Spring board

How's that? Pool

Why can't the public use the pool at the Industrial Park?
A. Because it is not a public facility. It was decided to the Department of Education in 1978, according to Nancy Brownfield of the Industrial Park director's office.

Balloon found — 800 miles away

Herald staff report
When Jason Kennemur launched his balloon May 21 as part of the Elbow Elementary Library Reading Program, he had high hopes.
Mostly, he hoped it would travel a long distance.
But he was surprised just how far it actually went.
Jason received a letter from Fern Harmon of Kansas City, Mo. — a distance of approximately 800 miles — telling him that her husband had found his balloon while mowing the front yard.
Jason, the son Danny and Kay Kennemur, said he was amazed that his balloon traveled so far, and said he was particularly glad that "... the lady took the time to write me back."
Mrs. Kennemur said that Jason and other Elbow students launched their balloons as part of the reading program under the direction of Librarian Mrs. Wayne Rock. Jason said that he read "... at least 75 books," during the past school year.
This was the second year for the balloon launches, and the first that discovery of one of the balloons was reported, Mrs. Kennemur said.
Jason said another Elbow student, Samantha Montgomery, had her balloon returned from a person in Post — which is about 750 miles shy of the distance Jason's balloon traveled.

Jones Valley flood waters recede

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer
Flood waters in Jones Valley are receding rapidly, but Beals Creek is still overflowing its banks, Public Works Director Tom Decell said today.
Portions of U.S. Highway 80 closed by flooding may be opened late this afternoon or Tuesday morning, said Lawrence Allen, maintenance foreman of the State Highway Department. He said flood waters must recede a little more for the streets to be safe for traffic.

Water levels at Lake Spence continue to climb, but are expected to level off later this week. Levels at Natural Dam Lake and Lake Thomas, however, are declining, according to the Colorado River Municipal Water District.
Beals Creek, which flows through Big Spring, is approximately two feet over its banks, Decell said.

Conditions in Jones Valley, the area most affected by the flooding, are improving, local merchants report.
Tate Plumbing, Heating & Air Conditioning owner Aaron Combs said walk-in business is improving and said the area "looks a lot better."
"In a couple of days everything will be back to normal," Combs said.
Combs said his business, located at 1000 W. Third St., suffered from the flood waters.

"We didn't close down, but we might as well have," he said.
Donna Earhart, an employee at Big John's Feed Lot, 802 W. Third St., said water that had covered the restaurant's parking lot has receded.
CRMWD Secretary/Treasurer Joe Pickle said today Natural Dam Lake elevation had declined three inches since Saturday. Elevation this morning was measured at 2,248.16 feet, Pickle said.

Lake Spence has reached its record height. For the first time the lake has passed elevation 1,887 feet, Pickle said. Elevation 1,887.02 feet today, he said.
Pickle said Lake Spence has been increasing about .03 to .05 feet daily the past week. That is expected to level off as water flowing through Beals Creek and the Colorado River declines, he said.

Consistency providing oil industry hope

DALLAS (AP) — The relative consistency of oil prices throughout the first half of this year has given the domestic energy industry reason for optimism.
However, experts continue to warn against too much optimism that other facets of exploration and production will bounce back in the second half.
"The price has come back and that's why people are feeling good. But it's one thing to say, 'I feel optimistic' and another thing to say, 'I'm going to put a couple million bucks into a drilling project,'" said Mike Canes, chief economist for the American Petroleum Institute.
"I think the worst is over," said Ben Nowatny, co-owner of Nowatny & Conley Drilling Corp. in South Texas. "I think we'll look back one day and see 1987 as the year the curve started back up."
During the past six months, oil prices have stabilized, exploration activity has picked up slightly and production declines are beginning to show signs of reversal.
The gains are modest but have given the industry a slightly tangible boost and a considerable psychological one, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.
"The price of oil has been just enough to kill the pain," Scott Shaver, president of Locklin Oil Co. in Tyler told the newspaper.
The oil price free-fall began after the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries decided in December 1985 to stop limiting production to maintain high prices. Oil prices then plunged from $26 a barrel to below $12 a barrel. Currently, world oil prices average $18 a barrel.
During the 15 months after the OPEC decision, Texas lost 59,500 jobs in oil and gas extraction and 14,100 more in oil-field machinery manufacturing. In every category except petroleum refining, the declines have not reversed in 1987.
"Things are just beginning to stabilize, but at a depressingly low level," said John Kruse, a labor market analyst with the Texas Employment OPTIMISM page 2A

Report indicates feds overcrowded

Federal prisons are operating with approximately 150 percent more inmates than their rated capacity, far exceeding the overcrowding at Texas prisons, according to a report in today's Dallas Morning News.
The six federal prisons in Texas — Big Spring, Texarkana, Seagoville, Fort Worth, Bastrop and La Tuna — are averaging 60.8 percent above capacity, according to the article.
U.S. Bureau of Prisons figures quoted by the paper indicate the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp has 717 inmates, or 49 percent more than its rated capacity of 482.
Big Spring Federal Prison administrators did not return calls this morning for comment.
An unidentified Big Spring inmate was quoted in the article as saying "the federal courts are using a double standard to judge the prison systems of the nation — one for the states and one, apparently none, for themselves."
The inmate said federal courts "conveniently choose to look the other way when federal prisons themselves are involved."
Texas prisons are barred under a federal class-action suit from reaching 95 percent of rated capacity. The Texas Department of Corrections has halted admissions 13 times this year and Gov. Bill Clements has granted early releases because of the overcrowding, according to the Morning News.
Many federal officials have maintained, however, that federal prisons are operating constitutionally because they can maintain acceptable levels of safety, sanitation and other services.

Possible rain-bearing clouds form an appropriate backdrop for the Skywater Radar on loan to the CRMWD from the Department of Interior. It will be used to collect information through August 15 on the results of Colorado River Municipal Water District cloud seeding experiments. CRMWD Meteorologist Ray Jones is shown at left observing clouds with the Skywater Radar.

Cloud seeding CRMWD research is being conducted

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer
There's a bit of irony these days in a Colorado River Municipal Water District Research project.
With all the rain Howard County has received this year, one might think it unusual that CRMWD would be studying cloud seeding. However, an expert says this is the prime time for such research.
"A drought is the worst time for cloud seeding," Meteorologist Ray Jones said. "Seeding is most effective when there are rain-producing clouds in the area."
To study the effect of cloud seeding in the area, the district, in cooperation with the Department of Reclamation in Denver, Colo., is recording rainfall data with the use of a Skywater Color Radar at the former Howard County airport.
The purpose of the experiments, Jones said, is to increase water levels at the district's two area lakes, and to help county farmers increase their crop yields. He said the results so far have been encouraging.
In his analysis of the 1986 Weather Modification Program, Jones reported "1986 was characterized by large storm systems. Although the first four and one half months were extremely dry, it was one of the wettest years in West Texas."
Jones also believes that cotton production was aided by the seeding program. "In eight of the 15 years (of the seeding program) pounds per acre in the target area exceeded those of the upwind (non-seeded) counties," he said, adding that this rarely happened in the 35 years of non-seeding from 1936-70.

Bill Fryrear of the Agricultural Research Service agreed that rainfall totals have increased in recent years, but said the record was still inconclusive as to increased cotton yields as a result.
"We have had a series of above-average rainfall totals in this area," Fryrear said. "Anytime we get a little more rain, it'll help cotton production."
He added, however, that variables in the statistics preclude any direct connection between the seeding program and cotton production figures.
As for water levels in area lakes, Jones claims that the figures are encouraging.
Although a few areas outside the target area reported record inflow to the lakes, Jones noted that "Three out of four of the areas with maximum rainfall were in or downwind of the target area."
He said that last year's inflows were among the best in recent years. Lake Thomas received 52,244 acre feet of inflow, while Lake Spence received 217,121 acre feet.
Jones explained the cloud seeding process.
He said that convective (heat-generated) cumulus clouds are seeded by flares from an aircraft so that silver iodide particles are drawn into cloud bases by strong updrafts. When the crystals reach heights producing temperatures of minus 10 degrees Celsius, they serve as the nucleus for ice crystals.
The crystals then grow into moisture droplets. After becoming heavy enough, they fall out as precipitation.

"This nudge to nature appears to expedite or stimulate the rainfall process," Jones said.
He stressed that the CRMWD does not seed severe or tornadic cloud systems. In fact, he said, the district seeds only cloud systems which cover a substantial area.
To gather further research information, the district is using Skywater Radar, a precipitation observation device on loan from the Department of Interior.
Using the radar, Jones and Department of Reclamation researcher Keith Knox determine the effects of cloud seeding, as well as identify the clouds best suited for seeding.
The radar is similar to the ones used by area television stations on weather reports.
The video readout from the radar shows not only the height and density of clouds in its sweep, but also their severity and amount of precipitation.
The radar gradually raises its sweep with each rotation, so that Jones and Knox can — in effect — dissect the cloud. The researchers can then more precisely compare seeded clouds to non-seeded ones.
Jones said observations will continue until August 15. The information then will go to Denver, Colo. for further analysis by Department of Reclamation officials. They will make recommendations and possibly issue guidelines for future seeding operations.

Adrift for 19 hours, fisherman is rescued

HOUSTON (AP) — Weak and dehydrated, a man adrift for 19 hours in the Gulf of Mexico used his last bit of strength to wave a life preserver over his head to attract the attention of a passing ship.
"One of their crew ... spotted me and picked me up," said said Zackary Wayne Bennett, 32, of his rescue by a research vessel. "I am very lucky."
His news upon recovery was bad and good. During his ordeal, eight vessels passed him by without noticing, while two foraging sharks failed to heed him, Bennett said.

On Thursday night, Bennett was knocked over the side of the 74-foot shrimping boat Gulf King as it headed back to port after 21 days at sea.
Bennett, of New Bern, N.C., said he was asked by the captain, Dennis Bowen, to refasten a life ring to the housing of the boat which had fallen off. A life ring is a small life raft with netting attached beneath it.

"I was balancing myself with one foot on the ladder and one on the boat rail, when the boat rolled and that's all she wrote," Bennett said. "I tried yelling, but the captain didn't hear me. That boat is loud, and he was the only other one on the boat."
Bennett said he scrambled inside the life ring, wearing only his pants. The ring had no provisions, other than a flashlight that soon gave out.
"I thought: 'This is it,'" said

Bennett.
On Friday night, Bennett was rescued by a passing Texas A&M University research vessel, the Gyre.
The Coast Guard searched for Bennett on Friday morning and afternoon, but currents and rough seas swept Bennett out of the search area. On Friday, two 4- to 5-foot long sharks came by to have a look at him, Bennett said.
"They just sniffed around and went on," he said.

At one point, a jet passed over him twice and circled overhead, but apparently didn't spot him, Bennett said.
Bennett, who has been fishing since 1976, said his ordeal won't prevent him from going back to sea.
"You can't quit," he said. "There's just something about it when the sun comes up in the morning and it's slick, calm and peaceful. It just gives you a feeling of peace."

Researchers develop bone material

DALLAS (AP) — Researchers from Baylor Medical Research Foundation in Dallas and the University of Texas say they have developed an artificial bone material that appears to be as strong as real bone but is flexible enough to be molded into various shapes.

"We've developed an implantable material that the body essentially 'converts' to tooth and bone," said Richard J. Lagow, a chemist at UT who developed the material with a former UT graduate student, Paul J. Capano.

The artificial bone and tooth material could be a significant improvement over existing implants that replace diseased or destroyed teeth or limbs, said the scientists.

The new material is made from the same calcium and phosphorus compound, called hydroxyapatite, that makes up 65 percent of bone and about 99 percent of teeth.

Researchers currently use other forms of hydroxyapatite — particularly a type drawn from coral — to replace teeth and bone, but results have been poor because the coral-based material is extremely brittle.

The Texas researchers have found a way to chemically synthesize hydroxyapatite powder to make an unusually strong ceramic that can be molded into precise shapes, said J. Lester Matthews, director of the Baylor Medical Research Foundation.

"It behaves much along the line as a normal bone would," Matthews told The Dallas Morning News. "And you create the form that you want to have. That's the advantage of it."

A less porous version of the compound has been fashioned into a tooth replacement two times stronger than the porcelain currently used in dental work.

Laboratory tests with rabbits show the hydroxyapatite material is strong enough to support bone growth and, eventually, to stimulate the kind of biological remodeling that shapes and replaces all bones.

The group of researchers said they have made no agreements with companies to market the material, and it must undergo at least two years of trials by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration before being made available to patients.

Sheriff's log Three from out-of-state are arrested

Three out-of-state residents were arrested Sunday on suspicion of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Phillip Alan Gibbs, 23, McClellan, Va., and Richard Staples, 25, San Diego, Calif. are being held in the Howard County jail. No bond has been set, according to sheriff records.

No charges were filed against the third man, Gene Arthur Milne, 27, Mobile, Ala. who was released from custody. Milne was a hitchhiker, according to sheriff records.

• David Wayne Armstrong, 29, 803 E. 13th St., was arrested early Sunday morning by the Texas Highway Patrol on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. He was later released on a $1,000 bond.

• Raymond Ruiz Gonzales, 51, 1011 Johnson St., was arrested at 10:45 p.m. Saturday on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, third offense. He was later released on a $1,500 bond.

• Rory Jay Lawson, 24, 606 San Jacinto, was transferred from the police department following an arrest on suspicion of driving while license suspended and driving while intoxicated. He was later released on bonds totaling $2,500 bond.

• Darlene Beatrice Colston, 33, Three Rivers, was arrested by the Texas Highway Patrol on Department of Public Safety traffic warrants. She was released on bonds totaling $400.

• Gloria Graves of Gail Route Box 43 reported an estimated $150 damage to a door after a Sunset Tavern patron kicked the door from its hinges. Graves said the man who did the damage had been barred earlier from entering the premises. The case is under investigation, according to sheriff records.

Federal aid will be used for students

AUSTIN (AP) — The state plans to use $400,000 in federal funds to help Texas students who can't earn high school diplomas and are considered likely to drop out of school.

The special effort was voted unanimously Saturday by the State Board of Education after it was told at least 1,825 seniors will not get diplomas because they failed high school exit tests.

The first results of the exit tests ordered by the 1984 Legislature were revealed Saturday by Education Commissioner William Kirby. Out of the 5,347 seniors who took the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test in May, 3,522 passed.

Students who are seniors this year have had opportunities to pass the reading, writing and math test since October 1985. Makeup tests that would have gained them a diploma were given in January, May and October of 1986.

For the record

The Herald incorrectly reported in its June 4 issue that an alimony bill had been passed by the state Legislature. C.W. Jordy of Children's Rights through Informed Effort reported that the bill did not pass during the recently-completed regular session.

• An incorrect age appeared in Saturday's listing of Public records. Anita Kay Butler's correct age is 27.

Party time

Eighth graders in Coahoma were the center of attention Friday night when parents hosted a party to recognize the completion of their grade school work.

Among those enjoying themselves were Mandi Walling, daughter of Lynn and Barbara Walling and Denise Bennett, daughter of Bo and Linda Bennett, who were decorating a car belonging to Lance List. Practicing their dance steps were, from left, Debra Rainey, daughter of Weldon and Leida Rainey; Christy Harrison, daughter of Raymond and Diane Harrison; Malinda O'Brien, daughter of Lee Roy and Durinda O'Brien; and Teana Barber, daughter of Susan Barber.

Optimism

Commission. There are other subtle signs indicating the future may be brighter.

Oil field equipment auctioneer Daniel Kruse said the average price of a drilling rig sold at auction has jumped in the past year from $158,000 to $262,000, while a foot of drill pipe bought for $4 in 1986 could sell for as much as $10.50 today.

"We won't be selling as many rigs this year. They're just not available," said Kruse, chief auctioneer for Auctioneers and Marketers Inc. of San Antonio.

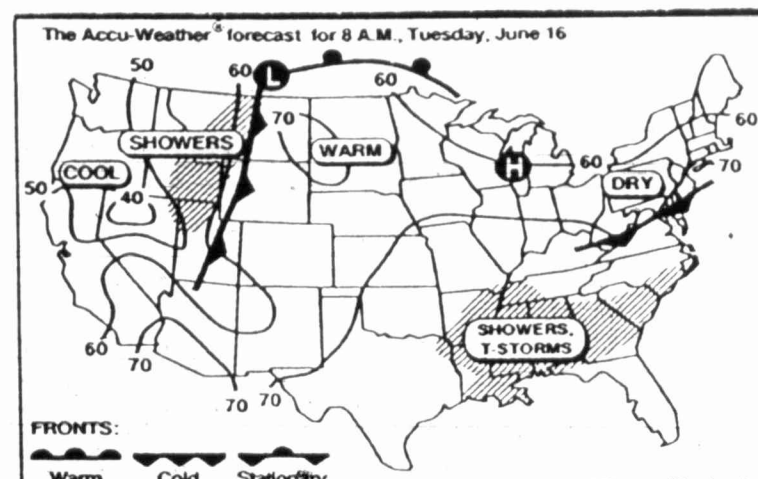

Louisiana Land and Exploration Co. of New Orleans added $15 million to its exploration and development budget this spring because of what president Leighton Stewart called a "modest improvement" in the overall energy picture and investor interest.

"But we're not out of the other side of it yet and won't be for some time," Stewart said. "A lot of companies are operating their budgets like oil was still selling for $17. They're afraid these prices might not hold, and I don't blame them. We've all been burned so badly, we're playing it carefully."

Weather

Forecast

By The Associated Press
West Texas - Isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms expected in the panhandle and far west, otherwise fair through Tuesday. Lows tonight mid 60s in the Panhandle to lower 70s extreme south except upper 50s mountains. Highs Tuesday mid 90s in the Panhandle to near 104 in the Big Bend valleys except near 90 in the mountains.

State

Only a few scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms were expected to blot otherwise pleasant weather across Texas through tonight.

A high pressure system took over as the state's weathermaker, bringing to an end the heavy, flood-producing rains of the past week.

The rainfall ended over most of the state Sunday. The exception occurred in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where heavy thunderstorms produced a tornado that touched down near McAllen, causing minor property damage. No injuries were reported.

Forecasts called for clear to partly cloudy skies statewide with a chance of scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms in South Texas and North Texas and a chance of isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms in the Panhandle and West Texas through Tuesday.

Minor injuries in mishap

A 17-year-old Big Spring girl suffered minor injuries when she fell from the back of a pickup Sunday afternoon.

Lolita Alvarez, 1100 E. Fifth St., was treated and released from Scenic Mountain Medical Center, a hospital spokesman said.

She was sitting on the tailgate of the truck when the driver began to pull away. The tailgate opened and she fell out, striking her head, police reports said.

The driver of the 1982 Ford pickup was Guadalupe Chevas of Phoenix, Ariz., the reports said. The accident occurred at 4:55 p.m. Sunday.

Fire ant may hold solution

SAN ANTONIO — Contrary to the popular saying of "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem," fire ants may be both. Researchers at Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center have found that allergy shots that use an extract from crushed whole fire ants can offer protection from severe allergic reactions to the pests.

The discovery could come just in time. Physicians and insect specialists are warning that the dry days after heavy rains bring the ants charging out of the ground to rebuild damaged mounds.

At least five Texans, including two Bexar County residents, have died in the past 10 years because of overwhelming allergic reactions to fire ant stings, the San Antonio Light reported.

Another death that may be added to the list involved a Houston nursing home patient who wandered off the premises last month, fell on a fire ant mound and died, Northeast Side allergy specialist Dr. Frank J. James told the newspaper.

"Deaths from fire ant stings are probably rare, but they do occur," said James, a pioneer in the treatment of the problem. "But being seriously ill is common."

James, who holds a master's degree on the study of insects, warned that a person who has no allergy to other stinging insects like bees and wasps could suffer fatal allergic complications from fire ant venom.

"We're all at equal risk," James said. "That's the problem. Anybody can be stung and have an allergic reaction. It's kind of like Russian roulette."

Local hospitals and allergy specialists treat an estimated 70 to 100 people suffering from hives, swollen lips and cheeks, shortness of breath, heart palpitations or worse because of fire ant stings.

Lucille Jones, 54, was hospitalized five days at Southwest General Hospital in April after being stung repeatedly on her ankles by fire ants during a family picnic.

Davis trial to reach jury

FORT WORTH — After three weeks of testimony, the trial of a wrongful death lawsuit against industrialist Cullen Davis is expected to reach jury deliberations this week, attorneys said.

Davis is being sued for $6 million by his ex-wife Priscilla Davis and her ex-husband Jack Wilborn because of the shooting death of their 12-year-old daughter Andrea Wilborn on Aug. 2, 1976.

Davis was expected to be called to the stand today for the last time by his defense attorney in a wrongful death trial.

Even if jurors should decide Davis was the man in black that went on a shooting spree at his mansion in 1976, criminal charges cannot be filed because he was acquitted in criminal court in 1977 of the deaths of Andrea Wilborn, and Priscilla Davis' boyfriend, Stan Farr, 30.

In testimony thus far, Davis has been portrayed as both a devoted Christian family man and a man who abused his wife, children and pets.

In 1977, testimony in the criminal trial focused on the personality and lifestyle of Priscilla Davis, who defense attorneys alleged had drug problems and associated with "scuzzes and scalawags."

But in the civil suit, State District Court Judge Claude Williams ruled early on that he would not permit the so-called collateral impeachment of Priscilla Davis or other plaintiff's witnesses.

At week's end, the defense was dealt a devastating blow on two counts, neither of which could be attributed to the judge.

Davis himself admitted from the witness stand that another alibi witness lied or was mistaken when he testified he saw Davis at a movie, "The Bad News Bears," the night of the shootings.

And the jurors learned through a legal loophole of sorts that Davis settled a $13 million lawsuit with Bubba Gavrel, who along with Priscilla Davis was wounded in the 1976 shootout, out of court last year.

Judge Williams did not permit the jury to hear terms of that settlement, but it reportedly was $1 million in cash, land and deferred payments.

Davis, a born-again Christian, told reporters before the judge issued a gag order that the motivation for the current suits was greed.

Countered Priscilla Davis: "We want justice, not money."

Navy whistleblower retires

DALLAS (AP) — A Navy officer says he had an untarnished military record until he tried to live up to his nickname, "By-the-Book."

Chief Petty Officer Michael Tufariello, 39, who is retiring from the U.S. Navy later this week, says he called attention to $130,000 in suspected over-payments to weekend military reservists.

Afterward, he was involuntarily hospitalized for

Leaving a trail

Big Spring city employee Henry Salazar was not hard to find Friday evening. His was an obvious trail, as he fogged the 800 block of 15th Street and other areas for treatment of mosquitos. Public Works Director Tom Decell said fogging will continue until the mosquito population is abated. The poison kills flying insects but not larvae, which emerge every five days, he said.

psychiatric evaluation, cited for poor work performance and passed over for promotion.

The Navy man was commended June 4 during a special ceremony at Dallas Naval Air Station for maintaining "the highest traditions" of the Navy in "single-handedly" documenting and reporting the improprieties.

But Tufariello says the praise more than three years later was too little, too late. After 20 years in the Navy, during which he received 16 medals, he says he is retiring in disgust on Friday.

"None of the money has been recovered and the officers who knew of the inconsistencies have not been reprimanded," Tufariello told the Dallas Morning News.

"My chances of ever getting promoted were awfully slim," he said. "I was given a letter of commendation for doing what was right, but the commendation does nothing for me two weeks before I get out."

A spokesman for the Naval Air Station says Tufariello was "an outstanding sailor" who could have been disciplined if he had not reported the payments on Dec. 18, 1983 for military drills that never occurred.

"He should not have gotten into any trouble for what he did," said Chief Petty Officer John Egbert. "It's sad, but in any large organization there are going to be people who at one time or another seem to get shafted."

Egbert said all the other non-commissioned officers and officers involved in the incident have either retired or have been transferred.

Tufariello, a Brooklyn native who was decorated for accompanying ground troops on search-and-destroy missions in Vietnam, said he never felt more stress than when he reported the pay fraud to his superiors.

The Navy man said he was told to "go to your desk and mind your own business" after he told his superiors that the reservists should not have been paid because the December 1983 drill was canceled.

He said lower-level officers prohibited him from going to higher-level officers about the pay fraud and he was warned that he would receive a poor evaluation if he persisted.

"My wife said to forget it, and the base chaplain said he would say a prayer for me, but I took pride in following regulations," Tufariello said.

Speaker denies candidacy

CINCINNATI — House Speaker Jim Wright says the only ambition he holds for the presidency is to see a Democrat replace President Reagan.

Wright, D-Texas, said Sunday that he's been trying to squelch rumors that he is considering a run for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I want to work for a vigorous, dynamic Democratic president," Wright said. He was a guest at a high school speech tournament at Princeton High School.

Wright also criticized Reagan for being "the king of deficits" and allowing social programs to be superseded by military spending. He said Reagan has been duplicitous by calling for a "war on drugs" then failing to provide funds for it in the federal budget.

He said the Reagan administration has been dragging its feet in pursuing a solution to the AIDS problem. What's needed, Wright said, is a "crash program to find a solution or a vaccine."

Fraud credited for empire

HOUSTON — A Houston real estate man known for his role in renovating the Galveston Island historical district may have used bad insurance title reports to obtain millions of dollars in loans for his development projects, the Houston Chronicle reported.

In a copyright story Sunday, the Chronicle said J.R. McConnell is being investigated by the FBI. It is alleged that McConnell borrowed as much as $53 million from banks and savings and loan associations using possibly fraudulent title insurance reports provided by a Houston title agency to which McConnell had ties.

"The FBI views this as a really, really big problem," said John P. Smith, assistant U.S. attorney. "They feel that the losses could be in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

The Chronicle said it was unable to reach McConnell for comment but reported that in the past he has denied any conflicts associated with his properties. The Associated Press could not reach McConnell for comment Sunday.

Admitted slayer faces jury

AUSTIN — More than two decades after being convicted of killing two University of Texas sorority sisters, James Cross faces trial again this week.

Cross was convicted in 1966 of the July 18, 1965, slayings of Shirley Stark and Susan Riggsby, both 21. He confessed to both killings shortly after the women's bodies were discovered in a field six weeks after they disappeared.

A 1976 Supreme Court ruling that the same jury cannot determine a defendant's sanity and guilt paved the way for a new trial for Cross, 44.

"Right now we're back at square one, like the indictment had just been returned," said Phil Nelson. He is the Austin assistant district attorney who will be prosecuting the new trial, which was to begin today.

"I'm just trying to assemble all the witnesses, which is quite difficult since they are all over the place," Nelson said in the weeks preceding the new trial.

Ten of the witnesses are now dead and Nelson concedes getting a guilty verdict after so many years will be difficult. But he said he will not try to get Cross placed on Death Row.

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around the state.

Dram-shop bill may misplace blame

Given the legal climate that pervades the country these days, it was probably inevitable that the Texas Legislature would eventually pass a so-called "dram-shop" bill — the concept that someone who serves alcohol to an obviously intoxicated person can be held liable for later actions by that individual.

A business which serves liquor to a falling-down, barely coherent drunk should bear some responsibility. But this legislation represents another regrettable milestone in the trend away from individual responsibility, and it opens up a Pandora's box regarding "obvious" intoxication and whether it should have been detected.

In the rush by the Legislature, the courts and victims to find a new source of blame for drunk-driving accidents ... we hope they don't forget the person who actually did the drinking and the driving.

Internal memos implicate Bush in Iran/contra deal

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush has become deeply implicated in the Iran/contras arms scandal because of internal memos described as "very damaging" by congressional sources familiar with them.

The way things work in Washington, Bush's national security adviser, Donald Gregg, will pay the immediate price. Our White House sources predict that Gregg will be the next official forced to resign as a result of the Senate/House select committee's investigation of the arms deal.

Gregg has gone on record offering to resign, but Bush has not taken him up on it. Sources say that at least one Gregg offer to quit was perfunctory, coupled with his advice that the resignation would do more harm than good for Bush's presidential hopes.

Several White House aides, however, have urged Gregg to leave ever since his dealings with former CIA agent Felix Rodriguez came under Justice Department scrutiny late last year. Rodriguez was an integral part of the White House's clandestine aid program to the Nicaraguan contras.

Rodriguez testified at the congressional hearing about a meeting with Gregg last Aug. 8 in which the secret supply of arms to Iran was discussed. In his notes of the meeting, Gregg wrote: "A swap of weapons for $ was arranged to get aid for the contras."

Despite this clear evidence, Rodriguez swore that he had not informed Gregg of any plan to swap weapons for money to aid the contras — even though he admitted discussing every other matter alluded to in Gregg's notes.

Committee sources tell us a still-secret internal memo implicates Gregg — and by extrapolation Bush — to a much greater degree in the secret contra aid program.

Gregg denied last October that he had ever spoken with Rodriguez about the aid program, but recanted later and acknowledged the Aug. 8 discussion.

The committee is keeping a tight lid on still another memo discovered recently by its investigators. Sources tell us the memo involves Bush in the scandal much deeper than has been established so far. Bush has claimed only peripheral involvement in the arms-for-hostages transaction with Iran, and has insisted that he knew nothing of any diversion of funds to aid the contras.

Bush has been content to let President Reagan take it on the chin for the scandal, but the vice president has a credibility problem about his own involvement. He either doesn't remember certain things, or recalls them far more favorably to himself than others do.

For example, on Dec. 29, Bush was disingenuous at best or untruthful at worst in an interview with the Tower Commission's general counsel, W. Clark McFadden II. Bush provided an astonishing account of a meeting he had in Jerusalem last July 29 with Amiram Nir, counterterrorism adviser to then-Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

The meeting was held in Bush's suite at the King David Hotel from 7:35 a.m. to 8:05 a.m. A 17-paragraph memo written by Bush's chief of staff, Craig Fuller, who was there, makes it abundantly clear that the half-hour meeting dealt exclusively with the arms-for-hostages swap.

Nir "described the details of the efforts from last year through the current period to gain the release of the U.S. hostages," Fuller wrote. He added that Nir asked for a decision "as to whether the items (arms) requested would be delivered in separate shipments or whether we would continue to press for the release of the hostages prior to delivering the items in the amount agreed to previously."

Nir spoke of an agreement with the Iranians "on 4,000 units — 1,000 first and then 3,000," according to Fuller's notes. The references to "items" and "units" referred to U.S. anti-tank TOW missiles. Nir later said, according to Fuller's memo, another shipment "involved spares for (anti-aircraft) Hawks and TOWs."

Yet despite all this rich detail of what was discussed, this is how the Tower Commission described Bush's interview with its counsel: "Vice President Bush related that this discussion with Mr. Nir was generally about counterterrorism. There was no discussion of specifics of arms going to the Iranians."

SPY IN THE SKY: The Pentagon is so proud of its new super-secret spy plane, the TR-1, that it can't keep from boasting about it. Wrote Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in a secret report to Congress: "A new era in tactical reconnaissance began with the production of the first of 35 TR-1 aircraft."

The Lockheed plane is essentially a bigger, souped-up version of the U-2, the CIA plane whose existence became known when the Soviets shot one down in 1960. The one-man TR-1 has Stealth technology to foil enemy radar and can pick out moving targets up to 100 miles away. It will give "24-hour, all-weather coverage of the battlefield," Weinberger wrote.

MINI-EDITORIAL: There were chorales aplenty in the Pentagon, you may be sure, over the astonishing saga of the young West German pilot who evaded Soviet air defense for hundreds of miles and landed within nose-thumbing distance of the Kremlin.

But when all the wheezes have subsided, we suspect there's an aspect to the affair that will stir a bit of unease at the Army & Navy Club, and that's the speed and decisiveness with which the defense minister and air defense chief were cashiered.

What if the old-fashioned notion that those in charge are not only "responsible" but personally accountable were taken out of mothballs over here?

Childhood reveals a wrestler

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

The big news in professional wrestling is that a group of women have joined the tour and will be grunting and groaning at a tag team with another lady grappler (an old term left over from my sports-writing days) called Thank You, Ma'am.

I like some of the women wrestlers' names. There's Queen Kong, for instance. And Bam Bam, who must be somebody from a tag team with another lady grappler (an old term left over from my sports-writing days) called Thank You, Ma'am.

Wrestling fans, those who can talk, may be saying, "I'm not going to pay good money to watch a bunch of women rasslers."

That is the wrong attitude for the obvious reason that this is 1987 and women have every right to be out there bilking the idiots who believe this stuff is real and making a few quick bucks right alongside their male counterparts.

That is also the wrong attitude because there are some women who can deliver some rather sound whippings not only to other women, but to men, as well.

I learned never to underestimate the fighting ability of my opposite sex back in the third grade when I had my first confrontation with the school bully, who, believe it or not, was a girl.

Cordie Mae Poovey, who was as big as a train wreck and twice as ugly, saw me on the playground one day sucking on a grape Popsicle.

"Gimme half of that Popsicle," Cordie Mae demanded.

I refused and she put a headlock on me and rammed my head into the tetherball pole until I gave her my entire Popsicle.

Where was Bernhard Goetz in 1954 when I needed him?

Cordie Mae even beat up my boyhood friend and idol, Weyman C. Wannamaker Jr., a great American.

Weyman was walking down the hallway of the school one day and accidentally ran into Cordie Mae. The collision knocked him, and Cordie Mae's books, to the floor.

Weyman, not wanting a confrontation with Cordie Mae, got up and hurried away from the scene.

Cordie Mae said, "Weyman, I thought when a lady dropped her books, a gentleman helped her pick them up."

"Yeah," replied Weyman, "and I thought the Titanic sunk."

Weyman was able to return to school three days later when the swelling went down in his eye.

One year at the county fair there was a contest. Anybody who could stay in the ring with a gorilla for five minutes could win $50.

The gorilla, so the story went, retired from show business soon after his bout with Cordie Mae, who put out one of his eyes, broke three of his fingers, and stomped his little toe flat, before the gorilla's manager gave Cordie Mae $100 and begged her to take the money and leave him and his partner alone.

I lost touch with Cordie Mae after high school. Somebody said she married Hog Philpott, who was as big as she was, and they restored a grain elevator and moved into it.

It's too bad Cordie Mae isn't still in her prime so she could turn pro and join the women's wrestling circuit.

The fans would go ape over her, which is only fitting. They already think like one.

"Mr. Madison moved for the report of the committee, and the question may then come on whether the convention will postpone it in order to take into consideration the system now offered.

"Mr. Lansing is of the opinion that the two systems are fairly contrasted. The one now offered is on the basis of amending the federal government, and the other to be reported as a national government, on propositions which exclude the propriety of amendment. Considering therefore its importance and that justice may be done to its weighty consideration, he is for postponing it a day.

"Col. Hamilton cannot say he is in sentiment with either plan — supposes both might again be considered as federal plans, and by this means they will be fairly in committee, and be contrasted so as to make a comparative estimate of the two.

"Thereupon it was agreed, that the report be postponed, and that the house will resolve itself into a committee of the whole, to take into consideration both propositions tomorrow.

Court rules on speech

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today unanimously declared unconstitutional a Los Angeles International Airport ban on all free-speech activities not related to the airport itself.

But the ruling, involving the group Jews for Jesus, did not appear to answer the key question the justices had been expected to decide: Whether government-run airports may prohibit everyone from distributing literature inside terminals.

Instead, the court said the ban at the Los Angeles airport, the world's third busiest, was too broad to be constitutional.

The ruling is a defeat for the city's airport board, which in 1983 passed a resolution that said all airport terminal buildings "shall be limited to airport-related uses."

Stark unprepared

WASHINGTON — The commanders of the USS Stark failed to take proper defensive measures before an Iraqi warplane hit the ship with missiles, according to a congressional report that says the Persian Gulf attack resulted from American complacency and Iraqi carelessness.

The Stark's captain had gone to his cabin shortly before the attack that killed 37 seamen on the night of May 17, and another officer didn't order that a radio warning be sent to the Iraqi pilot until the warplane was well within attacking range, the House Armed Services Committee said in a preliminary report on the assault.

The attack "was almost certainly inadvertent," the report said, faulting both the Iraqis and the Americans.

Iraqi pilots habitually fire at blips on radar screens, they fail to check targets visually before shooting and they do not consistently monitor radio warning channels, the report said.

Record heat wilts area

A heat wave that shattered nearly three-dozen temperature records from Arizona to Michigan spread toward Canada today, after overcoming 250 baseball fans in St. Louis, buckling highways and forcing zookeepers in Kansas to hose down their elephants.

Record highs for the date were set Sunday in 33 cities, including 101 degrees in Burlington, Iowa; Lincoln, Neb.; and Molene, Ill.

It was already 96 degrees hours before dawn this morning in Phoenix, Ariz. The city's 115-degree reading Sunday made it one of four cities that tied the record high for the date.

Milwaukee utility customers broke a summer electricity-use record trying to keep cool, and power demand overloaded circuits in Missouri.

Thousands fight police in streets of 7 cities

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students hurling firebombs and rocks poured into the streets to battle riot police in at least seven cities today, and new clashes were reported around Seoul's Roman Catholic cathedral.

Fighting broke out at universities in Seoul and at least five provincial cities as riot police fired thousands of tear gas rounds and sent in armored cars to try and hold the students back. Protesters rushed to within a few yards of police lines to throw firebombs, rocks and bricks.

"Destroy the dictator!" the students chanted again and again. "Destroy the military dictatorship!"

Scores of people were injured in today's protests. The government has issued no figures on those hurt in the repeated clashes.

Fierce protests began last Wednesday when opposition groups launched a drive aimed at toppling President Chun Doo-hwan and forcing democratic elections.

At Yonsei University in Seoul, 5,000 students attended a rally and then about 3,000 of them tried to charge the school gate to take to the street. Police tear gas turned them back, but about 200 fought through to a nearby university hospital to defy police.

Some students raced to a railroad track, where they hurled rocks and forced some trains to halt briefly.

The students seized equipment from police. At one point they turned fire hoses on officers, Associated Press correspondent Paul Shin reported from the scene.

Clashes broke out around Seoul's Myongdong Cathedral as police tear-gassed and charged thousands of people demonstrating against the government. The clashes continued even after radical students gave up their five-day occupation of the cathedral compound.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, said 60,000 students took part in anti-government rallies at 45 schools nationwide, but did not say how many developed into battles with authorities. Clashes were reported in Pusan, Suwon, Chonan, Chinju, Incheon and Chonju.

At least 13,000 students fought riot police at universities in Seoul, witnesses and other sources said. Hundreds of people were seen aiding the students.

Clashes took place for a sixth day around Myongdong Cathedral as thousands of people, including many office workers in suits and dresses, chanted, "We want democracy!"

Officers hurled tear gas grenades and special martial arts squads charged into crowds numbering up to 10,000 at a time.

"Don't fire, don't fire!" the crowds yelled as tear gas grenades exploded among them.

U.S. soldier killed

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — U.S. and Honduran officials are investigating the death of a U.S. soldier who was shot three times while supervising military police patrols at a U.S. air base, a base spokesman said.

"U.S. and Honduran officials are treating it as a criminal homicide as opposed to terrorist," said Capt. Ron Eschmann, military press officer for Palmerola air base, 100 miles northwest of Tegucigalpa.

He said there were no suspects in the death of Army Staff Sgt. Randall J. Harris, 34, of Wilmington, Ohio, and it was not known if another American soldier or a Honduran did the shooting.

Harris was shot once in each leg and once in the back about 10 p.m. Saturday near the front gate, said Eschmann, who was contacted Sunday in Tegucigalpa.

Military supply ship hit

BONN, West Germany — A West German military supply ship in the Baltic Sea was struck today by naval artillery fire from a Warsaw Pact vessel, and three people were injured, a Defense Ministry spokesman said.

The spokesman, Ulrich Hundt, identified the West German vessel as the Neckar, a 2,370-ton tender ship roughly the size of a frigate.

"We think it was a technical or human error," he said.

The West Germans said the ship was in international waters when hit by five rounds. The ship was observing a Warsaw Pact naval air defense exercise, the fleet command post in Gluecksburg reported.

The officials at Gluecksburg said the three injured, all West German servicemen, were not in a life-threatening condition.

Parents travel to USSR

HAMBURG, West Germany — The parents of Mathias Rust, the teen-age pilot who landed a private plane in Red Square, flew to the Soviet Union today, airport officials said.

The couple took an early morning Lufthansa flight from Duesseldorf to Moscow, an airport spokesman in Duesseldorf said. The plane was scheduled to arrive in Moscow this afternoon.

Moscow's consulate in Hamburg said it had granted tourist visas to Karl-Heinz and Monika Rust of Wedel, outside Hamburg. The visas were valid through Wednesday, said Vice Consul Mikhail Sharzhavitsky.

The couple's 19-year-old son has been imprisoned in the Soviet capital since May 23, when he flew to Moscow from Helsinki, Finland, buzzed the Kremlin and landed in Red Square.

Supreme Court ruling setback for victims' rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a major setback for the victims' rights movement, ruled today that the impact of a murder on the victim's family may not be considered when a convicted killer faces a possible death sentence.

The 5-4 ruling struck down the death sentence for a Maryland man convicted of brutally killing an elderly couple.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, writing for the court, said allowing the jury to hear about the emotional impact on the family of the victims can only inflame the jurors and deny the defendant a fair sentence.

"One can understand the grief and anger of the family caused by the brutal murders in this case," Powell said. "But the formal presentation of this information by the state can serve no other purpose than to inflame the jury and divert it from deciding the case on the relevant evidence concerning the crime and the defendant."

Introducing the so-called victim impact statement as evidence "creates a constitutionally unacceptable risk that the jury may impose the death penalty in an arbitrary and capricious manner," Powell said.

He added that the impact of the crime on a victim's family may be entirely unrelated to the blameworthiness of the defendant. It could subject someone to the death penalty merely because family members are willing and able to articulate their grief, Powell said.

Moreover, he said, the only way for the defendant to rebut the evidence would be to show the victim "was of dubious moral character or was ostracized from his family."

Such an exercise, Powell continued, could distract the jury from its proper task: Deciding "whether the death penalty is appropriate in light of the background and record of the accused and the particular circumstances of the crime."

Most states permit the impact of a crime on the victim — such as emotional and financial effects — to be considered in determining a defendant's sentence. But only some of those states allow victim impact statements to be introduced when the defendant is accused of a crime that carries the death penalty.

Such state laws are intended to examine the impact on both the victim and, particularly in cases in which the victim is killed, on family members. Today's ruling applies only to those cases in which the defendant faces possible execution.

Today's ruling is a victory for civil rights groups who argue that the statements in capital cases are inflammatory and prejudicial.

But victims' rights organizations said society has an important stake in meting out the harshest penalties in retribution for the harm done to families of those killed.

Joining Powell in the majority today were Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

The dissenters were Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Byron R. White and Antonin Scalia.

Lakers dethrone Celtics

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Although his image of calm confidence never wavered, Pat Riley admitted he had been rattled by a persistent, unnerving thought.

The Los Angeles coach was scared the Lakers were going to let the 1987 NBA title slip away.

"I know I kept saying all the right things, but there's always doubt in your mind that something's going to get stolen from you," Riley said Sunday. "I told the players that what happened to us in 1983 (when the Lakers were swept by Philadelphia in the finals) would be hero worship compared to what would happen if we let this thing get away."

Moments earlier, the Lakers had eased their coach's mind, beating the Boston Celtics 106-93 to win the 1987 Championship Series 4-2.

"I'm glad it's over," said the relieved Riley. "You really begin to feel the pressure. As the favorite, we were in a no-win situation."

"It's a natural phenomenon. The squeeze begins to get to you."

The "squeeze" was a pair of confidence-shaking losses for the Lakers, sandwiched around a one-point win in Boston Garden that let the Celtics fight their way back into the series.

Los Angeles, which had the league's best regular-season record and breezed through the Western Conference playoffs, virtually had been conceded the league title heading into the finals against the weary, wounded Celtics, who were extended to the limit by Detroit in the Eastern Conference finals.

Then, after lopsided victories in the opening two games left them looking invincible, the Lakers traveled to Boston. Suddenly they looked like a team in danger of choking.

Although the Lakers were back home at the Forum for Game 6 and a possible Game 7 by virtue of their 65-17 regular-season record, the first half Sunday resembled the contests at Boston Garden, with the Celtics controlling the tempo.

But, after trailing 56-51 at halftime, the Lakers finally got their fast break working in the third quarter, outscoring the Celtics 30-12 to take command.

lected the Most Valuable Player award — becoming the first player to win it three times since the award's inception in 1969.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers' 40-year-old center, scored a team-high 32 points and blocked four shots despite being limited to 29 minutes due to foul trouble.

James Worthy broke out of a shooting slump with a 10-of-16 performance and had 22 points. Reserve Mychal Thompson, hailed as the missing piece to the puzzle when he was acquired from San Antonio during the off-season, had 15 points and nine rebounds while spelling Abdul-Jabbar.

The Celtics were led by Dennis Johnson, who had 33 points and 10 rebounds, and Kevin McHale with 20 points and 10 rebounds. However, Larry Bird, a two-time playoff MVP, was held to 16 points on 6-of-16 shooting.

Boston Coach K.C. Jones, while saying he thought it was a fine accomplishment for the Celtics to make it to the sixth game of the Finals despite their injuries, said, "I was very impressed (by the Lakers). Obviously the best team won."

The title was the fourth of the decade for the Lakers, with Boston winning three of the other four years. With the loss, the Celtics became the 18th consecutive NBA champion to fail to defend the crown.

"We found out there are no quitters on this team," Bird said. "But we're still a bunch of guys who lost a championship. I guess that means that we're a bunch of losers."

Magic did it all to garner MVP

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson and Larry Bird. Larry Bird and Magic Johnson. It's hard to think of one without the other come playoff time.

Ever since they came into the NBA together in 1979, six months after Johnson's Michigan State Spartans beat Bird's Indiana State Sycamores in the NCAA finals, they have been linked by a common bond — the game.

After all, a 4-3 edge in championships seems small compared to the Bill Russell-Wilt Chamberlain Era of the 1960s, when Chamberlain always had the edge in individual statistics, but nearly always lost to Russell's Celtics.

Bird has three regular-season Most Valuable Player awards to only one for Johnson, who won this season. Bird is the only ability to define new standards of basketball excellence.

Johnson's Los Angeles Lakers or Bird's Boston Celtics have won seven of the eight NBA titles contested since their arrival.

The fact that Johnson has four championship rings and Bird three takes away little from their collective impact on the player who can boast of winning the regular-season and playoff MVPs in the same year on two occasions.

But Johnson can now boast an unprecedented three playoff MVP honors.

Sidekicks even series

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Sidekicks are shooting to become the first team in Major Indoor Soccer League history to win a title after losing the first two games.

Tatu scored three goals and added an assist in Sunday night's 6-5 victory over the Tacoma Stars to even the series at two games each.

The fifth game is scheduled for Tacoma on Tuesday night with the sixth game back in Dallas on Thursday night.

Tatu now has seven goals in the four games.

Tatu said the Dallas fans picked the team up after losses of 10-4 and 7-4 in Tacoma.

Dallas won 5-3 on Saturday night with Tatu scoring two goals.

Dallas Coach Gordon Jago said "it was an unbelievable performance by Tatu. And Krys Sobieski was tremendous in goal. The two weekend victories were extremely hard fought."

Tacoma's Steve Zungul said the referees were intimidated by the Dallas fans.

Zungul, asked about Tatu, said "Is this a circus or is it soccer? Everytime he complains he gets a call. If they wanted it to be 2-2, then why did we even bother coming. They (Dallas) have to understand. They are coming to Tacoma. If they want a physical game on Tuesday we will give it to them."

with 9:31 to play and also had an assist as he scored the hat trick for the second time in the playoffs this year.

The Brazilian, who was named the MISL's most valuable player, took a free kick from Mike Powers and beat two defenders with a 15-foot shot just out of goalkeeper Mike Dowler's reach for the winning score.

Sobieski had to deny three point-blank shots including a breakthrough attempt by Gregg Blasingame to preserve the victory.

The Stars' Rick Davis scored his second goal to give Tacoma a 5-4 lead in the third period. But Tatu retaliated with his second goal to tie the game 5-4 going into the final period.

Dallas rallied from a 4-2 deficit to tie the match at 4-4 just before the halftime intermission on two goals just 25 seconds apart.

Snead wins Westchester in O.T.

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — J.C. Snead was wearing a wry grin and the champion's red jacket when he said, "I must have set golf back 20 years."

He had just defeated Seve Ballesteros on the first hole of a playoff Sunday for the title and the $108,000 winner's check in the Westchester Classic. It was Snead's first victory in six years and the eighth of a 20-year PGA Tour career that has been marked by spots of controversy and occasional feuds with the press.

"I know I'm not very popular with people that don't know me. But there's nothing I can do about that," he said.

His latest victory, he added, may have been his most popular.

"It seemed like a lot of people were pulling for me out there in the playoff. Maybe they were just ready to see an American win instead of a foreigner," Snead said.

The playoff went quickly, and with Ballesteros rarely in view. He spent most of the playoff in the woods that line the Westchester Country Club course.

Ballesteros, a flamboyant Spaniard who owns a couple of Masters titles and two British Open victories, tied Snead at 276, eight under par, ending regulation play with a 10-foot birdie putt.

Snead, playing in front of Ballesteros, finished birdie-birdie for a 70 and watched while Ballesteros made the last-hole putt that finished a 72.

On the playoff hole, the 304-yard, par-4 10th, Ballesteros elected to go with a driver. He hit it left into deep rough behind a tree.

With Ballesteros in a virtually unplayable lie, Snead had the luxury of hitting a four-iron to the fairway and a nine-iron approach to the back fringe of the green.

After Ballesteros thrashed around in the rough, playing three shots without reaching the green and five without holing out, Snead won the playoff with a two-putt par-4.

"I'd rather have won it with a birdie, but I'll take it any way I can get it," the 45-year-old nephew of Sam Snead said.

"I know I'm at the bottom of my career. I just do the best with what I've got and let it go at that," Snead said. "After going so long (without winning), you start to wonder if it'll ever happen again.

"Sure, I've thought about quitting. But what am I going to do if I quit?"

"I'm not counting the years and the months and the days until I get to the Senior Tour, like so many of these guys are. I'm not quite through with these guys (on the regular PGA Tour) yet."

"When you get through with the Seniors Tour, they put you in a box and I'm not ready for that."

Snead and Ballesteros benefitted from the back-nine collapse of Mike Reid, who has collected more than $1 million in an 11-year career but still is seeking his first victory.

Reid, three in front at the turn on Sunday, backed away with bogeys on the 12th and 15th and with a decisive double-bogey on the 16th, where he failed to get a little chip out of deep rough near the green.

Roger Maltbie came on to take third with a par 71 that put him at 277.

Howard College bull rider set to compete in NFR

From staff and wire reports
BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Howard College bull rider R.D. Christian will among the more than 300 college cowboys and cowgirls who will gather here this week for the 1987 College National Finals Rodeo, which kicks, bucks and ropes its way into action Tuesday.

Christian, the eighth ranked bull rider in the nation, qualified for nationals by finishing second in the region to Jim Sharp of Odessa College.

Sharp is back where he left off, atop the bull riding standings. Sharp won the national title last year and comes into this year's College Finals leading the nation by 25 points over Brett Todd of National College of Rapid City, S.D.

The defending champions are host Montana State University for the women and Western Texas College for the men, but neither team is the favorite to win again. Both teams failed to win their respective regional titles.

Both National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA) national titles and College Finals titles will be on the line in each of the nine events and the two all-around. Competition runs through Saturday.

National titles are based on points scored during the regular season plus Finals points. CNFR titles are based strictly on the points cowboys and cowgirls rack up during the competition this week in Bozeman.

Team titles will be awarded according to the points scored by team members during the Finals.

Teams reached the College Finals by finishing in the top two among teams from their region. Each men's team will have six scoring members while each women's team will have three scoring members.

During the regular season, the men's team from Blue Mountain Community College had the most points, winning the Northwest Region with 3,430 points. Central Arizona of the Grand Canyon Region had a total of 2,705 points while National College from the Central Plains had 2,472 and Montana State of the Big Sky had 2,470.

Southern Arkansas of the Ozark Region had the highest regular season point total for a women's team with 1,815. Blue Mountain followed with 1,667.

Regular season point totals aren't always a good measure of a team's strength, however, because of the disparity in competition from region to region and event to event.

Cowboys and cowgirls who finished in the top two of an individual event but whose team is not in the finals will compete as independents.

Five defending national champions are entered in this year's rodeo. Molly McAuliffe of Blue Mountain Community College is back to defend her national all-around title. She is sitting second in the national all-around cowgirl standings this year, 42.5 points behind Sherry Rosser of Southern Arkansas University.

Clay Hurst, who won the national all-around and team roping titles as a member of the West Hills College team last season, is now riding for McNeese State of Lake Charles, La.

Johnny Hudson of defending team champ Western Texas College turned in a strong showing at the 1986 College Finals to win the calf roping title. He comes into this year's contest tied for eighth place, 95 points behind Scott Lammers of National College.

Schmidt goes wild in Phillies' romp

By The Associated Press

Even with sore ribs, 37-year-old Mike Schmidt showed he can still turn on an inside pitch.

Schmidt hit three homers, drove in six runs and got his 2,000th major-league hit Sunday in leading the Philadelphia Phillies past the Montreal Expos 11-6.

"All three balls that I hit today were inside or just a little off the inside of the plate," Schmidt said. "I proved to everyone that I can handle the ball inside."

Schmidt tied Mel Ott for 13th place on the all-time home run list with 511. He matched his single-game career high with six RBI and became the 153rd major-leaguer to reach 2,000 hits.

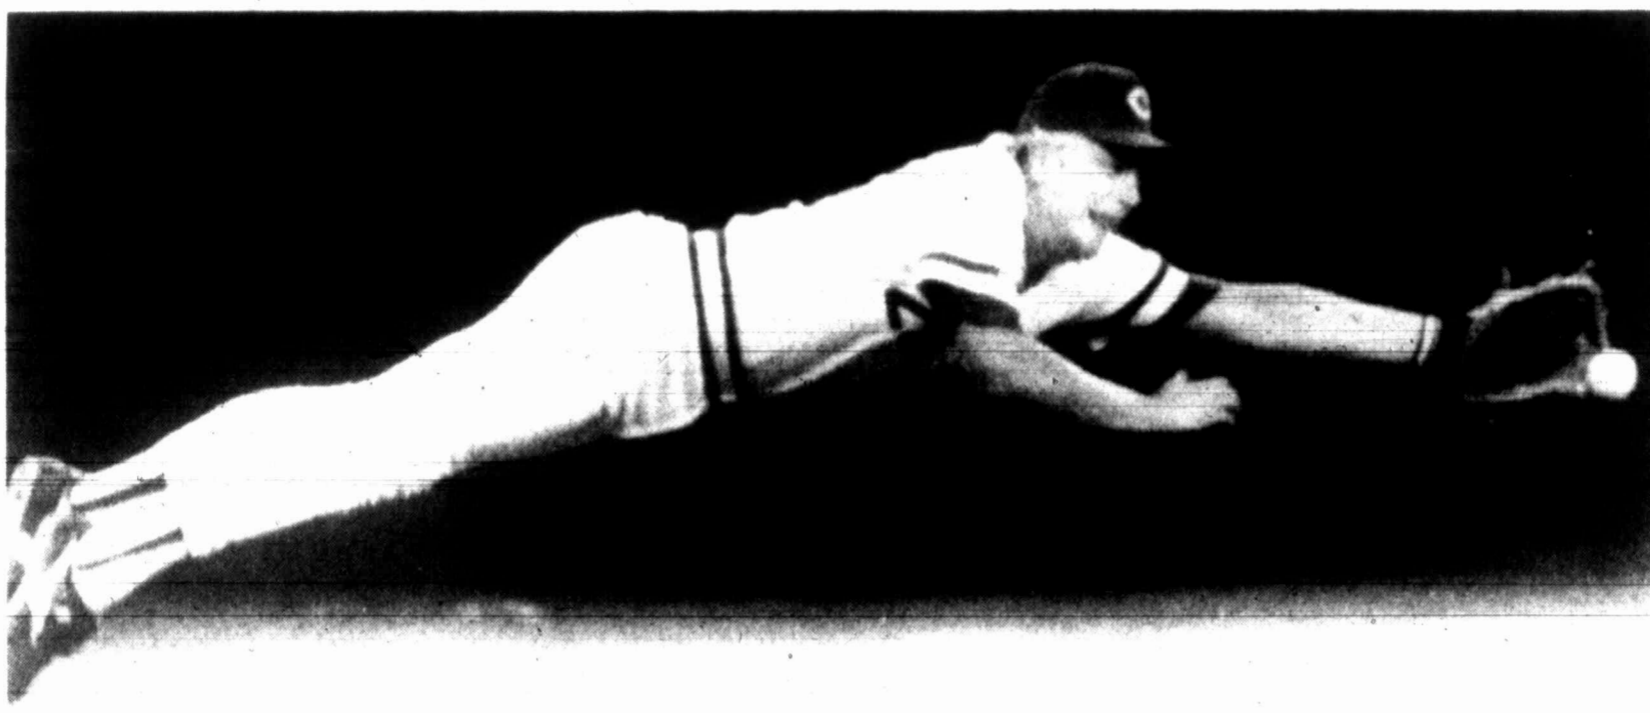

It marked the second time Schmidt had hit three home runs in a game. He also had a four-homer game at Wrigley Field in extra innings. Schmidt has hit 25 home runs at Olympic Stadium, most among visiting players.

Cardinals 3, Cubs 2

Danny Cox pitched 8 1-3 innings and beat Chicago for the fourth time this season as St. Louis swept a three-game series from the visiting Cubs.

The Cardinals, who have won four straight, opened up a six-game lead in the NL East, their largest since winning the World Series in 1982. Chicago has lost four straight.

Cox, 7-3, took a four-hitter and 3-0 lead into the ninth. He left after a single and one-out walk, and Todd Worrell relieved. Worrell gave up a two-out, two-run single to Manny

Astros 4, Dodgers 1

Danny Darwin held Los Angeles hitless in the final 8 1-3 innings and wound up with a two-hitter as Houston won at Dodger Stadium. Darwin struck out six, walked one and retired the final 16 batters. He allowed just one baserunner after the first inning, when Pedro Guerrero hit his 15th home run and Mike Marshall homered. Darwin, 4-4, has pitched a pair of two-hitters and a two one-hitters in his career.

the seventh inning of their National League game Saturday night.

Terry Puhl's RBI single put the Astros ahead 2-1 in the second inning and Dickie Thon followed with a suicide-squeeze bunt off Tim Leary, 2-1.

Mets 7, Pirates 3

Darryl Strawberry hit a two-run homer and New York won a testy game in Pittsburgh.

Strawberry was ejected in Saturday's loss to the Pirates after charging the mound when hit by a pitch from Bob Kipper, touching off a bench-clearing brawl. That incident apparently prompted home plate umpire Dutch Rennert to warn both teams Sunday about further problems when Pittsburgh's Brian Fisher hit Tim Teufel with a pitch in the first inning. Mets starter John Mitchell and Manager Davey Johnson were ejected in the third after Mitchell brushed back Fisher with a head-high pitch.

Padres 4, Giants 1

Dave Dravecky pitched a five-hitter and San Diego beat San Francisco for its first three-game winning streak since last August.

Carmelo Martinez homered, doubled and drove in two runs for the visiting Padres, who outscored the Giants 20-4 in the four-game series. Martinez hit an RBI double in the first inning and scored on Shane Mack's single off Mark Davis, 4-5. Martinez homered in the third, his fifth of the season and first since May 22.

Reds 4, Braves 3

Dave Concepcion singled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning that lifted Cincinnati over visiting Atlanta.

Buddy Bell drew a leadoff walk in the eighth from Gene Garber, 8-4, and pinch-runner Barry Larkin took second on Nick Esasky's sacrifice. With two outs, Concepcion singled.

The Reds stole six bases in six innings against starter Zane Smith and used three of them to set up runs.

Rob Murphy, 4-2, pitched one inning for the victory and John Franco worked the ninth for his 13th save.

Rahal holds off young Andretti to win Bud 500

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bobby Rahal and Michael Andretti were thinking of the past as the laps wound down in the Budweiser-GI Joe's 200 Indy-car race at Portland International Raceway.

Rahal was leading Andretti by about 20 seconds with 10 laps to go in Sunday's race when his thoughts turned to his three previous starts on Portland's 1.915-mile, nine-turn course. He had finished no better than 14th and wound up 20th twice, completing no more than 79 of the 104 race laps.

Andretti had last year's race on his mind. He had a big lead with 10 laps remaining only to run out of fuel on the last lap, allowing his father, Mario Andretti, to win the race.

"I was thinking a little bit about how hard this place is on cars, drivers, tires, everything," said Rahal, who beat the younger Andretti to the finish line by 6.39 seconds.

Only eight of the 22 starters were running at the end, the fewest on a road course since four finished a 1982 race at Riverside, Calif. Rahal, the defending CART-PPG Indy-car champion, earned his first victory of the season, ninth on a road course and 15th of his CART career.

Rahal inherited the lead on lap 47, when Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil went out with a mechanical problem while leading.

Fittipaldi, who started in the front row next to pole-winner Roberto Guerrero of Colombia, had dominated the early part of the race after beating Guerrero into the first turn at the start.

Guerrero was trying to hold off Rahal for second when his engine blew on lap 11. That left Fittipaldi with about a 15-second margin over Rahal.

Rahal led 55 laps, including the final 35, as he averaged a race-record 108.590 mph. That broke Mario Andretti's year-old record of 107.759.

Rahal collected $76,410 for his third victory in eight days. Last weekend at Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course, Rahal won a round of the International Race of Champions and then joined with Jochen Mass of West Germany to win an IMSA Camel GT event.

Rick Mears was third on Sunday, two laps behind the winner, followed by rookie Fabrizio Barbazza of Italy and Scott Brayton. The only other drivers running at the end were Josele Garza of Mexico, Johnny Rutherford and Randy Lewis.

There were no serious accidents and no injuries reported in the race.

The crew was a key, getting Rahal in and out of the pits in less than 22 seconds on each of his pit stops.

Michael Andretti wasn't as fortunate.

Sands hires hoop coach

ACKERLY — Jerry Dale Gooch has been chosen over 50 applicants as the new Sands High School boys basketball coach. He replaces Bobby Bell, who resigned this year.

Gooch, 36, comes to Sands from Hamlin, where he coached the last 13 years. The 14-year coaching veteran has compiled a 232-147 record.

Gooch was raised in Plainview and graduated from McMurry College. He will teach math and English at Sands.

He and his wife, Ricki, who is an elementary school teacher, have a son, Garth and a daughter, Cathryn.

CC golf tourney on tap

The Big Spring Country Club will have an individual play tournament June 20-21 at the Country Club golf course.

It will be a shotgun start at 1 p.m. both days. For more information call Chuck Palmer at 267-5354.

Player wins by one

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gary Player birdied the 18th hole Sunday to complete a final-round 69 and capture the $400,000 Senior Tournament Players Championship by one stroke over Chi Chi Rodriguez and Bruce Crampton.

Player, whose last victory came in the Denver Champions of Golf last June, finished with a 72-hole total of 8-under-par 280. He won $60,000 to increase his 1986 earnings to $133,657.

OSU wins golf title

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Brian Watts shot a final-round 66 to match the course record and earn individual honors while leading Oklahoma State to the team title at the 90th NCAA men's golf championships at Ohio State University's Scarlet Course on Saturday.

Watts finished at 8-under-par 280 for a 6-shot margin of victory.

Oklahoma State fired a final-round even-par 288 to finish at 8-over-par 1160 shots for the tournament. The Cowboys won by 16 shots over defending national champion Wake Forest.

Center No. 1 NHL pick

DETROIT (AP) — Pierre Turgeon, a sharp-shooting center from the Granby Bisons of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, was made the No. 1 pick in the NHL amateur draft by the Buffalo Sabres Saturday.

The 17-year-old Turgeon collected 69 goals and 85 assists for 154 points in 58 games for Granby. Brendan Shanahan, a center from the London Knights of the Ontario Hockey League, was the No. 2 pick, and was selected by the New Jersey Devils.

The Boston Bruins, using Vancouver's pick from a trade, then picked up defenseman Glen Wesley from the Portland Winter Hawks of the Western Hockey League.

Cracking down on fights

DETROIT (AP) — The NHL's Board of Governors, aiming to crack down on fighting and violence in front of the net, passed a tentative rule Sunday for a stiffer penalty against a team whose player who "involuntarily skates into the crease while his team is in possession of the puck."

In that case, the whistle will blow the play dead and a faceoff will take place in the neutral zone, thus taking the immediate advantage away from the offensive team.

Magic

said after Sunday's 106-93 victory gave the Lakers their fourth title since Johnson's arrival. "He accepted his role this year as team leader and played with enough intensity to inspire the other four guys on the floor."

"This is the greatest one because of what we did in the regular season," said Johnson, referring to the Lakers' 65-17 record. "This team can run, shoot, rebound and hit from the outside. It can do it all."

No one on the floor ran, scored, rebounded and passed better than Johnson in the championship series.

He averaged 26.2 points, 13 assists and eight rebounds, leading the Lakers in all three categories and leaving no doubt about who was the series MVP.

And if you're one of those who believes that numbers sometimes lie, look at where Johnson was whenever there was a close game to be won.

In Game 4, with the Celtics ready to even the series 2-2 after falling behind 2-0, it was Johnson who hit the hook shot with two seconds left for a 107-106 win.

In the deciding game Sunday, the Lakers trailed 56-51 at halftime before Johnson took over. After a 2-for-9 shooting performance in the first half, Johnson had six points and three assists during the 18-2 streak that put Los Angeles in front 69-58. Johnson also made the basket that put the Lakers in front for good at 57-56, after James Worthy's steal and dive that kept the ball alive.

"I was concerned coming into the playoffs that since he'd won his first (regular-season) MVP that he might think that had done it for him," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "But he continued right through the playoffs. We've won four championships in eight years since he's been here. That says it."

Perhaps only Oscar Robertson consistently displayed the same all-around skills that Johnson and Bird possess. But Robertson's place in history has been somewhat diminished because he played for generally weak teams until the end of his career, while Bird and Johnson have been regulars in the NBA finals.

Bird — with 24.5 points, 10 rebounds and 5.5 assists — had championship series statistics that were comparable to Johnson's. They even had identical point totals in Game 6 with 16, although Bird never had the magic moment that touched Johnson.

But perhaps Bird was closer to carrying the Celtics to the title than anyone realizes.

Moments before Johnson's hook shot in Game 4 that ultimately meant that the Lakers, not the Celtics, would take a 3-2 lead into Game 6, Bird hit a 3-pointer that gave Boston the lead with 12 seconds left.

If the Celtics could have handled a rebound after a free-throw miss by Abdul-Jabbar, they would have had the ball and a one-point lead with seven seconds to go.

"Game 4 is what killed us," said Bird, who missed a last-second desperation shot after Johnson's hook shot put the Lakers ahead. "We had to have that game. I'll remember that game for the rest of my life."

Instead of dwelling on what might have been, however, Bird already is thinking of a way to get even with Johnson next year.

"I think I'm going to lift some weights for the first time ever," Bird said. "This year I was injured and missed eight games because of it. I'll try to get stronger to cut down on injuries so that doesn't happen next year."

Lakers

really great basketball team. I would have loved to play them with a healthy Bill Walton and a Scotty Wedman. They probably would have still beat us... We would have given them a heckuva try."

The Lakers' Johnson, who averaged 26.2 points, 13 assists and eight rebounds to lead Los Angeles in all three categories in the Finals, capped a memorable season with the Playoff MVP award.

Johnson already had won the regular-season MVP Award, his first, and seemed to underscore that honor when his basket in the waning seconds gave the Lakers a crucial 107-106 victory in Game 4 in Boston as Bird — who beat out Johnson for the regular-season MVP award in three previous years — missed a shot at the buzzer.

Johnson said this was the best of the four championships the Lakers have won since his arrival in 1979.

Many of the Laker players again reminded that they were a team with a mission, since they wanted to erase the bitter memory of their loss to Houston in the Western Conference playoffs last year.

"I'm very proud of the team," said Abdul-Jabbar, who had planned to retire after next season but, according to Laker owner Jerry Buss, has agreed to play for two more years. "We were very disappointed with the end of last season, and people were writing us off for this season," Abdul-Jabbar said. "We wanted the whole thing and we went out and got it."

Bird, noting that the Celtics were a very mediocre team on the road this season, said management is going to have to make some personnel changes.

"Now they (Celtics management) have got to make some changes," Bird said. "We know what we need and I'm sure Red (club President Red Auerbach) is going to be on that and try to get us a couple of more horses in here."

Birds change uniforms — and win

By The Associated Press

The Baltimore Orioles changed their color and their luck.

But it was their home run bats which brought an end to their 10-game losing streak Sunday and broke the Toronto Blue Jays' club-record 11-game winning streak.

Sunday marked the first time in three seasons that the Orioles wore orange jerseys and they beat the visiting Blue Jays 8-5 behind a three-run home run by Jim Dwyer and two-run homers by Ray Knight and Cal Ripken Jr.

AL

"It was just a crazy thing to do," said Dwyer, who delivered the clinching blow. "It was just a change, and it worked. We'll have to take them home and sleep in them."

Baltimore, in sixth place despite leading the majors in homers with 97, used Dave Schmidt, 7-1, who started only six previous games in his last 197 major-league appearances. He allowed Jesse Barfield's 17th homer in the second inning and lasted until a three-run eighth that brought Toronto within 5-4.

Tigers 2, Red Sox 1

At Detroit, Jack Morris, 9-2, gained his eighth straight decision — longest in the AL this season — and Mike Heath drove in both runs as the Tigers swept the three-game series from Boston. Morris allowed six hits and struck out 10.

With the score tied 1-1 and two outs in the eighth, Bruce Hurst, 7-5, walked Alan Trammell, who advanced on Larry Herndon's single and scored on Heath's single. Heath's sacrifice fly in the seventh accounted for the Tigers' first run.

Twins 6, White Sox 3

Tim Laudner, batting 180, hit a grand slam to lead Minnesota and knuckleballer Joe Niekro past Chicago. It was the eighth win in the last nine games for the AL West leaders, who hold a 2½-game lead over Kansas City in the AL West.

Angels 12, Royals 0

At Kansas City, Dick Schofield hit a grand slam, George Hendrick knocked in four runs and Don Sutton pitched seven scoreless innings for his 313th career victory in California's win. Brian Downing hit his 15th homer and Hendrick had his first, which accounted for three runs.

Brewers 6, Yankees 4

Bill Schroeder, who collected four hits in four at-bats, hit a two-run homer and Dale Sveum hit a solo home run in the ninth inning to boost Milwaukee over host New York. Reliever Dan Plesac, 3-0, got the victory.

Mariners 4, Indians 3

Jim Presley hit a leadoff home run in the bottom of the 10th inning off Cleveland's Rich Yett and snapped Seattle's four-game losing streak. Presley's eighth-inning single preceding Dave Valle homered tied the score 3-3.

Rangers 5, Athletics 1

Texas stopped Oakland's five-game winning streak as knuckleballer Charlie Hough pitched a three-hitter and Pete O'Brien hit his 15th homer, a two-run shot. Geno Petralli went 3-for-3 and drove in two runs for the Rangers.

Hough, 6-2, struck out eight and walked one. Eric Plunk, 1-3, suffered the loss despite a career-high 11 strikeouts in six innings. He gave up five runs on five hits.

Weddings

Shive-Haigler

Wanda Louise Shive became the bride of Christopher Scott Haigler at a 7:30 p.m. wedding at the First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Ray Bell, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Coahoma, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Shive of Coahoma. Bridegroom's parents are Mrs. Sue Anne Salisbury of Perryton and Kenneth J. Haigler of Dallas.

The couple exchanged vows before an altar arrangement of peach gladiolas, alstroemeria lilies and mixed flowers. Two fan candelabra with bridal tapers entwined with wild smilax graced the altar. Smilax was draped along each side of the chancel rail. Ivory bows and smilax adorned the pews.

Organist was Keith Ross of Big Spring and flutist was Staci Hudson of Austin. Vocalist was Jackie Henry of Big Spring.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of candlelight silk tissue taffeta overlaid with reembodyered alencon lace with a high empire waist emphasized by venise lace trim. The sleeves were puffed and overlaid with lace appliques and pearls. A large bow graced the waistline and tapered streamers accented with lace medallions and silk flowers fell into a semi-cathedral train. The hemline was bordered with venise lace.

She carried a bouquet of enchantment lillies, alstroemeria lilies, sonia roses and English ivy cascaded on a mother of pearl Bible, given to the bride by her maternal grandmother.

Maid of honor was Suzanne Shive, sister of the bride, of San Antonio. Bridesmaids were Stacy Swann of Lubbock, Paula Allen of Lubbock, Kim Griffin of Longview, Cathy Polocsek of Lubbock and Keeley Griffin of Longview.

Flower girls were Jane Haigler, sister of the bridegroom, and Sarah Atkinson, cousin of the bride. Ringbearers were Jeremy Jones and Joshua Jones.

Best man was Jeffrey Haigler, brother of the bridegroom. Groomsman were Dwayne Blodgett of Austin, Chris Langford of Austin, Charlie Carroll of Lubbock, Shane Gray of Lubbock and Walter Wilhelm of Lubbock.

Ushers and candlelighters were Steve and Mike Helmke, both of Lubbock. Junior usher was Lawrence Love, cousin of the bride, of San Antonio.

After the wedding, a reception was hosted at the Big Spring Country Club. The bride's table, draped with an ivory lace cloth, featured a garland of smilax and miniature nosegays. A three-tiered champagne cake surrounded by fresh flowers featured six heart-shaped cakes decorated with nosegays of fresh flowers.

The bridegroom's table featured

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will make his home in Lubbock.

The couple stood before an altar flanked by sunburst arrangements of mixed white spring flowers and candelabra.

Organist was Denise Zettler and vocalist was Lynn Richman.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory satin gown accented with lace trim and a scalloped edged skirt with a cathedral-length train. It featured a low pearl draped back and a sweetheart neckline accented with pearls and sequins. The bodice, skirt and train were also accented by beaded pearls and sequins. ## Bridal fashions Covered up, yet revealing, simplified in silhouette, yet embellished and adorned — the looks that will be applauded when fall/winter brides come down the aisle.

In its just launched collection, Bridal Originals premiered a group of bridal fashions which featured unique design elements:

- Plunging necklines
- Deep V-backs
- Longer semi-cathedral trains
- Embroidery at hemlines
- Cut-out detail on skirts
- Long sleeves, some with detachable gauntlets
- Beaded embroidered motifs on bodices, sleeves and trains
- Multiple rows of ruffles on skirts, many with bow interest
- Fabrics — satin, silky and matte taffeta, organza

According to Peter Elting, vice president of sales and marketing, "The collection epitomize the essence of romance, and that's what a wedding is all about. Based on Bridal Original's forty years of experience, the gown which really captures a prospective bride's affection is one that combines soft, femininity with illusion and drama. The wedding day is, after all, a time that will be remembered forever, and the bride wants to create an everlasting beautiful portrait of herself."

Top, this satin gown has a bateau neckline and a long-waisted bodice which is embellished with beaded, embroidered motifs. It has a tip V-back and lace-trimmed skirt and train. The gown, bottom, has renaissance sleeves, a heavily beaded embroidered bodice, cut out motifs on the semi-cathedral train and a high illusion neckline.

Married couples must put relationship first

By REDBOOK
A Hearst Magazine

More than half of all second marriages end in divorce — often because the couples involved become distracted by outside forces that range from children to ex-spouses.

Almost 60 percent of all second marriages fail, according to an article in Redbook. The average length of these marriages is only five years. And when there are children involved, as many as 75 percent of remarried couples eventually break up.

Dr. Martin Goldberg, director of the Marriage Council of Philadelphia, a division of the department of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, says second-marriage couples often fail to handle well such problems as children, money, alimony, ex-spouses and new in-laws because they forget what's really important: their relationship as a couple.

"When two people organize their lives so that the marriage comes first, they can cope with almost anything," Goldberg says.

A remarried couple must give priority to themselves as individuals and as a couple.

"Many remarried couples think they'll take care of the children and their parents and their work and all the other issues that arise first," says Sherry Farmer, staff therapist at the Marriage Council who specializes in working with children.

"Then, after all this is done, they will think about themselves," she adds. "And that's how second marriages go down the tubes."

Goldberg says there never comes a time when all problems are solved.

"So if you don't structure your time for yourself and time together," he says, "there won't be any. First, you have to establish priorities, starting with yourself. We all make better decisions and handle dilemmas more easily when we're relaxed and have had some time to unwind. A person who is totally drained doesn't make a good partner or a good parent."

"Then the marriage is the next priority, because the two adults are the ones who keep the family going."

Stephen Treat, who conducts group workshops at the Marriage Council, suggests that couples begin by setting aside a minimum amount of time for themselves — at least 10 to 20 minutes of private conversation a day, some special time alone during each weekend and a vacation away from the children during the year.

It is important not to feel guilty about the time you take for yourselves.

"One of the neatest things you can't teach kids," Goldberg says, "is that Mommy and Daddy care about each other and that's why they spend time time alone together."

Most important, remarried couples must realize they are only human.
