Windfall tax again a concern

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Windfall profits tax, a term that leaves a sour taste in the mouth of the oil industry, is once again a subject of concern in the Permian Basin, as some members of Congress look to revive the punitive tax.

Said Glenn Brant, president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association: "I am appalled that a member of Congress would even consider a windfall profits tax at a time when Congress should be looking for ways to give the domestic oil industry a shot in the arm rather than punish it."

Grier Brunson, a Midland businessman and chairman of the National Association of Royalty Owners of Texas, called moves to revive the windfall profits "ignorant."

"This latest call for a windfall profits tax is a serious threat to the industry," said Beau Boulter, Republican candidate for Texas Railroad Commissioner. Boulter, campaigning in Midland, said the Windfall Profits Tax had been responsible for transferring billions of dollars out of the state and had cost Texas thousands of jobs, while giving aid to OPEC.

The Windfall Profits Tax — enacted in March 1980 — has been called a "reverse tariff" and a "negative tax" and has come to stand as the symbol of animosity between consuming states and producing states. The tax, which was repealed only two years ago, penalized domestic oil companies for all profits above a base price, but did not penalize foreign oil companies.

"The Windfall Profits Tax helped to put the oil industry where it is today," said Brant. "It destroyed domestic producers, while building up the Persian Gulf producers."

Boulter noted that what the oil industry needed now was not another penalty tax, but a reverse of a windfall profits tax. "We need an oil import fee," he said.

Windfall concerns were first aroused in the industry by an announcement Aug. 23 by Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore. The senior Republican member of the Senate Finance Committee announced that he intended to introduce legislation that would call for a tax of up to 70 percent on what he calls "excessive" profits that the oil companies would

No hostages freed

■ American officials wait in vain for promised Iraqi release of Americans detained in Mideast as Saddam Hussein, in televised interviews, again refers to Kuwait as an Iraqi province.

By Thomas Wagner
Associated Press Writer

U.S. officials rushed to Jordan's border with Iraq on Wednesday to greet Americans leaving Iraq, but no sign emerged that Saddam Hussein had carried out his pledge to free Western women and children.

No members of Iraq's hostage group were aboard the two Iraqi Airways flights that arrived in Amman, Jordan, from Baghdad on Wednesday.

And although U.S. Ambassador Roger Harrison hurried to the border post of Ruweishid northeast of Amman to help greet Americans, none showed up.

"I have no evidence ... indicating that people have been allowed to leave," White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk told reporters in Washington.

Iraq has said all women and children who wish to leave must have exit visas, Britain said Wednesday. Britain also has been told that each of the foreign embassies must give Iraq a list of their nationals who wish to leave, said a British Foreign Office spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity.

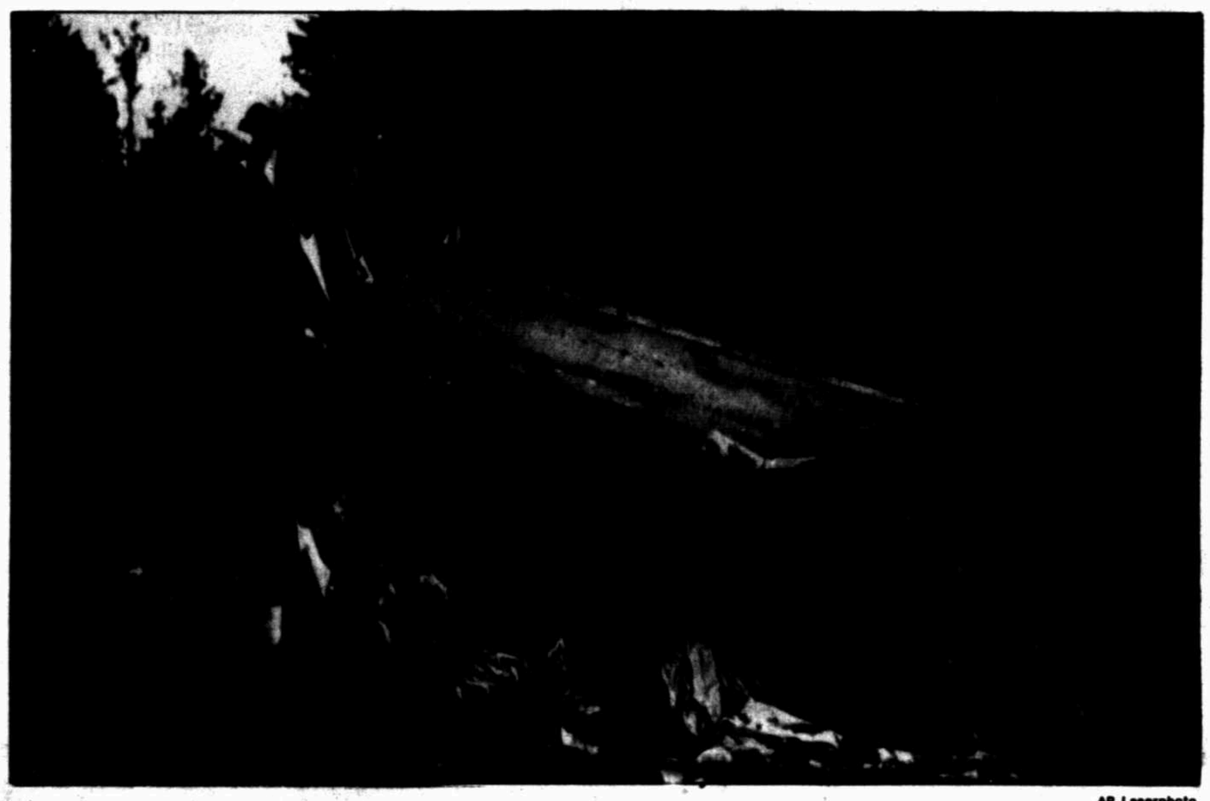

A defiant Saddam meanwhile declared in a TV interview Wednesday that America cannot defeat Iraq, adding, "I do not beg before anyone."

He told a newsman from French TV station TF1 that "a victory for the United States is not realistic" in the confrontation with Iraq, and that "we are, in any case, optimistic. The future belongs to us."

Ramstein scene

U.S. servicemen and rescue workers inspect the damage after a U.S. Air Force C-5 Galaxy cargo plane bound for the Persian Gulf crashed on takeoff at Ramstein Air Base near Kaiserslautern, Germany, on Wednesday. Nine reservists based in San Antonio, Texas, were among the 13 killed.

Base mourns loss of reservists

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The mood was somber at Kelly Air Force base Wednesday as airmen, friends and relatives mourned the deaths of nine volunteer reservists in a military plane crash in Europe.

"The mood is very solemn, and many people are sad because of the incident. It really was a shock to a lot of people," said Lt. Mike Franco, spokesman for the 433rd Military Airlift Wing based at Kelly.

Nine members of the 433rd were among 13 killed when a C-5 cargo plane crashed at Ramstein Air Base in West Germany at 5:30 p.m. CDT Tuesday. The huge plane was taking part in the U.S. military buildup in the Middle East.

Ten of the 17 people on board were from the 433rd. All but one of the 433rd reservists who died were from San Antonio, military officials said.

It was not immediately known when their bodies would be returned, officials said. Flags flew at half-staff around the Air Force base.

"Everybody's in shock at the wing. It's been quite a blow to everybody here," said Maj. Meade C. Warthen, public affairs chief for the reserve unit.

The reserve unit will continue taking part in Operation Desert Shield, he added.

"It has increased our determination," Warthen said. "We can respond to any mission, any time, anywhere."

The plane was from the 60th Military Airlift Squadron from Travis Air Force Base in California and was en route to Rhein-Mein Air Base in West Germany, authorities said.

Rather

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS news anchor Dan Rather got the first U.S. interview Wednesday with Saddam Hussein, and the Iraqi president used the forum to repeat his assertion that Kuwait is now part of Iraq.

Saddam spoke first with French television and then with Rather, the first interviews he has granted Western journalists since he invaded his oil-rich neighbor.

The tape of the interview still was being transmitted from Iraqi TV facilities to New York when CBS's evening news was on the air in the Eastern and Central time zones. CBS aired it later in the evening.

She was thrown from the raft when it hit Lava Falls rapids, one of the roughest stretches in the river, said Chuck Lundy, spokesman for Grand Canyon National Park.

Reagan

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Former first lady Nancy Reagan underwent surgery Wednesday at the Mayo Clinic to remove a cancerous tumor near her nose, a family spokesman said. She left for home later in the day.

The basal cell carcinoma was discovered just beneath Mrs. Reagan's left nostril during a routine dermatological examination at the Mayo Clinic, said Mark Weinberg.

Neighbors picket 'stinky' Odessa plant

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Protesters held an anti-stench rally outside the gates of Dynagen Inc. and complained that their olfactory nerves had been frayed by smells recently emitted by the synthetic rubber plant.

Carrying placards and chanting, "Stinky, stinky, stinky, Dynagen stinks," some of the 27 marchers said they could no longer tolerate the foul breeze wafting daily into their nearby homes.

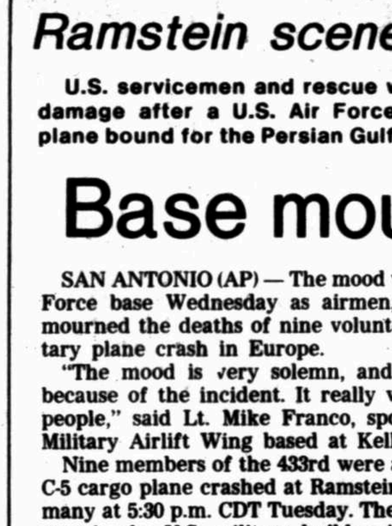

"This plant has been emitting a very offensive odor for the past few weeks," said Odessan Gene Collins, member of the Odessa chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Representatives of the Odessa chapters of the League of United Latin Amercian Citizens and the Sierra Club, an enviromental watchdog group, also were among the picketers.

Collins, who lives far from the facility, said he attended the rally to support residents who live near Dynagen, a subsidiary of General Tire Co.

He complained that bacteria have been building in solar ponds at the site, south of Interstate 20 off Grandview Avenue, and creating a malodorous atmosphere in the area.

"It flat stinks out here," Collins said.

MCHD approves tax rate, hears report on indigents

■ Hospital directors vote to boost the district's effective tax rate — approved with one dissenting vote — that could be the subject of a rollback petition.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Midland County Hospital District board members approved a 19.6 percent tax hike to fund indigent health care in their Wednesday afternoon meeting.

The 4-1 vote makes official the 16.6 cents per $100 valuation tax rate, a 2.9 cent increase over 1989-90's 13.7 cent rate.

Because the rate exceeds an 8 percent increase, it could be subject to a rollback petition and election, but none of the seven taxpayers attending the meeting mentioned a rollback.

Director David Porter was the lone dissenter in the tax and budget approval votes.

"The reason I voted against the budget and this tax is that this is a one-shot fix — we'll have the same problem next year," Porter said.

"We're looking at a 10 to 20 percent increase (in indigent care) every year for the next five or 10 years unless something's done."

Porter would like to see the district tighten eligibility requirements for indigency, a suggestion criticized by Larry Tonn, who presented a preliminary report on MCHD's indigent care situation at the meeting.

The analysis by Tonn and Associates, an Austin-based health care consulting group, indicated that the district is operating "economically and efficiently given the services it has to offer."

Tonn said MCHD could make the eligibility requirements more restrictive, but Midland Memorial Hospital would then have to absorb more bad debt, which would be passed on to paying patients as higher bills.

Compared with the 11 other Texas hospital districts serving populations of more than 100,000, MCHD is below average on its tax rate, Tonn said.

The 12 districts have an average 19.5 cent rate.

Tonn recommended going to a tax rate of 18.5 cents to cover an $800,000 shortfall in indigent care funds for 1991 that's likely to occur despite the tax hike.

He suggested that the hospital phase out its 22 percent discount on indigent care bills sent to the district, because other hospitals are charging the full cost of their services to the district.

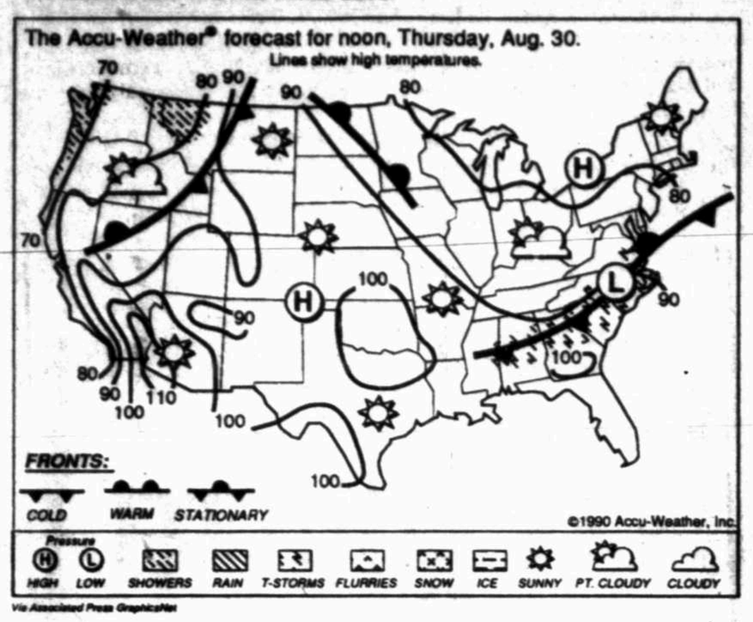

The 22 percent discount reflects the actual cost of the hospital's services.

Porter commented that Medicaid and Medicare reimburse at 74 percent of the hospital's full cost, while the district is reimbursing at 78 percent. He said the hospital ought to increase its discount to the district, so that it was not paying more for services than Medicaid.

Director Steven Wiesenfeld said paying for the deficit and the discounted amount would demand a tax rate of perhaps 21 cents.

"It's hard for me to sit here in my own community and do that and it will be hard for the public to take such a serious big chunk," he said.

Director Richard Dulaney told Tonn, "It sounds like your conclusion is that the district doesn't have much choice but raise taxes. That there's not much more that can be done in the short run."

Tonn said the district is in a "tough, no-win situation."

He recommended lobbying state representatives to find a statewide solution to the problem. He blamed the Legislature for not funding Medicaid and Medicare adequately and for not aggressively pursuing federal grants for indigent health care reimbursements.

"The federal tax reduction and the decrease in Medicaid and Medicare reimbursements over the last few years clearly shows the burden is shifting to the local level," Tonn said.

He said the district's planned expansion of its indigent pediatrics and neonatal clinic into a walk-in clinic for preventative health care would decrease emergency room and acute care costs.

Tonn also suggested that the hospital recruit staff members with teaching experience so that it could become an affiliated teaching facility eligible for state funds.

The hospital's total budget for 1990-91 is $112 million, $8.3 of which is earmarked for indigent care.

The budget reflects an average 8 percent increase in hospital charges, effective Sept. 1.

July's hospital billing for indigent care itemized

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

On Wednesday, Midland County Hospital District ran out of tax funds for indigent health care.

Board members signed a check for the district's last $237,960.13 to pay indigent health care bills accrued in July. The total bill for July is $392,856.19, meaning Midland Memorial Hospital will have to absorb the $154,896.06 deficit.

"We're out of money," said board president Thomas Bruner. "We got halfway through July and we can't cover August or September."

The district collected $5 million in taxes on its 13.7 cent per $100 valuation rate this year.

Indigent health care has cost the district $5 million since January and is estimated to reach $6.1 million by the end of the fiscal year.

The figures include the 22 percent discount the hospital gives the district. The gross cost of indigent care in 1990 is anticipated to be $7.5 million.

But what does the taxpayers' money go toward?

The district released a cost and service breakdown for indigent care at its Wednesday meeting.

The report indicates that inpatient care is responsible for the majority of costs. For the year to date to July 31, the hospital treated 761 inpatient cases who spent an average of 6.48 days in the hospital, at an average cost of $6,075 and a total cost of $4.6 million.

The skilled nursing facility racked up the the next highest expense, with 8 cases spending an average of 33.88 days in the hospital, at an average cost of $21,346 and a total cost of $171,000.

Emergency care has the highest demand among inpatient medical services, with 272 cases this year, costing an average of $8,748 per person for a total of $2.4 million in indigent care bills.

Obstetrics is the next highest used inpatient medical service, with 219 cases costing an average of $1,375, for a total cost of $301,000.

Among outpatient services, the pediatric clinic showed the most use, with 963 cases costing an average of $34, for a total cost of $32,712.

Emergency outpatient care accounted for 388 cases at an average cost of $281, for a total cost of $108,978.

Broken down by specialties, internal medicine had the highest amount of charges. Its 158 cases cost an average of $13,355, for a total of $2.1 million.

General/family practice was the next highest speciality, with 73 cases costing an average of $7,163, for a total of $522,926.

OIL: Industry 'appalled' tax suggested reap from the Persian Gulf crisis.

(From 1A)

Packwood said his windfall tax, which would be patterned after the old Windfall Profits Tax, would apply to foreign and domestic producers, but he did not indicate how he would tax foreign producers.

Adding momentum to Packwood's plan is a letter being circulated in Congress by Rep. Benjamin L. Cardin, D-Md., asking members to call for an investigation into the sudden increase in gasoline prices at the gas pump and consider a "windfall profits tax" if price gouging is found.

"Make no doubt about it, there is a growing movement underfoot in Congress by the northern energy-consuming states to revive the so-called Windfall Profits Tax," said Boulter.

In a special letter Aug. 24, the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association warned its members: "It is clear September will be a very dangerous and important time for the industry. We must be prepared to move fast and work together to defeat the dangerous and counterproductive windfall profits initive."

Grier Brunson said Packwood was catering to the naive consumer vote by proposing to penalize oil companies, but noted that he would better serve his constituents by reversing his thinking and introducing progressive legislation to stimulate domestic production.

A political twist was added to the windfall scare Wednesday, when Beau Boulter took advantage of industry concerns to deliver a broadside against his democratic opponent Bob Krueger at a Midland press conference, charging that Krueger had once been a supporter of the Windfall Profits Tax.

Boulter released copies of the 1975 Congressional Quarterly which related that Krueger had unsuccessfully offered an oil price decontrol amendment that conditioned decontrol to passage of a windfall profits tax.

Oil at that time was controlled under "new" and "old" oil prices, which set the price of old oil at $5.25 per barrel and new oil at $12 per barrel.

And, according to CQ, Kruger had wanted to gradually phase out those prices, providing a windfall profits tax with a plowback provision were enacted. The amendment was similar to one offered by President Ford with the exception of the windfall tax provision, according to CQ.

"Bob Krueger may say he supported a windfall profits tax, because it was the only way to get decontrol," said Boulter. "But that is not the case. He made a windfall profits tax a condition of decontrol."

Krueger was unavailable for comment.

IRAQ: Saddam grants television interviews

(From 1A)

He also defended Iraq's invasion and annexation of Kuwait, calling it "an integral part" of Iraq.

In an hourlong interview with CBS News in Baghdad, shot by Iraqi TV, Saddam declared, "Kuwait is part of Iraq. ... The legislative bodies in Iraq have issued a clear decree saying that Kuwait is an Iraqi province."

On Tuesday, the State Department said Iraq took nine more Americans into custody in Iraq and Kuwait, bringing to 70 the number who have been rounded up and apparently moved to military installations to prevent a U.S. attack.

Nevertheless, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said on Wednesday that if Saddam carries out his promise to free the Western women and children, it will be "a significant step in the right direction."

As the West waited to see what would happen to its hostages, a White House official confirmed that the Bush administration received a secret Iraqi offer to free all captives and withdraw from Kuwait if certain conditions were met.

The conditions were that the international trade embargo against Iraq be lifted and Baghdad be granted access to the Persian Gulf and sole control of an oil field that dips into Kuwait, according to Newsday, which broke the story.

■ The State Department has set up a hotline for people seeking information about the safety of American relatives and friends in Kuwait and Iraq. The number for the 24-hour telephone bank is (202) 647-0900.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the offer was rejected. Iraq's official news agency said no such proposal was made.

Iraq's U.S. ambassador, Mohamed Al-Mashat, officially notified the State Department of Saddam's decree that all women and children of foreign nationals would be allowed out of Iraq beginning Wednesday.

Al-Mashat told reporters the Americans would be allowed to leave through Jordan or Turkey, but he gave no timetable for their departure.

"It is not possible administratively that everybody go on the same day," al-Mashat said. He said he did not know whether the Iraqi government would provide aircraft to facilitate the departures.

Cable News Network quoted unidentified Iraqi officials as saying an Iraqi Airways plane filled with Westerners will leave Baghdad for Amman Thursday.

Al-Mashat also said that once Washington assures Baghdad that the U.S.-led multinational force massing in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf will not attack Iraq, "then we are going to let even men out."

Saddam previously offered to free all 21,000 Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait if Washington withdrew its forces from the gulf and guaranteed the lifting of trade sanctions against Iraq. The United States rejected the offer.

About 3,000 Americans were trapped in Kuwait and Iraq on Aug. 2 when Iraqi forces overran its oil-rich neighbor, then annexed it. The State Department estimates that about 1,000 of them were women and children.

On the diplomatic front, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar left for Amman, where he will discuss the gulf crisis on Thursday with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz. The U.N. chief said he hoped the atmosphere for talks would be improved by Saddam's pledge to free foreign women and children.

But he repeated that he would ask Iraq to comply with Security Council resolutions demanding that Iraqi troops be withdrawn from Kuwait and all hostages be freed.

The international trade embargo, designed to force Iraq to end its occupation of Kuwait, got an important boost from OPEC and Japan on Wednesday.

OPEC oil ministers approved a plan allowing Saudi Arabia, Venezuela and other member countries to pump more oil and help hold down crude prices. One OPEC minister predicted the agreement could replace 3 million of the 4 million barrels of oil the day that disappeared from the world market because of the embargos on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil. That shortfall caused oil prices to skyrocket.

Iran refused to back the OPEC deal, and Iraq and Libya did not show up for the meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

After days of discussion, Japan announced it will supply money, medics and transportation to the multinational forces being deployed to prevent an Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia.

Correction

In a Wednesday news brief about an accident that occurred at the intersection of county roads 1195 and 125 on Tuesday, the drivers' names were inadvertently reversed.

The report should have said that J.M. Harrison was driving west on Country Road 125 when Martin Pena Ramirez, driving a pickup, turned left from County Road 1195 after stopping at a stop sign and collided with Harrison's vehicle.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

PROTEST: Plant battling bacteria buildup in pond

tions, said his company has been trying to solve the problem in solar ponds since late June. He said the cleanup process when completed will have cost the company about $500,000.

There are seven solar ponds covering a combined 160 acres at the site. The stench has been caused by evaporating water, which is from the synthetic rubber production process, Kalail said.

Texas Air Control Board and Texas Water Commission investigators have recently cited Dynagen for its pond problems, Kalail said, adding that no fines stemmed from the violations.

Since late June, the company has been pumping water out of the ponds and treating it with chlorine dioxide before returning it to the basins, he said. Five of seven ponds have been treated so far, he said, adding that he is unsure how long it will take to treat the remaining two ponds.

"We're working on it as quickly as we can," Kalail said. "We're extremely concerned about it obviously, but it's not a health threat."

But protester Jarrel Miller, 17, a Permian High School sophomore, said the smell has been more than an annoyance for residents of his home about a half mile away.

"My stomach has started aching for no reason," Jerrell said. "You wake up every day and you don't know what the smell is. I don't even like going outside."

Odessan Mickey Villalobos, 41, an unemployed oilfield worker who lives about 12 blocks away, said the stink has plagued him since he moved there 26 years ago.

"You have to turn your air conditioner off or your house smells worse," Villalobos said. "Sometimes it smells like something died."

At one point during the peaceful 40-minute rally, protesters marched inside the gates and almost up to the front door of the offices before an unidentified Dynagen employee asked them to turn back.

The solar ponds and the protesters haven't been Dynagen's only troubles.

An Odessa district judge in January slapped the company with a temporary injunction which laid down ground rules for the emission for air contaminants.

Dynagen was prohibited from operating its solid waste incinerator, the source of numerous Texas Air Control Board complaints, unless certain criteria were met.

In addition, Dynagen was ordered to hire an environmental engineering consultant to monitor emissions and submit reports to the 161st District Court.

The company has also had to pay thousands of dollars in fines for numerous violations.

Texas' 'spill bill' includes 2-cent tax on imported oil

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

STATE

AUSTIN — In the wake of three major oil spills this summer in the Gulf of Mexico, lawmakers Wednesday prefiled legislation to impose a two-cent-per-barrel tax on imported oil that would pay for future cleanup activities.

"We have about 76 supertankers a month off-loading their cargo into the various ports in Texas," said bill sponsor Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

While Texas is importing progressively more oil, Parker said the technology of building tankers has not advanced beyond the "single-skin" hulls developed 30 years ago.

"That's no longer tolerable," he said. "We know too much about the adverse affect on the environment."

With the 2-cent tax, the proposed statute, which is patterned after a similar law approved by the Florida Legislature, seeks to establish a $35 million reserve fund for oil-spill cleanup.

Parker said the tax would go out of effect automatically once the fund reached a level of $35 million. The tax would kick in as the fund is depleted.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, and sponsor of the legislation in the House of Representatives, said about $5 million of the money would go toward equipment purchases needed to clean up oil spills.

The state would station the equipment at five response centers along the coast. Parker said the locations have not yet been determined, although Beaumont-Port Arthur, Freeport and Corpus Christi are likely locations because of their proximity to tanker traffic.

Berlanga said the remainder of the $35 million would go toward administration costs and reimbursement business concerns like shellfish harvesters that are adversely affected by spills.

In June, the Norwegian tanker Mega Borg exploded off Galveston Island while unloading its cargo in an accident that resulted in 3.9 million gallons of oil lost to gulf waters.

In July, a Greek tanker, the Shinoussa, collided with a three-barge tow near the mouth of the Houston Ship Channel and spilled 700,000 gallons of oil.

On Aug. 12, a barge near the Lyondell Petrochemical dock in the Houston Ship Channel buckled and dumped 21,000 gallons of oil into the channel.

"To think this summer that nearly five million gallons have been spilled in our Texas waters," said Berlanga.

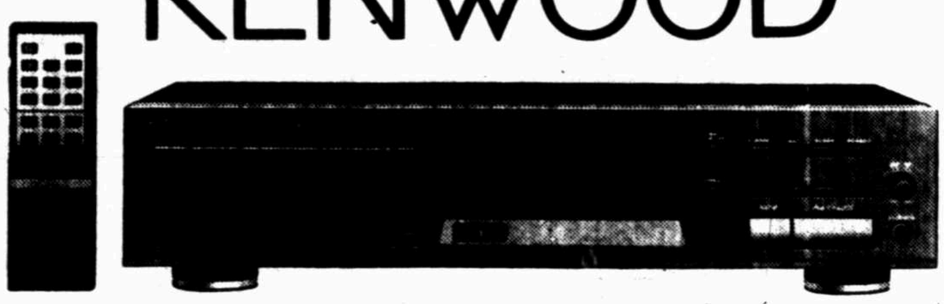

The representative said the accidents have cost the state's fishing industry $40 million and 150 jobs.

Wave of investigators hits Gainesville to track killer

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — An army of investigators, including an FBI agent who tracked "Son of Sam," Charles Manson and Ted Bundy, searched on Wednesday for a "methodical maniac" with a loathing for slightly built brunettes.

Community leaders in this terrified college town organized a march for "all those who are outraged, fearful and in mourning" for the four women and one man found slain since Sunday. Three of the women were horribly mutilated.

About 600 local police, state investigators and FBI agents were investigating and providing additional security at the off-campus apartment complexes of the type the victims died in.

The killer is "shrewd," a "methodical maniac" who apparently tracked certain types of women and entered their apartments through unlocked doors or windows, or by forcing sliding-glass doors, Police Chief Wayland Clifton told reporters Wednesday.

"There is a similarity in physical appearance in the four female victims as far as hair color, eye color and general physical build," Clifton said.

An FBI serial-killer team and experts from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement are developing a psychological profile of the killer stalking the University of Florida area.

Among the FBI officials was John Douglas, who was involved in the serial homicide cases of Bundy — who died in the Florida electric chair last year — Manson and David Berkowitz, the 1970s "Son of Sam" killer in New York City.

Investigators say all five victims were stabbed to death. Police have released autopsy information on only one of the victims, Christa Hoyt.

NATION

Ms. Hoyt, 18, was sliced open from the pelvis to the chest and decapitated, Alachua County Sheriff Lu Hindery said. The Orlando Sentinel reported her head was found on a shelf in her apartment, but Hindery would not comment on that.

The bodies of roommates Christina Powell, 17, and Sonja Larson, 18, who were found Sunday, were mutilated. Investigators who spoke on condition of anonymity said the victims' breasts had been cut with a surgically sharp instrument.

The bodies of Tracey Inez Paules, 23, and Manuel R. Taboada, 23, discovered Tuesday, had not been mutilated, police said.

Police warned the killer could change the way he gains entry to apartments.

"He can change his method of operations as he desires," Clifton said. "We've gotten a rather shrewd individual on our hands." He did not elaborate.

There was no evidence of satanic cults or messages left for police by the killer, he said.

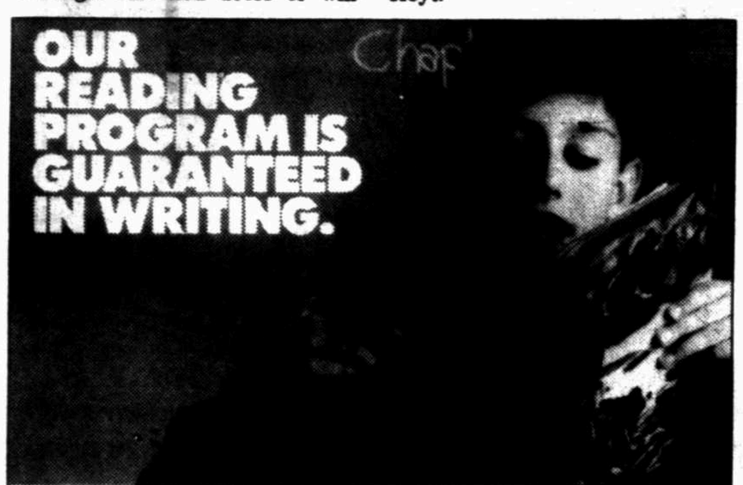

Many students are spending their nights in large groups. Linda Helton of West Palm Beach said she spent Tuesday night with nine other people. Others bolted themselves into their rooms.

Stores reported a run on weapons, mace, deadbolts and even broomsticks that residents were using to secure doors and windows.

Calls by concerned parents, and from students calling home, overwhelmed telephone circuits in the Gainesville area, said Southern Bell area manager Judy Boles.

A crowd of about 500 held a noon-hour campus prayer vigil Wednesday.

Speaker Susan Wieder, a 20-year-old junior from St. Cloud, offered a prayer for the murderer.

Plainfield residents picking up

By Robert Lee Zimmer

PLAINFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Classes were supposed to start here Wednesday, but after a few howling minutes of chaos there was no class, no school, and for many residents, no home.

The twisters that tore into this northern Illinois community and several neighboring towns Tuesday killed at least 24 people and injured more than 300. As they flipped cars and tore roofs off houses, the tornadoes also threatened to bury hundreds of lives.

"Life in Plainfield, Crest Hill, Joliet and surrounding towns will never be the same," said an editorial in Wednesday's Joliet Herald-News. "It has only been a few hours since the tragedy struck. It will take days, weeks and years to recover."

Scores of residents were left homeless. Some residents who had been planning a new beginning were suddenly faced with nothing.

Jerry O'Shea, a new teacher, was getting ready for the start of classes and left Plainfield High School minutes before the twisters hit. He returned Wednesday to a school in ruin.

"This was going to be my first day teaching," O'Shea said. "Welcome to Plainfield."

In the Warwick subdivision of Joliet, about 35 miles southwest of Chicago, new homes finished in the last six months were reduced to their foundations in minutes. Joliet officials had to explain to a touring Gov. James R. Thompson that it wasn't a construction zone.

"All these homes were occupied," said Joliet Alderman Warren Dorris. "We lost 31 (homes) and we had three fatalities here. It's just a shock."

There were even more homeless at a seven-building apartment complex in Crest Hill, near Plainfield. Parts of the complex were destroyed, and authorities were only allowing people into relatively undamaged buildings to retrieve personal belongings.

Norm Treonis, chairman of the company that owns the apartment complex, said he was working to put displaced residents into some of the company's other vacant apartments, rent-free, for up to two months.

Workers also were issuing checks on the spot to reimburse residents for security deposits and rent. By late morning Treonis had issued checks to more than 100 people for amounts ranging from $200 to $600.

Most storefronts along Plainfield's main thoroughfare, Lockport Street, were shuttered Wednesday. But two insurance agencies were doing a brisk business.

"We've had three dozen calls since eight o'clock this morning," said Mike Hull of Plainfield Insurance Agency Inc.

In Plainfield Township people also hurried to clean yards and what was left of their homes.

"We're just waiting for the insurance guy to come out," said Jim Schmidt, owner of a frame house that suffered extensive damage in the storm.

The American Red Cross had three shelters for the homeless. While providing for immediate needs such as food and clothing, the organization was also concerned about the long-term mental impact of the disaster.

NORML holds anniversary conference

WASHINGTON (NYT) — There was a time when they were called "potheads" — those bell-bottomed, free-loving, long-haired advocates of marijuana legalization.

The heads are apt to be balding now and "pot" may be descriptive of their bellies, but for some the issue reforming marijuana laws still burns brightly.

Nostalgia is not on the agenda for the 20th Anniversary Conference of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), which begins Thursday in Washington.

"We are happy that we can share the joy of 20 years of existence," said NORML spokesman John Dunlap. "But we realize that our work is just beginning."

NORML is bringing politicians, scientists, lawyers, writers, philosophers and assorted other advocates to the nation's capital for three days of seminars, speeches and parties relating to a cause that seems lost in the era of a War on Drugs.

NORML is pushing political and social issues for the 1990s, the organizers said. Still, the conference schedule smacks of being as much a blast from the past as the songs on a golden oldies radio station.

From 9 p.m. to midnight on Friday, for instance, conference-goers are invited to spend an evening with gonzo journalist Hunter Thompson, who is perhaps better known to a younger generation as the model for Uncle Duke in "Doonesbury." Ramsey Clark, the ever-liberal attorney general for LBJ, will speak at Saturday night's banquet.

Of course, the Bush administration is strongly against legalization of marijuana.

"Marijuana is a drug that's dangerous in its own right and is also a gateway drug to heroin and cocaine," said Herbert Kleber, deputy director of the national Office of Drug Control Policy.

At a time when marijuana use is dwindling, legalization would "send exactly the wrong message," he said.

But with a seminar on "The History of Marijuana" and the presentation of a report on the growing popularity and profitability of pot farming, NORML aims to show that cannabis has been around for a long time and is unlikely to be eradicated soon.

"Trying to outlaw the use of marijuana is like trying to outlaw the tides," said Don Fiedler, NORML's national director. "Once the government admits that marijuana is here to stay, then we can talk about realistic solutions."

Golfing president deserves praise

All this criticism directed at President George Bush for playing a little golf while young Americans in uniform were shipping out for the Persian Gulf was, if you'll pardon the expression, hypocritical teeth-gnashing.

It was in a word absurd. Furthermore, it illustrates explicitly that Americans do not know what they want and that someone will complain regardless what action a president takes. During the Iranian-instigated hostage crisis, President Jimmy Carter did not vacation as George Bush did, but instead secluded himself in the White House to deal with the tense situation — for months on end. He was later criticized for permitting the Iranians to make him a "hostage" of the White House.

Now some Americans are releasing volleys at Bush for attempting to go about his daily business and leisure, in effect not permitting himself to be held "hostage" by Saddam Hussein. We believe he's correct to do so and his critics are wrong in asserting that for him to show up on the golf course in Kennebunkport gives the wrong impression to Americans.

As president, Bush has the most difficult, most potentially stressful, most demanding job of any person in the free world. Even when he is on vacation at Kennebunkport or jogging along a street in Washington, D.C. he is subjected to the stress of knowing that whatever occurs in Kuwait or Africa or even inside the Soviet Union that adversely affects the United States is his responsibility. He will bear the blame for this nation's failures.

So who will deny a man in President Bush's position the ability to get out and get away what few moments he may be able to get in the interest of his good health and sanity?

Even when he is away from Washington, D.C. today's communications technology keeps him in constant touch with leaders around the world and he can contact anyone he needs to speak with in a few moments.

In that light, the concerns of the "image-makers" and political critics become trivial and George Bush's vacationing takes on a totally different meaning.

The cutting edge in this Persian Gulf "crisis" is how he has performed his duties as chief executive and with Hussein starting to release Americans and with tensions beginning to ease in the Middle East, we'd give Bush an A-plus.

Agent Orange link still being denied

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has continued a shameful pattern of denying the link between Agent Orange and medical maladies of the Vietnam veterans who were doused with the herbicide.

Anderson

Newly declassified reports show the federal government knew more than it was willing to admit about Agent Orange three decades ago, yet it continued haphazard use of the dioxin-laden chemical. The picture is of a cavalier U.S. war effort bumbling along with Agent Orange, discovering pitfalls along the way and covering them up with a propaganda campaign.

We have examined military and State Department memos that were traded on the issue of Agent Orange in the 1960s. They show that whatever the government knew about the dangers of Agent Orange, it used the defoliant anyway, in the face of questions both about its safety and efficacy.

The documents suggest a government policy of composing the music while playing it — making up policy as it went along and covering up the blunders. When Agent Orange's dangers drew public flak, the government ducked the fire through public relations campaigns instead of seriously examining the problem.

Even from the get-go, there was more concern about rubber plantations than about the soldiers and civilians. The U.S. operations respected a secret, five-mile buffer zone around Vietnamese rubber plantations, for reasons "we must accept," according to a June 1968 memo from the U.S. Embassy in Saigon. The same classified memo refused that courtesy to populated areas.

The plantation owners had more clout than poor villagers and their crops, but even the plantations suffered because of goofs in the spraying program. A November 1967 memo to the U.S. ambassador in Saigon from his assistant noted that unintended drift of Agent Orange "was responsible in early 1967 for significant damage to the rubber plantations." Some of that drift was blamed on "navigational error."

Other memos fret about this problem of drift and how to correct it. The implication is that Agent Orange was spread over even more than the 6 million acres that were targeted.

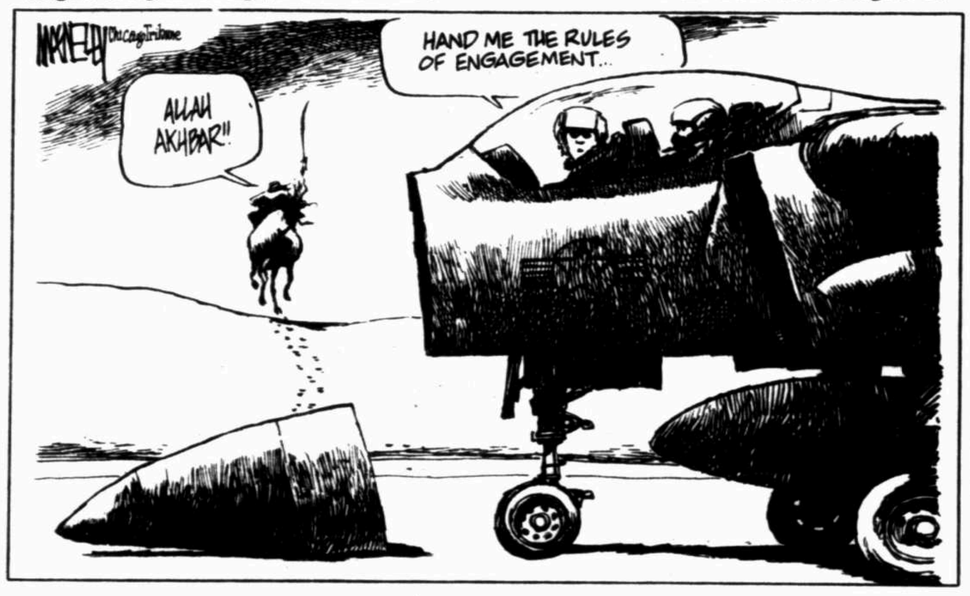

Our associate Dan Njegomir examined the old documents and talked to advocates who have tried for years to get the government to take responsibility for the fallout from Agent Orange. Ron Rossani, a disabled Vietnam vet who has studied Agent Orange for years, said the documents reveal "incompetence at the highest level."

As public concern grew in Vietnam and at home, the U.S. government seemed most interested in orchestrating a media blitz as a counter measure. One proposal that was almost adopted was an outright lie.

In late 1967 and early 1968, a series of memos proposed that the government publicly declare that Agent Orange would be banned in certain heavily populated areas. "In fact, this area would be so defined as to cover areas where there is very little use of defoliants any longer in any case," according to a secret internal Army memo from November 1967. "Appearing to restrict the use of defoliants," the memo continued, would have the added benefit of good psychological warfare because it would suggest "that large areas were sufficiently pacified by now. ..."

The Army never went public with that lie, but it wasn't an attack of honesty that stopped the proposal. The plan was dropped because the army was afraid the Vietcong would congregate in the areas touted as Agent-Orange-free.

We asked the Pentagon to comment on the pattern of deception evidenced in the memos. A spokesman insisted the Agent Orange program was undertaken without an eye to public relations. "It had a military purpose and a military application only," he said.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Williams' ads tell generic truth

It was with great interest that I read the First West Texas Liars' Contest is to be held in Odessa, Sept. 15, in conjunction with the Permian Basin Fair and Exposition. To commemorate such an event I feel recognition should go to a man who embodies the very essence of what this contest is all about — our own local hero, Clayton Williams Jr.

As supporting documentation — that Clayton ought to be named as master of ceremonies at the very least — I offer the script of his most recent television commercial touting his management ability. A recent analysis of this ad (see Dallas Morning News, Aug. 12) shows that his three assertions stated in the commercial are wrong. No, the state budget has not grown from $4 to $48 billion. No, we do not have more state employees than California. And, no, we do not have a tax burden that is higher than Massachusetts. Clayton didn't do his homework correctly — he forgot Massachusetts has a state income tax. And before he starts up — NO his opponent does not favor a state income tax. That is one of several bald-faced lies he, or his surrogates, repeat ad naseum all over the state.

There is much more documentation available to support Clayton's claim to the master of ceremonies title at a liars' contest, but perhaps he's already filled that position and even Clayton's money can't buy it for him. If that is the case, then how about honorable mention for "Best Excuses For Telling a Lie?"

When questioned about the truthfulness of the aforementioned commercial his spokesman replied the original ad's claim is accurate, "in a generic context." Generic context? Huh? See, it's that kind of thinking that really impresses me with Clayton Williams' ability to tell a lie.

Today's young people have it too rough

Quoting Gary Saunders in the Wednesday, Aug. 15, news article, "They're starting to have to walk a long way to get to school."

Apparently Saunders was driven to school in chauffered limousine and had a gentleman's gentleman carry his books to class, take class notes and do his homework.

It appears that the majority of today's parents do not care whether or not their children learn the three R's — Reliability, Respectability and Responsibility. When I attended high school in Abilene, I walked 22 blocks each way to school. My parents and my teachers knew I was reliable. They knew I would arrive at school on time regardless of the weather. I respected my teachers and the school system. I was responsible for my own good behavior, class notes and homework. I also learned the facts of life, that nothing is free. You have to work for it.

The last two years of my high school days I delivered slightly more than 100 daily newspapers, on foot, door to door for $15 per week. Half of this I put aside toward my college tuition. The other half was used for school supplies, clothing and cafeteria money. We had no alcohol on campus, could not smoke on campus — not even the teachers — and we made out fine. I did not even own a car until after I graduated from college and had become regularly employed.

Peeping Klaus comes in out of the cold

One of the reasons things are not going as well as expected in Eastern Europe is because so many jobs are being eliminated by the new regimes.

I met an East German immigrant in the Boston air terminal recently, and we started talking about the old country.

Buchwald

"What did you do in East Germany?" I asked him.

"I watched people," he said.

"What do you mean you watched people?"

"I got up in the morning, dressed, climbed a ladder behind the Berlin Wall and watched West Germans."

"What for?"

"Anything. For example, if a West German woman went into a Laundromat, I wrote it down in my book. I even watched the driver when he delivered a Domino's pizza. No one escaped my sharp, piercing eyes."

"What were the West Germans doing while you were watching them?"

"They were watching me. There were times when things were very quiet and we did nothing but stare at each other for hours on end."

"Besides peering at West Germans in the streets, did you also watch them in their apartments?"

"No, we had special people to do that. You had to know someone in the secret police to qualify as an apartment watcher, because obviously there were more exciting things going on in someone's flat than outside in the street. To tell you the truth, I was hoping to be promoted to apartments when the roof fell in on watching West Berlin."

"During all your years as a street spy, was there any particular incident that stands out?"

"I once saw an American student come up to the Wall, pull his pants down and turn his backside toward East Germany while photographers took pictures of him."

"What did you do?"

"I made a note of it in my book."

"After looking at Berlin through binoculars for so many years, did you ever have the desire to go over the Wall yourself?"

"Never. If I went to West Berlin, then I would have to get a job watching East Berlin, and that would be really depressing. I was one of the few East Germans who liked where he lived."

"Then what are you doing in the United States?"

"I lost my job. They called me in and said, 'Klaus, you don't have to watch West Germans anymore.' "

"Why not?" I asked them.

"Because we are no longer interested in what they do. They can toss Frisbees into the center of Odenstrasse and we couldn't care less."

I told them, "Right now is the honeymoon, but someday when we get mad at West Germany again, you are going to need professional watchers, and they will all be retired."

"Are you optimistic about getting a people-watching job in the United States?"

"Yes. I hear that the Justice Department is looking for someone to keep an eye on Mayor Barry."

Bush must not ignore Iraqi determination

BAGHDAD — Baghdad's back is up, its target George Bush.

"Bush is a bad man, a cowboy in his heart," said the proprietor of an open-stall shop amid the pandemonium of the ancient Arab souk (market). "We love America. We hate Bush."

Evans and Novak

Adnan Jenavi, owner of the shop, bore an uncanny resemblance to President Saddam Hussein. Just as he, his four brothers and cousins and millions of other Iraqis are swarthy, black-mustached look-alikes of the Iraqi strongman, so do they seem to share his hate for the American president.

U.N. sanctions, now bolstered with the new Security Council resolution authorizing enforcement by military power, is choking imports. But the Jenavis talk tough. "We will eat the fruit of plane trees," Adnan told us.

Westerners, showing patience and good temper in their terrible danger here, awake each morning in clammy fear wondering what their situation may be in the next 24 hours.

The chief American diplomat, Joe Wilson, shepherds his flock of some 800-odd known Americans like a village priest. At 4:30 Sunday morning, he was helping 55 wives and children of U.S. diplomats from Kuwait load themselves and their few remaining possessions on transport for the long haul on the desert to Jordan. He shows the stuff of heroism. Nine American diplomats remain here with him, along with some 50 U.S. officials from the embassy in Kuwait (now run by a skeleton staff of 10).

Adnan Jenavi does not concern himself with the Americans' fear of impending doom (sufficient to have caused some U.S. reporters to decline visas to come here). His sentiments spring from a different source: resentment and fury at George Bush.

"We are not Panama," the proprietor of an adjoining stall told us. "Saddam is not Noriega. We teach Bush good manners."

In the forlorn cafeteria of the super-deluxe Sheraton Hotel, supplies are running low. The only Americans here are a five-man contingent from CNN. There are British and Swiss citizens, many Filipino kitchen workers and waiters and a sprinkling of other non-Iraqis.

A sad-faced Filipino who wants out told us, "We will be the last priority. Maybe two months, maybe two years."

But even here where Iraqis have prospered from rich American guests, the mood among those who obey Saddam Hussein is anger at George Bush. "He will kill 1,000 of us," whispered an Iraqi waiter. "We do not cry. We will kill 10 of you. You will cry."

White flour is running out in the Sheraton. So are sweets, fruit juices, meats, some green vegetables and carrots. Prices are rocketing upward. The legal exchange rate for the Iraqi dinar has reached $3.30 — a reversal of the dollar's true value of three dinars. With rising inflation, a bottle of middling French wine, Longchamps rose, that is priced at 44 dinars, costs $145.20. We paid.

Saturday night, a power shortage cut off lights and air conditioning at 4 a.m. Power was restored at 5:30 a.m., but it was a foretaste of what is to come as U.N. sanctions pinch tighter.

Will the piano wire tightening around Iraq's neck compel Saddam Hussein to cry "uncle"? What shards of evidence there are suggest the answer may be — "no."

"Sanctions," said an official in the information ministry, "will start biting, but they will bite you before us."

Just emerging from its nine-year war with Iran, Iraq may find the answer to the sanctions weapon in the will of its people, however tight the piano wire. An American reporter walking the streets and nosing around government departments can get only the barest facts, not nearly enough for solid conclusions.

But top Western diplomats say that in confronting George Bush, Saddam Hussein has "total political control" — as of today. And the bas-relief monument to Iraqi soldiers on Moustinseria Square suggests a toughness that matches street rhetoric. It shows an Iraqi soldier with his arms tied to two Iranian jeeps driving away from each other. The soldier is ripped in two.

"If Iraq will never forget this," the descriptive legend says, "it will succeed in facing even greater danger." That suggests a fortitude President Bush must not ignore as he pursues his high purpose.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Kuwaiti guerrillas serve as irritant to Iraqi troops

N.Y. Times News Service

Small guerrilla bands in Kuwait have killed or wounded "a couple hundred" Iraqi troops and have destroyed a handful of tanks and more than 20 trucks and small military vehicles, a U.S. government official says.

The official, who has access to official reports on developments in the region, spoke on Tuesday on condition that he not be identified.

He said most of the casualties had been sentries or other soldiers caught alone or in small groups. Iraqi soldiers do not venture into parts of Kuwait City because of armed attacks and have cordoned off parts of the city to conduct thorough house-to-house searches, he said.

"The Kuwaiti resistance isn't going to push the Iraqis out, but what they are doing is an irritant," the American said. "Unless the resistance escalates considerably, it won't have an effect on Iraqi military operations."

Another American official said the modest successes of the Kuwaiti guerrillas were a surprise. "The fact there is such a resistance in the face of such an overwhelming Iraqi military is remarkable, even inspirational," said the official, who also spoke on condition that he not be identified.

Kuwaiti exiles in Saudi Arabia who are trying to help the resistance movement say the guerrillas' weapons consist of handguns, some assault rifles and a few hand grenades.

A member of the Kuwaiti royal family said some units of the Kuwaiti army and police had handed out guns to civilians before the security forces were overwhelmed by Iraqi troops or forced to retreat to Saudi Arabia.

"They don't have much to face the tanks," the Kuwaiti noble said in a telephone interview on Sunday from Taif, Saudi Arabia, where the Kuwaiti government-in-exile has been established.

Guerrillas have organized at the neighborhood level.

Pause in prayer

Texarkana residents Shelley Gabbie and her daughter, Elizabeth, 4, participate in a Wednesday afternoon prayer service at a downtown war memorial. More than 200 people were on hand for the event, staged in response to the current Middle East conflict.

Grandmother among Persian Gulf volunteers

FORT BLISS, Texas (AP) — The Army's not desperate. But Gladys Balogh, a 53-year-old grandmother of seven, is so good at getting her hands on tank parts that the Army asked her to don combat boots and head to the Persian Gulf.

Ms. Balogh, whose four children live in Michigan, is a supply management specialist. She's part of a team of 18 civilians from Fort Bliss being deployed with troops to help maintain their equipment and make sure soldiers have all the supplies they need.

"When we sign up for this, we are told of the necessity to deploy should the troops deploy. I agreed to that and now the time has come for that," she said Wednesday.

An estimated 6,500 soldiers from Fort Bliss are expected to be deployed.

Bradley Fighting Machines, M1-A1 Abrams tanks and other 3rd Armored Calvary vehicles are in the process of being loaded at Beaumont to be shipped to the Middle East. Army officials won't say when troops will depart.

Elements of the 11th Air Defense Artillery also have been dispatched.

Ms. Balogh's specialty is getting tank repair parts to the 3rd Armored Calvary Regiment, one of the Army's elite desert warfare units, as quickly as possible. She apparently knows how to cut the red tape, because the regiment requested that she join them in the Middle East.

Ms. Balogh was born in Detroit and grew up in Oskaloosa, Iowa, about 50 miles southwest of Des Moines.

"She is gung ho, she really is. She is out there to support the soldier in the field if they need parts. And if they need parts expedited, Gladys can get them out there," said Janice Lewis, secretary for Lt. Col. Hugh Dopson, Chief of the Logistics Assistance Office at Fort Bliss.

The office is part of Army Materiel Command, the Army's name for the various civilian divisions that deploy with Army units.

Canadian soldiers build a sand-bag bunker to reinforce their position around the Kahnawake reserve.

Army, Mohawks tear down bridge barricade together

MONTREAL (AP) — Masked Mohawks on Wednesday helped soldiers tear down barricades set up seven weeks ago to block the Mercier Bridge to the island of Montreal, avoiding a bloody confrontation.

But other Mohawks said the dispute remains unsettled and barricades will stay up at nearby Oka.

After a meeting in front of one barricade leading to the community of Chateauguay and the Kahnawake reservation, army officers and unarmed members of the Mohawks' Warriors Society began tearing down the Mercier Bridge barrier with heavy equipment.

They then began dismantling a barricade near Chateauguay on a highway blocked since July 11, when Mohawks at Oka fought a gun battle with provincial police in a dispute over land the community of Oka earmarked as a golf course. The Indians said it was ancestral land.

A police officer was killed. Responsibility in the death has not been fixed.

Other Indians shut down Mercier Bridge in sympathy with the Oka natives, infuriating commuters and local businesses and leading to outbreaks of violence.

Armenia declares state of emergency

MOSCOW (AP) — Armenia's parliament put the republic under emergency rule, banned a nationalist paramilitary group and blocked roads around the capital Wednesday after a string of attacks left an Armenian legislator dead.

The central Soviet government was not involved in the decision. A curfew from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. was imposed throughout the republic, and an Interior Ministry officer said troops with armored vehicles were guarding all roads to Yerevan, the capital, allowing passage only by special permit.

Armenian President Levon Ter-Petrosyan appealed in a radio broadcast for calm. "I assure you that we, the Armenian authorities, are in a position to eliminate the danger posed by this armed organization," Ter-Petrosyan said. "There should be no panicking."

Alexander Arzumanyan, a spokesman for the Armenian National Movement, and Raffi Hovannisian, a Yerevan representative of the Armenian Assembly of America, said in telephone interviews that the attacks began early Wednesday.

According to their description of events, members of the renegade Armenian National Army attacked a gas station and shot and wounded three people.

An Armenian legislator, Viktor Aivazian, was then shot to death as he approached the headquarters of the Armenian National Army to investigate the gas station incident. Also killed in the shooting was Gehavnik Manukyan, an officer of armed Armenian National Movement troops loyal to the republic's government.

Later Wednesday, members of the Armenian National Army attacked the headquarters of the Armenian Nationalist Movement with automatic weapons, according to the official Tass news agency. Tass said the attack lasted about an hour. No casualties were reported.

Also Wednesday, another member of Armenia's parliament, Rafael Ishkhanian, was run over by a vehicle without plates and was in critical condition, Hovannisian said.

It was unclear if Ishkhanian was hit deliberately. But Hovannisian said the parliament stood for a moment of silence for both Aivazian and Ishkhanian before unanimously adopting the state of emergency.

Parliament also banned the Armenian National Army, which was formed in January and claims to protect Armenians from attacks by armed groups from the neighboring republic of Azerbaijan. However, ANA members have attacked police stations and gasoline depots in Armenia to seize the weapons and fuel they need to fight Azerbaijanis.

Armenia, which is mostly Christian, and Azerbaijan, which is mostly Moslem, have been engaged for more than two years in a bloody dispute for jurisdiction over Nagorno-Karabakh, a largely Armenian enclave that lies within Azerbaijan. At least 300 people have been killed in the fighting.

At times, Armenian officials have appeared to tolerate the Armenian National Army, which is believed to have several hundred hard-core fighters and many more sympathizers. But on Wednesday, the republic's leaders formally outlawed the vigilante group.

"The people's patience has run out," Ter-Petrosyan said in his radio address. "They can no longer bear the adventurism of these armed detachments which endanger both the security of our citizens and our statehood."

MISD's future keyed to October bond vote

■ If the $24 million bond package fails, the Lee High School librarian is concerned about how the school library can move "into the 21st century."

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Getting a library book from the top shelf in Lee High School's library is a real balancing act.

Members of the basketball team can accomplish the task with ease. Shorter teen-agers may have to really reach, and handicapped persons are just plain out of luck.

"Handicapped students have to ask for help," said LHS Librarian Sandra Hetrick.

The reason that some library books graze the high ceiling is lack of space, according to Ms. Hetrick.

"We don't even have all our books sequenced," she said. "It would take a crowbar to get a reference book out. We have shifted And shifted books around until we have reached the point where we can shift no more."

Ms. Hetrick said the library, which contains strictly print reference materials, is the smallest of the 5-A schools (rated based on enrollment figures). "Permian High School's library was renovated last year and Midland High School's library was renovated in the early '80s," she said.

The high school librarian said that her biggest concern is the library's need to "move into the 21st century."

"Students attending high school today will be spending the majority of their lives in the 21st century," Ms. Hetrick said. "Unfortunately, this library is behind the times. There aren't any computers in here available for student use."

The librarian said if the school district's bond issue passes, renovations will effectively double the 6,000-square-foot library. Although she has a budget for purchasing new books, she said she is hesitant to order any until she can find a place to put them.

The design of the library, which only has four electrical outlets on support columns, also isn't conducive to installing computers. Updating the architecture to accommodate computers, however, won't necessary mean the budget will allow for them. "The budget will only stretch so far," Ms. Hetrick said.

Nonetheless, the library needs to be updated just to function effectively for the current enrollment.

"Once you get three classes of students in here, it looks like masses of humanity," Ms. Hetrick said. "Teachers can't even circulate."

The librarian, who has been with Midland Independent School District (MISD) for eight years, said she is amazed at the continuous increase in enrollment.

"Last year we had a record-setting enrollment and this year was even bigger," she said. Ms. Hetrick said the seventh-grade enrollment of 1,538 students was startling. "Many of those students will be here next year. Where are we going to put them?"

Ms. Hetrick said she supports the bond issue for various reasons. "I attended the community planning meetings and heard about crowded conditions and offices set up in closets. The whole district is facing a space crunch now," she said. "People want quality education, but it's costly."

Cost of the LHS library renovation, figured in with renovations of science classrooms to bring them up to Texas Education Agency safety guidelines will be $565,000, according to Wilson Heidelberg, executive director of auxiliary services.

Heidelberg offered estimates of other construction costs the bond will fund. They include:

■ The Alternative Program Center — A dropout prevention and recovery center. The new 25,550 sq. ft. center would continue to offer students flexible hours and would include a learning resource center and child-care facility. It would serve about 300 students, according to project architects. Called the "hallmark of expansion" for the school district by Joe Cummins, MISD executive director of planning, evaluation and testing, the project would fit in with the school district's long-range plan of reducing the drop out rate to 10 percent or less by 1995. (Current dropout rate of students entering the ninth grade is 25 percent.) Total estimated construction cost is $1.7 million.

■ Barney Greathouse Elementary School — The 5700 sq. ft. school would have 31½ classroom equivalents. It would serve 750 students in kindergarten through fourth grade, according to architects. Estimated cost is about $3.2 million.

■ George Abell Junior High School — The 30-acre high school would encompass 151,000 sq. ft., accommodate 1,000 students and include a band hall and double gymnasium. Estimated cost of construction is $9.5 million.

■ Eleven elementary additions — The additions include adding 29 classrooms to the schools and multipurpose rooms to each campus. Estimated cost is $6.8 million.

"These are just construction costs alone," Heidelberg said. "These are estimates, not hard figures. The estimates do not include architect's or engineers' fees, furnishings, utilities or street development."

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Step stools come in handy for Lee High School students reaching for library books from the top shelf. If the school district's bond issue passes, the library's space will be doubled.

'Unfortunately, this library is behind the times. There aren't any computers in here available for student use.'

ODESSA — Divorced and on welfare, with seven children to feed, Debra Lendrum searched desperately for a job.

"Too many children — you'll miss work," prospective employers told her. "If you get offered a quarter more an hour, you'll leave."

"My self esteem was at an all-time low," she said. "I had a chip on my shoulder. I was bitter, angry and resentful."

That was 1983.

Today, Ms. Lendrum owns and operates an Odessa medical supply company which employees 15 people.

"I've always wanted to be in medicine," she said. "I thought that because I had made so many bad decisions in my life, that I'd made my bed and I'd have to lie in it. I'm here to tell you that is a falsehood."

Ms. Lendrum was among six people honored Wednesday by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission for achievements accomplished through the federal Job Training Partnership Act.

With JTPA financial aid, Ms. Lendrum entered the Howard Junior College nursing program in Big Spring and earned her registered nurse's license. After her graduation in 1987, she went to work as an obstetric nurse. Last March, she went into business with her new husband.

Ms. Lendrum, 35, credited JTPA for her transformation from an unemployed food stamp recipient

UTPB expansion bill should be on 1991 Legislative agenda

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The chairman of the House Higher Education Committee expects a bill expanding classes at University of Texas of the Permian Basin to re-emerge in the coming legislative session, but she didn't offer much hope for approval.

"We also have some indication that there are some other institutions that are kind of restless out there," said Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin.

However, Delco said that before she could support the expansion of two-years schools to four-year status, the upper-level institutions should try working more closely with local community colleges.

Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa and the higher education committee's chairman for budget and oversight, said he is virtually certain to refile the UTPB legislation should he be re-elected in November.

Watkins is opposed by Republican A.G. "Lonnie" Sims of Odessa.

Expanding UTPB classes to freshmen and sophomores "is needed and necessary," said Watkins. "I just hope we have a governor who will sign it," he said.

Gov. Bill Clements, who is not running for re-election, said he only would approve legislation to expand the university if leaders from Midland and Odessa work out their differences on the matter.

Watkins said he had not contacted either the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, State Treasurer Ann Richards, or Midland oilman and rancher Clayton Williams, the Republican nominee, on the issue.

Of two-year, upper-level universities in general, "There is a valid concern about what is going to happen to these institutions that now look like an anomaly," said Delco. The Austin Democrat is heading an interim sub-committee that held hearings on the issue Wednesday.

"We're saying, 'If they're valuable, let's look at ways we can reinforce them, and if they're no longer serving a useful purpose ... we should consider another use for them, or just abolish them,' " she said.

She added, "I've never known us to abolish anything in Texas, but it ought to be at least out there on the table."

With a tight budget expected in the next legislative session, Delco said emphasis in her committee is likely to center on ways to "maximize use of facilities we already have."

Keep Midland Beautiful gains honor for April 1990 clean-up

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midland recently placed second in a national beauty contest — thanks to the volunteer spirit of the city's residents.

And some of those volunteers got together Wednesday to acknowledge the Midland chapter of Keep America Beautiful taking a second place award for clean-up efforts during April — Keep America Beautiful Month.

Midland competed with 458 Keep America Beautiful Systems throughout the nation. Four communities were awarded first place awards and four, second places.

About 10 to 15 people gathered at Volunteer Park to celebrate the honor bestowed upon Midland.

"This is our park, so we got together to pat each other on the back," said Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director for Keep Midland Beautiful.

But only a few people showed up who contributed their time in keeping Midland beautiful.

Ms. Hotchkiss said she estimates more than 20,000 residents pitched in to clean up the city in April.

For Joel Ford, chairman of the board for Keep Midland Beautiful, coming in second says something about Midlanders.

"It indicates that volunteerism is alive and well in Midland," Ford said.

And Midlanders' lending hands helped win second place.

Criteria for the award included community support, and use of creative and innovative ideas, Hotchkiss said.

Creative thinking in Midland consisted of "Low Pollute Commute," which recognized locals who walked and biked to work; and using trained pack llamas to carry bags of trash during the "Glad Bagathon."

Hotchkiss and Ford said they anticipate going to Keep America Beautiful's annual meeting in Washington, D.C., on Dec. 7 for presentation of the awards.

Stanton restoration project represents real change

STANTON — Stanton is pretty big on history, even though a lot of "history" has been moved out, torn down, shipped out, and left to rot.

But not all.

Todd

The Old Convent, a remnant of Our Lady of Mercy Academy and a monastery before that, is, through the grace of patience and purpose, being restored.

That, along with the railroad, ranching and farming, sort of represents Stanton's beginnings in the early 1880s as a railroad station called Grelton and later as the township called Marienfeld — Field of Mary. That soon changed, history tells, about 1890 after Catholics were diluted by the influx of Protestants and were discouraged by droughts. The settlement along the old Texas & Pacific Railway Company lines was renamed Stanton after one or the other: Abe Lincoln's Secretary of War Edwin Stanton or after a schoolteacher by that surname.

History sometimes varies and conflicts.

For years now, there has been a movement afoot to fix up the Old Convent and turn it into somewhat of a museum and a gathering place for social affairs.

"Besides the Millhollon (ranch) house," laments restorer James McGilvray, who also happens to be the Martin County attorney, "there are very few historic structures left in town."

Stanton was a victim of progress.

During the infamous urban renewal project of the 1960s, says McGilvray, many of the old historic homes, particularly on the once affluent south side, were torn down. Many were weathered but still bore marks of their earlier resplendence.

They were replaced by cheaper houses and trailer courts. Cotton gins were moved out of town. The north side became the old south side.

"The trend in this town was to tear down and build new and not restore," McGilvray says. "There's not much left that is capable of being restored."

But experience has shown him that edifices in the weathered shape of the Old Convent is "still in restorable condition."

The Old Martin County Jaycees put a $10,000 roof on the building to help preserve it. Today, the Old Convent has been turned over to an association of Martin County historians who, like McGilvray, had rather restore than raze.

"I just don't agree with the tear-down-and-build philosophy," says McGilvray who, joined by his wife Jeane, bought and remodeled Stanton's last picture show, the Texas Theatre. They, joined by a few hired hands, converted the 6,000-square-foot movie house into a big house replete with swimming pool with a splash within where the silver screen once reflected fantasy and drama.

It's hardly a "true" restoration, since, for example, the old cry room is now a water closet. The old, steamy projectors are still upstairs, and there's no need to climb upstairs to the balcony to smooch.

McGilvray and his comrades on the convent restoration project are demonstrating the worth in preserving the old.

Almost 20 years ago, folks here voted to tear down the quaint old red sandstone courthouse but retained the Old Jail, which is restored thanks to the Mabee Foundation, and built a "modern" single-story courthouse with function but without character.

"We ought to use what we already have and work from there rather than start over in many instances," McGilvray says. "But with creative thinking, people usually find some use for old things."

SIX: Board votes on 3 grant plans to a registered nurse and business owner.

(From 1B)

"JTPA changes lives," she told planning commission members at a Wednesday luncheon at the Odessa Hilton. "It is not a government handout — it is a hand up."

Willie Taylor, PBRPC director for employment and training, said JTPA has spent about $30 million and served some 12,000 people in the Permian Basin since its inception here in 1984.

About 80 percent of this year's participants found employment in the community after completing their JTPA training, Taylor said. That's up from 59.4 percent in 1984.

Carole Burrow, Private Industry Council coordinator for the PBRPC, said outstanding JTPA alumni nationwide are being honored this week.

Other Permian Basin honorees were:

■ Bill Kersh of Midland. Kersh, 42, received on-the-job management training through JTPA at a Midland computer firm after losing his controller's job at an oil and gas company in 1989. After nine months on the job, Kersh bought the company.

"When I'm out of a job, I'm just as broke as anyone else," Kersh said. "This is a program that works not just for minorities and low-income people, it works for people in other stratas of society that might not be able to get help otherwise."

■ Kay Kennemur, 34, of Big Spring, studied secretarial science at Howard College through JTPA and now works as a secretary in the Howard County Judge's Office.

■ Ginger Jones, 27, of Lamesa, studied nursing on a JTPA grant at the Howard College Lamesa campus. She now works as a licensed vocational nurse (LVN) at Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa.

■ Kelly Sedillo, 29, of Midland, is an LVN at Midland Memorial Hospital. She earned her nursing license at the Fort Stockton branch of Midland College on a JTPA grant.

■ Shirley Bost, 42, of Odessa, studied computer programming at Odessa College on a JTPA grant. She now works as a data processor in Midland.

In other action Wednesday, the PBRPC Board of Directors voted to give "favorable comment" to three federal grant requests by Permian Basin organizations.

Among those was the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, which is seeking continuation of an Economic Development Administration grant.

If awarded, the $100,000 grant will allow the addition of a regional economist to the center payroll, CEED Administrative Associate Danette Toone said.

This is the third renewal of the seven-year grant, Ms. Toone said.

"It's a formality," Ms. Toone said of the grant application process. "But things could come up that you wouldn't get it.

"It pays three full-time staff people, and without the staff we wouldn't function as efficiently and effectively as we do. It's extremely important."

Jerry Tschauner, PBRPC director of planning, emphasized that the board does not have the power to approve or reject grant applications — only to make recommendations to the funding agencies involved.

"The funding agency is the only one that can approve or disapprove," he said.

Also given favorable recommendations Wednesday were grant requests from Greater Opportunities of the Permian Basin Inc., which operates the Head Start prekindergarten education programs in Odessa and Big Spring.

The organization is seeking $717,678 from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to fund the programs, which are expected to serve 215 children in Big Spring and 115 in Ector County next year.

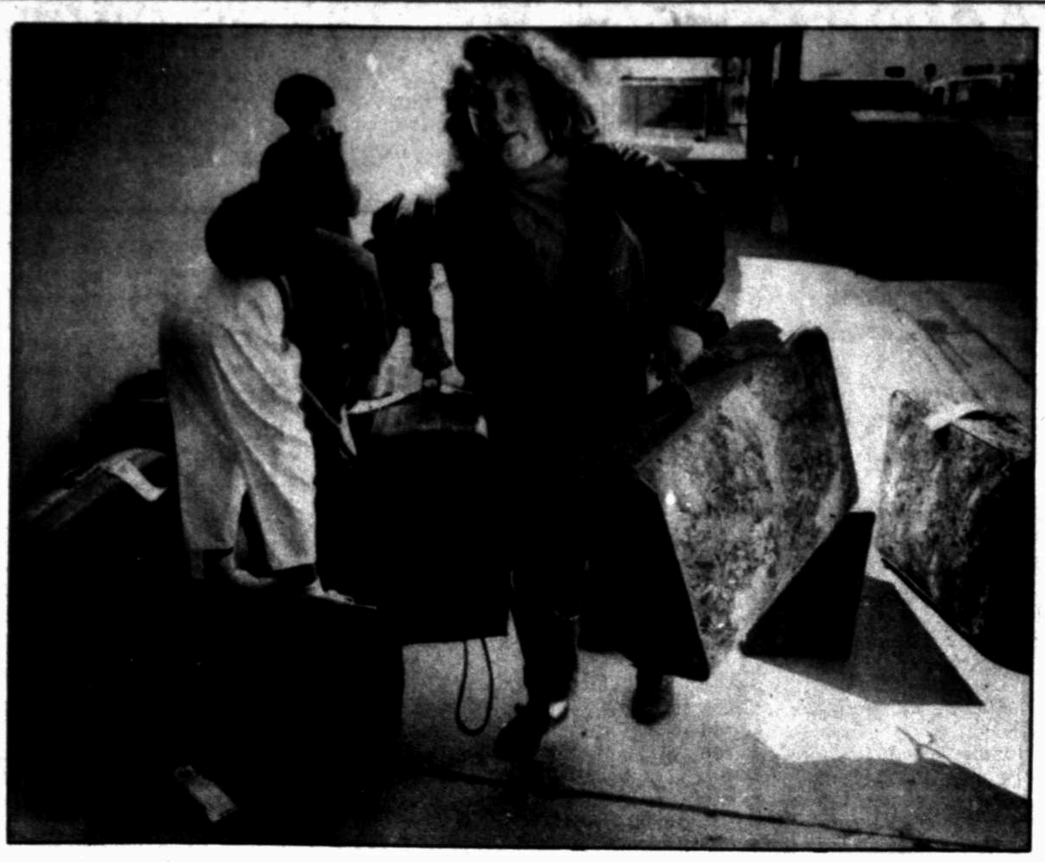

The board gave approval to a similar request from West Texas Opportunities Inc., which operates the Head Start programs in Lamesa, McCamey and Stanton.

West Texas Opportunities is seeking $309,153 in federal money to expand its Head Start programs by 20 pupils in 1991. Current enrollment in the three communities is 120. An estimated 90 percent of these pupils are below the poverty level; 95 percent are minorities.

Finally, the board approved a resolution authorizing application to the Texas Department of Health for a $126,000 regional solid waste planning grant.

Censorship still on rise across nation, watchdog group says

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Attempts by conservative and fundamentalist religious groups to censor public school texts increased dramatically during the 1989-90 school year, a civil liberties group said Wednesday.

Texas schools were targeted at least a dozen times, it added.

Reported incidents of censorship attempts jumped from 172 during the 1988-89 school year to 244 last year, according to People for the American Way, a Washington-based group that has published an annual censorship report since 1982.

"The dramatic increase over last year's 172 incidents is no surprise," said Arthur J. Kropp, the group's president, in releasing the study at a news conference here. "In fact, it fits rather predictably with what we've seeing in the rest of society in the last few years. We are seeing an explosion of censorship, an explosion sparked by the match of far right and religious right intolerance."

Kropp said about 140 incidents last year involved attempts to remove textbooks or teaching materials containing "objectionable language." Other incidents involved religious issues or freedom of the school press, he said.

Donna Fowler, issues director of People for the American Way, said that "instead of the 'three R's,' would-be censors seem preoccupied with the 'three S's: sex, Satanism and swear words."

Among the books targeted for removal from public school libraries or classrooms last year were "The Catcher in the Rye," by J.D. Salinger, "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," by Mark Twain, "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," by Maya Angelou, as well as the short stories of Edgar Allan Poe.

The group said the most besieged of all school books is "Impressions," an anthology of stories of essays for student for kindergarten through the sixth grade.

The Texas incidents included:

■ In Leander, the removal from all schools of "In the Rabbit Garden," a book by Leo Lionni, alleged to undermine family values and authority generally. Another book, "Blubber" by Judy Blume, alleged to contain offensive language and references to children behaving cruelly, was removed from elementary school libraries but retained in junior high libraries.

■ In Odessa, objections to four Halloween books for allegedly containing occult references and passages that "glorified witches." After a campaign by 400 parents to remove the books, the school board, on recommendation of the district superintendent, unanimously denied the request.

■ In several Texas communities — including Odessa, Wichita Falls, Pasadena and Baytown — an official school ban on wearing jewelry, clothing or symbols alleged to be related to Satanism. The ban, in these communities, involved triangles or the peace symbol or the color black or the encircled Star of David.

HONOR: 20,000 pitched in to help

(From 1B)

Ford said he hopes the honor will spread the word on keeping the community clean.

"Our main thrust right now is waste reduction (recycling) and education. ... If you don't teach people to be aware, nothing will get done," Ford said, adding that education can eliminate the need for scheduled clean-ups.

In continued efforts, Keep Midland Beautiful hopes to have a litter constable, who will police illegal dump sites in the area, by the beginning of November, Hotchkiss said.

In addition, the organization hopes to step up participation in recycling business paper and aluminum from local businesses, she added.

Keep Midland Beautiful was formed in February of 1983.

Sul Ross hosts rodeo

Staff Report

ALPINE — West Texas ranch hands will test their professional skills at the Sul Ross State University Ranch Rodeo Saturday in the University Arena at the Turner Range Animal Science Center.

Nine West Texas ranches have signed up 44 of their ranch hands to see which ranch is the best in team roping, bronc riding, pasture steer roping, team penning, calf branding, trailer loading, wild cow milking, steer mugging, goat roping and chariot racing.

Competition begins at 10 a.m., with the pasture steer roping in the Sul Ross pasture, and the arena events will begin at 2 p.m.

To test the culinary skills of the range cooks, there will be a ranch cooking contest, and, after the judging, the public will be able to purchase lunch from the results of the competition.

Ranches represented in the rodeo include the Salmon, Glover Parker, Adams, Mischer, Rancho No Tengo, Del Norte, C.T. Moore, Asleep at the Wheel and Barrel Springs ranches.

The rodeo is sponsored by the Sul Ross Rodeo Club and the SRSU Rodeo Exes Association. General admission for the pasture roping is $1.50. Admission to events in the arena is $3 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Lunch at the chuckwagon will be $5 for adults and $2 for children under 12.

A dance scheduled for the Crystal Bar costs $5 per person. All proceeds go to support the Sul Ross rodeo program.

Christian group to perform

Staff Report

Acappella performs at 7:30 p.m. today at Midland Center, corner of Main Street and Wall Avenue.

The newest member of Acappella is Duane Adams of Odessa. He joined the group in January of 1989. Baritone Wayburn Dean is from Hobbs, N.M., and tenor Gary Moyer is from Lubbock. Lead singer George Pendergrass is from New York City.

The concert will be opened by Sonrise, a popular local group from Odessa. Acapella will present a full concert. Advance tickets are on sale at the Scripture Shop, Odessa, and at the Lighthouse, Midland. Tickets are $5.

Albums to their credit include "Conquerors," "Better Than Life" and "Sweet Fellowship."

The Midland performance marks the group's third annual benefit concert for Victory Tree Orphanage, operated by Christians in Bangkok, Thailand.

GOP candidates' rally Saturday

Staff Report

Republican Sen. Phil Gramm, gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams and the Victory 90 Committee of Midland and Odessa are hosting an old-fashioned patriotic rally, 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Hangar E, near Rich Air North, Midland International Airport.

In addition to Gramm and Williams, Rob Mosbacher, candidate for lieutenant governor; Buster Brown, candidate for attorney general; Kay Bailey Hutchison, candidate for state treasurer; and several other Republican candidates are expected to attend.

The public is invited to attend the rally.

UTPB: Cooperation with MC urged

(From 1B)

The committee will be looking for ways for institutions to "cooperate and maximize the availability of services for students and institutions," she said.

She referred to an idea presented by Hans Mark, chancellor of the University of Texas System, in which some upper-level institutions issue catalogs published jointly with nearby junior colleges.

"Even though Midland and Odessa represent a different kind of situation, I think the concept of better ... joint-usage ... might be proposed and even tried before entertaining the final recommendation" of UTPB expansion, she said.

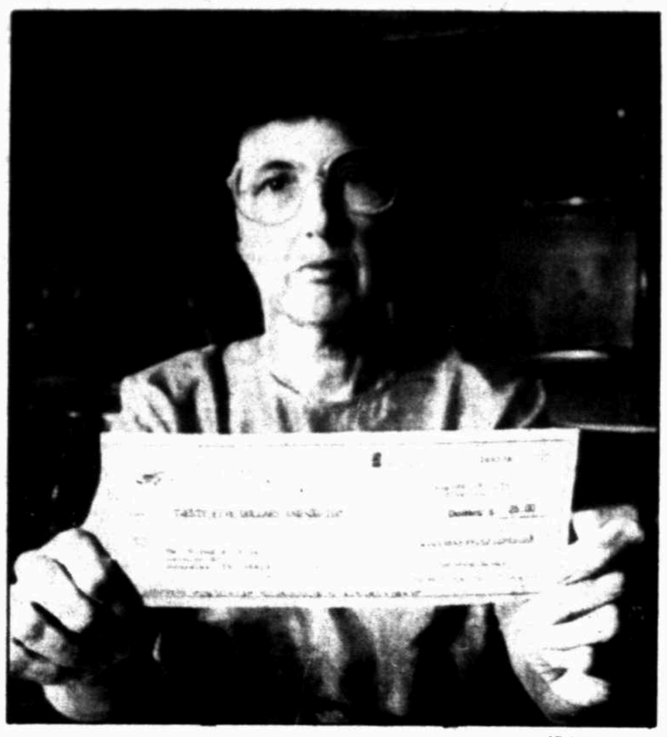

What Cityline provides

With Cityline, the Midland Reporter-Telegram's free telephone-based news, information and entertainment service, callers have access to dozens of categories of prerecorded data — everything from horoscopes and soap opera updates to local news and sports headlines and stock quotes — 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Once on line with the free system at 560-2400, touch-tone telephone callers will be presented step-by-step menus of informational choices. On-line assistance is available by firmly pressing 6955.

Other four-digit codes access other specific categories. For example, in order to find out who's had the biggest impact on the world this week, call 560-2400. After Cityline's welcoming message, enter 6725 to hear about the person of the week.

Gonzales resident Norma Fink is filing a complaint with the attorney general's office claiming a new Republican Party fund-raising effort is a scam.

GOP's 'check enclosed' fund-raiser irks woman

AUSTIN (AP) — The Republican Party gave Norma Fink $25 — but with a hitch.

It was a GOP fund-raising tactic.

And Ms. Fink, a Democrat, doesn't like it.

By endorsing and depositing the check, she and others are authorizing Republican fund-raisers to draft $12.50 a month from their bank accounts. The $25 check is a two-month trial period incentive.

The checks have been mailed to almost 750,000 people across the country in an envelope marked "Check Enclosed" and "Important Mail."

The three-page letter says: "The testing of this new funding concept is being conducted at ABSOLUTELY NO COST TO YOU. We'd simply like you to try (it) for two months at our expense."

When the recipient endorses the check, he also is signing an authorization agreement, printed on the back of the check, that allows his bank to debit his account by $12.50 a month and transfer the money to the Republican Presidential Task Force.

Ms. Fink, of Gonzales, complained to the state attorney general. But officials in that office said Wednesday there's nothing they can do.

"The head of our consumer protection division said that since this is not part of commerce in any fashion, the Deceptive Trade Practices Act does not apply," said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Acting police chief takes over for Vines

DALLAS (AP) — Perjury charges were filed Wednesday against suspended Police Chief Mack Vines, on leave because of an investigation into his testimony to a special panel looking into a police shooting.

"Today, as a result of (the) investigation, seven perjury cases have been filed and referred to a Dallas County Grand Jury against" Vines, District Attorney John Vance said.

Vance said the charges would be presented to the grand jury on Sept. 10. A third-degree felony carries a maximum 10-year prison term and fines of up to $10,000.

City Manager Jan Hart, said Vines, 51, would remain on indefinite suspension and named a new acting chief.

Vines' attorney, Kim Wade, is "not speaking with the media," a woman who answered the phone at Wade's office said Wednesday. Vines in the past has said he did nothing wrong and has refused to resign.

Some city council members said the charges alone are enough to cost Vines permanently the job he has held since July 1988.

"I think it would be nearly impossible for Chief Vines to lead this police department with the confidence of the city into the future. Humpty Dumpty is broken and I don't think there's any reasonable way of putting that all together again," Councilman Jerry Bartos said.

The developments stem from the fatal shooting last year of an unarmed Mexican national by officer Patrick LeMaire. Vines fired LeMaire 17 days after the killing.

LeMaire was reinstated last month by an administrative law judge who said Vines failed to justify the firing. During the administrative hearing, an internal affairs detective testified that his initial report on the shooting was altered.

That led Ms. Hart to appoint a three-member panel to look into the internal affairs officer's allegations, and the speed with which LeMaire was fired.

Ms. Hart suspended Vines and Assistant Chief Greg Holliday with pay on Aug. 3 after Holliday told her Vines called him at home the night before and tried to persuade him to downplay his testimony about the speed of Vines' firing of LeMaire.

Ms. Hart asked Vance to investigate the charges.

Vance said Holliday was helpful in the investigation, and Ms. Hart said, "there is no indication that Chief Holliday was not truthful to the panel" and lifted his suspension Wednesday and said he would return to work immediately.

Ms. Hart named 49-year-old Sam Gonzales, a 26-year veteran officer with the city, as acting police chief.

Crude slides

NEW YORK (AP) — Wholesale prices of crude oil, heating oil and unleaded gasoline dropped sharply Wednesday on news of higher OPEC output and trader speculation that peace finally seemed possible in the Persian Gulf.

Light sweet crude fell $1.96 to $25.92 per barrel for October contracts on the New York Mercantile Exchange, a leading market for petroleum.

Contracts for crude-oil delivery in later months also fell following word that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had approved a plan allowing Saudi Arabia, Venezuela and other producers to boost output.

Natural gas was up from $1.500 to $1.505 per 1,000 cubic feet on October contracts. Other natural gas futures months were down.

A Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. trader, Ed Kevelson, said investors were responding partly to reports that the Iraqi leader, Saddam Hussein, might take a softer stance on his claims to Kuwait during a meeting Thursday with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Dollar higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar moved mostly higher in U.S. trading Wednesday after a mixed performance overseas as currency dealers began adjusting their holdings ahead of the long holiday weekend in the United States.

Gold prices gained modestly in domestic dealings. On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for current delivery settled at $385.30 a troy ounce, up 30 cents from Tuesday.

In New York the dollar closed at 143.55 yen, down from 143.75 yen on Tuesday. The British pound was quoted at $1.9475 late in London, up from $1.9470 Tuesday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.55925 German marks, 1.28875 Swiss francs, 5.2300 French francs, 1,155.00 Italian lire and 1.13865 Canadian dollars.

In London, gold was quoted at a late price of $385.25 a troy ounce, up from late Tuesday's bid of $383.

On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.826 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's settlement of $4.840.

NYMEX wants to eliminate WTI label

■ NYMEX wants to substitute the term "light sweet" for WTI, citing confusion among buyers.

By Dirk Beveridge

NEW YORK (AP) — When they ask if you want "light sweet" in the oil trading business, they're not talking about a coffee break.

Light sweet is a generic term that can be used for a variety of crude oils traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange, a leading petroleum market, although traders often erroneously refer to the mix as West Texas Intermediate or WTI, the benchmark U.S. crude.

The Mercantile Exchange has sought to change this entrenched habit, partly by insisting that traders use "light sweet" instead of WTI. But old ways die hard.

"It's WTI," said John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York. "WTI is the oil traded on the Merc. Practically speaking, it is WTI."

Advised of the Merc's position on what the oil should be called, Lichtblau said any label used by the exchange is "sort of irrelevant," because traders in that market are only speculating on which direction oil prices will go.

Like traders in other futures markets, oil traders rarely take delivery of the actual oil, but gamble on its price by buying and selling contracts for delivery in upcoming months.

These oil-futures contracts are commonly called "paper" barrels. Real oil, on the other hand, comes in what the industry calls "wet" barrels.

Regardless of what they're called, Merc traders have been buying and selling barrels of oil since 1983, when the exchange first offered a market in crude oil futures.

Initially, the Merc listed 13 grades that it classified as light sweet crude. The menu is now down to seven domestics and three foreign oils.

Merc officials say the the most commonly traded light sweet crude was WTI. Eventually, the contract for other crudes also became known as WTI.

Confusion over what is sold has led to problems, Merc officials say. Some buyers who thought they were getting WTI have discovered they were getting a different grade.

The errors have become a bigger headache for the Merc officials recently, as the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait sent oil prices into wild gyrations that thrust the Merc into a larger-than-usual public spotlight.

In an effort to clear up any misunderstanding, the Merc sent members a memo this week asking that they refer to light sweet crude instead of WTI.

WTI has for years been used as a reference point for measuring other crudes, partly because it once was the most important grade of crude in the lower 48 states, extracted from the Permian Basin in West Texas. But the industry's shifting exploration to other areas has made other grades just as prominent.

"Today, Alaskan North Slope crude is the most important," said Bernard Picchi, a Salomon Brothers Inc. managing director who follows domestic oils. "A lot of people think WTI is losing whatever relevance it once had in the industry, because we're just running out of the stuff."

The foreign oils that can be included in a Merc contract are Brent Blend, Bonny Light and Oseberg. The domestic crudes, other than WTI, are Mid Continent Sweet, Low Sweet Mix (Scurry Snyder), New Mexican Sweet, North Texas Sweet, Oklahoma Sweet and South Texas Sweet.

OPEC raises production to ease supply shortfall

■ OPEC members agreed to temporarily increase production, but say that won't completely erase the shortfall caused by the embargo against Iraq and Kuwait.

By Sally Jacobsen

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC ministers Wednesday endorsed higher crude production to make up most — but not all — of the shortfall caused by the Persian Gulf crisis.

The accord, worked out during four days of discussions, temporarily suspends the cartel's quota system to permit higher output by nations with spare capacity.

An agreement worked out last month by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries had set production at 22.5 million barrels per day. But an embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil imposed after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait four weeks ago has reduced supply by about 4 million barrels.

The shortfall has led to increased prices for crude oil on world markets as well as hefty hikes for gasoline and heating oil sold on the retail level.

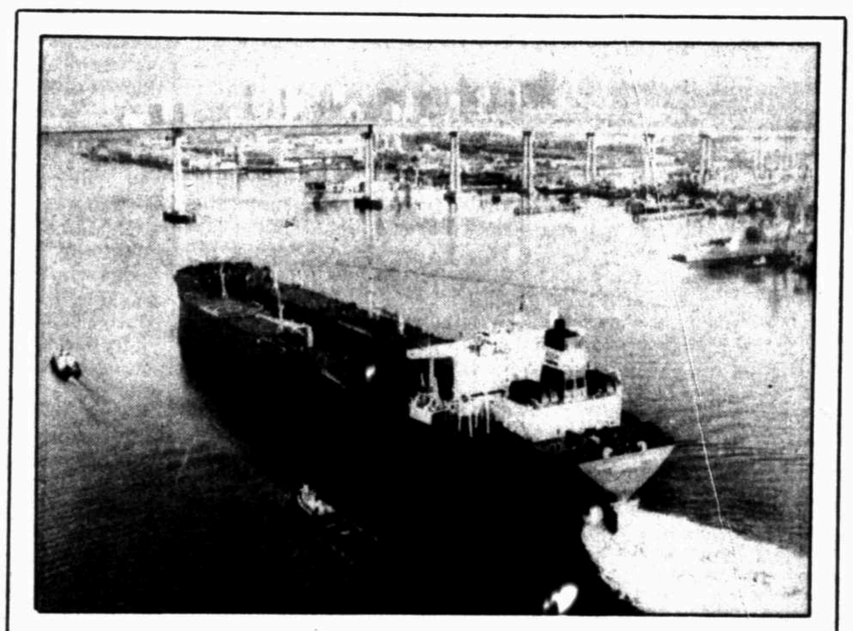

Analysts predicted the surge in output of about 3 million barrels of crude by heavyweight Saudi Arabia and other producing nations could help hold down prices in the next few weeks.

But they cautioned prices could shoot even higher with a further escalation of hostilities in the Gulf and stronger demand for oil as winter approaches.

"The market may pull back some, but the trend continues to remain on the up side as long as the military option in the Gulf remains a viable one," said Michael Rothman, an energy specialist at Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York.

Peter Bogin, associate director for oil markets at Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Paris, said gasoline prices at the pump should hold steady as long as crude prices do.

July indicators show stalled economy

■ Analysts say the government's leading economic gauges, coupled with falling home sales, show an economy that was stalling before the Middle East crisis.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge stalled in July, indicating to analysts that the nation might have been limping toward recession even before the Middle East crisis.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators was unchanged after posting a barely perceptible 0.1 percent gain in June.

The index is designed to forecast economic conditions six months to nine months in the future.

"Essentially, it's another indication of a slumping economy," said David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a new York securities company. "In all likelihood, it'll be down sharply next month," reflecting the oil price shock and uncertainty caused by the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Gordon Richards, an economist with the National Association of Manufacturers, said that while the July figures don't point to a recession, "the sharp rise in world oil prices has made a downturn almost inevitable."

Three successive declines in the index have often — but not always — signaled a recession in the past. However, some economists believe the economy already is in a recession.

In a second report illustrating the weakness in the economy, the department said new home sales in July posted their fifth decline in seven months, down 2.3 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 548,000 units.

New home sales so far this year are 12.4 percent below those of the first seven months of 1989.

Only three of the 11 indicators in the leading index made positive contributions: an increase in orders for new plants and equipment, an increase in the price of raw materials and an index measuring consumer confidence.

Analysts said the consumer confidence component, which is compiled by the University of Michigan, would plummet in the August index.

"Initial reports ... indicate that the consumer's first reaction to the Iraqi invasion was near panic," said economist Mark M. Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

Consumer spending represents two-thirds of the nation's economic activity and economists worry that a major cutback could halt economic growth altogether and push the nation into recession.

Robert G. Dederick, chief economist for the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, noted that plant and equipment orders, one of the positive indicators, usually are a barometer of business investment plans.

"The question now is, how much of that will be held down now by not knowing what's going to happen and being unwilling to make decisions?" he asked.

Economist Richards suggested that "because capital is energy-intensive, the oil price shock points to some scaling back of investment spending."

Seeking a financial advisor, begin at home

By Scott Burns

Burns

Q. I am 29 years old and recently married. My wife and I want to start planning for the future. I have so many questions; from financing a baby to starting a retirement account. Where can I find a financial adviser that can answer my questions, preferably one that is not selling something? — M.T., Carrollton, Texas.

A. Don't look for AN advisor. Seek many and try to learn enough that you feel confidence in your own conclusions. Anything else is an illusion. Start by reading weekly magazines such as Business Week and Forbes or the stories on the front page of the Wall Street Journal. Follow by taking the time to take some evening courses in investment and financial planning — not the ones for specialists, the ones whose purpose is to give you the vocabulary and a general framework for understanding.

Q. I am writing about a recent column about net worth. What is included in net worth? I know the simple and conventional answer that it is "the true value of all assets after the true value of all debts and obligations is subtracted." But that does not take care of all situations.

Many of my friends worked for private corporations and when they retired they had their choice of pension or a lump sum distribution. If they chose a lump sum distribution, then that amount would be added to their "net worth." What if they took the other option?

I had no choice at retirement: my pension, at age 64, was $30,000 for as long as I lived and the same amount for as long as my wife, only 56, should live. Her expectancy at the time was 30 years and it would have required a very significant sum at interest rates of 8 to 9 percent to guarantee us this income. Should such incomes be considered a part of "net worth"? — R.J., Denton, Texas.

A. "Pension wealth," as it is referred to, is discussed but not quantified in wealth surveys that have been done to date. But your question is very appropriate. A family with $200,000 in financial assets and no pension has more flexibility than a family with a $30,000 lifetime pension... but it does not have a greater net worth.

The problem is estimating pension wealth. When you are retired it is a matter between an actuary and an interest rate table. Before you are retired it is only a guess. Some pension wealth never materializes.

In terms of true human well-being, a wealth distribution study that included pension wealth — both private and Social Security — would show a far broader distribution of wealth.

Q. A sentence in a recent column puzzles me. "In a period of purported austerity and discussions of tragic "cuts" in federal spending, expenditures increased by an average of $67 billion a year."

If budget cuts were made as claimed, I would think the only increase would be the added interest charges for the deficit increase of the previous year. That would be maybe $5-7 billion. The only other alternative to reach the $67 billion increases would be to add some $200 billion to last year's expenses and then start talking budget cuts from this amount... and I would consider this trick dishonest. Please comment. — P.K., Grand Prairie, Texas.

A. Since David Stockman, government budgeting has been done on what is called a "current services" basis. In preparing the budget for next year, the different agencies take their expenditures in the previous year and calculate what it will take to provide the same level of

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has filed an application with the Texas Public Utility Commission to introduce new optional services – Call Control Options. The initial service areas will be Laredo, McAllen and Austin. Expansion into other service areas will be based on availability. Customers in other areas will be notified when these services become available.

Call Control Options include six new services – Call Blocker, Call Cue, Call Return, Priority Call, Call Trace and Selective Call Forwarding. The features will be available to single-line residence and business customers.

Call Blocker – enables the customer to block incoming calls from a maximum of three specified telephone numbers and/or to block the last incoming call.

Call Cue – enables the customer to automatically redial the last outgoing telephone number dialed. If the recalled number is busy, equipment will monitor the line for a maximum of 30 minutes and will let the customer know when the call can go through.

Call Return – enables the customer to automatically redial the telephone number of the most recent incoming call. If the number is busy, Call Return will continue to dial the number for up to 30 minutes, or until it completes the call.

Priority Call – provides the customer with a distinctive alerting signal, ring or Call Waiting Tone (if the customer has subscribed to Call Waiting), when the customer is called from a maximum of three preselected telephone numbers.*

Call Trace – enables the customer to initiate a trace of the last incoming call received. The number, date and time will be recorded by Southwestern Bell Telephone so that the call's origin can be identified.

Selective Call Forwarding – enables the customer to forward incoming calls from specified telephone numbers (maximum of three) to another telephone number.

Proposed Rates (monthly)

	Residence		Business
	Individual	Packaged	Individual	Packaged
Call Blocker	$3.00	3.00	$3.00	2.00
Call Return	3.00	3.00	4.00	3.50
Priority Call	2.50	1.00	3.00	2.00
Call Cue	2.00	2.00	4.00	3.50
Selective Call Forwarding	2.00	1.00	2.65	1.00
Call Trace	1.00	1.00	1.00	1.00

Installation charges for residence customers will be $2.70 per feature,with a maximum installation charge of $5.40 per request per line. Installation charges for business customers will be $5.40 per feature, with a maximum installation charge of $10.75 per request per line.

The proposed date for Call Control Options to be offered is October 7, 1990. These services, however, will not immediately be available to all customers in all areas of the state. Customers in other areas will be notified when these services become available.

Call Control Options are projected to generate first-year annual revenues of $1,900,000.

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the commission by September 27, 1990. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Southwestern Bell Telephone

*Some telephone equipment may not be compatible with Priority Call Service.
In addition to the $1.00 monthly rate, Call Trace will cost $8.00 per use.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticket symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticket guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticket symbol, press the (*) star key and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticket symbol. You now have 2 options;
- * You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- * You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticket code.
- * You may enter up to 10 ticket symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

OPEC: Hopes to stabilize prices

(From 4B)

Since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2, the average price of a gallon of unleaded regular gasoline has increased by nearly 20 cents at the pumps.

Sheik Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, the finance minister of Kuwait's government-in-exile, pressed for the agreement by the 13-nation OPEC.

"We simply cannot accept that countries that came to our help in the Gulf should suffer (from high prices)," said the official, who was his government's oil minister until early July.

Iran opposed the deal, arguing that Western nations should release oil from their inventories before asking OPEC for more. "If they do something, after that we can do something," said Iran's oil minister, Gholamreza Aqazadeh.

BURNS: Figuring net worth

service. They also add-in amounts for new services that were part of earlier legislation.

The immediate result is that the starting figure for any budget year is always higher than the actual dollar figure for the preceding year. If there is a debate about that figure and it is reduced, the budget is said to have been "cut."

The best example of this is Medicare. It has been "cut" every year yet it continues to be one of the fastest growing costs.

In a sense, these "cuts" are real. If the dollars available remain the same but the dollars buy less services, less will be delivered to the consuming public. Unfortunately, the same mechanism is what has allowed federal spending to grow nearly twice as fast as the average worker's wages over the last 10 years.

It could be argued that "nominal" dollars are not a very useful measure when inflation is changing purchasing power by 4, 5, or 6 percent a year. Perhaps Congress should have a "Current Payroll Budget" — one based on what would be spent if government spending had to rise in step with the wages of the average worker.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Buyers speculate, not invest in silver, gold

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have 420 ounces of silver, bought in the days it sold for $8 an ounce. My brother says, "Sell it." Would you? And where do I go to sell it? The gold and silver dealer where I made the purchase no longer is in business.

Doyle

A. I would never have to make the decision to sell or hold silver for the simple reason I have never bought silver, gold and other high-priced collectibles. And, unless I take leave of my senses, I never will. The precious metals and gems in the Doyle household have useful purposes, such as tableware and jewelry.

Buying silver, gold, diamonds and such in hopes of profiting is a sucker's game. Those are not investments. They are speculations, in which individuals almost always lose.

You'll have to make up your own mind about unloading the silver. But I'll give you a nudge in that direction because your hoard is nonproductive. It provides neither interest nor dividends. After you sell, put the money someplace where it produces income.

Assuming your silver is in bar, ingot and/or wafer form, you can sell through a precious metal dealer similar to the one from which you made the purchase. Check out a number of such dealers, because prices can vary a bit from one dealer to another. And be prepared to pay for an assay to determine the purity of your silver.

You are going to realize a loss when you sell, but you have had an unrealized loss ever since you bought. Count yourself lucky you didn't buy an even loftier price. Silver traded as high as $50 an ounce in 1980, when the Hunt brothers allegedly tried to corner the market.

Q. How does an individual invest in silver coins? Does one need a certain number of coins? What determines their value?

A. For the sake of accuracy, let's change the word "invest" to "speculate" and take it from there. Let's also skip rare coins — best left to professionals. That collectors' world is a place where amateurs should seldom tread.

That leaves two basic choices: the silver American Eagle and bags of old silver U.S. coins.

The silver Eagle is a one-ounce silver coin produced at the U.S. Mint in San Francisco. Technically, it is a $1 coin, but it sells at a premium over the price of the ounce of silver it contains. It's the only U.S. silver coin currently being minted.

You can buy silver Eagles in quantities from one to as many as you can afford. However, shop carefully. Different dealers charge different prices. And don't fall for those television commercials peddling silver Eagles at way above going market prices.

Bags containing old silver coins with a total $1,000 face vale and weighting approximately 720 troy ounces can be bought and sold through coin dealers. That type of bag trades at a hefty premium over the market value of the silver it contains.

If you have money you are certain you will never need, go ahead and speculate in silver. There's nothing wrong with speculation for people who are ready, willing and able to take on risk. But most folks cannot and should not.

Baines traded

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics, trying to add power for the postseason, acquired four-time All-Star Harold Baines from the Texas Rangers on Wednesday for two players to be named later.
Baines, 31, was batting .280 with 13 home runs and 44 RBIs in 103 games for Texas. He will be replaced by Juan Gonzalez, who was called up from AAA Oklahoma City.

NEW YORK — John McEnroe, scrapping like the fighter of old and sporting the bruised eye of a boxer, is back in the U.S. Open in all his racket-smashing glory.

McEnroe cracked a plastic courtside USTA sign with his racket, drawing a warning from the umpire, and bashed a ball within inches of a lineswoman before beating David Engel, 6-2, 6-3, 7-5, Wednesday to reach the third round here for the first time since 1987.

McEnroe was fined $500 for the racket-abuse warning, bringing him closer to banishment from the Australian Open next January. He was fined $6,500 for his cursing and racket-throwing tantrum at the Australian last January. According to Grand Slam rules, a total of $7,500 in fines results in a ban from the next Grand Slam event.

Ivan Lendl donned his desert hat under a broiling sun and wandered in the wilderness for 40 games before becoming the only one of this year's men's Grand Slam champions to survive here.

Lendl lost his way in the second set as he struggled with errors against West German Michael Stich, but came through with a 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 victory to reach the third round.

French Open champion Andres Gomez, the fifth seed, might have benefited from Lendl's flapping French Foreign Legion hat, or perhaps a lot more practice on hard courts. Gomez, a clay court specialist, fell to Luis Mattar, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, and joined Wimbledon champion and top-seeded Stefan Edberg as a first-round loser.

It was the first time since the Open era began in 1968 that two reigning Grand Slam champions lost in the first round of the U.S. Open.

Edberg's conqueror, Alexander Volkov, didn't enjoy his success very long as he tumbled out in the second round against Todd Witsken, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

Women's Wimbledon champ Martina Navratilova had no problems winning her second-round match, 6-0, 6-4, against Clare Wood. Gabriela Sabatini, the women's fifth-seed, also won easily, 6-1, 6-1, against Isabelle Demongeot.

Third-seeded Monica Seles' match against Ros Fairbank-Nideffer was potponed to Thursday after rain interrupted the Wednesday night session for more than two hours.

Lendl, who wore his legionnaires hat while winning the Australian Open in January, credited it for helping him take another step toward reclaiming the No. 1 ranking he lost to Edberg earlier this month.

"The backflap saves a lot of energy," Lendl said. "You can last 20 to 30 percent longer before you would get tired. It also protects your face and neck from the sun. It can get really hot. When I saw the hat (in Australia) I said, heck, let me try it. My only thought was I might not hear the ball, but I can."

Who has the best athletics in 4-5A?

■ The Reporter-Telegram has taken strides to answer that very question with the announcement of the '90s 4-5A All-Sports Decade Points Championship.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Invariably, the District 4-5A sports fan will hear the question asked over a cup of coffee at least three or four times a year. "Which school in the district has the best overall sports program?"

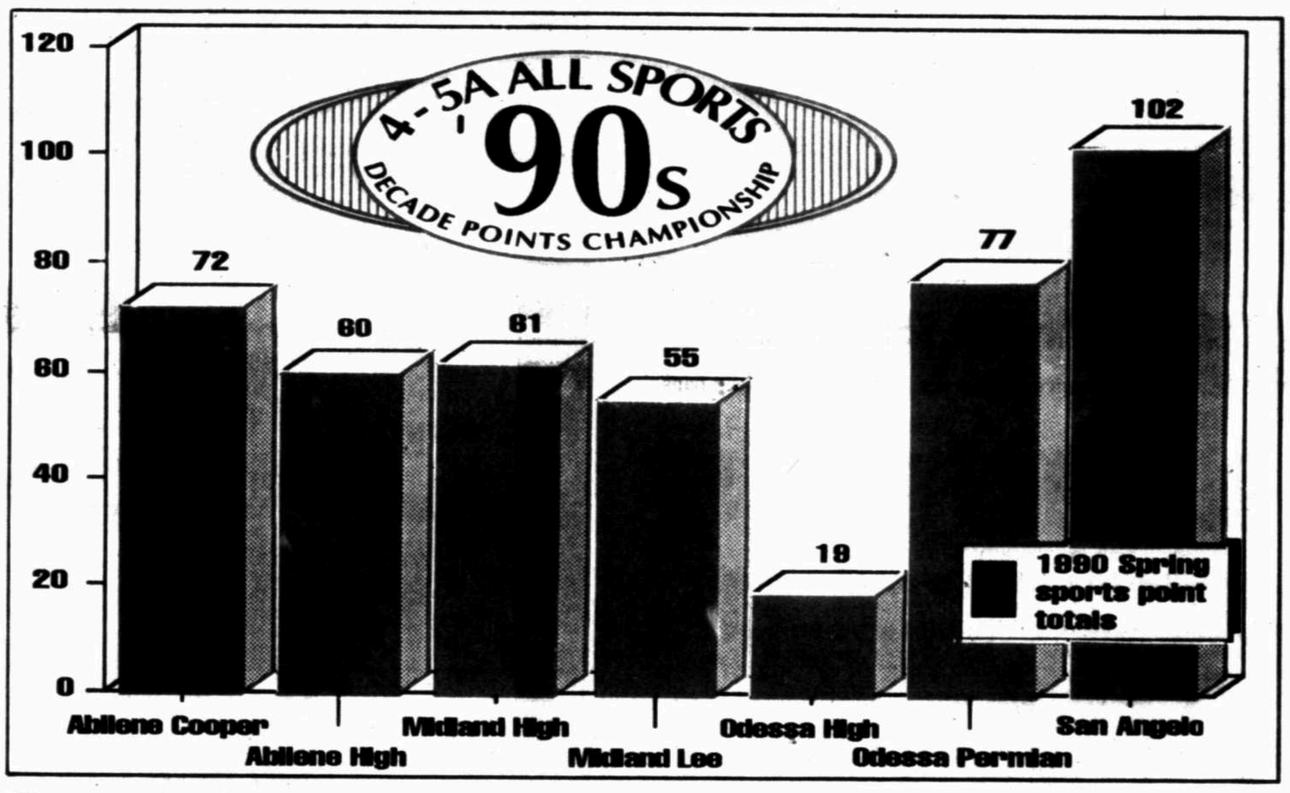

We have been told for years of Odessa Permian's legendary dominance in football. But does Permian really have the strongest overall sports program in the district? Maybe so. Maybe not. It's always been something to promote a friendly argument.

Well, the Reporter-Telegram sports staff has often tossed the question around — and we, too, often come up with different answers. We felt it was time to try to answer the question.

Thus was born the District 4-5A All Sports Decade Points Championship. That's a real mouthfull, but the intent is to use a points format that can determine which school is the overall athletic power in the league.

Points can be earned by every University Interscholastic League sport in which the schools participate. Boys and girls sports will be separate entities and all sports will be treated equally with teams in each

Decade points championship rules

Rules for Obtaining Decade Points

1. School team must be competing in a University Interscholastic League sport played during the 1990s.
2. Girls and Boys teams will be treated equally. For example: Girls basketball will be treated as one sport and boys basketball as one sport.
3. Teams may only earn a maximum of 20 points in any one sport.
4. If UIL sports are added to the district during the decade, that sport will immediately be added to the point totals.
5. If a team is added to the district, they will start earning points at point of entry.
6. Any team disqualified from competition by UIL will receive no points in that sport.
7. Formula for determining points:

Football, basketball, volleyball, soccer and baseball will all be treated the same. Points will be awarded on a 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district standings. One point will also be awarded for each playoff victory posted and an additional two point bonus will be given to a state championship team. To score 20 points a team must be a district champion, win six playoff games and be awarded two more points for the state championship. (Note: Since the UIL is experimenting with three teams to the football playoffs, the school which goes into the Small School brack-

Syracuse undecided on QB

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The great quarterback controversy at Syracuse is over, and the winner is —.

Well, Dick MacPherson isn't saying.

MacPherson on Wednesday kept the guessing game alive for the Kickoff Classic by refusing to say whether either Marvin Graves or Mark McDonald would start at quarterback Friday night against ninth-ranked Southern Cal at Giants Stadium.

"We had a real good practice today and I made my decision," MacPherson said. "We'll announce it later."

The way MacPherson joked when asked how much later seemed to indicate that Southern Cal coach Larry Smith might still be guessing at game time.

"I think it always makes a difference when you are not sure who the key players will be," Smith said at a news conference attended by both coaches. "In terms of basic preparation, we are looking at an established program with established ideas and philosophies. So it comes down to the player element."

Kickoff Classic

That's where the two teams differ.

Todd Marinovich of Southern Cal is a proven quantity. Graves and McDonald are not.

Graves, who seems to have the inside track at being the starter according to local reporters, is a redshirt freshman who has the potential to be an outstanding option quarterback.

McDonald, a junior, completed 63 of 89 passes last season in a mostly backup role to Bill Scharr. His best game came in a 19-18 Peach Bowl victory over Georgia when he completed 10 of 13 passes for 135 yards and a touchdown.

MacPherson said the starter should know who he is, but he has not told that player.

When asked about the job, McDonald did not sound like a player who felt the job was his.

"We both want to start but it's too early to get upset about it if you don't get the call," he said. "You just have to stay ready, keep your head in the game and be mentally and physically prepared when the team needs you."

MacPherson said he did not plan to alternate quarterbacks Friday, but he would not hesitate to make a change if his starter struggled.

John Flannery, the Syracuse center ranked among the best in the country, said it wouldn't matter lined up behind him.

"In the Syracuse offense, the quarterbacks are somewhat important," he said, "but as long as they can run the offense, pass and pitch, we're OK. This year I see two confident quarterbacks. We don't know who will be back there, but we are confident in both."

While anxious to know who would quarterback Syracuse, Smith said he was more concerned with the Orangemen's option attack.

"I think the Syracuse offense limits the defense," Smith said. "I don't think we'll be able to use our whole defensive package. But at the beginning of the year you rarely have a full package. You just want everyone to play football, run and hit."

Higgins inks with Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former Michigan basketball standout Sean Higgins has agreed to a three-year contract with the San Antonio Spurs, team officials said.

The 6-foot-9 Higgins was the last player selected in the NBA draft in June. Upon accepting the Spurs' offer Tuesday, Higgins turned down a two-year $725,000 offer to play for the Paok team in Greece.

Spurs officials and Higgins' agent would not disclose terms of the San Antonio contract. The deal reportedly is worth $700,000, plus an estimated $200,000 in incentives determined by Higgins' playing time.

Higgins joins a team once dominated by his boyhood idol, George Gervin.

"I think the bottom line is that Sean wanted to play with the Spurs," team president Gary Woods said. "Gervin has always been his hero and he was thrilled with the chance to play for the same team."

Astros sneak past Chicago

Associated Press

Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe held Houston to a run and two hits in five innings Wednesday night in his first appearance of the season following shoulder surgery but came away a loser when Houston's Mark Portugal and Larry Andersen pitched the Astros to a 1-0 victory over the Cubs.

Portugal (8-9) worked out of trouble in five of the first six innings. He won his fourth consecutive game, scattering eight hits in seven innings and striking out nine, equaling his career high.

Andersen pitched two innings for his sixth save. He yielded three hits.

Sutcliffe, making his first start since last Oct. 1, pitched one inning more than expected. He struck out two and retired the last seven batters he faced and 10 of 12.

The Astros got their run in the second inning. Karl Rhodes walked and took second on Rafael Ramirez's single. Portugal grounded into a reverse double play and Rhodes scored while the Cubs were running Ramirez down between first and second.

Astros first baseman Glenn Davis played for the first time since June 25. He had been on the disabled list with a pulled rib cage muscle. He pinch hit for Portugal in the seventh and was intentionally walked.

National

Pirates 10, Braves 0

Doug Drabek pitched a two-hitter and became the National League's first 17-game winner and Barry Bonds matched his career-high with five RBIs as the Pittsburgh Pirates snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating the Atlanta Braves 10-0 Wednesday night in a rain-shortened game.

Bonds, who has 97 RBIs, hit an RBI single in the fourth inning, a two-run single in the sixth and a two-run double in the seventh. The game was called with two out in the top of the seventh after a second rain delay.

Dodgers 12, Phillies 2

Chris Gwynn hit two home runs, including his first career grand slam in an eight-run sixth inning, powering the Los Angeles Dodgers to a rain-delayed victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Dodgers led 3-2 entering the sixth. A pinch single by Mickey Hatcher drove in one run and a throwing error by Phillies third baseman Charlie Hayes let in another for a 5-2 lead.

Mets 2, Padres 1

Daryl Boston's bases-loaded run-scoring single with one out in the ninth inning gave New York a victory over the San Diego Padres as the Mets kept pace with Pittsburgh in the National League East.

The Pirates beat Atlanta 10-0 to maintain to a two-game lead over New York. The Mets lost seven of 12 games to the Padres this season while the Pirates were 10-2 against San Diego.

Cardinals 9, Reds 1

Bob Tewksbury pitched a six-hitter, hit an RBI double and sacrificed two runners into scoring position Wednesday night, leading St. Louis to a 9-1 victory over Cincinnati, only the Cardinals' third victory in 12 games against the Reds.

Tewksbury (9-4), who pitched shutouts in two of his previous three starts, snapped Cincinnati's four-game winning streak by blanking the Reds on two hits until Chris Sabo hit his 23rd home run with one out in the eighth inning.

Giants 6, Expos 5

Kevin Mitchell and Robby Thompson hit solo home runs in the ninth inning against rookie Bill Sampen as the San Francisco Giants rallied to bea. the Montreal Expos 6-5 Wednesday night.

Mitchell, who brought the Giants within 5-4 with a two-run homer in the sixth against Montreal starter Dennis Martinez, hit his 30th homer leading off the ninth. After Matt Williams flied out and Gary Carter struck out, Thompson hit his 13th homer.

Kiecker boots Tribe

Associated Press

Dana Kiecker shut out Cleveland on three hits for seven innings and Ellis Burks homered as the Boston Red Sox beat the Indians 7-1 Wednesday night for their sixth straight win, all on the road.

Wade Boggs had three hits for the Red Sox, who maintained their six-game lead over second-place Toronto in the American League East. The six-game road winning streak is their longest since they won eighth straight road games in June of 1986.

Kiecker (6-6), a 29-year-old rookie, walked one and struck out six. He 12 retired the first 12 batters before Candy Maldonado led off the fifth with a single. Maldonado singled home a run in the ninth against Rob Murphy.

Mike Walker (1-4) took the loss, giving up five earned runs on 10 hits, nine of them singles, in 6 2-3 innings.

Blue Jays 7, Brewers 3

Tony Fernandez hit the Blue Jays' first home run in 11 games, a three-run shot as Toronto snapped a five-game losing streak and beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Toronto had scored only four runs during the streak, falling from one game behind the first-place Boston Red Sox to six games back before Wednesday.

Jimmy Key (9-6) scattered six hits, striking out six and walking none in six innings. Duane Ward pitched three innings for his 10th save.

American

Yankees 3, Orioles 2

Matt Nokes and Kevin Maas homered on consecutive pitches in the sixth inning as the New York Yankees beat Baltimore, sending the Orioles to their fifth straight loss.

Tim Leary (8-16) gave up one run on four hits in seven innings. He allowed only one batter to reach base in the first five innings.

Dave Righetti relieved to start the ninth and gave up pinch hitter Tim Hulett's two-out home run, but got his 29th save.

Twins 6, White Sox 1

Mark Guthrie pitched a five-hitter and the Minnesota Twins turned four errors into four runs in the second inning to beat Chicago, the fifth straight loss for the White Sox.

Chicago matched its longest losing streak of the season. The White Sox began the day 6½ games behind Oakland in the American League West. Minnesota won its third in a row.

Guthrie (5-7) struck out five and walked one in his first major-league complete game. He did not allow a runner past second base until Carlos Martinez homered with one out in the seventh.

Wayne Edwards (3-3) lost for the first time after winning three consecutive decisions since becoming a starter on Aug. 10.

Royals 6, Athletics 0

Kevin Appier pitched a four-hitter for his sixth consecutive victory and Bo Jackson, Danny Tartabull and Jim Eisenreich each hit home runs as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Oakland Athletics.

Appier (11-4) did not allow a hit for 5 2-3 innings before Rickey Henderson beat out an infield single. Shortstop Kurt Stillwell made a diving stop to his left and made a low throw that first baseman George Brett could not handle.

Appier, who has not lost since July 28, struck out five and walked one as he beat Oakland for the first time in three decisions this year. He pitched his third complete game of the season, all shutouts.

Jackson gave the Royals a 3-0 lead in the fourth with a three-run homer off Scott Sanderson (13-9). Jackson lined an 0-1 pitch over the 400-foot sign in center field for his fifth home run in 11 at-bats and his 21st this season.

Tigers 4, Mariners 2

Cecil Fielder hit his 42nd home run and Alan Trammell also connected, leading Walt Terrell and the Detroit Tigers over the Seattle Mariners.

Fielder leads the majors in homers and with 109 RBIs. He has homered twice this season against the Mariners, both off Matt Young.

Trammell gave the Tigers a 3-0 lead by leading off the sixth with his 13th homer off Young (6-14).

Mission hurlers baffle Angels

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — San Antonio pitchers struck out 14 Midland Angel batters en route to a 5-2 win here Wednesday as the Texas League schedule continued to wind down.

The Missions had already clinched the second-half pennant in the Texas League Western Division by virtue of Wichita's 5-4 win over El Paso in the first game of a Wednesday doubleheader. San Antonio and El Paso will play in the Western Division finals next week.

San Antonio jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first four innings off Midland starter Don Vidmar, 1-6, before Angel relievers Greg Minton and Brett Merriman held the hosts scoreless over the last four innings.

Meanwhile, Mission starter Dan Opperman, 12-8, faced only one batter over the minimum in his five innings of shutout ball.

Rookie receiver signs with Bengals

Associated Press

Two days after being traded to Cincinnati by the New York Jets, wide receiver Reggie Rembert signed with the Bengals on Wednesday, ending a holdout that had consumed most of training camp.

Rembert, the Jets' second-round pick and the 28th overall in last April's draft, was traded Monday to Cincinnati for Joe Kelly, a starting linebacker, and offensive tackle Scott Brown.

The Bengals declined to reveal contract terms. Rembert, who starred at West Virginia, reportedly had demanded $442,000 from the Jets and rejected New York's offer of $398,000.

Rembert became expendable when the Jets selected Rob Moore of Syracuse in the supplemental draft and he performed well in training camp.

"We're happy to have Reggie Rembert with us. He's a big, tall receiver with good speed and we think he is a prospect to be a first-line wide receiver in the NFL," said Mike Brown, Cincinnati's assistant general manager.

The Bengals' quick signing of Rembert came a day after coach Sam Wyche suggested that the Bengals might not sign Rembert until next year.

NFL Roundup

Colts

Eric Dickerson will miss the first six games of the NFL season after being placed on one of the NFL's many reserve lists Wednesday by Indianapolis.

General manager Jim Irsay also suspended the running back for four weeks of that period and fined him an additional week's pay, which comes to near $600,000 — seven weeks' pay based on his $1.45 million salary.

Irsay said the penalties were for conduct detrimental to the team, which would include again refusing to take the team's required physical exam.

Falcons

Atlanta, which drew fewer than 10,000 fans for its final regular-season game this year, is already approaching sellouts for its first three home games.

Ticket manager Jack Ragsdale said Wednesday that over 50,000 tickets already have been sold for the season opener with the Houston Oilers on Sept. 9; almost 53,000 for a game against Super Bowl champion San Francisco on Oct. 14, and over 45,000 for an Oct. 7 game with the New Orleans Saints.

The Falcons play at the 59,643-seat Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

Lions

An angry Jerry Ball showed up at the Silverdome Wednesday and lashed out at the Lions' management for its unwillingness to renegotiate his contract.

Ball missed all of training camp in a dispute over his contract, which the club renegotiated last season. Ball made his first Pro Bowl appearance last season and wants to be paid on a par with NFL's elite nose tackles.

"They don't pay us market value here," Ball said.

The Lions did come to a contract agreement Wednesday with veteran Jimmy Williams, who led NFL linebackers in interceptions last year. That leaves defensive end Eric Williams and Ball as the only who haven't reported.

Chuck Schmidt, the Lions' chief operating officer, has said the club will talk to Ball later in the season, but only after he reports. Until then, Schmidt won't talk money with Ball.

Steelers

For the first time this preseason, Tim Worley and Merril Hoge will be in the backfield together when the Steelers play the Philadelphia Eagles Saturday night. Worley had arthroscopic surgery Aug. 2 to trim a left knee cartilage and hasn't played since.

"This week we're going to do what we do best," Worley said. "We're going to stick to two backs and the basic stuff. That's the plan."

Worley led the Steelers in rushing last year with 770 yards rushing, 417 in the final five games. Hoge had 621 yards, including 90 in their final regular-season game, and 220 yards in their two playoff games.

Jets

Tony Eason will start at quarterback Thursday night against Tampa Bay but coach Bruce Coslet says that the decision on whether Eason or Ken O'Brien will start the season is still a question mark.

"It's Tony's turn to start," Coslet said when asked why Eason would open. Coslet will name his starter sometime after the Tampa Bay game and says he views this game as one more piece in the puzzle, not a do-or-die situation.

"There's too many factors to put it on one thing," Coslet said ."It wouldn't be fair.

Pokes get another Card TE

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys on Wednesday obtained tight end Robert Awalt from the Phoenix Cardinals for an undisclosed conditional draft choice.

The 6-5, 248-pound Awalt was a third round selection out of San Diego State in 1987. He will join former teammate Jay Novacek who was picked up from the Cardinals who left him unprotected under Plan B of the NFL free agency.

As a rookie, Awalt caught 42 passes for 526 yards and six touchdowns. Last year he had 33 catches for 360 yards and no touchdowns.

The Cowboys have two other tight ends, Keith Jennings and Steve Folsom, who might have trouble making the 47-man roster unless coach Jimmy Johnson decides to keep more than two players at the position.

DECADE: San Angelo leads

sport being able to earn a maximum of 20 points.

For instance, cross country, one of the league's least recognized sports, can earn as many overall points as football, the most recognizable. It is felt that a true overall sports program should not be weighted. If a school happens to be strong in cross country and not in football, there shouldn't be a penalty just because that sport doesn't draw thousands into stadiums.

We will monitor point standings through the decade of the '90s, meaning that the starting point is Jan. 1, 1990. The first points came from that date to now. Last fall's football, volleyball, tennis and cross country, for example, are not included in the first decade points standings even though it was in the same school year.

At the end of each fall and spring sports seasons, we will update for you the points standings, listing both the overall decade standings and how each school performed in that current season.

So, who is the decade points leader after one spring season? None other than the San Angelo Bobcats, coming in with 102 spring 1990 points. It just so happens that San Angelo also has the largest enrollment of the seven district schools.

In fact, San Angelo had an impressive spring, outdistancing second place Permian by 25 points while scoring heavily in golf, soccer, basketball, boys track and swimming. Permian fared well in boys golf and track and was above average in all other sports except boys basketball and soccer.

Abilene Cooper is close behind with 72 points, just five behind second place Permian. Other point totals are Midland High, 61; Abilene High, 60; Midland Lee, 55; and Odessa High, 19.

Cooper was solid in girls golf, soccer and baseball. Midland High was strong in swimming, baseball and boys basketball. In fact, MHS' 17 points in boys swimming was the highest point total achieved by any team last spring. Permian's 15 points in boys golf was the next highest total.

Rules for obtaining points and points each sport received are included in this package.

How Points Were Won in Spring 1990

Boys Basketball: Abilene High: 12 points for first place. Midland High and San Angelo 9 points each for second place tie. Midland Lee 6 points for fourth place. Odessa High 4 points for fifth place. Odessa Permian 2 points for sixth place.

Girls Basketball: San Angelo 12 points for first place. Abilene Cooper and Permian 9 points each for second place tie. Abilene High 6 points for fourth place. Odessa High 4 points for fifth place. Lee 2 points for sixth place.

Baseball: Cooper 12 points for first place and 2 points for two playoff victories for 14 points. Midland High 10 points for second place and 1 point for one playoff victory for 11 points. Permian 8 points for third place. Lee 6 points for fourth place. San Angelo 4 points for fifth place. Abilene High 2 points for sixth place.

Soccer: San Angelo 11 points for first place tie and 1 point for one playoff victory for 12 points. Cooper 11 points for first place tie. Abilene High 8 points for third place. Lee 6 points for fourth place. Midland High 4 points for fifth place. Permian 2 points for sixth place.

Boys Track: San Angelo 10 points for second place, 3 points for individual Region I victories and 1 point for individual state champion for 14 points. Permian 12 points for first place. Odessa High 9 points for third place and 1 point for individual Region I victory. Abilene High 6 points for fourth place. Cooper 4 points for fifth place. Midland High 2 points for sixth place.

et will be given 20 points if that school is a district champion and wins all five playoff games. The same will hold for any of these sports if it takes less than six playoff victories to win a state championship.)

Swimming: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district swim meet. One bonus point can be earned for winning a regional team championship and one point for winning a state team championship. A one point bonus can be earned by individuals winning regional and state titles. A two point bonus will be given for a state team championship, but only a maximum of 20 points can be earned.

Golf: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district golf tour. One point for each region and state team title. A bonus point for a top two medalist finish in region and state competition. Two bonus points for a team state championship.

Tennis: Tennis is unique since teams have competition in both spring and fall. District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district team tennis play in the fall. Team tennis can earn a bonus point for regional and state championship, plus a two point bonus for team state championship. In the spring, additional bonus points can be earned by individuals who win regional and state titles. However, only a maximum of 20 points can be won.

Track: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district track meet. One bonus point for each regional and state team title won. Two additional bonus points for state team championship. Individuals and relays may earn one bonus point for regional and state championships. Only a maximum of 20 points can be earned.

Cross Country: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district cross country meet. A bonus point for a top two individual finish in region and state competition. Also a team may earn a point for a region and state title. Two additional bonus points for a state championship.

Trebelhorn contract honored

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn, whose job was rumored to be in jeopardy during a dismal slump that dropped the Brewers from first to sixth place this summer, will return next season.

General Manager Harry Dalton told The Milwaukee Journal in an interview published Wednesday that the Brewers would honor the contract it signed with Trebelhorn.

Jackson hopes to keep Mets

Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — Jackson Mayor Kane Ditto is suggesting that Hinds, Madison and Rankin counties chip in money to help pay for the $2 million renovation of Smith-Wills Stadium to keep the Texas League franchise in Mississippi.

Ditto said Tuesday that he is asking Hinds County to put up $813,750, Rankin County to chip in $267,500 and Madison County to contribute $168,750.

Jackson is willing to put up $750,000 received from the Grand Gulf nuclear power plant, Ditto said. The city is also willing to seek alternate ways of financing the project, such as issuing revenue notes.

Such notes would be paid off from fees collected on parking and ticket sales at the stadium.

Ditto's comments came in a speech to the executive committee of the Hinds-Madison-Rankin Cooperative Service District. He said the three counties should cooperate with the city by making voluntary contributions to the renovation effort "to preserve minor league baseball in the area."

"I'm pleased that something's happening but it seems like we're moving back into the politics of who's going to do what," Jackson businessman Con Maloney, owner of the Jackson Mets baseball team, said Tuesday night.

The money would not be needed before the next fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1, "but we need the commitment very soon" so Maloney can seek another ball club to replace the Mets team that is leaving Jackson after this season, Ditto said.

Texas League

The New York Mets' AA farm team is leaving after 16 years primarily because of Smith-Wills' run-down condition. Maloney has said he plans to affiliate with another major league team and will not sell the franchise rights or move the franchise to another city.

"What I am trying to do now is get a commitment to Mr. Maloney that yes, this will be built," Ditto said. "We want to be able to tell the owners of the club that we will be able to do this kind of renovation."

"That would be exactly right," Maloney said of the need for a speedy commitment. "Lacking a secure commitment, of the 26 AA teams, whoever can't find a home would be the one in Jackson."

Parrish announces retirement before end of Japanese season

TOKYO (AP) — Larry Parrish called it a career 25 games early.

The 36-year old Parrish, who had 15 seasons in the majors before playing in Japan, told the Hanshin Tigers he is returning to the United States for treatment of a chronic knee injury.

With only 25 games left, that ended Parrish's season, and, likely, his career.

"I was planning on retiring at the end of this year anyway," Parrish said Wednesday.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to remarkable financial progress. Loans and investments deserve closer scrutiny in October. A move to another state or city may be part of the picture. Try to get settled before the December holidays. A May-December romance could hold special appeal in early 1991. Family pressures will begin to lift by May. July is the best month to take a summer vacation.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: civil rights leader Roy Wilkins, actor Timothy Bottoms, actress Peggy Lipton, actor Fred MacMurray.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You come through a difficult period at work with flying colors. Important papers surface. The bond between parents and child grows stronger. Put your energy into creative projects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be certain to get prior approval before spending someone else's money. Sensitive feelings could upset the domestic routine. You can make an excellent first impression tonight if you dress well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those with artistic talent should be on the lookout for ways to improve their financial security. A new romantic interest could lead to some awkward moments. Be more discreet.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The spotlight is on earnings, investments and jointly held funds. Mutually rewarding agreements can be forged. Discuss your plans with mate or offspring. Pursue romance with enthusiasm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dependability counts big in the workplace. Follow through on your obligations. Be willing to work extra hours to achieve important goals. A platonic relationship intensifies. Your confidence grows.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take the lead in settling a financial dispute. Look for ways to augment your income that involve a minimum of risk-taking. Adjust to your new status at work. Show confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Attend to a confidential matter. You can meet almost any challenge! Friends and family members will tell you the truth even if it hurts. Entertaining at home proves satisfying.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your laughter proves contagious today. Complete projects already under way before starting new ones. Share your interest in sports with someone special. New friends will bring you business contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Conflicting emotions could interfere with your ability to make quick financial decisions. Give yourself more time. Postpone business travel. Romance could become more passionate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stretch your mind with new intellectual challenges. Your appearance is more important than ever. Read between the lines if a memo or letter is confusing. Someone may be trying to deceive you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speaking frankly with your mate will improve your relationship. Give romance another chance. Spiritual influences boost your morale. Rely on your sense of humor. Do not overreact to criticism.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good health is linked to good habits. Put any personal worries aside and concentrate on boosting productivity at work. Push ahead full steam with the first practical idea that comes along.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are bright, analytical and conscientious. They excel in both the classroom and the boardroom. Motivated by the desire to "do for others," these Virgos may still be very critical of those they want to help. Encourage these youngsters to be more understanding of other people's foibles. Ambitious and dedicated, they sometimes jeopardize their health through overwork. Periods of rest and recreation are vital.

There is more to cashing tricks than just banking winners. You must make sure that nothing bad can befall you as you go about your business.

After East's undisciplined weak jump overcall, South did not have enough to act immediately, but when North was able to reopen with a double, a two no trump bid adequately described South's hand. That was all North needed to hear to go on to game.

West dutifully led a spade, taken by the ace. Declarer counted three spade tricks and two rounded-suit aces, so only four diamond tricks were needed for the contract. That seemed easy. Wasting no time, declarer crossed to the king of diamonds, cashed the high spades and led another diamond, intending to finesse the jack. Even if that lost, East would be able to cash only three spade tricks and declarer would take the rest. However, the contract went up in smoke when West showed out on the second diamond and declarer could come to no more than seven tricks.

Declarer could have timed the hand to better advantage. At trick two, South should have led a diamond to his nine! That would guarantee four tricks whenever the diamonds are 3-2, and would have neutralized a 4-1 split, except when West holds specifically a singleton 10. As the cards lie, that simple precaution was all that was necessary to land the contract.

Suppose West has the four diamonds and captures the nine with the ten. Declarer wins the spade continuation (as good as any) and cashes the remaining high spade and king of diamonds. When East shows out, declarer can take the marked diamond finesse. That yields four diamond tricks and the game.

For Clapton, show goes on; Vaughan fund established

Pop musician Eric Clapton and his band returned to the stage Tuesday night in suburban Kansas City.

BONNER SPRINGS, Kan. (AP) — Apparently wishing to let his music speak for him, guitar master Eric Clapton performed without mention of blues comrade Stevie Ray Vaughan and other friends killed in a helicopter crash.

Fans say Vaughan probably wanted it that way.

Vaughan, of Dallas, died Monday when a helicopter crashed into a hillside after a performance with Clapton in East Troy, Wis. His funeral is set for Friday in Dallas.

Clapton went through the show Tuesday night at Sandstone Amphitheatre seemingly like any other rock 'n' roll performance, although he had been on stage with Vaughan 48 hours earlier in Wisconsin.

Gus Fasone, general manager at Sandstone, said Clapton refused all interviews and demanded that reporters and camera crews be barred from backstage.

"The people around him, it's like they are in shock," Fasone said. "Backstage, it's like they aren't functioning, they're going through the motions."

Little of that showed to the more than 16,000 fans at the outdoor theater, about 20 miles west of Kansas City, Mo.

"I think (the band) did an extremely brave thing," Fasone said.

The helicopter crashed in dense fog early Monday, a few hours after a blues jam featuring Clapton, Vaughan and guitarist Robert Cray at Alpine Valley Music Theatre near East Troy, Wis.

Clapton, 45, and Vaughan, 35, made their careers leading bands with guitar-driven rocking blues — Clapton beginning in his native England and Vaughan in Texas.

Both fell victim to drugs and alcohol, but each overcame problems to advance their careers. This year, Vaughan won a Grammy for the album "In Step," referring to the "12 Steps" program used by recovering alcoholics.

The others killed were agent Bobby Brooks of Los Angeles, bodyguard Nigel Browne and tour manager Colin Smythe, both of London, and pilot Jeffrey W. Brown, 42, of East Chicago, Ind.

Vaughan's publicist said there will be a private family funeral service with public graveside committal at noon Thursday at Laurel Land Funeral Home in Dallas.

The family asked that donations go to the Stevie Ray Vaughan charitable fund of the Communities Foundation of Texas in Dallas. The fund, set up after his death, will be used for drug abuse programs, said Maggie Eckert of the Communities Foundation.

Vaughan is survived by his mother, Martha, and brother Jimmie Vaughan.

The guitarist and the other victims died from multiple internal and head injuries that killed them instantly, authorities said Tuesday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Johnny Depp, baby-faced star of TV's "21 Jump Street," has signed a multipicture development deal with 20th Century Fox for projects in which he will star and produce.

"After starring in a hit series for Fox Television and in 'Edward Scissorhands,' a film we're over the moon about, Johnny Depp is officially joining Fox's creative family," Roger Birnbaum of 20th Century Fox said Tuesday.

Depp also starred in Universal's "Cry Baby," director John Waters' spoof of juvenile delinquency.

In the 20th Century Fox film "Edward Scissorhands," directed by Tim Burton and scheduled for Christmas release, Depp plays a boy-creature who has sharp metal shears for hands.

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — The rap group Public Enemy released a video with actual footage of the violence at last year's Greekfest riots just in time for this year's Laborfest. And city officials aren't happy about it.

The video version of the song "Brothers Gonna' Work It Out" shown on MTV last week "has grossly misrepresented what Virginia Beach is trying to do relative to Laborfest," city spokeswoman Pam Lingle said Tuesday.

"In fact, it is a disservice to the many black people who are working so hard to make Laborfest 1990 an enjoyable experience," she said. The festival is planned for Labor Day weekend.

The video showed staged scenes of actors portraying "redneck" state troopers and "insensitive" bureaucrats with footage of police kicking and clubbing blacks. It does not show the rioting and looting by young blacks that preceded the police action.

Woman heads groups of 'Prozac Survivors'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Disturbing side effects patients blame on the popular antidepressant Prozac have resulted in several multi-million-dollar lawsuits, and a group of women have formed a support network for those who feel adversely affected by the drug.

"It's a very dangerous drug, especially since people aren't being warned about its possible side effects," said Janet Sims of Noblesville, Ind., who linked her suicide attempt to the drug and in May founded the Prozac Survivors Support Group.

Since then, support groups have been formed in at least seven states. An estimated 2 million people worldwide have taken the drug. Depression afflicts an estimated 4 percent of American adults.

Prozac, a member of the class of drugs known as fluoxetine, has been promoted as a miracle drug with few and minor side effects, according to Sims and other patients.

But it can induce violent and persistent suicidal and homicidal tendencies in people who never have experienced such thoughts before, they say. The manufacturer and federal officials defend Prozac.

This summer, two patients sued the drug's manufacturer, Eli Lilly and Co. of Indianapolis. Both allege Prozac can prompt suicidal or aggressive behavior and that Eli Lilly failed to warn doctors about the possibility.

In addition, the widows of three victims of a Kentucky man who murdered eight people at a printing company last September before shooting himself are each suing the company for $50 million, saying the aggression was linked to Prozac.

Eli Lilly has not commented on the lawsuits.

In her lawsuit, Rhonda Hala of Shirley, N.Y., said that within two weeks of beginning to take Prozac, her thoughts turned to suicide. During 18 months on the drug, she slashed herself with razor blades and dug scissors and screws into her flesh about 150 times, she said. She tried six times to kill herself, she said.

"I thought I had someone else's brain in my body," said Mrs. Hala, a 40-year-old school secretary.

When she stopped taking the drug, she said, her life returned to normal.

In 1988, the Food and Drug Administration approved Prozac for treatment of depression. It quickly became the most widely dispensed antidepressant on the U.S. market.

"It's being given out like candy," said Michael O'Brien, a spokesman for the Los Angeles-based Citizens Commission on Human Rights, a group established by the Church of Scientology to investigate psychiatric abuse. "The doctors and psychiatrists are told that the drug is incredibly safe, so they give it out for just about any reason."

In the American Journal of Psychiatry in February, Dr. Martin Teicher of Harvard University and colleagues reported that six patients had developed violent suicidal thoughts within weeks of taking Prozac. The problem stopped after patients stopped using the drug.

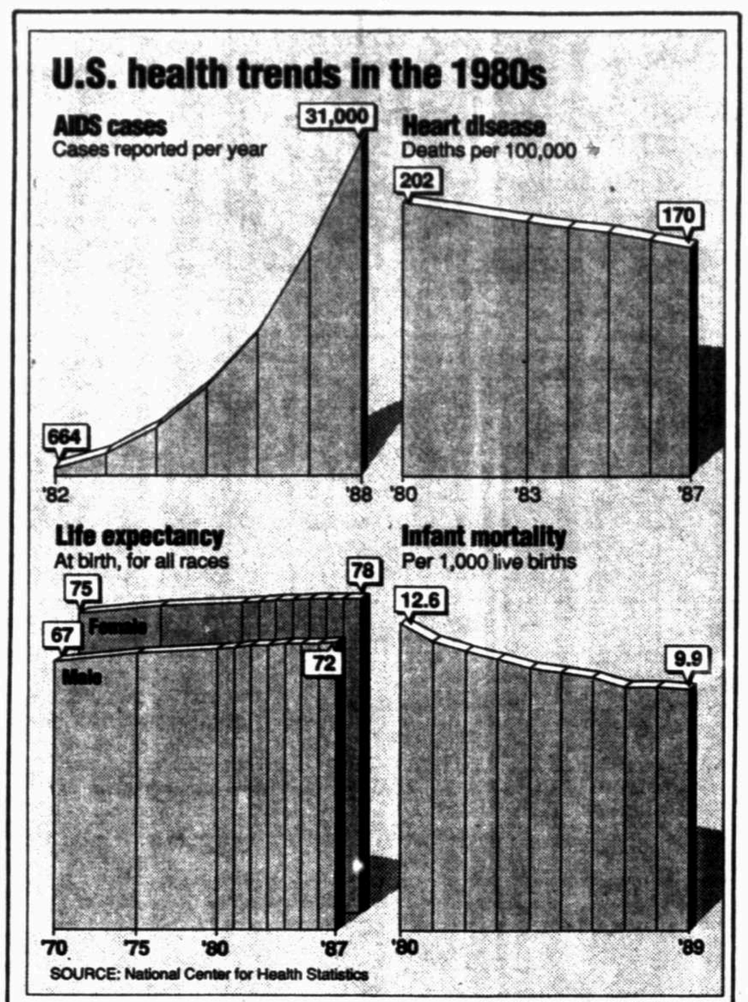

"The bottom line is that Prozac is no wonder drug. It has no extravagant claims attached to it, but it has helped a lot of people suffering from depression appreciate the benefits of life," said Jerrold Rosenbaum, chief of the Psycho-Pharmacology Unit at Massachusetts General Hospital and associate professor at Harvard University.

In Florida, use of the drug by former three-term Sen. Lawton Chiles has become a topic in his campaign for governor.

State House Speaker Tom Gustafson, the running mate of Chiles' Democratic primary opponent, suggested that Chiles could be a suicide risk in the governor's mansion. Candidate Bill Nelson, a six-term congressman, distanced himself from the remark, and Gustafson eventually apologized.

Later, Chiles released medical records that said he never contemplated suicide.

FDA and Lilly officials said there have been no unusual problems with Prozac.

Book offers women smokers tips

Associated Press

Get ready, get set, stop.

Here are some tips to help you get off cigarettes for good. The list is based on "Women Smokers Can Quit: A Different Approach" (Women's Healthcare Press), by Sue Delaney:

— Start by analyzing where, when, why and how much you smoke.

— Make a list of the reasons you want to quit. Carry it with you and look at it for inspiration when you have the urge to smoke.

— Get your doctor's help. He may be able to prescribe a nicotine substitute to help you control your smoking.

— If you're afraid of gaining weight, try to modify your eating before you stop smoking. But don't wait until you lose weight to begin your no-smoking campaign.

— Develop a support network of friends and family who can provide a sympathetic ear or active help over the long term. Women with supportive husbands, partners or families have a better chance to quit than those who don't.

— If you enroll in a program, find one that uses multiple techniques, including behavior modification, long-term support and followup.

— Set a date for quitting and announce it to your support network. You might even draw up and sign a contract with a friend, partner or doctor.

Quitting cigarettes different for women

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Statistics from the surgeon-general show that women, once hooked, have a tough time kicking the cigarette habit. Sue Delaney, an ex-smoker, says it hasn't helped that most smoking cessation programs are designed for men, who smoke for different reasons than women.

"Most approaches to quitting are based on the experience of male smokers, whose needs sharply diverge from those of women smokers on several key points," says Delaney, whose book, "Women Smokers Can Quit: A Different Approach" (Women's Healthcare Press), is used in hospitals and no-smoking programs.

She points to research that shows men usually smoke for pleasure and quit for the positive benefits, while women may smoke to suppress depression and other negative feelings and quit primarily to please others. Cultural expectations reinforce men as independent problem solvers; women are expected to share their feelings and bond with others to solve problems. And women are more likely to fear weight gain because thinness is such an ingrained cultural value for them.

"We have to help women feel less guilt, help them feel that quitting smoking is a positive thing, a matter of taking control of their own lives," says Delaney.

She says most women start smoking in their teens, and one of the most powerful reasons is that they respond to glamorous images shown in cigarette advertising. She thinks that publications who rely on revenues from the ads may pull their punches when it comes to editorial matter about smoking and health. "The amount of tobacco advertising directly correlates with the percentage of articles," she says. "We're not going to get straight information from magazines."

Some of that information is in her book, which offers practical tips to the woman smoker who wants to quit. Much of the advice is based on her own experience in breaking a 40-year cigarette habit nearly two years ago, as well as research and interviews with other women smokers.

She recommends making a list of reasons to quit, but she emphasizes that it should be an "I-me-my" list: "If you're tempted to write, 'My husband wants me to quit,' write instead, 'I love my husband and want to spend many more years with him.' If you want to write, 'My friends are worried about me,' write instead, 'I'm worried about my blood pressure, my cough, my fatigue.' If you start to write, 'My children don't like it,' write instead 'I want to get the kids off my case.' "

Delaney quit cold turkey, but she says preparing to quit is better for most women. Preparation helps them analyze why they smoke and to recognize people, places and routines that trigger the urge to smoke. They learn new habits and alternative ways to relax and to deal with problems. "Then they find that smoking is just incompatible with this new lifestyle."

Many no-smoking programs recognize the connection of smoking and depression among women by an acronym, HALT (Hungry, Angry, Lonely, Tired), but Delaney says it's not known whether depression triggers smoking or if it works the other way around. "We don't know the answer to that, but I know that when I want a cigarette, it's an emotional barometer to me. I ask myself, 'What's going on with me? What's causing this?' "

Nearly all no-smoking legislation is negative, she points out, and it just drives smokers outside into non-restricted places to smoke. While non-smokers need to defend their rights, they should appeal to "sensible behavior" in dealing with and helping the smoker, Delaney says. Be firm but understanding. "If a smoker is riding with you in your car, stop and ask her to get out of the car to smoke."

"Women Smokers Can Quit: A Different Approach" is distributed primarily through hospital and no-smoking programs, but it can be ordered by mail for $6.95, including postage. Call 1 (800) 543-3854, or write Women's Healthcare Press, 500 Davis Street, Evanston, Ill. 60201.

Children learn ABC's of health

Associated Press

Why is it important to be strong and healthy?

"So that you can eat and live and so you don't grow up wimpy and stuff," says Jennifer, 9, of Aurora, Colo.

" 'Cause you don't need a whole bunch of cholesterol and heart attacks and stuff like that," adds Katie, 10, of Memphis.

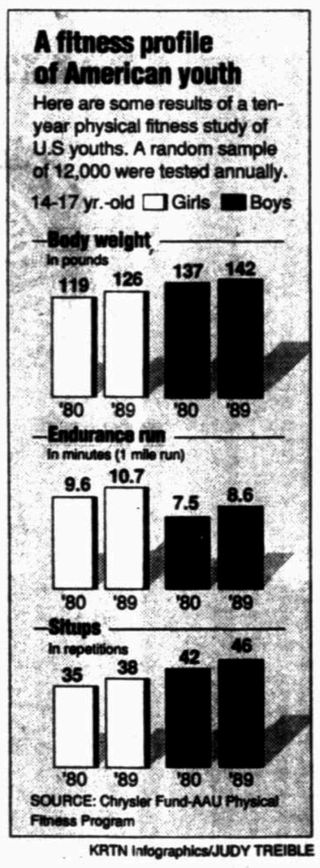

Childrens' opinions were sought by Rainbo Bread for publicizing its Ironkids Program, designed to help youngsters learn about nutrition, exercise and health. The company's program includes a series of regional triathlons for youngsters, a "Path to Health and Fitness" lesson plan offered free to teachers, and a IronKids Club, which entitles its 15,000 members to newsletters with advice about food, athletics and other issues, along with jacket patches, posters, and membership cards.

The program's advisory board cites the prevalance of childhood obesity — one in four, or 11 million — that put children at risk for heart disease, diabetes, and hypertension. "Inactivity influences all facets of their health and well-being," says Dr. Liz Applegate of the University of California at Davis, a board member.

Or as Ivy, 12, of Dallas puts it: "Well, be sure and eat at least some healthy foods and try not to get into the habit of smoking. And exercise. Try not to get too stressed out. It's really hard on your heart."

Another program aimed at children is the Washington Apple Commission's "Healthy Choices for Kids," a health education project available to teachers all over the country. The program encourages classroom discussion of nutrition issues and helps guide youngsters in their food choices. —

A handful or two of raw almonds in your diet every day may help you regulate your level of serum cholesterol, says the Almond Board of California. The group points to a study by Dr. Gene A, Spiller, director of Health Research and Studies Center in Los Altos, Calif.

MacArthur faded in 1951

In 1951, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said farewell to Congress after being relieved of his command in Korea by President Truman. Said MacArthur: "Old soldiers never die; they just fade away."

The Lifetime Service Guarantee makes this a once-in-a-lifetime experience.
With some car repair guarantees, the only thing you can bank on if something goes wrong is another withdrawal from the bank down the road. But not with the Lifetime Service Guarantee.
The Lifetime Service Guarantee puts Peace of Mind℠ in writing. Here's how it works. Once you pay for a covered repair at any participating Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer nationwide, the bill will be stamped as an LSG repair. Then, if the same repair ever needs to be done again, just show your receipt and we'll fix it free for as long as you own your car. Free parts. Free labor. For life. It's that simple.
The Lifetime Service Guarantee, America's best car repair guarantee, covers virtually everything except normal wear and maintenance items like wiper blades and tires. It's Peace of Mind that's available only to Ford, Lincoln and Mercury owners.
So ask us for a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee. Because when it comes to paying for car repairs, once is enough.

DEAR ABBY

Grandma worries that women dress for rape

EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It's no wonder so many girls and women are raped these days. They go around without bras, wearing halters and skin-tight pants, and some of them even leave their whole midsections bare naked. They practically ask for it!

Van Buren

I'm not saying we should be easy on the rapists who commit these terrible crimes, but the way some girls dress I can understand how a man can be tempted beyond his ability to control himself. — GRANDMA IN GARDEN CITY, N.Y.

DEAR GRANDMA: The theory that girls "ask for it" by the way they dress is not valid. What's so tempting about a 10-month-old baby wearing a diaper? Or an 85-year-old woman in a housedress?

Rapists are more interested in humiliating and degrading a female than in satisfying themselves sexually. Any female (of any age) will do.

One piece of advice to women on how to dress to protect themselves against rape: Wear shoes you can RUN in.

DEAR ABBY: My mother always has something the matter with her. It's either a "splitting headache," "dizzy spells" or eating something that didn't "agree" with her.

She eats painkillers like you wouldn't believe. If the directions say to take two, she takes four. She buys every kind she can get without a prescription. I've tried to tell her this is dangerous, but she won't listen to me. She reads your column faithfully and thinks you know everything, so maybe you can straighten her out.

I'm not exaggerating, and I'm not a child. I'm a 30-year-old married woman who loves her mother and is worried sick about her. — WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: Tell your mother that Abby said a pain is Nature's signal that something is wrong. And to kill the pain and ignore the warning instead of seeing a physician is not only foolish, it could be fatal.

DEAR ABBY: For five years now, I have been a therapist in a rehabilitation clinic. In my work I see drug addicts, alcoholics, and all kinds of men who can't work due to problems they've brought on themselves. I'm amazed to find that most of them have loyal wives and girlfriends to back them up.

I am a hardworking man of good character with no bad habits, and I'm still alone and single.

Abby, why would a woman ignore a man with my qualifications to stick by a drug addict or alcoholic? Sometimes I wonder if I am on the wrong side of the fence.

Isn't there a place in the social marketplace for a good, hardworking man with no bad habits? — DILEMMA

DEAR DILEMMA: Most women who stick by the kind of men you treat do not see an alcoholic or drug addict; they see a man they love with a drug or alcohol problem. Obviously, those men must have done something to earn such loyalty and devotion.

And yes, there is a place in the social marketplace for a good workingman with no bad habits. Keep looking, but don't compete with your patients.

Want your phone to ring? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Valentino loves fantasy, amusement

Associated Press

Valentino shuns excess and instead designs clothes that are the height of elegance in both line and execution.

For more than 30 years, according to an article in the current issue of Connoisseur, he has excelled in articulating the familiar, particularly forms in wide use in the '50s — the waisted dress, the ball gown, the cape, the jacket.

"I hate excess," Valentino said. "If I make short skirts, I don't make them extra short. If I lengthen the hemline, I don't make it extra long. I love fantasy, I love amusement, but always with control. The feeling I want to get across in the clothes I design is joy."

Valentino Garavani was born in Voghera, Italy, in 1932. He has been designing collections annually since 1960, when he opened his couture house in Rome after 10 years in Paris as a student and an assistant to couturiers Jean Desses and Guy Laroche.

He has been showing ready-to-wear collections in Paris since 1974 and couture collections since 1988.

"I live in Italy: therefore I am an Italian couturier," he said. "But I was formed in Paris. Maybe I have Italian colors in my head but the way I work is more French."

As with any top couturier, his signature is in the cut of his clothes as much as on the label. The shoulders of a Saint Laurent jacket, for example, are so dead-straight they form a long triangle with the waist. Givenchy's shoulders curl up almost imperceptibly in the back, giving a hint of the Orient to his clothes.

Valentino molds the torso like the letter V. The tight-fitting, plunging bodice looks vaguely Elizabethan and is flattering to women of different ages and different physiques.

The V also is Valentino's initial and in the '70s he used it freely.

"All women wanted were Vs, Vs, Vs," he said. "I put them everywhere ... But I don't like it; I never liked it. You should be able to recognize an outfit not because it has the designer's initials on the outside but because of its line and proportions. All that logo stuff belongs to the past."

Valentino does not vary his forms very much from season to season. He has kept the '50s spirit of sunny femininity: the day suit, the day dress, the cocktail suit and dress, the dinner dress, the evening dress, the ball gown, the wedding dress.

His main theme is elegance.

"Elegance is not being overly preoccupied with how you put things together," he said. "You must never do too much. Elegance is making the dress live. People should notice how a lady moves, how she talks, not her dress.

"When we rehearse the collections on the runway, if the dress on a model does not come alive when she walks, then I consider it dead, a failure, and I discard it and start over."

Valentino puts clothes into three groups — classic, theatrical and vulgar.

"Sometimes designers' ideas can do women a big disservice," he said. "For example, they design too young. A woman at 40, 45, is sublime. But she should not dress as if she were 25. Some women can't gracefully accept growing older and they put on these young clothes. They lose their elegance completely. I would put these clothes in the vulgar category."

"You wouldn't wear Valentino to a cabaret," Val Cook, fashion director and vice president of Saks Jandel stores in Washington, D.C., and Chevy Chase, Md., said.

"Saint Laurent is the ultimate in investment clothing. Montana is the most forward; he makes his clothes tomorrow. Chanel makes the traditional 'ladylike' look. But Valentino is elegance personified."

AT WIT'S END

First-day jitters make teachers jump as well

By Erma Bombeck

A few years ago, I wrote about the anxieties of a child entering school for the first time. These concerns ranged from "What if I cry on my name tag and my name disappears, and no one will know who I am?" to, "What if the teacher tells the class to go to the bathroom and I can't go?"

Bombeck

A retired educator from Kansas City, Mo., offers another point of view from the other side of the desk, that of a teacher.

"What if I have a flat tire and I'm late for the very first day of the school year, and the principal has to take my class?

"What if a child's thermos lid is loose and his vegetable noodle soup spills on the rug I just cleaned for the new school year?

"What if I won't let a child go to the bathroom for the fifth time that morning and he wets his pants?

"What if the ditto machine chews up my master copy and I haven't enough time to make another?

"What if the flag is stuck at half-mast and the kids can't take their eyes off it all morning?

"What if I don't make my D's like all 60 parents of the children in my class?

"What if I spend the whole day with recess, playground duty and lunch duty, and I don't get to speak to another adult all day?

"What if a child brings 29 cupcakes as a birthday treat and I have 31 children?

"What if my baby sitter is sick? What shall I do with my son and daughter?

"What if I try to make a child hold still long enough to learn something and his mother says I'm stifling his individuality?

"What if the parents don't want their children in my fifth grade because I am only 10 years older than the kids? Will they say in 30 years that a grandmother is too old for the classroom?

"What if the kid with the loose tooth swallows it?

"What if the buses leave and I have a child left over?

"What if my bra strap breaks just as the principal comes in to observe my teaching?"

Students and teachers have a lot in common. They're both meeting blind dates for the first time. They will see more of one another than they will their respective families or television screens. By next spring, no one will remember the anxieties of the first day of school.

Hot new clothing line is hand-painted

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Take a Cuban-born, Harlem-raised drama major, add a sketcher, painter and assistant film director, and what do you get? A hot new clothing line.

That's not the usual route to fashion success, but it worked for German Valdivia, 32, and his film-and-fashion-fusing partner, Jonathan Meizler, 26.

The pair formed JonValdi, a Los Angeles-based design and manufacturing company housed in a Hollywood loft.

There they hand-paint silk vests, shirts and ties in vivid, bold graphic patterns that are available at Art Trip Tych in West Hollywood, Bullock's in Sherman Oaks and Theodore in the Beverly Center, as well as status stores across the country.

The designs may be familiar to viewers of TV's "thirtysomething," "A Different World" and "Married ... With Children" or to shoppers who may have noticed Arf Art, the company's T-shirt subsidiary.

This fall, the designers plan to introduce women's hand-painted chiffon tops, skirts and dresses that will sell for about $200 to $350.

Their men's shirts aren't cheap — they run from $300 to $400 — but, according to Meizler, they are art. And the young designers are taking their trade more seriously by changing the company name from Arf Art to JonValdi.

"If people are going to buy something for $400," Meizler said, "they don't want to see Arf Art (and the company's dog logo) on the label."

TIDY TRAVELERS: It's August, and grime is coming in double-thick, smog-induced layers. Keeping skin clean is half the battle for a healthy complexion.

The Italian skin-care company Terme di Saturnia offers advice and a $65 International Traveler kit, available at Saks Fifth Avenue.

The free advice:

- Don't rely on hotel soaps and moisturizers because your skin requires a consistent regime, not the disruptions of foreign products.
- Pack your carry-on bag with a toner and a moisturizer to freshen your face and help keep it moist during long, dry airplane rides.
- Bring your facial-mask products because the skin-stressing changes in climate and environment make deep cleansing or moisturizing crucial.
- Be sure to drink six to 10 glasses of water a day to keep you and your skin healthy.

Company markets fragrance for men

N.Y. Times News Service

Anything done well the first time merits a sequel, especially in Hollywood. Max Factor, the company that has been a Hollywood makeup institution since the early days of film, is following the success of its California women's fragrance with California for Men. The cologne will be available nationally in October.

The fragrance also has its very own California guy spokesman — actor Leigh McCloskey, who portrays district attorney Ethan Asher on the daytime soap opera "Santa Barbara."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Bus plunges off mountain road

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A bus plunged off a road in the Himalayan foothills and rolled down a gorge Wednesday, killing 30 people, news agencies said.

Twenty-three other passengers were injured in the crash in Himachal Pradesh state near Rampur, 190 miles north of New Delhi, according to Press Trust of India and United News of India.

The bus was carrying about 70 people when it toppled down the 650-foot deep gorge, Press Trust said.

Bodies found in mine

DOBRNJA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Rescuers on Wednesday started hauling to the surface the bodies of 150 miners killed in the country's worst mining accident. Officials said the death toll could eventually reach 180.

Mining inspectors said too many miners were allowed in the Kreka coal mine shaft at the time of Sunday's blast, although they did not say how many miners should have been allowed.

Inspectors also said mine officials broke regulations by allowing relatives of the miners to work in the mine without being officially assigned there. The mine is located 90 miles west of Belgrade.

Rescuers in recent days found the bodies of 150 miners and started bringing them up early Wednesday with a conveyor system repaired after the blast, according to Bosko Zelic, a member of the mine's managing board.

Rescue teams working in round-the-clock shifts were still trying to clear away rubble blocking access to remote parts of the nine-mile maze of underground corridors, officials said. They also were striving to ventilate all corridors to eliminate the possibility of a new explosion.

Death penalty retained

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Voters have elected to retain the death penalty in Bermuda, according to official results Wednesday.

Nearly 11,000 people turned out Tuesday to vote in the island's first national referendum, which asked whether capital punishment should be abolished.

Almost 79 percent voted to retain the death penalty for premeditated murder. The result is not binding on the Bermuda government.

The ballot asked voters just one question: whether they were in favor or against retention of the penalty. Abolitionists opposed the referendum's style, saying voters should also have been asked if they support life imprisonment without parole for first-degree murder.

The last time the North Atlantic island's gallows were used was on Dec. 2, 1977, when murderers Larry Tacklyn and Buck Burrows were put to death.

The double hanging sparked civil unrest across the British colony. British troops were called in to restore order.

Protesters dispersed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police used birdshot, batons and tear gas Wednesday to disperse student marches against fighting in black townships. Three blacks died in new violence, raising the toll to 518 in less than three weeks.

Also Wednesday, delegations linked to the African National Congress and the conservative Inkatha movement met in Natal Province to discuss the violence, according to news reports.

The independent South Africa Press Association reported a member of the ANC's national executive committee, Jacob Zuma, took part.

Inkatha, who are supported by the Zulus, have been at war with ANC-affiliated groups since the mid-1980s in Natal. Battles erupted in the townships around Johannesburg on Aug. 12.

Low-level delegations from Inkatha and the ANC have met previously, but ANC leaders have refused to meet Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi. They contend Inkatha spread the conflict to the Johannesburg area this month to broaden its constituency. Inkatha accuses the ANC of terrorizing other black opposition groups to try to consolidate power.

Big Ben's bell back

LONDON (AP) — Big Ben's bell is back in business, tolling the hours as it has done for 131 years.

The famous, booming tone of the 13½-ton bell resumed at 10 p.m. Tuesday for the first time since March 26, the Department of the Environment said.

Inspectors found earlier this year that the hammer which strikes the bell was suffering metal fatigue, so repairs were made.

Big Ben, named after Sir Benjamin Hall, a government works commissioner, first sounded May 31, 1859. It is normally silenced twice a year when the hands of the four-faced clock are moved foward in the spring for daylight savings time and back again in the fall.

Big Ben properly is the name of the bell, but it has become the nickname for the entire 20-story tower of the Houses of Parliament.

IRA reviews ordered

LONDON (AP) — Citing new questions about police evidence, the government today ordered the Court of Appeal to review the convictions of six Irishmen serving life sentences for bombings that killed 21 people.

It was a victory for the so-called Birmingham Six in a prolonged campaign to prove they were unjustly convicted of the 1974 Irish Republican Army bombings.

The Home Office said apparent discrepancies were found in police notes of an interview with one of the convicts, Richard McIlkenny. Scientific tests indicated that some pages were written at different times, it said.

Home Secretary David Waddington, the Cabinet minister responsible for law enforcement, ordered all six convictions referred to the Court of Appeal, according to a Home Office statement.

Unification treaties to be signed

Documents would join Germanies despite remaining differences

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's government said Wednesday the two Germanys will likely sign within two days a treaty providing the formal basis for unification, although differences remain over abortion.

In East Germany, an estimated 90,000 public employees in at least 20 cities held a second day of warning strikes over fears their jobs will be endangered by unification with West Germany.

About 10,000 nurses, garbagemen, bus drivers and others stopped working for two hours in East Berlin.

Strikes of up to two hours were also reported in Erfurt, Potsdam, Leipzig, Gera and several other cities. Fire trucks and garbage trucks blocked several streets, and the airport in Leipzig was temporarily closed.

In Bonn, West Germany's capital, Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble said a treaty to serve as the document formally merging the nations on Oct. 3 and meshing their laws is near approval.

Closed-door talks among government and opposition officials continued into the night in an effort to clear up the remaining difficulties. But Schaeuble said no difficulties were expected in getting the approval of all sides.

Parties within Kohl's coalition had already signaled they would yield to the opposition Social Democrats' insistence no West German women be prosecuted for seeking abortions in East Germany after unity.

The left-of-center Social Democrats had threatened to veto the treaty over that issue.

But late Wednesday another disagreement arose in the abortion dispute — how long after unity the two Germanys would keep their widely differing abortion laws.

East Germany's abortion law is far more permissive than West Germany's.

The major political parties had already agreed the two Germanys should keep their respective abortion laws for an interim two-year period until an all-German parliament can choose abortion statutes for a united Germany.

But the Social Democrats insisted Wednesday night that there should be a three-year extension if the all-German parliament fails to agree on a new abortion law. Lawmakers from Kohl's coalition said the more restrictive West German abortion regulations should automatically extend to what is now East Germany at the end of two years.

Earlier Wednesday, Schaeuble expressed confidence that all major obstacles to the treaty would be worked out.

Schaeuble also said Kohl's government and West Germany's 11 states agreed that Oct. 3, the chosen date of unity, will be written into the treaty as an all-German national holiday.

The interior minister told reporters the treaty will likely be signed Friday in West Berlin at a ceremony in the Reichstag, the former Parliament and one of Germany's most important landmarks, "if everything goes according to my own desires."

He said the two German governments will hold one final round of negotiations on the treaty Thursday.

Schaeuble made the remarks after Kohl met with governors of the 11 West German states, most of whom belong to the opposition Social Democrat Party.

The conservative chancellor needs a two-thirds parliamentary majority to ratify the treaty and thus the support of the Social Democrats, the second-largest party in West Germany.

The Social Democrats had given Kohl until Wednesday to reverse his earlier decision on abortion. During the past two days, he had given strong signals he would do so rather than jeopardize the treaty.

Approval of the treaty was not essential for unification.

Eight freed in Mexico as cult case collapses

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A district judge has released eight Indians accused of participating in a drug cult that allegedly killed about 30 people, a lawyer for a government advocacy group said Wednesday.

The action by Judge Jose Cuevas Zavala in Tepic, 400 miles northwest of Mexico City, represents another blow to the spectacular case launched by federal police in July.

In comments to reporters last month, the judge ridiculed police allegations that the Indians had killed about 30 people in satanic rituals.

Prosecutors in neighboring Durango state, where the killings allegedly occurred, refused to press charges in connection with the alleged deaths.

No human remains were found, and senior church officials in the area denied the existence of a satanic cult.

The National Indian Institute, a government organization to protect Indians, joined the case to help Tepehuano Indian defendants it said were being mistreated by police.

The Institute attorney, Carlos Puga Quiroga, said the judge on Tuesday ordered the eight released on their own recognizance. They still face the only charges filed against them — cultivating marijuana in their remote villages.

In addition, Puga said five minors held in the case have been cleared of any charges and will be released to their parents.

Only one man, Olayo Soto Soto, remains imprisoned in the case. Puga said Soto is accused of owning the land on which police found a small marijuana patch, while the others were accused only of helping cultivate the crop.

In July, federal police in Tepic claimed Soto was the chief sorcerer of a cult that worshipped an idol called "El Amigo," or "The Friend," that had sacrificed 30 or more people to gain protection for their drug activities.

Members of the group initially confessed to the allegations during police questioning. But they recanted before the judge, saying the confessions had been beaten out of them.

Soto told reporters he is a traditional Indian healer, but he denied practicing any sorcery. The Institute also has appealed for his release.

In an earlier drug-cult case, police in April 1989 found 15 bodies buried on a ranch near the northern city of Matamoros across the U.S.-Mexico border from Brownsville, Texas. Among those slain 21-year-old University of Texas student Mark Kilroy.

Police claimed those victims were slain by drug smugglers who believed human sacrifices would protect them from police.

Group leader Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo and his bodyguard died of gunshot wounds as police closed in on them in a Mexico City apartment in May 1989.

CLICK and CLACK TALK CARS

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI

HORSE SENSE ABOUT HORSE SIZE

Dear Tom and Ray:

A few weeks ago, you were talking about how large cars are inherently safer than small cars because of their weight. You posed the question, "How'd you like to come out the loser in a head-on collision with a horse?" I'm afraid you have an exaggerated idea of what a horse weighs! A thoroughbred weighs between 1,000 and 1,300 pounds. Even a Clydesdale weighs only 1,500 to 2,000 pounds. How can you compare this to the weight of a car? — Nancy

TOM: First of all, everyone knows that thoroughbreds stay on the tracks and off the highways — it's the Clydesdales you have to worry about. Moreover, our comparisons were based on the mother-in-law class of Clydesdale, which always weigh in at right around 2,000 pounds.

RAY: Actually, there are several cars that weigh less than a large horse. The Geo Metro weighs 1,600 pounds, the Ford Festiva weighs 1,700 pounds, and the Honda CRX weighs only 1,800 pounds — all in the sub-Clydesdale class.

TOM: So we stand by our remarks. We still wouldn't want to have a head-on collision with a Clydesdale in one of these cars. Of course, now that I think about it, the good thing about Clydesdales is that they ARE tall. So if you do find yourself in such a predicament, just tuck in the mirrors, close the sunroof, yell "spread 'em," and see if you can split the uprights!

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a 1981 Subaru. It's the bottom-of-the-line model and has 125,000 miles on it. I'm writing to you because I always try and get a good idea of what's wrong before I waste my time going to a repair shop. This saves me a lot of time and money. Anyway, the car starts and runs fine. But after about five or 10 minutes, the heat coming out of the vents turns cold. Then, five to 10 minutes later, the air turns hot again! This keeps up no matter how long I drive around. What do you think? — Stuart

RAY: Stuart, there's a famous Click-and-Clack axiom that says, "It's the stingy person who spends the most." I want you to practice writing that a thousand times.

TOM: The reason my brother is saying that is because you have a very simple problem that you could turn into a very expensive problem by trying to save money and delaying the repair.

RAY: Your problem is that you don't have enough coolant. When the engine coolant is low, the heating system is the first thing to be deprived. If you're lucky, some additional coolant is all you need.

TOM: However, since you've been such a cheapskate (and we know you're a cheapskate 'cause you bought a bare-bones Subaru), you've been driving around all this time with insufficient coolant, which could easily lead to overheating. Engines with aluminum heads — like the one in your Subaru — don't take well to overheating. If you overheat the engine, you can easily blow a head gasket and/or warp the head.

RAY: If that happens, you're going to be out anywhere from $400 to $1,000 instead of $8.95 for a gallon of antifreeze. So go out and add some coolant, cross your fingers and start writing: It's the stingy person who spends the most. It's the stingy person who spends the most. It's the stingy person ...
