Within it, besides many of the smaller cities, are included Georgetown, Waxahachie, Corsicana, Waco and Fort Worth. ## STORM AT CHILDRESS

Several Persons Injured and Considerable Damage is Done to Property.

The country about Wichita Falls was blessed with a splendid rain this morning. The rainfall, while not exceptionally heavy in this vicinity, was just about what the farmers wanted. It was not heavy enough to damage the cotton crop, but was sufficient to give the ground a good soaking and make conditions good for the farmers to finish breaking their wheat lands and place the ground in good condition for wheat sowing. A few farmers have already sowed their wheat, and the rain will start the plant to growing in good shape.

Reports from points along the Fort Worth and Denver at noon today show that the rain has been general as far as Childress, being especially heavy between Vernon and Childress. On the Wichita Valley the rain was heavy from Munday west and other points report good showers.

STORM AT CHILDRESS.

Number of People Injured and Much Property Damaged.

Childress, Tex., Oct. 2.—Reports coming in today show that the storm which visited Childress and vicinity Monday night was more severe than first reported. The storm began its work at Whiteflat, Texas, a settlement about thirty miles southwest of Childress, where two rent houses of E. A. Day were completely demolished and at least seventy-five bales of unpicked cotton was destroyed. K. K. Tudor of the same community had his home destroyed and one of his children had its leg broken, and considerable other damage was done.

The storm, which was of a cyclonic nature, struck Childress at about 8 o'clock and came from the southwest, having changed its course after passing Whiteflat. The first house to be struck was that occupied by a Mr. Whitten and wife. The house was blown away, nothing whatever being left. Mr. Whitten was slightly bruised. The citizens donated a purse to him this morning. The new ward school building which was in course of erection suffered the greatest loss. The east and west walls for a distance of sixty feet were blown in. The loss is about $2,500. No insurance. A residence occupied by Lee Johnson was blown from its foundations and Mr. Johnson had his right shoulder dislocated. Many barns and small residences were blown from their foundations. The path of the storm at Childress was only about one-fourth of a mile wide. The rain fell in sheets during the storm.

J. W. Smith, a railroad engineer, and E. H. Eason mixed things at Trevathan & Bland's corner yesterday evening. Smith came out of the affray unhurt, while his antagonist was considerably battered up about the face. Both were arrested. Smith plead guilty to a charge of affray and paid a fine. Eason was released on bond for his appearance this morning.

PARKS SURPRISED AT SPAIN'S CHARGES

By Associated Press.

Paris, France, Oct. 3.—Leroy Parks, general European agent of the Panama Canal Commission, has expressed surprise at the recent charge of the Spanish government that Spanish laborers, who have gone to Panama have been grossly deceived and even maltreated.

Mr. Parks says that he knows of no such cases. To the contrary, the report of the Spanish consul at Panama who has personally investigated the conditions there, shows that the laborers' quarters are healthful and well cared for and that the laborers themselves are contented. Many are sending for their families and applicants, upon the advice of those already there, desire to take their families with them. Mr. Parks regards the Spanish as preeminently fitted for work on the canal.

J. S. Fore on yesterday sold to Waggoner Bros. fifty steers at satisfactory prices.

HAS REACHED CAIRO

PRESIDENT GUEST AT A NOTABLE DINNER ON BOARD THE MISSISSIPPI.

HIS SPEECH AT CAIRO

Emphasizes Need of a Powerful Navy Again Talks About Federal Control of Railways and Corporations.

By Associated Press.

Cairo, Ill., Oct. 3.—When President Roosevelt stepped ashore at 9 o'clock this morning he manifested every evidence of having spent a good night on the steamboat, Mississippi, and his spoken word confirmed the impression. He retired at midnight and there was little disturbance to his rest, except two or three demonstrations on shore, which, though violent while they lasted, were necessarily of brief duartion. The quiet was in the after half of the night, the first portion of it being fully occupied. The nation's chief was the guest at a dinner on the steamer at Alton of the Busipess Men's League of St. Louis, and that, with entertainment, speech-making and conversation which followed the dinner, his time until almost 12 o'clock was fully occupied.

The dinner was regarded by all as an event of rare occurrence and when the president said his final farewell, not a few were heard to remark that it had become history. An important feature was the fact that the scheme of a ship channel from the gulf to the lakes received an impetus which all believed will do much towards insuring the earnest pressing of that enterprise to the accomplished fact. The occasion was also notable in that in addition to the president, it was attended by no less than 15 governors and members of the Inland Waterways Commission and several representatives of the business world.

The president and party were driven to St. Mary's Park, where an immense crowd was assembled.

Mayor Parsons introduced Governor Deneen of Illinois, who in turn introduced President Roosevelt, who spoke in part as follows:

This nation is now on terms of the most cordial good will with all other nations. Let us make it a prime object of our policy to preserve these conditions. To do so it is necessary on the one hand to mete out a generous justice to all other peoples and show them courtesy and respect; and on the other hand, as we are yet a good way off from the millenium, to keep ourselves in such shape as to make it evident to all men that we desire peace because we think it is just and right and not from motives of weakness or timidity. As for the first requisite, this means not only the Government but the people as a whole shall act in the needed spirit; for otherwise the folly of a few individuals may work lasting discredit to the whole nation. The second requisite is more easily secured—let us build up and maintain at the highest point of efficiency the United States Navy. In any great war on land we should have to rely in the future as we have chiefly in the past upon volunteer soldiers; and although it is indispensible that our little army, an army ludicrously small relatively to the wealth and population of this mighty nation, should itself be trained to the highest point and should be valued and respected as is demanded by the worth of the officers and enlisted men, yet it is not necessary that this army should be large as compared to the armies of other great nations. We have an enormous coast line, and our coast line is on two great oceans. To repel hostile attacks the fortifications, and not the Navy, must be used; but the best way to parry is to hit—no fight can ever be won except by hitting—and we can only hit by means of the navy. It is utterly impossible to improvise even a makeshift navy under the conditions of modern warfare. Since the days of Napoleon no war between two great powers has lasted as long as it would take to build a battleship, let alone a fleet of battleships; and it takes just as long to train the crew of a battleship as it does to build it; and as regards the most important thing of all, the training of the officers, it takes much longer. The Navy must be built and all its training given in time of peace. When once war has broken out it is too late to do anything. We now have a good Navy, not yet large enough for our needs, but of excellent material. Where a navy is as small as ours, the cardinal

We now have a good Navy, not yet large enough for our needs, but of excellent material. Where a navy is as small as ours, the cardinal rule must be that the battleshps shall not be separated. This year I am happy to say that we shall begin a course which I hope will be steadily followed herefater, that, namely, of keeping the battleship fleet alternately in the Pacific and the Atlantic. Early in December the fleet will begin its voyage to the Pacific, and it will number, friends, among its formidable fighting craft three great battleships, named, respectively, the Illinois, the Missouri and the Kentucky. It is a national fleet in every sense of the term, and its welfare should be, and I firmly believe is, as much a matter of pride and concern for every man in the farthest interior of our country as for every man on the seacoast. A long ocean voyage is mighty good training; and not the least good it will do will be to show just the points where our naval program needs strengthening. Incidentally I think the voyage will have one good effect, for, to judge by their comments on the movement, some exlellent people in my own section of the country need to be reminded that the Pacific coast is exactly as much a part of this nation as the Atlantic coast.

Our Domestic Policy.

So much for foreign affairs. Now for a matter of domestic policy. Here in this country we have founded a great federal democratic republic. It is a government by and for the people and therefore a genuine democracy; and the theory of our Constitution is that each neighborhood shall be left to deal with the things that concern only itself and which it can most readily deal with; so that town, county, city and State have their respective spheres of duty, while the nation deals with those matters which concern all of us, all of the people, no matter where we dwell. Our democracy is based upon the belief that each individual ought to have the largest measure of liberty compatible with securing the rights of other individuals, that the average citizen, the plain man whom we meet in daily life, is normally capable of taking care of his own affairs, and has no desire to wrong anyone else; and yet that in the interest of all there shall be sufficient power lodged somewhere to prevent wicked people from trampling the weak under foot for their own gain. Our constant endeavor is to make a good working compromise whereby we shall secure the full benefit of individual initiative and responsibility, while at the same time recognizing that the function of a wise government under modern conditions not merely protects life and property, but to foster the social development of the people so far as this may be done by maintaining and promoting justice, honesty and equal rights. We believe in a real, not a sham, democracy. We believe in democracy as regards political rights, as regards education, and, finally, as regards industrial conditions. By democracy we understand securing, as far as it is humanly possible to secure it, equality of opportunity, equality of the conditions under which each man is to show the stuff that is in him and to acheive the measure of success to which his own force of mind and character entitle him. Religiously this means that each man is to have the right, unhindered by the State, to worship his Creator as his conscience dictates, granting freely to others the same freedom which he asks for himself. Politically we can be said substantially to have worked out our democratic ideals, and the same is true, thanks to the common schools, in educational matters. But in industry there has not as yet been the governmental growth necessary in order to meet the tremendous changes brought about in industrial conditions by steam and electricity. It is not in accordance with our principles that literally despotic power should be put into the hands of a few men in the affairs of the industrial world. Our effort must be for a just and effective plan of action which, while scrupulously safeguarding the rights of the men of wealth, shall yet, so far as is humanly posible, secure under the law to all men equality of opportunity to make a living. It is to the interest of all of us that the man of exceptional business capacity should be amply rewarded; and there is nothing inconsistent with this in our insistence that he shall not be guilty of bribery or extortion, and that the rights of the wage worker and of the man of small means, who are themselves honest and hard working, shall be scrupulously safeguarded. The instruments for the exercise of modern industrial power are the great corporations which, though created by the individual States, have grown far beyond the control of those States and transact their business throughout large sections of the Union. These corporations, like the industrial conditions which have called them into being, did not exist when the Constitution was founded; but the wise forethought of the founders provided, under the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution, for the very emergency which has arisen, if only our people as a whole will realize what this emergency is; for if the people thoroughly realize it, their governmental representatives will soon realize it also. The National Government alone has sufficiently extensive power and jurisdiction to exercise adequate control over the great interstate corporations. While this thorough supervision and control by the National Government is desirable primarily in the interest of the people, it will also, I firmly believe, be to the benelt of those corporations themselves which desire to be honest and law-abiding. Only thus can we put over these corporations one competent and efficient sovereign—the Nation—able both to exact justice from them and to secure justice for them, so that they may not be alternately pampered and oppressed. The proposal need be dreaded only by those corporations which do not wish to obey the law or to be controlled in just fashion, but prefer to take their chances under the present lack of system and to court the chance of getting improper favors as offsetting the chance of being blackmailed—an attitude rendered familiar in the past by those corporations which had thriven under certain corrupt and lawless city governments.

Federal Control of Railroads.

The first need is to exercise this Federal control in thoroughgoing and efficient fashion over the railroads, which, because of their peculiar position, offer the most immediate and urgent problem. The American people abhor a vacuum, and it is determined that this control shall be exercised somewhere; it is most unwise for the railroads not to recognize this and to submit to it as the first requisite of the situation. When this control is exercised in some such fashion as it is now exercised over the national banks, there will be no falling off in business prosperity. On the contrary, the chances for the average man to do better will be increased. Undoubtedly there will be much less opportunity than at present for a very few individuals not of the most scrupulous type to amass great fortunes by speculating in and manipulating securities which are issued without any kind of control or supervision. But there will be plenty of room left for ample legitimate reward for business genius, while the chance for the man who is not a business genius, but who is a good, thrifty, hard-working citizen, will be better. I do not believe that our efforts will have anything but a beneficial effect upon the permanent prosperity of the country; and, as a matter of fact, even as regards any temporary effect, I think that any trouble is due funadmentally not to the fact that the national authorities have discovered and corrected certain abuses, but to the fact that those abuses were there to be discovered. I think that the excellent people who have complained of our policy as hurting business have shown much the same spirit as the child who regards the dentist and not the ulcerated tooth as the real source of his woe. I am as certain as I can be of anything that the course we are pursuing will ultimately help business;

We Have Ham and Bacon That Will Make Your Mouth Water

The breakfast problem becomes a little more complicated as cold weather comes on.

You must have a more solid food and more variety than summer weather demanded.

BACON.—The doctors all agree that a good bacon is one of the most healthful foods you can eat. Without going into details they say it contains more food value than most other meats, providing you get a good quality, and there is nothing better than Swift's Breakfast Bacon, at 27c per pound.

HAM.—The same can be said of ham too, for it s prepared in much the same way except it contains a little more lean meat, and who doesn't like a plate of juicy ham and eggs either for breakfast or supper. Swift's Premium Ham is the best ham ever put up and is all anybody could ask for. 19c per lb.

LARD.—Next to flour, lard is one of the most important materials in baking. More than one pie or cake has been spoiled by using poor lard. The best only is good enough and Swift's lard is the best and purest made. You will have no trouble if you use it. 15c per lb. in five and ten lb. pails.

WEBSTER BACON BELLIES.—For those who like a very lean bacon this is perfection; it is prepared by Armour from carefully selected stock and is very thin and lean. 18c per lb.

FOR WATER SUPPLY.

Dr. Young Donates $500 to Citizens of Holliday—Bank Will Be Started There.

Dr. C. C. Young said yesterday when interviewed by a Times reporter that he had just deposited a check for $500 with the City National Bank as a bonus for the citizens of Holliday to help them secure a lasting water supply sufficient for the needs of the town.

He will give this money on condition that the citizens of the town raise an equal sum. Dr. Young is confident that a good supply of water can be secured at an expenditure of about $1,000.

In connection with the town of Holliday it is announced that a national bank is soon to be organized there, in which Dr. Young, J. A. Kemp, R. E. Huff, Wm. McGregor and others will be interested. A hardware store is soon to be established in Holliday, but before much can be done, a good water supply must be provided.

A number of North Dakota Germans and their families arrived last week and more are coming this week. These Germans have bought lands and are settling at or near Holliday.

Death of Hugh Gwinn.

Hugh Gwinn, aged 26 years, died at his home near the corner of Eleventh and Holliday streets at 6:20 o'clock this morning, after an illness of about two weeks with typhoid fever. He leaves a widow and three children.

Mr. Gwinn and his family moved here from Memphis, Texas, about a year ago.

His parents at Memphis have been notified of his death and the funeral arrangements will not be made until word is heard from them.

The Wichita Daily Times is becoming more interesting with each successive issue. The town of Wichita is making wonderful growth but among all enterprises, it should not forget the Times, for it is an essential factor in building the town. Among all our exchanges none are more acceptable than the Daily Times.—Archer City Reporter.

"Numny Dumny."

In his "Highways and Byways In Devon and Cornwall" Arthur H. Norway tells of a fragment of antiquity that still "lingers in the neighborhood of Redruth, where the country people when they see a ghost say, 'Numny dumny!'" and he adds, "I leave the riddle to be solved by any one who is curious enough to undertake a useful piece of practice in unraveling the corruption of language."

The phrase is probably a corruption of "In nomine Domini," the Latin for "In the name of the Lord," a phrase so familiar in the devotion of the middle ages.

The Word "Butter."

"Cow juice" is a slang term for butter in many parts of the United States. But the word "butter" itself almost certainly means something very like that by derivation. It is true that Pliny considered "butyrum" to be a Scythian word, but it seems clear that it was really Greek—from "bous," a cow, and "turos," cheese, and meant literally "cow cheese." "Buttery," by the way, has nothing to do with butter, in spite of appearances, just as "pantry" has no connection with pans. The latter is the storing place of bread ("pans"), and the former is the late Latin "botaria," the place of the "butts" or casks.—Chicago News.

for the corrupt man of business is as great a foe to this country as the corrupt politician. Both stand on the same evil eminence of infamy. Against both it is necesary to war; and if, unfortunately, in either type of warfare, a few innocent people are hurt, the responsibility lies not with us, but with those who have misled them to their hurt.

Not By Experience Alone.

This is a rapidly growing nation, on a new continent, and in an era of new, complex and ever-shifting conditions. Often it is necessary to devise new methods of meeting these new conditions. We must regard the past, but we must not regard only the past. We must also think of the future; and while we must learn by experience, we cannot afford to pay heed merely to the teachings of experience. The great preacher Channing in his essay on "The Union" spoke with fine insight on this very point. In commenting on the New England statesman Cabot, whom he greatly admired, he said that nevertheless "he had too much of the wisdom of experience; he wanted what may be called the wisdom of hope." He then continued in words which have a peculiar fitness for the conditions of today: "We apprehend that it is possible to make experience too much our guide. There are seasons in human affairs, of inward and outward revolution, when new depths seem to be broken up in the soul, when new wants are unfolded in multitudes, and a new and undefined good is thirsted for. These are periods when the principles of experience need to be modified, when hope and trust and instinct claim a share with prudence in the guidance of affairs, when in truth to dare is the highest wisdom."

These sentences should be carefully pondered by those men, often very good men, who forget that constructive change offers the best method of avoiding destructive change; that reform is the antidote to revolution; and that social reform is not the precursor but the preventive of socialism.

Wichita Falls, Texas, Oct. 3rd, 1907.

In this particular section of Texas the cotton crop is proving much better than was thought or predicted a month ago, and now it begins to look as if an average yeild of at least one-quarter of a bale per acre will be made. The weather continues dry and the indications are that a very small wheat crop will be sowed this fall. The scarcity and high price of seed wheat is given as the main reason for the small acreage of wheat to be planted, but the main reason has been and is now that the dry weather or drouth has made it impossible for a great deal of late summer and early fall plowing to be done, and those farmers who were not provided with traction engines found it impossible to do a great deal of plowing with their teams and thousands of acres which are usually planted to small crops will have to lie idle next year or be planted to other crops. This may be the best thing in the long run for the county. Most lands in this section, in the opinion of many good farmers, have already been "wheated" to death and need either a rest or a change of crops. It has been demonstrated that the soil will produce as good cotton and corn crops as the black lands of Texas, and the farmers, while they dislike to give up raising large small grain crops, have about come to the conclusion that crop diversification is their only hope and by degrees are adopting that plan of farming. This writer can remember when a bale of cotton on the streets of Wichita Falls would create nearly as much curiosity as an yoke of oxen on Wall street. It was all wheat and oats in those days. Now conditions are very different. The change has been very gradual, but each successive year has witnessed the cultivation of larger cotton and corn crops and less small grain crops. The destruction of the latter crop this year by the greenbug caused the acreage planted to cotton and corn to be larger than ever before and both cotton and corn have made a fairly good yields. Last year only about two thousand bales of cotton were marketed here by farmers. It is thought at least three times that number of bales will be marketed in Wichita Falls this winter.

The most effective argument used against prohibition is that to prohibit the sale of liquor drives people away from such towns. That is true, it does, but those who use this argument can say with equal truthfulness that it attracts others to take their places.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Nearly All Necessaries of Life Have Advanced.

The privilege of living is costing people a great deal of money these days and the indications are that the climax has not yet been reached. The price of all the necessaries of life still has an upward tendency and the prices of many articles are now higher than for years. One of the heaviest advances has been in the price of canned goods.

The apples from the Pacific, the peaches, the tomatoes, have shown a remarkable advance within the past twelve months. Tomatoes are worth in the can 25 per cent more today than they were at the corresponding period last year. The apricots are soaring way up. The beans, and the peas, too, are increasing in value day by day. The entire list of dried fruits in the grocery stores is advancing in price.

The bacon and the lard are following suit and the prices are climbing daily. The flour has advanced 15 cents on the hundred pounds within the last few days. It is believed by some of the leading grocerymen that flour will now go to $3 per hundred. It has now reached $2.90. One year ago it was only a small amount over $2.00. Of course this great advance in the flour is due to the utter failure of the wheat crop.

In some instances apples have advanced 50 per cent over their last season's price. Especially is this true of the New York apples, for the crop in that State was a complete failure.

Only two common commodities have not increased in price—coffee and sugar. The increase in corn and peas has thus far been nominal, but there is no telling what the future has in store. Even the butter man is sitting up and taking notice of the advancing prices and has declared that he will raise "just a little."

Motion and Heat.

All visible motion when arrested becomes heat, even that of running water. If we take two pieces of solid ice and rub them together, they can be heated by the friction until the melting point is reached. If we should pour water into an ordinary rotary churn and turn the crank, the mechanical energy exerted against the water will be transformed into molecular energy, and the water will be warmed in proportion to the amount of mechanical energy expended.

Character.

According to an old French saying, "A man's character is like his shadow, which sometimes follows and sometimes precedes him and which is occasionally longer, occasionally shorter than he is."

Few men have been admired by their own domestics.—Montaigne.

Long Felt Want.

Jaggles—Do you think there will ever be any radical change in the style of men's hats? Waggles—Not unless somebody invents a hat that will cover the bald spot on the back of the head.—Harper's Weekly.

Not only to appear good ought man to care, but to be so both privately and publicly.—Plato.

Both Better Off.

"Don't grieve; your husband is better off."

"So am I," responded the young widow; "he carried $25,000 life insurance."—Houston Post.

The world is too small for the covetous.—Latin Proverb.

HE MADE ONE MISTAKE.

Quaint Persian Tale of the Taming of the Shrew.

In Persia a wealthy man will often have a friend of whose society he is fond living in the house with him. Abdullah was such a friend to Aly Khan, a very wealthy and influential merchant of Ispahan, who was delighted with his charm and cleverness and so pleased with his services that he thought he would make a very good son-in-law and suggested him as such to his beautiful daughter. She was very overbearing and bad tempered; but, thinking that Abdullah was rather good looking, she agreed to it. They were married. Soon his friends came to congratulate him, among them Housseyn, who was known to have a very overbearing and bad tempered wife. He said, "I congratulate you on your marriage," and then he asked the bridegroom, "Are you really happy with a woman who is known to have such a bad temper?" "I assure you that she is perfectly charming and that I am perfectly happy." "May I ask how you manage it?"

"Certainly," answered Abdullah. "On the night of the marriage I went into her apartments in full uniform with my sword on. She did not take any notice of me, but put on a supercilious air and made a parade of stroking her cat. I quietly picked up her cat and cut off his head with my sword, took the head in one hand, the body in the other and threw them out of the window. My wife was amazed, but did not show it. After a few seconds she broke into a smile and has been a most submissive and charming wife ever since."

Housseyn went straight home and put on his uniform and went into the harem. The domestic pet came to greet him. He seized it with the hand that was accustomed to caress it, drew his sword and with a single blow decapitated it. At the same moment he received a blow in the face delivered by his shrewish wife and before he recovered from his astonishment a second and a third. "I can see to whom you have been talking," the lady hissed, "but you are too late. It was on the first day that you ought to have done this."

A TOOTH FOR A TOOTH.

The Forcefulness of Native Customs In Morocco.

In Morocco, the Baled-el-Maghrab (the land of the setting sun of the Arabs), the Lex Talionis is as much an integral part of the social system as are life and death. The Moors, it may be said, are frankly brutal. They have a certain rude code of honor to which they adhere when convenient, but among themselves they devise every possible excuse for not fulfilling engagements with the giaour.

On the other hand, they are extremely punctilious in exacting full measure from Europeans with whom they have dealings, and many stories might be told showing how Moorish judges mete out justice to their own people to the detriment of the alien.

For instance, it is not very long since that a British subject riding through the Soko (or market place) at Marakesh had the ill fortune to push against a half blind old woman, who, falling to the ground, broke off two of her front teeth.

The Englishman promptly offered compensation. It was refused, and the injured woman before the local caid demanded that her innocent aggressor should have two teeth knocked out in retribution for her injury.

Protest followed on protest against this exaction until finally the matter was carried to the sultan himself.

That potentate (and this instance is given to show the forcefulness of native custom) begged the Englishman to comply with the old woman's demand and publicly sacrifice his incisors, in return for which oblation he granted him concessions which have made that English merchant and his family foremost among the wealthy foreigners in Morocco.—London Spectator.

A Fitting Question.

Jim, who is six and thinks he is a man, got into a crowded car with his nurse. The nurse got the last seat, and two ladies made a little place between them for Jim and squeezed him in. Presently a portly lady got in, and Jim, the pink of courtesy, rose and lifting his hat offered his place. It was embarrassing. Afterward nurse explained to Jim that he must be careful in offering a seat, as a place that was large enough for a boy might not accommodate a lady. Next time he was in a car and a lady got in Jim leaned over to nurse and in a stage whisper asked, "Lizzie, do you think she'll fit?"—New York Press.

DEEPER PLOWING

MAKES A BETTER SEED BED AND LARGER CROPS RESULT.

GOOD CROP ESSENTIALS

Are Fall Plowing, Thoroughly Pulverizing Soil and Abundance of Vegetable Mould.

Special to the Times.

Lake Charles, La., Oct. 3.—Every farmer understands the soil conditions necesary for a successful truck patch or garden, which are in the main as follows, to-wit: Deep breaking (plowing)—soil thoroughly pulverized—plenty of humus, vegetable mould or barnyard manure, and good drainage. These conditions are just as essential for profitable field crops as for gardens.

The deep breaking for field crops should be done in the fall, and should be not less than eight inches deep—ultimately the progressive southern farmer will try to average ten to twelve inches.

The objection is urged that to turn up so much poor soil at once will ruin the land. It is not proposed to turn it up till it has been aired a few years. The way is to use a common turning plow run at the usual depth; then in the same furow run a second plow a trifle narrower, just behind the first plow, using another mule or span of mules. If the first plow cuts four inches deep, the second should cut four more, making eight in all. If the land will permit, cross plow four inches deep thirty days later; then harrow. In dry sections the harrow should always follow the plow. Of course, cross plowing is not admissible where ridge cultivation must be followed.

A better method than the double plowing above described is to use a sub-soil plow or a disc plow, as neither of these implements throw any subsoil to the surface. The disc plow is more economical, because it does the surface and subsoil stirring with one implement.

The air penetrates as deep as we plow. The deeper we plow the more plant food is prepared by the action of the air and more moisture is carried in the soil to withstand drouths. Deep fall plowing then is a great aid in breaking up the compounds of the soil, in preparing plant food, in storing moisture and in warming the soil for early planting. Where there is winter frost deep plowing increases its effect on the soil.

A thoroughly pulverized seed bed is a long way towards a good crop. On heavy soils the roller and disc harrow are almost indispensable to crush the clods and pulverize the soil. If this is done four or five inches deep, so that the yonug plant can get a good start, with reasonable after care the crop is assured. A clod is like unplowed land—it holds little moisture and yields scarcely any plant food. The best of seed has little chance in a poorly prepared seed bed. A finely pulverized soil adds germination, increases the amount of plant food, stores more moisture and is more readily penetrated by the air and the rays of the sun. Even granite rock, if thoroughly pulverized, will support vegetation.

A third requisite of good preparation of the soil is to have plenty of vegetable matter in it. This is generally secured by turning under cowpeas, or green crops of any kind, or using leaf mould or barnyard manure. Vegetable matter makes a soil porous, friable, easily worked, resistant of drouth. This vegetable matter called humus, absorbs and retains the food prepared in the soil by the action of air and heat, and gives it off to the plants as required. It warms the soil, adding frequently several degrees of heat, and it facilitates the condensation of moisture from the atmosphere in dry periods. More vegetable matter is especially important where the texture of the soil is so fine as to prevent the free circulation of water, and water stands upon the surface or in the soil so long that it is an injury to plants.

One of the most essential requirements for success in the production of field crops is drainage. Our soils are mainly of a close texture and require plenty of open ditches to carry off the surface water and the surplus soil water. Frequently the plant food is vitiated and the soil kept cold and closed to the action of the air by the standing water in it. Whenever a freshly dug post hole fills readily with water until it stands within six inches or even a foot of the surface, there is too much water in the soil. Field ditches for draining should not be less than two feet deep, and should have a good outlet.

Drainage facilitates early planting and in a large measure determines its success by removing the surplus water and allowing the sun's rays to warm the soil. Write in capital letters, where you can see it every day, the following:

1. Deep fall plowing, properly done.
2. Soil thoroughly pulverized.
3. Abundance of vegetable mould and
4. Complete drainage of tilled fields, lie at the foundation of better crop yields.

Kirby Speaks Only For Himself.

John H. Kirby, according to his statements in an interview given in the St. Louis Republic Saturday, has turned knocker against Bryan and is out of sympathy in respect to nine-tents of Texas democrats, besides taking a stand on the wrong side of the moral question of prohibition in Oklahoma. According to the Republic he said:

"I would rather see the State of Texas go Republican than see William J. Bryan elected president.

"There are thousands of democrats in my State who believe as I do," he continued. "Because Bryan does not represent true democracy as we see it. His views border too much on socialism."

Discussing the adoption of the prohibition plank of the Oklahoma Constitution, Mr. Kirby predicted that it would result in driving many of the citizens of the new State to Texas, whose citizens were characterized by their breadth of views and cosmopolitan spirit.

What your Tailor?
TRADE MARK REGISTERED 1906

THE original shape of a garment fits it only for the form it was made over, and when you crowd yourself into one not made over your form you destroy the lines and ruin the shape.

This is why ready-made clothing never holds the original lines over which it was built. You are bound to crowd it out somewhere and it is bound to cave in somewhere.

All of this can be avoided if you will order clothes made expressly for you. Then you have assurance of pleasing, permanently fitting garments, without mar or blemish.

Order your clothes from us—have them made for you from honest fabrics by our Chicago Merchant Tailors, Ed. V. Price & Co., and then judge for yourself—you'll never wear the "made up" kind again.

CLOTHES AND THE MAN.

Dante's Rebuke to the King With Whom He Dined.

That clothes made the man was as much a trite truth in Dante's day as now, according to an old story told by Sercambi. Dante was invited by a king to dine with him, along with a few other chosen friends, but he came attired quite shabbily, was given a place below the salt and was overlooked and apparently forgotten until the feast was over, when the king, having recollected himself, asked:

"By the bye, what has become of the poet I had intended to talk to?"

Dante, offended and hurt by the slight, had taken his departure, but returned when followed and invited anew. This time he came to supper superbly dressed in crimson velvet and gold and was served with extreme attention, but the courtiers observed with amazement that he poured the soup down his sleeves, tucked cutlets into his breast and smeared his rich attire with sauces.

"Good gracious, your majesty," observed the boldest of the supping nobles, "why has this poet such manners?"

The question was passed on to Dante, who gravely replied: "When I came here dressed shabbily and sat quietly in my corner, I was forgotten and snubbed. I now come in fine clothes and am very much attended to. I therefore concluded that it was rather my clothes than myself that you admired and invited and was willing to bestow on them a just share of your hospitality."—St. Louis Republic.

FAIRLY WARNED.

The Little Sister's Advice to the Prospective Bride.

It was big sister's wedding day, and mother was in the kitchen helping the cook. Little sister was there, too, and added frayed nerves to the excitement by demanding to know every other minute what a marriage was.

Finally mother became exasperated.

"If you speak again," she said, "I'll show you what a marriage is," and little sister sat down very meekly.

But little sister had caught the excitement and could not keep quiet. Just as mother and the cook were busiest she asked her question again. For a full minute the kitchen resounded with wails, and then mother placed little sister on the chair again.

"Now," she said, "you know what marriage is."

That night the clergyman stood under the marriage bell in the parlor. Into the room came big sister on the arm of her father. Halfway up the stairs little sister watched her through the door and cried softly. Finally she could stand it no longer.

Just as the ceremony was about to begin a form came flying down the stairs and little sister burst into the room.

"Oh, Milly, Milly," she cried convulsively, "don't you get married or you'll get an awful spanking."—New York Press.

Wanted a Square Deal.

There was once a sporting parson at Eastington, a place on the English coast which was a favorite landing place for woodcocks at the time of their immigration to England. When the birds arrived, exhausted by their long flight, everybody in the parish, including the parson, at once turned out to join in the sport of knocking them down with sticks. One Sunday the people were in church and the parson in the pulpit when the church door was cautiously opened and a head appeared, with a beckoning finger. "Well, what is it?" asked the parson. "Cocks is coom!" The parson hurriedly shut up his sermon case. "Shut the door and lock it!" he cried to the clerk. "Keep the people in church till I've got my surplice off. Let's all have a fair chance."

Good Reason to Hurry.

The trials of a musical accompanist are many, if we may credit all the stories told of them. A young professional recently played accompaniments for the performers at a private entertainment for a fashionable charity lasting for nearly two hours.

"Here, you see, I have no chance to take a breath for ten bars," said the amateur flute player, indicating to the accompanist a passage in his opening solo. "There are a number of such places in my solos, and if you'll hurry the time whenever you come to them it will be a relief to my wife, for all my family are subject to apoplexy and I've already had one slight attack."

Cleaning the Typewriter.

The most important thing in cleaning a typewriter is to get the dust and grit out of the machine—not farther into it, as is too often the case. At least twice a year every typewriter should be thoroughly cleaned with gasoline, and then the machine should be left alone until all the gasoline has evaporated. Then all points of friction should be oiled and the ribbon, which was, of course, removed at the start, replaced. Simply as a business proposition it pays to keep typewriters covered when not in use.—Circle.

MAORI TRADITIONS.

Legends and Customs of the Natives of New Zealand.

Many traditions of the Maoris of New Zealand indicate true refinement of feeling. That of Niwareka, or Great Delight, is one of these and represents a gentle Maori maiden, beautiful and modest, who, though deeply loving her bridegroom, yet shudders at the barbarity of his people and at his delight in bloodshed and cruelty. Unable to bear the sights and sounds around her, she passes from his embrace and seeks the shadows of another world. Only through great suffering and sacrifice does her young husband, unable to bear his solitary lot, redeem her from the shades. This beautiful legend is bound up with the origin of the custom of the tattoo, an ordeal which the lover was compelled to endure that he might realize the nature of suffering.

One of the finest legends of old Maori romance relates how a daughter of the heavens condescends to dwell with man, but, repelled by his rudeness and want of sympathy, ascends again to the skies, carrying with her her earth born child. Her husband is only able to reach her and regain her love by "climbing upward, not by earthly tendrils, but by those which, descending from the heavens, have taken root in earth."

One curious feature of the domestic life of the New Zealand natives is that the old women are led to believe that the highest honor they can enjoy is to be permitted to do all the cooking and prepare the food. A great deal of labor is thus left to them, which they cheerfully perform, resenting any interference on the part of the younger Maori women, who thus have plenty of leisure for enjoyment.—Chicago News
