Swaggart announces resignation

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart on Friday announced his resignation from the Assemblies of God shortly after the church said it was defrocking him for rejecting punishment it had ordered for "moral failure."

Swaggart said at a news conference that he knew dismissal was inevitable but insisted he had no choice but to separate from the church to save his Bible college and $140 million-a-year worldwide ministry.

Shortly before Swaggart made his announcement, the Executive Presbytery of the Assemblies of God, headquartered in Springfield, Mo., said it had dismissed him as a minister for refusing to stop preaching for a year.

It had ordered the punishment after Swaggart voluntarily stepped down from his pulpit Feb. 21, after a tearful public confession of "moral failure" before his wife, son and congregation gathered in his Family Worship Center.

Church officials and Swaggart have refused to elaborate on his misstep, but a Baton Rouge prostitute has said Swaggart paid her to pose nude for him.

"We believe that to stay out of the public for a year would totally destroy the television ministry and greatly adversely impact the college," Swaggart said in a statement.

"Because of the nature of this situation, we are forced to take a position that does not answer all of the questions nor solve all of the problems. But we feel we have no alternative or choice," he said.

"Therefore, I must regretfully withdraw from the Assemblies of God, understanding that they will have no choice except to dismiss me from the fellowship, since I am presently not in good standing with the fellowship."

He read from a prepared statement and refused to answer questions.

In Springfield, the Rev. Everett Stenhouse, assistant superintendent of the Assemblies of God, said general presbytors had read Swaggart's statement before he made it public, so there was nothing surprising in it.

Stenhouse said the church and Swaggart parted on amicable terms, but Swaggart's chances of returning to the church were slim.

"It would be a long trail back...if at all," he said.

Swaggart said in the statement that he hoped his college and preaching would continue to send people into the Assemblies of God.

He said he would stick to the punishment decided by the Louisiana church officials, although it was moot. Under that punishment he would not preach sermons until May 22, although he has been "witnessing" at church services.

Swaggart's lawyer, Bill Treeby, was asked if the statement meant Swaggart would form his own church.

"This ministry is an independent church and always has been," Treeby said.

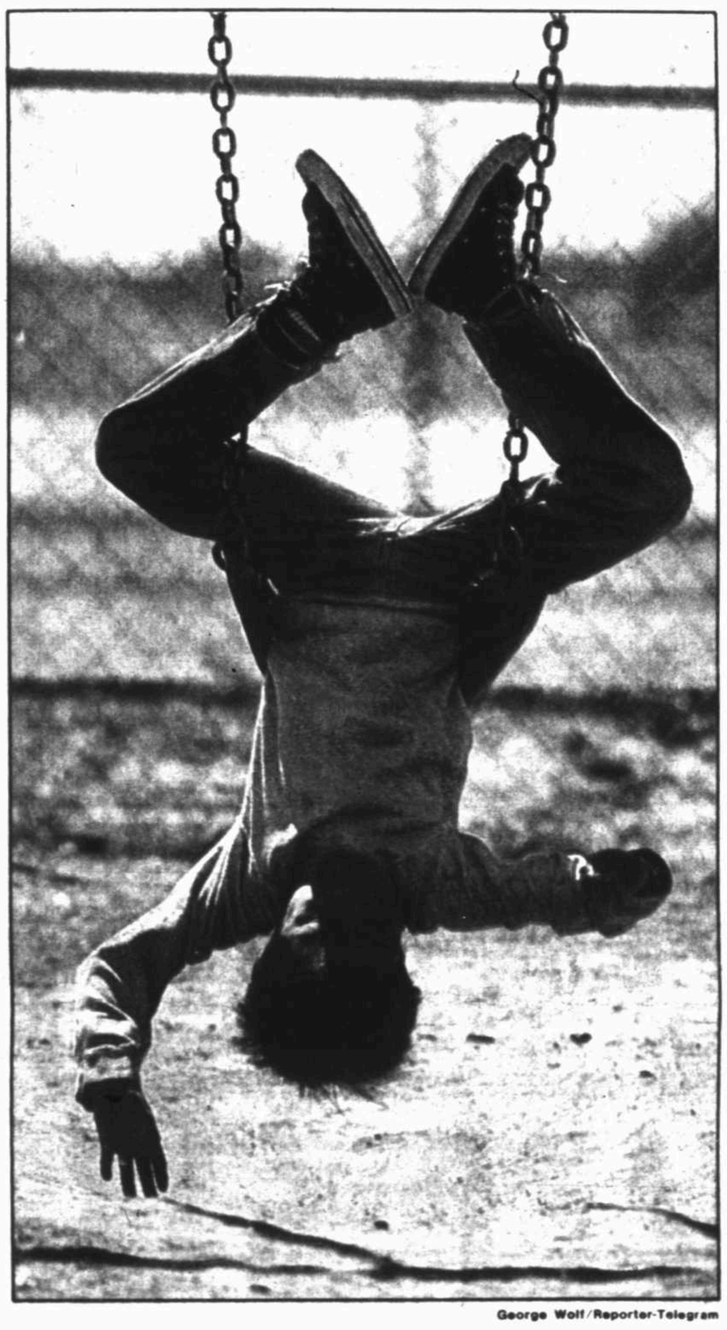

Asked if any of the Christian television networks had contacted them about taking Swaggart off the air, he said, "We have people who handle that. We're not going to deal with that. If some of them don't use us, they won't."

The church's decision to dismiss Swaggart as a minister was announced in Springfield by the Rev. G. Raymond Carlson, general superintendent of the church, after he and other members of the Executive Presbytery met by telephone conference call.

Earlier Friday, the church had received what Carlson described as a "gracious" letter from Swaggart in which the evangelist refused to accept terms of a church-ordered, two-year rehabilitation program.

Carlson said he called Swaggart on Friday after the 13-member Executive Presbytery, which serves as the board of directors of the church, met and made its decision.

Hijacked jetliner lands in Cyprus

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — A hijacked Kuwaiti jetliner landed in Cyprus on Friday night after being turned away by the Beirut and Damascus airports despite the frantic pilot's cries that he had a gun at his head.

The four-day ordeal for the more than 50 people aboard Kuwait Airways Flight 422 was not over, however, as the hooded Arab hijackers demanded that authorities at Larnaca Airport refuel the Boeing 747.

"I'll never forget this, thank you," shouted the captain of the jet when an air traffic controller told him he was cleared to land. The blue-and-white jumbo jet touched down at 9:10 p.m. (2:10 p.m. EDT) after circling for 3½ hours over the Mediterranean following a take-off from Mashhad in northeastern Iran.

Before landing at Larnaca, one of the hijackers radioed the Beirut control tower that panic had broken out aboard the aircraft as it ran low on fuel, with many of the passengers becoming ill.

A woman identified as Anware Khaled Al-Sabah, one of three members of Kuwait's ruling Al-Sabah family on board, got on the radio and told the Beirut control tower in a choking voice: "I beg you. Allow us to land. We have no fuel left."

It sternly refused, with the controller telling the desperate pilot at one point: "Do whatever you want. Crash on the tarmac or in the sea...We shall not let you land here."

After the jet touched down at Larnaca, a state of emergency was declared at the airport.

Foreign Minister George Iacovou went there to try to establish contact with the hijackers, who are demanding the release of 17 terrorists jailed in Kuwait for bombing the U.S. and French embassies there in 1983. The demand echoed that of pro-Iranian extremists holding U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

The captain, in a calm voice, called the Larnaca Airport's tower and requested fuel, but did not say if the hijackers wanted to take off again.

The tower said that since it was a holiday in Cyprus, the airport could only provide him with about 8,000 gallons, less than a quarter of what a jumbo jet can hold.

"Please give us all you can," the pilot responded.

A hijacker then told the tower that if the 17 prisoners in Kuwait were not freed, "the passengers and the plane are in extreme danger."

He said his group's "struggle is against imperialism and Zionism and continuing until martyrdom or victory."

An official Kuwaiti delegation landed at Larnaca on Saturday afternoon and met with Iacovou and Cyprus' interior minister, Christodolos Veniamin, airport officials said.

Cyprus initially closed airports in Larnaca and Paphos, on the island's west coast, to the aircraft. But after Lebanon and Syria also refused to allow the jet to touch down, the captain pleaded for landing permission, saying he was out of fuel. "This is a real emergency," he kept repeating.

The plane had 112 people on board when it was hijacked Tuesday on a Bangkok-Kuwait flight and diverted to Mashhad Airport. The hijackers freed 57 people there on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Those released initially put the number of hijackers at five or six, but diplomats who debriefed the freed passengers in Kuwait said some mentioned as many as 10 hijackers.

Iran originally refused to allow the plane to take off, blocking runways at Mashhad, but the hijackers brought a man to the top of the stairway and fired three warning shots, then tossed a grenade out the door, the Islamic Republic News Agency reported. It did not say if it exploded.

A passenger was forced into the cockpit and beaten, said the news agency, monitored in Nicosia. The hijackers first threatened to kill a passenger, then said they would blow the plane up if they weren't allowed to take off.

Nofziger sentenced to 90 days, fined $30,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyn Nofziger, a longtime associate of President Reagan, was sentenced Friday to 90 days in prison and fined $30,000 for illegally lobbying the White House.

U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery allowed Nofziger, the former White House political director, to remain free pending appeal of three felony convictions of violating the Ethics in Government Act.

"I thought things were going to go better than they went," said Nofziger, 63.

"In my heart of hearts, I don't believe I'm going to serve time because I don't believe a prison sentence is justified even if I were guilty. And I repeat that I am not guilty," he said.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, issued a statement from their vacation home in California: "Lyn Nofziger is a dear friend of many years and our prayers are with him."

Addressing the judge before he was sentenced, Nofziger said he wanted to "reiterate my belief that, despite my conviction, I have done nothing ethically, morally or legally wrong."

"I am an honorable man," Nofziger told Flannery. "Like other honorable people, I have gone through life making mistakes, doing stupid things. I doubt that there is a person in this room who hasn't. But I am not a criminal and I think the record of my life will bear out that statement."

Nofziger shook hands with friends and kissed his wife after the sentence was pronounced. He shrugged when a well-wisher offered words of sympathy.

Outside the courthouse, Nofziger angrily charged that independent counsel James C. McKay "set out to get me."

"He set out because I would not knuckle under, because I would not cop a plea and because I would not say I was remorseful, and I think he succeeded," he said.

"He makes mountains out of molehills. He has exaggerated, he has misstated and I think he has lied," Nofziger said. "I don't think he is an honorable man."

Nofziger was convicted Feb. 11 of three counts of illegally lobbying then-presidential counselor Edwin Meese III and other White House aides on behalf of the scandal-ridden Wedtech Corp., a marine engineers union and the manufacturer of the Air Force A-10 anti-tank plane. The contacts were considered illegal because they occurred within a year of Nofziger's departure from the White House staff in early 1982.

The fine was the most Flannery could have imposed. Nofziger could have received a maximum two-year sentence for each conviction.

Instead, Flannery imposed terms of two to eight months for each of three counts but suspended all but 30 days for each count. He also ordered that Nofziger be placed on two years probation.

McKay made no statement during the 25-minute hearing but in a court filing last week he recommended imprisonment, contending that Nofziger deliberately flouted the ethics law and showed no remorse.

"There will be some bitterness, but we're very satisfied with what Judge Flannery has done today," McKay told reporters.

Defense lawyer Robert Plotkin said "we're disappointed, but I think the judge did a good job of trying to balance the symbol Mr. Nofziger has become (of the ethics law) against the man Mr. Nofziger is."

Three people sought in murder

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Big Spring police have issued three murder warrants following finding a middle-aged man's body in a makeshift dump on Big Spring's lower west end.

But police, who have identified the body of the West Texas man, on Friday declined to release the man's name until arrests have been made.

"We feel positive about the identity," said Police Detective Capt. Lonnie Smith. "The next of kin was notified," he said. "If his name hits the media right now" those accused of the murder may seek to elude arrest, and the release of the man's name might hamper serving warrants, he said.

Lula Kilgore, who celebrated her 100th birthday Friday in Midland, caresses her great-great-granddaughter, Lindsay Brown, 4.

100-year-old woman inspiration to family

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

At 100, Lula Kilgore is ready to minister in the name of the Lord.

She is a "half-preacher" who reads the Bible to guide her life and has lived her 100 years "one day at a time."

"She is full of spunk. She really is," said her 40-year-old grandson, Clarence E. 'Buddy" Kilgore of Odessa. "In truth, she is very inspirational," he said at his grandmother's birthday party Friday at Terrace West Nursing Center in Midland. "She is about half-preacher."

His grandmother has cause to be. "I'll tell you what," Mrs. Kilgore said sternly but kindly. "I give him a whipping every time I see him. I preach to him. So, when I'm gone, he will remember those (spiritual-based) words. He's my grandson. And I hope he will continue to live for God."

Mrs. Kilgore's children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren and many of the nursing home's other 118 residents attended the birthday celebration, which featured some of Mrs. Kilgore's favorite gospel songs: "Whispering Hope" and "One Day At A Time, Sweet Jesus."

Mrs. Kilgore, who was a farmer's daughter and a farmer's wife, said she has been "blessed with good health.

AIDS program 'cascades' in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Alarmed by the fast spread of AIDS in the country, Mexican authorities have begun a campaign called Cascade Education, a novel approach that enlists those most likely to be afflicted to spread the word.

The campaign is aimed directly at male and female prostitutes, the homosexual community, street gangs and the poor in the hope that what they learn about AIDS prevention will "cascade" down to others in their own vernacular.

Most of the effort is concentrated in Mexico City, a metropolis of 18 million people, where high-risk people are hard to reach through newspapers and other standard means.

"We are teaching them to become health care promoters and sending them into their communities," said Dr. Glorias Ornellas Hall, director of the National Center for AIDS Information, an arm of the federal Public Health Department.

"We believe that using the media to give information is not enough to change behavior patterns. Only face-to-face contact can do that," she said. "The best way is for them to reach their own communities in their own language. That includes prostitutes reaching out to prostitutes, homosexuals to homosexuals, even deaf-mutes to deaf-mutes."

According to the center, Mexico had 1,126 confirmed AIDS cases as of Feb. 1, and the number is doubling every seven months. For every confirmed case, an additional 50 to 100 people are becoming exposed to the virus, said Dr. Jaime Sepulveda Amor, the department's director of epidemiology.

Sepulveda, who is also president of the government's National Commission on AIDS Prevention, estimated during a recent interview the number of people confirmed to have AIDS will reach over 25,000 by 1991, making it the second or third leading cause of death for people in the 25 to 44 age group in Mexico, which has a population estimated at 81.7 million.

In the United States the number of AIDs cases reported since June, 1981, has reached 57,024.

Since it was founded last year, the information center has broadcast its services on radio and television and through bumper stickers, posters, keychains and matchbooks with condoms attached. Mexico recently received a donation of 10 million condoms from the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Th center also has trained dozens of Mexico City residents in its Cascade Education program, offering instructional rclasses but leaving the actual teaching process to each individual.

"We give them the basics, then leave the style of presentation in their own hands," Ornellas said.

The center's staff also trains street-gang leaders and visits jails to teach police officials and prisoners.

Ornellas said many of the Cascade volunteers from the streets originally visited the center to be tested for the AIDS virus and, with counselling and support, have joined the program. She said the best of them are those who have tested positive.

One male prostitute in the program, only known by his nickname of Jaimito, regularly visits Mexico City markets to sing a "ranchero" song he wrote and recorded called, "What is AIDS?"

Ornellas called Jaimito "one of our great promoters."

A deaf mute who also is a male prostitute is another is Cascade promoter.

"He uncovered a whole sub-culture of deaf mutes who prostitute themselves off to make a living," Ornellas said. "We found that many feel they have no other way to earn money."

An initial Health Department survey indicated that about 30 percent of the male homosexual community in Mexico City has been exposed to the AIDS virus. Gerardo Ortega Zurita, a Cascade volunteer leader, said cultural prejudices have made it very difficult for homosexual men to seek help.

"There's incredible discrimination against homosexuals, who are isolated from the centers of the country," Ortega said. "Teaching them about AIDS is difficult. They are forced to hide from the police and other government authorities."

Ortega brings youths from what he calls "controlled groups" of prostitutes to the center to be examined and learn about AIDS prevention.

"But there are others we can't get to, who are more preoccupied with making a living than with taking care of their lives," he said.

Signs of future sunspots found earlier than ever

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists say they found the earliest and most detailed signs of solar jet streams that will produce sunspots by about 1997, bolstering a theory that upsets traditional notions about the sunspot cycle.

"We're seeing the very earliest stage of the next sunspot cycle, not the one that is producing sunspots now, but that one that will produce them when this cycle is over," said astronomer Roger Ulrich of the University of California, Los Angeles.

Ulrich and his colleagues were able to see the jet streams "at higher latitudes (on the sun) and earlier than we were ever able to before," said astrophysicist Herschel Snodgrass of Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Ore.

Snodgrass said understanding the sunspot cycle is important because the spots and related explosions called solar flares disrupt radar and radio and other communications on Earth and, in extreme cases, are believed to help spur ice ages and major droughts.

Ulrich said solar flares make Earth's outer atmosphere expand, so learning more about sunspots is important in deciding when to launch satellites, since atmospheric expansion produces orbit-altering drag on spacecraft.

Snodgrass said Ulrich's observation of the jet streams, which are east-west currents of gas parallel to the sun's equator, supports a theory developed independently by Snodgrass, Air Force astrophysicist Richard Altrock and California Institute of Technology astronomer Peter Wilson.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Rain possible this weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

There is an outside chance the West Texas plains, long overdue for rain, may get a little dust-settling rain this weekend.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport is calling for less than a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms today and a high temperature in the upper 70s. Winds are to be northerly to northeasterly at 15 to 25 mph and gusty.

Tonight, under partly-cloudy skies, there is to be a 30 percent chance of showers, the weatherman said. The low is to be in the upper 40s.

Sunday is to offer partly cloudy skies, a 20 percent chance of rain, a high in the mid-50s and cooler temperatures.

Friday's peak temperature was 85 degrees, and the overnight low was 50. The record high for an April 8 is 95 degrees in 1963, and the record low for April 9 is 20 degrees in 1973.

STATE

An upper-level disturbance over northern Mexico brought showers and thunderstorms to parts of South Texas and the Hill Country Friday as gulf moisture spread northward across the state.

The pattern will likely result in increasing showers and thunderstorms over a large portion of the state this weekend, and partly cloudy to cloudy skies elsewhere.

The thickest layer of clouds Friday were in a band that stretched from the Hill Country to San Antonio to between Corpus Christi and Palacios into the Gulf of Mexico. Variable high-level clouds filtered across the rest of the state.

NATION

Rain soaked the East Coast from Virginia to southern New England on Friday, while light snow fell in the northern Rockies and high winds buffeted the Southwest.

Showers were heaviest in Maryland and Virginia. Salisbury, Md., got 2.72 inches of rain in a 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. EDT. Langley Air Force Base and Norfolk Naval Air Station, both in Virginia, got nearly an inch of rain apiece in six hours.

In Montana, Billings got 3 inches of snow, West Yellowstone 2 inches and Butte and Bozeman 1 inch.

Florida, the Gulf Coast and the Mississippi, Tennessee and Ohio valleys all enjoyed sunshine and mild temperatures.

Saturday's forecast called for widely scattered showers and thunderstorms extending from Texas across Oklahoma to eastern Kansas; rain from western Kansas across Nebraska and the Dakotas to Minnesota, mixing with snow in western parts of South Dakota and Nebraska; and rain and drizzle in eastern New England.

SWAGGART

"He received it graciously," Carlson said. "We had prayer together at the conclusion of our conversation."

In the statement he read, Carlson referred to remarks Swaggart made in a column in his magazine, The Evangelist, in August 1987. In it, Carlson said, Swaggart endorsed a one-year ban from preaching as part of the rehabilitation of any "fallen churchman."

Carlson declined to release details of Swaggart's letter. He said that when he talked to him, the evangelist did not explain why he was refusing the rehabilitation program.

The leaders of the country's largest Pentecostal denomination and their most prominent minister had been locked in an impasse since an attorney announced last week that Swaggart would defy a church-directed one-year preaching ban and return to his televised ministry May 22.

Church elders in Louisiana originally recommended that Swaggart be barred from his pulpit for three months as part of a two-year rehabilitation plan despite protests from national leaders that every other Assemblies minister who had confessed to moral failure was banned from preaching for at least a year.

The Executive Presbytery recommended the one-year ban and stood firm through a challenge to its authority by Louisiana officials. On March 29, the Executive Presbytery's authority to discipline Swaggart, and the specifics of its rehabilitation plan, were endorsed by an oversight body, and Louisiana officials later reconciled themselves to the national plan.

Swaggart's church, television and school complex in Baton Rouge has been shaken by the scandal. Donations are reported down, about 100 workers were fired shortly after Swaggart's confession, and students at the Jimmy Swaggart Bible College are said to be clamoring to transfer to other religious institutions.

Swaggart's ministry brought in an estimated $142 million last year, and his sermons are broadcast in more than 100 countries. The Assemblies of God received about $12 million a year, in monthly increments of $1 million or so, from Swaggart for its foreign missions program. It has not received anything since his February confession.

Swaggart has been known for his harsh denunciations of the sins of others, including PTL founder Jim Bakker, who lost his Assemblies credentials after a sex-and-money scandal last year.

The Rev. Marvin Gorman of suburban New Orleans, who reportedly hired the men who photographed Swaggart with the woman and also defrocked by the Assemblies, said the action Friday involving Swaggart "further proves the truth of the allegations I made" in a $17 million lawsuit he filed against Swaggart in March 1987. In the lawsuit, Gorman blamed Swaggart for destroying Gorman's ministry.

HIJACK

As the plane left Mashhad, the hijackers radioed a message to the emir of Kuwait saying he must comply with their demands or they will blow up the plane, IRNA said.

Fire engines, buses and other vehicles were pulled onto to the runways of Beirut airport, which is run by Syrian troops. The Beirut control tower told the captain: "If you try to land by force, the plane will be fired on."

The captain said: "A gun is pointed to my head. I request landing permission to land to refuel."

"We have been for 14 years under gunfire," an airport official answered back, in a reference to Lebanon's civil war.

Then, in Arabic, a hijacker said: "I shall punish control tower officials if they don't allow us to land. The passengers are all in panic now and many of them are vomiting. Among the passengers is a member of the Kuwaiti ruling family who has a heart condition."

Beirut airport sources said a control tower official in radioed back saying: "With all due respect to all families, permit me to say that all the Lebanese suffer heart ailments (from the civil war). Do not try to talk to me sentimentally."

The freed hostages who were flown to Kuwait appeared tired and dazed, and were whisked away.

In London, 18 released Britons arrived home to the tearful hugs of their families and a Foreign Ministry official.

Relations between oil-rich Kuwait and neighboring Iran have been strained since the 7½-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Tehran accuses Kuwait of actively backing Iraq.

NOFZIGER

E. Lawrence Barcella, Nofziger's other lawyer, disputed the prosecution's contention that the former White House aide exploited his government connnections for financial gain.

"He is a man of tremendous integrity, he is a man whose principles are very strong," Barcella told the judge. "He is man who did not cash in."

But in calling for a substantial fine, McKay argued that Nofziger had unjustly enriched himself after leaving the White House. The prosecutor quoted a pre-sentence report as saying Nofziger is currently worth $2.8 million.

Nofziger said the figure was inaccurate and told reporters his net worth was "none of your business."

According to congressional testimony, Nofziger and his business partner, Mark A. Bragg, received stock in Wedtech that they later sold for more than $600,000.

McKay contended that Wedtech would not have won a $32 million Army contract without the intervention of Meese, now attorney general, and his deputy, James E. Jenkins.

Nofziger, who traces his political association with the president to Reagan's days as governor of California, received support from current and former government officials who vouched for his character.

Energy Secretery John Herrington, Labor Secretary Ann McLaughlin, Secret Service Director John R. Simpson and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., were among those who wrote letters to the judge.

Nofziger said he had no plans to ask Reagan for a pardon, saying he was confident the conviction would be overturned when it is appealed.

LULA

God has blessed me through the years. He has healed me. I trust Him. And when He calls me, I'll be ready."

Mrs. Kilgore, who was born in Alabama in 1888 and later lived in the Tyler-Greenville area of East Texas and the Lamesa-Midland area of West Texas, said her grandchildren "mean a lot to me. I don't have the words to express my appreciation."

Mrs. Kilgore recited the scriptural verse to "honor your father and mother that your days may be long on Earth" and noted the duality in "Father" — heavenly Father and the earthly father.

Mrs. Kilgore's family has longevity. One of her sisters lived to be 105 and several others lived into their 90s. And Mrs. Kilgore admitted to dipping snuff for a spell back in the "old days" when such a habit was typical among many country women. "It was so strong that I laid it down," she said.

Her grandson noted that longevity "runs in the family."

"She (Mrs. Kilgore) had eight children and all are living except two (daughters), and they died of tuberculosis in the 1940s," he said.

Mrs. Kilgore's son, Clarence B. Kilgore, 78, of El Paso, said that his mother "is a wonderful woman."

And the son said he was "looking forward" to reaching his 100th birthday.

"Definitely," he said. "Never give up."

Odessan Mike Kilgore, Mrs. Kilgore's 21-year-old great-grandson, will be 100 years old in 79 more years should he be blessed with his great-grandmother's health.

"I hope one of these days, maybe, I will be (100)," he said. "It doesn't happen everyday, does it?"

Friday's wasn't just Mrs. Kilgore's birthday. It also was the 70th birthday of another son, Clifton Kilgore of Denver, Colo.

"Well, I'm going to try" to reach a 100 years old, he said.

"She's tougher than an old Texas boot," he added. "A lot of people say they can work themselves to death, but she's still going (strong), and she has worked hard all of her life. We were raised on a farm, and that was hard work."

"She a pistol," Carey Bennett, 36, of Vermont said of her great-grandmother. "She's as sharp as a tack. And the great-granddaughter said she wouldn't mind living to be 100 "only if I can be like her."

MURDER

The dead man was in his in 50s, Smith said, and lived in the Permian Basin "west of Midland."

Justice of the Peace China Long said Friday that an autopsy by a Big Spring pathologist suggested that the man died of "internal head injuries caused by trauma from a blunt instrument" and that the man had been shot in the head.

Ms. Long said she would "go along" with the police in withholding the dead man's identify until arrests are effected. She ruled the death a homicide.

The man's body was found Thursday afternoon in a sand pit at the dump by a boy playing in the lower west end. The man had been dead about a week, Ms. Long surmised.

His body was covered by a mattress, boards, and the shell of a washing machine, Ms. Long said.

In another development, Big Spring police said that a fourth arrest has been made in the death of Big Spring radio disc jockey Charles Vance Kimble, 61. Kimble was found shot in his home April 1.

Arrested Thursday in Florida in connection with Kimble's death was Dennis Noggler, 17, of Sand Springs.

Arrested earlier in New Orleans, La., and charged with capital murder were Pamela Newton, 21, and her brother, Patrick Newton, 17, both of Sand Springs, and Michael Hodnett, 23, of Big Spring, according to Howard County Deputy Sheriff George Quintero. The trio was in Howard County Jail Friday night.

Beal

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements dubbed Elizabeth Beal of Midland the Texas Bluebonnet Queen under sunny mid-morning skies in the southwest garden of the governor's mansion Friday.

Wearing a crown, a full-length white gown and holding a bouquet of bluebonnets — the Texas state flower found blooming along Texas roadsides every spring — Miss Beal received the traditional gold seal of Texas. The governor and first lady Rita Clements received a two volume history of Bell County for their Texana collection.

Miss Beal is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Beal of Midland and the sister-in-law of the former Mary LaForce of Midland who reigned as Bluebonnet Queen in 1981-82. Miss Beal is a sophomore at the University of Texas at Austin and is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority.

The Texas Bluebonnet Committee Inc. of Salado chooses the queen and encourages planting and preservation of the state flower.

Pizza chains cut delivery thin in many city neighborhoods

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Domino's Pizza promises delivery in 30 minutes or less, but some of the nation's neighborhoods are so violent the company won't let its drivers venture into them.

"It's not worth risking a driver for a $10 pizza," said Robert Rutick, night manager for the Domino's store in Irvington.

At least three Domino's drivers were killed last year.

Recent incidents such as a driver being robbed of a pizza at gunpoint and the throwing of rocks and bottles at cars led to the cutting off of night service to parts of Irvington, just west of Newark, where some neighborhoods are so dangerous they've never had any service.

"The only times we stop delivery to an area is when there have been a number of incidents," said Rutick.

Delivery constitutes the majority of Domino's Pizza sales, with only a small amount of take-out business. Many Domino's outlets around the nation do not offer any eat-in service.

In Camden, across the Delaware River from Philadelphia, service is limited to only a few well-lighted areas with round-the-clock security like hospitals and the Rutgers University campus, said Robert Lermanis, night manager for a store that serves parts of Camden and Burlington counties.

"Many drivers are leery of delivering into Camden because it's a high-crime area," Lermanis said. "We couldn't get anybody to work here if we went into Camden."

Customers whose areas are cut off are told they can always come to the store to pick up a pizza, said Dennis Obert, security director for the Domino's region that includes Southern California, Hawaii, Arizona and Nevada.

One driver was killed in Obert's region last year when three gang members confronted him after he delivered a pizza in San Bernardino, Calif.

John Gomez, night manager for a store in San Bernardino, said the crime rate in the city 50 miles east of Los Angeles is "staggering," even compared with his native New York City.

"Most of my drivers are scared anyway," Gomez said. "But I understood myself coming from a low-income family that those people deserve the same service as the rest of the city. We just have to tell them because of the area we can't deliver at night."

Authorities identify car bombing victim

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police on Friday identified the victim of a fiery car bomb explosion as a 26-year-old Colombian national who had been in Fort Worth for about a month.

The victim was identified as Giovanni Manuel Mancini, a part-owner in a suburban Hurst tanning salon, said Fort Worth Police spokesman Doug Clarke.

Mancini was trapped inside his rented car after a bomb blast that scattered debris over a two-block area Thursday afternoon.

"We have several motives right now, but we have not found anything to direct us intensely in any one area," said Louis Iliano, resident agent for the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, one of several agencies involved in the bombing investigation.

Iliano and other officials declined to reveal possible motives in the slaying. Iliano said Mancini had a criminal record, but he would not reveal details of any prior arrests.

Evidence gathered at the scene has been sent to the bureau's laboratory in California for analysis, he said.

"What we're doing is interviewing all the witnesses right now and trying to put together exactly what happened at that place," Iliano said.

Witnesses told police that Mancini had parked his car and crossed the street to order food at a barbecue stand when two men in another car pulled up beside the vehicle, threw an object into the car and sped away.

After he returned to the rented Ford Taurus, there was an explosion strong enough to blow the roof of the car more than 100 feet away, sending a plume of smoke into the air that was visible from three-quarters of a mile away, authorities and witnesses said.

The car was parked near the intersection of Loop 820 and North Beach Street.

"Just the way that the car is damaged leads you to believe it (the bomb) would be in the passenger compartment," Kratz said. "The force was on the interior of the car, not under the hood."

Iliano said Friday that investigators have still not determined what type of device exploded.

Kratz said the car was rented on February 25, and that Mancini lived in the nearby Fossil Ridge Apartments.

Lawmaker: Turf wars hurt war on drugs

By JENNIFER DIXON

STATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Turf wars, mismanagement and a lack of leadership plague Operation Alliance's efforts to stop the flow of drugs across the U.S.-Mexico border, and the number of seizures falls short of government claims, a congressman who investigated the task force said Friday.

"Once again, a lack of leadership is undermining the war on drugs," said U.S. Rep. Glenn English, chairman of the House Government Operations justice subcommittee, which spent a year scrutinizing Operation Alliance. "No one is in charge, no one is responsible."

The man in charge of Operation Alliance, set up in August 1986 to coordinate drug-fighting efforts in the Southwest by a variety of federal agencies, is Frank Keating, assistant secretary for enforcement at the U.S. Treasury Department.

But Keating is now Attorney General Edwin Meese's choice to fill the No. 3 spot in the Justice Department.

A Treasury spokesman said he had no comment Friday on the report, and a spokesman for the Justice Department, which has several agencies involved in the alliance, referred questions to Treasury.

English, D-Okla., said he doesn't fault Keating for Operation Alliance's failure to quell drug smuggling but blames the administration for not giving someone the authority to marshal staff and resources from the various agencies.

"Operation Alliance is a good idea that isn't working because of turf battles and a lack of strong leadership from the top. The agencies, including the Customs Service, Drug Enforcement Administration and the Border Patrol, have been mired in the same inter-agency feuding which has frustrated nearly all of our federal anti-drug abuse programs," English said.

"In good conscience, I can't say Operation Alliance has made much of a contribution," English said.

English blamed part of the problem on Mexico's "refusal to participate" and also on Customs for not lending its air wing in the fight on drugs along the 2,000-mile border.

"Operation Alliance is limited to ground action, but 60 percent of cocaine comes in by air," English said. The air wing "is not really a part of Operation Alliance."

The report said that although administration officials had promised to put an additional 300 Border Patrol agents along the border — where one-third of marijuana, cocaine and heroin are believed to be smuggled into the country — there has been a net loss of agents.

Participating agencies failed to coordinate efforts and did not use the El Paso Intelligence Center, where U.S. narcotics information is stored and disseminated, the report said.

"Operation Alliance should be using EPIC to base their operations on, but we point out they did not," said a staff member of the House Government Operations. "There was no coordination for the most part with EPIC. Here was an opportunity to use available intelligence, but they didn't bother to do it."

The committee compared the number and size of seizures in the year before Operation Alliance with the first year after it went to work, and found the size of the seizures had increased dramatically.

But the committee said it was concerned the number of seizures has "not increased as dramatically as the administration has implied. The inference that can be drawn from the huge quantities of narcotics being seized is that the loads which smugglers are attempting to bring into the United States are substantially larger now than ever before."

EPIC figures indicate there were 246 cocaine seizures along the Southwest border totaling 2,256 kilograms between July 1985 and June 1986. But during the following year, there were 120 cocaine seizures totaling 7,685 kilograms.

According to the General Accounting Office, this represents an increase of 241 percent in the quantity of cocaine, but a 51 percent decrease in the number of seizures.

The committee acknowledges some factors may affect the interpretation of the figures, such as some small seizures through the end of 1986 that were of a quantity that would not have been counted in later estimates. But the committee said despite those caveats, it was still concerned about the number of seizures.

The number of marijuana and heroin busts also has not increased dramatically, the report said.

Operation Alliance does not appear to have a budget, the staffer said, and each agency is expected to use its own funds.

The House Committee on Government Operations, chaired by U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, released the report this week.

Mattox: TDC can be freed from supervision in four years

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas' improving prison system could free itself of federal court supervision in four years, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Friday after the prison's court-appointed monitor proposed eliminating his office by 1990.

An attorney representing the inmates who filed the class-action Ruiz lawsuit 16 years ago, however, called Special Master Vincent Nathan's timetable "a little too optimistic." San Francisco attorney William Bennett Turner also predicted that the Texas Department of Corrections' massive construction plan would keep the prisons under the court's yoke "for the rest of the century."

Nathan, whose 11-member team has monitored TDC's compliance with court-ordered reforms since 1981, filed his recommended "timetable for termination of the mastership" with U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice in Tyler on Friday. It applauds the state's "recent record in this case" and outlines the "concentrated efforts" TDC must undertake to achieve virtually complete compliance by March 1, 1990. At that point, TDC would monitor itself and report directly to Justice.

"If this report is adopted by the court, a foreseeable end to the Ruiz litigation will be in sight," Nathan wrote. He warned that all sides must "join forces over the course of the next two years to prevent the emergence of 'Ruiz II,' an event that all must agree would be disheartening and that would trivialize the efforts that have been made in this litigation over the past 10 years."

"We're optimistic that sometime we'll be able to get the federal court entirely out of the supervisory business here (TDC). Realistically, we could be out in four years."
— Jim Mattox

Mattox said he expects Justice will accept the report. That would put in place a series of requirements TDC must meet in providing medical, security, maintenance and legal services to the inmates. It also would allow TDC to begin self-monitoring immediately over areas such as solitary confinement, visitation regulations and medical departments at 20 prison units.

"Although we are elated with the actions announced today, we clearly recognize the heavy responsibility that remains with us," said Charles Terrell, chairman of the TDC board. "We ain't out of the woods yet."

Failure to meet those responsibilities, Mattox and Terrell warned, would bring Nathan's office back into the picture. Gov. Bill Clements and the attorney general will meet with Justice in Tyler on Friday, and Mattox said he expects Nathan's recommendation to be a top topic of conversation.

"We're optimistic that sometime we'll be able to get the federal court entirely out of the supervisory business here," he said. "Realistically, we could be out in four years."

Clements called Nathan's proposal proof that TDC has improved compliance since he took office in 1987, when the state faced possible contempt-of-court fines of up to $800,000 a day. "It is time, however, to put endless court hearings behind us and provide sufficient prison capacity to hold felons," he said.

"Our prisons will abide by the law, and those who break the law will end up in them."

Turner, the inmates' attorney, said Nathan is gambling that TDC will comply with Justices' orders in the face of "public and political pressure on the state not to screw up."

"It'd be a colossal embarrassment to the state if...Judge Justice feels it necessary to order the special master to stick around," he said.

Turner predicted TDC would have difficulty meeting Nathan's timetable for compliance in existing prison units, adding that "it's silly to think" TDC will comply if it goes ahead with plans to add 20,000 new beds to the system over the next four years. "The idea," he said, "is crazy."

"The expansion is the prescription for continued court supervision for the rest of the century," Turner said.

Mattox said TDC intends to comply with the orders as it adds prison beds. "We know that we must do that and we fully intend to and no one should think that we're going to allow ourselves to slip back into the same problems we've had in the past."

Woman who was gang-raped shocked by ordeal, relative says

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 19-year-old woman who was gang-raped by as many as 20 men in Duval County last month remains in shock and has been devastated by the ordeal, a relative said.

The woman has been the victim of fear, scorn, shame and ridicule since reporting she was abducted March 26 and gang-raped during a four-hour ordeal at two ranches north of this South Texas town, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported Friday in a copyright story.

"Her anguish is mental, because she feels so bad about what happened...and feels for her husband — what he must be going through," said the relative, whose identity was withheld.

The relative described the woman as a shy, simple person who doesn't draw attention to herself.

"She isn't the type to start a conversation on her own," the relative said. "She'll converse, but only if you talk to her...She mostly talked to her children. She was always playing with them.

"She's attractive, but she is poor," the relative said. "So you'll never see her well-dressed because they don't have the means for her to do so. She's just a very simple woman. She doesn't wear hairdos or makeup...They don't even have enough to eat."

"Her anguish is mental, because she feels so bad about what happened...and feels for her husband — what he must be going through."

— Relative of woman who was raped

The woman, her husband and their two children have been hidden by authorities since the incident to protect them from possible retaliation from relatives and friends of men implicated in the case. When they have returned home, the family has been taunted by neighbors, the relative said.

"They lean over the fence and sometimes they break out laughing," the relative said of the neighborhood men. "The thing is that many of them see (the victim's husband) so humiliated...so, so pathetic that they're not afraid of him."

The relative said the woman had been walking home from a family barbecue in the neighborhood when she was abducted.

"She said she was going home to check on the kids," said another relative. The children, one of whom was ill, had been left home with their grandmother that day, the relative said.

The woman attended the barbecue for a short time and then walked the few blocks home while her husband went to another barbecue with other relatives. She was abducted and taken to an illegal cockfight, where she said she went through a four-hour ordeal, being raped repeatedly.

Ten men have been arrested and charged with sexual assault, and authorities are searching for others, police said.

Her husband had been looking for her, anxiously shouting her name through the neighborhood. He found her the next morning walking around, ashamed and in tears.

The relative said her husband, who has always been outgoing and jovial, has been depressed by the event.

"He was loud...always talking," the relative said of the husband. "He was always talking...making jokes. Now, I see him so sad, very depressed and completely humiliated."

STATE IN BRIEF

Juror dismissed because he says defendant robbed him

DALLAS (AP) — A man recently called for jury duty wasn't picked to hear the case, but he may be back in the courtroom — to testify.

Truett Walton, who was on a jury panel six weeks ago for an aggravated robbery case, told State District Judge Jack Hampton he believed the defendant was the same man who robbed him at knifepoint four years ago.

Walton's case is scheduled to heard Tuesday by a grand jury, which could indict Sylvester Irving, 40, for aggravated robbery.

Walton was robbed of $400 on June 5, 1984, while sitting in his car in an east Dallas area, according to court records.

Outside the presence of other jurors, Walton told the judge and an assistant district attorney he believed Irving had robbed him.

Walton was excused from the jury, then went to the police department and picked Irving's photograph from a lineup.

"This is a small world," said Bill West, a bailiff in Hampton's court. "I love it."

Police digging for boy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities were digging in a northside park Friday afternoon in a search for the remains of a 5-month-old boy whose father claims he killed and buried the child more than a year ago.

San Antonio police and park rangers began their search with the Pampa man's assistance early Friday afternoon. No body had been found after several hours of digging under drizzly skies, police said.

"The gentleman is cooperating fully with police but he's having difficulty remembering exactly where it (the body) was buried," said police spokeswoman Sandy Perez. "But he does remember that it was about two feet deep."

The Pampa man was brought to San Antonio Friday morning after he told police that he buried the child in January 1987 at Kallison Park.

The man has not been charged with any crime, authorities said.

Clements to visit Detroit

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements will visit Detroit and Chicago on Monday in an effort to encourage out-of-state investment in Texas.

In Detroit the governor will meet with Gerald Greenwald, chairman of Chrysler Motors, and in Chicago he will meet with Jerry Pearlman, chief executive officer of the Zenith Corp.

"My message will be straightforward and direct. Texas is a great place to do business, and it is getting better day by day," Clements said.

Dutch windmill dwarfed by Palace Hotel

BREUKELEN, Netherlands (AP)— Dutch miller Hendrik van Houwelingen has a grudge against a new hotel here modeled on Beijing's Forbidden City, claiming it's an eyesore that robs his 17th-century windmill of its wind.

Sandwiched between a highway and a railroad near this quintessentially Dutch rural township, the Oriental Palace Hotel boasts 143 bedrooms, four restaurants — one of them named "The Windmill" — and a lavish Oriental garden decorated with a cluster of Chinese pavilions.

The controversy over the behemoth building is a metaphor for the debate here between architectural conservationists and authorities who are struggling against adverse economic currents and the unemployment that goes with them.

The massive four-story facade of the Oriental Palace is a wood, metal and concrete replica of the exterior of the 18th-century palace where China's emperors lived until 1924. The last emperor, Pu Yi, abdicated in 1912 but occupied the Beijing palace for 12 more years.

The hotel's pagoda-shaped roof, supported by a colonnade in red steel, is richly ornamented with dragon heads and other wood cuttings, drawing instant attention from the tens of thousands of travelers who daily pass nearby.

But the recently opened Oriental Palace hovers over the back yard of the Kortrijk Windmill, which since 1696 has been a landmark in this community of 8,500, 20 miles south of Amsterdam.

The anomaly between the two buildings has not been lost on Van Houwelingen, the Kortrijk's volunteer miller.

"It just doesn't fit in the Dutch landscape," Van Houwelingen told The Associated Press. "Would I put up a windmill in the middle of some square in Peking?"

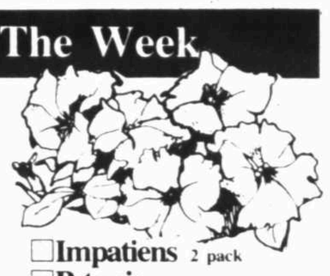

Although the windmill operates only once a week as a tourist attraction, Van Houwelingen, a 54-year-old railroad technician, complained that the Oriental Palace "doesn't leave us any wind from that corner at all."

Reagan OKs economic sanctions against Panama

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan on Friday invoked a sweeping economic-sanctions law against Panama in a renewed effort to force military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega to surrender his hold on the Central American country.

"I have authorized these steps in response to the unusual and extraordinary threat posed by" Noriega, Reagan said in a letter to congressional leaders.

Reagan's move, which had been hinted earlier by a senior administration official, came as the United States continued to elect mostly economic options in response to Noriega's unflinching hold on power.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that among the steps the president ordered under provisions of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act are:

— Blocking assets of the government of Panama in the United States.

— Prohibiting payments by all people and organizations in the United States to the Noriega regime.

— Prohibiting payments to the Noriega regime by all U.S. citizens and organizations in Panama, including U.S. branches and subsidiaries.

"These further steps reaffirm our commitment to democratic government in Panama and our belief that Noriega would best serve his country by complying with the instruction of President (Eric Arturo) Delvalle to relinquish his post," Reagan said in the letter to Capitol Hill leaders.

The official, describing the presidential decision-making process for reporters on grounds of anonymity, had said earlier that invocation of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act was one of the options that has been presented to Reagan by his advisers.

It was the first time the law has been invoked since the administration used it in the mid-1980s to squeeze Libyan strongman Moammar Gadhafi. Then-President Carter invoked the act against Iran in the late 1970s.

"The people of the United States and the people of Panama have shared a long and mutually productive relationship exemplified by the historic Panama Canal treaties," Reagan's letter said.

"The United States has been, and remains, committed to fulfilling faithfully its obligations under the Panama Canal treaties. We are prepared to resume our close working relationships with the Panamanian Defense Forces, once civilian government and constitutional democracy are re-established."

Panamanian assets essentially have been frozen in U.S. commercial banks since late March, when Delvalle obtained an injunction from a federal court in Miami and the administration followed up that by asking the Federal Reserve Board to freeze these monies.

The act that Reagan resorted to Friday merely broadens the authority behind the freezing of these assets.

"I assume this ensures that the injunctions that were ordered at that time remain in effect," said a senior administration official, who declined to be named publicly.

Under the law that Reagan invoked in an executive order, violators can be prosecuted. The criminal penalty is a 10-year prison sentence and up to $50,000 in fines, and the civil penalty is a $10,000 fine.

The latest move stops short of an all-out trade embargo, and the official said that if the administration chose that option, "we would have to get another executive order."

But he said that officials tried to "surgically design" the newest sanctions so that they would not destroy the Panamanian economy.

Asked what national security emergency justified Reagan's invoking the seldom-used law, the official said "the presence of General Noriega, who denies the legitimate authority of Panama."

"The United States' interests are very heavily intertwined with Panama's," he said. "His presence increases the threat to the canal, the people of Panama and our citizens there."

One element of the powers Reagan decided to use Friday strips away the voluntary nature of the request the administration earlier had made to U.S. businesses to withhold tax payments to Panama.

Another aspect of the order applies these restrictions to the Panama-based subsidiaries of firms based in the United States, such as Texaco and United Brands.

The official said there are roughly 40 to 50 such subsidiaries in Panama which regularly make tax payments to the government there.

White House chief of staff Howard Baker, talking to reporters as the president vacationed at his mountaintop ranch, denied that the economic sanctions used so far have failed.

"After all, General Noriega is (a) much-beleaguered, de facto leader of the Panamanian government," he said. "...But I think that there has been a remarkable success so far in the economic efforts by the United States to convince General Noriega that he should leave."

Demjanjuk asks that citizenship be restored

CLEVELAND (AP) — John Demjanjuk asked a federal court Friday to restore his U.S. citizenship, 10 days before a panel of Israeli judges is to announce its verdict in Demjanjuk's yearlong war crimes trial.

Demjanjuk lost his citizenship in 1981 and was extradited to Israel two years ago. He was stripped of his citizenship when a U.S. District judge ruled he lied on immigration papers about his whereabouts to conceal his past as a death-camp guard in Nazi-occupied Poland during World War II.

In the suit filed Friday in U.S. District Court, Demjanjuk alleges that government attorneys withheld evidence that would have helped his attorneys prove his innocence.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk says he's a victim of mistaken identity and was never at the Treblinka camp. Demjanjuk has admitted lying on his immigration papers, but says he did so because he feared execution if he returned to the Soviet Union.

In Israel, Demjanjuk is accused of being "Ivan the Terrible," a sadistic guard who operated the gas chambers at Treblinka in 1942-43. Demjanjuk says he served in the Soviet Army, was captured by the Germans in 1941 and remained in prisoner-of-war camps until 1943.

The Israeli judges are expected to render a verdict April 18.

Demjanjuk's attorneys and relatives said the court filing included information gathered since Demjanjuk's 1981 denaturalization trial in Cleveland. Demjanjuk, 68, a retired autoworker, lived in suburban Seven Hills.

The material came from Freedom of Information Act requests filed by Demjanjuk's son-in-law, Ed Nishnic, and from Justice Department documents sent anonymously to them, the family said.

Cleveland attorney David Eisler said much of the information was used by Demjanjuk's attorneys in the Israeli trial.

"We've acquired documents through unknown sources that really lay out, plain and clear, what OSI's intentions were from the beginning — that they did not believe Mr. Demjanjuk was in fact Ivan the Terrible and they went ahead and prosecuted him and suppressed the evidence that would help him prove his case," Nishnic said Friday.

According to Demjanjuk's suit, government investigators interviewed 71 people but only disclosed the existence of 31 interviews to defense attorneys and only released 11 statements. The suit also alleges the government failed to reveal that most of the people interviewed failed to identify Demjanjuk or their identification was flawed.

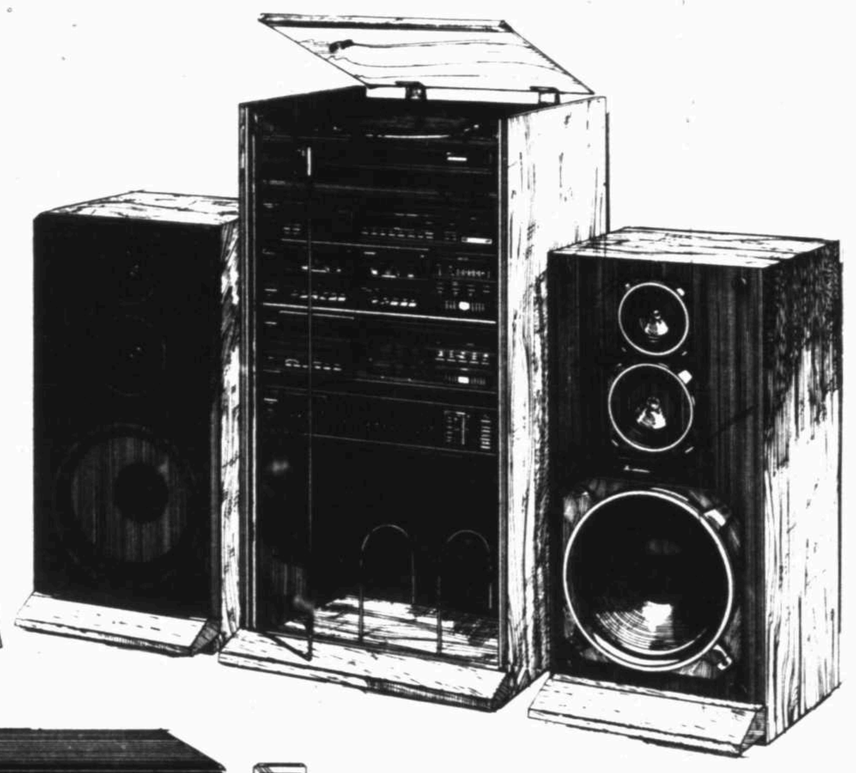

Demjanjuk's suit names the government and various present and former government officials involved in the denaturalization trial.

A spokesman for the Justice Department in Washington, John Russell, said Friday, "Mr. Demjanjuk and his attorneys have been unsuccessful on a number of appeals in his case, and we will respond in court to the present suit."

Decline in oil wealth forces cut in arms sales, agency says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The decline of oil wealth and easy credit has sapped the energy of the Middle East arms-buying spree of the early 1980s, contributing to a $16 billion-a-year drop in worldwide arms imports, the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency said Friday.

"As late as 1984, the trend in arms imports by developing nations was sharply up in almost all years, fueled by ambitious force improvement programs, financed, in most cases by rising oil prices and easy credit," agency's annual study of global arms sales said.

The oil glut and the Third World's debt problems have forced a decline in arms buying. Besides, many of the countries who bought all those weapons in the early 1980s don't need any more now, the report said.

The study, "World Military Expenditures and Arms Transfers," contains statistics on arms supplying and buying countries through 1986, when weapons imports totaled more than $34 billion. That compared to $42 billion in 1985 and approximately $50 billion a year between 1981 and 1984.

"A sharp decline in Middle East arms imports in 1985 and 1986 was the main contributor to the decline in the world and developing-country totals," the agency said. "From their peak in 1984, Middle East imports dropped an average of 24 percent in 1985 and 1986."

Military spending by Middle Eastern countries also declined, while the world as a whole was paying more and more for war-making capability. From $880 billion in 1985, global military spending rose to $921 billion in 1986, the report said.

Because of the difficulty of obtaining data on arms purchases, especially in non-democratic countries, the most recent country-by-country data on weapons imports covers the year 1985, the agency said. In that period, war-torn Iraq topped the list, importing $4 billion worth of armaments, mostly from the Soviet Union.

Iraq was followed in order by Saudi Arabia, India, Cuba, West Germany, Iran, Libya, Syria, Egypt and the Soviet Union, which purchases large amounts of weaponry from its allies in Eastern Europe.

The United States, which is being urged by its NATO partners to buy more weapons from Western Europe, ranked 23rd on the list of importing nations, with $600 million worth of purchases.

As it has for many years, the Soviet Union led the list of international arms sellers. Its transfers totaled $15.3 billion; the United States was second with $12.3 billion, followed by France, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Italy, Britain, West Germany, China and East Germany.

The variety and quality of Soviet and U.S. weapons and the superpowers' willingness to employ weapons sales "as a political instrument, suggest that the two will remain the Third World's largest suppliers by significant margins for many years to come," the report said.

Among developing countries, China and Brazil are by far the most successful arms sellers, the report said.

The most publicized weapon in China's inventory is the Silkworm anti-ship missile, which Iran has used against vessels in the Persian Gulf during the seven-year-old Iran-Iraq War. China has also sold arms to Iraq.

"The Iran-Iraq War proved to be a bonanza for China, enabling it to sell in the first three years of the conflict more arms than it had exported in the preceding quarter-century," the report said.

China has the potential to take away business from the superpowers in Africa, Latin America and Asia because it specializes in less sophisticated, cheaper weapons — some of which are copies of old Soviet arms, the report said.

Brazil, which ranked 16th on the list of arms exporters, is building a reputation for making "rugged and well-conceived weaponry," some of which is attracting the interest of U.S. and British military procurement officers.

Other Third World suppliers seeking to improve their share of the weapons market are Singapore, North and South Korea, Yugoslavia, Israel, Pakistan, Argentina and Egypt.

American hesitant about marrying Soviet

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — The courtship between an American teacher and her Soviet fiance, who has been in this country two weeks, has spanned most of her adult life, but she's still hesitant about marriage.

Victor Novikov, 56, met Elizabeth Condon, 45, 21 years ago when she was a tour guide for the U.S. Information Agency in Moscow.

They planned to marry in 1979, until Soviet authorities stood in the way, and Novikov has considered himself married ever since.

But Ms. Condon hesitates when asked if the two will marry before Novikov's visa expires.

"We're very pleased with the way things are going," Ms. Condon said. "I just want us to get re-acquainted a little bit, at least have two months to think about it."

"America has exceeded my expectations," Novikov, speaking through an interpreter, said last week while sitting on the steps of Ms. Condon's home, where she has lived with her mother since she was 10.

"I want to say sincerely that I am in ecstasy," he said.

Novikov arrived for his visit March 26, and Ms. Condon met him at New York's Kennedy Airport.

"I recognized him right away, but he was wearing this horrible hat, this soft men's type hat," she said. "The first thing I did was take the hat off."

Novikov said he never married after meeting Ms. Condon because he always felt committed to her.

"He always insisted that everyone call me his wife," she said. "For him, coming here is more like a technicality, like filling out a form. He already feels he's married."

Novikov is planning to take English lessons and hopes to resume work as a research chemist in the United States.

But if they do not marry within three months, he must return to the Soviet Union.

"I have confidence, but it depends on Elizabeth," he said. "As they say in Russian, every week has seven Fridays."

He meant, said Ms. Condon, "that I'm a lot more up and down about this than he is."

But ups and downs have been a hallmark of their relationship.

After they met in Moscow, they kept in touch by mail.

During a 10-week visit in the summer of 1970, when Ms. Condon was studying at Moscow University, Novikov proposed marriage but she refused.

On another 10-week Moscow visit in 1979, they decided to get married that October.

Their wedding was canceled when Soviet officials said they had received an anonymous letter claiming Novikov was already married. That claim was false, Ms. Condon said, but other bureaucratic obstacles prevented the marriage.

Novikov lost his job as a chemist in 1982 after announcing he wanted to emigrate to the United States, and has since supported himself with menial jobs.

"There were many difficult days and much was lost," said Novikov. "Time itself was lost."

Firefighters assist Peter Schillaci, a Portland, Ore., city worker, who was buried under two tons of dirt in a cave-in Thursday afternoon. Co-workers saved Schillaci's life by using their hands, helmets and shovels to uncover him. Schillaci was in fair condition Friday at a Portland hospital.

Dirt walls collapse, burying city worker

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Co-workers dug frantically with their hands, helmets and shovels to save a man buried when underground walls suddenly gave way, covering him with two tons of dirt, officials said.

Pete Schillaci, 33, a Portland city worker, was in fair condition Friday at Oregon Health Sciences University Hospital.

He had been hooking up an underground sewer line when the accident occurred Thursday. He was underground for less than 20 minutes.

"Everything was looking good, and then with absolutely no warning two tons...came down on us," said Jerry Kuhn, himself mired to the waist.

Kuhn pulled himself from the hole and, together with backhoe operator Paul Thompson, began scooping at the earth.

After about four minutes, Kuhn said, they uncovered Schillaci's face.

The men followed procedures they had learned in a cardiopulmonary resuscitation class at work. When emergency crews arrived, Schillaci was turning blue from lack of oxygen and blood was trickling from his mouth, said firefighter Brice Brinkhead.

Architect's car hits barrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police say that George White, the architect of the Capitol, suffered minor injuries Friday when his government car struck one of the barricades that he recommended be installed to protect the Capitol from terrorists.

Officer Dan Nichols of the Capitol police force said White, who is responsible for the Capitol's buildings and grounds, was treated by Capitol physicians, along with a driver who also received minor injuries.

Nichols said White's car struck the mechancial barrier at the south entrance to the Capitol Plaza as it was being lowered to allow entry.

"Preliminarily, it looks like driver error," said Nichols, adding that the investigation was continuing.

The front bumper of White's large black Mercury came to rest atop the barrier. Cooling fluid was leaking from the vehicle and the right front tire was flat.

The hydraulic barriers, intended to prevent unauthorized vehicles from entering the Capitol grounds, were installed last year as part of a $13 million plan White recommended to tighten security, according to Carroll.

Fires burn grassland

MIAMI (AP) — Firefighters worked Friday to contain brush fires across the state that were fueled by dry wind and burned thousands of acres of grassland, trees, bushes and shrubs.

Two firefighters suffered minor injuries fighting the blaze Thursday. No damage to buildings was reported.

The largest fire destroyed 1,500 to 2,000 acres at the edge of the Osceola National Forest, said Larry Amison, spokesman for the state Division of Forestry.

He said firefighters were trying to hold fire lines, Amison said. "But there's a large unburned area inside the line, and they're not confident they'll be able to hold it if the winds pick up."

A fire that authorities tried to contain near Port St. Lucie was the biggest concern, said Seb Farina, Division of Forestry spokesman. The fire had burned nearly 1,300 acres and endangered a residential subdivision.

"It's out of the (fire) lines," Farina said. "There are some structures that could be threatened. It's not a hysterical sort of thing, but it's the fire with the greatest potential."

Because Florida remained dry Friday, with wind gusting up to 20 mph, officials expected the fire problem to continue.

Mother sentenced in deaths

WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — A woman was sentenced to 12 to 46 months in jail for the deaths of her two children, who were locked in a hot car for five hours last August.

Washington County Judge John Bell on Thursday sentenced Lisa Shields, 20, of Indiana. She pleaded guilty March 1 to two counts of endangering the welfare of children.

Her husband, John Shields, 23, has yet to be sentenced. He pleaded guilty to two counts of involuntary manslaughter.

The parents' separate trials were moved out of Indiana County because of widespread publicity about the case.

Calvin Shields, 1, and his sister, Kristle, 3, died of heat exposure, authorities said. They were locked in the car from morning until early afternoon on a hot, partly sunny day while the parents slept in a house after a party the night before.

Suspect returns money

VERONA, Pa. (AP) — Police say they captured a suspect in a convenience store robbery when he returned the cash minutes after he took it.

David J. Rupp, 28, of Verona allegedly demanded money from early Thursday and punched a customer, police said.

The man left with cash from the register but soon returned. He asked if the clerk had called police and placed the cash on the counter when the clerk said he had not.

"You're not going to remember my face, are you?" the man said and fled.

Another customer saw the license on the man's van and called police, who arrested Rupp.

Suspected child abuse victim dies

Police say girl used as pandhandling prop

NEW YORK (AP) — A battered 3-year-old being used as a panhandling prop died just after a concerned passerby sent her to a hospital, the second death in two weeks of a toddler who lived at the city's largest welfare hotel, police said Friday.

The girl's mother's boyfriend was charged with murder.

Maya Figueroa had "bruises and contusions on her face, back and neck. Some of these bruises appeared to be recent," police Capt. Michael Gardner said at a news conference.

Police questioned the girl's mother, Elise Vasquez, 32, who was in Bellevue Hospital after giving birth Wednesday to her fifth child.

The girl was pronounced dead Thursday evening, 20 minutes after she arrived at New York University Medical Center, said Aaron Rosenthal, assistant chief of Manhattan detectives.

An autopsy Friday indicated the toddler died of blunt force injuries of head and abdomen with internal injuries and bleeding, said Ellen Borakove of the city medical examiner's office. The case was officially ruled child abuse and a homicide, she said.

The girl had been sent to the hospital by a man who saw her on a street corner with Benito Sanches, 29, who had been panhandling, police said. Maya was in a stroller and her 18-month-old brother was in Sanches' arms, Rosenthal said.

"Maya appeared to be in serious condition with trauma at least around the face," Rosenthal said.

He said Sanches had a habit of using the children to panhandle.

"He'll take two of the children of his girlfriend, put them in a stroller and go out and solicit funds in their presence," Rosenthal said.

The passerby, who had not been identified, stopped a cab, gave the driver $5 and told him to take Sanches and the children to a hospital. The cab driver told police what had happened.

Gardner said police were seeking the passerby.

"We appeal to him to come forward. We would like to speak to him about what was going on," said Gardner.

Sanches is a drug abuser with a past record who came to the United States in May 1980 with the Cuban boat lift, Gardner said. He was charged with second-degree murder, said police Officer Jim Coleman.

Maya lived with her mother, her brother and Sanches at the Prince George Hotel on Manhattan's East Side, where the city houses 463 homeless families, or about 2,600 people.

The city provides housing for about 28,000 homeless people, 12,000 of them in welfare hotels and the remainder in shelters, said spokeswoman Suzanne Trazoff of the Human Resources Administration.

Two weeks ago, 3-year-old Quintin McKenzie was scalded to death in a bathtub at the hotel. His mother, Merian McKenzie, was charged with second-degree murder and her husband, Calvin C. McKenzie, was charged with assault for allegedly beating the toddler.

"These are terrible stories," said Ms. Trazoff.

"The Prince George has a large number of social services," she said. A social service office, open during daytime hours, is located in the hotel and a variety of programs are available, including preschool and day care programs, she said.

When asked why no one apparently noticed that the child had been beaten, Ms. Trazoff speculated that the child's family may not have requested any social service.

The spokeswoman said HRA was checking its records to see if the family had ever asked for help from the agency.

(Maya Figueroa) had been sent to the hospital by a man who saw her on a street corner with Benito Sanches-...who had been panhandling...Maya was in a stroller and her 18-month-old brother was in Sanches' arms-...''(Sanches would) take two of the children of his girlfriend, put them in a stroller and go out and solicit funds in their presence.''

— Detective Aaron Rosenthal

The 18-month-old boy, whose name was not released, was admitted to the hospital for observation although he had no visible signs of abuse.

Sanches and Ms. Vasquez had lived together for 16 months, Rosenthal said. Ms. Vasquez's two other children live with relatives. The baby she had just had at Bellevue was the first the couple had together.

Estacado team to beat in today's Tall City meet

From Staff Reports

The powerful Class 4A Lubbock Estacado Matadors invade Memorial Stadium today in quest of defending their Tall City Relays' title while five District 4-5A teams keep an eye on the week ahead.

The Tall City run begins at 10 a.m. with field event finals and running preliminaries. Running finals begin at 1:30 p.m.

Estacado, who won the West Texas Relays title in the 4A Division last March, now goes for bigger gains against the 5A schools of Midland Lee, Midland High, Odessa Permian, San Angelo and Odessa High. Lubbock Coronado also is in the seven-team field.

The girls, too, will present a seven-team division with Midland Lee, Odessa Permian, Lubbock Coronado, Lubbock High, Lubbock Dunbar and Abilene Cooper. Midland High is the defending champion. Coronado, Permian and Lee have all won track crowns this year.

The Tall City meet is annually important since all teams will head into their various district meets next week. It is at the district meets where Region I berths can be earned.

The District 4-5A meet for both boys and girls will be held next Saturday in San Angelo. The top two winners in each event in San Angelo will earn Region I berths in Lubbock in three weeks. The top two finishers in Lubbock will move on to the state meet in Austin in mid-May.

MHS, Lee battle for first place

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

While it won't exactly live up to the pre-hype billing of the "Thriller in Manila II," Saturday's rematch between Midland High and Midland Lee has enough going for it to bring plenty of local baseball fans to Angel Stadium.

4-5A

To wit:

— Both the Rebels and Bulldogs, along with Abilene Cooper, are tied for the District 4-5A lead with 4-2 records;

— MHS won the district opener, 10-5, but it can be said that Lee has improved vastly since that meeting while the 'Dogs have slipped a notch or two;

— Saturday's meeting, set to begin at 2 p.m., will mark the final game of the regular season between the two squads;

— The winner of the game will maintain a distinct advantage going into the district's stretch drive while the loser of the all-important contest will be hard-pressed to make up for the lost ground.

"I think it's of almost monumental importance," Midland High coach Tim Whalen said. "They're tied with us. We need to win to get ahead." They're tied with us?

COULD IT be that Lee head coach Ernie Johnson feels that the Bulldogs are the ones tied with the Rebels?

"That's just a play on words," Johnson feels. "I think this'll be the big game for both teams. With two losses, everybody's in good shape, but with three you're beginning to hurt."

Johnson said he'll go with senior right-hander Michael Pearson as his starting pitcher. Pearson (1-1 in district, 1.90 ERA, 11.0 IP) received the nod after No. 1 starter Cal Jenkins pitched 13 innings in Lee's 8-6 win Tuesday over Abilene High.

Jenkins, who threw 223 pitches against AHS, will start the game at third base and will be ready for relief duties if needed.

For MHS, Whalen is undecided on his starter, but is leaning toward Joe Rendon (1-0 in district, 2.00 ERA, 7 IP), Kevin Rychell (1-1, 2.33 ERA, 12.0 IP) or Sam Sowders (1-0, 3.50 ERA, 4.0 IP).

JOHNSON SAID playing at Angel — Midland High's home field — will not prove to be detrimental to their purpose of winning. "We've played a whole lot better on the road than at home the past two years," he said.

The Rebs are down to only 12 players after third baseman Allen Brown suffered a broken nose last week and is expected out of action another week. Another Rebel will not suit up due to disciplinary reasons.

Both Johnson and Whalen have similar assessments on the 4-5A race, agreeing that, as expected, it has turned out exciting.

"I expected Cooper to play a little better," Johnson said. "I thought Midland High would be a little more consistent than they have been.

"I'm not happy with the way we're playing. But if someone asked me at the beginning of the year if we'd be 4-2 at this point, I'd have to say yes. I think we're in as good a shape as anybody."

"THIS DARNED district is so crazy. There's so many people who can beat you," said Whalen, whose team lost 2-1 to Odessa High last week.

Home pays off for Dogs

By JIMMY PATTERSON

How important is the home course?

Just ask Midland High golf coach John Ford.

"Home course helps a lot," Ford said in what might be the understatement of the three-week-old District 4-5A golf tour. "The kids just know the course. We play it all the time."

Midland High Bulldog golfers' knowledge of the Ranchland Hills course was evident Friday as they bolted from fifth place to second — just three strokes behind tour leader San Angelo. The 'Dogs finished with a 300 for a three-round total of 922. San Angelo's Bobcats continue to lead the pace with a 318—919.

No one came close to the round MHS golfers laid down. The closest competition came from Odessa Permian, 11 back with a 311.

"Our senior experience is beginning to show," Ford said of his four upperclassmen — Donnie Doan, Ted Newman, Mark Smith and Mike Johnson. "They worked so hard. There's is the type of devotion you have to have to get these results."

ALL FIVE golfers, including junior Kris Doan, shot in the 70s and all are relatively close in medalist competition.

Permian's Ben Bangert continues to lead in individual honors, firing a 73—217. Johnson and Donnie Doan are closest to Bangert, both at 230.

Midland Lee's luck continues to sour. Lee II retained seventh place with a three-round 973; Lee's No 1 squad moved from ninth to eighth with 986.

"Frustration, definitely," head coach Ronnie Stephens said. "And that's the thing about golf. You can get mad in football and go out and hit somebody and take your frustrations out. Here, you get mad and it toally upsets your game. Our team is so young this year. We just haven't found the stable point."

LEE was paced by J.J. King's 75. After three rounds, King leads Lee with 239. Randy Milby finished with 82—251.

The district tour concludes next week at Odessa's Mission Country Club. MHS coach Ford sees his golfers as sitting pretty going into the final week of action.

"We're sitting in a good position," said Ford, who added his players also have knowledge of the neighboring Odessa links.

Astros' Hatcher delivers in 16th

CINCINNATI (AP) — Billy Hatcher singled home two runs in the 16th inning Friday night to spark a five-run rally that carried the Houston Astros to an 8-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Reliever Larry Andersen, 1-0, started the winning rally with a leadoff single against Jose Rijo, 0-1, the sixth Cincinnati pitcher. Rijo threw wildly to first on Gerald Young's sacrifice bunt, leaving runners at first and third. Young stole second and Hatcher followed with a two-run single.

Al McGuire....speaker at NJCAA All-Star banquet.

McGuire shares cage nuggets

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Television commentator Al McGuire shared his broad basketball knowledge with local and area media representatives at a press conference prior to the Texas-USA All-Star Classic banquet Friday at Midland Center.

McGuire, the former Marquette University basketball coach who recently completed his 11th season as a color commentator for the National Broadcasting Company's college basketball coverage, was the guest speaker at the banquet honoring junior college all-star teams from Texas and nationwide.

The Texas and USA teams will square off in the third annual classic beginning at 7 tonight in the Chaparral Center. Tickets will be available at the door for $4.

MCGUIRE talked about everything from the improved status of junior college basketball nationwide to events of the past few years that boosted that status. The former pro basketball player also discussed NCAA rules changes, Proposition 48, and his own evolution as a broadcaster.

And he talked about Mookie Blaylock. Raved might be a better word.

McGuire called the former Midland College star "my kind of player." Blaylock recently set a single-season college record for steals at NCAA runnerup Oklahoma.

"He might be the best defensive player I've ever seen," McGuire said. "He can destroy an offense by disrupting the rhythm."

McGuire's no stranger to fine defensive players from the junior college level. He coached several nationally-rated defensive squads at Marquette and several of his best were from Texas junior colleges - most notably forwards Bob Lackey and Ric Cobb of 1970 vintage.

BUT while major colleges used to recruit the occasional blue-chipper from the juco ranks, increasingly stringent academic standards dictated by Proposition 48 - the two-year-old NCAA rule that has set minimum grade and test score requirements - have forced many top prospects to hone their academic skills on the juco level.

McGuire said Proposition 48 was implemented too soon after its conception in 1986. "I think they should have waited three more years to put it in.

"They should also allow the ballplayers to do something," he said. Current Proposition 48 rules bar a non-qualifier from playing or practicing with his team for his entire freshman year, if he does sign with a Division I school directly out of high school.

"You can't take a youngster and tell them not to touch a basketball in organized play," McGuire said. "You can get into some bad habits playing intramural, YMCA, CYO or pickup ball."

Course angers Zoeller; Lyle leads Masters

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Fuzzy Zoeller, winner of the 1979 Masters, leveled strong criticism Friday of the playing conditions at the Augusta National Golf Club when he accused the Masters officials of "tricking up" the greens.

He said of the course, "It's a joke out there, and not even any fun."

It was an unexpected blast from Zoeller, who is also the 1984 United States Open champion. Just minutes before he spoke, he completed a spectacular round for a six-under-par 66 in the second round of the 52nd Masters. It was the lowest round of the tournament so far and gave the player a two-under-par 142 for 36 holes and a tie with Gary Hallberg for third place.

Such a round ordinarily turns a golfer's mind to thoughts happier than criticism of the course.

Sandy Lyle, who has two PGA Tour victories this year, took the lead with another superb round, shooting a 67 for a 138. This gave the 1985 British Open champion a two-shot edge over Mark Calcavecchia, who shot a 69 for 140.

Not since Dave Hill called the Hazeltine Golf Club course in Minnesota a "cow pasture" during the 1970 United States Open has a Tour professional used such strong language to criticize a major tournament course. Hill finished second to Tony Jacklin of England in that Open.

The hard greens were the prime cause of Zoeller's attack. He said the egos of tournament officials prevented them from allowing the pros to play softer conditions and make better scores. He implied they did not want to see another 63, which is the record one-round score in each of the four majors.

Lee Trevino heads for barn after failing to make cut

By HAL BOCK

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Lee Trevino had a date with a cow Friday and it was only briefly delayed by the Masters golf tournament.

Trevino went straight from the scorer's tent to his car after shooting an 83 for a two-round total of 164, well shy of the figure needed to stick around for the last two rounds.

"I'm going to milk now," Trevino said. "We don't milk until 3."

Trevino has half ownership in a dairy about 15 miles from the Augusta National Golf Club. That may be the only reason for him to come to this tournament each year.

He has won each of the other majors but never finished better than 10th in the Masters. This was the second straight year he missed the cut.

"Another year shot to hell," he said as he finished No. 18 with a bogey five and entered the scorer's tent. "I don't want to add it up. I'll just read about it in the papers."

He won't like the story. It begins with five bogeys and a double bogey for the first six holes and bogeys on five of the last six holes. He played the middle six at par.

JIM MURRAY

Rick Mears is the one to beat in Indianapolis 500

Murray

You never have to look very far down the track for Rick Mears. If the car keeps running, try first. If he's not there, you won't have to wait long. In the five Indy 500 races in which his car was still on the track at the end of 200 laps, he finished first, second, third, first and third.

If he were a pro golfer, he'd be shooting 70 every round. If he were a ballplayer, he'd be Wade Boggs, getting 200 hits every season. If he were a football player, he'd be Steve Largent, 10 receptions a game, if he were a fighter, Gene Tunney.

He's the most consistent chauffeur on the circuit. He never brings the car home in a bag. He brings it home third or better.

If you want to measure the efficiency of a driver at Indy, you don't necessarily check his lap time. You check his laps. The number of times his car was still on the track at the checkered flag. Rick Mears was still racing in five of his 10 rides at the Speedway. For Indy, that's the rankest kind of dependability. He's the most durable part of the car. The cliche applies to Mears: to finish first, first you have to finish.

But what you have to say about Rick Mears is, he's not just a stroker, not just durable, dependable, he's fast. Aside from those two Indy 500 wins, he lost the closest finish in Indianapolis' history, one-tenth of a second behind Gordon Johncock at the finish line in 1982. Another year, 1981, he was leading the race when his fuel line stuck and set fire to the car. Also to him. He holds the fastest qualifying record at Indy, one lap (217.581 m.p.h.) and four laps (216.828), and the record for the fastest lap ever run in the United States (234 m.p.h. at Michigan in 1986). He had the fastest qualifying lap ever run anywhere (223.401 m.p.h.) at Michigan in '86.

HE HITS homers as well as singles, goes for the bomb as well as the first down. Not only can he putt, he can hit 1-irons. He can jab or punch.

What's remarkable is that Rick Mears can do any of the above after what happened to him in Montreal in 1984.

It was at Sanair in Montreal. Now, guardrails are erected around a racing oval to defend drivers, keep them on the course. This one attacked. It had too much daylight under it when Rick Mears' front end slammed into it. Not as much daylight as it would have when the force of the collision pulled the supporting posts out of the ground and turned the metal from a guardrail into a guillotine.

First, the railing wiped out the front end of the car. Then, it wiped out the back end of Rick's feet. It started by pushing his feet back on themselves, snapping every bone in the right foot and one-half the bones in the left foot. The right foot was strapped to the accelerator and incapable of any evasive action.

Then, the metal sliced off both Achilles' tendons. Mears' feet looked like two platters of steak tartare by the time they pulled the blade out of them. "The doctors," recall Rick, "said they were the worst-looking feet they had ever seen on somebody who was still alive." He didn't have feet, he had paws, bloody paws. They looked like they belonged to a bear in a trap, not a driver in a car.

THE RECONSTRUCTIVE surgery took eight hours, six hours finding the pieces and two hours sewing them back together. The surgeon was so sure he could not restore circulation to the feet, he went home,

THE NON-qualifier can enjoy immediate eligibility at a junior college, but must attain an associate degree from junior college before being allowed to play on the NCAA Division I level.

McGuire said the 1987 national champion Indiana Hoosiers also gave junior college programs a lift through the prominence of former juco stars Dean Garrett and Keith Smart, the first junior college recruits ever signed by IU mentor Bob Knight.

"They ended up with a championship they had no right winning," McGuire said. "What Knight did with Garrett and Smart opened some eyes."

McGuire favors toughening several NCAA rules, most notably regarding the three-point shot and fighting.

He said an NCAA proposal that would suspend a player for fighting after the third instance in which he was the instigator is too lenient.

"You can win a world tournament with three fights," he said. "I think if the replays show a player was the aggressor twice, then they should be suspended five or six games - not one.

"And if they really want to tie it in, they can get some kind of penalty for the coach."

MCGUIRE said he tries to bring a coach's perspective to the broadcast booth, even though he hasn't taken the bench since his Marquette Warriors won the 1977 NCAA championship.

"I think I give a flavor to the game by looking at it through the coach's eyes," he said. "But I'm not a journalist.

"The people I work with are journalists, though, and they've helped me through many of the rough spots."

Other than his duties for NBC, McGuire speaks at an occasional banquet such as Friday's affair but generally likes to stick close to his suburban Milwaukee home the rest of the time.

Explaining the loss to the Bronchos followed by a rebounding victory against co-leader Abilene Cooper, Whalen said, "Our bio-rythyms must've been off, or Cooper's were off or we had an argument with our girlfriend. Something happened to take their mind off the game."

Following MHS, Lee and Cooper closely, and in a three-way tie for second with 3-3 records, are Abilene High, Odessa High and San Angelo. Odessa Permian is in last place with an 0-6 mark.

Midland's Morrow reaches Abilene net semifinals

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — Midland High junior Luke Morrow advanced to the semifinals of the Abilene High School Invitational Tournament with three convincing early-round wins Friday.

Morrow faces Aaron Layman of Odessa Permian in semifinal action at 8:30 a.m. today.

The Bulldog junior pounded Abilene's Troy Williams 6-0, 6-0, in the first round Friday before skunking Lubbock High's Brad Jenkins 6-0, 6-0. He had slightly more trouble defeating John Woodcock of Lubbock Monterey 6-3, 6-1, in the quarterfinal round.

Bulldog tennis coach Steve Hoover said Morrow's success Friday was the culmination of a gradual improvement process.

"Over the past three or four weeks, Luke has locked in to playing some good tennis," Hoover said. "He's using his mind as well as his body."

In girls play, MHS sophomore Elizabeth Ameel was eliminated by Casey Wickse of Permian 6-1, 6-0, in quarterfinal action. Ameel had earlier beaten Irene Villalobos of El Paso 6-1, 6-0, in the first round.

No other Midland High players advanced beyond first round action.

The Bulldogs travel to San Angelo for the District 4-5A meet next weekend.

Angels go 13 to win, 10-9

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO — Tom Alfordson scored on a wild pitch in the top of the 13th inning to push the Midland Angels to a 10-9 win in their Texas League opener with the San Antonio Missions at V.J. Keefe Stadium Friday.

Alfordson stroked a one-out single up the middle, and advanced to third on a single by Dan Grunhard. San Antonio hurler Barry Wollam then uncorked a wild pitch to allow Alfordson an easy run home.

Curt Walker picked up the win with three innings of two-hit relief, but was bailed out when center fielder C.L. Penigar slammed into the fence for a drive off the bat off Walt McConnell with one out in the bottom of the 13th.

The game was marred by six balk calls and two ejections. Midland pitching coach Pat Zachry was tossed out for disputing a balk call, while shortstop Juan Bell later departed for a too-strenuous dispute of a called third strike.

The Angels sent the game into extra innings with four runs in the ninth inning.

The teams square off again tonight.

OC sets national mark at UT

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian lived up to its nickname as "The Flying Frogs" by capturing the 800-meter relay at the Texas Relays' on Friday night after winning its 23rd consecutive 400 meter relay race earlier in the day in the preliminaries.

The foursome of Roscoe Tatum, Greg Sholars, Tony Allen and Raymond Stewart posted a time of 1:21.43 to win first place watches in the 800-meter relay just off the meet mark of 1:20.91 by Arkansas.

Odessa Junior College set a national junior college record in the sprint medley relay with a time of 3:21.00. The previous national record of 3:18.49 was established by Ranger Junior College of Texas in 1980.

Arkansas opened defense of its outstanding team award with a victory in the university distance medley relay. Joe Falcon, the nation's premier collegiate distance runner, coasted to a 3:59.5 clocking on the 1600 meter anchor to give the Razorbacks' foursome of Mike Clemmons, Lorenzo Brown, and Matt Taylor a winning time of 9:30.5.

Winfield homers spark Yank win

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dave Winfield hit two home runs, Mike Pagliarulo had a two-run homer and struggling Richard Dotson won his debut for New York as the Yankees defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 6-4 Friday night for their first 3-0 start in 14 years.

Winfield, still getting a standing ovation every time he comes to bat as a result of his feud with owner George Steinbrenner over the right fielder's recently published autobiography, hit his first home run of the season in the second inning. The homer followed a leadoff walk to Gary Ward by Juan Nieves, 0-1, who was 0-3 with an 8.53 ERA against the Yankees last year.

Winfield connected for a solo shot in the eighth against Mark Clear.

Royals 3, Tigers 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Floyd Bannister pitched two-hit ball for seven innings in his Kansas City debut and Gene Garber finished with hitless relief, leading the Royals over Detroit.

Bannister, acquired in an off-season trade with the Chicago White Sox, gave up two singles and a walk in the third inning and wound up with four strikeouts. He benefitted from standout defensive plays by left fielder Bo Jackson, second baseman Frank White and third baseman Kevin Seitzer.

Twins 6, Blue Jays 3

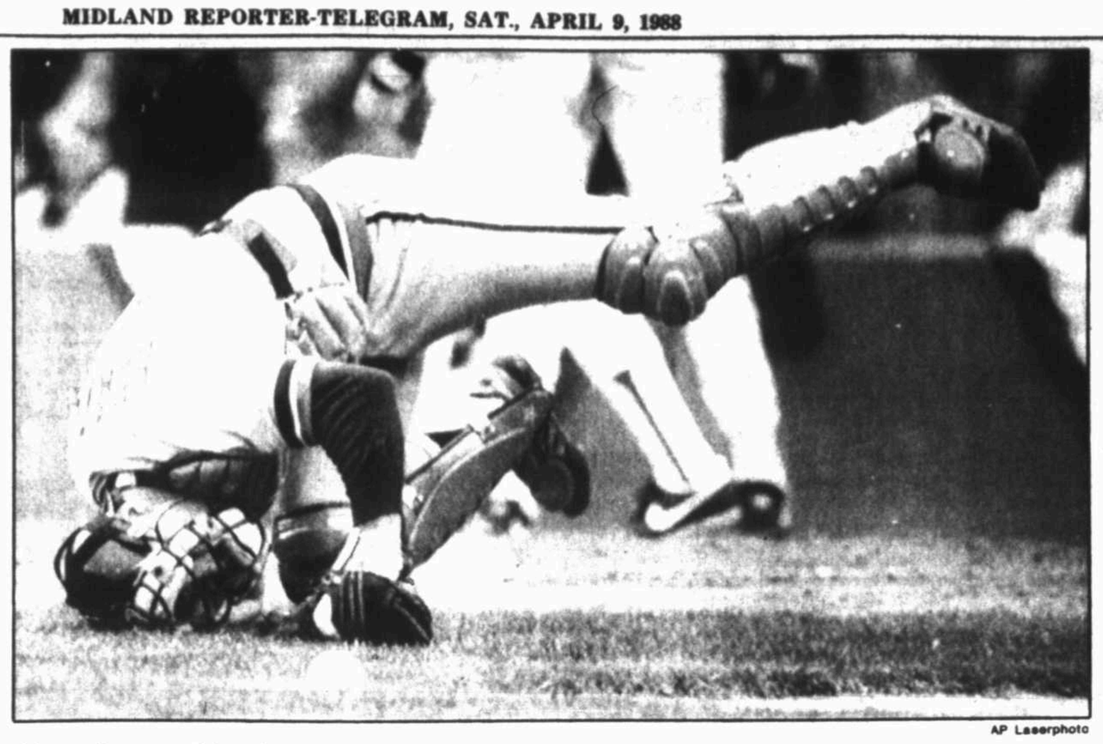

MINNEAPOLIS — Dan Gladden homered twice, drove in four runs and stole home as the World Series champion Minnesota Twins, baseball's best home team last year, opened their 1988 Metrodome season with a victory over Toronto after an 0-2 start on the road.

Gladden went 4-for-5, including a double, and is 8-for-14 this season. Gary Gaetti's sixth-inning homer broke a 2-2 tie and Bert Blyleven posted his 245th career victory in his first appearance of the year.

Indians 3, Orioles 0

CLEVELAND — Scott Bailes pitched a three-hitter and Andy Allanson drew a bases-loaded walk to snap a scoreless tie in the seventh inning as Cleveland won its home opener before 53,738 fans.

The 25-year-old Bailes, 1-0, walked three and struck out four in his first career complete game. The Indians won for the third time in four games and reduced their team ERA to 1.03. Last season, Cleveland's 5.28 ERA was the highest in the major leagues in 31 years.

Pittsburgh's Brian Fisher, 1-0, Bob Kipper, Barry Jones and Jeff Robinson combined on an eight-hitter to keep St. Louis winless in three games. Kipper and Jones spelled Fisher with none out and the bases loaded in the sixth and worked out of the jam, permitting St. Louis only one run.

Bonds' first double and Andy Van Slyke's sacrifice fly one out later preceded Bonilla's home run, his third of the season, in the first.

The sites will also switch in the other opening-round series Saturday night — Washington at Philadelphia, Montreal at Hartford, Boston at Buffalo, Detroit at Toronto, St. Louis aChicago, Edmonton at Winnipeg and Calgary at Los Angeles.

Montreal, Boston, St. Louis, Edmonton and Calgary lead their series 2-0, while the others are tied at 1-1.

Rookie Sean Burke helped the Devils clinch their playoff spot with sensational goaltending down the stretch. But Schoenfeld decided to rest him Thursday night and go with Sauve, who responded with 24 saves.

Washington at Philadelphia

The Capitals will be ready to again capitalize on the wandering tactics of Flyers goalie Ron Hextall in their Patrick Division series. Peter Sundstrom scored the deciding goal in Washington's 5-3 victory after checking Hextall behind the Flyers' net.

Hextall likes to leave the goal crease to chase the puck. The Capitals are determined to make him pay for his aggressive style.

"If he's going to play like a third defenseman, then you've got to treat him like a third defenseman," Sundstrom said.

Hartford at Montreal

Rookie Gilles Thibaudeau figures to see more action in this Adams Division series, and with more advance notice.

Thibaudeau, called up from the minors six weeks ago, was added to the lineup Thursday because Shayne Corson sprained his knee in Game 1. He scored two goals to lead the Canadians to a 7-3 victory.

Edmonton at Winnipeg

Craig Simpson concedes his game-winning goal for the Oilers in Game 2 was "a pretty lucky play."

A rebound deflected off Simpson's knee with 65 seconds left to give Edmonton a 3-2 victory.

Calgary at Los Angeles

Defenseman Gary Suter had three assists and an empty-net goal as the Flames beat the Kings 6-4.

Suter is tied for the playoff scoring lead with seven points. He ended the regular season on a 16-game point-scoring streak, during which he had eight goals and 17 assists.

Boston at Buffalo

Rookie Bruce Shoebottom scored his first NHL goal as the Bruins beat the Sabres 4-1 in Game 2 of their Adams series.

Detroit at Toronto

Toronto, which had the second-worst record in the NHL during the regular season, split the opening two games in Detroit with the division champion Red Wings.

"They've got to figure this was a successful road trip," Detroit center John Chabot said after the Wings' 6-2 win Thursday.

St. Louis at Chicago

The Blues have managed to shut down high-scoring Chicago center Denis Savard in the first two games of their Norris series.

Savard, who had 131 points during the regular season, was held to one shot during the Blues' 3-2 victory.

KU's Larry Brown refuses Bruin bid

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Larry Brown, in an apparent last-minute change of heart, said Friday he will stay on as basketball coach at Kansas instead of accepting an offer from UCLA.

The news came as a shock to UCLA, which had scheduled a news conference Saturday to introduce Brown as their new coach, replacing the fired Walt Hazzard.

"We had the room, we were ready with the release," said Bill Bennett, UCLA's associate sports information director.

Brown's announcement came shortly after an unnamed source told AP that the coach had resigned.

But Brown told about 200 cheering students at the Kansas fieldhouse:

"I've decided to stay at the University of Kansas."

Brown led the Jayhawks to the NCAA championship Monday night at Kemper Arena in Kansas City, beating Oklahoma 83-79.

In Los Angeles, Bennett said: "We had tentatively planned a press conference for tomorrow. The only people from Kansas that are going to be at UCLA tomorrow now is the Kansas men's track team, who will face the Bruins in a triangular meet with Iowa.

Brown, 47, arrived at Kansas five years ago to replace Ted Owens.

Last spring he signed a contract extension after Bob Frederick, a friend, was named athletic director. That temporarily ended speculation that he would return to the National Basketball Association to coach the New York Knicks.

But there was still widespread speculation that Brown would leave Kansas after his prize recruit, Danny Manning, graduated.

Brown's name came up again when Hazzard was fired at UCLA, where Brown coached in 1979-80 and 1980-81. He compiled a 42-17 record at UCLA, including 5-2 record in NCAA postseason competition. Brown had been quoted as telling friends he made a mistake when he left UCLA to return to the pro coaching ranks with the New Jersey Nets.

Brown led Kansas to a 135-44 record, including 27-11 in the just completed season. He is 177-61 in seven seasons as a collegiate head coach.

Brown also had a 446-265 record in nine seasons of professional coach with Carolina and Denver in the old American Basketball Association and Denver and New Jersey in the NBA.

Fuzzy Zoeller

MASTERS—

"I hate golf to be tricked up," Zoeller said. "To me it's a fun game. When they put the tricks like they have in the greens out there. it's a war out there. As hard as they are and fast as they are, it's a total war."

"Golf is supposed to be a fun and enjoyable type of game," Zoeller said. "But you don't hear the roars of Augusta like you always heard here. Hopefully, one of these days somebody will wake up around here, and we'll get some nice surfaces to putt on."

Many golfers have criticized the hard greens at the Masters last year and this week. Approach shots often bound off these putting surfaces, where skilled pros are used to pulling their shots up short with backspin on most greens.

Hord Hardin, chairman of the Masters and the man who runs both the club and the tournament, said: "I'm a little surprised. I would have expected it from someone not shooting a 66. The players on the Tour have been playing so many courses not set up like this that they are not used to it since the last major."

Zoeller criticized not only the Masters but also included the three other major tournaments as having conditions too hard to play what he considers good golf. The other majors are the United States and British Opens and the PGA Championship.

Curtis Strange made Augusta National look easy on the 12th hole when he got a hole-in-one at the 155-yard par-3 in the middle of the treacherous Amen Corner. Strange, who shot 70 for 146, used a 7-iron to put the ball 8 feet in front of the hole. It bounded a couple of times and rolled right into the cup.

This was the 11th ace in the history of the Masters, the first since 1972, when Charles Coody got one at the sixth hole. It was also only the third Masters ace of the 12th hole, which requires a tee shot over water.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner of the Masters, shot a 71 to be tied at 143 with Bernhard Langer, the 1985 Masters champion; Don Pooley; Fred Couples, and Chip Beck, a two-time winner on the PGA Tour this year.

Hubert Green, who has two major titles, shot a 70 to be at 144, along with Robert Wrenn. Thus 11 players were at par or better halfway through this major.

Seve Ballesteros, the Spaniard with two Masters victories, shot a 72 for 145. This tied him with Craig Stadler and Ben Crenshaw, former Masters champions; Gary Koch, and Mark McNulty of South Africa.

The field of 89 players was cut to 46 who shot 151 or better. Greg Norman, the Australian who was favored to win here, just made it at 150. Among those who failed to make the cut were Paul Azinger, Hal Sutton and Davis Love III. Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Lee Trevino also failed to advance.

Stanton second in 6-2A golf

From Staff Reports

Ozona and Stanton shot 325 team totals to preseve the status quo in the boys District 6-2A golf tournament at Rankin Friday. That left Stanton nine strokes behind the Lions heading into next Saturday's final 18-hole round of the round-robin tour at McCamey.

Ozona's 996 tops Stanton's 1005. McCamey is third at 1043 after a 347 Friday.

Greg Avery of Stanton, however, did reclaim the medalist lead by shooting a 75—232 to forge ahead of Ozona's Bret Hood, who carded a 78—234.

Stanton's girls also held down second place in the tour play at Stanton's Martin County CC.

Ozona shot a 377 to widen its lead to 21 strokes over Stanton. The Lions are 1320 going into next week's final round at Ozona while Stanton 1251, almost 100 strokes ahead of third place Rankin.

Stanton's girls shot a 386, their best score ever. Leading the way was Kelli Glaspie with an 84, despite a triple bogey three on the final hole of a back nine 41.

Japan opens season in dome

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's professional baseball season opened Friday to a capacity crowd of 56,000 in the Tokyo Dome, with the Yakult Swallows defeating the Central League's defending champion Yomiuri Giants 4-2.

While fans watched the game in the comfort of the "Big Egg," Japan first domed stadium, snow early Friday forced the cancellation of a Pacific League game between last year's Japan Series champion Seibu Lions and the Nankai Hawks at the Seibu Stadium in northern Tokyo.

Happy apology refused

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Black students refused an apology Friday from former governor and baseball commissioner A.B. "Happy" Chandler over a racial remark he made earlier this week, and have threatened to boycott classes one day next week if he does not resign from the University of Kentucky's Board of Trustees.

"We do not accept the apology given by former Governor Happy Chandler. He had to be influenced by someone else (Governor Wallace Wilkinson)," said Steve Taylor, one of the student leaders of the protest. "We felt he could have come to us and spoke from his own heart."

Chandler, 89, made the remark during a meeting Tuesday of the board's investments committee. The university decided in 1985 to dispose of its investments in South Africa because of its racial policies.

About 100 students, including at least 25 members of the school's football team, marched from the campus to City Hall on Friday chanting "Happy's Got To Go" and "Resign Happy."

The Rev. Michael Wilson, a city councilman, then read a three-page statement — supported by groups such as the NAACP, the Kentucky Rainbow Coalition and the Urban League — calling for Chandler's resignation.

"By resigning, Mr. Chandler will reserve his rightful place in history and history itself will be rightly served," the statement said.

Fem pin league dropped for lack of decent bar bill

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A Billings bowling alley has offered its 12 lanes to a women's league that was dropped by a Clinton, Mich., facility allegedly because they did not drink enough.

Hide-A-Way Bowling Center owner Wally Rubick offered the women a contract for next fall after he read about their problem.

"It looked like to me they could use a little encouragement and amusement," Rubick said. "I thought it would be a fun thing for them."

Rubick said he thinks its wrong for bowling alleys to cancel leagues anytime they can make more money from others.

"I've known of bowling centers that have canceled out four-man teams in favor of five-man teams to make more money," he said. "I think emphasis should be on bowling, not drinking."

Carol Blossey of Clinton Township, a spokeswoman for the women bowlers, said 1,600 miles was a too far to travel once a week, but added that some of the bowlers were considering the offer for a weekend.

Holyfield faces DeLeon for cruiserweight title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Unbeaten Evander Holyfield attempts to unify a title he doesn't intend to keep when he faces World Boxing Council cruiserweight champion Carlos DeLeon tonight for the undisputed cruiserweight title.

Holyfield, who holds the International Boxing Federation and World Boxing Association versions of the 190-pound crown, is fighting in the division for the last time before moving to the heavyweight ranks for what he hopes will be an eventual big-money fight against champion Mike Tyson.

"There's a lot riding on this fight," said Holyfield. "I can't afford any slip ups here if I want to be taken seriously as a heavyweight."

MURRAY

Mears says, and broke every piece of crockery in his kitchen in frustration.

He was wrong. Mears' feet were just fine. He can tell when it's going to rain, he can tell when an airplane reaches cruising altitude, his feet are as sensitive to changes in pressure as a ship's barometer, but Rick Mears says, you don't drive with your feet. It's the other end of the motorist that's critical, the mind.

"What's the sport you think concentration is most critical? Golf?" he challenges. "Well, we had a bunch of professional golfers at an IROC race and we put them in the cars and every one of them came out bug-eyed and said 'Cripe, we thought (ital) we (unital) had to concentrate! But we can take a rest from green to tee. Here, you let your mind wander for one instant and it's over."

At 234 —or 216 — m.p.h., you can't take time to smell the flowers — or they'll be lilies.

MEARS HAD the concentration of a diamond-cutter. It was what impressed Roger Penske into offering him a ride with his team when he first encountered young Rick at a Colorado motorcycle rally in the late '70s.

Now, Penske's Pennzoil racing team is to motor sport what the Ruth Yankees were to baseball, or Rockne's Notre Dames to football. Mears fit right in with the tradition. He became the first rookie to break the 200-m.p.h. qualifying speed at Indy. In his second year, he not only won the pole, he won the race, only the 10th driver in history to go from pole to Victory Lane.

He was back driving almost before he could walk in 1985. Within two years, he was third again. He will be the one to beat at Indy this May. One thing the winner can be sure of: He'll have Rick Mears in his rear-view mirror. If Rick Mears ain't in his rear-view mirror, he ain't the winner. He's in Rick's rear-view mirror.

Your Child's Foundation

The home is the basic institution of learning for children. Put another way, children learn where they live. They live in the home, they learn in the home.

- Schools can teach mathematics, but integrity to use numbers is learned in the home.
- Schools can teach children about business, but character to use such knowledge comes basically from the home.
- Schools can teach children law, but attitudes of the home determine whether or not the child will grant justice to all humankind.

The home is the basic institution of learning because it precedes both religious and educational institutions; and, neither religious nor educational organizations stand much of a chance unless the home assumes its God-given responsibility of being the FOUNDATION for child development.

Songwriter moves from country hits to Christian videos

RELIGION

DEBERRY, Texas (AP) — Cindy Jordan has come a long way — but not yet full circle — from her days when she would truthfully say, "Jose Cuervo, You Are a Friend of Mine."

Ironically, Billboard Magazine's 1983 country Song of the Year, sung by Shelly West, was the first song Ms. Jordan had ever attempted to write.

She penned it in 1978 while she was waiting tables in a Torrance, Calif., nightclub, after her stint as poster girl in the mid-'70s for, you guessed it, Jose Cuervo Tequila.

"I wrote the song origanally for a man to sing," she recalled. "I was just poking fun about getting drunk. I later put female lyrics to it, and I thought at first it might be a little risque, but it was accepted."

She peddled the song around Nashville for a spell, and, as the old cliche "right place-right time" sums it up, Shelly West eventually embraced it when her producer played it for her.

That same year, after the royalty checks came rolling in, Cindy Jordan met and later married Dennis Buckingham, an oilman and lover of quarterhorses. The two now have three children, Julie, 15, Denise, 2, and Jordan, 1.

And in many ways because of the children, Ms. Jordan — retaining her pen name — now has busied herself with the video production of a dozen segments of Christian children's programs entitled "Let's Celebrate." In addition, she has produced two volumes of the program's songs on audio tapes. The second volume is due out this summer.

"It's just another field for me," she said. "I don't get to Nashville as often as I'd like because of the babies, so I'm doing this. It gives me something to do in the meantime."

She hopes the musical programs, produced in Shreveport's Cablevision studios, will attract the Christian Broadcasting Network's "700 Club." But profit-making is not her aim. She intends to put any proceeds into her Let's Celebrate Foundation to support homes for abused and runaway children.

Ms. Jordan calls herself "Miss Cindy" on the segments, and she leads the group of children through a series of her "homemade" gospel songs on guitar and skits based on biblical teachings.

"The songs are not too elementary, but they're easy to sing for all ages, kind of like 'Puff the Magic Dragon,' " she said. "And then we build segments around each song.

"I think the show will be successful; it's been a lot easier for me, and I think I'm getting a lot of help from upstairs. It just took me a week to write these songs, and I'm not that fast of a songwriter.

"I think God gave me 'Jose Cuervo,' and I'm giving this back to him. It's like God's giving me a big thumbs-up. There's a real positive energy flowing with this thing so far."

She also sees her new work in a philosophical vein.

"We all have to have a strong binding force because we can easily destroy ourselves," she said. "Working with children like this may be our way of preserving the human race. This is really a modern-day peace movement."

Although she feels her work with children is rewarding, she still has that other side of her that yearns to see if she can "hit" again. Deep down she said she still personifies that swinging-from-the-rafters girl in her most famous composition.

"The taste of success is so sweet," she said. "I like it when you hit. Because of 'Jose Cuervo' I can go anywhere in the U.S. and walk in any place where people like country music and they will have shared something I created.

"That's even better than the money. When you talk about 'Jose Cuervo,' people just break out in smiles."

China missions interpreter featured at Asbury Methodist

Rosa Sitchler

Rosa Sitchler will be speaking at Asbury United Methodist Church during the church's Missions Weekend, April 16 and 17.

Mrs. Sitchler is China Missions Interpreter for the United Methodist Church in the Abilene District of the Northwest Texas Conference. She will be showing slides and speaking on China April 16 following a covered-dish dinner at 6 p.m. in the fellowship hall of the church.

During the Sunday School hour, she will be showing slides and speaking on Japan. At the morning worship, she will be speaking on missions in general.

Mrs. Sitchler is originally from Albuquerque, N.M., and has been a Texan for 45 years. She has been active in the Methodist Church most of her life. Mrs. Sitchler has served in local and district offices of the United Methodist Women and is a lay member of her home church, Potosi United Methodist Church, Abilene.

China became a priority for her after a study of the Book of Jonah in 1976 convinced her she needed to address China as her personal Nineveh. This conviction has led to her present position as China Missions Interpreter by authority of the Board of Global Ministries of the UMC.

After her husband's death in 1977, she began traveling. Following a tour of China in 1980, she was determined to return for a more extended stay and in 1985 spent three months in Nanjing and Shanghai, attending church services and studying Mandarin Chinese.

She is attending McMurry College in Abilene, as a non-traditional student and this summer will participate in the Elderhostal Week at McMurry as a contributor to the China study program offered at the time.

She has six children, 15 grand children and four great-grandchildren.

Religious leaders help heal critical issues

NEW YORK (AP) — In much of the world, politicians alone have sought to solve its acute difficulties, without much success, so help is being asked from a big, left-out force — religious leaders.

This is the intent of a first-of-its-kind international conference next week at Oxford University in England of lawmakers and spiritual leaders.

They represent the two major human structures for dealing with world problems, but only politics rules the task, with religion excluded, says the Rev. James Park Morton, conference co-chairman.

"Instead of keeping them in isolation from each other, they've got to start working together if there is to be greater hope for the future."

Morton, dean of New York's Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, says both on global and most national levels, politicians alone control critical issues, despite basic religious dimensions.

"The United Nations is as hamstrung as the government of the United States in that spiritual leaders are not allowed any participation," he said. "We're just half dealing with the problems."

Citing directly intertwined religious-political issues in the Middle East, Northern Ireland, Tibet, Afghanistan and elsewhere, he said, "Both sides have got to become involved in a working relationship."

That may sound like heresy in the United States, with its "separation of church and state," a popularized simplification of the constitutional guarantee of no established church and of religious freedom.

One of the conference planners, U.S. Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., says shallow interpretations have created artificial barriers to the necessary collaboration of the two fields.

The mutual religious-political involvement is particularly essential in countering industrial-technological trends threatening life on Earth, says U.S. Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y.

"Politicians haven't been able to do it own their own," he says. "We must merge the ethical and practical, politician and priest, secular and sacred."

Astronomer Carl Sagan and Scheuer, both participants in the conference, listed various unresolved dangers to the planet:

Toxic waste poisoning ground water, acid rain destroying vegetation, the temperature-raising "greenhouse effect" of burning fossil fuels, weakening of the ozone layer allowing in destructive ultraviolet rays, AIDS, nuclear arms.

"Clearly our technology is changing the superstructure on which life depends," Sagan says. "Some of the effects are so serious they can only be described in terms of Catholic theology as crimes against creation."

He said religions, "repositories of classical wisdom," must become involved to raise consciousness about the crucial, life-threatening trends.

Other critical issues, such as family values, poverty, human violence and possibilities for peace, also are to be weighed in the April 11-15 "Global Conference of Spiritual and Parliamentary Leaders on Human Survival."

Co-chairing the conference with Morton is India's Sen. Sat Paul Mittal. Participants are to include about 100 political figures and 100 leaders of five world religions — Christianity, Buddhism, Judaism, Hinduism and Islam.

"This is a meeting whose time has come," says Lutheran Bishop Krister Stendahl of Stockholm, Sweden.

Religious participants also include Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, Austria's Roman Catholic Cardinal Franz Koenig, Judaism's Rabbi Arthur Schneier of New York, the Buddhist Dalai I ama and Islamic leader Inamullah Khan of Pakistan.

Among other participants are U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Soviet Academy of Sciences official Evguenij Velikhov, Peru's former Prime Minister Manuel Ulloa and a lineup of legislators.

Former U.S. Ambassador Angier Biddle Duke, chairman of an international advisory committee for the conference, says:

"It is the first time in modern history for spiritual and political leaders to get together to ponder the potentials of human survival."

Through much of past history, religion and politics kept close connections, but in the modern era, religion has been pushed to the sidelines in most of the world.

Man who delivers Bibles behind Iron Curtain to speak at dinner

A man who gave up a career as a special education teacher to take Bibles behind the Iron Curtain and the Bamboo Curtain will be sharing his experiences at a 7 p.m. dinner April 16 at the Ramada Hotel, 3100 W. Wall Ave.

Jeff Taylor, who is the United States director of development for Open Doors with Brother Andrew, an organization dedicated to providing Bibles and encouragement for Christians persecuted for their faith, will talk at the dinner about his experiences taking Bibles into countries like China, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Taylor's most recent trip into what he describes as a "restricted country" was to China where he took Bibles and met with the famous Christian leader, Wang Ming Tao, who has spent more than 20 years in prison for his faith.

Taylor was a special education teacher based in Austin shortly before making his first trip into China in 1980. He remembers a contact telling him, "It's so important for us to know that Christians in the West are concerned about us. We are not worried about our own safety."

"I began to investigate the situation and discovered that over half of the Christians of the world lived in restricted countries," Taylor says. "I was convicted of my own lack of knowledge and concern. I knew it was time to begin to work on their behalf to make the American church aware of their circumstances and get involved."

So eight years ago, Taylor gave up his job to work with Open Doors, the ministry that is sponsoring this special dinner meeting he will address.

"I have no regrets about the change of career," says Taylor, who's married and has two sons. "This has been the most fulfilling time of my life."

Reservations for this complimentary dinner for adults can be made by calling Steve or Diane Webb, 685-0835, or Ruth Goree, 1-362-7297.

Open Doors began more than 31 years ago when a Dutchman, Brother Andrew, began traveling behind the Iron Curtain with Bibles. He later wrote the best selling book, "God's Smuggler."

Opposition leader freed, ordered to leave Nicaragua

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — An opposition leader who led a huge rally against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega last month has been released from prison and ordered out of the country, his lawyer said Friday.

Carlos Ernesto Gonzalez de la Lastra, 49, was freed Thursday night after being held for 10 days in El Modelo Prison following his arrest March 28 when police stopped the protest march he was leading.

Alvin Weeden, his attorney, said Gonzalez would stay at the Vatican Embassy until leaving Sunday with his wife, Vilma for exile in Venezuela.

"There was no other remedy," said Weeden. He said Gonzalez faced a long prison term on a sedition charge filed by the government last summer if he did not accept exile.

Noriega commands Panama's 15,000-member Defense Forces and controls the civilian government. He has been indicted on narcotics trafficking charges in the United States, which has supported a 10-month-old opposition campaign to oust him.

Gonzalez was free on bond on the sedition charge when he was arrested during the demonstration that preceded a police raid on an opposition headquarters at Panama City hotel. In all, more than 40 people were picked up in the sweep, including eight foreign journalists.

The reporters were freed within hours and most of the others were released the next day. But the government kept Gonzalez in custody and refused to let anyone except his wife visit him. She said he had been beaten.

"They never filed (new) charges against Carlos Ernesto," said Weeden. "But state security adduced (his guilt) from a photo of Carlos Ernesto carrying a flag in the March 28 demonstration that was published in a North American newspaper."

A former director of the now-closed opposition newspaper La Prensa, Gonzalez was ordered into exile in 1976 by Gen. Omar Torrijos, who preceded Noriega as Panama's military strongman. Gonzalez spent two years in Venezuela before being allowed to return.

Gonzalez is one of 35 directors of the National Civic Crusade, a coalition of some 200 business, labor, professional and political groups that has been seeking Noriega's ouster since last June.

Carrying a large Panamanian flag, he led the march last month that police and soldiers broke up with tear gas, shotguns and rubber truncheons. About 10,000 people took part in the protest.

Since last month's demonstration, Noriega's regime has harassed and briefly detained a number of other opposition leaders, surrounding the homes of at least three of them with state security agents for periods of up to 12 hours.

Most leaders of the Civic Crusade have kept a low profile. News conferences, which used to be held almost daily, have been replaced by telephone calls and communiques slipped into the hotel message boxes of reporters.

Noriega's government's new, get-tough policy appeared in part to be a defiant answer to U.S. economic sanctions and diplomatic moves aimed at fortifying the internal opposition's efforts to remove the general.

Emergency declared in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — President Jose Azona Hoyo declared a state of emergency Friday in the country's two major cities after students smashed shop windows and overturned cars in new anti-American riots.

The presidential press office said the emergency gives police and security agencies wide powers to search premises, make arrests and hold people without trials in Tegucigalpa, the capital, and San Pedro Sula, 120 miles to the north.

It also bars street demonstrations and empowers police to restrict travel.

The violence broke out after thousands of students filled the streets Friday, shouting slogans protesting the forced deportation to the United States of a Honduran suspected of drug trafficking.

So many students had left their classrooms by early afternoon that 100 schools and both universities in Tegucigalpa shut their doors.

Shopowners boarded their windows in fear of more violence like the attack on the U.S. Embassy in the capital the night before in which five people were killed.

But looters smashed shop windows, and angry demonstrators flipped over cars. Police patrols, backed by military helicopters, sped through the downtown area Friday, picking up young people.

The government, the principal U.S. ally in Central America, said would "will take all necessary actions to maintain order and tranquility."

Earlier, officials forced country's 140 radio stations into a nationwide hookup Friday controlled by the presidential press office.

In a communique repeatedly being read over the new network, the government urged people to "repudiate violence" and "remain calm," claiming the violence was being secretly instigated by drug barons, who were not named.

About 2,000 university students attacked two U.S. Embassy annex buildings Thursday night and set both ablaze.

They were dispersed with bullets, beatings and tear gas. Police said five people were killed, four men and a young girl, and at least 10 wounded. No Americans were injured.

About 25 automobiles belonging to embassy personnel were doused with gasoline and set afire Thursday.

The students were protesting the arrest and delivery to the United States this week of a Honduran accused of drug trafficking and involvement in the killing of U.S. narcotics agent. They also expressed anger at President Reagan's dispatch of additional American troops to Honduras last month.

Beginning at dawn Friday, Azcona met almost continuously with his Cabinet and Gen. Humberto Regalado Hernandez, the armed forces chief.

On Tuesday, soldiers and police took Juan Ramon Matta Ballasteros from his luxurious Tegucigalpa home before dawn and hustled him onto a plane to the Dominican Republic without a passport.

Dominican Republic officials put Matta on a New York-bound flight and he was arrested aboard the jetliner by U.S. marshals, according to U.S. law enforcement officials.

Matta, held at the maximum-security federal prison in Marion, Ill., was wanted by U.S. officials for questioning in the 1985 slaying in Mexico of a U.S. Drug Enforcement Adminstration agent, Enrique Camarena Salazar.

Honduran legislators called the incident a "kidnapping" and the Foreign Ministry launched an investigation of the procedures used. Honduras has no extradition treaty with the United States and the constitution forbids the extratition of Honduran citizens.

The protesters who stormed the embassy annex Thursday also were demonstrating against the presence of 3,200 U.S. troops in Honduras last month.

Reagan dispatched them at Azcona's request after a reported incursion into Honduras by Nicaraguan troops pursuing Contra rebels.

Matta's capture followed the departure of the American military contingent by less than a week.

Honduras is the cornerstone of U.S. policy in Central America and has become its major military outpost in the region. Thousands of American troops have held joint exercises with the Honduran military on a regular basis for five years.

In Washington, State Department deputy spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Friday the Reagan administration was puzzled by amount of time it took police to arrive on the scene Thursday evening.

"We do not understand the slow response. We are highly cocerned over the threat this posed to American and Honduran lives and the destruction of American property," she said, and the matter had been taken up with Honduran authorities.

About 20 guards on duty at the embassy compound opened fire with sawed-off shotguns Thursday night, according to police, but the students got into the parking lot. Riot squads, totaling about 50 men, did not arrive until about two hours later.

Most of those in the mob were students from the National Autonomous University, dominated by centrist political leaders, and the National Teachers' School, where leftists hold sway.

'Peace dam's' first phase completed

HWACHUN, South Korea (AP) — The first phase of a huge dam designed to prevent North Korea from flooding out the Olympic Games in Seoul neared completion Friday on the line separating North and South.

The first phase of the South Korean "peace dam" is scheduled to be finished next month. The Olympic Games open in Seoul on Sept. 17.

The rockfill dam sits in a valley close to the Demilitarized Zone separating the two Koreas. It will cut off the flow of the Han River, which originates in North Korea and runs past Seoul before flowing into the Yellow Sea.

Construction began in late 1986, shortly after North Korea began building a hydroelectric dam on an upper stream of the river.

Despite North Korea's repeated claim that its dam was designed only to generate power, Seoul officials suspect that it also is intended to unleash a "water offensive" against South Korea.

If the North Korean dam collapsed, about 26 billion tons of water could submerge most of Seoul and surrounding areas with a "nuclear force," South Korean officials say.

"We have done something which was considered difficult to be done in time," said Chung In-ho of the government's Industrial Site and Water Resources Development Corp.

South Korea is building the dam on a phased program designed to match the progress of the North Korean dam under construction about 22 over the DMZ.

South Korea hurried the first phase of the project in fear that North Korea would try to flood some major sports facilities in Seoul along the Han River before the Olympics.

"If North Korea attempts to flood us, the damage would be far beyond our imagination," Lee Hee-sung, chief designer of the state-run Industrial Site, said.

Lee said South Korea poured $250 million into the first phase of construction. The dam, which will be at least 215 feet high, would eventually cost more than $600 million U.S. dollars, he said.

Gorbachev: Troop pullout not 'present' to Reagan

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Friday that Soviet troops will begin coming home from Afghanistan on May 15, but he added the move shouldn't be seen as "a present to President Reagan" for their upcoming summit meeting.

Soviets interviewed on the streets of Moscow welcomed the news, saying "Many people have suffered."

Radio Moscow carried a brief report on Gorbachev's speech to party activists in Tashkent following the announcement in Geneva that negotiators had agreed on a plan for settling the 10-year-old war in Afghanistan.

Gorbachev and Afghan leader Najib met in Tashkent, in Central Asia, on Thursday and declared in a joint communique that all obstacles to a war settlement and withdrawal of the Soviet forces had been removed.

The official Tass news agency did not immediately report the 57-year-old Soviet leader's speech, and the nightly TV news program "Vremya" said only that Gorbachev had met with Uzbek party leaders before returning to Moscow. But Radio Moscow led its evening newscasts with a few details of the address.

It said Gorbachev confirmed Soviet soldiers would begin pulling out of the conflict they entered more than eight years ago, and that documents outlining terms of the peace accord were ready for signing on Thursday.

"At the same time, the Soviet leader said the withdrawal of the troops should not be regarded as a sort of present to President Reagan on the eve of his visit to the U.S.S.R.," the official broadcast said. "We, he said, are carrying out the plans outlined in our statement in February."

It was in a Feb. 8 speech by Gorbachev that the May 15 date was first proposed, but at the time it was made contingent on a Geneva agreement being signed by March 15. That speech also offered to "front-load" the withdrawal, or have at least half of the estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers leave within the first three months, and to complete the withdrawal within 10 months.

Soviet officials have observed privately, however, that they would like to have all of their troops home by the end of the year. Soviet troops intervened in Afghanistan on Dec. 27, 1979.

A senior U.S. diplomat said Friday that back-channel U.S.-Soviet diplomacy was involved in clearing the final obstacle to a Geneva agreement: the question of continued aid to the warring sides.

U.S. observers at the Geneva talks had been pressing for "symmetry" in foreign aid to the combatants, arguing that if U.S. assistance to the rebels was prohibited, the Kremlin should likewise cut off military aid to Najib's government.

"The Soviets know very well and in great detail our position and have indicated that it is acceptable to them," said the diplomat, who briefed reporters on condition he not be identified.

He said the Reagan administration prefers a moratorium on arms shipments to continued deliveries to both sides, but that no agreement had been worked out yet.

The senior envoy also suggested that the Soviets' steadfast efforts to stick to the May 15 start date for withdrawal was likely connected with a general attempt to clear away superpower disagreements in advance of the May 29-June 2 summit meeting in Moscow.

News of the agreement in Geneva, which is to be signed Thursday, trickled slowly to Soviet citizens, who get most of their news on international affairs from "Vremya." Evening newspapers went to press before U.N. mediator Diego Cordovez announced in Geneva that a package of documents outlining the settlement was ready for signing.

Soviets told about the breakthrough in Geneva said they were delighted with the news.

"It's time to get out already," said Sergei Butyugin of Moscow at a news stand near Taganka Square. "Many people have suffered."

Butyugin, 32, said the decision to enter the war was correct because their Afghan allies asked for help, but that "now it has dragged on and on."

A 27-year-old woman who did not want to give her name said she welcomed the news that a settlement had been reached and said the war had hurt the Soviet people.

"All's well that ends well," declared Larisa Ivanova, 41. "The main thing is that there will be peace."

She said the war had taken a heavy toll on Soviets, although she said she didn't know how many of her countrymen had been killed in Afghanistan. Casualty figures have never been reported by the Soviets.

Six soldiers approached by an Associated Press reporter outside the Dzerzhinsky Military Academy along the Moscow River refused to discuss the war or its influence on the Soviet Union.

"I don't have a personal opinion, we only have a government opinion," one said.

Ortega says Contras agree to cease-fire because they lost

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega was quoted in newspapers Friday as saying the Contras agreed to a cease-fire plan because they were defeated militarily after almost seven years of war and "never held an inch of territory."

Ortega cautioned that if the U.S.-backed Contras use cease-fire zones to rest and resupply themselves to continue the war, "they are going to meet with a new force, the combativeness and energy of the people."

The Sandinista newspaper Barricada said the president explained that the Contras would move into the zones, lay down their weapons and return to civilian life.

But the Contras say they will never put down their weapons until Nicaragua is "on an irreversible road to democracy."

Talks between military leaders of the leftist Sandinista government and the Contras dragged on Friday, with negotiators haggling over technical aspects of a 60-day cease-fire.

Both sides agreed, however, to hold a second high-level meeting next Friday in Managua.

They will try to negotiate a permanent truce in the war, which has killed or wounded an estimated 50,000 people.

Since technical meetings began on Monday, the two sides have agreed only to set up seven zones in which rebel combatants are to gather by April 15. Sensitive issues such as giving them assistance and verifying compliance remained uresolved.

The talks are called for in the armistice agreement signed March 23 by leaders of the government and of the Contra rebel organization known as the Nicaraguan Resistance.

The Contra delegation presented 34 points for discussion Thursday.

In Copenhagen, Denmark, on Friday, a Nicaraguan official, Commandant Victor Tirado, told a news conference that the Sandinista government is dissatisfied with the way the truce accord is taking effect.

"We cannot be satisfied with developments the past few days," he said. "The Contras took part in setting the dates for the cease-fire, and then they start breaking the accord themselves."

Tirado is one of the nine commanders of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front.

He complained that aid provided to the rebels by the U.S. Agency for International Development violated clauses in the agreement calling for any assistance to come from a neutral party.

"That is the first breach..." he told reporters. "The second breach is that the aid should go through Nicaragua. That is not the case. It is channeled through Honduras."

He also said the accord implictly requires the Contras to disarm.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Number of AIDS cases reported in Europe doubles, WHO says

GENEVA (AP) — The number of AIDS cases reported by European countries to the World Health Organization more than doubled during last year, the U.N. agency said Friday.

The WHO weekly newsletter said 28 countries had reported 10,181 cases as of Dec. 31, 1987, representing a 124 percent increase from the 4,549 cases reported a year earlier.

The highest European per capita rate was registered in France, with 55.3 cases per million population, followed by Switzerland with 53.8 per million and Denmark with 44.7 per million. This compares with a rate in the United States of 216 per million population, WHO said.

The Netherlands reported a rate of 28.8 cases per million population, Belgium 28, and West Germany 27.4.

Among the East bloc countries, Czechoslovakia and Hungary reported the highest number of cases, eight each, for rates of 0.5 and 0.8 cases per million population, respectively, WHO said.

East Germany reported six cases, and the Soviet Union and Poland reported three cases each, it said.

Human rights group established

LOME, Togo (AP) — A United Nations conference on human rights ended Thursday with the establishment of a working group that will investigate charges of human rights abuses.

The three-day meeting was directed by Jan Martenson, director of the United Nations human rights office in Geneva, and Togolese Foreign Affairs Minister Yaovi Adodo. The group of international experts included representatives of the United Nations, lawyers, academics and government officials.

The conference called for increased public awareness of basic human rights. It also issued a resolution condemning apartheid, South Africa's occupation of Namibia and Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza strip.

Ship's replica docks at Acapulco

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — The Marigalante, a Mexican ship that is a replica of Christopher Columbus' Santa Maria, received a gala welcome in this Pacific port on Thursday.

Mayor Israel Soberanes Nogueda was among those on hand for the ceremony, as dozens of local boats escorted the Marigalante.

Vital Alsar, the ship's captain, told reporters there were no problems during the ship's voyage to Europe and back totaling about 11,000 marine miles.

The Marigalante left from the Gulf of Mexico port of Veracruz last September for its goodwill tour. It is scheduled to leave later in the month for Japan to help mark 100 years of diplomatic relations between Mexico and the Asian nation.

Chinese congress elects new president

BEIJING (AP) — China's highest body of state power on Friday named a reformer and veteran of the Long March to the ceremonial post of president, replacing a conservative.

The National People's Congress selected Yang Shangkun, 81, who made the Long March in the mid-1930s with Mao Tse-tung. He now is China's most powerful general and a close ally of senior leader Deng Xiaoping, 84.

Former Vice Premier Wan Li, 72, was chosen chairman of the congress. He helped pioneer Deng's economic reforms in the late 1970s as Communist Party chief in central Anhui province.

Deng kept his only government post, chairman of the Central Military Commission. His main power base remains in the military, which has appeared unwilling to accept any of the leader's younger proteges as head of the commission.

Foreign reporters were allowed for the first time to watch the selection of Communist China's leaders.

On the floor of the hall, 2,883 delegates cast votes for or against Yang, Wan, Deng and other top officials. They also were allowed to write in the names of other candidates.

Xinhua, the official news agency, announced the results 90 minutes later but did not say whether any delegates voted against or abstained. Sources said more than 100 ballots were cast against Yang, 60 against Wan and 20 against Deng.

They said more than 200 delegates opposed Wang Zhen, 80, another Long March veteran who was elected vice president.

Despite the leadership's avowed policy of promoting younger officials, only two of the 23 elected Friday were under 60. Xinhua quoted one delegate as saying some candidates for state leadership were too old.

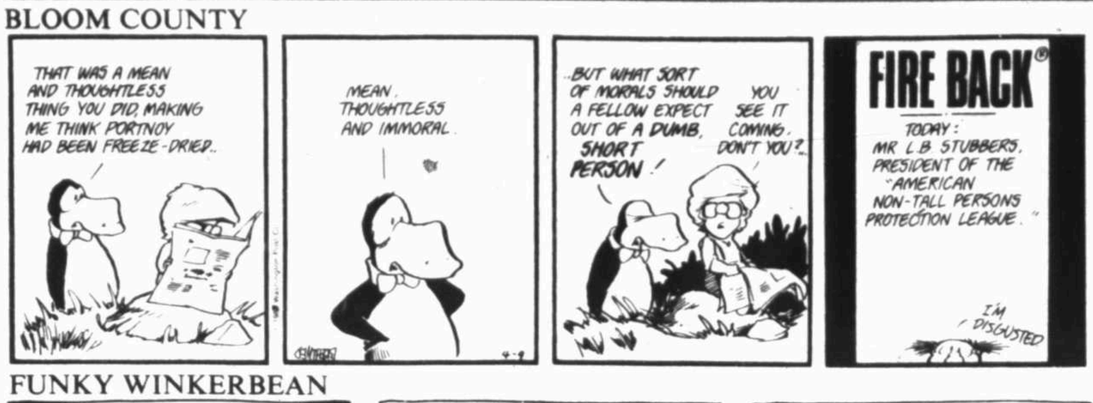

Although names of candidates were not released before the election, the results had been anticipated for months. Candidates were chosen formally by the congress presidium but actually selected well in advance by the Communist Party leadership.

The congress began its 20-day session March 25 and is to vote for a premier Saturday.

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Graham: Swaggart's, Bakker's problems haven't affected him

Graham

HONG KONG (AP) — American evangelist Billy Graham said Friday the problems of Jim Bakker and Jimmy Swaggart haven't affected his ministry, but they have increased cynicism outside the church.

Graham, in Hong Kong to announce details of his first trip to China, said that the fall of the two television evangelists has "made more people conscious of their need of true faith in Christ and it has made more people discerning."

"It has, I'm sure, made some people outside the church more cynical," said Graham. He told a news conference Internal Revenue Service audits have failed to uncover any problems in his own ministry.

Graham begins a 16-day trip to China on April 13 that will take him to Beijing, Nanjing, Shanghai and Canton. He also will visit Huaiyan in China's eastern Jiangsu province, where his wife, Ruth, was born.

Graham refused to discuss China's record on religious freedom and said he "certainly will not get involved in politics" during his visit.

NEW YORK (AP) — Fawn Hall, who made her television debut testifying about former boss Oliver North before a Senate committee, will be co-host of a network special its producers hope is an upscale version of "The Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

Miss Hall was chosen "because she is very spontaneous and has a presence that is indicative she can handle this kind of assignment with zest and energy," Gary Pudney, an ABC television vice president for specials, said Friday.

"M-W Men and Women," based upon M and W magazines, will air the first week in June. Pudney said it is to combine "Entertainment Tonight," "60 Minutes" and an upscale version of the show that displays the opulent lifestyles of the wealthy.

The other co-hosts are Ron Reagan, the president's son; actress Jane Seymour; and Danny Sullivan, the cab-driving Indianapolis 500 winner.

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford, still recovering from heart bypass surgery last year, was celebrating her 70th birthday Friday with a small party, her secretary said.

"Her husband is giving a party for her this evening with a few friends and family," Ann Cullen said.

Mrs. Ford underwent bypass surgery in November, but returned to the hospital in December because of bleeding complications. She was released from Eisenhower Medical Center on Jan. 3.

"She is feeling very well, taking things a little slowly but pretty much back to normal," Ms. Cullen said.

Ms. Cullen said Mrs. Ford planned to spend Friday "sitting at her desk, working on the day-to-day operation of the Betty Ford Center," a drug and alcohol dependency clinic she founded in 1982.

She did not know what former President Gerald Ford planned to give his wife for her birthday.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Maybe it isn't news, but we're going to tell you about it anyway.

B.F. Skinner is back at home.

The psychologist, author and teacher suffered a fall in his kitchen just before Christmas, and had to have an operation for a head injury.

"It's not a news story at all," the 84-year-old pioneer in behavioral psychology said Thursday. "I just slipped and fell and had a slight concussion."

Skinner, who retired from Harvard University in 1974, said he underwent an operation four weeks ago to relieve pressure from the Dec. 20 injury and was released from the hospital two weeks later.

"I'm in fine shape and I'm back home," said Skinner, famed for his "Skinner boxes" where animals could be conditioned to perform certain acts by rewards and punishments.

Skinner, who once taught pigeons to play pingpong, also taught students at the University of Minnesota and Indiana University, as well as Harvard.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Maybe the secret of winning is to avoid thinking about it. That's one lesson you could learn from the new National Teacher of the Year, Terry Weeks.

The seventh-grade social studies teacher in Murfreesboro won the award in a contest sponsored by Good Housekeeping magazine, Encyclopaedia Britannica and the Council of Chief State School Officers.

"When I was in school, I dreamed of becoming a teacher. Awards were not a part of that dream," Weeks said Wednesday. "I would read about others receiving awards like this and I would think there was a remote chance, but I never thought winning this award would become a reality for me."

Weeks kept mum about the award, which was due to be announced in Good Housekeeping and at a news conference in Washington next week. But the magazine's Tennessee subscribers couldn't keep quiet.

Weeks, 37, has taught in the Rutherford County school system for 14 years.

The competition judges teachers from interviews, video tapes of classes and educational philosophy.

SEATTLE (AP) — When Julie Andrews sang "Climb Ev'ry Mountain" while gamboling through the Alps in "The Sound of Music," she probably would have been happy to make an exception for Mount Everest.

The exception is the rule for Diana Dailey and two other women climbers from the Pacific Northwest. The three will get a chance to become the first American women to scale the 29,108-foot peak as members of the 1988 Northwest American Mount Everest team.

Those interested in sponsoring the first American woman on top of the world wanted more women on the team to improve the odds, but expedition leader Jim Frush said he didn't pick team members by gender.

"I was against adding women just to add numbers, but we added women and still stayed strong and experienced," said Dailey, 44, a high school teacher with extensive climbing experience around the world.

The team is to leave Seattle on July 20 with plans to reach the summit by late September or October.

The other women are Stacy Allison, 30, of Portland, Ore., and Peggy Luce, 29, a Seattle bicycle messenger.

Everest has been conquered by at least 209 climbers, six of them women. So far, 87 people have died trying. The first American woman to try the ascent, Marty Hoey of Seattle, died on the mountain in 1982.

"I've never been on a trip that had a budget of a quarter-million dollars," said Dailey. "I'm used to smaller groups where you save money for four or five years and then go."

Pat Murphy, a former Vietnam POW, poses recently in his Long Beach, Calif., office. The 47-year-old veteran has just released a song, "Combat Vet," which encourages veterans to put the war behind them and rebuild their lives.

Vet who sang for sanity now sings for supper

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Deep in the mountains of Vietnam, the Green Beret was held prisoner of war in a small shipping crate by captors who stabbed him with bamboo sticks.

To save his sanity, Pat Murphy sang "Hound Dog" and pretended he was Elvis Presley by imitating the famous singer's gyrations.

"Sometimes they'd scream at me to shut up," Murphy recalled. "I'd sing that much louder."

Seventeen years later, the 47-year-old veteran is still singing. He lives in Long Beach, Calif., where he is a hotel general manager by day and a country music singer as a sideline. He's just released a song, "Combat Vet," which encourages his fellow veterans to put the war behind them and rebuild their lives as proud Americans who served their country.

The song says:

"So buddy, please don't cry. That you lived is no disgrace.

"Please make us walk proud again. Wear a smile upon your face."

Murphy wrote the song in memory of his cousin, Carl Saintignan Jr. of Shreveport, La., a young Marine who took his life a year after returning from Southeast Asia.

"It's the story of a guy still fighting the war in his mind," Murphy said in a telephone interview from Long Beach. "A buddy tells him to let it go."

Murphy spent a month as a POW after being captured as he traveled by Jeep from Nha Trang to Dalat during his second tour of duty in Vietnam.

"I was taken an hour away and put in a shipping container, which looked like a railroad car," he recalled. "I was not mistreated but I was beat up a couple of times.

"They would come in and talk to me and (urinate) on my food and humiliate me. They asked a lot of questions which I didn't answer. I have a scar from bamboo being jabbed in my side.

"Music was the only thing that kept my sanity," he said. "I'd sit there and sing. It was hot as hell, there were mosquitoes and my skin was falling away. I was panicking because there was no way to get out.

"I'd always been able to sing and I'd had good response and I knew I'd do it when I got back. I kept focusing my mind on what songs I'd do and how. I remember singing 'Hound Dog' and going through the movements like Elvis did.

"I'd sing in that cage and the Vietnamese called me crazy — 'dinkydou.'

"I imagine I did look crazy. I said my prayers and kept thinking about getting back. I said if I'm gonna go (die), I'd go happy."

Murphy, who spent 15 years in the Army, escaped when two young Vietnamese tried to handcuff him. "I grabbed his weapon (an M-16) and I had to kill them," he said.

He then spent another few weeks hiding and wandering in the bush, afraid of being captured again. "I'd lay down and stay for hours. I just had to survive," he said.

He finally spotted an American soldier with an engineering battalion who drove him to a field hospital.

Discharged in late 1972, Murphy went through post-war stress that included nightmares, depression, lack of concentration and heavy drinking.

He finally got straightened out and entered hotel management, first in Greensboro, N.C., with stops in Jacksonville Beach, Fla., and Lake Tahoe, Nev., before Long Beach. In 1980, he decided to begin singing part time and resume a music career that had been sidelined by his Army duty.

Matisse's grandson develops ear for art

By GEORGE JAHN

GROTON, Mass. (AP) — There's a Matisse hanging in a Cambridge subway station that has nothing to with fauvism, impressionism or any of the other labels commonly associated with the name.

Most Matisses appeal to the eye. The subway Matisse — 16 massive aluminum chimes and teak-tipped hammers suspended between the tracks at the Kendall Square stop — pleases the ear with a majestic sound that comes when a handle from the platform is pulled.

Henri Matisse is considered one of the most influential 20th-century artists. His boldy colored canvases that typify the fauvist movement hang in famous galleries worldwide. Fauvism was a French expressionist movement that involved such artists as Matisse, Vlaminck and Derain and utilized strong, bold colors and distorted forms.

His grandson, Paul Matisse, is less famous. He doesn't paint, but since setting up the chimes of "Pythagoras" last October, he is cherished by hundreds of commuters who have left their scribbled comments on a pad near the handle.

"I am getting a Proustian rush: Is this normal?" reads one. A less profound comment says simply: "Radical move, Dude."

Others have viewed his functional mobiles at New York's Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan Museum of Art; the National Gallery of Art in Washington; the Musee d'Art Moderne in Paris; the Bienalle in Vienna; and at other U.S. and foreign galleries.

Matisse, whose father, Pierre, is a well-known art dealer in New York, lives and works in a former Baptist church in Groton — a sleepy town about 50 miles northwest of Boston — with his wife, artist Linda Hoffman, and their two children.

He talked about himself and his grandfather during a recent interview in his workshop — a clutter of drill presses, lathes, jigsaws and other tools he wields to create works that titillate the imagination through movement, sight and sound.

As a boy visiting Paris for summer holidays, Matisse sat frequently for his grandfather and has recollections of him as "a terrifying presence."

"When he looked at you to draw you, you were looked at," he said. "He was like a 50,000-watt search light."

Matisse bears some physical resemblance to his grandfather. He now does not seem to suffer from the burden of living up to such a famous heritage.

It was not always so.

"What happens is in a lifetime you go through a whole series of responses," he said with a chuckle. "So you go through a negative response. I've gone beyond that, and I feel a very positive appreciation of the fact that he was back there."

But he is at pains to emphasize the obvious — there is no similarity between his works and that of his grandfather, who died in 1954.

"When he drew a line, he drew a line he wanted to draw," he said. "He knew exactly what he wanted to do, and I remember him telling me that his hand was his servant, and I don't work that way at all.

"I have to draw (while drafting), so I do. But it's not so much that, it's just that I don't have a great love of color and form," the 55-year-old artist said. "I have a great love of ideas, which is different entirely, and I think I'm much closer to Duchamp in respect."

Matisse's kinship with Marcel Duchamp, the famed French artist who began challenging traditional art concepts during the early years of this century, goes beyond a love for the unusual. Duchamp, who died in 1968, was Matisse's stepfather.

Matisse, an acknowledged authority on Duchamp, referred several times to one of his stepfather's most controversial works — a common urinal entitled "Fountain," which shocked the art world of his time. He hinted at a common bond in describing DuChamp as an ideas man.

"I said Duchamp because Marcel rebelled against 'painterly art,'" he said, commenting on artistic influences. "He wanted art with intelligence.

The first edition of Edgar Allan Poe's first book, "Tamerlane," written when he was 14, is to be auctioned at Sotheby's in New York in June. In the 161 years since its publication, only 11 copies have been found.

Rare first edition of Poe's work to be auctioned off

NEW YORK (AP) — A rare first edition of Edgar Allan Poe's first book, a collection of poetry written when he was 14, is to be auctioned by Sotheby's, which calls it "the most exciting book discovery in many years."

In the 161 years since its publication, only 11 other copies of "Tamerlane and Other Poems" have been found. Published in 1827 by an obscure Boston printer when the poet, short story writer and critic was 18, it could bring as much as $300,000 at auction on June 7.

This 12th copy of the book was discovered in a bin of early 20th-century pamphlets on fertilizers and farming machines by a Massachusetts book collector while he browsed at an antique barn in New Hampshire. The price was $15.

Recognizing the title from an article he had once read, the collector contacted Sotheby's for an inspection and appraisal.

"It was quite a thrill," said Jay Dillon, an assistant vice president in Sotheby's Rare Books Department. "God, it was thrilling.... Here's a fabulous rarity, famous to anyone who's ever taken more than two courses in American literature."

The Massachusetts man, who collects books on local history, said he suspected it might be an original when he found it, though he wasn't sure. He had the book only one night before turning it over to Sotheby's.

"I knew I had found something great, a piece of Americana...," said the man, who spoke in a telephone interview on condition of anonymity. "I knew it was valuable but never dreamed that it would mean this much money."

"Actually, I didn't handle it real carefully when I first got it," he said. "I thumbed through it...I never read anything by Poe in my life. I really don't know too much about books."

Poe, who was born in Boston in 1809, orphaned when he was 11 and raised in Richmond, Va., had the volume published during a short visit to Boston.

The literary importance of the 40-page book, which names the author only as "A Bostonian," is considered negligible; rather, the work's value has to do with the fact that it's the first work of one of America's greatest writers and a limited number of copies were printed.

How many were printed?

"One can guess, but they are all wild," Dillon said. "I think the range would be from 50 to 250. I would be amazed if more than 500 were printed."

The softbound book has its original, tea-colored paper wrappers and is in unrestored condition. "The wrappers are frayed, as one would expect in a 161-year-old pamphlet," Dillon said. "There's also a light stain on the front cover running through first few pages.

"But the condition of a book like this is not a matter of great importance among connoisseurs. The question with this book is how can you get one at all. I would prefer it to be in better condition...I also would prefer to have Poe's signature on it."

Nine of the other copies are in public institutions, one is owned privately and the other's whereabouts is unknown, Dillon said.

The first copy didn't surface until 1859 when an antiquarian bookseller in Boston sent it along with a consignment of books to an agent in London who promptly snatched it up for the British Museum. A second copy turned up 23 years later in a bookshop's sidewalk box. It cost 15 cents and later sold at auction in 1892 for $1,850.

Other copies have surfaced over the years through collections and dealers. The 11th copy was discovered in 1954 and was auctioned by Sotheby's in 1974 for $123,000.

The poems included in the book are "Tamerlane" and a group Poe called "The Fugitive Pieces." They are: "To —," "Dreams," "Visit of the Dead," "Evening Star" (never again printed), "Imitation," "Stanzas," "Poem," "A Wilder'd Being," "The Happiest Day" and "The Lake."

The adolescent collection was not exactly the literary hit of the day. One critic noted: "A book the critics read without praising, and the ladies praised without reading."

However, the complex and tortured artist was vindicated in later years through his sinister and compelling stories such as "The Pit and the Pendulum" and "The Masque of the Red Death," and his musical and sensuous poems such as "Annabel Lee" and "The Raven."

He published two other volumes of poetry after "Tamerlane," in 1829 and 1831. Poe died in 1849.

Brazilian actress enjoys giving comic touch to role

Hearst News Service

SANTA FE, N.M. — Brazilian actress Sonia Braga is a hands-on performer.

Chain-smoking Mariboros, she vivaciously explains that she likes to nose around every corner of the set, and that actors should review their scenes right after the daily footage is shot.

"I like to go off into the set and see what everyone's doing," she said.

She is probably best known in this country as a glamorous femme fatale in "Kiss of the Spider Woman." Art-house movie audiences saw a good deal of her in "Gabriela" and in "Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands."

In "The Milagro Beanfield War," she plays a woman who has to wake up a northern New Mexico town to its own best interests.

"I think what makes her strong, what makes her go ahead, is knowing how 'flacca, impotente' — what is the word in English, weak? — most people are. She knows that alone they can do nothing, but together they can make a difference. She's one of those strong people who show their fragility," she says of her character.

It is not a glamorous role, and it called for a comic touch, encouraged by director Robert Redford.

"I was always afraid to do comedy. I want to do it, but, I don't know, I thought it makes the actors ridiculous. Redford helped me to see that the laugh is in the situation."

More filmmakers focusing on Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Cameras are rolling in the Austin area on the television miniseries "Lonesome Dove," one of seven major film productions so far this year that have helped boost the Texas economy, the state Department of Commerce said recently.

The $18 million budget for "Lonesome Dove" brings to $48 million the total budgets of productions in Texas this year. Typically, 40 percent to 50 percent of a film's budget is spent locally, officials said.

"A production of this size not only creates jobs for Texans who are directly involved in the filming and acting, but it also benefits support services throughout the state," said J. William Lauderback, executive director of the commerce department.

Lauderback said the film projects have generated a 40 percent increase in film industry revenues in the first quarter of 1988 compared with the same period last year.

"Texas is enjoying a very good year in the film industry so far. These films are providing a tremendous boost to the Texas economy and are reinforcing our state's promotion as a prime location for the film industry," he said.

Filming for the eight-hour "Lonesome Dove" miniseries began in the Austin area March 21 and continued through this week. The crew is scheduled to spend seven weeks in Del Rio and then six weeks in the mountains of New Mexico.

The Austin sites have been mostly rural and on private property, so few people have been able to sneak a peek at the production.

Buzz Little says he gets a little nervous when he lets his students take the wheel of this 18-wheeler at Lamar University's Truck Driving School.

Truck safety course shifts teaching gears

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Charles Laws teaches with a truck instead of a textbook. It's more effective, he says.

Between the hiss of an 18-wheeler's air brakes and the rumbling of its monstrous diesel engine, his students say they're glad he taught the fleet safety course the way he did.

"I thought he was kidding last week when he said we'd have to drive this thing," said Pam Vickers, an employee at a savings and loan whose petite stature defied climbing up the five feet to the seat of the truck — in a skirt and heels, no less — to sit behind the steering wheel, the circumference of a standard barrel bottom.

Laws tells his group of students, which includes mothers and housewives, a Jefferson County juvenile probation officer, secretaries, salesmen and a mother-and-daughter team, both of whom are refinery workers, the way things are done in the trucking industry.

After their first "road test," conducted in the Montagne Center parking lot at Lamar University, Laws reminded his students that most of the trucks they would be driving, should they choose that profession, would be dealing with fast traffic coming up from feeder roads onto the interstate instead ob the bright orange plastic cones students tried so hard to dodge as they zigzagged the truck around them — or onto them — during their driving test.

The 15 students, most of whom attend Lamar part-time and hold full-time jobs, are going through a two-year program called Occupational Safety and Health Managament. The course is a requirement in the OSHA program that deals with safety in all modes of transportation, including rail, shipping and trucking.

But if students thought they were getting into some dry course that involved taking copious notes and reading chapter after boring chapter on transportation, they were in for a surprise.

"In fact, I apologized to them the other night that they'd hardly even opened their textbooks," Laws says.

Inside the truck, Buzz Little, a regular instructor at Lamar's truck-driving school, tried to give the students helpful tips like how to keep from breaking their hand when the steering wheel snaps back to its original position after being steered in a particular direction, how to double clutch when shifting gears, and above all, how to avoid hitting their instructor.

"It's real interesting — I love it," Little says. "If it weren't for the trucking industry, you couldn't afford to buy a loaf of bread. "But you can't help but get a little nervous," he said as an afterthought. "These people have never been behind the wheel of a truck before."

Laws said he had his students drive the truck just so they could appreciate what truck drivers go through, and it's had the intended effect.

"I really do drive different around trucks since I drove one myself," says Jan McCown, an industrial hygienist technician for Texaco Chemical. "I used to whip around them on the highway, and now I give them all the room they want."

And the thing that impressed most students was how tiny they felt behind the wheel and how little visibility the driver has looking past the front end.

"I don't see how they can possibly see to park that thing," said one student after stopping the truck more than three feet from the curb, thinking she was parking right next to it.

Laws stood, dwarfed by the size of the truck, and measured how close — or far — students parked the truck from the designated curb. "Most of these students did a lot better than I expected," he said.

Couple finds it easier to make sweets than lick a subway station

SAN DIEGO (AP) — In laid-back California, a little levity has been a hallmark at PSA. But the commuter airline's new parent, USAir, is lowering the curtain on one PSA feature: stand-up routines by flight attendants.

For example, on a recent flight from San Jose to Los Angeles, PSA flight attendant Marka McDougall went into her act as the engines revved up.

"Ladies and gentlemen," Ms. McDougall said, "We'd like to welcome you aboard Flight 1733 on our way to Seattle."

Following a panicky gasp in the cabin, Ms. McDougall added: "Just kidding. I wanted to see if you were listening.

"If you are traveling with infants or small children, or anyone resembling a small child, place your mask on first, then assist the child — providing they've been good," she said.

From Staff Reports

Trinity Presbyterian Church will host the Kesheth Dancers from First United Methodist Church in Dallas at a special performance Wednesday, April 13, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Active since 1983, the Kesheth Dancers have been leading worship services across the country in various denominations. Seven women from the Dallas area combine their faith and their bodies to bring to form a genuine Christian spirituality.

Kesheth is Hebrew for "rainbow" signified in the brilliant colors of their costumes and in the covenant they have with God to dance the message of God's word in the world, according to a press release from the church.

The program will last approximately 1½ hours and a nursery for children four years old and younger will be provided.

Pemex says price of crude up

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government oil monopoly Pemex announced Friday that the price of its light Isthmus crude rose by 79 cents and heavy Maya crude by 82 cents for its European customers during March.

A statement contrasted the rise in Europe to a fall in prices to Far East and American customers.

It said the average prices in Europe for Isthmus was $14.15 and $10.99 for Maya in European sales during March. They were $13.36 and $10.17 per barrel respectively the previous month.

Pemex said earlier in the week that it lowered the prices of its light Isthmus crude by $1.62 a barrel to $13.86 a barrel in March while Maya prices tumbled from $12.83 a barrel in February to $11.20 a barrel in March.

Friday's statement said prices also fell to its American customers during March, to $14.29 per barrel for Isthmus and $10.88 for Maya. February prices for customers in the Americas were $14.97 a barrel for Isthmus and $11.82 a barrel for the heavy Maya crude.

The oil company also said average daily sales during March were 1.37 million barrels.
