C of C Directors Hear Reports, Plan Barbecue

Directors of the Chamber of Commerce discussed possible contracts with NASA, the possibility of getting some of the local historical homes named as Medallion homes under the program of the Texas Historical Survey Committee, and listened to committee reports at their regular meeting.

Mrs. Mary Juergens, manager of the Chamber, reported upon local attendance at the recent South Texas Chamber meeting in San Antonio, and Mrs. Dorothy Jarboe, public relations for the Aransas Natural Gas Company reported upon the progress of the Hug-the-Coast Highway Association, and said that the next meeting would be in New Orleans in February.

Mrs. Charles Roe, vice president reported that James Kautz had resigned as chairman of the tourist affairs committee, to be able to devote more time to Rockport's annual festival, the Sea-o-Rama, and introduced Mrs. Eugene Everett as the new chairman.

Mrs. Everett reported that her committee had obtained pledges of more than $400 towards a full page ad in the South Texas Chamber of Commerce magazine. She also said arrangements had been made to continue the winter card parties and bingo games that had proven so popular with winter tourists in past years.

Mrs. Juergens read to the directors a communication from the Texas Historical Survey Committee regarding the designation of some of the local historical homes to receive the Survey Committee's Medallion.

One hundred and thirty-four counties in Texas have now, Mrs. Juergens said, placed Medallions on structures of historical, architectural and cultural significance to the community and to their areas. A list of these will be printed and will be distributed by the Texas Highway Department, she said, and arrangements have also been made for distribution by hotel, motel and service station associations.

Buildings so listed, Mrs. Juergens stated, are not necessarily open to the public, a fact that will be stated when the list is printed, but the fact that structures in the county are so listed will call tourist attention to the fact that something worthwhile is there.

There isn't a county in Texas, she said, that doesn't have some church, school, ranch headquarters plantation, farm home, home of some person prominent in area or Texas history, some old structure or cabin that will qualify.

Members of the Board suggested that the Fulton and Mathis homes here could easily qualify, and Jack Baughman, chairman of the local historical committee was asked to explore the possibilities of having these listed.

The meeting closed after directors had voted to hold the annual barbecue for entertainment of members of the volunteer fire departments and their families, from Fulton and Rockport.

Actually, the activities will start tonight, with a bonfire on the beach at 6:30, when material gathered by shop students, under direction of Philip Baldwin goes up in flame.

Tonight the Junior High football team will play Gregory Portland here, with the game starting at 6:30, while the Junior Varsity travels to Gregory, with game time there scheduled for 6:30 p.m.

The schedule for Friday will be as follows: 3:10 a pep rally at the High School, 7:10 the pregame activities will start, at 7:20, the coronation of the Homecoming queen, at 7:30 the kickoff of the football game with Flour Bluff. Following the game will be a Dance at the Youth Center.

The Homecoming queen will be selected by the High School students. Each of the eleven clubs nominated a candidate for queen with the top five candidates receiving the most votes, taking part in the coronation. The following five girls will take part in the coronation:

Rockport Elementary To Have Book Fair

In honor of National Book Week, Nov. 11-17, the Rockport Elementary School library will hold a Book Fair, similar to the one held in 1961, which was received with interest by both parents and students.

A Book Fair is designed for two purposes, one is to promote interest in books and libraries, instilling a greater responsibility in the reader for the care of the book. The second purpose is to supplement the budget and add more books to the shelves.

This year's book fair will follow closely the format established last year. Each classroom will be competing for a room attendance prize. To be fair, parents and friends who have more than one student in the building, are reminded to sign the guest book in the library for each room to be counted. To enable as many people to attend this affair as possible, the library will hold "Open House" Tuesday, Nov. 13. From 7 until 9 p.m., the library will be available to guests, books will be on display, and refreshments will be offered. At 8 p.m. on that evening, a program and parade will be presented in observance of our notable book characters.

The students who desire to may dress up as their favorite book character and will form a parade before judges and compete for book prizes. The grades will be divided into divisions of first and second grades; third and fourth grades; and fifth and sixth grades. Each of these divisions will be eligible for gift books for the library. With Halloween so short behind us, it should not be difficult to costume the students for this event.

All activities of the Book Fair are on a volunteer basis, but the students are encouraged to participate. The library is theirs, and the books within it are for their pleasure and knowledge. The community should be eager to show their interest in this observance by visiting the library any of the school days next week, or by attending the open house on Tuesday night. Whether a book is purchased or not is not the primary concern, it is the attendance and interest in what is being published and read by the children in 1962.

With Thanksgiving and Christmas closing upon us, this furnishes an ideal opportunity to give to the school library. A birthday may be near for your child, and a gift to the school would be an excellent way for him to share his holiday with the school.

650 Bird Watchers Expected Here For Sunday Refuge Trip

Six hundred and fifty out of a possible 800 Audubon Society members that will attend their 58th Annual Convention in Corpus Christi, Nov. 10-14, will arrive in Rockport Sunday morning by bus to make the boat trip along the Gulf Intracoastal Canal from here to the Aransas Wildlife Refuge, hoping to see America's last flock of whooping cranes.

A whole fleet of boats will be here to take as many of the group as possible on the northern trip along the canal, but so many were the people from other parts of the country wanting to make the foray that others will go by bus to the Refuge. There they will transfer to some of the boats and make the trip down the canal, to give them a chance to see the cranes and the varied wildlife that makes this area a must on almost any ornithologists agenda.

Captain Hubert Johnson said that practically all the big fare boats in Corpus Christi harbor will be here Sunday morning, to supplement his own boat, the Mary Lou, which normally operates out of Rockport. Among those he named were the Jole Blon, the Capt. Clark, in the Gulf Clipper, the Man-of-War, and the Phantasy.

Mrs. Jack Hagar, international-known bird watcher, and who has gained fame through the years because of her accurate and long continued observations of the bird life in this area, said that the people attending the convention far outstripped expectations.

"They had so many reservations," Mrs. Hagar said, "that by Oct. 30 they began sending requests and money back to people who had been late in sending them. By that date, there were 950 people registered, which is a far greater number than at any previous Audubon Convention known to me. This is nearly three times as many as registered at Atlantic City for the 1961 convention. And although the convention doesn't start until Saturday, people from everywhere have been streaming by here for the last three days or more, wanting to know where to go to see birds, and just stopping to say 'Howdy'."

Captain Johnson said that every effort was being made to accommodate everyone that wanted to go on the field trip. It will leave Rockport about 9 a.m. Sunday morning. From Rockport the fleet will travel north along the Intracoastal Canal to San Antonio Bay and return. Three boats, the Mary Lou, the Jole Blon, and another will continue to Hopper's Landing at the northern edge of the Aransas Wildlife Refuge, and there transfer their loads to buses, receiving new passengers for the southward trip.

Two days later, on Nov. 13, a forty-bus caravan will take the whole assemblage on a tour of the King Ranch for a study of range and wildlife management, and for a barbecue.

Senator Ralph Yarborough, successful sponsor of recent Congressional acts to create a Padre Island National Seashore and to protect the golden eagle, will address the convention on the opening day, and Carl W. Buchheister, president of the Audubon Society will speak the same day on the program and goals of the National Audubon Society.

The four-day program will include lectures by authorities on wildlife, and also a field trip to the Welder Wildlife Refuge, as well as a four-day post-convention trip to the Rio Grande Valley and Mexico.

Corpus Christi C of C Queries NASA Suppliers

The Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce, in a letter to Mrs. Mary Juergens, manager of the local organization, asked:

"Do you have any manufacturers, processor, or industries making or capable of making anything that can be sold to NASA or to military installations?"

"Attached is a copy of a notice I have mailed to Corpus Christi manufacturers about a proposed one day meeting on government procurement practices."

"Will you please contact any prospects in Rockport by phone or otherwise, and then let me know as soon as convenient the names of those in your city who are interested in attending."

The questionnaire, which directors of the Chamber of Commerce thought should be made public, asks:

"Are you interested in getting new business for your company from NASA or some of its prime contractors?"

"NASA has offered to send the Industry Assistance Procurement Officer from the Procurement and Contracts Division to speak on government procurement policies and to explain how to get business by contracting with NASA or as a subcontractor."

"You will learn: Whether you are in a position to sell to NASA; whether you can supply NASA with materials or services; whether you can produce products to meet NASA specifications; and how to get on NASA's bidders' list."

Those interested in such a meeting should get in touch with Mrs. Mary Juergens, at the local Chamber of Commerce.

Virginia Shivers Wins As Sheriff

Eleven Votes Furnish Margin of Victory Between Her and Opponent Jim Adams

On Tuesday, Nov. 6, after one of the hardest-fought write-in campaigns ever staged in Aransas County, Mrs. Virginia Shivers became sheriff of Aransas County, and the third woman in the state's history to be elected to the office.

Only Loving County, in 1934, and Gaines County, about four or five years ago, have ever elected a woman to the post of sheriff, prior to Mrs. Shivers' victory by a margin of 11 votes, although many other women have held the office as appointees of commissioners' courts.

However, facing a field of eight other contenders for the unexpired two-year portion of her husband, the late Sheriff A. C. Shivers, she won in a massive write-in campaign that undoubtedly set a record for an off year election. Practically every eligible voter in the county cast a ballot.

The county tax-assessor-collectors office showed a potential of 1520 voters that had paid their poll taxes or that had been issued exemptions upon attaining the age of 21. Actually, when the polls closed and the final count was completed, about 9 a.m. on the morning of Nov. 7, the official count of those who had voted was placed at 1569, the difference being, of course, over-age persons who required no poll tax to vote.

Mrs. Shivers, who was appointed by the Commissioners' court to the office of sheriff, following her husband's death on Oct. 13, was faced immediately with a political campaign by write-in, with the election only a little over two weeks away, if she wanted to retain the office.

Her opponents were all men, one of whom had run for the office at least twice, once against her husband and the other time against the sheriff that preceded him, but Mrs. Shivers' closest opponent was, like herself, a comparative newcomer in the field of politics.

Jim Adams, a grocery store owner had run once, and had been defeated, for city alderman. Others in the race were Bruce Mayes, Gene Sprinkle, Roscoe Johnson, Roy Hinton, Jack Smith, Hollis Collum, and Police Chief E. A. Stautzenberger, whose friends attempted to draft him over his vigorous protests, and who polled 174 votes, despite the fact that he stated in the newspapers that he didn't want the job.

All night long, Adams and Mrs. Shivers see-sawed; sometimes one was ahead; sometimes the other; and as late as 8 a.m. on the morning of Nov. 7, it was anybody's race, frequently with only one or two votes separating the two.

However, the few last votes gave Mrs. Shivers a majority.

In her campaign, she told voters: "So that you may know how the office will be managed when you elect me as sheriff, I will tell you that it will consist, as it always has, of four staff members, a sheriff, a chief deputy, one full time deputy and a jailer."

"I anticipate doing all of the office work (which has heretofore been done by a salaried employee) which consists of the general office work, dispatching, serving papers, and in addition will be available for all court sessions of both county and district courts. The office will continue to operate within the budget established by the commissioners' court, as it has done in the past."

The nominating committee report was given by J. H. Curlee, member of the council executive board, who served as the chairman of the committee.

The principal speaker of the evening was W. B. "Bill" McAdams, long time scout and civic leader of Corpus Christi who spoke to the group on their important work as leader of boys in the scouting program. McAdams was introduced by Yarborough.

Also appearing on the program was Rev. H. Lee Griffin, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Taft, Richard Wright, council advancement chairman who told of the annual council happening in December and scout executives, Bob Reddell and A. C. Williamson.

Attending from Rockport were Dr. and Mrs. H. F. Elliot, Mr. and Mrs. Norvell Jackson, Bobby and Johnny, N. F. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Jackson, and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse.

RECREATIONAL AND RELIGIOUS FACILITIES AVAILABLE AT BASE

Recreational and religious facilities are provided at the Rockport Air Force Station, though they are smaller than on large bases, they are designed to meet the same needs as on the larger stations.

Rockport Air Force Station possesses a photo hobby shop, an auto hobby shop, a well equipped library, and sports equipment for hunting, fishing, boating, baseball, football, softball, golf, basketball, volleyball, weightlifting, etc.

Airmen at the base, also have available, movies, a Service Club, and NCO Open Mess. The NCO Open Mess has been expanded and improved during the past two weeks. It is now located in the former supply building.

Although airmen are urged to join in the religious activities of the local churches, the base has a small chapel, which is open at all times. Bibles and other religious information are readily available. Chaplains make regular visits of counseling and other matters. Religious services are not held on a scheduled basis, however the base provides transportation to Rockport, each Sunday, for services in the local churches.

AIR FORCE MAN ISSUED TICKET AFTER WRECK

A member of the 812th AC&W Squadron, Rockport Air Force Station, was issued a ticket Tuesday night by Chief of Police E. A. Stautzenberger, following a wreck on the beach road.

Ronald O. Rein was the driver of a car proceeding north on Highway 35, where it skirts Little Bay, almost in front of the Key Service Station. When attempting to pass another car, he lost control of the '50 Chevrolet he was driving, and it spun around several times, hitting a street light pole with its rear end, and shearing the pole off, some distance above the ground.

Rein was accompanied by Dan Shaffer and Misses Sandra Hammack and Pamela Court. None of the occupants of the car were injured. Chief Stautzenberger investigated the accident, and issued a ticket to Rein for proceeding at an unsafe speed under the conditions at the time, when the road was slippery, due to a misting rain.

CONGER NEBLETT HAGAR, Independent Executrix of the Will and Estate of

Chief Thanks Everyone, But Glad He Lost

Chief of Police E. A. Stautzenberger, who didn't want to run for sheriff, who didn't want the job, and who was a candidate against his will, said that he thanks everyone who showed their confidence in him by their vote, but that he's very glad he didn't win.

"I pledged Mrs. Shivers that I wasn't going to run against her," he said, "and I didn't go back on my word. The late Sheriff A. C. Shivers was my friend, and Mrs. Shivers is my friend, and I told her and everyone that asked me that I wasn't running for the job. I like the one I have."

Chief Stautzenberger said that he appreciates the thought behind the votes of those people who wrote his name in on the ballot, but that he had much rather they had given their votes to someone else.

"My name was put in the paper and used on placards and cards without my consent, and too late for me to stop the announcement," he said, "and it made it very embarrassing for me. I know those people who waged an active campaign to see me win the election had the best intentions in the world, but it confused the issue before the local voters. However, I'm glad to see that Mrs. Shivers won."

The chief said that he had never sought an elective office in his life, and that he hasn't changed his mind about it.

"You're elected today," he said, "and next year, or two years from now you're out again, if someone can beat you. But if you do a good job in a place like the one I hold now, it can last indefinitely."

"I feel like I can do a good job for the city, and will continue to cooperate in every way with other law enforcement agencies in the area, including the sheriff's department and Mrs. Shivers. That's all I ever wanted to do."

"And that's all I want to do now. Again I express my appreciation that so many people thought well enough of me to vote for me. It was nice of them to do so. But I'm sure glad I didn't win the election. Like I say, I didn't want the job."

The incidence of drug addiction is now one to every 4,000 persons.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY HAS FALL MEETING

On November 3, the Palladians Chapter of the National Honor Society of Aransas County High School was host to the fall meeting of the District XII Gulf Coast National Honor Society. From 8:30-9:30 a.m. approximately 75 students registered from the following schools: Aransas County High School, Aransas Pass High School, Calhoun High School, Cuero High School, Gregory-Portland High School, El Campo High School, Sweeney High School, and Yoakum High School.

The first general meeting was called to order by Myrns McDonough, president of the local chapter. The invocation by DeRema LeFevre was followed by the pledge of allegiance led by Paul Ramsey. Following the welcome given by Mr. A. B. LeFevre, principal of ACHS, Myrna McDonough introduced Mrs. Fred B. Norris, president of TSTA. Mrs. Norris spoke to the group about her trip to Sweden this summer as a delegate to the TSTA to the International Educators meeting in Stockholm. Two points that Mrs. Norris brought out were the importance of a knowledge of geography and also the importance of a study of languages.

Following a short break the students divided into four discussion groups. The theme of the meeting was "I Dare You." The discussion groups brought out how each principle of the National Honor Society could grow and become more prominent through "daring." The group covering Service was led by Mary Kathryn Gray and Betty Armintrout; Scholarship by Peggy Chambers and Carol St. John; Character by Sue Johnson and Sandra Fielder; and Leadership by Andy Everett and Gary Tuer.

After lunch a general business meeting was held with the district officers presiding. Yoakum extended an invitation for the spring meeting and the invitation was accepted. After the meeting was adjourned coffee, Coke, and cookies were served in the cafeteria.

Mark Allen Meyer of Corpus Christi spent the weekend with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Meyer.

Mrs. Emma Robson of Fulton returned home Tuesday from the Aransas Pass Hospital.

Much Money For Shrimp Research Given By Congress

Shrimp fishermen of the South Atlantic and Gulf Coasts came off fairly well at the hands of the 87th Congress, according to a spokesman for the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, Department of the Interior.

An appropriation of $325,000 was made to expand biological research on shrimp, and another $100,000 was set aside for accelerating gear research, a step strongly endorsed by the industry as a whole.

There were some smaller increases in other programs, including technology, oceanography, market news and market promotion. The biggest single item in the overall program was $394,000 for a new radio-biological laboratory at Beaufort, N. C. Also, $30,000 was appropriated for rehabilitation of the South Atlantic Exploratory Fishing Base.

According to the Shrimp Association of the Americas, which keeps a close eye on such things, the total regional program on shrimp has reached $3,604,000—doubling in the last five years. Good results have been obtained by one of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service exploratory vessels, the Dowers. Work in clear water with this ship, off Panama City, Fla., used under-water TV to study shrimp reaction to gear and electrical stimuli. As a result, 28 minutes of 16 mm sound film is now available on requests, showing shrimp trawl behavior on bottom.

Estuarine research is off to a good start in the eastern Gulf with a new $110,000 program at St. Petersburg Beach Field Station. Starting with Tampa Bay, biologists will study hydrologic features of the area to see how man made changes such as pollution, filling, dredging and similar works affect commercial fisheries species of fish and shrimp. Since estuarine areas like the bays of Texas—part fresh and part salt water—are vital to spawning and maturing many species, this knowledge of changing conditions is, according to U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, a must.

Shrimp progressing is progressing well, according to the SAOTA, and methods of predicting shrimp abundance are being studies in the Services' laboratory at Galveston. Areas from which young shrimp enter the commercial fishery at Tortugas have also been defined, by shrimp marking and migration studies.

Recently, scientists in charge of gear research on the vessels Oregon and Silver Bay have been redefining the deep water grounds for royal red shrimp, which are red as boiled lobsters when caught, and taste like those shellfish when boiled. As a result, a number of shrimp trawlers have been fishing for the species, and this fishery is slowly building up to a commercially profitable venture. Also, scientists have launched a program to develop canned, filleted or otherwise processed mullet products which will meet consumer acceptance and move mullet in volume on the market. Bureau technologists at Pascagoula laboratory and regional marketing men of the service are working together on this project.

The vessel loan program sponsored by the Fish and Wildlife Service also continues to play an important part in the fisheries. As of Aug. 31, there had been 1962 loans approved for 117 applicants in the Gulf of Mexico and South Atlantic, bringing the total amount loaned on fishing vessels to $2,659,227. Some $5,000,000 is yet available for loans to qualified applicants. Vessel mortgage insurance also allows fishermen to obtain financing on new vessels under the right conditions.
