Art award presentation slates Rockefeller visit

David Rockefeller, representing his family's Rockefeller Foundation, will visit Snyder Friday to officially present SHS the school's $10,000 arts award. award.

Special activities are planned in conjunction with his visit, beginning with an 11:40 a.m. assembly in Worsham Auditorium.

From noon until 1 p.m., a reception in Rockefeller's honor is planned with a buffet luncheon served on the stage and foyer of the auditorium.

At 1 p.m., two scenes for the SHS state-winning one-act play "The Crucible" will be presented in honor of Rockefeller and his visiting team.

At 1:25 p.m., they are scheduled to visit the art department of the high school for a brief tour before leaving the city.

Last Feb. 21, SHS was officially announced as an award winner chosen by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund. It has been established to honor outstanding fine arts programs in the nation's schools.

Snyder was chosen from an initial 238 applicants nationwide to include both private and public elementary, junior high and high schools of all sizes.

This year, eight schools were awarded the $10,000 grant. The only restriction regarding the award is that it be used to further the arts at respective schools.

Schools honored were located in Dallas, in a suburb of Chicago, in surburban areas of Tennessee and Ohio; and in smaller communities to include an island in southeast Alaska and the southwest corner of Utah.

Other winners of the honor include Montezuma Creek Elementary School, Montezuma Creek, Utah; Garfield Elementary, Medina, Ohio; Blatchley Junior High, Sitka, Alaska; Germantown High School, Germantown, Tenn.; Proviso East High School, Maywood, Ill.; Wyoming High School, Wyoming, Ohio; and Arts Magnet High School in Dallas.

White to offer tax increase proposal

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is ready to propose a $1.3 billion tax increase bill that would raise the state sales tax and hike taxes on alcoholic beverages, cigarettes and motor vehicles to pay for higher teacher salaries and state highway improvements, aides say.

Aides who attended a briefing Wednesday, said White likely will make the proposal public at a news conference on Friday.

They said the governor favors increasing the alcoholic beverage tax by 20 percent, from $2 per gallon to $2.40 per gallon, and raising the tax on beer about 2 cents a gallon to 11 cents.

Under the plan, the cigarette tax would be boosted by a nickel a pack to 23½ cents, and a 5 percent hike in motor vehicle sales taxes, to 9 percent on the dollar.

The governor already has said he intends to propose a 1-cent increase in the state's sales tax and a 5-cent increase in the state's gasoline tax, bringing the sales tax to 5 cents on the dollar and the gas tax to 10 cents per gallon.

"At this time, that's the governor's preferred plan," said Jim Turner, White's legislative liaison. "We have been trying to build a consensus by talking to the lieutenant governor's office and the speaker's office."

However, aides noted that the plan could be changed before it is unveiled as White meets with lawmakers and business lobbyists.

Dick Merkel, press secretary to House Speaker Gib Lewis, said Lewis "agreed with some of the concepts, but he hasn't made up his mind yet" whether to endorse the plan.

Lewis has supported recommendations for education reform, but has said White should take the lead on any tax proposals.

White has said he will call a special session of the Legislature, possibly on June 4, to consider his school reform and highway proposals.

Turner said White's plan is a "conservative tax bill." He said that if the proposal were adopted, more than $1 billion would be available by 1987 to pay for other state spending needs besides education and highway improvements.

The governor's proposed tax increases in 1985 would raise $710.9 million in additional sales taxes, $351.9 million more in gasoline taxes, $137.5 million in motor vehicle sales taxes and $38.8 million in alcoholic beverage taxes.

White's spending plan for next year calls for $659 million in teacher salary increases and $304 million to equalize state funding for rich and poor school districts.

Residence gutted by blaze

Scurry County man John Leftwich was reportedly hospitalized Thursday morning for treatment of what were thought to be minor injuries sustained when fire erupted in his mobile home southeast of Snyder shortly after 2 a.m.

Fire Chief Terry McDowell said Leftwich reported he was alone in the front bedroom of the home when he was awakened by an explosion in the residence.

He later drove himself to Cogdell Memorial Hospital where he was admitted for treatment of cuts and brusies sustained in the incident.

The Leftwich mobile home, located about six miles southeast of Snyder, was destroyed by the fire.

Units were called to the scene at 2:15 a.m. and battled the blaze for some two hours. The fire had progressed rapidly before firemen arrived on the scene, however.

The blaze was said out around 4:30 a.m.

McDowell said the fire cause was still under investigation late Thursday morning.

Mail delivery plan aids senior citizens

The Scurry County Senior Center and the Snyder Post Office are now cooperating in a new project designed to "ease the minds" of many older Americans who live alone.

The Postal Carrier Alert Program — which has been operating successfully in other areas for the past two years — is about to be launched in Snyder. The tentative date for the program to begin is May 14, according to Gloria Shaw, director of the senior center.

Under the program, anyone who is 60 or older and has a mail box is eligible. Senior citizens will register as a participant with the senior center, Shaw said.

"When they sign up, they give their name, address, telephone number, age, medical problems they might have, and a friend or relative to be called," she said. "All information given will be kept in confidential records."

Postal carriers will be advised of all participants. When they notice the mail is not being removed regularly (usually a 24-48 hour period), the carrier will notify the senior center who in turn will call the contact person listed on the registration card.

This person will then check on the senior citizen to be sure what the situation is, Shaw said.

The best contact person to be named on the registration card is someone — friend or relative — who lives close to the

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Practice makes perfect--assuming you have some talent to start with."

Snyder High School is a typical Texas school. Each year, new trophies and awards are won, and new places have to be found to display them. If the truth were known, there are probably more awards in storage than there are on display.

This does not distract from the efforts made by students over the years, and Snyder High has a reputation for being a fierce competitor in all areas.

At 11:40 a.m. Friday, an unique award will be presented to SHS, and the award represents many years of work resulting in the current tradition of excellence.

David Rockefeller Jr. will be here tommorow to officially present SHS with its $10,000 Rockefeller Foundation award for excellence in arts education.

Snyder was one of eight schools in the U.S. selected. Snyder was selected for demonstrating excellence in all areas of fine arts education--including speech and drama, band, choir and art.

The money is not as significant as the recognition. Snyder was the only non-speciality school selected by the visiting committee.

Jerry Worsham, drama teacher at SHS, recently responded to the criticism of extra-curricular programs in Texas public schools. "We hear the call to get back to basics. Although such an idea sounds good, it may be misleading. Ours is no longer a basic society...The fact that our society has never accepted 'basic' has led us to the highest standard of living in the world."

Worsham says success in his department requires inventive, creative, problem-solving people. Participation requires quality, cooperation, loyalty, perserverance and goal setting.

As in all extra-curricular areas, drama folks are now involved in medicine, law, clergy, engineering, government, education, languages and military careers.

Worsham was speaking for drama, but it's a worthy message for all areas that strive for excellence.

We salute both students and teachers.

Dr. Charles Church, local vet, said he talked to a University of Texas grad just before Lions Club Tuesday.

Says Church, "He was the smartest fellow I've ever known from UT. He has five kids and three of them graduated from Texas A&M.

Austin hearing for cotton plan

A public hearing is scheduled in Austin Friday to allow comments either "for" or "against" a proposed plan to begin an assessment at Scurry County gins to finance a pest control program for cotton.

Members of the Scurry County Producer's Association hope to receive a go-ahead from Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower to conduct a referendum election here this summer to decide the issue.

Friday's public hearing is to be before ag commission officals. It will begin at 1:30 p.m. Friday on the ninth floor of the Stephen F. Austin Building, 1700 Congress.

Based upon testimony offered at the hearing, a decision will be made regarding the local election.

If it is called, all Scurry County cotton producers will be eligible to cast ballots to decide the measure locally.

Supporters of the plan say the cotton assessment will finance such projects as a diapause spray program to control infestations of boll weevils here.

As proposed, the maximum assessment in this county would be one cent per pound of baled cotton. They note this is a maximum figure, estimating

Ask Us

Q. — Why is "Dear Abby" suddenly smaller?

A. — The type is smaller since the SDN now has to "size down" the column, mailed to the newspaper already in type. Abby is now sent in a column width wider than the one used by the SDN, part of a nationwide trend coverting newspaper layout from the standard eight-column format to a six-column one. Tentative plans call for the SDN to go six-column this summer. When this happens, "Dear Abby" will return to normal size.

Aggression 'must be halted'

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The World Court ordered the United States today to halt the mining of Nicaraguan harbors and other aggressive actions against Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime.

The court has no power to enforce its orders.

In a unanimous ruling by the 15-judge panel, the court ruled that "the United States should cease and refrain from any actions in restricting, blocking or endangering the access to Nicaragua and from Nicaraguan ports and in particular the laying of mines."

The CIA supports two groups of anti-Sandinista rebels and directed the mining of Nicaraguan harbors.

16 hurt in explosion, fire

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — An explosion and fire ripped through a leather and chemical company in the business district today, and at least 16 people were reported hospitalized for injuries.

"There were several explosions sending debris up to 40 yards away," said Paul Brown, a metropolitan editor at The Times newspaper. "One barrel landed in a parking lot in front of spectators."

Brown said the blast occurred about 9:50 a.m. Fire units from Lynnfield, Middleton, Danvers and Beverly were called to assist Peabody firemen.

The Salem News reported that 16 people were rushed to hospitals for treatment.

Mondale aide predicts win...

Hart campaigns in Nebraska

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart, his campaign rejuvenated in Ohio and Indiana, is campaigning toward the next round of primaries and eyeing unpledged delegates, but Walter F. Mondale's camp plans to have the Democratic presidential nomination locked up before the convention.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, disappointed by his showing in Tuesday's four primaries, planned to discuss the Soviet Union's Olympic boycott today in a meeting with Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin at the Soviet Embassy.

Mondale remained in Washington today, but will be heading to Nebraska, which holds its primary Tuesday, and California, the big prize with a June 5 primary.

Hart was already in Nebraska after spending the night at the governor's mansion in Lincoln as a guest of his supporter Gov. Bob Kerrey. He planned a tour of the state today before going Friday to Oregon, which also votes Tuesday, and on to California for the weekend.

Arriving in Lincoln on Wednesday night, Hart issued a sharp reply to President Reagan's appeal for more U.S. military aid to El Salvador, saying the president's policy has backfired and caused greater military strength and resolve on the part of Salvadoran rebels.

"Communism is not the greatest enemy; poverty is the greatest enemy" facing U.S.-backed governments in Central America, Hart said.

Mondale's campaign director James H. Johnson said that even if Hart continues winning primaries, Mondale will increase his delegate count so steadily that he will have a majority of delegates before the convention in San Francisco in mid-July.

On the day before the final round of primaries on June 5, Johnson said Mondale will have between 1,750 and 1,800 delegates — within striking range of the 1,967 needed to win the nomination.

"We are ... prepared to predict that when we have all the results in from June 5, we will have more than the 1,967 delegates," Johnson said.

Mondale, he said, will add to his total through the slower, less-publicized process of second-level caucus meetings and by swaying unpledged delegates to his side.

But Oliver Henkel, Hart's campaign manager, disputed Johnson's estimates and said his projection shows that by the end of the primary season, Mondale would have 1,650 delegates to 1,450 for Hart.

Hart's campaign is flush with renewed life after Tuesday's four primaries. He split them with Mondale, though Mondale came away with more delegates in the four states by winning North Carolina and Maryland.

But Hart's narrow wins — by 1 percentage point in Indiana and 2 points in Ohio — proved he could take industrial states and that the race was still alive.

Mondale won 188 delegates on Tuesday to Hart's 138 and Jackson's 41. That means Mondale has a total of 1,450.05 delegates to 873.75 for Hart and 279.2 for Jackson. The totals do not include Saturday's Texas caucuses, in which completed return are expected to show Mondale with at least 100 of the 169 delegates at stake.

Jackson planned to resume campaigning Friday with a trip to Nebraska, New Jersey and California.

Rightist charges fraud in presidential elections

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Roberto d'Aubuisson withdrew his far-right party from participation in the official count of presidential votes, charging U.S.-backed fraud, and said he would win if illegal ballots were thrown out.

D'Aubuisson, candidate of the Republican Nationalist Alliance, claimed at a news conference Wednesday that his party's tally shows he won 52 percent of the valid votes in Sunday's runoff election to 48 percent for moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte, a Christian Democrat.

No official results have been released, but Duarte claimed victory Monday, saying his party's figures showed he won about 55 percent of the vote.

"Our results are legal, theirs are fake," said d'Aubuisson.

D'Aubuisson also accused the U.S. State Department and the CIA of conspiring with the Christian Democrats to fix the election.

He said he had no "tangible" proof of the claim but read from a statement by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who said the Reagan administration used a "covert plan to funnel U.S. government" money and assistance to Duarte's campaign.

The United States has pushed hard for elections here but denies it tried to influence the outcome.

Six senior officers in El Salvador's powerful military said Wednesday they would be willing to accept Duarte as the new president but warned he must move cautiously if he wants to win the confidence of the armed forces. They spoke on condition that they not be identified.

The official count was halted Tuesday night when the parties squabbled over procedures and d'Aubuisson's party, known as ARENA, withdrew. The count began again Wednesday without an ARENA representative present.

D'Aubuisson said his party would boycott the count until a "legal" tally is made, meaning his party wants to present challenges before the votes are read in public and put in the computer.

Under Salvadoran law, each party has three days after the final results are announced to issue challenges.

Officials of the Central Election Council rejected the fraud charges and said the tally would be binding whether or not ARENA sent an observer. Conservative parties friendly to ARENA also have representatives at the count.

It's all over, Levi Strauss.

Sorry, Vanderbilt, Jordache and Sasson.

Tougho," Lee, Wrangler and Sedgefield.

Like the Stone Age, the Ice Age and the Glacier Age that have passed into history, the Denim Age is behind us now. The trend will diminsh in a couple of weeks.

How do I know? Because last Saturday I bought my first pair of jeans that's right. For the first time in my life I'm wearing the pants that brought dialogue between mother and son, joined urbans with suburbans and established detente with Russia.

This is not the first time I've put a fashion to death. When I was a teenager, every girl in the entire Western world wore a poodle skirt. (A skirt with enough cloth to slipcover New Jersey with a big poodle appliqued on it.)

The Christmas I got one, I never saw another poodle skirt again. I had missed the trend by two days.

I'll bet you can almost guess the week I bought my husband a Nehru jacket and the hour my hemline went up.

Basically, I'm a fashion conservative. What does that mean? It means I watch what women wear on the Academy Awards show and then I start to work on the part of the body that is "in."

It should be of comfort to designers to know there are some fashions I can't touch. The "Dynasty" gowns made out of bugles and beads are safe, for the same reason you don't light up a cold sore.

The jump suits should flourish for another hundred years until a cure for menopause, whichever comes first.

And I certainly won't touch the "Flashdance," raggy-off-the-shoulder T-shirts, or the bathing suits with the leg opening that goes all the way to the armpits. I tried on a pair of those sleeveless "fun" overalls the other day with an arm opening that went down to the hip, but decided I would be tempted to store food in there, so I put it back on the rack.

Why did I wait so long to buy a pair of jeans? A woman can only take so much rejection. When they first came out, we were light years apart. Then they made a full leg that I could actually get over my feet. They added pleats. They pre-shrunk the fabric. They introduced a material that breathed. They acknowledged the fact that many women are not built like TV antennas. And, finally, they put elastic in the back of the waistband. It was like putting a sun screen with a cowboy on it in the back window of a Porsche.

They signed their own death warrant.

Senate action would increase premiums

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of the drive to trim federal budget deficits, the Senate has decided Medicare beneficiaries should pay more for additional insurance that covers doctors' fees. —

But the Senate — nearing the end of its third week of deliberations — was still struggling today to settle on an overall "down payment" on eliminating government red ink.

Senator after senator has made speeches in favor of serious action to cut deficits. But, so far, the only action has been votes rejecting a series of substitutes for the three-year, $144 billion deficit-reduction package President Reagan has worked out with Republican leaders.

Some of those leaders are becoming exasperated with their colleagues.

"I can't believe we're still on this matter," Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Finance Committee, said on the Senate floor Wednesday.

A lack of attendance has slowed consideration.

"It's pretty hard to deal with the facts with 100 senators when there're only five senators on the Senate floor," Dole said during debate on the Medicare provisions.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Today's hand is unusual because it shows a play at no-trump to win a rubber. (North-South has a part-score of 60.)

South had 17 points for his no-trump overcall, but they are not enough against perfect defense. However, perfect defense is not common in rubber bridge and it did not take place this time.

West opened his jack of spades. South won with the ace. He didn't want a shift to diamonds. So at trick two he led his three of clubs. West covered with the four and South played dummy's seven. East was in with the jack and could do nothing better than cash his four spades and then switch to a heart. This ended all play since South was going to get four club tricks, two hearts, and the spade already in his possession.

East pointed out that if West had played the eight of clubs, South would not make his contract. West would get the lead with the 10 of clubs and could lead a diamond for the setting trick. West asked, "Would you have dropped your jack of clubs under dummy's king if my eight had forced South to play it?"

"Of course," replied East.

Nevertheless, we wonder if East was really up to that play.

"ANYBODY EVER TELL YOU YOU'RE KINDA CUTE WHEN YOU'RE MAD?"

"IT ALWAYS WORKS FOR DAD."

One century later project continues

NEW YORK (AP) — With the patience and deliberation of a jeweler, Johnny Armstrong lines up hammer and chisel and puts the finishing touches on a massive, odd-shaped hunk of limestone.

Soon, after two days of steady cutting, the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine in upper Manhattan will be one stone closer to completion.

But nothing moves quickly in the cathedral-building business. With 4,100 stones cut since 1979, Armstrong and 10 fellow stonecutters still have about 19,300 more to go.

"Sometimes I think I'm cutting a diamond," he said. "You can't get frustrated and go bang! You've got to go stroke by stroke."

Armstrong, 24, is working on what already is the world's second-largest church — and perhaps the most famous unfinished one.

Construction on the Episcopal cathedral started in 1892. But the cathedral is still only two-thirds built.

Beneath the leaves along Amsterdam Avenue, strollers look up to see a massive scaffold rising along the cathedral's front right corner. There, what is to become a four-turreted Gothic bell tower is growing, ashlar by ashlar, quoin by quoin.

Since 1979, when the latest construction began, the 4,100 pieces have been readied for this, another tower on the left side, and a connecting gallery between.

In addition, church officials hope to complete two transcepts — the "arm" extensions of the cross-shaped floorplan — a new roof, and a third tower that will rise high above the central crossing.

Work has always proceeded in fits and starts, only when money was in hand. Under three architects, the design of St. John's evolved through a Byzantine-accented Romanesque to Gothic.

Construction last stopped with America's entry into World War II in 1941. Amid postwar social turmoil, the surrounding Harlem neighborhood fell into decline. Church officials, wary of stirring local resentment for lavishing money on stone instead of people, hesitated to resume the project.

But in the early 1970s, pressed by a newly appointed dean, the Very Rev. James P. Morton, the completion idea revived. Construction resumed in 1979.

"I am told that some of the great cathedrals took over 500 years to build," said New York Mayor Edward Koch at a rededication ceremony, "but I would like to remind you that we are only in our first one hundred."

In fact, St. John's has progressed rather speedily, as cathedrals go. In France, workers took 312 years to finish Chartres, and in London, 837 to complete Westminster Abbey.

Two football fields long, about 124 feet from floor to nave vault ceiling, St. John's covers 121,000 square feet, second in size only to St. Peter's Basilica in Rome, which covers 227,069 square feet. Milan's Nativity of Mary — Christendom's third-largest building — covers 107,000 square feet.

New York's other famed cathedral, St. Patrick's on Fifth Avenue, encompasses a mere 57,768 square feet; Notre Dame in Paris, 64,108, and Westminster Abbey, 46,000.

Overseeing today's work is master builder James Bainbridge, who was recruited from his native Dorset, England, in 1978. Before that he had overseen the completion in Britain of Liverpool Cathedral and the restoration of part of Wells Cathedral.

The 55-year-old Bainbridge had a major hurdle in starting his task. In an age of steel, glass and concrete, stonecutting as a profession had long since died on this side of the Atlantic.

And so, in the Medieval tradition, Bainbridge found himself organizing a four-year apprenticeship program, drawing mainly on unemployed blacks and Hispanics from the neighborhood.

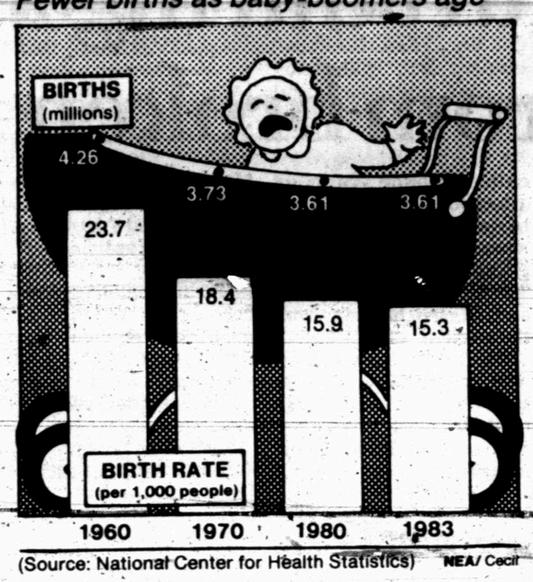

Despite the cathedral's colossal size, one of the first things apprentices learn is that there is no room for cutting errors.

"It should be smack on," Bainbridge said. "I'm talking about within a thirty-second of an inch. It should fit. If not, you're just not long for the job."

Weight and the force of gravity are all that hold the cathedral together, mortar only being used as a sealant and separating medium.

BIRTH RATE DECLINES

Fewer births as baby-boomers age

(Source: National Center for Health Statistics) NEA/ Cecil

The U.S. birth rate has dropped due to the aging of the postwar baby-boom generation. The major reason is the decline in the number of women aged 15 to 25 — the group that accounts for half of all births.

Hill country wine challenges labels

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Texas wines may soon rival familiar California or New York labels as the state adds another vineyard dedicated to putting a taste for Texas on wine lover's palates.

Vitis vinifera, or grapes of the old world, are being cultivated and fermented into wine at Oberhellmann Vineyards outside Fredericksburg. The vineyard, founded in 1976, will join 13 other wineries by bottling its first vintage this summer.

A small orange and yellow sign alerts travelers to the Oberhellmann Vineyards on the Llano Route. A dirt road to the right reveals the iron gate and Oberhellmann coat of arms. The winery will open to the public in June for Saturday tastings.

"We're getting ready to bottle very shortly," said owner Robert Oberhelman, adding, "We felt the wine had to be ready."

The first wines Oberhellman plans to produce will be Kraimeiwer, a dry white wine made from the Gewurztraminer grape and drunk with meals, Liebschen, a sweeter white wine and a red Edelblume wine.

In the fall, he hopes to add a Chardonnay, a Domain Blanc which will be a combination of the Sauvignon and Sauvignon Blanc grapes and a Johannisberg Reisling wine.

Thirty acres of land produce the Pinot Noit, Cabernet Sauvignon, Sauvignon Blanc, Gewurztraminer, Chardonnay, Johannisberg Reisling, Edelblume, and Semillon grapes.

"This is high density farming," Oberhelman said.

Miles of fence wire stretch across posts supporting the Y-shaped vines. Each lot or grape variety is separated from the rest. Walking through the rows of clinging vines, Oberhelman described the type of grape each produced.

Ten acres of the Oberhelmann Vineyards are dedicated to producing the Pinot Noir grape, which makes a burgandy wine.

Chardonnay grapes yield a white burgandy wine while Semillon is a white grape from Bordeaux. "It produces a nice full bodied wine," Oberhelman said.

Convicted hitman hatched plot

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Charles V. Harrelson, convicted in the 1979 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., was hatching a "relatively organized" plot to smuggle weapons into a maximum-security state prison unit so he could escape, a prison spokesman says.

"We just received information that makes us believe this is a real situation," Rick Hartley, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections, said Wednesday. "It's difficult to second-guess whether it would have worked. There are so many variables."

Hartley would not detail the plot, but said prison officials received a tip "several days ago" that Harrelson, 45, tried to get weapons smuggled into the TDC's Eastham Unit, just north of Huntsville in Houston County.

"Investigators have uncovered what appears to be an outside effort to help inmate Harrelson escape," Hartley said. "We received information that he may have attempted to get weapons smuggled into the Eastham Unit within the past two weeks, although extensive search efforts by staff have not brought about any weapons' recovery.

Harrelson, who was transferred to the Ellis Unit this week as a safety precaution, is serving a 40-year state sentence for his conviction on charges of unlawful possession of a firearms by a felon and possession of cocaine.

When he completes the state sentence, he must serve consecutive life terms in federal prison for the May 29, 1979, murder of Wood in San Antonio, Texas.

"The investigation is ongoing and the (acting prison) director is extremely pleased with the effort of staff that uncovered the very serious situation, which could have gone into a potentially dangerous situation," Hartley said.

Prosecutors said Harrelson shot Wood, known as "Maximum" John for the tough sentences he dealt drug offenders, for $250,000 from convicted narcotics trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra.

Chagra was acquitted, however, of murder charges in the judge's death. He was convicted on other charges, including conspiracy to obstruct justice in the investigation into Wood's assassination, and sentenced to 20 years.

Man hurt during arrest died from broken neck

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who was fatally injured while being arrested by police suffered a broken neck and bruised lungs, Harris County medical examiner Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk says.

The medical examiner said the injuries of Robert Thomas Lott, 31, are commonly caused by beatings, but also could be suffered by "a person struggling to try and resist arrest."

Lott lost consciousness while four police officers were trying to subdue him outside his parents' home on Monday. He died at a hospital.

Police said the four officers involved in the arrest suffered minor scratches and bruises in the struggle.

The parents of the dead man, Henry and Thelma Lott, told officers they called police Monday afternoon when their son barged into a bedroom where Mrs. Lott and a grandchild were sleeping. The elder Lott got a pistol and chased his son from the house.

"Robert, you need help," Lott told police he said to his son. "He (Robert) kept looking up at the sky and talking out of his mind."

When officers Gerald Hall and Kenneth Perreault arrived, Lott ran. He was caught by Hall after a foot race, and a struggle ensued. Two other officers, M. W. Williams and Tory Tyrrell, arrived and assisted.

During the struggle, according to the police, Lott grabbed Perreault's gun and the officer hit Lott's arm and hand with a nightstick in an attempt to dislodge the weapon.

Jachimczyk said Lott suffered "at least 14" contusions to the back, chest and arm which could have been caused by a nightstick.

Lott suffered another injury to the head that the doctor said could have been caused by a blunt object or by a fall. The officers claim Lott was not hit in the head with the nightsticks, police said.

Jachimczyk said a final ruling in the death will not be made until late this week or early next week.

Hall and Perreault are temporarily assigned to desk jobs until an investigation of Lott's death is completed. Such reassignments are routine in the death of a prisoner, officials said.

Need billions to make Houston mobile again

HOUSTON (AP) — By 1997, Houston will have another 1 million people and will need $8.3 billion for the city's transportation system to keep pace with the growing population, according to a new mobility study.

A projected $17.4 billion will have to be spent during the 13-year period to make the city as mobile as it was in 1975, according to an update of the 1982 Regional Mobility Plan.

The study is a project of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, which compiled the original 1982 plan that called for $16.2 billion in transportation improvements over a 15-year period to make the city as mobile as it was in 1975.

The chamber will ask the state Highway Commission to endorse the study, the complete results of which will be released May 16.

About 70 percent of all trips in the Houston area are made on congested roads that need improvement, according to the update, which predicts that congestion will worsen over the next 13 years.

Army Wife Is Losing Battle To Catch Her Husband's Eye

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a problem, although he doesn't think it's a problem.

We don't get a chance to talk much because he's an officer in the U.S. Army and works long hours. Anyway, whenever he talks to me he always looks somewhere else—at the TV, a newspaper or just out into space.

I've tried turning off the TV (with his permission) and waiting until he has finished reading the newspaper, but he refuses to look at me when he talks to me. When I bring this to his attention, he says he doesn't have to look at me to hear what I'm saying. I say he's being rude and makes me feel like nothing.

Who is right and what do you suggest? It is driving me nuts. In case you're wondering, I wear makeup, fix my hair pretty and look my best when he's home, so it's not that I'm hard to look at.

HURT

DEAR HURT: Maybe it has something to do with his military indoctrination. (Eyes front!) Or he could be one of those exceptionally shy people who finds eye contact difficult, if not painful. If so, he can overcome it with therapy. In the meantime, try this: Instead of telling him he's being rude, tell him that you are hurt and made to feel like nothing when he refuses to look at you when he talks to you.

DEAR ABBY: Clyde married Rita in 1951 in Georgia. (They had two babies first.) Then Clyde and Rita went their separate ways. No divorce!

Clyde then married Bertha in Tennessee in 1958 and left her after a couple of months. Clyde Jr. was born in 1959. No divorce. (They didn't see each other again until Clyde Jr. was 16.)

In 1961, Clyde married Agnes in Michigan. They had a big wedding. Clyde and Agnes had five children.

First question: Who is legally Clyde's wife—Rita, Bertha or Agnes?

Second question: Upon Clyde's death, which wife is entitled to his Social Security benefits?

No effort has been made to untangle this mess, but since I am closely involved (a relative), I need some answers.

INTERESTED PARTY

DEAR INTERESTED: Clyde's first wife (Rita) is his legal wife; however, Bertha and Agnes (depending on state laws) could also have some rights concerning Social Security benefits. Interested parties should consult a lawyer, or their local state or county bar associations.

DEAR ABBY: I'm having a problem with a neighbor. She pops in to visit several times a week at noon and 2:30, when she knows I am watching my favorite "soapies." She has very little to do and could visit so many other hours that I am inclined to believe it's deliberate.

She never shuts up. It's difficult for me to hear the TV, which spoils the program for me. The last time that happened, I turned up the volume and she scoffed, "How can you watch that cheap stuff?" (I pretended I didn't hear her.)

What should I do? I don't want her for an enemy because she has a vicious tongue.

IRRITATED IN SUN CITY

DEAR IRRITATED: The next time she pops in and pops off while you're watching your soaps, ask her to please come back another time. And if you lose the friendship of an inconsiderate neighbor with a vicious tongue, consider yourself lucky.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is for the Arizona parents whose daughters are married to the "hippies."

Count your blessings, folks. I'm married to a man with short hair and no earring. He's very clean-cut, but he's also the biggest skirt chaser in town and one lazy dude around the house.

Why do I stay? The children, of course.

Don't judge by looks—judge by heart.

Inkeepers chop prices

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston inkeepers are cutting rental rates and starting sales campaigns in all-out effort to attract customers to empty hotel and motel rooms.

Even the most expensive hotels in the Bayou City are feeling the pinch and are cutting their rates, some by as much as half.

At the Remington, a new top-of-the-line Houston hotel, managing-director Guenther Richter said he trimmed his corporate rate for a single room from $110 to $95 a night.

"We had to come down to remain competitive," explained Richter. "Our occupancy rate now is in the 40s (percent) and that is not profitable."

The Remington is new, opened only since Nov. 8, 1982, and has not had time yet to build up a large clientele. Richter said it usually takes four years for a first-class hotel to become profitable.

But even the old-line, first class hotels in Houston are experiencing a lack of business.

The famed Warwick and Warwick Post Oak, both operated by Houston International Hotels Inc., have slashed nightly rates in hopes of attracting business and are planning a sales campaign.

A single room at the Warwick, once priced at $120 a night, is now renting for $75, and a single at the Warwick Post Oak, once priced at $150 a night, is now half that, $75.

"Houston is a town where you can negotiate rates for a hotel room, to some degree," says Werner Graef, president Houston International. "I don't see the situation changing for the balance of the year."

An accounting firm, Laventhol & Horwath, said the occupancy rates in Houston averaged only 54.4 percent in March. The firm said the citywide average room rate is about $50.

"On the whole," Graef told the Houston Chronicle, "it's going to be a tough haul and there's no question that it will be a long time for occupancy rates to rise to the profitable 70 percent level."

He said the Houston market is going through a "correction" because of a glut of rooms. He said Boston and Atlanta previously had such an experience.

Green Thumbers given twister tips

When the storm sirens blare and the radio warns that a "twister" is on the way, what can you do to improve your chances of surviving a Texas Tornado?

For one thing, if you're in your house, you should stay there. Only three per 1,000 people in houses hit by tornadoes are killed--or, put another way, 99.7 percent survive.

This somewhat comforting statistic is especially welcome to the older workers enrolled in the Texas Farmers Union Green Thumb employment program, because most of them live and work in the northern half of the state so often assaulted by spring storms.

More than 60 Green Thumbers from eight counties attended a training session at Wallace Center in Colorado City Monday, and learned how they could save lives if a tornado should come their way.

"In the case of severe storms, there is no place like home," said Green Thumb director Diane Parrish of Waco, "provided your home is a sturdy house."

Parrish used a slide presentation to illustrate the kinds of tornadoes that can develop and to describe the techniques most likely to enhance survival. Slides of twisters that hit Lubbock, Waco, Wichita Falls, San Angelo, Clardenon and northeast Texas were used in the presentation.

According to Parrish, most tornado deaths result from head injuries caused by flying debris. People in mobile homes are at much greater risk, and in fact may be even more vulnerable than persons in cars.

"The key to survival is to stay in your house and put as many walls as possible between you and the tornado," she said, adding that most tornadoes approach from the west and southwest. "And don't try to outrun the storm--many people are killed when they try to escape in a panic."

Also addressing the group was Edith Fuqua of the Texas Department of Human Resources, who presented a film called "A Time To Mourn", which dealt with "elder" or "parent abuse."

Mitchell County extension agent Debbie Christian discussed ways to prevent food poisoning and gave tips on preventing food spoilage.

Birders flocking to see rare bird roost in state

CRYSTAL BEACH, Texas (AP) — A small Central American bird called the Yucatan Vireo has taken up residence in a tree near Crystal Beach and attracted the attention of hundreds of birdwatchers.

A group of Houston birdwatchers identified the rather homely, 5 1-2-inch-long bird. It was the first time the Vireo had been sighted in North America.

"When something like this happens, it's really amazing," said Jim Morgan, a birdwatcher from Houston. "Some people will fly in from anywhere in the country just to try and see it."

Morgan told the Houston Post that birdwatchers from Chicago, Florida, California and Canada have come to Crystal Beach to get a glimpse of the small bird that is staying close to one particular tree.

More than a thousand bird lovers have visited Crystal Beach, a small town on the Bolivar Peninsula on the southeastern edge of Galveston Bay, said Ted Eubanks, Houston birdwatcher.

"I think this has become the number one industry on Bolivar," Eubanks told the Houston Post. "No telling how much money that thing's brought in there."

Morgan, Eubanks, Eubanks' wife, Virginia, and Larry White identified the small bird. The Vireo was captured briefly on April 29 when it flew into a net that was being used to capture and band tropical birds that fly through this area in the spring on their way north.

Eubanks photographed the bird and it was was then released. The bird stuck around, spending most of its time near a tree on the property of an oil company.

Morgan said a "rare bird alert" was sent out within hours, notifying those interested that the specimen was in view in the area. Since then birdwatchers have been arriving, binoculars in hand, to see the Yucatan Vireo.

If you wear reading glasses and get eyestrain after working at a video display terminal (VDT), your glasses could be "out of sync," according to Family Circle magazine. Most reading glasses, it says, are ground for reading distances of about 16 to 19 inches. Such glasses can cause discomfort and fatigue when used for working at a VDT, which is usually 24 or more inches from the eyes. Once you measure the distance from your eyes to the VDT screen, proper glasses can be prescribed.

Bulging belly blues

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a woman in my late 40s and don't have any fat on my body, except my stomach. I've even been asked if I was pregnant! How can I get rid of stomach fat? I'm 5 foot 2 and weigh about 140 pounds.

DEAR READER — You've put your finger on the problem — eliminating fat. It's true that muscle tone and posture are important in terms of avoiding a large abdomen, but the biggest problem for most people is excess body fat. The extra fat is under the skin where you can pinch it, but there's also about as much fat inside the abdominal cavity. Regardless of how much or what kind of exercises you do, unless you eliminate that fat inside the abdomen, you'll still have a large abdomen.

You lose fat from the abdomen just like you do from any other location: You have to limit your calories and increase the number of calories used. For exercise, walk regularly every day. If you can build up to four miles a day it will really help in time. You could walk two miles in the morning and two in the evening. Walk after eating to get the best benefit in using calories.

Exercises should strengthen your abdomen. These include voluntarily contracting your abdominal muscles, pulling them in as hard as you can and holding them in the contracted state. Then relax and repeat the exercise.

Sit-ups are for the upper abdomen and leg-lifts are for the lower abdomen, although these should be done with the knees bent.

You also need exercises to strengthen your back muscles to be able to arch your back the normal amount and not sag. Posture makes a difference.

I've given more details on how to do this in the Health Letter 17-12, Winning the Battle of the Bulge, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In your column you've written about the danger of cold and the need to dress for it. To my amazement, hospitals and nursing homes don't have the same information. I've been in for tests and operations, and all seemed to be a deep-freeze experience.

In older days, about all medicine had to offer was blankets. Now we seem to have everything but blankets. Hospitals are full of heavily dressed people standing over nearly naked patients.

DEAR READER — I agree with you completely. Hospitals and nursing homes are not always paragons of health. Even smoking is allowed in many, and cigarette machines can be found in some hospital lobbies.

Whether an older person is in a nursing home or at home, it's important to be exposed to the right temperature; not too cold in the winter and not too hot in the summer.

When a person isn't fully clothed, the body can cool rapidly in a cold environment. I've included your letter, hoping it will remind hospital administrative personnel, nurses and doctors that environmental temperature is an important health precaution.

Speech hard for child

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) — Imagine a world in which you are not able to communicate to others. A world in which you cannot express your joy or sorrow ... where you can't even say "Hello."

For an 11-year-old Brad Rayshon of Commerce, that world is very real.

Brad is a non-verbal child suffering from Noonan's Syndrome, a rare birth defect that causes at least one language difficulty. For the six years he has been in school, the boy has had to rely on a 10-word vocabulary and gestures to communicate.

Several methods, including trying to actually teach him to talk and use sign language, were attempted by his instructors and speech therapists at A.L. Day Elementary School. None were successful, making the youth's communications extremely limited.

In recent weeks, through the cooperation of the Region 10 Education Service Center in Richardson, Brad has been communicating not only with the therapists and instructors, but with his classmates and family as well.

His conversations are possible through a speech output prosthesis called a Handivois 130, which utilizes a computer with a voice synthesizer. The prothesis was developed by the Phonic Ear, a California-based company.

The prosthetic unit is portable device which contains words and symbols on a keyboard, representing basic phrases and terms Brad needs to communicate. He expresses himself, merely by pushing the keyboard.

Ann Mills, a speech pathologist working in the Commerce schools, said the boy's progress in the last 35 days has been "tremendous."

"He comes to school with his fingers wriggling," Mrs. Mills said. "He is ready to talk to anyone. His progress has spurred us on."

Her joy, as well as Brad's happiness and progress, may be short-lived, as the manufacturer has requested that the prosthetic unit be returned.

A fund-raising effort to raise the $3,000 necessary to purchase the unit, so Brad may use it 24 hours a day and 365 days a year, has been initiated by his therapists and has received a warm response from this small community located 65 miles northeaast of Dallas.

To date, approximately $2,000 has been contributed to the fund from local businesses, service clubs and organizations. Maintenance costs may raise the final cost estimate, Mrs. Mills said.

Prime rate rise causes surprise

By John Cunniff
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Announcement of the rise in the prime interest rate to 12.5 percent seemed as much a surprise to the Reagan administration as the Russian decision to refrain from Olympic Game competition.

It shouldn't have been.

Everyone associated with finance had known that the Federal Reserve decided in March to tighten credit. They knew also that the Federal government was in the midst of major financing, and that business also was seeking more credit.

They knew in addition that the federal funds rate — the rate at which banks lend to each other — has risen to double digits, and they knew the feeling was widespread that the 8.3 percent first-quarter expansion was unsustainable.

They knew the Federal Reserve, and the fears of Paul Volcker, its chairman, who less than three years ago had taken the economy to the brink in order to reduce inflation, no matter what level of interest it took to do so.

And they knew that many economists more conservative than those the president listens to were spreading the word that the Fed shouldn't wait until industrial capacity reached its limit and wages began to rise sharply.

Surprise? Not at all. The stock market, which used to get hysterical over prime rate changes, rose in the face of what otherwise would be considered bad news. It knew.

The matter of surprise, however, is entirely removed from the issue of correctness — that is, over whether the Federal Reserve's policy of restricting the money supply is excessive, and whether its fears are also.

So long as there are economists, that arguement never will end.

But, it is obvious to all that the importance of the Fed has grown over the years, and that its decisions can have immediate international rather than just domestic consequences.

The goals of young couples seeking a home could be affected by a tight Federal Reserve policy. So could the Reagan administration's efforts to remain in office. So could efforts to reduce the budget deficit. And, the efforts of Latin countries to repay their loans.

Nobody knows with any certainty where interest rates will go over the next few months, but they know the present direction.

Strategists worry over no control

WASHINGTON (AP) — If there's one thing that worries President Reagan's political strategists, it is the events over which Reagan has no control.

Though Reagan's public standing is high as he positions himself for a re-election campaign, his aides are only too aware that an incumbent can be ambushed by freewheeling international events, sometimes specifically designed to embarrass a sitting American president in an election year. Ask Jimmy Carter.

While successive administrations have used foreign trips as a way to bolster presidential popularity in election years, there is also recognition that foreign policy issues can be a president's undoing.

John Buckley, with the Reagan-Bush campaign, would not say flatly that Reagan could lose the election on the basis of those issues. "Any incumbent president, when you have a strong economy, is more concerned with foreign policy because it's a volatile world and there are factors out there beyond the president's control," he said.

Reagan was hardly over the jet lag from his trip to China when he was faced with a barage of potentially difficult foreign policy problems. One was the Soviet decision to pull out of the summer Olympics in Los Angeles. Another was the turmoil in Central America, where administration policies are coming under increasing criticism.

Reagan probably won't get all aid he seeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's Democratic critics in Congress predict he will get some of the money he wants to bolster El Salvador's armed forces, but it will not buy a military solution to the "chaos and anarchy" he says communists are spreading in Central America.

Democrats branded Reagan's televised address Wednesday night as a "saber rattling" call to arms that paid only lip service to efforts for a negotiated settlement and could lead to another debacle like the involvement of U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

But they conceded the president will win at least a limited grant of additional funds to buttress the Salvadoran army against the onslaught of Marxist-led guerrillas.

Reagan's speech was his most strongly termed defense yet of his Central American policies, comparing his critics to those who concluded in the years before World War II that "the aggressor's appetite would be satisfied" with just one more conquest or international transgression.

"What we see in El Salvador is an attempt to destabilize the entire region, and eventually move chaos and anarchy toward the American border," the president said.

"We have provided just enough aid to avoid outright disaster but not enough to resolve the crisis, so El Salvador is being left to slowly bleed to death.

"The simple questions are: Will we support freedom in this hemisphere or not? ... Will we stop the spread of communism in this hemisphere or not? Will we act while there is still time?" the president asked.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., one of the Senate's harshest critics of administration policy in the region, said, "The president will get his aid, but not for the right reasons."

"The Republicans will support their president," Tsongas said. "The Democrats to a large extent will give the president what he wants just so that we will not be blamed if anything goes wrong."

Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, the senior Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, called the address "a strong and in my view saber rattling speech that ignores the wishes of the leading countries of the area, who prefer the negotiating route to the military one."

Reagan repeated his previous pledge to keep American troops out of a Central American war, saying the argument was "definitely not about plans to send American troops into combat in Central America."

But he said that without more aid El Salvador may not be able to withstand a Cuban-backed guerrilla offensive participant, she added.

To prevent "false alarms," it is important that senior citizens notify the center if they plan to be away from home for more than a day. This information would then be noted on the participant's registration card.

Senior citizens interested in becoming a participant of the Postal Carrier Alert Program need only fill out a registration form at the senior center. A representative of the organization will then contact that person for further details, Shaw said.

Vehicle dent investigated

City police are investigating a criminal mischief complaint filed Wednesday morning involving a local's vehicle.

Bobbye Greene called at 10:32 a.m. to report her 1984 Oldsmobile had apparently been vandalized while it was parked at Eckerd's in the Varsity Square Shopping Center.

Reports indicate the left rear door of the car appeared to have been dented sometime between 9:50 and 10:30 a.m., possibly by someone kicking the car.

No value was estimated for damage to the vehicle.

Lucas leads deputies to bodies

ANAHUAC, Texas (AP) — Convicted mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas has led Chambers County investigators to two desolate areas near High Island where he claims he buried three hitchhikers between 1979 and 1981, officials said.

Lucas pointed out two remote spots Wednesday to Chambers County chief deputy Fred Dodd and deputy Maggie Cryer, saying he used them to dispose of two women and a man.

Lucas also claims to have killed three other women and dumped their bodies in the same vicinity, which is on the east side of Galveston Bay, about 50 miles southeast of downtown Houston, sheriff's investigators said.

"Lucas said he strangled one woman, repeatedly stabbed the other one and killed the man," Dodd said. "The women were killed in 1979 and 1980 while the man was killed in 1981."

Dodd said Lucas told investigators all the killings occurred during the summer. He said the three victims were all between 18 and 25 years old.

The search for those victims began as Chambers County authorities awaited word on the identity of bone fragments found two weeks ago in another spot which Lucas showed investigators. He said that grave contained the remains of a woman hitchhiker he killed in May 1982.

Lucas, convicted in four slayings, also showed Liberty County authorities a heavily wooded site south of Cleveland, Texas, Tuesday where the body of 18-year-old Patricia Ann Jones of Missouri City was found in April 1981.

Liberty County Sheriff C.L. "Buck" Eckols said Wednesday Lucas told officers he raped, strangled and stabbed a young woman whom he dumped in the spot.

Midemeanor theft filed

Snyder police arrested two suspects Wednesday in connection with a recent theft of services case.

Investigators arrested a 28-year-old man and a 25-year-old womap in Snyder at 8:30 p.m. The pair is charged with one count each of misdemeanor theft of services in connection with a complaint filed last month by the management of the Beacon Motel here.

Motel employees had reported that the pair had left the motel in April without paying a bill.

Both suspects, listed as residents of the Snyder Travelodge, were released from the Scurry County Jail Wednesday night after posting $500 personal recognizance bonds.

Parker lifts Cincinnati Reds to 6-4 victory

by The Associated Press

It's been a home run famine for Dave Parker this season, but he finally feasted on a pitch from Bill Gullickson.

"It's one of the few times in baseball where you go to the plate trying to hit a home run and it happens," said Parker, whose first blast of the season led the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-4 victory over the Montreal Expos Wednesday night.

The two-run shot with two outs in the eighth inning was Parker's first homer in a Reds' uniform since he hit one on the first day of spring training. In fact, Parker's teammates had organized a "home run pool" to guess when he would hit his first this season.

"Yeah, I knew they had the pool," said Parker. "It was all in fun, and then some reporter in Cincinnati put it in the paper.I admit I went up to the plate trying to hit a home run. It was that kind of situation - we're losing by one run with a man at first base and two out."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was New York 3, Atlanta 1; Houston 7, Philadelphia 1; San Diego 3, St. Louis 2 and Chicago 7, Los Angeles 0. Rain washed out the Pittsburgh-San Francisco game.

Gullickson, 0-3, had yielded only one hit since the first inning before Duane Walker singled with two outs in the eighth. Parker then launched a towering fly ball into the right-field fence in Olympic Stadium to give the Reds a 5-4 lead.

The Reds added a run in the ninth on a single by Cesar Cedeno and a single by Eddie Milner and throwing error by third baseman Tim Wallach.

Tom Hume, 2-3, the fourth Reds pitcher, worked two innings for the victory, while John Franco pitched the ninth for his second save as the hot Reds won for the 10th time in 11 games.

Astros 7, Phillies 1

In Houston, Enos Cabell's triple drove home two runs in the four-run first inning and Bob Knepper scattered seven hits to lead the Astros over the Phillies.

Jerry Mumphrey singled home one run off Charles Hudson, 3-2, before Cabell delivered his big hit. Rookie catcher Mark Bailey added the inning's fourth run with a sacrifice fly, and later hit a homer in the eighth to cap the scoring.

Knepper improved his record to 3-4.

Cubs 7, Dodgers 0

Leon Durham drove in three runs with a pair of singles, and Scott Sanderson and Rich Bordi combined on a five-hitter to lead Chicago over Los Angeles.

Sanderson, 4-1, allowed four hits in five innings before leaving because of a muscle spasm in his back. Bordi gave up one hit in the final four innings to earn his first major league save.

The Cubs got all the runs they needed in the first inning when they scored four times to knock out Burt Hooton, 0-1. Durham singled in two of the runs.

Celtics just one away from eliminating NY

BOSTON (AP) - The pounding of bodies is accepted. Wayward elbows are a way of life. Even a bare-knuckle fight is excused.

The Boston Celtics and the New York Knicks consider their National Basketball Association playoff legal aggression.

The Celtics flexed their speed and muscles early, withstood a New York counterattack and went on to a 121-99 victory Wednesday night.

That moved the Celtics to within one victory of taking the best-of-seven series and advancing to the Eastern Conference final against Milwaukee or New Jersey.

However, with three victories on their home court and two losses in New York, the Celtics aren't claiming any series triumph over the Knicks yet. They do have two shots, in New York Friday night and, if necessary, back here Sunday afternoon.

"The Knicks have played great in New York and we're going to have to jump on them early," Boston forward Cedric Maxwell said. "We've got to try to take them out early."

"All this means is that the Celtics held their home court advantage," said New York superstar Bernard King. "When we are mentally tough and physically aggressive, we can beat them. No one in this room is down. We'll see you back here Sunday."

Tonight's playoff games have Milwaukee at New Jersey and Utah at Phoenix. The Suns and Bucks, leading 3-2, can clinch their series and advance to the conference finals with victories.

The Suns-Jazz winner will meet Los Angeles, which completed a 4-1 second-round victory over Dallas on Tuesday night.

After winning the first two games at home, the Celtics were embarrassed in losing the next two in New York. The Knicks took the cue at home from the Celtics: break on top and hold on the rest of the way.

The Celtics did just that again in the pivotal fifth game. Larry Bird scored 10 of Boston's first 14 points and then Kevin McHale came in to add his fabulous punch.

With Bird scoring 12 points and McHale 7, the Celtics raced to a 32-20 first-period lead. They padded the advantage to 66-45 at halftime, McHale going to the dressing room with 19 points and Bird with 14.

Chicago wins Marathon game

by The Associated Press

If the Chicago White Sox and Milwaukee Brewers aren't in midseason form yet, they probably never will be.

After playing 34 innings in two days - including an American League-record 25-inning marathon that lasted 8 hours and 6 minutes, making it the longest major-league game ever time-wise - both teams might be ready for the All-Star break. The game was suspended by an AL curfew after 17 innings Tuesday night tied 3-3.

"If you're going to play them that long, you might as well win them," said Chicago's Tom Seaver, the winning pitcher in both games as the White Sox captured the record game 7-6 on Harold Baines' homer and then took the regularly scheduled game 5-4.

Seaver hurled the top of the 25th as Chicago's eighth pitcher and allowed one hit. It was his seventh career relief appearance and first since 1976. Seaver then gave up three hits - two of them homers to Roy Howell and Robin Yount - in 8 1-3 innings of the nightcap after retiring the first 14 batters.

In other AL action, the Detroit Tigers downed the Kansas City Royals 3-1, the Minnesota Twins beat the California Angels 5-2, the Baltimore Orioles took two from the Toronto Blue Jays 7-4 and 7-3, the Seattle Mariners defeated the Oakland Athletics 4-1, the New York Yankees pounded the Cleveland Indians 11-4 and the Boston Red Sox blanked the Texas Rangers 2-0.

The previous longest game in elapsed time was 7 hours, 23 minutes when the San Francisco Giants defeated the New York Mets 8-6 in 23 innings on May 31, 1964. The old AL time record was June 24, 1962, when the New York Yankees outlasted Detroit 9-7 in a 22-inning game that lasted exactly seven hours.

The former AL record for most innings was 24, originally set in the Philadelphia Athletics' 4-1 victory over Boston in 1906 and equaled in 1945 when Philadelphia and Detroit played a 1-1 tie.

The longest major-league game was 26 innings on May 1, 1920, when the Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves played a 1-1 tie.

Leonard steps back in the ring Friday night

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) - "I'll have jitters, butterflies, like before my first pro fight," says Sugar Ray Leonard, who comes back to boxing Friday night.

"This fight is comparable with my first pro fight," Leonard said Wednesday.

But the questions surrounding his first fight and this fight are different.

The question about Leonard when he scored a six-round decision over Luis Vega on Feb. 5, 1977, in Baltimore was could he be as great a fighter as a pro as he had been as an amateur.

But when Leonard fights Kevin Howard Friday night at the Centrum, the question in the minds of some people will remain: why is he fighting at all?

The scheduled 10-round fight comes two years and two days after Leonard has retinal surgery on the left eye, which caused him to retire as undisputed welterweight champion Nov. 9, 1982.

It comes 88 days after a freezing procedure was performed to strengthen the retina in Leonard's right eye. That forced postponement of this fight, which was scheduled for Feb. 25 here.

"Dr. Ryan and I are in agreement that Mr. Leonard should be permitted to resume his boxing career," said Dr. Ronald Michels, who performed the retinal surgery. Dr. Edward Ryan performed the freezing technique.

Besides medical clearance, Leonard also has the support of his wife, Juanita, who wanted him to retire.

Of his comeback following the eye problems, Leonard said his wife "was more concerned as to whether I was into the sport, whether I still had drive."

"Just my own special love for the sport, my own special feelings," is what motivated him to fight again, said Leonard, who will be 28 May 17.

"I was bored, I really was," said the former champion, who serves as boxing commentator for HBO, which is televising the fight, and for CBS.

"At the times when I was saying, 'I feel great, I'm happy,' I was psyching myself. But you can't fool yourself."

Leonard, who made between $35 million and $40 million before retiring, is getting $3 million for his comeback fight, but he said: "I'm doing something from the heart, not for financial reasons."

Leonard and Howard will wear thumbless gloves, and anyone who wants to fight Leonard must do the same.

Promoter Dan Doyle said he hoped for a crowd of about 12,000 at the 13,866-seat Centrum, where tickets are priced at $30, $50, $75 and $100.

The HBO telecast will begin at 9 p.m. CDT, with the fight to start at about 9:30 p.m.

The contracts calls for each fighter to weigh 152, give or take a pound.

Leonard's last fight was Feb. 15, 1982, at Reno, Nev., when he scored a third-round knockout over Bruce Finch in defense of the welterweight (147-pound limit) championship.

Winter wheat growers gearing up for harvest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winter wheat producers soon will be rolling combines through what could be another bumper harvest, enough grain to keep a damper on market prices through much of the 1984-85 marketing season, according to some observers.

The Agriculture Department's first official estimate issued Wednesday showed winter wheat production this year could be about 1.98 billion bushels, a decline of less than 1 percent from the bumper 1983 harvest of 1.99 billion bushels.

In a related report, the department said world total grain output in 1984-85 could rise to a record level, up 8 percent from last season's depressed production. According to the projections — described as "highly tentative" — world wheat output could be up 2 percent from 1983-84.

Agriculture Secretary John Block told The Associated Press that while the winter wheat figures show "a healthy crop" is in the works, they portend no worse a surplus problem than already had been anticipated.

Block said the lack of growth in grain supplies in some other parts of the world means renewed export opportunities for American farmers.

"The United States is back in the production business, and we're going to have to supply it to someone," Block said after signing the crop report. "There is an opportunity there to service world needs."

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer. It makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production.

Production in Kansas, the usual leader, was indicated at 395.5 million bushels, down 12 percent from 448.2 million bushels in 1983.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said the average yield, based on indications as of May 1, was estimated at 38.2 bushels per acre, second only to last year's record of 41.8 bushels per harvested acre.

Farmers will have an estimated 51.8 million acres of winter wheat for harvest this year, compared to 47.7 million acres in 1983 and 58.5 million in 1982.

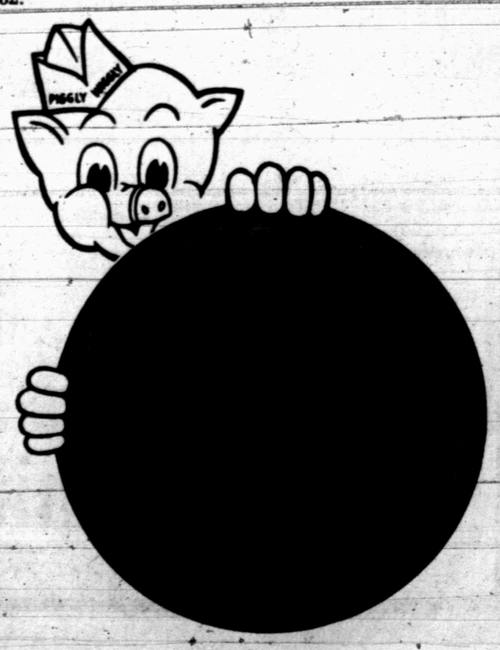

Winter wheat plantings were reduced sharply for the 1983 crop under the government's PIK program, which provided a "payment-in-kind" of free surplus grain in return for idling part of their cropland.

The 1984 wheat program also includes a PIK feature, although it was not continued for other commodities — corn, sorghum, rice and cotton.

No 1984 production estimates for spring wheat, corn and many other spring-planted crops will be released by USDA until later in the growing season.

Carl Schwensen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said the winter wheat estimate of nearly two billion bushels points to an overall U.S. wheat harvest this year in the "neighborhood" of 2.5 billion bushels, possibly up slightly from 2.43 billion in 1983.

"For the producer, it means continued pressure on prices," Schwensen said.

After 10 years wants to forget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years ago, in his 1974 State of the Union address, Richard M. Nixon tried to close the door on Watergate. "One year of Watergate is enough," he said.

"Ten years of Watergate is enough," he said Wednesday, still trying to close the door. He said it before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, addressing the group for the seventh time since 1954 — but for the first time since he resigned the presidency in disgrace on Aug. 9, 1974.

It was vintage Nixon. He spoke without text, notes or rostrum, standing before a bare microphone and about 900 editors. He clasped his hands together, then plunged them into his jacket pockets, a characteristic gesture.

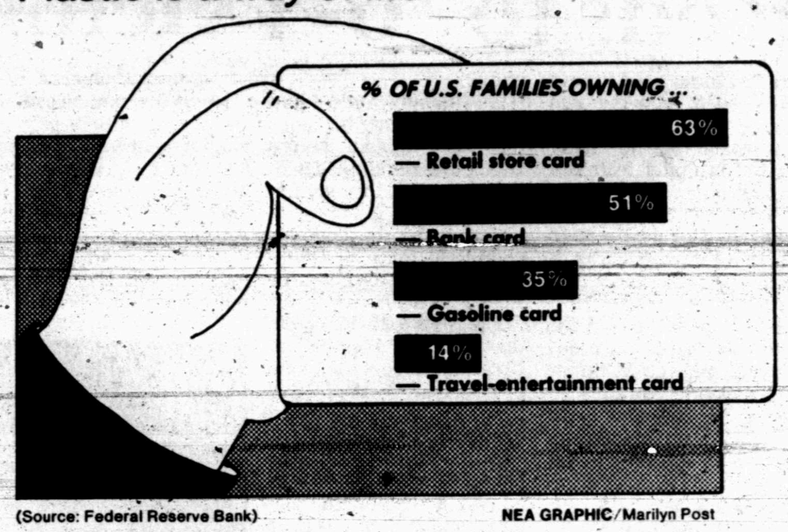

In his address, on foreign policy, Nixon generally backed President Reagan, called for annual summit meetings so the superpowers will not miscalculate, deplored the flap over the "Mickey Mouse mining" of Nicaragua's waters.

Then came the questions — the first from an editor who had been at a journalists' convention in Disney World, Fla., on Nov. 17, 1973, when Nixon made his famous remark, "I am not a crook." The editor wanted to know the impact of Watergate on the presidency.

"As far as I am concerned, I have covered the subject as well and as honestly as I can," he said.

More than half of U.S. families own credit cards. Retail-store cards are most widely held. It's more difficult to obtain travel-entertainment cards — such as American Express and Diners Club, which generally require a higher minimum income.
