FBI Investigating Erasures Incident

Agent Testifies Of Tapes Extension Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Secret Service agent testified today that the White House planned to expand a secret taping network before the Watergate scandal resulted in dismantling of the system.

The agent, Raymond C. Zumwalt, testified at a hearing before U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica as the FBI began investigation of whether part of one President Nixon's Watergate tapes was deliberately erased.

The FBI said Watergate special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski had asked the agency "to investigate the whole matter of the tapes."

Zumwalt was called to testify about his role in maintaining the taping system that automatically recorded presidential conversations in several rooms. Zumwalt said there had been plans in the summer of 1971 to improve the taping system.

Asked by assistant prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste if the plan "was put on a hold basis and never used" after the Watergate break - in took place June 17, 1972, Zumwalt replied, "Yes."

Zumwalt said the taping system was dismantled last July 18, two days after its existence was made public at Senate Watergate hearings. But it was not until "the first part of November" that the wires to hidden microphones were finally cut, he said.

As to the gap on one of the tapes, evidence on the public record does not indicate who was responsible for causing the erasure, and it is this mystery the FBI apparently has been asked to solve for possible criminal proceedings.

Court evidence now seems to indicate at least part of the erasure occurred at the White House within a 40-minute period in the early afternoon last Oct. 1, shortly after the machine believed responsible was delivered.

Although both the tape and the recorder at the time were in the possession of Nixon's secretary, Rose Mary Woods, the evidence does not show who was responsible for pushing the buttons that caused the erasure.

Miss Woods says it was not she, and the White House said Wednesday it was not the President, either accidentally or deliberately.

Chief U. S. District Judge John J. Sirica will continue his efforts to solve the mystery today, as two more Secret Service agents whose responsibilities included care of the White House tapes are recalled to the stand.

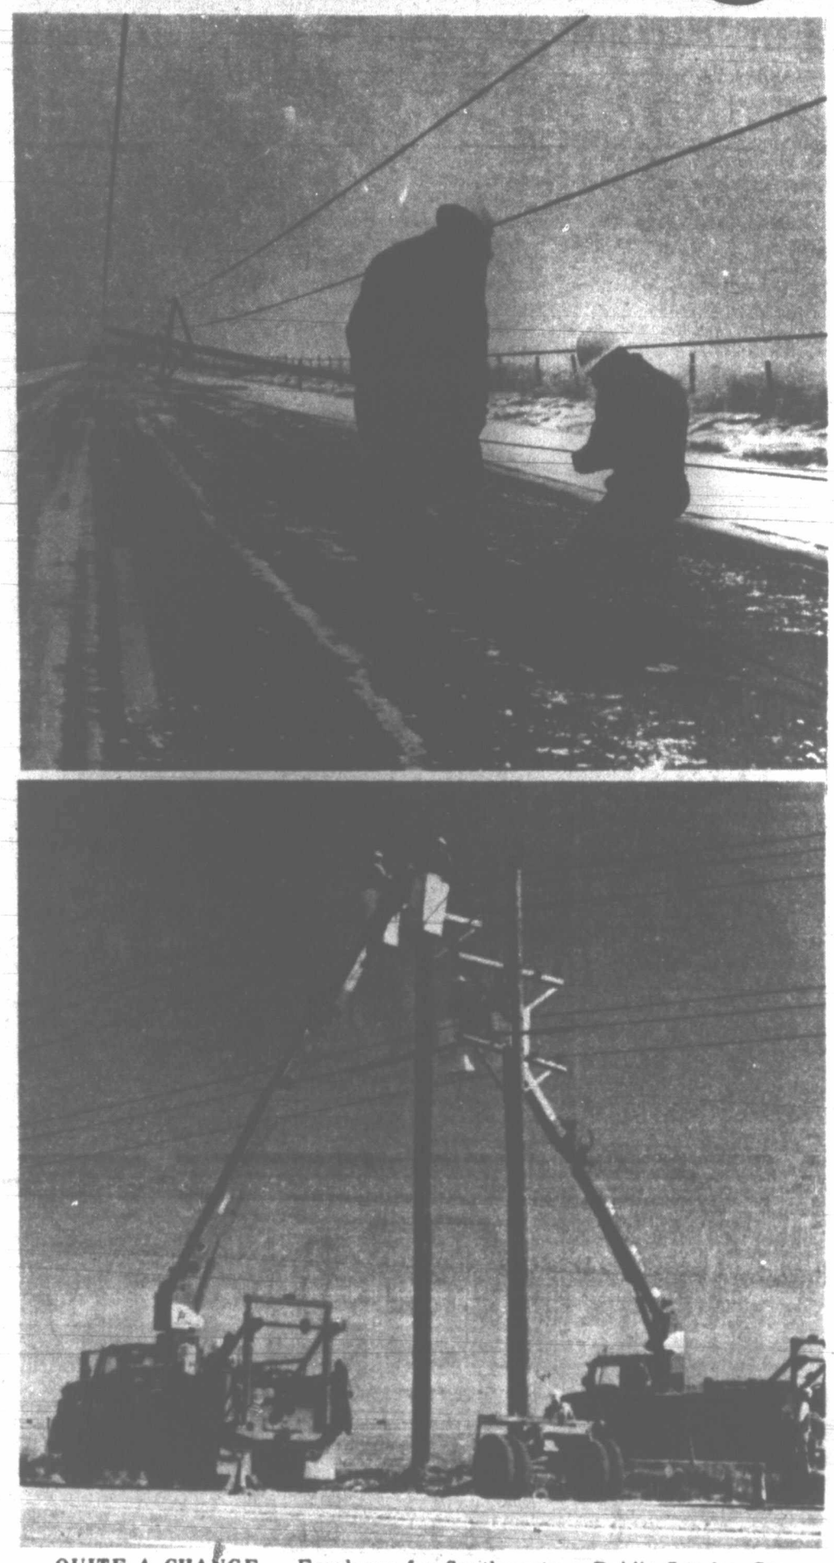

Sirica said Wednesday he hopes to wrap up his hearings on the tapes case—which began Nov. 1—by the end of the week. He said he is considering whether to recommend that it be referred to a grand jury for possible criminal action.

At issue is the tape of a conversation Nixon had June 20, 1972, just three days after the bugging arrests at the Watergate, with then-White House Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman. The tape is marred in the middle by a loud buzz lasting 18-½ minutes that obliterates any voices.

Haldeman's own notes of that meeting, introduced as evidence before Sirica, show that the discussion concerned Watergate and a need to "be on the attack for diversion."

Miss Woods, assigned by the President to transcribe portions of that and other tapes subpoenaed by Watergate prosecutors, testified in late November that she had an "accident" while working with the June 20 tape the afternoon of Oct. 1.

She said she had been distracted by a telephone call and might have pushed the "record" button by mistake instead of "stop" while keeping her foot on a pedal that kept the machine moving, thus perhaps erasing 4-½ to 5 minutes but no more.

QUITE A CHANGE — Employes for Southwestern Public Service Co. yesterday found working under mild, sunny skies (bottom photo) quite a change from that of the below - freezing weather and cloudy skies (top photo) of last Saturday. Both days they were working to repair power lines which had fallen down because of the ice and wind of last week's storm, with finishing touches occupying yesterday's labor.

Decision Reached For Withdrawals?

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel, Egypt, the United States and the Soviet Union will issue a joint communique today announcing an agreement on a troop disengagement formula for the Suez Canal battlefront, Israeli officials said.

The officials said the statement will be released simultaneously in Jerusalem, Cairo, Washington and Moscow at 9 p.m. (2 p.m. CDT). They gave no details on the substance of the agreement.

Prime Minister Golda Meir's cabinet convened at her home to review the details of the agreement, reached in a final round of consultations between Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Israeli ministers at a meeting delayed by a rare Jerusalem blizzard.

The Israeli leaders used four-wheel drive Jeeps to pass through the snow-blocked streets of Jerusalem to Kissinger's hotel, the King David, for the crucial session and then the cabinet met to give its official approval.

The disengagement plans had been worked out by Kissinger in a series of shuttle flights between Jerusalem and the sun-baked Nile River resort city of Aswan, Egypt, where President Anwar Sadat is recuperating from influenza.

A U.S. official said at start of today's session Israel and Egypt were within 90 per cent of a solution on troop pullbacks and that "all the real gut issues are moving toward a solution."

Kissinger emerged from a two and one half hour sesion with deputy Prime Minister Yigal Allon, Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, Foreign Minister Abba Eban and the chief of staff, Lt. Gen. David Elazar, and told newsmen the talks went "very well."

After the meeting Kissinger drove through the snowstorm for a visit with Mrs. Meir who has been confined to her home with an attack of shingles. Much of the actual negotiations were carried out by Allon, perhaps her closest confidante.

TO DELIVER MESSAGE

Nixon Planning Personal Appearance In Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will appear before Congress Jan. 29 to personally deliver his annual State of the Union address, White House officials said today.

The message, aimed at displaying the President as a vigorous leader despite his Watergate problems, will include broad outlines of Nixon's legislative program for 1974.

White House sources said the President will propose an expanded health insurance plan and some form of income maintainence program for the poor, while also touching on foreign policy initiatives.

Last year Nixon sent the message in written form to Congress and followed it up with a series of supplemental messages dealing with specific problem areas.

Nixon has spent most of this week conferring with aides on subjects to be included in the Jan. 29 address. A key element in Nixon's campaign to put the Watergate scandals behind him is to demonstrate that he is actively, vigorously and effectively confronting his domestic and foreign policy problems.

Presidential aides have pictured Nixon as determined to weather the Watergate storm, and to try to get the public to focus on other matters, such as the energy crisis.

Nixon's popularity rating in a new Harris poll released today showed that only 30 per cent of those questioned in a Jan. 7-10 survey gave him positive marks for his conduct of the presidency. This was his lowest rating in the Harris poll since he took office.

The latest Gallup poll last week had Nixon's popularity rating at 29 per cent. It had fallen at one time late last year to 27 per cent in the Gallup survey.

The President today arranged meetings on economic issues with Labor Secretary Peter J. Brennan and HUD Secretary James T. Lynn.

White House officials meanwhile responded to the latest Watergate problem by saying Nixon himself did not erase any of the 18½ minutes that is missing from one of his Watergate tape recordings.

But beyond this, White House officials, both publicly and privately, declined to comment on the disclosure by a team of experts in U.S. District Court that a critical portion of a recording of Nixon's conversation on the Watergate burglary with his former Chief of Staff, H. R. Haldeman, apparently had been erased.

"It hurts, it hurts," said one middle level presidential aide. Others solicited for comment simply shrugged and said nothing.

Despite a barrage of questions, Warren declined to say anything beyond issuing a brief statement from Nixon's lawyers saying that other technical testimony has not yet been heard and that "premature judgments ... are altogether unwarranted."

TO CHANGE SCHOOL BOARD

Any Qualified Voter Can Sign Petition For 7-Men

By TEX DeWEESE

Any qualified voter in the Pampa Independent School District is eligible to sign a petition calling for the 7-man school board issue to be placed on the ballot at the April 6 school election.

That was the ruling of County Judge Don Cain after studying Article 23.021 of the Texas Education Code with Atty. Don Lane, school board counsel.

Judge Cain and Lane conferred on the matter yesterday afternoon following some confusion as to eligibility requirements of petition signers.

Judge Cain also stated petitions to call the election must be filed by March 6, the deadline for school board candidates to file.

If enough signatures are obtained and the petitions are in his hands by March 6, Judge Cain said he would submit them to the county clerk's office for certification to direct school board to place the 7-man board proposal on the April 6 ballot.

Approximately 400 signatures will be necessary to get the issue presented to voters at the coming election.

In order to get it on the ballot, signatures of 25 percent of the total number of voters at the 1973 school election must be obtained.

The petitions, according to Dr. James Malone, school superintendent, may be signed at any of the public schools in the district, the school business office at 119 N. Frost, the county clerk's office in the Gray County Courthouse and at Carver Center, 321 W. Albert. Petitions also are expected to be placed in a number of business places.

A "straw vote" referendum was taken at the April 1973 election and voters expressed approval of changing from a 5-man school board to a 7-man board. The vote was 849 to 622 in favor of the change. A total of 1,542 voters went to the polls in that election.

Forecasters Predict New Hikes For Prices--Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Both government and private economic forecasters had bad news today for the American consumer — sharply rising prices in the months ahead. At least, they said, the increases likely will not be as great as 1973.

Director John Dunlop of the Cost of Living Council predicted that both retail and wholesale prices would keep going up steeply in the first four months of the year, mainly because of higher prices for basic raw materials and commodities in the world market.

Consumer prices rose about 9 per cent in 1973 while wholesale prices shot up 18.2 per cent.

Dunlop told a group of Washington reporters Wednesday that about 50 per cent of consumer items covered in government surveys had been removed from price controls "and we intend to continue gradually decontrolling."

In Los Angeles, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said consumers could expect food prices to continue rising this year, but not as spectacularly as the record 18 per cent increase in 1973. Butz predicted a 5 to 6 per cent increase in 1974, saying a new surge in meat prices would taper off later in the year.

One of the nation's leading financial institutions, Mellon Bank of Pittsburgh, issued a report today forecasting a 7 per cent increase in consumer prices this year. It foresaw said "little substantive relief from rising commodity prices (and) further hefty increases in fuel costs."

Dunlop said wage settlements and labor strikes would increase this year as workers and unions tried to keep up with the worst inflation since World War II.

Dunlop also issued regulations allowing price increases of 4 to 7.5 per cent for hospitals, doctors, dentists and other health practitioners.

The controls could be short-lived because legal authority for President Nixon's economic stabilization program expires April 30 and Dunlop said no decision had been made about continuing the Phase IV wage-price controls after that date.

Total personal income received by Americans in 1973—including wages, salaries, dividends, and social security payments—jumped 10.3 per cent from 1972 to $1,035.5 billion, the biggest one year leap in 22 years, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

What happened to that extra money? In large part, it fueled a lavish spending spree on automobiles, television sets, and other durable goods. To the extent that consumers also continued to indulge their taste for beef and other food items in short supply.

Delinquent Tax Deadline Near

Only two weeks remain before payment of 1973 city taxes become delinquent, Mrs. Grace Gibson, tax department office manager, said today.

Mrs. Gibson stated second notices were mailed to some 2,500 city taxpayers yesterday that Jan. 31 is the deadline for tax payments.

"Taxes become delinquent and subject to penalty and interest on the first day of February," Mrs. Gibson said.

She added that up until today only $611,914 of the $899,873 levy for 1973 had been collected.

The collections so far equal 68 percent of the total, compared to 70 percent at the same time last year.

Lefors Board Will Consider Seven Items

LEFORS — The Lefors Independent School District Board of Trustees is to meet at 7 p.m. today in the superintendent's office. Seven items are on the agenda.

A discussion of board policy concerning Gov. Dolph Briscoe's energy saving program and school hours and the review of Superintendent Jerrel Julian's contract are among the items.

Also to be discussed are the 1974 football program, a camera and projector for the school and the selection of a homemaking teacher.

Supt. Julian will present a report on the recent administrator's conference in Austin and the board will consider due bills and minutes of previous meetings.

MoD Planning Bucket Brigade

Volunteers of various civic and service organizations will be manning seven intersections throughout the city Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to collect funds for the March of Dimes battle against birth defects.

Drivers will be asked to drop donations into buckets through the intersection areas.

Lefors and McGean have also scheduled bucket brigade drives, with McLean slating its efforts for Jan. 28.

Jess Baker of Lefors is in charge of the Lions Club drive there, with Jim Hathaway directing the McLean Lions Club efforts.

The VFW of McLean is in charge of the Mothers March there.

Locally, new contributions have brought the total collected in Pampa's Mothers March on Monday night to $4,721.58.

Break In Water Main Causing Street Flooding

A break in a 6-inch water main at Cuyler and Foster streets sent water gushing through downtown streets yesterday and caused wet feet for pedestrians trying to cross streets.

Tony Anderson, city water superintendent, said repair at that point was made after nearly a day - long effort, but another break occurred in a line in the alley just west of Cuyler between Foster and Kingsmill.

Water department crews still were working on that one at noon today. Anderson said it was caused when workmen tried to adjust a valve to control the water flow while repairs were being made on the first break.

Anderson said there has been a rash of breaks in water lines in all sections of the city. There have been around 35 since the first of the year.

Anderson said cause of the unusual amount of breaks could be due to cold weather conditions and the fact that the lake water is much colder than well water.

The current season marks the first winter for lake water in the city's water mains.

A sudden change from below - freezing temperatures to 70-degree temperatures could cause expansion and the rupture of pipe connections, one city official said.

WATER EVERYWHERE — Pampa streets took on a Venice-like image yesterday when a water main broke in the downtown area. A fireman is shown here as he attempted to force water away from the break area and lower the pressure near First National Bank. A second break a block away still was pouring additional water into streets at noon today.

MAY BE NEW ELECTIONS

British Crisis Troubles Threaten Heath's Rule

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath presided over a two-hour crisis session of his cabinet today amid feverish press and parliamentary speculation that he soon would seek a new mandate in national elections.

But his office made no announcement afterwards that would indicate whether he had decided to do so.

Len Murray, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress (TUC), which represents 10 million workers, flew to Geneva for an International Labor Organization conference without receiving a generally expected invitation from Heath to meet him for still one more attempt to end the governments conflict with the labor unions.

TUC officials said he would not return until Sunday.

Newspaper headlines continued to predict an imminent government decision whether or not to call a general election.

Energy Secretary Lord Carrington, who also is chairman of Heath's governing Conservative party, said, "if really there doesn't seem to be any solution out of our difficulties, in a democracy the right thing is to ask people what they want."

"The uncertainty must be ended soon — but without panic," Home Secretary Robert Carr said. "There must not be a snap general election without first trying everything possible to solve this crisis."

Officials said Heath might invite leaders of the 10 million-member Trades Union Congress (TUC), the British version of America's AFL-CIO, to meet him for one final attempt to end the crisis.

If Heath fails to reach an accord—and political analysts said his chances were poor—he would have little alternative, but to dissolve Parliament and appeal to the nation for a new mandate.

Britain's economic crisis—described by Heath as the worst since World War II—was caused by a series of crucial union disputes intesified by worldwide fuel shortages.

The 269,000 coal miners have refused to work overtime for two months and the 29,000 railroad engineers have staged a month-long slowdown punctuated by two 24-hour strikes.

A poll in today's Daily Telegraph said Heath's Conservative party would win by two per cent if national election were held tomorrow.

Candidate Seeks Treasurer Post

County Treasurer Jean Scott announced today she will seek a second four - year term subject to the May 4 Democratic primary election.

Mrs. Scott served as deputy county treasurer for nine years prior to her election to the post in 1969.

Residing at 2535 Christine, she has been a resident of Pampa since 1946.

Her husband, Alvin, is a rural mail carrier and they have two sons, Dennis of Houston and Steve, a student at the University of Houston.

She is a member of the First Baptist Church, Altrusa Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Detective Claims Henley 'Wanted His Punishment'

HOUSTON (UPI) — A police detective testified Wednesday Elmer Wayne Henley, his face streaked with tears, told him he wanted to take his punishment for his part in a three-year sex and torture murder spree that began when he was 14 years old.

A hushed courtroom listened as Sgt. David Mullican described the grisly details of Henley's oral and written statements — statements the defense wants to strike from evidence, arguing Henley was not competent to waive his constitutional right to silence.

Henley is charged with six of 27 murders. The court is hearing preliminary motions before trying the slender 17-year-old youth on charges of killing Charles Cobble, 17, of Houston July 27, 1973.

Mullican testified he informed Henley that he didn't have to talk to him and that he had a right to be represented by an attorney.

The detective said Henley told him he didn't want to be represented by his mother's attorney, Samuel Plotkin.

"He said he wanted to take his punishment, whatever it was," Mullican said. "That he didn't want his mother to be out any expenses."

Mullican was with Henley almost constantly as he and a companion, David Owen Brooks, 18, led officers to three graves in early August that yielded the bodies of the 27 teen-aged victims.

"At that point he first told about complicity in the killings," Mullican said. "He cried and was emotional for about the first four to five minutes.

"Tears came to his eyes. He put his hand over his face. Then he told about it. He said he was glad to get it off his chest."

Mullican said Henley began describing his activities and those of Brooks, and alleged mastermind Dean Corll, 33, within hours of his arrest after shooting and killing Corll Aug. 8 during a final sex orgy at Corll's Pasadena, Tex., home.

Mullican said Henley said Corll promised to pay him and Brooks $200 to procure boys—more if the boys were good looking—by enticements of dope, beer and wild parties.

The police officer described torture instruments found in Corll's home and said the bachelor electrician kept sadistic tools neatly stacked in a tool box in his bedroom.

PTA Planning Vocational Tour Friday Morning

Don Nelson, vocational supervisor at Pampa High School, will conduct a tour of vocational facilities at the school Friday morning as part of the Parents - Teachers Association's Parent and Family Life Education course.

The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. at Carver Center, where there will be a nursery provided for those with pre - school children. Those attending will then be taken by bus to the high school for the tour, which will end about 11 a.m.

Nelson will be showing the opportunities students have to learn a trade while attending high school.

The public is invited to attend the session.

Claude Zevely, of West Texas State University in Canyon, will speak on Friday, Jan. 25, on "Early Childhood Education."

Pythians Elect A.C. Parsley As Commander

A.C. "Lonnie" Parsley, 621 S. Tignor, a member of Pampa Lodge No. 480 Knights of Pythias since Nov. 1, 1950, was elected as the new Chancellor Commander of the Lodge to fill the unexpired term of Robert Elliott at Tuesday's regular meeting.

He will head a group of local Knights who will visit the Amarillo Lodge No. 479 tonight to confer the rank of Knight on five Amarillo members. The group will meet at the Lodge Hall and will leave from there at 6:30 p.m.

It was also announced that members of the Pampa Lodge would man the corners of Cuyler and Francis in Saturday's March of Dimes "bucket brigade."

PHIL GAGE
...gains singing honor

Gage Named To All-State Choir Group

Phil Gage, a senior and vice - president of the Pampa High School student body, has been selected to sing in the Texas High School All - State Choir.

Gage, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Gage, 303 Starkweather, competed in four auditions, ranging from region to area, to win the coveted honor.

The choir will assemble in Houston on Feb. 9 to rehearse for three days and present two concerts.

Gage is very active in music in the school having been in the Concert Choir for three years. During this time he has been in the All - Region Choir for three years, won two first - place medals for ensemble singing, played the lead role in "Music Man" his junior year, and has been an area candidate for All - State Choir for two years.

His future plans include a music degree from Abilene Christian College.

C-C Officials Plan To Attend Banquet

The program will be furnished by the Bank Notes of Booker. John Mayfield, who has served as manager of the Perryton chamber for the past 22 years will be honored.

A large crowd is expected to attend an informal dinner and program with Western wear suggested.

Authorities Arrest Four For 'Stringbean' Deaths

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Four men, including three brothers and a cousin, were arrested Wednesday on charges of killing David "Stringbean" Akeman, a star of "Grand Ole Opry" and the "Hee Haw" television show, and his wife.

John A. Brown, 23, and Marvin Douglas Brown, 23, each were charged with two counts of murder. Charles Brown, 31, and Roy Brown, 26, were charged with being accessories to murder and receiving and concealing stolen property.

The three brothers and their cousin John were raised in the tiny community of Greenbrier, a few miles from the scene of the shootings at the modest Akeman farm home.

Akeman, 58, was killed when he apparently surprised burglars on returning home from a night performance Nov. 11. Police speculated his wife, Estelle, was shot as she was parking the car and attempted to flee. Akeman did not drive.

"The arrests were the result of a long, drawn out investigation," acting police chief Joe Casey told reporters. "We have been gathering evidence practically from the time this happened until today."

Akeman was shot once and found lying in the living room of the home. His wife was shot three times and found lying outside the house.

Their bodies were discovered by a close family friend, Louis "Grandpa" Jones, who had dropped by the red frame house to take Stringbean on a fishing trip.

Akeman, known to carry large sums of money, left an estimated estate of more than $500,000.

Car Catches Fire

The Pampa Fire Department was called to the intersection of Cuyler and Foster (one block from the central station) yesterday at 1:20 p.m. to put out a fire in an automobile.

The fire, in a 1956 Chevrolet owned by Bob Mobley of Pampa, was extinguished by 1:30.

A flooded carburetor was listed as the cause of the blaze. Heavy damage was done to the motor of the car and paint on the hood was almost completely burned off.

MISSION CONTINUES

'Minor' Problems Brother Astronauts

HOUSTON (UPI) — Space officials still think the final Skylab mission will last 84 days in spite of minor problems with a pesky control mechanism.

Program officials hold their weekly meeting today to perform what has become a formality — approval of seven more days in space for astronauts Gerald P. Carr, Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue.

"I don't see any reasons we'd have any trouble making that decision to go (84 days)," Flight Director Milton Windler said Wednesday.

The only consistently erratic parts of the complex, 100-ton, 113-foot long spaceship have been the gyroscopes, which engineers said have slowed down at least three and possibly four times already this week.

One of the slowdowns, which occurred in the devices' spinning wheels, was on gyro No. 3 and was the first time that gyro displayed any erratic performance. Gyro No. 2 has been acting up off and on since early in the mission, when the first gyro conked out completely.

Engineers, admittedly at a loss to really explain all of the slowdowns, said what appeared to be the third slowdown of the week on gyro No. 2 may have only been a faulty signal being sent from the spacecraft to the ground.

DUREN J. BRANDON

Saturday 2 p.m. funeral services in the First United Methodist Church at Matador are set for Duren Joseph Brandon, 88, 125 Varnon Dr., a longtime resident of Pampa, who died Wednesday at a local nursing home.

The Rev. Douglass Gossett, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Matador Cemetery by Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors of Pampa.

The body will lie in state at Carmichael - Whatley Colonial Chapel until Friday morning.

Mr. Brandon was born in Coryell County, on July 12, 1885, and had lived in Pampa since 1928.

He was a former resident of Snyder.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Julian Jones, Snyder; Mrs. Wayne Elem, Waynoka, Okla., and Mrs. W.J. Nees, Pampa; a brother, Claude, Hereford; two sisters, Mrs. Mae Plumlee, Matador, and Mrs. Belle Sneath, Breckenridge; and one grandchild.

His wife, Ora Alene, died Feb. 20, 1973.

MRS. WILMA ADAIR

Graveside rites for Mrs. Wilma W. Adair, 69, of Noel, Mo., a former Pampa resident, will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in Fairview Cemetery in Pampa.

Burial will be under the direction of Carmichael - Whatley Funeral Directors.

Officiating at the service will be the Rev. Claude Cone, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Adair died Tuesday at Gravette, Ark.

Survivors include her husband, Wilbur; two sons, H.C. Levelland and Paul Eugene, Pampa; a daughter, Mrs. Kay Kiger, Eldorado, Ark., and seven grandchildren.

The body will lie in state at the funeral home until service time.

High-Rise Buildings Face Changes From Energy Crisis Troubles

By CHARLES E. DOLE
Real Estate Editor
The Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON — The double-tower, 110-story World Trade Center in midtown Manhattan is a monument, not to architectural genius, its critics charge, but to an excessive waste of critically short energy.

Thus Manhattan's newest skyscraper has become a symbol of yet another energy-crisis culprit — the inefficient, high-rise building.

Its 10 million square feet of floor space — each floor an acre in area — jab into the sky and demand as much generating capacity as the city of Schenectady in upstate New York — 80,000 kilowatts.

Clearly, the owner, the New York Port Authority, had other objectives at the time it was built, such as rentability and low building cost.

Christian Science Monitor

GM BUILDING — Open in 1968, what would the architect, Edward Durell Stone, do differently if he were designing it today in the light of the energy crisis? The $75 million building rises 50 stories over Fifth Avenue and the Grand Army Plaza in Manhattan.

Far Down on List

Other architects and developers have been equally shortsighed. They have put energy use far down on the list of considerations when sticking a building into the ground.

Therefore, it is fair to ask:

—What constraints will the wrenching energy situation have on high-rise construction in the future?

—Are the days of the sealed, glasswalled skyscraper running out?

"I think that the entirely sealed buiding is an extravagant luxury based on the antiquated idea that we have unlimited energy available to back it," declares Richard Stein, a New York architect long involved in ways to conserve energy in buildings.

Instead of the completely sealed buildings of today, Mr. Stein says there could be sophisticated louvers which introduce air into a building. They would include filters, control elements, and the like.

It doesn't mean, he says, "that we go back the the same building techniques that were abandoned 30 or 40 years ago. But there are ways of introducing outside air directly into the inside space and which will help to conserve energy."

Design Formalized

High-rise buildings are all much the same nowadays except for perhaps a little twist here and there so that the architect can put his name on it. They all have 50 per cent glass or more with a core running up the middle, perimeter offices all around, plus two or three floors devoted to the mechanical components which make the building run.

Because of the energy pinch, all of that may change.

Buildings may get different facades for different orientations. The north side of a building, environmentally, is different from the south side. Therefore, the volume of glass — in fact, the whole side of a building — may differ, depending on its orientation.

The new United Fund Building in Philadelphia, praised widely for its emphasis on energy conservation, has voluminous glass only on the north side.

Solar Unit Included

A new federal office building planned for Manchester, N.H., goes so far as to include a solar-energy collector on the roof. Also, only 10 percent of the exterior walls are glass, compared to 88 per cent in the John Hancock Building in Boston.

However, glass is not really being downgraded. "It's really a gross oversimplification to talk about glass becoming obsolete as a material," declares Henry Cobb, a partner with I.M. Pei in New York City. Mr. Cobb, who designed the problem-plagued 60-story Hancock Building, says "The energy consumption of a building is the result of a rather complex interaction of many forces, only one of which is the climate condition. I wouldn't necessarily expect a trend toward less glass in the outside walls of buildings." He adds, however: "You might find a trend toward different ways of using glass."

take the energy-consumption aspects of a building sensibly into account in the design from now on. "Up to now this has not been a major consideration in the design of buildings," says Mr. Cobb.

Lights Take Energy

Lighting is the biggest energy waster. In a typical New York skyscraper, for example, at least half of all energy goes into lighting. About 30 per cent goes into heating and air conditioning. "A good portion of the air conditioning is to take care of the heat buildup from the lighting," states Norman Kurtz, a New York mechanical engineer.

Mr. Stein says the average 50-story skyscraper in New York is occupied only about 3,100 hours a year. Yet one-sixth of these hours are at a time when the outside air could be introduced into the building with neither heating nor cooling. "This alone would result in a significant reduction in energy for air cooling," he estimates.

Also the trend toward single-switch control of lighting on each floor is about to be short-circuited. "You may find a trend to going back to the old days when everybody had a switch in his room," suggests Mr. Cobb. "The reason the trend went to the whole floor at once is because of the economics of building and leasing space. This is obviously a wasteful practice."

There may be a move toward more "reasonable" standards of lighting, also. In illuminating engineering there is much debate about what is the optimum level. Some experts think it can never go too high. But many say present levels are often excessive.

The mechanical systems may also be reworked. Usually, these are crammed onto a single floor which may be at the top, bottom, or somewhere in the middle. If it's a really big building, there may be more than one mechanical floor.

Mr. Kurtz says the ducts are crammed into the core or sneak up the outside of the building and then are stuck on the ceiling, the theory being that you cannot rent the spaces which mechanical systems occupy. Architects tend to squash them down.

"Because of this squashing," Mr. Kurtz says, "we have to use high-velocity systems to get the same amount of air around with the smaller ductwork." It takes high-horsepower fans to blow all the air around, and they run from early morning till into the night. A low-velocity system would save substantial energy. But this would mean that the mechanical systems would take up more square footage with a consequent loss of rental space.

A Fan on Each Floor

Mr. Kurtz tells of a system now used in Canada which involves a small fan on every floor of a building and yet doesn't eat too much into the rentable space of a floor. "Instead of pumping all the air up and down the building, the way it is now," he explains, "with the Canadian system the air never leaves the floor."

To show the extent to which architects in general are responding to the energy crisis, the American Institute of Architects says that, from now on, an award-winning building will be judged not only on how well it responds to its natural setting, but how it uses energy.

"The extravagant and unconcerned examples in the past which have won awards would no longer qualify," declares Mr. Stein, who is himself a member of an AIA task force on energy conservation. "So even the aesthetic judgments od the profession are going to reflect this new attitude of responsibility toward energy use."

TV In Review

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Every so often, I think I'd be great at writing television commercials, especially for used cars. For instance, I've been working on a video ad that goes like this:

A customer walks onto a used car lot and is greeted by a salesman wearing a navy blue sport jacket, a pink shirt open at the neck, and dark brown slacks.

The customer sees an auto that interests him, and engages in the following conversation with the salesman about the vehicle:

Customer: "Say, that's a beauty."

Salesman: "And only $1,999."

Customer: "You mean it doesn't cost a lot more for all those things that come with it?"

Salesman: "Like what, for instance?"

It Must be Important

Customer: "Well, the steering wheel. That must be expensive because it's so important."

Salesman: "No, you get the steering wheel along with the rest of the car."

Customer: "No kidding! Well, how about the tires?"

Salesman: "Same thing."

Customer: "And the seats?"

Salesman: "Included also."

Customer: "Gee, I can't believe this. But how about the speedometer? I bet you just don't give the speedometer away for that price."

Salesman: "Wrong again. The speedometer is part of the deal."

Customer: "Wow! This sure is my lucky day. But what about the oil gauge?"

Salesman: "Included."

Customer: "And the water gauge?"

Salesman: "Included."

Customer: "I'm just amazed."

Their Motto

Salesman: "Well, we have clean, sharp cars here, and our motto is: Keep the customer coming back."

Customer: "That's real nice of you. But does the price also include the battery?"

Salesman: "Yes, sir, we include that too."

Customer: "Golly, and the spare tire?"

Salesman: "Included."

Customer: "You know, I just don't know what to say."

Salesman: "A lot of people say that after coming here."

Customer: "Well, I do have one question: How many miles does it get to a gallon?"

Salesman: "Care for a piece of gum?"

Customer: "Can you give me any idea of the mileage per gallon?"

Salesman: "Friend, it's a clean, sharp car, and the rest is up to you. Say, did I tell you we also give away free soda pop?"

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

What do you bid?

A. Four spades. A bid of only three spades (showing 17-18 points) can be passed by partner. In support of spades you have a 20-point hand. He has a minimum of 6 points. You belong in at least a game in spades — and should promptly bid it.

Q. 2—Both sides vulnerable. Sitting South, you hold:

1.
♠AJ94 ♡AKJ ◇AQ62 ♣53

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid?

A. Three notrump. Your two-club bid was the initiation of the Stayman Convention. If partner had bid two spades, you would have raised him to four spades. His two heart rebid has denied the possession of four spades, for with four spades and four hearts, as per Stayman, he would have bid the spade suit first.

Q. 3—Neither side vulnerable. As South, you hold:

2.
♠K974 ♡J82 ◇KQ1073 ♣Q

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A. Pass. You should not have opened the bidding in the first place — and you should be thankful that partner has given you the opportunity of getting out. If he can't bid the game knowing that you have 13 points (which you don't), how can you bid the game on your sub-minimum values?

Q. 4—Both sides vulnerable. Sitting South, you hold:

3.
♠AJ1083 ♡942 ◇Q75 ♣A8

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid?

A. Six clubs. Partner has an unbalanced hand, otherwise he would not have taken you out of notrump. He also has four-card support in clubs for his direct raise after your first-time bid in the club suit. His obvious shortness in the major suits should enable you to ruff out a couple of your losers in these suits. In addition, he rates to have a decent diamond suit for his three-diamond bid. Frankly, even a grand slam might be made.

Q. 5—Neither side vulnerable. As South, you hold:

4.
♠A98 ♡AQ ◇K73 ♣AKQJ4

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣	Pass

What do you bid?

A. Four hearts. You have 8-plus winning tricks in your own hand, and on balance your partner rates to produce a trick-plus, since East by passing his partner's opening bid, is known to have fewer than 6 points. In my book, you are a favorite to fulfill the four-heart contract.

5.
♠A7 ♡KQJ9852 ◇AQ6 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South

SKELLYTOWN TOPS

TOPS Club of Skellytown met recently in the Library for a regular meeting with the club leader, Mrs. Odell Hassler, presiding. The meeting opened with the club pledge in unison and the group sang TOPS song led by Margaret Simmons. Fannie Coleman was crowned weekly queen for a loss of 1¼ lbs.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved by Margaret Simmons in the absence of the secretary, Naomi Fox.

The treasurer's report was given by Jo Skaggs and the books were audited by Juanita McCarthy, Cecile Grange and Fannie Coleman.

Mrs. Margaret (Granny) Fox and Don Easley were reported ill and in the Groom Memorial Hospital.

Pauline White received the cash award for three month's queen for a loss of four pounds.

The meeting closed with the singing of the club fellowship song. After the meeting Mrs. Jo Skaggs was honored with a surprise birthday party with gifts and refreshments.

Helping to identify little cereal pests

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The University of Minnesota's Entomology Department agreed to help your readers identify the insects they found in their cereals. We thought you would be interested in the summary of the kinds of insects found as submitted.

Samples came from 33 states:

Saw-toothed grain beetle	80
Merchant grain beetle	39
Cigaret beetle	30
Red flour beetle	25
Miscellaneous cereal pests	10
Drugstore beetle	9
Indian meal moth	2
Insects other than cereal pests	15
	210

Cereal products often become infested right in the home. Only glass and tin containers are insect proof, so any package of cake mix, flour, etc., can be penetrated by insects if left standing long enough. DAVID M. NOETZEL

DEAR DR. NOETZEL: Thank you for providing my readers with the service. Now, if others are bugged by unidentifiable insects in their cereals, please send the little creatures to your own university.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote in your column that a woman is pregnant for 266 days. Who said so? I carried my baby for 10 months and five days, and there is no doubt about it because I know the exact date my baby was conceived. My husband is in the Navy and it couldn't have possibly been conceived any other time because I saw him only once for an hour, and I didn't see him again until the day before the baby was born.

I don't drink or run around, and there is no way this baby isn't his, so please print a retraction about that 266-day carrying time because otherwise I am in a lot of trouble. SAN DIEGO READER

DEAR READER: The average gestation period is 266 days. Some babies come early. Others come late. Yours was late.

DEAR ABBY: I have a kind of strange problem. My parents are divorced, and I live alone with my father. His name is Charles, and my name is Katherine, so I sent out Christmas cards signed "Kathy and Charles Smith."

My mom was very upset because some of her friends thought that my dad had gotten remarried. So please tell me how to sign our cards next time so my mom won't be upset. Thank you. KATHY SMITH

DEAR KATHY: Sign the cards, "Charles Smith, and daughter, Kathy."

DEAR ABBY: With all the "hippies, hoppies, homos, and harlots" you've got writing to you, you could start a new "4-H" club! ED IN DURHAM, N. C.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 122 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212.

MANDARIN ORANGE CAKE

2 cups sugar
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2 cans mandarin oranges (11½ ounces each, well drained).

Beat eggs, add mandarin oranges and dry ingredients together for four minutes with electric mixwer. Use low speed so there are flakes of orange showing. Pour batter into greased and floured 9x13 pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes.

In the meantime bring ¾ cup brown sugar, 3 tablespoons milk and 2 tablespoons butter to a boil. Pour over hot cake as soon as it comes from the oven. All very simple. When cool, serve with whipped topping if you like.

NOTE: This recipe is the one Nan Wiley, "Let's Ask The Cook," mentions so often in her column, and many readers have requested.

This recipe is correct, so go ahead with confidence. No, there isn't one bit of shortening in the cake beyond the butter used in the topping. It is a sponge-type cake.

Rubber Ear Bounces

NEW YORK (UPI) — Augie Meyers, a Texas keyboard artist, wears a prosthetic rubber ear under his ankle-length hair.

He recently denied a rumor that he once escaped a beating in a barroom brawl by yanking the rubber ear loose and waving it in the bully's face.

"The worst thing I've ever done is to kick the darned thing into the audience when it fell off in the middle of a show," said Meyers, whose first longplay record recently was released by Paramount Records.

Discovery of silver in 1884 at Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, caused a stampede, and Idaho still leads the nation in production of that metal.

Pampa Fine Arts Association Plans Local "Camelot" Showing

John Raitt, portraying King Arthur in Lerner and Loewe's "Camelot" is scheduled for a Saturday, April 6 performance in the M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium.

Based on "The Once and Future King" by T.H. White, the Pampa showing is being sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, Mrs. Homer Johnson, president.

A tea for local and area ticket committee members, will be hosted by Mrs. Delamr Watkins, 2016 Mary Ellen, Sunday, Jan. 20 at 3 p.m.

Admission is $7.50 for adults; and $4 for students, according to Mrs. E.H. Brainand II, ticket sales chairman.

Mrs. Elbert Walker and Ted Gikas are publicity co-chairmen.

JOHN RAITT
Lead in "Camelot"

"Camelot," the hit musical with a score by Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, the same brilliant composing team of "My Fair Lady" and "Brigadoon," and based on the romantic Legend of King Arthur, originally charmed Broadway for over two years.

Audiences will be moved and delighted by this old fashioned melodious and totally romantic musical.

The role originally won a Tony Award for Richard Burton on Broadway, and Pampans are about to see a performance to match the music and majesty of this classical of musical entertainment.

The Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, Jan. 17, the 17th day of 1974 with 348 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase.

Technically there is no morning star.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Capricorn.

American medical missionary Tom Dooley was born Jan. 17, 1927.

On this day in history:

In 1706, American statesman, scientist and author Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston.

In 1806, the first baby was born in the White House. He was the son of Thomas and Martha Randolph and the grandson of President Thomas Jefferson.

In 1917, the United States bought 50 of the Virgin Islands in the West Indies from Denmark for $25 million. They remain a U.S. territory. The other 50 Virgin Islands belong to Britain.

In 1950, nine bandits staged a $1.5 million robbery of a Brink's armored car in Boston.

A thought for the day: Benjamin Franklin said, "Doth thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of."

Water pollution has increased 600 per cent in American rivers since 1900, according to one report.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Prof. Jay needed some detective sleuthing! For he was a popular, articulate speaker until two years ago. Then students began complaining that they couldn't understand him as well. Can you diagnose his problem? Ten million readers have it, too!

CASE Z-528: Prof. Jay, aged 52, has very large college classes.

"But, Dr. Crane," he spoke morosely, "many of my students the last couple of years complain that they don't understand what I say.

"Yet I am not indulging excessively in polysyllabic terms.

"And though my lecture sections may contain 250 students, I still have a microphone at the lectern, to amplify the volume.

"So what do you sppose is the difficulty?

"Are more young people growing deaf nowadays?

"For my voice is still as strong as ever."

VENTRILOQUY GUTTERALS

Since I happened to be visiting on the campus for a special lecture that night, I joined one of Prof. Jay's classes.

And it didn't take 5 minutes to determine his major problem.

After the lecture, which was very informative and interesting, I asked:

"Do you wear false teeth?"

"Yes," he admitted, "for I got full dentures a couple of years ago."

And that was when his students began to have difficulty understanding him.

After people obtain false teeth they often fail to use their upper lip as freely in forming the consonants of speech.

Thus, they keep an immobile upper lip and develop gutteral speech.

Their words thus remain in the throat, like the conversation of Orientals.

Indeed, they subconsciously slip into the ventriloquist's habit of keeping their lips as quiet as possible while talking.

The main difference between Prof. Jay and a talented ventriloquist is the fact that the ventriloquist consciously keeps his lips immovable.

Prof. Jay unwittingly does much the same thing.

And that should be a warning to all of you folks who wear dentures.

To offset this tendency to use gutteral speech, practice before your bathroom mirror every day as you brush your teeth.

Recite poetry or improvise little speeches so you can watch your image and then make sure that upper lip moves freely in forming the many consonants.

Deaf lipreaders often complain that people wearing false teeth are difficult for them to follow.

A good ventriloquist learns to avoid certain words, such as those including the consonants "m," "b," "p," "f," "v," etc.

"I had a sandwich at dinner" can thus be uttered with very little lip action.

"I ate a banana before supper," is a sentence the ventriloquist will avoid. Why?

Because of those lip consonants "b," "f" and "p."

Vowels are formed largely in the throat or behind the lips.

So practice before your mirror and you will soon be able to concoct the type of conversation to hold with your ventriloquist "dummy."

However, the very letters the ventriloquist avoids, you denture wearers should deliberately cultivate to train that upper lip into more active use in conversation!

Professional speakers should also try to project their voice against the back wall, instead of holding it in their throat!

So send for my booklet "Public Platform Strategy," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Mellott, Indiana 47958. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Life as death

CHICAGO (UPI) — Most sea life undergoes quick death, and if that were not the case there would be scarcely room for swimming.

The shad, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, is reputed to lay from 30,00 to 100,000 eggs per year and an individual oyster can produce 55 million to 114 million eggs during its lifetime.

The Atlantic cod is said to lay as many as 9 million eggs annually and the American eel from 5 million to 20 million every year.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS ...it tells you how

A number of companies now market machines designed to help you roll your family's old newspapers into "logs" that can be burned in a fireplace or stove. After testing a couple of these devices, I think the idea is a good one for two reasons: [1] it puts recycling on a real grassroots basis by allowing you to directly convert part of your waste into something useful and [2] it gives you a small, partial answer to today's fuel shortage.

There's no need to shell out good dollars for a "log rolling" machine to realize these benefits, however. Just get yourself a length of old broomstick and start tightly rolling one section or sheet of newspaper after another around it as shown in Fig. 1. When the "log" is about two inches thick, slip the broomstick out, tie the bundle with light wire and soak the paper in one pint of charcoal lighter or kerosene (never gasoline). If you have no other sizable tray, you can make one that will last for years from a sheet of heavy-duty aluminum foil (Fig. 2).

Once the rolled paper has soaked up the fluid, wrap more waste newspaper around the saturated core . . . enough to make a log about four to five inches thick. Tie the bundle with light wire and set it aside. Three of these logs will burn all evening in a fireplace.

If you're lucky enough to have access to a source of real firewood, but you don't know how to begin cutting it . . . send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS, in care of this paper. Ask for Reprint No. 4, BASIC AXEMANSHIP.

Longhorn Cattle Serving As Wild, Tough Symbols

AUSTIN — Longhorn cattle have become a reminder of a time when the country, like the longhorn, was tough and wild.

With their long legs, short tempers and fearsome horns, the breed would be all but impossible to transport in cattle trucks, unlike the heavy and docile beef cattle marketed today. Besides, the meat is a bit stringy and tough.

As a result, the qualities which helped the longhorn survive for centuries almost caused their extinction after the turn of the century because ranchers opted for fast beef production and ease of handling over hardiness and a proclivity for survival.

And these qualities saved the longhorn again, because men are sentimental about things such as toughness and spirit. Ranchers now keep longhorns because they like them.

The early longhorns were a wild breed, developed not by human breeders and genetic manipulators but by the process of natural selection. The result was a product of an environment which offered blistering heat, frigid cold, hungry predators and, in many years, little food or water. Longhorns had to be tough to survive as a species in such an environment.

The longhorns' ancestors arrived in the new world with Columbus on his second voyage to Santo Domingo in 1493, and in 1521, descendants of these cattle reached Mexico with Gregorio de Villalobos.

During the late 1600s and early 1700s, the Spanish crossed the Rio Grande into what is now Texas and established missions. They brought with them cattle, and from this stock came what is now known as the tough and durable longhorn.

For many years Texans were blind to this treasure on the hoof. Except for a few hide hunters, most persons ignored them.

The end of the Civil War changed that. Texans came back to their overgrown farms and saw a bleak future. But the north was booming, and northerners were hungry for beef. Railroads had not yet been extensively developed in Texas, so any Texas beef headed north had to walk.

Longhorns were ideally suited for these long treks, and there were millions of them in the vast reaches of Texas, capable of withstanding floods, cold, desert sun, sparse food the scarce water.

The usual northern-bound herds numbered 2,500 to 3,000, although some herds combined for protection totaled 15,000 pushed by 200 drovers. An estimated 10 million longhorns made the trip north.

But by 1885, this magnificent breed had outlived its usefulness. The great northern trails were closing, and ranges were being fenced. And better strains of beef cattle had been introduced.

Longhorns were nearing extinction by 1920 when J. Frank Dobie assembled a small herd for the State of Texas. In 1927 special appropriation was approved in the U.S. Congress to establish a herd in the Wichita National Forest in Oklahoma.

Today, descendants of the Dobie herd are owned and managed by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department at Fort Griffin State Park.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 18

Your birthday today: Opens a long up-spiral of spiritual expansion-growth, with almost everything you do or experience contributing to your understanding of the larger reality. Material affairs seem by and large to flow smoothly. Relationships are productive where you permit them to be so. Today's natives are industrious planners, often scheduling more than is feasible and then urging others to bring the plans into actual existence.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Be prompt and active as you wind up the work week. Do it right the first time, as things are on the move, never to be repeated quite the same.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: You have all the energy that is needed, with perhaps a streak of laziness to overcome. Penetrating insight into old mysteries is available.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Other people have their own schemes and schedules. Find out what they are. Possibly you don't have to do as much as you thought.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Inconvenient as this spell of diverse deeds may be, you are better off with a strong sense of humor and the will to stay in a positive approach.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Resist that temptation toward showing off. Instead, get started on a definite effort to fix near-future plans, provide for your coming needs.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Clarity begins at home. If you have things all in order there and a list of first-things-first to follow, you can make good progress today.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: The questions of the day resolve themselves if you will start early enough so that it's only a matter of keeping at it.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: You have enough to do to make sure your immediate resources are intact, without making any impulsive financial rearrangements. Credit is best left unused today.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: A great deal depends on how businesslike you pursue your work despite a strong wanderlust, the temptation to get away from responsibility.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: For you, it's a natural day of bringing in the results of recent endeavors, worthy of all your skill. Later hours are suited for celebration.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You can't be in two places at once, regardless of invitation. Make up your mind early where you want to be and what you want to do.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Most likely you will be the center of attention for at least part of today, according to your "luck" and whether you've done anything lately to deserve it.

Investment Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite the market turnaround at the end of last week's decline, "a broad spectrum of stocks from the capital goods beneficiaries to thsmulti-national growth companies are trading at virtually bargain-basement P-E ratios," says the Spear Market Report. The letter advises investors not to be misled by the glum performance of the market "since the outlook for business at worst indicates a shallow and brief recession." Once investors realize the overall future of the economy is favorable, "those modest multiples should be driven up smartly," it adds.

E. F. Hutton says it continues to "feel that last week's setback did not signal the beginning of a significant decline even though the light volume made Friday's rally look somewhat suspect." Although the advance had some justification in reports the oil supply and price squeeze may be easing and gasoline usage dipped in the last week of December, the market's near term course still remains elusive, it adds.

The Federal Reserve Board's lowering of the margin requirement "could scarcely provide a lasting incentive to stock buyers unless the Board also moves to reduce short-term interest rates," according to Abraham & Co. Inc. The firm says short-term interest rates still are so high they deter "all but the most aggressive speculators from making increased use of stock market credit." The Board's margin cut apparently was more than a gesture, it adds, so the reduction should foreshadow another drop in short-term interest rates.

Bay Bridge

BAY ST. LOUIS, Miss. (UPI) — The Louisville and Nashville Railroad bridge spanning the Bay of St. Louis is the world's longest pre-stressed concrete railroad bridge.

Completed in 1967, the bridge is 10,170 feet long and was built at a cost of $4.9 million.

Stainless Steel Tableware

"Night Blossom" is the kind of fine stainless you've admired in department stores .... The kind of quality that stands out when you walk past. Here is stainless that will blend delight—fully with any decor, be it Modern, Formal, Mediterranean or Casual.

Each piece is finished individually, through repeated processes of rolling, pressing, polishing and buffing. Each bowl or blade has a mirror like polish, while the handle is softly shaded and burnished, and the design is identical on front and back.... The mark of finer quality flatware.

"Night Blossom" stainless tableware will last a lifetime with ordinary care and is dishwasher safe. CARING FOR STAINLESS: Salt left in contact with any stainless may pit or stain the metal. So might immersion in water for long periods. It is wise to wash, rinse and dry stainless as soon as possible after use.

The Pampa Daily News

A Watchful Newspaper

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Men of sporting blood love a horse race. In some respects, the struggle for survival — individual and national — is a type of horse race. At least, it's a contest. And if we were placing our bets at this time, our $2 would go on not - so - jolly old England.

We expect to be accused of anglophilia for saying so. If so, we plead guilty. The English image is a hodgepodge of balderdash, blundering, muddling through, pasty complexion, vile cooking, and coal soot that passes for tradition. Characteristically, the English people commit their national atrocities with decorum. Ignorant kings are beheaded and innocent peasants barbecued after proper judicial review by crooked tribunals. Due process is a bone that English politics throws to civilization. Yet there is a grand steadfastness in British character that lays a coat upon the stream of national travail so that enduring values may tirp safely across.

To lapse into Americanese, England is busted. Great Britain has become Britain. Socialism is starving everyone to death, and socialists along with the rest. Therein lies the hope, a confrontation with stark reality. Nationalization is out of petrol. The blooming thing won't go. Uncle Sugar across the Atlantic is too busy with Russia, mainland China and the Mideast to bail out European types to the extent of the past. (Confound it all, gentlemen, you are jolly well on your own, and there will be no kidney pudding again until you learn how to produce.)

But our guess is that England will make it. Let us re-phrase that. We wager that Englishmen will make it. (There is a difference.) The exchequer being flat, the factories being closed more than half the time, there is nothing left to steal, no more incentive for English politicians to keep on damaging the country that they love. England has energy resource. Englishmen have skills. All other options being canceled, what remains but to go back to work — to labor, to produce, to trade, to struggle and grow stronger. Taken together with a renowned courage, that bespeaks an upturn. That's our estimate. It's worth $2.

Dual Citizenship

A couple of years ago, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a person did not necessarily lose his American citizenship by becoming the citizen of another country. Thereafter the State Department stated in a letter that the citizenship status of any individual depended on that person's particular circumstances and thus could not, in all cases, be predetermined. The net effect of the court ruling was thus tantamount to dual citizenship. It set up a divided allegiance situation. This was interpreted as a benefit to the struggling state of Israel. For at that time numerous persons of American origin were participating in Israeli efforts.

In retrospect, the court's opinion appears not to be serving the expected end. For one thing, the matter of divided loyalties is not easy to defend. It raises the old question of how anyone can serve two masters. At best, it introduces a doubt, serving as a propaganda tool against the supposed beneficiaries.

Secondly, the ruling serves to set the Jewish community apart. The purchase of an Israel bond for filial reasons by one who is known to be 100 per cent American is understandably regarded in a different light from purchase of the same bond by a 100 per cent American who is suspected of being only a 50 per cent American.

Thirdly, the confusing result of the court's holding now works as well for Israel's enemies as for Israel itself. It is a two - edged sword. For months, one edge didn't seem to matter. But in the last 18 months, Arabs have demonstrated their skill as in-fighters. Duality is a dangerous invitation for combatants to enjoy the coverage of the American flag.

Fourth, the court opinion was foolish to start with. There is no such thing as a hyphenated American. Either a person's first loyalty is to his friends and neighbors who are comprised in the American community, or it is not. Any individual may have his goodwill toward the people of some other land and more toward some than toward others. National origin understandably weighs such preferences. But the proposition of dual citizenship is a latter - day attachment to American tradition, unnatural to is character.

The turn od events could cause the justices to change their pipe tobacco and have another look at what has turned out to be an embarrassing decision. If so, good.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Bundling was an American courting custom practiced in the 1700s. A couple would lie clothed on the same bed. They were separated by a board or were chaperoned and could converse without the need of heating, The World Almanac says. Also practiced in Britain and Holland, bundling was abandoned because of improved living conditions and social disapproval.

Question Box

QUESTION: What caused inflation? Recently it was stated that "the root cause of inflation is excessive spending and budgetary imbalance." Someone else countered with: "The root cause of inflation is the charging of interest on the new issuance of money!" Is there any connection?

ANSWER: Blaming the Federal Reserve System without also blaming government spending is about the same same as some other people who contend that business and industry cause inflation by increasing prices, and that labor unions cause cause inflation by getting higher pay for their members.

Certainly there is a connection. But unless the national government checks its spending in excess of income, there is no way to check inflation. Inflation is caused by people in government rejecting the idea that they should be responsible for their acts, maintain stable currency, and allow free trade between free individuals. Politicians want inflation so they can appear to be generous to the people, without levying direct taxes to pay for their purported benefactions. Instead, by inflation they level the most cruel tax of all by eroding the savings of those who have sought to provide for their future by not spending their earnings when received.

The new issuance of money is made possible by congressional act. It is made possible because those in government, including congressmen, want the power to spend money they do not have. The Federal means used by the politicians to expand the money supply. Some politicians and others say paying of interest on the new money is the evil. Actually, the banking system would be unwilling to participate in this act if its members were not paid for their part. Those who insist that the government should issue unlimited unbacked greenbacks instead of having the banks do the issuing overlook the fact that it still would be inflation to issue money not backed by anything except the politicians's power to tax.

Any politicians who proposes issuing government greenbacks instead of Federal Reserve notes is not willing to face the truth.

Issuance of unbacked currency, higher prices of products and higher wages are all the result of inflation, not the cause. Politicians spend money with the illusion that they can maintain prosperity through constantly rising wages and prices, and they use the usually respected banking system to get the money without being accused of raising direct taxes, which might prevent their being reelected and retaining their power and influence. Dr. Ludwig von Mises put it well in "Omnipotent Government":

"All governments, however, are firmly resolved not to relinquish inflation and credit expansion. They have all sold thir soul to the devil of easy money. It is a great comfort to every administration to be able to make its citizens happy by spending. For public opinion will then attribute the resulting boom to its current rules. The inevitable slump will occur later and burden their successors. It is the typical policy of a previous deluge Lord Keyes, the champion of this policy, says: 'In the long run we are all dead.' But unfortunately nearly all of us outlive the short run. We are destined to spend decades paying for the easy money orgy or a few years."

Potomac Fever

By JACK POSNER

The Pentagon requested a 10 per cent to 15 per cent increase in fuel. That's as necessary as another hide - away for Robert Vesco.

Newsmen and a House committee agreed on a bill to protect the press against disclosure of sources. Sort of a gag.

The IRS is checking two Nixon tax returns it praised last summer. Will they love him in January as last June?

Mrs. Nixon will not be paid for her job on the National Advisory Council. Her husband can't afford any more tax reductions.

The Democrats miss their phones not being tapped. Now they get a dial tone instead of "Hail to the Chief."

Energy chief Simon predicted an energy shortage for 10 to 15 years — unless the Pentagon stops gassing up the brass.

"Gee, fellas -- thanks for putting it all into perspective."

Grassroots Opinion

ELK POINT, S.D., LEADER - COURIER: "Most countries of the world use the metric system for measurements. The notable exception is the United States and it probably won't be many years until this country does. It is actually a much simpler method than ours and it will be a great advantage especially with companies who engage in foreign trade. There are many other advantages as well. The bad feature about it is that we will all have to educate ourselves to a new system of measurement."

ST. LOUIS, MO., LABOR TRIBUNE: "The ... battle of the budget waged between the Congress and the Administration should draw public attention to the urgency of establishing coordinated planning and control of federal spending. The nation can no longer afford a congressional appropriative process that resembles a gang of criminally inclined youths racing through a jewelry store. If both Congress and the Administration fail to live up to their fiscal responsibilities, national bankruptcy seems to be the ultimate alternative. And that usually requires a dictatorship and would end our freedom under representative government."

HARTWELL, GA., SUN: "The 'do - more - for - the - poor' politicians don't seem to have thought about what they will 'do more' with after they get every body's taxes up over 100 percent of income. Actually, the 'do more' disease is double - barrelled. Politicians who catch it have a compulsion to (a) do more for the poor, and (b) do more for themselves. So they spend like a man with an inexhaustible golden - egg - laying goose that can't find a stopper. But the taxpaying goose may tighten up when the 'do more' gang starts demanding more than he produces."

SKANEATELES, N.Y., PRESS AND MARCELLUS OBSERVER: ".... Senate and House members are discussing the granting of long - term credit to Communist countries at an interest orate of 2 percent — while the prime interest rate in the United States is bumping 9 percent. The subsidy is interesting since nothing really has changed in the Communist attitudes. Red China has said so. Cuba has said so. Just recently Mikhail Suslov, the top Soviet idealogue, gave the Russian version of detente. 'There can be,' he said, 'no peaceful coexistence between socialism and capitalism.' The Communist Party's effort to 'mold a new man,' he added, 'must take place in an uncompromising implacable struggle against a new man,' he added, 'must take place in an uncompromising inplacable struggle against bourgeois ideology.'' The Communist purity of ideology apparently is willing to compromise only to the extent of taking the fruit of capitalism — Western money."

McCOMB, MISS., ENTERPRISE - JOURNAL: "There are some problems which the public knows littl about but which affect people personally. An example is the devaluation of the dollar. Now it is being said that food prices have been affected by the dollar devaluation. Certainly this would mean that dollar devaluation is close to people personally. But the monetary system is a specialty. Only the specialists understand it. It is comparable to a surgical problem. No one would argue with his surgeon about how he should perform an operation. And by the same token few of us are in a position to argue with the economic specialists, even if the problem is personal."

THERMOPOLIS, WYO., INDEPENDENT RECORD: "Unemployment, according to the experts, has many causes. We think we know one of them. It happens when a young boy says he will agree to work for you and comes for the interview in faded, ragged dungarees with the bottoms cut off; dirty sneakers and no socks; and a semi - obscene sweatshirt with the sleeves cut off. He wants immediate executive status, a percentage of the take, three weeks paid vacation ... a twenty - year retirement and a private office. Then he goes away angry and says "The establishment won't hire me because of my long hair."

HARRISVILLE, W. VA., RITCHIE GAZETTE AND CAIRO STANDARD: "The game of life is very much like the game of football. There's the goal we all strive to reach; there are times when combination pays better than individual brilliance; there are big men — and big jobs — to tackle, penalties for those who break the rules, applause of the crowd for clever headwork and spectacular play; unfeeling jeers for failure that, with just a little luck, might have been a success; there are trips and falls — and fouls. Life might be a game of football for many. The trouble is that we are sometimes the ball — kicked and buffeted about. Instead of being the player, we are (the) one to be played with. And it hurts."

ONEONTA, ALA., SOUTHERN DEMOCRAT: "Oil companies say that a vehicle driven no faster than 50 miles an hour requires 11 percent less fuel than when driven 60 miles per hour. It would be an ironic twist of fate if highways should become safer places not because drivers are endeavoring to make them safe but are trying to save gasoline."

YUBA CITY, CALIF "Russian intellectuals are perfectly free to express dissenting opinions. And the government is perfectly free to make them wish they hadn't."

VINCENNES, IND., NEWS: "Things just aren't the same for Rover as in the good old days. When he brings a bone home today and buries it, his master digs it up and makes soup."

Seniors Coming to Bat; Their Number's Growing

By PAUL HARVEY

Americans past 65 have been tuned out, turned down, prematurely buried alive.

Americans past 65 still are discriminated against, deprived when it comes to jobs, taxes and sex. They are hit most by muggers, hurt worst by inflation and humiliated by condescending advertising.

But that is about to change: The seniors are coming to bat.

The year 2000 will be here in just 27 more Christmases. By then, one in three Americans will be over 65.

And between now and then, a society which has been geared to deference to young people is going to shift gears.

Our preoccupation with pampering young people will evolve into a culture concerned with the problems and the potentials of the elderly.

It's interesting to note that American Airlines retired C.R. Smith as president because he was "too old" at 70. No the airline's in uch desperate financial trouble that they've begged him to come back and run it — at 75.

Young people, seeking to "find themselves," haven't yet. One of the masterminds of mental illness and most monumental examples of mental health is Dr. Karl Menninger, at 80.

We don't all run the race at the same pace, but enough Americans are remaining alert, energetic and enterprising indefinitely so that government, merchants and society will have to relearn respect for their elders.

It has not been until the last two years that doctors, clergy and relatives have recognized the biological interests of the Geritol generation.

For the first time since Solomon, we're able to talk aloud about and seek consideration for the sex drive of many elderly.

Families who have been turning away from their own kin at a time of life when their need for love is greater than at any time since infancy will no longer be warehousing the elderly.

In Colorado Springs, I have previewed tomorrow: a retirement ranch.

For the able over 60, it's a lifetime home in one of the world's most magnificent natural settings.

The Cheyenne Mountain Ranch: Everything about the buildings, grounds, facilities, villas and apartments is in the image and likeness of a luxury resort. In this atmosphere, and others sure to imitate it, we'll add years to our lives and life to our years; the deplorable suicide rate for the elderly will turn around.

Arilie Hochschild, assistant professor of sociology at the University of California, Berkeley, says "The myth that older people are alike has delayed research on what some are like and wht some do like, and most want to live in a community of their peers as 'independent equals.' "

With the birthrate in decline, our nation's disproportionate preoccupation with young people is tapering off; the country and the economy will now have to answer to their elders again.

The bush leag ended their inning with some runs, some hits, many errors. Now the seniors are coming to bat."

Many Questionable Tax Write-Offs In Records

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON — The actions of President Nixon and Senator Hubert Humphrey to gain large tax deductions on their vice presidential papers are only the most obvious of many questionable transactions for tax advantage through "gifts" to public institutions.

Literally thousands of public and private persons are able to write - off millions of dollars annually on "gifts" that are just as questionable, or more questionable, from a standpoint of good public policy and fair application of the tax laws.

This has taken place largely without public knowledge, because of what many consider an unreasonable extension of the confidentiality to apply to all federal income tax matters.

Because of the secrecy that covers many "gift" deductions, the public is unaware of excessive evaluations of "art" and "antiques" in massive tax breaks that would outrage the average taxpayer.

This is not to say that private and public officials should not be encouraged to make gifts to libraries, the Smithsonian Institution and other similar public institutions with some proper "reasonable tax advantage."

But, the question of what is "reasonable" is often lost in the desire of library officials to obtain "significant gifts," the desire of the appraiser to make his services worthwhile to the donor, and desire of the donor for the largest possible evaluation as a deduction.

It is time for the joint committee on internal revenue taxation to examine what has been taking place in this area of "gift" deductions, and to consider making public the whole area of "gift" deductions, particularly where they involve items other than cash.

President Nixon, Senator Humphrey and many others would probably be less enthusiastic about such tax advantages if they had believed the circumstances would be subject to immediate scrutiny by the public and the press.

Chairman Wilbur Mills (Dem., Ark.) would do well to examine the whole picture as his joint committee prepares to render judgment on the legality and propriety of President Nixon's write - off of $576,000 in taxes on his vice presidential papers.

The Internal Revenue Service ruling on the Nixon papers was in fact a gift to Richard Nixon of $576,000 in forgiven taxes — a sum equal to more than twice the $280,000 in salary he received in the eight years he was vice president. The same is true of the tax write - off of $200,000 Senator Humphrey will receive, which is more than the $172,000 salary he received in four years as vice president.

And to be certain that the investigation is not unfair to President Nixon and Senator Humphrey simply because they are in politics, it would be well to examine the still - pending multi - million - dollar "art" write - off on a collection Joseph H. Hirshorn is giving to the Smithsonian Institution.

The tax write-off of Hirshorn's agreement with Dillon Ripley, secretary to the Smithsonian, is reported to be at least $50 million — ten times the $576,000 tax advantage President Nixon received on his vice presidential papers.

Ripley, as the major pusher and mover for the Hirshorn gift, is extremely secretive about details of the evaluations, but did acknowledge that "between $4 and $5 million" was Hirshorn's acquisition cost for the art and sculpture works that are to be given to the Smithsonian.

Hirshorn contends that the art and sculpture had increased to between $40 million to $50 million by 1966, when the Johnson administration, encouraged by then Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas, made the first moves toward accepting Hirshorn's offer, along with a host of controversial conditions.

The consitions agreed to by the Smithsonian included construction of the Hirshorn museum and sculpture gardens on the mall at a construction cost of between $15 million and $20 million, a commitment to pay about $2 million - a - year in salaries and maintenance.

Hirshorn has not appeared before these committees under oath to answer the charges, and he was unavailable to this reporter for questioning on the charges.

However, he has been quoted in the New York Times in recent weeks as putting an $80 million to $100 million evaluation on his "art" gift to the Smithsonian. It is expected that his tax lawyers will make every effort to get the highest evaluation possible when the "gift" becomes effective later this spring with the completion of the museum.

Questions were raised about the propriety of theirshorn agreement in the first two years of the Nixon administration based on essentially all of the facts that are available now. President Nixon gave it his personal approval over the recommendations of some subordinates — subordinates who were unaware that the President had his own tax write - off in progress on the vice presidential papers;

If the Nixon and Humphrey "gift" transactions are questionable because the papers were accumulated at government expense, and represent a double bite at the taxpayers dollars, then surely there are some equally serious public policy questions on Ripley's agreement with Hirshorn.

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS

Billy Lemons, standout offensive lineman at Texas A&M last season as a freshman and 1973 Pampa graduate, is not among those who blame Buddy Williams and the coaching staff for mediocre records the past two seasons.

Lemons played for Williams in 1972 when the Harvesters wound up 5-5 after being picked to win district.

"It was a combination of things. The change of coaches — we knew Coach Williams as an assistant coach and weren't used to his style — that may have affected us a little.

"The big thing was mistakes. We were well - drilled, we knew what to do, but we laid the ball on the ground too many times.

"He (Williams) is a fine coach. He's a hard driver, he makes you work."

Lemons played for both Williams and Swede Lee. "They're different as far as personality goes. Coach Williams is more emotional," said the former Harvester.

* * *

Lee was the first to congratulate Williams when the Arkansas High Coach learned Buddy was the top candidate for the Nacogdoches job a couple of weeks ago.

* * *

Gordon Brown, whom Williams replaced as athletic director and head coach in Nacogdoches, says that when the school board hired Buddy Tuesday night, there were four other candidates voted on also. The list of five had been selected from 30 applicants prior to the meeting.

Brown's statement contradicts some heard earlier which indicated Williams had already accepted the job at Nacogdoches. According to Brown, who officially recommended Williams, it was incorrect to say that the hiring was official or that Williams was the only man for the job prior to the Nacogdoches school board meeting.

As a result, at least one of the two local radio stations and the Pampa News were misinformed — not the fault of the media, of course, but the fault of the source. It may be that the school board was misinformed.

Athletic director Ed Lehnick left for East Texas Tuesday and should be back sometime today with names of candidates for the Pampa head football coaching job. Hopefully, a couple of men Lehnick will contact are John Blocker of Kilgore, a AAA school in East Texas, and Andy Griffin of White Oak, a perennial class A winner.

Blocker has indicated he would possibly accept a West Texas coaching offer. He finished 8-2 last season and 7-3 the year before and is highly regarded as a coach. Blocker is also on the NCAA rules committee.

White Oak is the "silk stocking" class A school of East Texas because of the town's wealth due to oil fields and industry. Griffin has been contacted by several AAAA schools but has never been given an official offer despite his success at White Oak.

Lehnick contacted Donnie Laurence of Mount Pleasant, the 1974 state AAA runner-up (loser to Cuero in the finals), about the Pampa job and Laurence said he wasn't interested. The Mount Pleasant coach finished 13-1 last season, 11-1 in '72 and 9-1 in '71.

Laurence has turned down several offers to coach in AAAA.

Robert DeWeese of KGRO received a phone call from a listener on his Newswatch program Tuesday morning who asked if there was any age limit for the Pampa coaching job.

It seems the man has a nephew in Rhode Island fresh out of college and looking for a job in the football world. The [illegible] pa man asked DeWeese who his nephew should contact about the job.

Pampa Hosts 'Horns In 3-4A Opener

Caprock, the pre-season district favorite according to a coaches poll, will open Pampa's 10-game, 3-AAAA schedule at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Harvester Fieldhouse.

The Longhorns, 10-8 for the season, are tall, quick and the best ball club Bill Bolk has ever had at Caprock, according to Pampa coach Robert McPherson, and according to Bolk, are crippled.

Three of Caprock's regulars — Eddie Owens, Steve Marcum and Larry Maxwell — were listed as injured Wednesday and Bolk is hopeful they will be ready to go by Friday. Marcum and Owens, 6-0 and 6-1 guards, have ankle injuries while Maxwell, a 6-4 forward, has a torn Achilles tendon.

Reserved-seat tickets for Friday's Pampa - Caprock game in Harvester Fieldhouse are on sale for $1.50 at the high school business office. Reserved seats for all five home games are available for $7.50.

The three, however, are probable starters for the Pampa game. Owens, all - district last season, is averaging 12 points a game and is "the best player on the Caprock team," says McPherson. Maxwell is scoring at an 11-point clip and Marcum is averaging six.

Rodney Skelton and Fil Velasquez, two 6-6 posts, are averaging six and 11 points and give the Longhorns exceptional rebounding strength. David Lester, a 6-2 forward, rounds out Bolk's top five. David Ream, a 5-8 guard, is also expected to see action Friday. Lester and Ream own 10 - and six - point averages.

Probable starters for Pampa, said McPherson, are 6-6 and 6-3 posts Randy Warner and Billy Wilbon, 6-5 forward Howie Lewis, 6-2 forward Rick Beesley and 5-10 guard Ray Powell.

Pampa finished 16-5 in non - conference games compared to 12-7 at this time last season. The Harvesters defeated Caprock, 61-49 in last year's district opener, also played in Pampa.

Pampa's Shockers will take on the Caprock Shorthorns prior to the varsity game at 6 p.m.

Ex-Yanks Mantle, Ford Inducted Into Cooperstown's Hall Of Fame

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mickey Mantle retired five years ago, but he still hasn't quit.

Not subconsciously anyway.

He said so Wednesday on an unprecedented occasion, one in which he and his old Yankee buddy, Whitey Ford, became the first two players from the same club ever to be voted into Baseball's Hall of Fame simultaneously.

This isn't the first time Mickey Mantle has bared his soul. He has done it before, but in the 23 years I've known him, I can't ever recall him reaching this far back in the recesses of his psyche.

He talked about how much he misses the competitive part of baseball now that he's out of it.

"I still dream about it almost every night," he said. "I dream that I'm trying to make a comeback."

Later on, he went deeper yet.

"I dream about trying to get back into Yankee Stadium and they won't let me in," he said. "I pull up in a cab and try to get in by crawling through a small hole, but I can't. I see people all around me...maybe 70,000...and I hear Casey Stengel on the bench, saying, 'Where's Mantle? Where's Mantle?' Then somebody else says 'it's okay, he'll be here soon.'"

Mickey Mantle became only the seventh player to make the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility Wednesday and naturally that pleased him, but not as much perhaps as going in together with his ex-roomie, Whitey Ford.

The two come from entirely different backgrounds —Mantle from small, rural Commerce, Okla., and Ford from busy, bustling Astoria, Long Island, in New York City—but from the first time they met 23 years ago, they hit it off magnificently. They generally could be found together like some kind of entry, 1 and 1-A.

It didn't seem to matter to either that one was country and the other big city.

"I'd say 'over yonder,'" Mickey Mantle laughed at Wednesday's session, "and Whitey would say 'where the hell is over yonder?' But you know he says 'vodkar-r-r and soda.'"

Now both were laughing.

At first, Mantle explained, there were three of them with the Yankees, Billy Martin, Ford and himself.

"I remember the three of us going hunting together down in Commerce after the 1956 season," said Ford. "Mickey's wife, Merlyn, didn't know much about baseball then, and if you recall Mickey won the Triple Crown that year.

"I said to Merlyn, 'What do you think of the year Mickey had?'

"'Did he do good?' she asked.

"He won the Triple Crown, I said.

"'What does that mean?'" she said.

Ford then went on to tell how hospitable Mickey's family was to him during his visit.

"Mickey woke me this one morning and said, 'C'mon downstairs: Mom's got breakfast ready.' Well, you know being from New York, I'm used to bacon and eggs. Now I see this quail on the table. Biscuits and breasts of quail on top of it, and home-made gravy on top of that. I didn't think I could ever eat it. But then everybody started eating and I began picking on it. When I finally finished I found out it was great. We had more the next morning. You know, they're such plain, honest people down there, you love 'em."

There is no question about the way Whitey Ford feels about Mickey Mantle and vice versa. That goes personally and professionally.

NEXT SEASON

UPI's Final Ratings System To Change

NEW YORK (UPI) — Starting next season, UPI's board of coaches will cast its final ballot for the top 10 college football teams after the year-end bowl games instead of at the end of the regular season.

The board of trustees of the American Football Coaches Association (AFCA), acting on a proposal by UPI Sports Editor Milton Richman, voted at San Francisco Jan. 10 to extend the final ratings by coaches until all the bowl results are in.

Since 1950, when UPI formed its first board of 35 coaches including five from each of the nation's seven geographical sections, the weekly ratings have ended after games scheduled on the last Saturday of the regular season.

UPI's national champion has been selected in compliance with the wishes of a majority of coaches who preferred to rate teams solely on the basis of regular season play.

In recent years, however, post-season games occasionally have produced showdowns that altered the championship picture. One occurred in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Eve when No. 1 Alabama was beaten by No. 4 Notre Dame.

In response to a letter from Richman to outgoing AFCA president John McKay of Southern California, the association voted to extend the final ballot until after the bowl games.

"I think it's a good thing," said Bob Blackman of Illinois, new president of the AFCA, by telephone from his office on the Illinois campus. "There are so many teams in bowl games these days, we will have a better chance to evaluate them. The coaches ratings will become more meaningful in selecting a national champion."

"UPI is delighted with the decision," said Richman. "We have enjoyed a fine relationship with the coaches through the 24-year history of the ratings board and we always have abided by their wishes in their preference for a final ballot based strictly on regular season play.

"But times do change. More and more people are insisting bowl games be taken into consideration."

Tucson Open To Begin With First Round Today

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Johnny Miller, who already has $60,000 under his belt, heads a field, including this year's seven top money winners, as the $150,000 Dean Martin Tucson Open gets under way today.

Miller was the odds on man to beat in this third stop on the Professional Golf Association tour. He captured both the Phoenix and Bing Crosby Opens and was out to see if the third time was really the charm.

The 26-year-old Miller has never had a good game on the 7,200 yard Tucson National Golf Course in the five years he has been on the pro circuit. However, this year Miller said he is ready with an understatement: "I'm going good."

Also in the field are top money winners Grier Jones, Hubert Green, Dave Stockton, Rod Funseth, John Schroeder and Miller Barber. Lanny Wadkins, in second place in earnings this year, is bypassing the event as are Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus.

Defending Tucson Open champ Bruce Crampton and sentimental favorite Lee Trevino are in the field of 144.

A team led by pro Mason Rudolph shot a 17-under-par 55 Wednesday to win the pro-am portion of the tourney. Rudolph captured $500 in prize money. The Pro-Am was played before a record crowd estimated at 35,000 persons.

Digger Phelps says he isn't worried and doesn't plan any tricks when his second-ranked Notre Dame squad takes on powerhouse UCLA Saturday.

"I've played against them four times, and I'm not worrying about their game," Phelps said. "We've got to take a positive approach to the game. We don't have 87 straight, but we've got nine, and all of our nine are this year."

By the time the top-ranked Bruins meet Notre Dame in the nationally-televised clash, they probably won't have 87 straight anymore. They'll probably have 88.

Iowa will be UCLA's sparring partner tonight and Bill Walton, still nursing pains in his back from a muscle bruise, will probably see limited action. Walton, twice Player of the Year, is expected to be pretty much himself by Saturday afternoon's awaited showdown.

But Phelps still isn't worried.

"We're playing UCLA, not Walton," Phelps said. "The kid may get 25 or 30 points. He's got that capability. Our job is to try to hold the other guys down.

"The guy I always respected, who keeps them together, is Keith Wilkes. Against Maryland, he fouls out with 3:51 to go and Maryland gets right back in the game. Against North Carolina State, Walton is in foul trouble, and Wilkes gets 27 points and in one stretch when they were losing he got six straight points.

The late migratory bird season ends at sunset Sunday. This includes ducks, geese and dove. Those hunters who have found tanks or lakes with open water, have had excellent hunting. Most of the waterfowl have been concentrated due to the dry spell that has persisted in the South Plains.

The Panhandle counties have been covered periodically by snow furnishing some very good waterfowl hunting in the grain fields. Most of the playa lakes have been frozen over, pushing the birds to the large reservoirs such as Lake Meredith, north of Amarillo, and Bull Lake, northwest of Littlefield.

One source of open water missed by sportsmen is the small creek with running water. Most of the puddle ducks such as mallards, scaup, gadwalls, and teal like these small fresh water streams and they furnish excellent jump shooting.

Sandhill crane season doesn't close until Jan. 27, giving crane hunters an extra week to hunt. The wintering population has reached its peak with Lamb, Bailey, Terry and Lynn counties holding an estimated 200,000 birds.

The little brown crane furnished some excellent eating and the most popular method of fixing the meat is to fillet the meat from each side of breast bone, and then slicing these two hand sized pieces of meat into one - fourth inch thick strips. These can then be floured and fried to your liking and the flavor is excellent.

Wild game that is prepared and cooked correctly furnishes a break in the household diet. There is nothing that makes a landowner or sportsman more furious than to see wild game animals or fish discarded along side a country road or hidden in the garbage bag going to waste. If hunters or fishermen cannot or will not use wild meat, then it should not be harvested.

Sportsmen are reminded that their responsibility does not end with the taking of game, obeying the rules and fair chase, but also, includes the wise use of the game meat itself.

What's It Like With George?

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — "What's it like to be married to George C. Scott?"

Trish Van Devere, who's been Mrs. Scott for 16 months, didn't mind the question she must too often have been asked.

"Well," she replied, in an indefinably attractive way, with a candor you had to admire, "it has its ups and downs, it's good and it's bad, it's delicious — and it's terrible."

It's delicious right now. She promoting "The Day of the Dolphin," in which she co-stars with Scott. She thinks it's one of the few good pictures made recently.

"I virtually don't go to pictures anymore because of pictures like 'Blow-up.' I love to get caught up in a story. I watch a film on TV. I get involved. I holler. George says, 'Will you hush?' I say, 'No, I will NOT hush!'

"If you pay $3 to see a movie, they're obliged to interest you. If they bore you, they're cheating. I saw two pictures I absolutely love ... 'Fat City' and 'Cries and Whispers' ... I like 'Touch of Class' and 'The New Land' ... George doesn't go to movies at all. He's worse than I am." She thought that so few good movies are made now that an actress might need to get another occupation between films.

The Dolphin put together by Mike Nichols for Joseph E. Levine is "so totally rare, a whole family can go see it," she said. Across the luncheon table at Raffles she spoke movingly of her friendship with the dolphins ... of talking with them, or to them ... and how when the picture was finished, they seemed to know and swam out to sea never to be heard from again.

Mrs. Scott was married about 10 years ago while a student at Ohio Wesleyan at Delaware — "and unmarried very shortly afterward." She met Scott in Spain when they were filming "The Last Run." Scott, as an actor, she says, "almost never makes a mistake," and he didn't, according to Trish Scott, when he declined the Oscar for "Patton."

"Do you have any rules for handling him?" I asked.

The mistress of his 15 acres in the Greenwich, Conn., area replied: "Yeah, not to handle him. And that's a terrible word to use — to 'handle' somebody. It belittles the person you're handling."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL...

Lionel Hampton got over cataract surgery (by his saxophonist - ophthalmologist Dr. Charles Kelman), immediately and scheduled a Harlem jam session the next day ... Linda Hopkins, opening at Reno Sweeney, doing a Bessie Smith revival, was cheered by Liza Minnelli, Ellen Greene, Melba Moore, Jacques Bellini, Novella Nelson, and Ben Vereen, who threw flowers at her and her "orchestra" — Lenny Meyers ... Critics weren't invited just yet, but, as his father, I'm allowed to say that the previews of the Earl Wilson Jr. musical "Let My People Come" at the Village Gate are very absorbing. I'm not permitted to divulge the contents.

Agnes Moorehead left "Gigi" for a week for a checkup, understudy Louise Kirtland is taking over ... Ray Stark starts filming Barbra Streisand's "Funny Lady" April 1, in NY, Hollywood and Atlantic City ... Carol Spiro, who had many dates with Richard Burton, told Joe Franklin she wasn't at all surprised when he went back to Liz Taylor and feels it's really Luv.

Show Biz Quiz: What was the name of Baby Snooks's little brother? Ans. to yesterday's: "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" was the theme of "Duffy's Tavern."

Singer Charles Aznavour said he'd attend the Super Bowl, and hoped to meet Garo Ypremian, the Dolphins' star kicker, a fellow Armenian ... The original case of "Dolly" will attend the show's 10th ann'y party Jan. 16 at the Ground Floor (including Carol Channing and TV star David Hartman, who was an unknown then).

Jane Powell will take over Robert Merrill's east side townhouse during her "Irene" stint ... Dinah Shore's ex, George Montgomery, was asked to pose nude for a mag centerfold, like her current beau Burt Reynolds; George declined.

I'D RATHER BE LIGHT

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Mark Tendler, a former wrestler who now does some acting, was asked which job he preferred. "Acting," he said, "— there aren't as many rehearsals."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: There's a great new diet that includes tranquilizers. It doesn't make you lose weight, but you're no longer bothered about being fat.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Nature thinks of everything. Just at the age when you start to feel like a fifth wheel, nature gives you a spare tire."

Aspirin Can Produce Allergies

By G.C THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible to have an allergic reaction to aspirin? If so, what type of reaction would occur?

—Mrs. R.H.

Very definitely yes, some individuals can be hypersensitive to aspirin. Not that it's common, but it does happen.

Likeliest manifestations are breaking out in a rash or hives; or touching off an asthma attack; or intestinal track symptoms.

Aspirin is a common ingredient in many headache or pain - relieving preparations, so anyone with such an allergy should watch for the word aspirin in the contents of various mixtures. Look also for its chemical name "acetylsalicylic acid."

An alternative medication for such folks is acetaminophen, also called Tylenol, either alone or in combination with other medication.

And, of course, always remember to remind your doctor, when he is prescribing for you, that you have that allergy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please send my your booklet, "Ear Noises," for which I enclose 15 cents and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope. Sometimes I have a sort of ear ringing, and once in a while I get a bit of blurred vision for a few seconds. Could these be signs of a vitamin deficiency?

—N.S.

No, they don't fit the picture of vitamin deficiency at all. High blood pressure could be involved, as well as such possibilities as otosclerosis. I'd want to check your blood pressure as a first step and then your hearing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You printed a letter pertaining to a Milwaukee brace for curvature of the spine. We have a 12 - year - old daughter and have been taking her to a chiropractor twice a week for treatments plus exercises she has to do daily. She has been going for six months with no noticeable improvement.

We asked the chiropractor about the brace and he has no knowledge of it. Any advice or information you could give us would be appreciated.

—Mrs. B.B.

My advice would be to take your daughter to an orthopedic surgeon — by which I do not imply that surgery is going to be either necessary or advisable, but an orthopedic specialist is one who can evaluate the case and recommend proper treatment.

Because of your particular location, you may decide that you should go to either Dallas or Oklahoma City, at least for the original diagnosis of the problem, but that does not mean that treatment will have to be done there.

And I am sure than any orthopedic specialist will be thoroughly familiar with the Milwaukee brace, and be able to advise you whether it is going to help your daughter.

Incidentally, I am glad your getting started while your daughter is as young as she is. A few years later the bones become fixed and not too much can be done to correct curvature of the spine.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For the past year my husband, who is 69, has increasingly complained of cold feet. A recent physical revealed nothing, all tests proving normal. Have you any suggestions?

—Mrs. F.M.S.

At his age, there may be a gradual decline in briskness of circulation, and my suggestion would be wool socks. And — possibly — Buerger's exercises, which his doctor can readily explain to him.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You said masturbation does not cause V.D. What does masturbation cause?

—R.W.

Nothing.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading the booklet, "The Way To Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson in care of Publishers - Hall Syndicate, 401 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill 60611, enclosing a long, self - addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope, and 25 cents in coin to cover printing and handling.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Under Twenty

By DIANE O'BRIEN

One of the key elements in growing up, becoming more mature, is the transition from being a more or less regulated child to becoming an individual responsible for one's own actions.

A key in this change is your relations with those around you; your friends and members of your family. You are no longer told exactly what you must do and you are no longer given those things your family decides you need.

Your actions, particularly those towards others, are more and more your own personal concern and how you handle them is a key to just how well you are making the transition from child to adult. It is a wonderful time of experimentation and at the same time it is a challenge.

Fairness and honesty are two of the vital cornerstones to this period of your growth.

For example, your parents may well have tended to give you your own way when you were small. As you grew you realized that your friends weren't always ready to do exactly what you wanted to do when you wanted to do it. Your family also has changed and your way isn't everybody else's way.

If you are sharing the family car, the telephone, or time with friends you now have to be fair. You have to learn that other people have needs and desires and that yours cannot always prevail.

You are learning that on this Saturday your friends want to do something and you are fair and do it with them, recognizing that the next time around what you want to do may be on the schedule.

Honesty and fairness are closely allied. You've got to be honest with yourself and realize when you are being selfish or asking for more than your share. You've got to be honest with others in presenting your case and, also important, honest with those who try to impose their wishes too heavily on you. Fairness doesn't mean bending over backward, it requires a mutual respect of one person for another.

Fairness means not taking advantage of those who may not know what you know. Fairness means not using childish tricks and lies to get what you want. Fairness and honesty applied to those you deal with in everyday life means that you are really growing up.

The Lighter Side

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional hearings got under way this week to determine whether the energy crisis really exists.

Among some of the prospective witnesses, I understand, is Virgil Kohoutek, chairman of the board of the Kohoutek Petroleum Co., who is credited with having discovered the crisis.

When Kohoutek first spotted it last year, fuel experts predicted it would be the most spectacular crisis of this century, surpassing even the 1929 stock market crisis.

But thus far it has failed to materialize in the anticipated magnitude, raising doubts that the crisis would ever appear at all.

As Voltaire Said...

Well, Voltaire once said that "if God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent him."

And if Voltaire were alive today, he probably would say the same thing about the energy crisis.

(This Voltaire, incidentally, is not the Harry Voltaire you used to know, but Voltaire the pen name of Francois Marie Arouet.)

Poet, dramatist, satirist, historian and all-around good fellow that he was, Voltaire would have recognized that the energy crisis is fulfilling a desperate need in modern life.

I refer to the need to have something to blame things on when things go badly. Which is quite often of late.

Historically, the American people have blamed their troubles on politicians. But politicians have become increasingly unsatisfactory as receptacles for blame - throwers.

Their Main Disadvantage

Their main disadvantage as blame-catchers is that no matter how blameworthy a politician may be, there is always someone around who is stupid enough to defend him.

Usually, it's the guy on the next bar stool.

Thus, blaming things on politicians has become counter-productive. It only leads to dreary arguments and, depending on the number of drinks, occasional fist fights.

Worst yet, the blamers are likely to display their sentiments on bumper stickers, which are a leading cause of rear end auto crashes and resultant whiplashes.

Club mosses, whose miniature leaves twine around their stems in spirals and appear to be moss, are tiny descendents of gigantic extinct trees.

Cotton Future

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — The executive vice president of the National Cotton Council believes cotton producers can make great gains on man made fibers.

"Inadequate plant capacity and the energy shortage have made the man-made fiber supply situation uncertain today," Dabney Wellford said. "To take advantage of these opportunities, every possible bale the farmer can show a profit on needs to be squeezed out of the acres now growing."

Marilyn Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Connie Stevens will star in the title role of "The Sex Symbol," a 90-minute television movie which is a thinly disguised biography of the late Marilyn Monroe.

City Management Needs Planning

How much money would taxpayers save if a community planned its snow removal program on a staggered basis rather than trying to clear all streets at once?

Would enough tax money be saved to pay for lights for city tennis courts if garbage collections were made at curbside instead of the back door?

Do enough people use the tennis courts and other receational facilities paid for by municipal revenues to make them worthwhile?

These are some of the questions raided in an article on municipal financial planning in the current issue of a technical journal on modern management methods. The article discusses the use of "program budgeting systems" as a way for municipalities to get more mileage out of taxpayers' dollars.

Published by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants in its January issue of "Management Adviser," the article describes techniques used by a CPA firm to help a suburban community whose budget requests from various departments typically outstripped tax revenues.

City councilmen are mostly citizens who work part time on municipal boards and committees and commute to jobs in a nearby metropolitan center.

The firm of CPAs found that community leaders were looking first at expenditures instead of the purposes of expenditures. Leaders were planning next year's budget on the basis of what had been allocated the previous year, without consideration for continued priority among community needs.

Describing their own approach, the CPAs said, "We always start with an ongoing program and then, by a series of refinements, bring it closer and closer to the zero - base - budgeting ideal, where each part of each program is justifies anew each year instead of merely being based on change in the previous year's budget."

The traditional system of budget preparation, they say, too often entails simply adding a "reasonable" increase to last year's budget without determining in any formal way whether the service are still needed by the community, or, if they are, whether improvements should be made in them.

Program budgeting provides a better understanding of what each municipal department is doing or trying to do, and directs administrative attention toward program output, while providing control over the quality of service offered to the community.

"The program budgeting process helps managers identify areas where needs are not being met, where services are duplicated, or where available services have not yet been recognized by the communtiy," the article stated.

The authors contend that an annual review of a municipal department's purposes almost always reveals programs that are outdated, irrelevant or not being used. Eliminating them frequently results in more money to work with in terms of previous years' budgets than the department is used to having.

Freeze Hurts Citrus Production

By K. MACK BISK

WESLACO, Tex. (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has completed its survery of freeze damaged citrus crops in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and a spokesman said the bad weather will cut the season's production by 10 per cent.

Temperatures dipped as low as 20 degrees in the western fringe of the citrus belt just before Christmas. The spokesman said no permanent damage was dealt to trees but that the season forecasts had to be revised to a lower figure.

In December, the USDA estimated the Texas orange production this season at 8 million boxes. Because of the freeze, that estimate was revised to 7.2 million boxes. And the grapefruit harvest is now expected to come in at 11.5 million boxes, a million boxes less than the December forecast.

Lloyd Garrett, the USDA statistician in Austin, said the amount "is pretty substantial. I guess early oranges got hurt the worst. That's what the indications are now and I guess a lot of the damage won't be apparent until later."

However, Garrett emphasized that the lower estimates did not mean that 800,000 boxes of oranges and 1 million boxes of grapefruit were frozen and ruined.

"They have lost a lot of leaves," he said. "When you have this, you're naturally going to have less tonnage as things progress. When you're dropping leaves, the fruit simply will not size up to expectations."

Dr. Calvin Lyons of Weslaco, area horticulturist for the Texas A&M Agriculture Extension Service, said the damage was confined mainly to foliage and was spotty.

"We had damage. I can't come up with a box figure or anything else and I don't think anyone else can yet," Lyons said. "We did have some areas of the Valley, the eastern part for example, where they had a low of about 28 to 30 degrees and they had no damage done.

"Out in the western part of the Valley, they had lows of 20 to 21 and it's spotty. It's what we call a radiation freeze, that is, we didn't have any wind blowing and it wasn't a mass of cold air moving in. It was just the ground cooling off at night and it depended on location of the grove, condition of the grove and a lot of other things."

Growers were able to move in quickly to save early oranges which would have dropped from the trees. They simply harvested the fruit and sold it to juice processors, Lyons said.

"Compared to '51 and '62, it's a minor freeze," he said. "Normally we could go lower (in temperature) for longer, but conditions were just right this time to have some damage."

Lyons said when the temperature stays below the threshold of 28 degrees for six hours damage can occur, but that at the Weslaco experiment station it was below 28 only two hours.

"Locale was extremely important. They're (growers) going to come out of this all right. There is some damage, but there's no major damage. I don't think anybody is going to lose any groves."

ROCK MUSIC

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International

With the arrival of a new year, there are always some things left over from the old one left to do. So this one's devoted to a little catching up.

Most rock bands are musicians who grow their hair out and dress like hippies.

But there are a few groups around—most of them from the San Francisco area, etc.—who really are hippies, and who just happen to make a living by playing music. The New Riders of the Purple Sage are one of those bands.

For most of us, the New Riders appeared rather suddenly a few years ago, apparently some kind of alter ego for the Grateful Dead, complete with Jerry Garcia on pedal steel.

Stepchild of the Dead

Garcia came out with the New Riders at Dead concerts, played for two hours, went backstage to get his guitar, and came back out to play with the Dead for four or five more.

Mickey Hart, who was drummer for the Dead at the time, also played with the New Riders off and on—but it quickly became obvious after the first album was out (with ex-Jefferson Airplaner Spencer Dryden on percussion) that the Riders were destined to become more than a stepchild of the Dead.

The band called in steel player Buddy Cage from Canada, and that's the way the lineup has been for the past three albums. But though the personnel has been unchanged, the New Riders' music has evolved a lot.

They have retained the strong truck-driving cowboy flavor inherited from the Dead and—indirectly—from the country period of the Byrds. But they have also moved increasingly away from the almost Gene Autry feel of their initial fine album with growing measures of rock.

Comic Strip Cover

Cage had a lot to do with the change by replacing Garcia's traditional approach to steel with his own innovative, almost cosmic style. He can be considered the world's first hard rock pedal steel player.

"We've gotten classed as a cowboy band," Cage says, "So I was trying to define the kind of cowboy we are. And it's like, you just get to do what you want to do." Which is a good definition of "Hippie" as has ever been phrased.

The New Riders' newest album is "The Adventures of Panama Red," and it amounts to a summation of the band's career to date.

The title track is a fusion of electric country-western and rock—but despite an extravagant comic-strip cover the band has thankfully resisted the temptation to make it a concept album.

The remainder of the album's 11 tracks are well balanced between all-out rock and virtually pure country—country in mood, at least; the lyrics tend to be somewhat outside the country mold.

The next New Riders release will be a live album—it's already been recorded—and after that the band will have only two LPs left on its contract to Columbia. Once that commitment is satisfied, the New Riders will almost certainly go with the Dead's newly formed independent record company.

You know what they say about birds of a feather.
