PERRYTON SECOND ANNUAL CELEBRATION

A. S. STINNETT TO SPEAK
HERE AUGUST 23, AT 8 P.M.

THE BEST BALL TEAMS IN THE COUNTRY FOR OUR CELEBRATION

Who is A. S. Stinnett? He's the biggest man in the Panhandle, from the standpoint of doing things. This man will speak at the Perryton Celebration on the evening of the 23rd, at 8 o'clock p. m., and every person who will neglect to hear him will miss something worth while to hear.

Mr. Stinnett has been identified with the Panhandle and its various stages of progress for thirty years, coming to Amarillo several years ago from Wichita Falls, Texas, where he was formerly associated with Frank Kell. He has been one of the main stays in the matter of freight rate adjustments for this section for twenty years, and has accomplished more along that line than any one other man, unless it is Hamlin Palmer, but Mr. Palmer's success along this line has always had behind him the support of Mr. Stinnett. It was Stinnett that put over the lower freight rate for cattle to Kansas during the present year; it was him who has been instrumental in holding the "Common Point" rate adjustment in effect as now established, which is a saving of thousands of dollars yearly to this section. He has been President of the "Panhandle Plains Chamber of Commerce" for two years, retiring only when other duties forced him to resign, and as he was directing his efforts to public betterment propositions, it was agreed that his services in that line should not be curtailed with detail matters.

He is one of the ablest speakers that appears on the public platform of the State. It is not flattery, but honest truth to say that he is equalled by few and excelled by none as a speaker who gives you something worth while and useful, while at the same time he has a flow of English pleasing to listen to. Never embarrassed, possessing a pleasing personality, congenial and always ready.

Now turn out to hear this man, he is no small fry and you will go from hearing him feeling a bigger, brighter and better man, with some useful information worth many times your trouble.

W. B. Haas has returned from his vacation trip to Colorado. "Doc" made the trip via the auto route and he reports a fine time. He has accepted a position with the Evans Harness Company, and will hereafter be found in the Shoe and Harness department of this fast growing firm.

John W. Hall, chairman of the Base Ball Committee for the Second Annual Perryton Celebration has secured four of the best ball clubs in this section to play here during the four days of this monstrous bigtime. The following is the schedule as now arranged:

Spearman vs Lipscomb, Monday, August 22nd.
Perryton vs Beaver, Wednesday, August 23rd.
Perryton vs Forgan, Wednesday, August 24th.
Perryton vs Spearman, Thursday, August 25th.

This is a strong line-up of games and assures the fans their money's worth.

PERRYTON WINS FROM
LIPSCOMB 5 TO 1

Our ball team took a fast game from the fast Lipscomb county team Sunday by a score of five to one. The game was played on the Lipscomb diamond. This was the second defeat for the Lipscomb team this season, they having played over twenty games to date. The Perryton line-up has been strengthened considerably lately until we now have one of the fastest teams in this section. Batteries for Perryton, Peters and Whippo, Lipscomb, Keffer and Keffer.

On next Sunday the American Legion ball club of Forgan, Okla. meet the local boys on the home diamond. Perryton won from Forgan 3 to 2 at their last meeting so look out for a good snappy game this time. The Liberal, Kansas team will be here for a game on Sunday, August 21st.

The people here are not supporting the ball club as well as they deserve. The members of our team are all home boys, most of them business men, and they play the National game for the sport and not for the money so turn out at these games and at least help them make expenses.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TRIES TO GET MORE WHEAT CARS

Officials of the Perryton Chamber of Commerce have been burning up the wires for the past few days in an attempt to get more wheat cars. The farmers of this community have thousands upon thousands of bushels of grain which is now ready to ship. Santa Fe officials say that this point is receiving her pro rata share and that they are doing everything in their power to secure more cars to handle the big business. The Perryton Chamber of Commerce is always on the job on any movement for the benefit of this section.

The members of the Perryton Rebekah's Lodge feasted on ice cream and cake after their regular meeting Tuesday evening.

SHRINERS MAKING BIG PREPARATIONS FOR AUG. 23RD

At the meeting of the Perryton Shrine Club Monday evening, plans were formulated for the entertainment of the visiting Shriners here on August 23rd. This day has been designated as Shriner's Day by the managers of Perryton's Second Anniversary Celebration.

A parade will be staged and a committee of three men, Dr. W. J. Brewer, L. S. Hobbs and J. E. Barbour was appointed to have charge of this event. A barbecue lunch will be served the visitors and their families. L. H. Lance donated a beef for this occasion and A. C. Witt two sheep. The committee that will have charge of this feature consists of J. D. Wyman, L. H. Lance and A. C. Witt.

And last but not least is the dance committee to have charge of the dance during all four nights of the celebration, Roy Hogland, Jack Allen and Van W. Stewart were assigned to put over this affair.

All Shriners are invited to come and make this a day of days for the Shriners of this section of the Panhandle of Texas and Oklahoma.

ANOTHER NEW RESIDENCE BEING BUILT IN PERRYTON

The six room bungalow being built by Contractor Milt Todd for John McLarty is nearing completion. This is a very nice home and is only one of the many improvements going on in the southwest residence section at the present time. Mr. McLarty who now lives near Balko, is moving here in order that his family may have benefit of our splendid schools.

B. F. Tepe of Canadian, General Manager of the White House Lumber Co. yards, was in our city Wednesday.

HOBBS MOTOR CO. INCORPORATED IN FAST TIME

On the 23rd of July, at noon, it was decided to incorporate the "Hobbs Motor Company," R. T. Correll was called in and a council of war held and final arrangements made for incorporation; all the necessary documents, charter fees and franchise tax payments arranged and the whole "capoodle" in the mails the same evening, arrived at Austin and were filed on the 25th, two days later, and a certified copy of the charter received on the 28th, or three days after filing; or, to make a long story short, the incorporation was fully and finally completed and forgotten within 5 days of the start. This seems to be some speed on incorporating in this town. If we had Aeroplane mail service we could incorporate any enterprise in a day. But what's the dif, it won't be long until the mail will fly instead of roll.

YOUNG BOY KILLED IN FALL FROM HOUSE

A very sad accident occurred at the farm of Vern Wilson near Gray, Okla. on last Monday afternoon when his oldest son, Vincent, was killed in a fall from the house top. The little boy, who was only nine years of age, had climbed upon the roof of the house while playing with the other children. He lost his hold and fell to the ground, striking upon the cement sidewalk.

A physician was called at once and the little fellow was placed in a car and a start was made for the Liberal, Kansas hospital, but death came before Liberal was reached. Death was caused by an injury to the spine.

The body was laid to rest in the Bethany cemetery near the home place. Our sympathy goes out to those left behind in this sad hour.

WAY TO POLISH SILVERWARE

After Soaking in Sour Milk Wash in Warm Water to Which Ammonia Has Been Added.

It is not necessary to rub all morning polishing the silverware. Next time soak it for three hours or longer in a pan of sour milk. Wash in warm water to which a small amount of ammonia has been added, and polish with a clean chamois cloth. Shining silver makes the dinner-table look doubly attractive.

SOLE OF SHOES WATERPROOF

Place in Melted Mixture of Eight Ounces of Vaseline and One Ounce of Beeswax.

You can save leather and make your shoe soles fairly waterproof by placing the soles for 15 minutes in a melted mixture of eight ounces of vasoline and one ounce of beeswax. The mixture should not be hotter than can be borne by the hand.

WAY TO HEM STRAIGHT EDGES

Run Corners Together With Needle and Thread Before Putting Goods in Hemmer.

When you have a number of straight edges to hem—towels and like—run the corners together with needle and thread before putting the goods in the hemmer. This will make a continuous hem and avoid the trouble usually experienced in starting the hem neatly.

Always remove stains before washing, as soap fixes them.

A pinch of sugar or a little vinegar will make the stove polish stay on.

A salad made with chopped cabbage, grated raw carrots and chopped peanuts is delicious.

An asparagus stalk is edible only as far down the stem as it will snap easily between the hands.

Fire Insurance On Grain in Field

As harvest time approaches and grain ripens, there comes a danger that fields will catch on fire (from trains, tramps, harvest machines, cigarettes, pipes, thrashing-machines, lightning and numerous other causes) and that whole crops will be partially destroyed.

Two years ago we introduced in this County a form of insurance covering this hazard against fire from any cause, including lightning. This policy covers on standing grain, after it is cut it covers in shocks, stacks or ricks, and after it is thrashed it covers in piles, sacks, barns, bins, or granaries; in short, this policy covers the grain in any condition it is in at any place on the farm.

We have paid several losses in the last two years on this form of insurance and have a number of customers who desire it each year. I am pleased to advise you that the rate on this policy has been reduced materially since last season, for example, I can write you $1000 insurance for a term of thirty days for $3.20, sixty days for $4.80, and ninety days for $6.40. You will note that this is a very small cost for the protection, and if you sell your grain before the expiration of the policy, policy can be cancelled and return premium paid in cash.

These policies are recognized by the Federal Reserve Bank and a loan on your grain is needed a policy of this kind will be required. Loss payable clause can be made payable to any bank, or individual that you desire.

It will be impossible for us to make a personal canvass of the County to write this insurance but a telephone call or postcard, all that is necessary for us to bind the risk for you. We are pleased to advise that we are in position to carry this premium on grain is marketed.

If interested, let us hear from you.

HAWARD WAYNE O'DELL

Died, at her home in our city, at 1:00 p. m. Wednesday, Haward Wayne O'Dell, age 9 months, 27 days. Sometimes in the April-Kissed springtime, the little flower we welcome as the snow drop droops and dies, but its delicate face has inspired us to hope, and perfumed our life with thoughts of purity. It was even so with "our baby"—the tiny blossoms of humanity that came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom O'Dell of our city.

Thus over a happy home the shadow of a little grave has fallen; and as mother has said, it is wonderful how long a shadow a little grave can throw.

Funeral services were conducted at the First Baptist Church by Rev. I. W. Rogers at 10:00 a. m. Thursday. The little body laid to rest in the Wawaka Cemetery.

T. B. Evans of Elkhart, Kansas arrived in Perryton Tuesday. Mr. Evans is an expert wood and sheet metal mechanic and is employed on the new Farmer's Mercantile building.

Ed Doores and William McLarty made a business trip to Elkhart and Liberal, Kansas, the fore part of this week.

Mrs. J. C. May will be hostess to the Wednesday Club at their regular meeting next week instead of Mrs. Horace Lackey as announced in our last week's issue.

Mrs. Rifenberg, after searching the millinery markets, and style shops has brought to you a part of all the newest creations in millinery, which are now on display at Rifenberg's Store. See opening announcement in this issue. 26-1tc

Mrs. F. A. Edwards, proprietor of that popular Ladies Store, Edward's Toggery returned Tuesday from a buying trip to St. Louis and other eastern markets. Watch our paper for announcement of new fall wearing apparel for ladies and children which is arriving daily at this store.

The Herald unites with a host of friends in wishing them a long and happy life.

E. G. Vosburgh of Woodward, Oklahoma, was a business visitor to our city the fore part of this week.

Prof. Roy Showalter and family are back home after spending the summer at their old home near Lubbock, Texas.

Edgar Poer is here from Lamar, Colo. for a few days with his sister, Mrs. W. T. Lackey. Edgar was formerly in the drug business here and also at Gray and Ochiltree. He has many friends here who are always glad to see him and hear that he is doing well.

J. H. Beagle is here from Colorado looking after business interests and renewing old acquaintances.

J. B. Gayler, a former resident of this county was up from Tulsa, Texas the first part of week.

Geo. L. Coleman of the White House Lumber Company, general office staff was up from Canadian Wednesday.

Miles Edwards is visiting relatives and friends at Chickasha, Okla.

A soft answer won't turn away the wrath of a bulldog.

The rule is that if the office seeks the man it isn't much of an office.

Be a doer, is good advice, but be careful who you do.

Another trouble with the country is that too many people are trying to get something for nothing.

Members of congress talk about a billion dollars as blibli as if there was that much money in the world.

Two Pennsylvania women fought a pistol duel over a man. And the neighbors say he isn't worth killing.

Astronomers are reporting numerous dry spots on the planet Venus, which may make some people hope they won't go there when they die.

Entirely too many women are shooting their husbands, exclaims a Michigan editor, and he adds that there is no sense in running a thing into the ground.

There are so many more things to be happy over than there are things to worry over that there is really little excuse for unhappiness in the world. Ever think about it?

The bishop of London, at the age of 87, attributes his long life to the fact that he has always been a total abstainer, while out in Kentucky Elijah Brown, at the age of 91, says he has taken a drink every day since his teens. And there you are.

The finance committee who are raising the funds for our big celebration are meeting with very good success in their canvass of the business men of this city. We will publish in our next issue the names of the men and the amount they subscribed so that everybody may know just what firms were progressive enough to see the value of this celebration to our town.

SOMETHING FOR COMPANY.

A dish which few people will not enjoy is prepared with the coarse outer stalks of celery. Cut them into half-inch lengths and cook until tender. Arrange a layer of the cooked celery in a baking dish, sprinkle with fine grated cheese, then add a covering of thick white sauce. Repeat with another layer of celery, cheese and white sauce and top with buttered crumbs. Bake until well heated and the crumbs are brown.

Larded Beef Tenderloin.—Cut the salt pork for larding from the firm fat portion nearest the rind. Remove the rind and cut the lardons one-fourth inch wide and as long as the pork slices permit. Chill the lardons in ice water before threading and insert them one-fourth inch below the surface and draw through, tying in a loose knot. Arrange in rows or triangles and dredge the tenderloins with flour, season well and brown in a hot frying pan turning often to keep from scorching; then cook slowly until done, basting with the fat from the pan. Surround with baked bananas and serve with:

Poivraide Sauce.—Put two table-spoonfuls of the trimmings of salt pork in a saucepan and fry out. Add two slices of onion, five of carrot, two sprigs of parsley, a quarter of a bay leaf, a slice of green pepper and half a chili pepper; cook until all are softened, drain off the fat, add one-fourth cupful of vinegar and let simmer on the back part of the stove until the vinegar is reduced to half. To the fat add enough butter to make four table-spoonfuls, add the same amount of flour and cook until smooth, then add a cupful and one-half of brown stock, the vegetables and the vinegar, boil once, strain over one-half cupful of sultana raisins cooked in boiling water until tender, add three table-spoonfuls of currant jelly and the same of orange juice.

Cabbage Salad With Cream.—Shred a tender young head of cabbage very fine, sprinkle with salt and sugar, pour over a rich heavy cream and add a dash of vinegar.

CATCHES HORSE THIEF

Sheriff Wilbanks of Hansford county and Deputy Sheriff Richardson of Texas county, Okla., together with a small posse of assistants, caught a horse thief at the Ed Lavake farm south of Texhoma Monday. The man had stolen a horse in Spearman the day before and had been chased by Sheriff Wilbanks until the pursuit got too warm for the offender and he quit the horse and took the breaks. Texhoma and Stratford were notified that he was headed in this direction and to be on the lookout for him. After his capture the thief was taken to Hansford county and lodged in the jail at Old Hansford which is still the county seat of the county, despite the fact that the rest of the town has been moved to Spearman.—Shattuck Monitor.

At Lowest Price Ever Quoted

All former price advances are wiped out by the big reductions made on this four-plow tractor. We believe this is the best buy on the tractor market, barring none.

This is the lowest price ever quoted on the Titan, considering equipment now included (formerly sold extra.) March 1, 1921, the price was $1,200. Now it is $900. As this price disregards manufacturing costs, we do not know how long it will be maintained. International 8-1 and 15-30 tractors are also lower than ever before. The 8-16 now sells for $900 complete. The new price on the 15-30 is $1,750.

All prices f. o. b. Chicago. We can arrange suitable terms. These prices certainly justify the immediate purchase of a tractor. Get yours in time for the horse-killing work of hot weather plowing and the fall and winter belt work.

SPECIALISTS GIVE DIRECTIONS FOR PUTTING DOWN EGG SUPPLY

What is Needed in Preserving Eggs for Winter Supply

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Boys and girls who are members of poultry clubs, or those who are interested in any way in chickens, should learn how to candle and preserve eggs. Candling means the sorting out of bad eggs before a strong light in such a manner that the rays of light come to the eye through the egg so that the contents can be seen and the condition noted.

The shell of a newly laid egg has a soft "glow" or "bloom" which is a sign of perfect freshness. This glow or bloom is destroyed by handling, and in any case disappears after the egg has been exposed to the air for a short time. After that it is difficult to distinguish a fresh egg from an old one by the appearance of the shell, so candling becomes necessary if you would be sure that the egg is good.

Candle Eggs in a Dark Room.
Eggs can be candled best in a dark room, by the use of a bright light inclosed in a box or case having a hole a trifle smaller than an egg directly opposite the light. The egg is held at this hole for examination. An ordinary hand lamp, a lantern, an incandescent bulb, or a flashlight can be used. If you are using a box and a hand lamp the box should have a hole at the top, otherwise the heat from the top of the chimney would set the box on fire. A tester chimney made of tin, such as is used on a lamp for testing eggs in incubators, may be used for candling, in which case you would not need the box, as the eggs are tested by means of a hole in the side of the tin.

A perfectly good fresh egg shows "full" and "clear" before the light.

A Shoebox and a Lamp Will Do for Candling Eggs.

There is almost no air cell at the large end and the yolk outline is only faintly visible. A fixed air cell of one-eighth to three-sixteenths of an inch in depth indicates a fresh egg, as eggs run generally. A larger air cell with a movable lower line indicates—according to sizes and fluctuations—a stale egg or one becoming weak and watery. Very small dark spots sometimes seen usually are blood clots. Large dark spots, blood rings, and shadows are due to heat and germination, and indicate first stages of decay. An egg that appears very dark or black, except for a large fixed air cell, contains a chick at an advanced stage of incubation.

Fresh eggs, properly preserved, may be kept from six to ten months and be almost as good for household purposes as fresh eggs. Another reason for preserving eggs in water glass, for instance, is the fact that they do not acquire the objectionable "cold-storage taste."

Allow Three Dozen to Gallon.
To preserve 15 dozen eggs in water glass these directions are given by the specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Select a five-gallon earthen crock, clean it thoroughly, scald and allow it to dry. Heat ten to twelve quarts of water to the boiling point, and allow it to cool. When the water is cool, measure out nine quarts, put in to the crock, and add one quart of sodium silicate, commonly called water glass, which can be bought at any drug store. Stir well, so that the solution becomes thoroughly mixed.

The solution thus prepared is ready for the eggs, which may be put in all at once, or from time to time as they are obtainable. Care should be taken in putting them into the jar not to crack or break the shells; also be sure the solution covers the eggs at all times. Put the crock containing the preserved eggs in a cool, dry place, and cover with a tight lid or waxed paper to prevent evaporation.

To preserve a smaller or larger number of eggs, the solution should be mixed and prepared in the same proportions.

Use Only Clean Fresh Eggs.

If best results are to be obtained the eggs should be clean and fresh, and preferably interior. For this reason it is always best when possible to candle the eggs carefully before preserving them unless they are known to be strictly fresh. If an egg is only slightly soiled a cloth dampened with vinegar may be used to remove stains, but eggs should never be washed with water or soap and water, as water removes the protective coating on the shell and may tend to cause the contents to spoil. Never use badly-soiled or cracked eggs. They may spoil all the others.

Fresh eggs preserved according to these directions usually will keep for from six to ten months, and can be used satisfactorily for cooking and for the table. If, however, preserved eggs are to be boiled, a small hole should be made with a pin in the larger end of the shell before placing them in the water, to allow the air in the egg to escape when heated, and thus prevent cracking.

BILL DECIDES

By AGNES BARRY.

(Copyright 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Spying again, are you?" queried Mrs. Sisson, sharply. "Do you know," she added, "if I had your smelling facilities I'd apply to the government for a job as lookout for forest fires? Your nose is your fortune!"

Mrs. Dobbs, neighbor, and the object of this ironical remark, quickly came back with a thrust worthy of the one she had just received.

"So?" she declared, emphatically. "Well, since we are on the subject of comparing beauty spots, permit me to say that you need never miss a bargain sale for the want of feet! And, besides, I wasn't spying. It was you who—"

But she did not finish, for Mrs. Sisson had closed the window and disappeared.

Spring cleaning was in full swing, and the two women had opened their bedroom windows for ventilation while going about their work. Mrs. Sisson had been attracted by a handsome quilt resting on the sill of her neighbor's window and had come forward, a little too promiscuously, perhaps, to her own window, that she might study the design, but only to find Mrs. Dobbs already admiring those which she herself had similarly hung out for airing.

Presently Mrs. Dobbs saw her neighbor near another open window in an adjoining room, and forthwith advanced for the second round.

"And as for your good-for-nothing son," she threatened, "if I ever see him speaking to my Katherine again, I'll have the law on him."

"Will you, indeed?" Mrs. Sisson sneered. "I'm sure my William knows better than to waste his time with your fickle daughter."

Again the fiery conversation was brought to an abrupt ending when Mrs. Sisson slammed down the next open window.

Of course it is hardly necessary to add that none of the above impetuous and absurd allegations contained a vestige of truth. And meanwhile, the young couple referred to by the querulous women never suspected that the dreaded split had come at last.

That evening, when Bill Dobbs arrived home, one look at his mother told him very plainly what had come to pass, and he wondered if there had been a scene.

"William," began his mother, gravely, "I hope when you decide to marry you'll not select a gossiping wife."

William flinched a little, then braced himself for his disagreeable task.

"I hope not, mother," he replied, quietly, and without looking up.

"You know," continued Mrs. Dobbs, "heredity is an awful thing, and many girls grow up to be like their mothers."

"Yes, I know," assented Bill, meekly. "But fortunately there are exceptions. Now there's Katherine Sisson, for instance. A splendid girl, if there ever was—"

He broke off suddenly, for he had just seen Katherine leaving for a stroll.

"Gee, ma," he exclaimed, "excuse me, won't you? I had quite forgotten an important engagement."

In a few minutes he had caught up with Katherine.

"You know?" he asked. She nodded. "It was stupid of them to quarrel," said Katherine, reproachfully, "and they had no right to bring you and me into it."

"You're right," he agreed, firmly, "but we mustn't let such nonsense interfere with our plans."

He glanced back and saw the two frantically watching them.

"I think," he said, "the sooner we get married the sooner peace will come." But she checked him.

"I'm afraid we'll have to forget," she objected. "Mother would never consent after what occurred today. She has forbidden me to speak to you."

"But, dear," he protested cheerfully, "they say love laughs at locksmiths, so why not be merry?"

They were now well out of sight of the watching mammas, and Katherine felt a mischievous impulse urging her to defy the maternal edict.

"After all," she laughed, "big feet are a good asset at a bargain sale or anywhere else."

"I don't know what to say," faltered Katherine.

Bill pressed her hand gently. "Let me decide for both of us," he encouraged eagerly.

There was another short silence, then she murmured something, and while it is not definitely known that Bill eventually persuaded her to yield, it is a good guess that the adept little marksman of our fancy will whittle another notch in his arrow ere long.

Shakespeare in Arabian

Shakespeare's plays have been translated into and acted in many tongues, but perhaps the strangest presentation yet on record is that of "Romeo and Juliet" in Arabian by a company of strolling Egyptian players in Tunis.

So far as stage setting goes, it appears that the management was contented with the primitive "indications" of the Elizabethan days. It is assumed that no liberties were taken with the plot, though the Arabian interpretation of some of the incidents might be considered free.

The Arabians, however, do their best lovelomaking through the medium of song, so that it was considered necessary to interpolate the usual plaintive oriental chants whenever the lovers came to a clinch.

HEALTHGRAMS

By Dr. M. M. Carrick State Health Officer

A state's vitality comes first. Is it not as important to know if you are in good health as to be assured of a profit in business?

Protect the baby from indiscriminate kissing.

Infantile paralysis is catching. It may occur at any age of life.

Eternal vigilance is the price we pay for freedom from disease. The community that is indifferent to its health problems pays the toll in both a high sickness and mortality rate. We now have many grave problems pressing upon us; but none is of more importance than that of safeguarding the public health.

It is important to take good care of the teeth. If they are allowed to decay, the food cannot be masticated, indigestion results, and the body is not properly nourished.

A house may be rid of fleas, or at least their number may be greatly diminished, by sprinkling flaked naphthalene on the floors and leaving the rooms closed for a few hours. Water will destroy the larvae, but has little effect upon the adult fleas. Kerosene will kill them.

Bad air in the home poisons the system and makes a bad temper for those who are compelled to breathe it.

Dust, dirt, dampness and darkness are the friends of tuberculosis; sunshine, fresh air, soap and water are its enemies. Improper living, bad habits and loss of sleep make you a favorable subject for infection.

Headache is a symptom of disease of some portion of the body.

It is an axiom of the great that "The State is all of us;" and from that we take the corollary, "The greatest good to the greatest number."

The function of the State, is, therefore, the welfare of the people, not alone spiritual, directing the thoughts of the men to the things not of this earth; but equally important are the things pertaining to the public health and the physical well being—teaching men to lead healthful, wholesome lives and thereby transmit to their children the strength and virility of sturdy manhood and womanhood."—John Seldon.

BEST RECIPES FOR PREPARING DRIED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Dried Corn Keeps in Good Condition for a Long Time, if Good at the Beginning.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Even though they do not spoil, many dried vegetables which were delicious and attractive in every way during the first few weeks or months of storage, do not keep their color, flavor and cooking qualities indefinitely, but deteriorate gradually after a long period of storage. Even vegetables which are blanched before drying will deteriorate in much the same way, though more slowly, and blanching in salted water (1½ per cent solution) before drying constitutes a slight improvement over the common custom of drying without such treatment.

Household stocks of dried vegetables should not be held over from one year to the next for the reason they lose in quality. Indeed, it is the part of wisdom to use them early in the winter season, reserving canned goods for the late winter or early spring. The experimental kitchen in the United States Department of Agriculture has carried on a number of experiments with dried vegetables, and the work is being continued. A progress report is in order and some of the results arrived at to date follow:

Dried corn is one of the vegetables which keeps in good condition for a long time, if good at the beginning. The peculiar flavor developed in dried green string beans is popular in many parts of the country. Dried soup mixtures deserve wide use, for the combination of such strong-flavored vegetables as onions, carrots, cabbage and turnips will retain considerable flavor for a long time, even though the individual vegetables which compose it may have deteriorated somewhat in flavor when compared with the freshly dried vegetable.

Preparing Dried Vegetable.

Dried vegetables may be soaked from one to three hours in warm or cold water, and then cooked from 10 to 20 minutes (or longer, if necessary). Or they may be put at once, without any soaking, into boiling water, and then cooked slowly over the simmering flame for 20 to 40 minutes, or longer, if necessary. The length of time for which they must be cooked depends largely upon the condition of the fresh vegetable before it was dried. Large carrots, or white cabbage, even though cut into small pieces before drying, must be cooked longer than small carrots or green cabbage.

The water added for soaking or cooking should be little more than what the vegetables will take up. To soak them in a large amount of water which is thrown away, then cook them in a fresh supply of water which also is thrown away, is to take the most thorough method which could be devised for extracting and discarding most of their nutritive constituents as well as most of their flavor.

Three cupfuls of water to one cupful of vegetable is as good a general rule as can be given, but spinach and greens take half of that, being light for their volume. Long cooking demands a larger amount of water, because it boils away; but vegetables should not be cooked longer than is absolutely necessary, except in the making of puree.

Particularly when the dried vegetables are put into boiling water without soaking, it is best to salt them toward the end of the cooking process rather than at the beginning.

One cupful (measured dry) of most kinds of dried vegetables will serve two persons heartily, or three persons with moderate portions.

Dried vegetables may be used in the same way as fresh ones, while they are still in prime condition. When they begin to fall off in flavor they should be judiciously combined with other materials and have flavoring materials added to them. Dried sweet potatoes or carrots which have become rather flat when served with butter and salt only are more appetizing when glazed. To do this, bake them (after cooking tender by boiling) with a sauce of sugar or molasses or sirup, and fat. Dried spinach which has become a little flat will be liked if it is served with an egg and vinegar dressing, or in a cream sauce flavored with onion or celery.

Dried vegetables (after being boiled) may be served in the gravy with the pot roast or meat or vegetable casserole or in the sauce for the baked or boiled fish. They may be combined with each other or with other fresh vegetables, in "boiled dinner" or in chowders or casserole dishes of any kind. They may be used with rice, macaroni or bread crumbs, in stuffing baked peppers or tomatoes or meat or fish; they may be combined in a meat-minicemeat.

Cooking the Dried Fruits.

Dried fruits are usually given a long, slow cooking in water to the boiling point. They may be soaked for a few hours, or they may be simply mashed and put directly into the warm water for cooking. The important point to be observed is not to soak or cook in too much water. The dried product can not be expected to have as much flavor as does the fresh, so all pains must be taken to dilute that flavor as little as possible. Most recipes for cooking dried prunes and apricots direct that two cupfuls of water be used to one cupful of fruit, but a better-flavored product will result, if equal measures of water and fruit be used, when the cooking is done slowly in a tightly covered vessel, so that little of the steam escapes (since they usually contain a good deal of sugar themselves) with sugar or with any sort of sirup, according to taste. They are to be used as sauces, in puddings, fruit cakes and cookies, compotes, whips, souffles and even salads, much as fresh fruits are used.

FINE ART OF COOKING RICE

Cereal Can Be Cooked So That It Is Flaky and Each Grain Is Separate, Say Specialists.

Rice can be cooked so that it is flaky and so each grain remains separate, say food specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. To obtain that result wash the rice thoroughly, boil it in a large proportion of water, and do not overcook.

To one cup of dry rice, use four or five quarts of water and one teaspoonful of salt. Wash the rice through several waters until all the loose starch is removed, and drain it. Have the boiling water ready in a deep saucepan, add the salt, slowly drop in the rice, and allow it to boil rapidly for about 15 or 20 minutes, or until a grain when pressed between the thumb and finger is entirely soft.

In order to prevent the rice from sticking to the pan, lift it if necessary from time to time with a fork, but do not stir it, for stirring is likely to break the grains. When sufficiently cooked, turn the rice into a colander or a sieve, and after the water has drained off cover with a cloth and set over a pan of hot water on the back of the stove or in the oven; or turn the rice into a shallow pan, cover with a lid, and place it in a warm oven for a short time. Treated in this way, the grains swell and are apt to keep separate.

DOUBTFUL

By MARION E. LEIGHTON.

On this bright April morning Jane recalled with a little tingle of recurrent happiness the thrill of joy with which she had received Don's proposal three months before.

Kind and politely attentive he still remained, but so indifferent sometimes to her little acts and words of affection that at times Jane doubted if he really loved her.

Billy Royal had been Don's closest rival, and she knew that Billy still cared. She liked Billy, too. It seemed that she had liked him more than ever last night, when he had appeared so strong and gay and good looking, as he led her through the fox trot while Don looked on with apparent indifference.

She felt certain had the circumstances been reversed she would have been furiously jealous of Don.

Billy joked with her, but under the mask of gaiety she detected a yearning that touched her with compassion.

"If you or Don ever change your mind, Jane—you'll let me know?" he had asked, smilingly.

"The very next moment, Billy," she nodded, brightly.

Jane deliberated a long time, weighing the virtues of Don and Billy. The scales were balancing evenly until she remembered that Don had seemed moody of late and would hardly touch her hand at parting. Why, he hadn't kissed her good-night for a month. Was not that proof that he had ceased to care?

The scales tipped suddenly and Don went down.

He was going to call today, on his way home from the office. Well, let him, he'd find nobody home.

The next moment she had Billy on the phone and an hour later Billy's roadster drove out of Jane's yard with Jane, smiling and chatting confidentially into Billy's ear, beside him. She believed this new important step was going to bring her happiness.

But what of poor Don? The lunch hour found Jane and Billy at a little table in the Royal cafe, apparently unconscious of the watchful eyes of Don's stenographer, who noted for future conversational purposes the intimate attitude which branded them nearweds or newlyweds, as the chance observer chose to believe. Don's stenographer chose the former.

So it happened that when Don returned from lunch his stenographer toyed nervously with her pad and pencil a moment then ventured a remark about the merits of the Royal cafe.

Don agreed it was a nice place to eat.

"Oh—that reminds me"—casually—"I saw Miss Jane and Mr. Royal down there today. Probably an accident—their meeting there—but they seemed to be enjoying it."

"So?" he replied indifferently. "Well—why not? Billy's a good fellow—and so is Jane."

Piqued at her unsuccessful attempt to arouse his jealousy, the stenographer murmured under her breath: "Ice! All ice!"

At three o'clock Don returned from a visit to the doctor's office and happiness radiated from every feature and every movement of his well-built person. The stenographer regarded him with open amazement—he seemed to have dropped ten years from his life!

"Doctor just told me I'm sound as a dollar," he explained. "You can imagine what that means to me!"

"But—didn't you know it?" she asked.

"Heavens—no! They told me two months ago that I had a bad lung!"

"Not—"

He nodded. "You can imagine how that made me feel—under the circumstances. I'm going now to see Miss Jane."

She stopped him at the door. "Here's a message that came while you were out," she explained.

He read it hastily, impatient at being delayed.

"Don—When you call this afternoon go right in and look on the living room table—there is a letter there addressed to you. Read it—then, if I'm not home, don't wait for me. JANE."

The curt tone of the note and the abrupt ending brought a distinct sense of foreboding. He hastened to obey with no response to his ring.

He opened the door and walked into the familiar living room, where he had spent many quiet, happy hours. On the table lay the promised letter.

With fingers that trembled slightly he opened it and read:

"Dear Don: It seems lately that you have ceased to care. Billy cares more than ever, Don, and I have gone where love is strongest—with Billy. Try not to think too badly of me and forgive."

"YOUR ERRING JANE"

With a white face, from which the joy of a short time ago had all departed, Don sank into a chair. A groan burst from his tense lips as he buried his face in his hands.

A soft white arm slipped about his neck and he raised his head to look into the moist eyes of Jane.

"You do care!" she whispered softly.

For answer he crushed her to him and Jane could find no fault with the warmth of his kisses.

"Then it was only—" he choked with emotion.

"April fool, dear!" she replied.

THERAPEUTIC VALUE OF FRUITS.

The healthfulness of fruit is so well known that, while we may not care to support the claims of those who believe we should subsist entirely on fruits and vegetables, we are willing to credit them with great virtue. It is interesting, too, to know what is said about them.

Lemon juice is used to bleach and soften the skin; mixed with buttermilk it is said to dispel freckles. Lemon juice applied to bites and stings of insects will relieve at once. As a mouth wash, lemon juice in a glass of water dissolves the tartar on the teeth and sweetens the breath.

Oranges, while rich in sugar and water, have salts of high value, while the flavor of the pulp is especially attractive. Oranges act upon the bowels. Taken at night they are especially good. A glass of orange juice can be taken by the most delicate stomach and is especially recommended for biliousness.

Grape fruit is said to contain a substance similar to quinine; this may be due to its bitter flavor. This fruit has been recommended in case of gripe, and is said to cure that tired feeling which is called spring fever. Those who know say that the proper way to treat grapefruit for a medicine is to put it, seeds, skin and all, through the meat grinder, cover with boiling water and let the mixture stand until cold. Strain and take in small doses three times a day. Those who like quinine will probably enjoy this.

Apples are called an ideal nerve fruit, are laxative, hold valuable salts such as sodium and iron.

Peaches are also rich in iron and they are highly recommended for anemic people.

Cherries stimulate the gastric juices (the acid kind); and are laxative. Plums are good but best as prunes. Figs are also high in nutritive value and are considered nature's best laxative.

POOLING FEATURE IS MOST FEASIBLE IDEA

Each Grower Receives Same Price for His Products.

Individual Members Amply Protected From Loss Because of Unfavorable Market Conditions of a Temporary Nature.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The pooling of products sold through co-operative organizations is an important feature of co-operative marketing, specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture have found. By pooling is meant averaging the returns received for products sold during a certain period, or for certain shipments, so that each grower has the same price. The success of a pooling system depends upon the observance of uniform grading and packing of the products.

This method of operation, it is said, protects the individual member from loss because of unfavorable market conditions of a temporary nature. Some farmers' marketing organizations, especially grain-elevator companies, purchase the members' products outright. Conditions and practices in grain marketing make such a plan feasible, but organizations handling other products usually find it to their advantage to pool shipments and await returns before making payments to the growers.

In this way the association is relieved of speculative risks, the avoidance of which is highly desirable. Co-operative creameries, which prorate to the members monthly, in accordance with the amount of butter fat each has delivered the preceding month, the returns received for products sold less operating expenses, are good examples of pooling.

The length of the pooling period varies with the products handled and the local conditions. Thus there are car lot, daily, weekly, semi-monthly, monthly, and seasonal pools.

MATERIAL FOUND IN WHEAT

Specialists Define Terms Used in Federal Standards—Dockage is Easily Removed.

There are two terms in the federal wheat standards which apply to foreign material, explain specialists of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture—"dockage" and "foreign material other than dockage." The term dockage is applied to the foreign material which can be removed readily from the wheat by the use of appropriate sieves, cleaning devices, or other practical means suited to separate the foreign material present. Foreign material other than dockage is the foreign material that is not separated in the screening and remains in the dockage-free sample and is a factor in the grading definite percentages being permitted within each numerical grade. Dockage does not affect the grade.

A KIND HEART

By JACK LAWTON.

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

Della loved to make people happy. She learned by experience that being kind to certain young men meant being misunderstood. Eddy Cartwright, for instance, stubbornly insisted, when she sorrowfully refused him, that she had given him undisputed encouragement, and had made him her pastime; While Ned Weston, while she was endeavoring to lighten for him the loneliness of his mother's absence—uncomfortably, but unmistakably assured her of his indifference where she was concerned, and of his intention not to marry.

It was Aunt Cordella, whom she was visiting, and for whom she had been named, that told her about the lonely old man in the desolate house on the hill side. It was pathetic, Aunt Della said, to think that Judson Gordon should come back after all the years to the deserted home of his childhood.

He had married, she remembered, and gone away—no one knew where. Now that his children were scattered, and himself—Aunt Cordella was sure—neglected and forlorn, the old man chose to return to the spot where he had once been happy; To find peace at least, if not very satisfactory shelter, beneath its worn roof.

Della, with time on her hands, began immediately to plan for the cheer and comfort of the old neighbor. He was proud, Aunt Cordella cautioned her and would have to be approached tactfully. So the girl decided upon secret action.

The more she thought about it, the more the plan pleased her. Her country visit began to take on new interest and her eyes their old joyous light. She waited, upon the first morning of her venture, until the stooped old man in the distant garden, ambled down the long road to the post office; During his absence, Della slipped over with a crimson potted flower for his dingy sitting room window. Also, she removed the dinginess, leaving shining glass, instead.

When she had coaxed the braided cotton rug from her Aunt, she dyed it a cheery crimson, and found an opportune time to place it before the desolate hearth. She had been able to donate several good, though discarded pictures from Aunt Cordella's attic and had added a book or two of her own to the table with its scurf matching the wooden rocker's cushions.

Singing happily, the girl made her next offering of golden brown doughnuts and crisp spicy cookies, fresh from Aunt Cordella's oven. With each gift she left a companionable line of greeting. Oh! Della was enjoying herself very much.

When she had accomplished all she had set out to do, when the poor old soul could find no escape from her kindly rescue, then, Della intended to open her door, and reveal herself to her friend: It was about this time that two young and good looking men, lounged upon either side of the crude breakfast table; the shabby old house and stared at each other.

"It's your fatal charm, Jud," one young man said, "catches the female heart wherever you go, even here on a lonely hill. Rather open attack this, on the young lady's part, I should say, but, maybe, it's the way they woo 'em up hillside."

The young man addressed as Jud, grinned.

"It is funny," he admitted, regarding appreciatively Della's morning offering of hot griddle cakes.

"Good morning," he read on a pink paper slipped between the plates. "If we did not have to leave so early and stay so late on this engineering job," Jud went on, "I'd scout the country side 'till I found the angel of the cakes. Have to take a day off soon to do it. Our only near neighbor is old Cordella Sams, who used to know Dad years ago. She lives alone, and is, they say, far from spry. So we could hardly thank her for early morning cakes or high hung muslin curtains. You are right Bob, it must be my fatal beauty. Will I be expected to marry the life saver?" "You will not!" came a clear decided voice from the doorway. Angriely, Della frowned down on a convenient chair. Her cheeks were crimson and her eyes shone their indignation.

"To think," she accused the astonished young men, "that I have been doing all this for you—feeding you up—making cushions for your horrid big backs—"

"Whom," interrupted the young man Jud excitedly, "did you think you were doing it for?"

Falteringly, disappointedly, Della told them. And when she had finished Judson Gordon the younger, came forward gravely.

"Well," he said, "All I can say is, that is has been mighty nice of you. And it isn't love's labor lost at all. For Dad is coming out here for the summer—insets on it. And now that I know of your kindness of heart, dear young lady, I shall go my way reassured. You see, we had some engineering nearby. That's what gave Dad the idea of coming back. The old fellow you saw plodding about is our make-shift of a housekeeper. He will stay on with Dad. But if you will be here—" The young man's voice ended in a question. "I will," Della answered softly.

"Well, I'll run down quite often myself," Jud Gordon said, "You bet you will," echoed Bob.

RURAL HOUSEWIVES ARE TAUGHT TO APPLY BUSINESS PRINCIPLES

Home Demonstration in the Kitchen.

prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture. Home demonstration work, though comparatively new, is looked upon as a most beneficial have been results obtained by home demonstration agents working in rural areas. The fundamental purpose of the work, according to a report just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, is to assist the rural housewife to apply business principles to her daily tasks for the purpose of making the farm home as comfortable as the city home, thereby producing a more satisfactory and permanent type of rural life. The report issued by the Department Circular, which deals with the results of the demonstration work in the 33 northern and western states.

Home Co-operative Movement. The work actually began in August, 1914, when an agent was appointed to Erie county, N. Y., on state funds. In 1915, it became a co-operative movement supported by Federal, state and local funds. During that year four agents were appointed. In 1919 the number had grown to more than 600. Then war emergency funds were cut off, and in the following year the number dropped to 286. Although in this one year the force of workers was reduced nearly one-half, the appropriations made by the local people for home demonstration work nearly doubled, and agents were retained in direct response to requests from the people whom they served, according to the circular.

Home demonstration agents afford an avenue by which the state agricultural colleges and the United States Department of Agriculture offer the practical results of their research and experiments in home economics to housewives of the country. These agents encourage the rural housewives to bring from their store of practical knowledge and experience the lessons they have learned in home management that will be valuable to other women in the community, and so help to make this information available to all. The home demonstration agent is a teacher who makes liberal use of practical demonstration rather than the lecture or text book.

The most successful home demonstration agents, according to the circular, aim to train local leaders who, by putting the best practices into their own homes, extend the instruction to larger numbers of women. At least two-thirds of the agent's time is spent with farm women in their homes, discussing the varied problems of house-keeping and other matters in which farm women are interested. Aside from interesting women in better home management, modern conveniences, food production and preservation, better food for the family, home nursing, and the selection and making of clothing, the agents are devoting their efforts to promoting community enterprises.

Three types of such enterprises are developed: The economic type which includes food preservation, the hot school lunch, co-operative laundries, co-operative buying and selling associations, labor-saving devices, and savings banks. The social type is concerned with such things as recreation centers, civil improvements, and rest rooms. The educational type embraces farm home tours, libraries and magazine circles and the like.

Local Aid Needed.

A county organization in extension work which desires the appointment of a home demonstration agent should first communicate with the extension service at the state agricultural college, or with the agricultural agent in the county, the circular suggests. It is necessary for the local organization or county to give some financial support to the home demonstration agent, though the greater part is supplied by the state and federal funds. To supply that share which is required of the local organization, there have been organized within the past two years in the majority of the 33 northern and western states what is popularly known as the "family" or "new" farm bureau. This is an association of people interested in rural affairs, the membership of which comprises men, women, and young people who generally pay a uniform membership fee of $1 a year.

PUTTING MORE MILK IN FOOD OF FAMILY

Numerous Dishes Are Enumerated by Home Specialists.

Milk Toast, Cream Soups, Creamed Vegetables, Fish and Scalloped Dishes Are Favored—Recipe for White Sauce.

Milk toast, cream soups, creamed vegetables, creamed fish and scalloped dishes are all good ways of putting more milk into the daily food of the family, say home economics specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. The milk for all of these is thickened into a sauce, thick or thin. To make the sauces, melt the fat, stir in the flour, add the milk gradually, and cook until thickened, stirring constantly unless a double boiler is used. All measurements are level in these recipes.

Thin White Sauce.

1 cup milk 1/4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon flour 1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon fat

Medium White Sauce.

1 cup milk 1/4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons flour 1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons fat

Thick White Sauce.

1 cup milk 1/4 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons flour 1/4 teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons fat

For milk toast and with vegetables use the thin sauce. For scalloped or creamed vegetable and meat dishes use the medium sauce. The chief use for the thick sauce is as a binding material in croquettes and loaves.

BALANCED RATIONS FOR MAN

Fruits, Vegetables, Whole Grains, Milk, Eggs, Butter and Nuts Are Most Healthful.

How many human beings eat balanced rations? The best foods for health and strength are fruits, vegetables, whole grains, milk, eggs, butter and nuts, with meat in moderation. Heavy meat eating, artificial sugars, white flour, polished rice, peeled potatoes—these are said to create acidosis which is the forerunner of many serious diseases.

THE "SNOB"

KATHERINE NEWELL.

(Copyright, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)
Shirley Disney was a newcomer to Smethbro'. After the detached air of New York, the interest which the office girls took in the "society set" of the town amazed her. So far she had found the small oil town about as exciting as a mill pond, and she herself as lonely as a goldfish in a bowl of stagnant water, under the gaze of curious eyes. They knew her as "the new systemizer" to "The Merrett Refining Co."

Robert Merrett had frankly stated in a letter to Shirley's firm, that she would not be received with open arms by his office employees; they had muddled along for over thirty years without any "system" and looked on it as more or less of a "fad."

"Yes, he has a perfectly wonderful voice, goes to Paris to have it trained! Too bad he has an idea that women like him only for his money," purred Lucille Wilmer, the head clerk in "sales," as they were eating lunch.

Shirley pricked up her ears and found that it was Robert Merrett under discussion.

"I suppose it's true, though," said Shirley, with a wise smile. "I'd love to meet this wonderful rich man."

"My goodness, Miss Disney, do you think Robert Merrett would look at one of his office clerks?"

So Shirley fished day after day, letting out hints of peachy car rides, dinners, dates, and of future meetings in the gay city on her return.

The scenery around Smethbro' was a consolation to Shirley. She would pack a lunch and wander away into the woods and hills.

One Saturday afternoon she decided to take her supper in the woods and build a fire to make coffee, another new experience in her city-bred life. Shirley had just managed to coax the fire into flame and wondering how coffee was made without burnt fingers, when she was startled to see the figure of a big man at her side.

"Don't you know the danger of forest fires?" he demanded, in angry accents.

"Don't you think you could have warned me without scaring me almost to death?" Shirley blazed back. "I had an awful time getting the fire to burn, too," she added, wistfully.

"From New York?" He smiled now, with friendly eyes.

"Yes, and the first fire I've ever made."

"A little lonely camping by oneself, eh?" he went on, with a glance at the coffee pot and basket.

"It's lot of fun! I wonder if you could tell me how to make coffee without getting scorched?"

"Delighted, on the condition you give me a cup?" he responded in a pleased voice.

The moon was rising above the hills as Shirley and the stranger gathered the remains of the lunch together and prepared to leave for the town.

"Don't you think you would like this beauty—sometimes?" the man asked.

"I might," Shirley replied, with a reserved note in her voice. Then with a grateful smile, she thanked him for his timely help and company. When she arrived at her room and thought the adventure over, she realized that neither had asked the other's name.

"And he was a gentleman, too," she sighed, a little regretfully.

On Monday morning she was told to report to the manager's office.

"Miss Disney, I regret this has happened, but a small town like this Smethbro'—will talk!" the manager began in a distressed tone.

"Mr. Merrett is here this morning. He tells me a report has come to him that he has been taking you around. You are a pretty little girl, and Mr. Merrett feels responsible for you—to your firm. The young ladies here started the report. They tell me you told them so yourself. Mr. Merrett is anxious to get this wrong impression cleared up—for his sake and yours. He will see you in his office."

"Don't you know a small town is dangerous for a pretty girl to romance in?" came in familiar accents as she entered the office, and looking up met the smiling gaze of the man of the woods.

"No, or I should have shown more sense," Shirley faltered back. "Oh, I wish you would believe me, Mr. Merrett—I just made a wrong impression about knowing you, because—because—"

"Because what?" demanded Robert Merrett.

"Because they told me you would not look at an office girl," she finished in a low voice.

"What made them tell you that?"

"I said I would like to know you—hear you sing—"

"They gave you a wrong impression—that I was a snob—to be treated like a god on wheels—unapproachable. Do you think I act like that kind of man?"

"I thought you were awfully nice as a woods man—but I don't know what you are as—as a rich man!" replied Shirley, sincerely.

"Go on thinking of me 'as an awfully nice woods man.' If you will, I shall forgive you all those 'fibs' and turn them into the truth!"

"Truth with honor?" queried Shirley, in a timid voice.

"Love, honor and obey," Robert Merrett answered softly. Then they laughed happily.
