position again if you have one for me."

There was a pause and then: "You're interested only in a temporary job. I can't help you, but you'll consider a permanent job the publisher can offer you—as he always has from the bottom of his heart—a position that fits it. He heart. I mean."

"It's the only position in the world worth having," she said, and walked into Pete Gardner's arm. THE END.

Kate Smith Guest of Honor
HAPPY BIRTHDAY KATE SMITH

300-Pound Cake Is Given Radio Singer

Kate Smith was guest of honor a few days ago at a spectacular celebration in Constitution Hall, Washington, D. C. More than 4,000 guests, including numerous government officials and other dignitaries were on hand to witness the colorful ceremonies which marked the Radio Star's birthday and the fifth anniversary of her first broadcast.

With the massed bands of Washington American Legion Posts played and the audience applauded, John A. Hartford, president of The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, whose Washington unit of 1,500 employees sponsored the party, presented Miss Smith with a 300-pound birthday cake, standing six feet in height. Mr. Hartford requested that in after playfully pretending to fumble in his pockets for the "little birthday remembrance" he wanted to give the radio star.

The golden-voiced singer was overcome by the enthusiastic reception of her "home-town" people and the honors heaped upon her that she was forced to borrow a handkerchief from the master-of-ceremonies, Mr. Harry Butcher. "I'm so happy," she confessed, "that I'm afraid I'm going to cry."

Among those paying tribute to Miss Smith were: James L. Friesser, vice president of the American Red Cross; Joseph S. Malloy, district commander of the American Legion; Alfred Jacobson of the Jewish War Veterans; William S. Paley, president of The Columbia Broadcasting System, and J. W. Barnett, president of the Washington A&P Managers' Benefit association.

Mr. Malloy and Mr. Jacobson presented Miss Smith with a bouquet and a handsome engraved medalion. Mr. Friesser, on behalf of the American Red Cross, praised her work in securing contributions for the stricken victims of the floods and gave her a parchment scroll in recognition of her services.

Addressing the assembled guests, Mr. Hartford, declared that the welfare of each and every employee was the thing nearest his heart. And when he said, "We are more interested in building men than balance sheets," he received a tremendous ovation.

Mr. Paley, extending his congratulations to the honor guest of the evening, said, "Her character, unselfishness, sympathy and human kindness is as much a part of Kate Smith as her voice". Miss Smith brought with her to the party a revue which included

TEXAS GROOMS EX-BUTCHER AS WHITE HOPE

DALLAS, May 20—(UP)—Tom Beaupre, until a few months ago a butcher boy, today is regarded by Texas sports writers as their nomination for the heavyweight "white hope" for which the promoters have been searching since Joe Louis began clouting all comers.

Beaupre had his 17th professional fight here early in May, and those who saw him start his ring career were surprised by the improvement he has shown in ring craft, speed of foot and punching ability. Through the winter Beaupre did considerable fighting at Chicago and gained much needed experience. His most recent fight, in which he whipped Babe Hunt of Oklahoma solidified home town fans in his favor and now there is talk—extravagant but pleasant—of the possibility of a bout during the centennial this summer between Beaupre and James J. Braddock for the title.

The prowess of the former butcher boy has proved sufficient, however, to reawaken general interest in Texas in prize fighting and unless someone upsets the Beaupre apple cart in the next month or so there probably will be great popular clamor for him to meet a first class opponent.

TERMITES
Tunnel Into The Finest Homes

If you want the true facts about termites and their costly damage, call the Cisco Daily News. You will be amazed at the way these wood-eating insects cleverly tunnel into the finest homes, and without noise or sign eat away the inside of timbers. Ignoring the ravages of termites is costing home and building owners more than $50,000,000 a year. You may have to pay part of this bill. You can not see or hear termites at work, and only an experienced inspector can discover the extent of their destruction. It is best to have your property inspected for termites. We will be happy to make this inspection without cost or obligation by your notifying the Daily News here.

W. M. S. Convention Is Held In Ranger

Announcement is made of the Cisco district convention of the Women's Missionary Societies of the Methodist churches in Ranger today at the First Methodist church. The session opened at 9:30 a. m. and recess for a covered dish luncheon at noon. A district secretary is to be elected to succeed Mrs. Embry of Rising Star, who is moving out of this district. The call for the convention was reportedly necessitated by the need to fill immediately the post to be vacated by Mrs. Embry. Otherwise the convention was to be held this fall.
