U.S. Military Action Seen If Iran Tries Hostages

A-J News Services

WASHINGTON — If Iran puts the hostages on trial or humiliates them in any other way, the United States may take swift military action — including a naval blockade — in retaliation, sources said Tuesday.

The sources said any military move would attempt to avoid bloodshed.

They issued the warning through reporters because they said that was the best channel open to them to reach Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the real power in Iran.

While the United States still is exploring economic sanctions against Iran, the sources said, a show trial — or exploitation of the hostages in any other tribunal — probably would cause America to react with more force.

A naval blockade is one possibility if the hostages are put on trial, or paraded out as witnesses, the sources said. The United States already has two huge naval task forces in the Arabian Sea.

The sources said military action will be the logical response if Iran escalates the crisis. Militant in Iran already have said trials of the 50 Americans being held at the U.S. Embassy in Iran are "inevitable."

White House press secretary Jody Powell himself warned directly that any such trials would be considered "a further provocation," and he noted there are "other remedies" than peaceful ones available to America.

On a related subject, Powell labeled "absolutely untrue" Iran's charge that the United States was responsible for the assassination of a close associate of Khomeini.

"There clearly is an effort on the part of the authorities in Iran to escape the consequences of their own actions and divert the attention of their own people by continually blaming any and every problem on the United States," Powell said.

"I suspect the people of Iran will eventually see through such efforts."

Powell noted there are continuing threats from Iran that the hostages might be put on trial.

"There continues to be confusing and sometimes conflicting reports that American citizens being illegally held as hostages might be placed before some type of public trial or tribunal," Powell said.

"As we made clear on Nov. 20, such an action would be a further provocation to the United States and the world community. The gravity of the situation created by the illegal and irresponsible holding of the hostages would be compound-

Price Hike Posted On Gasoline

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp. raised gasoline prices 6 cents a gallon Tuesday, extending a round of price hikes begun last week by major oil companies.

Exxon, like Standard Oil Co. of California, which posted a similar increase last Saturday, said it was raising the price of its motor fuel because of the decision by Saudi Arabia and some other oil-producing countries to boost crude oil prices 33 percent, from $18 a barrel to $24 a barrel. The Saudi move was retroactive to Nov. 1.

Exxon also raised heating oil, diesel fuel and kerosene prices 3 cents a gallon. The Chevron price increase on these productss was 6 cents a gallon.

OPEC Cited

An Exxon spokesman in Houston, who asked not to be named, said the firm was raising its prices as the "result of the recent crude oil price increases of up to $6 per barrel by several OPEC suppliers, including some retroactive to Nov. 1."

Several other oil companies have also raised ther gasoline prices in recent days, although they listed other reasons, including inflation and the high cost of buying oil to replace the crude lost as a result of the Iranian oil embargo.

Among the firms raising gasoline prices since last week have been Sun Co., up 2 cents a gallon; Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, up 2 to 3 cents a gallon; Citgo, up a penny a gallon; and Mobil Corp. and Texaco Inc. up 3 cents each.

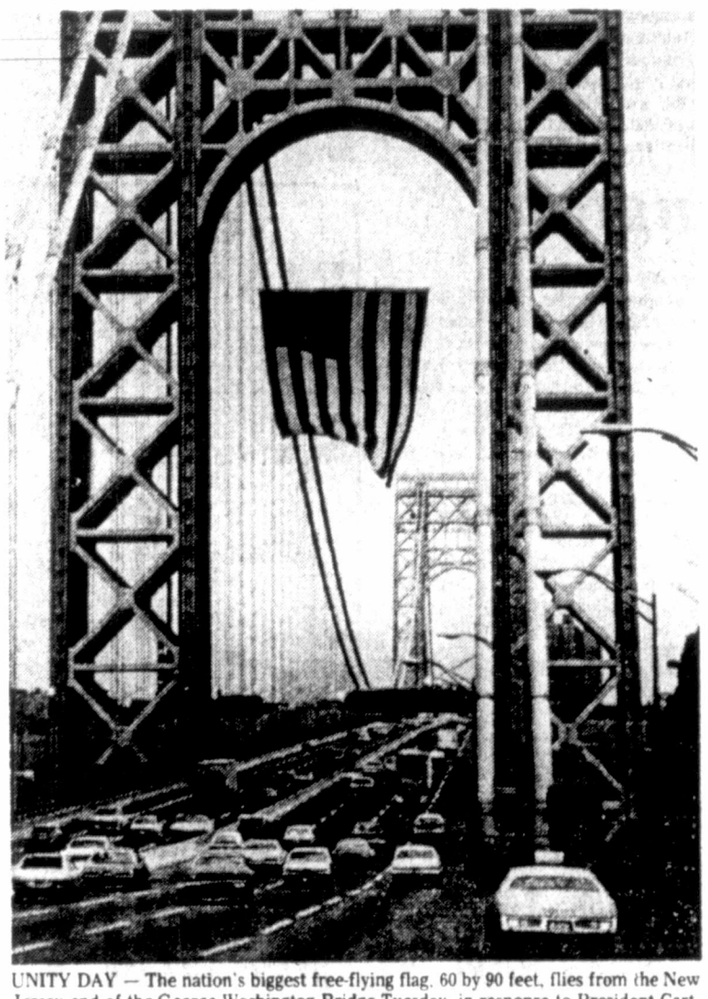
All of the increases were in gasoline wholesale prices, but the full amount of the price rises will probably be passed on to consumers.

More Increases Seen

Mobil and Texaco, which like Exxon and Chevron get much of their oil from Saudi Arabia, did not use the higher Saudi price as a reason for their increases. Mobil's price rise came even before the Saudi announcement. Some analysts believe that the two firms will raise prices yet again to make up for the increased cost of Saudi oil.

Experts say gasoline prices will continue to rise for the next several weeks as the effects of the Iranian embargo are felt and as a result of the expected decision by the Organization of petroleum exporting Countries this week to raise oil prices.

The OPEC decision alone could add as much as a dime a gallon to gasoline prices in the United States, analysts say, judging from early reports of the mood of OPEC's meeting in Caracas.



UNITY DAY — The nation's biggest free-flying flag, 60 by 90 feet, flies from the New Jersey end of the George Washington Bridge Tuesday, in response to President Carter's call for a "Unity Day" to protest the holding of Americans as hostages in Iran and to show solidarity of the American people in their demands for the safe return of the 50 hostages. Oil Cartel Sharply Divided On Prices

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The 13 members of the international oil cartel ended the second day of their winter meeting Tuesday with no solution of a serious split over prices.

The delegates set a third round of deliberations for 7 a.m. CST today.

On one side was a bloc led by Saudi Arabia, whose production of 9.5 million barrels a day is nearly one-third the total output of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The Saudis, followed by Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela, boosted prices by $6 to $24 a barrel before the conference and have vowed no further price increases for at least the first three months of 1980.

On the other side were "hawks" led by Libya, which raised prices by $3.73 to $30 for the standard 42-gallon barrel and said it wants the the price of Saudi crude oil, traditional benchmark for calculating other OPEC prices, to be lifted by another $10.

"Those people who increased the price" to only $24 a barrel "were behind," said Libyan Oil Minister Ezzedin Ali Mabruk. "They were willing to give it for free."

Qatar bolstered the moderate position by announcing that if Saudi Arabia would hold prices, Qatar would freeze its own prices for a year. UAE officials have already announced a six-month price freeze.

Nigeria, leaning toward the hawks, suggested prices would rise again soon. A.K. Hart, head of Nigeria's national oil company, said, "We are traditionally in line with Libya and the Algerians."

OPEC oil prices are up by about 20 percent from levels of a month ago and about 100 percent from this time last year. One oil analyst in New York predicted the latest round of price hikes could add as much as 11 cents to the cost of a gallon of gasoline or heating oil in the United States, which imports about eight million barrels a day — half its petroleum supply.

However, Washington economist Mi-

Inflation Also Causes Woes For Goodfellows

THE LIST is long. The time is short.

Donations keep coming in, but will they be enough and will they be on time?

That's a constant worrry for Chief Goodfellow each day as money gifts in his mailbag keep falling behind the 1978 totals. . .and he needs more this year than ever.

Inflation has run the cost of a Goodfellow Christmas sack up to $2.25.

Unemployment, sickness, death and other things upped the Christmas list to near the 10,000 mark.

And, the stories are sad.

"Please help our kids. This year we have so many medical bills and doc and hospital bills that they won't have a nice Christmas. By next year maybe we can give to you people. Thank you very, very much."

That from a father, and from a child: "I wrote you last year but you never came. Please try to bring something for me and my sisters on Christmas day. I be waiting for you."

And, from a neighbor sending in for others — "Sorry that I could not send money, but have not worked for the past three weeks. Hoping I get a job soon, God Bless you for what you do, a friend."

So many letters this year. So much money needed to answer a cry for help for a child's Christmas. So far short of the goal to make 10,000 faces bright with the joy of Christmas.

There is time, if all the "Goodfellows" in Lubbock take the time to do what they have been planning to do...when they have time.

It will only take a minute, and will make a child's face glow on Christmas Day.

Like them, why don't you sit down and play Santa for a child?

Iran Blames U.S. In Official's Killing

Khomeini Backs Students' Hard Line

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Hopes for an end to the U.S.-Iran crisis received two major setbacks Tuesday as Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called for the extradition of the deposed shah from Panama and government officials blamed the United States for the assassination of a high Iranian official.

Khomeini backed the hard line of students who issued a statement from the occupied U. S. Embassy compound accusing Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh of "excessive talking" that encouraged the United States to think Iran had changed its position on the extradition of the shah.

"To America we have only one thing to say: Hand over the deposed shah and his plunder, however much you keep him outside America," the statement said.

"And if the U.S. government does not accede to this just and humane demand by the Iranian nation, the least we shall do will be to put the American spies on trial."

Lash At Ghotbzadeh

The militants lashed out at Ghotbzadeh's weekend comments that Iran would try to defuse the critical stalemate now that the deposed shah has left the United States and that some hostages might be released before Christmas, without trial. The students contradicted him, saying none would be freed and all would be tried.

Meanwhile, the official Pars news agency reported from the holy city of Qom that Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, former chief Islamic prosecutor, had ordered gunmen to go to Central America and execute the shah and his wife. Two weeks ago Khalkhali claimed his gunmen were responsible for the slaying of the deposed shah's nephew in Paris.

Demand Renewed

"We want the deposed shah from the United States, even though he is no longer in that country, because he has been sent to an American puppet country," Khomeini said to a group of handicapped persons who called on him in Qom.

At a news conference Monday night Khomeini dismissed suggestions that the students were directing foreign policy, but he gave his unqualified approval to their occupation of the U.S. Embassy and their demands Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi be returned to Iran before the hostages could be released.

Holy Man Slain

Earlier Tuesday three unidentified gunmen on motorcycles assassinated high-ranking holy man Hojatoleslam Mohammad Mofateh and his two guards. Iran's ruling Revolutionary Council said the CIA and SAVAK, the shah's former secret police, were responsible — an accusation that is sure to inflame the already critical situation.

Interior Minister Hashemi Rafsanjani said, "It could not be coincidental that right at the middle of our struggle against the imperialism of the United States one of our top militants is assassinated."

State radio said the killings "would do no good to the residents of the White House" and said the guns the killers used were American-made Colt .38 and .45 caliber pistols.

"False Imagination

In their attack on the Foreign Ministry, the militants said, "nowadays, ominous murmurs are heard from the White House quite brazenly accusing the Iranian nation of having changed its position. What false imagination ... Why and how is it that the enemy No.1 of the Iranian nation can allow itself to indulge in such frivolous talk? Is it that certain responsible officials have perhaps on occasion spoken irresponsibly and that led the enemy to his filthy and Satanic whims?"

Hassan Habibi, spokesman for the ruling Revolutionary Council, said the council, in a late night meeting, discussed improved conditions for the hostages.

"It has been agreed that a number of priests should visit the hostages around the beginning of Christmas and could probably bring the hostages presents from their families."

Habibi also said there probably would be 24 persons on Ghotbzadeh's proposed international "grand jury" to look into U.S. involvement in the shah's regime. The hearings are to begin Jan. 1 or 2 and last two weeks.

The grand jury, which had Khomeini's blessings, appeared to offer a middle way out between student demands that the hostages be tried as spies and the bitter reaction that would be bound to provoke from the United States.

In their statement the students questioned whther the Iranan embassies abroad were doing a proper job of representing the Islamic revolution, and suggested the diplomats might better be replaced with Moslem youths.

And the Foreign Ministry announced that 353 diplomats had been purged from the country's 800-member diplomatic corps since the beginning of the revolution last winter and that a total of 402 employees of the ministry had been dis-

Protests Hit Embassy In Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Leftist students protesting the Shah of Iran's presence on the nearby Panamanian island of Contadora rampaged through Panama City on Tuesday, breaking windows at the U. S. Embassy and the government lottery office and hauling down and shredding the embassy flag.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi has been under a longstanding order of death from the revolutionary government in his homeland, and the official Pars news agency in Tehran said gunmen have been ordered to go to Central America to assassinate the shah and his wife. Security was strengthened Tuesday on Contadora.

Dispersed Quickly

Bud Hensgen, the U.S. Embassy press spokesman in Panama, said national guardsmen quickly dispersed about 300 students with tear gas, but not before they stoned and broke a Plexiglas window at the embassy and hauled down the flag and dragged it in the street, shredding it along the way.

"Everything happened so fast," he said, adding the embassy's security forces slammed shut the outside doors and several guardsmen on duty chased away the students. No injuries were reported.

Despite the attack, Hensgen said embassy officials saw no "serious threat" to security, expressed confidence in the Panamanian government to control any demonstrations and said Americans here were used to them.

Treaties Negotiated

"This is where the Panama Canal Treaties were negotiated," referring to previous anti-U.S. demonstrations during the long talks that led to the treaties turning over control of the canal to Panama at the end of the century.

After being chased from the embassy, the students poured into adjacent streets, flinging rocks at vehicles with government identification, and set ablaze a car belonging to the National Institute of Hydraulic Resources, witnesses said.

They also broke out windows at the lottery office and painted anti-shah slogans on walls of Balboa Avenue, the city's main street.

Demand Shah Out

Other students marched to the Foreign Ministry where they chanted slogans demanding the government send the shah out of the country.

The protesters regrouped in a downtown shopping area, but dispersed after national guardsmen appeared wearing full riot gear.

Mean Bear Leaves 'Cold Trail'

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AS LUBBOCK County law enforcement officers planned an air search for the mystery bear in Horseshoe Bend Canyon, the strongest lead about the animal's origins seems to have fizzled.

Nancy Hickman, president of People for Animal Welfare, said Tuesday a Slaton man had reported in October that his pet black bear had escaped.

Mrs. Hickman said the man called the Lubbock Animal Shelter after seeing a story in The Avalanche-Journal about the possible sighting of a bear west of Slaton.

He described the bear as "full-grown and mean," she said.

The man, when contacted by The Avalanche-Journal, said he has never owned a bear. Another family member labeled the report to the animal shelter a hoax.

Nevertheless, Lubbock County Sheriff's deputies and officers of the Department of Public Safety plan to "go bear hunting" this morning in the DPS helicopter, said Assistant Chief Deputy Alton Hobbs.

"We're going to give that place (the canyon) a good going-over," Hobbs said.

If indeed there is a bear in the canyon, which is situated approximately three miles north of Slaton, an attempt to capture the animal will be made, Hobbs said.

If it is captured, the animal probably will be given to a zoo or turned over to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, Hobbs said.

He stressed that bears are protected by game laws and that shooting one, even in West Texas, is illegal unless the animal is attacking.

Hobbs said he was worried that an over-eager hunter might shoot the animal if he encounters it.

The sheriff's office, along with other authorities, were initially skeptical about the possibility of a bear roaming the area until tracks were found in the snow on

25 Persons Killed In Bali Earthquake

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A severe earthquake rocked the tourist island of Bali on Tuesday, killing at least 25 persons, injuring 200 and destroying hundreds of homes and other buildings, authorities said.

The quake, which hit at 3:00 a.m. local time while most of the island's population was asleep, caused panic among residents and foreign tourists in hotels along the island's beachfront. It registered 6.1 on the open-ended Richter scale.

A manager at the plush Bali Beach Intercontinental Hotel said many foreign tourists were shaken, but none was injured.

Police said about 80 percent of the homes and buildings were destroyed or badly damaged in Karangasem on the western tip of Bali, one of Indonesia's chain of 13,500 islands.

Rescue teams were digging through the rubble searching for bodies.

Communications and some roads between Karangasem and Denpaser, Bali's capital, were cut by the quake. There was little damage in the capital and there were no reports of casualties there.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area; 4 moderate damage; 5 considerable damage; 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Showers Entering Forecast For Friday

Lubbock area residents should take advantage of the warm temperatures and partly cloudy skies expected for the area through Thursday because a chance for showers enters the forecast for West Texas on Friday.

Temperatures today should climb into the middle 60s before dropping into the lower 30s tonight. Winds today are expected to be southwesterly at 10 to 15 mph.

Temperatures should stretch into the upper 60s Thursday before a frontal system moves into West Texas, carrying rain and pushing Friday's high into the 50s.

Showers may continue through Sunday as overnight readings continue to fall into the 30s and afternoon highs remain in the 50s.

Temperatures rose to 52 in Lubbock on Tuesday as westerly and southwesterly winds buffeted the region at 5 to 10 mph.

WINDS AID JET SPEED

LONDON (AP) — High winds from a storm that battered northern Europe over the weekend also pushed an Anglo-French Concorde jetliner to a new Atlantic passenger speed record, British Airways claimed Tuesday.

More Flooding Expected In Washington

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Officials said Tuesday they expect more major flooding in Western Washington where about 200 people have already fled their homes as incessant rains swelled rivers and turned docile creeks into cataracts.

"Don't stop building your arks," said Bob Herzog, a National Weather Service specialist. "There is already another disturbance bringing rain and it will just keep coming."

Some spots on the lightly populated Olympic Peninsula on the Pacific Coast have reported more than 20 inches of rain since the middle of last week.

North of Seattle, the Weather Service predicted major floods on the Nooksack, Skagit, Snoqualmie, Snohomish and Skykomish rivers. Lesser flooding was expected eleswhere in Western Washington on the Stillaguamish, Cedar, Chehalis, and Satsop rivers.

The storms have been linked to at least three deaths. A 75-year-old man died of an apparent heart attack Monday while being evacuated from his flood-threatened home near Port Angeles, sheriff's deputies said.

Police said the driver of a state dump truck died Friday when his rig fell into the gaping washout of a bridge approach over the Bogachiel River on the Olympic Peninsula. And one man apparently drowned Saturday when his boat was swamped in the swollen Skagit River north of Seattle, said Skagit County Undersheriff Gary Frazier.

Gov. Dixy Lee Ray proclaimed a state of emergency late Monday, as about 100 persons were evacuated from the peninsula's Elwha Indian Reservation west of Port Angeles. About 60 persons were evacuated from their homes in the little coastal Indian fishing village of La Push and 25 persons, most of them elderly, fled their homes in a low-lying area called Dungeness Meadows between Port Angeles and Sequim, said Clallam County Undersheriff Don Roberts.

As rivers rose in the dark Monday night, Roberts said, authorities wrongly believed many more persons would have to be evacuated from La Push and the Dungeness Meadows.

Heavy rains and melting snow did an estimated $500,000 damage to roads in the Cascade Mountains, said Joe Nodalski, a Forest Service spokesman.

The governor's proclamation cleared the way for immediate disaster relief from state and federal agencies for Clallam, Snohomish and Whatcom counties, where authorities had requested emergency assistance.

In other counties, authorities must survey damage and decide whether to request emergency aid.

Clallam County Sheriff Steve Kernes said drinking water was being trucked to several areas where silt-laden floodwaters had ruined local water systems.

The Elwha River rose to 22.5 feet, 6½ feet above flood stage, chasing about 100 reservation residents from their homes, only a day after they returned from a weekend evacuation.

Donna Charles said she, her husband Bosco, their four children, a son-in-law and four grandhcildren may have left their big two-story house on the riverbank for the last time.

"Somebody said they heard our house has collapsed already," she said Monday.

Officials say financial losses so far appear to be less than in 1977, when the last major round of floods in Washington caused $27.5 million worth of damage.

Payless Paydays Plague Workers

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The sale of $375,000 in tax anticipation notes will allow the city of Benton Harbor to catch up with its payroll by Friday. Last month, city employees experienced two consecutive payless paydays and the city still owes its workers for one of those missed paydays.

City Finance Director Bryce Weeks said Monday night that the city will not be able to pay the workers on their regular payday Tuesday but should be able to pay all its payroll debts Friday.

City officials have blamed part of the problem on the holdup of state revenue sharing funds in Lansing. The city is waiting to receive $425,000 in revenue sharing money which was to have been paid in October.

Of some 3,000 kinds of lizards in the world, only two are poisonous.

Bids Open On Oil, Natural Gas Leases In Area Off Cape Cod

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — After a court battle that took nearly two years, the Interior Department opened high bids totaling $827.8 million Tuesday on oil and natural gas leases in the fishing-rich Georges Bank area off Cape Cod.

Oil companies submitted bids on 73 tracts of the total 116 tracts available, federal officials said, while the remaining 43 were not bid upon. A total of 189 bids were received on the 73 tracts.

Many of the 300 oilmen attending the sale in the Veteran's Memorial Auditorium burst into applause as the first offer was announced.

The proceedings were interrupted twice, once by an unidentified man who stepped onto the stage, and again when a person threw five plastic bags of oil and leaflets protesting the environmental dangers of offshore drilling at some of the oil company officials.

The person who threw the oil was not immediately identified, nor was it known whether he was taken into custody.

The sale had been scheduled to begin at 10 a.m., but it was delayed when U.S. Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan requested time to study a last-minute bid by the state of Massachusetts and environmentalists to halt the auction.

But Brennan rejected the challenge from Massachusetts Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti and the Conservation Law Foundation, who contended drilling might seriously harm the area's rich fishing grounds.

Oil companies began submitting the bids Monday afternoon for the tracts, each about nine square miles in size and located 63 to 157 miles offshore.

Federal geologists estimate the area could contain 123 million barrels of oil and 850 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Frank Basile, manager of the New York Outer Continental Shelf Office, said federal officials have 45 days to decide whether a bid is high enough and should be approved. Up to 24 percent of bids in previous sales have been rejected, Basile said.

Bidders then would have to spend an additional six to seven months to obtain necessary permits before any drilling could begin.

Oil companies began bringing drilling equipment to the former Quonset Point military base on Narragansett Bay last year in anticipation of the start of the drilling.

The bidding procedure was complicated by a strike at the Biltmore Plaza Hotel where the sale was scheduled to take place.

To comply with federal regulations, Basile said he had to accept bids and open them at the hotel. But to accommodate anyone who might object to crossing a picket line, the bids were announced at the auditorium.

It was the third attempt by the federal government to sell the leases. A federal judge blocked the original sale Jan. 28, 1978, in New York.

After Interior Department officials removed some environmentally sensitive tracts and added other safeguards, the sale was rescheduled for Nov. 6 in Providence.

Opponents of the sale filed suit in U.S. District Court in Boston to again block the sale.

Judge John S. McNaught ruled against them, saying the federal government had done all that was necessary to safeguard environmental interests.

That decision was appealed and the U.S. Supreme Court again ordered the sale delayed. The justices did not hear the case, referring it back to the federal appeals court in Boston which Monday uphold McNaught's decision to let the sale proceed.

Assets Frozen In Oil Futures Fraud Case

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has frozen the assets of nine corporations and 17 individuals suspected of peddling fraudulent futures in crude oil.

Justice Thomas Hughes signed the order Tuesday in Manhattan state Supreme Court at the request of State Attorney General Robert Abrams, who initiated a civil action against the alleged boiler-room promotion.

The judge also directed the defendants to produce all their books and records for inspection by Abrams' office.

The attorney general said he "knows of no way that the business ... can be legitimate."

He said the salesmen offered contracts giving buyers the right to purchase crude oil at a fixed price any time in the ensuing six months.

Both the oil and the firms' assets "may or may not exist," Abrams said.

In addition, he said, none of the corporations or individuals had registered as brokers, as required by state law.

Abrams added that there are legitimate firms that sell oil futures.

Corporate defendants in the suit were: American Petroleum Exchange, Bartex Petroleum, Comercial Petrolera International, Eastern States Petroleum Exchange, International Petroleum Exchange, Pan Eastern Petroleum Exchange, Ramco Petroleum, Universal Petroleum and United States Petroleum Exchange.

Losing Sight Of The Issue

ALTHOUGH THE final verdict is still out, as of the moment, an Iranian official's claim that Tehran has won a "victory" over the U.S. has considerable validity.

While applying the remark to the fact that the Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi has left the U.S., the assessment might well cover the whole Tehran scenario.

While much of the world has condemned the seizure of the U.S. Embassy and the holding of 50 American citizens as hostages, the truth of the matter is that the hostages are still being held, the Embassy is still occupied and the U.S. apparently is going to be put "on trial" in some sort of international "tribunal."

THE PURPOSE of the latter plot, it seems, is to investigate the role the U.S. allegedly played in much of the Shah's tenure, including his alleged crimes against the Iranian people.

So, what we now have is the spectacle, even if the hostages are released as a Christmas "gift" to the American people, is a hyped-up "trial" in which the U.S. would be made the scapegoat, before world television naturally, for everything bad which has happened to Iran, in the past and present.

In a Wall Street Journal dispatch from Washington, an implied agreement to such a staged farce is seen in the statement that "U.S. officials have long expressed willingness to accept such a forum, provided it takes place after the hostages are freed."

WELL, WE FOR one, aren't willing to go along with any such "deal." It's long past time we got the whole issue in Tehran back on track.

The issue here—one which we should not allow Iran or the rest of the world to forget—is that a gang of terrorists in effect committed an act of war by invading sovereign U.S. property and made prisoners of American citizens, whom they still hold.

Short of an act of war, what if anything the Shah or the U.S. might or might not have done, has no bearing on the Embassy issue.

Papering the Tehran idiocy over with the explanation that we do not understand "the Islamic mind or religion or hatred" for the Shah or Western ways is a lame and unacceptable excuse.

Iranians, including past and present, the Ayatollah Khomeini included, understand Western ways perfectly.

They understand how to stage staged protests at the Embassy for TV, a commentary on the gullibility of the U.S. media, and they understand that oil brings ever higher prices from the "decadent" West.

WHAT THEY, and apparently a growing segment of the American public, do not understand is that such acts of terrorism must be punished.

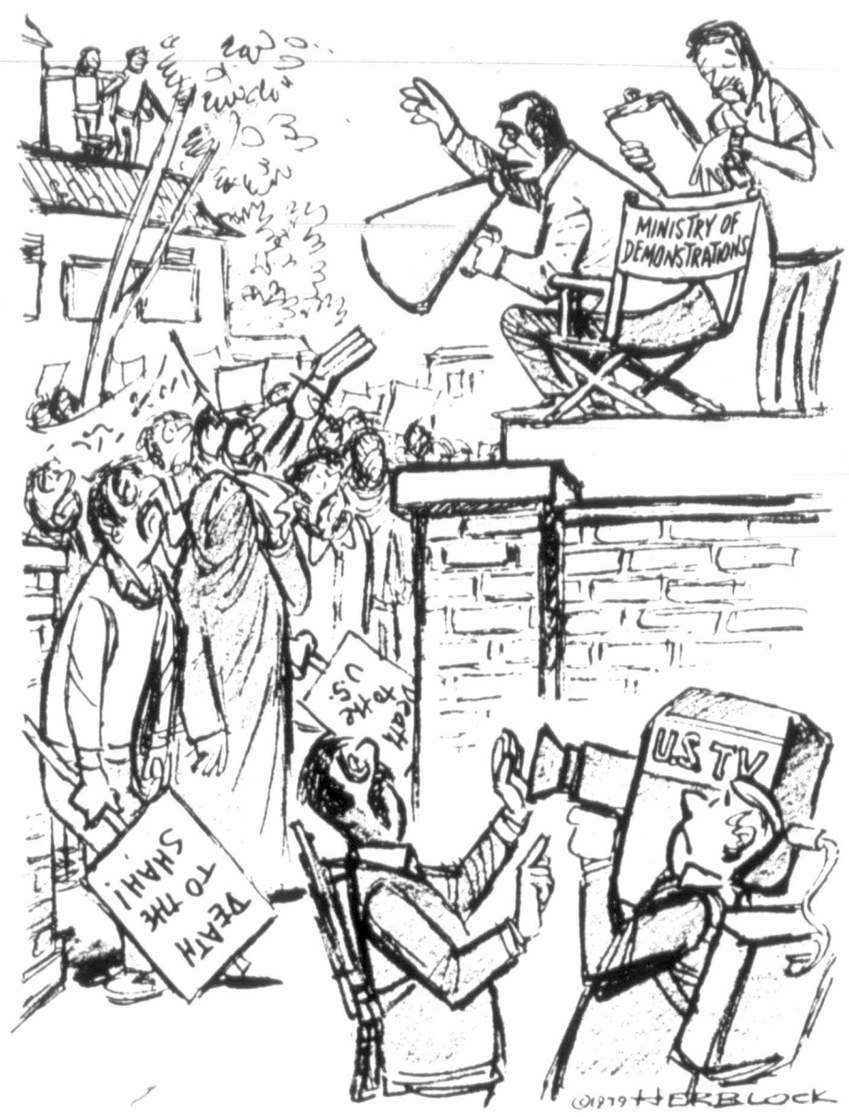
The alternative is more of the same later.

There is a growing feeling in the U.S., if the polls are accurate, that if the hostages are freed unharmed, then we should do nothing with the possible exception of seeking some sort of economic sanctions, which most nations likely would not observe.

This is not to advocate a military strike at dawn on Christmas Eve, unless the hostages are harmed or put on trial.

It may not be in keeping with the season's thoughts. But, neither is what is happening—for the 46th day—in Tehran.

"I KNOW YOU'RE ALL TIRED, BUT LET'S SHAKE THOSE FISTS AGAIN, AND DON'T BURN TODAY'S UNCLE SAM EFFIGY TILL THE CAMERAS ROLL - OKAY - ACTION -"



AN EDITORIAL:

Sales Tax Lobby Up For Grabs

DALLAS COUNTY commissioners say passage of a law giving the county a ½-cent sales tax will be one of their top priorities in the next Legislature.

They're thinking about hiring a full-time lobbyist to help push that idea and to represent them on other legislative matters in 1981.

Other counties, school districts, hospital districts and transit authorities also have their eyes on the sales tax as a handy way to raise more revenues.

TEXAS CITIES, which have found the 1-cent municipal sales tax a boon in these inflationary times, may ask the Texas Municipal League to lobby for an increase next session, too.

It is conceivable that the cities and counties, rather than fight one another and neither side win, might join forces and split an increased sales tax down the middle.

Presumably, if Dallas County gets the sales tax it wants, legislators from other counties—especially those with a large urban population—will want to at least have the opportunity to adopt one, too, on a local option basis.

The theory is that people would rush out to vote for a sales tax of any sort so long as it were sugar-coated with the promise of a cut in property taxes.

Dallas County Commissioner Roy Orr makes no bones about his belief that a good lobbyist is needed to get the Legislature's okay.

"I know this will probably end up wrong in the papers," he is quoted in the papers, "but you got to have someone who knows what chits are out to who and how to call them in to get a bill passed. The merits just don't have a lot to do with it."

So, hang on to your hats, folks. Dolph Briscoe promised "no new taxes" but he's not governor any more.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Big Oil's Poor Image Partly Its Own Fault

WASHINGTON—Recent efforts in this space have defended the profits and practices of "big oil," and deplored the attacks of scapegoating politicians against the petroleum companies.

I stand by all of these assertions, and will reaffirm them on any occasion when it seems meet to do so. But, in all honesty, I have to admit the moguls of the petroleum business—as of many others—have brought a goodly portion of their troubles on themselves.

Take, for example, the pounding the oil companies received this summer on the subject of the gas lines.

EVERY POLITICIAN who could get himself in front of a TV camera used the crisis to blame the companies for hoarding, ripping off consumers, falsifying data, and just about anything else disreputable that he could think of.

Public opinion polls suggested angry motorists accepted a substantial part of this indictment.

There was never any proof of these irresponsible charges, and two separate Federal inquiries in essence conceded as much.

More to the point, it was clear enough to those who examined the matter that the gas lines were actually the result of government policy—to wit, the "allocations" program which, together with Federal price controls, prevented gas supplies from moving about in answer to demand.

This fact was noted in a few obscure places—like the entrails of a Department of Energy report, and a couple of editions of this column. But so far as I could tell, the oil companies themselves never made the point.

CERTAINLY NOTHING from them on the subject crossed this desk, though I made several efforts to obtain their views about the sources of the crisis.

Or consider those oil company commercials on TV that have been telling people to use less gasoline. This surely must be one of the few ad campaigns in history in which a business has urged the buying public to consume less of its product.

The idea is not only intrinsically silly, but undergirds the notion promoted by the Federal price controllers that we confront a problem caused by natural shortage—rather than by Federal price controllers.

In somewhat similar vein were earlier TV commercials which manifested sincere oil company concern for the environment.

WHAT IT sounded like was, "we know there are problems with our industry, but let us clean up our own mess."

They help build up the climate of opinion that opposes economic growth, preaches a lifeboat energy ethic, and sacrifices production to regulatory overkill.

One can only imagine the process by which such commercials are produced: The problem is kicked downstairs to the PR department, which asks an ad agency to devise a campaign to take the heat off.

Account execs and copy-writers bring back some tricky slogan to appeal to trendy attitudes of the moment. The end result is conservationist-ecological boilerplate.

THE BEST of the petroleum companies in taking a more aggressive posture has been Mobil, and it is perhaps indicative of the problem that the man in charge of Mobil's PR effort has recently signed on for the presidential campaign of—Sen. Edward Kennedy!

If this is what we have in the best of big oil's PR departments, what must be the situation in the worst?

If the petroleum business in this country is going to survive—and if America is ever going to move back to energy independence—the business itself is going to have to make some changes.

And the first of these should be an industry-wide resolve to stop playing PR games, and to get up on its hind legs and fight.

GEORGE WILL:

'Tis The Treason...

WASHINGTON—Treason in our time, from the Rosenbergs to Britain's Anthony Blunt, whose treason was recently made public, is giving idealism a bad name. But then, much that calls itself idealism deserves a bad name.

That is one lesson of Robert Lindsey's book, "The Falcon and the Snowman." This account of two children of California privilege who perpetrated extraordinarily damaging espionage against the United States is an account of one way the "idealism" of the 1960s has echoed in the 1970s.

Blunt's story (and that of his collaborators, Burgess, Maclean, and Philby) is a tangle of homosexuality and treachery, revealing a thin but important slice of the social history of Britain in the 1930s and 1940s.

The story of Christopher Boyce and Andrew Lee, a tangle of drugs and half-baked politics, is an illuminating footnote to America's recent history.

Espionage, a sordid crime, has rarely been more sordid than in the case of Boyce and Lee. They were altar boys together in the wealthy Los Angeles suburb where they grew into remarkable case studies of confusion, cynicism and degeneracy.

Lee's vocation was crime, dealing in drugs—hence "the snowman." The only thing Boyce ever did well was a hobby, training falcons.

Then his father got him a job with TRW, an aerospace firm that makes, among other things, satellites that are part of the technical basis of the nation's increasingly tenuous security.

Boyce was 21, a college dropout drifting along the sleazy fringes of the drug culture, when TRW hired him at $140 a week and got him a security clearance for the company's "black vault."

THERE, SOME remarkably trashy people with access to many of the nation's most sensitive secrets mixed with daiquiris in the document-shredding machine.

The ease with which Boyce stole documents (some smuggled out of TRW in a potted plant) illustrates the scandalous, slovenly, even frivolous security measures of TRW, and the government.

But this was 1975. The morale of the CIA—the sort of institution in which morale is crucial—had been shredded. Detente was in full flower, and secrecy seemed somehow at odds with the climate of innocence and righteousness that was to produce President Carter.

When caught, Lee claimed that his treason was really a "protest." He said (and Lindsey does not seem half skeptical enough) that he was moved by idealism to strike against nationalism, the CIA, air pollution (yes, he mentions that, too) and all the predictable rest, including a developer who built houses on a field Boyce liked.

ACTUALLY, IT was Boyce who suggested to Lee that they turn a profit through treason. Boyce never explained how humanity, clean air, and unspoiled fields were served by selling things to the KGB.

Boyce took Soviet money, and nothing in Lindsey's account convinces me that Boyce ever had another motive. "To peace," toasted the KGB agent, sealing the first commercial transaction.

But Boyce understood one thing: when trapped, talk liberalese. He struck a pose of injured righteousness. The nation had failed to measure up to his standards, and out of him gurgled all the familiar indictments and laments.

He even claimed to believe that Lee's drug dealing was Lee's way of striking back at—what else—a "sick society."

LINDSEY'S BOOK is a study of frivolousness, beyond that of TRW and the government. The espionage would have ended sooner if drug charges against Lee had not been vitiated by the frivolous leniency of a "compassionate" judge and a psychiatrist.

The traitors themselves were frivolous about weighing the risks they were taking and the damage they were doing.

Reviewing (in the London Times Literary Supplement) another book, the one that recently provoked the public exposure of Blunt's treasonous past, Noel Annan, vice chancellor of the University of London, recalls how Philby was allowed to flee from Beirut to Moscow.

AN EMISSARY from Britain's secret service was sent to Beirut to confront Philby, in a gentlemanly way, with the fact that Philby's treason had been confirmed by a Russian defector. Annan is moved to "a savage reflection":

"If (the British government was) not prepared to trick Philby to return and put him on trial, should not an emissary of a very different sort have been sent out from Britain? Why was not Philby, who had sent so many Western agents to their death, assassinated?"

You may not like Annan's idea, but at least his anger is proportionate to the offense.

ANDREW TULLY:

Nectar Of The Gods

WASHINGTON—Although an article in The New York Times makes it sound—as the French would say—of a yuminess irresistible—I think I will pass up a chance to decorate our Christmas table with a special jug of Remy Martin Cognac.

This elegant tipple comes in a Baccarat crystal decanter, a reproduction of a flask found on a Louis XIII battlefield. The Times' Terry Robards described its taste as "smooth and aromatically delicious."

But my bank account forces me to be tacky. The stuff costs $290 per decanter.

Besides, until I read the Robards piece I didn't know Louis XIII had a battlefield.

Anyway, any secret desire to whoop it up with the rich fellows went down the kitchen sink when I read on.

FOR INSTANCE, Robards was enthusiastic about a Chateau Lafite-Rothschild 1803 that experts predicted would bring about $30,000 at auction. A bottle, that is, not a case.

That 1803 job has been recorked periodically to make sure the stopper would not deteriorate and admit air, leading to oxidation of the contents.

Moreover, it has been "lying in the cellar of the same French restaurant for many years, suggesting that it has not been subjected to bruising trips from one owner to another."

Right there, skepticism takes over. I am not even sure that all French wine is better than all American wine. This heresy was produced by a friend from the French embassy who admitted rather shamefacedly at a luncheon table the other day that even expert French wine tasters are human.

HE WAS remarking on a scandal a few years ago involving charges against some of the more prominent figures of France's noblest industry that they had doctored four million bottles of second-rate wine and passed it off to an unsuspecting public as red Bordeaux.

Sacrebleu! The horrible news hit the French people with all the impact of an historical investigation that exposed Joan of Arc as a lingerie salesman from Lyon who secretly shaved every day.

"It was a shocker," said my French friend. "But worse than the doctoring was the admission by witnesses in the trade that even an expert can't tell doctored wine from the real thing."

IN SHORT, after centuries of confidently lapping up their country's most famous product, the French people had been told that they were defenseless against those who would commit the sacrilege of tampering with their blood of life.

I suppose it was inevitable. In recent years experts in practically every field have fallen into disrepute.

"Ah well," said Jean Louis (his identity is kept secret here to protect him from reprisals.) "Ah well, we must all live with certain unpleasant facts of life."

He smiled wanly, and took a sip from his glass. He was drinking a California Clos du Bois at a modest $8 a bottle.

JAY HARRIS:

The U.S. On Trial

ONE OF THE more ironic aspects of America is that in seeking to protect and project its way of life, it often finds itself in hot water.

Nowhere is this more evident than in our foreign policy as it relates to Southeast Asia, and now in the Mideast.

In both instances, what started out, under several Presidents, as efforts to bring about a bit of Democracy and "progress" to another part of the world have now backfired.

And instead of coming off as heroes or saviors, the nation and the American people are painted, often with Communist help, as ogres and opportunists. Imperialists is the word most often used. A word born in Moscow.

BUT, THAT is only a part of the story...

So, now we have the spectacle of the U.S., along with other nations, seeking to save thousands of "boat people" fleeing from the Communist "paradise" we opposed in Asia more than a decade ago.

And on the other side of the globe, the U.S. is facing a "trial" by a gang of "religious" despots for alleged crimes against Islam.

Unfortunately, in it all, the U.S. media have played along with those who have been most critical of this nation's efforts, at home and abroad. As a result, today millions glibly parrot something they heard, or read, about our role in those parts of the world without ever taking the time to check the facts or weigh the opposing claims.

If history is being rewritten by those who want it to say something special, and often derogatory, about this nation, whose fault is it anyway?

THESE THOUGHTS came to mind this week as we watched the hypocrisy being unfolded in the U.S. and Iran.

On one hand, the Carter administration, which had much to do with his downfall in the first place, moved to get the Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi out of the nation in an effort to appease the fanatics illegally holding American citizens hostages in Tehran.

Never mind that the Shah, praised by seven U.S. Presidents, had been a friend to the U.S. and West for most of his 37 years. He had to go.

On another count, there were hints that the Carter administration might not object to an "international tribunal" being named to investigate "crimes" the U.S. supposedly has committed against the Iranian people in conjunction with the Shah, once the hostages are freed.

And on another, the dispute goes on whether this nation has a right to set rules of behavior for foreign student guests in this country, who in many instances are here getting an education because that same "despotic" Shah felt they could help bring his nation out of the despotic Dark Ages.

MUCH TO DO has been made of the "fact" that the Shah allegedly slaughtered or tortured "thousands" during his reign.

Newsweek notes there is no record to back up such claims. On the other hand, the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London says that maybe as many as 3,000 were killed in an uprising in 1963 and 5,000 may have died during the recent revolution, and that in an ordinary year as many as 100 persons may have been killed or imprisoned in Iran for their political beliefs.

"One is too many," an authority with the Institute correctly says. "But a total of 10,000, by lots of standards, isn't very high. The notion that the Shah was uniquely vicious doesn't bear up. There is hardly any Third World government that cannot be accused of similar crimes."

Then Newsweek observed: If only for that reason, it seems unlikely that the charges of political torture and repression will ever get a full airing in any international forum.

WELL, IN SOME ways, it already has...

The nightly harangues over U.S. and world television, the flood of words in newspapers, all have been heavily weighted in telling the Ayatollah Khomeini's side of the story.

To hear or read the mouthings of some unnamed "Iranian spokesman" at the seized U.S. Embassy, or someone like Sen. Ted Kennedy, one gets the idea that there is only one side to the story. No one dwells on the fact that Khomeini and his bloody henchmen have executed more than 600 persons alone this year. Much is made to do about how the Shah left Iran practically destitute. No doubt the Shah and his family did stash away a nest egg "just in case." We wager most Americans would have done the same thing. In fact, many do in secret Swiss bank accounts.

But as Newsweek observed, the Shah's critics usually fail to mention that the great bulk of his wealth was in Iran and reverted to the new government when he fled. "If anything, the Shah may have increased rather than plundered the wealth of Iran," University of California political scientist George Lenczowski, says.

AND NOW, FOR a moment, let us shift back to Southeast Asia and the boat people...

At long last, the American people seem to have put their guilt about Vietnam behind them, a guilt they should never have had in the first place.

Not only have they put that guilt behind them, but they have again turned to trying to help better the lives of a people with whom they have little in common—other than they are human beings.

The U.S., officially and through many organizations from civic groups to churches, is moving to help rescue those cast upon the seas, giving food and shelter and clothing and later a haven and a new life.

In so doing, no doubt we are making and will make mistakes. But, for that and in helping to bring Iran into the Twentieth Century, are we to stand indicted? It indeed is a strange story in the season of Peace on Earth, Good Will to All Men...

CONSIDER THOSE men who are divorced after the age of 40. Client asks if they tend to marry younger women. Somewhat, but not much. In the average remarriage, the husband is only four years older than the wife. Only one divorced man out of every 25 marries a woman 20 years younger.

Q. What were Thomas A. Edison's last words just before he died on Oct. 18, 1931?

A. "It is very beautiful over there."

Q. What proportion of the people never get any dental cavities? And why don't they?

A. One in 100 doesn't, statistics show. Why is debatable. Some authorities say they have something in their saliva that stops the decay-making bacteria. Others contend the minerals in the water they drink as youngsters do the trick.

House Approves $3.43 Billion Aid Package For Chrysler

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $3.43 billion aid package for the ailing Chrysler Corp. including $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees won House approval Tuesday night after lawmakers added provisions requiring $500 million in wage concessions from Chrysler employees.

The aid package, which must also win Senate approval, passed the House on a 271-136 vote.

The formula approved was a substitute for the Carter administration's proposal of $1.5 billion in loan guarantees and an equal amount from other sources, with no specific amount of wage concessions.

The House formula calls for $400 million in wage concessions from hourly wage earners and $100 million in wage concessions from white collar workers.

It also would require the automaker to come up with $650 million in bank loans, $300 million from the sale of Chrysler assets, $250 million from state and local governments, $180 million from suppliers and dealers and $50 million from the sale of newly issued stock.

Those funds would be matched by $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees.

The House rejected by a vote of 295-114 a motion designed to add to the bill a three-year wage freeze bitterly opposed by the United Auto Workers, which represents the bulk of Chrysler's 113,000 employees.

Backers of the aid measure said it was needed to prevent a Chrysler bankruptcy that would throw at least 360,000 employees of Chrysler and its dealers and suppliers out of work.

Opponents said it would set a precedent for other failing companies to seek aid from the government.

Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said that if Chrysler were allowed to go into bankruptcy it would cost taxpayers $4 billion in lost taxes and unemployment and other benefits.

"I don't think we can afford to take the chance," he said. "That's how recessions start. That's how depressions start."

In settling on the $400 million in wage sacrifices for union employees, the House rejected, 296-107, an amendment by Rep. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., calling for that amount to be boosted to $900 million.

Quayle called his amendment "tough and fair," but Rep. William S. Moorhead, D-Pa., said it would "push the union members to the brink and quite possibly over it."

In the Senate, meanwhile, differences over the size of the proposed wage sacrifices appeared to be narrowing. Both houses are seeking to complete action on the Chrysler aid legislation by Friday.

Senators proposed two compromise amendments to scale down the three-year wage freeze that a Senate bill would require of the United Auto Workers union before Chrysler could receive $1.25 billion in loan guarantees.

Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., a co-sponsor of the wage freeze provision, proposed that UAW concessions be trimmed to $800 million from $1.08 billion — the estimated savings from the wage freeze.

Separately, Sens. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., and Joseph Biden, D-Del., proposed that the UAW's sacrifice be limited to $400 million, the same amount proposed in the House aid bill.

The Roth-Eagleton-Biden amendment also calls for $100 million in wage concessions from Chrysler's non-union employees and management, the same as in the House bill.

Eagleton said the proposed concessions amount to $4,000 per UAW member. If Congress were to extract any further sacrifices, he said, Chrysler would lose its skilled workers to better paying jobs and the automaker might "self-destruct."

The UAW, which would have to renegotiate its recent labor contract with Chrysler to provide the additional concessions, immediately rejected Lugar's reduced figure as "unacceptable." Union leaders said $400 million is the maximum sacrifice their members could accept.

Congressional leaders expressed optimism Tuesday about the chances that the aid bill could be rushed through Congress by Friday, when lawmakers are scheduled to begin a month-long holiday recess.

Chrysler has been pressing for prompt passage of the aid bill so the nation's 10th largest corporation can avert bankruptcy.

Congressional debate on the measure has focused on the size of the concessions that the UAW must make for the automaker to receive federal assistance.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said after meeting with key legislators that compromise legislation could be sent to President Carter by Friday.

Unity Day Efforts Varied, Widespread

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

Christmas cards by the thousands were addressed to 260 Takhte Jamshid Avenue, flags reserved for special holidays were run up their poles and one city came to a dead halt for 50 seconds.

Frustrated Americans on Tuesday heeded the president's call for a national Unity Day in support of the hostages spending their 45th day of captivity at the U.S. Embassy in Iran.

"America is as unified today as it has been at any time since World War II," said Vice President Walter Mondale as he arrived at the airport in Mount Vernon, Ill., to talk with Illinois officials about energy problems.

At stores in at least 100 towns and cities across the nation, thousands lined up for a half-million Christmas cards provided free by merchants to send to the hostages at 260 Takhte Jamshid Avenue, Tehran, Iran. The senders had to pay for the postage, which came to 31 cents. Pens, writing tables, stamp machines and mail bags were provided in many stores, and the cards were mailed on the spot.

"The thing that has surprised me so much is the time people spend writing something in the cards," said Pat Stephenson, marketing director for a merchant's association in Lincoln, Neb., which was giving away cards at a shopping center.

While a number of communities held vigils and prayer services, the city of Huntington, W.Va., shut down for 50 seconds at noon as it will each day this week.

At the stroke of noon, church bells rang and factory whistles blew. Assembly lines stopped and traffic lights turned red. For 50 seconds, motorists waited beside their cars. City employees, shoppers and school children stepped outside and stood quietly.

"Fifty seconds for 50 hostages," said City Manager Dick Barton. "People are more concerned about this situation in Iran than anything in a long time."

Jim Warner, one Huntington resident said, "Everything stopped.

"There wasn't a sound. I don't think I saw two people move."

In Leesburg, Va., the Loudon County Board of supervisors urged all 62,000 residents of the county to take part in a similar 50-second shutdown on Friday.

At President Carter's urging, flags were flying across the land.

Civil Servants Win $1 Million Each In Lottery

NEW YORK (AP) — Two $13,000-a-year Nassau County employees, George Muhlbauer of Valley Stream, and Charles Walters of Massapequa Park, won $1 million each Tuesday in New York state's Olympic Lottery.

Muhlbauer's name was pulled as the $2 million lottery winner during a drawing held on the WABC-TV "AM New York" television program. He introduced Walters as his partner in the winning ticket.

Muhlbauer and Walters bought ten of the $10 lottery tickets, which will return $100,000 a year for the next 20 years.

"One of the things I feel bad about is that my wife passed away and it's to bad she couldn't be here to share in this," Muhlbauer said.

Muhlbauer said he would take his 70-year-old mother to Germany to see a sister she hasn't seen in 40 years.

"I plan to party for a year and then get some advice on how to handle the rest of the money," said Walters, after phoning a bar and telling the bartender, "buy all my friends a drink and put it on my bill."

Tough Oil Windfall Tax Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter was quoted Tuesday as saying the "windfall profits" tax that finally emerges from Congress will have to be tougher than merely splitting the difference between the House and Senate bills.

However, the president stopped short of saying how stiff the tax on the oil industry would have to be to stop him from reimposing price controls on crude oil.

Carter's comments were relayed to reporters by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and other Democratic leaders following a breakfast at the White House.

O'Neill said Carter was told there is little chance a Senate-House conference committee can complete action on the bill this month. But, the speaker said, Carter agreed it would be better to delay than make concessions to the Senate, which favors a lighter tax, just to rush the bill through.

The White House issued a statement noting that the tax passed by the Senate Monday night, which would cost the oil industry an estimated $178 billion in the 1980s, falls short of the $277-billion measure approved by the House.

"We will continue to push for a strong bill which is fair to producers, consumers and taxpayers."

Later, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter and his associates "want a bill as soon as possible, but we want a good bill."

Reiterating an administration pledge to seek a stiffer tax than was voted by the Senate, Powell said a delay in passage past Jan. 1 would cost millions of dollars daily in revenues. But he said a situation could arise where a delay would be wise if it resulted in a bill that would raise many more millions in the long run.

One difference between the two bills apparently was eliminated Tuesday when the House, on a 326-77 vote, instructed its conferees to accept a Senate provision — unrelated to the oil tax — repealing a major change in inheritance-tax laws.

The change, enacted in 1976 but never allowed to go into effect because of its complexities, would have imposed income taxes on the full increase in value of inherited property from the time it was acquired by the deceased until it was sold by the heir. Repeal would result in taxation only of the increase in value from the time the property was inherited until it was sold.

The most obvious — but far from only — task facing the Senate-House conference committee that will seek a compromise between the two bills is to agree on the total size of the tax. Splitting the two figures down the middle would produce a $227.5-billion tax.

"That wouldn't be good enough," O'Neill quoted the president as saying.

However, Carter apparently did not draw a line on what he would consider acceptable. His aides have pointed out repeatedly that if the compromise version of the tax is not high enough, Carter can reimpose price controls on crude oil or take other "punitive action" against the oil industry.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who is opposing Carter for the presidential nomination, issued a statement urging Carter to step up the pressure for a tougher tax.

"Those of us who have sought to strengthen the Senate bill have had to proceed without the most basic leverage usually afforded proponents of a presidential initiative — the threat of a veto," Kennedy said.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., one of the House conferees, told reporters that he and Carter are hoping the final bill will produce $250 billion — but no one familiar with Congress would say he expects such a tax.

The reason is that the chairman of the Senate conferees on the bill, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., supports a tax that is just high so that Carter won't feel compelled to reimpose price controls.

Some House leaders say they would prefer the conference committee delay its work until next year because Long has a reputation of getting what he wants when his adversaries must operate against a time deadline.

"I don't think we should get our backs up against the wall," said Rostenkowski.

The conference committee will begin its work Wednesday afternoon.

The windfall tax was proposed by Carter to win political acceptance of his decision to phase out price controls on U.S. crude oil. Decontrol, in turn, is aimed at reducing reliance on imported oil by encouraging greater domestic production.

Because of decontrol, the oil industry will take an estimated $1 trillion from consumers in the 1980s. Existing state and local taxes would leave the industry a "windfall" of roughly $440 billion; the Senate windfall tax still would let producers keep around $262 billion for reinvestment in energy exploration and production.

The tax would finance Carter's energy program and help low-income Americans pay higher fuel costs.

Although the tax would not apply directly to profits, it ultimately would reduce industry profits by taking away up to 75 cents out of each dollar of price increases above current levels.

Meanwhile, Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, told a news conference his trade organization estimated the removal of price controls would allow investments — if there were no windfall tax — that would yield some 4 million barrels a day in new domestic oil production by the late 1980s.

DiBona said it estimated the Senate version of the windfall tax would reduce this new production by about one million barrels a day, and the House version would cause a two-million-barrel-a day reduction.

Lubbock Sheriff Attempts Re-Election

BY MARY ALICE ROBBINS

Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard Tuesday announced his plans to seek a fourth term as Lubbock County's sheriff and pledged to take a "tougher stand" with county commissioners in his efforts to upgrade the sheriff's department.

Blanchard, a 26-year veteran in local law enforcement, announced his candidacy during a mid-morning news conference and, at the same time, answered charges of mismanagement in his office made last week by one opponent, former deputy sheriff Mike DeRosa.

Blanchard disagreed with DeRosa that all the duties assigned to the sheriff's department can be handled with existing personnel. "We don't have enough personnel to take care of all the business at the courthouse and to carry out an adequate patrol system," he said.

"Although we have excellent personnel now, we need to continue to expand and upgrade the quality of personnel and services in the sheriff's office," Blanchard noted. "Like many law enforcement agencies, we are understaffed, but I will continue my efforts to work with the county commissioners to improve in this area."

According to Blanchard, he will make good on that campaign promise right after the first of the year, when he plans to ask commissioners to authorize an additional six deputies. Currently, there are 29 deputies on the sheriff's staff.

The sheriff also took issue with DeRosa's charge that deputies are put to work on the streets without any training. Blanchard said state law requires that deputies complete 240 hours of training in a basic certification school before they can go to work.

Additional training is needed for deputies, Blanchard said, noting that he plans to seek the cooperation of the commissioners in providing funds to send members of his staff to various law enforcement training programs.

In another vein, Blanchard cited improved cooperation between local and area law enforcement agencies during the past year. "This cooperation appears to be paying off, according to recent crime statistics for 1979," the sheriff said.

According to his statistics, the major crime rate for Lubbock County is down 15 percent from last year's figures. Blanchard explained that the statistics covered rapes, murders, robberies, auto thefts and burglaries through the end of November.

The county's plans to open a new jail facility in the near future is another area that must be considered by voters when determining who should be in the sheriff's post, Blanchard said. "I have spent a great deal of time in planning this facility and believe my experience with the project will be beneficial in making an orderly transition," he added.

Blanchard, 53, has served as sheriff for the past 11 years. Prior to that, he was a deputy in the sheriff's department and was an officer in the Lubbock Police Department.

Blanchard plans to run on the Democratic ticket. Other candidates likely to be running in the Democratic primary, in addition to DeRosa, include D.L. "Sonny" Keesee and Willy V. Turner. As yet, no Republicans have announced in the sheriff's race.

Lamesa Absentee Voting To Begin

A-J Correspondent

LAMESA — Absentee voting will begin today for the local option liquor election slated Jan. 8 in Justice Precinct Two, which encompasses the southeast corner of Dawson County.

Absentee voting will be from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the county clerk's office.

The election will be on the question of whether the sale of beer for off-premise consumption should be allowed in Justice Precinct Two, which includes the Sparenburg area, Ackerly and part of the Key area.

Dawson County commissioners called the election Dec. 10 after approving a petition, presented by Israel Ybanez, requesting an election.

The last election on the same issue was held Dec. 1, 1976, and the issue was defeated by 61 votes.

Quarrel May Have Led To Chief's Attack

JACKSBORO (AP) — Jacksboro officials say they believe the man who shot Police Chief Guy Sullivan came to Sullivan's home to argue about efforts to crack down on illegal drugs in the area.

The Texas Rangers have joined the investigation of the incident Saturday night, when Sullivan was shot with his own gun in the left shoulder.

Jacksboro Police Sgt. Arthur Reaves said the department would turn over to Texas Rangers Sullivan's .38-caliber pistol, which had not been dusted for fingerprints.

"We could print it, but it's best to let the experts handle stuff on a case like this," Reaves said.

Reaves said Sullivan has provided a few details of the shooting from his Wichita Falls General Hospital bed, where he is in stable and fair condition.

"Chief Sullivan is still in pretty bad shape," he said. "We haven't been able to get a good statement from him. He's been under sedation."

Reaves said Sullivan told him a stranger came to his apartment about 6 p.m. Saturday. Sullivan let the man in and they began to quarrel about the chief's campaign against drugs, Reaves said.

Then, he said, the man grabbed Sullivan's gun and shot him.

"At this time, we're still going on the assumption it was attempted capital murder," Reaves said.

Delegation Probes Possibility Of New Mideast Area Bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. delegation is exploring the possibility that American naval and air forces could use bases in three nations on the Indian Ocean and Arabian Sea, a Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday.

Thomas Ross, the spokesman, said a Pentagon-State Department group will visit Oman, Somalia and Kenya "for exploratory talks in those countries about access to existing facilities for support of our Indian Ocean deployments."

Ross said the delegation, which left here Monday, now is in Saudi Arabia for what he termed "general discussions" on security matters.

He stressed that "there has been no discussion about access to facilities in Saudi Arabia and none are planned."

Other sources said the U.S. group would inform Saudi Arabian government officials of U.S. intentions to discuss with leaders in Oman, Somalia and Kenya the possibility that American naval and air units might be allowed use of their existing ports and air bases.

These officials said no U.S. policy decisions have been made, but that the American delegation is making a reconnaissance to sound out the views of senior officials in the four countries.

Ross also emphasized that the group's mission has nothing to do with the current Iranian crisis where 50 Americans are being held hostage.

The United States has increased its naval forces in the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea area by moving two powerful aircraft carrier task groups from the Pacific to positions within striking range of the entrance to the Persian Gulf.

This action was in direct response to the crisis in Iran and was intended by the Carter administration as a signal to Iranian leaders that they risk retaliation if the hostages are harmed.

However, the United States has been actively considering for many months how it can increase its military presence in that area, which formerly was a virtual vacuum so far as American armed power was concerned.

The Arab oil embargo following the 1973 Mideast war, last year's overthrow of the pro-U.S. Shah of Iran, as well as instability elsewhere in the oil-producing region, served to focus new American attention on that area because of its importance to U.S. well-being.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown told a television audience Sunday that "we decided some time ago that a gradual increase in U.S. presence was desirable and indeed necessary" in the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea area.

"We are considering and ... have been talking with various countries in the area about how we might increase our presence over time," Brown said.

Ross made it plain that any U.S. use of bases in Oman, Somalia and Kenya would be part of the general American buildup in what he called the "short term" rather than in connection with plans for a major new Rapid Deployment Force for the future.

The current thinking for the future revolves around acquiring additional long-range heavy cargo planes and building a fleet of new depot ships to accommodate troops flown from the United States to the Persian Gulf or elsewhere in the world in times of crisis.

Ross said the delegation now in Saudi Arabia "is not discussing anything that relates to the Rapid Deployment Force," such as the basing of the depot ships there or possible availability of Saudi airfields for that force's long-range transports.

He also said discussions in Oman, Somalia and Kenya will not be concerned with the Rapid Deployment Force question.

AIRMEN OFFERED DISCHARGES

FORT WORTH (AP) — Nine Carswell Air Force Base airmen accused of using marijuana have been offered administrative discharges, but at least one of them intends to fight the charges. The Dallas Morning News reported Tuesday that of 23 airmen accused of smoking pot off base, three were cleared, four volunteered to attend a drug rehabilitation program and nine were offered the discharges. Maj. James Odom, Carswell's public information officer, said actions against seven others was not complete.

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

Robber Doubles As Clerk

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A robber tied a convenience store clerk up in a cold storge locker, then waited on customers and told police that a tip they had received about a holdup was false, authorities said.

The 7-11 store clerk, Bruce McDowell, 19, said he was accosted by an armed man wearing a black stocking mask Monday and was left in the cold storage locker with his wrists bound.

The bandit pulled off his mask and waited on customers for 20 minutes, police said. He told officers responding to a citizen's report of a robbery in progress that the citizen had been mistaken.

After the customers and police were gone, the robber left with $86, including $29 he had collected in sales while acting as clerk.

Doe Shocks Yule Shoppers

VINELAND, N.J. (AP) — This time of year, frolicking reindeer are no big deal. But when a real deer romped through the Cumberland County Mall, busy shoppers took notice.

Officials say hunters flushed a live, four-foot doe out of the woods near the mall Saturday and, somehow, it jumped through an open door at the mall's west entrance.

The panicked animal zipped past hundreds of strolling shoppers and into the first open store, the Card Mart, directly across from the entrance.

The animal jumped a card rack and ran through the gift department, scattering startled customers and sending many screaming into the mall, according to store manager Terri Bohinger.

"There was one poor lady looking over Christmas cards when this deer jumped over the rack," she said. "It was quite a shock."

The deer dashed out of the store and was soon cornered by four security guards, who tied it up and later set it free in the woods, officials said.

Chickens Violate Rule

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was a cute story, but it cost Leo Watermeier his chickens.

A reporter wrote in Monday's newspaper how the state representative-elect has raised chickens most of his life in his mid-city backyard and how he shared the birds — and the dozen or so eggs they produce each day — with several of his neighbors.

"It sounded like not everyone supported him in the election," said city housing inspector E.J. Murphy of the telephone calls — no complaints, mind you, just inquiries — that flooded his office.

It seems New Orleans has an ordinance that forbids people to keep more than four domestic pets on their property and Watermeier's flock of birds numbers about two dozen. Murphy said he brought the law to Watermeier's attention.

"There was nothing official about my action in this case," said Murphy. "I just wanted to advise him of the ordinance, and he said he will be giving the chickens away."

At least one neighbor said she would be sorry to see Watermeier's birds go.

"Those chickens don't bother me," said Dot Letellier. "I like having them around. They crow in the morning and let me know it's time to get up. And I like the eggs, too."

'Mr. Bill' In Mean Squeeze

The question of who created the hapless clay pigeon featured on NBC's "Saturday Night Live," is the subject of litigation in U.S. District Court in Manhattan involving Vance De Generes, a New Orleans disc jockey, and Walter Williams, who continues producing the Mr. Bill episodes.

De Generes, 24, says he was Williams's partner in "The Mr. Bill Show" on New Orleans radio.

"I want to be able to put Mr. Bill on my resume — Walt and I did create the darn thing in our living room," De Generes says.

However, Williams, who has parlayed Mr. Bill and his sadistic adversary Mr. Sluggo into books and T-shirts, has asked the court for confirmation of the copyright he has on the characters and has charged defamation by De Generes.

Williams, while working on the Mr. Bill Christmas episode the other day, said: "Definitely and obviously I feel myself the sole creator. But I don't have time to talk about it. I have snow falling right now on the Mr. Bill set."

Attack Offends Feminists

DETROIT (AP) — An attack by former Michigan Gov. George Romney against some backers of the Equal Rights Amendment "is not Christian — at least not in my understanding of Christianity," says the leader of a women's group.

Romney, 72, a Mormon, has said the ERA is "basically the product of many individuals who had been making a concerted attack on the family and on morality."

"We are deeply offended," Laura Callow, a leader of Michigan ERAmerican, a pro-ERA group, said Monday.

Romney's remarks came in a discussion of Mormon feminist Sonia Johnson, who was excommunicated this month after church leaders found her guilty of preaching false doctrine and hurting church missionary work while campaigning for adoption of the ERA.

The amendment, which would prohibit discrimination because of sex, has been ratified by 35 states.

Ship Carrying Cement Stuck In Ice

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — The cement carrier Lewis G. Harriman became the first ship this season to get stuck in the ice on the Great Lakes when it got caught in the mouth of the Saginaw River early Tuesday.

Mike Allen of the U.S. Coast Guard at Detroit said the vessel was bound for Green Bay, Wis., with 500-tons of cement when it got stuck. Two to six inches of ice kept the vessel from moving, but coast guardsmen at the scene said it might be able to break free on its own.

The ship is owned by the Huron Cement Co. of Alpena and carries a crew of 32.

Allen said the Coast Guard cutter Bristol Bay was headed for the ship. The cutter was not expected to arrive until late Tuesday. Allen said the crew aboard the 350-foot ship was not in any danger.

Evidence Shows Fed's Tight-Money Policy Slowing Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The construction of new homes plummeted 14 percent last month to an annual rate of 1.5 million units, further evidence that the Federal Reserve's tight-money policy has begun to slow the nation's economy, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

At the same time, the number of building permits issued — an indicator of future housing activity — fell to 1,267,000, the lowest level in more than three years.

Statistics on the slowdown in housing, a key sector in the overall economy, came as Commerce reported that the income of Americans rose a strong 1.1 percent in November.

The income report showed that:

•The increase in total personal income to nearly $2 trillion, on an annual basis, followed a 0.9 percent rise in October and was the largest since July, when the annual cost-of-living boost went into effect for Social Security recipients.

•Spending by Americans rose 1.7 percent from October to November to an annual rate of $1.6 trillion, despite signs that the economy is slowing.

•But savings fell 16 percent to an annual $52.2 billion.

An annual figure is the total for one year if the change in a single month occurred for 12 consecutive months.

A decline in housing starts had been anticipated in the wake of Federal Reserve action Oct. 6 to tighten credit and get better control of the nation's money supply. Since then, interest rates have hit record high levels around the nation, discouraging both corporate borrowing and home purchasing.

Many analysts are predicting that housing construction will fall to 1.7 million units or lower this year from last year's 2 million level. Estimates for next year range from 1.1 million units to about 1.4 million.

Housing construction had dropped 8.2 percent in October to 1.76 million units. The new November figure is 28 percent below the 2.1 million-unit construction rate of November 1978.

Permits for future construction were down 29 percent from the 1.8 million-unit rate of November 1978 and were the lowest since 1.2 million in July 1976, Commerce Department data showed.

"It means we are in a recession," said Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders. "It's going to spread out into every activity of the economy."

He added: "I don't think we are going to see much improvement until a year from now or the first half of 1981."

Meanwhile, the National Association of Realtors reported that the sales of existing single-family homes fell 12 percent in November to an annual rate of 3.55 million units.

"This is the sharpest month-to-month drop in home sales in the 12 years we have monitored such activity," the Realtors' group said in a statement.

The statement said housing was "bearing a disproportionate share of the burden caused by stringent monetary policy."

Expectations of decline in the housing sector were among the reasons economists had been predicting that the economy would fall into recession before the end of the year.

In the past, American consumers often have retrenched — that is, cut down on spending and increased saving.

Convict Carries Out Unusual Escape

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — It wasn't your run-of-the-mill escape. No chisel, no tunnel, no guns, no laundry truck through the prison walls for James Hubert Taylor.

The 25-year-old Taylor, serving 11 years in an Alabama prison for larceny and theft escaped last week — but he did it in Brownsville, Texas. He'd been flown there, a Texas prosecutor says, by four law enforcement officers seeking a mysterious tape recording.

The state of Alabama footed the bill.

Joe K. Hendley, chief prosecuting attorney for Cameron County, Texas, said that Taylor flew to Brownsville last Wednesday from Draper prison near Montgomery in an Alabama state plane with the officers. According to Hendley, Taylor had convinced them he could provide a tape recording implicating high-ranking Alabama officials in corruption.

The agents were R.C. "Pete" Taylor and Herman Pitts of the Alabama Bureau of Investigation, James Stallings of the Covington County district attorney's Office, and Ed Wright of the Board of Corrections.

Hendley said Taylor, who had previously escaped from jail twice, "carried those agents all over this county. He must have made 20 phone calls without them even snapping at his taking them down the primrose path."

Here is Hendley's account of what happened:

After all the running around, Taylor took the officers to the Continental Restaurant, which Hendley described as "the plushest place in town." Taylor took Stallings to an upstairs bar and said that to get the tape, he had to talk to the bartender alone.

When Stallings tried later to go back to the bar, the bartender wouldn't let him. So he went outside, and later tried with the others to re-enter the restaurant. But the bartender had locked the door and Taylor had gone out the back toward the Mexican border, two miles away.

When the agents notified Brownsville police, they apparently didn't believe the story and hauled them to headquarters for questioning.

None of the officers involved would discuss the incident. "I don't know the prosecutor and I don't know where he gets his information," R.C. Taylor said.

Lt. Roy Smith of the Alabama Department of Public Safety said the department "is looking into certain allegations that have been made with the intent to either prove or disprove." He said it would be improper to comment on an investigation in progress.

Hendley said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press: "A lot of bad judgment was used in this matter. You would expect your high-ranking agents to know where the back doors are and to be ready for an escape attempt. I can't see you taking someone out of the penitentiary and leaving him alone in a bar."

The bartender, George Brockhahn, was questioned by Texas authorities, Hendley said, but was not charged. As for the tape recording, Hendley says he's convinced there never were "any such tapes in existence."

U.S. Force Hinted If Hostages Tried

ed by any such public exploitation of American citizens.

"The authorities in Iran would hold full responsibility for any ensuing consequences. The United States is seeking a peaceful solution through every available channel. This is far preferable to other remedies available to the United States."

Reporters asked whether there was any change in Carter's Dec. 7 statement he would take no action that would result in bloodshed as long as the hostages were not physically harmed.

"I know of no deviation from that," Powell said.

He noted that the White House had warned on Nov. 20, after the first report the hostages would be put on trial, that the government of Iran "would bear full responsibility for any ensuing consequences".

Asked if he was opening the possibility of military force, Powell replied, "You are as aware as I am of the range of options available to any nation."

It was understood that administration officials were considering a range of actions, including military steps.

The administration apparently was concerned Iranian militants might not understand that if they paraded the hostages before some type of tribunal, the United States would view the action as sourly as it would a so-called trial.

Officials felt that the United States position should be reiterated on the public record so that the issue is clearly understood.

Powell's statement, which was volunteered, seemed designed to emphasize that the U.S. government would view a tribunal or "grand jury" investigating the hostages or using them as "witnesses" with the same gravity as an actual trial of the Americans.

The militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4 have threatened to place the American captives on trial as spies.

"Grand Jury" Hinted

But Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has proposed as an alternative an international "grand jury" or tribunal to investigate U.S. involvement in the regime of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Such an investigation, involving an international panel appointed by the Iranians, could require the American hostages to testify, according to Ghotbzadeh's plan.

The militants who are holding the Americans captive are demanding that the United States return the shah to Iran for trial, even though the deposed monarch has left the United States and is now living in Panama. The shah was hospitalized in New York when the embassy in Tehran was seized.

Vance Holds Silence

After a session with members of the Senate, Vance refused to speak with reporters and Senators also maintained silence on the session.

Earlier, the House of Representatives, on a 369-4 vote, signaled that it wants the American hostages to be paid for their ordeal.

The House passed a resolution calling for "appropriate financial compensation" for the hostages by the U.S. government upon their release and return. It also would apply to the 13 hostages released since the embassy was seized Nov. 4.

"Their ordeal has been unparalled in the history of the U.S. diplomatic service," said the resolution offered by Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y.

It states that the hostages have been held "in violation of the most fundamental principles of international law."

America "Unified"

"Never have I seen America so unified since Pearl Harbor," Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala., told the House.

Buchanan said the timing of the vote was significant because President Carter had designated Tuesday a national day of unity for Americans to show their support for the 50 hostages.

The resolution, which now goes to the Senate, calls on the administration to compensate the hostages for the "hardship, deprivation and danger they have endured."

It is a so-called "sense of Congress" resolution which lacks force of law and does not carry a specific price tag. However, sponsors said it puts Congress clearly on record in favor of making payments to the hostages.

Career Prospects

It also urges "that all possible steps be taken that future career prospects not be impaired by the mistreatment they have suffered."

A handful of opponents claimed that the measure would establish a bad precendent. "It tries to put a price on patriotism," said Rep. James M. Collins, R-Texas.

Joining Collins in voting against the resolution were Marvin Leath, D-Texas, Larry McDonald, D-Ga., and Ron Paul, R-Texas.

Meanwhile, informed sources said the United States has begun informal discussions with U.N. Security Council members about instituting economic sanctions against Iran.

But State Department spokesman Thomas Reston said the United States has not decided whether to seek the U.N. sanctions.

No Council Prediction

Officials offered no prediction about Security Council support. Some said it would depend on the type and severity of the proposed sanctions.

To get sanctions from the Security Council, the United States would need support from eight of the other 14 members. In addition, all of the permanent members — Great Britain, France, China, the Soviet Union and the United States — would have to support the sanctions or abstain.

The other countries now on the Security Council are Czechoslovakia, Gabon, Nigeria, Kuwait, Bolivia, Bangladesh, Portugal, Jamaica, Norway and Zambia.

'SPIRIT OF BROTHER'

Michigan Fraternity Plagued By 'Ghost'

ALMA, Mich. (UPI) — Members of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity at Alma College are convinced their frat house is haunted — probably, they say, by the spirit of a brother who died more than a decade ago.

The 30 brothers, many of whom say they won't stay in the frat house alone, said Tuesday a ghost wearing a white T-shirt has been roaming the corridors, making noise and playing practical jokes since 1975.

Bill Zebelian, now an Armada, Mich., dairy farmer, said when he was a junior at Alma in 1975 he confronted the ghost after having finished typing a paper in his basement room. Zebelian said heavy footsteps woke him.

"I propped myself up on my elbows," Zebelian said. "At first, all I saw was a white shape. But after a few seconds, I was fully awake and could see it was a man's torso — wearing a white T-shirt — floating just off the floor.

"I asked who was there and what it wanted and it turned and faced me. I know it happened because it wasn't just a quick flash. We were face to face for at least a minute ... and then it turned, went up the stairs and was gone," Zebelian said.

Fraternity members think the ghost may be that of Al Borgman, 21, of Charlotte, Mich., a fraternity member who died in 1967 when he and a friend tried to shoot Alma's State Street dam in an aluminum canoe. The canoe buckled and Borgman drowned. The friend, John Wooton of Houghton Lake, Mich., was rescued.

The fraternity house was built around the turn of the century and purchased by a fraternity in 1937, members said.

Since then there have been only two times when it was not occupied by fraternity brothers — during World War II when most men were in the armed forces and in 1976 when the fraternity charter was suspended for a year following a sexual assault at the house.

During the 1976 closure, however, Andy Jones of Clio, Mich., who was then a junior, said he'd frequently sneak into the house to study.

"I was upstairs studying and heard this strange noise downstairs," he said. "I went down to the basement and found the shower running.

"I turned it off and headed back upstairs. But when I was halfway up the steps, the shower came back on and I was gone. I was out of that house like that," said Jones, who currently is a medical student in Kirksville, Mo.

Jones said another time, "I came in the front door and turned the light on. Then I saw it, going from one room to another at the end of the hallway. It was just a flash, but I saw a white, V-necked T-shirt — no head, no body."

Anti-SALT Report Delayed By Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A minority of members of the Senate Armed Services Committee succeeded Tuesday in delaying an attempt by the majority to force approval of a report condemning the SALT II treaty.

In the process tempers were lost and harsh words exchanged.

The panel wrangled in private for more than two hours, deciding finally to put off action until today.

One member told reporters later that he believes the conclusions of the anti-SALT report may well have been written before the committee's hearings on the military aspects of the pact ever began.

"To try and push through a report like this without changing a word or a paragraph is trampling on the rights of the minority if there ever was a trampling," said Sen. James Exon, D-Neb.

"The committee staff had no part in writing this report," Exon said. He said the principal authors of the report are Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and his staff aides.

"I suspect the conclusions were written before we started our committee hearings," Exon said.

Several senators said the committee is divided 9-8 on the issue, which also involves the committee's jurisdiction on the pact. Exon called the committee "hopelessly deadlocked" and suggested a compromise by approving the bulk of the report but dropping the conclusions.

Jackson and other SALT opponents said that since they have the majority they are entitled to a vote.

"I think the people are entitled to know how the Armed Services Committee feels on a military matter," said Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. "The majority of this committee is ready to go on record against a SALT treaty."

But members of the minority said that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has jurisdiction over treaties and that no other committee plays a role.

They noted that when the Armed Services Committee began its separate hearings Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., said they were for the members information only and that no vote would be taken.

Exon said he is leaning against SALT II but nonetheless is fearful of precedents being set or of "invading the perogatives of the Foreign Relations Committee."

"We could unwittingly be setting one of those precedents that could come to haunt us in the future," Exon said.

The Foreign Relations Committee has voted 9-6 to recommend the Senate approve the treaty.

A majority of the Armed Services Committee has always been acknowleged to be against the treaty. Nonetheless a formal vote against the pact would give treaty oppoents additional ammuniton to claim that military experts cannot support SALT II.

Thurmond reported that "the White House doesn't want a vote" and said that some members are complaining that they have been lobbied on the issue by the administration.

After an immediate vote was delayed Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., stalked from the hearing room and snapped, "The White House controls this committee."

Carter Urges Housing Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration plans to ask Congress to update its standby authority for dealing with recessionary slumps in the nation's housing industry, the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced Tuesday.

"We want to be ready if help is needed," said HUD Secretary Moon Landrieu. "I am not suggesting that there is going to be a recession. But I do want updated authority to act should a substantial downturn occur."

The request to Congress today could lead to an increase in the limits on mortgage values, sales prices and interest rates in the Emergency Home Purchase Assistance Act of 1974.

This could make the law more useful should Landrieu invoke it to assist the housing industry, housing experts said.

Iran Shows Former Agents To Press

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Mohammad Sadafi, looking for all the world like the brutal sergeant in the film version of "From Here to Eternity," said, "I am afraid of nothing. I have the courage not to want to set myself free."

The burly former agent of SAVAK, the deposed shah's secret police, and a dozen other alleged spies were paraded Tuesday before the foreign press.

Asked if he had been in the military, Sadafi replied stiffly, "No, I was a champion." The translator volunteered that Sadafi had been a weightlifter.

Sadafi promised the journalists that he would be able "to give you important information about the former regime."

But the newsmen were more interested in larger fry than Sadafi, such as Brig. Gen. Reza Parvaresh, a top security officer in the shah's regime who has been senfenced to 12 years in prison.

The men, a few of whom said they had already been investigated and released, all said that they were appearing voluntarily.

Some testified to what they said was a close working relationship between SAVAK and the Central Intelligence Agency, as well as Mossad, the Israeli secret service.

The men were not required to state their names.

One said that he had spent five years based in New York gathering information on Iranian students.

Another said he had been a SAVAK informer who turned himself in to the revolutionary government because his wife and parents knew of his activities and "I could not stand to look at the hatred in their eyes."

A journalist from the Bulgarian news agency wanted to know if SAVAK had been responsible for killing any Iranians abroad.

A turbaned religious leader among the newsmen interrupted to describe what he said was such an incident.

The man the question was directed to replied that he was sorry the young man had been killed but he had "no knowledge of it."

The men sat at a long table overlooked by a photograph of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and pictures of dozens of revolutionaries said to have been killed in the fight to topple the shah.

At times the government official in charge of the news conference interjected such comments as "as far as I am concerned, that question has not been answered yet" and sought elaboration.

Although all of the men said they were under no pressure to appear before the news conference, most acknowledged they were awaiting trials before revolutionary courts.

Since the revolution, 662 persons have been executed as a result of such trials.

Bear Leaves 'Cold' Trail Near Slaton

the north and south rims of the canyon.

Jack Young, district supervisor of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, and Deputy Don Gass went to the north rim of the canyon Tuesday morning to investigate and photograph the latest tracks found.

Those tracks were discovered by Buddy Neugebauer of Acuff, who said the tracks indicated the animal walked along a barbed wire fence before crawling through it and leaving clumps of fur on the fence.

Neugebauer added that, judging from the tracks, the animal walked on its hind legs along the fence for a short distance.

The imprints had been partially distorted by melting snow, but they measured about 6 inches long and 3 inches wide, Young said.

He noted that the tracks were not identical to those made by a bear, adding that no claw marks could be found.

Young did say, however, that the tracks were made by an animal, and were not made by a human as a hoax.

"I personally would have to have a lot more evidence before I could say it's a bear," Young said.

The bear hunt began when Keith Harber, who lives just north of Slaton, called the sheriff's office Sunday night and said he had found bear tracks in the snow near his house.

A couple living west of Slaton told sheriff's deputies in mid-October they had seen a bear rummaging through their garbage cans in the early morning hours.

Anyone with information about the mystery animal is asked to contact the sheriff's office at 765-9363 of Young's office at 744-6847.

Hopes To End Crisis Snag missed. A spokesman said the purge was recently accelerated.

In other developments:

—A former Savak officer told reporters at a Tuesday news contrence that the CIA and SAVAK jointly "spied" on foreign missions in Tehran, particularly Soviet and Arab diplomats posted here during the shah's regime. The conference was apparently summoned as part of Iran's bid to gain international support for its confrontation with the United States.

—Tehran Radio said saboteurs blasted an oil pipeline in oil-rich Khuzestan province. It said the explosion started a "serious fire" that was put out late Tuesday but the pipeline, about a mile north of Dizful, was badly damaged. No injuries were reported.

—In Washington, the House voted 369-4 to urge that when the hostages are released they should be financially compensated for the "hardship, deprivation and danger they have endured." The resolution does not have the force of law but its sponsors say it puts the House on record as favoring restitution. Senate approval was expected.

late Monday, as he settled in for an indeterminate stay on Contadora Island, 35 miles to the south in the Pacific.

He left the United States in order to improve the chances that militants holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran will free 50 Americans held hostage. The militants said the 50 will be tried as spies because America did not deliver the shah to them.

Murder Attempt Noted

But while the militants are using the Americans as hostages for the shah's return, Pars news agency said the government is keeping up its attempt to murder the shah and his wife, Empress Farah Diba, for crimes during the monarch's rule.

Pars said Sadegh Khalkhali, former chief Islamic prosecutor, ordered his Fedayeen gunmen to travel to Central America. Two weeks ago Khalkhali claimed his gunmen were responsible for the slaying of the deposed shah's nephew, Shahriar Moustapha Chafik, in Paris.

Security on Contadora is tight and wherever the shah goes, he is followed by a pack of heavily armed guards. On Tuesday, national guardsmen increased security, bringing heavy machine guns and rocket launchers onto the island, in apparent response to the Pars report.

Island Sealed Off

Contadora has been sealed off to any new journalists, and two photographers who approached the home where the shah is staying were ordered away by a guard holding back an attack dog straining at his leash.

The shah is trying to recover his strength after spending more than a month in a New York hospital for gallstone surgery and cancer treatment. On Monday took a slow stroll to the island's main beach and Tuesday was reported exercising.

He is staying in the private home of Gabriel Lewis Galindo, a former Panamanian ambassador to the United States.

His American spokesman, Robert Armao said "this may not be his permanent home. He may move to the mainland and come here on weekends. That is not clear. This is a very, very volatile situation. You can assume that he will be here for some time."

Silber Ouster Voted By Boston Faculty

BOSTON (AP) — A majority of Boston University faculty members voted Tuesday for the ouster of the school's embattled president, John R. Silber, but trustees said their support for Silber was unshaken.

The tally was 456-215½, according to Banks McDowell, a law school professor who presided at a three-hour faculty meeting. Some faculty members have half-votes, and officials said there are a total of 1,600 full votes for the faculty.

In a no-confidence vote in 1976, when faculty members urged trustees to dismiss Silber by a 3-1 margin.

Trustees said they would continue to support Silber, and "do not accept the conclusion reached by the assembly."

OPEC Splits Sharply On Price Boosts

chael Evans predicted last week that a 20 percent increase in OPEC prices could boost gasoline prices to $1.25 a gallon next year, 20 cents above the current nationwide average.

Humberto Calderon Berti, Venezuela's oil minister, said price negotiations have been "very difficult" and believes "it would be good for OPEC to reach an agreement." He told a news conference OPEC's economic commission had proposed the conference set a benchmark price of $24 to $25 a barrel.

Prices differ widely among other OPEC members. Iran raised its price within the past week by $5 to $28.50, while Indonesia opted for a $2 boost to $23.50.

In addition to the price dispute, the oil cartel may be facing another more fundamental change. In the past, oil prices have been gauged in large part by the distance of the source from the market and the quality of the product in relation to Saudi light crude oil.

Under those guidelines, Iranian oil of the same quality as the Saudi product should be sold at 11 cents above the benchmark. But is is selling for $4.50 over the mark.

Similarly, the low-sulfur petroleum produced by Libya, Nigeria and Algeria, valued for high gasoline yield, was priced at $1.50 more than Saudi light. But Libya is marketing its oil at $30, or $6 above the benchmark.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said a predicted worldwide economic slowdown next year could ease the tight world oil market, creating a temporary glut and driving prices closer to benchmark levels.

But Libya's Mabruk countered with the position that industrialized countries "can pay whatever we ask."

Calderon said after Tuesday's meeting that the oil ministers would recommend increasing the cartel's special $2.4 billion Third World aid fund to $4 billion, which will need the approval of OPEC finance ministers. No decision was reported on a proposal by Venezuela and Algeria to convert the fund into a $20 billion bank to help developing countries hard hit by oil price increases.

Texas Democrats Feel Independents' Bite During '70s Decade

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The 70s. A decade of change, confusion, good and bad. The go-go years. Big got bigger. Fast got faster. Perhaps like no other state the 70s left its imprint on the face of Texas, the mega-state. Here, in the fourth of six articles by AP writers, Garth Jones examines changes in the state's political complexion.

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — Politics in the 1970s developed a new major influence on Texas elections — the independent voter.

A more common name is "ticket splitter," or a voter who marks a ballot for the candidate not the party.

Some call independents the largest, and maybe the most powerful, minority in Texas elections.

With considerable help from ticket splitters, Texas Republicans made political history in 1978 by electing Dallas multi-millionnaire Bill Clements the state's first GOP governor in 104 years.

Democrats shouldn't yell too loudly, because independent votes played a big part in the 1970 upset victory of Lloyd Bentsen over veteran U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough. And in 1972 South Texas ranchers and banker Dolph Briscoe upset a lot of political apple carts by defeating Gov. Preston Smith, Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and Frances Farenthold, the darling of liberal Democrats.

"We've got a long row to hoe, but it sure looks good now," says Dr. George Williford of Austin, who was state GOP chairman in 1971-72.

"I don't think Texas has turned into a two-party state," said Democrat John Hill, who lost a bitter battle to Clements. "Democrats are still very much the majority party. There has been an increase in independent voters but I don't believe the Republicans have gained in numbers. The Democratic Party is still 2 to 1 over the Republicans but independent voters are more and more influential in deciding close contests."

"I think Texas is two-party now, but not the typical two-party state," said George Christian, who was press aide to former Govs. Price Daniel and John Connally and then press secretary to President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Christian, who now handles public relations for political candidates, adds, "This is really a no-party state because the electorate does not follow party lines. Each candidate has his own organization and there are no party machines. There is no question the majority of Texas voters are ticket splitters."

The real answer to the two-party question, probably lies ahead in 1980 and in 1982.

Calvin Guest of Bryan, state Democratic chairman from 1972-78 during the Briscoe regime, thinks the present state Democratic party is "extremely liberal, but I think it is going to change and go back more to moderates in 1980. That is what it takes to keep the Repubicans from repeating in 1982 (by re-electing a governor). If not, then the GOP is likely to pick off another statewide office in 1982 and keep going."

Dallas attorney Ray Hutchison, the former state GOP chairman in 1975-78 who lost to Clements in the 1978 primary, says 1980 is "crucial in partisan politics. "We are on the threshold of determining if Texas is a true two-party state," he said. "It will be a fascinating year, the final purification of the Democratic party in Texas."

Everyone agrees that Clements' upset win last year was the high political point of the decade.

But the Democrats had their moments of glory also, particularly the conservatives.

"I think the highest point was in 1972 when Dolph Briscoe won," said Guest. "We were outside the normal polical structure but we beat Barnes and Sissy (Farenthold), and went against the Richard Nixon sweep of Texas that year."

"Bentsen's election in 1970 was significant to Texas politics because it changed the flavor of Democratic representation from liberal to moderate," said Christian. "But Clements' election was the most historic, particularly in view of the fact he has appointed an associate supreme court justice (Will Garwood) which give Republicans a chance for a second statewide official. And the odds are good Clements will get to appoint more state officers. During Briscoe's six years he appointed three railroad commissioner, a treasurer and an agriculture commissioner."

All comments on political contests during the decade, and ahead, turn sooner or later to the independent voter.

"I think that's probably the most important single factor working in Texas politics today," Clements said recently. "People lost sight of that. They like to talk in terms of a very contentious situation between Republicans and Democrats. That's really not where the strength of Texas is ... all of the polls I Have looked at tell about 45 percent of the total Texas voting population would term themselves independents. And these are the people who choose the man, they choose the candidate and they don't really claim to be a member of either party."

A researcher who does considerable work for Republicans, Lance Tarrance of Houston, says 10 percent of Texas' 6 million registered voters have moved into the state since 1970. Twenty percent of the voters already in the state moved from one part to another in the same 10 years. He says 42 percent of the new arrivals to the state consder themsives "somewhat Republican" and 57 percent say they are conservative.

How Texas politics change in the next 10 years may reflect these poll results.

SAYS TEXAS IS REALLY 'NO PARTY' STATE — George Christian, who was press aide to former Texas Govs. Price Daniel and John Connally and then press secretary to President Lyndon B. Johnson, says he thinks Texas is a two-party state now, but not the typical two-party state. Christian added it is really a no-party state because the electorate does not follow party lines. Urban Renewal Agency Officers Assume Posts

George Nelson was elected chairman and J.T. Braxton was selected as vice chairman of the city's Urban Renewal Agency during annual officer elections Tuesday.

Nelson, a three-year veteran of the agency, took the helm from outgoing chairman Tommie Stevens and will serve through December 1980.

After the election, the board took care of several bids affecting land parcels across the city's Community Development areas, the largest of which was a bid of $14,935 for the demolition of 28 structures on 25 parcels. That bid was awarded to J.L. Kubacek, whose bid was the lowest of the two received.

The board also approved resolutions authorizing eminent domain proceedings to secure title and price on two separate parcels of land in the 1700 block of E. 14th Street.

Proceedings toward obtaining the title on the L.I. Robinson parcel at 1707 E. 14th St., and the price on the Sally Monzivais parcel at 1711 E. 14th St. were unanimously approved. Both parcels are in the fifth year Community Development area 27-A.

The board also agreed to pay $750 for a 50-foot tract in the Coronado area and to spend approximately $500 to construct a fence for Lewis Jones at his 3010 E. Second St. residence. Nelson said the funds for the fence will come from a special loan supplement.

In other action, the board:

•Passed a resolution approving plans and specifications and authorizing the advertisement for bids for the demolition and clearance of 30 parcels of land across the city's community development areas.

•Approved the adoption of the Housing and Urban Development handbook entitled "Relocation and Real Property Acquisition" as the official governing regulations for property acquisition and relocation.

•Approved the expenditure of $750 to allow several city staff members to attend a special convention of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials to be held in McAllen in January.

•Set Jan. 22, 1980 as the date for their next meeting.

EXILE'S SON ON TRIAL

MOSCOW (AP) — Igor Korchnoi, son of self-exiled chess grand champion Viktor Korchnoi, will go on trial in Leningrad today on charges of avoiding Soviet military service, his mother, Bela Korchnoi, said. Reached by telephone in Leningrad, Mrs. Korchnoi said her son was being tried under a Soviet criminal statute that carries a maximum three-year jail term. Igor Korchnoi, 20, was arrested in Moscow on Nov. 13 after hiding out for more than a year in an attempt to avoid the Soviet draft, his mother said.

Secretary Wins Point; Tickets Dropped

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A secretary who insists she shouldn't have to climb through curbside trash and prickly sandspurs just to feed a parking meter found a judge to agree with her.

Louise Pachoud works at the Hillsborough County Courthouse and says she parks on the street near her office three hours a day. It costs her 30 cents. But when garbage and weeds began to accumulate, she says, 'I just quit putting dimes in the meter."

"I figured if I have to pay to park on the street, then why should I have to walk through garbage to get to the parking meter? I mean, it was silly," she told Traffic Judge Ralph Steinberg.

She came before Steinberg after accumulating 13 tickets in as many days from meter maids. "I wasn't about to pay them," she said of the $2 violations. "I did send them a check for $3.90. That covered the 30 cents a day for 13 days. That's what I normally would have spent."

She also enclosed a note explaining not only was it unpleasant, but the sandspurs ruined her stockings and handed Steinberg the tickets and some photographs she had taken of the trash and weeds.

"He told me $3.90 would be fine." Miss Pachoud said.

Said the judge: "Well, under the circumstances she paid what she would have paid if she'd been able to get to the meter. I think she showed her side of it."

Questions Surround Benson Dismissal

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Gay Benson, who is currently in her third season as Texas Tech women's basketball coach, was officially notified last Friday by Tech women's athletic director Jeannine McHaney that she would be relieved of her duties following the end of the 1979-80 school year.

Mrs. Benson told The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday that Miss McHaney called her into her office last Friday (Dec. 14) and informed the Red Raider head coach that she would be relieved of all budgeting, recruiting and correspondence duties immediately, and that her contract with Tech would not be renewed following the current school year.

"I don't want it to sound like sour grapes," Mrs. Benson stated. "What's done is done. I just think the public needs to be aware. Texas Tech is a great institution, but not all things going on are great."

Miss McHaney was out of her office most of the day Tuesday, but when contacted would not confirm or deny Mrs. Benson's firing.

"I cannot discuss personnel matters with anyone," Miss McHaney acknowledged. "The law prohibits us (university officials) from discussing these types of things."

Dr. Robert Ewalt, vice-president for student affairs and Miss McHaney's immediate superior, also refused to clarify the situation.

"I am not in a position to comment on any personnel matter," Ewalt stated. "I know that doesn't help you any, but I'm not free to make any comment concerning personnel matters."

Mrs. Benson was hired by Miss McHaney in the spring of 1977 following a brilliant coaching career at Slaton High School. Under Mrs. Benson's watchful eye, the Tigerettes compiled a 379-133 won-loss record over a 15-year period. In 1974, the Slaton girls captured the Texas Class AA state basketball championship.

The Red Raiders went 34-11 during the 1977-78 season, the first for Mrs. Benson. Tech wound up 14-18 last year, but had to forfeit six first-semester victories because of an ineligible player, Rhonda Farley. Miss Farley dropped a course during the first semester that made her ineligible. According to Mrs. Benson, she nor anyone else in the women's athletic department at Tech was aware Miss Farley had dropped the class.

Tech's women's cage squad is presently 8-5 following an impressive 92-63 victory over Houston last weekend. This season's version of the Red Raiders is primarily an underclassmen squad. Mrs. Benson will start three freshmen, a sophomore and a junior when the Raiders play host to Arizona Saturday.

Mrs. Benson said she asked Tech women's sports information director Craig Pletenik to release information concerning her dismissal to the various Lubbock media, but Pletenik refused, saying Miss McHaney instructed him not to do so and that the news of Mrs. Benson's firing would leak out in time.

Mrs. Benson's main concern at the present time is the reason for her firing. She claims she has never been given an exact reason, although she has asked on numerous occasions.

"I want to know the reasons and I want the public to know the reasons," Mrs. Benson stated. "I know I'm not perfect, but I don't know what I have done to be fired. I've worked hard to build a program at Tech and now I'm working hard to keep my team together. At this time, I'm not sure how many of my players will even be coming back to school next semester."

The formal firing is the culmination of events which began last July with a meeting between Miss McHaney and Mrs. Benson. The meeting was called by Miss McHaney for the purpose of discussing several areas that Miss McHaney felt Mrs. Benson needed to improve upon.

Those areas included an improvement in the 8-25 record the Red Raiders posted during the 1978-79 season and, hopefully, at least a fourth-place finish among Texas college and university squads this season, more consistency on the part of Mrs. Benson in building the women's basketball program at Tech and less player attrition; a more positive approach on the part of Mrs. Benson in her dealings with players during games and practices (Miss McHaney claimed that Mrs. Benson humiliated players in front of their peers and the public on more than one occasion), and that Mrs. Benson show improvement in what Miss McHaney called her "physical and emotional problems."

Mrs. Benson suffered a miscarriage in the middle of the basketball season last February, but claims at that time there were no problems that she knew of between herself and anyone else in the women's athletic department.

"In March she (Miss McHaney) told me I was doing a good job, except I was too blunt when it came to recruiting," Mrs. Benson said.

According to Mrs. Benson, Miss McHaney also stated that she could not prohibit her players from smoking or drinking because of their rights and that bed-checks should also be stopped.

Three months after the meeting, Miss McHaney sent a formal memorandum

COACH IN DISTRESS — Texas Tech women's basketball coach Gay Benson lectures her troops during action last season. It was learned Tuesday that Mrs. Benson has been fired by women's atheltic director Jeannine McHaney.

Cagers Threaten To Leave Tech

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Whatever strides Gay Benson has made in the development of the Texas Tech women's basketball program may soon vanish. Mrs. Benson may just pick up her building blocks and go play somewhere else.

Last Friday, Mrs. Benson was fired (effective at the end of the 1979-80 school year) by Tech women's athletic director Jeannine McHaney. The 39-year-old Mrs. Benson was in her third year as Red Raider head coach and apparently had the Tech women pointed in the right direction. The Raiders are 8-5 so far this year and several of those losses have been to teams (Texas, Delta State and Stephen F. Austin) ranked in the Top 20 in the nation.

Mrs. Benson fielded a relatively young ball team and the sentiment of those freshmen and sophomore players is "wherever Coach Benson goes, we're going, too."

"If she leaves Tech and coaches at another college or university, I'll definitely go with her," confessed freshman starter Pam Stone, who leads the Red

SPUR, LORENZO SPLIT

Alan Shelton scored 20 points to lead Lorenzo to a District 4-A win over Spur 58-39 Tuesday night. Mike Duboise paced Spur with 14 points.

In girls' play, Spur defeated Lorenzo 39-27. Donna Duboise hit 11 points for SHS, Marla Moore 15 points for Lorenzo.

LOBOS WHIP TASCOSA

The Levelland Lobos got 16 points from Dwight Phillips and went on to crush Amarillo Tascosa 85-68 in cage action Tuesday night. Levelland is now 4-6 on the year.

WHBA, WILSON SPLIT

Jeff Shadden fired in 14 points and Dan Moore added 13 as Western Hills Baptist Academy nipped Wilson 46-44 Tuesday night. John Talkmitt paced Wilson with 17 points.

In the girls' game, WHBA wasn't quite as fortunate — bowing out 61-18. Cindy Stone had 10 for Wilson and Julie Harelson accounted for 10 of the losers points.

NAZARETH SWEEPS OLTON

In the girls' game, Nazareth won 60-26 in a one-sided affair. Nazareth's Doretta Ramaekers had 20 points while Melanie Witten had 12 for Olton.

WHITEFACE WINS PAIR

The Whiteface gals got 28 points from Donna Roberts to nudge PHS 52-38. Sonja Nance had 23 for the losers.

In the boys' game, Randy Richardson pumped in 22 points to lead WFHS to a 58-50 victory over the Cowboys. Wayne Davis had 18 for the losers. Whiteface is now 9-5 on the year and 1-0 in loop play. Plains is 6-7 and 0-1.

SMYER EDGES SANDS

Kerry Rackler scored 21 points as the Smyer boys beat Sands 60-56 in overtime, handing Sands only its second loss of the season. David Long scored 23 for the losers, who fell to 12-2. Smyer has an 11-3 mark on the year.

PERMIAN NIPS LHS GALS

Odessa Permian, despite having only one player score in double figures and having three players foul out, topped Lubbock High 42-37 Tuesday night.

Charla Brown was the only girls from Permian to score more than 10 points, and she just barely made it with 12.

Lubbock High was led by Jennifer Smith's 11 and LaShawn Zahn's 10.

EARL CAMPBELL: Best In The NFL

Campbell Wins NFL's MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers, the National Football League's rushing champion for the second successive season, was named the NFL's Most Valuable Player by The Associated Press Tuesday.

Campbell, the former Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Texas, finished the 1979 season with 1,697 yards to surpass the league-leading 1,450 he gained in 1978 when he was the league's No.1 draft choice and the overwhelming selection as The AP's Offensive Rookie of the Year.

He received 34 of the 84 votes this year from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sports broadcasters. Dan Fouts, quarterback of the San Diego Chargers, was a close second with 27 votes.

Others receiving votes were Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe, 7; quarterbacks Terry Bradshaw of Pittsburgh and Roger Staubach of Dallas, 5 apiece; wide receivers Steve Largent of Seattle and Harold Carmichael of Philadephia, 2 apiece, and Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler and Philadelphia running back Wilbert Montgomery, 1 apiece.

Campbell led Houston to an 11-5 record and a playoff berth in the American Conference. The 11 victories matched the Oilers' high. They were 11-3 during the 1962 American Football League season.

Among the spate of records Campbell broke or tied this year were:

—Most consecutive 100-yard games in a single season, seven (surpassing the six by Cleveland's Jim Brown in 1958 and Pittsburgh's Franco Harris in 1972),

—Most 100-yard games in a season, 11 (matching O.J. Simpon's mark set with Buffalo in 1973),

—Most touchdowns rushing in a season, 19 (tying the record Green Bay's Jim Taylor set in 1962), and,

—Most rushes in a season, 368 (breaking the 1977 mark of 339 by Chicago's Walter Payton).

Also, Campbell's 3,147 yards are the most ever by an NFL player in his first two years.

"I've never known anyone in all my years of being around football who was a more deserving player of all these titles, records and awards he's won," Oiler coach Bum Phillips said of Campbell. "And I'm sure he's going to win a hell of a lot more."

Campbell saved his best game this year for Thanksgiving Day when, on national television, he gained 195 yards including a 61-yard sprint for a touchdown in the Oilers' 30-24 victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

Campbell's performances particularly benefitted his linemen — center Carl Mauck, guards Conway Hayman and Ed Fisher, tackles Leon Gray and Morris Towns and tight end Mike Barber. A local meat packer announced before the season that each time Campbell gained 100 yards he'd parcel out some meat to each of them. When the season ended last Sunday, each of the six blockers had earned 220 pounds of beef.

Weary Mustangs Lose To Borger

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Coronado had just finished strapping on the Keds for the fifth time in six nights — which is no mild feat, to say the least. So the question then for coach Barry Arnwine was obvious: "Weren't the 'Stangs getting just a little bit leg weary?"

"I can't say that," laughed Arnwine. "I think I used that excuse last night."

For the second consecutive evening, Coronado found itself bowing to a Class AAA opponent. Estacado dealt Arnwine and Crew a setback Monday night. It was Borger's turn Tuesday as the Bulldogs narrowly edged past CHS 68-65. Coronado, which had run off six wins in seven outings early in the year, has now lost three of its last four.

And by all account, this one was one Coronado should have won. The Ponies looked good at times, but bad at others — particularly when it counted.

"I'm tired of playing good and losing," commented Arnwine.

For most of the contest, Coronado managed to hold the upper hand. In fact, with just 2:54 left in the game, the Mustangs owned what appeared to be a comfortable four-point lead, 65-61.

Then things started turning lukewarm.

Following the bucket by Scott Williams which gave the Mustangs the four-point advantage, Coronado failed to toss in another point. But that certainly doesn't mean Borger couldn't — and didn't.

Brett Smith hit the front end of a one-and-one to cut CHS' lead to three points, 65-62. And after a Coronado turnover, Gary Ray canned a 10-footer with 2:17 left and the Ponies led by only uno, 65-64.

John Lord had a chance to put Coronado up by either two or three points, but he failed to hit the front end of a one-and-one try. Gregg Belton ripped down the defensive rebound for Borger and 12 second later he hit a jumper from six-feet out to give Borger its first lead since late in the second quarter. It was 66-65 with time running out.

Coronado saw another excellent chance to jump ahead fall by the courtside when Sam Law, the Mustangs' leading scorer with 17 points, tossed up a shot that hit more glass than rim. Belton again pulled down the rebound, giving Borger the ball and, well, the game, too.

Ches Williams canned two shots after being fouled by Jimmy Johnson. The two points, added to the uno, added up to a three-point lead, 68-65 with 16 seconds left.

"I hate to say we're playing bad because we're not," said Arnwine. "What hurt were the turnovers at the end. I just wish when I called them over, they'd told me they were going to turn it over three times. Then, maybe, I'd tried something else."

Arnwine will have to wait over a week to implement the strategy since Coronado won't see any more action until the ABC Caprock tournament during the Christmas break.

Chest Pains Put Coach In Bed

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Coach Earle Bruce of Ohio State, the nation's top-ranked college football team, will remain hospitalized a few days as a precautionary measure, his physician said Tuesday.

"We'll keep him in the hospital 48 to 72 hours before we have a reading. If there are no changes then he'll resume his full activities," said Dr. Robert J. Murphy, who also doubles as the Buckeyes' team physician.

The 48-year-old Bruce was admitted to Riverside Methodist Hospital at 7 a.m. Tuesday after he called Murphy an hour earlier, complaining of chest pains.

The decision to hospitalize Bruce came just two weeks before the Buckeyes are to meet third-ranked Southern California in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day.

Sexton, Johnson Top All-South Plains

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A coach who turned his team from dog house to top dog, and a back who gained more yards than all but three runners in the history of this area, top 1979's Class B All-South Plains team.

When Dewayne Sexton took over his Lazbuddie Longhorns in 1975, the team had won just five games in the last three years.

Now, five years later, he has molded them into zone champions and strung together three straight winning seasons.

In Class B, 1979 was the year of Ronald Johnson. The 5-11, 175-pound back pounded out 2,020 yards on 235 carries for the Amherst Bulldogs this year. Only three other players from this area have ever gained so much.

Johnson, the only offensive returner from last year's all-South Plains squad, finished his prep career with 4,092 yards on 478 carries, a per-carry average of 8.5 yards.

Sexton's Longhorns placed more players — six — than any other team on the young squad. Johnson's Amherst and Wilson had four each and Valley (which lost to state champion Wheeler by only one point) and Klondike had three each.

This year's squad is one of the youngest in memory. Five of the 11 offensive players are juniors and six defensive honorees have one year left.

Leading that bunch is Klondike's James Martin, and Wilson's Quintin Talkmitt, both juniors named on both offense and defense.

Martin is a 6-1, 230-pound offensive tight end and defensive lineman and Talkmitt is a 6-0, 180-pound offensive tackle and defensive linebacker.

The offensive backfield and the linebacking corps are where most of the youth lies. Three of the four offensive backs are juniors and all three linebackers are juniors.

Besides Johnson, a senior, there is Lazbuddie's Andy Rogers at quarterback, Valley's James McNary (who averaged 155.6 yards a game and 8.8 yards a carry during the regular season) at one running back and Klondike's tough Lonny Ferguson (a 135 yard-per-game and 7.5 per-carry average) is at another.

All three are juniors.

In addition to the McMeans and Talkmitt, Russell Windham from Lazbuddie also made the team. Windham averaged 19 tackles a game this season and Talkmitt 18. This is Windham's second year on the team. He was selected as a freshman but missed his sophomore year because of injuries.

Raider Players Rally Behind Axed Coach

Raider cagers in rebounds (9.8 per game) and is second in scoring (13.3 ppg).

"Gay Benson is the main reason I came to Texas Tech," the first-year center added. "I can't speak for all of the players, but I feel that most of the younger players would leave Tech and go wherever she goes."

Miss Stone also disspelled another rumor that Miss McHaney entered in her memo to Mrs. Benson dated Oct. 17, 1979. That being that there was "great turmoil" on the Red Raider cage squad.

"I never knew of any problems on this team," acknowledged Miss Stone. "We've always had a good team spirit. What has been going on lately has only unified us that much more. Our entire team is behind Mrs. Benson. We all love her."

Sophomore Lynn Webb, who is one of the first players off the bench for Mrs. Benson, expressed the same feeling for her coach, who also instructed her at Slaton High School.

"Every coach has different ways to get their point across," offered Miss Webb. "Coach Benson just wants us to play well and up to our ability. I've never known her to do anything out of the ordinary."

"I haven't really thought about it that much, but, yes, I probably would go with her," added Miss Webb. "I think the majority of freshmen and sophomores would go with her."

As far as team unity and togetherness, Miss Webb also claims the Raiders are together.

"We have a good feeling on this team," she stated. "We're all pulling together as a team and we're pulling for her."

"She's very vocal. She expresses her desire for you to do well," senior Loann Phillips added. "I've never been embarrassed on the court by her. She does a great job recruiting. I think the young players she has are capable of being the nucleus of a championship ball team."

Mrs. Benson's graduate assistant Mark Osina, who coached for two years at Dobie High School in Pasadena, also had nothing but praise for the coach.

"She is no different than any other coach I've had or been around," Osina conceded. "And I've never heard any of the girls complain about her. We have three freshmen on this team that could play for any school in Texas. I told her before, if she had another good recruiting year she could play with anyone in the state and beat anyone in the state.

"Tech is a great school, but women's athletics doesn't have that much to offer. The reason these girls are here is because of Gay Benson. She talked them and their parents into coming to Tech."

And former Tech women's track coach Beta Little, who resigned in August of this year and now coaches at Monahans High School, also commented on the situation.

"Gay is not any harsher than men coaches," Miss Little said. "Last year she was called in and told to produce or she would be fired. That creates a lot of pressure on a coach to pressure team members to do their best."

Miss Little added:

"If you can't recruit, you can't win. How do you recruit without dressing rooms? Gay has to hunt places in the fall for the girls to work out."

Tech Fires Coach Benson

dated Oct. 17) to Mrs. Benson reviewing the areas in which improvement was required. The memo also stated, "To date, I have not seen any improvement in your coaching techniques at practice and there is great internal turmoil on the team."

Miss McHaney again mentioned the attrition problem and cited other areas where she felt improvement was needed in the Oct. 17 memo. Those areas included Mrs. Benson's disciplinary treatment and correction of student athletes; what Miss McHaney termed "an obvious discontent on your part over the students' rights;" a complaint lodged against Mrs. Benson by a staff member concerning alleged unprofessional conduct, and Mrs. Benson's supposedly negative attitude concerning paper work, details of management, AIAW rules, constructive criticism, the trainer and staff meetings."

Mrs. Benson responded to the memo in a letter of her own addressed to Miss McHaney and dated Oct. 23. In the letter, Mrs. Benson defended her position and coaching techniques.

Mrs. Benson pointed out that she certainly hoped to improve upon the 1978-79 record, but that she "could not guarantee a winning season."

Mrs. Benson explained her attrition rate this way:

"You have stated that we needed less attrition on my team. I really do not think that my dropout rate or turnover is exceedingly high. You may not realize it, but the dropouts from the 1978-79 team were for the following reasons: (1) an automobile accident; (2) a year-long injury; (3) one who quit; (4) two who went to track full-time; (5) a player that was non-scholarship who went to the University of Texas at Arlington because her father teaches there; (6) a player whom I was told would never be able to have a scholarship at Tech, but who now has a volleyball scholarship (Rhonda Farley); (7) one non-scholarship who quit at Christmas who knew she was not capable of obtaining a scholarship; (8) one who had an amputated finger and had told me earlier in the year that she was going to give up basketball; (9 and 10) two others who graduated."

Mrs. Benson went on to defend her coaching ability and explain her exuberance on the court.

In the meantime, Miss McHaney — from Oct. 17 up until Nov. 6, the date of the Red Raiders' first game — monitored the Tech women's basketball practices. Miss McHaney or her assistant, Kathy Ramsey, and sometimes both women attended every practice session during that three-week span to check Mrs. Benson's performance.

"At first we didn't know what was going on," freshman starter Pam Stone said. "But after a while, we knew something was strange. It was a very awkward situation to practice in."

The practice monitoring ended the day the Red Raiders played their first game of the season against West Texas State.

Then, on Nov. 30, Mrs. Benson received a memo initialed by Miss McHaney that stated that unless Mrs. Benson resigned her position by Dec. 10, she would be fired. At that time, Mrs. Benson went to Miss McHaney and asked her why she was being fired. According to Mrs. Benson, Miss McHaney would not discuss the matter and said she would have to discuss it with Ewalt. Mrs. Benson visited Ewalt Nov. 30 and asked for some reasons, but, according to Mrs. Benson, Ewalt said he would have to talk to Miss McHaney and that he would get back with Mrs. Benson. Mrs. Benson claims she hasn't heard a word from Ewalt.

The Red Raiders were out of town Dec. 4 through 9. There was no memo regarding Mrs. Benson's firing Dec. 10 as promised, but four days later, Miss McHaney called her into her office to deliver the news, with, according to Mrs. Benson, "her office door wide open."

"I just want to know why," added the obviously confused Mrs. Benson. "Heck, I'm just a good old country girl who likes basketball and that's all I've ever want to do was coach basketball."

Martin Sends 'Skins Apology

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defensive end Harvey Martin has apologized to Washington Coach Jack Pardee for throwing a funeral wreath into the Redskins' locker room minutes after the Dallas Cowboys' 35-34 National Football League victory Sunday.

In a telegram received by the Redskins Tuesday, Martin told Pardee that his actions after the game, were "definitely not the actions that a professional would do. I consider myself a professional as I consider you a professional.

"I am very sorry about the wreath incident. I respect the Washington Redskins, the city of Washington and the fans of Washington."

Protest Of British May Throw Wrench In Games

LONDON (AP) — The whole future of the Olympic Games could be in jeopardy if Britain was expelled from the Moscow Games next year, David Shaw, secretary of the British Amateur Athletic Board, said here Tuesday.

Shaw was commenting on Monday night's decision by the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa to seek Britain's expulsion from the Olympics if a British Lions' rugby union team tours South Africa in 1980.

"I do not believe it will happen, but if the International Olympic Committee (IOC) were to put Britain out of the Games it would hasten the end of the Olympic movement," said Shaw.

"If the IOC suddenly changed the rules of the game in bowing to political pressure, then God knows what would happen in the future. But I do not think this is really on and so we have not been worried by any suggestions that Britain might be expelled from Moscow."

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, has said that as rugby is not an Olympic sport there is no action the IOC could take over the proposed tour.

This viewpoint also is maintained by leading British sports officials.

No decision has been taken by the rugby authorities about the proposed tour and no verdict is expected until the New Year.

John Lawrence, secretary of the tour committee, said of the action by the Supreme Council: "I am saddened by this approach. The one thing these people seem to ignore is the plight of their fellow blacks in South Africa — players and spectators.

"They are being denied international sport and the Supreme Council seems to be exacerbating this situation and also wishing the same state onto themselves.

"I also find it sad that politically motivated people are using sport and I become suspicious of the motives of those who oppose the British Sports Council's forthcoming fact-finding visit to South Africa.

"The rugby authorities in Britain and Ireland will be very interested to hear what the fact-finding group discovers."

It seems clear that a final decision on the tour will not be made until after the Sports Council group returns from South Africa early in the New Year.

The 48 member countries of the Supreme Council, meeting in Yaounde, Cameroun, decided to seek Britain's expulsion if the tour goes ahead.

They also plan to break off all sporting contact with Britain; ban all British sportsmen from competing in Africa; to employ no more British sports coaches; and to oppose every motion put forward by Britain to world sporting bodies.

The breaking of sporting contacts would pose a major threat to the 1982 Commonwealth Games, scheduled to be held in Brisbane, Australia.

Columbia Hires Rutgers' Naso

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Naso, defensive coordinator at Rutgers for 12 years, was named head football coach at Columbia University Tuesday and called the school's program, "the equal of any Division I program in the country."

Naso, 42, became the 13th coach in Columbia's history since it began playing football in 1870. The Lions have lost 12 of their last 13 games and were 1-8 this season. Coach Bill Campbell resigned after a six-year record of 12-41-1.

Columbia has had only one winning season since 1962, but Naso said, "I would not be here if I were not absolutely convinced that Columbia has the potential for success on the football field."

Ironically, the Ivy League school has won only once since being beaten 69-0 by Rutgers in the sixth game of the 1978 season. Columbia Athletic Director Al Paul said, "We hired the man responsible for that zero."

Champions To Box On Television

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes and John Tate, the two world heavyweight champions, who will meet sometime next year to settle the undisputed title, will defend their titles March 31 on national television, The Associated Press learned Tuesday.

Sources close to the two fighters said Holmes would defend the World Boxing Council title against Leroy Jones of Denver and Tate would defend the World Boxing Association championship against Mike Weaver of Los Angeles.

The two fights would be televised by ABC and staged at different sites, sources told The Associated Press. The sites were not definite, but when ABC televised a championship tripleheader featuring Sugar Ray Leonard Nov. 3, two of the fights originated from Las Vegas and the other from New Orleans.

It also was learned that a third fight would be part of the TV program. A middleweight championship defense by Vito Antuofermo against Alan Minter of Britain has beeen mentioned as the third fight, but one source said that was not 100 percent certain.

All the sources asked that their names be not made public.

Holmes is scheduled to defend his title against Italian Lorenzo Zanon Feb. 3 in Las Vegas. Tate also is expected to have a fight before meeting Weaver in March.

The Holmes-Tate match — or a match between whoever holds the two heavyweight titles — could come in the spring, but is more likely to be held in September.

Weaver, who would be the first challenger for Tate, who won the WBA title by outpointing South African Gerrie Coetzee Oct. 20, gained prominence by giving Holmes a tough battle before being stopped in the 12th round June 11.

Indians Court Infielder Orta

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veteran infielder Jorge Orta reportedly is close to agreement with the Cleveland Indians on a five-year contract.

The Indians said Orta, a free agent after eight seasons with the Chicago White Sox, is expected in Cleveland for more contract talks today.

The Indians announced acquisition today of pitcher Arturo Gonzalez from Monterrey of the Mexican League. The 24-year-old righthander presently sports a 5-1 record and a 1.55 earned run average with Mazatlan of the Mexican Winter League. The Indians assigned him to Tacoma of the Class AAA Pacific Coast League.

Landry's Game Balls Stop At Staubach

DALLAS (AP) — Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday the Dallas Cowboys will be coming off the most thrilling game in their 19-year history when they host either Chicago or Los Angeles Sunday Dec. 30th in the first round of the National Conference playoffs.

"From the standpoint of excitement, it was the greatest game we've played in," said Landry of Sunday's 35-34 NFC Eastern Division title game with the Washington Redskins.

Landry passed out numerous game balls for the performance but quarterback Roger Staubach, who threw the winning touchdown pass with 39 seconds to play didn't get one.

"Oh, it doesn't bother Roger," said Landry. "He had a good game but he also had his poor moments. He'll get his share (of game balls)."

The Cowboys were notified by the National Football League that the kickoff for the Dec. 30th game will be 3 p.m.

"I like the Sunday kickoff," said Landry. "That way we can prepare like a normal week and still give the players Christmas Day off."

As far the opponent, Landry said, "I have no preference. We're breaking down the game films today. We'll scout both Chicago and Los Angeles. We'll work out all week but they won't be long ones."

Landry said the Cowboys' progress in the playoffs depended on how fast injured defensive tackle Randy White, strong safety Randy Hughes, running back Tony Dorsett and wide receiver Drew Pearson heal.

"White hurt his other foot and now has both feet injured," said Landry. "I think he will be OK. Tony still has a sore shoulder but should be ready. It will be close on Hughes with his dislocated shoulder."

Landry said he feared Pearson had cartilage damaged the knee he twisted throwing a ball in the stands three weeks ago.

"We hope the soreness will come out in two weeks," said Landry. "We don't know yet if he will need an operation in the off-season."

Landry said he felt any of the NFC playoff teams had a shot to go to the Super Bowl, but added "anybody who bets against Pittsburgh in the AFC is out of their mind."

Phillips Welcomes Warm Playoff Sites

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips said Tuesday it made no difference to him if the Oilers played San Diego or Denver in the first round of the National Football League playoffs but he did get his wish as to the climate he'd prefer.

The Oilers watched on television Monday night as San Diego defeated Denver 17-7 to clinch the American Football Conference Western Division title.

The loss puts the Broncos in the Astrodome Sunday against the Oilers in the first round American Football Conference wild card matchup. Should the Oilers beat the Broncos in Houston, they would then travel to San Diego to face the Chargers.

"Playing here and in San Diego would be a better situation because of the weather," Phillips said. "If we got by the first one, you would have good weather out in San Diego."

The Oilers, who play in year-around 72-degree comfort in the Astrodome, have not always fared well in frigid weather.

Houston, 11-5, gained the playoffs as a wild card last season and advanced to the AFC championship game before losing to Pittsburgh 34-5 on an icy field.

"They are both winning football teams," Phillips said of the Chargers and Broncos. "San Diego has a great offense and good defense and Denver has the great defense and a good offense.

"So they are opposites in one respect but they are both solid teams."

The Oilers lost their regular season finale to Philadelphia 26-20 Sunday in a game that vaulted Earl Campbell to his second consecutive NFL rushing title and gave Oiler reserves a chance to play.

Guard George Reihner, recovering from knee surgery, used the game to gain confidence, Phillips said.

"He needed a contest with someone in a game situation to assure himself that his knee was okay and it was," Phillips said. "This was the first time in seven or eight weeks he's been able to really get into somebody. We can't afford to hit that hard in practice."

Phillips also praised versatile Guido Merkens, who serves on specialty teams, plays wide receiver and is the team's No. 3 quarterback.

"I think we were pretty smart in designating him our third quarterback," Phillips said. "He has played well wherever we've put him this year and he'll surprise you with his passing.

"He may be the best third team quarterback in the world. The team has confidence in him."

'Not Kinky' Says Cowgirl Imposter

DALLAS (AP) — Barry Michael Bremen, 32, lives in Detroit, sells insurance, has a wife and three young children, and insists "I'm really not kinky."

So why would the hairy-chested Bremen put on a brassiere with stuffed 38C cups, a wig, dress up like a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader and slip past guards onto the sidelines where he danced before 62,867 persons at Sunday's Dallas-Washington football game?

"I was just having fun," said Bremen, who high-stepped for a time with the real cheerleaders before security guards realized he was different and led him away in handcuffs.

Bremen, who makes a hobby of using disguises to get into sporting events, said, "I chose the Cowboys' cheerleaders because they're the most famous in the country. The organization is so up tight about wanting a conservative image that they were a good target."

Suzanne Mitchell, who is in charge of the 36-woman squad, had no comment on the incident.

In earlier pursuits of his pastime this year, Bremen has practiced at the National Basketball Association all-star game dressed as a member of the Kansas City Kings, played nine holes in the U.S. Open Golf Tournament in Toledo, Ohio, and got into the dugout at baseball's all-star game dressed as a New York Yankee.

Although led away by guards and detained for a while, no further action was taken against Bremen Sunday.

In Detroit, his wife, Margo, said, "I don't know if I'm really proud of him, but he is extremely dedicated about everything. He worked very hard to do this."

Bremen said he spent about $1,000 on the Dallas scheme. He wore a copied uniform and white boots made especially for him. He had learned one dance step and joined a line of cheerleaders when he saw them doing it.

But one of the main reasons he was caught, he believes, is because the real cheerleaders were wearing their warm-up suits over their skimpy uniforms, and Bremen, wearing only pantyhose, "hot pants" and a halter, did not have one.

LCC Hits Long, Winding Road

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"The next time I enter a tournament, I think I'll ask who we'll play first," commented Lubbock Christian College coach Larry Hays this week.

"They all want us. Seems like they give us a lot of encouragement, with the teams we play first ... We go up to Oklahoma (Chickasha) for a tournament, and we draw Cameron, the number one team in the nation. We play in a doubleheader at Howard Payne and we have to play them and Angelo.

"Then, after Christmas, we go to the Dallas Baptist tournament and have to play East Texas State, with one of the best small-college teams around."

But, it's tough competition, and this is what Hays knows his team needs for the 1980 conference season.

Right now, the Chaparrals are 7-9 for the year, after splitting games at Howard Payne. They defeated Angelo State 71-71, but lost to HPU 92-77.

Still, "It was the best road trip we've had this year," remarked the LCC coach.

"Even against Howard Payne, with 1:20 left in the half, we were only down by one and went to the line with a one-and-one. But, we had (starters Marshall) Smith and (Bill) McGee on the bench with foul trouble, and they got us down about eight at the half.

"Outside of that, when we weren't in foul trouble, we played pretty well. We just don't have any depth at the point-guard position," Hays remarked.

Hays said he had been pleased with the team's improvement, but this week, the Chaparrals have scattered for home for the Christmas holidays. "And I hated to stop (working out) at this point."

The addition of Larry Holt helped in the Angelo State game, as the 6-3 freshman scored 12 points, hitting three of four field shots and six of seven free throws. He had been injured and did not return to workouts until last week.

Also, reserve forward Jim Steensma dropped in 13 points against Angelo.

"Holt came in and gave us some stability. He shot well both games," said Hays.

"The LCC coach remarked that Cecil Norris will become eligible in time for the DBC tournament next week, "and that will help. It will give some more depth.

"And, hopefully, Keith Money (a 5-10 freshman) will be eligible after the first of the year, and that will help us at point guard behind Smith.

"McGee has been having to play small forward and point guard, and it's hard to adjust to that.

The Chaparrals will play in the DBC tournament Dec. 27-29, then start conference play against Austin College in Sherman on Jan. 12.

Tech Dismisses Rodgers

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech football coach Pepper Rodgers, hired six seasons ago to put "the sting back in the Yellow Jackets," was fired Tuesday on the heels of a 4-6-1 season, a Tech athletic department spokesman said.

A statement from the board of trustees of the Georgia Tech Athletic Association said:

"After full discussion, the board determined that in the best interest of Georgia Tech, with full respect for Coach Pepper Rodgers, a change should be made in the position of head football coach."

Spokesman Jim Schultz said the board agreed to honor financial commitments to Rodgers, 48, who became head coach at his alma mater in 1974 and had two years remaining on his contract.

Athletic Director Doug Weaver was instructed to begin the search for a new coach immediately, Schultz said.

Bengals Want Discipline

Bengals' general manager Paul Brown has already made it clear that he plans to replace Homer Rice with someone who has a "strong type of personality."

Rice has been criticized by some players for being too nice and not providing enough discipline.

"If there's not discipline, some people tend to take advantage of the situation as much as they can," quarterback Ken Anderson said.

Anderson said he would prefer Rice's successor be a disciplinarian "because of the age of the team we have."

He said the squad did not have enough older players to police the situation.

Anderson said he also believes the new coach might have more power than Rice had.

"It's just conjecture but he might be in charge of football operations or something like that," Anderson said.

The Bengals' quarterback noted that unlike Brown, neither Bill Johnson nor Rice had the power to fire a player.

"Paul had the authority to do that," Anderson said. "Homer couldn't go into a meeting and say, 'You're cut.'"

Safety Marvin Cobb also said he personally liked Rice, but admitted "his attitude about coaching did not seem conducive to winning with this team."

He's a low key coach; he doesn't jump up and down and yell. Maybe we needed that."

UNM Warnings To Ellenberger Began Last Year

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.(AP) — Norm Ellenberger was warned nearly a year ago to change his recruiting tactics, a University of New Mexico regent said Tuesday, the day after Ellenberger was fired as the Lobos' head basketball coach.

Regent Phillip U. Martinez said Ellenberger was told last January to recruit a different type of student for the New Mexico team and to bring no more than two transfer students to the university from junior colleges this year.

Four members of this year's Lobo team transferred from junior colleges, despite the regents' belief that Ellenberger was "putting too many hopes on junior college transfers," Martinez said.

Ellenberger, 47, was fired Monday by New Mexico President William E. Davis for "willful and grossly incompetent conduct injurious to the basketball program."

The action ended his seven-year coaching career that included two Western Athletic Conference titles and four postseason appearances.

The firing, recommended by the school's Athletic Council, came after more than two weeks of public disclosures of allegedly phony academic transcripts and eligibility problems in the athletic department.

The disclosures were touched off by the FBI's release of a wiretap transcript of a conversation between Ellenberger and assistant coach Manny Goldstein. Goldstein resigned last week and seven players who originally were members of the Lobo basketball team have been found ineligible.

He said he was proud of acting coach Charlie Harrison and those players remaining on the squad.

"They are representing the Lobo tradition as it should be represented, by giving it everything they have. With a little bit of luck and a whole lot of backing by the fans, they should be able to finish out the season with their heads high," Ellenberger said.

Ellenberger has 120 days to appeal his termination to the regents, Davis said.

Ellenberger's attorney, David Norvell, said he and Ellenberger had not made a firm decision yet, but that the former coach "reserves the option for a lawsuit for breach of contract and civil rights violations."

Norvell had asked Davis to postpone the decision until after a federal grand jury had finished its proceedings next month on the investigation into the case.

John Bridgers, the new New Mexico athletic director, said he would start looking immediately for a new head basketball coach. Bridgers said he would not fire Harrison, but would like to see him remain as an assistant coach.

Silverton Grad Turner Wins Weightlifting Honor

SILVERTON (Special) — Gary Turner, son of Mr and Mrs. Billy Turner, recently won honors as the YMCA "Outstanding Lifter," and is on his way to reaching national-level ability as a powerlifter.

Turner graduated from Silverton High School in 1977 and is currently a student at West Texas State in Canyon.

Only 20 years old, Turner has been training for four years.

"The top lifters don't reach their peak until they re past 30," says Turner. "You have to gradually build up your strength and that takes time. I figure I've got 15 more years to get to my top lifts."

Turner, who says he gained 50 pounds (115 to 165) during his first year of lifting, is well on his way to becoming a nationally ranked powerlifter.

He lifted 390 pounds in the squat position, 245 off the bench and deadlifted an even 500 pounds for a total of 1,135 at the recent Amarillo Powerlift Championships. The efforts earned him the meet's "Outstanding Lifter Award."

"I got into it after I broke my arm playing football in Silverton," he explained. "It started out as a means to get my arm back in shape, but I found I enjoyed it and have been lifting ever since."

So what started as mere therapy has become a serious business for Turner.

The sport of powerlifting started more than 20 years ago and has become popular over the last decade. Once the technique is perfected, Turner says that the most important thing is warmups.

"Warmup actually builds strength," says Turner. "You warm with repititions of lighter weights (20 to 25 percent of the maximum) and get loose and strong for your top lifts."

Since it takes a minimum of 1,100 pounds to win an international event — and that's at the lightweight level — the powerlifter does plenty of warming up during his practice regimem.

Nittany Lions Ready For Bowl

The Nittany Lions carried a 7-4 record, their second poorest in the last 13 years. The 1976 team was 7-5 and lost to Notre Dame in the Gator Bowl. Tulane is 9-2.

Before leaving State College, Paterno described practice sessions as very productive. He worked the team mostly on fundamentals. Preparations for Tulane actually started Monday and will continue at the bowl scene.

"I felt we had to go back and polish our basics," said Paterno whose bowl record is 6-4-1.

"We're the healthiest we've been in the last four games," said Paterno, whose team lost the season finale to traditional rival Pitt.

Penn State has senior wide receiver Tom Donovan recovered from a damaged knee, and linebacker Lance Mehl ready after being handicapped with an ailing back in late season. Also, tight end Ron LaPointe has overcome a shoulder problem which forced him to miss the last three regular season games.

Offensively, Paterno hasn't said who will start at quarterback, but a Penn State spokesman said the coach appeared to be leaning to Dayle Tate, who started all 11 regular season games.

The spokesman said, however, that Paterno indicated he wouldn't hesitate to turn to freshman Frank Rocco.

Oregon Rejects Brooks' Resignation

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — University of Oregon President William Boyd said Tuesday he has refused to accept the resignation of head football coach Rich Brooks.

Brooks' offer to quit came in the wake of a report by the Eugene Register-Guard that freshman football player Paul Perez had been given credit for 10 hours of courses at Los Angeles Valley College, although he did no work to earn the credit.

Earlier, Perez admitted receiving three hours of credit, although he did no work, for a correspondence course he took through Ottawa University of Ottawa, Kan.

The Ottawa extension course was taught in a garage and lounge at Los Angeles Valley College, a two-year school in Van Nuys, Calif.

The Eugene newspaper said Oregon offensive coordinator John Becker had arranged for Perez to take the courses by correspondence. Becker, who is a former head football coach at Los Angeles Valley College, was not available for comment.

An Oregon athletic department spokesman said Becker has resigned, although Boyd said he had yet to receive Becker's letter of resignation.

Meanwhile, the FBI in Portland announced it was investigating allegations of mail fraud and bribery involving student-athletes at both the University of Oregon and Oregon State University.

Earlier reports indicated only the University of Oregon was involved.

Oregon State officials were not available for comment.

The FBI probe and the related Perez transcript problems came to light after five University of New Mexico basketball players and one UNM football player had taken the Ottawa extension course without doing any work.

Boyd told the Register-Guard that Perez' transcript showed he had been given credit for a total of 13 hours of courses at Ottawa and Los Angeles Valley, but had done no work. Perez needed 12 hours of credits to be admitted to Oregon because his high school grade point average was below Oregon's admittance standards.

The university says it has now found that his entire transcript, containing 13 hours of credit, was bogus.

Boyd said the Ducks, who compiled their first winning season in nine years this year, apparently would not have to forfeit any victories because Perez, a defensive lineman from Aurora, Ill., did not play in any games due to illness and injury.

Boyd said the transcripts of all other Oregon football players have been examined and no other fraud has been detected. Two other players — Mike Honeycutt and Rock Richmond — took courses at Los Angeles Valley College, but they actually attended the school and did the required work, Boyd said.

"That was a crime of a different order," Boyd said of the Honeycutt-Richmond case, "a subversion of academic standards."

Since the recent revelations, Boyd has ordered all Oregon athletes to take all courses at Oregon institutions, unless they have prior approval from the Pacific 10 Conference faculty representative.

Brooks issued a statement through the athletic department.

"My letter of resignation was prompted by my awareness that one of my assistant coaches, John Becker, intended to resign," Brooks said. "My action reflects my support of John and my feelings for him plus my overall responsibility for the football program.

"My letter was rejected by President Boyd, and I will continue as head football coach and will only try harder," Brooks said.

"My belief about Rich Brooks is that he is not complicit in knowing about the deceit," Boyd said. "We don't want Rich to resign. We have confidence in him. We do need him at the University of Oregon and the student-athletes need him."

Boyd said he understood Brooks' feeling responsible for the Oregon football program but added, "if you carry that line of reasoning along, (athletic director) John Caine should resign and I should resign."

Boyd said he had asked Becker to give him a letter explaining the details of the Perez incident, but Becker had refused the request and had said he would resign.

"His failure to give me such a letter is liable to be taken as a confession of guilt," Boyd said. "Rather I think he is living by a code, a different code than I live by. His is a macho code where you don't finger those involved at the other end."

Boyd said he doesn't think Perez was a willing accomplice in the scandal.

"I want to keep Paul Perez from becoming the victim of all of this when, relatively speaking, he is innocent," Boyd said. "He took coach's word for things and I don't think he ever set out to cheat his way into college. He thought the coach was finding him a legitimate way to earn his way into college. He expected the work to come."

Cattle Futures Close Lower On Exchange

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 20 to 132 points lower led by April on 24,407 cars Tuesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. December expired at 60 higher.

Other contracts closed at the day's lows and were mostly lower from the start. Much of the selling spilled over from the pork complex and also reflected fears that currently high beef prices will be difficult to sustain.

Deliveries total 1,160 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 106¼ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $69.25 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 119,000 head. About 18,100 head are expected today at the major markets.

Cash feeder cattle were steady with the best top $98.75 at Oklahoma City. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to total 7,100 head.

Hog futures closed 25 to 150 lower with most contracts limit down. Volume was estimated at 7,743 lots.

Selling was extended from Monday with increased hog runs and lower prices bringing pressure along with weakness in most pork products. Some selling also stemmed from the possibility of heavy hog numbers in Fridays pig crop report.

There have been 32 deliveries thus far. Wholesale hams were off 2 to 6 cents at 63 to 70 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to off $2 with the best top $42 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Kill was 327,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 33,500 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed the daily limit of 200 lower with sellers over across the board. Sales held to 4,103 cars with hundreds of unsold offerings.

The market turned around from Monday's gains on heavy hog runs and lower prices coupled with increased belly storings. The prospect of increased hog numbers in Friday's pig crop report also touched off liquidation.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up one-half at 30½ to 45 asked cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Home Administration Hopes For New Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration hopes to have new rules ready later this month to tighten up its beleaguered emergency loan program.

Officials say the FmHA, an agency of the Agriculture Department, the new regulations are being cleared by the Office of Management and Budget and are scheduled to be put into effect by Dec. 31 if no hitches develop.

The loan program has been severely criticized in recent months for slipshod methods that have permitted scores of big farmers — many of them in California — to borrow millions of dollars at federally subsidized low interest rates.

Fred McGhee, a spokesman for FmHA, told a reporter this week that applications for big loans — those over $1 million — have been tabled for the time being until they are reviewed futher.

Also, he said, proposals have been made in Congress that would put a lid and other constraints on the emergency loan program. There are no legal limits on the loans at this time.

McGee said 20 applications are being held up at the present time. Those total about $55.9 million and range between $1 million and $7.5 million each, he said.

About 300 loans of $1 million or more each are currently outstanding out of about 95,000 total loans, McGhee said. More than 95 percent of the total loans were for less than $500,000 each.

In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, FmHA made emergency loans totaling $2.9 billion in counties that were officially designated as disaster areas to help farmers and ranchers recover from drought and other problems.

One of the qualifications is that a borrower cannot get loans from banks or other commercial sources.

A report sent this week to congressional farm leaders by USDA's Office of Inspector General recommended that limits be imposed on the loans and that other steps be taken to tighten the program.

"Our review of these large loans raises serious questions about whether financing from outside sources was either actively pursued by the borrower or whether FmHA staff adequately verified the unavailability of credit elsewhere," the report said.

It added that investigators "also found cases where loan funds were diverted for unauthorized purposes" and gave this example:

"A rancher certified he incurred a loss of $3,490 when drought prevented him from planting about 250 acres of milo. He received letters from four sources of agricultural credit stating that he could not get a loan for various amounts over $500,000.

"He then received over $7 million in ... emergency loans (from FmHA). Our investigation uncovered evidence that he had falsely certified he could not obtain credit elsewhere. Action against the borrower is being pursued."

In another case, the report said, a farmer "made a down payment of $7,300 on a Cadillac automobile and paid for boat repairs of $10,000 with loan funds."

Anhydrous Ammonia Import Restrictions Nixed By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter this week rejected import restrictions on anhydrous ammonia from the Soviet Union, which has captured about 5 percent of the U.S. market.

Saying he was acting in part to assure U.S. farmers of "sufficient fertilizer supplies at reasonable prices," Carter rejected import restrictions which had been recommended in October by a 3-2 vote of the International Trade Commission.

The relief was requested by 12 U.S. manufacturers and one distributor of ammonia, a principal ingredient of fertilizer. They said imports of Soviet ammonia had increased from zero in 1977 to an estimated 800,000 tons this year, compared to 17 million tons produced domestically.

In October the ITC recommended that Soviet imports, which are projected to grow to 1.2 million tons this year, be held instead to 1 million tons in 1980, 1.1 in 1981 and 1.3 million in 1982.

Carter rejected this, saying that the U.S. industry is operating at 86 percent of its capacity and that prices are beginning to rise despite the Soviet imports.

"Given the anticipated growth in demand for grains and other crops, it is critical that farmers have access to sufficient fertilizer supplies at reasonable prices," Carter said.

He also said that limiting Soviet imports would not cut total imports of ammonia, but "will merely shift the source of foreign supplies from the Soviets to other low-cost producers."

A spokesman for the domestic producers, L. L. Jaquier, executive vice president of W. R. Grace & Co., said the industry was "greatly disappointed" in Carter's decision and would press for congressional hearings. Congress has 90 days to review the president's decision.

Soviet ammonia imports accounted for about 3.9 percent of total U. S. sales in October, and are projected to rise to about 5 percent by the end of this month. By that time about half of all imported ammonia will come from the Soviet Union, which has large supplies of natural gas, the principal ingredient of anhydrous ammonia.

Sacramento Bishop Appointed By Pope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Auxiliary Bishop Francis A. Quinn of San Francisco has been appointed Roman Catholic bishop of Sacramento, Calif., it was announced Tuesday.

The Rev. Jose de Jesus Madera, pastor of St. Lucy's Church in Fowler, Calif., was named coadjutor of the Fresno, Calif., diocese with the right of succession to Bishop Hugh A. Donohoe.

The appointments by Pope John Paul II were announced by Archbishop Jean Jadot, apostolic delegate in the United States.

Quinn, 58, is a former assistant superintendent of schools in the San Francisco Archdiocese and former editor of San Francisco's Catholic newspaper. Madera, 52, is a former seminary instructor.

The Sacramento diocese has a Catholic population of 250,000, and the Fresno diocese has a church population of 350,000.

MILK PRODUCTION UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Milk production last month was 2 percent more than a year ago, the Agriculture Department says. A department report says November milk production was 9.6 billion pounds.

Bizarre Murder Case Ends With Suicide

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — A woman's long-suppressed horror at seeing her father's body stuffed in the family outhouse 35 years ago led to the uncovering of his remains, and the suicide of her mother, authorities said.

The case began on April 8, 1944, in the tiny crossroads community of Timberland in Robeson County when the wife of Edward Leon Cameron, 34, reported the prominent farmer had disappeared.

Mrs. Cameron, 69, had been thought of as a kind, quiet, hardworking woman who raised her three children alone through tough times after her husband disappeared, residents said. She went to church, was prominent in civic affairs and worked as a Red Cross blood bank volunteer.

She divorced her husband in 1954 on grounds of separation for more than two years, according to court records.

"On Easter morning (April 9, 1944), Mrs. Perry saw her mother in the kitchen and the sink was full of pots and pans of bloody water," said a search warrant obtained by Hoke County authorities last week, which said the couple had quarreled the night before.

"Mrs. Perry then asked her mother where her father was, and her mother said he had left," the warrant said.

Later that day, Mrs. Perry went into an unused room and saw her father's body on the floor. "He was nude except for gauze wrapped around his hips and groin area," the warrant said.

After going to bed that night, Mrs. Perry recalled hearing butchering sounds and "got up to see a large cardboard box on the back porch."

The next week, while in the farm family's outdoor privy, she "looked down the hole and saw her father's face" floating in the mire, the warrant said.

The Fayetteville Observer reported Saturday that another person was involved in disposing of Cameron's remains but that the person had since did.

Mrs. Perry, who now teaches at Valencia Community College in Forida, was 10 years old when her father disappeared. She was staying Saturday with a sister, Jane Ivey, and could not be reached for comment.

After telling a Florida psychiatrist about her visions, she returned to Hoke County and directed law officers to the site where the privy had stood. She was hypnotized in connection with the investigation, authorities said.

Dr. John Butts, deputy state chief medical examiner, said an analysis indicated the body had been chopped up.

"This is the weirdest thing that we've ever run into," Butts said.

Late Friday afternoon, authorities found Mrs. Cameron's body. She had driven into some woods and shot herself in the chest with a .32-caliber pistol, which was found still clutched in her hand.

Next to her was a suicide note, in which authorities said she confessed to killing her husband. They refused to release the contents of the note.

Material Handlers In Wide Demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Material handlers remain in wide demand nationwide, according to the Labor Department, which said there were more than a half-million full-time jobs of various types available nationwide in October.

Labor officials said the 168 local job banks in the country listed 556,314 openings during the month, up slightly from September.

While job availability varies from place to place, the total represents more than 3,000 openings at each job bank.

Availability in your area can be determined by checking with your state employment office.

With 16,492 jobs available, material handers, such as warehousemen, were the workers most in demand. Second were clerk-typists with 12,817 openings, while construction laborers were a close third with 12,106 jobs available.

Other jobs widely available included general clerks, 11,609; construction worker (a more skilled job than construction laborer), 11,037; and secretary, 9,639.

Abilene Oilman Wants To Find Titanic As Next Adventure

ABILENE (AP) — Jack Grimm is one of those people who dreams of adventure, of confronting the Loch Ness monster or Big Foot. But unlike the armchair adventurers, Grimm transforms his dreams into reality.

He has tracked Big Foot in Canada. He has chased the Loch Ness monster in Scotland. He has produced a documentary on the search for Noah's Ark.

In his spare time, the 54-year-old geologist is the president of Grimm Oil Co., which he founded in 1951.

Now, the Abilene oilman wants to find the Titanic, the "unsinkable" luxury liner that sank in the North Atlantic in 1912 with 1,513 persons aboard.

"Everyone has been curious about it for years," Grimm said, "but no one's ever thought we could reach it."

But after several years of planning and with the aid of modern science, Grimm says he can reach the ship, which is in water 12,000 feet deep 380 miles off Newfoundland's coast.

Grimm and his associates will begin the search in the spring, as soon as the winter storms are gone.

"The one thing that haunts us is that it's such a watery tomb," Grimm said Tuesday. "It's not our plans at this time to do anything about any of the individuals. It's just to locate it, to film it, to prove where it's located and the extent of the damage to the vessel."

Grimm will be aided by Michael Harris and Marvin Steffins of International Expeditions, a film company that has produced several documentaries.

Harris, who is president of the company, produced "Deadly Fathoms," the only on-site film dealing with the atomic devastation of the Bikini Islands.

The 44-year-old Tampa, Fla., resident also has filmed "Pancho Villa's Treasure" and "Expedition to Mt. Ararat," which follows the search for Noah's Ark.

Accompanying the expedition of scientists and photographers will be the Aluminaut, the world's largest deep-diving submersible, Harris said.

The Aluminaut, which can dive to 15,000 feet, was constructed by Reynolds Metal Company after it discovered aluminum was safer for submarines than other metals. It was used to retrieve the lost hydrogen bomb that fell off the coast of Spain several years ago.

The 50-foot Aluminaut can carry nine or 10 persons, cruises at two to three knots, and can remain submerged 36 to 72 hours.

Harris said he believes the Titanic will be in good condition because at 12,000 feet, there is no coral life to corrode metal. He expects only a light layer of silt.

The first step, Grimm said, is to pinpoint the ship's exact location.

"Once the site is pinned down, then we can put a ship over it with cables and lower cameras to the depth," he said.

Photographs will be used to put together a mosaic of the Titanic.

The Aluminaut then will send two submersible "robots" into the Titanic to take photographs. Grimm compared the mechanical photographers to the droid "R2D2" in the movie, "Star Wars." The difference, he said, is that these robots self-destruct because it would be difficult to raise them back to the Aluminaut.

Grimm says valuables aboard the ship are a touchy matter. The Titanic is in international waters, but he says steps are being taken to prevent a plundering.

Harris said interest in the valuables would be largely historical. A major goal is "to get the bell of the Titanic, which should be easy to do."

Financing for the expedition "will be handled by individuals like myself," Grimm said. He added that several companies — including one major oil company and a couple of scientific organizations — have expressed interest in the project.

Grimm said the project will take at least a year and a half, because little work can be done in the winter.

Steffins said the film should be ready for commercial release within two years, and that Orson Welles will narrate.

Grimm doesn't know yet what his next adventure will be, but he expects he'll think of something.

"As a youngster I was something of a dreamer, anyway," he said. "Putting those dreams into play I find very exciting.

By DEBBI STALTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The city's first marker designating an official historical site was placed at the former location of the Childress Building at Main Street and Avenue H Tuesday.

The building, which was torn down this year to make way for expanded facilities of Lubbock National Bank, was one of the oldest structures of its kind in Lubbock history and was occupied by several retail hardware businesses over more than six decades.

The building was erected in 1917 by the family of Bruce Barrier. The Barriers went out of business and the building was occupied by Cole-Myrick Hardware Co.

Oscar and Joe Nislar opened Nislar Brothers Hardware Store at the location in March 1923 and stayed in business there until they sold out in 1932.

At that time, the store was sold to the partnership of O.A. Terry and Fred Childress.

"The only reason we bought it then was because nobody else wanted it," Terry said.

The store at that time, minus the building itself, sold for a mere $19,000. The partnership's firm was later succeeded by Fred Childress Hardware Co.

The store was sold to Richard Jay and Leslie Duncan in 1968, and although the company was moved to 915 Ave. H, it still retains its original name.

Special Courses Grade Plan Proposed

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

To promote increased enrollment in honors and advanced courses, Lubbock public school officials are proposing a weighted grading scale for those classes to allow students to earn a higher grade point average.

School trustees will consider the proposal Thursday, along with an alternative school year calendar for 1980-81 in which classes would start after Labor Day rather than the end of August.

Jay Gordon, assistant superintendent for instruction, said the revised grading scale is an "encouragement for students to take heavier courses and honor courses."

Gordon said he has heard that students are reluctant to take the more challenging courses for fear they will not make as high a grade as they would in a regular course.

Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said the student population, like other segments of society, are inclined these days "to take the easy way out." As a result, students who could handle more difficult material are choosing the less challenging classes to insure receiving higher grades.

The weighted grading scale for honors courses would allow students more points per letter grade. Currently an A is worth four points, a B is worth 3, a C is worth 2, a D is worth 1 and an F is worth 0.

The new scale would give a student 5 instead of 4 points for an A and each descending letter grade would be worth one less point, although an F would still be worth 0 instead of 1.

The additional points would allow a student to beef up his or her grade point average, and also will benefit students when class rank and honor graduates are determined, Leslie said.

Gordon said the scale, which is being utilized in other school districts, would be used in honors and such "heavy" courses as fourth year math and science and in some of the LEAP (Lubbock Exemplary Academic Program) courses at Lubbock High School.

Trustees also will be presented with two alternative school calendars for next year, one of which would move up the starting day of classes to Sept.2, the day after Labor Day.

The other calendar sets the first day as Aug. 27, the traditional date for starting school after summer vacation.

Leslie said administrators will recommend the board approve the calendar that sets the starting date in August.

Leslie said that Sept. 1 is the earliest date on which Labor Day can fall, and that in subsequent years when the holiday falls later in September, students will have to attend classes into June in order to fulfill the requirement for school attendance days.

The board will meet at 7:15 a.m. Thursday at the Administration Building, 1628 19th St.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Please tell me if a top blanket can be put on an electric blanket when it's turned on. I have heard that it might cause a fire, but I've also been told that a top blanket keeps in the heat.

If you can set my mind at ease on this one, I'll be most relieved. — J.P.

I double-checked for you with some reliable sources, honeychile, and they assure me that it's perfectly safe to use a top blanket over an electric one. PROVIDED the electric blanket has no exposed wiring and is in proper working order.

You heard right about a top blanket helping to hold in the heat, thus making it unnecessary to turn the control on as high. And that's an energy-saver!

Sure beats Grandma's bed on those frosty nights when you had to crawl in between icy covers, huh? — Hugs, Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Keep your recipe cards clean by "laminating" them by applying clear self-adhesive plastic on both sides of the card.

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I love your column because it shows that people will actually take time to sit down and write to you about something that will help others.

It feels good to have done so myself. Keep transmitting all that sunshine, Heloise! — Ruth D.

You just made my day, Ruth! — Love, Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep wet snow from sticking to your shovel when you're shoveling off your drive and walkways, spray a little vegetable oil on the shovel and the snow will easily slip off. — Faye Cypert

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I had an old Dacron-filled crib quilt, so I cut it up to make a mattress, blanket and pillow set for my little daughter's doll carriage and crib.

I measured to size, doubled a piece for the pillow and zig-zagged the edges.

My daughter loves it, and I was glad to make use of an item that otherwise would have been discarded. — Sandra Crellin

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I love to ice skate and go as often as I can.

My skates were awfully dirty and scuffed from use (another reason is that they were "hand-me-downs").

We didn't have any saddle soap at all, but my sisters are always cleaning their saddle shoes with that new soft abrasive cleanser, and their shoes really look nice when they finished.

So I thought I'd clean my skates with it. It worked! They look as good as new. All you do is apply a little with a damp sponge and rub softly. You hardly have to use any "elbow grease" at all. — Megan Mahoney, Age 11

Great but, as a caution, I wouldn't try it on new shoes, especially vinyl ones. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband and friends have nicknamed me "Mrs. Clean" for the past 23 years. My secret: Before retiring, I pick up newspapers, empty ashtrays, pick up clutter and have the children help put away their own clutter — toys, shoes, coats, etc.

In the morning you can't believe how "neat" your house will look if you do this. You can smile at the day instead of frowning. — Mrs. Sheril Slack

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is a hand bid really well by Oswald Jacoby and his son Jim back in the Sixties. It illustrates several fine points of bidding.

Oswald, sitting North, responded two clubs instead of one spade. There is a fallacious theory here that one spade keeps the bidding low. Actually, two clubs is far more likely to keep the bidding low. Thus, Oswald's second bid of two spades left the bidding at the two level with all four suits shown. Jim could now bid three clubs and Oswald three diamonds.

Jim's four-diamond bid was a force. By this time the partnership was on its way to game or higher. Oswald could find no better bid than five diamonds.

When Oswald went to five diamonds, Jim knew that he was showing four-card diamond support and also was now marked with not more than one heart. Maybe there ws a grand slam. Jim's five notrump was their form of grand slam force to ask how good his father's diamonds were. Six clubs said they were bad.

Jim won the club lead and cashed his ace-king of diamonds. He needed to have the diamonds break 3-2. Then he spread his hand. As long as he did not lead a third trump, the only trick he could lose would be West's high trump.

The Indigo Painted Bunting
PORCELAIN SCULPTURE BY EDWARD MARSHALL BOEHM

In life, a breath-taking flash of deep ultramarine blue in flight, here he is captured forever in a restful moment, poised among the lovely blooms of yellow morning glories. Known as a bit of a show off, he proudly preens his colorful plumage and fills the summer air with his sweet, simple song. In the orchards, he works diligently to keep the ecology in proper blance. Small wonder that this valuable, valiant little bunting inspired the genius of the artist. A beautiful way to begin or add to a personal Boehm collection that will be enjoyed for a lifetime, and more. Height, 10 inches. $475.

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I really get upset when I read articles such as yours on lecithin. I think it's past time when you doctors should take a course in preventive medicine. — Mrs. J.W.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Several times you have answered negatively about our body's need for lecithin. Evidently, you have not studied nutrition and preventive medicine. — J.K.

Dear Dr. Donohue: In your column you state there is no medical evidence that lecithin won't help heart or artery problems. You have misled your readers about the role lecithin plays in combating heart and artery disease. — W.G.

I am under attack by proponents of lecithin.

Let me state my approach to life and medicine. If something is not harmful and if people think it does them good, then I will not condemn it. If something is harmful or of doubtful value I have a duty to express concern. I do not believe lecithin is harmful. Nor are sunflower seeds.

Technically, lecithin is a fat itself, with the chemical element phosphorous a part of it. Lecithin is a component of cell membranes (walls), a part of the brick and mortar of all cells.

It also has a function of helping cholesterol droplets stay dispersed in the blood on their way to the liver. Advocates of the substance say it helps lower a person's cholesterol. All I said was that we get all the lecithin we need in a normal diet.

I will promise to keep an open mind on the benefits of lecithin. A tennis pro tells me lecithin works for tennis elbow, psoriasis and weight control. I'm not condemning that, Mrs. J.W., J.K. and W.G.! I only raise an eyebrow. I doubt it.

If anyone wishes to send me evidence from reputable scientific journals on lecithin I will pass this on — the pros and cons. I am not going to get Mrs. J.W. mad at me again. I hope she understands my position on lecithin.

Dear Dr. Donohue: How can I persuade my father to see a doctor? He is retired and has been in good health. Recently, he has had blood in the urine. He refuses to listen to me. — T.T., M.D.

I presume the idea is that if he reads it here, he'll respond to common sense.

I can sympathize with you. You are dad's little boy, doctor. How can he be expected to listen to you? He knows what you were like growing up.

Your father may be delaying an examination out of fear of what he may hear. Blood in the urine, as you do and as he should know, can signal many problems, from a harmless infection to a more serious one, like a growth.

So do yourself a favor, M.D.'s father, and get to a doctor before your condition gets worse and your son gets an ulcer from worry.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My teen-age son had an extensive blood chemical test and everything was normal except his cholesterol, which was below normal. We hear about high cholesterol, but nothing about a low count. Will you please discuss low cholesterol? — Mrs. B.C.

Generally, a cholesterol count on the low side is a blessing. A few illnesses, whose other signs are easily recognized, can be associated with a very low cholesterol level.

These include severe liver damage, an overactive thyroid gland, malnutrition, and certain intestinal disorders affecting food absorption. all can cause a low blood cholesterol. Other blood components would also be abnormal. The low cholesterol level itself would not hurt.

Your son sounds like a healthy person who just happens to have low cholesterol. He's lucky.

Dear Dr. Donohue: We are in our late 70s and can still enjoy intercourse. A friend (being envious) tells me that I can easily become pregnant even though I have not menstruated for over 30 years. Is she right? — No name.

Good grief, no! You can tell your envious friend that you've got 30 years of proof.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing about the letter signed "Mary Lou" from Rochester. The woman really ran herself into the ground. She was a compulsive talker and became depressed when she got home and realized she had "done it again." I thought your answer was rather shallow.

That letter could have been written by me. I never fail to talk up a storm at social gatherings. When I come home I could kick myself for trying to be so damned cute and witty.

I tell myself, "People aren't interested in you, Dummy. They are interested in themselves." Like Mary Lou, it's as though someone pushed a button — and I, "The Talking Doll," am off — running my mouth like crazy. Your answer didn't help much, Ann. If anyone sends in a solution I hope you will print it. — Another Blabbermouth

Dear Another: A reader sent not a solution, but a thoughtful and comforting comment. Here it is:

Dear Ann Landers: Mary Lou was depressed because she said, "I talk too much!" She then asked, point-blank, "How can I learn to SHUT UP?" Because Mary Lou has rescued me from boredom and discomfort many times, I would like to respond. She may not be Oscar Wilde, but she is darned good company.

• • •

Dear Mary Lou: Why are you so sure your listeners are bored to death? Do their eyes dart around the room while you are talking? Do they try to avoid you? While this happens occasionally to us all, next time you are suffering from post-party depression, ask yourself if that person asked you ONE question. If so, it means he (or she) was interested.

The genuine bore tries to engage the entire room with his strident bragging. But you say you behave "normally" until you are with someone who is not much of a talker. You have the right to feel used by your listeners, because actually, you are not monopolizing THEM, they are monopolizing you!

A lively talker takes the pressure off and helps people relax. If everyone at the party said to his or herself, "This time, Dummy, LISTEN," so many of us would be ill at ease, searching desperately for something to say.

People like me who are not scintillating are glad to see you come in the door. Please don't shut up. You are performing a useful service. — Reader In Victoria, B.C.

Dear Reader: What a warm-hearted person you are! I'm sure you made a lot of people feel better about themselves today. Thanks for writing.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell "Sick of Widows" that if she (and thousands of other smug married women) knew how many of their husbands propositioned us, she'd have eaten that letter, not mailed it to Ann Landers.

I was 37 when my wonderful husband died of a coronary. I was devastated. Within three weeks I received two invitations from husbands of close friends to meet at a motel for "dinner." A third offer came from my sister's husband, who assured me that an affair was the best way to get over grief.

Honestly, ladies, I don't want your husbands — so stop worrying. — A Widow Who Speaks For Many

Dear W.: Thank you in behalf of the widows who have been through it. And many divorcees, too.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

You've all seen them.

They're members in good standing of the free-spirit generation who take to the open road in search of themselves with nothing but a pack on their backs, a T-shirt that makes a statement and a top ten song on their lips.

I saw one of them last summer in an airport in a remote village in New Guinea. I was sitting on eight pieces of matched luggage at the time. He ambled off the plane in faded bluejeans and sandals, reached into his pack (I've carried larger cosmetic bags), took out a quart of orange juice and drank the entire thing chugalug. His load down a quart, he pushed out the door and into another adventure.

As parents, have you ever wondered how these young people travel so light and so far?

Because somewhere in Toledo, Ohio, a mother is falling over his $800 stereo system, 3,000 records, and six-piece drum set.

Home dropouts are becoming staples on the American scene. Just when you think their goodbyes are final, you look down at your feet and there's their dog with a sign around his neck: "Store, feed and love until I return."

My mail reflects what I am saying. One woman in Ocala, Fla., even suggested I come up with a bill of divorcement for parents to present to their adult children who regard their homes as first class storage lockers. Here's a start.

"Whereas, when a meaningful relationship between parent and child ends, child will get custody of:

"The car that has no motor, no tires and no future and occupies the only parking space in the garage.

"Three closets full of memorabilia including every blue book from every test ever taken to bubblegum baseball cards to typing trophies to broken tennis rackets.

"Let it be known to all parties that mail unopened after 20 days will be sent back to the sender. Anything that has to be fed, cleaned or started during cold weather will be sold at public auction.

"Traveling young adults must register with their parents at least once a year, or lose their family citizenship status and part-time residency. Hair dryers, records, books, and clothes left behind longer than 60 days become community property."

If this doesn't work...try changing your locks.

Auto, Home Burglaries Investigated By Police

Illicit Drugs Said Recovered

A driver for a Lubbock vending machine company told police someone pryed open a door on his truck and took several bank bags containing an undetermined amount of money.

Joe Taylor Sams, 20, employed by B&M Vending Co., told investigating officers that he had parked his truck on the west side of J.C. Penny's department store at South Plains Mall Monday and was away from the vehicle for about 10 minutes.

Reports indicate when Sams returned to the truck he noticed the right door of the vehicle had been pryed open. Police said the bank bags, at least four cartons of cigarettes, Sams's personal checks and a calculator were stolen from the truck.

In other activity, a 23-year-old pet store employee reported to police that her house had been burglarized and approximately $1,000 worth of property stolen.

Reports indicate entry to the house was gained by breaking a bolt-type lock on a door.

A Lubbock man and woman, found early Tuesday morning, passed out and slumped over in their car, were arrested for alleged possession of illicit drugs, unlawfully carrying a weapon, possession of stolen property and public intoxication.

The 32-year-old man and his female companion, 24, were spotted by police shortly before 3 a.m. in front of a restaurant at Eighth Street and Avenue A. Police woke the couple and ordered them out of the car.

Reports indicate a .38-caliber revolver loaded with four live rounds was confiscated from the front seat of the vehicle, and further investigation revealed the weapon had been stolen from Clovis, N.M.

Police said a substance resembling marijuana was found in the glove box and pills were taken from the man's pants pocket. Officers said both suspects were "mush-mouthed" and had a strong odor of alcohol on them.

Both were booked into the county jail.

In a separate arrest about 6 p.m. Monday, a 25-year-old Lubbock man was taken into custody for allegedly driving while intoxicated and causing a traffic accident in the 6000-block of Southeast Drive.

Arresting officers said the man failed in an attempt to cover up the smell of liquor on his breath by putting a chew of tobacco in his mouth. The suspect had a difficult time keeping the wad of tobacco in his mouth, according to reports.

No one was injured in the traffic mishap.

After deciding he had been victimized by thieves, Byron Pierce, owner of a Lubbock delivery service, told police Monday that two sacks of jewelry, totaling about $1,443, were stolen from one of his business vehicles.

Pierce said the jewelry apparently was taken Nov. 26 in the downtown area. Thinking the gems for J.C. Penney had just been misplaced, Pierce bought a newspaper advertisement stating, "Lost, two small sacks of jewelry," and offered a reward for their recovery.

A 25-year-old Lubbock man spent time in the county jail Monday and all for a $1.09 bag of Milky Way candy bars. The suspect was arrested about 4 p.m. after he allegedly tried to walk out of the United Supermarket at 3101 E. Fourth St. without paying for the merchandise.

Laundry Training Plan Revived

Directors of the Lubbock Mental Health & Mental Retardation Center agreed Tuesday to make a last-ditch effort to save a proposed laundry training program for the mentally retarded.

Hopes for the controversial program dimmed greatly when the directors learned the center could not receive a $187,500 grant to build the laundry if Lubbock laundry owners continue to oppose the plan.

But directors agreed to let staff members try to gain the support of operators of three protesting Lubbock laundries — Sunbeam, Plains and Bluebonnet.

The directors voted last month to delay the proposal after a group of local laundry operators claimed the state-funded laundry would be unfairly competing with private enterprise.

At the beginning of Tuesday's meeting, some directors wanted to abolish the laundry program entirely. Others wanted to go ahead an reorder equipment for the training laundry. The equipment order was canceled last month after the laundry owners protested.

All arguing was quieted, however, after chairman Jim Kimmel told directors the center would not be able to use the grant as long as the laundrymen objected.

"Officals with the Texas Rehabilitation Agency— although they approved of the laundry concept—felt in view of the opposition in the business community, that we should go in another direction," said MHMR executive director Gene Menefee.

One thing the directors did agree on was the pressing need for job training for the mentally retarded in Lubbock.

Director Norma Porres said she feared that no matter what kind of job training program the MHMR center implemented, oppostion would surface somewhere.

"It's a terrific blow for me to learn we cannot implement this program for fear somebody would be losing x amount of business, when they don't know for sure," Dr. Porres said.

Jim Clopton, chairman of the board's program committee told the board that the proposed MHMR laundry would take away "at most" 2.6 percent of business from other Lubbock laundries.

Any business lost is too much, claim the laundrymen, who also say competition in the city is stiff.

"Life is more than profit, and I believe in the worth of this program," Dr. Porres said. "And I don't believe we should put it in a corner and forget it. There's been too much work already done."

Director Claude Dollins, however, suggested the center stay out of the laundry business.

"In lieu of adverse publicity we've received, I think we need to begin anew," Dollins said. "I genuinely question the logic and rationale of trying to press this on the community."

Dollins added, "Private enterprise in this city is not that callous to the needs of the mentally retarded."

The directors agreed to "hold in abeyance" the laundry program for another month after Tony Mattox, mental retardation coordinator, asked for a chance to change the dissenting laundrymen's minds.

Mattox added, however, that the chances of accomplishing that are slim.

One woman in the audience, the mother of a retarded child, told the board: "He (one of the dissenting laundry owners) said he was interested in where his tax dollars were going. Well, it's our tax dollars, too. I think it's a tragedy to let them (the laundrymen) do this."

Weighted Grade Plan Proposed For Schools

worth 0 instead of 1.

The additional points would allow a student to beef up his or her grade point average, and also will benefit students when class rank and honor graduates are determined, Leslie said.

Gordon said the scale, which is being utilized in other school districts, would be used in honors and such "heavy" courses as fourth year math and science and in some of the LEAP (Lubbock Exemplary Academic Program) courses at Lubbock High School.

Trustees also will be presented with two alternative school calendars for next year, one of which would move up the starting day of classes to Sept. 2, the day after Labor Day.

The other calendar sets the first day as Aug. 27, the traditional date for starting school after summer vacation.

Leslie said administrators will recommend the board approve the calendar that sets the starting date in August.

Leslie said that Sept. 1 is the earliest date on which Labor Day can fall, and that in subsequent years when the holiday falls later in September, students will have to attend classes into June in order to fulfill the requirement for school attendance days.

He said that classes in June present a problem for teachers who wish to attend the opening summer school session at Texas Tech University, which begins June 1.

He said an advantage of the post-Labor Day starting date might be that more students will attend during the opening days of schools. Traditionally, early attendance is low when school starts in August because many students wait until after the Labor Day holiday to begin classes.

The board also will consider a request to dismiss classes early on two days at the start of 1980 in order to provide special education in-service training for regular and special education teachers.

The in-service requirements were mandated by Senate Bill 350 that was passed during the last state legislative session.

The board will meet at 7:15 a.m. Thursday at the Administration Building, 1628 19th St.

Santa and the Elf Boy

(SYNOPSIS: Esteban is trying to reach Santa Land to get help in stopping the professor from releasing gas which will kill all the fairies. The mole and his workers dig an underground road to the edge of an ocean where Esteban hopes to find a cousin of the mole who digs through ice. As they pop out of the hole, Esteban sees the strangest creature he has ever seen — the Snuke.)

"Thank you!" cried Esteban, and ran for Santa's house.

CHAPTER TWELVE
A QUEER RIDE

The Snuke is the queerest fish in the sea. He has a small round body. At one end is a fanlike tail. At the other end is an enormous mouth three feet long. The top of its snout has notches sharp as the teeth of a saw.

It was this creature that Esteban and the mole found snoozing on the beach.

"Wake up, old fish," cried the mole.

"Wh-wh-what?" stammered the Snuke, blinking his eyes sleepily.

"What a lazy life you Snukes lead," jeered the mole. "While we moles work day and night you do nothing but lie on the beach and sleep."

"What else is there to do?" yawned the Snuke.

"We have something you can do!" said the mole. "Tell him, boy."

So Esteban told the story again of how all Fairyland was in peril and he must get to Santa Land to warn Santa.

The Snuke listened to the story with growing horror. "Oh, my!" he exclaimed. "Some of my very best friends are sea fairies. Oh, my! What shall we do?"

"Do?" snapped the mole. "Take the boy to Santa Land. That's what the saw on your snout is for, isn't it — to saw through ice?"

"O-of course! But how could I carry the boy?"

"In your mouth, silly!" retorted the mole.

The Snuke's great mouth dropped open with surprise. Before he could close it again the mole pushed Esteban in and snapped the jaws shut.

It was cold and dark and wet inside the Snuke's mouth. Esteban crouched there and shivered. He had never been so uncomfortable.

But the worse was yet to come for suddenly the Snuke rocked back and forth, took several somersaults, and finally began to roll up and down.

"We are at sea!" thought Esteban.

He held tight to the Snuke's teeth and tried to rock and roll with the fish like a man on a ship.

When he became used to the rolling it was quite pleasant and he was just beginning to enjoy the trip when a most awful noise deafened him. It was the sound of a screaming saw.

They had reached the polar ice and the Snuke was cutting through it with the saw on top of his snout. Esteban put both hands over his ears, but he could not shut out the sound.

Just when he thought he could stand it no longer the sawing and rocking stopped and the Snuke's mouth opened. Peering out, Esteban saw a great snowy land and tucked between two white hills was a little red house with smoke curling from its chimney.

"It's Santa Land!" cried Esteban joyfully.

He leaped out of the Snuke's mouth and raced away. But when he had gone only a little way he remembered the Snuke. He ran back.

"Thank you for the ride!" he exclaimed to the fish whose big mouth was sticking out of a hole in the ice.

"Thank you!" replied the Snuke. "Remember it's my friends you're trying to save!"

Esteban turned and dashed away. He ran as fast as he could towards the little red house shouting "Santa! Santa!" at the top of his lungs.

Jury Asked To Ponder 'Unanswered' Questions

KERRVILLE (AP) — Prosecutors, admitting three secretly recorded tapes are the heart of their case, Tuesday told jurors to consider questions unanswered by the defense as they deliberate the fate of Donald Edward Smith Jr.

The 19-year-old Tampa, Fla., man is charged with capital murder in the deaths of Molly Farr, 55, and her daughter, Tandy Bennett, 25. They were slain Aug. 2 as they slept in their trailer house at a ranch north of Brady.

The tape recordings were made by a Florida undercover officer as Smith boasted of killing the women.

But defense attorneys contend Smith gleaned information about the murders from news accounts, and invented his story to prove he was a "hit man."

Smith says he believed the officer, Al Luis, was an underworld crime figure who would hire him for a contract murder. After Luis paid him, he would "take the money and run."

Salvation Army Seeking Financial Help

Lubbock's Salvation Army Unit is seeking financial help from local residents to assure that Christmas will be merry for approximately 1,200 underprivileged families here.

Ronald Fancher, chairman of the Salvation Army advisory board, announced Tuesday the unit has been caught in a double financial crunch in this year's Christmas campaign.

According to Fancher, the unit has experienced about a 25 percent increase in the number of families requesting aid this Christmas. This amounts to an additional 250 families needing food and toys, he said.

To compound the problem, collections in this year's funds drive are running nine percent behind the 1978 campaign, Fancher noted. The Salvation Army also must deal with the continuing problem of rising inflation, which has driven up the cost of many of the goods needed for the Christmas packages.

The total spent in the 1978 Christmas campaign was $34,761, Fancher said. He feels the unit will have to spend at least that much again this year, even if some goods are deleted from the packages.

Fancher made an appeal to residents to make donations to the Salvation Army, either through the bell ringer drive or by direct contributions. The bell ringers are located in most of the city's major shopping areas. Anyone wanting to make a direct donation, should mail it to the Salvation Army, P.O. Drawer 2785, Lubbock, Texas 79408.

Late Railroad Commissioner 'Miracle Man'

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Railroad Commissioner Jim Langdon, who died Monday night, joined the powerful regulatory agency at a time when public confidence in it had been shaken, and that confidence was never completely regained.

Langdon, 65 on Friday, had undergone treatment for cancer.

He was appointed to the oil and gas regulatory agency in 1963, culminating Gov. John Connally's search for a "miracle man."

Connally said he wanted someone who "must be able to travel in political, business and economic circles — and command the respect of everyone. We need someone who can help re-instill confidence in the Railroad Commission."

Langdon, then chief justice of the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals, replaced William J. Murray Jr. as Texas' 24th commissioner. Murray had resigned the previous month, following reports he had private oil and gas interests.

"This is one of the most important posts in the United States," said Connally, who considered 100 persons for appointment to the three-member agency.

The job paid $17,500-a-year. When Langdon resigned in October 1977, the pay had risen to $43,700 but the work load also had increased.

With the worldwide energy shortage and skyrocketing natural gas prices touching off angry consumer complaints in the 1970s, Langdon remarked privately that the commissioner's job was no longer fun.

He quit before his term expired to "have the pleasure" of practicing law with his son, Jim Langdon Jr., a partner in the law firm of Akin, Gump, Hauer and Feld of Dallas and Washington.

Langdon had won six-year terms in 1968 and 1974 and was 62 at the time of his resignation, with over three years left in his term.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe appointed former Hondo Rep. John Poerner to succeed Langdon.

Langdon — as early as 1972 — may have been the first state official to predict the oil and gas industry would be blamed for "severe shortages of natural gas and crude oil."

He repeatedly criticized the federal government for what he said were energy policies that subsidized northern consumers at the expense of Texas' natural resources.

Chicago Catches 'Metropolitan Virus'

CHICAGO (AP) — If New York City was on the financial critical list in the mid-1970s, then what ails Chicago now is a touch of fever.

The nation's "Second City," which appeared so healthy when ruled by the late Mayor Richard Daley, seems to have caught that common bug, the "metropolitan virus."

City transit workers, already the highest paid in the nation, went on strike Monday over salary demands. On Sunday fire fighters authorized their union to call a strike. Other city employees with informal contracts are pressing for firm union pacts.

In September, Standard & Poor's Corp. lowered Chicago's general obligation bond rating.

Last month, Moody's Investors Service Inc. dropped the school district's bond rating, leaving the district unable to borrow from banks and dependent on the state for cash advances to pay teachers.

On top of its financial needs, the system has been threatened with a federal lawsuit over its plans for racial desegregation.

A local Teamsters strike has cut gasoline deliveries to many service stations, adding to the traffic headaches created by the transit workers' walkout.

Indeed, about the only bright spot for Chicagoans these days is that their usually hapless Bears have made it to the National Football League playoffs.

Although business and political sources say Chicago has nowhere near the money problems New York had in 1975, they admit concern.

And the slogan Daley so often used — "The City That Works" — is being challenged. Many say that the smooth-working city machinery is headed for a breakdown unless it gets a major overhaul.

Mayor Jane Byrne has been quick to separate the problems of the deeply troubled school system from that of her city government, at least where it comes to laying blame.

"I'm very angry that that happened, but I in no way am responsible," she said of the escalating school crisis.

Alderman Vito Marzullo, who at 82 has served under four mayors, said Tuesday that people are expecting too much too soon from Mrs. Byrne, whom he called "this young lady."

"How can anyone take Mayor Daley's place overnight? It takes time. You can't expect someone new to do what it took someone 40 years to do," Marzullo said.

Alderman Eugene Ray also defended the city.

He said a "city that works" means cooperation from many groups — labor, business, industry and citizens. He said Daley got involved in conflicts and helped mediate labor disputes, noting that Mrs. Byrne is trying to do the same thing.

"Our present mayor has inserted herself to make it work, but I don't think she's getting the cooperation others have gotten," he said.

The school district's problems include empty cash coffers, but Mrs. Byrne said Tuesday that the school board would be able to meet Friday's $41.5 million payroll.

She said she would announce today just how the wages would be paid and how the board is to meet its other debts, including more than $12.2 million owed to milk suppliers and other vendors. The board also owes money to private bus companies, but they've agreed to continue service until the end of the week, when Christmas break begins.

Today's

FOCUS

Financial analysts have estimated the school system needs almost $500 million to straighten out its books.

In addition, school board president Catherine Rohter has said that $8.1 million withheld from employee checks for pension fund, union dues and other voluntary contributions is missing.

And the Internal Revenue Service wants the school board to pay $16 million in back payroll taxes. Mrs. Byrne said Tuesday that the IRS had given the board until March 31.

The mayor also downplays the city's own bond rating drop, saying it's common among major cities.

"If people look at rating services they have to understand that nationwide this is going on in every major city," she said. "Bond ratings are going down much more than in the city of Chicago."

But New York bond analyst George Gregario disagreed.

"Certain cities — Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Detroit — are problem credits, but they are the older cities that have old buildings, declining asset bases," said Gregario, a vice president at Prescott Ball & Turben.

"Chicago was thought of up until recently as being much more financially sound," he said. "But over the past decade the assessed values in real terms have declined and population has decreased significantly — more than 12 percent."

Independent Alderman Martin Oberman, an outspoken critic of the city Democratic machine, says the "greatest reasons" people are leaving Chicago are the loss of jobs and dissatisfaction with city schools.

Oberman claimed Chicago has never been "the city that works."

"The people in the west side of Chicago in the ghetto — which might be 20 or 30 or 40 percent of the population — don't get their garbage picked up and never have," he said in a telephone interview.

"And you have a school system which has never been good. ... A lot of terrible things were going on while Daley was supposedly running things well," Oberman said.

Mrs. Byrne has been trying to orchestrate a solution to the schools' growing money problem which would involve support from the business community, the state and the city.

That, Gregario said, has put the financial community on guard.

The drop in the city's bond rating "is not near what happened in New York, but what a lot of people are concerned about is the close tie between the Board of Education and city credit," he said.

Gregario said that if the school system were considered a city obligation, "city's credit would necessarily suffer more."

Gregario said that "in the eyes of the investor," tying the school system's finances to the city would be like doubling the burden on the city. Investors would "mentally add up the two debts," he said.

Man Arraigned On Strangulation Charge

Jessie Lee Shaw was implicated in the slaying by Billy Ray Wallace, 38, who pleaded guilty Dec. 13 to killing his wife. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Mrs. Wallace's body was found Dec. 5. She had been missing since July 12, when her car was found abandoned near Rockwall.

Shaw, who worked on Wallace's dairy farm, was arrested Aug. 21 on arson charges after the Wallaces' Sulphur Springs home caught fire July 23. He had been held in an undisclosed jail as a security precaution while awaiting a writ of habeas corpus hearing to reduce bond on the arson charge.

But District Judge Lanny Ramsey Tuesday passed on the hearing in light of the new charge.

Hopkins County Sheriff John E. Tittle said the bond would have to be in cash or in the form of a sheriff's trust of property with a value of at least $200,000.

Tittle said he may move Shaw from the Hopkins County Jail because of threats on his life.

Hopkins County District Attorney Jim Chapman said the house was burned to hide evidence such as bloodstains.

He said Wallace's wife was threatening divorce and would seek custody of their four children and a large property settlement.

Chapman said Wallace offered Shaw $1,500 to kill Mrs. Wallace, but that he received only $50.

ASSOCIATION WINS GRANT

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Commission for the Blind Tuesday announced a $500,000 federal grant has been awarded to the Dallas County Association for the Blind. The money will be used for an expansion project.

Ellis Wentz, executive director of the commission, said the Dallas association will add a two-story structure to its existing facilities. The new area will house living quarters and work areas.

Books Make Lasting Gifts For Children

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — What kind of children's Christmas present isn't made of plastic, doesn't wear out in a day, doesn't need batteries, costs less than an electronic toy, and gives lasting joy?

"Books," says Vanita Gibbs, professor of reading and language arts at Indiana State University.

She said classics which never lose their appeal include "Tom Sawyer," "Wind in the Willows," "Winnie the Pooh," or Beatrix Potter's "Tale of Peter Rabbit."

Heartline

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: My sister and I are considering placing our aunt in a nursing home. The problem is we have heard that many nursing homes are not always as reputable as they seem. Can you give us some guidance about what we should look for and what questions we should ask that would help us to make our choice of homes? — Y.G.

Yes. We would like to point out also that there are various check lists available. Through the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, there is a check list that has more than 110 questions and sub-questions. It is called Nursing Home Care (SRS 76-24902). A slightly modified version of the same list appears in Thinking About A Nursing Home, a pamphlet published by the American Health Care Association, 1200-15th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005. Even without a check list, there are certain things to look for in your evaluation of any nursing home:

CLEANLINESS: Does the facility look clean? How about the bathrooms, bed linens? Does the place smell clean — no smell of urine? Are they using heavily scented deodorants to possibly cover something up? Look around. Look closely for cockroaches, ants, flies and lice.

FOOD AND MEALS: Try to taste the food. Do those who need help in eating get it right away — after the food gets cold, not at all? Do lots of trays go back with food uneaten?

FIRE SAFETY: When was the last fire drill? Has anyone ever seen the sprinkler system being tested to make sure its connected?

THE STAFF: Are they generally smiling? Do they seem irritated or hostile when asked to do something extra? When you push a buzzer, does anyone come — and how soon? How long have the nurse's aides or orderlies been there? High turnover says something negative about working conditions, and residents may wind up being victims of untrained or unhappy staff members.

ACTIVITY: What are the people doing most of the time? Playing games or cards? Knitting? Is there chatting? Is it involved? Or are people just sitting or staring at the TV or cars passing?

DRUGS AND MEDICATION: Are drugs carefully labeled, noted and dispensed? Are residents generally alert, or do you spot too many zombies just sitting or in bed in the middle of the day?

MEDICAL CARE: If you can, talk privately with the residents (a staff member at your elbow at all times may be a warning that there is something negative to find out). Don't ask how good medical attention is; instead, ask when the resident last saw and actually spoke with his or her doctor, opthalmologist, dentist, podiatrist.

QUALITY OF CARE: This is not easy to judge quickly, even for professionals, but try. Was there a physiotherapist or an occupational therapist in action while you were there? How many patients were restrained — tied to beds or chairs? Does the administrator turn red when you ask about rehabilitation programs, or glower when you ask how many residents got out last year — alive?

Heartline has written a free nursing home check list. To obtain it, send 35 cents for postage and handling to Heartline Nursing Home Tips, 114 E. Dayton St., W. Alexandria, Ohio 45381.

HEARTLINE: Last week I had an injury while shopping and had to have a tetanus shot. Will Medicare cover this? — R.L.

Yes. For further information on Medicare, we have available our 1980 edition of our Medicare guidebook. To order, send $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381.

Laborers File Minimum Wage Suits

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sixty farm laborers have filed lawsuits in federal court accusing two Lamb County farmers of illegally contracting farm work in 1978 and 1979 and failing to pay workers the minimum wage.

The farm workers, all Mexican-Americans living in or near Earth, contend they were hired to work for Bill Watson and Weldon Barton by a third party not registered as a farm labor contractor with the Department of Labor.

And, according to the separate lawsuits prepared by Edward J. Tuddenham of Texas Rural Legal Aid, Inc., in Hereford, both Barton and Watson paid the laborers only $1.85 per hour for hoeing fields during the 1978-79 agricultural seasons.

All 60 of the farm workers are listed as plaintiffs in the suit against Watson. Thirty-six also initiated the similar legal action against Barton. Both lawsuits also ask the court to grant the petitions "representative" status for other farm workers they say also were illegally hired and underpaid by the Lamb County landowners.

The petitions, filed in Lubbock's U.S. District Court, allege that Barton and Watson approached Maximo Bosquez in June 1978 and June 1979 and asked Bosquez to recruit field workers.

However, the suits charge, Bosquez was not a registered farm recruiter as required by the federal Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act. And neither Barton nor Watson asked about Bosquez's status as a contractor when they asked him to find workers they could hire at $1.85 an hour, the suits contend.

The farm workers are asking that a jury hear the cases and then award the laborers $500 each for each proven violation against Watson and Barton. The workers also are seeking the additional money they would have made during those two seasons if they had received the federal minimum wage.

Christmas Special Slated At Monterey

Three hundred student musicians will perform Thursday night in the "Annual Band Christmas Spectacular" at Monterey High School Auditorium.

Four concert bands and three jazz ensembles will play in the 7 p.m. program.

Besides Monterey students and parents, guests will include residents of Lubbock Children's Home, Lubbock State School and city nursing homes.

Stuntman First To Break Sound Barrier On Land

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The Air Force says a movie stuntman has apparently become the first person to break the sound barrier on land, but his feat may not be universally acknowledged.

But the Air Force said afterwards that the record might not be sanctioned because the measuring equipment was not certified.

Barnett's dart-shaped vehicle was recorded as traveling at more than 600 mph with its 48,000-horsepower main engine before he added 6,000 pounds of thrust from a Sidewinder missile.

The Budweiser Rocket went zipping through the sound barrier to what the Air Force measured as Mach 1.0106 — a bit more than 1 percent over the speed of sound, car owner Hal Needham said.

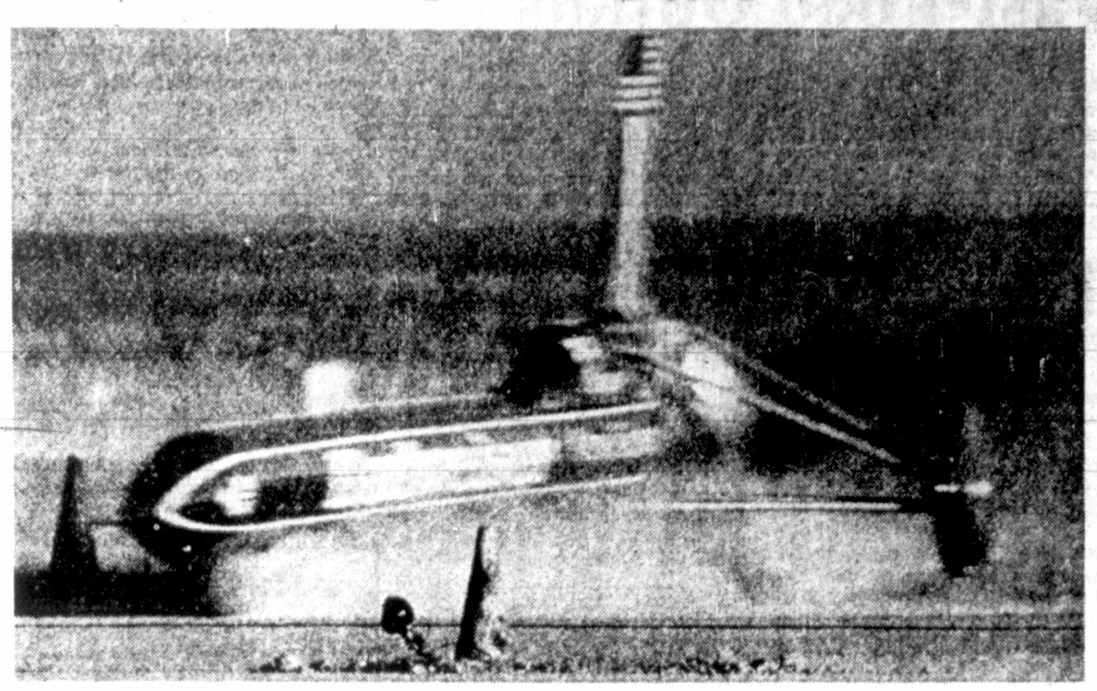
"When I hit the sidewinder I was really accelerating unbelievably," Barrett said. "I felt a lot of buffeting, then a period of smooth out, and then it was like it hit a wall but it turned pretty smooth again."

He said the biggest jolt came on slowing back through the barrier.

It was 10 hours before the Air Force issued its figures with a statement that its best engineeering practices were used to check the radar information, but that it was "not calibrated or certified" and "in our judgment this data would not be sanctioned."

But the Air Force's best was enough for Needham. "If people don't believe the Air Force, who will they believe?" he asked, expressing gratitude for loan of the facilities.

The rocket's airspeed indicator also showed 739 mph, Needham said.



BREAKS SOUND BARRIER — Driver Stan Barrett takes the Budweiser Rocket Car through the timing traps Monday at Edwards Air Force Base dry lake bed on his run of 739 miles-per-hour. The run was the fastest land speed timing and broke the sound barrier, according to car team members and U.S. Air Force timing equipment. The team members point to the ground pushed ahead of the wheels as evidence the speed of sound was surpassed. (AP Laserphoto)

The sound barrier varies with temperature. It is about 754 mph at 50 degrees but only about 732 mph at 20 degrees, as it was Monday.

Needham, producer of "Smokey and the Bandit" and "Hooper," estimates he has spent $1 million on the speed-of-sound quest.

"If we had to do it all over again, and I knew what it cost, I wouldn't have got into it," Needham said. But he said he expects to recoup most of the expense through automotive and other sponsors.

'Bona Fide' Explosive Device Found At Plant

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — A bomb found at the Bonneville Power Administration's Hatwai substation northeast of here could have caused millions of dollars in damage if it had exploded, officials say.

"It was a bona fide explosive device" with a timing mechanism that apparently shorted out, said Jay E. Bailey, FBI special agent.

Bureau Watching 'Population Bomb'

C NEWS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Wednesday, Dec. 19, 1979

WASHINGTON (AP) — The population bomb is still ticking and action is needed more than ever to ease the growth of the world's masses, the Population Reference Bureau reported Tuesday.

The bureau, a non-profit group studying population, did take heart in a slight decline in the rate of growth, down from 2 percent in the mid-1960s to about 1.7 percent now.

But even so, a new study by the bureau reports that the actual number of people added each year is growing, with the world gaining a million people every five days.

And, despite an expected further drop in the birth rate to about 1.5 percent, the world's population is likely to grow from the current 4 billion to 6 billion by the year 2000.

The study notes that obtaining a stable population depends on the world as a whole achieving replacement-level fertility, an average of about two childen per couple.

Because young people in or about to enter their reproductive years now far outnumber older persons, it would take another 60 or 70 years after reaching this goal before births and deaths come into balance and population stops growing, the report adds.

Childbearing is close to or below this level in many developed countries, including the United States and some European states.

Among some developing nations, which make up three-fourths of the world's population, birth rates have started down, but so have death rates.

China provided one bright spot in the report, with officials in that giant nation promoting the one-child family. China has cut its growth rate from 2.3 percent to 1.2 percent in the last seven years, according to the study. And Mexico, too, is becoming committed to reduced population growth, the bureau said.

However, birth rates remain high in other countries, such as Pakistan and Bangladesh, and rates are rising in parts of Africa where better health and nutrition have improved women's ability to bear children.

Finally, the study noted that many developing countries have recognized the problem and are emphasizing both population and development.

Plan To Shock Litterbugs In Progress

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — This city of about 800,000 people plans to shock litterbugs by letting rubbish pile up on the streets.

"The public must know that they are paying for the mess," says Johan Hendricks, the city anti-litter officer from the Municial Health Department.

He maintains angry phone calls and letters will soon swamp City Hall and he says this is just what the City Council hopes will happen.

The city engineer's department and the Health Department are behind the anti-litter battle and the first salvo will be fired soon after the new year.

"In certain areas of Johannesburg we will just leave the refuse until residents are very aware of the smell," Hendricks said.

•Manufacturers are to be urged to be more responsible about packaging. "The idea is to get them to use less unnecessary wrapping," says Hendricks.

Health inspectors and police already have authority to issue fines for littering, even for discarding a match or a cigarette. But few littering fines — the penalty is the equivalent of $60 — are issued. Only six fines were handed out last year. "This is because it is difficult to surprise people littering," he says.

The cost of picking up litter is $4.27 million a year and Hendricks says that's too much.

Every year, trash collected from the city's streets equals the space inside a football field-sized building three stories high.

He says the city considers litter to be "anything from cigarette ends to car wrecks."

CHINESE LINER LAUNCHED

TOKYO (AP) — A 600-passenger Chinese luxury liner left Amoy on a trial voyage for regular passenger service to Hong Kong, China's official Xinhua news agency reported Tuesday. The report said the ship left Monday, and said it would take about 20 hours, but did not say when regular service would begin.

Fast-Food Outlets Feeling Energy Crisis

NEW YORK (AP) — Five years ago, when the decade's first energy crisis and recession were in full swing, one of the few industries that defied analysts' most dire predictions of doom was the fast-food companies. This time, it looks like McDonald's, Wendy's and the other drive-in chains won't be so lucky.

The fast-food outlets are being hit from both sides: their costs are rising, as beef, poultry and other important ingredients become more expensive; and their customers ae staying away, both because of the reduction in driving as gasoline costs go up and because those higher fuel costs are cutting back on discretionary spending.

In 1974, the restaurant chains weren't as badly hit by the energy crisis and recession as had been expected, although many did experience declines in quarterly earnings. The industry's growth had been so strong for so many years that the momentum proved hard to stop. And what business was lost generally returned quickly as the economy got straightened out.

But now, analysts say, the going is rougher. For one thing, the industry's growth has led to increased competition. No longer do the larger companies, like McDonald's, have many markets virtually to themselves. The burgeoning number of firms have crowded many market areas.

And, some analysts say, the years of rampant growth may be over, and the industry will expand little faster than the rest of the economy.

"What's happening is a clear indication that the industry is maturing," the Value Line Investment Survey said in a recent report on fast-food firms. "Aggregate spending on food away from home, which has been garnering an increasing share of consumer food outlays since the 1960s, seemed likely to grow more in line with the economy as a whole in the years to come."

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith compared the economic conditions and the industry's statistics this year with those of five years ago and also found that conditions appeared to have changed and the effect of the energy crisis and recession on the fast-food industry would be more pronounced this time than last.

"These comparative figures, as well as the performance of chains generally, indicate that eating-out habits of consumers have been altered more in this economic cycle than in the preceding downturn," according to the Merrill Lynch report. "The effect is compounded in periods such as now when that portion of income that is 'discretionary' is contracting because of high inflation rates centered in necessities."

The fast-food industry, faced with these problems, has been taking steps to keep business as healthy as possible. McDonald's, in a widely publicized move, knocked a nickel off the prices of its hamburgers and cheeseburgers. Other chains have held prices stable despite rising costs.

"These strategies should raise the perceived value of eating out," said the Merrill Lynch report.

The analysts aren't writing off the fast-food industry. They're just being much more cautious.

"We're not trying to convey through this discussion that the fast-food industry has run out of steam," said the Value Line report. "Quite the contrary, the best-managed chains will continue to expand at the expense of the also-rans and small, independent operators.

"The point is, it has become tougher to stay successful than it was to get there in the first place," Value Line added. "And the industry will hereafter be subject to periodic setbacks when the economy slackens."

WOMAN DIES OF EXPOSURE

DALLAS (AP) — A 59-year-old Dallas woman became the city's first victim of cold weather Monday when she died of exposure to sub-freezing temperatures before dawn. The woman was found lying on a sidewalk several streets away from her house. Her identity was withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Foundation Wants To Move Into Funeral Home

DETROIT (AP) — The Synanon Foundation has renewed its efforts to obtain a city permit allowing it to move into a funeral home it owns near downtown Detroit.

A representative of Detroit's Zoning Board of Appeals said Monday that the controversial religious, alcohol and drug rehabilitation group is appealing the denial of its request to occupy the building.

Synanon appealed the denial once, but withdrew it in late October before a public hearing could be held. Several weeks later, Synanon put the house up for sale for $215,000.

The group was denied an occupany permit because the city said the building lacked sufficient front, side and rear yards and off-street parking.

The real estate agent handling the sale said he was unaware of Synanon's decision to appeal the denial.

Synanon, launched 21 years ago in California, has come under fire in recent years for unorthodox techniques and alleged involvement in crime in California. The group has denied the allegations.

OFFICEHOLDER SWITCHES

DALLAS (AP) — State Rep. Clay Smothers, stopping just short of announcing as a candidate for Congress, Monday became the third Dallas County Democratic officeholder since September to switch to the Republican Party. Smothers said he would challenge Democratic U.S. Rep. Martin Frost next year in the 24th Congressional District if he could be assured of raising enough money.

Inflation-Battered Americans Cut Back On Gifts

NEW YORK (AP) — Inflation-battered Americans say they are cutting back on holiday gift-giving and entertainment because prices have continued to climb steadily throughout the past year, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

And the public sees no relief from inflation coming in 1980, the poll also found.

The AP-NBC News poll was conducted Dec. 11-12 — the middle of the gift-buying season — and is based on telephone interviews with 1,595 adults across the country.

Sixty-one percent of those questioned said they are cutting back on holiday gifts and entertainment because such traditional activities are more expensive this year. Thirty-seven percent said they are not cutting back and two percent were not sure.

This cutting back comes as Americans foresee prices continuing to rise through the next 12 months.

Sixty percent of the public think inflation will worsen next year, a dire prophecy, indeed, since inflation in the past year has been the worst in nearly 30 years in this country. Twenty-eight percent said inflation will continue along at its current rate for the coming months. Nine percent said inflation will slow down and 3 percent were not sure.

This view of the future course of prices has remained relatively stable for the past three months and is almost identical to the public's view of inflation in November 1978.

Forty-five percent now say that the economy will get worse in the next 12 months, while only 14 percent expect improvement. Thirty-six percent see no change in the economic picture and 5 percent were not sure.

Although this is not an optimistic view, it is the brightest forecast of the economy by Americans generally since October 1978. The main change in the public perception has been a shift from pessimism about the economy to a greater sentiment that there will be little change in the nation's economic health.

For example, in the November AP-NBC News poll, 50 percent said they expect the economy to worsen, and 18 percent expected improvement. Twenty-nine percent said they expect no change and 3 percent were not sure.

The dark view of the economic future is also reflected in the public opinion of President Carter's handling of economic problems.

Nineteen percent said Carter is doing an excellent or good job on the economy, while 35 percent said he is doing a poor job. Forty-two percent said he is doing an "only fair" job on economic problems. Four percent were not sure.

This low rating of Carter on the economy stands in sharp contrast to his much higher rating generally and on foreign policy. It is a sign that although the public backs Carter strongly in the confrontation with Iran, it is still quite unhappy with his efforts on the economy — which could well be a major issue in the 1980 presidential nomination and election campaigns.

As with every sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all those with telephones across the country because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with about 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percentage points either way simply because of sample error. That is, if one could talk to all adults in the country, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could also vary because of differences in question wording, timing of the interviews and the methods of interviewing.

Poll On Economy, Gifts Conducted

NEW YORK (AP) — Here are some of the questions asked on the AP-NBC News poll on holiday gift-giving and the economy:

1. What kind of a job do you think Jimmy Carter is doing handling the economy? Do you think he is doing an excellent job, a good job, only a fair job or do you think he is doing a poor job?

2. During the next year, do you think the economy will get better, get worse or stay about the same?

3. During the next year, do you think inflation will get better, get worse or stay about the same?

4. Compared to last year, are you cutting back on holiday gifts and entertainment because of the higher prices of such things?

Officials Differ On Race Relations

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Civil rights officials have differing opinions on the state of race relations here since the deaths Nov. 3 of five Communist Workers Party members during an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally.

The North Carolina Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has scheduled a public hearing for Feb. 26 on race relations in the city in Greensboro after questioning Jim Wright, director of the Greensboro Human Rights Commission, and George Simpkins, president of the Greensboro chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Wright said race relations in Greensboro are questionable and received a setback from the shootings. But Simpkins said the deaths "didn't make race relations any worse" and could, in fact, help improve them.

The five died after gunfire erupted at an anti-Klan rally in one of the city's predominantly black neighborhoods. Fourteen men are scheduled to go on trial next month in the case. Eleven are charged with murder and rioting while three are charged with rioting only.

Many of those charged are self-proclaimed Nazis and Klansmen.

"Obviously race relations in Greensboro have taken a tailspin," said Bobby Doctor, the Atlanta-based regional director for the commission. "If the situation is as bad as some people would have us believe, the President and Congress need to know."

Doctor said the federal commission will begin a nationwide investigation of the Klan and Nazis, and the advisory committee will begin to monitor the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Justice Department in connection with the shootings.

A second anti-Klan demonstration is scheduled to be held in Greensboro on Feb. 2. Doctor predicted it will be very large.

Organizations from across the nation — including civil rights, labor, legal, religious groups as well as others who have supported civil rights demonstrations in the past — will be invited to march, he said.

CAREERS

By JOYCE LAIN KENNEDY

Forecasters of gloom and recession for the '80s are disputed by many market planners and economists, making for a less than unanimous view of what's ahead.

Despite a bumpy beginning at the turn of the decade, brighter-side analysts expect economic troubles to ease by 1982 and — assuming no war, energy collapse or crippling raw materials shortages — say the nation may well be headed for a new growth surge, one that's ready-made for entrepreneurs.

Among signs of the Enterprising '80s are these:

•The growing desire for the independence and possible financial rewards of business ownership is reflected in the boom of management studies — enrollments in night business schools rose 420 percent between 1973 and 1978.

A government booklet, "Small Business Goes to College" lists more than 200 higher education institutions offering entrepreneurial courses. If you want a copy, send $3.25 to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. 20402 and include stock number 045-000-00159-8.

•Women and minorities now are seeing business ownership as a direct route to economic mainstreaming. Women willing to take the risk can capitalize on the Small Business Administration's workshops and seminars, schedules for which may be obtained by contacting any of the SBA's 63 field offices.

The new Women's Business Owners Orientation Program offers start-up counseling and instruction at community colleges; get details from the Center for Women's Opportunities, One Dupont Circle N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

•Small business publications are mushrooming, from bound texts to mail-order manuals to magazines. Enterprising Women, until now a newsletter, blossoms into a full-blown magazine next month — details are available from the periodical at 217 E. 28th St., New York, NY 10017.

•Stepped up political clout for the nation's 14 million small businesses is on the horizon. A spin-off of the White House Conference on Small Business next month is likely to be a uniform constituency, a more powerful lobby.

Several universal problems plague smalls, say business leaders, including discriminatory taxation compared to large corporations and the lack of access to capital.

Proposals being floated in Washington — ranging from tax equalization, to tax incentives for small business investments — could, by partly overcoming thse obstacles, further spur entrepreneurism in the coming decade.

And that's not a bad idea. Stahrl Edwards, dean of the graduate school of administration at the University of California, Riverside, says 87 percent of new employment in the economy since 1969 has been created by small business.

If you're an entrepreneurial dreamer, tread into business waters with great care; help change this statistic — 80 percent of all new companies fail within their first decadse.

CHRISTMAS DISPLAY OPENS

HOUSTON (AP) — An annual Christmas display of 19th and 20th century toys has opened at the San Jacinto Museum of History. Included are dolls, handmade doll furniture, trains, games and paper soldiers. The San Jacinto Battleground State Park museum is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

COUNTY PAYS FOR TRIAL

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County has paid Nueces County $22,816 for the second trial of Elmer Wayne Henley, who received six concurrent life sentences in the 1973 homosexual murder cases in which the bodies of 26 youths were recovered. Henley was tried in June in Corpus Christi after an appellate court overturned similar convictions during a 1974 change of venue trial in San Antonio.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I are retired. Our annual income consists of $6,600 from Social Security, $1,700 interest and dividends from investments and approximately $2,600 from a $32,000 individual retirement account (IRA).

The IRA is at a savings and loan association (S&L) and pays 8 percent. We draw this interest quarterly. We are considering moving the IRA to a money market mutual fund which currently pays about 12 percent and taking our interest monthly.

We wonder if this would be a wise move. Is the money market mutual fund likely to continue to pay considerably more than the S&L IRA? It is our understanding that an IRA can be moved only once every three years.

A. Right now, it would be a wise move, because you would increase your income from the IRA account by about 50 percent.

Most S&L and banks pay 8 percent interest on IRAs and "Keogh plan" accounts — the later being retirement plans set up by self-employed persons.

Money market mutual funds pay the same dividends on IRAs and Keogh plans as they do on all their other accounts. These days, many money market mutual funds have yields of 12 percent or a bit higher. These high yields result from the tremendous increase in the interest rates on the short-term money market instruments in which money market funds invest.

How long will those rates stay sky-high? My crystal ball shatters at that question. A bit more than a year ago, money market mutual funds yielded less than 8 percent. But it's unlikely they will drop to that level in the immediate future.

My bet — no guaranty -is that an investment in a well-managed money market mutual fund today will produce a yield of better than 8 percent over the next 12 months.

The time span is important. Before 1978, you could switch your IRA only after three years. Now, however, only one year must elapse.

Q. You often advise readers to invest in no-load mutual funds, rather than mutual funds which charge commissions on the purchase of their shares.

Funds which charge sales commissions do not deduct anything when their shares are redeemed, whereas no-load funds charge redemption fees. It seems to me that one balances out the other.

Am I wrong?

A. Dead wrong! Although a fair number of mutual funds charged redemption fees in years gone by, that practice is now virtually non-existent.

The latest issue of Wiesenberger Investment Companies Services — which is regarded as the "bible" of the fund business — lists only seven mutual funds with redemption fees. Six charge 1 percent of the value of shares redeemed — cashed in. The other charges a flat $1.50.

Anyway, because the typical commission on a load fund is 8 1/2 percent, it would take an 850 percent increase in a mutual fund's share value for a 1 percent redemption fee to "balance out" the load. Show me a fund that can do that and I'll put the family fortune into it.

• • •

Q. I have a number of Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, but their total redemption value is less than the $500 I will need to exchange them for the smallest denomination series HH bond which will go on sale in 1980.

Is there any way I can exchange these E bonds for an HH bond, without waiting for the redemption value of the E bonds to reach $500?

A. Yes. You can turn in the E bonds you now own, at their current redemption value, and put up cash to make up the $500. You'll become the owner of the smallest denomination HH bond. A bank or any other paying agent for U.S. Savings Bonds will handle the details for you.

Gold Prices Soar As OPEC Deliberates

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold passed $480 an ounce for the first time ever Tuesday as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries continued to meet to decide how much to raise oil prices.

There was no word of a decision by the oil producers, but December gold futures closed at $481, up $12.80 at New York's Commodity Exchange.

Earlier, gold closed at $479.50 in London, up $9.50 from Monday and a record high for that market. In Zurich, gold rose to $477, a $7.50 increase for the day.

The U.S. dollar was mixed, rising against the Swiss franc, Japanese yen, British ound and Canadian dollar but declining against other currencies.

Gold dealers reported "substantial volume in a nervous market" as investors bid up the price of gold amid fears the rising price of oil will set off a new round of inflation throughout the world.

The Iranian crisis has also played a role in the rising price of gold, which has climbed more than $100 an ounce since the hostages were seized Nov. 4.

"It's causing a very jittery feeling in Europe," one New York trader said of the Iranian situation.

"I think you have a lot of Arab money buying gold, money that was withdrawn from the U.S. after the Iranian (asset) freze," added Louis Vigdor, an assistant vice president of Manfra, Tordella & Brooks, a major gold trading firm.

It has been nearly two months since the last U.S. Treasury gold sale, Vigdor noted, causing some dealers to think "the U.S. may no longer make large sales."

The U.S. suspended its policy of monthly gold sales in October in an effort to inject uncertainty into the market. It said it would announce sales when it saw fit to do so, and an announcement of a major sale has been rumored for several weeks.

In sharp contrast to gold, the foreign exchange markets saw "extremely light" trading Tuesday. "Nobody's doing anything," said one trader.

Sharp rises in gold once matched declines in the dollar, but that has not been the case recently. "Gold now is the refuge from all currencies, rather than the refuge from the dollar," said a New York currency trader.

The dollar rose against the the Japanese yen, closing in Tokyo at 241.40 yen, up from 239.80 Monday. In New York, the dollar closed at 239.50 yen, up from 238.45.

The dollar also improved marginally in London, where it cost $2.1990 to buy one British pound against $2.2010 late Monday. In New York, the pound slipped to $2.1998 from $2.2010 Monday.

Late dollar rates in Europe, compared to Monday, were: Paris, 4.0675 French francs, down from 4.070; Frankfurt, 1.7345 West German marks, down from 1.7375; Zurich, 1.60925 Swiss francs, up from 1.6075; Amsterdam, 1.9150 guilders, down from 1.9155, and Milan, 809.70 lire, down from 813.40.

Other late New York dollar rates, compared with Monday, were: 1.7302 West German marks, down from 1.7352; 4.0545 French francs, down from 4.0720; 1.6050 Swiss francs, up from 1.6045, and $1.1745 Canadian, up from $1.1740.

Effective Date Of Court Ruling Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to delay for three months the effective date of a court ruling that otherwise would outlaw interest-paying checking-type accounts in 43 states on Jan. 1.

However, a disagreement between the House and Senate over an unrelated issue — the problem of state usury laws — continued to threaten final action on postponement of the court decision.

The Senate tacked onto the three-month court delay wording to waive state usury laws for periods of from three to 18 months, depending on the type of loan.

On Monday, the House approved a three-month postponement of the court decision, but rejected a Senate proposal to override state usury laws permanently.

Usury laws limit how much interest a bank can charge on a loan. During the current period of high interest rates, they have been blamed for making mortgage money hard to obtain in about 20 states.

The Senate bill, approved by voice vote, now goes back to the House which can either accept the Senate version or continue the disagreement by changing it again.

Both the House and Senate versions would delay until March 31, 1980, the effective date of a federal court ruling that otherwise would prohibit interest-bearing checking-type accounts outside of New York and New England.

If Congress fails to approve a delay in the court ruling before it adjourns Friday, credit union share draft accounts and automatic savings-to-checking transfer accounts would be outlawed as of Jan. 1.

Such accounts, which allow millions of consumers to receive interest on their money until it is needed to cover a check, were ruled unlawful by the U.S. Appeals Court in Washington last April. However, the court gave Congress until Jan. 1 to authorize such accounts.

Both houses have approved legislation to legalize interest-bearing checking accounts nationwide but the bills have been tied up in a House-Senate conference committee deadlocked over other proposed changes in the nation's banking laws.

'Free Lunch' For Advertisers Charged

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission's action allowing gas companies to recover part of their advertising costs in their rates is a "free lunch" for newspapers and broadcasters, a spokesman for nine consumer groups said Tuesday.

Jack Hopper, an Austin economic consultant, told a news conference the commission order would edge gas rates up slightly but mainly was a "symbolic decision against consumers."

The commission voted Monday to allow gas utilities to collect advertising costs from customers, with a limit of 0.2 percent of their gross receipts.

Pioneer Natural Gas of Amarillo has asked the commission to allow up to 0.5 percent for both advertising and charitable contributions.

The commission, however, refused to allow gas companies to recover their donations.

A comparable agency, the Texas Public Utility Commission, lets telephone and electric companies collect for both contributions and advertising, up to 0.3 percent of gross revenue.

"The Railroad Commission, our regulatory Scrooge, has given the Christmas goose to utilities, the grease to consumers," Hopper said of the advertising pass-through.

He said the commission action "puts the lie to the question of whether there is a free lunch." He called the order the Texas newspaper and broadcasters' free lunch. "Publishers and broadcasters testified before the commission in favor of letting gas utilities pass advertising expenses on to consumers."

Hopper said the activity of publishers and station owners was "part of the economic pressure that caused the Railroad Commission to make this decision."

Asked if he expected newspapers and radio and television stations to remain silent on an issue affecting their revenue, Hopper said, "I'm not saying they shouldn't do it but I am going to point my finger at them and say they are anti-consumer."

Hopper spoke for the Electric Consumers of Texas Inc., a coalition that includes Texas Public Interest Research Group, Citizens for Equitable Utilities and Citizens for Fair Utility Rates.

He also criticized the commission for recent decisions that:

•Make its rate decisions on gas utility company appeals from city council rate actions retroactive to the day the original city case was filed.

•Allow gas companies to change the test period for rate data when they appeal to the commission from city council rate decisions.

Hopper said he feared the commission would adopt an examiner's report allowing Lone Star Gas Co. to pass through 100 percent of the price it pays producers for gas.

"We are discouraged by these anti-consumer changes. We hope they don't mean a return to the bad old days when the commission openly bragged that it served the industry," he said.

BUYERS WANT DECREASE

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission reported Tuesday major buyers of Texas crude oil want to buy 2,671,478 barrels a day in January, a decrease of 1,495 barrels a day from this month. A commission statement Monday incorrectly reported January purchaser nominations at 2,557,178 barrels daily, which represented a decrease of 115,795 barrels.

Morris Udall Downplays Endorsements, Gives Nod To Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Endorsements in recent years have not been a major factor in elections," said Rep. Morris Udall on Tuesday, as he endorsed the presidential candidacy of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

For whatever value endorsements have — and many politicians agree with Udall that they don't have much — the campaign stragetegists for President Carter and Kennedy are hard at work to get as many as they can.

The Kennedy camp is aware that the incumbent president has a big advantage when it comes to asking for the support of Democratic governors and mayors around the country.

"We're aware the president could run up a long list of endorsements," said a Kennedy campaign aide.

And, indeed, he has.

According to the Carter-Mondale campaign committee, about 100 Democratic members of the House and several senators already have declared their support for the president. Carter also has the support of a long list of governors and mayors, many of whom are dependent on keeping the flow of federal funds to their constituents.

Kennedy aides describe a lot of that support as "soft," backing that will melt away quickly if Kennedy demonstrates in the early primaries that he has a strong public following.

New York is a case in point.

Kennedy held a fund-raising dinner at the Hotel Pierre in New York City a week ago. The audience was a celebrity watchers delight: Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, Lauren Bacall, Oleg Cassini, Patrick O'Neal.

Missing were Mayor Edward Koch, who's backing Carter; Gov. Hugh Carey; and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who sounded Kennedy out last summer about whether he would get into the race but now are holding back their endorsements.

Moynihan has asked Kennedy and Carter for their positions on a variety of domestic and foreign policy issues and has said he will not endorse anyone before 1980, if then. "1979 is the year to govern and 1980 is the year for politics," said Moynihan.

Carey, who was hinting strongly that he would back Kennedy, pulled back when there were signs the senator's campaign was off to an uncertain start.

Kennedy's New York campaign would have smoother going if the Democratic governor and the Democratic senator jumped on board.

Kennedy's public position is that he's not worried, that he understands and is confident Carey and Moynihan will back him in due time.

Privately, the senator may enjoy imagining the scene, after his election, when Carey or Moynihan or both come to him in search of a Cabinet post and he asks where they were in the early, rough days of the campaign.

And when it comes to soft support, the softest of the 1980 campaign thus far was Mayor Jane Byrne's statement at a Chicago dinner, President Carter at her side, that "if the election were held tonight I would support the president."

As she later explained, after endorsing Kennedy, "the election wasn't held that night."

That background made it all the more significant Tuesday when Udall announced his endorsement. He said he told Kennedy that "I was being advised by a lot of people, including my wife and a number of staffers, to stay neutral."

But the Arizona congressman went on to say that it wasn't his style to hold back on saying whom he thought people should support.

"The safe and sane way to protect your own base and your own future is generally to be neutral and friendly to everybody and try to detect that infinitesimal microsecond before the bandwagon gets rolling and jump aboard," said Udall.

And while Udall said that "on a large range of issues I find Sen. Kennedy's policies are closer to mine than President Carter's," he added that his endorsement was "pro-Kennedy, not anti-Carter."

The congressman said he didn't think Carter's current high standing in public opinion polls would be sustained after the release of the American hostages in Iran.

"This administration didn't start 44 days ago," he said. "The pocketbook issues are going to be the key issues."

He also dismissed assessments that Kennedy's campaign is off to a rocky start.

Udall said the senator is "a victim of this idealized version" of what a Kennedy campaign should be like.

Saying he expected Kennedy to run better in Arizona than Carter, Udall added that neither could carry the state against any of the leading Republican contenders.

Circus Owner Shoots 'Outlaw' Lions

MIAMI (AP) — Five performing lions who worked the center ring for Hoxie Brothers Circus have been shot to death after they became "outlaws" and the circus couldn't give them away.

Hoxie Tucker, owner of the Miami-based circus, said the lions couldn't be controlled by lion tamer Michael Cecere, 22, who had been "bit and scratched" by the cats several times. "I was afraid of them," Tucker said. "I convinced him that he was going to get killed. He was scared to death of them, too."

Tucker, who has been in the circus business for 55 of his 70 years, said two of the lions were old and should have been put away, but the other three were about 10 or 12 years old. Lions, valued at about $200 each, live 25 years or more in captivity.

Tucker, who said it was costing him about $350 a week to feed them, said he's never had to kill lions before and was so upset that he left town after telling his general manager to destroy them.

Accounts Of September Shooting Differ

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Several Lubbock men Tuesday afternoon told a 140th District Court jury they saw Nathaniel McDade shoot Arthur Lee Jones early Sept. 8 without apparent provocation.

But the witnesses gave differing accounts of the shooting and who was in the area of the incident which occurred on a sidewalk in front of an East Lubbock apartment complex.

Lovis Clifton, who also lives at an apartment in the 400-block of 17th Street, said he saw Jones, 47, standing on the sidewalk facing the apartment complex when McDade came up behind Jones. Clifton said when Jones turned to see who was behind him, McDade pulled a nickle-plated pistol and fired once at Jones' head.

After the shooting, Clifton testified, McDade walked away from Jones and then returned and it appeared he was going to kick the lifeless body.

Clifton said he told McDade to leave Jones alone because he was dead. "He (McDade) said 'He ought to be dead,' and then walked back down the street," Clifton said.

On cross-examination, however, Clifton told defense counsel Floyd Holder, he was talking to another man and really didn't give his full attention to the happenings between the 25-year-old defendant and Jones.

"The pistol went off and I looked," Clifton said.

Holder also rigorously questioned the observations of the other witnesses called Tuesday afternoon by prosecutors Mark McBride and Travis Ware.

One witness, William Louis Thomas, told the seven-man, five-woman panel he followed McDade out to the sidewalk where Jones was standing facing the street. Thomas said McDade positioned himself to the right of Jones and also faced the street.

And Thomas testified that it looked as if the gun McDade fired was next to Jones' head when it went off. Thomas said he was near enough to suffer powder burns around his eyes from the bullet which struck Jones in the right-middle section of his forehead.

Thomas said after the shooting, McDade "said something about he (Jones) ought to be dead and he's (McDade) going to kill a bunch more."

McDade re-entered the apartment then, Thomas said, and threatened another man with the pistol.

The man McDade allegedly threatened after the shooting incident, Joe Lee Mackey, told the jury Jones was angry with McDade because of some drugs Jones had given one of McDade's female friends.

Mackey said it was his understanding Jones believed McDade had told police Jones gave a woman some methadone, a drug most commonly used by recovering heroin addicts.

Mackey said that before the 1:30 a.m. Sept. 8 shooting, McDade and Jones had exchanged words at a 13th Street pool hall and Jones left. He said the pair also argued about the ownership of clothing before going into the 17th Street apartment before the shooting.

Mackey told the jury he saw Jones leave the apartment, followed about a minute later by McDade and then heard a shot. Mackey said McDade came back into the apartment, told Mackey he wanted some clothing back and "rapped me across the head with the pistol."

After being struck by McDade, Mackey testified, he ran from the apartment and hid behind a cafe down the street. He said he saw McDade, his female companion and her son walk down the street a few moments later, McDade still carrying the pistol.

A third witness to the incident said he saw McDade and Jones standing as described by Thomas, but that he never saw Thomas in the immediate area. And, Robert Earl Wilson said, he could not say that Jones had been standing in the unthreatening position of having his arms crossed against his chest.

Wilson, the man who drove McDade from his 1515 Ave. C apartment to the shooting site, said the "street talk" after the shooting was that Jones had his arms crossed. Clifton and Thomas testified that was how Jones was standing when McDade shot him.

Wilson also said the gun was about five inches from Jones head, not next to it as Thomas had testified. The gun McDade used, Wilson said, was Wilson's 38-caliber nickle-plated pistol and usually was kept in the car glove box.

After the shooting, Wilson said, he got in his car and left and later picked McDade up as he was walking toward Avenue A. Later Sept. 8, Wilson said, he accompanied McDade to the police department, where McDade turned himself in to authorities.

One Killed, Five Injured In Dorm Explosion

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — One man was killed and five persons were injured Tuesday when an explosion rocked a dormitory at Washington State University, authorities said.

The mid-afternoon explosion occurred on the fifth floor of Perham Hall, a seven-story, co-ed dorm.

The man killed was not believed to be a student at the university, said Dick Fry, manager of the university news bureau. Fry said the man had been seen on Tuesday carrying a canvas satchel with batteries visible. His body was buried in rubble on the heavily damaged floor, Fry said.

Two campus police officers were among the injured, Fry said. David Trimble, 26, was being treated for burns, while Lt. Michael R. Kenny, 35, was expected to be treated and released, he said.

Police said a man reportedly attempted to visit a woman student in the dormitory Monday night. On Tuesday, the same man was seen driving around the building.

Dean of Students Arthur McCartan said the man apparently entered the building Tuesday afternoon and went to the woman student's room.

The woman student called the female head resident, who then called police. The woman student and the head resident persuaded the man to return to the lobby and they locked themselves in the room, Fry said. However, the visitor returned and reportedly kicked the door open.

The two women fled from the room and police arrived just as the explosion occurred, Fry said.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL PHONE 762-8821

The Avalanche-Journal means value. Value that is both tangible and intangible.

Intangible value that comes with the quality of news coverage you receive by reading The Avalanche-Journal — a level of editorial excellence on the local, national and international levels unparalleled in West Texas.

Then there are the tangible benefits derived from reading the Avalanche-Journal. The cash benefits. The money you can save by subscribing to the A-J.

For instance, we publish a variety of store coupons each week. By using just some of them, you can save enough on purchases to more than pay for that week's A-J. Add to this the many advertised sales and your savings are greater.

All this boils down to one point. Subscribing to The Avalanche-Journal is more than getting a newspaper. It's making a profitable investment.

Glamor Issues Lead Retreat

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's rally of the past several weeks gave way to sellers Tuesday in a retreat led by glamor issues.

The most notable exception to the downtrend was the gold mining stocks, which advanced broadly as gold prices hit new highs again, topping $480 an ounce in New York.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 40 points from its early-November low through Monday's close, dropped back 5.97 to 838.65.

Point-plus gainers in the gold mining group included Homestake Mining, up 2½ at 44⅜ as of the 4 p.m. close in New York; Dome Mines, up 2⅜ at 50⅞, and ASA Ltd., up 1⅛ at 37¼.

ASA, a closed-end investment company with holdings concentrated in South African gold shares, reported that its asset value per share rose to $42.27 as of Nov. 30, versus $21.23 a year earlier.

TV Ratings Lead Changes Hands

NEW YORK (AP) — First place in the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s weekly prime-time ratings changed hands for the fourth week in a row, with ABC winning the networks' competition and CBS' "60 Minutes" the most-watched program.

CBS listed six of the 10 highest-rated shows in the week ending Dec. 16. But ABC did well from there on, and managed, with one exception, to avoid the bottom five in the week's rankings.

ABC's rating for the week was 19.9, to 19 for CBS and 16.6 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.9 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were tuned to ABC.

ABC and CBS have swapped first place each of the last four weeks, and ABC leads the ratings race for the season so far.

For NBC, it was the eighth last-place finish in nine weeks, after a quick start that led to speculation that last year's No. 3 network was about to turn it around.

The first-place finish for "60 Minutes" was the newsmagazine's third in six weeks. CBS has built its challenge to ABC's predominance in the ratings on regular series, like "60 Minutes" and "One Day at a Time," No. 2 in the most recent ratings.

CBS did get a boost from a special, "The 4th Annual Circus of the Stars," which tied for third with ABC's "Three's Company." ABC scored meanwhile with "NFL Monday Night Football."

The rating for "60 Minutes" was 31.5. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 31.5 percent saw at least part of the program.

NBC and CBS each had two of the week's five lowest-rated shows, behind ABC's "Out of the Blue," ranked 67th. "Paris," on CBS, was 68th, followed by "Prime Time Sunday" and "Shirley," both from NBC, and "California Fever," from CBS.

"60 Minutes," with a rating of 31.5 representing 24 million homes, and "One Day at a Time," 28.2 or 21.5 million, both CBS. "The 4th Annual Circus of the Stars," CBS, and "Three's Company," ABC, both 27.2 or 20.8 million. "Archie Bunker's Place," 26.5 or 20.2 million, CBS. "Angie," 26 or 19.8 million, ABC. "Dallas," 25.7 or 19.6 million, and "M-A-S-H," 25.5 or 19.5 million, both CBS, and "NFL Monday Night Football," Pittsburgh vs. Houston, 25.1 or 19.2 million, and "Happy Days," 25 or 19.1 million, both ABC.

The next 10 shows:

Check-Forging Scandal Center Named MGM Division President

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Begelman, center of a check-forging scandal at Columbia Pictures, has been named president of the motion picture division of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer effective Jan. 15, it was announced Tuesday.

Frank E. Rosenfelt, president of Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Inc., said he was "very pleased" that Begelman is joining MGM.

"He brings to the company more than 25 years experience in every phase of the motion picture and television business, and his background as talent agent, independent producer and corporate executive makes him eminently qualified to participate prominently as MGM moves into its new era of revitalized filmmaking activities," Rosenfelt said.

Begelman, 59, is currently an independent producer at Columbia Pictures, for which he formerly served as president of the movie and television division until he was forced to resign in 1978.

Columbia disclosed that Begelman had forged $40,000 in phony checks on the studio's account. Actor Cliff Robertson, who was listed as the payee on one $10,000 check, blew the whistle on Begelman.

The studio, however, refused to issue a complaint against Begelman and resisted removing him as chief executive. He resigned when publicity caused Columbia's stock to plummet and the district attorney launched an investigation.

He pleaded no contest to grand theft charges and was placed on probation on the condition that he make a public service film. A year later, a judge reduced and dismissed the charges and released Begelman from probation. The judge praised his film, "Angel Death," about the dangers of the drug PCP, also called "angel dust."

The appointment of Begelman signals a renewed interest in filmmaking by MGM, which in recent years has concentrated heavily on hotels and gambling casino operations.

Begelman is credited with saving Columbia from near financial ruin with a string of hit motion pictures, including "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Guilty Plea Entered By Former RCA Head

Conrad, 59, a resident of Gibson Island, Md., admitted to to one count of obstructing governmental administration. Manhattan Criminal Court Judge Milton Samoridin fined him $1,000 and ordered his fingerprints taken to determine if there are any outstanding warrants for him.

Conrad resigned from RCA in September, 1976, after acknowledging he failed to file personal federal, state and local income tax returns from 1971 to 1975. In his letter of resignation, Conrad said his total tax obligation was $704,292 for the five-year period. But he maintained that $684,618 was returned through payroll deductions, leaving a net deficiency of $21,103, including interest.

Stephen Somerstein, a lawyer for the State Tax Commission, said that Conrad "has satisfied all outstanding tax claims."

Performer Beats 'Too Available' Rap By Moving To Connecticut

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There's something about performers' availability and proximity which alienates the producers and directors who hire them; the familiarity-breeds-contempt syndrome.

The manifestation is akin to the guy married to a beautiful woman who lusts for the plain Jane down the street. Availability and proximity.

Few things wet a producer's desire for a performer more than assurances of his or her unattainability. Superstars are an exception. Most of them are chronically unavailable.

But to character actors, second leads and other established entertainers who must work for a living, proximity can be a genuine disadvantage — attending too many parties, being seen on too many game shows.

If the actor's agent bugs producers or casting directors on a daily basis seeking work for his client, word filters down that so-and-so is getting desperate. His asking price is inevitably lowered.

Hollywood is filled with familiar names and faces of extraordinarily talented individuals who, like faithful spouses, are taken for granted and thus pretty much ignored by the Hollywood establishment.

Frank Gorshin was one of the well-known and respected faces around Hollywood. But he was not greatly in demand for movies or TV shows.

No one questioned the actor-comedian-singer and impressionist was a major talent. He also was certifiably available, his proximity close.

While Gorshin was far from unemployed, he wasn't really in the big time either. He played the top clubs around the country and was a regular at Las Vegas' Aladdin hotel.

But he didn't play Los Angeles. Nobody does. There isn't a first rate nightclub in Hollywood, again probably because of proximity. Who would pay to see a comic or singer in a club when they can be invited to dinner?

About 2 1/2 years ago Gorshin and his wife, Christina, moved to Greenwich, Conn. Christina lived in terror of earthquakes for one thing. Also, Gorshin felt he needed a change of scenery.

"It was coincidental, I guess, but I had to move away from the center of show business to succeed in it," Gorshin said. "We chose Connecticut because we really liked the place when I was doing 'Jimmy' on Broadway 10 years ago.

"I wanted to work more in movies and television. I grew resentful and frustrated and began developing bad attitudes. I was spending six months a year on the road as a comic and impressionist but nothing in Hollywood.

"Now, as a resident of Conecticut, I'm still doing clubs half the year but I'm working as an actor in my first picture in six years. Earlier this year I did a guest shot in a two-part episode of 'Buck Rogers.'"

Gorshin's film assignment is a starring role in "Underground Aces" for American International Pictures. The story deals with the misadventures of a wild set of characters in an underground parking garage. Gorshin plays the head of security.

"I think this picture is going to make a lot of noise," he said. "If it does, then maybe it will have the same impact that 'Batman' had for me a dozen years ago when my career wasn't going that great.

"Until then I'd never been a headliner in clubs. In Vegas I Was usually the opening act for a big star. But after I played The Riddler in 'Batman' everything opened up for me.

"I played all the important rooms in the country. It was really a demonstration of the power of television.

"The man who directed me in the 'Batman' pilot was Bob Butler. I hadn't seen him in all the years since. He's the director of 'Underground Aces.'

"Maybe it's an omen that more good things are in store for me. I'm not against the idea of having a little good luck. I've had my share of bad luck.

"I was back east years ago when I got a good role with Clark Gable in 'Run Silent, Run Deep.' I was driving through Oklahoma and fell asleep at the wheel. I woke up in a hospital four days later and the part went to Don Rickles.

"Then I got a part in a western, 'Warlock,' which required me to ride a horse. I fell off the horse and broke my leg and played the rest of the picture in a cast — the only guy who didn't ride.

"Things weren't much different when I guested on a Tennessee Ernie Ford television special. During rehearsal I Backed to the edge of the stage and fell into the orchestra pit. Broke my ankle and did the show in a cast.

"My luck is due to change. If 'Underground Aces' is a hit, I'd like to star in a Broadway play — which probably means I'll have to move back to Hollywood so I won't appear to be too available back east."

'Star Trek' Movie Sets New Record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Star Trek — The Motion Picture" has taken in more than $17 million during its first week, setting a new motion picture industry record, Paramount Pictures says.

At that time, however, ticket prices were lower than the $6 being charged by some theaters for "Star Trek."

Australia, dry and sparsely vergetated, has the biggest cattle ranches in the world. One, the Barkly Downs, covers 5.4 million acres or 8,460 squares miles. It grazes 90,000 lightly-spread cattle.
