Midland has 44 to 47 percent response rate as nation conducts Census 2000

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midlanders are standing up and being counted as the nation conducts its Census 2000, the governmental count of the population, which is taken every 10 years.

Today is Census Day, the day designated by Congress as the day the count is official.

"This is a push to get as many people as possible who have received their forms to send them back," said Charlene Romero Wurtz, Community Partnership Specialist, who is overseeing census activities in Midland and the Permian Basin. The actual deadline, though, for returning the census forms is mid-April, she said.

As of the end of March, she said, Midland County had a 44 percent response rate and the city of Midland a 47 percent response rate, up from the state response rate of 42 percent. Census workers also are beginning the task of counting homeless residents and those in group shelters like dorms and nursing homes.

Mayor Bobby Burns said he is pleased so many Midlanders have already responded.

"To me it's extremely important," he said. "An accurate count is of significant importance on how Midland receives funding and how we perceive ourselves."

He added, "As mayor, it's important to see where our population is because that helps us plan for the future."

It will be interesting, he observed, to see if the city reaches the 100,000 population level, at which time different rules, regulations and funding sources would apply.

Secret Service enters stolen identity case

By Rick McLaughlin
Staff Writer

The U.S. Secret Service obtained search warrants in federal court in Midland Thursday to examine the contents of two computers involved in the investigation of alleged fraud by a Lufkin man who officers say attempted to set up shop in Midland.

The Secret Service, the Social Security Administration, and Midland and Odessa police are investigating charges of Social Security number fraud, credit card abuse and identity theft in the case of Carlos Torres Chavarria. The 33-year-old illegal alien was indicted in Midland by a federal grand jury March 15.

Chavarria is being held without bail by the U.S. Marshals Service in the Ector County Detention Center.

The computers were seized by Midland police March 7 when Chavarria was arrested at the Days Inn Motel in Midland. They are now in the possession of the Secret Service in El Paso, said MPD Detective Cass Jenkins, who noted that the Secret Service only entered the case Wednesday.

"I've only been on this case two days and I can't tell you anything about it because it is ongoing," Secret Service agent Charles Blankenship said Friday.

"This is an ongoing investigation and still in the information-gathering stage," Jenkins said of the computer search warrants.

He did note, "Chavarria was obtaining instant credit on fraudulent documents."

Jenkins said Chavarria checked into the Days Inn March 3 with the intent of trying to set up business here. "He was branching out," Jenkins said. However, business here only lasted four days, he said.

A representative of the credit card fraud office of Sears in Dallas called a Houston woman inquiring about the credit card applications in her and her husband's name at Sears in the Music City Mall in Odessa.

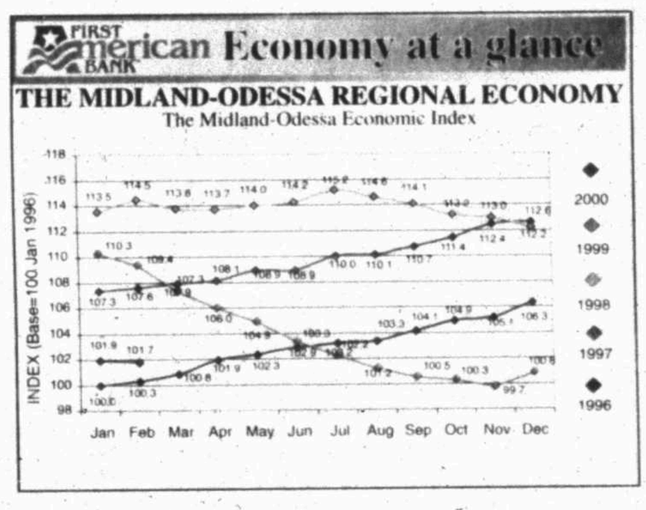
Despite decline, economist feels index will be up sharply in March

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer



Midland's economy encountered a speed bump on its road to recovery from the troubles caused by crude prices at 12-year lows in 1998 and early 1999.

The February Midland-Odessa Regional Economic Index dipped to 101.7 from 101.9 in January.

"I'm not worried about a one-month decline. I expect the index will be up and up sharply next month," said Amarillo economist Karr Ingham, who prepares the index and the Texas Permian Basin Petroleum Index for First American Bank, Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Reporter-Telegram.

The Petroleum Index continued to soar, rising to 93.4 or 4.6 points from January and is up 22.3 percent from 76.4 reported last February.

Ingham attributed the dip in the regional index in large part to anomalies in figuring sales taxes collected in Midland-Odessa in February. He said he believes part of the city's February tax collections won't be reflected until the March rebates are received.

Bobby Norman, president of First American, agreed with Ingham's assessment, saying he had a hard time believing retail sales were down in the first two months of the year.

"The economy continues to gain strength, and we'll watch retail sales closely to see if this was a one-time warp," he said.

Midlanders this year are much more optimistic and confident, said John Seiter, manager with Bagwell Home Furnishings.

"The furniture business is very tough in a down economy," he said. "The last year or so has been difficult because this is the kind of purchase people feel they can put off."

Still, he said, the store's owner Don Bagwell is preparing to remodel the store and add new lines of furniture and to prepare for those renovations, has been having a liquidation sale that has drawn heavy traffic.

"We had this sale to get people stirred up and looking," Seiter said, adding that part of his optimism is from the response to the sale and partly because

Early voting to begin Monday for April 11 runoffs

From Staff Reports

Early voting for the April 11 Democratic and Republican primary runoffs will begin Monday at the Midland County Elections Office, 709 W. Washington. It will continue through Friday.

Hours for voting each day will be 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Democratic voters who live in Precinct 3 will be nominating their commissioner candidate who will appear on the November ballot. The runoff candidates are Juluis Brooks and Rosie Ramirez. The two emerged as the top vote-getters in the Democratic primary. But because neither captured a majority in the five-person race, the runoff was required.

Incumbent Louisa Valencia did not seek re-election.

The Brooks-Ramirez winner will meet Republican Lynn Yarbrough in the November general election.

In addition to the local race, Democrats also will be selecting a nominee for the U.S. Senate position currently held by Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison. The two Democrats in the runoff are Gene Kelly and Charles Gandy.

On the GOP runoff ballot, Midland County Republican voters who live in Precinct 1 will be selecting their nominee for the Commissioners' Court between Jimmy Smith and Rob Van Stavern.

The incumbent Henry Goulet did not seek re-election.

The winner of the Smith-Van Stavern runoff will meet Democrat Michael Trost in the November general election.

County commissioner positions pay $31,500 a year.

Also on the GOP ballot, Republicans will be selecting three judges for the Court of Criminal Appeals.

They are:

- Presiding judge: Sharon Keller and Tom Price.
- Place 1: Guy Williams and Charles Holcomb.
- Place 2: Barbara Parker Hervey and Jim Wallace.

Forums to introduce voters to candidates

From Staff Reports

Two political forums have been set for the next two Tuesdays to introduce local voters to candidates seeking positions on the Midland City Council, the Midland County Hospital District board of directors, the Midland Independent School District board of trustees and the Midland College board of trustees.

Both forums, sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the Midland Reporter-Telegram, will begin at 7 p.m. at the Junior League of Midland building, 902 W. Dengar.

On Tuesday, April 4, candidates for the City Council and the hospital board will be featured. Following are those candidates:

OBITUARIES

TJ Brown

TJ Brown was born March 14, 1924 in Midland, Texas to John Marcus and Ada (Marshall) Brown. He was reared and educated in Big Spring. Following graduation from high school, he attended John Tarlton Jr. College and Texas University. Mr. Brown was the executor of R. DeChicchis' Estate for 35 years.

During World War II, he served in the Marine Corp from 1942 to 1946 and was stationed in the South Pacific.

TJ was a proud and grateful member of Alcoholics Anonymous, having just celebrated thirty-one years of sobriety, which could have come about only through God's grace. He touched many lives. TJ was generous with all that God had given him. He reached out to people over and over again, even with no expressed need. Anytime there was a call for help, he responded gladly and shared his experience, strength, and hope. Many times what he said was not what the receiving ears wanted to hear, but he was honest, straightforward and blunt. He practiced what we call "tough love". The twelve steps practiced by AA and Alanon brought much joy into his life and that of his family, and imparted a strong spiritual foundation for the living of life.

TJ always had a joke to tell and usually had a big grin on his face.

He was a wonderful husband, the perfect father, grandfather and friend. We will miss our "Sweet Papa", but his memory will bring a smile.

TJ died at his home on Thursday, March 30, 2000.

He was preceded in death by his parents, five brothers, and two sisters.

He is survived by his wife, Joan Stanley Brown of Midland; his son, Scott Brown, and his wife, Annette, of Wimberly, Texas; his daughter, Mary Hickey, and her husband, Michael, of Lubbock; his grandchildren, Carl Benjamin Brown, John Porter Brown, and James Stephen Brown, all of Wimberly, Texas, and Melissa Ann Hickey of Lubbock, Texas; and one grandnephew, Mark Marshall.

Memorial services have been scheduled for 3:00 p.m. Saturday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Mark Alexander officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

E-mail urged 3-day boycott of gas pumps

By Kate Gurnett
Hearst News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Drivers are being urged to hit the brakes and boycott fuel pumps next weekend as part of a U.S. and Canadian "Gas Out" protest.

While some experts question the usefulness of the three-day gas-buying hiatus, consumers say the Gas Out is an easy way to register their complaint to the steady increase in gasoline prices.

"I'm definitely angry," said Barbara Thompson, 34, as she gassed up her Dodge Intrepid at Mobil station in the Albany suburb of Colonie. "People don't feel there's much they can do about it."

A saleswoman and daily gas buyer whose territory covers half of New York state, Thompson said higher prices are costing her $200 per month. Scheduling three days without fuel will be tough, Thompson said, but she intends to try.

The Gas Out demonstration has been promoted by e-mail, calling for the gas boycott April 7-9.

Who started Gas Out 2000, aimed at big oil companies and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, is unclear. The e-mail is being sent anonymously and some claim the idea is a hoax.

Marty Smith of Minden, La., who runs the gasout.com Web site, said he received an e-mail "just like everyone else." But interest is high and extends to similar protests in Australia and New Zealand the same week, Smith said.

Last year, the one-day April 30 Gas Out helped stop price gouging in California, according to the Utility Consumers' Action Network Web site in San Diego, Calif. (http://www.fueltracker.com)

Opponents say such plans are largely symbolic but ineffective. They say buying gas on a different day makes little impact, compared to cutting overall consumption and driving smaller cars, instead of sport utility vehicles.

Cutting gas prices isn't the answer, said Peter Iwanowicz, director of environmental health for the American Lung Association of New York State. Americans need to use less gasoline to improve air quality and curb asthma and cancer.

In addition to sucking gas, today's mammoth vehicles pollute three to five times as much as the typical family sedan, he said. "But clearly in their choice of vehicles, fuel economy is not on anybody's radar scope anymore ... The real problem is, it adds up to a big burden on health."

For Willis Bruggemann, 62, of Cairo, the protest doesn't go far enough. He wants a one-week, full-out boycott. "Not leave home. Truckers, taxi drivers, everyone. Just completely stop the nation," he said. "Then the nation and Congress would get the message. Why should we make billionaires out of the millionaires?"

AREA BRIEFS

Book signing

A book signing will be held at Barnes & Noble in Midland at 2 p.m. today for "Black Cowboys of Texas," which was published by Texas A&M University Press.

Present for the book signing will be Alwyn Barr, a professor and former chair of the history department of Texas Tech University at Lubbock, who wrote the introduction for the book. Also scheduled to be present are Lawrence Clayton and Marilyn Brady.

African American cowboys worked side by side with vaqueros and Anglo cowboys. The lives of these cowhands tell a story of skill and grit, as the black cowboys did what was necessary to gain the trust and respect of those who controlled their destiny.

From scattered courthouse records, writings and interviews with a few of the African American cowboys who were part of the history of Texas, Sara R. Massey and a host of other writers have retrieved the stories of a more diverse cattle industry than has been previously recorded.

"Black Cowboys of Texas" sells for $29.95.

Feature speaker

Texas Commissioner of Education Jim Nelson will be the feature speaker at the Midland City Council of PTA meeting Monday, at 7 p.m. at Abell Junior High School. The meeting will honor lifetime members and the council also will present its scholarships. Nelson will speak about upcoming education issues, what education initiatives the Texas Senate and House are discussing for the next session, and a look at the parent's role in education.

Putin urges START II ratification, cuts in nuclear weapons

By Jim Heintz
Associated Press

MOSCOW — In his first major policy statement since being elected, President Vladimir Putin called Friday for the quick ratification of the START II nuclear arms reduction treaty, an accord that has been stalled for years by hard-liners and communists in parliament.

Putin also called on parliament to make even deeper cuts in atomic missiles, a signal that he wants good relations with the West after recent tensions and unpredictability under Boris Yeltsin. Western governments are likely to see the move as a sign that Putin intends to create a stable and pragmatic government.

It also could contribute to thawing Russia-NATO relations that were nearly frozen a year ago over the alliance's bombing of Yugoslavia.

However, Putin did not address the most sensitive nuclear arms issue between Moscow and Washington — the United States' desire to modify the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

Speaking in the eastern city of Snezhinsk, a major nuclear weapons design and production center, Putin said he has ordered defense and foreign ministry officials to step up consultations in parliament to prepare for START II ratification and for even deeper cuts envisioned under a proposed START III.

"We are setting the task to free the world from piles of excessive weapons," Putin said, according to Russian news reports.

START II calls for the United States and Russia to reduce their nuclear arsenals to 3,000 to 3,500 warheads each. Russia now has about 6,000.

The treaty was drafted in 1993 and ratified in the U.S. Senate in 1996. But Russian lawmakers repeatedly blocked ratification, claiming the treaty would undermine the country's security.

But the communists and hard-liners who oppose START II lost their dominance of parliament in last December's election and Putin, who won a four-year term last Sunday after three months as acting president, is now in a stronger position to push ratification through.

Putin won the election largely on the strength of his promises to restore Russia's status as a world power and on Friday emphasized that reducing its nuclear arsenal would not make the country weaker.

"Our aim is to make our nuclear weapons complex more safe and effective," he said. "We will preserve and strengthen the Russian nuclear weapons complex even though we don't plan to build it up."

Pushing for START II also could be seen as a concession to the inevitable, given the deterioration of cash-strapped Russia's arsenal. Analysts have said the arsenal is in such poor condition that only 600 to 800 warheads would be usable.

In addition, maintaining the arsenal is an enormous expense for the economically struggling country with a pricetag as high as $3 billion a year — more than 10 percent of Russia's entire national budget.

Quick approval of START II could also give Russia additional leverage in its dispute with the United States over the ABM treaty. The Clinton Administration is seeking to amend the treaty to allow creation of a limited shield against nuclear missiles.

Russia has bitterly opposed the plan, saying it would destroy the treaty's deterrent intent. The ABM treaty is based on the theory that nuclear powers will not launch missile attacks if they are unable to defend themselves from retaliatory strikes.

On another issue that has grated at U.S.-Russian relations, Putin pledged to help market Russian nuclear technology worldwide, tacitly dismissing U.S. criticism of a deal to build a nuclear reactor in Iran.

"We will protect Russia's interests in global markets, and won't allow anyone to push Russia from those markets under the guise of falsely formulated values," Putin said when asked about prospects of cooperation with Iran.

Nuclear Power Minister Yevgeny Adamov said Iran has asked Russia to build another three reactors — a plan that would vex the U.S. administration which fears that it would help Iran develop nuclear weapons.

Russians search for rebel ambushers

URUS-MARTAN, Russia (AP) — Russian troops mounted a major sweep today against Chechen rebels around the southern town of Vedeno after a federal patrol was ambushed, the military command said.

Federal troops fanned out through the mountainous area in a search for 39 soldiers missing since the ambush Wednesday on a convoy of Russian Interior Ministry troops, the North Caucasus military command's press center told the Interfax news agency.

Sergei Yastrzhembsky, the Kremlin spokesman for Chechnya, said today that 49 Interior Ministry troops were in the convoy. Four were killed in the attack, he said, according to Interfax. Six managed to escape, not 16 as reported earlier, he said.

"The remaining 39 were unaccounted for," he said.

Yastrzhembsky said the area around the village of Zhani-Vedenohas been "basically surrounded" and a search and reconnaissance mission was under way. "Preparations are continuing for thorough mopping-up operations," he said.

Russian planes and artillery bombarded rebel concentrations near the villages of Gekhi-Chu, Zhani-Vedeno and Alleroi, the press center said today.

"The extremists continue to try to ambush convoys and are laying mines along roadways," Yastrzhembsky said.

The ambush was the latest in a series of attacks demonstrating Russian forces' vulnerability to the rebels even though they are better-equipped and numerically superior.

Russian ground forces entered Chechnya in late September and have driven most rebels out of the flatlands and into the mountains that make up the republic's southern third. The rebels are skilled guerrilla fighters who use the rough terrain to their advantage, while Russian forces struggle to move their heavy equipment in the mountains.

The seven-month war has subjected Russia to strong foreign criticism for alleged human-rights violations.

In an address to the Georgian parliament, German Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder today urged Russian President Vladimir Putin to end the war in Chechnya and begin peace negotiations.

"Implementation of force by the Russian army in Chechnya and serious violations of human rights there arouse our serious anxiety," Schroeder said.

Russia has rejected such allegations, but in an apparent bow to international pressure, the Kremlin invited the U.N. High Commissioner for Human Rights to visit Chechnya.

The commissioner, Mary Robinson, was expected to arrive today for a four-day tour that will include a visit to detention facilities in Chechnya, where human rights groups say guards routinely torture detainees, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

ECONOMY: Petroleum index continues to soar

(From 1A)

"I'm noticing people are more confident and optimistic. I get the feeling people think they will be better off six months from now."

Marvin Wynn, president of the chamber, noted that "though the index was essentially flat, there are lots of signs when you look at the data, that are carrying out what we said all along, which is that the upside would be much slower coming than the downside."

Agreed Ingham, "If you recall, when the index began to quit growing in 1998, it was several months before the economy began to go into decline and flattened out for several months. I think we're seeing that now and that the indicators clearly show things will be bright over the next several months."

For instance, he said, motor vehicle sales tax collections for the first two months of 2000 are 27 percent above the first two months of 1999, and February collections are about 40 percent above February 1999 collections.

"We have seen an increase in business," said Chris Robin, general manager of Saturn of Permian Basin and president of the Midland New Car Dealers Association. "We feel like the economy is strong and people are in the market for new cars."

Don James, owner of Toyota of Midland, which just opened the new Daewoo of Midland, agreed that "Last year we were still in an oil crunch, but now we have definitely turned a corner. I've been cautiously optimistic, but the expectations are for 2000 to be a good year."

Robin said that in February, dealers sold 853 new vehicles and 873 used vehicles. Of the 853 new vehicles, 429 were cars and 424 were trucks. Of the used vehicles, 244 were cars and 471 were trucks, with the remainder being sold out of the market.

"Every indicator is for 2000 to be a strong year," Robin said, "as long as we can keep the federal government from controlling prices the way they didn't when prices were low."

Also up are airline boardings, up 6 percent over last February, and sales of existing homes, up 37 percent, and permits for new homes, up 33 percent over last year.

Employment continues below year-ago levels, though Ingham said the margin in the year-to-year comparison is narrowing.

"Monthly employment estimates are still well below prior periods, but the margin of decline is narrowing and this tells us employment is turning the corner. Recall that it took about 18 months following the onset of the oil price decline for the economy to shed its nearly 8,000 jobs. They will not return overnight. Many workers left the area during the downturn. The unemployment rate is falling and this slack must be taken up before many new workers are attracted to the region from outside."

Gary Sullenger, workforce development specialist with the Texas Workforce Center of Midland, said that while the city saw people leave the area, he doesn't believe the census fell as much as people might think because a number of unemployed workers stayed to undergo retraining and start new careers in new industries.

"We're seeing more employers contacting us, asking about our services, wanting to list jobs," he said. "A lot of employers I talk to are beginning to expand their payrolls. Everyone has to feel more secure that oil prices have stabilized. People are upbeat, their focus is on putting the last 18 months behind us and moving forward."

Pointed out Norman: "Don't lose sight of the fact that a year ago we were still seeing layoffs, closings and downsizing occurring. Employment is down in smaller increments in year-to-year comparisons for the same month, and I believe we should see that reverse in the next several months."

COUNT: Census form has drawn some complaints

(From 1A)

"Midland has always been a city that's grown and grown steadily," he said. "We've had good growth in the last five years. It's important in how we perceive ourselves and how the region looks at us as a leader."

Ms. Wurtz pointed out that the census acts as a clearinghouse, gathering information used by all the agencies to determine how much money and resources to send an area.

"In a disaster, like in Fort Worth" where a tornado severely damaged the downtown area this week, "the first thing officials do in such a disaster is pull information on the area and see how many residents there are so they can send first aid and equipment. What if Midland didn't fill out its census forms and a tornado hit?" she asked.

The census form has drawn complaints from some congressmen who call some of the questions in the long form intrusive and urge their constituents to leave blank any questions they feel are too intrusive.

"Two years ago, the Bureau of the Census presented the questionnaire to Congress and Congress approved it," Ms. Wurtz noted.

She explained that an incomplete questionnaire is returned to the local census workers, who have to complete the process in person.

Local census workers also will have to go, after the deadline, to non-responding addresses and have residents fill in their forms. Ms. Wurtz said that at the present, she has only 60 percent of the workers she needs to complete those tasks.

"I still need to recruit a lot of workers," she said.

She urged residents who have not yet received their forms to be patient. Most who have not received forms yet live in rural areas, where census workers are hand-delivering the forms, leaving them on residents' doors. Rainy weather in the last week has slowed that process, she said, but she expects it to be completed next week.

"The center was flooded with requests and that's caused about a week's delay in getting forms out," she said.

Residents who have not yet received a form can pick one up at a Questionnaire Assistance Center. The sites are at Community and Senior Services, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Travis Elementary, Midland College, Casa de Amigos, Southeast Senior Center and Our Lady of San Juan Catholic Church.

Frank Nelson, media specialist with the bureau in Dallas, said another delay has been the large number of requests for forms in other languages.

CASE: Local law enforcement chose to file federal charges

(From 1A)

The woman was told the apparent fraud came from the Midland and Odessa area. Her inquiries with three credit card bureaus led her to the Odessa bank where Chavarria attempted to obtain a loan. The bank representative told her the man posing as her husband was staying at the Days Inn in Midland.

She called the Midland Police Department and spoke to Jenkins. Jenkins confirmed the motel location with the bank manager, and started to track down Chavarria's alleged spree at the mall and other businesses.

According to investigating officers, Chavarria purchased three Compaq computers from the Sears store for $3,572, designer duffel bags, more than $400 in clothing and some smaller items. The manager said he left in a dark-colored Ford Expedition with a Hispanic female and three children.

Jenkins arranged for the Odessa bank manager to tell Chavarria that his loan had been approved and that the suspect should come to the office to pick up the cash and sign the documents.

Chavarria's room at the Days Inn was staked out, where the Ford Expedition was found with a trailer and new all-terrain vehicles on it.

In the meantime, his loan process was set for 12:30 p.m. March 7. Detectives in Midland waited for him to complete the loan documents and arrested him for alleged misuse of Social Security numbers.

At the motel, detectives found names, birth dates, Social Security numbers and other information that appeared to come from enrollment lists of a defensive driving school.

"I also found 49 copies of assorted counterfeit identification cards that were in a clear plastic bag," Jenkins said in his report.

A digital camera connected to a computer and a laminating device were also found. "All of these items could be used to counterfeit identifications," Jenkins said. A counterfeit Texas drivers license also was found.

"When we arrested him, it seemed he lived in Lufkin. I had Lufkin Police Department search his residence. They did a search and found a fresh burn pile and they also retrieved some documents that relate to this case."

Jenkins said a mobile home in Lufkin and property were purchased through someone else's Social Security number." Court documents indicate that the mobile home cost $80,000.

Authorities have also seized the $42,000 Ford Expedition SUV that was purchased in Lufkin under false pretenses. The Explorer was attached to a trailer and two ATVs worth $21,000. "All of it has to go back to the finance company, including a ride-around lawn mower," Jenkins said.

Social Security investigators got involved in the case as of the March 10, said Jenkins. Local law enforcement had the option of filing theft of identity charges with the state or filing federal charges. Jenkins said federal prosecution was chosen "because the feds have more severe penalties."

Way we look at weather changed 40 years ago today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty years ago today the weather changed forever. At least, the way we look at it did.

That day Americans got their first look at weather view from above.

But it was the beginning that led to today's stream of brightly colored satellite images tracking hurricanes, pinpointing twisters and measuring the power of El Nino and the drift of volcanic ash.

"What weather satellites represented was putting a sentinel in a guard tower up above the Earth," said Jamison Hawkins, chief of services at the National Weather Service's Office of Meteorology. "The atmosphere is a jigsaw puzzle and without satellites, we have a lot of pieces missing."

Gone are the days when a giant hurricane could strike Galveston, Texas, without warning and kill more than 8,000 people, as happened in 1900.

The Weather Bureau didn't pick up that storm until water was lapping over the docks, Hawkins said.

Four days before the hurricane destroyed Galveston, there had been reports of a storm in Cuba, but no one believed it could cross the Gulf of Mexico, he said. "If we had had a satellite, imagine."

"Compare that with Hurricane Andrew, where we drew a bead on that storm over a week in advance when it was a cluster of thunderstorms out in the Atlantic.... It caused $30 billion in damage and only 14 people died," Hawkins said. The fourteen deaths were direct storm fatalities in Dade County, Florida. The final toll including other states was about 40 deaths in the storm, still remarkably low.

Today, satellite images show every violent swirl of tropical storms from their birth to death, giving emergency planners time to evacuate threatened areas.

Former National Hurricane Center director Robert Sheets once said that if he had only one tool to do his forecasting job, it would be the geostationary weather satellite.

Today's satellites do more than just show cloud tops — they measure radiation from the ground and air, allowing scientists to take the temperature below; they can sense water vapor in the air, indicating where clouds and storms may form and they can even track plankton in the ocean.

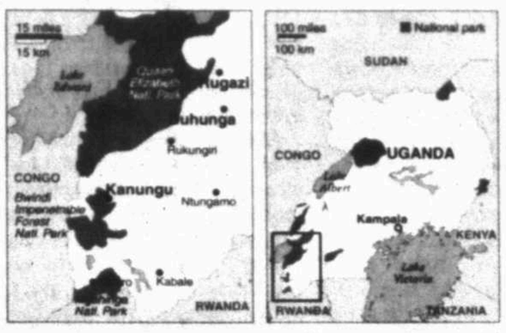
Cult deaths in Uganda

Authorities uncovered more bodies in one of the largest mass murders in recent history. The latest discoveries bring the total of dead to at least 924 in three compounds in southwestern Uganda that once belonged to the Movement for the Restoration of the Ten Commandments of God. Police are pursuing two main leaders of the movement, Cledonia Mwerinde and Joseph Kibwetere, who predicted the world would end Dec. 31.



Kanungu, March 17: At least 330 charred bodies are found in a church hall fire. Within days, six strangled, mutilated corpses are found on the compound.

Buhunga, March 24: One hundred and fifty-three bodies are found hacked or strangled in mass graves. They are believed to have been buried six weeks earlier.

Rugazi, March 27: Seventy-four bodies are found at the edge of a sugarcane field knifed or strangled; they are believed to have been buried one month ago.

Rugazi, March 28-29: Eighty-one bodies are found in a house belonging to a cult leader, Dominic Kataribabo. They are believed to have been dead one month.

Uganda death toll surpasses Jonestown

By Henry Wasswa
Associated Press

KAMPALA, Uganda — The death toll in the doomsday sect massacre in southwestern Uganda was raised Friday to 924, surpassing the 1978 Jonestown tragedy in Guyana as the worst modern-day cult-related mass killing.

Ugandan authorities promised to apprehend the perpetrators of the stabbings, burnings and stranglings. But investigators showed no signs of being able to track down sect leaders or even of being able to confirm which — if any — survived.

The government called a day of prayer Sunday to "console surviving relatives and assure the country that action is being taken in pursuit of the criminal perpetrators," presidential chief of staff Ruhakana Rugunda said, noting that many of the victims were children.

Even the search for more victims faltered Friday, with investigators putting off indefinitely plans to dig at a fifth sect compound. Police said they would wait until they had proper equipment for the site, located in remote, rebel-infested mountain jungle.

Forensic investigators gathered Friday at a cemetery overlooking the main compound of the Movement for the Restoration of the Ten Commandments of God in Kanungu, to try to determine if any graves there might contain more than one body. Finding nothing suspicious, they did not dig.

Police then retreated to the faraway capital of Kampala to await pathology reports on some of the bodies already discovered, police pathologist Thaddeus Barungi said.

In the capital, police revised the death toll in the March 17 church fire in Kanungu that set off the search for more victims among cult followers.

Authorities initially reported at least 330 charred bodies were found inside the ruins of a makeshift church in the sect's main compound. On Friday, they raised the toll to 530 in what was believed to have been a gasoline-fueled inferno in the sealed church.

Subsequent searches of three sect compounds in hill villages unearthed mass graves yielding victims apparently killed after what had been the cult's Dec. 31 deadline for the world to end.

Some victims appeared to have been knifed or strangled. Hundreds were children, although the devastation at the church and the possibility of more graves means a precise count will never be known.

The toll surpasses the November 1978 Peoples Temple tragedy at Jonestown in the jungles of Guyana. The Jonestown mass suicide and killings claimed 913 lives.

Ugandan police are pursuing international arrest warrants for Joseph Kibwetere, Credonia Mwerinde and three other suspected cult leaders. It's not clear if any or all of them escaped the killings or the fire that followed.

Famed Colombian cyclist kidnapped, later freed

By Jared Kotler
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Retired Colombian cycling hero Oliverio Rincon was abducted for the second time this year by leftist guerrillas, authorities said Thursday. He was later freed after 24 hours in captivity.

Rincon's previous, monthlong kidnapping — and the abduction earlier this month of the country's best-known cyclist, Luis Alberto "Lucho" Herrera — outraged sports fans and athletes in a country where kidnapping has become a thriving industry.

Rincon was released Thursday evening in his car, which he drove to an army base 30 miles from where he was abducted a day earlier in central Boyaca State, army anti-kidnapping chief Col. Jesus Bohorquez told Radionet Radio.

Bohorquez did not provide details, and Rincon had yet to make any statements.

The 32-year-old athlete — one of Colombia's top cyclists of the 1990s — was seized Wednesday along with his family by armed men who intercepted his car as he drove along a country road with his wife, mother-in-law and two children.

Two men wearing ski masks and waving pistols forced Rincon's Ford Explorer off the road near Duitama, his hometown in Boyaca, state police commander Col. Pedro Ramirez said.

The men then boarded the car and drove for several hours into a mountainous region dominated by the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, or FARC, the country's largest leftist insurgency, Ramirez told The Associated Press.

Rincon was told a rebel commander wanted to speak with him, but was given no more details, the police chief added. Police have had no direct contact with the kidnappers, and based their account largely on information provided by Rincon's wife, Gilma Rincon.

Gilma Rincon, her children and mother were released Thursday morning in Duitama.

"They treated us well and when I said goodbye the men told me not to worry," Gilma Rincon told Colombia's Caracol Radio Thursday.

She said the kidnappers — who identified themselves as members of FARC — had not made any demands and had promised not to hurt her husband.

In January, Rincon spent 10 days as captive of another leftist guerrilla group, reportedly the smaller National Liberation Army, or ELN. He was released Jan. 30, the same day hundreds of Colombian athletes marched in Bogota to demand his freedom.

Rincon said he had not paid a ransom, the most common objective of the roughly 3,000 kidnappings committed annually in the South American nation, mostly by rebels.

Rincon gained national famed for racing in major international events including the Tour de France, Tour of Italy and Tour of Spain.

Herrera was kidnapped by guerrillas earlier this month and released the next day following a nationwide outcry.

Philippine policeman dies in bid to meet weight-loss deadline

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A police officer died of a heart attack while exercising in an attempt to meet a deadline for police to lose weight, officials said Friday.

Police officer Boy Nelgas collapsed while exercising with other officers Thursday at a police station in Camiling in Tarlac province, north of Manila, a police report said. He died on the way to a hospital.

In early March, National Police Chief Panfilo Lacson directed the country's 117,000 police to reduce their girth to a maximum of 34 inches in six months or face dismissal. Nelgas had a 40-inch waist.

Many Philippine police are overweight. Lacson said their weight could hinder their mobility and efficiency in battling crime.

The slimming includes exercises at Manila's main police camp and a monthly climb up Mount Pinatubo volcano.

Rodriguez: OPEC price band will be between $22 and $28 per barrel

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will increase oil output whenever the price of the OPEC crude basket exceeds $28 a barrel and lower output when it dips below $22, the new OPEC president said Friday.

The price-band plan was approved by OPEC members during their meeting this week in Vienna, Austria. The system — consisting of frequent supply changes to keep oil prices within a set range — was first proposed by Venezuela.

Analysts have said a lack of complete data about world oil supplies would make a price band difficult to manage.

Speaking at a press conference in Caracas, Venezuelan Oil Minister Ali Rodriguez, the new OPEC president, outlined the system Friday. He said that if prices moved outside the set range for 20 consecutive days, the oil cartel will increase or decrease production by half a million barrels a day until the price shifts back. The 500,000-barrel output change would be divided among the members proportionately, based on their individual production quotas, he said.

The new system comes as oil prices hit nine-year highs recently, prompting concern from big oil consumers like the United States.

OPEC agreed Wednesday to increase production by about 1.7 million barrels a day. The total world increase is likely to reach 2 million barrels a day because non-OPEC members Mexico and Norway also said they would raise production and because OPEC members continue to cheat on their quotas.

The United States and other oil-importing countries, which have seen gasoline and heating oil prices soar in recent months, had been seeking output increases of between 2 million and 2.5 million barrels a day.

OPEC keeps watch on prices by calculating the value of a "basket" of seven different crude oils. The year-to-date average basket price is $26.24, which is about the level being bid for future deliveries.

At midday Friday, crude for delivery in May was priced at $26.67 on the New York Mercantile Exchange, while front-month Brent crude from the North Sea was at $24.98 on the International Petroleum Exchange in London.

Mexico's most famed anchorman quits

MEXICO CITY (AP) — For decades, the name Zabludovsky was synonymous with television news, Mexican style. No more.

Jacobo Zabludovsky and his son Abraham have resigned from the Televisa network where they were fixtures on the news broadcasts of the most important television network of Mexico and of the Spanish-speaking world.

The network's vice president for news, Leopoldo Gomez, announced the resignations during a news conference Friday at which the network introduced its new lineup of news presenters.

Abraham Zabludovksy apparently was miffed at being passed over for the key nighttime news slots. His father resigned "in solidarity," Gomez said.

Jacobo was the anchorman of Mexico's main evening news for more than 20 years before retiring at the start of 1998, when he was 69. He continued to work on scattered programs for Televisa.

Japan volcano erupts again Saturday after large blast a day earlier

By Koji Sasahara
Associated Press

DATE, Japan — A volcano in northern Japan erupted again on Saturday, a day after it came to life and sent a spectacular blue-gray plume of molten rock and ash billowing two miles above the crater and rolling down the snow-quilted slopes.

Ash dusted silent, evacuated villages near Mount Usu following the major eruption Friday afternoon. The only other noise came from sirens screaming warnings and ambulances and police cars cruising in search of damage.

Farther away from the volcano people streamed into the streets and climbed to rooftops to watch the towering cloud that blossomed from the eruption. Some snapped photographs of debris that rose two miles high for over two hours.

But those in the nearby city of Date who weren't looking out a window would barely have known that 2,416-foot Mount Usu was erupting.

"I didn't feel anything, I didn't hear anything," said Norimichi Nagao, who works for the nearby city on Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido. "I didn't even know that there was an eruption until I saw it on television."

The mountain erupted again before dawn Saturday, brightening the sky and giving off smoke for about 10 minutes, the Meteorological Agency said.

There were no immediate reports of damage or injuries from either eruption. But more than 11,000 people evacuated from communities at Usu's base after the earth began rumbling earlier this week spent Friday night in rescue centers.

Snow fell Friday evening, increasing concerns about mudslides in the lakeside resort area. The military was called in because of concerns over the possibility of landslides or mudslides caused by melting runoff. Two people were killed and 200 homes destroyed in mudslides following Usu's last eruptions, which began in 1977 and continued into the next year.

Fears also remained that Usu could spew a deadly mix of gas and rocks — called a pyroclastic flow — that races down slopes and incinerates everything in its path.

Prime Minister Keizo Obuchi said that evacuees might have to stay for a while at makeshift centers set up in school gyms and community halls. The government will consider building temporary housing if that is the case, he said.

At the centers, families sat on blankets spread out to mark their private space. Some put up cardboard partitions, but there was little else to give them any sense of privacy.

About 51,000 people live in the coastal city of Date — pronounced Dah-tay — and several smaller towns near Usu, located 475 miles north of Tokyo. Experts had predicted the eruption because of increased seismic activity that began earlier this week.

In Date, the eruption under clear blue skies became more of a public spectacle than a threat. The somewhat relaxed atmosphere was understandable: After days of small but constant earthquakes and high-level warnings, many residents were ready.

Almost immediately after the eruption, volcanic ash began to rain down on nearby towns. Residents downwind were soon enveloped by the pungent smell of sulfur.

While Date was spared ashfall by winds that blew debris from the eruption in the opposite direction, other places were not so lucky. Cars coming in from other areas around the mountain were covered in dust. Two other towns near Mount Usu, Abuta and Sobetsu, were silent and empty, nearly all their residents evacuated.

Some area residents expressed a mixture of relief and anxiety after the long-awaited eruption.

"I'm happy I'm safe, but I'm afraid this will do huge damage to my business," said 53-year-old scallop cultivator Yomiko Yasuko, who was out at sea when the volcano erupted.

North Carolina hoping to shield Big Tobacco from effects of $300 billion verdict

By Estes Thompson
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — North Carolina, the nation's No. 1 tobacco producer, will convene a special legislative session next week in the latest attempt by a state to shield cigarette makers from the crippling effects of a possible $300 billion verdict in Florida.

The special protection rankles anti-tobacco forces and troubles some constitutional law scholars.

But proponents, including the governor, say it is an economic necessity in North Carolina, where tobacco generates nearly $1 billion for farmers and where 114,000 people are employed in tobacco-related jobs.

The session is scheduled for Wednesday.

Under Florida law, a company appealing a damage award must post a cash bond equal to the verdict while it appeals. In tobacco country, the fear is that a Florida jury now hearing a class-action case involving 500,000 sick smokers will come back with a ruinous verdict of perhaps $300 billion in punitive damages.

Already, Virginia, Kentucky and Georgia have quickly approved laws limiting the bond cigarette companies would have to post. Virginia and Georgia approved a $25 million limit; Kentucky set it at $100 million.

North Carolina is considering a $25 million cap.

Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat, said that the measure is needed not just to preserve the tobacco industry but to ensure that states continue to get their annual payments from the $246 billion settlement nationwide settlement with the tobacco industry.

"It's clearly unconstitutional," countered Richard Daynard, a Northeastern University law professor and director of a group that encourages lawsuits against tobacco companies.

He said it violates the full faith and credit clause of the U.S. Constitution, which requires states to recognize each other's court decisions.

"Think about what this would be like in another lawsuit," Daynard said. "The legislature comes in the middle of the case and says we don't like the way it is going. Surely the Constitution doesn't read this way."

The Florida jury found last year that cigarette companies — including R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Liggett Group and Lorillard Tobacco Co., all three of which are based in North Carolina — made a deadly product. The jury is now considering how much compensatory damages to award three representative plaintiffs in the class action. If it awards compensatory damages, it then will weigh punitive damages for all of the smokers.

Legal experts like constitutional law scholar Michael Gerhardt of the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., argued that if the tobacco companies fear ruin, they should go to the Florida courts for relief, not the North Carolina Legislature.

Republican State Rep. Rex Baker, representing tobacco factory workers and farmers in northwestern North Carolina, said the financial risks to tobacco companies "are so high, we can't take a chance of a judge being irrational."

Baker, a former R.J. Reynolds executive, said he fears a $300 billion appeal bond could endanger the $100 million in state taxes generated by North Carolina's tobacco industry, which produced 449.6 million tons of tobacco last year.

"If the tobacco industry had to post such a bond, there's no way it could be done," Baker said. "The only way they could prevent that from happening is to declare bankruptcy. It would be absolutely devastating. It's the end of tobacco as we know it."

Pro-hunting lawmaker rails against cockfighting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Collin Peterson, a pro-hunting, pro-trapping congressman from rural Minnesota, may seem a strange ally for the Humane Society of the United States, but the two have joined forces against one target: cockfighting.

"I don't think anyone would label me an animal rights person," said Peterson, co-chairman of the Congressional Sportsmen Caucus. "I have a zero record from PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) and these groups. I'm for trapping; we have mink farming in my district."

But, he added, "I wouldn't want to see dogs fighting to the death, and this (cockfighting) isn't something we should be doing either."

Peterson, a Democrat, is sponsoring legislation that would ban the interstate transport of birds for cockfighting. In the matches, birds wear razor-sharp implements and often spar to the death. Onlookers often place bets on which bird will win.

Federal law allows fighting roosters to be shipped from any of the 47 states where cockfighting is illegal to one of the three where it isn't — New Mexico, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

Law enforcement officials in states where the sport is illegal say that is a loophole that makes their job more difficult.

About 40 senators and 170 House members have signed on as co-sponsors to the legislation. The Senate version — sponsored by Colorado Republican Wayne Allard, Congress' only veterinarian — passed the Agriculture Committee last month.

But Peterson has been unable to get a hearing in the House Agriculture Committee's livestock and horticulture subcommittee, due at least in part to a lobbying effort by opponents, led by the American Animal Husbandry Coalition, the trade organization for gamefowl breeders.

The coalition hired two former senators to lobby against the bill: Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and J. Bennett Johnston, D-La. They claim passage will lead to more restrictions involving animals.

"The people that are pushing the bill — PETA and the Humane Society — next they'll outlaw rodeos and horse racing," Symms said.

February's consumer spending up, savings at record low

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American consumers, the driving force behind the supercharged economy, spent with abandon in February at a pace more than double their income growth. It dragged the personal savings rate to a record low.

Economists said Friday's report shows that the Federal Reserve has not finished raising interest rates to slow the economy and keep inflation from becoming a problem.

Continuing their buying binge, Americans increased their spending 1 percent last month, the fastest pace since December, the Commerce Department said.

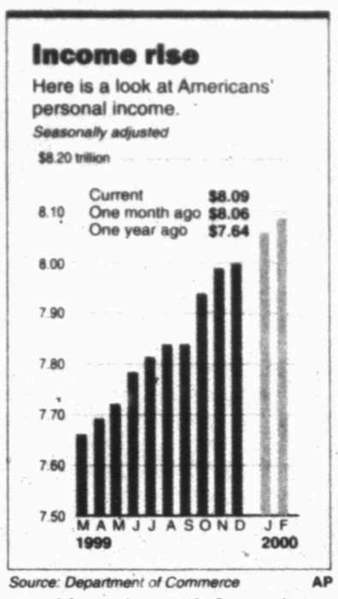
People are feeling wealthy and in the mood to spend because jobs are plentiful, incomes are rising, the stock market is strong and inflation is low, economists said.

"Consumers are buying anything and everything they can get their hands on," said economist Mark Zandi of RFA Dismal Sciences. "There's no significant constraint on consumer spending at this point in time."

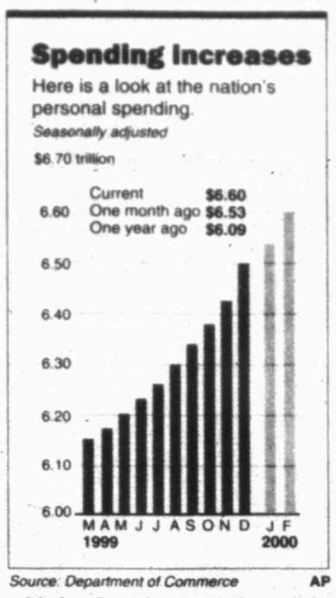
Meanwhile, Americans' personal income, which includes wages, interest and government benefits, increased by just 0.4 percent last month, the slowest pace since December.

With spending outpacing income growth, the rate of personal savings, or savings as a percentage of after-tax income, fell to 0.8 percent in February, a record monthly low. In January, the rate was 1.4 percent.

But the savings rate isn't as dire as it would seem, economists said. The savings rate measures only the amount of money being put aside each month for savings.



Source: Department of Commerce AP



Source: Department of Commerce AP

It does not represent a calculation of personal wealth, which would account for gains households have realized on their savings in previous months from such as rising stock market values and higher real estate values for their homes. Thus, the savings rate reflects money socked into a 401(k) but it doesn't capture an increase or decrease in its value.

The rising value of investments with the booming stock market has contributed to the low national savings rate because consumers feel more confident that they can afford to save less and spend more because their investments are doing well.

However, economists caution that the economy could be in for a shock if the stock market suddenly were to plunge and trigger a sharp cutback in consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of total economic activity.

The Federal Reserve boosted interest rates last week for a fifth time since June 30 to slow the speeding economy, which grew at a breakneck 7.3 percent rate in the final three months of last year.

Even though the higher rates made borrowing more expensive for consumers and businesses, they haven't yet significantly slowed the economy or its main engine, consumer spending.

Given that, many economists believe the central bank will bump up rates again on May 16.

"This is the type of report that has to truly worry (Fed) members as there are no signs that the 'Shop till you drop, and then pick yourself up so you can shop some more' philosophy has changed at all," said economist Joel Naroff of Naroff Economic Advisors. "This economy is still red-hot, and the Fed is going to do more, maybe a lot more, to cool the flames."

All eyes on Elian's father as custody impasse remains

By Mildrade Cherfils
Associated Press

MIAMI — Elian Gonzalez's Miami relatives said Friday they are no longer willing to give the boy to his father if he comes to the United States to await the outcome of their court appeal.

The relatives would let Juan Miguel Gonzalez visit Elian at their Little Havana home, but they will not hand over the 6-year-old while they fight in court for an asylum hearing for him, family attorney Manny Diaz said.

Elian "expresses fear about being with his father," Diaz said. "He's afraid that he will be punished."

The family also feels uprooting Elian from their home would be disruptive to his well-being, the lawyer said.

"The family would welcome (the father) to their house and sit down as a family and talk about what Elian has gone through and what he is experiencing and make a determination as a family as to what is best for the child at this moment," he said.

For months, the Miami relatives have said Elian's father would have to come to Miami to get his son. The father's unwillingness to come to do so prompted a visit instead by the boy's two grandmothers in January.

Now the father has requested a visa to come to the United States to take the boy back to Cuba.

Supporters of the Miami relatives of 6-year-old Elian Gonzalez stand near the home in Miami Friday. Elian's relatives said they are no longer willing to hand the boy over to his father if he comes to Florida to await the outcome of their court appeal. But they said they would not resist if the government tried to take Elian from their house.

Armando Gutierrez, a spokesman for the Miami relatives, said the strategy is "harming" talks with the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which have ended for the week with no agreement. He did not elaborate.

The INS wants a signed promise from the Miami relatives that will surrender Elian if they lose their court battle to keep him in the United States. The INS threatened to revoke the boy's residency status but twice this week pushed back the deadline, now scheduled for 9 a.m. Tuesday.

On Friday afternoon, Elian played with a white rabbit in the backyard of his Little Havana home after spending the morning with a teacher who is homeschooling him. His relatives have said they were keeping Elian home out of fear he could be taken away while in school.

As he played, about two dozen demonstrators mingled, some holding signs, as the Cuban national anthem played on a sound system. It was a calm day compared with Thursday, when dozens of anti-Castro activists linked arms outside the boy's home, practicing resistance techniques.

Elian was rescued in November after the boat carrying him and his mother sank during a voyage to reach the United States. His mother, who was divorced from his father, died along with 10 others.

Since then, the boy has been the subject of a custody fight between the governments of both nations, which want to return him to his father in Cuba, and Miami relatives who say he will have a better life here.

The boy's father asked for a visa Thursday to come from Cuba to the United States. Gregory Craig, a Washington lawyer representing the boy's father, said his client is ready to take custody of his son at a moment's notice.

Craig said he asked the INS to allow the father and other Cuban relatives to stay as long as it takes to complete the court case. A federal appeals court in Atlanta has scheduled arguments for May 11.

Craig said Elian's father will travel to the United States as soon as he is assured by the INS that he will be given custody of his son. The lawyer said he will also seek permission for the boy's classmates, teacher and doctors to travel to the United States to "help smooth the transition."

U.S. officials were examining visa regulations to determine how many of the 31 would-be companions would be eligible to join Elian's father. There are strict eligibility limits for Cuban visas.

Gore support may change dynamics on Elian bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Al Gore's surprise support could change the dynamics on Congress' bill to grant Elian Gonzalez and his family permanent U.S. residency, sponsors asserted hopefully on Friday. Before Gore's announcement, the measure was given almost no chance.

While Republicans welcomed the change, the top Senate Democrat expressed disappointment and surprise. "This shouldn't be a political issue. I wish it weren't a political issue," said Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

Then, not speaking about Gore specifically but about political posturing over the 6-year-old in general, Daschle said: "This is as despicable a situation as I've seen in a long, long time, and I'm troubled by that. I think it's very disconcerting that a young boy could be caught in this emotional tug-of-war."

At issue is a bill by Sens. Bob Smith, R-N.H., Bob Graham, D-Fla., and Connie Mack, R-Fla., that would give Elian permanent residency status in the United States. It was proposed earlier this week as a compromise after an earlier bill to give the boy U.S. citizenship languished in both the House and the Senate for lack of support.

The new version would also extend permanent residency status to Elian's father and five other family members now living in Cuba — should they come to the United States. Residency is a step short of citizenship.

The legislation would have the immediate effect of allowing Elian to stay in the United States while a Miami family court decides custody issues.

The Justice Department wants to return the boy to his father in Cuba. Discussions between immigration officials and the boy's Miami relatives, who want to keep him in Florida, are to resume Monday.

The boy has become the center of an international custody battle since he was found last November clinging to an inner tube in the Atlantic after a shipwreck that claimed the life of his mother.

Smith, the principal author of the residency bill, said in an interview, "I commend the vice president for breaking with the administration on it. I welcome his support." The bill so far has found only lukewarm support among Republicans and very little support among Democrats.

"Right now, the votes aren't there," Smith said. "We're hopeful that, if the vice president can work some of his side, and we can continue to persuade folks on our side, we can pass the bill."

Graham called Gore's support "a contribution to our effort to have this case viewed as an issue of Elian's best interests, not as a political issue." And Mack appealed to Gore "now to go a step further (and) become actively engaged," including attempting to change the minds of President Clinton and Attorney General Janet Reno.

Daschle said it was too early to tell what impact Gore's support would have, although he said that Gore's election-campaign turnabout — putting him at odds with Clinton and Reno — had aroused a lot of interest among Democrats.

"The circumstances, I should say, are rapidly changing and I don't know at this point whether anybody's done an accurate head count on what the votes might be. Anything is possible," Daschle said.

The bill could come up as early as next week, although GOP leaders said the following week seemed more likely. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said he would give the measure close attention.

Gore goes through political conversions in quest for White House

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Al Gore is moving to please voter constituencies he'll need to win the presidency, whether that means breaking with the White House over 6-year-old Elian Gonzalez or shifting positions to court homosexuals, labor groups, blacks and women.

On Friday, Republican George W. Bush challenged his Democratic rival to prove he's "not playing Florida politics" in the case of the Cuban boy caught at the center of a U.S.-Cuba custody battle.

Political analysts are divided over whether the vice president's conversions weaken his credibility or help him establish his own identity apart from President Clinton.

"I think it says more about his chutzpah than his character," said Bob Zelnick, a former TV reporter who wrote a biography of the vice president titled, "Gore: A Political Life."

"For seven years he was the man in the blue suit and red tie, crowding into every photo op. Now he wears different suits and acts like it's an alien administration," Zelnick said.

Merle Black, a political scientist at Emory University in Atlanta, thinks the Gonzalez case in particular shows that Gore is a cunning candidate.

"I think what he's trying to do is show he's a bold leader and he will do what he thinks is right, which to him may have the happy result of winning votes or at least neutralizing the opposition of others," Black said.

On Thursday, Gore broke with the administration by saying that he supported legislation that would grant Elian Gonzalez and his Cuban relatives permanent U.S. residency. He also wants the case heard in a family court, not decided by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The administration argues that Elian should be taken from his Miami relatives and reunited with his Cuban father. That position has enraged Cuban Americans in South Florida — and Bush.

"If the vice president is serious and not playing Florida politics, he ought to stand up and say to the attorney general, 'You've got the power to back the INS off so that the fate of this young man will not be determined in the family court,'" Bush told reporters while campaigning in Wisconsin.

With 25 electoral votes, Florida is the fourth-biggest prize in November's general election. The state generally votes Republican in presidential elections, but Clinton won it in a three-way race in 1996, gaining 40 percent of the Cuban-American vote.

Gore, who runs strong among Florida's seniors, hopes to win enough of the Cuban-American vote as well to threaten Bush with a loss in a state that's run by his brother, Gov. Jeb Bush.

Bush, the governor of Texas, gets indignant when asked about Gore's changing positions.

"This man will say anything to get elected," is his constant refrain.

That echos the sentiments of Bill Bradley during the Democratic primary campaign.

"He claims these issues are priorities for him," Bradley said of Gore in February, after he accused his rival of trying to co-opt his positions. "But priorities come from convictions, not through polls."

Some examples of the vice president's shifts:

■ During a January debate, Gore courted homosexuals by saying he would require that his appointees to the Joint Chiefs of Staff agree that gays be allowed to serve openly in the military. When that triggered criticism, Gore backpedaled, saying, "I did not mean to imply that there should ever be any kind of inquiry into the personal political opinions of officers in the U.S. military."

■ Meeting privately with AFL-CIO officials in mid-February, Gore reportedly told the union bosses that, if elected, he could negotiate a better trade deal with the Chinese than the administration on the issues of environmental and working conditions. When a business group complained to the White House, Gore issued a statement saying he stood behind the administration's landmark agreement to permit China enter the World Trade Organization. —Speaking to Jewish leaders in New York in early March, Gore hinted he would support moving the U.S. embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem, despite Palestinian opposition. "My desires are the same as your desires," he said. Gore also has met with Al Sharpton, a black leader in the state.

■ Several days later, Gore bid for supporters of former presidential candidate John McCain by pledging to make the Arizona senator's signature issue — campaign finance reform — his own political centerpiece. The vice president said he had learned from the "mistakes" he made raising money during the 1996 presidential election.

Massachusetts bans obsolete electronic equipment dumping

BOSTON (AP) — With electronic equipment becoming obsolete at an increasingly rapid rate, Massachusetts is instituting the nation's first ban on the disposal of computer screens, TV sets and other glass picture tubes in landfills and incinerators.

Environmental officials say they are trying to head off a flood of potentially toxic electronic junk.

"It's a good public health and environmental move," said John McNabb, solid waste policy director at Clean Water Action of New England. "We hope that it is replicated nationwide."

The new regulations take effect Saturday and mean individuals can no longer simply throw their computers and TV sets in the trash.

Instead, the state is setting up six collection centers to handle the items, and cities and towns must transport the items to those centers. From there, they will either be refurbished or sent on for recycling.

The focus of the new regulations is cathode ray tubes, which is the technical name for the glowing screens used in televisions and computer monitors. The average cathode ray tube contains 5 to 8 pounds of lead that can seep into the groundwater under landfills or, if the tube is incinerated, get into the air.

Jeff Fowley of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's New England office said it is already illegal throughout the country for businesses to throw their computers in the trash, but Massachusetts has broken new ground by barring individuals from doing it.

"At the federal level, we don't regulate homeowners. However, we encourage the states to put in appropriate additional restrictions," he said.

Though the regulation focuses on the CRTs, Massachusetts environmental officials say they expect people to recycle the entire computer. And they are happy about that, because computers' printed circuit boards can also contain toxic chemicals.

Potluck outlaws defy health regulations in Minnesota

By Josh L. Dickey
Associated Press

BRAINERD, Minn. — The spread started with a blue-lidded Pyrex container, identified only by the name "A. Olsen" scrawled on a strip of masking tape.

Soon, as visitors in caribou- and snowflake-patterned sweaters streamed into the meeting hall at Trinity Lutheran Church, the two long folding tables were groaning under the weight of the Tupperware, the crockpots and the foil-covered serving bowls.

"Can this go in the oven for a little bit, Ray?" asked one of many graying ladies, a covered hotdish held aloft.

"Sure, sure!" replied Ray Frisch, Sons of Norway president. "Just bring it on back!"

This was potluck, right in the heart of Minnesota, where a casserole is "hotdish" and celebrating St. Patrick's Day on a Friday night was "no biggie" for 75 or so full-blooded Norwegians. And some Finnish spouses, and Germans, too.

Similar scenes play out in countless church basements and community centers most days of the year around Minnesota, where potluck is popular among the heavily Scandinavian population.

It just so happened that on this day, the Sons of Norway may have been breaking the law.

The group announced its gathering in the local paper, which, in the eyes of some state Health Department officials, opened the potluck to the public. By state law, any food not prepared in or served from a state-approved kitchen is a no-no at public gatherings.

AP Photo

LaLonnie Dyrdahl, left, of Merrifield, Minn., along with Dorothy and Bob Janes of Brainerd Minn., "dish up" at the Sons of Norway potluck supper at Trinity Lutheran Church in Brainerd, Minn. The group was blending cultures by celebrating St. Patrick's Day with a potluck. Legislation has been introduced in the Minnesota Legislature to exempt potluck suppers from health department food handling regulation.

Technically, the Sons of Norway were outlaws.

"Well, that's just crazy, isn't it?" said Bill Hansen, the smile dropping off his craggy face. "They're not going to shut us down, are they?"

"Besides," Hansen said, the smile returning, "these ladies, they cook their food so well done that there's no way anyone could get sick."

No inspectors showed up to spoil the fun. And it's not likely that they would have, said Colleen Paulus, manager of the Health Department's environmental health services. Even though the law has been on the books for years, Paulus' department concerns itself mostly with big events like the Minnesota State Fair. Outside the Twin Cities, potlucks like the Sons of Norway's largely go unnoticed.

But not always, as Al Juhnke found out.

Juhnke was walking into a Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party bean feed last year when he was stopped at the door and told to take his crockpot back to his car.

Juhnke, however, happens to be a state representative, and he was annoyed enough to introduce this year a "hotdish bill" that exempts organizations holding potlucks from state food-handling regulations.

The Senate moved the bill along with a resounding voice vote of "ya, sure" (no kidding) two weeks ago. Similar approval is expected soon from the House and Gov. Jesse Ventura.

Health Department officials make no apologies for their enforcement efforts but haven't tried to block the legislation. Instead, they have worked toward a compromise, including a provision to post signs reminding potluckers that the food they're eating has been prepared privately.

The enforcement is aimed at preventing the food-poisoning outbreaks that have happened from time to time around the country.

"The biggest problem at potlucks is keeping hot foods hot and cold foods cold," said Aggie Leitheiser, assistant commissioner for health protection. Another concern is that in the event of an outbreak, unregulated food handlers aren't obligated to cooperate with Health Department officials, limiting their ability to trace the cause of illness.

Still, illnesses caused by potlucks are few. Of 55 reported cases of foodborne illness in Minnesota in 1999, only 11 were traced to private events.

Sons of Norway member Marylis O'Brien said if inspectors ever shut them down, they would simply stop advertising in the paper. It's not as if members wouldn't hear about a potluck.

And so, undaunted by their scofflaw status, the Sons of Norway began the feast. After a brief hymn, Frisch declared it was time to eat; as he stood deciding whether to call members up one table at a time, the line had already formed 50 deep. Off with the tinfoil, off with the lids.

The meatball and noodle stroganoff hotdish from "A. Olsen" was gobbled up before the end of the line reached it. The rest of the food lasted well into seconds — and no one was shy about seconds.

Somehow, the math works out: Every couple brings enough food for several people, but nearly everything is devoured.

But potluck is really all about the hotdish. Salmon and bread hotdish, potatoes and ham hotdish, wild rice and beef hotdish, some kind of meat and some kind of starch hotdish; all were spooned onto three-compartment picnic plates alongside pink, fluffy Jell-O with sliced bananas, spongy almond cake and Rummegrot.

"Norwegian cream pudding. Best thing you ever had," said Sue Leagjeld, as she ladled the warm, yellow stuff into styrofoam cups and sprinkled cinnamon on top. "Here, try it. ROOM-ah-grut. Roll the r's."

Easier eaten than said. But Leagjeld was right about the Rummegrot.

Flower Mound Marcus shuts out Lady Rebs from region title game

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

BEDFORD — It was probably inevitable that Flower Mound Marcus would score in Friday's Region I-5A semifinal soccer game, since nearly three-quarters of the game was played on the end of the field where the Marauders were attacking the goal.

LEE
Region I-5A Girls Soccer

But because of the strong defensive effort the Midland Lee Lady Rebels were putting up, it was still surprising when Marcus finally did score.

After 75 minutes of scoreless play on the artificial turf of Pennington Field, Marcus' Ashleigh Scott took a feed from Sarah Huffman and scored with 4:27 left in the game.

Marcus (17-3-3) held on for the 1-0 win, and will play District 5-5A mate Lewisville at 1 p.m. today for a spot in the state tournament. Lee finishes at 17-6 after losing in the regional semifinals for the second straight year.

Marcus' goal came on a momentary letdown for a Lee defense that had played so well in the rest of the game.

"I don't even know what happened on that," Lee defender Kristi Taylor said. "It all happened too fast. I don't think anybody was ready for it."

Even the girl who scored was a little surprised.

"I didn't even see the cross (pass)," said Scott, a Marcus senior. "Everyone's been telling me to shoot, because I haven't been shooting the last few weeks. So I shot."

Taylor, a Lee senior, was a big part of the reason that the game was scoreless at that point. In the 61st minute, Taylor made two saves to stop a promising Marcus threat.

"The defense played exceptionally well," Lee coach Mike Simpson said. "Kristi Taylor came in and cleared that ball out. Brandy Mullins played well, and Katie Williams went in and did a tremendous job."

Freshman keeper Hillari Neely made five saves as Marcus outshot Lee, 11-4. Neely didn't have a chance on Scott's goal.

"We all tried our hardest," Taylor said. "We didn't want to let down. We didn't want to give up

Lady Chaps have difficult first day at MC Invitational

By H.A. Tuck

Much-needed rain finally fell during the fifth game of the Midland College women's softball invitational Friday. The bad news was that the Lady Chaps only took one victory, while losing two. The third Chap game was stopped due to heavy rainfall with still another contest cancelled.

MC
Midland College Softball

Late cancellations by two teams which had accepted invitations to the tourney resulted in the three Western Junior College Athletic Conference women's teams battling against each other and outsider Hill College.

Five games are scheduled today, starting at 9 a.m. MC is slated for games at 12:30 and 3:45 p.m.

MC had little trouble beating Hill, 8-1, in its opener. After spotting Hill a run in the first on a three-base throwing error and a single, MC got three in the second on a pair of singles and a three-run blast by Nicole Martinez. Back-to-back triples by Crystal Shelton and J. R. Chavira, plus an error, plated two more in the third.

The final three runs came in the fourth on three singles, a two-run double by Frannie Salcido and a single by Melissa Martinez.

But MC went flat in the next contest, losing 4-1 to loop rival El Paso Community College. The border city visitors got two in the first on a homer by Erica Aguilar. MC answered with one in the third, thanks to a walk, wild pitch, sacrifice, and RBI single by Shelton.

El Paso got single runs in the fourth and fifth innings, courtesy of two singles, a sacrifice and a fielder's choice, then two walks, two errors, and a single.

Midland didn't fare any better against neighborhood rival Howard College, losing 4-2, in a rain-shortened contest. The teams were scoreless until the bottom of the third, when the Lady Hawks got four runs on a walk, three passed balls, two errors, a stolen base and just one single.

The Lady Chaps tried to battle back, using three singles and an error to plate one in the fourth. They got another on a single by Melissa Martinez and a double by Lauren Wallace.

Rain shut down the remainder of the game with MC batting in the sixth and its first batter on base.

It was a tough loss, especially since MC pounded out nine hits, while Howard managed just two for the game, both singles.

Final game of the day, between El Paso and Hill, was washed out and won't be rescheduled.

MC tries to bounce back today, playing Hill at 12:30 p.m. and Howard at 3:45 p.m. Other contests are: El Paso vs. Hill, 9 a.m.; Howard vs. El Paso, 10:45 a.m.;

NCAA Men's Final Four

And the Finalists Are?

Michigan St. again plays Big 10 rival

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Dick Bennett can't find his copy of the movie "Hoosiers."

Why bother? He's a real-life Gene Hackman, the coach of an improbable group of players that's demonstrated what hard knocks, floor burns and an unbreakable spirit can accomplish.

The Wisconsin Badgers even held a Final Four practice at Hinkle Fieldhouse, site of Milan High School's 1954 championship that became the subject of the movie about the little school that could.

"I've seen the movie at least 17 or 18 times," Bennett said. "I had a copy. Someone took it. I don't know where it is."

Bennett didn't bring his ladder to Indianapolis, either. That way, he could have re-created Hackman's famous scene in which the actor pulled out a tape measure to show the basket at Hinkle was 10 feet high, just like any other court.

"We didn't get the ladder out," Bennett said. "But I eyeballed the rim and it was 10 feet."

Unfortunately for the Badgers (22-13), they'll be playing at the RCA Dome instead of the historic fieldhouse when they meet Michigan State (30-7) in the national semifinals

Florida presents pressing problem

By Jim O'Connell

INDIANAPOLIS — There's little doubt what Florida plans to do against North Carolina. There's no doubt which player the Tar Heels will rely on the most at the Final Four.

NCAA 2000 Final Four Indianapolis

The Gators, just as they did against Illinois, Duke and Oklahoma State in their impressive NCAA tournament run, will use a full-court press to wear down North Carolina on Saturday.

The Tar Heels will look to point guard Ed Cota to handle the pressure.

"We might get tired some," said Cota, in his third Final Four. "As long as we don't get tired mentally, we still have a chance."

Florida's press will gladly take a turnover and convert it into quick points. But the Gators would rather have an opponent take close to 10 seconds to cross midcourt, be happy to get there and eventually experience the fatigue that makes Florida's 10-man rotation seem like a small army.

"Most people don't see a team like us in preparation," Florida coach Billy Donovan said. "I think our style of play is unique. It's different. So when you see us for the first time it can be a little difficult and a little different."

Terry Labonte breaks TMS record, claims 1st pole in nearly four years

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

FORT WORTH — Terry Labonte is suddenly making some noise.

After starting the season as a virtually forgotten man, the two-time Winston Cup champion is coming off his first top-five finish of the season and on Friday won his first pole in nearly four years.

Labonte took the top qualifying spot for Sunday's DirecTV 500 at Texas Motor Speedway with a lap of 192.137 mph, breaking the track qualifying record of 190.154 set last year by Kenny Irwin.

"We did come to test here last week and I guess that helped some," said Labonte, whose last previous pole came on the road course at Sonoma, Calif., in May 1996.

Asked why it took him so long to get his 26th career pole, Labonte said, "It takes a whole package to qualify well. We've won poles and sometimes it isn't as hard as qualifying 25th if you've got the right package."

Kevin Lepage took the outside position on the front row with a lap of 191.973 in a Roush Racing Ford.

"One of our guys watching from the top of the transporter said Terry got me by getting up to speed just a little bit quicker," Lepage said. "There wasn't anything else I could do, though. That was as perfect a lap as I could drive around this speedway."

Lepage, 25th in the driver standings, has had a decent start this season, but ran into problems last Sunday at Bristol, Tenn., where he started 38th and finished 30th.

"Last week at Bristol was one of the worst races we've had in a long, long time," Lepage said. "There were a lot of long faces around our shop this week, but this got everybody smiling."

Rookies Scott Pruett and Dale Earnhardt Jr. shared the second row at 191.775 and 191.666, respectively. They were followed by defending series champion Dale Jarrett at 191.340, last week's pole-winner, Steve Park, at 191.245 and rookie Jeff Fuller at 190.705.

Pruett, moving to NASCAR from the CART series, has had an up-and-down year in qualifying, making only three of six races,

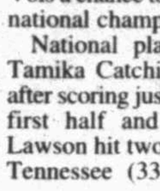
UConn, Tennessee make final

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — For one six-minute stretch, Tennessee solved Rutgers' mystifying zone defense. That turned out to be just long enough.



Tennessee went ahead to stay with a key second-half surge after being frustrated most of the game and beat Rutgers 64-54 Friday night, giving the Lady Vols a chance to win their seventh national championship.

National player of the year Tamika Catchings picked it up after scoring just two points in the first half and freshman Kara Lawson hit two big shots to lead Tennessee (33-3) into Sunday night's title game. The Lady Vols will play Connecticut in Sunday's final.

It was 36-36 in a slow-paced game — just what Rutgers (26-8) wanted — when Tennessee started finding creases in the Scarlet Knights' feisty matchup zone.

First it was Lawson driving into the heart of the defense and flipping in a finger roll to break the tie with 13:57 left. Then Kristen Clement fired a no-look pass across the court to Michelle Snow for a layup.

After Davalyn Cunningham scored for Rutgers, Catchings swished a line-drive 3-pointer and Lawson nailed a jumper from the baseline for a 45-38 lead with 9:38 to play.

A slick baseline drive by Catchings and an 18-footer by the 6-foot-5 Snow completed a 13-3 run that made it 49-39 with 7:55 remaining. From there, it was just a matter of holding off the Scarlet Knights, and the Lady Vols got it done. Lawson hit six straight free throws to keep them in control and even blocked the last shot of the game.

Connecticut 89, Penn State 67

PHILADELPHIA — Top-ranked Connecticut ran away from Penn State and its pesky Philly connection. Up next, a dream matchup against Tennessee.

With the biggest stars from UConn's glorious past in the stands, the Huskies ended Penn State's run of upsets Friday night with an 89-67 victory over the Lady Lions.

UConn (35-1) gets a chance to repeat its glorious title run of 1995 in a rematch Sunday night with the Lady Vols, who beat Rutgers 64-54.

Sue Bird led the Huskies with 19 points, hitting five crucial 3-pointers and running Penn State (30-5) ragged all night. Swin Cash had 9 points, all in the second half, when UConn went on a dizzying 24-6 run that sealed their NCAA finals showdown with Tennessee.

Svetlana Abrosimova had 14 points and 10 rebounds as former Huskies stars Rebecca Lobo, Kara Wolters and Jennifer Rizzotti watched from the stands.

Andrea Garner had 19 points for Penn State, and the Lady Lions' other Philadelphia native, Rashana Barnes, had eight points.

Cincinnati's Martin earns top honor

■ Iowa State Eustachy also gets nod as AP's Coach of the Year.

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Iowa State and Cincinnati began the college basketball season together in Hawaii at the Big Island Invitational.

On Friday, Cyclones coach Larry Eustachy and Bearcats center Kenyon Martin were together again, honored by The Associated Press as coach and player of the year.

"You don't do it without players," said Eustachy, whose team is 32-5 and won the Big 12 regular-season and conference tournament titles. "We have a classy, classy group of guys. Everybody accepted their role."

Eustachy recalled talking to his team about Martin in the championship game of the Hawaii tournament.

That was the start of an outstanding season for Martin, who was one vote shy of being a unanimous All-America selection and averaged 18.9 points, 9.7 rebounds and 3.4 blocks.

The 6-foot-8 senior broke his leg three minutes into a quarterfinal loss to Saint Louis in the conference tournament. That cost the Bearcats the No. 1 ranking, a position they held this season for 12 weeks.

"I'd trade all these awards if I could play," Martin said. "I was fine until the tournament started and then it hit me."

Martin said he hoped to be back on the basketball court by June 1.

Martin, a three-time defensive player of the year in Conference USA, was followed in the voting by AP member newspapers and radio stations by Marcus Fizer of Iowa State, Mark Madsen of Stanford, A.J. Guyton of Indiana, Troy Murphy of Notre Dame and Chris Mihm of Texas.

Martin is the first player from Cincinnati to win the Adolph Rupp Trophy, which was first awarded in 1961.

Eustachy is 206-106 in a career that has included stops at Idaho and Utah State. He is the first Iowa State coach to win the award, which was first presented in 1967.

PRESS: Gators have more depth than UNC

cult and a little different."

North Carolina, at its third Final Four in four years, hasn't seen anything like Florida's press. And with a seven-man rotation, the Tar Heels can't be too thrilled about facing it.

"The starters, we're used to playing 38 minutes and better," said Cota, who has played 159 of a possible 160 minutes in the tournament. "Florida has a lot guys they're going to throw at us. We need to go out there and try to control tempo."

The winner advances to Monday night's championship game against the winner of the Michigan State-Wisconsin national semifinal.

The fifth-seeded Gators (28-7) have been a new team since defeating Butler in overtime in the first round on Mike Miller's buzzer-beater. Since then, top-ranked Duke has come the closest (87-78) to beating Florida, which reached the Final Four for the second time.

Miller said the Butler game taught the team that "it's going to take all 10 of us to win."

"It also taught us that anyone can win; it doesn't matter what it says on the front of your jersey," said Miller, the MVP of the East Regional.

Few names have as impressive an NCAA tournament history as North Carolina, which is making its 15th Final Four appearance, tying UCLA for the record.

The latest trip was the least likely of all. The Tar Heels (22-13) struggled through an inconsistent season and entered the tournament seeded eighth. They've put together their first four-game winning streak of the season.

"All year long we had an up-and-down season," said Cota, only the third player in NCAA history to have more than 1,000 assists. "We can't blame anybody for writing us off or our fans for criticizing us and stuff like that because we deserved it. But we handled it well. The coaches had the patience with us, and we just believed. That's why we're here now."

Freshman Joseph Forte was the MVP of the South Regional after averaging 20 points a game, but it's Cota that runs this team.

"There's not anything that guy has not seen over a four-year period in his career, defensively," Donovan said. "He has great court awareness, court vision, he's crafty with the ball, he doesn't turn it over. He knows how to play 40 minutes a night. He's conditioned to do that."

North Carolina coach Bill Guthridge is in his second Final Four in three years, one fewer than Cota has been in.

"He's our all-time assist leader, and we've had some pretty fair country point guards as well," Guthridge said. "I think his leadership has been very good this year, especially as we've gotten towards the end of the season and I don't know where we'd be without him."

RIVAL: Spartans go for 4th win over Wisconsin

(From 1B)

Saturday. Wisconsin needs all the help it can get after losing three times to the Spartans this season.

"Is there a seed of doubt?" Bennett said. "I would be lying if I said there wasn't. When a team beats you three times, you can say that's a superior team."

Why should anyone believe the fourth meeting of the season between these Big Ten rivals will be any different than the first three? Michigan State routed the Badgers 61-44 on their home court back in February; Wisconsin played more respectably in losing the next two meetings 59-54 and 55-46, the latter at the conference tournament.

"It seems like half the people are saying, 'Well, you beat them three times, you should beat them the fourth,'" Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said. "The others are saying, 'I've never heard of a team beating a team four times.'"

The Spartans, the only top seed to reach Indy, began thinking about winning their first national championship in 21 years as soon as the horn sounded on their Final Four loss to Duke last season.

A third straight Big Ten title wasn't enough. Mateen Cleaves, one of the nation's best point guards, skipped a chance to play in the NBA for this moment.

He doesn't come alone. The supporting cast — A.J. Granger, Morris Peterson, Andre Hutson and Charlie Bell — is experienced and title-worthy. The team is versatile on offense, stifling on defense and highly motivated. They are the unquestioned favorite at this Final Four.

"I don't really believe it totally, but I do embrace it," Izzo said. "This team can handle it. We've had the bull's-eye on us for an entire year."

Then there's Wisconsin, which wasn't even one of the four best teams in its own conference. The Badgers finished sixth in the Big Ten, but they've won 11 of their last 14 games — all three losses coming against Michigan State.

"To win this next game, most people think it's improbable," Wisconsin forward Andy Kowske said. "We just go out and play defense. That's our confidence right there, our defense."

Ahh, defense. Bennett's turn-back-the-clock style of play focuses on stopping the other team — not a bunch of crowd-pleasing, high-flying dunks. The Badgers have reached the 70s only four times all year.

Ugly? Sure. Effective? You bet.

"When you go out there at all five positions and find the other team is bigger, stronger, faster, more athletic and you win the game ... you've got to love that," Kowske said. "We play the style of game that we have to play. There's no other way we can play. If we tried to run and gun, everyone would run right by us."

The Badgers are well aware of what they must do to create their own version of "Hoosiers" — slow things down offensively, never let up defensively, get down and dirty on the boards. This is no time for a radical change.

March Madness still means big money, betting

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The NCAA wouldn't have liked the scene two weeks ago in the sports book of the Stardust hotel-casino.

All 13 betting windows were open, and gamblers were still lined up 10 deep to get their bets down on teams in the opening rounds of the NCAA tournament.

March Madness still means big money in this city's sports books, where the NCAA's effort to ban legal betting on college games hasn't translated into less betting on the NCAA tournament.

"The first weekend of the tournament was the biggest four days of the year in our book, without question," Stardust sports book manager Joe Lupo said.

The books are expected to be packed again Saturday when Michigan State plays Wisconsin and North Carolina meets Florida in the national semifinals.

At most sports books across the city on Friday, Michigan State was an 8-point favorite, while Florida was favored by five points.

The Super Bowl is by far the most heavily bet game of the year, and the NCAA tournament is generally perceived as the second-biggest event of the year.

Lady Rebels' six players headline all-district squad

Staff Report

BEDFORD — The Midland Lee girls' soccer team received it's share of honors on the All-District 4-5A Team, landing the offensive and defensive most valuable players, as well as four-first teamers.

High-scoring junior Linsey Johnson was named the offensive MVP, while senior defender April Rankin shared defensive MVP honors with Kendra Speciale, a senior from San Angelo Central.

The season ended for both Lee and Central Friday, as they lost Region I-5A semifinals games to Flower Mound Marcus and Lewisville, respectively.

Appropriately, the best player on the district's best team was named the Player of the Year. Junior Kelly Wilson led Odessa Permian to it's first district soccer championship, finishing district play at 11-1 — three games ahead of Lee and Central.

The Odessa coaches shared Coach of the Year honors. Permian's Kent Rivas coached the champs, and Odessa High's Noe´ Cerezo took over the struggling program late in the school year and coaxed two district wins out of the Lady Bronchos.

Permian sophomore Ashley Rounds was named Newcomer of the Year.

Midland High landed two players on the first team: senior forward Jessica Salgado and junior goalkeeper Emily Schigut.

Lee's four first-teamers were senior defender Kristi Taylor, senior midfielder Amy Rankin, junior midfielder Raffi Belizaire and freshman defender Ashleigh Decker — who was the only freshman on the first team.

There were 17 first-team selections on the all-district list, and that number does not include the five girls who earned superlatives, like Johnson and April Rankin. There were also 17 girls named to the second team, so roughly half of the district's starters were honored somehow.

Friday's action for the Lady Chaps was their first at home since March 1. They'll wrap up their regular season play with eight straight conference games. El Paso comes back to Midland for doubleheaders April 14 and 15. Howard College visits Midland for twin-bills on April 19-20. MC currently is 5-3 in the three-team conference, holding a 3-1 edge over El Paso, followed by a 2-2 split at Big Spring against Howard. The top two teams advance to Region V action. Last year, MC finished behind El Paso and Howard.

LOCAL SOFTBALL TODAY

Midland Lee vs. Abilene High

Where: at the Midland Lee softball field...

When: Game time is 2 p.m...

Records: Midland Lee is 17-6-1 for the season and 6-2 in District 4-5A play while Abilene High is 7-0 overall and 18-3 in league play...

4-5A Significance: Even with a loss to Lee, Abilene High will still maintain a 1/2-game lead over Lee and first place in the standings. But the game is even more important for the Lady Rebels, who would fall into a tie for second place with either Abilene Cooper or Midland High with a loss...

Notes: Lee is coming into this game after a 6-3 win over Odessa Permian while AHS has had an open date to ready for this game... Lee junior pitcher Mandy Hacker got the win against Permian, picking up her second consecutive 4-5A victory. She is 3-2 in district games... Designated hitter Cara Brininstool doubled, tripled and drove in two runs against OHS... Hacker also drove in two runs and Shandi Neatherlin had an RBI against the Lady Bronchos... AHS took an 8-2 decision over Lee in Abilene in the first half... The Lady Eagles are seeking to knock Lee from the 4-5A throne room. Lee is the defending champion of 4-5A...

Next: Lee will draw the league's open date on Tuesday before heading back into 4-5A action on Saturday against Odessa High...

Midland High vs. Abilene Cooper

Where: at Abilene Cooper...

When: Game time is 2 p.m...

Records: Midland High is 15-7 for the season and 5-3 in District 4-5A play while Abilene Cooper is 12-4 overall and 5-3 in league play...

4-5A Significance: Both teams are tied for third place. The winner will have a leg up on the race for the state playoffs since only three teams can enter the playoffs. Also, the winner could possibly move into a tie for second place if Midland Lee falls to league leading Abilene High...

Notes: Both teams come into this game after 4-5A victories. MHS pelted Odessa High, 12-2, in six innings on Tuesday while Cooper ran over San Angelo Central, 9-0... The last time these two teams met, MHS won a 21-3 decision over the Lady Cougars in gale force winds in Midland. Cooper has a key win over Midland Lee, however, to stay in the playoff hunt... This could be the season for either team even though both have three games left to play. Against OHS, the Lady Bulldogs got a win from junior pitcher Collin Lange, who is 5-3 in district play. Lange also had three RBIs with two hits in the same inning... Crystal Martinez tripled twice and knocked in three runs. Kristi Heard also tripled while Kim Combs and Kristin Harris had doubles to pace an 11-hit attack...

Next: MHS will host San Angelo Central at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at the new MHS softball field on Loop 250 by Masters Golf Range:..

Boxer's daughter pulls out of debut

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Big George can rest easy for now. His daughter will not be getting hit Saturday night.

Freeda Foreman, daughter of the former heavyweight champion, pulled out of her scheduled pro debut Friday because she wasn't feeling well from a virus.

The latest debut of a daughter of a former heavyweight champion was postponed indefinitely on the advice of Nevada Athletic Commission Dr. Flip Homansky.

George Foreman had opposed his 23-year-old daughter following the daughters of Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier into the ring.

any goals."

While Lee played good defense, it played very little offense, getting off only four shots. Marcus keeper Bianca Beck got the shutout without making any saves.

"We never did mount much of an offense," Simpson said. "We had some chances, but we couldn't convert. But so did (Marcus).

"The biggest factor was that they were quicker to the ball," he said. "They'd get two touches, three touches before we would react. Part of that was the (artificial) turf. It's just a faster roll, and it takes time to get used to it.

"To me, it was just the touch on the ball," he said. "We were having trouble getting to the ball and making good, clean passes when we did get it."

The combination of plastic turf and Marcus' defense shut Lee out.

"Our defense played incredible," Scott said. "Kate (Kirwan) completely shut down No. 11 (Lee's Linsey Johnson). She's supposed to be a big threat for them."

Johnson, Lee's leading scorer, got only one shot off before being sent off with her second yellow card of the game in the 69th minute. After being slung to the ground by a Marcus defender, Johnson was given a card for retaliation, although it wasn't apparent what she did. Neither she nor Simpson knew what she did, either, they said.

"It was a great season," Simpson said. "This is what you play for. Hopefully, next year we'll play on grass."

REGION I-5A NOTES: Lewisville (20-2-2) made it a District 5-5A sweep over 4-5A, beating San Angelo Central (17-9) in Friday's other semifinal, 2-0. Lewisville sophomore Ashley Gaviglio scored both goals — one in the 29th minute and one in the 45th minute... Central coach Jim Bragg is a Lewisville graduate... 4-5A was shut out in the semifinals, as the Abilene High boys fell to Arlington Martin, 1-0. Chris Carman scored the only goal with 6:06 left in the game... Maybe it was the hair. Nearly all of the Martin Warriors wore dyed-blonde hair...

Kwan trails Russians going into free skate

Associated Press

■ World Championships

NICE, France — Michelle Kwan may have returned her focus to figure skating a little too late for a world title this year.

As graceful as ever, Kwan still bobbled on a triple flip during the short program Friday at the World Figure Skating championships and finished third going into the final free skate.

Skating with porcelain calm, Russian Maria Butyrskaya won the short with an elegant program that emphasized her maturity, beating younger rivals Russian Irina Slutskaya and Kwan, even though both had slightly more difficult jumps in the technically dominant short program.

The United States had three women place in the top seven. Sarah Hughes of Great Neck, N.Y., at 14 the youngest competitor, finished fifth, placing fourth overall going into the final free skate. Angela Nikodinov of San Pedro, Calif., placed sixth in the short, and is seventh overall.

Kwan's chances at winning her third world title were marginal, depending on both Russians' bombing in Saturday's free program. In her freshman year at UCLA, Kwan scaled back on training in the transitional fall quarter, but shifted the balance back toward skating in the winter, moving out of the dorm and taking fewer classes.

"This year has been completely different for me," Kwan said. "It's been a lot of fun. The first quarter at school was hard. I didn't skate as much as I wanted."

She shook Slutskaya's hand with obvious admiration after the Russian told reporters she had been attending college for five years and would take her final exams next year. "Congratulations!" Kwan said.

The U.S. champion appeared tense going on to the ice but seemed to relax after hitting a fine double axel and a triple lutz-double toe combination. The program, to an orchestral version of the Lennon-McCartney hit "A Day in the Life," flowed into her graceful spirals, which she held for nearly the length of the rink, then let go a bit with a hip swivel when the pace picked up.

Kwan's only real problem was the landing on the triple flip, which was added to the program to increase the difficulty. Her technical marks were mostly 5.6s and 5.7s with one 5.4.

Old in skaters' years at 27, Butyrskaya diverted all attention from the much ballyhooed Kwan-Slutskaya rivalry with a softly skated romantic program to Sarah Brightman's "Scene d'amour." With all the elements performed perfectly, the judges didn't seem bothered that her optional jump was the less-difficult triple loop to the triple flip jumped by Slutskaya and Kwan. It was only after that officials revealed she had lightly cut two right fingers cleaning her blade before going on the ice.

Midland High vs. Odessa Permian

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Zachery Field.
Records: Midland High is 17-4 overall and 3-2 in District 4-5A. Permian is 7-12 and 1-3.
4-5A Significance: If Midland High wins and Odessa High beats Midland Lee, the Bulldogs will be alone in first place atop the district, but a loss could drop MHS — currently tied for second — as low as fifth in the district. Permian needs a win to stay within shouting distance of the playoff race.
Notes: The Bulldogs are rolling now and look as if they're finally living up to that No. 5 preseason ranking when it counts. They have scored 34 runs in their last two games, both of which they won by the 10-run rule. Midland High turned in its most dominant district performance yet when it destroyed Abilene High 15-0 in five innings Tuesday. Laynce Nix, Jayson Nix and Cotey-Joe Cswaykus each hit home runs in the fourth inning to help end the game early. The Bulldogs also got a stellar pitching performance from Mark Avila, who threw four shutout innings to earn the victory... Freshman right-hander Casey Zachry, who beat San Angelo Central a week ago, should be on the mound today... Permian carries some momentum into this game, having posted its first district win over Central, 8-2, last Tuesday. MHS has already beaten Permian once this season, winning a 10-0 run rule game on its way to winning the Tournament of Champions.
Next: Midland High won't play again until a week from today, when it opens the second half of district with a key game at crosstown rival Midland Lee.

Midland Lee vs. Odessa High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Odessa High.
Records: Lee is 14-7 overall and 3-1 in District 4-5A. Odessa High is 4-13 and 2-2.
4-5A Significance: With a win, Lee will remain alone in first place in the district, and if Midland High and Abilene High both lose, the Rebels would lead by a full game. With a loss, Lee is at best tied with Abilene Cooper for the district lead, at worst, tied with Cooper, Abilene High and Odessa High for second. If Odessa High wins, the Bronchos will be tied for first with Lee and Cooper if both Midland High and Abilene High lose.
Notes: The Rebels showed some character to claim the district lead Tuesday, beating Cooper 8-4 thanks in large part to a four-run sixth inning. Collin Gilliam and Jordan Cooper had key hits in the inning while Jon Rogers pitched a gritty complete game to improve his record to 6-0. Gilliam, who earned his first victory of the season by beating Odessa Permian in his first district outing, will likely start for the Rebels today... The Rebels had their best hitting performance of district thus far against Cooper, pounding out 12 hits...Odessa High has perhaps been the surprise team of the district thus far, boasting a win over Abilene High (which beat Lee 9-0) and the Bronchos can make a statement that they're to be taken seriously with a win today.
Next: Lee will resume district action Tuesday when it hosts San Angelo Central at 4:30 p.m.

Stars defenseman Zubov suffers injury

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Stars defenseman Sergei Zubov is expected to be out two to four weeks with a sprained right knee.

Zubov hurt his knee Wednesday in a third period collision with Florida Panthers defenseman Bret Hedican. The 29-year-old Zubov is expected to be re-evaluated at the start of the first round of playoffs, Stars officials said Friday.

The Stars clinched their fourth straight Pacific Division title Wednesday with a 4-1 win over the Florida Panthers.

Zubov, a three-time All-Star, has nine goals and 33 assists.

Rodriguez has big night vs. Cardinals

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Ivan Rodriguez said his bruised right elbow was fine, then proved it by going 3-for-3 with a home run as the Texas beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-4 in an exhibition game Friday night.

The reigning AL MVP was drilled by a pitch Thursday night in a game against Double-A Tulsa. Once learning X-rays were negative, Rodriguez wasted no time getting back behind the plate.

He singled in the first and second innings, then hit his third homer of the spring in the fourth. He caught one more inning, then left when starting pitcher Darren Oliver was pulled.

Oliver allowed three runs on six hits in five innings in his first appearance against the team he played for the last 1 1/2 years. One of the runs was unearned, but it was set up by his own fielding error.

Pat Hentgen had his worst outing of the spring, giving up seven runs on 10 hits and two walks. He also hit a batter and didn't have any strikeouts.

Mark McGwire took batting practice for St. Louis, then his back stiffened and he was scratched from the lineup, disappointing many of 37,241 fans who came to The Ballpark. He's expected to be fine for the opener.

Agassi suffers Ericsson upset

Associated Press

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Andre Agassi walked quickly to his changeover chair, picked up his racket bag, brushed past autograph seekers at the railing and disappeared through an exit.

It was the best he had moved all day.

Hampered by a mild sprain in his right ankle, Agassi limped out the Ericsson Open with a 6-1, 6-4 loss to Brazil's Gustavo Kuerten in the semifinals.

Agassi said the injury was partly his fault because of the physical demands from Wednesday when he needed 2 1/2 hours to beat Tim Henman in the quarterfinals.

Kuerten's upset prevented an Agassi-Pete Sampras showdown in Sunday's final. Sampras, seeded second, slugged 16 aces and beat No. 14 Lleyton Hewitt 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 in the other semifinal.

Sampras advanced to his first final this year. He's bidding for his third title at Key Biscayne and his first since 1994.

In the women's final Saturday, Lindsay Davenport will try to beat Martina Hingis for the sixth time in a row.

Agassi said his ankle should be fine in a few days, and he expects to play in next weekend's Davis Cup match against the Czech Republic. But against Kuerten, Agassi said, the ankle hurt more than he expected.

Agassi requested an injury timeout after the first set and had his ankle taped. He played better after that but still had trouble moving, especially to his right.

Struggling with his footwork on Kuerten's tricky second serve, Agassi never had a break point.

Kuerten, the 1997 French Open champion, needs one more win for his first hardcourt title and his first title in the U.S. He came to Key Biscayne just 1-3 on hardcourts.

Davenport regains world's top ranking

Associated Press

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Lindsay Davenport will take over the No. 1 ranking next week, further proof she has Martina Hingis' number.

Davenport has dominated their rivalry lately, and they meet again Saturday in the final of the Ericsson Open.

Hingis was No. 1 for much of the past three years and the past 32 weeks. But thanks to a harrowing semifinal victory Thursday over Sandrine Testud, Davenport is assured the top spot next week, and deservedly so, Hingis said.

Davenport has beaten Hingis five times in a row, including finals this year at the Australian Open and Indian Wells.

With Steffi Graf retired, Venus Williams mulling retirement and Serena Williams in a slump, Davenport and Hingis are in command on the women's tour. Davenport is 35-1 since September, and Hingis has reached five consecutive finals this year.

Man charged with stalking Hingis at tournament

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — A man who claims he is romantically involved with Martina Hingis was arrested and charged with stalking her at the Ericsson Open.

Dubravko Rajcevic, 45, had been following Hingis and sending her letters, her coach and mother, Melanie Molitor, told police. He was charged with stalking and trespass after warning, both misdemeanors, and released Friday on $1,000 bond.

Rajcevic told Miami's WPLG-TV that he and Hingis have a relationship.

"I'm not stalking Martina," he said. "I believe she feeds off my positive energy. She knows me well."

Hingis, 19, who will play Lindsay Davenport in the final Saturday, declined to comment.

Serena Williams will likely skip Hilton Head tournament

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The father of reigning U.S. Open tennis champion Serena Williams on Friday said he is almost certain his daughter will honor the NAACP boycott of South Carolina and skip the Family Circle Cup tournament on Hilton Head Island in April.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has called for an economic boycott of the state as long as the Confederate flag, which it says is a symbol of slavery, flies over the Statehouse. Flag defenders say it represents Southern heritage.

Is Williams' tennis dynasty dead?

Associated Press

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — On a sunny Sunday last spring, Venus and Serena Williams stood at the net with their trophies and posed for the cameras, poised to take over tennis.

Subtle as an overhead slam, the two teen tennis queens predicted a family dynasty: Their 1-2 finish at the Lipton Championships was to be just the first of many.

One year later, those boasts of dominating the WTA Tour have given way to talk of retirement.

Eccentric, unpredictable tennis dad Richard Williams says Venus, 19, is leaning toward calling it quits to focus on her education, investments and perhaps politics. He says Serena, 18, might retire in three years when her endorsement contract with Puma expires.

"I tell my kids you have to get out while you're ahead," he said. "The best time to get out is right now. They know too much about the real world to stay in sports."

At the Ericsson Open, the elder Williams' remarks had players and officials rolling their eyes because he's notorious for publicity ploys and hyperbole. A year ago at the same tournament, Williams called a news conference and bragged about various family medical and law degrees, Venus' fluency in four languages and his role in a group about to buy Rockefeller Center for $3.9 billion.

The real estate deal didn't happen, and most players — Serena included — figure Venus' retirement won't happen, either.

Nonetheless, it sounds as though Richard Williams has conceded that the dynasty is dead before it started.

Is dad disappointed?

"Not at all," he said. "Venus and Serena could be No. 1 right now if they trained for it. But they're going to college now. The things they're doing are more important than going after No. 1."

The latest twist in the family saga is further evidence that the sisters may lack the single-minded devotion to tennis most top players possess.

Venus, ranked third in the world, hasn't played a match since November. The official reason given is tendinitis in both wrists, but her dad also said she's enjoying fashion school and learning about computers. Her long layoff may mean she's tired of tennis.

Serena, ranked sixth, has shown few signs of duplicating her breakthrough 1999 year, when she won five tournaments, including the U.S. Open. She has failed to reach the semifinals in three of five tournaments, stalling her bid to challenge Martina Hingis and Lindsay Davenport for No. 1.

"She's not quite at that level yet," Hingis said.

"Serena has been having a very up-and-down year, losing to a number of players that she probably would have felt confident beating last year," Davenport said.

Serena and Venus are proud that their dad has been their only coach, but Davenport and others believe the sisters would benefit from outside help.

"It really helps to have somebody who played the game and knows what it's like out there playing, instead of people who have never experienced it and think they know it all," Davenport said.

The younger Williams has looked sloppy at times, her serve has been erratic, and she tends to overhit. She committed 77 errors in a fourth-round loss to Jennifer Capriati at Key Biscayne. Her other defeats came against Elena Likhovtseva, Nathalie Tauziat and Mary Pierce.

Shocking? Serena said yes.

"Anytime I lose, it shocks me," she said. "I try not to get devastated over losses anymore. I took a personality test, and I found out that I was a perfectionist. If I don't do things perfect and cross my T's and dot my I's, it's really hard for me.

"I have to realize that this is just a game. I'm just out there to please the crowd, just do the best that I can. If I go too extreme, I'll end up in the nut house with the other perfectionists."

The Williams sisters mix uncommon cockiness with typical teen-age irreverence, which makes it difficult to gauge their true emotion and motivation.

Venus' return to the WTA Tour has been postponed three times, most recently when she withdrew from the Ericsson two days before it started. She's now scheduled to return May 1 in Hamburg, Germany.

"I expect to see her back and competing soon," Serena said.

Serena's next tournament will be the Bausch & Lomb Championships beginning April 10. She had planned to play at Hilton Head Island the following week, but may skip that event because of the controversy concerning the Confederate flag in South Carolina.

With or without Venus, Serena will be at the French Open next month. For what it's worth, their father is talking about his daughters' careers in the past tense.

"There are more important things than going after No. 1," he said. "I don't see anything that would have stopped them. But we went the other way."

Longhorns defeat OU

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Mike Pumo hit two home runs and Texas defeated Oklahoma 6-5 in 11 innings Friday.

The Sooners led for most of the game and appeared to be headed for a victory when the Longhorns tied the game at 5-5 in the top of the ninth inning to send the game into extra innings.

With two out in the top of the 11th, Texas' Chris Houser hit an RBI-single for the winning run off OU reliever Clint Dunbar.

Charlie Thames (4-0) picked up the victory for the Longhorns after pitching three innings of scoreless-relief.

Texas A&M 6, Kansas 3

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Ty Garner doubled to drive in Eric Reed with the go-ahead run in the eighth inning as Texas A&M beat Kansas 6-3 Friday night.

Kansas had tied the game at 3-3 in the seventh on an RBI single by Doug Dreher.

Reed, pinch-running for Travis Wong, who was hit by a pitch, advanced to second on an infield error before Garner's hit put the Aggies ahead to stay.

Chris Russ had three hits and one RBI for Texas A&M and Jeff Freeman, David Evans and Ryan Wardinsky had one RBI each.

Baylor 4, Nebraska 2

WACO — Preston Underdown showed a bunt, then swung away for an RBI double to give Baylor a 4-2 win in a pitching duel against Nebraska Friday.

Underdown's double put the Bears up 2-1 in the fifth. Three batters later, Tim Hartshorn drove in a run with a sacrifice fly to center to give the Bears a 3-1 edge.

Baylor starter Chad Hawkins (5-4) kept the Cornhuskers hitless through the fifth inning on the way to the win. Hawkins allowed three hits and two runs with seven strikeouts in 7 1-3 innings.

TCU shuts down Rice

HOUSTON (AP) —TCU's Chris Bradshaw shut out Rice, allowing the Owls only four hits, to lead the Horned Frogs to a 3-0 win Friday.

Bradshaw (3-3) struck out eight and walked one in his eight-inning outing. David Tombrella pitched the ninth inning to pick up his first save of the year.

TCU scored a pair of runs off Rice starter Kenny Baugh (5-2) with Tom Bates' ground ball and a sacrifice fly by Marshall Wilson. Levi Groomer scored TCU's third run after his double in the seventh.

Rice threatened to score in the eighth with singles by Brett Smith and Jason Gray and an infield error, which loaded the bases with two outs, but Jerry Van Noy flew out.

CAR: Labonte stands 9th in standings

but qualifying second in Las Vegas.

"Guys on my team have been joking they're going to sell tickets for the roller coaster ride," Pruett said. "We're just going to keep working at it."

Earnhardt Jr., the son of the seven-time Winston Cup champion, is the only driver to have qualified among the top 12 at every race this season, including six in the top 10.

"We qualify well every week," said Earnhardt, who is 23rd in the standings. "We've got to get some good races under our belts the next couple of weeks."

Ward Burton, who crashed hard during the morning practice, qualified his backup car ninth at 190.510.

Burton, who won two weeks ago in Darlington, was checked and released from the infield medical center. He was diagnosed with a bruised left ankle.

Although ninth in the standings after six races, the 43-year-old Labonte hadn't qualified better than 17th until he started seventh in Bristol. And, after a seventh-place finish in the Daytona 500, Labonte's best showing was 11th until he finished fifth in Bristol.

Jerry Nadeau and Jeff Gordon, Labonte's Hendrick Motorsports teammates, both qualified among the top 25, locking in starting positions for Sunday's race.

The rest of the entries will have the choice of standing on their first-day laps or trying again on Saturday. That includes Adam Petty, who was 33rd at 188.534 in an effort to earn his first Winston Cup start.

The fourth-generation driver has no team-owner points to fall back on, so he must finish among the top 36 in order to make the lineup.

RELIGION

Religion in Brief/3C

Association encourages church attendance

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

April 9 has been designated by the Midland Association of Churches as Stand Up and Be Counted Sunday.

"Since April is the month that the official 2000 Census will be taken, we thought it would be a perfect tie-in for a special visitation Sunday," said MAC board member Iris Foster.

Ms. Foster cited a fall 1999 issue of Update, the house organ of Religion in American Life in which Ellen L. Idler puts forth her arguments for a strong religious faith:

"First, religion is relevant to health, especially to adolescent health, because religion provides rules for living. Some religions have very particular rules about diet and alcohol use, and most faiths have beliefs about maintaining the purity of the body as the vessel of the soul. In general, religions discourage self-indulgent or sensation-seeking behaviors and promote moderation in all things, if not actual asceticism.

"A new study from the University of Michigan analyzed data from a survey of high school seniors from 135 schools in 48 states. Researchers found that ... the more important religion was in their lives, and the more frequently they attended services, the lower were their rates of cigarette smoking, alcohol use and marijuana use; the higher their rate of seat belt use, and eating fruits, vegetables and breakfast; and the lower their rate of carrying weapons, fighting and driving while drinking."

Ms. Idler also maintains that religious groups provide support and reduce stress in people's lives. She said that a landmark 1979 study of nearly 7,000 adults found that the most socially isolated people were at the highest risk of mortality, while later studies in Michigan, Georgia and North Carolina showed that persons who regularly attended religious services had larger social networks overall, with more frequent telephone and in-person contact and a stronger feeling of support from all the members of their social circles.

Even after catastrophic and debilitating illness, patients who had regularly attended religious services were significantly less likely to be depressed, according to the Idler report.

Ms. Foster said a Business Week article about religion in corporate America also stressed that executives at all levels are extolling lessons usually taught in churches, temples and mosques.

"Prayer groups and spiritual conferences are becoming more and more common among office workers and church membership adds a connection among business people," she said.

Many public figures agree with her.

Mayor Bobby Burns said he wants to stand up and be counted.

"I go to church regularly, because my faith is very important to me. I feel that we need to come together as believers, not only as we worship, but as we deal with events in our lives. Both the church and the church family help us through the hard and the happy times. We see this over and over in our everyday lives."

Lt. Benny Matlock of the Midland County Sheriff's Office, who regularly attends the Country Chapel at the intersection of FM 1788 and State Highway 191, said he is proud to be known as a church-goer.

"Christ is the only hope that this nation has left, especially for our youth. We're about as far in

The good Shepherd

Story by Johnnye Montgomery

K.C. Blackketter is director of Shepherd Ministries. The ministry collects items donated by local businesses and distributes the donations to small churches that do not have resources to purchase needed items. Shepherd also has a library for use by local churches.

Ministry supports other churches

Midlander K.C. Blackketter has been in the Christian ministry 18 years, 16 of them secure in the nest of the United Methodist Church. He said leaving his job as pastor of Midland's Bethel United Methodist Church was not for lack of satisfaction — he had loved what he was doing. But Blackketter said he kept feeling the persistent nudge of God, pushing him outward, to try his wings in the world outside denominations and competition.

He said he felt called, not to leave the clergy, but to step outside the establishment, in order to be of service to his colleagues.

"I'd seen a number of my pastor friends leave the ministry because of burnout, discouragement, moral failure and church conflict, and I was tired of seeing all those bloody bodies beside the road," he said. "I'm not trying to set up some one-world church, but if we're serving Jesus, we need to realize that the church down the street is not the enemy. The enemy is the devil, prowling around like a lion, seeking to devour us.

"We have a lot of smaller churches in Midland, and we're a lot more fragmented than we need to be. You know, in the armed forces, we have one branch competing against the other on the football field, but when we're in a war, we don't care who comes to our rescue, whether it's the Army, Navy, the Air Force or the Marines."

Blackketter said the Shepherd Ministries began in October 1998, first as an idea, then began to take shape as a vision when he talked about it to his friends, Charles Johnson and Sharae Buskirk.

Johnson is a member of Bethel UMC and Ms. Buskirk belongs to First Baptist. They agreed to come together periodically to pray for the community and for the unity of the church in Midland — every denomination and segment of it, in the brick or stone structures with towering steeples and bell towers, with sweeping lawns and block-wide paved parking lots and in church houses converted from frame houses or World War II barracks buildings; with congregations of thousands or congregations of 10 or 20. They prayed for God to show them ways to support the church with its many names and forms of worship.

Their prayer was answered first in the person of Becky Moorhead of the United Way of Midland. The United Way had received some donated office furnishings that it couldn't use. She called Blackketter to see if he knew of a church or some benevolent organization that needed them. Blackketter, Ms. Buskirk and Johnson got on the phone and called pastors and members of churches throughout Midland, acting as clearinghouse, giving new life to furnishings no longer needed by a corporation.

That was just the beginning. IBM, Abell-Hangar Foundation and Fina all offered Blackketter their leftovers, if he'd pick them up. He and his two sons made seven trips back and forth to Fina one afternoon, picking up office supplies and taking them to Crossroads Christian Fellowship, where Pastor Cecil Robinson had offered to store them. At this point, the organization didn't have a name — just a mission to support the church and a

Chaplains have served since birth of the nation

By Lawrence L. Knutson
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The chaplains of the House and the Senate are trustees of one of the oldest traditions in the American experiment. But even a venerable institution can raise a dust storm.

Such a storm whipped through the House this winter, propelled by hotly denied accusations that anti-Catholic bias swayed the Republican leadership to select a Protestant clergyman as the chamber's 59th chaplain.

A Roman Catholic priest had been considered the front-runner by many and the storm burst when he was bypassed.

"All hell — perhaps all Hell — has broken loose," columnist William Safire wrote in The New York Times.

There hasn't been anything to match this clamor in all the years since 1789 when the House and Senate — following even older precedents — started appointing chaplains to pray for divine guidance.

The fracas was plastered over last week after four months of partisan acrimony.

The Rev. Daniel Coughlin, a Catholic priest from Chicago, was appointed chaplain of the House of Representatives.

The original choice, the Rev. Charles Wright, a Presbyterian minister, stepped aside. Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., who accused House Democrats of exploiting the controversy in "an unseemly political game," quickly appointed the Rev. Daniel Coughlin, a Catholic priest from Chicago.

When he was sworn in March 23, Coughlin became the first Catholic to be named House chaplain. In 211 years, the Senate has elected a Catholic chaplain just once, in 1832.

The question of a chaplain of one faith praying for legislators of many faiths rose early in American history.

In September 1774, Sam Adams of Massachusetts proposed that each session of the new Continental Congress be opened with prayer.

Objections were raised, but John Adams, a cousin, responded: "I am no bigot. I can hear prayers from a man of piety and virtue, who is at the same time a friend of his country."

Some historians say there were political as well as spiritual motives. John Adams told friends that "a respectable Anglican priest" would be useful to demonstrate the legitimacy of the Congress and "to hurl psalm verse at the British."

Soon afterward, the Rev. Jacob Duche, the Episcopal pastor of Philadelphia's Christ Church, was opening the Congress with prayer and pelting the British with Scripture.

On July 8, 1776, just days after the Declaration of Independence was adopted, Duche prayed for divine aid for "our American states, who have fled to thee from the rod of the oppressor."

When the House of Representatives met for the first time in 1789, its members chose the Rev. William Lynn, a Presbyterian, as their first chaplain. The Senate elected Samuel Provoost, the Episcopal bishop of New York, who then offered prayers at George Washington's presidential inaugural.

Chaplains continued their prayerful duties when the government moved to Washington in 1800.

Fifty-four years later, responding to criticism that the chaplains breached the constitutional wall separating church and state, the House Judiciary Committee declared them indispensable.

"If there be a God who hears prayer — as we believe there is — we submit there was never a deliberative body that so eminently needed the righteous prayers of righteous men as the Congress of the United States," the committee observed.

In the early 1900s, Senate chaplain Edward Everett Hale, a Unitarian, was asked whether, in light of the state of the country, he prayed for the senators. "No," came the famous reply. "I look at the senators and pray for the country."

The Rev. Peter Marshall, perhaps the most famous congressional chaplain in the 20th century, was profiled in the book and movie, "A Man Called Peter." In opening a prayer in the late 1940s, he said before senators: "Forgive us for making so many mountains out of molehills, and for exaggerating our own importance and the problems that confront us."

In the 1980s, the late Richard C. Halverson prayed for virtually everyone in the extended Senate family: the youthful pages, the Capitol police, the cafeteria workers, the reporters taking notes and the people who emptied the trash and cleaned senators' offices.

And of course he prayed for senators, too. "Guide them in these critical hours that they will do nothing that they will later regret," Halverson once said.

In 1983, after atheists filed a lawsuit contending that the laws passed by Congress to pay and maintain its chaplains were unconstitutional, the House voted 388-0 to support the practice of naming a chaplain as one of its officers.

Referring to Rep. Tom Foley, D-Wash., a co-author of the save-the-chaplain resolution, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said: "Tom and I are good Catholics and we're prepared to go to jail to defend our Lutheran chaplain."

The Supreme Court made that unnecessary.

"Clearly the men who wrote the ... religion clause did not view paid legislative chaplains and opening prayers as a violation," Chief Justice Warren Burger wrote.

The practice of opening congressional sessions with prayer has "continued without interruption" and become "part of the fabric of our society," he said.

Seeking guidance from God can make many decisions easier

Like every third house in Midland these days, ours is for sale. After we had spent a small fortune fixing it up, our Realtor gave us some advice for showing the house: turn on all the lights and make sure the house smells good (i.e., empty the trash, get rid of gym socks, make sure nothing has died in the wall, etc.)

We waited eagerly. Sure enough, a Realtor called, asking to bring by prospective buyers at 5 p.m. Excited, I left the house with floors so clean you could eat off of them. But I wasn't able to reach my husband to tell him about the visitors.

Exactly one minute before the people were due, Stockton arrived home and decided to feed the cat. As the doorbell rang, he popped the top on the most foul-smelling cat food on the market, and by the time the prospective buyers entered, our house smelled like the city dump on a very hot day.

Not surprisingly, we are still looking for a buyer.

In the meantime, we put a contingency contract on our dream house. Unfortunately, it is someone else's dream house, too, and we have 24 hours to decide whether we want to eat two house payments for an indefinite length of time, or whether we will continue to live in a house where we have to take a ticket for the bathroom.

At one point, I sighed to myself and thought, I wish I were wealthy and didn't have to pray for guidance. Who knows what the Lord's will is? He has neglected to send us a postcard with instructions, and the time is running out. If we just had more money, we could make a decision effortlessly, and that's that.

Fairly quickly, I realized that that stray thought may have been one of the most ungodly thoughts I've ever had. (The case of warts I'd wished on Susie who stole my boyfriend my sophomore year couldn't compare.)

What hit me was that I had just wished to be independent from God, to run my own life the way I want to. I had forgotten that I cannot wake myself up each morning: I get a new day not because I deserve it, but because of God's grace.

Many of us in this country do not have to ask God daily for our bread; instead, we complain that we have to make another trip to the grocery store. But I can remember a time in my life when groceries were touch and go.

Seems like the more power and money we acquire, the less we depend on God. If we can, we simply buy whatever house we want. And without thinking, we distance ourselves from the giver of life.

I still don't know what decision to make in the next 24 hours, but I have the feeling it won't be so important in the long run.

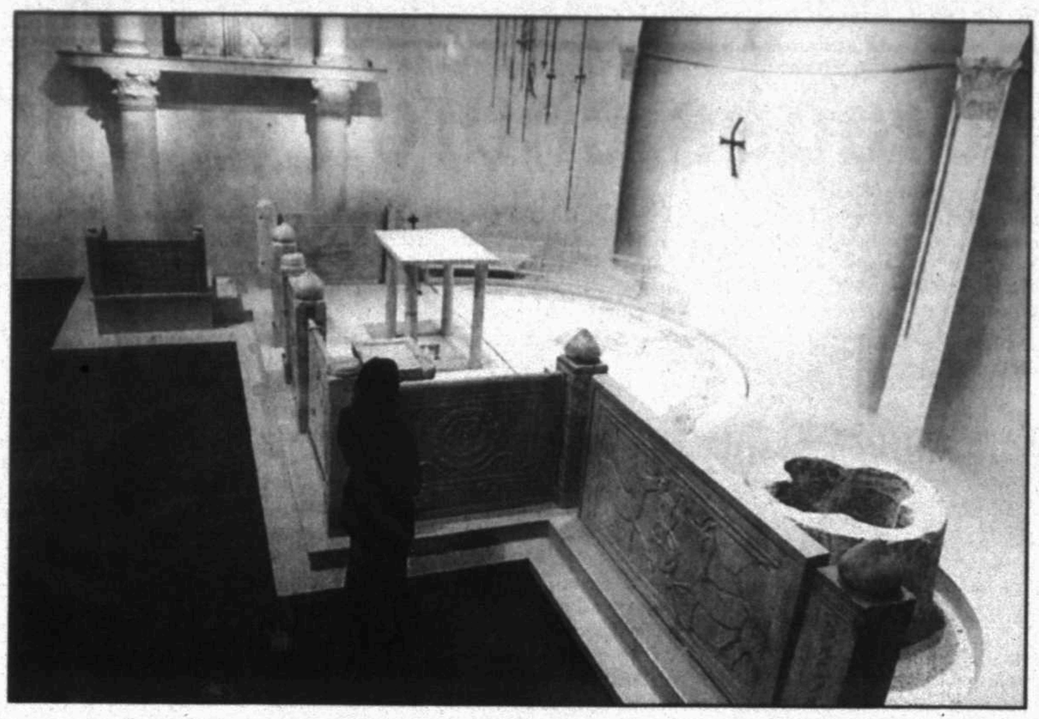
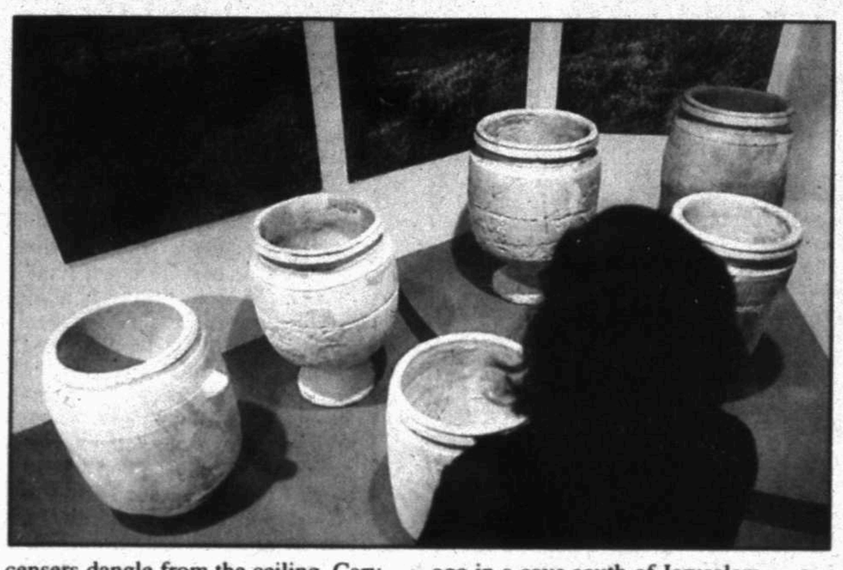
'The Cradle of Christianity'

Story and photos by Associated Press



A visitor examines a reconstruction of the altar area of a Byzantine-era church, left, and six stone jars, similar to the ones in which it is believed were used by Jesus to turn water into wine. The artifacts are from about a dozen excavation sites in the Holy Land at an exhibit in the Israel Museum in Jerusalem called "The Cradle of Christianity."

Exhibit documents roots of the faith



JERUSALEM — The stone jars are just like the vessels that held the water the Gospel says Jesus transformed into wine in his first miracle. The clay dipping bowls and curved wine jugs could easily have graced the Last Supper table.

The biblical-era pottery, along with hundreds of other ancient artifacts, is on display in a groundbreaking Israel Museum exhibit, "The Cradle of Christianity," the first major attempt in Israel to document the roots of the faith.

The show, which debuted after Pope John Paul II ended a Holy Land pilgrimage, is the latest sign of an unprecedented openness in Israel toward Christianity, long shunned as the ideological underpinning for the persecution of Jews.

The pope's visit, including his moving tributes to Holocaust victims, was favorably received by the Israeli public and hailed as a watershed in Jewish-Christian relations.

"We have broken a taboo," Rabbi Ron Kronish, an interfaith activist, said of the mood shift in Israel. "The exhibit is another very solid attempt at educating the Israeli public about Christianity and its roots in this land."

In Israel, archaeological exhibits traditionally focus on the history of Judaism, with much less attention paid to Christianity's history, said Israel Museum's director, James Snyder.

This exhibit reflects changing attitudes. The more than 300 artifacts from 100 digs in Israel, as well as some on loan from abroad, tell the story of the first 700 years of Christianity in the Holy Land — from Jesus' time through the first pilgrimages, the beginnings of monasticism and the emergence of congregations in the Byzantine era.

One of the most dramatic displays is an indoor reconstruction of the altar and pulpit area of a Byzantine church, rising two stories high, where visitors can immerse themselves in the world of early Christians.

The taped chanting of monks fills the air. Crosses on bronze chains and censers dangle from the ceiling. Carvings of religious motifs adorn the balustrades and the hexagonal pulpit, made from marble and bitumen stone.

Hundreds of churches and monasteries have been excavated in the Holy Land over the past 150 years, but only fragments were recovered from each site, never enough to allow visitors to see a complete picture, said curator David Mevorach.

In the exhibit, early church life is depicted through a wide range of objects, including censers, clay stampers for imprinting communion wafers, flasks used by pilgrims for water or oil at holy sites and more than a dozen reliquaries, or shoebox-sized stone containers that held the remains of saints. A glass tube next to one reliquary contained a strand of human hair found in the reddish stone box.

A 1,500-year-old skeleton of a man in his 20s gives visitors an idea of monastic life in the Holy Land. The corroded remains of metal chains weighing about 13 pounds still lie on his chest — an indication of the era's ascetic practices among monks, such as carrying around heavy weights in penitence, said curator Yael Israeli.

The skeleton was found several years ago in a cave south of Jerusalem — a typical hermit's home.

Some items have been shown before, but in a Jewish context, such as the tall, stone-carved water jars used for purification in Jewish ritual.

In the exhibit, six such vessels found in the Jerusalem area are displayed against the backdrop of a wall-high photograph of the rolling hills of the Galilee. Curators said they are like the ones Jesus used in his first miracle, when the Bible says he turned water to wine at a wedding in the Galilee village of Cana.

In the Gospel of John, the reference to the jars is quite specific. "Nearby stood six stone water jars, the kind used by the Jews for ceremonial washing, each holding from 20 to 30 gallons." (John 2:6.)

On a table nearby, curators arranged dipping bowls and small wine jugs from the first century, typical of the earthenware Jesus and his disciples used in the Last Supper.

Snyder said the exhibition was not trying to prove or disprove the Gospels.

"These are objects which set the context for the development of Christianity," he said. "They are not objects of the Bible."

Consultants advise companies to do things by 'the Book'

By R. Unruh
Associated Press

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Consultants help companies market products, boost the bottom line, decide whom to hire and how much to pay. Now a business consulting firm goes a step further — advising companies how to do those things by the Book.

Teaching businesspeople to make biblically based decisions is the goal of Kingdom Companies, a division of Ultimate Support Systems of Fort Collins, Colo., a privately held, 20-year-old company that makes speaker, lighting, keyboard and microphone stands for the music and entertainment industries.

The company's mission statement proclaims its first goal is to "make known the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and to minister His life and love to others."

It does this "through the profitable design, manufacture, and distribution of a broad range of high quality support systems."

Darrell Schoenig and James Dismore, founder and president respectively, said their program is the result of a concern that their Christian lives were being checked out on Sunday morning and checked back in Sunday night.

"We go out and work with other companies and ... give them ideas," said Dismore. "We try to help other companies come to understand what is their mission, and what is their purpose."

Ultimate Support generates five-year plans for business and ministry, then combines them to create a corporate plan.

Decisions based on biblical concepts can cost money. For example, a recent $48,000 health insurance premium increase came out of company coffers; officials decided the corporation could sustain the additional expense better than employees, who would have had to pay an additional $100 a month apiece.

Ultimate's corporate mission statement has stayed in company catalogs, even though some non-Christian customers have canceled thousands of dollars worth of purchase orders. Officials declined to give details.

Schoenig became a Christian while living in his van on the beaches of Hawaii in the 1970s. He returned to Colorado with a band. At a concert he discovered the need for lightweight, strong speaker stands. Band members had to use chairs to support their speakers.

A hang glider pilot, he fabricated some stands from metal tubing used for hang gliders, then started making them in his parents' garage when others wanted them. The band soon broke up, and he was left with a burgeoning demand for his products.

Meanwhile, he had developed a philosophy, which he summarized this way: "God, if this is what you want me to do, I don't want this to just be a business. I want to impact lives for you."

Dismore, raised by Christian grandparents, started working with Sam Walton when the Wal-Mart chain had three stores and was a senior level manager when he left 12 years later.

On his arrival at Ultimate in the 1990s, he decided to pursue a marriage of business and ministry plans that Schoenig already had begun to formulate.

"Is the making of money for your own self-interest, or is it for others?" Dismore said. "There's nothing in Scriptures that says there's anything wrong with profit. Scripture does say it's the purpose, and how you go about making that profit, and what you do with the profit, that makes the difference."

Kingdom Companies is funded by Ultimate's profits and has provided advice to retailers, manufacturers, Internet companies and software operations.

Franklin DeRemer, CEO for the California-based MetaWare software company, credited Kingdom Companies with offering "godly counselors and advisors with years of business experience" to help him develop guidelines for his own operation.

And Mark Haynam, who runs Leaf Kitchens, Ltd., a high-end Colorado cabinetmaker, expressed gratitude that someone was there "when a hurting, lonely cabinetmaker needed help."

"We will not tell you that you must do A, B and C to meet our (or, more importantly, God's) standards. What we will do is share our experiences, our time and our suggestions. Our goal is to establish a mentoring relationship that will positively impact your business and its people," says an outline for Kingdom Companies.

Bonnie Griffin Kaake of Innovative Consulting Group Inc. in the Denver area said the concept is unique and it could be valuable if managers avoid problems with employees perceiving religious dictates in the workplace.

"I really strongly believe that there is a lot of room today for more ethics in business," said Ms. Kaake, a member of the International Guild of Professional Consultants. "I have been appalled at some of the things I have seen."

"It's not exactly about the things we do," said Dismore. "It's about why we do it. We try to walk our talk."

New synagogue creates Torah, which will be completed in Israel

By Dane Schiller
Associated Press

DALLAS — Sixty-two cowhides, months of sacred labor and more than 304,000 Hebrew letters, each hand-written exactly as Jewish tradition says they have been since Moses came down from Mount Sinai.

That is what will go into the writing of a new Torah — the first five books of the Bible — that will be the spiritual core of one of the city's newest Jewish synagogues, Congregation Ohr HaTorah.

"Each and every letter is important. Each and every letter has a lesson," said Rabbi Zvi Chaim Pincus, a New York-based scribe.

Pincus used a quill pen with a bottle of ink to write the first line of the new Torah on a recent Sunday during a ceremony and celebration at the Jewish Community Center of Dallas.

"In the beginning, God created heaven and earth," Rabbi Pincus wrote slowly and precisely in Hebrew script on a pristine sheet of whitish hide.

The words were followed by song, dance and celebration of what was described as nearly a once-in-a-lifetime event.

Pincus will take the document to Israel, where it will be completed and rolled into a ceremonial scroll to be used during services.

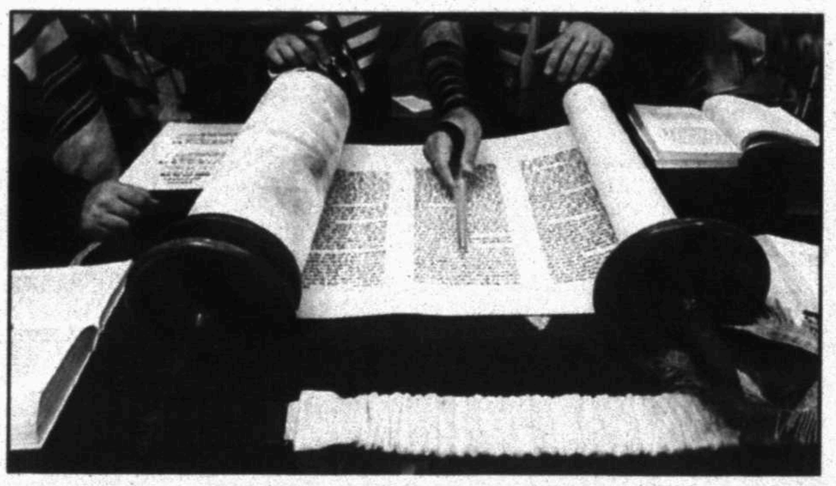
If there is one letter too many or one letter too few, or even a variation in space between the letters, the Torah can't be used, the rabbi said.

After the document is completed, it will be checked by hand and re-examined by a computer to ensure accuracy, he said.

The Torah will honor the memory of Nathan Donsky, a Dallas-born businessman and philanthropist who supported dozens of charities and whose family is underwriting the project.

"This is something my father would have done himself if he was still with us," said son Cal Donsky.

"He was throughout his life, the epitome of charity and kindness," Donsky said of his father, who died in 1992.



Sixty-two cowhides, months of sacred labor and more than 304,000 Hebrew letters, each hand-written according to Jewish tradition, will go into the writing of a new Torah that will be the spiritual core of one of Dallas' newest synagogues, Congregation Ohr HaTorah.

The Torah directs Jewish people to observe 613 obligations. The 613th is the obligation to copy the original Torah, thus carrying on the tradition.

Donsky said his father was a religious man who supported those who work the hardest to ensure the survival of Jewish traditions. Donsky belongs to Ohr HaTorah.

Rabbi Aryeh Feigenbaum, who leads the 100-family congregation that was started in February 1999, said a Torah could last hundreds of years and would probably be seen by the children and grandchildren of toddlers who attended the Sunday gathering.

"To participate in a chain from Mount Sinai 3,312 years ago is something special and something to be remembered," Feigenbaum said.

"It shows the Torah is alive, and the Torah defines the essence of who we are as a people," he said.

As the new Torah was launched, small children were moved to the front of the room and crowded around the scribe in an effort to make the new Torah part of their earliest memories.

Pincus, the scribe, reminded congregation members of their struggles, including the Holocaust, when enemies tried to destroy Judaism.

"We will all be inspired today, but inspiration has to be realized," Pincus said.

The elder Donsky was affiliated with many charities and was recognized at the local, state and national level for his efforts.

Some of the charities and organizations benefiting from his philanthropy include the West Texas Boys Ranch, the Boy Scouts of America, the Future Farmers of America, the American Kidney Foundation, the Salvation Army, the Jewish Welfare Federation and the American Cancer Society.

He and his wife, Sylvia, also established an endowment for scholarships to Angelo State University in San Angelo.

Some scholars dismiss links between Jesus, Dead Sea Scrolls

By Richard N. Ostling
AP Religion Writer

■ Analysis

The Dead Sea Scrolls are often celebrated as the 20th century's most important archaeological discovery. Though the first scrolls were found in 1947, full assessment of their significance was not possible until the texts became widely available to scholars in the 1990s.

The scrolls were written or collected by a remote sect near the Dead Sea during the last two centuries B.C. and the first century. For the average person, the most important question is whether these writings have anything to do with Jesus.

Some say yes; some say no

That is, the specialists tell us many Jewish ideas expressed in the scrolls are found in the later New Testament. The four Gospels now appear somewhat less unique, but also more authentic in their first-century setting.

But scholars have dismissed speculations about direct links between the Dead Sea sect and Jesus, as well as sensational claims that the church covered up scrolls secrets that would supposedly hurt Christianity.

For solid treatment of these and all other aspects of the scrolls, refer to "Encyclopedia of the Dead Sea Scrolls," a 1,063-page, $295 blockbuster from Oxford University Press. Prominent Jewish and Christian authorities, respectively, Lawrence Schiffman of New York University and James VanderKam of the University of Notre Dame, led the 195-member editorial team.

The main article on Jesus is by Heinz-Wolfgang Kuhn of the University of Munich, Germany. Kuhn is no fundamentalist. He asserts — without providing evidence — that Jesus didn't understand himself to be the messiah, probably never named 12 Apostles, and might not have celebrated the Last Supper.

The scrolls are especially important in understanding Jesus' teachings on eschatology (the "last things"). Until the scrolls were discovered, influential liberal scholars, including Germany's Rudolf Bultmann, argued that end-times statements in the Gospels were falsely attributed to Jesus because there was

SUPPORT: Ministry grows out of weekly meeting

storehouse full of good materials, both new and used.

They had grown into a habit of meeting on Friday nights, bringing casseroles and prayer concerns to Crossroads. Attendance began to swell as recipients of the recycling began to join them. Churches that had benefited from the early donations began to look around for ways to add their own support to other churches. Choir robes and hymnals that previously would have gathered dust in a closet found their way to the storeroom at Crossroads, then to another church that needed them. Sunday school curricula and reference materials were given to a church that had never been able to afford them.

Nor has the largesse been confined to churches. Robinson, who's on the board of Teen Challenge, told Blackketter that Teen Challenge needed a conference table. A short time later, someone from Abell-Hangar called — they had bought a new conference table, and wanted to know if Blackketter could find a use for their old one. Churches and individuals have brought in books and Bibles, reference materials and videotapes — enough to start a library for the use of clergy in small churches with limited resources.

Someone brought a photocopier to the storeroom and it was snatched up before it could be taken through the door of the storeroom.

With a recycling ministry and a library and regular prayer and worship services, it was time to name the vision and to establish it as a corporation. They called it Shepherd Ministries. Ms. Buskirk, Johnson and Blackketter became board members, and Blackketter assumed directorship. Ed Black is office administrator; his wife, Janice is librarian.

Blackketter receives a small stipend derived from offerings given during the Friday night services and other occasional gifts. He augments that by substitute teaching, filling in for ministers on Sundays and directing spiritual workshops and seminars. He doesn't have insurance; he prays for the health of his teen-age sons. Yet he says he has never felt more in tune with God's purpose for his life, which he believes is the ministry of encouragement.

"I'm not anybody's bishop, deacon, elder or district superintendent. I'm a safe person for ministers to talk to," he said. "I'm the volunteer chaplain of the city Police Department; I'm involved in the Midland Ministerial Alliance, the Midland Association of Churches and I'm active with Pray Midland. I'm also active in Area Missions Outreach Services (AMOS).

"As for Shepherd Ministries, we're just taking baby steps right now, but we believe there's tremendous potential for enhancing unity across denominational, ethnic and economic boundaries, whether it's through the recycling program or the praise and prayer and worship or the library.

"We have a plan in the works for a prayer summit for mid-summer for pastors who come together seeking God's will for Midland. As time goes on, I hope the churches will realize that we are a resource for them, and they will begin to spread their ministries around and become a resource for us."

SEA: Scrolls don't contain references to Jesus

(From 2C)

no evidence of similar ideas elsewhere in first-century Judaism. ''Jesus Seminar'' radicals have recycled this theory.

Kuhn says that view is ''exegetically untenable.'' We now know that the Dead Sea writers and Jesus held somewhat similar teachings on end times.

It's possible, says Kuhn, that John the Baptist, Jesus' forerunner and cousin, belonged to the Dead Sea sect at one time. But there's no hard evidence, and the idea that Jesus belonged to it is ''too far-fetched'' for serious consideration.

Why? The scrolls contain no reference to Jesus or early Christians. Nor do the New Testament books make any direct reference to the sect or its writings — an especially mysterious fact.

More important, there are simply too many religious differences between the Dead Sea sect and Jesus.

One example is Jesus' openness to table fellowship with notorious sinners (for instance in Matthew 11, Mark 2, and Luke 5, 7, 15 and 19). By contrast, the Dead Sea sect was so intent on ritual purity that it didn't allow new members to drink alongside full-fledged members for two years.

The Dead Sea sect also excluded the blind, lame, crippled and those with other physical impairments. But Jesus taught that the poor, maimed, lame and blind should be welcomed (Luke 14:13, 21).

And Jesus took a more relaxed attitude toward Sabbath observance. One scroll barred saving an animal that falls into a pit on the Sabbath, while Jesus explicitly taught the opposite (Luke 14:5, Matthew 12:11-12).

And consider Jesus' famous command to love one's enemies (Matthew 5:44, Luke 6:27,35), which Kuhn says had no parallel in ancient Jewish literature. The Dead Sea ''Rule of the Community'' told followers to ''love all the children of light'' but to ''hate all the children of darkness.''

ATTEND: Worship enhances community, Daniel says

(From 1C)

despair in this country as we've ever been, and basically, my feeling is that if the country doesn't turn back to Christ, we'll lose ourselves, our identity and purpose."

Midland College president David Daniel said he sees the benefits of regular worship as an enhancement to the whole of the community.

"One's spiritual well-being is a healthy component of a healthy life, and one of the paramount searches in one's life is the search for meaning."

Ms. Foster, a regular churchgoer, said that while the Update and Business Week articles were enough to convince her to try religion, she wanted something a little catchier on front of the fliers that MAC distributed to the public in hopes of getting the point across.

She asked Fane Downs, minister of Trinity Presbyterian Church, former editor of SMU's Southwestern Review and president of MAC, for help.

Their brochure, titled, "Why Visit a Church Now?" states:

"Why not now? Do you like those lazy Sunday mornings? Don't want to forsake a late breakfast? Didn't grow up in a church? That doesn't matter; you'll catch on! Why not break old habits? Come on, you'll be amazed by grace.

"... Easter, the grandest day in the Christian year, is April 23; get in the habit by then."

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, April 1, 2000:

You are unusually together and smooth when dealing with others. You know how to speak your mind and express your anger in a way that others can hear. Your upbeat, positive attitude makes a big difference in how others respond. You are focused and directed. Plan on frequent timeouts so you can center and recharge. Otherwise, you could suffer frayed nerves. If you are single, flirtations mark your life, especially after June. With your communication skills, you seem to have your pick. If attached, summer brings more togetherness. You get more into each other. Make special time for activities you share as a couple. PISCES reads you cold.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Take time for yourself today. Think twice about an investment. Do needed research; seek out information that benefits your finances. What you find out proves to be valid and most helpful. Follow a hunch. Indulge another and do something special together. Tonight: As a duo.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Friends have a lot to share and talk about. Open doors. You make people feel comfortable with who they are. Greater expressiveness is the result. Make the first move or overture. Organize a group get-together. Tonight: Zoom in on what you want.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Take charge. Know what you want. Remain direct with someone who is very important to you. Listen to your instincts with this person. A must appearance could bring you much more happiness than you think it will. A family member lets you know how he feels. Tonight: Aim high.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Make calls and invite a friend or loved one to join you on a day trip. You enjoy yourself wherever you are. Detachment helps you see how valuable a friendship really is to you. It's important to get away for a while. Tonight: Do something foolish but fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You might not always see eye to eye with a partner. A frank discussion could be uncomfortable, but in the long run it clears the air. Let another bond with you. Allow greater closeness. Scheduling an outing together proves to be wonderful. Tonight: Make way for more romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ A relationship flourishes. It might be time to start making plans for the future, whether this entails a vacation or a more formal commitment. You could have fun just popping into the car for a drive. Accept an invitation. The more, the merrier. Tonight: The party goes on.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ A partner goes overboard trying to make you happy. You might question his style, but look at the feelings behind his actions and words. Togetherness is enhanced by a nurturing, positive attitude. Go that extra step. Tonight: Make nice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Allow your inventive, fun-loving side to emerge. You make another very happy by being assertive. Your actions create a good time for all involved. No one knows how to enjoy like you. Take the lead. Be the teacher! Tonight: Play the night away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Family members make a difference in your day. Ask another for help with a project. Allow others greater freedom to do what they are good at. Good will and ease mark interactions. Share a hobby. Let others get to know you even better. Tonight: Invite friends over.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Indulge a little, ease up and worry less about a problem. Caring intensifies; you feel good with a family member, even if he is a bit bellicose or touchy at times. Check out an expenditure to make sure it is what you want. Tonight: Indulge in the good life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Your magnetism draws others. Allow more fun into your life. Get past an angry feeling or irritation. Give another the benefit of the doubt. Bring friends together. Catching up on news is fun as you indulge in a good meal together. Tonight: Whatever makes you grin.

Blair's wife wouldn't mind having a girl

LONDON — Prime Minister Tony Blair's wife, pregnant with the couple's fourth child, says she wouldn't mind a girl to even out the numbers.

Cherie Blair is due to give birth in May. The Blairs already have two sons and a daughter.

Mrs. Blair let her gender preference slip during a tea party at the prime minister's official Downing Street residence, the Evening Standard reported Friday.

After being presented with a teddy bear for the new child by Rhys Jones, a 12-year-old schoolboy, she confided to him that she would ''quite like a baby girl,'' the newspaper said.

LOS ANGELES — A judge has ruled in favor of Dr. Dre in a dispute over a 1991 contract with a music industry executive, calling the deal ''unconscionably unfair'' to the rap singer.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Malcom Mackey said the statute of limitations had run out on the contract, making music mogul Dick Griffey's attempt to bring any damage claims against the rapper a moot point.

Dr. Dre — born Andre Young — says he never signed the contract in which he supposedly agreed to give Griffey 25 percent of his profits from 1991 to 1993.

In return, Griffey agreed to serve as the rapper's mentor.

Mackey said the contract was grossly unfair to Young and out of line with standard entertainment industry contracts. He declined to elaborate on his decision, saying the information was in the official record.

Dr. Dre said he felt ''vindicated'' by the ruling.

''Justice was served,'' he said. ''That's about it. I get to keep my money.''

Griffey's attorney, Amanda Metcalf, said she will appeal.

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — Dennis Rodman once again is living up to his rowdy reputation.

Police say he's setting a record in his neighborhood for most police calls to a house, usually because of loud parties.

Since the former basketball player moved in, officers have been summoned to his home 28 times, Newport Beach Police Sgt. Mike McDermott said.

''It's become a real pain up there,'' McDermott said. ''It's a waste of police resources.''

The disturbances have become so frequent that police want prosecutors to charge Rodman with violating the city's noise ordinance, which could lead to brief jail time.

Just one problem: The complaining party refuses to come forward, and some people who live around Rodman insist he's a great neighbor.

''I had this stereotype that it would be crazy to live near him, with wild parties. But it's not. It's cool,'' said neighbor Brandon Showalter, 24.

Since July 1998, police have leveled $2,800 in penalties against Rodman.

Last week, the mayor and Police Department received an anonymous letter calling for Rodman to be evicted.

A message left Friday for Rodman's publicist was not returned.

LONDON — Harassment charges were dropped Friday against a man arrested last month outside Princess Anne's country home.

Bernard Quinn, 57, had always denied accusations that he harassed police by repeatedly trying to enter Anne's estate in southwest England.

He reportedly was obsessed with the 49-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II.

Authorities said when Quinn was arrested and charged, they thought they had enough evidence to prosecute him.

''However, this view is not shared by the Crown Prosecution Service, which has decided to discontinue proceedings against Mr. Quinn,'' said Superintendent Adrian Grimmitt of the Gloucestershire Police.

CINCINNATI — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt promised to find another downtown location for his adult bookstore after it was closed last year. Now it appears he's keeping that promise.

Flynt said Thursday he and his brother would open a new downtown store within a week.

The Flynts closed two downtown Cincinnati stores after disputes with the city over its sexually oriented business law.

City Manager John Shirey was not pleased about the news.

The Flynts said the new store would comply with the city law banning businesses from downtown if a ''significant or substantial'' amount of the merchandise is sexually explicit.

Coast Guard vessel named for lighthouse keeper

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

GALVESTON — A century after his efforts saved some 125 people from perishing in the nation's deadliest natural disaster, the heroics of Bolivar Point lighthouse keeper Harry Claiborne during the great 1900 Galveston hurricane were remembered when the Coast Guard commissioned a new ship bearing his name Friday.

"Right across the bay from where we stand — that's pretty neat, I think," Rear Adm. Paul Pluta, commander of the 8th Coast Guard District, said, pointing across Galveston Bay at the now vacant lighthouse on the horizon about five miles away. "Here we are in the shadow of Bolivar Point."

The newest vessel in the Coast Guard fleet is a 175-foot buoy tender, the 11th of 14 similar ships in its class. All are named after famous lighthouse keepers.

The ship's motto translates to: "We do what he did."

"We maintain lights and aids to navigation to get mariners safely to sea and to return the mariners to home," Senior Chief William A. Scott said. "To us, this is the highest tribute we could make to the cutter's namesake."

Claiborne, born in New Orleans in 1859, joined the United States Lighthouse Service at age 28. He was assigned to two posts on the Mississippi River below New Orleans before transferring in 1895 to Bolivar Point, at the end of the narrow peninsula across the bay from Galveston.

Galveston at the time was the chief seaport in Texas and the center of most business in the state and the Southwest.

That all changed on Sept. 8, 1900, when a hurricane that remains the worst in United States history leveled Galveston, claiming upwards of 6,000 lives, one-sixth of the city's population.

With the winds howling and waters rising to 30 feet around the base of the 117-foot-tall lighthouse, Claiborne and his wife provided shelter for an estimated 125 people, many of them passengers from a train from Beaumont, Texas, 80 miles to the northeast. Although the structure was damaged, all inside survived.

"He harbored and fed a large number of them for a considerable period," according to a lighthouse service inspector's report of his activity.

After supervising the rebuilding of the lighthouse, Claiborne repeated his heroic efforts 15 years later, when Galveston was pounded by another devastating hurricane on Aug. 16, 1915.

That time more than 50 people crammed inside and lived.

"Again Harry Claiborne gave everything he had to help the local residents of Galveston," Pluta said.

And again Claiborne supervised construction that this time elevated the lighthouse so it could better withstand the rigors of the hurricane-prone area.

He died three years later at age 59.

AP Photo
Chief Warrant Officer Jay Behler, left, requested command of the new Coast Guard ship Harry Claiborne from Rear Adm. Paul Pluta, commander of the 8th Coast Guard District, Friday in Galveston. The ship is named after lighthouse keeper Harry Claiborne whose heroics were remembered during the great 1900 Galveston hurricane, the nation's deadliest natural disaster.

"He died at home, at Bolivar Point Lighthouse, faithfully doing his job to the very last day," Pluta said. "Not only did he keep the light burning for many years, but his sense of compassion for others distinguished him.

"He epitomized a sense of honor, respect and devotion to duty that guides every Coast Guard professional at Galveston and throughout our great nation today."

The lighthouse, originally built in 1872, was retired in 1933 and sold to private owners for $5,500 by the government in 1947 as surplus property. Once marked by a white and black striped exterior, it is now black, covered with rust.

The ship Harry Claiborne, decked out with red, white and blue flags, bunting and balloons Friday, also will participate in law enforcement, search and rescue and environmental protection on the Houston Ship Channel and the Gulf of Mexico.

Computer controlled and with a crew of 18, it was built in Marinette, Wis., and is equipped with two propulsion units instead of a standard rudder and propellers.

The propulsion units can independently rotate 360 degrees to allow the vessel great maneuverability.

Father, son team forces in Abilene Police Department

By Andre Coe
Abilene Reporter-News

ABILENE — When Chad Jenkins was a boy, all he ever wanted to be was a police officer. His father, a young cop himself, put little stock in his son's desire.

Nearly eight years passed and young Chad still wanted to be a cop, so Mom and Dad made a little maroon uniform for their son. Chad wore it with pride.

That feeling though a new uniform was back recently when he graduated from the Abilene police academy, making him and his father, Tony Jenkins, the first father-son duo to serve together on Abilene's police force as brothers in blue.

Tony said that while he never pushed his son to become a police officer, he wasn't disappointed when Chad told him of his decision.

"I think it is in his blood," Tony said. "When he was younger, he was interested in police work. Its just one of those things where he saw me and he really seemed to keep an interest in it."

Applicants to the academy undergo a laundry list of requirements before being admitted. This year, 140 people applied, 114 tested, and 18 started and finished the academy.

At 21, Chad admitted his father can probably lick him in a short foot race, but still chided that "he's pretty old."

Laughing, the elder Jenkins, who joined the department a year after his son was born, recalled a time when the academy was different. Specifically, he described a mock scenario that wouldn't happen in today's academy.

The cadets received a call to report to a secluded location, with a warning that there had been a rash of burglaries in the area.

Tony's team responded to find a man at a barn loading up his truck.

"As (the training officer) walked up, the subject got pretty combative and all of a sudden the guy pulls out a gun and pow! the officer goes down," Tony said. "I was in the back seat, my training officer was down, we're unarmed and then the guy turns the weapon to us."

After hearing the weapon fire but not seeing any glass shatter or feeling any pain, Tony realized he and his partner were in a training session. The man loading the truck was in cahoots with the training officer.

The incident was a gut check to see if they truly wanted to be in so dangerous a line of work.

"They told us that we do this for your own good, and we want you to go home and do some soul searching," Tony said.

"After talking with him," Chad said, "I don't think (our training) was as bad. We know ours is a scenario. But the first time you mess up a search or miss a gun in a house really gets cadets thinking.

Tony beamed that the whole Jenkins clan is proud of Chad's decision to wear a badge and enforce the law.

"But me especially, because he is kind of following in my footsteps," Tony said. "I don't have any reservations at all about Chad becoming an Abilene police officer. If I had it to do over again, I'd sign back up tomorrow."

Tony compared the police force to a family. That, he said, is why he's confident in his son's decision.

"I couldn't ask for a better group of people to work with," the veteran officer said.

Former jailer takes plea bargain

STINNETT — A former Hutchinson County jailer has pleaded guilty to having sex with prisoners in his custody and lying to a grand jury about his actions.

Shane Toney, 25, agreed to a plea bargain Wednesday in his felony case in exchange for a short jail sentence, four years' of probation and a $3,000 fine. The charges against Toney will be dismissed upon completion of his sentence, court officials said.

"During the summer of 1999, three female inmates told law-enforcement officials that they had consensual sexual relations with Toney in various parts of the county jail while he was on duty," district attorney Clay Ballman said in a statement Wednesday.

Toney will serve a 15-day jail sentence in the Armstrong County Jail, south of his former workplace. He was indicted last August by a Hutchinson County grand jury, who he told under oath that he had never had sexual outside his marriage.

The grand jury indicted Toney for "Improper Sexual Activity with a Person in Custody," a state jail offense. He was also indicted for aggravated perjury.

The offenses began in January 1999 and continued for seven months, court records said.

Branch Davidian trial delayed by a month

WACO — The federal judge presiding over the Branch Davidians' wrongful-death lawsuit against the government on Friday delayed the trial's start by a month, saying court-appointed experts need more time to analyze results from a key field test.

In a two-page order, U.S. District Judge Walter Smith set June 19 as the new trial date, striking the May 15 trial start he had ordered earlier.

Vector Data Systems, the court-appointed expert examining results from a March field test at Fort Hood, won't have its report ready until May 8 at the earliest, Smith said. The analysis initially had been expected by mid-April.

With that report now delayed until May 8 or later, the judge said: "A trial date of May 15 will not allow the parties or the court sufficient time to assess the results of that report prior to trial."

In setting the new trial date, Smith noted that the non-jury trial will occur in two phases. If he determines there is government liability in the deaths of the 80-some Branch Davidians who perished on April 19, 1993, he will then hear testimony on proposed damages.

Train hits truck in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO — Four people were injured Friday afternoon when a Union Pacific train collided with an 18-wheeler at a railroad crossing, police officials said.

The collision occurred shortly before 4 p.m. near the northeast suburb of Schertz. Witnesses said the truck, carrying two people, stopped in the middle of the railroad crossing and was hit by the 80-car train.

The truck's driver and a passenger and the train's conductor and an engineer were injured. Two people were taken by helicopter to University Hospital. Two others were transported to Brooke Army Medical Center.

The train was empty and was traveling from Eagle Pass to Memphis.

Residents begin long process of cleaning up rubble

By Susan Parrott
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Dawn Syganowski stood in a pile of rubble that once was her home and looked at the sky blue walls of her infant daughter's room.

The Arlington mother said she spent weeks painting a floating princess and fluffy white clouds on sheet rock now buckling under the weight of tornado-strewn debris.

Syganowski said she's thankful her family was not home when twisters hit North Texas on Tuesday night. But she's overwhelmed by the task of picking up the pieces of her broken home.

"I'm just glad my kids are too young to remember this," she said with a trembling voice, leafing through a jumble of baby items for the match to a tiny pink slipper.

The Syganowski home, now missing a roof and most exterior walls, must be demolished. But first, the family joins their neighbors in a feverish race to collect their shredded belongings as storm clouds loom overhead.

About 1,200 homes were damaged in Arlington and Grand Prairie. Also in Arlington, 33 business were damaged including the Texas Department of Health building, a U.S. Post Office and a Bell Helicopter plant.

Insurance adjusters estimate damage to Tarrant County at $450 million, and expect the amount to rise as they continue their survey. Four people were killed and a fifth is presumed dead.

In Kelly Anderson's Arlington neighborhood, city workers used huge front-end loaders to scoop masses of sheet rock, brick and trash off front yards and into dump trucks enroute to a city landfill.

Hundreds of volunteers have converged on the neighborhood, offering bottled water, boxes and words of encouragement. The area will be cordoned off by police patrols throughout the weekend.

Anderson carried boxes from his toppled home to a moving truck holding the promise of a new start. Anderson said he has to focus on the work ahead and not the loss of his home.

But he keeps searching for the one item he says is irreplaceable — a Christmas tree he decorated each year for his father's grave.

"That's something I need to find," he said. "I hope it's not destroyed."

AP Photo
Sherri Wade salvages items from her home in Arlington on Friday. Hundreds of residents, volunteers and city workers focused on clean-up after Tuesday's deadly tornados. More than 1,200 homes and 33 buildings were damaged in Arlington and Grand Prairie.

Anderson's wife, Toni, said she is distraught that no financial aid has been offered to the couple, who fear their insurance won't cover their property loss.

Additionally, the couple has taken unpaid leave from their jobs and are worried they cannot afford to rent an apartment while continuing their mortgage payments.

"Reality has just set in," she said. "What are we going to do?"

Next door, a woman who did not want to be identified said she was combing through her debris with steady resolve.

"I always watched this kind of thing on TV and wondered 'How do they go on,' " she said. "But you just have to go on," she said. "You're alive and safe. This can be replaced."

Gov. George Bush has declared Tarrant County a disaster area. Damage assessment teams from the Federal Emergency Management Teams and the Small Business Administration arrived in Tarrant County on Friday to help state leaders prepare paperwork for federal assistance.

U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, toured damaged homes in Grand Prairie on Friday, telling residents that he hoped the federal agencies would take quick action.

"It's important that the federal agencies respond quickly. Very few people have insurance that will cover everything."

In Fort Worth, officials announced Friday afternoon they would halt the removal of glass from damaged skyscrapers this weekend so that workers could enter their offices and salvage materials, The glass removal was expected to resume Monday.

Since eight large buildings were damaged in the tornado, workers have been knocking thousands of window panes to the ground, prohibiting access to the immediate area.

Devastated church schedules services at livestock arena

FORT WORTH (AP) — Parishioners from a near-downtown church pummeled by a tornado this week will hold their next two Sunday services in an arena usually used for bronco-busting and cow-roping. But worshipers aren't sure where they'll hold their Easter services.

"It's still up in the air, but we'll have an Easter service," said Rev. Bob Nichols, pastor of the Calvary Cathedral.

"It's possible we may put up a tent," Nichols said Friday, making an allusion to old-time revivals. "It is the season" after all.

Easter this year falls on April 30. This Sunday's service is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. in the Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum, the annual site for the Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show and Rodeo. The coliseum is booked after the next two Sundays, Nichols said.

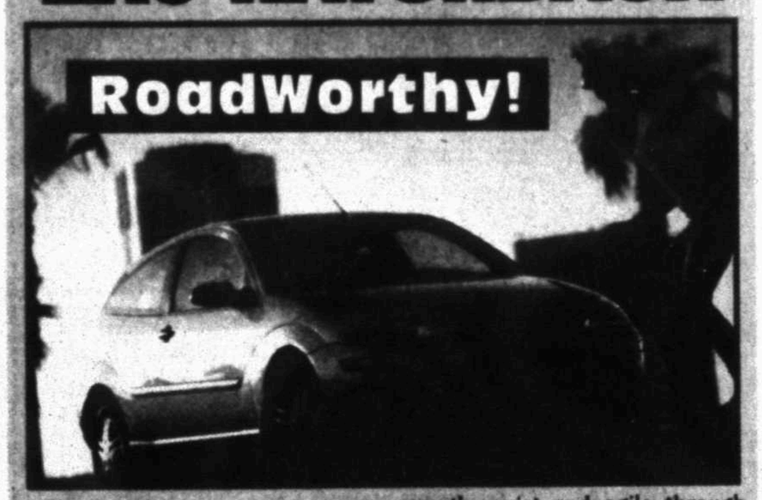
A new standard: 2000 FORD FOCUS ZX3 HATCHBACK



By Ken Chester, Jr.

Designed to raise the standard of what a small car should be with new levels of roominess, comfort, driving dynamics and safety, the all-new Ford Focus ZX3 is both a surprise and delight for consumers in the budget end of today's white hot automotive market.

As the price leader for the Focus line up, one would expect a boring but capable econobox capable of not much more than basic transportation. "Buying a Focus means consumers don't have to make compromises, and can have great handling and styling at an affordable price," said to Jim O'Conner, Ford Division president.

Built in the automaker's Wayne, Mich., and Hermisillo, Mexico assembly plants, the Ford Focus ZX3 is marketed in one trim level. The automaker's "Smart Design" approach is reflected in a roomy interior, precision engineering and enhanced vehicle dynamics. A long wheelbase of 103.0 inches and an overall width of 66.9 inches, the ZX3 is well suited to seating four adults in relative comfort.

The Focus hatchback is propelled by the high output ZETEC 16-valve four-cylinder engine. The Ford MTX75 five-speed manual is the standard gearbox while the 4F27E four-speed automatic with converter lock-up clutch is an $815 option.

On the road, the hatchback delivers a flawless performance, smooth, quiet and agile through hill, dale and winding two-lane road. This is made possible by independent MacPherson struts with angled coil springs/damper units and lower A-arms, mounted on a separate sub-frame in the front, and a Control Blade Multi-link system with one upper and two lower arms, plus additional twist-plate longitudinal link, with separate vertical damper units. Front and rear anti-roll bars work with the base 195/60R15 inch tires to deliver a command performance in handling and control.

Inside the cabin, world class displays and controls greet the driver. Intuitive and logically placed, the controls are easy to use, increasing safety through reduced driver workload and distractions. Convenience features, such as a manual-height seat adjust and optional tilt and telescopic steering wheel, make the interior a very friendly place for all people, regardless of weight, shape or stature. A single-disk CD player is standard equipment.

Another convenience found on the hatchback is the tailgate release, situated high on the instrument panel and close to the door, enabling operation from inside or outside the car without bending. The tailgate can be opened remotely – with or without the key in the ignition and when the engine is running. A safety cut-out ensures that the tailgate cannot be opened by accident when the vehicle is moving.

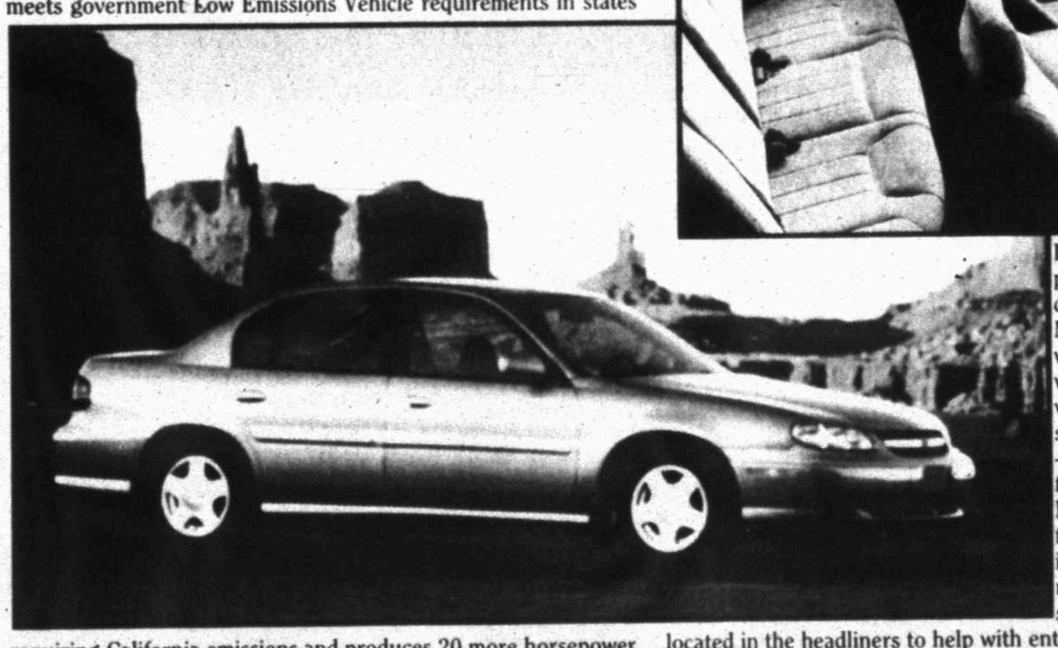
2000 CHEVROLET MALIBU SEDAN

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Designed with high standards for quality, reliability and value in mind for families, the Chevrolet Malibu has become a symbol of American excellence. This model year, the midsize sedan receives a laundry list of appearance, safety and convenience refinements and improvements.

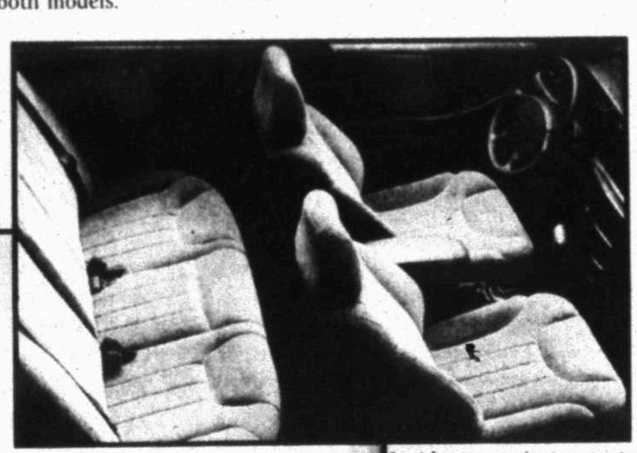
Built at General Motors', Oklahoma City, Okla., assembly complex, the Malibu is available in base and LS trim levels. An improved LG8 3100 V-6 engine replaces last year's L82 and is now the sole powerplant available for the sedan. This engine meets government Low Emissions Vehicle requirements in states requiring California emissions and produces 20 more horsepower. GM Powertrain's 4T40-E four-speed electronic automatic transmission is the gearbox that is bolted to the upgraded six-cylinder mill.



Improvements to the exterior include a new center grill and emblem – taking a styling cue from the all-new Impala. A new optional rear spoiler, $175, for the LS adds a sleek look. New aluminum wheels, body-color front and rear mud guards, Solar-Ray glass for windshield and backglass, wheel covers and two-piece door trim round out appearance enhancements.

It is both the fancy stuff and the neat stuff that have been built into the car that make it so fantastic. For example, the ignition switch is on the dashboard for the first time in over 20 years. There is a cupholder to the left of the steering wheel for those who need a place to put hot beverages during the morning commute. This is in addition to the 100,000 mile spark plugs, five-year anti-freeze, and a sealed-for-life automatic transmission.

On the road, this car can move! The rigid body structure of the sedan enables precise turning of the suspension resulting in an effective balance of good handling and a smooth ride. The standard four-wheel independent suspension with struts in the front and a "tri-link" rear suspension help provide a comfortable ride and responsive handling. Noise, vibration and harshness are reduced as well as the feeling of "rear end slide" in harsh cornering. P215/60R15 blackwall touring tires are standard on both models.



Inside, a new instrument panel appliqué greets the driver. Occupants in the Malibu are treated to a well thought-out space, with wonderful outward visibility, comfortable seating – front and rear – and good placement for displays and controls. New glove box and seat fabric round out the interior upgrades. LS models feature new standard assist handles located in the headliners to help with entry and exit in addition to power door locks with lockout protection.

By the numbers

Engine performance numbers are 170 hp at 5,200 rpm and 190 lb/ft of torque at 4,000 rpm for the new 3100 V-6 engine. EPA fuel economy figures are 23 city/32 highway using regular unleaded gasoline. Underhood fluids are clearly marked and easy to reach.

Standard safety/security equipment for the Malibu includes: dual front airbags, four-wheel anti-lock brakes, daytime running lights, side door beams, battery rundown protection, five mph bumpers and PassLock theft deterrent system. The LS model adds fog lamps, remote keyless entry and power door locks with lockout protection.

The base Manufacturers Suggested Retail Price begins at $16,445 for the base model to $19,215 for the LS sedan. Destination charge adds $550. Local dealers report plenty of Malibu sedans in stock.

WE'LL BE THERE

We went all the way around the world to get here.

DAE-WHO?

While Daewoo may not yet be a household name over here, it certainly is everywhere else. Our vehicles are sold in 180 countries. And in several, we're the best sellers. As Korea's number one carmaker - based on the 1999 Automotive News Databook - our annual production capacity will grow to 2.5 million units in the year 2000. All of our vehicles have been carefully developed with the help of the best automotive minds at our technical centers in the United Kingdom and Germany, and in cooperation with other automotive experts around the world.

3 Year, Scheduled Maintenance Program at NO EXTRA COST
In addition to our basic warranties, we provide you with a 3-year/36,000mile, no extra charge, scheduled maintenance program which provides:

- Prescribed maintenance items (engine oil, oil filter and air filter changes; tire rotation; etc.) which are needed every 6,000 miles, for up to 36,000 miles.
- A way to minimize your maintenance costs by providing replacement coverage for items such as brake pads, hoses, belts; wiper blades, etc., if they're needed during your first 3 years or 36,000 miles of ownership.

3 Year, 24 Hour Priority Assistance Program at NO EXTRA COST
Emergencies happen, and when they do, we'll be there to help - 24-hours a day, 7-days a week. This program is offered at no extra charge for the full term of the basic 3-year/36,000-mite limited warranty and includes:
Roadside Assistance Toll-Free Telephone Access Anytime Sign & Drive (In most instances, it's possible to simply sign a receipt. The provider of the service will be paid by us) Emergency Lockout Service, Lost Key Retrieval and Message Service Custom Trip-Routing and Map Service.

3 Year, Factory Limited Warranty NO EXTRA COST
Not only does every Daewoo come with a 3-year/36,000-miles warranty, but also 5-year/60,000-mile coverage on the powertrain. As a result, if warranty work is needed, you'll end up paying less - and we'll end up paying more.
