Lo-Vaca rate order overturned

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A 1973 Texas Railroad Commission interim rate order that allowed Coastal States Gas Corp. and Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. to charge 10 times the contractual amount for natural gas has been overturned.

The commission Monday ordered the firms to refund $1 billion to customers from whom the money was collected under the old order.

In Houston, Coastal States said in a statement that the order would be appealed.

Commissioner Jon Newton said to excuse the two companies from the terms of the long-term contracts signed over a decade ago "would encourage every utility in this state to

Israeli delegation reaches Cairo

By ELIAS ANTAR

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Israel's delegates to the preparatory Egyptian-Israeli peace talks arrived in Cairo today aboard an Israeli jetliner carrying the inscription "Peace" in Arabic and Hebrew. They were followed by American and U.N. representatives.

The three Israeli delegates, their staff of 27, and 35 journalists flew here on an El Al Boeing 707 flying the Egyptian and Israeli flags from the cockpit windows. Written on one side of the fuselage was the Arabic, Salaam; on the other the Hebrew, Shalom.

"We hope that at the next stage the delegations of other Arab counties will participate in the direct negotiations," said the chief Israeli delegate, Eliahu Ben-Elissar, as he left Tel Aviv.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance arrived in Damascus to try to persuade Syrian President Hafez Assad to soften his opposition to Egypt's peace overtures and participate in the Cairo conference. Vance flew to the Syrian capital from Beirut as he continued his six-nation tour of the Middle East.

In another development, Saudi Arabia radio reported that Jordan's King Hussein, who has been trying to heal the Arab split over Egypt's conciliation with Israel, will visit Saudi Arabia next Saturday to confer with King Khaled. Vance also plans to visit oil-rich Saudi Arabia, the chief bankroller of both Egypt and Syria.

In Cairo, armed troops surrounded the runway where the Israeli plane landed, and about 30 Egyptian airport workers stood around to watch it touch down.

The door opened and Maj. Gen. Avraham Tamir, the Israeli military delegate, appeared.

"The Israelis have come! They have come!" one of the workers shouted.

"Let's hope they do something about peace," said another.

In the cockpit of the plane were three former Israeli air force men who were shot down over Egypt.

The delegation was greeted in the chill morning air by Ambassador Said Hamza, Egypt's chief of protocol.

No Israeli flags were flying, and there was no band.

The Israelis walked to a waiting helicopter that flew them to the Mena House, the historic old hotel at the foot of the Great Pyramid of Cheops, where the conference President Anwar Sadat has called to make preparations for a Geneva peace conference opens Wednesday.

Meir Rosenne, legal advisor to the Israeli Foreign Ministry, is the third member of the delegation.

The Israelis were met in the lobby of the hotel by A. Esmat Abdel Meguid, Egypt's ambassador to the United Nations and the head of the Egyptian delegation for the talks, and the local governor, Abdel Akher.

The other members of the Egyptian delegation are Osama El Baz, a Foreign Ministry undersecretary, and Gen. Taha El Magdoub.

U.S.-Japan talks on trade surplus still inconclusive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Japan are apparently still far apart on what to do about a Japanese trade surplus that has forced plant shutdowns and layoffs in many U.S. industries.

The top American trade negotiator, Robert Strauss, said after talks Monday that Japan's initial proposals involving tariff cuts on a number of goods imported into that country fall "considerably short" of U.S. demands.

Japan's minister for external economic affairs, Nobuhiko Ushiba, met with Strauss, Vice President Walter Mondale and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

He had further meetings scheduled with Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Japan's worldwide exports this year are expected to top imports by $16 billion. About half of that is attributable to its trade with the United States.

The Carter administration maintains that Japan's big surplus is aggravating economic problems for its trading partners, most of which are already burdened with high import bills, especially for petroleum.

The influx of Japanese goods into the United States, without any compensating outflow of American products, has severely affected a number of industries, including televison and steel.

Strauss said the United States is "looking for trade measures that will have an immediate effect."

He said the United States would like to see Japan slash tariffs for a wide range of U.S. goods, including autos, televisions, computers and farm products.

Japan, arguing it should not be penalized for hard work and efficiency, is resisting U.S. demands to alter its trade policies.

Strauss left open the possibility that Ushiba may be willing to make concessions as the talks continue.

U.S. officials who briefed newsmen Monday night said the United States has not threatened Japan with retaliatory action if the American demands are not met.

German espionage penetration disclosed

The Los Angeles Times

BONN — The West German coalition government, which recently regained substantial political standing through its firm handling of terrorist attacks, was embarrassed Monday by disclosures of a new, major Communist-directed espionage penetration of its Defense Ministry.

Following disclosures by the respected, conservative national newspaper, Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, a Defense Ministry spokesman admitted that the case concerning information stolen by three East German spies arrested last year was "exceptionally serious."

Leaders of the opposition party in parliament, the Christian Democratic Union, said that the new case made the crime of Guenther Guillaume, an East German agent who was personal assistant to former Chancellor Willy Brandt "look as harmless as an orphan boy."

The exposure of Guillaume, who is now serving a 13-year jail term, forced Brandt to resign as chancellor in 1974 to be succeeded by Helmut Schmidt. Both are members of the Social Democratic Party which governs Germany in coalition with the small Free Democratic Party.

The Bundestag (parliament) Defense Committee announced that Defense Minister Georg Leber had been asked to appear Wednesday to explain how the three accused spies had been able to penetrate the agency's security system and steal documents vital to German defense and to NATO.

Officials at NATO headquarters in Brussels confirmed that they had been informed about the German case and acknowledged that the spies had sent valuable information to the East.

"They (the Communists) know where we think they are weak and where we think they are strong," a spokesman said. "And they know where we think we are weak and where we think we are strong.

"NATO is evaluating the extent of the damage done by the material compromised."

According to the Frankfurt newspaper report, which quoted from a preliminary report by the federal prosecutor, the three accused spies are a husband and wife, Lothar-Erwin and Renate Lutze, and Juergen Wiegel.

Mrs. Lutze was the key factor as secretary for four years to Herbert Laabs, chief of the Defense Ministry

Players 'jazz it up' at monthly sessions

And it would be an even more rare nickelodeon that would spin Basin Street jazz and swing-era tunes in these days of soft rock 'n' roll, country music and other pop stuff.

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

And even rarer, it seems, would be a real live jam session that knocks out those numbers that once lit up juke boxes across the nation's dance floors and in roadside and uptown cafes.

Well, right here in the middle of West Texas are some musicians who like to "jazz it up" at least once a month. They get together afternoons on the second Sunday of each month at The Sans Souci tavern just west of downtown Midland.

These fellows play the likes of "A

Small mine owner fears inspections

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Ted Spewock hit the sign that hangs on the entrance to the Clark Hollow Mine with his open palm. It reads: "Private Property."

"See this here," he said, pointing to the sign. "When the federal inspectors come, I ask them if they have anything invested in this place. Then I tell them to get the hell out of here and not keep a man from his work."

Spewock, 56, is afraid federal safety regulations may close his coal mine, so he keeps the inspectors out. His mine has not been inspected for three years.

He stooped into the mine's four-foot shaft to fetch Smokey, the 15-year-old pony that helps him draw three loads of coal daily from the one-man mine.

"If they try to shut me down it will be over my dead body.

"This isn't my dream to be operating here by myself," he said, unbuckling the horse's harness. "I want to get that straight. I gotta support my family."

The output of Spewock's mine is so small that even before the nationwide United Mine Workers strike, he could not meet the demands of local consumers. It is just enough for him to eke out a living.

Spewock opened his southwestern Pennsylvania mine 17 years ago. He has been working alone since 1970, a year after Congress approved the federal Coal Mine and Safety Act.

The law, enacted after 78 people died in a 1968 mine explosion near Mannington, W.Va., required strict safety measures too expensive for many small mine operators.

Before the law passed, Spewock had two employees shoveling the coal he cut. They

By JIM STEINBERG

At a meeting perhaps most notable for the fact that all board members were there, Midland Community Action Agency staff member Dennis Allen said Monday the final stretch of the grant application for a Family Crises Center providing an outreach counseling and referral service for Midland's poor, elderly, and handicapped is at hand.

On Wednesday, Allen and MCAA Executive Director Alexandra Morris will ask the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Board of Directors for a "favorable review and comment" on the agency's plan and proposed funding totaling $77,003.

After the Monday meeting, Allen said the Family Crises Center as proposed appears to be the only one like it in the country. Not only will it provide needed counseling to a segment of Midland County's population that has been untouched by other county help services, but the Family Crises Center concept will also provide professional training for counselors from minority groups through an internship program at UTPB.

Allen described a counseling outreach program, as one where the counselors move to where the problem is, "rather than sitting in an office waiting for people to come in." The availability of the services will not be limited by an 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. schedule, Allen stressed, adding that he expected it would provide night and eventually Saturday counseling services.

The service will zero in on needs in designated poverty areas in Midland, Allen said, adding that special emphasis would be given to the needs of the elderly.

"The main focus of the counseling activities will be on the resolution of psychological and social adjustment problems, marital conflicts and parent-child relationships," Allen said.

In addition to the counseling services the Family Crises Center will provide for client needs for information about existing agency services, transportation to those agencies and the referral of clients to existing agencies, Allen said, adding that the proposal does not duplicate any service currently operating.

"If anything, it will increase the load on existing agencies, rather than pull away from them," Allen said, explaining that the center would refer persons to agencies which otherwise would not have known about them. Estimates are that the grant would benefit approximately 1,387 people in Midland, Allen said.

There is a shortage of skilled professional counselors who are minority group members in this area, and by training those counselors here, the chances are good that at least some of them will stay, Allen said.

The proposed funding for the Family Crises Center is divided between a $54,481 grant from the Community Service Agency and a $22,522 from UTPB, Allen said.

MCAA staff member Albert Jones told the board that so far 30 applications have been received for the agency-run weatherization program. Under that program, up to $250 worth of insulation can be added to a house provided the occupants meet poverty guidelines.

Jones said that as soon as funds have been received, "We are ready to get rolling."

Board members agreed with a suggestion by Mrs. Morris that thought should be given to finding a new name for the agency, to disassociate it with the "stigma" of the past.

Midland temperatures seem to be warming up

Temperatures in Midland seem to be warming up a little after the cold weather the city had earlier this month.

The weatherman said Wednesday's high temperature should be in the 70s, and the low temperature tonight should fall to the middle 30s. Skies are expected to be mostly fair through Wednesday. Northerly winds should decrease to 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Monday's high temperature was 75 degrees. The overnight low temperature was 42 degrees, the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

All area towns reported rather cold temperatures this morning with clear skies overhead.

The front triggered shower activity in Central and East Texas, but most of the rainfall was light.

Skies early today were mostly cloudy east of a line from San Angelo to Wichita Falls and generally fair west of the line. Some fog and drizzle was reported along the Gulf coast.

Early morning temperature extremes ranged from 37 at Dalhart in the Panhandle to 69 at Brownsville, Victoria and Corpus Christi.

Commissioners table court at law proposal

By LINDA HILL SCHAFFRINA

Midland County commissioners Monday tabled until January a proposal to create a county court at law.

The court at law would be in addition to the existing county court and would have the same jurisdiction, except that it could consider civil cases involving up to $5,000, instead of the $1,000 limit set for the county court.

The proposal was tabled at the request of Commissioner Durward Wright who said he wants to have information about how the new court would affect the other county departments, such as the county clerk's office.

County Judge Barbara Culver, County Attorney Leslie Acker and representatives from the Midland Bar Association and Young Lawyers Association urged the commissioners to activate the court in January, as is allowed under legislation passed in 1977.

Acker presented reports to the commissioners showing 558 criminal cases and 1,858 civil cases pending at the end of November in Midland's district courts.

In county court, 538 cases were pending at the end of November, according to the county clerk's monthly report.

All those speaking in favor of immediate creation of the court cited the Speedy Trial Act as one reason for quick action. That law will require both district and county courts to try criminal cases within a specified amount of time.

They also cited increasing case loads for all the courts.

If the commissioners do not act, the court will come into existence in 1980.

County Clerk Rosenell Cherry told the Commissioners Court she has been notified by the state secretary of state's office that the county court at law will have to appear on the 1978 ballot, even if no action is taken.

In another election matter, Judge Culver told commissioners the court needs to consider the impact of a recent attorney general's opinion reiterating that each county must have four peace justice precincts.

The secretary of state has ruled that each precinct must appear on the ballot, she said.

Midland County has four peace justice precincts, but three are small tracts of land with no population.

There was no discussion among the commissioners on that subject. Commissioner Charlie Welch earlier had proposed redefining peace justice precinct boundaries so that a peace justice and constable would be assigned to the Greenwood community.

Welch said Monday he did not bring up that proposal because more information needs to be gathered in light of the attorney general's opinion.

That land could be used for future parking needs or expansion of office space.

The land currently is being used as a private parking lot. Wright said the tenants would be notified about where to send the January parking fees, but continued private use of the lot would be on a temporary basis.

In other action, the commissioners approved an agreement with the city of Midland for the county to pay $10,000, retroactive to June 1, for a year's ambulance service outside the city limits. That amount is the same as the county paid last year.

seek relief from their contractual obligations."

"The commission should not place itself in the position of rewarding a public utility which pursues profits at any cost in deliberate disregard of its contractual and public utility obligations," Newton said.

President William Greehey of Lo-Vaca said the company did not have the money to make such a huge refund.

The commission's order said the interim order will remain in effect pending litigation on the action.

Newton, who proposed the commission order, said the Coastal-Lo-Vaca problem arose because Lo-Vaca had sought short-term profits by using up low-cost gas on sales "whenever and wherever possible."

The order carried 2-1, with chairman Mack Wallace joining Newton, and Jim Langdon dissenting.

Langdon sought to delay the vote. He and Greehey predicted the order would bankrupt Lo-Vaca, and Greehey questioned what the order might do to Lo-Vaca's gas supplies with the "dead of winter" approaching.

Langdon said the order might produce an "almost horror story" in the social and ecomomic life of South Texas.

Newton countered by saying Lo-Vaca has an excess of gas and added, "No lights are going out" as a result of the order.

"It would be preposterous for the commission to relieve Coastal-Lo-Vaca from its contractual obligations, to give them complete absolution for their sins of utility mismanagement," Newton said.

Lo-Vaca has some 400 customers, including Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and the Lower Colorado River Authority. Newton said those cities, as well as Dallas and Fort Worth, supported his proposal.

In adopting the order the commission wiped out an 1973 interim order that had allowed Lo-Vaca to charge for gas whatever it had to pay producers, plus an extra five cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf).

The 1973 order was adopted after Lo-Vaca curtailed gas deliveries by up to 50 percent in 1972-73, claiming it could no longer operate under its decade-old long-term contracts, which charged approximately 20 cents per mcf.

Leber, a Social Democratic Party member and former trade union official who succeeded Schmidt as defense minister in 1972, has often been under political pressure, especially last year when he fired two top-ranking air force generals for associating with an ex-Nazi and earlier this year when he replaced a top civilian official with a retired general.

House panel members agree on 'first step'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members of a congressional conference committee have agreed to make the first move toward compromise in a week-old deadlock on the critical natural gas section of President Carter's energy plan.

The plan, to be offered today, would be the first substantive compromise proposal since the sharply divided conferees began talking about natural gas pricing.

Meanwhile today, Vice President Walter F. Mondale held out the possibility that an agreement might be reached on the energy plan before the end of the year, with final congressional approval early in 1978.

Mondale said "there is a chance yet" that an agreement could be reached so that members of Congress returning in January from the Christmas recess could complete work on the legislation.

He told reporters at a breakfast interview that his optimism was based on a report he received Monday night from Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, but he gave no details.

The vice president said if an agreement can be reached on the remaining controversial issues, House and Senate staff members could prepare the final drafts of the report to be issued by the House-Senate conference committees working on the measures.

If such a resolution is achieved, he said, "we will have accomplished clearing the major remaining hurdle."

On Monday, Rex Granum, a deputy White House press secretary, said congressional leaders who predicted that the energy measures would not be enacted this year were merely stating the obvious. He said Carter was "increasingly concerned" about the chances for simply obtaining agreements on the bills.

Sources said House Democrats agreed to offer a proposal that would fall far short of lifting federal price controls on natural gas, a policy included in the Senate version of the energy bill.

They are willing to abandon a provision in the Carter administration plan approved by the House that would permit the federal government to allocate natural gas produced and intended for consumption in the same state.

If the federal Energy Department were given such allocation authority, industrial users in Texas and Louisiana might lose gas to consumers in Ohio or Pennsylvania.

Gas produced and consumed in the same state is currently under no federal price controls, and the House and Senate are in disagreement over whether regulation should be extended to such reserves.

In an effort at initial compromise on that issue, sources say, the House conferees will propose that when gas contracts are expired and renewed in the higher-priced intrastate market, producers will be guaranteed against major profit losses if federal controls with lower prices have been imposed.

Two injured in truck crash

BIG SPRING — Two Hobbs, N.M., men were in satisfactory condition this morning in the intensive care unit of Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring after the gravel truck in which they were traveling struck a parked hay truck on State Highway 176 Monday morning.

Elias Maldondo Jr., 22, of Hobbs was driving the truck, and his brother, Raul Maldondo, 18, was a passenger, the Department of Public Safety said. Both received head injuries and severe facial cuts. They were trapped inside the cab of the truck for nearly an hour, according to DPS reports.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Wade Turner of Stanton.

15-year-old Midlander dies

A Midland youth died Monday of injuries suffered in a truck-motorcycle accident two miles south of Midland on Dec. 3.

Thomas Roger Starr, 15, of Rt. 3, died about 1:10 p.m. Monday of injuries received in the accident, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokesman said.

Starr suffered head and chest injuries, according to the Department of Public Safety, when the motorcycle he was driving and a pickup truck driven by Francisco DeLeon of Fort Stockton collided.

Both vehicles were northbound on Texas 349 when the accident occurred Dec. 3.

Players 'jazz it up' at monthly sessions

Train," "Who's Sorry Now," "Sentimental Journey," "Satin Doll," "Shanty Town," and other numbers a generation or more into the past.

This last Sunday, about 10 jazz artists got together at Lee and Alice Johnson's dinner club. These Sunday jazz men may be a priest or a pipeliner on the piano, a lawyer on the trombone or a businessman on the saxophone.

"I just hack around," Carper said, after he took leave of the trumpet. "I just like to play."

That was obvious. He looked happy up there — standing to the side of Dr. Clyde Vedder, who was putting some wear into the upright piano. Vedder teaches criminology at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Carvel Mills was contentedly playing the sax. He would wait until it was all over before getting too tired to play.

Playing with that same untiring enthusiasm was Vern Martin, the state district attorney for Midland County. His wife Zella seemed to be listening to the sounds as intensely as as her spouse was playing.

"I enjoy it," she said. "Vern's happy when he's playing." That, too, was obvious.

It was good sound.

The jam session was put together a year or more ago by jazz aficionado Max Howard and trombonist Martin.

And all you other jazz devotees, whether you are musician or listener, may drop by The Sans Souci next month for a three-hour afternoon jam session.

It'll be worth the time, all you fans of the Dorsey brothers, Duke Ellington, Glenn Miller, Woody Herman and the other swing-era and jazz greats.

It sure beats playing the juke box.

Annual yule party tonight

Members of the Downtown Rotary Club and their Rotary-Anns will hold their annual Christmas party tonight, with girl residents and adult personnel of High Sky Girls Ranch as their special guests.

The function is scheduled in the Midland Hiiton. A social period is scheduled at 6 p.m., with dinner to be served at 7.

A special program of entertainment will be presented.

R. O. Smith, club secretary, said the club's regular Thursday luncheon will not be held this week.

Midland man 'satisfactory'

A Midland man was in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital after a two-car traffic accident at Garfield Street and Golf Course Road Monday afternoon.

Charles Edward Scoggins of the 4700 block of West Illinois Avenue was in satisfactory condition with a broken leg, a hospital spokesman said. A passenger in the car Scoggins was driving, Mark Torrence of the 100 block of South Eisenhower Street, was treated and released.

Police said Scoggins was westbound on Golf Course Road and a vehicle driven by Joyce Rosenbaum Smith of the 400 block of Ainslee Street was eastbound on Golf Course attempting to turn north on Garfield when the two cars collided.

Scoggins and Torrence were thrown through the air when the cars collided, and Scoggins landed 15 feet from the point of impact, police said.

Miner fears inspections produced about 12 tons of coal a day — worth more than $600 at today's prices. The mine safety act forced Spewock to let his employees go. He now digs about two tons a day.

"The big companies didn't want the small operator in business," Spewock said. "It's a pity. If it wasn't for that damn law I could keep a couple guys busy."

Now he fears federal inspectors will force him to shut the mine altogether.

Hormone DES may increase cancer risk

WASHINGTON (AP) — DES, a drug taken by about two million expectant mothers to avoid miscarriages, may increase the risk of fatal cancers, especally of the breast, new evidence indicates.

That suggestion comes 6½ years after findings that about 200 daughters of women who took the drug in the early 1950s developed vaginal and cervical cancer.

Two years ago, researchers also found that thousands of sons of DES mothers suffered lowered sperm counts and other birth defects of the reproductive tract.

Follow-up checks on the women...also showed that 31 of 693 DES patients developed breast cancer to only 17 of 668 in non-DES women. Among those patients, 12 DES users died.

The latest evidence was revealed Monday when Dr. Sydney M. Wolfe, director of the Ralph Nader-financed Health Research Group, wrote a letter to Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano asking that doctors alert their DES patients of the possible cancer hazard.

DES is a hormone that was widely prescribed until the early 1970s for its presumed antimiscarriage benefits.

But Wolfe says research done by the University of Chicago over a 20-month period ending in November, 1952, showed the drug didn't significantly lower the incidence of miscarriages.

That research did not stop almost automatic prescription of DES by some doctors for their pregnant patients, he said.

Follow-up checks on the women involved in the Chicago research also showed that 31 of 693 DES patients developed breast cancer compared to only 17 of 668 in non-DES women.

Among those patients, 12 DES users died. Only four of the control-group cancers were fatal.

"These preliminary findings strongly suggest that there is an increased amount of endocrin-related cancer, especially breast cancer, in DES mothers," Wolfe wrote in his letter to Califano.

Wolfe suggested more study of the drug, with financing coming from the profits of the drug's makers.

The drug also is used as an morning-after birth control pill, a practice Wolfe said should be abandoned except in cases of rape and incest.

Dr. John C. Bailer, editor of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, called the cancers in DES mothers "killers." He said the frequency of death indicated the drug might trigger cancers that are less treatable.

In addition to use as an antimiscarriage drug and for morning-after birth control, similar synthetic estrogen products are used for treatment of postmenopausal women and as a food additive for cattle.

In other action relating to substances suspected of causing cancers, the Food and Drug Administration has announced a ban on five dyes used in soaps, lipsticks and other cosmetics.

None of the five had been approved for use in food. The ban takes effect today.

A sixth dye, Blue No. 6, which also had been used in the same cosmetics as the others, was ordered banned for all uses except as a color identifying surgical sutures. The FDA said manufacturers of the product had failed to submit required data proving the blue dye safe for non-surgical purposes.

Formula hurts Texas in getting HUD funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of dollars in federal housing and urban development aid are going to cities in the North and Midwest — and not to Texas — because of a new distribution formula written by Congress this year.

Figures recently compiled by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, while still undergoing revision, show how the new formula hurts Texas by weighting factors that favor older, decaying cities.

Pennsylvania, with a population of 11.8 million, is receiving $232 million under the program this year. Texas, with a population of 12.2 million, is getting less money — $188 million.

The disparity could lead to bitter regional fights in Congress during the next few years, said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in a recent statement aimed at the northern and Midwestern congressmen who dominate the committees that write urban legislation.

"We have had enough of regionalism. We see what you are up to and we do not like it. In a few years, we will be a majority in Congress (because of rising population in the South and West). We are prepared to fight if need be, but we would prefer to seek a truce that will encourage nationalism rather than regionalism," he said.

The old formula allocated money on the basis of population and poverty. The new formula also gives weight to factors such as the percentage of a city's houses built before 1939 and whether the city is losing population.

The new formula tends to divert money away from cities like Houston and Dallas, which have grown rapidly since World War II.

The total at stake is large: $1.6 billion in the current fiscal year and $2.3 billion in fiscal 1979 and fiscal 1980. The money can be used, at the discretion of local governments, to support a variety of community development projects.

Houston and Detroit, for example, have populations of about 1.3 million. This year, Detroit gets $56.6 million and Houston $23.5 million. Cleveland, with a population of 638,000, gets $34 million; Dallas, population 822,000, gets $15 million.

Smaller cities receive similar treatment. Allentown, Pa., a steel manufacturing center with a population of 106,000, is getting $2.8 million. Abilene, Texas, with a population of 96,000, $1.58 million.

Ruling gives OK on Hughes trial

HOUSTON — (AP) Texas Attorney General John Hill, who has already introduced more than 300 documents into evidence in the Howard Hughes estate trial, believes the state can finish its presentation within another week or two.

Hill said a U.S. Supreme Court ruling Monday that rejected a California plea to halt the Texas case "is a step forward for us and it's an obstacle we are glad to have behind us."

If a three-man, three-woman jury in the court of Probate Judge Pat Gregory should declare Texas as the legal domicile of the late eccentric millionaire the state could collect more than $100 million in inheritance taxes.

The jury also will determine the validity of the so-called Mormon will. A similiar trial is under way in Las Vegas, Nev.

The state of California had asked the Supreme Court to halt the Houston proceedings, contending the high court should settle the domicile issue.

Hill asked the court not to interfere, saying California and the Hughes heirs were in collusion to stop the Texas trial.

"We are pleased with the Supreme Court hearing and will move forward now with our case. I think it will take another week or two to finish."

Gregory said earlier he would recess the trial from Dec. 16 until Jan. 3 so jurors could have sometime for the Christmas season.

The proceedings, which began a week ago, have consisted mostly of the introduction of various documents, including income tax returns and checks written by Hughes as far back as 1919.

Hughes died in April 1976 while on a flight from Mexico to Houston for medical treatment.

Although the Supreme Court refused to stop the Houston trial, it did not indicate whether it may eventually consider the merits of the dispute between the two states.

Security tight in preparation for Cairo peace talks

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

CAIRO (AP) — Police reinforcements have been called in. Bodyguards and bulletproof limousines have been assigned to delegates. Radicals are under surveillance, and a special security squad has been ordered to keep snipers off the Great Pyramid of Cheops.

Security officials say "everything you can imagine" is being done to protect the Israeli-Egyptian peace talks opening Wednesday from radical Palestinians or other Arab terrorists trying to sabotage Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace drive.

"We haven't heard about any plots inside Egypt to disrupt the conference, but of course there were some threats from outside," said Gen. Baha el Din Ibrahim, a top official of the interior ministry.

Citizens of Syria, Libya, Iraq, Algeria and South Yemen — the five militant Arab opponents of Sadat's peace overtures to Israel — "will have to have a very good reason for coming" to be allowed to enter Egypt during the conference, one official said.

Gen. Ibrahim said 400 to 500 picked officers from Aswan, Alexandria and other cities have been brought to Cairo for special security duty. Leaves and holiday passes have been suspended for thousands of local police for the duration of the talks.

"We have done everything you can imagine," said Ibrahim.

Israel sent an advance party of three security men, and "many more" were assigned to protect the Israeli delegation, Israeli sources said. U.S. State Department security officers were brought in to guard the American delegation, and the filigree wall around the U.S. Embassy was bricked in.

Police officials said 300 officers have been assigned to protect foreign journalists covering the conference.

"They have been assigned for their protection, not to spy on them," said one official. "The journalists, of course, are free to go where they wish."

An early arrival, David Holden, the chief foreign correspondent of the London Sunday Times, was shot to death last week near the airport; but the police say robbery, not politics was apparently the motive.

Gen. Mohammed Amin, in charge of of criminal affairs, said Holden told airport authorities on his arrival that he was a "writer." Had he said he was a journalist, "a man would have been assigned to him," the general said.

Energy projections this winter to rely on NWS forecasts

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's energy planners have decided to trust the National Weather Service's long-range forecasts this winter for energy use projections rather than rely on those of private forecasters.

The vote of confidence in the NWS comes less from an outstanding record for distant predictions — which the service admits it doesn't have — than from uncertainty about how good the private forecasters are, says an Energy Department spokesman.

The weather service says that even if its long-range forecasts aren't always perfect, they are at least as good, if not better, than anyone else's.

Long-range forecasting, meaning predictions for periods a week or more into the future, is just one of many areas in which the NWS is being challenged by private, profit-making forecasters.

Federal forecasters supply basic weather reports and private outfits supplement this for special-interest customers such as oil companies, local governments and some broadcast stations who demand more detail.

NWS spokesmen say the nation is getting its money's worth from the relatively small agency. Part of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the weather service employs only about 5,100 persons and has a yearly budget of less than $200 million.

"We figure we are the second most-used government agency, after the Postal Service," says Earl W. Estelle, chief of the NWS public services branch. "But we are very small in number by comparison."

The NWS Long Range Prediction Group also is small compared with its responsibility of predicting future weather, critically important to agriculture, energy planning and almost every segment of the economy.

Dr. Donald L. Gilman and his staff of six do 30-day temperature and precipitation outlooks and 90-day seasonal temperature forecasts basically by charting upper-level wind patterns.

Gilman says his group uses several methods to interpret the patterns. These include checking back through 30 years of file charts to look for similar movements, using mathematical equations and computers and looking at old temperature probability charts going back to the year 1900.

Board adds four members

The Midland College Foundation recently added four members to its original group of nine members.

The new members are Tom Brown, president of Tom Brown, Inc.; Clarence Scharbauer III, who is involved in ranching and investments; Donald O'Shaughnessy, president of Lario Oil & Gas, and Ralph Way, an oil operator.

These new members will contribute their services to the foundation, which is making the difference between Midland College being a good school and a great one, college President Al G. Langford said.

"The members of the foundation have given us invaluable assistance and guidance that have contributed beyond measure to the growth and stature of Midland College during its first nine years. And their work will help us achieve the goal of becoming the finest comprehensive community college in Texas and then in the nation," Langford said.

A little-noticed group of Midlanders, the foundation members have administered funding for landscaping the new campus, scholarship contributions, equipment and construction.

Organized soon after the college came into being, the foundation is recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as a non-profit, tax-exempt organization, chartered to accept gifts of money, stocks, real estate, bonds or other items of value for the college's benefit.

Mrs. J. Howard Hodge, president of Hodge Theatres, is serving as the foundation's president. J. Harvey Herd, oil operator, is vice president, and Murry Fasken, board chairman Midland National Bank, is secretary-treasurer.

When the original seven buildings on the new campus were designed, rapidly-increasing construction costs caused the administration to consider eliminating some aspects of the structures. But the foundation stepped in with sufficient funds to enable the original campus design to be carried through. It has funded much of the landscaping work, so all the campus could be landscaped at once, and has provided funding for an underground sprinkler system.

Contributions to the college come in pledges for certain programs, usually in the form of cash gifts, for academic or athletic scholarships or to provide equipment for specific programs.

They also may come in the form of unrestricted gifts, which may be used for any purpose by the foundation. Some gifts are made for specific campus beautification or enrichment projects.

A number of gifts have been made in honor of specific persons. Several major oil companies have made continuing grants, both to help specific programs and to provide unrestricted financial assistance. Other Midland businesses have contributed scholarship grants in amounts ranging from $100 to several thousand dollars.

"Through the Midland College Foundation, we have attempted to provide a number of ways in which gifts may be made to Midland College. Persons who wish may provide for specific gifts through their wills, memorials or bequests," Langford said.

Court fails to require press to suppress doubtful charges

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court let stand Monday a ruling newspaper can report undocumented charges that three scientists are "paid liars" without being liable for damages for defamation.

The Second U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals handed a victory to The New York Times and the National Audubon Society in a ruling last May.

Under the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press, a newspaper may not be required "to suppress newsworthy statements merely because it has serious doubts concerning their truth," Chief Judge Irving R. Kaufman wrote.

"Nor must the press take up the cudgels against dubious charges in order to publish them without fear of liability for defamation," Kaufman continued.

"The public interest in being fully informed about controversies that rage around sensitive issues demands that the press be afforded the freedom to report such charges without fear of liability for defamation."

In a friend-of-the-court brief, Accuracy in Media (AIM), a nonprofit organization, said that the ruling permits a newspaper "to launch an irresponsible attack on one side or the other via the devious road of maligning an outside antagonist with impunity," those it dislikes.

The appellate court overturned a $61,000 damage award made by Federal Judge Charles M. Metzner to the scientists, each of whom is a Ph.D. and a professor: entomoligist J. Gordon Edwards of San Jose State College in California, medical physicist and nutritionist Thomas H. Jukes of the University of California at Berkeley and biologist Robert White-Stevens of Rutgers University in New Jersey.

A key issue in the case was whether Robert S. Arbib Jr., editor of "American Birds," an Audubon Society publication, had identified the scientists as "paid liars" to Times reporter John Devlin. Arbib swore he hadn't; Devlin swore he had.

Three years of pre-trial proceedings failed to resolve the dispute. Solely for that reason, Metzner rejected a motion for a summary judgment made by The Times, the society and Roland C. Clement, a vice president of the society.

The case was rooted in a bitter, long-standing controversy over DDT and certain other pesticides.

Opponents of the chemicals claimed they endangered bird life. Proponents said that without them insect-carried diseases and crop destruction by insect pests would kill millions of human beings. Dr. Edwards once called a ban on exports of DDT, which the society supported, "deliberately genocidal."

The society sponsored an annual Christmas bird count. Despite rising pesticide use over a 30-year period, bird sightings steadily increased. Pesticide advocates seized on this to claim that birds thrive in the pesticide era, even on a sightings-per-watcher basis.

SS compromise breaks deadlock

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise was reported reached today to break a stalemate and make possible quick passage of a bill to keep the Social Security system solvent.

Senate conferees on the measure to increase payroll taxes to cover Social Security deficits were reported willing to remove from the measure an unrelated amendment authorizing a $250-per-student income tax credit for college tuition.

The credit provision would be attached to another bill instead.

A leadership aide who would not be quoted by name said the House and Senate conferees would hold a joint meeting late today or Wednesday.

The conferees have agreed on all provisions affecting Social Security, but the House members rejected the tuition credit rider, insisting the vote should come on the Social Security issues alone.

The aide said he understood the conferees were prepared to release the bill and that the House Rules Committee was standing by to provide special procedures allowing a vote Thursday. The Senate is expected to act immediately after the House does.

Action on the Social Security bill probably would open the way for Congress to adjourn for the year on Thursday, as leaders have planned.

If no Social Security bill is passed this year, it could delay income-tax cuts next year.

One top-level staff member said the negotiating process was not helped by remarks made by Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Testimony involves man, missing brother

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Henry C. Johnson and Robert Johnson, his brother who has been missing for almost a year since he reportedly fell overboard from a boat in the Gulf of Mexico, had cosigned several promissory notes, according to testimony in federal court here Monday.

Henry C. Johnson is being tried on charges of interstate transportation of stolen wheat and with aiding and abetting his missing brother in another alleged illegal wheat scheme.

Testimony in the trial began Monday before a five-woman, seven-man jury in federal court here.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Ron Eddins told the jury he would show how farmers were cheated out of their grain by the Geronimo Elevator Co., owned by Henry Johnson, and the Robert Johnson Grain & Molasses Co., owned by Robert Johnson, who has been missing since January 3rd when he went on a fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico.

Many law enforcement officials do not believe Johnson drowned, but claim he is hiding. Following his disappearance, officials said they were unable to find about 400,000 bushels of grain that was supposed to be stored in his elevators.

William Long of a fertilizer firm and T.I. Sutton of a finance company testified Monday that the Johnson brothers in the past had co-signed several promissory notes.

The Johnson brothers in June and July of 1976 transported the grain from Colorado and Oklahoma to Houston for sale, prosecutors claim.

ACLU losing members in defense of Nazis

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union's defense of a Nazi effort to march in a predominately Jewish suburb has created the ACLU's "most serious threat ever" — a sharp drop in membership and financial contributions.

The Illinois ACLU has cut its staff by one-fourth and its budget by 30 percent. The national ACLU has prepared a 1978 budget 15 percent lower than the current budget.

"This is the most serious threat the ACLU has ever faced," said Franklin Haiman, the ACLU's national secretary and a professor at Northwestern University. He said the approximately 15 percent cut in the national budget was caused by "a nationwide uproar over this case."

Skokie, a suburb north of Chicago, is nearly 60 percent Jewish, including thousands of people who survived or lost relatives in World War II German death camps. The ACLU represents the Nazis in three court cases involving attempts to march in Skokie.

"I've never seen this much ruckus over a case," said Aryeh Neier, ACLU's national executive director. "We had a very substantial membership loss ... It's clear a lot of people are very angry."

Neier refused to estimate the membership or financial loss, saying "maybe the post office is just slow" delivering membership fees. He said December is normally the ACLU's best recruiting month.

Neier said he has completed a "conservative budget" for 1978 that would include staff reductions and reduce the ACLU's ability to handle civil liberties cases.

"This will have an obvious impact on the man on the street," said David Hamlin, executive director of the Illinois ACLU. "We will have to refuse cases we would normally take," such as student rights, invasion of privacy, prisoner rights and race rights cases.

"And it means we won't be taking on major litigation, such as in filing a suit against the city of Chicago for not desegregating its schools."

Hamlin said his 12-member staff is being cut by three. One staff member cut was the person who handled membership solicitation, Hamlin added, so recouping losses will be even more difficult.

"And the Nazis haven't even marched in Skokie yet," Hamlin said. "I'm sure the courts will eventually say they can march. If the court provides a convincing argument explaining why the Nazis should march, maybe the ACLU will come out all right. If not, we could be in worse shape."

Distinguish between caution and timidity

A cautious bridge player postpones a finesse if he can safely do so. If he's a good player he also knows the difference between caution and timidity.

Declarer ruffed the opening lead in dummy and led a low trump to the king. West took the ace of hearts and shifted to a diamond.

South lost the diamond finesse, and East returned a spade, forcing dummy to ruff again. Now West was sure to win a second trump trick with the jack, and the contract was doomed.

South should enter his hand with a club at the second trick in order to lead a low trump toward dummy. When West properly plays low, South should let his six of hearts ride as a finesse!

As the cards lie, this finesse wins, and South has no further problems.

CAN SAFELY LOSE

South would be safe even if this trump finesse lost to the jack. East would be unable to lead diamonds profitably. South would ruff his last spade in dummy and draw trumps. He would eventually discard two diamonds on dummy's long clubs.

The point is that South must keep West out of the lead during the early part of the play. West must not be allowed to lead a diamond through dummy.

ANSWER: Bid four spades. You don't really know what you can make, but you can't find out. Four spades will usually be a much better contract than any other.

Sponsor of retirement law trying to speed legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief sponsor of a proposed law that would allow almost all workers to stay in their jobs until age 70 if they so wish says he's trying to speed up the process of getting legislation to President Carter.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., said an "unfortunate" Supreme Court decision on forced retirement Monday "adds urgency to my repeated appeals" to get the proposed law out of Congress.

Pepper's bill now is stalled in a House-Senate conference committee, and the 77-year-old legislator says he intends to urge committee action as soon as Congress resumes full sessions after the New Year.

The Supreme Court ruling stripped some 11 million workers of the protection Pepper says Congress intended to give them when it passed the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967.

In a 7-2 decision, the court said the law was designed primarily to encourage the hiring of workers between 40 and 65 and did not bar all employers from forcing workers to retire before age 65.

The court's opinion, written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, dealt only with the estimated 11 million Americans working for companies that had mandatory retirement plans in effect before the 1967 law.

But Burger's opinion implied that even forced retirement plans adopted after the law was enacted might be valid.

Pepper said his bill would eliminate "the loophole through which the court has threaded this unfortunate opinion.

"The provision of the (1967 law) which the court interprets to permit early forced retirement will be nullified the day my bill is signed by the president. Unfortunately, it is unlikely that my bill will become law until early next year."

The proposed law — actually amendments to the 1967 legislation — was passed overwhelmingly by the House in September and the Senate in October. There were important differences in the two versions, however, so the bill was given to the conference committee to fashion a compromise.

Coeds die in fire

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A fire apparently touched off by a hair-dryer swept through the fourth floor of a women's dormitory at Providence College early today, killing seven women and injuring at least 15 others, fire officials said.

Two of the women died when they jumped from their window onto the frozen, snow-covered ground, just seconds before firefighters could have reached them with a safety ladder, authorities said.

Hundreds of other residents of Aquinas Hall were forced out into the cold night air after the first alarm was sounded at 2:56 a.m. The fire was controlled about an hour later.

Hours after the blaze was extinguished, the death toll was reported at eight, but a further check showed only seven had died.

Fire officials said the blaze was limited to the top floor of the four-story dormitory. One investigator, who asked that his name not be used, said the blaze apparently started in a closet where a coed was drying her clothes with a hair dryer.

Leo Trambukis, Providence public safety commissioner, said six of the victims either died in the dorm or when they jumped from their rooms. A seventh was dead on arrival at Roger Williams Hospital in Providence.

The fire investigator said two of the three girls sharing the room where the fire started jumped to their deaths from a window. The third was rescued by firefighters using a ladder truck.

"If they (the two girls who jumped) had waited five more seconds, they would have been saved," the investigator said.

Officials at Roger Williams Hospital said nine coeds were brought there, including the one who died en route. Other students were taken to Rhode Island Hospital and one went to Miriam Hospital.

Several of the women were listed in serious condition.

Be careful about moles

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our little girl has a large mole on her back. Last summer, when we were at the beach, a couple of people told me that there is always the danger of such moles becoming cancerous. What do you think? Would it be best to have the mole taken off right away—just in case?—W. K.

Dear W. K.: Most moles remain harmless, but a small number of them do become cancerous later on. Thr trouble is that it can be a very dangerous kind of cancer called malignant melanoma, which spreads very rapidly and is likely to be fatal if not treated right away.

If there is ever any change in a mole, this should be brought to the attention of a doctor immediately. Dr. Robert Walton of Stanford University, an authority on skin cancer in children, says moles should be removed if they show any change in size or shape or color, or in the way they feel, or in the event that they scale or crust or bleed.

An important point made by Dr. Walton is that it is difficult to tell the difference between normal changes in moles that accompany the growth of the child, and dangerous changes.

Dr. Walton also says that any large skin lesion or mole should be biopsied. Large, he says, means any lesion big enough to be noticeable. Lesions in some places are more dangerous than in others. For instance, moles in the mucous membranes of the female genital region are 70 times more apt to become malignant than most others. Moles on the palms of the hands or the soles of the feet can also be very dangerous.

Sinch your daughter's mole is conspicuous she might wish to have it removed in any case, for the sake of appearance. Speak to your doctor and see what he advises.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has been telling me about a wonderful new drug that is supposed to make sex more pleasant. It's called amyl nitrite, and you sniff it. He says it is absolutely harmless, but I just want to be sure. Is it?—F.

Dear F.: No, it isn't. Amyl nitrite is what is called a vasodilator—it dilates the blood vessels. Although in most cases it may not have any ill effects, it can cause nausea, prolonged headaches and fainting. An authority on the subject, Dr. Donald B. Louria, noted in the Journal of the American Medical Association not long ago that there have been cases when the blood vessels collapsed and death followed. Fortunately, such instances are rare.

A doctor may prescribe amyl nitrite to relieve angina, and it is also useful for treating cyanide poisoning. However, I would not fool around with it if I were you.

Sadat proposed for peace prize

Agence France-Presse

CAIRO — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat may visit the United States in February to receive a document signed by 150 members of Congress proposing him for the next Nobel Peace Prize, the semi-official daily Al Ahram reported Monday.

The proposal comes from the United States Higher Education and Teaching Authority, Al Ahram said. Several international organizations have endorsed Sadat's candidacy, Al Ahram said.

The congressional document will reportedly be signed on Feb. 22 at a ceremony to be attended by President Carter marking the birthday of George Washington.

Al Ahram said Sadat was being proposed for the peace prize for his courageous initiative in visiting Israel.

DEAR ABBY

'Craving Affection' receives attention on special occasions

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 12 years to a man who, from all outside appearances, is an ideal husband. Nothing could be further from the truth.

I'm 34 and he's 49. I don't drink or smoke, and I've never looked at another man. We have no children because he's never wanted any. He thinks sex is for animals, but he does accommodate me on my birthday, anniversary and Christmas. Then he acts as though he's doing me a favor.

He is good-looking, meticulous in his dress, and has a very successful business. The only people we see socially are his relatives and a few business associates.

I spoke to my rabbi about my loveless marriage, and he said as long as my husband doesn't mistreat me, I have nothing to complain about.

If I weren't financially dependent on him I'd leave him. I'm aching for a pair of arms to hold me. I could even live without sex if he would only let me fall asleep on his chest. I am dying inside.

Where do I go from here?—CRAVING AFFECTION

DEAR CRAVING: To your husband, with the announcement that if he doesn't see a counselor about improving the quality of your marriage, you are going to see a lawyer. There is more in life than three square meals a day. You may have to support yourself, but craving affection as you do, it could be preferable to being yoked to a cold fish for the rest of your life.

DEAR ABBY: I am a wedding photographer, and recently I found myself in a situation that I didn't know how to handle.

I started shooting this wedding at 4 p.m. and was still shooting at 10 p.m. while the wedding dinner and dance were going on.

They had an elegant sit-down dinner, but nobody invited me to have dinner. I saw several empty places set up for dinner, but didn't think I should sit down like an invited guest and eat, even though I was starving.

Is it customary to invite the photographer to have dinner? And how about the band?—ALSO HUMAN

DEAR ALSO: The thoughtful host and hostess will invite the photographer (and the band) to eat if they are engaged to work a five- or six-hour stint. A separate table or a place in the kitchen is usually provided for those who are "working" a party.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please settle a disagreement between my husband and me?

He thinks I'm some kind of cleanliness nut because I bathe every night before going to bed. I believe it's just good personal hygiene.

My husband says I'm "flaky," and bathing before going to bed is not necessary. What do you say?—MRS. CLEAN

DEAR MRS. CLEAN: I vote with you. And my mail tells me that there are a lot of men out there who wish their wives were as "flaky" as you. (P.S. A little soft soap at bedtime wouldn't hurt your husband either.)

Brighten a shut-in's room with holiday cheer items

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeature

Christmas is the ideal time to pamper the bedridden.

A room occupied by an ill person is often the dreariest room in the house whereas it should be made the cheeriest.

Looking at the idea from the vantage point of the sick bed, what would please the ailing one?

How about a remote control unit so that the TV dial might be controlled more easily by the captive viewer? And how about that reading matter that is absentmindedly removed from the bed area or falls to the floor?

A useful item is a long-handled pincers that serves as an extra hand in picking up anything from a small coin to a book.

A reading stand that folds flat to be used as an eating tray is another convenience item. A subscription to the local newspaper is a good companion gift. Attach a copy of the paper to the stand when you gift wrap it.

Or how about one of the new designer series telephones — Mickey Mouse is one idea. He has certainly had a lot of experience in dispensing cheer.

Contour bed pillows offer comfort and earmuffs are useful in shutting out annoying noises. A number of other items may be used as pain relievers — moist-heat padded collars and body covers that operate without water or chemicals.

A sheepskin pad can be used under bedsheets to relieve soreness. These can be found in some medical supply stores and through some sheep grower groups.

Lamb's wool-lined heel protectors can be good stocking stuffers. So, too, loose lamb's wool which can be taken out of small packages and formed into little beribboned rolls of fluff for the Christmas stocking. These can be used to relieve corns by wrapping bits of it about toes.

As for grooming, instant curlers release a fine mist for longer lasting curls and are designed to keep hair looking good between washings.

In bringing cheer into the sick room, trim a plant with little ornaments, ribbons or even little fluffs of the lamb's wool.

There are other ways to provide cheer — very little effort is required to turn ordinary drinking glasses and punch cups into handsome bedtray accessories.

Acquire ball point paint tubes, wash each piece of glass or pottery to be decorated with baking soda and water rinsed. Dry with a towel to avoid finger marks. Tape a little design (holly, wreath, Santa Claus, tree) inside a clear glass and prepare to paint the design on the outside, following these instructions suggested by the Vogart Crafts people who advise that these paints may be used also on fabric, leather, metal and other surfaces:

In working with a paint tube hold it vertically, press down lightly so the paint will flow easily through the ball point tip. Following taped designs, blend the paint to achieve attractive shadings. Apply dark colors first, blend the lighter shades over them before the first application dries. Wait at least 48 hours before washing the glass and do not put painted glass in the dishwasher. For maximum durability after painting, bake the glassware in a 275 degree oven for about 25 minutes, and cool slowly. Never bake plastic.

Beautiful cabinet no selling point for time-weary TV

By ERMA BOMBECK

I wish when a TV set would "go," the wood would warp, the rollers would fall off, the paint on the knobs would chip and it would start to smell.

You wouldn't feel so guilty about getting rid of it.

But our set looks so great and majestic as it stands there in the living room . . . 21 inches of shiny mahogany topped off by a bowl of fresh flowers.

The only thing wrong with it is when the Bionic Woman jumps over a building she keeps on going . . . Cannon looks like a ballpoint pen . . . and Laverne and Shirley need a shave.

Not only that, the picture will occasionally go into a spin and you expect to see an orange and two cherries lock into place when it stops.

The other night when we were watching the three angels, my husband said, "Something's wrong with that picture and I can't put my finger on it."

"I think it's because Jaclyn Smith looks like Raymond Massey."

"That's it!" he shouted, "is it possible we need a new set already?"

"I'm afraid so. Fifteen years fly when you're having fun."

The new set was only a matter of selecting and having it delivered.

The problem is how do you dispose of an old TV set?

I called my daughter at her apartment. "How would you like an extra TV set?"

"Is it the one that makes John Wayne look like Woody Allen?"

"It has a beautiful cabinet."

"I'll pass."

I called my son at school. "How would you like your own TV set?"

"Is it portable?"

"It depends on how many of you are there to lift it."

"Maybe we could keep it in the spare room," I told my husband. "I'll bet if someone is handy, they could fix it for $5."

"You said that about the one in each bedroom, the kitchen, the garage and the basement. The old one on the porch is even beginning to smell."

Thank goodness.

Offshore gas platform continues to burn

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — A natural gas platform in the Gulf of Mexico continued to burn today, forcing a pipeline company to use reserves to supply gas for two million customers in Wisconsin and Michigan.

However, Ray J. Lynch, president of Michigan Wisconsin Pipeline Co. said in Detroit that no customers had lost service. He said he hoped the regular flow of gas could be restored today.

The problem began early Monday when a 200-foot boat, the North Sea Horse, rammed the unmanned platform, which sits in the Gulf about 36 miles southwest of Morgan City.

The collision cut a high-pressure gas line, and the resulting fire sent flames 20 to 40 feet high. Hunt Oil Co., owner of the platform, said that although the platform was heavily damaged, the well on the platform was shut-in and did not catch fire.

No one was injured in the accident, and the boat was to be towed back to shore.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported that a light oil slick, measuring 150 to 200 yards spread from the platform, but no major pollution was reported.

The platform contained one producing gas well and was receiving gas from two lines from two other wells in the field. In addition, there is an incoming gas pipeline and a departing gas pipeline belonging to the Michigan Wisconsin Pipeline Co.

The platform also contained two 2,000-barrel tanks used for storage of condensate, a highquality liquid petroleum.

The major source of fuel for the fire was the incoming eightinch pipeline. An estimated 2,400 barrels of condensate stored in the tanks also caught fire.

The fire forced the pipeline company to turn to reserves for one-third of its natural gas supply, said Michigan Wisconsin spokesman in Detroit.

Michigan Wisconsin Pipe Line sells gas to 51 distribution companies in Texas, Michigan and Wisconsin, but the bulk of the gas is consumed in Michigan and Wisconsin.

"Actually, our system has a lot of storage and we can take it," said a spokesman. "We think we can get more gas from other systems to take up the slack.

'Michigan Wisconsin and its distribution affiliates have about 300 billion cubic feet of underground storage and we can back off quite a bit of gas on Michigan Consolidated, a distribution company which also has a lot of storage."

Outlook good

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The oilfield supply business outlook for 1978 and beyond is good, the president of Bovaird Supply Co. said today at the firm's annual shareholders meeting.

"Despite the oil industry's complaints about federal price ceilings and other regulations, oil and gas operators are more active now than for many years," William J. Bovaird told the meeting.

Petroleum products demand is still climbing in the United States and is expected to go up 3.5 percent next year. The long decline in domestic production of pretroleum has been turned around and is expected to rise slightly next year.

The rate of drilling of new wells has increased steadily in 1977 and it is indicated the year will show more wells completed and more footage drilled than any year for the past couple of decades, he said.

Rotary rigs in use are averaging more than 2,100, compared with 1,800 last year and only 1,100 in 1971, Bovaird said. In 1978 the number of wells drilled, total footage and active rotary rigs will increase from 5 to 8 percent over this year, according to his predictions.

Bovaird forecast that the United States "will be a beehive of oil and gas activity" for the next 15 or 20 years and that higher prices for oil and gas will result in drilling and discoveries in many new areas and formations.

Korea opens exploration door

The Washington Post

SINGAPORE — In a surprising departure from its policy of economic self-reliance, North Korea has signed a preliminary agreement to allow foreign companies to explore for oil in its offshore territory.

A Singapore-based consulting company, Asia Exploration, Consultants Ltd., has confirmed that it has signed a protocol with the state-operated Korea Industrial Technology Corp. "regarding petroleum exploration and development offshore the People's Democratic Republic of Korea."

A statement was released by Ted Daniels, chief executive of the company, to Petroleum News Southeast Asia, a regional energy journal in Hong Kong. The statement said that "a final agreement is expected to be signed early in 1978."

Informed sources said the agreement would give Asia Exploration Consultants exclusive rights to organize a complete package of offshore exploration for North Korea.

North Korea will allow the company to employ subcontractors of any nationality except U.S. or South Korean, the sources said.

The job could eventually involve scores of companies on tasks ranging from seismic surveys to oil-rig operations. If oil is discovered in exploitable quantities, produciton platform and pipeline constructors would be needed.

There was no word on where exploration might begin, but one Singapore specialist suggested the Gulf of Chihli off Korea's west coast as a likely starting point. The site is near where the Chinese have found promising geogological formations and are concentrating much of their own search for oil.

The two Koreas, Japan, China and the Soviet Union dispute ownership of parts of the Sea of Japan, the Yellow Sea and the Gulf of Chihli.

North Korea recently declared an "economic zone" extending 200 miles off its shores.

Industry observers believe there is at present no significant production of oil in North Korea, and that the country's requirements are met by imports from China and the Soviet Union.

There was no immediate explanation for North Korea's decision to do business with multinational oil corporations, long cast as archvillains by many leftist ideologies.

Observers noted, however, that Moscow recently called on countries that import its oil to help finance the opening of new fields and pipelines in the Soviet Union. North Korea's move might be an effort to limit its dependence on Moscow.

Another theory is that the Koreans have decided to follow the example of neighboring China, which is going all-out to produce more oil to fuel the economy as a whole. Given the relatively backward state of offshore technology in Communist-bloc countries, North Korea would have no alternative but to import know-how and equipment from the West.

China currently is making major purchases of Western exploration and development equipment.

Peking insists that Chinese operate all equipment and does not allow foreign companies to p cipate in the process of exploration or development.

Treasury Dept. caters to overseas Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire today accused the Treasury Department of catering to the whims of jetset Americans living abroad in supporting what he called a $400-million-a-year tax loophole.

The Wisconsin Democrat, who presents an "award" each month to the federal agency that he thinks displays the biggest, most ridiculous or most ironic example of government waste, saved his "Fleece of the Year" prize for Treasury Department officials.

The department supports a move to delay until the 1978 tax year a change Congress originally approved in 1976 to scale down a tax break for Americans who live in foreign countries. Proxmire has stymied Senate action on the delay this year.

The old law allowed an American living abroad to avoid U.S. taxes on the first $20,000 earned each year. People living abroad for three years received a $25,000 annual exemption. About 150,000 Americans benefit from the tax break.

Congress voted in 1976 to reduce the exemption to $15,000 ($20,000 for employees of charitable organizations), but later delayed the date of the change to Jan. 1, 1977. Now the Treasury Department has asked — and the two tax-writing committees of Congress have agreed — to change the effective date to Jan. 1, 1978. That would retroactively restore the higher exemption for the current tax year.

"When it was learned I was blocking this end run for the rest of the year, I was besieged by top officials of this and previous administrations, by an intense mail campaign and by expert lobbyists all dedicted to continue this gross injustice," Proxmire said.

Court drops 12 suits

DALLAS (AP) — Twelve antitrust suits filed by individuals and companies in the cattle industry from 19 states accusing major supermarket chains of price fixing have been dismissed by U.S. District Court Judge William Taylor.

The suits claimed the supermarkets conspired to depress the price they paid to packers and slaughterhouses for fresh, frozen or processed beef. The cattlemen claimed they had been injured because the alleged action lowered the price they received for beef.

The suits, some of which were filed in Texas, were consolidated last year in Judge Taylor's court.

Included as defendants were 15 supermarket chains, the National Association of Food Chains and the National Provisioner, a commercial wholesale meat reporting service.

There are four suits filed by the cattlemen against packers pending in Taylor's court.

Inmates to find freedom

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Today is freedom day for at least 30 American convicts, among the first to return to the United States from Mexican prisons under the new inmate exchange treaty.

Up to 44 men and women could be released and issued "suitable clothing" and $100 for transportation money, said coordinator James Meko of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons.

These are the lucky ones who spent enough time in Mexican prisons to satisfy requirements for the same offenses under U.S. law, Meko said. Nearly all of the 235 Americans who qualified to return were convicted on drug charges, about half for marijuana offenses.

The released Americans must report to parole officers within 72 hours.

Court of Inquiry ordered to examine union's records on Manpower funds

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A state district court judge, utilizing a seldom-used Court of Inquiry procedure, has ordered a labor union to turn over some of its financial records.

Judge Darrell Hester ordered the Harlingen-based Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 823 to make available its records concerning the use of federal Manpower funds received by the union.

Hester called the Court of Inquiry, which is similiar to a grand jury proceeding but held in open court, to investigate the Cameron County Manpower program.

The local Manpower agency contracts with local businesses to train disadvantaged persons. The agency's funds come from the Department of Labor, which last year spent than $11 million in the local program.

The Court of Inquiry will focus on the association between the area's largest Manpower fund recipient, Local 823, and the federal program.

Don Gray is the union's business manager and his brother, Clarence, is the former chairman of the Manpower Planning Board, which makes recommendations as to who receives the federal funds.

Clarence Gray recently resigned as chairman of the board citing a possible "conflict of interest" but remained as a member of the board.

Harlingen lawyer Jack Skaggs, who represents Don Gray, asked that Hester refuse to let auditors present business records of the Grays because such a procedure "required them to produce evidence against themselves."

Hester replied that Skaggs' motion was equivalent to the Grays' invoking the Fifth Amendment and said the brothers themselves would have to make such a request.

To Skaggs' contention that the state lacked authority to subpoena union business records, Hester responded that "the FBI is present and lawyers for the national Plumbers and Pipefitters Union will be present through this Court of Inquiry to discuss the records."

The FBI said earlier that it was investigating the local union after a disgruntled employee had claimed union funds were being misused.

Certified public accountant C.W. Curry of Harlingen, auditor for Local 823, was the first person to take the witness stand Monday. Subpoenas have been issued for 20 other people and assorted bank and business records.

Hester asked Curry why he had not noticed that considerable sums in leasing funds went into the personal checking accounts of Don and Clarence Gray. Curry told the judge that a younger member of his firm, Mike McClennan, did the actual work on the audit. Hester then directed that McClellan appear today at the Court of Inquiry.

Hester called the seldom-used Court of Inquiry on the request of Andy Muniz, then acting director of the local Manpower program. Muniz was fired last week as acting director by the Cameron County Commissioners court on the recommendation of Hester.

The commissioners also canceled all contracts with the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union Local 823 and the Texas Language Academy in Brownsville, which had a federal grant to train cashiers and checkers.

Texas man charged

BURNS FLAT, Okla. (AP) — Franklin Stuart Smith, 18, of Monahans, Texas, was booked on a charge of attempting to elude an officer late Monday night, after he allegedly led a state trooper on a high speed chase and ran a roadblock, authorities said.

The state Highway Patrol said Smith, driving a pickup truck, refused to stop when Trooper Bruce Peoples tried to halt his vehicle at shortly after 11 p.m., and then attempted to run the trooper off Oklahoma 44 in this western Oklahoma town.

Pastor gives innocent plea on charges

The Rev. Roy R. Honea of Big Spring Monday in federal court in Midland pleaded innocent to two counts of willfully subscribing to income tax returns he knew were false in some material matter.

Honea, pastor of Grace Baptist Church of Big Spring, was indicted Nov. 29 by sealed indictment by a federal grand jury in Midland.

Willfully subscribing to false income tax returns is a felony and carries a maximum penalty of three years imprisonment, a $5,000 fine or both. Trial was set by District Judge D. W. Suttle for Jan. 25.

Revolutions, wars leave wine industry untouched

The Los Angeles Times

"A bottle of thick English port is a very heavy and a very inflammatory dose. I felt it, last time that I drank it, for several days, and this morning it was boiling in my veins."

—James Boswell, after a night of drinking and supping with Dr. Samuel Johnson, 1763.

OPORTO, Portugal — The Portuguese revolution of 1974 turned the economy of this little country upside down and laid low many private industries. But it hardly touched one venerable institution — the exportation of port wine. That trade is as profitable as it was before the revolution and just as dominated by the British.

A casual visitor could be forgiven for thinking otherwise.

Posters went up this year near the lodges (port wine storehouses) in the suburb of Vila Nova de Gaia across the Douro River from this northern city of Oporto. Commemorating the third anniversary of the April 25 revolution, the posters showed a wine worker twisting a wine press. Caught in the press were not grapes but squirming, desperate capitalists, one with a top hat, all doomed to be crushed.

But the posters were only wishful leftist thinking. The port wine capitalists were not crushed in the revolution.

This is proven every Wednesday when 28 British port wine shippers, who control more than 50 percent of the export trade, assemble for lunch in the two-century-old British Factory House near the docks of Oporto. Waiting for them on a table of the elegant reception room are a copy of the latest Times of London and, from the building's Victorian library, a copy of the Times for that date of 100 years ago. The British shippers dine around a long table in a room decorated with portraits of their forebears. After lunch, they retire to a dessert room with an identical table for their cheese and tawny port.

These shippers, in fact, survived a revolution long before that of 1974. The first revolution was the collapse of the port market back home after Ward War II. To the British shippers, the collapse was a betrayal of history, and it endangered them far more than the leftist soldiers who overthrew the dictatorship of Portugal.

Port, long cherished by the British, is made from grapes grown on steep hills in the upper Douro valley, a 60-mile strip of land that begins about 75 miles east of Oporto. The shippers insist that the dry and alternately extreme cold and hot climate of the Douro valley, and its schistous soil provide the grapes the the special flavor of port. "If you plant it elsewhere," said one, "it's as different as whiskey to gin. Brandy is the other key to the formula. After the grapes are harvested and crushed in the fall, brandy is added to the storage vats at the vineyards. The brandy stops the fermentation, keeping the wine sweet.

In the spring, the wine is transported to the vats in the lodges of Vila Nova de Gaia. There, with the addition of some more brandy, the wine is blended with other port wines and matured in wooden casks. The whites grow darker with age; the reds go tawny with age. Sweetness depends on how soon the full amount of brandy has been added. In the end, a large number of varieties are produced, from dry white port drunk as an aperitif to sweet tawny port drunk after dinner with cheese.

It is possible that famous British writers who left a written record of their prodigious consumption of port, Like Boswell, Dr. Johnson and Samuel Pepys, were not tasting the same wine as people do today. The art of fortifying the original port wine with the right amount of brandy was not perfected until 1820.

In accord with a 1916 treaty between Portugal and Britain, the Portuguese government allows the name port to be used only by wine that is grown in the upper Douro valley, fortified by brandy and shipped out of Oporto. The United States, however, does not abide by this treaty. Many American wine producers make their own port and market it as such. Portuguese port is known in the United States by its Portuguese names of Porto or Vinho do Porto. In any case, Americans consume only 1 percent of the port exported by Portugal every year.

For centuries, it was a British drink. Port was so British, in fact, that Boswell called it "English" in his diary even though it came from Portugal. The Whig Party, which sometimes opposed the king, adopted port as a symbol of the traditions of old England and decried those monarchists who drank French wines instead. In the 18th century, a Whig magazine told the British that, as a patriotic duty, they should:

During the era of the American revolution, King George III preferred French claret and ordered no port for the royal table. But, 84 bottles of port went monthly to the yeoman of the guard, 27 to the palace chaplains, and 11 to the women of the royal bedchambers. The British prime minister then, William Pitt the Younger, would drink most of a bottle of port before making a speech in Parliament. Three British lords of the same era were reported to drink six bottles a day.

In the 18th and 19th centuries, Britain bought almost all of Portugal's production. In the 1920s and 1930s, port's popularity even increased in Britain. Port and lemon, a mixture of the wine with lemonade, was the standard drink of British pubs. In the 1920s, Britain bought eight times as much port from Portugal as did the second biggest importer, France.

But after World War II, the British stopped drinking so much port. "Port lost its image as the working man's drink in Britain," said Robin A. Reid, the managing director of Croft and Company, in a recent interview here. "As the working man got more affluent, he didn't turn from his beer, but he did turn from port to other things, like gin and whiskey."

A depression set in. In the first decade after World War II, port exports dropped to about half of what they were in the 1920s and 1930s. To cut costs and avoid losses, several British firms merged. The shippers began looking for other markets and finally found them, mostly in western Europe. In the 1960s, France for the first time in history, overtook Britain as the world's largest consumer of port.

The French, who use port as an aperitif before dining, purchased 39 percent of port exports last year. Britain imported less than half of that, followed by Belgium, Holland and West Germany. In consumption of port, Portugal itself would rank just behind Britain.

By the time of the Portuguese revolution, the port wine industry had emerged from its recession. According to records kept since 1678, the exports of port during 1973 were the fifth highest in history. The shippers had survived the revolution in taste of the British working man.

There was a good deal of consternation among shippers, however, about whether they would survive the political revolution. "There was a period in 1975," Reid recalled, "when we were seriously worried that there would be a workers' seizure of the companies." Some workers had threatened a seizure but, perhaps because the ruling soldiers in Lisbon did not want to antagonize Britain, perhaps because the north is the most conservative part of Portugal, the threat was never carried out.

The industry also escaped nationalization in 1975 when the government seized the banks of Portugal. Unlike many other companies in Portugal, the port wine shippers were not controlled by the banks.

So, who needs defense? Pokes win touchdown war

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The halftime show, featuring a fireworks display that got out of hand, was topped only by the offensive fireworks generated by the Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers.

"It was a fun game for the fans," said Tony Dorsett, the Cowboys' star rookie who scored two touchdowns in Monday night's 42-35 National Football League victory.

"Personally, I'd rather be in a lopsided game with us on top," he added.

"If someone had said there would be 77 points scored, I wouldn't have believed it," said Coach Ken Meyer of the 49ers, whose team totaled only 29 points in losing its first four games of the season.

"You'd never know we had the No. 2 and No. 3 defenses in the conference," declared Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, pleased with the victory but concerned because, "We didn't play much defense."

THE PLAYOFFS are two weeks away for Dallas, whose 11-2 record is best in the National Conference, and Monday night's victory assured the Cowboys of the homefield advantage in all playoff games. Next Sunday, the Denver Broncos of the AFC will bring a 12-1 record into Texas Stadium as the two possible Super Bowl opponents size each other up in a regular season finale.

"We're going to have to play an awfully lot better," said Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach.

Staubach threw for three touchdowns and 220 yards, San Francisco quarterback Jim Plunkett answered back with four touchdown throws and 263 yards, while Dorsett had 92 yards rushing and 39 on pass receptions in the big night for the three former Heisman Trophy winners.

But the Cowboys' Butch Johnson, who came into the NFL relatively unnoticed as a third round draft pick out of Cal-Riverside last year, may have made the difference.

"My whole family came up to see the game, and it was great to score my first touchdown in front of them," said the wide receiver and kick returner who made a one-hand grab in the end zone on Staubach's third touchdown pass, a 22-yarder early in the wild fourth quarter.

JOHNSON CAME close to scoring his first pro touchdown late in the second period when he returned a kickoff 64 yards to the 49ers' 20-yard line. The return set up Dorsett's 20-yard pass reception at the right sideline, and Dallas was ahead to stay 21-14.

After the smoke cleared from the halftime fireworks, Dorsett got his 12th touchdown rushing, a team record, on a 21-yard sprint. He finished the game with 92 yards and needs 43 more to reach 1,000.

"Our offense was excellent. The runners ran and the blockers blocked," said Landry.

Irish gaining, but Kentucky still in top spot

By The Associated Press

William and Mary didn't gain a spot in the national college basketball rankings but the Indians certainly made their presence felt in the latest balloting by upsetting North Carolina and enabling Notre Dame to move into second spot behind Kentucky.

North Carolina, 5-1, fell from second to fifth after losing 78-75 to William and Mary.

Notre Dame, 6-0, taking advantage of the upset and helping itself with three victories last week that included a 69-66 triumph at UCLA, received nine first-place votes and 872 points in nationwide balloting by sports writers and sportscasters.

BUT THE Fighting Irish were easily outdistanced by Kentucky, 3-0, which beat Indiana 87-64 and Kansas 73-66 and remained No. 1 with 42 first-place votes and 1,014 points.

The other first-place vote went to Marquette which moved from fourth to third with 799 points after two easy victories.

Arkansas, which boosted its record to 6-0 with two wins, moved into fourth from sixth with 647 points. North Carolina, which also won once last week, was next with 485.

Cincinnati, 4-0 after nipping Miami of Ohio 61-60, was sixth and was followed by Indiana State, 5-0; UCLA, 4-1; Nevada-Las Vegas, 5-0, and Louisville, 3-1.

Indiana State advanced four spots from 11th with two routs. UCLA dropped from fifth. Nevada-Las Vegas moved up from 10th and Louisville advanced from 16th to 10th with an 88-85 win over Michigan and a drubbing of Robert Morris.

THE SECOND Ten were San Francisco, Syracuse, Holy Cross, Providence, Michigan, Detroit, Purdue, Maryland, Kansas State and Kansas.

Purdue and Kansas State were newcomers to the rankings while St. John's and Utah, Nos. 13 and 14, respectively, the previous week, dropped out. St. John's lost to Rutgers 72-61 and Utah was defeated 80-79 by Long Beach State. They were the first losses for both teams.

Deck stacked against Gamecocks

By The Associated Press

South Carolina had the task of taking on the No. 1 team in the country and the memory of a legendary coach on the same night.

Not surprisingly, the Gamecocks lost.

Two nights after Adolph Rupp's death from cancer, playing in the filled 23,000-seat arena named after him, the top-ranked Kentucky Wildcats had to win.

"This was a very special night for all of us with Coach Rupp's death," said Joe Hall, who took over as coach when Rupp retired after the 1972 season with 880 victories behind him. "I told our players in the locker room that this was an historic moment that they would remember all their lives. It was a night we would not have wanted to get beaten on."

SOUTH CAROLINA made a game of it in the first half, however, trailing only 38-35 at intermission by slowing down the tempo and using zone defenses to neutralize the Wildcats' strength and quickness. But Kentucky's man-to-man defensive pressure wilted South Carolina in the second half and the Wildcats went on to win easily, 84-65.

Rick Robey poured in 19 points and Jack Givens and Kyle Macy added 18 apiece to lead Kentucky, now 4-0 for the year.

The Gamecocks, 3-3, got 16 points from Mike Doyle and 12 from Jim Graziano, including 10 in South Carolina's successful first half.

Of the Gamecocks' slowdown, Hall said, "We are going to find this kind of tactic in people who are willing to slow down to a deliberate pace ... we'll see more of it this year."

COACH FRANK McGuire of South Carolina said he didn't believe the crowd of 23,472 enjoyed his team's slowdown.

"They like to see the Wildcats bury you by 100," McGuire said.

At halftime, a tribute was held for Rupp during which university officials announced the establishment of a memorial fund for cancer research in his name.

Only two other teams in the Top Twenty were in action Monday night, with No. 7 Cincinnati whipping Eastern Kentucky 73-58 and 17th-ranked Detroit edging St. Bonaventure 94-92.

Cincinnati got 16 points from both Pat Cummings and Eddie Lee to post its 65th straight home victory over a five-year period.

IN A similar game, Rutgers center James Bailey sank a free throw with six seconds left to defeat Davidson 78-77 despite 41 points from John Gerdy.

Other games saw Penn State shoot a record 65.3 percent from the field to defeat Muhlenberg, Pa., 109-78; Houston break a Hofheinz Pavilion record with a 133-98 victory over Southwestern Texas; Iowa State trip Wisconsin 82-73; Temple drub Biscayne 80-58; Vanderbilt defeat Cal Poly-Pomona 88-72; Memphis State nip Jacksonville 79-77 and Texas-El Paso beat Alaska-Anchorage 88-83.

Player's death still mystery

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — While punishment exercises may have been a factor in the Nov. 21 death of a Virginia Tech football player, a state medical examiner says the exact cause may never be known.

Bob Vorhies, an 18-year-old freshman from Irvington, N. J., collapsed in his dormitory room a few hours after doing the punishment exercises.

But Dr. David Oxley, deputy chief medical examiner for western Virginia, said Monday "the most most probable cause ...is a cardiac arrhythmia" — a disturbance in the beat of the heart.

The punishment drills "may have exacerbated or aggravated some pre-existing condition," Oxley said. But he added there was no medical record of any pre-existing condition and Vorhies had been considered in excellent phsyical condition.

While Oxley said he believes "there is some relationship between the exercises and his death," he added there was "nothing we can find that specifically related" his death to the exercises.

Specialists in sports medicine indicated Vorhies' punishment drills were not out of line with standard punishment exercises at other schools, the medical examiner said.

A Virginia Tech assistant coach said the 6-foot, 230-pound Vorhies was given the punishment drills for clowning around in the athletic dormitory.

He said the punishment consisted of 10 30-yard dashes, 10 100-yard dashes, two 100-yard bear crawls, 50 situps, 50 pushups and four other 100-yard drills. Vorhies completed the drills, went to his dorm and collapsed, Tech officials said.

Oxley said he is conducting tests to determine whether the death could have been caused by a viral infection, but he added the cause may never be known. In 15 percent of the deaths of young persons, the cause of death cannot be determined, Oxley said.

Finley, oilman meet to discuss A's sale

DENVER (AP) — Millionaire oilman Marvin Davis has met with Oakland A's owner Charles Finley and Denver city officials, lending credence to the speculation that the American League baseball team is headed for the Mile High City.

Davis said Monday he will announce today whether he has reached an agreement in principle to purchase the team and move it to Denver.

"We've done all our homework and now we'll have to decide," Davis said Monday. "If the decision is to go ahead, it will come tomorrow (Tuesday). If we decide not to go, that also should be known tomorrow (Tuesday)."

But one source close to the negotiations said, "When you go looking for a house and find what you like, you generally buy it."

Davis conferred with Finley over the weekend and met Monday with Mayor Bill McNichols, who personally presented the best terms the city could offer for a lease on Mile High Stadium for major league baseball. The lease agreement reportedly has been the major stumbling block in Davis' attempts to buy the A's.

However, Davis said Monday that his discussion with the mayor about the stadium lease was "encouraging. Everything seems to be fitting into place."

Finley reportedly is asking $12.5 million for the team, a figure Davis would have no trouble raising.

Davis said he didn't know what effect the Vida Blue trade would have on his negotiations with Finley.

Howdy, Bob Rushton!

Robert A. "Bob" Rushton, the 58th president of The United States Jaycees, is a special guest in the Tall City, and Midland Jaycees and other Midlanders are delighted to be hosts to this distinguished visitor.

Although Midland was the home of a one-time president of the International Junior Chamber of Commerce, the late Taylor Cole, it isn't often that the president of the national organization visits here. And the fact that Rushton's Midland stop is one of two in Texas on his tour of the Southwest, makes his visit all the more noteworthy and appreciated.

Rushton will be the guest speaker Wednesday at a Past Presidents Breakfast sponsored by Midland Jaycees in the Midland Hilton. He is a Marietta, Ga., real estate executive, but this year he is residing at Tulsa, Okla., where he occupies the official U.S. Jaycee residence. He has been recognized as one of Five Outstanding Young Men of Georgia.

He keeps more than busy in working with and visiting the almost 8,500 local Jaycee chapters with close to 350,000 members in 50 states and the District of Columbia.

The purpose of the organization is to offer young men, ages 18-35, an opportunity for further personal development and leadership. Major efforts are directed to finding solutions to environmental and economic problems within their communities.

Jaycee programs are many and varied, all striving for the betterment of the community, state and nation, and mankind in general.

Although the Jaycee movement was begun at St. Louis, Mo., in 1915, it did not come to Midland until 1939. But since then, Midland Jaycees have been making up for lost time. The chapter here is busy, busy.

The Midland Jaycee chapter now is the second largest in Texas, with 314 members. David Howard is the president.

The visit of the national president is a great occasion, indeed, for Midland Jaycees, who certainly are proud of the opportunity of entertaining him.

It is hoped that President Rushton has a most enjoyable time while here and that he will return to the Tall City at every opportunity.

Exclusive clientele

It's the Christmas season, and how about a $3,000 necktie for that old boy who has everything?

Well, if that's a bit too high, the Countess Mara designs come in cheaper versions — like $2,000 or even a paltry $1,000.

D. Gordon Williams, president of Countess Mara, said in New York that each tie comes in its own "vault" of red Moroccan leather. And each $3,000 necktie features a blossoming 14-karat gold rose which is studded with faceted diamonds on silk-cut velvet. Williams said there have been maybe three dozen takers nationally this year. There have been about four dozen buyers of the $2,000 version and eight dozen of the cheap ($1,000) one. And this should prove something or other.

It most certainly is that — with a nice price tag attached.

ART BUCHWALD

Who needs a computer, with wife like Art's?

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — There is a great deal of publicity these days about the advent of the home computer.

Futurists are predicting that in a few years there will be a computer in everyone's home which will store all sorts of useful information in its memory, such as birthdays, anniversaries, bank balances and inventories of household effects.

The computers will also be used to turn on lights, turn off furnaces and adjust air conditioners, open and shut doors and record what time your children come in at night.

When it comes to information retrieval I doubt if there really is the market out there that home computer manufacturers think there is. The American wife has a memory far superior to any computer, at least she does in my house.

My wife can recall things in seconds that I have forgotten for years.

An example: The other night we were having a discussion over some remark I had made about an attractive lady sitting next to me at a dinner party.

I said, "I don't see anything wrong in admiring a pretty girl at a dinner as long as you don't make a pass at her."

"That's just the point. You can't admire a pretty girl without making a pass at her."

This got me really angry and I said, "When have I ever made a pass at a girl at a dinner party?"

"Sept. 6, 1963, at the Stevens' house. You were sitting next to Hope Lange and as the chocolate souffle with the coconut meringue cookies were being served you put your arm around her. I believe it was 10:14 p.m."

"Are you sure it was cholocate souffle? I thought that night Liz Stevens served a vanilla mousse with fresh raspberry sauce."

"Don't avoid the issue," my wife said. "And what about midnight, June 12, 1957, when we were in Paris at the Crazy Horse Saloon and you made a fool of yourself dancing to 'I'll Never Smile Again' with that lady in the green-beaded dress and pale green chiffon scarf and gold shoes and dyed blonde hair."

"You remember that?" I said.

"She was 5-feet-5, weighed 115 pounds, spoke with a Swedish accent and had a silver handbag shaped like a turtle."

"You do remember it."

"While we're on the subject, I suppose you've forgotten April 9, 1969, at 7:40 p.m.

"What happened that night?"

"The cocktail party at the Federal City Club when you were telling Barbara Lipscomb of Area Code 212 Boulevard 3-2376 if you ever came to New York you'd give her a call."

"Was that her name?"

"Brunette," she said, "with a beauty mark on her right upper cheek, three fillings on the right side of her mouth, two on the left. False eyelashes and flaming red Revlon nail polish. Known to her intimates as 'Bobby.'"

"Wow, what a memory!" I said more in admiration than anger.

"Do you want more? Remember the night it snowed on Feb. 13, 1971, and we were at the Hartwells and you offered to drive Ginny Southern home because she had no snow tires on her 1970 green and white Thunderbird with the white vinyl roof?"

"What was wrong with that?"

"You didn't have a driver's license at that time."

"Are you sure?"

I looked at my driver's license and darned if she wasn't right.

"Is there anything else you have in your memory bank?" I asked her.

"Would you like to talk about VJ night, 1945, at the Astor Hotel?"

"But I was still in the Marines," I protested. "I didn't even know you then."

"Yes, but you told me about it on Sept. 26, 1952, the first time you took me out for a drink at the Cafe Flore in Paris."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Time is running out on ex-Nazi

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — With the help of government wangling and State Department waffling, Andrija Artukovic has been able to bask for more than 25 years in the California sunshine.

Now the 78-year-old Artukovic, known to his neighbors as a mild-mannered senior citizen, faces the growing prospect of deportation to stand trial in Yugoslavia as a Nazi mass murderer in World War II.

Under Hitler, Artukovic was interior minister in the Nazi puppet state of Croatia, and thus head of the police and political security forces. Various U.S. government estimates hold him responsible for the deaths of perhaps 200,000 Yugoslavs. Testimony at the 1961 trial of Adolph Eichmann connected Artukovic to the murder of 660,000 men, women and children, mainly Serbians and Jews.

Artukovic found haven in the United States under an alias during the confusion following the collapse of Hitler's Third Reich. Down through the years, Yugoslavia has sought his extradition without success. In 1952, an Immigration and Naturalization judge ordered him deported. Seven years later, another Immigration official ruled he could stay.

The last ruling held that Artukovic might be "persecuted" if sent back to Yugoslavia. Thus the U.S. system of justice and due process has kept him out of the hands of the Tito regime ever since.

But internal documents in our hands show that the Justice Department has been arguing with the State Department since 1975 to work out a compromise with Yugoslavian authorities to send the aging refugee back for trial as a murderer. Under the compromise the State Department would certify that Artukovic would be subject to legitimate prosecution but not persecution on the basis of "race, religion or political opinion."

The documents show that the State Department stalled during the Ford and Nixon administrations. Former Immigration Commissioner Leonard Chapman, before being replaced by Carter, upbraided the State Department for foot-dragging. The ex-Marine Corps general accused a counterpart at State of declining "to answer responsively" and he refused to accept State Department suggestions on the case.

Now under Secretary Cyrus Vance, deportation action may be imminent. Our sources say that in recent days Yugoslav diplomats and Justice officials have prevailed on the State Department to break the Artukovic logjam by promising a fair non-politicial trial.

Once this happens, the Justice Department seems certain to proceed with new deportation action. However, Artukovic still will have recourse to our courts and perhaps could delay for a year or so. But time seems to be running out for the 78-year-old ex-Nazi.

LUCRATIVE LOBBYING: President Carter has spoken out against the hiring of expensive private consultants by the government. Nevertheless, the White House quietly has hired a professional management consultant to put some pep into its often amateurish congressional lobbying staff.

He is Len Hirsch, a high-powered consultant who is collecting $125 a day in public funds for his efforts. He began work last April because President Carter's lobbying team, headed by Frank Moore, seemed to step on congressional toes every time they tried to get a bill passed.

A White House spokesman insisted that Hirsch offers no advice on how to lobby on Capitol Hill even though he heads a private firm called Congressional Management. But our sources say he devotes some time to keeping communications open between the White House and the Hill.

Hirsch suggests ways for the Carter lobbyists to work more closely with the President's policy advisers and to butter up congressmen by arranging White House tours for their constituents. He is trying to speed up the flow of paperwork and even make the secretaries more efficient in answering congressional mail.

"It helps our lobbying only to the extent that it makes our job easier," a White House staffer explained. A spokesman said Hirsch has worked only four or five days, but sources tell us he already has been paid thousands of dollars.

Footnote: Hirsch would not discuss his duties with us. But Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., is demanding an accounting from the white house.

MILITANT DISABLED: President Carter may soon find himself confronted with a political handicap by disgruntled disabled Americans. The American Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities is angered by Carter's failure to follow through on his campaign promises to the nation's 36 million handicapped.

Thousands of them conducted protest sit-ins at the Washington office of HEW Secretary Joseph Califano and HEW regional offices last spring. Shortly after, Califano okayed an order barring virtually all discrimination against the disabled by the government and by private firms getting federal funds.

But seven months later there are still no guidelines except in Califano's own department. Patience is running out among the militant disabled. A second demonstration is being discussed seriously. This one could focus on Washington. The President and Califano face the prospect of protesters in wheel chairs being photographed with their placards at the gates of the White House.

NICK THIMMESCH

On death of Laurence Woodworth, an unfamilar name

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — There is so much hot air, flimflam and posturing in this town, that we sometimes forget that underneath and beyond there in a cadre of first-rate people who make laws, study and try to solve problems, and work to make life in the Republic bearable.

Such a man was Laurence N. Woodworth, 59, who died here last week. His is not a household name. For 33 years, he worked in government on the thorny problems of writing tax laws. Woodworth was unknown to the public, but enormously respected and admired by the people who performed chores in the tax field thickets.

I didn't know the man personally. I only knew that for years there was a man on Capitol Hill who was a sort of genius director of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and that last February he signed on at the Treasury Department as assistant secretary for tax policy.

That name was "Woodward" or "Woodruff" or "Woodworth" or something like that was the way I placed him. No disrespect was intended. But unless a person's name is in the news or is a prime source, it is difficult to remember and locate it in that great, gray bureaucracy.

So Laurence N. Woodworth was, to most Washington watchers, a member of that "nameless, faceless" bureaucracy. But when he died, his name passed through town like a cyclone. The man must have made an enormous impression, in a quiet way, on many important and powerful people in the government.

A fair number of the people I called, for one reason or another the day after he died, asked whether I had heard that "Larry Woodworth had died," always adding something like, "What a shame. What a loss."

I had heard him speak last month at a national conference on tax policy and economic growth, sponsored by the National Journal. Since the White House didn't send its own "tax specialists," Woodworth was pretty much it for the Carter Administration.

There is great confusion in this town over what the Administration will finally come up with in terms of tax reform. Carter had called the tax system "a disgrace to the human race," thus bringing joy to super-reformers like Ralph Nader.

But when it came to putting a tax package where his mouth was, Carter was terribly shy. That package was first scheduled for arrival in September, then October, then the end of the year, and now it's supposed to be seen early in 1978.

When Woodworth got up in front of his audience of experts, he didn't offer alibis, because he knew his audience didn't expect them. He just talked on what the tax package should do, and he made sense.

Well, it turns out that Woodworth spent 32 years on Capitol Hill, drafting tax legislation and, on the urging of the tax-writing committees in Congress, providing advice about where they should be going with legislation. He consulted privately with key committee members, including the chairmen and ranking minority members, making "suggestions" that usually wound up in the legislation.

Woodworth was a minister's son, and his friends tell me that he carried a sense of responsibility and duty with him through his life. That's why he was conscientious to the point of working 12-16 hour days, and insisting on a professionalism at the committee which gave it the mark of excellence.

Since February, when he became President Carter's top adviser on tax policy, Woodworth rode with the trouble that emanated from the President's campaign promises on reform. Consequently, finding himself called on frequently to explain what was going on, he attended public meetings and conferences. It was at such a gathering at the College of William and Mary, in Williamsburg, Va., that Woodworth suffered a spontaneous cerebral hemmorhage, and died several days later, never regaining consciousness.

"He chose to remain in government and work himself into an early grave because he wanted to make a contribution to the nation and his fellow man," Sen. Russell Long, Senate Finance Committee chairman, said of Woodworth.

President Carter said: "His understanding of our tax system was matched only by his determination to improve the system and by his patience in dealing with those who knew far less than he."

Woodworth was well paid by the U.S. government, but he could have tripled his income had he gone into the private sector. He was of that depression and World War II generation which prides itself in doing good work, and which, sadly, is passing from government. Government executives like Woodworth who demonstrate excellence are needed, on a 20-to-one scale, to back up the "names," the Kissingers and Andrew Youngs who hog the limelight.

The federal government indeed all levels of government, needs more people of either sex or any color or religion or political persuasion who emphasize and strive for excellence. Unfortunately, the stress today is to accommodate the noisy corners of society with "affirmative action" programs providing favoritism for so-called racial minorities and women. Such pandering to activism only diminishes the quality of the bureaucracy, makes it more mediocre, and hardly a tribute to the first-rate person Laurence N. Woodworth was.

An old friend reminisces about the Baron

EDITORS NOTE: The writer of this article is a Kentucky native who grew up admiring Adolph Rupp, covered him as a journalist and later became a friend.

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The old man, his fading life flashing before him, leaned forward and looked away, trying to mask his emotions.

Adolph Rupp, college basketball's winningest coach, was being destroyed by opponents with no respect for his cunning — cancer and diabetes. He only had a few months left, and he knew it. Now, his concern was his legacy.

"Son, more than anything, I want that trophy to be what I'm remembered for. Every year, I want them to know that the award for the best player in the country is named after me."

Rupp was talking about the trophy named for him, which each year is awarded to The Associated Press college basketball player of the year. He permitted his name to be connected with the award only after an expensive, bronze trophy had been purchased and after he was assured every effort would be made to create basketball's equivalent to football's Heisman Trophy.

TWO YEARS ago, Rupp went to a banquet at Indiana University, a hated rival during his 42 years as coach at the University of Kentucky, to present his trophy to Scott May. The audience was not interested in being reminded of the times Rupp teams had defeated the Hoosiers, but Rupp reminded them anyway.

Then, he added: "A few years ago, a group of people decided they wanted college basketball to have its own Heisman Trophy. Of course, they named it for me." He meant it.

Rupp was a man who demanded, and gave, loyalty. He was, without question, a revolutionary force in basketball; no coach may ever top the 879 games his Kentucky teams won. Included were 27 Southeastern Conference titles and four national championships.

He was respected and feared by his opponents, his players, officials, nearly anyone who came in touch with him. He was a man who loved to swill bourbon, and oversee the prime Hereford cattle he raised, and tell stories, so long as he was the central figure.

And he was uncompromising. He never forgave those who forced him to retire from coaching at the mandatory retirement age of 70.

"I'll tell you something you can count on, son," he said a few months ago. "When I go, some of these people who ran me out of my job will be saying what a great man and friend I was. I wouldn't give them the time of day." He was right about that, too.

ANY ATTEMPT to remove Rupp from center stage was treated roughly.

Once, an official was delighting the Kentucky crowd with acrobatics every time he called a foul. Rupp called timeout, motioned the official to meet him in front of the press table and announced loudly, "I'm the show in this place and don't you ever forget it."

Another time, he ordered a practicing pianist removed from the team's coliseum so the Wildcats could hold a scrimmage. "She could miss 15,000 notes and nobody would know it, but if we blow one layup the whole world wants to know what happened," he said.

One night after his team had lost an important game in Alabama, Rupp hopped into a cab and ordered the driver to "step on it" even though the way was blocked by a truck. So, the driver rammed the truck. "Now that you got his attention, we can move," Rupp said.

IN ONE of his last public appearances, long after cancer had begun to cripple him, Rupp went to a banquet to present the trophy which bears his name. Helped into the auditorium by friends, he told one, "Now, son, I'm not in good shape so I want you to keep all these autograph seekers away from me."

When his subject did as told, Rupp turned and bellowed, "What the hell are you doing, boy. These people want to see me. Now get out of the way and let them come in here."

On his final trip to New York, Rupp brought along a portrait of himself. It was autographed and measured 2 feet by 4 feet.

"There's only four of these in the world, and I could sell it back in Kentucky for thousands of dollars, but I want you to have this, son, to hang in your living room," he told this reporter.

There were several telephone conversations in the few months that preceded Rupp's death last Saturday. Each time, the writer assured Rupp the portrait was hanging in his living room, afraid to mention that his wife had made him hang it in the den.

NBA comes down hard on cager

NEW YORK (AP) — Forward Kermit Washington of the Los Angeles Lakers is out of action for at least 26 games and is more than $10,000 poorer because of the latest in an increasing number of acts of violence in the National Basketball Association.

Washington was suspended for 60 days—a minimum of 26 games—and fined a record $10,000 Monday by NBA Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien for punching Houston Rocket players Kevin Kunnert and Rudy Tomjanovich, who was hospitalized, during a game last Friday night.

And the angered Rockets said they will take legal action against Washington and the Lakers.

The 60-day supension, reportedly the longest in NBA history, could be extended to the end of the season, a decision O'Brien said he would make when Washington applies for reinstatement at the end of the 60 days.

The $10,000 fine doubles the fine O'Brien handed out to Washington's teammate, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who punched Kent Benson of Milwaukee in a season opener. Abdul-Jabbar, who was not suspended but who missed 20 games because of broken right hand, tried to act as a peacemakear Friday night. He attempted to break up an altercation between Washington and Kunnert by grabbing the Houston player. Washington then turned on Tomjanovich.

THE INCIDENT will reportedly cost Washington about $50,000 because a player cannot be paid while under suspension.

"The stringent penalty reflects the severity of Washington's action on the court," O'Brien said. "A careful review of two video tapes of the game, reports from officials and statements from witnesses persuaded me to take this action."

But the penalty was not stringent enough for the Rockets, whose general manager, Ray Patterson, said Monday night that the club would sue the Lakers and Washington, claiming the incident jeopardized the Houston franchise.

Patterson said he was sure Washington also would be sued by Tomjanovich, the Rockets' leading scorer.

Neither Washington nor the Laker management were available for comment. Laker Coach Jerry West, whose team plays in New Orleans tonight, said he had no comment.

The incident occurred during the third quarter of the Rockets' 116-105 victory over the Lakers. After some jostling, Washington punched Kunnert. Washington then was ejected by referee Bob Rakel.

Then Tomjanovich came running up, leading a group of players toward Washington and Kunnert. Washington lashed out with a right hand, knocking down Tomjanovich, who is hospitalized with a dislocated jaw, broken nose, fractured skull and cerebral concussion. The Houston team physician, Dr. Chares Baker, said Tomjanovich might be out for the season.

A HOSPITAL spokesman said Tomjanovich would require an operation.

Kunnert charged that Washington had started the scuffling. "He grabbed my trunks," said Kunnert. "I tried to swat his hand away and he began punching."

After the incident, Washington said: "I saw him coming and I just swung. I had no idea who it was. Now that I've talked to other people, I understand Rudy wasn't going to fight. He's never even been in a fight. It was an honest, unfortunate mistake."

"It was a damned sucker punch," Houston Coach Tom Nissalke said after the game. "Washington has no guts. If he's not out for the year, it's a disgrace."

"I really feel sorry for Jerry," Nissalke said of Los Angeles Coach Jerry West. "It's been two dumb moves by two big players — the height of stupidity. Rudy T never fights. Most guys in professional sports don't try to destroy each other. They stick together."

Rebels, Bulldogs travel tonight

Midland High and Midland Lee's basketball teams take to the road today in an effort to improve on non-conference records.

Midland High, 9-4 on the year, travels to Lubbock Monterey in an effort to gain revenge from a 41-40 loss suffered to the Plainsmen this weekend in Snyder.

The Lee Rebels, 7-4 on the season, will travel to Sweetwater to face the AAA Mustangs. Lee is hoping to erase a two-game losing streak, which was suffered in the Austin tournament this weekend.

Both teams will play at 8 p.m. tonight.

Dockery selects staff; asks three to stay on

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Three of the current Texas Tech assistant football coaches have been asked to stay on the staff of new Head Coach Rex Dockery.

The three were included in the names of the five assistants named Monday by Dockery.

Dockery and the trio worked under Steve Sloan, who resigned to go to the University of Mississippi.

The holdovers from Sloan's staff are offensive line coach Al Tanara, backfield coach Taylor McNeel and defensive end coach Jess Stiles.

The other two are Bud Casey, who comes from Georgia Tech and Sam Robertson of Southwestern Louisiana.

Casey will work with the offense and Robertson the defense. Specific duties will not be assigned until the staff is completed.

Dockery said "We think all five are excellent coaches with excellent backgrounds. Hopefully, we can get the staff completed and get on to other things in the next week or so."

Lo-Vaca rate order overturned

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A 1973 Texas Railroad Commission interim rate order that allowed Coastal States Gas Corp. and Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. to charge 10 times the contractual amount for natural gas has been overturned.

The commission Monday ordered the firms to refund $1 billion to customers from whom the money was collected under the old order.

In Houston, Coastal States said in a statement that the order would be appealed.

Commissioner Jon Newton said to excuse the two companies from the terms of the long-term contracts signed over a decade ago "would encourage every utility in this state to

Israeli delegation reaches Cairo

By ELIAS ANTAR

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Israel's delegates to the preparatory Egyptian-Israeli peace talks arrived in Cairo today aboard an Israeli jetliner carrying the inscription "Peace" in Arabic and Hebrew. They were followed by American and U.N. representatives.

The three Israeli delegates, their staff of 27, and 35 journalists flew here on an El Al Boeing 707 flying the Egyptian and Israeli flags from the cockpit windows. Written on one side of the fuselage was the Arabic, Salaam; on the other the Hebrew, Shalom.

"We hope that at the next stage the delegations of other Arab counties will participate in the direct negotiations," said the chief Israeli delegate, Eliahu Ben-Elissar, as he left Tel Aviv.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance arrived in Damascus to try to persuade Syrian President Hafez Assad to soften his opposition to Egypt's peace overtures and participate in the Cairo conference. Vance flew to the Syrian capital from Beirut as he continued his six-nation tour of the Middle East.

In another development, Saudi Arabia radio reported that Jordan's King Hussein, who has been trying to heal the Arab split over Egypt's conciliation with Israel, will visit Saudi Arabia next Saturday to confer with King Khaled. Vance also plans to visit oil-rich Saudi Arabia, the chief bankroller of both Egypt and Syria.

In Cairo, armed troops surrounded the runway where the Israeli plane landed, and about 30 Egyptian airport workers stood around to watch it touch down.

The door opened and Maj. Gen. Avraham Tamir, the Israeli military delegate, appeared.

"The Israelis have come! They have come!" one of the workers shouted.

"Let's hope they do something about peace," said another.

In the cockpit of the plane were three former Israeli air force men who were shot down over Egypt.

The delegation was greeted in the chill morning air by Ambassador Said Hamza, Egypt's chief of protocol.

No Israeli flags were flying, and there was no band.

The Israelis walked to a waiting helicopter that flew them to the Mena House, the historic old hotel at the foot of the Great Pyramid of Cheops, where the conference President Anwar Sadat has called to make preparations for a Geneva peace conference opens Wednesday.

Meir Rosenne, legal advisor to the Israeli Foreign Ministry, is the third member of the delegation.

The Israelis were met in the lobby of the hotel by A. Esmat Abdel Meguid, Egypt's ambassador to the United Nations and the head of the Egyptian delegation for the talks, and the local governor, Abdel Akher.

The other members of the Egyptian delegation are Osama El Baz, a Foreign Ministry undersecretary, and Gen. Taha El Magdoub.

U.S.-Japan talks on trade surplus still inconclusive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Japan are apparently still far apart on what to do about a Japanese trade surplus that has forced plant shutdowns and layoffs in many U.S. industries.

The top American trade negotiator, Robert Strauss, said after talks Monday that Japan's initial proposals involving tariff cuts on a number of goods imported into that country fall "considerably short" of U.S. demands.

Japan's minister for external economic affairs, Nobuhiko Ushiba, met with Strauss, Vice President Walter Mondale and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

He had further meetings scheduled with Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland and members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Japan's worldwide exports this year are expected to top imports by $16 billion. About half of that is attributable to its trade with the United States.

The Carter administration maintains that Japan's big surplus is aggravating economic problems for its trading partners, most of which are already burdened with high import bills, especially for petroleum.

The influx of Japanese goods into the United States, without any compensating outflow of American products, has severely affected a number of industries, including televison and steel.

Strauss said the United States is "looking for trade measures that will have an immediate effect."

He said the United States would like to see Japan slash tariffs for a wide range of U.S. goods, including autos, televisions, computers and farm products.

Japan, arguing it should not be penalized for hard work and efficiency, is resisting U.S. demands to alter its trade policies.

U.S. officials who briefed newsmen Monday night said the United States has not threatened Japan with retaliatory action if the American demands are not met.

German espionage penetration disclosed

The Los Angeles Times

BONN — The West German coalition government, which recently regained substantial political standing through its firm handling of terrorist attacks, was embarrassed Monday by disclosures of a new, major Communist-directed espionage penetration of its Defense Ministry.

Following disclosures by the respected, conservative national newspaper, Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, a Defense Ministry spokesman admitted that the case concerning information stolen by three East German spies arrested last year was "exceptionally serious."

Leaders of the opposition party in parliament, the Christian Democratic Union, said that the new case made the crime of Guenther Guillaume, an East German agent who was personal assistant to former Chancellor Willy Brandt "look as harmless as an orphan boy."

The exposure of Guillaume, who is now serving a 13-year jail term, forced Brandt to resign as chancellor in 1974 to be succeeded by Helmut Schmidt. Both are members of the Social Democratic Party which governs Germany in coalition with the small Free Democratic Party.

The Bundestag (parliament) Defense Committee announced that Defense Minister Georg Leber had been asked to appear Wednesday to explain how the three accused spies had been able to penetrate the agency's security system and steal documents vital to German defense and to NATO.

Officials at NATO headquarters in Brussels confirmed that they had been informed about the German case and acknowledged that the spies had sent valuable information to the East.

"They (the Communists) know where we think they are weak and where we think they are strong," a spokesman said. "And they know where we think we are weak and where we think we are strong.

"NATO is evaluating the extent of the damage done by the material compromised."

According to the Frankfurt newspaper report, which quoted from a preliminary report by the federal prosecutor, the three accused spies are a husband and wife, Lothar-Erwin and Renate Lutze, and Juergen Wiegel.

Mrs. Lutze was the key factor as secretary for four years to Herbert Laabs, chief of the Defense Ministry

Players 'jazz it up' at monthly sessions

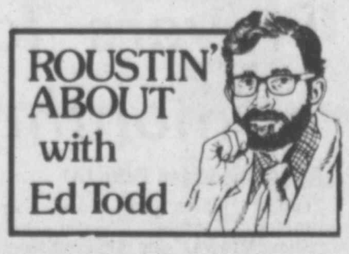
And it would be an even more rare nickelodeon that would spin Basin Street jazz and swing-era tunes in these days of soft rock 'n' roll, country music and other pop stuff.



And even rarer, it seems, would be a real live jam session that knocks out those numbers that once lit up juke boxes across the nation's dance floors and in roadside and uptown cafes.

Well, right here in the middle of West Texas are some musicians who like to "jazz it up" at least once a month. They get together afternoons on the second Sunday of each month at The Sans Souci tavern just west of downtown Midland.

These fellows play the likes of "A

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Ted Spewock hit the sign that hangs on the entrance to the Clark Hollow Mine with his open palm. It reads: "Private Property."

"See this here," he said, pointing to the sign. "When the federal inspectors come, I ask them if they have anything invested in this place. Then I tell them to get the hell out of here and not keep a man from his work."

Spewock, 56, is afraid federal safety regulations may close his coal mine, so he keeps the inspectors out. His mine has not been inspected for three years.

He stooped into the mine's four-foot shaft to fetch Smokey, the 15-year-old pony that helps him draw three loads of coal daily from the one-man mine.

"If they try to shut me down it will be over my dead body.

"This isn't my dream to be operating here by myself," he said, unbuckling the horse's harness. "I want to get that straight. I gotta support my family."

The output of Spewock's mine is so small that even before the nationwide United Mine Workers strike, he could not meet the demands of local consumers. It is just enough for him to eke out a living.

Spewock opened his southwestern Pennsylvania mine 17 years ago. He has been working alone since 1970, a year after Congress approved the federal Coal Mine and Safety Act.

The law, enacted after 78 people died in a 1968 mine explosion near Mannington, W.Va., required strict safety measures too expensive for many small mine operators.

Before the law passed, Spewock had two employees shoveling the coal he cut. They

By JIM STEINBERG

At a meeting perhaps most notable for the fact that all board members were there, Midland Community Action Agency staff member Dennis Allen said Monday the final stretch of the grant application for a Family Crises Center providing an outreach counseling and referral service for Midland's poor, elderly, and handicapped is at hand.

On Wednesday, Allen and MCAA Executive Director Alexandra Morris will ask the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Board agency's plan and proposed funding totaling $77,003.

After the Monday meeting, Allen said the Family Crises Center as proposed appears to be the only one like it in the country. Not only will it provide needed counseling to a segment of Midland County's population that has been untouched by other county help services, but the Family Crises Center concept will also provide professional training for counselors from minority groups through an internship program at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

Allen described a counseling outreach program, as one where the counselors move to where the problem is, "rather than sitting in an office waiting for people to come in." The availability of the services will not be limited by an 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. schedule, Allen stressed, adding that he expected it would provide night and eventually Saturday counseling services.

The service will zero in on needs in designated poverty areas in Midland, Allen said, adding that special emphasis would be given to the needs of the elderly.

"The main focus of the counseling activities will be on the resolution of psychological and social adjustment problems, marital conflicts and parent-child relationships," Allen said.

In addition to the counseling services the Family Crises Center will provide for client needs for information about existing agency services, transportation to those agencies and the referral of clients to existing agencies, Allen said, adding that the proposal does not duplicate any service currently operating.

"If anything, it will increase the load on existing agencies, rather than pull away from them," Allen said, explaining that the center would refer persons to agencies which otherwise would not have known about them. Estimates are that the grant would benefit approximately 1,387 people in Midland, Allen said.

There is a shortage of skilled professional counselors who are minority group members in this area, and by training those counselors here, the chances are good that at least some of them will stay, Allen said.

The proposed funding for the Family Crises Center is divided between a $54,481 grant from the Community Service Agency and a $22,522 from UTPB, Allen said.

MCAA staff member Albert Jones told the board that so far 30 applications have been received for the agency-run weatherization program. Under that program, up to $250 worth of insulation can be added to a house provided the occupants meet poverty guidelines.

Jones said that as soon as funds have been received, "We are ready to get rolling."

Board members agreed with a suggestion by Mrs. Morris, that thought should be given to finding a new name for the agency, to disassociate it with the "stigma" of the past.

Midland temperatures seem to be warming up

Temperatures in Midland seem to be warming up a little after the cold weather the city had earlier this month.

The weatherman said Wednesday's high temperature should be in the 70s, and the low temperature tonight should fall to the middle 30s. Skies are expected to be mostly fair through Wednesday. Northerly winds should decrease to 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Monday's high temperature was 75 degrees. The overnight low temperature was 42 degrees, the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

All area towns reported rather cold temperatures this morning with clear skies overhead.

The front triggered shower activity in Central and East Texas, but most of the rainfall was light.

Skies early today were mostly cloudy east of a line from San Angelo to Wichita Falls and generally fair west of the line. Some fog and drizzle was reported along the Gulf coast.

Early morning temperature extremes ranged from 37 at Dalhart in the Panhandle to 69 at Brownsville, Victoria and Corpus Christi.

By LINDA HILL SCHAFFRINA

Midland County commissioners Monday tabled until January a proposal to create a county court at law.

The court at law would be in addition to the existing county court and would have the same jurisdiction, except that it could consider civil cases involving up to $5,000, instead of the $1,000 limit set for the county court.

The proposal was tabled at the request of Commissioner Durward Wright who said he wants to have information about how the new court would affect the other county departments, such as the county clerk's office.

County Judge Barbara Culver, County Attorney Leslie Acker and representatives from the Midland Bar Association and Young Lawyers Association urged the commissioners to activate the court in January, as is allowed under legislation passed in 1977.

Acker presented reports to the commissioners showing 558 criminal cases and 1,858 civil cases pending at the end of November in Midland's district courts.

In county court, 538 cases were pending at the end of November, according to the county clerk's monthly report.

All those speaking in favor of immediate creation of the court cited the Speedy Trial Act as one reason for quick action. That law will require both district and county courts to try criminal cases withing a specified amount of time.

They also cited increasing case loads for all the courts.

If the commissioners do not act, the court will come into existence in 1980.

County Clerk Rosenell Cherry told the Commissioners Court she has been notified by the state secretary of state's office that the county court at law will have to appear on the 1978 ballot, even if no action is taken.

In another election matter, Judge Culver told commissioners the court needs to consider the impact of a recent attorney general's opinion reiterating that each county must have four peace justice precincts.

The secretary of state has ruled that each precinct must appear on the ballot, she said.

Midland County has four peace justice precincts, but three are small tracts of land with no population.

There was no discussion among the commissioners on that subject. Commissioner Charlie Welch earlier had proposed redefining peace justice precinct boundaries so that a peace justice and constable would be assigned to the Greenwood community.

Welch said Monday he did not bring up that proposal because more information needs to be gathered in light of the attorney general's opinion.

That land could be used for future parking needs or expansion of office space.

The land currently is being used as a private parking lot. Wright said the tenants would be notified about where to send the January parking fees, but continued private use of the lot would be on a temporary basis.

In other action, the commissioners approved an agreement with the city of Midland for the county to pay $10,000, retroactive to June 1, for a year's ambulance service outside the city limits. That amount is the same as the county paid last year.

seek relief from their contractual obligations."

"The commission should not place itself in the position of rewarding a public utility which pursues profits at any cost in deliberate disregard of its contractual and public utility obligations," Newton said.

President William Greehey of Lo-Vaca said the company did not have the money to make such a huge refund.

The commission's order said the interim order will remain in effect pending litigation on the action.

Newton, who proposed the commission order, said the Coastal-Lo-Vaca problem arose because Lo-Vaca had sought short-term profits by using up low-cost gas on sales "whenever and wherever possible."

The order carried 2-1, with chairman Mack Wallace joining Newton, and Jim Langdon dissenting.

Langdon sought to delay the vote. He and Greehey predicted the order would bankrupt Lo-Vaca, and Greehey questioned what the order might do to Lo-Vaca's gas supplies with the "dead of winter" approaching.

Langdon said the order might produce an "almost horror story" in the social and ecomomic life of South Texas.

Newton countered by saying Lo-Vaca has an excess of gas and added, "No lights are going out" as a result of the order.

"It would be preposterous for the commission to relieve Coastal-Lo-Vaca from its contractual obligations, to give them complete absolution for their sins of utility mismanagement," Newton said.

Lo-Vaca has some 400 customers, including Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and the Lower Colorado River Authority. Newton said those cities, as well as Dallas and Fort Worth, supported his proposal.

In adopting the order the commission wiped out an 1973 interim order that had allowed Lo-Vaca to charge for gas whatever it had to pay producers, plus an extra five cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf).

The 1973 order was adopted after Lo-Vaca curtailed gas deliveries by up to 50 percent in 1972-73, claiming it could no longer operate under its decade-old long-term contracts, which charged approximately 20 cents per mcf.

Spy penetration comes to light social affairs department who had access to especially sensitive materials as chairman of a committee that advised Leber on strategic military issues.

Leber, a Social Democratic Party member and former trade union official who succeeded Schmidt as defense minister in 1972, has often been under political pressure, especially last year when he fired two top-ranking air force generals for associating with an ex-Nazi and earlier this year when he replaced a top civilian official with a retired general.

The ruling coalition that won reelection with a reduced majority in October 1976 had recently regained considerable political strength as the result of the government's firm handling of terrorist attacks in Germany and the hijacking of a Lufthansa airliner to Somalia in October.

The loss of voter support in 1976 was partly blamed on the Guillaume case which, like the newest case, involved a married couple who had emigrated from East Germany many years ago and ingratiated themselves into the West German government.

West Germany is especially sensitive to espionage because it stands on the front line facing Communist East Europe and a massive Soviet army concentrated in East Germany.

Government officials have estimated that there are as many as 15,000 Communist agents or informers active in West Germany. Of 13,527 espionage cases investigated between 1970 and 1976, about 89 percent involved agents directed from East Germany or the Soviet Union.

The Bonn counterintelligence agency reported earlier this year that in 1976 it closed 455 specific espionage cases, a 57 percent increase over its record for 1975. The spy cases involved attempts to dig out economic and industrial secrets from Europe's strongest economy as well as defense secrets from NATO's second strongest military power.

Frankurter allegemeine said that the three defense ministry spies were among 16 agents arrested in June 1976 in a major counter espionage blow by the West German authorities.

According to newspaper, the agents had seized materials describing Bonn's plans for responding to a military crisis including the timing for distributing ammunition and aligning troops in battle position, when civilian transportation would be commandeered and the civilian population evacuated from battle areas.

The stolen material also reportedly included plans for future development of the army and its weapons, particularly tanks.

Two injured in truck crash

BIG SPRING — Two Hobbs, N.M., men were in satisfactory condition this morning in the intensive care unit of Malone-Hogan Hospital in Big Spring after the gravel truck in which they were traveling struck a parked hay truck on State Highway 176 Monday morning.

Elias Maldondo Jr., 22, of Hobbs was driving the truck, and his brother, Raul Maldondo, 18, was a passenger, the Department of Public Safety said. Bost received head injuries and severe facial cuts. They were trapped inside the cab of the truck for nearly an hour, according to DPS reports.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Wade Turner of Stanton.

15-year-old Midlander dies

A Midland youth died Monday of injuries suffered in a truck-motorcycle accident two miles south of Midland on Dec. 3.

Thomas Roger Starr, 15, of Rt. 3, died about 1:10 p.m. Monday of injuries received in the accident, a Midland Memorial Hospital spokesman said.

Starr suffered head and chest injuries, according to the Department of Public Safety, when the motorcycle he was driving and a pickup truck driven by Francisco DeLeon of Fort Stockton collided.

Both vehicles were northbound on Texas 349 when the accident occurred Dec. 3.

Annual yule party tonight

Members of the Downtown Rotary Club and their Rotary-Anns will hold their annual Christmas party tonight, with girl residents and adult personnel of High Sky Girls Ranch as their special guests.

The function is scheduled in the Midland Hiiton. A social period is scheduled at 6 p.m., with dinner to be served at 7.

A special program of entertainment will be presented.

R. O. Smith, club secretary, said the club's regular Thursday luncheon will not be held this week.

Midland man 'satisfactory'

A Midland man was in satisfactory condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital after a two-car traffic accident at Garfield Street and Golf Course Road Monday afternoon.

Charles Edward Scoggins of the 4700 block of West Illinois Avenue was in satisfactory condition with a broken leg, hospital spokesman said. A passenger in the car Scoggins was driving, Mark Torrence of the 100 block of South Eisenhower Street, was treated and released.

Police said Scoggins was westbound on Golf Course Road and a vehicle driven by Joyce Rosenbaum Smith of the 400 block of Ainslee Street was eastbound on Golf Course attempting to turn north on Garfield when the two cars collided.

Scoggins and Torrence were thrown through the air when the cars collided, and Scoggins landed 15 feet from the point of impact, police said.

produced about 12 tons of coal a day — worth more than $600 at today's prices. The mine safety act forced Spewock to let his employees go. He now digs about two tons a day.

"The big companies didn't want the small operator in business," Spewock said. "It's a pity. If it wasn't for that damn law I could keep a couple guys busy."

Now he fears federal inspectors will force him to shut the mine altogether.

Train," "Who's Sorry Now," "Sentimental Journey," "Satin Doll," "Shanty Town," and other numbers a generation or more into the past.

This last Sunday, about 10 jazz artists got together at Lee and Alice Johnson's dinner club. These Sunday jazz men may be a priest or a pipeliner on the trumpet, a professor on the piano, a lawyer on the trombone or a businessman on the saxophone.

"I just hack around," Carpenter said, after he took leave of the trumpet. "I just like to play."

That was obvious. He looked happy up there — standing to the side of Dr. Clyde Vedder, who was putting some wear into the upright piano. Vedder teached criminology at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Carvel Mills was contentedly playing the sax. He would wait until it was all over before getting too tired to play.

Playing with that same untiring enthusiasm was Vern Martin, the state district attorney for Midland County. His wife Zella seemed to be listening to the sounds as intensely as as her spouse was playing.

"I enjoy it," she said. "Vern's happy when he's playing." That, too, was obvious.

It was good sound.

The jam session was put together a year or more ago by jazz aficionado Max Howard and trombonist Martin.

And all you other hazz devotees, whether they be musician or listener, may drop by The Sans Souci next month for a three-hour afternoon jam session.

It'll be worth the time, all you fans of the Dorsey brothers, Duke Ellington, Glenn Miller, Woody Herman and the other swing-era and jazz greats.

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's energy planners have decided to trust the National Weather Service's long-range forecasts this winter for energy use projections rather than rely on those of private forecasters.

The vote of confidence in the NWS comes less from an outstanding record for distant predictions — which the service admits it doesn't have — than from uncertainty about how good the private forecasters are, says an Energy Department spokesman.

The weather service says that even if its long-range forecasts aren't always perfect, they are at least as good, if not better, than anyone else's.

Long-range forecasting, meaning predictions for periods a week or more into the future, is just one of many areas in which the NWS is being challenged by private, profit-making forecasters.

Federal forecasters supply basic weather reports and private outfits supplement this for special-interest customers such as oil companies, local governments and some broadcast stations who demand more detail.

NWS spokesmen say the nation is getting its money's worth from the relatively small agency. Part of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the weather service employs only about 5,100 persons and has a yearly budget of less than $200 million.

"We figure we are the second most-used government agency, after the Postal Service," says Earl W. Estelle, chief of the NWS public services branch. "But we are very small in number by comparison."

The NWS Long Range Prediction Group also is small compared with its responsibility of predicting future weather, critically important to agriculture, energy planning and almost every segment of the economy.

Dr. Donald L. Gilman and his staff of six do 30-day temperature and precipitation outlooks and 90-day seasonal temperature forecasts basically by charting upper-level wind patterns.

Gilman says his group uses several methods to interpret the patterns. These include checking back through 30 years of file charts to look for similar movements, using mathematical equations and computers and looking at old temperature probability charts going back to the year 1900.

Board adds four members

The Midland College Foundation recently added four members to its original group of nine members.

The new members are Tom Brown, president of Tom Brown, Inc.; Clarence Scharbauer III, who is involved in ranching and investments; Donald O'Shaughnessy, president of Lario Oil & Gas, and Ralph Way, an oil operator.

These new members will contribute their services to the foundation, which is making the difference between Midland College being a good school and a great one, college President Al G. Langford said.

"The members of the foundation have given us invaluable assistance and guidance that have contributed beyond measure to the growth and stature of Midland College during its first nine years. And their work will help us achieve the goal of becoming the finest comprehensive community college in Texas and then in the nation," Langford said.

A little-noticed group of Midlanders, the foundation members have administered funding for landscaping the new campus, scholarship contributions, equipment and construction.

Organized soon after the college came into being, the foundation is recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as a non-profit, tax-exempt organization, chartered to accept gifts of money, stocks, real estate, bonds or other items of value for the college's benefit.

Mrs. J. Howard Hodge, president of Hodge Theatres, is serving as the foundation's president. J. Harvey Herd, oil operator, is vice president, and Murry Fasken, board chairman Midland National Bank, is secretary-treasurer.

When the original seven buildings on the new campus were designed, rapidly-increasing construction costs caused the administration to consider eliminating some aspects of the structures. But the foundation stepped in with sufficient funds to enable the original campus design to be carried through. It has funded much of the landscaping work, so all the campus could be landscaped at once, and has provided funding for an underground sprinkler system.

Contributions to the college come in pledges for certain programs, usually in the form of cash gifts, for academic or athletic scholarships or to provide equipment for specific programs.

They also may come in the form of unrestricted gifts, which may be used for any purpose by the foundation. Some gifts are made for specific campus beautification or enrichment projects.

A number of gifts have been made in honor of specific persons. Several major oil companies have made continuing grants, both to help specific programs and to provide unrestricted financial assistance. Other Midland businesses have contributed scholarship grants in amounts ranging from $100 to several thousand dollars.

"Through the Midland College Foundation, we have attempted to provide a number of ways in which gifts may be made to Midland College. Persons who wish may provide for specific gifts through their wills, memorials or bequests," Langford said.

Court fails to require press to suppress doubtful charges

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court let stand Monday a ruling newspaper can report undocumented charges that three scientists are "paid liars" without being liable for damages for defamation.

The Second U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals handed a victory to The New York Times and the National Audubon Society in a ruling last May.

Under the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press, a newspaper may not be required "to suppress newsworthy statements merely because it has serious doubts concerning their truth," Chief Judge Irving R. Kaufman wrote.

"Nor must the press take up the cudgels against dubious charges in order to publish them without fear of liability for defamation," Kaufman continued.

"The public interest in being fully informed about controversies that rage around sensitive issues demands that the press be afforded the freedom to report such charges without fear of liability for defamation."

In a friend-of-the-court brief, Accuracy in Media (AIM), a nonprofit organization, said that the ruling permits a newspaper "to launch an irresponsible attack on one side or the other via the devious road of maligning an outside antagonist with impunity," those it dislikes.

The appellate court overturned a $61,000 damage award made by Federal Judge Charles M. Metzner to the scientists, each of whom is a Ph.D. and a professor: entomoligist J. Gordon Edwards of San Jose State College in California, medical physicist and nutritionist Thomas H. Jukes of the University of California at Berkeley and biologist Robert White-Stevens of Rutgers University in New Jersey.

A key issue in the case was whether Robert S. Arbib Jr., editor of "American Birds," an Audubon Society publication, had identified the scientists as "paid liars" to Times reporter John Devlin. Arbib swore he hadn't; Devlin swore he had.

Three years of pre-trial proceedings failed to resolve the dispute. Solely for that reason, Metzner rejected a motion for a summary judgment made by The Times, the society and Roland C. Clement, a vice president of the society.

The case was rooted in a bitter, long-standing controversy over DDT and certain other pesticides.

Opponents of the chemicals claimed they endangered bird life. Proponents said that without them insect-carried diseases and crop destruction by insect pests would kill millions of human beings. Dr. Edwards once called a ban on exports of DDT, which the society supported, "deliberately genocidal."

The society sponsored an annual Christmas bird count. Despite rising pesticide use over a 30-year period, bird sightings steadily increased. Pesticide advocates seized on this to claim that birds thrive in the pesticide era, even on a sightings-per-watcher basis.

Stalemate could delay SS bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration and congressional leaders are looking for a way out of a stalemate that threatens to block a Social Security bill this year and could delay income tax cuts next year.

With a target year-end adjournment date of Thursday approaching, congressional aides say no solution has emerged from a series of private meetings involving House and Senate tax-writers.

One top-level staff member said the negotiating process was not helped by remarks made by Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Califano told reporters Saturday that a college tuition tax credit now attached to the bill is so bad that he would seriously consider recommending that President Carter veto the entire package.

Califano said it is intolerable for Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., chief sponsor of the tuition credit, to hold the Social Security bill hostage. In reality, however, Roth has had the unanimous support of other Senate conferees when votes were taken.

Senate and House conferees reached agreement last Friday on all parts of the Social Security bill itself. But they could not send the measure back to the House and Senate for final votes because they could not agree on the proposed tuition credit.

Most House conferees are adamantly opposed to the $250-per-student credit and said they can never vote for a bill that includes it.

Getting a Social Security bill this year is a top priority of the Carter administration. Roth said the bill would have been cleared on Friday for final action had it not been for "meddling" by administration officials.

Testimony involves man, missing brother

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Henry C. Johnson and Robert Johnson, his brother who has been missing for almost a year since he reportedly fell overboard from a boat in the Gulf of Mexico, had cosigned several promissory notes, according to testimony in federal court here Monday.

Henry C. Johnson is being tried on charges of interstate transportation of stolen wheat and with aiding and abetting his missing brother in another alleged illegal wheat scheme.

Testimony in the trial began Monday before a five-woman, seven-man jury in federal court here.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Ron Eddins told the jury he would show how farmers were cheated out of their grain by the Geronimo Elevator Co., owned by Henry Johnson, and the Robert Johnson Grain & Molasses Co., owned by Robert Johnson, who has been missing since January 3rd when he went on a fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico.

Many law enforcement officials do not believe Johnson drowned, but claim he is hiding. Following his disappearance, officials said they were unable to find about 400,000 bushels of grain that was supposed to be stored in his elevators.

William Long of a fertilizer firm and T.I. Sutton of a finance company testified Monday that the Johnson brothers in the past had co-signed several promissory notes.

The Johnson brothers in June and July of 1976 transported the grain from Colorado and Oklahoma to Houston for sale, prosecutors claim.

ACLU losing members in defense of Nazis

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union's defense of a Nazi effort to march in a predominately Jewish suburb has created the ACLU's "most serious threat ever" — a sharp drop in membership and financial contributions.

The Illinois ACLU has cut its staff by one-fourth and its budget by 30 percent. The national ACLU has prepared a 1978 budget 15 percent lower than the current budget.

"This is the most serious threat the ACLU has ever faced," said Franklin Haiman, the ACLU's national secretary and a professor at Northwestern University. He said the approximately 15 percent cut in the national budget was caused by "a nationwide uproar over this case."

Skokie, a suburb north of Chicago, is nearly 60 percent Jewish, including thousands of people who survived or lost relatives in World War II German death camps. The ACLU represents the Nazis in three court cases involving attempts to march in Skokie.

"I've never seen this much ruckus over a case," said Aryeh Neier, ACLU's national executive director. "We had a very substantial membership loss ... It's clear a lot of people are very angry."

Neier refused to estimate the membership or financial loss, saying "maybe the post office is just slow" delivering membership fees. He said December is normally the ACLU's best recruiting month.

Neier said he has completed a "conservative budget" for 1978 that would include staff reductions and reduce the ACLU's ability to handle civil liberties cases.

"This will have an obvious impact on the man on the street," said David Hamlin, executive director of the Illinois ACLU. "We will have to refuse cases we would normally take," such as student rights, invasion of privacy, prisoner rights and race rights cases.

"And it means we won't be taking on major litigation, such as in filing a suit against the city of Chicago for not desegregating its schools."

Hamlin said his 12-member staff is being cut by three. One staff member cut was the person who handled membership solicitation, Hamlin added, so recouping losses will be even more difficult.

"And the Nazis haven't even marched in Skokie yet," Hamlin said. "I'm sure the courts will eventually say they can march. If the court provides a convincing argument explaining why the Nazis should march, maybe the ACLU will come out all right. If not, we could be in worse shape."

Offshore gas platform continues to burn

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — A natural gas platform in the Gulf of Mexico continued to burn today, forcing a pipeline company to use reserves to supply gas for two million customers in Wisconsin and Michigan.

However, Ray J. Lynch, president of Michigan Wisconsin Pipeline Co. said in Detroit that no customers had lost service. He said he hoped the regular flow of gas could be restored today.

The problem began early Monday when a 200-foot boat, the North Sea Horse, rammed the unmanned platform, which sits in the Gulf about 36 miles southwest of Morgan City.

The collision cut a high-pressure gas line, and the resulting fire sent flames 20 to 40 feet high. Hunt Oil Co., owner of the platform, said that although the platform was heavily damaged, the well on the platform was shut-in and did not catch fire.

No one was injured in the accident, and the boat was to be towed back to shore.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported that a light oil slick, measuring 150 to 200 yards spread from the platform, but no major pollution was reported.

The platform contained one producing gas well and was receiving gas from two lines from two other wells in the field. In addition, there is an incoming gas pipeline and a departing gas pipeline belonging to the Michigan Wisconsin Pipeline Co.

The platform also contained two 2,000-barrel tanks used for storage of condensate, a highquality liquid petroleum.

The major source of fuel for the fire was the incoming eightinch pipeline. An estimated 2,400 barrels of condensate stored in the tanks also caught fire.

The fire forced the pipeline company to turn to reserves for one-third of its natural gas supply, said Michigan Wisconsin spokesman in Detroit.

Michigan Wisconsin Pipe Line sells gas to 51 distribution companies in Texas, Michigan and Wisconsin, but the bulk of the gas is consumed in Michigan and Wisconsin.

"Actually, our system has a lot of storage and we can take it," said a spokesman. "We think we can get more gas from other systems to take up the slack.

'Michigan Wisconsin and its distribution affiliates have about 300 billion cubic feet of underground storage and we can back off quite a bit of gas on Michigan Consolidated, a distribution company which also has a lot of storage."

Outlook good

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The oilfield supply business outlook for 1978 and beyond is good, the president of Bovaird Supply Co. said today at the firm's annual shareholders meeting.

"Despite the oil industry's complaints about federal price ceilings and other regulations, oil and gas operators are more active now than for many years," William J. Bovaird told the meeting.

Petroleum products demand is still climbing in the United States and is expected to go up 3.5 percent next year. The long decline in domestic production of pretroleum has been turned around and is expected to rise slightly next year.

The rate of drilling of new wells has increased steadily in 1977 and it is indicated the year will show more wells completed and more footage drilled than any year for the past couple of decades, he said.

Rotary rigs in use are averaging more than 2,100, compared with 1,800 last year and only 1,100 in 1971, Bovaird said. In 1978 the number of wells drilled, total footage and active rotary rigs will increase from 5 to 8 percent over this year, according to his predictions.

Bovaird forecast that the United States "will be a beehive of oil and gas activity" for the next 15 or 20 years and that higher prices for oil and gas will result in drilling and discoveries in many new areas and formations.

Korea opens exploration door

The Washington Post

SINGAPORE — In a surprising departure from its policy of economic self-reliance, North Korea has signed a preliminary agreement to allow foreign companies to explore for oil in its offshore territory.

A Singapore-based consulting company, Asia Exploration, Consultants Ltd., has confirmed that it has signed a protocol with the state-operated Korea Industrial Technology Corp. "regarding petroleum exploration and development offshore the People's Democratic Republic of Korea."

A statement was released by Ted Daniels, chief executive of the company, to Petroleum News Southeast Asia, a regional energy journal in Hong Kong. The statement said that "a final agreement is expected to be signed early in 1978."

Informed sources said the agreement would give Asia Exploration Consultants exclusive rights to organize a complete package of offshore exploration for North Korea.

North Korea will allow the company to employ subcontractors of any nationality except U.S. or South Korean, the sources said.

The job could eventually involve scores of companies on tasks ranging from seismic surveys to oil-rig operations. If oil is discovered in exploitable quantities, produciton platform and pipeline constructors would be needed.

There was no word on where exploration might begin, but one Singapore specialist suggested the Gulf of Chihli off Korea's west coast as a likely starting point. The site is near where the Chinese have found promising geogological formations and are concentrating much of their own search for oil.

The two Koreas, Japan, China and the Soviet Union dispute ownership of parts of the Sea of Japan, the Yellow Sea and the Gulf of Chihli.

Industry observers believe there is at present no significant production of oil in North Korea, and that the country's requirements are met by imports from China and the Soviet Union.

There was no immediate explanation for North Korea's decision to do business with multinational oil corporations, long cast as archvillains by many leftist ideologies.

Observers noted, however, that Moscow recently called on countries that import its oil to help finance the opening of new fields and pipelines in the Soviet Union. North Korea's move might be an effort to limit its dependence on Moscow.

Another theory is that the Koreans have decided to follow the example of neighboring China, which is going all-out to produce more oil to fuel the economy as a whole. Given the relatively backward state of offshore technology in Communist-bloc countries, North Korea would have no alternative but to import know-how and equipment from the West.

China currently is making major purchases of Western exploration and development equipment.

Peking insists that Chinese operate all equipment and does not allow foreign companies to p cipate in the process of exploration or development.

Court drops 12 suits

DALLAS (AP) — Twelve antitrust suits filed by individuals and companies in the cattle industry from 19 states accusing major supermarket chains of price fixing have been dismissed by U.S. District Court Judge William Taylor.

The suits claimed the supermarkets conspired to depress the price they paid to packers and slaughterhouses for fresh, frozen or processed beef. The cattlemen claimed they had been injured because the alleged action lowered the price they received for beef.

The suits, some of which were filed in Texas, were consolidated last year in Judge Taylor's court.

Included as defendants were 15 supermarket chains, the National Association of Food Chains and the National Provisioner, a commercial wholesale meat reporting service.

There are four suits filed by the cattlemen against packers pending in Taylor's court.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A state district court judge, utilizing a seldom-used Court of Inquiry procedure, has ordered a labor union to turn over some of its financial records.

Judge Darrell Hester ordered the Harlingen-based Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 823 to make available its records concerning the use of federal Manpower funds received by the union.

Hester called the Court of Inquiry, which is similiar to a grand jury proceeding but held in open court, to investigate the Cameron County Manpower program.

The local Manpower agency contracts with local businesses to train disadvantaged persons. The agency's funds come from the Department of Labor, which last year spent than $11 million in the local program.

The Court of Inquiry will focus on the association between the area's largest Manpower fund recipient, Local 823, and the federal program.

Don Gray is the union's business manager and his brother, Clarence, is the former chairman of the Manpower Planning Board, which makes recommendations as to who receives the federal funds.

Clarence Gray recently resigned as chairman of the board citing a possible "conflict of interest" but remained as a member of the board.

Harlingen lawyer Jack Skaggs, who represents Doh Gray, asked that Hester refuse to let auditors present business records of the Grays because such a procedure "required them to produce evidence against themselves."

Hester replied that Skaggs' motion was equivalent to the Grays' invoking the Fifth Amendment and said the brothers themselves would have to make such a request.

To Skaggs' contention that the state lacked authority to subpoena union business records, Hester responded that "the FBI is present and lawyers for the national Plumbers and Pipefitters Union will be present through this Court of Inquiry to discuss the records."

The FBI said earlier that it was investigating the local union after a disgruntled employee had claimed union funds were being misused.

Certified public accountant C.W. Curry of Harlingen, auditor for Local 823, was the first person to take the witness stand Monday. Subpoenas have been issued for 20 other people and assorted bank and business records.

Hester asked Curry why he had not noticed that considerable sums in leasing funds went into the personal checking accounts of Don and Clarence Gray. Curry told the judge that a younger member of his firm, Mike McClennan, did the actual work on the audit. Hester then directed that McClellan appear today at the Court of Inquiry.

Hester called the seldom-used Court of Inquiry on the request of Andy Muniz, then acting director of the local Manpower program. Muniz was fired last week as acting director by the Cameron County Commissioners court on the recommendation of Hester.

The commissioners also canceled all contracts with the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union Local 823 and the Texas Language Academy in Brownsville, which had a federal grant to train cashiers and checkers.

Texas man charged

BURNS FLAT, Okla. (AP) — Franklin Stuart Smith, 18, of Monahans, Texas, was booked on a charge of attempting to elude an officer late Monday night, after he allegedly led a state trooper on a high speed chase and ran a roadblock, authorities said.

The state Highway Patrol said Smith, driving a pickup truck, refused to stop when Trooper Bruce Peoples tried to halt his vehicle at shortly after 11 p.m., and then attempted to run the trooper off Oklahoma 44 in this western Oklahoma town.

Prosecutor selected to continue probe into FBI

By CHARLES R. BABCOCK
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Barnet D. Skolnik, the assistant U.S. attorney who successfully prosecuted former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, has agreed to head the prosecution team in the stalled investigation of FBI "black bag" jobs.

Justice Department officials refused to comment on the matter Monday, saying only that an announcement is expected Tuesday on the members of an expanded task force to replace the five attorneys who resigned suddenly from the controversial FBI investigation last week after a sharp dispute with Attorney General Griffin B. Bell. Other Justice Department sources said, however, that Skolnik, who has gained a reputation as a hard-nosed prosecutor in the highly-publicized Maryland political corruption cases, was asked last weekend to take on the new task.

According to the sources, Skolnik will head the prosecution team and Paul R. Boucher, deputy chief of the criminal division's general crimes section, will direct the new investigating task force.

Skolnik declined comment. "I just can't talk about this," he said. Boucher could not be reached for comment.

The move to bring Skolnik into the case was viewed by some department officials as a sign that Bell finally is serious about tackling the sensitive investigation.

"The judge (Bell) means business," said one official knowledgeable about Skolnik's selection.

So far, only former FBI supervisor John J. Kearney has been indicted in the 18-month investigation of alleged FBI break-ins, wiretaps and mail openings against radical fugitives in New York in the early 1970s.

The previous task force, headed by William Gardner of the civil rights division, asked to be relieved of responsibility in the case when Bell refused to follow their recommendations and approve the indictment of other FBI officials.

Bell explained tht he had wanted to see what issues would be raised at the Kearney trial before proceeding with more prosecutions, but he admitted last week that delays in the trial have closed that option.

Instead, Bell and his top adviser on criminal matters, Benjamin R. Civiletti, have decided to accelerate the investigation, which has been stymied because of the simmering disagreement between Bell and the old task force.

Sources familiar with the case said the federal grand jury in Washington charged with hearing evidence in the case has done nothing in the last two months.

The attorneys who resigned are known to feel that it is unfair to try Kearney alone when other FBI officials, including some superiors at Washington headquarters, passed on the directives for the allegedly illegal activities.

The Kearney case has been bogged down because of complicated pretrial motions by his defense attorney, Edward Bennett Williams. The judge in the case has granted Williams' request for a wide-range of documents. Williams apparently hopes to find evidence to show the wiretaps and mail openings Kearney is charged with were necessary because the targeted Weather Underground members were somehow backed by a foreign power.

Bell's public statements of concern about this turn in the Kearney trial have led to speculation he might drop the case. But it is considered unlikely that Skolnik would be called on just to handle a plea bargain arrangement or dismissal after discovery.

It was not clear whether Skolnik would leave his post as an assistant U.S. attorney in Baltimore or simply be detached for the work on the FBI investigation.

Skolnik has said since the Mandel verdict in September that he was interested in leaving the Justice Department to enter private practice.

It is known that Civiletti, who is also a former assistant U.S. attorney in Baltimore, has tried before to persuade Skolnik to stay on as a federal prosecutor. One offer Skolnik reportedly rejected was to become chief of one of the department's organized crime strike forces.

Court strikes down antiobscenity law

The Washington Post

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Court of Appeals declared the bulk of the state's antiobscenity law unconstitutional Monday because the state "arbitrarily" exempts employees of pornographic movie houses from prosecution.

The decision by the state's highest court, which prompted a strongly worded dissent from Chief judge Robert C. Murphy, leaves Maryland virtually without any laws to control distribution of obscene books, magazines and films to adults. The portion of the law prohibiting distribution of obscene materials to juveniles is not affected by the ruling, however.

The court's decision came in the case of John W. Williams, an employee of the Swinger Life, Inc., bookstore in Baltimore. Williams had been convicted of selling an obscene magazine — "Linda Lovelace Star of Deep Throat" — to a Baltimore City police detective.

Wheeler, who was fined $500 for the offense, appealed contending he had been denied equal protection under the law as guaranteed by the Constitution. If movie theater employees who have no financial interest in the theater are exempt from prosecution, Wheeler said, why shouldn't bookstore employees also be exempt?

The Court of Special Appeals, Maryland's second highest court, had rejected his contention, saying "there is a rational basis for the legislative distinction between employees of bookstores and employees of motion picture theaters," because a theater can keep juveniles out while "no controls are present when obscene material ...is once removed from (a bookstore)."

The state's highest court, however, rejected this reasoning. In a decision written by Judge Charles E. Orth Jr., the court held that an usher in a movie theater who passed out an obscene program would be exempt from prosecution, while a bookstore employee who sold the same program could be punished.

"Thus, the law operates upon some persons and not upon others (in similar circumstances)," the court's opinion said. "To the extent (the law) prohibits some employees of legal entities from selling, distributing and publishing obscene material, while allowing other employees to do so, it violates the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment."

The exemption of movie theater employees was added to the state's obscenity statute in 1967, at a time when projectionists and others employed in pornographic movie houses around the country were frequently being subject to arrests.

"...The result reached by the court is plainly at odds with what I perceive to be the governing law," added Murphy, who was joined in his dissent by Judge Irving A. Levine.

"Once printed matter is removed from a bookseller's premises, its corrupting influence may be distributed and redistributed without limit to anyone, including juveniles," the dissenters' opinion added.

Farmers want to air demands

DENVER (AP) — With one day remaining before a scheduled nationwide strike of farmers, angry members of the American Agriculture movement have requested an appearance before a special session of Congress to hear their demands.

Farmers from 26 states gathered at a Denver motel Monday to lay final plans for the strike on Wednesday. Some 160 farmers signed a petition asking the joint session of Congress to hear their demands for federal legislation that would assure farmers and stockmen 100 percent parity for their products.

There is little likelihood of a special session, however, since most congressmen are not currently in Washington.

"The United States is facing a crisis unprecedented in American history," read the petition. "If you allow this nation to face famine, mass unemployment and chaos unequalled in American history, Congress has failed the American people."

A spokesman for the farmers, Bud Bitner of Walsh, also said he has asked two aides to President Carter to set up an interview with the president before midnight tonight.

But Bitner said he didn't expect either meeting to take place. "I think we're going to have to go through with the strike and cause a relatively severe food shortage before anyone listens," he said. "I don't think they'll listen until we create a problem, and we have the power to do it."

American Agriculture has no membership rolls and assessing the impact of a work stoppage on farms would be difficult. Farmers turned out in about 30 states and Washington this past weekend to stage motorcades and strike rallies, but federal officials have said they expect the strike to have little impact.

Parity is an economic yardstick, an indicator that relates farm prices to the cost of farm living and production to give a general measure of the purchasing power of farmers. At 100 percent parity, an efficient farmer who is not wiped out by weather would be assured a moderate profit when he marketed his products or livestock.

Items reported stolen

Someone cut a window screen with a knife and broke out the glass Monday night to enter a residence in the 1600 block of East Maple Avenue police were told.

Harold L. Howard reported that his house was broken into Monday and a stereo and speakers and television, valued at a total of $800, were taken.

WAREHOUSE THEFT

Five personal checks and $307 in cash was taken from a warehouse at 109 S. Garfield St. sometime between 1 p.m. Saturday and early Monday morning, police were told.

Herman Lester Drinkard of the 100 block of East Garfield Street reported to police that the doors and windows were locked when he left Saturday afternoon and when he returned to work Monday morning.

He said the cash and checks were taken from a money box kept in a drawer. The money box was found in the middle of the warehouse, Drinkard told police.

EQUIPMENT TAKEN

Welding equipment valued at $775 was taken from a business at 509 E. Florida Ave. by someone who pried sheet metal from the building, Thomas Essie McCain of Route 1 reported to police.

The theft occurred sometime between 12:30 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Monday, McCain told police.

The Los Angeles Times

"A bottle of thick English port is a very heavy and a very inflammatory dose. I felt it, last time that I drank it, for several days, and this morning it was boiling in my veins."

—James Boswell, after a night of drinking and supping with Dr. Samuel Johnson, 1763.

OPORTO, Portugal — The Portuguese revolution of 1974 turned the economy of this little country upside down and laid low many private industries. But it hardly touched one venerable institution — the exportation of port wine. That trade is as profitable as it was before the revolution and just as dominated by the British.

Posters went up this year near the lodges (port wine storehouses) in the suburb of Vila Nova de Gaia across the Douro River from this northern city of Oporto. Commemorating the third anniversary of the April 25 revolution, the posters showed a wine worker twisting a wine press. Caught in the press were not grapes but squirming, desperate capitalists, one with a top hat, all doomed to be crushed.

But the posters were only wishful leftist thinking. The port wine capitalists were not crushed in the revolution.

This is proven every Wednesday when 28 British port wine shippers, who control more than 50 percent of the export trade, assemble for lunch in the two-century-old British Factory House near the docks of Oporto. Waiting for them on a table of the elegant reception room are a copy of the latest Times of London and, from the building's Victorian library, a copy of the Times for that date of 100 years ago. The British shippers dine around a long table in a room decorated with portraits of their forebears. After lunch, they retire to a dessert room with an identical table for their cheese and tawny port.

These shippers, in fact, survived a revolution long before that of 1974. The first revolution was the collapse of the port market back home after Ward War II. To the British shippers, the collapse was a betrayal of history, and it endangered them far more than the leftist soldiers who overthrew the dictatorship of Portugal.

Port, long cherished by the British, is made from grapes grown on steep hills in the upper Douro valley, a 60-mile strip of land that begins about 75 miles east of Oporto. The shippers insist that the dry and alternately extreme cold and hot climate of the Douro valley, and its schistous soil provide the grapes the the special flavor of port. "If you plant it elsewhere," said one, "it's as different as whiskey to gin. Brandy is the other key to the formula. After the grapes are harvested and crushed in the fall, brandy is added to the storage vats at the vineyards. The brandy stops the fermentation, keeping the wine sweet.

In the spring, the wine is transported to the vats in the lodges of Vila Nova de Gaia. There, with the addition of some more brandy, the wine is blended with other port wines and matured in wooden casks. The whites grow darker with age; the reds go tawny with age. Sweetness depends on how soon the full amount of brandy has been added. In the end, a large number of varieties are produced, from dry white port drunk as an aperitif to sweet tawny port drunk after dinner with cheese.

It is possible that famous British writers who left a written record of their prodigious consumption of port, Like Boswell, Dr. Johnson and Samuel Pepys, were not tasting the same wine as people do today. The art of fortifying the original port wine with the right amount of brandy was not perfected until 1820.

In accord with a 1916 treaty between Portugal and Britain, the Portuguese government allows the name port to be used only by wine that is grown in the upper Douro valley, fortified by brandy and shipped out of Oporto. The United States, however, does not abide by this treaty. Many American wine producers make their own port and market it as such. Portuguese port is known in the United States by its Portuguese names of Porto or Vinho do Porto. In any case, Americans consume only 1 percent of the port exported by Portugal every year.

For centuries, it was a British drink. Port was so British, in fact, that Boswell called it "English" in his diary even though it came from Portugal. The Whig Party, which sometimes opposed the king, adopted port as a symbol of the traditions of old England and decried those monarchists who drank French wines instead. In the 18th century, a Whig magazine told the British that, as a patriotic duty, they should:

During the era of the American revolution, King George III preferred French claret and ordered no port for the royal table. But, 84 bottles of port went monthly to the yeoman of the guard, 27 to the palace chaplains, and 11 to the women of the royal bedchambers. The British prime minister then, William Pitt the Younger, would drink most of a bottle of port before making a speech in Parliament. Three British lords of the same era were reported to drink six bottles a day.

In the 18th and 19th centuries, Britain bought almost all of Portugal's production. In the 1920s and 1930s, port's popularity even increased in Britain. Port and lemon, a mixture of the wine with lemonade, was the standard drink of British pubs. In the 1920s, Britain bought eight times as much port from Portugal as did the second biggest importer, France.

But after World War II, the British stopped drinking so much port. "Port lost its image as the working man's drink in Britain," said Robin A. Reid, the managing director of Croft and Company, in a recent interview here. "As the working man got more affluent, he didn't turn from his beer, but he did turn from port to other things, like gin and whiskey."

A depression set in. In the first decade after World War II, port exports dropped to about half of what they were in the 1920s and 1930s. To cut costs and avoid losses, several British firms merged. The shippers began looking for other markets and finally found them, mostly in western Europe. In the 1960s, France for the first time in history, overtook Britain as the world's largest consumer of port.

The French, who use port as an aperitif before dining, purchased 39 percent of port exports last year. Britain imported less than half of that, followed by Belgium, Holland and West Germany. In consumption of port, Portugal itself would rank just behind Britain.

By the time of the Portuguese revolution, the port wine industry had emerged from its recession. According to records kept since 1678, the exports of port during 1973 were the fifth highest in history. The shippers had survived the revolution in taste of the British working man.

There was a good deal of consternation among shippers, however, about whether they would survive the political revolution. "There was a period in 1975," Reid recalled, "when we were seriously worried that there would be a workers' seizure of the companies." Some workers had threatened a seizure but, perhaps because the ruling soidiers in Lisbon did not want to antagonize Britain, perhaps because the north is the most conservative part of Portugal, the threat was never carried out.

The industry also escaped nationalization in 1975 when the government seized the banks of Portugal. Unlike many other companies in Portugal, the port wine shippers were not controlled by the banks.

Present production is close to what it was in the good years of the 1920s and 1930s and almost twice what it was during the depression after World War II.

Britain and Portugal have been linked by various trade and military treaties since 1373. During World War II, when the officially neutral Portuguese allowed the allies to use the Azores in the Atlantic as a military base, Winston Churchill called Portugal "our oldest ally." Much of the alliance was based on port.

In 1703, a treaty was signed that allowed British woolen goods and other textiles to be sold in Portugal at low duties in exchange for port wine beign sold in Britain at low duties. Britain benefited from both ends of the deal, for its merchants were already in Portugal organizing the shipment of port almost as freely as if Portugal were a colony.

There are not many signs of the British in Oporto these days. The city is as Portuguese as any other in Portugal. The name of the street that runs in front of the Factory House has been changed from "New Street of the English" to "Prince Henry the Navigator St." Perhaps 300 British live in Oporto, most concerned with other businesses than port.

Yet the continued health of the port industry has kept a small community of special British here, a community that seems part of Portugal and of Britain at the same time. Most of the shippers were born in Portugal but most have British wives.

"I'm the fifth generation born in Portugal; my children are the sixth," said Reid, one of only two members of the Factory House who has a Portuguese wife. "This is my home. Of course, I fought with the British in World War II, and my father fought in World War I, and all that racket. But my home and family are Portuguese — though I could never bear to sever the bond with Britain."

The pickets, who numbered close to 500, threatened news photographers with bodily harm if they did not leave the area. San Francisco 49ers defensive end Cedrick Hardman (86) doesn't have anything nice planned for Roger Staubach as he eyes him up on this play in the first quarter of Monday night's game. Hardman rudely brought the Dodger down for a big loss before this play was over. (AP Laserphoto)

So, who needs defense? Pokes win touchdown war

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The halftime show, featuring a fireworks display that got out of hand, was topped only by the offensive fireworks generated by the Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers.

"It was a fun game for the fans," said Tony Dorsett, the Cowboys' star rookie who scored two touchdowns in Monday night's 42-35 National Football League victory.

"Personally, I'd rather be in a lopsided game with us on top," he added.

"If someone had said there would be 77 points scored, I wouldn't have believed it," said Coach Ken Meyer of the 49ers, whose team totaled only 29 points in losing its first four games of the season.

"You'd never know we had the No. 2 and No. 3 defenses in the conference," declared Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, pleased with the victory but concerned because, "We didn't play much defense."

THE PLAYOFFS are two weeks away for Dallas, whose 11-2 record is best in the National Conference, and Monday night's victory assured the Cowboys of the homefield advantage in all playoff games. Next Sunday, the Denver Broncos of the AFC will bring a 12-1 record into Texas Stadium as the two possible Super Bowl opponents size each other up in a regular season finale.

"We're going to have to play an awfully lot better," said Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach.

Staubach threw for three touchdowns and 220 yards, San Francisco quarterback Jim Plunkett answered back with four touchdown throws and 263 yards, while Dorsett had 92 yards rushing and 39 on pass receptions in the big night for the three former Heisman Trophy winners.

But the Cowboys' Butch Johnson, who came into the NFL relatively unnoticed as a third round draft pick out of Cal-Riverside last year, may have made the difference.

"My whole family came up to see the game, and it was great to score my first touchdown in front of them," said the wide receiver and kick returner who made a one-hand grab in the end zone on Staubach's third touchdown pass, a 22-yarder early in the wild fourth quarter.

JOHNSON CAME close to scoring his first pro touchdown late in the second period when he returned a kickoff 64 yards to the 49ers' 20-yard line. The return set up Dorsett's 20-yard pass reception at the right sideline, and Dallas was ahead to stay 21-14.

After the smoke cleared from the halftime fireworks, Dorsett got his 12th touchdown rushing, a team record, on a 21-yard sprint. He finished the game with 92 yards and needs 43 more to reach 1,000.

"Our offense was excellent. The runners ran and the blockers blocked," said Landry.

Irish gaining, but Kentucky still in top spot

By The Associated Press

William and Mary didn't gain a spot in the national college basketball rankings but the Indians certainly made their presence felt in the latest balloting by upsetting North Carolina and enabling Notre Dame to move into second spot behind Kentucky.

North Carolina, 5-1, fell from second to fifth after losing 78-75 to William and Mary.

Notre Dame, 6-0, taking advantage of the upset and helping itself with three victories last week that included a 69-66 triumph at UCLA, received nine first-place votes and 872 points in nationwide balloting by sports writers and sportscasters.

BUT THE Fighting Irish were easily outdistanced by Kentucky, 3-0, which beat Indiana 87-64 and Kansas 73-66 and remained No. 1 with 42 first-place votes and 1,014 points.

The other first-place vote went to Marquette which moved from fourth to third with 799 points after two easy victories.

Arkansas, which boosted its record to 6-0 with two wins, moved into fourth from sixth with 647 points. North Carolina, which also won once last week, was next with 485.

Cincinnati, 4-0 after nipping Miami of Ohio 61-60, was sixth and was followed by Indiana State, 5-0; UCLA, 4-1; Nevada-Las Vegas, 5-0, and Louisville, 3-1.

Indiana State advanced four spots from 11th with two routs. UCLA dropped from fifth. Nevada-Las Vegas moved up from 10th and Louisville advanced from 16th to 10th with an 88-85 win over Michigan and a drubbing of Robert Morris.

THE SECOND Ten were San Francisco, Syracuse, Holy Cross, Providence, Michigan, Detroit, Purdue, Maryland, Kansas State and Kansas.

Purdue and Kansas State were newcomers to the rankings while St. John's and Utah, Nos. 13 and 14, respectively, the previous week, dropped out. St. John's lost to Rutgers 72-61 and Utah was defeated 80-79 by Long Beach State. They were the first losses for both teams.

Deck stacked against Gamecocks

By The Associated Press

South Carolina had the task of taking on the No. 1 team in the country and the memory of a legendary coach on the same night.

Not surprisingly, the Gamecocks lost.

Two nights after Adolph Rupp's death from cancer, playing in the filled 23,000-seat arena named after him, the top-ranked Kentucky Wildcats had to win.

"This was a very special night for all of us with Coach Rupp's death," said Joe Hall, who took over as coach when Rupp retired after the 1972 season with 880 victories behind him. "I told our players in the locker room that this was an historic moment that they would remember all their lives. It was a night we would not have wanted to get beaten on."

SOUTH CAROLINA made a game of it in the first half, however, trailing only 38-35 at intermission by slowing down the tempo and using zone defenses to neutralize the Wildcats' strength and quickness. But Kentucky's man-to-man defensive pressure wilted South Carolina in the second half and the Wildcats went on to win easily, 84-65.

Rick Robey poured in 19 points and Jack Givens and Kyle Macy added 18 apiece to lead Kentucky, now 4-0 for the year.

The Gamecocks, 3-3, got 16 points from Mike Doyle and 12 from Jim Graziano, including 10 in South Carolina's successful first half.

Of the Gamecocks' slowdown, Hall said, "We are going to find this kind of tactic in people who are willing to slow down to a deliberate pace ... we'll see more of it this year."

COACH FRANK McGuire of South Carolina said he didn't believe the crowd of 23,472 enjoyed his team's slowdown.

"They like to see the Wildcats bury you by 100," McGuire said.

At halftime, a tribute was held for Rupp during which university officials announced the establishment of a memorial fund for cancer research in his name.

Only two other teams in the Top Twenty were in action Monday night, with No. 7 Cincinnati whipping Eastern Kentucky 73-58 and 17th-ranked Detroit edging St. Bonaventure 94-92.

Cincinnati got 16 points from both Pat Cummings and Eddie Lee to post its 65th straight home victory over a five-year period.

IN A similar game, Rutgers center James Bailey sank a free throw with six seconds left to defeat Davidson 78-77 despite 41 points from John Gerdy.

Other games saw Penn State shoot a record 65.3 percent from the field to defeat Muhlenberg, Pa., 109-78; Houston break a Hofheinz Pavilion record with a 133-98 victory over Southwestern Texas; Iowa State trip Wisconsin 82-73; Temple drub Biscayne 80-58; Vanderbilt defeat Cal Poly-Pomona 88-72; Memphis State nip Jacksonville 79-77 and Texas-El Paso beat Alaska-Anchorage 88-83.

Finley, oilman meet to discuss A's sale

DENVER (AP) — Millionaire oilman Marvin Davis has met with Oakland A's owner Charles Finley and Denver city officials, lending credence to the speculation that the American League baseball team is headed for the Mile High City.

Davis said Monday he will announce today whether he has reached an agreement in principle to purchase the team and move it to Denver.

"We've done all our homework and now we'll have to decide," Davis said Monday. "If the decision is to go ahead, it will come tomorrow (Tuesday). If we decide not to go, that also should be known tomorrow (Tuesday)."

But one source close to the negotiations said, "When you go looking for a house and find what you like, you generally buy it."

Davis conferred with Finley over the weekend and met Monday with Mayor Bill McNichols, who personally presented the best terms the city could offer for a lease on Mile High Stadium for major league baseball. The lease agreement reportedly has been the major stumbling block in Davis' attempts to buy the A's.

However, Davis said Monday that his discussion with the mayor about the stadium lease was "encouraging. Everything seems to be fitting into place."

Davis said he didn't know what effect the Vida Blue trade would have on his negotiations with Finley.

Player's death still mystery

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — While punishment exercises may have been a factor in the Nov. 21 death of a Virginia Tech football player, a state medical examiner says the exact cause may never be known.

Bob Vorhies, an 18-year-old freshman from Irvington, N. J., collapsed in his dormitory room a few hours after doing the punishment exercises.

But Dr. David Oxley, deputy chief medical examiner for western Virginia, said Monday "the most most probable cause ...is a cardiac arrhythmia" — a disturbance in the beat of the heart.

The punishment drills "may have exacerbated or aggravated some pre-existing condition," Oxley said. But he added there was no medical record of any pre-existing condition and Vorhies had been considered in excellent phsyical condition.

While Oxley said he believes "there is some relationship between the exercises and his death," he added there was "nothing we can find that specifically related" his death to the exercises.

Specialists in sports medicine indicated Vorhies' punishment drills were not out of line with standard punishment exercises at other schools, the medical examiner said.

A Virginia Tech assistant coach said the 6-foot, 230-pound Vorhies was given the punishment drills for clowning around in the athletic dormitory.

He said the punishment consisted of 10 30-yard dashes, 10 100-yard dashes, two 100-yard bear crawls, 50 situps, 50 pushups and four other 100-yard drills. Vorhies completed the drills, went to his dorm and collapsed, Tech officials said.

Oxley said he is conducting tests to determine whether the death could have been caused by a viral infection, but he added the cause may never be known. In 15 percent of the deaths of young persons, the cause of death cannot be determined, Oxley said.

Howdy, Bob Rushton!

Robert A. "Bob" Rushton, the 58th president of The United States Jaycees, is a special guest in the Tall City, and Midland Jaycees and other Midlanders are delighted to be hosts to this distinguished visitor.

Although Midland was the home of a one-time president of the International Junior Chamber of Commerce, the late Taylor Cole, it isn't often that the president of the national organization visits here. And the fact that Rushton's Midland stop is one of two in Texas on his tour of the Southwest, makes his visit all the more noteworthy and appreciated.

Rushton will be the guest speaker Wednesday at a Past Presidents Breakfast sponsored by Midland Jaycees in the Midland Hilton. He is a Marietta, Ga., real estate executive, but this year he is residing at Tulsa, Okla., where he occupies the official U.S. Jaycee residence. He has been recognized as one of Five Outstanding Young Men of Georgia.

He keeps more than busy in working with and visiting the almost 8,500 local Jaycee chapters with close to 350,000 members in 50 states and the District of Columbia.

The purpose of the organization is to offer young men, ages 18-35, an opportunity for further personal development and leadership. Major efforts are directed to finding solutions to environmental and economic problems within their communities.

Jaycee programs are many and varied, all striving for the betterment of the community, state and nation, and mankind in general.

Although the Jaycee movement was begun at St. Louis, Mo., in 1915, it did not come to Midland until 1939. But since then, Midland Jaycees have been making up for lost time. The chapter here is busy, busy.

The visit of the national president is a great occasion, indeed, for Midland Jaycees, who certainly are proud of the opportunity of entertaining him.

It is hoped that President Rushton has a most enjoyable time while here and that he will return to the Tall City at every opportunity.

Exclusive clientele

It's the Christmas season, and how about a $3,000 necktie for that old boy who has everything?

Well, if that's a bit too high, the Countess Mara designs come in cheaper versions — like $2,000 or even a paltry $1,000.

D. Gordon Williams, president of Countess Mara, said in New York that each tie comes in its own "vault" of red Moroccan leather. And each $3,000 necktie features a blossoming 14-karat gold rose which is studded with faceted diamonds on silk-cut velvet. Williams said there have been maybe three dozen takers nationally this year. There have been about four dozen buyers of the $2,000 version and eight dozen of the cheap ($1,000) one. And this should prove something or other.

ART BUCHWALD

Who needs a computer, with wife like Art's?

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — There is a great deal of publicity these days about the advent of the home computer.

Futurists are predicting that in a few years there will be a computer in everyone's home which will store all sorts of useful information in its memory, such as birthdays, anniversaries, bank balances and inventories of household effects.

The computers will also be used to turn on lights, turn off furnaces and adjust air conditioners, open and shut doors and record what time your children come in at night.

When it comes to information retrieval I doubt if there really is the market out there that home computer manufacturers think there is. The American wife has a memory far superior to any computer, at least she does in my house.

My wife can recall things in seconds that I have forgotten for years.

An example: The other night we were having a discussion over some remark I had made about an attractive lady sitting next to me at a dinner party.

I said, "I don't see anything wrong in admiring a pretty girl at a dinner as long as you don't make a pass at her."

This got me really angry and I said, "When have I ever made a pass at a girl at a dinner party?"

"Sept. 6, 1963, at the Stevens' house. You were sitting next to Hope Lange and as the chocolate souffle with the coconut meringue cookies were being served you put your arm around her. I believe it was 10:14 p.m."

"Are you sure it was cholocate souffle? I thought that night Liz Stevens served a vanilla mousse with fresh raspberry sauce."

"Don't avoid the issue," my wife said. "And what about midnight, June 12, 1957, when we were in Paris at the Crazy Horse Saloon and you made a fool of yourself dancing to 'I'll Never Smile Again' with that lady in the green-beaded dress and pale green chiffon scarf and gold shoes and dyed blonde hair."

"You remember that?" I said.

"She was 5-feet-5, weighed 115 pounds, spoke with a Swedish accent and had a silver handbag shaped like a turtle."

"You do remember it."

"While we're on the subject, I suppose you've forgotten April 9, 1969, at 7:40 p.m.

"What happened that night?"

"The cocktail party at the Federal City Club when you were telling Barbara Lipscomb of Area Code 212 Boulevard 3-2376 if you ever came to New York you'd give her a call."

"Was that her name?"

"Wow, what a memory!" I said more in admiration than anger.

"Do you want more? Remember the night it snowed on Feb. 13, 1971, and we were at the Hartwells and you offered to drive Ginny Southern home because she had no snow tires on her 1970 green and white Thunderbird with the white vinyl roof?"

"What was wrong with that?"

"You didn't have a driver's license at that time."

"Are you sure?"

I looked at my driver's license and darned if she wasn't right.

"Is there anything else you have in your memory bank?" I asked her.

"Would you like to talk about VJ night, 1945, at the Astor Hotel?"

"But I was still in the Marines," I protested. "I didn't even know you then."

"Yes, but you told me about it on Sept. 26, 1952, the first time you took me out for a drink at the Cafe Flore in Paris."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Time is running out on ex-Nazi

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — With the help of government wangling and State Department waffling, Andrija Artukovic has been able to bask for more than 25 years in the California sunshine.

Now the 78-year-old Artukovic, known to his neighbors as a mild-mannered senior citizen, faces the growing prospect of deportation to stand trial in Yugoslavia as a Nazi mass murderer in World War II.

Under Hitler, Artukovic was interior minister in the Nazi puppet state of Croatia, and thus head of the police and political security forces. Various U.S. government estimates hold him responsible for the deaths of perhaps 200,000 Yugoslavs. Testimony at the 1961 trial of Adolph Eichmann connected Artukovic to the murder of 660,000 men, women and children, mainly Serbians and Jews.

Artukovic found haven in the United States under an alias during the confusion following the collapse of Hitler's Third Reich. Down through the years, Yugoslavia has sought his extradition without success. In 1952, an Immigration and Naturalization judge ordered him deported. Seven years later, another Immigration official ruled he could stay.

The last ruling held that Artukovic might be "persecuted" if sent back to Yugoslavia. Thus the U.S. system of justice and due process has kept him out of the hands of the Tito regime ever since.

But internal documents in our hands show that the Justice Department has been arguing with the State Department since 1975 to work out a compromise with Yugoslavian authorities to send the aging refugee back for trial as a murderer. Under the compromise the State Department would certify that Artukovic would be subject to legitimate prosecution but not persecution on the basis of "race, religion or political opinion."

The documents show that the State Department stalled during the Ford and Nixon administrations. Former Immigration Commissioner Leonard Chapman, before being replaced by Carter, upbraided the State Department for foot-dragging. The ex-Marine Corps general accused a counterpart at State of declining "to answer responsively" and he refused to accept State Department suggestions on the case.

Now under Secretary Cyrus Vance, deportation action may be imminent. Our sources say that in recent days Yugoslav diplomats and Justice officials have prevailed on the State Department to break the Artukovic logjam by promising a fair non-politicial trial.

Once this happens, the Justice Department seems certain to proceed with new deportation action. However, Artukovic still will have recourse to our courts and perhaps could delay for a year or so. But time seems to be running out for the 78-year-old ex-Nazi.

LUCRATIVE LOBBYING: President Carter has spoken out against the hiring of expensive private consultants by the government. Nevertheless, the White House quietly has hired a professional management consultant to put some pep into its often amateurish congressional lobbying staff.

He is Len Hirsch, a high-powered consultant who is collecting $125 a day in public funds for his efforts. He began work last April because President Carter's lobbying team, headed by Frank Moore, seemed to step on congressional toes every time they tried to get a bill passed.

A White House spokesman insisted that Hirsch offers no advice on how to lobby on Capitol Hill even though he heads a private firm called Congressional Management. But our sources say he devotes some time to keeping communications open between the White House and the Hill.

Hirsch suggests ways for the Carter lobbyists to work more closely with the President's policy advisers and to butter up congressmen by arranging White House tours for their constituents. He is trying to speed up the flow of paperwork and even make the secretaries more efficient in answering congressional mail.

"It helps our lobbying only to the extent that it makes our job easier," a White House staffer explained. A spokesman said Hirsch has worked only four or five days, but sources tell us he already has been paid thousands of dollars.

Footnote: Hirsch would not discuss his duties with us. But Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., is demanding an accounting from the white house.

MILITANT DISABLED: President Carter may soon find himself confronted with a political handicap by disgruntled disabled Americans. The American Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities is angered by Carter's failure to follow through on his campaign promises to the nation's 36 million handicapped.

Thousands of them conducted protest sit-ins at the Washington office of HEW Secretary Joseph Califano and HEW regional offices last spring. Shortly after, Califano okayed an order barring virtually all discrimination against the disabled by the government and by private firms getting federal funds.

But seven months later there are still no guidelines except in Califano's own department. Patience is running out among the militant disabled. A second demonstration is being discussed seriously. This one could focus on Washington. The President and Califano face the prospect of protesters in wheel chairs being photographed with their placards at the gates of the White House.

NICK THIMMESCH

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — There is so much hot air, flimflam and posturing in this town, that we sometimes forget that underneath and beyond there in a cadre of first-rate people who make laws, study and try to solve problems, and work to make life in the Republic bearable.

Such a man was Laurence N. Woodworth, 59, who died here last week. His is not a household name. For 33 years, he worked in government on the thorny problems of writing tax laws. Woodworth was unknown to the public, but enormously respected and admired by the people who performed chores in the tax field thickets.

I didn't know the man personally. I only knew that for years there was a man on Capitol Hill who was a sort of genius director of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and that last February he signed on at the Treasury Department as assistant secretary for tax policy.

That name was "Woodward" or "Woodruff" or "Woodworth" or something like that was the way I placed him. No disrespect was intended. But unless a person's name is in the news or is a prime source, it is difficult to remember and locate it in that great, gray bureaucracy.

So Laurence N. Woodworth was, to most Washington watchers, a member of that "nameless, faceless" bureaucracy. But when he died, his name passed through town like a cyclone. The man must have made an enormous impression, in a quiet way, on many important and powerful people in the government.

A fair number of the people I called, for one reason or another the day after he died, asked whether I had heard that "Larry Woodworth had died," always adding something like, "What a shame. What a loss."

I had heard him speak last month at a national conference on tax policy and economic growth, sponsored by the National Journal. Since the White House didn't send its own "tax specialists," Woodworth was pretty much it for the Carter Administration.

There is great confusion in this town over what the Administration will finally come up with in terms of tax reform. Carter had called the tax system "a disgrace to the human race," thus bringing joy to super-reformers like Ralph Nader.

But when it came to putting a tax package where his mouth was, Carter was terribly shy. That package was first scheduled for arrival in September, then October, then the end of the year, and now it's supposed to be seen early in 1978.

When Woodworth got up in front of his audience of experts, he didn't offer alibis, because he knew his audience didn't expect them. He just talked on what the tax package should do, and he made sense.

Well, it turns out that Woodworth spent 32 years on Capitol Hill, drafting tax legislation and, on the urging of the tax-writing committees in Congress, providing advice about where they should be going with legislation. He consulted privately with key committee members, including the chairmen and ranking minority members, making "suggestions" that usually wound up in the legislation.

Woodworth was a minister's son, and his friends tell me that he carried a sense of responsibility and duty with him through his life. That's why he was conscientious to the point of working 12-16 hour days, and insisting on a professionalism at the committee which gave it the mark of excellence.

Since February, when he became President Carter's top adviser on tax policy, Woodworth rode with the trouble that emanated from the President's campaign promises on reform. Consequently, finding himself called on frequently to explain what was going on, he attended public meetings and conferences. It was at such a gathering at the College of William and Mary, in Williamsburg, Va., that Woodworth suffered a spontaneous cerebral hemmorhage, and died several days later, never regaining consciousness.

"He chose to remain in government and work himself into an early grave because he wanted to make a contribution to the nation and his fellow man," Sen. Russell Long, Senate Finance Committee chairman, said of Woodworth.

President Carter said: "His understanding of our tax system was matched only by his determination to improve the system and by his patience in dealing with those who knew far less than he."

Woodworth was well paid by the U.S. government, but he could have tripled his income had he gone into the private sector. He was of that depression and World War II generation which prides itself in doing good work, and which, sadly, is passing from government. Government executives like Woodworth who demonstrate excellence are needed, on a 20-to-one scale, to back up the "names," the Kissingers and Andrew Youngs who hog the limelight.

The federal government indeed all levels of government, needs more people of either sex or any color or religion or political persuasion who emphasize and strive for excellence. Unfortunately, the stress today is to accommodate the noisy corners of society with "affirmative action" programs providing favoritism for so-called racial minorities and women. Such pandering to activism only diminishes the quality of the bureaucracy, makes it more mediocre, and hardly a tribute to the first-rate person Laurence N. Woodworth was.
