Frisbee follies

Tossing a Frisbee is no simple task. It takes concentration, a good eye and a strong arm. But sometimes the three don't come together at the same time, as 7-year-old Ben Guinan discovered Wednesday during the World Junior Frisbee contest sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department. During the accuracy event, he eyes the target, aims the Frisbee and then pitches it. But the final photo tells the results as Ben grimaces over the Frisbee's landing spot.

Lebanese minister criticizes U.S. peacekeeping efforts

By The Associated Press

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan publicly accused U.S. presidential envoy Philip Habib today of backtracking on when to deploy peacekeepers in west Beirut and said this threatened "every other aspect" of talks on the evacuation of the PLO from the battered city.

At the same time, Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev warned President Reagan that if U.S. Marines were sent into west Beirut "the Soviet Union would build its policy with due consideration of this fact." He did not elaborate, but the Kremlin supports PLO chief Yasser Arafat, who publicly has spurned Reagan's offer to send in the Marines as part of a multinational force to evacuate the guerrillas.

Wazzan said the force, which also would include French paratroopers, should deploy "before or simultaneously with the start" of the evacuation of Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization. "But I have been surprised by a non-Lebanese insistence that the deployment of these international forces should take place after the departure of the Palestinians, which negates much of the need for and the usefulness of these forces.

"ALL THROUGH the talks with Mr. Philip Habib I have been determined to keep the details from official publicity pending the arrival at a final agreement," Wazzan said. "But this new position came as a shock, which I am afraid, would reflect on every other aspect of the talks."

The Wazzan statement was issued by his office and broadcast on the state radio and published in all Beirut newspapers. There was no immediate comment from Habib, who has been trying for three weeks to put together a peacekeeping agreement that would stave off a ground assault on west Beirut by Israeli forces who invaded Lebanon June 6 to crush the PLO.

Wazzan believes the U.S. and French force is needed to shield the estimated 8,000 withdrawing guerrillas and their 12,000 leftist Moslem Lebanese compatriots left behind in west Beirut from reprisals by rightist Lebanese Christian militiamen allied with Israel in mostly Christian east Beirut, said a source close to Wazzan who requested anonymity.

The source said Habib's surprise position was behind the conference Wazzan called Wednesday evening with the PLO leadership, the leaders of leftist Moslem groups and other Moslem elder statesmen and religious dignitaries.

Peacekeeping not new

WASHINGTON (AP) — If President Reagan decides to commit American troops to a peacekeeping force in Lebanon, it will not be the first time the U.S. military has been sent abroad in a non-combat role.

While it has happened infrequently, the few times U.S. forces have been employed in peacekeeping efforts have been judged largely successful.

They were used in the Mideast on two occasions. The first was in Lebanon in 1958; the second was this year when a contingent of U.S. troops was sent to the Sinai Peninsula to help police the border between Egypt and Israel.

U.S. troops also were used in the Dominican Republic in 1965, with results regarded in this country as successful, although they were widely criticized elsewhere.

American troops stationed in South Korea, Europe and at other military bases around the globe also serve a peacekeeping function. But in Korea they fought a war against invaders from North Korea and China, and the military bases are part of the established U.S. defense network.

In the 1958 intervention in Lebanon, President Eisenhower dispatched 14,000 troops at the request of Lebanese President Camille Chamoun to end sectarian strife stirred in part by Chamoun's pro-West sympathies.

Eisenhower was afraid the government would be toppled and be replaced by a regime oriented toward Egypt and the Soviet Union. There was also fear violence in Lebanon could lead to overthrow of the pro-West monarchy in Jordan.

The presence of U.S. troops ended the domestic fighting and prepared the way for a peaceful transition to a new government. The troops who waded ashore on Lebanon's beaches on July 15 were withdrawn in October without ever having engaged in fighting.

In an analysis in a 1978 Brookings Institution publication entitled "Force Without War," Mideast expert William B. Quandt said, "Within Lebanon a volatile situation was brought under control after the arrival of U.S. forces."

"The key to success lay in the restraint with which the operation was conducted," Quandt wrote. "Had hostilities occurred between U.S. and Lebanese forces, the U.S. mediating role would have been seriously jeopardized."

The Brookings study cited more than 200 incidents in which the United States employed its armed forces for political purposes since World War II. In most cases, they involved suggestions of U.S. willingness to use force. Sometimes, ships or aircraft were sent to troubled regions.

The second major post-war involvement of U.S. troops to quell domestic strife occurred in the Dominican Republic in 1965, the first direct military intervention by Washington in a Latin American country in nearly 50 years.

President Johnson ordered a helicopter landing by 500 Marines on April 28. By the time the U.S. buildup was completed on May 9, there were 23,000 troops in the country.

Writing in the same Brookings publication, Jerome N. Slater said, "There is no doubt at all that the U.S. intervention was motivated from the outset by fear of a Communist takeover."

Local officials feel elevators quite safe

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

An absence of local, state and federal regulations governing elevator safety and maintenance in Texas has created what some state occupational safety officials consider a "window of vulnerability" in elevator safety.

But several elevator company representatives and building managers in Midland insist that their present system of service contracts and regular maintenance provides sufficient safeguards and precludes a need for government intervention.

Robert Lusk, Midland branch manager for Dover Elevator Co., said his company follows a national elevator safety code established by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) and maintains service contracts with its customers.

"Personally, I think it's a very good system," said Lusk, whose company services about 100 elevators in the Midland-Odessa area.

UNDER A maintenance agreement with a customer, Dover employees regularly examine elevator systems, providing routine inspection, lubrication and adjustments or repairs when needed.

Lusk said complex, high-rise building systems are usually inspected weekly, while less elaborate systems are scrutinized semi-monthly.

"With any electrical or mechanical-type system, periodic problems will arise," Lusk said. "But all in all, with proper maintenance, the equipment is virtually trouble free" and "100 percent safe."

Service contracts are a must, according to Paula Nodwell, property manager for the Building of the Southwest and the C&K Petroleum Building in Midland.

"If you do not have a service contract, you are not going to get good service," she said.

Nodwell said government elevator regulation seems unnecessary if elevator owners and service companies tend to safety procedures.

"WE KNOW WE'RE doing everything that can possibly be done. I don't think you're going to find any safer elevators," she said.

Lusk said all major elevator companies comply with the safety code established by ANSI, a standard-setting organization for several industries.

Although the code is not equivalent to government law, "it's law as far as we're concerned," Lusk said. "It covers,

Elevator shafts, such as this one at the Gibraltar Building, are a common sight in Midland's high-rise office buildings. A lack of regulations governing elevator safety has caused some concern statewide recently, but those associated with elevators in Midland feel that regular maintenance is adequate and provides sufficient safeguards.

Midland ready with stockade plans

By ED TODD

Midland and Odessa, which haven't shared much more than a first-come share of the oil wealth, may be sharing a barbed-wired stockade for outlaws if the Commissioners' Courts of the two counties — Midland and Ector — concur in their respective meetings Monday.

On Wednesday, Ector County Judge Gary Watkins and Midland County Judge Bill Ahders asked their county attorneys to draw up contracts on financing the stockade for their courts to consider. Three of Ector County's four commissioners indicated that they would be interested in the stockade, which may be built on Odessa city property but in Midland County and about three miles east of the Midland-Ector County line and southeast of Odessa.

"Everything sounds optimistic," Watkins said Wednesday after conferring with three of the commissioners.

"Everybody is working together in a spirit of cooperation. Some have reservations about the amount of money."

The initial outlay in building the stockade largely with prisoner labor on a tract on a 40-acre site is hovering around $260,000. But whatever the costs, the contract to be drafted by Midland County Attorney J. Scott Henderson and Ector County Attorney Mike Atkins apparently will call for a 60-40 split on the capital outlay. Ector County, which possibly would put more non-violent prisoners in the stockade than would Midland County, will ante up the larger share. Offenders charged with committing violent crimes and those who have an inclination to escape would be kept in the conventional steel-and-concrete jails.

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, a member of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards, for months has been exploring the stockade venture as a temporary answer to the county's overcrowded jail and to preclude intervention by the federal courts.

While the sheriff was getting the commission's approval to build the stockade as a "pilot project" which would serve the county until another jail or an expanded jail could be built by the mid-1980s, other counties expressed interest in leasing stockade space.

The original site considered by the Midland County Commissioners' Court was a 7½-acre tract near the county barn in a so-called window-pane area in southeast Midland and in Commissioner Precinct 3. Earlier, The Reporter-Telegram reported that the site, near Taylor Avenue and Henderson Boulevard, was in Precinct 2.

Nevertheless, Precinct 2 Commissioner Charlie Welch has promoted switching the site from Midland's urban area to the remote 40-acre site just southeast of Odessa's new sewage treatment plant in Midland County.

Smith has estimated the per day cost per prisoner to be about $30, but that could change depending on the number of prisoners. The per day upkeep of a prisoner in the Midland County jail is $20.88.

In his original plans for the Midland site, Smith had proposed sheltering the prisoners in tents in bivouac fashion after the double fence was built and while barracks were being construced. He had proposed, as he does even if the project is shifted to near Odessa, using skilled and unskilled prisoner labor in building the barbed-wire fences and to assist craftsmen in constructing the barracks.

In his No. 1 Midland proposal, the sheriff had recommended building two

Bankers call for firing of archbishop

ROME (AP) — Italian banking officials have asked Pope John Paul II to fire American Archbishop Paul Marcinkus as head of the Vatican bank because of his alleged involvement in a banking scandal, the Daily American reported today.

The burly 60-year-old archbishop from Cicero, Ill., is considered the most powerful American at the Vatican and is also the pope's bodyguard and trusted adviser.

The English-language newspaper quoted unidentified Vatican and government sources as saying the request to dismiss Marcinkus came to the pope in a memo from three Bank of Italy commissioners appointed to run Banco Ambrosiano, Italy's largest private bank.

The paper quoted the memo as saying Marcinkus should be fired "to avert further embarrassment for the state investigators who are forced to carry out their duties. It is in the best interests of the Holy See that the archbishop not remain in a position of suspicion."

Marcinkus could not be reached immediately for comment, but has denied earlier press accounts he may be removed. The Vatican and banking officials have consistently refused to comment on the case.

The archbishop, president of the Vatican bank since 1971, also heads the Vatican City administration, which runs the 108-acre city-state's day-to-day affairs. He also coordinates security on papal trips abroad.

The Vatican bank, founded in 1942, provides banking services for an estimated 7,000 customers, mostly clergy, ambassadors accredited to the Holy See and Roman Catholic institutions.

Marcinkus has come under public scrutiny recently for dealings with Banco Ambrosiano and the bank's president, the late Roberto Calvi. The Vatican bank owns 1.58 percent of Banco Ambrosiano.

Calvi, who was appealing a 1981 conviction for illegally exporting $26.4 million out of Italy, was found hanging from a London bridge June 18. It has not been determined whether his death was suicide or murder.

At the time of his death, the 61-year-old financier was under investigation by the Bank of Italy for "questionable" high-risk loans of $1.4 billion to three Latin American subsidiaries of Banco Ambrosiano.

Italian-language papers and the Daily American have quoted the banking commissioners as saying Marcinkus signed a letter of patronage to Calvi for the loans, meaning the Vatican bank could be held liable if they are illegal or in default. The exact nature of the loans and their legality has not been determined.

There have also been reports that Marcinkus has another letter from Calvi releasing the Vatican bank from all but $250 million of the debt.

Vatican sources say Marcinkus resigned last week from the board of directors of a Bahamas subsidiary of Banco Ambrosiano that received part of the loan.

Italian papers have said several cardinals have been pressuring John Paul to dismiss Marcinkus to insulate the Vatican from the Calvi scandal.

Marcinkus has denied any wrongdoing as president of the Vatican bank, officially known as the Institute for Religious Works. He told the Chicago Tribune on Wednesday that he would not quit.

"I don't resign under these circumstances," he was quoted as saying. "I have not been involved with anything that could be considered fraud...I am completely unaware of any move by the Holy Father to get rid of me."

Italian papers have speculated John Paul would not fire Marcinkus but promote him to head of the Chicago archdiocese. The post became vacant when Cardinal John P. Cody died of a heart attack April 25.

Midland County prepared with two stockade plans

22-man barracks, which would be joined by an office or offices for guards and for lawyers to confer with their clients. Cost per double unit for 44 prisoners at a projected $17.14 a square foot would be $60,000. Each 22-man, one-level building would be 30-by-50 feet, and two units would be joined by a 20-foot long connecting office. A stockade to house between 100 and 200 prisoners charged with non-violent crimes has been considered by officials of the two counties.

Costs to be considered in the stockade's Odessa site include fresh water lines from wells, sewer lines, power and gas lines, possibly a three-mile road connecting the stockade site to Farm Road 1788 to cut down on the mileage to Midland and a communications system.

The Midland-Ector County stockade's proposed site would be in the southeast corner of Section 3 of Block 41 on which the sewage treatment plant is located; the plant is in the northwest corner of that section. Within a quarter mile of the proposed stockade site is the Marcus Bates aircraft landing strip.

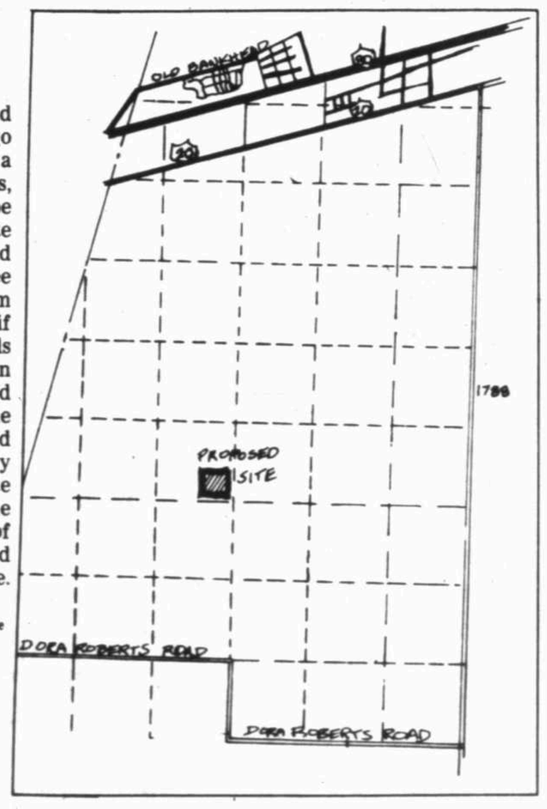

Ahders and Watkins said that the courts of the two counties likely would meet separately in considering the contract, although some thought apparently had been given to holding a joint meeting. The Ector court is to act on the contract Monday morning, and the Midland court, if Ector likes and agrees on the contract, will consider the stockade contract that afternoon.

"If it hasn't passed (by the Ector court)," said Ahders, "we won't even discuss it."

If Midland and Odessa decide to go together in building a stockade for prisoners, it probably would be located in a 40-acre site in southwest Midland County, right, three miles west of Farm Road 1788. However, if Midland County winds up building its own stockade, the proposed site is in a windowpane area, left, of Midland County within the city limits. The Midland site is a 7-acre lot near the intersection of Henderson Boulevard and Taylor Avenue.

Thornberry says only he is qualified

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Calling his Democratic opponent an "urban cowboy" who donned a hat, jeans and belt buckle for the state agriculture commissioner campaign, Fred Thornberry contended Wednesday during a news conference here that he is the only qualified candidate for the position.

Speaking at the Midland County Republican Headquarters, Thornberry, 45, pointed out he is employed by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and has served as consultant to foreign and U.S. producers.

Jim Hightower, his opponent, beat incumbent Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary and will face Thornberry in the Nov. 2 general election.

Thornberry centered his comments on what he called the liberalism of Hightower. "When my opponent was busy raising Cain with other student radicals during the '60s while getting a government degree, I had already earned a degree in vocational agriculture and was working as an agricultural research scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station," he said.

Thornberry was placed on the ballot after the May 1 primary by the Republican Party. He said he had expected Brown, being an incumbent, would be selected for a second term by the Democrats and later by Texas voters in the general election. On that assumption, he didn't go after the post.

"I'm a working man and can't afford to be unemployed for a year as some of these politicians do. I was going to run for the position in four years," Thornberry said.

He criticized a plan by Hightower to get rid of the middle man in the agriculture business. In cutting out the middle man, Thornberry says it means eliminating 40 percent of the jobs in Texas, which rely "directly or indirectly on agriculture."

Instead, Thornberry proposed that farmers need help in the form of reduced government regulations and increased exports.

"Grain embargos on foreign shipments have damaged our foreign markets. Agriculture has been the whipping boy of the secretary of state for many years," he said of practices by the federal government to restrict agriculture shipments to other countries.

"We should stimulate development of foreign markets. If the Soviet Union has money to buy it, let's create a dependency on their part for our grain. We'll be able to control international politics to a greater extent," Thornberry reasoned.

Owner of timberland and operator of an aviary, Thornberry called farmers "intelligent businessmen. But we're operating in a free enterprise society and have government regulations. We need to be operating on free and open trade throughout the world."

Part of the problems experienced by the farmer come from inflation and high interest rates, he acknowledged. But he also contended that part of the situation lies with the "cheap food policy" promoted by the Northeast.

Despite these problems, Thornberry said figures reflect an increase in the number of small farmers — those who derive part of their income from farming and the rest from another job.

Thornberry, who is part owner in a 300-head herd of cattle, endorses a water plan for the immediate and far future. On the short-term basis, he suggested "conserving waters falling on this state through strategic construction of dams and reservoirs. And we need to plan for importation of waters through federal waterways."

Taking another jab at Hightower before concluding his talk, Thornberry said his opponent is supported by liberals, including Norman Lear, "who is a known socialist," and Sissy Farenthold, who just returned from Cuba.

Customer takes matters into own hands

ODESSA — An apparently disgruntled Energas Co. customer took matters into his own hands here Wednesday and forced a company employee at gunpoint to turn his gas service back on.

The employee told police he was working in an alley behind 410 Bunche about 4 p.m. when a man approached, stuck a gun to his neck and said, "You gonna turn my gas on right now. They cut it off."

The employee said he was taken to a house at 401 Carver, where he complied with the man's wishes. He was then ordered to light the water heater and told: "Now get the hell out of here."

Police indicated that it shouldn't be hard to locate the suspect, who was also armed with a knife.

Man said he was robbed, forced to strip

Police responding to citizen complaints about a nude man running near the downtown area Wednesday found a 52-year-old man who told him he had been robbed and forced to disrobe by a hitchhiker he had picked up earlier.

The man told officers he picked up the hitchhiker near 2nd and Kelly streets. The hitchhiker said he was going to the unemployement office, but threatened the man and took $1.17 from him before getting behind the wheel in an alley and ordering him to strip.

They drove around for a while before the man was able to leap from the car at a red light at the intersection of 6th and Muskingum. He ran into the nearby Women and Children's Hospital, but not before police began receiving calls about a man running the streets naked.

The man said the hitchhiker also took his 1976 Pontiac.

Threat of rain remains in local forecast

A threat of rain remains in the forecast after Midland received .44 of an inch of rain overnight, boosting monthly and yearly totals to .61 and 6.89 inches, respectively.

The National Weather Service predicts a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with a low near 70 and southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 mph.

Friday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid 90s and a 20 percent chance of mainly afternoon thunderstorms. Winds Friday should be southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Sunset tonight is at 8:58 p.m., sunrise Friday at 6 a.m. Wednesday's high of 96 was well below the record 103 in 1954. The low of 70 was easily warmer than the record 62 set in 1958.

Stamp to hold at 20 cents

SAN BRUNO, Calif. (AP) — The price of a first-class stamp should stay at 20 cents through early 1984, says the head of the U.S. Postal Service, which also gets good marks from an outside panel for cutting costs and improving productivity.

The National Academy of Public Administration released a year-long evaluation, financed by the postal service, at a monthly meeting Wednesday of the postal Board of Governors.

The academy began the $500,000 study in July 1981, the 10th anniversary of the creation of the service as an independent federal agency. Its predecessor, the Post Office Department, had been a cabinet department.

Before his agency was praised by the chairman of the study panel, Postmaster General William F. Bolger told fellow governors that the postal service was $24 million in the black for the 28-day period ending June 11. An $84 million deficit had been anticipated.

The unexpected surplus, largely due to a lower-than-projected increase in consumer prices which held down pay increases, means the 20-cent stamp will stick around a few months longer than expected, Bolger said in an interview.

He predicted no hike in the stamp price "through early 1984." Before the latest fiscal month, the Postal Service was about $600 million in the black, a spokesman said.

The panel found that United Parcel Service, a private company, pays higher wages than the Postal Service, does a bigger volume of parcel delivery, and could teach the Postal Service about efficiency.

Local officials feel secure about safety of elevators

I'd say, every component relative to an elevator system."

Robert Young, local representative for Otis Elevator Co., which maintains about 135 elevators in 65 area buildings, echoed Lusk's view.

"As far as I'm concerned, the ones that are under contract are safe," he said. Young said Otis maintains service contracts with all but a few customers. He declined to specify those customers without service contracts, but said Otis employees, armed with inspection checklists, regularly examine elevators owned by contract customers.

"So, it's not a hit and miss proposition," Young said.

BUT "HIT AND miss" is exactly what some occupational safety officials fear describes elevator safety and maintenance in Texas.

Walter G. Martin, state director of occupational safety, called elevator safety "a subject that has always worried me."

Martin said the state made progress in developing elevator regulations in 1972, but funding for the program was dropped in 1974.

Texas opted to curtail state safety programs in favor of broad standards and enforcement provided by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

OSHA rules are designed specifically for employer-employee situations — freight elevators, for instance. The same regulations don't apply for the myriad number of elevators used by the public in high-rise office and apartment buildings across the state.

While local government units may adopt elevator regulations, Houston remains the only Texas city to adopt its own elevator inspection program.

DESPITE APPARENT efforts by some elevator companies and owners to ensure safe operation, Martin expressed concern about a lack of additional safeguards obtainable through government regulation.

"Everybody hates government control," Martin conceded. "But without the threat of enforcement, you do not see complete voluntary compliance.

Martin estimated that some elevators in the state have operated for 50 years without a safety inspection.

"There is no code that says they have to perform the way they should," he said. "If there's nobody to check up on them, how do you know they're doing what they're supposed to?"

Jerry Bailey, area director of occupational safety, said elevator safety is "definitely a problem area." In some cases, he said, "some of this preventive maintenance just doesn't get done."

James Brown, Midland city manager, says the city has never considered elevator regulations because "the question has never been raised before."

According to Al Baze, a Midland building inspector, city inspectors examine building plans to ensure that elevators meet fire code specifications. But once construction is complete and elevators begin operation, inspection and maintenance is left to the building's management and the elevator company.

John Bizilo, building manager for Midland's Summit Building, said that building owners will maintain safe elevators out of enlightened self-interest.

"I really don't think any more restrictions or regulations should be required," Bizilo said.

But Martin remains concerned that, while many buildings maintain their elevators properly, some less conscientious elevator owners may neglect safety while operating under what amounts to an elevator safety "honor system."

Sihanouk visits Cambodia

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) — Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk, head of a new rebel coalition fighting the Vietnamese in Cambodia, today visited a part of Cambodia controlled by his communist Khmer Rouge guerrilla allies, Thai army officers said.

It was the second time in two days Sihanouk slipped into his homeland since he fled when Vietnam invaded in late 1978.

The Khmer Rouge is part of the coalition formed June 22 with Sihanouk's neutral faction and a non-communist group called the Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Medicine not always indicated for elderly with hypertension

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has what his doctor calls a mild high blood pressure, but the doctor hasn't given him anything for it. My father is 73. Do you think I should take him to another doctor? — Herman, Boston, Mass.

Dear Herman: Obtaining a second opinion is always an option; if it would make you feel more comfortable, by all means do so. However, I think you should realize that your father's doctor is not alone in not prescribing medication for an elderly person with mild hypertension.

Dr. Margaret E. Sprackling, of Sherwood Hospital in Nottingham, England, suggests that treatment is not indicated in such cases. She reports that a study has shown that even when medication is succesful in reducing blood pressure, it does not lower the incidence of stroke, heart attack, or death. In addition, the treatment itself may have some adverse consequences, some of them very serious.

I should add that other physicians might very well elect to treat your father, but his doctor would certainly be supported by others in his decision not to prescribe medication.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been taking lithium for depression. My wife went to see her gynecologist recently, and he told her there's less chance that she will become pregnant while I'm being treated. We don't want to have a child now, but I'm not sure about what her doctor meant. Or did she misunderstand him? — Dave, Montreal

Dear Dave: Your wife's gynecologist was probably referring to the fact that men taking lithium have been shown to have a reduced sperm viability (or life). In one study, Dr. Robert M. Levin, of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, tested semen samples from nine men before they started taking the medication and three weeks later.

Before treatment, the patients' semen samples were normal. After the three weeks of treatment, however, sperm viability had dropped from 70 percent to about 50 percent. This change would decrease, although not eliminate, your wife's chances of becoming pregnant.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has cancer of the larynx, and the doctor says he can either undergo surgery or have radiation treatments. In your opinion, which is better? — Mrs. V.S., Orlando, Fla

Dear Mrs. S.: It is difficult to speak of "better" in relation to the treatment of laryngeal cancer. Removal of the larynx generally results in longer patient survival than does radiation therapy; on the other hand, radiation therapy permits the patient to retain natural speech.

Each patient must weigh the pros and cons and arrive at a decision based on what he or she considers best. In circumstances such as you describe, I would try to help my patients come to a decision about the appropriate form of treatment, but I could not make the decision for them.

Marine biologist believes octopus palatable, plentiful

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — It has eight tentacles, three hearts, two eyes and no bones, and Brian Hartwick likes it curried.

Hartwick, a marine biologist at Simon Fraser University, says a year-long Canadian government study has proven the Pacific octopus is both palatable and apparently plentiful enough to start a new West Coast fishery.

"There is a bait market for octopus already so I feel the best potential is developing octopus as a food fish," Hartwick said. "The Greeks, Spanish and Italians place a lot of importance on octopus, so why not Canadians?"

Hartwick's research team has established that the octopus can be harvested by traps.

The octopus belongs to the large group of shellfish called mollusks, which includes clams and oysters. But, like squid, it is a mollusk that has no outside shell.

"Octopus can be prepared in many different ways and the people working for me and the fishermen's wives in Tofino (a community on the west coast of Vancouver Island) tried out lots of experiments," Hartwick said.

Houston police force changes image with dart guns

By TOM LINDLEY
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

HOUSTON — The image-conscious Houston police department is taking aim at its trigger-happy reputation with the help of futuristic weapons.

"Houston once was the kind of town where you didn't dare say anything wrong to a police officer," said Sgt. J.H. Olszewski. "But today we are more concerned with what the public wants, which is why we probably are becoming one of the more innovative departments in looking into alternative weapons."

The Houston City Council recently approved the purchase of 10 Taser non-lethal dart guns — which stun instead of kill their targets — to supplement a Star Wars-type arsenal that already includes capture nets, leg grabbers and assorted chemical gases.

The Taser is a pistol-flashlight hybrid that is 9 inches long and weighs a pound and a half. It fires two tiny darts with nearly invisible trailing wires up to a distance of 15 feet. Once the two darts stick in skin or clothing, the weapon can be activated to transmit 50,000 volts of low amperage electricity generated by the hand-held battery. The charge instantly paralyzes a victim's muscular system "usually long enough to put on the handcuffs," said S.W.A.T. team Sgt. J.C. Linney, whose unit is the only one presently authorized to fire the Taser.

The Houston police have yet to fire the Taser in the field, but its presence already has been felt.

A suspect who threatened arresting officers surrendered peacefully after being told that the officers were carrying a Taser.

"This was a very violent individual who was supposed to have broken the arm of a Tennessee police officer," Linney said. "Once we told him that we had the Taser he said he had already been shot with it once before and didn't want to go through it again. It saved a very violent confrontation."

Approval of the Taser by the City Council came on the heels of last December's death of Eddie Lee Johnson, a knife-wielding mental patient who was shot by five police officers in a parking lot across from police headquarters.

Because of its range limitations, the Taser is generally only effective in subduing mental and drug-induced individuals who police are having difficulty communicating with.

The weapon, which has been on sale to the public since 1975 and is being used by about 100 police departments around the country, has an 80 percent accuracy rating and reportedly does not produce any harmful side effects, Olszewski said. The gun costs $350.

The Taser originally was opposed by civil groups who objected to the use of force by police offiers and the equipment they used, but newly elected Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire encouraged further testing of the Taser following Johnson's death.

Houston police department officials got a first-hand look at the Taser's capabilities in a live demonstration in April. The weapon's target lost temporary control of his appendages and "flopped like a fish out of water" after receiving the jolt of electricity.

"The company paid a guy $300 and told him to drink a six-pack of beer before he came in to get shot," Linney said. "He came in with a six-pack under his belt but walked out as sober as a judge. The Taser will really take a person down."

The addition of the Taser is the latest in a series of moves by the Houston police department designed to improve its performance and enhance its public image.

In recent years the department has opened one of the most advanced training academies in the country, expanded its research team from three persons to 26 and replaced the seniority system with the merit system for promotions and transfers.

"Our attitude now is that if you do your job well, you're going to be well thought of," Linney said.

Janeice Builta takes the oath of office Wednesday afternoon as Midland County's elections administrator. Administering the oath in the Midland County Courthouse is County Judge Bill Ahders. Mrs. Builta, former deputy voter registrar, was appointed to the $25,000-a-year post and takes over the elections duties which County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry has been performing for the past three decades. She will oversee the Nov. 2 general election.

Railway strike possibility pressuring president

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will have to decide soon whether to invoke emergency provisions of the Railway Labor Act to avert a strike scheduled for Sunday by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

A spokesman for the 40,000-member union said Wednesday the BLE will stage a nationwide strike Sunday night against more than 100 rail carriers unless Reagan acts to appoint a fact-finding board. Such a move, under the railway act, would forestall a strike for 60 days. Any walkout during that period would be illegal.

IN LOS Angeles, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president was briefed on the issues in the rail dispute and on what a strike would mean. He said Reagan will receive recommendations soon from the National Mediation Board.

Asked about the possibility of a rail strike, Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan said, "I am more optimistic than that. We have faced several strike situations since we've come to office."

Donovan said: "We have been consistent in our policy, and to date, they have all worked out using what I like to call the miracle of collective bargaining.

"And I trust that this one will, too. We monitor it daily and if it should come to an impasse, we will...cross that bridge when we come to it."

But in Cleveland, an official of the locomotive engineers' union said it would take a miracle to avoid a walkout.

"The matter now rests with the president," said V.F. Davis, director of research and education for the union.

"WE'VE GOT a process under the (railway labor) act, and we're following it," he said. "A strike would have quite an impact. The trains would stop."

Davis said "these things are not taken lightly" by his union, noting that the last time the BLE struck the rail carriers was in 1946.

A strike by the engineers would idle virtually all of the nation's freight trains, although Conrail, the federally subsidized freight carrier in the Northeast, would not be affected.

Amtrak, the National Rail Passenger Corp., also would not be directly involved.

Negotiations between the railroad engineers union and the National Railway Labor Conference, the management bargaining arm, broke down May 26 and the union refused voluntary arbitration by the mediation board, which handles labor disputes in the rail and airline industries.

Charles Hopkins, chairman of the railway labor conference, has said he thinks Reagan will intervene to head off a strike. He said a walkout "would be terribly disruptive in view of the other economic circumstances of the present time."

Hopkins said the dispute, which also involves the United Transportation Union, centers on efforts by management to eliminate work rules that "we can no longer live with...and remain competitive."

A 30-day cooling off period provided for by the rail labor law expires July 11 for the engineers union, which represents about three-fourths of the engineers who run the trains.

FOR THE United Transportation Union, which represents other train operating personnel, a cooling off period ends July 30, and that union has threatened "selective strikes" against some carriers by that date in the absence of any direct intervention by the Reagan administration.

EPA ship to monitor second PCB burning in Gulf

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency will send a research vessel to the Gulf of Mexico later this month to monitor the second ocean burnings of PCBs aboard an incinerator ship.

During the first disposal of almost 700,000 gallons of the toxic chemicals in December, the EPA relied only on on-board observers to record safety and efficiency levels, said Al Wastler, EPA marine protection chief in Washington.

"This is just to make sure that all the data and all emissions are recorded properly," he said of the decision to send the Antelope to take air, water and biological samples from the site.

Wastler said scientists are reviewing data from the December operation but have found nothing that would jeopardize plans for more burns.

The incineration probably will begin in late July and take nine days to dispose of the 750,000 gallons, he said.

"We just had some additional data come in yesterday," Wastler said Wednesday. "I haven't really gotten into this but everything so far essentially confirms our expectations."

PCBs are used as cooling agents for electrical transformers. Their manufacture was banned in 1977 after researchers discovered possible links to cancer and birth defects.

The chemicals do not break down easily and cannot be disposed of at landfills. The EPA considers ocean incineration safer than burnings on land and has designated one disposal site in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Vulcanus, equipped with German-built incinerators, is docked at Mobile, Ala., and has been loading its cargo since June. Wastler said the EPA is waiting to study final results of the first burn before given the ship permission to head to a disposal site 177 miles east of here.

Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Oakbrook, Ill., owns the Singapore-registered ship, which is managed by a Dutch company. The ship's owner has applied for permits to burn DDT, Silvex and a mixture of organic compounds in separate operations.

Some local officials and residents are upset that they did not know about the planned PCB burnings until after the official comment period ended.

The EPA refused to hold a formal hearing once the PCB permit had been approved but conducted an informal meeting in May here.

"What worries us is that they're going to burn it again and they're refusing to give us any information from the first time," said Ted Campagnolo, Cameron County assistant district attorney.

Legislator says Clements passes blame on tax issue

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Democratic House member says Republican Gov. Bill Clements is "trying to pass the blame" to the Texas Employment Commission for a possible huge increase in employer taxes.

Clements, meanwhile, noted that the Legislature was in special session in May and might have acted to "avert an exorbitant increase" if the commission had prepared recommendations.

Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-La Marque, said his office had issued a report in January predicting a 2,000 percent tax increase "and the governor ignored it."

"Clements was aware the Unemployment Compensation Fund was in trouble and he did nothing," Criss said in a statement. "Now employers face a 2,000 percent increase and the governor is trying to pass the blame on to someone else."

"Clements was forewarned; he ignored the problem until it became a crisis. He did not include this issue in the special session and now he is trying to pass the blame to the commission," added Criss, vice chairman of the Employment Practices Committee.

The governor said in a statement he would do "everything within my power to prevent an unconscionable increase" in the tax for more than 280,000 Texas employers.

The governor said he was "disappointed" that employment commissioners Ken Clapp and Nolan Ward had failed to recommend changes in the existing employer tax system.

Clements said he had asked his staff to study alternatives to a tax increase.

Although Texas employers pay the lowest payroll taxes in the nation, the Employment Commission said last month if layoffs continue, employers who now pay $6 per employee for unemployment insurance could pay up to $114 per employee on Oct. 1, when the new rate goes into effect.

Former VA deputy says leader inept

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The former No. 2 man in the Veterans Administration says veterans are suffering because administrator Robert Nimmo is inept and insensitive and should be replaced.

Allen Clark Jr., a former Green Beret captain who lost part of both his legs after he was wounded by mortar fire in Vietnam in 1967, quit as VA deputy administrator a year ago after only two weeks on the job.

He said in a telegram to Reagan Wednesday the only reason he had remained silent about Nimmo was that he did not want to cause Reagan "undue harm."

Clark's telegram, which he read at a Wednesday news conference, said he believed Nimmo "could change and be an enlightened and caring leader after he got his feet on the ground. It is obvious he cannot be that type of leader.

Group optimistic about raising drinking age

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A task force appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to study traffic safety has taken the first step in an effort to raise the legal drinking age in Texas from 19 to 21.

A task force subcommittee, led by Austin Police Chief Frank Dyson, on Wednesday recommended the increased drinking age as part of an anti-drunk driving package.

Jim Adams, Department of Public Safety director and task force chairman, has said the panel would ask Clements to lobby the 1983 Legislature to raise the drinking age, which was hiked to 19 from 18 last year.

Adams told the task force he has received many letters concerning the increased drinking age and his backing for a ban on drinking alcoholic beverages while driving.

"It almost looks like some of us think it's written in the Texas Constitution you should be able to drive with a beer can in your hand," said Adams.

"It's dumb to drive while drinking and it should be against the law," he said.

Vernon With, regional alcohol specialist for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, told the task force that raising the driving age and banning drinking while driving would be a "major advance" toward curtailing driving while intoxicated in Texas.

Dyson's subcommittee also called for revamped penalties for driving while intoxicated. Many officials are concerned that current laws make it difficult to get a first conviction, and therefore more difficult to get subsequent convictions which carry stiffer penalties.

Under the subcommittee recommendation, first offense DWI would be punishable by a $200 to $2,000 fine, two days to two years in prison and up to one-year suspension of drivers license. The suspension could be waived in favor of mandatory completion of an alcohol education course.

Currently, first-offense DWI can bring a jail sentence of three days to two years in jail and a fine of $50 to $500. License suspension can be avoided by completion of an alcohol education course.

The subcommittee recommended a fine of $300 to $2,000, 15 days to two years in jail and drivers license suspension of 90 days to one year for second-offense DWI. Probation could only be granted after a defendant served at least 15 days in jail.

Subsequent DWI offenses now are felonies punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine of $100 to $5,000.

"This is so there be no total escape of jail time on a second offense," said Dyson.

Third offenses would be third-degree felonies punishable by 18-month drivers license suspension and mandatory jail time of at least 60 days.

Dyson's subcommittee also recommended a ban on deferred adjudication for DWI and a 90-day license suspension for drivers who refuse to take intoxication tests.

Patrick McGoohan may face drunk driving, other charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Patrick McGoohan faces court action on charges of drunken driving, driving with a suspended license and driving without a license.

Patrick McGoohan

McGoohan was stopped by police on July 1 and charges were filed Wednesday, said Assistant City Attorney Schuyler Sprowles. An arraignment in West Los Angeles Municipal Court was scheduled for today.

Sprowles said McGoohan was stopped in the late afternoon by police who said he was driving erratically on the Pacific Coast Highway. Tests showed McGoohan's blood alcohol level was 0.36 percent, more than three times the legal limit of 0.10, Sprowles said.

The attorney said McGoohan's driver's license previously had been suspended until 1985 folllowing an accident, but that he knew nothing about the circumstances.

The maximum penalty on each of the new charges is six months in jail and a $500 fine.

McGoohan, 54, starred in two British-made TV series, "Secret Agent" and "The Prisoner," and in two movies, "Silver Streak" and "Ice Station Zebra."

SPOLETO, Italy (AP) — Dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov is returning to the stage following a five-month absence caused by damage to cartilage in his right knee

Baryshnikov

Baryshnikov, artistic director of the American Ballet Theater, will join Susan Jaffe today to perform "Other Dances," a 10-minute work created by Jerome Robbins in 1976 for Baryshnikov and Natalia Makarova.

The dance will be part of the Silver Jubilee edition of Giancarlo Menotti's Spoleto Festival of Two Worlds.

At a news conference Wednesday, Baryshnikov said he felt ready for his return, but added, "Who knows? It may turn out to be a disaster...When you are away, there is this psychological apprrehension. But I feel good, and not about to set a date for my last performance."

After Spoleto, the company will perform in Philadelphia in August and in Paris for two weeks in October. An American tour that includes Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco is set for November.

LOCKPORT, N.Y. (AP) — Kim Alexis, the fashion model billed as the "Face of the '80s," got a warm welcome home by friends and neighbors who remembered her as a high school swimmer and musician who was going to be a pharmacist.

More than 100 people turned out for a Wednesday reception at which she was given the key to the city.

Miss Alexis, 21, entered modeling school at the suggestion of the photographer who took her graduation photos, and has appeared more than 100 times on the covers of magazines like Cosmopolitan, Vogue, Bazaar and Glamour.

Last March, a cosmetics company dubbed her "The Face of the '80s."

"I never thought I was all that beautiful," she said. "I didn't know I had the look people wanted. I just never imagined all this could happen."

After graduating from high school Miss Alexis went to New York City on July 17, 1978, under a $500-a-week contract. Two days later, she was in Rome, where she made the cover of Harper's Bazaar Italia and several other international fashion magazines.

In 1980, she appeared 75 times on magazine covers around the world.

Ex-Braniff stews may take (it) off for Playboy

DALLAS (AP) — Some flight attendants who served "coffee, tea or milk" for Braniff International will serve up "cheesecake" on the pages of Playboy magazine.

More than 75 women have responded to the magazine's offer of $500 for posing nude in a feature titled "The Girls of Braniff," said Playboy photographer David Mecey, who is interviewing candidates in a sixth-floor hotel suite in Dallas.

"All we want to do is give the flying male public one last look — a fond farewell," Mecey said. "I guarantee we are not trying to exploit anyone."

But not everyone is so sure.

Jean Jordan, president of Braniff's Association of Flight Attendants, said she was "greatly disgusted" when she heard about Playboy's offer to flight attendants laid off when the airline shut down operations in May.

"I think they are trying to take advantage of people who are down and out," Ms. Jordan said.

Many of the Playboy hopefuls are still unemployed after the airline grounded its flights and filed for protection in federal bankruptcy court in Fort Worth.

"It's an opportunity," said one woman as Mecey tried to persuade her that taking off her clothes for Playboy would enhance her career.

"They are trying to help us, not hurt us. We need the attention to help us get work," said the former Braniff employee, who asked not to be identified.

Playboy touched off a Texas-sized controversy earlier when it put together a pictorial on "The Girls of the Southwest Conference."

And this is not the first run-in between Playboy and Braniff. Two years ago, when the magazine was compiling photos for a feature on flight attendants of all major airlines, then-Braniff President Harding Lawrence threatened to fire any Braniff employee baring flesh for Playboy.

One Braniff flight attendant posed with her clothes on.

"She is coming back and will be in the pictorial nude," said Mecey with a smile.

Mecey said 12 former flight attendants for the nation's eighth largest airline will be selected for the feature, which will cost the magazine $50,000 to $75,000 to prepare.

Midland tops in pecans

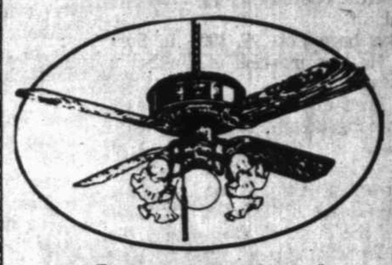

Midland County scored a dual win in Austin this week when Felecia Adams won the Texas State Pecan Show queen title and Cherokee pecans grown by C.A. Gray of Midland were judged the state's top pecan.

"I'm thrilled to death," Marge Shaw, secretary-treasurer of the Midland County Pecan Growers Association, said of the statewide titles.

Ms. Adams was sponsored in the state show by Foy Boyd Associates Inc. and Andy's Lumber Co. She was crowned the Midland County Pecan Festival queen last December.

Oil drop concerns Clements

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Declining oil production means by the end of the decade Texas must find ways to replace about a quarter of the state's revenue currently generated by taxes on black gold, Gov. Bill Clements says.

Clements said Wednesday that he would propose new taxation methods at the next legislative session to replace money the state eventually will lose because of declining oil production.

"You'll see us try to get into a user tax situation for paying for highways and things like that," he said.

A study recently completed by the Texas Research League says "there will be no problem whatsoever until after 1990," Clements said in a news conference here.

Then, he said, the state will begin to lose revenue it usually gets from oil production, which already is on the decline.

Clements said that although there have been declines in production recently because of the so-called oil glut, higher oil prices actually have resulted in higher tax collections.

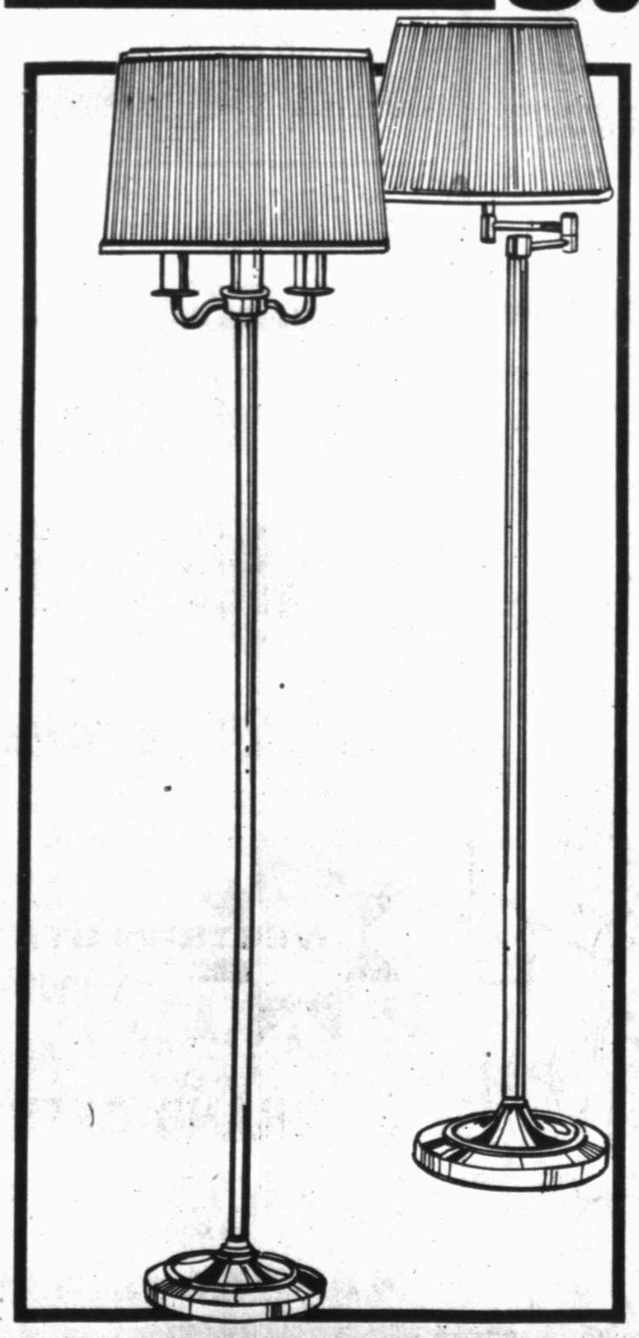

When asked what he planned to do about the anticipated decline in revenues, Clements said, "I only plan to be governor for another four years." But he added that the legislative action would be upcoming as part of his "Texas 2000" plan for the future.

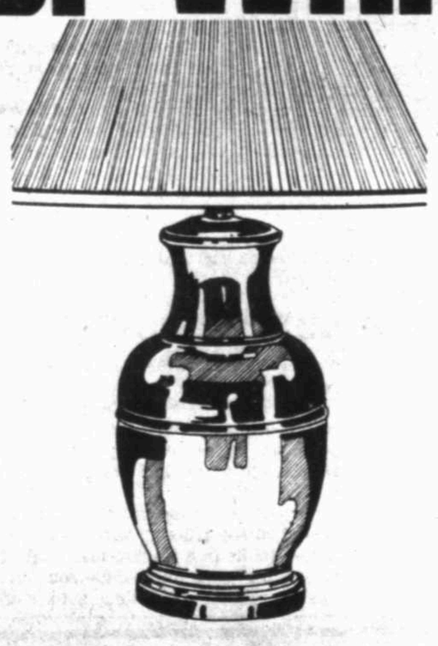

The governor said that despite the declining production, Texas' oil-based economy is "the strongest state economy of any state in the nation."

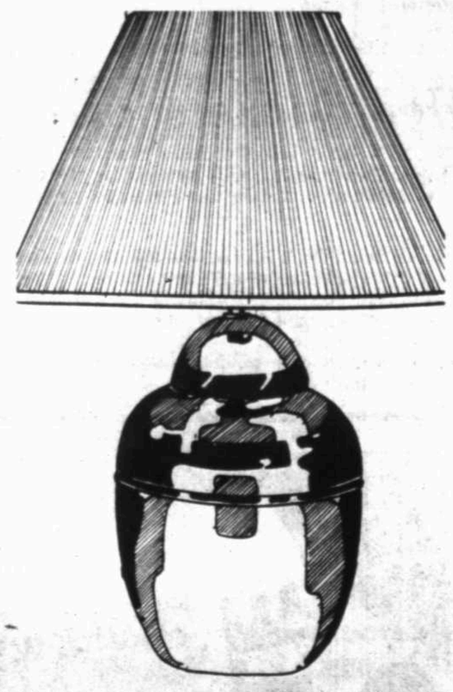

He said there are "soft spots" in the state economy, such as the High Plains, where farmers are suffering from bad weather and high interest rates.

He said he has encouraged Secretary of Agriculture John Block to pursue a task force study of the farmers' problems recently requested by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Reagan resorts to 'executive privilege'

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shades of Jimmy Carter's "trust me" and Richard Nixon's "executive privilege" showed up at President Reagan's news conference last week.

The president said he had told the American public all that he cared to tell about Alexander M. Haig Jr.'s resignation as secretary of state and there was no useful purpose in further discussion of the matter.

An Analysis

That's not exactly what he said five days earlier when he told reporters at the White House, and a national television audience, that Haig was quitting. He avoided answering questions then by leaving the impression from the outset that he would deal with them at a news conference.

"Ladies and gentlemen, let me say first of all, I'm going to make an announcement — very brief. There will be no — I will take no questions on it. I understand that a press conference is scheduled next week," the president said.

Then, on the following Sunday, when questions were called out to him as he returned from a weekend at Camp David, Md., he had only one answer: "Wednesday."

But when the news conference came around on Wednesday, the president — who has never been too shy to tell reporters that he won't discuss a certain subject because of its diplomatic sensitivity — was less than willing to shed any light on why the secretary decided to call it quits. He didn't mention delicate negotiations. He just said he wouldn't talk about Haig.

In fact, in the days preceding the news conference his aides had been telling reporters that Reagan hoped to avoid any lengthy discussion of the subject because he'd rather look ahead and not back. In many cases, they, too, ducked discussion of the subject, saying they just didn't want to talk about it.

Reagan, it seems, was taking a page from the books of Carter and Nixon.

Carter built a successful presidential campaign on the theme of asking the American people to trust him to do the right thing. Nixon, seeking to avoid answering questions, created a fine art of the "executive privilege" claim. Neither he nor his top aides, he claimed, could be required to answer questions because no one had the authority to invade the privacy of the presidency. The Supreme Court ruled otherwise.

When the questions about Haig were addressed to the president last week, Reagan said: "I made a statement that I would have no further comments on that or take no questions on it."

When pressed by a reporter, who asked, "Don't you think that the American people deserve to know more of the reasons that led to the departure of Secretary Haig?" the president made it clear that he did not think they did.

"If I thought that there was something involved in this that the American people needed to know, with regard to their own welfare, then I would be frank with the American people and tell them."

Question: "Then you think that the entire explanation has been given as far as is necessary?"

Reagan: "Yes, I don't think there's anything that in any way would benefit the people to know or that will in any way affect their good judgment."

Olympic goats to be sterilized

SEATTLE (AP) — Mountain goats wandering on the snow-capped peaks of the Olympic Peninsula face chemical or surgical sterilization to curb their population in what a researcher says may become a necessity for worldwide wildlife management.

The animals, introduced to northwest Washington in 1925, have been protected from hunters since the area became Olympic National Park in 1938. The park's 700 goats now compete with deer, elk, marmots and other native wildlife for forage, severely damaging plant growth in some areas, said Don Jackson, assistant park superintendent.

Dr. Jim Foster, a veterinarian and curator of research at Seattle's Woodland Park Zoo, said a dozen goats will be caught for an experimental program later this month. Some of the goats will undergo tubal ligation — also used in humans — and others will be treated with implants or hormone injections to make them temporarily sterile.

Such fertility control measures would be especially beneficial in areas like Africa, where wildlife is plentiful but human needs for development and agriculture may take precedence, Foster said.

"Unfortunately, that is the way it has become," he said. "The smaller our Earth becomes as a result of population expansion and resource needs, the more we are going to have to be involved in management of wildlife species."

The most promising procedure for the goats is an implant, where synthetic progesterone is implanted in silicone under the skin of a female and absorbed over four years to prevent the animal from conceiving, Foster said. The simplest is a hormone injection, but it lasts only six months, he said.

The implant procedure is used in zoos to control pregnancy in some animals. Foster said mountain goats normally begin reproducing after age 3 and live to about 12, so the implants would render the goats infertile for about half their reproductive lives, while a tubal ligation would leave them completely sterile.

"I think we're going to gain a lot of information regarding potential for wildlife controls," said Foster, who will be assisted by Dr. Stephen Seager, reproductive physiologist with the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Rangers at the 908,000-acre park are already in the second year of efforts to cut the herd. About 60 goats a year are being trapped with nets, then transplanted to areas of Washington, Utah and Idaho where mountain goats are native.

The National Park Service has indicated interest in ridding the park entirely of its goats, since they are not native to the area.

Study to probe link between mortality, toxic waste

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — An "excessively high" death rate from cancer has been found among residents of three New Jersey counties who live near toxic waste dumps, according to a study to be followed up nationally by the American Cancer Society.

The continuing study, released Wednesday, showed mortality rates for three types of cancer among white males living near toxic waste dumps in Hudson, Middlesex and southeast Union counties were 25 percent to 50 percent above the national average, said Dr. Donald B. Louria of the preventive medicine and community health department at the University of Medicine and Dentisty of New Jersey.

"The heavy concentration of toxic wastes virtually overlaps the areas of excessive mortality," Louria said.

The American Cancer Society is conducting a nationwide study to further investigate such links.

The society's Cancer Prevention Study II, to begin Sept. 1, will survey 1 million American families over six years to investigate links between cancer, environment and life style.

The society's Study I, conducted in 1966, linked cigarette smoking to cancer.

Louria said the New Jersey study also found that among residents over age 16 employed in some aspect of the toxic waste industry, mortality rates between 1968 and 1977 from bladder cancer were double the national rate in Salem County and 50 percent above the national rate in Cumberland County.

The university study has been updating a National Cancer Institute study in 1972 which found that all of New Jersey was a cancer "hot spot," said Louria.

"I think somehow people don't realize that if you want to face the major problem for this country over the next 20 years, it's the disposal of hazardous wastes," said Louria.

Death rates among white males in the three counties from esophagus cancer were 25 percent above the national average. The rates were 50 percent higher for stomach cancer and more than 35 percent higher for colon-rectal cancer.

"There is a very interesting association between toxic waste sites and the mortality rates," Louria said. "This does not suggest a cause of the high mortality rates, but a correlation between the presence of the toxic dump sites and cancer mortality.

"That corridor (where a higher rate of cancer deaths occur) has a high rate of industrialization, high population density and an inordinate number of toxic dumps," he said.

Louria said that industrialization and population density have been viewed as contributing factors to cancer, but the university's study adds toxic waste sites to potential factors.

The six-year study by the American Cancer Society, to cost $12 million, will study the relationship of life styles, occupations, neighborhoods and diet to cancer, said Kenneth Steffan of the society's New Jersey division.

High-fiber diet may decrease cholesterol absorption

BOSTON (AP) — Eating food that's high in fiber may help people fight cholesterol, one of the most common sources of heart disease, a study says.

Fiber makes food pass more quickly through the small intestine, and the new research says this significantly reduces the amount of cholesterol the body absorbs from food.

The study, conducted in Italy, used medicine rather than fiber to speed up the food's movement, but the researchers theorize that fiber may have a similar effect in reducing the body's absorption of cholesterol.

They said their report suggests that "manipulation of small bowel transit time might be useful in limiting dietary cholesterol absorption and, in turn, overaccumulation of cholesterol in body tissues."

Just how much of the body's cholesterol can be controlled by diet is unknown. Some cholesterol gets into the body from food, but most of it is manufactured by the liver.

Regardless of where it comes from, however, cholesterol is a major contributor to hardening of the arteries and heart disease.

Cholesterol is a fat that builds up on artery walls. This slows the flow of blood, and when the fat clogs the blood vessels that nourish the heart, the result can be a heart attack.

The latest study was directed by Dr. Maurizio Ponz de Leon at the University of Modena in Italy. It was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

In their study of 33 people, the doctors speeded the flow of food through the small intestines by giving people a medicine called metoclopramide. The drug cut the time required for food to pass through the intestine by about 40 percent. When the flow of the food was speeded this way, people absorbed between 30 percent and 50 percent less cholesterol into their bloodstreams.

"The results of this study suggest that the rate of transit through the small bowel could be one of the physiologic factors that regulate the extent of cholesterol absorption in human beings," the doctors wrote.

Coffee drinkers ignore cancer warning, says survey

BOSTON (AP) — Many coffee drinkers heard about a medical study that links their morning brew with cancer of the pancreas, but a survey says their reaction was generally the same: They ignored it.

The study, made public in March 1981, said people who drink a cup or two of coffee a day are nearly twice as likely as non-drinkers to develop this form of cancer. The Harvard researchers who did the work cautioned that their discovery should be verified by other studies.

The report received wide publicity, and four months later, researchers from the University of New Mexico Medical Center conducted a telephone survey to find out what effect it had on people's habits.

They interviewed 566 people and found that 70 percent were coffee drinkers. Only one person contacted had specifically cut down on coffee consumption because of the article's findings, although 58 percent of the people said they knew about the coffee study.

"Regardless of the intent of the authors and media, the association of coffee drinking with cancer of the pancreas was presented to the public in a fashion that might have affected behavior," the researchers noted. "The data from our survey clearly indicated that this information had little long-term effect."

Controversy over Ernest Lacy's death continues

AP Laserphoto

Myrtle Lacy, mother of Ernest Lacy, leaves a Milwaukee, Wisc., courtroom on April 26, 1982, after a judge dismissed the last charges against members of the police department in connection with the death of her son. Lacy, 22, died in police custody in July 1981, after being arrested for a rape he did not commit.

By DAN DAY

MILWAUKEE (AP) — One year ago Friday, Ernest Lacy, a young black man mistakenly suspected of rape, died in a police van, and since then this city has been unable to shake the controversy surrounding his death.

Patrolmen James Dekker, Thomas Eliopul and George Kalt were cruising an area west of downtown on July 9, when police radio broadcast a description of a man wanted for a rape in the neighborhood.

The 22-year-old Lacy was at the corner of 23rd Street and Wisconsin Avenue when the tactical squad officers spotted him. He matched the description, and they stopped to question him.

But a struggle developed and the officers wrestled him to the ground. Lacy died en route to a hospital, and a few hours later the rape victim implicated someone else.

The three white officers were charged with homicide by reckless conduct, but the charges were dropped. Two of the men were then charged with misconduct in office, but those charges were also dismissed.

The policemen have denied all accusations, but a brutality complaint filed with the Fire and Police Commission by Lacy's mother five days after he died is pending. The commission, which suspended the officers with pay last summer, will hear oral arguments on the case July 19.

In the past year, a racially mixed group of citizens and civic leaders called the Coalition for Justice for Ernie Lacy has held rallies, protest marches, a department store boycott and a sit-in at the district attorney's office to press for action against Dekker, Eliopul and Kalt.

The group plans to march to police headquarters Friday to mark the anniversary of Lacy's death. Later that night, the group will hold a vigil on the corner where Lacy was arrested.

"It's a year later," said Howard Fuller, one of the Coalition leaders. "The cops are still 'suspended with pay.' We think that it is critical that we continue to press that something be done. The reason we're out here is to say to Milwaukee and to the nation that nothing's been done."

Autopsies established how Lacy died — a lack of oxygen to the brain — but not why. An inquest jury heard testimony that the police knelt on Lacy's back, and the panel then ruled that Lacy died because continued pressure to his neck cut off his oxygen.

Myrtle Lacy has maintained from the day her son died that he would not have provoked a fight with police officers.

"That was not his character at all," she said in describing the third of her seven children. "He was a kind and considerate individual."

"Ernie's death was a terrible tragedy and even now it's painful to think about," she said. "My 8-year-old daughter for a long time was afraid to sleep alone. To see a police officer she'd get all frightened."

Mrs. Lacy said the Coalition's support has helped her deal with the heartache.

"It certainly has shown our family that there are people who care," she said. "The Coalition is made up of people of all different nationalities. A lot of people would like to think of this as a black-white thing. I think that it is a human issue."

Mrs. Lacy said she sympathized with the families of the officers involved.

Mobil Corp. President sues Washington Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Washington Post attorney says witnesses at a libel trial will confirm the newspaper's stories that the president of Mobil Corp. set up his son in a shipping business to help make sure Mobil would continue carrying Saudi Arabian oil.

In an opening statement in U.S. District Court, Irving Younger asked a jury to reject a $50 million libel suit filed by Mobil President William P. Tavoulareas and his son, Peter, because the 1979 news articles in the Post "were as true as a conscientious reporter could make them."

Before Younger spoke, the lawyer for the Tavoulareas, John Walsh, told the jurors that the Post was more interested in a front-page story than the truth.

The Post stories, written in November and December 1979, said that the elder Tavoulareas used Mobil assets to establish the London-based Atlas Maritime Co., and that he arranged for Peter to be an owner of the shipping firm.

The firm, the Post said, operated Mobil-owned ships under exclusive no-bid contracts worth millions of dollars.

The Post said that Atlas was formed in 1974 to protect Mobil from a then-proposed law in Saudi Arabia that would only permit that country's oil to be carried in Saudi vessels.

The Post said a Saudi-based company was established to lease Mobil's ships, and those vessels were in turn were leased to Atlas. Mobil's policy was to carry oil only in its own vessels.

The news stories said that before his involvement in Atlas, Peter Tavoulareas was a 24-year-old clerk learning the shipping business at a salary of $14,000 a year.

Younger told the six-member jury that the stories were not only true but "if anything, they are understated."

He asked the jury rhetorically how Peter got "to the top of the heap."

"That man," he said, pointing to the elder Tavoulareas, "took his elder son and in one gesture put him at the top."

Walsh, however, said the oil company executive was victimized by aides to Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., who wanted to obtain publicity for the congressman; and by Post editor Robert Woodward, who directed the investigation.

Dingell headed a subcommittee that investigated William Tavoulareas' role in Atlas.

Woodward, who heads the Post's investigative team, is a defendant, along with executive editor Benjamin Bradlee; the writer of the articles, Patrick Tyler; and reporter Sandy Golden, who helped Tyler with the stories but was not a Post employee.

Walsh said the elder Tavoulareas "did not obtain his son's position" in Atlas and accused the Post of ignoring documents that showed the allegation was untrue.

"What happened here was reckless and irresponsible ... a reckless indifference to the truth," Walsh said.

History may repeat itself after 24 years

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The date was July 15, 1958. Dwight D. Eisenhower was President and the United States was moving out of the Korean war era determined to test the Soviet Union's resolve and to check the spread of communism.

Here in Lebanon, a pro-Western regime was in danger of falling and a fiery Moslem rebel named Saeb Salaam was mustering his forces.

At 3:04 p.m. on that day 24 years ago, 3,200 U.S. Marines landed on Beirut's Ouzai Beach to put the Eisenhower Doctrine into practice. It took the leathernecks just 40 minutes to secure their first objective — the international airport.

As U.S. Navy jets screamed overhead, girls in bikinis and vendors selling ice cream on the corniche cheered the Marines' uncontested advance — uncontested because the man they were after, Saeb Salaam, had told his people to put down their arms "until we see how this all turns out."

Today, as history prepares to repeat itself and President Reagan offers to send a force of 1,000 Marines to Beirut, the 77-year-old Salaam chuckles at the irony of his reversed role in negotiating for a U.S. military presence here to save Beirut from the destruction of an Israeli attack.

"IT'S FUNNY," he says, sitting in the same three-story house on which the battleship Saratoga had its guns trained 24 years ago. "But I was the enemy then. They thought if they finished me, there would be no more problem in Lebanon.

"Ten years after the invasion, in 1968, I was at the United Nations and five of your Marines who had been in Lebanon called me. They were all colonels by then. I invited them over for breakfast and said, 'Now, are you glad you didn't finish me off.'"

In sending in the Marines at the request of Lebanese President Camille Chamoun, Eisenhower explained in a television address: "I believe that the presence of the U.S. forces now being sent to Lebanon will have a stabilizing effect which will preserve the independence and integrity of Lebanon."

On the day after the landing, the Marines who eventually built up a force of 14,000 men and 75 tanks here, moved into downtown Beirut in three columns proceeded by Lebanese policemen in jeeps and on motorcycles. For the next three months the leathernecks patrolled the capital's streets, virtually without incident.

Few Marines then seemed to know why they were in Lebanon. One corporal, David Landell of New Bedford, Mass., was quoted by Newsweek as saying, "I guess the rebels cause trouble here."

Ostensibly, Eisenhower had dispatched the Marines because the pro-Western ruler of Iraq, King Faisal II, had just been overthrown and Washington feared a chain reaction throughout the Middle East. British troops were sent to Jordan at the same day the Americans waded ashore on Ouzai Beach.

IF U.S. troops once again enter Beirut, they will find a far more dangerous and complex situation than existed in 1958, when the rebels arsenal consisted only of rifles and machine guns. Today the Palestinians own everything from rocket launchers to anti-aircraft pieces, and the streets of Beirut are roamed by what surely must be the world's largest collection of free-lance gunmen.

The sectarian fragmentation of Lebanon continues unchecked. U.S. Marines might offer a temporary solution to this problem, but the long-term stability of Lebanon depends largely on whether its inadequate leadership ever decides to set aside sectarian goals in favor of national unity.

Any request for U.S. troops would have to be made formally by President Elias Sarkis, whose six-year term in office expires in September. Salaam says that presents no problems, because everyone, even the Palestine Liberation Organization, now agrees that a temporary U.S. peace-keeping force is desirable.

Salaam, a wealthy businessman who founded Middle East Airlines and who has been the prime minister five times, has emerged as a key negotiator between the Palestinians and U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib. Habib is negotiating the fate of Lebanon from the U.S. Ambassador's residence, just as Under Secretary Murphy negotiated from the ambassador's residence more than two decades ago.

The balding, white-haired Salaam has been one of the few men here to have risen to the demands of Lebanon's crisis, setting aside personal ambitions and religious loyalities to speak for a single national cause: the salvation of his country.

Behind his desk in a den lined with floor-to-ceiling bookcases is a photograph of his father, who was a parliamentarian in Turkey's old Ottoman Empire. On the desk is a copy of Paul E. Erdman's book, "The Last Days of America," and next to it is a sign that says, "It's not easy to be an eagle when you're you're surrounded by turkeys."

Brezhnev warns U.S. not to send troops, Tass says

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev today warned President Reagan against sending American troops to Lebanon, the official Tass news agency said.

Tass said Brezhnev sent a message to Reagan saying that if U.S. Marines were dispatched to Beirut "the Soviet Union would build its policy with due consideration of this fact."

The Tass report did not specify what steps the Soviets were prepared to take in response to the possible contribution of U.S. combat troops to a multinational peace-keeping force for Lebanon.

Brezhnev called on Reagan "to do everything depending on the United States to end the bloodshed in Lebanon, to halt the barbaric extermination by the Israeli troops of Lebanese and Palestinians — women, children and old men," Tass said.

According to the report, Brezhnev also expressed the hope that "at this critical moment...a sense of responsiblity and common sense would prevail over opportunistic calculations.

"Not a single honest person on earth can remain indifferent to the calls of those who are perishing in Lebanon at the hands of the Israeli invaders," Tass quoted Brezhnev as saying.

Asked about the report, a U.S. Embassy spokesman, who declined to be identified, said, "We don't comment on private exchanges between our leaders and we are disappointed that Tass did so."

Tass charged in an unsigned commentary Wednesday night that the plan to send about 1,000 U.S. Marines to Lebanon was "dangerous" and said it would "lead to a further sharp aggravation of the explosive situation in the Middle East.

"Attempts are being made to strenghten the aggressor and in the final analysis to supplement the Israeli occupation with U.S. occupation," Tass said in the commentary.

The Soviet Union has repeatedly called on Israel to withdraw its troops from Lebanon and has said its interests were directly threatened because of the area's proximity to the Soviet Union.

Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 in a bid to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization's guerrilla armies. Israeli troops and their rightist Lebanese Christian allies now ring the last guerrilla stronghold in predominantly Moslem west Beirut. Israel has threatened to attack the guerrilla enclave unless the PLO withdraws all its fighters from Lebanon.

The Brezhnev message, as quoted by Tass, urged the U.S. government "and its emissary in the Middle East," presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, against furnishing a "screen for the continuing Israeli aggression and the extermination of the Arab people of Palestine."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko met earlier this week in Moscow with head of the political department of the PLO, Farouk Kaddoumi, and the foreign ministers of Morocco and Kuwait sent by the Arab League.

During the meeting, Gromyko offered assurances that Moscow would use "its weight and influence" to get Israeli troops out of Lebanon.

However, there was nothing in the Tass report of the meeting to suggest that the Soviets were planning to step up their role in the region, and a Moscow-based Western diplomat said Tuesday, "their basic attitude is that the Arabs have to work it out themselves." He said he based his opinions on conversations he had with Soviet officials.

The Soviets complained earlier this week that Israeli artillery shells heavily damaged the Soviet Embassy complex in west Beirut, where more than 80 Soviet diplomats are stationed. A Tass report today said one person was wounded in the shelling Tuesday night.

Safeguards for Marines must be set, Weinberger says

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Risks to U.S. troops who might be sent to war-torn Lebanon as peacekeepers would be lessened if the mission is limited in time, said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

He also has stressed that a key safeguard would be agreement by all parties associated with the conflict in the Beirut-area that they not fire on American military.

Participation of other nations in a temporary peacekeeping force also would help, he said.

Weinberger has been saying that any American participation in a peacekeeping effort aimed at removing the Palestine Liberation Organization from Beirut would be risky, but he said Wednesday he is satisfied the risks could be minimized with adequate safeguards.

Weinberger said many pieces of the plan must be in place before President Reagan makes a final decision to commit U.S. forces.

For example, a destination must be located for the thousands of PLO fighters caught in Beirut by Israeli forces, he said.

The method for transporting them and disposal of their weapons must be resolved, he added.

So far, PLO leaders have publicly denounced Reagan's offer of U.S. troops although they apparently are indicating they would consider negotiating such an involvement.

Other U.S. military officers, who did not want to be identified, said they are not as confident as Weinberger that all parties in the Lebanon fighting can be counted on to keep their fighting men in check.

They worried that PLO leadership might not be able to control fighters with strong anti-American feelings stemming from their perception of U.S. support of Israel.

Meanwhile, a Navy amphibious group carrying about 1,800 Marines came together Wednesday about 150 miles off the coast of Lebanon in position to land troops in the country if Reagan orders it.

Three landing ships and some of the Marines were in the southern Italian port of Taranto on liberty when they were ordered Sunday to sail back to the position off Lebanon. They were joined by the helicopter assault ship Guam and the amphibious ship Nashville.

The Guam and other ships of the force have been shadowed by Soviet warships and intelligence-gathering vessels, said administration sources who did not want to be named. However, they added that such occurrences are common in the Mediterranean.

Weinberger had said the Israelis had given U.S. special envoy Philip Habib had until Sunday to negotiate a PLO withdrawal from Beirut, but his statement was later qualified by Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto who said that "time is of the essence, but there is no firm deadline."

Israeli embassy sources said that U.S. Ambassador Sam Lewis had spoken to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who assured him there are no deadlines.

Rail strike continues in Great Brtiain

LONDON (AP) — Showing traditional stiff-upper-lip resolve, most British commuters are getting to and from work despite a five-day-old national rail strike that has cut service to less than 12 percent of normal.

Traffic began building on approach roads into London early today in a repeat of the seven mile jams that formed Wednesday, and again there was standing room only on subways, buses and those trains that were running.

Many drivers have become experts in using the maze of side streets in and around the capital to dodge the worst traffic jams.

Mortality varies with place

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists say death rates due to venereal diseases and alcoholism are higher than average in Western states, while deaths from multiple sclerosis are more prominent in the North than the South.

Scientists have mapped death rates attributed to many diseases and say these area-by-area variations may offer important clues to the causes of these problems and how they might be related.

For example, clusters of deaths due to occupational lung diseases such as asbestosis and black lung coincided with the location of mining and smelting operations, according to a report released earlier this week.

These above-average death rates were seen in Upper Appalachia extending into Pennsylvania, and in the Rocky Mountain states. Although the scientists said this data did not necessarily show cause and effect relationships, it did point out where those interested in these problems should concentrate their efforts.

The new "Atlas of Mortality from Selected Diseases" was compiled by National Cancer Institute scientists to complement similar volumes they published seven years ago on cancer deaths around the country.

Researchers making the atlas, composed mostly of computer-generated colored maps and charts, used death certificate data from 1965 through 1971 reported to the government.

They looked at geographical variations for 59 diseases or conditions and mapped deaths occurring in 506 so-called state economic areas in the 48 contiguous states. These areas are defined by the Census Bureau as a county or group of counties similar in economic and social characteristics.

The researchers looked at diseases possibly related to cancer, those associated with environmental exposure and those that had a significant impact on many people. Data on each was broken down by sex, race and location.

Drs. Thomas Mason, Joseph Fraumeni, Jr., Robert Hoover and William Blot noted that most of their information confirmed trends uncovered in previous studies. But they said the pictorials would help scientists visualize trends more easily.

Post office will continue to mail drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal officials have dropped a proposal to limit the mailing of prescription drugs.

Faced with a dilemma over interpreting an unclear law, the Postal Service decided to continue its current drug-mailing policies while asking Congress to clarify the situation.

The Postal Service and the Drug Enforcement Administration have rules permitting the practice of many labor unions and other associations in distributing prescription drugs to their members through the mail.

However, George C. Davis of the Postal Service Consumer Protection Division, said today that officials are concerned that the practice might not be legal under "a century-old statute that nobody really understands."

That law allows controlled substances to be mailed between producers, druggists, physicians and laboratories, but doesn't mention patients.

Allowing druggists or doctors to mail prescription drugs directly to patients "is probably in the public interest, and it certainly makes sense, but it isn't in the law," Davis said.

So, in March 1980, the Postal Service proposed a regulation to limit these mailings to conform with the law. A variety of groups and individuals opposed any such restrictions.

The economic nail

Vice President George Bush hit the nail directly on the head the other day in an interview when he pinpointed the national economy as the "only" issue before the American electorate this year.

And Bush's prediction that Republicans will definitely suffer losses in November balloting unless the economy improves between now and then probably isn't far off base, either.

The economy is stuck in the doldrums, where it has been for the past few months even despite the administration's insistence that the recovery has begun. Americans are likely to believe that only when they can see the results in their personal budgets.

While the economy currently is not wracked by the destructive rate of inflation that marked most of President Jimmy Carter's term, President Ronald Reagan's success in getting the inflation rate under control has gone unheralded for the most part. Contributing heavily to the overshadowing of the low inflation rate, estimated at 3 percent by some analysts, is the nation's unemployment figure which stood at 9.5 percent of the workforce in June and interest rates which dropped only slightly to 16 percent at New York's Citibank. Analysts in some quarters were predicting that government borrowing will increase in the third quarter of this year, pushing interest rates up again.

Reagan deserves credit for taking the necessary steps to help bring the inflation rate under control — getting a handle on federal spending and the like. But it's an irony of our political system that politicians who inherit the problems of a previous administration or administrations may suffer at the polls when their policies do not immediately reverse economic trends that have been building for years.

No one, polls have shown recently, blames President Reagan for the flatness of the economy currently. Americans simply expect too much too quickly. We're human with all the inherent frailties.

Before Americans go to the polls in Midland and a thousand other places this November they might want to keep in mind that progress on the economy while slow is, at least, progress. Let's just not forget that brave new path voters mandated in 1979. Hopefully, keeping the faith won't be too difficult.

Anyone for a freeze?

No reasonably well-informed person needs to be told that the Soviet leadership cannot be trusted to keep its word. Still, taking note of the Soviets' latest deception serves a useful purpose, particularly when that duplicity involves arms control issues.

On March 16, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev announced a unilateral freeze on the deployment of SS-20 intermediate range nuclear missiles targeted on Western Europe.

His exact words, spoken before the 17th Congress of Soviet trade unions in Moscow, were as follows:

"I can now inform you, dear comrades, that, striving to facilitate a just agreement on a major reduction of nuclear weapons by both sides in Europe ... the Soviet leadership has taken a decision to introduce, unilaterally, a moratorium ...

"We are freezing ... the armaments of this kind ... and are suspending the replacement of old missiles ... by newer SS-20 missiles."

How nice. Just the sort of grand gesture needed to turn out still more demonstrators in Western Europe demanding that NATO drop its plans to counter the 300 SS-20s already in place by accepting new American missiles next year.

Brezhnev's promise turned out to be, predictably enough, a lie. Last week, Assistant Secretary of State Richard Burt announced that the Soviets have deployed an additional 45 to 50 new SS-20 mobile missiles since mid-March.

With three nuclear warheads in the nose cone of each SS-20, that adds up to at least 135 more nuclear weapons being aimed at Western European targets just since Leonid Brezhnev proclaimed his phony freeze.

Given the fact that the Soviets routinely deploy a second missile with each SS-20 mobile launcher, the actual addition is probably closer to 270 or more new nukes targeted on the very cities where protestors are denouncing Ronald Reagan as a warmonger.

And while we are counting SS-20s, the officially accepted figure of 300 deployed before mid-March excludes the second missile carried in a canister on a tracked vehicle that accompanies each launcher. So the real SS-20 total now stands at something like 700 mobile missiles armed with 2,100 nuclear warheads.

NATO has no comparable weapons. Anyone for a freeze?

Another View:

King can do no wrong

A U.S. president should have broad immunity from lawsuits arising from official acts. But we don't think that immunity should be absolute, as a majority of the U.S. Supreme Court so ruled in a case involving former President Nixon.

Immunity is based on the notion that a president exposed to damage suits might be inhibited from taking actions apt to arouse strong feelings. In addition, political adversaries might resort to suits as harassment. But what about presidential actions that deliberately harm a specific individual, or that may be illegal? Should those acts be protected too? What about the right of every individual to seek relief from the courts?

Such issues were presented in the Nixon case that was decided 5-4 by the high court. Ernest Fitzgerald, an Air Force budget analyst, claimed that Nixon had fired him for blowing the whistle on military aircraft cost overruns. Justice Lewis Powell, writing for the majority, said that a president's unique position in the government and the greater public interest require that the chief executive be able to act without being distracted by "personal vulnerability" to damage suits.

We're more impressed by the dissent of Justice Byron White. He said that the immunity should flow rather than to the office itself in absolute fashion. White was not far fetched in accusing the majority of accepting the notion that "the king can do no wrong." Perhaps their lordly attitude is not surprising. In a case four years ago, the court extended absolute immunity to judges, even if they acted maliciously.

Admittedly, the majority in the Nixon matter noted that the absolute immunity embraces only civil suits, not criminal prosecutions, and does not extend to presidential aides. Powell also noted the court's ruling against President Harry Truman's seizure of steel mills in 1952 and the decision that forced Nixon to surrender the Watergate tapes as illustrating judicial restraint on the presidency.

Moreover, as Powell said, there are formal and informal checks on presidential action: scrutiny by Congress and the press; a president's desire for re-election; impeachment. However, as White pointedly noted, those remedies are political safety valves that "were never designed to afford relief for individual harms."

Congress has never legislated in this field. Perhaps if lawmakers made presidents liable to civil suits under certain careful circumstances, the court would uphold the laws. It's worth considering.

ART BUCHWALD

Gipper isn't even talking about 'bomb'!

The most repeated reason given for Al Haig's resignation is that he wasn't a "team player." For the Reagan administration this is a cardinal sin. But what does it really mean?

Art Buchwald

I went down into the White House locker room to talk to a member of the staff.

"I guess it won't be the same old club without Big Al," I said to him as he was bent over tying his shoe.

"We can play without him," my friend said. "Nobody is indispensable on this squad except the Gipper."

"I'm going to miss Big Al," I said. "He added a lot of life to this town. He may have had a short fuse, but to me I'll always remember him as 'The Vicar.'"

"You sportswriters never did know what was going on. Do you know when Al first came on the team, the Gipper was down here taking a shower, and Al handed him a game plan spelling out his own position?"

"I didn't know that," I admitted.

"Haig insisted on calling all the signals but no one ever understood a word he said."

"But the Gipper liked him, didn't he?"

"The Gipper likes everybody unless you wake him up when he's sleeping. But the Gipper had to do something. The team was fighting among themselves and the fans didn't know what was going on. So they blamed it on the Gipper because he's supposed to be captain of the team."

"Let me ask you the big question. Did Big Al jump, or was he pushed?"

"It was a little of both," the Reagan team player said. "We knew we had a problem on our hands early in the season when the Gipper got hurt in a game, and Big Al rushed up to the press box and announced that he was in charge. We couldn't believe it when we saw the films on TV. If we were confused, you can imagine what it did to the fans and other coaches in the league."

"Al gave us a lot to write about," I said regretfully. "The man had charisma."

"He also had a helluva temper. Every time we got in a huddle, he threatened to walk off the field if he didn't get the ball."

"Some of the sportswriters wrote the reason that Big Al was axed was that Cap Weinberger kept tripping him."

"There was no love lost between Cap and Big Al, but Haig antagonized everyone in Gipper's backfield, and pretty soon no one would block for him. They wouldn't even pick him up when he fell down."

"I noticed that. It was one of the reasons he was such good copy."

"I'll tell you what really did Big Al in. Remember when we all went over to play in the Summit Bowl at Versailles? Well, first Al kept complaining about his room. When the game started, the Gipper wanted to hit all the NATO teams hard for playing ball with the Russians. But Big Al kept electing to pass. Then he fumbled on a crucial third down play at the United Nations, and finally when Israel started running all over Lebanon, Al announced on his own he was going down to referee the game. The Gipper wouldn't let him go, so he sulked for the rest of the trip."

"But doesn't the Gipper look bad when he fires the only guy on his team who seemed to know the score?"

"Al lacked the killer instinct. He talked tough, but he was never one to hit the Kremlin head-on. Every time someone on the team suggested throwing the long bomb, Al talked the Gipper into trying to gain a few yards on the ground."

"In Al's position, he had to do that."

"You don't win the big ones if you're not willing to use the bomb," the White House man said.

"I guess Cap Weinberger will have a lot more to say about calling the plays."

"The Gipper likes Cap's style, and we're going to put all our strategy into defense."

"Which means there is more chance of using the bomb?"

"I'm not saying. We'd be crazy to give our game plan away in an election year."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U.S. determined to rescue missing POWs

WASHINGTON — Commandos are waiting to rescue their long-lost American comrades still being held prisoner in Southeast Asia. All they need is solid evidence of the missing men's whereabouts, and a go-ahead from the government.

Jack Anderson

President Reagan has promised to take whatever action is necessary to recover soldiers and airmen who are known to have survived years of captivity in Vietnam, Laos or Cambodia. Already, CIA-trained commandos have carried out one raid into Laos last year in search of American prisoners-of-war.

The CIA raiders made the foray after the Pentagon had studied refugee reports and aerial photographs. The photos showed human shadows that looked too large to be cast by Asians, and an arrangement of logs that appeared to spell out the number 52 on the ground.

At first the commandos were driven back by gunfire. But a month later, two of them managed to reach the camp and take pictures of the occupants. Unfortunately, not one was American, and there was no evidence to show that Americans had ever been held there.

Though that daring raid didn't pan out, the administration is prepared to follow up future leads. One source close to the situation told my associate Donald Goldberg: "It is a current capability. There are people capable of performing that function."

By presidential proclamation, tomorrow is National POW-MIA Recognition Day. The purpose is to remind the nation that there are still more than 2,000 American servicemen who have not been accounted for — more than seven years after the end of the Vietnam War — and that hundreds of them may still be alive.

There are some Americans who need no such reminder. They are the families of the missing men, holding their annual meeting in Washington this week. It is the 13th annual meeting the POW-MIA families have held.

What nourishes their hope after all these years is the spate of eyewitness accounts of POW sightings in recent years, mostly from refugees who fled Southeast Asia. Just since 1979, the Pentagon has received 372 such accounts. Already this year, 31 witnesses have been interviewed, three of them claiming to have seen American prisoners alive within the last several months.

The State Department takes a skeptical view of these reports, on grounds that desperate refugees will say anything they think will get them into the United States. Yet most of the refugees who provided information were already living here, and had nothing to gain by concocting a story.

The Defense Intelligence Agency is convinced that Americans are still being held prisoner in Southeast Asia. French prisoners were held in Indochina for as long as 25 years before being released.

Yet the Pentagon is reluctant to make public the information it has on the missing Americans. Adm. E.A. Burkhalter, acting DIA director, explained that if the Vietnamese discovered that we knew of an American's whereabouts, they might take steps to rid themselves of the embarrassing evidence.

PRISON BEEF: Californians doing time in the federal reformatory at El Reno, Okla., have accused Bureau of Prisons Director Norman Carlson of making them suffer so he can get a budget increase out of Congress. They also accuse him of having misstated prison population figures.

The unhappy prisoners have requested transfers to facilities closer to home because of overcrowding at El Reno. They claim Carlson has deliberately crammed the El Reno prison to justify his $394 million budget request for next year.

Carlson acknowledged to my reporter Pam Kripke that the overcrowding should make it easier to get his budget approved.

Carlson told Senate and House subcommittees that all four federal prison regions are equally overcrowded. Yet a subsequent Justice Department report lists an underpopulation rate of at least 2 percent at five West Coast prison facilities. And Carlson claimed an increase of 4,000 federal prisoners in the past year, despite Justice Department computer printouts that show an actual decrease of 1,000

ABOVE THE LAW: Many Americans who have had their disability cut off by the Social Security Administration's review program are appealing their cases to SSA administrative law judges. But they're up against a stacked deck.

Simply put, the agency considers itself above the law as determined by federal courts. An internal agency document puts it baldly: "Federal courts do not run SSA's programs ... Administrative law judges are responsible for applying the (Health and Human Services) Secretary's policies and guidelines, regardless of court decisions below the level of the Supreme Court."

Congress, courts lack accord on Amy

WASHINGTON — Amy Rowley is not, after all, entitled to some education assistance she thought Congress had mandated. But her case is educational, teaching how courts routinely serve as second-stage legislatures. Courts say what Congress has said, or meant, about particular entitlements.

George F. Will

In 1975 Congress passed the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, conditioning federal money on state compliance with certain goals and procedures to assure handicapped children "free appropriate public education." What did Congress mean?

Three Supreme Court justices think it meant that Amy, who is deaf, has a right to have a sign-language interpreter in all her classes. But six justices say that if Congress meant to mandate anything that expensive, it would have said so, unambiguously. Therefore, Congress (it may be interested to learn) did not mean what Amy, a lower court, and three Supreme Court justices say it meant.

The Court majority went excavating in the legislative history of the act, searching for Congress' intent. The majority noted that the committee report on the bill emphasized that in the early 1970s most handicapped children were totally excluded from schools or were idling away years in classrooms until they were old enough to drop out. Congress mandated "mainstreaming" — educating handicapped children with nonhandicapped "to the maximum extent appropriate." The ringing word "maximum" is muted by the word "appropriate." What, precisely, did Congress mean? Very little, precisely.

Amy's school in an affluent New York suburb sent several staff members to sign-language classes, and installed a teletype machine in the office to facilitate communication with Amy's parents, who are deaf. Amy was given special tutoring and speech therapy. But the school balked at the demand for full-time sign-language interpreting.

A lower court noted that Amy is advancing nicely in school, outperforming the average child in her classes. But the lower court said she understands less in her classes than she would were she not deaf, and thus there is a disparity between her achievement and her potential. Hence the entitlement to "appropriate" education requires the interpreter.

But the Supreme Court majority says that Congress, although "cryptic," evidently was prompted by court cases in the early 1970s concerning basic access to education for handicapped children. So Congress established only an entitlement to education sufficient to "benefit" a child — not sufficient to "maximize potential."

The dissenters stressed the word "full" in Congress' reference to "full educational opportunity." They charged the Court's majority with saying that any education that benefits a handicapped child satisfies the requirement of "appropriate" education.

There is a rhythm to the evolution of America's welfare state. Congress enacts an entitlement program in which crucial terms are, inevitably, somewhat undefined. During hearings and debates, congressmen and senators naturally express themselves generously regarding what they hope the law will accomplish. Later, activists look for promising cases to litigate, hoping that courts will construe the legislators' expressed hopes as the implied legislative intent. Then when a court defines (as the Supreme Court has done) a practical limit of Congress' intent, activists know where they need to seek to enrich the act in a second effort in Congress, or in litigation involving different particulars.

This is a process of overreaching in order to convince legislators that a group is underserved. But activists cannot control the process because they cannot control decisions to litigate.

Many activists in the field of education for the handicapped regretted Amy's case coming to the Court. Compared to most handicapped children, Amy is well-served. A more typical and sympathy-stirring case might have caused a Court majority to construe the act more broadly. But litigation is most likely to arise from affluent, educated, competent, confident families who are not most in need. Activists energizing this dialectic between the legislative and judicial branches can argue that the welfare state must evolve this way, given the nature of legislative language.

Even were Congress composed of 535 Flauberts, with exquisite intuitions for just the right word, the language of many laws would be open-textured. Language must be, to wrap around particular cases. The 1975 act, for example, concerns handicaps varying from hearing-impairment to severe retardation.

Courts are not supposed to be second-stage legislatures, but the U.S. welfare state, with its elaborate agenda of entitlements, has come to depend on courts playing that role. Someone once said: "How marvelous Wagnerian opera would be if all the characters went on strict diets and did not make such loud noise." But Wagnarian opera seems generally to involve fat, noisy people. And America's welfare state seems inseparable from a process whereby Congress legislates sentiments, and courts legislate details.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 8, the 189th day of 1982. There are 176 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July, 8, 1663, King Charles II of England granted a charter to Rhode Island.

Also on this date:

In 1792, France declared war on Prussia.

In 1937, Afghanistan, Iran, Iraq and Turkey signed a non-aggression pact.

In 1940, the government of Norway moved to London after 62 days of fighting against German invaders in World War II.

And in 1976, the Indonesian government said 9,000 people perished in a New Guinea earthquake.

Seven teen-agers charged in Conrail train derailment

FAIR LAWN, N.J. (AP) — Seven teen-agers were charged today with tripping a switch that caused a passenger train to careen off the tracks at 60 mph and crash into a spaghetti factory, killing the engineer, authorities said.

Police Capt. William Gormanns said the youths, all from the area, were charged with manslaughter. Their names and ages were not immediately available.

"It appears that someone threw the switch and that the switch was in the wrong position," Martin E. Robins, deputy executive director of NJ Transit, the state agency that owns the Conrail-operated train, said. "The train hit that switch at 60 mph and careened off the tracks."

The seven-car train with nine people aboard was en route from Suffern, N.Y., to Hoboken, N.J., when it derailed about 9:45 p.m. Wednesday, said Fair Lawn Fire Department Chief Ronald Grant.

The engineer was identified as John Duffy, in his 50s, of Park Ridge in Bergen County, said Conrail spokesman Art Jensen.

Duffy was killed instantly, said Grant. Listed in guarded condition early today at Barnett Hospital in Paterson was Joseph Sandora, in his teens, of Jersey City.

Two other people were treated for minor injuries, officials said.

The train traveled down a siding and smashed through the brick wall of the Columbia Spaghetti Co. factory, leaving behind a gaping hole and passenger cars strewn about, Grant said.

"Two people were trapped in the front of the train, five or six others walked off by themselves," he said.

Fair Lawn Patrolman Henry Michalski said there were three crewmembers and six passengers aboard the train.

Scores of firefighters, police officers and rescue squad volunteers responded to the accident, which occurred near Route 4, a busy highway through this community about 15 miles from New York City.

The county prosecutor's office is conducting a homicide investigation, Robins said. Rescue workers at the scene said the switch had been dusted for fingerprints.

The train hit a piece of heavy machinery inside the factory and pushed it about 40 feet, firefighters said.

Fred Hirsch, a volunteer ambulance paramedic, said the inside of the train was "untouched, but the front cab is completely mangled."

Train derailment causes evacuation

SHERWOOD, Ohio (AP) — More than 800 people evacuated overnight after a train carrying a potentially explosive chemical derailed were allowed to return to their homes early this morning, authorities said.

Early today, authorities said there had been no leak, and no injuries were reported from the Wednesday afternoon derailment.

The Ohio Environmental Protection Agency said one of the derailed cars carried butadiene, a flammable chemical derived from petroleum, and was buried under three other cars. The chemical is used in the manufacture of rubber and plastics.

But at a post-midnight briefing for evacuees, Defiance County Commissioner Ned Speiser said, "There is no leak and the experts who are here working on the situation say they do not expect a leak." No injuries were reported.

Deputies said that from 800 to 850 people were evacuated from the 1,200-resident village, and many returning home from work in other areas were turned away by roadblocks.

Chessie System railroad spokesman Lloyd Lewis said 25 of the train's 117 cars had derailed and a private company had been hired to move them. The cause of the derailment had not been determined, he said.

Designer of war memorial to appeal ruling

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maya Ying Lin says she plans to appeal to the government's Fine Arts Commission to preserve her award-winning design for the nation's memorial to Vietnam veterans — and to reject changes she compares to a shattering noise in a peaceful glade.

Miss Lin, 22, a May architecture graduate of Yale, objects to the additions of a flagpole and a larger-than-life statue of three combat soldiers to her starkly dramatic abstract design, which was selected in a 1981 competition against 1,421 other designs.

"Its silence, its ability to move people and let them think their own thoughts — that's the memorial," Miss Lin said in a telephone interview from Exeter, N.H.

"It's like a still pond or a quiet glade in the woods; add something to it, add noise, add clutter, add anything and you begin to detract. Your mind gets drawn away."

But Jan Scruggs, 32, the former Vietnam infantryman who single-handedly persuaded Congress to give public land on the National Mall in Washington for the memorial, says the additions will please his fellow veterans — and that's what matters.

"We really fought for Maya's design, but we're happy with the compromise," says Scruggs, founder of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, which raised $6 million in contributions to build the monument.

"Some didn't like it because it was too abstract, too unconventional," Scruggs said of the original design. But now, he says, "The way it's done does not detract from the design. It makes it 100 percent better, much more beautiful."

Miss Lin's design called for a monument of two polished black granite walls, descending 10 feet into the ground and meeting in a wide "V" with the names of the 57,692 Americans who died in the war and the 2,500 still listed as missing chiseled into the walls.

One critic, Vietnam veteran Tom Carhart, called it a "black gash of shame and sorrow." Texas millionaire H. Ross Perot called it "a tombstone" and "a slap in the face." Another critic was Sen. Jeremiah Denton Jr., R-Ala., who spent 7½ years as a prisoner of North Vietnam.

Grady Clay, editor of Landscape Architecture magazine and chairman of the eight-man jury which selected Miss Lin's design, is joining in her appeal for rejection of the changes.

"It ought to be built and judged. Let the public see what a great work of beauty it is," says Clay.

Another juror, Chicago architect Harry Weese, blamed Interior Secretary James Watt for submitting to pressure from conservatives in insisting that the design be altered.

"It's as if Michelangelo had the secretary of interior climb onto the scaffold and muck around with his work," Weese said.

The Commission of Fine Arts, a federal agency, has not given final approval to the placement of the new elements. Miss Lin said she plans to attend the September meeting and appeal for her original concept.

Florida residents return home as Peace River recedes

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — Residents of flood-stricken DeSoto County, one of four Florida counties declared disaster areas by President Reagan, are moving back home but still keeping an eye on the rain-swollen Peace River.

The river was measured at 10 feet Wednesday afternoon, almost two feet higher than it had been 24 hours earlier. Two weeks ago, the Peace crested at 17.79 feet, almost five feet above flood stage.

Approximately 300 residents of low-lying areas were forced to leave their homes as a mile-wide sheet of water spread across bottomland. On Wednesday, Reagan designated DeSoto, Hendry, Manatee and Sarasota counties as federal disaster areas.

The late June flooding in southwest Florida caused an estimated $5.9 million in property damage in those counties.

Reagan reluctant to discuss reasons for Haig resignation

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is treating the resignation of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. like classified information — details available only on a "need to know" basis. He says there is no need to be filled and no purpose to be served by saying more about it.

Reagan took that position at his nationally televised news conference and underscored it as he headed to his Santa Barbara ranch for an Independence Day vacation.

What is known, on the public record, is that the secretary of state resigned and said it was because the foreign policy of the administration was faulty, and that the president said it wasn't.

An Analysis

Reagan said his policy is sound and will not change."Foreign policy comes from the Oval Office and with the help of a fine secretary of state," Reagan said at the news conference. "And I've had that fine secretary of state."

He said that was so with Haig in the Cabinet, and will be with George M. Shultz, the man he chose to take over.

For all the president's expressions of appreciation and praise for Haig — "his service to our administration has been all that could be desired" — their foreign policy appraisals remain at odds.

Haig said he quit because Reagan policy had shifted away from the agreed-upon course of consistency, clarity and steadiness of purpose. Reagan said the policy has produced great successes and needs no revision.

He said that will be that so far as public explanations go. "If I thought there was something involved in this that the American people needed to know, with regard to their own welfare, then I would be frank with the American people and tell them," Reagan said. "I don't think there's anything that in any way would benefit the people to know or that will in any way affect their good judgment."

To the news conference suggestion that he was critical of the explanation when a Democratic secretary of state resigned in policy protest, Reagan said there were indications then of things the American people did need to know for their own judgment.

When Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance resigned in 1980, it was in opposition to the attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran by force, a military mission that turned out to be a failure.

Vance cited that one item in telling then-President Carter that he could no longer serve effectively. He dissented on a specific decision, said it was too significant a disagreement to permit further Cabinet service, but praised the general course of Carter administration policy.

Haig complained about the course of policy but cited no specifics. That would seem to leave more unanswered questions than the Vance resignation.

Reagan didn't have much to say about Vance at the time he quit. He was seeking the Republican presidential nomination, and had at the time ruled out campaign discussion of the hostage situation. He made an issue of it later on, but not then.

Vice President George Bush was then a Reagan rival in the GOP primaries. He said the Vance resignation showed "that there have been deep divisions inside the administration over how to reach certain objectives."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., then challenging Carter for the Democratic nomination, said the Vance case showed the need for a Senate investigation of > "Foreign policy comes from the Oval Office and with the help of a fine secretary of state," Reagan said.

the hostage rescue attempt. "The nation needs to know all the relevant facts about the episode which led the secretary of state to take the extraordinary step of resigning in protest," Kennedy said then.

Reagan critics are going to be no less demanding of further explanation in the Haig resignation. They have a forum for those demands in the coming confirmation hearings on Shultz.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, insists that Reagan owes the public an explanation. "The president says he thinks it is no business of the American people," said Glenn, a likely presidential candidate, and a member of the foreign relations panel that will hold the Shultz hearings. "I disagree. ... It is of supreme interest to the American people to know what our policies are."

That's only the beginning. There will be more of it when Congress comes back from its recess and Shultz comes up for Senate approval.

Pentagon studies arms used in Lebanon, Falklands

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON – The Pentagon has begun an intensive study of arms and tactics used in the Lebanese and Falkland Islands wars, and is particularly interested in how the Israelis destroyed Soviet-built anti-aircraft missile systems, apparently without loss to themselves.

Israel "used all kinds of tricks" to destroy the missiles, Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv, a former Israeli chief of military intelligence, said here this week, without elaboration. The Pentagon believes Israel used radar technology to an unprecedented degree of sophistication in the operation.

"The Israeli destruction of the SAMs in Lebanon seems to suggest that the entire Soviet and Warsaw Pact SAM system in Eastern Europe is now vulnerable," one military expert said. "But we'll have to wait and see — in war every tactic generates a counter-tactic."

THE MISSILE SYSTEMS, involving 18 SAM-6 installations, were deployed in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley by the Syrian army. Their destruction was accompanied by a major Israeli air victory, in which about 60 Syrian Soviet-built MIG fighter-bombers were downed without Israeli loss.

The Pentagon says it believes the Israeli claims in the Bekaa Valley episode.

The study of the two wars, Pentagon sources say, will take "weeks" or maybe "months" to complete. But they said some conclusions regarding both conflicts have already been made, and that these might have important influence on U.S. military funding and research priorities.

With regard to the Falkland Islands war, the Pentagon's studies have been mostly concerned with the potential effect of sea and air-launched heavy missiles against surface vessels, in light of the destruction of a British destroyer, the HMS Sheffield, by a French-built "Exocet" missile.

THE SHEFFIELD was struck, almost on its waterline, by an Exocet launched from a French-built Super-Etendard plane of the Argentine Air Force from about 20 miles away. A $50 million warship was thus sunk by a $200,000 weapon, a fact of major significance to naval planners throughout the world.

Following the destruction of the Sheffield, some analysts said this signaled the eventual doom of major surface vessels.

Indeed, in 1967, when a French-made "Styx" anti-ship missile was used by Egypt to sink an Israeli destroyer, the Israeli navy scrapped plans to deploy more destroyers and concentrated future resources on light, fast missile boats and submarines instead.

THE U.S. NAVY, with vastly greater resources, has no similar plans to end the future role of major surface vessels, including aircraft carriers, in light of the Sheffield episode, the Pentagon sources emphasized.

"The reverse is the case," one source said. "The sinking of the Sheffield teaches us that carriers are more vital than ever. That Argentine plane could never have gotten anywhere near enough to an American destroyer in the same situation. Radar-detection planes flying from an American carrier would have spotted it and it would have have been shot down."

With regard to the Falklands operation, too, the Pentagon sources said Britain's transportation of men and weapons across 8,000 miles of ocean was a "textbook logistics exercise" that was deserving of careful study.

THE U.S. MARINE Corps, also, is reviewing the first combat performance of British Harrier "jump jets" — fighter planes that can land and take off either like fixed-wing or helicopter aircraft. The Marine Corps is the major purchaser of the British-made Harrier.

In the Lebanese war, apparently-new Israeli tank-destroying tactics have come under scrutiny, as well as the destruction of the SAM missiles. The SAM missile operation, however, remains the principal focus of U.S. attention.

The Israelis, U.S. sources say, in some cases used routine artillery in the missile operation. But they also used the U.S.-built Grumman E-2C Hawkeye radar-surveillance plane — it is similar to the better-known AWACS plane — in a sophisticated manner.

THE ISRAELIS sent unmanned drone aircraft over the missile batteries, the sources said. When SAM missiles were sent up to destroy them two Hawkeyes were used to monitor the telemetry of the SAMs' electronic guidance. Using computers, the Israelis were then able to direct fighter-launched missiles along the missiles' own trajectory in reverse.

In tank-destroying operations in the Lebanese war, observers said large numbers of Soviet-built Syrian tanks appear to have been knocked out in a peculiarly-identical fashion — by direct hits on their turrets, where tanks are particularly vulnerable.

Israeli guns pound refugee camp into rubble

HADDATH, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli artillery and rocket fire is slowly pounding the Palestinian camp of Bourj el Barajneh into the ground. But after weeks of shelling, the Israelis don't seem to be in a hurry to take the PLO base near Beirut's airport.

"It's a form of pressure," said Israeli spokesman Col. Paul Kedar of the barrages that wax and wane throughout the day.

Another Israeli officer, who asked not to be named, added: "We can take it any time. We're just waiting" to see if negotiations will end Israel's siege of Beirut.

Since the early stages of Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israeli artillery and tanks, and occasionally planes, have conducted daily bombardment of the buildings just north of here that once housed a crowded refugee camp.

The Israelis have moved only about a half-mile during that time, just to the edge of the camp itself. Each tiny advance has been marked by the blasting apart of one or two buildings where Palestinian snipers or machine gun posts were believed located. The Israelis say they have taken no casualties in the careful move forward.

The shelling and tank fire on PLO positions in the camp and other spots near the airport has picked up recently, intensifying earleir this week into the heaviest fighting since U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib put together a cease-fire in west Beirut on June 25.

An example of the heavy fighting occurred on Monday. Before the shooting tapered off at nightfall, Israeli tanks moved forward a few dozen yards in some places and knocked out a few more sniper positions.

The Palestinians intensified their mortar and Katyusha rocket barrages in return. Two shells fell near the Israeli-encircled presidential palace overlooking Bourj el Barajneh, according to a palace spokesman, destroying the limousine of Foreign Minister Fuad Butros and wounding the driver.

Habib had been conferring with President Elias Sarkis in the palace, but left 20 minutes before the shells hit.

The slowly increasing Israeli pressure on Bourj el Barajneh has left the area devastated and seemingly deserted, except for the guerrillas. Every day, artillery guided by spotters blasts 6-foot holes in a few more walls, or knocks the side off another building.

Most of the four, five and six-story buildings have suffered at least some damage, and many are gaping, shattered wrecks. At least one or two large fires are started each day, and some burn for days.

Reporters who were in the camp before the current fighting say the Palestinians had dug in all across the area between here and the sea, even under the middle of the airport runway. But little evidence of this can be seen from outside — only sandbagged gates, windows and doors.

The Israelis believe they may already have chased most of the guerrillas out with the daily shelling, leaving only scattered units still firing back.

Only brief, furtive movement can be seen from high buildings in Haddath, a nearby Beirut suburb that itself came under Israeli fire before dawn earlier this week. But even the slightest indication of life brings a response from the Israeli artillery batteries that are scattered throughout the surrounding hills and seem to be able to hit their targets with pinpoint accuracy.

Losing candidates denounce elections

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A leftist coalition and a runner-up in Mexico's presidential elections claim serious irregularities took place in the voting, which government candidate Miguel de la Madrid won by a landslide.

Mexicans voted in record numbers Sunday in response to a government campaign against absenteeism. They also chose a new House and Senate.

In a statement Tuesday night, the communist-led United Socialist Party Alliance said hundreds of uniformed policemen voted illegally in some Jalisco state polling stations.

Quadriplegic drives dragster as hobby

By BRUCE DUNFORD
AP Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Gordon Kaluahine roars over the drag strip in his 1967 Firebird in 12 seconds, reaching a top speed of 105 mph.

The polished baby blue car, with its 24-inch wide racing tires, has been dubbed "Kauai's Fastest Wheelchair" because the 26-year-old Kaluahine is paralyzed from the chest down.

"I used to ride a motorcycle, go surfing, fly an airplane and race cars," he says. "I was real active. Now, basically I roll around a lot and drag cars."

Four years ago, a crop duster Kaluahine was flying in crashed in a sugar cane field on the island of Kauai.

The impact broke his neck and damaged his spinal cord, leaving him critically injured. He can move his arms, but has no use of his hands and is classified medically as a quadriplegic.

After four months in the hospital, Kaluahine went home depressed and angry.

"No one could talk to me," he said. "I was ashamed of myself. I would just stay home.

"But once I finally accepted the fact that I would never walk again I got better and started doing things again," he said. "It was all the false hope that someday I would be walking again that held me back.

"To tell the truth, I'm more happy now than I was before, although that doesn't mean I wouldn't like to walk."

Three years ago, his four brothers, all active in drag racing, helped Kaluahine build his own race car. It was named "Playtime" — the same name as the custom-made clothing and fabric shop his wife, Terisita, operates.

Kaluahine and his wife, who have a four-year-old son, were married soon after they graduated from high school. At the time of the plane crash, Kaluahine worked for his family's fishing operation, flying planes over the ocean to spot schools of fish.

His Firebird is powered by a 396 cubic-inch "Big Block" Chevrolet engine with a single four-barrel carburetor and a high-lift camshaft.

Because he has no use of his feet or legs, the car has no pedals. Instead, it has a hand-operated lever controlling brakes when moved up and down, and the accelerator when moved from side to side. It was improvised from a lever device used on self-propelled wheelchairs, Kaluahine said.

By placing his right hand in a special two-pronged bracket attached to the steering wheel, Kaluahine can guide the car and at the same time use his elbow to control a shift lever for the automatic transmission.

When he and his brothers showed up at the Mana Dragstrip three years ago with the new car, Kauai Racing Association officials wouldn't let him race, fearing he would not be able to control the powerful car.

But after the local association consulted with the National Hot Rod Association, which establishes rules for drag racing throughout the United States, it was decided that Kaluahine could race if he met certain requirements.

"I had to take a special physical and make a couple of trial runs down the strip to show I could drive," he said. "The main thing the NHRA was concerned about was that I have my hand on the wheel at all times.

"When I first started racing, no one wanted to get on the track next to me. But now they're all out there trying to beat me."

Winfrey chosen to compete in state pageant

Patricia "Tricia" Winfrey has been selected to represent the Midland-Odessa area in the upcoming 1982 Miss Texas USA Pageant. She is the 20-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Henderson.

Miss Winfrey is a 1980 graduate of Midland High School and has studied business administration at Midland College. She plans to continue her education at Texas Tech University, where she will major in business with specialization in petroleum land management.

Her special interests include playing the flute, aerobic dancing, racquetball, horseback riding and swimming.

Miss Winfrey's official title in the pageant will be "Miss Midland-Odessa." The pageant will be held in San Antonio August 14-23. All events held in conjunction with the pageant will be staged at the Center for Performing Arts. Finals of the pageant will be televised locally on KOSA Channel 7.

Ms. Pamela Leach is this year's area director for the pageant.

Abortion counseling for men: procedure not only woman's concern

By ELIZABETH MEHREN
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — They were there to have an abortion, the young man said.

He fidgeted and squirmed. His eyes focused first on the floor, then, slowly, they settled on the person opposite him — a counselor, a man his own age, in his mid-20s.

There was no other choice, the young man said. Abortion argued with his religious beliefs and violated his moral convictions. But he knew now that she had had German measles the week the baby was conceived, and there was no other choice.

Then, gently, he wept.

"SOMETIMES YOU GET THESE guys in here, and they say there's just no problem, they've got everything under control, no problem," said San Francisco counselor Dr. Bruce Rappaport, who is participating in the relatively new practice of abortion counseling for men.

"Then if you find the right way, and this is what's hard, they'll start saying they have nightmares about little babies being killed, or worrying, will they ever be a father again?"

"I had this one guy in here," said Rob Gross, 27, a counselor in an Oakland abortion clinic, "a 31-year-old guy, big and strong, a Vietnam veteran, the cream of the earth. He was talking and talking, being real clinical and hard, and all the time I noticed that he was blinking back tears.

"So I stopped him and said, 'You seem to have a lot of feelings about this,' and all of a sudden he started to bawl. He must have cried for five minutes.

"Finally, what he said was that he really did want to have a kid, and he really was excited about the idea of being a father, and he felt awful about the abortion. But he just didn't know how to express his ambivalence, or his pain."

CLOSE TO THREE MILLION AMERICANS had abortions last year. Half of them were women.

The others were their men: husbands, boyfriends, casual lovers.

Only the rare man opts into the process of abortion. Generously, a spokesman for Planned Parenthood here estimates that fewer than 10 percent of its female abortion clients each year are accompanied by men. In Los Angeles, counselor Nellie Geva of the Westside Women's Clinic puts the figure even lower. "We see very, very few men here," Geva said. "I would say maybe 5 percent of the women who come here for abortions are accompanied by their partners."

"I think what happens," Geva said, "is that the men think they shouldn't be involved. Either that, or they figure she's the one who has to deal with it."

Agreed Thomas M., 21, a Sausalito paramedic, "Most guys just figure that their only obligation is to pay. It's the totally male mentality: In their dictated gallantry, they think, 'I paid, that's that.'"

THE YOUNG MAN SHIFTED, and glanced at his watch. In another room at the Planned Parenthood center here, his 19-year-old girlfriend was undergoing an abortion. To his astonishment, when he accompanied her to the family planning facility, he was offered a chance to talk to a male counselor about the abortion process.

"At first I was a little suspicious," Thomas said. "I thought, uh-oh, they're trying to rope me into something." But soon he was conferring about aftercare following the abortion, about birth control and future family planning, about his relationship with his girlfriend after the abortion.

Three years ago, the Planned Parenthood center here became one of the first such facilities in the country to offer abortion counseling for men.

As Rappaport, a specialist in men's health issues, explains, the patterning around the issue of abortion is largely cultural. Men shy away from discussions of birth control; they are often uncomfortable talking about the whole process of conception; they boast and make jokes about sex. Men do not "get pregnant," so why would they think in terms of "having an abortion"?

Bound by biology, perplexed, sometimes intimidated by the mysteries of conception, some men, said Denver sociologist Dr. Roger C. Wade, feel excluded from the abortion process. Other men, said Geva, "exclude themselves."

MEN SPEND YEARS LEARNING to be unemotional, Wade believes, and, faced with the emotional maelstrom of abortion, they are quick to apply these lessons. "I've seen teen-aged boys who said they just felt like they were supposed to stop feeling," Wade said. "They were trying to 'act like men' because they were thrown into this very adult situation. Their image was, 'Well, I'm supposed to take control.'"

"Men are caught in a real Catch-22," said Dr. Ruth Lerner, a Los Angeles psychologist and rape-hot line counselor. "They may want help, but they don't know how to ask for it. In something like abortion, no matter how bad, how confused they may feel, they don't usually reach out for help. They've learned to take care of that feeling with a couple glasses of brandy."

Indeed, a Los Angeles architect resorted to that very route when his 25-year-old girlfriend aborted their child. "For her," he said, "the abortion was like going to the dentist" — she bounced back and was at work the next day. But the architect found himself engulfed by emotions he was unequipped to deal with. "For two days," he said, "I sat in the dark in my apartment and drank brandy. I didn't know what else to do."

Author of a Ph.D. thesis focusing on social movements involving sexism, Rappaport has spent nearly two decades observing the impact of sex roles in society. "Men," he believes, "adhere to these rigid male roles with an extraordinary tenacity." But Rappaport adds: "Behind those roles, men are still human beings."

Wade agrees: "It's not that we don't have feelings, it's that we haven't learned to articulate them."

WORKING AT COLORADO'S first major abortion facility, the Boulder Valley Clinic, five years ago, Wade decided it was time to change all that. "From the very beginning," he said, "we believed that abortion involved two people." And so, Wade began approaching the few men who showed up with women who were having abortions.

"I would ask the men, in my own very naive way, 'How do you feel about this?' I soon realized that what I was getting was what they thought, because they couldn't distinguish between what they felt and what they thought.

"What happens a lot of the time," Wade found, "is that the woman's having such a hard time dealing with herself, with her own mixed emotions, that even if the guy tries to assert his thoughts, or his feelings, he may get some real hostility back. It doesn't take much to shut a man up, so he backs off.

"Communication is often very bad at that point in time, so men try to use strategy to help the woman, and they do all the wrong things. They try to humor her, or maybe they try to be funny and make jokes. Either that or they abandon her — they say 'I just can't cope,' and they cop out."

For Wade, the experience became in part a process of self-examination. "I learned a lot about how to be supportive from some of the men I saw.

"Some of the men were just extremely supportive. I had some men cry and say, 'I wish with all my heart it could be me in there having the abortion instead of her.' Then there were men who just didn't give a damn, too."

AMONG THE 1,200 men he met and talked to, said Wade, "Those teen-aged boys were some of the ones I began to feel the most empathy for. They're just really confused. They didn't know what they were supposed to do, or feel, at all."

Wade is loath to make generalizations about men and abortion, but he will say that once he broke through the emotional barrier with a man, he encountered conflicting — and often strong — feelings about the issue. Regardless of whether a man and woman agreed about the abortion, there were often unresolved feelings on both parts.

"Really what abortions are all about is the lack of communication between men and women. That's what causes them. People don't use birth control; certainly they don't talk about birth control. It's a lot easier for people to have sex than to talk about it."

General store keeps traditions

By ELISSA McCRARY
AP Writer

VALLE CRUCIS, N.C. (AP) — The Mast General Store sells just about everything necessary to run a household or a farm, and the neighborly gatherings around the checkerboard and potbellied stove make it the hub of this community.

"We like for people to take their time in here," said owner John Cooper. "We want a store here like it was in the old days, when coming to the store was a social event, something that could stretch into a whole day."

A well-worn checkerboard with bottle caps for checkers, along with several comfortable chairs, invites customers to linger a while. In the winter, the glowing potbellied stove gives oldtimers and shoppers a place to gather around and catch up on community news.

"We're not a tourist trap and we don't want to be," Cooper says.

"We're here to carry on the tradition of service to the community that the Masts started 100 years ago."

In 1883, Mast General Store opened for business, offering its customers just about everything under the sun.

"Mast Store used to pride itself on selling everything, starting with cradles right up to coffins," Cooper said. "We don't go quite that far. But we have just about anything a person needs in everyday life."

On the shelves of the rambling frame-store building, located in the Watauga County hamlet of Valle Crucis near Boone, customers can find shoes and boots, overalls, sunbonnets, homemade candies and jellies, and cookware, plus the usual canned goods and foodstuffs.

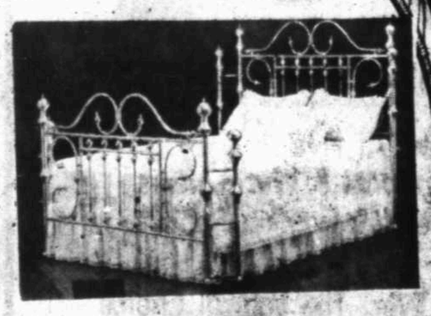

The 9,000-square-foot store also features a deli which Cooper says isn't a new idea at Mast Store.

"The Mast always made sandwiches for people working in the fields, so what we're really doing with a deli is carrying on a tradition, not starting a new one," he said.

The store was built in 1882 by W.W. Mast. The Mast family ran it until 1977.

Study appliances before buying

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Many consumers buy household appliances based on the color, cost or brand name, not the way they perform, say two Brigham Young University home economists, co-authors of "Modern Household Equipment."

But sometimes they may be getting features they don't need and in the process paying more than they can afford, Dr. Carolyn Garrison and Dr. Ruth Brasher point out.

"For the most part there is no best brand," said Miss Garrison, BYU professor of home economics. "Consumers need to shop features and understand what they are looking for."

RANGES ARE FREQUENTLY purchased without an understanding of their features and flexibility, she says. For example, an oven timer device, though frequently included, is one of the most underused features on the appliance.

Modern refrigerators have automatic ice dispensers in the door which may appear to be an unnecessary luxury, but according to Miss Brasher, associate dean of the College of Family, Home and Social Sciences, it could save energy in the long run.

"If the kids are opening the refrigerator 49 times a day, they may be using more energy than if they just obtained the ice from the outside," he explains. "Refrigerators consume 35 percent of all energy used by major appliances — and a lot of that is due to the opening and closing of the door."

ACCORDING TO BOTH PROFESSORS, appliances are a good buy for the dollar today and cost less proportionately than they did 20 or 30 years ago.

Because of the development of microwave and convection ovens, it may appear that the range has undergone radical changes over the past few decades. But both of these developments were merely either adaptations or an entirely new cooking method, they note.

"About all we've done in the last 100 years is take the fire out of the oven," said Miss Garrison.

THE REFRIGERATOR, however, has undergone extensive changes. The insulation has been improved and increased, the food-storage area has doubled, and the temperature can be more selectively regulated for vegetables, meat or butter compartments.

Ice and water dispensers are available outside the refrigerator door and some models have fresh-food compartments that are accessible without opening the whole refrigerator door.

Microprocessor options that tell the homeowner that the refrigerator is too hot or cold, that the door is open or that it needs to be defrosted are also featured on some models.

MISS GARRISON STRONGLY RECOMMENDS that consumers buy washers with a permanent-press cycle because clothes are made from so many new synthetic fibers.

"Don't buy a washer without it," she said. "In the washer you want the water hot enough to take the soil out but you don't want to spin it while it's hot; otherwise you'll have wrinkles. The permanent-press cycle dumps in the cool water prior to the first spin."

MANUFACTURERS OF EIGHT household appliances — refrigerators and refrigerator-freezers, freezers, clothes washers, dishwashers, space heaters, water heaters, furnaces and room air conditioners — are now required by law to provide energy consumption labels on their products.

These labels tell the consumer how much energy the product will use in one year. The dollar cost is based on a national average for each type of energy (electricity, gas, oil).

ACCORDING TO MISS GARRISON, energy-consumption rates do vary between different brands, and labels can be an important factor in selecting an appliance. But some consumers don't read the labels carefully enough and often mistakenly compare the energy consumption of a large refrigerator with a smaller one.

"Another problem is that there are so many factors in usage that it may cost the consumer more or less than the label suggests," she said.

Miss Garrison acknowledges that these labeling requirements have added hidden costs to the product, but she believes that as energy becomes more expensive, more consumers will select appliances based in part on their energy consumption.

BRUNCHTIME
Orange Juice Cocktails
Toast Cup Eggs with Ham and Cheese Sauce
Danish Pastry Coffee

TOAST CUP EGGS

Convenient because you can make as many of these as needed.

Thinly sliced white bread
Soft butter
Eggs
Salt and white pepper
Grated Parmesan cheese
Paprika
Sliced cooked ham
Cheese sauce

Cut crust from bread and lightly spread both sides of each slice with soft butter. Press each slice into a 6-ounce custard cup. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until lightly toasted — five to 10 minutes. Reduce oven heat to 350 degrees. Break an egg into each toast cup; sprinkle with the salt, pepper, Parmesan and paprika — use one tablespoon of the Parmesan for each egg. Return to the 350-degree oven and bake until the eggs are as firm as you like — 12 to 18 minutes. Meanwhile, heat the ham and the cheese sauce and serve with the Toast Cup Eggs.

Kids and summer camp

By ERMA BOMBECK

Camps for kids are big business in this country. And the more mothers who enter the labor marketplace, the more creative they become.

All you have to do is to look at your kids and decide: Are they overweight? Need help in math? Have to improve their tennis game? Learn how to ride horseback? Prepare for survival? Or immerse themselves in two weeks of the newest camp of video games?

In other words, "You send us a bored kid and we'll run his fanny into the ground."

I'm the product of a hundred church camps that majored in Social Interaction (short-sheeting beds), Nature Lore (you too can take home your own tick for a pet), Crafts (macaroni necklaces are not a girl's best friend), Adventures in Food (raw hamburger and burnt marshmallows cooked over a coffee can) and Group Dynamics (the group just ripped off my bathing suit and candy allowance).

I usually arrived home weak from the bites of a million mosquitoes, eyes puffy from lack of sleep and numb from the experience.

The problem seems to stem from the fact that we are feeding a myth. In order to have a good time you have to travel to some godforsaken area, with plumbing that doesn't work, beds with two-inch mattresses, a lake that is frozen over in August and a recorded tom-tom.

Somewhere it is written that every child wants to climb a tree, set the leg of a bird, scrape his knee on a rock and sit around a campfire coughing. Some children do. They grow up to be campers.

Other children have no desire to do any of that.

Why should they leave a house with screens, electricity, $500 worth of toys and a refrigerator stocked with the Stouffer experience?

When you think about it, what's so un-American about a camp at the Plaza where a kid pays the same amount of money and sits in a hotel room all day watching TV and ringing up room service? In the evening, he could play on the elevators and run around the lobby knocking over people.

Just think what an experience like that could mean in a child's life. It could revive our cities.

Kiwi Cake: Summer refreshment

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

To usher in a lovely summertime fruit, you may enjoy making and serving a Kiwi Cake as much as we did.

The cake itself is an old-fashioned hot milk sponge layer — but made speedily nowadays in an electric mixer. Filled and frosted with a Tangy Lemon Cream and kiwis it's both delicious and attractive.

KIWI CAKE

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
2 large eggs
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sugar
Tangy Lemon Cream: recipe follows
6 to 8 kiwis, peeled and sliced

Grease and flour a round layer-cake pan (9 by 1½ inches).

Stir together the flour, baking powder and salt; reserve. (We do this on a sheet of wax paper.)

Into a small saucepan pour the milk and add the butter; reserve.

In an electric mixer, at high speed, beat the eggs and vanilla until thickened and lemon color — about three minutes. Gradually beat in the sugar until mixture is very thick and ivory color — about five minutes.

At once, over high heat, bring the milk and butter just to a boil; with the mixer at lowest speed, gradually beat the hot milk mixture into the egg mixture only until smooth. Add the reserved flour mixture and beat gently just until the batter is smooth. Turn into the prepared pan.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 35 to 40 minutes. Place pan on a wire rack to cool for about five minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges; turn out cake onto the wire rack; cool completely. Invert cake onto a serving plate whose edges have been lined with wide strips of wax paper.

Cut the cake in half horizontally to make two layers. Spread part of the Tangy Lemon Cream over one of the layers; add a layer of kiwis; top with the other cake layer; frost the top and sides with the remaining Tangy Lemon Cream and garnish with the remaining kiwis. Remove wax paper strips from around the plate. Chill before serving.

TANGY LEMON CREAM

1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup sugar
¾ cup water
2 large egg yolks
Grated rind of 1 medium lemon (about 1 tablespoon)
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup heavy cream

In a 1½-quart saucepan thoroughly stir together the cornstarch and sugar; gradually stir in the water, keeping smooth. Add the egg yolks and beat gently until blended. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until mixture is clear, thickened and boiling. Off heat stir in the lemon rind; gradually stir in the lemon juice; let stand at room temperature until cool to the touch. In a small bowl whip the cream until thick; add to the cool lemon mixture and fold in until blended. Makes about 2½ cups.

Palm Bay Club called 'most exclusive'

By JOHN PLATERO
AP Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The late Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis was once almost turned away. Spiro Agnew — when he was vice president of the United States — also was left cooling his heels outside.

But for those who get past the guarded entrance to the Palm Bay Club — a 16-acre community overlooking Biscayne Bay — they'll find the essence of old Florida.

THE LOBBY IS SMALL, but comfortable, with a marble floor, a grandfather's clock in one corner, and a prominently displayed embroidered sampler with the words, "God Bless Our Pad."

"This is really a private club," says Connie Dinkler, who opened the club 18 years ago. "We're not the most expensive, but we're the most exclusive."

Missing from the valet parking lot are the Rolls-Royces, Mercedes, Cadillacs and other luxury cars found at many of the posh condominiums along Florida's Gold Coast. But a stretch limousine is parked under a canopy, ready for those who arrive by yacht or helicopter and need ground transportation.

"I just wanted a private club for my friends," Ms. Dinkler said. "Money is not the answer to happiness or success. But it helps a lot."

IT ALMOST DIDN'T help Onassis when he arrived in his famed yacht outside the Palm Bay Club's marina — specially dredged to accommodate any vessel up to 130 feet in any of its 52 slips. Someone had forgotten to leave an invitation with the dockmaster, and Onassis wasn't allowed to dock until a club member extended him an invitation.

Agnew experienced a similar reception at the front gate. He had to wait outside until someone advised the guard he could enter.

"People expect to see a palace, but it's not pretentious at all," says Curtis DeWitz, the club's director.

"There are only 18 bar stools and we can serve 70 for dinner," he said. "It's like being in your own home."

THE CLUB BOASTS several lighted tennis courts, an Olympic size swimming pool and a floating heliport where Ms. Dinkler occasionally lands her five-passenger helicopter. There is a small waterfall and a pond with goldfish from Japan valued at $400 each.

"We get the finest people in the world here," says Leo Ross, who mixes drinks at the outdoor rotunda bar. "I've worked a few street joints, but here, there's never a problem. And the customers are great tippers."

Ms. Dinkler built a nine-story condominium on the property in 1965.

"We didn't even know how to spell 'condominium' in those days," she said. These one- and two-bedroom apartments originally sold for as little as $30,000. A recent resale went for $169,000.

THE PALM BAY TOWER — a 27-story apartment building — was finished in 1972. There are three apartments on each floor. Some members have purchased an entire floor and converted it into a single dwelling. Some apartments in the building are worth $750,000.

When Ms. Dinkler opened the Palm Bay Club, it had 278 members. It now numbers close to 1,500.

"They are all friends of friends of friends," she said.

"Connie was selective," adds Curtis. "It is not money, religion or race. It's compatible people who enjoy being with each other — not because of who the person is."

ONE MUST BE RECOMMENDED by three members who have known that person socially for at least five years, said Ms. Dinkler, wife of a retired hotel magnate.

The initiation fee at the club is $500, with $500 annual dues. Junior membership for those under 30 is $345 a year.

"People here are not the nouveau riche," says Ms. Dinkler's daughter, Gayonne. "They have innate class and the majority of them have been that way for generations. They make this place."

Blueberry pudding

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you are fond of steamed puddings made with fresh fruit, the chances are you'll enjoy this one — chock-full of fresh blueberries.

But you don't have to steam this pudding in a big saucepot on the top of the stove to achieve its special texture and flavor. Instead, you bake it in a layer-cake pan in the oven in a special way.

If you try this recipe, we urge you to serve the pudding while it is still quite warm — just as you would serve a steamed pudding made the conventional way.

BLUEBERRY PUDDING

2 cups fresh blueberries
3 large eggs
1¼ cups milk
1 tablespoon butter
1¼ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
Pinch of salt
Extra blueberries and confectioners' sugar, if desired

Butter a round 9- by 1½-inch cake pan that has a removable bottom.

Rinse the blueberries in cold water and pat dry on paper toweling.

In a small bowl, beat the eggs until foamy.

In a small saucepan, heat the milk and the butter until the butter melts and the milk is warm.

In a large bowl, stir together the flour, granulated sugar, baking powder and salt. Add the eggs and beat until blended. Add the milk mixture and beat until smooth — batter will be thin.

Pour ¾ cup of the batter into the prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until set — seven to eight minutes. Spread the two cups blueberries over the set batter. Pour the remaining batter over the berries. Continue baking in the 375-degree oven until the top is puffed and set looking — 30 to 40 minutes longer.

Cool on a wire rack until pudding comes away from the sides of the pan — about 15 minutes. Remove the pan's side band.

THE ART OF LIVING

A miracle for Margaret

By STEPHEN JOHNSON
(Special from Reader's Digest)

Blinded in a car crash 14 years before, 30-year-old Margaret Roddick could barely distinguish light from dark.

Though she often worried about something happening to her five preteenage children, whom she could see only as beloved but furry forms, Margaret seldom gave in to fear or depression. She prided herself on being able to cope.

SHE HAD LEARNED to deal with her problems early. Her parents separated when she was 9 and, after a carefree childhood on Australia's Stradbroke Island, near Brisbane, Margaret suddenly found herself in an orphanage. She had adjusted, though and, more often than not, she was happy in her new life.

At 15, an attractive young woman with dreams of becoming a fashion model, Margaret left school and got a job in Brisbane as a waitress. At 16, she became engaged. Soon afterward, one rainy June morning in 1966, a car in which she was being driven home from a party crashed into a parked truck. The impact killed her fiance and the driver instantly.

MARGARET'S PRETTY FACE, slashed by broken glass, required 127 stitches. But worst was the damage to her eyes. Fragments of glass had sliced through the corneas and penetrated the rear chambers of both eyeballs, spilling vitreous humor — the trans-parent jelly inside the eyeball.

Away from the hospital, jobless and often lonely, living on an invalid's pension, Margaret found coping with her blindness heavy going. Then, two years after her accident, she took a taxi driven by a chatty young man named Alan Roddick. A few nights later, they met again, by chance, at a party. They were married at the end of the year. Alan assured Margaret her blindness was not a deterrent.

WHEN FIVE CHILDREN came in five years, Margaret coped. For safety's sake, she cleared the little ones out of her kitchen before starting to cook. She talked to her toddlers constantly to establish their whereabouts, checked babies in their cots two or three times an hour.

Alan's gentle, matter-of-fact acceptance of her blindness was powerful support. He did ironing, sewing and other chores Margaret could not manage, gave her caring and love — but never pity, which she couldn't have borne. Often, he took her to a local park and described the flowers whose perfume hung heavy in the air. And Margaret knew this to be a shared delight, not a favor done for a blind wife.

BUT THEN THERE CAME the terrible time in Jan. 1980, during the final weeks of Margaret's sixth pregnancy, when her damaged eyes began to cloud over with cataracts. Total blackness seemed about to descend.

Her doctors referred Margaret to an eye specialist, Dr. John Ohlrich who, coincidentally, had treated her after the accident. In 1966, h'd done all that could be done for her with the surgical technology then available.

NOW, IN 1980, there was a possiblility that a miracle might be wrought: For some time, Dr. Ohlrich had been trying to persuade South Queensland Lions Clubs to provide the $51,000 needed for purchase of two pieces of highly specialized microsurgical equipment developed in the United States. There was just a chance that, with this equipment, surgeons might be able to restore at least vestiges of Margaret's sight.

The Lions voted the money and, in April, the Roddicks' fourth son was born. Three months later, two of Brisbane's top surgeons removed tattered strands of vitreous jelly and the cataract on Margaret's left eye. For two hours, they maneuvered their minute instruments, then finally trickled in a saline solution to replace the lost vitreous jelly.

MARGARET AWOKE in a recovery ward with bandages covering her left eye. The following morning, these came off. Margaret's eyes watered. She blinked. She saw the details of the doctor's face, the first face she had seen for 15 years.

MARGARET STARTED TO CRY softly, repeating over and over, "I can see again!" Throughout the ward, tears of joy flowed as the good news spread. Then the bandages went back on, to protect the still very tender eye from the bright lights.

The following Saturday morning, Alan shepherded Margaret eagerly from the ward to the optometrist's office, where she was to be fitted with special dark glasses. Off came the bandages once more. Margaret put on the glasses. The sudden clarity of vision was unbelievable. She could read the optometrist's name on his shirt pocket.

Turning her head, she saw the best sight of all — Alan, grinning from ear to ear. His brown eyes, sparkling with happiness, were darker than she had expected, his face plumper.

THEY EMBRACED WORDLESSLY. Alan walked Margaret out to the car where the children waited. They fell silent as their mother approached.

Margaret, too, was silent. She could not take her eyes off her children. They were all so beautiful to her.

Today, "Life is wonderful," says Margaret. "I could regret that I lost so many years without sight. But what really did I lose? I've learned a lesson that few people know — to value every minute. Now, every day seems like Christmas."

DEAR ABBY

Husband's political contributions upset wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in our 70s, on a retirement income and with a few health problems. My husband made a contribution to the political party of his choice during the election-year campaign, and now he is being solicited by every political cause, as well as every candidate running for Congress and even minor offices. We get letters by the boxful requesting contributions for any number of political causes — all marked "urgent."

When our CPA made our tax returns in April, my husband had contributed over $500 (without my knowledge), of which only $200 was deductible. This made me furious because we cannot afford it.

I tried to talk to him about this, but it did no good. I even tried to keep some of that mail from him, but now he goes to the post office and picks it up there.

We even get long-distance telephone calls soliciting money for political causes and candidates. I am worried sick because at this rate my husband will have spent all our savings; then what will happen to us? — GOING BROKE

DEAR GOING: Tell your accountant that your husband tunes you out when you tell him he's spending too much on political causes, so he (the accountant) should get that message to him. (P.S. I hope you're both supporting the party that best takes care of its poor and elderly, because THEY could be YOU.)

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the woman who was invited to a bridal shower to be held in a church hall: The invitation read, "Dresses only, please." Her problem — she didn't even own a skirt or a dress, but she had a "presentable" pantsuit.

I think it's absolutely gross that a woman would brag that she didn't even own a skirt or dresss. She should simply decline the shower invitation and stay home. An "R.S.V.P." invitation does not obligate one to explain the reason for declining. Besides, her explanation would only serve to indicate that she is an ill-mannered clod to even consider coming to a church wearing pants. — APPALLED

DEAR APPALLED: Before condemning all women who opt for pants instead of skirts, consider this: There are women who suffer from psoriasis — a chronic skin condition causing unsightly red patches on the legs. Then there are women who wear leg braces. In such cases, long skirts, pants or pajama outfits are a blessing.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very difficult decision to make concerning my dog, Sheba, a 7-year-old Great Dane who has been with me since her birth. She is getting old and set in her ways and she has bad hips.

I feel I would be betraying her if I sent her to "the great hound heaven in the sky," but I don't want to wake up some morning and find a 165-pound dead animal in my house. If I give her away, I know she will die of a broken heart. She's like a member of the family, but something has to be done. Should I have her put to sleep? — ANIMAL LOVER

DEAR ANIMAL LOVER: A veterinarian can tell you if Sheba's "bad hips" are giving her pain, and if they can be surgically repaired.

If Sheba can be kept alive without discomfort, keep her and love her — as she does you.

Dog bites more frequent, but human bites more infectious

By DON FAIR
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — In summer, a dog's fancy can often turn to biting. But while Rover's bite is worse than his bark, it's still less infectious than being bitten by a fellow human.

Dr. Bob Urata of the Holly Park Medical Clinic made that observation after treating a 14-year-old Asian refugee girl who suffered superficial wounds after a skirmish with a dog.

"That's the second such patient I've had the past couple of weeks," he said. "The one consolation is these aren't as dangerous as human bites." His explanation is that a human's mouth contains "a lot of bacteria," which is released in the wound, while a dog's mouth does not.

While Jay Vellinga, operations supervisor for the Seattle Animal Shelter, had no specific statistics, she estimated the number of dog bite victims increases by at least 5 percent in the summer.

"People should be careful of maurauding dogs," she said. By Vellinga's definition, three dogs or more constitute a pack. She said that males do most of the biting. A pack of dogs will travel two to three miles from their homes in search of a female in heat, "and if anything upsets them, they will fight."

Children and dogs are often a bad summer combination. Youngsters suffer more bites in this season simply because of the odds — the weather is nicer, they are outdoors more, nobody is in school and dogs are also outdoors more.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Solution to sticky problem

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a solution I devised to end the exasperating struggle to unstick the end of a roll of any kind of adhesive tape that isn't on a dispenser — transparent tape, electrician's tape, masking tape, etc.

After many bouts of scratching and picking to catch hold of that sticky end that's tight against the roll, I tried this "ounce of prevention" to make it easier to use the tape the next time.

Use one of those little flat plastic fasteners used to close bread wrappers and other packages.

Pull out the length of tape you need, then insert the plastic fastener underneath the loosened tape with the notched end next to the solid roll.

Now you can tear off the portion of the loosened tape over the end of the plastic fastener as you would with a regular dispenser.

The remaining end of tape still attached to the solid roll is held securely on the plastic fastener, making it easy to unroll the next time. — M. Parker

Great solution to a hair-pulling problem! — Heloise

CAMP SHOWERS

Dear Heloise: We campers all dislike waiting in a long line for a hot shower.

Our mom found a good way to shorten the time in the shower stall. Since it takes so long to dress in the showers (plus the risk of getting your clothes wet from a soppy floor), the girls now wear muumuu-type dresses or a beach robe, and the boys wear shorts.

Getting dressed, and the rest of the bit, is done back at the camp site.

Sure speeds up our family, anyway. — Joyce

KEEPING COOL

Dear Heloise: These hot summer days, for serving refreshments at picnics, ball games, group outings, etc., there is always the problem of keeping the lemonade and other beverages cold.

I save the gallon plastic milk jugs and wash them thoroughly. Before I'm going to use one, I pour in about 1½ inches of water and freeze it.

When the water is frozen, I pour in my drink and am ready to go. I never worry about the need and bother of cracking ice again, and the one large chunk of ice lasts longer than the little cubes or chips do. — Franklin, N.C.

COFFEE FILTER

Dear Heloise: Here's a hint for anyone with one of those cone-shaped filters for European coffeepots.

Cut the corner off an old pillowcase to fit the cone. It replaces those expensive paper filters and it can be washed and reused many times. — Regina Gregory

+ + +

I wouldn't have believed this worked, but I tried it and it's perfect! — Heloise

CANDLE CUPS

Dear Heloise: I have several votive candles, but when the candle burns down, it's hard to get the wax out and off the sides and bottom of the cups.

I hesitate to try too hard for fear of scratching or breaking the glass cups. Is there an easier way? — Kim W.

+ + +

Try setting the cups in hot water until the wax softens enough to remove it.

Before putting in another candle, though, rub the bottom and sides of the cup with a little cooking oil and see if that doesn't make removing the wax a little easier. — Heloise

+ + +

If you have a problem, Heloise wants to hear about it. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, she can't answer individual letters but she will answer your questions in her column whenever possible. Just write Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216.

Mother was right— Vegetables, fruits may help preserve health

By TOM LACHMAN
Hearst Feature Service

The National Academy of Sciences has put its stamp of approval on a theory that wise mothers have been practicing for centuries: fruits and vegetables are good for you.

More precisely, the academy has joined the chorus of experts who believe that dark-green leafy vegetables and deep-yellow fruits are linked with a reduced risk of many kinds of cancer, including lung, breast, bladder and skin. Conversely, the academy has determined that foods high in fat — such as ham, bacon, hot dogs and bologna — increase exposure to many known cancer-causing substances.

But Dr. Stanley Hamilton, assistant professor of patholgy at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, cautioned, "There are a constellation of factors that cause cancer. It's hard to establish one line."

Hamilton has been examining the relationship between beer consumption and colon (or large bowel) cancer. Generally, he said, colon cancer probably has a stronger association with diet than any other kind of cancer. As a pathologist, Hamilton examines human tissue for disease characteristics.

Hamilton said some of the most convincing evidence of a link between diet and cancer has been a comparison of the incidence of colon cancer among Western and Eastern populations. In the United States, Western Europe and Canada, people eat a lot of red meat, which is high in fat. Eastern countries such as China and Japan eat a much larger portion of fruits, grains and fish, which are low in fat.

The upshot is that colon cancer is far more prevalent among Westerners. According to the American Cancer Society, colon cancer caused 54,900 deaths in the United States in 1981, or 5 percent of the total deaths. There were 120,000 new cases of colon cancer reported in 1981.

Hamilton agrees with the consensus of opinion on diets and recipes that help reduce the risk of cancer. An excellent source for these recipes is a book called "The Anti-Cancer Diet," by Donald R. Germann. Hamilton endorsed several of the recipes in the book.

In Hamilton's own family diet, the byword is moderation. "I have not changed to an Eastern diet, but over the past few years my family has drastically reduced consumption of red meat and pork. Pork is even higher in fat content than beef. A lot of people can't stick to a meat-free diet. I like chicken, turkey and fish too much to give them up."

The book lists several meal plans that are not likely to force major changes in eating habits. The underlying principles are low fat, low cholesterol, high protein from varied sources, more bulk and few calories. Here are some suggested menus:

Breakfast: 1) Whole fresh strawberries with sugar, granola with skim milk, whole wheat toast, beverage. 2) Prune juice, French toast with sliced peaches, beverage. 3) Cantaloupe, shredded wheat, skim milk, honey, whole wheat toast, beverage.

Lunch: 1) Fruit salad made from cantaloupe, peaches, banana, blueberries and orange with nuts; slice of Swiss cheese, oatmeal bread, beverage. 2) Pizza on half English muffin (pizza recipe calls for layer of sliced skim milk mozzarella, sliced tomato, sprinkle of garlic salt, pepper, oregano and grated parmesan cheese baked in hot oven 10 to 15 minutes); cucumber spears, cantaloupe, beverage. 3) Small can salmon on lettuce or spinach leaves, carrot sticks and raw cauliflower flowerets, whole wheat bread, mandarin oranges with rasins, beverage.

China launches massive publicity campaign to aid census

By LIU HEUNG-SHING

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — With a $16 million publicity campaign to help them, census takers are two-thirds finished counting heads in China's most populous city. But some people are said to be still resisting the poll, including unwed mothers and people not authorized to live in this city of about 11 million.

Lu Hannong, an official of the Shanghai municipal census office, said in an interview earlier this week that 7.41 million Shanghai residents had been registered by the fifth day of the 10-day national count,

"So far most people have responded to the call of the government by being cooperative," Lu said.

In Peking, the official Xinhua news agency quoted Bai Jianhua, deputy census director, as saying the count "has gone more quickly and smoothly than anticipated."

But Bai, mentioning Shanghai in particular, said one of the greatest problems has been to avoid omitting China's vast numbers of transients, or counting them more than once.

The first census in 18 years officially began a week ago and ends Saturday. Before the end of September, it should be known exactly how many people live in the world's most populous nation, which has an estimated population of 1 billion.

Refining the census information is expected to keep government statisticians and 29 computers busy for another 2½ years.

The data on employment, education, child-bearing and age is considered vital to China's plans to feed, house, clothe, educate and raise the living standards of its people.

The national effort to make the count accurate has been embellished here with a $16 million propaganda campaign, including 200,000 color posters, 650 sets of color slides for various street committees, 30 million match boxes printed with census slogans and performances by 50 entertainment groups, Lu said.

The campaign has been less flamboyant in the relatively staid capital of Peking in the north and in the rice growing areas of China's populous heartland, southwestern Sichuan province. The extra effort is due in part to Shanghai's particular problems, and also reflects a difference in lifestyle among the regions.

Chinese sources said one counting problem involves disaffected youths who return to Shanghai without authorization from assignments in the remote northwestern Sinkiang region. While they are not supposed to be here, census regulations require anyone who has stayed in the city for more than one year to report for counting.

"With persistent political persuasion, many of the youths eventually do register," said one source, who asked not to be named. He did not describe what kind of persuasion was used.

China tries to keep people from moving into its already overcrowded cities by refusing to transfer the personal registrations that are the basis for monthly rations of grain, oil, meat and other items. But there are many in Shanghai without local registrations, depending on domestic work and other jobs that allow them to avoid official scrutiny.

"These peasants are very hard to track down. They move from household to household frequently," said census taker Wang Lili.

Bribes called 'a way of life' in oil field

GIDDINGS, Texas (AP) — Bribes, thefts and kickbacks have become a way of life in the oil field business, says Lee County District Attorney Charles Sebasta.

"I hate to say that but it's true," Sebesta said after grand jurors indicted seven people on commercial bribery and perjury charges that stemmed from an investigation into an alleged oil field kickback scheme.

"This seems to be the way of life for a majority of these people rather than the exception," said Sebesta.

Grand jury foreman Randell Moore of Giddings said the panel's nine-month review of cases of oil field manipulations, thefts and kickback schemes was enlightening.

"Kickbacks just seem to be part of the game," Moore said.

The indictments returned Tuesday focused on the alleged activities of Waymon Curtis Lane, 40, of Carlsbad, N.M., a former purchasing agent for the Clajon gas pipline company owned by Clayton Williams.

Sebesta estimated Clajon may have sustained losses of between $3 million and $8 million.

Grand jurors alleged Lane was paid bribes by Donnie Leon Key, 36, of Houston, the president of Southwest Valve and Fittings; and Durwood Platt, 62, of Conroe, the president of Oil and Gas Instruments Inc.

Lane was named in two indictments charging him with receiving bribes.

The indictments alleged Key and Platt gave Lane a car, pickup truck, television sets, video recorders, and other items in return for purchases of about $25 million for Clajon.

Sebesta and John Omohundro, director of security for the Williams companies in Midland, said they began the investigation in 1981 after an unidentified informant alleged Lane accepted payoffs from oil field suppliers.

Ruben Hope, Platt's attorney, said the lengthy civil and criminal proceedings against his client have almost put Platt out of business.

"It's a case of my 62-year-old client going out with a young man (Lane) and getting drunk with him, and Lane hit him up for a car," Hopes said. "And (Platt) did it. He's just that kind of guy."

Sam Wilson of Houston, Key's attorney, said his client would not comment on the charges.

Also indicted were Lane's wife Nancy, 39, charged as an accomplice to commercial bribery and for receiving a car; Robert Cole, 40, charged with delivering the car; Stephen Edward Post, 30, charged with delivering two shotguns to Lane; and Jimmy Earl Sheffield, 34, charged with perjury.

S&Ls move closer to offering brokerage services

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings and loan associations are moving closer to offering brokerage services to their customers for the first time.

Another hurdle was cleared Wednesday when the Securities and Exchange Commission agreed to issue a letter saying its staff will not recommend any enforcement actions, under securities laws, against the plan.

"This enables us to move forward and get into business," said Thomas Russo, lawyer for the group of S&Ls putting together the brokerage services for other savings and loans.

The savings and loans, however, still have to get approval from securities officials in states in which they plan to operate.

The securities industry has opposed the impending move of the S&Ls into the brokerage arena.

The Securities Industry Association, which represents 540 brokerage firms, threatened to pursue "whatever remedies are available to correct this situation," including possible legal action, according to spokeswoman Gwen King.

Savings and loans, as well as commercial banks, have complained that the brokerage houses have attracted investors' money with their high-paying money market mutual funds. Banks and S&Ls, in contrast, are restricted in the amount of interest they can pay on most accounts.

To help meet the competition, four savings and loans proposed last year forming a separate corporation to offer securities and investment advice to the public.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which regulates S&Ls, gave its approval to the plan in May, and the organizers of the INVEST service expect to start operating pilot programs in September.

The savings and loan associations founding the INVEST plan are Coast Federal Savings and Loan of Sarasota, Fla.; Perpetual American Federal Savings and Loan in Washington, D.C.; California Federal Savings and Loan in Los Angeles; and City Federal Savings and Loan of Elizabeth, N.J.

Dan McConnell, who will head the corporation offering INVEST, said 21 savings and loans and three mutual savings banks also have become financial sponsors of the program, and more than 400 thrifts have shown interest in subscribing to the plan.

As part of their discussion of the S&Ls' request, the SEC commissioners held a spirited exchange on their role in the growing controversy over the distinction between investment banking and commercial banking. The 1933 Glass-Steagall Act drew a line between the two types of banking, forbidding commercial banks to own, underwrite or deal in corporate stocks and bonds.

In line with the debate, the commission asked its staff to review existing money market funds in which there might be a question about the line between investment and commercial banking. Staff members said there are likely "dozens" of such funds.

Projected recovery for domestic car sales darken

DETROIT (AP) — The projected recovery for domestic car sales might not materialize until mid-1983, say auto industry analysts in the wake of a report that sales fell sharply in June.

John Hammond, analyst at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said Wednesday that if car sales don't increase in July and August after income tax cuts and increased Social Security payments take effect, the recovery will be postponed for 12 more months.

"There's nothing else on the horizon in the foreseeable next 12 months to spur sales," he said. "It's a yes-or-no type forecast."

Both the tax cut and Social Security increases took effect July 1.

A more pessimistic Arthur Davis, analyst at Prescott, Ball & Turben in Cleveland, Ohio, said no matter what happens in July, there will be "a continued weakness" in auto sales until mid-1983. It is a view he has held all year, although it is not shared by many of his colleagues, including Hammond.

A third analyst, Arvid Jouppi of Colin Hochstin Co. in Detroit, remained unshaken in his belief that recovery is imminent.

The comments followed reports that June car sales were down to 451,430, off 12.8 percent from 517,815 a year earlier.

At the half-year mark, the domestic carmakers' 1982 sales are off 11.3 percent from a year ago, from 3,308,469 to 2,934,833.

"We could see a small upward blip here (in July) if (industry giant General Motors Corp.) comes up with a sales program ... but you can't have a broad-based recovery in this year unless you sell the high-volume small cars to blue-collar workers which has not been the case," Davis said.

Consumers are waiting for interest rates to fall to 12 percent or 10 percent, Davis said.

"We don't expect that to happen soon, if ever," he said.

Pennzoil Co. finds North Dakota oil

HOUSTON, — Pennzoil Company reported a Red River formation oil and natural gas discovery in western North Dakota that tested 557 barrels of high-gravity oil per day on restricted choke.

The McKenzie County well, Little Tank 19-21 BN, also flowed 50 barrels of water and 1.2 million cubic feet per day of gas through a 16/64-inch choke with 1,300 pounds per square inch tubing pressure.

The Williston Basin discovery is producing 50-gravity oil from the Ordovician Red River "C" formation from a gross pay section between 13,470 and 13,514 feet.

Pennzoil is operator for the well and holds a 25 percent working interest prior to project payout. The remaining 75 percent working interest is owned by: Laguna Petroleum Corp., NRM Petroleum Corp., Mineral Development Inc., Vision Inc., Petroleum Acquisitions Corp., Arbusto Energy, and Ivory and Sime Oil and Gas, Inc.

Milestone Petroleum Inc., a Burlington Northern Inc. subsidiary, manages a royalty interest and can assume a 45 percent working interest after project payout. The Little Tank discovery is Pennzoil's fourth this year on Burlington Northern's McKenzie County block.

The Little Tank well is located a little over two miles from the nearest oil production, and six miles northwest of Bull Moose field, a previously announced Pennzoil discovery in the Mission Canyon and Red River formations.

UNC tests metal ore analyzer

RICHLAND, Washington — UNC Nuclear Industries reports development of a portable, direct-reading ore assay instrument for silver, as the second application of its Metals Analysis Probe, or MAP. The MAP for uranium has been used successfully in both exploration and mine control since its introduction last year.

UNC Nuclear Industries is a subsidiary of UNC Resources, a diversified resource and manufacturing company, parent company of U.N.C. Texas, Inc., Midland.

"The development of the silver MAP now makes possible fast, on-the-spot silver analyses for exploration, longhole probing, ore pile evaluation and grade control, " according to B. James Lowe, President of UNC's Systems and Service Division, where the MAP was developed. Lowe reports that the silver MAP will accurately and reliably assay silver at concentrations as low as one ounce per ton, making it an especially powerful tool for mine development and control.

The MAP, a highly-portable X-ray fluorescence assayer packaged into a rugged three-foot long, 1 1/4-inch diameter probe, gives a readout in a matter of seconds, while conventional assays often require weeks to be completed, Lowe noted.

The successful application of the MAP to silver is the second step in a UNC program which includes developing MAP systems for gold, tungsten, Molybdenum, lead and the rare earths. Further extensions of MAP technology may include a portable field assayer capable of multi-element analysis.

Forced retirement studied

AUSTIN — Involuntary mandatory retirement — have you learned to love it or would you rather leave it? Dr. Guy Manaster would like to know.

Manaster, professor of educational psychology at The University of Texas, is conducting a study for the new State Department on Aging on the effects of involuntary mandatory retirement. Already completed is a survey of national and international literature dealing with the subject, but now some case histories showing how such retirement changed Texans' lives are needed.

The confidential information will be used to gauge how frequent involuntary retirement really is in Texas, as well as its effects.

The literature survey trends to be very biased, so personal comments would be an aid in assembling a more balanced picture, in Manaster's opinion.

The changing retirement age, existence of better business pension plans and inflation are all playing a role in retirement decisions today, both from the individual's point of viwew and the view of business, he notes.

To share experiences with involuntary retirement, mail comments to Dr. Manaster, Department of Educational Psychology, UT Austin, Austin, Texas 78712.

Loffland christens ocean rig

TULSA — Loffland Brothers Company, oil industry pioneer of inland barge, offshore platform and mobile jackup rig drilling, has christened Ocean Master IV (OM IV), the first Loffland rig built in Japan, according to George W. Perry, executive vice president, international operations.

OM IV is a Baker Marine Corp. designed cantilever jackup rig (BMC-150) able to drill to 18,000 feet with five-inch drill pipe in 110 feet of water. Designated as Loffland's Rig 160, OM IV was manufactured and completed on schedule by Nippon Kokan K.K. (NKK) shipyard, Yokohama, Japan, site of the christening. The rig is the first of its class built under 1980 American Bureau of Shipping rules and to the rules of the U.S. Coast Guard.

SCR diesel-electric powered, the rig is equipped with four Caterpillar D-399 engines, a MidContinent U-914 drawworks and two Continental-Emsco FB-1600 mud pumps. It begins its first assignment in Abu Dhabi in the Arabian Gulf.

Operations Manager Richard Tucker will head Loffland's operation in Abu Dhabi, having transferred From Loffland's Venezuela operations. Other Loffland personnel also have been transferred to complement the Abu Dhabi staff.

Loffland Brothers offshore fleet of rigs now totals 27 with the addition on OM IV, making the company's worldwide land and sea inventory equal 129 rigs. Loffland Brothers, the largest drilling contractor, is a Kendavis Industries company.

Texaco strikes down south

HOUSTON — Texaco U. S. A. has made a new field discovery of natural gas and condensate in the south-central Rio Grande Embayment of south Texas.

The wildcat well, named No. 1 Barrera Estate, is located in southwestern Starr County, about 11 miles northwest of Rio Grande City. The well is 2.5 miles norhteast of Texaco's Draco Field, which produces natural gas and condensate from the Eocene Queen City formation. The discovery tested at a rate of 3.5 million cubic feet of natural gas and 36 barrels of condensate per day from the Queen City sands at selected intervals between 6,240 and 6,256 feet through a 14/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 3,021 pounds per square inch.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 9,017 feet.

South Texas helping hands

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — South Texas Drilling & Exploration, Inc. recently announced the formation of a Tax Recovery Act Stock Ownership Plan (TRASOP) for the benefit of its employees. A TRASOP is a type of employee stock ownership plan with certain tax benefits to the company.

Frost National Bank of San Antonio was appointed the trustee for the TRASOP and was given an initial amount of $25,000 with which to purchase the company's stock over a 30-day period beginning July 6, 1982. The company anticipates contributing a total of approximately $150,000 to the TRASOP for the purchase of the company's stock throughout the year.

South Texas Drilling & Exploration, Inc., listed on the American Stock Exchange under the ticker symbol SDR, is engaged in onshore and offshore drilling of oil and gas wells. South Texas is also actively involved in oil and gas exploration, development and production, with interests in oil and gas properties in Texas, Colorado, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

New Rabbit to debut this fall

TROY, Mich. (AP) — Volkswagen of America Inc. will introduce a high-performance version of the 8-year-old Rabbit subcompact in the 1983 model year, a top-ranking VW official says.

The Rabbit GTI, to debut in October, will have a powerful four-cylinder engine but will look like the typical Rabbit on the outside, said James R. Fuller, vice president of the Volkswagen Division of VW.

"It's almost an understatement the way it is designed," he said Wednesday in an interview. "That's the beauty of the car. It will have an immediate transference of image from the Rabbit."

The GTI has been sold in Europe for four years and has become such a success it is sold on an allocation system, he said.

Gas shows on Dearen Prospect

SALT LAKE CITY — Commodore Resources Corporation of Salt Lake City and Denver reported natural gas shows at a remote exploratory well 30 miles south of Baker in eastern Nevada.

The well, Outlaw Federal No. 1 in section 1, township 10 north, range 70 east, White Pine County, encountered the shows while drilling at a depth of approximately 3,000 feet in the Mississippian Chainman formation.

The shows consisted of methane, ethane and propane. They were associated with a lost circulation zone that was quickly controlled, the company said.

It is the first well to be drilled on the Dearen seismic prospect which encompasses 63,000 acres in White Pine County and in Millard County, Utah.

Commodore said that seismic data of the Dearen Prospect show closure on a significant structure which is a minimum of four miles in length, north-south, with approximately 3,000 to 5,000 feet of vertical relief. Formations expected to be penetrated include Permian Archturus and Ripe Springs; Pennsylvanian Ely; Mississippian Illipah, Chainman shale and Joanna limestone.

HNG subsidiary, Genesis Corp. announce find

HOUSTON — HNG Fossil Fuels Company and Genesis Petroleum Corporation recently announced the completion of a gas discovery well in 40 feet of water offshore Matagorda County.

Perforated in the Frio Sands formation from 10,283 feet to 10,301 feet, the Genesis No. 1, State Tract 406, flowed 4.59 million cubic feet of gas and 43 barrels of condensate per day on an 14/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 5,841 pounds per square inch. Absolute open flow was 25.5 million cubic feet per day.

Darnell to become division of American Peening Inc.

John Darnell and Associates, Midland, becomes a division of American Peening Inc. effective August 1. The decision to merge was made by the management of both companies.

American Peening was purchased by John Darnell and Associates in the first quarter of 1981. John Darnell and Associates is a supply house that specializes in selling and inventory of drill pipe.

American Peening is a service company for drill pipe and other tubular goods.

Partnership exchange offer extended

DALLAS (SWN) — May Petroleum Inc., a Dallas-based domestic oil and gas exploration and production company, announced that the exchange offer to participants in 18 oil and gas partnerships formed by it from 1973 through 1979 has been extended until 5:00 p.m., Dallas, Texas time on July 16, 1982 unless further extended.

Participants may exchange their partnership interests for units of limited partnership interests in May Energy Partners Ltd., cash, or in certain partnerships, for non-interest bearing notes. The consummation of the exchange offer for units is subject to certain conditions, including the listing of the units for trading on the American Stock Exchange and the acceptance of tenders of partnership interests having an aggregate "exchange value" of $30,000,000 (approximately 47 percent of the total exchange value of $63,957,000).

As of July 3, 1982, the exchange agent had processed responses from participants owning partnership interests representing 57.6 percent of the total exchange value. Of that percentage, 58.0 percent had accepted the offer for units, 28.7 percent had accepted the offer for cash or notes, and 13.3 percent had not accepted the offer.

Solar energy installation dedicated

DALLAS (SWN) — The world's first linear Fresnel lens (optical magnifying device utilizing prisms to concentrate the sun's rays) photovoltaic solar energy installation was dedicated today at the Dallas/Ft. Worth (D/FW) Airport. The system was designed and engineered by E-Systems, Inc. under contract to the U.S. Department of Energy, Energy Programs Division.

"This system is the most efficient commercial-size photovoltaic power plant ever installed," said Dr. Walter J. Hesse, Vice President and General Manager of E-Systmes Energy Technology Center.

The solar facility was built at a cost of $1.1 million and is the only total solar energy (electricity plus hot water) system installed at an airport.

The solar power plant uses 110 collector modules which concentrate the sunlight onto photovoltaic cells. The cells, in turn, produce direct current electricity which is then inverted to 60 cycle alternating current electricity by a unique advanced-technology transistorized power conditioning unit. Collectively, the system generates 27 KW of electricity which is used to power the emergency lights in the airport's Central Utilities Plant, which is where the project is installed. It generates about 140 KW of thermal hot water to preheat the boiler feed water used to generate steam for air conditioning the total airport complex.

E-Systems is currently under contract to deliver to Sandia Laboratories a 22 KW photovoltaic total energy system. In addition to the D/FW project, E-Systems also has advanced-technology solar energy programs in Crosbyton, Texas, Phoenix, Arizona and Edwards Air Force Base, California.

Diamond Shamrock to buy Sigmor

DALLAS (AP) — Diamond Shamrock will buy out Sigmor Corp., a gasoline retailer which now carries Diamond Shamrock products, both companies announced Wednesday.

Diamond Shamrock, an energy and chemicals company, already owns 21 percent of the San Antonio-based Sigmor, which operates about 600 service stations, primarily in Texas, and a modern 50,000 barrel-per-day refinery.

The two have signed a letter of intent that calls for .44 shares of Diamond Shamrock's convertible preferred stock to be exchanged for every share of Sigmor's outstanding stock.

The preferred stock will earn a dividend of 34 cents the first year and $2.07 per year thereafter. Each share of preferred is immediately convertible into one share of Diamond Shamrock common stock, the announcement said.

The trouble with the UIL is not enough Texans leave Texas

The trouble with the University Interscholastic League is that not enough Texans leave Texas.

Those who do return as the UIL's most enthusiastic supporters, after they've had a chance to see how things are elsewhere.

The UIL is the regulatory organization for Texas interscholastic competition, whether it be athletics, one-act plays or debate. As such it has been labeled dictatorial in its pronouncements, arbitrary in its punishments and inconsiderate of the rights and desires of its oppressed subjects.

Outraged citizens rank it somewhere between Attila the Hun and Adolph Hitler.

TEXANS WHO have had an opportunity to observe what goes on in the provinces come back singing the praises of the UIL they once criticized. "They give us the biggest and best organized athletic program in the country. No one has playoff set ups like we do," is the tenor of the praise.

To stay-at-homes, however, the UIL suffers from an unfavorable image, primarily due to misinformation as to how it operates.

Contrary to popular opinion, it does not instigate or conduct investigations of suspected offenders from far off Austin. And it does not declare violators of the athletic world innocent or guilty.

LIKE THE NCAA, the UIL is an organization of participating member shcools, serving to promote and regulate interscholastic competition. Its rules are adopted by voting administrators of participating schools. And changes in the rules are not based on a whim of a power-wielding UIL executive, but originate from the ranks and submitted to a vote.

The UIL does not charge or investigate offending schools. From experience, they won't touch any charges with a 10-foot pole. Offenses are detected and probed within the district or region. Guilt or innocence is determined at that level. Only when the members have conducted such a probe and have declared, "These guys are sin itself. Throw the book at them," will the UIL inflict what it considers commensurate disciplinary action. Actually, the district executive committee recommends punishment and the UIL will sometimes amend it, if it feels the punishment is too harsh or too light.

Rules adopted by the UIL frequently are a result of repeated and flagarant attempts to circumvent regulations already on the books, but which are found to have loopholes.

THE FALLEN transfer rule, for example, resulted from the practice of importing talent to play football by certain schools. It was no strange phenomena that certain communities experienced success year-after-year.

Inadvertently, the rule which required an athlete to sit out a year before competing worked some injustices, although the UIL members strove to correct them by studying each case individually at the district level.

Now, the UIL's ruling that prohibits varsity athletes from participating in instructional camps conducted by coaches moonlighting on vacation, has incurred the wrath of offended coaches and parents.

THE PREDICTABLE protests of those who contend their rights have being violated and usurped by the dicators in Austin have been dutifully parroted.

Ex-Chaparral cager drafted by NBA Bucks

Midland College had its first former player drafted by the National Basketball Association last week when Robert Tate was selected by the Milwaukee Bucks.

Tate, a native of Chicago, played for the Chaparrals on the 1978-79 team that took third in regional and posted a 21-12 record. And as a sophomore he played for the Chaps 27-6 club which lost to Western Texas College of Snyder in the Region V finals at the Chaparral Center.

Tate has played the last two seasons at Idaho State University. He was the 204th player selected and went in the ninth round.

When Tate left, his 22.53 per game scoring average was an MC record and his total of 721 points was an MC record. Both records were broken last season by Puntus Wilson.

In 1979-80, four of the six losses suffered by MC were at the hands of Western Texas, which went on to win the National Junior College Tournament championship at Hutchinson, Kan.

Coach Nolan Richardson took the five starters on that team with him when he took the head coaching job at the University of Tulsa and won the National Invitation Tournament title the next year.

Pryce shuts out Dodgers, 3-0

SAN ANTONIO—Kenneth Pryce, who languished in the bullpen the first half of the Texas League season, fired a six-hit shutout in beating the San Antonio Dodgers, 3-0, here Thursday night to put the brakes the Midland Cubs' three-game skid.

This was the fourth start in the second half for the San Diego native and marked the second time he has gone the route in compiling a 3-1 record since June 22. In his only loss, in 10 innings, Pryce pitched to two batters in the tenth.

The shutout was the third of the year by a Midland pitcher and marked only the second time this season that the Dodgers have been blanked. The first time was by the Jackson Mets.

THE WIN gives Midland an opportunity to come away from San Antonio tonight with a split of the six-game series.

Pryce walked two and struck out one in improving his record to 4-1 with four saves from his days as a reliever.

Fritz Connally gave Pryce the only run he needed when led off the seventh with a solo homer over the right field fence. San Antonio pitcher Paul Voigt got a change up high and Connally drove his 20th homer of the season down the left field line.

Carlos Lezcano followed with a double and Bruce Chaney also doubled to plate the run.

Midland's other run came in the ninth when Connally singled stretched his hitting streak to 11 with a double for the run. Diaz has hit in 16 of his last 18 games.

Baseball '82 is better than ever

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — As the baseball season passes its traditional Fourth of July midpoint, it's becoming obvious that the sport's first poststrike season is far different, and far better, than anyone would have dared expect.

Each day's league standings, not to mention the hallucinative Sunday averages, are enough to make any true fan rub his eyes and wonder if he's been transported through a black hole into some alternative baseball universe, one where the San Diego Padres and Seattle Mariners are, for the moment, pennant contenders, and the Atlanta Braves have the best record in the game.

In this strange yet wonderful new baseball realm:

— Fourteen teams are within 4 1-2 games of first place with the All-Star Game just a week away. Four other clubs, including the respective league champion Yankees and Dodgers, are also within 7 1-2 games of the lead. In all, 16 teams are at .500 or better, yet only one club is above .585. Nobody's great, but almost two-thirds of the teams in the game are good, or, at least, think they are.

— The poor National League West, with the promise of a mere three-team pennant race, is the game's least exciting division. The AL West has four clubs in its immediate race while the NL East has five. As for the ridiculously jammed AL East, six clubs are in a stampede there, and five of them actually look decent enough to hang in the pack until near the end.

— ROOKIES named Tony Pena and Willie McGee are No. 1 and 2 in the National League in batting, while Kent Hrbek leads the majors in slugging. Other rookie regulars who would be heralded in any other season — Steve Sax, Johnny Ray, Von Hayes, Dave Hostetler and Cal Ripken — are practically lost in the shuffle, although all of these players, at present, either project to hit .300, have 90 RBI or hit 25 homers.

— The best statistical bullpen in the sport in the first half, with a combined ERA of under 2.00 in more than 70 appearances, is a trio of rookie right-handers named Chiffer, Show and DeLeon. Their first names (Floyd, Eric and Luis) are as yet unknown, except in San Diego.

— The two most pleasant surprises of the year — the Padres and Mariners — have both been built with players stolen at bargain rates from hot-to-trade Yankee owner George Steinbrenner. San Diego thanks him

Officials' lot unhappy

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

"When constabulary duty's to be done, a policeman's lot is not a happy one."

Gilbert and Sullivan authored that bit of musical philosophy some years ago for The Pirates of Penzance. It still rings true today in the distinctly non-operatic world of sports.

We live in an orderly world, a society of rules. In sports, the job of enforcing those rules is assigned to the officials.

They carry various titles — umpires, referees, judges. But those are just neat little labels. In reality, these people are the constables of the world of fun and games, the policemen who uphold law and order.

Sometimes, as Gilbert and Sullivan noted, their lot is not a happy one. Aggravation comes with the territory.

"This is the only job in the world where you have to be perfect the first day and then improve after that," says National League umpire Eric Gregg.

BUT EARL Weaver, the fiery manager of the Baltimore Orioles, suggests some baseball umpires aren't so perfect. In fact, Weaver says, some of them ... shhh, not so loud ... don't even know the rule book. That's why he tore up a copy one night a couple of years ago and then dramatically tossed it in the air like so much confetti.

It was a good show, even if the umps weren't amused. Weaver's theatrics were followed by a quick thumb, giving him the rest of the night off to think over his act.

The umpires knew the rule about ejections.

Knowing the rule book is no guarantee that a game will go smoothly. Hall of Fame hockey referee Bill Chadwick says officials must use common sense.

"If you refereed strictly by the book without interpreting the rules," Chadwick says, "you'd have nobody on the ice and fewer people in the building. You have to use your head for something besides a hat rack."

There was an uproar over NHL referee Wally Harris' work in the Stanley Cup playoffs, when he let the Vancouver Canucks play a clutch-and-grab game that sometimes resembled a wholesale mugging on ice. Other refs whistled the same tactics for penalties.

Confronted with that conflict, NHL President John Ziegler offered an explanation.

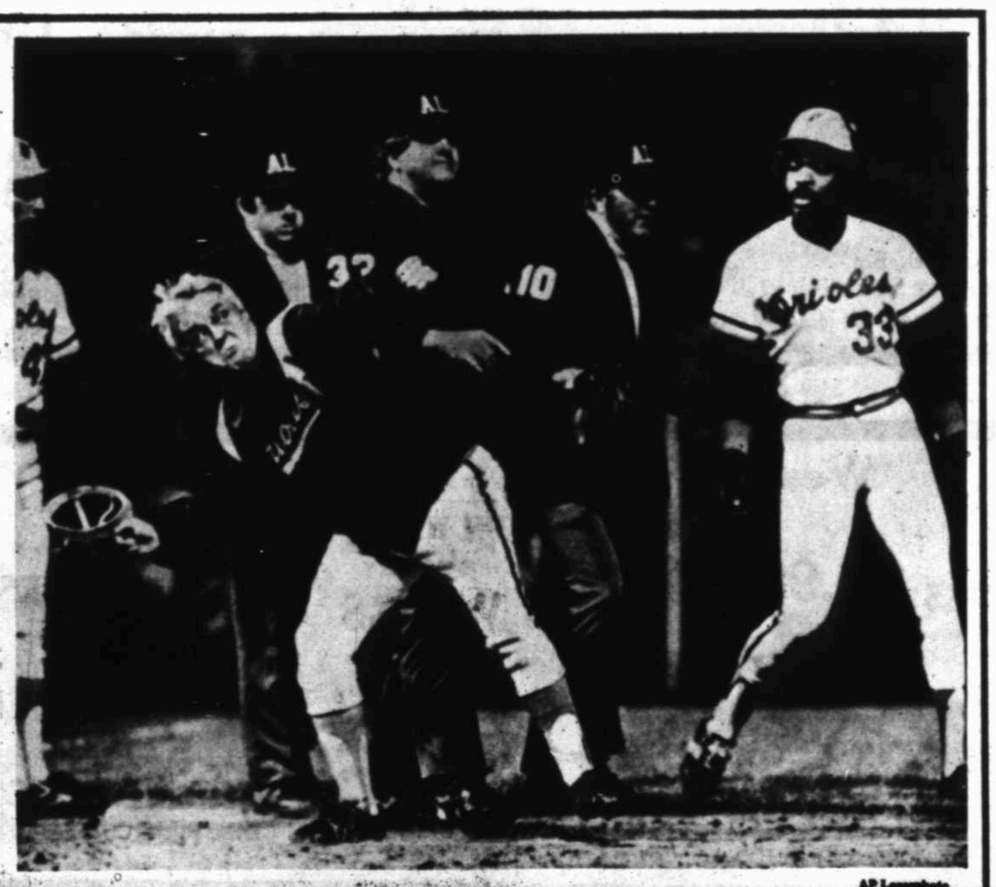

"One of the things people don't realize is that each referee has a little different standard built into his own personality and what we try to do is not make everybody a robot," the NHL boss said.

IN OTHER words, holding isn't always holding. The same thing is true in other sports.

According to the baseball rule book, the strike zone stretches from a batter's armpits to the top of his knees. Sounds simple enough, but for years umpires in the National League had a lower strike zone than their counterparts in the American. That may have been caused by the bulging, balloon-type chest protectors worn by the AL umps, which might have obscured full sight of the low strike. Now, new umps must wear the chest protectors under their shirts and the strike zone variations are narrowing.

As is generally the case in law enforcement, sports officiating is not the most highly paid or glamorous of professions. Yet, there are always plenty of arbiters to go around.

Angry Earl Weaver throws hat, claiming some umpires don't even know the rule book.

Abila meets Muniz in first 8-rounder

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

In five professional fights, Midland boxer Richard Abila has scored five victories, three of which have been by knockout. Friday night in Beaumont he'll go after No. 6 when he faces Houston's Enrique Muniz.

Since he stepped into the ring as a professional several months ago, Abila has been brought along at a slow pace by his manager and promoter, not too many rounds and against opponents that have yet to really establish themselves. Friday night will be a slightly different story.

This will be his first eight rounder and Abila's last two fights have been his longest, both six rounds, but now he and manager Rick Fleetwood feel that he is ready for the longer more demanding bout.

" I'm ready for it. I should be anyway," Abila said before his workout Tuesday night at the Midland Boys Club. "All I do is box. I should be ready for 50 rounds as much as I train. I've had two fights that went all six rounds and I was still feeling good at the end, still strong."

A SECOND difference will be his opponent, Muniz, who has been around the pro ranks long enough to build up a 19-8 record.

"We're going to have a kid with five pro fights fighting a guy with a lot of ring experience," said Fleetwood. "Richard is expected to learn from him."

Neither Fleetwood nor Abila have seen Muniz fight, that's one of the hardships a young fighter has to overcome, the lack of pre-fight scouting. They have depend on word-of-mouth and information they can pick up from an opponent's past fights.

And, sometimes that can go for naught. A last minute substitution isn't uncommon. In a recent fight of Abila's when his original opponent backed out for some reason and a kid from Las Vegas by the name of Juan Belloz stepped in. As it turned out, Belloz was 10-0 with eight knockouts to his credit, but the real surprise came when the bell rang and Fleetwood and Abila discovered he was left handed.

"I was surprised that he was left handed," said Abila. "I said, I'm in trouble now."

BUT THE trouble didn't last long as Abila dominated the fight and won by a decision at the end of six rounds, six rounds that Fleetwood never would have accepted had he known all the vital stats.

Getting back to the opponent at hand, Fleetwood said, "His (Muniz') biggest fight that I know of was about a year ago when he fought Billy Robledino who is ranked seventh in the world by the WBC (World Boxing Council)," said Fleetwood. "Muniz fought him tough from what I heard, a hell of a good fight until the eighth round when he was knocked out. I've heard he can take a punch and can hit hard. He has a lot of power. I think Richard's speed and power can take him though,."

"I don't know anything about this guy," said Abila. "I'll have to stick and move and if he goes down that will be his problem."

THE THREAT of the one-punch take out has given Abila his "stick and move, stick and move," battle plan which should take advantage of his exceptional speed.

His mental attitude is also being helped by his sparring partner, a new professional boxer to the Midland area from Pamona, Calif., Amos Taylor, who is about to debut as a pro later this

Shreveport defeats Arkansas

By Associated Press

Rob Deer's three-run homer highlighted a five-run first-inning outburst by Shreveport, but the Captains had to get some clutch relief pitching to hang on for a 7-6 Texas League baseball victory over the Arkansas Travelers.

In other Texas League action Wednesday night, Midland beat San Antonio, 3-0. The other scheduled games, El Paso at Amarillo and Tulsa at Jackson, were postponed because of rain.

The rain may have been welcomed by Tulsa and Jackson players following their record breaking 23-inning contest Tuesday night. Tulsa whipped Jackson, 11-7, in a game that lasted six hours and 39 minutes, the longest time it ever took to finish a Texas League game.

The Captains had a 7-0 lead after three inning, but Arkansas mounted a furious comeback attempt, scoring four runs in the fourth on a two-run double by Luis Ojeda and a two-run single by Mike Wolters.

Billy Martin names Eckersley to start

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston's Dennis Eckersley will start and relief aces Dan Quisenberry of Kansas City and Rollie Fingers of Milwaukee are being counted on for late-inning support when the American League tries to halt a 10-year dry spell in the major league baseball All-Star game.

They head the eight-man AL pitching staff selected today. Oakland Manager Billy Martin and AL President Lee MacPhail also chose two other bullpen specialists, Mark Clear of Boston and Rich Gossage of the New York Yankees, for the staff that will go against the National League Tuesday night in Montreal.

Joining the four relievers are starters Eckersley, Jim Clancy of Toronto, Ron Guidry of New York and Floyd Bannister of Seattle. Martin said in Oakland late Wednesday night that he planned to start sidearming right-hander Eckersley against the National League's predominantly right-handed-hitting lineup, although no official league announcement was made.

The National League also named an eight-man staff Wednesday, including Fernando Valenzuela of Los Angeles, who leads the major leagues with 12 victories, and Steve Carlton of Philadelphia, an 11-game winner. Also on the NL staff are Steve Rogers of Montreal, who leads the league with 2.04 earned run average, Phil Niekro of Atlanta, Cincinnati teammates Mario Soto and Tom Hume, Steve Howe of Los Angeles and Greg Minton of San Francisco.

month.

"The guy won't go eight rounds with Richard," said Taylor who has first-hand knowledge of Abila's speed and punching ability. "He'll (Muniz) will try and take him out early. I think Richard will frustrate him by moving and working the body. Since he's a slugger, you can take out his body."

Taylor is just working as Abila's sparring partner until after the Abila-Muniz fight and then, according to Fleetwood, "he'll go into his own training, will train for his own career. He's been a big help to Richard because one of the things that has hurt Richard has been a lack of sparring partners.

"Amos will be part of our stable here in Midland," continued Fleetwood. "We've signed him as well as Dan Levario from Pecos who is a three-time state Golden Gloves champion and lost in the national finals one year. Dan and Amos will both make their pro debuts on July 26 in Odessa at the coliseum (Ector County Coliseum)."

Except for his last bout, which was featured on an ESPN fight card, the fight in Odessa will be the first chance that Midland fight fans will have to see Abila fight. It won't be a fight as long as Friday night's fight in Beaumont is scheduled for because Abila has a second eight-rounder scheduled shortly after the July 26 card and Fleetwood doesn't want to take chances on Abila getting cut or worn out. Odessa's David Bates will also be on the card.

IN HIS short career, Abila has caught the eye of a lot of people in the boxing game and there has been a lot of talk about a possible Midland boxing card featuring Abila once he reaches main-event status, the 10 or 12-round level. That is a prospect Abila is looking forward to seeing become a reality.

"I'm very interested in a fight in Midland," he said. "It's my home town and it'll help pick up my spirits. It would be great to hear the crowd chanting 'Richard, Richard.'"

Well, they probably already are, but it's kind of hard to hear them from Beaumont, Ft. Worth or Lake Charles, La., sites of his previous fights. At least it's hard until after the fact.

Sambito surgery complicated

HOUSTON (AP) — Elbow surgery on Houston Astros' pitcher Joe Sambito was more complicated than doctors first anticipated, a team spokesman said.

Sambito, once the ace of the Astros' star-crossed relief corps, was recovering at Los Angeles' Centinela Hospital today after undergoing surgery Wednesday, said Astros spokesman Mike Ryan.

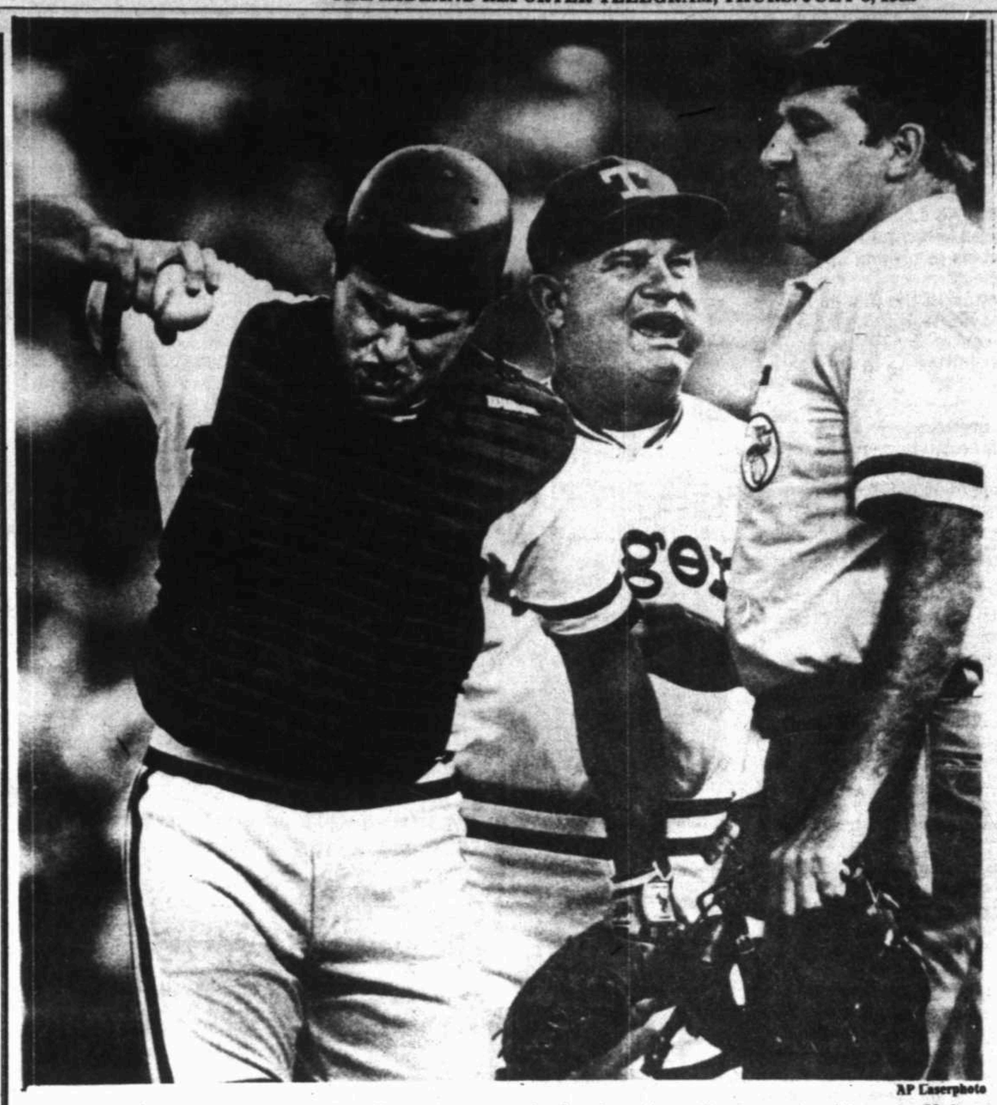

Doctors originally had planned to remove a bone chip from Sambito's left elbow, Ryan said.

But the medial collateral ligament also had to be replaced by a tendon from the right leg and the ulna nerve in the elbow relocated, Ryan said.

"Everyone had been prepared for this so it didn't come as a great shock," Ryan said.

Sambito, 29, of Treasure Island, Fla., will be hospitalized three to four days, Ryan said. Sambito will not be allowed to pitch for at least three months, he said.

The six-year veteran has not pitched since an April 27 game against St. Louis and has been on the disabled list since May 20.

Texas Rangers catcher Jim Sundberg is so upset he yells, "fiddlesticks" while Manager Don Zimmer asks plate umpire Vic Voltaggio if he knows where the nearest spittoon is. Voltaggio is cautioning Sundberg, "Temper, temper."

Competition among umps is stiff

There are three schools, two in Florida and one in California, which train baseball umpires. The courses runs about six weeks and there is no shortage of recruits, with about 300 in training at any one time. Of that group, the top 33 win assignment to professional leagues.

Minimum pay ranges from $1,000 a month in the rookie league to $1,700 a month at the highest minor league level, and an ump can expect to spend anywhere from six to eight years before reaching the majors. Salaries improve drastically at the top, with major league umps making $26,000-$75,000, depending upon seniority.

Basketball officials develop in the summer leagues and the network of pro-am leagues that exist in many National Basketball Association cities. A ref advancing up the ladder can make $18,000-$65,000 in the NBA.

In hockey, the junior and affiliated minor leagues that populate Canada's pin-dot towns generate officials. At the NHL level, they earn $25,000-$60,000 and, just as in baseball and basketball, there is no shortage of candidates.

Nobody spends more time on the field than the officials. They never sit down. Three outs and the sides change in baseball. The offense and defense only play half the time in football. Basketball and hockey players shift in and out of the game. But the officials stay, from start to finish, no matter how long it takes.

Retired NL ump Ed Sudol had good reason to shudder whenever he was assigned to a series involving the New York Mets. During his career, Sudol found himself stationed behind home plate, complete with chest protector, mask and shin guards, for the longest games in the Mets' adventurous history. They included contests lasting 25 innings (against St. Louis in 1974), 24 innings (against Houston in 1968), and 23 innings (against San Francisco in 1964).

Garvey streaks toward Joe Sewell's 1,103 in row

An AP Sports Analysis
By HAL BOCK

The Streak is past 1,000 games now and growing.

Every once in a while it is threatened by the aches and pains that develop over the April to October grind of a baseball season — a hyperextended elbow, the flu, a pulled muscle, a migraine headache.

Steve Garvey plays through them all and The Streak continues.

If he stays healthy, he will pass Joe Sewell (1,103) in the final week of this season, and two weeks into next season, he will move past Billy Williams (1,117), who holds the National League record. The only question is whether Garvey still will be in the National League then.

He is in the final season of a six-year contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers that pays him about $300,000 annually. Considering today's baseball economics, that's a bargain price for a player of his ability. It would be entirely understandable if Garvey expected to get that adjusted in his new contract. But Dodgers' management has not put his negotiations at the top of their list of priorities — and that irks him.

"WHEN I signed in 1977, I was among the 10 or 12 best-paid players in baseball," he said. "Now, I'm not in the top 90. That's OK. I signed and I was satisfied. I don't believe in renegotiation. But there has to be some reciprocity."

The club has chosen to low-key Garvey's situation. It has talked only occasionally, and then at very preliminary stages, with his agent, Jerry Kapstein.

"If I were the Dodgers, I would have come to me in November 1979 and said, 'Steve, we appreciate what you've done for the club. Let's sign one last contract.' That would have been before (Gary) Carter signed and (Fred) Lynn signed and (George) Foster signed."

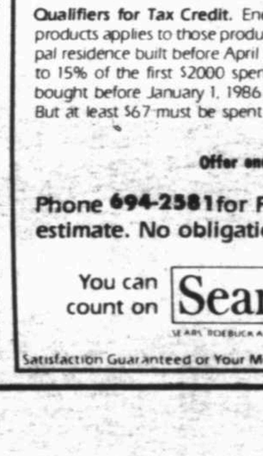

The bonanza contracts signed by Carter, Lynn and Foster have changed the financial picture considerably.

Baines hits three homers

Chisox Lamp blanks Tigers

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

Harold Baines may be little a relucant when it comes to taking a bow. Dave Winfield isn't.

Baines belted three consecutive home runs Wednesday night, capping the binge with an eighth-inning grand slam, as the Chicago White Sox routed the Detroit Tigers 7-0 behind the seven-hit pitching of former Midland Cub Dennis Lamp.

Winfield, who has been on a home run barrage of his own over the last nine games, slammed a three-run shot in the first inning as the New York Yankees edged Oakland 5-3 and denied Billy Martin his 1,000th career victory as a manager.

It was the first time the 23-year-old Baines had ever hit three home runs in a game, but his reaction was rather restrained.

"It felt good inside, but I didn't jump up and down," said Baines, who added that his teammates "practically pushed me up the stairs" to acknowledge the cheers of the crowd after the grand slam.

Winfield wasn't asked by the Oakland crowd to take a bow, but he took the opportunity to lash out at Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, who criticized the outfielder as failing to live up to "superstar status."

"I think he spoke too soon," said Winfield of Steinbrenner's comments. "But I want to make it clear to everyone, that this isn't a motivation tool for me."

Winfield also was upset by his failure to gain a starting spot on the American League All-Star team, selected by the fans.

"I'd have voted for me to play," said Winfield, who is hitting .308 with 15 home runs.

Baines started his home run barrage with a leadoff shot in the fifth inning off Detroit starter Jerry Ujdur to give the White Sox a 1-0 lead. He increased the margin to 2-0 with his eighth home run of the season in the seventh inning, another leadoff blast off Ujdur, 1-5.

Lamp, 6-3, struck out seven and walked none in going the distance for only the second time this season.

Yankees 5, A's 3

Roger Erickson, 6-7, worked seven innings, scattering six hits and striking out six in picking up the victory.

Oakland made it 3-1 in bottom of the first on Rickey Henderson's triple and Dwayne Murphy's groundout. They added an unearned run in the fifth. Jeff Burroughs hit a pinch hit homer for the A's in the eighth.

Twins 11, Brewers 8

Gary Gaetti slammed a three-run homer to highlight a six-run second inning as Minnesota pounded out 15 hits and outlasted Milwaukee to post its fourth victory in the last five games.

The Twins, who have the worst record in the majors this season, also got a two-run homer from Tim Laudner.

Robin Yount and Ted Simmons crashed two-run homers for the Brewers, who slipped into second place in the AL East, a game behind Boston.

Red Sox 8, Rangers 5

Dwight Evans and Jim Rice crashed consecutive fifth-inning home runs to lead a 16-hit barrage and Boston withstood a five-run Texas ninth inning to move back into first place in the AL East.

Boston broke a scoreless tie in the fifth against Texas starter Charlie Hough, 7-6, as Jerry Remy singled, Evans crashed his 10th homer and Rice followed with his 12th.

Boston added four more runs in the seventh and another in the ninth before Texas rallied on Larry Parrish's second grand slam in four days and Bill Stein's pinch homer off reliever Mark Clear.

Indians 8, Angels 6

Rick Waits pitched five-hit ball for six innings to pick up his first victory of the season and Von Hayes belted a two-run homer as Cleveland edged California, extending the Angels' losing streak to eight games and snapping the Tribe's five-game skid.

California scored five runs in the seventh on a two-run homer by Fred Lynn and Reggie Jackson's three-run shot off Dan Spillner, who recorded his 10th save. It was Jackson's 18th of the season and his third in the last five games.

Royals 3, Blue Jays 1

Larry Gura tossed a four-hitter and Willie Aikens and Jerry Martin slammed solo home runs as Kansas City posted its sixth victory in the last seven games.

Gura, 10-4, struck out two and walked one, while giving up Jesse Barfield's seventh home run of the season. Hard-luck Blue Jays starter Jim Clancy, 7-6, yeilded five hits in taking the loss.

Mariners 8, Orioles 7

Todd Cruz delivered a two-out, ninth-inning single to score pinch-runner Bobby Brown with the winning run as Seattle beat Baltimore.

The victory pushed the Mariners six games over .500, their best mark ever, at 44-38, giving Seattle its 25th come-from-behind victory.

Baltimore took a 3-0 lead in the second inning on an RBI single by Joe Nolan and Al Bumbry's two-run single. John Lowenstein added a three-run homer in the third.

Seattle's Dave Henderson had a two-run double and scored twice.

Baseball shows no signs of '81

profusely for Ruppert Jones (86 runs produced) and Tim Lollar (8-2). Seattle is in George III's debt for three-quarters of the starting rotation that has the third-best ERA in the league — young Jim Beattie (2.61) and Gene Nelson, plus reliable old castoff Gaylord Perry.

— THE FRANCHISE with the best record in baseball in 1981, the Cincinnati Reds, now stands 24th out of 26 in winning percentage. And the two clubs with the most frequently praised starting pitching this spring — Oakland and Houston — each stand next to last in team ERA in their respective leagues.

— Oh, yes. The Boston Red Sox are in first place.

All this divine madness, you say, cannot last. Not only will the Padres and Mariners wilt, but so will the other down-so-long imposters like the Braves, Cardinals and White Sox. Why, say the cynics, the Tigers, losers of 17 of their last 21, have already showed the approved and time-tested way to fold a tent. Can the rest of these pipe-dream, baling-wire outfits, like the Bosox — who have dropped from third in the majors in ERA to 18th in just two weeks, thanks to Milwaukee — be far behind?

The central point of this season, however, is not that some of these romantic underdog teams, and rookie flashes, will naturally fade. Rather, the gist of 1982 is that more previously homely teams have shown more improvement, and stayed afloat longer already, than in any season in memory.

While the NFL has struggled for an artificial parity, baseball has, almost by accident, come upon a marvelous competitive balance through, it must be assumed, the open marketplace workings of free agentry.

What if they allowed camp for varsity athletes?

Even though the Supreme Court has upheld the UIL ruling, it is still kicking around in Texas courts and the verdict remains out.

But what if varsity athletes were eligible to attend these summer camps presently catering to improving the skills of younger or less advantaged players?

Instead of relaxed summer National Guard maneuvers, it could be a case of baring the warheads in preparation for all-out conflict.

If varsity athletes were eligible for summer camp in the sport in which they compete, it's quite possible that no coach would dare not to have a camp of his own, not only to keep up with the opposition, but to keep someone else from tinkering with the style of a player with whom he had worked for months during the regular season.

INSTEAD OF a leisurely luxury, summer camp could become an absolute necessity. It no longer would be a matter of choice. It would be a command appearance. Every varsity athlete would be there and camps could, by gerrymandering of assistant coaches, last all summer.

In such a case, could a coach afford to charge his players when attendance for him and the player would be virtually mandatory?

And what about the athletes at whom present camps are directed, the young and those less-gifted? What would become of them? Would the coach, pressured to keep his program competitive, snarl, "Go away, kid, I don't have time for you."

Of course, it couldn't happen. Coaches have too much sense to risk such all-out havoc, unless someone accidentally pushed the button.

Comer on disabled list

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Ranger relief pitcher Steve Comer was placed on the 21-day disabled list, effective Wednesday, after breaking a bone in his right foot, team officials said.

Comer was injured when he stepped on a drain while walking from the bullpen to the Texas clubhouse after Tuesday night's 4-3 loss to Toronto.

"I've walked over it a lot of times, probably every night on the way from the bullpen," Comer said. "I wasn't paying any attention and just kind of turned it."

X-rays found a small fracture on top of the foot, said Comer.

The Rangers called up rookie pitcher Dan Boitano from their Denver affiliate in the American Association. Boitano was 5-5 with four saves and a 4.87 earned run average at Denver.

Comer, who will be in a cast at least two weeks, was 0-3 with a 3.66 ERA in 24 appearances for Texas.

Dyer Electronics says "thank you" for making their recently completed fiscal year the biggest in their history!

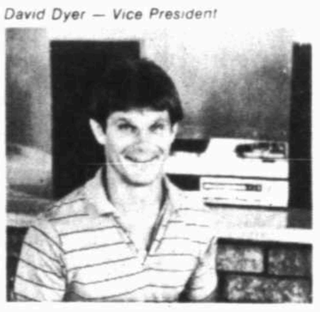

Because of the tremendous support and patronage of our many customers throughout the state, Dyer's sales volume established new records for the 81-82 fiscal year. Other milestones for Dyer during the year include the opening of new stores in College Station, Waco, and San Antonio, bringing the total number of retail outlets in Texas to eighteen. In a cost-conscious move, the company's San Antonio headquarters were relocated to a new building that includes over 24,000 square feet of warehouse space. In a further attempt to reduce overhead, Dyer purchased a long-haul freight truck to keep the stores in East, West, and Central Texas supplied at the lowest possible cost. David Dyer assumed the office of Vice President during the year and is primarily responsible for store operations.

Considering the concurrent economic state, the year was one of unprecedented growth and success. "Dyer the Discounter" pledges to keep doing what he's been doing for the past eight years: selling the best name-brand home and car stereos at the lowest possible discount price. That's what has made Dyer Electronics the fastest growing stereo discounter in Texas!

Jerry Dyer — President

David Dyer — Vice President

And Dyer starts a new year by giving you the strongest price guarantee in the industry!

While some stereo dealers "guarantee to beat any price or give you $100", then list 200 exceptions, Dyer's Price Protection Policy is simple and straightforward. And since we have more merchandise and more sales per year than most stereo dealers, we even guarantee you the lowest Dyer price. Now more than ever ANY day is a good day to buy a new home or car stereo at Dyer Electronics. Look around, shop around, then come to "Dyer the Discounter" and buy for less!

PRICE PROTECTION POLICY

Naturally, Dyer will beat any legitimate competitive price on any regularly stocked item in like condition from any authorized dealer offering comparable services.

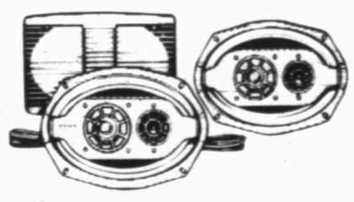

In addition, Dyer guarantees you the lowest DYER PRICE! Here's how it works: if any product you purchase from Dyer is advertised in the same market by Dyer at a lower price within 30 days, bring the ad and your receipt and the difference will be cheerfully refunded. "Dyer the Discounter" really does sell for less every day!

This PRICE PROTECTION POLICY is just one reason why satisfied customers all over Texas say "a Dyer Deal is the best deal for you."

JIM MURRAY

Reuss' success clouded by one misguided pitch

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

It was the worst pitch Jerry Reuss threw all season, low, inside, a ball all the way. It was a good pitch to bunt, which is all the hitter was trying to do.

And, it may have won the Dodgers the pennant and, as it turned qut, the world championship.

The situation was this: It was the top of the third in a meaningless game in Dodger Stadium in October. The Houston Astros were leading the second-half pennant chase by seven games and would face the Dodgers in a mini-playoff anyway. The batter was Don Sutton, an 11-9 pitcher with an ERA of 2.60. The Astros would need him in the upcoming playoffs.

They weren't to have him. The pitch splattered against his right kneecap as he stepped up to bunt. There was a sickening crack. Sutton was out for the season.

THERE WAS some public outcry in Texas. That was only the fourth batsman Jerry Reuss had hit all year. In 1981, in a full season with 29 starts and 37 games, Jerry Reuss had not hit any.

Jerry Reuss, the National League's pitcher of the week two weeks ago, is a subscriber to the baseball theory that, "The best pitch in baseball is the one right where you want it to be." But the pitch that hit Sutton wasn't one of them. Reuss, at the time, was on his way to his 10th victory, and you don't win 10 victories by hitting batters on the kneecap. Besides, his record shows, hitting batters was not part of his arsenal.

The mystery of Jerry Reuss is how such a good pitcher can trickle through the fingers of so many franchises before finding a permanent start in a rotation. A rule of thumb in baseball is, the worse a player, the more teams he plays for. Still, Jerry Reuss has been in double figures eight times in his Major League career. He was 16-13 with Houston in 1973, and led the league in starts, and they traded him to Pittsburgh for a back-up catcher. At Pittsburgh, Reuss won 18 games one year and threw six shutouts. Two years later, the Pirates could only find spots for him in parts of 83 innings. The Dodgers got him for a sore-arm pitcher, Rick Rhoden, that the Pirates had to send down to Portland by the next season.

USUALLY, IN cases like this, the Major League tendency is to look for the "Good arm, no head" categorization. But, Jerry Reuss was no disco dandy, he was responsible enough to be the team player representative during the tough management negotiations and the strike. Physically, he was super-imposing. Six-five, 225 pounds, with flaxen hair and moustache to match, the movies would cast him as a Potsdamer Guard or Russian cavalryman.

Jerry Reuss thinks he knows what the trouble was. "I thought all there was to pitching was that you showed up every fourth day, put the glove on, and showed them the fastball. If they hit it, fine. They hit good pitches. If they didn't, you had four days to be a hero."

Gradually, the suspicion dawned on him that pitching was more than a part-time job. After all, a concert pianist didn't spend his time in bowling alleys between starts. Reuss decided pitching was like a weapons system, a lot of preparation went into it before you began firing.

"You see the numbers on my back?" Reuss demands, pointing to his uniform No. 41. "Well, that stands for four days of preparation and one day of operation."

IN OTHER words, Reuss contends, pitching a game doesn't start when the Star Spangled Banner dies down. It begins with the ninth inning of the previous game, four days before. "You program your running, your Nautilus machine workouts, your concentration. You train for it like a fighter." In other words, Reuss contends, you go from drawing board to construction. A successful pitcher is more than a long left arm.

For instance, Reuss, whose fastball has better than 90-mile-an-hour velocity, used to rely heavily on it for strikes. He fanned 177 one year. Unfortunately, that year, he also led the league in walks, 117. Last year, he walked only 27.

"My idea of a great game is a 70-minute, 80-pitch game, in which you throw 21 groundballs, walk none – and win."

JERRY REUSS threw such a game in Candlestick Park in 1980. It would have been a perfect game – no hits, no runs, no errors, no man reached first base – except for a shortstop error on one of the 21 groundballs. He would have thrown a perfect game this year, too, except he allowed a leadoff double before retiring 27 straight.

Reuss won Game 5 against Houston last year, and Game 5 of the World Series. He beat Nolan Ryan in one game, and Ron Guidry in the other, probably the two most-important games of the season.

But, the irony remains, that the pitch that put him in positon to throw them was probably the one pitch Reuss had not planned on all year.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, July 9, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Football running great O.J. Simpson celebrates this birthday with you. Also born on this date: Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine. Although you prefer working for others, you might make more money if you had a business of your own. When the opportunity arises to open a new concern, you will have to make the hard decision. Showcase your artistic talents. Wider public recognition will bring you greater financial security. You receive valuable help from your relatives when you need it the most. Your reserved manner sometimes interferes with romance, but you are generally content. Try to open up a bit more!

AIRES (March 21-April 19): Adopt a down-to-earth attitude towards business and career matters. Expert advice proves valuable. Recycle old ideas to reap new profits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Bigger profits are possible if you work harder to streamline business operations. A legacy or small windfall gives you a reason to celebrate!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your flexibility and optimism enable you to enlist new members for your work team. Give free rein to your creativity. Self-discipline sees you through a possible family crisis.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Finances are sensitive now. Seek experts' advice. Complete odd jobs and tighten securitymeasures to safeguard secrets. Protect your ideas by putting them in writing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Cooperate with new people to find a solution to an old dilemma. Give credit where it is due. A quiet, relaxed way of life brings you the greatest job.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New contacts supply the funding for a pet project. Straighten out a communication problem and you will strengthen an important professional or personal relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Sort out any domestic disagreements before leaving for work. Your self-confidence returns. Be careful not to press rudely ahead. Clear up a misunderstanding about money.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A misunderstanding causes havoc. Do not cast the first stone. Be quiet and wait until all of the facts are known. Your popularity soars.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your friends are willing to help in any way they can. A new romantic experience proves enjoyable, memorable. Financial pressures begin to ease.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your work load leaves you weary, but it is important that a child has your attention this evening. New propositions merit further investigation before you give your approval.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get important papers signed before the weekend. Romance burns brightly. Your co-workers are sensitive to your situation and will be more cooperative than usual.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Nothing should stop you from carrying out your plans today. Even wishes can be turned into reality if you work hard enough. Keep spending in check.

Look beyond the obvious. Quite often, you can combine your chances to give yourself an extra edge that could make all the difference between success and failure.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass
6 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

However, that is not the limit of declarer's options. There is another chance which is not so easy to spot. Declarer can also make his contract if East has either a singleton or doubleton spade honor!

The winning line is to take the opening lead in dummy and lead a low spade to the eight! West wins the king and knocks out declarer's remaining diamond stopper. Now declarer cashes the king of clubs in case the queen drops. When that doesn't succeed, declarer continues with a spade to the ace. As the cards lie, the queen comes tumbling down and declarer has twelve tricks without having to bother with the club finesse.

And if the queen of spades doesn't drop? Then declarer falls back on the club finesse as his last resort. Note that declarer cannot afford to cash a high club before his first spade play. If he does that, West can return a club on winning the king of spades, and force declarer to make a club guess before he wants to.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

The only point of interest in the auction is North's four no trump, which is a quantitative raise, not Blackwood. Since South had full values for his previous bids, he was happy to accept his partner's slam invitation.

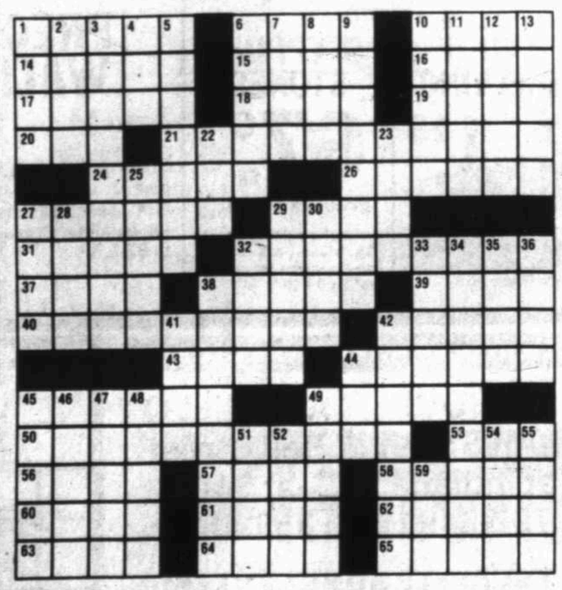

West led the jack of diamonds. Because of the unfortunate duplication in that suit, the slam contract was not as good as declarer had hoped. He would have to develop three tricks reasonably quicky to make his slam.

A superficial study of the position might suggest that declarer should rely on the club finesse. If that works and the suit splits 3-2, declarer has twelve tricks. He can improve a little on the odds by first cashing a high club in case East has a singleton queen. As the cards lie, the club finesse, and with it the contract would fail.

Crosby gets away from sex-kitten, nasty lady roles

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Mary Crosby is no longer merely "Bing's girl." She is making her debut in a theatrical movie.

The slender beauty is a recognized actress in her own right, thanks partly to her notorious, albeit faulty markmanship on J.R. Ewing, the rogue of "Dallas."

"The series was the best thing that happened to me, professionally and as a learning experience," she says. "Larry (Hagman, who portrays J.R.) is such a knowledgeable actor that working with him was an education.

"The publicity about the shooting is still going on. That sequence is now playing in Germany, Sweden and Austria, and is apparently causing as much commotion as it did here and in England. Reporters have been telephoning me for interviews."

She realized that her career had to move on from the sex-kitten Kristin, and she turned down offers for similar roles.

"I didn't want to become known as a nasty lady at 22," she said.

Her first effort to break away proved a fizzle.

Miss Crosby was starring with Gary Busey in Marjoe Gortner's "Glory Road" in New Orleans when the financial backer had second thoughts and pulled the plug after a week.

"That also was a learning experience," she said. "I learned a lot from Gary and Marjoe."

Now she can put all that learning to use. This month she starts filming "Last Plane Out," produced by Jack Cox and directed by Ernest Tidyman. She stars with Jan-Michael Vincent in Tidyman's script about a television news crew stranded in Nicaragua during the overthrow of the Somoza regime.

One of the elements that helped her to win the role was her fluency in Spanish; she was an exchange student in Mexico at 13, over her father's objections.

Mary Crosby has displayed that kind of independence during most of her life. She left home at 15, enrolling at her mother's alma mater, the University of Texas. After two years she decided she couldn't learn to be an actress in college, and she joined the training program of the prestigious American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco. There she met another student, Ed Lottimer.

"We didn't start living together until after Daddy died," she said. "I never would have done it while he was alive. He simply wouldn't have been able to understand it."

But the relationship didn't win the approval of her mother, Kathryn Grant Crosby.

Miss Crosby and Lottimer, a singer-composer-actor, were married in 1978, and mother and daughter seem on the best of terms now.

Before Walter Cronkite there was Douglas Edwards

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Before Dan Rather, before Walter Cronkite, he was the first face in television news. Now, he's primarily a radio voice, although at 11:57 each morning, Douglas Edwards still has a precious minute of television airtime.

Edwards, who pioneered the first nightly newscast on TV in 1948, is in his 42nd year with CBS. He spent 15 of those years as anchor on "Douglas Edwards with the News," the precursor to Cronkite's "CBS Evening News."

"Without a doubt, the big difference today is the technology," says Edwards, 65. "In the old days, if we shot a story and got it on two hours later, we'd be happy. Now, with satellites and the like, the delivery is instantaneous."

In the early days of TV, graphics were certainly not an art form. But that wasn't from lack of trying. When the Soviets launched the Sputnik, Don Hewitt, director of Edwards' show and later creator of "60 Minutes," searched for a way to give viewers a visual sense of the satellite.

Hewitt put a motor on a globe and attached it to a black wire hanger. On the other end of the hanger was a pingpong ball with tiny toothpicks. As the world revolved, the illusion was given of an orbiting satellite.

"It was straight out of a science class, but it worked," said Edwards.

One Hewitt device didn't work as well. To illustrate a brutal summer heat wave, he paid $300 for a 100-pound block of ice.

"He wanted to pretend to cool off the country visually," said Edwards. "He had it brought into the studio, and it quickly melted under the hot TV lights. We were really stupid. We could have gone to the cooking show for ice cubes, and then brought the camera in real tight for a close-up."

Another Hewitt idea that didn't fly was asking Edwards to learn Braille, so he wouldn't have to look down at a script. Edwards refused.

The veteran newscaster now does the one-minute prenoon "Newsbreak" and a Sunday morning religious show on TV. For the CBS Radio Network, he does afternoon and early evening radio newscasts.

Originally, Edwards was a reluctant TV guinea pig.

"I was leary, to say the least. Back then, radio was the dog. TV was the very tiny tail."

In the late 1940s, Edwards had two very prestigious radio spots, the "World News Roundup" and "Wendy Warren and the News," a combination soap opera-news show. Edwards would read two minutes of headlines, then "the organ music would swell, there'd be a click, and on came Wendy, intrepid girl reporter."

When he accepted the nightly TV news show, Edwards had to drop "World News Roundup," but not "Wendy Warren."

"In TV, news shows were the poor folks for a while," said Edwards. "On Tuesday night, we were followed by Mr. Television, Milton Berle, and did four ratings points better."

CBS' 15-minute newscast started at 7:30 p.m., while NBC's broadcast, anchored by current Timex watch spokesman John Cameron Swayze, began at 7:45. CBS had the ratings edge, until NBC gained dominance in the late 1950s with Chet Huntley and David Brinkley.

In 1962, Edwards was replaced by Cronkite, and a legend was born.

"I was very disappointed, inwardly unhappy," said Edwards. "But I was a realist. I had done the broadcast for 13½ years."

It was TV news' first 13½ years.

Douglas Edwards

In a television longevity record, Edwards has been doing a daily TV newscast — in one form or another — since 1948. His first news show was mostly narrative stories, some pictures and an in-studio chat with a newsmaker, the "Well-Doug Interview."

HUMOR IN UNIFORM

Don't make waves

Special from Reader's Digest

While in the Navy, my son went to the office of a new base on personal business. Over the door of the office, which was staffed with newly inducted Navy female personnel, was a sign reading: Please Don't Make Waves.

An instructor at the Army's Infantry School decided to start off one of his classes with a joke. He looked around the room and, not noticing that a Marine officer was present, said, "Well, I don't see anything but Army here today, so I guess it's safe to tell you a joke I just heard about the Leathernecks."

Before he could proceed, an Army captain stood up. "Sir," he said, "I don't think you'd better do that. There's a M-A-R-I-N-E in the R-O-O-M."

— CAPT. HENRY J. COOK III, Ga.

During basic training, we had a very tough sergeant. In addition to having a bellowing voice and a mean countenance, he carried a little black book in which he entered every mistake we made. Decisions about duty rosters, requests for three-day passes, KP, etc. were made only after the sergeant had carefully studied the notebook.

One day he ordered me to clean his quarters. The black book lay on a table and I couldn't resist an overpowering desire to see what was inside. The notebook was completely blank.

My next-door neighbor, a former career Marine, has a little difficulty adjusting to the "in" fashions with which his two teenagers often confront him. One day, after a visit to an Army surplus store, his 17-year-old daughter came home wearing camouflage fatigues, cartridge belts, combat boots, an Army "baseball" cap, as well as a few marksmanship and service medals.

When her father made no comment about her attire, she asked him, "Well, how do you like my outfit?"

"I don't know," he replied. "What outfit are you with?"

A few years ago, I decided to splurge and visit my brother who was stationed with the Army in West Germany. I assumed that most Germans would speak English because of all the American GIs. But I found that many people spoke only their native tongue — including the conductor on the train that I took from Frankfurt to Augsburg.

He punched my ticket, then chatted genially for a bit, making gestures like a windmill. I simply nodded from time to time to show him I was interested.

When he had finished and gone about his rounds, an American WAC in the compartment leaned forward and inquired if I spoke German. "No," I confessed.

"Then that explains," she said, "why you didn't bat an eye when he told you that you were on the wrong train."

My 6-year-old son took the news of my upcoming assignment to Ubon Royal Thai Air Force Base in Thailand with great enthusiasm. For weeks he spoke of little else. As my departure date approached, he insisted that he was coming with me. Touched, I gently explained that fathers were not allowed to take their little boys to Thailand.

"Thailand!" he cried indignantly. "I thought you said Toyland!"

Wally was known around our Air Force base for his quick wit and brash clowning, but he gave the greatest performance of his enlistment the morning he failed to notice a passing second lieutenant. Obviously a newcomer to both the service and our base, the shavetail stopped and angrily demanded to know why he hadn't been saluted.

"Because — uh, it's Tuesday, sir," Wally replied, thinking fast. "Saluting isn't required on Tuesdays anymore." Sensing gullibility, he plunged recklessly on. "There was a new base regulation last week. No. 847-5, I believe. It's an attenpt to promote greater understanding among the ranks."

Embarrassed by his apparent ignorance of base customs, the lieutenant mumbled a brief thanks and hurried on his way. Wally sighed in relief and left the scene even faster — wondering if the next man the lieutenant passed would be a captain or a colonel.

French-born madam must sell bordellos

By STEVE HARVEY
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WINNEMUCCA, Nev. — It might be debatable whether Sylvia Binder's two licensed establishments near Paradise Road are "the best little whorehouses in Winnemucca," as one local bartender joked the other day.

But most townsfolk seem to agree that the French-born madam has been a pillar of the community since opening the Simone de Paris Club and the Villa Joy five years ago.

"Whenever anyone needs money for a civic cause, you can count on Simone (her business name)," said Miquel Olano, a hotel proprietor in this isolated city of 4,000 located 160 miles east of Reno.

Simone's bordellos not only are located on the same side of the Western Pacific Railroad tracks as the rest of the business district, they also carry Winnemucca Chamber of Commerce stickers ("Buy with Confidence") out front, as well as the names of acceptable credit cards.

"SHE (SIMONE) has done a lot of good for this city," Debbie Grigg of the Chamber of Commerce said. "A few years ago, we had a minister who objected to her and he was asked to leave town."

Now, however, it is Simone who is being asked to leave — to leave the United States — by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Although licensed prostitution is legal in Humboldt County, where Winnemucca is located, one section of the U.S. Immigration and Nationality Act states that any alien shall be deported for being the "manager...of a house of prostitution or other immoral place."

Simone, who is in her 50s, is a French citizen. But after 17 years in the United States, she thinks of herself as an American. "In 35 years I have not lived in France," she said forlornly, her Parisian accent still intact.

Historically, Winnemucca has always been more of a place to pass through than stay. The Donner Party came and went. So did Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, who stopped long enough to relieve the local First National Bank of $35,000 in gold and later sent back a group photo as a souvenir.

WINNEMUCCA, which derives its name from an Indian chief, translates as "One Moccasin."

Now, while Simone waits for the other moccasin to fall, she has taken out a half-page advertisement in the Humboldt Sun, appealing to readers to fill out "Support for Simone" coupons and send them to her attorney to aid her cause.

"So far I receive about a thousand signatures," she said during an interview in the Garden Room of the Villa Joy, which is adjacent to another kind of body shop (the automotive type).

However, petitions hanging in the barrooms of her brothels were blank, her customers perhaps preferring to be more discreet about their support.

Simone's attorney, William McLaughlin, is still exploring means of gaining temporary residency for her.

WHATEVER THE outcome, she has decided to sell her houses, which she describes as "recession-proof." "When money is tight and everyone worries, people need more..." she paused to smile, "relaxation."

Her problems began, oddly enough, when her purse was stolen.

"When I apply for a duplicate green card (temporary residence permit), I did not know about the law (prohibiting an alien from operating a bordello)," she said. "Otherwise, I would not have gone into this business. Before giving me the new card, I guess they reopen my file and..." She shrugged.

While Simone is a respected businesswoman in Winnemucca, she admitted that her international image is somewhat tarnished.

"One newspaper said I am a fugitive from Switzerland," she said. "This is not true. I was asked to leave, yes. I had a business of this kind in Geneva for 18 years. It is not legal, but when you operate for 18 years, you have to have some support. If I had gone to trial, it would have been embarrassing for some prominent people."

IN WINNEMUCCA, where there are five bordellos in all (as well as 12 churches), the townsfolk strive to clear up misconceptions about licensed prostitution.

"This isn't like New York, with girls draped all over the streets," said Grigg of the Chamber of Commerce. "There are rules for the girls here. They do their business in one place. About the only time you see them in public is when they're shopping for groceries or in the bank."

In fact, Simone's employees are prohibited from entering casinos and bars as well as public golf, tennis and swim facilities in Winnemucca, although she adds, "They are permitted to jog."

"She (Simone) has never caused any trouble," one bartender said. "My boys went there — you know how young men are — and, no problem."

"I'll be going to all five (bordellos) tonight," Gil Britt mentioned quietly while dining at the Winnemucca Hotel. Britt would not be buying, but selling — his Reno company distributes smoked-meat products.

"The girls are good customers," he added.

National Ocean Survey has updated charts of ocean floor

By The Associated Press

It isn't easy to see it, but the floor of oceans and lakes keeps changing, and the unwary sailor can find himself aground or worse.

To help avoid the dangers, the National Ocean Survey continually updates nautical charts, with more than 400 new editions this year. And they urge both recreational and professional boaters to make sure they are using the latest editions.

The charts can be obtained through local Coast Guard districts.

SPEAKING OF MAPS — Hikers and campers need good maps to find the best trails and — perhaps most important — find the way home.

Detailed topographical maps of most of the country are avilable from the U.S. Geological Survey.

That agency distributes more than 10 million copies of its maps in a year, officials say, in various scales depending on the detail needed.

The maps are sold by many outdoors equipment dealers and can also be purchased directly from the survey.

The prices average about $2 and an index listing those available can be obtained at no charge by writing the survey.

For areas east of the Mississippi River, including Minnesita, write to the Eastern Distribution Branch, U.S. Geological Survey, 1200 S. Eads St., Arlington, Va., 22202.

For the west, including Louisiana, write to the Western Distribution Branch, U.S. Geological Survey, P.O. Box 25286, Federal Center, Denver, Colo., 80225.

Dogs need to be conditioned

By The Associated Press

More and more Americans are taking to running for health, but taking the family dog along as a companion may not be the best thing for the pet.

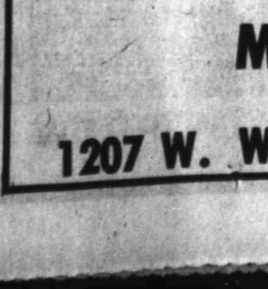

A pet needs to be in good shape to jog too, and if your dog has been inactive, the Humane Society of the United States urges a gradual conditioning program, alternating running and walking short distances.

Dogs are subject to heat prostration, since they don't perspire like humans, and thus have more trouble cooling their bodies.

Even so, a pet may be eager to keep pace with you and will continue to run, raising its temperature to dangerous levels.

So be aware of the symptoms of heat exhaustion — lagging behind, excessive breathing, coughing and finally stumbling.

Should these occur, cool the animal by wetting it down, and allow it to rest.

Grain deal turning point in U.S. trade

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten years ago today the world's food watchers were shaken by President Nixon's announcement that a three-year credit deal had been signed with the Soviet Union for $750 million worth of U.S. grain.

That announcement turned out to be only a small part of what became one of the most talked-about span of events in U.S. agricultural history. It also heralded a lucrative and controversial farm export trade with the Soviet Union which continues today.

By early August 1972, it was apparent that the Soviets had been dealing secretly with private U.S. exporters for some time, even before Nixon announced the huge credit deal.

As it turned out, Moscow's buyers contracted for far more grain than the credit deal called for — and at bargain prices. The secret dealings included, for example, about 400 million bushels of wheat, equal to about one-fourth of the total U.S. crop that year.

In all, more than $1 billion worth of grain was sold to the Soviets in the first year under cash and credit terms.

The sales, their effects on commodity markets and the methods employed by private and government officials triggered congressional hearings, FBI investigations, political charges and counter-charges and, gradually, new regulations aimed at keeping better track of U.S. grain exports.

Actually, one of the most important turning points occured the previous year, beginning in June 1971 when Nixon removed a requirement that 50 percent of all U.S. grain shipments to the Soviet Union must move in U.S. ships.

BY FALL it was apparent that the Soviet Union was scouring the world for grain to help make up shortfalls. In November 1971, it was announced that the Soviets had bought $150 million worth of U.S. feed grains, mainly corn.

It was the first major sale of U.S. grain to the Soviet Union in eight years.

By the spring of 1972, it was also apparent to many that Moscow — if it was to keep its domestic commitments — would be needing more grain, possibly on a regular basis for many years to come. With that in mind, a U.S. delegation went to Moscow for talks with Soviet leaders.

What emerged was the long-term credit agreement announced on July 8, 1972.

"This large purchase will make the Soviet Union the second largest buyer of U.S. grain, and can open the way for even more meaningful trade between the two countries in the years ahead," said then-Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

It was Butz and other USDA officials who had held preliminary meetings two months earlier in Moscow. The credit package was discussed further when Nixon visited with Soviet leaders in May. Finally, it was wrapped up in Washington in June.

With the disclosure later that summer and fall that the Soviet Union had secretly bought much larger quantities of grain than the new agreement had stipulated, there were charges of collusion and favoritism on the part of some USDA officials.

EXPORT SUBSIDIES paid to exporters at the time were brought into question. Farmers complained that they were victimized because many had sold their grain before market prices rose as a result of the secret arrangements.

A number of senior officials in USDA who were privy to many of the inside decisions relative to the Soviet trade quit and went to work for big grain companies, the ones which handled the bulk of the 1972-73 deals.

While no criminal activities were turned up as a result of the investigations, Congress did order USDA to tighten its supervision of exporters and told the department to clean house.

The $750 million credit package announced a decade ago was not all used. One reason was that the agreement stipulated that the Soviet Union could not have more than $500 million of the credit outstanding in any single year.

Thus, to get all the grain it wanted in that crop-deficit period of 1972-73, the Soviets had to augment its U.S. credit with cash.

Eventually, about $550 million of the credit line was used by Moscow, but some $200 million remained on the books and long since has expired. The $550 million used by the Soviet Union was repaid, plus interest, years ago.

There would be more big years for grain sales to the Soviet Union, and there would be many more controversies over embargoes later in the Nixon and Ford administrations. And in early 1980, President Carter imposed another grain embargo against the Soviets following their military move into Afghanistan. President Reagan lifted the embargo in April 1981.

But the events before and following the July 8, 1972 announcement were a major turning point in U.S. farm export trade. As the huge Soviet orders became known, other countries hurried to stockpile American commodities.

An unprecedented boom in American farm exports had begun.

Soviet Union will continue to import grain

By LEONARD KIRSCHEN

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union will have to import millions of tons of grain through the 1980s despite a costly new program to produce more food at home, the chief executive of the International Wheat Council said today.

If true, the forecast will have profound foreign-policy implications for the Soviet Communist government, which faces a growing hard currency squeeze as it imports grain from the United States and other Western nations to prevent acute food shortages.

"Soviet grain imports will continue within a range of 30 to 35 million (metric) tons in the next few years and ease to 25 to 30 million tons after the food program makes its impact felt in the second half of the 1980s," said Jean H. Parotte, the International Wheat Council's executive secretary. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Parotte also said "the most likely prognosis is that on average, heavy grain imports will continue duing the decade."

Parotte was speaking at a seminar called "The Soviet Union and the World's Commodity Markets," organized by London commodity writers.

The 50-nation International Wheat Council, which includes the Soviet Union and the United States, was established in 1949 to help solve world wheat shortages, promote grain trade and stabilize the grain markets.

Although the Soviet Union is officially listed by the council as a wheat-exporting nation, it has been a net importer for several years. Experts blame this on inefficiency, poor planning and chronic bad weather.

THE SOVIET Union's policy-making Central Committee unveiled an ambitious food program May 14 to raise farm production by pumping an estimated $222 billion into agriculture development through 1990 and improving rural living standards. The program also relaxes some restrictions on private farming, which produces much of the nation's food on less than 2 percent of the land.

In announcing the new food program after the third poor harvest in a row, Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev called food production the nation's foremost "political problem."

Despite the new Soviet measures, the U.S. Agriculture Department has forecast a Soviet grain crop in 1982 of 185 million tons, well short of the 238 million tons called for by Moscow.

Parotte said Soviet grain imports this year will likely be about 47 million tons, the same as last year, at a cost of more than $7 billion.

"As well as the important economic considerations of such a large import bill, there are obvious foreign policy constraints resulting from the dependence on suppliers from the West," he said.

Earlier this year the Soviet Union tripled the amount of gold it was selling on world markets for hard cash to buy grain and help other ailing nations in the Communist bloc — mainly Poland. The Kremlin also got an extention of an estimated $1 billion short-term credit from European banks for previous purchases of foreign grain.

UP TO THE invasion of Afghanistan in December 1979, the Soviet Union bought about 73 percent of its wheat imports from the United States. That share dropped sharply when then-President Jimmy Carter embargoed wheat to the Soviets in retaliation for the invasion, but rose again when President Reagan lifted the ban in April 1981.

Parotte said the Soviets now buy about 37 percent of their wheat imports from the United States, because it is the cheapest supplier and can offer unlimited quantities for quick delivery in the biggest ships.

But partly because of uncertainty in U.S.-Soviet grain agreements, the Kremlin has entered into long-term grain pacts with Argentina, Canada and Australia.

The Soviets have been told they can buy up to 23 million tons of U.S. wheat and corn in 1981-82 under terms of a long-term agreement which expires Sept. 30.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective July 27, 1982, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

It is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 13.4 percent increase in the company's intrastate revenues.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with each affected municipality served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection in each of the company's public business offices in Texas. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell's rate application.

Notice to El Paso Area Customers

Effective January 1, 1982, Southwestern Bell adopted the Mountain States tariffs in effect for El Paso County. Southwestern Bell proposes to merge the separate El Paso tariffs with its tariffs applicable to the rest of Texas. The resulting new rate schedule is on file with the PUC and the El Paso area municipalities served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection at our El Paso business office.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

The filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for interexchange private line and foreign exchange (FX) service. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide interexchange private line and foreign exchange service in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell's tariffs. While Southwestern Bell has proposed no increase in long distance rates, any change in those rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies.

Aviso Público

Southwestern Bell, en conformidad a las reglas del Public Utility Commission (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) de Texas, por la presente hace saber su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel para servicio de teléfono en Texas con vigencia a partir del 27 de julio, 1982, a menos que la Comisión haga otra determinación.

Se espera que el nuevo arancel que se ha solicitado rendirá un aumento de 13.4 por ciento en los ingresos intraestatales de la compañía.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel se ha archivado en las oficinas del Public Utility Commission en Austin, Texas, al igual que en cada municipalidad afectada y servida por Southwestern Bell, y cada una de las oficinas de la compañía para negocios con el público en Texas tiene una copia para lectura pública. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa está sujeta a cambios que resulten de la manera en la cual Southwestern Bell aplique sus tarifas.

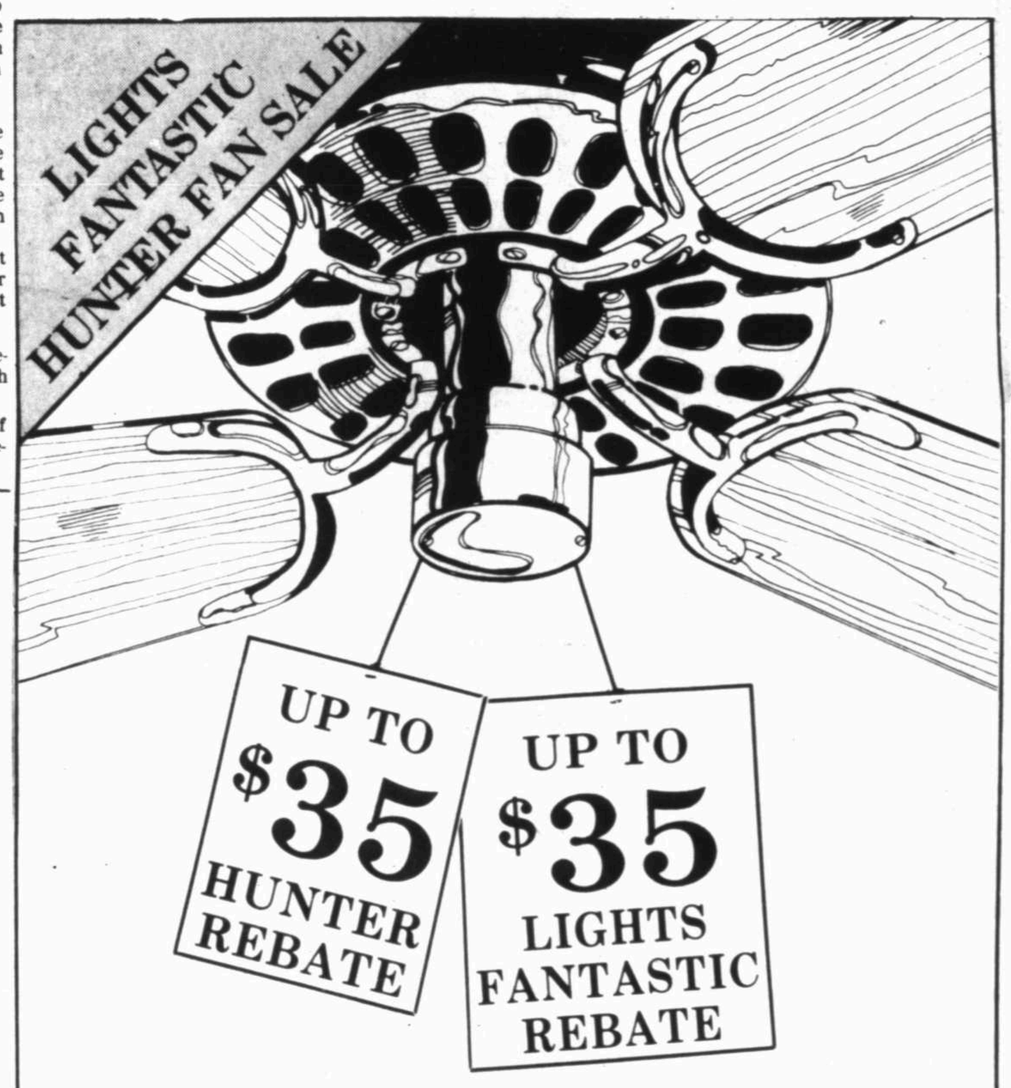

Aviso a Clientes en la Región de El Paso

Con vigencia a partir del 1o de enero de 1982, Southwestern Bell ha adoptado las tarifas de Mountain States efectivas en el condado de El Paso. Southwestern Bell propone unir las tarifas de El Paso con sus otras tarifas que se aplican al resto de Texas. El nuevo arancel que resulta de ésta union se ha archivado en la Comisión de Servicios Públicos (Public Utility Commission), al igual que en las municipalidades de la región de El Paso servidas por Southwestern Bell, y está disponible para inspección pública en nuestras oficinas de El Paso.

Aviso a los Clientes de Otras Compañías de Teléfono

El registro incluye, pero no se limita a, propuestas para aumentar las tarifas para servicio de línea privada entre centrales telefónicas (interexchange private line) y servicio de central telefónica extranjera (foreign exchange FX). Cambios en dichas tarifas de servicio tambien afectarían a clientes de otras compañías de teléfono porque dichas compañías proveen los servicios ya mencionados en conformidad a tarifas especificadas por Southwestern Bell. Aunque Southwestern Bell no ha propuesto un aumento en las tarifas para larga distancia, cualquier cambio en las mismas tambien afectaría a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono.

Our reputation is included at no extra cost.

When you buy a used car, you're really buying a lot more than just the steel, aluminum, and other materials that go into the construction of an automobile. You're also buying a pledge from the dealer to work for your total satisfaction.

That's why a car dealer's reputation is one of his most important products. But really, his reputation is not just made by his promises. A good reputation comes from hundreds of happy, satisfied customers...people who tell other people about being treated fairly.

NORTHGATE $75,200

4909 Canadian

$673.30 Per Month

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivas lent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.
