First Republic Bank decision rumored

DALLAS (AP) — Speculation on the fate of crippled First Republic Bank Corp. centered on a North Carolina bank's bid as federal regulators reportedly neared an announcement to award the state's largest independent bank holding company to one of at least four competing bidders.

NCNB Corp., based in Charlotte, N.C., submitted the proposal last week to federal regulators in the rescue of First Republic Bank, sources told several newspapers.

"I hear NCNB's the winner," Frank Anderson, banking analyst with D. Latin & Co. in Dallas, told The Charlotte Observer. "They (NCNB) are more innovative than most banks and I get the feeling they really want the institution."

NCNB also has considerable experience with real estate loans, which make up a big part of First Republic Bank's troubled portfolio, Anderson told the Associated Press.

"It's NCNB and Wells Fargo (in competition) with Citicorp wanting far too much aid. It looks like Citicorp is out of it," said Peter Tuz of Howard, Weil Financial Corp. in New Orleans.

NCNB's bid would cost the FDIC the least, according to a banking executive quoted anonymously on Thursday by the Wall Street Journal. Several sources told newspapers that Wells Fargo was trying to modify its bid at the last minute.

NCNB is the 18th-largest U.S. bank with $28.6 billion in assets. Wells Fargo & Co. of San Francisco is No. 11 and Citicorp of New York is No. 1.

Another bid for First Republic Bank has been submitted by its own management backed by Drexel Burnham Inc. and Sears' financial subsidiaries.

If NCNB acquires the Dallas-based bank-holding company, it would nearly double NCNB's size and catapult it to the nation's 10th-largest banking firm. Just three weeks ago, analysts considered the North Carolina bank's bid a long-shot.

The FDIC, which rescued First Republic Bank with a $1 billion loan in March, said it was considering all options to resolve the company's fiscal crisis.

"We have a number of options in front of us and I can state categorically that no decision has been made," FDIC spokesman Alan J. Whitney in Washington said Thursday. Industry analysts and bank officials said it was also possible the FDIC would declare First Republic Bank insolvent and select a bidder at a later date in a so-called bridge bank transaction.

Chairman William Seidman said the FDIC may ultimately spend as much as $2 billion — and recapitalize the bank with up to $5 billion — to rescue First Republic Bank, which posted net losses of $2.3 billion for the first six months of 1988.

A bridge bank would be "one possible scenario," said FDIC spokesman Steve Katsanos.

In a memo to First Republic Bank managers Wednesday, the company said it expected a decision by the weekend.

Big increase in thefts sparks 21 percent hike in crime rate

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A nearly 40 percent jump in thefts, with double-digit increases in assaults and auto thefts were reported to Midland police the first six months of 1988, according to just-released department statistics.

The increases, offset by a drop in robberies and a smaller than expected increase in burglaries, accounted for a 21 percent increase in major crimes during the first half of this year compared to the first six months of 1987.

"The biggest part of that (increase) is thefts," Police Chief Richard Czech said in reaction to the figures. "We have noticed an increase in thefts from garages — usually that are left open — and from yards. It is a crime of opportunity. People see a back gate open and they take something, a bicycle or a lawnmower. We have seen a lot of that."

Vehicle burglaries, which are included in the theft category, were also up, the chief said.

'Enlightened self interest' main course at TAMACC breakfast

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Corporate partnership really works, because it is "enlightened self-interest" based on commitment. That was the essence of a message delivered today to more than 200 delegates and guests of the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC), attending a kickoff breakfast for the organization's 13th statewide convention being held here.

"Enlightened self-interest is not a dirty word," said keynote speaker Gerry Rogers, AT&T district staff manager for general business markets in Atlanta and chairman of TAMACC Corporate Partners.

"It's the plain truth. When I, as an AT&T manager, saw that Hispanic business in Texas accounted for 25 percent of our business, it didn't take me long to figure out what this meant to AT&T's bottom line."

Rogers said that, through the years, 20 corporate partners have joined to support TAMACC in the state. Among the partners are Sears, American Airlines, Coors, Anheuser Busch, TU Electric, Frito Lay and Exxon.

He said the future of TAMACC was the future of corporate partners and there were six critical areas in which corporate partners could assist in building a better Texas and a better TAMACC. He identified them as education, international relations, finance, networking-communications, legislation and economics.

In the area of education, he cited the successful "Step Up To Success" program — which addresses the high Hispanic dropout rate — as an example of cooperation between TAMACC and its corporate partners.

The International Relations Committee of TAMACC also has played a major role in establishing maquiladora seminars in Texas, he added.

"No organization can grow without finances," said Rogers. "We (corporate partners) have helped build a stronger TAMACC by knocking away such crutches as government funding and heavy dependence upon corporate partners." He said this had been done by obtaining tax exempt status for TAMACC.

$6 billion drought-relief bill may be on president's desk next week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers are promising to iron out House and Senate differences over a $6 billion drought-relief package in a quick flurry of action next week and speed the measure on to President Reagan's desk.

"My opinion is that the president would accept this bill as it is passed today, although there have been some things he objects to," Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., said Thursday after 94-0 Senate passage of the bill.

The House had approved its version 368-29 a few hours earlier after scaling back a plan to increase milk price supports, a proposal widely criticized as excessively favoring the dairy industry.

The revised version would impose a temporary increase for three months next year. Milk price supports previously had been scheduled to decrease on Jan. 1.

Senators tightened up a similarly controversial benefit in their bill that would allow companies that make ethanol for fuel to buy corn from government surplus bins at what could shape up as a substantial discount.

However, there were still warnings that Congress was flirting with budget trouble by inserting special benefits for constituents back home into the measure.

The House, urged by Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, acted to cap the price tag of its bill at $5.8 billion.

The Senate had no comparably firm figure. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said latest estimates put the cost of the Senate measure at between $5.85 billion and $6.55 billion.

Oil show nears sell-out status

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND

The Permian Basin's biennial turn in the worldwide petroleum spotlight is nearing sell-out status, according to show organizers.

The Permian Basin Oil Show, scheduled for Oct. 19 to 22 at Odessa's Ector County Coliseum, has fewer than 15 booth spaces remaining, with more than two months to go before the show's opening.

Clarence Cardwell, president of the 1988 show, reported to the PBOS board of trustees Thursday that 540 exhibitors have been lined up to rent 718 of the 727 booths and 161 of the 168 outside display spaces.

"We are well on the way to a sell-out and hopefully our early success will be a good omen of things to come for the industry," Cardwell said.

Before the 1986 edition of the show, billed as the largest inland exhibition of petroleum technology, the show committee was selling booth space until the week of the show.

In a departure from past shows, the trustees approved a change in the route of the Tuesday evening parade. Rather than parading through downtown Odessa, the Oil Show Parade honoring Harry E. Keegan will begin at the Odessa College campus at 25th Street and Andrews Highway and proceed north to the show grounds at 42nd Street.

Hospital district taxes could rise 55 percent

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Hospital district directors will meet the public next month to discuss why the rising costs of giving medical care to Midland's needy could result in as much as a 55 percent tax hike next year.

As required by law, Midland County Hospital District (MCHD) directors will hold a public hearing Aug. 11 to discuss raising the tax rate by more than 3 percent.

The current actual tax rate is 8.14 cents per $100 of property valuation. With a 55 percent hike, taxpayers would pay 13.58 cents per $100 of valuation.

MCHD is required to levy taxes to pay the costs of treating the indigent or needy in the county.

The hospital district faces a $1 million-plus shortfall for this fiscal year, officials have said.

Historically, district-owned Midland Memorial Hospital has offset hospital district financial shortfalls. However, officials on all sides worry that continually sapping money from the hospital could one day endanger its currently healthy fiscal status.

If all goes according to district plans, directors will raise the tax rate to an amount sufficient to cover projected fiscal year 1989 indigent expenses, they said Thursday.

For the past three years, directors have assessed only an "effective" tax rate, a figure that garners only what the prior year's tax rate brought in.

Collecting taxes to cover the projected FY '89 indigent-care bill of $5.8 million would result in raising taxes 55 percent, a hospital official explained today.

With the current 8.14 cent tax rate, taxpayers this year paid about $81 on a $75,000 home.

With a 13.58 cent tax rate, a Midland taxpayer would pay $102 in taxes on a $75,000 home.

Indigents in Midland County are classified and deemed eligible according to a sliding federal poverty guideline scale.

Directors Thursday discussed potential ways to curb costs of certain specialized services to indigent patients.

MMH President Ray Branson spoke of including a psychiatric ward or perhaps a neo-natal intensive care unit at the hospital. Those two services, for example, are not offered at MMH.

When an indigent needs psychiatric treatment or neo-natal intensive care, he or she is sent to another hospital for services, Branson explained.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Accu-Weather® forecast for 9 A.M., Saturday, July 30

Chance of storms continues

From Staff and Wire Reports

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the upper 60s and southerly winds will be 5-10 mph.

Saturday is expected to be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance showers developing in the afternoon. The high will be in the lower 90s and southeasterly winds will be 5-15 mph.

Thursday's high of 91 was 15 degrees cooler than the record high of 106 set for that date in 1944. The overnight low of 63 tied the previous record low of 63 set for this date in 1987.

STATE

Two weather systems combined to bring moisture from the Gulf of Mexico into Texas, setting the stage for possible scattered showers and thunderstorms statewide through Saturday.

A surface low pressure system over the Panhandle combined with a high pressure system over Louisiana to pump gulf moisture into the state.

The systems were producing showers and thunderstorms over the Panhandle and in Southeast Texas and in the Lower Rio Grande Valley early today.

Skies were cloudy over the Panhandle and in extreme deep South Texas while the rest of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies.

Forecasts called for partly to mostly cloudy skies with scattered afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms statewide through Saturday except in extreme northern portions of North Texas.

Lows tonight will be in the mid-60s in the Panhandle and in the 70s over the rest of the state.

DROUGHT

Gramm warned that running over a $5.8 billion ceiling calculated under the Gramm-Rudman budget law would set off nasty fiscal and political repercussions.

At the heart of the bill are provisions that would provide disaster payments to farmers equal to 65 percent of losses beyond 35 percent of expected harvest. Many dairy and livestock producers would become eligible for benefits under an expanded government feed aid program.

Farmers especially hard hit by the drought would get supplemental payments under both House and Senate bills.

A number of other points remain

The parade will roll at 5:30 p.m. on Oct. 18 and will be followed by the traditional exhibitors' party at 7 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Convention Centre.

The oil show trustees selected Keegan, who is president of the oil and gas division of Union Oil Co. of California, as honoree for this year's festivities. A former Midland resident, Keegan was Union Oil's Midland division superintendent from '84 to '89 and regional vice president in Midland from 1989 until named to his current position in 1973.

to be resolved when lawmakers meet in a House-Senate conference committee next week. The House version requires farmers to buy federal crop insurance for each of the next two years if they are to be eligible for disaster payments this year.

The Senate version does not contain such a provision, which is opposed by both the Reagan administration and a wide array of major crop producer groups.

Both bills would cancel a 50-cent cut in the milk price-support level scheduled for Jan. 1 but the House version would go beyond that. The House provision would raise the price-support level from April through June 1989 by 50 cents, to $11.10 cents for each 100 pounds of milk.

Keegan was selected for recognition because of his contributions in past Permian Basin petroleum activities and because he represents the role of major companies in the energy field. In his present position, Keegan is responsible for all of Unocal's domestic exploration and production activity, including offshore, Gulf of Mexico and Alaska.

While a resident of Midland, he served on the board of directors of the oil show as well as the Texas Chamber of Commerce and Midland YMCA. A graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, Keegan will mark 40 years with Union Oil this year.

NAACP official glad black now Ranger

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of the NAACP's Austin branch said he is glad for the black lawman chosen to join the elite Texas Rangers, but another black officer who deserves the promotion still has not received his due.

The Department of Public Safety Thursday announced that Lee Roy Young Jr., a 44-year DPS veteran and currently a criminal intelligence investigator in San Antonio, would join the Rangers. He is believed to be the first black to join the storied unit.

Young, 41, will be stationed in the Dallas suburb of Garland when he becomes a Ranger in September, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

Gary Bledsoe, president of the Austin branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said black state trooper Michael Scott of Houston deserves to be a Ranger. Scott publicly voiced his disappointment last year when he was not chosen for the Rangers. The NAACP has threatened to sue Young Jr.

'Millionaire' philanthropist a 'deadbeat'

MIAMI (AP) — A businessman who offered on television to "adopt" a welfare family is actually heavily in debt, faces a charge of bank fraud and, according to one creditor, "is the biggest deadbeat I have ever worked with."

Boca Raton businessman James N. Gislair was slapped with the federal charge two weeks before he made national headlines and went on NBC-TV's "Today Show" Thursday with his philanthropic intentions.

Gislair planned to "adopt" Anita Hunter and her family and give them a new house, a new car and a new life away from the drug-ridden Miami neighborhood called "The Hole." He said he hoped they would, in time, become self-sufficient.

"The only person it's not humorous for is that poor lady who's not going to get anything," said Hugh Culverhouse Jr., an attorney for Capital Bank, which has been unable to collect a $1.4 million judgment against Gislair.

The generous offer also came as a surprise to Kent Ewing, whose Boynton Beach landscaping firm is owed $24,750 by Gislair.

"He says he's going to help the poor and he can't even pay his bills," Ewing said. "This is an affront to the civilization that I am a part of. He is the biggest deadbeat I have ever worked with."

In a lawsuit, Capital Bank alleges that Gislair defrauded them by securing loans with money he did not have, said Tim Ross, the company's attorney. He later swore his six businesses were worthless, court records show.

The criminal charges stem from the civil case, according to Chief Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Gregorie, who filed a complaint against Gislair in a Miami federal court accusing him of making a false statement to a bank.

Gislair could face up to three years in jail if he's convicted on the criminal charges.

Telephone calls to Gislair's office by The Associated Press on Thursday were not returned. Anita Hunter does not own a phone and could not be reached for comment.

MCHD

Branson speculated additions of that nature could help cut down on indigent costs.

Directors explained studies had indicated paring down or even eliminating most services offered to indigents — either here or in other cities — would not save a significant amount of money.

Moreover, directors have expressed concerns over the ethical ramifications of not offering indigents the healthcare they need.

However, MCHD officials in the future plan to discuss what constitutes "necessary" healthcare for the indigent, a term coined by state legislators when relating to county- and district-owned hospitals.

The public hearing Aug. 11 will be held in the MMH board room at 4:30 p.m.

the department, charging that black officers have been passed over for promotion and discriminated against in other ways.

"I'm happy for Mr. Young. This is a step in right direction for him and his career. I'm disappointed for Michael Scott, because he really is the person who brought all this to bear," Bledsoe said.

"It appears there would be a policy in the department saying we're going to start promoting a few people because we have to, but we're going to promote people who don't complain or stand up for their rights, people who play by the rules of the game," Bledsoe said.

Scott was a top scorer on the written portion of the test required for Ranger eligibility, Bledsoe said, but was not chosen after the required oral interview.

The oral interview is before a board of six DPS supervisors, including at least two minority supervisors, Wells said. A DPS officer also must have at least eight years of law enforcement experience to be eligible to be a Ranger, and at least 60 hours of college or the equivalent education.

Wells said the reason there hasn't been a black Ranger before now is that Young was the first black to reach the required level in the testing procedures.

"They're all treated the same on the testing procedures. There's no difference," he said.

"We only have 94 Texas Rangers for the whole state of Texas. It's not unusual for 100 DPS officers to apply for one opening, or two or three (openings)," Wells said.

Col. Leo Gossett, retiring DPS director, said he's "proud" of Young's achievement.

"There's a certain mystique about the Texas Rangers. It's a highly sought-after job in the department, and many people have to apply many times — most do — before they're successful. The competition is keen," Gossett said.

Young said, "I feel pretty good. It's been an ambition of mine for many years." Young and three white DPS officers will join the Rangers unit in August and September, Wells said.

While portions of the Rangers' long history is sketchy, Young is believed to be the first black to formally be included in the ranks. Rangers, in various forms, have been mentioned as far back as the 1820s.

Jim McNutt, director of research and collections at the Institute of Texan Cultures in San Antonio, which has published a history of the Rangers, said Thursday that the institute's "best information" indicated that Young would become the first black Ranger.

The institute's history noted that blacks worked as teamsters and blacksmiths for the Rangers in the past, and McNutt said blacks likely accompanied Rangers as they traveled the state.

"Probably, these guys were not called Rangers themselves, were not appointed by anybody," McNutt said. "That doesn't mean that when everybody got attacked, they weren't in the middle of the fight."

Today's Rangers are specifically charged with four duties: protection of life and property by enforcing state criminal statutes; suppressing riots and insurrections; investigating major crimes; and apprehending fugitives.

Rangers are called on by authorities in small towns and less populated counties for help with homicides, for example, Wells said.

"Becoming a Ranger brings a very proud feeling for them. Rangers have a good reputation. They have a very high level of training in various subjects related to felony investigation," Wells said.

There currently are five Hispanic Rangers and no women Rangers, he said.

The Rangers trace their history to the frontier days, when Texas still belonged to Mexico.

Although authorities say it is difficult to determine just when the term first was applied to fighting men, Stephen F. Austin in 1823 employed 10 men to serve as Rangers.

"The Texas Rangers may have been thought of as operating against Indians and Mexican raiders in the early years and later against outlaw bands, feudists, stock thieves and local rioters," says a history in the authoritative "Handbook of Texas."

That history also noted that "Texas never needed the Rangers more than it did immediately following Reconstruction," when civil affairs were in chaos, Indians were threatening settlers and bandit raids caused trouble along the Mexican border.

"Here was a real opportunity for the Texas Rangers to rise to greatness, and there is no doubt that they did this in the period between 1874 and 1890," the history said.

In 1935, the Rangers were reorganized and placed in the DPS. Rangers are stationed in towns spread across the state.

Peru has strong boom in 1986

In 1986, Peru registered the strongest manufacturing boom in all of Latin America with a 17.8 percent rise, says the Inter-American Development Bank. The increase was fueled entirely by a strong expansion of domestic demand and intensified import-substitution. Exports of manufactures declined.

Rogers said AT&T had helped the association by sponsoring a media relations seminar to better help the organization understand media needs and deadlines and to open new lines of communication.

"I challenge other corporate partners to add this to their 'must-do' list," said Rogers. "These daylong workshops are a one-on-one encounter with members of the media."

To learn the legislative process and the ins and outs of lobbying, an employee of GTE — another corporate partner — prepared a booklet entitled "How the Texas Legislature Works."

"TAMACC as a statewide voice is to be reckoned with," said Rogers. "As TAMACC succeeds and excels so will we all."

The kickoff breakfast concluded with the presentation of awards for corporate partner of the year, local corporation of the year and small chamber of the year.

Adolph Coors Co. was named Corporate Partner of the Year for its outstanding service to minority recruitment and assistance in planning. The award was accepted by Joe Samaniego, representing Coors.

Two awards went to Harlingen. L&F Distributing Co. was named Local Corporation of the Year and the Harlingen Mexican American Chamber of Commerce was named Small Chamber of the Year. Alex Trejo accepted the award for the Harlingen Chamber and Joe Lamantia accepted for L&F Distributing.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram was among those nominated for the local corporation award, which is awarded for service to community and minority development. Others nominated were: NuStat, a research firm from Austin; KWEX-TV, San Antonio, and Houston Lighting & Power.

CRIME

"The auto burglaries have shown a marked increase," Czech said. "We are still losing stereos, radar detectors and purses."

During the first six months of the year, 1,441 thefts were reported to police, compared to 1,039 during the first half of 1987, a 38.7 percent increase. In June of this year, 251 thefts were reported, an average of more than eight thefts a day.

Reports of aggravated assaults increased 22 percent during the first six months of the year, according to the statistics.

Czech said increases or decreases in the number of violent crimes like assault are impossible to analyze. "But, it may be that some of those were caused by the hotter weather," he said. "We usually do have an increase."

Auto thefts were up a bit over 12 percent, with 156 vehicles reported stolen in Midland the first six months of this year compared to 139 during the same period in 1987.

Burglaries increased almost three percent, up to 909 the first half of 1988 compared to 883 during the same period last year.

"It's not good news," Czech said of the slight increase. "Last year we went down a lot, and now we are starting to creep up again. It may be the increase in population is responsible," he said, noting the population has increased by 3,000 residents since the June 1987 statistics were released.

The report tallies the number of murders, rapes, robberies, aggravated assaults, burglaries and thefts reported to police.

During the first six months of 1988, 2,743 crimes were reported to police, compared to 2,259 during the same period last year.

In other categories, 21 sexual assaults were reported in 1988 compared to 15 in 1987, an increase of 40 percent.

Two homicides have been reported to police so far in 1988, compared to four in 1987.

BANK

"As the decision time grows near, we expect to see more of this speculation," said First RepublicBank spokesman Joe Bowles said.

Creation of a bridge bank also would eliminate bondholder and shareholder claims, nullify current lawsuits against First RepublicBank and give the FDIC control of the bank for up to two years. It could also give a potential buyer time to conduct a thorough review of First Republic's loan portfolio.

The FDIC also could use a bridge bank for only a few hours to reshape First RepublicBank for its new owners, Anderson said.

In the bidding war, an investor group led by former U.S. Sen. John Tower of Texas also put forward a proposal.

Citicorp drops bid for Texas bank

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Citicorp withdrew its bid for the First RepublicBank Corp. Thursday, industry sources said. Citicorp's proposal would have involved participation in a federally assisted bailout of the troubled Dallas banking company.

Citicorp's withdrawal narrows the active bidders to three: Wells Fargo & Co., the NCNB Corp. of North Carolina, and First Republic's own management — all apparently still under consideration by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Why Citicorp dropped out is unclear. It and the FDIC had no comment. Some industry people suggested that Citicorp could not agree to some of the regulatory agency's conditions.

The Dallas bank, which has $26.8 billion in assets, has lost $2.2 billion since Jan. 1.

Tower told The Dallas Morning News, "The thrust of this is to maintain First Republic as an independent bank."

But the offer from Tower's group, called Lone Star Partners, apparently fell short, the newspaper reported.

Witness: North wanted money to go to Contras

WASHINGTON (AP)—A U.S. drug enforcement official says former White House staffer Oliver L. North suggested in 1984 that $15 million designated for a drug sting operation be diverted to the Nicaraguan Contras instead.

Ron Caffrey, now in charge of the Atlanta office of the Drug Enforcement Administration, told a House panel Thursday the DEA rejected the idea. Caffrey said he told North the suggestion would have compromised the chief operative in one of the agency's most significant undercover operations.

As it turned out, according to Caffrey and other DEA witnesses, the investigation was compromised anyway — and closed prematurely — several weeks later when details were leaked to the Washington Times.

The hearing was the first in a series by the Judiciary subcommittee on crime, which is trying to learn whether Reagan administration officials condoned drug smuggling and other criminal activities to further its Central American policy — especially winning aid for the Contra rebels.

Chairman William J. Hughes, D-N.J., said the panel has "discovered many, many instances of persons in or associated with...elements of our government attempting to convert, to divert, and to subvert the criminal justice process."

North, who has been indicted in the separate diversion of millions of dollars from the administration's Iran arms sales to the Contras, figured prominently in Thursday's testimony.

The testimony focused on a 1984 sting operation, in which DEA used convicted drug pilot Barry Seal to make contact with the Colombian cocaine cartel — then operating in Nicaragua — and a purported Nicaraguan government official, Federico Vaughn.

Hughes later said the committee has doubts about whether Vaughn was in fact part of the government.

Nonetheless, four DEA witnesses said North was interested in exposing an alleged involvement of the Marxist Nicaraguan government in drug smuggling, so the Reagan administration could win an upcoming congressional vote on Contra aid.

Caffrey, who was in charge of the DEA cocaine desk in 1984, said he briefed North on the undercover operation in late June or early July 1984, after Barry Seal had brought cocaine back from Nicaragua to the United States.

Seal at the time was functioning as a DEA operative, hoping his cooperation would bring him a lenient sentence.

Caffrey said he told North that the DEA planned to send Seal back to Nicaragua to make a $15 million payment for the drugs he brought back, with the money to be split between the Colombia drug kingpins in Nicaragua and Nicaraguan officials.

"Col. North asked why we couldn't land the plane outside Managua and turn the money over to the Contras," Caffrey said.

The DEA official said he responded that such a plan would jeopardize Seal, who had won the trust of the Colombian drug cartel and of Vaughn, identified by the DEA witnesses as an official of the Nicaraguan interior ministry.

Associated Press

Michael Dukakis courted blue-collar voters and Jesse Jackson supporters in a state that Jackson won during the primary season, and Vice President George Bush made another push for his child care plan while completing round one in his search for a running mate.

Dukakis' running mate Lloyd Bentsen continued his solo voyage for the Democratic ticket and wooed independent-minded Westerners whose suspicion of big government previously drew them to President Reagan.

Bentsen, like Bush, was also appearing at a day care center as both sides tried to win votes on one of the campaign's major issues.

Dukakis planned to tour a General Motors plant this morning before meeting with its union workers. On Thursday, his activities included meetings with prominent Jackson supporters in Ohio and New Jersey.

"I don't care who you were with in the primary, you're all Democrats," Dukakis told a crowd of about 500 people when he arrived at the Flint, Mich., airport Thursday night. Dukakis lost Michigan to Jackson but went on to secure the nomination with a string of primary victories.

Bush, who has been busy on the phone all week with prospective running mates, scheduled a visit to a corporate child-care center today in the Washington suburb of Tysons Corner, Va.

"He wanted to follow up on his child-care initiative," said Bush spokeswoman Sheila Tate. Bush on Sunday proposed a $1,000 tax credit for child care primarily aimed at low-income working mothers.

Bush said he hoped to have a tentative list completed by week's end, but planned to delay his final selection until the Republican National Convention on Aug. 15-18. "The process is going along in an orderly fashion," he said.

Those reached include former rivals Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York. Dole's wife, former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, and several whose names did not figure in earlier speculation. Among those are Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind.

Campaign sources said Bush's list to date also includes Sens. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., William L. Armstrong, R-Colo.; John Danforth, R-Mo. and Nancy L. Kassebaum, R-Kan.; Govs. Thomas H. Kean of New Jersey, John Sununu of New Hampshire, Carroll A. Campbell of South Carolina and George Deukmejian of California; and former Govs. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee and Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, who recently was nominated by President Reagan to be attorney general.

Bentsen, in a speech Thursday in Reno, Nev., told the National Conference of State Legislators, "If there is one lesson we have learned in recent years, it is that the federal government can't solve all of the (nation's) problems."

Mindful of Dukakis' promise of an activist government, he added, "But Washington can lead."

By putting him on the ticket, Bentsen said, Dukakis was "saying to Democrats who went and voted for Reagan, come home, there's a place for you in this party."

He planned to visit a child care center in Los Angeles today before heading to a rally in Amarillo, Texas.

Jackson, no longer a presidential candidate, returned to his brand of diplomacy, saying he has asked the United Nations secretary-general to ask Iranian officials for assistance in freeing U.S. hostages held by Iranian sympathizers in Lebanon.

Dukakis said he was unfamiliar with the facts about Jackson's effort, "but as a general matter private citizens should not try to conduct foreign policy."

Administration says deficit will be higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says the federal deficit will be $5.6 billion higher than it predicted back in February, with the government's red ink now estimated to total $152.3 billion this fiscal year.

While the new administration estimate announced Thursday is higher, it is still below the more gloomy projections earlier this year by many private economists, who were forecasting a deficit of $160 billion or worse.

Those economists have been busy revising their own figures, and some now say the administration's new deficit forecast for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 may actually be too pessimistic.

As the year began, the administration predicted the overall economy as measured by the gross national product would expand at a sluggish 2.4 percent rate. The new budget has boosted that GNP estimate to 3 percent.

The higher growth this year has helped push the unemployment rate down to a 14-year-low of 5.3 percent. More people working means more tax revenues for Uncle Sam.

Tax revenues are expected to be $4.2 billion higher than the administration's February projection, according to the new report.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said he is now predicting the 1988 deficit will total $145 billion based on the gains in tax revenues which have already occurred.

David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc., said he is forecasting a deficit this year of $151 billion, slightly lower than the administration's estimate.

The administration is calling for the deficit in the next fiscal year to decline to $140.1 billion, an estimate that private economists say is generally in line with their own forecasts.

That deficit estimate is $5.9 billion below the $146 billion level which would trigger automatic spending cuts as required by the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law.

However, White House budget director James Miller warned that the $5.9 billion cushion did not leave much room for error, especially given a lengthy list of spending measures Congress is considering in an election year.

Fires continue burning in South Dakota, park

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Firefighters raced the wind as they tried to beat back a blaze that raged out of control after consuming 15 homes along the city's edge, while officials offered a $10,000 reward in the suspected arson.

High winds that fanned the fire dropped to 5 mph early this morning, prompting a major assault to take advantage of the lull and cooler temperatures. The National Weather Service said winds were expected to pick up again, reaching 15 to 25 mph by afternoon.

In Wyoming, fire crews in Yellowstone National Park today were taking the calculated risk of lighting "burnouts" — igniting dead timber and brush in an attempt to keep isolated blazes from combining into fire complexes.

Fires fed by drought-desiccated fields and forests also blackened regions of Alaska, Montana, Idaho, California and Washington state.

In Rapid City, 15 homes and 22 outbuildings had been destroyed and 2,800 acres burned by Thursday evening. The fire was considered 70 percent contained.

In Yellowstone, officials acknowledged the risk of burnouts. "But we'd rather burn this out under the best conditions we can control instead of letting the fire run in on us uncontrolled," said Ken Briggeman, a fire official at the Shoshone blaze near Grant Village.

An update Thursday night by infrared mapping showed the number of acres on fire down from 95,000 to about 93,000 in the 2.2 million acre park.

Police: No need for pay

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Missing Chicago newlyweds who sought "perfect love" while working anonymously in California delicatessens said they don't feel compelled to make amends for the costly police search prompted by their disappearance.

Scott Swanson said Thursday he believes it is the Chicago police rank-and-file, rather than department officials, who want to see some kind of payment because they feel "really gyped" that they didn't find the college couple who dropped out of sight in April.

"It's like (the police said), 'Here are some yuppie kids from Wheaton College. They just took off and we have no clues and we didn't know what to do.' And they look silly, so they might want to retaliate," Swanson said.

"Nobody cares, it's over with," said a Chicago officer in the missing persons bureau who declined to give his name.

Chicago Police Cmdr. Ettore Di Vito, who headed the investigation, said Wednesday police might try to recover the costs of their efforts. "We are disheartened that we expended so many man-hours," he said.

Homophilia products 'safe'

ATLANTA (AP) — Advances in manufacturing techniques have resulted in hemophilia products that are "very, very safe" in preventing the transmission of AIDS, according to national Centers for Disease Control researchers.

Patients with hemophilia or other coagulation disorders, who must take blood-derived clotting products, account for more than 700 U.S. cases of AIDS, which is transmitted through blood and other bodily fluids. Health officials say more than half of the nation's 15,000 hemophilia patients already are infected with the virus that can cause AIDS.

But the vast majority of those infections occurred before 1985 and the advent of heat-treatment techniques to deactivate the virus in clotting products.

Since those techniques came into use, data show that plasma derivatives available in North America, Europe and Australia "have a high degree of safety with regard to (AIDS virus) transmission," the CDC said Thursday in its weekly report.

The CDC said that since 1985, it has found 18 cases in which a hemophilia patient was infected with the AIDS virus through a clotting product.

Bad crackers in demand

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Local officials are finding out that 350 tons of rancid crackers do indeed appeal to some people — in fact, a lot of people.

"We never anticipated such an avalanche of response," said Donna Grant, who has been handling requests since the City Council announced last Tuesday it wanted to dispose of a cache of Civil Defense survival crackers.

The crackers, placed in storage 25 years ago in case of nuclear attack, had been not been distributed by Thursday, but Ms. Grant said she has had calls from as far away as California.

Protesters refuse to give names

ATLANTA (AP) — Ten days after their arrests during the Democratic National Convention, 96 anti-abortion protesters who refuse to give their names remain jailed, most vowing to stay until their next court date or the city frees them.

Lawyers said Thursday that the jailed protesters, charged with criminal trespass, cannot be freed on bond until they give verifiable proof of their identities.

"If we can identify them...we can try them," explained Lee O'Brien, Fulton County's chief assistant solicitor. He said the offense carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a fine of $1,000.

"Demonstrators like this...do all they can to frustrate the system," O'Brien said. "If in so doing they are willing to spend more time in jail than they would have, if any, so be it. It really depends on how far they want to carry it."

The protesters, part of an anti-abortion effort called Operation Rescue, were among 134 arrested July 19 at a clinic near downtown Atlanta where abortions are performed. The city began processing them through the court system this week.

"We just hope the city will realize it made a mistake and just let us go," said Lowell Patterson, a spokesman for the protesters who is not jailed. "We have served more time even than we would have if we had been found guilty" of criminal trespass.

On Thursday, a man calling himself Baby John Doe 105 and a woman calling herself Baby Jane Doe 111 clutched Bibles as they stood silently in Municipal Court. A man calling himself Baby John Doe 132 was dressed as a priest.

The protesters, who are being held at the Atlanta Corrections Center, say they have taken the names in solidarity with aborted fetuses.

Judge Howard Johnson, however, referred to the prisoners as "White Male 42" or "White Female 47," as he methodically sent their cases to state court.

Thirty-two of those arrested last week have given their names and been released on $500 recognizance bonds, said Tom Pocock, deputy director of the corrections center. He said six others were identified through other means.

The demonstrators have been brought into court in groups of seven or eight for their brief appearances before being returned to jail.

The remaining 23 demonstrators were to appear today.

"We have 75 percent of our people committed to stay (in jail) until their court hearing, assuming it is within the next month or so," said Patterson.

It normally takes two to three months for such a case to reach state court.

"Most of our local people are in jail," Patterson said. Supporters are coming in from outside the Atlanta area, and there would be large demonstrations in the coming weeks, he said, but declined to elaborate.

Similarly charged demonstrators arrested during an anti-nuclear protest at U.S. Department of Energy offices during the convention were sentenced to the five days they had spent awaiting a court appearance and were freed.

Iran, Iraq accuse each other of blocking peace

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iran and Iraq accused each other of blocking U.N. efforts to end their 8-year-old war, and the U.N. chief sought a formula to break the deadlock.

"I reject the idea of any collapse absolutely. I reject it emphatically. I have to keep waiting," Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Thursday.

The U.N. chief planned to resume separate talks today with the foreign ministers of both countries after a one-day break.

Iraq demands a face-to-face meeting with Iran before a cease-fire, and Iran insists on a truce before it will consider a direct meeting.

Perez de Cuellar acknowledged an impasse and, when asked if he had a formula for breaking it, said: "I'm working on that." But he added, "At some stage, direct talks are indispensable."

The secretary-general also planned to meet today with Robin Higgins, the wife of one of the nine U.S. hostages being held in Lebanon. U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, a U.N. official, was kidnapped Feb. 17. He said the meeting at U.N. headquarters is at her request.

The nine Americans are among 18 Westerners believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems extremists in Lebanon. Officials have held out hope that an end to the Iran-Iraq war could help bring the hostages home.

U.N. negotiations toward ending the war are being conducted under Security Council Resolution 598, which Iraq agreed to soon after it was adopted in July last year but which Iran did not accept until this month.

It provides for a cease-fire followed by withdrawal to recognized borders, prisoner exchange, peace negotiations and an investigation of which side started the war.

"The policy of Iraq is to put obstacles in the way of the secretary-general's peace efforts," said Mohammad Javad Zarif, counselor at Iran's U.N. Mission. "This whole Iraqi exercise is planned to sabotage the efforts upon which the international community is looking with hope."

Wednesday, Iran's Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati accepted all of Perez de Cuellar's proposals on implementing the peace plan. Iraq has not yet responded, and details of the proposals have not been disclosed.

Iraq's U.N. mission accused Iran of "simply seeking a hasty truce without giving any commitments that it will comply honestly and sincerely to the full implementation of the resolution as a plan for comprehensive and durable peace."

Both sides reported fighting Thursday at Esfahabad, 60 miles inside Iran. Iraq, which says it has withdrawn from Iranian territory, describes the invaders as Iranian rebels, but Iran says they are Iraqi troops.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, Saddam Hamadi, the acting foreign minister, summoned the ambassadors of the five permanent Security Council members — United States, Soviet Union, China, Britain and France — and insisted on a peace treaty.

"This is the only way to secure a peaceful settlement" of the war, Iraqi television quoted him as saying.

But he added that "Iraq is for an early, immediate cease-fire as a means to end the war within the framework of a comprehensive peace settlement."

Gorbachev urges party leaders to be responsive

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today urged the nation's top Communist Party leadership to reform the government to broaden personal freedoms and make it more responsive.

The official Tass news agency said a plenary meeting of the party Central Committee opened today on "practical work to implement the decisions of the 19th All-Union Conference" of the party, which called this month for reform.

Western and Soviet sources predict the gathering, expected to conclude by tonight, also could result in some changes to the ruling 13-man Politburo headed by Gorbachev.

The Politburo decided July 4 to call together the Central Committee's more than 300 members. It said then it was preparing proposals for the committee on implementing "reforms of the political system, the democratization of party, state and social life."

Resolutions on major changes in Soviet government institutions and internal party practices were adopted by a 5,000-delegate national party conference that met in the Kremlin June 28-July 1.

Revamped institutions of central government are to be in place by next spring, the conference said. The party also has been ordered to review the qualifications of each of its 20 million members this year.

Gorbachev, the party's general secretary, says the Soviet Union must transform itself into a country ruled by law to prevent a lapse into the repression of the Stalin years and the corruption and stagnation allowed under late President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The conference resolutions call for broad and varied changes ranging from an end to bureaucratic meddling in agriculture to a declaration that citizens should have access to all information not classified as military or state secrets.

The conference also ordered the party to get out of the business of running the economy and government administration and to concentrate on setting the ideological agenda of the nation's 284 million citizens.

But the documents adopted unanimously by the delegates usually speak only in general terms of Gorbachev's goals for political reform. The Central Committee is expected to flesh them out and come up with a specific timetable and methods to implement them.

The committee also is empowered to make changes in the Politburo and the Secretariat, the top party body that runs the country's day-to-day affairs, but no reshuffling of the top Kremlin leadership is expected.

The last Central Committee plenum, on May 23, did not make any personnel changes. But at its previous session, on Feb. 17-18, the Central Committee removed former Gorbachev protégé Boris N. Yeltsin from his non-voting seat on the Politburo. Yeltsin had been fired as Moscow party leader in November.

The plenum, which could last one or two days, may also throw light on what happened to Gorbachev's proposal for a powerful new presidency.

U.N. aviation team arrives in Tehran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A five-man U.N. team arrived in the Iranian capital of Tehran today to investigate the downing of an Iranian jetliner by a U.S. warship. American experts wrapped up their probe in the Persian Gulf.

The International Civil Aviation Organization team planned to start its probe at Tehran international airport, where part of Iran's air traffic control network is based, said Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

The group from the Montreal-based U.N. agency planned to travel to Bandar Abbas airport in southern Iran, from which the Iran Air Airbus took off on a brief scheduled flight to Dubai on July 3.

Iran says all 290 aboard were killed after the plane was hit by missiles from the cruiser USS Vincennes. Pentagon officials said officers of the Vincennes mistook the Airbus A300 for an Iranian F-14 jet fighter on an attack course.

The ICAO experts also will go to the area where the plane crashed into the sea near the Iranian island of Hengham in the Strait of Hormuz, the Iranian agency said in a dispatch monitored in Cyprus.

The experts will stay in Iran for a week, the news agency said. The team is in Iran at the request of the Iranian government to help resolve discrepancies in accounts given by the two sides.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Palestinians stay home

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians in the occupied territories blocked streets and stayed away from work today to show support for women jailed for their roles in the Palestinian uprising.

Also, state-run radio said a Palestinian who died in Gaza City Thursday was killed by Israeli troops as he prepared to throw a firebomb. The death touched off demonstrations in which two Palestinians were wounded by gunfire and two Israeli riot police were injured by stones.

Palestinians throughout the occupied lands went on strike today. Outlawed Palestinian flags waved on utility poles from Bethlehem to Nablus in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Before dawn, Palestinian protesters blocked some streets with rocks, barrels and burning tires, an apparent effort to prevent Palestinians from breaking the strike organized by the underground leadership of the uprising that began Dec. 8.

Peace convoy nears goal

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The ruling Sandinista party's newspaper saluted a convoy of U.S. veterans that brought food, medicine and clothing with a banner headline reading, "Veterans Break Boycott."

The newspaper Barricada said in its Thursday edition that thousands of people greeted the convoy of 20 vehicles and 44 activists when it crossed the Honduran-Nicaraguan border the day before, after months of opposition from the U.S. government.

The Veterans' Peace Convoy was scheduled to arrive in Managua's downtown Revolution Plaza today, where it will turn over its shipment to the leftist government.

The veterans oppose U.S. support of Nicaraguan Contra rebels, who have waged a 7-year-old war to topple the Sandinista government.

Mandela's home destroyed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The fire that destroyed the home of imprisoned black leader Nelson Mandela was prompted by a dispute between black teen-age groups and was not aimed at Mandela himself, sources said.

Police said as many as 50 black high school students stoned the house, doused it with gasoline and set it ablaze Thursday. No one was hurt and no arrests were made, they said.

Officials probe jet's near collision with Soviet, U.S. military planes

TORONTO (AP) — Officials are investigating why a Canadian jetliner with 246 people nearly collided with two Soviet military planes being intercepted by U.S. fighters over the Atlantic.

The Worldways Canada DC-8 was cruising at 31,000 feet about 250 miles off the coast of Newfoundland and the pilot was not informed of any military traffic in the area when the incident occurred Wednesday, officials said.

"It was a fairly close call," Norm Pascoe, a spokesman for the federal agency Transport Canada, said Thursday.

James Harris, a spokesman for the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, said the National Defense Department and the safety board launched investigations to determine the cause of the communications failure and recommend ways to prevent a recurrence.

The jetliner was flying from London's Gatwick Airport to Ottawa and Toronto at the time, said Worldways vice president Bill Doucette.

He said the pilot reported seeing two Soviet planes and two U.S. fighters within 500 to 1,000 feet of his flight path.

He "pulled up and pulled right" to avoid collision, Doucette said. No one was hurt and the plane landed safely at Ottawa.

Capt. Don Roy of the Canadian Defense Department said the Soviet planes were in international air space, but U.S. and Canadian jets intervened "to let them know we know they're there."

Roy said the response was a "normal intercept," the 16th this year. He said it was up to civilian air traffic control to inform the DC-8 of any military traffic in the area.

Park dedications note civic action

Two of Midland's most notable residents were in the news again recently when the City of Midland dedicated parks in their honor — John P. Butler and the late John Wesley House.

Both men had a tremendous impact on the civic life of Midland in past years and the honor is entirely appropriate.

House, who died in 1958, was known as "Mr. Humble" by his fellow employees at Humble Oil Co. where he had worked 23 years. His other activities in Midland mirrored his dedication to the community, and the lives of its residents. He served as president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Petroleum Club, and the Midland Country Club and served on the board of Midland Memorial Hospital. Additionally, he assisted in bringing the first commercial airline to what was then called Midland Regional Airport.

Butler, former chairman of the board for First National Bank which later became Republic Bank First National Midland and a longtime Midland civic leader, was involved in countless projects of benefit to Midland and its residents over several decades. His interest and involvement continues, even to the point that he contributed to the city toward the construction of park equipment in Butler Park.

The many contributions of these two men to the enjoyment of Midlanders should not be forgotten. And through the city's interest in dedicating the parks in their honor, numerous Midlanders will be reminded of their community spirit each time they visit House Park or Jno. P. Butler Park.

In that way each of the men will continue to provide enjoyment to Midlanders of all ages for years to come.

TAMACC convention brings welcome visit

Midland is playing host this weekend to the 13th annual state convention of the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce. The convention is expected to attract about 500 delegates and their families to the Tall City. Many may be first time visitors to Midland.

Conventions of this type typically attract attention for communities such as Midland. For this particular convention, Tom Flores, former coach of the Los Angeles Raiders, will be the guest speaker and State Treasurer Ann Richards was to speak at a ceremony this afternoon.

As experiences in other cities in the recent past have emphasized, notably Fort Worth where a recent convention of the African Methodist Episcopal Church was held with less than desirable results, the success of a convention such as this one should be of prime concern to every resident of the host city. Conventions typically mean an influx of cash and business and can significantly improve the economy of the host city. But it's critical that the hosts attempt to make life as pleasant for the conventioners as possible.

Cab service, availability of motel rooms and other factors can impact a convention's success. Even beyond those factors, simply the attitude of a city's residents can give conventioners either a positive or negative perception of the community where the convention is held.

Midland obviously wants to be an up-and-coming convention city and wants the TAMACC conventioners to go home with a positive perception of the people here. We have a story to tell about life in the Permian Basin and we want it to be well received.

We join in welcoming the TAMACC conventioners to Midland. We hope your stay will be an enjoyable one — and that you will return for other conventions in the future. We're glad you're here!

Another View:

Middle East balance

Saudi Arabia, miffed over resistance in Congress to the sale of sophisticated arms to the kingdom, has signed an agreement with Britain to buy as much as $30 billion worth of warplanes, missiles and other weaponry over 10 years. Kuwait, facing a similar hurdle, also is talking with London, and has just signed an agreement with the Soviet Union for an undisclosed quantity and type of weapons.

This follows a secret deal, uncovered last spring by U.S. intelligence and admitted by the Saudis, by which China is selling Riyadh medium-range missiles. At the same time, Iran has installed Chinese-made shorter-range Silkworm missiles, which Beijing denies it supplied, just across the Persian Gulf from its Arab adversaries.

There's nothing new about the Middle East arms race, but the weaponry now being acquired, or sought, in the region has greater range and destructive potential than anything previously obtained. This troubles many in Congress, who fear that such weapons in the hands of Arab gulf states could someday be turned against Israel, that their deployment only enlarges Middle East arsenals and increases the threat of another outbreak of war in the region. These fears are understandable.

able, and the fact that Iran now says it is ready to accept a ceasefire in its eight-year war with Iraq hardly presages an outbreak of amity in a region of age-old enmity. Yet U.S. reluctance to sell the Saudis weapons that they can get in Britain or elsewhere seems shortsighted. It's very unlikely that Saudi Arabia or Kuwait, which go to great lengths to avoid military confrontation with anyone, would pick a fight with Israel. The United States, by allowing the initiative to slip from its hands, stands to lose both exports and influence without curbing the arms race. Washington cannot unilaterally control the worldwide arms market.

That's not to say the arms race is not a matter of grave concern. It is, but its real solution must involve all the major arms suppliers. Until conditions are ripe for such a global approach, the United States should try to meet the defense needs of friendly nations — in this case Saudi Arabia and Kuwait — whose interests coincide with its own and thereby help maintain the balance of power in the Middle East. Precarious as that balance is, it may be preventing even worse disasters than those the region has already experienced.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 29, the 211th day of 1988. There are 155 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Thirty years ago, on July 29, 1958, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the National Aeronautics and Space Act, which created NASA. Eisenhower called the legislation a "historic step" that would further equip the United States "for leadership in the Space Age."

On this date:

In 1030, the patron saint of Norway, King Olaf II, was killed in battle.

In 1588, the English soundly defeated the Spanish Armada in the Battle of Gravelines, leaving the remaining galleons to try to make their way home.

In 1887, operetta composer Sigismund Romberg was born in Nagyzsan, Hungary.

JACK ANDERSON

Controversial missile plan kept alive

WASHINGTON — A secret, blistering attack has been made on a controversial Air Force-Navy missile program that has been kept alive almost solely through the efforts of Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the powerful chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

As we reported earlier, our sources say Nunn and Melvin R. Paisley, former assistant Navy secretary, are the two men most responsible for keeping the Tacit Rainbow missile alive against the wishes of military experts. Paisley, who resigned his post to become a defense consultant last year, is at the center of the Pentagon procurement probe.

Nunn's interests appear to be parochial. The missile contractor, Northrop Corp., is building the $100-million missile plant in Nunn's home town of Perry, Ga. The town of 10,500 will see 700 new jobs.

Last month, Nunn convinced a congressional conference committee to approve continued funding for Tacit Rainbow. Now we have learned that on July 13, John Krings, director of operational testing and development for the secretary of defense, sent a strongly worded memo to Deputy Secretary of Defense William H. Taft IV, advising a serious rethinking of the project. The one-page memo, classified as "secret," was the latest in a line of warnings about Tacit Rainbow. Other Pentagon and Air Force officials, and scientists at the China Lake Naval Weapons Center in California, have advised that it be canceled.

Tacit Rainbow was one of several drone missiles studied in the early 1980s for anti-radar tactical missions. The proposal was flagging badly in 1984 when it was surprisingly revived by Paisley, who decided to have the Navy join the Air Force in the project.

At the same time, with Nunn's help, the Pentagon abandoned the other efforts including a promising missile called "Seek Spinner."

An example of Nunn's influence can be seen in this year's budget authorization for Tacit Rainbow. Nunn, negotiating for the Senate, wanted $207 million — but the House wanted only $110 million. The two houses conferred and Nunn got his way, no compromise. Never mind that the project is fully a year behind schedule because of a series of testing failures, including the latest on June 17.

Meanwhile, Nunn has fought any efforts to revive the Seek Spinner option. Here is a comparison of the two missiles:

■ Tacit Rainbow is more than a year behind schedule because of technical problems. Before it was bagged in 1984, Seek Spinner had great technical promise and a much more successful testing program than Tacit Rainbow.

■ Though both do the same thing, Tacit Rainbow is much more expensive. Our Pentagon sources say that, with the 600 percent cost overrun already on the program, it is likely to cost more than $200,000 per round — way up from the initial classified estimate of $30,000. At most, Seek Spinner would be $94,000 a round.

■ Tacit Rainbow is faster than Seek Spinner, which means it can get to the target quicker and search at a higher altitude. But it means a deficiency in a more important category. Once it is launched, Seek Spinner can stay in the air six times as long as Tacit Rainbow.

■ A major drawback of Tacit Rainbow is that it must be launched from an aircraft. It is being tested on B-52s and A-6s. So, use of the missile in the mass quantities planned would eat up considerable strategic aircraft resources. In contrast, a half dozen men on the ground can launch hundreds of Seek Spinners.

One Air Force source close to the program told us the Tacit Rainbow should not be abandoned altogether. He said the Seek Spinner program should be revived, too.

If both were pursued, he added, "The enemy would have to defend against two very different threats, a low- and a high-speed system. It doesn't make sense to put all our future air suppression eggs in one basket."

PEOPLE'S ADVOCATE — A reader in California is worried about the approaching invasion of killer bees from Mexico. She wants to know if they can be stopped.

The U.S. and Mexican governments have teamed up, not to stop the bees but to breed in more gentle instincts. The aggressive bees were brought to Brazil from Africa in 1956 and bred with Brazilian honey bees to make a tougher strain. Instead, the African bees produced swarms of killer bees which started moving gradually north. Geneticists are now trapping the male African bees and then releasing milder honey bees to crossbreed with the African queens. The hope is that their offspring will be more gentle.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Reports are surfacing that the Medellín drug cartel of Colombia once offered to spy for the United States against Latin American leftists. In trade, all we had to do was forgive and forget years of cocaine flowing from Colombia up the noses of America. What a deal. A few billionaire scum lords are let off the hook and spend their retirement years playing James Bond. No amount of inside intelligence would be worth that foul compromise.

CHARLEY REESE

Supporting Contras better than alternative

Daniel Ortega, the communist dictator of Nicaragua, has turned his goon squads on peaceful demonstrators, shut down the Catholic Church's radio station, shut down the opposition newspaper, expelled the U.S. ambassador, and continued to receive military aid from the Soviet Union at the rate of about $40 million a month.

Ordinary people with common sense even vaguely familiar with communists are not in the least surprised. Expecting a communist dictator to transform himself into a democrat is like expecting a cobra to transform itself into a rabbit.

If Ortega had any desire to allow a free society in Nicaragua then he would not have worked so hard to achieve the exact opposite from the day he and his communist goon-buddies took power.

No, the only question is when the liberal Democrats who have been making excuses for this tyrant for the past eight years will finally admit they were wrong. Expecting that may be as foolish as expecting Ortega to respect the human rights of the Nicaraguan people.

The only question Americans have to decide is whether they wish to use force, either ours or that of the Nicaraguan resistance fighters, to throw Ortega out of office or whether they are content to see a Soviet satellite, armed to the teeth with advance weapons, established a not-very-long drive from the U.S. border.

Apparently, the liberal Democrats prefer to allow the Soviet Union to establish its first satellite on the North American continent — a fitting companion to the Soviet satellite astride the shipping lanes just 90 miles from Key West. After all, another liberal Democrat, John Kennedy, repudiated the Monroe Doctrine.

At this rate, Americans will not have to worry about a nuclear war because the Soviet Union will soon be in a fine position to whip us with purely conventional forces. We Americans may call it the Gulf Coast but I suspect in the Soviet war room it's known as the soft underbelly of imperialist America.

Much of what we are dependent upon transits the Gulf through the narrow straits on either side of Cuba. The Soviets have militarized Cuba and now Nicaragua. Add Panama and the U.S. would have one bad time of it in the event of a purely conventional shooting war.

Disasters like World War II rarely descend suddenly upon mankind. Governments usually have to labor over a period of time, creating the disaster with a series of bad decisions, with a series of rationalizations, with a series of misjudgments.

Then, when the logical consequence of their acts occurs, they puff out their chests and call on the common people to make incredible sacrifices of their lives and their treasures to redeem the blunders of their leaders.

Hey, enough already. We did that in World War I and World War II and Korea and Vietnam. Let's start practicing preventative international health.

You have a communist criminal psychopath being armed beyond all legitimate need by the criminal psychopaths running the Politbureau in Moscow. Now, we can eliminate Ortega rather cheaply. Once the communists are removed, the Nicaraguan people can have whatever kind of democratic government they wish. Without a Nicaraguan equivalent of Genghis Khan in their midst, the other Central American countries can concentrate on continuing democratic reform and improving their economies.

But it all hinges on us. If we lack the will and the brains, as it appears the Democrats in Congress lack, to oust Ortega now, then we and the Central Americans can look forward to nothing but continuing low intensity warfare for the next 5 or 10 years — and that's the good scenario.

Tell your congressman to vote for military aid to the Contras. Tell him if he doesn't, you won't vote for him. You won't miss a congressman nearly as much as you will a son who has to die in Central America because Congress neglected a crisis until only major surgery could cure it.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

After 24 moves, a rocking chair's inviting!

The other day I sat down and tried to remember just how many times I've moved since I left my mother's house in 1964. I'm not certain if this is some kind of record, but the number I came up with was 23. That's almost a move a year, which should say something about the last 24 years of my life.

Grizzard

I remember the first house I ever bought — with my first wife. One day, I bought a picture of a bullfighter and gave it to my wife as an anniversary present.

"It will look great in the living room," I said.

"Not in my living room," she answered.

The picture of the bullfighter was about all I came away with from that first house and that first marriage.

After that, there was one apartment after another. Then, a second marriage and a move to another city. When she left I swore I'd never marry again and moved back to Atlanta and eventually bought myself another house, a house on a park.

I was happy there even if cracks appeared in the walls soon after I moved in.

But, I married a third time and moved out of that house, and I don't want to get into the rest of all that.

What I do want to get into is I'm about to move for my 24th time, and I have said to myself, "Let this be it for a while."

The Mayflower people may lose some value on their stock if I stay put for any length of time, but I find myself weary now of change.

The new place is in a neighborhood. I've never really lived in one of those.

There are neighbors where I live now and at least one has been a joy and I will miss her, and so will my dog, Catfish, the black Lab.

She has minded him the many times I've been out of the city, and she even cooked him waffles. I haven't broken the news to Catfish we're moving again. I want to put off his heartbreak for as long as I can.

But the homes where I am now are acres apart, and getting to know the people at those distances isn't that easy.

The new place is deep in the city and there's a sidewalk in front. Catfish will have a large fenced backyard, and I've already spotted a squirrel for him to chase.

The home I'm leaving has had its moments. Two of the people I love the most were married in that house.

I've written four books and Lord knows how many columns in the downstairs office.

The muse lives somewhere amongst the tall pines I see when I look outside my office window.

You always have to leave a few things behind when you move. I can't take the refrigerator, they say, because it doesn't match what's in my new kitchen.

The den furniture, which I picked out myself, looks like it was made out of the hide of pinto ponies — I have been told it won't make the trip either.

My bed's going, though, and so is the picture of me standing next to Bear Bryant (I'm wearing his hounds-tooth hat), and my 1953 Royal typewriter.

One other thing, the new place has a porch and I'm in the market for a rocking chair. I can settle for a long spell in a house with a front porch and a rocking chair.

I believe that. I really do.

City hall hooks up new phone system

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Here's a number too good to pass up — 685-7100.

Come Monday morning, that's the number Midlanders will have to dial if they want to get a hold of city hall. Well, at least that's the game plan. "Hopefully, all of this will work. If it doesn't, at least no one can call and complain," chuckled Ray Kendall, a city-paid consultant.

Jokes aside, Kendall will have his hands full this weekend.

As part of a massive overhaul, the city is switching over to a new phone system — a system officials claim will save taxpayers money and add to office efficiency.

Kendall said the system will provide between 340 and 350 direct office lines. And that, reportedly, is a step up from the system that now appears to exist.

The cutover is not cheap.

Initial startup costs have been pegged at $40,000, with annual cost estimated at $100,000 or $3,000 more per month than the service now being provided by Universal Communications Systems.

Last month, the council voted to purchase the Plexar II system from Southwestern Bell Telephone and hired Midland-based COM Shop as the maintenance contractor.

Work began last week.

Kendall said new lines are in place and up at the city's water purification plant and at eight city fire stations, with the exception of central, which along with the police department, changes this weekend.

City officials expect a complete cutover by Saturday night. Line tests will be conducted all-day Sunday.

In the meantime, department heads and secretaries are getting a 30-minute crash course on such features as call forwarding and automatic callback. "I think once we get used to this it's going to make things a lot easier and the public a lot happier because they won't have to go through the switchboard," said City Manager Fred Poe.

Although the new numbers will be in place Monday, those dialing 683-4281 won't find themselves lost in a black hole.

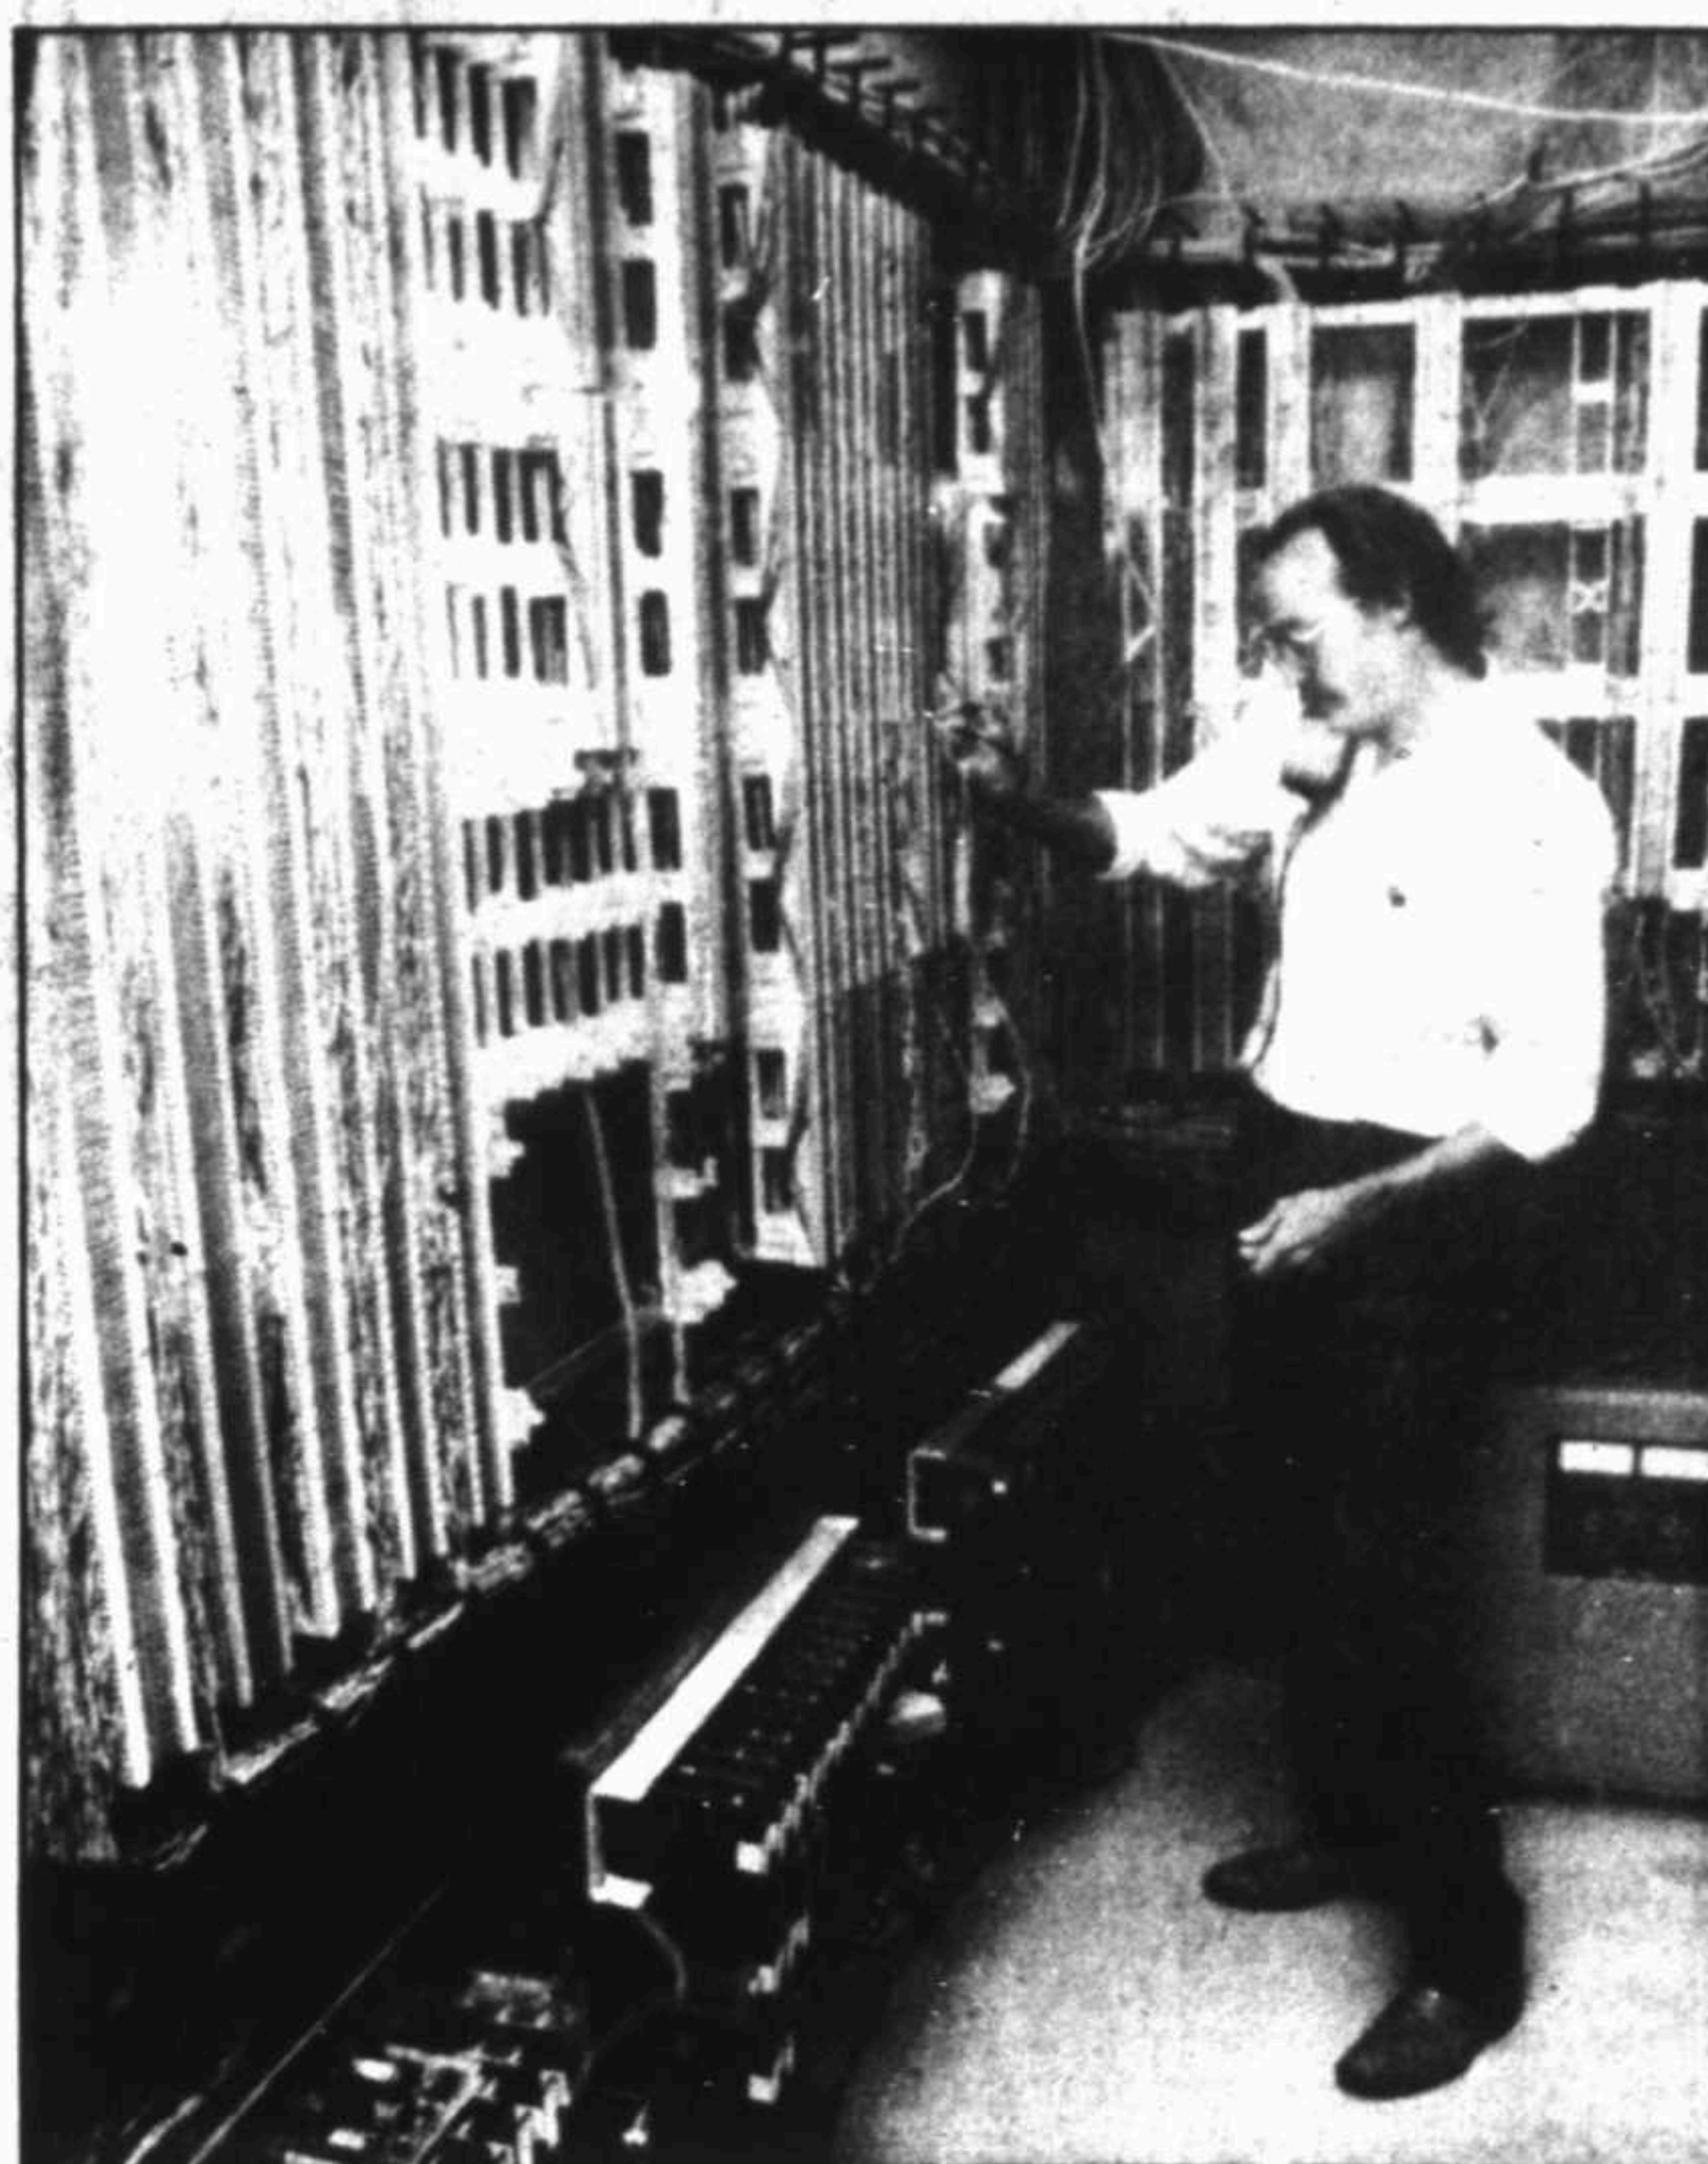

That's because the old number automatically will roll into the new. "You will still get city hall if you dial it," said Poe. "We expect it will roll over for about a year."

In preparation for the cutover, city officials arranged with Southwestern Bell to print several of the new numbers in its 1988-89 directory. Those direct lines can be found on page 89 of the white pages.

This week, COM Shop began reprogramming the existing on-site computer to interface with Southwestern Bell's central switch.

Despite the change, Kendall said the work will have no impact on 911 — the all city/county emergency line.

"911 will remain up the entire time," he said. "Right now, all we're getting ready to do is take the old system down at 5 p.m. Friday."

Mark Bailiff, president/system technician for COM Shop-Midland, is busy at work in the basement of city hall, where work is under way to switch the administration building and other outlying offices to a new phone system. The scheduled cutover is set for Monday.

New child services line installed

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

City Hall isn't the only Midland institution seeing phone system changes.

A new number to report child abuse and lodge inquiries into adoption and foster parenthood is among recently installed telephone lines at the local Department of Human Services office.

The new number, easily remembered 686-CARE, should lead to more reports of suspected child abuse or neglect to DHS, the state agency mandated by law to investigate such cases.

"It's probably the most important number in town, along with the police and fire departments," Jeanie Hunt, the local DHS foster parent recruiter, said Thursday. "We felt like it was important to be more accessible to the Midland community because we want people to report child abuse."

Ms. Hunt said DHS staffers chose the new number and its implicit message when presented with a list of digits proposed for the office's overall system changeover. 686-CARE was the best message they could find.

Steve Peacock, a native of Newport Beach, Calif., dresses in front of an all-female audience on Thursday for the one-night, two-show performance by the Men of Chippendales. His antics generated howls of delight from a capacity crowd at the Hilton hotel, including Midlanders Beb Lopez, Olga Krevit and Gwen Sawyer.

Dancers tip city to 'ultimate girls night out'

By JULIE HILLRICH
Staff Writer

It was hot outside the Midland Hilton Thursday evening. Inside the hotel ballroom it was even hotter.

The one-night, two-show run of the Men of Chippendales, billed as the "ultimate girls night out," prompted 1,000 women to flock downtown for an evening of beefcake, biceps and brawn.

They weren't disappointed.

Five stars and three professional back-up dancers engaged the all-female audience in a "provocative" stage show created by award-winning choreographer Steve Merritt, to whom much of the success of Chippendales nightclubs has been attributed.

The "Welcome to Your Fantasy" performance offered spirited dance numbers, making use of mainstream rock, pop and heavy metal music to complement movements that combine gymnastics with jazz, ballet with break dancing and martial arts with modern dance.

The dancers portrayed a chauffeur, policeman, naval officer and recreated the dance that Tom Cruise — clad in white briefs and button-down shirt — made famous in the film, "Risky Business."

Steve Peacock, the show's master of ceremonies, maintains that the Chippendales phenomenon has more to do with the women who flock to see their shows than with the men who perform.

"It gives them a chance to get away from everything...to let their hair down," the Newport Beach, Calif. native and former stand-up comedian said.

Touche.

"They were the hottest thing since I sat in the sauna," observed Stephanie Brown, who celebrated her 21st birthday with the men of Chippendales by attending both performances. "They make your fantasies come true."

Dani Wright remarked: "Bodies like that ought to be out-lawed."

Peacock noted that not all of the Chippendales performances look the same and that the show offers something for everyone.

Chippendales began in 1979 at a failing Los Angeles disco. It was the idea of Bombay, India native Steve Banerjee, who calls the club a "Disneyland for Women."

After nine years, the show still opens to capacity audiences and women line up hours before the performance in hopes of obtaining a front-row seat.

Chippendales' overwhelming success in Los Angeles prompted Banerjee to open a similar club in New York in October 1983. The women of New York greeted the Men of Chippendales with open arms and have maintained their enthusiasm as the 500-capacity club continues to sell out night after night.

Chippendales has two touring road companies which perform in cities across the U.S. in addition to its permanent group.

With the outrageous success of their live performances, it was only natural that Chippendales enter the video market. Their first video, "Muscle Motion," was a 1985 aerobic exercise tape; and their latest effort, "Tall, Dark and Handsome," hit the shelves last July.

The 70-minute video-cassette integrates numbers from "Welcome to Your Fantasy" — filmed live at the Los Angeles club at a cost of $500,000 — with stylish and often humorous musical vignettes which also star the men of Chippendales.

The Chippendales concept has inspired a line of gifts and souvenirs, including a Chippendales calendar, which is purported to be the best-selling theme calendar of its type in the world.

MC early registration to begin third week

From Staff Reports

Response has been excellent for Midland College's new early registration system, which begins its third week Monday.

Because of the less crowded conditions, early registration will continue to be conducted in the Student Center from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

Students planning to enroll for credit courses for the fall semester should come to the Student Center in the following sequence: A-E Monday, Aug. 1; F-L Tuesday, Aug. 2; M-R Wednesday, Aug. 3; and S-Z on Thursday, Aug. 4. The same sequence will be followed the week of Aug. 8-11.

With the new system, students may complete enrollment forms, select classes and schedules, pay fees, and purchase books during one visit to the campus.

Those who choose not to pay fees during early registration have until Friday, Aug. 11, to pay fees. Those not paying by that time will be dropped from class rolls and would have to register again on Aug. 23-24.

"There's a great advantage for those who early register now," said Dr. Don Cates, associate dean of students and registrar.

in one visit and be assured that the schedule they desire as to classes and meeting times will be guaranteed. Those who wait may find that some classes might already be filled, especially those at the most desired meeting times or those having limited enrollment because of laboratory limitations."

For those not early registering, time permits will be issued during the week of Aug. 15-18. Those coming at that time will report for registration Aug. 23 or 24. Fall semester classes begin Aug. 29.

Fall class bulletins may be obtained at the college, all Midland banks, the Midland County Library, and the Midland Chamber of Commerce office. Information is available by calling 685-4501.

One-vehicle accident claims Juarez man

From Staff Reports

STANTON — A Juarez man was killed and another man slightly injured after the vehicle they were riding in flipped over on Interstate 20 in Martin County, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Jose Gomez Lopez, who was identified by a library card he was carrying, was pronounced dead at the scene about 11:30 a.m. by Martin County Justice of the Peace F.E. Kennedy, reports said. His age was not available.

The accident occurred about 11:20 a.m. on I-20 three miles west of Stanton. Lopez was driving a 1971 Volkswagen Beetle west, when he ran off the center median, then overcorrected back onto the roadway and skidded, reports said. The car then flipped end over end several times, and Lopez and a passenger in the car, 39-year-old John Franklin Secrest of San Francisco, were ejected. Secrest was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released this morning, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Neither man was wearing seat belts, according to the DPS.

Aerobatic Club shares proceeds with city

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The West Texas Aerobatic Club recently shared its proceeds from a June air show by donating $7,100 to three community-service organizations and to a tree-planting project at Midland International Airport.

"We thought we did better financially this year than we did in previous years in sponsoring air shows," said Paul Erdmann, president of the aerobatic club, which is affiliated with the International Aerobatic Club of the Experimental Aircraft Association.

The air show was "blessed" with good weather and "other things," including cooperation within the Midland-Odessa communities, he said.

The club donated $2,200 each to the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP), and to the Permian Basin Food Bank. In addition, the club gave $500 to the tree-planting project, which is headed up by Midland geologist Ed Vogler, chairman of Midland's Airport Advisory Board.

"Most of our club members thought those were the most worthy causes. They show the least overhead and achieve the maximum benefits to the most people."

— Paul Erdmann, club president thought those were the most worthy causes," Erdmann said of the service agencies. "They show the least overhead and achieve the maximum benefits to the most people."

"The Food Bank provides food for people who are going hungry," Erdmann explained. "We have little use for people who batter women, and, as pilots, we are vehemently opposed to any form of illegal use and abuse of drugs. In flying circles, you can't tolerate that."

And Vogler's tree-planting project to enhance the airport "is a pretty good cause out here, because West Texas needs trees," Erdmann said.

"It's great," Vogler said of the $500 donation. He noted that the aerobatic club is dedicating some of its air show proceeds to "improve the appearance of the airport."

Vogler said trees, such as live oaks, will be planted along the airport's streets and boulevards and in desert-like areas to grace the airport's landscape. The trees will be watered by a drip-irrigation system to conserve water, he said.

"It is important," Vogler said, "for our area to make a 'good appearance' not only to the individuals using the airport on a regular basis, but to the representatives (of companies and organizations) that visit Midland for the first time seeking to locate in the area."

Eleanor Josting, community relations coordinator for the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, said the center was "very pleased" with the $2,200 gift. "We are most appreciative," she said. The center's program is "expanding, and this will be very helpful."

"We are most grateful to the International Aerobatic Club for their generous contribution to the (drug-abuse) program," said Harold Schneider, chairman of the board of the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, which focuses on drug-troubled young people and their families and friends. The funds will enable PDAP "to continue its educational and communications" efforts, he said.

Dolly Neff, director of the Permian Basin Food Bank, said that the Food Bank's staff and directors were "delighted" to receive the donated funds.

"We are blessed," Ms. Neff said. "We will be able to use these funds toward building renovation" so that food items can be collected, sorted, stored and distributed more efficiently and effectively to agencies which are "feeding the needy in the Permian Basin area."

Dale Fowler, president of the Food Bank's board of directors, said the board is "very grateful" that the aerobatic club "had seen fit to honor us with this donation. We will see that it is put to good use."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

The Volunteer Center helps to match individuals with appropriate volunteer jobs. The Center also helps nonprofit organizations with their Volunteer Program development so that the volunteer that is referred will have a positive and worthwhile experience.

A national survey recently conducted says that 79 percent of people that do not volunteer don't because of lack of time. Forty percent are concerned over not being able to honor the volunteer commitment. Other reasons included health problems, lack of interest, too old or too young, lacking necessary skills, too costly, and not knowing how to become involved.

If you would like to become more involved in our community, please take a look at the volunteer opportunities below and see where your skills and interests would best fit.

■ Gain valuable experience in working with the aged and disabled by donating a few hours a week conducting home visits with Emergency Response Service subscribers.

■ Teachers are needed to teach planned curriculum to abusing at-risk, or troubled families. Training is provided. Approximately 4 hours per week.

Four Midlanders remain jailed on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Four Midland men — including a former Department of Public Safety officer — remained jailed today on drug charges after a three-month DPS investigation resulted in their arrests Thursday, the agency reported.

James Newton Woods III, 39, 1306 E. Chestnut, is being held in lieu of $75,000 bond on charges of delivery of marijuana and delivery of cocaine. Gregory Charles Bonner, 32, 3204 Park Ln., was charged with delivery of cocaine and is being held in lieu of $50,000 bond, according to DPS reports.

Guadalupe Jaquez Bonilla, 28, 1601 E. Walnut St., was charged with delivery of cocaine and is being held on $25,000 bond. Lester Young, 504 Storey Ave., was charged with two counts of delivery of marijuana and was ordered held on bonds totaling $20,000, DPS reports show.

The four men were arrested without incident at their residences by DPS narcotics officers and warrant officers from the Midland County Sheriff's Department, a report of the incident said. The arrests occurred between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m., reports said.

Two of the men — Woods and Bonilla — were arrested in connection with the same case. The other arrests were unrelated, according to the DPS.

The men were indicted by a Midland County grand jury Wednesday, and the indictments were sealed until their arrests, an officer involved in the investigation said.

The officer, who asked not to be identified, said the investigation began in April. One of the suspects, Woods, resigned from the Midland DPS office two years ago, where he had worked as a drivers license officer, the officer said.

Two area delegates attend annual ostomy conference

From Staff Reports

Alton Hatfield and June McNatt represented the Midland-Ostomy Association as delegates at the 26th Annual Conference of the United Ostomy Association in New Orleans, La., earlier this month.

Delegates representing the 750 chapters and satellites convened at the educational seminars and delegates meetings from the United States, Canada, Guam, Puerto Rico, and Bermuda. The United Ostomy Association is the second largest self-help organization in North America.

Members of the Midland-Ostomy chapter meet monthly to provide educational and mutual support to individuals who have or will have colostomy, ileostomy, or urostomy. Each year, approximately 100,000 surgeries are performed on the bowel or bladder which can result in a cure from some inflammatory bowel diseases, birth defects, and colon/rectal cancer. The surgery necessitates the wearing of an appliance, or pouch, on the abdomen to collect body wastes.

"The surgery does not impair an individual's ability to lead a normal and active life. Ostomates are male and female, of all ages, and have a variety of occupations. Ostomy surgery enables us to lead a productive existence and return to the lifestyle we enjoyed prior to surgery," said one of the delegates to the conference.

City to waive pet fees on Saturday

From Staff Reports

Both city and county health officials on Saturday will waive their respective licensing fees for residents who get their pets vaccinated.

The one-day moratorium — which will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Saturday — was declared earlier this week by the Midland City Council and Midland County Commissioners.

Because of the serious nature of the rabies problem, area veterinarians have agreed on a unified vaccination charge of $7 per pet.

While local veterinary offices will be opened during the specified times Saturday, residents are urged to try and make an appointment.

In addition to the local veterinary offices, Dr. David Scheele of Mobile Veterinary Services will have his mobile office parked at the Midland Animal Control center, 1601 Orchard Lane, on Saturday.

No one injured in fires

From Staff Reports

No injuries were reported in two fires which heavily damaged a mobile home in east Midland and an abandoned apartment complex in the south part of the city, Midland fire officials reported.

At 2:20 a.m. today, eight firefighters responded to a blaze at 910 N. Chukar Ln., at the Quail Ridge Mobile Home Park, 4001 E. U.S. Hwy 80. A mobile home at the scene was gutted, but the occupant and owner, Virginia Burns, was not injured.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, according to reports.

About 3:30 p.m. Thursday, five units and 14 firefighters responded to a report of a fire at the Lee Street Apartments, 500 S. Lee St. When they arrived, the abandoned complex was burning in several units.

The fire apparently started in the north part of a building, but investigators are not sure what was used to start the blaze, according to reports.

CAF to come to Midland

From Staff Reports

Midland will host the Confederate Air Force later this year and the Texas Reserve Officers of the United States in 1991, the Midland Chamber of Commerce Convention and Visitors Bureau announced this week.

The Flughaven Wingstaff of the Confederate Air Force, consisting of 11 Texas squadrons, will gather in Midland December 2-3. The group will hold its annual meeting at the Ramada Hotel. Between 150 and 200 aircraft enthusiasts are expected to attend, according to CVB Convention Coordinator Betty Sundry.

The Texas Reserve Officers Association of the United States also announced its selection of Midland as the site of the 1991 convention, which will bring approximately 150 delegates to the city. The Reserve Officers have selected Holiday Inn Country Villa as headquarters. LTC Martin Meissner, USAR, Midland, organized the local bid.

Computer items missing

From Staff Reports

Computers, printers, monitors and other equipment valued at more than $35,000 was reportedly stolen from a Midland County residence late Wednesday or early Thursday, according to the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

The residence, on County Road 145 west of Midkiff Road, was broken into through a back patio door between 7 p.m. Wednesday and noon Thursday, reports said.

Five computers and dozens of pieces of computer equipment, television sets and other electronic equipment were hauled off while the owners were not at home. The most expensive items reported stolen were a Compaq computer valued at $12,500, an IBM computer valued at $3,500, and an Echostar satellite receiver valued at $1,995.

According to DHS Area Administrator Ann Bradford, many of the numbers DHS clients are used to calling have been changed under the new system.

Ms. Bradford suggested that callers dial the office's new main number, 686-2200, to initially contact their regular case workers.

Of 686-CARE, Ms. Hunt said: "When anyone suspects child abuse or is concerned about the care of a child, they should call. Even if we cannot take a referral, we can let them know what we can do."

According to Ms. Hunt, "Child abuse is one of those societal sicknesses that affects every level. Not that everybody does it, but it knows no prejudice."

The number is answered by trained DHS personnel during business hours and carries an after hours telephone message that tells callers who to contact in a child abuse emergency, she said.

Other callers who are welcomed to dial the number are persons interested in becoming foster parents or in adopting children whose parents' legal rights have been terminated by the state.

"We would prefer it ring off the wall from people who want to be foster parents, but unfortunately, we get more calls from people who want to report child abuse," she said.

"We never have enough foster parents, but the needs are in different areas," she said. "We need more homes that will take teenagers. We also really need Spanish speaking foster homes."

Ms. Hunt said the kind of people needed as foster parents should love children and be healthy and well adjusted. She added that a good sense of humor is helpful.

Prospective foster parents also need not be married, a homeowner or "rich," she said.

While foster parents must have the ability to eventually separate from the children in their care, adoptive parents "need the ability to make a long-term, life-long commitment to a child," she said.

"It's not just a lifetime commitment," she said. "It's a commitment to make a difference in the lifetime of a child."

The department currently has "a strong need" for people to adopt older children," she said.

New Mexican government seeks funds to sell state to tourists

By JOAN GOESSL

This year could go down as a banner one for tourism in New Mexico, but Gov. Garrey Carruthers and state tourism officials say big bucks are needed if the state wants to remain a competitive player and hold on to its solid tourism industry.

Carruthers, speaking recently to the Albuquerque Convention and Visitors Bureau, said New Mexico ranks 39th among the states for its total tourism budget and 42nd among the states and last in the western region in terms of money spent on overall tourism advertising.

"We're running a major league program on a minor league budget," he told the group.

The state's 1987-88 tourism promotion budget was about $2 million, a 1 percent increase over the previous fiscal year but miles away from the tourism budgets in Texas ($15 million), Colorado ($9 million) and Arizona ($4 million).

"We feel — and I guess the numbers prove — that if you promote a state the tourism will automatically come. It's something that happens almost immediately," says Eddie Smithson, tourism and travel director of the state Economic Development and Tourism Department.

Tourism was worth an estimated $2 billion to New Mexico in 1987, including $122 million in state and local taxes, says Mike Pitel, a travel writer and marketing analyst for the department.

And if early indications come true, that $2 billion mark should be topped by the end of this year — thanks in part to tourists' resurging interest in the City Different.

"Santa Fe is doing gangbusters nationally," Pitel says.

No wonder.

A national cookie company has brought the "Santa Fe" cookie to the country's supermarket shelves. A perfume manufacturer has marketed a "Santa Fe" cologne. And magazine and newspaper articles across the country have featured articles on what has been dubbed the "Santa Fe style," a catchall for everything from southwestern clothing to literature.

By way of showing how much interest in New Mexico has increased, Smithson points to the mere 138,000 vacation guides left in the warehouse — which means almost a half million have been distributed to people who requested them.

A look at how several tourism programs have grown in the past decade points to a longterm push for a stronger industry, Pitel says. Among the programs he cited:

■ The Welcome Center Program that began in 1969 has grown to seven centers, including one in Gallup that will open next month. The centers, located along major highway access points, provide motorists with travel literature, maps, weather information and lodging costs, among other things. The number of people who used the centers doubled from 1980 to 1986 — a record year with 588,000 people. Last year the program handled 565,000 travelers.

■ The Travel Liaison Program that began in 1981 with one person working exclusively with travel agents has grown to a two-member staff that attends trade shows in the United States and overseas.

■ The Travel Writer Program, which provides free articles and photographs on request to the print media, was responsible for about 20 percent of the 4,000 articles written about New Mexico last year in publications across the country.

■ The Tourism Inquiry Program, in which people can learn about the state's tourist attractions by calling a toll-free number, fielded more than 80,000 inquiries from January through June. That number reflects a 108 percent over the same period last year.

The state's Tourism and Travel Division also is working on a five-year development plan aimed at molding tourism in New Mexico into a strong and more competitive industry. The plan will be presented to the 1989 Legislature.

Among its proposals is one calling for a quarter-cent hospitality tax the industry would use for marketing tourism.

The tax on businesses such as hotels, restaurants, amusement parks, gas stations and certain retail shops and entertainment facilities could raise as much as $4 million to $6 million annually, Carruthers has said.

The governor, who has authorized a study of the plan, acknowledges that the proposal likely will meet resistance from the businesses that would be taxed.

Smithson, a longtime advocate of the tax, believes the chances of the Legislature approving the tax are favorable.

Emmett Day holds the $50,000 gold and wood flute — which he made — after it was returned by a "fence" in Tacoma, Wash. The instrument was among some items stolen from an art gallery July 8.

Shady operator instrumental in flute's recovery

SEATTLE (AP) — A $50,000 gold and wood flute stolen from an art gallery has been returned by a "fence" who realized it was "too hot" to handle.

Emmett Day, the artist who made the one-of-a-kind instrument with 21-karat gold keys, springs and mouthpiece, said Wednesday the recovery was "amazing."

"Everything that happened to it has canceled out the evil of that original impulse (the theft)," Day said.

The flute has been played by such musicians as James Galway, Day said. The flute and other works by Day were stolen July 8 from the Northwest Gallery of Fine Woodworking. No one has been arrested, police said.

Tuesday, "we got a call from an attorney in Tacoma who said 'if your name is Emmett Day, this is your lucky day,'" Day said.

His wife, Therese, said the thief had sold the art works for $3,500 to a dealer in stolen goods "who read about the theft in the paper and realized he shouldn't destroy them, and he couldn't resell them because they were too hot."

The "fence" then contacted the lawyer, she said. Except for some small scratches, the flute and other articles "were not really hurt," Ms. Day said.

Day said he's unsure whether he will put the flute on display again.

Yard's 'natural' beauty too much for neighbors

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — An artist's definition of beauty has some of his neighbors arming themselves with lawnmowers and pruners.

Neighbors call Ladislav Hanka's overgrown front yard an eyesore; he calls it a "natural meadow and wildflower preserve."

"To a golf course owner, they're weeds," said Hanka, whose art specializes in nature scenes. "I see it as beautiful and I see it as something becoming increasingly beautiful."

But many of the neighbors who have complained to city officials since Hanka moved in March 1987 say the half-acre, weed-infested lot is becoming increasingly ugly.

At a recent City Commission meeting, Hanka's next-door neighbor Scott Temple said the yard was "totally unkempt" and hurting property values.

City Attorney Don Schmidt told the commissioners the lawn's weeds and vegetation constitute a violation of the city's weed ordinance and are a potential fire hazard.

Hanka, however, said he has spent hundreds of dollars and countless hours planting and weeding. Nonetheless, he was notified by the city this month that if he didn't mow his lawn the city would perform the task and bill him for it.

The commission has since backed down from that stand, and directed the city attorney to come up with an amendment to the weed ordinance that would permit such wildflower meadows in the city. The commission will then vote on the amendment.

"It's all comes back to that beauty is in the eye of the beholder," said Garry McCormick, chairman of the city's Environmental Concerns Committee.

Bush will win Texas, manager says

AUSTIN (AP) — George Bush's national campaign manager says issues — not running mates — will make the difference in Texas.

Lee Atwater, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press, said he doesn't think a majority of Texas voters will be swayed by the choice of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as vice presidential candidate with Gov. Michael Dukakis.

"We've got a lot of respect for Bentsen's potential in Texas. But ultimately in this campaign, it's Michael Dukakis vs. George Bush. When we start talking about those and other issues — and the stand the vice president is going to take of those issues — George Bush is going to win Texas going away," Atwater said Thursday.

Texas has the third-largest number of electoral votes up for grabs in the presidential election, with 29. In addition, no Democrat has been elected to the White House without carrying the state.

Democratic nominee Dukakis underscored the state's importance when he chose Bentsen as his vice presidential running mate.

But Atwater, while not denying that Bentsen's selection was a good political move, insisted that Bush can carry the state he calls home.

"He (Dukakis) made a fine choice," Atwater said of the Bentsen selection. "It's going to be interesting to see how it all works out. He and Lloyd Bentsen have such opposite philosophies about the government and the world."

Bush will officially be declared the Republican nominee at next month's GOP National Convention in New Orleans.

During last week's Democratic convention in Atlanta, Bush came in for both criticism and jokes about his connection to Texas. Railroad Commissioner John Sharp, for example, called the state the home of 16 million Texans "and one tourist" from Maine during the convention's presidential roll call.

A Massachusetts native, Bush moved to Texas in 1948 and represented the state in Congress during the 1960s. He currently has a home in Maine, but maintains a Houston hotel as his voting address.

Atwater said the campaign has no worries about the vice president's image with Texans.

"If the election was a question of who had the best one-liners, David Letterman would be president. But it's issues, and Texans are plenty smart on the issues," he said.

He also discounted the effects of the Democratic convention's news coverage, calling it "a honeymoon glow" that will fade.

"People aren't going to decide this on any kind of...fogged-up show," he said. Rather, he said issues on which the voting will turn include taxes, gun control and crime.

"That glow can't hide the fact that Dukakis is going to raise taxes if he's elected. Dukakis has been in charge of a state government that's raised spending at twice the rate of the federal government," Atwater said.

'Sagebrush Rebellion' sprouts in Bentsen speech

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is seasoning his Western campaign with a Democratic version of the Sagebrush Rebellion that helped sweep the Republicans into the White House eight years ago.

Ronald Reagan capitalized on the independent spirit of the West by promising to get government off the backs of the people. Bentsen, campaigning for the vice presidency as Michael Dukakis' running mate, sounded a lot like Reagan in a speech in Reno, Nev., on Thursday.

"If there is one lesson we have learned in recent years, it is that the federal government can't solve all of the (nation's) problems," Bentsen said.

"But," he said, trying to make that compatible with Dukakis' promise of an activist government, "Washington can lead."

Bentsen promised the convention of the National Conference of State Legislators that a Dukakis-Bentsen administration would not be "imperial and overbearing." He said Dukakis, as a governor, understood that problem and he, as a Texan, understood the West.

"I think what you see in a candidate like myself, one from a state like Texas, which shares a lot of the Western concerns and objectives, is someone who can converse on the problems with an experience and background that has compatibility," he told reporters.

By putting him on the ticket, Bentsen said Dukakis was "saying to Democrats who went and voted for Reagan, come home, there's a place for you in this party."

Dukakis, he said, would "see that Westerners were very much a part of the administration and in highly responsible positions, Bentsen said, adding that he would push for that also.

The Democratic ticket lost all but Minnesota and the District of Columbia four years ago. Although no schedule has yet been made, the Dukakis campaign plans to use Bentsen as a tool to lure back not only his native Texas but also the Southwest, South and California.

Bentsen began his first solo tour as the vice presidential nominee Wednesday in New Mexico and campaigned on Thursday in San Francisco prior to his Reno trip. He planned to visit a child care center in Los Angeles today before heading to a rally in Amarillo, Texas. Dukakis, meanwhile, was on a campaign swing through the Midwest.

The two men made a joint campaign trip immediately following last week's Democratic National Convention with stops in Texas, California, North Dakota, Missouri and Pennsylvania.

In San Francisco on Thursday, Bentsen asked for union support of the ticket at a convention of the United Food and Commercial Workers.

State police to investigate officer shooting

ACOMA, N.M. (AP) — An FBI spokesman said Thursday state police will take over the investigation into the shooting of an Indian police officer and subsequent arrest of two Cambodians.

Because police initially believed the shooting Wednesday had occurred on reservation land, the FBI entered the case. However, FBI special agent Doug Beldon said it had been determined the rest stop actually is located on state land.

"We'll do all the paperwork and turn it over to them (state police)," said Beldon.

Acoma policeman Don Chino, 53, was shot three times at a rest stop off Interstate 40, about 18 miles east of Grants. He underwent surgery late Wednesday at the University of New Mexico Hospital and was in satisfactory condition.

Also wounded in the incident was Hak Chea, 24, who along with 14-year-old Peng C. Lim, was arrested in a desolate area south of the interstate. Authorities said both Chea and Lim were believed to be from Arlington, Va.

Chea also was hospitalized in Albuquerque and listed in satisfactory condition. Police said Chea was wounded in a shootout with Chino at the rest stop.

Chea and Lim also are accused of taking a 74-year-old California real estate agent hostage after fleeing from the rest stop. John LaFavre of Apple Valley, Calif., was released unharmed shortly before law enforcement officers arrested Chea and Lim. LaFavre and his wife were en route to visit their daughter and grandchildren in Abilene, Texas when their trip was interrupted.

Lim remained Thursday in the Laguna Pueblo Jail and was expected to have a court appearance Friday in state district court at Grants.

On 12th anniversary of shooting, relatives of victim want Davis tried

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Relatives of one the victims of the so-called "Man in Black" killings say they will use the 12th anniversary of the shootings to make a new plea for once-wealthy Cullen Davis to be tried in the death of former Texas Christian University basketball player Stan Farr.

Relatives of Farr say they will hold a news conference Tuesday on the steps of the Tarrant County Courthouse to demand that District Attorney Tim Curry reopen the case.

Farr and 12-year-old Andrea Wilborn, Priscilla Davis' daughter, were shot to death in the August 2, 1976, shootings at the Davis mansion. Priscilla Davis, who was engaged in bitter divorce proceedings with Davis at the time, and Gus "Bubba" Gavrel, were wounded by the so-called "Man in Black."

"I don't want a penny of his money," Karen Farr, Farr's ex-wife, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram Thursday. "I want a guilty verdict."

Several witnesses identified Cullen Davis as the killer, but jurors found him innocent in the death of Andrea Wilborn in a celebrated 1977 trial at Amarillo.

Other charges, including a murder count in the Farr death, were later dropped by Curry.

Steve Sumner, a lawyer who represents Davis, said the family's actions were "offensive to me and they'll probably be offensive to a lot of people."

"I find it incredulous that they would be utilizing the criminal justice system to gain leverage in their civil suit and to gain money from Cullen Davis," he said.

Karen Farr had brought a wrongful-death lawsuit against Davis on behalf of her two children.

The wrongful death case, pending for 12 years, was moved to the back burner last year when Davis, once considered one of the world's wealthiest men, filed for bankruptcy.

"We were awfully traumatized by the whole episode and continue to be every year," Ivonne Farr of Corpus Christi, Farr's sister, said. "We want something to be finished in this thing. This man (Davis) did something against God's law and against man's law. And he's walking around scot-free."

Curry was out of town Thursday and could not be reached for comment, a secretary in the district attorney's office said.

"We want this thing ended, even for Mr. Curry's sake, because we don't know what his thinking was in dropping the case," said Ivonne Farr. "We feel like public pressure is the only thing that is going to get him to talk to us."

Sumner said there is little chance that Curry will retry Davis because of the legal prohibition against trying a defendant twice on the same charges.

"The issue of whether Cullen pulled the trigger has already been litigated," he said.

Kurt Wolfgang, a Maryland attorney representing the Farris, says he has a theory about why Curry doesn't want to try Davis in the Farr shooting.

"He had a rough case and he got his nose bloodied," Wolfgang said. "But all he's lacking is a conviction and he'll never get a conviction by letting this case slide."

Bustamante seeks relief for migrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Labor Department is putting the finishing touches on an emergency aid package for thousands of migrant workers stranded in the drought-parched Midwest, a spokesman said.

Rep. Albert Bustamante has been seeking humanitarian aid for migrant and seasonal workers who were unable to earn a living this summer because of the drought.

He says thousands are scattered across the Midwest without enough money to return home, creating a desperate situation "we can no longer continue to ignore."

Bustamante appealed to Labor Secretary Ann McLaughlin and other Reagan administration officials to draft a package of humanitarian aid for the migrant workers, many of whom are from Texas.

Labor Department spokesman Bob Zachariasiewicz said Thursday the agency "has a plan of action" but it won't be unveiled until Mrs. McLaughlin, who is overseas, gives it her final approval. An announcement will be made next week.

A source said the package would total $4 million to $5 million but "the final distribution is just not set on paper yet."

In his letter to Mrs. McLaughlin, Bustamante said: "Migrant workers pinned their hopes on a successful harvest and invested their personal savings to search for field work. Drought conditions have dashed their hopes for employment and for recouping their financial losses."

"Because the president's emergency relief program is directed solely at the farmer level, migrant workers and their families have no safety net to relieve their conditions. Measures taken to date have allowed migrant laborers to fall through cracks."

Bustamante, a migrant worker for 23 years and the son and grandson of Mexican-American migrant workers, said he still has relatives who travel from Texas to Minnesota to harvest sugar beets.

The San Antonio Democrat estimates the the stranded migrant and seasonal worker population at about 10,000, but said it is difficult to get a true figure because "they don't have a high profile...They're not a voting bloc like some others that make a lot of noise."

"Exhausted of their personal financial resources, they have no money for temporary shelter and food," he wrote. "Many would like to return home, but they cannot. They are broke, indebted, stranded and dependent on the kindness and charity of local efforts."

Bustamante said local organizations do not have sufficient resources to help the migrants, and although the state of Texas received $3 million to $5 million in dislocated worker assistance under the Jobs Training Partnership Act, it cannot spend the money beyond the state line.

He said he is seeking funds to provide shelter, food and job-search assistance to migrants who want to stay in the Midwest to help farmers salvage crops, and to give others who want to return home money for travel.

Bustamante also sent his appeal to President Reagan, Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, and Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

FAMILY MATTERS

Behavior results in consequences

EDITOR'S NOTE: Last week, the telephone number for information about Adult Children of Alcoholics (ACoA) was published incorrectly. The correct number for the Council on Alcoholism is 682-4721.

By JIM MAY

DEAR FAMILY: Please list some important rules with appropriate consequences for varying age groups: preschool, primary, intermediate and high school. As a parent, determining appropriate consequences is most difficult for me.

Thank you for your help. NEEDS HELP

May

DEAR NEEDS: Many of us have problems disciplining our children. This problem-handling model proposed by Dr. Michael Popkin should be helpful.

When it is the parent's problem, the first step is to send the child a clear "I" message; the next step is to establish a consequence for the problem. To determine who owns the problem, ask yourself:

- Does this behavior interfere with me directly?
- Who is raising the issue?
- Whose purposes are being thwarted?

For example, if your children are noisy in a restaurant, you son drives your car too fast, or your child has a temper tantrum in a store — these are all the parent's problem, because the parent realizes that the children's behavior disturbs other people, the parent must teach the child to drive responsibly, and the child's temper tantrum is interfering with the parent's shopping trip.

Once you have established it is your problem, you can convey exactly how you feel about the behavior. Use the message to emphasize your feelings about the child's behavior, not the child.

The four steps to sending "I" messages are:

- Name the behavior or situation. "When you don't pick up your clothes off the floor..."
- State how it makes you feel. "I feel you're being unfair to me..."
- State your reason. "Because I have to pick them up..."
- Say what you want done. "I would like you to pick them up every time without my having to remind you."

If that solves the problem, you are home free. If it doesn't, you must decide natural or logical consequences for your child's action or behavior.

Natural consequences follow naturally from the action — a natural consequence of touching something hot is to get burned. Natural consequences are often helpful, but you can't always let your child experience them — the natural consequence of not studying is failing in school; the natural consequence of not brushing teeth is tooth decay.

Logical consequences are deliberately established to teach your child what happens when family rules are violated. Here are some logical consequences for different age groups:

- Preschool: Not putting toys away now, or I will put them up for you and you can't play with them until tomorrow. You choose.
- Primary: Not making up the bed. "When you have made up your bed, then you may come back and watch television."
- Intermediate: Not mowing the lawn. "When you have mowed the lawn, then you may go play basketball."
- High school: Staying on the telephone too long. "I know it will be hard, but you must either limit your calls to 15 minutes each, or not talk on the telephone for an entire day. You choose."

Expect your child to test you on this process. Be firm, but gentle. Remember that you are choosing the logical consequence that follows when your child violates a family or social rule.

DEAR ABBY

Taxpayer thinks funding inmates' education wrong

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY:

The feature story of today's newspaper was the coverage of a college graduation ceremony.

All of the graduates were incarcerated at one of our state's prisons.

We helped them obtain full college degrees.

Abby, I take as many college courses as my available time allows, and it costs me a bundle to pay all my regular living and eating expenses.

I've looked for help. You have to be poverty-stricken before you can qualify for government help.

It hurts me more to strive for my education than if I was in prison. Doesn't it seem that something is turned around?

DARRELL BROWN, ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.

DEAR DARRELL:

I applaud a system that enables prison inmates to become college graduates at the government's expense.

Too bad every law-abiding person in the USA who wants a college education isn't given the same break.

DEAR ABBY:

For five years I was with a wonderful man I'll call "G." We got along very well and, despite several setbacks, we seemed perfect for each other.

We even talked of marriage and spending the rest of our lives together.

During the last three years of our relationship, G. lived in a distant state, and we saw each other only twice in all that time.

Each visit was wonderful. We kept in touch, though it was very hard to be so far apart.

Over Christmas this past year,

DEAR ABBY:

I have a problem I've never seen in your column.

At the dinner table, my husband gobbles down his food, then starts eating off my plate!

I am a slow eater, preferring to take my time and enjoy my meal.

Am I wrong to say that he is rude? Or should I put up with it and get used to the idea of eating half a meal? — SPEEDY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE:

Your husband is rude, and you may say it. But what makes you think you have to put up with it? Simply tell "Speedy" to slow up, and if he's still hungry after eating his meal, suggest that he take a second helping and kindly keep his marauding fork off your plate.

AT WIT'S END

Call of wild cash found in pet store

By ERMA BOMBECK

I defy anyone to walk into a pet store and come out with what he went in for. Everything is calculated to attack your purchasing immune system, beginning with the little bells on the door. These little suckers don't jangle to let the storekeeper know someone is entering the store; they're a warning system to alert the animals that a credit card is approaching.

At the sound of these bells, birds come out of their hypnotic state and begin singing and speaking in entire sentences. Puppies stand on their hind legs and wag their tails. Hamsters head for the exercise wheel (which is always oiled), and kittens look like orphans that Miss Hannigan abuses in "Annie."

If I can possibly resist buying a pet, I still have to run through the obstacle course of pet products.

When my kids were small, one of my sons won a goldfish at a carnival one Saturday night by throwing a pingpong ball into a glass. The chance cost 25 cents. We brought the fish home in a Dixie cup.

The next day we went to the pet store to buy a fishbowl. The salesman said, "You're going to raise an 'only goldfish.' He'll need playmates." He picked out three other goldfish and then said, "You can't have four goldfish stuffed into a bowl. You need an aquarium. Here's one called 'Condo-by-the-Sea.'"

The counter began to fill up with snails to clean the side of the aquarium, little tablets to fight algae, colored gravel, a net, a castle and a mermaid on a rock.

We prepared to leave when he said, "Of course you have a supply of food, treats, vitamins and supplements." We shook our heads numbly. "A healthy fish is a happy fish," he smiled.

Three months later, the fish were dead and the aquarium caught fire from pollution.

At present, I am "into" birds. I cannot go into a pet store without emerging with designer treat sticks, little bells to relieve their boredom, and elaborate jungle gyms with ladders and ring swings.

I popped in last week to buy a few bags of food and came out with another pair of birds. Sometimes I wonder if they even know they sleep each night under a Laura Ashley cage cover.

Some coaching practices dangerous

By SHEILA
SOBEL MORAMARCO
Copley News Service

The blazing dog days of summer have arrived. As temperatures soar, one Dallas heat expert warns against the dangers of overexertion.

Athletes — young and old — can and should protect themselves from the effects of heatstroke, says Dr. James Knochel, professor and vice chairman of internal medicine at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

"Left untreated, heatstroke is always fatal," he explains.

To stress his point, Knochel assembled some old coaches' tales that could, if followed, kill an athlete.

Such methods were in practice 25 years ago, he says, and "although improvement has resulted from dedicated efforts to correct these illusions, it is evident that they persist, since deaths continue to occur."

BASED ON misconceptions, here are Knochel's suggestions on "How to Kill an Athlete."

■ Method 1 — Schedule practice sessions between the hottest hours of the day, 2:30 to 6 each afternoon.

■ Method 2 — Don't provide water during the practice sessions. If you do, make the water tepid. "Put it in an old milk can with a sweat sock containing oatmeal and salt. This will assure that no one will consume water even if it is available."

■ Method 3 — Encourage ingestion of large quantities of sodium chloride tablets on the way to the practice field, even if water is not provided.

■ Method 4 — Help overweight athletes lose weight more rapidly by giving them diuretics. Have them sweat it off by a sauna bath or take an extra 20 laps or so around the track while wearing a plastic suit.

■ Method 5 — Make your players wear their entire football uniform, complete with helmet, throughout each practice session during the hot, humid days, so that they may be toughened up.

■ Method 6 — Don't stop wind sprints at the end of each practice session until a sizable number of the players vomit, have muscle cramps or collapse.

■ Method 7 — Everyone can superachieve with amphetamines. If someone asks if your players use them for this purpose, offer a non-committal expression. Look up, glance to the right, pucker your chin, extend your fingers, and hold your hands supine at the shoulder level.

KNOCHEL IS serious when he says that "intentional or even permissive dehydration is treacherous."

Too often it leads to exertional heatstroke, caused by heat generated during muscle activity — in other words, during exercise or work. The heat accumulates faster than the body can dissipate it. Exertional heatstroke can affect any person who overexerts himself.

Another type, classic heatstroke, occurs with or without exertion and is usually caused by an inability of the circulatory system to respond to heat stress. The result is that not enough sweat is produced to cool the body.

CMS Graphic

A number of conditions make an individual more susceptible to heatstroke, including heart disease, obesity, the use of certain drugs, as well as alcoholism and diabetes (both of which can result in dehydration and malnutrition).

To keep the summer sun from taking its toll, experts in internal medicine and sports coaches advise priming young athletes with water before games and practices begin. Free and easy access to water is essential during strenuous, outdoor activities.

Athletes should guzzle water until they can't drink anymore, and that's still not enough.

"Not only should coaches and trainers provide the kids with water, they should make sure they drink it. Meanwhile, athletes should not be expected to do more than they are qualified to do," Knochel says.

"BEFORE WORKING out in the sizzling heat, athletes should eat salty foods. There is no need for salt pills, which usually make one nauseated. Instead, athletes should eat salty foods or sprinkle foods with extra amounts of salt when they eat."

Along with the extra salts, Knochel tells athletes to drink enough water to exceed sweat loss or weight loss in practice.

Athletes can also mix up a "replacement solution" to drink over the course of one hour before charging out onto the field or track, says Knochel. To 1 quart of cold water or unsweetened Kool-Aid add one-third teaspoon salt and 5 teaspoons sugar, he says.

As for dehydration, thirst is a lagging indicator that the body needs water. If you are taking in enough fluids, at least once during the day you should be able to produce virtually clear urine. The yellower it becomes, the more dehydrated you are.

Knochel says that acclimatization is important for athletes to work comfortably and safely in the summer heat. If you are not acclimatized, the fluids lost by sweating and shunting of blood to the skin lowers blood volume. If this becomes severe, blood flow to the brain falls and you may pass out.

The key to acclimatization is slowly and gradually to build up the tempo of the exercise from day to day.

"At the end of two weeks athletes will be fully acclimatized, but that doesn't guarantee there will be no trouble," Knochel says. "When there is the combination of high heat and high humidity, you just can't cool yourself."

EARLY SYMPTOMS of heat exhaustion are headache and nausea. These are followed by cramps, fatigue, malaise and mild confusion. Heat exhaustion can lead to heatstroke.

People in heatstroke are in a comatose state; that is they are unresponsive to any external stimulation. Sweating usually ceases, so their skin is dry, flushed and extremely hot to touch. Body temperature is usually more than 106 degrees Fahrenheit.

"If their temperature reaches 108 F, the heat starts altering proteins, which is what the whole body is made of," says Knochel. "What happens is that every tissue and organ — including the brain — gets cooked. At that temperature you are likely to have permanent brain damage."

First aid for heatstroke is to lower the body temperature as quickly as possible. Your first inclination is to call an ambulance, but the victim could die before the ambulance gets there.

Get the victim out of the sun, remove his clothing and douse him with water. Use a piece of his clothing or whatever is available to fan him. The goal is to imitate the sweating mechanism. As sweat evaporates from the skin, it cools the body. This technique could save the victim's life before the ambulance arrives.

Camping easier with free booklet

Copley News Service

The decision to go camping before school starts again was made weeks ago: that was the easy part. Since then, you have journeyed hither and yon in your search for all the right equipment for you and your family. So far so good. But now you have to get sleeping bags and it suddenly occurs to you that you don't know the first thing about sleeping bags, except that you sleep in them.

You have a couple of choices: You can hazard a guess and buy bags that aren't quite right or you can send for the booklet titled How to Select a Sleeping Bag, published by Du Pont, and get the facts before you buy.

This 10-page guide lists the most important considerations in a sleeping bag purchase.

Send a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to Du Pont Sleeping Bag Brochure, P.O. Box 5054, Ronks, Pa. 17573. Ask for How To Select A Sleeping Bag.

Booklets offer summer fun, fitness

Copley News Service

Pool days, pool days, dear old golden, cool days. ...
 Oops. Right tune, wrong words. We know it sounds corny, but we tend to break into silly sentimental songs like that one when we see the brochures called Pool Days: Ideas for Fun and Fitness and Knowing How to Dive. Those titles make us recall the warm days and cool pools of summers past and they inspire us to initiate new traditions of poolside fun and fitness.

Pool Days, a 12-page tip booklet, convinced us to incorporate swimming in our personal exercise programs and to organize plenty of pool parties. Oriented toward pool owners, the illustrated booklet offers ideas for aquatic recreation.

Featuring 1984 Olympic Diving Champion Greg Louganis, Knowing How to Dive provides specific, important tips on diving safety. As Louganis says on the cover of this six-panel brochure, "Knowing how to dive can be worth more than gold. It can be worth your life."

So why don't you dive into these freebie booklets? They may not move you to sing silly ditties like ours, but they will help you turn ordinary recreation into safe, exhilarating, memorable fun.

Send a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to National Spa & Pool Institute, How To Dive & Pool Days, 2111 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va. 22314. Ask for How To Dive & Pool Days.

WIMPs in space

Copley News Service

Galaxies, stars, planets, even human beings may be nothing but a minor pollutant in our universe, according to the latest research in physics.

Top physicists from universities the world over now suspect that 99 percent of our universe is made of something we never have seen, heard or even thought of until just the last decade.

The experts say most of our universe may consist of WIMPs, which stands for Weakly Interacting Massive Particles.

WIMPs apparently are so small that in the span of one second, billions of them pass through every square inch of our bodies — and all ordinary matter — without hitting a single atom.

Watson wins City golf

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Thursday's championship match between Susan Britton and Lia Watson in the finals of the Midland Women's City Golf Tournament was billed as the proverbial contest between the wily veteran (Britton) and the young upstart (Watson).

Youth was served, however, as Watson made short work of Britton to win their match 7 and 6 at the Green Tree Country Club. The former Arizona State University golfer was five holes ahead at the turn and clinched after the 12th hole.

Ironically, neither player has played much golf this summer. Watson has been touring with her husband Montie, a touring professional, while Britton has kept busy by conducting a series of "self-improvement" seminars.

Time away from golf hasn't hurt

Britton in the past, but the 50-year-old said her lack of course time was a factor in Thursday's match.

"I was rusty with a capital R," Britton said. "Anytime I got in that deep grass, I was in trouble."

In addition to her problems with the rough, the defending champion had to deal with a red-hot Watson.

"She really is a nice, capable player," Britton said. "I just didn't hit it today."

Britton has won so many city championships that she can't even remember how many it's been. "It's been 15 or 16, you just kind of lose count."

"You bet, I'll be after her next year."

Despite a commanding lead after nine holes, Watson said she couldn't let up against Britton.

"I knew she wouldn't let up," Watson said. "Match play's a lot different from medal play because you can put a bad hole in the past."

"I felt very comfortable with my swing, but I really thought it would go 18," she added.

Watson said some extra practice after Monday's qualifying round helped her breeze through the rest of the tournament.

"I wasn't comfortable with my swing that day, so I went out and practiced hitting balls off the tee."

Tournament publicity chairman Shirley Mays said the players were pleased with the tourney's rotating format using all four local courses, as opposed to playing the entire tournament at one course.

"It just opened up everything," she said. "Doing all four courses is a bigger test of golf."

TL office docks Oliveras

Angel manager suspended 15 days

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Midland Angel manager Max Oliveras has been handed a 15-day suspension and an undisclosed fine for his part in a bumping incident with home plate umpire Todd Freese Wednesday night.

The punishment was delivered Thursday night by Texas League president Carl Sawatski and, in effect, amounts to half of what remains of the 1988 Angel season.

Pitching coach Tim Kelly will serve as acting manager during the suspension, which began with Thursday night's 5-4 loss to Shreveport. Oliveras will return during a home game, Saturday, Aug. 12.

THE CONTROVERSY — which has prompted Angels general manager Bill Davidson to order security for the umpires' protection in tonight's game — occurred in the eighth inning of Wednesday night's 10-6 loss to Shreveport. Oliveras, disagreeing with a ball-strike call made by Freese, expressed his anger by yelling at Freese from the dugout.

At that point, Freese started toward the dugout and Oliveras started toward Freese. Two or three "bumps" took place and a question remains as to who instigated the physical contact.

After crew chief Jeff Henrichs filled an umpire's report with the league office concerning the incident, Henrichs, Sawatski, Oliveras and Angel general manager Bill Davidson took part in a conference call at 6:30 p.m. Thursday. It was at that point when Sawatski handed down his decision.

At the same time, it was decided by Sawatski that no disciplinary action would be levied against Freese.

"All I can say," Henrichs said, "is that there was a conference call (Thursday night) before the game. We presented our side to the league president. He then read back that report out loud to Davidson and Max, and Max had a chance to give his side. I then responded and Mr. Sawatski made his decision. That's all I can say."

Freese has been issued a gag order by the league and is not permitted to talk about the controversy.

Davidson, who admitted to not seeing the incident, did say the team will appeal the decision and, in fact,

"It's (...) and you can quote me on that. (Freese) instigated it, but it's their report and we have to live with it."

"We're upset and we have no recourse against the ump. There's nothing we can do...the players have to sit back and take it."

Gerber also noted that following Thursday night's game, yet another incident between the Midland players and the umpiring crew took place.

"As we were going into the clubhouse," Gerber said, "(the umpires) said, 'You guys just don't learn do you?' What they meant was if we don't shut up they're going to keep us."

HENRICHS confirmed there was an exchange of words but did not say who said what. What Henrichs did say, though, is that the "You guys just don't learn" comment was not without provocation.

"They popped off to us after the game when we were walking off," Henrichs said. "It was a cheap shot and they were frustrated."

"They're getting paid to win and they're not. If they can't blame it on themselves then they'll blame it on the officials. That's just what happens in the heat of battle. They got beat and they were frustrated. But in a game when they score two runs in the top of the ninth (Thursday) and then lose, I don't think the umpires had anything to do with it."

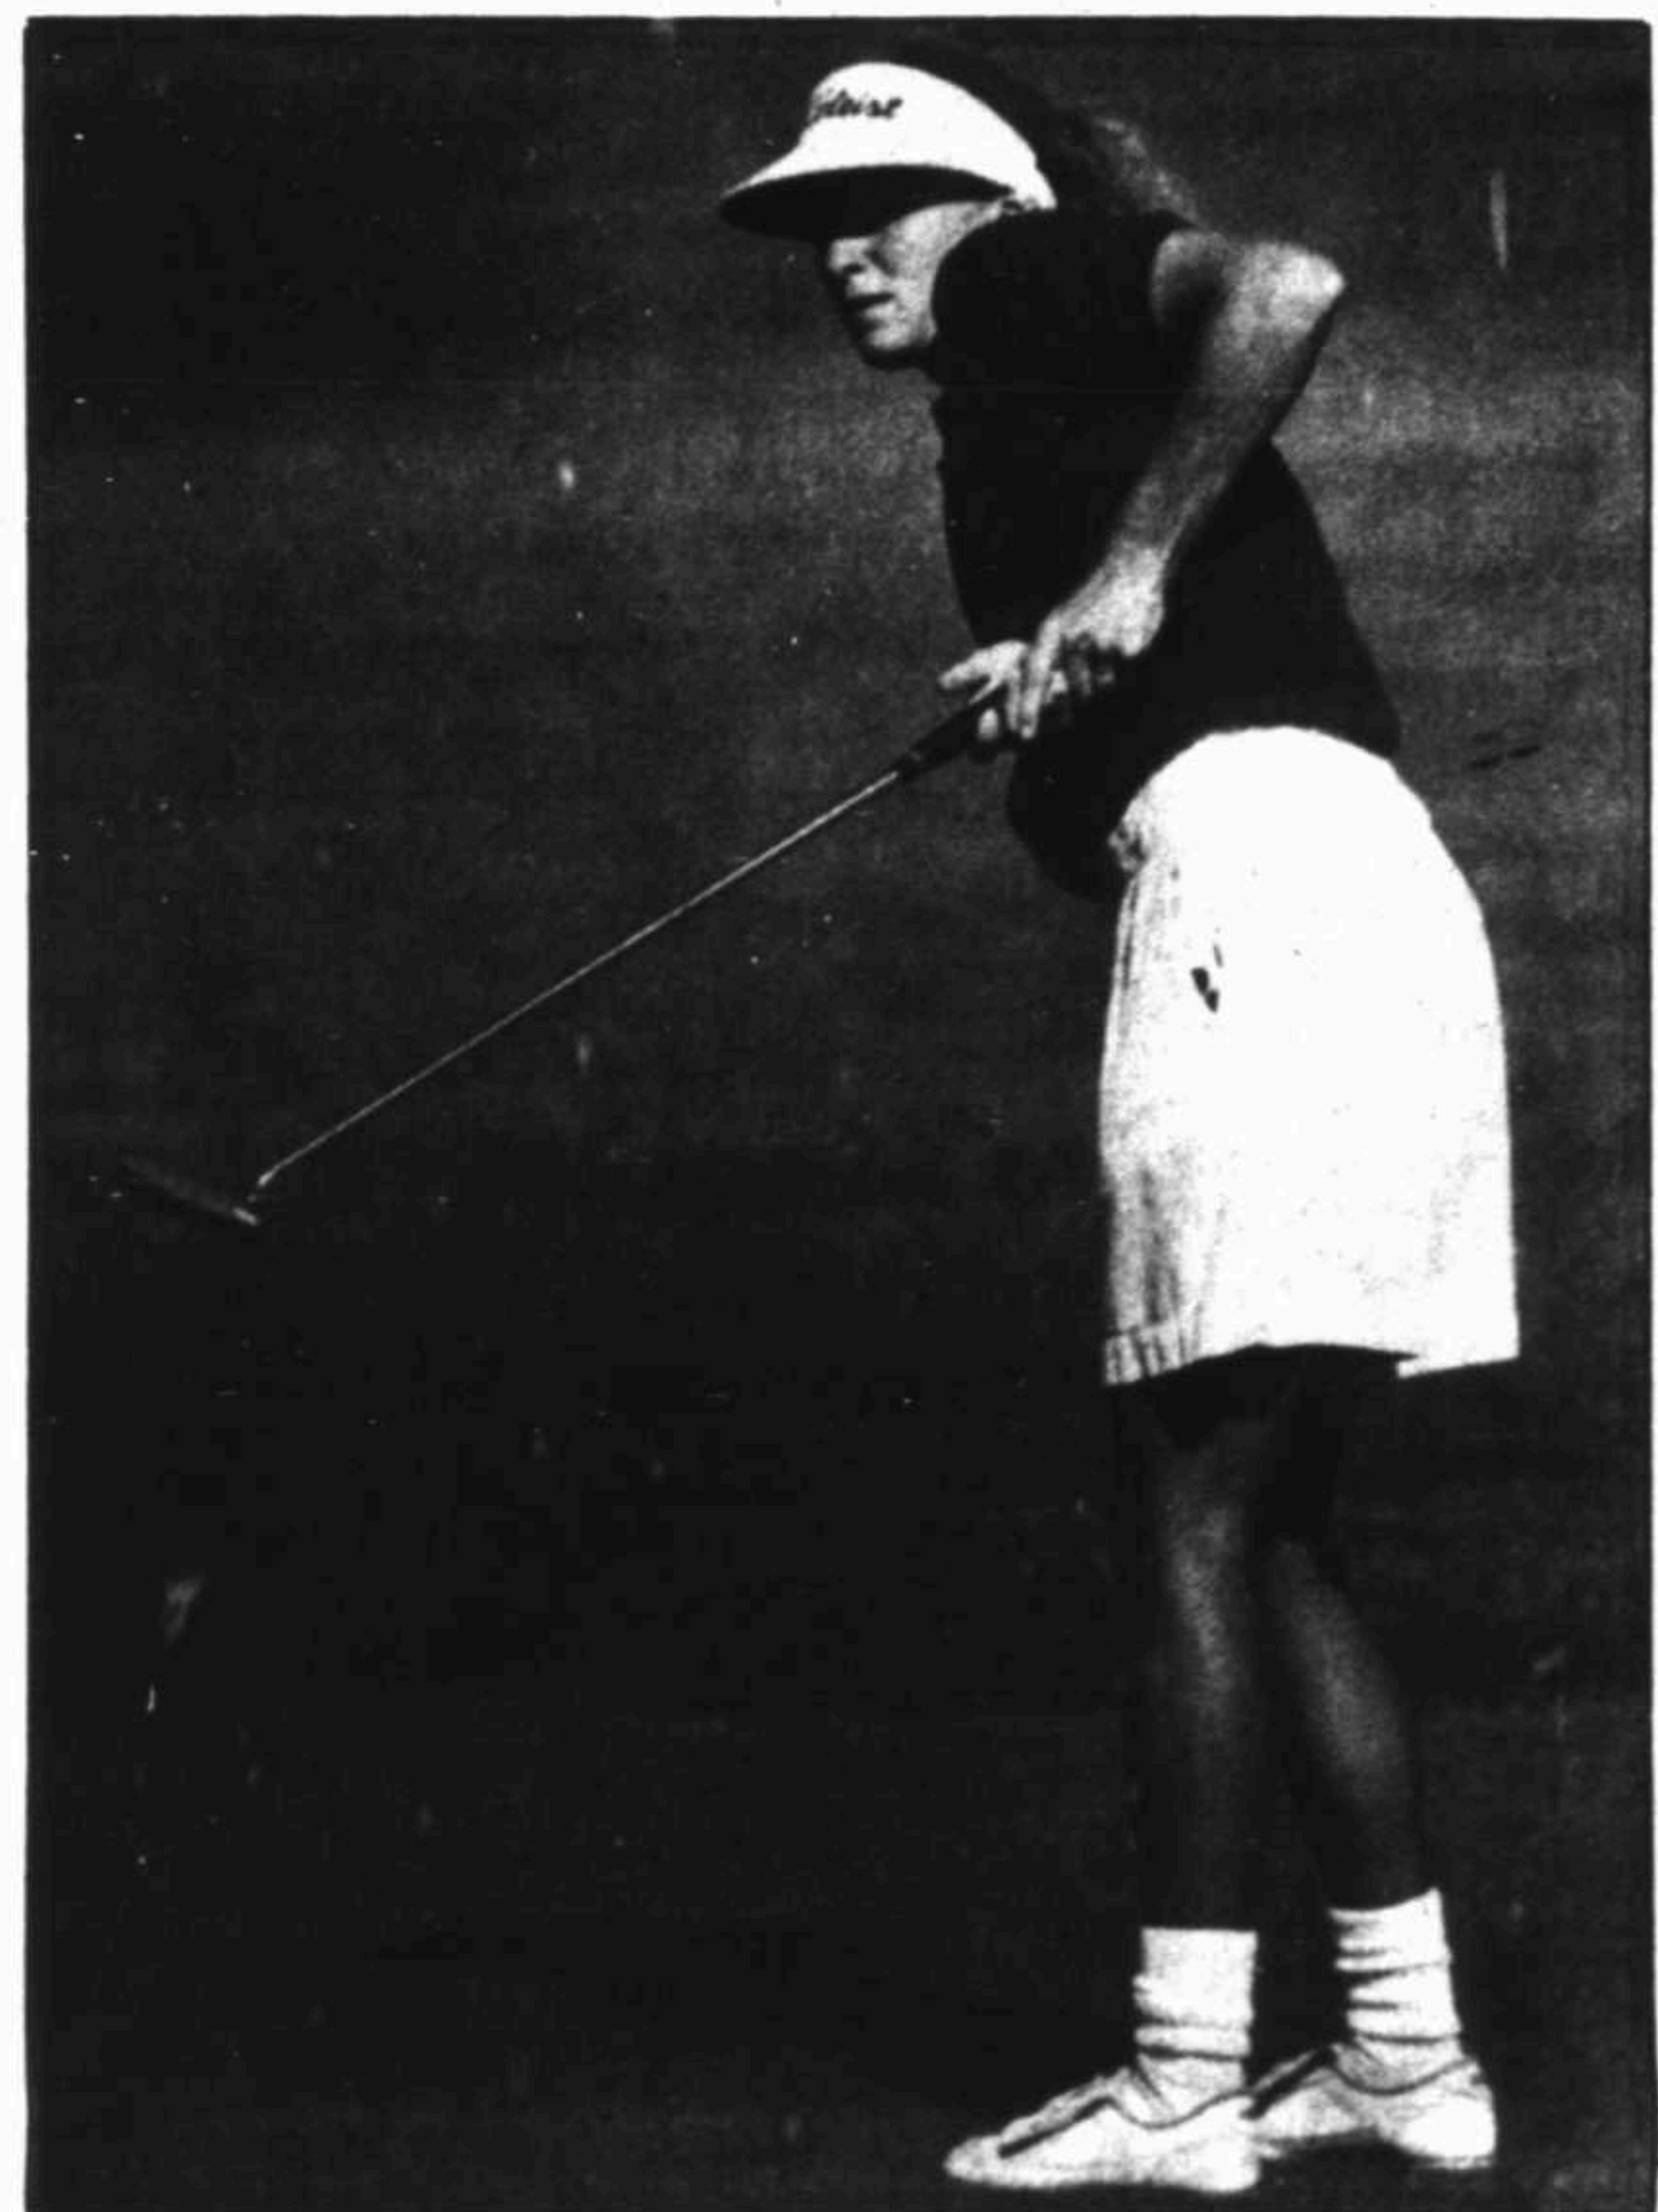

CONCERNING Wednesday night's shoving match, outfielder Dan Grunhard said the problem in the minor leagues is a lack of second viewing of such and occurrence.

"You have no film, no television coverage to see what happened," Grunhard said. "The ump can write whatever he wants and send it in. What happened was quite obvious: (Freese) was baiting Max."

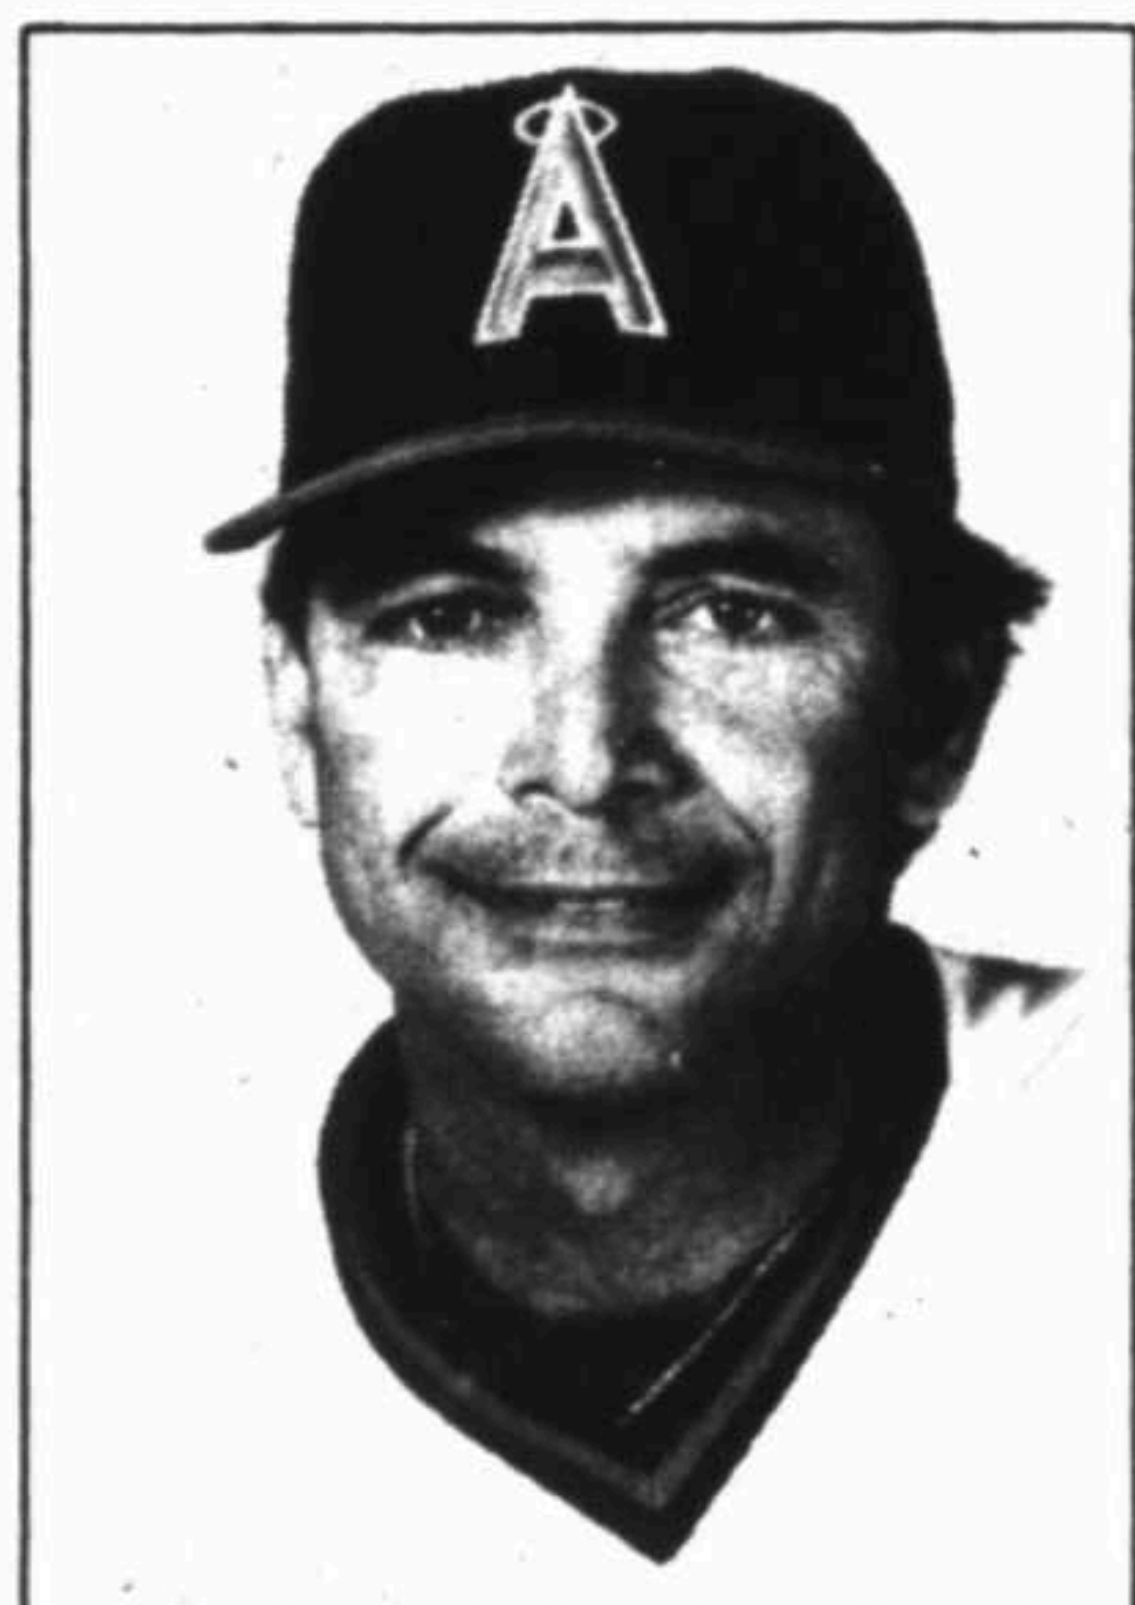

Grunhard said that Sawatski's decision to penalize Oliveras but not Freese was "unprofessional as far as I feel. The league president came down hard but he can't just do it on a phone call and a report."

Acting manager Kelly, visibly upset after the loss Thursday, said the loss will surely have an effect on his players.

Midland loses 4th straight

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

The ugly side of baseball continued to rear its head Thursday night as the Angels dropped their fourth straight game to the Shreveport Captains, 5-4.

Talk after the game centered not on an eighth inning comeback by the Angels that was thwarted by a last inning rally by Shreveport, but on Angel manager Max Oliveras' suspension following a shoving match Wednesday with home plate umpire Todd Freese.

Oliveras was slapped with a 15-day layoff and an undisclosed fine by Texas League president Carl Sawatski after being ejected Wednesday night for arguing a ball-strike call (see related story).

NC LL wins Waco berth

From Staff Reports

The Midland North Central Little League All-Stars earned a trip to the State tournament at Waco by defeating Pecos, 11-4, at Hogan Park. The victory was the second straight in the best-of-three series after NC lost a 5-4 thriller in the opener.

North Central took charge early, grabbing a 3-0 lead in the first. Chris Connally walked, Alex Hale, Kevin Jordan and Brian Quinonez singled for the runs.

Pecos loaded the bases in the next two innings, but couldn't score. North Central then struck for two more runs in the third on single by Connally, double by Brian Henderson and single by Quinonez.

In the fourth, the Midland nine added to its lead. Justin Goodman and Eric Benavides walked and a run scored on an error at third.

Pecos finally got its offense perking with three runs in the bottom of the fourth. Gary Michaelis singled, Joe Urquidez was hit by a pitch and then Jaime Mendoza and Arturo Hinojosa singled to make it 6-3.

North Central got the runs back in the fifth as Hale and Jeff Pursley singled, a ground out by Kevin Jordan and a sacrifice fly by Robert Noble did the job.

Two more runs in the sixth wrapped it up for North Central. Connally doubled and Henderson hit a homer. Pecos added a final run in the sixth, but it didn't even make the final outcome close.

Goodman went the distance for North Central, working his way out of trouble in every inning but the fifth. He gave up only six hits, but kept the pot boiling with nine walks. Ruben Baca, Bobby Valencia and Michaelis all had a try at stopping the North Central offense, but were unsuccessful.

Connally, Henderson, Hale, Pursley and Quinonez all had two hits to pace the 11-hit NC attack.

At Waco, North Central will face 15 of the top teams in the state in a single elimination tournament starting Aug. 8. The winner goes to Florida for the final competition before the LL World Series at Williamsport, Pa.

Who landed first bump? Sawatski rules against Max

Without instant replay, the aggressor in Wednesday's belly-bumper poika at Angel Stadium will have to remain a matter of opinion.

The big question remains: Who landed the first bump?

The next question centers around the weapon employed. Was it a bellybust or a chest-to-chest confrontation?

As far as can be determined, there was no precipitous in either direction as the principals spewed their verbal venom.

Battles

Above all, who was the aggressor?

AS A refresher, Midland Manager Max Oliveras was given the heave hoe by plate umpire Todd Reese in the eighth inning of a 10-6 Shreveport victory.

It was a one word ejection that did not refer to anyone's family background, personal idiosyncracies or prowess of any type.

Just one word, as pitching coach Tim Kelly maintains, a word that might be uttered in an pastoral setting.

Kelly concedes it was not muttered, but loudly said emphatically, but, my gosh, an ejection from more than 90 feet away?

THE WAY things had gone earlier in the game, Oliveras had plenty of provocation for an expletive or two, whether it was directed at a symbol of authority or the performance of a team that was playing like a bunch of Texas Leaguers, for crying out loud.

But back to the actual chest-to-chest and the perpetrator of contact...press box opinion seems to be that umpire Reese made first bump, predictable, perhaps, since this was a Midland press box.

The dissenting voice came from the Shreveport broadcasting booth...

WITHOUT benefit of a replay, I wouldn't attempt to venture a verdict, it all happened so fast. The combatants rushed at one another. There was contact and, no question, it was an animated tableau of hot-footed principals for a while.

They were quickly separated, but the hand waving and finger pointing was far from over.

So Texas League President Carl Sawatski meted out his punishment from a phone interview in which none of the versions was coldly impartial. What the TL president did was throw the book at Oliveras, a fine and 15-day suspension.

That still doesn't solve the deeper problem, the conviction of many managers umpires are out to get their teams.

Billy Martin's run-in with an umpiring crew and the ill-advised ultimatum of American League umpires that Martin had better stay in the dugout or else only served to lend credence to such beliefs.

Oliveras expressed the opinion that the Reese crew had it in for Midland, an opinion offered in the heat of the post game moment. Post game comments Thursday from the men in blue certainly won't help dispel that opinion.

Rhubarbs are part of the game. Fans love 'em, as long as they are not too frequent. And in games in which the home team is soundly thrashed and plays poorly, rhubarbs give writers covering the game an opportunity to ignore the debacle they have been witness to.

Sometimes a manager may use a temper tantrum as a device to stir up his team. Basketball coach use the technical foul as such a tactical weapon.

It's too bad if either side, the umpire or manager, takes it as something personal because it's a part of the game that won't go away until electric eyes are used to call balls and strikes and NFL-type instant replay is employed to settle close plays.

They have a saying down on Wall Street: "Bulls make money, but Pigs go broke." Had South been playing duplicate bridge, there might have been some justification for his play; at rubber bidge, there was none at all.

Since South was prepared to play at the five level, he cue-bid the enemy suit. North judged that his semi-solid six-card suit merited a jump to slam, and South thought long and hard about bidding a grand slam, but let prudence carry the day.

West made his normal lead of the ace of hearts, ruffed by declarer. After drawing all the outstanding trumps, declarer took the diamond finesse. East ducked smoothly.

Impressed by the way things were going, declarer returned to his hand with a club to the king and repeated the diamond finesse. East won and exited with a heart, and in the fullness of time declarer had to concede a club trick for down one.

At duplicate, overtricks are vital, and we have sympathy for an argument that claims it is correct to repeat the diamond finesse. However, we have found that anytime you make a slam contract you rate to get a better than average score. That is especially true in this case, because collecting 12 tricks at a spade contract scores more than making 13 in a diamond small slam.

Whether at duplicate or rubber bridge, once the first diamond finesse won we would have taken the club finesse! Even if it loses, there are 12 tricks. When it wins, we would have crossed to the ace of diamonds, intending to repeat the club finesse. As it happens, that would become unnecessary, but we would have saluted East for his effort.

Cher blames media glare for incident involving boyfriend, photographer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cher blamed pesky paparazzi and the frustration of living under the media spotlight for a smash-up involving a photographer's car and a Ferrari driven by her boyfriend.

The actress' boyfriend, Robert Camilletti, 24, also denied he tried to run over the photographer and said he lost control of Cher's sports car while swerving into the driveway of her home to duck photographers camped outside.

The wreck outside Cher's home Wednesday heavily damaged both cars. No one was injured.

Camilletti, a former New York bagel maker, pizza chef and bartender, was arrested and booked for investigation of felony assault with a deadly weapon on free-lance photographer Peter Brandt, 35.

In a news conference Thursday closed to most freelance photographers and the tabloid press, Cher defended her boyfriend.

"I know Robert. He is not a violent man. This is not Sean Penn and Madonna," she said, referring to the pugnacious actor who's had a number of run-ins with photographers.

She quickly added that Penn, Madonna's husband, is "the sweetest boy I've ever known" and that his outbursts also were triggered by intense media scrutiny.

"I never had any intention of ever hurting anyone at any time," said Camilletti, who is pursuing an acting career and recently completed shooting of "Loverboy" with Kate Jackson and Kirstie Alley.

"He tried to kill me. He tried to run me over at a high rate of speed," Brandt said after the accident. "I was within my rights. I would never do anything illegal."

Cher and Camilletti, both clad in black, went over a litany of grievances they said stemmed from the attention the media has paid to their relationship.

Since Cher won an Oscar for her role in "Moonstruck," she said various publications have reported that the couple is planning to marry, that she is pregnant, which she denied, and that she has undergone drastic plastic surgery to maintain her willowy figure and high-cheeked good looks.

"I've been doing this for 25 years, and so I'm pretty much used to having my private life destroyed and lies told about me," said Cher, who began her career in the 1960s as half of the husband-wife singing duo Sonny and Cher.

AUSTIN (AP) — A key figure in mental health reforms and the wife of a former state senator, Helen Farabee has died of respiratory failure at Seton Medical Center.

Mrs. Farabee, 53, is credited with helping found the state's Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and was director of public policy for the Benedictine Health Resource Center in Austin at the time of her death.

"Helen Farabee's contributions to the poor, the sick and the needy of our state were beyond description," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. "They will live long after her, because she was the defender of those who had few others to speak for them."

"Everything that she attempted was always for someone else," said state Rep. John Gavin, D-Wichita Falls.

The wife of former state Sen. Ray Farabee, she had been suffering from lung cancer. She was pronounced dead Thursday night at the hospital, where she had been re-admitted Sunday for treatment of respiratory distress.

Mrs. Farabee initially was admitted to the hospital on June 28 after she became ill on a trip to Wisconsin. She was released on July 9 after receiving chemotherapy treatment.

Born in Green Bay, Wis., she graduated from the University of Wisconsin in Madison. She married

Cher and her boyfriend Robert Camilletti speak at a press conference Thursday in Los Angeles after an incident involving Camilletti and a photographer outside Cher's home.

Ray Farabee in 1958 and they moved to Wichita Falls in 1961.

Farabee resigned his senate seat in February to become a vice chancellor for the University of Texas in Austin. Mrs. Farabee sought an appointment to fill her husband's senate vacancy, but was unsuccessful, prompting the couple to move to Austin a few months ago.

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Elderly small-town Mississippi blues singers are being tapped as historians by a new National Public Radio series in which they share their memories and music to help young blacks understand their rural roots.

"Blues is not entertainment only," said Walter Liniger, whose 10 interviews with local blues lovers are woven together in the oral history and music series, "The Original Down Home Blues Show."

"Blues players have often been compared to the 'griot' in the African tribal system. The 'griot' was the storyteller, singer and historian of the tribe," Liniger said.

"In a sense the blues player once had a similar function: He/she processed and voiced in his/her own way the emotional undertows of the black community," said Liniger of the Blues Archive at the University of Mississippi.

Syndicated by National Public Radio in January, the program already has aired on 12 stations around the country, said Craig Koon, president of Media Productions International, which covered the project's $23,000 and provided technical assistance.

Thirty-four other stations are scheduled to begin broadcasting the series soon, Koon said. His company, based in Memphis, Tenn., is negotiating with an underwriter to fund additional interviews with aging blues men and women.

Liniger, a Swiss-born musician, said he didn't interview any well-known musicians. He was interested in the everyday men and women, ages 60 to 80, from the rural South.

"If you go back to the early part of this century where the idiom of blues begins to sort of take shape, then the (blues) records or people's memories are the only thing we have to document a certain aspect of the black experience in this country," Liniger said.

Greenspan: No need to alter policy

By ROBERT D. HERSHEY Jr.
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said on Thursday that nothing had happened in the past few weeks to alter economic prospects or, by implication, the central bank's monetary policy, which currently stresses heading off any resurgence of inflation.

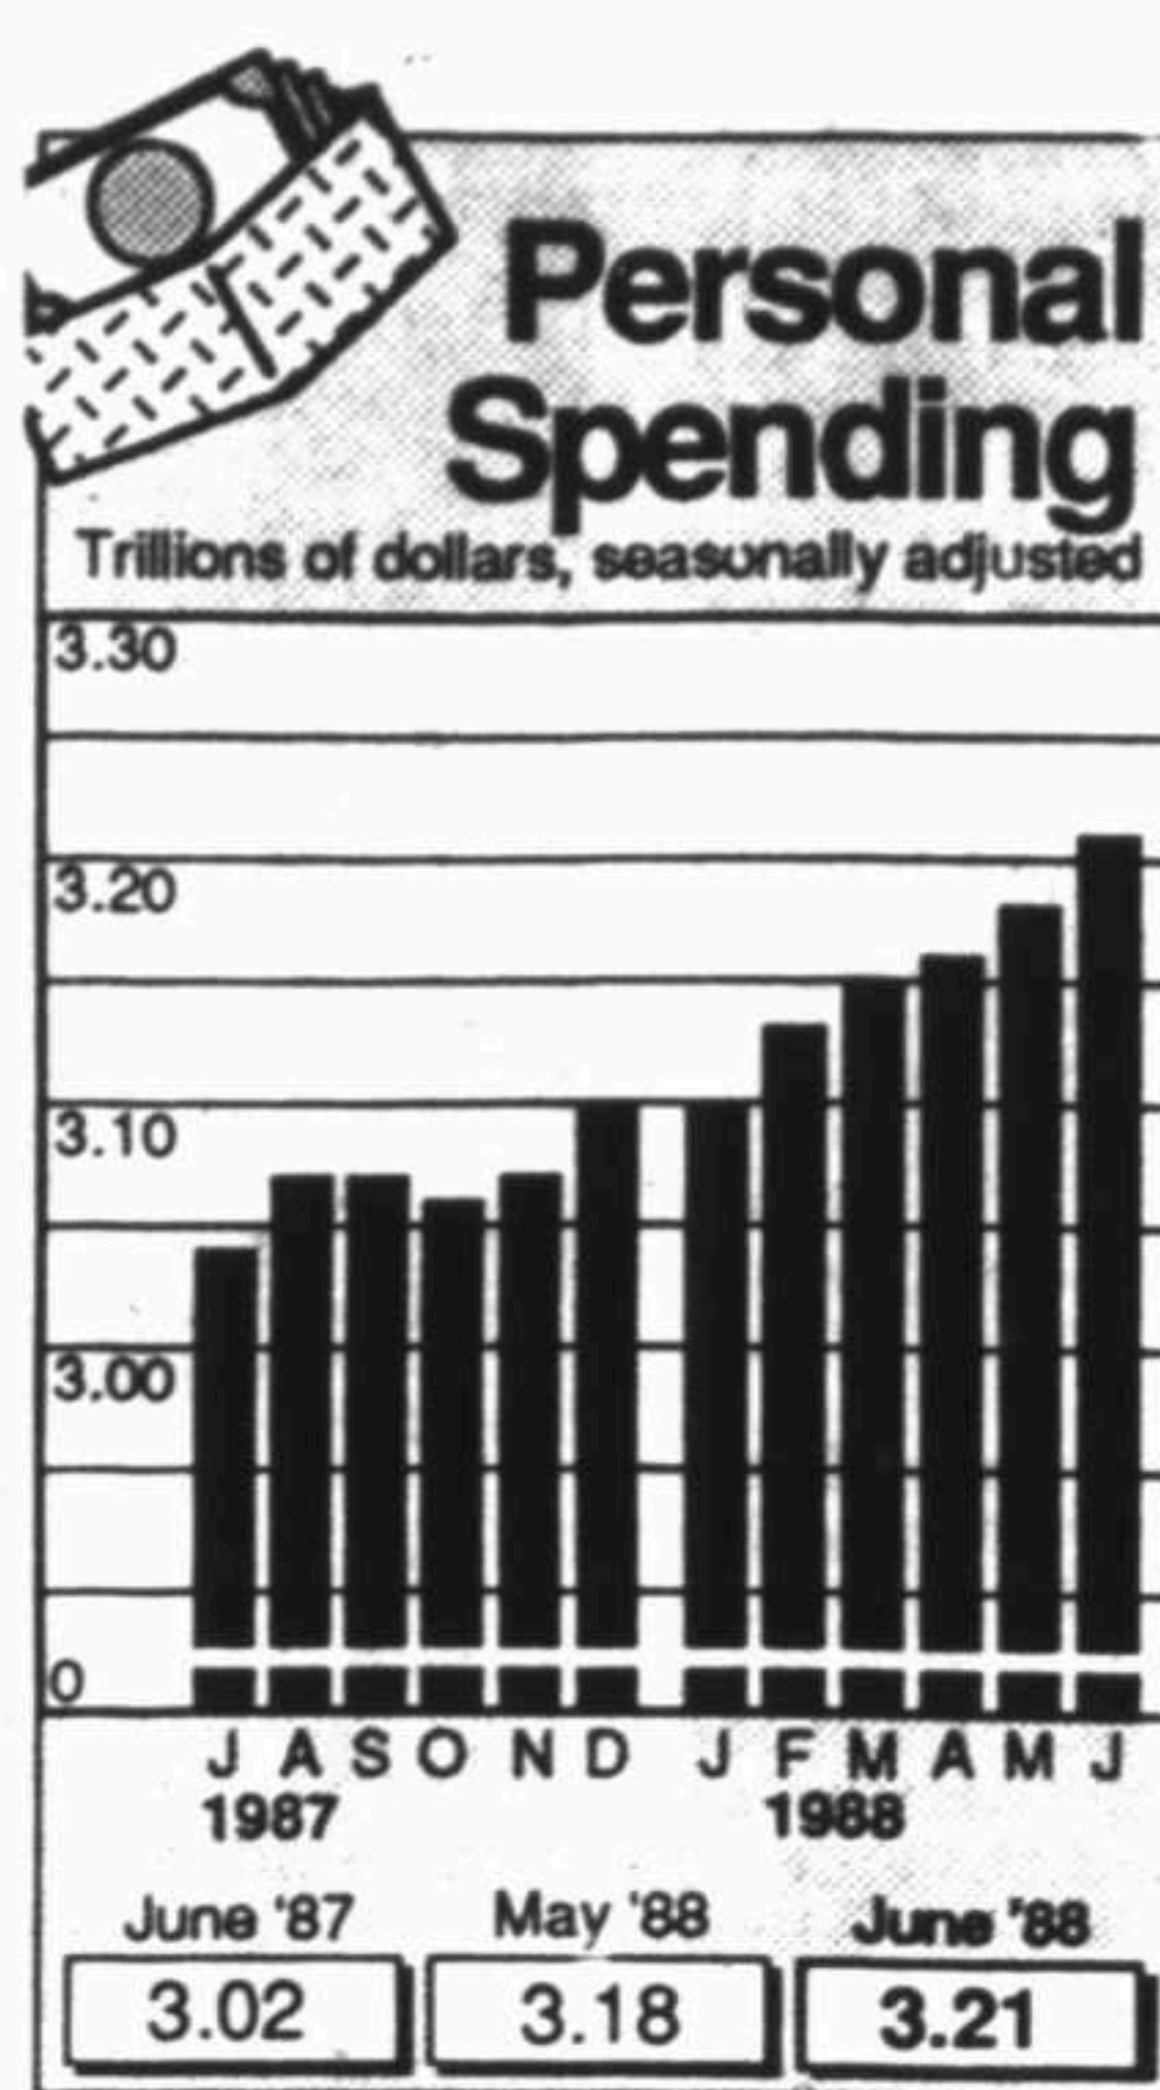

Greenspan did tell a House subcommittee that he found it "a bit surprising" when a Commerce Department report on Wednesday showed that inflation accelerated in the second quarter, but he indicated that this probably was a problem of statistical calculation rather than of substance.

According to the Commerce Department's report, inflation (measured by the GNP fixed-weighted price index) picked up to a 4.7 percent rate during the spring from 3.5 percent in the first quarter.

The report prompted fresh conjecture as to whether the Fed might decide to take yet another step in the series of small steps it has taken this year to raise interest rates, thereby slowing the economy.

But Greenspan seemed content on Thursday to remark that little of the price information was new and to suggest that the Fed, interpreting that data, came up with a lower projection than the Commerce Department did. He said a slowing in growth of the gross national product, to a 3.1 percent annual rate from 3.4 percent, was as expected — as well as hoped for.

Two weeks ago, appearing before a Senate committee to disclose the Fed's forecasts and policy goals for the rest of the year, Greenspan warned that if the economy did not slow of its own accord the Fed would have to raise interest rates further.

Greenspan referred then, among other things, to the low unemployment rate — its 5.2 percent for June is the lowest in 14 years — but on Thursday he let pass an inviting chance to express serious concern over tightness in the job market.

Responding to a question by Rep. H. James Saxton, R-N.J., Greenspan

Consumers spend more

Associated Press

The government says consumer spending increased at the fastest pace in 10 months during June, but Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan has renewed a pledge to keep a tight rein on credit to control inflation.

The Commerce Department on Thursday said personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything except interest on debt, shot up a seasonally adjusted 1.0 percent in June, the steepest climb since a 1.3 percent gain last August.

The report was disappointing to many economists who were expecting growth in consumer demand to slow in order to narrow the nation's trade deficit.

In another economic report, the Labor Department said import prices, one of the main inflationary threats facing the U.S. economy because of the weaker dollar, rose 2.7 percent in the April-June quarter, the biggest increase in more than a year.

The climb followed a 1.2 percent increase in the January-March period and was the steepest since the 4.1 percent jump in the first three months of 1987.

Greenspan, in an appearance before a House Banking subcommittee, said the 4.7-percent inflation figure released Wednesday as part of a report on the second-quarter gross national product was "somewhat larger than we would have expected."

In the financial markets, bond prices — usually most sensitive to news of inflation — fell slightly and interest rates rose. The yield on the 30-year Treasury bond was quoted late in the day at 9.25 percent, up from 9.23 percent late Wednesday.

What is happening, Greenspan added, is "migration arbitrage" — the free market's way of inducing people to retrain or move to find the jobs that remain vacant.

In response to a question from Bill McCollum, R-Fla., Greenspan said: "I think the numbers continue to essentially indicate that the economy is in a relatively sustained expansion."

The Fed chairman's formal statement was identical to the one he presented to the Senate on July 13, but he made these additional points during Thursday's question-and-answer session:

Subroto expects oil price rise

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — OPEC Secretary-General Subroto said he expects the price of oil to rise in coming weeks because of the possibility of an end to the Persian Gulf war, according to a report published Friday.

Statements by Subroto, who heads the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, were published in the United Arab Emirates newspaper Al-Ittihad.

Subroto was in the emirates for discussions on the oil market situation with U.A.E. leaders in advance of an OPEC pricing committee meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland on Aug. 3.

The state-run Al-Ittihad quoted Subroto as saying the world market "looks forward to positive results" from the pricing committee. It said he expressed his expectation of an increase in oil prices over the coming weeks.

In Subroto's view, the paper said, prices have been improving because of the prospects of a peaceful end to the nearly 8-year-old war between Iran and Iraq.

That settlement would lead to a positive impact on the oil market and oil prices, the paper further quoted Subroto as saying.

But it said he could not predict whether prices would increase beyond the OPEC benchmark of $18 a barrel.

The pricing committee, whose members are oil ministers of Saudi Arabia, Nigeria, Indonesia, Algeria and Venezuela, was meeting in wake of Iran's decision to accept a U.N. Security Council cease-fire resolution to end its war with Iraq.

Subroto has toured OPEC member states seeking assurances about compliance with the cartel's production quotas to help stabilize oil prices around the $18 benchmark.

Because of the war, Iraq has refused to accept its OPEC-decreed quota and produces almost double what it is assigned. Meanwhile, Iran is widely accused of discounting prices to market its crude oil under the wartime conditions.

That could change if the war came to an end, fueling hopes that prices could rise.

Other OPEC member states have also violated the cartel's production and pricing rules.

In June, the U.A.E. said it would ignore its OPEC oil production quota of 948,000 barrels and produce about 1.5 million barrels per day.

Subroto has conferred with U.A.E. Oil Minister Mana Saeed Otaiba and with U.A.E. President Sheikh Zayed Bin Sultan Al-Nahyan to whom he delivered a message from the OPEC president and Nigerian oil minister, Rilwanu Lukman.

The official Emirates news agency WAM reported after the meetings Thursday that Sheikh Zayed affirmed his nation's support for "unity and cohesion" within OPEC.

Emmett heats up TRC race with Nugent accusations

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent's opponent in November — Republican Ed Emmett — says Nugent has violated the "letter and spirit" of the law by using corporate and state funds for his personal and political benefit.

Nugent called Emmett's accusations a desperate attempt to gain name identification in the statewide race.

"Texas politics has a long, sordid history with regard to unethical conduct, scandals, and mysterious money," Emmett said Thursday. "I'm afraid that now Jim Nugent, my opponent, is adding a whole new chapter, a very brazen chapter, just in the past two years."

Emmett, a former state House member, questioned whether Nugent had ever paid Valero Energy Co. for a 1986 Mexico dove hunting trip; asked what had been done with a Nugent speech reportedly printed at taxpayers' expense, and why Nugent had allowed a Dallas trucking firm to host a reception for him.

He also questioned two Nugent commission staffers' role in the 1988 primary race and the reporting of a corporate honorarium, as well as certain campaign contributions.

"It looks like he's hustling, trying to get name ID one way or the other," Nugent responded.

The commissioner in a telephone interview said he had paid Valero; had mailed on request copies of the speech; and had no knowledge of the trucking firm's role in the reception.

Nugent also said staffers can work for whom they want to on their own time, and added that any listing of corporate campaign contributions was a mistake.

Emmett said, "The others you can write off as mistakes," but not the way in which the $1,000 honorarium from the National Association of Royalty Owners, Inc., was handled.

Emmett said two months after Nugent deposited the check in his personal account, he sent a $1,000 check to NARO and requested that it pay him "after the first of the year." The honorarium was not reported on Nugent's 1987 financial statement as required by law, Emmett said.

Tom Allen, treasurer of NARO, said he had received Nugent's check from Warren Anderson, NARO's special counsel in Austin, with the request from Anderson that Nugent be paid after Jan. 1. In March, Allen said, a NARO check for $1,000 was written to Nugent.

FDIC closes 43rd Texas bank of year

DALLAS (AP) — When the First Capital Bank office in West Columbia opened for business today, it was as a branch of First Bank in Edna. FDIC officials said.

State regulators on Thursday closed the bank, making it the state's 43rd bank failure this year.

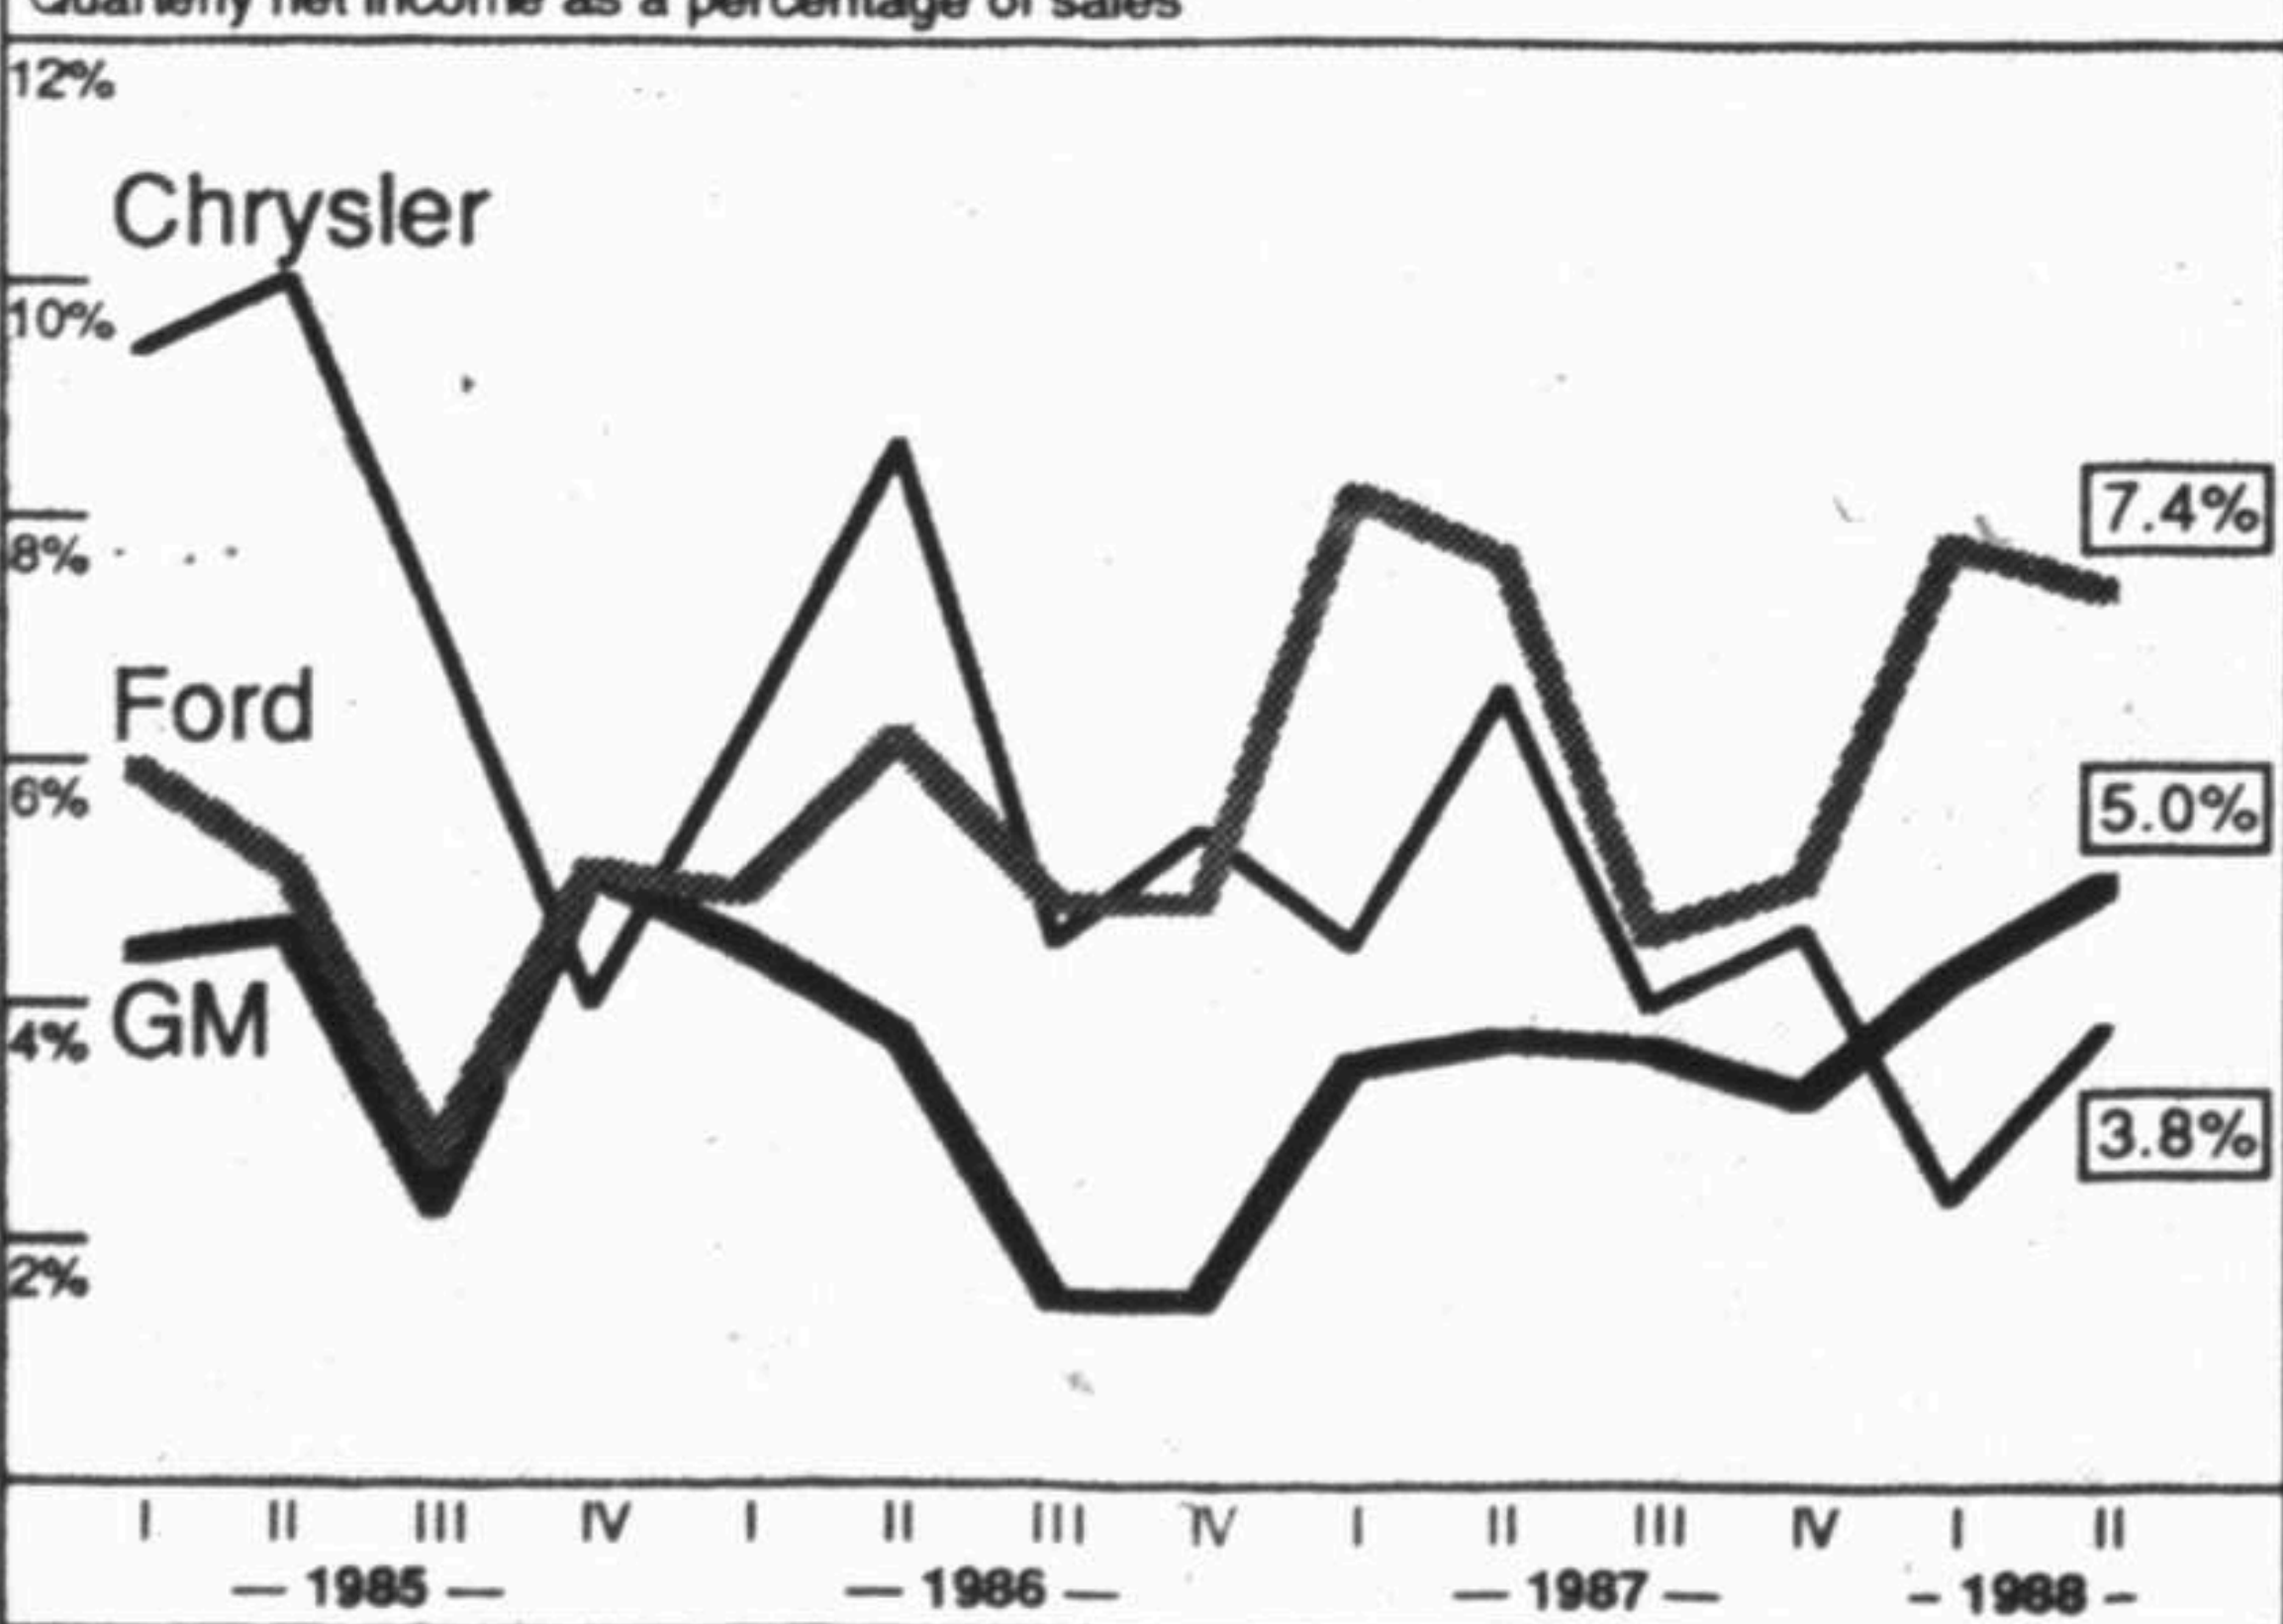

All insured deposits and secured or preferred deposits of First Capital Bank are being transferred to First Bank, said FDIC spokesman Bill Olchski in Washington. The FDIC's board of directors arranged an insured deposit transfer because of an inability to determine the value of the assets, Olchski said.

First Capital Bank had total assets of about $49.7 million and the FDIC was named receiver by Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth W. Littlefield.

A recent examination by the state banking department revealed loan and related losses of more than $4 million, which rendered the bank insolvent by some $1.7 million, Littlefield said.

Chrysler earnings lower

New York Times News Service

DETROIT — The Chrysler Corp. reported on Thursday that its earnings dropped 24 percent in the second quarter because of a decision to seek increased market share through aggressive pricing, rebates, and marketing efforts.

But Lee A. Iacocca, the chairman of Chrysler, said in a statement that "we can't rely on a strategy forever," indicating that the company will raise prices and scale back rebates on its 1989 models to improve profit margins. The company also used the incentives to reduce its unusually high inventories.

Harvey Heibach, an analyst with Merrill Lynch & Co. in New York, said: "Their operating profits are certainly under a lot of pressure. The message is that, while their market share has benefited, profitability has been squeezed."

Chrysler earned $320.4 million, or $1.45 a share, in the second quarter, compared with $424.1 million, or $1.98 a share, in the quarter a year ago.

Chrysler was the last of the Big Three automobile makers to report its results for the second quarter, which was a record for the domestic industry. The three companies posted combined profits of $3.48 billion for the period.

During the quarter, Chrysler's sales rose by 31.8 percent, to $8.45 billion, compared with $6.41 billion a year earlier. The unit sales of cars and trucks increased by 10 percent, to 702,278 vehicles.

The company's share of the combined car and truck market in the United States increased 0.9 percentage point, to 14.4 percent. The addition of the Jeep vehicles, which are

Oil prices show upward trend

From Staff and Wire Reports

After showing little movement Thursday, oil futures prices were headed upward at midmorning, gaining 18 cents to stand at $16.33.

Trading was quite Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange as traders waited for an upcoming OPEC committee meeting.

On the NYMEX, contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate crude fell 1 cent to $16.15 a barrel. The near-term crude contract rose 20 cents on Wednesday.

Traders were reluctant to make major commitments in advance of the Aug. 3 meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' pricing and production committee, said Peter Beutel, assistant director of the energy group at Elders Futures Inc.

The Lausanne, Switzerland session is expected to deal with the 13-nation cartel's continuing overproduction problems.

Technical factors nudge dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against most major currencies in modest trading today but traders predicted fear of central bank intervention would limit the currency's upswing.

Gold prices fell slightly. Foreign exchange dealers said end-of-the-month commercial requirements and technical short-covering nudged the U.S. currency up in early trading.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7170, compared with $1.7225 Thursday.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

— 1.8764 West German marks, up from 1.8645
— 1.5615 Swiss francs, up from 1.5505
— 6.3280 French francs, up from 6.2885

— 1.386.00 Italian lire, up from 1.370.50
— 1.2100 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2086

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.43 yen to close at 132.53. Later, in London, it was quoted at 131.92 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $432.10 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $433. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $432.70.

In Zurich, the bid price was $432.25, down from $432.50 late Thursday. Earlier in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid price of $434.48, up from Thursday's closing bid price of $433.78.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.82 a troy ounce, up from Thursday's $6.79.

Stocks rally to climb 28 points

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market strengthened Thursday in a technical rally led by blue-chip and high technology issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 28.63 to close at 2,062.33, erasing a 20-point drop in the previous session.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by roughly a 5-to-3 ratio in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 884 up, 531 down and 510 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 154.57 million shares, against 135.89 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 177.72 million shares.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market gained $25.3 billion, or 0.96 percent, in value.

The NYSE index was up 1.66 at 150.40. Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials advanced 4.15 to 307.30, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 3.52 at 266.02.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Revco files for bankruptcy protection

TWINSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Revco D.S. Inc., a giant drugstore chain, has filed for bankruptcy protection, a month after missing a $46 million interest payment to bondholders, officials disclosed.

Revco Chairman Boake A. Sells said Thursday the stage was set for the reorganization filing when Revco failed to pay the interest on $400 million in junk bonds June 15. Bondholders were demanding payment of the principal as well as the interest.

Revco issued the bonds to finance its $1.5 billion leveraged buyout in late 1986. When it missed the interest payment, the Revco buyout became the largest leveraged buyout to fail.

Parker Drilling signs deal with consortium

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Parker Drilling announced Thursday it's reached a deal with a five-bank consortium to reduce the company's debt by about 87 percent.

Robert Parker Sr., chairman and chief executive, said the deal gives the consortium 18 percent interest in Parker Drilling. In exchange, the banks will forgive $201 million in debt.

Parker said the arrangement will save his company $20 million a year in interest payments. The deal also saves from bankruptcy a Parker subsidiary known as Rig Holding Corp., because its 43 rigs had been pledged as collateral on the loans.

Broker fired over Business Week leaks

NEW YORK (AP) — A Merrill Lynch & Co. stockbroker has been fired following an internal investigation into whether he traded stocks with advance knowledge of Business Week magazine articles, the securities firm said.

The giant brokerage house said Thursday that William Dillon, 33, a financial consultant in its New London, Conn., office, was terminated after company lawyers uncovered records suggesting stocks might have been bought and sold on tips from articles due to be published in the mass-circulation magazine.

The dismissal came a week after Business Week said it was probing pre-publication trading linked to its "Inside Wall Street" column.

Postal service seeks 'seat belt' for stamps

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service began a 16-month, $700,000 quest to lick the problem of stamps that don't stay stuck, urging industry to produce an adhesive to serve as a "seat belt for a stamp."

Gordon C. Morison, a senior assistant postmaster general, made it clear Thursday that the post office was serious about development of a superior, water-activated adhesive.

He said the Postal Service would spend nearly $90 million this year for stamps, sales of which would generate about $8 billion.

Tenneco chairman James Ketelsen announced Tenneco's 235 percent earnings increase at a Thursday press conference.

Tenneco posts 235% earnings increase

HOUSTON (AP) — Tenneco Inc., reporting a 235 percent second-quarter increase in net income fueled by the sale of two subsidiaries, said it has opened its books to about 10 different bidders seeking to buy Tenneco Oil Co.

"We've been very encouraged by the interest," James L. Ketelsen, chairman and chief operating officer of Tenneco, said during a Thursday news conference.

"A bulk of the domestic oil industry and some international oil companies have shown interest. It looks like, at this time, that it's a very successful program."

For the three-month period ending June 30, the Houston-based diversified energy company posted net earnings of $154 million, or $1 per share, compared with $46 million, or 24 cents per share, during the same period a year ago.

Second-quarter 1988 net income includes a one-time gain of $23 million related to the sale of Tenneco Oil Co. of Gebr. Broere, a European shipping and storage company, and Mitchell Supreme, a New Jersey heating oil retailing company.

Each bidder for Tenneco Oil Co. gets one week to review the information, available through Aug. 25. The first round of bids is due Sept. 30.

City offers incentives to Tenneco buyers

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Prospective buyers of Tenneco Inc.'s oil and gas operations will be offered incentives from the City of Lafayette to protect the jobs of nearly 500 local Tenneco employees.

David Warren, assistant director of utilities, said Thursday the city has proposed to Tenneco a plan intended to preserve the jobs of nearly 500 people employed locally by Tenneco Oil and several of its units.

One aspect of the plan, Warren said, would give new owners a $70,000 savings on utility bills over a five-year period.

A second part promises an additional 5 percent discount for every 10 additional employees a buyer — or buyers — move to Lafayette.

Seagull makes gas discovery offshore Texas

HOUSTON (SWN) — Seagull Energy Corp. has announced the completion of a natural gas discovery offshore Texas in the Gulf of Mexico. Seagull said its discovery in federal waters at Galveston Island Block 349 flowed at a rate of 2,735 Mcfd through perforations at a depth interval of 4,286 to 4,282 feet through a 14/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,710 psi. The discovery is located approximately 30 miles southeast of Freeport, Texas in 84 feet of water.

Seagull Energy E&P Inc. has a 50 percent working interest in the well and plans a confirmation test as soon as practical. Seagull Chairman Barry J. Galt said the new discovery is near and on trend geologically with reserves proven at Galveston 383/384.

Wolverine tests third well off Texas shore

FORT WORTH (SWN) — Wolverine Exploration Co. announced testing of its third well on High Island 178 Block in federal waters, offshore Texas. The No. 3 OCS-G-8150 operated by Union Pacific Resources Co. tested at a rate of 1,039 barrels of 42 gravity oil per day and 11.285 million cubic feet of gas per day; with 4,400 psi flowing tubing pressure through a 26/64 inch choke.

ANR Pipeline given FERC blanket certificate

HOUSTON (SWN) — The Coastal Corp. reported that its subsidiary, ANR Pipeline Co., has been granted a blanket transportation certificate by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC). The company said that it had formally accepted the blanket certificate.

The certificate, which became effective July 25, will enable ANR to provide open-access transportation on its natural gas pipelines under the provisions of FERC Order 500.

"ANR has been transporting natural gas on behalf of local distribution companies and intrastate pipelines for several years," said James F. Cordes, president of Coastal's natural gas group. "The blanket certificate gives our existing transportation customers assurance that ANR can continue as an open-access transporter in the future. It also enables a substantial number of new customers, such as other interstate pipelines, brokers and marketers of natural gas and end users, to contract directly with ANR for our transportation services."

Spannaus noted, however, that BPBA, under Perry's leadership, had led the fight against many issues negative to the oil industry and had been successful on a number of them.

He said that EPA had changed its mind about classifying drilling fluids as hazardous waste and that it looked favorable for the repeal of off-road diesel tax and Windfall Profits Tax.

The association executive also noted that BPBA has worked to eliminate gravity penalties on crude oil, supported drilling in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and was one of the leaders in petitioning the Department of Commerce to investigate the impact of imported oil on national security.

Statewide, Spannaus noted that BPBA had written the legislation which concerned receipt of royalty payments and had led the battle to have royalty payments based on local prices rather than the highest price statewide. The group also worked to change plugging laws and give operators more lenient terms for plugging during depressed times.

Perry said he was glad a number of things had been accomplished during his 28 months as president of the regional oil and gas association, but was sorry a complete turnaround had not been achieved.

— He repeated his proposal for a hefty tax on gasoline but expressed a strong preference for spending cuts to reduce the budget deficit.

— He warned that a measure approved by the House Banking Committee on Thursday morning requiring banks to cash any government check would pose a severe risk of fraud, especially to small banks.

— He resisted strong efforts by Jim Leach, R-Iowa, to formally bar insolvent savings and loan associations from expanding their assets.

Like others in the domestic automobile industry, Chrysler executives expressed the hope that the recent depletion of unsold cars in dealers' inventories would reduce the need for financial incentives in the coming model year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Timed' mutual funds actually shaky investments

By BILL DOYLE

Q. What are your thoughts about companies specializing in "timed" mutual fund investments? The concept is to have your money all in mutual funds or all in cash at specific times, with the movement from one to the other determined by technical market analysis.

There is no commission on each such move, because the timing services shift the investments within the same "family" of mutual funds or among no-load funds. However, the timing services do charge annual management fees — ranging from less than 1 percent to 4.75 percent, depending on the amount of money involved.

A. Frankly, I don't think highly of the timing services. Some "timers," as they are known, have credible records. But many have "underperformed the market" — meaning investments in their care have not done as well as the overall stock market or mutual funds in general. Few timers got their clients out of stocks before last October's market crash.

The idea behind timing is to move clients' money into and out of different types of mutual funds at the "right" times, such as into mutual funds holding stocks when stock prices are rising, into bond mutual funds when interest rates are falling and into the safe haven of money market mutual funds when stocks and bonds are headed down hill.

No one knows, for sure, when those market turns are going to happen. As for technical market analysis, I'm reminded of the Daymon Runyon line: "My brother talks to horses."

Every mutual fund has a management fee. That money pays the people who pick the fund's investments and who are supposed to choose the right types of securities at the appropriate times. But most mutual funds are too big to change their investments in a hurry. So a timer can be helpful in getting clients in and out of mutual funds.

However, if you sign on with a timer, you add an extra layer to your expenses. Many investors, who put some time and effort into studying the market, switch among mutual funds — thereby doing their own timing, without the added expense.

Q. I thought all money market accounts were insured up to $100,000 per depositor by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. at banks and by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. at S&Ls.

Then I read in a newspaper advertising supplement that "money market funds are not insured." Is this true?

A. Yes. You're probably confused because the word "mutual" was left out of the line you quote. Money market mutual funds are not deposits at banks or S&Ls. They are mutual funds and do not have federal deposit insurance. Nonetheless, money market mutual funds are virtually risk free. When you invest in a money market mutual fund, you buy shares of that fund. A money market mutual fund uses accounting techniques that keep its share value constant — at $1, in most such funds.

Of course, money market deposit accounts — MMDAs, for short — at banks and S&Ls do have federal deposit insurance.

Q. You told a reader who redeemed shares of a tax-exempt mutual fund for more money than she paid for those shares that the difference between her purchase price and redemption price was a profit — taxable as a capital gain.

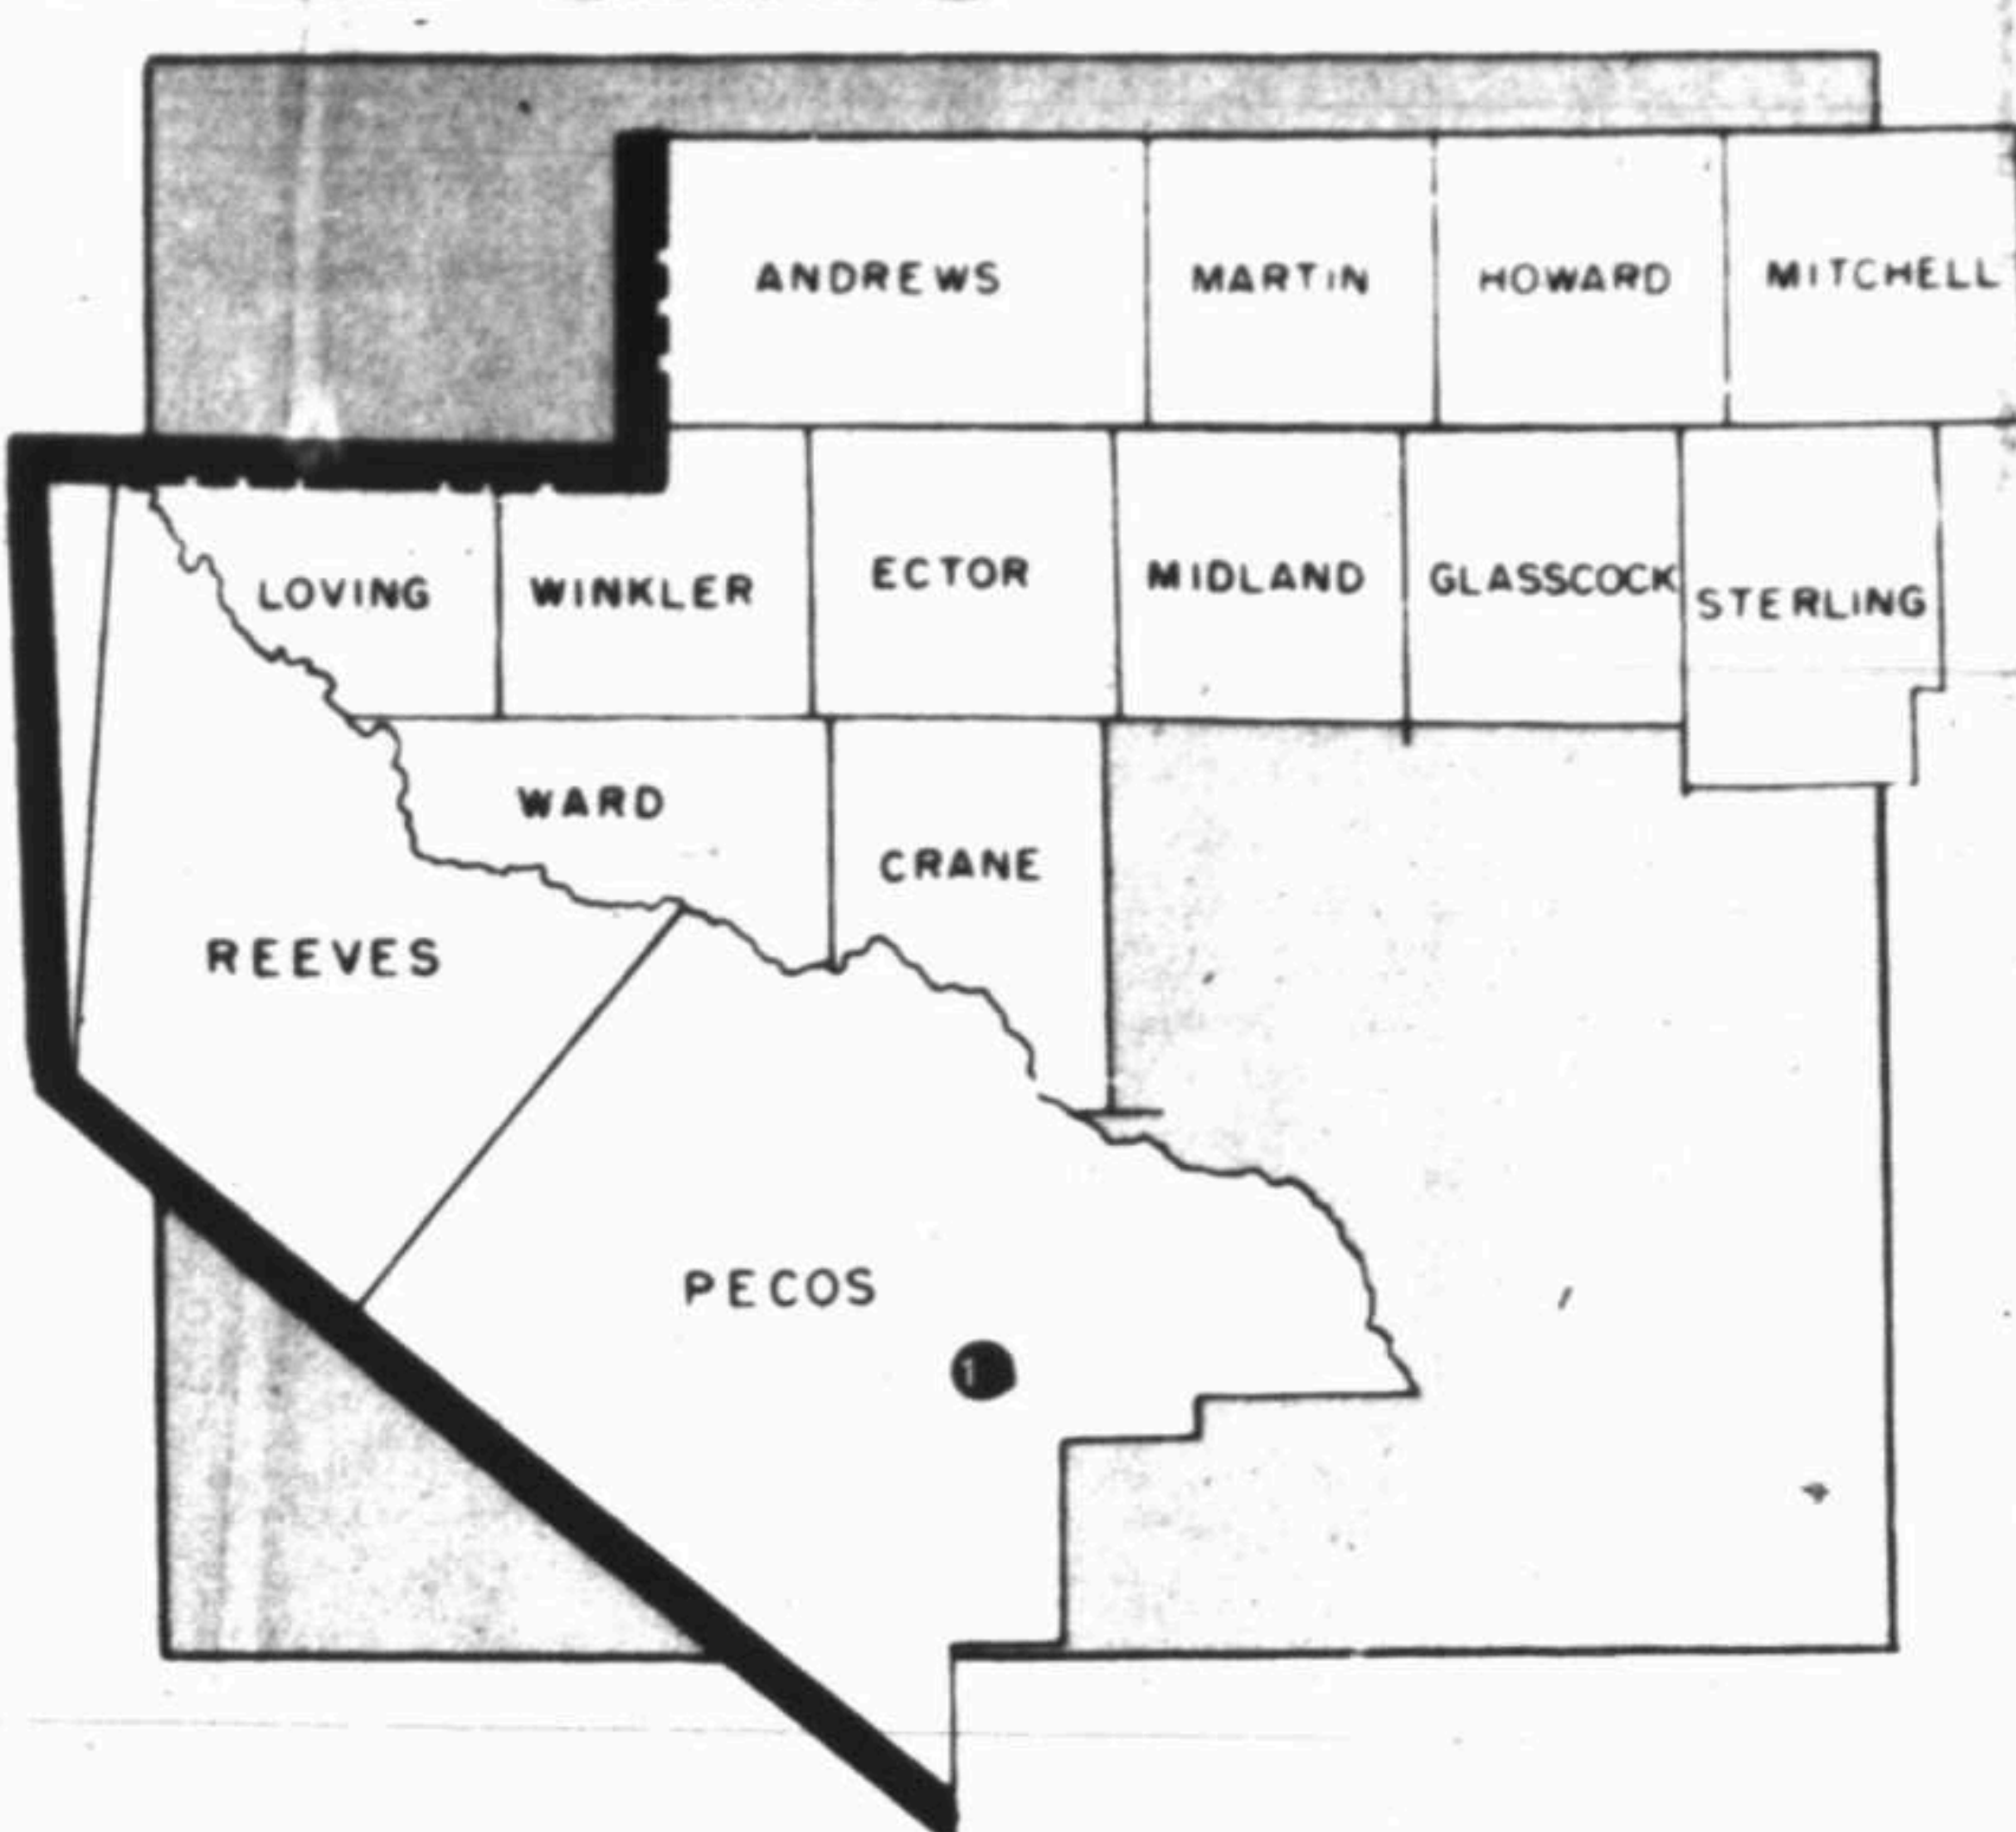

I was under the impression you don't pay taxes on tax-exempt funds. Am I missing something?

A. Indeed you are. The dividends paid by a tax-exempt mutual fund are not subject to federal income tax. That's because the fund collects tax-free interest from municipal bonds it holds as investments and passes that money along to shareholders — also tax free.

However, if you redeem your shares at a profit, that profit is taxable as a capital gain — just as is the profit from the sale of any other "capital asset."

Mobil announces plant expansions

NEW YORK (SWN) — Mobil Chemical Co. has announced two plant expansions that will increase the company's oriented polypropylene (OPP) film capacity by 20 percent in North America.

The just completed expansion at Stratford, Conn., and the one getting underway at Belleville, Ontario, will provide 30 million pounds of additional annual capacity. They are part of the company's continuing worldwide OPP expansion and modernization program.

Philip W. Matos, president of Mobil Chemical, said, "The Stratford and Belleville projects are the latest steps in a series of expansions in North America and Europe that have increased our OPP capacity by 140 percent since 1980 and made Mobil the world's leading OPP producer."

Mobil recently added a fifth OPP manufacturing line at Virton, Belgium, and is now constructing a new line at its plant in Brindisi, Italy. Mobil's worldwide OPP capacity will total over 280 million pounds per year at the completion of the current expansion program.

The Stratford project included replacement of two existing production lines with a new and bigger manufacturing unit that incorporates the latest in tenter-frame technology, according to A. J. Cavanna, Mobil Chemical vice president and general manager, Films. At full production, the plant output will be about 80 million pounds per year.

The Belleville project also includes a new manufacturing line that incorporates the same modern technology as the new Stratford line.

19-88 Property Tax Rates in City of Midland

This notice concerns 19-88 property tax rates for City of Midland. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.
