Governor Looms
As 1936 Timber

His conference with Herbert Hoover and San Francisco Republican leaders, followed by a speech in which Gov. Harry W. Loomis of Maryland, above, flayed New Deal expenditures and "assaults on the federal Constitution" has strengthened rumors that the governor is being groomed as a candidate for the 1936 Republican presidential nomination.

DEADLOCK IN MATAMOROS STRIFF

Observers See Possibilities of Serious Disorders

By Associated Press
MATAMOROS, Mexico, July 26.—The deadlock between forces contending for a change in city administration continued today with federal soldiers and customs authorities watching the situation, which experienced border observers believed fraught with possibilities of serious disorders.

The chief danger was believed to lay in the growing restlessness of more than 1,000 agrarians camped in the city limits. Many were armed and pressing the leaders for action.

In conference between the agrarians and General Gabriel Cervera, commander of the federal garrison, and Mayor Rafael Munguia, it was announced they awaited advices from Mexico City regarding future action.

PROMOTERS CANCEL BOUT AFTER REHEARSAL BATTLE

By United Press
GRAETINGER, Iowa, July 26.—Interest in a scheduled 10-round fight between Frankie Vogel of Janesville, Wis., and Bliss Bennett of Chicago, waned yesterday when promoters learned the two had met Monday night in Chicago. The fight was called off.

WOULD BE RELIEF CLIENT CARRIES $300 IN POCKETS

By United Press
CHICAGO, July 26.—Joseph Rippolito, 45, walked into a relief station here yesterday and demanded that he be placed on relief rolls. When he became loud in his demands he was arrested. A routine search of his clothes revealed $300 in his pocket.

HEAR SURPRISE WITNESS ON LOBBY

NRA Employee Tells Of Patton Carrying Away Box

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 26.—E. V. Sellers, NRA employee, a surprise witness, told the Senate lobby by investigating committee today that Representative Patton carried a small box from the hotel room of John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power and Light Company, the Sunday before the House vote on the holding company bill.

He said that a couple of days later Patton showed him a bond he said he just bought.

Before Sellers took the stand, Patton voluntarily appeared to deny any wrong doing. The committee questioned him about the investments. He testified he bought four government bonds of $1,000 face value each since he came to Washington in January.

Sellers testified the box Patton carried out of the hotel did not seem to be a cigar box, which Patton said it was.

He also told of conversations with Patton's nephew, Norris Shook, who accompanied them to the hotel, in which Shook expressed doubt the package was a box of cigars.

Chairman Black obtained statements from Sellers. He went to Carpenter's hotel with Patton and Patton left 30 or 40 minutes later with "a light box."

Taking the stand, Patton, nervous and shaken, declared "I never heard tell of the little box Sellers tells about."

Miss Lena Melear To Attend Church Session in Europe

Miss Lena Melear left Fort Worth yesterday with a party for New York where she will sail for Europe on the Britannic to attend the World Convention of the church of Christ. The World Convention Committee has planned a sight-seeing trip in New York before sailing, which includes many places of interest.

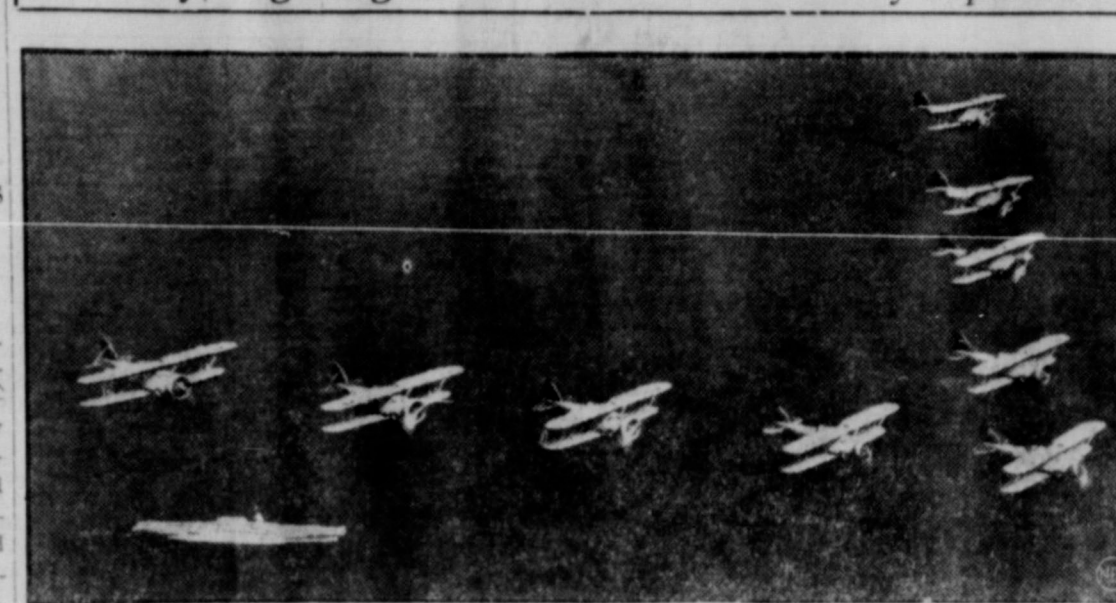

The Britannic is scheduled to land at Southampton. A six-week tour has been planned by the World Convention Committee where many places of interest will be visited by the delegates.

Flier Meets Fate of Noted Brother

In a plane that crashed in Mississippi sound, near Gulfport, Miss., leaving only the shattered fragments shown at the right, Walter Wedell, 32, famed Louisiana pilot, met the same fate that befell his brother, Jimmy, noted air speed ace. An hour after Wedell and his passenger, Howard Sanders of Anderson, S. C., left a New Orleans airport on a chartered trip to Mobile, a lightkeeper at Chandeleur Islands in the sound 12 miles south of Gulfport, saw the plane, heard its motor sputter and witnessed the plunge into the sound. Both Wedell and Sanders were instantly killed.

Work Preliminary to Erection Of Camp Being Finished Today

COACH WALKER TO LEAVE FOR MENTOR SCHOOL

Coach Chesty Walker, leader of the Cyclone gridders, is planning to leave tomorrow for Dallas to attend the annual high school coaching school at Southern Methodist University.

Coach Walker has found no rest for the weary recently. He has been working like a Trojan on the new athletic field, and has been largely responsible for the quick, excellent job that will give Memphis one of the finest football plants in the Panhandle this fall.

Now he's going to return to football. He will be laying a foundation for the season's work at Dallas—although no coach ever ceases to plan for the coming season. He will start this year where he left off last, with a finished ball club that through skill and diversity of attack marched to the regional battle.

The school opens Monday and will run for two weeks. A progressive coach can pick up much valuable information at such a school, and Walker will return with new and advanced ideas on the game.

SLAYER SHOTS SELF WHEN TRAPPED

Shoots Self After Killing Police Sergeant

By United Press
GREELEY, Colo., July 26.—Jack Printz, who shot and killed a Greeley police officer, killed himself yesterday when a posse surrounded him in a sand pit miles west of here.

As the possemen opened fire upon him, he turned his pistol upon himself, firing one shot through his head. He also was struck by bullets fired by officers. He was taken to Greeley Hospital, and died there.

Printz, a Colorado convict paroled five weeks ago from the state penitentiary, was arrested in the railroad yards here by Patrolman A. Wickerstrom. He was taken to the city jail and turned over to Lee Whitman, night desk sergeant.

Wickstrom left Whitman alone to book the prisoner.

Two shots sounded. Printz ran out of the building. Whitman was found dying.

Poses were organized and surrounded him in a sand pit. They opened fire.

It was then that Printz shot himself. A note found in his pocket was addressed to his mother, Mrs. Rose Horner, who was believed to live in Hastings, Neb.

It said:
"Some damn fool dick tried to get my gun and I got him."

SEES NO WAR AHEAD

By Associated Press
CHICAGO, July 26.—Viscount Murokuji, Japanese ambassador to Germany, yesterday said Japan has only a commercial interest in Abyssinia and would not go to war with Italy. The ambassador was en route to Japan for a vacation after six months at his diplomatic post in Germany.

Guardsmen Patrol Mill Strike Area

By Associated Press
HOAQUIM, Wash., July 26.—Squads of helmeted national guardsmen patrolled strategic centers of Gray's Harbor today after a riot in which 500 lumber strike sympathizers stoned company soldiers. The company guardsmen were being rushed to the aid of 10 troops whom the crowd was besieging. They ran into a barrage of rocks.

The troops charged with fixed bayonets and pursued the rioters. One guardsman was injured by a rock.

The disturbance was one of a series marking the strike of mill workers in Gray's Harbor the past month.

Senate Rejects Bank Proposal

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 26.—The Senate today rejected, 59 to 10, the Nye proposal for a government-owned central bank, offered as a substitute for the main section of the banking bill placing the control of the nation's credit in seven reserve board members and five representatives of the regional reserve banks.

COUNTY'S CCC ENROLLMENT SET AT 45

Entire Quota Will Be Called During Next Month

Hall County will furnish 45 young men for CCC camp enrollment next month, according to an allotment received from the Texas Relief Commission this morning by Administrator A. C. Hoffman. The quota was as of July 15.

Neal E. Guy, CCC enrollment supervisor, stated the entire quota will be called during the Month of August, and the local office will be notified at least one week in advance of the movement date. He said the quota might be increased in the county if an additional allotment is needed.

All the enrollees will be registered at the local relief office. Guy also stated that no cooks will be selected during the present enrollment. He had through, he said, that two cooks would be needed for each new camp, but extra cooks are being transferred from other camps. He said that cooks may be called during the October enrollment.

Marvin Jones Raps Ban on AAA Suits

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 26.—A partial ban against processing tax recovery suits, written into the administration's AAA amendments by the Senate, was attacked by Chairman Marvin Jones of the House agriculture committee yesterday as an invitation to "chaos."

The AAA legislation as passed by the House would prohibit suits to recover any of the $900,000,000 of processing taxes already collected, but the Senate voted to permit suits by processors who had not passed the taxes on to consumers or producers.

Jones' stand apparently foreshadowed a sharp struggle between House and Senate conferees on the issue.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, July 26.—AAA officials yesterday received this ad clipped from the Joplin, Mo., Globe: "Dandy way to make money: Buy this 13 acres for hog ranch. Sign up with government not to raise hogs. It will pay you $1,000." The plan won't work, said the AAA.

BULLET'S PATH THROUGH BRAIN OF GIRL, 5, LEAVES NO INJURY

Apparently more frightened by blood than hurt, she was taken to a hospital. Doctors gave her six hours to live. Her chance for recovery was set at one in 1,000.

But after a few days Barbara was sent home. The fear that the child might develop signs of failing health or mentality has vanished. Next September, she will be enrolled in the first grade.

Doctors say there appears to be no need for an operation to remove the bullet, Mrs. William Lamont, the child's mother, said. Barbara is bright-eyed and alert, and normal in every other respect.

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY

J.R. WILLIAMS

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JO DARIEN, finishing her first year in college, learns her father is out of work. Jo hunts a job and secures part time work in a marine supply store. There she meets wealthy, handsome DOUGLAS MARSH who offers her the job of hostess at his inn at Crest Lake. Jo accepts. This causes a quarrel with BRET PAUL to whom she is engaged and Jo breaks the engagement.

She goes to Crest Lake. Her duties are pleasant but Marsh's eccentric mother takes a dislike to the girl. BABS MONTGOMERY, a school acquaintance who is jealous of Jo's popularity, comes to the inn. PETER FRAGONET, film actor, and his wife are also guests.

Fragonet takes Jo out in a sailboat. There is an accident and she narrowly escapes drowning. Next day Fragonet comes to see her. He tells Jo he loves her and takes her in his arms. MRS. FRAGONET and MRS. MARSH witness this scene and accuse Jo of encouraging Fragonet's attentions.

Jo, determined to explain, tries to walk down the hall and faints. Mrs. Marsh tells Douglas he must send Jo away.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII

Marsh said, "I can't believe that sort of nonsense where Jo Darien is concerned and besides—"

"Perhaps, if you won't believe your own mother, you'll believe Edna Fragonet."

Marsh put his hands on the old lady's militant shoulders. "Easy now, Mother. I know how you are when you get going—and I don't doubt that something's gone amiss. In fact, I've been expecting it. I know Pete Fragonet better than you, but I thought that just possibly he might have some sense in this case."

"Douglas," replied Mrs. Marsh coldly, "if you're trying to tell me that this is just a harmless affair please save your breath. It means that Edna Fragonet is going to divorce her husband."

"Let me talk to Pete about this, and then—"

"Talk to whomever you please, but I insist that this Darien woman leave here this afternoon."

"But, Mother, the girl's ill! She couldn't leave this afternoon even if I wished to send her away."

"She wasn't too ill to be making love to Peter Fragonet. I've sent the nurse away."

At this news Marsh's lips compressed in a thin line and his face colored with anger. He left his mother standing on the veranda and rushed into the lobby, pausing at the desk long enough to instruct Preston that Miss Conley was to return to Jo Darien's room at once.

As he hurried upstairs he somehow felt that Jo was in grave trouble, but he was unprepared to find her unconscious before the open door of her room. Rushing toward the inert figure, he called out her name frantically. Then, taking her up in his arms, he carried her to her bed.

The sudden movement and Marsh's voice brought Jo to consciousness, and as her eyelids fluttered open she heard him saying over and over again, "Thank God . . . Thank God!"

He was giving her a drink of water when Miss Conley appeared anxiously in the doorway.

"I wouldn't have left her, Mr. Marsh, but your mother—"

Marsh nodded impatiently. "I know. She didn't understand the girl's condition. I'm afraid we'd better have Seavers at once."

"Let me see . . ." Miss Conley stepped forward, confidentially. "What happened?"

"She evidently tried to get out of the room, and collapsed in the hall. Must have been out of her head."

Jo opened her eyes again, shook her head weakly back and forth on the pillow. "I'm . . . I'm . . . I'm right. I wasn't out of my head. I . . . I just wanted to talk to someone who—"

"We know all about it, Jo. And don't you worry. I've fixed everything."

"About Fragonet, and—"

Marsh nodded. "Everything." He stood up and turned to the nurse. "Should I telephone Seavers?"

"Let me watch her closely for an hour or so. I hardly think we'll need to call Doctor Seavers—but this may mean she'll have to stay in bed longer than we planned."

"Be sure to let me know if the slightest thing seems wrong," Marsh said. "And, remember, you're not to leave her. I—I think it would simplify matters if you remember that I'm the only one to give orders to the employees here."

When Marsh had left Jo's room he returned to the lobby and to Preston.

"If Fragonet is in his room will you please tell him I'd like to see him down at the boat house?"

The clerk nodded. "He's in his room, sir. I'll deliver the message."

Marsh strode down toward the boat house, went through two cigarettes at a furious pace before the link frame of Fragonet appeared along the board walk. The actor's eyes seemed strained and tired, and he looked at Marsh as if to say, "All right, Old Man, let me have it!"

Marsh returned his gaze speculatively. "Apparently, you've raised one devil of a mess, Pete."

"Apparently, I've a way of doing that. I do want to say I'm mighty sorry, Douglas, but the real apologies should go to Jo Darien. My wife built a fire under the poor kid—and your mother added some fuel of her own. All my fault, of course."

"But that doesn't straighten it out," Marsh said.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that you can't make these things happen and then say you're sorry, Pete. There's more to it than that. I—"

Marsh hesitated, lit another cigarette before he went on. "I feel more or less responsible for Jo Darien, you know. She didn't want to come down here in the first place, but I saw she was in a tough spot and I thought it would be a good thing all around."

Fragonet was silent a moment. Then: "If you're warning me to keep off in the future, I'm afraid you've the wrong slant on this whole thing, Doug. I'm serious. I'm divorcing Edna—or she's divorcing me—it doesn't matter which, really." The actor turned suddenly to Marsh. "I'm really in love with Jo. I want to marry her."

"I see . . ." replied Marsh slowly. "And what does Jo think?"

"She hasn't had time to think. She—she doesn't know whether she loves me or not, and—"

Marsh interrupted him with a tight laugh. "I should think she could tell if she did, Pete. Love isn't such a subtle emotion, you know, that a girl can't feel it."

"All right. Let's say she doesn't love me then. Worse than that, she won't give herself a chance—because of Edna. I'm going to divorce Edna, and then I'll wait."

"A bit tough on Edna, isn't it?" asked Marsh.

"Why is it?" Fragonet burst out. "She doesn't love me. For years she's been like a—cold shadow, just following me, watching me. She's not jealous because she loves me, but because she doesn't want anybody to have even a part of Fragonet, the picture star. It's not because she loves me that she doesn't want me to have other women—it's just because she couldn't stand to have them saying that she didn't own me altogether." The actor paused, looked sidewise at Marsh. "So you see, it isn't really Jo who's causing a split-up between Edna and me. That's been in the cards for a long time, Doug. But if I hadn't fallen in love with Jo I might have let it run on indefinitely. After all, a divorce is bad publicity for a movie star nowadays."

Marsh did not reply for a long time. Finally he took a step closer to Fragonet and gazed straight into his eyes. "Look here, Pete . . . I'd like you to be awfully sure that you feel straight about Jo. We've been friends long enough so that I can say what I think, haven't we?"

"I hope so."

"Jo Darien's about 19, Pete . . . and you'll never see 40 again. In pictures, you're 28—but that doesn't hide the fact that you're more than 20 years older than Jo. A lot of water's gone under your bridge, Pete—and this girl has a lot before her yet." Marsh's tone changed suddenly to a bitter seriousness. "If you messed things up for her, Pete, I think I could poison you without a qualm."

Fragonet's half-amused, half-quizzical gaze changed into one of astonishment. "Look here, I believe you—are you in love with her?"

"Don't be any more of an idiot than you have to be," said Douglas Marsh shortly. "I feel responsible for her here, that's all. Today you caused a row that can have all sorts of implications—and besides that, she tried to follow either you or your wife and fell unconscious in the hallway."

"Good Lord!" Fragonet exclaimed. "Is that true?" He turned toward the inn, but Marsh reached forward and held his arm.

"Don't you think you've caused her enough trouble just now?"

"Well . . ."

"My suggestion is that you don't see her again at all until she's able to be up and around," Marsh said.

Fragonet's eyes clouded with suspicion.

"Does that go for you, too?" he asked.

Marsh laughed, but there was little of the laughter reflected in his eyes. "Of course," he answered. "I'm quite sure that Miss Conley can give her all the care she needs!"

'Mother' of Early Stars Is Film Grandma Now

Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Bebe Daniels, and other stars of the early flicker days will recall the woman who "mothered" them through many a picture—Gertrude Norman. And so will hosts of fans. Today, her fortune gone, Miss Norman is back in films, but as a grandma this time. Two long jumps from Miss Norman's "mother" days and the present is shown in the pictures above—at left, as she acted in a film with Mary Pickford, and at right, as she is without makeup, at the age of 83, in her new role.

ON PARK, Mass., July 25.—I last reviewed the situation (during the winter) weatherman promised to be a factor in the 1935 agricultural picture. In the interim, he has done his duty. Newspapers have been full of reports of the weatherman, who could change the outlook almost overnight, the biggest factor in the price situation is the AAA, particularly as regards cotton. Natural forces, such as bigger crops, should not alone lower prices of most other farm products for carry-overs and cold storage holdings have been drastically reduced.

ear reports by the government's crop surveyors confirm fair growing conditions exist. They say the 1935 starting with an acreage well above a year ago, though somewhat below the average of other years. Slightly above normal yields per acre, the 1935 harvest will be substantially above 1934 and, in the case of corn and wheat, approximately normal. The outlook on the horizon is one of a widespread epidemic which would be the spring wheat crop.

July first crop condition expressed as a percentage of the 1934 average is 128.8, a good prospect for the year. It is the best judge of the outlook. For instance, the condition of the corn crop was placed at 71.8, yet the final reap was only 128.8. Readers remember that in this respect speaking in terms of totals. Local conditions vary vastly from the average. In the Central part of the planting season has been unusually cold and wet—in many of the main river valleys. Colorado to Indiana were flooded. Again in the West millions of acres were before the drought was ual reader may be surprised when he looks at last year's crop and at the same time at 1934 was a good farm year. It is true that 1934 crops were the shortest in 50 years but that prices jumped 100 per cent from the previous year's level. Moreover, the huge carry-overs of products from the 1933 harvest benefited from this year. As shown in the accompanying table, quotations on the year are generally better. A short session of multiplication table shows this: Despite carry-overs from the previous year and currently lower prices, this year's income from crops will be larger than that of 1934.

Good year for the farmer does not necessarily mean a year of plenty for all. Cash income from these crops is only 19 per cent of the receipts. Livestock and poultry is the largest single source of agricultural income, contributing about 50 per cent of the total. It is on this division of the industry that the drought has its strongest imprint. With the feed problem the forced sale of cattle has been checked. In other prices are already showing production of meat

The improvement in conditions is favorable for raisers. Recent high prices had an effect on egg production obliging farmers to obtain highest output per hen in a

A Brand New Bunch of ANAGRAMS

HANDY ENTRY BLANK

In the blank space below I have rearranged the letters in the anagrams to spell the names of the words which I think to be the solution of today's game. The ones checked with a cross mark thus X are advertised in today's Democrat.

ANAGRAM SOLUTION

1. LEMTONWERA	☐
2. FIGTREH	☐
3. CRODNACIO	☐
4. TOGLACA	☐
5. REHMIPHESE	☐
6. NAVGETREAI	☐
7. TIGNAREEN	☐
8. BATMOUNIRE	☐
9. BADOURORTU	☐
10. TASWIKAS	☐

I have used all of today's anagram solutions in the following sentence of not more than 30 words:

My Name _____
I buy my groceries at _____
If awarded a prize, I want my order drawn on the store checked below:
(Place cross mark after name of store you want your order drawn on).

"THE DARING YOUNG MAN"

RULES:

1. The letters in each of the accompanying anagrams when arranged properly will spell ten words. Two of the words each week will be items. You are invited to solve the anagrams, rearrange them in a sentence of not more than 30 words (you may use less if you wish), and try for ten prizes.
2. To the persons who send in the best arrangement with these rules, The Democrat will award a basket of groceries and ten tickets to the Ritz. The basket of groceries will be offered as a prize to the next eight contestants.
3. This offer is open to all except employees of the Democrat and their families. You pay nothing.
4. Awards will be made on the basis of the correct list of anagrams and the cleverest sentence rearrange the letters in each anagram to spell a word in common usage. Then check the food in every ads in today's Democrat and place a cross in the square if you find either of the two groups advertised. If the item is NOT advertised, do not mark.
5. Then arrange the ten words into a sentence of not more than thirty (30) words. You may use less if you wish.
6. All entries will be considered by a committee appointed by the Democrat. Contestants agree to the decisions of the committee as final. Judgments will be based on suitability of words inserted, in checking cleverness in arranging the sentences, neatness. No special consideration will be given to duplicate entries. In case of ties, duplicate prizes awarded to tying contestants.
7. All entries must be received at the Democrat by four o'clock Saturday afternoon.

You need not purchase The Democrat to compete. You may use the handy blank submitted here, or submit your entry on a separate sheet of paper. Winners will be announced in Sunday's Democrat.

THE VOICE OF THE UPPER RED RIVER VALLEY

CCC CAMP UNDERWAY

ACTUAL construction of a Government CCC camp here will begin tomorrow morning—and in about a month 200 boys will begin pouring into the city to start work on soil conservation, water and wind erosion.

The U. S. Army is in charge of erecting the camp. Capt. H. G. Yopp is the constructing quartermaster. Captain Yopp has made his work clear. There is no reason why anybody cannot understand what he is required or proposes to do. By cooperating, Memphis can do quite a bit to assist in moving the work along more rapidly, in making it easier.

For instance, Captain Yopp said he positively will not hire employment on the field after erection has begun. Therefore, it will be useless for a dozen or so men to congregate at the fair grounds hoping to get work.

Employment is being given through the National Reemployment Service. However, Captain Yopp does not obligate himself to take all workers from the service. If he wants a certain type of work done, he is at liberty to get an expert to do it regardless of his status with the NRS.

World war veterans are being given preference for employment wherever possible. One certainly cannot blame the army officials for taking this stand.

Memphians were growing a bit worried about the camp here because equipment was so long arriving. Captain Yopp was unable to explain the delay unless the firm turning out the materials that left only the assembling of the buildings necessary was flooded with orders and required extra time to fill them. However, there seems to be no cause for worry now. The army has a habit of getting things done in a hurry once the projects are underway. If the work is held up now, it probably will not be the fault of the army department.

A great work in soil conservation is soon to start in the area within a 25-mile radius of the camp. Many farmers will profit by the work of the camp where wind and water have cut into the soil and are about to lay more land to waste. The net result will be the saving of much fertile soil and making more beautiful the productive area that the camp will serve.

CONGRESS WANTS REST; SO DO WE

IT is a very hot day in the spot where this article is being written. The thermometer stands at 92 outside and it is going to go higher pretty soon. There isn't any wind, and if there were it would be a hot one. Like everyone else who is at work, the writer feels warm and uncomfortable.

All of this is put down, not in the belief that the general public is especially interested in working conditions in newspaper offices, but because it somehow is a gentle reminder that our congressmen and senators are also suffering from the heat.

Washington dispatches are full of sad details about the weather in the capital. We read that Congressional nerves and tempers are getting all warped out of shape with the heat, that a senatorial medical expert is shaking his head sadly over the possible results, and that Congress as a whole wants to wind everything up quickly and get home.

It is easy to sympathize with anyone who is too warm. And yet it is no more than fair to rise and remark that congressmen are not the only people in that predicament these days.

After all, the capitol building is nicely air cooled. Congressmen may have been working steadily ever since January—but what of it? Joe Doakes, back home, has been working steadily ever since the fall of 1921—and he hasn't had a spacious, air-cooled chamber to work in, either, nor does he drag down any $10,000 a year for his pains.

The kitchen of a big bakery is not a cool place these days; neither is a railroad roundhouse, nor a gasoline filling station on a sun-baked corner, nor the operator's corner of a steam shovel, nor the space behind the counter in a 5-and-10, nor a hundred other places where the constituents of a congressman earn their daily bread.

Congress may find Washington hot. So do all the rest of us find the places where we work. It would be nice if we could suddenly vote ourselves a vacation, to run until the first of January; but we can't do it, and it is a little bit hard to work up very much sympathy over the plight of the legislators.

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Twenty years ago, doctors had little or no encouragement for persons who were stricken with infantile paralysis.

Medical progress toward the solution of this health problem has been moving along rapidly, however, and today the outlook for recovery is very hopeful. In fact, it is not unreasonable to believe that, in the not too distant future, the disease will be brought under satisfactory control.

Today, the death rate from infantile paralysis varies. Some times one-tenth of those who are affected die; sometimes as many as one-sixth.

Epidemics of infantile paralysis vary as well. The disease is much more dangerous to infants under one year of age, and persons over 15, than it is to children between these ages. Fortunately, the disease is very rare among infants.

About one-fourth of those who develop paralyzed limbs recover almost completely. The rest, about 75 per cent, are left with paralysis of various types.

The worst cases occur in children under 10 years of age. Apparently the higher the fever during the acute attack, the more likely is there to be permanent paralysis.

When the condition is discovered, it is customary nowadays to inject into the patient blood serum from a person who has recovered from the disease or that from a normal being.

It is also attempted, in some cases, to use the vaccines which have recently been made by macerating the spinal cords of monkeys after they had been inoculated with infantile paralysis.

Some physicians are convinced that the serum, if given very early in the disease, perhaps even before paralysis sets in, is of great value in preventing a physical defect. This method is still in an experimental stage, but in view of the great threat which infantile paralysis actually is most physicians are inclined to use the serum.

The completeness of recovery from paralysis depends also to a large extent on what is done. In the first place, nothing should be done until the severe infection begins to subside. Then heat may be applied to the limbs, and there may be massage to benefit the action of the muscles.

Fortunately, orthopedic surgery has developed a considerable number of excellent operations. Transplantation of tendons and muscles, and modifying joints make it possible for some who have been crippled to walk satisfactorily.

It is quite usual for the paralyzed limb to waste away and become smaller and weaker than the normal limb. Sometimes, when a leg becomes shorter, there are attempts to transplant bone to make it longer, and there is another operation which makes the normal leg shorter, so that it will equal the paralyzed leg.

I have been poor so long, I couldn't get used to so much money.

Sweatshop Starts Staging Come-back . . . Hits Close to Capital . . . NRA Fall Gives Opening to Chiselers . . . Brewster Indicts Self in Lobby Probe.

WASHINGTON, July 26. — In Alexandria, Va., a few miles down on the other side of the Potomac, a shirt factory employing about 100 women has cut wages three times since NRA codes went out the window. The cuts amount to 32 per cent and have been accompanied by an increase of weekly working hours from 36 to 44.

Resultant wages of $6, $7 and $8 a week, paid in the back yard of the national capital, are a reminder here that the old-fashioned sweatshop is coming back. It is worth noting that the Alexandria factory girls, never before organized and quickly persuaded to return when they walked out after a first 10 per cent cut, are now being organized by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

When the U. S. Supreme Court's Schechter decision hit the NRA and Roosevelt decided to dismantle it, Sidney Hillman, president of Amalgamated, grabbed his hat and jumped on the next train to New York without even bothering to resign from the NRA board.

He hasn't been seen here since, because he has been busy with other garment industry unions in building up a $1,000,000 strike fund with which to fight for preservation of gains made under NRA.

The attitude of Mayor E. C. Davison of Alexandria possibly reflects a change of viewpoint in many cities and towns toward sweatshops as a result of NRA education. Davison tells the strikers:

"You don't have a job. You have a disease. Alexandria business men don't sympathize with employers who exploit workers to the breaking point and don't pay a living wage. This government gives you a right to strike and policemen are at the factory to protect that right."

"If anyone interferes with it, he, not you, is going to be locked up. We've just cleaned up the relief rolls here, so don't worry about starving to death. We've got room for you."

Childress Invades Fair Park for Last Time on Schedule

MAY BE OWLS' OPPONENT IN PLAY-OFF

Tilt To Open Final Round of Play This Season

The Childress Electric will invade Fair Park Stadium Sunday afternoon for their final scheduled meeting with the Memphis Owls.

However, the two clubs loom as probable opponents in the first round of the Shaugnessy play-off that starts early in September.

Owls Priming Themselves
The Owls are priming themselves for a stiff battle. Hurler Stewart is expected to be in the finest fettle for mound work this season, which already has been topped by a fine performance last Sunday.

In fact, last Sunday's game indicated that the mound work is the least of Owls managers' worries. It was the defense that had a bad inning, letting in four runs and subjecting the righthander to a defeat. Besides, young Lefty Blanchard probably will be ready for service, although he probably lacks the seasoning to be used as a start in the opening game of an all-important series.

Begins Final Drive
Sunday's tilt, which gets underway at 3:30 o'clock, begins the drive down the home stretch for the Western Division of the Ren River Valley League.

As the writer has said before, the final round of play is not so important for the Owls because of its final chance to move upward. The Owls must keep from slipping down in order to get a better break in the play-off.

As the set-up now stands, the Owls likely will meet the Electric in the first round of the play-off. If they should slip down a notch, Paducah probably would be the opponent, and Memphis

By HARRY GRAYSON
(Sports Editor, NEA Service)
Collegians in the major leagues were rare when Christy Mathewson of Bucknell bobbed up with the New York Giants at the turn of the century, and Colby Jack Coombs and Eddy Plank of Gettysburg convinced Connie Mack what was to be found on campuses.

Baseball scouts have dragged nets through school grounds ever since, and so well have they succeeded that there are 35 former rah rah athletes—one more than two for each club—doing nothing but pitching on big time today. Every big league outfit has a twirler from a seat of higher learning except the red-blazered St. Louis Cardinals, who perhaps watch the school yards closer than any of the others.

The Chicago Cubs lead the outfit in chaps whose curves came with calculus, with four. The Pittsburgh Pirates, Cleveland Indians, Chicago White Sox, and St. Louis Browns have three each, and the Brooklyn Dodgers, Cincinnati Reds, Boston Braves, New York Yankees, Detroit Tigers, and Boston Red Sox two apiece.

Tops among them, of course, is Hal Schuracher, the power right-hander of the Giants whom the late John McGraw, who managed Mathewson, took from St. Lawrence University before he graduated.

Hoyt Schoolboy Wonder:
Ted Lyons Came Direct
Bill Lee, Tex Carleton, Larry French, and the diminutive southpaw, Roy Henshaw, who between them have accounted for two-thirds of the contests copped by the Cubs as against only half their losses, are college men. Lee registers from Munciana State, Carleton from Texas Christian, French from California, and Henshaw from Chicago.

Waite Hoyt of the Pirates was has been far less effective against the Paducah club than it has against Childress.
