New postal hours

Postmaster Stan Sartain has announced that effective Saturday the Postal Service in Midland will add additional retail window hours at Graves Station, located at Wadley Avenue and Midkiff Road, and the General Mail Facility, known as Airport Post Office located at Midland International Airport. The Graves Station will be open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays and will provide full retail window services. The General Mail facility will be open from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturdays and will provide full retail window services. Sartain said the addition of Saturday hours at the two sites was the result of recent surveys conducted here.

Clinton selects Pentagon's No. 2 man to replace Aspin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Filling an awkward gap in his national security team, President Clinton promoted the Pentagon's No. 2 man to defense secretary Monday. He lauded his nominee, William J. Perry, as "a real pro," a man "you can depend on."

The quick reaction from Congress was enthusiastic, with predictions Perry would win easy confirmation. Though he is little known to the general public, senators dealing with military issues are familiar with him from frequent testimony at hearings.

Seemingly a reluctant warrior, Perry said he told the White House Saturday he could not say yes at that point because "I did not want to drive my family into a decision — my decision — without their support."

After a talk with Vice President Al Gore and then a meeting with family members, he telephoned the White House on Sun-

2 Ward County inmates serving time for Midland crimes escape

By Katherine Poteet

MONAHANS — Two Ward County jail inmates serving sentences for crimes committed in Midland escaped Monday afternoon.

Ward County Sheriff Ben Keele said 24-year-old Jimmy David Clark and 21-year-old Jimmy Mac Haggard escaped from the jail's recreation area about 1:45 p.m. Monday.

Keele said a witness told officials she saw two women, one blonde and one brunette, and a small child walking outside the recreation area when one of the women threw something into the area. Shortly thereafter, the witness said she saw the two inmates leave through the top of the recreation area, jump over the side and head south across a park.

Keele said it is believed the two men left in a vehicle with the two

Court ruling gives clinics legal moves

■ Supreme Court decision allows abortion clinics to invoke a federal racketeering law to sue violent anti-abortion protesters.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A unanimous Supreme Court ruled Monday that protesters who block access to abortion clinics or in other ways conspire to stop women from having abortions may be sued as racketeers.

The decision, which could threaten Operation Rescue and other anti-abortion groups with financial ruin, also allows federal courts to order a halt to illegal protests at clinics.

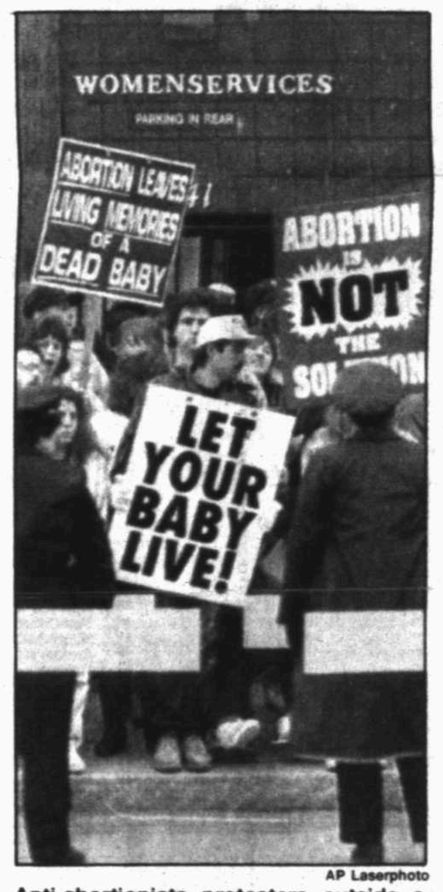

Although focused only on interpreting a federal anti-racketeering law, the decision is a big victory for the National Organization for Women and the Clinton administration.

NOW had taken the case to the high court, and the administration had sided with NOW's view of the disputed law.

Lower courts had thrown out the nationwide class-action lawsuit that tried to invoke the anti-racketeering law against Operation Rescue and other groups. Monday's decision reinstated the lawsuit, which stems from anti-abortion protests in Chicago and other cities.

"The Bush Mission," a proposed American Airpower Heritage Museum exhibit at the Confederate Air Force (CAF) headquarters in Midland, will delineate former President George Bush's World War II bombing mission to a crucial Japanese-held island south of Tokyo on Sept. 2, 1944.

Bush was piloting a carrier-launched TBM Avenger when the single-engine torpedo-bomber was hit by enemy antiaircraft fire on its diving run. But Bush "delivered his bomb load on target," a

LOS ANGELES — Commuters hamstrung by Los Angeles' earthquake-crippled freeway system entered the brave new world of trains, buses and car pools Monday. To their surprise, many found it wasn't as bad as they feared.

"It's sad, I know, but maybe this is forcing us to do something that we should have been doing for years," said Dale Lynn Bowman, a first-time passenger on the Metrolink commuter train.

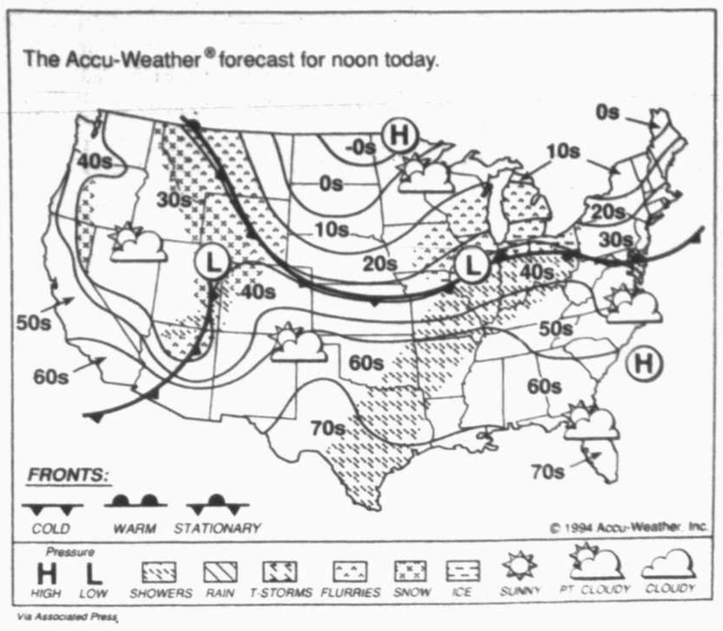

The Jan. 17 quake, which measured 6.6 on the Richter scale, killed 56 people and injured 8,335. Officials revised the death toll downward from 57 on Monday without an immediate explanation.

In Washington, President Clinton pledged to line up federal aid as rapidly as possible. "Just keep your chins up and keep working on it," he told federal relief officials in Los Angeles. "We'll do what we can here."

WEATHER WATCH

Day should warm into mid-70s

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-70s and southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low near 40, according to the National Weather Service.

Wednesday should be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 60s.

After an overnight low of 47, Monday's high reached 67, compared to the record high for that date of 82 set in 1950. The record low was 13 set in 1940.

NATION

A storm moving in off the Pacific spread rain Monday across parts of the West Coast, with heavy snow at higher elevations, while mild weather spread over much of the eastern half of the nation.

Bands of clouds were spreading ahead of the Pacific storm system into California, Oregon and Washington.

Some of the precipitation was heavy, particularly across central and northern California, with rain at lower elevations and snow in the mountains.

Overnight rainfall in California included 1.92 inches in San Francisco, 1.69 inches in downtown Oakland and 0.73 of an inch at Redwood City, the National Weather Service said.

The rain caused some highway flooding in the San Francisco Bay area, snarling morning commuting, and some minor mud slides in northern California, authorities said. Rainfall in the Bay area has been below average this year.

A tree collapsed on a house in Oakland, killing the occupant. "This tree weighed tons. It went through the house like it was made of match sticks," Oakland fire Capt. Don Parker said.

Up to a foot of snow was reported at higher elevations of the Sierra Nevada north of Sequoia National Park, with 10 inches at Mineral, 8 inches at Donner Lake and 7 inches at Alpine Meadows.

Winter storm warnings were posted across the northern Sierra Nevada, including the Lake Tahoe area, and snow advisories were posted for the southern Sierra. Snow advisories also were in effect across parts of southern Oregon's Cascades and Siskiyous, and south-central Oregon.

Winter storm watches were in effect through Tuesday across the mountains of southern Utah, the weather service said.

A southerly flow of mild, moist air produced a thick blanket of low clouds, fog and patchy drizzle from Texas across the middle Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and the southern Great Lakes.

Temperatures were mild, with temperatures in the 30s and 40s across the Ohio Valley and the 50s and 60s across the southern Plains. Readings in the 70s and lower 80s were common along the southern Texas Coast.

"We have alerted all area law-enforcement agencies," he said. "We aren't going to try to guess where they were headed. We are going to cover all this area."

Clark, of Hobbs, N.M., was being held in Ward County on charges of robbery. On Jan. 8, he pleaded guilty to the Sept. 9, 1993, robbery of Bank One, 2301 W. Wall St. in Midland. Clark was apprehended after the robbery when he led officers on a high-speed chase that ended when he crashed into a telephone pole in southeast Midland.

Clark was indicted on Sept. 15, 1993, on three counts of bank robbery and three counts of the use of a weapon during the commission of a crime of violence. In exchange for a guilty plea, the other charges against Clark, which included robberies at Texas Commerce Bank, 1030 Andrews Highway in Midland, and Western National Bank, 2700 N.W. County Road in Odessa, were dropped.

Haggard currently was serving a 24-month prison term in Ward County for sending a letter, dated Oct. 19, to Chief U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton in which he threatened to kill the judge. According to a court affidavit, Haggard claimed he sent the letter because Bunton had not acted on previous letters Haggard had sent.

Haggard had been serving a sentence in the Midland County Detention Center for sexual assault at the time he sent the letter. He was sentenced to the Ward County Jail because of his disruptive behavior in jail.

EXHIBIT: CAF readies 'The Bush Mission'

(From 1A)

Japanese military radio station, and bailed out over the Pacific Ocean.

For his heroic efforts, Bush, who became the Navy's youngest aviator at age 19 in June 1943, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

"The exhibit is not intended to be a political exhibit at all," said Frank Kell Cahoon, a Midland geologist and civic leader who is chairman of the fund-raising American Airpower Heritage Foundation. "It is intended to be a historical exhibit.

"Presidents, after they are no longer in the presidency, become historical figures," Cahoon said.

The $250,000 exhibit will be featured in the CAF's Hangar, where many vintage CAF warplanes are hangared and undergoing maintenance. The exhibit is being designed by Promotion Products Inc. (PPI) of Portland, Ore. PPI has designed exhibits for the Museum of Science in Oregon and the Boeing Museum in Seattle, Wash., Cahoon said. "Their two strong points are airplanes and interactives."

Bush is invited to the exhibit's grand opening at Midland International Airport on the 50th anniversary of his mission.

"We are hopeful of having President Bush here on Sept. 2, 1994," Cahoon said.

Rather than focusing on Bush's World War II military career, the exhibit will "hone in on the mission that he was flying when he was shot down and recovered by the (USS) Finback submarine," Cahoon said.

While Bush was watched over by his wingmen after his downing in the Pacific Ocean, his two crewmen, John Delaney and William "Ted" White, did not survive the mission.

On the day of the mission, Bush and other members of his VT-51 squadron had been launched from the aircraft carrier, USS San Jacinto, in their Avengers. Their mission was to destroy a "tremendous radio-communications facility" on the Japanese-held Chichi Jima island south of Japan.

"From this island, they (the Japanese) had nearly worldwide radio communications," Cahoon said. "The Japanese were building huge underground bunkers (on Chichi Jima) . . . to move the emperor and better protect him if an invasion took place on the main islands of Japan," Cahoon said.

The Bush Mission exhibit will be divided into seven areas:

- A Call to Arms
- The Machines
- Military Intelligence
- The Briefing Room
- Weapons
- The Flight
- The Rescue

War-time film footage will depict the mission, Bush's rescue and Bush's "war horse," the TBM Avenger, which has been hailed as "the best of the last wartime torpedo-bombers."

A TBM Avenger, now assigned to the CAF's Rocky Mountain Wing in Grand Junction, Colo., is to be at CAF Headquarters at Midland International Airport for the opening of the exhibit.

The computerized audio-visual exhibit will be designed for interaction by exhibit participants and will feature an Avenger theme.

All told, almost 10,000 Avengers were built during World War II. Most were destroyed in combat or in the post-war destruction of warplanes.

"The real backbone of the CAF is the flying aircraft," Cahoon said.

Today, 136 warplanes from the Allied forces and the Axis powers are in the CAF Flying Museum or Ghost Squadron.

"Those flying aircraft add a tremendous dimension not just to our (CAF) AirSho but to air shows they participate in all across the United States," Cahoon said. "There is just nothing like seeing one of them flying. And that's why we are very different from the Smithsonian (Institution's Air and Space Museum) and other museums where you see airplanes in static display" and not in flight.

"Our niche is, we want to keep them flying," Cahoon said. "As time goes by, that becomes more and more difficult, as parts become more difficult to find and expensive."

Cahoon's role with the CAF's and the American Airpower Heritage Foundation is to raise funds to set up an endowment "to keep 'em flying."

Those wishing to donate funds to the foundation or specifically to The Bush Mission may contact Norma Webb, who is on the foundation board, in Midland at 682-0871.

The Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland has pledged a $50,000 matching grant to promote The Bush Mission. Additional funds are coming from CAF members, corporations and individuals and other foundations.

CAF Executive Director Bob Rice said the Bush exhibit will "add a new dimension to the hangar.

"It is just going to increase our educational program to the hangar, which is certainly something we have been wanting to do for sometime," Rice said.

The Bush Mission exhibit will be an extension of the American Airpower Heritage Museum at CAF Headquarters.

AVENGER: Talk show host is comfortable

determined to speak out.

"If I can motivate one black or Hispanic kid to say . . . 'I'm going to show him all Hispanics and blacks aren't that way,' then it's worth it," he said.

"We've tried it all — more welfare, lowering standards. I would like, just once, for these kids to say: '. . . make it harder.'"

His forums are his talk show on radio station KNUS — his colleagues call him "The Black Avenger" — and a twice-weekly column in The Denver Post.

Both have drawn attention — good and bad. The idea, he told The New York Times, was to say things "that a white person couldn't get away with."

"I want to know why 60 percent of black babies are born out of wedlock. Is that the fault of white people? I want to know why so many black kids can't speak proper English. I want to know why black people can't pass a civil service examination. The excuse is that it's culturally biased. Well, I'd like to know what could possibly be culturally biased on a test for a firefighter."

Now 53, he has been on the air for 11 years; at first, his was a pleasant, liberal, unaccented voice which gave no clue that he was black.

But gradually, Hamblin — a successful businessman who owns his own plane, a boat, a fine home and several sandwich restaurants — became more strident.

In so doing, he earned fans, and enemies.

Last month, during a meeting in Denver, the National Black Caucus vowed to complain to the Federal Communications Commission about Hamblin's "racial epithets" and threatened a convention boycott of Denver if his remarks are not toned down. It urged the Post to drop Hamblin's column.

The caucus criticized Hamblin's references to "Darktown," and to those who live there as "Darktown dwellers," and "promoters of violence." California State Rep. Diane Watson complained that Hamblin's description of caucus members as "spooks" exceeded the bounds of protected free speech.

Hamblin retorted that free speech "is something dark little people like you (the caucus) could never understand. Dark, because your hearts are dark."

Hamblin said the caucus should listen to his message: "There is no room for the black parasite or for the Hispanic parasite . . . We must become competitive . . . We can't blame white people."

The Post, however, responded to the caucus' complaint by announcing his column would be edited more closely.

Editorial page editor Chuck Green said Hamblin has become "increasingly acerbic and increasingly strident," and has "accelerated his use of words that infuriate the black political establishment and many black citizens."

"By eliminating the detracting slurs, his message might well take on greater clarity," Green said.

Then this month, Hamblin was suspended from KNUS for three days and his Denver Post column was dropped for two weeks after he was charged with misdemeanor harassment.

REPLACE: Clinton promotes Perry to chief

day to say he would accept an offer if one were forthcoming.

"I did not have to be persuaded to take this job," Perry said.

Perry, 66, is to replace outgoing Secretary Les Aspin, who announced his resignation under pressure from the White House last month. Clinton's first choice to take Aspin's place, Bobby Inman, withdrew last week in a news conference filled with complaints about attacks from columnists and lawmakers.

Despite Inman's shocker — and comments from a handful of other job prospects that they were not interested — Clinton said hiring a new Pentagon chief was easy.

"It wasn't hard to fill," Clinton said. "I asked Secretary Perry and he said, 'Yes.'"

Perry, who also served in President Carter's Pentagon, is a former engineering professor and mathematician, a key early supporter of stealth technology who was later proven right. Unlike Clinton, he is also an Army veteran, perhaps positioned to help his commander-in-chief improve relations with military leaders and wrestle with a shrinking Pentagon budget.

Republican as well as Democratic senators were quick to praise the nominee.

"A great choice . . . a real professional with depth of experience," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"I have worked well with Dr. Perry in the past and he has done a good job," said Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the ranking Republican on the committee.

But Republican Sen. Dan Coats of Indiana expressed reservations about Clinton's choice.

"Bill Perry has demonstrated that he is a terrific No. 2 man at the Pentagon. . . . My question is will he be capable of moving up to the No. 1 slot and fulfilling the agenda that we require of the secretary of defense," he said.

Clinton said he made the choice "based on his lifetime of accomplishments."

"He has the right skills and management experience for the job. He has the right vision for the job," said Clinton, who credited Perry with being on the "cutting edge of defense issues."

CRAWL: Commuters enter brave new world

(From 1A)

Train ridership leaped, solo drivers were scarcer and the downtown subway did brisk business as thousands found their way to work despite the destruction of vital freeway segments.

Commuters through the Newhall Pass, where one freeway closure diverted traffic onto a winding canyon road north of downtown, endured a 90-minute drive, compared to four-hour journeys that were common last week.

About 16,000 of the 200,000 motorists who travel the pass daily took the Metrolink train. Before the quake closed Interstate 5, the state's main north-south route, fewer than 1,000 passengers rode the train daily.

Freeways and surface streets were briefly gridlocked on the city's congested west side because of a break on the Santa Monica Freeway, which normally handles as many as 340,000 daily trips. And traffic crawled 15 miles along an alternative, the Ventura Freeway, in the San Fernando Valley.

Traffic engineers believe many people decided to stay home, leave for work early or abandon their cars for mass transit or car pools, said Jerry Baxter, district director for the California Department of Transportation. No actual counts were made to verify that assessment, he said.

"I'm not here to tell you we're out of the woods," Baxter told a news conference. "Tomorrow may be a lot tougher than today."

State transit officials urged businesses to stagger working hours, adopt four-day work weeks and have employees work from home via computer.

Commuters face an even sterner test today, when all but about 9,000 of 640,000 students in the Los Angeles Unified School District were to return to class.

RULING: Court gives abortion clinics weapon

(From 1A)

on to our arsenal for attacking the terrorism of extremists in the anti-abortion movement," said Helen Neuborne of the NOW Legal Defense Fund. "We're very pleased."

But Randall Terry of Operation Rescue said, "The Supreme Court has told civil protest to go to hell." He said, "This is a vulgar betrayal of over 200 years of tolerance towards protest and civil disobedience. The iron heel of government now will be used to crush dissent."

Nothing in the ruling dealt directly with abortion. The court in 1992 reaffirmed the core holding of its landmark Roe vs. Wade decision of 1973 — that women have a constitutional right to abortion.

Monday's ruling focused on alleged crimes committed against abortion clinic employees and patients. The court said such conduct can lead to lawsuits under federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations legislation, called RICO.

The decision means:

- Anti-abortion groups and individuals sued successfully over their conduct can be forced to pay tripled damages. The NOW lawsuit alleges criminal violations dating back to 1982.
- The leaders of anti-abortion groups may be sued successfully as conspirators even if they are not physically present when illegal conduct occurs.
- Federal judges may invoke RICO to issue injunctions against anti-abortion activities.

The court last year ruled abortion clinic operators cannot invoke the Ku Klux Klan Act of 1871 in suing those who block women's access to abortion clinics.

That ruling led to an effort in Congress to provide more federal protection for women seeking abortions. The House and Senate have passed separate versions of the Freedom of Access to Clinics Act, and the legislation will be before a conference committee when Congress reconvenes.

The court's new decision falls far short of resolving all legal issues surrounding anti-abortion activities. Just last Friday, the justices agreed to clarify how far courts and local governments may go in restricting protesters outside clinics.

That case, to be decided by July, pits the free-speech rights of protesters against the rights of women seeking abortions and of abortion clinic employees to be free from harassment, intimidation or other illegal conduct.

Anti-abortion leaders such as Terry call themselves civil rights activists and distance themselves from those responsible for such violent acts as the killing of Dr. David Gunn outside a Pensacola, Fla., clinic last year.

Monday's decision was hardly surprising. The court consistently has refused to narrow how the broadly worded RICO law is applied.

Enacted in 1970, RICO was aimed at organized crime. But increasingly it is used in lawsuits involving just about any business dispute.

Writing for the court, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said RICO can be invoked even when the alleged crimes have no economic motive.

World in brief

■ Rise of Chinese gangs alarms Germany

NUREMBERG, Germany — Police were sure that Hong Kong gangs lurked behind the Chinese restaurants popping up around Nuremberg, so they raided all of them in a dragnet dubbed "Operation Rising Sun."

Almost the entire Chinese community of northern Bavaria was rounded up and fingerprinted — 653 people in 98 restaurants — in the Nov. 10 raid.

Police say crime syndicates from Italy, Russia and Poland are taking advantage of the country's crossroad position in Europe and its relatively weak anti-mob laws.

But it is the emergence of the Hong Kong-based crime gangs called triads that strike the deepest nerves in Germany, a land where immigration, crime and labor relations were tightly controlled during the Cold War era.

■ No snow, foggy peace breed discontent

MOUNT HERMON, Golan Heights — The phone in Eli Sagron's office rang constantly Monday with Israel's beautiful people checking if the latest winter storm brought snow to this ski resort abutting the Syrian border.

But it's the climate of peace that pushes Sagron to scowl out the window, thinking about the Israeli and Syrian negotiators who may finally strike the deal that returns this mountain to Syria.

"On a nice day you can see Damascus from here. It is two hours away by tank," he said. "That is why it is quiet. If we were far away it wouldn't be as quiet."

Whether Israel can obtain peace with Syria is a question Israeli voters may soon have to answer.

■ Lebanese lay claim to Jesus' miracle

QANA, Lebanon — With six stone wine pots and other evidence, archaeologists in Lebanon contend that a village in the southern hills was the site of Jesus Christ's first miracle — turning water into wine.

Despite the possible benefits for tourism, the claim isn't making everyone happy in Qana, where some Muslim fundamentalists see the claim as blasphemous. Troops now patrol the village and even government officials are taking sides.

Tradition has it that Kfar Kanna, a small Arab village near the Sea of Galilee in Israel, was where Jesus turned six pots of water into wine at a wedding party. Kfar Kanna is about 4½ miles northeast of Nazareth. Jesus' hometown.

■ Japan political reforms look shakier

TOKYO — Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa's government, shaken by a crucial defeat over political reforms, was battered again Monday when stock prices plunged and chances for compromise on the reforms appeared to lessen.

The Tokyo stock market's benchmark Nikkei Stock Average fell 4.9 percent, its largest drop since August 1991, on fears that political troubles will delay government action to stimulate the struggling economy.

The political turmoil also could cause trouble with the United States by slowing efforts to reach an accord on reducing Japan's trade surplus.

U.S., France clash openly on Bosnia policy

Rift widens as the two countries, along with other NATO allies, grope for ways to stop the war, relieve suffering of Bosnian people.

PARIS (NYT) — The United States and France clashed openly on Monday over a French request that the Clinton administration pressure the Bosnian government to accept a European peace plan dividing Bosnia-Herzegovina along ethnic lines.

Foreign Minister Alain Juppe said in an interview on Monday night that he had made the appeal at breakfast with Secretary of State Warren Christopher, but that Christopher had rejected the idea outright.

Juppe's comments highlight a widening rift as the two countries, along with the other NATO allies, grope for ways to stop the war and relieve the suffering of the Bosnian people.

For a time last year, it was the Americans who threatened air strikes to back up a plan to arm the Bosnian Muslims, who dominate the government, and it was the French, among others, who opposed them. But at the NATO summit meeting two weeks ago, the United States agreed only reluctantly to France's call for a renewed commitment to air strikes to support the delivery of aid to Bosnia.

Since then, the French position seems to have shifted again, from a military strategy that could involve air strikes against Bosnian Serbs, to a diplomatic strategy that would pressure the three factions, in particular the Muslims, to accept the Europeans' latest peace plan. The Bosnian government has rejected the plan.

In the interview, in English, Juppe insisted that Washington was content to let the 21-month war drag on and did not realize the consequences of its refusal to play an active diplomatic role in helping to end it. He said he had laid out a dire scenario for Christopher: the withdrawal of United Nations peacekeepers and the spread of war to the entire region. The peacekeeping mandate runs out in the spring.

"I told the secretary that the humanitarian track is not enough," Juppe said. "The only way we can reach a political settlement is to join efforts — the Europeans, the Americans and the Russians — and put pressure on all three parties to sign an agreement, even if it is not exactly what the Europeans have proposed.

"If the Americans do not convince the Bosnian Muslims that they must stop fighting and that there is no chance that the United States would come to their rescue, then the United States will give them incentives to pursue the fighting on the ground.

"It would be a catastrophe. And we say to our American friends that they will be responsible for this."

But in Washington, President Clinton essentially rejected the French idea.

U.S. changes tone, warns Russia to press on reforms

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a sharp change of tone, the Clinton administration's top specialist on Russia, testifying on Capitol Hill, sternly warned on Monday that the government of President Boris Yeltsin must press full speed ahead with economic reforms or risk an inflation rate high enough to "topple governments, sometimes with the ugliest and most dangerous of results."

Applying undisguised pressure on Moscow after a Cabinet shuffle that left foes of swift economic change in charge, Strobe Talbott, the deputy secretary of state-designate, told a Senate subcommittee that "gradual reform is a prescription for hyperinflation and economic collapse."

The Clinton administration has been struggling for more than a month to decide how best to reshape its Russia policy in light of the December elections there in which the forces favoring rapid reform suffered a stunning setback.

Talbott on Monday all but renounced his initial response to the elections, a call for "less shock and more therapy," asserting that the Clinton administration always favored rapid reform, but wanted it done with less pain, especially by strengthening the social safety net.

Talbott, the ambassador-at-large for Russia and other former republics of the Soviet Union, said the administration's new credo was, in effect, "more reform and more support" from abroad to underwrite the painful reform efforts.

The search for a Russian finance minister took on bizarre proportions on Monday as Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin met with the recalcitrant reformer Boris Fyodorov and said his resignation as finance minister still had not been not accepted, even though he has refused the job twice. Talbott said that the Group of 7 industrialized democracies was working on an aid package for next year, but he offered no specifics about possible increases. Last month, he said the United States could not afford to send more money to Moscow.

And while Talbott suggested last month that international lending agencies could become more accommodating, Talbott made clear on Monday that if the Yeltsin government did not move aggressively to reduce inflation, it would face continued delays in receiving a $1.5 billion International Monetary Fund loan that the Russian government eagerly wants to shore up its nearly depleted hard-currency reserves.

But he said that humanitarian aid and funds for privatization would go through even if Russia fails to rein in inflation.

"Slowing the pace of reform will not ease the social pain of economic transition," he said in a hearing before the Senate Appropriations Committee's subcommittee on foreign operations. "In fact, quite the contrary: slowing down is likely to prolong and worsen the pain and increase the threat of even more alarming political developments."

In some ways, Talbott appeared to be responding to Fyodorov, who asserted that Talbott has stabbed Russia's reformers in the back.

China calls on 1 million to teach on taxes

HONG KONG (AP) — China's government is mobilizing 1 million people to teach its citizens about new taxes.

Jin Xin, head of the State Administration of Taxation, cited widespread misunderstanding about the taxes that took effect Jan. 1, according to a report Monday in Ta Kung Pao, a Beijing-financed Hong Kong newspaper.

Speaking during a publicity drive Sunday, Jin said tax officials and local government and civic leaders would hit the streets to educate the public about the laws, the newspaper reported.

The new levies include a sales tax and value added tax and were adopted as part of senior leader Deng Xiaoping's campaign to shift Communist China to a market economy.

Packwood must surrender controversial diaries, judge rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood's personal diaries are "unquestionably relevant" to the Senate Ethics Committee and must be provided to the panel, a federal judge ruled Monday.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson said he had to "balance Sen. Packwood's expectations of privacy . . . against the Ethics Committee's interest in examining them for evidence of misconduct . . . ."

On balance, he said, the committee's subpoena for the diaries must be upheld.

Jackson found the diaries "unquestionably relevant . . . to a constitutionally authorized and properly focused inquiry" by a committee with "jurisdiction to investigate allegations of misconduct . . ." by members of the Senate.

The committee had been awaiting the ruling before deciding its next moves: whether to expand the probe to include job offers to Packwood's wife and whether to hold public hearings.

The panel is investigating the Oregon Republican for alleged sexual misconduct, witness intimidation and obstruction of the probe by Packwood's alleged alteration of the diaries.

Jackson ruled the subpoena did not violate Packwood's Fourth Amendment rights against over-broad searches. The committee met legal standards of reasonableness, he found.

Nor, Jackson concluded, did the committee violate the Oregon Republican's Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. Packwood lost that claim when the diaries were "voluntarily committed to paper" before the committee sought them.

The Senate demanded the diaries in a lawsuit after Packwood disobeyed the subpoena — arguing it violated his constitutional rights, by allowing the committee to "rummage" through his most private thoughts.

Jackson acknowledged the diaries were "extremely personal and private," but pointed out the committee already has agreed to respect private material not needed for the investigation.

The subpoena was issued after the panel found entries that investigators said raised questions about whether Packwood used his office to aid lobbyists and businessmen who offered his wife a job. The committee wants diaries from 1989 to the present to decide whether to make the job offers part of the investigation.

The Justice Department has started a criminal investigation on the job offers and also has subpoenaed the diaries. Justice filed papers in secret that joined the Senate lawsuit for the diaries. The judge's ruling did not mention the department's demand.

"The judge's ruling has no impact on the Justice Department investigation right now," said department spokesman John Russell. "What we filed, we filed under seal."

Packwood's attorney, Jacob Stein, had no immediate comment.

Analysts: State of Union message to be theatrical

WASHINGTON (Cox) — President Clinton's State of the Union address to Congress tonight will follow a well-worn formula of political theater, as comfortable and as time-tested as vintage television sitcoms:

■ He will declare the State of the Union good, better or best.

■ He will follow a theme, carefully plucked from polling data and captured in a memorable catch phrase suitable for headlines and history.

■ He will deliver applause lines, some that will let TV cameras focus on Democrats, some for Republicans and some for both.

■ He will acknowledge his wife, Hillary; his vice president, Al Gore; and certain leaders of Congress.

■ He will talk for about an hour, long enough so that most television viewers will be ready for bed when Bob Dole delivers the Republican response to the address.

Dole, the minority leader in the Senate and the president's most vocal critic, knows the power of the bully pulpit and accepts it as part of the way things are done in Washington.

"He'll try to steal our thunder on some of the issues that are important to Americans, but that's okay — that's the way the game is played," Dole told reporters over the weekend. "But it's one thing to make a tough speech. It's another thing to support a tough bill."

In his address, Clinton will dwell briefly — but not too briefly — on some of the successes of the past year: national service legislation, the Brady bill, family leave and deficit reduction.

And while he will drop a name or two of some of the world leaders with whom he has held summit meetings, there probably won't be too many words devoted to Bosnia, Somalia or Haiti.

Most of the speech will be devoted to the issues Clinton will press this year, and they are the worst-kept secret in the capital. They are:

■ Health-care reform (TV cut to Hillary, head of the administration's health-care task force, sitting in the gallery with a surprise guest star at her side).

■ Crime prevention (TV cut to House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia and Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, sponsors of GOP anti-crime measures).

■ Welfare reform (TV cut to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the chief proponent of welfare reform).

What is less apparent, however, is how much the political landscape has shifted under Clinton since he took office a year ago.

The sense of urgency that Clinton counted on to generate support for his activist initiatives this year has nearly evaporated in the wake of an economy that continues to rebound from the 1990 recession.

Recent government statistics show positive trends in employment, economic expansion, international competitiveness, and even in health care, where recent cost increases are nowhere near the spiraling hikes over the past decade.

Political polls reflect the economic numbers, showing Americans shifting their concerns to crime and other issues. This emboldens Republicans and Democrats alike to challenge the president's legislative priorities for 1994.

The economic statistics and the polling data have also prompted several rewrites of the president's speech to make it as much a call to moral purpose as a legislative laundry list.

The speech's early drafts emphasize "what America, as a great nation, should aspire to," according to a longtime Clinton confidant.

Those aspirations should include:

■ "Personal security," that is, freedom from fear of crime and guaranteed health insurance.

■ "Personal responsibility," that is, welfare reform.

■ World leadership.

■ High moral values.

'3-strikes, you're out' policy draws mixed national reviews

Associated Press

Washington state voters brushed aside concerns about costs and elderly inmates last November when they embraced a law that will put three-time violent criminals in prison for life with no parole.

Now "three strikes, you're out" is in. Similar laws are proposed in at least 10 other states, and this latest attempt to stop violence is expected to get its biggest plug yet from President Clinton in his State of the Union speech tonight.

Despite an avid public and enthusiastic prosecutors, criminal experts say it's a bad idea.

"People love simple solutions to complex problems," said James Austin, executive director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, a non-profit research institute in San Francisco. "Basically, we've got a baseball slogan driving a complex social problem, violent crime."

Others interviewed Monday also warned of draining away good money that would be better spent eradicating the root causes of crime, like poverty and drug addiction. They also pointed out that that an aged criminal is most likely a harmless one.

Professor Todd Clear, who teaches criminal justice at Rutgers University in New Jersey, estimated it costs $1 million to lock up a 30-year-old criminal for life.

"Is this really a wise use of resources?" he said. While the value of a life saved from averted crime can't be measured, he said, "What could you do to make life better for people if you had a million dollars?"

It's not about money alone, Clear said.

"If you want absolutely no crime whatsoever, then kill all 17-year-old boys," he said, then reeled off some statistics.

■ 90 in every 100,000 Americans were incarcerated in 1973. Now that number is 360 per 100,000.

■ The nation's prison population has swelled from 200,000 to 900,000 in the last 20 years.

■ Today's violent offenders have served three times the prison time their predecessors did in 1975.

"We have tried toughness for 20 years and we seem not to be getting the lesson," Clear said, "that spitting out offenders does nothing for the communities that spit them out."

Tell that to one happy prosecutor, John Ladenburg of Pierce County, Wash.

"We as a nation are full of hope and we are slow to admit there are people like this who will not change and we ought to lock them up," said Ladenburg, chief prosecutor for Pierce County, Washington's second-most-populous county with 650,000 people and about 50 murder trials a year.

"It's a fair price to pay for having committed these sins against the society," said Ladenburg, who helped push the "three strikes, you're out" ballot measure to its 3-1 victory at the polls.

Earlier this month, Ladenburg's office trumpeted the arrest of an alleged three-time felon with a news release announcing that rape suspect Cecil Davis had "struck out."

Davis's case comes less than a month after the Washington law went into effect. After doing time once for robbery and a second time for attacking two people with an ice pick, he was arrested Dec. 26, 1993, in a brutal attack on a 24-year-old woman who prosecutors say was repeatedly raped, beaten, knifed and left for dead. Unable to speak because of stab wounds in her throat, the victim drew a map that led police to Davis, 34.

Ladenburg said the trial was put off until Oct. 9 to allow the defense to prepare in light of the new law.

The law may prove tricky to use. Long jury trials may result .

Quake topples cinderblock wall, barriers between 2 families

By Leslie Dreyfous
AP national writer

LOS ANGELES — A case of parallel lives: two couples with immigrant dreams, two children each, two sets of live-in relatives and two-story houses with yards side by side — with a wall in between.

Not a big wall, or a mean wall. Just several feet of salmon-colored cinderblock and mortar, the kind that lines many Los Angeles lots and separates many neighbors. But not the Kims and the Yafis. Not since the quake.

The wall fell down, and out of the rubble these two separate families built something much better — one.

"Before it's just 'Hello. How are you?' Now is different. We're like a family now," said Jeong-seon Kim, smiling at the Yafis as they smiled back from the other side of the toppled wall. "We was scared. We didn't know what I can do, but they help us a lot."

The families are helping each other while camping behind what's left of their houses, peering in through glass sliding doors on shards of their everyday lives: mounds of cookware, books and condiment bottles strewn on their respective floors, a pile of the Kim boys' baseball cards here, a glimpse of the Yafis' broken dining room table there.

Jeong-seon Kim and her husband, Jae-bock, natives of South Korea, have shared their camp stove with the Yafis. When an inspector visited Fawaz Yafi and his wife, Jacky, natives of Lebanon, they made sure his next stop was the Kims' place.

"Nature said don't have no more borders. Take down the borders and make one world," Jacky said, her eyes sunken with fatigue. They've seen too much sadness in Lebanon's slow death, and taken in too many miles over 17 years of searching for home.

She and Fawaz, a multilingual singer who has performed around the world, finally found it here, in golden California. "We will start over. It's not the first time in our life," Jacky said. "In America we're fine. Our damage is from God, not people, like in Lebanon."

Unlike most area residents, the Yafis and Kims were already stirring in the morning darkness when the earth started moving Jan. 17.

At the Kims' house, the family was preparing to join other Assembly of God worshipers for 5:30 a.m. weekday services. Jeong-seon and Jaebock, who runs an auto repair shop, had just awakened. Her mother was already down in the kitchen, making tea. Her father had just risen from bed in the room he shares with his grandsons.

The house began to shake. The plaster gave way first, then bricks crashed down on the bed where only minutes before Jeong-seon's father had been sleeping. Across the room, the ceiling above her sons' bunkbed never so much as cracked. The family scrambled downstairs, all of them running barefoot through broken glass. None was cut.

It was God, the Kims said, who saw them to safety.

Next door, Jacky stood in a damp towel. When she was dressed for her early shift at a convenience store, Fawaz would give her a ride. Their teen-age daughter was asleep down the hall. Upstairs their son and Jacky's 69-year-old mother were in one room, her sister and brother-in-law in the other.

The house began to tremble. As Jacky grabbed for a robe, she heard 30 years of accumulated treasures, crystal brought halfway around the world, crashing. Like the Kims, they fled onto Balboa Boulevard.

Amid the panic and flight, unnoticed, the wall fell down.

The smell of gas filled the air. A broken water main unleashed a stream so swift that it swept up a car. A mighty blast erupted into a fire two blocks away.

"I thought we be finished," Jeong-seon said, sniffling from a cold the whole family has caught while sleeping outdoors.

"We cried, we laughed, we cried, we laughed," Jacky said.

"I was so scared," her mother added. "But we are safe."

Now, a week later, the families swing arms around each while remembering those first terrifying hours. Over the toppled wall pass dogs, cats, parents, children, grandparents and visitors. A cacophony of broken English spoken through smiles fills the mild evening air. And everyone agrees it's a shame that it took disaster to bring them together.

"There is a saying I know: In disaster maybe you meet strangers and let love flow," Fawaz said.

Study: Most high schools teach sex ed'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Classes on sexuality and AIDS are offered at about 93 percent of American high schools, and the most effective combine lessons on abstinence with the importance of using condoms and other contraceptives, research suggests.

Douglas Kirby, research director for ETR Associates, presented his paper Monday to a conference sponsored by the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank.

Contrary to claims of some opponents of sex ed, Kirby found such classes neither hasten the start nor increase the frequency of intercourse. Nor do the classes increase the number of sexual partners, he said.

But he found the programs had a mixed result in changing the behavior of teen-agers.

To be effective, Kirby said, the programs should focus on reducing "specific sexual risk-taking behaviors," reinforce values, and provide information on social influences and pressures. They also should be adapted to the age and experience of the students, he said.

Kirby defined effective as getting teen-agers to change their behavior by practicing abstinence or using condoms or other contraception if they already are engaging in intercourse.

"Programs for younger youth, fewer of whom are sexually experienced, should cover contraception but should focus much more upon delaying intercourse," he said. "Programs for older youth, more of whom have had sex, should include abstinence and skills to resist pressures to have sex, but should focus more upon using condoms and other types of contraceptives."

He said the AIDS epidemic has put increased focus on the use of condoms, but that there is not enough data to determine whether school-based condom distribution programs are successful.

Douglas J. Besharov, a resident scholar at AEI, forecast that more 1 million teen-agers would become pregnant this year, resulting in 400,000 abortions, 134,000 miscarriages and 490,000 births, two-thirds of them out of wedlock. Further, he said, about 3 million teen-agers will become infected with a sexually transmitted disease.

"Schools have been assigned a primary role in addressing these problems," he said.

Besharov said 93 percent of all high schools in the country offer courses on sexuality and AIDS, and 40 states and the District of Columbia either require or encourage the teaching of abstinence.

He said more than 510 junior or senior high schools have school-based or school-linked clinics, while more than 300 provide condoms at school.

"Although these programs have generated intense controversy, the scientific evidence about their effectiveness is mixed," Besharov said. "The only programs that seem to work are those that have a clear message about specific values and behaviors."

Kirby said there was insufficient evidence to determine whether sex education decreased the rates of pregnancy, AIDS infection or incidence of sexually transmitted disease.

However, he said, that would be a logical result given the effectiveness of some programs in delaying the start of intercourse, reducing the number of sexual partners and the frequency of intercourse and increasing the use of contraception.

Immunization plan should be lauded

The importance of childhood immunizations should get a significant boost in Midland from a program being carried out by the Midland Health Department including participation of a four-year outreach worker who plans to offer immunizations at various satellite centers througout the community.

Immunization against deadly childhood diseases does not affect only the young people in our society but literally everyone.

Impact of immunizations on the incidence of deadly diseases can be readily tracked due to what diseases are showing up in society. In fact, during the 1950s, heavily-promoted immunization programs virtually led to the eradication of some diseases that had terrorized the nation in earlier years. But in recent times some of those diseases have made a dramatic comeback due to the influx of some uninoculated people into our society.

Largely due to that fact, the importance of a revitalized immunization program — and particularly one with an outreach worker — cannot be overemphasized.

It's not enough, however, to only carry out an immunization program, even one with an outreach arm, and believe that the problem of resurrected diseases has been addressed. Rather, it takes an informational campaign that will get the word out to virtually every person in this country of the dangers posed by diseases to the uninoculated. Stressing childhood immunizations must become the byword.

The tragedy of childhood diseases such as measles, diphtheria, pertussis, mumps, and others is literally written across the headstones of numerous graves in this nation. We must not allow a repeat of that tragedy to occur.

Midland Health Department's effort in that regard is most commendable.

CHARLEY REESE

There are heroes working for liberation

The People's Mojahedin of Iran, the major Islamic but democratic opposition to the Iranian mullahs, has done much damage to the regime with military raids, sabotage and demonstrations — but nothing stung the fanatical mullahs more than when the Mojahedin chose a woman to be provisional president of Iran when the present dictatorship is overthrown.

Reese

Maryam Rajavi, who operates out of Paris, is a horror to the Tehran dictatorship, which speaks contemptuously of women in general and treats Iranian women more than contemptuously. This clerical dictatorship, which is a blot on democracy and human rights and an odious distortion of Islam, has gone into orbit since Rajavi's election.

It's pretty easy to grow cynical in this country, but there still are heroes and heroines in this world — decent people struggling to do the right thing. Rajavi is certainly one of them.

She was born in Tehran in 1953 and earned a degree in metallurgical engineering. She joined the Mojahedin in the early 1970s as they struggled to overthrow the dictatorship of the shah. Her sister was executed by the shah's forces and her brother imprisoned.

When the anti-shah revolution broke in 1978, she was a leader in organizing anti-government strikes and demonstrations by Mojahedin supporters. Alas, as often happens in revolutions, the supporters of Ayatollah Khomeini seized control after the shah's ouster. Rajavi and her husband, Massoud — who is president of the National Resistance Council, an umbrella group of dissident organizations that includes the Mojahedin — quickly denounced the new dictators and carried on an open struggle against the Khomeini forces for two and a half years.

Then the mullahs began a campaign of mass arrests and executions of the Mojahedin and their supporters. Maryam Rajavi narrowly escaped capture and death several times. She lost another sister who, though pregnant, was tortured to death by the mullahs, and her brother-in-law was executed.

The Mojahedin leadership moved to Europe and by 1985 was able to field a military force, the National Liberation Army. Rajavi was appointed deputy commander and played a key role in organizing a creditable military force.

In fact, there are 24 women holding prominent elected positions in the Mojahedin organization, and women have been integrated into the National Liberation Army.

It's important for Americans to understand that the People's Mojahedin of Iran is an Islamic organization. It's important because Americans need to know that Islam and democratic values are not incompatible. Mojahedin members will tell you that the kind of Islamic fanaticism practiced by the regime in Tehran is a perversion of the religion.

The Mojahedin intends to have a secular, democratic government that grants equal social and political rights to everyone and that will take its place among the family of democratic nations.

Maryam and Massoud Rajavi are, in deed and in fact, a remarkable couple, genuine heroes who have stood consistently against dictatorship and for democracy and human rights at the risk of their lives.

And they continue to do so. The Tehran regime has sent assassins after them and other leaders and killed many in different cities in Europe. Last December, the United Nations finally got around to passing a resolution condemning Iran for these terroristic actions against the opposition.

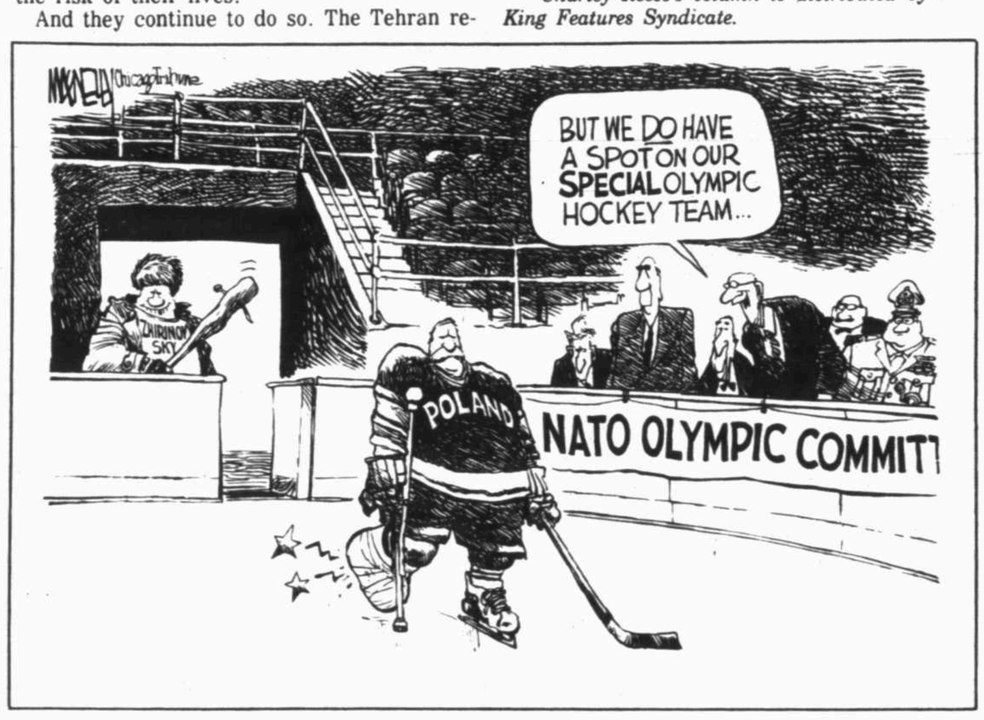

In the last few years, more than 150,000 Iranians have died at the hands of the Tehran regime, including those killed in the largely unreported war going on inside Iran between the resistance and the dictatorship.

The Mojahedin believe they are on the verge of victory, that the Tehran regime of President Hashemi Rafsanjani and Ayatollah Sayyed Ali Khamenei, Khomeini's successor, is on the ropes. More and more Iranians are openly defying the regime, and the economy is in a shambles, partly because oil prices are in the toilet.

May God make it so.

Clinton now faces plethora of heavy domestic issues

Fresh from a trip abroad focusing on foreign policy items, President Clinton finds domestic issues awaiting.

(On Jan.25), the president will give his annual State of the Union address. He will likely sum up his foreign policy achievements, in bolstering Russian President Boris Yeltsin, eradicating nuclear missiles in Ukraine and fostering Mideast peace (the latter, though, is a stretch).

But, Clinton didn't run on a foreign policy platform and will likely treat foreign affairs as secondary to:

- Jobs, the issue he ran on;
- Crime, America's greatest current worry.

Of course, Clinton will lay claim to an improved economy. Regardless of its merit, it goes with the turf. Presidents get the blame or credit on the economy however good or bad it may be.

Regarding crime, Clinton is likely to try to build support for his crime package in urging the House to approve the Senate-endorsed gun-control measures and his proposal to put 100,000 more police officers on America's streets.

In other matters, Clinton will probably highlight:

- Welfare-reform, including offering recipients more education and job training, but limiting most benefits to two years.
- Education reform, overhauling school standards and offering vocational training to those who complete high school but don't go on to college.
- Health care. This is likely to be the biggest imbroglio, with Democrats and Republicans divided even in their own parties. Any vote is likely to be close.

The State of the Union is Clinton's chance to shape his agenda and put the spin he wants on his programs, hoping to drum popular support.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Need for 'Reaganism' pops up all around U.S.

The Wall Street Journal proclaims, "Clarity may be returning to American politics" as new Republican governors in New Jersey and Virginia, plus New York City's new Republican mayor, enter the ring, swinging hard at government.

Murchison

New Jersey's Christie Whitman wants to cut income taxes and experiment with school vouchers. She calls her state's problems "the creation of government." In Virginia, George Allen Jr. says the way to limit government expansion is to require super-majority approval for tax increases. Mayor Rudolph Giuliani of New York hopes to privatize various government services.

Does this sound like Clintonism? Not a bit. It sounds — gasp! — like Reaganism, the ghost that big-government liberals can't exorcise, for all their bells, books and candles. Back so soon, the creed of the '80s? Maybe it never really went anywhere.

Liberals, since around the time Ronald Reagan bought his first legal beer, have castigated the critics of government as selfish, narrow-minded ideologues. Such insults have served the liberals' purpose well enough. That purpose, especially in times of widespread discontent, is to persuade the multitudes that plutocrats alone seek a more modest role for government.

Liberals caress, Pavarotti-like, the strains of their touching ballad about the unsheltered poor whom government protects from the ravages of the rich. Their newest push is to protect us all through government-mandated, employer-paid health care. Critics and opponents are reckoned as unfeeling skinflints.

This very line the liberals peddled throughout the 80s. It helped elect the Clintons. What's the matter now that the ungrateful voters of New Jersey, Virginia, and New York City elect government-bashers to office?

The matter is that government needs a good bashing, not to mention a drastic overhaul. The Reagan years were good, they just weren't long enough. The supposed Reagan revolution against government petered out in mid-course. New Jersey's problems are government-created, Christie Whitman says. Created, in other words, by high taxes and over-regulation and concomitant unfriendliness to business. Gov. Whitman's predecessor, Jim Florio, raised income taxes sharply to finance all the spending he wanted. New Jersey became a bad place to do business. The more business one did there, the more one paid. It has been much the same in New York City, with its sky-high taxes and officially pampered labor unions.

In none of which there is room for surprise. Government always operates thus. It creates nothing: not jobs, not wealth, not even ideas. These come from outside. Government merely inspects what's out there, in the shops and offices and factories, and decides who's entitled to what. This makes control of government a popular objective. Recipient groups want more of whatever they have; donors (i.e., taxpayers) want to keep more of what they've earned. If they can't do so in one location, slowly they'll drift elsewhere — as the case has been with New York and New Jersey.

Note here the cherished flexibility of individuals — to come and go as they please, to experiment in a business context, to propose and suggest, gamble and risk. It's a flexibility government lacks altogether. Government, like the French Army (a government enterprise, come to think of it), is always fighting the last war. Bureaucrats lack incentive to change anything; they might lose jobs, power or both. Certainly the interest groups protected by government don't want to lose their protection. Their interest is to fight creative change of the sort New Jersey and like venues are entering upon.

All the true fuddy-duddies in American life, the cave-persons, the Neanderthals, are in government; the daring folk are somewhere out there in the marketplace, dreaming up new ideas like school choice — remedies for government's failings and oversights.

Small wonder "Reaganism" — conceived of as the creed of trimmer government — doesn't go away. Why would it vanish when there's so much work for it?

Holiday spotlights unfinished work America must address

Modern America is beset by doubt — doubt that we can make it through the decade without going broke, doubt that our children will be properly educated, doubt that we can walk to our cars in a parking lot at night without being attacked.

When (Martin Luther) King galvanized the civil rights movement, he provided two lessons for all Americans.

The first is that social injustice is more than a matter of the law; it is a matter of fundamental morality. In seeking to change America, King did not reject democracy, he sought to expand it.

The second lesson? The idea that by acting together, by stressing similarities rather than differences, the American people will inevitably find the right way. Economic uncertainty, the quality of our schools, the outrage and heartbreak of crime — those concerns belong to us all regardless of race.

The birthday of Martin Luther King is an expression of optimism — an optimism that can be appreciated only in a climate of adversity. When the King holiday became law, some worried that it would become another excuse for people to have a picnic (the wrong time of year) or engage in the usual excesses of commercialism.

Fortunately, the solemnity of this holiday has not been diminished by time. This is a day for both hope and reflection. It should remain a day without distractions. We needed this holiday when it was created. We need it still — to remind us of the man whose life was cut short and, more importantly, to remind us of our unfinished business as a nation.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Orbison's 'Pretty Woman' stirs memories

So there was this girl. I was 14 and in love with her. I sat behind her in one of my classes. She used to wear those pretty sundresses, and I'd just stare at her back.

I had known her since the sixth grade. She was gangly and awkward back then. She seemed to list a bit to starboard when she walked, and I used to think her mother dressed her funny.

Grizzard

But she changed. It was an incredible metamorphosis, I remember thinking. Well, maybe I didn't know the term "metamorphosis" back then, but one day she seemed put together without much thought, and the next, every part of her went nicely with the others.

Somebody had gotten to her before I made my own move, though. He was bigger than me. He was a better athlete.

He was already shaving every day, and I was still a twice-a-week man. He had a friend who had a driver's license, and he could take the girl on double-dates to the drive-in.

I had no access to wheels that my mother didn't drive. There is no shame like having your mother drive you and your date to the theater and then pick you up afterward.

I had all but abandoned hope, but then I heard Roy Orbison sing that song, "Oh, Pretty Woman."

It was about a guy who saw a lady and fell for her.

But he had no chance. "Pretty woman, walk on by . . ."

I know how you feel, friend.

"But what's this I see . . .," he sang on. "Is she walkin' back to me?" I might have given up if Roy Orbison hadn't sung that song.

Roy Orbison certainly was no day at the beach to look at — and I wasn't either — but in the song, the pretty woman chose him.

I hung in there.

There was a church function one Saturday night, and the girl was there without her boyfriend.

I'm still not certain how it all came to pass, but we wound up on a hay wagon together. (There used to be things called "hayrides" back in another century. It was pretty exciting stuff in those days.)

I'm not sure if I kissed her first or if she kissed me. But I won't forget that kiss, ever.

Ten years later we said goodbye, but it had been a fine 10 years, full of more good times than bad, and if we hadn't rushed things, it might have lasted.

When the radio station I listen to began playing Roy Orbison songs after he died the other day, I heard "Pretty Woman" again and again, and each time, some old feelings came around. I even went back over some old regrets.

To leave something like music that stirs an emotion or makes a memory certainly isn't immortality, but it's about as close as we can come.

Roy Orbison was 52. That's not nearly as old as it used to be.

Principal rallies school to bring up test scores, morale

By Ellen Bernstein
Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI — Thirteen-year-old Javier Vasquez is almost too embarrassed to say it. His teachers at South Park Middle School are making learning more fun this year.

"I'm afraid to admit it," the student council president said sheepishly. "The other kids will call me a nerd."

Eighth-grader Vasquez is not alone in his praise for South Park educators. The 1,075 students have noticed a renewed vigor in the classroom since the arrival of Principal Bernadine Cervantes. The enthusiasm and boldness of the 33-year-old principal has of late made her the darling of Corpus Christi school board trustees.

She represents the new school of principal, an instructional leader as opposed to the traditional manager, said Sandra Lanier-Lerma, assistant superintendent for instruction and operations for the Corpus Christi Independent School District.

"She has brought us together," said Eva Morris, a sixth-grade math teacher. "People are recognizing us for the good things we're doing. We are happy teachers now and the kids are enjoying themselves."

Things weren't always that way. Cervantes' first week on the job in August could have portended gloom for the coming school year.

The state handed down a threat to close the school unless student achievement test scores improved within two years. South Park was one of five CCISD campuses classified by the Texas Education Agency as a low-performer. A school is considered low-performing if 20 percent or fewer students passed all sections of the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) given last spring. Only 18 percent of South Park eighth-graders passed the mathematics portion of the test.

"My first impression was, 'Oh, Lord,' " said Cervantes, who is the youngest principal and first woman to administer the school. She replaced retiring Principal O.B. Garcia. "Then I thought, 'This is great — a new principal, a new start, new programs, a new team.' "

She seized on the state's threat, using it as a rallying cry in a school beleaguered by low teacher morale, student brawling and parental apathy. Her no-one's-gonna-shut-us-down assault has, in the words of teachers, students and parents, generated a new sense of pride in the 37-year-old school.

Teachers and administrators set the spirited tone on the first day of school by meeting parents and students outside, welcoming them to the new South Park Middle School. Since then, enrollment in the PTA has more than tripled to 296, not an easy accomplishment in a low-income neighborhood where single-parent households predominate.

Now parents, in orange fluorescent vests, are patrolling the halls every day. "The kids' attitudes are changing, and parents are more involved," said PTA President Rudy Chavarria, a gauge operator who has two daughters at South Park.

Cervantes has taken CCISD's no-tolerance stance against gangs and drugs to tough as well as humorous extremes. She appropriated the colors of the most dominant local gang for the school colors. She added red to the black and white of South Park's mascot, the black knight.

She also uses the gang's overlapping logo to advertise the message "loving education." "We took their colors so when they wear red and black, we say, 'What school spirit,' " she said. "We're not threatened by it. We incorporate it into something positive."

The refusal to be threatened by gangs seems to be working. Cervantes and her assistants regularly break up suspicious looking groups and threaten to report anyone who breathes gang allegiances to CCISD officials. Students say that gangs are quiet on campus and shoving fights have disappeared altogether.

"Mrs. Cervantes has made it so I feel much more protected," Vasquez said.

"The gangs are subdued. We've taken a bit of their power away," Cervantes said.

Part of improving students' performance lies in taking pride in their surroundings, Cervantes said. To improve the school's public image, Cervantes helped organize a November Saturday of painting, planting and cleaning.

Artifacts may link mission with Alamo

By Ralph Winingham
Associated Press

MENARD — A handful of artifacts found in an alfalfa field here may be the historic thread connecting an ill-fated Spanish mission a few miles east of here with the battle of the Alamo in San Antonio, according to an archeological expert.

But the chance that the thread will link the legendary treasure taken by Jim Bowie from Mission Santa Cruz de San Saba to a well at the Alamo, about 150 miles to the southeast, is slim, said Ann Fox, director of the archeology laboratory at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

"If there is anything in the well, this is where it would have come from," Fox said Friday as she took a break from sifting for artifacts at a site here. Legend has it that Bowie dumped the treasure in the well at the Alamo where he and other Texans died in a battle with Mexicans.

"I don't expect to find any gold," she said.

An attempt to locate artifacts in the well located in front of the Alamo has been placed on hold until the sponsoring organization posts a $75,000 performance bond. Fox then turned her attention from that project to the site here.

Fox and other researchers sponsored by Texas Tech University in Lubbock were more interested in history than in finding gold as they excitedly discussed the significance of discovering artifacts that could locate the lost mission.

Established in 1757 by Spanish priests who were trying to convert Apache Indians to Christianity, the Mission Santa Cruz de San Saba was burned to the ground 10 months later by more than 2,000 Commanches and other Indians who were enemies of the Apaches.

At least eight of the 35 people at the mission, including two priests, were killed in the attack. Any salvageable materials remaining after the raid were removed by Spanish soldiers within months of the incident and the site's location has been a mystery for more than a century.

The discovery of artifacts brought to the surface in September, after the field was plowed, led archeologists to conduct a dig on property owned by the Otis Lyckman family.

The excavation by about 15 students and other researchers using shovels and hand trowels began Jan. 7 and ended on Sunday.

Holes about two feet deep dot the alfalfa field, which has been marked by red flags to identify locations where metal detectors indicated the presence of metallic items.

Grant Hall, assistant professor of anthropology at Texas Tech, said, "This was the site of the first contact between Europeans and Apaches in Texas."

Historian Kay Hindes, who lives in Jourdanton, Texas, was a member of the group that found the first artifacts in the field. She said Indians destroyed many items in the deadly raid.

"We know some of the artifacts have been exposed since 1941. Every time the field was plowed, something else was turned up," she said.

Among the items found so far are a religious medallion, musket balls, numerous nails and pieces of clay used to fill in the cracks of the mission walls.

Funding for the week-long operation was provided through the Texas Historical Foundation, Hall said. He expects to apply for money to pay for a larger excavation of the area to determine the layout of the mission.

Father searches for peace deep in frozen ground

By Ian Fisher
N.Y. Times News Service

RAQUETTE LAKE, N.Y. — In a basin of snow and thick trees, Robert Wood dropped his shovel by his side and leaned against a small pine Friday afternoon. He rested a few seconds, then bent again to the frozen earth, stopping for a moment to twist off a branch that had scraped his head.

"Somewhere up here my daughter is beneath the ground and I don't know exactly where," he said. "Based on the information we have, our belief is that she is here. We realize that could be false. But she's my daughter. I'm certainly not going to be sitting at home letting other people do the work."

If Wood was disheartened that the 13-day search for his daughter, Sara Anne, had turned up nothing, he did not show it.

He stood quiet and determined, even after shoveling in zero-degree weather since 8 a.m. beside 111 state troopers, Air Force and Army Reserve members and other volunteers deep in the Adirondack Mountains.

All were eager to end the search for his 12-year-old daughter, who disappeared last August in Litchfield, N.Y.

Since Jan. 10, volunteers have sifted through mounds of snow, pine needles, pebbles and dirt around the abandoned lumber road where the suspect in Sara's disappearance, Lewis S. Lent Jr., told police he had buried her.

By Friday, they had finished digging through more than two of the three acres on which investigators have focused.

It is painful work: on Sunday, the temperature was 42 degrees below zero. Workers shoveled sometimes for only 15 minutes, then scrambled up a ravine to warm up in a green canvas tent with two portable heaters.

State police say they will continue until they find Sara's remains or are convinced they have the wrong spot.

"Somebody's daughter is missing," said Maj. Kenneth J. Cook, commander of Troop B in Raybrook, who is heading the search. "It's a very easy decision. My only wish is we could end it here."

But there is no end in sight to the work off Sagamore Road in Raquette Lake, a town of 150 winter residents, 100 miles over snow-packed roads northwest of Albany.

Shovelful by shovelful, the workers have cleared almost 50 inches of snow and then two feet of dirt around pine trees so thick it is hard to see beyond a few hundred feet. They have turned up animal bones, plastic diapers and metal bands, but no sign of the girl's body.

Chris Johnson, a 31-year-old Air Force staff sergeant from Fort Griffiss, stood shivering beside a fire after nearly six hours of shoveling snow and hauling it on blue tarps for sifting. He had requested the assignment, and said that as he dug he thought of his own children, ages 2 and 7, as well as Wood, who was always working close by.

"I have an awful lot of respect for that man," he said, pointing down an incline to where Wood was laboring among two dozen other men. "He's up here every day with the guys. For him to accept what he's had to accept probably takes a lot out of a man. It takes a lot."

Cook said Lent, 43, a drifter who lived most recently in North Adams, Mass., had never said specifically that he buried Sara at Raquette Lake.

After his arrest on Jan. 7, he drew a map with landmarks that included where he parked his gray 1983 Ford van, and gave general directions like "5 to 10 minutes south of Blue Mountain Lake" and "100 yards up a hiking trail and up a small clearing," Cook said.

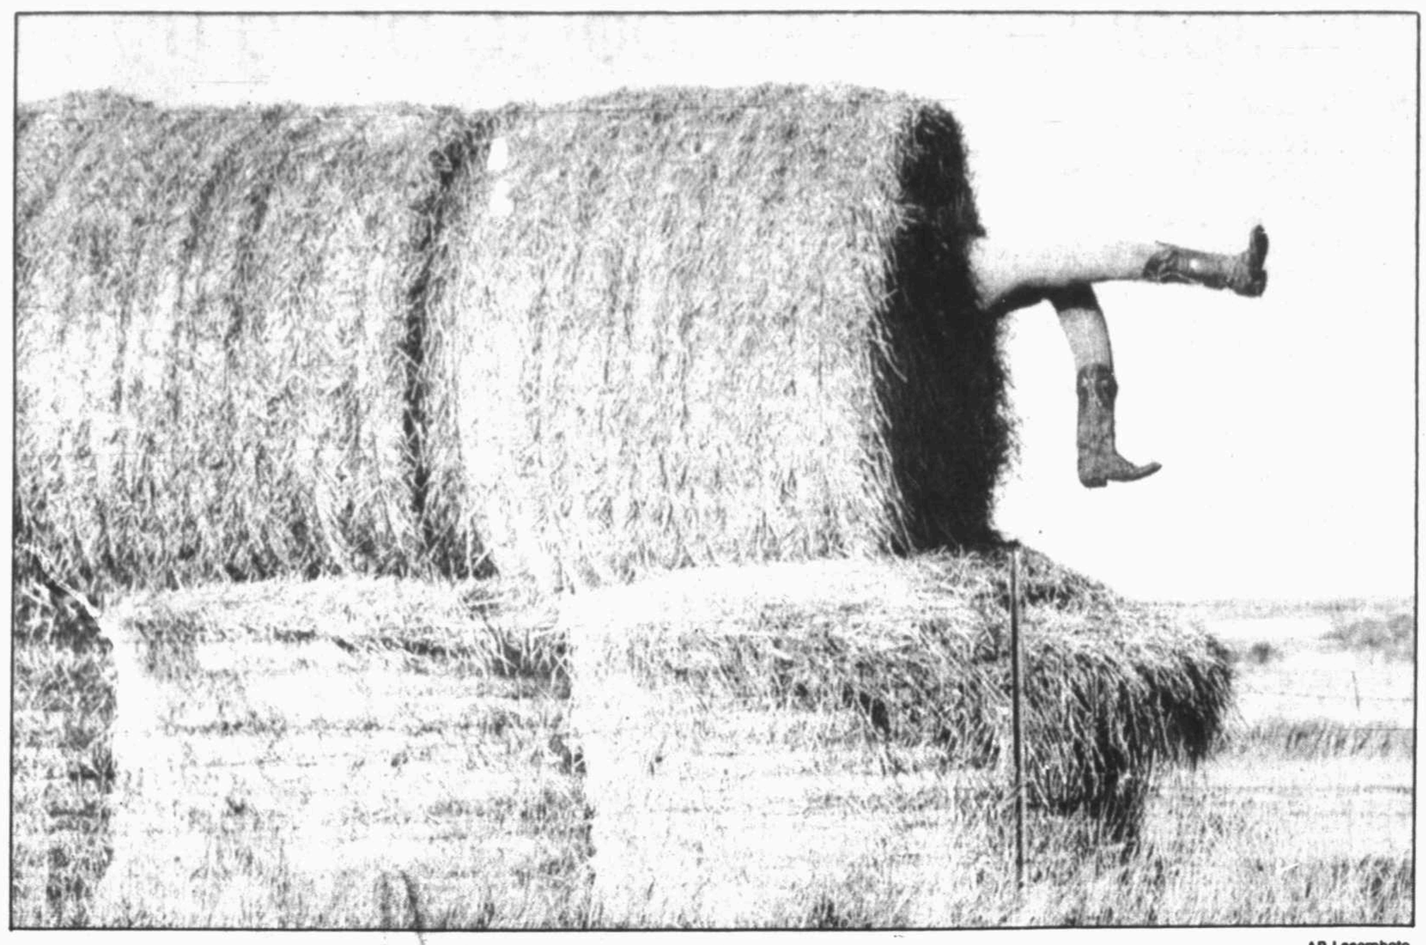

After studying maps and surveying the spot by helicopter, Cook said only one place made sense: a secluded former lumber road 2.9 miles down Sagamore Road, off Route 28. He said he had no doubt the spot was the one Lent described.

"There is absolutely no other spot within miles that fits that description," he said.

Even after finding this site, there was the enormous obstacle of finding Sara in an area where 30 inches of snow had already fallen and temperatures were dangerously low. Technology has not helped: last week, the FBI brought in radar ground-imaging machines that proved useless in sloping terrain studded with rocks and roots.

Digging at the slow pace of archaeologists has been the only solution. Every shovelful of snow is inspected twice, Cook said, once as the workers dig it out and again on the tarps. Earthmovers then remove dirt in 6-inch layers.

Before and after the digging, trained dogs sniff for the scent of human remains.

Government calls for safe seafood checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The seafood industry will have to track fish from boat to dinner plate under new regulations that aim to prevent contamination and tens of thousands of food poisonings.

The Food and Drug Administration regulations unveiled Friday are the first step of Clinton administration plans to make food safer and may provide a model for preventing tainted meat from reaching the public.

But a consumer group said the rules aren't enough because the FDA doesn't have the authority to adequately enforce them.

"We applaud them for taking this step," said Caroline Smith DeWaal of Public Voice. "But without more frequent inspections of seafood plants, it's going to look a lot like an industry honor system."

The regulations put the responsibility on seafood processors to ensure that the seafood they buy comes from clean waters, and that it is properly cleaned, handled and chilled until it heads to grocery stores and restaurants.

Strengthened retail regulations will ensure seafood doesn't become contaminated in the store, Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala said Friday.

"These safety measures represent preventive health at its best," she said. "This is moving ... into the 21st century."

FDA Commissioner David Kessler denied that the rules constitute an honor system.

"These are regulations; they have the force of law," he said.

The regulations go into effect one year after a 90-day public comment period.

About 9,000 Americans die every year from food poisoning, but no one knows how many are caused by tainted fish. Although experts say most seafood is safe, Kessler estimated some 30,000 to 60,000 people may be sickened by it each year.

Calls for regulations increased in November when the government warned against eating contaminated oysters from two big Louisiana beds that sickened more than 100 people.

The FDA has about 350 inspectors to monitor some 5,000 seafood processing plants. They only get a snapshot of what happens there, but have found unsanitary equipment, improper freezers and improper pasteurization methods at some plants, Kessler said.

Chemical pollution, viruses and bacteria lurk not only in the water, but in the boats and plants where the seafood is handled. Some fish contain natural toxins. Simply looking at them won't uncover the danger, and sampling them in stores is too late to protect consumers.

The new regulations call for scientifically checking safety at every stop seafood makes from the boat to the table, under a system called Hazard Analysis Critical Control Point inspections. Plants will have to prove they've tested fish for pollution or other contaminants and handled it properly. Those that don't will be subject to prosecution, Kessler said.

The $35 billion industry, which expects to spend $80 million implementing the system, welcomed the rules.

"HACCP is the technology of the future for food inspection," said Lee Weddig of the National Fisheries Institute, a trade group.

Vice President Al Gore said the new system will replace "a one-size-fits-all regulation with a tailored system of preventive controls ... that will improve food safety."

But the consumer group Public Voice said Congress needs to give the FDA more enforcement authority. The agency must be able to stop harvesting in contaminated waters, now the province of state governments, and to shut down an unsanitary plant or seize tainted fish without going to court first, Smith DeWaal said.

Day-care kidnapping

AUSTIN — Authorities have filed kidnapping charges against a Travis County day-care provider who apparently disappeared with the 3-month-old son of a client.

In what Sheriff Terry Keel termed a "bizarre" case, charges were filed Sunday against Cathy Lynn Henderson, 37, who allegedly disappeared Friday with Brandon Baugh.

Deputies think Brandon, the son of Eryn and Melissa Baugh, might have been hidden in the trunk of Ms. Henderson's car.

"It's puzzling. . . . It doesn't make any sense," Keel said. "We are concerned about the child's safety."

Deputies were getting help from the FBI and the Texas Rangers in the search for Ms. Henderson, Travis County sheriff's department spokesman Andy Saenz said.

Ms. Henderson looked after Brandon and the Baughs' 2-year-old daughter, Megan, authorities said.

Texas gets contract

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has awarded a $9.7 million contract for the construction of a facility that will house the new National Research Laboratory at Pantex near Amarillo.

The contract for the facility, to be completed by mid-1996, was announced Monday by Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo. It was awarded to Centric-Jones of Lakewood, Colo.

"This is a great indication that plans for the laboratory will continue to proceed smoothly in the coming months," Sarpalius said.

The building will house both the lab and the high-explosives synthesis activities at Pantex, the nation's assembly and disassembly site for nuclear warheads.

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary last year announced that Pantex would obtain the lab, which will study peaceful uses for plutonium.

Drugs, AIDS bring foreigners to city

■ Health officials from around globe visit Midland to learn more about U.S. efforts to combat drug abuse, spread of AIDS.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A group of experts from countries around the world took time out from their study of Midland anti-drug abuse and AIDS programs to speak about how these problems affect their own countries.

AIDS and drug abuse manifested themselves in different ways in each of five countries the visitors represented. There are, however, certain patterns of similarity in most of the countries, the visitors explained.

Drug abuse and AIDS are being looked at collectively because the two problems are related in that the incidence of AIDS is often higher in those people who abuse drugs, said Jerry Lee Jones, president of the Midland Business Center.

Midland Business Center personnel are coordinating the tour on a local basis. The overall program is coordinated from Washington, D.C., by the Academy for Educational Development, which is subcontracted by the U.S. Information Agency, Jones explained.

After arriving in Washington, D.C., earlier this month, the visitors have been studying programs in that city and in Atlanta, Ga.

From there the larger group of 16 visitors split into three teams, traveling to either Midland, Shreveport, La., or Hot Springs, Ark.

The Midland team is composed of Dr. Redha Ali Abdulla Ebrahim of the Ministry of Health in Bahrain, Dr. Tarmo Kariis of the Ministry of Social Affairs in Estonia, Ms. Sibongile Jack of the Township AIDS Program in South Africa, Sangworn Sombatmai of the Department of Psychiatry in Thailand, Dr. Vashtee Ramoutar of the National Substance Abuse Treatment Center in Trinidad and U.S. Escort Officer Ms. Alison Baker.

"These are probably the leading people in their countries," Jones said. The team will be in Midland until Wednesday. After Midland, the three groups will meet in Phoenix and will travel to San Francisco and Los Angeles before returning to their home countries.

On Monday, the team visited Greenwood Elemen-

Woman gets time in bank fraud case

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

A Midland woman who pleaded guilty to defrauding a local bank of more than $33,000 was sentenced in U.S. District Court Monday.

Susan M. Kalcevic, 39, was sentenced to 150 days in a halfway house and five years of supervised release and ordered to pay restitution. She was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton.

Ms. Kalcevic pleaded guilty in November to an information filed by the FBI. An information is an allegation filed by a federal law enforcement agency. She chose to plead guilty before her case was presented to the grand jury.

Ms. Kalcevic defrauded approximately $33,000 from Texas National Bank between November 1991 and July 1993.

According to FBI information, Ms. Kalcevic was an employee of NCI, Inc., where her duties included bookkeeping, check writing and filling out deposit slips for royalty checks.

An FBI agent said she had a "scheme . . . to obtain moneys, funds, credits and assets" from Texas National Bank by forging her boss' signature on falsely endorsed checks payable to him.

Her boss was the one authorized to sign checks on the business accout and the bank, the FBI agent said.

Ex-county clerk files grievance against ex-boss

By Ed Todd

Marsha Smith, a former deputy clerk in the Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector's Office, lodged a grievance against her ex-boss on Monday when she appeared before Midland County commissioners.

Ten days ago, she was fired from her $20,000-a-year job and was only five months away from being vested in the county's retirement plan.

"I feel like I was done wrong," Miss Smith, 29, said following the open hearing.

Miss Smith, who was hired as a file clerk in 1982 by Frances Shuffield, now retired as the Midland County tax assessor-collector, subsequently was promoted to tax deputy.

But last year, after Mrs. Shuffield's successor, Tax Assessor-Collector

War memorial brings metamorphosis

■ John Philbeck's feelings about Vietnam War change as he works toward establishment of memorial in West Texas.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

While driving on the Loop one day in 1989, John Philbeck heard a public service announcement on the radio that caught his attention. A small group of Vietnam veterans were planning their first fund-raiser — a telethon — to raise money for a memorial honoring area men who died in the war.

."I thought it was something that should have been done a long time ago," Philbeck, 43, said. "So I called in and volunteered to man phones."

Toward the end of the telethon in which pledges were taken over the telephone, Philbeck made a $1,000 contribution. His interest apparently prompted an invitation to attend committee meetings for the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Philbeck went.

"Being from that era made me want to do something to help," he said.

Philbeck recalled the impact of watching violent television footage of the Vietnam war in 1968. He recalled historic events, the impact of the media, and public sentiments of

ATF agents relive Waco battle during cult trial

SAN ANTONIO — Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents injured in the Feb. 28 raid on the Branch Davidian compound near Waco relived their gunbattle with sect members for jurors Monday, as testimony continued in the murder-conspiracy case of 11 members of the religious group.

Gerald Petrilli, an 18-year veteran of the bureau, said he was shot in both arms while he was in an area near the front door of Mount Carmel, as the

Despite his wounds, Petrilli testified, he tried vainly to organize a rescue of a fallen comrade and then climbed to the compound rooftops during a ceasefire to help recover the bodies of two agents who died in the gunbattle.

Petrilli said he first heard gunfire when he was about a half-dozen steps from the cattle trailer that brought him and about 30 other agents to Mount Carmel. He ran toward the front door area, where he was supposed to be, according to plan.

He told jurors that, according to the practiced plan, there should have been 13 or 14 agents in front of him, but there weren't.

VISITORS: Health questions loom

tary to study their DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program, in which police officers teach students about the dangers of drug abuse.

Although Bahrain has a population of only about 500,000, the great numbers of citizens from other countries pose problems for the Ministry of Health, Dr. Ebrahim said. Some of these workers from other countries are either infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, or become infected while in the country.

A goverment program regularly tests these non-Bahranian workers, sending them back to their home countries when they are confirmed to carry a contagious disease.

Bahrain has only about 200 HIV cases at one time, but almost all of these are related to intravenous drug abuse, Dr. Ebrahim said. The country has strong penalties for those found guilty of distributing drugs, but the laws are not as severe for those simply using the drugs, he said.

The problem of HIV infection has reached alarming levels in the South African city of Soweto, said Ms. Jack. "There are 20,000 women infected with HIV in Soweto alone," she said.

Most of the incidence of HIV/AIDS in that country is related to heterosexual contact and not drug use, she said.

Injectable drugs have never been popular in Trinidad, said Dr. Ramoutar. Although AIDS is still closely related to drug use in that island country, she said. There is a problem with promiscuity and prostitution among drug users that is spreading the AIDS virus.

Efforts to stem this spread are being hampered because of a pervading "macho" mindset in the male population, Dr. Ramoutar said. This is hampering government efforts to promote the use of condoms as an AIDS preventative measure.

Thailand has been rid of much of its ancient opium poppy farming. This has been accomplished through cooperation between the Thai and U.S. governments, said Sombatmai.

Drug use, however, is still a problem in that country, but is not closely related to HIV infection, Sombatmai said. Most of the new HIV cases are from heterosexual contact. The incidents of the disease among intravenous drug users in that country has even dropped in recent years, he said.

Formerly part of the Soviet Union, the country of Estonia is only 45 square kilometers, Dr. Kariis said. In the country's population of 1.5 million people, there are only about 32 cases of HIV infection, with these being about equally divided into homosexual and heterosexual cases, he said.

There is no established linkage between this group and the country's 1,000 drug abusers, he said. Alcohol abuse is a much more widespread problem in Estonia, he said.

Dr. Kariis hopes to learn ways to keep these numbers small and to address each problem in the most economical ways.

Dr. Ramoutar was impressed with the family-oriented programs to address these problems in the U.S. and hopes to institute similar programs in Trinidad, she said.

Differences have been noticed in the amount of drug abuse in relation to the various religions of Thailand, Sombatmai said. Augmenting government efforts to help lower the incidence of drug abuse and HIV infection are efforts by religious groups. Temples of the Buddhist and other faiths have provided various programs to help those afflicted with HIV or drug addiction.

Today the team will study how AIDS and drug abuse are related and what measures have been taken in Midland to address both issues. Later today, the effect of AIDS and drug abuse in the public schools will be studied.

The U.S. Information Agency schedules one or two of these international study exchanges each year, Jones said. Each exchange covers a different topic, although last year's topic was substance abuse, he explained.

The Midland Business Center has been involved in the program for about five years and has hosted three teams in the city.

JOB: Ex-county worker feels betrayed

(From 1B)

Kathy Reeves, took office, Miss Smith said that she suffered a series of demotions.

"Basically, she was unhappy with me as her supervisor," Mrs. Reeves said following the hearing. "I think it is really unfortunate that Marsha did not do well in her job. I terminated her on Jan. 14 for sub-standard job performance."

Mrs. Reeves said that it was "never made real clear to me why she wanted the hearing." However, Miss Smith said in her complaint to the commissioners to "please consider reinstating me in the Tax Office" or to "consider me for any county position for which I am qualified."

However, Midland County Commissioner Win Brown noted that each department head within county government "has a right to hire and to fire. The commissioners can't do a thing. They (the department heads) are autonomous."

Miss Smith, who said she had worked as Mrs. Reeves's assistant when Mrs. Reeves was the Tax Office's computer operator under Mrs. Shuffield's administration, surmised that she "was a threat to her (Mrs. Reeves), because we did the same job. They relied on me" when Mrs. Reeves was not available.

"I think this is a personal thing that goes way back," said Miss Smith, who noted that she received "no written warning, no notice," of her "separation" prior to Jan. 14. "I have dedicated my whole life to the service of the public of Midland County."

In December 1992, Mrs. Shuffield wrote a "to-whom-it-may-concern" letter on Miss Smith's behalf shortly before Mrs. Shuffield retired from the office which Mrs. Reeves now runs.

In that letter, Mrs. Shuffield, who had hired Miss Smith out of high school in 1982, wrote that Miss Smith "is pleasant, competent and works well with many taxpayers."

However, Mrs. Reeves said that she and Miss Smith "see things very differently" in the workplace.

"My main concern is those tax dollars that are used to fund the salary" of each employee, Mrs. Reeves said.

QUEST: Philbeck joins Army Reserves during Vietnam War

the 1960s and early 1970s.

"Things were changing, attitudes were changing," he said.

In 1970, Philbeck, who came from Tulsa, Okla., was attending Northeast State College in Tahlequah, Okla. It appeared inevitable that he would be drafted.

He joined the U.S. Army Reserves. He attended basic training at Fort Polk in Leesville, La. and remained in the reserves for five years.

Philbeck did well in the reserves and considered going regular Army. At the same time, he didn't want to go to Vietnam. The image of the war, and America's involvement, had changed — for the worse — over the years.

After receiving a degree in marketing/business administration in 1973 and leaving the reserves two years later, Philbeck moved to Midland in 1976.

Philbeck had no idea that years later he would become immersed in a project to honor Vietnam veterans killed in the war. Or that he would become president of the committee.

Since becoming involved in the memorial mission, Philbeck's interest has grown and changed profoundly.

"Probably the original reason I got involved was a certain amount of guilt that I didn't go over (to Vietnam) and serve," he said.

Nevertheless, Philbeck said, he was touched by the war.

"That war really tore this country apart . . . Everyone was really in Vietnam," he said.

He thought he could relate his guilt to the guilt of some of the soldiers who fought in Vietnam

But he realized he would never understand what the Americans who had gone overseas did.

"As I became more involved and talked to the vets I felt very distant," Philbeck said.

"When voted president I felt unqualified because I was not a combat veteran just a Vietnam-era veteran," he said.

But during the course of his involvement, Philbeck's perspective changed.

"I went from feelings of guilt to a slight sense of morbid curiosity. From there it evolved to a sympathetic understanding of what those guys went though to a commitment," he said.

"I felt predestined to do what I'm doing now," he said.

Philbeck's involvement in the memorial cause has gone beyond just helping raise money.

He recalled his involvement in bringing the replica of the famed Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall in Washington, D.C., to Resthaven Cemetery in January 1991.

He recalled watching a lone man — apparently a Vietnam veteran — suddenly appear before the wall, find a name and break down crying.

"It dawned on me then, that (the wall) was a real healing. That's when my commitment turned to compassion," he said.

These days, Philbeck is anxious to have the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial honoring 203 men from the area who were killed in the war.

He wants a memorial for the soldiers who served and the family and friends who lost loved ones in Vietnam.

And he wants people to understand and not forget.

"The main thing I would like for this to accomplish is eliminate a lot of the confusion between the war and the warrior," he said. "This was a situation where these guys had to do what they had to do, these guys depended on each other, fought for each other and died for each other."

The memorial committee has raised $303,000 and pending collection of pledges, construction is set to begin.

Philbeck points out that although he is the president of the committee and in the public eye as a key figure in pursuing memorial, many others have helped reach the goal.

Groundbreaking for the memorial — to be located on Wright Drive near the Confederate Air Force at Midland International Airport — is set for late March with completion by July or August.

The memorial will consist of a Texas-shaped piece of sunset-red granite inscribed with the names of 203 veterans from West Texas who were killed or listed as missing in action. The site will also include a 40-foot granite Lone Star inset in the ground and a masonry wall set behind the memorial.

After the memorial is complete, Philbeck said he will have more time to dedicate to his work. He runs a home-business as a tailor.

He also divides his schedule to coach a club soccer team and spend time with his family. Philbeck and his wife Beverley have two children, Tim, 12, and Kelly, 9.

CULT: Federal agents attempt to aid their fallen comrades

wrong," said Patrilli, who was shot at least once and probably twice as he neared the fence that fronts the building.

Asked by prosecutors if he tried to move from his position after he was shot, Petrilli said he did when he heard fellow agent Kenny King pleading for help.

"I was trying to coordinate a rescue of him . . . to hopefully save Kenny King before, before he died," Petrilli said, adding, however, that he stopped his efforts at the request of the agents around him because every time he moved he was drawing heavy fire from the compound.

King eventually was rescued.

Petrilli said he saw shadows in some windows, but that he was never able to identify anyone. He said he only fired his weapon at windows from which he believed gunfire was coming.

"I didn't want to fire randomly due to the tremendous fear there were women and children inside who were innocent," Petrilli testified.

Under cross-examination, Petrilli repeated his assertion, adding that he told his agents to conserve their ammunition and to be sure they didn't fire unless they could identify an opening from where bullets were coming.

"I was reluctant to have agents fire haphazardly," Petrilli said. Asked whether agents shot even though they couldn't see specific faces, Petrilli said agents fired back for their own safety.

"If there were women or children there (that agents couldn't see), we're sorry for that," he continued.

Petrilli went on to describe how he led a party of agents back to the compound to recover dead agents after the final cease-fire was in effect, despite some concern those inside the compound could open fire again. An earlier cease-fire had been broken.

As they were walking away, Petrilli said, he turned back and saw an agent lying on a rooftop. He said he commented aloud,"We . . . need to go back and get our dead. I just turned and went back in the direction of the compound," adding that six or eight agents turned back with him.

"I climbed the ladder (agents used to get on the roof at the beginning of the raid attempt) . . . I rolled this agent over. He had been lying on his stomach. He had a .12-gauge shotgun clutched in his hand. He was dead."

Later, however, agent Timothy Gaborie, the ATF medic at the scene, testified he and other agents were able to resuscitate the agent, who was Conway LeBleu of New Orleans, after Petrilli and the other agents brought him down.

LeBleu, however, died. He was one of four agents who were killed that day.

Petrilli then described recovering the body of agent Todd McKeenhan, also of New Orleans. Petrilli said he couldn't help take the bodies down because of his injuries.

Agent Larry Shiver walked into the courtroom, limping significantly. He said he is still on leave because of his extensive injuries and at one point describing his wound by putting his thumbs and forefingers together to show a circle about four to six inches in diameter.

Shiver said he was one of the first people off the cattle trailer that brought him to Mount Carmel, and he said he heard gunfire almost immediately and saw bullets hitting around his feet. He ran for cover, and he said he saw a sight blade for an AR-15 or M-16 rifle protruding from one window.

Shiver said he saw a person wearing a red T-shirt with a yellow emblem on it in one of the windows.

"He'd come out and fire a burst and then go back where you couldn't see him," Shiver said. "I kinda timed the man.

"I took a shot or several shots . . . he either went back in the room or was hit," Shiver said.

Hundreds of collider workers join jobless

By Hollace Weiner
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Kirk Stifle, a mechanical engineer with a master's degree and mastery of the new-age field of cryogenics, joined the ranks of the unemployed Monday when he and several hundred colleagues were laid off from the Superconducting Super Collider in Waxahachie.

"I'm open to move anywhere," said Stifle, a 26-year-old father of two preschoolers. "You can't get too depressed about it. Ask me eight months from now how I feel if I haven't found a job."

Stifle and his well-educated co-workers are losing their jobs to congressional budget cuts. In October, Congress axed the $11 billion collider, a jumbo underground atom smasher that employed 2,250 people and was 20 percent complete.

Additional layoffs, slated for Feb. 9, March 8 and March 15, will leave about 960 workers on the payroll over the next year to help wind down the giant science project, officials said.

"Reality started to sink in Friday, when people started wheeling out stuff," said James Wade, an accelerator systems manager who is still on the job and who served on an employee severance committee.

"You want to say goodbye and best wishes and good luck and we'll be seeing you . . . but a lot of these people don't know where they are going," he said in a telephone interview from his home in Sunnyvale.

Susan Montgomery, 30, a chemical engineer who lives in DeSoto, was laid off Monday. She said she's fortunate that she got a job offer 10 days ago from an area firm. She has two more job interviews in the offing and will follow through with those leads before starting a new position.

"I don't know if I pushed the right buttons or maybe they needed a chemical engineer," Montgomery said. "I received a very generous offer. More than 10 percent over what I was making before. It came as a surprise to me. Maybe a reason I've been more fortunate is there aren't as many women (engineers) out there trying."

Montgomery also noted that the collider employed fewer chemical engineers like her.

Report: Many Texas prison beds are empty

By Clay Robison
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — The Texas comptroller's office has determined that as many as 6,000 state prison beds are empty while many county jails are dangerously overcrowded with state convicts, sources familiar with a criminal justice audit told the Houston Chronicle Monday.

The findings, part of Comptroller John Sharp's review of the prison system, come while Texas county officials are demanding relief from the state because of a a backlog of 29,000 convicted felons in county jails. Gov. Ann Richards and other state leaders recently announced a more than $300 million emergency plan for accelerating the construction of 15,000 new prison beds this year.

"I'm hearing that a lot of these (empty) cells have been converted to broom closets and other things," said prison board member Gilberto Hinojosa who added that he could not confirm the figures.

Richards responded to the findings by directing the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to cooperate with the comptroller in "maximizing occupancy in the prison system."

Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary, said Richards was still awaiting a report from prison officials and could not confirm the figures in Sharp's report.

"Comptroller Sharp has determined that a substantial number of existing beds may be available for use to alleviate the jail overcrowding situation," Richards said in a letter to Board of Criminal Justice Chairman Carol Vance. "These beds could become available through modifications of certain management practices at the department."

"If there are 6,000 (empty) beds, I think the board would be very, very upset about it," Hinojosa said.

The average player, when in search of tricks, often looks no further than a finesse. The expert seeks ways to avoid one. The difference in philosophies can produce spectacularly divergent approaches.

North's hand improved considerably after South opened one spade, and the invitational jump raise was fully merited. South had a fair amount in reserve for proceeding to game.

West led the queen of hearts and declarer was quite happy with dummy. There were nine fast tricks available and South, a fair player, saw that a successful diamond finesse would deliver the fulfilling trick. After taking the ace of hearts and drawing trumps, ending on the table, a diamond to the queen lost to the king. Declarer eventually lost another diamond, a heart and a club for down one.

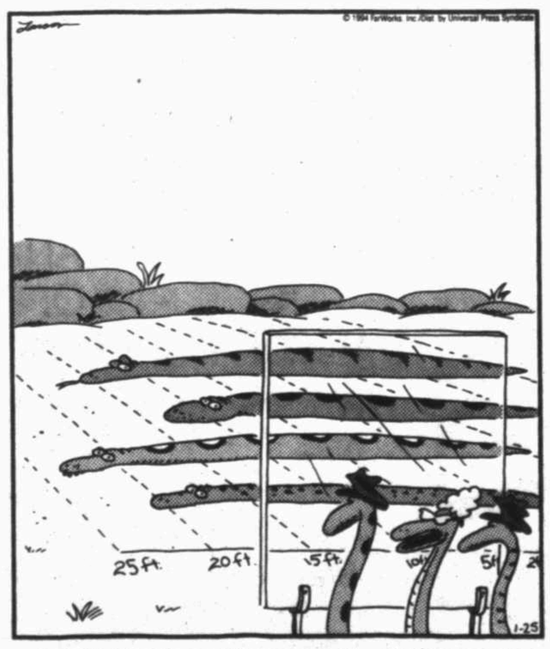

Better technique could have produced an almost sure-trick line for the contract. That can be done via an endplay and to accomplish it East must be kept off lead to prevent a diamond being pushed through the major tenace in declarer's hand.

The first step is to allow the queen of hearts to hold the first trick. East cannot rise with the king because that sets up a finesse position against the jack. After winning the heart continuation, declarer enters dummy with a trump and leads a club, inserting the jack when East follows low. West wins and returns, say, a club. Declarer takes the ace, crosses to the table with a trump and ruffs a heart. Another trump is the entry to lead the ten of hearts and, when East shows out, declarer discards a diamond. West wins, but must either give declarer a ruff-and-sluff by leading a club, or else play a diamond into declarer's A Q. Either way, the second diamond loser vanishes.

Papa got a brand new bridge, but will have to wait for plaque

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo. — Papa got a brand new bridge. But he'll have to wait for the plaque to go with it.

Town residents voted last year to honor the Godfather of Soul by renaming a bridge north of town the James Brown Soul Center of the Universe Bridge.

But, four months later, there's still no dedication plaque noting the new name. Town officials say it would be fruitless to put one up; it would be just a souvenir waiting to be swiped.

"If we put one up it would not last 24 hours," said City Manager Harvey Rose. "We felt we'd end up supplying original signs for college kids' dorm rooms or serious rhythm-and-blues fans' homes. We'll put one up — but not now."

LAS VEGAS — Entertainer George Burns, who turned 98 Thursday, received a belated birthday gift: a letter from the president.

"Your comedy has been a joy to millions," President Clinton wrote. "You are an American original."

Burns has been celebrating his birthday with four soldout shows at Caesars Palace. He was presented with the letter after Saturday's performance by singer Phyllis McGuire.

Burns has signed to perform at Caesars on his 100th birthday, Jan. 20, 1996.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Cable channel VH-1 is launching a weekly country music program, spiced with a bit of Tritt.

Country singer Travis Tritt will be host of "VH-1 Country Countdown," starting Feb. 12. The show will be taped in cities along Tritt's national tour.

Tritt, whose most recent hit is a remake of the Eagles' "Take It Easy," will introduce videos from clubs and other sights in each city. He sometimes will be joined by other country artists.

The first episode will be shot at Tritt's home in Atlanta.

"I view this as a great opportunity to reach new people with country music," Tritt said Monday.

NEW YORK — New York's new mayor dived into the Great Diva Debate — and, like a good politician, landed dead center.

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, interviewed Saturday on the "Opera Fanatic" show on WKCR-FM, disputed host Stefan Zucker's assertion that an opera fan cannot like both Maria Callas and Renata Tebaldi.

"It's very easy to like both," Giuliani said. Callas' voice wasn't beautiful but she was an unmatched dramatic actress, the mayor said, while Tebaldi had a voice that was "lyrical, lovely, luscious."

Giuliani was similarly judicious in not picking between tenors Jussi Bjoerling and Franco Corelli.

On other topics, the mayor said the Metropolitan Opera staged some "daring productions" but sometimes with disappointing casts; said he never booed at a performance, though at times it might have been appropriate; and said he has fallen asleep "several times during the 'Ring' operas."

Giuliani also saw a future in opera for his son, Andrew, who caught the attention of cameras by mimicking him during the inaugural address. Giuliani said Andrew "has a flair for drama" and might "take naturally to the operatic stage."

Actress Claire Bloom and Philip Roth, the intellectual version of Christie Brinkley and Billy Joel, have separated, says the New York Observer.

Bloom and Roth, who lived together in Connecticut, were companions for nearly 20 years, spouses for three. "They are two extraordinary people that we love and admire," journalist Francine du Plessix Gray, a friend and neighbor, told the Observer. "Our hearts are broken."

It is said that the breakup was initiated by Roth, who had been depressed over the lack of commercial success of last year's novel, "Operation Shylock." "He was devastated," said a friend.

Another friend said that the trouble between Bloom and Roth goes back more than 10 years. "And there's always a girl. This was a dance set up from the beginning."

New flashes:

■ Washingtonian magazine says that when former aides approached Dan Quayle to find out whether he's planning to run for the presidency in 1996, he hesitated and Marilyn Quayle answered for him: "We're not going to tell you."

■ Aging "Dynasty" star Linda Evans, who used to hawk lemonade, is taking to the airwaves in infomercials hawking a new line of skin care products, Primage by Sevinor.

■ Bill Clinton got a C in conduct in second grade, reports Nickelodeon magazine, because when the teacher asked questions, he used to yell out the answers before the other kids got a chance to answer.

DEAR ABBY

Donors are never too old to give others gift of life

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: "Puzzled in North Hollywood" wrote to say that when she told her husband that she wanted to donate her organs in the event of an accidental death, he said, "Who would want 53-year-old kidneys, eyes, etc.?"

Van Buren

Thank you, Abby, for encouraging her to donate her organs anyway. I am the recipient of a 53-year-old woman's liver — after having waited well over a year to receive a suitable organ. I have gone from a certain, imminent death to a full and productive life. It has been eight months since my transplant, and I am in perfect health.

I will be forever grateful to that 53-year-old woman and her family who didn't think her organs were too old. I am signing my name, but because of the policy of confidentiality of the national transplant organization, please do not disclose my name or location. — GRATEFUL ORGAN RECIPIENT

DEAR GRATEFUL: Thank you for reaffirming that no one is too old to be a donor.

Readers, I repeat: The expense of donating is NOT borne by the donor's family or estate.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have fought over this for years, and we can't seem to find a solution that will satisfy both of us. I like to have the house warm in the winter — about 72 degrees. My husband says it's much too hot for him — so he turns the heat down to about 68 to 70.

Abby, my face is cold and I do not like to wear three sweaters and heavy socks in the house, which I have to do in order to be comfortable after he starts fooling with the thermostat.

He shuts the heat off at night and it goes down to 52 degrees. Then he jumps up in the morning and turns it up to 70. (It takes about an hour for the temperature to reach 70 — and when it does, he turns it down to 60, or 65 if it's really cold outside.)

I can't stand to be cold. Meanwhile, my husband starts to sweat at the drop of a hat. I turn the heat up and he turns it down. It's the only thing we ever fight about. We've been married 52 years. — FIGHTING IN OREGON

DEAR FIGHTING: Have you considered portable room heaters? If not, please do. It may save your marriage. Since you prefer to be toasty warm, wear woolen socks and sweaters in deference to your husband, who prefers a cooler house. (It's easier for you to bundle up than it is for him to find comfort in an overheated room.) Meanwhile, if this is the only thing you ever fight about, count your blessings.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to "Sue in Minnesota." She wrote an upbeat letter about finding love while using a wheelchair.

My husband and I just celebrated our fifth wedding anniversary. We are both strong-willed and independent. We are also a two-wheelchair family. Both my husband and I had been previously married to able-bodied individuals who were not able to handle the unique challenges of life "on the roll."

Hats off and good luck to "Sue in Minnesota." May she find the happiness in her relationship that we have found in ours. — HOWARD AND MELISSA, ROY, UTAH

AT WIT'S END

Trying to lose weight? Just let millions know

By Erma Bombeck

It's D-Day again. The diet frenzy happens every January. Throughout the years we have watched Lynn Redgrave rip off her fat dress, Ann Jillian hyperventilate over her milkshake and Shari Belafonte relate how she pigs out on chocolate and loses 10 pounds. This season we are going to follow Kathleen Sullivan down the yellow brick caloric road to a size 3.

Bombeck

It's enough to make a person put down her dressing sandwich.

I want to believe all of them, but I'm sorry, the real key to dieting isn't discipline or having a sensible diet or even exercising regularly. It's motivation.

That's why I'm convinced the only diet that will work for me is the Oprah Winfrey diet. It's simple. You hire a personal trainer to come in and help you work out twice a day, hire a chef to prepare every bite of low-fat food that goes into your body, and — here's the big factor — have your own talk show on television where you are stalked by two cameras five days a week and millions of viewers search to see if your stomach protrudes when your jacket opens.

That's the diet I want.

But I am fast running out of motivations. It used to be the prom, then my wedding, finally a reunion. But these are one-shot deals. I'd get my weight down for the event, then blimp out to where I couldn't fit into Orson Welles' cape.

Every dieter needs a little help from his enemies to become motivated. If the tabloids ran a picture of me with my head buried in a bowl of guacamole, I'd diet. If Joan Rivers took off on me like she did Liz Taylor, pointing out she went through the Golden Arches and got stuck, I'd do it. If I complained to the police that I was being stalked and they pointed out it was my legs rubbing together, I'd change my ways.

In Hollywood, it's easy. When you put on extra weight, you can always tell someone you're trying out for a fat part. But in the real world, you are accountable for every pound.

The harsh reality is that if I am ever to succeed in dieting, I must get my own television show. I can interview. I can have fun with children. I can ask questions on a game show. I can even sell Crock Pots on a shopping network.

Please, God . . . don't let it be a cooking show. That's too cruel.

'Dr. Pepper' hits home runs with jalapenos

By Pamela Coleman
Associated Press

WESLACO — Dr. Ben Villalon gets fired up about hot peppers.

A professor of pepper breeding and sugar cane pathology at the Texas A&M Agricultural Experiment Station in Weslaco, Villalon has been dubbed "Dr. Pepper," by his co-workers, for his work developing a milder jalapeno.

Pepper products of all sorts compete for space in his office — bottles and jars of hot sauce, sliced jalapenos, Tabasco and arthritis rubs made with peppers line shelves, and photographs and posters clutter the walls. The headline of one framed news clipping reads, "Jalapeno may become household word."

You don't say.

"This little item has become popular," Villalon says, smiling.

Indeed, it has. Jalapenos are a mainstay of Mexican dishes and more, adding spice to everything from nachos to pizza.

But the spicy fruit — at least the variety that we're familiar with today — was not always so popular.

Peppers, Villalon notes, have been around as long as corn — one of the first crops — and can be traced back to 5,000 B.C. In all, there are 20 to 30 pepper species, all native to this area.

But years ago, jalapeno peppers grown in the Rio Grande Valley were too hot for most palates. The environmental stress of hot South Texas summers makes hot peppers their fieriest.

"In 1950s, H-E-B tried to grow and pickle them (jalapenos), but they'd get too hot," Villalon said.

That's when Villalon, a 1964 Texas A&M graduate who also has master's and doctoral degrees from A&M, was fresh out of research work in Florida tomato fields. He went to work to improve Texas pepper crops, aiming to develop multiple disease and insect resistant peppers.

"During that time, pepper growers were being clobbered with viruses," he said.

Villalon realized the only way to solve the pepper problem was through breeding. So he headed to Weslaco and holed up in a research laboratory to learn more about the 50 types of viruses that attack peppers.

"We've developed genetic resistance to eight," including the tobacco etch virus, Villalon said.

In 1971, Villalon began crossing seeds from popular peppers, resistant to tobacco etch and certain insects. While interbreeding bell and serrano peppers without regard to shape, he came up with a mild jalapeno.

The TAM Mild Jalapeno 1, the virus-resistant pepper used in an array of products, including Pace Picante Sauce, made the industry, Villalon said.

"We scored a home run on that one," Villalon said. "TAM mild — that's the mainstay for the jalapeno industry."

The homer turned into a grand slam for the salsa industry.

"In the old days, they used Mexican jalapenos, but they were too hot. So they diluted them with tomatoes — until we developed the TAM Mild Jalapeno 1," Villalon said.

"The key is 'mild,' " he said.

Blisters on the sides of a pepper's placental wall — not a pepper's seeds, as many believe — hold heat. And people eating peppers have different heat thresholds. But those thresholds change as people grow used to eating them.

Take Pace as an example. It introduced its mild picante sauce in New York, and the product cleared shelves. The second year, Pace introduced medium picante sauce alongside the mild, and it slowly began selling. Now, even hot Pace sells in New York.

"It's addictive," Villalon said.

That hot ingredient in jalapenos is capsaicin. One part in a trillion creates a detectable sensation, according to the Pickle Packers International Inc. in St. Charles, Ill. When a person eats a hot pepper, the body produces endorphins (a natural protein with pain-killing properties). Eventually, endorphins build up the body's tolerance to capsaicin.

And as tolerances build across the country, salsa sales skyrocket. In 1991, salsa sales for the first time outpaced the ketchup industry. And Pace, the biggest producer of salsas, has led the pack.

"It's a big industry in this country," Villalon said. In fact, pickled peppers pump more than a billion dollars into the North American economy, according to Pickle Packers International.

And the TAM jalapeno was partly responsible.

"The primary product that we use is the TAM jalapeno," said Lou Rasplicka, vice president of technology at Pace.

"We were looking for something not so much extremely mild as consistent in heat," Rasplicka said. "This provided it for us, and for lots of other people, too. It was really the forerunner of getting into milder picante sauces and being consistent and predictable in heat."

Today, Pace, which has more than 27 percent of the market nationally, uses about 35 million pounds of jalapenos a year.

"We sell a lot," Rasplicka said. "We are the market leader. We sell more Mexican sauces than anyone else in the world."

Rasplicka said Villalon's work on peppers has been good for processors as well as farmers.

"Ben has really helped the processors across the country, and with that jalapeno, has been a major contributor to the success of the Mexican sauce and salsa business," he said.

Besides heat, peppers pack nutritional surprises. They're an excellent source of vitamin C, providing three times more of the vitamin than citrus. They're also loaded with vitamin A and beta-carotene, but low in calories — just seven calories per ounce.

"Peppers are the number one spice in the world," Villalon said.

And jalapenos are not just for cooking anymore. They're turning up in pharmacies and getting brewed in beers.

At the research center where Villalon works, plots are divided into rows for each pepper type. In all, there are two acres of breeding lines and four greenhouses. The scientists work with 500 breeding lines, twice each year.

"This is where the action starts," Villalon said, inside one of the humid buildings.

Greyhound group promotes concept of humane gambling

DALLAS (AP) — A greyhound adoption group is attempting to persuade gamblers to spend their money at casinos, rather than at race tracks.

The Greyhound Protection League in Palo Alto, Calif., has been trying to encourage gamblers to put their money elsewhere with posters mailed around the country.

The poster, featuring a forlorn-looking greyhound, was designed by Chandler/Woolley Advertising in Austin. It says unadopted greyhounds face destruction or are sent to research labs.

"We try to promote the concept of humane gambling," said Susan Netboy, director of the Greyhound Protection League. "We know casino gambling, Indian gaming, and riverboat gambling are killing dog racing, and we're adding fuel to the fire.

"People who gamble have a choice, but greyhounds do not," she said.

Greyhound industry officials last week belittled the attempt.

Jacques Triplett, general manager of the Corpus Christi Greyhound Track, denied the group's allegations and said his track works to find homes for dogs after their racing careers.

MHS, Lee rematch set

■ The Bulldogs and Rebels battle for city pride and playoff berths while the Midland Lee girls try to turn season around against district leader Midland High.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The very fact that Midland High is playing Midland Lee in a girl-boy doubleheader at 6:15 and 8 p.m. today at Chaparral Center is reason enough to get the old juices flowing, but when you add playoff implications, this could turn out to be a feeding frenzy through shark infested waters.

"This is just another Midland-Lee game, and if you're a basketball fan, you'd have to be about half crazy if you didn't want to see it," is the way Midland High coach Jack Stephenson put it.

Well, here are the facts. The MHS and Lee boys are in a three-way tie for second place with Abilene High with identical 4-2 records after one half of play in District 4-5A, two games behind front running Abilene Cooper, who saw its star player (6-9 Andrae Patterson) injured Friday night in a game against Lee. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that there are only three playoff berths available and four teams in the hunt.

Tonight's boys winner will certainly have the proverbial "leg up" going down the stretch. And you want drama? MHS' win over Lee was 54-53 in overtime in the first meeting.

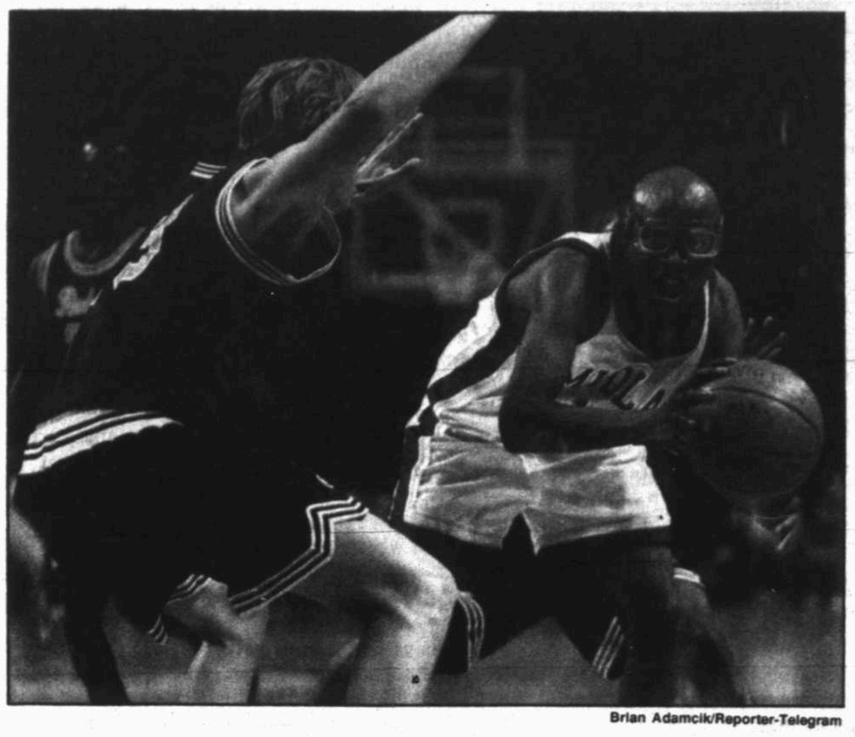

"Anytime two of the top four teams in the district meet, it's an important game," said Lee coach Jon House, who saw his Rebels lose to Midland High in the first meeting when leading scorer Sean Low spent much of the game on the bench in foul trouble.

It's a much easier story for the girls. Midland High has already secured a state playoff berth at 8-0 and the Lady Rebels are on the verge of extinction at 1-6. MHS pounded Lee 74-38 in the first meeting.

Both the Lee and MHS boys are coming off losses (Lee to Cooper and MHS to Abilene High). So the old momentum factor is also present for tonight.

"Actually, this might be a good time for us to be playing Midland High,"

Chaps turn over old leaf with 105-83 win

■ Midland College forces 19 New Mexico Military turnovers in the first 12 minutes to spark win.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

Midland College found out that a good cure-all for an anemic offensive is a strong dose of vitamin "D" — as in defense.

The Chaps received a clean bill of health and are back in the Western Junior College Athletic race with a 105-83 win over New Mexico Military Institute Monday night at Chaparral Center.

Midland College, now 19-2 on the year and 2-2 in league play, snapped a two-game losing streak by looking like the Chap team that reeled off 18 straight wins to start the season with a fullcourt press that forced 19 NMMI turnovers in the first 12 minutes of the game as MC raced out to 24-12 lead and never looked back.

"I was pleased with the way we played, we played hard and that's our goal," said Steve Green. "The guards did a better job. We got a lot of deflections, Kirk Ford got one or two deflections off the inbound pass. If we don't get our hands on some passes then we have trouble."

Both teams waded through an endless stream of fouls. Fifty-six fouls (34 by Midland) slowed the tempo of the game. New Mexico Military stayed in the game by connecting on 15-of-24 free throws in the second half. The Broncos made just nine field goals in the first half on 14 attempts.

"That's pathetic," said New Mexico Military coach Reggie Franklin as he shook his head in dismay.

"This is the second time we played them this season and we didn't give a good effort," said Franklin, who drops to 0-6 against MC since departing two-and-a-half seasons ago. "My best guard

Midland High held its annual football banquet at Midland Center Monday night, giving out top honors for the 1993 season.

Defensive lineman Brian Danhof led the way, landing two major awards during the night's festivities. Danhof won the Theresa Kapproth Award for being the senior with the highest grade point average. He was also named as the defensive lineman of the year.

Danhof posted a 5.176 grade point average, ranking No. 17 in his senior class. He was named as an honorable mention choice on the all-district team as a defensive lineman, and he also par-

Aikman should play Sunday despite some memory loss

By Denne H. Freeman

ATLANTA — Troy Aikman said he remembered who he was about 4 a.m. Monday, about a half day after he had been knocked goofy by the San Francisco 49ers.

"All I remember was the pregame introduction and the pass Alvin Harper dropped," the Dallas Cowboys quarterback said Monday night after the team arrived in Atlanta for the Super Bowl rematch with Buffalo.

Aikman, the MVP of last year's Super Bowl, suffered a mild concussion when he was kneed in the helmet early in the third period of Sunday's 38-21 NFC title victory over San Francisco. He spent the night in a local hospital.

"My mom called me while I was in there and said it was an Abbott and Costello routine," Aikman said. "But I started regaining my senses about 4 a.m. I'm fine now. I don't look fine because I haven't slept in 20 hours."

Aikman said he will take his regular snaps when the team resumes practice Wednesday.

"My neck is still a little sore, but I'll be OK by Sunday," said Aikman, who against San Francisco completed 14 of 18 passes for 177 yards and two touchdowns.

Aikman, who also was knocked out for five minutes by the Phoenix Cardinals during his rookie season, said it was the first time a hit caused him to

Does the doctor really know best?

Midland High and Midland Lee basketball teams are going to have to quit going to the same doctor.

Williamson

It seems that the doctor is prescribing a Tuesday night victory for all four teams. He says that will cure most of the January ailments that abound.

On the surface, that sounds like wise advice. The problem is that this is Midland High vs. Midland Lee night at Chaparral Center where another huge crowd will gather to see if the teams are following the doctor's orders.

That means the doctor's prescription will work on only half the teams involved since two of the four must lose. In other words, the doctor's remedy will make half of his patients well enough to swing from the Chaparral rafters. The other half will be sicker than a June bug in January. And all those people will be there to watch the swinging and the beaning.

Of course, each of the four patients have different ailments and each case must be taken individually.

The Midland High girls only needed a mild checkup. After all, they have enough battles in hand to assure the fact that they will live to play again after the regular season. The war (the district championship) is still being waged, however, and that probably won't be decided until Armaggedon when they play Odessa High on foreign hardwood a week from now.

In other words, the MHS girls are a healthy lot. A win tonight over Lee just keeps the machinery well oiled.

The Lee girls, on the other hand, are terminal patients. The doctor says that they are down to two chances at survival. Either two losses by Lee or two wins by San Angelo (or a combination of a Lee loss and a San Angelo win) will dig the grave and there won't be life after regular season. That makes tonight a pretty serious matter to deal with.

The MHS and Lee boys, however, are in the same sick bed. Both own 4-2 district records, the identical mark as Abilene High. One of those teams won't live past regular season, so any loss is critical at this stage of the season, although not terminal at this point. The doctor notes that a close eye must be kept on both patients.

The doctor also says that MHS could best stand to lose tonight, considering the fact that the Bulldogs must leave its own house only twice down the stretch to nearby Odessa while Lee will have to take the sick body into the winter cold to places like San Angelo and Abilene twice down the stretch.

It didn't take the doctor long to determine that Lee would most benefit from a win tonight, but he admitted that both patients were trying to steal each other's medicine prior to game time. Both want to get well quick. It's no fun playing with the back to the wall while owning a doctor that makes medication only for winners. Someone said his name was Kivorkian, or something like that.

At any rate, the patients will hit the floor tonight (probably literally), trying to carry out doctor's orders. And we (the fans) love life and death struggles. We'll be there — with bottles of medicine in hand.

Lee, MHS set for first match

■ Midland's and Lee's girls meet for the first time in District 5-5A soccer action.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Today's girls soccer match between Midland High and Midland Lee may be a first-ever event. But the participants have a decades old rivalry to draw on for inspiration.

The teams face off for their first-ever District 5-5A game at 4:30 p.m. at Lee. With it girls soccer can officially be added to the tradition of cross-town district rivalries between the two schools. The boys teams also begin league play against each other today at Midland High at 4:30.

Because it's the school's first district game and the rivalry is already there, Mildand's girls should be ready, Lady Bulldog coach Scott Hodkinson said.

"They know it's something special playing the girls across town," Hodkinson said. "I don't have to do much of a psyche-up job."

Both teams have easily surpassed their win-totals of last year, the first season either school played girls soccer. Lee moved its record to 4-1 in the Wichita Falls' Ice Bowl tournament last weekend. It was 3-8 last year. Midland won two of three games in the same tourney to go 4-1. It was 2-10 last season.

Lee coach Van Gravitt said the most important thing about the game today is the fact that it starts district play. But he concedes the match will have other implications.

"Especially with soccer the way it is in Midland because these girls have played club soccer (on the same team) for a long time. For a lot of them it's the first time they'll play against each other," Gravitt said.

Said Hodkinson: "They have a lot of girls that know about our girls and vice versa so I know it's going to be a very intense game.,"

Lee junior forward Stephenie Smith scored all five of her teams' goals in a 1-0 win over Fort Worth Paschal and a 4-2 win over Coppell Saturday. That got Hodkison's attention.

"They did look very good this last game. We're definitely afraid of number 10 (Smith)," Hodkinson said.

Midland has its own high-scoring forward in sophomore Jacque Ketter. She has seven goals this year.

"They got Jacque Ketter at center-forward which I think helped them a lot when the made that move," Gravitt said. "They've got a great goalie (Tina Rodriquez) which is always an edge."

Both boys teams have gotten off to good starts. Midland High is 5-0 and Lee is 5-1. Midland is a district favorite, and Lee is considered to have a good chance to make the playoffs.

"It's always tough to start district with your rival," Lee coach Eddie Bull said. "But we're going to try to step up and meet the challenge. We're not conceding anything. If played on paper (the game's) a little one-sided on their side."

Japan's Date reaches semifinals

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Cheered by fans with red and white Japanese flags painted on their faces, Kimiko Date turned back a third-set rally by Conchita Martinez on Tuesday to reach the semifinals of the Australian Open.

■ Australian Open

Date won 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, taking advantage of repeated backhand errors by the women's third seed. Date, the No. 10 seed, is the second Japanese woman to reach the semifinals of a Grand Slam tournament.

She took a 4-0 lead in the final set, then lost three straight games. But Martinez lost her touch again, missing several easy shots while dropping the last three games.

Date, who next plays the winner of the quarterfinal between No. 1 Steffi Graf and No. 16 Lindsay Davenport, was backed by supporters holding signs in Japanese and one in English sa ing, "You Can Do It!" Some fans bowed to her after the victory.

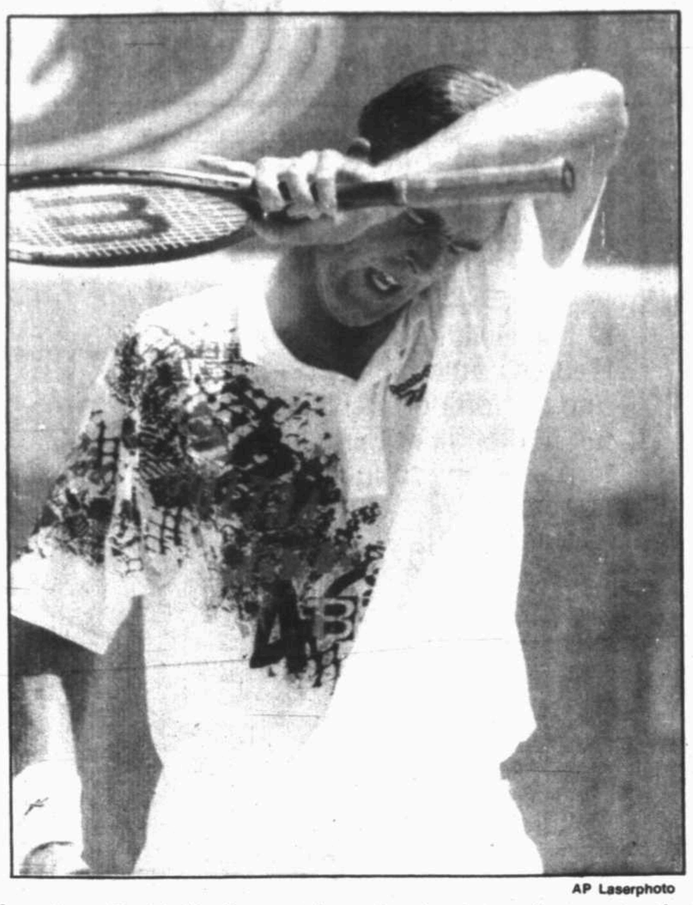

The other quarterfinal matchups were No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario vs. No. 8 Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere and No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini vs. No. 5 Jana Novotna.

The men finished their fourth-round matches Monday. While No. 9 Todd Martin kept cool in the 102-degree afternoon heat, MaliVai Washington warmed up in the cool evening air.

The two Americans withstood broken toenails, nose bleeds and unforced errors, but both won and advanced to a quarterfinal showdown.

Martin, covering his head and legs with iced towels during changeovers, beat Xavier Daufresne 6-7 (3-7), 7-6 (7-5), 6-3, 6-3 in a languid match that lasted 3 hours, 24 minutes.

"After the first seven or eight games, it was just a matter of staying cool and dealing with the heat as well as I possibly could," said Martin, who lost seven pounds during the match and had a nose bleed he blamed on the blazing sun. "Our games both went down a bit, and that was attributable to the heat."

American Todd Martin survives the heat to advance to the quarterfinals in men's singles in early matches Monday.

Washington reached his first Grand Slam quarterfinal by outlasting Mats Wilander in five error-filled sets. He overcame early sloppiness and rallied to win 6-7 (7-9), 6-2, 6-7 (3-7), 6-4, 6-1 in a center-court battle of attrition that lasted four hours.

"I think I was up and down throughout the match. There were times, especially in the two tiebreakers, where I was making a lot of errors," Washington said. "It's really satisfying to be able to grind through a match like that."

No. 4 Stefan Edberg also advanced to the quarterfinals with a 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Swedish compatriot Lars Jonsson. It is the 10th straight time Edberg, a two-time champion, has reached the Australian Open quarters.

Edberg's next opponent will be No. 6 Thomas Muster, who rubbed ice on his face during changeovers while defeating No. 12 Alexander Volkov 6-3, 6-3, 6-2.

The other men's quarterfinals were determined Sunday. Top-seeded Pete Sampras will face No. 10 Magnus Gustafsson and No. 3 Jim Courier, seeking his third straight Australian Open title, will play No. 5 Goran Ivanisevic.

Martin trailed Daufresne by a set and was losing 5-2 in the second set when he realized he was running out of time.

"I knew if I lost that set I'd probably be done. I didn't feel very good at the time and I knew I wouldn't feel very good in a fifth set," said Martin, who broke the nail on the big toe of each foot because his sneakers were sticking to the court.

By the time Washington defeated Wilander, the temperatures had dropped to 66 degrees.

"If we were out there in the heat, there's no way we could have gone five sets. Someone would have keeled over," Washington said. "If it was in the heat, one of us would have died in the third or fourth set."

Washington overcame his early errors with a variety of shots — he mixed drop shots, sharply angled volleys and slashing groundstrokes with lobs, including one that went about 100 feet into the air.

Washington waved to friends in the stands and twice punched his fist in the air after Wilander's backhand sailed wide on match point.

Wilander, who won the Australian Open three times in the 1980s, is making a comeback from two years of self-imposed tennis exile.

"It's a good feeling to know I can still play with good players," he said. "But I'm not beating them, so it's not such a good feeling."

The Australian Open, played on Rebound Ace hard courts, is sponsored by Ford.

AIKMAN: Remembers Harper's pass miscue

(From 1C)

forget a game.

"They say I ran a play after I was hit, but I don't remember it," Aikman said. "It was a draw to Emmitt Smith. That proves I can run that play in my sleep."

Teammates said Aikman walked up to center Mark Stepnoski, who was lost for the season with a knee injury a month ago, and asked him: "Why aren't you in the game?"

"I've been taking some kidding about that," Aikman said.

Aikman said a hit like he received from Dennis Brown is a player's biggest fear.

"It happened to me so fast and sudden I didn't have a chance to fear it," he said. "I was out but still walking around. It was scary."

But by Monday, everything was back to normal for Aikman.

"Things are looking up," he said. "I remember the flight here this afternoon. I got to see some highlights of the game. It looked like we played pretty good.

"I guess I remember the pass to Harper because he dropped it and I thought it was going to be a touchdown. But it was the only play from the game I remember."

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson will be glad to have Aikman back.

"We need him," Johnson said. "We started putting this team together in 1989 and anytime you have a piece of the puzzle missing it's not the same team."

If Aikman isn't healthy, Bernie Kosar will replace him.

Kosar, Dallas' $1 million mid-season insurance policy, was 5 of 9 for 83 yards and a touchdown against San Francisco.

Neither Kosar nor Smith was with the Cowboys when Buffalo beat them 13-10 in the second game of the season. Smith was waiting to sign a contract and Kosar was still with Cleveland.

They'll both be there Sunday for the first back-to-back rematch in Super Bowl history. The Cowboys beat Buffalo 52-17 in last year's game. Dallas will be making its record seventh appearance. The Cowboys are 3-3.

"This has been a difficult year starting out 0-2 without Emmitt Smith and with Troy's injury in the middle of the season," Johnson said. "But our team has responded. They deserve everything they receive. Going to the Super Bowl two years in a row is a result of a lot of hard work."

REMATCH: Playoff implications for boys game

(From 1C)

Lee's House said. "We've got to bounce back and we know our kids will be up for the game simply because it's Midland High we're playing. However, our kids have been resilient all year long and I don't think the loss to Cooper will effect them. We're going to forget about that loss in a hurry and get ready for this one."

Stephenson said, "I like our chances right now, win or lose this one. I think the team is playing really well right now and the schedule favors us down the stretch with both Abilene teams and San Angelo at our gym. Still, there is no question that a win against Lee would really put us in great shape. Most kids go out and play as hard as they can, unless they are 0-6, or something like that, but it is a fact that they are always up when you play against Lee."

There is a feeling that tonight's matchup might be a different kind of game than the first meeting. In the first game, MHS held the foul troubled Low to only six points, 14 below his average, while Lee's Joel Skaggs had a career night 20 points. Lee on the other hand held MHS' Jumon Hailey to a mere nine points and Hailey has since gone on to average over 20 points per game since that outing. Donald Carter had only 12 points and he is coming off a big 31-point effort against Abilene High.

"I don't know if we can expect Low to be on the bench so much as the last game," Stephenson said, "so it could be a different kind of game."

"We had some people like Skaggs step up for us the last time we played Midland High, but I don't like Sean sitting over there with me," House said. "That's not much fun. Midland High has some players who are scoring well and we will have to deal with that."

And it may sound like MHS girls coach Jim Raughton can sit back and laugh at the whole spectacle since his team is in the playoffs. But don't bet on it.

"The way the playoffs are set up, it's a tremendous advantage to win the district championship since you get a first round bye," Raughton said. "We need to do that, and to do that, we need to beat the teams we play until its clinched."

Lee's un-magic number for 4-5A playoff elimination is now two. That is any two combinations of Lee losses or San Angelo wins will eliminate the Lady Rebels.

"I really haven't thought about that," said Lee coach Elise Kail. "We're just trying to get things turned around. Maybe, the Midland High-Lee rivalry will have a bearing in this game, because in the first game, our girls just weren't there. It wasn't a factor. However, we're playing like we were during our winning streak early in the season, and maybe we'll show up this time."

In the first meeting, the Lady Bulldogs placed three players in double figures with Amy Alcala scoring 20, Julie Chancellor with 17 and Elaine Rogers with 10. Lee's Krissy Woodard was the only Lee girl in double figures with 14 points. Chancellor is coming off a career high 35 points against Abilene High.

And maybe the fans will show up this time, too. The first doubleheader drew more than 3,000 to Chaparral Center. Another large crowd is again expected. And why shouldn't there be excitement? It's Midland High vs. Midland Lee, and there is a lot at stake — even much more than city pride.

Bills considering curfew to improve chances

ATLANTA (AP) — Buffalo Bills coach Marv Levy is considering a curfew for his players during Super Bowl week.

"I have a player's committee, which I'll confer with tomorrow," Levy said Monday as the Bills arrived at their Atlanta hotel for Sunday's game against the Dallas Cowboys. "We'll talk about it. I'd like to get their reaction and their experience in this area."

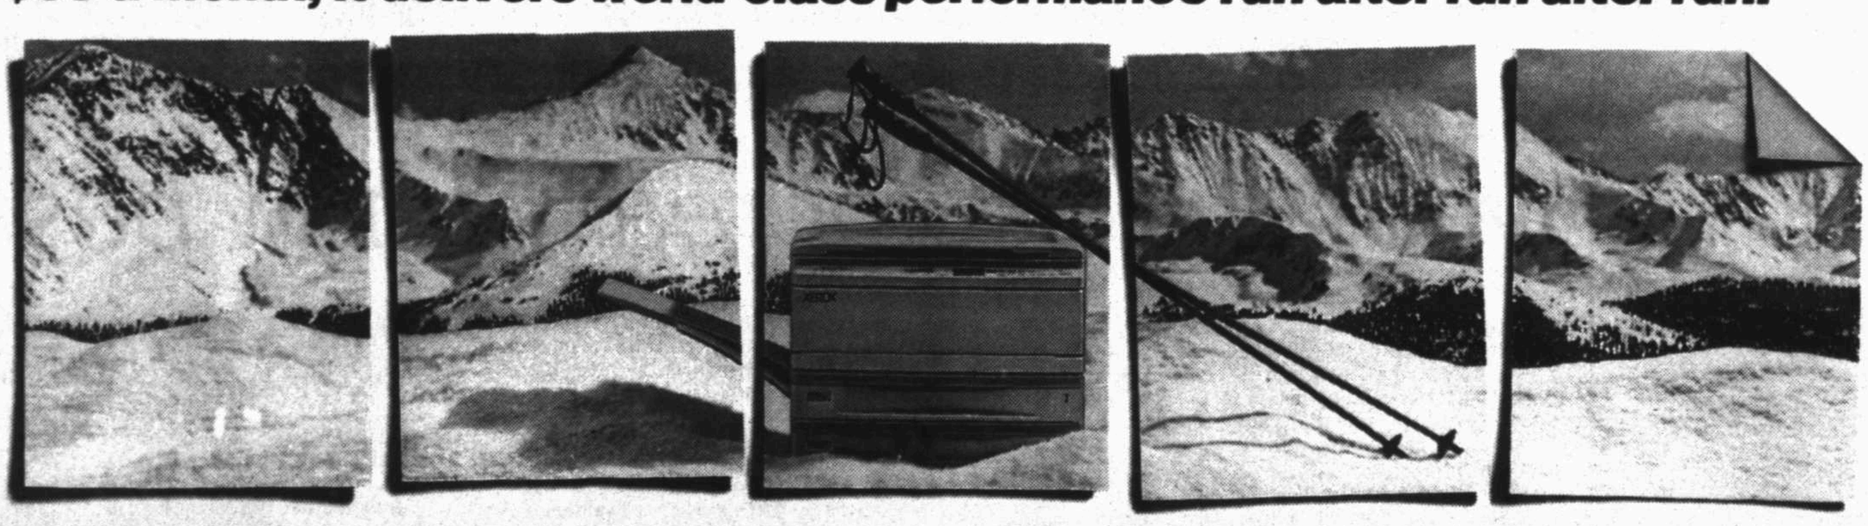

A week before the Bills' 52-17 loss to Dallas in last year's Super Bowl, linebacker Darryl Talley reportedly scuffled with Magic Johnson's bodyguard during a party at a Los Angeles nightclub.

Talley wouldn't say whether he felt a curfew was needed.

"I'm not going to get into curfews because that's up to Marv and whatever he says is going to happen," he said.

Roy Coats, who had just under 1,000 yards rushing on the season and was an all-district selection at running back as a junior, was the top offensive back of the year for MHS. The special teams award went to senior punter Jeremy Hernandez, a three-year starter who was an all-district selection. Coats and Hernandez were the only two first team all-district selections. Hernandez also was an honorable mention all-state pick.

The top receiver was senior Roy Ratliff, an honorable mention all-district pick. Jeff Coffman, another senior who made second team all-district, was named as the top offensive lineman.

The top linebacker was senior Chad Stanley while the top secondary player was senior Dwight Allison.

The Fighting Bulldog Award, which goes to the player that displays the best example of being a Bulldog, went to senior Damian Sotelo.

The featured speaker was Jeff Scurran of Tucson, Ariz., who has taken two of his Sabino High School teams to the Arizona state football championship.

The 1993 MHS football team finished the season with an 0-10 record, but was awarded a victory over Odessa Permian after the season when Permian had to forfeit its victory over MHS for playing an ineligible player, leaving the Bulldogs at 1-9.

Scurran set the tone for the banquet by focusing on the positive things players carry from a season of football whether the record is good or bad in terms of victories.

Madden, Summerall to work together again at Fox

NEW YORK (AP) — John Madden and Pat Summerall, together again. It's like they were never apart.

"I worked with Pat for so long, I couldn't see myself working with anybody else," Madden said.

On Monday, the day after they broadcast their last game for CBS, Fox announced that it had signed Madden to a four-year contract as its lead football analyst. He will be paid a reported $32 million, or about $365,000 a game.

"John is not only someone Fox wanted, but needed," Fox Sports president David Hill said. "John Madden is the heartbeat of football."

At the same time, a source close to the network confirmed that Summerall, Madden's broadcast partner for 13 years and a 33-year CBS veteran, also has signed a four-year contract with Fox.

Summerall made in excess of $1.5 million a year at CBS, and his four-year Fox deal is expected to be worth about the same. Summerall's signing took place "some weeks ago," the source said, and will be announced at a future date.

The same source said Ed Goren, senior producer at CBS, also would join Fox as its executive producer. Also expected to make the move from CBS to Fox are producer Bob Stenner and director Sandy Grossman, who worked with Madden and Summerall.

Hill would not comment on future hires, saying: "This is John's day, and I would prefer to keep it that way.

"I've been reading the papers," he said. "The only people I haven't seen on the list so far is Mother Teresa, Boutros Boutros-Ghali and President Clinton's brother."

CBS, the original network of the NFL, has been televising league games since 1956. But last month it lost the bidding for the NFC portion of the contract to Fox, which will pay $1.58 billion over four years.

Madden said that a chance to continue working NFC games played a part in his decision along with the potential of working with Summerall and other past associates.

"I'm kind of an NFC guy," he said in a telephone interview. "I've been doing the NFC for 15 years and I've been with Pat for 13, and the opportunity was there to continue doing both. Yeah, that's a big part of it: to be able to do the same things you've been doing with the same people. It's a big thing because it's been so much fun.

"There are no negatives to it."

Last week, Madden said he would like to observe the two Q's in starting his new career, doing it "quickly and quietly."

"I walk into the Cowboys thing, and we were in a meeting room, and there was Charles Haley, and he says to me, 'Quickly and quietly, huh?' He said, 'Quickly maybe, but quietly, no way.' He was right," Madden said.

Madden said he met with Fox owner Rupert Murdoch the night after the Cowboys and New York Giants closed out the regular season and "I was very impressed with him.

Featuring a whole range of activities, celebrities and special events, the Grand Opening is a way of saying, "we are here and we are here to stay" to the people of Midland.

Since its opening day on September 1st 1992, World Gym has been trying to put across the message that unlike many other gyms that have sprung up (and down) in the Midland area, World Gym is here for the long haul.

To this end they have purchased their huge building and all the fitness equipment and have made a firm commitment, not just to Midland but also to providing the best possible health and fitness center the region has ever seen.

As one would expect, all of the events at World Gym this weekend are fitness and health orientated.

In addition to the cholesterol testing, the Center for Massage and Wellbeing will be performing free 10-minute massage therapy sessions through out the day.

For many years, fitness experts have known that massage can be extremely beneficial to people in training by reducing stress on the mind and body. World Gym is offering people the chance to find out more about this training resource.

In the past few weeks, the local media have reported that there is a blood shortage in the Permian Basin. In conjunction with the Permian Basin Regional Blood Center, World Gym is holding a blood drive throughout the Grand Opening Day.

All blood types are needed and you will be able to donate blood all day from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m..

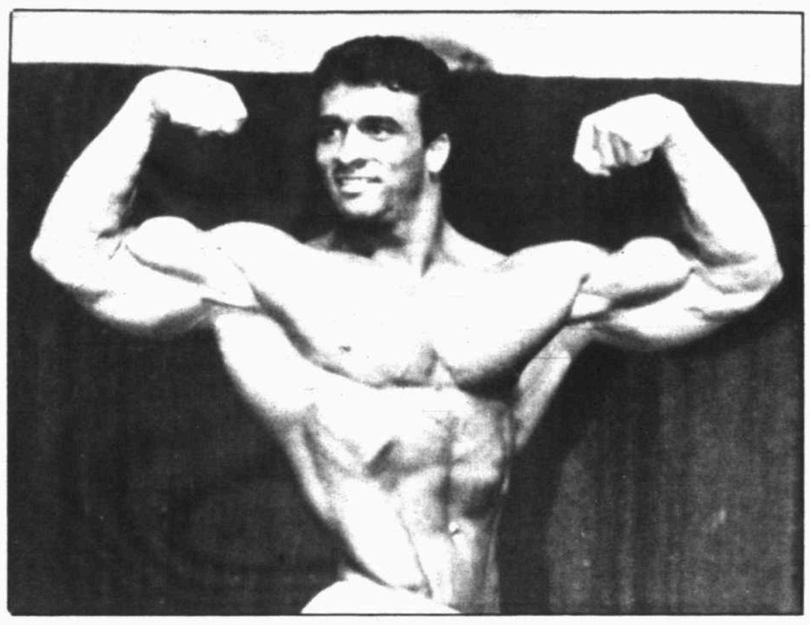

Obviously, no Grand Opening would be complete without some fabulous door prizes, and World Gym's great day is going to be no exception.

Prizes range from 1-year's free membership, a personalized training and nutrition program designed by Rick Valente, to free items from the Pro-shop.

There will be a lot going on this week-end, for more information about World Gym's range of fitness services such as body-fat testing, their large range of fitness machines and free weights and aerobics classes call 683-8335,or stop by their huge location at 3 Meta Drive in Midland.

The Telephone Store: keeping the Basin in touch

These days communication is everything and the Telephone Store (689-9885) can take care of all your needs.

For over 8-years, Robin Brooks, the owner of the Telephone Store, has built up a considerable reputation as someone who can meet virtually all communications requirements: whether it be a large business system or a specialist telephone for home use.

The Telephone Store deals with virtually every type of of telephone imaginable, with something for everyone.

For those who need to be in touch while on the move, there are whole ranges of cellular 'phones from Motorola, NEC, Panasonic and Mitsubishi (to name but a few). These telephones come in a variety of styles and sizes ranging from small hand-held units and transportables to installed units.

The Telephone Store is an agent for Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems (SBMS) servicing the Midland/Odessa area.

To increase service as well as range, the Telephone Store helps cellular customers in the surrounding areas. They are also agents for: Digital Cellular in Andrews, Seminole and Lamesa: Wes-Tex Cellular in Stanton and the Big Spring area: Cellular 3 in Monahans, Fort Stockton, Ozona, Big Lake, Van Horn and most of the other Southern areas: Cellular 3 and Leaco Cellular in parts of New Mexico.

In addition to the business systems, there are radio 0pagers, state-of-the-art plain-paper fax machines and other business hardware such as combination telephones and answer 'phones.

Residential users are not forgotten because there is a huge range of different telephones which are ideal for such diverse groups as children, decorators and sports fans.

There are many antique 'phones which have the styling of the forties and fifties, but the technology of the nineties, novelty telephones such as a 'phone inside a Dallas Cowboys' football helmet, neon 'phones and many others.

Many of these telephones would make terrific gift ideas because there is such a wide range that there is something for all personalities and tastes.

However, Robin Brooks doesn't just sell telephones and other telecommunications equipment: the emphasis at the Telephone Store is on superior service both at the time of sale and also on the repair services.

In order to achieve the high standards she feels her customers deserve, she has trained hard in order to be able to provide a comprehensive repair and installation service.

Because the Telephone Store is independently owned ad operated, Robin Brooks is able to carry a wide inventory which constitutes the best in the field.

Of course if a customer has a special requirement, it is much easier for her to find that unusual item because she is not tied down to one particular supplier.

Located in the Courtyard at 4410 Midkiff, the Telephone Store will help you keep talking.

Robin Brooks, the owner of the Telephone Store, with a display of just some of the wide array of cellular telephones that she stocks. The Telephone Store located in the Courtyard at 4410 Midkiff, 689-9885.

Grand jury could give USFSA facts on Harding

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The U.S. Figure Skating Association wants some hard facts on Tonya Harding's role, if any, in the attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan before deciding whether the national figure skating champion competes in the Lillehammer Olympics.

A grand jury investigation that resumed today could go a long way toward providing it.

"Part of the problem right now is so much information is being reported in the media, some of which isn't as accurate as other information," USFSA spokeswoman Kristin Matta said Sunday night from Colorado Springs, Colo. "We're waiting for law enforcement officials to get the correct information."

The U.S. Olympic Committee is waiting for the figure skating association to act.

"It's in their backyard," USOC spokesman Mike Moran said.

Four people have been charged by the Multnomah County district attorney with conspiring to assault Kerrigan: Harding's ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly; her bodyguard, Shawn Eckardt; the alleged hit man, Shane Minoaka Stant, and the alleged driver of the getaway car, Derrick Smith.

The grand jury must issue indictments before any of them go to trial. The panel began hearing from witnesses last week.

Harding hasn't been charged, but authorities haven't let her off the hook, either. Eckardt has accused her of helping plan and cover up the attack on Kerrigan.

The Oregonian, in today's editions, reported that authorities feel they have enough evidence to arrest Harding, but want to exhaust all possibilities for strengthening the case before making a final decision, according to sources.

The primary reason for the extreme caution, sources told the newspaper, is that investigators and prosecutors are well aware of the international spotlight focused on them and do not want to bring charges against Harding that might not stick in court.

According to the newspaper, most but not all of the case against Harding is built from statements from three of the four men charged in the case.

Harding reiterated today that she had nothing to do with the attack, issuing a statement through her lawyer, Dennis Rawlinson. "I deny all allegations that I was involved in any way in the Nancy Kerrigan assault."

No new arrest warrants had been issued in the case, Douglas Bray, a clerk for Judge Donald Londer, said today. Londer is the presiding judge in Multnomah County Circuit Court.

Both FBI spokesman Bart Gori and Norm Frink, deputy Multnomah County district attorney, declined comment today on The Oregonian report. Frink said the grand jury would take no further testimony today, and declined to say when new witnesses would appear.

Harding took to her home ice at a shopping mall at 9 a.m. and skated strongly for an hour in full view of photographers, reporters and shoppers.

In Detroit, Wayne County Assistant Prosecutor Doug Baker said today that no charges will be filed in Michigan until the Oregon investigation is substantially completed. Baker said there are too many major questions to be answered for prosecutors to move ahead in Michigan at this time.

After the Oregon investigation moves forward, Baker said there would be discussions about where prosecution should take place and whether any charges would be filed in Michigan.

Portland investigators traveled to Los Angeles during the weekend to speak to Kerrigan, who was filming a commercial. The Oregonian quoted an unidentified source as saying Kerrigan said she would be willing to come to Portland to testify if the case goes to trial.

The grand jury has until Feb. 3 to issue its report — three days after the USFSA must name its figure skating team and only nine days before the Winter Olympics begin in Norway.

The skating association's code of ethics allow it to remove someone for "acts, statements or conduct" which are "considered detrimental to the welfare of figure skating." But the 45-member association is waiting for something definitive to act on, such as the grand jury report, Matta said.

"There is no scheduled vote right now," she said. "They are basically waiting until they get to the point that they've got sufficient information to warrant either an action or a response."

Bothered by a severe case of asthma, Harding may have set her training schedule back a couple of weeks by smoking cigarettes under the stress of the accusations surrounding the attack on Kerrigan, Dr. Martin Altschul said.

A Salem pediatrician and figure skater, Altschul said he has been treating Harding's asthma free of charge since last fall because she has no health insurance.

"I would bring medication to the rink and watch her practice," Altschul said.

The doctor said he didn't think Harding was a regular smoker, and others have told him she can't take a puff without inducing a coughing fit.

Hoping to show public support for their favorite skater, the Tonya Harding Fan Club began gathering signatures on petitions urging the USFSA, the USOC and the International Olympic Committee to keep her on the Olympic team.

Lifetime Siding pays $50 if they can't beat other estimates

Neil Letkeman, owner of Lifetime Siding & Window Co., invites homeowners to present him with a written estimate for siding installation received within the last two years. If he can't beat the estimate by at least 5 percent, he'll pay homeowners $50 for their time.

Anyone who, in the last two years, has received an estimate from a company that specializes in siding (whose primary business is installing siding) is invited to call Lifetime Siding & Window Company and request an estimate from them.

If Lifetime's estimate to install new siding on your home is not at least 5 percent lower--they'll pay you $50 for your time.

Eugene and Rose Hunter of 300 Willowood in Midland nearly made a costly $1000 mistake. That is until they contacted Neil Letkeman of Lifetime Siding and Window for a money saving estimate.

"We had thought about adding siding to our home for years," Mr Hunter said. "Two other contractors had given much higher estimates for siding on our home. Neil's bid was almost $1000 lower than the lowest estimate."

"We were amazed by Neil's bid and we thought that there must be something wrong with his work, so we really checked him out. His installation methods are excellent and we have not regretted our decision. I'd be pleased to have anyone come look at what Neil did for us," he said.

Neil Letkeman uses only top quality materials and workmanship on every Lifetime Siding & Window job. "Our superior installation methods contribute largely to the success of Lifetime Siding & Window Co., he said. "Today's homeowners are looking for the highest quality products at the lowest price."

"We start by replacing any rotten or warped boards," Letkeman said. "And we refasten loose boards. We make sure that all the wood on the house is in good shape before we start installing our siding."

When installing siding, Lifetime specialists use screws and rivets in all critical areas of installation. It does not take an engineer to figure out that screws and rivets secure siding better than staples and nails.

These installation methods, together with the highest quality lifetime warrantied steel or vinyl siding will give a home a permanent solution to painting problems.

For energy efficiency, protection for home and family, noise and dust reduction as well as overall maintenance savings, Letkeman recommends storm and replacement windows for your home.

Storm windows, which are great for insulation, can come with tinted glass.

All in all, replacement dual glass thermal break windows are a solid investment in the long run.

Lifetime Siding & Window also sells and installs other home improvements such as storm doors, rain gutters and metal car-ports.

For a free estimate and information about zero down, 100 percent financing, call the Lifetime Siding & Window Co. at 689-0307.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Heating oil and gasoline prices surged higher Monday on news of a fire at a large Amoco Corp. refinery and forecasts for colder weather in the Northeast next week.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March settled at $15.17 per barrel, down 23 cents.

Local crude buyers raised their posted price 25 cents to $13.50 a barrel.

Natural gas prices rose sharply on the last day to trade February-delivery contracts. Speculators who had sold borrowed contracts had a hard time finding February contracts they could buy to repay the loans.

The resulting buying pressure sent natural gas prices as high as $2.550 per 1,000 cubic feet before settling at $2.470, up 16.5 cents. The March contract, which will represent the near-month delivery price as of Tuesday, finished at $2.283.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mixed in light trading on Monday, as some traders sold the currency to lock in profits from its rise last Friday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 111.70 yen, up from 111.60 yen on Friday.

In New York, the British pound ended at $1.4955, more expensive than $1.4940 on Friday.

Stocks slip

NEW YORK — Strong earnings boosted several blue-chip stocks Monday, including IBM and Caterpillar, but the gains masked broad-based weakness on Wall Street.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished down 1.69 points at 3,912.79. The indicator had risen nearly 20 points in early trading before falling back.

Cold weather stirs drilling interest

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro extends April 5 lease sale's nomination period

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The extremely cold weather in the northern parts of the country has helped spark increased interest in exploration for Texas natural gas, state officials say.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Monday that he has extended the April 5 lease sale's nominating period for drilling on state lands because of the additional interest.

"There is a demand for Texas natural gas. We have received several late nominations for our spring sale, indicating that companies are interested in increasing gas production and building reserves," he said.

"I also have reason to believe that some energy companies want to rebuild reserves after pulling them down during the recent cold spell," he said.

Spring sale nominations had been closed as of Dec. 17, but the land office said it will consider those that have been sent in since and those received on or before Feb. 1. Some 200 nominations already have been received.

Mauro said most of the interest for gas exploration is in the Gulf of Mexico. The land office will put up 30 additional gulf tracts for nomination.

The land office deposited $149.4 million during the 1993 fiscal year to the Permanent School Fund, which helps pay for public schools.

Over the years of its existence, the fund has received $6.2 billion from land office operations and now has a market value of more than $11 billion. Investment proceeds amounting to about $750 million a year are distributed to local school districts at about $230 per student.

Flagstar to shut, sell 270 Denny's

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — The parent of Denny's and other restaurant chains reported a $1.6 billion fourth-quarter loss Monday and said it will close or sell 270 eateries because of fewer diners.

Most of the loss reported by Flagstar Cos. was due to an accounting move in which the company wrote off intangible assets known as good will.

The loss also included $225 million set aside for for restructuring, including the restaurant closures and sales.

The 1,500 Denny's restaurants provide almost 40 percent of Flagstar's revenues, and the number of diners at the chain was down 7 percent during the quarter from a year ago.

Analyst Larry Stouffer, with J.C. Bradford in Nashville, Tenn., said customers moved away from Denny's because the restaurant raised some prices.

Flagstar also owns Quincy's and El Pollo Loco and is a major Hardee's franchise operator. Its Canteen division and other subsidiaries provide food services to companies and public facilities like national parks and stadiums.

Traffic declined 4.6 percent at Hardee's and heavy discounting was needed to sustain business at El Pollo Loco, the company said.

"In view of recent company developments, now is the time to make the hard decisions to bring our balance sheet into better alignment with current market realities," said Jerome J. Richardson, Flagstar's chairman and chief executive.

About half the restaurants being closed or sold are Denny's because there is a better potential to find franchise operators for those, said Coleman Sullivan, Flagstar's communications vice president.

Flagstar also plans to sell or close 90 Quincy's in the Southeast and 45 El Pollo Loco restaurants.

Hearst joins Canadian 'transactional TV' project

By Elizabeth Schwinn
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The Hearst Corporation on Monday announced a joint venture with six Canadian companies to give cable TV subscribers access to their bank accounts, the post office, and local stores — through their television sets.

The new service, called UBI, will be offered to 34,000 Quebec households next year and an additional 1.4 million consumers in Quebec by 2002.

The service will be available to customers of the Le Group Videotron cable network in Quebec, which is leading the venture. Businesses whose customers use UBI will pay a fee of up to 15 cents per transaction. Consumers won't pay transaction fees.

The companies involved in the project will bear the cost of installing the equipment required in each consumer's home: an ATM-type card scanner, a printer, a two-way terminal and a remote control.

Frank A. Bennack, Jr., president and chief executive officer, told a news conference: "At the start of the century, William Randolph Hearst was a leader in the advanced technology of that time. His pioneering innovation included color presses, tone-on-tone photographs and others that were amazing at the time.

"Now we're at the end of the 20th Century and about to begin a new millennium and the Hearst Corporation finds itself pioneering advanced technology" again, Bennack said.

Participating with Hearst are: the National Bank of Canada, Hydro-Quebec, Loto-Quebec, Canada Post Corp., Le Group Videotron and its subsidiary, Videoway Communications Inc. The UBI system will cost roughly US $200 million. Ownership shares among the seven partners vary between 10 and 20 percent each, with the Hearst Corporation owning 10 percent.

"This is going to be the project that leads the way, both in North America and globally" because of the diverse services UBI will offer, Bennack said. UBI is "not just another imaginative idea" but has commercial applications, he said.

Bennack held out the prospect of possible future expansion of UBI into the United States.

The Canadian companies' "interest in us relates to their hope of expanding this system" into the United States, he said.

Alfred C. Sikes, president of Hearst's new media and technology division, which is in charge of the venture, said in an interview that Hearst considers this joint venture a first step in the exploding world of information technology.

"Perhaps the easiest way to describe this is as an opportunity to be inside and active in what I think will be ... the most advanced network in the world," Sikes said. "But we also believe (it) will be a quite good business."

Chief at Blockbuster cuts deal for Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — H. Wayne Huizenga, whose first business was garbage collection, has reached a deal to add pro football's Miami Dolphins to his collection of sports teams.

Huizenga, head of Blockbuster Entertainment Corp., owns baseball's Florida Marlins and the National Hockey League's Florida Panthers — expansion teams that began play in 1993.

The Dolphins deal needs approval from the creditors of Joe Robbie Stadium and the National Football League. The NFL traditionally prohibits its owners from owning another pro sports team, but Huizenga expects that he can persuade NFL owners to make an exception.

"A lot of things have changed since they put that rule into effect," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Shop for best interest rate when CD matures

By Bill Doyle

Q: When I retired in 1986, I put my lump-sum pension money in an individual retirement account certificate of deposit, which now amounts to $48,647. Can I put this money in another IRA when the CD matures on April 4? If not, what other kind of tax shelter can I find? I am 67 years old.

Doyle

A: You can put that money into a new IRA CD at the same bank or you can move your nest egg to an IRA at any of a wide variety of places, such as a different bank, savings and loan association, credit union, mutual fund or brokerage firm.

Since it is clear you are not an experienced investor, my recommendation is to stick with CDs. But shop around for high interest.

If it turns out you can get the best interest rate at your present bank, fine. Tell that bank to renew the CD on its maturity date. Otherwise, you can move your money by either an IRA rollover or a trustee-to-trustee transfer.

In a rollover, you get a check from your present bank and deposit the money within 60 days in the institution where you are establishing your new IRA. Miss that deadline and you lose the income tax deferral on the money involved.

If you use the trustee-to-trustee method, you arrange for the second institution to receive the money directly from the first bank. You never touch the money, and you retain the tax-deferral benefits.

You can keep all the money now in that IRA, as well as interest that accumulates on it, intact until you pass age 70½. After that, you will be required to make withdrawals based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary.

Q: The interest on my bank CDs is tied to the prime rate, which has been 6 percent for more than a year. Now, I see that several banks have lowered their prime rates to 5.5 percent. Some newspapers list the prime rate as "5.5-6."

How is the prime rate consensus established? And at what point is my bank likely to reduce the interest on my CDs, if that has not been done already?

A: Let's explain to all readers that you have variable-rate CDs, on which the interest can rise or fall depending on rates in the marketplace.

Your bank should inform you if the CD rate changes. That notification is assured by a provision of the federal Truth in Savings Act.

Each bank makes its own decision on what its prime rate will be. That rate is the "base" interest rate the bank charges on loans to corporations. But it's a movable baseline. The same bank might charge interest higher than its posted prime rate on loans to some corporate customers and charge interest lower than its posted prime on loans to other corporations.

Q: Upon my death, I would like to leave a sum of money to my granddaughter, bypassing my daughter. Can this be done?

A: Of course. There are a couple of ways to accomplish that.

When you have your will drawn up or amended, specify the amount of money you want to leave to your granddaughter. It will go to her, not to her mother.

If the sum is substantial, you should consider having a trust drawn up by an attorney experienced in such matters. The money can be put in the trust, strictly for your granddaughter's use.

Q: Can I leave money in a trust so that my children receive only the interest, with the money being passed to my grandchildren?

A: Surely. A good lawyer can draw up that kind of trust document to keep the principal intact. Similar trusts have been created for generations.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekened mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family members, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
