Europeans scramble to head off trade war

By ELIZABETH D. WISE
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Fears over a possible trade war between the United States and European Community prompted a world trade body today to call an emergency meeting to discuss the "very grave situation."

The United States imposed 200 percent import taxes on European white wine and other products Thursday in retaliation for the EC's refusal to cut farm subsidies. Washington says the subsidies give European farm products an unfair advantage in world trade, but France — the main foe of EC concessions — said cuts could drive many small farmers out of business and cause unemployment.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said Thursday that the tariffs would not take effect until Dec. 5. The delay could provide time to avoid the fight escalating into a full-blown trade war, which could affect the prices of numerous goods and potentially hundreds of thousands of jobs.

But the EC made clear it would fight back with trade sanctions on U.S. goods if the crisis could not be defused. An EC official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said today that the trade bloc might target U.S. farm products sold in Europe.

Officials at the 105-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the body that oversees world trade, said it would hold a meeting Tuesday to consider how to resolve the crisis.

Arthur Dunkel, the Swiss director-general of GATT, said late Thursday that the U.S. tariffs threatened free trade around the world, but he blamed the EC for causing the crisis.

GATT has been trying for six years to produce a new accord on lowering trade barriers, but an agreement has been snagged by the U.S.-European dispute and is now threatened by the prospect of an escalating cycle of retaliations.

"It is quite, quite awful and it would not stop there," British Trade Secretary Michael Heseltine said of the U.S. actions. "Once you have a list there is always another list and other people have their lists. The effect is appalling."

The punitive tariffs were aimed primarily at France, which is the EC's biggest agricultural producer.

Trade ministers from the 12 EC nations met at an English country house north of London today and were expected to concentrate on dealing with the U.S. action. EC foreign ministers planned to discuss the situation Monday.

British Prime Minister John Major, the current president of the EC, held an urgent meeting with Jacques Delors, the French head of the EC's executive commission, and both agreed talks should resume quickly with the United States, spokesmen said.

Major and Delors declined to talk with reporters.

Some European officials have accused Delors of sabotaging the trade talks, a charge he denied when he arrived in London today for a previously scheduled speaking engagement.

Delors has ambitions to become president of France. And France's major parties on the right and the left are wary of alienating the powerful, quick-to-protest farm lobby, especially ahead of legislative elections in March. Farms employ about 6 percent of French workers, a much greater percentage than in many industrial nations.

Jeanie Ritchie, left, and Janice Strate show stuffed animals that will be raffled off Dec. 12 with proceeds going to Toys for Tots.

It's Toys for Tots time

By ANGELA LEGGETT
Staff Writer

The holiday season has begun and Toys for Tots has started collecting toys in preparation for providing Christmas gifts to underprivileged children who may not otherwise receive anything during the holidays.

The largest Toys for Tots benefit is an all-you-can-eat calf fries dinner Sunday at City Limits Club, 1300 S. Barnes, said Jeanie Ritchie, organizer. Doors to the club will open at 4 p.m., with serving scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. There will also be door prizes, she said.

"Those who bring in a new toy will receive a surprise," Ritchie said. "I feel the need will be greater this year. Last year we delivered toys to 578 children."

Volunteers are needed to do everything from sort toys to clean them and help repair broken toys.

"We wash everything and it has to be sanitary," Ritchie said. "We desperately need volunteers. We have bicycles that need to be repaired."

The program has been under way locally for five years, said Janice Strate co-organizer of Toys for Tots in Pampa.

"The first year we delivered the toys, but it got to be more than what we could deliver," she said. "For the last three years, Wanda Talley has loaned us a room with utilities in the (Pampa) mall to sort the toys and for people to come and pick up their toys."

Another event planned is a special Saturday Matinee on Dec. 5 at Cinema 4 Theatre. Patrons will have the choice of watching the movie "Fern Gully" or "Beethoven". Admission will be cash, food or new or used clean toys. The proceeds will go to Toys for Tots. Food that is donated will go to Good Sams.

"We are currently working on a master letter to those who donated last year," Ritchie said.

She said they are hoping everyone who gave last year can give an equal amount, if not more, this year.

"Everything we raise here goes for our kids in Gray County," Strate said.

Cash donations can be made by direct deposit to the National Bank of Commerce.

Drop spots in Gray County include Pampa Central Fire Station, Dunlap's and City Limits Club.

Applications to receive the toys can be picked up Nov. 16 at the Department of Human Services, Good Sams, the Health Department, Women Infant Children (WIC) office and Community Action. The applications must be returned by Dec. 1, Strate said. Qualification requirements will be listed on the applications.

The goal is for children who qualify to receive a new toy, a used toy, a stuffed animal and a puzzle or book.

To volunteer, call Ritchie at 665-7510 or for more information, call Strate at the Toys for Toys hotline 665-7629.

Nation's jobless rate edges down to 7.4 percent in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate edged down for the fourth consecutive month in October, hitting a six-month low of 7.4 percent, even though employers hired few people, the government said today.

The decline in the unemployment rate occurred not because more people found jobs but because the return of many teen-agers to school shrank the size of the labor force, the Labor Department said.

The labor force is defined as the number of people who either have a job or are looking for one and the jobless rate is the percentage of the labor force without employment.

Meanwhile, a survey of employers showed the number of jobs increased by a scant 27,000 in October to 108.4 million. That came after the loss of 72,000 jobs in September, revised from an earlier estimate of a 57,000-job loss.

The payroll total was depressed by the loss of 22,000 temporary summer jobs in October and 118,000 in September. The jobs for youths were created by Congress after the Los Angeles riot.

Without the losses from that program, payrolls would have grown by 46,000 in September and 49,000 in October. Economists consider that a sign of modest improvement in labor markets.

The department calculates the unemployment rate from a separate survey of households. The rate reached an eight-year high of 7.8 percent in June and has declined by a tenth of a percentage point in every month since. The October rate was the lowest since April, when 7.2 percent of the labor force was jobless.

Economists so far have been only mildly impressed with the steady improvement. They say the economy no longer appears to be in danger of relapsing into recession, but they don't expect better than sluggish growth until late next year.

"The overall picture is one of an economy that is still struggling to achieve a satisfactory growth rate," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

"That's better than diving a swan over a cliff, but it's still the same old story of an economy that can't get everything in sync," he said.

The decline in the unemployment rate last month was a surprise to most economists, who were looking for either an unchanged rate or a slight increase. The small increase in payrolls was about what they expected.

Construction jobs grew by 20,000 and service industries added 63,000 jobs. But manufacturing employment declined for the third month in a row, losing 56,000 jobs last month. Government shed 39,000 jobs, about half of it accounted for by the end of the summer jobs program.

Despite the overall decline in October unemployment, the rate inched to 7.2 percent for adult men, up from 7.1 percent a month earlier, and to 13.9 percent for blacks, up from 13.7 percent.

Among women, the rate declined from 6.3 percent in September to 6.1 percent. For whites, it fell from 6.7 percent to 6.5 percent.

Among 11 large industrial states, North Carolina and Illinois had the lowest rates, both 5.5 percent. California's was the highest, at 9.8 percent. The state has been hard hit by layoffs in the defense industry.

Following 3 graphs for release at 9:30 a.m.

William G. Barron Jr., deputy commissioner of labor statistics, said October's numbers taken as a whole add up to little change in job market conditions.

"Employment was essentially flat," he said in testimony prepared for the Joint Economic Committee.

He noted that the job gain in construction can be traced to rebuilding in Florida and Louisiana following Hurricane Andrew.

Sharp plan to save $540 million

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Nearly 300 state government bank accounts — including the Barber Examiners Fund and the Brush Control Fund — are to be consolidated, the state comptroller says.

The plan, authorized by the 1991 Legislature as a budget-tightening measure, will consolidate 278 funds, provide a one-time savings of $540 million and help unravel a costly hodge-podge of special accounts, Comptroller John Sharp says.

"Over the decades, the state's accounting system has evolved into a web of hundreds of separate funds, creating costly bookkeeping nightmares," Sharp said Thursday.

"Despite repeated attempts to consolidate many of these funds, those efforts failed until the idea was presented to the Legislature again last year" in the comptroller's performance audit of state government, he said.

The audit suggested merging many of the special-purpose funds into the state's main bank account, the General Revenue Fund, to help make state government more efficient.

The consolidation doesn't eliminate programs, and lawmakers may continue to fund them as they choose, officials said.

Lawmakers already had voted to spend the half billion dollars in savings in the current 1992-93 state budget.

Under the law, consolidation is to be completed by Aug. 31, 1993.

Sharp said the advisory committee that recommended the merger candidates took heat from many in and out of government.

"This fund consolidation certainly hasn't been without criticism," he said.

"The recommendations have brought comments from approximately 50 state agencies, universities, legislators and trade associations — with most of them trying unsuccessfully to protect their own little pile of cash," Sharp said.

Among other funds being merged are the Vital Statistics Fund, the Circus, Carnival and Zoo Licensing Fund, Confiscated Liquor Fund, the Texas-Israel Semi-Arid Fund and the Artificial Reef Fund, the report said.

The state has another 268 accounts that are constitutional, trust funds or funds dedicated by law. They were exempt from the consolidation.

Sharp's announcement coincided with release of the annual cash report for state government.

Excluding trust fund operations, such as the Teacher Retirement System, the report shows that the state collected $29.6 billion in revenues for 1992, while operating expenses totaled $29.3 billion.

Net state expenditures for 1992 were up $3.7 billion, a 14.4 percent increase over the previous year. Of that increase, $2.3 billion went for human services and $826 million for education, the comptroller reported.

Clinton tries to balance schedule

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — These are strange days for Bill Clinton.

One minute he's talking to Boris Yeltsin, and the next to Lloyd George, a rancher who runs the poultry lobby's hospitality suite nicknamed the "Chicken House."

"I asked for an ambassadorship to a small country with a warm climate, no army — I don't want no problems — and that all they do is have cocktail parties," George joked after meeting with Clinton. "He told me that's exactly what my experience entails."

Clinton is struggling to balance his remaining state business with that of the president-elect. In between, he's trying to catch some personal moments with his family and friends.

Up at dawn Thursday, Clinton jogged in his neighborhood, ending up at the YMCA in downtown Little Rock. He worked out for about 30 minutes, then headed back to the mansion for a shower and change.

He was at the Arkansas Capitol by 8:30 a.m. for a meeting with his 54-person staff. His first visit to the office in several weeks got off to a shaky start when he turned the door knob — and it didn't budge. It was locked.

Referring to the state's lieutenant governor, state Sen. Jay Bradford said to Clinton, "Jim Guy's got the keys." Clinton didn't hear or didn't appreciate the joke.

Lt. Gov. Jim Tucker has been governor for all or part of more than 240 days this year while Clinton was out of state.

Clinton's staff applauded several times during a brief, informal meeting. "He wanted to say he still loved us," said Jim Pledger, Clinton's chief financial adviser for the state.

The five-term governor later visited with more than a dozen legislators in the House speaker's office and in the Senate chamber. Lawmakers, friend and foes alike, lined up to schmooze with next president. Several had their picture taken with him.

Longtime Capitol employees were suddenly ga-ga over man they used to pass in the halls with a casual, "Hello."

"I want a hug. I want to hug a president," said a state Capitol worker, jumping up and down on her toes as Clinton walked in the building.

At a campaign staff party Thursday night, Clinton wore stickers on his label that said: "I can't talk. You did a good job."

Accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported no accidents in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Correction

The location of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1657 building was incorrectly reported in Thursday's newspaper. The VFW post is located on Texas 152, one-half mile west of Price Road. The newspaper regrets any inconvenience the error may have caused.

Allsup's sets canisters for employee fund

Canisters will be set at Allsup's Convenience Stores in Pampa, Groom, Panhandle and White Deer to collect money for a Wellington Allsup's employee whose home was destroyed by fire Thursday, said Reba Begley, area Allsup's supervisor.

Michael Gower, the manager of the Allsup's in Wellington, was at work when the fire occurred at his residence. However, his two children were killed in the house fire. His wife is being treated for burns over a large portion of her body.

Donations will be used for burial expenses, medical expenses and necessities, Begley said. "We just want to ask people to open their hearts and help," she said.

The cause of the house fire is under investigation, but foul play is not suspected, fire officials said.

Trade

The community's chief negotiator on farm subsidies, Ray MacSharry of Ireland, resigned Thursday. EC officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Delors had tried to strongarm MacSharry into slowing down the talks.

MacSharry said today he believed an agreement could be signed in "five minutes."

"We are very close to a deal," he said in Dublin. "We were on the point — and still are on the point — of concluding those negotiations in my view to the satisfaction of both sides."

Germany's economics minister, Juergen Moellmann, also said today that the sides were not that far apart.

But France's agriculture minister, Jean-Pierre Soisson, repeated his country's unyielding stance. "If we lay down every time the Americans raised their finger, we wouldn't exist," he said.

Despite the threats of retaliation, President Bush said he was only trying to resolve the trade dispute in a way that would be acceptable to U.S. interests.

"No trade war. Just looking after the interest of world trade," he said.

President-elect Clinton declined to state an opinion on the dispute, but an aide said Clinton generally believes the United States "must get tough" when foreign countries refuse to open their markets.

Washington contends EC farm subsidies make some European farm products unfairly cheap, thereby depriving U.S. farmers of a potential $1 billion in exports. The EC is the United States' largest market; exports to the EC totaled about $98 billion in 1990.

Agriculture products, including wine, account for about 15 percent of France's exports.

The tariffs affect an estimated $300 million in imports. White wine accounts for about 90 percent of the targeted products; rapeseed oil and wheat gluten make up the rest.

French winemakers said the resulting tripling of prices, now about $8.50 a bottle on average, would virtually halt sales of their wine in the United States.

American wine importers said they had enough stockpiles to last through Christmas.

PISD to share quality strategies

Pampa Independent School District is one of three Texas school districts selected to present sessions at Gov. Ann Richards' national invitational conference on total quality management and national education goals.

The conference is set for Monday and Tuesday at the George R. Brown Convention Center in Houston. Presenting will be PISD Superintendent Dawson Orr and school board member James Fruge. Their session will describe the partnership between the district and Hoechst-Celanese to use the principles and processes of quality improvement. The information will emphasize the planning, training and initial implementation of total quality management in the district.

Operation Life Saver hosts coloring contest to promote safety at railroad crossings

By ANGELA LEGGETT
Staff Writer

Operation Life Saver came to Pampa this week to encourage children to color their way to safety by being observant at railroad crossings.

Operation Life Saver is a public education program stressing the importance of grade crossings which is the place where a railroad and road-way intersect on the same level, said Walter A. Gibson, railroad safety inspector of hazardous materials with the Railroad Commission of Texas.

"It is the single most preventable accident," he said. "If people pay attention, use their heads and understand how accidents can be prevented, it wouldn't be such a problem."

The program is sponsoring a coloring contest in cooperation with McDonald's.

McDonald's is providing designs for children to color, Gibson, of Claude, said. Posters are available at the Pampa McDonald's and area McDonald's while supplies last. The design should be colored and then returned to McDonald's before Nov. 14.

A winner will be drawn Nov. 14 from the designs returned to McDonald's. The winner will receive an electric train set, complete with tracks, an engine, cab, three cars and crossing signals, said Gibson.

To help promote Operation Life Saver, train rides were offered in Pampa and will be offered at McDonald's in Amarillo Saturday through Tuesday, he said.

"The 1/3-scale-size train is driven by Harold Jones from Crete, Neb., who owns the train and donates his time driving the train to promote the importance of train safety," Gibson said. "He just loves trains."

Dub Nichols, engineer, has spent 18 months making arrangements with McDonald's, Gibson said. He has been active with Operation Life Saver for six or seven years.

A message stressed to children is to stop, look, listen and live at grade crossings.

"A train running over a car is similar to a car running over a 12-ounce can," Gibson said.

Operation Life Saver began by a Union Pacific Railroad employee in Idaho in 1972, Gibson said.

"During the first year, fatalities dropped 39 percent in Idaho," he said.

The next year the program moved to Nebraska and had similar results. Since then Operation Life Saver has gone nationwide and is supported by numerous railroads.

"Texas Railroad Commission is interested in seeing the program go forward," Gibson said. "We have seen the number of fatalities at crossings go down. We try to present the facts as they are. A lot of the time they are not very pretty, but we feel if you want to fix the problem you have to identify it."

Texas Railroad Commission provides speakers who give talks with videos for people of all ages, Gibson said. They provide fact sheets and general information of railway safety.

"The way to a lot of parents is through their kids," he said.

ACT I offers a little 'Nunsense'

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
Lifestyles Editor

From the tops of their starched wimples to the tips of their sensible black shoes, the cast of "Nunsense" was in character all the way during a Thursday dress rehearsal.

The play, directed by Sandy Crosswhite, is a production of Area Community Theatre Inc. It opens at 7:30 tonight, continues Saturday and runs again Nov. 13-14 at ACT I Theatre at Pampa Mall.

Five sisters of the order Little Sister of Hoboken have a deadly problem — 52 of their members have died from the effects of a poisoned soup. All have been properly buried, except for the last four. The Little Sisters of Hoboken (who hope one day to be the Big Sisters of Newark) must raise funds to inter the remaining sisters who now rest in the freezer of Mount St. Helens School.

"Nunsense" revolves around their fund-raising efforts and, in the process, the audience learns a little about the kooky women themselves.

The musical comedy is an excellent vehicle for the talents of the cast. The five — Crosswhite as Reverend Mother, Janet Whitsell as Sister Mary Leo, Rochelle Lacy as Sister Mary Robert Anne, Suzie Jameson as Sister Amnesia, and Berinda Turcotte as Sister Mary Hubert — sing and dance their way through two hours of jokes and puns.

Review

The characters, which range from the Irish Reverend Mother to the naive and winsome Sister Mary Amnesia, are clearly defined. Crosswhite and Turcotte play off each other particularly well.

The script is chock full of word plays, Catholic jokes and occasional improbabilities — who would ever think the straight-laced Reverend Mother would get a "rush"?

The strength of the production is in its life. The cast is pert, bright-eyed and ready to go. Their energy, combined with the script which moves along quickly, makes the two-hour show fly by.

Whitsell's voice, Lacy's facial expressions and Jameson's naivete are strong points in the show.

ACT I crew creates a "concrete block" gymnasium to showcase the Little Sisters talent show. They do an excellent job with the concrete blocks; they appear to be three dimensional from the audience perspective.

Costuming appears to be accurate right down to the gold band worn on the ring finger of the left hand. Rosari's circle the waists of each character and not a hair escapes the wimple. As Sister Mary Leo said, "Everyone knows that nuns don't have ears."

"Nunsense" is a light-hearted evening of song and dance. Don't miss it.

Tickets are available by calling the ACT I reservation line at 665-3710.

Iraq playing hide-and-seek with Scuds, officials report

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Saddam Hussein is hiding as many as 200 Scud missiles from U.N. weapons inspectors, Western officials and other sources say.

U.N. weapons inspection teams over the past 18 months have tracked down and dismantled much of Iraq's nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs as well as its surface-to-surface missiles with a range of 90 miles or more under terms of the 1991 Gulf War ceasefire agreement.

But American and U.N. officials suspect that Saddam has stashed away some of the 819 Scud-B missiles he acquired from the former Soviet Union during the 1980-88 war with Iran, or longer-range al-Hussein and al-Abbas variants Iraq developed.

Tim Trevan, spokesman for the U.N. Special Commission charged with dismantling Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, said 151 ballistic missiles have been destroyed by the inspectors or the Iraqis, or are awaiting destruction.

But U.N. officials believe Saddam still has around 100 missiles hidden away. The CIA believes the figure is closer to 200.

Saddam is believed to be moving missiles around on camouflaged trucks to keep them out of the hands of inspectors.

In March 1991, Iraq admitted it had 52 ballistic missiles. But under intense diplomatic pressure, Baghdad later confessed it had another 92.

U.N. inspectors believe at least 487 of the Soviet Scuds were fired during the Iran-Iraq war or in tests.

It's not known how many Scuds were provided by Syria, Libya or North Korea, or how many were cannibalized to produce the al-Hussein and al-Abbas variants.

Ninety-three missiles were fired at Israel and Saudi Arabia during last year's Gulf War. The Pentagon conceded that no missiles were destroyed in allied air strikes.

Travelers from Iraq, including an aerodynamics specialist who said he worked on Saddam's weapons program before the Gulf War, said the Iraqis have buried large numbers of rocket boosters.

An unknown number are under the Habaniyah airbase in the desert west of Baghdad, as well as in the basements of mosques — at least one in central Baghdad — hospitals and other buildings the Iraqis don't believe the U.N. inspectors will investigate, the specialist said.

Like most Iraqis and diplomats traveling to Jordan from Iraq, the sources declined to be identified to avoid reprisals when they return.

The Western-educated engineer provided The Associated Press with details of his activities and the locations of installations where he worked, but asked that these not be published to protect him and his family.

Trevan, spokesman for the U.N. commission, said he could not comment on the claim.

"Our assessment on the basis of information available to us is that there may be further Scuds out there. Iraq most recently has given us a very full account of all 819 missiles supplied to it by the former Soviet Union. We are now assessing that accounting which, on the face of it, looks very plausible and until such time as we have fully assessed the accounting and gone back to other sources, we will not be able to comment."

The engineer said an undetermined number of missiles had been dismantled and hidden immediately after the war with large quantities of 6-foot rocket boosters, guidance systems and other key components.

He said Iraqis had dismantled an unknown number of Scuds before last year's war to use the boosters in their own variants.

Apart from the alleged Habaniyah cache, there are other places known to only a few people where equipment is buried or hidden.

Some of it's under U.N. inspectors' noses, he insisted.

He said some missile manufacturing equipment has even been stashed in private homes, but said he had no details. The intelligence sources said they had received similar information.

They said that although the Iraqis have destroyed files on weapons programs held in government offices, copies have been hidden in officials' homes to use if needed later to start up again.

One intelligence official said it's frustrating knowing that with a little luck, once Saddam's left alone he'd still have the technical know-how to start over again.

CIA Director Robert Gates warned in March: "We believe Baghdad has been able to preserve significant elements of its special weapons programs."

"Once it's free to begin rebuilding them, its scientists and engineers will be able to hit the ground running."

The Mosul rally was Saddam's second public appearance on consecutive days since Bush lost a reelection bid Tuesday.

On Wednesday, Saddam joyfully fired his pistol into the air near the central Iraqi town of Ramadi after learning that Bush lost.

Bush may be lame duck, but he remains the boss

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush is president of the United States until Jan. 20 and nothing that happened Tuesday changes that fact. He also is a lame duck, a goner, history or — as he is fond of saying — "outta here."

Bush is in that 11-week nether world of politics where he conducts the nation's business while Bill Clinton is, in the Bush campaign imagery, measuring the White House windows for drapes.

The president has yielded none of his powers to command the military, make treaties, pardon miscreants, or appoint ambassadors. Until noon on Jan. 20, he is the nation's CEO with a constitutional duty to see that the laws are executed faithfully.

"It's important that a president be a president all the way to the end," says Ralph Bledsoe, director of the Reagan Library in California. "The president doesn't just really sit back and do nothing in that period. There's a great deal of activity in terms of transition."

Look no further than Jimmy Carter. He pulled an all-nighter wrestling with the Iran hostage crisis in the Oval Office until it was time to slip into a morning coat and get to the Capitol just in time for Ronald Reagan's inauguration.

What Bush will do in his lame duck mode is yet to be seen. He scotched reports that he would go to Russia to meet with Boris Yeltsin, and he encouraged the notion that he might extend his annual Christmas-time quail hunt.

"We will go inside, start readjusting," he said as he and Barbara returned to the White House as losers.

An outgoing president can choose to be a caretaker only or to smooth the way for his successor or to cause mischief with appointments and directives the next guy may not want. Most take the middle course.

"It is neither desirable nor equitable to bind the hands of the next administration in major program areas unless there is overriding necessity to do so," Lyndon Johnson instructed his Cabinet. "We should not needlessly foreclose the options of the new administration to initiate their own program changes. It would be particularly unfair to take actions now which must be implemented over a period of time."

Gerald Ford told his Cabinet to "avoid major changes in policy or government structure."

And Bush: "Let's finish the job with style ... get the job done, cooperate fully with the new administration."

Presidents want history to remember them as statesmen. "The government goes on, as well it should," Bush said.

"The campaign is over, the divisiveness is over, you want to finish up your watch," said Mark Abramson, president of the Council for Excellence in Government. "There is a tendency to want to conclude things you started but in a positive sense. The tricky issue is what should the administration finish up and what should they leave for the next administration."

Justice Department won't defend key provision of new cable TV law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is refusing to defend one section of the new cable television law against cable industry lawsuits because President Bush considers the provision unconstitutional.

The bill re-regulates cable TV rates, but also imposes business restrictions on cable operators that the industry is going to court to try to stop.

The announcement Thursday brought angry reaction from groups that had lobbied in favor of the law passed in the waning days of Congress over the president's veto.

"We've known all along the Bush administration opposed the cable act but we are dumbfounded its Justice Department would refuse to defend the law of the land," said Edward O. Fritts, NAB president and chief executive officer.

The provision in question requires cable operators to reserve up to a third of their channels for local broadcast stations such as affiliates of ABC, CBS, NBC, Fox, PBS and independent stations.

Cable programmers oppose this "must-carry" provision because they say it restricts their access. New cable networks are rapidly being created, from all-news channels to all-cartoon channels, and programmers say the law would give broadcasters unfair advantage for space on the cable dial.

Assistant Attorney General Stuart Gerson said in a letter to the Senate that the Justice Department had advised the president before he vetoed the bill that the section was unconstitutional and "could not ethically take a different position at this time."

Gerson said, however, that Justice would defend against challenges to another section of the law that requires cable companies to negotiate with local broadcast stations before carrying their signals.

This provision was sought by broadcasters to give them power over where their stations show up among the cable channels and to enable them to seek payment.

Coincidentally, the Justice Department letter was sent on the same day

George Christian, Johnson's press secretary, says "if they think about it, an outgoing president is not going to deliberately antagonize his successor. There's too much a new president can do for an old president."

That includes invitations to Washington, consultations and regular national security briefings that help keep the past president current for speeches and commentary. Harry Truman felt so keenly that a president's experience should not be wasted he put Herbert Hoover in charge of feeding postwar Europe and promoted the idea that they be made senators-at-large with all the privileges of a senator except a vote.

While Johnson went out of his way to avoid confrontations with the incoming Richard Nixon, he took exception to a move Nixon was making on the international front. Johnson made clear he was still in charge.

"There is probably a tendency for a new administration to start throwing its weight around before its time," said Christian.

Sometimes helpfulness can be counterproductive. William A. Morrill, a top official in the Ford administration Department of Health, Education and Welfare, had been working on regulations barring discrimination against the handicapped in programs receiving federal aid.

"We knew there was controversy there and sent word to the new secretary-designate that if it was acceptable with him, we would issue the regulations and save him grief and tumult that would arise when he put them out," Morrill says. The incoming Carter administration secretary, Joseph Califano, said no thanks.

It was just as predicted. When the regulations were issued, hundreds of handicapped people staged wheelchair sit-ins at HEW headquarters and regional offices around the country, an embarrassment to the new administration.

The Federal Communications Commission began making rules for implementing the law. The FCC is operating on a timetable that puts various parts of the law into effect over the course of several months beginning in April.

It also coincided with the filing of two more lawsuits, by Time Warner Entertainment Co. and the National Cable Television Association.

Both were filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia and challenge the so-called "must-carry" and "retransmission consent" provisions of the law.

Time Warner also sued against the law's regulation of the consumer rates and the restrictions it puts on the relationship between cable programmers and local cable operating companies.

The action does not mean the provision of the law will be undefended. Lawyers from Congress, the FCC and the National Association of Broadcasters' lawyers are expected to argue in favor of it.

Saddam watches Bush's effigy burn

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Allied jet fighters protecting Iraqi Kurds circled a northern city where President Saddam Hussein was watching the burning of an effigy of President Bush, news reports said today.

At least one warplane flew over a huge crowd cheering a jovial-looking Saddam in a big square in Mosul, 250 miles north of Baghdad on Thursday.

State-run Iraqi television broadcast the scene, with the TV camera sweeping in uninterrupted motion from the ground to the sky as the plane flew past.

Saddam, whose country was heavily bombed by U.S. and allied jets during the 43-day Gulf War in 1991, looked up. Then he turned his attention to the thousands of people at the effigy-burning ceremony.

The television later showed other overflights of the city. Only one plane appeared on the TV screen at a time. The image was too indistinct to tell whether it was one of the U.S. F-16s based across the border in Turkey. The allies have been patrolling northern Iraqi skies to protect Kurdish rebels from Iraqi government attacks.

Iraqis believe that without Bush, it might be easier to end the U.N. economic sanctions imposed after the invasion of Kuwait, although President-elect Clinton has said repeatedly he backs the U.N. policy.

The Mosul rally was Saddam's second public appearance on consecutive days since Bush lost a reelection bid Tuesday.

On Wednesday, Saddam joyfully fired his pistol into the air near the central Iraqi town of Ramadi after learning that Bush lost.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Texas editorials

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers on President-elect Clinton's victory Tuesday:

The Abilene Reporter-News:

The people made it clear they are dissatisfied with politics as usual, politics by and for the politicians, bureaucrats and special interests. They made it clear that they want their elected representatives to be more accountable, more responsible, more effective.

Tuesday the voters had the ultimate say. Some will argue that there can be no mandate coming out of an election in which no candidate receives a majority of the popular vote. But as clearly as the lines were drawn by the candidates this year and as involved as the people became in the process, Bill Clinton should feel validated to push ahead with his vision for the future.

The Brazosport Facts:

We heard so many words over and over again that we may choose to drop them from our vocabulary for at least four years.

Reoccurring words, in no particular order, include pundit, character, bozo, experience, economy, gridlock, conspiracy, draft, marijuana, inhale (or didn't inhale), arms, Iraq, Millie, Baker, issues, poll, ozone, tax and spend, recovery, Larry King, altered photo, anti-war rallies, debates, hearing aid, health care, agenda, waffle, jobs, adultery, Jennifer, Hillary, recession, recovery, GNP, Arkansas, gasoline tax, media, family values, deficit ...

The main word voters overwhelmingly remember is change. It was the entire premise of Clinton's campaign. While we should all go through therapy to forget some of the other words tossed around, change is one word we should not scratch from our memory bank.

It's a word we had better not forget for four years. We need to continue reminding our new Democratic leader of his promise of change. Will it be a change for the better?

The Corpus Christi Caller-Times:

Clinton hammered consistently at a few major themes throughout the primaries and the campaign. In that sense, he built his own mandate for a legislative agenda. Now he must begin to deliver. Health care reform, an industrial policy, tax hikes for those making over $200,000 a year — the new president can move quickly in January to place these fully developed proposals before Congress.

The most important thing for the president-elect to do is to present the image of a government in motion, a government accomplishing something, a Washington no longer gridlocked. In a different age, with different problems, that is what Franklin Roosevelt did to restore the confidence of the people. Clinton must do the same.

"Now, ya see folks, here's where the CONSPIRACY comes in!"

The biggest loser in the elections

Quiet as it was kept, 1991 was the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights — those guarantees of individual liberties against the power of the state that distinguish this country from all others. There were some speeches and essay contests for children, but by and large, the citizenry paid little attention to the birth of their freedoms.

Since politicians pander to what they consider to be the interests of the electorate, it was not surprising that the Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to the Constitution, did not figure in the presidential or the other campaigns this year. For example, to Americans 200 years ago, the Fourth Amendment was particularly important. That is why it is the most specifically worded part of the Bill of Rights.

It says there shall be no unreasonable searches and seizures. British judges had routinely permitted British troops to rummage through the colonists' "persons, houses, papers and effects at random." No search under our Constitution can be considered reasonable unless it is allowed by a warrant and that warrant cannot be issued unless there were probable cause to believe that something illegal was going on in the place to be searched. And each warrant has to specify the place to be searched. There would be no more random searches, as under the British.

For years, George Bush and most Republicans — along with many Democrats in Congress — have been pushing for police searches without warrants, which would bring us back to the time of the British. Until now, the "exclusionary rule" has prevented this gutting of the Fourth Amendment. The exclusionary rule mandates that no illegally obtained evidence by the police can be used at trial. Without the exclusionary rule, the Fourth Amendment cannot survive because it exists to assure that illegal searches cannot bear fruit in court.

The exclusionary rule came up in only one of the debates as George Bush urged that it be discarded. Bill Clinton did not object. Nor did Ross Perot, who has been in favor of random searches and seizures — without warrants — in neighborhoods plagued by crime.

In none of the debates or television interviews or questions from voters were any of the candidates asked about the future of the Fourth Amendment and the exclusionary rule. In none of the debates were the candidates asked any question about other civil liberties of Americans. We found out practically nothing of the views of any of the candidates on the First Amendment. Do they believe in outlawing pornography? How do they define pornography? Does it include some of the work of William Faulkner, sections of the Old Testament or Ben Franklin's advice on how to choose a mistress?

One of the most vital rights of an American citizen is "the great writ," the writ of habeas corpus. If defendants believe they have been denied due process — or have otherwise been unfairly treated — in state court, the writ of habeas corpus has in the past allowed them reviewing in federal courts. And at least 40 percent of such reviews have succeeded in overturning sentences or convictions, including death sentences.

But in recent years, George Bush and Chief Justice William Rehnquist have been trying mightily to greatly reduce prisoners' chances at getting their cases re-reviewed through writs of habeas corpus. Bill Clinton wants to do the same thing. I heard no questions — from any source — directed at any of the presidential candidates concerning habeas corpus.

The conditions of poor people were addressed only briefly and marginally during the presidential campaign, and no one brought up the fact that although the Sixth Amendment of the bill of Rights has come to guarantee as lawyer to every defendant, no matter how poor, the quality of legal counsel for indigents is abysmal in many cities and states. This was a point Thurgood Marshall often used to emphasize.

Accordingly, to speak of the right to due process and equal protection under the law to defendants who are poor is often a grim joke. And there are thousands and thousands of such deprivations of basic liberties every year. Not a word was said about this during the campaign.

It is no wonder that most young people are ignorant of the Bill of Rights and the rest of the Constitution. Not only is their fundamental heritage badly taught in the schools; but when much of the national consciousness is focused on who will lead us for the next four years, none of the putative leaders is challenged concerning the state of health of the document that supposedly binds and protects us all.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Nov. 6, the 311th day of 1992. There are 55 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 6, 1860, former Illinois Congressman Abraham Lincoln defeated three other candidates for the presidency of the United States.

On this date:

In 1854, the "king" of American march music, John Philip Sousa, was born in Washington D.C.

In 1861, Jefferson Davis was elected to a six-year term as president of the Confederacy.

In 1869, the first official intercollegiate football game was played in New Brunswick, N.J. Rutgers beat Princeton, six goals to four.

In 1888, Benjamin Harrison of Indiana won the presidential election, defeating incumbent Grover Cleveland by gaining the required number of electoral votes, even though Cleveland led in the popular vote.

Championship team in training

Rebuttal from a high school teacher. Ridge Smith wrote to me from Yukon, Okla., to explain why our athletes are better than our scholars.

"The coach at any high school which produces winning teams is allowed to choose the athlete who is best prepared, best coordinated, most motivated.

"The rest of us teachers are expected to graduate everybody — prepared, coordinated, motivated or not!"

Ridge Smith goes on to complain that the classroom teacher, unlike the coach does not get to pick the cream of the crop, cannot bench a student who lacks interest or aptitude, must accept all comers and "do the best we can."

Few coaches each year, despite this advantage, manage to develop a championship team. The rest of our teachers are graduating countless thousands of students who will go on, many to become successful in a multitude of professions.

"Yes," says Ridge Smith, "We will also graduate some who cannot adequately read or write. But give me the ability to select my students and bench the poor performers and I'll show you education success which will astound you!"

Paul Harvey

Dear Ridge Smith ...

And this is an open letter to all teachers ...

I can offer you the next best option.

Starting immediately and until Nov. 18 your school has an opportunity to designate the best and the brightest 10th graders to attend next spring one of the 91 three-day leadership seminars conducted by the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation. The students call it HOBY for short.

All public and private high schools are invited to send their most promising students to these seminars at no cost, also to HOBY's Super Bowl, an eight-day World Leadership Congress, to be held next summer and coordinated by Ohio State University.

Attendees will sit at the feet of the giants of American commerce, arts, sciences, education, professions, industry and finance.

These motivated youngsters may thus learn from our nations' most experienced, most successful navigators of the high road.

In a give-and-take, question-and-answer atmosphere, tomorrow's leaders learn from today's.

There is no cost to the student or to the school. The entire HOBY program is underwritten by American corporations and service organizations determined to encourage uncommonness and the value and joy of excellence.

The track record for generations of HOBY alumni is impressive. One example: Actor Hugh O'Brian, who founded HOBY 35 years ago and donates his time and talent to this mission, was recently employed to perform in a series of TV commercials by a young woman who reminded him that she was one of the student "ambassadors" to this seminar just 10 years ago.

Clinton's mandate

WASHINGTON — A mandate is more than a number, and a newly elected president like Bill Clinton can define his own — for as long as he can make it stick.

The message and the program will count more than the statistics as the president-elect shapes his Democratic administration and readies a drive to gain early congressional approval for his priority programs.

A wider margin on Tuesday could have strengthened Clinton's standing at the outset, but well before his inauguration on Jan. 20, those numbers will be relegated to footnotes. The Republican undertone questioning the mandate of a president elected without a clear majority is not going to alter that.

"There's no mandate," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole. "Clinton didn't have a popular majority and there are no coattails."

Republicans, Dole among them, disputed just that argument when Richard Nixon was elected president in 1968 with 43 percent of the vote, exactly the share Clinton got.

Nixon's margin was less than one percentage point. Clinton beat President Bush by 5 points, and won an electoral vote landslide, carrying 32 states.

Clinton is the 16th president elected without a majority of the popular vote. Both John F. Kennedy and Harry S. Truman were held below 50 percent. Abraham Lincoln didn't get 40 percent when he was elected in 1860.

While the Democrats were claiming a clear message from the voters for Clinton's proposals on jobs, economic revival, health care and more, Republicans counterclaimed that more people said no to him than said yes.

That's one way of counting. The Democrats retort-

Walter Mears
Associated Press
Special Correspondent

ed that two-thirds voted against Bush and for change.

That numbers game is pointless. Outgoing Republican chairman Rich Bond proved it by playing it. On Wednesday morning TV talk shows, he said Clinton had received only 300,000 more votes than Michael Dukakis did in 1988, a figure both irrelevant and incorrect. Clinton's popular vote was 1.9 million higher.

Bush beat Dukakis by 8 percentage points and carried 40 states, but he won without a clear program except to continue on Ronald Reagan's course. Those were mandate margins, but with no message to be ratified, they didn't impress the Democratic Congress.

In contrast, the message was unmistakable in the Reagan landslide that ousted President Jimmy Carter. Reagan campaigned for a tax cut and a step up in defense spending, and got both, after an election in which Republicans took over the Senate and gained 33 seats in the House.

Clinton's coattails weren't evident, although his managers said he'd helped congressional Democrats. Republicans were gaining 9 seats in the House, where they'd once thought they could at least triple that showing. In the Senate, the Democrats could wind up with a one-seat gain.

But Clinton had made a point of performing campaign favors and helping with fund-raising for Democratic candidates, gaining credits he can call as Congress acts on his proposals.

With Democrats in full control, Dole said, there shouldn't be gridlock. "It's up to them to produce ... They clearly have the responsibility now."

That's apparently what the voters wanted. An election day voter poll showed 62 percent wanted a president and Congress of the same party.

Indeed, earlier in the campaign, Vice President Dan Quayle had said in a television interview that while he wanted Republicans in power, people who were determined to vote for Clinton should vote Democratic for Congress, too, rather than for divided government and divided responsibility.

Even with the Democrats in full control, Dole said Republicans will be in a position to block "awful legislation" Clinton will propose.

They haven't got the votes and they won't have the veto, but they still have the Senate filibuster.

Quayle tried a different tack, suggesting that Clinton may sometimes need Republican help in Congress despite the Democratic majorities.

"He ran as a new type of Democrat, a more conservative Democrat," Quayle said in an ABC interview Wednesday. "And some of his ideas are going to be more compatible with ideas of mine than some of the liberal Democrats in Congress."

When the other side wins the mandate, adaptability has its advantages.

Marker dedication set for Adobe Walls Battlefield

The Hutchinson County Museum and Historical Commission, in conjunction with the Panhandle Plains Museum will honor the family and daughter of William Dixon, Army Indian scout, at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Adobe Walls Battlefield, 37 miles northeast of Borger.

The occasion is the dedication of the Medal of Honor grave marker at the Dixon grave.

Dixon's Medal of Honor was rescinded by the Army in 1916 after Dixon died. He was enlisted, not as a soldier, but as a civilian Indian scout. His medal was reinstated, however, along with Buffalo Bill Cody's and three other Indian scouts by an act of Congress in 1989 for true "gallantry in action and extraordinary service as one of a party of dispatch bearers." This act allows full military honors and the awarding of a new Medal of Honor, a citation and grave marker with ceremonies. This will be the 118th anniversary of the awarding of Dixon's original Medal of Honor.

A U.S. Army contingent from Ft. Sill will perform. The group includes a four man dress color guard, an Army chaplain, Col. Jerry Black and the Deputy Assistant Commandant of the Ft. Sill Artillery School, Col. David A. Rolston, who will speak.

The Ft. Sill contingent will be assisted by 15 mounted troops of the 1874 4th Cavalry, a mounted re-enactment group from Lubbock and Amarillo.

Bob Izzard will serve as master of ceremonies and will give background on the Battle of Buffalo Wall and Adobe Walls.

Invited guests include Mr. and Mrs. Walter Irwin of Amarillo and other family descendants of William Dixon. Mrs. Irwin is the daughter of Dixon.

Banish bad moods - don't let them ruin your day

By AMERICAN HEALTH
 For AP Special Features

Whether you call them blahs, the blues, anxiety, jitters, or bad moods, they catch up with most people from time to time. But virtually everyone can learn to short-circuit the negative thoughts that feed bad moods and master the skills that vanquish them, according to American Health magazine.

Many bad moods have physical roots. While illness and poor diet can be factors, fatigue is usually the prime culprit.

Robert E. Thayer, a California State University psychologist, has found that drooping moods accompany not only a lack of sleep, but also the normal energy lows that most people experience in the midafternoon and evening.

"Problems look more serious and difficulties in one's life appear greatest at these times," he says.

If you're plagued by frequent bad moods, give some thought to what's going on in your life, suggests Dartmouth College psychologist William N. Morris. A fight with a friend, a move to a new town, or even an anticipated retirement can drain you, especially when your financial resources are low.

Some people are prone to bad moods because of their personality or outlook on life, says Dr. Jacqueline B. Persons, a University of California at San Francisco School of Medicine psychiatrist. For example, those of us who are inclined to worry excessively about things that probably will never happen may recognize thoughts along the following: "My boss didn't smile when he passed me in the hallway. I'm sure he's thinking about firing me. It will be awful, and I won't be able to cope." Such reasoning, says Persons, can set people up for frequent attacks of the jitters.

The best strategy for mood control begins with finding the cause of your funk. First check out your physical state. If you're tired, hungry, or coming down with a bug, take care of your body before trying to cope with demanding tasks or personal troubles. When you're feeling overwhelmed by problems, Thayer says that promising yourself to "think about it in the morning" is often the best strategy.

If your bad mood stems from personal worries you can't resolve, some quick fixes may nonetheless lighten your mood. Topping the list is exercise.

"Exercise," says Thayer, "can be used as a strategy for dealing with the times in life when we need to do something, instead of turning to an alternative like sugar or drugs."

Involving yourself in an engrossing project that requires concentration is one of the best ways to dissipate bad feelings, says DePaul University psychologist Ralph Erber.

When bad moods stem from chronic negative thinking, you have to challenge those ingrained thought patterns, says Martin Seligman, a University of Pennsylvania psychologist.

"When other people accuse us of having no talent, we're usually very good at disputing them," Morris says. "You must become just as good at arguing with your own catastrophic thoughts as when a jealous rival accuses you of something. When you are successful at disputing pessimistic thoughts, you find yourself energized — you feel better."

Most therapists say that self-help can turn around everyday blue or anxious moods. "There are people who can pull themselves out of anything," Seligman says, "and there are people who need professional help. But there's also a vast middle ground of people who, given a few simple techniques, can learn to lift themselves out of a potential mood disorder."

When bad moods stem from chronic negative thinking, you have to challenge those ingrained thought patterns, says Martin Seligman, a University of Pennsylvania psychologist.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Paying not part of the plan

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old daughter is engaged to be married. She has been living with her fiancé since 1986. We live in California and she lives in New Jersey. She asked me to come to Jersey to help plan her wedding. She wants a traditional church wedding with a wedding gown and tuxedo and reception for 100 people. (The cost is about $20,000.)

She and her fiancé make $40,000 a year together. My husband and I make less. However, she knows that I came into an inheritance two years ago when my father died, but she doesn't know how much.

She and her fiancé have no money saved up. When I visited her, I noticed they had plenty of money for beer, bingo and cigarettes.

I need your advice, Abby. Should I offer to pay for my daughter's wedding? If you say yes, I will accept that. If you say no, I will quit torturing myself with guilt because I honestly don't think I should, and I really don't want to.

MOM

DEAR MOM: A woman who has been living with her boyfriend for six years should not expect her parents to foot the bill for a traditional church wedding with gown, tuxedo, and a reception for 100 guests.

Your daughter declared her independence at age 19 when she left home to live with her boyfriend. Let her finance her own wedding, and don't feel guilty. And if you cave in and pick up the tab, I suggest you put aside a little extra to get your head examined.

DEAR ABBY: I read with great interest the letter from the woman who, sparked by her upcoming 20th high school reunion, was able to track down her high school sweetheart. Luckily, she ended up getting engaged to him, and now has wedding bells in her future.

Many years ago during World War II, when I was in England, I became friendly with an American airman. We shared not only friendship, but the dangers and uncertainties of war. As fate would have it, we were separated, and for nearly half a century we've had no communication.

I married, raised a family, worked a job, and was too busy to dwell on that romantic interlude. Now that I am alone again, I find myself thinking of him, wondering if he's still alive, if his life has been happy, and wondering if he would like to hear from me. Not being sure of where he is, I have made some halfhearted attempts to locate him.

Abby, do you think I should leave well enough alone, or should I go for it, so I can finally put the past to rest?

I can't sign my name, so I will sign it with the title of our favorite song ...

"IT'S BEEN A LONG, LONG TIME"

DEAR "IT'S": I say, try to locate that American airman. And if you should find him and you meet again, please give me an update.

DEAR ABBY: Shouldn't you have told "Born to Breed in Kansas," who had a 3-year-old and a 6-month-old and was considering having a third child, that the world is desperately overpopulated?

RUBY DAVIS IN TACOMA

DEAR RUBY: Yes, I should have. And if you want to chastise me for that clunker, you may find yourself at the end of a very long line.

Philippians 4:13Facts About The*BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

ISAIAH THE PROPHET (CIRCA 760-700 B.C.), IN TEMPESTUOUS ANCIENT TIMES, PREACHED RELIANCE ON GOD, ADVISING AGAINST POLITICAL ALLIANCE WITH NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES. SO SINCERE WAS HE, THAT HE STRIPPED AND, FOR THREE YEARS, WALKED ABOUT BAREFOOTED, WEARING ONLY A LOIN CLOTH TO POINT UP HOW BAD OFF EVERYONE WAS GOING TO BE IF THEY DIDN'T HEED HIS WORDS! BUT THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH WAS IN A VERY DANGEROUS SITUATION...

NEXT WEEK: SIX-HUNDRED 'LEFTIES'!

THE NEAR-EAST'S BALANCE OF POWER IS OF WORLD-WIDE CONCERN TODAY. EGYPT AND ISRAEL FENCE, DIPLOMATICALLY, EACH HOPING TO GAIN A MORE STRATEGIC POSITION. TO THE NORTH, SYRIA, LEBANON, AND TO THE EAST, JORDAN—NOT TO MENTION OTHER ARAB COALITIONS—ALL WATCH NERVOUSLY, MAKING THEIR OWN ALLIANCES AGAINST THE DAY WHEN TOTAL WAR MAY STILL BREAK OUT... AND SCHOLARS OF ANCIENT HISTORY SMILE RUEFULLY, SHAKING THEIR HEADS—NOTHING'S CHANGED IN 2,500 YEARS! THE SAME POLITICAL SITUATIONS, THE SAME COUNTRIES, SAME PLANS!

...IN THE NORTH, SYRIA AND ISRAEL (SEPARATE FROM THE KINGDOM OF JUDAH AND JERUSALEM) HAD FORMED AN ALLIANCE AGAINST THE THREAT OF A TERRIBLE FOE TO THE EAST, ASSYRIA—THEN AT ITS HEIGHT AS A CONQUERING NATION, LOOTING AND DESPOILING ALL KINGDOMS IN ITS PATH TO WORLD POWER! SYRIA AND ISRAEL INTENDED TO ATTACK JUDAH FOR NOT JOINING THEM BUT, BEFORE THEY COULD, THEY WERE CONQUERED BY ASSYRIA, WHOSE KING, SENNACHERIB, THEN FOCUSED ON JERUSALEM, DEMANDING ITS TOTAL SURRENDER! KING HEZEKIAH SOUGHT ISAIAH'S ADVICE—WHEN HE WAS IN TROUBLE, THEN AND THEN ONLY, DID HE TURN TO GOD AND THE PROPHETS—WHEN EVERYTHING WAS FINE, HEZEKIAH DID AS HE DARN WELL PLEASED! ISAIAH TOLD HEZEKIAH TO ACT LIKE A REAL KING, FOR ONCE, AND DEIFY ASSYRIA! A HARD THING TO DO WHEN, ALL AROUND HIM, KINGDOMS WERE TOPPLING LIKE TEN-PINS. SO HEZEKIAH STRIPPED HIS TREASURY OF ITS GOLD AND SILVER TO GIVE TO SENNACHERIB, HOPING HE'D GO AWAY! AT THIS TIME, EGYPT TO THE SOUTHWEST, FEARING FOR ITS OWN SAFETY, GOT INTO THE FIGHT AND, EVEN AS ISAIAH SHOUTED DEFIANCE FROM JERUSALEM'S WALLS, SENNACHERIB, WITH NEWS OF A SERIOUS REVOLT IN HIS OWN COUNTRY, HIS ARMY DEFEATED BY SOME SUDDEN PLAGUE OF ILLNESS WHICH KILLED THOUSANDS OF HIS TROOPS OVERNIGHT, LEFT FOR HOME! INSTEAD OF GOING TO THE TEMPLE TO THANK GOD, THE PEOPLE OF JERUSALEM CELEBRATED IN A SERIES OF WILD ORGIES! ISAIAH'S WORDS FAIRLY DRIPPED SARCASTIC, AS HE WATCHED, "EAT, DRINK AND BE MERRY," SAID HE, "FOR TOMORROW, 'CAME HIS DIRE PREDICTION, 'WE DIE!' ISAIAH SAW WHAT THE FUTURE HELD FOR A PEOPLE WHO TURNED TO RIGOROUS REVELS AT THE SLIGHTEST EXCUSE—AND HE WAS RIGHT! IN LESS THAN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, NEBUCHADNEZZAR WAS TO COME OUT OF THE EAST AND END FOREVER, 'THE POWER AND THE GLORY THAT WAS JERUSALEM'."

Grieving, ashamed, emotionally shattered, they suffer alone. A trusted ally had betrayed them. They assumed it hardly ever happened to anyone else. It was too awful even to mention. So they kept silent.

But now they're finding they are not alone, that many others have been subjected to clergy sexual abuse, that it's widespread. So they're increasingly speaking out about it.

"People are being freed up to come forth," said Jeanne Miller of Palatine, Ill., president and executive director of a new organization, Victims Of Clergy Abuse Linkup, or VOCAL.

The group hopes to give victimized families the confidence to "vocalize" their suffering by getting them to band together and to realize they're not isolated cases. Another goal is to prevent such future abuse.

"There's a whole backlog of people who have never had their injuries resolved," Ms. Miller said in an interview. "They thought they couldn't talk about it. They've suffered in silence for decades with no support system, turning in on themselves."

VOCAL (P.O. Box 1268, Wheeling, Ill. 60090) held its first national conference in Chicago Oct. 16-18, drawing about 300 people from across the country. Ms. Miller said about 3,000 others are launching VOCAL chapters in 25 cities.

Speakers included Jason Berry of New Orleans, a Roman Catholic and investigative writer whose new Doubleday book, "Lead Us Not Into Temptation," documents about 400 cases of priests sexually molesting youngsters.

Ms. Miller said studies indicate 3 percent to 6 percent of 52,000 priests — 1,500 to 3,000 of them — are pedophiles with a pathological sexual fixation on children and that a pedophile typically abuses 273 youngsters in a lifetime.

ness" and most child molesters "are repeat offenders," Barry says. He says settling such cases so far has cost the U.S. Catholic church about $400 million.

"No wonder we're seeing more and more cases," Ms. Miller said. "Each of these guys have taken scores of victims. More and more people are coming forth that have been silent for so long."

Ms. Miller, a paralegal worker, a Catholic with a master's degree in theology and a mother of four, said the new organization mainly involves two categories of "sexual victims: Women church members in vulnerable situations who seek counseling from their ministers but are sexually exploited, and children, taught that priests represent goodness and God, but who are sexually abused by them."

Barry cites a study of 3,000 mainline Protestant ministers, most married, that found 13 percent said they have had adulterous relationships with women church members.

Both for the vulnerable woman and the vulnerable child, "it's a breach of trust," Ms. Miller said. "It's a violation of sacred-psychological trust. It reaches further into the psyche than any other kind of breach because it's an exploitation of power that gets its authority from a higher plane."

She said that both Protestant ministers and Catholic priests vowed to celibacy are held in "reverence and respect" and when that trust is broken, it shatters "your entire faith system."

"Your faith system is locked into everything you do in life, the way you approach your family and all your other relationships. When that whole faith system is short-circuited, it's like total destruction of the psyche."

"People have a hard time coming back from that. You no longer have a belief system in place anymore. Every facet of life has to be reconstructed in every way — if you have the strength to put it back together."

Ms. Miller, who says one of her own sons was sexually abused by a priest, said it had brought on a "profound grieving and a loss of belief, trust, a loss of many things. But religion was too important to abandon."

She went back to college, getting an advanced theology degree. "I needed to reconstruct my faith somehow. That's how I did it."

She said the prolonged, devastating effects of such abuse "has a lot to do with the way we were conditioned as Christians. In our belief, the highest virtue was to forgive, to turn the other cheek, to suffer in silence."

"The whole conditioning Christian system was to be very quiet and suffer. But there is also a Christian tenet of healthy outrage. That's real basic. You see a wrong, and you right it."

That's a goal of her organization, and both she and the Rev. Andrew Greeley of the University of Chicago praised a newly launched program by Chicago's Cardinal Joseph Bernardin for an independent board to act promptly on reported cases of clergy sexual abuse.

Trinity Fellowship Church schedules fall conference

Trinity Fellowship Church's Fall Conference is scheduled for Nov. 15-18 at M.K. Brown's Heritage Room in Pampa.

The fall conference will begin at 10 a.m. Nov. 15 with Richard Humphries, executive pastor of Outreach at Trinity Fellowship in Amarillo, bringing the message.

Jimmy Evans, senior pastor at Trinity Fellowship in Amarillo is scheduled to bring the 6 p.m. Nov. 15 message. On Nov. 16, Jerry McMennamy, associate senior pastor at Trinity Fellowship in Amarillo, will speak at the 7 p.m. service.

A men's breakfast is scheduled at 6 a.m. and a ladies luncheon is scheduled for Nov. 17, both in the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn.

Evans will speak at 7 p.m. on both Nov. 17 and Nov. 18.

Lonny Robbins, pastor of Trinity Fellowship in Pampa, said a nursery will be provided for children through the age of 5 each night of the conference.

Trinity Fellowship is a non-denominational church. The public is invited to attend the fall conference.

Pampa Ministerial Alliance sets showing of 'Eye of the Storm'

Pampa Ministerial Alliance plans to show "Eye of the Storm," a new film, at 7 p.m. Nov. 12-13 at the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The movie, by World Wide Pictures, stars Connie Sellecca (Hotel, P.S.I. Luv You) and Jeff Conaway (Taxi, Grease), with Deborah Tucker (Dallas, Happy Campers).

Returning home from covering the Persian Gulf War, TV journalist, Tom Edwards (Jeff Conaway), and his producer, Patricia "Pete" Peterson (Connie Sellecca) are given the task of "keeping the ratings high."

"Eye of the Storm" addresses vital, timely issues relevant in today's society, according to World Wide Pictures. The film is a contemporary story, depicting what faces many single parents and their children as careers are juggled with personal relationships.

World Wide Pictures is the motion picture ministry of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association.

For more information, contact the First United Methodist Church of Pampa at 669-7411 or your own church.

First Pentecostal to host singing

A monthly gospel singing will be held at the First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Led by Margie Ruff, the gospel singing includes convention, camp meeting and revival type songs. Singers and musicians from various churches and area towns participate.

Pastor Albert Maggard and the congregation extend an invitation to the public.

St. Mark CME to serve breakfast

The St. Mark Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 406 Elm, has scheduled the regular monthly breakfast from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. Saturday.

The menu for the breakfast includes pancakes, eggs, bacon or sausage, juice and coffee.

The Rev. Merle L. Houska said the public is invited to attend. Donations will be accepted.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Although Methodists led the nation's temperance movement against alcohol during much of this century, that leadership has shifted to Southern Baptists, the movement's leader says.

Curt Scarborough, executive director of the American Council on Alcohol Action Program, said "Southern Baptists still advocate abstinence" from alcoholic beverages. Officially, so do Methodists, but less volubly nowadays.

A Southern Baptist himself, Scarborough said the council, which is a national temperance coalition, has 36 state affiliates, 19 of them headed by Southern Baptists.

Also indicating the shift, Dan Ireland, a Southern Baptist who heads the affiliate in Alabama, was elected president of council at its recent annual meeting in Louisville, Ky.

NEW YORK (AP) — For the second time in two years, the United Methodist Church has withdrawn its missionaries from Liberia, where civil warfare has flared again.

The church said 10 missionaries have left on advice of the U.S. State Department, but two chose to remain there.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Describing the condition of the Roman Catholic Church today, the Rev. Ladislav Orsy called it a "community in transition."

Orsy of The Catholic University of America in Washington was presented with the "Award of Law Award" by the Canon Law Society of America at its annual meeting here.

He said the reforming Second Vatican Council of 1962-65 provided anew vision for the church, which is presently in the process of developing practical structures corresponding to the vision.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops have denounced violence against women as a sin and often a crime.

They say such violence "in the home or outside the home, is never justified. Violence in any form — physical, sexual, psychological or verbal — is sinful; many times it is a crime as well."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you handle serious matters with the respect they deserve today, things should work out smoothly for you. However, if you treat them in a frivolous fashion, it's another story.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to restrict your expenditures today to basic essentials. If you let your extravagant whims get control of your wallet, you'll regret it later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your first ideas are likely to be your best ones today. But, if you overanalyze them, self-doubts could creep in and begin to convince you they really aren't too nifty.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you are an impulsive buyer, there's a chance you might pay much more for something today than it's actually worth. Before you negotiate your deal, have a firm price in mind that you won't exceed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The course you establish today is likely to be realistic and reachable, provided you stay on it and aren't sidetracked by frivolous impulses.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today is not the day to slack off and coast. With a little extra push and perseverance, you should be able to get over a hurdle that's been plaguing you.

Harvesters seek third consecutive playoff trip

Harvester quarterback Tony Cavalier scrambles for a gain against Borger last week. The Harvesters host Randall at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the final game of the regular season.

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Writer

Ball control will be a high-priority item in the Pampa Harvesters' game plan when they host Randall tonight in this crucial District 1-4A contest.

"We want to be dominating on offense and keep the chains moving," said PHS head coach Dennis Cavalier. "We don't want to bobble the ball or get a penalty that will put us in a long yardage situation."

Pampa, 3-6 overall, 3-1 in district can clinch its third consecutive playoff spot by beating Randall, 6-3 overall and 2-2 in district.

"Randall has to beat us by 15 points to have a chance for the playoffs," Cavalier said. "What we have to do is avoid being tentative and be protective of a lead. Randall is well aware of what they have to do to get into the playoffs."

District 1-4A uses a tiebreaker rule of 15 positive points to break ties of three or more teams that have a shot at making the playoffs. Hereford and Dumas are the other district teams involved in the playoff hunt.

Cavalier is concerned with stopping Randall quarterback Brandon Barker, who has passed for over 1,400 yards this season and can scramble with the best of them.

"Barker is a top quality quarterback who can dominate and win a game by himself. He's got some good receivers and he can be very elusive himself. We sure can't disregard the run because they have a couple of good running backs (Travis Sims and Tim Cox.)."

A win tonight would put the Harvesters into the playoffs for the third consecutive year.

"We're all excited about having the opportunity of playing for a playoff spot, especially after such an auspicious beginning. It's a compliment to our guys for the way they hung in there under difficult circumstances," Cavalier said.

The Harvesters lost five straight pre-district games before trouncing Dumas, 38-14, in the 1-4A opener.

Pampa's offense relies mainly on its ground game, led by Matt Garvin, who has rushed for 800 yards and Gregg Moore (650 yards). Quarterback Andy Cavalier has rushed for 350 yards and threw two touchdowns in Pampa's 34-0 win over Borger.

Randall has a gambling type of defense.

"They like to do a lot of different things. They run a lot of stunts and blitzes to try and force mistakes," Cavalier said.

The Harvesters will be close to injury-free going into tonight's district closer, which kicks off at 7:30 p.m. in Harvester Stadium. Only cornerback Tyler Kendall, hampered by an ankle injury, may be sidelined.

"It's a little different than it was last year when it seemed like we had half the team hurt," Cavalier said. "We'd have one key player out, get him back, and then have another key player hurt."

District 1-4A standings

Team	Dist.	Overall
Hereford	4-0	7-2
Pampa	3-1	3-6
Dumas	3-1	5-4
Randall	2-2	6-3
Borger	0-4	0-9
Caprock	0-4	2-7

It's weekend for crucial comparisons in college football

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

It's a weekend of crucial comparisons in college football.

When top-ranked Washington visits No. 12 Arizona, it will give fans and poll voters their first concrete comparison between the Huskies and their closest challenger for the national championship, second-ranked Miami.

That's because Arizona is the only team that plays Washington and Miami during the regular season. The Wildcats nearly upset Miami at the Orange Bowl on Sept. 26, falling 8-7 when they missed a 51-yard field goal on the final play.

Despite the temptation, Arizona coach

Dick Tomey says it's unfair to compare Washington and Miami based on their performance against the Wildcats.

"It's a different time," he said. "We're a better team, Miami's a better team, Washington's a different team. We're playing (Washington) at home and they respect us. Miami didn't. It's totally different."

Boston College isn't usually compared to football powers like Notre Dame. On Saturday, however, the unbeaten, ninth-ranked Eagles are given a good chance of beating the No. 8 Irish at South Bend.

"I told our players after the Navy game that right now Boston College is playing better than we are," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said.

When it comes to football success, there's been no comparison between Nebraska and Kansas. But after 23 straight losses to the No. 7 Cornhuskers, the No. 13 Jayhawks could be ready for a breakthrough Saturday in Lincoln.

"They can throw the football and run the football very effectively," Nebraska linebacker Trev Alberts said. "They have a great quarterback. It's not something where you know they're going to pass all four downs."

In other Top 25 games, it's No. 3 Alabama at LSU; No. 4 Michigan at Northwestern; Louisville at No. 5 Texas A&M; Maryland at No. 6 Florida State; Virginia Tech at No. 10 Syracuse; No. 11 Southern Cal at No. 21 Stanford; Southern Mississippi at

No. 14 Florida; Oklahoma State at No. 16 Colorado; No. 17 North Carolina State at Virginia; No. 18 North Carolina at Clemson; Arkansas at No. 19 Mississippi State; No. 20 Texas at Texas Christian; Minnesota at No. 22 Ohio State; and Arizona State at No. 25 Washington State.

Bolstered by a 35-32 victory over Penn State last month, Boston College is confident it can handle the pressure of playing at Notre Dame.

"When you go into Penn State, it's the atmosphere that can really get you," BC quarterback Glenn Foley said. "I think if we can handle that, we'll be ready for Notre Dame."

Foley has passed for 1,524 yards and 11 touchdowns this season, while Chuckie

Dukes leads the Eagles in rushing with 1,024 yards and seven TDs.

"You've got to find a way to stop Dukes, find a way to stop Foley, and then you've got to figure out a way to move the football against a defense that's one of the top 10 in the country," Holtz said.

Nebraska leads the nation in rushing, averaging 351 yards. Calvin Jones averages 107 yards, with Derek Brown not far behind at 101.

Kansas coach Glen Mason says Jones and Brown are the top tailback tandem in the country.

"I don't get to watch everybody on film or on TV, but ... I've not seen one better than either one of those guys," Mason said.

Big leaguers head for Puerto Rico

By DAVID BEARD
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - Just 12 days after the World Series ended, a new baseball season began in traditional fashion in Puerto Rico — with empanadas, pina colada vendors and an ex-major leaguer struggling for a comeback.

The former major leaguer, Oil Can Boyd, gave up one run and two hits in five innings Thursday night, combining with three relievers in the San Juan Metros' 2-1 victory over the Ponce Lions in the Puerto Rican Winter League.

Several of the baseball-hungry spectators, who watched Hall of Famers Willie Mays, Johnny Bench, Jim Palmer and Roberto Clemente in seasons past, speculated Boyd may be the league's best comeback candidate since Lonnie Smith won the batting title five years ago.

Smith, who filed for free agency Thursday, has played well since his Puerto Rican winter.

"I'm going to do the same thing," agreed Boyd, 33, wearing a Malcolm X T-shirt and shorts in the clubhouse. "What's important is that 'The Can' has the attitude to win again. What I liked best tonight was that my mind worked with my arm."

Manager Chris Chambliss praised Boyd's control and pitch selection. The right-hander started with four hitless innings, struck out four and walked one in 58 pitches.

After Boyd left with the score tied 1-1, Mark Davis shut out Ponce for two innings and David Rosario pitched a scoreless eighth.

In the bottom of the eighth, the Metros went ahead when Rico Rossy singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Carlos Laboy's single.

Shawn Holman gave up two singles in the ninth, but retired the final three batters for the save. Rosario was the winner and Rafael Chavez was the loser.

Also Thursday night, the visiting Santurce Crabbers defeated the Arecibo Wolves 4-2 in their opener.

The fifth team, the defending champion Mayaguez Indians, had the night off.

Both San Juan and Ponce are expecting major league reinforcements in the next few weeks.

Cleveland second-baseman Carlos

Baerga is set to rejoin San Juan after finishing the major league tour of Japan. American League batting champion Edgar Martinez also hopes to join the Metros if he is recovered from shoulder surgery.

Cleveland catcher Sandy Alomar Jr. and Montreal outfielder Ivan Calderon, both hampered by injuries over the summer, will join Ponce. AL's home run champion Juan Gonzalez of Texas is to play for Santurce.

Only about 3,000 fans showed up for the drizzly opening night. But many spectators cradled transistor radios or scorepads in their hands, talking about today's prospects and yesterday's stars. In 80-degree temperatures, beer and pina colada vendors sold out, and people lined downstairs concession stands for 75-cent sorrelles and empanadas.

"I've been coming to these games since I was 6 years old," said Jorge Calderon, a 48-year-old dentist, stretching the buttons on his guayabera shirt as he inhaled.

"I can see the stadium from my office," he added, smiling. "If the lights are on, I call my wife and tell her I won't be home for a while."

Slumping Bills favored over Steelers

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

Buffalo fans are down on their team because it's not winning by enough. Marv Levy is down on the fans.

"Some of them impress me as if they might have been ready to surrender the day after Pearl Harbor," he says. "But we're not."

All of this is relevant for the Pittsburgh Steelers, who come to town with — surprise — the same record as the Bills, 6-2. They're rewarded for this by being 6 1/2-point underdogs to Buffalo.

BILLS, 20-17.

Raiders (plus 6 1/2) at Philadelphia Does the soap opera continue?

This might be the best thing that can happen to the Eagles. When the silver and black arrive, the silver and green may forget that they're angry at each other and get angry at their opponents. On the other hand, maybe the battered Eagles aren't very good. EAGLES, 13-10.

Miami (minus 6 1/2) at Indianapolis So how far does Steve Emtman run this time? Revenge, revenge, revenge. DOLPHINS, 24-14.

Minnesota (minus 6) at Tampa Bay

Dennis Green is half-season coach of the year.

Sam Wyche tried for a while ... But he isn't. VIKINGS, 24-6.

Pro picks

San Diego (plus 6 1/2) at Kansas City

The Chargers aren't good enough to win five in a row. The Chiefs aren't bad enough to be 4-5. CHIEFS, 13-3.

Dallas (minus 6 1/2) at Detroit

What a difference 10 months make — last January, the Lions beat the Cowboys 38-6 in the playoffs. It might as well have been 10 years. COWBOYS, 38-6.

San Francisco (minus 7) at Atlanta (Monday night)

Three weeks ago, the 49ers sent Jerry Glanville back to Atlanta with his "California Trophy" dragging behind him. That one was 56-17. This one? 49ERS, 38-17.

New Orleans (minus 8 1/2) at New England.

The Patriots always try. The Saints (almost always) win. SAINTS, 20-10.

Green Bay (plus 9) at Giants

It's unlikely the Ray Handley can get his guys up for this one after what they did in Washington. Besides (see Buffalo), the Giants have their own Pearl Harbor fans. GIANTS, 27-23.

New York Jets (plus 6) at Denver

Do the Jets have a third straight good effort in them? Yes ... until Elway gets the ball with 1:30 left. BRONCOS, 23-20.

Cleveland (plus 11) at Houston

The Browns don't like turf, as in their 30-10 loss in Cincinnati. Houston likes it fine. OILERS, 30-10.

Washington (minus 12 1/2) at Seattle

This is a real stat — the Washington offense hasn't scored a touchdown in nine quarters. The streak ends here. REDSKINS, 26-7.

Cincinnati (plus 9 1/2) at Chicago

One thing about the Bears. They generally beat bad teams. BEARS, 24-14.

Southwest Outdoors

By Mel Phillips

Taking care of little things that cause big problems

The BEST HUNTING TRIP that I ever received came not from an outdoorsman in the traditional term but from a man that depended upon outdoor skills just to stay alive. His name was Gunnery-Sergeant Hines, my Marine drill instructor for basic training during my Navy pilot training days. His lectures concerning how to stay alive had real meaning during the Vietnam War years. He served several tours in 'Nam,' and all us college boys who were going to be aviators listened when he talked. His stories never described the heroic drama of fire fights but usually concerned our gear and how little things could save our lives or cause problems.

One evening as I was treating some severe blisters from my new combat boots, he casually suggested that unless I wanted an EXTRA THREE WEEKS OF BASIC TRAINING, I should learn to wear two pairs of socks with my boots. The first pair should be thin nylon dress socks. Over these dress socks then came thick cotton socks. When the rubbing caused by exercise occurred, it was between the nylon and the cotton...not my feet. Gunny Hines taught us many things, but every fall when I look at my hunting boots I hear his voice and to this day I still follow his sage advice.

OPENING WEEKEND OF QUAIL SEASON reveals lots of birds and numerous reports of huge coveys containing evidence of staggered hatches of young quail. Although our fall weather remains very dry, the critical time for hatching young quail was during our wet spring and early summer. Barring a repeat of the terrible winter freeze of 1989, the outlook for quail is simply outstanding.

One of the keys to improved fishing is more catch-and-release by more fishermen. ALLEN FORSHAGE, head of the Angler Recognition Program for Texas Parks and Wildlife, hopes that a reduction in the minimum length requirements for this program will encourage more anglers to practice catch-and-release. Participating anglers will receive a neat recognition pin from TPW and the satisfaction of releasing a prime breeding-sized fish. New minimum length requirements include the following: largemouth bass new minimum is 21 inches; smallmouth minimum is 18 inches; blue catfish must be 36 inches. For more information and application forms WRITE, Inland Fisheries, TPW, Rt. 10, Box 1043, Tyler, Texas 75707, or call (903) 566-2161.

If you qualify, we will be glad to share that honor with our readers. Drop us a note at 3214 Parker, Amarillo, Texas. 79109. We are also looking for some good outdoor pictures. Please, no pictures of deer tongues. Include the date and location, and please print the name of everyone in the photo. Thanks.

Blocked punts lead to Kansas State victory

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kitt Rawlings and Tom Randolph blocked Iowa State's first two punts and Eric Gallon rushed for 164 yards as Kansas State beat the Cyclones 22-13 Thursday night.

Gallon broke a 56-yard touchdown run in the fourth period as the Wildcats (4-4, 1-3 Big Eight) snapped a four-game losing streak in their first home game since Oct. 3. Gallon was helped off the field with an apparent injury after his last carry, which moved him into second place on Kansas State's career rushing list with 1,873 yards.

The two blocked punts set up touchdown drives of 11 and 22 yards in the first quarter.

James McMillon, Iowa State's record-breaking punt returner, aggravated a knee injury during pregame warmups and did not play, costing the Cyclones (3-6, 1-4) one of their primary weapons.

Kansas State held the ball only 3:37 of the first period but still took a 12-0 lead. Besides the two blocked Iowa State punts, Kansas State's Warren Claassen missed an extra point, Iowa State's Ty Stewart missed a 38-yard field goal and the Cyclones' James Brooks kicked the ball out of bounds at the 10 on the kickoff following Tate Wright's 21-yard field goal in the third period.

In addition, Kansas State punter Sean Snyder, second nationally with an average of almost 49 yards, had punts of 28 and 31 yards.

Snyder had the ball snapped over his head with 2:32 left, giving Iowa State the ball on Kansas State's 20.

After Donnie Smith sneaked across from the 2-yard line on fourth and goal, closing Iowa State to 15-7 with 12:18 left, the Wildcats soared 83 yards in only two plays. Jason Smargiasso found Tyson Schweiger for 27 yards, then Gallon took the handoff, cut left and outran two defenders 56 yards down the sideline for the touchdown.

On Iowa State's first possession, Rawlings burst through the middle to block Jon Schnoor's punt. Kansas State recovered on the 11, and J.J. Smith went almost untouched through the middle for the score. Claassen's extra point was wide.

With about three minutes remaining in the opening quarter, Randolph blocked Schnoor's punt and Kansas State took over on the 22. On second and goal from the 4, Gallon went off tackle into the end zone. Smargiasso's two-point conversion attempt was stopped at the 1.

With 4:56 left, Smith scrambled around and found a wide-open Chris Spencer with a 22-yard touchdown pass. Smith then failed on a two-point conversion run. Masters' end zone interception following the muffed punt attempt sealed K-State's third straight victory over Iowa State.

Hogs pay visit to Mississippi State

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The I formation, rarely seen when Arkansas had the ball early in the year, was the alignment of choice last week.

The Razorbacks ran 64 plays in a 24-2 tie with Auburn and 50 of those plays were from the I. That formation, says Arkansas interim coach Joe Kines, allows the Razorbacks to be more physical than the one-back set.

"As you go through the league it becomes very obvious to you that it's a very physical league," Kines said. "If you're going to play in that league, if you're going to win in that league, then you need to be physical."

On Saturday, the Razorbacks (2-5-1, 2-3-1 in the Southeastern Conference) journey to Starkville, Miss., to take on Mississippi State (6-2, 3-2).

"You attack what's in front of you," Kines said. "Some defensive schemes lend themselves to being more vulnerable to the two-back. A lot of things go into a plan and what you're facing probably has as much to do with it as what you would like to do."

Kines said the Razorbacks didn't do anything during the past three weeks that they didn't do during the previous weeks.

Silverdome redemption is at hand for Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING (AP) — Silverdome redemption is at hand for the Dallas Cowboys defense, currently rated as the best in the NFL.

It was the NFL's worst last year in the Cowboys two appearances in the Silverdome. Now, Dallas has passed Philadelphia as the stingiest defenders in the league in a 7-1 run.

Detroit's 1991 run-and-shoot offense shot defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt's creation to shreds. It wasn't so bad in a 34-10 loss during the regular season because the defense gave up only two touchdowns. But the 38-6 playoff loss to the Lions was a disaster. The defense gave up 421 yards and five touchdowns.

"They embarrassed us, beat us bad," recalled defensive tackle Russell Maryland. "We have something to prove, against Detroit. We have to prove we can play well in the Silverdome and we have to prove we can handle the run-and-shoot. 'People keep harping on it. We're ready to show what we can do.'"

What Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson did after the playoff game was vow to upgrade his secondary.

He drafted defensive backs Kevin Smith, Darren Woodson and Clayton Holmes and obtained Thomas Everett from the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We wanted to upgrade the entire team talentwise but the last area we upgraded was the defensive backfield," Johnson said. "We knew we had to do it. We didn't have trouble just with Detroit. We had problems with Atlanta and Houston during the regular season. We knew we had made some changes. We feel we've done it."

The Cowboys worked long and hard against the run-and-shoot in training camp in several scrimmages with the Houston Oilers. They also played Houston twice in preseason.

The Dallas "nickel" or pass defense package has improved to the point where the Cowboys are first in the NFL in third down defense.

"I predicted in training camp that our biggest improvement this year would be on defense," Johnson said. "Now we've got the talent, an outstanding scheme and an outstanding coach. The biggest improvement on this team is the defense."

It's a no-star defense. None of the defensive Cowboys has made the Pro Bowl or been picked on an All-Pro team.

"We play together," said cornerback Issiac Holt. "We are 'the who?' defense. Nobody knows us for nobody."

Defensive tackle Tony Casillas said "the last time we played Detroit we weren't sharp at all. We owe them one. Just like we owed Philadelphia one last week."

Johnson is brimming with confidence this time around.

"We're better served to defend the run-and-shoot," Johnson said. "I still think our number one priority is to stop Barry Sanders. But we've had a talent upgrade in our secondary. We can handle the pass, too."

A&M's Slocum concerned about Louisville despite 4-5 record

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M is ranked fifth nationally with an 8-0 record and has won 17 straight regular-season games and 42 of its last 46 games at Kyle Field.

So why is Aggies coach R.C. Slocum worried about a non-conference game Saturday against Louisville, whose Cardinals take only a 4-5 record into the contest?

"This is going to be more than what some people think it will be," Slocum said. "I am concerned because we are taking a break from SWC games to play Louisville. This is one of those frightening teams that is better than its record indicates."

The oddsmakers have less concern than Slocum. They've made the Aggies 16-point favorites for the 2:30 p.m. kick-off.

In other Southwest Conference games, Texas tries to keep its league title hopes alive against Texas Christian, Baylor plays Georgia Tech, Rice plays Texas Tech and Houston plays Southern Methodist.

The No. 20 Texas Longhorns (5-2, 3-0 in SWC games) have a 24-game winning streak going against Texas Christian (1-6-1, 0-4), and they're 15 1/2-point favorites to continue the streak.

Baylor (4-4, 3-2) is a five-point favorite over Georgia Tech (5-3); Rice (3-4, 2-2) gets a one-point margin over Texas Tech (3-5, 2-2) and Houston (3-4, 1-2) has a 17 1/2 point advantage over Southern Methodist (3-5, 1-4).

Slocum wishes his team was playing a league game Saturday.

"This is something new for us and that concerns me," Slocum said. "We usually play our non-conference games at the start of the season. Maybe it won't be a problem, but it's definitely something to be concerned about."

Both Jeff Granger, who suffered a concussion last week, and true freshman Corey Pullig will play at quarterback, Slocum said.

Texas coach John Mackovic won't be lulled by the Longhorns' lengthy winning streak against the Horned Frogs.

"We have to be prepared to not give up the ball because they've made a lot of big plays," Mackovic said.

Despite one victory this season, TCU coach Pat Sullivan is pleased that his team is playing hard.

"We think we're in the position at least they are starting to play hard every week," Sullivan said. "I'm excited about playing Texas and I think our team is. They've got a chance to make history."

Baylor coach Grant Teaff isn't as concerned as Slocum about taking on a non-conference foe during the SWC race although the Bears have had tough times with late non-league games. San Jose spouted an unbeaten record in 1980.

"It would probably be more difficult if we were still hot and heavy in the race," Teaff said.

Judge dismisses Cipollone cigarette lawsuit

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — After 10 years of high-profile litigation against the cigarette industry, the attorneys for the family of a woman who claimed she died from smoking have thrown in the legal towel.

The lawsuit over Rose Cipollone's death, which resulted in a landmark ruling from the U.S. Supreme Court, was dismissed Thursday with the family's consent, said an attorney for the family, Alan Darnell.

A court clerk said the case was dismissed with prejudice, which means the lawsuit cannot be filed again.

The dismissal order did not elaborate and Marc Z. Edell, a family attorney, wouldn't comment. Thomas Cipollone, who carried on the lawsuit after his parents' death, has an unlisted telephone number and couldn't be reached.

But one of Edell's colleagues in the case, Cynthia A. Walters, told The New York Times that the "Cipollones always felt that they got what they wanted out of the case."

Thomas Cipollone "was always of the view that 'I don't have to go back to court to get what I want,'" Ms. Walters said. "They were never sorry they got involved in it. Rose knew she would die long before the case got to court. She wanted to help people and I think she did."

The case began in 1983 when Rose Cipollone of Little Ferry sued the cigarette companies that made the brands she smoked for 42 years. She died at age 58 in 1984.

A federal jury in 1988 ordered Liggett Group Inc. to pay her husband, Antonio, $400,000 — the nation's first monetary damage award against the industry. But the jury absolved Philip Morris Companies Inc. and Lorillard Inc., which made other brands of cigarettes Mrs. Cipollone smoked.

Antonio Cipollone died in 1990 and Thomas continued the case.

In June, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a 1965 federal law requiring warning labels on cigarette packages did not shield the companies from all lawsuits based on state personal injury laws. The 7-2 ruling also said smokers need to do more than prove that cigarette advertising and promotions tend to minimize the health hazards.

The case was sent back to federal court in Newark for a retrial. In September, U.S. District Judge H.

Lee Sarokin withdrew after an appeals court removed him from a similar case at the request of a tobacco company, which said he was biased. Sarokin has said his rulings in tobacco cases are impartial.

Charles Wall, associate general counsel for Philip Morris in New York, said Thursday the lawsuit might have been dropped because the high court's ruling made suing cigarette companies more time consuming and expensive.

Richard Daynard, a law professor at Northeastern University in Boston and chairman of the Tobacco Products Liability Project, which encourages lawsuits against tobacco companies as a health issue, said dropping the Cipollone lawsuit would not deter future legal action against the tobacco industry.

Keating's former aide testifies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The star prosecution witness at Charles Keating Jr.'s federal trial spent nearly a full day accusing the former Lincoln Savings boss of inflating corporate profits with phony land sales.

Judy J. Wischer, the former president of Keating's American Continental Corp., described lying about one of the deals to American Continental's auditors, Arthur Young & Co.

She said she told the auditors that transactions were arm's-length when the parties involved actually were linked. Then, she testified Thursday, she told Keating about misleading the auditors. "His reaction was: 'Good. What else?'" Mrs. Wischer said.

"Which was Charlie's way of going on to the next transaction."

Mrs. Wischer acknowledged to jurors that she was testifying for prosecutors as part of a deal in which she pleaded guilty to some of the same charges that Keating faces.

She was to continue on the stand today. Defense attorney Stephen C. Neal, who has said the deals were legitimate, will cross-examine her beginning late today or next week.

The testimony on complex real estate and accounting issues flowed easily from Mrs. Wischer, who worked at Keating's side for 18 years and was president of American Continental from 1985 until it and Lincoln collapsed in April 1989.

Appeals court rejects FCC rule on television reruns

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court said television networks can sell their reruns to local and cable stations without restrictions.

A three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Thursday rejected a Federal Communications Commission decision that limited the networks' ownership and sale of rerun rights to their prime-time programs.

The FCC originally adopted the rule in 1970. It banned the three major television networks — ABC, CBS and NBC — from selling the syndication rights of programs they produced for broadcast on independent stations.

The FCC rule was aimed at preventing networks from driving independent stations out of business by monopolizing the syndication of programs. By refusing to buy programs unless producers surrendered their syndication rights, networks could effectively control independent stations' access to programs.

The television industry argued that changes since 1970 have resulted in fewer program producers and diminished network power due to the rise of cable television stations and the increased use of VCRs.

In 1990, the FCC responded by adopting new rules. The new rules, which went into effect May 1991, allowed networks to buy syndication rights, but an independent syndicator had to be hired to arrange for the distribution of programs to independent stations. And networks only could buy syndication rights on reruns, not first-run programs.
