At least 150,000 extra troops will head for gulf

■ Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said the increased deploymentt would include two armored divisions and small armored units from Germany as well as the famed "Big Red One" First Infantry Division (Mechanized) from Fort Riley, Kan.

Associated Press

President Bush, as expected, ordered a new round of troop deployments, adding up to 150,000 soldiers to the multinational force facing off against Iraq, while a U.S. campaign to gain support for U.N. military action against Iraq got a boost Thursday, with the Soviet Union offering its qualified approval.

In another development, Iraqi strongman Saddam Hussein sacked his army chief, suggesting dissension in the ranks over Kuwait, which his forces overran three months ago.

The deployment of as many as 150,000 troops represents a substantial addition to the 230,000 U.S. military personnel in the region. Allies from 26 countries have sent 70,000 soldiers to the multinational force assembled in the area.

"If this movement of force is what convinces him (Saddam), so much the better," Bush said in a nationwide broadcast from Washington. "Let's hope he comes to his senses."

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, giving details of the new buildup, said it would include two armored divisions and small armored units from Germany as well as the famed "Big Red One" First Infantry Division (Mechanized) from Fort Riley, Kan.

Neither he nor Bush would say just how many troops would be joining the 230,000 U.S. forces already in the gulf area.

However, full deployment of the units listed by Cheney would add more than 150,000 troops to the U.S. forces there, Pentagon officials said in private conversations. Even without sending all of their support units, the additional combat and essential support forces total about 100,000.

Iraq has more than 400,000 troops in the region.

Ancient skeleton

JERUSALEM (AP) — Archaeologists discovered a 19,000-year-old skeleton on the shores of the Sea of Galilee during the excavation of a pre-historic settlement, said Efrat Brown, a spokeswoman for the Department of Antiquities.

The skeleton is that of a man who was buried in a hole, lying on his back with his knees pulled up. Fishbones were found next to the body.

Simpler name

MASON CITY, Iowa (AP) — A Laotian couple with a 15-letter last name wanted a shorter, simpler, more American name for their newborn son.

So Phouthone and Chanhsy Sichanthongthip (pronounced sik-en-ton'-tip) chose the name Ronald Smith.

"It's too hard here to have a last name that's a long name," the baby's father said.

Chanhsy Sichanthongthip said her husband was looking through a book of baby names when he came up with the idea of an American name.

The royal thespian has a sit-down role in "Grime Goes Green: Your Business and the Environment."

The 30-minute video premiered Thursday at a meeting sponsored by Business in the Environment, which has just published an environmental guidebook for industry.

"Having a thought and a care for the environment must become an integrated part of good business practice," said Charles, who came up with the idea for the video. It sells for $675.

PHS coaches drop lawsuit against UIL

By David Morris
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Mojo's season comes to an end this week, on the football field and in the courtroom.

Permian High School head football coach Tam Hollingshead announced Thursday that the PHS coaching staff is dropping its lawsuit against the University Interscholastic League and the Ector County Independent School District.

"Although we strongly feel that we have a legitimate complaint regarding our previous treatment by the UIL, we are taking this action in order to achieve a clearing of the air," said Hollingshead, who read from a prepared statement.

Hollingshead, who made the announcement during a Thursday morning news conference in the PHS coaches' office, did not rule out the possibility of pursuing the suit at a later date. He refused to answer reporters' questions about the decision to drop the suit.

UIL attorney Matthew Trevena declined to comment on the decision, and UIL executives could not be reached for comment.

The 12-man PHS coaching staff filed suit against the UIL on Sept. 28, claiming that the agency followed improper procedures during an investigation of the Permian football program.

That investigation, which resulted in Permian's Sept. 20 disqualification from the state 5A playoffs, stemmed from allegations by Odessa High School football coach Jerry Taylor that PHS held unsanctioned summer practices.

The 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin on Wednesday rejected the Permian coaches' request for an injunction which would have allowed PHS to take part in this year's playoffs, which begin next week. Tonight's game against Abilene's Cooper High School will be Permian's last until next season.

Hollingshead said his players, in spite of their coaches' courtroom failures, are not suffering from a lack of intensity.

"We always play to win a football game," he said.

United Way campaign chairman Charles Spence, holding microphone, summons key campaign workers and loaned executives to the podium during Thursday night's "finale dinner" when it was announced that this year's campaign exceeded the goal of $2,503,000.

United Way surpasses goal

■ Campaign raises $2,677,076 for 17 United Way agencies.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Community spirit burst across the finish line Thursday as this year's United Way of Midland campaign topped its goal by raising $2,677,076.

"The campaign went great," Charles Spence, campaign chairman, said at a finale dinner at Green Tree Country Club. "It's phenomenal how Midlanders come through year after year. If Midlanders hear about a need they respond."

The efforts raised money to finance 17 United Way agencies.

A well-planned game strategy — with the theme "Go the Distance with the United Way of Midland" — helped this year's campaign to exceed its goal of $2,503,000. Money raised even surpassed the "stretch goal" of $2,650,000 — the actual amount needed by local United Way agencies.

"We had 350 volunteers who did an absolutely wonderful job," Spence said.

An added boost to this year's campaign came from a $100,000 challenge matching grant from the Scharbauer family. Each dollar that was an increase above last year's pledge or a new contribution was matched up to $100,000. The grant brought in $303,517 in new money.

About 400 people showed up at Thursday night's victory celebration. Bill Dingus of Exxon Co. emceed the event — as he has throughout the campaign's report sessions — with his usual antics. Dingus' sense of humor even led to his mock arrest at the dinner by sheriff's deputies.

Entertainment at the event was provided by Marti Gilmore, the MCT singers from Midland Community Theatre and Pam Crawford.

The United Way fundraiser began with the pilot campaign that ran from July 31 to Sept. 14. It raised $685,928 of the overall goal. The general campaign kicked off on Sept. 26.

Total monies raised by various divisions announced at the finale were: special gifts, $901,967; independent oil, $73,393; residential $25,402; retail,$56,693; real estate and finance, $93,635; business and entertainment, $105,842; utility, transportation and communication, $137,302; major oil, $708, 420;

White resigning as Midland's airport director

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City officials and local aircraft business representatives expressed sadness Thursday over the resignation of Victor White, Midland International Airport's director for eight years.

White

White, who will leave his job Nov. 30, announced that he has accepted a job as deputy director of airports for the Salt Lake City Airport Authority.

"This is a tremendous career move," said White, who will start his new job Dec. 3. "It's a significant leap upward. Being deputy director there is a fabulous position."

Since coming to Midland from Chicago in 1982, White has seen a depressed economy take its toll on the airport. Airlines such as Continental, Braniff and a host of commuter airlines pulled up their Midland International stakes.

But White also has been a major part of an aggressive airport marketing campaign as well as a key figure in expansion and renovation plans, city officials said.

"He did an outstanding job," Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said. "It's been a tough time for the airport and he's managed to keep the airport budget balanced."

White said he could not resist the opportunity to be a major aeronautical player in the operations of Salt Lake City International Airport, the 25th busiest in the United States. Midland International is the 85th busiest.

"It was a really tough decision," he said. "My family and I have developed a lot of ties and roots here. We've had a lot of emotional ties to the community that are going to be tough to break."

Before coming to Midland, White served two years as executive director of the North Chicago Airport Authority. He was the duty airport manager at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport from 1975 to 1980.

The Fort Worth native started his career as an airport management intern at the St. Louis International Airport in 1972. He worked there a year before becoming an airport management consultant at Chicago's O'Hair International Airport, where he worked for two years.

A graduate of St. Louis University, White and his wife, Denise, have three children, ages 20, 10 and 7.

White said he has enjoyed his Midland International job because it combines some of the skills of business managers, engineers, pilots, police officers, firefighters, lawyers and accountants.

"It's very exciting," he said. "It's never boring. No two days are ever alike."

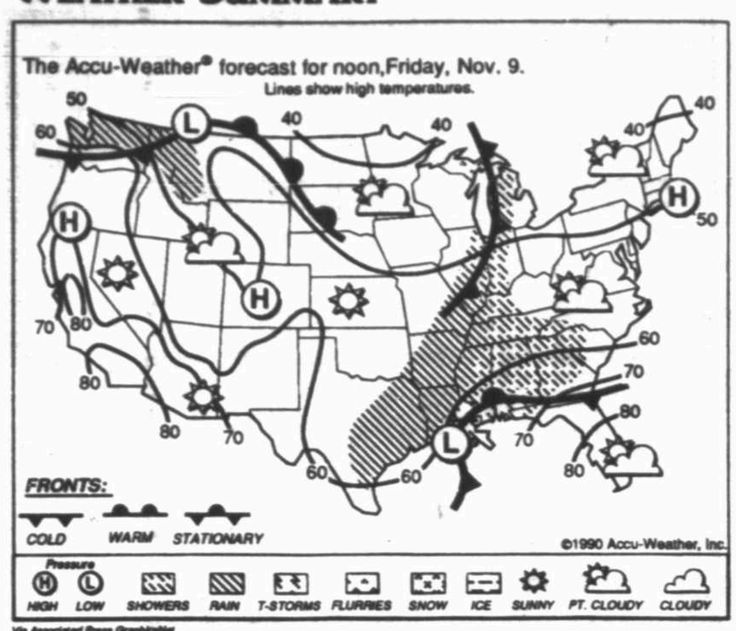

Midland International has seen parking lot expansions, terminal renovations, runway and lighting improvements and the birth of the foreign trade zone during White's tenure.

"I feel like I've been able to put my signature on the airport for the past eight years," he said. "The toughest thing about leaving it is going to be missing the tremendous staff that's worked for me."

McGregor said White has been instrumental in landing Federal Aviation Administration grants and pro-

GULF: Bush orders more troops to gulf

(From 1A)

Cheney said the Navy would send three additional aircraft carrier battle groups and their escorts, the battleship USS Missouri and a second Marine amphibious group of 5,000 men.

And, the defense secretary said, combat-ready National Guard brigades — the 48th in Georgia, the 155th in Mississippi and the 256th in Louisiana — would be called up for the first time, for possible reassignment to the Middle East. They total about 10,000 people.

Also, Cheney said, the Air Force "probably" would also send reinforcements.

Hundreds of additional tanks will be deployed, the secretary said.

"Whether it will be adequate in the event of going to war with Saddam Hussein's army, I'm not going to speculate," said Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Pentagon officials in private conversations said full deployment of the units would total about 150,000 troops.

Said Bush, "We're talking about significant numbers" of troops. Cheney, who faced reporters after Bush, added, "We will not put an upper limit on this deployment."

"Iraq's brutality, aggression and violation of international law cannot be permitted to succeed," Bush said, referring to the "dismantling of Kuwait" by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion.

"I find it hard to believe that today, November 8, that he (Saddam) does not understand that he's up against a determined, unprecedented alliance ..."

"When he surveys the force that's there ... he will recognize that he is up against just a foe that he can't possible manage militarily," Bush said.

Former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, meanwhile, secured the release of 50 more Westerners from Iraq, including Germans, Italians, Dutch and Britons, the Iraqi News Agency reported. It did not say when they would be freed. Iraq on Wednesday promised to free more than 100 Westerners.

Hundreds of Americans are among those still trapped, some held at strategic sites to deter attack by the U.S.-led mutinational force in the region.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III met in Moscow with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Baker wants Moscow to agree to using force as a last resort to liberate Kuwait.

Later, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said military might should not be ruled out, but cautioned it should be used only under U.N. auspices.

"A situation may emerge which effectively would require such a move," Shevardnadze said.

He played down any differences on Iraq between the superpowers. Before Baghdad's invasion of Kuwait, Moscow was Baghdad's principal ally and principal weapons supplier.

"I would advise against looking for some difference in the positions between the Soviet Union and the United States," Shevardnadze told reporters.

Bush said "we're on the same wavelength" with Gorbachev in terms of his policy goals in the Middle East. He said he felt there were no "mixed signals" from Moscow.

The Bush administration, impatient that months of economic sanctions have failed to dislodge Saddam from Kuwait, intends to ask the U.N. Security Council to authorize force to liberate Kuwait if Iraq doesn't pull out.

There seemed to be indications Thursday that cracks might be opening in Iraq's stated determination to remain in Kuwait.

Iraq's army newspaper and U.S. officials said Saddam replaced his military chief of staff, Gen. Nizar Al-Khazraji, with the head of his elite Republican Guards, Gen. Hussein Rashid. It did not say when or why Khazraji was dismissed.

Western analysts with knowledge of Iraq's military machine said Khazraji's surprise dismissal indicated growing opposition in some military quarters to Saddam's strategy on Kuwait.

Khazraji had been chief of staff since 1985 and was one of the top officers in Saddam's inner circle of military advisers.

Army identifies dead soldier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army on Thursday identified an Iowan stationed at Fort Hood, Texas, as the soldier killed in a truck accident this week in Saudi Arabia.

The victim was identified as Spec. Stephen D. Clark, 22, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Clark was a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Armor, 1st Cavalry Division, which deployed to Saudi Arabia from Fort Hood, Texas. He had been in Saudi Arabia for about a month.

An Army official said Clark was crushed by a 5-ton truck he had used to free a smaller truck that was stuck in sand.

Clark was standing between the two trucks, removing a pulling device when his truck rolled backward and crushed him against the smaller vehicle, according to Army spokesman Maj. Joe Paddila.

The death brings to 43 the number of U.S. military personnel killed in Operation Desert Shield.

WHITE: Airport director leaving for Salt Lake City

moting the airport as a regional facility.

He said it is uncertain when the city will find a replacement for White. "We haven't even sorted through all that yet," he said.

Pointing to the opening of Cutter Beechcraft Inc. operations and the entrance of American Eagle commuter service, White said the airport may be on the brink of a new era.

"I think we're at a crossroads between growing and losing ground and business to the Lubbock airport," he said. "The momentum is in Lubbock's favor and we've got to stop that."

Rich Henderson, president of Rich-Air Co. at Midland International, said White has been an asset to the local aviation industry.

"I personally hate to see him leave," Henderson said. "He's always done a good job and has been a great help to us.

"I hope they will be able to replace him with someone who can do as good a job."

Einstein, Freud letters may bring $150,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Theories on war and how to prevent it are a dime a dozen, but Albert Einstein's and Sigmund Freud's are expected to bring at least $150,000.

Sotheby's announced Thursday that two letters on the subject from two of the greatest minds of the 20th century would be auctioned Dec. 11.

The letters were written at the request of the League of Nations for a book of "letters between leaders of thought."

Einstein's four-page missive, dated July 28, 1932, focuses on the question, "Is there a way to liberate man from the doom of war?"

He states his support for a world body to resolve all conflicts between nations and adds that war exists only because "man has in him the need to hate and destroy."

Freud's 14-page answer, dated Sept. 12, 1932, attributes that need to man's aggressive instincts. "In the meantime, we may assure ourselves: everything that serves to promote cultural development works against war," he concludes.

Both letters are handwritten and signed. They were consigned by the trustees of an educational institution.

Sotheby's is selling them as one lot. The pre-sale estimate was $150,000 to $250,000.

NATO generals to visit U.S.S.R.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO's top senior military officers will travel to the Soviet Union this weekend to get a first-hand look at the dramatic changes under way in the superpower.

The visit begins in Moscow on Sunday and is the first such visit by high-ranking military officers of the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The trip, announced Thursday, will be made by U.S. Gen. John R. Galvin, the alliance's supreme military commander in Europe, and Norwegian Gen. Vigleik Eide, chairman of NATO's military committee.

The visit is part of series of discussions that have taken place in the last year among top political and military leaders of the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe and the Western nations.

PERMIAN: Coaches dropping suit

(From 1A)

ECISD spokesman Chuck Hornung said he was glad the lawsuit, for the time being at least, had been put to rest.

"There're other things we want to get on with doing," he said.

Nick Fowler, ECISD board member, said there is no ill will between the coaches and the school district.

ECISD board members on Oct. 4 refused a request by the coaches to join in the UIL suit. The school district was subsequently named as a co-defendant in the lawsuit.

"Since the administration was the first party to find that the coaches violated a UIL rule, then the school district...had to be a defendant, and I understand that strategy," Fowler said. "I didn't take it (the suit) personally and I don't think any of the other board members did, either."

The coaches' attorney, T. Gerald Treece of Houston, said Thursday that he would abide by the his clients' decision. However, he said their rights had been "severely violated" by the UIL and that their suit was legitimate.

In the suit, the coaches claimed that the UIL violated rules of due process when it was imposing sanctions against Permian. In addition to barring the Panthers from the playoffs, the UIL suspended Hollingshead and PHS junior varsity coach Myron Schneider for two games.

A PHS player who claimed his chances of a college scholarship were damaged by the sanctions later joined in the lawsuit as a co-plaintiff.

ECISD Superintendent Gene Buinger has scheduled a Monday news conference to address UIL investigations into the district's football programs.

Father testifies in Lubbock dress code suit

LUBBOCK (AP) — The father of a native American testified Thursday that the Lubbock Independent School District's dress code discriminates against his son's cultural heritage of wearing long hair.

"For hundreds of years Indians have worn long hair. It has been a way of life for many," said Michael Kelley, the father of Yacatico Kelley, a sophomore at Lubbock High School.

"Many Indians choose to wear their hair short. But it should be (Yacatico's) choice to have his hair long."

The elder Kelley and Kathy Buckberry, the mother of fifth-grader Michael Buckberry, are suing the LISD to modify its dress code, which prohibits boys from wearing longer-than-shoulder-length hair, pony tails, rat tails, braids or designs in their hair.

After the boys were removed from class for violating the code, Kelley and Mrs. Buckberry appealed to the school board to allow their sons back in class.

Their pleas were denied by unanimous votes at separate meetings in front of about a hundred upset parents and students protesting the policy with signs and chants.

The parents won a temporary restraining order against the LISD's hair policy for boys three weeks ago and are now seeking a permanent injunction in District Judge Bradley Underwood's court.

Underwood said after the hearing concluded Thursday that he would announce his decision early next week.

Yacatico's black hair flows down to his mid-back, and Michael, an honor student, has worn a rat tail for three years.

In opening statements, plaintiffs' attorney Edwin Price said the dress code violates the Texas Equal Rights Amendment because girls' hair length is not restricted by the code.

"Does something happen to boys when their hair grows past their shoulder?" plaintiffs attorney Sam Ogan asked LISD superintendent Mike Moses during cross examination.

"Do boys become disobedient or disrupt the educational process when their hair breaks their shoulder?"

Moses responded by saying the LISD created the policy last summer with the help of educators and students to regulate radical hairstyles.

"The policy last year prohibited extreme hairstyles," Moses said. "The teachers said they were having a tough time characterizing 'extreme' so we went one step further this year and identified the hairstyles. I think it is the school district's right to do that."

Defendants' attorneys referred to previous court decisions that allowed a school district to enforce similar gender-based dress codes.

Murray Hensley, who is representing the LISD, said gender-based provisions are crucial to a public school system.

STATE IN BRIEF

Education funds not for teachers

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's largest teacher group says the elections were good news for public schools and wants to make sure that teachers get their share of any increased education spending.

"For the past few legislative sessions, TSTA has initiated and supported legislation that would require local school districts to 'pass through' to teachers specific amounts of percentages of all new state funds appropriated for education," said Olivia Besteiro, TSTA president.

"Teachers did not get the money. In far too many districts, banks got the money. Therefore ... TSTA and its members will be asking the next Legislature to make sure that the money it intends to be used to attract and retain top quality teachers is actually spent for that purpose," she said Thursday.

The group said the state ranks 32nd nationally in salaries, 49th in benefits for education employees and 35th in average per-pupil spending.

UIL band contest set

DALLAS (AP) — The 11th annual University Interscholastic League's Marching Band Contest will feature 64 Texas high school bands vying for top honors Monday in Austin.

The contest will be held at three locations in Austin — Memorial Stadium at the University of Texas campus, Nelson Field and Burger Center.

Final rounds will begin at 2 p.m. in Memorial Stadium.

The competition carries a $3 admission rate for students and $4 for adults.

Lee High School of Midland will compete in the Class 5A division of the contest.

Pro-choice claims wins

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Abortion Rights Action League says this year's state elections wound up a big victory for the pro-choice camp.

Pro-choice candidates won nine of the 10 races TARAL targeted, executive director Phyllis Dunham said Thursday.

"One year ago, at the pro-choice rally in Austin, 20,000 pro-choice Texans pledged to mobilize and make a difference in the 1990 elections," she said.

"On that day, we proclaimed that when it comes to protecting choice in Texas, 'If politicians can't see the light we'll make them feel the heat.'

"Unquestionably, TARAL's pro-choice grassroots mobilization made good on its promise," Ms. Dunham said.

Meanwhile, anti-abortion activists blasted Republican Clayton Williams and attributed his failed bid for governor to his gaffes rather than his anti-abortion position.

Bill Price, president of Texans United for Life, said, "Because of Williams' incredible series of blunders, we in the pro-life movement had the unenviable task of trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

He also accused Williams of snubbing anti-abortion activists.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Troops told it's OK if they cry

By Michael Gormley
Hearst News Service

ABOARD THE USNS COMFORT — The military is trying to drill home an important lesson to the soldiers and sailors here facing the threat of war: It's OK to cry.

The fatal accident last month aboard the USS Iwo Jima put into motion the military's new techniques to address mental health concerns. Ten sailors were killed when a steam pipe in the ship's boiler room ruptured Oct. 30.

Immediately after the accident, for example, a "sprint team" of psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers left this 1,000-bed hospital ship in the Persian Gulf for the Iwo Jima to counsel friends and shipmates of the victims.

"The feeling is one of tremendous grief," said Adm. Robert Sutton, commander of naval logistics and support for Operation Desert Shield, who attended the memorial service for the victims. "When this happens everybody steps back and reassesses themselves, their vulnerabilities and what they do for a living. It's depressing and disconcerting when, in a battle area, an accident takes the life of one of our shipmates."

The sprint team is just part of the mental health program. The military has trained officers and enlisted men to watch for warning signs of poor mental health in themselves and their comrades, such as a breakdown in sleep patterns.

In addition, some troops are specially trained to watch soldiers and sailors for signs of fatigue and depression, aiming to head off problems such as delayed stress syndrome before they can develop fully.

"It's truly preventive medicine," said Capt. David A. Snyder, the Comfort's director of surgery.

The result, officers and enlisted men and women said, are happier, more productive troops. The effort goes beyond morale: It is a program that recognizes the emotional torment that individuals on deployment can suffer when they don't know how long they will be in a trouble spot or whether they will get home in one piece.

In the event of a battle or an accident that costs lives, "The idea is to almost give them permission, to let them know that, yes, they've gone through a tragedy and it's OK to cry," said Capt. Roger J. Pentzien, a psychiatrist and commanding officer of the Comfort.

"For many of us in the medical field, when we lose a patient, there are tears in our eyes. It's OK to cry. If we lose that, we're robots," said Snyder.

Lt. Denise Bernier, who works in hospital administration, said there are committees on the Comfort to encourage and direct group discussions and lectures to get troops to talk about their fears and problems. "It's not just these guys," said Bernier, who is from Warrenton, Va., speaking of the psychiatrists and psychologists. "It's everyone watching out for everyone else."

The gulf crisis brings its unique pressures, too. The threat of chemical warfare by Iraq, which could hit with only seconds notice, already has taken a psychological toll on the troops. For example, medical officers have reported disrupted sleep patterns, unusual nervousness and irritability among some soldiers and sailors.

On this hospital ship, in the event of a war, dealing with hundreds of wounded and dead soldiers every day would create its own stress.

"You always ask yourself, 'Did I do everything I could do?'"

Capt. Snyder said.

"You have to put (the shock and stress) out of your mind," said Hospital Corpsman Douglas Allen of Eden, N.C. "We have to concentrate and we have to keep on working and training to get better."

Senior Chief John E. Racsumberger of Buffalo knows better than most the toll death can take on a crew. He was aboard the USS Iowa in 1989 when a gun exploded, killing several sailors.

"For myself, being on the Iowa explosion and the others, it really hits you," he said. "You really feel empathy for the family and crew. It's really hard to describe, but you have to keep going on. You have to."

Drivers didn't break law, experts say

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Legal and religious experts have ruled that a group of Saudi women who defied tradition by driving 15 cars through Riyadh did not violate civil or moral laws, informed sources said Thursday night.

But the experts assembled by the governor of Riyadh, Prince Salman Bin Abdel-Aziz, said they shouldn't do it again, the sources said.

The protesters won at least a moral victory because the rulings mean there is no ban in Islamic or civil law to women driving. The sources predicted women will eventually be allowed to drive in this conservative Arab country, probably within six months to two years.

The sources predicted women will eventually be allowed to drive in this conservative Arab country.

The veiled women, most of them middle-aged and married, startled this desert kingdom Tuesday by taking the steering wheels in the first open protest by women here. Fifteen of them drove the cars, and 35 rode along in support.

Police stopped the convoy and took the women to a police station. Saudi officials said they were released after signing a pledge that they would not repeat their protest elsewhere.

Many of the women were concerned that if there is a war in Saudi Arabia, with their husbands away, they will be trapped at home, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Although there is no written law barring Saudi women from driving, they are prohibited from doing so under strict Islamic tradition.

During Tuesday's protest, the Saudi religious police, known as the Committee for Commendation of Virtue and Prevention of Vice, insisted after rounding up the women that they be arrested for committing a moral offense.

But King Fahd intervened and told the religious police that the incident was being investigated by the prominent religious scholars and legal experts assembled by the governor of Riyadh, the sources said. They did not disclose the identities of the experts.

Organizers of the demonstration said many of the women came from prominent families and had driver's licenses from Europe and the United States. The women insisted there was nothing political about their protest.

At least some members of the Saudi royal family reportedly favor ending the ban on women driving but have not pushed for it because of opposition elsewhere in the country.

Western women drive inside the huge Saudi ARAMCO compound for oil field workers in Dhahran.

No new income taxes, Bush says

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, reviving the no-new-tax pledge he abandoned in a budget deal, said Thursday the only way Democrats will be able to raise income tax rates will be "over my dead veto."

"It ain't going to happen, I'll guarantee you," Bush told reporters at a news conference after saying he expects congressional Democrats to come up with new tax proposals.

But he hedged his pledge somewhat when asked flatly if he would reject new taxes.

"Can I make the promise I won't support them? Absolutely," Bush said. "But ... sometimes you run into some realities. But I'm girding up my loins to go into battle to beat back the tax attempts that I think are coming."

He said Democrats had an "insatiable desire" to raise taxes and accused them of trying to "stick me with being anti-civil rights" for vetoing a landmark bill banning job discrimination.

Bush struck a sharply combative stance toward the Democrats, who increased their power in both the House and Senate with Election Day victories.

"I didn't do as well as I'd like," the president said, reflecting on Tuesday's GOP losses.

Bush said the clear message from Election Day was that "people feel they're taxed too much."

Six incumbent governors, of both parties, went down to defeat. The losses generally reflected tax or economic woes.

Bush, in one of his gloomiest assessments, said he was very concerned that the economy was faltering. He said he would consult with economists in and out of the government on ways to soften the blow and stimulate growth.

'What I think we're going to see coming down the pike at me ... is a whole wide array of tax proposals out of the Democrats. ... And they're going to do it over my dead veto — or live veto, or something like that, because it ain't going to happen, I'll guarantee you.'

— President George Bush

"We're in some tough times right now," the president said.

Michael Boskin, Bush's chief economic adviser, told a business group Thursday that he wouldn't rule out a possible negative quarter of economic growth either in the final three months of this year or early next year.

He didn't specifically forecast a recession, but said there was no doubt economic growth was weak.

"The economy at best is in a lull, but we do expect that lull to be relatively brief and relatively minor," Boskin said.

Even before the election, Republicans were heavily outnumbered in Congress, and their losses Tuesday will make it harder for Bush to win veto battles and push a legislative agenda.

But Bush said the results won't "tie my hands at all" in dealing with lawmakers, signaling that he would be less conciliatory in the next two years.

"When you extend the hand (of cooperation), somebody else has to reach out and shake it," Bush said.

He said he would appeal for Democratic support for his policies, but warned:

"I'm going to use the veto so as to stop a lot of bad things from happening to this country. ... I am more determined than ever to use it."

Bush abandoned his politically popular no-new-tax pledge during negotiations with Congress to reduce the massive budget deficits. To the dismay of many Republicans, the deal Bush approved for fiscal 1991 includes $140 billion in new taxes.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said Wednesday there's support among Democrats for a surtax on millionaires, one of the provisions omitted from the budget deal.

Bush said that if Democrats want higher taxes, "we're in for a whale of a fight and the proffered hand (of conciliation) may miss the shake because we're not going to compromise on that."

"What I think we're going to see coming down the pike at me ... is a whole wide array of tax proposals out of the Democrats. ... And they're going to do it over my dead veto — or live veto, or something like that, because it ain't going to happen, I'll guarantee you."

With his latest pledge of no-new-taxes and his bashing of Democrats, Bush appeared to be testing themes for his own re-election race in 1992 — although he insisted he hasn't decided whether to run.

"I'm not thinking about '92," he said.

Bush mugged an exaggerated grin when asked about the weaker-than-expected election showings Tuesday of two potential Democratic rivals — New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley.

He said he was heartened that GOP losses in gubernatorial and congressional races were well below historical trends for a party that controls the White House.

Rockefeller puts industry on notice

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key senator on health care issues told the private health insurance industry on Thursday to change their ways or "we will do it for them."

Sen. John D. Rockefeller, D-W.Va., who heads the Senate Finance Subcommittee on Medicare and Long Term Care, told reporters that if private insurers don't adequately answer his call, they will find themselves replaced by national health insurance by the turn of the century.

"There's a growing sense that they are a major part of this problem," he said at a media forum on health care issues.

But he added that the insurance industry is working "very hard" to develop a solution.

Indeed, James Dorsch, Washington counsel for the Health Insurance Association of America, said that "we know the status quo can't continue." And to that end, he said, the association has offered several proposals to Congress to make health insurance more accessible to small employers.

But Rockefeller said the private insurance industry is a particularly appealing target to lawmakers, vexed by spiraling health care costs expected to exceed $600 billion this year and an uninsured population estimated at around 37 million.

He said that as Congress continues to feel the fiscal pressure of soaring health care costs, regulation of private insurance will be "absolutely irresistible" because it doesn't cost the federal Treasury.

"You talk about an irresistable target — a nice, plump turkey sitting on the table at Thanksgiving time — that's it," said Rockefeller, who won re-election Tuesday.

Rockefeller headed the bipartisan Pepper Commission, which last March recommended a $66 billion public-private plan to provide health care to nearly all Americans. The plan also included some insurance market changes.

The senator said he is part of a bipartisan group of lawmakers who are starting to draft some of those insurance changes into a legislative bill.

"There needs to be a plan that will resolve some of these problems in the health insurance industry, hopefully voluntarily, by them," he said. "They have to make their contribution to its overall solution or we will do it for them."

'We know the status quo can't continue.'

— James Dorsch, counsel, Health Insurance Association

It would be best for the industry if they pave the way themselves, he said, but added that they will have "to have to adhere to standards that are very close or exactly what the Pepper Commission recommended."

These would prohibit private insurers from denying coverage for pre-existing conditions and require them to accept anyone who wants insurance and to set rates on the same terms to all groups in an area.

"We're basically going to have to get that far to have true health insurance reform," Rockefeller said.

"Whether Congress will act in their place ... will depend on whether they (the insurers) decide to be at the table, decide whether they will put up real reform, not just something that looks good on the surface," he said.

High prices and cream-skimming practices that pick off the good risks contribute to the health care crisis, Rockefeller said, by driving up costs for everyone.

Over the last 28 months, more than 63 million Americans lacked health insurance for some period, he said.

If the country's health care problems don't begin to ease, he said, "the patience of the American people will run out and ... this public-private mixture of health care that the Pepper Commission tries to keep will no longer have a constituency by the end of the decade, and we will go to national health insurance."

Hearst buys into ESPN

NEW YORK (AP) — The Hearst Corp. said Thursday it had purchased the 20 percent interest in the sports cable television service ESPN Inc. that had been held by RJR Nabisco Inc. Terms were not disclosed.

RJR Nabisco, taken private last year in the biggest debt-financed takeover on record, had hired an investment adviser 15 months ago to help it evaluate whether to sell the ESPN stake.

Capital Cities-ABC Inc. owns 80 percent of the cable channel and had the right to match any offer for RJR's interest in ESPN.

It was reported more than two months ago that Hearst was negotiating over buying the RJR stake. Hearst and Capital Cities-ABC are already partners in two other cable channels.

ESPN is the largest cable programming service in the United States with more than 57 million cable TV subscribers, or about 60 percent of U.S. homes with television.

It offers coverage of professional and amateur sports events as well as sports news and lifestyle programs.

RJR Nabisco, the food and tobacco giant purchased in a $24.5 billion deal by the investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. in April 1989, has been selling assets to trim its debt.

Hearst said the purchase continues its strategy of expansion into cable programming.

The diversified media company, which also has interests in newspapers, magazines, book publishing, radio and television, is already a partner with Capital Cities-ABC and others in the cable services Arts & Entertainment Network and Lifetime Television.

Earlier this month, Hearst announced the fomation of New England Cable Newschannel, an all-news cable network for the New England region. Its partner in that deal is Continental Cablevision Inc.

Sanctions merit close scrutiny

Beginning in the late 1970s, the United States enacted sanctions against the South African government with the intent of exerting pressure that would cause that government to abolish its policy of apartheid or separation of the races. The sanctions worked, evidenced by the fact that South Africa has abolished its apartheid policy.

Now a move is underway to abolish the United States sanctions against South Africa. In fact, late in October Tamsanqa Linda, co-president of the South African United Christian Conciliation Party, visited Midland and Odessa as part of a nationwide tour to urge that the sanctions be lifted.

While the intent of the sanctions was to move South Africa away from its policy of apartheid, Linda — who represents a half-million blacks — said the real struggle in his country today is between the Communist-sponsored African National Congress (ANC), led by Nelson Mandela, and forces working for a free-enterprise system similar to that in the United States. Whichever group wins understandably will shape South African policy and, thus, that nation's relationship with the United States.

Claiming that sanctions hurt South Africa's black population and that the ANC continues to terrorize blacks so they cannot think for themselves, Linda said a decision to lift the sanctions would encourage reinvestment in South Africa by U.S. companies, which would help create the wealth necessary for the blacks to continue development of their free enterprise system.

Linda's argument should not fall on deaf ears in this country. What some believe is occurring in South Africa is a power struggle between forces pushing for a Communist government — even though that flies in the face of what is occurring today in Eastern Europe — and those who seek a free enterprise system. The government of the United States should have great interest in helping the latter if the situation is indeed as Linda claims.

Although the South African government has been working toward achieving the goals on which the sanctions were based, it still needs to repatriate 20,000 exiles and free other political prisoners. The deadline for those steps is April.

President Bush should watch the situation in South Africa closely and as soon as all the conditions on which the sanctions were based have been resolved, the sanctions should be lifted so that American business can begin working there again.

South Africa's strategic minerals such as chromium and magnesium are vital to the United States, and ensuring that we have access to them is critical. The sooner the sanctions can be lifted the better — for both nations.

U.S. mum about man who vanished

WASHINGTON — When his father vanished in Uganda in 1971, Ted Siedle, who was 17 years old at the time, had no idea that nearly two decades would pass and he still would not know for sure how, or even if, his father had died. Today the U.S. government refuses to tell Siedle the truth.

Anderson

Robert L. Siedle was a 46-year-old sociologist who, in 1971, was lecturing in Uganda at Makerere University. He had three sons and an estranged wife back in the United States. In Africa he had befriended an American free-lance journalist, Nicholas Stroh, who worked for several U.S. newspapers.

On July 7, 1971, Stroh and Siedle set out for Mbarara, Uganda. Stroh was looking into reports that there had been a massacre at the Simba Barracks of the Ugandan army. Siedle was writing a book about missionaries and thought he might tag along with Stroh and do some research.

They spent two days in Mbarara, and on the morning of July 9, Stroh set out for the Simba Barracks on his own in a beat-up blue Volkswagen. There was a sign in the window that identified him as "Press" and a cross around his neck that identified him as Catholic. "Please call a priest," the inscription read, for emergencies. It is unlikely that his killers obliged.

Siedle had stayed behind at the hotel that day, until a car called for him at the hotel. Three Africans dressed in the shirts of Uganda's special forces ushered him into the back seat and drove away. Neither man was heard from again.

Idi Amin, the brutal Ugandan dictator, ordered an investigation, more out of obligation than curiosity. Nearly a year later, investigators found Stroh's burned-out car outside of town at the bottom of a ravine. A former lieutenant in the Ugandan army came forward with a story. He said he saw Stroh arrive at the Simba Barracks and saw him being led away at gunpoint by soldiers. The lieutenant was then ordered to "destroy everything." He burned the Volkswagen and then went with another soldier to a spot 10 miles out of Mbarara where they found the charred remains of two bodies, poured gasoline on them, burned them again and scattered the ashes in a river.

Idi Amin decided the investigation had gone far enough. He said the two men had died "at the hands of unidentified persons," and closed the case. But that wasn't good enough for their families. They pressed their own government for answers and got none.

Today, Ted Siedle, now 36 and the president of a securities company in Providence, R.I., knows a little bit more. But he didn't get it through official channels.

In the 1980s when Siedle was studying at Boston College, he approached the former U.S. Ambassador to Uganda, Clyde Ferguson, for some answers. Ferguson was teaching at Harvard. He told Ted Siedle that his father and Stroh may have been mixed up with the Central Intelligence Agency, which had a heavy contingent in Uganda.

Since then, Siedle has pieced together more details, including the fact that his father met with a known CIA officer the night before he and Stroh set out for Mbarara.

After college, Siedle took a job with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington. Twice, strangers who found out who he was approached him to talk about his father's death. They didn't want to share much, and Siedle assumed they were intelligence officials.

In 1982, Siedle filed a formal request with the State Department under the Freedom of Information Act. He wanted the file on his father. The department gave him a few documents with much of the information blacked out because it was classified.

Siedle isn't angry anymore. "At this point, I'd just like to know the truth," he told our associate Tim Warner. "If people like my father are encouraged by the CIA to engage in amateur investigations, the CIA and the government should be accountable for what happens to them."

CHARLEY REESE

Let's cut out the cloak-and-dagger stuff

We are the only nation on earth which publicly debates the funding of its covert operations. To stop being such a ridiculous cause of laughter in foreign capitals we ought to cut it out — not the debate but the covert operations.

Reese

The Central Intelligence Agency does not have a glorious history. I would say it is more often inept than evil, but like every other intelligence service in the world it is corrupted by its own secrecy.

Apologists like to claim that the CIA's successes remain secret while its mistakes become public. It is just as likely that most of its mistakes remain secret while only a few of them become public.

At any rate, as the world's most open democracy, we are just no good at clandestine stuff and should, in fact, view it as dangerous and threatening to our liberty.

If we wish to supply arms to some guerrilla movement, then let us debate it publicly and if Congress approves, let us proudly send the arms on U.S. transport supervised by the Army. There is no reason under the sun to involve the CIA.

In fact, it has literally become an insane ritual — one of many in Washington — where there is public debate, public news reporting, about whether to arm this group or that and once it is decided then the task is undertaken by the CIA on a covert basis.

Why? The whole world already knows we decided to do it. Why pretend? Why go through the motions of hiding public actions?

What we all should want most at every level of government is accountability, and secrecy is the enemy of accountability. What we should all insist is that our government at every level strictly obey the Constitution, and covert activities are an easy way to thwart the Constitution.

We should dismantle the CIA and reconstruct it to do one job and one job only: collect information and analyse it. We should never allow it to interfere in foreign elections, to plot coups in foreign countries, assassinate people, plant disinformation in the media, stir up opposition or arm insurrections.

These are things the Soviets can do because they live in the shadows. We live in the sunshine and we should drag our government into the sunshine, too. Whatever we wish to do, let us do it openly where the people who are doing it can be held accountable and so the people who order it done can be held accountable.

There is no point in diddling around with so-called rules for covert actions as the Senate and House have done. Just ban all covert activities except the collection of information. Period. End of discussion.

Lord knows the CIA seems to have enough trouble collecting accurate information, and perhaps if it concentrated purely on that task, it could improve its record.

If there is a need for military supplies or military actions, then that's what we have an Army for. Tom Clancy's novels are entertaining, but the reality of our history of covert action is a great deal less inspiring.

So not only should we eliminate covert CIA activities, but we should also severely limit the countries where it can even do that.

We have ambassadors and attaches and if we can't find enough sensible sober people to fill those posts, then we probably shouldn't have embassies. In non-hostile countries, they should be able to collect whatever information we need for policy purposes. We should limit CIA activity only to those countries which pose a potential military threat to the United States.

Covert activities — both the usual overt-covert and the occasional really covert actions — constitute one of the most dangerous turns our government, freed from the chains of the Constitution, has taken.

What gives on the college campus?

The novelist Anne Rice thinks to terrify us with tales of erotic vampires. Hah! What does she know about terror, compared to Charles J. Sykes, whose new book, "The Hollow Men" (Regnery/Gateway, $19.95), tellingly, chillingly recounts witchhunts on campus?

Murchison

Today's hags are faculty members and students audacious enough to assert, as Sykes puts it, "the traditional liberal values of tolerance and free and disinterested inquiry after truth."

Self-styled spokespersons for self-conscious sub-groups — women, gays, blacks, Indians, and so on — grind their teeth and shake their fists: Our viewpoint WILL be taught, not as information but as revealed Truth.

Richard Bernstein of the New York Times wrote recently of a conference in Berkeley, Calif., that wrestled with the new phenomenon of "p.c.-ness" — political correctness.

"The cluster of politically correct ideas," Bernstein writes, "includes a powerful environmentalism. Biodegradable garbage bags get the p.c. seal of approval. Exxon does not."

Academic traditionalists and libertarians meanwhile perceive a "growing intolerance, a pressure to conform to a radical program or risk being accused of a commonly reiterated trio of thought crimes: sexism, racism, and homophobia."

The classic case study is Dartmouth College, in Hanover, N.H. Once a leading liberal-arts college, Dartmouth, on Sykes' evidence, is in danger of becoming less a community of knowledge and free inquiry than a sort of daily pep rally for p.c.-ness.

"The Deconstruction of Dartmouth," to which Sykes devotes two-thirds of his invaluable book, has led to an undeclared war on free thought. The liberal arts tradition of free inquiry has itself been partly set aside. Today's Dartmouth is being run for the benefit of the faculty and its specialized political and professional concerns.

An English major may graduate from Dartmouth without studying Shakespeare, but, oh, the joyous romps through courses like "Sport and Society," "The History of Clothing and Psychology of Dress," and "Corporate and Governmental Deviance."

The most interesting, and discouraging, chapters in "The Hollow Men" concern harassment of the conservative Dartmouth Review, an independent, student-run publication.

The administration tolerates scatological on-campus publications but harasses and even persecutes the Review.

Dartmouth College, on available evidence, must constitute one of the strongest threats to free speech and free thought presently to be found in America. It has company, nonetheless. Various universities restrict speech that might offend blacks or homosexuals. The University of Texas English Department is hell-bent on turning the freshman writing requirement into an indoctrination course on "sexism" and "racism."

Who'd have thought it could come to this in America?

Big Brother is making snap judgments

There always seems to be something new in California that many of us in the rest of the country don't want to see spread eastward. That is because new things in California always seem to be a little scary.

Nobody ate raw fish in the rest of the country until they started doing it in California, did they?

Grizzard

Now, there's Photocop. Not the sequel to the movie "Robocop," about a giant Polaroid camera with enough firepower to blow away two Iraqs, but a new device to catch more speeders.

You're speeding and you drive past Photocop. It records your speed, takes a picture of your license plate and also takes a picture of you.

Photocop is such a good camera, according to a California newspaper I read, it can even photograph the expression on your face.

There are a lot of things I don't like about Photocop. I don't like the way it tickets speeders. It doesn't dispatch a live officer to pull you over.

Instead, within 24 hours after you've been pinched by Photocop, its photographs have been processed, you have been identified, and a computer has mailed you a ticket to your home.

That doesn't seem fair. I liked it the old way where cops parked under overpasses or just over the top of a hill or behind those signs you used to see all over the South that said, "Save America! Impeach Earl Warren."

At least in those instances you had a fighting chance to hit your brakes and sneak past unticketed.

Several California cities say Photocop has greatly enhanced the revenue they make by catching ..e speeders.

The company that produces Photocop, Traffic Compliance Systems, can say the same thing. Every time Photocop hands out a ticket to a speeder, it pockets $15 of its own.

Some other thoughts: If Photocop can record the expression on your face, can't it also record the expression on the face of a 22-year-old bimbette you just picked up? Couldn't that lead to blackmail on the part of unscrupulous police officers?

And if Photocop comes south, it could bring an end to a grand Southern tradition, that of the big-bellied county sheriff pulling over the Northern tourist for speeding.

You've seen it enacted on television many times.

The deputy hitches up his pants, walks over to the driver and says those magical words: "Whar's the far?"

Then he says, "Lemme see yo' dribbinlicunce."

Dribbinlicunce — the little card you carry in your wallet that says the governor of your state has given you permission to operate a motor vehicle.

With Photocop, none of that would be necessary. The Northern speeder will not be pulled over. He'll simply receive a ticket in the mail when he returns to Akron after visiting Crazy Joe's Reptile Farm and Discount Fireworks in Big Snake Beach, Fla.

There's too much Big Brother in Photocop. It's too Orwellian, and what if I'm riding down the road and Photocop nails me and I'm picking my nose?

The right to drive while picking one's nose and not have it recorded on a photograph back at police headquarters is something every American should stand up and fight for.

If Californians want to give up that freedom, so be it. But don't bring Photocop east.

Save America. Impeach Photocop.

Pro-Cuban rebels bomb synagogue, U.S. targets

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Left-wing guerrillas have bombed U.S.-linked agencies and Lima's largest synagogue in a wave of attacks protesting American and Israeli policies in the Mideast. No one has been seriously injured in the attacks.

A bomb Wednesday night caused minor damage near the U.S. ambassador's residence, police said, and another bomb at the North American Cultural Institute slightly injured a bystander. Bombs last weekend caused minor damage at the U.S. Consulate; a branch office of Xerox Corp.; and the Peruvian Israelite Union Synagogue.

A weekly newspaper close to the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement said Thursday the attacks "target Jews and Americans engaged in the violation of human and national rights in the Middle East."

The Jewish community in Peru is quite small, including 3,000 in Lima, the country's capital and largest city. About 70 percent belong to the Israelite Union congregation.

Tupac Amaru is the smaller of two guerrilla groups operating in Peru. Like the larger Shining Path, Tupac Amaru is Marxist-Leninist. But the pro-Cuba group mainly has attacked U.S. influence in Peru; Shining Path would like to recreate Peru along the lines of the Chinese Communist revolution.

Germany, Poland agree to sign border treaty

FRANKFURT AN DER ODER, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl announced Thursday that Poland and the newly united Germany will sign a historic border treaty this month, ending decades of concern over the common frontier.

Kohl also said he wanted a wide-ranging friendship and cooperation treaty to be submitted to the German and Polish legislatures for ratification by the end of February.

"We are deeply convinced that real peace will be possible only if Germans and Poles march together along this road into a peaceful future," Kohl said of the treaties.

He made the comments following a day of talks with Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the first foreign leader to visit united Germany.

Mazowiecki said he was satisfied with the "important results" of the talks. He also said the German-Polish border must not be a divided between East and West.

The meeting came exactly one year after Kohl became the first Western leader to visit newly democratic Poland, a trip interrupted when the dramatic news reached Warsaw that the Berlin Wall had fallen.

Kohl pleased his Polish guests on Thursday by saying he hoped visa requirements for Poles to visit Germany would be lifted by Christmas.

People from former East Germany do not need visas to visit Poland, and many travel there to shop in the flourishing, inexpensive Polish markets.

The border treaty would confirm the present border formed by the Oder and Neisse rivers and commit Germany to relinquishing claims on former German territory forever.

Thatcher's party thrashed in poll

BRADFORD, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives finished third in a special parliamentary election Thursday in this northern town in a sound thrashing for her troubled government.

In another vote, in the northwest England town of Bootle, the opposition Labor Party got 22,052 votes, compared with 2,587 for the Conservatives and 2,216 for the Liberal Democrats.

In Bradford North, Tory candidate Joy Atkin came in third with only 6,048 votes. Labor candidate Terry Rooney won 18,619 votes; Liberal Democrat David Ward took 9,105 votes for 25 percent.

Bootle has long been a solid area for Labor, but the Conservatives were viewed as having a chance to win in North Bradford. Their poor showing reflected the crisis in the Conservative Party since Mrs. Thatcher's deputy, Sir Geoffrey Howe, quit last week.

The poor Tory showing in Bradford North prompted renewed speculation that an attempt will be made to oust Mrs. Thatcher as Conservative leader and prime minister at the party's annual leadership election this month.

"I think there will be a new prime minister before Christmas," said rank-and-file legislator Tony Marlow. She became prime minister in 1979.

Panamanian journalists protest tough press laws

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — About 300 journalists marched silently down the city's main street Thursday and picketed the presidential palace to protest press laws carried over from the deposed regime of Manuel Antonio Noriega.

President Guillermo Endara, who this week sued a newspaper columnist, met the journalists outside the palace and angrily defended a law under which slander is heavily penalized.

"The president of the republic is a person and is going to demand reponsibility when there is an attempt to damage his honor," Endara said. "That is what I will do in each and every one of the cases, and there is no persecution."

Then he turned his back and refused to accept a protest letter the journalists had signed.

Endara, installed after the Dec. 20 American invasion that overthrew Noriega, has filed a slander and damage complaint against Dagoberto Franco of the daily El Siglo. Franco was detained for two days and released on $5,000 bond.

Franco had written a column entitled, "Endara: The Great Swindle."

At least 60 formal complaints have been filed against journalists this year, mostly by officials, the protesters said.

Journalists are asking that slander be changed from a criminal to a civil violation. The current penalty is two to five years in jail.

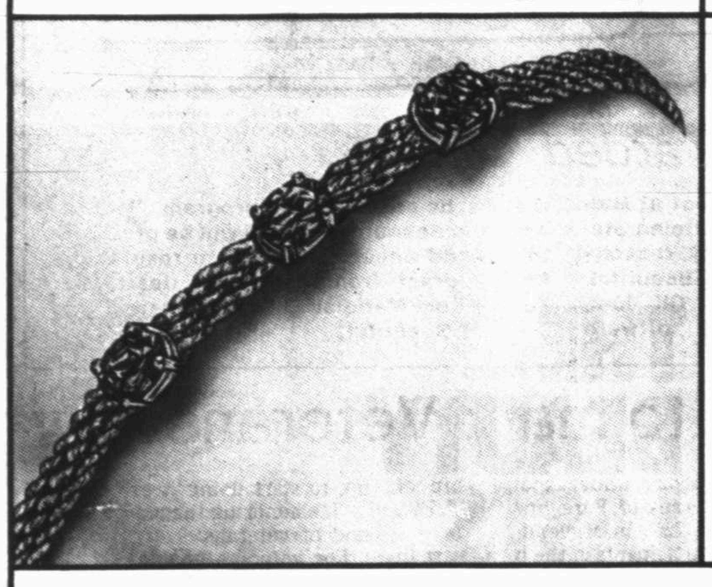

In their letter, the journalists said, "We are here because 21 years of castrated journalism has left us a bitter taste of exiles, threats, pressures and fears that we never want to repeat."

Endara told the journalists: "I'm not a second-class citizen. I don't have more privileges than anyone else, but I have equal rights with you."

The constitution provides for freedom of expression but says there are "legal responsibilities when by any of these media one attacks the reputation or honor of the persons in violation of the social security or public order."

Local doctor implants pain control systems

■ The first two spinal cord stimulation procedures were performed in Midland Wednesday at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

For those who suffer from chronic debilitating pain, the sort that sears the brain and fails to respond to prescribed drugs and surgery, a therapy now available in Midland may offer some relief.

On Wednesday, Dr. Joseph Oei, a Midland anesthesiologist and pain specialist, and Dr. Ronald Manicom, an Odessa neurosurgeon, performed the first two spinal cord stimulation procedures done here at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

One of Oei's patients had excruciating lower back pain following surgery that forced him to walk with a cane. The other had been involved in an oilfield accident that caused continuous head, neck and arm pain.

Oei and Manicom implanted spinal cord stimulation systems on both men's spinal cords.

"It offered them immediate relief and gradually they will feel better and better," Oei said.

The device sends constant electrical pulses to the part of the cord that receives pain messages from the affected area's nerves and blocks those messages from reaching the brain, where they are interpreted as "I feel pain," he added.

A computer in the doctor's office can fine-tune the implanted device's amplitude and frequency to lower the roar of pain to a tingling or soothing sensation.

About nine out of 10 patients get relief from the therapy, Oei said.

"If surgery and drugs don't help and we don't know how to cure the pain, we can at least block the message," he said, cautioning that the procedure is a last resort for pain management.

"We see chronic pain patients taking so many narcotics, sedatives, anti-depressants, anti-inflamatories, muscle relaxants and all this junk," he said. "When you can't get rid of the pain, you become depressed, you change your personality, people even try to kill themselves."

The device, which has been available since the 1970s but is more sophisticated today, has been used on patients complaining of persistant back or leg pain following surgery; on those suffering from spinal cord injury as a result of accidents and infections; on people with vascular disease; on amputees complaining of phantom limb and stump pain; on patients suffering from major nervous system injury and diabetes; and on those with painful spasms resulting from cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis and other disorders.

About 8,000 implants are performed annually in the United States, Oei said.

The cessation of pain does not come cheap, however.

Oei said the procedure costs between $15,000 and $25,000, including the price of the device and the hospital bill. Most insurance covers the surgery.

But he said the spinal cord stimulation's cost is worth it to chronic pain sufferers.

"You say $25,000 looks expensive, but if the pain isn't treated, it costs the patient even more in doctor's visits, surgeries and drugs," he said.

"This can stop the drug use and improve the patient's lifestyle."

County certifies election results

Staff Report

It's official. Thirty-eight hours after the polls closed, Midland County commissioners certified the results of the general election in a special meeting Thursday.

"We found nothing out of whack so we accepted the results as substantiated by the voter register and certified as to their accuracy," said Precinct 1 Commissioner Durward Wright, who regained his seat in the uncontested election.

Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert said the commissioners' canvass of the elections made their outcomes official. "Before that, it's just my figures," she said.

Now it would take a order for a recount or a contested outcome to change the county's results. Ms. Calvert said she didn't expect any challenges on the numbers.

Texas' 254 counties must canvass their elections by Monday and send the certification to the secretary of state's office, Ms. Calvert said.

She told the commissioners that 63.8 percent of registered voters in the county turned out for the election, a percentage

Observances to mark Veterans Day

■ All veterans will be honored at a parade in Midland Saturday sponsored by VFW Post 7208.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Though Veterans Day — Nov. 11 — officially falls on a Sunday this year, it will not go without fanfare and notice on Saturday and Monday.

A parade to "honor all veterans" will be held in Midland at 10 a.m. Saturday under sponsorship of Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Post 7208 in Midland.

Participants in the parade are to form at 9 a.m. Saturday at Dennis The Menace Park off Garfield Street just south of Wall Avenue.

The parade is to officially begin an hour later — at 10 a.m.

The parade will flow eastwardly down Wall Avenue to the Midland County Courthouse, where a ceremony will be held.

"This is the first year" in which the VFW post has held the Veterans Day parade, said VFW Quartermaster Ed Phariss, who is a World War II veteran. "We are going to start doing it every year."

"It's honoring them all," Phariss said of veterans.

For veterans unable to march, transportation in the parade will be available.

On Monday, Midland banks and federal offices will be closed in honor of Veterans Day.

The federal district courthouse will be shut down then.

The U.S. Postal Service will post mail in post-office boxes but will suspend business-mail and home mail delivery and post-office window service.

Local schools honored for exceptional TEAMS scores

Principals of the honored schools are Toby Ward of Bush, Robert Stewart of Parker, and Michael Worley of Travis.

Exceptional Achievement Awards were given to schools with 90 percent or more of the students tested mastering all TEAMS tests taken. Exceptional Gains Awards were given to schools with at least 30 percent more students mastering all tests taken than mastered in the previous year.

Honored schools received a letter from the State Board of Education and a certificate.

In a joint statement to superintendent Joe Baressi, Bill Kirby, commissioner of education, and Monte Hasie, chairman of the State Board of Education, expressed congratulations and commendations, saying, "We congratulate you and the schools in your district for this significant accomplishment. Cutter Beechcraft opens new facility

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The new Cutter Beechcraft Inc. regional aircraft operation should do a booming business at Midland International Airport, Bill Cutter, the company's president, said Thursday.

Cutter was here to inspect the renovated hangars, formerly known as Tiger Charter, and attend a grand-opening celebration, which was held at the facility and attended by more than 200 people.

"We think the Midland market is going to be a major part of our business," Cutter said. "We expect it to be between 30 and 35 percent of our total business if not more. We've had a lot of customers in this part of the country."

Midland City Councilmen in July unanimously approved a 30-year land lease with Cutter Beechcraft, an Arizona-based aircraft manufacturing and distributing company.

At the new facilities here on Midland International's south side off U.S. Highway 80, the company will sell fuel and airplanes, lease hangar space and provide repair services.

Cutter Beechcraft purchased Tiger Charter buildings, which have a total 63,700 square feet of space, from Rich-Air Co., which owned the facilities for about two years.

Cutter Beechcraft, which operates in El Paso, Phoenix, Ariz., and Albuquerque, N.M., was expected to create up to 25 jobs here.

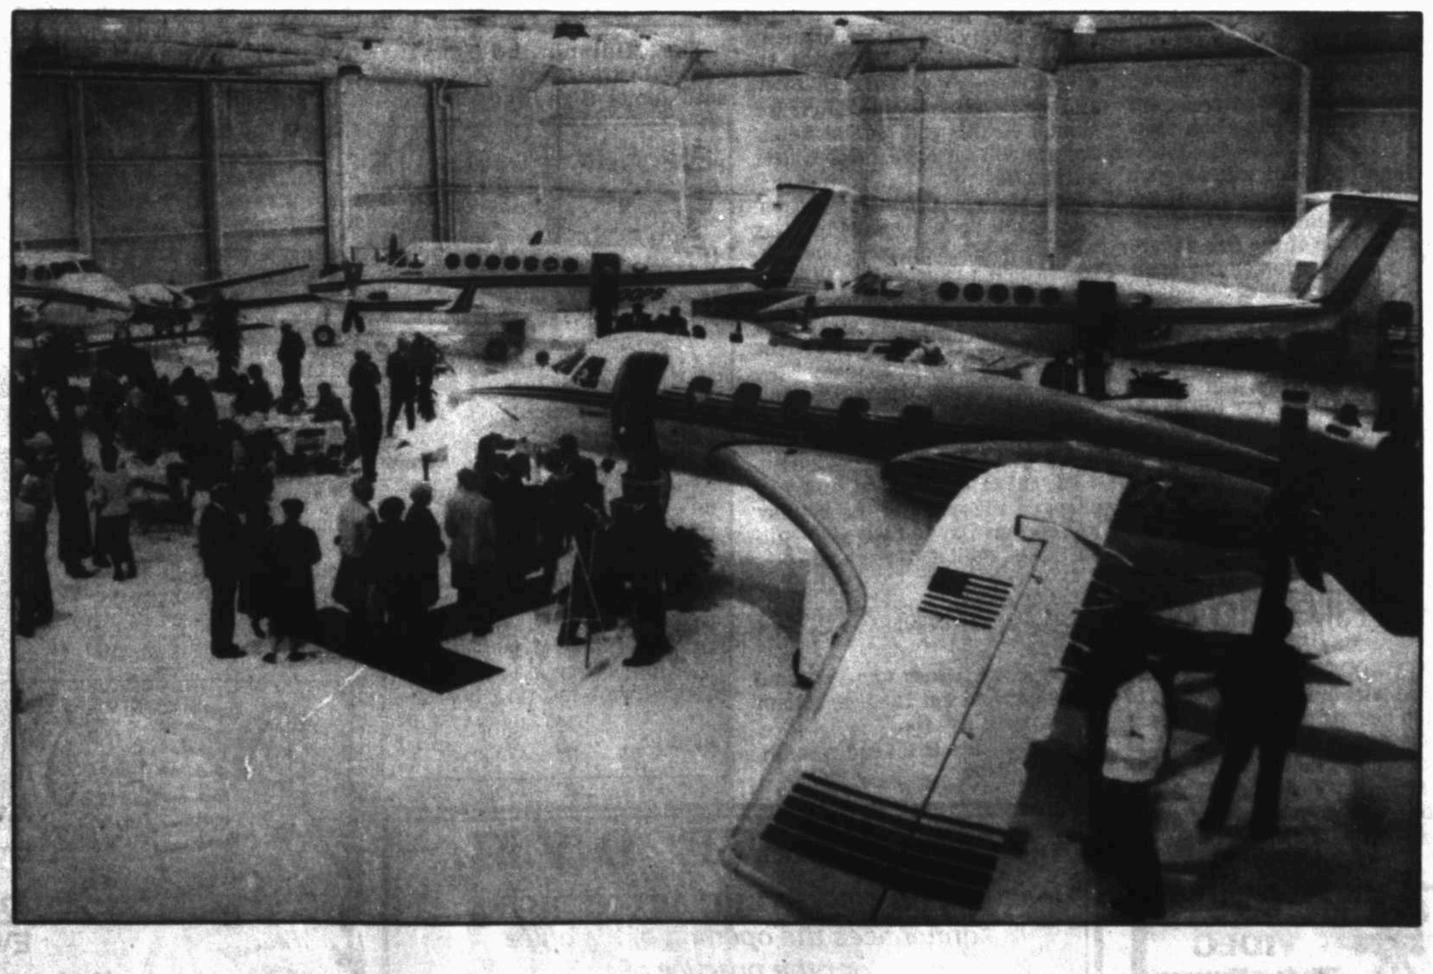

The company made more than $500,000 in renovations to the Tiger Charter property, including resurfacing and restriping taxi ways and refurbishing buildings.

Victor White, airport director, said Cutter Beechcraft agreed to rent the 9.2 acres of land from the city for 8 cents per square foot annually for the first five years. After that, the rate could fluctuate based on property value changes, White said.

The company has also agreed to pay the city 4 cents for every gallon of gas sold at the site, he said, adding that the overall agreement is the result of almost two years of negotiations.

"We're thrilled to have a new tenant with the class and reputation that Cutter has," White said. "They have the reputation of being one of the best aircraft service organizations in the business.

"And it's another good sign for the airport. Cutter believes there's a long-term future here."

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

A grand-opening party was held here Thursday night at Cutter Beechcraft Inc.'s new operations at Midland International Airport. Cutter Beechcraft will operate out of the Tiger Charter facilities, located on the south side of the airport off U.S. Highway 80.

The Rev. Joseph Taylor of Dallas looks for bargains at his favorite store, "RetroActive." The store is run by the Dallas Gay Alliance. It collects donated goods and gives them to people with AIDS.

Store helps fill needs of AIDS victims

DALLAS (AP) — Crammed with everything from an ant farm to work pants, a resale shop here offers a cheap alternative for clothing and other needs of AIDS victims.

The brainchild of a deceased Dallas restaurant owner, RetroActive collects donated goods and gives them to people with AIDS. Proceeds from sales to the general public go to the AIDS Resource Center of the Dallas Gay Alliance, which runs the store.

"I can live and I can eat (without financial help), but you can get things in here that are practically new that you could never afford otherwise," said Joseph Taylor, a Catholic priest.

Taylor, 54, has been coming to the shop for six months and currently is unemployed. He said his favorite finds were a black cashmere overcoat and Latin vocabulary flash cards.

Even though the overcoat had a $15 price tag, Taylor put it on his card — a $25 monthly credit issued to people diagnosed with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Restaurateur Ben Price opened RetroActive 14 months ago. The cramped shop on lower Greenville Avenue also gives some AIDS victims peace of mind and a measure of independence.

Store manager J.D. Higgins said he can even waive the $25 credit limit.

"If there is a specific need, we are a human industry and make case-by-case exceptions," he said.

The store which shares a wall with the upscale Arcadia Theater is jammed with trash and treasures. Its shelves, walls, racks and floor contain designer men's suits, worn jeans and other clothing. Browsers even found deer antlers.

Higgins, the store's only salaried employee, said a 10-year-old boy whose mother was diagnosed with AIDS and hospitalized the same day was outfitted with supplies, even though the family had no discount card.

"We can't give them all the luxuries," said Higgins, 29. "We're here to give them the necessities to survive."

St. Luke's plans symphony bazaar

Staff Report

St. Luke's United Methodist Church will hold a "Symphony of Talent" on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall, 3011 W. Kansas Ave. at Powell Street.

This is a non-musical event; it's a churchwide bazaar. The name is derived from its purpose: to raise funds to refurbish the organ and install new sound equipment in the sanctuary.

Hand-made items offered will range from Christmas decorations and religious symbols to wearable art to baked goods of all descriptions. In addition to shopping, face painting and children's gift-making booths will entertain youngsters. Lunch will be served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Admission is $1 for adults with children admitted free.

For more information, call the church office at 694-2571.

VETERANS: U.S. offices, banks will be closed Monday

(From 1B)

Midland County Courthouse offices, except for law-enforcement functions, will be closed on Monday.

Midland City Hall will be open on Monday — a regular business day. As usual, emergency services, including those of the fire department and law-enforcement agencies, will be available.

Classes will be held on Monday at Midland College, The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, and on the Midland and Greenwood public-school campuses.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service will be closed on Monday.

But state offices, including those of the Texas Railroad Commission, Texas Department of Public Safety, Texas Department of Human Services, the Texas Attorney General's Child Division, and the Permian Basin Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation, will be open for business on Monday.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce will be in business then, as will the Midland Farmers Cooperative, which is caught up in ginning cotton.

What today is Veterans Day was launched in 1919 when President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed Nov. 11 as Armistice Day to remind Americans of the tragedies of war.

A law was adopted in 1938 to make the day a federal holiday.

In 1954, the U.S. Congress changed the name of the holiday to Veterans Day to honor all United States military veterans.

Five killed in Nacogdoches crash

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — A twin-engine airplane attempting to land in heavy rain at an east Texas airport crashed Tuesday night in heavy woods, killing all five people aboard, police said.

The victims were identified as Jim Grisham, the pilot, Tim Owens and Joe Siedschleg, all of Hot Springs, Ark., Mary Angel, 36, and her 8-year-old son Thomas, both of Peachtree City, Ga.

Nacogdoches is 151 miles southeast of Dallas.

Education officials battle over evolution in textbooks

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas education officials gave preliminary approval Thursday to science textbooks that teach evolution, but a longtime clash with creationists continued.

The State Board of Education asked its staff to look into whether a reference in some of the books, which says human embryos have gill slits, was accurate.

The board, meeting as a committee, tentatively approved the biology books, striking a blow to religious fundamentalists who say the texts don't treat creationism as an equally valid idea.

A final vote was set for Saturday.

Texas is one of the nation's largest textbook buying states and influences what publishers put in textbooks. The textbooks under consideration are for grades 1 through 12.

"This is a major victory," said Mike Hudson, general counsel for the People for the American Way, a civil rights group that has lobbied for expanded coverage of evolution in science textbooks.

"This is probably the most important thing that has happened in science education in the past five years," Hudson said of the board's preliminary vote.

Mel Gabler, who with his wife, Norma, has fought against evolution for about 30 years, said the proposed texts were a form of censorship. Gabler argued they treat evolution as a fact without including debate of the theory.

"Why are evolutionists so afraid of giving students weaknesses as well as strengths of evolution,?" Gabler asked. "Censorship nullifies critical thinking of students. This is indoctrination, not education," he said.

The theory of evolution holds that all species of plants and animals developed from earlier forms.

School district to receive grant

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland Independent School District will receive $66,663 in matching grants for an energy-saving projects, Gov. Bill Clements announced Thursday.

The money will go for 16 energy retrofit measures at four campuses, including one new hot water heating system.

Clements announced that 22 public schools, hospitals and universities will receive more than $4 million in grants for energy-saving projects.

The Governor's Energy Management Center administers the Institutional Conservation Program which since 1980 has helped school districts, non-profit hospitals and colleges and universities identify and complete energy-saving measures.

The grants are financed by oil overcharge money that was returned to Texas in settlement of oil companies' violations of federal price controls between 1973 and 1981.

Teacher's suspension probed

Staff Report

The Midland Independent School District suspended a Goddard Junior High School teacher/coach this week in connection with an alleged assault, MISD Assistant Superintendent William Denton said Thursday.

As of Thursday afternoon, no charges had been filed against the teacher. However, Midland Municipal Court officials confirmed that their office is overseeing an investigation into the incident.

Court and school officials would not disclose details of the alleged assault or say when or where it supposedly occurred. Denton said he did not know on what day the teacher was suspended.

The most serious assault cases prosecuted in municipal court are Class C misdemeanors, punishable by a maximum fine of $200.

MISD spokesman Ted Miller said school board members may consider the teacher's case during their meeting next Tuesday.

The teacher, reached at his home Thursday, declined to comment.

that may be the highest in the state.

"The number was high for Midland and every election we're above the state average, though that's nothing to brag about," she said.

Ms. Calvert credited local interest in Clayton Williams and down-ballot races, including the railroad and agriculture commissioners and the treasurer's seat, for the good turnout.

She said election night ran smoothly. "Every box was in the office by 8:15 p.m. and all the counts were in to the secretary of state by 9:15 p.m.," she said. "My workers deserve a lot of credit."

An evening of training and recognition will be offered by the Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program for volunteers who work with youth Tuesday, November 13, 5:30-9 p.m. at the Northeast YMCA, 2300 Butternut (corner of Scharbauer and Butternut Streets).

The event will begin with a complimentary dinner, 5:30-6:15 p.m., for participants.

Three 45 minute training sessions will take place, starting at 6:15 p.m. The sessions will include tips on communications, and nurturing, working with groups of young people, recognition of abuse, and protection against accusations of abuse. This special evening concludes with a presentation on volunteerism by Judge and Mrs. Pat Baskin.

"From training in positive approaches for working with children to information on area resources, this event is designed to help the volunteer and thank our area's volunteers for all the good work they perform for youth," noted Pam Isom, volunteer with the Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program.

"We encourage youth organizations to send as many volunteer representatives as possible so ideas can be learned and shared effectively," she added.

Preregistration is required for the dinner. Deadline for preregistration is today. To register, call Pam Isom, 685-3007 or 682-7696.

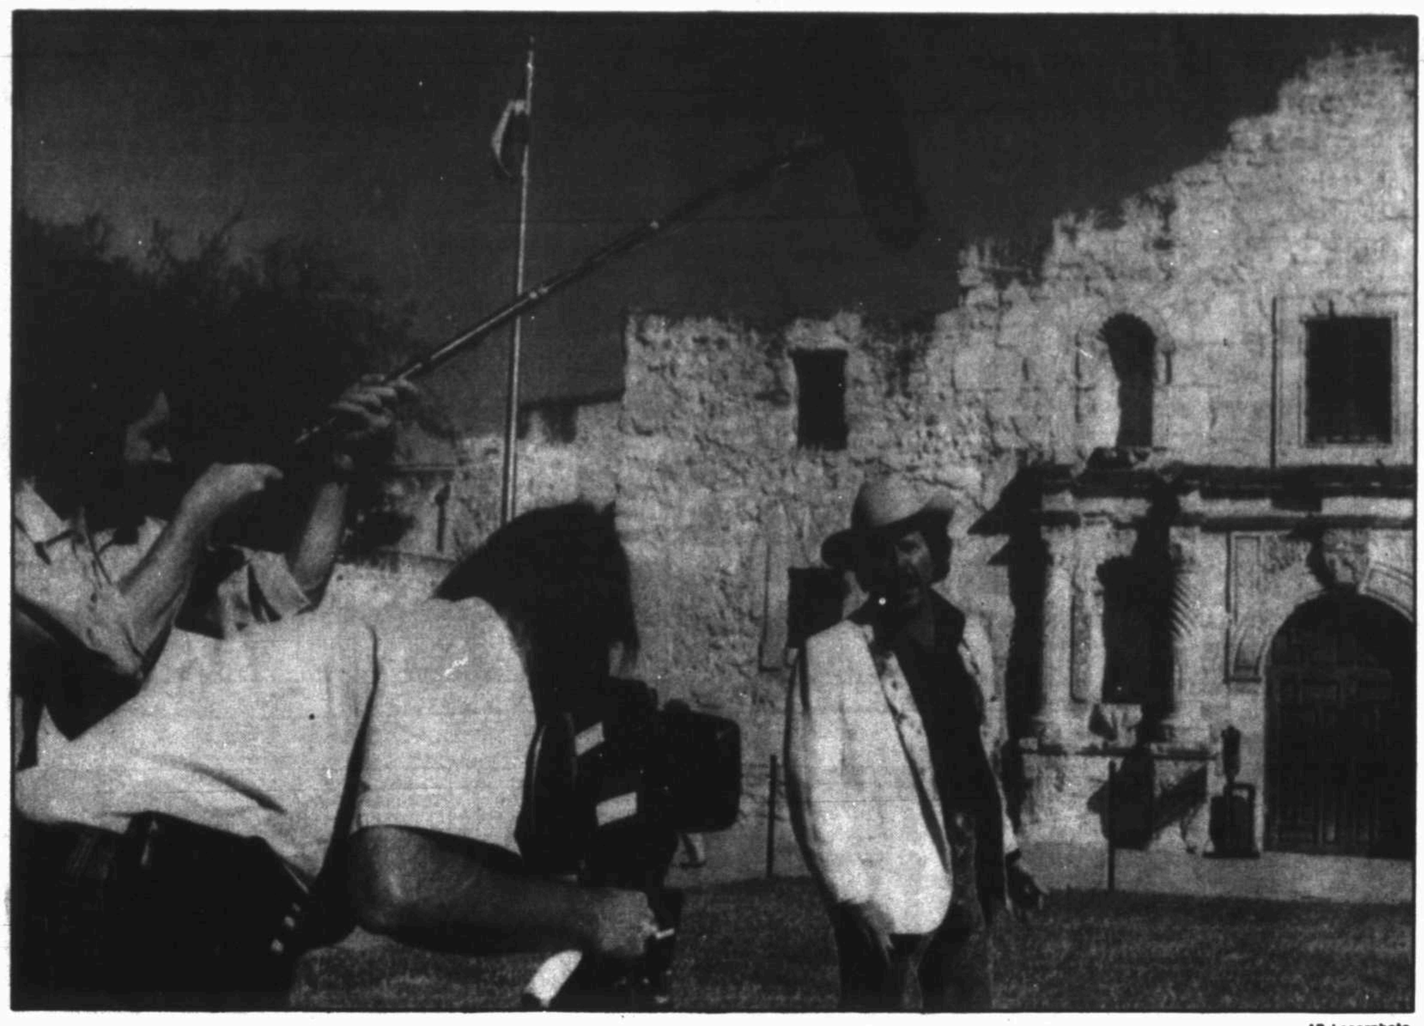

Additional sponsors of the event are the High Sky Children's Ranch and Midland Memorial Hospital.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Building up a partnership is the key to success. Next month is a wonderful time for cementing exciting new relationships. Recent investments begin paying off in early 1991. Sign important contracts next April. A class reunion in June could lead to happy romance. Large-scale business projects have the best chance of success early next fall. By November 1991, you should be sitting pretty.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: astronomer Carl Sagan, actor Lou Ferrigno, baseball pro Bob Gibson, golfer Tom Weiskopf.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A sibling's or close friend's marital problems may occupy your thoughts. Avoid offering too much advice. You hear fascinating news about a former lover. Take things nice and easy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A relative who drops in unexpectedly could be doing a bit of snooping for others. You are quite right to feel suspicious. Do not reveal anything if you can help it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your sometimes astonishing creative abilities come to the fore. You may begin a novel, a painting or a poem — or just decorate your home with style. Put romance on hold for a while.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be careful when around strangers — especially older men. Teamwork is essential for rapid progress in business. What appears to be a disaster is a blessing in disguise! Take another look at your options.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone's jealousy could complicate things today. There is a chance that you could find yourself involved in a rather tricky triangle. Spend the evening with a good friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A small gamble may lead to a big return today. Be careful, however, not to risk money you cannot afford to lose. A burst of energy lets you accomplish a great deal this afternoon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take time out to help a friend who is feeling confused or depressed. Put your own interests aside. Your strength and imagination are needed. A child's actions will delight you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Previous disappointments could lead you to ignore the virtues of someone who really cares for you. Be willing to listen. The past can be forgotten if you will only try. Open your heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Forming a partnership with an older person could be in your best interests. Discuss finances before launching a major venture. Immerse yourself in creative projects. Be affectionate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you feel somewhat restless, see if you can start your weekend a little early. A shopping trip will pick up your spirits, and so will a weekend away. Visit old friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will do just fine in any kind of social situation today. Welcome a golden opportunity to mingle with new people. You could meet someone who reawakens your interest in romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The spotlight is on partnership and your ability to work well with others. You will not accomplish nearly as much on your own. Suggest a compromise if tempers flare. A good evening to relax at home.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are fiercely independent, determined and motivated. They love books so much, they seem to teach themselves to read! Wonderful friends, these Scorpios can make dangerous enemies. They often idolize their parents and are very sensitive to any domestic tensions. Unusually orderly, these youngsters thrive on having a daily routine. Let them know what they are supposed to do and they will work hard to meet your expectations.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

If you need a particular lie of the cards to defeat a contract, play as if it exists. East paid attention to this pearl to gobble up declarer's three-no-trump contract.

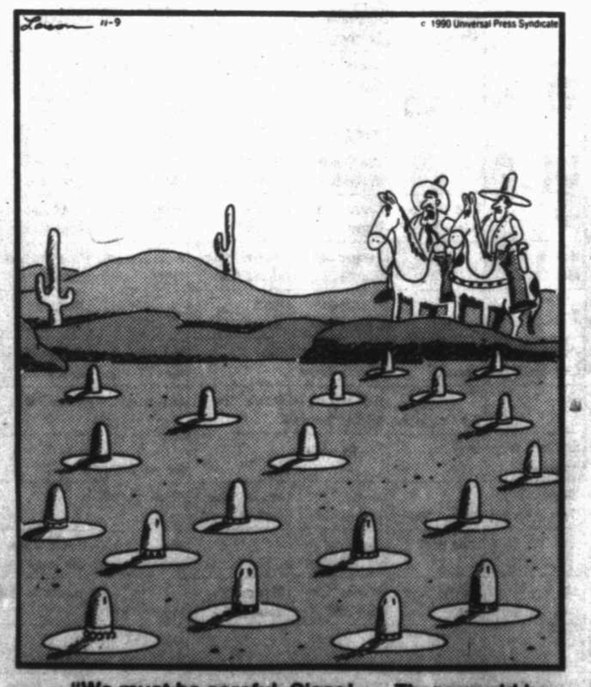

With only 10 points, few intermediates and a slow stopper in the enemy suit, South's non-forcing jump to two no trump (by partnership agreement) was overly pushy. However, South gave full value to his high honor in partner's suit and chose the aggressive course. The game would have succeeded, but for fine card-reading by East.

West led the jack of hearts, covered by the king and won by the ace. Had East routinely returned a low heart, declarer could have collected nine tricks as the cards lay. South would have ducked and West's nine would have won. Since West was out of hearts and declarer still held a stopper, there would have been time to force out the pointed-suit aces and make the contract.

However, before leading to the second trick East took time to consider the situation. Obviously, West was leading from a doubleton, which meant South had started with three hearts to the queen. If that holding included the nine, declarer had two stoppers and the suit would wither on the vine. The only hope, therefore, was that West held a now bare nine of hearts. To cater to that possibility, East returned the ten of hearts! When West produced the nine, East was able to continue the suit to remove the last stopper, and the ace of spades was an entry to the winners. Down three! In bridge parlance, this play is known as the "Crocodile Coup."

Trump now dogged by trouble of a legal nature

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Trump developed another problem Thursday, when the state attorney general's office said Trump must prove he can cover the monthly costs of his Trump Palace condominium before any more units are sold.

Trump

Trump must produce evidence that he can meet the common charges, real estate taxes and other obligations on the 57-story Upper East Side building, said Richard Barr, a spokesman for state Attorney General Robert Abrams.

Investors in the project complained that Trump has withheld information about his finances since they contracted to buy condominiums.

State law requires condo developers to reveal "material changes" in their finances that could adversely affect people in the building.

If Abrams finds Trump broke the law, he could invalidate the contracts. Sales contracts have been signed on 77 of the building's 283 condominiums.

Trump said the depressed Manhattan real estate market has buyers "looking for any method to break signed contracts."

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC News President Roone Arledge's plans to buy a Park Avenue apartment have been blocked by a couple's claim that he schemed to keep them from buying it first.

Arledge

Lou Elson, 27, and his wife, Sarah, 28, obtained a temporary court order that keeps Arledge from closing a deal to buy the apartment.

They charged in court papers that Arledge "illegally and unethically" schemed to keep them from buying the spacious cooperative apartment in Manhattan because he wanted it for himself.

The apartment was being sold at the reduced price of $599,500. It had been listed a year ago at $1 million.

The Elsons claim Arledge, who owns the only other apartment on the building's 13th floor, was "extremely belligerent, hostile and antagonistic" toward them when they appeared before the building's board in August.

They said they decided to sue when they learned Arledge was about to close a deal on the apartment for $599,500.

A woman who answered Arledge's phone at ABC on Thursday said he was not there. Sherry Rollins, an ABC spokeswoman, said the network would not comment on the matter because it is personal.

The state court's order issued last Friday keeps the apartment from being sold to anyone until there is a hearing to decide who has the first right to buy it.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby isn't laughing about what he perceives as a media vendetta against him.

"I don't understand why people are picking on me, and that's essentially what this stuff is," the entertainer said.

He said he's been a target since "The Cosby Show" dropped a mural from its opening credits.

A Harlem teacher had protested the television show's use of her students' artwork without giving the students credit. Cosby claims the dispute was slanted in media reports.

"I'm very, very upset and I'm not going to take this kind of treatment. Celebrities are very, very easy to take a shot at," Cosby said in an interview for the television show "A Current Affair."

The interview will be televised on the syndicated show Friday.

"They talk to 12 people and all they need to do is find one out of 12 to say, 'Well, I think he's not such a great person,' and that's the interview that shows up in the paper," Cosby said.

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Two days after narrowly defeating Democratic Gov. James Blanchard, Gov.-elect John Engler told the Legislature Thursday he plans to get married.

Engler, 42, introduced his fiancee, Houston lawyer Michelle De Munbrun, to his colleagues.

"For Michelle and I it's just a wonderful time," the Republican Senate majority leader said.

The small, private wedding, scheduled for Dec. 8 in San Antonio, will be the second for both. Neither has children.

De Munbrun, 33, said she was raised as a Democrat and admitted voting for Democrat Ann Richards, who won the governor's race in Texas. But she said she voted for Republicans in other races.

"You know what they say about Texas Democrats. They're really Republicans," she said.

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A group of street children gave the Duchess of York flowers and a scroll of thanks Thursday for her help with a foundation to end homelessness among Australian youths.

The former Sarah Ferguson spoke at a fund-raising luncheon to initiate a foundation called Caring for Young Australians.

FAMILY MATTERS

Communication begins with commitment

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am having a hard time understanding my husband. We have been married almost 13 years and have three children. He works hard and is a good person. I guess I should be happy with that. I am thankful but I'm not happy. I want more out of life than a husband who comes home each night and gives me a kiss on the cheek and plops down in front of the television.

May

I have tried to bring this subject up to him, but I never seem to be able to tell him how I feel. He used to ask me what was wrong with me, but now he doesn't ask me anymore. I don't know whether he even cares anymore or not. All that he has been able to tell me is that "he's just not made that way."

I know that it's hard for him to be affectionate. I'd love to have that, but I don't think he knows how. I just want some adult conversation from my husband. I really don't think that is too much to ask.

What can I do to get him to talk to me? How can I get him to talk about things that matter? I'm so frustrated sometimes that I think everyone would be better off if I just got a divorce. FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: People have a very difficult time trying to do something they don't know how to do. In this culture, males are not taught to talk "about things that matter." Instead, men often are taught that our primary role is to be the provider.

Howere, not knowing how to do something doesn't mean we can't learn. Learning to share begins with a commitment to try to learn. Talk to your husband about making such a commitment. For example, ask him to commit to talk with you each night for 10 minutes, away from television, children or other outside influences.

During this early time of conversation, you might need some sources to serve as guides, such as the Bible, a daily medication book, Robert McGee's "The Search for Significance" and Scott Peck's "The Road Less Traveled."

Each day, you both read and agree upon passage or section. That night, talk about what you have read. The focus of the conversation is on how you feel about what you read, rather than on what you think about it.

This process may not work at first, but give it time. Try to get a 30-day commitment from your husband. Both of you can grow in directions neither of you thought possible.

DEAR FAMILY: I am so worried about my 2-year-old granddaughter. Her mother has let a man move in with them who does not treat the baby well. When no one is listening he tells her a "man will get you." She has come out of the bedroom screaming and looking back over her shoulder crying the man's name. A few weks ago she ran to me crying with her hand on her head. She said that he hit her with a stick. He said that he didn't do it.

People who have lived next to them in apartments said they have heard him yelling and the baby crying lots of times. I tried to convince the baby's mother that she takes up with bad people and that child welfare could take the baby away from her. The girl's mother butted in called an aunt of the baby's mother and the girl's father. She told them that I was going to take it all to child welfare.

The girl's ex-stepfather drinks all the time, but he moved in to take care of the baby for a while. That went on for several months. The baby's other grandmother also drinks some and has no scruples at all. What can I do? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Your granddaughter needs help quickly. Call the Texas Department of Human Services—Children's Protective Services (686-2273) and tell them of her situation. They can give you direction and hope. Please continue to be worried and involved with that baby's well being.

Motivation key to maintaining exertise program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Regular exercise is more than a state of activity — it's a state of mind. People who can stick with exercise apparently can focus how they feel and what they want, says one expert.

"People who come in for the first time need to be informed about the kind of experiences they are going through," said Lise Gauvin, an assistant professor in exercise science at Concordia University in Montreal. Her study of motivation was published in the Canadian Journal of Sport Sciences.

Gauvin and her colleagues studied 78 people at a YMCA. Some exercised alone and others in a class. Still others were taking language or art classes. The report classed them as autonomous exercisers, fitness program enrollees, dropouts and non-exercisers.

Researchers conducted interviews to draw out motivations and perceptions. The report concedes this does not generate standardized answers.

Autonomous exercisers and fitness program enrollees highly valued fitness and looks. But the dropouts and sedentary individuals didn't seem to have well-focused goals. Some reported liking fun and competition. But the report said, "Answers were so diverse that other categorizations were virtually impossible."

Autonomous exercisers also tended not to be concerned with motivating themselves to exercise — they already had made it a habit. The researchers found similar force of habit among the fitness class enrollees.

Dropouts, however, had planned extensively before they exercised, and made sure their other jobs had been done beforehand.

Regular exercisers generally liked the activity itself, the researchers said, but dropouts and non-exercisers tended not to. Dropouts tended to value the social interaction or competition, while non-exercisers liked fresh air and sunshine.

The report also says regular exercisers perceived their level of intensity at 75 percent to 80 percent — a good workout. Recent fitness enrollees gave estimates of 85 percent to 90 percent; dropouts claimed 95 percent to 100 percent.

And the reaction to exercise was different. The self-motivated autonomous exercisers reported feeling energized afterward. Some of the fitness program enrollees reported being tired. And the dropouts tended to feel glad it was over.

DEAR ABBY

Collect souvenir soils, your name is mud

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I collect dirt! Allow me to explain. We vacation mostly in the USA, and in our travels we've stopped to admire the view and have taken home a piece of that view, such as a handful of seashells, a flower or some dirt.

Van Buren

Our son is in the U.S. Army, and we recently took him to the airport so he could catch his flight to South Korea, where he will be stationed for a year. Before he left, I asked him to send us a handful of soil (yes, dirt) sealed in a zip-locked bag. We have these tiny little jelly jars that I would like to fill with samples of dirt from all over the world.

Hubby says it's against the law to bring in dirt from another country. I could understand it if it were a ton or two, but a handful?

Please let me know if it's really illegal. — BETTY IN HESPERIA, CALIF.

DEAR BETTY: Margaret Webb, public information officer for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Services, says: "Your husband is correct. Even a handful of dirt can contain microorganisms and/or insects very harmful to our plant and animal life. Ecosystems vary around the world, and nature tries to keep a balance between plant and animal life. When dirt is transported to a new environment, it can create havoc beyond your wildest dreams."

Bottom line: There are very strict laws regarding bringing dirt into this country without a special permit. Respect them!

DEAR ABBY: My ladyfriend and I are supposed to be in love. We have been intimate and have considered a life together. There is, however, one obstacle.

She currently insists upon continuing a "just friends" relationship with four or five of her ex-lovers, including an ex-husband to whom she was married 10 years ago — for only one year. (No children.)

These relationships consist of Christmas correspondence, occasional phone calls and visits that include overnight stays. She says that in her previous social circles, this is considered normal behavior. In my circle, it is not condoned.

I am of a jealous nature, and insist that all such contacts with her ex-lovers stop as a requisite for a serious, long-term life together. What is the "norm" for the age-50 range of American society regarding this dilemma? And have you any advice? — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: The norm for Americans of any age who are supposed to be "in love and considering a life together" is to forsake all others.

And if your ladyfriend insists on continuing overnight stays with past lovers, I advise you to bid her farewell — unless you are prepared to demand that she be tested for AIDS (and other sexually transmitted diseases) before each of your own romantic encounters.

DEAR ABBY: I have long been a student of the Bible, but I cannot find a list of the seven deadly sins anywhere, and I am too embarrassed to ask my pastor. Please tell me where I can find them. — MIDWEST CHRISTIAN

DEAR CHRISTIAN: The seven deadly sins are not listed as such in any Bible. They can be found in the writing of St. Thomas Aquinas. They are: envy, lust, greed, gluttony, sloth, pride and anger.

Retirement may not mean relocation

Shop around; For many retirees, there really is no place like home

By Suzanne Schlosberg
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Retirement often brings perplexing questions: Should you stay or should you go? And if you go, where?

San Diego County, maybe? It has outstanding health care (3,000 medical specialists and 27 hospitals), an abundance of part-time job opportunities and almost constant sunshine.

But the average house there costs $200,500, state and local taxes are exorbitant, and the crime rate is shooting upward.

In Southport, N.C., on the other hand, a home costs $64,700, taxes are lower, and crime is minimal. But the county has 49 freezing days a year, a moderate unemployment threat, only two hospitals and only a dozen medical specialists.

Or, perhaps you'd prefer to stay put.

"For some reason, people think relocation is expected in retirement, but there shouldn't be any pressure at all to move," said David Savageau, author of "Retirement Places Rated" (Prentice Hall Press; $16.95), a comprehensive guide to the nation's top retirement areas.

Savageau's book, now in its third edition, is intended to help people weigh all the options. It surveys 151 counties on the basis of money issues, housing, climate, personal safety, available services, work opportunities and leisure activities.

San Diego ranks 34th, Southport 11th. The top-ranked county is Fort Myers-Cape Coral-Sanibel Island, Fla.

Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and Ventura counties aren't ranked.

ALTHOUGH 40 PERCENT of retirees consider moving, Savageau said, only one out of every 94 adults actually moves out of state.

"It's either too risky or they can't afford it or they discover reasons for liking where they are," said Savageau, a relocation consultant in Massachusetts.

Furthermore, he said, many of the moves are not successful, and couples return home within a few years.

It's crucial, Savageau said, to visit a place repeatedly and perhaps live there temporarily before making a permanent move.

"You've got to establish a psychic connection between yourself and the place," he said. "You just don't drop everything and move to Palm Desert. It takes a good decade to assure yourself this is the place you want to spend the rest of your life."

Darla O'Reilly, a Los Angeles retirement planning consultant, also recommends "rehearsal retirement."

"Try renting out your house and living somewhere for six months or a year," said O'Reilly, director of Judy Watt and Associates, a firm that runs seminars on retirement planning. "If you don't like it, you'll have the opportunity to move back home. The problem with Southern California is that if you move, you might not be able to buy your house back."

THESE DAYS, however, many people don't want to. Southern California isn't the retirement hot spot it used to be.

"They want to leave the smog, the traffic and the crime," O'Reilly said. "They want to have a better standard of living somewhere else."

Savageau said the people leaving California are equity-rich.

"They can buy the same kind of house for 25 percent of what they got for their house, and they can live more comfortably," he said.

Many Californians are moving to Seattle, Arizona and Florida, Savageau said.

Other retirees, however, are finding they can live even more comfortably abroad.

Jane Parker of Modesto offers tours to people considering retirement in foreign countries.

"Very often you can have a higher standard of living — you can afford a household servant and gardeners," said Parker, who runs two-week tours to Portugal, Costa Rica and Uruguay. "A couple can live very very nicely on $1,000 to $1,500 a month. I call it champagne living on a beer budget."

Parker said her business, Lifestyle Explorations, has boomed in recent years.

Regardless of where you choose to move, Savageau said, it's important to be critical of a city's propaganda.

O'Reilly recommends subscribing to a local newspaper to get the real facts on crime, weather, cost of living and job opportunities.

New book offers beneficiaries help in dealing with Medicare

Staff Report

In a misguided effort by lawmakers to simplify Medicare claims submissions for beneficiaries, federal law now requires all doctors and suppliers to submit claims to Medicare on behalf of their patients. However, what the Congress failed to take into account with this change is the existing 12 month filing period allowed under initial Medicare legislation.

"Beneficiaries can be forced by their doctors to pay at the same time services are rendered and then wait up to 12 months for their doctors to send their claim into Medicare. Through no fault of their own, beneficiaries can wait up to one year to be repaid their out-of-pocket expenses by Medicare," commented Norma Border, of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Association and co-author of "How to File Your Medicare/Medigap Claims: The SPEEDCLAIM Way to Quicker Payments."

"What makes it even worse," according to Border, "is that most Medigap policies require a copy of the Explanation of Medicare Benefits form to accompany coinsurance and deductible claims. Not only will the beneficiary wait up to 12 months for Medicare payment, but if the doctor doesn't file promptly, they can also miss the time limits for filing to their Medigap insurer.

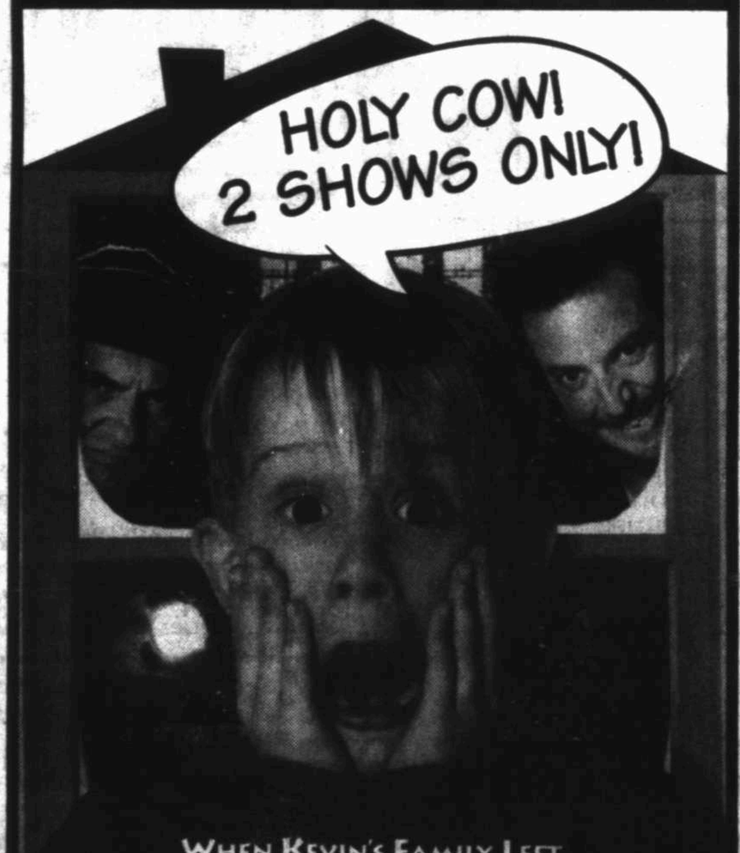

"This new program," said Border, "no matter how well intentioned, has accomplished the task of turning the beneficiary into a short term lender to the government and a manager of the doctor's billing office."

Border advised that a doctor's office should bill within 30 days of the service. Realistically, the beneficiary can expect a response from Medicare within the next 30 days. If the beneficiary doesn't use a system to list each doctor visit, he will have no way to determine if services have been billed to Medicare. Poor record keeping could mean that Medicare still owes him money.

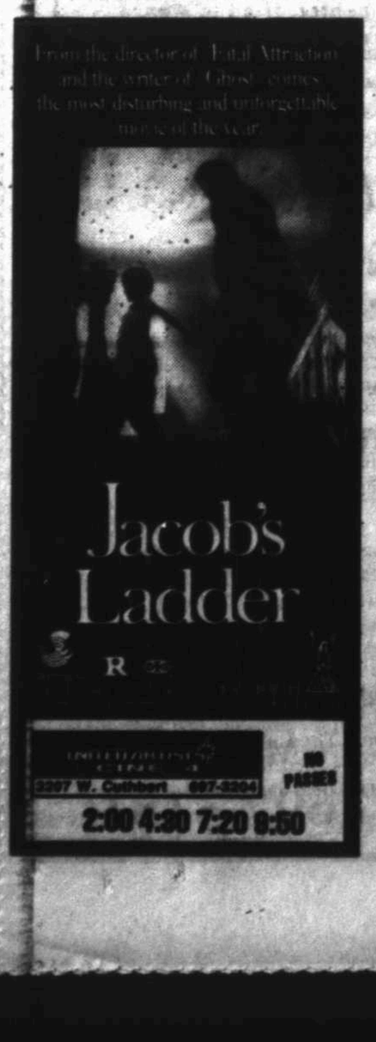

Contained in Border's book, the SPEEDCLAIM system provides easy-to-use forms with simple instructions for keeping track of Medicare and Medigap information. The book also explains Medicare filing procedures and coverage limitations plus offers the most complete published account of the Medicare appeals process for denied claims.

Rebels, Bobcats square off

■ Midland Lee and San Angelo are already playoff bound, but both will be looking to grab some momentum in tonight's regular season finale.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO — District 4-5A playoff berths are signed, sealed and delivered, but the San Angelo Bobcats and Midland Lee Rebels will still put on a little war here at 8 p.m. today at Bocat Stadium in what could be called the "Mo Bowl."

Both teams would like a spice of heady momentum heading into the playoffs, and both San Angelo (3-1-1) and Lee (4-1) could get it here. And just in case you want a little added incentive, a victory by either team could mean a district championship.

For San Angelo to get a title taste, Odessa High (4-1) would have to lose to Abilene High (1-4) tonight in Abilene. However, Lee can earn at least a share of the title by beating the Bobcats, regardless of what OHS does.

"This has got to be a big factor for us," notes Lee coach Earl Miller. "I can't imagine a Lee Rebel who wouldn't want to help bring a championship to the school for the fourth time in five years. You can look back at the past and see that it doesn't come easy in this league."

Both teams face some keen hazards going into the game. Lee hasn't been overly impressive since its "Friday Night Lights Out" win over Odessa Permian three weeks ago with a loss to OHS and a 14-0 win over Abilene High. San Angelo, on the other hand, is coming off the high of a 14-14 tie with Permian and there are those who are wondering if the Bobcats will be a week in the celebrating mode.

San Angelo coach Dan Gandy doesn't by the theory.

"To tell you the truth, we weren't real pleased with the tie," said Gandy. "You never know what the reaction from kids will be, but it's up to the coach to get them ready to play.

"I know this game doesn't have anything to do with who gets into the playoffs, but it certainly would be nice to have a victory going into the playoffs. The way I see it, even if you are going to play a game of marbles, you should try to win it."

Miller agrees, "San Angelo is on top of the mountain. They played a good game against Permian and have played everyone else real close. I look for a tough game, but you want to go into the playoffs on an up note. We lost a bi-district game to Amarillo High in 1986 after losing the last game of the season to Abilene High. You like to be on track when you go into the playoffs."

The key to victory in this game seems to be an easy one for the coaches. Miller says his Rebels must move the football with ball control and keep the high powered passing attack of the Bobcats on the bench. Gandy, on the other hand, says his Bobcats must avoid letting Lee keep the ball all night.

"They've been known to keep the ball like they own it and we can't score if we don't have the ball," said Gandy.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Darryl Strawberry signed a five-year, $20.3 million contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers Thursday, but he said the end of his decade-long association with the New York Mets left him with a bitter taste.

At 28, the seven-time All-Star joins the Dodgers at the prime of his career, following a season in which he hit 37 homers and 108 RBIs, a Mets record. But that and his popularity with New York fans weren't enough to keep him there.

"I'm looking forward to playing at home," Strawberry, born and raised in Los Angeles, said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press. "I had to be someplace where I was going to be happy."

Strawberry had few kind words for the Mets, who he said offered $15 million over four years. He earned $1.8 million this year.

"The Mets called three to four days ago and said 'this is the best offer,'" he said.

MC, Howard open with Classic wins

■ Midland College, Howard and Jacksonville each break the 100 point barrier as offensive units are put on display in the opening round of the 13th annual Chaparral Classic.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

For the second straight season, Midland College took out its opening-loss frustrations on an unsuspecting Murray State, downing the Aggies 106-74 in first-round action at the 13th annual Chaparral Classic.

The 106 points was the highest output since a 126-111 MC loss to Howard College last February, and was only the seventh time in the last 33 games MC has broken the triple-figure barrier.

In other first round games, Howard College defeated Angelina College 120-117, and Western Texas fell to Jacksonville 108-96.

With Carroll Boudreaux forced to ride the bench after being called with his second foul with just two minutes gone in the game, paint-mate Eugene Witherspoon more than sufficiently took up the slack with 22 points and 12 rebounds.

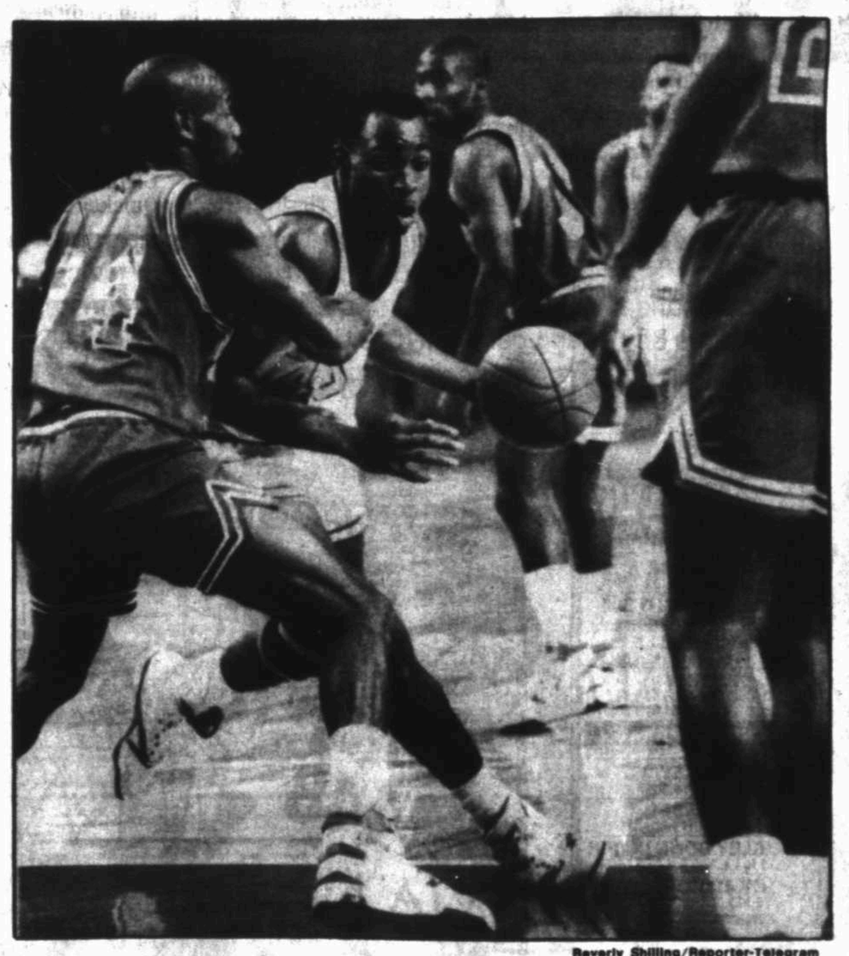

"I was confident Eugene could do the job," MC head coach Reggie Franklin said after the win. "He's a sophomore, and he did a superb job for us last season."

Witherspoon's production came on the heels of the Chaps' season-opening loss to Cisco Junior College Monday night, after which he rode himself hard for what he felt was his below-average play.

Midland had some trouble pushing its lead up in the second half as the feisty Aggies would close the lead from 10 to five, then open it back up to 10 for the Chaps again. The Ags closed it to five again with 8:00 left, but MC proceeded to go on a roll and open up a 20-plus lead for the remainder of the contest. All of this with Boudreaux seeing a sparse amount of time on the floor.

"We had a 20 point lead," Franklin noted. "I didn't want my starters in the game. That's when you risk injury."

TERRY WILLIAMSON

'What's wrong with Lee's Rebels?'

The question is being heard a lot these days, "What's wrong with the Midland Lee Rebels?"

Lee coach Earl Miller has heard the cries, and has asked the same question himself.

Williamson

First, Miller has admitted that Lee's last two outings were not first class efforts on the field of play. There have been enough mistakes to cause a certain amount of concern. There have been those pesky, ill-timed penalties, a breakdown here and there on defense, a dropped pass, a fumble, key injuries along the way and other assorted ailments usually not associated with Rebel football.

And no one would like to see Lee turn in another Amarillo Palo Duro or Permian like victory before the playoffs begin more than Miller. But Miller, too, knows that current woes run deeper than the above mentioned problems.

"A lot of people don't realize that our opponents have something to do with the way we play," said Miller. "Odessa High played a great game against us. Abilene High's punter averages over 45 yards a kick, and every time I look up, we have to go 80 or 90 yards to score. We have nearly 400 yards rushing and score only 14 points. Not many teams are going to score a lot when that happens. Our defense shuts down Abilene with no points, but we didn't produce turnovers and that allowed Abilene to keep us in bad field position. They did a good job of it."

Lee has now earned playoff entry for eight consecutive years. The Rebels can no longer be classified at the "New Tradition." They face teams every week that want to put a hole in the Rebel ship. They don't sneak up on anyone.

"We haven't played as well as we would have liked in several games this year, but these kids have learned to win when it counts. I think it says something that they find a way to win when they aren't playing very well.

"We were awful against Odessa High in the first half, but we didn't give up any more points in the second half, and at least, gave ourselves a chance to win. We didn't get it done, but we gave ourselves a chance."

Now Lee faces San Angelo tonight with a chance to share in the District 4-5A championship. It is the type of game that Lee usually responds with a sound effort. Lee only owns a 15-14 advantage over San Angelo in the series, but Lee has won 11 of the last 12 meetings. The last loss was in 1983 when Lee went on to the state finals.

"It's time for us to put a good game together," says Miller. "I would like for it to be here. I want some of that title and it's much better going into the playoffs with a good win instead of a loss."

Here's how it will turn out tonight — the final week of regular season play:

Midland Lee 21, San Angelo 20: A wild night on the Concho as Lee gains a share of the District 4-5A title for the fourth time in the last five years — but barely.

Odessa High 18, Abilene High 7: The Bronchos also earn a title share for the first time since 1964 and then head for the playoffs for the first time in over two decades.

Odessa Permian 28, Abilene Cooper 6: The nightmarish season of old Mojo finally comes to an end. Permian will be 7-2-1 and sitting at home for the first time since 1986.

Midland High vs. Open: The Bulldogs will just skip this one and take its 5-4 record to the bank, an improvement of two victories over last year.

Jets blocking ruled legal despite complaints

NEW YORK (AP) — For the second time this season, the NFL has approved the blocking system used by the New York Jets.

That style, which emphasizes use of cut blocks, has caused two teams — the Buffalo Bills and Dallas Cowboys — to complain about illegal tactics. Jets coach Bruce Coslet asked Art McNally, the league's supervisor of officials, to review his team's blocking after the complaints, both last month and again this week.

"The New York Jets were informed today by the NFL officiating office," Coslet said Thursday, "that after reviewing tapes of the Jets games, that the Jets are not using any illegal cut-blocking techniques. The review came at my request.

"This is something I didn't want to bring up because I do not condone illegal blocking, but since it has become an accusation, I want to clarify the matter.

"The allegations simply are untrue. We do not teach illegal chop-blocking, we do teach legal cut-blocking, as do all the other teams in the league."

Bills defensive end Bruce Smith and Cowboys lineman Jim Jeffcoat both complained about how the Jets block.

REBELS: Lee readies both its quarterbacks

From 1C

Lee is down to 200-pound Bernard Oldham at one defensive tackle slot after injuries to starter Dale Wall and backup Mark Seidenberger. Oldham, however, did play steady against Abilene when Seidenberger was injured.

Defensive end Chris Posey is back, but quarterback Derrick Turner, who leads the Lee rushing attack with 646 yards, was really hurting from a separated shoulder after the AHS game. Turner will start, but David Sullivan has again been taken out of his defensive position in order to be ready if called on at quarterback. Junior Jimmy Patton will again start at cornerback while Roderick Burns moves to safety. Jovan Tellez will be moved back in at the starting fullback slot.

San Angelo, who has missed the injury bug that plagued them a year ago, has the league's leading passer in Shea Morenz, who has thrown for 1,442 yards and 14 touchdowns, ranking 15th overall in the state.

San Angelo also has three of the league's top four receivers with Marcus Bibbs (33 catches, 641 yards and 6 touchdowns), Damon Carroll (20-262-3) and John Davidson (19-243-3).

To make things worse, Bobcat fullback Steve Williams has 652 yards rushing, and was the key in a victory over Midland High.

Lee didn't complete a pass against AHS last week, but had 373 yards rushing with both Turner and Brett Sullivan having 100-yard nights.

In other words, the infantry takes on the air force in the playoff warmup.

Titles go up for grabs tonight

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Area Football

A pair of district championships will be on the line when area football teams square off tonight in the regular season finale for most schools.

The Iraan Braves and Wall Hawks will decide the District 6-2A championship tonight at Iraan, while the Rankin Red Devils go for their third straight District 8-A championship at home against Fort Davis.

Elsewhere tonight, Andrews hosts Big Spring in a key District 3-4A matchup; Lamesa hosts Snyder; Greenwood travels to Colorado City; Stanton hosts Eldorado; McCamey hosts Forsan; and Garden City travels to Roby.

Saturday, Midland Christian travels to Carlsbad, N.M. to face Bethel Christian in the New-Tex Christian Football Conference third-place game.

The Iraan-Wall game could be a classic matchup between the Braves' power brand of football and Wall's wide-open attack.

"Our results have been about the same, but they throw and pitch the ball around, while we're pretty much of a power team," Iraan coach Mickey Finley said.

Fullback Riley Malone leads Iraan — and just about everybody else — with 1,714 yards rushing despite sitting out entire quarters of several Brave blowouts.

"We have to control the ball, and not give up any big plays," Finley said.

Since Rankin has its open date next week, Red Devil mentor Troy Kennedy is especially interested in winning tonight's game.

"I want to be sure our season ends on a positive note," Kennedy said. "It's not a pleasant situation if we don't win Friday."

A Rankin loss would force the Red Devils into the unenviable position of having to wait next Friday's Sanderson-Fort Davis game to learn if they have made the playoffs. Wins by Fort Davis this week and Sanderson next week would force a three-way tie for the district crown — something Kennedy doesn't want to think about.

But Fort Davis won't be a push-over, Kennedy added.

"They have a very balanced attack," he said. "It's hard to key up on the run or the pass."

Rankin has been forced out of Kennedy's beloved veer offense by numerous backfield injuries. Instead, the Devils are running an I-formation with Gabe Hyatt and Kevin Braden lining up behind quarterback Kirk Kennedy.

Heisman now a four-man race

Associated Press

As the Heisman Trophy race enters the home stretch, it's shaping up as a four-man contest.

BYU's Ty Detmer, Houston's David Klingler, Virginia's Shawn Moore and Notre Dame's Rocket Ismail appear to be the front-runners for college football's most prestigious award, which will be announced Dec. 1.

Running backs Eric Bieniemy of Colorado and Greg Lewis of Washington are the only other serious candidates. But unless all the leaders falter, they probably can't win it.

"It's down to four guys — Rocket, Detmer, Klingler and Moore," says ESPN's Beano Cook. "Right now, I'd say Rocket and Klingler have the best chance. But it's too early to count the other two out."

CBS' Mike Francesa thinks the Rocket will soar to the top of the Heisman heap if he has a big game Saturday against Tennessee.

While Detmer and Klingler are gaining attention with their phenomenal passing numbers, Ismail is doing it with versatility, speed and game-breaking plays.

Missouri

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — NCAA sanctions against the University of Missouri:

What The NCAA Found

— Giving scholarship aid to a partial qualifier whom the school failed to discern was ineligible.
— Improper recruiting contacts.
— Lack of institutional control.
— Having an unmonitored recruiting expense fund approved by the school used in violation of university, state and NCAA rules for payments to recruits on their campus visits.
— Having a casino party for recruits that provided prizes to a recruit and his mother.
— Bringing prospects to campus in the summer prior to their enrollment "which triggered a variety of violations."

Penalties

— Two-year probation.
— Banned from the NCAA tournament next March.
— No expense-paid recruiting visits during the 1991 calendar year.
— Only one coach can recruit and evaluate off-campus during 1991.
— The University can give only one basketball scholarship during the 1991-92 academic year.
— The University can give only two basketball scholarships during the 1992-93 academic year.
— University can have no contact during the probationary period with an unnamed person who refused to cooperate with the school and the NCAA in the investigation.

Comments

— NCAA director of enforcement Chuck Smrt on possible sanctions against assistant coaches Rich Daly and Bob Sundvold: "There was no recommendation by the committee or the enforcement staff, and there's been no deal between the enforcement staff and the institution. That is totally up to the institution."

— Basketball coach Norm Stewart: "In hindsight, we can always do better. I think there are some things that are humanly impossible to do. At the same time, I feel comfortable. In 29 years of running the ballclub, I feel comfortable."

Two-tiered 5A playoff system gets mixed reviews

Associated Press

As the Texas high school football regular season chugs toward a close this week, report cards already are rolling in for the new two-tiered Class 5A playoff system.

The grades aren't all good.

Under the plan, the top three teams in each district make the playoffs. The two schools with the largest average daily membership compete in the 64-team "big school" playoffs while the third moves into a 32-team "regular" playoffs.

It's designed to alleviate enrollment disparities, but some coaches contend the system doesn't work.

"When you look at it, it's not doing what it's designed to do," said Fort Worth Western Hills coach Walter Miller, whose school likely will be the largest of the top three District 7-5A finishers.

Miller's Cougars, pending the outcome of Friday's games, will be matched against Arlington Sam Houston in the bi-district round of the "big school" playoffs. Western Hills has 1,661 students. Sam Houston has 3,026.

"When you look at the numbers, it's mind-boggling," Miller said. "We feel like we can go out there and play with them because we've got the same number of players on our roster, but year-in and year-out we just can't do it.

"In Fort Worth, our schools aren't large. We've got a smaller pool to choose from."

The disparities are not restricted to Fort Worth.

In Region III, Houston Milby (enrollment 701) and Houston Washington (1,536) will be in the regular bracket along with Aldine (2,600) and Beaumont Central (2,471).

Dub Farris, the athletic director for the North Side Independent School District in San Antonio, devised the system. He contends that it works if only because 32 more teams get playoff berths.

"It is doing what I thought it would do," Farris said. "It's generating more interest with more teams than we normally have. It's hard to argue with what it does for kids ... not only for the kids in school but community involvement."

Arlington Lamar coach Eddy Peach, whose team probably will end up in the regular playoffs, said he likes the plan for the same reasons.

"It depends on what you went in with and what you felt was important," Peach said. "I feel like it's important for the kids to get a chance to go to the playoffs. By allowing 32 more teams to experience this, that's what I feel is important."

Farris said the only catch he forsees is the lack of a true champion after the regular and big 5A winners are crowned. He suggests a game between the two champs to remove any doubt.

"I think that the problem at the end of this season is going to be who is the best team in the state," he said. "There's only one team in Texas that's going to have that complaint, and that's the (regular) Class 5A champion."

The alternative to Farris' system was to create a Class 6A for the state's largest schools. School superintendents rejected the idea.

"People have toyed with this for a long time," Farris said. "It is just not viable. There's just not enough teams that qualify for that and you've just got too much travel that way."

Miller said an additional class eventually must be added.

"It's not going to work, and most likely it will end up in court," he said. "This is not the answer, it's just the start of something different. The system will end up going one more year, then they'll go to a 6A."

But Farris disagreed, predicting that his formula will hold up with some minor alterations.

"I understand, and there's no way that you can get total parity," he said. "Not everyone's going to be totally satisfied."

CHAPS: MC draws even on season with win over Murray

From 1C

Franklin said the only aspect of the game displeasing to him was too many bad shots taken by the team. With the lead seemingly safely in hand, MC tended to showboat a bit, missing reverse jumpers and dunks that would've gone in on simple layup or jump shot attempts.

The Chaps spread out the scoring a bit more than in their season opener, taking more shots from the outside and allowing more players to shoot freely.

Freshmen forwards Charles Sanders and Marlon Jefferson had 14 points apiece, while sophomore Charlie Craine had 14 points, 10 of which came in a short stay on the wood in the second half.

Eric Walker and freshman Domasque Moore had nine points apiece.

"We had a little bit more confidence (than in the loss against Cisco)," said Thomas, who had eight points. "(Not) scoring doesn't bother me as long as we win."

Franklin said he was impressed with Moore's play, noting that the first-year player from Houston was recruited because of his shooting ability.

Murray State threw MC off balance occasionally with its pressure defense, but it wasn't enough to stop the Chaps who had already increased their lead by the time Aggie coach Bo Overton installed the technique. It was MC's defensive pressure that was one of the defensive highlights of the game, however brief it was utilized. The press applied by MC resulted in two straight Murray State turnovers down the stretch.

"We knew we should've won Monday (against Cisco)," Franklin said, "so we were anxious to get out and win tonight."

The Chaps have now won six of seven contests against Murray State.

Second round Chap Classic action continues this evening with Murray State meeting Western Texas at 5 p.m., Midland College facing Angelina at 7 p.m. and Jacksonville-Howard College tipping off at 9 p.m.

Rockets blast by Magic

Associated Press

Akeem Olajuwon, staying out of foul trouble, had 25 points and 19 rebounds as the Houston Rockets beat the winless Orlando Magic 103-99 Thursday night.

Olajuwon, who had fouled out of two of Houston's previous three games, scored 13 of his points in the final period when the Rockets were holding off the Magic (0-4). Olajuwon finished with three fouls.

Kenny Smith added 17 points and Otis Thorpe and Vernon Mawell 16 apiece for the Rockets. Dennis Scott had 28 points for the Magic and Nick Anderson added 16.

Jazz 103, Spurs 94

Karl Malone, held to five points through the first 3½ quarters, scored nine of his 14 in the final 5:34, leading Utah to a victory over San Antinio.

The loss was the 13th straight for the Spurs at Utah. San Antonio last won at the Salt Palace on Feb 3, 1986.

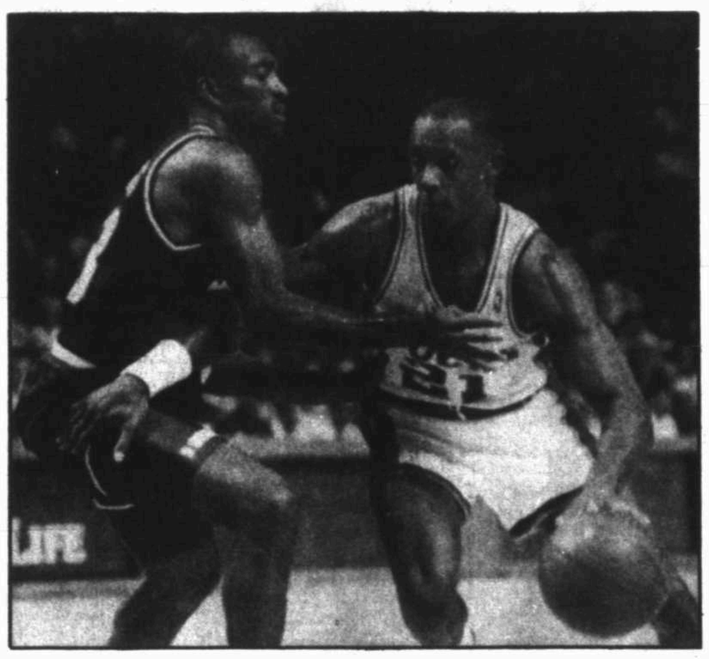

John Stockton led the Jazz with 24 points, followed by Jeff Malone with 19 — 17 in the second half — and Thurl Bailey with 18.

Terry Cummings led San Antonio with 25 points, followed by David Robinson with 22 and Sean Elliott with 14.

Bucks 141, 76ers 111

Ricky Pierce scored 28 points and Jay Humphries and Frank Brickowski sparked a third-quarter spurt as Milwaukee routed Philadelphia.

The 76ers were forced to play most of the game without starting guard Johnny Dawkins, who injured his right knee in the first quarter while attempting a shot under the basket. The preliminary diagnosis was a torn anterior cruciate ligament.

Nets 114, Heat 103

Derrick Coleman and Tate George, New Jersey's two first-round draft picks, sparked a 9-3 run at the start of the fourth quarter that carried the Nets to their first victory of the season.

The game between two of the NBA's worst teams a year ago gave evidence that both will be among the league's tailenders this season. Neither showed an ability to take control of a game marked by poor shooting, especially from the foul line, where Miami converted just 32 of 49.

Knicks 114, Bullets 103

Patrick Ewing had 32 points, 15 rebounds and seven blocked shots, and the New York Knicks held Washington to 33 percent shooting in the fourth quarter.

The Knicks, who lost two of their first three games after leading by at least 16 points in all of them, had no margin larger than four until the fourth quarter, when Ewing started an 8-2 run

Missouri spanked by NCAA, too

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri became the second school in as many days to be banned from this season's NCAA basketball tournament when it was placed on two years' probation Thursday for recruiting violations.

On Wednesday, Illinois was prohibited from postseason play and placed on three years' probation. Like Missouri, the school's scholarship allotment was also reduced as part of the penalty.

Shortly after the decision was announced, two Missouri assistant coaches resigned, effective at the end of the season.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions said coach Norm Stewart's program "operated over time without direct accountable control by the university."

It also said Stewart, the Tigers' coach the past 23 years and dean of Big Eight coaches, "delegated many of his responsibilities to his assistants, and neither the assistants nor the head coach maintained records, checks and balances or identifiable processes for institutional control, which could have been used to reconstruct their actions."

The NCAA said the laxity led to violations that included use of an improper recruiting agent in Detroit, scholarship payments to an ineligible player and small cash payments to other players.

The 55-year-old Stewart was red-eyed and emotional in defending his program at a news conference.

"In hindsight, we can always do better," he said. "When you have a ballclub that wins by 20 points, you always want to win by 22. At the same time, I feel comfortable."

Missouri chancellor Haskell Monroe Jr. said assistant coaches Rich Daly and Bob Sundvold would be allowed to keep their jobs until the end of the season because "we've had enough disruptions in the program."

However, he also said school officials were "confident that we have the right coach in place."

Big Eight commissioner Carl James said Missouri will still play in the conference tournament at the end of the regular season.

Prices rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rallied in a wild session in the petroleum market Thursday, dropping early then surging on a correct hunch by traders that President Bush would increase military pressure on Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

After the market closed, however, traders said they may have overestimated the gravity of Bush's move.

Crude oil dropped about $1 per barrel in early trading, but finished the day with a 22 cent gain, closing at $35.53 per barrel for December delivery contracts on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Analysts said the market got scared in the afternoon when traders learned a White House news conference on foreign policy, originally scheduled to take place during the trading session, had been delayed until after the exchange would be closed. Tension built as traders learned the news conference was again delayed until after the stock market's closing bell.

Natural gas prices were either down or unchanged for the day. December delivery contracts dropped 1.5 cents to $2.435 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Shuttle offer

NEW YORK (NYT) — Gordon A. Cain, a Houston investor who realized gains of hundreds of millions of dollars from the sale of companies he built, has said he would cooperate with the pilots' union from Pan American World Airways in a bid for the Pan Am shuttle.

Cain said in a letter to Thomas G. Plaskett, Pan Am's chairman, that he would provide 10 percent of the total equity in a bid in which the pilots' union would raise its share of the equity from its defined contributions pension plan.

Dollar surges

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar staged a sharp advance on world currency markets Thursday amid indications there is some international support for a stronger U.S. currency.

Gold prices rose, reversing a downward trend in Europe. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $387.30 a troy ounce, up $1 from Wednesday.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 129.50 Japanese yen.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.9670.

Other late dollar rates in New York: 1.4930 German marks; 1.2535 Swiss francs; 5.0100 French francs; 1,122.75 Italian lire; and 1.1694 Canadian dollars.

Gold fell in London to a late bid of $385.75 a troy ounce, down from $387.25 late Wednesday.

Environment topic of industry seminar

■ The oil industry was warned of stiff enforcement and criminal prosecution by environmental agencies at a seminar Thursday.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

A gathering of several hundred members of the oil industry were told Thursday that governmental agencies in charge of environmental regulations were cracking down and some firms and individuals might experience criminal prosecution as a result of environmental violations.

Estella Wacherbarth, an environmental attorney, said the Environmental Protection Agency was prepared to prosecute individuals all the way from laborers who actually commit violations to the heads of corporations who know of environmental violations.

She said land owners and lease holders would do well to track the disposal of hazardous materials to prevent liability. "The EPA interprets the word 'owner' very liberally and will go after the owner even though he has hired a firm to dispose of hazardous waste," said Wacherbarth.

October retail sales signal slow Christmas

By Joyce M. Rosenberg

The outlook for the Christmas shopping season went from bad to worse Thursday as the nation's biggest retailers reported dismal sales for October.

Several companies, including Sears, Roebuck and Co. and J.C. Penney Co. Inc., reported sales dropped from a year earlier as consumers with one eye on the economy and the other on the Middle East avoided buying nonessentials.

With Christmas less than seven weeks away, neither retailers nor industry analysts expect consumers to suddenly shift gears and go on mammoth gift-buying sprees.

The 1990 holiday season will be "a much more frugal Christmas," predicted Thomas Tashjian, an analyst with Seidler Amdec Securities Inc. in Los Angeles.

"They'll probaby be going in and buying the same number of items, but they're not going to pay as much," Tashjian said. "They're not going to buy $100 electronic toys for their kids, not this year."

Poor October sales, coming in the aftermath of disappointing showings in August and September, "reflected a recessionary psychology" among consumers, said Jeffrey Feiner, an analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co.

TI sending samples of new memory chip

■ Texas Instruments has begun sending computer manufacturers samples of the next generation of memory chips for testing.

By Evan Ramstad

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments has started sending samples of the next generation of memory chips to computer makers for tests.

Two versions of the company's 16-million-bit chip, which has four times the memory capacity of today's most advanced chips, will be sent to a limited number of computer manufacturers, Texas Instruments said Wednesday.

"Samples are important because computer manufacturers can get started building their designs around those components," said Dean McCarron, vice president of technology of Instat, a semiconductor research firm in Scottsdale, Ariz.

"Generally, when a semiconductor manufacturer sends out samples, they're making commitment to the future as far as shipping those products as a commercial concern instead of just experimenting with them," McCarron said.

A 16-million-bit memory chip can store the equivalent of about 1,000 pages of single-spaced, typewritten text.

A bit is the smallest piece of information used by a computer, and represents the digits 1 or 0. It can be thought of as an electrical switch either being turned on or off.

International Business Machines Corp. in February became the first company to announce pilot production of the chip. Texas Instruments began production a few weeks later, but is the first company to send samples to computer makers.

Commercial production of the 4-million-bit memory chip, known as a DRAM for dynamic random access memories, began in 1989. It will be another year before the 16-million-bit chip reaches commercial production, said TI spokesman Stan Victor.

Some chip makers, including IBM and TI, have started to develop a 64-million-bit chip. Because of the way chips are constructed, advances usually take place in intervals of four times greater capacity than the previous generation.

Texas Instruments will manufacture the 16-million-bit chip at facilities around the world.

'Samples are important because computer manufacturers can get started building their designs around those components.'

Financial advisors try to pinpoint invasion date

■ Two financial advisors, testing their handicapping abilities, expect the U.S. to attack the Iraqis between Nov. 12 and Nov. 22.

By Dirk Beveridge

NEW YORK (AP) — If U.S. forces attack the Iraqis during a 10-day period beginning Monday, at least two financial advisers can chalk up one for their handicapping abilities.

Anytime after midnight between Nov. 12 and Nov. 22 is "the best time for an attack to occur," according to Peter Beutel and Thomas Blakeslee, oil analysts with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc. in Hoboken, N.J.

The Kuwaiti tide will be high after midnight, which would help commandos get closer to a beachhead, and the moon phase will keep the sky dark, making it easier to storm the desert, the analysts say.

As news and rumors on the Persian Gulf crisis drive the markets up and down, many experts who see war as inevitable are now trying their hand at pinpointing the starting time.

Dates on which war might begin are circulating freely through the investing community, with varying credibility.

The Pegasus analysts, who offer advice on oil trading at the New York Mercantile Exchange, have gone so far as to put their predictions in writing. They call Nov. 12-22 "a time to play any short positions extremely closely. If there is any military action, expect the U.S. to lead with its strong aerial suit."

They emphasize they're not predicting war and don't want to convey the impression that there's a sure-fire profit opportunity. They are merely saying when and how they think war would be most likely.

Other picks are cropping up by the hundreds. Many analysts picked the days after the elections. Some are taking coming holidays into account.

"Another theory one hears about is the weather factor," said Ann-Louise Hittle, a senior oil analyst with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. who emphasizes she is neither making nor touting any picks.

"There's a cloudy season that starts up, an overcast season in February, that would make it difficult to stage an air strike."

Early in the week, some oil traders were picking invasion days between Wednesday, which came and went with no war, and Friday.

A Las Vegas oddsmaker said it would be possible to handicap the outset of war, just as people handicap anything else from football games to movies that might win an Oscar.

But don't count on any Vegas sports books getting involved in war speculation. It's legal for them to set odds on sporting events only. Other oddsmaking is done only for promotional and entertainment purposes.

And oddsmaker Art Manteris of the Las Vegas Hilton said handicapping war would be "a business matter, not an entertainment matter."

JANE BRYANT QUINN

Take care when depositing goodbye check

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK--When your company tells you to clean out your locker or your desk, you rarely walk penniless out the door. Usually, there's a goodbye check. A quick calculation tells you how many months of living expenses the check will cover.

Quinn

But if part of that check represents pension savings, you'll take a big loss if you spend it all. Those savings represent years of patient tax deferral that, once gone, can never be recovered. If you chuck the money into your bank account, you will: (1) Owe income taxes on the full sum. (2) Owe a 10 percent tax penalty, if you're under age 59 1-2. (3) Lose the opportunity for that money to continue to grow tax-deferred.

A retirement-savings check that started out at, say, $5,000 might be down to $3,000 or less, by the time the state and federal tax offices get their hands on it. Whereas if you kept it invested at 8 percent for 20 years, you'd have $17,000 after taxes in the 28 percent bracket, without doing a lick of work.

When you lose your job, you should immediately draw up a bare-bones budget--mortgage, rent, utilities, insurance, car loan, food, gasoline, job-hunting costs. Pay only these. Tell your other creditors (including credit-card companies) that you'll send them good-faith checks of $10 a month until you are employed again. This should buy you at least six months.

Cover your bare-bones budget with any income you have (spouse's earning, unemployment pay), plus all the savings you can turn into cash. This includes bank accounts, mutual funds and that portion of your company's goodbye check that doesn't represent retirement money, such as severance and vacation pay.

But for the time being, don't throw your retirement money into the breach. You may have received a lump-sum distribution from a pension plan, your own tax-deductible 401(k) contributions, matching contributions from your employer, and tax-deferred earnings on the whole sum. None of this money has ever been taxed and your goal should be to keep it that way.

Do it by rolling the whole wad into an Individual Retirement Account. You have 60 days to make the transfer. (If you wait any longer, full taxes and penalties are due.) The only money that can't be rolled over are sums you deposited into the plan from your after-tax earnings. So pull out this cash and add it to your ready savings. It won't cost you extra income taxes, because the tax has already been paid.

Invest your rollover IRA in a money-market mutual fund or a bank money-market deposit account and leave it alone. Pay your expenses with all your other income and savings. With any luck, you'll be reemployed before your ready money runs out.

What if you use up your savings and are still unemployed? At that point, start drawing on your rollover IRA. You'll owe taxes and probably penalties on the money you take out. But the moment you get a job, you can stop the withdrawals and preserve what's left of your retirement account.

If your old company had a traditional, defined-benefit pension plan, it probably gave you no lump sum, unless the value of your benefit was under $3,500. Larger amounts usually remain in the plan, until you claim your monthly pension retirement.

Lump-sum payouts do come from profit-sharing plans or 401(k)s. If you like, you can generally leave any sum in these plans, for the company to keep on investing for you. But find out what the rules are on withdrawals. Most large employers let you retrieve this money whenever you want, says Allen Steinberg of the consulting firm, Hewitt Associates. But if your choice is to take the money now or at age 65, take it now and roll it into an IRA.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, attracting some modest support after Wednesday's broad loss.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 44.31 points Wednesday, rebounded 13.62 to 2,454.46 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 8 to 5 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 877 up, 555 down and 484 unchanged.

Interest rates held steady in the government bond market pending the completion today of a three-day quarterly auction of Treasury securities.

Analysts said investors remained hopeful that the Federal Reserve would take further steps before long to relax its credit policy.

One assumed precondition for a more stimulative Fed policy is a reduction in inflationary pressures, especially in oil prices.

SEMINAR: On environment

(From 7C)

The warning came at a seminar sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and University of Texas System. The purpose of the seminar was to present a program of environmental concerns and expand understanding of environmental issues and compliance to local, state and federal laws. Four panels of experts covered the topics of: civil and criminal liability, West Texas groundwater issues, waste management and site restoration.

"You don't want to make snap judgements on hazardous waste," said Paul Bohannan, a civil lawyer. "It may be yours forever, even if you hire someone to haul it off, and you may be subject to criminal enforcement." He noted that that applied even to drilling cuttings if they were to be classified as hazardous.

The team of lawyers pointed out that EPA could conduct a raid on a business if it was thought environmental laws were being violated, and that the agency probably would not be subject to any damages caused during the raid.

Bill Lockey of the Texas Water Commission pointed out that the same principal applied to ground water contamination. He noted that there was no grandfather clauses, that an oil operator who created an environmental problem 30 years ago, even though he was in compliance at the time, could still be held liable when it comes to remediation.

A panel comprised of Bill Sims, State Senator, District 25; Bill Lockey, Texas Water Commission; Mark Henkhaus, of Texas Railroad Commission Dist. 8 and Mark Hoelscher, of the Martin County Underground Water Conservation District reviewed environmental problems associated with ground water.

Bill Lockey stated that ground water contamination was becoming an increasing concern, especially in West Texas where incidents of contamination from oil operations were found.

He several complaints about water well contamination from oilfield sources were investigated and found to be true, while some of the complaints were attributed to other sources.

Sen. Bill Sims noted that oil wells were originally cased to protect oil formations from water contamination, but it was the reverse today. "If you don't have clean, fresh, drinkable water you don't have life," warned Sims.

He said one solution to keeping ground water pure was the formation of numberous county underground water districts. "You get more involvement at the county level than you do with large regional underground water districts," he said.

The management of waste was covered in a panel composed of Michael Edmiston of the Texas Department of Health and Tom Baker of Arco Oil & Gas Co. Edmiston discussed landfill disposal, while Baker reviewed waste management plans.

Tom Zapatka of Marathon Oil Co. discussed reclamation of oilfield drilling sites and Darrell Ueckert of Texas A&M presented methods for revegetation.

Glasscock reentry yields Strawn strike

Staff Report

An abandoned well in Glasscock County has yielded a Strawn discovery, three miles northeast of Garden City and north of the Garden City South oil field.

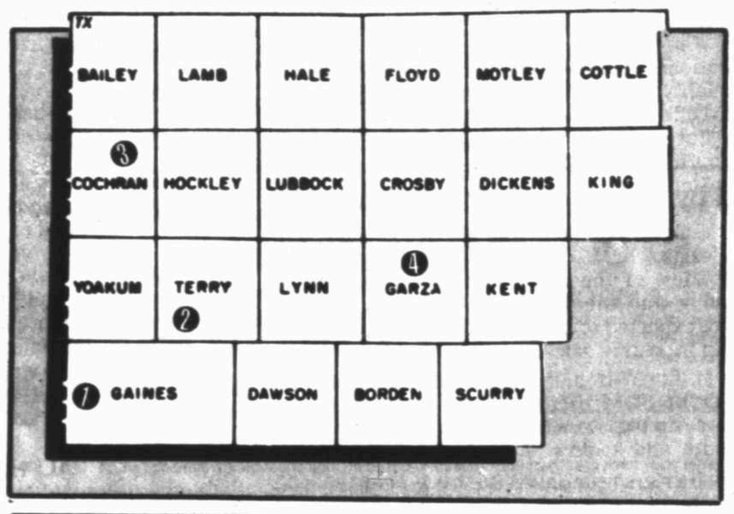

TMBR/SHARP DRILLING INC., Midland, reentered the former No. 4-1 Neste Dogwood, drilled by Union Texas Petroleum Corp., renaming it the No. 401 Calverly. The well was potentialed to flow 83 barrels of 41.4 gravity crude, 154 Mcfd and no water on a 1/4 inch choke from perforations 9,476 to 9,492 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 120 psi and the interval was acidized with 11,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,855:1.

Total depth was 9,700 ft. and the well was plugged back to 9,580 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 9,673 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,684 ft., include the Clearfork Carbonate at 5,865 ft., Spraberry at 6,410, Dean at 8,056, Wolfcamp at 7,220,and Strawn at 9,440 ft. Pay was topped at 9,440 ft.

Location is 466 ft. ft. from north and 1,000 ft. from west lines of Section 4, Block 33, T-4-S, T&P survey.

QUINN: Take losses

(From 7C)

A good retirement-savings plan is heavily invested in stocks or stock-owning mutual funds, for long-term growth. Right now, you have losses and therefore may be reluctant to sell. That's a mistake. You might need some of this money to live on, and cannot afford the risk that the stock market will drop further.

So sell your stocks, and your bond funds, too. Convert everything into cash. Your losses exist, like it or not. Switching into cash will not change your net worth–it just makes your position more secure. You can redeploy your remaining savings into stocks and bonds when your income is secure again.

Jane Bryant Quinn's column, syndicated by Washington Post Writers Group appears on the Reporter-Telegram business pages each Tuesday and Friday.

SALES: Bad times ahead

(From 7C)

Consumers cut spending as the economy weakened and after the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait raised the specter of war, inflating prices of gasoline and home heating oil.

The first items crossed off shopping lists were so-called discretionary items — clothing, furniture and other extras that are the bread and butter of many big stores.

If retailers have a difficult Christmas, it could contribute to a further deterioration of the economy, since two-thirds of the nation's economic growth is generated by consumer spending.

Unsold goods on store shelves could also affect manufacturing. If stores don't place new orders, factories don't need to provide as many products and could lay off workers.

A poor Christmas season could be devastating for the retailers themselves. They depend on holiday shopping for about half their annual sales and profits. Christmas 1989 was a disappointment for many storeowners after they were forced to slash prices to attract customers.

Sears, the country's largest retailer, said results from stores open at least one year fell 0.4 percent last month from October 1989, while overall sales dropped 1.2 percent.

Analysts believe sales from stores open at least a year — also known as same-store or comparable store sales — provide a more accurate assessment of a retailer's performance than overall sales do. New stores tend to have extraordinarily strong sales that can skew a retailer's results.

Analysts predict trouble for some stores, especially those going into the Christmas season with high inventory and unexpectedly poor sales. Those retailers are expected to be the first ones to mark down merchandise — and see their profits evaporate.

EARNEST KIKER

Expert to demonstrate 'one of the healing arts'

Techniques and the benefits of horticulture as therapy will be demonstrated at a workshop November 17, 1990, at the Texas A&M University Agriculture Reseach and Extension Center north of the airport.

Kiker

The training will be conducted by Dr. Diane Relf, visiting consumer horticulture specialist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service. A founder and past president of the American Horticultural Therapy Association, she is an extension horticulturist on the faculty of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Blacksburg, Va.

The workshop, sponsored by the West Texas Arts and Botanical Association and the Extension Service, will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at 4:00 p.m. Registration is $25 for the full day; $10 for the morning session only, and $20 for the afternoon session only.

"As a result of repeated success of practitioners, horticulture is being widely accepted as an effective therapeutic tool," Relf says. Gardening is one of the oldest healing arts, yet horticulture therapy is relatively new as a recognized profession, according to Relf, on of the nation's leading scholars in the field.

Life for many handicapped persons is greatly enriched by caring for their gardens and indoor plants, appreciating their beauty and productivity, she noted.

The morning session will feature basics of horticulture therapy. It will emphasize how it works, who uses it, the dynamic interaction of people with plants, and organizing resources. Student scholarships are available for this session.

The afternoon session will provide hands-on activities, demonstrate methods and techniques, explain adaptation of projects to specific handicaps, produce a project and provide materials and a handbook. This session will be limited to the first 40 who register.

To register for the day or individual sessions, send a check, payable to the West Texas Arts and Botanical Association, to Dr. R.E. Roberts, TAMU Research and Extension Center, Route 3, Box 213AA, Lubbock, Texas 79401. For additional information, telephone Roberts at 806-746-6010.

* * *

There will be a recertification training meeting on November 14, 1990, at the large Community Building in Rooney Park in Fort Stockton. Registration will begin at 8:00 a.m. The session is designed to give five credits toward commercial and non-commercial applicators.

Another training session will be held in Odessa on December 11, 1990, at the Ector County Annex, 1010 E. 8th St. The same program will be repeated at that time.

Please note, the recertification credits are for Texas Department of Agriculture, not structural pest control licenses.

The agenda is as follows: 8:00 a.m. registration. Mr. Mario Saavedra will present an update on lawn regulations and pesticide safety; rangeland herbicide update from Dr. Allen McGinty; non-crop and soil sterilant, lawn and turf herbicide update from Mr. Charles Stichler, SCS approved and CRP herbicide; and Dr. Charles T. Allen's topic will be pest control in the house, lawn and garden.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Scattered rains help crops

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Scattered rains, none of them heavy, surged through much of Texas during the weekend, pushing growth of winter pastures and again impeding harvesting of cotton, sorghum, hay and other crops.

The National Agricultural Weather Service at Texas A&M University reported that the showers moved mainly over North, East, Central, South Central and Southeast Texas.

Saturday's rains of up to 1.5 inches fell on the Rolling Plains in some areas but were generally light. On Sunday, light rains stretched from Paris, Texas, to the Junction area in the Hill Country.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service reported that Panhandle temperatures dropped below freezing with high winds, rain and snow. Wheat and other pastures are responding to the moisture but cotton, sorghum and hay harvesting must wait for drier conditions.

Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director, said Rolling Plains cotton harvesting has been getting better yields than expected and grades are favorable.

Ed Garnett of Vernon, district Extension Service director in the Rolling Plains, said soil moisture in wheat fields is still short in some counties.

"Due to these conditions, very few cattle have been turned on wheat for grazing. And because money is scarce for stocker cattle purchases and because of the current price of lightweight stockers, it now appears that many acres of wheat will be available for lease and grazing," Garnett said.

Out in Far West Texas, soil moisture is mostly adequate, and district Extension Director Charles Neeb of Fort Stockton said cotton yields are average to good, and ranges and pastures are providing good grazing.

"Chili pepper harvesting continues, vegetables are growing abundantly, pecan kernel quality is above average and we anticipate an excellent deer harvest," he said.

Carpenter said the two droughtiest areas are South Texas and the Coastal Bend.

South Texas soil moisture is short and forage conditions are poor, said the district's Extension Service director, Doyle G. Warren of Weslaco.

"Most of the ranges are in poor condition going into the winter and cooler weather is not expected to help. Such conditions are causing increased sales of livestock," Warren said.

M. Lin Wilson of Corpus Christi, district Extension Service director in the Coastal Bend, said similar harsh conditions can be found south and southwest of San Antonio.

"Drought continues to hurt summer and winter forages, and dry soil is hampering small grain germination," he said.

'Chili pepper harvesting continues (in Far West Texas), vegetables are growing abundantly, pecan kernel quality is above average and we anticipate an excellent deer harvest.'

— Charles Neeb, district Extension director, Fort Stockton

The following specific crop, livestock and weather data for the past week were reported by district Extension Service directors:

PANHANDLE: Freezing weather, snow and rain will boost young wheat and other pastures. Cotton and sorghum harvesting will resume as fields dry out. Hay baling has been active. A good inventory of range grasses is available in most counties. Cattle are generally in good condition and stockers are moving into wheat fields.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture is mostly short but open weather has been fine for field work, including cotton and sorghum harvesting. Wheat planting is winding down. Ranges and pastures need rain. Peanut and soybean harvesting continues, and vegetable harvesting is slowing.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton is producing better yields and grades than expected. Wheat is responding to recent rains in some areas but scarce money could limit buying of stocker cattle to put on the wheat. Cattle are still in good shape but more rain will be needed for winter forage production. Pecan yields vary from good to poor.

NORTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture varies with recent rains. Wheat is mostly planted and emerged but will need more rain soon. Peanuts are 90 percent harvested and getting above-average yields and grades. Oats are 99 percent planted and up to good stands. Ranges, pastures and cattle are in fair to good shape. Cool- season vegetables are growing well. Pecans are 20 percent harvested.

NORTHEAST: Soil moisture is adequate, and cotton, sorghum and soybean harvesting is 90 percent complete. Oats are all planted and offering limited grazing. Cattle and markets are normal. Fall vegetable harvesting is finished and little or no production is coming from pecans.

FAR WEST: Soil moisture is short to adequate and flood damage is being repaired in the Presidio area. Cotton yields are average to good, ranges and pastures are providing good grazing, and livestock conditions are favorable. Chili pepper harvesting continues, pecan kernel quality is above average and an excellent deer season is forecast.

WEST CENTRAL: Soil moisture is short to adequate, weather has been right for cotton harvesting and early-planted wheat is being grazed. Peanut yields and grades are good. Ranges and pastures are good but could use rain, and livestock condition is excellent. Pecan quality could be better but harvesting has just begun. Tom Green County is getting the best cotton crop since 1949. Dryland cotton should average better than three-fourths of a bale an acre, and irrigated fields are expecting a bale and a half to two bales per acre.

CENTRAL: Light frost has slowed growth of warm-season grasses but small grain should benefit from recent rains. Cattle are in good shape, especially those grazing small grains.

EAST: Soil moisture is mostly adequate. Winter pastures are emerging and growing fast where rain has fallen. Warm-season grasses have been slowed by cool weather. Livestock are holding up well but some maintenance feeding has started. A bountiful fall vegetable harvest is under way. A good to short pecan crop is 80 percent harvested.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture is improved following recent rains, pastures are responding, and wheat and oats are up and growing well. Stock tanks, however, are still too low. Pecan harvesting is active and peanut harvesting is producing fairly good yields.

SOUTHWEST: Despite the district's first frost, ranges, pastures, small grains and vegetable crops are growing normally, but rain would help. Spinach plantings for the fresh market are down significantly but common diseases on the crop are minimal. Harvesting is vigorous on good crops of green beans, cabbage, mustard, kale, jalapeno peppers and pickling cucumbers. Cabbage and pepper markets are excellent but peppers are suffering heavy losses from an unidentified virus. Peanut and pecan harvesting is about 70 percent done and markets are profitable. Peanut yields, however, are about 25 percent below normal. Pecan yields are up but quality is down.

SOUTH: Chronically dry weather has left most ranges in poor condition as winter approaches, and scarce forage is causing increased livestock sales. Diseases have caused severe peanut yield losses. Whiteflies are affecting yields of sweet potatoes, cucurbit and cruciferous crops but peppers and celery have been bothered very little. Citrus is progressing well, with some insect and disease problems. Sugar cane harvesting continues.
