Union Revival Here Drawing Big Crowds At All Services

The Union Revival in the tent on West College street opened Sunday night with a crowd far too large to be seated and many were standing around the tent. Each night the seating capacity has been taxed to the limit.

Morning services started at ten o'clock on Tuesday and will continue each morning at the same hour. The service in the mornings continues to grow daily also. The evangelistic party includes Rev. and Mrs. Herman Cochran, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Cochran and R. E. Britain who is song leader and soloist and who has charge of children's and young people's work.

On Sunday each of the co-operating churches will have its own Sunday school and morning worship service in their own church building. At 2:30 in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock in the evening there will be meetings at the tent. The revival will continue next week with morning services at ten in the morning and eight in the evening. Children's services are held daily at the tent at 9:30 a. m. and a special young people's service each evening at 7:15 at Owens & Brumley Funeral Home. The city has been divided into districts and in each cottage prayer meetings are being conducted each afternoon.

The meeting has indeed become a city-wide affair with interest growing day by day.

Evangelist Cochran is living up to every expectation as an orator, wit and humorist and powerful man of God.

Little Theatre Plays Friday

The Burkburnett Little Theatre will present three one-act plays at the high school auditorium Friday evening, May 31, at 8:15 o'clock. This is their third offering this year.

They will close the season on Wednesday, June 5th, with a program which will include singing, dancing skits, etc., arranged in the old time vaudeville manner.

The plays Friday evening are "Letters," the story of a husband whose proclivity for writing letters to other women gets him in trouble; "Do right and fear no man—Don't write and fear no woman"; "Bumblepuppy," a comedy of character; and "The Terrible Meek."

The last named is a serious and highly dramatic treatment, especially timely now, of the futility of building up kingdoms on the broken bodies of mankind. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Words spoken by Jesus Christ two thousand years ago and men have not yet learned that power, lust and greed destroy all those who employ them in seeking their ends.

Every person in Burkburnett should see this moving, powerful little drama.

Taking part in "Letters" are Connie Evert, Frances Hamner and Lela Mae Pinkston; John Rigby, James Walling and Ray Allen Peevey make up the cast of "Bumblepuppy," and "The Terrible Meek" will be interpreted by Mrs. Louis Hough, O. D. Dial and G. C. Pryor.

Plays are directed by Miss Margaret Tanner; stage settings are supervised by John Farr.

"I do say, however, that I believe wholeheartedly in law enforcement and, if elected, I will strive unceasingly to enforce the law and that this shall be my main objective throughout my term of office.

"This is my first time to seek public office. I bear no grudges and feel that I am not being unfair to my opponent in seeking this office, since he has already had it three terms and is asking for a fourth.

"I feel, too, that I am justified in seeking the position on the grounds of having reached the age of mature judgment and that I have led an upright life, practicing so far as I have been able, the philosophy of a square deal for everyone—which shall continue to be my policy in private life or public office.

"I am asking for the consideration of every voter in Wichita county and will be grateful for your support."

Hocking Our Liberties

Freedom of press is one of the most vital of all liberties. Any move to curb the press in this country by direct means is doomed to crushing defeat.

Less spectacular, but just as vital to our liberties is private credit. Unless a man can secure credit in a competitive credit market to operate his business, he is no longer a free citizen. The local bank, for example, is far more than a depository. It is a private credit agency which is only too glad to loan money to worthy borrowers and otherwise serve the public—for the simple reason that it is a unit of a great competitive banking system.

A direct assault is being made upon private credit. Government lending agencies by the score are steadily distributing millions upon millions of dollars to farmers, home-builders, business, at terms no private citizen can compete with. Every million thus distributed is a nail in the coffin of private credit. And yet it takes no economist to follow absorption of private credit by government to its logical conclusion. Gettin' "in hock" to government will in the long run destroy our liberties just as effectively as giving a government censor the key to every newspaper office in the land.

One need hold no brief for banking to realize that the nation's banks are the very heart of the private credit system. And it takes no great imagination to foresee the inevitabilities of a government-dominated credit system. The private banker in his sphere of activity is as essential as freedom of the press in a democratic society.

Concentration Is The Key To Success

The so-called "genius" has no more mental equipment than the average normal person. He merely knows the secret of applied concentration, says Psychologist William Moulton Marston, who discusses the "secret" in a current Rotarian Magazine article.

In this age of distractions, with interruptions by phone, friends, wars, noise, "scares," and our own flightiness, concentration "is essential to the full enjoyment of pleasures or to effective work," and upon concentration depends "a man's success in this specialized world," Marston declares. "The capacity for concentration is in no sense the exclusive property of genius. Indeed it is common to all of us until we lose it or let it atrophy. . . . Concentration is interest in action. Interest in a task, when you attain it, creates attention as a tree bears fruit, and so you find yourself concentrating upon it without effort. Even though you dislike a task, some way can often be found to acquire this essential interest in it. Men who naturally dislike selling often learn to enjoy work by regarding it as a contest for kudos, a type of ambition game which naturally appeals to them. Many a lazy and excitement-craving girl has acquired interest in cooking, sewing, and housework, not directly, but indirectly, because it means to her husband, home, and children.

"Even after we begin manfully to concentrate," there are a "multiplicity of thoughts, half-thoughts, sounds, impressions that crowd into our minds and assail our best efforts." One must learn to "select ruthlessly from among many interests," and disturbances must be replaced with chosen thoughts. "You cannot push a thought out of your mind," the famed psychologist asserts. You must replace it with another. If you doubt this, try Walter Pitkin's little joke: spend the next 30 seconds not thinking about the word "hippopotamus."

A one-track mind has its advantages, because all of us must cultivate a one-thing-at-a-time mind to win success. Aids to concentration outlined by Marston include memorizing, reading aloud, personalized dramatization of the thing at hand, and taking a seat directly in front of the speaker. The rewards of concentration are the ability to do more things, and a greater pleasure in doing them, he declares.

I Give You Texas

By Boyce House

"The boy who has never lain barefooted and with his face to the sky on a load of freshly-cut corn or cane, has been denied a glorious adventure. Dream ships of youth flaunt white sails easily on the blue inverted sea and the song that swells in the young heart will continue to vibrate against the metallic walls of reality."

So writes Douglas Meador, Matador writer, in his book, "Trail Dust," in which home-spun philosophy alternates with fine-spun beauty.

And this: "Prairie grass, ambassador of time, spreads a soft carpet over the sharp edges of old cow trails which have ceased to echo with the clatter of passing hoofs. It heals the winding slash of roads made by the grinding wheels that have long since rolled into the silence of the past. Patiently it waits outside the barbed wire fences for the decay of the plow, as if a thousand years would pass with tomorrow's sunset. It has not quarreled with man but yielded humbly until the day when he is finished."

Here and there: "An editor writes 'we' instead of 'I' and hard-hitting J. H. Kavanaugh of the Round Rock Leader has come forward with an explanation of the "editorial we"—a photo of himself sitting on a bull. . . .

"Confusion say, when the dogwood bloometh, the political Sap, he beginneth to rise." This is quoted from the cover page of an interesting booklet, "The Amusing Legend of the Dogwood Tree" by A. Garland Adair and Ben B. Hunt. . . .

Your columnist appreciates an invitation from widely-known R. T. Craig, Athens Review editor, to attend an open house for newspapermen at Arch Underwood's famous lake resort in connection with Athens' ninth annual fiddler's contest and reunion, May 31, largest event of its kind in the United States, with 60 string bands and an attendance of 40,000.

With the modesty that marks the activities of so many splendid men and women who are devoting their lives to the home town newspaper field, Bruce W. McCarty, publisher of the Eagle Lake Headlight, who passed away recently, served unselfishly. Spending the entire 66 years of his life in Eagle Lake, Mr. McCarty founded the Headlight while he was still attending high school. His career has been, and will continue to be, an inspiration.

Readers are beyond the bounds of Texas, too. Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Badger of Hachita, N. M., known as the "song-writing miners," send an autographed copy of their song, "Under the Texas Star" and when we locate a piano and a piano-player, we're sure the song will prove to be a dandy. And a Louisiana reader (name and address misplaced) who is postmaster sends in a true incident of an elderly darkey who asked at the General Delivery window for his mail. "What is the name?" the postmaster inquired. "De name am on de mail," the old fellow replied.

This plain statement of fact— dug up somewhere by Roy Hahn, editor of the Briscoe County News, ought to do until somebody with real imagination comes along:

The other day a bunch of the fellows were sitting on the sidewalk out in front of the store spitting in the street. The Old Timer was present, sitting in the street and spitting on the sidewalk just to be different.

"Just heard from my brother out in the oilfield," said Jack Davis. "His company finished a well the other day that is producing 8,000 barrels of castor oil a day."

The Old Timer squinted up at

Jack and shifted around a little. "I found a castor oil spring one time," he stated. "I was the sole survivor of a wreck in the South Seas and landed on this place. I went hunting and the first thing I found was a castor oil spring."

"That was just one of the remarkable things I found on this here island. About two hundred yards from the castor oil spring was a jelly roll mine. There was raspberry, apple, strawberry and cinnamon rolls in this mine and I lived on them for months while I made further trips in the interior."

"The first new discovery I made was a geyser that spouted 3.2 beer every 22 minutes. I timed it by a sundial I made so the time might not have been exactly 22 minutes, as my sundial was not so very accurate. It would lose ten or fifteen minutes a day, generally."

"On the north end of this here island I found a hammer tree and plucked me a good stout claw-hammer. With this and a sawfish and a square from a squarehead shark I was able to build me a 16-foot cabin with two baths and servants quarters."

"A" of this time I didn't have no clothes and was all the time embarrassed by my own presence. But shortly after I finished my house I found a thrifty bloomer bush in full fruit and picked me a pair of pants. This plant only bloomed once every seven years but that didn't bother me much as I was a married man and one new pair of pants every seven years was just about right."

"I stayed there 27 years; but my most important discovery that I made while I was there, was a vibrating cow which gave vanilla milk shake."

Mind Your Manners And Keep Your Man

CHARM as well as charity should begin at home, if a woman is wise and wants to keep a harmonious marriage. For too often a husband, the man she has promised to cherish, has to bear the brunt of nerves and tantrums from a woman who is famed far and wide for her gracious ways.

The fallacy that bad manners should be reserved for the home circle is illogical, according to Ruth Anna Read in an article appearing in May Good Housekeeping. Says Mrs. Read, women don't promise to love and cherish the grocery boy or the man who comes to read the meter, yet they never treat such people to the exhibitions of fits and sulks that patient husbands must witness and presumably forgive and forget.

"Why not try gentle treatment on your husband, just once, when he's not expecting it? He won't drop dead. Instead, if you persist in your experiments in conjugal courtesy—and there are countless opportunities for experiment as every wife knows—he'll probably pay you back in your own golden coin. People are like that."

Even husbands.

HAWKEYE'S NEWS ...

From Liberty Hill Community

Good readers, our good news is another rain Wednesday continuing through Thursday. We can't remember when the spring rains came when more needed this year.

Brother Tobie Hardin and Brother Charlie Nails motored to the Owens family's home Saturday morning. They stated that last Wednesday night a 4-inch rain fell over Byers and all cotton that was planted and up will have to be planted over. All gardens were greatly damaged and corn was blown down and oats which were cut and shocked had to be rushed.

Hawkeye accompanied a Mr. Arthur Wood and his little granddaughter to Temple Saturday.

Brother Arthur Wood and his life-long helpmate, Mrs. Wood, has something over 300 head of turkeys which they are raising this year. They are the big bone bronze type turkeys. Believe it or not, raising that many turkeys sure means work and lots of it.

Only four copies of the earliest books printed in America, Fray Juan de Zumarraga's "Regla Christiana", are known. A perfect copy is in the Latin-American Collection in the University of Texas library.

Eighty-six per cent of the 11,000 University of Texas students claim active membership in 31 churches near the campus, figures from the registrar's office show.

Willa Wood, who lives 2 1/2 miles from here, went to Texas Poll Shows Roosevelt For Pres. O'Daniel For Gov.

Texas voters want Franklin D. Roosevelt for a third term president and W. Lee O'Daniel for a second term as governor, it is indicated from an incomplete poll being taken throughout the state by the Texas State Network radio stations.

The stations are polling every tenth voter on the poll tax lists in the state. This is done without reference to occupation, or whether or not the poll tax holder is a man or woman.

Latest announced returns gave President Roosevelt 64.3 per cent of the total on a basis of 27,723 votes cast, with Vice President Garner second with 19.4 per cent.

For governor, the poll gave Governor O'Daniel 51.2 per cent of the total with Col. Ernest O. Thompson second with 21 per cent.

Recipe for Marriage

Pat-a-cake, pat-a-cake, little bride, If you would keep him by your side, Time is short and the days are fleet, Only remember this, my sweet, Love will linger till life is dead For beans and bacon and meat and bread.
No matter how young in spirit you stay, Love grows fickle when hair grows gray; But it's only a fool who will deny The deathless glamour of apple pie. So pat-a-cake, pat-a-cake, little wife, If you would hold him all your life.

INFORMAL PORTRAITS OUTDOORS

Best likenesses, and a "story idea," make this picture a fine example of a good informal portrait snapshot.

Two family album or picture collection should include good informal portraits of the family's members. But many amateur photographers do not know how to make informal portraits, or realize that these differ from other popular types of pictures.
The first place, an informal portrait should resemble a formal portrait. They are entirely different, and, as a matter of fact, an informal portrait can be taken better by a professional photographer who has a well-equipped studio with proper lighting equipment and a sound technical knowledge of photography.
Two main requirements of a formal portrait are, first, a likeness of the subject or subject, and second, a suggestion of a "story idea." In fact, the informal portrait is closely akin to the "story idea" type of snapshot. To obtain a good likeness, indoors, you need a nicely lighted subject's face. In particular, that "contrast." Indoors, such a likeness is easily obtained by using

Action Urged to Cut Infant Death Toll

THE Children's Bureau reports that more than 70,000 babies under one month old die each year, nearly half of them the first day. At the present rate, unless something is done to save these babies or many of them, in time, youth will be smothered by the aged.

That many could have been saved is the most tragic part of the story, according to Gladys Denny Shultz in her article "Babies Were Meant to Live" which appears in the May issue of Better Homes and Gardens. During the past decade the mortality rate of children between the ages of 1 month and 1 year has been cut tremendously, but there is still the greater part of the battle facing the United States.

In many sections the local medical associations are now holding an inquiry into every child's death in that first month, says Miss Shultz. If the death appears to have been unavoidable, or from unknown cause, it is studied just as carefully. By such methods, doctors hope to be able to control the mortality and to avoid future unnecessary losses.

Massachusetts has formed a quick incubator service as part of its campaign against these deaths. Incubators are stationed at strategic points all over the state to be rushed to a baby anywhere at a moment's notice. Midwives and public health nurses are being brought to New York City from all parts of the country for a nine months' special course in obstetrics.

The Maternity Center places the problem squarely up to future mothers. The greatest necessity, so they say, is for a woman to place herself under a doctor's care the minute she suspects that she is pregnant.

First Baptist Announcements

"Identifying Jesus By Old Testament Scriptures," a sermon composed entirely of scripture quotations from the Old Testament, and in which the whole life of Jesus is traced from Old Testament prophecy, is the subject of the pastor's message this next Sunday morning, June 3. It has been the regret of the pastor he has been unable to give services of the Union Revival. It is his hope and purpose to miss a service this next week. He is trusting that God will bless and that the souls shall be won to Christ. The lost person won in the Revival will make the entire effort while, and certainly the many here whom our pastor seem unable to reach by regular services or in revivals and who are reached by ordinary means may be won to Christ from an eternal hell. Let all we can.

Diplomatic Niceties Make a Capital Problem

IN democratic America one of the most delicate social problems ever to arise had to be settled by a convale of the foreign diplomatic corps.

That occasion was during the famous controversy between Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister and official hostess of Vice-President Curtis, and Alice Longworth, then wife of the Speaker of the House, as to precedence at state and official functions. The decision was put up to Secretary of State Stimson who referred the matter to the diplomatic corps. They, in turn, made a temporary ruling and passed the buck to Congress.

Unimportant as it may seem, the guest lists and seating arrangements of official dinners are enough to precipitate international incidents, according to Irene Kuhn, who writes of Washington protocol in the May issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine. Because Washington is the temporary home of so many representatives of foreign countries--there are 53 countries represented--everything must be done with dignity and formality. In conjunction with the Longworth-Gann feud, Mrs. Kuhn relates the story which went the rounds in Washington at the time the controversy was at white heat. The two ladies were reported to have met at a party and the following conversation is supposed to have ensued.

Mrs. Gann: "Isn't it nice that you can wear your own color--Alice blue?"

Mrs. Longworth: "Yes, and isn't it nice that the whole administration is wearing yours--Gann-green?"

Haul In 1100-Pound Turtle

The waters of the Texas Gulf coast often give up monsters. The most recent reported to the game department was a 1100-pound turtle which was lassoed and finally hauled in by four men. The turtle had been grazed by a tanker or a few minutes earlier in the Sabine channel. The marine Gargantua broke the first rope with which he was lassoed and undoubtedly would have escaped had he not been injured by the tanker.

TEXAS OUT-O'-DOORS

Demands For Fish Heavier

With new, huge lakes being built in Texas constantly, the demand for fish raised by the State Game Department in its ten hatcheries increases monthly. The latest lake to be stocked is Possum Kingdom. Bass numbering 71,000 were planted in it recently, it was announced by the executive secretary of the department. That was the first of many shipments which will be placed in the lake.

All the new lakes being stocked by the game department are being studied by aquatic biologists to determine the amount of fish food the various bodies of water will produce. Too, they are determining the species of fish most suitable for each lake.

The state hatcheries produced more than 5,000,000 fish last year, by using improved methods of fertilization, some of them developed by the game department aquatic biologists, and by making use of other recently-discovered methods of propagating fish. It is hoped to double the hatcheries' production this season. To date it appears the hatcheries will reach the 10,000,000 mark set for them, despite the fact late freezes killed more than 1,000,000 small fish in the hatcheries.

Caught Three Fish At Once

L. D. Flowers of Uvalde, Texas was plenty satisfied recently when he caught a sixteen-inch bass, but he wasn't amazed until he cut into the fish and found a four-inch bass in its stomach, according to a report to the game department. Investigating further, Mr. Flowers opened the smaller bass and discovered a two-inch perch. Both the four and two-inch fish were whole. Maybe catching two bass and one perch on a single hook is a record.

Study Game Laws, Conservation

Dallas county rural students in intermediate grades will study state game and fish laws and the conservation of wildlife under 250 teachers, according to word received by the game department from Miss Leland Watkins, intermediate supervisor.

Realization of the need of conservation education is spreading the executive secretary of the department pointed out in congratulating Miss Watkins and County School Superintendent Joe Harris upon their inauguration.

USE MORE COTTON

After all, cotton is the most practical for clothes in the south. It is perspiration-resistant and crease-resistant, and cotton materials are fast-color. And such colors as there are this season--soft blues, lime yellows, and gold, as well as the patriotic red, white and blue worn together. What smarter than a navy suit with a red-and-permit stripe cotton blouse and a just-right on the lapel of the coat?

Consider cotton, because cotton material is easy to launder and feel so fresh and clean on a hot summer's day. Some materials do need to be ironed. There are dresses of floral and plaid seersucker, both thick and thin, to be washed, pulled in shape, dried on a coat and worn without ever going near an ironing board. Cotton crepes in bright, colorful designs are for housecoats, and for children's play and garments.

MEN SEEN 200 MILES AWAY BY TELEVISION

Diagram—Artist's conception of how radio and aviation worked together to receive television images over a distance of 200 miles. The images were broadcast from New York and were received in an airplane over Washington, D. C. Photographic inset—This photograph, snapped in an airplane flying in the stratosphere four miles above Washington, shows a television image of another airplane at rest on the runway at North Beach Airport, New York.

TELEVISION in the stratosphere, more than four miles above Washington, D. C., made history Tuesday, October 17, when the Radio Corporation of America, with the cooperation of United Air Lines, demonstrated successful reception of images broadcast from New York, more than 200 miles to the north. The experiment marked the twentieth anniversary of the founding of RCA.

Flying over the nation's capital at an altitude of 21,600 feet, occupants of the plane, including Major General Delos C. Emmons, Chief of U.S. Army GHQ Air Force, saw David Sarnoff, president of RCA, and W. A. Patterson, president of UAL who were seated in the television studios of the National Broadcasting Company in New York, as they exchanged comments on the parallel rise of the aviation and radio industries in the last two decades.

During the flight, what is probably the all-time long distance record for photography was made when cameramen in the plane over Washington snapped pictures of persons and objects in New York as they were broadcast by television.

Returning to New York from Washington, the plane landed at North Beach Airport, Long Island, for one of the most thrilling moments of the flight. For the last several minutes, occupants of the plane had been watching news reels and other motion pictures on the television receiver; but suddenly these stopped and in their place appeared the image of an airplane flying through the air.

Dramatically, the television announcer told the observers in the plane that they were watching their own ship as it circled the airport, dropped gracefully to the ground and taxied up the run-way to the hangars. Actually, the men inside the plane watched it land just as if they had been standing all the while on the ground.

RCA's experiment of long distance television reception bore out the theory that the ultra-short radio waves used in television travel like rays of light, in straight lines. It was necessary, in order to receive the telecast over Washington, for the plane to rise above the 16,000-foot level in order to overcome the curvature of the earth and keep within a straight line-of-sight path from the point of transmission.

Origin of June Marriage Custom Still a Mystery

For the past two thousand years, June has been the traditional month for marriages.

In an effort to discover the reason for this preference, Gretra Palmer, Good Housekeeping writer, roamed the reference libraries for a story on it. The results appear in the May issue of the magazine. She could find no basic reason for the choice but she did find other interesting customs. For instance:

"The habit of pelting departing couples with old shoes also has a venerable history. The Anglo-Saxons had a pretty custom by which the father of the bride transferred custody of her person to the groom by handing him one of her shoes as a token. In order that she should take notice of the exchange, it was customary to rap her smartly on the side of the head with the shoe. This is no longer done.
