Day care center shots not Health Dept. role

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A Midland child care center owner Tuesday complained that the Midland County Health Department hasn't done enough to prevent the spread of red measles among children at the center.

Midland health officials, however, said it's the parents' responsibility to make sure their children get inoculated.

Since March 6, seven measles cases have been diagnosed among children at the Peppermint Plantation day care, the last of which was Monday, owner/director Kalynn Lott said.

"We're expecting more," said Ms. Lott, whose center cares for 69 children. "I almost have to say that every child in my day care has measles."

Ms. Lott said 20 children cared for at her center attend Midland Independent School District schools — ranging from kindergarten through third grade — but the Midland County Health Department hasn't inoculated at the center.

Ms. Lott said three of the seven cases at Peppermint Plantation are among school-age children: one attends Anson Jones Elementary School, one attends Bowie Elementary School and the third goes to The Hillander School.

Referring to a nurse at the department whom she spoke to, Ms. Lott said "she said the county did not have the vaccine to provide."

"I was told that they (parents of the center's children) could go to their doctors and that was fine," Ms. Lott said. "I've been fighting this now for three weeks.

"I have babies that have never been inoculated and they're telling me we're not a priority because of the numbers. Day care's our pipeline to all the public schools."

Midland County Health Authority Dr. James Humphreys said the department isn't bound by law to mass immunize at private places of business, such as a day care centers.

"It's still up to the parents of the child to make sure their children get immunized," Humphreys said. "We don't have an infinite supply (of measles vaccine). We cannot inoculate the whole city."

Ms. Lott said the parents of still-healthy children at the center, 1201 W. Illinois Ave., have been notified of the outbreak.

Humphreys said the department would be happy to immunize the parents' children. Health officials offer the free immunizations only to those who have been exposed the the disease and are in danger of contracting it, Humphreys said.

"I'm not sure what (Ms. Lott) expects us to do," he said. "In general, the health department will not intrude in a private business."

Ms. Lott said she expects health officials to at least come to the center and address parent concerns.

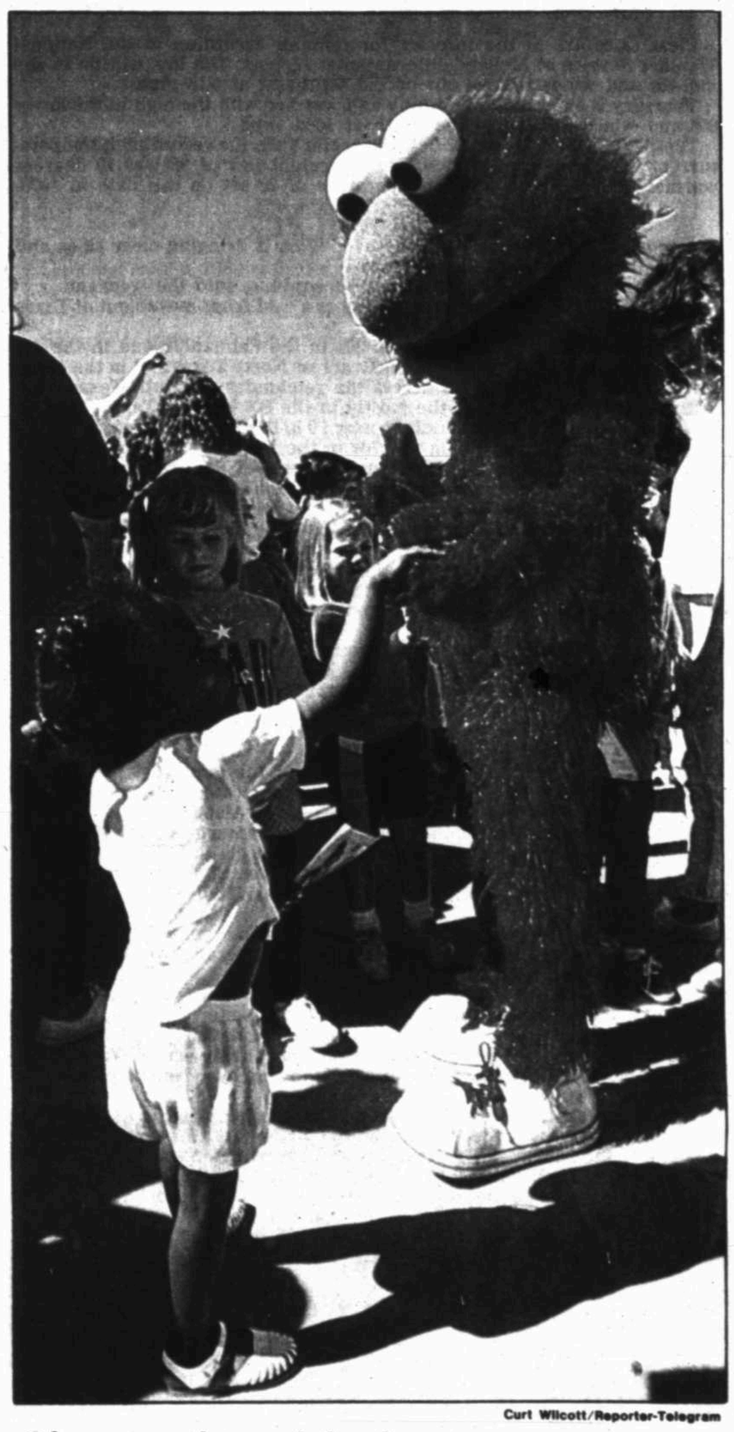

"Otherwise we're going to take our parents and go sit on the front steps until they answer our questions," Ms. Lott said.

Humphreys said the department has given more than 800 red measles shots since early February, including mass immunizations at Midland High School, Goddard Junior High School and Jones Elementary School.

And with the Monday clinical diagnosis of a Lee High School student as having measles, a health department team plans to visit the 3500 Neely Ave. school early Friday and immunize about 730 of the 1,773-member student body, Administrator Monette Burke said this morning.

Burke said the diagnosis hasn't been confirmed through blood test, but the department isn't taking chances.

Traffic passes warning signals placed near a hole on a bridge near Lamesa Road and Wadley Avenue. The hole was discovered Tuesday. City engineers are performing structural tests on the bridge.

Hole in bridge forces closure of traffic lane

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A portion of an eastside bridge collapsed Tuesday, forcing city officials to limit traffic to three lanes over Parkway Draw at Lamesa Road and Wadley Avenue.

Harvey Hansen, director of engineering for the city of Midland, said the lane will be closed to traffic most of the summer until funding is available to repair the deck of the bridge which deteriorated, leaving about a two-foot diameter hole.

City road crews discovered the hole Tuesday while repairing a pothole on the bridge, Hansen said.

While the city is working closely with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, the city engineer said he didn't know when funding would be available to make the repairs.

The bridge, part of Phase II of the Lamesa Road Project, is scheduled for widening by the state highway department.

State officials were expected to take core samples from the bridge deck this afternoon to determine whether the bridge has sustained any structural deficiencies. Results of those tests should be available in two to three days, Hansen said.

During its last inspection two years ago, the bridge was considered structurally adequate, according to the city engineer.

Deterioration on asphalt bridges such as the one over Parkway Draw usually occurs when moisture becomes trapped in the concrete, causing it to break apart more rapidly, Hansen said.

Merger mania apparent in Texas' Fortune firms

■ Magazine lists nation's top 500 companies — 6B

DALLAS (AP) — The nation's merger-and-acquisition mania is clearly reflected among the Texas members of the latest Fortune 500 list of industrial companies, with several newcomers and shifts on the popular ranking directly related to corporate shakeups.

For example Valhi Inc., the main holding company of billionaire Harold C. Simmons, last year bought control of NL Industries Inc., another Texas company. As a result of the deal, Valhi led nine Texas newcomers to the list, debuting at No. 118 with 1988 sales of $2.25 billion, while NL Industries, which had been No. 253 in 1987, disappeared.

Overall, Texas membership among the elite listing released Tuesday increased from 28 to 34 as only three companies fell out of the rankings.

Three companies' rankings were unchanged, while 13 were up and nine down.

Dallas, with 15 Fortune 500 headquarters, and Houston, with 13, placed third and fourth respectively as homes to Fortune 500 companies. New York led the way with 48 followed by Chicago with 22.

Meanwhile Houston-based Pennzoil Corp., ranked No. 201, was the biggest profit-gainer among the 500, with a 30-fold rise in earnings. But the company owed most of that bounty to an extraordinary gain from its celebrated $3 billion lawsuit settlement with Texaco.

Mosbacher leads forum on child abuse

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A community forum on child abuse got underway in Midland this morning with Houston businessman Robert Mosbacher Jr. leading the deliberation.

Mosbacher, chairman of the six-member citizens' board which sets policy for the Texas Department of Human Services and son of U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, has made it his business to fight the scourge of neglect and abuse among children.

"We're not simply saying that we want the community's help," he said in opening remarks. "We're asking the community to work with us to try to develop a common action plan, one that the government and private sector buys into."

Participants in the forum were invited from the public and private sectors, including local business leaders, elected officials, legal, medical, educational and child care communities.

Also joining in the discussion are volunteers, consumer advocates, members of the general public, religious and minority leaders, service organizations and professional associations.

The day-long session at Greentree Country Club is focusing on responses to reports of child abuse, in-home services for families where abuse or neglect occurs, placement of children, community relations, coordination, staffing and professional skills of Child Protective Service workers.

"The perception in a number of major regions of the state is that child protective services staff are isolated from the community," said Mosbacher, a likely Republican Party candidate for lieutenant governor.

He observed that today's forum to increase local involvement in child protective services should go a long way to dispel beliefs that the Department of Human Services has "circled the wagons" because of a perception that it was under attack or siege.

"Sometimes you have to engage in a specific exercise to uncircle the wagons. And that's what these community forums are designed to do."

Shamir to outline election plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir will sketch out his plan for Palestinian elections in talks opening today with Bush administration officials on the unrest in the West Bank and Gaza.

The prime minister's aim is to find leaders other than from the Palestine Liberation Organization to negotiate some form of self-rule for the 1.2 million Arabs in the territories.

The 73-year-old prime minister steadfastly refuses to negotiate with the PLO, and told a conference of Jewish American organization leaders that stitting with the PLO "will bring disaster."

While Shamir has withheld many of the details until he sees Secretary of State James A. Baker III today and President Bush on Thursday, he apparently intends to hold the elections only after the 15 1/2-month uprising subsides.

The Bush administration is seeking a more immediate change in the situation. And yet, a U.S. official, briefing reporters Tuesday at the White House on the visit, said, "We want to listen to what Prime Minister Shamir has to say how the peace process can be moved forward, but I don't want to prejudge what, in fact, he is going to tell the president."

'Stronger' Wright could emerge from probe

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — William H. Gray, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said Wednesday that Speaker Jim Wright will emerge "a stronger leader" from a House ethics committee investigation of his finances if the panel decides he had not violated House rules.

But Gray, the fourth ranking Democrat in the House leadership, stressed that if the ethics panel finds that Wright's conduct was improper, "he will face the same fate as any other member."

Gray, who as Caucus chairman presides over meetings of the House's 260 Democrats, did not spell out that "fate," but he apparently meant that Wright, if guilty, would be treated no better or worse than any other member.

Gray also said at a breakfast meeting with reporters that he would oppose the release of a 450-page report prepared by ethics committee counsel Richard J. Phelan on his investigation of the speaker.

Gray said that such disclosure would be "unprecedented and wholly improper." In past ethics cases, he said, the only parts of the investigative material that have been released were those that supported committee recommendations.

The New York Times published an article Wednesday saying that the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, as the ethics panel is known, is "said to be headed toward a finding" that Wright violated several rules, which would be a severe threat to his position as speaker.

The panel, which is expected to make its findings known within two weeks, is also reportedly leaning toward dropping several charges against Wright as it focuses on the speaker's relationship with George Mallick, a Fort Worth developer and the bulk marketing of a book he wrote in 1984.

The Washington Post said Wednesday that the committee has decided to drop charges that Wright attempted to unduly influence federal thrift-institution regulators in 1986 when he intervened to help three fellow Texans.

The committee has also dismissed allegations that Wright lobbied American and Egyptian officials in 1979 on behalf of two Texas oil and gas companies after the company president allowed him to invest in a lucrative gas well.

The third charge reportedly dropped involves allegations that Wright tried to influence an Interior Department decision affecting an oil company which unsuccessfully sought exploration rights on federal land in Arkansas.

In the three instances, the committee apparently found no evidence that Wright had financial interests in the deals.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clear sky, low in 40s likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the mid-40s and winds will be out of the southeast at 5-15 mph.

Thursday is expected to be sunny and warmer with the high in the lower 80s and winds shifting to the south at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 71 was 22 degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 93 set on April 4, 1939. The overnight low of 38 was 10 degrees warmer than the record low temperature of 28 set on this date in 1970.

STATE

A high pressure system centered over Utah is bringing clear skies and warmer temperatures to all of Texas.

And forecasters say this trend should continue into the weekend.

The high pressure system was building as a cold front moved out of Texas into the northwest Gulf of Mexico.

Lows tonight will be in the upper 30s in the Panhandle and in the 40s across the rest of West Texas, in the 40s across North Texas and in the 40s in the Hill Country and the 50s across the remainder of South Texas.

Highs Thursday will be in the mostly in the 80s in West Texas, ranging from the mid 70s in the Panhandle to near 90 in the Big Bend area, in the 70s and 80s in North Texas and in the 70s in the Hill Country and along the immediate coast and in the 80s across the rest of South Texas.

A few light showers, most of which were not reaching the ground, were reported at dawn today over portions of the Texas Panhandle and some scattered thunderstorms lingered during the early morning hours along the coast in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were in the 40s and 50s over the northern two-thirds of the state except for the Panhandle where readings dipped into the 30s and in the 60s and 70s over the rest of the state. Extremes ranged from 34 at Dalhart to 75 at McAllen.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 38 at Amarillo, 50 at Wichita Falls, 52 at Fort Worth, 50 at Waco, 53 at Austin, 57 at San Antonio, 59 at Houston, 73 at Brownsville, 42 at San Angelo, 43 at Lubbock, 45 at Midland and 57 at El Paso.

NATION

Thunderstorms continued to strike much of the Southeast today after dropping dime-size hail in Mississippi and generated high winds that downed power lines and damaged businesses in Alabama.

The thunderstorms developing ahead of a slow moving cold front brought heavy rains from the central Gulf Coast to Georgia and South Carolina.

Heavier rainfall for the six hours ended at 2 a.m. EDT included nearly 2 inches at Montgomery, Ala., 1¼ inches at Biloxi, Miss., and 1¼ inches at Atlanta.

Showers were scattered across the Great Lakes and the middle and northern Atlantic Coast states. Showers also were scattered from Washington state to western Montana.

Fair skies prevailed in the Great Plains region and the Southwest.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms across the East Coast; rain over the Appalachians, the upper Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes; snow over northern Michigan; rain likely across Washington state and northern Oregon; and scattered showers over North Dakota, the northern and central Rockies and Idaho.

Highs were expected to be in the 30s in northern Michigan; in the 40s from North Dakota across the upper Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes to portions of the Ohio Valley; in the 70s and 80s over the southern Atlantic Coast states, along the Gulf Coast and across much of Texas to the Southwest; in the 90s to around 100 from the southern Arizona desert to the Southern California coast; and the 50s and 60s elsewhere.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 23 degrees at Yellowstone Park, Wyo., to 83 degrees at Ontario, Calif.

Captain surrenders; Ship may be floated

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — Exxon made final preparations to float its still-leaking oil tanker, whose fugitive captain surrendered today to face charges of operating the vessel while drunk.

With claims against Exxon for damages escalating into the millions, U.S. Navy oil skimmers were pressed into service, and Exxon accepted an offer of help from the Soviet Union.

Company officials turned to the Far East in search of a dry dock willing to accept the crippled leviathan Exxon Valdez.

As the oil off Alaska spread over an area approaching the size of Delaware, the fired captain of the tanker turned himself in this morning to authorities in Hauppauge, N.Y.

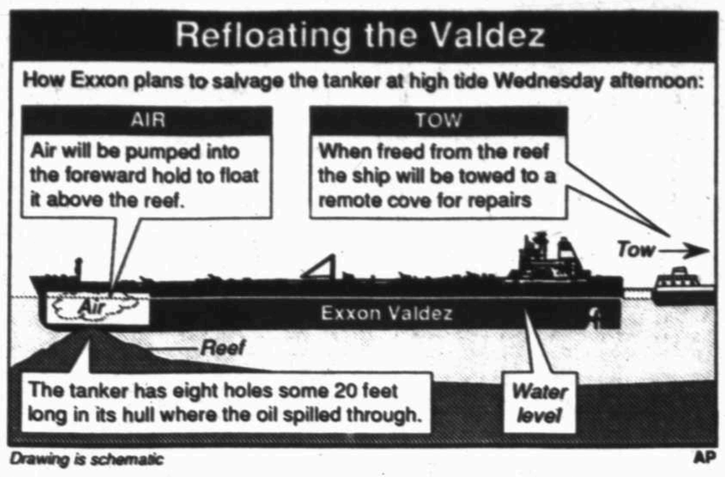

Joseph Hazelwood, who lives on New York's Long Island, appeared with his attorney 12 days after his ship ran aground and nearly a week after the National Transportation Safety Board said tests showed he was under the influence of alcohol several hours after the accident.

He had been sought since Sunday on a fugitive warrant for three misdemeanor charges that carry a penalty of up to one year in jail. Alaska authorities have said they will seek his extradition.

Exxon said it has changed its policy because of the spill and now requires crews to be aboard ship, where drinking is prohibited, four hours before sailing.

Oil as thick as mayonnaise has soiled 800 miles of beach, and thousands of animals are known dead, including at least 30 sea otters.

"Dozens of otters are dying before rescuers can get to them," said fish and game spokesman Jon Lyman.

Drawing is schematic AP

The dead otters included a year-old pup, one of five that had been sent to San Diego's Sea World for treatment.

While the toll from the nation's worst oil spill mounted, its impact on the flow of Alaskan crude was abating.

The Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. said it would resume a normal daily flow of 2.1 million barrels of oil through the trans-Alaska pipeline today. The flow had been cut by 60 percent because of restrictions on tanker traffic in Valdez harbor, but those restrictions have eased.

In the longer turn, though, the spill could slow petroleum exploration in environmentally sensitive areas at least temporarily, Environmental Protection Administrator William Reilly told Congress.

On Tuesday, crews finished transferring about 42 million gallons of crude from the crippled tanker to other ships in preparation for the refloating. The $125 million vessel, one of Exxon's newest, has been sitting on Bligh Reef in Prince William Sound since running aground March 24 and spilling more than 10 million gallons of crude.

The company said crews would attempt to pump air into the hold and refloat the ship at high tide late today. Officials plan to tow the vessel 30 miles to an already fouled bay off Naked Island for temporary repairs.

After that, Exxon said its first choice for dry dock is Portland, Ore., but officials there said they weren't sure if they'd allow that, even though the $12 million repair bill would provide about 200 jobs.

"A lot of questions that need to be answered," Oregon Gov. Neil Goldschmidt said.

Canadian authorities also asked Exxon for assurances that towing the tanker to Oregon won't damage the British Columbia coast.

Exxon Shipping Co. President Frank Iarossi said the company has had discussions with dry docks in South Korea, Japan and Singapore about accepting the vessel. He said the ship won't trail any pollution while it is towed.

Iarossi said Exxon had not added up its costs so far. "Millions, multiple millions. It's going to be big numbers," he said.

One hundred claims have been filed with the company for damages, including 40 on Tuesday alone. The claims have come mostly from fishermen. Exxon has settled only two so far.

At least 14 lawsuits have been filed.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration estimated the leading edge of the spill was 100 miles southwest of the tanker off the Kenai Peninsula. The spill has been pushed away from Kenai Fjords National Park and the area south of Seward by water flowing out of Resurrection Bay.

Fisheries within the sound remained threatened, and the slick appeared to be oozing slowly toward other Alaskan ports.

Exxon gave $1 million on Monday to Prince William Sound Aquaculture Corp. to buy boom to defend hatcheries, said Susan Ogle, a spokeswoman for the Cordova spill response office.

ABUSE

In 1987, the Department of Human Services investigated 63,204 reports of suspected child abuse and neglect involving 99,932 alleged victims and confirmed the abuse or neglect of 52,473 children.

The victims ranged in age from infants to adolescents with preschoolers being among the most vulnerable — almost 30 percent of the victims were no older than three years of age and more than half were no older than 6 years old.

In addition, at least 7,841 children were sexually abused and 14,227 were physically abused, although these figures represent only cases that were reported.

A study of child abuse in Texas indicates that every year at least 8.5 percent of the children in the state are at risk of abuse or neglect, meaning that in 1987, 422,495 children were at risk.

National study figures indicate that the problem is not specific to Texas, Mosbacher said.

"But it's no consolation to our children who suffer from abuse and neglect. And it's no excuse for mediocrity in the area of child protective services."

In 1988, the Texas Department of Human Services placed 164 Permian Basin children in foster home protection, according to Jeannie Hunt, a Child Protective Service worker.

Of those, at least 63 were placed in child protective services for neglect, 48 for abuse, 33 for sexual abuse, and 21 for other reasons such as abandonment, she said.

Public attention has turned to child abuse during April since it became designated as Child Abuse Prevention Month. Three Anson Jones Elementary School teachers didn't want miss out on the educational opportunity.

Mary Brown, Joyce Hobbs and Jill Arthur have developed art and writing projects to help first-, second- and third-graders strengthen their awareness of families.

"We want the children to explore their family awareness and to recognize that there are different kinds of families," said Ms. Brown, who also is vice chairman of the Regional Child Welfare Board.

Besides NL Industries, the two other Texas companies that dropped off the list were Swift Independent Packing Co. and Harte-Hanks Communications Inc., disappearing in corporate takeovers.

The top Texas companies again are Houston-based Shell Oil Co., at 13th with 1988 sales of $21.07 billion, and Tenneco Inc. at 24, with sales of $15.71 billion.

Shell's sales were up but its position remained unchanged; Tenneco's sales rose, but its position fell from 21st.

Coastal Corp., also based in Houston, replaced LTV Corp. as the third largest Texas company, climbing three spots from 57th to 54th as sales rose from $7.41 billion to $8.19 billion.

The rest of the Texas top 10 were: LTV Corp., unchanged at 56th; Texas Instruments Inc., up from 75th to 68th; and Kimberly-Clark Corp., unchanged at 85th — all based in Dallas.

Also, Cooper Industries, Houston, up to 117 from 118; Dresser Industries Inc. of Dallas, up to 118 from 138; Dallas-based American Petrofina Inc.; down from 161 to 164; and Baker Hughes Inc, of Houston, which moved from 197th to 184th.

The most dramatic move belonged to Maxus Energy Corp., of Dallas, a oil and gas exploration company, which fell from 285 in 1987 to 460 last year as sales dropped 53 percent — the biggest among the 500 — from $1.22 billion to $574.9 million.

Like Valhi, however, the shift is attributable to corporate shakeups.

Maxus was created in 1987 from Diamond Shamrock Corp. as part of the fallout of a takeover attempt by corporate raider T. Boone Pickens. At first just a renamed Diamond Shamrock, Maxus eventually spun off Diamond Shamrock R&M Inc., with Maxus retaining the exploration and production business and Diamond Shamrock R&M taking refining and marketing.

Diamond Shamrock, based in San Antonio, debuted on the Fortune list this year at 224, with sales of $1.8 billion.

Other newcomers, and their ranking, were: Rexene Corp., Dallas, 397; Sterling Chemicals, Houston, 403; Lone Star Technologies Inc., Dallas, 406; Southdown Inc., Houston, 445; Dr Pepper-Seven-Up, Dallas, 491; Pilgrim's Pride Corp., Pittsburg, 496; and NCH Corp., Irving, 499.

WRIGHT

The Post also said a fourth allegation was dismissed involving questions about whether Matthew Cossolotto, an aide to Wright who assisted him in preparation of tha book, "Reflections of a Public Man," was improperly being paid by taxpayers for that work.

But both the New York Times and the Washington Post that he committee is pursuing allegations that proceeds from the sale of the book were not reported as honoraria, which are limited, but as royalty payments, which are not. A House member can keep such outside earnings as speech fees only up to 30 percent of his or her congressional salary.

Both papers also said that the panel may cite Wright for failing to report as gifts a car, the use of a Fort Worth condominium rented to him at cut rates and other benefits he and his wife Betty received from their relationship with Mallick.

As it winds up its nine-month probe into Wright's activities, the ethics panel could simply find no fault with Wright or if it believes that Wright violated any House rules, it can open a more formal investigation. After completing that inquiry, it would have to decide what punishment to recommend to the full House.

The committee could chastise Wright on its own. Or it could recommend more serious punishment from the full House — reprimand, censure or expulsion.

SHAMIR

Shamir follows close on the heels of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who said toward the end of his Washington visit on Tuesday that he saw no way to stop the violence in the territories lost by the Arabs in the 1967 Middle East war.

The uprising has cost the lives of 418 Palestinian Arabs and 18 Israelis.

"If anybody could stop it, we would be very pleased," Mubarak said. "But how?"

The Egyptian leader made no public demands on the United States or Israel. He said he was simply "trying to find out what's the best way to achieve peace" through negotiations.

Mubarak, who has insisted that Israel deal with the PLO, withheld judgment on Shamir's proposal. He said the criterion should be whether an election would help advance the peace process.

The Egyptian leader was warmly received by the Bush administration. Bush took him to Baltimore on Monday to see the Orioles and the Boston Red Sox play in the opening game of the American League season.

Shamir will be entertained with a series of luncheons and dinners, but there was no event scheduled to match the friendly spectacle of Mubarak and Bush sitting side-by-side at the ball game.

MEASLES

Two more cases were reported Tuesday, bringing the number of Midland cases confirmed through blood tests to 11, with the number of clinically diagnosed cases reaching 23, Burke said. Details on the new cases were unavailable, Burke said.

Ector County Health Department Administrator Toby Cross this morning said the number of blood-confirmed cases has reached 61 there, with two cases — a 2-year-old and a 1-year-old — reported late Tuesday. A 29-year-old woman was confirmed as having the sickness Monday.

Cross said he doesn't anticipate any mass inoculations because of the new cases.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Abortion accepted throughout Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Abortion is an accepted birth control practice in Japan. The pill is banned because of what officials call uncertainties about its side effects.

"Abortions are protected," said Dr. Kunio Kitamura, director of the Japan Family Planning Association.

Male dominance in Japanese society also comes into play.

"Women tend to leave birth control to the husbands, but with the pill, what happens to the role of men?" Kitamura said.

"The Japanese are very conservative people," said Dr. Eikichi Matsuyama, a physician at Tokyo's Kosei Nenkin Hospital. "They won't use the pill because they think it is dangerous."

A legislative effort in 1982 to tighten the law on who may receive abortions was hurriedly withdrawn after strong protests by women and doctors.

The proposal would have eliminated a provision allowing abortion on grounds of economic hardship, cited in at least 90 percent of abortion cases despite Japan's current affluence, Kitamura said.

Under the 1948 Eugenic Protection Law, abortion also is permitted to "prevent the increase of inferior descendants from the eugenic point of view," and to protect the life and health of the mother. The law allows the attending doctor to approve an abortion or not.

The real reason for most abortions, Kitamura said, "is the lack of absolutely safe contraceptive methods."

He said lack of sex information among teen-agers, who rely on friends and youth magazines for such knowledge, also leads to abortions.

In addition, a strong family sense of who belongs and who doesn't works against having an unwanted baby and then putting it up for adoption.

Doctors say birth control is a combination of the condom and rhythm method and, as a last resort, abortion.

The Health and Welfare Ministry says Japan had 17.8 registered abortions for every 1,000 women 15 to 49 years old in 1985. Many more go unreported, doctors say, adding that Japan's abortion rate might well exceed that in the United States, which had 24 terminated pregnancies for every 1,000 females of child-bearing age that same year. Nations with higher abortion rates are mostly Communist countries.

Pepsi pulls commercials

NEW YORK (AP) — An uproar over religious imagery in Madonna's "Like a Prayer" music video has doomed the entertainer's Pepsi commercials that also feature the single.

Pepsi-Cola Co. said Tuesday it has dropped plans to run more ads featuring the pop star even though the soft drink maker had no connection with the music video, which some groups found sacrilegious.

Spokesman Tod MacKenzie said Pepsi had received complaints from consumers who confused the music video with Pepsi's commercial.

Liz Rosenberg, a publicist for Madonna at Warner Bros. Records, said the singer had no comment.

Pepsi reportedly paid Madonna about $5 million under a one-year contract that included commercials and a concert tour. It was unclear whether Pepsi had withdrawn its support of the tour.

The ad showed Madonna singing "Like a Prayer" and dancing in the street, in a school hall and in a church.

In the music video, Madonna kisses a religious statue that comes to life, dances among burning crosses and has cuts on her hand resembling the wounds Jesus suffered during crucifixion.

Nuns remain barricaded

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Four Carmelite nuns today entered their sixth month barricaded in the infirmary of their monastery, pledging to remain there until the Vatican's highest court hears their appeal.

The nuns began their protest Oct. 4, saying they were afraid of being evicted because of their opposition to the liberalization of the traditionally contemplative order through the introduction of such things as candy and television.

The Vatican court, the Apostolic Signatura, should consider the appeal soon, said Tim Manning, spokesman for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Paterson. The nuns would be allowed to remain in the infirmary until the court rules, he said.

He declined to say what action the diocese would take if the court ruled against the nuns.

The nuns have no plans to leave, said a close associate.

Writers back Rushdie

MOSCOW (NYT) — Prominent writers who are organizing a Soviet chapter of the international PEN organization have made their first official statement a condemnation of the death mandate on Salman Rushdie, the British novelist driven into hiding by calls for his death from the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

At the same time, the writers said they were "strongly denouncing the humiliation and insulting of any religion," a reference to the fact that in his novel "The Satanic Verses" Rushdie used the liberties of fiction to create scenes that enraged many Moslems, who pronounced them blasphemous.

'Jane Roe' fears vandalism abortion-related

DALLAS (AP) — The woman known as "Jane Roe" in the landmark Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion is going into hiding indefinitely after three shotgun blasts were fired at her home and car, her roommate said.

"She's real emotional right now," Connie Gonzales, Norma McCorvey's roommate, said Tuesday afternoon. "She's cries and cries. We just want to stop her crying."

FBI agents and the Dallas Police Department were conducting separate investigations into the 4:45 a.m. incident at Ms. McCorvey's home in Dallas on Tuesday.

Someone in a car fired a .410-gauge shotgun, shattering the rear window of Ms. McCorvey's 1981 Oldsmobile, her living room window and the front door of her home, The Dallas Morning News reported.

Ms. McCorvey, the plaintiff in Roe vs. Wade, which resulted in the 1973 Supreme Court decision, told police she believes the shots were intended for her because she plans to speak Sunday in Washington, D.C., at a rally supporting legalized abortion.

But police told The Dallas Morning News that they have no witnesses, confirmed motive or workable leads in the case.

"There's not much we can do with this unless someone comes forward with information," said Detective Paul Lachnitt, who is investigating the shooting.

Ms. Gonzales said Ms. McCorvey was not available for comment Tuesday and that the two were going into hiding indefinitely while their house remained under surveillance.

"This is reality now," Ms. Gonzales said. "This is what it is all about. There are some sick people out there."

The violence Tuesday was the latest of several vandalism incidents aimed at the woman whose court case remains at the center of emotional abortion debates.

Ms. McCorvey's home and car have been egged, she has found baby clothes scattered in her yard and she has received hate mail.

Through the years, Ms. McCorvey has rarely been frightened by the acts, her roommate said. But she was nervous for several days after receiving a picture in the mail of herself with devilish horns drawn on her head and the word "cancer" written across her face.

"She thought things like that didn't hurt her physically and that people were just making a statement," Ms. Gonzales said.

However, when Ms. McCorvey awoke early Tuesday to the sound of shotgun blasts, she was terrified, Ms. Gonzales said.

The two women were asleep in the front of the house when the shots were fired, but they were not injured, officials said.

Following the shooting, Ms. McCorvey remained secluded and a hired security guard at her house turned away visitors and watched all traffic, The Morning News reported. By mid-afternoon, workers had replaced several shattered windows, but Ms. McCorvey's car still sat in the driveway with a large hole in its rear window.

For several months, Ms. McCorvey has been organizing the "Jane Roe Foundation," a group that will seek to further the pro-choice movement.

Mattox drawing criticism for Roe vs. Wade support

AUSTIN (AP) — Anti-abortionists blasted Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox for joining a legal brief in support of the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion, but pro-choice groups immediately rose to Mattox's defense.

"It seems to us this is just another example of Attorney General Mattox using his office, in the most blatant way, to feather his own political nest," Bill Price, president of Texans United for Life, said Tuesday.

But the Texas Abortion Rights Action League issued a news release signed by more than 60 political and religious groups in support of Mattox for joining a legal brief by Massachusetts and six other states supporting the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision. The court is considering a Missouri case that could reverse, or alter a woman's right to an abortion.

"Most Texans feel that abortion is a private matter for women and their families and should be free from government interference.

"There's simply nothing controversial about the state attorney general concurring in support of the law of the land," the news release said.

Price said Mattox, who is considering running for governor in 1990, agreed to the legal brief "to curry favor with the radical special-interest groups that dictate the outcome of Democratic primary elections."

He said "Massachusetts Mattox" should consider running for governor there and later hand-delivered to Mattox's office a candidate application form for governor of Massachusetts.

"Since Michael Dukakis is not seeking re-election, the field is wide open," Price said.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Mattox, said the attorney general joined in support of Roe vs. Wade because "this has to do with the people's right to privacy."

Dusek tagged the "radical" label to Price. "These people are more radical than anyone, running around burning clinics and protesting in front of clinics," he said.

"Mattox takes a stand on issues. He has never been accused of sitting on the fence," Dusek said.

But Price said Mattox has no business speaking for Texas on such a controversial matter. Producing a letter by Gov. Bill Clements, Price said the majority of Texans oppose abortions.

In that March 31 letter, Clements said he supported "the right to life position as do a vast majority of Texans."

"Quite clearly, the people of our great state want the abortion issue decided by the Texas Legislature," Clements said.

Attorneys oppose abortion stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's attempt to get the landmark 1973 decision legalizing abortion overturned got a slap from more than 200 of its attorneys who criticized the position in a petition to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

But Thornburgh aide Dave Runkel said Tuesday the petition "won't have an impact on the department's position" which is urging the Supreme Court to reverse the Roe vs. Wade decision of 1973.

Daley wins Chicago mayor's race, vows to keep doors open

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard M. Daley, scion of Chicago's venerated "Boss," reclaimed the mayor's office his father held for 21 years and promised blacks that City Hall's "doors will remain open."

In ending six years of black control of the nation's third-largest city, Daley defeated black Alderman Timothy C. Evans, who ran as an independent and was backed by Jesse Jackson.

Republican Edward Vrdolyak also ran in Tuesday's court-ordered special election to complete the final two years of the late Mayor Harold Washington's second term.

Daley, 46, used overwhelming white support, low black turnout and the shoe leather of precinct organizations whose efficiency recalled the political army controlled by his father, the late Richard J. Daley.

"We were determined to prove to a doubting world that Chicago has grown beyond the politics of division and name calling," Daley told cheering supporters.

"We've run a campaign that will be remembered not for its angry words, but for the hand of friendship we've extended throughout Chicago."

His victory made Chicago by far the largest U.S. city to replace a black incumbent with a white. It also left intact a Democratic hold on the city dating back to 1931 — including six straight terms captured by the elder Daley before he died in office at age 74.

With 2,895 of 2,911 precincts reporting, or 99 percent, unofficial returns showed the three-term Cook County prosecutor with 575,437 votes, or 56 percent, to Evans' 417,315 votes, or 40 percent.

The 51-year-old Vrdolyak had 36,349 votes, or 4 percent.

Daley overcame his unsuccessful mayoral run in 1983 and Jackson's formidable opposition. It also left in doubt the future of the black political movement that made Washington the city's first black mayor in 1983 and four years later, the city's first mayor since the elder Daley to win re-election.

"The late Mayor Washington opened city government to many citizens who felt excluded and ignored. As long as I am mayor, those doors will remain open to all citizens," Daley said.

The 45-year-old Evans conceded, but not without a pointed question for Daley, whose inauguration date has not been set.

"I have contacted Richard M. Daley and I have congratulated him on his win, and now, what about us?" Evans told a cheering crowd at a downtown hotel.

But Evans also promised his cooperation.

"I certainly don't expect to be an obstructionist at all," said Evans, who ran on the Harold Washington Party ticket. "I'm going to be as cooperative as I can...(but) I would assume reasonable men would differ from time to time."

Daley ran up margins of better than 150-to-1 in two wards on the city's predominantly white Southwest Side and 75-to-1 on the Northwest Side. He also beat Evans handily among liberal voters along the lakefront and Hispanics — two groups that broadened Washington's coalition and handed him a dependable voting bloc in the City Council.

Daley had the support of all three voter blocs in winning the February Democratic primary against Mayor Eugene Sawyer, a black alderman selected by fellow City Council members a week after Washington died in November 1987.

Evans, who skipped the primary to give Sawyer a "clean shot" at Daley, failed to energize black voters any more than Sawyer had — a fact most political commentators attributed to the feud between the two men to succeed Washington.

Even two-time Democratic presidential contender Jackson, who first backed Sawyer and then incurred the wrath of some party officials by supporting Evans, was unable to mend the split.

Jackson reacted to Daley's victory with a call for unity among blacks. "It's true now...neither (faction) can win without each other," he said.

Many people charged Evans and his allies with sabotaging Sawyer's bid and that apparently came back to haunt him.

"We have to blame ourselves," said Lu Palmer, a black activist and popular radio commentator. "After Harold Washington's death, black people spent 14, 15 months fighting each other."

Mindful of how the war of succession among white politicians following the elder Daley's 1976 death paved the way for Washington, Palmer predicted, "We'll have a hard time getting that seat back."

The 17 countries classified as highly indebted by the International Monetary Fund owed more than a half-trillion dollars at the end of 1988. Five of them account for two thirds of the total debt.

Agencies hoping to have debt plan working by July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by concerns of social and political turmoil in Third World countries, government-financed world lending agencies hope to have a new U.S.-sponsored program in place by July for reducing their foreign debt.

"We have an opportunity, if we seize it, to put the worst aspects of the debt crisis behind us," World Bank President Barber Conable said Tuesday at the close of the Bank's spring meeting with the International Monetary Fund.

The sister organizations ended their two-day conference with an endorsement of the Bush administration's new debt initiative, which for the first time asks private banks to voluntarily forgive part of the Third World's $1.3 trillion debt.

Elements of the plan could be put in practice by the time the leaders of the world's economic democracies come together for their annual summit scheduled for July in Paris, officials said.

A delay "could be devastating in view of the expectancies which have been created," Conable said.

Throughout their meetings, officials from around the world spoke repeatedly of social and political powder kegs that could be ignited as living standards continue to stagnate or deteriorate in debt-burdened developing countries.

Riots in Venezuela in February that claimed 270 lives after the government instituted a belt-tightening program to placate the nation's creditors were an "alarm signal," French Finance Minister Pierre Beregovoy told reporters.

B.T. Chidzero, Zimbabwe's finance minister and chairman of the World Bank-IMF development committee, said it was clear to the finance officials "that expectations have been raised. People expect action...Expeditious action is required...Failure (to act) will spell disaster."

Conable said the bank had created a task force that will start work by the end of this week with the IMF on speeding implementation of the new debt relief program.

Cooperation among the Bank, IMF, debtor nations and commercial banks is needed to "flesh out...a feasible plan," he said.

A senior U.S. Treasury official, speaking on condition he not be named, said the Philippines will likely be the first country to qualify for debt relief. Mexico and Venezuela have also been mentioned as early candidates for assistance.

IMF and World Bank approval of the so-called Brady plan named after Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady was critical, since the Bush administration is counting on most of the financing for the debt relief scheme to come from the two organizations.

Basically, the plan seeks to entice banks to forgive a portion of the loans they have made to Third World countries in return for assurances from the IMF and World Bank that the remaining debt will be paid.

The administration projects cutting the debt of 39 major debtor nations by 20 percent over the next three years with financing of about $12 billion each from the IMF and the World Bank.

IMF and World Bank officials refused to discuss specific dollar amounts they would kick into the program, saying that depends on how many countries adopt the economic reform programs required to qualify for the debt relief.

Michael Camdessus, the IMF's managing director, told reporters that his 151-nation organization recognized the need to move quickly to spell out just how the debt relief will work in order to remove uncertainty in ongoing negotiations between debtor countries and creditors.

"Nothing is worse than uncertainty," he said. "The sooner we can assemble a program and provide answers, the better the chance for success."

Twin Cities consider ban against plastics

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The state's Twin Cities could soon be waging an identical attack on plastic food containers with what some consider the nation's strictest ban.

Minneapolis approved the ban last week, and across the Mississippi River, St. Paul City Council is considering the same ordinance.

A City Council committee here was to vote on the measure today. If approved, it would go to the full Council, probably later this month.

"The real theme behind all of this is to send a message to the industry that we can no longer continue to produce non-recyclable food packaging," said Councilman Bob Long, who wrote the ordinance and shared it with Minneapolis.

"We cannot afford it environmentally, and we cannot afford it economically."

The measures were criticized by a plastics industry group whose 11 company members have committed $1 million a year toward developing solutions.

"It's not like we need to receive a message," said Roger Bernstein, whose Washington-based Council for Solid Waste Solutions was formed in October 1988.

— "I think (the Twin Cities) are looking at more of a quick fix that gives them the appearance of having done something rather than working with the industry for a solution."

The Twin Cities' ordinances would prohibit grocery stores and restaurants — primarily fast-food outlets — from selling food wrapped in plastics that can't be recycled, aren't biodegradable or aren't returnable.

Among the items banned would be foam egg cartons and trays in meat packages, plastic products shipped into the state such as ketchup bottles and peanut butter jars, grocery bags, drinking cups, serving trays and plates.

The ordinances, which would take effect July 1, 1990, expand on less stringent laws adopted in New York's Suffolk County, Berkeley, Calif., and Portland, Ore., Long said.

New York and Berkeley don't include plastics shipped in; Portland only bans plastic foam, he said.

Advocates of such bans say plastics take up too much space when buried in landfills and do not decompose. They also argue that plastics might release harmful emissions when burned in incinerators.

Opponents, which include the Minnesota Retail Merchants Association, say they have given up hope of stopping the St. Paul Council from adopting the ban.

The Minnesota Grocers Association is turning its attention to a recycling bill pending in the state Senate that would pre-empt local ordinances, said Joel Hoiland, president of the group.

An advertising campaign by the food and plastics industries urging defeat of the Minneapolis ordinance backfired and prompted thousands of supporters to call council members there.

In the Twin Cities, exceptions would be made for packages that have no substitute, such as microwave dinner trays, and for plastic soda bottles and milk jugs, provided the cities include them in curbside recycling programs.

Tapes reveal defense consultants feared public discovering scheme

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Unaware that the FBI was eavesdropping, a defense consultant in the government's "Ill Wind" investigation of Pentagon procurement fraud joked with a business associate about what would happen if ordinary Americans discovered their bribery scheme.

"If the farmers in Indiana knew what you were doing with their money, they would come up there and kill you with their pitchforks," Fred Lackner told defense consultant William L. Parkin on a tape of their telephone conversation. The tape was played Tuesday by prosecutors at the first trial resulting from the two-year investigation.

Lackner's comment, recorded by one of four FBI bugs placed on Parkins' home and office telephones in 1987 and 1988, was on two hours of tapes played for jurors at the trial of three Teledyne Electronics Inc. executives accused of participating in a bribery scheme to get a $24 million Navy contract.

Lackner's remark drew hearty laughter from Parkin.

Both men pleaded guilty last month to participating in the scheme to bribe Navy procurement official Stuart E. Berlin to obtain inside information for the California-based company.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica said he expected the prosecution would rest its case by Thursday. Parkin was expected to testify today, and prosecutors planned to play another two hours of tape recordings.

The tapes included numerous conversations between Lackner and Parkin, detailing their efforts to obtain confidential bid information that would help Teledyne in its negotiations with the Pentagon.

They also provided evidence of repeated requests for such information by Eugene R. Sullivan, one of the three Teledyne executives on trial in U.S. District Court in this suburb of Washington.

During a conversation June 19, 1987, Lackner furnished Parkin with details sought by Sullivan about how much the Army, Navy and Air Force were prepared to spend to procure hand-held radar testing devices.

"The deal is just a tad over $4.2 million," Lackner reported. "Always helpful to know when you're negotiating," he said with a laugh.

After Teledyne negotiated the contract, Parkin pressured company executive George H. Kaub, another defendant, to make good on Teledyne's promise to pay Parkin a $150,000 consulting fee.

During a conversation July 8, 1987, Parkin told Kaub that he had helped eliminate Teledyne's competition so that the company would qualify as a "sole-source provider" of the military equipment.

U.S. should block missile programs

Contemplate the chilling implications of a time when fanatical regimes in the Third World will possess not only nuclear warheads but also ballistic missiles capable of striking cities half a continent away. That terrifying moment, far from being a distant worry, is nearly at hand for the world community.

India is the latest developing country to master the deathly combination of nuclear arms and ballistic-missile technology. Early this month, New Delhi is expected to test fire a launcher with a range of 1,500 miles and a one-ton payload.

India almost certainly has the capacity to produce nuclear weapons, despite official denials. With the development of the new ballistic missile, called the Agni, India will soon have the potential capacity to deliver atomic warheads to targets as far away as the horn of Africa, deep inside the Soviet Union and China, and Southeast Asia.

The prime purpose of New Delhi's missile program, however, is to intimidate its arch foe, Pakistan, and enhance its military and political power in Southwest Asia. Not surprisingly, the events in India are spurring Pakistan's efforts to build the bomb and rockets to deliver it across the subcontinent. Pakistan's missile program is believed to have benefited from Chinese assistance and technology borrowed from Western commercial space launchers.

Even more ominous are the military advances being made by radical Mideast countries. Iraq, which used both conventionally armed missiles and chemical weapons in its war with Iran, is reportedly rebuilding its fledgling nuclear arms program. In 1981, Israeli warplanes destroyed an atomic reactor near Baghdad that was being used to develop nuclear warheads. Similarly, Libya is engaged in secret programs to build the bomb, ballistic launchers and poison gas munitions.

Israel, which is believed to possess a nuclear arsenal, has recently tested its Jericho 2 launcher, with a range of 900 miles. Meantime, Saudi Arabia has purchased Chinese-produced missiles with a 1,200-mile range and the capability of carrying conventional, nuclear or chemical warheads.

By the year 2000, at least 15 developing nations will be producing their own ballistic missiles, according to an estimate by the CIA. Most of these are among those already believed to be involved in some form of nuclear-arms program, including South Africa, Argentina, Brazil, Taiwan, North and South Korea.

What these developments demonstrate is that the international controls implemented by the United States and its allies to stop the proliferation of chemical and nuclear weapons in the Third World have been woefully inadequate. And, to an extent, we have put ourselves in this situation since much of the advanced technology and materials used to produce these arms in developing countries were provided by Western companies.

In conjunction with other industrialized countries including the Soviet Union, the Bush administration now needs to take the lead in devising a program of comprehensive safeguards to help check the nuclear-missile competition among Third World countries. Stiff international sanctions against nations and companies that participate in these arms programs would be a good place to begin.

Sex education vital

I am amazed that people such as Charles Swift, Becky Lofton and other opposers of sexuality education cannot grasp the true meaning of this concept, nor fully understand its impact for our community and society. Let's get beyond abstinence and "just say no"!

Sexuality education is inevitable — it begins at birth and continues throughout our lives. Sexuality is who and what we are as females and males; it is what makes each one of us the inimitable individuals that we are. Sexuality education begins at birth, when infants are dressed, caressed and held in "gender-appropriate" ways. Young children continue to learn about themselves and others as they observe family behavior, communication, relationships and gender role behaviors. Here, they learn such things as love, respect, and affection. The process continues throughout childhood; educational sources being friends, teachers, the media and family.

When we speak of sexuality education in our schools, we are asking administrators and educators to continue this educational process of teaching about life, about choices, decisions and responsibility. Ultimately, sexuality education would make our children and teens better equipped to make responsible decisions about friendships, other relationships, health, educational and career options, and yes, about sexual activity. If the facts and consequences are taught early, a person will make an informed decision, a responsible one.

Abstinence, contraceptions and postponement are all choices about sexual activity. If we refuse to teach comprehensive sexuality education in the schools, where do our children and teens get the information with which to make responsible decisions? From their misinformed friends and uninformed boyfriends/girlfriends who still believe that "you can't get pregnant the first time you have sex"? From television, with its romantic, spontaneous, consequence-free portrayal of sexuality? From print media, which uses teens and sex as marketing tools? (Have you seen a Calvin Klein ad lately?) From music lyrics and M-TV where sexuality, and love are so overrated? Sexuality education will tell the real story.

Unfortunately, not all children come from loving homes, not all families can discuss sexuality and related issues, not all parents can be available for communication, and not all children have equal resources and influences. Therefore, we need cooperation and participation from the school, the church, the family, and the (responsible) media to provide timely, accurate and comprehensive sexuality education in this community.

I was recently on business in the United States and one of the companies I visited was in Midland.

I wish to inform your readers that Midland was the highlight of my trip and I spent a very happy week there. The people were so kind and while you may not have the English countryside, or the weather, there is another beauty of awesome quality in the flat desert areas.

I had the pleasure to stay with Clifton and Kathy Jacks and family, the owners of Diamond Water Systems International Inc. That family is a credit to the people of Texas and America.

I look forward to returning as soon as possible and being among such lovely people again. Tony Bennett may have left his heart in San Francisco, but I left mine in Midland, Texas.

NRC balks at watchdog appointment

WASHINGTON — The agency that is supposed to regulate nuclear power in America waged an internal, scorched-earth campaign earlier this year in an apparent effort to rid itself of several top investigators.

Jack Anderson

And the fingerprints of some of the highest officials at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have been found in the rubble of this fiasco.

Last year, Congress mandated that beginning this April 15 the NRC will have an inspector general — an independent official inside the NRC who will report waste, fraud and abuse to Congress. Congress called for the creation of that position after repeated revelations that the NRC was too close to the industry it is supposed to regulate and may have tried to stop its own investigators from pursuing wrongdoing by nuclear power companies.

Congressional investigators and agency sources suspect the NRC began this latest campaign to purge a number of those conscientious investigators before the inspector general came on board. With the inspector general in place, it will be harder for the NRC to rid itself of any thorns in its side.

The NRC launched a probe of Ben Hayes, director of the Office of Investigations, for allegedly abusing travel funds and doling out unjustified cash awards to investigators. Another inquiry was launched in a failed effort to find out who provided information to our associate Stewart Harris, who, for the past two years, has reported details of the NRC's coziness with the industry.

But the witch hunt that has piqued the most interest on Capitol Hill involves Roger Fortuna, deputy director of the NRC Office of Investigations.

Behind the scenes stands Victor Stello, the NRC's executive director of operations. A slush fund created by Stello was used to pay an informant to provide testimony and evidence against Fortuna. Unlike the FBI, the NRC is not authorized to pay snitches. So, when the agency hired an informer, it called him a "contractor" and paid him $6,000.

An NRC spokesman defended the "contractor" arrangement, saying it has been used in the past.

The contractor was Douglas Ellison, a former employee at the Nine Mile Point nuclear power plant near Syracuse, N.Y. We obtained a transcript of Ellison's testimony, which shows that the NRC wanted to know if Fortuna had given sensitive investigative information to opponents of nuclear power.

The payment to Ellison appears to have been a waste. He could provide few details. When asked if Fortuna had leaked information to outsiders, Ellison said, "I don't know that for certain." Tape recordings of Fortuna's telephone conversations with nuclear power opponents reveal no disclosure of secrets, according to sources close to the investigation. Fortuna remains suspended from his job, with pay.

The NRC's nemesis, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, is investigating the payments to Ellison. Reps. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., and George Miller, D-Calif., wrote a protest letter to the NRC calling the payments "disgraceful" and a "mockery of the NRC's investigative process."

The NRC inquiries were taken out of the hands of Sharon Connelly, director of the NRC Office of Inspector and Auditor, after "Inside NRC," a newsletter that covers the nuclear power industry, learned that Ellison was being paid out of what the newsletter called a "slush fund." A former administrative judge is now handling the investigations.

Stello declined to talk to us. An agency official close to the inquiries denied that there was any coordinated campaign to get rid of the investigators.

NEWT'S HIT LIST — House Democrats are preparing for a civil war. They want to attack the Republican pit bull, Newt Gingrich, before he attacks them. Gingrich, of Georgia, is the new House minority leader. He may look like a conservative blowhard, but his fellow members of Congress don't underestimate his power. It was Gingrich who initiated the ethics investigation into House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas. An aide to Gingrich told us the new minority leader has a list of Democrats that he wants to take on when he finishes with Wright. The list includes Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California and 16 others.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Once again, your tax dollars are combating drug dealers with paperwork. As of last month, federal law requires that every contract signed with the federal government include paperwork in which the contractor guarantees that the work will be done in a drug-free environment. We'll wager a paper-shredder that no contractor ever answers "no" to the question.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, April 5, the 95th day of 1989. There are 270 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 5, 1887, teacher Anne Sullivan achieved a major breakthrough with her blind and deaf pupil, Helen Keller, by conveying to her the meaning of the word "water" in the Manual Alphabet.

On this date:

In 1614, American Indian princess Pocahontas married English colonist John Rolfe in Virginia.

In 1621, the "Mayflower" sailed from Plymouth, Mass., on a return trip to England.

In 1649, Elihu Yale, the English philanthropist for whom Yale University is named, was born.

In 1856, black American educator Booker T. Washington was born in Franklin County, Va.

Somewhere there's another Ollie North!

I don't worry about Ollie North any more. What he has done, he has done. Now a jury of his peers (most of whom don't read the headlines, watch television or talk about the news) will decide his guilt or innocence.

Art Buchwald

What does concern me is that somewhere in the bowels of the White House, maybe at this very moment, there's a Marine colonel or an Air Force major named Solly South. He is dreaming of becoming another Ollie and is saying to his secretary, Dawn:

"I would love to do something heroic and illegal today to save the Bahamas."

Dawn answers, "What a neat idea, Solly. If you draw up the plans, I'll shred them."

"Maybe I will sell MX missiles to Gadhafi and use the money to buy AK-47s for the Cuba-Libre freedom fighters."

"What a heroic thought. I'll carry the sales slips to Switzerland in my bra."

"How much do you think the president should know about what I'm doing, Dawn?"

"Just enough so that if you get caught, you can say he made you do it."

"Exactly. I am not the type of hero who falls on my sword for my Commander-in-Chief."

"Of course you're not, Solly. Military people don't do that any more. I can't wait to write a book about my role in all of this."

"Dawn, we have to find some shady munitions dealers to act as go-betweens."

"That won't be hard to do, Solly. I'll let my fingers do the walking in the Yellow Pages to 'S' for shady. If we are serious about this, then I'm going to need more burn bags."

"I'll see if I can get the money for them from the king of Saudi Arabia. He owes us for the AWACs we gave him. Dawn, get my lawyer on the phone."

"I didn't know that you had a lawyer!"

"Everybody needs an attorney when they are about to do something unconstitutional for the good of the country. Ollie North's mistake was that he waited too long. Now he is in court fighting for his life."

"Which lawyer do you want me to call?"

"Any one, as long as he is not a potted plant."

"Just think, Solly, now there are so many people who don't even know your name, but who will worship you someday."

"Even though I was just following orders?"

"Because you were following orders. What man can say no to the president of the United States?"

"Dawn, I think you're putting too many papers in the hem of your skirt — they keep bulging out."

"I'll hide the rest up here next to my heart. If a guard tries to search me, I'll sue him for female abuse."

"You're a good secretary, Dawn. My whole plan wouldn't work if it wasn't for you. Why are you stamping 'Top Secret' on the U.S. Constitution?"

"Because then the prosecutor can't use it against you."

"Good thinking, Dawn. Stuff it next to your girdle until we get out of the building. That's one document we don't want to leak."

Hemispheric allies recognize drug threat

ATLANTA — There has been a dramatic shift of perspective on the drug plague among leaders of other nations in the Western Hemisphere. This is vitally important for the U.S., if we know how to use it.

Flora Lewis

Not long ago, most countries in the Americas considered "the war on drugs" a strictly U.S. problem, even a form of Yankee aggression.

The stock answer to Washington's complaints was that "your market provokes the supply; clean up your own house."

Now there is an urgent new sense that everybody is menaced. This was clearly expressed at a meeting of hemispheric leaders at the Jimmy Carter Center here.

Only the problem of debts, linked to drugs because of economic fragility, outweighed this concern among Latin and Caribbean representatives.

Jamaica's prime minister, Michael Manley, who seems to have undergone a sea change since his previous Yank-bashing term in office, said: "We used to say economic reform was just something the U.S. wanted. Now we see we need it for our own sake. People said drugs are a U.S. concern, not our worry. Now we see we need (controls) even more than you. We are more vulnerable to these vicious people and we need help. This is the greatest international criminal conspiracy we've ever known."

And he went on to say: "There has to be an international response. It affects individuals, society, above all democracy."

President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela has said drug trafficking is now the biggest threat to sovereignty in Latin America.

Others pointed out that small countries are even more susceptible to the insidious subversion than the United States because they can't cope on their own with the corruption, violence and economic distortion the drug traffic brings.

There are some important differences for countries that actually produce narcotic plants, those which process drugs and others used for transit.

But they are coming to see the whole business as a "catastrophic invasion," as one leader said. "The dealers don't respect borders, so we have to organize ourselves against them."

This raises the sensitive issue of sovereignty. It is a major political question in every country of the hemisphere. Americans underestimate the depth of resistance and anger provoked when they try to enforce controls abroad with heavy-handed pressures.

Manley raised it as another aspect of the need for joint action. He suggested a U.N. force. A multilateral effort would be far more acceptable than straight U.S. intervention, in his view. But, he stressed, outside help is really essential.

The U.N. is probably not a good idea in the circumstances. It is too political, too cumbersome for this highly technical job.

Perhaps some U.N. agencies like the World Health Organization and the Food and Agriculture Organization could be used, in conjunction with Interpol, the independent link among police forces. Perhaps a special group should be established.

But a way of demonstrating shared responsibility and interest is necessary, and it is at last becoming possible.

As another government head said bluntly, the hemisphere's "human resources are at stake, the most precious resource we have — we are all concerned."

Colombia has become a horrible example of a country losing control of its destiny to drug barons.

A Panamanian exile said his own country was an example of the new phenomenon of "narco-militarism," where the drug mafia takes over the military and subjects the whole country to its rule.

The result, he said, is that the dictator can't leave even if he wants to "because you don't resign from the mafia," and the separate drug economy flourishes while the national economy goes down the drain.

Energetically reducing demand to shut down the enormous American market is critical, of course, and the United States is only beginning to deal with that vast social problem.

It is also an important part of the supply problem, because most of the chemicals required to process coca into cocaine are shipped by American chemical firms, notably Dow, without controls.

But the good news at this stage is that furious allies want to join the war on drugs. The U.S. national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, is aware that it will take careful diplomacy and tactful support to enlist them effectively.

This should be a major new front for the administration. We all need help against the foe.

'Are You O.K.?' computer system checks on elderly

COON RAPIDS, Minn. (AP) — A self-taught computer wizard is attracting the attention of police from around the nation and Scotland Yard for a computer dialing program that checks on elderly people who live alone.

"Good morning!" the recorded message announces. "Are you O.K.?"

If the recipient of the call utters a response, the computer assumes the answer is yes and moves on to the next person. If there's no answer or the telephone is busy, the computer repeats the call.

But if there's no answer a second or third time, the computer designed by Bruce Johnson sounds an alert to law enforcement officials who dispatch a squad car to see if anyone is in danger.

"It's a good deal all the way through," said Clyde Ritter, 73, of rural Osage, Iowa. "They say it saved my life."

Ritter had gone into a diabetic coma one morning in August at his home five miles northwest of Osage.

The town's "Are You O.K.?" computer at police headquarters alerted authorities that Ritter failed to answer a second call, and a deputy sheriff was sent to the home. He found Ritter comatose and summoned an ambulance.

"I guess I credit the system for saving at least one life," said Osage Police Officer Michael DeKruif. "We've had tremendous success with it."

Besides Ritter's rescue, the system has alerted Osage police to an elderly man whose hands were caught in a window — trapping him inside his own home — and to three elderly people who had fallen in their homes and needed police to help them.

"I haven't seen anything like it," said Retha Jefferson, a police department desk officer in Belhaven, N.C. "It's just that officers respond to calls all the time of neighbors not seeing their neighbors for two or three days and then it's too late."

Jefferson, who manually calls about 45 elderly people each day to check on them, said Belhaven is raising $7,000 to buy a system.

The 41-year-old Johnson said he developed the program about a year ago for Osage "more or less as a public service" while he was living in nearby Austin, Minn. Johnson had video stores in Austin and Osage and was considered a computer guru by friends.

Members of the police department had heard of a computer dialing system in Carthage, Mo., and they wanted Johnson to improve on it.

"I foolishly told the city, 'I'll write it for you,'" Johnson said. "It took me 14 months."

Thanks to publicity in law enforcement journals, the project has blossomed into a full-time business for Johnson, a former Army and National Guard officer.

Only Osage, Charles City, Iowa, and Sutherlin, Ore., are on line with the system, but inquiries and purchase orders have been pouring in from all over.

"We had a call from Scotland Yard on it," said Robert O'Keefe, the only other officer in Johnson's home-based company, Northland Innovations.

"The whole thing has caught me off guard," Johnson said. "Maybe I'm achieving the American dream by accident, but that's OK."

Johnson, a two-time University of Minnesota dropout who has lived in Brazil, Germany and the Bronx, started to teach himself about computers in 1982 when he was bedridden for six months with a back injury.

He said "Are You O.K.?" programs are flexible and easy to operate.

Bruce Johnson of Coon Rapids, Minn. has converted a hobby of computer programming into a full-time business with his development of a computerized calling system that checks on the welfare of elderly people who live alone.

Moody's gives NCNB CDs highest rating

Short-term certificates of deposit at NCNB Texas National Bank on Monday received the highest rating from Moody's Investors Service Inc., which also raised its ratings of the bank's long-term certificates.

The rating agency said the terms of the agreement between federal regulators and NCNB Texas offered "significant protection" for account holders at the bank. NCNB Corp. of Charlotte, N.C., last July agreed to buy the former banks of First RepublicBank Corp. from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Moody's raised its grading of short-term deposits at NCNB Texas to Prime-1 from Prime-3. The bank's long-term certificates went to Single-A1, a jump of five grades from the bank's former BAA3 rating.

"The magnitude of the increase in our ratings was unusual but understandable in light of the vigor of NCNB Texas," chairman Francis B. "Buddy" Kemp said in a prepared statement.

With News Like This, Who Needs Advertising?

A lot of banks have been in the news recently. At NCNB Texas, unlike a lot of places, our news has been very positive. Downright good, in fact. The financial rating firm of Moody's called our short-term CDs some of the best in the land. They praised our long-term CDs, as well.

That's what one firm says. Is there other news? You bet. Did you know that NCNB Texas is a member of one of the 10 largest banking organizations in America that manages over $50 billion in assets? Or that one out of every four Texans banks with us?

Those are some very big numbers. But they all add up to say that NCNB is a strong and stable place to see your financial needs met. If you're looking for a loan, we've got $3 billion to loan to consumers right now. If you're looking to invest, just check out our chart. It's got some of the highest rates listed in Texas. To be sure, rates and terms are subject to change, so you might want to visit the nearest NCNB Texas location for details. And tell them you want to join the bank that's making good news in Texas. Trial postponed of Midlander accused of assaulting officer

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The trial of a 52-year-old Midlander accused of assaulting a police detective who shot him has been postponed. Meanwhile, the attorney for Howard Lee Mitchell has asked a judge to move the trial because of what he termed "inflammatory and unfair" publicity.

The trial of Mitchell, who is accused of the aggravated assault of 32-year-old Brian Bogart on Aug. 6, 1988, was scheduled to begin Tuesday, but was postponed after his court-appointed attorney, Tom Morgan, asked for a continuance in the case.

In the motion, Morgan said a "very important" defense witness, Lubbock forensic expert Jack Benton, was unable to travel to Midland for the trial this week.

"The importance of his testimony will be evident at trial," Morgan said in his motion. In prior interviews, the attorney said his defense would include a different version of events than that commented on by police.

Morgan also has filed a motion with 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin for a change of venue.

In the motion filed March 31, Morgan maintains publicity about the case has created "so great a prejudice against the defendant that the defendant cannot receive a fair trial by a fair and impartial jury."

The motion continues: "Due to extensive pre-trial publicity, especially from the Midland Reporter-Telegram, the defendant cannot receive a fair trial because such pre-trial publicity has been inflammatory, unfair and created such hostility toward the defendant."

Morgan today had little comment on the case.

"The motion speaks for itself," he said. "And I will be filing numerous affidavits to the effect that he cannot receive a fair trial."

Mitchell was shot by Bogart outside the Bojangles Club, 3709 W. Wall Ave., after the detective arrived at the club parking lot, according to police. After Bogart arrested a man outside the club for public intoxication, the officer spotted Mitchell in a pickup truck with a revolver in his lap.

When Mitchell "displayed" the gun but refused to drop it after several warnings, Bogart fired twice from a nine-millimeter pistol. Mitchell's weapon, a six-shot .38-caliber revolver, was fully loaded but not fired in the incident, according to police.

Midland District Attorney Al Schorre, who will prosecute the case, promised it would be "an interesting" trial, and dismissed the importance of Morgan's expert witness.

"And we also have expert testimony," the prosecutor said. Asked to anticipate the defense, he predicted Bogart might be accused of using excessive force.

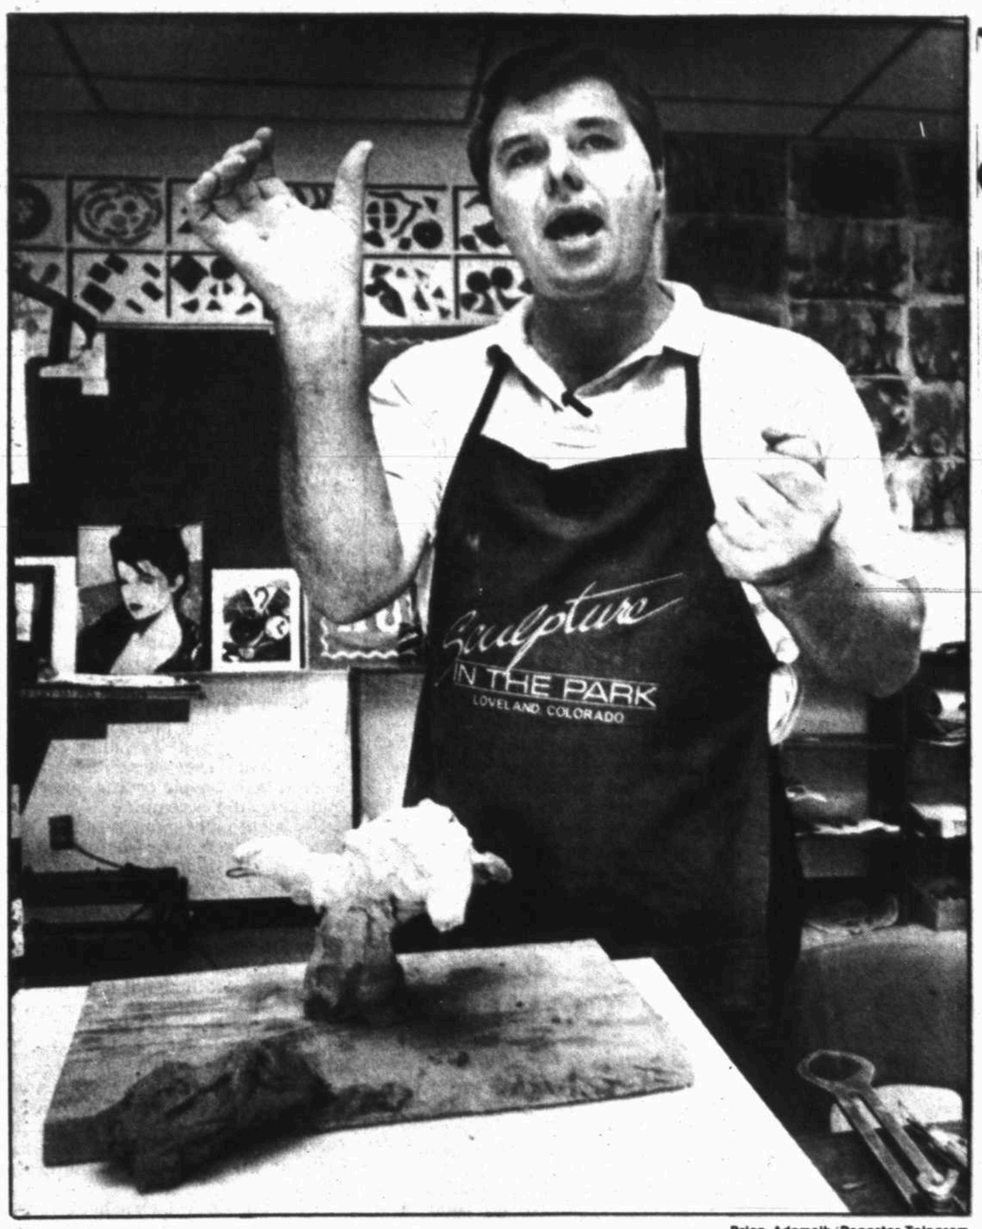

"We would anticipate that type of innuendo," Schorre said, adding that "typical defense attorney tactics" and "shenanigans" could be expected from Morgan, a former Midland County prosecutor.

Schorre declined comment on Morgan's request to move the trial from Midland.

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said late Tuesday he stands behind his officer.

"I don't know anything about his expert witness, but my support for Bogart is all the way," Czech said. "As far as his accusation of excessive publicity is concerned, a court will have to decide that."

The trial will probably be reset for sometime in May, Schorre said.

Dr. Robert Taylor explains the art of sculpting for aesthetics and profit to Greenwood High School art students.

Snyder sculptor explains art process to GISD students

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

GREENWOOD — Creating "art for art's sake" might not be too practical for an artist who intends to make a living selling his works.

"A lot of my sculptures are decided by what people will buy," said Dr. Robert Taylor, a former world champion rodeo rider and an ex-veterinarian who gave up his practice to pursue his hobby-turned-livelihood — sculpturing wildlife and Western characters, from cowboys to Indians.

"I am grateful that I can do somethings I like," Taylor, 40, told Greenwood High School art students. "But unless I can sell, the banker wants to know where his money is, and it's not fun when he comes to take your house."

Taylor explained the art process — from concept and sketching to shaping clay about the armature and detailing the art form.

"Too many people jump into detailing before they get their shape and form in." And, he noted, those "little, tiny subtleties" ultimately "causes a piece of art to look right."

Following shaping and detailing are the foundry processes that convert the clay image to bronze figures.

"What's expensive," Taylor said, "is my time and the foundry costs."

Taylor is an artist at heart but not by formal training.

"I went through the backdoor."

Taylor, who grew up near Sweetwater, rodeoed in his youth, traveled the rodeo circuit where his interest in art museums and galleries developed, graduated from Texas A&M University's veterinary school in 1973, and set up his practice in Snyder — a West Texas town of about 12,000 people.

Taylor maintained his veterinary practice while he dabbled in art, until the early 1980s, when he sold his practice and focused his talent, time and energy on sculpturing. The venture was "both frightening and exciting," he noted, since he was supporting a family.

"Actually, I was looking for a hobby after I got out of school," Taylor said. "It was a fluke." His first pieces were "awful," he confessed.

"I kept working and studying, and they (sculptures) started getting better and better. It became my livelihood."

In launching a project, Taylor studies his subject in life, by photography and video tape. His works include eagles, ducks, quail, sailfish, horses, bighorn sheep, pronghorn antelope, grizzly bear, buffalo and Indians.

His works have been selected as "Best of Show" in the Minnesota Wildlife and Western Art Exhibit, the Kansas City National Wildlife Art Show, the Iowa Wildlife Art Show, and the Buffalo Gap Arts Festival in Abilene.

"Eagles are real popular," he said, "and I like to do them. Ducks are good. Quail sell real well. Right now, I am concentrating on birds rather than game animals."

Taylor's 3/5ths-scale, limited edition eagle sells for $5,500 in bronze and for $20,000 in silver — 100 troy pounds of silver.

"That is not all profit — believe me," he said.

"You don't always want price to be a consideration," Taylor said, "but sometimes it becomes real important. I have to have a feel how much the thing will sell for" when he is creating art form.

Taylor's visit to Greenwood on Tuesday came through his friendship with Greenwood art teacher Sandra Hodges, who formerly lived in Snyder.

Teachers think they deserve raise in pay

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas teachers, complaining they have been ignored and are slipping behind teachers in other states, say they deserve a pay raise and a minimal state health insurance program.

A national survey released Tuesday showed that Texas fell to 31st in average teacher salary, the state's lowest ranking since 1980-81.

Failing to respond to this decline "would be tantamount to a wholesale retreat from the race for educational excellence," said Charles N. Beard Jr., president of the Texas State Teachers Association.

But Beard said he hasn't had much luck in convincing state leaders.

"It seems that when we talk with them (legislators) individually they will all agree that the teachers are very deserving of a pay increase in this state.

"But yet when we mention that word called taxes, they all kind of want to turn away from it a little bit," Beard said.

A spokesman for Gov. Bill Clements said he would support a teacher pay raise if funds are available. Clements has said he will veto any tax increase.

"The primary consideration is available revenue. The governor would like to see all public employees receive a raise," said Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary.

Teacher salaries in Texas fell from 27th in 1987-88 to 31st, according to the survey by the National Education Association.

Texas' approximately 175,000 teachers have not received a state pay increase since 1984 when sweeping education reforms were approved. That salary boost placed Texas 21st among the 50 states and the District of Columbia.

The 1988-89 average teacher salary in Texas is $26,513, or $3,054 less than the national average of $29,567.

The statistics show Texas is losing its commitment to the 1984 reforms, Beard said. "We're setting ourselves up in Texas to fail as an industrial state. The prisons are full of people that didn't finish school," he said.

But Bashur, said state leaders are committed to public school teachers, but because of Texas' economic problems they have not been able to give a raise.

"We have been in the last several years in budgetary constraints. The Legislature has devoted much of its effort to economic development and the economic recovery," Bashur said.

Senator says study shows politics not factor in SSC site

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Dennis DeConcini says he's now convinced politics was not the deciding factor in the Energy Department's choice of Texas for the $4.6 billion super collider.

DeConcini, an Arizona Democrat, said a study by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, found that the site was chosen on the basis of scientific merit, not political muscle wielded by such influential Texans as House Speaker Jim Wright and President Bush.

DeConcini requested the GAO study after senators from some of the six other finalist states charged politics was behind the DOE's decision to locate the particle accelerator south of Dallas.

The Texas site was announced days after Bush was elected president, over finalist sites in Arizona, Michigan, Illinois, North Carolina, Tennessee and Colorado.

"To me it looked like it was political at the time. It doesn't look as much that way now," DeConcini said. "Arizona lost it fair and square," although he said he was "sorry to admit" Texas had the better site.

"Our limited analysis provided us no reason to question the decision to site the super collider in Texas," the GAO said in testimony that was to be given today at a House hearing on the site selection process.

"We found that the task force evaluated and rated the proposed sites in accordance with the technical and cost criteria, and provided evidence to support its ratings," GAO said.

DeConcini, who was briefed Tuesday by GAO, said the study resolves his concerns about the selection process and he is now ready to support the particle accelerator in Congress, where it faces an uncertain future as the DOE seeks approval and money to begin construction.

"Had it been a political decision, I would have washed my hands of support," DeConcini said.

The GAO, however, said it had unresolved technical questions about tunneling in Illinois for the 53-mile underground ring, the theory used to evaluate the electrical power subcriterion, and the impact of caves in Tennessee on that proposed site.

"GAO's verdict is no surprise to those of us who have been heavily involved in pushing the project forward in recent years. Texas won the super collider for the best of reasons: hard work and technical merit," said Sen. Phil Gramm, a Texas Republican.

DeConcini said he would support funding the project on a "limited basis" because money is tight and he doesn't want to see other science projects, especially in Arizona, suffer cuts to pay for the collider.

DeConcini is a member of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on energy and water development, which will decide the collider's funding.

"How do you pay for it? You don't just take it out of the little bit of money available for energy development," he said, adding that he does not see Congress authorizing a "massive" construction project if the administration doesn't reveal the source of the money.

The Bush adminstration is seeking $250 million for the collider, including $160 million for initial construction, in next year's budget.

This is the third year the Energy Department has asked Congress to authorize construction.

Last year, Congress appropriated $100 million although the president had requested $363 million to begin initial construction, pushing back the targeted date of completion.

The project is now targeted to be built by 1998, instead of the original 1996 completion, said DOE spokesman Jeff Sherwood.

Other senators who requested the GAO study were Alan Dixon and Paul Simon of Illinois, Carl Levin and Donald Riegle of Michigan, and Timothy Wirth of Colorado. All are Democrats.

Men plead guilty to calling for gambling information

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Two Odessa businessmen pleaded guilty today in federal court to misdemeanor offenses of making Odessa-to-Las Vegas telephone calls to acquire football gambling information in September 1986.

Pleading guilty were Jimmy Leon Richards, 45, and Michael Chane Alcorn, 44. They were charged, following probes by the FBI, of assisting Charles Ronald "Pepsi Red" Klinger in his gambling operations.

Richards and Alcorn are to be sentenced by U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton at noon on April 26, when the judge also is to sentence Klinger, 44, and Robert Thomas Rice, 40.

Richards and Alcorn each could be sentenced to up to one year in prison and fined $125,000, Bunton noted.

Klinger and Rice earlier pleaded guilty to the felony offenses of operating an illegal gambling business involving professional and collegiate football games.

Store fire being investigated

From Staff Reports

Investigators say they are still looking into a fire which heavily damaged the Pecan Grove Grocery in east Midland County early Tuesday.

Seven units and 15 firefighters were called to the store at 5501 East U.S. Highway 80 just before 7 a.m., when the fire was discovered by the owner Don Mulkey, according to reports.

Investigator Emmett Roch said the fire began when a deep fryer in the kitchen area ignited, and burned through a false ceiling into the attic of the building. Portable extinguishers in the store were used but could not contain the fire, Roch said.

No injuries were reported in the blaze.

The store sustained heavy smoke and heat damage, and the delicatessen portion of the store sustained fire damage, as did the back of the store and roof.

The Northeast Volunteer Fire Department also was at the scene of the fire with two tanker trucks, reports said.

Cancer victim honorary firefighter

By JEFF SOUTH

GARLAND (AP) — Cancer couldn't extinguish 3-year-old Adam Gabrielson's fascination with firefighting: Around his Garland home, he wore a fireman's hat, drew pictures of fire engines and dreamed about joining the fire department.

"It was all he could talk about," said Cheryl Gabrielson, mother of the terminally ill boy. "Maybe it was because he felt it was so out of reach."

But last week, Adam's wish came true. He was made an honorary member of the Dallas Fire Department — and received a shiny badge and a miniature firefighting suit, complete with boots and helmet.

"Wow!" Adam exclaimed during ceremonies arranged by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of North Texas, which tries to fulfill the dreams of children with life-threatening illnesses. "I'm a fireman."

A few minutes later, while eating a slice from a cake shaped like a fire truck, Adam got a taste of action. The alarm at Fire Station 42 sounded: Water utility workers had accidentally ruptured a natural gas line.

Several firefighters at the party donned their gear and dashed off. Adam, who has been battling bladder and prostate cancer since it was diagnosed in October 1987, was carried outside so he could watch the fire engines depart with sirens blaring.

"That's what I'll remember most," he said.

By then, fire trucks were old hat. In the morning, Adam climbed and rode on several vehicles at the department's training facility — and even helped aim the hose at a demonstration fire.

At 12:30 p.m., a fire engine took Adam and his mother, a 30-year-old nurse, to the station at 3333 W. Mockingbird Lane. There, Adam — who must take intravenous medicine daily and undergo a week of radiation therapy every month at Children's Medical Center in Dallas — received his firefighting garb.

Fire Chief Dodd Miller also gave Adam a framed certificate making him an honorary firefighter. "You represent the type of person and courage that this department represents," he said.

Adam was given a blue uniform with a departmental patch on the sleeve and a matching cap. Deputy Chief Karen Bass gave Adam some red suspenders, the only item that was too big. Adam also received a radio and a toy fire engine.

Then there was the yellow fire-resistant suit, with "Chief Adam" in orange letters on the back. The suit, customized to fit the 36-inch-tall boy and donated by Fyrepel Inc. of Ohio, was worth at least $700, said Sherri Seidel, the Make-A-Wish board member who handled Adam's request.

She got his name from the hospital and visited him at home. "He came to the door wearing a fire hat, and it was pretty obvious what his wish would be," Seidel said.

Last year, the foundation served 35 children, fulfilling wishes that ranged from installing a swimming pool to meeting Michael Jackson. But this was the first time, Seidel said, that a child desired to be a firefighter.

"I want to put out fires and save people," said Adam, who will turn 4 on April 23.

Gabrielson said her son is a good sport despite the pain of cancer and the discomfort of chemotherapy. "He cries, but he never complains," she said.

"He knows he has cancer, but he doesn't have a concept of death. We just take each day one at a time."

Refugee wants to serve his new country

By CHAD HUNTLEY

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Triet Minh Bui, a refugee from South Vietnam, believes he owes something to the country that accepted him.

Serving as an Air Force trainee at Lackland, Bui has his sights set on an education and a military career after a nightmarish struggle to reach the United States.

Bui, 23, survived a seven-day boat trip across the South China Sea to Malaysia and a refugee camp where he stayed before flying to the United States.

"It's like heaven," he said. "We are very lucky to live in this country. Young Americans should not take it for granted. They don't realize what they have."

His account of the harrowing boat trip won him a first prize in an essay contest at Sacramento State University, but has etched indelible memories that still cause him nightmares.

The boat, crowded with 92 people, sailed without food, water and extra fuel due to a series of errors.

He said Thai pirates attacked the boat people, robbing them of valuables, clothing, even the boat's compass.

"We saw them raping our wives, our sisters, our friends, our people," he wrote, saying the pirates were armed with guns and axes.

"We saw it but we could not do anything, because we were helpless. I could hear people crying, praying, bouncing and screaming."

Bui spent eight months in two Malaysian refugee camps before he received permission to enter the United States.

He enrolled in Napa College in California and worked at a variety of jobs, including kitchen helper, groundskeeper, librarian aide, teacher's aide and hospital interpreter.

Bui then advanced to Sacramento State University, majoring in mechanical engineering, until he decided on a career in the Air Force.

He has just completed basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base and will continue training at Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita Falls as an environment support specialist.

"I want to finish tech school, apply for U.S. citizenship, attend the airman education commissioning program and become an officer."

Bui fears that because many family members — including his father, a former South Vietnamese congressman — remain in Vietnam, he will not be able to get a security clearance needed for officer's duties.

"I want a career in the Air Force, because I owe something to this country," he said. "I want to use my abilities, my knowledge to do something for this country."

Citizen's been keeping his eye on city council

NEDERLAND (AP) — Democracy is practiced in Nederland almost unnoticed when the City Council meets every second and fourth Tuesday. Discounting reporters, only two or three people usually attend.

But one Nederland man is always there. He always sits in the same seat in the front row of black-cushioned wooden chairs that fill the council chambers. He usually sits quietly while the council tends to its business of keeping Nederland a clean, well-run city.

When Mayor Homer Nagel asks for comment, however, he's ready.

"Mayor, have you all found a place for us to take our garbage?" he asks.

"Why do I have to come down to city hall and make a complaint before you all will do anything?

"What are you all going to do about all the stray dogs running all over Nederland?"

His name is Robert Rothrock, and he's on a first-name basis with all the council members but they just call him Rothrock.

He said he's been keeping watch on the city councils of every town he's lived in since 1954 on a personal crusade for better government.

"Most people think to get better government you've got to write to your congressman or your state representative," Rothrock said. "But I think you've got to start right where you are. If each citizen would just help keep his own town clean, then it would spread up from the local to the state to the federal and we'd have good government at every level."

Since moving to Nederland in 1957, Rothrock said he's attended every City Council meeting he could make when the meeting didn't conflict with his job. Since retiring from the Mobil Oil refinery in 1985, he's now able to go to almost every council meeting.

Rothrock, 63, said he thinks most people really believe that you can't fight city hall and as a result feel helpless and unable to influence their council members.

He said he learned otherwise during a water shortage in Haltom City in 1954.

"The City Council voted to ration water and it got so bad that you were allowed to flush your toilet only once a day," he said. "But enough of us citizens showed up at city hall to force them to start delivering water to us by having a fire truck come to every house to deliver a gallon of water.

"I found out that you really could do something and from then on I decided to start going to city council meetings," he said.

He kept up the practice when he moved to Beaumont in 1955 and eventually every Beaumont City Council member got to know him well, he said. Rothrock said he keeps up with what is happening by simply paying attention to what goes on around him.

"If I see a city crew out working somewhere, I stop and ask them what they're doing," he said. "And I'm liable to pop in city hall anytime with a question or two."

They each face sentences of up to five years in prison and fined $250,000 for operating the Odessa gambling schemes, which "involved several gambling places," according to the federal information complaint lodged against them following investigations conducted by the FBI, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Odessa Police Department.

Richards was represented by Odessa attorney Warren Heagy, and Alcorn was represented by Odessa attorney Michael McLeaish.

The two men tendered their guilty pleas following a plea-bargaining agreement in which the government agreed not to file against them additional charges related to the gambling scheme.

Alcorn and Richards had been using different telephones to get gambling information on collegiate and professional football games after Klinger and Rice had learned through a telephone-company employee that a federal wire-tap may have been placed on their telephone lines.

Former U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith had granted the FBI the right to use wire-taps in conducting the gambling investigation.

Crime Stoppers seeks motel robbery suspect

Odessa Crime Stoppers is asking for the public's help to locate the suspect who robbed the Twelve Oaks Motel at 12:30 a.m. on March 10.

The clerk reported that a Hispanic man arrived at the business and rang the bell on the south doors. When the clerk arrived, the man requested a room, and the clerk then unlocked the doors and went to the counter for a registration slip.

As the clerk turned around, the man held a small knife and pointed it at her, then ordered her to unlock the cash register. He then grabbed cash and told the clerk to lie on the floor. He left the motel in a four-door maroon sedan.

The suspect was described as 35 years of age, 5-feet 8-inches tall, weighing 150 pounds with collar-length, combed-back black hair. He had brown eyes, was clean shaven and spoke English well. He was wearing a long-sleeved black shirt and black slacks.

Information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the suspect could be worth up to $1,000 cash this week only. Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information leads to the arrest of fugitives. Cash rewards are also paid for information that leads to the recovery of stolen property and seized narcotics worth more than $1,000.

Crime Stoppers in Odessa can be reached at 333-TIPS, and in Midland at 694-TIPS.

"I am not going to take my kids to a mean old doctor," Mrs. Hodges said, "and I am not going to take my dogs to (a veterinarian of similar ilk)."

Taylor, who said he has no interest in returning to work as a veterinarian, said he "learned a lot of things in veterinary school that have helped me in art work."

When it comes to buying art for aesthetics and investments, Taylor suggested that art collectors, appreciators and aficionados "buy what they like — what they want for their home and not to make money. Quite often, they (works of art) do (appreciate in value). Certain ones will do better than others."

Marketing is secondary, he said.

"First, you have got to have a real good product to sell. Whatever you do, approach it from a business standpoint," Taylor said.

$10,000 reward offered in killing

HOUSTON (AP) — The employer of a woman killed March 6 by a chunk of concrete hurled from a freeway overpass has offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the case.

Anne Elizabeth Masera, 32, an Exxon Co. USA systems analyst, was en route to work on Highway 59 when a concrete block thrown from an overpass fell about 30 feet and crashed through the windshield on the driver's side of her car.

Police hunting robbery suspect

From Staff Reports

Police are searching for a man who forced his way into the northwest Midland apartment of a 24-year-old woman just after midnight today and robbed her of $50 cash.

According to police, the woman was in her bed in her apartment at the Peppertree Apartments, 2700 N. Midland Dr., about 1 a.m. when she heard a knock at her door.

"She apparently went to the door and looked through the peephole, and thought she may have recognized him," police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

When she opened the door, the man forced his way in, "grabbed her from behind and asked her where her purse was," White said.

He took the cash from the purse and ran from the apartment, according to police.

The woman was uninjured in the incident, White said.

The man was described as black, 5 feet 8 inches, weighing about 150 pounds, and was last seen wearing a white jacket and blue jeans.

Later, state Treasurer Ann Richards called for a minimum state health insurance program for teachers in testimony before the House Public Education Committee.

Ms. Richards told the panel, "It is absolutely criminal that we compound the (low salary) problem by failing to provide adequate health care benefits for teachers."

Cooley: Medical advances delayed by regulations

By JEFF AWALT

HOUSTON (AP) — Twenty years after he performed the world's first implant of an artificial heart into a human, Dr. Denton A. Cooley says further medical advances have been hindered by ethical doubts and regulatory interference.

But despite the modern difficulties, Cooley said on the anniversary of the historic surgery that he expects still greater achievements over the next 20 years.

"The heart is truly a remarkable organ and developing a perfect substitute is going to be a challenge not only for this generation, but for generations of researchers to come," Cooley said Tuesday.

"I think that we are now in an era where we can make some progress," he said. "Research institutions and investigators throughout the world are challenged by this project, and I think that we will see an acceptable, totally implantable permanent device within the next 15 to 20 years."

It was April 4, 1969, when Cooley and his associates at the Texas Heart Institute created a storm of excitement and controversy by implanting a totally artificial heart into the chest of Haskell Karp, a 47-year-old printing estimator from Skokie, Ill.

Karp lived for about three days on the device and then received a human heart transplant, but died a little more than a day later when infection and tissue rejection set in.

The proven human use of an artificial heart — which earlier had shown promise in research animals — caused elation among the surgical team, but drew a harsh reaction from some medical professionals and the public.

"What surprised me the most about the whole event wasn't that we chose to use the (artificial) heart or that it was successful," recalled Dr. Robert D. Leachman, one of four members of the original surgery team who met Tuesday with reporters.

"What surprised me was the response of the public. There were editorials in newspapers around the country saying we shouldn't have done it, and all the questions of ethics were aroused."

Cooley had first attempted a surgical repair of Karp's heart, but the organ was too badly damaged and it was clear he would not survive, the doctor said.

"The patient is on a life-support system during the surgery and if we can't get the heart to start again the surgeon finally has to say, 'Pull the plug,'" Cooley said. "This was the first time that we decided we weren't going to pull the plug, but that we were going to give this man that remote chance of survival."

Karp had feared he was near death and asked his doctors daily when his surgery could be performed, Cooley recalled, but donor hearts were rarely available in 1969 and there were doubts he would survive the surgery.

The first heart transplant had been performed less than two years before, and public reaction had been largely unfavorable, particularly because of ethical questions and a high failure rate due to tissue rejection.

"The public was pretty much opposed to the whole thing," Cooley said. "They found it really inconceivable that a human being could take the heart out of one person and put it in the service of another."

After the pioneer surgery on Good Friday in 1969, public opposition grew. Cooley himself was censured by the Harris County Medical Society for "publicity," which meant violating the society's guidelines about having a physician's name appear in a newspaper in connection with the name of a patient.

"All the theoretical objections really almost killed the transplant program; that, coupled with the high incidence of tissue rejection, which brought a lot of bad news to the profession," Cooley said.

Since then, however, the anti-rejection drug cyclosporine came into use and advanced artificial hearts have improved survival until donor hearts can be found. And greater public acceptance has made donor organs more plentiful.

"With the progress of medical science, we're pushing back the barriers of certain theoretical objections to taking drastic measures to save one human life," Cooley said.

However, new obstacles have emerged, including burdensome federal regulations that limit the application of medical research, said Dr. O.H. Frazier, who directs the cardiovascular surgical research lab at the Texas Heart Institute.

"I'm not sure today if that first step wasn't taken in 1969 how we would take it today," Frazier said. "I would say that it would be very, very difficult that it would be done in America. It would probably be done in Europe because of all the restrictions that we have in this country."

Cooley agrees that regulations make research applications more difficult today, but he believes the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is not directly to blame.

"I know that the individuals at the (FDA) who are responsible for these restrictions are people who are well motivated, but they are responding basically to what the public seems to want," Cooley said.

"I don't believe we ought to live in a completely unregulated society, but I think that our restrictions should be liberal enough that progress can be made."

Father given temporary custody of daughter

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — A Texas man was awarded temporary custody of his 3-year-old daughter six days after the child allegedly was abandoned by her mother along Interstate 40.

Owuor

Elizabeth Owuor "is in legal custody of her dad now," said assistant general attorney Macre Inabinet, who represented the state in the closed hearing Tuesday before Judge William Garbarino of Coconino County Superior Court.

The girl had been in a state crisis nursery since March 29, the day after a motorist saw her dropped off along I-40 near Ash Fork west of Flagstaff. The girl told investigators she was dropped off after her mother got mad at her.

The father, George Owuor of Arlington, Texas, said Tuesday he planned to return home with his daughter. "Looks like my lifestyle is in for a big change," said the owner of a cosmetics-manufacturing plant.

Kimberly Owuor had been awarded custody of the couple's daughter when she and her husband divorced more than a year ago.

"I still can't believe that she was just dropped off in the middle of the road," Owuor said of his daughter. "I'm still so made about this thing. And Elizabeth is mad about it too," he said.

Deputy Coconino County Attorney Fred Newton said a complaint alleging a single felony count of child abuse was filed Monday against Mrs. Owuor, 30, of Topeka, Kan.

She was arrested in Malibu, Calif., last Saturday night following a series of hit-and-run accidents in several locations in the Los Angeles area.

Newton said his office would seek extradition from California once a psychiatric evaluation of Mrs. Owuor is completed.

Owuor, a native of Kenya, said he met his wife when he moved to the United States to attend college in Topeka.

Senate opposes hike in interest rate on loans

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Senate reversed itself Tuesday as it stopped a bill that would sharply increase the interest rate finance companies could charge on cash loans.

Under Senate Bill 306, sponsored by Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, the maximum interest rate on a 36-month, $2,000 loan would jump from 23 percent to 30 percent.

Harris said the increase in interest rates was needed to stop consumer finance companies from moving their operations outside Texas, but opponents called it a "loan shark bill" and said finance companies already get sufficient return for their loans.

The Senate gave the bill tentative approval March 29 after an 18-9 vote allowed it to be brought up for consideration under Senate rules that require two-thirds approval.

When the bill came up for a final vote Tuesday the margin was down to 16-15, far short of the two-thirds needed to bring a bill up for a vote. Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, who represents Midland, voted for the bill.

In other action, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby announced that the Senate will hear testimony on proposed workers compensation reforms at 2 p.m. Monday, then refer the bills to a special seven-member subcommittee that will include Parker, with Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, as chairman.

By operating as a committee of the whole, Hobby said, he hoped the Senate could reach a consensus on the potentially thorny issue that otherwise could lead to a special session.

The Senate also voted down Senate Bill 217 by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, that would allow utilities to resume the practice of passing their fuel costs directly to customers.

College official says movie canceled as disciplinary measure

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The film "Last Tango in Paris" is still stirring controversy 17 years after it was released.

The latest controversy is at San Antonio College where administration officials are fending off charges of censorship after canceling a screening of the Marlon Brando movie that was originally rated X when it was released.

"It's just plain censorship," said John Onderdonk, faculty adviser for the San Antonio College Film Society.

College officials say the issue is student conduct, not censorship because of the movie's strong content.

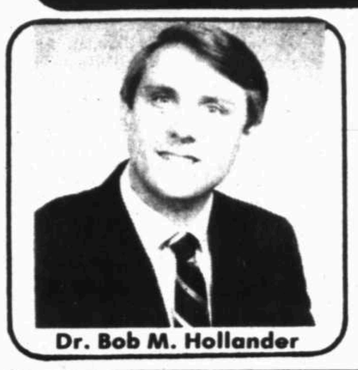

SAC director of student activiites Kathy Armstrong said she canceled the movie after film society students circumvented administration procedure when they ordered "Last Tango in Paris" without her approval.

"This is not a censorship issue," Armstrong said. "They (the students) violated a policy regarding the decision-making process."

The film society ordered the film without informing her, she said.

Members of the society were to meet today to consider an on-campus demonstration and a petition drive as possible forms of protest.

Gramm: Guard to help in war against drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cactuses along the Texas-Mexico border may actually be National Guard troops camouflaged to gather drug-trafficking intelligence information for federal agencies, according to congressional officials.

A spokesman for the National Guard in Texas says he knows nothing about the proposed intelligence-gathering efforts under a $2.9 million appropriation from the Pentagon.

Gramm

But Sen. Phil Gramm, a Texas Republican, says the money will indeed be spent for air and ground surveillance by guard troops dispatched to the state's 1,000-mile border with Mexico.

Gramm said the troops will attempt to infiltrate areas of suspected drug smuggling along the border and relay their findings to agencies including the Border Patrol, U.S. Customs Service, and Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Gramm said the Guard is not disclosing many details of the planned foot patrols, which would be part of a drug-trafficking package by Guard troops that also involves aerial surveillance and helping Customs with search and seizure of cargo crossing the border into Texas.

A congressional source who spoke on background said the Texas Guard troops would use camouflage paint to "look like a cactus bush" and then infiltrate the border "under cover of darkness" as the guardsmen attempt to gather information on drug-trafficking patterns.

The $2.9 million in spending was approved last week by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who also authorized plans to attack drug smuggling by guardsmen in 11 other states.

Gramm said the so-called "long-range reconnaissance patrol" (LRRP) program "is a new program the National Guard is not talking about."

However, he said Tuesday that it would help federal agencies in the "running war with drug smugglers along our border."

"The American people clearly want the military more involved in our war on drugs," Gramm said in an interview. "It is a great step...to enhance our ability to interdict drugs coming into our country. It is not a substitute for law enforcement, but it is a good complement. It makes law enforcement more effective."

But Lt. Col. Ed Komandosky, spokesman for the National Guard in Texas, said he was not aware of any such foot or air patrols "whatsoever" under the $2.9 million effort.

"The only money we've been allocated by the Department of Defense for drug interdiction is to run a cooperative program with the Customs Service," Komandosky said.

Under that plan, some 90 to 100 volunteer, part-time guardsmen would be dispatched beginning Thursday to four border points of entry and the Port of Houston to assist Customs inspectors search for illegal drug shipments.

Komandosky said he was "positive" the money would not be financing the air or ground patrols, unless Gramm "knows something I don't know and that's entirely possible (that) I'm not aware of any such animal."

Gramm said the air surveillance is effective in locating clandestine landing strips used by drug smugglers, and the search and seizure assistance provided by the guardsmen frees up Customs workers "to engage in more arrests."

STATE IN BRIEF

Bush expected to name Texan as U.S. treasurer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas native Cathi V. Villalpando will be nominated by President Bush to be U.S. treasurer, the person who signs the nation's currency, Sen. Phil Gramm announced Tuesday.

Ms. Villalpando is a native of San Marcos, where she graduated from high school, and also where she attended Southwest Texas State University.

She is currently senior vice president of Communications International Inc., an Atlanta-based company. She handles public relations and marketing for the voice and data telecommunications company's Washington office.

Ms. Villalpando is also the national chairman of the Republican National Hispanic Assembly, to which she was elected in 1987.

She was a special assistant in the White House from 1983-85 for public liaison, involving Hispanic issues. She was an elections coordinator for the Republican Party of Texas from 1981-83, and spent a year prior to that as a staff assistant in the White House personnel office.

In 1980, she was assistant director for Ronald Reagan's campaign for president in Texas.

She has also worked in the Commerce Department and formerly headed her own company, VP Promotions.

Marijuana, cocaine seized

ROMA (AP) — Four people were arrested in two related drug busts that netted 522 pounds of marijuana and 1,080 pounds of cocaine, Department of Public Safety officials said.

The first arrest came about 11:30 a.m. Tuesday after law officers, armed with a search warrant, confiscated 428 pounds of marijuana at a home near Roma, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

Further investigation stemming from that bust led to arrests of three brothers at a nearby residence, where 94 pounds of marijuana and 1,080 pounds of "high-grade cocaine" were seized, Wells said.

Authorities found the cocaine in kilo-brick form, mostly inside duffel bags.

None of the four had been formally charged Tuesday and were expected to appear at hearings today.

Officials estimate the street value of the entire amount of marijuana is estimated at $469,800, while the street value of the cocaine is estimated at $12.96 million.

The first man arrested was being held at the Starr County Jail in Rio Grande City, and the three brothers were taken the Hidalgo County Jail.

Incarceration policy set

DALLAS (AP) — State district judges here have adopted a policy ordering the release of any inmate held in jail for longer than three days without being charged.

The policy, which goes into effect May 1, was designed to protect defendants' civil rights and to relieve jail overcrowding.

At any given time, there are 150 inmates who haven't been charged with crimes being held in Dallas County jails while authorities determine if there is enough evidence to warrant filing charges, said state District Judge Pat McDowell.

The new policy would require that those inmates be set free unless they are charged within three days of arrest.

The new three-day deadline could be extended if the police agency proves to a judge that it needs more time to gather evidence, McDowell said.

"We've had guys who have been in jail two or three weeks without being formally charged," McDowell told the Dallas Times Herald.

TV station back on air after 3 days of silence

EL PASO (AP) — An El Paso television station is broadcasting again after being off the air for three days.

KVIA-TV 7 resumed transmitting Tuesday night after a broken part in its transmission tower was replaced. The part — called a wave guide — corroded and shorted out Saturday afternoon, station manager Richard Pearson said.

Service was restored to cable TV viewers Monday afternoon, but the ABC affiliate did not charge advertisers because the 53 percent of El Paso homes without cable TV — and all sets in southern New Mexico and the rest of West Texas — received no signal when they tuned to Channel 7.

Pearson said the station was losing about $25,000 a day in advertising revenue while it wasn't broadcasting.

"It's a broadcaster's nightmare," Pearson said.

No one in El Paso could watch Channel 7 on Sunday. It was connected about 3:30 p.m. Monday to the cable system via microwave. The re-established cable link was a relief to KVIA news employees who spent Sunday preparing newscasts that never ran. They had feared the same fate for Monday's newscasts.

All of El Paso's TV stations offered the help of engineers to repair the tower, Pearson said.

Said Don Caparis, general manager of KCIK-TV 14: "It's not the kind of thing we would wish on anybody. It could happen to us, too."

totemism — (noun) "Totemism" is the belief in kinship with or mystical relations between a group or an individual and an animal, plant or other object. It plays an important part of the religions of many Native Americans. The most visible vestiges of this belief are the totem poles carved by the native tribes of the Pacific Northwest. Totems, based on an Ojibwa word, are covered with symbols representing family lineage and are often interspersed with references to religious or historical incidents.

Dallas-Fort Worth airport institutes no-smoking policy

GRAPEVINE (AP) — A new policy eliminating smoking in most areas of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport has left some travelers fuming.

One such traveler who arrived Tuesday after the first group of "No Smoking" signs were posted said he had flown from Chicago with a child crying in the seat behind him, the plane was in a holding pattern for a time and he had important business concerns on his mind.

When he debarked, Carl Gill said he was ready to light up.

"And then you see a 'No Smoking' sign first thing off the plane?" said Gill, a traveling salesman from Chicago. "This is getting out of hand."

It will take about 60 days for all of the signs to be posted prohibiting smoking near jet exit ramps, ticket counters, concession stands, all the concourses and the terminal entrances.

"This is something that has been a long time coming," airport board member J. "Jan" Collimer said. "Other airports have had smoking policies for some time and we need one."

There will be some smoking areas set up, but the policy states, "If a dispute arises, the preference of non-smokers shall be accommodated."

It's a policy, not a law or an ordinance, said airport board members who said they were motivated by worries about the health effects of breathing smoke and by "growing public concern."

Dallas Mayor Annette Strauss objected to the posting of some of the signs, but joined all other members of the board in making the vote on the policy unanimous.

Airport deputy executive director Vernell Sturns told the mayor that staff members would be "sensitive" and try to have designated smoking areas near the exit ramps.

NATION IN BRIEF

Arias supports U.S. aid plan to Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, endorsing the Bush administration's package of nearly $50 million in non-military aid for Nicaraguan Contra rebels, wants Cuba to follow suit and halt military aid to leftist rebels in El Salvador.

After meeting Tuesday with President Bush, Vice President Dan Quayle and Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Arias said the so-called humanitarian aid was essential for integrating the Contras back into Nicaraguan society.

"You cannot persuade the Contras to go back to Nicaragua if you have nothing to offer them," he said. "There's no freedom, there's no democracy, they cannot integrate into political life; and economic conditions are not the best."

Arias, who won the Nobel Peace Prize two years ago for his Central America peace plan calling for a halt of all outside military support for rebel groups in the region, said Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev now has to persuade Cuban President Fidel Castro to stop sending arms to Salvadoran leftists.

"If he supports sincerely the Central American peace plan he has to-...persuade Fidel Castro not to keep the support of the guerrillas in El Salvador," Arias said of Gorbachev, who is meeting with Castro in Havana this week.

North request denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge today rejected Oliver North's request to show at his trial videotaped segments of immunized congressional testimony by his former boss, former national security adviser John Poindexter.

"Admiral Poindexter's testimony selected for presentation distorts the record from the congressional proceedings," said U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell.

"The case is winding down now and the motion just filed comes too late," the judge stated in a four-page order. The prosecution would have to present its rebuttal by examining all of Poindexter's testimony.

"The editing of 30 hours of testimony cannot be evaluated in the short time given to the independent counsel" prosecuting North, said Gesell.

Defense lawyers had said portions of Poindexter's prior testimony are "critical to the defense, particularly on the issue of official knowledge and authorization of Lt. Col. North's activities."

Top teacher, Bush to meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush may be getting some advice from the nation's top teacher on how to fulfill his campaign promise to become the "education president" when he unveils his long-awaited education package.

Bush was scheduled today to send Congress details of the education program he laid out in broad terms in his budget message Feb. 9.

But first he was to present a crystal apple to Mary V. Bicouvaris, who on Tuesday was named National Teacher of the Year by the Council of Chief State School Officers, Encyclopaedia Britannica Inc. and Good Housekeeping magazine.

Mrs. Bicouvaris, a Greek immigrant who teaches American government and international relations at Bethel High School in Hampton, Va., told reporters she intended to thank Bush for his leadership on education issues.

However, she also said that if Bush sought her advice, she would "ask him to follow with the action needed to make education truly a priority.... I would like him to put the emphasis on education as an investment and not as an expense."

Birth rate on increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of babies being born in the United States is bounding back from the low levels of recent years, according to a new report that shows the increase occurring despite a decline in the number of women in the prime childbearing ages.

Births totaled 3.9 million last year, up 2 percent from the year before and the most in this country since 1964, the National Center for Health Statistics reported Tuesday.

At the same time, the Center said, the nation set an all-time record for the number of deaths in a year, marriages declined slightly and the number of divorces increased.

The statistical center, a division of the Department of Health and Human Services, said the 1988 birth rate was 15.9 per 1,000 people, up from 15.7 a year earlier.

"Within the childbearing ages the number of women 15-29 declined while the number of women 30-44 increased," reported the Center. It noted that the ages 20 to 29 have traditionally been the prime years for American women to have children.

Nevada county desolved

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Senators came to bury Bullfrog County not to praise it. They voted to remove from the books the desert jurisdiction where no one lives and where the federal government wants to dump nuclear waste.

"Not that I loved Bullfrog less, but that I loved Nevada more," state Sen. Thomas Hickey said Tuesday, in a parody of Shakespeare's speech that Marc Antony delivered after Julius Caesar was slain by his closest confidant.

Hickey was a key Senate sponsor of the 1987 bill that created the 144-square-mile county with no roads and a government seat in Carson City, 270 miles to the north. Residents included snakes, lizards, coyotes and kangaroos rats but no humans.

Bullfrog County was formed to encompass Yucca Mountain, the only area in the nation the federal Department of Energy is studying as the possible site for a high-level nuclear waste repository.

Mecham to run again

PHOENIX (AP) — One year after he was removed from office for misusing funds and obstructing justice, former Gov. Evan Mecham vowed to run again in 1990 and lead a "kinder and gentler Arizona."

Mecham predicted at a rally Tuesday night he would regain the governor's office. On Monday, he filed papers asking the Legislature to reconsider the votes by which it impeached and ousted him.

"I committed no impeachable offense," the maverick Republican told an enthusiastic crowd of about 400 supporters.

GM, Ford head Fortune 500 list

Industrials bask in expansion

NEW YORK (AP) — Industrial America enjoyed a record year in profits and sales in 1988 as the economy expanded for the sixth consecutive year, Fortune magazine said in its ranking of the 500 largest U.S. manufacturing companies.

"Any way you cut it, last year was the most prosperous for the 500 since Fortune published the first 500 directory in 1955," Fortune said in its April 24 issue.

The magazine said sales by the Fortune 500 last year topped $2 trillion for the first time, while total profits for the group jumped 27 percent to a record $115 billion.

The Big Three automakers had especially strong revenue, with General Motors Corp. again topping the Fortune 500 and Ford Motor Co. bumping Exxon Corp. from No. 2. Chrysler Corp. jumped to No. 7 from No. 10.

Companies involved in acquisitions also moved higher. Philip Morris Cos. took the No. 10 spot, up from 12th, partly due to its acquisition of Kraft Corp., ranked 31st in 1987. Eastman Kodak Co. jumped to 18th from No. 25 with the acquisition of Sterling Drug Inc., ranked 174th the previous year.

The magazine ranks companies in terms of annual sales. It also publishes a list later in the year of the top 500 U.S. service companies.

The top 10 after GM, Ford and Exxon were: International Business Machines Corp., General Electric Co., Mobil Corp., Chrysler, Texaco Inc., E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., and Philip Morris.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., ranked eighth in the 1987 listing, was bumped from the 1988 list because most of its revenue was generated from the service sector. ITT Corp., ranked No. 45 in 1987, also fell into that category. The highest-ranking newcomer was Unilever U.S.,

Ueberoth has new pitch for Eastern

Ueberroth

NEW YORK (AP) — Former baseball Commissioner Peter V. Ueberroth has made a new pitch for strike-bound Eastern Airlines that could win the battle for the nation's seventh-largest carrier, airline industry and baseball sources said.

Ueberroth traveled from his California home to New York on Tuesday night and expected an agreement would be announced today, barring another last-minute curveball from Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo, the sources said.

Robin Matell, an Eastern spokesman in Miami, said Tuesday night, "I wouldn't have any comment on a report like that."

Terms of the agreement weren't known, and sources familiar with the deal said they were worried that Lorenzo might try to change the terms at the last minute.

The offer was believed to be less than the $464 million that Ueberroth's group had offered and then withdrew last week. The deal reportedly would not include Eastern's prized Northeast shuttle.

"As with anything that has happened here in the last three years, it's not soup until it's served," said Capt. John Knudson, a spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association at Eastern.

Eastern has been largely grounded since its Machinists union struck March 4 and pilots and flight attendants walked out in support. The airline filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection on March 9 as its cash dwindled.

Ueberroth began negotiations with Lorenzo about three weeks ago and had been told to expect approval of a sale when the Texas Air board met last week, sources said.

But at the last minute, Lorenzo

Strike legislation cancelled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic lawmakers say a measure they once characterized as urgently needed to end the Eastern Airlines strike is not necessary at all — for now.

Democrats pulled the legislation off the Senate floor on Tuesday, arguing that the bill might impede efforts to purchase the troubled carrier and hinder bankruptcy court attempts to find a solution to the labor impasse.

The action came the same day that The Associated Press learned former Baseball Commissioner Peter V. Ueberroth would announce a new deal to buy Eastern. An earlier offer collapsed after Jay A. Pritzker, owner of the Hyatt Hotel chain, reportedly came in with a higher offer.

The airline's striking unions, which had originally sought passage of the bill, asked senators to hold off action on the measure to allow potential purchasers a chance to work out a deal.

Group buys Natural Gas Clearinghouse

New York Times News Service

DALLAS — Noble Affiliates Inc. and the Apache Corp., two independent oil and gas exploration and production companies, have agreed to acquire jointly Natural Gas Clearinghouse, a marketing company based in Houston, from Morgan Stanley Group Inc.

Under the agreement, Noble and Apache will each own 50 percent of the Natural Gas Clearinghouse and its subsidiaries, which include a small portfolio of exploration and production properties in Oklahoma and Texas.

A sale price was not disclosed for the gas marketing company, which Morgan started as a speculative joint venture with a Washington law firm and several pipeline companies in 1984.

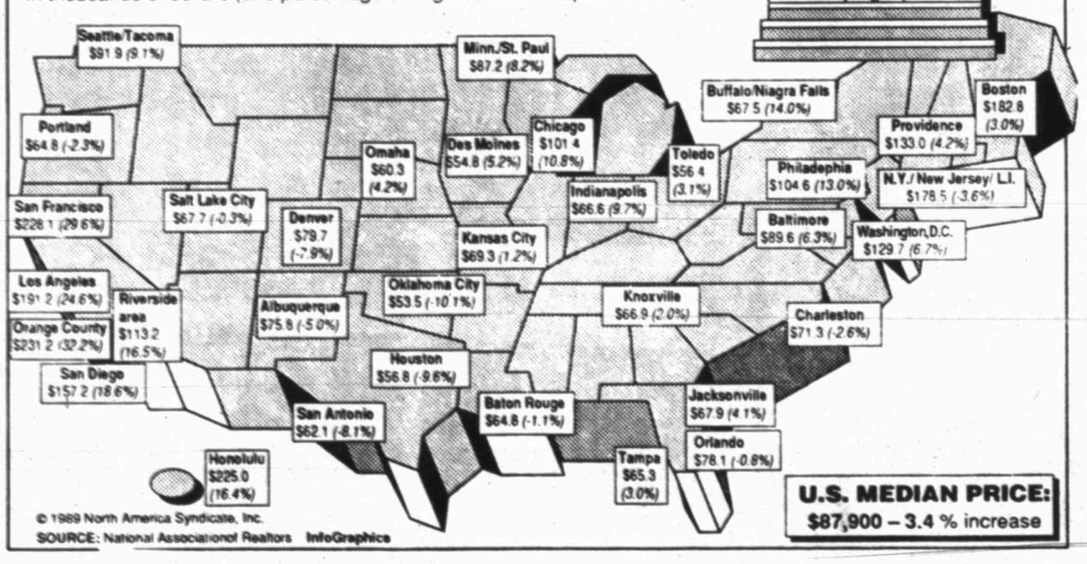

Industry analysts said they believed the gas marketing company to be worth in excess of $50 million based on its average sales of 2 billion cubic feet daily.

Average price of U.S. homes

In fourth quarter 1988, median prices in the U.S. for for existing single-family homes ranged from $56,200 in Oklahoma City, Okla., to $231,000 in Orange County, Calif. The greatest increase in prices for existing homes was 32 percent in Orange County. The largest decline was in Oklahoma City, which dropped 10 percent from fourth quarter 1987.

MCorp transfer

DALLAS (AP) — MCorp announced that U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Cornelius Blackshear in New York granted the company's motion to transfer its Chapter 11 case from New York to Houston.

Dallas-based MCorp, which filed the petition Friday, said the transfer was approved Tuesday.

As previously disclosed, MCorp said in a statement it intends to file motions in bankruptcy court in Houston to consolidate its case with those of its wholly owned, non-banking subsidiaries, MCorp Financial Inc. and MCorp Management.

Mortgage rates hit new high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conventional mortgage interest rates rose in March to their highest level since just before the 1987 stock market crash, the government says.

As home prices continue to climb nationwide, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the regulator of savings institutions, said Tuesday the national average for conventional, single-family loans jumped to 11.36 percent in early March, up from 11.11 percent in early February.

It was the highest rate since early October 1987, when the average hit 11.42 percent just before the stock market crash. Interest rates began falling after the crash as the Federal Reserve Board pumped money into the economy to guard against a recession.

The bank board said rates for the most popular type of one-year adjustable-rate mortgages, those with caps on how high the rate can increase, also rose last month to 9.75 percent, up from 9.6 percent in early February.

It was the highest ARM rate since March 1986, when the average was 9.84 percent, the bank board said.

The Fed for a year now has been tightening credit and pushing interest rates upward in an effort to restrain economic growth to hold down inflation. Those efforts intensified in February after the government reported there were sharp price increases at both the wholesale and retail levels during January.

"The increases in the early March rates reflected the general tightening in credit markets during February," said James Barth, chief economist for the bank board.

The percentage of mortgages closed with adjustable rates declined to 55 percent in early March, down from 57 percent in February.

A separate weekly report released Friday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., known as Freddie Mac, showed interest rates remained high throughout March.

Oil prices stable above $20

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices turned stable today after Tuesday's rally, with contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate slipping 1 cent to stand at $20.41 at midmorning.

Prices were higher in brisk trading Tuesday, with WTI settling at $20.42 a barrel, a gain of 47 cents. Unleaded gasoline gaining more than a penny a gallon.

Analysts attributed the rally to a variety of factors, including expectations of a bullish weekly trade report on oil supplies due to the Alaskan oil spill and bargaining hunting following Monday's partial selloff.

Among refined petroleum products traded on the exchange Tuesday, the May contract for unleaded gasoline jumped 1.61 cents to close at 69.46 cents a gallon, after gaining 0.88 cent Monday.

May wholesale home heating oil, which lost 0.62 cent at the start of the week, settled at 53.64 cents, up 0.89 cent.

Andrew Lebow, an energy analyst with E.D.F. Man International Futures Inc., said traders were anticipating a dropoff in oil supplies when the American Petroleum Institute releases its latest weekly report.

"Most traders expect sharp draw-downs in crude inventory due to the Alaskan situation," he said.

Oil prices have risen sharply since a massive oil spill by an Exxon Corp. tanker at the Valdez, Alaska, port. The Alaskan pipeline there carries nearly one-quarter of the United States' domestic supply of crude oil.

Adding support to the market Tuesday, Lebow said, were reports that the U.S. Coast Guard would continue to restrict tanker activity at Valdez.

Dollar firm in early trading

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was firmer in early European trading today, supported by plenty of commercial demand. Gold prices fell.

Foreign currency dealers said they think the currency has entered a consolidation phase that is likely to last until Friday's release of U.S. unemployment figures.

Traders said they are optimistic about the dollar's strength, but believe continued fear of central bank intervention and lingering effects of statements made at last weekend's meeting of the Group of Seven major industrialized nations would serve as an effective cap on any sharp movement higher.

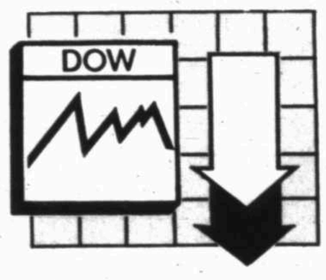

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.32 yen to a closing 131.37. Later, in London, it was quoted at 131.53 yen.

In London, one British pound cost $1.6987, cheaper for buyers than $1.7043 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $384.90 a troy ounce, down from $386.75 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $384.40.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.80 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $5.84.

Stocks give back recent gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices pulled back in moderate trading Tuesday, relinguishing some of the market's recent gains.

The market meandered in a narrow range in early trading before turning lower in the afternoon, partly weighed down by weakness in technology stocks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 6.60 to 2,298.20.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 838 down, 643 up and 491 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 160.68 million shares, down from 164.66 million in the previous session.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Domestic auto sales continue tumbling

DETROIT (AP) — Car and truck sales in the United States tumbled 18.3 percent in late March compared with the same period last year, as the annual spring car buying boom started off as more of a pop.

Vehicles sold at an average daily rate of 42,451 in the March 21-31 period this year, the companies said Tuesday, compared with a 51,960 daily rate during the same time last year. Car sales were off 18.1 percent and light truck sales were 18.7 percent behind last year's pace.

FCC OKs foreign investment in McCaw Cellular

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission said it would not stand in the way of British Telecommunications Inc.'s $1.5 billion investment in McCaw Cellular Communications Inc., the nation's biggest cellular phone company.

The FCC said Tuesday the purchase of a 22.4 percent share of McCaw did not involve a transfer of control of McCaw to British Telecom USA and it also was in line with federal restrictions on foreign involvement in U.S. broadcasting and common carrier companies.

Administration opposes closing Alaska pipeline

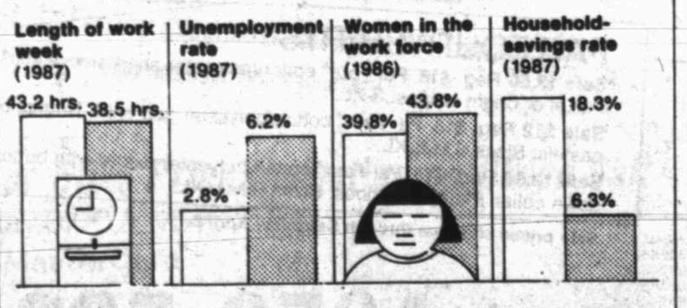

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration said it would oppose any move to close the Alaska pipeline but acknowledged it was unclear whether the federal government has legal authority to prevent it.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday the authority issue was "an open question." However, he said, "I don't honestly believe anybody wants to close the pipeline."

AT&T, unions optimistic strike can be avoided

WASHINGTON (AP) — AT&T and its two unions are optimistic they can avoid a third strike this decade even though they appear far apart on wages and health benefits entering the largest single round of labor negotiations in 1989.

"I don't know when we've had more positive relationships going into bargaining," said Ray Williams, the company's chief representative at the table when formal talks on a new three-year contract open today.

The current contracts that together cover some 175,000 members of the Communications Workers of America and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers expire May 27.

For the first time, the two unions are bargaining jointly with the telecommunications giant in an effort to prevent a recurrence of divisive strikes in 1983 and 1986.

When they bargained separately three years ago, CWA leaders accused the Electrical Workers of undermining their 26-day strike by signing a "me too" agreement that kept IBEW members working in AT&T's factories.

With a promise to the Electrical Workers they would share whatever additional benefits the CWA won through the strike, AT&T was able to keep half of its manufacturing plants operating.

The unions also are looking for stronger job security guarantees after losing thousands of jobs to management and AT&T's shift of some of its manufacturing overseas after the 1984 of the breakup of the Bell System.

But like the issue of who pays for escalating health care costs, that demand appears to be on a collision course with what AT&T says it needs in job flexibility to keep up with changing technology and greater competition.

The newfound unity between the IBEW and CWA gives the unions improved leverage in the talks "because now if you have a strike it will be a total shutdown," says Communications Workers President Morton Bahr.

Through the AFL-CIO, the two unions have made arrangement to call an immediate nationwide labor boycott of AT&T products and services if there is a strike, Bahr said.

Williams, AT&T's vice president for labor relations, doubts the unions' claim that joint bargaining gives them more strength at the table.

"If I thought it was to their advantage, I never would have agreed to it," he said.

As for pay, the last contract provided members of both unions an 8 percent raise over three years. Williams wouldn't reveal what AT&T will offer initially this time but said the company has no plans to demand concessions.

"We need to have some conservative settlements and let the market move toward us," he said.

Average annual wages at AT&T range from $22,360 for operators to $34,453 for skilled technicians, according to union figures.

Both sides agree health care likely will be the major sticking point.

The unions want some improvements in their current plan. Williams, without being specific, said the company "needs some help" from workers to stem rising costs. AT&T will spend $1 billion this year on health benefits for active and retired workers, he said.

"If there's any single issue that can prevent a peaceful settlement it's health care," Bahr said.

AT&T's request for job restructuring also is likely to run into fervent opposition from the unions. The CWA and IBEW together have lost more than 78,000 union jobs in the four years since the AT&T breakup while the company has added some 13,000 positions in management and other non-union areas.

Williams said the added management jobs were largely in sales to compete with other long-distance companies which through high-profile account managers have tried to lure business away from AT&T.

Pickens buys into Japan firm

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Officials of an investment company controlled by corporate raider T. Boone Pickens say it acquired a stake in a Japanese corporation to further cooperation between this country and Japan, but the Japanese are suspicious.

The new largest shareholder of Koito Manufacturing Co., a Japanese automotive parts maker with strong ties to Toyota Motor Co., is Pickens' Boone Co., a privately held merchant bank company.

Boone Co. officials aren't saying anything about what the company's plans are for their investment, but vice president of finance Sidney Tassin said he doesn't regard the 20.2 percent stake, worth an estimated $1.19 billion, as hostile in intent.

"We believe that the Japanese-American involvement and relationship is of increasing importance and opportunity," said Tassin, also a top official with Pickens' Mesa Limited Partners.

But the Japanese have some doubts.

"This isn't a normal investment," Keiji Yasuda, an analyst for New Japan Securities Co., told The Wall Street Journal. "Many people believe Mr. Pickens is a greenmailer, a pure greenmailer."

Greenmail is the term used for profits reaped by a hostile corporate suitor when his stock is purchased at a premium by another shareholder friendly to the company.

Koito officials say they also don't know what Boone Co.'s intentions are.

Pickens has launched takeover attempts of such oil companies as Unocal, Diamond Shamrock and Phillips, but has never succeeded in purchasing a company as a result of a hostile bid.

He has, however, made huge profits on some deals after friendly investors or the target company itself purchased his shares.

EASTERN—

told the Ueberroth group there was a higher offer. Sources said that offer came from Hyatt Hotel chain owner Jay A. Pritzker and was worth about $500 million.

Ueberroth withdrew, regarding Pritzker's entry as merely an attempt by Lorenzo to raise the price, according to baseball sources. The former commissioner's representatives returned to New York on Tuesday and continued negotiations, sources said.

Sources close to Ueberroth had said Monday he was preparing a new, lower bid because Eastern agreed Friday to sell the shuttle to New York developer Donald J. Trump for $365 million.

Under Ueberroth's first offer, he and J. Thomas Talbot, a former airline executive from California, would have owned 30 percent of the airline. Eastern's unions would have received another 30 percent in exchange for wage and work-rule concessions. The remaining 40 percent would have been held by new investors.

Any sale of Eastern, acquired by Texas Air in 1986 for about $600 million, would have to be approved by a committee representing its unsecured creditors and by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland.

The creditors committee, which includes representatives of Eastern's Machinists and pilots unions and non-union employees, met Tuesday in Manhattan to discuss Eastern's future.

Also Tuesday, congressional Democrats pulled off the Senate floor legislation that would force President Bush to appoint an emergency board to recommend a solution to the walkout.

THE INVESTORS' GUIDE

Tax-exempt income interest must be listed on tax return

BY BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. I own some municipal bonds in bearer form with so-called "tax-free" semiannual interest coupons attached. As you know, that interest is not truly tax-free to some Social Security recipients.

If I give some of those interest coupons to my married daughter for her to cash and use the money, do I have to list that interest on my federal income tax return? Am I required to list tax-exempt interest, because I receive Social Security?

A. Everyone who files an income tax return and has tax-exempt interest income is required to list it on Line 8b, Form 1040 or Form 1040A.

As a Social Security recipient, you must add that interest and half of your SS benefits to your adjusted gross income. If the total tops $32,000 for a married couple filing a joint return or $25,000 for a single person, you pay tax on part of your SS benefits. As has been stressed here often, that results in a backdoor tax on otherwise tax-free municipal bond interest.

But if you give those interest coupons to your daughter and she cashes them, you won't receive that interest. There would be no reason for you to list interest you don't collect anyplace on your income tax return. Your daughter would have to list that tax-free interest on Line 8a of her return.

Here, we are assuming you make a true gift, with no hanky-panky such as your daughter cashing the coupons and turning the money over to you. You would be in trouble, if the Internal Revenue Service got wind of a ploy such as that.

Q. I am the rightful owner of a $5,000 bearer municipal bond, which is either lost or in the possession of the brokerage firm through which I purchased it. I have a photocopy of the bond certificate, showing that the last four semiannual interest coupons had not been clipped off and cashed.

How can I trace where this bond certificate is? How can I find out if the overdue coupons have been cashed? Can I retrieve the bond?

A. The logical place to start your search is at the brokerage firm where you bought it. If the certificate is there, you are the rightful owner and you don't owe the firm any money, the brokerage should turn the bond over to you.

If the bond is at the brokerage, it's almost certain the interest coupons were cashed as they came due. And, if the bond is yours, the interest payments should have been credited to your account. Have you been receiving monthly or quarterly statements from the brokerage listing your holdings?

If the bond is lost, you'll have to get a duplicate from the trustee for that bond issue. The name of the trustee — usually a bank — is on that photocopy you have.

To obtain a duplicate certificate, you must provide a lost security affidavit attesting to the loss and a surety bond to protect the bond issuer just in case the "lost" bond turns up in the hands of a legitimate owner. A surety bond can cost from 2 to 4 percent of the missing security's market value.

Q. My elderly mother lost a $172.50 interest coupon from a municipal bond she owns. She really needs the money and depends on that interest twice a year. I wrote to the bank that is the bond's interest-paying agent. They don't answer my letters.

What can I do?

A. Phone that bank and find out who is in charge of bond interest-paying operations. Write that person a certified letter, return receipt requested, explaining the situation.

Your mother will have to file a lost security affidavit and provide a surety bond. Experts at the Surety Association of America say the cost of the surety bond should be about 2 percent and can be obtained from full-line insurance companies by qualified insurance agencies and brokers.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column.

which is owned by the British-Dutch consumer products giant Unilever and debuted at No. 63.

All companies on the list this year had at least $500 million in sales. The 500th company, Chemed Corp. of Cincinnati, had sales of $500.6 million.

The magazine said nearly all of the 27 industrial categories contained in its list had double-digit earnings growth in 1988.

PARADE OF HOMES

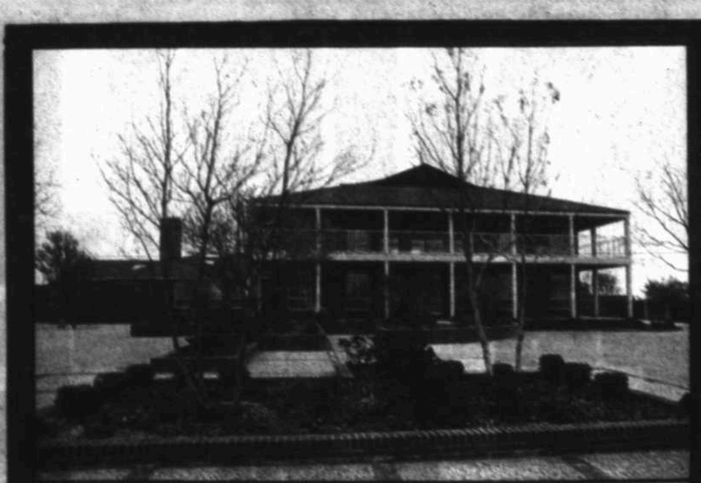

Love of faith, family evident in decor

The focal points of the family room, with its two story high ceiling, are the fireplace and the high windows.

With six children, having enough room for everybody was the main concern for Dale and Rita Brown when they were designing their new home at 3804 Trinity Drive. Working with architect Alton Yowell and decorator Mack Thomas, the six bedroom, seven bath home has a warm, comfortable atmosphere, and is large enough to accommodate the whole family, plus a few more.

The exterior of the red brick home with white trim is reminiscent of a plantation home, featuring large windows, plantation shutters, downstairs terraces and an upstairs wrap-around balcony. This style of architecture derives from the traditional Texas antebellum homes and hostelries built in the early 1800s, with deep porches, dormers and thin columns. The front elevation of the main portion of the house is similar to that of the old Capitol Hotel in Houston built in 1837.

The beautifully landscaped home of Dale and Rita Brown, 3804 Trinity Drive, is reminiscent of the plantation homes of the early 1800s.

The 20th Annual Parade of Homes will be presented by the Midland Junior Woman's Club 1:30-5:30 p.m. April 16 when four Midland homes will be open for the public to see. Proceeds from the event will benefit the Developmental Disabilities Center, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Problem Pregnancy Center and Special Care Infants. Tickets are $7.50 and can be obtained from any Junior Woman's Club member. For tickets or more information call 684-6152, 699-1219 or 682-2037.

The spacious entry is paneled with white-washed, horizontally laid wood and features a large brass chandelier hanging from the second story ceiling. From the entry, there is access to the living area to the left, the dining room to the right and the family room directly in front. Between the entry to the family room and to the dining room is a staircase featuring 18th century dark finished bannisters curving up to the second level.

The living area features a decorative border around the top of the walls, which adds color. Sentimental family touches — such as small family pictures — are found in this room, as well as through out the house.

From the living area, a hallway leads to a small bath and Mrs. Brown's office and sewing area, complete with built-in book shelves and drawers.

Please see HOME, Page 2C

The entry and staircase feature horizontally laid, white-washed wood paneling and brass chandelier.

Although the dining room is elegant, it was designed simply to fit a lot of people.

Peach, terra cotta and teal decorate the master bedroom and sitting area.

HOME—

At the end of the hallway is the master bedroom. Shades of peach, terra cotta and teal are used to decorate this room. In a sitting area, a fireplace with brass accents is built-in at an angle giving the room an interesting shape. Next to the fireplace is a small built-in cabinet with glass-covered doors. Double glass-pained doors, leading to an outside patio, a skylight and a high window over the bed allows the sun to shine in from all directions.

The master bath features his-and-hers sinks, a skylight, a whirlpool bath and mirrored and glass shelves. A corner windows open to a garden area contained within a brick wall for privacy.

The oak and marble fireplace is the focal point of the den or family area. With second story high ceilings, high windows are located at about the level of the second floor. One wall is covered by beautiful, built-in wood book shelves.

A balcony type bridge forms an open separation for family room and entry.

FROM THE den, the game room is accessible, complete with a word processor to help the children with their homework, a pool table, a game table, a stereo system, a wet bar with refrigerator and a bathroom. Double doors open to a patio area.

The game room is a particularly popular area, especially with the children, Mrs. Brown said. During football season last fall, Mrs. Brown said she and her husband opened up their house every Friday night for teens to get together after the football games. "It gave them a place to go after the games," she said. "One night, we had about 100 kids here."

The dining area was one of the hardest rooms for Mrs. Brown to make decisions about. "With six children, I didn't need something designed to be formal, I needed something designed to fit a lot of people."

Although four of the Brown's children are grown and have moved away from home, the Browns still want their home to have plenty of room for when they return with friends or spouses, and with a dining room table that seats 14, that shouldn't be a problem.

The kitchen also is designed with a large family in mind. Almond tile covers the counters and floors and the decor is enhanced with blue accents, blue and green wall borders and plants.

JUST A few of the specialty items of the kitchen include a marble counter space for making bread, triple ovens and a microwave built-in, and an island — which the kitchen is centered around — with a vegetable sink, burners and a grill. Built-in pantries and a built-in phone table also are amenities of this area.

A breakfast bar, complete with stools, separates the kitchen from the breakfast area, which features a large wood table and a built-in hutch.

Behind the breakfast area is a large utility room for the washer and dryer. This room also has enough space for a sink, a freezer and a built-in ironing board.

A door on the opposite side of the wall to the utility room leads to the outdoor patio. From there, the "Elisha Room" is accessible. The Browns named the room after the story found in Chapter 4 of II Kings in the Old Testament of the Bible.

The guest suite is used for the Brown's children when they visit or for missionaries and guest speakers when they are visiting Midland. The "Elisha Room" is really more like a small apartment than a room. The small living area has a sitting area and a small dining table with chairs. The main furnishing in the room is the Brazilian rosewood credenza which the Browns obtained while in Brazil as missionaries. A kitchenette area is complete with a toaster, coffee maker, radio, burners, a microwave, sink and dishes. In a separate room is a bedroom and bath.

FOR THE most part, the home was decorated with the Browns' existing furniture and accessories.

"That makes it very difficult" to decorate, said Mack Thomas of Mack Thomas Interiors. However, with the addition of a few new pieces blended in with the existing furnishing, the decor gives a sense of a family oriented home.

Many of the Brown's existing furnishings were pieces they collected while they were missionaries in Brazil, and from a trip to England.

The upstairs portion of the house has four bedrooms, two decorated for girls and two decorated for boys.

To the left of the stairs is the girls' side. Each room is decorated in shades of pink with touches of violet and blue, and each has a private bath and skylights. Both rooms have double doors opening to the wrap-around balcony.

The room on the front side of the house has a special family touch to its decor. The overspread on the bed belonged to Mrs. Brown's mother, who made it.

Both rooms on the boys' side also have access to the wrap-around balcony and skylights and share a bathroom.

Mrs. Brown said she and her family have enjoyed their home very much and enjoy sharing it with others.

"It just had to be functional, not just a big showplace," she said. "That was one of the greatest things about having Mack decorate is that he knew our family and he knew how we lived," Mrs. Brown said. "We spill Kool-Aid and eat crackers all over the house. The house had to be livable, not a showplace."

Thomas said Mrs. Brown knew exactly what she wanted as they were designing the home. "She didn't change her mind, she knew what she wanted," Thomas said.

The home, which is 1 year old this month, is beautifully landscaped with brick and pebbled walkways, and bricked-in planting beds.

Low-sodium condiments made at home

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Ketchup, mustard, soy sauce and barbecue sauce make food taste great but contain lots of sodium. If you need to lower the amount of sodium you consume each day, make your own low-sodium condiments.

■ LOW-SODIUM KETCHUP: contains 3 mg sodium per tablespoon compared to 156 mg for standard ketchup.

In a blender container or food processor bowl combine 1 cup water; one 6-ounce can tomato paste; ¾ cup chopped onion; ½ cup cider vinegar; ⅓ cup sugar; 1 tablespoon molasses; 2 teaspoons dry mustard; ½ teaspoon celery seed; ¼ teaspoon each ground cinnamon, cloves, dried basil, dried tarragon and pepper; 1 clove garlic, minced. Cover and blend until smooth.

Pour mixture into a Dutch oven. Stir in 3 cups water and two 6-ounce cans tomato paste. Simmer, uncovered, about 35 minutes or until mixture is reduced to half its original volume, stirring occasionally. Pour into jars and store in refrigerator for up to 1 month. Or pour into 1-cup freezer containers; seal, label and freeze for up to 10 months. Makes 5 cups.

■ LOW-SODIUM DIJON-STYLE MUSTARD: contains 1 mg sodium per teaspoon compared to 65 mg for standard mustard.

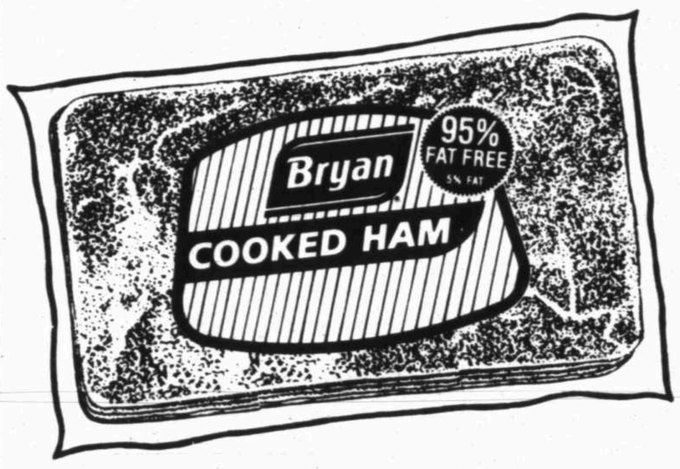

In a 1-quart saucepan combine 1 cup dry white wine; ½ cup vinegar; ¼ cup chopped onion; 1 tablespoon sugar; ½ teaspoon dried tarragon, crushed; 5 whole allspice; 2 cloves garlic, minced; 1 bay leaf; dash ground red pepper. Boil, uncovered, over medium-high heat about 20 minutes or until liquid is reduced by half. Meanwhile, in a bowl stir together ½ cup dry mustard and ¼ cup cold water; let stand 10 minutes.

Strain vinegar mixture into mustard mixture, pressing out all liquid; discard solids. Stir mixture; return to saucepan. Cook, uncovered, over medium-low heat about 10 minutes or until the consistency of heavy cream, stirring frequently. Cool; cover and refrigerate. Store in refrigerator for up to 2 months. Makes ¾ cup.

■ LOW-SODIUM SOY SAUCE: contains 120 mg sodium per teaspoon compared to 170 mg for commercial low-sodium soy sauce, 440 mg for regular soy sauce.

In a small saucepan combine ¾ cup water, 2 tablespoons instant beef bouillon granules, 2 teaspoons red wine vinegar, 1 teaspoon molasses, ⅛ teaspoon ground ginger, several dashes pepper, and dash garlic powder. Boil gently, uncovered, 5 minutes until reduced to ½ cup. Chill to store. Stir before using. Makes ½ cup.

WHAT'S COOKING

Good nutrition stressed by cancer society

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Few illnesses are more feared than cancer; yet some studies suggest a change in diet may be helpful in preventing the disease from occuring. Ceci Westmoreland, registered and licensed dietician, said the diet suggested by the American Cancer Society may help provide healthier lives.

Ms. Westmoreland said, "The theme for (American Cancer Society's) resident drive is 'Eat Right.'" The drive is scheduled to take place April 9-16, she added, and involves 550 "block walkers" who will visit homes in their neighborhoods to distribute information and request donations.

"Basically, there are six goals to eating right," Ms. Westmoreland said. "Decrease simple sugars; limit saturated fats and cholesterol; watch sodium; increase soluable fiber; limit protein; and routine exercise."

The ACS's recommended diet "goes hand in hand with the (American) Heart Association's and the U.S. Dietary Guidelines," she said. "A lot of prevention of cancer can be associated with your diet. Increased fiber can be a prevention agent in reducing chances of colon cancer," she said.

Ms. Westmoreland discussed the different nutrients and their role in a balanced diet. "Carbohydrates are known as energy nutrients," she said. "They provide 4 calories per gram and should make up about 50 percent of the total calories of the daily diet."

But all carbohydrates are not created equal. For a healthier diet, the ACS recommends increasing complex carbohydrates, such as pasta, potatoes, fresh fruits and vegetables, and whole grains, and limiting simple carbohyrates, including table sugar, candy and soft drinks.

Limiting protein intake also is desirable. "Americans in general eat too much protein," Ms. Westmoreland said, which can cause stress on the liver and the kidneys. "Protein is used for growth and repair of body tissues." Protein has 4 calories per gram and should provide about 20 percent of a balanced daily diet.

Fat, she said, "is essential for lubrication, and it provides essential fatty acids. High intake of saturated fat and cholesterol is a major cause of cardiovascular disease.

"Our message on fat is people should be certain of the type of fat used, and also how much," Ms. Westmoreland said. Fat provides 9 calories per gram, and "should not excees 30 percent of the total daly calories."

The three types of fat are:

- Monounsaturated, which, she said, "is best in lowering calories." Examples are peanut oil, peanut butter, olive oil and avocados.
- Polyunsaturated, such as safflower, corn, soybean, sunflower and canola oil.
- Saturated, which should be avoided as much as possible. Examples are egg yolk, organ meats, cream, butter, lard, and palm and coconut oils.

Sodium "aids in fluid and electrolyte balance," Ms. Westmoreland said. A "low sodium" diet provides about 2,000 milligrams daily, but diets of "people without hypertension" can contain 3,000-4,000 milligrams of salt a day. "That's 'no salt added,'" Ms. Westmoreland said. "Take the salt shaker off the table."

Fiber helps in elimination, she said, and helps stabilize blood sugar, decreases the chance of colon cancer and assists in lowering blood cholesterol. The two types of fiber are soluable (oat bran, fresh fruits and vegetables, legumes) and insoluable (wheat bran and whole grains).

"Exercise does aid in lowering blood cholesterol levels," said Ms. Westmoreland. She advises people who are not used to strenuous activity to check with their doctors before beginning an exercise program. "Choose an exercise with aerobic benefit because they utilize fat and oxygen for energy."

Ms. Westmoreland suggested one more nutrition tip: "Read labels. There's a lot of important information on products available to consumers."

The following recipes are proof that good nutrition doesn't have to mean dull diets. The first four recipes are from the American Cancer Society Cookbook:

THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be most content if you pursue a rather solitary lifestyle. Projects you have worked on in the past may have to be overhauled. Move into the spotlight if you hope to have an impact on political and community affairs. The pace you must keep up will leave you dizzy at times, but the end result will be dazzling. Use your considerable influence to help people who deserve a break.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Billy Dee Williams, newscaster Lowell Thomas, pitcher Bert Blyleven, actress Marilu Henner, magician Harry Houdini.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You tackle a new project with zeal, impressing higher-ups. New friends and admirers are part of the package. Stop and think before you spend any more money on a hobby.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Quit harboring unrealistic ideas about money. Put the figures down on paper and analyze your situation before committing yourself. The way will become clear. Persist in building savings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could benefit substantially from a relative's new business projects. Tensions at home ease. Let partner take the initiative in romance. Evening brings mixed results. You get part of what you want.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Career projects, partnerships and personal goals are highlighted. For the next few days, compromise and let others take the lead. Avoid serious mistakes by adopting a more conservative approach.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Plans and ideas change quickly; you need to be aware of certain limitations. Effective communication continues to be of prime importance. Write letters and return telephone calls promptly. Some opportunities come only once.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be willing to compromise more often in business and romance. Unless you tie up some loose ends, you could become more dependent on others. Your financial aggressiveness pays off. Bank a bonus.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take the ball and run. You know how to get the best out of talented people. Seize an opportunity to follow through and complete a major task. Prominent person applauds your diligence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A secret stubbornness could make waves. Extend the hand of friendship to a newcomer or someone less fortunate than yourself. A temporary change of residence could lead to a permanent arrangement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be the peacemaker in a family squabble. Striking a better balance between home and career will restore domestic tranquillity. Finances require careful handling. Don't bite off more than you can chew.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Things may not be moving along as fast as you would like. Get closer to the earth. Gardening and other outdoor activities will help reduce tension. Use your nervous energy productively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your quick wit and charm win new admirers. Insurance matters and joint financial dealings require your immediate attention. Focus on mate's needs and desires.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The intensity of your desires is strong. Investigate making a major purchase; discuss options with the credit manager. Work conditions will improve if you get organized.

When you commit a crime and get nailed for it, you can have no cause for complaint. But when you do something eminently reasonable and get punished for that, you have the right to feel that the gods have turned against you.

West's double of one spade has the endorsement of this department. With ideal distribution for such action, not to double could lead to all sorts of complications later in he auction. North's jump to two no trump over the double showed a limit raise in spades (10–12 points). It's not a bid we would have chosen—theoretically, North promises a fourth trump.

West started with the king–ace of diamonds and a third round, ruffed by declarer. A low spade went to the queen and, since holding up the ace would make matters easy for declarer, East took his master trump and exited with a club. But that, too, gave the game away.

Since West could not have more than 10 working high cards for his takeout double, declarer was sure that he had to have the right shape to act. Therefore, he won the club return in dummy and ran the six of spades. When West showed out, declarer's card–reading was justified and the contract became easy to make. A trump continuation allowed declarer to pick up that suit for one loser, and dummy's ten of diamonds was there to take care of the third heart.

Had West kept silent in the auction, declarer would surely have gone wrong. He would have had no reason to expect a 4–1 trump split, so he would have lost two trump tricks for down one. Blame West if you wish, but we feel he was punished too harshly.

Willie Nelson cultivates support for Texas agriculture commissioner

AUSTIN (AP) — Willie Nelson was singing a new tune in a different place — the Legislature.

Though more at home in concert halls, the singer appeared before a House committee Tuesday to testify in favor of his friend Jim Hightower, the state's elected agriculture commissioner.

Hightower, a two-term Democrat, has come under fire from the chemical industry over strict pesticide regulations and from the Farm Bureau over his efforts to sell hormone-free beef to Europe.

Because the commissioner's job is the only statewide post unprotected by the Texas Constitution, Republican Gov. Bill Clements has the power to veto it out of existence.

Nelson told the committee his concern about chemical use was raised while rabbit hunting a few years ago with his cousin, who blamed the lack of rabbits on pesticides. A friend recently blamed pesticide use for the lack of horned toads, which eat ants, Nelson said.

"So I'm here today to represent the rabbits and the horny toads," he told laughing lawmakers and applauding spectators.

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Hank Williams Jr. has been banned from the city's arena for cutting short a concert there.

Williams sang for only 40 minutes Sunday night at Viking Hall to a crowd of 5,000 that paid $17.50 each for tickets, and the angry fans burned T-shirts and other souvenirs.

Williams, 39, offered the audience no explanation when he suddenly walked off stage, said Terrie Smith, director of the city-owned hall.

Fans screamed and booed for nearly an hour after Williams jumped into a limousine for the airport. Members of the arena's board were in the audience and decided to ban any future performances by Williams.

Kathy Gangwisch, Williams' publicist, said the performer was sick with a cold or the flu. "He wasn't feeling up to par, but he thought he could do the show and wanted to go on rather than face a postponement," she said.

Ms. Smith didn't buy that explanation. "He was obnoxious, but he was definitely not sick," she said.

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Deaf actress Marlee Matlin bristles when criticized for speaking on television, saying she refuses to be "put in a box."

Matlin

Matlin said in this week's TV Guide she expects to disturb some deaf people when she speaks in the upcoming CBS movie "Bridge to Silence."

Matlin said she faced a lot of pressure because she speaks in the movie instead of using only sign language.

"Just speaking in this picture, even if I speak perfectly, puts pressure on me because some people don't think I should be speaking at all," she said.

Deaf representatives were dismayed last year when Matlin chose to speak while making an Academy Award presentation. ABC did not show the interpreter, who was using sign language for deaf viewers, even though the interpreter stood only a few feet away from the Oscar-winning actress.

"If I didn't begin speaking in public at the Oscars and proving I can speak in films, then my career goes nowhere," Matlin said. "If some people got infuriated with what I did, that's their problem. I'm not going to get put in a box as the deaf actress."

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — A woman who insists she is David Letterman's wife was ruled incompetent to stand trial Tuesday on charges of breaking into the talk show host's home.

Superior Court Judge Harold H. Dean's ruling came after a state psychiatrist testified that Margaret Ray is unable to assist in her own defense.

The judge committed Ray to a mental hospital in Newtown for up to 18 months. She had been in prison under $5,000 bail since her arrest in February.

Ray, 36, is charged with burglary, larceny, criminal trespass and drug offenses in connection with break-ins at Letterman's New Canaan home on Feb. 24 and 28.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's been 44 years since Julie Harris made her Broadway debut, and the actress who has won five Tony Awards shows no signs of tiring of the stage.

Among the changes she said she has seen in the theater are that "there aren't that many plays being done in New York anymore. The regional theaters have taken over and that's a big movement."

The 63-year-old actress particularly loves the role she's playing now, a woman who ages from 72 to 97 in Alfred Uhry's 1988 Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Driving Miss Daisy."

DEAR ABBY

Teenage mother distressed over lifestyle

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old single mom who is also working and going to school. I have a 3-month-old boy who is the joy of my life. I read your column a lot of the time, and there is never anything from single teen mothers. Other teens think that there are no problems and that it is so easy to take care of a baby. Well it is hard and stressful. I would like everybody to know what my normal schedule is:

5:00 a.m.: wake up.
5:15 a.m.: take shower and get ready for school.
6:00 a.m.: wake up and dress my son.
6:15 a.m.: take my son to day-care.
6:30 a.m.: go to school.
1:30 p.m.: pick up my son at day-care.
2:00 p.m.: give my son a bath.
2:30 p.m.: feed him.
3:00 p.m.: unpack his diaper bag and repack a new one.
3:30 p.m.: play with my son.
4:00 p.m.: get ready for work.
5:00 p.m.: go to work.
9:15 p.m.: come home, feed my son and put him to bed.
9:30 p.m.: make formula for the next day.
10:00 p.m.: clean up the house (do laundry and homework).
11:00 p.m.: go to bed.

I'm not even counting getting up in the middle of the night if my son is restless or sick.

I am a busy person with no time just to be a 16-year-old girl having fun. I'm lucky because I live with my mom, stepdad and sister, who are usually very supportive and helpful — except when I need money. After I pay for day-care, I have $80 a month left for my son and me.

I'm trying hard to be a good mom, a good daughter, a good employee and a good student. It's not easy.

I hope you think this is worth space in your column. — SINGLE TEEN MOM

DEAR SINGLE TEEN MOM: Your letter was well worth the space. I thank you for writing, and wish you and your son well.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to address my remarks to "Wish I'd Been Adopted."

I am truly sorry you suffered as a child, but please don't use your experience to dictate your conscience to me. I am an adult adoptee who has just begun to search for my birth parents. Please let me tell you something about grown adoptees.

When we were born, "illegitimacy" was considered such an unspeakable social horror that single pregnant women were pressured by parents, adoption agencies, schools and employers to give up their children. Unwed mothers were expelled from college or high school until well into the '60s, and were often refused jobs.

The majority of such women did not simply "decide" to surrender their children for adoption. They had no other options.

Well, Ms. "Wish I'd Been Adopted," you suggest that I leave well enough alone, and call my adoptive parents my "real" parents. "Real"? Do you mean that my birth parents are "unreal," "imaginary" or "fake"? I have four "real" parents — two who created me, and two who raised me. I am now searching for my birth parents to show them what a wonderful job my adoptive parents did in raising their child, and to show them I am alive and well and feel no ill will toward them.

If they wish to have no further contact with me, I will not force the issue. But this is my own affair, and I do not need to follow the advice of anyone outside my own family, however well-meaning you may be. — BARBARA LEE, ADOPTED CHILD

DEAR ABBY: You reach more people in your column than anyone I can think of, so please publish this.

Baby sitters who sit in a parent's home and earn more than $50 during a calendar quarter must pay Social Security tax and income tax on their earnings, if the parent who employs them chooses to claim a Child Care Credit on her tax return. Why? Because in order to claim the Child Care Credit, the parent must fill out a "Form W-10 Dependent Care Provider's Identification and Certification," which lists the baby sitter's name, address and Social Security number.

If the parent decides to claim the Child Care Credit, the baby sitter's pay should be increased enough to cover the resulting taxes (at least 32 percent) when federal, state and Social Security taxes are figured in.

When you consider that the Child Care Credit is only 20 percent to 30 percent (depending on your income) of the amount actually paid out for child care, wouldn't it be less expensive for everyone if the parent decided not to claim that credit? — A KENTUCKY TAXPAYER

DEAR TAXPAYER: Yes. And when many mothers on limited incomes realize that — they will probably forgo the "credit." Thanks for pointing it out.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

'Trees for life' bloom in India

Copley News Service

Fruit trees — 900,000 of them — are growing in five states in India because of Trees for Life. The organization was founded about six years ago by Indian businessman and entrepreneur Balbir Mathur, a naturalized American who lives in Kansas.

On a visit to his mother in India in 1983, he planted some fruit trees and persuaded villagers to plant more from the seeds.

Frozen corn baked with swiss cheese

Associated Press

With frozen corn, this rich-tasting side dish is in season any time. During fresh corn season, you can substitute 3 cups fresh cut corn (from 6 ears) for the frozen corn.

Great Scott! Astros score 10 for rich and famous

Associated Press

Mike Scott didn't have his best stuff, but the Houston Astros still got their money's worth.

On Monday, Scott signed a contract extension worth $3.925 million, and on Tuesday night the right-hander opened the season for Houston and beat the Atlanta Braves 10-3 at the Astrodome. He will be paid $1.3 million for this season.

In seven innings, he fanned seven but walked four and allowed solo homers to Tommy Gregg and Ron Gant.

"I've thrown worse and I've thrown better, but the runs early helped," Scott said. "Having the luxury of a good lead was nice."

It was the most runs in the season opener for Houston since 1962, when the Houston Colt 45s beat the Chicago Cubs 11-2.

Glenn Davis was 2-for-4 with two RBIs and three runs scored for the Astros. Billy Hatcher had three hits.

Scott helped his own cause with a two-run single in the third inning to give the Astros a 3-0 lead.

"It's nice to know he can win without his best stuff," said Art Howe, who made his managerial debut for Houston. "After all we heard about spring training, it's nice to come out on top."

In the seventh, Gregg homered over the right field fence as Scott appeared to tire.

"His control was not good, but it was smart," Gregg said. "He got the fastball up and came back with the split finger.

"He's Mike Scott. What else can you say? When his split finger is on, he's tough to hit."

Cubs 5, Phillies 4

Mitch Williams struck out the side in the ninth after loading the bases with none out as Chicago held on at Wrigley Field to beat Philadelphia, spoiling Nick Leyva's managerial debut.

Williams, who came on in the eighth after Mike Schmidt's 543rd homer cut it to 5-4, went 1⅔ innings. He gave up three straight hits to load the bases in the ninth, but struck out Schmidt, Chris James and Mark Ryal for his first NL save.

Andre Dawson hit his 299th homer for the Cubs. The homer came in the fourth inning off loser Floyd Youmans after Ryne Sandberg had opened the inning with a double.

Rick Sutcliffe won his second straight Wrigley Field opener, the first pitcher to accomplish the feat since Grover Cleveland Alexander in 1925 and 1926.

Expos 6, Pirates 5

Tim Raines drew a bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning from reliever Jeff Robinson as Montreal opened the season with a victory over visiting Pittsburgh.

"I think if this had been last year, I would have tried to win the ball game myself," Raines said. "I think I learned from last year that what's important to me is to get my walks, too, and lay off bad pitches."

The Expos trailed 5-4 entering the bottom of the ninth. But they tied the game on Damaso Garcia's bases-loaded single with two outs in the ninth. Robinson then walked Raines on a 3-2 pitch to force in the winning run.

Barry Bonds had four hits for Pittsburgh, including a solo homer off Joe Hesketh in the eighth that gave the Pirates a 5-4 lead.

Giants 8, Padres 3

In his San Diego debut, Bruce Hurst allowed eight runs and 10 hits, including consecutive home runs by Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell in a six-run, San Francisco third inning. The Padres signed Hurst to a three-year contract last December worth $5.25 million.

Kelly Downs held the Padres to six hits and three walks with six strikeouts in making his first start since missing the final six weeks last season with a shoulder injury. He improved his lifetime record against San Diego to 5-0, including two shutouts in 1987.

District 4-5A baseball produces both good, ugly

Cougs blank Rebels, 13-0

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

"That wasn't too bad, was it?"

After a 13-0 win over the Midland Lee Rebels Tuesday afternoon, that was the first thing Abilene Cooper head coach Andy Malone could think of to say.

Malone didn't speak with any smugness in his voice. He wasn't trying to rub in anything. It may have just been a sense of pride – and even relief – coming through.

The Cooper Cougars, 12-4 overall and 4-2 in district, broke two three-game skids with the five-inning win over the Rebels. It was the first time in the last four trips that Cooper has left Midland with a win: The Coogs lost twice here in '88 and in their first game against Midland High this season. Cooper also had dropped its last three straight – to MHS, Permian and Arlington High – before ending the drought Tuesday.

"That's just called getting your brains beat out," Lee head coach Ernie Johnson said. "They were mad and they have a good ball team."

WHILE MISSING all day with his curve ball, Cooper pitcher Lance Grider could do nothing but dazzle with his blazing 85 mph fastball. Grider allowed just one hit – a first inning double to right-fielder Mike Pearson – and walked three. Aside from Pearson's two-bagger, Lee batters hit just two balls out of the infield all day.

Cooper scored five runs on three hits in the second inning and eight runs on eight hits in the fourth to put the game out of reach.

For Cooper, it was four guys named Scott who did most of the damage.

Second baseman Scott Morris was 4-for-4 with three runs and three RBIs; first baseman Scotty Pugh went 2-for-4 with two runs scored and another two RBIs; centerfielder Scott Malone drove in four runs on three hits in four trips and left-fielder Scott North was 1-for-3 with one run scored and an RBI.

The four Scotts combined for 10 of the Cougars 12 RBIs, and 10 of their 13 hits. Even pinch-hitter Scott Jacobs pitched in with a double in one trip to the plate.

"A few hits will solve a lot of problems for you," Malone said. "We had started thinking we were pretty good (which accounted for the three straight losses). We needed something like this to turn it around ... something relaxed where we weren't under pressure for seven innings."

Lee pitcher Kyle Greeley, whose knuckleball didn't meet with success on this day, said the pitch "just wasn't moving very much. I had to go to the fastball and curveball, but they hit that, too.

"We know we can play better and we just have to work really hard."

Said Johnson on his team's lack of hitting against Grider: "We could've signed a non-aggression pact today."

Lee falls to 2-4 in district, 7-8 overall. The Rebels will meet Midland High Saturday at 2 p.m. at Zachery Field.

MHS normally plays its home games at Angel Stadium, but the Angels come to town to open the season Friday with a 10-game homestand, so the Lee-MHS game will be played at Zachery Field, next to Memorial Stadium.

MHS wins; Mojo loses

From Staff Reports

The District 4-5A baseball race has all of a sudden become quite interesting. With Midland High's 2-0 win over the Abilene High War Eagles, the Bulldogs are in a tie for first with Odessa Permian, after the Panthers dropped their first game of the season, 2-1, to the San Angelo Bobcats Tuesday.

Midland High pitcher Kevin Rychel (3-0) threw a four-hitter and struck out six Eagles. Abilene High's Matt Sherwood (3-3) also pitched a gem, striking out eight while scattering just six MHS hits.

Midland High scored both of its runs in the second. Rychel walked, stole second and went to third on a passed ball; catcher Pat Mowles then singled and Rychel scored from third. Will Sowders then laid down a bloop single and courtesy runner Keith Gilbreath scored on an error by AHS shortstop Trey Forkerway.

Abilene High left 12 men on base, including three in the third.

Both Midland High and Permian are 5-1 in district; Abilene Cooper, after a 13-0 lashing of Midland Lee, is now in second place with a 4-2 record; Abilene High falls to 3-3, and both Lee and San Angelo are tied for fifth at 2-4; Odessa High, idle Tuesday, is 0-6.

San Angelo will have Saturday off to enjoy its victory over Permian while cross town rivals take the stage in 2 p.m. games Saturday. MHS hosts Lee while OHS and Permian square off as do Cooper and Abilene High.

Panthers, Bobcats lead 4-5A girls

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

ODESSA — The District 4-5A girls golf race is only half over — chronologically.

But one has to wonder whether Odessa Permian and San Angelo will be seriously challenged for team berths in the Region I meet after their performance in the second round Tuesday at Mission Country Club.

Though San Angelo erased a 17-point Permian lead Tuesday with a fine team total of 368 strokes, Midland Lee barely hung onto third place after suffering through a team round of 404. The Lady Rebels just managed to stay ahead of Midland High after the debacle, 784-785, after starting the day just seven strokes behind then-second place San Angelo.

Individually, San Angelo junior Lisa Balch shot the day's low round of 79 to take an eight-stroke lead over Permian's Denise Moralez, who skied to an 87 after a first round 78 in Midland last week. Midland High's Jenny Hyde broke out of the pack with a career-best 87, but her two-round total of 180 still trails Moralez by 13 shots for the second and final individual region qualifying berth.

Lee mentor Shirley Stephenson concedes that her team may have played itself out of a shot at the regional tournament, now that the Lady Rebs are 43 strokes behind the co-leaders.

"I won't say we can't catch up, but the odds are against us," Stephenson said. The problem was hard to pinpoint, she added.

"It was cold and it was windy, but it was that way for everyone out there.

"We thought we could play with them (Permian and San Angelo) coming into the round, but we got real far behind on the front side."

Golfers battled a cold wind for the first nine holes, and even Balch said the weather was a problem early.

"If the wind hadn't been blowing, I probably would have shot better. This course was a little easier than Midland's and my chipping and putting was going well."

San Angelo coach Rick Harvey said the wind certainly provided a factor of uncertainty.

"You never know what will happen when the wind starts blowing," he said. "You don't know if they'll hang on and play."

One hanger-on was sophomore Juli Lay, who fired a 92 to belie her status as the Bobcats fifth player.

The district tourney moves on to Bentwood Country Club in San Angelo for Saturday's third round, but Harvey isn't sure whether that will help the Bobcats pull into the lead.

"Hey, Permian has four players back from last year. They just didn't play today."

Mojo mentor Bob Pulliam would be the first to admit that.

"I have no idea what happened to them," Pulliam said. "The wind made them panic, I guess.

"It was our home course. We play here twice a week, but I think they may have a mental block about this course."

Moralez said her putting was a problem, especially on the third hole.

"I got down in three, then I four-putted," she said. "The greens here were a lot tougher than they were last week."

Old timers find fountain of youth in AL season openers

Associated Press

The season opener for six teams in the American League turned out to be old timers' day, too.

There were three games in the AL on Tuesday, and they were won by 45-year-old Tommy John, 41-year-old Charlie Hough and 39-year-old Jerry Reuss. Reuss won't have to wait long to join the over-40 club; he celebrates his 40th birthday on June 19.

Reuss' batterymate against California, 41-year-old Carlton Fisk, chipped in with a home run and a single as the two became the oldest battery ever to team up for an opening day game in the majors.

Previously, the oldest opening day battery was Johnny Niggeling and Rick Ferrell, a combined 79 years old when they played for the Washington Senators in 1944.

But the best story of all belongs to John.

He was given almost no chance of making the New York Yankees prior to spring training. Manager Dallas Green wanted to go with youth and the left-hander had struggled in the second half of 1988.

But John was given $250,000 to visit spring training by owner George Steinbrenner and was told he would get another $250,000 if he made the team.

John not only made the team, he was named the Yankees' opening day starter and beat the Minnesota Twins and Frank Viola 4-2.

"I can't complain about losing to T.J.," said Viola, who won the American League Cy Young Award and the All-Star Game last season. "That son-of-a-gun is 45 years old and can still pitch."

John allowed two runs in seven innings and got out of two bases-loaded jams.

"Dallas was a pitcher and he understands what you have to do," John said. "If you want to get innings out of your pitchers, you have to stick with them. He had confidence in me to get out of jams."

"People have doubted me since I was 19 years old, saying that I couldn't throw hard or I wouldn't belong in the majors," John said.

John tied a major league record when he opened his 26th major league season. Deacon McGuire also played for 26 seasons (1884-1912). It was also John's 287th career victory and moved him past Robin Roberts into 20th place on the all-time list.

In the other games played Tuesday, Hough pitched a five-hitter to beat Detroit 4-0 for Texas and the Chicago White Sox beat California 9-2 behind Reuss.

OC wins Texas golf title; Chaps rally for fifth place

From Staff Reports

McKINNEY — Odessa College fired a two-round 624 to win the Texas Junior College golf tournament here Monday and Tuesday on the Stonebridge Country Club course, which is the site for this year's NCAA regional tournament.

Midland College finished fifth with a 645. San Jacinto was second with a 626 while Paris followed with a 627 and Western Texas College a 630.

"The wind was blowing about 40 miles per hour both days and it was really cold," said MC golf coach Delnor Poss. "Even without the wind, this is the toughest course we've ever played. Under ideal conditions, breaking a 300 round would be really something."

The Chaparrals were paced by Dean Robertson with a 78-77-155 while Sean Duffy, 82-80; and Andrew Coltort, 83-79, followed with 162s. Mark Kochan produced a 90-76-166 in a big turnaround from first to second round play, producing the Chaps' best round of the tournament. Marty Scoles had a 92-90-182.

San Jacinto's 306 on the second day was a tournament best, but trailed OC by six strokes heading into the final round and the Wranglers came up with a 310 to win by two strokes.

Bernard King scores 43

Associated Press

Bernard King did something he hadn't done in a while. Michael Jordan, on the other hand, did something he has been doing with regularity.

King's 43 points in Washington's 104-96 victory over New Jersey on Tuesday night were the most he has scored since he played for New York and suffered a knee injury in March, 1985, that sidelined him for 24 months. He scored 19 points in the first quarter, tying the Washington record for points in an opening period.

"My doctor four years ago said if I ever scored 40 points again I owed him the game ball, so there it is," King said, gesturing toward his locker. "It goes in the mail (Wednesday).

"It is something special; I'm not going to say it's not. Never in my wildest imagination did I ever think I'd get back to this level."

Since moving to point guard 14 games ago, Jordan's game has reached a level attained by few players. He notched his sixth consecutive triple-double — 33 points, 10 rebounds, 12 assists — as Chicago beat Charlotte 121-101. It was Jordan's 10th triple-double of the season and 15th of his career.

Bulls 121, Hornets 101

Jordan also led Chicago with six steals and the Bulls are 11-3 since he moved from shooting guard to point guard.

Charlotte has lost six straight and is 5-30 on the road. Rex Chapman led the Hornets with 21 points.

Spurs 109, Heat 87

Willie Anderson scored 22 points to lead San Antonio in a game between two teams that will miss the playoffs. Alvin Robertson added 20 as Miami lost for the 33rd time in 35 road games.

NBA Roundup

Rockets 90, Pacers 88

Akeem Olajuwon scored 26 points and grabbed 12 rebounds and Houston withstood a late rally to beat Indiana for the eighth straight time.

Jazz 95, Mavericks 80

Karl Malone scored 22 points and John Stockton had a basket and three of his 18 assists during a 10-0 run to start the fourth quarter.

Former Jazz star Adrian Dantley, making his first appearance in Salt Lake City this season, scored 25 points.

Cavaliers 105, Hawks 91

Ron Harper scored 32 points and Cleveland's defense forced four straight turnovers during an 11-0 tie-breaking run midway through the fourth quarter.

The Cavaliers have won 28 of their last 29 home games.

76ers 124, Knicks 113

Ron Anderson scored 15 of his 36 points in less than six minutes of the second quarter, giving Philadelphia the lead for good. The 76ers, who have won four straight games and six of seven, became the first team to beat the Knicks twice at Madison Square Garden this season. New York is 32-5 at home, but four of the defeats have come in their last seven games.

Nuggets 128, Kings 124

Walter Davis and Alex English scored 22 points each as Denver snapped Sacramento's two-game winning streak and left the Kings as the only NBA team without a three-game streak this season. The Kings have won two games in a row 10 times — six this season — since April 1987 when they last won three straight.

Denver's Michael Adams scored one 3-point basket — his 149th of the season — for an NBA single-season record.

Lakers 115, SuperSonics 97

A.C. Green scored a career-high 33 points and Magic Johnson had 18 assists as Los Angeles handed Seattle its sixth consecutive setback. The Lakers, who lead the Pacific Division by 3½ games over Phoenix, notched their 50th victory, the 10th consecutive time they have reached that mark.

Celtics 124, Clippers 108

Reggie Lewis scored 27 points and Kevin McHale 21 as Boston snapped a four-game road losing streak. Robert Parish added 19 points for the Celtics, who have won all 10 games against the Clippers since they moved to Los Angeles from San Diego at the start of the 1984-85 season.

Bucks 124, Warriors 118

Terry Cummings scored 32 points, including a game-clinching basket with nine seconds remaining, as Milwaukee clinched a playoff berth with its 12th straight victory over Golden State.

Trail Blazers 118, Pistons 100

Clyde Drexler had 25 points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists as Portland snapped Detroit's eight-game winning streak and left the Pistons just one game ahead of Cleveland in the Central Division.

Roberto Kelly went 4-for-4 for the Yankees with a homer and two stolen bases.

Kelly drove in the tying run and scored the winner in the fifth off Viola. In the ninth, Kelly homered off Juan Berenguer to make it 4-2.

Rangers 4, Tigers 0

Hough struck out five and walked two en route to his 11th career shutout and Scott Fletcher drove in three runs for Texas.

"I had a rough time out there tonight, feel-wise. I didn't feel comfortable," Hough said of his knuckler. "I threw the good pitches when I had to."

The last time the Tigers were shut out on opening day was 1975 when Baltimore's Jim Palmer beat them 5-0.

"When we got a four-run lead, I threw the fastball to make them hit it," Hough said. "I stayed with the fastball because I was having a tough time with the knuckler. I caught Detroit looking a lot."

The sellout crowd of 40,375 in Arlington Stadium included the Rangers' new owners and former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry, who threw out the ceremonial first pitch.

White Sox 9, Angels 2

Reuss held California to two hits and no walks for seven innings as Chicago opened the season with a victory over the Angels in Jeff Torborg's debut as manager. It also was Doug Rader's first game as manager of the Angels.

Reuss allowed only a first-inning homer to Devon White, then retired 17 straight before White doubled with one out in the seventh.

"I was able to pitch the way I wanted," Reuss said. "I was pitching just inside, where they had to swing at it. I also got some good defense behind me."

There was a brief bench-clearing brawl in the top of the ninth inning, but no serious punches were thrown. The incident started when California reliever Bob McClure hit Ivan Calderon with a pitch following a two-run homer by Harold Baines to make it 8-2.

Calderon charged the mound and wrestled McClure down as both dugouts emptied. Both Calderon and McClure were ejected.

NMJC player dies in pickup game

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A New Mexico Junior College basketball player who collapsed during a Hobbs pickup game March 27 died of a congenital coronary defect similar to that of the late Pete Maravich, an autopsy has concluded.

Henry Jackson, 21, of Philadelphia died at Lea Regional Hospital in Hobbs two hours after he collapsed during a game at the Caster Activity Center on the campus.

Toxicological tests were negative, said Dr. Robert Pfalzgraf of the state Office of the Medical Investigator in Albuquerque.

Lemieux finally playoff bound

Associated Press

After 368 regular-season games, two scoring titles, one MVP trophy, all-star and Canada Cup heroics, Mario Lemieux finally makes his NHL playoff debut.

Lemieux and his Pittsburgh Penguins play host to the New York Rangers tonight in a Patrick Division matchup as the Stanley Cup chase begins.

When Lemieux was the first selection in the 1984 draft after scoring 282 points in his final junior year, he vowed to get Pittsburgh into the playoffs. He never imagined it would take five years.

"When I came in '84, we had a lot of work to do in Pittsburgh," Lemieux said. "We have improved a lot the last couple of years and only missed the playoffs by a few points the last two years. It is a tough division and we have had to be patient."

In the other Patrick series, the Washington Capitals play the Philadelphia Flyers. In the Adams Division, Hartford is at Montreal and Buffalo plays in Boston.

In the Norris Division, Detroit is host to Chicago and St. Louis plays Minnesota. The Smythe Division matchups are Edmonton at Los Angeles and Vancouver at Calgary.

No current Penguin has played a postseason game in a Pittsburgh uniform, although defenseman Paul Coffey and Dave Hannan own Stanley Cup rings from Edmonton.

Lemieux won his second consecutive scoring title with 85 goals and 199 points and expects to be shadowed by Jan Erixon and Lucien DeBlois.

"I just expect to do the same job I did this year, try to make the big play at the right time," he said. "When the game is on the line, I know it is my job to go out there to score a goal or make the right play.

"In the playoffs, it is always a tight-checking game, but I have had checkers on me for the last couple of months. I am used to it now and we do things to get away from it."

The Rangers are reeling in turmoil over the firing of Michel Bergeron.

Dallas weighs draft options

IRVING (AP) — The announcement that Miami Hurricanes quarterback Steve Walsh will enter the National Football League draft gives the Dallas Cowboys another option as they decide how to use their No. 1 pick in the upcoming draft.

Walsh, who played quarterback for new Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson at Miami, announced Tueday he will forego his final season of college eligibility and enter the NFL draft later this month.

And the announcement that Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State will also be available in the draft opens up even more possibilities for the Cowboys, who qualified for the No. 1 draft choice with a 3-13 finish, worst in the NFL, last season.

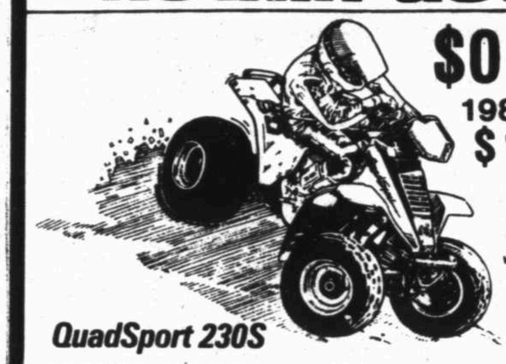

Johnson said Tuesday night that Walsh will become a productive player in the NFL, but stopped short of saying he would consider using the team's No. 1 choice to draft Walsh.

The Cowboys earlier appeared to be leaning toward signing UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman, but Tuesday they had the additional options of Walsh or Sanders.

Walsh, who led Miami to the 1987 national championship, made his decision nearly five weeks after Johnson left the Hurricanes to become the second head coach of the Cowboys.

Johnson, who has been evasive when answering questions about the Cowboys' No. 1 pick, continued to sidestep the issue when informed of Walsh's decision.

Walesa says pact will allow free elections in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa said Solidarity leaders today approved a historic pact that would legalize the union movement and clear the way for the first free elections in communist postwar Poland.

He said Solidarity achieved its primary goals during its two months of talks with the government on the country's social and economic crisis.

"This is settled. Before Poland and all the world I am saying that we have achieved what we promised to do," Walesa said.

The Solidarity chairman spoke after a meeting of the Solidarity Executive Commission, which gathered today to decide whether to approve the sweeping agreement with the government that resulted from the talks.

"We are signing," he said of the accord after emerging from the three-hour meeting.

Asked when he thought Solidarity would be legalized, Walesa replied, "I think immediately after signing."

State radio announced the final accords would be signed at 5 p.m. (10 a.m. CDT) in a ceremony at the Council of Ministers palace, where the talks between the government and the opposition began Feb. 6.

The interior minister, Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, was expected to sign for the government, and Walesa for the opposition, according to a government spokesman. The proceedings were to be broadcast live nationwide on television and radio.

The government agreed in August to hold the talks in return for an end to a series of crippling strikes.

WORLD

Two major agreements were reached Tuesday. Negotiators continued to discuss a dispute between Solidarity and the official trade union federation OPZZ over a formula to peg workers' compensation to inflation.

Walesa said the union did not get everything it wanted in the agreement but said other issues could be addressed later. "We may solve the others at another time when we are a legal union, when we have computers and offices, and we will be able to do it better," he said.

These key agreements were reached late Tuesday after two months of intense negotiations:

■ Solidarity's legal status will be restored and people fired for union activities after the 1981 crackdown that quashed Solidarity will be reinstated.

■ Political reforms will include bringing the opposition into the Sejm, the one-house parliament, as a minority party, creating a freely elected Senate and establishing a powerful presidency.

Solidarity officials said Tuesday there was a dispute over the formula for linking salaries to inflation — a sensitive issue for Solidarity. The OPZZ claims the proposed plan to index pay to inflation does not do enough to protect workers from price increases that are exceeding 60 percent annually.

It was unclear early today whether Solidarity had approved the indexing plan that was part of the accords.

Solidarity became the first legal, independent union movement in the Soviet bloc when it was chartered in the fall of 1980 during nationwide strikes. It was suspended in the December 1981 military crackdown and later outlawed.

The present one-house parliament could meet as early as Friday to enact the accords.

Under the agreement, the opposition would join in elections in June that would guarantee the Communist Party and its allies 65 percent of the Sejm's 460 seats. That ratio would apply only this year with later elections to be more democratic.

A presidency and a Senate of about 100 members would be created.

Soviets won't locate bases, nuclear weapons in region, Gorbachev says

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, responding to longstanding U.S. concerns about Moscow's intentions in Latin America, says the Kremlin will refrain from putting military bases or nuclear weapons in the region.

With President Fidel Castro sitting nearby, the Soviet leader said in a speech to the National Assembly on Tuesday that Moscow supports the creation of a "zone of peace" in Latin America and an end to all outside military aid to the region.

Gorbachev's comments were made during his first diplomatic trip to Latin America and seemed directed largely at Washington, whose hemispheric policy for years has been based on concerns about Soviet influence in the region.

Tens of thousands of Cubans lined the streets this morning to bid farewell to Gorbachev as he headed for the airport for a trip to London.

About 700 buses were mobilized for the occasion and many people waited more than three hours for a final glimpse of the Soviet leader. Workers were given time off to take part in the departure activities.

Gorbachev left at mid-morning following a hectic day Tuesday highlighted by his late afternoon speech.

It was a day for sightseeing by Gorbachev at local points of interest and also a day in which dissident sources reported the arrest of seven people who had planned to lead a pro-Gorbachev demonstration at the Soviet Embassy.

The planned demonstration, canceled after the arrests, intended to seek Gorbachev's support for liberalizing moves in Cuba similar to the ones he is carrying out in the Soviet Union.

Castro introduced Gorbachev to the National Assembly, delivering a fiery 50-minute address in which he blasted U.S. policies across the board, particularly Washington's support for anti-communist insurgencies.

He criticized Western reporters for saying Gorbachev's reforms have produced a rift between the two.

Castro pointed out that the two countries have immense cultural, economic and historical differences, and it is only natural that they would follow different ideological paths.

Still, Castro has indicated in the past that he was troubled that Gorbachev would embrace some aspects of capitalism as part of his sweeping policy shifts.

U.S. condemns arrests of 7 Cuban human rights activists

HAVANA (AP) — Seven Cuban human rights activists were arrested shortly before they planned to rally in support of reforms similar to those embraced by visiting Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, a dissident spokesman said.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler condemned the arrests, saying they underlined "the need for ongoing monitoring of the human rights situation in Cuba."

Among those arrested Tuesday was Samuel Martinez Lara, leader of the Pro-Human Rights Party of Cuba, said Elizardo Sanchez, a dissident activist.

Martinez Lara's party and two other human rights groups had planned to gather at the Soviet Embassy Tuesday evening to ask Gorbachev to pressure President Fidel Castro to adopt Soviet-style reforms.

Gorbachev, who was to leave for London today, is popular among some Cubans because of his greater tolerance for opposing views and his introduction of some capitalistic innovations.

Castro, on the other hand, has been strongly committed to maintaining Marxist orthodoxy and has rejected the concept of open debate.

Sanchez said that among others taken into custody was Roberto Bahamonde, who gained attention last month by seeking election to a seat on a municipal assembly by running as a dissident.

It is believed the first time a dissident has launched such a challenge in 30 years.

Bahamonde lost the election against a pro-establishment candidate but complained that he was not allowed to campaign on his platform, which calls for a restoration of private enterprise.

A Namibian woman and her child pass by a convoy of South African-backed troops near Onandjokwe, Namibia, Tuesday. A South African official said the fledgling independence process is threatened by fierce fighting between security forces and black nationalist guerrillas.

South Africa threatens to scrap Namibian plan

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — South Africa has threatened to scrap a plan for granting Namibia independence if the United Nations cannot stop an incursion by black nationalist guerrillas who continued battling security forces today.

"Unless active and effective measures are taken within the next few hours to stem the rapid deterioration of the situation, the whole peace process in Namibia is in danger of collapse," Foreign Minister Pik Botha said Tuesday in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Sam Nujoma, leader of the South-West African People's Organization guerrilla movement, says South Africa began the fighting.

Nujoma, at a news conference Tuesday in Harare, Zimbabwe, urged the U.N. Security Council to stop South African-led security forces "from butchering Namibians and confine the South African army to their barracks."

He said he would end a 20-year exile and return to Namibia soon.

Intense fighting began Saturday, the day a cease-fire was to take hold and the U.N.-supervised transition to independence was to begin in the territory that neighboring South Africa has ruled for 74 years.

A territorial police official, Chief Inspector Kierie du Rand, said the intensity of the fighting had diminished today, with the guerrillas dispersing into smaller groups.

U.N. investigators say the fighting broke out after about 1,000 South-West African People's Organization guerrillas crossed into northern Namibia from Angola last weekend, in violation of the independence plan.

At least 172 guerrillas, 20 members of the South African-led police force and one South African soldier have been killed in clashes in the northern region along with an undetermined number of civilians, du Rand said.

SWAPO has not issued casualty figures and there was no way to independently confirm du Rand's figures.

South Africa accused Nujoma of sending his guerrillas into Namibia to sabotage the peace process, a charge Nujoma and other SWAPO officials deny.

SWAPO has battled South African rule since 1966 and is considered the favorite to come to power under the U.N. independence plan, which envisions elections for a national assembly Nov. 1.

Namibia, which has 1.3 million people, is roughly the size of France and West Germany combined. The predominately black and mixed race population includes about 75,000 whites.

The United States Tuesday urged the guerrillas to pull back into Angola. State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said Washington does not believe the peace accord is in danger of unraveling "at this point."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher also condemned what she called a rebel incursion into Namibia.

Under the U.N. plan, guerrillas are to remain at their bases in Angola at least 100 miles north of Namibia's border until mid-May.

Botha wrote, "The South African government cannot be expected to implement its undertakings ... while SWAPO continues to act in flagrant violation of the provisions" approved by the United Nations.

In the letter to Perez de Cuellar, which was released in South Africa, Botha said 4,450 SWAPO fighters are now in violation of the U.N. plan.

He also said hundreds of Cuban troops in Angola had moved to within 650 yards of the Namibian border.

"In such circumstances, South Africa has the undoubted right to suspend its compliance with its obligations," Botha's letter added.

"Our people have been fighting inside Namibia in the past 20 years," Nujoma told reporters after meeting in Harare with representatives from the five permanent member nations of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union.

He said he had asked the United Nations to bolster its cease-fire monitoring forces in northern Namibia.

The United Nations authorized 4,650 troops for the Namibia operation, but only about 1,000 have arrived and no more than 300 are in northern Namibia.

The U.N. forces made no effort to intervene in the fighting and say it is not part of their mandate.

The Namibian territorial police force, composed mostly of black Namibians commanded by white South Africans, has done most of the fighting against guerrillas. The makeup of the territorial army is similar. The South African army units in Namibia are virtually all white.

About 1,500 South African and Namibian soldiers, belonging to the territorial army and the South African army, were given U.N. permission to leave their bases and support the police in clashes with guerrillas.

Three Haitian coup leaders deported; Six officers fired

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Ending a challenge from rebel troops, President Prosper Avril deported their commander and two other alleged leaders of a failed weekend coup and reportedly fired six high-ranking officers.

Mutinous troops from the Leopards battalion who had held the international airport for two days returned to their barracks Tuesday.

About 100 of the unit's 400 troops had been demanding the release of their leader, Lt. Col. Himmler Rebu, who was exiled to the United States with two colleagues.

The three were accused of planning the attempt to overthrow Lt. Gen. Avril's government that was foiled Sunday by loyal troops. Four rebel soldiers were reportedly killed.

Life slowly returned to normal Tuesday in Port-au-Prince, capital of the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

"Everything is calm," National Palace guard Sgt. Jean-Pierre Raymond told a reporter early today. "The president is sleeping" at the palace.

A government communique said Avril, "seeking a rapid return to normal life, magnanimously permitted" the three officers to leave the country.

The U.S. Embassy said the three had visas to the United States and flew there Tuesday from the neighboring Dominican Republic. No more precise destination was given.

Besides the 38-year-old Rebu, the other two allegedly involved in the coup attempt were identified as palace guard Col. Philippe Biamby, 36, and Col. Leonce Qualo, 35, head of the Interior Ministry's intelligence department.

A Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Leopards 'didn't want him (Rebu) sent into exile ... they wanted him freed."

The coup occurred several days after four high-ranking officers who had been accused of drug trafficking, were discharged from the army.

Avril is cracking down on the narcotics trade as a condition for the resumption of $70 million in annual U.S. aid that was suspended after thugs killed 34 voters in November 1987, thwarting the country's first free elections in more than three decades.

State television said Lt. Col. Michel Louis, Lt. Col. Carrel Occil, Lt. Col. Serge David and Maj. Renel Sanon had been fired, while radio station Haiti Inter said Lt. Col. Romouald Achille and Lt. Ruben Alexis were also dismissed.

Foiling what would have been this Caribbean nation's third coup in less than a year, loyalist soldiers rescued Avril late Sunday as rebel soldiers drove him to the airport to be flown out of the country.

Avril, 50, was brought to power Sept. 11 by non-commissioned officers who wanted to end state-sponsored violence and ousted Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy. Most of Avril's support appears to come from the 1,000-man Presidential Guard.

But there remained tension between the National Palace and the repressive Dessalines Barracks, which has about 700 men headed by the powerful Col. Guy Francois.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Vietnam to withdraw troops from Cambodia by Sept. 30

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Vietnam announced today it will withdraw all its troops from Cambodia by Sept. 30, ending a 10-year occupation and conflict with resistance forces.

Vietnam previously had said it would withdraw its troops, estimated at 70,000, by 1990 and would be out by September only if a political settlement were reached.

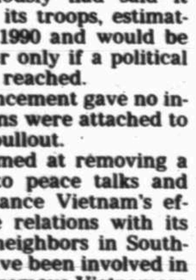

Today's announcement gave no indication conditions were attached to the September pullout.

It appeared aimed at removing a major obstacle to peace talks and could could enhance Vietnam's efforts to improve relations with its non-communist neighbors in Southeast Asia, who have been involved in a major effort to remove Vietnamese forces from Cambodia and restore peace to the country.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia in December 1978 and ousted the government of the communist Khmer Rouge, under which an estimated one-fourth of the country's 8 million people died from famine and execution.

Takeshita under fire for gifts

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, whose administration is under fire in a major bribery scandal, received $228,000 from the firm at the center of the scandal through ticket sales for a fund-raising party, news reports said today.

Takeshita

An aide to Takeshita, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed that Recruit Co., the information services firm at the heart of the scandal, had bought tickets to the fund-raising party in May 1987, but said "our office did not directly handle the party, so we do not know the amount."

Takeshita refused comment on the reports.

The news followed Takeshita's disclosure Friday that Recruit spent $152,000 on another of Takeshita's fund-raising parties in May 1987. At the time, Takeshita was secretary general of the governing Liberal Democratic Party and the leading contender to the premiership.

Reports by the major daily Asahi Shimbun and other local media Wednesday said Takeshita had received a total of at least $380,000 from Recruit.

Beirut battles intensify

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Thunderous blasts echoed across Beirut and the surrounding mountains today as Syrian and Christian gunners fought with howitzers and rocket launchers for a fifth straight day.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman denied a radio report that the residence of U.S. Ambassador John McCarthy in the Christian suburb of Yarze was on fire after taking a direct hit.

"The house of the ambassador has been hit repeatedly during the last week, and recently some shells fell near the compound, but not in the compound. There was no fire," said the spokesman, speaking without using his name.

Police said seven people have been killed and 30 wounded in the exchanges since midnight Tuesday.

The latest casualties raised to 162 killed and 536 wounded the overall toll from the 29-day confrontation between Gen. Michel Aoun's Christian troops and an alliance of Syrian and Druse forces.

340 Palestinians freed

JERUSALEM (AP) — The government today freed more than 340 Palestinian prisoners as a Moslem holiday gesture that also coincided with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's talks with U.S. leaders in Washington.

About 240 detainees were bused to the occupied Gaza Strip, and 104 were taken to the West Bank. More were expected to be freed later, the army said.

About two dozen of the detainees knelt on the ground and uttered prayers of thanks before being embraced by friends and relatives, a witness in Gaza City said. One detainee said he was 12 years old.

Israeli authorities said the releases were a gesture on the eve of the Islamic holy month of Ramadan, which starts Friday.
