FIVE MILLION TO FIGHT BOLL WORM

Democrats Lose in Tax Fight

SENATE OVERRIDES HOUSE IN ESTABLISHING PER CENT RATE IMPORTANT CORPORATION TAX

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—The important corporation tax was set at 12½ per cent today by the senate in overriding the house proposal to cut the present 13½ per cent rate to 11½ per cent.

Democrats sought unsuccessfully to hold the 11½ per cent rate which would have added $82,000,000 to the senate Republican $200,000,000 plan.

The vote was 40 to 34. Democrats supported the 11½ per cent rate but two of their membership, Kendrick of Wyoming, and Dill of Washington, voted with the Republicans while only one Republican, Waterman of Colorado, went over with the Democrats.

HOME TOWN TALK

By B. D. D.

Guarantors in Wichita Falls for the Chicago Civic Opera company have authorized their chairman, Harry Hines, to open negotiations for the return of the opera company here next season. Dallas is also negotiating for the opera. Of course the company will make an engagement with only one city in North Texas. Whether that city will be Wichita Falls or Dallas will probably depend upon the promptness with which their committees are ready to sign a guaranty.

Bringing an organization like the Chicago Civic Opera company to Wichita Falls is a big undertaking. It requires an immense amount of work and responsible people have got to put their names onto paper for a guarantee. While a surplus of about $1900 is shown in the final report from the 1927 engagement of the opera company here, the guarantors made such a surplus possible and prevented a deficit by digging down into their own pockets for purchase of tickets. They are now appropriating this surplus as a fund for helping bring grand opera back to Wichita Falls.

The consensus of opinion is that there are thousands of people in Wichita Falls and surrounding territory who appreciate grand opera; that it is a good thing for Wichita Falls both in a cultural and business way and the citizens of Wich-

Charged Power Interests Invade Public Schools

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The National Education association, representing 600,000 teachers and school officials, today proposed official action to stamp out the "appalling" spread of propaganda by electric power interests in schools throughout the country.

This was the first movement of national scope to follow revelations before the federal trade commission that the so-called power trust has invaded classrooms with propaganda, paid for by consumers, against Boulder dam, municipal or anything else it found "objectionable" or "unsound."

Meanwhile the school revolt broadened with charges by the Ohio state director of education that the utility agencies also are fighting to break down the state's compulsory school attendance law. These charges were made to the national association, as a result of nationwide survey of the character and extent of the power propaganda it instituted several days ago.

By today's action, J. W. Crabtree, secretary of the association, laid the propaganda issue before its executive committee and gave notice that it will be brought up at the annual convention in Minneapolis July 1. A thousand teachers, principals and professors will attend this convention, Crabtree said.

BURRIER TRIAL SCHEDULED TO START MONDAY

Both state and defense probably will announce ready when J. W. Burrier is called to trial in the 30th district court at Archer City Monday on a charge of murder in connection with the death more than a year ago of John McDaniel, filling station proprietor who was shot down by a hijacker. A special venire of 64 has been called for the case.

Attorneys for neither side had made any announcement to Judge E. G. Thornton up to Saturday night as to whether objections would be offered to proceeding with the case, Judge Thornton said.

Ben Allred, district attorney who will go to Archer City to represent the state in the case, said, however, that he expects to announce ready, barring "unexpected developments." The district attorney's office here likewise had been unofficially advised that the defense will not seek a further continuance of the trial, which already has been postponed twice. One postponement was due to the illness of a material defense witness and the other to the illness of Burrier.

The defense advanced at a habeas corpus hearing for Burrier was based upon an alibi. He and several other witnesses testified that he was near Sweetwater, Texas at a time which would have made it impossible for him to have been at the scene of the slaying. After hearing the evidence, Judge Thornton ordered Burrier released under bond and the accused man since has been at his home in Colorado, Texas.

John McDaniel was fatally wounded at his filling station near Archer City during a pistol duel with a man who was alleged to have held up the filling station of E. H. McDaniel a short time before. John and E. H. McDaniel were brothers, and their filling stations were about a mile apart.

E. H. McDaniel related that he went to his brother's station to report the robbery of his place when a man alighted from a truck. E. H. McDaniel said he recognized the arrival as being the man who had robbed him, and he called out a warning to his brother. John procured a pistol he kept conveniently placed because of fearing robbery and the shooting started.

Burrier was arrested several weeks later at Colorado.

Feminine Charm Ten Cents Daily

CHICAGO, May 12. (US)—"Feminine charm may be had for as low as 10 cents a day," declared Miss Natalie Thurston, New York beauty specialist, in Chicago today.

"Beauty," Miss Thurston continued, "is not found in costly jars.

"A stenographer, who knows her cosmetics, may obtain the same results from a $1 tube of cold cream that a Park avenue debutante secures from a $25 purchase.

"It is not always how much you put on your face, but how pure they are and how conscientiously you apply them that counts."

Miss Thurston revealed a budget whereby girls can beautify themselves for $36.50 a year, or 10 cents a day.

FLOOD TRAPS TENT COLONY AT BIG SPRING

BIG SPRING, Texas, May 12. (AP)—More than 100 feet of Texas and Pacific railway tracks washed out a mile east of here when 2.49 inch rain fell in one hour today.

A tent colony in Jones valley, west of Big Spring comprising about 300 persons was trapped in the law land and water reached a depth of two to four feet before they were aware of their danger. They escaped to higher ground and took refuge atop automobiles and freight cars, and tonight a rescue party removed them to safety.

The storm visited one mother trapped in the flood. She and her babe were carried safely to higher ground.

When the storm broke most of the men were at work and did not realize the approaching danger. All of their belongings were destroyed.

Dozens of teams were being rushed to the flooded area tonight to carry the sufferers to safety.

ASK CHINESE C-C TO GOVERN TSINAN

Japs Clear Zone of Nationalists; Southern Troops Advance.

LONDON, May 12. (AP)—Having cleared Tsinan of nationalist troops, the Japanese consul and commanders in the Tsinan zone have asked the Chinese chamber of commerce there to take complete control of the administration of the city, including the telegraphs, telephones, lighting and police service.

Advices received at Tsingtao from Tsinan say that the Japanese propose to control banditry by plainsclothes guards at various strategic places. The large shops at Tsinan are still closed, but the smaller ones as well as the restaurants are now running as usual.

Meanwhile the southern forces, skirting the Tsinan zone, are continuing northward and reports from Tienstin say that cavalry regiments attached to the army of Feng Yu-Hsiang, who is now allied with the nationalists, have occupied Tehchow on the Shantung-Chihli border in continuation of a drive on Peking.

Advices received in Tienstin said that advance guards had penetrated into the province of Chihli itself and that the northern commander of the eastern district had begun a withdrawal to Machang, 35 miles south of Tsientsin. Capture of Tientsin by the nationalists would be of extreme importance since it would cut Peking off from the sea and would seriously menace the communications of Chang Tso-Lin, the northern dictator, with his with his native Manchurians.

Three Words Unfailing Sources Inspiration to Heroic Efforts

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—The observation that for centuries the words "Jesus," "home," and "mother," have been unfailing sources of inspiration to heroic efforts, great accomplishments and sublime achievements, was made in the senate today by Senator Neely, Democrat, West Virginia, in delivering a Mother's day address.

The first word, he said, inspired Charles Wesley to write the song, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," the second caused John Howard Payne to write, "Home, Sweet Home," and the third impelled Elizabeth Akers Allen to write the poem to mother, beginning, "Backward, turn backward, O time, in your flight."

The second Sunday in May was designated as Mother's day by congress 16 years ago, under a resolution introduced in the house by Representative Heflin, now senator from Alabama, at the instance of Miss Annie M. Jarvis of Philadelphia. The measure was sponsored in the senate by Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas.

Thousands Wichitans Observe Mother's Day With Varied Presents

"Mother" will be the recipient of some 5000 packages sent through the mail, about 25,000 letters, a thousand or so telegrams, probably 2500 or 3000 bouquets or potted plants and any number of handkerchiefs, beads, hose, linens and other gifts Sunday morning in Wichita Falls, if estimates can be trusted at all.

Of course, in the case of letters, packages and telegrams, it's the mothers of Wichitans who receive greetings and gifts from sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters living here. The estimate that there were 25,000 extra letters and 5000 packages sent through the mail on account of Mother's day was made by Postmaster O. F. Maricle, who, however, declared that the number was not to be considered as official, as no accurate check could be made.

Last year one telegraph company here sent 1100 messages for Mother's day; and it was thought that the number this year would probably show an increase. Special blanks and envelopes with Mother's day greetings are provided for telegrams.

A larger out-of-town business is enjoyed by the floral companies Mother's day than at any other season of the year, one Wichita Falls florist said Saturday. His estimate of the extra orders for "Mother" on her day was about 1000 at his shop; there are three floral companies in Wichita Falls, and it was thought that Wichita Falls mothers receiving flowers Sunday morning would number at least 2500.

The flowers and telegrams do not represent half of the enthusiasm shown on Mother's day. All day long boys and girls, men and women, were shopping for hose and handkerchiefs, dresses, scarfs and other articles of apparel, beads, purses, linens—everything that "Mother" might like to find by her bed Sunday morning. And more than one mother will receive a telephone call sometime Sunday to tell her that somebdoy thinks she is the dearest and best "ma" on earth.

RAIN IN WESTERN TEXAS BENEFIT TO CROPS AND RANGES

ABILENE, Texas, May 12. (AP)—Rainfall varying from three inches in nearby territory to 6.56 inches here last night ended a drouth of several months and increased Abilene's surface water supply by 1,500,000,000 gallons, City Engineer Riney announced today after measurements at the city's two reservoirs, Lakes Abilene and Kirby.

This supply, Riley said, is sufficient for a year's supply to the city without additional storage.

The rain here last night was the heaviest short time fall, with one exception since the United States weather bureau was opened here in 1885.

Employment of R. A. Thompson of Dallas as consulting engineer on Abilene's enlarged water project was announced today by the mayor and board of commissioners. The city expects to spend several millions of dollars in the impounding of enough storage water to supply the normal needs of a city of 150,000 population.

TWO PLANES TO GREENLY ISLAND AFTER 'BREMEN'

SMOOTH WAY FOR CLEAR PASSAGE OVER CANADA

May Not be Forced to make Perilous Landing or Use Parachute.

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 12. (AP)—This port tonight housed the army air force of two amphibian planes on the way from Washington to the relief of the German transatlantic plane Bremen at Greenly Island.

The planes may not be forced to make a perilous landing on Greenly Island or drop one of their number by parachute to the little pile of rock on which the Bremen finally came to rest, it was indicated tonight by Brigadier General J. E. Fechet, in command of the expedition. He said he had information that the Bremen had been moved across the ice to the Labrador mainland.

The two planes arrived here at 5:20 p. m. after an uneventful flight from Uortland, Maine. The two ships are carrying besides General Fechet, Captain Ira C. Eaker, his aide, Lieut. Muir Fairchild, and Fred Melchior, Junkers mechanic, and pilot.

They had planned to make Pictou, N. S., tonight but due to fog they decided to stop overnight here. The two planes settled easily into a slip at Sand Point on the western side of the harbor.

General Fechet said that he hopes to hop off at dawn tomorrow if weather conditions are favorable for St. Georges, N. F., from whence the final flight to the side of the Bremen will be made.

The measure is designed to compensate West Texas farmers who establish "non-cotton" areas where the boll worm infestation occurs.

The infestation is mainly predominant in seven West Texas counties and said to be threatening the Pecos valley in New Mexico and southeastern Arizona. It also exists in northern Mexico.

The bill also would authorize the establishment of similar "non-cotton" zones in other states where boll worm infestations appear.

DALLAS ASKED FOR FUND TO HELP FIX PRICE OF COTTON

DALLAS, Texas, May 12. (AP)—Dallas, as a city to which the price of cotton is of prime importance, today was asked by more than 100 members of the Farmers Marketing association to provide a "suitable fund" with which the organization can work toward fixing the price of cotton at a satisfactory rate.

In the resolution asking for this fund, it is said that farmers are the chief customers of Southern cities and that their purchasing power is ridiculously low because of the low price of cotton. It will be easy to fix the price of cotton, the resolution said, because the South by organization "can sell her cotton for 25 per cent to 50 per cent more than it has been getting."

If there is a question in any mind as to whether the price can be raised, it "can be dispelled by conferring with those who have given it study and demonstrated that it can be done," the resolution said.

Dallas newspapers have announced that the Chicago Civic Opera company will perform in that city in 1929. Maybe the contract is not yet closed and Wichita Falls still has an opportunity for an engagement. Wichita Falls has the advantage of a continuing committee and a small surplus to start with.

Miss Myrle Neely, secretary of the Wichita Falls Community Chest, has been appointed a member of the national council of the American Association of Social Workers. We don't know just what this council is, but assume that it confers honor on Miss Neely, which we can say is well merited. Miss Neely was made secretary of the community chest work here something more than a year ago. She came to Wichita Falls well trained in social work. She is discharging her duties with ability, zeal, tact and sympathy.

The fellow who hauls trash has a dirty, disagreeable job and we wouldn't make it any worse for him, but we would like to see every trash wagon so that it could not strew trash along its trail and to see every trash hauler get all the trash into his wagon in loading instead of letting some of it blow or drop into the streets and alleys.

A real dirty dig at Wichita Falls has reached this office from faraway Luxor, Egypt. A woman writing in "The Sphinx," an English illustrated weekly published at Cairo, Egypt, tells a suppositious friend something about this city, as follows:

"As for Luxor it was just what I had dreamed it would be, the real marsh-mallow week of all my time out here, but while I was there a tourist-cruise came in, and my dear you never saw such people, one steatopygous girl in mauve riding-breeches, and high-heeled shoes, wearing spurs and a most mobile shirt-waist, who'd won a trip around the world for being first home (British for winner) in the Wichita Falls, Texas, cross-word competition."

We would like to reply to this slur, but find ourselves much too indignant to attempt it.

RELATIVES OF STUDENT KILLED IN WRECK NEAR LAREDO SUE CAR DRIVER

AUSTIN, May 12. (AP)—Fatal injuries received by E. Leo Howard, who was a student in Texas university, in an automobile accident, November 20, 1927, near Laredo, form the basis of a damage suit filed Saturday in district court here by Howard's father and three brothers, of Houston, in which J. W. Kirkham, Austin, is named defendant. The plaintiffs seek $17,000 damages.

Kirkham, the petition alleges, was the driver of the automobile which overturned with Howard as a passenger.

HOUSTON, May 12. (AP)—Mayor Oscar Holcombe kept Ruth Elder, the transatlantic flyer, waiting 15 minutes today at city hall, where the pretty aviatrix had gone to receive an official welcome to the city.

Her theatrical managers thought it was an "outrage," but Ruth stood pat and gave out an interview on how to grow slender. Eventually the mayor appeared, and posed with Miss Elder.

SENATOR NORBECK WARNS AGAINST BROKERS' LOANS

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—Submitting a report today on the LaFollette resolution approved by the senate banking committee asking the federal reserve board to admonish member banks to restrict the amount of brokers' loans, Chairman Norbeck of the committee, warned Wall street that "the situation is and continues to grow more dangerous."

In his report, Senator Norbeck called attention to the fact that the brokers' loans have increased from $3,783,685,000 in January to $4,361,106,000 on May 9, a new high record. He said it was obvious that the loans from New York member banks of the federal reserve system were for speculative purposes.

United States Takes Lead Away From Great Britain as World's Greatest Money-Lending Group

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—American investors in the last seven years have effectively displaced Great Britain from its standing as the world's greatest lending nation.

The commerce department, taking British compilations of that country's foreign investments from 1920 to 1927 inclusive, has set the total at $4,121,000,000. Foreign capital issues financed in the United States during the same period had a total value of $6,836,000,000.

The foreign capital flotation in both the United States and Great Britain reached new high levels in 1927. Though the United States is now furnishing more funds for Latin America, Canada and Europe than is Great Britain, the current totals of British investments in Africa and the Far East are still considerably in excess of those of the United States in that area.

Jury in Darrow's 'Last Case' Fails To Reach Verdict

Darrow had wanted to win one case in his boyhood home before he retired, but the jury last night, after deliberating eleven hours, was unable to agree.

"I guess I am getting a bit old," said Darrow. "It was a real strain to wait for a possible verdict all through the day. But I'll be back here to see this thing through."

FORT WORTH, May 12. (AP)—Cato Sells, chairman of the Tarrant county delegation to the Democratic state convention to be held in Beaumont, believes the Dallas harmony agreement "should be fully complied with," he declared today in a telegram to former Lieutenant Governor Lynch Davidson at Houston. Sells' telegram was elicited by Davidson.

PANAMA CANAL ZONE MEMORIAL PROPOSED

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—A proposal to erect at a suitable site in the Panama canal zone a memorial to commemorate the work of the persons and agencies that aided in bringing about the construction of the canal was made today in a bill by Representative Thatcher, Republican, Kentucky.

The measure would create a commission of seven to which would be submitted designs for a memorial in the form of a building with an auditorium at which might be held meetings of a patriotic, civic or international character, "including Pan-American congresses."

The United States or the Panama railroad would furnish a site for the structure.

The commission would recommend to the president a design for the memorial, the cost of which would not exceed $2,500,000, and upon approval of the plan by the president and congress, appropriations might be made for it.

The measure would authorize the appropriation of the sum necessary to build the structure, in addition to $250,000 for the expenses of the commission.

FARM RELIEF BILL GOES TO COOLIDGE WITH VETO SURE

Senate-House Conferees Refuse to Eliminate Equalization Fee

NEW SHIPPING MEASURE EXPECTED TO SURVIVE

Merchant Marine Bill Changed to Overcome Cal's Objections.

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—Two more outstanding pieces of legislation troubling congress this session—farm relief and merchant marine development—were whipped into final form today ready to be sent to President Coolidge as soon as the senate and house approve compromises reached on their differences on these bills.

Both measures are regarded as more or less in conflict with the administration program, although modifications finally made in the senate government ownership shipping bill are believed to make it acceptable at the White House. Little hope is held however, for presidential approval of the McNary-Haugen farm bill.

Agreements announcer today by the senate and house conferees on the two measures showed virtually unanimous approval of the bills as finally worked out in conference. House approval is required first on both bills and this will be sought probably on Monday. The senate then must act and no contest is looked for on either proposition. leaders are confident the two pices of legislation can be put in the president's hands by next Wednesday.

Flood Bill to Cal.

Meanwhile, Mr. Coolidge is studying the first and probably the most comprehensive legislative product of the session, the flood control bill, which he expects to sign.

Conferees of the senate and house on the Jones-White bill for development of the merchant marine, agreed to almost all revision by the house, which went further than the senate and made provisions for encouragement of a privately owned merchant marine.

The house provision that sale of government ships could be made by the shipping board hereafter upon votes of five of the seven members was accepted in lieu of the senate language requiring unanimous consent of the board. The senate language was distasteful to President Coolidge, who has urged disposition of the fleet into private hands in the interest of economy, and who believed that unanimous consent of the board for sales meant virtually permanent government ownership and operation.

Ocean Mail Contracts

Approval was given the conferees to house provisions for liberalization of the mail contracts on ocean vessels, for increasing the ship construction loan fund from $125,000,000 to $250,000,000 and for allowing loans to private builders up to three-fourths of the cost of ships in place of the two-thirds now in effect.

The measure calls for a replacement program of shipping board vessels which it is estimated will eventually cost $250,000,000 and this provision is one of the primary purposes of the act.

There war slittle serious controversy between the senate and the house on farm relief. The bills of Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, and Representative Haugen, Republican, Iowa, were in agreement on the equalization fee, providing that it should be imposed to raise funds when necessary for marketing of surplus crops. That is what President Coolidge regards as unconstitutional and it seems destined to draw another veto for the bill.

TURKS HUNT NAMES AS NEW LAW NEARS PASSAGE

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 12. (AP) Fourteen million Turks are nervously scratching their heads or thumbing through the few telephone directories available in search of a name with which to endow themselves. Reports from Angora state that an act requiring the adoption of family names is nearing passage. The lack of these names has caused infinite confusion as thousands call themselves the same one name, generally Mustapha or Fatima.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha, Turkey's president, himself was born simply Mustapha. He gained the Kemal when a school teacher, impressed by his literary ability, added the name of Turkey's greatest writer, Namick Kemal.

Angora's newest edict will be another slap at the Koran. Its precept, "Don't be proud of family, make your own name," is responsible for the Moslem lack of family tags.

The few families which have handed down the father's name have amusing appelations such as "son of a fish" or "son of a six-fingered ancestor."

Hendy is in the eleventh grade of the Wells Valley school and is a student of E. H. Tooley, principal.

Mr. Mosely and Mr. Tooley accompanied the young man to Austin and the three were visitors in Wichita Falls last Saturday.

The youth's speech was "Happiness and Liberty" by Robert G. Ingersoll.

OKLA. ROAD BOARD TO 'FIRE' SECRETARY

Upheaval in Highways Organization Rumored At Capital.

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 12. (UP)—Dismissal of R. L. Seaman, secretary of the state highway commission, "is regarded as a certainty" when the commission meets next Tuesday, the Oklahoma News, capital Scripps-Howard newspaper, said today.

The News said "everyone concerned with the administration privately admits that Seaman is scheduled to go."

The newspaper said a successor to Seaman had not been definitely determined.

Aside from this forecast, the commission Tuesday will let state highway contracts totaling approximately $1,000,000, for the most part providing about 125 miles of grading and drainage structures in various sections of the state.

The only hard surface contract to be let is for seven and one-half miles of paving in Comanche county west of the Stephens county line.

The commission will also receive audits of county auto license accounts, in which is involved alleged shortage of $13,000.

TO CORRECT AN IMPRESSION—that is wrong

¶ Only a short while ago . . . you surely remember the time . . a plan was evolved in Wichita Falls. In this plan each minute detail was most carefully studied before being made a part of the general scheme.

¶ The most eminent lawyers were consulted and engaged . . . and around the conditions of ownership . . they built a bulwark of protection . . . . . that defied any legal attack.

¶ Experts in planning were given free hand to develop a plan . . . . . that when fully realized . . . would create the greatest value . . . . to the prospective owners . . . in the years to come.

¶ Development was commenced and carried on to the fullest possible extent. They who witnessed the progress . . . approved of the care that had been taken . . in the original planning of things.

¶ The plans were so comprehensive . . . and the details so carefully watched that some people thought . . . the price must be high . . . to the exclusion of folks of moderate means. But the price was not the basis on which Country Club Estates was either sold or developed.

¶ Harmonious fitting of architecture to landscape . . . matters of taste, not money, predominated . . . and so 60-foot lots with all improvements are sold as low as $2400 . . . and even in these low-priced lots . . . the same improvements . . . the same legal protection and the same supervision prevails as in the largest and most beautiful estates.

I.C.C. AUTHORIZES REFINANCING OF WICHITA SOUTHERN

The refinancing of the Wichita Falls and Southern railroad through the issuance of $1,176,700 in common stock, $2,000,000 in first mortgage bonds and $56,353 in promissory notes has been authorized by the interstate commerce commission, it was learned here Saturday from Washington dispatches.

The company had sought authority to issue $1,338,000 in common stock and $3,500,000 in bonds, as well as $79,558 in promissory notes, the last being for equipment recently purchased.

The purpose of this refinancing move was to concentrate the stocks and bonds of the road, which were formerly in three separate corporations, into one corporation, officials of the road explained here Saturday.

The new equipment for which the promissory notes were issued was recently purchased by the Southern road and included 100 new box cars.

The bonds will be issued under a mortgage, with the National City bank of New York as trustee, according to information reaching here from Washington.

Application by the road that stock be issued at 50 per cent of par was denied, the commission holding it should be issued at par, the dispatches stated.

LITTLEFIELD TO BUILD LARGE STORAGE TANK

LITTLEFIELD, May 12.—At a meeting of the city commissioners this week it was decided to incorporate a parking system to meet with requirements necessitated by the increased population of the city. The paving contractor presented bond, and the work of paving will now begin within a very short time.

Bids will be received soon for the construction of a 100,000-gallon ground storage tank for water. Engineer Montgomery has already drawn the plans and specifications for this tank. This is in addition to the city's 75,000-gallon pressure tank already in use. There will be a two-union booster pump placed at this reservoir to force the water up into the pressure tank. "Kell Field" Is Name Chosen for Wichita Falls Muny Airport

"Kell Field" has been selected as the name for the new Wichita Falls municipal airport, now under construction on the Burkburnett road, it was announced Saturday by W. S. Abbott, secretary-treasurer of the Wichita Falls Airport company.

Designation of the field in honor of Frank Kell, Wichita Falls capitalist, financier and builder, was decided upon by directors as an honor in keeping with Mr. Kell's many accomplishments in the transportation field in Texas and Oklahoma, Mr. Abbott said.

"Mr. Kell has been an outstanding leader not only in business, but in the development of transportation facilities for this section in the past," Mr. Abbott said.

"The new field of transportation is in the air. The growth of air service, in the fields of passenger, mail, freight and express service has been so rapid and so sure within the last few years that even the most skeptical person should now have no doubts of its ultimate success and utility to the nation. Because Mr. Kell has for years been the leader in the development of other transportation facilities serving this section, the airport directors felt that it was only fitting that this newest development, represented here in the municipal airport, should be designated in his honor."

Opening July Fourth

Formal opening of the new municipal port has been set for July 4, and elaborate plans for the event are now being made, Mr. Abbott said. Arrangements are in charge of Charles I. Francis, president of the chamber of commerce; L. H. Cullum, C. W. Cahoon Jr., president of the airport, and others. An air program, including demonstrations and stunts by all types of ships, will be included in the events for the opening day.

Work will also start next week on the "marking" of Wichita Falls with air signs, Mr. Abbott said. Two huge signs, painted with aluminum the City National bank building, paint, will be made on the top of The signs will give the name of the city, and an arrow will point toward the municipal airport, the newly designated Kell Field.

President Cahoon of the airport company is now in Chicago making a study of air transportation facilities and fields there, with a view to providing future service for Wichita Falls. Mr. Cahoon left Saturday at noon for Chicago.

Mother and Dad Wanted by Two Fine Lads Here

There are two fine lads in town who want a father and mother. These youngsters, 10 and 12, respectively, are brothers, and need a dad who will be a real friend and pal to them, and a mother who will look after and love them.

Yes, they go to school and they are both accomplished children, and are making the grade, too.

They wouldn't be doing this, however, had it not been for the cooperation of a local school teacher, and the superintendent of the Children's Aid Society of West Texas, whose wards they are. They helped the boys at a critical time.

Here's the story as related by Miss Katherine Henricle, superintendent, who has been watching the boys since they were legally given in her charge, and who has placed them in a boarding home:

"Several months ago two brothers were committed to the Children's Aid Society of West Texas through the district court. They were not promising—their training had been the opposite of that which makes for manly boys.

"Physical examinations showed the need of much corrective work. When the boys' tonsils were removed, the younger boy was seriously ill and even after leaving the hospital, it was necessary to return him for further care.

"Six months have passed and the boys have responded marvelously to care and training, with the result that today, it would be difficult to find two finer anywhere and now it is necessary for the Children's Aid Society of West Texas to find permanent homes for them. They are intelligent and talented and education in the first consideration.

We believe that somewhere in Wichita Falls there is a man whose heart aches for the companionship of a son to whom he can be a real pal. Either one of these lads is capable of becoming both son and companion."

Miss Henricle may be reached by telephoning 7756 on weekdays and 5950 on Sundays.

Mrs. Tadlock has hatched hundreds of chickens this year and is building up one of the largest flocks in the county.

SOUTHEAST WILBARGER WICHITA DISTRICT'S BUSIEST AREA

By JIMMIE MAXWELL

The close of another week of development throughout the North Texas fields failed to disclose any important happening. Several wells were brought in but these were of the pumper type, the only exception being the Waggoner Refining company's No. E-3 Waggoner, in section 30, block 4, making 600 barrels from the usual 2300-foot sand.

New locations staked out showed an increase, as did the new drilling when compared with the preceding week, Archer, northeast Young and southeast Wilbarger counties sharing in the new drilling sites.

While considerable activity is shown in northeast Young, the district's most active area is found in the southeast portion of Wilbarger county on the various Waggoner sections, where a string of drilling wells extending from the Rock Crossing field east to the west line of Wichita county. The territory south and west of Electra in Wichita county is also due for plenty of drilling, five new locations being reported on the J. and J. Waggoner lands, with a number of wells drilling at various depths.

Pipeline runs from the entire district showed a loss of over 1300 barrels per day under the previous week's run, the district as a whole reporting slightly over 85,000 barrels daily.

Oil and Gas Bureau of West Texas Chamber of Commerce Will Meet in Amarillo Tuesday; Adair to Attend

Special to The Record News.

AMARILLO, May 12.—Plans have been completed for the meeting of the Oil and Gas bureau of the West Texas chamber of commerce to be held in Amarillo on Tuesday, May 15. From acknowledgements received from the majority of the members of the bureau, there will be a good attendance.

The meeting is scheduled for 10 o'clock and will continue until all business has been finished. So much is to be considered that it is possible a two-day session will be necessary. W. H. Holmes, of Amarillo, an independent producer and member of the bureau, and H. J. Adair of Wichita Falls, manager of the bureau, are making all necessary arrangements for the meeting. A great deal of enthusiasm is being shown toward the meeting.

Much sentiment prevails, it is said, for the enactment of a state law compelling producing pipeline companies which are common carcarriers, to also store the oil and the state regulate the price for such carrying and storing.

It was said Saturday that a number of royalty owners and independent producers will strenuously advocate this to the meeting. Indications are there will be a big attendance from representatives of royalty owners, independents and major companies.

LOCATIONS IN PERMIAN BASIN PAST WEEK 25

Tests Are Scattered and Arouse Considerable Interest

HALF-MILE EXTENSION IS FORESEEN WINKLER FIELD

Activity in Section Is Most Noticeable in Winkler With Six Tests

(Special to The Times)

SAN ANGELO, May 12.—A dozen counties in the Permian Basin of West Texas gained 25 locations for oil tests last week, seven less than during the preceding week, but the manner in which they were scattered indicates that development is holding up well, considering low oil prices.

Winkler county again was first with six locations, compared with 23 the week before. Three locations were made in Howard county, two each in Runnels and Crane counties and one each in Irion, Loving, Pecos, Presidio, Reagan, Reeves and Sterling counties. Corrections were noted in locations of five tests in four counties.

Perhaps the most important of the half dozen locations in Winkler county, inasmuch as it would mark a half mile extension to the north, if a producer, was World Oil company's No. 1 Hendricks, 2310 feet from the north and west lines of section 16, block 26, public school land.

Southern Crude made three of Winkler county's locations, as follows: No. T-67-1B5 Hendricks, 440 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the east line of section 44, block 26, public school land; No. T-88-14 Hendricks, 2310 feet from the north line and 330 feet from the east line of section 30, block B5, and No. T-88-J, Hendricks, 2145 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the east line of section 30, block B5.

Knotty Problem Regard Winkler Faces Commish

AUSTIN, May 12. (AP)—A knotty question growing out of the state railroad commission's order reducing Winkler county oil production on a pro-rata basis, was put up to the commission Saturday.

The question is whether the commission can rescind drilling permits granted before the proration order, which is designed to take precedence over any conflicting previous orders, took effect. E. C. Grady of Abilene, who was granted permits to drill five wells within townsite limits of Wink before the pro-ration order was made, denied the right of the commission to cancel the permits at a hearing before R. D. Parker, chief supervisor of the oil and gas division. The commission will pass upon the question. The pro-ration order provides that no well can be drilled closer than 660 feet to another producer nor closer than 330 feet to a property line. Rule 37, under which Grady got his permits, provides distances of 300 and 150 feet, respectively. Grady said he already had let drilling contracts.

THREE ORDINANCES UP FOR SECOND READINGS MONDAY'S COUNCIL MEET

Three proposed ordinances are expected to be passed on their second readings when the Wichita Falls city council meets in regular weekly session Monday night, it was said at the Memorial auditorium Saturday.

One of these proposed measures is designed to prohibit any person from skating or playing any games on the streets and alleys of the city. Another provides for extension of the two-hour parking limit on Eighth between Lamar and Travis. The third proposed ordinance repeals paving assessments against property on North Fifth street between Grand and Brook.

It is probable that the council will appoint members of the equalization board at Monday night's meeting.

IOWA PARK TO HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICES

IOWA PARK, Texas, May 12.—The annual memorial and decoration services will be held at the First Methodist church Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Many from Wichita Falls who have relatives buried in the cemetery here, will be present. The program will open with a song by the congregation, "Abide With Me." The address of the afternoon will be given by Rev. E. S. Lowrance, pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

A business session will follow the program, at which time the secretary and treasurer's report will be given, the officers for the ensuing year elected, and plans for the next year's work of the organization submitted.

After the program and business session, the crowd will go to the cemetery, where the graves will be decorated.

The Highland cemetery is becoming a beautiful place but requires the constant care of a keeper. His salary is paid by the dues and by the sale of lots. At the services Sunday opportunity will be given for every one to help and with the cooperation of all it is hoped the thousand dollars will be raised to pay expenses for the coming year.

Wichita District Daily Production Decreases 1630 Barrels Past Week

Pipeline runs from the various pools in the Wichita Falls district for the week ended Monday, May 7, 1928, registered an average daily of 85,375 barrels, a loss of approxtmately 1630 barrels per day as compared with the previous week's run. Lack of new completions in the greater number of the district's producing areas was reflected in the gradual falling off in the output from these pools, this being attributed to the decline of older lease production.

The biggest drop of the week was shown in the Archer field, which fell 635 barrels daily. Wilbarger, despite the completion of a few producers in the southeast portion, registered a slight loss. Young county, while showing plenty of drilling in the shallow pool around Loving, failed to bring in anything in the nature of a good producer and as a result its runs suffered to the extent of 340 barrels under the preceding week's output. All other pools showed slight losses. Below are the runs by pools:

Roxana Transfers Entire Interest to Atkinson Sandefer Et Al

NEW OWNERS CONTROL 40 WELLS STEPHENS-YOUNG

Two Completions Reported During Past Week in Stephens County

(Special to The Times)

BRECKENRIDGE, May 12.—Consummation of a deal involving the transfer of a tract of approximately 625 acres in the South Bend field for a consideration several thousands above $100,000 was revealed here this week with the filing of instruments in Young county Thursday.

By the terms of this deal the Roxana Oil corporation transfers to Charles J. Atkinson, J. D. Sandefer Jr. and M. E. Daniels its entire interest in the South Bend pool. The deal was effective May 5.

The property thus transferred includes 23 producers, all but one of which are shallow wells, with an approximate production of 135 barrels daily. The properties were purchased outright, including all leases, improvements on leases and a certain amount of drilling machinery.

MART BANTA WILL BE CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY ASSESSOR

Mart Banta, who has been a resident of the Beaver Creek community for 51 years, formally announced Saturday that he will be a candidate for tax assessor of Wichita county, subject to the Democratic primary in July.

Mr. Banta believes that he has resided continuously in Wichita county longer than any other citizen.

In announcing his candidacy, he said, he enters the race for an office in which his father, J. H. Banta, first served. When Wichita county was organized, the father prepared the first tax roll and was elected the county's first tax assessor, Mr. Banta said.

Mr. Banta is a former stockman.

"I have lived practically all my life, since I was a small boy, in Wichita county," he said. "I have taken an active part at all times in the advancement and uplift of my county and community.

"I was a pupil in the first school organized in the county, and was a pupil in the first Sunday school. I have further qualified myself for the office I seek by having successfully managed a large farm for many years.

"I have served as school trustee, and have taken an active part in agitation which led to the organization of various schools and churches in the county. I served as gatekeeper for the Wichita County Improvement district during 1924 and 1925.

"If elected,I promise to make an effort to have the present tax rate lowered in favor of the farmer-taxpayer. I am certain of my qualifications to direct the clerical work of the department.

"I am especially glad because the farmers and other citizens generally of the county are showing an increasing interest in the selection of officals who are qualified to handle the offices to which they are elected.

"I invite all such citizens to investigate my own business record and my qualifications. I appeal to no one class, but to all citizens who have the interest of their county at heart. To them I pledge that, if elected, I shall give them a business administration in the tax assessor's department."

DIVERSION BRIDGE OPENED SATURDAY

New Entrance Provided Into State Park and Fish Hatchery

The bridge across the Wichita river below the Diversion dam was opened for traffic Saturday and provides a new entrance into the state park and fish hatchery, site for which was donated by Mrs. Herbert Griffin.

At the time this donation was made the chamber of commerce agreed to construct the bridge and this was done by means of public subscriptions.

The chamber of commerce calls the public's attention to the completion of the bridge and invites citizens to visit the park and hatchery Sunday. The park consists of a wooded tract of 140 acres timbered with cottonwood, live oak and mesquite trees.

The regular weekly meeting of the chamber of commerce business council on Friday, May 25, will be held at the park and the luncheon will be in the form of a fish fry, the fish to be provided by Joe Dixon, superintendent of the state hatchery.

Tickets will cost $1 each and will be placed on sale at the chamber of commerce Monday. Directors of the chamber, members of the business council and city and county officials are eligible to attend. The meeting will not be thrown open to the public because of the limited facilities for preparing the meal at the park.

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit! It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, and is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and callused—Try it! —

Austin P.-T. A.

The health department of Austin School Parent-Teacher association is still doing active work in Austin school. Mrs. J. Z. Steinkoenig, retiring chairman of this department, who has held three successful clinics at Austin school and has given unstintedly of her time and energy to the physical welfare of Austin school children and pre-school children, has assisted in holding spring clinics at almost every school in the city, where her experience was found of great value.

These clinics have been held in the past three weeks during the "Sumer Round-up of the Children." After the last clinic is held, this busy department will begin the follow-up work that is necessary during the summer.

Of interest to all members of the Parent-Teacher associations is the recent National P.-T. A. congress held in Cleveland, Ohio. Over 2000 delegates attended this meeting, among them two representatives from the furthermost reaches of the British Empire, namely: Professor Rajaram W. Cogate of Indore, India, and George W. Kirby of Mount Royal college, Calgary, Alberta.

The National Parent-Teacher association officers were elected by this congress for the coming year:

Austin school Parent-Teacher association wishes to thank all the teachers and pupils who have worked along this line, thus helping the organization to realize one of its objectives, which is "music."

The Huey School P.-T. A. installed Wednesday afternoon their new officers with a very appropriate ceremony after which they gave a program. Special songs by group of sixth grade girls and boys. This however, was extra work other than the daily work under the supervision of their music teacher, Miss Macie McClure.

The health playlet by the fifth grade, Mrs. Ryles room was enjoyed. A report was given by the delegates to the recent P.-T. A. convention here. Mrs. Rube Hightower and Mrs. J. O. Vermillian gave the most complete report of the seven delegates that attended the convention.

Mrs. J. B. Scarbrough, retiring president, announced that the Huey P.-T. A. had presented Miss Berry, the principal, a life membership in the P.-T. A.

Mrs. Fraizer's room had the largest per cent, winning the picture.

Thirteenth District P.-T. A.

By MRS. J. M. FOX

As the thoughts of parents, teacheers and children turn vacationward toward the long summer days that are to follow the closing of school, the minds of thinking educators and parents who are possessed of wisdom and vision are turning to the problem of the "wise use of leisure" and the dire need of juvenile protection being more seriously stressed in the city of Wichita Falls and surrounding districts.

The Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations has a department of child welfare, and the most important part of this department is work that is being done for the cause of preventing delinquency among our boys and girls. We hear much these days about "preventive medicine"—or correcting in time those physical ills that tend to tear down the health and well being of the children who are to do the world's work in the future; juvenile protection is the preventive measure which is being used to build up around the child a spiritual wall to protect and fortify him before his moral downfall has unhappily commenced.

Juvenile protection seeks to give to the world boys and girls who have honesty of purpose—who have been taught through constructive thinking to avoid moral degradation as they would avoid physical leprosy. Juvenile protection seeks to train the childhood of our land into abler citizenship by awakening parenthood to the need of heeding the battle cry, "Save the Child" today—tomorrow may be too late. There is never a result without a cause, and for every case of juvenile delinquency anywhere, any time—lies the cause that rears its ugly head in indifferent parents, drunkenness, divorced parents, lack of godliness in the home, and it is this cause that juvenile protection seeks to remove by educating parenthood to look with clear eyes on the damage that can be wrought on the plastic mind and character of the growing child—taking thought of the influence with which he is surrounded—knowing the good and evil of constant example—and devoting more and more time to the formation of healthy morals in adolescent children.

Each school in Wichita Falls have its thoroughly alive and aggressive juvenile protection chairman, each county and each district in Texas should have a chairman who works under the supervision of Mrs. Ira L. Cain, state juvenile protection chairman. Mrs. Cain is a resident of Wichita Falls and of our own recently formed 13th district. Calls come from all over this state which Mrs. Cain is unable to answer, "the harvest is great but the workers are few," but 13th district is blessed because of the fact that its juvenile protection problems can be taken directly to our state chairman here for help and advice. One of the objectives of the new 13th district should be—more efficient district, county and local juvenile protection workers to "hold up the hands" of our state chairman, who is doing the most outstanding and the most important work in Parent-Teacher association activities in Texas. Let the new 13th district stand solidly back of our state chairman in realizinz the important place that Juvenile protection holds in the program of child welfare throughout the 80 P.-T. A.s scattered over this district.

Fairview P.-T. A.

The Fairview Mothers' club met Thursday afternoon for the last regular meeting of the year.

Mrs. Bishop opened the meeting with a Scripture reading. Mrs. Brookshire led in prayer. This was followed by a singsong. Reports on the year's work were given by the oficers.

The new officers were installed and Mrs. Goins, new president, then took charge.

Toasts were given to the mother's club by Miss Abbey and C. R. Roberts, and Mrs. Morris gave a toast to the faculty which beautifully expressed appreciation of their year's work.

Mrs. C. R. Roberts gave a most inspirational report on the P.-T. A. convention at Lubbock.

Mrs. C. R. Roberts presented the senior class and their sponsor, Miss Hessley. She praised their work and their mothers who have so faithfully seen them through eleven years of schooling. Each senior had his mother or representative present to stand with him. Nora Lee Hanks was announced as being valedictorian and Raymond Bunstein, salutatorian.

Mrs. Graham played "Auld Lang Syne" and all sang.

The club adjourned for a social hour in the foods laboratory where refreshments were served. Exhibits were also visited.

For the most part, publicity chairmen of the local Parent-Teacher organizations of the city, for the past year have been faithful contributors to the Sunday P.-T. A. news columns. All of which goes to prove that even though the column plan is new as yet, it can be worked out creditably, through teamwork, known as "co-operation." Local newspaper folk have co-operated with the column plan, and have given generously of their time and space that the "P.-T. A." might broadcast news of its activities from Sunday to Sunday.

This indeed has been worthwhile service from a commercial standpoint alone, as the space allotted would have netted a goodly sum from advertisements. While the sacrifice of time made by the publicity workers is no small item within itself, on the other hand the work has been most pleasant, and a service willingly given. May those who write the "column copy" another year strive to write better news until every parent and teacher who reads may be completely "sold" on the service of P.-T. A., to the end that those heretofore indifferent to the needs of the child may awake to their own opportunity and responsibility.

The P.-T. A. council will meet in council room of the Memorial auditorium Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock, when the final meeting of the year will be held. Outgoing and incoming presidents of the local P.-T. A.'s are especially urged to attend, according to announcement by the president, Mrs. O. H. Karr. The organization of a county council is also to be perfected at this time by the district president, Mrs. Frank Creighton.

Mrs. Harry ten Brink, president is calling a meeting of the retiring and new executive boards of the Sam Houston P.-T. A. Monday at 2 p. m. at the school.

Fannin P.-T. A.

The Fannin school P.-T. A. met Wednesday, May 9, at 3 p. m. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Marvin Cummins, and the following program was rendered: Devotional services, led by Mrs. J. Price; song, by the fifth grade pupils; talk on "Contagious Diseases," by Dr. J. A. Little; piano solo, by Miss Alva Willis.

At the business meeting which followed it was decided to continue the P.-T. A. meetings through the summer months, and also to have a rummage sale at the school house during the next week.

In appreciation for their loyal services the president, Mrs. Marvin Cummins; Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Butler, Mrs. John Hayes and Mrs. J. F. Price were presented gifts by the club.

Barwise P.-T. A.

Barwise Parent-Teacher association met at the school Thursday with Mrs. R. E. Bailey, new president in the chair. Thirty-two members were present.

The meeting was opened with devotionals by Mrs. W. Roberts, after which a short program was given by the school children and a number by the primary orchestra.

Mrs. R. E. Bailey gave a report of the recent convention of the Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher association. Several committees were appointed and completed including membership, magazines, ways and means, social hygiene and juvenile protection. The teachers were hostesses. The invitation was extended to all and refreshments of punch and wafers were enjoyed in the cafeteria.

Carrigan P.-T. A.

The pre-school health clinic was held at the Carrigan school Tuesday at 2 o'clock. There were 27 children accompanied by their mothers thoroughly examined by physicians.

The Parent-Teacher association expresses its thanks to Drs. Maude L. Lindsey, J. A. Johnson, V. K. Rogan, S. P. Crain and George Singleton for their professional service, also to Misses Harkins and Sutherland of the Red Cross and to the following P.-T. A. officers and members: Mrs. Steinkoenig, health chairman of the city council; Mr. J. T. Rundell, principal of the school; Mrs. C. K. Mosby, G. J. Galmiche, J. B. Hubbard, R. C. Honea, Fred Mount, C. B. Clement and Owens.

Mother's Day Letter

Dear Mother:

This little note for "Mother's day" bears my greetings to you!

You, my own faithful, christian mother, with whom I have walked down the journey of life these thirty-odd years.

You, who have ever tried to guide my footsteps aright.

You, who have ministered to my needs, day or night.

I thank you for all you have done for me, and for the many sacrifices you have made in my behalf, but most of all, for the living example you have given in an upright life.

May the sunshine of happiness smile upon you many more "Mother's days."

Lovingly,

MARYE and "MOM" Their Letters

Dear Mom:

To go on with my story about the meeting of Norman and me with Pede—

Norman said some good, old-fashioned words when Pede insisted on my going with him, and then Pede stepped back and looked straight at Norman with fire in his eye.

"The Senor forgets the lady," he said in a voice that sounded like the rustle of silk.

"You'd better do the same," Norman told him. "She doesn't seem to want to keep that date." Then he turned to me and asked me if I knew this masher. I had to say I did, of course, but I was not going to have Norman think I had deliberately walked him into the man. So I told Pede I was very sorry but he'd have to excuse me because I didn't know I had a heavy date with him.

Then Norman took a step forward, with me on his arm, but Pede got in the way again. He put out a hand and stopped me.

That was too much for Norman. He swung on Pede's jaw and spun him half around. I guess Norman didn't stop to think how perfectly insane it was. But he knew in an instant all right. Pede whirled back and smashed him in the eye.

By that time a crowd had gathered on the scene and more were coming. I was fighting mad too. Because it certainly wasn't my fault if those two dumb-bells wanted to indulge in a cheap street scene. So I ducked.

When Norman followed me back into the apartment after finishing it up with Pede—three men pulled 'em apart—I gave him a good sound talking to. And put some chopped steak on his eye. I didn't have any other kind. It would have been all right but I'd already salted and peppered it.

Norman didn't stay very long after that but this morning he was feeling better. Well, I do hope his aunt won't hear about it.

'Dearest love,
Marye.

FOES OF AL SMITH FIGHT BITTERLY TO CHECK HIS GAINS

HERBERT HOOVER'S RIVALS ALSO CAST ABOUT FOR ROCK TO HOLD FAST TO AGAINST HIS FORCE

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—Political rivalries, growing in intensity as the June national conventions draw near, are bringing to the surface in rapidly multiplying numbers conflicting and confusing claims as to the strength of the various candidates for the Republican and Democratic nominations. At the same time, they are furnishing the driving power for new alignments that may have far-reaching effects when balloting actually begins.

Hoover and Smith are bearing the brunt of the grand offensives that will culminate at Kansas City and Houston. The commerce secretary particularly is challenged by a well-organized opposition.

While Hoover's managers have not yet claimed he has bagged enough delegates to go over, they contend that all signs point to victory for him when the Republicans select their standard bearer. His foes, however, insist they will have the votes in convention to block his nomination.

Smith Goal Hard

As for Smith, in one way he has a harder row to hoe, but his supporters claim a big advantage in that his opposition appears more scattered. The two-thirds nominating rule which the Democrats adhere to makes it necessary for the winner at Houston to capture at least 733⅓ of the 1100 delegates. At Kansas City, only a bare majority, 545 votes, is needed for the nomination.

With the opposition to the New York governor concentrating on a drive to build up a block of votes large enough to head off his nominations, Republicans lined up against Hoover are overlooking no opportunities to do damage to his cause.

An increasing number of Republican delegates are being selected, particularly in southern states to contest the right of Hoover supporters to sit in the Kansas City convention, and it is a certainty that the Republican national committee, when it comes to sifting these claims, will have as much work on its hands as it did in 1920 just before the Chicago convention and its battle royal for the nomination.

Lowden Forces Busy

The Lowden forces, in particular, are challenging the Hoover campaign efforts at every turn, and there is increasing evidence of activity in behalf of the former Illinois governor on all political battlefronts.

The Republican convention will get underway four weeks from Tuesday. The Democrats will assemble at Houston two weeks later.

Before the end of the month the Republicans will select the 219 delegates who remain to be chosen, while the last of the Democratic convention representatives will not be named until a few days before the Houston meeting.

Of the 870 Republican delegates actually selected to date, Hoover's managers are laying claim to 446, of which 184 are in dispute. A total of 252 is claimed for Lowden, with his foes refusing to allot him 68 of that number.

Smith Claim Disputed

In the Democratic camp, the claims in behalf of Smith to date total 553¼, slightly more than half the delegate convention strength. Of this total, however, his claims to 79½ are challenged by opponents. Reed is runner-up, on the basis of the 774 delegates named thus far, with a claimed strength of 117, of which 81 are in dispute.

COLQUITT INVITES VOTE FROM KLAN

Leader of Constitutional Demos Urges Merger Against Smith

DALLAS, May 12. (AP)—The Dallas Times Herald today said:

"The Texas Constitutional Democrats are glad to welcome the ku klux klan in the present pre-convention fight in Texas if their entry means that they will join with the Constitutional Democrats in the fight to defeat the nomination of Governor Alfred E. Smith as the Democratic presidential nominee," former Governor O. B. Colquitt, a leader of the Constitutional Democrats, said today.

"'Ever since the appearance of the klan in Texas politics I have fought it as hard as any man in the state,' said the former governor. 'I was an originator in the move against the klan in Dallas. I supported Mrs. Ferguson against the klan four years ago.

"The Constitutional Democrats are going to proceed in this fight on the basis of Governor Dan Moody's statement, made two weeks ago, namely: That the klan issue is as dead, in Texas politics, as 'a last year's bird nest.'"

WASHINGTON, May 12. (UP) Senator Heflin of Alabama, demanded in the senate today that the campaign investigating committee .subpoena .William ..F. mittee subpoena William F. Kenny, New York contractor, who donated $20,000 and loaned $50,000 to the Governor Smith campaign. Heflin said Kenny should be asked if he obtained any contracts from the New York city or state administrations.

HOOVER MANAGER PREDICTS VICTORY OVER GOV. SMITH

Good Claims Northwest States Favor Herbert Against Tammany

HOOVER EXPENSES TOTAL MAY REACH TO $300,000

Witness Informs Senate He Knows Nothing of Texas Situation

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—Revising his figures on the basis of more complete information, James W. Good, former representative from Iowa and a leader of Herbert Hoover's presidential campaign, testified today before the senate campaign funds committee that expenditures reported to date totaled $241,274.

This total, which compares with the $225,000 given yesterday, includes the approximately $40,000 which Good said had been spent in the Ohio primary campaign, but does not take into account money that may have been spent in Northern California and in Florida, Maine, Missouri and New Hampshire.

Good promised to keep the committee advised on expenditures, saying that he would have to revise his figures upward before the end of the pre-convention campaign. When it was suggested that the total might be "$300,000 or more," he said he did not think it would go that high.

As was the case during his first appearance, Good alternately argued with an declaimed before the committee and again was warned by the investigators that they did not care to hear campaign speeches. He emphatically denied that he is the directing manager of the Hoover campaign, contending that there was no directing head of the Washington organization.

Reiterating that the expenditures on behalf of the Hoover candidacy had been "modest," Good declared that was the first time "in the history of the republic" that a candidate or his manager had appeared before a congressional committee and disclosed all expenditures by local committees over the country, insisting that the statement made by the campaign manager for Gov. Alfred E. Smith, leading candidate for the Democratic nomination, had not contained this information.

Others Spent Fortunes.

In this connection he referred to past expenditures on behalf of those seeking a presidential nomination, mentioning especially the evidence before the senate committee in 1920 showing that $414,987 had been spent on behalf of Frank O. Lowden, now runner-up to Hoover in the present fight for Republican delegates, and $1,773,330 on behalf of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, who was the chief contestant with Lowden in the 1920 pre-convention campaign.

During the hearing today, Senator Steiwer, Republican, Oregon, chairman of the committee, announced that Lowden would appear here Monday to make his statement. Afterwards, the investigators will call in Senator James E. Watson, who won the presidential primary in Indiana last Tuesday against Hoover, and one of the two remaining candidates for presidential nomination honors yet to be heard.

Replying to Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, Good said he assumed that it was the attitude of the secretary that wherever possible he would seek second choice delegates, but he would not concede that wherever agreements could not be obtained with the "favorite sons" for second choice support, Hoover had entered the primary contest in their states.

Mellon for Hoover.

Asked why Hoover had not entered the contest in Pennsylvania, Good explained that Secretary Mellon lived in that state and that "it perhaps would have been an act of impropriety" for Hoover to enter there. He added that the relations between Mellon and Hoover always had been cordial.

"You thought that on account of those relationships things would take care of themselves in Pennsylvania?" inquired Senator Barkley.

"Yes, there is a good sentiment for Secretary Hoover in Pennsylvania," Good replied.

"Well, Secretary Kellogg lives in Minnesota," Senator Barkley said, "but I notice Mr. Hoover was entered in that state."

"The movement there was initiated by the local organization," the witness explained.

Denying reports that the great farming section of the northwest is against Hoover, Good said he knew something about that country and knew that Hoover was strong there.

"If you nominate Al Smith you won't have a chance against up there," he warned Senator Barkley.

Texas Funds Mentioned.

Good was unable to say whether any money had been spent in obtaining delegates in Texas and Florida, where contesting delegations have been chosen by Republican party factions. He said Rush Holland, a former assistant attorney general, and J. W. Ryan, of Philadelphia, had been sent into Florida by the Hoover headquarters here and that Mr. Holland had gone into other Southern states. Workers also have been sent into Arkansas and western states and a number of workers and speakers went into Indiana and Ohio before the primaries in those states.

After the questioning of Good was concluded, Perry R. Heath, in charge of campaign funds in the Washington headquarters, testified that some of the Hoover fund had been solicited, but that much of it had come in the form of voluntary contributions.

tion of Senator Edge, of New Jer-

"How about the $1,000 contribusey; was that solicited?" he was asked.

"No, it was a voluntary contribution," he replied.

Heath, who described himself as "an insurance and shipping man," of Michigan, said he had volunteered his services to Secretary Hoover and that they had been accepted.

"Why did you do that?" he was asked.

"Because of my great admiration for the secretary," Heath replied.

The treasurer said that no additional funds now were being solicited.

U. S. TREAURY HEAD HIMSELF NOT IN RACE

Mellon Says He's Sot After Chance to Sit in White House.

PHILADELPHIA, May 12. (AP)—Recommending that they hold themselves unpledged and uncommitted to any particular presidential candidate Secretary of the Treasury Mellon this afternoon told the Pennsylvania Republican national delegates that Herbert Hoover, "seems to come closest to the standards that we set for this high office."

Secretary Mellon made this statement at the caucus of the Pennsylvania delegates at which he was elected chairman of the delegation. His statement follows:

"I thank you for the honor you have done me in selecting me as your chairman. It is a very real honor, for ours is a very real responsibility. The man selected by the Republican convention as the nominee of our party will in all human probability be the next president of the United States. At Kansas City, therefore, we will not merely be nominating a candidate, but selecting a president.

He Praises Coolidge

"Under the leadership of President Coolidge the record of the Republican party has been such as to entitle it to the confidence of the nation.

"It enjoys tnat confidence. The people unquestionably give us a new grant of power if they are satisfied that the policies, principles and wise administrative practices which have given economy and efficiency in government and brought prosperity and contentment to the people are to be continued.

"Our platform must furnish a definite pledge that they will. But more important than the platform is the nominee. His views, character and record must be such as to furnish a guarantee that Republican principles will be upheld, that no backward steps will be taken and that the policies so successfully inaugurated and followed by our great president will be carried forward.

Hoover is Qualified

"We hear much talk of the various candidates and of their policies. Among them all Mr. Hoover seems to come closest to the standard that we set for this high office.

"Between now and the convention, however, I recommend that we hold ourselves unpledged and uncommitted to any particular candidate so that when we meet in in caucus in Kansas City before the convention we will have the fullest liberty of choice to do as is best for Pennsylvania and the nation."

After the caucus Secretary Mellon was asked if he would permit the Pennsylvania delegation to vote for him for the presidential nomination and he replied that he was not a candidate.

The Republican state committee reorganized here today for the coming presidential and state campaign by electing General W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, national committeeman from Pennsylvania and naming Brig. Gen. Edward Martin of Washington county as state chairman.

Vare Named Committeeman

General Atterbury, who was named by Senator-Elect W. S. Vare, succeeds former Senator George Wharton Pepper, who was not a candidate. General Martin at present auditor and candidate of Scranton for state treasurer, takes the place of William L. Meilon, who also was not a candidate after holding the state chairmanship for two years.

Mrs. Worthington Scranton was elected national committeewoman. Charles Johnson of Montgomery county, present secretary of the commonwealth, was named secretary of the state committee and Thomas W. Cunningham, sheriff of Philadelphia, was re-elected treasurer.

FEDERAL ROAD AID BILL IS EXTENDED

New Measure Benefits States With Non-Taxable Lands.

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—The house today passed an amended senate bill to give broader discretion in the use of federal aid highway funds to states having more than five per cent of their total area in unappropriated public lands and non-taxable Indian lands. The measure goes back to the senate for concurrence in the changes.

Under the measure the states would be permitted to apply federal funds up to and including the whole cost of projects, on the primary system of federal aid highways or roads on the secondary system needed to make the proper connections with the primary system in an adjoining state. It carries a provision that the state funds released from the project must be applied toward the construction of other projects on the system under the direction of the secretary of agriculture.

The bill does not carry any additional appropriations for the states.

Another section of the measure would permit the state to compute seven per cent of the total road mileage on which federal aid may be applied without counting the mileage through public lands and forest reserves that form a necessary part of the connected system of federal aid highways. This provision, it was estimated, would not add more than 60 miles in any state.

RAINS OF PAST WEEK STIMULATE PLANTING IN CLARENDON SECTION

CLARENDON, May 12.—Following the rains of last week farmers of the county are planting with full force. Some cotton and corn is up and was doing fine before the rain which insured its growth, and much seed was in the ground already, which it is expected will be brought up by the present rains. As a rule good seed are being sown, and farmers as a whole are not planting an excess of cotton.

The county as a whole has none too much underground moisture, but recent rains amounting to from one-half to one inch coming every week or so has put the ground in good shape for starting crops.

MOODY CHALLENGED TO DEFEND RECORD

Wardlaw Charges Dan Uses Spoils System In Office.

(Special to The Times.)

DECATUR, Texas, May 12.—Gov. Dan Moody was charged in an address by Louis J. Wardlaw, gubernatorial candidate, here today with using his appointees on the highway commission to "pay his political debts." The highway commissioners, Mr. Wardlaw said, "are spending annually $27,000,000 of the people's money."

"I do not charge that there has been any dishonesty in connection with Moody's appointments," the speaker continued, "but I do say that he has yielded to the temptation to pay his political obligations with appointments."

Wardlaw urged the adoption of his plan, whereby a highway commission of five members should be elected by the people. Four of the members, he explained, would be elected from districts into which the state should be divided. The fifth would be selected by the voters throughout the state.

Returning to attack Moody after a sharp rebuke to the policies of the banking department, Wardlaw recounted that the governor had not taken the stump to defend the administration's record, and challenged him to do so.

"I predict that in 30 days Moody will be just as busy defending his record as he has been attending political conferences in Dallas, fishing, hunting, riding in parades, and playing the part of leading man in fiestas," the candidate said.

Wardlaw refuted the economy of the Moody administration, declaring that "the negro who sweeps the capitol steps at Austin gets more salary than three-fourths of the school teachers of Texas."

TEXAS LEGISLATOR URGES FARM TARIFF

Garner in Sympathy With Move for High Protection.

WASHINGTON, May 12 (AP)—Representative Garner of Texas, one of the Democratic spokesmen in Congress on tariff and revenue legislation, said today that he was in sympathy with the appeal by a group of farm cooperative leaders for an upward revision of the tariff on a number of foreign products competing with American farm commodities.

The farm group yesterday addressed a letter to each member of Congress urging such action and Garner in a statement said that the "record shows that there are a number of agricultural articles on which the tariff should be increased."

"The record also shows with equal force that the tariff levies on a number of manufactured articles should be reduced," he added. "Both the high tariff and low tariff groups agree that the present schedule should be adjusted to fit present conditions.

"It was over the emphatic protest of all the Democrats on the house ways and means committee that the Republican majority on that committee decided against tariff revision at this session."

Garner is Democratic leader on this committee where all tariff legislation must originate.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12. (AP)—H. H. McPike, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, announced here today he would propose the name of a former United States senator, James D. Phelan of California, as vice presidential nominee at the Houston, Texas, convention.

McPike said that Phelan's strength as a vote getter in the recent presidential primary in this state convinced him the former senator would make the best possible running mate for Governor Alfred Smith of New York and that it would have the added advantage of giving the far west representation.

Mr. Phelan heads the list of Democratic delegates from California pledged to Smith.

McPike said he thought the nomination of Phelan would win California to the Democrats away from Hoover in the election. Like the New York governor, Mr. Phelan is a Roman Catholic in faith.

NYE BARES LETTER IN BLACKMER CASE

Seeks Indictment and Extradition in Bond Profits Scandal.

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—Chairman Nye of the senate oil committee today made public his letter to Governor Smith of New York in which he said that New York state should be intensely interested in considering the proposal that H. M. Blackmer, former president of the Midwest Refining company, who has been in Europe since the disclosure of the oil scandals, be indicted under the laws of that state for his part in the Continental Trading company deal.

After reciting that Blackmer took some $750,000 profits out of the Continental transactions, Senator Nye asserted that a review of certain New York state laws "indicates to me the possibility of indicting Mr. Blackmer under the laws of the state of New York" and added that such indictment would make it possible for an extradition process against him.

"I submit this matter to you for your consideration and anticipate that you will in all probability desire to refer the matter to the legal department of your state government," the letter continued. "It seems to me that the state of New York should be intensely interested in the consideration of this proposal.

"New York is the center of corporate activity in the United States and in view of the reasonable possibility that Mr. Blackmer has committed a crime against the laws of your state, it would seem that you should seriously consider the desirability of endeavoring to bring an indictment against him and return him to this country for trial.

"I submit these facts to you in good faith and in the hope that you will be found ready to cooperate in the endeavor being made to bring those guilty before the bar of justice."

SPUDDERS PLAY SEASON'S FIRST DOUBLE-HEADER SUNDAY

RAIN CALLS OFF HOSTILITIES IN SAN ANTONIO; BIG DOINGS HOUSTON MONDAY, TUESDAY

If Mr. Doak Roberts doesn't mind, he might eliminate Saturdays from the program when he draws up next year's schedule for the Texas league.

For the third Saturday in five since the start of the flag chase, the Spudders were idle, a deluge in San Antonio forcing postponement of the second game of the Wichita Falls-Bear series that opened Friday with a 3 to 1 Spudder victory.

The mere day of idleness won't hurt the hopefuls, but it does pain all concerned just a wee bit to see the Houston Buffs gain a half game because the Spudders were not able to defend themselves and their position at the top of the heap.

The Spudder idleness and the Houston victory, however, leaves our champs still high and dry at the top, another of those queer quirks in percentage figures leaving the team ahead, though actually a half game behind the junior Cardinals.

Twins Stack Up

Placed alongside of one tie game, the postponements give the Spudders the unhappy task of playing five double-headers. The first of these will be played no later than Sunday to make up for Saturday's lost time, starting at 2 o'clock in the Bears' orchard. It will be the first double-header of the year for the Spudders and the second for San Antonio.

Spudder pitching is in good shape and should easily muster up strength enough to play two games in one day and then have enough left to fire at their arch enemies, the Buffs, the next two days.

For the two games Sunday Skipper Carlos has at his command three of the "big five" ready and rearing to go.

Tom Estill hasn't pitched since the last game of the home stand. Milt Steengrafe pitched the opener at Waco and Payne the second game. Any one of the trio is ready to work against the Bears, while the enemy will have Leslie Cox, the University of Texas product; Dana Fillingim, the veteran spitball specialist, and Frank Watt, who is trying a comeback after a year out of the game, to choose from.

Hitting Still Weak

Despite hitting that still is not up to form, the marauding champs have won three of their first four starts on the present journey, with 11 games yet to be played at San Antonio, Houston, Beaumont and Shreveport. And just before the start of the trip, the team had won only one of their last four starts at home. Consequently, it seems that something has happened to the club since it departed from Athletic park.

It may be a mere coincidence that one Brick Eldred took his place in the outfield on the very first day after Spudders landed on foreign soil and that then and there the winning ways were once more in evidence. It may be merely a coincidence; then again those nine base hits in 15 times at bat in four games might have had something to do with it, psychologically as well as the actual damage they did to opposing clubs.

Jenkins Hitting

Possibly, the example that Eldred set is going to gradually bring the slumpers back to their feet, an exact position they have not held as a club since the year 1927. For instance, there is Dynamite Tom Jenkins, who has raised his batting average from the .270's to a couple of points better than .300 in the last four games. Pete Turgeon, even, has had two big days in the four and has shown signs of wiggling his way out of the grasp of Old Joe Slump.

The hitting still is not up to championship standard and the pitchers still are carrying a heavy load, but if anything can bring the boys to life in a batting way, it should be the example the newcomer in the outfield is setting. Eldred's hits have been often, lengthy and timely, and nothing more could be asked of one man's batting.

Big Games Ahead

The big doings of this week come right at the start when the Spudders make their first appearance of the season in Houston in a two-game series Monday and Tuesday. Either team can accomplish much by sweeping the two games. Either probably will be well pleased with an even break.

Ole Walter Wally Swenson, whose Swedish presence has been very much missed from the lineup in the four games referred to above, should be ready to step around the warm position of the diamond by the time the team gets to Houston Monday. Swenson's steady play at third, not to mention his aptitude for timely safe blows, would have made more than one of the three victories more easily earned, and the one loss might not have been exactly that if the Swede had been on the job instead of nursing an ankle injury sustained in the last home game.

Pitching All Set

Unless something like a disaster befalls the pitching staff at San Antonio, the chunking corps will be ready for the two important contests with the Buffs. Boss Williams could easily save two of his best bets for Houston, but that has not been his way, and the chunkers are quite likely to take their turns, regardless of the fact that the games with Houston are of double importance. That system worked last season to the extent of winning a pennant and there's no good reason for a change now.

On the other hand, Frank Snyder, the Buffalo foreman, may elect to save back two young men who did quite well in turning back the Spudders in two of three games played here. Bill Hallahan and Frank Barnes, both portsiders, whipped the Spudders to a frazzle in Wichita Falls, and it is possible that Snyder will shift his throwers about in order to bring both against the hopefuls. It is a certainty the Spudders will face one of the two in Houston.

U. S. Golfers On Way Following Tourney Victory

Jurando, Sensational South American, to Visit This Country.

SANDWICH, England, May 12. (AP)—American golfers Saturday left Sandwich in the hands of the four score competitors for the St. George's challenge cup and moved on to seek to conquer other golf worlds.

Walter Hagen, who won the British open championship, went to Paris to play a special match with Aubrey Booker, the St. Cloud pro, with plans to continue on a triumphant tour to parts of Europe where he has not played before. He will play Percy Alliss a match in Berlin, and then visit Austria and Italy. His schedule calls for participation in the Irish open championship at the Newcastle May 28 and exhibition and charity matches in Dublin and London before he starts home.

Gene Sarazen left for home while Larry Nabholtz and Bill Mehlhorn will go to Leeds to play in the big money tournament next week.

Silas M. Newton, John McHugh and Joshua Crane will go to Prestwick to prepare for the British amateur championship May 21.

As the shouting and tumult of the open died away, Douglas Grant, London resident but Californian by birth, won the St. George's challenge cup with a 36-hole score of 146, his closest rival over the course where Hagen won the open, being T. P. Perkins, former English amateur champion, who had one more stroke. Grant turned in 71-75 and but for weak putting on three greens would have had an even more phenomenal score. Grant won the cup in 1925 and Francis Ouimet was the winner in 1923.

TUNNEY PLANS START OF TRAINING MONDAY

SPECULATOR, N. Y., May 12. (AP)—Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, came back Saturday to the Adirondack hills to train until a few days before the gong in the Yankee stadium calls him to defend his title against Tom Heeney in a 15-round battle, probably July 26.

Although the sun was bright in Speculator, chill winds swept down from the hills as Tunney drove his car into town unheralded. Once in his quarters, he donned heavy clothing. In half an hour he was about the premises clad in the familiar blue shirt, gray trousers and battered red sweater of training days.

ANDY PAYNE HOLDS LEAD OF TWENTY-TWO HOURS

ELYRIA, Ohio, May 12. (AP)—C. C. Pyle's bunion derbyists paused here Saturday night after a hectic week's travel from Chicago that has carried them nearer their New York goal.

Andrew Payne, Oklahoma's speeding youth, led the van, having covered the 2752.6 miles from Los Angeles in 455:36:55. Twenty-two hours, 27 minutes and 40 seconds behind him was John Salo, Passaic, N. J., holder of second place.

Having covered 172.6 miles in three days, members of the Pyle caravan were slated to ease off Sunday with the 45-mile sprint through Cleveland and heavy weekend traffic to Arrowhead, the seventy-first control.

Giusto Umek of Trieste, Italy, finished first Saturday on the 63.3-mile jaunt from Fremont in 9:17:14. Salo was second in 9:32:10, and Harry Abramowitz, New York, third in 10:31:05. Mike Joyce, Cleveland Irishman, tied Payne, Phillip Granville, Canada, and Louis Perrella, Albany, for fourth in 10:48:30.

Buffs Plaster Sports, 10-0, For Easy Win

Fort Worth Again Beats Cubs; Steers Run Wild.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 12. (AP)—With Texas Carelton hurling a six-hit game and his mates clubbing everything offered, the Buffs served up a portion of the well known and justly celebrated white-wash for the Shreveport Sports to feast on at Buff stadium Saturday afternoon in the second game of the series. The final score was 10 to 0. Carleton was back with some of the most sensational fielding seen here this season. Watty Watkins, the center gardner, turned in one of the greatest catches of the year to aid in retiring Shreveport in the fourth inning. Holman hit a long fly that was headed for the boards. Watkins turned on the ball and running at top speed leaped into the air and took the ball from over his left shoulder. To Carey Selph goes the hitting honors of the day. Carey had four hits in five times and three of them were doubles. The score:

In the sixth with three on Joe Bonowits hit a homer. The Cubs scored five off Waechtel in the second, three coming when Wolgamot hit a homer with two on, but thereafter the spitballer was invincible. STEERS 24, EXPORTERS 10

BEAUMONT, Texas, May 12. (AP)—The Steers staged a stampede in Magnolia park Saturday, going to bat 50 times and collecting 26 hits and 24 runs for an easy victory. Beaumont made 10 runs, enough to win an ordinary ball game, but this affair had nothing ordinary about it except the pitching exhibited by five local flingers. Hap Morse, Jim Riley and Loris Baker led the Steer attack, the latter getting two homers and Morse one. Score:

MISSTEP IMPRESSES IN DERBY DISTANCE

LOUISVILLE, May 12. (AP)—Turfmen saw another Derby entrant's stock rise Saturday when Misstep, the Le Mar stock farm's hope for the classic, went the Derby distance in time that was clocked as two minutes, seven and three-fifth seconds. He was paced by another Le Mar farm horse.

The fine chestnut colt seemed to make the time easily under the guidance of Jockey Joe Kiseris.

Walton League Dinner Slated Tuesday Night

Most Interesting Hunting and Fishing Movies Ever Brought Here Promised Walton Leaguers and Their Friends

Another of those get-together dinner affairs that Waltonians are finding so attractive is to be held Tuesday night at 7 o'clock at the Woman's Forum, according to announcement Saturday of Ben G. Oneal, president of Wichita Falls Chapter No. 100, Izaak Walton league of America. The dinner is to follow the general lines of several the Walton leaguers have participated in during the past 18 months, and is to be held at the Woman's Forum in Country Club estates. All members of Wichita Falls and other chapters and their friends are invited to attend.

Though the bass have not been striking with much ambition at Lake Kemp and Diversion lake the last few days, President Oneal gives assurance of a plentiful supply of fish for the occasion, as well as barbecued lamb and other delicacies.

The entertainment feature is to be provided by a number of hunting and fishing movies. Reels showing elk hunting and the animals in their natural haunts, duck and goose hunting, upland bird hunting with dogs and salmon fishing on the Restigouche river in Canada are on the program. The movies are described by Oneal as by far the most interesting the Walton leaguers have been able to bring to Wichita Falls, and he promises entertainment for every outdoorsman.

Tickets are on sale at Landon-Hill company, Noble-Little Hardware store, and Prine's market, or may be obtained from Secretary Harris H. Roberts. Those attending are asked to purchase their tickets not later than noon Tuesday.

WORTHINGTON OF BUFFS TOPS TEXAS LEAGUE HITTERS WITH GRIMES LOOP'S BEST SCORER

Bubber Jonnard's injury took him out of the Houston line-up with a .488 batting average to his credit, plenty good enough to lead the hitting even with a few high record rivals at his heels. His team-mate, Worthington, now leads the playing through regulars with .396, closely pushed by Shires, Waco, .391. Run scoring continues to find Grimes, San Antonio, and Blackerby, Waco, vieing for the lead, the former with 25 this week to 24. Blackerby is the big hit maker with 46 to 45 for Selph, Houston. Shires' five home runs now closely push the lead of Grimes who has six. Eddie Moore, Fort Worth, tops the base stealers with 10, Schuble of Houston having six.

Houston and Waco are tied in club batting, each with a .300 average. Waco leads in hits and homers, San Antonio in runs, Fort Worth in stolen bases.

Tink Riviere won his sixth straight victory Thursday without a defeat. Barnes, Houston, has won four without a loss. Hallahan, Houston, leads in strikeouts with 37.

JACK JOHNSON ESPOUSES CAUSE OF PROHIBITION

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 12. (UP)—Jack Johnson, negro, former heavyweight champion boxer, has espoused the cause of prohibition to the extent of addressing a group of bishops at the Methodist Episcopal general conference here.

Johnson, who is here preparing for a scheduled bout with "Big Bill" Hartwell, local negro boxer, passed convention hall Friday, where a temperance program was under way.

Dr. Clarence Tru Wilson, secretary of the board of temperance, prohibition and morals of the Methodist church, was informed that Johnson was outside. The pugilist was invited in and was asked to make a speech on the evils of strong drink.

Johnson talked to the bishops for 15 minutes. He supplemented his comments by saying he "wouldn't even use present bootleg liquor to put out a fire."

COULON NOW A PROMOTER.

Rehm Scores Third Win in Row; Cubs Whip Giants.

ST. LOUIS, May 12. (AP)—Winning the sixth straight game for the Cardinals, and the seventh out of eight starts this week, Flint Rhem scored his third straight triumph of the year in a 5 to 3 contest with the Boston Braves here Saturday. Rhem has yet to lose a game this season.

Facing former teammates, Rogers Hornsby crashed out a home run in the first inning.

Wilson and Harper, newly acquired performers, worked creditably. Wilson hit a pair of singles and cut off two runners who attempted to steal second. Harper went in for Blades in the right field in the second inning, connecting with a pair of singles and driving in one run. The score:

College Track Season Brings Many Winnings

Indian Cinder Path Team Attracts National Notoriety.

By R. O. JONAS

William "Bill" McMillan, star dash man of Wichita Falls Junior college cinder path squad of 1928, will head the 1929 track team, according to the vote of his mates early last week, after their return from the state meet at Fort Worth. With the announcement of letter men by Coach J. N. Hall, the official season was closed with the exception of obtaining sweaters for letter men.

Eight men were awarded letters, with the first five named also to be given sweaters as additional awards: Captain Melvin McKinney, middle distances and relay; Jot Hodges, all-around team ace and specializing in the dashes and relay; Bill McMillan, relay and dashes; Jesse Allen, relay and mile; John Weiler, discus; Dempse Moore, shot put, relay, hurdles and dashes; Filmore Meredith, 440 and relay; Olan Dickey, high jump and middle distances. The last two were given letters as they both scored in the state meet, even though just completing their high school competition the previous week.

Not only for track, but probably for all sports, the 1928 season was the greatest in the history of all Indian athletics. No other team of the local school ever gained as much state-wide notice as the track team, especially for its relay performances and for the work of Hodges in the dashes. From early winter on the small group of men worked steadily and faithfully under the tutelage of Coach Hall to develop their best possibilities.

Size Handicap

The small size of the squad proved one of the greatest handicaps from the first as regards the taking of points at meets but it proved an advantage for training. Aside from the few leaders who had had some experience there were a number of youngsters who came out, including Lefty Watson, who scored nicely in the meet with the Vernon Lions but soon dropped out, and Gabbert Stephens, who worked faithfully all season, but found himself just a little under the minimum requirements of speed to make meets. One of the greatest drawbacks to the team proved the injury suffered by Moore, who was counted on heavily for the big meets. His knee injury suffered in football and then his frequent absences for boxing kept him down in practice somewhat and kept him from scoring in the state meet.

In the first formal competition of the season the Indians won over the Vernon Lions, 61-48, in a practice meet at Junior college, with not enough men to compete in all events, forcing them to forfeit or let go uncontested many points. Moore missed this meet as he was in St. Louis boxing for his western boxing championship. The Indians showed great promise, especially in the races and the relay.

Hodges won the next laurels for the team as he sped away to victory in the 100-yard dash in competition with the best men the universities of the southwest had to offer. The relay team won over all junior college competition and threatened seriously the Southwest conference entries. Allen in the mile and McMillan in the 100 also outclassed all junior college competition.

The greatest triumph for the team thus far came in the University of Texas relays when the Indians won first place over a great field in the mile relay. Hodges also entered the university division in the 100, with many of the greatest runners in the country opposing him and took a fifth place. The next day at Rice, with Hodges, team ace, ill, the Indians took two third

WORLD RECORD BROKEN BY COAST SPRINTER

STANFORD STADIUM, Calif., May 12. (AP)—One world's record was broken and another tied by northern California athletes competing Saturday in the sectional Olympic games tryouts.

Emerson "Bud" Spencer of Stanford university, established a new mark in the 400 meters run when he ran the distance in 47 seconds flat. It bettered by two-fifths of a second the record set by Ted Meredith in 1916.

Hugo "Swede" Leistner, San Francisco Olympic club, tied the world's record in the 110-meter hurdles. His time was 14 4-5 seconds.

JOCK IS WINNER OF RICH CLARK HANDICAP

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 12. (AP)—Jock, E. B. McLean's last year's derby candidate, won the Clark handicap, $10,000 added, at Churchhill Downs, Saturday, with R. E. Lechleiter's Derby hope for this year, Cartago, second. Flat Iron, owned by Stuyvesant Peabody of Chicago, was third.

Jock's time for the mile and sixteenth was 1:45.

Warfare Is Renewed Sunday Along Two Amateur Fronts

Matsuda Bobs Up With New Title To Defend Here

Meets Gipsy Smith Monday Night in Feature At Gym

MATTY MATSUDA

The veteran Japanese grappler is defending his junior welterweight wrestling championship here Monday night when he meets Gipsy Smith, according to Promoter Alec B. Ross. The last time Matty was here he was self-professed welterweight champion. What has happened to that so-called title and just how he acquired the new one is not quite clear, nor is it known just what constitutes a wrestling title. While wrestlers and the promoters are claiming titles and settling championships right and left, the fans are interested only in what transpires in the ring, and it is hardly likely that many in Wichita Falls are interested in Promoter Ross' announcement that the junior welterweight championship will be at stake Monday night in the feature event at The Gym, 605 Scott avenue.

The ringsiders, however, are quite likely to be interested in this particular match, for it promises more real wrestling than has been offered in any recent match. Police Gazette rules will be in force and both grapplers are expected to stick to the straight and narrow path as defined by this code. Fans here have seen little of that kind of wrestling and the bout Monday night should be particularly attractive for that reason.

Five four-round boxing matches are to precede the mat skirmishes. They are as follows:

Teaty Raley vs. Johnny Owens, Len Lewis vs. Martin Craig, Henry Adams vs. K. O. Shorty, Art Skeen vs. Kenneth Adams and Tiger Moore vs. Black Wolf.

Electrics Clout Ball In Twilight Contests

Skipper Hoehn Leads Individual Swatters; Southpaw Robertson First Tosser to Score Two Victories

One good reason why Texas Electric Service company is leading the pennant race in the Twilight league is offered in the individual batting averages for games through Thursday. Most of the Electric company players are bunched near the top of the list, with Manager Bill Hoehn setting the example for his mates by leading the procession for players at bat 10 or more times. Though Hoehn has played every game, he has been at bat but 10 times, gathering in six hits for a mark of .600. Bill Andree, a teammate, is next, with an average of .450 in 20 times up.

Andree leads in hits, nine, while four players are tied for scoring honors with five. No player has hit more than one home run.

Marvin "Lefty" Robertson of the Electrics is the only pitcher to score more than one victory. Trout and Luphor of the Electrics are two other unbeaten tossers.

Batting averages of all players who have hit safely at least once follow:

DAVIS CUP PLAYERS ASSEMBLE FOR TRIALS

ST. LOUIS, May 10. (AP)—Wilbur Coen Jr., of Kansas City, arrived Saturday and with four other members of the Davis cup tennis squad practiced at the Triple A courts, preparatory for the trial matches, which open Wednesday.

Captain William T. Tilden II of Philadelphia, Arnold Jones of Providence; George Lott of Chicago, and Wray Brown of St. Louis worked out with the Kansas City youth, now an alternate on the team.

John Hennessey of Indianapolis and Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, are expected to arrive Monday morning when formal practice will begin.

LONGHORNS NOSE OUT RICE OWLS IN NINTH

HOUSTON, Texas, May 12. (AP)—Texas university made a clean sweep of the two game series with Rice Saturday afternoon, taking the farewell tilt from the Owls by a close but all sufficient 3 to 2 score. The Dischmen hit hard and timely throughout, coming through at the critical stage with opportune bingles when hits meant runs.

The Longhorns won the game in the ninth, starting a two-run rally after two men were out when Country Barnes erred on an easy grounder. Rice came back to score one run. With two out, Allnoon doubled and scored on Barnes' double. The score:

Kiki Makes Good From Jump as Member of Chicago Club

CHICAGO, May 12. (AP)—Hazen ("Kiki") Cuyler, bench warmer and bad boy of the Pirates, is going great guns with the Chicgo Cubs.

Owner William Wrigley and Manager Joe McCarthy look to this slender, fleet-footed brunette of 29 for the punch to put them across ahead of the field in the National league pennant chase.

"That Kiki Cuyler is some boy, some boy," said Wrigley. "Hit? You bet he can. Hard to get along with? I never say a more amiable player. He is fighting for the Cubs all the time. He is helping the rookies and he is going to give us the pennant this year, or I miss my guess by a mile."

Kiki has been in professional baseball only eight years, but in that time he has experienced the sorrows and joys that many of the games' oldest veterans never realize. He has been sent back to the "farm" three times after a major league start; he has hit his way to land among the small coterie of the games' best sluggers; he has been benched for insubordination and he has been traded down the river.

Last year Cuyler was benched by the Pirates when he had a fuss with Donie Bush and Barney Dreyfuss.

While many critics, including John McGraw of the Giants, believed Kiki was through, that his batting weakness had been discovered and that bring hit by a pitched ball had made him bat shy, he has made good with the Cubs in startling fashion.

Thursday—Producers vs. Katy.
Friday—Dimock Bros. vs. DeMolays.

The battle along two amateur baseball fronts will be continued Sunday as the Twilight league goes into its third week with a clash at Katy park and the City league enters its second week with a contest at the Jalonic street orchard.

In the Twilight league the cellar position is at stake, with Continental Oil company making another bid for its first victory of the season, an accomplishment that thus far has been just out of reach of the Conocos. Their foes will be James Brothers creamery, just a step out of the basement.

In the City league it is a test of league leader vs. tail-ender. The Producers creamery nine tangles with the DeMolays, who have run a poor fourth in the first week's games.

Both the Twilight and the City league will start at 3 o'clock.

The feature of the week in the city's amateur circles was the comeback of the Electrics of the Twilight league, who bowled over two of their three enemies in a hard week's schedule. After bowing to Panhandle Refining company last Sunday, the Electrics came back and whipped the Longhorns on Wednesday, 5 to 3, as the result of late rallies, and closed the week with a 9 to 3 win over Continental.

As a result of the busy week, the leaders are called on for only one game this week, that with James Brothers Tuesday. The latter team is the busy one, with three contests Sunday, Tuesday and Friday.

In the City league the Producers creamery crowd took over the lead by winning two games from Katy railroaders and Dimock brothers. However, both contests were close and hard fought and a three-cornered scrap looms in this circuit. Both the Katy and Dimock brothers exhibited power in their first starts of the year. DeMolays, yielding 36 runs in two games, loom as a weak sister, unless the team can be speedily reinforced.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, May 12.—Victorian's price for the Kentucky derby, to be run at the classic downs one week from Saturday, has receded like a freshman's chin as a result of some overnight reflection upon his winning performance in the Preakness Friday afternoon. The Whitney colt probably was no better than 8 to 1 in the derby book Saturday, whereas he was 15 to 1 on the eve of the Preakness and as high as 20 to 1 last week.

He would be held even lower, if it wasn't for the fact that Reigh Count is as low as a snake in a wagon track already and you can't stool the boys in by offering them short money on everything in sight. As it is, the Preakness probably will make the odds lengthen materially on quite a few public choices for the derby and, if you think I don't mean Nassak, Distraction, Brooms, Petes Wrack, Bobashela and kindred disappointments of the Preakness, then you don't give me credit for a one and three-quarter inch clearance above the eyebrows.

More a Favorite.

Reigh Count can't be hammered down any lower than he is, but it seems safe to say that the result of the Preakness will serve to make the Hertz horse all the more a favorite when they call the Derby field to the post.

Victorian proved himself a good colt with the heart to run through the stretch but it would have required a victory by a horse like Nassak, highly esteemed these many weeks, to affect Reigh Count's status to any great extent. A Nassak victory would have cemented eastern sentiment in his favor. The triumph of Victorian nearly means that the issue among Reigh Count's so called contenders has been somewhat confused.

What of Toro, for example? This horse might have won the Preakness with a better ride from Ambrose. They will drop his last price, which was 30 to 1, like a discredited relation. Sun Beau was held at 60 to 1 in the last list I got. He should be shorter in view of the fact that he ran on the outside throughout the Preakness and yet had something in the stretch. These horses may not go to the Derby, of course, but the average mugg doesn't know that or he wouldn't be betting against the book.

Nassak Carried.

Strolling Player didn't place, either, but he ran rather forwardly and may be ready to show that he is mastering American racing if and when he gets a chance at the longer distance. He had been cut to 12 to 1 in the books but probably will soar as high as 20 on Friday's returns. Solace, in the money Friday, unfortunately isn't entered in the Derby. He was interferred with at the break but ran stoutly and showed a particularly good stretch run.

Nassak, it is said, was carried wide most of the way but the Sinclair horse was in a contending position when he folded up. I remember that Zev ran sixteenth in the Preakness and came back the next week to win the Derby, but the indications are that Nassak is no Zev. In fact, he left some doubt of his ability to go a route. As for distraction, he showed no inclination to go too far. This pair was 10 to 1 for the Derby Friday morning. That price probably will more than double itself.

OKLAHOMA AGGIES BEAT SOONERS IN DUAL MEET

STILLWATER, Okla., May 12. (AP)—Showing overwhelming strength in the middle distance races and sharing honors in the dashes, hurdles and field events, Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college romped away with victory from Washington university in their dual Missouri Valley conference track meet here Saturday, 80 to 51.

Captain Best, Aggie, won individual honors with 11 points. He garnered firsts in the low hurdles and 220-yard dash and third place in the 100-yard dash.

places in the mile and the medley relays. The final triumph of the relays came when Hodges at the Oklahoma university relays won another first place in the senior college division in the 100, beating the man who had the year before set the relay record in the event.

High at State Meet

In the final event of the year, held at Fort Worth last Monday, the Indians met what was pronounced by far the greatest junior college track meet ever held in Texas for final state honors. John Tarleton, with its team which has been returned victors over many senior colleges, including Simmons, Abilene Christian and McMurry, in total points, was the only team to outscore the Indians and that only due to superior numbers of men. The Indians were seriously handicapped by Moore's injury, which kept him from scoring a point, and by the smallness of the squad. Hodges, though having to quit the competition before the relay was reached, took first place in the three events he entered to get high point honors, while the team as a whole garnered 34 points. Hodges had to run two heats in each race, or six in all, in quick succession to take first places in the 100, the 220 and the high hurdles, straining himself so that he had to quit further competition. Had he been able to continue he would have easily been good for a first in the discus, as in practice he had regularly thrown the platter ten or more feet farther than the winner, and his presence in the relay would likely have meant first place. McKinney also set a record in the 880 and a number of other creditable performances were turned in.

The final question of the team now is where to get sweaters. Although perhaps less than $50 would buy the customary track sweaters for the whole team, there is nothing in the treasury to buy them with. All season the second semester athletics suffered from the fact that the football deficit in fall wiped out almost all student fees and resources for athletics. Contributions from fans sent the team to the relays. The great track season was also perhaps one of the most economical seasons ever conducted here. Any fans or business men who have any suggestions to make on the sweater fund or feel inclined to contribute are respectfully requested to communicate with Coach J. N. Hall at Junior college, and their efforts will be appreciated by the team which has won Wichita Falls even nation wide notice.

Matt Winn Gets Credit Success Kentucky Derby

MATT J. WINN

CHICAGO, May 12. (AP)—Fifty-three years ago, a 14-year-old boy, bare-footed, went with his father in a grocery wagon to witness the first running of the Kentucky derby.

The boy is 66 years old now, gray-haired, with a complexion like a school girl and a love of life—the man behind the derby. He is Col. Matt J. Winn—Matt to his friends—general manager of the Churchill Downs course at Louisville, the setting of the derby.

For 28 years, Col. Winn has conducted this classic of the American turf: The race is a monument to him. By exhibiting showmanship as astute as Tex Rickard ever displayed, Col. Winn has developed the race into one of the most colorful sport events in America, if not in all the world.

He has developed the derby from that first running back in 1875, when Aristides won the event, rewarding his owner with a purse of $2850, to the present day, when the winner collects $50,000 or more. He has boosted the attendance from a mere few hundred when a small shed-like grandstand was big enough to house the crowd of 1875, to a throng of 80,000 or more that will witness the race between the premier three-year-olds of America on May 19 in the fifty-third renewal of the event.

Since he took charge of the derby in 1890, the event has grown in racing interest by leaps and bounds. For many years it was just a local affair in Kentucky, attracting entries from only the Blue Grass state breeders.

For 20 years the derby was over a punishing distance of a mile and a half. After Col. Winn took charge of it the distance was reduced to a mile and a quarter because he believed it was too severe a test for three-year-olds so early in the year. The race was shortened in 1896 and has been over that route since.

Since boyhood, when he first saw the derby from a seat in his father's grocery wagon, Col Winn has been tremendously interested in racing. He was born in Louisville. Love of the sport was in his veins. He grew to manhood in Louisville, and, following the footsteps of his father, became a grocer, then a wholesale grocery salesman, finally entering the merchant tailoring business.

As a wholesale grocery salesman, he traveled through Kentucky, always showing a keen interest in the thoroughbreds in the Blue Grass state. When a crisis threatened the sport in Kentucky, Col. Winn was selected to reform and reconstruct racing. The tracks had been losing money, a $1500 purse seemed the last word in a stake for the derby, and interest lagged.

From the day Col. Winn took charge of the sport, interest began going upward until today the Kentucky derby stands out as the most famous in sentiment and color on the American turf.

Building Activity Continues Rapid Pace in Plainview; Laundry, Hotel And Office Building Among Projects

PLAINVIEW, May 12.—With the beginning of construction on the eight-story hotel at Plainview by William C. Witt of Dallas, and associates, Plainview's building for the five months of 1928 will exceed the million and a quarter mark, giving Plainview the distinction of being the fastest growing city in West Texas this year.

This year has been one of the most active insofar as building activities are concerned that Plainview has ever had. In January the Skaggs four-story office building was started and is now rapidly nearing completion at a cost of $250,000. The Skaggs building will house the Third National bank of Plainview on the first floor and will have all modern office conveniences on the other three floors.

January saw the beginning of construction of the Harvest Queen mills additional unit to the elevator and storage part of the industry which was built since the first of the year, giving the Harvest Queen elevators a total storage capacity of a million bushels of grain, and makes of Plainview the primary concentration point for small grain on the South Plains of Texas. The new unit which doubled the capacity of the storage bins, was built at an approximate cost of $200,000.

At the present time the following business concerns are under construction in addition to a large number of residences; a $30,000 addition to the Plainview sanitarium owned by Nichols and Guest of Plainview; a $10,000 laundry by T. H. Luster; a $10,000 set of buildings for the Fulton Lumber company, which is moving from the present location on Broadway to make room for a large modern hotel, which will probably be started close on the heels of the Witt hotel west of the First National bank building; a $30,000 business building of O. M. Unger's; $3000 building for Reed Metal works; $15,000 business house of Knoohuizen, Boyd and Davenport, and a $30,000 building for the Amarillo Furniture company.

William C. Witt has announced that construction will proceed at a very early date on the eight-story hotel, which he and associates are to build in Plainview. The contract has been let to Bellowes Maclay Construction company, according to reports in Plainview, and Koen Brothers, who have occupied the site of the hotel, have moved and the brick garage which they occupied is to be razed at once to make way for the hotel building.

Toll Line Will Link Cities in West Texas Area

FLOYDADA, May 12.—A toll line that will connect Floydada, Silverton and South Plains is now under construction between Floydada and Silverton by the States Telephone company.

Practically all the poles for the new line are either in the ground or are ready to be put up and the construction work is complete into South Plains, the new town on the Fort Worth and Denver South Plains railway 17 miles northeast of Floydada.

The new connection will be of immense value to all the towns concerned as an exchange will be erected at South Plains following the completion of the toll line into Floydada. Difficult telephone connections out of Floydada to points east, north and northeast have largely hampered business relations with that section in the past, and the new line, which will afford quick direct connections with Silverton, Quitaque and South Plains will be of incalculable mutual benefit.

The States Telephone company already owns and operates toll lines and exchanges at Clarendon, Paducah, Roaring Springs, Rawls, Crosbyton, Lorenzo and Idalou, as well as several other West Texas cities.

SAN ANGELO WILL HAVE NEW $100,000 CREAMERY

SAN ANGELO, May 12.—Plans to build a $100,000 plant here for the Snowhite Creameries company have been made by H. C. Vandervoort, general manager, who has just moved headquarters of the company from Mineral Wells to San Angelo.

Site for the new plant has been purchased and plants for the building will be made soon, though it will probably be another year before the plant is completed, Mr. Vandervoort has stated. The company operates large plants at Sweetwater, Midland, Big Spring, Stamford and Mineral Wells, and a sub plant will be built soon at McCamey, which point is now being given daily service out of San Angelo, by the operation of motor truck delivery.

NEW THEATER WILL BE ERECTED HOLLIS, OKLA.

HOLLIS, Okla., May 12. — The new theater for Hollis has become an assured fact, as the contract for the building was let to the Oklahoma Construction company of Oklahoma City.

The actual construction will start immediately as the contract calls for completion in 120 days. The plans call for a modern constructed building with a seating capacity of 800 and with a splendid stage and equipment.

The building will also contain office rooms on the second floor.

This is being built by Dr. W. G. Husband, Watt Long and J. M. Coley on the lot just east of the Dixon Baird Motor company.

CONSTRUCTION IN U. S. SHOWS GAIN IN PAST THIRTY DAYS

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Construction operations have swung into the stretch of increased activity which they will follow throughout the summer, according to statistics just compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America. The volume of construction registered for April showed a strong increase over the March total. This increase is virtually identical with the rise which took place during the corresponding period one year ago when mid-summer operations that later were to shatter records were started.

The volume of work handled by the construction industry during the first four months of this year is equal to the figure registered during the corresponding period of 1927.

These statistics, it is stated, are based upon actual shipments of basic construction materials and include all types of construction work.

A close similarity between the trend of operations since January of this year and the comparative figures for the corresponding period one year ago. Index numbers for the first four months of this year are: January, 125; February, 124; March, 137, and April, 164. The corresponding figures for 1927 are: January, 129; February, 121; March, 135, and April, 166.

CONSCIENCE FORCES POISON CONFESSION

Californian Tells Cops That He Murdered Two Persons.

LOS ANGELES, May 12. (AP)—James William Huff, 27, today confessed to the county jailer here that he had poisoned Ruth Little, 17, his first wife's sister, about nine years ago in Summitville, Ind., and in 1925 had poisoned James Leo Carroll, 18, of Los Angeles, his second wife's brother.

Huff, who said he went under the alias of James Hooven while in Indiana, declared in a dictated confession that he slew the girl for vengeance on his first wife and he and his second wife plotted the death of her brother to obtain $2,500 life insurance. He said he attended the funerals of both of his alleged victims.

Conscience Hurts Him

Becoming conscience-stricken while serving a six months sentence for petty theft, Huff called Jailer Frank DeWar to his cell. DeWar had become suspicious of Huff, he said, because of the latter's inability to sleep.

Huff's declaration that he and his second wife, Emma Huff, had plotted Carroll's death sent officers to Pacoima, a San Fernando valley town north of here, to arrest the woman for further investigation.

Huff, who according to his story, was born in Carlisle, Wyo., in 1900, and was reared at South Bend, Ind., married Blanche Little soon after service overseas. She "beat" him out of $700, all his savings, he said, and left him for another man. Avowing vengeance, Huff said he decided to kill Ruth Little, her sister. While she was ill he fed her poisoned quail broth. "They never suspected me," he said. "I attended her funeral and hung around a week before I left town."

Huff married Emma Carroll here in 1923, the confession read. "She told me about the insurance she had on her brother's life, a $2,500 policy. She wanted to know how we could collect it and we planned it out."

Oats Poison Victim

Poisoned oats, used for killing squirrels, Huff's story said, was made into broth and fed to Carroll. Death followed soon.

The coroner's report at the end of an inquest over Carroll's body, left in doubt the question whether death was "accidental of suicidal."

Huff's confession was telegraphed to officers in Indiana for checking and in return police were asked to question him concerning the death in 1920 of his five-months-old baby. Huff told officers he was in the Indiana reformatory for automobile theft at the time of the baby's death and had been informed by his former wife and her mother that it died "from pneumonia or something like that."

Chicago, Hero-Mad, Cheers Aviators Whose Daring Flight Over Atlantic Wrote Inspiring Epic of Aviation

CHICAGO, May 12. (AP)—Chicago today gave mighty acclaim to the Three Musketeers of the air—Fitzmaurice, Koehl and Von Huenfield of Bremen transatlantic fame

Along flag-draped Michigan avenue where the intertwined colors of three nations furled and eddied in the sunshine of a bright May day the city gave one of the greatest and most spontaneous demonstrations ever accorded any official guests.

Preceded by waves of "Hochs," "Hurrahs" and "Erin go Braghs," the crew of the Bremen headed in a parade in an automobile through cheering thousands that packed the avenue to the curb.

The second car contained the wives of Capt. Koehl and Major Fitzmaurice and in the third car rode Gov. Small.

Floats depicting the advance of aviation were in succeeding places in the procession, many of them being huge airplanes made of flowers.

People craned from windows and the Logan monument in Grant park was black with people, one small boy having a place of vantage on General Logan's head.

So dense were the cheering crowds that at times the police were forced to clear the way for the parade—the first function of the city's formal reception to the German-Irish airmen.

Mingled with the shouts of thousands was the drone of airplanes overhead. The parade wound up at Soldier field for the public ceremonies witnessed by a throng of 100,000 that packed the big amphitheater on the lake front to the exit signs.

Von Huenefeld and Koehl were dressed in blue suits and the German baron had his monocle in place while Major Fitzmaurice wore his uniform of the free state. They bowed and smiled and waved amid the tramp of marching feet of Illinois national guard troops, American legionnaires, and Boy Scouts, the clatter of hoofs of mounted police, the rumble of army caissons and the purr of motor cars.

Chicago came to do hero-worship and would not be denied.

Irish-Americans, German-Americans and just plain every-day Americans without any hyphens—all united in the stadium for the German and Irish songs, the music, the athletics and the speeches that turned the day into a semi-official holiday to pay homage.

Von Huenefeld showed signs of breaking under the strain of the receptions. Shortly after noon he complained of feeling ill and was treated by a doctor. Later he said he was fully recovered.

In one end of the stadium were societies with colored caps forming the Irish colors, at the other end were German societies with similar caps forming the German colors and the middle of the American colors were carried out with red, white and blue caps.

One Year Ago Lindbergh Reached St. Louis From San Diego on His Way to Gotham for Paris Flight

NEW YORK, May 12. (UP)—One year ago today Charles A. Lindbergh, a comparatively unknown aviator, was in St. Louis en route from San Deigo to New York to start his transatlantic flight.

Aided by the impetus of Lindbergh's subsequent daring flight to Paris and his subsequent aviation exploits airplane stocks in all parts today had reached new all-time highs.

Every move in Lindbergh's aviation program is watched closely by the airplane industry.

Thursday Lindbergh conferred with Henry and Edsel Ford in Detroit on some new aviation project. He made a quick flight to New York immediately afterward.

His arrival in New York was coincident with rumors in Wall street that the Curtiss and Wright Airplane companies were to merge and that Lindbergh was to have a prominent position in the merged corporation.

"I am not connected with any commercial company," Lindbergh said when questioned about the rumor.

Wright stock rose to 196. It had been as low as 69 this year. Curtiss rose as high as 145 7-8. Once during the year it sold at 53 1-8.

Today Lindbergh rested at the home of the millionaire Harry Guggenheim in surroundings contrasting sharply with those of a year ago when he was just a mail pilot tuning up the "Spirit of St. Louis" that was to carry him to fame.

WHAT IS A USED CAR BARGAIN?

What is a used car bargain? Is it a used car of uncertain age and mechanical condition, sold at a so-called "marked-down" price?

Or is it a good car, sold by a reliable dealer, for a price that he knows is fair?

We know automobiles. That's our business! And we know what they're worth when we take them in trade on new Buicks.

We always give our used car customers a square deal—both in the price and in the condition of the car.

Our reputation is too valuable to risk by anything short of absolute fairness and honesty.

DAILY MARKET REPORT

PRICES ARE LOWER IN COTTON MARKET UNDER LIQUIDATION

NEW YORK, May 12. (AP)—The cotton market was lower today under week-end liquidation and some trade or commission house selling evidently inspired by reports of rains in Texas. July sold off to 21.05 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 25 to 34 points.

The opening was steady at declines of 5 to 14 points, with active months soon showing net losses of 26 to 30 points on the Texas rain reports and the failure of Liverpool fully to meet yesterday's local advance. This decline brought in considerable coverings, some trade calling and a renewal of commission house demand. Prices steadied in consequence, showing rallies of 10 or 15 points during the middle of the morning, but reports of rains in the southwest continued to come in, and the market weakened in late trading under renewed selling. May sold off to 21.32 and October to 21.02 late in the morning, and the close was within a point or so of the lowest.

Trading was fairly active at the start, but became comparatively quiet during the middle of the morning. There was another spurt toward the close probably on liquidation by early buyers.

The opinion was generally expressed that the rains in the southwest would be beneficial, although there appeared to be some doubt as to how much relief they might have afforded in the drought sections. The amount of cotton on shipboard at the end of the week awaiting clearance was estimated at 94,556 bales against 118,675 last year and 81,162 two years ago.

Private cables said there had been continental buying and trade calling in the Liverpool market which had been supplied by realizing, and that there was only a limited business in cotton cloths. The selling here was supposed to include orders from the southwest, but the bulk of it was attributed to realizing or liquidation of long accounts. It was reported that moderate warm rains were wanted in some central belt sections to bring up replanted cotton, but a possibility that the western belt rains might work eastward by Monday morning may have caused some covering.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, May 12. (AP)—Cotton prices were decidedly reactionary today under heavy selling promoted by poor Liverpool cables and more favorable weather. July contracts opened 18 points down at 20.96, and continued to ease during most of the brief session reaching the low point of 20.78 in the final trading. This price was 30 points or approximately $1.50 a bale under the previous close, and the option closed at 20.83, or 25 points net lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 25 to 33 points.

Liverpool cables were slightly lower than due at the start here, that market probably being influenced by the reports of relief for the western drought section. Early trades showed losses of 13 to 18 points. There was considerable selling at the start on reports from the West Texas drouth section that precipitation there measured from half an inch to 6 inches.

Although there were occasional rallies on week-end covering the market was on the downgrade during most of the session under liquidation and profit-taking until July traded off to 20.78, October 20.58 and December 20.52, 30 to 35 points net lower. Fears of rain for the central belt where moisture is not needed brought out some trade buying, but this was supplied on a recovery of 8 points and the market turned easy again, traders contending that showers now are needed in that section to facilitate the growth of recently replanted seed.

The market remained easy to the end closing only a few points above the lowest with October at 20.60 and December at 20.55, 30 to 32 points down from yesterday's closing quotations.

Chicago Cotton.

CHICAGO, May 12. (AP)—The Chicago cotton market was active, but lower on rains in West Texas. The close was barely steady, 31 to 45 points net lower. Cables were about as due to 4 points lower. There was an opening decline of 9 to 25 points at Chicago.

Heavy rains were reported in the Abilene and Amarillo district, but the central and eastern sections of the belt were clear. Temperatures were generally mild and favorable. The American dry goods was said to be active and steady. Exports of cloth from England during April were below figures for the corresponding month last year. The census report on cotton consumption during April is due next Monday.

WHEAT PRICE GOES HEAVILY OFF SCALE ON REPORT ERROR

CHICAGO, May 12. (AP)—Staggered by an unexpected jolt from official sources, the wheat market reeled heavily downward today in the late trading. Revision of the government May crop report added 7,392,000 bushels to the 1928 probable yield of domestic winter wheat, and brought about a series of rushes to the selling side of the market.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 2¾c to 3¼c net lower, with corn ⅝c to 1¼c off, oats varying from ¼c decline to ¼c advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 10c.

Wheat finished at nearly the day's bottom level. Changes in the government crop figures made the forecast of winter wheat production 486,478,000 bushels, as compared with 49,086,000, the total given from Washington a few days ago. In itself, the difference was not of great importance, but the announcement happened to come at a time when the market was sensitive of any kind of bear influence.

On the sudden downward plunge of wheat values which took place, the market fell to 4⅝c a bushel under top figures that were reached earlier in the day. Every future delivery of wheat went as low as $1.50, and afterward displayed little power to recover. Early advances were ascribed chiefly to persistent dry weather in spring wheat territory and to Liverpool quotations higher than were looked for. Besides, a comprehensive trade summary issued here today said that in the United States as a whole the 1928 agricultural season is now 15 to 40 days late.

Corn held better than wheat, but nevertheless reflected the action of the bread grain. Good cash demand for corn was in evidence.

May and July oats rose temporarily to the highest prices yet this season. Frost in part of the oats belt led to more or less apprehension of crop damage.

Provisions were easier on account of scattered selling. Weakness in cotton and grain had some influence.

MODERATE ACTIVITY IN LIVESTOCK MART DURING PAST WEEK

KANSAS CITY, May 12. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Moderate activity prevailed killing classes of cattle this week around the 11 mid-western and southwestern market circuit. Light receipts more than offset the depressing influence of a slow, and lower dressed beef trade. Prices on most killing classes ruled firm to unevenly higher. Finished light weight steers, which were in broad demand, showed upturns of as much as 50c at some points. Heavy steers opened the week sharply higher, but closed with most of the advance lost. Stocker and feeder classes comprised only a limited proportion of the supply. Country demand for grazing classes was slow, at slightly lower values, with the slow growth of pastures and relatively high prices, the retarding factor. Choice heavy steers in Chicago scored $15.00 and the same market realized $14.75 on long yearlings. The supply of around 95,500 showed a decrease of 45,000 from last week and 24,000 from the same period a year ago.

Spring lambs of California and Arizona origin were marketed in liberal numbers this week and a general decline of 25@50c was put into effect. Aged stock also was under pressure and shared the decline on spring lambs, although mature lambs were uneven, the undertone at most points was weak to lower. Chicago had tops of $18.50 on California springers and $16.50 on fed clipped lambs. Receipts, including today's estimate were 253,350, against 253,792 last week and 233,500 the corresponding week a year ago.

Considerable price fluctuating featured trade on hogs, the week's early upturn was erased on Wednesday and Thursday, while on closing sessions a reaction place values generally 10@15c higher than a week ago. Chicago early in the week had a $10.45 top, but on Friday the day's best price was $10.30. Offerings of approximately 490,500 were 18,750 more than last week, but 5000 short of a year ago.

The Panhandle Refining company's band will assist in furnishing music for the dedicatory exercises at the Memorial auditorium on Sunday afternoon, May 27, it was announced Saturday by W. E. George, commander of Pat Carrigan post, American Legion.

Invitations have been extended to all civic organizations in cities within a 100-mile radium of Wichita Falls to have delegations here when the Memorial auditorium and the Legion and Spanish-American war veterans' statutes in front of the building are dedicated.

In addition mayors and city managers in all cities of Texas have been invited to attend.

Col. Alvin Owsley, past national commander of the American Legion, and Congressman Tom Connally are to be the principal speakers.

The flag pole will be set in place in front of the auditorium in the near future. "The Hiker," the statue to be given by the Spanish war vets, will be placed soon. "The Doughboy," legion statue, has already been set up.

JUDGE REFUSES TO GRANT RETRIAL IN SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Judge W. W. Cook of the 78th district court declined Saturday to set aside the verdict of a jury which several weeks ago awarded judgment of $3,500 to Mrs. Katherine Nowling against the Peoples Ice company.

The suit grew out of the death of Mr. Nowling, who was alleged to have been fatally injured about a year ago as a result of being crushed under a piece of apparatus while in the employ of the ice company.

Attorneys for the ice company alleged in the application for a new trial that the jury had resorted to an improper method of fixing upon the sum awarded as damages. It was alleged that each juror wrote upon a slip of paper his suggestion as to the damages to be awarded, and that the figures then were totaled and divided by 12.

TO BEGIN WORK ON ZONING LAW HERE AT ONCE

Mayor J. W. Akin has expressed a willingness to have the chamber of commerce present before the city council a zoning ordinance prepared under the Texas enabling act, and the city plan committee of the chamber will begin work on the ordinance immediately. W. S. Curlee is chairman of the committee.

The chamber of commerce has already written to San Antonio for a copy of its ordinance, the first to be put into effect since the adoption of the enabling act by the state legislature.

Such an ordinance for Wichita Falls would include zoning maps which would definitely set out which sections of the city were residential, business, suburban business or industrial areas.

George D. Fairtrace, city manager, describes the zoning law "as a fine piece of legislation and a law which no city, however small, can afford to be without."

Carrigan School Will Present Pretty Spring May Day Festival In Form of Operetta Friday Eve

Among the many pretty spring festivals planned for the month of May is the operetta, "Aunt Drusilla's Garden," which will be presented by the children of the Carrigan school next Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The story centers around Nelda, one of a large family living in poverty in a tenement house in the city. She was taken to the home of her maiden aunts for charity, and she finds it very lonely there. The part of Nelda is taken by Lelia B. Crawford, and Eulene Lewis and Tiny Mae Morgan will play the roles of the maiden aunts.

The aunts have antagonized the boys of the neighborhood by their tempers and Nelda is seldom allowed to leave the garden.

When the play opens, as the children come home from school Nelda invites them into the garden. Aunt Drusilla appears and drives them away. Later a ball is knocked into the garden and Aunt Drusilla keeps it to teach them a lesson. The boys decide they will get even with her. However, Bob notices a little blaze in the kitchen, and the gang forgets everything but putting out the fire. They make an entrance through the window and put out the fire. As a token of her gratitude she accepts Nelda's suggestion for a lawn party for the gang and the children of the neighborhood.

Act II features the lawn party. A complete reconciliation between Aunt Drusilla and the gang has been made and a happy time is spent. During the "party" Nelda receives a letter from her rich uncle who has been in the west, insuring comfort for her widowed mother, herself and her brothers and sisters in the city.

PEGGY PIEDMONT Says

THIS is the time of the year when the Queen o' the May blossoms forth, and today, another kind of queen will also reign supreme.

For today is "Mother's Day"—the date that was set aside in the year of 1907 to be observed nationally in churches and homes commemorating the Queen of the Home—mothers of the nation. So today, sons and daughters, both young and old, will pay homage to mothers. Everyone will wear the symbolic flower, white for the departed mother, and red for the living. She will be the recipient of flowers, messages, gifts and letters on this day.

Other queens blossoming forth so profusely during May, are those of the school set, who bear the honor of making the highest grades in scholarship during the year. We're having far more coronations at this season then we ever have at fair time. Many little folks who were taking partin the May festivals at the various schools chirped their lay this week, "Wake and call me early, call me early mother dear," while an admirer of one lovely May queen, gazing upon those endearing young charms, was inspired to write something like this about her fair young friend:

"Along this path my lady trips
While softest winds were blowing;
Upon this path my lady smiled
At blossoms fair and glowing.
Her garments made the gentlest breeze,
That set the grass blades dancing,
And all things seemed to welcome her
Their sweet May queen advancing.

LONG TIME ago, I used to say I'm never going to be in a drug store or newspaper office when I grow up, 'cause those folks work when all the world's a-playing. Now you think of it, isn't that so? You take Christmas and holidays for instance. Of course people have to shop and buy some Christmas presents in a drug store, and lots, too, get sick and have to get prescriptions filled, and drug stores stay open 'most all night. Then, too, newspaper reporters are so busy writing up all the doings of those having good times, reporting parades, conventions, fires and elections, that they don't have time to join in the fun.

NOW I add one more plaint. Why is it so many interesting happenings always occur on Fridays and Saturdays, my busiest days? F'r instance, there was the big Crockett school annual carnival and May festival at the school auditorium and campus Friday evening. With vaudeville booths where eats were sold, fortunes told and what-not ending with the crowning of the May queen. And on the same evening, a May program and festival was the attraction at Barwise

Congressional Club Entertains At Breakfast for Mrs. Coolidge

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Leading ladies in the political-social life of Washington gathered many-strong at the beautiful Pan-American building the other day to entertain the first lady of the land at one of those noon affairs popularly called "breakfast."

The occasion was the annual breakfast given for Mrs. Coolidge by the Congressional club, that smart organization that brings wives of senators and representatives together on a common meeting-ground.

The Congressional club fills a large and distinct niche in the social life of this capital of ours. Only through its kindly ministrations do many timid little women whose husbands represent rural districts scattered over the country have a quick and substantial entre into the society that would otherwise forever shut them out.

And this function of the club, though not spoken of in public, is so much appreciated that its members give it unstinted support.

Throughout the "season," the club gives any number of lovely entertainments, but perhaps the president's wife's breakfast is its piece de resistance. This particular first lady is especially interested in the welfare of the organization and attends many of its functions.

The buffet breakfast this season was set in the splendid Hall of the Americas at the Pan-American building, the very room in which Ailsa Mellon, daughter of the secretary of the treasury, and her nice young husband held their gorgeous wedding reception some two springs ago.

Mrs. Dawes, the vice president's wife, shared honors with Mrs. Coolidge. Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. "Jimmy" Davis were there represnting the cabinet, and "Princess Alice," that charming Roosevelt daughter who is the wife of the speaker of the house, was here, there and everywhere, thoroughly enjoying herself, as she always seems to do.

Besides these special guests and the members of the club, many other ladies affiliated with the life of former administration who still maintain their membership in the club were on hand, not missing a thing.

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, the former Mrs. George Vanderbilt and now the wife of the handsome Rhode Island senator, is president of the club, and did the honors. She is a stunning woman with much poise and dignity; and she certainly does know how to do things "up brown."

Mrs. Gerry made a graceful little speech, welcoming Mrs. Coolidge in the name of the club, and then—wonder of wonders—there were no speeches. Just music and the babble of women's voices in cheery conversation.

There was a chic little souvenir program, parchment bound, and decorated with the club emblem in blue and gold and with tiny copies of Mrs. Coolidge's latest and best photograph.

Dear little Mrs. John B. Henderson was there in all the glory of her quaint clothes. Mrs. Henderson is the immensely wealthy widow of Senator Henderson of Missouri and her 80-odd years in no way incapacitate her in the matter of getting around.

She was a charter member of the Congressional club and is now an honorary vice president. So interested in the club is she that, not satisfied with donating the land on which the present outgrown clubhouse stands, she indicates now that she means to give the organization her own mansion as a new place to roost.

school when a queen, Grace Smith, chosen by the students, was also crowned, and I just couldn't make either affair.

A MOST lovely May queen will be Gladys Stevenson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Stevenson who will be crowned in the last of a series of festivals being given at the Alamo school as closing events. Gladys has won the honors for making the highest average among the girls in the sixth grade for the year. At this time, Gordon Kilgore, who made the highest average among the boys, will also be crowned king of the Alamo.

A STUDENT at the high school, who is not taking part in any May festival or is not expecting to be crowned a queen or anything like that, is nevertheless, much elated just at this time. She is Clara Carter, a senior, who received an autograph and best wishes from Rudyard Kipling, noted English novelist. The seniors who are taking English at the high school decided each to make a scrapbook on some English writer, and Clara chose Kipling. After making her choice, she wrote the author and after a short time received the note and autograph.

AND while the school crowds are busy with May events, graduation and other activities that go along with the closing of days, club women are planning to leave for the biennial at San Antonio. From present indications, a large number will go from Wichita Falls, and some have already made their hotel reservations. The official biennial train with passengers from the Pacific coast, the north and the east is expected to arrive in San Antonio, May 29.

Biennial guests on the train will be entertained at Fort Worth for two hours at the Woman's clubhouse, and the next stop it will make will be in Austin to allow the passengers a two hour visit in the capitol city and see Governor and Mrs. Moody. These are the only stops scheduled for the train in Texas.

A PRETTY feature planned for the biennial and something unusual are the decorations of the huge auditorium where the meetings are to be held. Each state is sending its native flowers, California is sending orange blossoms and poppies; Arizona, the cactus; and Oregon, the roses; Houston is sending magnolias and blossoms of many varieties will arrive from all directions to be used for this purpose. Another special decoration scheme is also planned when "Senorita Day" will be observed. At this time the auditorium will be be decorated in handsome, colorful Spanish shawls. Women who visit the biennial from foreign countries will no doubt see much of interest to them at this huge meeting.

NOW, if you don't think I have said enough about everybody in this letter for this time, I do, and if I have left anything out what you are especially interested in, just drop a line and I promise you a prompt answer from—

COME a-SHOPPING

With MARY ANN

EVERY youngster (and some grown-ups I know) like to dream of a dish of ice cream as big as himself.

You can make these dreams come by allowing him to eat a generous helping of Colvert's delicious ice cream. Made from pure rich cream, cane sugar, and fresh fruits, and containing protein, carbohydrate, and calcium it is not only a delectable confection but an excellent food as well.

This is a dream it is practical to fulfill as it brings both health and joy.

Does Colvert's ice cream have a regular place on your menu?

VARIETY was the keynote of the Columbia records I heard this week at Nunn Electric Company. The one I liked best was sung by our old friends, Ford and Glenn:

Columbia 1342-D—
I'' Wear a White Flower for You Mother Dear
A Boy's Best Friend Is His Mother.

Columbia 15520-D—
Kelly Waltz
Honeymoon Waltz
Cartwright Brothers

Columbia 15189-D—
Goodnight Waltz
Wednesday Night Waltz
Leake Country Revelers

Columbia 15201-D—
Parts 1 and 2
A Corn Licker Still in Georgia
By Riley Puckett and His Gang

And again we have the Two Black Crows, Mack and Moran, still drawling their clever lines of darky wit. Columbia 1350-D is their new record which give Two Black Crows, Parts 7 and 8.

MAJESTIC

SPRING IS SUCH A BUSY season. It is first this, that or the other till the days flit away from us and we scarcely remember where they went. Now it is time for us to begin to center our attention on the graduate, who to his own mind at least is "sitting on top of the world."

Graduation is an event fraught with happy auguries. The diploma marks not only the completion of the first great undertaking in the lives of the young graduates, but the promise of greater things yet to come. It is a time when the many friends and relatives of the graduate will wish to embody their congratulations in mementos worthy of the occasion. I can think of no more practical gift nor more appreciated one than stock in the North Texas Building and Loan Association, 822 Scott. Here, indeed, is something for the graduate to anchor his hopes to while he is busy finding his bearings in an entirely new world. School life is more or less complete in itself and it is hard to find the niche into which you will fit in the big world outside of school. Much advice is given the young graduate along with other presents but none proves so valuable as that which helped him find the correct financial moorings. Stock in the North Texas Building and Loan or even a savings account opened with a deposit may be just the thing your young graduate friend or relatives needs and wants most of all.

LOVERS of Gene Austin Victor records will be glad to know that Nunn Electric Company, 909 Scott, have his newest numbers. From a snappy little Spanish introduction which suggests castanets, roses and brightly colored shawls, Gene moves into the smooth flowing melody of Ramona, a beautiful record being played by thousands.

Food Grows Hair On Bald Heads

Scientists have found that baldness comes from lack of necessary food elements that the human hair requires. "Foods found in Mother Earth grow, nourish and retain hair," says P. A. Thomas, 1576 America Fore Bldg., Chicago, the world's leading hair specialist who operates over 40 treatment offices in the U. S. and Canada. He further states that hair roots always stay alive and that in 85 per cent of cases where hair is falling or baldness has set in, a growth of new hair can be had in a short time by following his simple directions. He will gladly explain his method without cost to those interested in restoring or saving their hair. Write him today.—Adv.

PRESIDENT OF GENERAL FEDERATION

Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, has the distinction of presiding over the largest organization of women in the world, the federation embodying more than 14,000 member clubs, including 58 groups of English speaking women in foreign countries.

Mrs. Sherman is a ninth generation American, being a direct descendant of John Whitney, who came over with the first of the Puritans, and settled in Watertown, Massachusetts in 1635. She was born in New York state, and later lived in Chicago, where in 1887 she married John Dickinson Sherman, a well known journalist, who passed away in March, 1926. They had one son, John King Sherman, who was in the air service of the world war and now makes his home in Estes Park, Colo.

Immediately following her election to the presidency of the General Federation of Women's clubs at the Los Angeles biennial in 1924, Mrs. Sherman announced that the keynote of her administration would be the American home and that the work of that newly created department and of the several other departments of the federation would be directed toward raising the standard of life in the American home, the community and the nation.

Mrs. Sherman inaugurated the nation-wide home equipment survey to determine the amount and kind of working machinery in the American home, the final objective being the reduction of labor in the household and the placing of housekeeping on a sound economic basis. In this project, which has made available information on 8,000,000 homes, Mrs. Sherman has the endorsement of President Coolidge, Secretary Hoover, Secretary Jardine and Secretary Work.

The "National Parks Lady," was a titl ehel dby Mrs. Sherman before she became head of the federation. She was one of the most potent influences in the creation of Rocky Mountain National park, she contributed largely to the creation of Grand Canyon National park and played a distinct part in the creation of the national park service in 1916 and doing the work from which grew the national conference on state parks. During the war she served the federal government as special assistant director of the United States garden army, under appointment of Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, and was the only woman director of the national war garden commission.

Mrs. Sherman has been for many years a recognized authority on parliamentary law. She taught in the John Marshall law school in Chicago, and her book on parliamentary law, which is now in its tenth edition, has been highly endorsed by Elihu Root and other jurists. She is a contributor to a number of the nationally known magazines and other publications. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and acted as parliamentarian for the national congress at two sessions.

Mrs. Sherman is cosmopolitan, human and full of understanding. She thinks clearly and has a rare inherent sense of justice ;experience has taught her to view all sides of a question and nature has endowed her with the rare gift of impersonal judgment. The keenness of her understanding, the logic of her decisions and the kindness of her heart, have been praised deservedly by all who have prfoited by conference with her. Her wisdom and discernment, combined with rare executive ability, and a close and constant contact with government officials and national affairs, makes her particularly fitted for the post of leader of this large and influential organization, whose aim is to build up in every community an organized and informed group of women who are actively engaged in promoting projects for the betterment of life.

WOMAN'S FORUM ARTIST-GUEST

MISS REBECCA SMITH

Members of the Woman's Forum are looking forward with much interest to the annual breakfast to be given at the clubhouse Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, which is the closing event of the spring. The affair is expected to be one of the most attractive social features of the season and a great amount of thought and work is being put forth in connection with it.

Miss Rebecca Smith of the English department at T. C. U. is the artist guest and will be the speaker.

She has made a special study of Texas history, legends and folklore and will be remembered as the charming speaker at the breakfast last year.

Mrs. A. R. Bleakley, charter member of the organization who recently moved to Dallas, will be the honor guest, and Mrs. W. W. Silk will be the toastmistress. The program will include violin numbers by Mrs. Bruce Greenwood, and a solo by Miss Modena Howell.

Mrs. W. P. Bolding, social chairman, is general chairman of arrangements, and table hostesses include: Mesdames W. P. Killingsworth, A. Kahn, I. R. Sheldon, Hugh Weaver, Stanley McGregor, I. H. Roberts, T. M. Conrey, Guy Raley, S. L. Conn, Lester Jones and W. T. Knight.

Reservations may be made with any of the above hostesses and close Monday at noon. The breakfast is open to members and out of town guests, and members are requested to bring their membership cards when they purchase their tickets.

PIANO PUPILS WILL GIVE RECITAL MONDAY

A group of primary and intermediate pupils of Mrs. Oran Staples' piano studio will be heard in recital on Monday evening, May 21, at 8 o'clock at the auditorium of the Alamo school—when they will present a novel and entertaining program.

Stress is laid on the manner of presentation of this program and it is hoped the audience will find in it a delightful surprize from the usual and hackneyed procedure of piano recitals.

Although the exact form in which the recital is to be given is to be kept secret until the night of the performance. It is known that there is to be a two-part program consisting of, first, a song and piano sketch called "Souvenirs of the Masters, Classic, Romantic and Modern," which will include works from the following composers: Bach, Handel, Hayden, Mozart, Gluck, Beethoven, Schubert, Weber, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Gounod, Chopin, Grieg, Scharwenka, Strauss, Wagner, Dvorak and Engelman. One of the history students will read a short paper "Outline in Brief of Great Musicians—Pianists, Singers, Violinists and Conductors."

The second part of the program will be a two-act playlet depicting in first act a scene from the boyhood of Robt. Schumann and in the second act, the famous love affair of Robt. Schumann and Clara Wieck.

"Between-act" numbers by "Little Minor Entertainers" and the "Major Artists" promises to be very entertaining.

Each year Mrs. Staples offers a half-scholarship which amounts to about $75 worth of piano lessons free to the pupil whose yearly average is highest. This year the lucky student is Ina Joe Ogle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Ogle at 1208 Taylor street.

On the evening of the recital Ina Joe will be presented with the scholarship.

There is no admission charge for this recital and play and everyone musically interested is extended a cordial invitation.

How Much Water Should Baby Get?
A Famous Authority's Rule
By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight pound baby, for instance, needs 24 ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over 30 years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

VARSITY NEWS

By GLADYS WHITLEY

AUSTIN, May 12.—Interest in senior activities is increasing on the campus as next week has been designated as senior week. The annual major examinations covering the entire four years work for each student in the field in which he was specializing were held Monday afternoon. Cap and gowns and invitations for commencement exercises came in this week, and Scottish Rite dormitory entertained Friday afternoon with its annual garden party honoring its senior girls. Senior vespers will be held next Monday afternoon. Reagan sing is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, cap and gown initiation for junior girls on Wednesday evening, a garden party by the staff of the dean of women on Thursday afternoon, and the senior swing-out and banquet by the Y. W. C. A. on Friday evening.

Roy M. Canon, Wm. A. Cunningham, Wm. B. Ford and Wm. M. Ryan were the four men honored with membership in Friars at the spring election. Friars is a board of eight men chosen each year from the senior class.

Hon. Lynch Davidson of Houston was the principal speaker at the spring banquet of the students of the business administration school Thursday evening of this week. Dr. J. A. Fitzgerald, dean of the business school, was the toastmaster for the occasion. The Longhorn quartet and Bess Olson of Cisco and Thad Sanders entertained the large group attending the function.

Two northwest Texas students in the university were honored by Scribiers' club, honorary writers' club on the campus, when Jimmie Payne of Breckenridge, was chosen to membership in the organization and Miss Doris Brown of Wichita Falls was chosen secretary-treasurer of the society. Payne is editor-in-chief of the Daily Texan and Miss Brown will be a senior in the varsity next year.

More than 150 persons took part in the presentation of a Spanish play given at a downtown play house under the auspices of the Spanish Dramatics club of the university. A short comedy, "El Barbero de Sevilla," was presented along with the musical program, which had been arranged in connection with the observing of music week in Austin.

On the social calendar for this week was the Menorah society banquet and dance.

The regular Saturday evening German was on the social calendar Saturday evening. The all-university dances at the woman's gymnasium have been discontinued.

Turtles and ducks swimming and diving, eggs frying on ice and wireless and talking lights were a few of the uncanny things the electrical engineering students demonstrated in their exhibit at the engineering power show here recently.

Besides the power show which was put on especially for the benefit of interscholastic league visitors on the campus last week-end, approximately 290 species of wild flowers were collected and labeled and displayed for the visitors. According to Dr. B. C. Tharp, associate professor of botany in the university, this is the largest collection of Texas wild flowers ever made.

The Austin American-Statesman was turned over this week to the students of the journalism department of the university.

Louis Bond of Wichita Falls won third place in the state meet here last week-end in the high school boys' declamation contests. Edgar Pfeil of San Antonio won first place and Houston Payne of Midland was second.

In honor of the opening of the new power house of the university the Daily Texan issued a 22 page edition last week-end. This issue was called the greater varsity edition.

Luth D. Lynn of San Angelo won second place in the annual humorous speaking contest held at the open house of the Athenaeum Literary society. A prize of $10 accompanies this honor.

Ralph Harris of San Angelo and Fred McKie of Amarillo are among the pledges to Kappa Tau Gamma, professional engineering fraternity.

Everetta Love of Lubbock, junior student of journalism, assisted in issuing the Austin papers this week. She received a silver award for her work on the Daily Texan during this year.

THE BANKERS STAND PAT

The Texas Bankers' association in session at San Antonio last week stood pat on its $5000 offer for dead bank bandits. Since the offer was first announced, about a year ago, the association has heard its action severely criticised, both in Texas and out of it, and has also heard many expressions of approval. It has seen the offer result in the wanton killing of one man "planted" by pseudo-officers, and also in the killing of several individuals attempting to rob banks.

We imagine that if the association had it to do over again, it would pursue a different course. Its action at San Antonio probably resulted from the feeling that this is a bad time to do any backing down.

OUR CURIOSITY IS AROUSED

We are somewhat curious as to the identity of the southern Democrat who, according to Reed's leaders in California, will accept the third party nomination if the democratic party names Smith. If there is a southern Democrat of sufficient ability to unite the factions opposed to Smith, it's hard to understand why we haven't heard more of him before now. Where has he been all this time that dry Democrats have been casting wildly about for someone to lead them against Smith? Here it has been noticeable all along that the ultra-dry Democrats in the South were lacking in leadership, and now we're told that a suitable leader is available and ready to step out when the time comes. Those who were aware of the existence of such presidential timber were doing the democratic party a disservice in keeping it hidden.

BAYLOR STAYS AT WACO

The outcome of the Baylor controversy is pleasing, we believe, to Texans generally. While the matter was not the business of anyone save Baptists, members of other denominations as well as friends of higher education generally, were keenly interested in the Baylor matter and are glad that it has been settled as it has.

It would have been a mistake to move Baylor for what Dallas offered. The $1,500,000 tendered by Dallas probably did not represent the actual replacement value of the Baylor plant. At Dallas, Baylor would have had to compete with Southern Methodist University for patronage and support; it could not have continued to draw from the poulous Central Texas counties around Waco, but would have entered a field already served by the schools of Dallas, Fort Worth, Waxahachie and Sherman. This view of the matter does not take into account the question of justice or injustice to the citizens of Waco.

Waco pays a stiff price to keep Baylor. It must raise a million dollars in seven years, provided a like sum is contributed by Baptists outside of Waco. Waco probably realizes the value of Baylor sufficiently to deem that institution worth such a price.

WANTED—HE-MEN

We may expect to hear a call pretty soon, from the diplomatic and consular branches of the state department, for red-blooded, two-fisted, hairy-chested, Americans to represent this country in foreign countries. At present, an investigating committee from the Senate has found, the tendency is to appoint individuals who have placed emphasis upon the social graces. The committee found that appointments were made on the basis of ability, character and personality, and that the latter quality was deemed to comprise "temperament, disposition, appearance and dress, social and representative qualifications, social grace and poise, manners, tact and courtesy, freedom from eccentricity, magnetism and ability to make and hold friends."

One member of the committee said that the essential equipment of a diplomat seemed to be "a one-button morning coat, gardenia, white spats and a bank roll." The senator didn't say anything about pants or shirt, evidently intending those to be taken for granted.

The committee in its report will ask that less attention be given to social qualifications, in choosing workers in the diplomatic and consular services. It will ask that there be more Doug Fairbankses and perhaps Tom Mixes, and fewer Adolph Menjous and Lewis Stones.

THE TEXAS LEAGUE RACE

From all indications, interesting times are in prospect for Texas League baseball fans this season. As this is written, four of the teams are so closely bunched at the top of the percentage column that a single day's play is certain to cause one or more shifts in the order. An instant's lapse on the part of an infielder, a second's indifference on the part of a pitcher, may mean the difference between first place and fourth place, for their team.

The joy, likewise grief, of baseball, is the uncertainty thereof. The baseball fan likes to see his team win, but a team that wins with too great regularity ceases to be profitable. The Texas League race just now doesn't involve any teams that are going to cause the fans to stay at home on that account. There is sufficient uncertainty every time two of them meet, especially if it is two out of the leading four.

We are glad that the race is in the shape it's in. It will make us appreciate another pennant all the more to have to battle harder for it.

In Oregon is a man who can chew fifty sticks of gum at one time and play a cornet? Pshaw! We'll bet he can't even sit on a flagpole while swimming the English channel and eat fifty flapjacks and drink 100 cups of coffee on the way!

JUST FOLKS

—By—
EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1928, Edgar A. Guest)

MOTHER

Day by day and week by week,
Month by month and year by year,
All she ever seemed to seek
Was our health and comfort here.
Every thought and every deed
Were for things which we might need.

Cookies on the pantry shelves,
Cakes and pies and all things sweet
Kept where we could help ourselves,
Thus she braved the kitchen's heat.
Toil seemed nothing unto her
If it made us happier.

Constant watch and constant care
These she gave when we were small,
Keeping garments in repair
But she braved it through that we Might be fit for folks to see.

Oh, how often she was tasked!
Oh, how tired those hands became,
But no more than this she asked,
That our eyes with joy should flame.
Just for this she labored long:
We must prosper and be strong.

Others give and in return
Hope for favors later on,
But in time all children learn,
Friend unselfish there's but one!
Mother smiled at many an ache

A Famine of Power

By GLENN FRANK
President of University of Wisconsin and Former Editor of the Century Magazine

We have made magnificent headway against periodic famines of food which hung like a menacing storm cloud over our ancestors.

But far-sighted scientists, who think in terms of the needs of centuries instead of the news of the day, are beginning to worry over the possibility of a permanent famine of power, a permanent bankruptcy of humanity's resources of energy.

I have been whiling away the otherwise tedious hours of a railway journey by reading some of the papers of Professor Soddy, the distinguished chemist who has done such provocative research in the field of radio-activity.

"We are," he says, "spending improvidently in a year the physical means of life that would have sufficed our ancestors for a century, and the exhaustion of the available supplies of energy upon which the present era of the world relies is no longer a remotely distant prospect."

H. G. Wells has said that the future will be a race between education and catastrophe; it would, it seems, be more accurate to say that the future of humanity will depend upon the outcome of the race between the scientific research that is seeking new sources of energy and the social habit of recklessly depleting our now available supplies of energy.

The baby supply is outstripping the bread supply.

The chemists, the bacteriologists, the plant pathologists, and their colleagues of the laboratory are moving heaven and earth to throw a protecting wall around the agricultural crops of the world, to free them from the dangers of unfriendly climate and deadly pests.

More daring and imaginative scientists are experimenting with the possibility of synthetic foods that might capture a six-course dinner in a capsule.

But the possibility that holds the world of science in hypnotic fascination is the possibility of unlocking, releasing, and harnessing to human use the energy that is stored in the atom.

"Mankind still lives solely on the energy derived from the sun," says Professor Soddy.

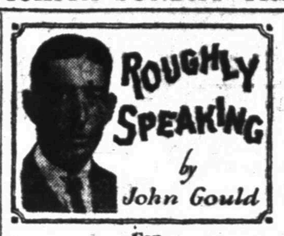

Whether it be a transatlantic liner crossing the ocean or a trout coquetting in a mountain stream with a fly, whether you are taking a train journey across the Arizona desert or eating a New England boiled dinner of vegetables—you are but consuming energy that came from the sun. The ocean liner, the trout, the train, the vegetables of your dinner are but way-stations at which the sun's energy stopped on its way to you.

Now this energy is stored up in the atoms of radio-active substances; if the scientists can unlock that atomic power, mankind may be at last free from the fear of an ultimate famine of energy.

Until now we have done but a retail business in power; then we shall be wholesalers; we shall have established contact—direct contact—with the ultimate source of all power.

ROUGHLY SPEAKING

Coy

"I haven't done a thing," Al states,
"To line up any delegates.
But if I'm chosen, then, of course,
There'll be no need of using force."

It reminds us of the young woman of Siam, who said to her sweetie named Priam, "You can kiss me, of course, but you'll have to use force, and the lord knows you're stronger than I am."

Triumph

We have achieved a moral victory, of no slight moment, in this colyum recently. It has not been easy, but we did it. We have almost, but not quite entirely, conquered our habit of writing a bit of verse with which to start off the colyum. Last Sunday there was just a four-line verse. Today, the same. Perhaps—who knows?—we shall conquer the habit altogether and present a verseless colyum on Sunday mornings.

It is an old story, about this versifying habit of ours. Time was when we would have scorned such a thing. We had seen others caught in the snares of the habit, and had witnessed their downfall and ruin. Ah, we were too sure of ourself, too confident of our strength. Temptation encompassed us, in our hour of weakness. What's the harm, we said to ourself. Just one little poem. It can't hurt us. Just this one, and no more. How little we recked of the insidious wiles of the tempter! One poem we wrote, then another—another—another. Almost before we knew it, the habit had us in its slimy tentacles. A timely word from a dear friend brought us to our senses and we thrust temptation from us. We quit. We rallied against the almost overpowering urge, and conquered it. For a long time we seemed safe. And then—and then—we became too sure of our power. Our seeming victory had given us false strength.

What's the odds, we said to ourself. We have self-control. We can take our poetry or we can let it alone. And soon the habit had us in its loathsome grip once more, and for years we fought, stubbornly but hopelessly, against it. Time and again we battled with the temptation, time and again we lost; each Sabbath morning the eager readers of this colyum would find another piece of verse at the head of it.

Now we are tapering off. We are trying hard to quit. Whether or not we succeed, we hope our experience will prove a valuable lesson to others. It's the first poem that does it. Shun that first one, my friends. Have the grit to say no to the tempter, and you will be spared the struggle that we have known.

A year ago, on the first Sunday of fishing season, attendance at Presbyterian Sunday schools showed an increase over the previous Sunday, while at the churches where there is a predilection for deep water, there was a noticeable decrease. It was with considerable pain and chagrin, therefore, that we looked over the figures for last Sunday and saw that the Baptists and Christians had more folks at Sunday school than on the previous Sabbath, while the Presbyterians recorded a sharp falling-off. There of course may not be any significance in the figures. We would not come right out and say that there is any definite connection between the Presbyterian attendance figures and the fact that it was the first Sunday of the bass season. To do so would be crass, and we abhor crassness. It may have just happened that way.

Harmony

As a good Democrat, we perhaps should be rejoicing over the fact that there is harmony within the democratic party in Texas. However, we find ourself unable to derive any real joy therefrom. There is harmony, but it is strictly the democratic kind of harmony. That is to say, everybody is willing to join in provided he is allowed to sing tenor, choose the song, decide on the key and name the accompanist. The Republicans are different. When a Republican steps up and says, "Listen, you folks, I want to sing tenor," somebody tells him, "You can't sing tenor, we've got enough tenors now;" and that Republican says, "All right, then, I'll sing bass" and goes ahead and sings it.

We Democrats don't ever really agree with one another. The only platform to which all of us could sincerely subscribe would be one indorsing Lindbergh's flight to Paris, and condemning bigamy, vacuum cleaner salesmen, whispering baritones and other universally recognized evils.

There was a pretty fair sample of democratic harmony at the court house last Tuesday. If there had been any more democratic harmony than there was, they'd have to build a new court house.

The Other Kind

The members of what has been jocularly called the Grand Oil Party partake of a different kind of harmony. They quarrel among themselves, but they are reasonable and conservative about it. They do their quarrelling with one eye on the opposing faction and the other on the postoffices. This has an ameliorating effect that makes it easy, in due season, to patch up the differences and forget the harsh words. Ever since we have been observing political affairs at all, it has seemed to us that the Democrats always had the high principles and the Republicans had the postoffices.

The Republicans, it is true, did have a serious falling-out once. It taught 'em a lesson. They were eight years getting back. It will never happen again—not until the memory of those eight hungry years has faded and there is another Theodore Roosevelt. The former may happen, in time; we have our doubts about the other.

The average democratic harmonizer reminds us of a man named Ral Jordan, who lived down in South Texas where we were, roughly speaking, raised. Ral had the reputation of being kind of strong-minded.

"Where are you going, Ral?" somebody asked him one day.

"I'm going home," he replied, "to see if supper's ready. If it ain't, I'm just naturally going to raise hell. And if it is, I ain't going to eat it."

We are fond of young onions. We are fond of playing bridge. Upon request, we will gladly make an oral statement of our sentiments toward persons who play bridge after having eaten young onions.

Your Boy and Your Girl

By ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.
The Parent Counsellor

Dr. Dean will answer all signed letters pertaining to parents' problems with their boys and girls. Writers' names are never printed. Only questions of general interest answered in the column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Address, Arthur Dean, in care of this paper.

Parking Place for Parents

A young girl writes: "I have a beau and he calls on me three times a week. My two sisters have beaux also. Now what I want to know is whether my parents are expected to park themselves right in the same room with us all evening? They are wonderfully nice parents and mean no harm but shouldn't they give young people some chance to be alone?"

The girl added that she lives in an apartment house. I needed more data to be helpful to this miss so I wrote her and discovered that the apartment consisted of four rooms plus a kitchenet. Now just what can we do with the parents under these conditions? One would not expect to have them parked in the bath tub or in the kitchenet, therefore they naturally, in view of the fact that they pay the rent, want to stay in the living room where the light is good and the chairs are soft.

This is a real problem. Parents cannot be expected to leave the house and young people ought not to be required to do their courting in public places. I recall that some years ago a minister in Boston conceived the idea of developing courting parlors in connection with the working girls' dormitory. These little rooms were arranged one after the other on both sides of a long corridor, enclosed in glass on three sides with a blank wall on the fourth side. A Bostonese maiden of uncertain years was assigned to patrol the corridor. Courting under these conditions must have been somewhat embarrassing or restrained. The effect on the patrolwoman was never recorded.

I suggest the following plan for use in families where these conflicts occur:

Mary is to have the parlor on Monday and Thursday, Jenny on Tuesday and Saturday, Susie on Wednesday and Friday, and mother and father can have the living room on Sunday and the dining room the other of the nights. Father and mother might take in a movie one night a week and pay a call on neighbors another night.

Remember the Brain

Answer—It is possible to do much harm if this is overdone.

Druggists Dream Day

Have you any suggestions for a Saturday evening Mother's day banquet or entertainment? — P.-T. A. President.

Answer—I like very much indeed the Mother's day program as arranged by the Community Drama Service of the Playground and Recreation Association of America. In it there is a suggestion for a Mother's day banquet, outlining four toasts, table decorations, a possible fashion show and a very excellent little play.

I was particularly interested in looking over the hints for a "fashion show" which contrast modern dress with the correct costumes of the "nebulous nineties," the girls wearing the latest in modern clothes and the mothers arraying themselves in old finery in memory of their girlhood triumphs. It certainly would be funny to see the contrast between the modern bathing girl in her brief one-piece beach suit and the beach beauty of the nineties, modestly garbed in voluminous broadcloth in which staying afloat was a feat in itself.

THE SENTS OF SMELL AND THE SENTS OF SITE

The sents of smell helps us to injoy certain places sutch as fields with the grass full of flowers and kitchins with the oven full of pies.

The home of the sents of smell is up the nose, but you dont haff to have a bewtiful nose to have a delicate smell. This proves its wrong to stop being usefill just because you dont happen to be ornamental.

Dogs have the best sents of smell and bludhounds have a even better sents of smell than ordnerry dogs. If you showed a bludhound a merderers hankerchiff he would smell it serious and then start to look for the merderer, but if you showed it to a ordnerry dog he would just grab a hold of it and run around expecting you to chase him.

Peeple ony go around sniffing wen they dont like the smell of semething, and even then its not considered very polite, but it is a dogs nature to sniff a lot so nobody holds it agenst them, and enyways dogs never seem to smell enything thats disagreeable as far as their concerned.

We offen see dogs sniffing wen there aint enything to sniff about that we know of. This proves no matter how intelligent we are nature is still more wonderful than education.

The sents of site is wat keeps us from bumping into other peeple even more than we do.

In olden days the peeple that couldnt see good dident wear glasses on account of never having herd of them because glasses was still a thing of the future, and nowadays some peeple cant see good and wont wear glasses enyways, espeshilly gerls and ladies on account of thinking they look prettier skwinting out of 2 eyes than looking strate out of 4. This proves meny peeple dont have eny more fun today than wat they would of thousands of years ago, ony for different reasons.

The ferst time somebody wears glasses it makes them look funny, but if you are use to seeing a person with glasses on and then suddenly see them with them off it makes them look even funnier. This proves we are proberly kind of funny looking enyways, the ony consolation being we are use to ourselfs.

Eagles can see their prey from a mile up in the air and then swoop down and grab it, but if eny of them are shortsigirted probably nobody ever knows wat a fearse time they have banging down into rocks in the shape of small tender animals.

If you look at a drop of water with your bare eyes thats all it looks like, but if you look at it the next minnit with a mikroscope you will wonder ware all the mikrobes suddenly came from. If you spent mutch time looking at drops of water through a mikroscope you would probably look thawtful instead of sattisfied wen you drank a whole glass of it.

This proves theres so mutch in the werld to worry about its impossible to find out everything no matter how anxious of a disposition you have.

Typhoid Marys

Illustrated by RAEBURN VAN BUREN

When he returned, an acquaintance stopped him on the street, staring at him in obvious amazement.

"Why the ghastly glance?" exclaimed the man, who was feeling jovial and fit. "What is so strange about my taking a vacation?"

"Vacation!" repeated the other. "Do you know what they are saying about you? Six different people have told me that you had broken down and were in a sanitarium out West."

One of the oldest, most stable concerns of its kind suffered a temporary embarrassment through the failure of a customer. There was no permanent loss, but rumors spread fast.

"They are busted," said the couriers of misfortune. "They have discharged ninety people." "They will announce their suspension tomorrow."

It happened that the company, at that very hour, had more than a million dollars in cash in the banks. Did the rumor-mongers stop to learn this fact? They did not; each was too eager to be the first to spread the fatal tidings.

The president of the company traveled from bank to bank, and office to office, presenting the facts. Sometimes he had to show his bank-books in order to make himself believed.

Two gentlemen of inquiring turn of mind decided to test the rumor possibilities of business. They agreed that each of them would stop the first three individuals he met and conduct the following conversation:

"Have you heard about Smith?"
—a man prominent in their industry.

"Well, if you haven't heard anything, don't say anything."

Within a week it was widely reported that: (1) Smith was dead. (2) He had been fired. (3) He had quarreled with his boss and resigned. (4) He was about to be divorced. (5) He had disappeared with the company's funds.

After answering thousands of phone-calls and letters, poor Smith was driven to buy space in the trade press, to explain that he contemplated no business change, and that all rumors about him were groundless.

Do you remember Typhoid Mary? The health authorities rounded her up after a long search. She was a walking hive of typhoid-germs, and though not sick herself, she made everybody sick whom she met.

Business is full of male Typhoid Marys. They are a vast and costly nuisance. Having too little to do, they wander from office to office, spreading germs of suspicion and fear.

I ask the Rockefeller Institute to invent a serum which will annihilate these business pests. I ask the Secretary of Agriculture to spray them, like gypsy moths, in the spring.

GIVE MARRIAGE A CHANCE — By Kathleen Norris

"Will you kindly tell me what your objections are to divorce?" a Massachusetts college girl of 22 wrote to me challengingly the other day. "The only discoverable arguments against it, at least as far as I have been able to ascertain, are narrowness, religious bigotry, and a blue-nosed hatred on the part of reformers to have anybody feel free to be happy, or do what he wants to do!

"Whose business is it," she goes on forcefully, "whose business is it but mine, and my husband's, if we cease to love each other, and are miserable together, and decide upon a dignified separation? Why should we continue to live together, just because society and Mrs. Grundy—" And so on and on; we all know that letter.

Sometimes I wish, a little wearily, that our schools and colleges generally might be inspired to teach something a little nearer real life than these glib surface-deductions that pass for argument, among the very young—the mentally very young—and that not only are not the fruit of any real thought or experience, but that actually prevent a student from reaching real thought or real experience.

It would be a wonderful thing for America if we could ever have a group of women graduates, from any college, into whose young heads there had ever come even the faintest glimmering of the truth that the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

Anybody who can speak at all can demolish marriage, truth, honor, motherhood, home life, love—can indeed demolish the whole world with a few crisp, impatient phrases. But when they are done, and panting and triumphant they retire from the scene, leaving the ruins of civilization behind them, then the patient, old-fashioned sort have to pick up the pieces, and put them together again, and go right on enduring, serving, struggling toward an ideal of courage, self-denial and goodness once more.

Perhaps the college girl isn't important. She has a lot to learn before the world is going to listen to anything she has to say. But here is another letter, from a woman of 34 this time, that strikes a deeper note.

This woman married a bad man, 12 years ago. I say "bad" because it appears that her husband was absolutely unfit to hold the love and respect of his wife, although he was apparently a worthy enough person in business and club life. He had no family that she ever knew, his friends were all worldlings, hard-betting, hard-drinking, hard-living men, and indeed the romantic hope of reforming him was one of the considerations that made her marry him.

It developed immediately that he loathed the idea of a family, and this girl, who was deeply maternal in type, was heartbroken on that score from the very beginning of her marriage. He made matters so difficult that gradually an alienation came between her and her own people; her mother was unreasonable here, too, and a spirited little sister forced her the issue that should have been left to time, and effected a complete separation. The wife—call her Marian Green—grieved and was lonely for a while, and then, in the fifth year of her marriage, had the great happines of having a daughter, a little girl now six years old. Just a year later a second child came, a boy.

The husband's reluctance to make all the sacrifices and to share some of the responsibilities of the nursery, combined with intemperance and non-support, finally angered the woman so deeply that she took her babies and left him, returning to her mother's house penniless, and a nervous wreck.

The atmosphere of home, however, rapidly restored her, and some months later a new man came on the scene, an apparently good, kind, generous man who was devoted to her, devoted to the small children, and openly anxious for her to obtain a divorce and marry him.

But meanwhile the husband had not been unobservant, and at last seemed truly to have reformed. He stopped drinking, applied himself to his work, prospered, and came humbly to his ill-treated wife to beg her to return. This, after some hesitation, and upon the family's urging, she did.

Now they have a good home, a car, and have placed the oldest child in a fine school; the woman has everything that would have made her happy, if he had given it to her a few years earlier, without that bitter interlude of suffering. She is miserable.

"I seem to be dead, emotionally," she writes me. "Of course I love the children, but at 34 you can't satisfy your heart with two mites of six and five, adorable as they are. Tom and I are polite to each other, we discuss the news of the day, and our household affairs, civilly enough. I sometimes go to dinners with him, and come back without knowing where I've been. I have everything—I have nothing. He tells me that I can go visit mother if I like—we live in a different town now—and promises me that everything will be all right while I'm away—and I don't care a bit!

"And meanwhile, though we never meet, I know the other man is as lonely as I. What is there, except convention and stupid prejudice, to keep me from ending a marriage that has become a perfectly empty farce, and going to a man with whom I feel I could really live? Please," she ends her letter impatiently, "please don't send me a lot of good advice about the sacredness of marriage and the beauty of duty nobly done—because I know all that and I'm sick of it! I'm not afraid of public opinion, and I think things out for myself."

It would be funny, if it were not so sad, this eagerness on the part of divorce advocates to impress one with their unconventionality of viewpoint, sensible freedom from what they fondly believe to be the mawkish, mid-Victorian sentimentality of old-fashioned wives.

Funny, because in truth they are the sentimentalists. Any woman who thinks she is "perfectly miserable" in one set of circumstances, and who believes that she would be "ideally happy" in some other, is hopelessly romantic; she is still in a high-school-girl attitude toward any real philosophy.

All very well in the teens, this adoring confidence toward some quite unknown male. But there is something extremely pathetic about it in later life. A woman of 30 ought to know that all marriages are alike in one respect—in many respects, indeed. The glamor of the courtship and the honeymoon die away, whether the bride is the princess or the pauper, the reality of life begins; a good deal of blame instead of the old soft flattery, a good deal of work instead of the old delicious Maytime idleness, bills, sickness, toothache, misunderstandings, a sensitive family, intrusive friends—all these things creep into the happy fabric of marriage, and have to be handled with exquisite wisdom and goodness.

If my friend Marian Green divorces her husband she will have to go through certain unpleasant processes—divorce isn't often dignified, and I don't believe any amount of accustomedness will ever make it so. It is a confession of failure, and no woman likes either confessions or failure. Tom Green may seem to be a rather indifferent father—but the moment anybody talks of taking his children away from him the trouble begins.

"All this part of it is very unpleasant," Marian will admit, with tears in her eyes. Finances will pinch her, lawyers ask difficult questions, and the home group's sympathy will be diluted with the usual madding consideration that there must be some truth on both sides.

She will be forced to blame their father to the children, because she so needs their partisanship. A miserable business, but there's no help for it. Marian will begin to tell her friends that in some of his moods Tom Green was actually like an insane man.

Then there will be the uncertainty about Dick White. Naturally he can't make love to her while the divorce proceedings are actually in progress, and that long interlocutory year will be a wretched year for both. Marian will be restless and uncertain, unsettled; her second trousseau will interest nobody but herself, and she simply will have no money for it. What with a change of residence and of schooling, and shoes and clothes, and legal expenses and everything else this first year of freedom is not all that her dreams pictured it.

Then perhaps comes the dearly-bought joy of belonging to Dick, at last. Marian is 35 now, and the thing hasn't quite the anticipated bloom, but she tells her friends enthusiastically that he is the dearest fellow that ever lived—truly, she has been married to him five months and she can't find a fault with him! She only smiles sweetly when the friends delicately question her; oh, yes, Tom sees the children—not that he cares about them, really. But of course he and his mother and sister have to make a great fuss about it.

However, even the dearest fellow in the world has relatives, relatives just faintly prejudiced against Marian from the beginning. They liked her when she was that nice Mrs. Green with the rather trying husband, but they are not so enthusiastic now. Marian conciliates them, more or less, but she feels no particular joy in the process. Dick, the most indulgent husband in the world, is also the most indulgent brother and son, and he is gentle and mournful about his wonderful mother and darling old Sis.

He adores Marian; he wants her all to himself. That eternal running upstairs to kiss badly-trained youngsters good night, that quick, passionate concern for whatever concerns Tommy and Jane, first amuses and then annoys him. Not a parent himself, he is quite unalarmed over a degree of temperature or a cut finger. His splendid, practical mother finds a good school camp for Tommy's summers, and Dick is puzzled and hurt by Marian's paleness and tears.

"Yes, I know," Marian mutters. "But—but it does seem so mean giving up—my baby."

"Giving him up, darling girl? But you have Dicky!" the older woman says gently. After all, Dicky is her baby, and she can't imagine anyone preferring that disgusting Tom Green's children to her own wonderful Dicky.

In short, changing husbands is only changing troubles, too often, in this puzzling life, and the coward who breaks up her own home too quickly, who finds a certain set of conditions absolutely unsupportable, and jumps from them to another—any other—not only doesn't better matters for herself, but involves a lot of innocent persons in the wreckage.

Nine times out of ten—I don't say ten times out of ten, but almost always, the real happiness for the mother of small children lies in making a home for them. To have the unchallenged right to be with them, to have their growing companionship and sympathy as her recompense, to know that the respect of neighbors and family are deepening year by year—is not so poor a prize in a life where the prizes are so few!

Some such mother, someday, over her secret loneliness and heartbreak, is going to raise sons who will be different from most young men today; boys who will be carefully trained for husbandhood and fatherhood. Boys who know something of self-control, of tenderness, of unselfishness; boys who revere women, who understand that married life isn't all extravagant amusement and physical indulgence.

Some such mother, someday will raise daughters who take marriage as a high vocation, not just a lucky chance to experiment with the sacred relationships of life. Her daughters won't expect a wild and delirious happiness based on nothing but clothes, wedding presents and night life, they won't expect the young man who suddenly finds himself at the head of a household to be a combination of financier, sheik and angel.

But that day appears to be somewhat remote, for a generation that actually has no ideal and no code, respecting marriage, and that considers this most serious and most important step in a girl's life to be only a matter of "luck."

And meanwhile, don't get a divorce if there is any other way. Many husbands are rude and inconsiderate—but then so are many

Mrs. Norris Says:

Don't get a divorce if there is any other way.

Many couples are appalled by a sort of apathy, a deadness, that creeps into married life at after the 8th or 10th or the 12th year. It isn't that they hate each other, or wish each other any harm,—it's just that it all seems so deadly dull.

The woman who feels this is really to blame, herself. She has lost interest in life, and consequently the man has lost interest in her.

Ramon Novarro New Picture at Olympic Sunday

Pearl and teakwood screens that centuries ago adorned Chinese joss houses in the Ming dynasty; valuable Chinese vases and brocades; an old clipper ship that for almost a century has ploughed the ocean in many startling adventures; these show the wide diversity of the "props" used in "Across to Singapore," Ramon Novarro's new starring vehicle, at the Olympic Sunday.

Making the production was one of the most interesting tasks studio technicians ever faced. The settings range from a quaint New England village to a colorful locale in Singapore, and many of the thrilling scenes were taken on an actual voyage on the old ship "Narwahl," specially chartered for the thrilling cruise in which the storm at sea, the mutiny, and the attack by Oriental pirates were filmed.

In the Singapore scenes hundreds of rare articles were borrowed from Chinese residents of Los Angeles and San Francisco's Chinatown, including the famous joss screens, brought to America shortly after the gold rush of 1849. William Night directed the picture, and handled the Oriental details with elaborate skill, due to his extensive research for his production of "Mr. Wu."

The cast is a large one, with Joan Crawford as the heroine, and Ernest Torrence, Frank Currier, Edward Connelly, Anna May Wong, Duke Martini, Dan Wolheim, James Mason and many others of note. A complete New England village was constructed as one of the settings for the new picture.

The sea scenes took more than a month on the Pacific, and the vessel put out a second time to intercept a Pacific storm, in order that the storm sequences might be perfect. Crew and company were out several days in the old ship in the heaviest of weather for these details.

William Boyd and Alan Hale are doing thrilling stunts daily at the Pacoima dam in the San Fernando mountains, where scenes are being taken for "Power." On one side it's a 500-foot drop to the valley's terminal moraine; on the other 80 feet to the icy cold reservoir. Needless to say the two "dam riggers" are watching their step.

MARION DAVIES

"Meet mother's labor saving device, Henry."

Henry is all that a good husband should be. He is willing, hard working, courteous, good humored, but above all meek. Henry has faults; what husband hasn't. There are times when he tries one's patience. He will draw his soup spoon towards him, say "ain't," monopolize the couch after dinner, take the newspaper, and frequently he tries to smoke that "dreadful" pipe in the house. But 23 years of nagging patience have shown results.

And Patsy is just like her father. She is helpful, saves the cost of a maid in fact. True at times she does raise strenuous objections to wearing sister's castoff clothing, and her sister finds her a great source of annoyance for Patsy insists on making goo-goo eyes at sister's beau. But mother has found that a kick on the shins and a punch in the ribs are very effective in Patsy's training.

But you know the worm will turn, and all that sort of nonsense and the story of Patsy and Henry's rebellion is uproariously told in the best screen comedy to reach the Majestic theater in months. "The Patsy" with Marion Davies finds the delightful star of "The Fair Co-Ed," in another corking good comedy role. As a tomboy kid sister who tries to capture her big sister's beau, Miss Davies romps through a role that finds its counterpart in almost any American family.

"Closeups" Are Fading From Screen As Producers Realize Stars Alone Cannot Hold Interest of Patrons

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—The flattering closeup guaranteed to give beauty to any screen actress is disgrace. The closeup, more than anything else, has been responsible for a loss of prestige of so many of our stars. It's only human to want to look lovely and it's only human to take advantage of every opportunity to achieve that aim.

That is why so many of our motion picture actresses have permitted the story and the action to drag along slowly and uninterestingly so that the public might feast upon their beauty. But now the public is bored and is asking for something more.

A few years ago in one of my frank moments I stated that the stars who interrupt every few feet in their picture stories with closeups are headed for eventual disaster. The time has come when that prophecy is fulfilled. There is no motion picture player in the world powerful enough to carry a story single handed.

You may adore Greta Garbo. You may feel Norma Talmadge has all the allure in the world and that just to look at Ronald Colman is a treat but you don't want to see them do a solo in picture after picture, now do you?

Word "Star" Menace

Hollywood producers realize that the word star is often a menace. A player who can go along fitting into a strong story here and there and winning the plaudits of the crowd often wrecks his career by consenting to stardom. There are few stories suited to carry along one player without help.

The best pictures are those made with not only an excellent star but a competent supporting cast. A few years ago it would have been an unheard of thing for two stars of Marion Davies' and William Haines' popularity to unite in one picture. The question of whose name should come first would have stopped them immediately. It was Marion herself who saw William Haines as the only comedy actor for "show peoples" It was she who requested that Mr. Haines might be co-starred with her and "co-starred" was the word she used. He will have equal billing and an equal place on the program. Only a star perfectly sure of herself and her ability would be big enough to do that.

Not long ago one of our well known stars, seeing her completed picture, ordered it entirely remade with added closeups of herself. The film as it stood was very good. Barney Glazer had written the scenario and he knows his craft. After the star's ministrations the film was a terrible travesty, a drama that had been so mishandled that the critics rose up in a body and declared it a comedy rather than an emotional dramatic play.

When "The Barker" was discussed for Milton Sills there was no leading lady available. Dorothy Mackaill, a talented actress, was under contract to First National as a star. The powers that be hated to approach Mr. Sills, asking him if he would consent to being co-starred with Miss Mackaill. They also hated to approach Dorothy Mackaill who might object to sharing the limelight with another player.

But finally when the rubicon was crossed and both Miss Mackaill and Mr. Sills were asked if they would consent to acting together, they both agreed with the result that "The Barker" is assured of a cast that promises results.

John Barrymore has always been a law unto himself. No one has ever had to tell him that he was a good actor. He knows it. No one has ever had to tell him that he is famous for his classic profile. He knows it. So when the idea of putting Constance Talmadge, a star in her own right, into "The Last of Mrs. Cheney" was mentioned, lots were drawn at United Artists as to who should break the news to the temperamental John.

At length Joseph Schenck was elected for the job. Just what happened no one knows but if John Barrymore has as much good sense as he should have he will not put thumbs down on Constance Talmadge. She will give him the sort of support he needs. These pretty young things, inexperienced are decorative no doubt but they do not carry sufficient weight to put over a picture as delicately tuned and as subtle as "The Last of Mrs. Cheney."

Hollywood is suddenly getting wise to the fact that no star is big enough, prominent enough and important enough to carry a picture unaided and alone, year after year. We are not content now to see slow action and solitary characterizations. We want each character etched with definite precision. We want to see many characterizations and we want to know that all of our characters are woven into the tapestry of the completed story.

The star who insists that, like Rudyard Kipling's cat, "He Walks Alone," is doomed to obliteration. He is probably the one who will be included in the twenty per cent to be eradfcated as prophesied last week by Samuel Goldwyn.

It is reported from the coast that Lina Basquette and George Duryea have been signed to long term contracts. Their work in "The Godless Girl" was responsible.

Charlie Chaplin In "The Circus" Strand Theater

Strand, the Vitaphone theater, will be reopened Saturday with Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus," for a week's run. In addition there will be Vitaphone short features as an additional attraction and Pathe news during the week.

The best of pictures are to be run, with an occasional Vitaphone feature, including Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel in "Tenderloin," now playing in New York at $2 top; "The Lion and the Mouse" with May McAvoy and Lionel Barrymore; "Across the Atlantic" with Monte Blue, "Ham and Eggs at the Front" and other Vitaphone features as released. Warner Brothers have a program of 18 such features, all of which will come to the Strand.

An up-to-date cooling plant to cost $10,000 will be installed at once and will be completed by June 1, assuring one of the most comfortable houses in the country regardless of the temperature outside.

Following Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus" and starting Saturday week will be Norma Talmadge in "The Dove," said to be her greatest production.

Carole Lombard, famed as one of Mack Sennett's most beauteous beauties, is the latest recruit to feature pictures. She has a part in Pathe's "Power," now in production with William Boyd as the star.

In "Annapolis," a new naval academy picture, Lina Basquette is to be co-featured with John Mack Brown, whose football exploits several years ago got him a position on the prized though mythical "All American" team.

THE ILLITERATE DIGEST

By WILL ROGERS Sunday, May 13, 1928 (Copyright, 1928, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

WHO'LL RUN AGAINST SMITH?

Well, all I know is just what I read in the papers. Been messing around the country a good deal lately, trying to find something to talk to you all about. All the Politicians are trying to stir up some excitement in their line of work, but I can't find much interest in their graft outside the ones that are in it. The outside people have just about come to the conclusion that there aint a worry's worth of difference in either one and they just try to forget it, and live it down if they can.

By the way, the way they are raiding the Treasury now there don't look like it will do anybody any good to get in. What's the use running your head off to get to a table where the food has just been all eaten up? If I was an office seeker, I would kinder be doubtful whether there was enough in there left just to pay my regular salary, much less what I wanted to run for office for.

They sure are taking the old Treasury to a cleaning. None of this million, or five million dollar appropriation. It's a half billion or nothing in a bill nowadays. It takes a man that can think in big numbers to introduce a bill in Congress nowadays. A Bill under a hundred million would be so unusual that it wouldent pass. "We can't spend our time voting on trifles." He would be laughed out of Congress as a Small Timer.

If you got a river near your house and the Government hasent damded it up yet, why it's because you haven't sent them a blue print of where it is, and haven't asked them to put one in for you. If you got some land that nothing will grow on and havent had it irrigated, why its because you dont know your Congressman. Everybody wants land irrigated by the Government. For, as anyone knows, new land with plenty of water will raise quite a bit. But so will old land if it's fertilized, so why should the whole of American Taxpayers pay for water for newly irrigated land any more than they would for fertilizer for old land? Both will do the same thing if you will put them on there. But it looks like nobody is ever original enough to think of a Bill like that. They just think that water is the only thing that will help land. Why my Lord there is dozens of different things that will help the farmer on his land besides water, or fertilization either. There is the Interest on the first and second Mortgage. Why don't they introduce a Bill in Congress for Congress to help the Farmer by paying off his Mortgages? That's whats eating him up on the farm, its not lack of irrigation or fertilization or lack of fertilization, its ABUDANCE of interest. Thats the Baby that is there every minute of every day. Not when it's needed, or when you spread it, but every minute of every day and night. Talk and sing about "Old Man River." Its old man interest that keeps the old Farmer running to town every few days. He has to have a bookkeeper to keep a set of books to keep track of when his various Notes and Mortgage interest comes due. It's the thought of the old Mortgages that keep him awake at night.

Will it come to this?

But if you notice they are always trying to put through some kind of Bill in Congress, but nobody ever puts through one to do something about interest. No sir, you couldent do that when you are getting into the business of the Boys that really hold the hoops while the jumping is going on. You could no more get a bill through to whittle the old interest down than you could to get a politician to admit a mistake.

They limit a Saving Bank from paying you over four or five percent, but about eight is legal if you are the one to do the borrowing, and then nothing definite has ever been done about the "Bonus" that they extra for the loan. But I will say there is some that are honest enough they don't do that. I won't call names, but they will be given on application.

So you see everybody has their racket, and everybody is looking to nick the old Treasury out of something, and on account of this being a Presidential year that makes the nicking more juicy.

But Let's get off of sense and get back to foolishness. It looks like Hoover and Smith are about the only two the people want from what I can gather. So I doubt if either one will be nominated. Well, I guess Smith will, for his position is exactly reversed from Hoover's. Smith the Democratic Politicians want him worse than the entire people, with Hoover it's the people that want him and not the Politicians in his party. So it may be Smith against Dawes, and that would make a collorful campaign. Dawes would make that sway-back pipe our national emblem. The "Old Brown Derby" against the "Nicotine Bowl." Now take your pick, which is the worst, a "Brown Derby" or the old pipe. It sure would bring out the vote. The old Corncob boys out of the meadows would be there to see that cigar ashes didn't litter up the White House, and the Town "Slicker Derby" boys would be there to see that no pipe whiffer ever lowered the smoking standards that are nowadays set by advertised Gentlemen.

They will make great Campaign Posters, the old Derby, and the old Pipe. Hoover, I don't know what he smokes, and Calvin smokes Cubebs. I think Jim Reed chews Horseshoe Plug. Walsh wont chew, smoke, drink. He just wants to find out what the other fellow is doing all the time. And Jim Watson dips snuff. Hughes smokes Cigarettes, but not too close. It's going to be a great Campaign for adds even if he is defeated to salve his conscience. Al chews his Cigars, even if they are lighted. He lets the fire work on one end, and he starts chewing on the other, and when the fire and the lips meets why the Republicans get H——.

A MAN TO HIS MOTHER

No foreign tribute from a stranger-hand,
Mother, I bring thee, whom not Heaven's songs
Would as an alien reach.—Ah, but how far
From Heaven's least heavenly is the changing note
And changing fancy of these fitful cries!
Mother, forgive them, as the best of me
Has ever pleaded only for thy pardon,
Not for thy praise.

Mother, there is a love
Men give to wives and children, lovers, friends;
There is a love which some men give to God.
Ah! between this, I think, and that last love,
Last and too-late-discovered love of God,
There shines—and nearer to the love of God—
The love a man gives only to his mother,
Whose travail of dear thought has never end
Until the end. Oh, that my mouth had words
Comfortable as thy kisses to the boy
Who loved while he forgot thee! Now I love,
Sundered and far, with daily heart's remembrance
The face the wind brings to me, the sun lights,
The birds and waters sing; the face of thee

—JOHN FREEMAN, in "Poems New and Old."

LATE Saturday afternoon I heard a woman say she must hurry down town and select and send flowers—or a gift of some sort—to her husband's mother, for a Mother's day remembrance, as she knew he wouldn't think of it and she wouldn't have his mother know he hadn't thought of it for anything. There were many other wives who did the same thing—many of them—mothers themselves, knowing how a mother's heart aches at neglect, yet knowing, also, that a man does love his mother as John Freeman says in the poem above "—with love like love of God," even though he may neglect her.

No one means to neglect a mother. We accept her love like we do the light of the sun and it is only when its warmth and light are seemingly blotted out by the cloud called Death that we realize what it meant to us. As the pale light of the moon and the stars never compare with the light of the sun, a mother's love can never be compared to that of any other love. Neither can the love we have for our mothers and the man or woman who expresses that love all through the year is the one who looks forward to Mother's Day as the day of days. They never look back with regret after Mother is gone and think of what they should have done.

I KNOW a prominent Wichita Falls business man who spends an hour before church time each Sunday morning writing to his mother. I can picture the mother's joy on receiving the letter each week. What a greater joy must fill the heart of the man after the quiet hour devoted to the one thought of his mother. After she is gone that same quiet hour will claim him. It will be a place into which to retire and shut out the world and hear the music of her voice calling to him in something she has said.

Because I hear my mother's voice say, "Maybe if we understood what led up to it we would overlook it," I always try to take into consideration a person's surroundings and what might have led up to their state of mind in my situation where there seems to be no excuse for their behavior.

A mother's voice calls the tiny toddler back from where a fall awaits stumbling little feet; calls saving advice to youth starting out on life's journey and calls middle and old age to a contemplation of the virtues her life taught. Her voice is the sweetest music there has ever been in the world—or ever will be. Homer C. Fisher, in his poem, "Like a Mother's Voice," in the Christian Science Monitor likens the sweet chiming of bells to a mother's voice calling her child in the following lines:

We were talking of bells
And one used one simile
And one another
To describe their sweet tones,
Then,
One who had not learned
Hackneyed phrase in a school
But had known a living mother's guidance
Said,—
"I know of some bells
In the little town of B——
And they are the sweetest sounding
Of any I have heard.
They sound like"—
Here words failed him for a moment—
Then,—
"They sound like
A mother's voice calling."

And I wonder if in all the world
One could, indeed, find sweeter sound
Than a mother's voice calling,

—HOMER C. FISHER.

I'M LIKE Will Rogers, "all I know is what I see in the papers"—and that's especially true of what our students are doing in school at home and abroad. I gather every little bud and full grown flower by clippings from the papers, but ofttimes when I go to put them together into a bouquet to present to the public I find some member of my family, careless like the members of other families, has brushed some flower from my desk and it has been carried away before its frangrance has permeated my senses enough for me to remember it. Long after its freshness has departed I, sometimes, find it, but too late to put into my bouquet.

Here's some flowers fresh from the school garden that will look well in vases 'round the room of one's memory: Ira L. Cain, who is a sophomore in Kemper Military school, was made president of the Missouri Interscholastic Press association at its sixth annual convention at Columbia. Ira is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira L. Cain and carried off many honors while in school here.

James R. Kilander, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Kilander, is a charter member of a newly organized branch of Etta-Kappa-Mu, honorary fraternity of electrical engineers at the University of Texas. James was an honor student of Wichita Falls high school and has been an honor student all the time he has been in the university. Membership in Etta-Kappa is open only to those who have shown a marked interest in the profession and who have proven they have the ability to work under adverse circumstances.

Pierce Langford, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Langford, was initiated into Skull and Bones, honorary fraternity of Texas university. This fraternity is one of the hardest to get into and among other requirements is that of popularity among students and the approval of the faculty.

Virgil A. Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fisher, was one of two Texans honored by election to membership in the Washington and Lee chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, an honorary fraternity based on leadership. Virgil is a senior and has won many honors since he has been in Washington-Lee.

William Cason, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Cason, won first place in boys' orations in the Texas Junior College Forensic association, held at Jacksonville. And here's a pansy to put in the low clear glass bowl on the breakfast table of your thoughts: Pansy Mills won second place in the girls' oratorical contest at Jacksonville and helped to pile up the score that made Wichita Falls Junior College dominate the contest.

JUST to refresh your memory: In the state one-act play contest at Gainesville in February the Junior College cast won second place. In the Junior College debates held at Arlington March 12, the Wichita Falls Junior College debaters, Robert Long and Seldon Hale, won first place. As only four contests are open to junior colleges in the literary division debate, dramatics, boy orations and girl orations, the two first places and the two seconds give Wichita Falls a big lead over every other college in the state! And the big yellow sunflower to put in the tall vase on the mantel: Miss Juanita Kinsey who trained the students for all these events and wrote the play that was staged at Gainesville, was made vice president of the Association of Texas Junior College Teachers. Isn't that the end of a perfect paragraph?

I NEVER get through with Junior College. Tuesday, May 15th will be the beginning of "Bluebonnet Day," which will be celebrated each year, hereafter, at Junior College. Celebration of this day was suggested by Gaylord Giles. Now if Gaylord will work out some plan whereby the seed of the bluebonnet, which with other wild flowers is fast disappearing, may be planted and cared for in this part of the state, he will have done something for which future generations will rise up and call him blessed. It could be done through the schools and since Junior College is taking the lead in so many other things, why not this? The hundreds of bluebonnets that make the hill on which the Dan Boone home stands, look like a piece of fallen sky, shows how the bluebonnets can be planted and grown—for they were all planted there. Here's hoping—!

SAN ANTONIO, most beautiful of Texas cities, will be the meeting ground, from the 29th of May until the 6th of June, for women of all creeds, all faiths, all political beliefs. The mutual aims of this vast concourse of women from the federated clubs of the United States and many foreign countries, can be summed up in a few lines taken from a poem written by Clarence Urmy about sixty-five years ago, called "The Things that Count"—

"Not what we have, but what we use;
Not what we see, but what we choose.

The things near by, not things afar;
Not what we seem, but what we are;

Not what seems fair, but what is true;
Not what we dream, but good we do;

Not as we take, but as we give;
Not as we pray, but as we live—

These are the things that make for peace,
Both now and after Time shall cease."

These are the things these women are working for when they come together at the great biennial and every program will foster this spirit. A famous judge in a recent speech said of the biennial: "More important than the National Democratic and Republican conventions is the great biennial at San Antonio, where the thinking women of the world will gather. These women hold the destiny of the world in their hands and they are thinking Peace."

The first special train will leave Fort Worth May 27th and will stop in Waco where a a visit to Baylor University to see the famous Browning collection has been arranged, and at Austin a reception will be given at the governor's mansion by Mrs. Moody. A trip has also been arranged at Austin for the visitors to see the Hal Sevier place, one of the show places of Austin.

BESIDES the programs of the biennial, where some of the famous women of the world will be heard, San Antonio is providing entertainment unequaled at any other biennial. A trip to Mexico City on a special train will be one of the side trips, but San Antonio is providing within its self rare entertainment. The barbecue at Brackenridge park, where the meat will be prepared by men who are experts and to which the delegates and visitors are asked to wear gingham dresses, will start things off after all visitors are there. The preliminary will be the reception to Texas women on the evening of the 27th.

The women of the first district, of which Wichita Falls is a part, will take a prominent part in the convention, and Miss Annie Shelton, who will be hostess to the foreign delegation asks all women who will, to bring their cars and advise her if they can be called upon to help the courtesy committee in taking these guests about.

The First District was the largest contributor to the biennial fund; had the largest single donation from a club; the largest individual donation and the largest city federation donation. Decca Lamar West, who is compiling a second edition of her History of Texas Federated Clubs, will devote a chapter to the work of the first district and will include some valuable history concerning Wichita Falls, which has been gotten together by Mrs. O. T. Gorseline. This history, in the form of a little book, will be distributed at the biennial and at the reception at the Woman's Forum here, to the visitors coming through on a special train which will stop here for several hours.

Among other interesting things, this little booklet will have a sketch of the last battle of the Indians staged against the whites, where the Memorial auditorium now stands. It will bear a picture of the auditorium on its cover.

Mrs. Henry Drougth, Texas biennial chairman, has honored delegates from the first district in many ways. From our immediate clubs she has appointed Mrs J. C. Berney hostess to California, with Mrs. Guy Rogers her assistant and has appointed Mrs. Ben G. Oneal personal hostess to Mrs. J. P. Wright, president of the Colorado State Federation.

The mayor of San Antonio has issued a call to the women of everywhere that they will need no key to enter the city; the gate is wide open with a smile of welcome on its face, but what is worrying me is, the mayor is issuing no passes on which to get to the gate.

Emulating the example set by her noted ancestor, Betsy Ross, of revolutionary days, who achieved fame throughout the ages by designing and making the first United States flag, a small Betsy Ross of the present day is fast becoming famous in school circles and her own home town as a dancer of unusual ability and a performer of acrobatic stunts. Little Miss Ross is only 13 years of age and is the only pupil in the ward schools who will take part in the junior college and high school annual Gym circus at the college Thursday evening. She is taking a correspondence course from the Ned Wayburn school studio, New York city, and will enter the school for professional training when she is 15 years old. Betsy is the youngest daughter of Alec B. Ross of this city.

ZOE BECKLEY'S CORNER

Love That Mocks

"Dear Zoe: Don't tell me to go away and forget. I tried it a month and can't. Last summer I met a man 36 (I am 22) who fell in love with me, showering attentions and gifts and showing in every way he loved me. I found him interesting and came to care deeply. Just at the zenith of the affair I learned he was married and had three children. I dismissed him as any good girl would. He wrote, wired, telephoned, pursued and would not be discouraged. I fled. He came after me. I am tormented because I love him but will not take him because he deceived me in the first place. His wife is willing to divorce him. Help me, please. I have no one else.—Dodger."

ZOE BECKLEY

No, I won't tell you to go away and forget. I will tell you to stay and think it through with calm common sense.

The situation is difficult chiefly because of the wife and children, not because of the deception, serious as that is. In the stress of love and passion, men (and women too) sometimes throw conscience to the winds and do things which are quite incompatible with their usual characters.

Now it may sound strange, even crazy, but if I were you I'd go see the wife. If she is intelligent she can throw more light on the situation than any other living person. She'll give you a line on his true character.

She may have spent long years of mismated unhappiness with this man and long with all her heart to be free from him. If this is so, it might be best—even for the children. I am not one of those who think couples should stay together, however miserable, on account of the children. Children under such circumstances, get the worst of it, poor creatures, and are made unhappy forever, whereas if their parents separated, they would have two chances for happiness against none at all, by living with one parent or the other.

By talking with the man's wife you might, on the other hand, find a woman who still loved her husband devotedly and whose life would be ruined if he left her. This is the real tragedy of such affairs, for it is seldom that both parties are equally minded for divorce.

These things have to be worked out individually. I have known many couples who, having made a tragic first marriage, married a second time into peace, happiness and good citizenship.

Think this thing over well in the light of all the facts, and be certain in your own mind that it is love you both feel and not infatuation. Many couples rush into divorce only to find too late that they still cared for their marriage-partner.

Going Straight at 15

Dear Zoe: I am 15, English, French and Irish. Mother died when I was 8 and this crisis in my life led me to go with the wrong people. Last summer I started to go straight, feeling that some day if I liked a boy well enough I'd want to be the kind of girl he wanted. I met the boy. He found out through others what I used to be. We had a long talk and instead of being angry he said he'd help me. Sometimes I feel a barrier between us but I like him so much that I am afraid I may love him. Could I keep him, under all the circumstances.?—Cherie."

Fifteen—and a past!

Yet clearly Cherie has intelligence and fineness enough to appreciate the value of straightness, clean morals and that honest confession is good for the soul.

Of course there is "a barrier" between her and the boy who "wants to help." The male, I contend, is always more conventional than the female, more modest, more shocked at immorality than the female.

Women from time immemorial, have been a law unto themselves. They are less bound by oath, promise, law, than a man is. When they are good, they are more fanatically good than a man. When bad, they often quite calmly go to limits that would shock a man into a fit. But forgive the digression.

Cherie's problem is how to keep this boy, now that she has "decided to be straight." The only way is to remain so straight that in her own heart and mind Cherie thinks of herself as straight. In other words, she must never think of herself as a bad girl. She must not feel she is sullied and muddied, but that she has made a new, clean, self-respecting and respect-worthy girl of herself. As she thinks so will she be, and so will she make others think of her.

But I fear she will never be without handicap so long as she stays where her past is known and gossiped about. New surroundings and a fresh start seem necessary. The boy friend may want to help her. But how can he with the odds of whispers and gossip against him.

BRECKENRIDGE LIONS ENGAGE 40 ROOMS HERE

BRECKENRIDGE, May 12.—The Breckenridge Lions club has engaged the entire third floor of the Kemp hotel at Wichita Falls, where the Breckenridge delegation will be housed during the state Lions convention there May 21 and 22, it has been announced by Dr. Roger W. Gray, president of the local club, who with H. A. Leaverton, chairman of the convention committee of the Breckenridge club, and A. E. Owens, president of the Throckmorton club, were in Wichita Falls Saturday and Sunday to make arrangements for the parts Breckenridge and Throckmorton will take in the convention.

The 40 rooms contained in the floor leased for the two days will not be sufficient to house all who are due to go from here and Dr. Gray stated that other accommodations will be engaged in the near future.

Breckenridge plans to send a contingent of more than 100 Lions and their wives to the convention, while Throckmorton will send 10 representatives.

While in Wichita Falls Dr. Gray and Mr. Leaverton also made arrangements for the surprise stunt the Breckenridge club plans to stage.

ROAD BUILDING IN U. S. THIS YEAR TO EQUAL HIGH RECORD

There will be approximately $1,500,000,000 spent for roads throughout the country this year and highway construction will at least equal and probably exceed the highest mark recorded in any preceding year, according to Col. W. S. Langford, of the Wichita Valley Auto club. This prediction is was said, is based on information just received from the American Automobile association, with which the club is affiliated.

Col. Langford said that improvement of the state and federal aid highway systems under the supervision of the highway departments of the various states will go forward during the season now opening with a construction of more than 20,000 miles of surfaced roads and about 8,000 miles graded and drained.

Col. Langford was advised by the A. A. A. of road-building prospects after reports of the various states to the bureau of public roads, under which the federal aid program is carried on, had been carefully considered. He continued:

"The state reports also indicate that at least 240,000 miles of the total of 288,000 in the state highway systems will be maintained this year under the supervision of the state highway department, a fact which should insure the traveling public a high degree of road service.

"Funds estimated as available for expenditure during the year by the state highway departments are about 25 per cent greater in total amount than similar estimates indicated at the beginning of last season. It is practically certain that the funds available to all state highway departments for construction and maintenance of roads and bridges will exceed $750,000,000, and local revenues, expendable by county and local authorities, will swell the highway total to well over $1,300,000,000!"

A HOSPITAL IN PIURA, PERU

Piura, Peru.

Dear Dorothy — My sprained ankle refused to respond so we took it to the hospital. It was a surprising experience. We found a large, rambling building, as clean as it could be, and a beautiful patio filled with flowering plants. An order of French nuns is in charge of it and it is similar to any Catholic hospital at home. Dr. Cueva, the surgeon and chief of staff, is a Peruvian and a very kindly man. He understands English but does not speak it.

We made quite a tableaux. The operating room was most modern. It has round corners in the room and was immaculate, but there were no screens at the windows and we entered it from the street. The unbecomingly swollen foot held the center of the stage. Tommy Valdez, our interpreter, relayed numerous unnecessary and embarrassing questions back and forth. A beautiful French nun stood by and a little dark Spanish girl waved the flies off the doctor with a towel. Mr. furnished the background.

The hall and porch were filled with sick people. We ourselves felt deeply grateful that there was a place like this in this section of the world and we realized what it must mean to the people for miles around.

The hospital is limited in the amount of work that can be done because of its lack of funds, but no one can estimate the tremendous good that they have done and will continue to do.

Sincerely,

—MARGUERITE H. WOLFF.

TAMING PARRAKEETS IN ECUADOR

Piura, Peru.

Dear Pick—Marjorie has a bird, a small green parrakeet that is the pet of the family. Parrakeets are wild in Ecuador, the natives catch them and tame them. Chita, as Marjorie has named hers, does not sing but squaks like a parrot and chatters in various tones. His feathers are a brilliant green and his wings are orange colored on the under side. He is a small bird about three times as large as a canary. He is the smartest bird. He will sit on your finger and then start to climb up your arm to his favorite perch which is in the middle of your collar at the back of your neck. From this vantage point he surveys your hair and head with a bright eye, gives it a minute inspection and occasionally makes a grab for what he hopes will be a choice morsel. It is most suggestive.

Chita likes to be with people. He sits on a perch but is not chained there. After he has been alone for long enough he calls for company in a loud voice. If no one pays any attention to him he hops down and goes on a hunt for them. He has a queer pigeon-toed walk that all of us enjoy. When he sees one of us he starts to run toward us and climbs up on one of our shoes and chirps to be taken up. He is never really satisfied until he gets near our head or on top of it, even though his search has not been as fruitful as before he came to live with us, he is still a living proof that hope springs eternal in every living breast.

Each one of us would like to buy several parrakeets and bring them home with us. Only the thought of that long trip with a bird cage deters us, and if we happen to see any like Chita there will probably be seven Americans returning with seven cages. I wonder if you would like us to bring you one?

Much love,

SERVANTS FOR EVEN GOLF IN THIS NATION

Piura, Peru.

Dear Emma—There are two cement tennis courts in town and a few men who use them. A high cane fence surrounds the court and small native boys with baskets, run after the balls and bring them to the players. When golf is played in Peru the same rule holds good. Small boys not only caddie for the players but they make the tee and select the club and hand it to the player. The player does manage to walk from one green to another and make his strokes without assistance.

The theory is that in a country this close to the equator there are certain rays of the sun that are most injurious and that the white man must be very careful of himself until he becomes acclimated. The rule seems to be that the longer one lives in this country the more careful he is of himself, not only out of doors, but inside as well. The cholo boys make ideal servants and they will wait on a person literally hand and foot.

It is hot here, no question about that. About the peculiar rays of sun, there seems to be room for more scientific research along that line. Also, we are newcomers, but we do know that it is not nearly as hot as it is in Texas, where one picks up his own balls and shoes. We wonder if labor was as expensive in Peru as it is in Texas, if the rays of the sun would not lose their potency or else be found to be less harmful in their effect, but again, we admit that we really know nothing about it.

Sincerely,

—MARGUERITE H. WOLFF.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S FIRST PICTURE IN PERU

Piura, Peru.

Dear Miss Hettie—We had been planning to go to a movie. We had heard the bell ring for it when were were in the plaza on many occasions. They ring a bell at three different intervals before the pictures begin.

Yesterday, Senor Pinillos flew to Piura in his aeroplane and the citizens held a benefit performance of local talent at the movie to help him finance a flight to the United States. The tickets cost two solis.

A soli looks like an American dollar but is much heavier because it has so much lead in it. Twenty solis make a load for a strong man to carry. A soli is worth about 39 cents.

The most expensive seats are in the balcony and it is here that the gente fina sit. A rickety stairway which was covered with a worn strip of carpet, was just inside the door and led to this balcony. The ceiling was low and it was large enough for about three rows of frail chairs. The camera was at the back and the noise of the machine and the heat from it further added to this place of distinction.

We sat down in some empty chairs and a soldier ran to us talking and waving his arms. These chairs were reserved for the mayor, who never came. The house was filled. The local talent was fairly entertaining and there was one little girl, dressed in the national costume, who sang and danced in a most charming manner. She captivated all of us. Senor Pinillos read page after page of something in such a low voice that even the Peruvians could not understand what it was all about, but they gave him rapt and polite attention.

Then we saw Charlie Chaplin's first or second picture. It couldn't have been later than that. It was a genuine relic, the long skirts and the long hair dated it beyond question. Charlie has changed much since then. He threw frosting and soiled punch and chased people and fell down numerous times. In spots he was as subtle as ever. The operator ran the film as slowly as possible, until the effect was like that given in a slow-motion picture. The people laughed until they cried and applauded and otherwise showed their pleasure. No wonder Charlie Chaplin is rich when every picture that he ever made is still making money for him.

When they have a feature picture they show half of it one evening and the other half the next night.

It was stifling in the theater. There was no ventilation and the favored balcony was unbearable. During the intermission, pretty young senoritas tagged all the men with small pictures of Senor Pinillos and thereby swelled the fund. Some of our American customs have been adopted by the Peruvians with an amazing speed.

But I don't know when we will go to another movie.

Letters From A Wichitan On Broadway

By Frank Ernest Nicholson

NEW YORK, May 12.—Celebrating the completion of his eight years labor on the gigantic war memorial, which is to be erected on the campus of the University of Texas at Austin, Pompeo Coppini entertained members of the Texas club of New York, at his studio, 210 West 14th street on Sunday afternoon, May 6. Mrs. Charles C. McLendon, from Fort Worth, the newly elected president of the Texas club, acted as hostess.

Members of the club were afforded a view of "Columbia," the central figure of the statue group, which loomed enormously in its plastic clay before being sent to the foundry to be cast in immortal bronze. This piece depicts Columbia leading her army and navy across the sea.

The late Major George W. Littlefield, who served with Terry's Rangers during the Civil war, and who was for many years president of the American National Bank of Austin, set aside $250,000 to be used for this memorial, which when erected will be the largest statue group in the United States. It was his original intention that it should commemorate leaders of the Confederacy, and Major Littlefield cherished this dream for many years. When the world war came, the sculptor persuaded him to change his plan and to make the memorial in three groups—one to the south, one to the Union and the central figure to the students of the University who served in the World war. This idea pleased Mattime, and not until Columbia is cast into bronze will the sculptor see all groups assembled.

The studio was gaily decorated with bluebonnets. A large Texas flag draped with the United States flag served as a background for the exhibition. Miss Waldine Tauch, Mr. Coppini's assistant, and herself a well known sculptor from San Antonio, and Miss Vera Netta, also from San Antonio, did honors at the punch table.

A pleasing musical program was rendered by Katherine Weaver Rose, soprano from Fort Worth, accompanied by Jewel Carey from San Antonio, and Guy Richardson Pitner, pianist, Fort Worth.

High spots of the exhibition were recorded by motion picture cameramen for the International News Reel and the Paramount News.

Among the many Texans I saw were, the sculptor and Mrs. Coppini from San Antonio; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henri Fischer from Austin and San Antonio; Mrs. R. H. Griffith and daughter, Mary Nell from Austin; Clyde MacGowan, Mrs. W. A. Bonner, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Ledbetter, T. J. Britton, Zona Mae Griswold, L. L. Pendegras from Dallas; Nina Mills Elliott from Mineral Wells; Mrs. W. H. Linderman, Mrs. Short Willis, Miss Norma Sterling, R. D. Roach, Katheryn Allen Lively, from Houston; Mrs. Adelia Keys, Foster, Waco; Mrs. R. W. Lyle, Misses Marjorie and Caroline Burton from Galveston; Loren Stone, Wichita Falls; Helen M. Brown, Texarkana; Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Mayo, College Station; William Lang, Utopia; Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Boyd, Fairfield; Mr. and Mrs. George Kirby Smith, Calvert; Lillian McCelvey, Temple; Miss Henrietta Tabor, Walnut Springs; Mr. Orlando R. Von Bonnewitz, Mrs. A. L. Norfleet, Catherine and Leeper Norfleet, Sherman; Annie Laurie Crain, Pamela Williams and Edward Seay, Denison; Mrs. Lalla Pickett, Commerce; Minnie Dea Coffin, Anna Mae Hopkins, Amy Boyd Chamberlin, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Finney, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rose, Mrs. R. B. West, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Jones, Fort Worth; Frank La Croix, J. M. Moorehead, Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell, Madame Colombati, Mr. and Mrs. Jor Littlefield, and until the time of his death six years ago, he followed the progress of the memorial with an active interest. Now, the Herculean task is done, and before many months the entire memorial will be shipped to Austin. It is so large that not more than one unit can be placed in a studio at a Harold Morris, Ellerbe Wood and Miss Russell Hughes, known in the theatrical world as La Meri, from San Antonio.

Dr. and Mrs. Silas Fry, formerly of Denton, left New York Friday for Little Rock, Ark., to attend the annual convention of the Sons of Confederate Veterans and the reunion of United Confederate Veterans. Dr. Fry was commander of the New York camp of "Sons" for three years and is now the commander of the eastern division. When congress appointed a United States commission for the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, which celebration is to take place in 1932, the Sons of Confederate Veterans passed a set of resolutions giving its endorsement and its support to the commission, and appointed Dr. Fry as a delegate to submit these resolutions for ratification and action by the convention of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, and also for action by the United Confederate Veterans at their reunion in Little Rock. Mrs. Fry was elected honorary member of the "Sons" and will serve at the convention as chaperon on the sponsorial staff for the eastern division. Dr. and Mrs. Fry will visit their old home in Denton before returning to New York.

April Largest Sales Month That Auto Factories Have Experienced; Heads of Industry Optimistic Over the Future

By RAY PRIEST
Universal Service Automobile Editor

NEW YORK, May 12.—April appears to have been the largest sales month that automobile factories have enjoyed.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce headquarters here reports that there were 370,000 cars shipped by its member companies during the month. This is eight per cent more cars than were shipped the same month a year ago by member companies and eight per cent less than were shipped in March.

Ford, not being a member of the chamber and his rapidly increasing production during the past month, it is believed, more than made up the eight per cent loss over March, which was the largest month in automobile history.

It is said that business seems to be good everywhere and in some places is on the upgrade.

Lincoln sales for April were 196 cars, which is 2 per cent higher than during the same month last year and indicative of the general increase throughout the eastern section of the country.

Henry Ford on his return from England last week said he was pleased to hear that automobile sales in general were good and added that he felt "cocksure" that they were going to continue.

Harvey Firestone, who met Ford's boat at the dock, to greet his son, Harvey Jr., predicted that the rubber situation was well in hand and that tire prices were bound to come down.

It is expected that a new Chevrolet plant will be started soon in the Southwest. The constantly increasing demand for cars in this price class was somewhat relieved by the start of production a few weeks ago in the new Atlanta plant, it was said.

Other indications seen here that automobile manufacturers were riding on the crest of American prosperity were increasing prices of stocks of the various companies. Traders here point out that motor stock prices last week again showed an increase in value over previous weeks.

American Legion Will Bring Largest Flying Circus in World Here July 4 To Thrill Holiday Crowd With Stunts

On July 4th, the largest and most complete air circus in the country will perform for the benefit of the American Legion. This air circus is being sponsored by Pat Carrigan post here.

A demonstration of the progress of aviation since the war, as well as a benefit performance will be made. The circus has only new-production ships, piloted by licensed pilots, who have been granted their permit to fly through the aeronautical branch of the department of commerce. The pilots are required to undergo a strenuous test every 90 days, which eliminates those not capable of the highest aerial skill.

One of the features of the air circus is a parachute jump made from a ship flying upside down. Another feature is a man jumping from a ship flying 60 miles an hour 20 feet from the ground, without the aid of a parachute. This feat has been successfully performed only by "Shorty" Raddick, who is connected with the show. Mr. Raddick has been called the "most daring yet exacting" stunt man in the history of aviation.

Merrel Brock, at one time the world's youngest stunt flyer, will be on hand to thrill the spectators with his death defying stunts. Mr. Brock has participated in air circuses throughout the southwest and is recognized for his aerial skill.

In addition to Mr. Brock in the acrobatic division there are 10 other world famous fliers, who have been connected with this show since the three leading flying circuses consolidated under the name of the International Flying circus.

Wichita Falls is very fortunate in securing this aerial show in competition with such cities as Houston, San Antonio, and El Paso, but it was secured through the efforts of W. E. George, J. F. Friberg and O. T. Alles, of the Wichita Falls Legion post. Judging from the attendance of previous cities, many thousands are expected to attend the full day performance.

LOS ANGELES CAPITALIST HELD IN POISON DEATH

LOS ANGELES, May 12. (UP)—Charged with the poison murder of his wife, who died February 3, J. W. Randolph, wealthy Hollywood broker, was arraigned in municipal court here today. His preliminary hearing was set for May 17. Randolph charged his arrest was instigated by relatives of the dead woman to obtain a share of her $200,000 estate, which is in probate court.

Long Hair Surrenders To Comfortable Bobs As Hot Summer Begins

By ELEANOR FLEMING

The change of the mercury to a new and altitudious position means a change in a great many things.

The gas man swears and begins thinking of economy plans for the next few months; the ice man rubs his hands in glee and meditates upon the thousands of tons of ice that will be consumed by Wichita Falls people during the summer. The movies lose a great number of their regular customers to the swimming pools. Hamburgers lose in popularity, while root beer stands can hardly serve the public fast enough.

But one change that few would suspect has just been revealed by Wichita Falls barbers. Since the first hot day of the season, barbers have had a more prosperous outlook.

"The bob is doomed" was the opinion expressed by style leaders a few months ago. "It is only a fad, and will follow the pompadoud, the classic psyche knot, the puffs and whirls, and all the other styles of agest past."

Immediately, the hairpin manufacturers have had a revival of business, while barbers sat, shears in hand, and waited for customers who had forsaken them in the hope of acquiring a few more inches of hirsute adornment.

There were weeks of "the awkward stage"; weeks of patient waiting on the part of those who had to suffer those straggling locks that were too long to merely hang down, and too short to pin back; weeks of encouragement of the "half inch per month," until finally, women triumphantly gained that coveted place where a knot could be made at the back of the neck without the addition of any of that hair which had been cut a few years ago and which was kept in the bureau drawer for just such an emergency.

Taste of Freedom

But the pendulum didn't swing very far back, say local barbers. "About half of my customers are those who have let their hair grow all winter and are disgusted with it now," says one veteran barber of the city, who specializes on bobbing women's and children's hair. "By the time the weather gets really hot, there won't be any long-haired women left. They've had a taste of the comfort and freedom that the bob affords, and they'll never be satisfied with long hair again."

Another Wichita Falls barber who recently established a woman's bob shop here and who had specialized in bobs for several years before coming here, is perfectly satisfied as to the permanence of short hair. "There is no danger of having many long-haired women in Wichita Falls this summer," he says. "Already I find that sometimes a majority of my customers in a single day are women who have just gotten their hair long enough to do up gracefully, but have come back to the bob." According to this barber, the fact that the new spring hats are still in bobbed-hair sizes has something to do with the question.

Most women have a pretty good idea of the way they want their hair cut, but it isn't the right idea, according to one of the barbers who spends all his time in shearing members of the fair sex. "It's a rare case when a woman leaves it up to the barber," he says. "She usually tells him just exactly how she wants it, no matter whether that style is becoming to her or not, and expects to get it cut that way." Sometimes a woman who is "fair, fat and forty" will admire the shingled, windblown bob of a slim brunette youngster and tell the poor barber "to make mine look just like hers."

Another barber, or "bobber," finds that those women who have let their hair grow usually leave it up to him as to the type of haircut most becoming. "When I had it cut before, I didn't like it. Maybe you can think of some way I'd like better," is a common saying. Much of the dissatisfaction with bobs, he says, is due to the fact that many women haven't the courage to have enough cut off to make the most becoming style. "They are coming to it, however," he says. "At first they didn't want it shingled in the back, but they all do now. It won't be long before they will let the barber cut off as much as is needed for the particular style of bob that will be most becoming."

Bobs are not classified as to types. That is the consensus of opinion among all barbers. "Bobs are distinctly individual," says one. "Each woman may have the style bob which brings out her personality the best," avers another—"but each woman doesn't because she's afraid to cut off too much," he added.

And so, the "ill wind" that may harm hairpin and hair tonic manufacturers is doing the barbers good. Specialists in haircuts may rest assured that business is good for the summer.

COLONEL LANGFORD DISCUSSES A. A. A. MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The American Automobile association through its 1046 clubs, represented locally by the Wichita Valley Auto Club, Ins., of which Col. W. S. Langford is president, has opened a great cooperative national advertising campaign and the greatest membership drive since the war and Red Cross days.

In this connection Col. Langford issued the following statement Saturday: "And what value has a unified appeal anyway? Do you know that if you went over the Santa Fe lines from Chicago to San Francisco you would travel over 141 separate railroads? Hard to realize, isn't it, that the Pennsylvania railroad is made up of 600 individual companies? Go down to Florida over the famous Atlantic Coast Line and you travel over what was once 99 individual railroad systems. The Burlington railroad is made up of 195 companies, the Louisville and Nashville railroad comprises 129 roads and the wonderful New York Central system is made up of 272 individual lines.

"What happened to make these roads great? Unified system, cooperative buying, interlocking facilities, a united appeal, service.

"Compare those systems with the little roads, the individual companies that are struggling along without being a part of a great system. There are 600 of these unmerged lines today, and it may surprise you to know that nearly half of those lines earn less than our income last year and nearly one-half made smaller profits than our surplus for 1927.

"That great transportation system on rubber tires, the American Automobile association, will develop magnificently because our clubs are developing magnificently and it is a case of one for all and all for one.

"The sales forces of all the clubs are ready for a five months drive for new members in which we think will be one of the greatest automobile years this country has ever seen."

AUCTION BRIDGE

The International Authority

This is the seventh of a series of articles giving answers to the bridge questions most frequently asked. The questions selected to be answered are typical of hundreds which come to me in the mail, and I have chosen them because of the general interest in them indicated by their frequent repetition.

Taking Out Partner's No Trump

Many a time have I answered "no" to the absurd but oft repeated question: "Should you always take out your partner's no trump?" But the question I am answering today is one asked by a more intelligent type of correspondent and relates to a situation in which there might be legitimate room for doubt.

♠10-X-X-X
♣A-Q-J-X

Question: Score love-all, dealer (South) one no trump, West pass; what should North say, holding the above hand?

Answer: North should pass. The singleton heart would suggest a "rescue" to some players; but no rescue is needed and any possible bid would be deceptive. Two diamonds or clubs (being minors) would mean a bust; three of either would mean strength (which is present); but it also would mean at least five and probably six or more cards of the suit, whereas North's minors have only four.

As to the need for a rescue: Four spades headed by ten preclude any serious danger from that suit; and it is most improbable, with so much strength in the North hand, that South has bid no trump with the hearts unstopped. A worthless singleton in the hand of a partner of a no trumper is not the menace that it is in the hand of the player who is considering whether or not to bid no trump originally.

Answering the Informatory Double

Six questions and answers pretty well cover all the perplexities under this head that my correspondence has uncovered. The three hands shown below are held by East who is called upon to answer an informatory double made by West. In each hand West doubles (1) South's one spade, (2) South's one no trump and North passes; so there are two separate questions for each hand.

♦K-J-X-X	K-J-X-X	X-X-X
♣K-X-X-X	K-J-X	K-X-X-X

Answer (1): Hand A. South one spade, West double: East should bid two hearts. A four-card major is always a better answer than a four-card minor to an informatory double.

Answer (2): Hand A. South one no trump, West double: East should bid two hearts or make a "business pass." The pass probably would produce a big penalty, but the heart bid is safer and sounder.

Answer (3): Hand B. South one spade, West double, East should bid two hearts, having even better reason than in Answer (1).

Answer (4): Hand B. South one no trump, west double; east should bid two hearts if it is the rubber game. The strength of East's hand makes a large penalty so probable that a business pass would be better than two hearts, except on the rubber game (which carries a bonus of 250) where a heart bid and a practically sure game should be the selection.

Answer (5): Hand C. South one spade, West double; East should bid two hearts, selecting a weak four-card major in preference even to a strong five-card minor.

Answer (6): Hand C. South one no trump, West double; East should bid two hearts. Same reasoning as in answer (5).

The Informatory Double

Many players who understand the informatory double and how to answer it are nonplussed when it is followed by a redouble. Should they answer the double jus. the same, or does the redouble relieve them of responsibility? We are supposing that dealer (South) bids one no trump, West doubles and North redoubles. If these declarations have all been sound, it needs all the high cards in the pack to justify them and East must be like a prophet in his own country—without honor (or nearly so). Following are three typical holdings such as would be found in the East hand after a no trump bid, a double and a redouble; and below them will be found East's proper declaration.

♥X-X-X	X-X-X	X-X-X
♦X-X-X	X-X-X	X-X
♣10-X-X-X	K-10-X-X	X-X-X

Answer A. East should pass. The pass under such circumstances does not show satisfaction with the redouble; that is impossible because there can not be more than three strong hands. East has no outstanding suit which makes it probable that his selection would turn out better than one which would be made by West on the basis of West's cards; even the club suit, although a card longer than the others and a shade stronger, does not hold out such probability and East should pass.

Answer B. Here the club suit, although no longer than in A, is decidedly stronger and East should bid two clubs.

Answer C: East should bid two spades without any hesitation; any five-card suit, especially a major, should be bid under the circumstances rather than leave the selection to West, and it is lucky for East and West that East has such a suit.

Study Shows Commerce So Effected by Traffic That Regulation of Parking Should Be Prescribed Only Cautiously

By WILLIAM ULMAN

In the discussion of parking restrictions one hears a great deal about equalizing the use of streets for all motorists and considerable talk about the interference of certain methods of parking with the moving traffic stream, but less about business in which the parked automobile is such an important factor.

Is it because business itself has been inarticulate on the subject, or is it the result of the willingness of the business man to be sacrificed for an imagined public welfare? Probably neither is the case, and certainly the latter should not be countenanced, for while sacrificial victims may be admirable in the extreme, they have places in the community which are too essential to part with them.

Business, it would seem, has good ground for claiming that it has been overlooked in determining when, how long and where automobiles shall be allowed to park. And if business has been shunted aside in the attempts to find a ready solution to an ever-present problem, it is safe to say the reason has been that attention was directed to the cars at or beyond the curb and not at what is across the sidewalk.

There has long existed the need for a thorough going study of the parking problem in its direct relation to business. Such a study has been undertaken by John Ihlder, manager of the civic development department of the United States chamber of comerce, and it has made out a strong case for business in determining how automobile parking shall be handled in commercial districts.

Mr. Ihlder's discussion proceeds from the premises "that trade is essential to a city, that traffic is essential to trade and that our task is to find means of meeting adequately the traffic needs of trade." It likewise at the outset cautions against any assumption that there is a solution which is universally applicable, pointing out that "each city has characteristics of its own."

And here is touched a point on which more than one municipality has gone wrong. What is a remedy in one city may aggravate the malady in another. As the United States Chamber of Commerce findings indicate, no city should blindly imitate any other. For Los Angeles to prohibit parking in its central business district because Chicago has banned it in the Loop is to assume too great uniformity of conditions. Los Angeles tried out a ban on parking for a brief period, it is stated, and the president of the Downtown Business Men's association of that city is authority for the statement that the central business district was "like a graveyard."

In business, it is pointed out, the essential person is the customer who, if his convenience and preferences are interfered with, will take his custom elsewhere as opportunity permits. Attention is drawn to the difference between the type of business done in different cities, and in this is given the indication as to why the parking problem at once assumes a different aspect. If in one city the essential customer lives in a nearby residential district or adjacent suburb, business must look to his convenience much more than it must where important trade is brought in by customers who arrive by train.

Progressing further, the study indicates that "a traffic system must take account of both point of origin and destination." Development of outlying business districts, it is indicated, not only removes trade from the central business section but modifies it to a considerable extent. "Remove the bulk of trade in household staples to outlying sub-centers," says Mr. Ihlder, "and the remaining downtown shops tend to specialize in quality goods, to cater to a specialized clientele." He further points out that progress in thought on parking has revealed that earlier attempts to restrict it being based on superficial observation, merely speeded up traffic, with the result that through movement was invited, thereby interfering with local business and contributing nothing to it.

The study lays down some interesting generalizations. It emphasizes that the principal purpose of a street is to provide access to abutting property, that traffic needs terminals as well as rights-of-way, that an even flow of traffic is better than great speed between stop signals, and that the character and volume of traffic is affected by the location, bulk, and use of buildings.

Unless vehicles can stop at or within a practicable distance from the destinations of their passengers or of their cargoes, says Mr. Ihlder, abutting property becomes inaccessible, and business diminishes. And here is the crux of the parking question. The method of parking cars, angle or ranking, and the time a car is allowed to stand will be found to have direct affect on the chief purpose of traffic, to reach a given destination with maximum convenience. Business, accordingly suffers or benefits in proportion to the convenience which regulations allow.

A distinction in types of business is made by classing them as administrative and retail, since this expresses with somewhat accuracy the difference in the traffic needs of these classes. Whereas traffic is of minor importance to an organization whose customers seldom if ever visit it, it is of great consequence to a retail business which depends on nearby residence district patronage. The conclusion drawn is that to provide facilities for the automobile shopper means not only increasing street capacity but making present street capacity available by removing traffic which makes no contribution to the business district, and by regulating the location, bulk and use of buildings.

Chicago is cited as an instance of achievement of this latter purpose. When Chicago found that a produce market bordering on a retail district, railroad and steamboat freight terminals nearly encircling it and transferring goods by drays and trucks through streets lined with retail establishments, it moved its produce market and is relocating some of its freight terminals, even going so far as to propose a new steamboat harbor removed several miles.

But, it is stated, this is only an easy beginning of the solution. Department stores, hotels, theaters, office buildings, and banks require truck and passenger vehicle service, and in this way block complete segregation of vehicular types. There are several ways to provide more street space. Streets may be widened or double-decked, but these measures will depend upon the cost in proportion to the benefit conferred. Concerning the regulation of bulk of buildings, there is this enlightening comment:

"To secure good results it probably will be necessary to supplement regulation of bulk of buildings with some regulations of their use. The use of a building not only affects the size of its popilation but also that population's requirements for street traffic facilities. Surveys in several cities have produced figures bearing on this point. They indicate that department store traffic is 50.1 times the personnel of the store, that office building traffic is 6.6 times the office building occupancy. They also indicate that certain kinds of buildings, theaters, for example, discharge their populations upon the street during a very brief period, while others distribute their street traffic demands more evenly and over much longer periods."

Summarizing this portion of the discussion, it is stated that there are definite economic advantages to a large concern in having all its employes in one building or group of buildings, such concentration reducing street traffic during business hours.

Finally specific remedies are prescribed as follows:

1. Make a traffic survey, including a count of customers as well as vehicles.

2. Determine the most important traffic needs of the central business district and list them in order of importance.

3. See whether less important traffic interferes with that which is of greater importance and whether it can be diverted or confined to out-of-business hours.

4. Bring about adoption of a traffic ordinance.

5. Study effect of buildings of varying bulk and use on street traffic as a guide to future building plans.

6. Consider the value of city plan or zoning regulations, if none exists, as a means of securing permanent improvement in traffic conditions.

This study undertaken by the United States Chamber of Commerce serves to throw considerable new light on the parking problem as it affects the community's all important component—business. Its appealing characteristic is its advice to proceed namely and on the basis of facts. Bitter experience has proced this course to be superior in that it leaves little to be undone.

FIRE CHIEF PURCHASES AUBURN 8-88 SPORT SEDAN

Fire Chief J. L. McClure is the latest addition to the ranks of Wichita Falls Auburn car owners. The chief bought a new Auburn 8-88 sport sedan last week and presented it to Mrs. Chief. According to officials of the Parmenter Motor company, the new sport sedan is one of the classiest jobs in the Auburn line and it struck the chief's eye instantly. It is a fawn colored car and the last word in comfort and good looks. The photograph shows Chief McClure standing by the car with Mrs. McClure sitting in the driver's seat.

Another new Auburn creation received by the Parmenter company is the new 8-88 convertible roadster which combines all features of the roadster with those of a coupe. It is being shown at the company's salesrooms on Scott avenue this week for the first time.

business employers and boarding-house keepers. You may run into that same thing, anywhere. Many husbands are unfair financially, fretting their thrifty wives with a constant suspicion of waste and deceit on this score. But what of it. If you divorce him, he'll have even more control of his income, and you will have to begin to become self-supporting—which you can just as well do married as divorced.

Many couples are appalled by a sort of apathy, a deadness, that creeps into married life at after the 8th, or the 10th or the 12th year. It isn't that they hate each other, or wish each other any harm—it's just that it all seems so deadly dull. They don't think alike, they don't enjoy the same things any more.

The woman who feels this is really to blame, herself. She has lost interest in life, and consequently the man has lost interest in her. Healthy, books, walks, music, gardens, babies, cooking, any sort of a job, charities, athletics, will all help to cure her; let her make her choice. No disruption of present conditions, and above all, no other man, will help her. After three or four upset and uncertain years, when the first glamor of being his wife is over, she will find conditions just where they are today.

I always feel sorry for a woman who is simple enough to think that her chance for happiness and her opportunity to develop into real life depend upon a man she tells you rapturously she knows as charming in the drawing room, such a thrilling when you meet him downtown in a bookshop, and able to write the dearest things on cards, when he sends her flowers!

BROODING TURKEYS INVOLVES MORE CARE THAN FOR CHICKENS

Many Points to Be Watched In Order to Bring Poults Through

PARASITES ONE OF PRINCIPAL DANGERS

Clean Range and Plenty of It One of Most Important Factors for Turkey Flock

By D. H. REID
Department of Poultry Husbandry
Texas A. and M. College

Young turkeys seem to be the hardest class of young poultry to raise.

The popular method of brooding is to use chicken hens to brood the first clutches and the old turkey hens to brood the second clutch. Right here, I want to say that it seldom pays to have turkeys lay a third clutch of eggs, as the young birds have to be kept too late in the year to secure the best of prices; also the late birds seem to be more subject to disease, than earlier birds.

Brooding with chicken hens has three disadvantages. Hens are carriers of blackhead, the most fatal disease known to turkeys. Hens that look healthy and seem to be absolutely clean, may pass along blackhead to young turkeys and lose their entire brood.

Hens are great carriers of parasites, lice, mites, bluebugs and worst of all, intestinal worms. Unfortunately young turkeys are very susceptible to all these parasites and fall easy prey to any or all of them.

Chicken hens like to remain close around the farm buildings, so do not give young turkeys a chance to range widely and pick up a large percentage of their living on clean disease free ground. If chicken hens are to be used as foster mothers for the young turkeys it is well to paint the inside of the nests and all parts of the inside of the building in which the turkey eggs are to be incubated, with carbolineum, several days before the incubation starts. Care must be taken not to get much carbolineum on the eggs or it will spoil the hatch. As soon as the hen starts sitting on the turkey eggs dust her with a good louse powder and repeat the dusting at the end of two weeks. Sprinkle the nest and eggs with warm water about once in four days up till the twenty-sixth day, then keep the hen quiet as long as possible after the eggs hatch. The hen and young turkeys should be placed in a movable coop allowing the young turkeys grassy run at least three by six feet, and the position of coop and run changed each day. Give the young turkeys their first solid food when they are about three days of age, but they should have clean water to drink at the end of the second day, especially in hot weather.

The first feed given young turkeys may come from a variety of sources, dry bread crumbs or yellow corn meal mixed with crumbled hard boiled eggs makes a good home ration. Commercial baby chick starter is very satisfactory.

These feeds should be fed snaring and in absolutely clean dishes, in fact, clean grassy runs, clean coops and clean feed and water are the things that count most when raising young turkeys with foster mothers. It is well to put the turkey coop as far away from the chicken yard and house as possible in order to give the young turkeys a clean range. It also pays to keep the young turkeys shut up on cold, wet mornings until they have become well feathered. When the turkeys are two weeks old allow them to range freely in dry weather but continue to move their coop each day. Their feed can now be changed to consist mostly of cracked grain, fed three times per day. If there are any cold, rainy days, keep the young turkeys in the coop but supply them with plenty of clean green grass, besides their regular feed. As soon as the young turkeys are feathered and able to fly a roost should be placed near the brooding coop and at least five feet from the ground to enable the young turkeys to get up out of the way of night prowling animals. A small feed of grain and clean drinking water is all the birds should get from this time till they are ready to be fattened in the fall.

WHEAT PROSPECTS ARE EXCELLENT IN FRIBERG VICINITY

FRIBERG, Texas May 12.—Wheat growers around Friberg are rejoicing over the recent rain that fell pretty generally over the entire district and will do much to enhance the prospects of this years crop. Wheat is in the head and on many farms, due to continued dry spell is very short and doubtless some fields will have to be harvested with headers. However some of the foremost wheat farmers are very optimistic and one has expressed the belief that with several good rains in the next few weeks a majority of the best wheat will make an average yield of 20 bushels per acre.

Further Discussion of Value of Various Dairy Cattle Feed Shows Wide Range in Return to Dairyman

By A. L. DARNELL
Texas A. & M. College
(Editor's Note.—This is the second of a series of articles on dairying written for the Sunday Times and Record News by Professor Darnell.)

This article continues the discussion of feedstuffs, begun in a previous issue.

Corn gluten meal is that part of commercial shelled corn that remains after the separation of the larger part of the starch, the germ, and the bran, by the processes employed in the manufacture of corn starch and glucose. It may or may not contain corn solubles.

As previously stated, corn bran is combined with corn gluten meal and sold on the market as corn gluten feed. There is but very little corn gluten meal sold on the market as such. It is as rich as linseed meal in protein, is a very heavy feed, and should be fed in small quantities with some other grain that is rather bulky. When so fed, it makes an excellent grain in the ration.

Corn Gluten Feed—The definition of corn gluten feed is the same as that for corn gluten meal, with the exception of the fact that the corn bran remains with the meal. It contains about twice as much digestible crude protein as wheat bran, and furnishes considerably more total digestible nutrients. However, it contains about two-thirds as much digestible protein as cottonseed meal or linseed meal. It is very palatable and makes an excellent dairy feed in combination with other products.

Hominy feed, hominy meal, or hominy chops is the kiln-dried mixture of the mill run bran coating, the mill run germ, with or without a partial extraction of the oil and a part of the starchy portion of the white corn kernel obtained in the manufacture of hominy, hominy grits, and corn meal by the degenerating process. This feed is very high in digestible carbohydrates. It is quite similar to corn meal in composition and compares favorably with this product, in feeding value, and keeps much better in storage.

Milo meal is the whole milo grain ground fine and will take the place of corn meal in the dairy ration. It is worth only five to ten per cent less than corn meal for milk production.

Kafir meal is the whole kafir ground fine and is equal to milo meal as a dairy feed.

Milo head meal is the whole head and grain finely ground together. This meal may be substituted for corn and cob meal in the ration of 1.1 pound of the former for each pound of the latter.

Kafir head meal is equivalent to the milo head meal for milk production and may be substituted for that meal pound for pound. Likewise, feterita and hegari meals, similar to the milo and kafir meals, may be substituted for these products. These concentrates, when fed with prairie, timothy or sorghum hay or sorghum or corn fodder, will tend to dry up the cows, as would be expected from such an unbalanced ration. They should be fed with legume hay or in a grain combination of high protein concentrates such as cottonseed meal and wheat bran.

Sweet sorghum seed, such as orange, amber, and red-top do not make a very good feed for the dairy ration and these seeds are more astringent and constipating, and, if fed at all, they should form only a small part of the concentrates of the ration.

Dried Beet Pulp—This is a by-product of the manufacture of beet sugar. It is a bulky carbonaceous laxative concentrate and is becoming very popular with dairymen feeding cows for high production. This feed has been found to equal corn meal when fed with a basal ration of wheat, bran, cottonseed meal and mixed hay. Where silage or other succulent feeds are not available, beet pulp is an excellent substitute, though it is much more expensive than silage. When being used as a substitute for silage, dried beet pulp should be moistened, preferably with sweetened water.

Oats and Oat By-Products—The whole oat rolled or ground makes one of the best feeds available for dairy cows. Although ground oats contain 21 per cent less total digestible nutrients than corn meal, it has been found to equal corn meal for a dairy feed, when fed with bran and hay. The by-products of oats, such as oat middlings, oat clippings, and oat hulls, are not usually found on the market. They are used most extensively in the manufacture of proprietary feeds. They are not very valuable in the dairy ration.

Barley and Barley By-Products—Ground barley has been found to equal corn meal in the dairy ration and makes an excellent substitute for corn meal, milo meal, or ground oats. The by-products of barley are usually high in price and are very seldom used in the dairy cow's ration in Texas. However, many of these by-products, such as malt sprouts and brewers' grain are excellent dairy feeds.

Cottonseed and Cottonseed Products—There is but very little cottonseed fed now as nearly all of it is used in the manufacture of oil. The cottonseed contain too much oil to be profitably fed in the dairy ration. The farmer having cottonseed available should exchange it for cottonseed meal.

Cottonseed Meal—This is one of the richest and most nitrogenous feeds available and in Texas is the most economical source of protein. Besides being rich in protein, cottonseed meal contains a relatively large amount of fat and ash which also add to its value. This feed may safely make up 25 per cent of the grain ration. When fed in this proportion, no ill effects are likely to be encountered. Cottonseed meal is sold according to the grades—choice, prime and good—. These grades should be considered when purchasing this product.

Cottonseed Hulls—These are extremely high in fiber and very low in digestible nutrients. They make a fair roughage for dry cows and cows producing a small amount of milk, but cannot replace a good grass hay for relatively high producing cows.

Cottonseed Feed—This meal usually contains a high percentage of hulls and cannot be advocated as a feed for dairy cows. It is better to buy the meal and hulls and feed them in the proportion desired.

Rice and Its By-Products—Damaged rice is sometimes fed to cattle but the quantity available is small. Rice hulls should never be fed to dairy cows for they are not only low in digestible nutrients but usually contain a large amount of sandy material which causes great irritation in the digestive tract and may even result in death.

Rice bran, when of a high grade, contains about 12 per cent crude protein or seven per cent digestible crude protein. It is not equivalent in this respect to wheat bran but it contains as much total digestible nutrients as this product. Rice bran, when fresh, makes a fairly good substitute for wheat bran or corn.

Linseed Oil Meal—There are two kinds of linseed oil meal; namely, new process and old process. New process oil meal contains less fat and total digestible nutrients but more protein than old process meal. Linseed oil meal is one of the best feeds for dairy cows. It is laxative and cooling in effect upon the animal's system, and it is often advisable to use it for animals that are off feed, in low condition, or being prepared for freshening or advanced registry tests.

Peanut By-Products—The use of peanut meal as a dairy feed is increasing. The meal from hulled nuts contains over 40 per cent digestible crude protein and differs but little from choice cottonseed meal, with the exception of not being as palatable. The meal from the unshelled nuts contains about 23 per cent crude fiber and 20 per cent of digestible crude protein and, consequently, is of much less value. The peanut by-products tend to produce a soft, tallowy butter and should not make up but a small percentage of the total grain ration.

Wheat By-Products—Wheat bran is the most important of the wheat by-products in the dairy cow's ration. Bran is light and bulky, is extremely palatable, and has a beneficial and cooling effect on cows. It has a fair amount of digestible nutrients, though it has a relatively high content of crude fiber and the ash content is also high and is rich in phosphates, although poor in lime.

Wheat Middlings—Standard wheat middlings, or shorts, the higher in protein than wheat bran, should seldom be fed to dairy cows. They are not palatable and there are other more economical sources of protein. If they are fed at all, they should be fed in small quantities.

Proprietary Feeds—The feeder of livestock is frequently tempted to avoid the labor of choosing and mixing the concentrates. Consequently, many proprietary feeds are on the market and a number of these have nothing to recommend them but a high sounding name and appetizing odor. The prices usually asked for such feeds are exorbitant and much out of proportion to their real value, based on the digestible nutrients contained.

All proprietary feeds should be bought on the basis of the amount of total digestible nutrients they contain and not on the claims made for them. A statement of the constituents from which the mixture is made should be obtained as this is a good indication as to the value of the feed. The proprietary feeds found on the market vary very widely in nature and value. When these feeds are manufactured from high quality concentrates of the well known grains or factory by-products they may be bought safely and this is particularly true if the price paid for them is in proportion to their content of digestible nutrients.

Stock Tonics—The majority of the so-called conditioners, or stock tonics, consist of inert material or small amounts of feeds to which have been added cheap ingredients. These ingredients consist of common salt, sulphur, charcoal, alum, copperas, epsom or Glauber's salts, with occasionally aromatic substances as fennel, fenugreek and ginger. They are usually harmless. They are claimed by the manufacturers to cure all diseases when, as a matter of fact, they have very little curative value. They should not be purchased at any price for the simple reason that a cow in good health needs no tonic and a cow that is sick can be treated by a cheaper and more effective method.

Roughages.

The roughages, such as silage, hay, etc., used in feeding dairy cattle as well as other livestock on the farm should, as a rule, be homegrown. The economical production of dairy products on the farm is as largely dependent upon homegrown feeds as any other factor in milk production. There is no more economical means of marketing the roughages on the farm than through the dairy cow.

Roughages are divided into two classes according to their water content. The succulent roughages are the most valuable of the two classes for milk production. They are such feeds as green pasture, silage, roots, tubers and soiling crops. The dry roughages are such as hays, straw, fodder, and stover.

Pasture: Good green pasture is possibly the most valuable of all succulent roughages. When pasture is sufficiently abundant to furnish a large part of the feed supply for five or six months of the year, it forms the cheapest feed for the dairy herd. However, even good pasture must be supplemented with grain for cows producing a very large amount of milk.

A pasture crop rotation should be practiced on every dairy farm in Texas. Native grasses cannot be depended upon altogether. Oats barley, and wheat planted in early fall will furnish excellent pasture for the winter months. In most sections of Texas there is sufficient native pasture grass and clovers to supply pasture for March, April and May. However, some of the winter oats pasture should be plowed under in the early part of March and Sudan grass planted, preferably in 18 or 24-inch rows for summer pasture. In May a sufficient acreage should be planted to cowpeas to supplant the sudan grass for summer pasture. This sort of pasture crop rotation furnishes green pasture at least nine month in the year, provided one and a half to three acres are allowed for each cow. This acreage depends largely upon the type of soil, rainfall and drainage.

Soiling Crop: The crops outlined for pasture may also be used for soiling crops. In this case it would be necessary to have only about one-half acre per cow. However, more labor is necessary in practicing a soiling system. It is usually advisable only when there is a limited amount of land on which to produce feed for the dairy herd.

Silage: In Texas the sorghums, both saccharine and non-saccharine are as much of a standard silage crop as corn is in the corn belt. This is rightfully so, because these crops are produced at less cost per acre, or ton, in Texas than is corn or any other good silage crop. The value of sorghum silage for milk production compares very well with corn silage. The corn silage has about three per cent more value. Sorghum for silage should be planted in April in most parts of Texas. It should be ready to harvest in the dough stage sometime in July and if there is a fair summer rainfall, a second cutting may be had from the same field early in October.

Corn is possibly the second most important silage crop grown in Texas and where the yield per acre is equal to sorghum it is more desirable than sorghum as a silage crop.

In addition to these crops there are others, such as prickly pear and sunflowers used for silage in Texas. However, they do not compare favorably with sorghum or corn for silage purposes.

Roots and Tubers: Root crops are not grown very extensively in Texas as a dairy feed. However, pound for pound of dry matter, roots have about the same feeding value as corn silage and furnish an excellent succulent feed for the small dairy herd where there is not a sufficient number of cows to warrant building a silo. Also, where cows are being run on official test and large records are wanted, it is often advisable to have a few roots, as their palatability and succulence will increase the flow of milk. Sugar beets, mangels, and rutabagas are most commonly used. Potatoes also may be used as a succulent feed. However, potatoes have to be fed carefully, owing to the danger of choking the animal and to the fact to too large quantities of them will produce milk and butter of poor flavor.

Legume Hays: There is considerable difference between the milk producing value of legume hay, such as cowpeas, alfalfa, clover and soybean, and the value of the non-legume hays, such as sorghum, prairie and millet. The legume hays are higher in protein and mineral content, especially lime, they are more palatable and have a superior physiological effect upon the animal. The importance of growing legume hay on the dairy farm cannot be emphasized too strongly. They reduce the cost of milk production more than any other dry roughage.

Alfalfa hay and soybean are rather laxative in effect and should be fed with care to young calves to avoid causing scours. These two hays should be fed in combination with some non-legume hay to young calves.

Non-Legume Hays: The non-legume hays are not desirable for dairy cows in milk. They are constipating in effect, and are low in mineral and protein content. If high protein concentrates are available at a low price, then the non-legume hays prove fairly satisfactory, as they are bulky and add some efficiency to the cow's digestive system. The feeding value of hay made from non-legumes is much higher when the grass is cut before maturity than when it is cut late.

Straw and Stover: Stover does not make a very good feed for a dairy cow and the straw from the small cereals is not as good as stover. They are both very low in protein, and digestibility, and are unpalatable. They make about the poorest kind of roughage for a dairy cow in milk. However, sorghum stover finely ground into a meal with a little salt and cottonseed meal added make a fairly good roughage for dry cows and cows producing only a small amount of milk.

KEEPS CHICKS AWAY FROM LITTER WHEN MORTALITY IS HIGH

T. G. Lomax, who with his son, Thornton Lomax, operates the Swastika Poultry Farms northeast of Electra, has been having some trouble with growing the baby chicks. The mortality rate has been unduly high, the only reason for which, Mr. Lomax has decided, is the eating of too much of the litter that has been used. To overcome this he is adapting the plan used in some of the battery type brooders to his brooder houses and will investigate the possibilities of such a plan under ordinary housing conditions.

Fine mesh hardware cloth is used to cover the floor. It may be laid over the litter directly on the floor, with the idea that if the chicken can be prevented from scratching, it will not be nearly so apt to eat the litter. The cloth can be tacked to frames and be raised above the floor. These false floors should be built in sections so that it can be easily taken out for cleaning. This plan has the advantage of being more sanitary for the droppings from the birds are entirely out of reach and there is no danger of the spread of disease through this medium.

The wire does not make an uncomfortable floor for them and is as near a sanitary one as it is possible to get. If the feed and watering vessels be placed so that the chickens can be kept out, another danger of infection will be eliminated.

Hair Stops Wedding

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 9.—There was no mistaking Walter Stearns when he walked into the marriage license office here with the girl of his choice. "You're Walter Stearns of Allegan, Mich., aren't you?" said the clerk. "Well, I'm sorry, but your red hair has spoiled the elopement." Walter's parents had warned the office to be on the lookout for the youth because he was only 19, and they did not approve of the match.

COWS FROM LOCAL HERD ADMITTED TO REGISTER OF MERIT

According to the last issue of the Jersey Bulletin, Orville Bullington of Wichita Falls has had two of his herd of Jerseys admitted to the register of merit class. This herd has been on official test during the past year.

One of these, Fauvic's Jolly Rose, has completed a 365-day test with a total milk production of 5,995 pounds of milk that tested 5.52 per cent of butterfat and produced 328.61 pounds of butterfat. This was her first lactation period and at the time of completing the test was under two and a half years of age. This is a splendid record for her first year of milk.

Decemvir's Silvie's Lass, a 3-year-old heifer, has just completed a 305-day test with a total milk production of 6,228 pounds of milk, testing 4.98 per cent butterfat and producing 310.12 pounds of butterfat.

This splendid herd had a representative in the forty pound list for two-year-olds for the month of January. There were only four heifers from Texas in this list, Mr. Bullington's cow being second, with two from the Lasater herd coming third and fourth. This cow was Great Scot's Mildred with a production of 681 pounds of milk and 46.17 pounds of butterfat, showing a butterfat test of 6.78 per cent.

SEES NO NEED OF POULTRY RAISERS BECOMING PANICKY

The poultry raiser who hasn't become panic stricken and is going about his business raising chicks is the poultryman who will make money in 1928, according to Homer Martin, Waco feed dealer, who prophesies an improved poultry market just around the corner. An article in the Waco News-Tribune gives Mr. Martin's views on the subject.

"Low level of the poultry depression has been passed, and poultry prices are quietly but gradually taking an upward trend," he says. "Some good came out of last year's slump. Low prices encouraged stores and restaurants to feature eggs and poultry, which resulted in a stimulation of the nation's appetite. Eating up of the surplus has now placed the situation to where there are fewer eggs and less poultry meat in storage than a year ago."

Chick Crop Later.

From all indications the chick crop is later and perhaps smaller this year, he says. With a curtailed production of baby chicks there is bound to be a shortage of pullets which will result in a shortage of eggs and poultry, this fall and winter.

"Get your chicks now," says Martin. "This is the wisest thing. It's a cold, late spring so most folks are just as well off beginning now as if they had hatched chicks early and lost many of them through cold and dampness. Statistics show, anyway, that 40 to 50 per cent of all chicks hatched die every season as a result of feeding too soon and failing to provide a ration that takes care of the chicks' needs for life and growth."

Martin says that chicks should not be fed before they are 72 hours old. He also states that a chick starting ration should contain such ingredients as wheat germ meat, buttermilk and codliver oil to provide chicks with the life and growth vitamins. An interesting point was brought out which revealed the cost of feeding a good ration over a poor ration is but one cent more per chick for the first six weeks. The extra chicks saved more than pay the difference, not to mention the additional growth and development from feeding a good ration.

Rush 'Em to Laying.

"Don't let your pullets coast through the unproductive growing period living on bugs, worms, grain and grass," warned Mr. Martin. "Chicks worth raising at all are worth raising at the lowest possible cost. Young stock is not paying until laying. Feed pullets a growing mash to speed them to the laying stage."

"Kill them or feed them"—is another profitable suggestion given poultry raisers. "There are hens which live to lay and others that live to eat," he said. "You'll be money ahead by turning a loafing hen into meat. You'll get what she's worth in pounds and you'll save the cost of feeding a non-producer. The sooner you get rid of loafing hens the better off you'll be for the market on hens is better now than it will be later. Having no loafing hens to feed is one sure way of cutting down your cost of producing a dozen eggs from hens that lay. Feed the layers, though.

"When a poultry raiser finds he's not making money, he is tempted to give up the whole thing and try something different. But looking the poultry situation square in the face," he continued, "we see a nation's keener appetite for poultry products, a lower supply in cold storage, a curtailed chick production and market prices looking up. Surely, right now is the poultry raiser's opportunity to make ready to cash in on the poultry prosperity that's just around the corner, by killing the non-producing hens, feeding a good ration to layers and hatching or buying chicks now to have profitable pullets this next fall and winter."

READY FOR BYERS WHEAT HARVEST AND STILL GROWING!

BYERS, Texas, May 12.—This new labor saving machine has just been bought by Harrison Brothers, who own and operate one of the largest wheat farms in Clay county, to harvest this year's crop. Almost all of the cultivation on this farm is done by improved methods of machinery and the combine is just the latest addition to their equipment.

By combine harvesting they hope to save 23 cents per acre over their old method of binding and threshing. Also it will be worth $2 an acre to the land as a fertilizer to return the straw to the soil rather than stacking it as was done by the threshing machine.

Movement Away From Farm Checked In Western States, But Is Still Far Too Pronounced in South and Southwest

During the year of 1927 the movement of population from the farms to the city was considerably less than for the previous year but was still greater than for the year 1925. For 1927 the report of the bureau of economics shows that 1,978,000 persons left the farms to take employment in the cities. The farming sections of the South have been the heaviest losers for the figures show that 43 per cent of this number left southern farms.

The probable reason for this is that the South has never developed a permanent system of agriculture. The old system of farming on a big scale—the old plantation idea—has always prevailed and until the later years there has never been any organized effort made to break up these large holdings and induce the small landowner to come in and get a start. The share-cropper and the tenant farmer has been relied on to bring in a sufficient income to keep the landowners from suffering an actual loss.

Cotton has always been the crop and the owners share, while it might be small, was always salable. No other crop could be turned into cash so readily for there was no demand for feed crops except to carry a few head of work stock through the season. Neither the tenants or landowners were interested in livestock as a part of the farm program and there was nothing to do but grow cotton. The farming was usually under a one-year tenure system and there was no inducement for a tenant to make any attempt to keep up the fertility of the soil. It was simply a case of robbing the soil until the yields got so low that the tenant's share would not give him a living and he was forced to quit the farm to make a living. The landowner having a large acreage and getting a fourth even of a small yield, might get an income sufficient to pay his expenses. And the hope of better prices next year has kept both the tenant and the landowner in the cotton fields long after it has ceased to be a profitable venture for either.

Of the 43 per cent of southern farmers who have moved to the cities, 40 per cent of these have been from the west south central states, among which is Texas. The south Atlantic and the east south central states lost about 30 per cent each. This is due to the fact that cotton had been grown in those states long before this section had gone to cotton, and they had reached the state of impoverished farms sooner and were compelled to go to a diversified form of farming, which naturally leads to smaller and more intensively farmed areas and to home ownership of these farms. Many farms in the east south central states that were abandoned once as worthless, by the use of a better system of farming and soil conservation has been turned into prosperous agricultural areas, and to this condition is due the fact that in this section a smaller number has found it necessary to move to the cities to make a living. They have solved the problem of living on the farm which gives them an opportunity to make some money at farming.

Looking at the other side of the picture, there is found some encouragement. During the year of 1927, 1,374,000 people left the city and moved back on the farm, which is about 20 per cent greater than the city-to-farm-movement in 1926. The total drift to the farms of the South was about 40 per cent of the whole country and of this percentage this section of the South got about 37 per cent.

These figures show that the South is losing a greater percentage of its farmers than the North, East and West, yet it is gaining a few more of the drift the other way than the other sections. Outside of the citrus districts of the South, there has never been carried on any very extensive development work, nor has there ever been any such a boom as Florida went through a few years ago. The movement into the South has been from a personal desire rather than to any inducements that have been offered. If an organized movement was started to show to the country at large all of the things that the South could promise to the man who wants to enjoy the pleasures of country life, undoubtedly the drift to this section would be greater than it is.

Erosion Wastes Plant Food

WASHINGTON, May 9. (AP)—It is conservatively estimated by federal scientists that the value of plant food wasted in the erosion, or washing away of soil on farms in the United States, is in excess of $2,000,000,000 a year.

EXPECT AYRSHIRES TO BECOME FACTOR IN DONLEY DAIRIES

The Ayrshire breed of dairy cattle is to compete with the Jersey and Holstein in northwest Texas, with Donley county as its principal locus at the start, according to the Clarendon News, which tells of the importation of Ayrshires by Donley county dairymen. A picture of the initial herd appeared recently on this page. The Clarendon News says:

The first to attempt the introduction of the Ayrshire strain into the Panhandle country, C. L. Knight of the Knight Dairy has bought five of the best stock to be obtained in the country and has them installed at the farm to the south and east of the city. These five head of cattle are mere calves, the oldest being little more than one year old, and will mean the production of more milk from fewer cows if their breeding lines hold true to the mark.

The leader of the herd is to be Lizzie's Voca Armour of Walzayr, born August 22, 1927, at Hays, Kan. He has been on the Knight farm for practically one month and is becoming accustomed to the Panhandle section of the state. He comes from a long line of registered stock with more milk records than could be printed in one ordinary book. His color runs true to form and he is mottled with red over a background of white. The white is the predominating color in the scheme of things. The registry number assigned to him is 36950.

The four heifer calves are also of registered stock and come from the Fairfield Farm of Topeka, Kan. They arrived here the latter part of last week and have been on display since that time. Fairfield Miss Topsy is one of the quartet and is the oldest of the four. She comes from a long line of cows producing an average of 10,000 pounds of milk and is one of the most promising of the four. Fairfield Charity is a direct descendant of a cow that produced 13,000 pounds under actual test. Fairfield's Milkmaid is the third of the trio and comes from a line that produced more than 10,000 pounds over a long time of production. The last of the four is the choicest animal of the group and is thought to be the biggest possible producer of the group since better shape is shown in the animal.

In addition to producing milk in great quantity, this stock is a heavy type of cow and will ordinarily weigh around 1300 pounds in prime milking condition. Thus, they have a double utility as a beef and milk production animal. The strain is originally from Scotland and was originated by Robert Burns in Ayrshire, Scotland, from which location the name was originally derived.

The test on this type of cattle will be watched with more than ordinary interest in the county since the Jersey has long been considered the ideal type for quality of milk.

WILBARGER STOCK IS PURCHASED FOR WILLIAMSON HERD

Carl Williamson of the Elmwood Stock farm, accompanied by Guy Powell, city milk inspector, went to Wilbarger county last week to look for cows to be added to Mr. Williamson's herd. They succeeded in finding four head of extra good milk cows, three of which are now producing.

Mr. Williamson has been adding to his herd as he could find the right kind of cows until at the present time he has 15 head of good milk stock. He will add others to the herd as he finds opportunity for getting the kind that he wants. He expects to use a purebred sire and will soon have one of the outstanding herds of grade cows in the valley.

Potatoes Beginning to Make Their Way as Cash Crop —Hog Raising Increases

WASHINGTON, May 12. (AP)—In round figures, the 10,803 cooperative marketing and purchasing associations listed by the department of agriculture transacted business in 1925 to the amount of $2,400,000,000.

The estimate is made by R. H. Elsworth, federal marketing economist, who has just completed a statistical review of the development of cooperative associations for the 10-year period, 1915 to 1925. His data reveals a phenomenal growth, the number of organizations increasing 50 per cent, their membership 315 per cent, and the amount of business handled 277 per cent.

Elsworth says the largest gain in number of associations was made in the five east north central states—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. The middle Atlantic states—New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania—were second. Largest gains in estimated membership were made by the east south central states—Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi—with the west south central tier—Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas—second. Largest percentage gains in amount of business handled were made by the west and east south central groups; by the south Atlantic states—Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida; and by the New England states—Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Of the 48 states, Minnesota leads in number of associations, having 12.8 per cent of the total number. Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas follow in the order named.

Minnesota also had the largest volume of business in 1925, her 1383 associations handling $223,980,000. California was second with $223,960,000 for her 350 associations. Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Ohio, New York and Kansas followed in the order named, these eight states handling 51 per cent of the total cooperative business.

Nearly one-third of the total business in 1925 was handled by the 3338 grain marketing associations, more than one-fifth by the dairy associations, and more than one-eighth by the livestock shipping associations.

Associations with headquarters in Minnesota reported a larger number of members than the associations in any other state. Those ranking next were Kentucky, Iowa and Missouri.

Total membership for the United States is placed at 2,700,000, with many farmers belonging to as many as four associations. The actual number served through cooperatives in 1925 is estimated to have been 1,800,000.

CARE EXERCISED IN COOLING MILK PAYS EXCELLENT RETURNS

One of the reasons for the low test in milk that is supposed to be of high butterfat content is in the failure to properly cool the milk immediately after milking. Particularly will this be true of milk that is trucked in a long distance before the samples are taken.

What actually happens when the milk is not cooled down to the proper temperature or when the cooling is not done promptly enough is that the milk is sour when morning comes. But if the cooling of the milk was not thoroughly done, or if it was not held at the proper temperature throughout the night, it may come to the plant the next morning in such a condition that it will be acceptable and yet near enough sour that the agitation received during the haul to the plant will cause a separation of the butterfat from the milk, just as happens when the butter begins to "come," though in a much less degree. Small particles of butter can be seen on the top of the milk in the can when it comes in sour. And when it is just on the point of turning there is enough of this separation to make it impossible to get a fair sample and normal test.

The way to avoid this condition is by the use of a milk cooler or aerator. The aerator should be placed in a location where there will be good ventilation and as soon as a cow is milked the milk should be run over the aerator at once. This should bring the milk down to about 60 degrees, provided good cool well water is used in the aerator can. After the milk can is filled or the milking done, it should be set in a tub of cold water in a well ventilated place or set outside in a cool place. A good way to fix it for keeping over night is to cover the can with a cloth letting the ends hang down in the water. Capillary attraction will keep the cloth wet and if placed in a position where there is a good current of air the milk will be kept in good shape.

When warm weather comes, there should be no guess work about the temperature of the milk. A thermometer should be used and the milk cooled to at least 50 degrees. It is hard to guess the correct temperature and a few degrees might mean the loss of a can.

TIMES' BOOK REVIEW AND LITERARY LANTERN

More of Lewis's Satirical Genius In His New Book

Sinclair Lewis has given more of his satirical genius to the public in his later book, "The Man Who Knew Coolidge" in which the reader becomes acquainted with Mr. Lowell Schmaltz, constructive and nordic citizen and friend of "Babbitt."

Although the book does not rank as high in quality as some of the author's previous works, Lewis proves that he is undoubtedly a master of satire and it is according to the reader's mood as to how he will receive the ramblings of Mr. Schmaltz.

At times the reader is inclined to wish he hadn't started reading the book but at other times he will laugh at the matter in which this character tells his story. Whatever the mood, the reader cannot fail to appreciate the efforts of Mr. Lewis.

Schmaltz is proud of his home town of Zenith and there is no doubt but that he is proud of his affiliation with the Kiwanis club. Both are referred to very often by him.

Coolidge isn't as flashy as some statesmen perhaps or isn't quite as "Ritzy" as Schmaltz's daughter might say, yet he is "safe," he contends.

Schmaltz claims to be former classmate of Cal's and although he was not counted as one of the president's close friends, he is sure that Coolidge will recognize him and give him a cordial welcome as he starts for Washington and a visit to the White House. But the reader is deprived of knowing how the nation's chief executive might receive Schmaltz for Cal is suddenly called away from his office after Schmaltz gains the reception room.

After telling his experiences on this trip, Schmaltz goes on to relate the story told by Mack McMack yet forgets what the Jew said, which is the climax of the yarn.

Then he goes on into further ramblings on the subjects of "You Know How Women Are," "You Know How Relatives Are," "Travel Is So Broadening" and "The Basic Fundamental Ideals of Christian American Citizenship."

As the reader finishes the book he will realize that sometime during his lifetime he has met Mr. Schmaltz, possibly more than just one, although Mr. Lewis has probably overdrawn him to some extent.

New Books at Public Library

Drama, biography, fiction and historical fiction are included in the list of new books placed on the shelves of the Kemp Public library during the past week.

"Alfred E. Smith," by Henry F. Pringle.

A penetrating study of the most talked-about American of today. The author, whose studies of prominent men in the American Mercury and Harper's have attracted wide attention, here gives a critical study of Alfred Smith which as The New York Times Book Review says "will have interest no matter what happens next July and the following November."

"Appleton Book of Short Plays," by Kenyon Nicholson.

Following the success of his first book of short plays the author now offers a second anthology. The plays are of a marked variety and include plays for every taste. Such names as Edna Ferber, Charles Divine, Octavus Roy Cohen and Gilbert Emery are represented.

"Coffee and Waffles," by Alice Foote MacDougall.

This volume by Alice MacDougall whose attractive restaurants are famous all over the country will be helpful to any housekeeper. Menus and suggestions for breakfast, dainty luncheons, teas, and the evening meal. Recipes of the author's choicest and most famous dishes and ideas and suggestions in serving.

"How to Enjoy the Bible," By Anthony C. Deane.

"He is an unwise reader of the Bible who begins at the beginning" says Mr. Deane. The scholarly author reveals the undying charm of the authorized version in a most interesting way, and shows it should be read for utmost enjoyment and inspiration.

"Me and Henry and the Artillery," by William Hazlett Upson.

Two doughboys and their mates at home in the artillery, fighting mightily in the great war and entering Germany with the army of occupation. Good character delineation and a vivid portrayal of the great war as the doughboy saw it.

"Plains of Abraham, by James Oliver Curwood.

This new novel of Mr. Curwood's is a historical novel which while complete in itself, begins when The Black Hunter left off in the story of the French attempt to establish a New France in Canada. In a foreword Mr. Curwood speaks of the trouble he had in collecting the historical evidence for his tale "of his traveling foot by foot over the hallowed ground, the reading of letters written by hands dead a hundred and fifty years, the dreaming over yellow manuscripts written by priests and martyrs and the winning of the friendship of the devout fathers of Quebeck who still guard these treasures," as the most thrilling experience of his life.

"Private Secretary," by E. J. Kilduff.

A detailed description and exposition of the duties of the private secretary and how they may be developed. Of value both for the employer, whom it aids in defining clearly his requirements, and for employe whom it aids in meeting those requirements.

"Rides of the Grande Ronde," by Robert Ormond Case.

A story of the west which combines mystery with adventure and romance. Ruth Sibley, who has gone west for a month's visit on her uncle's ranch, finds the ranchmen all excited over the holdup and robberies of the valley. Ruth helps solve the mystery and locates the bandits.

"Uther and Ingraine," by Warwick Deeping.

A beautifully written romance of pre-Arthurian days in Great Britain. It is one of the authors earlier publications and has been reprinted since the success of "Sorrell and son, "Doomsday" and "Kitty."

THE LITERARY LANTERN

The Literary Lantern burns weekly in the Sunday Times and is intended to throw light on writing around and about the South. Communications for this column should be addressed to the Editor of the Literary Lantern.

When Betsy Patterson married Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte in Baltimore, a good many people were shocked at the antics of the younger generation, including one Simeon Baldwin, a true-blue Puritan from Connecticut, who wrote his wife in 1805: "Young Bonaparte & his wife were here last week . . . Having married a Parisian (sic) she assumed the mode of dress in which it is said the Ladies of Paris are clothed—if that may be called clothing which leaves half of the body naked and the shape of the rest perfectly visible." Betsy, he further growls, was not at all "abashed" when the "young Galants" chatted with her. Betsy Patterson could scarcely be said to be abashed at anything except power and social position, and at them only because she never made the royal circle she set out to reach. She was a lively person—a fit subject for the smart historical novel now in vogue, and we are not surprised to see her figure in a book.

The book is "The Golden Bees" (Stokes), by Daniel Henderson, and we sat down to the reading of it with whetted anticipation. Yet, with the fascinating Betsy at hand, the author seems to us not to write up to his blue china. He hauls in all the local color he can, and introduces Jefferson, the Duke of Wellington, Lafayette, Napoleon's little Polish countess, and various other notables, but Betsy herself escapes him. We suspect the author has read too much Emil Ludwig and too little of the relevant American material to do justice to his story. Certainly, there are a good many amusing sidelights obtainable which the author does not use, and, though he claims he has been to unexplored sources for his novel, we think that Betsy still awaits a Thackeray to do her justice.

A second historical novel, "The Twisted Tendril" (Stokes) by Alice Glasgow (any relation to Ellen?) reminds us of one of Mark Twain's remarks. He said that he didn't mind the things he forgot; what he minded was remembering things that weren't so. Miss Glasgow's story is the story of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Lincoln; and while, we suppose, a writer may take liberties with fact, yet the desire to explain character A ought not to lead her to distort the histories of characters B, C and D. Miss Glasgow "explains" Booth by a combination of Freudian mother-fixation, delusions of theatrical grandeur, and an urge to live up to his given names, and perhaps Booth was all this. But consciously or not, the rest of her tragic story is too far away from history to be convincing. Mrs. Suratt's part in the assassination of Lincoln, for example, has never been proved, Payne didn't desert, John Surratt was hardly as prominent in the conspiracy as he appears to be in the novel, and we feel dubious about some of the other figures. We refer enthusiastically to Judge Winston's biography of Andrew Johnson for a better version of the story. Meanwhile, we conclude that the drama of Lincoln's assassination was too big for the pen of this author.

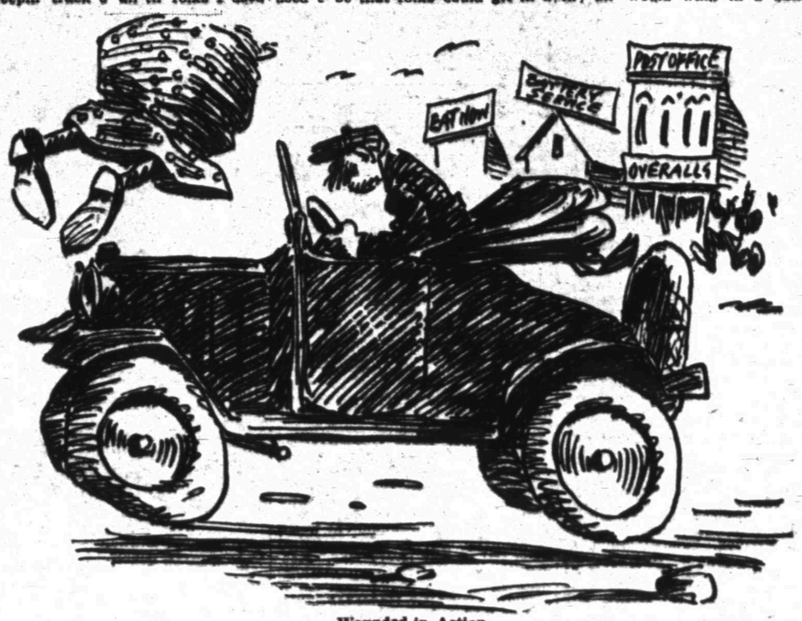

Probably no batch of novels can be complete without including one about New Orleans and a Creole beauty. The newest is "Toucoutou" (Dodd, Mead) by Edward Larocque Tinker, the biographer of Lafcadio Hearn, a writer with a good deal of taste, and a sense of style sadly missing in much contemporary fiction. Probably there isn't much originality in the plot—the discovery of negro blood in a beautiful Creole girl. The discovery doesn't amaze the reader, especially since the author makes little attempt to conceal the facts. Wherefore we think the manipulation of the plot could be made stronger. But plot is not the author's central interest. Minor incidents and some excellent character drawing — notably old Clairecline, the babbler—compensate for structural weaknesses. And anyway, we are easily taken in by anything connected with New Orleans. It's like the French language. Anybody could tell us it was raining or call us bad names in French, and we'd think it was grand.

Speaking of things French, we have another book by Julian Green, the young Virginian who startled the literary world by writing some excellent novels in that language. "Avarice House" we noticed some weeks ago. Comes now "The Closed Garden" (Harper's) to confirm our impression of his grasp of style. Here we have an uncompromisingly sure account of a girl in the grip of a besetting passion, this time for a man whom she meets accidentally in the road, to whom she has never spoken, and whom she can not possibly marry. Possibly because it comes second, "The Closed Garden" seems to us less fresh, a bit repetitive. Indeed, it leads us to wonder whether Green's technique isn't too hard and sure. We should like a bit of humor here and there, and a little shading. Everything stands out in such bold relief, we wonder how the author can build his climax. Yet, it must be confessed, when the climax comes, Green is big enough to write it.

From the obscure provincial town of "The Closed Garden" we turn to a corresponding hamlet in Florida where Edwin Granberry places his "Strangers and Lovers" (Macauley). Like other books with "lovers" in their titles, this book seems to have little to do with its name. Not that it matters. The film version of "Anna Karenina" was called "Love," and in it Anna and Vronsky married three years after the fadeout at the railroad station. Of course, that doesn't change Tolstoy, but Granberry is no Tolstoy. He's not even an Elizabeth Maddox Roberts, though reviewers not so infallible as we are, seem to think so. However, he's pretty good as the sincere and straight-forward teller of the story of Millie Carver, the poor white girl of Cardia, who has a tough time with a drunken father,

ABE MARTIN On the Newspaper

"I couldn't git on without my newspaper," said ole Aunt Tabitha Moots, last evenin', as she settled back in her chair t' read. "Th' newspaper's a great blessin' t' shutins. It's my only means o' keepin' track o' all th' folks I used t' know, an' what new ones are comin' on, an' McNary-Haugen an' things. I hain't been worth a cent since I tried t' cross th' street in March. Th' newspaper is about my only comfort since nearly ever'buddy I ever knowed is either dead, or in jail, or fugitives from justice. My nephew, who wuz enjoyin' a little breathin' spell on parole, paid me a little visit last week, but th' officers nabbed him before I could ask him th' whereabouts of his mother, as she's been out o' th' papers a week. I see by th' papers that Lide Plummer's daughter has been kickin' up in some college show. I allus thought Lide would have kicked up if she'd had th' chance. Watchin' murder's is th' most fun, an' it's interestin', too, t' read jest how some murderers go about it, so much more interestin' than knittin' things, an' sewin' fer a lot o' ungrateful gran'children. I'm watchin' a murder case now that should go t' th' jury in an hour or two. I've seen a picture o' th' woman, an' I have my own ideas, an' I'm waitin' t' see if th' jury agrees with me or lets her go. It used t' be that folks could git in a mess an' leave town an' that's th' last we'd hear o' them, but t'day th' newspapers 'll find anybuddy, unles they take th' veil. Take Lester Pine, who murdered his grandpaw fer three dollars. I watched fer him in th' newspaper fer years, an' yisterday he turned up in jail at Socora, New Mexico, with five wives facin' him. Jest read th' newspaper carefully an' you'll run into lots o' people you know who'er jest goin' in, or comin' out o' prisons. Take th' woman somewheres in th' east whose husband killed himself cleanin' a revolver. She's nobuddy but Meddie Hanger who used t' live here, an' it's th' way her first an' second husbands killed 'emselves. It's her own original idea, an' I'm watchin' t' see if she gits caught this time. Another ole link out o' th' past, Benton Swallow, went t' th' chair in Ohio last week. I'd begun t' think th' newspapers wuz off ther job, fer he's been away from here nearly four years. He et some toast an' eggs an' thanked th' warden fer a cigarette an' walked unaided t' his doom. That's Benton, fer he never did fear nothin', an' would walk in a bank in broad daylight. I recall th' days when he had a Bible class over a block long, but he married th' wrong woman. It's allus a pleasure t' read th' paper in th' evenin' an' find that at least a few ole acquaintances got across the street, an' I git considerable kick out o' th' weddin' column. I like t' make notes as t' how long this weddin' or that'll hold out, an' then watch events an' see how my gueses come out. I hit it three times this week, but Ottie Smiley fooled me. She wuz still married up t' last evenin's paper. An' I git lots o' food fer thought out o' th' society page, an' lots o' fun, too. It's interestin' t' note how far some people have climbed or slipped back. I did intend t' try t' hobble over an' see my son-in-law's family t'morrow, but it wuz wiped out yisterday, I see by t'day's paper.

Wounded in Action

THE MAN WHO KNEW HOW

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

The station was a mile away. We had twenty minutes to catch the train. The car wouldn't start. The family had, with much difficulty, been driven from the breakfast table to their places on the front and back seats. The baggage was stowed between their knees and on their laps. I congratulated myself on having done a neat job of lading, not to mention getting everybody on board. Twenty minutes would have been a surplus of time. Even through traffic we could make it. The car was to be left at the station for a boy, previously engaged for the purpose, to return to the garage. I had the tickets in my pocket. I knew they were there because every three or four minutes I felt the envelope they were in to make sure. Sometimes I took it out, opened it and made sure that the chair car seats were all there. Nothing had been left undone.

But the car wouldn't start. First I tried the spark. It seemed all right. Then I looked in the tank to see if there was enough gas. The tank was full. I lifted the hood and looked at the engine. It looked the same as it always does to me. I couldn't see inside of it, of course, but externally it appeared to be in the very pink of condition. The wiring was as it should be, the plugs were in place, the carbureter was not flooded. I climbed back to the seat and pressed the self-starter button. There was no whirring response.

The time was getting short. I dared not look at my watch to discover how short. Calling in the assistance of a neighbor is something I hate to do. But there was nothing else for it. Jones was tinkering at his car in his own garage, just across the fence. I asked him to come over. I also asked him to hurry. He vaulted the fence obligingly, and began to ask questions.

"Is she in gear?"

"Is the brake on?"

"Has she got any gas?"

"Was she all right last night?"

I answered all these hurriedly in the affirmative, and requested him to be quick about his investigation. I added that we had a train to catch and that our destination being a thousand miles away it was important that we secure our reservations. He nodded with quick understanding and went to work. Jones works rapidly. I admired the business-like way he went from one part of the engine to the other, examining everything, testing everything. Refusing to trust the gas gauge he unscrewed the cap on the tank and inserted a stick into the aperture. It was wet nearly to the top when it came out. The brakes were all right. The gears meshed perfectly. But still there was no sign of life.

"Beats me," he said. "Must be plenty of battery. Self-starter works fine. Brakes aren't set. Plugs all in place. Enough gas. It's just one of those mean motors, that's all. Takes it into its head to stall, and stalls. Probably the shaft has swelled and frozen. Been driving her hard?" We replied that we had hardly driven her at all lately.

"Well," said Jones, "it's past me. Better call the garage man." I looked at my watch. There were yet twelve minutes. The garage was three blocks away but the man might be summoned by telephone. One of the children was dispatched on that errand. In the meantime Jones and I went over the car again, but found nothing helpful. She was as dead as the free silver issue. No life at all. And the clock kept going around. That part of the car was working, anyway, and working fast.

The child returned breathlessly to say that the garage man would be there in five minutes. That would still leave us time if he worked rapidly, but you know what garage men are. I sent the child back to telephone for a taxi, which arrived before the garage man did. The baggage was all loaded into it, together with all the family but me. I had decided to stand by my guns. I waved them good-bye, and told them I would meet them at the station. Then Jones and I began hopefully going over the car again.

The garage man was as good as his word. In five minutes he arrived. He started to ask questions, but I told him hurriedly that I knew nothing about what was the matter, that I had only a few minutes to get to the station and that if he couldn't get the car started he would have to drive me down himself. He took off his coat, dug into his car for a handful of tools, lit a cigarette, and resumed his questioning.

"What you you think is the trouble?"

Again I told him that I didn't know and couldn't guess. "Find out for yourself and do it quick, for the love of Mike," I said. "Don't you understand I have to catch that train?"

He got into the front seat, taking his tools along with him. In an instant there was a buzz and a whirr and the car started. He backed it out of the yard and into the road. I bid Jones and he goodbye and started off toward the station. I was stopped by traffic lights at two corners, and ran past two others which were set against me. I almost collided with five or six cars, and got to the station just in time to see the last car of the train sliding out past the platform. My wife and family were on the rear platform, and motioned me to hurry. I hurried, but a man isn't much of a match for a railroad train in a speed contest. I lost.

By purchasing an entirely new ticket, I was able to start the next day, and join my family at its destination. When I arrived, instead of being glad to see me they plied me with questions about how I got the car started.

"Oh, I just fussed over it till I got it going," I said. "But it was too late."

"Did the garage man come?"

"Yes, but you know what garage men are."

On my return I went down to the garage for information, and to guard against anything he might say to the children if he met them, as to how the car started. I asked him if he minded telling me how he started it.

"It's all in knowing how," he said mysteriously.

"I know that, but what did you do that I hadn't done?"

"I took the key you had left on the seat and unlocked the car," said the garage man.

THERE'S NO SUCH THING AS IMPERSONAL HISTORY, SAYS GEOFFREY PARSONS

Impersonal history? an impossibility—according to Geoffrey Parsons, author of "The Stream of History," a Scribner publication. He says: "Many of the works best worth reading are intensely partisan and unfair. History is a science only in respect to a small substratum of demonstrable truth."

CROMWELL IS REVEALED AS ENIGMATIC FIGURE

G. R. Stirling Taylor, in his recently published biography, "Cromwell," reveals the Lord Protector as one of the most enigmatic figures of history. He says: "There is no end to the illogical and impossible contradictions of Cromwell's life. At one moment a soldier, the next a saint: now a statesman, and then something very near a simpleton. At Huntingdon a pious mystic; at Drogheda—and elsewhere—nothing but a murderer, who escaped the hand of justice only because he himself controlled the army and the police force. A democrat who took up arms to save his country from the rule of a tyrant; and then ruled it by major generals and sergeants as Charles Stuart would never have dared to do in his haughtiest moments of divine right."

Crane, Hamlin Garland and Edwin Arlington Robinson, a Tolstoy society has been formed to celebrate in 1928 the centenary of Tolstoy's birth and to further the production of a complete edition of Aylmer Maude's translation of Tolstoy, which the society holds to be the authoritative version.

The contestants may state why the book appeals to them as readers or present an analysis of either its historical or its literary qualities. FARMERS IN BYERS COMMUNITY SHOW BROTHERLY SPIRIT

BYERS, Texas, May 12.—When S. S. Stout, a farmer in the vicinity of Byers, became ill and had to be sent to the hospital for treatment, it was at a time when he was most needed at home to get his land prepared for the summer crop. There was no one left at home who could do the work and a farmer loses all of his profits when he has to hire his work done, so there was quite a worry in his mind as to how he was to take care of the situation, which is no condition for a sick man to improve under.

The neighboring farmers realized the need of help and decided to surprise him by each lending a man, team, plow and doing the work as a proof of brotherhood and good will.

It is now almost time for him to return from the place of treatment and he can joyfully return to a well kept place and produce his regular crop. It is such a spirit as this that gives us faith in the brotherhood of man.

The hog population of Germany was placed at 22,880,000 head in 1927. The previous year was credited with nearly 3,000,000 hogs less.

Programs for the Sunday schools and young people's organizations have also been planned, and in many of the churches there will be red and white flowers for each member of the congregation, red to wear for a mother who is living, white to wear for one who has "gone home."

Rabbi S. J. Schwab preached Friday evening on "The Great Son of a Great Mother," at the weekly services at Temple Israel. He discussed the career of Moses, and the influence of Moses' mother, Jochebed and his foster mother, the pharaoh's daughter.

Sherrill and the choir will sing "My Mother," and George Taylor will sing "The Silverheaded Sweetheart of Mine." In the evening a quartet composed of Mrs. T. G. Fletcher, Mrs. Frank Roberts, E. O. Albert and R. J. Gaines will sing "My Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me."

At the First Christian church, Dr. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor, will preach on "Christ and Motherhood" at the morning service and on "Mothers, Daughters and Cigarets" in the evening. Special numbers for the evening service will be "Mother Machree," sung by the choir and a reading, "Mother's Way," by Miss Gene Marjorie Martin.

A Mother's day sermon will be preached by Dr. O. L. Powers at the First Baptist church Sunday morning, and a special arrangement of Mother's day songs will be sung in the evening. A "Mother and Dad" program will be given in the B. Y. P. U. general assembly at 6:30 o'clock Sunday evening.

"Voluntary Mothers" is the subject announced by Dr. Nat F. Grafton for his Sunday morning service at the First Presbyterian church. The sermon will be addressed to stepmothers, boarding house mothers and mothers who have adopted children, it was announced. A corsage bouquet will be given to the oldest mother and to the youngest mother present.

A Mother's day program will be given in the junior department of the First Presbyterian Sunday school at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning, as follows: Violin solo, Georgianna Davidson, accompanied by Louise Nickell; invocation, Dr. Nat F. Grafton; reading, "Hundreds of Stars," by Kathryn Utz; reading, "I Must Not Tease My Mother," by Joe Witherspoon; song, "My Savior First of All;" reading, "Mother's Eeyes," Josephine Willis; reading, "Bob's Girl," Jack Krauss; reading, Genevieve Williams; pageant, "A Gift for Mother," with Jean Elizabeth Hodge, Jack Lee Grayson, Mary Jane Nelson, Eugene Daugherty, Duane Meredith, John E. Butts, Mrs. K. M. Samuels, Mrs. L. E. Stone and Robert Priddy taking part; chorus by the entire department; saxophone solo, "Onward Christian Soldiers," Harry Strief Jr.

A songalogue entitled "Your Mother and Mine" will be presented by the choir of the Floral Heights Presbyterian church Sunday evening. The text and lyrics are by Valeria R. Lehman and the music by Grant Colfax Tullar. The Rev. David Rees-Jones, pastor, will preach on "A Mother's Comfort" at the morning service.

"A Mother's Love" will be the sermon subject of Dr. Gaines B. Hall at the morning service at the First Southern Presbyterian church. In the evening Dr. Hall will preach on "God's Love," and a mixed quartet composed of Mrs. Gaines B. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Underwood and James Biggs will sing "Songs My Mother Taught Me."

The Young People's Bible class of the Highland Heights Christian church has arranged a special Mother's day program for the class period beginning at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Red Cross News

The county nutritionist assisted the Parent-Teachers association at Fairview school with the clinic on last Wednesday when 44 pre-school children were given a physical examination. The doctors and dentists who made the examinations were from Burkburnett. The nutritionist did the weighing and measuring and talked with the mothers regarding nutritional problems.

The nurse has inspected and given the vision test to every student in the Fannin and Huey schools at the request of the principals and teachers, except the first grades. These were given a physical examination at the beginning of the school term by local physicians.

Nine pre-school clinics have been held in as many grade schools in the last two weeks and three more will be held this week. This will finish the work as far as the examinations go and will give the nurse the summer months to get corrections of as many defects as possible.

For the first time in eight years the American Red Cross will hold no convention in 1928, the date of the next meeting having been set for April 22, 1929, for action of the organization's central committee at a recent meeting held at Red Cross headquarters in Washington, D. C. The next gathering will be held in the nation's capital and will continue through four days. Heretofore all national conventions of the Red Cross have been held in October.

Another manifestation of the uprightness of the youth of today: A number of boys broke the rules of the school by going to a hamburger "joint" with the money their parents gave them for the school cafeteria lunches. The principal asked the boys what action they thought should be taken to meet the situation. The boys volunteered to give up their "Knot Hole" passes which are very much appreciated. One boy said, "I don't believe we are quite ready to be worthy of these passes; maybe we will be later."

1. To obey immediately when mother calls. "I'm coming mother."
2. To keep our backyards clean.
3. To make my teacher happy by always having my lessons.
4. By keeping our community healthy by following the health rules.
5. To wash ourselves and darn our stockings, mend and hang up our clothes.
6. To have the house orderly.
7. To wash dishes and make beds.

The certificates for the Crockett P.-T. A. adult food selection group have been received from the national office for 10 members.

The Huey P.-T. A. group finished the course with 28 mothers attending. They will receive certificates later.

The Cantawauya group met Friday afternoon at the home of the guardian, Mrs. J. C. Mathis. Plans were made for a ceremonial meeting at Cedar Park pool next Friday. The girls worked on boxes for the Kiwanis club box supper. The following were present: Lee Ellen Boardman, Lena Mae Lesley, Montana French, Frances Gardner, Loraine Mathis, Estelle McPhail, Mary Katherine Ward, Winelle Ward, Eleanor Weiler and Mrs. Mathis.

SAM HOUSTON P.-T. A TO HOLD HEALTH CLINIC

The Sam Houston P.-T. A. will hold a health clinic Wednesday afternoon, 1:30 p. m., for the children who will enter school next fall, according to announcement Friday. The children to be examined must be accompanied by their mothers and have the parent's approval.

Mrs. John W. Thompson is chairman of arrangements, and she will be assisted by Mesdames Joe Counts, Noel Johnson, C. E. Russell, H. C. Pinkston.

The following doctors will cooperate with the mothers: W. B. Adams, Austin F. Leach, R. B. Wolford, F. E. Thornburgh, H. B. White.

The clerk assisting the doctors will include Misses Ramsdell, Wallace, Hardeman, Mesdames Noel Johnson, Joe Camp, Mrs. Harry ten Brink, registrar, and Mrs. O. H. Karr, weights and measures.

Ella and Murray, in their sixties and still young! Full of desire. Full of youth.

Because there is something they want terribly—something still that they save for and plan for.

Two old people still on tiptoe about life.

WHEN Ella was nineteen and employed in a lawyer's office on the forty-fifth story of a New York skyscraper that overlooked the harbor, the Statue of Liberty and the vast and surging roadway called the Atlantic Ocean that led to the Old World, she had nine hundred dollars in the bank and an inordinate ambition.

Ella wanted to go to Europe. Every day, as she had her lunch, two drug-store sandwiches and a container of hot coffee brought in by the office-boy for economy's sake and for the opportunity it gave her to remain at her desk which overlooked the harbor Ella's thoughts and dreams danced out along the very waves themselves. Europe! The bottom drawer of her desk was filled with folders from tourist agencies and books called "So This Is Paris!" "Guide Book to Florence", "Seeing Europe in Eighty Days", "How I Saw the Orient on Five Hundred Dollars".

Her obsession created a little area of isolation around Ella. The other girls in the office who went out to luncheon in the nearby cafeterias and tea-rooms enjoyed much persiflage at her expense.

Ella was "cuckoo".

"Ella, how's your Mediterranean?"

Ella did not mind. Her nest-egg wanted only three hundred dollars toward the budget she had set for herself and the year of travel toward which her whole life was directed.

Ella let them laugh.

It was not easy for a girl who had neither parents nor home and had to pay lodging, food and clothing out of a scant salary, but Ella had proved the adage that when a human being wants a thing badly enough he can endure almost anything to achieve it. Ella wanted badly enough.

AND then, you know how it is. One day in the elevator, Ella was introduced to a young typewriter salesman from the floor above. He was a clean, vigorous young fellow, with nice brown eyes and smooth hair and white teeth. Their attraction to one another was mutual and immediate and strangely enough, it was the first love-episode in the lives of both. Two months later, they were married.

It was not that Ella had put aside the idea of that trip to Europe. On the contrary, Murray had long entertained the same dream. The Murray Hiltons decided to pool their little interests and wait another year, until their funds would enable the two of them to indulge in that trip to Europe.

And then, you know how it is. Ella was not able to continue her work in the lawyer's office as they had planned, because, at the end of ten months, their first baby was born. If Ella experienced any pangs of renunciation, they were more than counterbalanced by the astonishing joy of this new revelation. It was as if she and Murray could never learn to take for granted, as so many young couples around them seemed to, the phenomenon of this child that had befallen them. Their little flat seemed to encompass the whole universe. Even the struggle for existence, a considerable one on Murray's slim salary, was not unmixed with the ecstacy of creation.

Of course, Europe was out of the question now. But not permanently so. It was only a dream to be temporarily laid aside.

IT was the insistence of this dream that had caused Ella to choose their little apartment in a homely New York district that had the saving grace of overlooking the harbor. It was an ugly little place that however could not remain so when permeated with the gay chintzes, the bright artificial flowers and the odor of happiness introduced by the Hiltons. Within the next three years, there was another girl-child and a pair of boy-twins. Meanwhile, manipulate as he would and despite a small raise in salary, the struggle continued for Murray. It was hard to make both ends meet. It was hard not to encroach upon that precious nine hundred dollars that was entered in Ella's bank book.

It was the one subject, however, upon which Ella was adamant. Some day, those nine hundred dollars were going to make the dream come true. Morning, during those brief periods of respite when her children were temporarily cared for, and the house in order, Ella still indulged in her favorite sport. Standing at the window which overlooked the harbor, and watching the waves run out to meet the horizon.

EUROPE lay beyond that watery merging of sky and water. The Old World. The cradle of mankind. Florence lay beyond that horizon where Benvenuto Cellini and Michael Angelo and Leonardo De Vinci of the travel books had lived and loved. Paris lay sparkling somewhere out there and the sapphire beauty of the Riviera, about which the guide books waxed lyrical, and Venice, the Queen of the Adriatic.

No, Ella did not renounce her dreams.

It might be said, however, that for the time being Ella's dreams renounced her.

Measles, croup, an attack of menengitis which threatened to leave one of the twins lame for life, filled the next few years with anxieties and turbulence that left little time for reflection, either for Ella or Murray.

When their twins were eight years old, and the other youngsters doing fairly well in school, Murray, out of a clear sky, was laid low with a long attack of plural pneumonia which made it necessary for him to spend the greater part of the winter at Lake Placid, recuperating.

During those troubled months, Ella procured homework from a milliner and managed to keep body and soul of her family together by doing piece-work on hats. Needless to say, what with the menengitis, the plural pneumonia and the increased cost of living, which somehow was not in keeping with Murray's static salary, the nine hundred-dollar nest-egg had long since been exhausted.

DO not think for a moment that Ella begrudged it. That precious money, dedicated to a precious dream, had been expended in an even worthier cause. It had insured one of her children against a lifetime of lameness; it had helped buy back Murray's health.

It was not until her little family was successfully grown and had families of their own, that Ella and Murray dared to renew their old dream.

It meant beginning with a clean slate, now that their responsibilities to their children were ended and the whole four of them were embarked on their own struggles and destinies.

Murray, a portly fifty by now, was still at his vocation of salesman for the typewriter firm.

His salary did not suffice as it once had, even with the children gone, because the standards of living had advanced.

But by manipulation it was possible for the Hiltons to save enough out of their modest budget to begin afresh the accumulation of that nest-egg for Europe.

And mind you, it kept them young. At forty-five, there was still something eager and lifted and expectant to Ella's plump little face. There was something that Ella wanted terribly. It kept her full of desire. It kept her full of youth.

Even Murray, after nine hours of the enervating work of talking typewriters, could come home with the expected thrill of an exciting evening among guide books, steamship pamphlets and travel-lore that had to do with ivory, apes and peacocks.

Eight years after the marriage of their last and youngest child, the Murray Hiltons had one thousand three hundred and fifty dollars in the bank. One hundred fifty dollars short of the budget they had set for themselves for that trip to Europe.

Then, you know how it is.

NEVER any too successful in his business enterprises, the twin whose nervous system had early been inundated by the spinal menengitis, fell ill, and, without any too great resistance, died on the third day of his illness, leaving his pretty young wife with three small children and about to have another. What with the shock and a constitution none too strong herself, there ensued long struggles for this little lady when her baby was finally born. It meant, of course, taking the stricken group of three children, the new infant and the slowly-convalescing mother into the little flat that overlooked the harbor. It meant once more the imperative need of the nest-egg; it meant once more the temporary renunciation of the dream.

Once more, the little group they took into their home is on its feet, gone out into the world, and Ella and Murray are beginning again the accumulation of the nest-egg.

It is astonishing how young it keeps them. The horizon toward which the waves that Ella can see from her window are constantly rushing, is one that is lit with hope.

Ella and Murray are still on tiptoe about Life, they have started their nest-egg for that trip to Europe.
