ACCUSE JACKSON IN JAIL BREAK ATTEMPT

ACCUSES HALE OF INSPIRING THIRD MURDER

Osage County Ranchman Is Charged With Paying For Crime

CONVICT CONFESSES

Man Serving Sentence For Robbery Admits Killing Woman

PAWHUSKA, Okla., June 1.—(AP)—William K. Hale, wealthy Osage county ranchman, was implicated in a third Osage Indian murder case late today when Kelsey Morrison, convict in the state penitentiary at McAlester, testified at the trial of Earnest Burkhart that he killed Anna Brown, an Indian woman at Hale's bidding.

"He said Hale promised to give him $1,000, cancel a $600 debt and give him an automobile. He said he received $200.

Morrison and Byron Burkhart, a brother of Ernest and a nephew of Hale, were charged with the murder of Anna Brown in a state information filed several weeks ago. Morrison made his statement today with the understanding that it would not be used against him at his trial.

Ernest Burkhart is on trial charged with the killing of W. E. Smith. Hale is awaiting trial on similar charge. Smith, his Indian wife, Rita and a maid, were killed in an explosion that demolished their home at Fairfax in March, 1922.

Part of Conspiracy

Federal and state authorities have contended that the deaths of Smith and his wife were a part of a wholesale conspiracy against the lives and property of the wealthy Lizzy Q. family of Osage Indians.

Two of the victims, Anna Brown and Rita Smith, were sisters of Burkhart's Osage wife, Mollie, and all were daughters of Lizzy Q. wealthy Indian woman, now deceased. The combined value of the family's head rights as members of the Osage Indian tribe was estimated at about $2,000,000.

Morrison testified that Hale and Burkhart, though virtually wiping out the family, hoped to gain control of the estate.

Morrison's testimony came as the climax of a day's efforts on the part of the state to connect Ernest Burkhart with the explosion at Smith's home. Morrison testified, that, after killing Anna Brown, Hale approached him with a proposition to kill Smith.

Burkhart also approached him, he said, telling him that although he could not pay him anything in advance he could reward him liberally after the crime was committed.

Hale suggested that Morrison shoot Smith, Morrison said, and later suggested that fire to the Smith home, killing occupants as they sought to escape.

Refuses Offer.

Morrison said he refused the offer.

"Buckle" Thompson, former bank robber now serving a life sentence, in the state penitentiary, testified today that Burkhart had approached him and "Curley" Johnson, an assistant, asking them to kill the Smiths. Thompson said they later told him they had obtained another man to to the deed.

Burkhart's testimony before the federal grand jury at Guthrie last January was read into the evidence today. It contained many of the same admissions that were in a confession he repudiated and that has been held is admissable by district Judge Jesse Worten.

Two men, E. C. Snyder, a former cattleman and Charlie Johnson were charged with conspiracy to prevent Matt Williams from tetifying against Burkhart, in warrants issued in justice court here today. Officers said that Snyder had offered Williams $2,000 and a trip to Mexico to stay away from the trial. Johnson was charged as a go-between for Snyder.

Tuesday Wasn't So Hot But Thirsty Youngsters Somewhere Thought So

It was not so hot Tuesday as it was Monday when a healthy summer sun sent the thermometer up to the 98 degree mark for a record high of the year.

But at that, it was plenty warm everywhere, and especially was it out on the fringe of the city where such things as soda fountains and electric fans and the other summer necessities are practically unknown. In these areas, the heat was just as pronounced, the wind just as parching and the prospect for long weeks of this just as disconcerting as it is when the 100 degree figure looms out on the thermometer.

In the past, in order to combat this, The Record News has sponsored the annual Milk and Ice Fund which has gone far to alleviate the suffering of youngsters to whom fresh milk and cooling ice is a luxurious lifesaver. The same fund has been started this year in behalf of these tiny sufferers.

All funds tarned in to The Record News by large-hearted Wichitans are promptly acknowledged and then turned over to the Salvation Army which expends them simply for the relief of the little tots who, helpless and uncomplaining, may find in the wholesome draughts the very thing they need to keep health and vigor unimpaired.

The fund has come as a God-send in other years. It bids fair this season to do the same.

DEATH MYSTERY SOLUTION 'NEAR

San Antonio Suspect Tells Officers He Will Talk Later

SAN ANTONIO, June 1.—(AP)—Somewhere there is a second man who holds the key to the mystery surrounding the death of Mrs. Virginia Petty, San Anotnio real estate dealer, whose body was found nine days ago on the banks of the Comal river near New Braunfels, Bexar county officers believe. The man now in custody expects this second man to come to his aid, and if help is not forthcoming, "there is going to be something popping."

The man now in custody still refuses to make any statement, but today he is said to have told Constable Duke Carver and Chief of Police T. O. Miller, that if the other man did not come to his rescue, he was going to talk.

"I am a poor man and need money for my defense," the suspect is said to have declared. "This other man has the money and if he doesn't help me, he is going to get in a lot of trouble."

The suspect admits that he is a former husband of Mrs. Petty, Lee Johnson, investigator for district attorney Chambers, today obtained the papers in the divorce case, which was tried in 1921, in the 73rd district court, and found the suspect had signed a waiver. The signature will be compared with other writing of the suspect.

Officers Cannot Hold U.S. Posts, Oklahoma Decides

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 1.—(AP)—Oklahoma's constitution prohibits the acceptance of appointments of state, county and municipal officers as special federal prohibition enforcement agents, the state attorney general's office today advised Major H. H. White of Fort Worth prohibition administrator for Oklahoma and Texas.

The advice was in reply to a letter from White, asking whether the order recently made by President Coolidge augmenting the federal dry forces would be in conflict with statutory or constitutional provisions in this state. The reply was written by J. Berry King, assistant attorney general.

Anybody In Need Of $500

Anybody want $25 in cash? Anybody want $15 in cash? Anybody want $10 in cash?

This question is not an attempt to be funny; it's simply a legitimate query that, should it really find anybody in Wichita Falls who would be willing to accept 25 perfectly good dollar bills, may result in such a handout.

The Record News got curious the other day and wondered how most folks would spend an extra $500 if they had it in the bank. It has occurred to the paper that some interesting stories might be devised on the ideas of those who could use an amount to good advantage. Accordingly, The Record News is offering three prizes, one of $25 cash, one of $15 cash and one of $10 cash for the best essays on "What I Could Do With an Extra $25."

If you'd use it to visit Colorado; if you'd use it to buy an automobile; if you'd use it to pay out a home; if you'd use it to buy some new clothes for the wife—tell about it to the Contest Editor, The Record News, and if a competent committee of judges decides your paper was the best of the lot submitted, the $25 is yours. Second place gets the $15 prize and third place the $10 one.

The lists are open. Let's get some ideas.

Mexicans Release Cany on Man

J.W. SHANKLIN WIRES FAMILY THAT HE'S SAFE

Telegram Makes no Mention Of Ransom Demanded For Life

SON IN VERA CRUZ

With Texan's Escape All Americans Are Now At Liberty

DALLAS, June 1.—(AP)—A telegram from J. W. Shanklin to his wife at Canyon, today that he has been freed by Mexican bandits announced the release of the last of the five Americans seized and held for ransom by outlaws in the Southern republic during recent weeks.

The telegram announced by Mrs. Shanklin stated that Shanklin is "back" on the job at a sugar plantation near El Portrero, state of Vera Cruz, from which he and a body guard were kidnapped in daylight. No reference was made to the 20,000 pesos ransom which bandits had demanded for Shanklin's freedom, nor to methods pursued in affecting his release.

Harold Shanklin, a son, is en route to Vera Cruz and is due there tonight to visit his father.

Other Americans reported kidnaped and later released by bandits are C. B. Braden and Jules B. Gallagher, San Antonio mining engineers, who had been operating the Texana properties at Descubridora, Durango, and two oil men named Briggs and Greeley kidnaped from oil fields in the state of Vera Cruz. The bandits which held Braden and Gallagher after demanding 6,000 pesos ransom, surrendered their captives after a brief engagement with pursuing troops who had surrounded them, reports to Braden's wife in Laredo stated.

Briggs and Greeley also were freed by Mexican troops, according to information reported given by the British Oil company. The three were employed by the American consul at Vera Cruz.

Home of Witness For State Wrecked By Blackhand Bomb

WEST BRIDGEWATER, Mass., June 1.—(AP)—The home of Samuel Johnson, brother-in-law of Mrs. Simon Johnson, one of the star witnesses for the state in the Sacco-Vanzetti prosecution, was dynamited this morning, but Johnson and seven members of his family escaped injury. The house was demolished.

The blast was heard and felt ten miles away. Although hurled from their beds and severely shaken, members of the Johnson family otherwise were unhurt.

The Johnson home is about a mile from that formerly occupied by Bartolomew Vanzetti, who with Nicola Sacco, was tried and convicted for murder in connection with the robbery of a paymaster in South Braintree on April 15, 1920.

Jackson Barnett Suit Intervened In By Government

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—(AP)—The federal government is to intervene as a plaintiff in the suit filed recently in behalf of Jackson Barnett, wealthy Creek Indian, against his wife, Anna Laura Barnett, United States Attorney S. W. McNabb announced today.

The suit, filed by Barnett's guardian, Elmer S. Bailey, charges that the woman married the Indian against his will and took his fortune away from him, by conspiracy.

The government intervention, McNabb said, is to learn whether Barnett's money, held by the department of interior, was paid to Mrs. Barnett and others through misinformation or fraud, and whether the government was imposed upon by attorneys in obtaining the transfer.

BOMB MAILER IS SENTENCED

Judge Espresses Regret That He Cannot Impose Death Penalty

MUSKEGON, Mich., June 1.—(AP)—Circuit Judge John Vanderwerp today sentenced Asa K. Barrett, Blue Lake township constable, to life imprisonment for the murder of August Krubaech, his daughter, Janet and her fiancee, William Frank, killed by a bomb Thursday.

Judge Vandewerp expressed regret that the state law does not provide for capital punishment.

Bartlett, who admitted mailing the bomb because of political enmity toward Krubaech, who was township supervisor, showed no emotion and bowed politely to the judge as sentence was pronounced. He was immediately started on his trip to Marquette.

The arraignment and sentence came so early that the crowds that it had been feared might make trouble because of the strong feeling against Bartlett had hardly begun to form.

Sheik of Bandits Placed on Trial

CHICAGO, June 1.—(AP)—Martin J. Durkin, recently the most hunted fugitive in America, today was arraigned in the Cook county criminal court on a charge of murdering Federal Agent Edwin C. Shanahan. When the charge against him was read he answered "Not Guilty" and settled down to listen to the examination of jurors.

He wore a smile most of the time and was apparently hopeful. His mother and sister, who sat near him, reflected that attitude, predicting that the state had no case against him and that he would be freed.

City of Douglas Loses Bank Suit

WASHINGTON, June 1.—(AP)—The city of Douglas, Ariz., failed today in an effort to hold the Dallas federal reserve bank responsible for the amount of a check which went bad after it was deposited for collection in the First National bank of Douglas.

The check was signed by Cochise county and was drawn on the Central Bank of Wilcox, Ariz., which closed its doors while the check was on its way through several other banks. The supreme court upheld the lower courts in ruling that the paper had been deposited by the city as a cash item and that the federal reserve system assumed no liability for its collection.

Veteran Wins Long Fight for Insurance

SAN ANTONIO, June 1.—(AP)—Willie Richman, disabled war veteran today successfully terminated a long effort to compel the veteran's bureau to pay him a $10,000 insurance policy. He won every point at issue before Judge Duval West in federal district court, the bureau being directed to make monthly payments, under the policy of $57.50, retroactive to May, 1919.

Richman, a native of Russia, first sought to compel the payment of the policy in 1921 enlisting in his behalf the aid of Senator Culbertson. The case was prosecuted by the senator through the bureau channels and disallowed.

Richman enlisted in El Paso, Aug. 8, 1917.

6 SAW BLADES FOUND IN CELL OFFICERS AVER

County Attorney Asks For Commitment Papers Of Slayer

"MAKING TROUBLE"

Fear Delivery Prompts Request to Warden Of State Prison

Immediate removal of Jack Jackson from the Young county jail to the Huntsville penitentiary was urged by the county attorney of Young county in a message to District Attorney Ben Allred of Wichita Falls Monday, the prosecutor announced Tuesday morning. Both the county attorney and the Young county sheriff have requested to other officials that Jackson be re-committed to the penitentiary, sentenced there by a jury here after his conviction on a murder charge. He must serve 25 years.

The request by the Young county officials follows a reported attempt by Jackson and two fellow prisoners to break jail, the attempt proving futile when a number of hack-saw blades, which had been smuggled to his cell were found by officers.

Following a long distance phone call from Sheriff Foster Monday night that Jackson was "making trouble" and had tried to escape, the district attorney Tuesday asked Fred K. Smith, Wichita county sheriff, for the mandate from the court of criminal appeals for his commitment to the penitentiary. This, he was told, had already been mailed back to the warden, and a letter to that official requesting its prompt service was immediately dispatched.

To Be Returned.

The letter from the district attorney to the penitentiary warden makes no mention of alleged difficulties with Jackson at Graham mentioning merely that it is desired he be removed to Huntsville at once. He will probably be brought back to Archer county later on a bench warrant to face trial for highway robbery, the letter reads.

Sheriff Foster told the Record News Tuesday night that Jackson had "caused trouble" almost from the beginning of his stay at the Graham jail nearly two months ago, but that the finding of six saw blades in his cell a day or so ago brought matters to a head, and he wished his removal immediately if it could be effected.

Mr. Allred's first complaint that Jackson was "making trouble" came late last week in a letter from County Attorney John Rhea of Graham, requesting that arrangements for his removal be made at once. The second complaint was received late Monday night in the long distance call from the Young county sheriff.

Jackson, who received a 25-year sentence in connection with a murder conviction in Wichita county more than a year ago was removed to the Young county jail about two months ago following his arrest while on a 60-day parole. He was arrested in connection with a hi-jacking scrape at Holliday and his trial on an indictment charging highway robbery was set for last month at Archer City and Jackson was brought from Graham for the occasion but was taken back there when a number of complications forced a continuance until the October term of court.

Highway Bureau Holds Up Work

AUSTIN, Jun 1.—(AP)—Letting of contracts for 13.8 miles of concrete pavement in Liberty county, one-half mile of concrete in Jefferson, and five miles in Galveston was deferred today by the highway commission.

The Galveston county mileage will be constructd between the causeway and the south Lamarque landing and will be an important link in the Houston-Galveston highway.

'MA' INSISTS ON BOND ISSUE

Declares She Will Authorize Varsity Securities Despite Ruling

AUSTIN, June 1.—(AP)—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson today wired a message to Dr. W. M. W. Splawn, president of the University of Texas, who is at Houston attending a meeting on the investment of oil royalty funds, that she will issue manuscript bonds for investment of these funds as previously announced. The governor acted following reports from Houston that M. E. Foster, chairman of the finance committee of the board of regents of the institution would meet with Dr. Splawn, Ed Howard, Wichita Falls; R. G. Storey, Dallas, regents; Dwight P. Reardon, of the Houston branch of the federal reserve bank and T. W. Gregory of Houston, president of the ex-students association of the university to decide on the investment of funds now amounting to about $3,500,000.

A recent ruling of the attorney general held that the regents are authorized to invest the money. The law provides that the permanent fund, which includes royalty from university lands should be invested either in state or federal government bonds.

The goverpor announced several weeks ago that she would issue manuscript bonds, as provided for in an act passed in 1889 in order to keep the money in the state and bring a larger interest, the money to be used through appropriations by the state legislature.

According to reports from Houston the regents, in view of the fact that the governor had not issued the manuscript bonds, would invest the royalty money in federal government bonds. The governor, through Comptroller S. H. Terrell, has asked the attorney general for an opinion on the issuance of manuscript bonds but was notified today by the comptroller that the attorney general has not rendered an opinion on this question.

The bonds the governor announced she would issue would bear five per cent interest.

9-Year-Old Babe In Wading Drowns

DENTON, June 1.—(AP)—Bundy Caddell, 9, daughter of H. B. Caddell, drowned in five feet of water at a swimming pool here late today. The child, unable to swim, apparently had waded beyond her depth, and sank without giving an alarm. The body was recovered by Hubert Mayden, when a search was started after the mother, who had accompanied her daughter to the pool, missed her.

FOOT DOCTORS PLAN 'MUTINY'

Southern Chiropodists Say Northern Section Doesn't Help

DALLAS, June 1.—(AP)—Secession from their national association and the formation of a southern association is to be demanded by delegates to the proposed southern Association of Chiropodists meeting here June 7-9.

Dr. W. Lee Austin of Dallas, secretary-treasurer of the chiropody society of Texas which is leading in the movement, stated that there is widespread dissatisfaction among southern chiropodists (foot doctors) over alleged treatment accorded them by the National Association of Chiropodists. He said the chief complaint is that the national association spends virtually all its funds in the north and east and that the southern members receive little return on the money they donate in dues.

The national president is Dr. Walter B. Ramsburg, of Minneapolis. He was invited to the Dallas meeting next week but replied he would be unable to attend.

"The national association takes our money and gives nothing in return," said Dr. Austin. "And now they want to raise the dues. They are not interested in the south and what we want is distinctly a southern association which can function to tell the people of this section what our profession is and what it is trying to do.

"Chiropody has advanced far from the days of the old corn doctors, but many persons still believe we are only corn doctors."

Dr. Austin will outline the principles of the proposed organization in an address at the opening session next Monday. At the same session, Dr. C. M. Rosser, past president of the Texas State Medical society, will address the delegates on "The Object of Fraternalism in Medicine and Chiropody."

96 Degrees

May 31 still holds the heat record of 1926, registering 98, but June 1 received summer weather with a maximum temperature of 96 degrees. Varied temperatures were shown in Tuesday's weather when early in the morning a minimum of 65 degrees was reached, and at its maximum, the thermometer had climbed 31 points.

A slight wind continued throughout the day, an average breeze of 7 miles was noted, and at its maximum, a rate of 10 miles per hour prevailed. The barometer was slightly below normal at 5 o'clock Tuesday, standing at 29.12, indicating probably fair weather.

SECOND LOVE

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

John Parrish and Audrey, his wife, have been married ten months. She is rich. He gets his income by managing her property. Irritated by her frequent mention of his dependence upon her, he throws the emerald pin she has given him into the shrubbery. They quarrel, but make up.

They have taken Marcie Allen into their home. She is beautiful, very modern, and her father has put her out of his house for her free views on what women may do. She kisses John Parrish. He tries to tell his wife, but is interrupted by their quarrel. When Marcie asks him if he has told he says he has decided not to.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

(Characters and situations in this story are fictitious).

CHAPTER VII

"What do you do when you demonstrate those beauty preparations?" Audrey asked as they sat down to dinner.

Marcie grinned. "Sit in a store window and rub cream on my face, then rub it off, and put on rouge and put on powder and leave that on," she said.

"I think that's horrible," cried Audrey. "Everybody you know in Wichita Falls will see you."

"I thought of that." Marcie balanced a spoon upon her forefinger, and smiled demurely. "Especially, it occurred to me that daddy might see me, and be so mad that he'd—well, he'd come around and say to me: 'You little brat, you can't disgrace me this way. Come out of that window and I'll give you your allowance back again!'"

Audrey and Parrish surveyed her in amazement. Then Audrey laughed.

"You ARE a brat, you know. You're a little devil."

Marcie placidly agreed. "You said it. Little she devil. But my! A young lady has to look after herself these days."

She slipped into her lobster salad with satisfaction. Parrish made no comment on her plan, but after long and silent thought he smiled. Once Audrey observed that he laid down his fork, and surveyed Marcie with deep interest.

"Isn't Marcie pretty?" she said.

Their guest dimpled as Parrish responded with an awkward "Uh-huh."

"Do you like my teeth?" she asked, showing the even white lines of ivory between her lips. "Never had a filling in my life."

"That wasn't what I was thinking of—your looks, I mean," said Parrish. "I was thinking that probably you are kind of smart, after all."

Marcie emitted a little shriek.

"After all! Is that the way to talk to a lady? And here I am, a modern woman with all the latest ideas, and you say that I'm 'kind of smart after all'!"

Parrish laughed. "That modern talk doesn't mean anything much. I've heard it before. Those chorus girls that Audrey had here at the house one time before we were married, talked just the same way. Talked tough, I mean. Drove me out of the place. The difference is, it cost your father a lot of money for you to learn that stuff, and the chorus girls learned it free."

He cut off a bit of steak, and chewed it, as if the discussion was over. Marcie, however, was indignant.

"Do you mean I'm a fake?"

Parrish responded, unperturbed. "No, not a fake. Just entertaining yourself with a lot of bunk. Hadn't anything to do and had to amuse yourself some way. You aren't any more modern than Nona. She is just as modern as—well, as Eve, or Cleopatra, or any other ancient female that was interested in men."

At the mention of Nona, Marcie's expression changed from one of personal injury to lively interest.

"Tell me about Nona," she begged. "She tried to vamp your father, didn't she, Audrey? Proposed to him and everything?"

Audrey wrinkled her brow in serious thought. "Nona," she said, slowly, "was really one of the kindest, nicest persons I ever met."

"Is she pretty?" insisted Marcie. "Her pictures in the magazines look pretty, but you never can tell from that."

"Yes, she's beautiful," Audrey said.

"Does she paint?"

"Yes—her complexion isn't like yours. She's dark, like you are, and has lovely big liquid eyes, and the sweetest little curve at the corners of her mouth. She had lots of love affairs, I think, before she met daddy."

"How wonderful," sighed Marcie.

"After she met daddy, she just went insane over him. Women always did, you know. It was because of him that she went seriously to work, and got to be such a famous dancer."

"And now they're both in London," said Marcie.

Audrey displayed irritation. "I don't think his being there has anything to do with Nona at all. He likes it there, and he sells a lot of his mining shares to an English syndicate, and he wanted to be away from this country the first year John and I were married."

"Why?"

"Because I'd always been dependent on him for everything—amusement and company, and all. He wanted me to learn to get along without him."

"I think," said Marcie with decision, "I'll positively have to take him into camp. Annex him, you know. Madden him with my mysterious beauty."

Parrish chuckled. "Mr. Morton," he said "is the hardest-boiled man that ever lived, so far as women are concerned. He makes 'em eat out of his hand."

"Then," responded Marcie, "I'll have to be his slave. I suppose. I'm sure going to start SOMETHING."

They walked out into the garden after dinner. Audrey took Parrish's right arm, and after a moment Marcie slipped her hand under his left elbow. He cast a glance at Audrey, but her brow was untroubled. He bent his arm, and Marcie's hand settled itself with a little nestling movement.

"Don't you really believe in the modern woman?" she asked dreamily.

"Most of 'em are all right," Parrish said, "but those that make the most noise have simply laid down on their job."

"How?" Audrey asked.

Parrish dropped the hands of both girls, fished in his pockets, produced his pipe, and lighted it. "It's this way," he said. "If a couple of million men in this country suddenly left their work, and announced they weren't going to earn money any more, and they held conventions and announced that hereafter they were going to do housework, and play bridge, you'd think they were crazy."

"What's that got to do with it?" Marcie asked taking his arm again.

"That's what the women have done," he said. "They used to be their husband's partners. The man earned the money; the woman cooked and made the clothes and attended to the kids. Now a lot of them announce they won't do that—they won't attend to their jobs. So they buy the grub at delicatessens, don't have any children if they can help it, join clubs, gad around—just plain darned useless.

"But if their husband's did the same thing—announced that they wouldn't work any more. Lord, what a row there'd be!"

Audrey smiled in contented approval.

"Fact is, woman used to be man's equal. Now they are trying to be his inferior," Parrish declared. "They can't do a man's work as well as a man can, and they won't do their own. What's going to be the result? They're slipping every day. I'll bet that fifty years from now they'll be going into harems!"

Marcie leaned against him. "How thrillingly romantic!" she said.

Parrish and Audrey both laughed, and the three resumed their stroll.

Along one side of the garden was a mass of rare shrubs, that Audrey's father had imported years before. Audrey showed these to Marcie now, telling her where they had come from and how much care was necessary to keep them blooming. Then the two girls and the man sat for a time on a stone bench on the open lawn, watching the gathering gloom of night in the west.

"Guess I'll go in," Parrish said. "If you'll excuse me. Want to do a bit of writing."

As he entered the house, Marcie stretched herself, as a kitten stretches, and laid herself sidewise on the bench with her head in Audrey's lap.

"Do you and John ever quarrel?" she asked.

The other girl ran her fingers over Marcie's dark hair. "Sometimes," she said. "We just started about a week ago."

"You're married," said Marcie, comfortably. "Married people always fuss, you know. Keeps them healthy."

Audrey was silent a moment, and then went on. "My daddy says I ought to let John win the argument sometimes. But it's hard to do. Men are so unreasonable."

Marcie twisted her head, so she could look into Audrey's face. "Now, we, women, we're ALWAYS reasonable, aren't we?" She smiled, with a mocking quirk at the corner of her mouth. "We never do anything we oughtn't to, and are always sweet and good! Like the dickens we are."

She rolled off the bench, and sat on the lawn. Her smooth bare arms went around her upraised knees, and her wide, sparkling eyes were fixed speculatively on her hostess.

"It's nice for us to pretend to ourselves that we're always good natured and nice," she continued, "but if we would pretend that to other people, too—pretend it to everybody, then we WOULD be good natured. We'd never do anything mean then, you know."

"Men don't pretend it," Audrey said, "Do you know what John did? He got mad at me today, and took that beautiful emerald tie pin I gave him, and threw it into the shrubbery back there."

"Did he get it again?" Marcie asked.

Audrey shook her head.

When, a little later, Audrey went into the house, her guest remained behind. It was not yet dark, and idly, Marcie wandered among the bushes at the side of the garden, stooping from time to time as if in search of something.

(To be continued.)

"Do you and John ever quarrel?" Marcie asked. Audrey ran her fingers over Marcie's dark hair. "Sometimes," she said.

Borrowed Plane Falls, Two Die At Fort Leavenworth

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., June 1. (AP)—A search was started here today for the bodies of two Fort Leavenworth mechanics who drowned yesterday when a plane they "borrowed" fell into the Missouri river. A third soldier escaped drowning after a long struggle with the current.

The dead:

Private Otto C. Hathaway, St. Joseph, Mo.

Private William R. Garrett, Lexington, Okla.

These two with Private Leonard Lemay were attached to the air service detachment at Fort Leavenworth. Yesterday C. J. Michael of Kansas City, arrived at the post field in a new plane to visit his father, and obtained permission to leave his plane pending better flying conditions. The soldiers took the plane and negotiated about three miles when Garrett, who was acting as pilot, lost control, the ship falling into the river.

Moscicki Elected Polish President To Succeed General

WARSAW, June 1.—(AP)—Professor Ignats Moscicki is the new president of Poland. He was elected by the national assembly today to succeed President Wojciechowski, who resigned following the recent military coup led by Marshal Pilsudski.

The election came on the second ballot today. Professor Moscicki received 281 votes as against 209 for Count Bninski, candidate of the right parties, and one for M. Marek, socialist. Sixty-three ballots were blank. Seven parliamentarians were absent which meant that 274 votes were necessary for election.

Marshal Pilsudski was elected by the assembly yesterday, but declined the post because he said the constitution did not protect the chief executive against parliament by giving him power to dissolve the legislative body even in case of urgent necessity. Professor Moscicki, elected today, was his choice for the place.

Professor Moscicki was born in 1867. He studied chemistry in Riga university and also in London and for a time was professor of electro-chemistry and electro-physics in Swiss universities.

COMPLEXION CLEARS UP, FEELS CHEERFUL AGAIN

"When I got married and went to housekeeping," says Mrs. Pearl Tabor, of Candler, N. C., "my mother told me to get a package of Black-Draught and keep some on hand for biliousness and constipation. That was 15 years ago, and since that time I have very rarely been without it.

"I have found it the best relief for constipation I can get. It leaves no bad after effects, and a dose now and then keeps the system rid of impurities which would accumulate and cause serious trouble.

"Occasionally I have had spells of headache and sour stomach. When I notice a spell of this kind coming on, I begin taking Black-Draught. I take a dose every night for several days, just a pinch of the powder, and I soon find I'm all right.

"If my color has become yellow, which it often does, it clears up right away after taking Black-Draught, and I'm rosy and cheerful again.

"I have found Black-Draught invaluable in raising my family. My mother has used Black-Draught for 35 years, and she thinks there is nothing like it. She has used it frequently during that time and she thinks she can't get along without it. I certainly can recommend it for it has saved me many a bad spell."

Thousands of families keep a package of Black-Draught in the medicine chest, for prompt use when needed. To take a dose of Black-Draught at the first sign of constipation is not half as disagreeable as the symptoms which will soon develop if the trouble be neglected. Constipation is the fore-runner of too many serious ills to be neglected. Do not neglect yours, but get a package of Black-Draught at once. Sold by all druggists. JA134

DEBT FUNDING PLAN BLOCKED

House Opponents of French Proposal Halt Effort To Vote

WASHINGTON, June 1.—(AP)—The house engaged today in heated debate on the French war debt settlement which was taken up after its opponents had won an initial skirmish by blocking an attempt to force a final vote on ratification before night adjournment.

Representative Tilson, the republican leader, however, served notice he would press for action tomorrow, explaining he was anxious to send the bill of ratification as speedily as possible to the senate where stiff opposition is expected.

The settlement, negotiated by the American debt commission, proposes funding the debt of $6,847,074,000 in principal and interest, over a sixty-two year period. Initial payments begin with $30,000,000 annually for the first two years, gradually increasing thereafter.

Representatives Collier of Mississippi and Rainey of Illinois, both democrats, led the attack against the settlement on the ground that it was not based on France's capacity to pay. Rainey contending that the ways and means committee, in recommending acceptance of the agreement had only a statement from Secretary Mellon, head of the debt commission, to substantiate its action.

Mr. Rainey said the afreement was approved at a committee meeting of two hours and 15 minutes duration while other house committees pondered for months to obtain information on small claims against the government.

THE CONFLICT OF GENERATIONS

THERE is a constant conflict going on between the rising generation and the one preceding it. Try as we may to understand one another the older people are apt to think that the younger ones are lacking in stability, impatient of discipline and will probably "fall down on the job" when they must take over the affairs of the world and manage without the advice of their elders.

The younger generation think and frankly say that their elders are old fogyish, wedded to the past and its outgrown ideals and utterly unable to see the world as it now is and adjust themselves to it.

Randolph S. Bourne, defending his generation of 15 years ago, declared that it "practically brought itself up." That the "modern child of ten is almost his own master," and that the "helplessness of modern parents face to face with these conditions is amusing."

He admits that there is a "peculiarly headstrong and individualistic character among the young people, and a complete bewilderment on the part of the parents." This condition must be admitted as true today as it was 15 years ago. In fact, most of the present generation would say that the character of the young people referred to and the bewilderment of the parents had intensified during the past decade.

"The latter," he says, "frankly do not understand their children, and their lack of understanding and of control over them means a lack of moral guidance which, it has always been assumed, young people need until they are safely launched in the world. The two generations misunderstand each other as they never did before. This fact is a basal one to any comprehension of the situation."

Bourne admits that the rising generation is eager for pleasure, but insists that former generations were not less so but were more rigorously repressed. That the round of social gayety in which even high school young people are plunged may well teach them social virtues and that after a few years the avidity for pleasure naturally subsides.

As to the instability of character and lack of responsibility, is it not true that with little or no training young people are apt to drift about in the business world until they find something to interest them, and that then they throw themselves into their work and achieve success? Bourne thought so. He states:

"I have seen too much of this not to wonder, somewhat impiously perhaps, whether the boasted character of our others was not rather the result of their coming into contact with the proper stimulus at the proper time, than of any tougher, grittier strain in their spiritual fibre."

According to him the younger generation is less concerned about individual goodness than about improving general conditions.

"Stop talking about liberty and justice and love," he cries, "and show us institutions that shall be free or just or loveable."

He pleads for an effort on the part of the older generation to understand the younger. "Would it not be better in every way to help us in our aspirations and endeavors, or, failing that, at least to strive to understand just what those aspirations and endeavors are?" he asks.

Indeed an effort on the part of each generation to understand and appreciate the other without criticism would at least lessen the conflict, we aver.

SPEAKING OF CHAIN STORES

THIS is a rapidly moving age. Think of the chain stores. A recent report shows that the Woolworth company did business of $239,000,000 in 1925. The corporation had 1,423 stores in operation at the close of that year, and has since opened seventeen.

They did not have chain stores in the good old days. They did not have concrete highways. They did not have motor vehicles. They did not have aerial mail carriers. They did not have the radio.

Where do we go from here?

THE COUNTRY'S SALVATIONS

Cape Girardeau, Mo., they have a Church Promotion association that concerns itself industriously with development of the religious life of the community.

It is a none-sectarian afair, organized by a protestant who is president; the secretary is a Catholic and the largest contributor to its support is a Jew. The association functions for all denominations in the city and limits the scope of its activity to none.

In these days of quibbling and controversy over dogmatic interpretations it is refreshing to find a Cape Girardeau which is not particularly concerned with the wording of Christianty, but which believes in Christian theory sufficiently to carry on the work it is doing.

The Cape Girardeau's, after all, are the Salvations of the country.

TRUE WISDOM

WE frequently speak of the "wisdom of the ages," as if wisdom had been accumulating all down the centuries since man's beginning. If this were so we should be very much wiser than the men of say two or three thousand years ago.

But are we? Can we honestly think we have attained even a small amount more wisdom in, say, the management of public affairs, in tolerance, in open-mindedness, than was in evidence nearly 2,400 years ago, when that fine old Greek philosopher, Socrates, walked the streets of Athens and taught the youth of the city.

Socrates, you remember, was arrested, tried and sentenced to death because it was said he "busied himself prying into things under the earth and in the heavens, and making the worse appear the better reason, and teaching the same to others."

Possibly we do not put people to death for teaching what they believe is right if we happen to disagree with them, but assuredly it still holds true as the Greek philosopher said, that "there lives not the man who would be safe in honestly opposing you (the Athenians) or any other populace, and in trying to prevent many unjust and unlawful things from taking place in the state; he, therefore, who is really fighting for the right must, if he would be safe even for a short time, lead a private life, not a public one."

Is wisdom to be found among our statesmen, or would our experience be like that of Socrates when he approached a man who was adjudged wise?

"It seemed to me," he says "that this man had the appearance of being wise in the eyes of many others, and most of all in his own, but in reality was not wise. Whereupon I tried to convince him that he only thought himself wise but was not really so, and consequently I became an object of hatred to him and to many of those who were present. And as I went away, I reasoned thus within myself: 'I am wiser than this man; for it may well be that neither of us knows anything really beautiful and good, but he thinks that he knows something when he knows nothing, whereas I neither know nor think that I know anything. I do therefore seem to be wiser than he, at least in this particular, that what I know not, I do not even think I know.'"

Summing it up, Socrates concludes that "those in best repute seem to be . . . not far from the most deficient; while others, held to be inferior, were really superior, so far as wisdom was concerned."

This was his decision after questioning statesmen, poets, artisans, etc. Each knew something of his own work, but they assumed much wisdom that they did not possess, thinking apparently that because he worked well in his own art he possessed knowledge of another and a higher nature.

This, then, this grand old man of ancient Athens believed to be the greatest wisdom—to know that you are not wise, and therefore to be afraid of nothing not even of death. "For to fear death, citizens, is nothing at all but to think you are wise when you are not wise—to think you know what you do not know. For no one knows what death is, or whether it may not be the greatest of al god to men; yet do they fear it, as if they knew it to be the greatest of evils; and what is this but the same old disgraceful ignorance—that of thinking you know what you do not know?

U. S. MONEY FOR EUROPE

A BIG national bank in the city of New York has granted Czecho-Slovakia a credit running between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000. And when paying time comes, the borrowers will damn America and Americans, "because this country has all the gold of the world."

ON WITH THE BUILDING

ON with the building in Texas, on with the development of Texas, and its resources, on with railway construction in Texas wherever it is needed. Now it is said the Cullinan interests are backing an 82-mile railroad project, from Houston to Port Arthur. They have the charter and the money. Why shouldn't they be permitted to build the line? This is a living age and not a dead age.

The Apron Of Genius

By Earl Derr Biggers

Most sumptuously was it furnished. Its lights shone dazzingly, so did its silver; snowy was its linen, and deferential was the host of waiters that should serve the patrons with Parisian dishes and Parisian wines.

But, despite its splendor, it did not thrive. Only an occasional diner, straying by chance into the narrow street, ignorant of the paradise that beckoned in the guise of the Cote d'Or, came to try the dishes of the Cafe Glacial. No clan grew up that made the Glacial their shrine, their goal at evening.

The waiters strayed aimlessly about, woeful that there was none to tip. In corners they gathered in black-coated groups to discuss the baseball extra which some lone diner had left behind him, with an intangible idea of enlivening the house of desolation. That fortune Monsieur Lefourbe had crossed the sea to find, it seemed a long way off.

And then one gray morning disaster knocked at the door of Monsieur Casserole's rooms over the Cote d'Or—disaster that took the material shape of a pale, gasping chef.

Clad only in his nightgown, and blinking like an owl caught in the sun, Monsieur Casserole faced the panting Adolphe.

"What brings you at this hour, so unheard of?" he asked, sharply.

Adolphe sank into a near-by chair and covered his face with his hands. His shoulders shook.

"Gone!" he sobbed. "Ah, Monsieur, it is quite gone!"

"What is gone?" A horrible suspicion swept though Monsieur Casserole's mind, and the next instant saw it confirmed.

"The apron of Bertrand de Bouillon the master! Forever gone!"

Monsieur Casserole also sank into a chair, and also buried his face in his hands. In one flash he saw his beloved Cote d'Or deserted, like a shrine built for a forgotten god. He saw the lights out, the chairs on the tables, as for an eternal night. A terrible nausea came over him.

"Le travail du diable," he groaned. "What is this? For ten years I—"

"As a painter or a sculptor has his model—" began Adolphe tearfully, but Casserole cut him off.

"Malpeste! A thousand times I have heard that. Search! Search! It is not for strong men to sit weeping."

"All the night I have search," Adolphe cried. "On the fire escape outside our flat Nanette the wife hangs the apron of the master each evening to dry, when she has washed from it the stains of the day's work. There last night she placed it. Again, she come for it. Morbleu! It is gone! The apron of Bertrand de Bouillon without which—"

Monsieur Casserole stood up and groped blindly for his clothes.

"The Cote d'Or must go on without it," he said firmly, though his lip twitched.

"Nom d'un nom, how?" shrieled Adolphe. "Without it! Tonnerre de Brest! As well might the world go on without the sun. The apron of the master, the inspiration for my bouillabaisse, my omelets, my filets. Without it! Of all ideas the most impossible!"

"The Cote d'Or goes on without it," repeated Monsieur Casserole, with added firmness.

And it did, but, oh, how dolefully! When the first regular patron tasted his filet that night, he looked up quickly as though some one had dealt him a blow. Hurriedly he summoned Monsieur Casserole, who came, hollow cheeked, wild eyed, as a man sick of a fever.

"What is this?" cried the patron, as though he believed himself the victim of a bad dream. "Soggy with grease! Cold! Tough as the dish for a hod carrier! Never in the days I have eaten here—"

"Ah, Monsieur, spare me!" cried Casserole. "Our chef, he is ill. So, most poorly does he cook today. Monsieur is at liberty to dine elsewhere until the chef recovers."

"Never!" cried the diner. It has been mentioned that the Cote d'Or was with some a religion. "Never! The wine is still the best in the world. I will dine here, and on wine, waiting the recovery of the poor chef."

So spoke she other regular patrons, among them the five who alone knew of the apron of inspiration, and who alone heard the story of its loss. Too loyal, too sincere in their worship, were the lovers of the Cote d'Or, to desert in the dark hour that had come upon it. Dolefully, as became those dining in a house of desolation, they stayed on, making nightly vain efforts to eat filets that were burned in grease, omelets that stayed long on the stomach's conscience, baba-au rhum that seemed an abomination in the eyes of all diners of discrimination, coffee most unspeakable, yet none dropped from the ranks. Ah, it was a noble martyrdom, was that of the Cote d'Or's faithful!

But not as martyrs did all who had been accustomed to seek this lost Paris shine. There were many who came there only to eat-not to dream themselves back across the sea in the gay city, not to fix in their minds the name Cote d'Or inseparably with the hour of dining. These, when the blow fell, but sighed and went away. They went away, and mon Dieu! did not Monsieur Casserole, standing sadly in the front of his once crowded but now nearly emptied cafe, see whither they went? The doors of the Cafe Glacial swung often and merrily, the place buzzed with trade, the waiters smiled at thought of the last liberal tip as they hurried about among the crowded tables. Monsieur Lefourbe, glancing out occasionally toward the now cheerless Cafe Cote d'Or, shrugged his shoulders and smiled.

Three weeks of sorrow and pathetic martyrdom dragged slowly by. The smile of Madame Casserole had become nothing but a memory. One night the five-Dupree and the Gates girl, Masters the medical and Hargrave the hack, and Betty Martin—gathered at the Cote d'Or in a solemn conclave and discussed the marvelous apron of Bertrand de Bouillon, and its mysterious disappearance. The proprietor hovered over their table and bemoaned, as indeed he did continually now, the loss of his trade, his reputation, and finally his hope.

"Ah, if only Adolpe had never found it in his head—this idea so foolish of the apron! Me, I cannot understand."

Masters the medical smiled.

"The artistic temperament," he said, and glanced at Dupree, who painted, and the others, who wrote. "It is not for you and me to try to understand that, Monsieur. Now, medically, I could very easily explain this freak of Adolphe's. It is a very common form of monomania. I might give you the scientific name for it. It is known as—"

"Not much," broke in Hargrave. "You don't throw anything like that at a man who is down, at least not while I am around. By the way, Casserole, I have been wondering—is there nowhere we could obtain an apron like this Bertrand de Bouillon thing? Minus the inspiration—the sighed Monsieur Casserole. "The apron of his master—by a mere touch, by the way his heart made music or was and when he put it on, he would know. Besides, he added more practically, "not outside of Paris ten years ago could an apron made as this, with such buckles, be obtained. I have—I have tried. Non, the Cote d'Or is a thing of the past."

Dupree suddenly got up from his chair and sent a waiter for a cab. The others looked after him wonderingly.

"Back in a minute," he cried from the door; "as you love me, wait for me." And he rushed out.

DOROTHY DIX

Questions From the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

"Parenthood Is a Hard Job These Days," Says Dorothy Dix, "But Any one Can Make a Success of it Who Regards It as a Career in Itself and Not as a Sideline to Golf or Business or Society."

Another thing that is the matter with parents is that they don't try to understand their children. They never make even an attempt to find out what kind of minds and souls their children have, what their aspirations and desires are and what they really think about things.

The average father and mother think they have done their full duty to their children if they feed and clothe them, and send them to school and spank them when they are bad and kiss them when they are good. It never occurs to them to consider that every child is a problem to whose solution it is their sacred duty to give the most intensive study and every bit of intelligence of which they are capable.

That is why, when the adolescent boy and girl come to the critical moment in their lives when they must choose their careers and turn to their parents for guidance, their fathers and mothers fail them.

Think of it. Is there anything in the world more amazing than that a father and mother could have lived with a child for 18 or 20 years, could have watched its development for that length of time with so little interest and curosity as to not even to have observed what tastes it had, what apititudes, what talents?

They have never even noticed that John, who is dull about books, has brains in his fingers, or that Tom is a bookworm, or that Sam invariably out-trades the other boys and has a corner on all the marbles in the neighborhood, or that Maud is beautiful but dumb and that Mary is a born executive.

So the parents who have made no study of their children's talents do not put the boy with mechanical talents into some occupation in which his gifts will find an opportunity for expression and in which he will be happy and successful doing the work nature intended him to do. Nor do they put the studious boy into a profession nor make a business man of the one who was forsordained and predestined to be a merchant.

They leave the poor, ignorant youngsters to flounder around and take the first job that offers and get into the occupations for which they have no taste nor inclination and where they are failures because they are round pegs in square holes. Whereas they might have been great successes if only their fathers and mothers had taken the trouble to put them into their right places in the beginning.

Worse still, instead of studying their children or finding out what they are fitted for, many parents impose their own wills upon the youngsters and force them into careers that are a martyrdom to them. Or else they set their big flat feet down on genius and crush it out of existence.

Father, who considers a carcass of dressed beef one of the most beautiful articles in nature, cannot understand why his temperamental and finely strung son shudders away from raw meat and bloody bones and wants to waste his time playing a fiddle. Mother, who believes all actresses hussies, refuses to let her gifted daughter go on the stage, and so two lives are ruined and a discontented and disappointed man and woman fret their incompetent way through life, victims to their parents' lack of understanding and narrowness.

Another thing that is particularly the matter with parents just now is that they are in a senseless panic. The whole world is full of bugaboos to them and they see dangers where none exist. They have read so much about flaming youth that they think it is about to set the universe on fire. They have heard so much about wild parties that they picture the boys and girls of today as being on a perpetual orgy. So the great majority of parents have either thrown up their hands and quit and let their youngsters run loose or, else they have clamped the lid dow non them and evighrda lid down and give no liberty whatever.

Canary Birds and Pneumonia

For many years express companies all over the country paid heavily for losses in shipments of canary birds. The express companies undertook to deliver livestock satisfactorily packed for shipping and provided with food and drink in a living condition. It was found, however, that nearly all canary birds sent by express died on the way. Presently they discovered that the birds were all dying of pneumonia, and this was traced down to the fact that they got themselves wet and consequently cold in the car by taking baths, as birds are prone to do, in their water dishes. Their lowered temperature allowed them to succumb to pneumonia germs which are found everywhere in dust. Finally the question was solved by a clever man who installed patent ink wells for drinking vessels for the birds, so that by pecking the bird could get a swallow at a time and no more.

Now what do you know about that?

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE
GEMINI

Today's planetary aspects are negative, so far as actions are concerned, but reveal a decidedly adverse effect on the emotions. Routine duties only should engage your attention, and your every effort should be directed towards an endeavor to counteract the impulse to think and say ugly things. The signs indicate that, above all other feelings, jealousy will predominate, and it is well to remember that in jealousy there is more self-love than love." You will, also have to fight pessimism and lack of confidence in yourself. In addition to all this, you will, unless you establish thorough poise, say unkind words that will hurt and rankle.

Children born today will be healthy and strong and, during infancy, will never cause worry or anxiety to their parents. On the contrary, they will engender pride and provoke happiness. In their teens they are liable to be afflicted with a sudden illness. This will make great demands on patience and on watchfulness. Their dispositions will be generally cheerful, although, at rare intervals, they will sulk. Unless this tendency is curbed, they will eventually develop grouches. They will not succeed in any field of endeavor that involves sedentary work. They will flourish in the "out-of-doors" atmosphere. They will prove to be conciliatory, rather than aggressive.

If today is your birthday, you are always complaining of the ingratitude of others but, strange to say, are never grateful yourself. No matter how small a service you may render you pat yourself on the back, take unction to your soul, and expect the recipients of your assistance to be forever giving thanks. On the other hand there are none so ready as you to forget, or so anxious to minimise anything that is done for your benefit by another.

"Ingratitude's a weed of every clime,
It thrives too fast at first, but fades in time."

Your intellect is keen, but very often your judgment is warped. You possess a fair degree of executive ability, and are a great stickler for details. You have little confidence in others, and think nothing well done that you have not done yourself. You are hardly fitted to fill any position of commanding responsibility and are more liable to find your level in some position of a subordinate nature.

Your home life is happy until such time as you allow yourself to think of the thoughtfulness and ingratitude of your mate or children.

WHEN THE LEAVES BEGIN TO TURN

By Louise G. Redemeyer

I studied Botany this term
And learned about the trees,
The plants, the bulbs, the flowers, too,
And how the busy bees
Take pollen from one kind of plant
To fertilize the next;
I studied these things out of doors
And also in the text.

Of all the parts about a plant
I like the leaves the best;
They seem to me like little flags
By lovely winds caressed.
I like the dainty tracery
Of veins in elm and oak;
But darn a teacher who can't take
A little harmless joke!

She played on me a dirty trick
And for revenge I burn!
She asked this question: "Tell just when
The leaves begin to turn."
She gave me zero for the term
Because I said, "Well, ma'am.
Believe me, leaves begin to turn
The night before exam!"

Housewife—Yes, come right in. You can go to work on the dining room rug, and when you get that done you can clean the one in the living room. You say you can clean curtains with it?

Salesman—Yes, ma'am.

Housewife—Then you can do that when you finish with the bedrooms.

(Doorbell rings. Enter second salesman.)

Housewife—Oh, you're the washing machine demonstrator, aren't you? You'll find the washing ready in the basement. Please hury.

(Again the doorbell rings. Enter third salesman).

Housewife—You can demostrate that electric iron just as soon as the washing machine demonstration gets through with the washing. If that oil-mop demonstrator doesn't hurry, I'll phone in a complaint! My woodwork needs going over so badly! There he is now!

(Doorbell rings).

Housewife—No, it's that tiresome old gas stove demonstrator! I'm not ready to have him cook! I wonder what makes him so early!

(Doorbell buzzes).

Housewife—Isn't that nice! There's the automobile salesman ready to demonstrate the car. I'm so tired out with my housework that a ride will do me so much good! Tell him I'll be out in just a minute!

DINNER STORIES

One city man called upon another and after a glance round the office inquired:

"How's your new office boy getting along?"

"Fine!" was the reply. "He's got things so mixed up that I couldn't get along without him!"

A clergyman who had accepted an invitation to officiate at Sunday services in a neighboring town intrusted his new curate with the performance of his own duties. On returning home he asked his wife what she thought of the curate's sermon.

"It was the poorest one I ever heard," she replied promptly—"nothing in it at all."

Later in the day the clergyman, meeting the curate, asked him how he had got on.

"Oh, very well!" was the reply. "I didn't have time to prepare anything, so I preached one of your unused sermons."

The motor car was driven by a determined young woman who had knocked down a man without injuring him much.

She did not try to get away. Instead she stopped the car, descended to the solid earth and faced him manfully.

"I'm sorry it happened," she said grudgingly, "but it was all your fault. You must have been walking carelessly. I'm an experienced driver. I've been driving a car for seven years."

"Well," replied her victim angrily, "I'm not a novice myself. I've been walking for fifty-seven years."

SAFFRON SKIN FROM SOUR BILE

South Georgian Drives Out Enormous Quantity Sour Bile With Dodson's Liver Tone

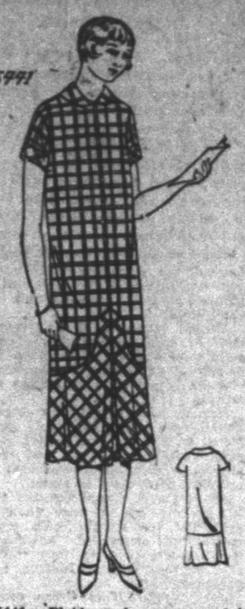

After a long period of the worst form of weakness and the terrible feeling of sickness that comes from a system loaded with soure bile, Mr. Sam Puckett says: "When I kept getting those bilious attacks reckon I took enough calomel to kill a mule. Got worse all the time. Finally I turned saffron color all over. My wife happened to read about Dodson's Liver Tone in the Weekly Constitution so we drove to town and got a bottle. It was like magic. It drove quarts of sour bile out of me as black as ink. From that day I have felt as if I had a new liver, and whenever I begin to feel sweary and bilious, with no appetite, a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone puts me to rights."

This wonderful, quick-action, liver starter ought to be in every household, if for no other reason than to stop the use of dangerous calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is pleasant to take, even for children, and never makes you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.—Adv.

No Law in Texas Effective, Counsel For Suspect Say

EASTLAND, June 1.—(AP)—Expressing doubt as to whether any Texas laws are in force at present, attorneys defending Chester Johnson on a murder charge presented an extraordinary demurrer in district court here today.

The defendant and his attorneys they claim, are unable to determine whether the legislature passed any new laws. If any such laws were passed, counsel maintained none of them have been published bearing the certificate of secretary of state as required by the constitution of the state of Texas.

"Johnson is on trial for murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Plummer Tyler at Cisco last March 18. Self defense has been alleged.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 35-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.—Adv.

Money Saving Facts About Concrete Street Paving

Concrete is durable.

It will not shove, roll or rut. It remains as true and even as built.

Concrete pavement is now satisfying taxpayers in hundreds of cities throughout the United States. 1000 cities built concrete streets in 1925.

Maintenance cost is low. No expensive special equipment is required.

Concrete provides a safe surface for traffic. It is never slippery after rains.

Concrete's light gray surface harmonizes with the green of lawns and trees, also with sidewalks, curb and gutter and in-drives, which are universally of concrete. This light gray color is of special value at night. Passing vehicles and people crossing the street are more easily seen.

Concrete pavement is not noisy. 95 per cent of traffic today is rubber tired. Rubber on concrete does not make noise.

Oil drippings will not cause concrete to disintegrate.

35,500,000 square yards of concrete pavement placed on city streets in the United States in 1925.

Concrete gives you more pavement value for each dollar invested than any other type.

Maniac Captured After Terrorizing Houston Residents

HOUSTON, June 1.—(AP)—Will Thomas, escaped lunatic, listed at the state asylum at Austin as a "homicidal maniac" who has terrorized residents of the south end section for the past 24 hours, was captured today without resistance by four city detectives and traffic officers.

The negro gave an incoherent story of his wanderings since last Sunday when he escaped from the state hospital for the insane. Many police officers had been assigned by Chief of Police Tom Goodsen to find the maniac, following numerous telephone calls from residents in Montrose addition, both Monday night and this morning.

The negro is said to have called at the front doors of several houses and asked to use the telephone. A description given by the terrorized people fitted with descriptions which the identification bureau and police station had of one Will Thomas, convicted of insanity following the killing of a white man named Allen in 1918.

J. S. Smith, 2602 Whitney street, said the negro worked as a yard man for his neighbors some years ago, and was a trusted servant.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—(AP)—S. H. Davis and other claimants to Indian land in Oklahoma which has been owned by Frazier McLish, a Chickasha Indian, lost their appeal today in the supreme court.

Yates Drug Store To Have Formal Opening At 730: P.M. Wednesday

The future home of the home-made Martha Washington candies, internationally known, will be established Wednesday at the new Yates Drug Store at Ninth and Broad with a formal opening to the public from 7:30 to 11 o'clock.

R. L. Yates, proprietor, and his son, Gerald Yates of the Yates Cafe and Tenth Street Fruitery, located on Tenth street are joint owners of the shop. An attractive light stucco building, located at the corner of Ninth and Broad streets directly opposite the Bellevue Park, will include a drug store, confectionery, light grocery supplies and sporting goods handled on a small scale.

The interior of the store is cool and airy with woodwork of white and chairs, tables and fountain of mahogany. Martha Washington wallpaper, which is used in all the shops over the United States, is a distinguishing feature of this store. Wide doors on the south and west and brightly colored lights make the place one of the most attractive of its kind in the city.

The building is 20 by 58 feet and the curbing has been cut back six feet in front of the store and on the west side to facilitate curb service.

A sandwich counter especially constructed by the Lewis-Hager Sheet Metal Works has been installed equipped with a hot metal plate for toasting bread, wooden bread board and drawers for silverware and other fountain accessories. The refrigerator will accomodate sandwich fillings, candies and butter.

An additional store room at the rear of the building was constructed for the purpose of candy-making when the kitchen will be installed about September 1. The store will manufacture its own Martha Washington candies at that time. Specialties in the way of favors and elaborate candies of all kinds may be secured after the installation of the kitchen.

Samples of the candies will be distributed Wednesday night at the opening by a young lady dressed in Martha Washington costume.

At the union meeting Monday night following the awarding of the loving cup, Mrs. Alva Willgus told of the state Christian Endeavor convention to be held at San Antonio June 11 to 16. Around 75 delegates from the local organizations will attend the convention. Plans for their amusement while in San Antonio were outlined and the programs spoken of.

Women Lead Men In Ad Field, Is Claim Before Club

"That women are capable of handling details to a fine degree rather than the more abstract features makes advertising an ideal occupation for women in the business world," Miss Josephine Fisk, advertising manager of P. B. M. company, declared at the Advertising club Tuesday noon in a talk on "Is Advertising a Fitting Field for Women?"

Miss Fisk told of the qualities natural to a woman and the actual ability that is necessary in this vast field. "She can furnish the artistic touch, the atmosphere of complete familiarity with the merchandise and a style of writing copy that a man cannot affect in his work.

"A woman is a natural born advertiser. She talks of her home, her housework and her children, things that are all tangible and concrete and tend to establish definite details of articles used in the home. The largest advertising agencies employ women to write the copy and men for the arrangements of layout alone. The latter posseses a natural tendency toward planning campaigns and affairs of abstract nature."

Feature advertising was discussed, the shopping columns, stylist and holliday ads, as being excellently prepared by women.

The fourth purpose of the club was announced by President W. S. Abbot who is outlining the principles of an advertising club:

"To bring together those interested or engaged in legitimate advertising and sales management."

A committee composed of D. M. Bernard, J. B. Price and George H. Wilson was designated to take up the matter of the delay in cross-town mail service with the postal department.

The first of a series of attendance prizes were won by J. L. Eggleston, and W. S. Abbott who received 500 pounds of ice and a gallon of ice cream.

REACH NO DECISION

Board of Regents Fail to Agree Of Investments.

HOUSTON, June 1.—(AP)—The finance committee of the board of regents of the state university apparently had not reached any definite decision in connection with the investment of $2,000,000 in university funds when they adjourned after their first session here today.

A statement after the meeting merely said the subject of the investment had been considered and that this afternoon the committee met with a number of Texas oil men in connection with a proposition to open potash deposits on university land.

AUSTIN, June 1.—(AP)—Travis county's court house celebrates its "golden anniversary" today. Exactly 50 years ago, county officers first took up duties in the building, then the civic pride of the country around.

LYNCH PLEADS AGAINST 'BET'

Davidson Devotes Speech To Condemning Ma's And Moody's Agreement

LIVINGSTON, June 1.—(AP)—Lynch Davidson spoke here today on his plans for a business administration of state affairs and turned aside long enough to comment on the bet between Dan Moody and the Fergusons, which, he said, demonstrated their unfitness to administer state affairs.

"For Ferguson to put the high office which his wife holds on the plane of a crap game is not astonishing," he said. "As for young Moody, neither he nor those papers who are now so busy trying to explain can ever do so satisfactorily to the people of Texas. The absurdity of the explanation that it gives the people a chance to determine whether they want an attorney general of Ferguson's of of their own choosing is boriak. The people already have chosen Moody for their attorney general and he has "no" right to gamble away the office."

Davidson sai dtnat if either Ferguson or Moody is elected to office the defeated faction will continue to hamper successful administration and "turmoil will be perpetuated."

"Texas is not paving way for a business administration by a campaign based on the Ferguson and Moody tactics," said Davidson. "Ninety-five per cent of the governor's work is purely business and has nothing to do with either legal matters or mud slinging orstory. It takes as much ability to spend $20,000,000 effectively on our highways as it does to make $20,000,000. That's as much money as the Southern Pacific railroad spends annually in Texas and they hire the best brain in the nation to spend it for them.

"Texas pays highway commissioners $2,500 a year, at the most, to work a few days a week and in a sort of left-handed way spend $20,000,000 a year on our roads."

"If you elect me governor I don't expect to be a popular governor. I'm going to eliminate the pie-counter through a civil service organization. I've never had anything of my own but what I made it run. The state railroad is the only Texas property that has been entrusted to my care and today it is one of the best pieces of propsty in this state, earning thousands of dollars a month. Before I took hold of it it was two streaks of rust and every time the wheels turned the taxpayers' money went off into space."

Davidson said that in reorganizing the state railroad he had to fight off those who had been in control and he had not forgotten the unpopularity which had resulted for a time when he cleaned up other departments of the state, while a state official.

State Needs Audit

He said that he had been able to win financial independence under the beneficient laws of the state of Texas and, he said: "I have made a solemn pledge to myself that I will offer my services to this state to give it a business administration to pay the debt of gratitude I owe.

"There was a time," he said, "when the honor and the name of the office appealed to me, but though it is a great honor, the time when that appealed to me has long since passed. I want to be governor for the power that it gives me to put new efficiency into state affairs, and to pay dividends to the stockholders of this great corporation, in better administration and lower taxes.

"The eleemosynary institutions are just like the hotels, strictly business institutions; the $34,000,000 a year spent on schools would bring one-third more benefit in longer terms, if applied under the county unit system, instead of the per capita system. An auditing system is imperatively needed to check the $90,000,000 a year spent by the state. These things are purely business."

Metzler And Lapan Slam Homers In Ninth To Stop Sniper's Stormy Steers

DeFate and Spudder Backstop Enjoy Day With Bludgeon, But Hack Miller Almost Spoils Show

BY BLONDY CROSS.

There are numerous formulae for tagging onto the lucrative section of a baseball tabulation. However, when you simmer it all down a majority of clubs depends on one of two systems, rarely both. Generally speaking your victorious nine cops its contest either by a sharp usage of science and agility or by what is termed for lack of flossier lingo, BRUTE STRENGTH. Our noble Spudders sprang the latter forte, if such it could be labeled, on Sniper's stormy Steers yesterday afternoon in the Gardner arena. 'Twas a battle of bloody bludgeons and Brainard's brawny bruisers bludgeoned the better.

Coming up in the eighth, Hack Miller, a stocky, tank-like person who performs defensively in the Dallas outer guard, found Rhino Williams on the mid hassock by virtue of a double and his team four runs in arrears. The square-rigged gentleman straight-away socked a vociferous homer far over the left garden protection. That was Miller's second non-stop crack of the game. Then, in the ninth, Woeber and Gross followed an infield error with a single and two-bagger, scoring a run, after which the same under-slung walloper injected a bingle to right. The kick, the walk and this bevy of blows knocked three runs into the scoring column, giving the Thundering Herd a 9-8 lead.

Teh margin was meager, for the Spudders tore in and paired two circuit smashes with a single to save the day, 11-9. With one away, Alex Metzler, back in a Spud monkey suit after a 17-day sentence with the Dallas club, expressed his joy at being free and home again by swishing a slam over the left end of the center field batting screen, tying her up. Tony DeFate followed with a sharp single through the box and then Pete Lapan also had been enjoying himself hugely with the willow all afternoon, in delirious delight came through for his fourth clean blow and second round-tripper of the festival.

Lapan hit four for four, two homers and a brace of singles, sending over four runs in all.

She was a great game to win and tough one to lose. Dallas took the lead in the fourth, scoring four runs, and so aroused the ire of Jim Roberts that the big Spudder right hander bore down and turned 'em back in order the next three copplets with exception of a base on balls to Miller.

Meanwhile ,the Spudders got to Hank Reviere, knocked him out and continued a driving attack on Holtzhauser. But Jim almost pitched himself down in the fifth, six and seventh. There were two out, however, when Rhino and Hack doubled on him in the eighth and two more but with runners on the paths the ninth before the Herd pushed over what appeared momentarily to be the victory margin. Jim was then in the hole when Tate, first man up, dashed a dirty bounder at short but it took a sudden nose dive into the dust just as DeFate went down after it, and trickled on into left field. Woeber, batted for Hugling, singled between Turgeon and Washburn. Jim fanned Holtzhauser and Bauman poped to Turgeon, but Gross doubled to left and Miller hoisted a sky to virgin territory in right. Williams went out, Turgeon to Washburn.

DeFate homered in the fifth with Lapan on the runways. He doubled in the seventh. His blow in the ninth made it three smacks for the day.

Gross, Williams and Miller carried the bulk of the Dallas attack. Gross came in for a double and single. Williams poled four for five, and Hack committed the two home runs and a single already alluded to, batting over seven runs. Dallas touched Jim up for 11 hits.

The Spudders combined on Riviere and Holtzhauser for 14. It wasn't pitcher's party, but credit goes where it is due, Roberts waded into a series of tough breaks, but stayed in the deck and flogged away at a fur-ball gait, neither giving nor asking no quarter. Six innings of the nine, he couldn't be touched. Ten of the foreign safeties were bunched into the nine cantos.

The second game of the series is carded this afternoon at 4 bells. Manager Lester is Brainard's probable pitching choice. The rejuvenated Spudders aren't particular Dan Works, but prefer Slim Love.

Either club displayed much in the way of a batting attack through the first three stanzas. The pitchers had things very much their way although Riviere walked two in the first three in the second and a pair of Spudders bumped singled in the fourth. The initial passes came with one away and the next batsman was given out on strikes. Metzler waited until he was out for a base on balls in the second. DeFate was cut down at first.

Lapan walked and Roberts followed suit, Riviere to Riley. Then Lapan drew a coupon, but Turgeon struck out wistfully. Washburn and Gross ard punched one-basers through the infield in the third. There was no runs down. Metzler and DeFate filed to Bauman at second.

Gross the annoying fourth round single. Gross and Williams got credit for bingles past second. Millard followed with a breezy loft that just scraped over the port barrier after narely avoided going foul. Riley relayed to Turge and O'Brien aviated Hankins, but Tate rifted a left field double and came home a moment later on what goes into the records as a passed ball chalked by Hugling to Lapan. But Pete declares it was a foul tip, that the umps is all dumb and unnecessary. Erwin Hungling 'em behind the plate. The ball bounced off Lapan's chest and, in following a furious lunge at the pitch by Hungling and rolled almost to the enemy dugout. Lapan made no effort to retrieve the displaced apple, but turned to the batter and asked for another. Tate charged in and score, touched off argument by Brainard and Lapan, failed to move the stone-wall indicator. The midget Spudder backstop came back in the do-or-die half of the inning and vented his wrath on Tinker, larruping a vituperative drive deep into the mesquite orchid that borders the back side of the port pasture.

As if merely needing an incentive to get started and catechising the Dallas runs in the fourth as such, Brainard's boisterous aggregation started in on Reviere at a mauling gait, scored four in the fifth and sent him to the dugout in the sixth. An error, a walk and an infield forceout put Jenkins on third. Metzler scored him with a single between first and second. There were two on the hassocks and DeFate at bat. Three runs were required to put Wichita Falls in the lead. They got 'em. Tony toed in and leaned against one of Tink's choice offerings for a ride over the left field fence. Lamb sent a flitting single past short in the next round. Turgeon picked a pass and Conley plucked Riviere from from the knob, running Holtzhauser out before everybody. Imagine a man with a name like that crowding into a box score. Jenkins struck out and Washburn aviated to right center. Lamb cantered to third after the catch. A moment after, Turgeon in second. Brainard chased the little fellows home with a single between short and second.

DeFate's bludgeon clicked again in the seventh. eH dumped a delve against the left center boards for two bases, then came in on Lapan's single to the mid pasture.

Williams wafted a misjudgment double to left in the Dallas eighth and Miller followed with his second homer. That put the score at 8-6, Wichita Fals. The Williams blow and Miller clout came after there were two gone. The Spudders failed in their half of the inning. You know the rest.

Commish Orders Dempsey to Box Wills by June 22

NEW YORK, June 1.—(AP)—Exercising its progrative as the supreme court of boxing in New York, the state athletic commission today directed Jack Dempsey to sign articles of agreement for a title fight with Harry Wills not later than June 22.

With Commissioner Brower the only absentee, the board passed, by a unanimous vote, the following resolution:

"In that Jack Dempsey on July 17, 1925, accepted the challenge of Harry Wills to box for the heavyweight championship of the world, the commission now feels that ample time has elapsed for signing articles and hereby directs Jack Dempsey to enter into proper articles of agreement with the challenger not later than June 22, 1926."

The resolution was mailed to Dempsey tonight.

Asked to explain the board's action, Chairman Farley said it was intended to clear the atmosphere." Boxing observers, however, looked upon it as a further complication in the situation, with Tex Rickard holding Dempsey's contract and presumably moving toward his objective, a title match between Dempsey and Gene Tunney on Sept. 16 at the Yankee Stadium. The commission, however, Farley said, will "pot listen" to proposals for a Dempsey-Tunney contest.

"GREAT SCOTT!" Hornsby's Cousin Longs to Hear It

SCOTT HORNSBY

ROGERS HORNSBY

BY NORMAN E. BROWN.

Baseball fans in and around St. Louis—when not panning the Browns and cheering the Cardinals, are discussing the possible future of Scott Hornsby, cousin of the one and only Rajah Hornsby.

This kin o fthe Card leader is making a name for himself as a catcher and hitter wit hn St. Louis high school team.

Young Hornsby has been leading the interscholastic league in St. Louis in hitting for the past two years in just about as emphatic fashion as that displayed by his famous relative in topping the National leaguers.

The more enthusiastic boosters of Scott say he has the same general build, the same bating style, even the same stance at the plate. In his first seven games this year he hit .475.

He has the same speed afoot, judging by his performance on the bases for the school outfit. In addition to this he seems to be a natural born catcher.

Popular Ping Bodie Goes To Bears In Outright Sale

Culmination of a baseball transaction that Wichita Falls fans have been expecting for several days was announced Tuesday. The great Ping Bodie, Wichita Falls' batting pride, joins another team before the week is over. Pizzola has been sold outright to San Antonio, according to Spudder moguls. The sale price was not divulged.

Honus Mitze, Bear pilot, has endeavored all spring to purchase Bodie and it was learned during the recent Spudder road trip upon announcement that Alex Metzler, youthful California outfielder, was to be returned to the Spudders by Dallas the past Monday, that plans were being made to send Bodie to the Bears.

Ping batted at a .347 clip with the Spudders last season, his first in Texas, and at present is hitting in the vicinity of .360, leading the club.

Metzler is a better than .300 hitter, although he has not displayed as much power as Bodie. He is fast, young and a scrapper. The popular Pizzola is neither fast nor young.

In experience, slugging ability and baseball generalship Bodie has a large margin over Metzler. But in speed on the paths, speed in the outfield, Metzler takes the lead.

On the fact of it, Spudder officials are sacrificing brawn in attack for swiftness in both defense and attack, or what would you have?

Metzler has another asset that Bodie lacks, that of youth. It is the case of a veteran giving way to a youngster. The great Bodie's days are numbered in baseball. Metzler has his career before him.

Buffs Halt Bears

SAN ANTONIO, June 1.—(AP)—It took 13 hits for the Bears to score one run and thus escape a shut-out at the hands of Houston, which won 6 to 1, today. Three hits and two wild pitches by Jim Lindsey, coupled with an unaccepted chance, gave the Bears their start in the second inning when they scored three runs. The Bears were unable to hit Claude Davenport with runners on the bases, and superb fielding by Demaggio and Peel held the Bears in check. Score:

SAN ANTONIO TO AMARILLO ROAD BEING BOOSTED

Chambers of Commerce Work For Highway And Rail Line

SAN ANTONIO, June 1.—(AP)—Amarillo has joined hands with San Antonio in an attempt to put over two major projects. Projects that are vital to the growth and development of the two cities—the building of a railroad to connect San Antonio with the vast empire of west Texas and the paving of highway No. 9 out of San Antonio north to Amarillo.

Holding a West Texas-San Antonio good-will luncheon today, members of the San Antonio chamber of commerce heard O. C. Goodwin, manager of the Amarillo chamber tell what these two projects will mean to the two cities and the large territory involved.

"Railroads are built by supply and demand. The tonnage is increasing ton by ton each day and this meeting today is probably the initial step to bring about a strong demand for a railroad connecting San Antonio with Amarillo. One railroad, the most logical one to bridge the gap between the rails, has already made a tonnage survey. It may take a little time to get this connecting link of rails built but it is bound to come."

Speaking of the plan to pave high way No. 9, Goodwin declared "this highway is the most direct one between Amarillo and San Antonio and it is 120 miles shorter between the two towns than it is around the other way."

Tourists to Increase

"Amarillo is working on the paving of a highway to Regina, Canada, and with this highway connected with highway No. 9 the winter tourists to San Antonio will increase in leaps and bounds."

Coming back to the building of a railroad between the two cities, he said: "Such a railroad will afford the shortest route to the gulf ports. San Antonio, is the gateway to Corpus Christi and Corpus Christi is our natural outlet to the sea. Twenty million bushels of wheat will be harvested in west Texas this year. If this railroad were a reality it would mean that a majority of the wheat would move over it down to Corpus Christi and out to the ports of the world.

"Wheat is only one of the many products of west Texas—here is oil. Think of the refined oil products that would be shipped over the road. Here is a concrete example of the tonnage west Texas affords—Panhandle, a little town near Amarillo, in the month of April has the second largest tonnage in the United States on the Santa Fe railroad system."

DIVORCE CAUSE TO BE LIMITED

Presbyterians Considers Putting Bar Against Everything But Infidelity

BALTIMORE, June 1.—(AP)—Limitation of the causes of divorce to a single cause came before the general assembly of the Presbyterian church for consideration today in an overture from the Presbytery of Buffalo.

A motion to refer the question to the general council as a special commission met with a favorable reception, but a vote was deferred until tomorrow when it will be determined whether membership of the council coincides with the requirements for membership of such a commission.

The council, considering this question, would be a committee separate from itself, the duplication of membership being made in the interests of economy. The report from the committee will be made to the assembly next year, after which it must be ratified by two-thirds of the presbyteries to make any ruling final.

The laws of the church heretofore countenanced wilful desertion or a statutory offense as just causes for divorce.

The assembly also decided to maintain the present form of government which had been in effect three years when on the recommendation of the committee of bills and overtures, it voted in the negative on a motion to overture questioning of the value of the council filed by the presbytery of Chester. No comment was made on the motion and the vote was purely a commendatory gesture.

TEXAN SHARES IN GOLD CACHE

Buried Treasurer Unearthed In Mississippi Claimed For Houstonian

HOUSTON, June 1.—(AP)— Mrs. Norman G. Kittrell, wife of Judge Norman G. Kittrell, widely known Houston attorney, has been notified of the discovery near Demopolis, Ala., of a $200,000 buried treasure by her near relative Gayus Whitfield, of Middleboro, Ky.

Associated Press dispatches first carried news of the valuable find on Monday night. The discovery was made several days ago on shady grove farm, 18 miles from Demopolis, near Jefferson the original homestead of the Whitfields in Alabama. The Whitfields of Demopolis are closely related to the Kittrells of Houston. Governor Henry L. Whitfield of Mississippi is a relative of both families.

For many years the Whitfield connections have known of buried treasure left by C. Boaz Whitfield, member of one of the oldest and most aristocratic families of Alabama and descendant of the pioneer General Nathan Bryan Whitfield, but attempts to discover the buried gold proved futile.

Directions for locating the treasure were contained in papers left to the son of C. Boaz Whitfield, but the chart contained in the papers was given no serious attention until the key of the Whitfield property was found in Kentucky.

Cache Uncovered

When Gayus Whitfield began his search, according to an Associated Press dispatch, 35 negroes were employed to uncover an old boundary stake on the shady grove farm. For weeks the force worked without results, but several days ago a large cache of gold coins was discovered.

The coins consist of $20 gold pieces, minted in 1850 and before, which was buried during the Civil war days as protection against its seizure by the Union forces. The exact value of the treasure has not been divulged, although estimates place it at about $200,000.

There are eight heirs who may put in a claim for the gold, the Associated Press dispatch said, they are the daughters and sons of the four Whitfield brothers, born in the Civil war days, and sons of the pioneer General Nathan Whitfield.

Louisiana Lines To Be Purchased By Texas System

NEW YORK, June 1.—(AP)—Interest in the possible sale of the Louisiana Railway and Navigation company, to the Kansas City, Southern railway, was heightened today when R. E. Billings, counsel for the Louisiana road, conferred with L. F. Loree, head of the Kansas ity Southern and sponsor of a new southwestern merger which will also include the "Katy" and "Cotton Belt" systems.

More than a year ago the Kansas City Southern opened informal negotiations to acquire the Louisiana lines but the wide margin between the bid and asked prices has prevented completion of the deal. Because of the recent death of William Edenborn, principal owner of the road, and the desire of the Kansas City Southern turned out its enlarged system, it is believed that satisfactory terms will finally be agreed upon.

NEW YORK, June 1.—(AP)—Stock prices turned reactionary today after an opening display of strength. Heavy calling of bank loans which sent the call money rate to 5 per cent, the highest level over two months, and the apparent failure of operations on the long side to attract outside buying following a week of steadily rising prices were generally ascribed as the cause of the selling movement. Trading, however, turned dull on the decline, the day's sales aggregating only 894,200 shares as compared with 1,566,300 shares last Friday.

Business news over the week-end was mixed in character. The failure of one of the large Florida real estate development companies, reports of poor retail trade in some sections because of unseasonable weather and the announcement of a cut in high priced models by a large automobile manufacturer contrasted with the publication of several favorable earnings statements, the announcement that sales of two of the leading mail order houses were running well above those of a year ago and reports of a continuation of heavy freight traffic.

Declaration of only the regular dividends today on Mack Trucks and Atchison probably caused some selling by disappointed holders who were looking for special distributions, although none was expected in conservative banking quarters. Atchison sold down nearly 3 points to 137⅛ on the statement of President Storey that "as far as we can see now we shall need all our surplus after dividends for several years to come." Mack Trucks also sold down 3 points to 120¼ and then rallied feebly.

Heavy realizing sales impeded bullish operations in the oil shares. Atlantic Refining dropped 3¼ points to 121, Standard Oil of New Jersey preferred yielded 1¼ and most of the others showed mixed fractional changes. Steel shares failed to maintain their early gains, U. S. Steel common closing ⅝ lower at 122⅞ after having touched 124¼.

Baldwin advanced over a point on the announcement of a large order from the Aachison railroad.

Southern railroad shares received excellent support, Atlantic Pacific Line and Louisville and Nashville each closed a point or so higher, while the Southern Railway showed a small fractional recession after having touched 115⅝. Canadian Pacific preferred and New York Central fell back 1 to 2½ points, but Western Pacific preferred advanced a point to within a fraction of the year's high level.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent, advanced to 4½ and then to 5, the highest rate since the end of March. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchange trading was quiet with a drop of 1 cent to 9.00 cents in Polish zlotyss as one of the few features. Demand sterling was slightly easier at $4.86 but French and Belgian francs held relatively firm at 3.26½ and 3.16¾ cents respectively. Other changes were largely nominal.

Also the effect of the bullish private crop report were off, the market gradually eased off under the influence of more favorable weather in the belt and a fairly favorable forecast for the immediate future. NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, June 1.—A moderate early advance on low private condition figures and steady Liverpool cables was followed by reactions in the cotton market today owing to a more favorable view of the weather outlook. After selling up to 17.70 October reacted to 17.59 and closed at that figure. The general market closed quiet, net unchanged to four points lower.

The opening was steady at an advance of 3 to 5 points. Active months showed net advances of 7 to 10 points during the forenoon. There probably was some buying on another of the private end-May crop reports, piecing the condition at only 68.9 and the decrease in acreage at 2.3 per cent. This decrease was interpreted by the report as pointing to an area under cultivation of about 46,376,000 acres and the crop indication, contingent upon the character of the weather, etc., was figured at only 13,279,000 bales.

Considerably below the condition reports of last week the figures led to covering, and there also may have beena little buying early on reports of rains in the southwest which recently complained of too much moisture. A feeling prevailed in some quarters, however, that the rains would be more beneficial than otherwise in parts of Texas and Oklahoma, and that they might work eastward into sections which have been complaining of drought conditions. The outlook was for clearing weather following the rains in the southwest and, on the whole, a more optimistic view of the weather news and outlook seemed to prevail in later trading. July sold off from 18.46 to 18.36 and December from 17.65 to 17.54, the market closing at the lowest.

Seven private end-May crop reports have now made their appearance, condition figures ranging from 65.9 up to 72 and averaging 69.1. The average of acreage figures published by four authorities is 47,263,000.

Liverpool made a fairly steady showing over the local holiday, and was a moderate buyer here early.

Exports today 41,632, making 7,519,208 so far this season. Port receipts 6,738. U. S. port stocks 824,915 bales.

Texas Is Not So Fast, Venireman Declares to Judge

SAN ANTONIO, June 1—(AP)—This age is not so fast, after all. If the Prince of Wales should be thrown from his horse, the startling news would be flashed from London to San Antonio in a few minutes. That's speed.

But when a bank is robbed in San Antonio, it takes three months for the news to reach some residents of Bexar county. That's not so speedy. A rural resident of Bexas county was summoned for jury service in the trial of Earl Collins, charged with participation in the robbery of the San Antonio National bank.

When being examined by attorneys he was asked if he knew the defendant.

"No, and I didn't even know the bank had been robbed until I was summoned for jury service a few days ago," he said. "I don't take a newspaper. I haven't a telephone, and when my neighbors visit me all we talk about is the crops."

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, June 1.—(AP)—Wheat turned upward in price here today despite an unexpected set back at Liverpool and notable liquidation which rose both south and north of the Canadian line. Anxiety over adverse crop developments in regard to Kansas and Nebraska wheat had much to do with the lifting of values. Chicago closing prices for wheat were irregular, ⅝ cents net lower to ⅝ cents advance, with corn ¼ to ½ cent down, oats unchanged to ¼@⅝ cent off and provisions showing 17 to 35 cents gain.

Active buying on the part of the houses with eastern connections was a notable late feature in the wheat pit. Early in the day, however, the trend here was downward, chiefly owing to the sharp decline at Liverpool. On the other hand, Chicago unofficial estimates on the 1926 domestic yield of wheat proved to be about as had been expected and made a bullish showing as compared with the outlook a month ago. An outstanding circumstances to which these private reports gave stress was deterioration of the winter wheat in Kansas and Nebraska. Later, this was further emphasized by advices from Kansas authorities.

According to statements by Kansas experts, the wheat crop in some parts of Kansas has been going backward daily and 14 counties will fail to yield to more than three bushels to the acre. Active demand for cash wheat at Kansas City today, said to be the best in ten days counted also as a stimulating influence. Meanwhile, a decrease of about 1,000,000 bushels today in the United States visible supply total left the aggregate at about half the amount of a year ago.

Fine weather and liberal receipts of corn weakened the corn market and oats as well. In some cases corn touched a new low price record for the season.

Provisions rose in response to an upturn in the value of hogs and of cotton oil.

Writes Obituary And Then His '30'

DENVER, June 1.—(AP)—After visiting Denver newspapers which he presented with a copy of his autobiography and picture, and promising them that he would give them "a good story," in a few days, Charles M. Welch, former New York newspaperman, organizer of the Welch-Haffner Printing company and prominent realtor, sent a bullet through his brain at his home here today. He died several hours later.

Pinned to the coat lapel of the wounded man when he was found was a typewritten note addressed to the coroner which gave the cause of the suicide as inability to compete with the modern industrial methods.

Welch, who was 55 years old, according to his autobiography, started his newspaper career in the office of the Syracuse Herald.

Two Are Sentenced For Beating Officer

AMARILLO, June 1.—(AP)—Jess F. Campbell and Aubrie Sharp of Amarillo today were sentenced to 14 months each in the federal penitentiary after being found guilty in U. S. district court here on a charge of "conspiracy to intimidate a witness," growing out of an assault on W. W. West, prohibition agent of Fort Worth, in front of a hotel here in June, 1925.

The sentence was passed by Judge James C. Wilson.

West was attacked and beaten by two men, after he had testified against Sharp in a liquor trial here.

Oklahoma Wheat Reported Smutty

WICHITA, Kan., June 1.—(AP)—F. E. Cale of Renfrow, Okla., has sent samples of wheat heads to the Wichita board of trade, every kernel of which is smutty.

In a note Cale said there are "hundreds of acres of such wheat in Oklahoma and Kansas."

Officials of the board of trade said it was the first report they had received of smutt in wheat this year.

RANCHO VISTA PLACE

FARMS WITH A VIEW

COMBINES the ADVANTAGES of HILL TOP and VALLEY

1. Ranch Vista Place possesses good soil; so located as to be free from erosion.
2. Located at the edge of the valley where its elevation eliminates danger to crops from frost. Particularly is this factor advantageous to the fruit grower.
3. Farm owners in Rancho Vista Place will be free from the frequent damages caused by drainage water from farms above them.
4. In order to combine these advantages of elevation with the necessary irrigation facilities a pumping plant has been installed to more conveniently irrigate these tracts than by the usual gravity method of gravity irrigation. Rancho Vista Place's irrigation system consists of an adequate reservoir supplied with water from the Call Field lateral by two enormous Fairbanks-Morse oil-burning pumps, complete system of canals, gates and all necessary drainage ditches. All gates and checks in this system are built of cypress—the wood eternal. This system will be given absolutely free to Rancho Vista Place purchasers.

INDIAN RULER IS REBUKED BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT

CALCUTTA.—A sharp rebuke has been administered to the Nizam of Hyderabad by the British government regarding the former's claim for the restoration of Berar (now part of the Central Provinces) which had been leased in perpetuity to the British government by his father in 1902. The Nizam made much of his claim that Hyderabad was an independent state in alliance with Britain, and disputed the authority of the government of India to settle the dispute. The government bluntly told the Nizam that the British government, through the Indian government, was the suzerain power in India and possessed the ultimate power of a final, binding decision.

SCIENCE TO RESTORE THE CONSCIENCE OF CRIMINALS

LONDON.—Declaring that criminals are "spiritually sick," John Scurr, member of parliament, has inaugurated a movement for the reformation of malefactors through scientific efforts. "The real necessity," he said "is the restoration of the criminal's conscience. The criminal is a sick man. He is mentally and spiritually sick. The hidden cause of his anti-social conduct may be one of a million. It has to be removed. Each criminal carries within his head the solution of his own problem. Scientific prison treatment will reveal it to him, and seeing it, he will not only conquer it, but willingly renounce it."

29 OFFICIALS ACCUSED FOR SAVING MORE THAN $30,000

LONDON—An odd red tape tangle has been revealed by the issuance of distraint warrants against 29 officials of Richdale. They had refused to refund their car fares to and from the workhouse. Counsel for the officials pointed out the irony of the situation. The officials were entitled to purchase a motor car and ride in luxury to the workhouse. By going to their meetings by tram they had saved more than $20,000; yet it had been declared illegal for them to charge their own fares to the town.
