While most people can't remember when it last rained in Midland, employees at Midland Regional Airport can see the wet remains on the roof. Repairing the roof is a priority of a $4 million construction project approved by the City Council.

New airport projects to start

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Construction projects at Midland Regional Airport are starting to overlap, but those about to begin may keep the terminal building from turning to ice during the winter and a steam bath during the summer or floating down Monahans Draw during a rainstorm.

And until a major redesign of the street system and parking lots is completed, getting to the airport may require overhead direction from air traffic controllers.

Jon Mathiasen, assistant director of aviation/administration, explained that one project — that involving the streets — should be completed in 1986, a new heating and cooling system should be operational by February 1986 and a roofing and expansion project initiated recently is expected to be finished in 1987.

Totaled, the three projects are costing about $21 million.

THE LAST ONE to get started was approved by the council in late 1984 and the engineering and architect firm of Daniel, Mann, Johnson & Mendenhall of Houston was selected at the Feb. 26 meeting. With a price tag of $4 million set as the maximum, the priority is to fix the leaking roof and add two gates and jetways to the concourse area, according to Mathiasen. If the roof repair cost is lower than expected, the council has a shopping list to include in the $4 million, and the top two items call for expanding the ticket counter space and adding a baggage carousel.

The roof has been a sore spot for the council since it was put on the building in the 1960s. Made of curved concrete, the seams were joined at the dips rather than at the top, said Mathiasen. In the renovation of the late 1970s, the contractor attempted to remedy the problem and put a straight-lined facade along the front and back of the terminal building.

Instead of plugging the holes, the city now has a curved roof that drains onto a straight roof, which sends the water down slanting windows and onto persons standing in front of the building. Those slanted windows also leak and the water drops into the vestibules. "It leaks onto our electric doors and shorts them out. We have to keep rugs (in the vestibules) to keep people from slipping," he said. If it rains for a day, the water keeps leaking into the building for a week, he admitted.

Mathiasen said he's taken engineers, architects and councilmen to the roof and their reaction has generally been two words, part of which is unprintable.

THIS WEEK, engineers and architects from DMJM and Law Engineers will be shown where and how the roof leaks when airport officials with water hoses "create" a rain storm, according to Mathiasen. "Law Engineering is one of the top 25 companies in the country and they specialize in roof repair. We've called property management and insurance companies in Houston and they said Law was the only one able to fix their roof problems."

That roof repair could go as high as $1 million, he said, which might not leave money for the ticket counter space and baggage carrousel.

With a boarding figure of 646,683 in fiscal year 1984 — a 20,000 increase over 1983 — Mathiasen said Midland could use another major carrier to Dallas/Fort Worth Airport, and Delta has talked several times with Midland officials.

U.S. negotiator pledges to tame nuclear weapons

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Max M. Kampelman, the chief American delegate to new U.S.-Soviet arms talks, arrived in Geneva Saturday and pledged efforts toward the "taming and then the elimination of nuclear weapons."

A 10-member delegation from the U.S. Senate flew into Geneva later Saturday. The senators, along with eight members from the House of Representatives, will observe the early stages of the negotiations.

Kampelman arrived from Washington on a U.S. Air Force plane with fellow negotiators John G. Tower and Maynard W. Glitman. They will first meet the Soviet representatives on Tuesday to formally resume nuclear arms talks that have been in suspension for more than 15 months following a Soviet walkout.

Kampelman said his 80-member team will "thoroughly and responsibly explore all avenues that can lead to...fair and equitable agreements.

"We are ready to build a bridge to a global environment of greater stability through the taming and then the elimination of nuclear weapons."

But Kampelman, a lawyer with long experience in negotiating with the Soviet, said the talks would be difficult.

"Our differences on the issues of nuclear arms are deep and deeply held. It would be folly to expect them to be bridged overnight," he said.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., the majority leader, heads the Senate delegation. He told reporters at the airport, "This is a bipartisan, nonpartisan mission. We believe it is very important. It's symbolic for us to indicate our support for the U.S. negotiators and it's our hope that something can be resolved. We know it will take a great deal of time and a great deal of patience and we hope to play a constructive role in the process."

The Senate minority leader, Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., said, "The observer group is not here to negotiate" but to "advise and consult."

"We know that our negotiators will be tough and they'll be patient, and we come with the hopes and prayers that the negotiations will end in a very satisfying agreement to all sides," he added.

The eight congressmen are scheduled to arrive Monday.

Kampelman, chatting with reporters while waiting for the senators' plane to land, was asked about his negotiating philosophy.

"One important word ... patience," he said.

It is believed the talks may run on for years.

The main difficulty is expected to be President Reagan's desire to render "nuclear weapons impotent and obsolete" through a space-based defense shield. The Soviet Union, fearing a U.S. technological and defense edge, has bitterly criticized Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative or "Star Wars" plan.

The Geneva talks will be split into three parts — space weapons to be dealt with by Kampelman, long range or strategic nuclear missiles, to be handled by Tower, a former Texas Republican senator, and intermediate-range missiles, under Glitman, a career foreign service officer.

Most local farmers disappointed with Reagan's farm bill veto

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

Republican Rep. Tom Loeffler, whose Congressional 21st District encompasses Midland County, was one of 168 congressmen who voted against passage of what was termed a farm rescue bill, which was vetoed by President Reagan last Wednesday.

With so many farmers and ranchers in his district in dire straits financially, Loeffler defended his vote: "Since last fall, $650 million in loan guarantees have been made available to assist credit-strapped farmers, ranchers and agricultural lenders.

"In addition, forebearance on individual loans and additional personnel have been ordered by the Department of Agriculture to assist in this difficult time for agriculture."

According to Loeffler, President Reagan and Agriculture Secretary John Block also have committed to requesting additional funds if existing balances of insured loans and loan guarantees prove inadequate.

THE PROPOSED farm rescue measure would have eased credit for farmers with unmanageable debt loads that will keep them from obtaining new loans for spring planting. The bill rejected by the president called for $100 million in interest subsidies, $1.85 billion in new loan guarantees and some $700 billion in immediate advances on crop loans usually not received until harvest time.

Most of the farmers contacted by the Reporter-Telegram Friday expressed disappointment at the president's veto, although one said he favored the president's action. Thirty-nine-year-old Russell "Rusty" Jones, who raises cotton and alfalfa in Midland County, said, "Farmers are independent businessmen. If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

But the basic line, Jones observed, is that farmers don't need any more credit. They just need a good price for their products.

"Without increased prices and just giving farmers money," he said, "would just put farmers that much farther in the hole."

Roy Graham, who farms in the Greenwood area raising cotton as his primary crop along with cattle and wheat, echoed Jones' thoughts on prices.

"I THINK what we need is decent commodity prices," Graham said. "That's the real help we need, whether that comes from the government or wherever." Without help from the federal government, Graham contended, farmers will be in more trouble than they already are.

"We don't get a decent or fair price for the commodities that we produce," Graham said, noting that outside of help in getting better prices, "we don't need any government help."

Getting more money and increasing production, he stated, won't solve any problems if farmers can't get a fair price.

"I'll guarantee you one thing," said Norman Koonce, who's been a farmer most of his 50 years, "people don't realize what kind of shape the American farmer and rancher is in."

Oilfield worker charged with Midlander's murder

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

What Midland County sheriff's deputies launched as a missing-person investigation on Thursday led late Saturday to a capital-murder case in which an Odessa man was charged with slaying 38-year-old Jimmy L. Davis of Midland in Andrews.

Charged with the offense was Gary Lynn Morgan, a 26-year-old Odessa oil field worker.

Meanwhile, Sheriff's investigator Butch Brazell on Saturday recovered in Midland $50,000 in pipe which was stolen from an Upton County drilling site. He and other deputies found the pipe on trucks along the Rankin Highway. That case has been turned over to Texas Rangers, Brazell said.

Andrews police late Saturday afternoon found Davis slumped over in the passenger's side of a pickup truck near an Andrews motel after Midland sheriff's deputies had tracked down a suspect. The truck belonged to Basin Industrial X-Ray Co. of Odessa. Davis worked for Basin and had hired Morgan, said Lt. Roy Harrison of the sheriff's Criminal Investigation Division.

Davis, who suffered multiple head wounds, appeared to have been struck by a "blunt instrument," Harrison said. The pickup's doors were locked, and the keys were still in the ignition.

Farming couple sell house, erect tepee

By VAL CORLEY
Associated Press Writer

LOHRVILLE, Iowa — A farmer whose land had been in the family for a century had to sell most of it — including the house — to pay creditors, but he and his pregnant wife hope to hold on to what they have left by living in a tepee.

"We're under foreclosure," said Bill Winkelman, 52, one of many farmers caught by high interest rates and low commodity prices.

"Both Betty and I want to farm more than anything else," he said. "We're just doing everything we can. We're cutting back expenses all over the place."

They're also altering their way of life drastically, moving from a comfortable farmhouse to an Sioux-style tepee. The farmhouse was sold along with 326 of Winkleman's 486 acres.

They moved out in January and have been staying with friends until they can compete the tepee, planned for this week.

The canvas tent may be small for a growing family — the living space is 18 square feet — but it keeps out the cold and rain enough to let the family remain on what's left of their land.

"A small living space is an advantage. All you're heating is your living area," said 30-year-old Mrs. Winkelman, whose baby is due in July.

"The baby should be fine," she added. "We will be cutting down on frivolities. But the baby will get by as babies in more primitive times got by — with what was needed."

New toll booths are taking shape as part of one construction project at Midland Regional Airport. Plans call for long-term and short-term parking lots to be combined with the one exit at these booths.

AIRPORT

If another airline wants to start service and the city can't build more ticket counter space, the council has a "recapture" clause in its leases with the other airlines which allows some counter space to be taken back and leased to another airline, according to Mathiasen.

The two additional gates and jetways to the concourse were needed several months ago. Mathiasen said there is one point in the day when seven planes are on the ground and another time when there are five. Midland has four gates with jetways.

AND IF BAD weather in other airports keeps planes from landing, Midland sometimes gets these aircraft as they wait for better conditions. He cited the example during a recent spell of bad weather when 10 planes were parked at Midland Regional Airport, including airlines which don't serve here. "Jet America and Braniff had to wait here while D-FW was fogged in," he said.

Plans and specifications on the two gates should be drawn and ready to go out for bids in late 1985 or early 1986, he said. Construction for this and the roof should be completed in late 1987.

Meanwhile, construction on a $2 million heating and cooling system has started and should involve tearing into the ductwork and ceiling inside the terminal building during May or June, he said. "We hope to have the new heating system on line by next winter and the whole system finished by February 1986," said Mathiasen.

The $15 million project that started more than a year ago is 90 percent complete, but "we have to tiptoe now," he said.

PARKING LOTS have been added to the south, the parking system with the current short-term and long-term lots is being revamped and new ticket booths installed. But the most noticeable difference will be the reconstruction of LaForce Boulevard that goes from Highway 80 to the Terminal building. In addition, Pliska Road which divides short-term from long-term parking is being eliminated and a different route constructed, according to Mathiasen.

"Our department will be busy with detouring traffic and handling public complaints and verifying that the barricades are up. We're working on a detour plan to funnel traffic into and out of the airport, and asking people to allow an extra 10 minutes to get inside the terminal building."

With the $15 million project "on schedule and on budget," it is expected to be completed in 12 months.

New signs will be going up in front of the Terminal building that prohibit vehicles from being parked there longer than 60 seconds. The signs will read: "Load, Unload Only. No Parking, no waiting. 60-second limit. Parking? Use lot."

"We're taking this very seriously," he said. "It won't be a joke. Police will be enforcing it."

ANOTHER TAXIWAY will be constructed parallel and east of runway 4-4-2 but 90 percent of the $450,000 is coming from an FAA grant, he said. It's going in to channel traffic to Tiger Charter, which holds an exclusive refueling contract with the military.

The number of military aircraft from the Navy, Army, Air Force, Marines and NASA using Midland has gone from half a dozen landings or takeoffs a month to more than 1,000, said Mathiasen. These aircraft range from small helicopters to the large C-5s, which are similar to the Boeing 747s in size, said Mathiasen.

"They're buying 100,000 to 200,000 gallons of fuel each month from a local fixed base operator and that helps the local economy," he said.

Midland Regional Airport, which was started during World War II as an Army Air Field and turned over to the city after the war, is a good location for half a dozen military bases. "They can do more training with their flight crews here than at a busier airport."

Grant Billingsley, Jim Henry chosen as first Centennial Citizens

From Staff Reports

Billingsley

Henry

Grant Billingsley and Jim Henry have been chosen as the first two Centennial Citizens by Leadership Midland Alumni and the Midland Centennial Commission. Their names will now go into a hat for a chance to win a trip to England.

Billingsley is the Executive Vice-President of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. He serves on the board of Trinity Towers and is an elder of Memorial Chriatian Church. He also serves as a director of the Texas Industrial Development Council and the Texas Chamber of Commerce Economic Association. Billingsley is a past chairman of the Midland March of Dimes and received that organization's Distinguished Service Award in 1984.

Henry is president of Henry Petroleum. He is a board member of United Way of Midland and Chamber of Commerce. He serves on the steering committee of Need to Read. A former church elder and Sunday School teacher, Henry is a member of the United Methodist Church.

The selection of Billingsley and Henry kicks off the Centennial Citizen contest. The selection committee is looking for Midlanders who have given their time, energy, talent and leadership to make Midland the best city it can be. This can include not just noted city leaders but also a boss, a great neighbor, a best friend, a pastor or a scout troop leader.

Forty outstanding citizens between now and July 4 will be selected — two each week. KCRS/KWMJ Radio will announce the two citizens each week.

The Midland Centennial Commission will present each Centennial Citizen with a rare copy of the book, "Land of the High Sky." On July 4, at the Centennialfest, one of the 40 Centennial Citizens' names will be drawn from a hat and that person will win a trip from Midland to the Midlands of England.

The winner will receive two free round trip tickets to London provided by American Airlines. One week's accommodations at the Royal Houseguards Hotel will be provided by these local travel agencies: Adventure Travel, Allega Travel, Envoye Travel, Holiday Travel, International Travel and Cruise, Lones Travel, Midland Travel, Texas Business Travel, Travel Time and Travelworld. Regency Limousine of Midland will provide one day of limousine service in London, and from Midland Regional Airport. A VIP lunch and a possible Embassy visit will be provided courtesy of RepublicBank First National Midland.

Persons are encouraged to enter their candidate as soon as possible to have the best chance for that person to be selected. Entry blanks are available at the Midland Centennial Office, 109 N. Main St., Chamber of Commerce Building, ground level, or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: The Midland Centennial Office, P.O. Box 1985, Midland, Tx., 79702.

This entry form and a list of the nominee's contributions should be mailed to Centennial Citizen, The Midland Centennial Commission, using the same address in obtaining a form.

Anti-American banners hang from bombed Beirut building

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two black banners were hung Saturday across the broken facade of an apartment building devasted in a car bombing. The flags carried a bitter message that heightened fear for many Americans living here.

"Death to USA," proclaimed one banner. "Made in USA," read another.

Although no one has blamed the United States directly for Friday's car bomb in a densely populated Shiite Moslem suburb, some Americans in Beirut worry that accusations against Israel — the chief U.S. ally in the region — may have consequences for them.

"These things have a way of circling back on us," said an American teacher in Beirut, who was fearful about his name being used and spoke on condition of anonymity. "In the minds of many Arabs, America is the devil incarnate and responsible for anything that goes wrong."

For the few Americans remaining in the capital, the disturbing messages added tension to an already bleak situation.

There are no firm figures on how many Americans are still in Beirut, but some estimates indicate there are fewer than 2,000. Many left in recent years because of the long civil war, the anti-American attacks, and threats from fundamentalist Shiite groups.

Friday's bomb killed at least 75 people and injured 250 near a mosque in the Shiite suburb of Ghobeiri. It was the deadliest explosion in Beirut since the truck bombings of American and French military headquarters on Oct. 23, 1983, which killed 241 U.S. servicemen and 58 French soldiers.

As victims of the Friday blast were buried Saturday, thousands of demonstrators shook their fists and chanted: "Death to America, death to Israel!" They called the U.S. "The great Satan."

There were earlier warnings to Americans following the U.S. threat to veto Monday a Lebanese complaint against Israel in the U.N. Security Council. Lebanon is protesting the Israeli occupation army's tactics in the south.

And there are rumors — denied by U.S. government officials — that American diplomats in Beirut are to be evacuated.

No one has claimed responsibility for Friday's attack. But several Moslem leaders — including American-educated Salim el-Hoss, a Sunni Moslem and minister of labor and of education in the Cabinet — have blamed Israel. The Shiite militia Amal also accused Israel and threatened to "retaliate adequately soon."

Air Park ahead of schedule

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The money's in the bank and the city is on a roll.

It was in late 1983 Midland City Council decided to move Air Park to a site northeast of the city. Staff wasted no time on accomplishing this task, and by early 1987 the new facility should be ready for the planes.

When the council approved swapping 92 acres of Air Park and Regional Air Terminal land for 2,665 acres east of State Highway 349, Mayor G. Thane Akins had indicated a new airport might be ready in five years. If plans stay on schedule, it will be slightly more than three years from swap to completion.

Daniel, Mann, Johnson & Mendenhall of Houston were hired as consulting and engineering firm, and a program schedule was designed from the first public hearing in 1984 to opening of the facility in the first quarter of 1987.

"This schedule is a very, very aggressive schedule," said Jon Mathiasen, assistant director of aviation/administration. "But Midland is a very aggressive town."

A preliminary master plan has been drawn and the runways situated on the land, said Mathiasen. The master plan should be completed during the second quarter of this year, and the environmental impact assessment was finished on schedule.

"There were no adverse findings," he said. The environmental study along with the master plan will be submitted to the Federal Aviation Administration in late April for its approval, and the aviation official is hoping that can come within 90 days.

"We don't expect a problem with the FAA on our plans. The site is a good site," Mathiasen said.

However, it is situated in the middle of oil-producing territory and the proposed location for runways goes through two wells.

In the next 30 days, city officials will sit down with all the mineral rights owners in the area and designate drilling sites "so oil companies can come and go as they please. We needed the location of the runways first. Consultants have designed the runways to fit in with oilfield perimeters and still make it a safe airport.

"Those two wells the city may have to purchase. The cost has been investigated by several Airport Board members," Mathiasen said. "They're old wells and don't appear to be of a significant cost."

DMJM is "fast-tracking" the construction, meaning that while construction on one phase is going on, the next phase is being designed, he said.

Having the money in the bank for this project has pushed it ahead in two ways, according to Mathiasen. The city obtained the money on a short-term financing plan which requires 85 percent to be spent in three years. It is to be repaid with sale of the 600 acres of land where Air Park now is located.

And simply by having the money available to pay for the various steps of the project has kept it on schedule, he said.

"I feel confident we'll have an operational airport in the first quarter of 1987," he said.

MURDER

Harrison said Davis had been dead since late Wednesday or early Thursday and that his wife, Jerri, had reported him missing Thursday morning.

"We believe we know what happened," Harrison said, "but we can't release that right now."

"A lot of missing-persons reports are something you hang on the wall," Harrison said. However, as officers probed into the Davis case, they detected "foul play," he said.

The investigation took Sheriff Gary Painter, Harrison and Sgt. Monnie Weddel to Big Lake, where a warrant was secured for Morgan's arrest. He was arrested there by Reagan County Sheriff's deputies, and Reagan County Justice of the Peace Pauline Stout set a $100,000 bond on Morgan when he was charged with capital murder.

Morgan was transferred to Midland and late Saturday night was being transferred to the Andrews County Jail by Deputy Grady Victory of the Andrews Sheriff's Department and his brother, Investigator James Victory of the Andrews Police Department.

The Victory brothers said the offense was upgraded to capital murder since money was missing from Davis' wallet and the pickup was missing.

Harrison said law enforcement officers from Midland, Gaines, Upton, Andrews and Reagan counties were involved in the investigation.

Painter and Harrison credited Weddel with doing a majority of the investigation.

The sheriff said it was "through the diligence of the officers" that "the missing-person investigation turned into a capital-murder case."

"The suspect (Morgan) felt remorse for what he had done and gave a statement," Painter said. He said investigators "are certainly not going to violate anybody's rights...In the end, it's up to a judge and jury."

TALKS

Neither Kampelman nor Tower has had arms negotiating experience, but Kampelman for three years, until 1983, headed the American delegation to the Madrid European Security Conference which included the Soviet Union. Glitman served on the U.S. negotiating team in intermediate-range missile talks, broken off by the Russians Nov. 23, 1983.

The Americans will be faced with veteran arms negotiators, including Victor P. Karpov, who headed the Soviet delegation to long-range missile talks until they were suspended Dec. 8, 1983. A second negotiator will be Yuli A. Kvitsinsky, who headed intermediate-range talks for Moscow. The third Soviet negotiator is Alexei A. Obukhov, who took part in the long-range rocket talks.

Kampelman's delegation Saturday began studying "nuts and bolts" of arrangements for the talks, a U.S. official said. The negotiations are expected to rotate from U.S. to Soviet offices in Geneva. The opening session Tuesday is expected to take place in the Soviet mission, one conference source indicated.

Kampelman, Tower and Glitman were due to travel to Brussels, Belgium, on Sunday night or Monday morning to consult on the arms talks with the 16-member permament council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The new round of talks was decided upon in a Jan. 7-8 Geneva session between Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

A communique published after those talks said the new negotiations "will be to work out effective agreements aimed at preventing an arms race in space and terminating it on earth."

FARMERS

"They're in deep trouble," Koonce said, "and it just seems we can not get our point over to Congress and the average working people. They just don't understand."

Admitting he doesn't know all the answers, Koonce said it appears something is seriously out of balance when Congress can appropriate billions for foreign aid, but not enough to help out this country's farmers. "That's what hurts," he said.

"We still have the best government in the world," Koonce said. "But they're sure making some mistakes up there for us."

Koonce, who has been out of heavy farming for the past couple of years, said if his 25-year-old son, Gary, doesn't make a good crop this year he'll be in trouble.

RELATING A conversation he had with his son recently, Koonce said he asked, "Son, if things just keep getting worse and there's no way to hang on, have you thought of anything else you might want to try to do?"

"No," Gary replied, "I really hadn't considered it. I haven't ever wanted to do anything but farm." Gary started driving a tractor when he was 5 years old, his dad said, and has been farming all his life. With obvious pride, Koonce described his son as "one of the better young farmers in Midland County."

Asked what kind of shape most Midland County farmers are in, Koonce replied, "I would say the average farmer in Midland is in trouble."

There are a few farmers who are lucky enough to have a little oil production, he said, and some of the wives work in town and that helps.

Koonce said he went to Brownfield for a farm sale Thursday and talked with one of the owners having the sale, a man in his middle 60s, he said.

The man told him, "I've got to get out of it, but hopefully, my neighbors and my son can hang on at least one more year. My son told me that I can drive a tractor for him."

"IT'S BAD, it's that bad," said Koonce, "that a lot of the older farmers are being forced out."

Koonce said the man told him: "I'll be glad when it's over with. Maybe then I can lay down and sleep at night. Not having to get out, maybe I'll be able to get a good night's sleep."

Noting that it appears the federal government wants to do away with Farmers Home Administration, which provides guaranteed loans to farmers, Koonce said, "If we don't have some kind of price support, some kind of program the banks cannot loan money to farmers, when farmers cannot even break even."

His son finances with FmHA in Big Spring, Koonce said, and were it not for that federal agency carrying young farmers just getting into the business he doesn't know where they would go. The banks will not finance young farmers, said Koonce.

Right now, he observed, people in the United States are enjoying relatively cheap groceries.

What most people don't realize, he said, is that most farmers also buy their groceries at stores.

"WE DON'T RAISE the food we eat in most cases," Koonce said. "We concentrate on raising a primary cash crop — in Midland it's mostly cotton — but we buy everything else we need, just like everyone else. We'd like to be able to make enough money growing cotton to buy our poultry, meat and dairy products, but we're not doing it."

Koonce attributed some of the problems in U.S. agriculture to imports from China and other foreign countries, which can produce and export goods cheaper than what it costs U.S. farmers to grow their products.

"It's a bleak future," he said, "when they can bring it in the way they're doing. We cannot compete with them because of continually increasing costs for equipment, fertilizer and everything else we have to have."

Asked who is going to feed and clothe the country when there are no longer independent farmers to do the job, Koonce replied, "That's what we can't understand. But we just can't get our problems understood in Washington."

Two years ago, Winkelman was farming land valued at $3,000 an acre which had been in his family since his great-grandfather came from Switzerland. Today, it is worth half that.

He got $1,550 an acre for some of his land and $1,700 an acre for the rest. "Those deals were made last fall," he said. "I think land has been bringing less than that since then."

He finds himself in the middle of a credit crunch that is affecting a large portion of the nation's farmers, especially in the Midwest.

"Probably the biggest single common cause is the high interest rates coupled with a heavy debt load," said Winkelman. He had purchased extra land and "interest rates zoomed up and just ate me up — that along with having some poor farming years and low commodity prices."

Winkelman believes the native Iowa prairie must be preserved, so 15 years ago he set aside 18 acres and let it revert to prairie, adding native grass and plant seeds when he could find them and watching wildlife return.

"The fox colony has come back. This is the highest area around Lohrville. They love it here. They can keep track of what's going on," Winkelman said.

Winkelman continues to raise the ponies that have been his family's tradition, with 117 ponies now, while growing corn, oats, soybeans and hay.

The Winkelmans plan to raise more of their own needs on the farm, such as vegetables and fruits, in addition to feed for the livestock.

Officer in critical condition after being shot in head

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 28-year-old Huntsville police officer was in critical condition at a Houston hospital Saturday after he was shot in the head while responding to a domestic disturbance call, officials said.

Kevin Williams, a Huntsville patrol officer for 16 months, was shot with a .22-caliber rifle in the forehead and shoulder about 1:30 a.m. Saturday at an apartment complex in west Huntsville, police said.

Also wounded was Resources Unlimited security officer Jay Hubert.

Correction/clarification

In a story in Friday's edition concerning the FDIC-Eagle Properties court case involving sale of the former First National Bank Building, it was stated that "Eagles' problems are compounded by the decrease in rent from a high of $18 to $20 a square foot...to a current rate of $5 to $12 a square foot." A bank spokesman said the current average rental in the bank, excluding RepublicBank First National Midland, is in the $18 to $20 range.

Details concerning the bank's purchase by Republic also were incomplete. The story should have stated that RepublicBank assumed the deposit liabilities of FNB and paid a premium of approximately $51.1 million to the FDIC, purchased tangible assets at appraised value of approximately $35 million and secured right to purchase loans in excess of $200 million at par.

The story stated that "Newly formed RepublicBank took advantage of Eagle's plight and negotiated a reduced $4.5 million yearly rent of the building." A spokesman for the bank said price never was an issue and was immediately and readily agreed to by both Eagle and Republic.

Convicted killer of three women believes his fate rests with God

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Stephen Peter Morin, convicted of killing three women in a grisly spree during a five-week span in late 1981, believes his fate rests with God.

So he is dispensing with the usual last-minute frenzy that accompanies a scheduled execution.

Morin, 37, a drifter from Rhode Island, faces lethal injection before dawn Wednesday in the Texas death chamber for the last of the trio of slayings.

The carnage capped a years-long struggle between Morin and law enforcement agencies from coast to coast, ranging from multiple auto theft arrests in Florida to a brutal rape and torture in San Francisco of a 14-year-old girl who was hung from a ceiling hook.

Morin, whose conviction in the death of Carrie Marie Scott, of San Antonio, was upheld by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, has ordered his attorneys to not pursue any further avenues to spare him from death.

State District Judge David Berchelmann says that when Morin appeared before him last month at a hearing to set the execution date, "He said verbally, he told me, 'I don't want anybody to do anything on my behalf. I want to die on the date you set for me.' "

Morin followed up the court appearance with a letter to Berchelmann two weeks ago "specifically pointing out he wanted all his attorneys and all work on his behalf to cease and desist," the judge said.

Morin's attorneys want a hearing to decide whether their client is competent to decide that. And although Berchelmann says he no longer has jurisdiction in the case and denied the request, he believes Morin "has got every avenue open to him if he decides to pursue — state writs, federal writs. It's up to him."

But Morin attorney J. Keith Alaniz says it's "not really clear, as lawyers," whether they can pursue the case without Morin's permission.

If he dies, Morin will become the second Texas inmate to be put to death this year and the sixth since the state resumed executions in 1982.

Carrie Scott's killing outside Maggie's Restaurant in San Antonio in December 1981 drew so much publicity that Morin's trial had to be moved 300 miles away to Beaumont.

Then he stunned prosecutors by becoming only the second person ever in Texas to plead guilty to a charge of capital murder.

"It was probably one of the quickest capital murder cases I had ever seen," said state prosecutor Susan Reed, now in private practice.

Born-again Christian inmate 'wants to die'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 37-year-old man convicted of killing three women claims he is a born-again Christian who doesn't want anyone to halt his execution, scheduled for Wednesday.

Death row inmate Stephen Peter Morin has refused to grant interviews from his prison cell.

But State District Judge David Berchelmann said when Morin appeared before him last month "he told me, 'I don't want anybody to do anything on my behalf. I want to die on the date you set for me.' "

The judge, who set the execution date, on Friday denied a request by a defense attorney to order a competency hearing for Morin. The lawyer who prosecuted Morin has said the inmate is "an absolute sociopath, but sane."

Morin, a drifter from Providence, R.I., is scheduled to die for the 1981 shooting death of a San Antonio woman. He pleaded guilty last year to capital murder, and a jury recommended execution. He was convicted previously of slaying women in Texas and Colorado.

His guilty plea in the death of Carrie Marie Scott was issued right after the indictment was read. The plea shocked prosecutors, since only once before had anyone in Texas ever pleaded guilty to capital murder.

"I read the indictment. He stood up and he pleaded guilty. I thought: 'Hey, you can't do that. I spent all this time preparing this case,' " recalled prosecutor Susan Reed.

"I don't like to see anyone murdered or killed, but Mr. Morin is a horrible danger to society and will remain so," she said. "He's a sociopath, an absolute sociopath, but sane."

Morin's lawyers say they don't know what, if anything, they can do.

"There's probably some ethical duty to try to pursue the matter a little further, but I'm not real sure whether we can do that," said Keith Alaniz, Morin's attorney.

Sometimes, when an inmate doesn't want to appeal an execution, a relative will file the appeal for the prisoner, but Alaniz said: "I have never spoken with any member of his family. I don't know that there's any interest (in an appeal)."

Morin's conversion to religion is now playing a part in his execution. It also led to his arrest and was the defense attorneys' chief argument

Senator to fly paper airplanes on space flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Sen. Jake Garn will take a paper airplane to play with on his long-delayed space shuttle flight, officials said.

Garn will use the toy for a film demonstrating the fundamentals of science to school children, said Carolyn Sumners, director of astronomy and physics at Houston's Museum of Natural Science and coordinator of the project.

The six other astronauts aboard Discovery will play with jacks, a yo-yo, marbles, a mechanical car and a pink plastic mouse named "Rat Stuff."

Garn's trip into space has been postponed five times. The latest mission, which had been set for March 22, was delayed until next month after a worker was injured and the shuttle's cargo bay was damaged in an accident Friday at Cape Canaveral.

Garn, R-Utah, is on the crew as a congressional observer in his role as chairman of an approporations subcommittee that oversees NASA spending.

Man says arrest violated civil rights

FORT WORTH (AP) — A man whose arrest in a murder investigation was based on a fingerprint that wasn't his has filed a $2.5 million suit in federal court against Tarrant County and five public officials.

Timothy Paul Volkmar, who was released four days after his arrest in connection with the shooting death of Lisa Griffin, contends his civil rights were violated when he was arrested without proper cause and charged with murder, according to the court petition filed Friday.

Ms. Griffin, 20, is one of five missing or slain women whose cases are being investigated by a special police task force. Her body was found Jan. 9 along railroad tracks near Benbrook. She had been shot once in the head, police said.

Named as defendants in the suit are Tarrant County, Sheriff Don Carpenter, sheriff's deputies Harvey Lantrip and Guadalupe Coronado and probation officers Lallay Tettleton and Bill Venner.

The suit contends that the probation officers gave false information to investigators who used that information as justification to arrest Volkmar, 25.

The action also alleges that the deputies did not pursue leads that could have cleared Volkmar and that they led prosecutors to believe they had more evidence than they did against Volkmar.

"There was no probable cause to arrest this man, and that is what makes our case,' said Volkmar's attorney, William Wuester.

Carpenter refused comment through a sheriff's department spokesman. The other defendants could not be reached for comment Saturday by the Associated Press.

Volkmar was arrested Jan. 12 after a fingerprint found on the back of Ms. Griffin's car was at first identified as his. But investigators later found Volkmar's fingerprint did not match the one found on the car and prosecutors dropped the charge on Jan. 16.

The suit also alleges that Ms. Tettleton told police that Volkmar had told her that Ms. Griffin was his new girlfriend. Volkmar contends he never told the probation officer that he knew the woman.

Volkmar is on 10 years' probation for aggravated assault for threatening his father, Lloyd, with a knife in 1980.

"The thing that made me the maddest is that they didn't apologize, even in private," Volkmar said.

Volkmar said that he lost his job as an apartment maintenance man two days after his release because he had not told his employer about his probation. He said he has not been able to find another job and is now living at home with his parents.

Lloyd Volkmar said he filed the assault charge against his son, who he said was using drugs at the time, because he needed help in controlling him. Volkmar said he now regrets having filed the charge.

Timothy Volkmar said he tried to tell his parents what having a police record would mean to him in the future.

"Maybe now my father will believe me," he said.

Volcker: Start out with $50-billion cut

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker said Saturday he would like to see Congress start out with a $50 billion trimming of the federal deficit and go to larger reductions in future years.

But Volcker, in San Antonio to address a convention of the 7,800-member Independent Bankers of America Association, said there is a decided lack of nuts-and-bolts support by the public for deficit reductions.

Citing a recent poll, Volcker said 75 percent of the American public thinks reducing the trillion dollar deficit should be a top national priority.

But when asked if they would favor cuts in federal spending, 75 percent said "no." Another 85 percent nixed increasing taxes, he said.

"It's a little hard being objective if you're not willing to make any progress on questions number two and three," Volcker said.

Volcker said he would like to see "a $50 billion cut in the deficit and then move to larger reductions in subsequent years." He predicted modest economic growth and a moderate decrease in unemployment in 1985, with no significant increase in inflation.

Despite his upbeat predictions, Volcker said his visit to San Antonio, his first ever, is a panacea for anyone in the doldrums because of the economy.

"Whenever you're gloomy about the economy you go to San Antonio where everything is growing. I've come here for a fix," he joked.

On another issue, Volcker said an already difficult farm credit situation is being aggravated by low crop prices, the strong dollar and a sharp drop in land prices.

"There is an increasing margin of farmers caught in the credit squeeze along with you, the lenders," he said.

"I take comfort in the fact that as a group, agricultural banks have been among the best capitalized in the banking system. That doesn't mean their problems are that less severe, but there is that cushion of strength," he said.

In a news conference after his speech, Volcker announced the Federal Reserve Board is taking steps to help agricultural banks besieged at planting and harvest times with farmers seeking loans.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker

The board has relaxed some requirements farm banks must meet before they can borrow from the Federal Reserve system.

Despite the breaks the system is giving these banks, Volcker said "our general sense is that the great bulk of these banks are not faced at this time with liquidity problems."

Considerable congressional guidance is needed to clarify "the emotionally charged issue of interstate banking," Volcker said.

"Our concern is steadily intensifying in the absence of clarification on this issue from Congress," Volcker said.

A federal moratorium has been placed on start-ups of so-called "nonbank banks" until Congress enacts some legislation concerning them.

Such insitutions, often started by out-of-state bank holding companies, are established because of loopholes in federal banking laws and do not offer a full range of banking services.

The Federal Reserve has been powerless to halt the growth of nonbank banks.

"We haven't been overwhelmingly friendly to the establishment of nonbank banks," Volcker said.

Volcker said he would like to see Congress "close the door of unintentional loopholes that would undercut the safety of the banking industry...and provide guidance for the interstate banking situation."

As part of a Russian delegation's visit to Texas, Soviet Ambassador to the United States Anatoly Dobrynin, left, laughs as Soviet Politburo member Vladimir Shcherbitsky dons a cowboy hat. They visited the LBJ Library on the University of Texas campus in Austin Friday afternoon.

Soviets enjoy their ten-gallon Texas visit

DALLAS (AP) — A high-ranking Soviet delegation got a glimpse of American capitalism at its finest Saturday with a visit to a world famous department store before stopping off for a Texas-style picnic of barbecue and beer.

Politburo member Vladimir Shcherbitsky and his 30-member delegation, the highest-ranking Soviets to visit the United States since 1972, ate breakfast in a private home before touring Neiman-Marcus in downtown Dallas.

The delegation is visiting Texas and California after four days of talks in Washington with U.S. officials.

"This is the richest store I have ever seen," said Vitaliy Koysh, a delegation member, as he walked through the posh Neiman-Marcus department store.

"You have many beautiful and valuable things in the store," said Aleksandr A. Zakharenko, member of the USSR's Committee on Planning and Budget, "but I think only people who are very wealthy shop here."

Richard Marcus, Neiman-Marcus chairman and chief executive officer, led the group down six flights of escalators, stopping at every floor except the lady's wear and lingerie section to show merchandise and answer questions.

Marcus presented Shcherbitsky with a model of a crystal cowboy hat and gave members of the delegation picture books of Texas cowboys.

"Our emphasis is not only on high-priced goods, but on quality," Marcus explained as he led the group to the section containing furs priced at $55,000 to $125,000.

The delegation stopped for several minutes to inspect sables, some of imported from Russia.

"Do you like the coat, yes?" Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin asked a Neiman-Marcus model wearing an $85,000 crown sable fur. "It becomes you."

About 30 demonstrators met the delegation outside Neiman-Marcus to protest Soviet involvement in Afghanistan.

Delegation members met with Gov. Mark White in Austin Friday and said they looked forward to the start of the arms control talks in Geneva Tuesday.

"Mankind is facing a dilemma now whether to prevent war and insure peace, or be carried away by the hypnosis of the arms race," said Shcherbitsky.

The Soviets left Neiman-Marcus and walked across the street to Dallas Western Wear, where many of the delegates bought belt buckles and cowboy figurines. Shcherbitsky was fitted for a $200 Stetson cowboy hat.

The group then headed to the Las Colinas Equestrian Club in Irving, where they ate barbecue and drank Lone Star beer to the accompaniment of "Silver Threads and Golden Needles" by the Country Cousins, a country-western band.

"I like the food and the music — as well as the women," said Vitaliy Pereloma.

Except for a few brief political statements, most of the conversation surrounded the unfamiliar sights the Soviet delegation took in during the day.

U.S. Rep. Martin Frost, D-Texas, hosted the delegation's visit to Dallas.

"All of us recognize there are serious problems between the United States and the Soviet Union — issues that can't be easily resolved," Frost said. "But it is significant that we continue talking. Hopefully someday we will be able to resolve some of those issues."

Georgi Arbatov, speaking on Shcherbitsky's behalf, said national security is the highest priority in the Soviet Union.

"We are doomed to live together on this planet, and whether we like each other or not, we have to live together and we have to live in peace," he said through a translator.

The group headed to Billy Bob's honky tonk in Fort Worth Saturday night before a planned flight to California on Sunday.

Policeman: Undelivered mail in garage

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — A Houston policeman testified Saturday he found bloody footprints all over the garage in the home of David Port, a teen-ager accused of murdering a mail carrier.

Officer M.G. Walicki told jurors that he also snapped pictures of the home's blood-spattered, bullet-ridden stairwell and collected four guns from an upstairs bedroom on June 8, the day after Debra Sue Schatz was slain.

Port, 18, is charged with murder in Ms. Schatz's killing. The body of the 23-year-old woman was found June 9 by the bank of Cypress Creek in far northwest Harris County.

Testimony was scheduled to resume Monday morning.

Police officer Marc Patterson testified Saturday that he found bloody rags and towels and undelivered mail in a garbage can in Port's home. He also said he found five spent shell casings.

Earlier Saturday, Sgt. David Collier told jurors he has no reason to believe Port's father or brother killed Ms. Schatz in the family's home.

Collier said he determined that Port's father, Bernard, and the defendant's 23-year-old brother, Roger, were elsewhere when the shooting occurred.

Collier conceded there is a resemblance between the defendant and his brother, but he said he had no suspicion "whatsoever" that Roger Port committed the offense.

The investigator testified he had determined to his satisfaction the whereabouts of everyone who had access to the house, including David Port's stepmother, Odette, and another brother, 21-year-old Brian.

Collier also identified photographs of weapons found in the Port home, including two pistols, two rifles and a 12-gauge shotgun. He marked on floor plans and a plastic model of the house the locations where officers found blood stains and bullet holes.

Officers found holes made by four bullets inside the house, Collier said.

On Friday, a woman testified she heard screams coming from the Port residence on June 7, but was too terrified to tell police what she knew.

Jerri Pontikes said she knew Port was home after being freed on bond.

"I saw him twice previously in my back yard, staring out the upstairs window at me," she said. "It made me feel strange."

SBOE limits number of practice hours

AUSTIN (AP) — The number of practice hours students can participate in extracurricular activities was limited by the State Board of Education on Saturday, but the board took no action on a controversial six-week suspension rule for failing students.

Students participating in extra school activities will only be allowed to practice up to eight hours per school week for each activity, the board decided. The previous rule allocated students 20 hours per week for all activities.

The board also voted to curtail the number of contests and performances a school can schedule for each extracurricular activity to one per week. This new activity schedule goes into effect Sept. 1, 1985.

The only exceptions include tournaments, post-season competition, and activities re-scheduled because of inclement weather, said Jack Strong, of Longview, chairman of the Students Committee.

The board refused to alter a provision in which students failing a course are prohibited from participating in any extracurricular activities for six weeks.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, head of the Senate Education Committee, introduced a resolution Thursday requesting the education board consider changing the "no-pass, no-play" suspension provision from six weeks to a weekly basis.

The Senate had approved the resolution 25-4.

"This is just an expression from the Senate as a result of the input we have had from our constitutents," Parker said Thursday. "It is unfair to blindside folks with a rule where there is no way out. We should offer more encouragement for our students to get on the ball."

Currently, students not earning a passing grade of 70 must sit out of all extracurricular activities until the next grading period shows the students are passing all courses. The grading period is based on six-week terms.

Strong responded to the Senate resolution through a letter to Parker in which he said the Students Committee would take no action on the Senate resolution until it hears from the House of Representatives.

Strong said he had visited with House Speaker Gib Lewis and members of the Legislative Education Board after the Senate resolution had passed.

Lewis and Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, chairman of the House Public Education Committee, said members of the House Legislative Education Board were divided on the issue, according to Strong's letter.

Waller County hospital forced to close doors

HEMPSTEAD (AP) — The doors of Waller County's only hospital have been closed for a week, leaving 20,000 residents without a place to treat medical emergencies.

County officials say they're relieved nothing drastic has happened. But they don't expect their luck to last forever, especially since tens of thousands of motorists travel through the county each week on U.S. Highway 290 between Houston and Austin.

"They're going to meet fenders right here," Hempstead Police Chief Randy Johnson predicted Friday, "and we're sure going to need a hospital then."

While the 80 former Memorial Hospital employees picketed outside the Waller County Courthouse to protest the loss of their jobs, some county officials tried to convince state legislators to pass a bill that would create a tax-collecting hospital district.

"What we really need is a new hospital and the hospital district is the only way we have to create the financial base to build it," said Dr. Linda Flower, a physician who worked regularly at the hospital.

Other officials spent last week talking with corporations about taking over the responsibilities of Memorial Hospital Systems, which tried for four years to keep the aging, 34-bed hospital open.

"I've got a whole stack of names of prospects who've shown interest in taking over," said County Judge A.M. McCraig. "We'll be interviewing three or four of them next week."

The small hospital has been plagued by financial problems for years.

"It's amazing that this has taken 15 years to happen," said County Attorney Larkin Eakin. "We've had one administrator after another at that hospital. For 15 years people have been trying to close it down."

Ex-fire chief faces charges in death of wife's lover

FORT WORTH (AP) — Former district fire chief Joe Dinkins, sentenced to two years in prison for the July 4 killing of his wife, still faces trial on a murder charge in the shooting death of the woman's lover.

The sentence, handed down Friday by a state district court jury, was the shortest possible for a voluntary manslaughter conviction.

Dinkins, 43, had been charged with murder in the death of his wife, Paula, but was convicted on the lesser charge Thursday.

The jury took over six hours to reach the punishment verdict Friday.

Defense attorney Tom Zachry said the conviction would be appealed. Dinkins was freed on a $2,000 appeal bond.

Defense attorneys must appeal the conviction in order to seek probation if Dinkins is later convicted in the July 4 killing of his family physician and his wife's lover, Dr. Charles Kenneth Dooley.

Huntsville officer critically injured in domestic dispute

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A 28-year-old Huntsville police officer was in critical condition at a Houston hospital Saturday after he was shot in the head while responding to a domestic disturbance call, officials said.

Kevin Williams, a Huntsville patrol officer for 16 months, was shot with a .22-caliber rifle in the forehead and shoulder about 1:30 a.m. Saturday at an apartment complex in west Huntsville, police said.

Also wounded was Resources Unlimited security officer Jay Hubert. He was hit in the arm and was treated at Huntsville Memorial Hospital and released, Huntsville police said.

Patrick Curtis Havard, 23, was being held Saturday in the Walker County Jail on a $500,000 bond after being charged with attempted capital murder.

World ready to tune in on recurring cold-war drama

By HENRY GOTTLIEB

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world will tune in Tuesday for a new season of a familiar cold-war drama.

It's called arms control, and the new episode will begin with Soviet and U.S. negotiators arriving in Geneva, Switzerland, exuding hope, but determined to give away nothing that would harm their national interest.

Such scenes in Geneva and other neutral cities have been staples of international life since the world started living with atomic weapons and the Soviet Union and the United States began trying to control their numbers and their spread into the hands of other nations.

Many people — even those informed on public policy and deeply concerned about nuclear weapons — will be befuddled by the terms and issues of the discussions.

Here is an explanation of some of those issues, how they've been handled in the past and the three types of weapons up for discussion this time.

The first, still on the drawing board, is "Star Wars," a weapon to be based in space. The Pentagon is researching the concept behind Star Wars: an effective defense against missile attack.

These space-based weapons are the ones the Kremlin is most keen to discuss, because a breakthrough in the art of missile defense would threaten the most potent Russian arsenal: land-based ballistic missiles.

WORLD

Strategic nuclear weapons constitute the second class of arms under consideration. Examples are the U.S. Minuteman and Soviet SS-18, long-range intercontinental missiles deployed in both countries, manned bombers like the B-52 and missiles launched from submarines.

These weapons are called strategic because they are so powerful, far-reaching and numerous they can knock out an opponent's entire war-making capability.

The third type of weapons is the intermediate-range nuclear force (INF) based mostly on land in Western Europe or the western part of the Soviet Union.

Best known among these arms are the Soviet SS-20 rockets and the U.S. Pershing II and Tomahawk missiles, which the United States began deploying in Western Europe in 1983 to counter the SS-20s, already in place.

It was the arrival of the U.S. weapons in West Germany and Britain — a deployment the Kremlin had sought to avoid — that prompted the Soviet cancellation in December 1983 of both INF and strategic arms talks.

Now, Soviet eagerness to discuss Star Wars defenses, coupled with the Reagan administration's desire to limit the two types of offensive weapons, is bringing the negotiators back to Geneva.

The history of arms control is studded with failure. Even successful negotiations often merely ratified the status quo or created a scramble through loopholes toward development of newer, deadlier weapons.

As early as 1946 — even before the Soviets had their own atomic bombs — President Harry S. Truman offered to share U.S. nuclear know-how with the world. But the Soviets wanted the United States to dismantle its arsenal first and the initiative died.

Both sides agreed in 1963 to stop nuclear bomb tests in the atmosphere, outer space and underwater. Nuclear fallout from testing was reduced, but tests continued underground.

Reagan wraps MX debate around talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — By successfully wrapping the debate over the MX missile around hopes for arms talks in Geneva, President Reagan has put foes of the long-range strategic weapon on the defensive and given himself a better than even chance of winning his first big congressional battle of 1985.

Mixing clever timing and rhetorical flourish, Reagan has convinced many wavering House members and senators that the missile is a necessary ingredient in the complex set of issues to be discussed in the U.S.-Soviet negotiations starting Tuesday.

"Who wants to be in the position of voting against the MX and getting blamed for the failure of the talks? That's an unpalatable position for many members," said Rep. Olympia Snow, R-Maine.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said the issue "has taken a significantly different turn because of the Geneva talks."

But questions remain about "the real value of the MX," Specter said in an exchange with Secretary of State George P. Shultz. He predicted the arms negotiations will bring no quick breakthroughs no matter what Congress decides on the missile.

"IS IT wise to saddle ourselves with the MX at a time when it can't be all that weighty in comparison with the other weapons to be discussed in Geneva?" asked Specter, who is now uncertain about how to vote on $1.5 billion for an additional 21 missiles.

"The MX is the best land-based weapon we have available and on its merits it is something we should do," replied Shultz. "It would be a great detriment for our negotiators to pull it out from under them now."

Middle-ground doubters about the MX such as Specter in both houses of Congress will decide the fate of the only major strategic weapon to face possible congressional defeat since World War II.

MX supporters are believed to have an edge in the House, but the Senate outcome is within one or two votes either way.

Reagan on Saturday pressed the campaign for the MX in his weekly radio address, saying the new missile system is needed because existing land-based missiles are "like a 1963 jalopy with some new parts."

He said the Soviets view the congressional votes as a test of American resolve, and that the MX vote "could be the real key to a successful outcome" of the new round of arms talks in Geneva.

TO ANSWER the administration's argument that the MX is needed to strengthen the U.S. position in Geneva, critics say the Soviet Union has not mentioned the missile in statements leading up to the talks.

"The Soviets have put all their emphasis on 'Star Wars,'" said former CIA Director William Colby, who has joined a coalition working to defeat the MX when votes come in the Senate around April 2 and in the House on March 26.

It was Star Wars — Reagan's proposed space-based defense system that — "brought the Soviets back to the arms talks, not the MX," Colby said.

Congressional approval may hinge on a formula sources say will be championed by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, and a few moderate Senate Democrats, including Sam Nunn of Georgia, a respected defense specialist.

Under the formula, the sources said, the 21 MXs would be approved. But the actual deployment in Minuteman missile silos and funds for 48 more would depend on progress in Geneva.

The argument of MX opponents has changed little since funding for production of the first 21 land-based missiles was narrowly approved after an emotional battle on Capitol Hill two years ago.

THE ARGUMENT assumes that the United States will not fire its missiles first in a nuclear war and therefore needs weapons that can survive a Soviet first strike.

Many studies have found that the planned basing of MXs in Minuteman missile silos in Nebraska will leave them sitting ducks, facing destruction from incoming Soviet warheads.

Defense contractors' crackdowns 'paperwork, hogwash, cosmetics'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the cigar-chomping chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, has a few choice words for Pentagon crackdowns on defense contractors: "Paperwork, hogwash and cosmetics."

"There's no real attempt to solve the problem," says Brooks. "That's the pattern."

But Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, already embroiled in a fight with Congress over proposed increases in the Pentagon's budget and money for the MX intercontinental missile, said last week that he means business.

Weinberger announced he is cutting off $40 million of $700 million in monthly payments to General Dynamics, the nation's largest defense contractor, while the Pentagon opens a new investigation into allegedly improper billings by the company for costs seemingly unrelated to the production of F-16 fighters and Trident submarines. These include a bill for boarding a company executive's pet dog.

In the future all contractors "will be required to certify, under penalty of perjury, that their claims do not include any expenses for political, entertainment or other expenses not made directly for the benefit of the government and required for the performance of the contract involved," Weinberger said.

"THEY ARE always wanting to do better," Brooks said last week. "And they send the problem to a committee of senior officials, and they don't do a damn thing."

Chairman Brooks directed those general remarks to another problem related to defense contractors: testimony that $22 billion in government supplied material and equipment is open to loss, theft and mismanagement because neither the Pentagon nor the contractors has kept track of it.

The defense secretary's action coincided with a flurry of reports regarding the billing practices of other defense giants.

The Boeing Co. confirmed it had billed the Pentagon for $126,000 in political contributions to state candidates in 1982.

Boeing officials at first said that while government rules disallow payment for contributions, "gray areas" exist that might eventually result in at least partial reimbursement.

Later, Boeing said it had "made a mistake" and said it was withdrawing claims for $61,075 in direct political contributions to individual candidates.

It said it seeks payment for another $65,000 in contributions to Republican and Democratic party committees, mostly in the state of Washington.

IT SAID these and other expenses, including $1,800 for a dinner with Vice President George Bush, are legitimate community relations expenses that can be charged against weapons contracts.

In comments before and after Weinberger's action, General Dynamics Chairman David S. Lewis said his is a responsible corporation that deals honorably with its government customers and that it has been victimized by exaggeration and misrepresentation.

Early last week it was disclosed that the Pentagon's Defense Contract Audit Agency is questioning more than $4.5 million in public relations billings by General Dynamics in 1982 alone.

These bills include $330,998 for such promotional "giveaways" as 10,000 F-16 tie tacs, gift hats, tie clips, golf shirts, necklaces, bronze statues, gold pen desk sets, 1,000 Barlow knives, 200 "special branding irons," and $149,231 for the Fort Worth division's 40th anniversary party.

The audit agency, in a sample, questioned $14.8 million in "public relations" expenses in 1982 by 12 major defense contractors.

These questioned "PR" costs include: Martin Marietta, $351,690; Tenneco, Newport News Shipbuilding Co., $830,862; General Dynamics, $4,557,296; Litton-Ingalls Shipbuilding Division, $184,583; United Technologies Corp., $1,519,185; McDonnell Douglas, $1,191,708; McDonnell Aircraft Co., $33,668; Rockwell International, $4,528,558; Westinghouse Electric, $57,000; Boeing Co., $350,729; Lockheed, $846,536; and Hughes Aircraft Co., $1,272,100.

Eclipses will give astronomers rare glimpse of planet

WASHINGTON (AP) — A series of eclipses that occur only every 124 years is giving astronomers a rare chance to study Pluto, the most elusive planet in the solar system, and its evanescent moon, Charon.

From Earth's viewpoint, Charon is moving alternately in front of and then behind Pluto, the smallest planet in the solar system. Each eclipse enables astronomers to make calculations not possible before.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said in a release that astronomers at its Jet Propulsion Laboratory and at the universities of Hawaii, Arizona and Texas are observing the eclipses.

Pluto, believed to be a snowball about the size of our own moon, travels farther from the sun than any of the nine known planets in the solar system. The ability to see the celestial show Charon puts on happens only twice in each 247.7 year orbit because of the relative positions of Earth, sun and planet.

Each time Charon passes between Pluto and Earth, a portion of planet is blocked from view, re ing in a dimming of the comb light from the two bodies. T roles are reversed when Cha moves behind Pluto.

By measuring the time, dura and changes in brightness, ast omers can figure the masses, dia ters and densities of both bodies. entists believe the planet's densit about that of water, but are not tain.

DISASTER LINKED TO THE FOOD YOU EAT!

Have you or has anyone in your family ever been tired and sluggish in the middle of the afternoon, or perhaps suffered from a continual weight problem despite numerous diets? Or, how about problems with headaches, sinuses, stomachaches, skin rashes, stress or fatigue? Researchers and nutritionists say FOOD may be a part of your problem.

There is nutritional help available. A new revolutionary nutritional test called CYTOTOXIC III show how an individual's system may react poorly to certain foods. It's a new semi-automated version of an older, less reproducible test called Cytotoxic. The new CYTOTOXIC III method is a breakthrough in nutrition.

"Anything new in nutritional testing tends to be controversial" says Bio Health Centers spokesperson. "Some Doctors either don't understand it . . . or have never tried it." "Other Doctors use it with great success." "We feel our success speaks the loudest in favor of a nutritional approach."

"I was feeling sluggish and awful until I applied the CYTOTOXIC III Test. Then within three days I felt an incredible increase in my energy level and mental attitude", one woman says. "I no longer get tired or moody, and I'm back to a normal life."

The CYTOTOXIC III Test is a detailed nutritional examination of almost 200 commonly eaten foods and additives. Results are determined by measuring the destruction of your white blood cells caused by exposure to these specific foods and chemicals. When a food is compatible with your body, the blood cells stay active, healthy, and alive when it is exposed to that food under a microscope. If you have a reaction to a food, your white blood cells begin to wrinkle, crack, burst open and die. "CYTOTOXIC means cell poisoning."

The examples are numerous. Ed was 60 lbs. overweight and had high blood pressure. Caroline was 20 lbs. overweight and had continual sinus problems, headaches and swelling. Mike took aspirin daily for 18 years due to chronic headaches. Ellen went through fits of depression, crying and withdrawals without warning. It's amazing how proper nutrition through CYTOTOXIC III Testing helped these people.

Children ranging in age from 18 months to 17 years old have experienced equal success in these areas and in the areas of psychological and learning behavior Parents have been excited to discover th many difficulties with children are relate to food and nutrition.

Bio Health Centers' CYTOTOXIC II Nutritional program is directed by Bi Health Centers' licensed physician. If yo or your family and children want t discover what foods are best for you, thi test is worth taking.

Bio Health Centers of California conduct this specialized test all over the countr and is sending a special nutritional team t The Midland area on Wednesday March 12, 1985, conduct the CYTOTOX IC III test for those who desire testing The CYTOTOXIC III test includes a lec ture on the history of CYTOTOXIC III Testing and how easy it is for you and your family to follow your CYTOTOXIC III Test results.

Bio Health Centers is limited on how many persons they can help. There is a charge for the test and reservations are mandatory. You may not be able to eat for 6 to 12 hours prior to the test, so calling for instructions is advised. Waste dumps' cleanup could cost $100 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cleaning up the nation's abandoned toxic waste dumps is likely to take 50 years and cost $100 billion, far more than any previous estimates, according to a new report to Congress.

The estimates are so large that the report from the Office of Technology Assessment says the "Superfund" cleanup program in the Environmental Protection Agency ought not even to try to make permanent cleanups at about 90 percent of the sites on its priority list.

Instead, said the technology report, for about the next 15 years the agency should concentrate on making sure those sites do not get worse while it builds technical expertise, explores new technologies and gathers environmental and health data.

It was the second assessment in less than a week that EPA had vastly underestimated the cleanup task. On Thursday, the General Accounting Office said Superfund might have to spend more than $39 billion.

EPA has estimated that there might be as many as 22,000 sites, of which 2,200 might wind up on the priority list. The list now contains 786 designated or proposed sites.

Cleaning up those 2,200 probably will take $11 billion and perhaps twice that sum if all the unknowns turn out unfavorably, the agency says. Only six sites have been declared clean so far, but EPA says long-term cleanups are under way at more than 300.

The technology report estimated the number of possible priority sites, using EPA's criteria, at about 10,000. The General Accounting Office estimates ranged up to 378,000, using different criteria.

"Under the current program, cleanups have tended to be both costly and impermanent, and thus likely to lead to substantial future spending for the same sites or wastes," the technology office said.

"A planning mistake now based on an underestimate of the national cleanup problem could result in an environmental crisis years or decades from now."

In particular, EPA has all too often moved waste from one dump to another. "There are lots of innovations out there," particularly new incineration techniques, and "lots of reasons to be optimistic," said Joel Hirschorn of the technology office at a briefing on the report Friday.

Veteran marchers recall 'Bloody Sunday' in Selma

EDITOR'S NOTE: The march was fraught with symbolism, as it was meant to be. They trooped to a drumbeat of memories, the bloody days 20 years ago along the route from Selma to Montgomery, Ala. And they also acknowledged the immense changes since then. A reporter who covered the march in 1965 was on hand to recapture the past.

By JULES LOH

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Easter arrived early this year in this town of bloody memory on the steep red banks of the Alabama River.

Graying veterans of what they still call, reverently, The Movement, came here last week from across the nation on a journey that had the flavor of a religious pilgrimage. For many, that is just what it was.

"Our struggle did not begin 20 years ago," said the Rev. Joseph Rembert, the pastor of Brown Chapel AME Church. "It began 2,000 years ago, on Calvary."

So they came to Selma to march in procession, to sing old hymns and remember old wars and wounds, hug old friends and celebrate what Southern black people count as the greatest piece of federal legislation since the Emancipation Proclamation: the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

"What happened here in Selma 20 years ago changed the South and the whole American political system," said John Lewis. "We ought not to forget that.

"That's one reason we came. The other is that blacks haven't been able to go beyond political gains and make equally dramatic economic and social gains. We're a long way from having our fair share of the American pie. What better place to rededicate ourselves to all that is left to do?"

IT WAS a theme repeated all week, especially by young blacks who take the ballot for granted and remain well aware of statistics on black unemployment, black poverty. In their lives, the greatest changes lie ahead.

Lewis, who is black, is himself a symbol of both the results of the Voting Rights Act and of the event, "Bloody Sunday," that sped its passage.

He is, today, an elected city councilman in Atlanta. Twenty years ago, he was in the front rank of 600 blacks — they were called Negroes then — who attempted on March 7 to march from Selma to Montgomery to present their grievances to Gov. George Wallace. State troopers and mounted possemen clubbed them, bull-whipped them and teargassed them in an orgy of official violence that astonished the nation and left Lewis with a fractured skull.

It happened on the west bank of the Alabama River at Selma's Edmund Pettus Bridge. Last week's pilgrims knelt on the bridge to recite the Lord's Prayer and to sing their old civil rights movement anthem, "We Shall Overcome."

"Men meant to do evil that day," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, whose run for the presidency last year was sustained by black voters across the South, "but God meant it to be good."

Good, because President Lyndon Johnson voiced his disgust on national television, said "We shall overcome," emphasizing, in his Texas drawl, the word "shall," asked Congress for a voting rights bill, and federalized the Alabama National Guard.

TWO SUNDAYS later, Martin Luther King Jr. led 4,000 disciples across the bridge on a march to Montgomery protected by 3,000 Army regulars, Alabama guardsmen and federal marshals.

When they reached Montgomery, their ranks swelled to 25,000 for the final walk up Dexter Avenue to the Capitol, where Wallace had given female employees the day off. He refused to see King's delegation. Last Thursday, he welcomed the marchers warmly. Black votes put Wallace in office his last election.

To those who witnessed the march and the events leading up to it 20 years ago, last week's re-enactment brought back with startling clarity a time so unreal to this generation that, if thought about at all, it is considered something fetched up during Black History Month, like slavery.

"We just never talked about it at school," said Sallie Favors, who was 2 years old on Bloody Sunday.

Was she aware that on Bloody Sunday fewer than 300 out of 15,115 eligible blacks were registered to vote in Dallas County, of which Selma is the county seat?

"Really?"

Miss Favors is a native of adjoining Lowndes County, the daughter of Jesse Favors, who was that county's first black justice of the peace. On Bloody Sunday, not one black was registered to vote in predominately black Lowndes County. Not one in adjoining Perry County, either. Now black officials hold nearly all elective offices in both counties.

U.S. lawyers vie for power in Bhopal case

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the nation's top lawyers, all claiming to represent victims of the disastrous chemical leak in Bhopal, India, are vying for control of the huge and potentially lucrative case against Union Carbide Corp.

F. Lee Bailey of New York, Melvin Belli of San Francisco and Stanley Chesley of Cincinnati are among those maneuvering for position before U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan.

Bailey has told the judge that many attorneys fail to see, as he does, the need to explore a quick settlement. Belli says Bailey is just miffed because he wasn't elected to a steering committee of lawyers for the case. Chesley has asked that only he and another lawyer be allowed to file papers in the case.

The final arbiter of the dispute will be Keenan, whose first meeting with the lawyers was postponed last week from March 12 to April 16.

The question of attorney control could be complicated if the Indian government files suit in U.S. courts asserting that it, not the American lawyers who flocked to Bhopal, should speak for Indian citizens. The government on Friday appointed the Minneapolis law firm of Robins, Zelle, Larson & Kaplan to represent it and individual victims of the leak in prospective lawsuits filed in the United States.

A federal panel has put Keenan in charge of most of the 50 federal court suits, seeking billions of dollars, that were filed across the country following the Dec. 3 methyl isocyanate leak, which killed at least 2,000 people and injured 200,000 others.

For lawyers in a class action, taking a back seat can be costly. In the recent Agent Orange case involving Vietnam veterans who claimed to have been harmed by the defoliant, U.S. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein awarded $5.8 million to nine lawyers on a steering committee, while more than 70 attorneys who played lesser roles split $3.4 million.

Professional pride also may be involved, particularly in the Bhopal case, where the plaintiffs' attorneys resemble a courthouse all-star team. The roster also includes Harry Lipsig of New York, a prominent personal injury lawyer, and Jacob Fuchsberg, a former member of the New York Court of Appeals, the state's highest court.

Bailey brought the struggle into the open on Feb. 28 when he suggested to Keenan that the lawsuits be put on hold while a committee of attorneys tries to reach a settlement with Union Carbide.

"When disasters of this dimension occur, the prospect of glorious and lucrative litigation tends to blind attorneys of both sides to the possibility of expeditious settlement at the outset," Bailey said in court papers.

Bailey opposed the appointment of any committee of lawyers to manage the plaintiffs' case until settlement talks have been discussed. But according to Belli, other attorneys have already elected a steering committee that includes Belli and Chesley.

"Bailey wasn't wanted on the committee...so he decided to go ahead by himself," Belli said.

Chesley, a member of the Agent Orange steering committee, last week asked Keenan to appoint him "co-lead counsel" for the Bhopal plaintiffs along with Jerry S. Cohen of Washington. Only Chesley and Cohen would be permitted to file motions or paperwork.

Despite the possibility that pretrial maneuvering could take years — five years passed in the Agent Orange litigation — other lawyers have been cool to Bailey's proposal for immediate settlement talks.

"We have a slogan in my office: Quick money is small money," Lipsig said. "The time defendants pay the real money in the case is when you have the loaded gun, on the eve of the actuality of trial."

However, Union Carbide spokesman Tom Failla said the company wants to reach an early settlement. "We feel it's the most prompt and fair way to get compensation to the victims," said Failla, adding that the company has had "discussions" with some plaintiffs' attorneys, whom he refused to name.

Union Carbide also may ask Keenan to keep the case in Indian courts, a motion the U.S. lawyers are certain to oppose since Indian cases can drag out for more than a decade and result in much lower damage awards, and Indian courts do not allow lawyers to be paid a percentage of any money they win.

Students hit Florida's beaches

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — College students from Carolina to California, Boston to Baton Rouge are hitting Florida's beaches and bars almost as fast as the beer is pouring out in spite of austerity suggestions from a Reagan Cabinet member.

"I haven't seen that many weird things, just masses of people partying their brains out," said T-shirt saleswoman Lori McIntire. "This is just the beginning."

More college students are expected here from mid-February through the end of March than the 350,000 who came last year, pumping approximately $120 million into the local economy, tourism officials say.

The students, snubbing the advice of the Reagan administration, are continuing a 30-year tradition of spending spring break at the beach.

The hordes were advised against taking part in the beach blow-out by the newly appointed U.S. secretary of education, William Bennett, a former college philosophy professor.

In Bennett's view, students should pay more attention to saving money than celebrating, particularly in light of a Reagan administration proposal to restrict government-guaranteed student loans.

When he took office in February, Bennett said the proposed cuts "may require from students divestiture of certain sorts: stereo divestiture, automobile divestiture, three-weeks-at-the-beach divestiture."

But judging by the thousands of students crowding the sidewalks and beaches in Fort Lauderdale and Daytona Beach, few have taken Bennett's advice seriously.

"It's just not very realistic," said Natalie Pricher, 21, a Penn State student. "I mean, part of going to school is learning what life is all about."

Ms. Pricher, lounging at a beachfront nightspot, said Bennett "should have been here the other night when those guys from the U.S. Naval Academy were singing that chant: 'We don't pay for school.'"

"I'm sure he (Bennett) didn't go straight home for his spring break," added her friend, Annie Bower, 20, also from Penn State.

'God's army' marches on clinic

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Seven trumpets blared, seven American flags waved and 2,000 demonstrators chanted "Let my children go" seven times Saturday outside a twice-bombed clinic where abortions are performed.

The anti-abortion protest, by a self-proclaimed "God's army," followed a silent, mile-long march. It began just two hours after a National Organization for Women leader, at a press conference across town, accused anti-abortion forces of immoral tactics designed to intimidate women.

The right-to-life marchers were led by former country-western and gospel singer Penny Lea, of Apple Valley, Minn. She wore a green surgical gown similar to those worn by staffers inside The Ladies Center, an abortion and women's health clinic.

Ms. Lea compared the march to the biblical story in which Joshua sent the walls of Jericho tumbling down with the sound of seven trumpeters on the seventh day.

"God hates hands that shed blood," Ms. Lea said to the crowd as it gathered for the march, organized by her "I Believe in Life" group and fundamentalist religious leaders.

Four men carried a small plastic foam ice chest, representing a coffin. At The Ladies Center it was opened to reveal a small doll and a single red rose. A sticker on the lid read: "Never to Laugh or Love — Fight Abortion."

A police line designated by yellow tape surrounded the two-story frame building. Several people peered out from the building, but no appointments had been scheduled during the demonstration.

There was no confrontation, but feminists had their say at the press conference and later petitioned fo signatures calling for ordinance that would limit the size and loc tion of anti-abortion demonstr tions.

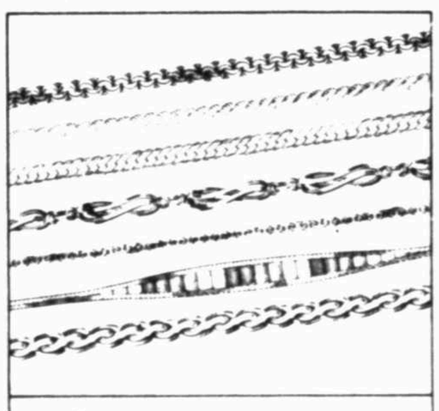

Both sides in the national abortio debate have focused on this Nav town in the Florida Panhandle sinc the Dec. 25 bombing of the clini and two doctors' offices where abo tions were also performed. Th Ladies Center also had been bombe last June at another site.

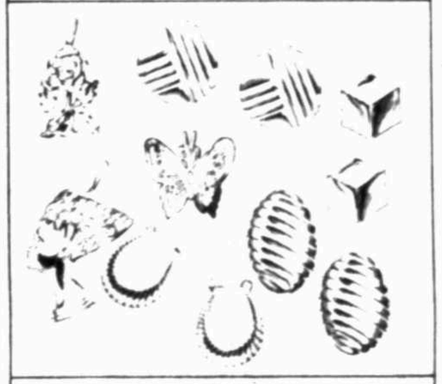

NOW's activities Saturday wer part of a national effort to en attacks on abortion clinics an harassment of women who use tho facilities, Patricia Ireland, the org nization's southeast regional dire tor, said at the news conference.

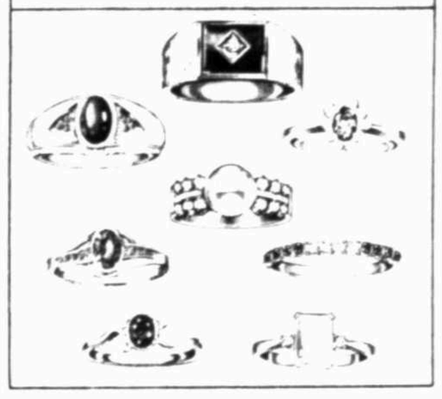

"Yes, they are acting out of the moral stand," she said of abortio opponents. "But they are not doi so in a moral way."

U.S. hinders son's efforts to perform death rites

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An Indian woman who died while visiting relatives here will be cremated without proper Hindu death rites because U.S. officials would not let her eldest son into the country, the woman's relatives said Saturday.

Padma Subramanian, 57, was visiting her son in suburban Upper Darby when she learned Feb. 19 that she had cancer of the pancreas. She died Thursday of complications from surgery performed earlier in the week.

Hindus believe the soul will not rest in peace without a religious ceremony in which the dead person's eldest son participates in burning rites at the body's cremation, said Mrs. Subramanian's daughter-in-law, Lakshmi Sankar.

Since Mrs. Subramanian won't have the proper rites before her cremation Monday, her eldest son, C.S. Murthi, 40, must now perform compensatory rites in India while her second oldest son, C.S. Murali, 37, of Trenton, N.J., performs the burning rites here, Mrs. Sankar said.

Murthi must also ask God for forgiveness, and Mrs. Subramanian's husband must take her ashes back to India and "mix them in a river," she said.

Shuttle damage evaluated

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Discovery sustained two gashes in a hangar accident, rather than three as originally feared, NASA officials said Saturday.

"It doesn't look as disastrous as we thought it might have been at first," said National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Charles Redmond. "I don't want to say it's a superficial skin wound, but it's beginning to look like that."

A 2,500-pound bucket used to transport workers broke loose and smashed into the shuttle and broke a worker's leg Friday.

It caused one gash about 5 inches long, and another about 3 inches long. Each penetrated about 3 inches into a thermal blanket and a layer of woven material underneath, said Redmond, in Washington.

The delay in launching the shuttle, originally scheduled for March 28, would be anywhere from four to 10 days, Redmond said.

Chain has beef with city

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — White Castle has a beef with this Kansas City suburb — city officials say the hamburger chain can build a restaurant here only if its exterior is beige.

White Castle is planning to expand into the Kansas City area, beginning with Overland Park. Company officials say the hamburger stand should have the white metal exterior that covers nearly 200 others it operates in nine states.

However, Roger Peterson, Overland Park's planning and research director, says the color wouldn't be compatible with a shopping center across the street and another group of stores to be built nearby.

The matter goes before the city Planning Commission on Monday night.

White Castle, which originated in Wichita in 1921, traditionally has built restaurants shaped like miniature castles with battlements on top. While the chain has made concessions on the shape of the roofs in a few cases, it has never changed a restaurant's color, said Gail Turley, director of advertising and public relations for the Columbus, Ohio-based chain.

Gump's put up for sale

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gump's, the 124-year-old seller of fine china, jewelry and other decorative objects, has been put up for sale by its owner, MacMillan Inc., the New York-based publishing house.

Carol McFate, MacMillan's assistant treasurer, said in an interview published Friday that the decision grew out of the "significant difference" in the kinds of businesses operated by Gump's and MacMillan and was made "despite the consistent revenue and profit" Gump's has generated.

Gump's operates a catalog business and stores in Beverly Hills, Houston, Dallas and San Francisco, where it is based. It was founded in 1861 and acquired by MacMillan in 1968.

Government prosecutor warns Walesa to quit 'illegal' activities

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — A government prosecutor warned Solidarity leader Lech Walesa Saturday that he risked imprisonment if he continued "illegal" union activities, but Walesa declared he would defend "the rights of working people."

As Walesa responded to the prosecutor's summons, the outlawed trade union issued a statement calling for nationwide protests if demands for higher wages to offset government food price increases are not met.

The prosecutor told Walesa he was under investigation on charges of playing a leading role in Solidarity, organizing illegal protests and inciting public unrest, his lawyer, Jacek Taylor, said.

"These charges are groundless and are aimed against basic human and citizens' rights," Walesa told reporters after a one-hour appearance before the Gdansk prosecutor. It was the second summons since he endorsed a Solidarity call for a 15-minute nationwide strike last month to protest price increases.

Walesa called off the work stoppage after authorities abandoned the plan for across-the-board price hikes. The government later announced the increases would be introduced gradually over the next four months, and instituted the first stage Monday.

Solidarity's underground Temporary Coordinating Commission issued a statement Saturday saying the government had merely delayed the price increases and had failed to adequately compensate workers' salaries.

The statement, given to Western reporters in Gdansk, was signed by five members of the organization.

Brazil puts economic worries aside to throw inaugural gala

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Setting its economic worries aside for the time, Brazil is preparing a gala inauguration for its first civilian president in 21 years.

The major ceremonies will be held in this hinterland capital but celebrations are expected throughout this nation of 134 million people.

Preparations for the March 15 inauguration of Tancredo Neves, who will be 75 years old when he assumes office, have been under way in Brasilia for weeks. The Foreign Ministry has been arranging cars, hotel rooms and a party for 5,000 guests, including Vice President George Bush.

Foreign Ministry officials estimate the cost of the Brasilia functions at $2 million.

"It ought to be worth it," said the Foreign Ministry spokesman, Ricardo Carvalho.

Brazil's $100 billion foreign debt is the largest in the developing world and its inflation is running at around 220 percent. The combined unemployment and underemployment rate is estimated at about 40 percent and the average worker earns the equivalent of about $150 a month.

Neves, a veteran politician who has held posts ranging from city councilman to prime minister, promises to usher in a new era in Latin America's largest nation. His Jan. 15 victory in an Electoral College vote ended the string of five generals who served as president since the armed forces took over in a coup in 1964.

Neves' win over Paulo Salim Maluf, candidate of the military-backed Social Democratic Party, also returned power to the Brazilian Democratic Movement Party for the first time in more than two decades.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Carvalho said the government would pay the bills for three members of each of the roughly 100 foreign delegations.

The ministry has reserved about 660 hotel rooms in Brasilia for about four days. At an average rate of about $60 a day (up from $50-$55), that means about $158,400 just for rooms.

And that total doesn't include the 400 cars that will be at the disposal of the foreign dignitaries, or the cheeses, meats and domestic wine and imported Scotch — which can cost up to $80 a bottle — for the black-tie inaugural reception.

About 20 Brazilian diplomats were summoned home from their posts abroad to help set up the reception that will follow the inaugural ceremonies.

Hotel owners in Brasilia insisted in some cases on reservations for up to 15 days, although ceremonies are set for only three days.

The U.S. Embassy, which will have the largest delegation, said it was forced to reserve the 100 rooms needed for at least eight days. Bush, Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Langhorne A. Motley and the rest of the U.S. delegation are scheduled to stay in Brazil for only two days.

Bush, having just completed a nine-day African tour, is scheduled to arrive on the eve of the inauguration and will leave the morning after it. He will miss a ceremony on the afternon of March 14 in which the heads of each of the foreign delegations will go through the formality of presenting their credentials to the outgoing president, Gen. Joao Figueiredo. Bush also will miss a luncheon given by Neves on March 16.

A press aide for Neves said he hoped Brazilians would take part in outdoor celebrations planned along Brasilia's wide avenue where the presidential palace and the government ministries are situated.

"The people will be involved," he added.

He said a special platform would be set up in front of the presidential palace, and actors, singers and samba dancers are expected to perform.

"The inauguration will be a monumental party, not just in Brasilia but in all Brazil," the aide said.

Iran, Iraq reportedly launch attacks on each other's cities

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran and Iraq said Saturday they had attacked each other's cities from the air and ground, inflicting heavy casualties and damage on the sixth day of new border combat. Iraq claimed it downed an Iranian jet.

Iran said its air force bombed three Iraqi towns, and all planes returned safely. It would mark the first appearance in force of Iranian planes in months. Iran's U.S.-supplied air force was mauled in earlier stages of the 54-month-old Iran-Iraq war, and lacks critical spare parts.

Iraq did not confirm the Iranian attacks. Western reporters normally are not allowed into the war zone for independent confirmation.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the air strikes were in retaliation for overnight Iraqi missile attacks on Dezful in the southern oil province of Khuzistan, and Khorramabad in west Iran. It said eight missiles hit Dezful, killing at least 19 people and wounding 80, and four rockets slammed into Khorramabad, killing 110 people and wounding more than 500.

A communique carried by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said 10 Iranian jet fighters bombed an oil refinery and an army camp at Khanaqin, about 80 miles northeast of the Iraqi capital of Baghdad on the Iran-Iraq border.

The communique said the jets scored "decisive hits" in an early morning strike, setting sections of the refinery on fire and inflicting heavy losses on Iraqi troops in the camp.

It also said fighter-bombers attacked "important installations" in the twin garrison towns of Ali al-Gharbi and Ali al-Sharqi on the banks of the Euphrates River southeast of Baghdad. Losses in the towns "were said to be heavy," according to the official statement.

An Iraqi military communique broadcast on Baghdad Radio said Iranian jets had attempted raids in Waset and Misan provinces, where Ali al-Gharb and Ali al-Sharqi are located. But it said Iraqi air defenses chased the planes away after shooting one down.

Iran threatened its forces would attack all Iraqi cities except the four holy cities of Najaf, Karbala, Kazemieh and Samerra, which abound with shrines sacred to both the Iranian and Iraqi Shiite Moslems.

However, Iraq appeared to be trying to pre-empt Iranian retaliation by a series of air raids on Iranian targets along the 730-mile battlefront.

Thai troops clash with Vietnamese along border

SURIN, Thailand (AP) — Artillery fire rattled across the Thai-Cambodian border for the fifth straight day Saturday as Thai troops clashed with Vietnamese launching an assault on a major Cambodian guerrilla camp.

Thai units backed by sustained artillery and mortar fire repulsed a Vietnamese force that defied Thai threats of retaliation and intruded into Sangkha district to attack a strategic hill, Thai military officers said. They did not say how many Vietnamese soldiers had entered Thai territory.

Control of the hill would allow the Vietnamese to thrust southward at the guerrilla camp of Tatum, which has seen heavy Vietnamese artillery fire and ground assaults since Tuesday, they said.

The Tatum camp of non-communist forces, loyal to former Cambodian leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk, is the only major guerrilla base near the border that has not been overrun by the Vietnamese in their dry season offensive that started last fall.

Sihanouk's force is allied with a second non-communist group, the Khmer Peoples National Liberation Front, and the communist Khmer Rouge, against the Vietnamese and the pro-Vietnam government of Heng Samrin.

The Vietnamese invaded Cambodia six years ago, ousted the Khmer Rouge government, and installed Heng Samrin. Vietnamese soldiers have been in Cambodia ever since.

Thai officers said there were no Thai casualties from Saturday's 5½-hour duel, and they didn't know about possible Vietnamese losses.

Other informed sources reported Vietnamese shells aimed at Thai artillery positions have struck within a half mile of the site where 31,000 Cambodian refugees have sought haven.

Britain's unions heed striking miners' defeat

By MAUREEN JOHNSON

LONDON (AP) — Britain's huge labor unions, analyzing the crushing defeat suffered by striking coal miners, may now wait years before again trying to take on a British Conservative leadership in a head-to-head confrontation.

The miners ended their year-long walkout last week, undone by a combination of a determined government and a national labor movement reluctant to go into battle for them.

"It doesn't mean there won't be strikes and conflicts over short-term interests, but I don't think it likely anyone will try a 'Scargill' again," said labor specialist Ben Roberts of the London School of Economics, echoing a view other analysts hold as well.

Arthur Scargill, the miners' Marxist leader, pulled no punches on March 2 when he announced the decision by his National Union of Mineworkers to call off the strike without an agreement.

"The trade union movement, with a few noble exceptions, has left this union isolated — to their everlasting shame," declared the president of the 186,000-member National Union of Mineworkers.

Other unionists feared for their own jobs, and opposed the strike's political overtones and picket-line violence. The miners' union itself was split. All contributed to the defeat of Scargill's men.

Last autumn, dockworkers were called out to support the miners' strike, but two-thirds of the 35,000 dockers ignored the strike call. The failed walkout ended after 13 days.

"They thought it was political, backing Scargill," said Tom Dugan, a dock shop steward in Britain's Northern Ireland province.

"Our boys have enough to do to look after their own jobs without getting mixed up in this," Dugan said.

Northern Ireland unemployment, as in some north England and Scottish coal regions, is about 26 percent, twice the national average.

When the coal miners went on strike over pay in 1974, electric utility workers and longshoremen helped strangle the nation's power supplies. Britain went on a three-day work week, and at the next election the Conservative government of Edward Heath was toppled, ushering in five years of socialist Labor Party control.

In the 1984-85 strike, the miners were fighting the Conservative government's program of closing money-losing mines. Scargill portrayed the strike as a populist struggle to preserve mining communities, but other unions found the rationale weak, and one-quarter of the mineworkers thought so little of it they never observed their own union's strike.

In addition, the British labor movement has been battered by record unemployment and by six years of government by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has introduced a string of union-curbing laws.

Since the previous miners' strike, more than 2 million jobs have disappeared in heavy industries, the bedrock of the big manual workers' unions that traditionally dominate the Trades Union Congress, the national labor federation.

Sikh political party drafts list of demands

NEW DEHI, India (AP) — The main Sikh political party drafted a new list of seven "basic demands," and gave the government until April 13 to meet them or face agitation across Punjab state.

The list apparently supersedes the more than 40 political and religious demands put forth by the Akali Dal three years ago that brought the Sikhs into confrontation with the central government.

Leaders of the party, meeting at Anandpur Sahib, a historic place north of New Delhi, demanded the government order a judicial inquiry into the widespread anti-Sikh riots that followed the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi last Oct. 30.

The government says she was shot to death by two Sikh members of her bodyguard, and that at least 2,717 people were killed in the violence that followed.

A weekly newspaper quoted Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, Mrs. Gandhi's son, who took power following her death and who was elected to the position last month, as saying he might order a probe soon into "all the violcence" connected with Punjab.

The newspaper Sunday, whose early editions were seen Saturday, quoted Gandhi as saying in a lengthy interview that an inquiry only into the riots would "do more damage" to the nation. He did not specify whether it would be a judicial or a government inquiry.

The Akali Dal, meanwhile, also demanded that all soldiers be withdrawn from Punjab.

Sandinistas warn opposition leaders

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nine opposition leaders were summoned to the state security office Saturday and warned not to "form part of a plot" by the United States and rebels against the Sandinista government.

The action apparently was linked to a recent demand by the rebels for political reforms and peace talks.

Among those ordered to the security office were Jaime Chamorro, co-director of La Prensa, Nicaragua's only opposition newspaper; Enrique Bolanos, head of the Council of Private Enterprise, and Eduardo Rivas, president of the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, a coalition of political groups opposed to the Sandinistas.

Customs officials had ordered Chamorro to report to the security office when he tried to board a plane at Sandino International Airport to fly to Panama for the Inter-American Press Association convention.

Twelve opposition leaders had been ordered to report to the security office, but only nine showed up. They told reporters after they were released that they were taken to the office normally used to question suspected rebels.

Bolanos said the state security chief, Lenin Cerna, told them to "not form part of a plot that is prepared by the United States and the counterrevolutionaries against the government."

It was believed Cerna was referring to the document signed by Nicaraguan rebel leaders in Costa Rica on March 2 calling for political reforms, new elections and Roman Catholic church-supervised negotiations with the Sandinistas to begin by March 20.

The rebels said if no substantial progress was made in the proposed talks by April 20, the negotiations should end, "terminating the possibility of a peaceful solution to the national crisis."

The Sandinistas denounced the document, saying it had been prepared by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Among the 21 people who signed the document were Adolfo Calero of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force; Alfonso Robelo of the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, and Joaquin Chamorro Barrios, a co-director of La Prensa before going into exile in Costa Rica.

Nicaragua refused to allow opposition leader Arturo Cruz, who is in Costa Rica, to enter the country Thursday with a copy of the document for Catholic bishops.

The Interior Ministry said the CIA wanted Cruz to be arrested in Nicaragua so it could "unleash an international campaign...to show that the Sandinista dictatorship jails democrats like Mr. Cruz."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Vatican reports big deficit

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican, in an effort to quash the "myth" about its wealth, reported Saturday it had a deficit of more than $29 million in 1984 and expects even more red ink this year.

Twelve cardinals of a finance oversight committee also disclosed that the Vatican bank had paid off a settlement in a major banking scandal without tapping other church resources.

Banking sources said the Vatican bank had agreed to pay between $240 million and $250 million to creditors of the collapsed Banco Ambrosiano, in which the Vatican was a large stockholder.

In their statement, the cardinals said they gave "special attention" to possible cost-cutting changes in the Roman Catholic church's central administration, but did not specify what the changes might be.

Riflemen fire at RAF head

MOERS, West Germany (AP) — Riflemen in a passing car on an expressway fired three shots at a military vehicle carrying the head of the British Royal Air Force in West Germany, but he was not injured, police said.

Air Marshal Sir Patrick Hine, 52, told police he thought there were two people in the car, a red BMW that sped away down the A-57 autobahn near the city of Moers in the western part of the country, said Lutz Liebing, a spokesman for Duisburg police.

Moers is about 20 miles from Moenchengladbach, where the British Army of the Rhine and the Royal Air Force are headquartered.

The attack on Hine followed bombings in four West German cities on Thursday and Friday, with left-wing terrorists taking responsibility for three of the four bombings.

Unions protest price freeze

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A coalition of Common Market farmers unions called for demonstrations on March 22 in all member countries to protest the virtual freeze on farm prices this year proposed by the European Community Commission.

"It has been agreed member groups of COPA (the farmers union coalition) will stage mass gatherings of farmers, at (Common Market) borders in particular, to show their solidarity in the face of the unacceptable proposals of the commission," the group said in a statement issued Friday.

The statement said there was "growing dissatisfaction" among the Common Market's 8 million farmers with a proposal by the trading bloc's agricultural commission for an average net rise in prices this year of only 0.1 percent.

COPA has asked for an increase in farm prices of 4 or 5 percent during the 1985-86 marketing year that begins April 1.

Fire damages Polish theater

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A fire swept through Warsaw's National Theater on Saturday, destroying most of the interior. The building had been rebuilt after Nazi soldiers burned it to the ground in World War II.

Two people were hospitalized for smoke inhalation, according to fire officials and Polish television.

Fire deparment officials said the blaze broke out beneath the stage during an afternoon rehearsal.Smoke billowing from the 1,000-seat theater could be seen throughout downtown Warsaw.

In North Texas, it will be partly cloudy through Monday. Highs today 77 to 80. Lows tonight 65 to 69. Highs Monday 81 to 84.

In West Texas, it will partly cloudy and warmer through Monday. Highs today mid 70s north and mountains to mid 80s south and near 90 Big Bend valleys. Lows tonight lower 60s north to lower 60s south. Highs Monday upper 70s north to mid 80s south and mid 90s Big Bend valleys.

Temperatures expected to reach 80s

From Staff and Wire Reports

Cloudy skies and pleasantly warm temperatures are to be the fare for Midland today.

The high temperature is to be in the mid-80s, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds are to be southerly at 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

For tonight and Monday, the weatherman is calling for partly cloudy skies. The low tonight is to be in the mid-50s, and the high Monday is to be in the mid-80s.

Saturday's peak temperature was 70 degrees, while the record high for a March 9 is 85 degrees set in 1955. The overnight low was 57 degrees, which was no where near the record low of 14 degrees for a March 10 in 1948.

STATE

Cloudy skies and gentle southerly winds dominated the Texas weather picture Saturday.

A weak frontal boundary stretched from near Longview to Midland, triggering several isolated showers in the northeast corner of the state.

North of the front, temperatures cooled into the 60s. The National Weather Service said afternoon highs in the Panhandle were only in the 40s, while readings in the 70s were common in South Texas.

The weather service was calling for a chance of patchy fog and drizzle in the early morning hours today and partly cloudy and warmer temperatures through Monday.

In West Texas, partly cloudy and warmer weather was predicted through Monday. Highs today and Monday were expected to range from the middle 70s in the north and the mountains to near 90 in the Big Bend valleys. Lows tonight were expected to 50s and 60s.

NATION

The West shivered under record-setting cool temperatures Saturday, while the East enjoyed mild, fair weather.

The mercury dipped to 4 degrees at Pocatello, Idaho, breaking the 37-year-old record low temperature for the date of 12 degrees. In Stockton, Calif., the low of 31 was one degree below the record of 32 set in 1935.

Light rain fell over eastern New Mexico, and showers were scattered over the western Carolinas, but the rest of the nation was dry.

Skies were sunny in Illinois, where flooding left 1,700 people homeless, but forecasters said rain could return later in the week.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Told twice his working days were over, Roland Davis, 60, refused to believe his doctors. Instead of slowing down, he gave up his sedentary job as a security guard to work as a sacker at Albertsons.

Elderly like to keep on working

Akins proclaims 'Hire the Older Worker Week'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

Roland Davis is a hard man to keep out of the work force.

In 1973, "The doctors told me I'd never work again," when they found he had arthritis of the spine, he says. "I didn't pay them any mind."

Then in 1978 he was diagnosed as having chronic bronchitis, and once again was told his working days were over.

"I just wouldn't believe them," he says with a laugh. Today, at 60, when most people are looking forward to retirement, Davis hasn't even begun to slow down. In fact, he's speeded up: three years ago, he traded in his desk-bound job as a security guard to become a supermarket boxboy at Albertsons.

"It (the guard position) was a job where you just sit down and don't move around — an old man shouldn't do that," Davis says.

This is "Hire the Older Worker Week," as proclaimed by Gov. Mark White statewide and in Midland by Mayor Thane Akins, and Davis agrees that people shouldn't be arbitrarily removed from the work force just because they've reached a certain age.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Davis wheels a customer's sacks to the car.

"I was raised to work — I believe in the work ethic," he says. "If I had a lot of money, I'd still work."

Boxing bags is usually a person's first job, not his last, but Davis appreciates the exercise, and he doesn't mind working with teenagers.

"They call me 'Grandpa' and all that, but I enjoy it," he says.

"Roland is just kind of a fixture around here," says Charlie Stephens, manager of the store at Cuthbert Avenue and Andrews Highway. "He does a great job."

As an older man doing a young man's job and doing it well, Davis is living proof that senior citizens needn't be put out to pasture. He's overcome such obstacles as heart trouble, high blood pressure, rheumatoid arthritis and chronic bronchitis.

"Any one of them should shut a man down, and one of them someday probably will," says Davis, but if his luck holds, he may never have to retire.

"I hope not," he says.

Teens cruise for lack of other activity

The parking lot at Cuthbert Avenue and Midkiff Road fills with teen-agers in vehicles on the weekends as they look for something to do.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Every Friday and Saturday evening, local high school youth pile into souped-up hot rods, and proceed to "scoop" the loop 'til they happen upon a favorite night spot.

There, many "hang-out" (of car windows) for hours and greet each other with a jubilant "hey baby, what's happenin?" followed by a curious "where's the party, man?"

Meanwhile, the parking lot scene at Town and Country Shopping Center, located at the corner of Midkiff Road and Cuthbert Avenue, offers a unique atmosphere all its own.

Youngsters gather in droves for the intense "boy meets girl" seminar while the sounds of squealing tires and giggles muffle most, if not all, conversation.

What's the attraction in the weekend vigil?

Seventeen-year-old Mike Burns claimed to have the definitive answer.

"There's nothing else to do here. The mall closes at nine. Where else are we supposed to go?" he asked.

For the most part, parents and their loveable offspring can identify with the classic excuse. Seems it's one the youth of America created more than 20 years ago to justify why those who participate in all that fun, fun, fun continue to congregate along the path of the hometown drag despite the disappearance of the T-Bird.

Cruisin', draggin' — call it what you will — it symbolizes the weekend lifestyle of the average adolescent, ranking itself among baseball, hot dogs, apple pie and other American traditions.

"We're really not doing anything. We're just riding around, talking and looking for girls," 17-year-old Tim Williams said.

Steve Barger, however, put his remarks into symbolic terms.

T&P linked Midland to rest of world

By MARY FRANCES BEVERLEY

Mary Frances Beverley is a longtime Midlander, a former Midland Independent School District speech and English teacher, book reviewer, active in Midland Community Theatre and free-lance writer. Her book, "Great Hometown Restaurants of Texas," was published by Gulf Publishing Co., Houston, in late 1984. Her articles have appeared in numerous magazines.

To a casual observor new to Midland, the city looks as if it were born yesterday because so much is new or in the early stages of growth. But a few blocks south of downtown is a silent reminder that Midland's beginnings stretch further back than appearances suggest. When the Texas and Pacific Railroad Co. laid its tracks to this halfway point between Fort Worth and El Paso in July 1881, Midland was actually born.

The T&P was an extension of the great steel web of rails crisscrossing the country in the mid-1800s. Renowned entrepreneur Jay Gould bought the T&P for $3.5 million and named as his chief engineer a retired Civil War general, Grenville M. Dodge.

Dodge issued instructions stating the need for a road through Texas which the country would be capable of supporting when settled. He urged the builders and developers of the railroad to "note carefully the quality and capacity of the agricultural, grazing and mineral resources of each township and county." In addition, he added, "The party taking the field must be armed, and the chief must be a man of energy and one who will not run at the sight of an Indian."

In the spring of 1880, Dodge proceeded at fever pitch to point the rails westward from Fort Worth. The original crew consisted of 5,000 men and 3,000 oxen, laying rails at the rate of a mile to a mile-and-a-half a day. The laborers included many Chinese and Irish workers as well as Civil War veterans who had little to go back to and were accustomed to the discipline needed for this demanding venture.

GRADES AND CURVES slowed construction. At the "big spring" General Dodge lost so many laborers by rattlesnake bites while digging a roadbed that the spot is still known as Rattlesnake Gap. The farther west the tracks went, the greater the difficulty finding accessible water needed for the little wood-burning steam engine as well as for the crew. Other obstacles along the way arrived in the form of bandits who heard of the good wages being paid the workers, $1.75 to $2.50 per day.

Every 10 to 15 miles a section house would be built and a name given to the place which might some day become a town. Thurber, Abilene, Big Springs, Marienfeld, Germania. Some names would later be changed, some almost forgotten. Later, east to west street names in Midland would bear the town names: Weatherford, Baird, Abilene (now Main Street), Loraine, Colorado, Big Spring, Pecos.

By May 1881, the tracks had reached the little tent city north of the "big spring" in what would become Howard County. In early July, 40 miles to the southwest, railroad workers laid a siding track and shuttled a railroad mail car onto it to serve as a post office, the first official building in the little settlement to be known for a while as Midway. Two years later, a visitor described Midway: "It was a place with no houses in sight except for a small cabin occupied by a solitary sheepherder."

FROM MIDWAY the railroad tracks continued onward to El Paso and finally California. But survival and success for the T&P depended on permanent settlers along the route. State and federal land grants had made the T&P the largest single beneficiary among about 40 railroads receiving grants with more than 5 million acres to sell for $4-6 an acre. Thus, the railroad courted prospective settlers just as modern-day land developers do, but the early land promoters were sometimes prone to stretch the truth a bit. An early circular distributed by the Midland Town Company read: "The staked plain has a climate peculiar to itself and is fast becoming a popular health resort. Those who are suffering from catarrh (runny nose), bronchitis, asthma, consumption, and all the diseases of the respiratory organs are afforded immediate relief, and, in the incipient stages, permanent cures are affected. Owing to the high altitude and absence of stagnant water, malarial troubles are never experienced."

BUT THE railroad wanted new settlers to know what kind of land they would call home. It would prosper only if they stayed and required imported supplies for building and farming while producing products themselves to be shipped to distant markets. So the T&P sponsored excursion trains to bring families to look over their prospective homes. In a booklet subtitled "A Truthful Description of the Staked Plain," published by the Staked Plain newspaper in 1886, the excursion trains were described: "A porter is in attendance and the cars are kept clean and comfortable. By leasing a mattress for 75 cents, the excursionist can enjoy all the luxuries of a palace sleeping car."

And the settlers did come. From 1884 to 1886 Midland's population more than doubled as town lots were offered at bargain prices. Some of the people lived in dugouts until lumber could be shipped in by rail. Water was brought from Monahans and stored in barrels. By 1886 the railroad was unloading saddles and harnesses for Herman Klapproth's shop and drugs and caskets for Newnie Ellis's drugstore and mortuary. Cattle were shipped in. Later the railroad hired agricultural agents to consult with farmers and sponsored demonstration trains in which new farming methods and materials were put on traveling display.

SOON THE TRAINS were carrying West Texas herefords and Aberdeen angus to Kansas City and Chicago as well as polo ponies to the East. Not too many years later it was easy to identify the new source of prosperity in West Texas from the long, winding freight trains loaded with pipe and oil.

ESPN has problem with events that don't use ball

ESPN, the all-sports network, has a problem.

Simply put, there is not enough sports activity going on to fill 24 hours of programming seven days a week. As a result, you get a hefty dose of reruns (mostly college basketball games which were played 48 hours earlier and, consequently, have already cost you varying amounts of gambling money. You want to re-live that agony about as much as you want to get caught ordering a strawberry daiquiri in a bar catering to men who wear burr haircuts and white socks.)

The network bigwigs realize this predicament and, therefore, have chosen to showcase what some would label "off-beat sporting events." Things like ice skating, skiing, surfing and auto racing. When they get especially desperate they will spotlight some sport that starts with an "e" and consists of horses jumping over fences.

Hard-core fans question the legitimacy of these "games" because the participants don't use a ball. Real sports, they argue, are manly endeavors such as football, basketball, baseball and, to a lesser extent, golf and tennis. In all cases, the object of the game revolves around a ball.

You can fumble it, double dribble it, pass it, volley it, slice it, hook it, shank it, lateral it, serve it, bunt it, hit-and-run it, putt it, three-putt it, and so on and so forth.

The point is, there's a ball out there and you've got to do something with it.

Such is not the case with these borderline activities.

There was one on TV the other afternoon, for example, that combined snow skiing with ballet. Somewhere in a Pittsburgh tavern a group of rednecks whose idea of a good time is watching a linebacker behead a running back must surely have become nauseated at the mere sight.

Still, there it was. Grown men in tight britches performing mid-air pirouettes as soothing music played in the background. The fact they were doing it while wearing bulky skis made it all the more silly-looking.

The network even had commentators on the scene to do interviews with the participants. This made it seem like a real sporting event. Almost, that is. Astute viewers like myself knew something was wrong as soon as we heard the question-and-answer session begin.

For one thing, the participants didn't talk like real athletes. They could put three words together, for example, without inserting a couple of "you knows" and "hi moms." They also knew to use a plural verb with a plural subject. Little things like that are dead giveaways that you aren't talking about your typical 260-pound defensive tackle.

Another thing: They didn't look like athletes. They all had wavy blond hair and most appeared to be no more than 5 feet 7 inches tall. They had great tans, perfect teeth and didn't perspire. They probably were a part of the Studio 54 crowd a few years ago and no doubt consider a victory celebration to be a quiet evening of sipping white wine in front of a roaring fire in the company of an outrageously gorgeous brunette.

They may have good taste in women but real athletes they are not.

They wouldn't know a honky tonk beer joint if it bit them on the nose. That's because they are from sissy places like Switzerland, Sweden and Finland.

But don't get me wrong. I have nothing against these off-beat events. It's just that they have no place on an all-sports network.

ELDERLY

R.L. "BOB" DENTON tried retirement once. He lasted about a month.

"I spent about 30 days wondering what I was going to do," after retiring from Mobil Oil Corp. at 65, the crude-oil buyer says. Denton, who is now 83, expected to have some trouble adjusting to retirement, "But it surprised me that I didn't like it at all. I got tired of staying home all week."

With the encouragement of his wife — "Housewives do not want their husbands hanging around all day underfoot" — Denton quickly returned to the oil business, "And I've had a part-time job ever since."

Denton puts in 25-30 hours per week for Navajo Refining Co., and puts in a ritual 9 a.m. appearance each day at The Spot, as he has since the downtown cafe opened in 1947.

"I'm the only one left of the old guard," says Denton, who's been an oil buyer in Midland 41 years. "Used to be there wasn't but 12-15 of us — now there's about 40."

The traditional morning gatherings at The Spot have shrunk to half a dozen or so oil buyers, mostly because the oil business is no longer as concentrated in the downtown area, but also because the business has grown so much: "When I came here (in 1944), there were about 200 fields (in West Texas and New Mexico), and now there are closer to 2,000."

But Denton still shows up each morning: "I'm the one who has the least to do, so I'm usually there."

Retirement is all right for some people, Denton says, but others can still make a contribution.

"Experience is a great thing," he says. "If their health's good, they're still able to help a company."

Denton keeps his health by doing daily calisthenics. But at 83, he's a little more willing to take things easy than when he first tried retirement.

"I could take retirement maybe a little better now," he says. "And with the oil business being the way it is, I may have to retire."

R.L. "Bob" Denton

FOR FELIPA MALDONADO, retirement wasn't even an option; she didn't start working, at least in the formal sense, until she was over 70.

"She had never worked, so she had never qualified for Social Security," says Alice Brown, volunteer coordinator for Casa de Amigos. The Casa employs Ms. Maldonado as part of the Senior Texans Employment Program, which is funded through the Texas Department of Aging and administered by the Texas Farmers Union.

The 77-year-old Ms. Maldonado is one of six STEP employees working 20 hours per week at the Casa.

"They're a big help here to us," says Isabel Gonzales, senior citizen activities director for the Casa. "We depend a lot on them."

Ms. Maldonado's husband never worked at jobs that withheld Social Security taxes, so after his death she wasn't eligible for widows' benefits, and she wasn't quite poor enough to qualify for Supplemental Social Security. She also felt isolated, and began to develop a nervous condition.

"The doctor said I needed to be around people," she says. (Born near Stanton and a life-long resident of the area, Ms. Maldonado is more comfortable speaking Spanish than English, so her comments were translated by Martha Garza, a social worker for the Casa.)

First as a volunteer and now as a STEP employee, Ms. Maldonado teaches such crafts as sewing, quilting and pottery to other seniors.

"It helps their arthritis" to work with their hands, she says, and it helps calm their nervousness "as I was calmed."

Ms. Maldonado is a late-comer to the world of salaried employment, but she appreciates not only the money but the idea that someone thinks she is worth paying.

"The salary really makes life meaningful" for STEP employees, says Ms. Garza. "Being paid makes them think they are useful. It keeps them going."

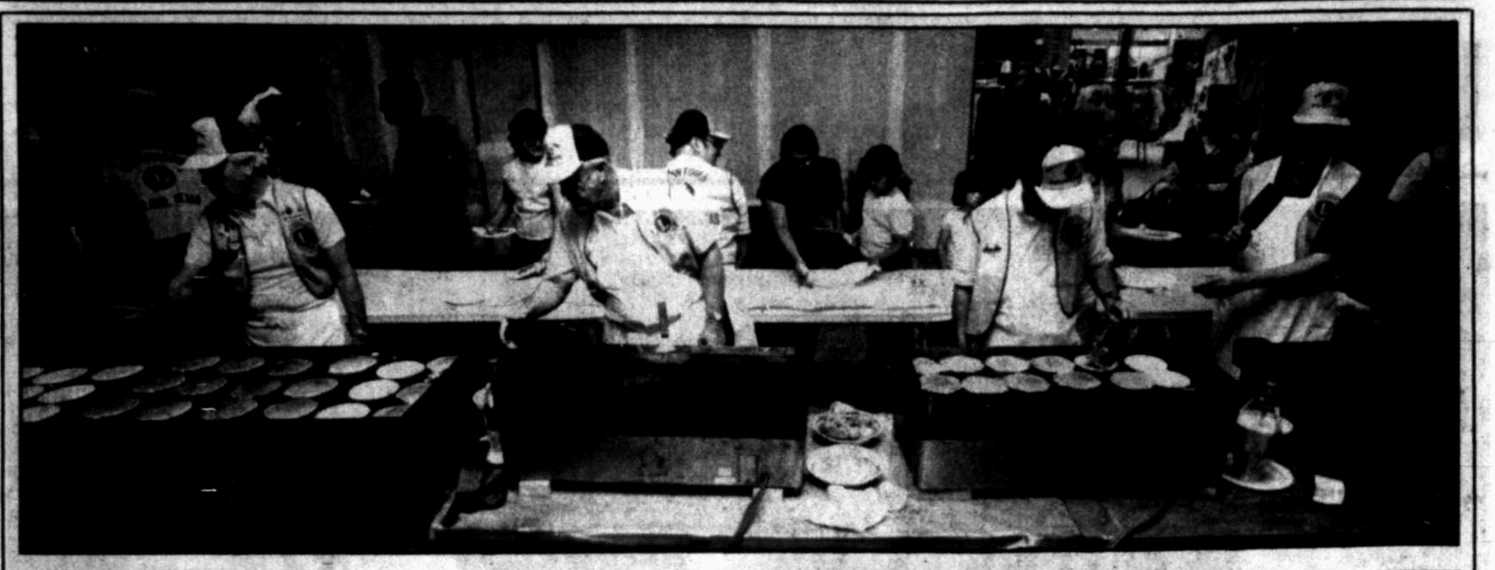

Ms. Maldonado tries to inspire the other seniors at the Casa to maintain a positive attitude.

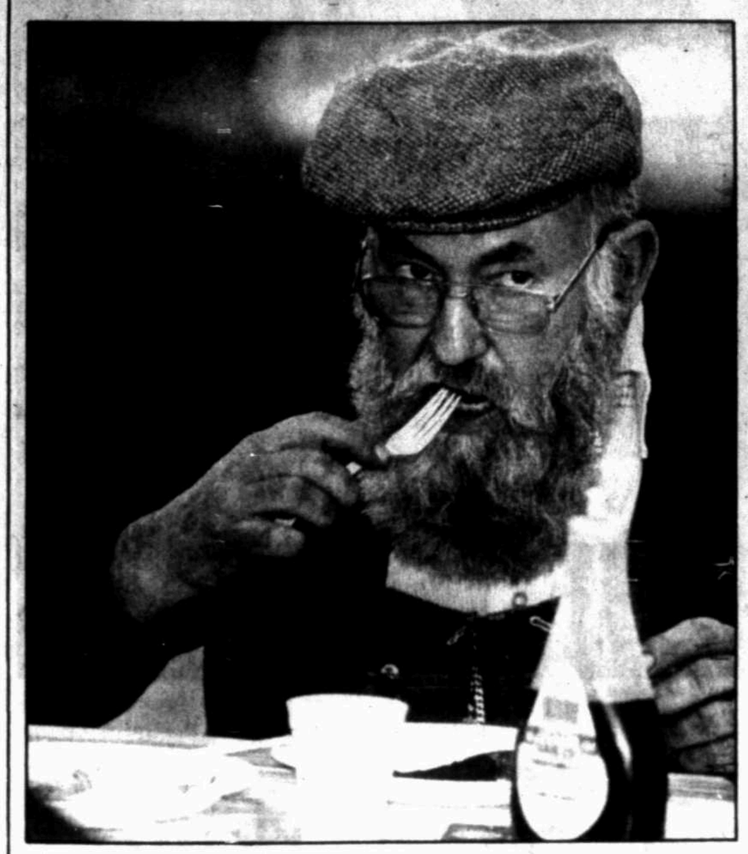

"Sometimes people think they can no longer do things, but they can, and they can lead a productive life," she says. "They shouldn't just lay around."

She gets angry when someone tells her she can't do something because she's old. She had cancer 25 years ago and overcame that, and she's not about to let old age stop her from doing the things she loves, such as dancing.

Most 77-year-olds take a more cautious approach and plan things one day at a time, but this fiesty great-grandmother comes by her optimism naturally: her 102-year-old mother is still living.

"I have a lot of years left," she says.

Pancake party

People lined up at Dellwood Mall Saturday for the Downtown Lions annual pancake feed, which seems to attract more eaters every year. Rusty Gifford, in oversized western hat, greets shoppers and keeps a tally of the number of people who eat pancakes. S.V. Adams, who has been going to Pancake Day for years, takes another mouthful of sausage and pancakes. To serve the public's demands, the Lions cook the pancakes by the dozens.

DEATHS

Lydia K. Wingo

Graveside services for Lydia Katherine Wingo, 69, of Midland were Saturday in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

She died Thursday in a Midland hospital.

Survivors include her husband, Walter M. Wingo of Midland; a stepson, Corbett Estep of Norman, Okla.; a daughter, Laverne Winters of Midland; two brothers, Louie N. Barron of Midland and Eddie Barron of Mesquite; three sisters, Ruth Huggins of Midland, Alice Jones of San Angelo and Loraine Majors of Paris; five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Jeanne M. Bowen

Jeanne M. Bowen, 70, of Midland died Saturday in a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Dr. Ray Riddle, chaplain of Hospice of Midland, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Mrs. Bowen was born Aug. 13, 1914, in Portland, Ore., was reared in Berkeley, Calif., and moved to Monrovia, Calif., in 1940. She was married to Wm. T. Bowen in 1942 in Long Beach, Calif., and moved to Midland in 1953 from Monrovia. She and her husband established Bowen Grocery and Drug Store here.

She was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Jodee Neathery of Plano; a brother, Robert M.W. Smith of Davis, Calif.; two sisters, Marjorie Hughes of Walnut Creek, Calif., and Katherine Henkel of San Luis Obispo, Calif., and a granddaughter, Krissa Neathery of Plano.

Memorials may be directed to the Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702.

Esperanza Ramirez

Esperanza Ramirez, 65, of Austin died Friday while visiting her daughter, Ida Zubiate, in Midland.

Services will be in Austin, and burial will be in Marfa. Local arrangements were by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ramirez was born Sept. 6, 1920, in Marfa, spent most of her life there, moved to El Paso and then to Austin in 1975.

Other survivors include her husband, Willie Ramirez of Austin; her father, Marciano Hernandez of Marfa; two brothers, Merjildo Hernandez of Los Angeles, Calif., and Alfredo Hernandez of Alpine; six sisters, Alice Rivera, Josephina Lujan, Elena Gonzales, Ophelia Sotello and Anita Hernandez, all of Marfa, and Enriqueta Hernandez of El Paso.

CRUISERS

"Take a look around. This is a miniature family reunion. It's where everybody goes to meet each other," the 16-year-old said.

An enterprising Glenn Farmer, added, "If we didn't hang around here, Mr. Gatti's and the Sonic wouldn't survive."

Less enthusiastic merchants refute the argument. Still, they claim to cope as long as the social gathering doesn't get out of hand.

John Wheeler, manager of Midland Park Mall, said, "For the most part, the kids are pretty well behaved. But there are some who get out of hand.

"We don't like to run anybody off, but I think the kids realize that if we get complaints about the noise or if they get too rowdy, our security officers will ask them to leave the premises," he added.

Midland police also take a fairly lenient view of the situation provided they receive no complaints.

The basic complaints among property owners are the noise and broken bottles in the parking lots, according to Capt. Herman Wicker, traffic division commander.

He said the breakage is "a real mess and causes a lot of damage, mainly to tires."

There are extreme examples where police aren't quite so tolerant. One, in particular, occurred March 2 when officers arrested a 17-year-old Lee High School student at Town and Country Shopping Center and charged him with criminal trespass — a Class B misdemeanor.

The criminal trespass law requires property owners to "post signs in conspicuous places stating that unauthorized persons will be prosecuted. Also, they have to sign a letter of intent to prosecute," Wicker said.

In most cases, however, officers on patrol won't bother the youth unless he/she believes they are creating a disturbance. Then they issue warnings which are filed with the police communications department, he explained.

"We don't go looking for them," said Wicker. "But if we catch them again, we'll place them under arrest and haul them in."

Of the recent charges filed against the LHS youth, Wicker noted, "The signs are clearly posted and he was warned."

CHRONICLES

While the railroad made history and was history, the T&P became more than the trade link in the outside world. The depot became the center of Midland social life. Oldtimers remember one of the favorite daily diversions was to go down to the depot and see "who got off and who got on." One Midlander recalls, "It was better than a party line!"

The depot drew even larger crowds whenever the train carried a famous person. The day President Theodore Roosevelt came through Midland, the people were waiting because Roosevelt was scheduled to stop and make a speech. But the train didn't stop, and those who were there recall the famous man standing on the back platform of the train with the large, familiar eyeglasses and the big smile slowly disappearing down the track.

During World War I, townspeople met the troop trains regularly with gifts of food, but during World War II such enthusiasm soon faded, and the trains went on through without stopping.

In 1947, the T&P echoed the increasing growth of the city with construction of a new depot on Front and Main streets. The buff-colored brick building became the center of excited arrivals of friends and relatives from distant cities until the mid-1960s. But in 1967 came the word: "The Texas Railroad Commission released an order yesterday granting permission to halt operations of T&P passenger trains No. 26 and 27."

THERE'S A SAD paradox in the fact that the very railroad which built the towns, gave them names, taught the people how to prosper and provided the link with the outside world was now saying, "Sorry, we aren't selling tickets to your town any more, and you'll have to get from there to the big cities some other way."

Then in 1984, the deteriorating brick depot was torn down. Now only the tracks remain as a visible reminder of the railroad's significance in Midland's history. But at night, when the city is quiet, the sounds of diesel electric locomotives and freight cars specially designed to carry products of this modern age rumble across the wooden ties and send their reverberations through the streets.

As trains pass on through, the sound of the distant whistle reminds us that for almost 100 years the railroad was the most continuous link from Midland to the rest of the country. In a sense, the railroad was the first homesteader here. Without it, Midland's expanding skyline might never have grown beyond the small cabin of a solitary sheepherder.

Centennial Chronicles will appear on this page each Sunday through July 7 in observance of Midland's Centennial. The columns were contributed by local writers in cooperation with the Midland Centennial Commission.

People of our community who make a difference.

Dr. Ray Riddle

Midland is fortunate to have many retired individuals that just keep on serving the community. Dr. Ray Riddle, current chaplain for Midland Hospice, is one of those people.

After serving as associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church for 10 years, Dr. Riddle retired on January 1, 1984. However, one is hard pushed to call it retirement since he began serving as chaplain of Midland Hospice on the first day of his "retirement."

Dr. Riddle says that he really just moved his office. He still counsels with people on a regular basis. His wife credits this to the fact that he is a good listener who is compassionate and non-judgemental. This chaplain, who is rarely found without a kind smile on his face, says that people need to be encouraged to live up to their potential. This, he says, is not accomplished by negative criticism but by helping people feel good about themselves and their tasks.

Such encouragement is an important part of his work at Midland Hospice. Not only does Dr. Riddle try to encourage the individuals for which the program is designed but also the staff at the Hospice.

In addition, this loving minister continues to accept speaking opportunities. Of course, he says, he talks about the Hospice, working together for the benefit of the whole community, Christianity, and his wife, Jane, "the person who really makes a difference."

Such a positive outlook did not just come along with Dr. Riddle's retirement. It's an attitude that he has nourished his whole lifetime. Through the years, whether this minister was serving on the board for the Council on Alcoholism, as president of a children's home, or on the board for the Midland Hospice he had an encouraging word to offer.

Dr. Riddle makes a difference in Midland because he brings a ray of hope.

Tips lead to recovery of property

From Staff Reports

About $3,400 worth of stolen property and $400 worth of narcotics were recovered by Midland Crime Stoppers during the month of February, according to statistics compiled for the month.

Five people giving information that led to the arrest or indictment of felons received a total of $730 in rewards, according to Sgt. David Cobos.

Three felony suspects were arrested in February with the help of tips given the Crime Stoppers Program.

Oscar Ramos, 35, was arrested Feb. 8 on two counts of violation of probation received for burglary. During the arrest, officers with the Midland Police Department and Midland County Sheriff's Office confiscated 20 papers of heroin, valued at $400.

George Smith, 25, was arrested Feb. 14 in connection with a homicide in El Paso County. Crime Stoppers received the tip on Smith's whereabouts and members of the MSO warrant division took him into custody.

Virginia Sue Reynolds, 24, was wanted on three warrants for worthless checks. She was arrested Feb. 4 by the Midland County Constable's Office.

The program, which has been in operation since January 1984, also resulted in the recovery of a 1971 Jeep which was stolen from a city resident in 1983. With the help of a private helicopter, the vehicle, valued at $3,400, was found in a rural field where an informant had said it would be.

Since the program began in Midland, $8,605 in rewards have been paid, $40,221 of stolen property has been recovered and $20,775 in narcotics has been recovered.

Nuclear war movie will be shown

From Staff Reports

The documentary film, "Faith, War and Peace in the Nuclear Age," will be shown at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Unitarian Universalist Church at Midkiff Drive and Neely Avenue in Midland.

The film explores the moral and ethical issues of war and peace from an interfaith perspective. It is being sponsored in part by the Midland Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) and is being presented by Basin Peace and Justice, a non-denominational group dedicated to equal rights, justice and a world free of war and the threat of war, according to Friend Mike Gray of Midland.

Viewpoints in the film are expressed by:

David Brower, founder of Friends of the Earth; U.S. Navy Rear Admiral (ret.) Eugene Carroll, deputy director of the Center for Defense Information in Washington, D.C.; The Rev. William Creevey of the United Presbyterian Task Force on Peacemaking; Rabbi Lester Frazin, secretary of the Pacific Association of Reform Rabbis; Molly Fumia of the Peace Task Force, Catholic Diocese of San Jose, Calif.; Catholic Bishop Thomas Gumbleton, president of Bread for the World; Katherine Kidd, secretary for Social Concerns, Lutheran Church in America; The Rev. James Lawson, chair of the Los Angeles Southern Christian Leadership Conference and a Methodist minister; Eileen Purcell, community organizer, Latin Refugee Program of Catholic Social Services, San Francisco, Calif.; and Bishop Francis Quinn of the Catholic Diocese of Sacramento, Calif.

THIS WEEK IN GOVERNMENT

Council to discuss Midkiff Road work

Midland City Council has set aside 2 p.m. Tuesday as the time the members will hear comments from the public about the proposed improvements of Midkiff Road ranging from Golf Course Road to Neely Avenue.

This will be part of the council meeting that will start at 10 a.m. in City Hall Council Chambers.

At the Feb. 26 meeting, the council approved the staff to advertise for bids on rebuilding Midkiff between Neely and Golf Course and adding two right turn lanes at Golf Course and three at Neely. To put in the right turn lanes, the city will have to take some of the right of way it owns at the side of each street.

The council also will consider approving an airfield lighting operation agreement with the Federal Aviation Administration for Midland Regional Airport and awarding a contract for taxiway construction at the airport. A lease agreement may be changed from Abbott Building Company to Chuck A. Davis.

Budget amendments and transferring funds in the 1983-84 budget will be considered.

Also to be discussed are the annual accident report, disposition of Steakout International's request for a sidewalk license, a request for an exemption from a three-day time limit on a peddler's license, a request from Hoffbrau Steak to conduct a concert at Hogan Park, an authorization of the "position analyst questionnaire" regarding the personnel system and a resolution to add a warrant office and a records clerk at Municipal Court.

Agenda items include:

— Consider approval of the Architectural Committee's recommendation for the renovation of Alamo Junior High School.

— Consider approval of a proposed pilot project for the early identification of gifted students.

— Hear a report concerning exit level testing required by House Bill 72.

— Consider approval, on second reading, revisions in board policy regarding the "generic" job description of faculty personnel.

— Consider recommendations of the Textbook Adoption Committee.

— Cast ballots for the election of director for the Region 18 Education Service Center.

— Hear a report concerning changes in state revenue for the 1985-86 academic year.

Midland Independent School District

The Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet in regular session at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Central Administration Office board room, 702 N. "N" St.

County Commissioners Court

The Midland County Commissioners' Court will consider a resolution on possible Texas legislation which would require counties to collect additional funds for the state in its 9 a.m. Monday meeting in the Midland County Courthouse.

In other business, the commissioners are to:

—Discuss planting flowers around the courthouse for the 1985 Centennial.

—Discuss a postal service with C.B. Traweek.

—Consider a request by the Midland Amateur Radio Club to use the Midland County Exhibit Building from March 13-16, 1986.

CANKER AND MOUTH SORES

Millions of men, women and children regularly suffer the annoyance and discomfort of mouth and canker sores. While the exact cause has not been determined, research is underway to expand our knowledge of their origin and possible treatment. Canker sores generally last from one to twenty-one days, tend to be recurrent and rarely leave scars. Canker sores are also known by the medical term "aphthous stomatitis". They are tiny round or oval ulcers and are usually grayish white with a bright red ridge. They form inside the mouth and frequently appear in groups. "Herpes simplex" is a completely different disease than aphthous stomatitis. Although it may occasionally look like a canker sore, herpes simplex is now known to be an unrelated viral infection. Canker sores can be soothed with medication.

Many conditions can be soothed with medication, and whether that medication is by prescription from your doctor, or over-the-counter, we can serve all your needs here at SERVICE DRUG OF MIDLAND, A & Scharbauer (682-2519). When you stop in here, we're glad to do a free blood pressure check, and we're also here to consult about diabetic problems. Those are just some of the ways we show our concern. We're open Mon.-Sat. 8-7. Mastercard/Visa

HINT:
Canker sores can be triggered by changes in body chemistry, stress and emotions.

"A free offer to people who think they'd rather smoke than switch to Muse Air."

—M. Lamar Muse

If you're a heavy smoker, I'll give you a one-way ticket, anywhere we fly, for two measly packs of cigarettes.

Sound crazy?

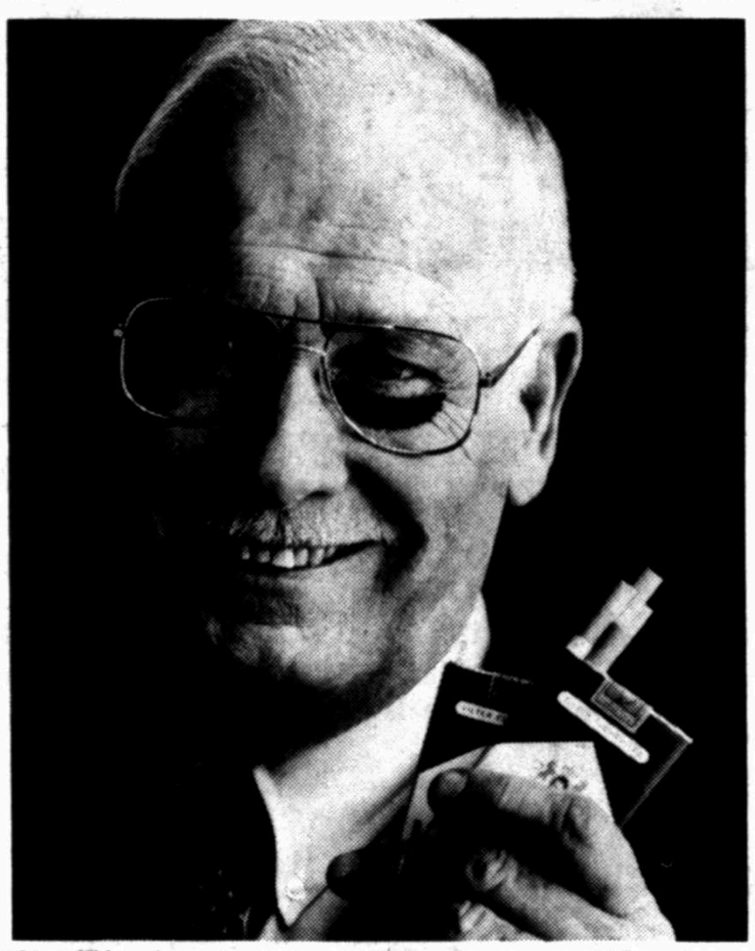

Not really. In the past, I've taken a few punches because of Muse Air's non-smoking policy. Would you believe it? Some smokers seem to think it's against the law to fly us.

Let me assure you, it ain't.

I want smokers to try us.

Pick a destination and time you want to fly, anytime this Monday or Tuesday. Then come to the appropriate Muse Air gate, sign a form stating you smoke at least two packs a day, and hand over your two packs. (Note: Passengers holding reservations will not be eligible for this offer.)

To the extent seats are available, we'll give you a one-way boarding pass on a first-come, first-served basis.

"If you'll hand over two packs of your favorite cigarette, I'll hand over a one-way ticket on what I hope will become your favorite airline."
—M. Lamar Muse

Of course, you'll have to buy your own return ticket, and we'd like to think you'd fly Muse Air. But even if you don't, we'd welcome the direct comparison.

Oil painting, skin care among Midland College's courses

EDUCATION

"Oil Painting" and "Natural Skin Care and Cosmetics" are among the many courses being offered by the Midland College Department of Community Services beginning March 25.

"Stained Glass II" will meet from 7-10 p.m. Mondays, March 25-May 6. The course will offer instruction in the design and construction of a leaded panel complete with rebar, weatherproofing and installation. Prerequisite: Stained Glass I or equivalent. A supply and equipment list is available on the first class meeting. The class is limited to 16 students and the fee is $27.

"Oil Painting" will meet from 6:30-9 p.m. Monday, March 25-May 6. Students will participate in oil painting and concentrate on the use of materials and application of varied techniques. The course is designed for the beginner as well as the experienced painter. An explanation of materials and a demonstration are planned for the first class meeting. Material costs will vary according to the needs of individual students. The class is limited to 16 students and the fee is $24.

"English/Second Language Level I" will meet from 9-11 a.m. Monday-Thursday, March 26-May 23; and from 7-9 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, March 26-May 22. Level I — beginning English — will provide students with the ability to function in an English-speaking environment. The course is offered at no charge to the public.

"English/Second Language Level II" will meet from 9-11 a.m. Monday-Thursday, March 26-May 23. A second session will meet from 7-9 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, March 26-May 22. Level II — intermediate English — will provide students with the ability to advance from a need oriented vocabulary and develop greater fluency of the language. The course is offered at no charge to the public.

"English/Second Language III" will meet from 9-11 a.m Monday-Thursday, March 26-23. Another section will meet from 7-9 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, March 26-May 22. Level III — advanced English — will provide the non-native English-speaking student with the skills required to pursue vocational or academic goals. The course is offered at no charge to the public.

"Typing Brushup" will meet from 8:30-9:50 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, March 26-May 7. The course is designed to familiarize students with all aspects of the electric typewriter including keyboards, machine parts, typing techniques and tabulation. Speed and accuracy tests are conducted during each session. A prior typing course is required. A textbook and typing paper are required on the first class meeting. The class is limited to 25 students and the fee is $36.

"Natural Skin Care and Cosmetics" will meet from 8-9 p.m. Tuesday, March 26-April 23. Students will learn basic skin care techniques including aids to prevent wrinkles and recipes for creating cosmetics and potpourris. Students must enroll one week prior to the beginning of the class. The class is limited to 25 students and the fee is $25 including the cost of supplies.

"Aerobic Dancing" will meet from 7-8:30 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, March 26-May 7. Students will be directed toward increasing cardiovascular endurance, decreasing body fat, increasing stamina and improving body tone. Exercise and dance movements accompanied by disco, ballroom and ballet music are included in the course. Students should wear comfortable clothing. The class is limited to 60 students and the fee is $27.

"Introduction to Horse Psychology" will meet from 7-8 p.m. Tuesday, March 26-April 16. The course is designed for riders, owners, breeders, trainers or individuals who are interested in horses. The intent of the course will be to lessen the difficulties of understanding between man and horse. Fee for the course is $12.

"Crochet" will meet from 7-9 p.m. Wednesday, March 27-May 1. Students will receive complete instruction in art of crochet including terminology, various stitches, yarns, threads and needles. A supply list is available at the Community Services office. Supplies cost approximately $5 and the fee for the course is $18.

"Tole Paining II" will meet from 7-10 p.m. Thursday, March 28-May 2. Designed for students with tole painting experience, the course will begin with a brief review of basic procedures and will advance to more difficult designs and objects. Supplies are estimated at $10. The course is limited to 15 students and the fee is $27.

Further information on these and other short courses may be obtained by calling the Department of Community Services at 684-7851, extensions 216 or 147.

Estate officials resign

HOUSTON (AP) — Two senior officials of the scandal-ridden Hermann Hospital Estate resigned in what their attorneys called a "housecleaning" of the charity trust.

Charles Stricklin, director of development, and Ray Valdez, vice president in charge of building operations, presented letters of resignation Friday to estate President E. Don Walker.

YMCA announces new classes

From Staff Reports

The YMCA announced the new classes for dance and swimming and the beginning of softball season, all to start in March.

"Jazz Dance for the beginner", will begin Monday and run through April 17 at the Midland Central YMCA. The class will be taught by Judy Coleman, who recently moved from New York City, where she was involved with the Radio City Music Hall Corps de Ballet, Macy's Thanksgiving Parade and Le Coq D'Or for Houston and San Antonio Opera Festivals.

The class will meet Mondays and Wedensdays, 9:30-10:30 a.m.

The Alamo YMCA is now taking registration for its spring swimming classes. the next session will begin Monday and run for four weeks.

Classes included co-ed adult for those who would like to exercise with their spouse; parents and tots, for parents who want to teach their children basic water skills and safety; tadpole classes for children ages three to five; progressive swimming lessons, for children six and up and ladies only swim class.

Co-ed classes will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7:15-8:15 p.m. and parents and tots, on the same days from 6-6:30 p.m. Tadpole lessons will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays from 10:15-10:45 a.m. and the progressive lessons on Tuesdays and Thursdays, 3:45-4:30 p.m.

Ladies only will be on Mondays and Wednesdays from 10-11a.m. A YMCA membership is not required for the swimming classes.

The pool also is available for party rental at various times during the day and evenings year round. All clubs, church organizations and schools are encouraged to call for information regarding rental times.

The YMCA also is taking registration for their 1985 softball season-Monday at all locations.

PeeWee softball is offered for grades K-3. Parents will play alongside their children and offer help and encouragement.

Girl's softball, for grades three through six also is offered.

YMCA members' fee is $10; nonmembers is $20. The fee inclues a YMCA youth sports shirt. Players need to furnish baseball glove and tennis shoes.

For more information, call any Midland YMCA.

MHS classes '54-56 will hold reunion

The 1954, 1955 and 1956 graduating classes of Midland High School will have their 30-year class reunion June 29th with a dance and party at Greentree Country Club.

The classes have held reunions every five years since graduating from MHS.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Students, faculty to participate in 'Western Days'

By H.A. TUCK

Classes resume again Monday after the college's spring break, and the calendar really looks busy for this week.

The next five days are "Western Week," so students and employees alike dress in their Western duds, pretending to be cowboys, cowgirls, dancehall girls, and sheriffs. The MC Chaparral Rodeo Club takes a lead in this celebration, but everyone joins in.

There'll be horse races and goat-tying events...with real goats and stick horses. Some folks, who seem to have shifty looks or don't wear Western attire, will spend time in jail. Western movies will be shown in the Student Center and a good time will be had by all!

• • •

Midland Eagles are bringing a circus to town Monday, with performances at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. in the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center. Tickets are being sold by the Eagles, or they can be purchased at Chap Center.

• • •

An interesting art exhibit opens Monday at the McCormick Gallery in the Allison Fine Arts Building. It's a presentation of about 40 works done by graduate students from the Universty of Texas at San Antonio.

This exhibit remains on display through March 29, and should art enthusiasts an idea about some of the contemporary thinking on art in the late 20th Century.

McCormick Gallery is open Sundays from 1-5 p.m., Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Fridays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

• • •

Dr. Michael Jordan, coordinator of vocal music, and Janice Archer, adjunct vocal instructor, are presenting a free duet concert in the Allison auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday. Jordan, a baritone, and Ms. Archer, a soprano, have planned a program of classical duets which they'll be singing in German, French, Italian, and English.

The public is invited to the free concert and reception which follows.

• • •

Spring is the time of year folks start thinking about remodeling and changing their housing. Before they do anything else, they should visit the Chap Center Friday through Sunday, March 15-17, for a huge Home Show. Included will be all sorts of items for your home, yard and surroundings.

The show will be open Friday from 3-9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. There is a small admittance fee.

• • •

Chap Center also is to be the site of two concerts this month. "Petra", a Christian rock music group, is performing on Tuesday, March 26, at 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale only at area Christian bookstores.

The following night, March 27, Tom Jones is returing for his second appearance in Midland. Tickets for his show are available at the Chap Center boxoffice or at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa.

I really like the promotions group's name for "Petra". It's called "Petrified Productions"!

• • •

Chaparral golfers tee it up Monday and Tuesday in San Angelo at the Angelo State Invitational.

• • •

And the MC tennis teams really have to watch the calendars and watches this week to make sure they are in the right place at the right time.

It starts in Odessa Tuesday, when the Chaps take on the Odessa College men and women at OC in the Chaparral's first conference matches. OC already has a couple of conference dual meets under its belt.

Thursday, the Chaps have both their teams in action at Arlington agaist UT-Arlington. Friday, the men play Northern Illinois at Arlington in the morning and the women play TCU at Fort Worth that afternoon.

Saturday morning the women go against Cooke County Community College from Gainesville in Arlington. Cooke is one of the man state junior college tennis powerhouses.

They'll finsih up next Sunday when the women play Southwest Missouri and UT-Arlington, both in Arlington.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

Kentucky Fried Chicken & KNFM 92 CONTINUOUS COUNTRY MUSIC

"Congratulations to the Winners!"

The awards were presented at the New Kentucky Fried Chicken location on North Big Spring in Midland.

Kentucky Fried Chicken and KNFM Radio recently held a drawing to determine the winners of several footballs, KFC Chicken Buckets and a Basketball Autographed by members of the Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins Football Teams. The Cowboys and Redskins were in Midland recently for The "Scalp The Skins" Basketball Game at the Chaparral Center. Almost seven thousand dollars was raised at the basketball game benefiting Special Olympics.

MAKING THE GRADE

Melissa Collier

Shauna Fullen

The American Association of University Women selected Melissa Collier and Shauna Fullen as Outstanding Students for January and February respectively.

Miss Collier, daughter of Richard D. and Janet Collier, is a senior at Lee High School where she is a National Merit Scholarship semi-finalist; member of National Honor Society and listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students. She also is the recipient of the National Leadership and Service Award and the National Science Merit Award.

Miss Fullen, daughter of Terry and Donna Fullen, is a senior at Midland High School where she is a member of the varsity tennis team and earned three athletic letters. She also is a member of Junior Classical League, National Honor Society, Student Council President's Cabinet and social chairman and Young Life.

AUSTIN — The University of Texas at Austin awarded 242 bachelor's degrees in the College of Communication at the close of the 1984 fall semester. The list of graduates includes the following Midland students:

Karen Beth Mosley, 3304 Cord; and Stephen Lane Floyd, 1510 Princeton Ave.

ABILENE — Four students from Midland were named to the Dean's Honor Roll at Abilene Christian University for the 1984 fall semester. They include:

Nancy K. Archer, daughter of A.R. Archer Jr., 1201 Douglas, and Thelma Burnett of Austin; Rex Thane Akins, son of Thane and Jean Akins, 2912 N. I St.; Tod Brown, son of Dale and Rita Brown, 3625 Hyde Park; and Tommy Pollard, son of Bryan and Georgeann Pollard, 3100 Shell.

WACO — Gregory Haines Bevel, 2301 W. Shandon, is one of 30 law students who recently received juris doctor degrees from Baylor University.

LUBBOCK — Mary Ann Ayres, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Ayres, 4208 Greenbriar, is the recipient of a $500 scholarship provided by the Weymouth Corp. of Amarillo. She is a graduate student at Texas Tech University.

HANOVER, N.H. — Karen N. Eggleston, daughter of David and Helen Eggleston, 1605 W. Tennessee, has been cited by a Dartmouth College professor of Russian for outstanding academic achievement during the past term. She is a 1984 graduate of Midland High School.

Lee High School student Laura Renick was awarded a round trip to Belgium this summer as a third place overall individual winner in the Texas French Symposium. The contest was held recently in Pasadena.

Miss Renick and other French students from Lee and Midland High schools competed with students from 48 Texas high schools in the contest. She took the high honor for outstanding performances in five categories winning first place in levels IV and V extemporaneous speaking; second place, vocabulary; second place, listening comprehension; third place, dramatic interpretation; and fifth place, poetry.

Other LHS students earning honors were Martin Scott, third place, dramatic interpretation; Jeff Edman, first place, Level I prepared speech and Level I prose; Tom Farris, fifth place, art; and Cathy Green and Yolanda Reyes, finals Level II poetry.

MHS students earning honors include Drina Boban, fourth place, Level II grammar, third place, vocabulary, and finals, prose; Sharon Graham, fourth place, Level III listening comprehension, fifth place, vocabulary, and finals, poetry, prose and extemporaneous speaking; and Amy Black, finals, extemporaneous speaking.

Joe Eldridge, Kim Cohlmia and Craig Cunningham are among students in the Midland Independent School District to earn 4.0 grade averages for the past term. Eldrige and Miss Cohlmia attend Lee High School. Cunningham is a student at Midland High School.

Twenty five Lee Freshman English students recently received recognition as Merit Scholars by the United States Achievement Academy. They area:

Donnie Artley, Alan Brown, Jorge Chaves, Brent Elliott, Dudley Jordan, Cregg McGaha, Ryan Paul, Paul Pickering, Geoff Rich, Jason Smith, Steven Wade, Cody Whitlow, Amy Bozarth, Rhonda Brice, Traci Dawkins, Christa Gilbreath, Staci Glenn, Lynne Granberry, Shannon Hatfield, Samta Khandelwal, Kelly King, Kristen Knebel, Lisa Schwamkrug and Ami Smith.

An additional NEMA will be presented to the following eight students selected in the Creative Writing category: Rhonda Brice, Alan Brown, Traci Dawkins, Staci Glenn, Samta Khandelwal, Kelly King, Geoff Rich and Dinah Smith.

Midlanders William F. Purcell and Nira A. Sharma are among seven area high school youth awarded scholarships by the Permian Honor Scholarship Foundation Inc. The funding will enable the students to attend Midland College for two years and complete bachelor degrees at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

WACO — Four Midlanders were among 637 students at Baylor University to be named to the Dean's List for the 1984 fall semester. They include:

Rebecca A. Caton, 50 Carnation; Julie A. Gallagher, 2418 Apperson; Catherine Montgomery, 3712 Fairhaven Court; and Susan E. Pullig, rural Midland.

FORT WORTH — Katherine Boyle, 4467 Hackberry Court, is among students recently initiated into Alpha Epsilon Delta pre-medical/-pre-dental honor society.

The Search for Excellence ends at Don Harvey, Realtors

As you can see, many of Midland's more successful real estate associates are with Don Harvey, Realtors. This fact is profound but not surprising. Performance is expected at Don Harvey.

When asked, the associates who were also honored by the Midland Board of Realtors as million and multi-million dollar producers, would talk about the long hours. The mountains of paperwork. Studying regulations and financing. Cool-headed negotiation and an obsession to satisfy buyer and seller. Ask a Don Harvey client and they'll say it's just plain hard work by just plain good people.

VDT-related health problems growing concern

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

They are barely noticed anymore.

It's difficult to find a business or office setting that doesn't have video display terminals, known to the users as VDTs. The normally green-screened device with keyboard today keeps travelers on schedule, balances bank accounts, analyzes football plays for professional teams and even keeps children occupied.

They're ubiquitous.

And yet, there is growing concern by some people that VDTs may be a serious health threat to the millions of Americans who work with them.

"There is definitely a problem," said C.E. Zimmerman, a Midland optometrist. "I've been getting more and more people over the years complaining of eye problems.

"THEY TEND to get more nearsighted due to eyestrain," he said.

Another optometrist agrees.

"The people I see tell me that they think that it's the VDTs that have worsened their vision," said James Carpenter.

But according to Nine to Five, (the National Association of Working Women), the health threat involves more than eye strain.

Musculoskeletal problems, miscarriages and abnormal births are major concerns, according to Debra Meyer, public information officer for the Cleveland, Ohio group.

"There has been several workmen's compensation cases that have resulted in rather large settlements to people who work with VDTs," said Ms. Meyer.

One woman who was employed with a Michigan insurance firm was awarded $14,000 in damages in 1984, she said.

"She had been working for eight hours a day with VDTs and had noticed her wrist turning black and blue," said Ms. Meyer. "She saw a doctor who diagnosed it as carpal tunnel, a serious wrist inflammation and told her that it was probably caused by using improper VDT equipment."

The condition worsened, according to Nine to Five's reports.

"THE WOMAN eventually asked for a transfer to an area that would not involve using a VDT and was denied," said Ms. Meyer. "She then asked for personal leave to have surgery done and was, again, refused.

"She finally wound up getting surgery on both wrists and lost the complete use of one hand," she said. "She finally quit the job and moved."

According to Ms. Meyer, one other woman from the same company also had the same affliction and received $6,000 in damages through workmen's compensation.

The carpal tunnel diagnosis and other muscloskeletal problems associated with the use of VDTs, such as neck and back strain, are a result of outdated equipment and improper uses of newer equipment, said Ms. Meyer.

"Old equipment, with a non-detachable keyboard and a terminal that doesn't adjust in heighth can cause harm. If you can't tilt the screen and move the keyboard, than you can wind up with cramped muscles after awhile. If the lighting is bad and causes glare, then eye strain can result.

"Many people think that more rest breaks are required when using a VDT — maybe even as much as 15 minutes every hour," she said.

Still another health problem, contends Nine to Five, is the threat that VDTs may hold for pregnant women.

"NINE TO FIVE set up a hot line in 1983 and conducted a six-month study of a large number of working women who used VDTs and who later had miscarriages," said Ms. Meyer. "There appeared to be several 'clusters' of miscarriages, which we asked the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health to look into it."

One case was particulary astounding, according to Ms. Meyer.

"There was a unique situation with the United Airlines operations in San Francisco," she said. "There were 40 pregnancies and one-half of them were abnormal.

"When you consider that the 'normal' miscarriage rate is 10 to 15 percent — well, that's twice as high as the upper end of the normal spectrum."

The United Airlines situation is still being studied by NIOSH, according to Ms. Meyer. "They will announce a study on VDTs and pregnancies some time this month."

While groups like Nine to Five and NIOSH and individuals who have filed for workmen's compensation appear confident that VDTs pose a serious health threat, others are either not convinced or have not encountered VDT-related afflictions.

"I haven't had any complaints," said Dr. James Humphreys, a Midland gynecologist-obstetrician.

Nor have some local companies reported any VDT-related health problems among their employees.

"No, we haven't had any problem with it," said Jerry King of First City National Bank. "I know that there has been talk about them posing health problems, but we haven't seen any here."

Another Midland bank had a similar report.

"There have been no complaints of VDT-related illnesses," said Jane Simonitsch of RepublicBank First National Midland.

A publication from the American Council on Science and Health appears to support local reports that VDTs pose no serious threat.

"THERE IS NO scientific evidence indicating that VDTs cause birth defects or miscarriages," said the report. ACSH reported their findings on a "hot line" set up by Nine to Five, in which 'only 32 percent of pregnant callers reported normal pregnancies.'"

"While this percentage may appear frightening at first glance, it is actually meaningless and does not necessarily indicate a real link between VDT use and pregnancy problems," said the report.

"People who are not experiencing difficulties rarely call hot lines. It is to be expected that a high percentage of the people who call the VDT hot line would have types of problems 'linked' with VDT use by rumor and the popular press."

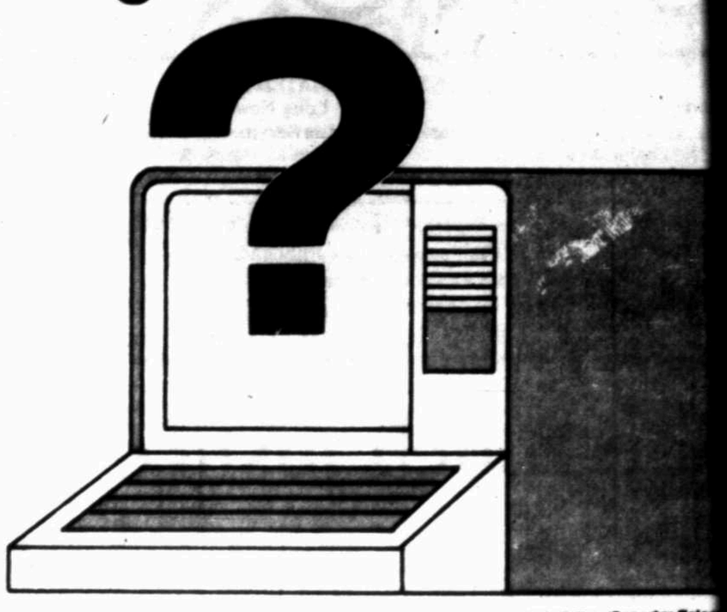

The ACSH does acknowledge some correlation between musculoskeletal and visual problems and VDTs, but considers it temporary.

"While VDT work has not been shown to lead to permanent visual damage, many operators report temporary visual discomfort and musculoskeletal symptoms such as shoulder, back and neck pain," said the report.

The ACSH blames "poor VDT design, inadequate VDT maintenance, poor work station design, inappropriate illumination, glare, excessively long periods of uninterrupted VDT work, inadequately corrected vision, or the wearing of corrective lenses that are inappropriate for VDT work."

Nine to Five maintains, however, that it is too early to discount the VDT threat.

"There has been no in-depth research on it," said Ms. Meyer. "For any doctor to say that there is no problem is irresponsible. You have to study things before you say that there is no problem."

Too much justice

Two years ago when Chief Justice Warren E. Burger recommended that an experimental national court be established to reduce the appeals burden on the Supreme Court, we had our doubts. After all, the Supreme Court was intended to be a court of last resort and, frankly, creating another level of the judiciary didn't really seem like the answer.

In the interim the Congress hasn't picked up on Burger's idea and now a study by two New York University law professors has substantiated what we originally suspected: That the Supreme Court's backlog is largely its own fault.

Samuel Estreicher and John Sexton said in their study that 39 of the 165 cases the court agreed to hear in its 1982-83 term represented a waste of time. The law professors said, "Nearly one-fourth of the cases decided by the United States Supreme Court have no legitimate claim on the court's time or energy."

Despite the fact that five of the nine justices on the high court have been complaining of their workload, the professors said the fact the court is overburdened is no indication of a need for a major structural change.

What is the solution? Simple, say the professors. The court doesn't have to hear all the cases it's now accepting and has the authority to determine which cases it will hear. The other cases should be left to "percolate" in the lower courts.

Then the study went to the point of giving attorneys heartburn with the assertion that merely because a case may have been decided wrongly by a lower court is not sufficient reason for the Supreme Court to get involved.

There are, of course, situations which will mandate the Supreme Court's action. It is, after all, that final pillar of justice in the nation. But the study has merit in that it gives valuable advice to the justices: Don't accept more than you can handle. The justices can — and should — do that, of course. They can do it through a more stringent screening process.

Justice is precious. Justice overburdened with trivia is injustice.

Women and politics

American women are staging a quiet revolution on the political front. More and more of them are running for public office and getting elected, especially on the state and local levels.

The size of this history-making development is demonstrated by the fact that 43 women now hold elective office in state governments. Two are governors, one in Kentucky and one in Vermont, and five are lieutentant governors. The office of secretary of state and state treasurer also are part of this revolutionary picture with 11 women serving in each category.

State legislatures no longer are the sole province of the male population. In 1975 only 8 percent of lawmakers in the 50 states were females, but in 1984, women gained 100 seats to increase their share of the total to 15 percent.

Another little known fact is that women are marching steadily into mayors' offices. They are chiefs of municipalities in 90 cities with a population of 30,000 or more.

Women also get defeated. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kansas, one of two of her sex in the U.S. Senate, was the only one of 10 women senatorial nominees who was elected. Only a cynic would say the other nine were defeated because they were women. This is not only a period of equal opportunity but a period of equal risk.

Another View:

Get the lead out

The Environmental Protection Agency has concluded that the evidence linking lead in gasoline to human ailments is so compelling that it has significantly advanced its timetable for phasing out the fuel additive. Beginning July 1 the lead content of "regular" gasoline must be cut more than 50 percent, and by the beginning of next year the reduction will amount to 90 percent. By 1988 leaded gasoline may be entirely prohibited. All this, says EPA Administrator Lee Thomas, could raise gasoline refining costs by about 2 cents a gallon. But the public health gains will more than offset any price increase.

Why should leaving something out of gasoline raise its costs? Because lead is the cheapest way to boost the energy value of gasoline, and without it the refining process needed to get suitable octane levels becomes more complicated and so more costly. As it happens, most cars sold in the United States since 1975 have been required to operate on unleaded fuel only, as a clean-air measure. Engines built to run on leaded fuel are thus a steadily disappearing breed. One problem is that a lot of newer cars — the EPA estimates 16 percent — have had their anti-pollution equipment made ineffective by motorists who cheat at the pump and buy generally cheaper leaded fuel. A ban on leaded gasoline should also eliminate that problem.

The EPA figures that 80 percent of the lead in air comes from gasoline, and the health effects of this environmental pollution are far-reaching. Children are particularly at risk, with lead exposure linked to unusual incidences of mental retardation, anemia and kidney disorders. Now two recent studies, which the EPA emphasizes cannot yet be considered conclusive, have associated elevated lead levels in the blood with high blood pressure among white males in the 40-59 age group. The cutback on leaded gasoline, according to the EPA, should mean that next year only half as many children — 172,000 — will suffer lead poisoning. And it could mean that 1.8 million men will be relieved of high blood pressure.

Lead poisoning is a danger almost as old as civilization. Though its health effects are now clearly understood, avoidable lead pollution continues to be tolerated. The EPA move is welcome and, from all medical evidence, long overdue.

U.S. sees new spirit in India

WASHINGTON — India and the United States — the world's two largest democracies — have had their political disagreements over the years. American politicians have been dismayed at India's determined neutrality in the U.S.-Soviet struggle; Indian leaders can't understand why the United States insists that every nation choose sides in the rivalry.

Jack Anderson

These geopolitical differences may never be resolved. But the policy gap between India and the United States may be bridgeable at least in the area of technical, scientific and commercial cooperation. And that might lead someday to improved relations in the political sphere.

This is the cautiously optimistic view of American and Indian officials interviewed by my associate Indy Badhwar on a recent tour of the Indian subcontinent.

It is also reportedly the position of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who recently paid a low-profile visit to New Delhi bearing a message for Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi from President Reagan. According to diplomatic sources, Kissinger came away both impressed and enthused by India's new leader.

Kissinger reportedly gave Gandhi assurances of close U.S. support and cooperation — provided only that India refrain from anything that might seriously embarrass the United States in the eyes of the world.

His pilgrimage was accepted graciously by the Indians, who knew full well that it was Kissinger who engineered the infamous American "tilt" toward Pakistan, India's blood enemy, during the Bangladesh crisis of 1971.

New Delhi's realization of Kissinger's Metternichean handiwork caused relations between India and the United States to sink to an all-time low.

"This visit was Henry's 'mea culpa,'" one diplomat told my associate.

After years of mutual suspicion, a measure of cordiality was restored following the 1982 visit to Washington of the late Indian prime minister, Indira Gandhi.

Now her son, Rajiv, riding a wave of popularity at home evidenced by his recent electoral landslide, is scheduled to visit here in June.

An atmosphere of conviviality has already grown up over Rajiv's visit, but serious problems remain. The principal one is the continuing, multi-billion-dollar U.S. aid to Pakistani dictator Mohammad Zia ul-Haq. Rajiv will try to explain to Reagan and his advisers that as long as India feels threatened by Pakistan, it will be forced to continue its relationship with the Soviets as a counterweight to Pakistan's ambitions.

American diplomats said Indian officials privately acknowledged that the United States is not intentionally trying to create problems for India with its aid to Pakistan but that the assistance is intended to counter Soviet encroachment.

But the Indians also point out that their displeasure over strengthening their enemy, Zia, is hardly irrational. They note that Pakistan has used its American weapons against Indian troops in three wars between the two contentious neighbors.

The answer to this dilemma, according to American diplomats, is to keep India strong and stable enough to work out a closer bilateral modus vivendi with Pakistan. They see such a development as serving the interests not just of the subcontinent but of the United States and the whole world.

The Kremlin, of course, has not been sitting idly by. Rajiv has been invited to visit Moscow this spring, before he comes to Washington. The best guess is that if the Soviets perceive a growing pro-American tilt on Rajiv's part, they will take steps to stir up trouble. One possibility would be to increase pressure on Pakistan from Afghanistan, in hopes of forcing the United States to beef up its aid to Pakistan and thus offend India.

Hoping to forestall such a situation, American diplomats have been trying to assure the Indians that U.S. military aid to Pakistan gives Washington valuable leverage with Zia, particularly in dissuading him from building a nuclear bomb — perhaps India's greatest single fear.

One of the more sensitive differences between India and the United States has been New Delhi's apparent indifference to Soviet aggression in Afghanistan. The Indians have resolutely declined to share the Americans' alarm over the Soviet presence there.

But that attitude appears to be slowly changing. From what was essentially no position at all — a stance that Washington interpreted as pro-Soviet — Indian officials now agree with the United States that the Soviets should get out of Afghanistan, and that the longer they stay and become entrenched, the more they threaten India's strategic interests.

But the two countries still disagree on the means to achieve a Soviet withdrawal. The United States maintains that the best strategy is to keep pressure on the Russians by sending arms to the Afghan guerrillas — and to Pakistan. The Indians don't buy this approach. They think the best way to get the Soviets to quit is through negotiations between Pakistan and the Soviet puppet regime of Babrak Karmal in Kabul.

GEORGE F. WILL

Reagan style difficult to copy

WASHINGTON — Gary Hart is not doing justice to the cinnamon toast submitted by the Senate kitchen, perhaps because he wanted to be taking breakfast 16 blocks west. It is March 4, precisely one year since David Broder filed this lead paragraph to the Washington Post:

"Sen. Gary Hart (D-Colo.) won the Maine Democratic presidential caucuses tonight, dealing a serious and possibly fatal blow to Walter F. Mondale's prospects for winning the nomination."

George F. Will

Today, Hart is required to think about Meeker, Rifle, Pagosa Springs and other Colorado communities. His term ends in 1986. In 1980 he barely won re-election (by fewer than 20,000 votes out of 1.1 million). If he runs in 1986, he will have to raise $3 million and work like a dray horse. And if he wins, which is far from certain, he probably will do so with no more than 53 percent of the vote.

After Hubert Humphrey lost the 1968 presidential contest, he went home and won a Senate seat. When Walter Mondale left the vice presidency in 1980, he decided against seeking a Minnesota seat in 1982 and instead became a professional Washingtonian. In 1984, that showed.

For a senator who has tried to become President, it can be hard to convince constituents that he still has his heart in being a senator. Hart seems to like the Senate and sounds mildly sincere when he says he prefers Georgetown, Colo., to Georgetown in Washington. But whether or not he runs in 1988, he will run in 1988.

In 1988, for the first time in 20 years, an incumbent President will not be in the contest. John Sears, a Republican strategist, notes that for 72 years, from 1861 to 1933, the GOP was considered the agent of constructive change, and Democrats elected only two persons President (Cleveland and Wilson). During the next 48 years, until 1980, the Democratic Party was considered the agent of change, and Republicans elected only two persons President (Eisenhower and Nixon). Sears believes that in 1988 the role of "agent of change" will be up for grabs.

Pat Caddell, a Democratic strategist, says that in 1988 the conservative surge will be a decade old. He dates it from 1978, the year five liberal Democratic senators were defeated. In 1978, the Kemp-Roth tax reduction plan was unveiled. Two years later, the Republican presidential nominee stood on the steps of the Capitol, with other Republican House and Senate candidates, to endorse the plan, which gave his campaign a theme and energy.

In December, 1978, Democrats held a mid-term mini-convention in Memphis, and Ted Kennedy spoke in praise of "sailing into the wind." His speech was a shot across President Carter's bow. Kennedy was making a thinly veiled threat to run against Carter if Carter trimmed to the conservative winds. Carter's reaction was to fight defections on the left by buying off interest groups, thereby embracing the notion that fidelity to Democratic principles means preserving all programs.

Hart's task in 1984 was to dramatize differences with both the Carter and Kennedy styles of liberalism. But the most telling contrast was between Hart's and Reagan's conceptions of what presidential campaigns should be. Their differences denote different ideas of democratic consent, and leadership.

Hart is an issues-paper politician. He believes in dwelling on details, telling people the particulars of what he plans to do. He believes campaigns should produce consent to programs.

Reagan believes campaigns are to fill a reservoir of deference. (If the word "deference" grates on your democratic sensibilities, call it a reservoir of trust.) Reagan favors campaigns that set themes that bolster confidence in the theme-maker's character. His assumption is that the public's attention to politics is intermittent and its attention span is short. A constructive campaign convinces a majority that the candidate is a good fellow with a good idea of what he wants to do. These two perceptions by the public will translate into a lot of latitude for him when the game of governance begins.

Politicians, like the rest of us, tend to believe that the right thing to do is whatever they feel comfortable doing. This is in part because they, like the rest of us, tend to do well what they do comfortably. Hart, like most politicians, can not campaign as Reagan does. Reagan's gift for rapport with the public is a rarity. For Hart, as for all who run in 1988, a crucial question will be: Has the public come decisively to prefer Reagan's conception of political leadership? Reagan may have created in the public a preference for a kind of campaigning that few candidates can master.

ART BUCHWALD

Opening statement's enough!

"The Arms Control talks will come to order. Did the gentleman from the Soviet Union wish to speak?"

Art Buchwald

"My government must protest President Reagan's request for funding of new MX missiles at a time when we are in Geneva to begin arms negotiations. How are we to seriously discuss reducing weapons at the very moment your American leaders are asking Congress for authority to build more of them?"

"It is very simple, Mr. Federenko. The only reason the President wants the MX missile at this time is so you Soviets will know my country is serious about getting a fair and verifiable treaty."

"Why should we give up our ICBMs if the United States keeps building the MX?"

"Because, Mr. Federenko, you know as well as I do that the MX has no strategic value. The original idea was to move it underground so we could retaliate if you launched a first strike attack. When that idea proved too costly we decided to put the MX in hardened Minuteman silos. The instant we did that its value as an offensive weapon was lost."

"If it has no value as an offensive weapon why does your President keep asking for money to produce so many of them?"

"Because the MX is the secret bargaining chip we intend to use in these negotiations. We're reluctantly willing to give it up at some time if you are reluctantly willing to give up one of your missile systems."

"Forgive me for asking this, but if the MX is really a secret bargaining chip, why are you telling me this?"

"Because, Mr. Federenko, we believe if we tell you what we are willing to give up, then you will offer us a bargaining chip of your own — something that has no real value in your arsenal."

"We have plenty of those. But if you eliminate a weapon you really couldn't care about, and we eliminate one that we don't want, how does that reduce the risk of a nuclear war?"

"If we both give up obsolete weapons it's easier to arrive at an agreement. The difficult part is to give up something the President insists we need."

"Such as 'Star Wars'?"

"Exactly. 'Star Wars' will never be used as a bargaining chip because once we develop it, we don't care if the Kremlin signs an arms treaty with us or not. If we can knock all your weapons out of the sky, why should we talk to you?"

"By the time you develop a foolproof 'Star Wars' defensive system, we will develop a foolproof offensive system to penetrate it."

"You're just saying that, Mr. Federenko, because you want us to put 'Star Wars' on the table."

"How can you put it on the table when you don't know what it is?"

"How do you know we don't know what it is?"

"Because if you really had a 'Star Wars' system we would have stolen it from you by now. You should know there are no secrets from the KGB."

"'Star Wars' is dear to Mr. Reagan's heart, and whether it exists or not is immaterial. The fact that the President dreams about it makes the system non-negotiable."

"Then we will not agree to any nuclear arms reductions until the President stops dreaming about 'Star Wars.'"

"The Soviet Union cannot tell the President of the United States what he can or cannot dream about."

"We can if his dreams are destabilizing the balance of power in the world. We have an answer to every space weapon he dreams of putting in the sky, and we intend to start building them right now."

"Is that your final word, Mr. Federenko?"

"No, it's my opening statement. Now let's start the talks."

SPEAKING OUT

Planned Parenthood helps educate

Gay Patterson, a resident of Midland the past 16 years, is a board member of Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin.

By GAY PATTERSON

Because abortion is a legal and constitutionally protected procedure in this country, we at Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin could justifiably choose to ignore the notorious film, "The Silent Scream." However, we choose not to ignore it: this film points an accusing finger at our organization and implies that we are fellow conspirators with the "crime syndicate." Because we do not show films graphically portraying abortions, we are accused of a conspiracy of silence." We shall be silent no more.

We could, if we chose to copy the sensational tactics of the anti-choice groups, including Right-to-Life, publish a picture of a woman who had died because of a botched or self-induced abortion. Such pictures are in the medical archives, along with detailed reports on the painful complications and suffering of the victims. These were not uncommon documents before abortion was legalized. We could show you a grotesque picture of a woman or young girl lying in a pool of blood and we could call our film, "The Not-So-Silent Scream." But we choose not to do that. There has been enough showmanship already.

I feel that the public should be aware that the anti-choice groups have, through their inflammatory tactics, created a climate of hatred and intolerance in this country. The worst expression of this intolerance has been the bombings of abortion clinics. These groups disclaim any involvement in the bombings, yet these same people have charged the atmosphere with accusations of "murderers!" which they have hurled freely at both abortion providers and pro-choice organizations. I feel there must be a public expression of dismay at the attempts of these people (led by Jerry Falwell and his so-called Moral Majority) to threaten the freedoms, if not the very lives, of American women. That is why I am speaking out.

The film which is being promoted by Right-to-Life was clearly designed to shed more heat than light on the subject. Anyone with any biological knowledge already knew the facts of fetal development, and knew that abortion is the destruction of a fetus. So the narrator did not add information to the debate; he added theatrics.

Nor did he help us understand an important character who co-starred in this film: the woman having the abortion. What was happening to her during this drama? What situation in her life drove her to this decision? Her plight must have been desperate, because an abortion is an uncomfortable, often painful, emotional and expensive process.

Planned Parenthood is an organization chartered to meet many needs. It is the largest cancer-screening agency in the United States. Here in the Permian Basin we have eight clinics which provide a wide range of medical services, including pelvic and breast exams, Pap smears, contraceptives, and pregnancy tests. We do not perform abortions, nor do we encourage them. We do provide counseling and referrals on such matters as problem pregnancy, sterilization, and infertility. We have a strong education program and frequently hold Mother/Daughter and Father/Son classes throughout the region. These classes are designed to promote communication between parent and child about sexuality.

Much research has been done on the matter of teen pregnancies, yet no single reason for these has been determined. Peer pressure, media influence, unhappy home life, ignorance, and loneliness can all be contributing factors. Any of these, combined with the powerful physical and emotional changes of adolescence, can compel a teen-ager into an intimate relationship. Most of the teen-agers who come to our clinics come for the first time to get a pregnancy test. By the time we see them, they have been sexually active at least six months.

But teen-agers are not the only ones falling victim to their emotions; the majority of abortions are performed in the 20-24-year age group. Again, the psychological aspects are complex; there is no one easy answer that will explain these unintended pregnancies.

There has been much clucking of tongues and remarks such as "those promiscuous girls should be forced to carry their babies full term." Is that really what we want? Compulsory pregnancy to teach these girls a lesson? Is this the basis for a mature mother-child relationship? There is also the argument that there are plenty of adoptive parents available. There are indeed, but they usually have precise specifications for the kind of child they want. If a woman wants to complete her pregnancy to term and put the child up for adoption, it is certainly her choice to do so. However, no woman should be forced to go through the trauma of an unwanted pregnancy and childbirth just to gratify the desires of a childless couple. It should also be noted that our institutions are already crowded with unwanted children who need to be adopted.

Abortions are considered by women in many different situations. Some are women who already have children, are living at poverty level, and are concerned about their ability to sustain another child. Some are women who fetuses have been diagnosed as suffering from a severe genetic abnormality. Some are the victims of rape or incest. It is not ours to decide whether these women (or girls) should have to endure whatever life hands them. Only they can determine what quality of life the child might face. I could not presume to exert power over a woman in such a predicament.

We at Planned Parenthood shall continue to educate and the encourage young people, both male and female, to examine their motives before acting. Our goal is simply to teach them to think first, then make an informed responsible decision before entering into any relationship. Planned Parenthood will also continue to protect the lawful right of every woman, and this includes women from the ages of 10 to mid-50s, to have a free choice when she is faced with an unplanned pregnancy. We cannot — and we refuse to let anyone — set limits on their choices. There are too many different situations and we cannot legislate for every woman's particular circumstance. We must work to assure that abortion remains a legal and safe procedure for any woman who chooses to terminate her pregnancy.

What we must also do, as medical technology continues to lead us into an ethical jungle, is to approach many medical matters very cautiously. We are continually facing tough moral decisions which involve the quality of life, and abortion is only one of them. Life is full of hard choices that we, as human beings, must make. Abortion is, and must remain, one of those choices.

Therefore, we challenge the group which calls itself the "Right-to-Life." We challenge you to let your concern for life include those already born. We challenge you to acknowledge and accept that America is a pluralistic and free society and that no citizen should be forced to conform to your set of values. We challenge you to turn away from simplistic answers and face the complex world which exists. Above all, we challenge you to consider the full range of human situations which lead to unwanted pregnancies.

We at Planned Parenthood are working to prevent such situations. Are you?

Papers welcome public's opinions

Bill Modisett

"Everbody has an opinion," my mother used to say, "and if you give them the opportunity, you'll find out what it is."

Boy was she right!

Last weekend I attended once again a gathering of Texas daily newspaper editorial writers and columnists at North Texas State University in Denton. It's the nature of the profession to deal with the opinions of newspapers and of people not involved in the industry — notably those who write letters to the editor.

The conclusion from the various group sessions was something all of those in attendance probably already realized: That the letters to the editor column is one of the most popular features of any newspaper, that newspapers should not get "hung up" on carrying letters about only a few topics, that letters should be held to a manageable length — abritary, though, it may be — and that the letters feature should be carried as often as possible. Newspaper studies show that running letters tends to generate more letters.

Well, that's all really nice to know, but what does it mean to the man or woman who has never even thought about writing a letter to the editor or doesn't believe the letter would be published?

What it means is that most newspapers, including the Reporter-Telegram, welcome letters and publish quite a few each week. That isn't to say that a particular letter necessarily will be published because there are restrictions as to what a newspaper can and will publish. For example, information of a highly personal nature contained in a letter often will not be printed since it could invade a person's privacy. Libelous statements will not be published because the newspaper, not the letter-writer, is legally responsible for what is printed.

Most subjects are valid, but on occasion even that can become a bone of contention. Some subjects get worn out. They've been explored from every possible angle and there's nothing new to offer. So a newspaper's management may make the decision to cut off a subject, at least for awhile, to give other topics a fair chance.

A newspaper's letter column is a public forum, but it can be abused and it's for that reason that the editors who deal with letters must exert a degree of control over content.

That's why on occasion, for any of the above reasons or others, a particular letter may not be printed. Newspapers believe a person should have the opportunity to make h views known on topics of publ interest. To accomplish that obje tive, it's sometimes necessary to co trol the frequency of letters fro particular writers or on particula subjects.

Here's a hint about getting lette printed: Keep them short, 300 wor or less. Don't tell all you know merely enough information to mak your point. Don't ramble. Be certai to sign the letter, include a tele phone number where you can b reached during the day and a address. Most newspapers simpl will not print unsigned or anony mous letters. Don't expect to ge more than a letter a month pub lished. Don't use profanity; use goo taste in your writing.

Everybody's got an opinion. An newspapers will give you the oppor tunity to get it before the public.

Abortion atrocities an open question

Whether to allow abortions in Texas is not an open question before the Legislature today. The question of abortion atrocities is an open question, in the form of the Sharp-Kubiak Abortion Regulation Bill.

Surely the folks in Midland County and all of Texas would agree that a mother should have the option of administering anesthesia to her child to prevent the pain of the abortion, that abortions should not be performed by non-physicians, that a mother should be tested for pregnancy before some abortionist takes her money and performs a D&C on her, that a mother should not have an abortion without her informed consent, and that unborn children and fetal remains should not be sold or experimented upon.

These atrocities are happening in Texas today, and I think the readers of the Midland Reporter-Telegram are ready for a clean up. Our state has had totally unregulated abortions since 1973, and it's time for a change.

Midland citizens make Centennial Rally success

"Great citizens make great communities" is the slogan for the Midland Centennial Citizen contest. And that slogan is true, for it was the great citizens of Midland that made the Midland Centennial Kickoff Rally the huge success that it was!

Over 2,000 Midlanders, and a large television audience were treated to a rousing address by the Vice President of the United States, George Bush. Those people were also treated to the Centennial film "Midland: The First 100 Years," as well as proclamations from the state, county, and city. There was entertainment, souvenirs, and fun. But most of all, there was a sense of pride and a sense of community.

A lot of hard work was put into the planning and preparation for the rally, and those people who participated with those efforts are to be commended for the job they did in putting that pride in Midland.

The entire community backed the efforts of the Centennial Commission and got involved to put on one of the finest events that Midland has seen. There was electricity in the air last week at the Midland Center — if not a common past, at least a common present. It was a special feeling, and a special evening.

There are too many people to thank here, but they all know who they are. They know what part, whether large or small, that they played in making the kickoff a success. Countless hours of work went into the rally. And while most of the thanks and praise has been directed to the Centennial office, it was the help of the volunteers, businesses, clubs, and schools in Midland that made it all work.

Midland is a great community, and you are all to be thanked and commended. We are looking forward to a most successful Centennial year in 1985.

Wrong unemployment figures misleading

The drop of some 10,000 in Midland's employment figures must mean that thousands of infant workers have returned to their cribs and thousands of truant children workers to their schoolrooms.

Had the higher employment figures been circulated for a few more months, our law enforcement agencies would, most certainly, have had to invoke the child labor laws.

Conduct embarrassing to coaches, players

I am writing this letter in support of the one that appeared Sunday, written by Hal and Karen Jones.

An article recently appeared in the Fredericksburg Standard after Fredericksburg High School had its first losing football season since 1968. Some fans not only embarrass others by their conduct but also criticize players and coaches with their proud families within hearing distance.

I know. I'm the proud daughter of the head coach at Fredericksburg.

Child support laws need to be enforced

I'm writing this letter with hope that it will save a lot of women a lot of work — in regard to divorced women awaiting child support payments. Having spent three hearings worth of time, plenty of attorney's fees, about 12 hours of time off from my job, I have accomplished nothing.

Like most of you, I too have been reading how the law was getting tougher on men who don't pay their child support. Well, maybe the laws have gotten tougher, but unless they are properly enforced by our elected officials they are not worth the paper they are written on.

My ex-husband is walking the streets today 17 months behind on his child support. So why should there be any child support awarded in the final decree? We more than likely won't ever collect on it, and no one is willing to enforce the law!

How could any financial institution stay in business allowing customers to pay only when they want to? That's exactly what our court is allowing, and using everyone's hard-earned tax dollars to do it.

And if you were thinking of filing on your ex-husband, forget it because the "inability to pay" is a defense. And that's not reserved for the sick and crippled; it's for any man who doesn't have the extra cash for his children after he's spent all of it that he wants to on himself. And the children come last.

So until our higher authorities get tougher on the laws regarding child support, don't bother wasting attorney fees on a fruitless battle regardless of the fact the law states that if he doesn't pay, he goes to jail.

Brewer's leadership, service appreciated

I want to take this opportunity as bishop of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church to express my appreciation to George Brewer for his 24 years of leadership and service to Methodist Hospital in Lubbock.

In the five years that I have served as Resident Bishop in this area, I have had a growing appreciation for the ability of Brewer to make wise economic decisions while holding firm to a basic core of spiritual and moral values.

Throughout his administration he has exemplified how a hospital can follow good financial policies and, at the same time, be an institution of service and compassion.

In the course of his administration, Brewer has emphasized and encouraged the hospital's ties to the United Methodist Church. I want to thank the board of trustees of the hospital for its search and genuine desire to keep these ties strong.

I pledge my support and total commitment to keeping this relationship as strong as possible. I think it is really both hands reaching out together in the strongest fashion to continue our work. We are committed to providing the best healing service possible to all constituents of the area.

Nicaragua suffers political illness

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — There's no place like home. That old adage has a specially emotional meaning when you return home after nearly a month's stay in hospital. We tend to take for granted the comfort and contentment of a happy home. Being deprived of it for a while makes you really appreciate it.

Even though I am still weak and under medication from the infections that had me down, but fortunately not out, the doctors let me come home Wednesday. That is indicative of my good progress.

I wish as much could be said for the political illness that afflicts Nicaragua. Efforts to reason with the communist-oriented Sandinista dictatorship seem to make little progress. Secretary of State George Shultz reported nothing much had changed as a result of his Montevideo meeting last weekend with Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

Critics, mostly liberal, contend that President Reagan is trying to overthrow, by force if necessary, the Sandinista government. Polls indicate the American people generally have been misled into this belief. One cannot blame them for not being fully informed, but it beats me why Democratic members of Congress like House Speaker Tip O'Neill, Maryland Rep. Michael Barnes and Massachusetts Rep. Edward Boland ignore the facts. One can only assume they are simply playing partisan politics with a situation potentially dangerous to the security of our country.

The record clearly shows that what the president is trying to do is to persuade the Sandinista leaders to restore the democratic form of government they promised to maintain if elected to power. The Cuban-backed Sandinistas attempted to topple the Somoza regime in 1978. They failed. Castro then advised them to form a broad alliance with the genuinely democratic opposition to President Anastasio Somoza, the military dictator, and tell the world they were fighting for political democracy, not communism. They cynically did so. They gave the Organization of American States (OAS), of which the U.S. is a member, a solemn pledge in writing that they would establish a truly democratic form of government guaranteeing freedom, justice and human rights.

As a result of this pledge, the OAS adopted a resolution calling on Somoza to relinquish power. The U.S. joined other Latin American nations in applying strong economic and political pressure on Somoza to leave Nicaragua, which he did.

A political coalition, including moderate democrats as well as Sandinistas, was elected. Within its first 18 months, this government received $117 million in U.S. economic aid. Even while getting this assistance, the Sandinistas were moving to force out the democratic members of the coalition government and establish a totalitarian Marxist dictatorship closely aligned to the Soviet-Cuban bloc. Then they proclaimed their determination to support establishment of similar regimes throughout Central America. They started a big military buildup with weapons supplied by the Soviet-Cuban bloc, some of which were smuggled to leftist guerrillas trying to overthrow the freely-elected government of neighboring El Salvador.

Those were the factors which led Reagan to support the "Contra" rebel movement which includes moderates who formed part of the original Sandinista-led government. Even some of these moderates whom the Sandinistas betrayed are not demanding the ousting of the Sandinista ruler. Arturo Cruz, a member of Nicaragua's democratic opposition, said this week that if Ortega agrees to restore democracy, he should remain president.

The Reagan administration is also supporting the peace efforts launched nearly a year ago by the so-called Contadora group of Latin American nations. This group has drafted a peace plan which calls for withdrawal of all foreign troops and advisers from Central America, as well as an arms embargo and international inspection teams. The U.S. has proposed modification of the original draft to tighten verification. This is opposed by the Sandinista regime, which wants loopholes for its compliance.

Reagan is supporting the Contadora effort although the plan does not call for the overthrow of the Sandinista regime. While it does call for the restoration of civil liberties, it is primarily aimed at ending foreign military intervention in Central America and preventing aggression by any one of those countries, communist or otherwise, against a neighbor. In support of the Contadora effort, a U.S. diplomat has been holding separate talks with a Nicaraguan official in Manzanillo, Mexico.

In view of this record, you can understand why I support so strongly our president's Central American policy.

Personally, I think the OAS should be playing a more effective role in seeking a solution of the Central American problem. It has never condemned the Sandinista leaders for reneging on their pledge to uphold democracy if they came to power. My Washington sources tell me the reason is that the general attitude of the Latin American nations is let Uncle Sam or the Contadora group handle the problem.

Chaps beat Highlanders to win Region V

TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Writer

SNYDER — For the third time in four years, Coach Jerry Stone's Midland College Chaparrals own the Region V tournament crown after a whisker-thin 69-67 win over McLennan College's Highlanders here Saturday night.

Despite the closeness of victory, the Chaps led coast-to-coast, earning bi-regional playoff berth against either Lon Morris or Laredo next week. The winner of that matchup will earn a final 16 berth to the national tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., March 19-23.

"In many ways, this is one of the most rewarding tournament victories I've ever had," said Stone following his third Region V title. "I said back in the fall that this was going to have to be my blue collar team. We don't have a lot of offense and finesse like some of the other teams we've had at Midland College. I told them if they wanted to win they would have to hustle and work for everything they get or they wouldn't win. They have responded to that challenge."

Even with a heavy dose of hard work, the title almost got away from the Chaps as McLennan attacked a 15-point MC lead in the last 3:37 of play to almost hand the Midlanders a nightmare finish.

The Highlanders outscored the Chaps by a 23-10 margin down the three minute stretch and just missed sending the game into overtime when Arthur Goudeau's shot didn't connect near the buzzer.

"I got a little worried when McLennan took that last shot, but it didn't go in," said MC's 6-foot-9 sophomore Teviin Binns, who was voted to the All-Tournament team. "I felt good when I saw Ricky Grace come up with the ball on the floor. All the hard work we've gone through this year paid off today. I'm so happy."

Stone, too, was wiping his brow at the end, saying, "this game reminded me so much of the game against Westark in the national tournament in 1982. Westark missed a shot at the buzzer and we won that one too. This was a game that we deserved to win because we congtrolled it most of the way. I don't think I would have made it if we had lost this one."

Sophomore Vernon Coleman got the Chaps rolling in the right direction early in the game as he hit 5-of-5 from the field in the first half on his way to a 17-point night and tournament MVP honors.

"I feel great about the award," said Coleman. "I really didn't think I would get it because I had a rough night with only two points Friday. But I told myself to forget about it and work hard.

"But more important than the award is the fact that we won the title. The five sophomores on the team didn't even qualify for the regionals last year and that was a big disappointment. We all talked about that over the year and now we have the title."

Monterey champs

Lee bows 5-4 in finals

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

For the fourth time in five days and the second time in the Tournament of Champions at Angel Stadium, the Midland Lee Rebels were looking across the diamond at the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen.

Of the four games, the last one was the biggest, the one for the tournament title. Monterey already held a 2-1 edge in the series and ended up 3-1, claiming a 5-4 victory with a little pitching and defensive help in the final two innings.

Trailing 5-3, Lee cut the margin to one run in the top of the sixth inning when Paul Colwell took starting pitcher Doug Welch to a 3-0 count and then picked up ball four from reliever Mike Eckles.

One out later and it was Terry Baxter getting a free trip to first. Keith McDonald followed by reaching base on a fielder's choice, forcing Baxter at second and moving Colwell to third. Colwell scored on Dirk Bergoon's single up the middle.

After Lee relief pitcher Greg Shaw took out the Plainsmen 1-2-3 in the bottom of the sixth, Rebel Mike Small opened the seventh with a line shot triple to the Green Monster in centerfield. However, even with three outs to play with, Small never reached home.

Eckels picked up the first out by striking out Shaw. On a 1-1 count to catcher Jimmy Phillips, Lee coach Ernie Johnson called for the squeeze play. Phillips' bunt rolled foul and he eventually grounded out to shortstop Shane Sayler, as did Colwell to end the game.

The Plainsmen finished the tournament with a perfect 3-0 record, 10-1 on the year while Lee posted a 5-2 mark (8-4).

"We just played bad early," said Johnson about his team's play in the tournament. "I was glad to see us improve though. We're making way too many base running mistakes and too many mental mistakes. Mostly it's seniors making them because mostly that's what's out there."

One area that Johnson was happy with was his team's collecting 48 hits in five games.

"I think their confidence has improved since before the start of this tournament," said Johnson. "We can not go into district play with a whole lot better frame of mind about our hitting."

FOR THE Rebels, it was a ong day of play. After falling to Monterey 9-7 in the second game of the tournament Friday, the Rebels had to battle through the loser's bracket to gain the finals.First came an 8-7 victory over cross-town rival Midland High Friday.

On Saturday, the Rebels opened the day's play with a 9-2 victory over Amarillo Tascosa. Mike Rittenberry went the distance to gain the victory while Geoff Rogers suffered the loss. Of Lee's 10 hits, four went for doubles, two by Small and one each from Bergoon and Colwell.

Immediately after the victory over Tascosa, the Rebels were back on the field for an elimination game with Dallas Thomas Jefferson. Rebel hurler George Matta had a steller performance, going seven innings and allowing only five hits for a 4-0 shutout victory.

TJ's Dave Moscrey, who struck out 9-of-9 in a starting performance againstTascosa Friday, suffered the loss. The Rebs collected nine hits and took advantage of four Monterey errors.

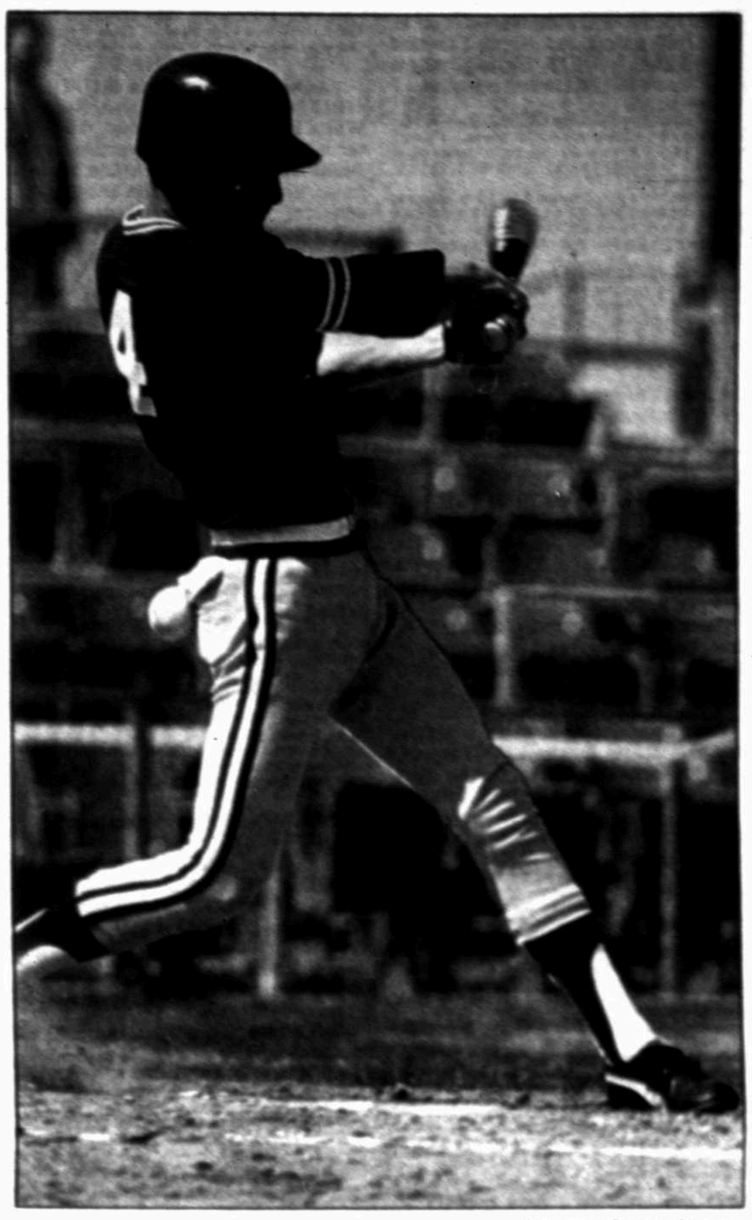

IN THE only other game of the day, Midland High proved once and for all that a team isn't out of it until the final out is made. Trailing 11-0 after two innings, the Tascosa Rebels rallied against the troubled Bulldogs in the third and sixth innings to turn a blowout contest into a 13-10 affair.

The Bulldogs turned five hits, including a three-RBI triple by Kenny De La Garza, three walks, a sacrifice bunt and one Tascosa error into an 8-0 advantage in the bottom of the first inning off starter Mitchell.

In the second frame, the Bulldogs started their third time through the order, picking up three more runs on one hit, one walk, a hit batter, a wild pitch and two errors behind reliever Shane Nance. Bulldog catcher Greg Hatcher led the hitting with a double.

Then it was Midland High's turn to watch the scoreboard lights go crazy as starting pitcher Mike Stanton lost control, giving back six of the runs on two hits, five walks and one error on reliever Paul "Bullet" Neatherlin. Neatherlin finished the game to get the win but also had some problems, giving up four more runs before finally shutting the door in the top of the seventh.

Lee captures Tall City doubles title

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee's doubles pair of Lisa Fierro and Krista Harvey captured the only A bracket title for Tall City teams Saturday at the Midland Tennis tournament — but they sure did it the hard way.

After escaping the first set with a 7-6 edge, Fierro-Harvey led 5-3 in the second set and had four match points to put the kill on Ginger Bell and Cindy Fortner of Amarillo Tascosa.

But they couldn't do it the quick way. Instead, the Rebel team did it the slow torturous way, going into another tiebreaker before sealing it, 7-6. But it was Lee coach Bobby Connell who felt like the one being tortured.

"I think they were trying to give me heart failure," Connell said. "But if they keep playing the way they are, they are really going to help us come district time. They've been improving each time out there."

It wasn't such a fairy tale ending for Midland High's top singles player, Jill Bramlett, however.

But a fall was bound to come for the undefeated sophomore.

Undefeated, that is, until Saturday. Bramlett was beaten in the girls A singles final, 7-5, 6-2, by Julie Vaughan of Amarillo High.

Tech gains SWC finals

DALLAS (AP) — Deadeye guard Bubba Jennings scored 23 points as regular-season champion Texas Tech stormed into the title game of the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic Saturday with a 72-63 victory over Texas A&M.

Tech, now 22-7 for the season, plays the survivor Arkansas for the tournament championship at 2:08 p.m. today.

The Red Raiders led from start to finish as Jennings connected on 9 of 11 field goal attempts and 5 of 6 free throws.

THE AGGIES, 19-10, were led by Winston Crite, who had 24 points, many of them off offensive rebounds. Crite led a rousing rally that brought the Aggies within three points, but Phil Wallace came to the rescue with 11 second-half free throws and 22 points.

It was Tech's 10th consecutive victory. The last time the Red Raiders had that many victories in a row was 12 straight in 1929-30.

Jennings, who had 12 points in the first half, hit his first four shots as the red-hot Red Raiders ran off a 38-26 halftime lead.

TECH CANNED its first six shots of the game then made nine in a row in a nine-minute stretch late in the first half to finish with a 72 per cent shooting percentage against the cold-shooting Aggies, who shot only 40 per cent in the first half.

Texas A&M made only two baskets in the first 10 minutes as the Red Raiders surged to leads reaching 16 points.

It was the 600th game for Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf.

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers said the Red Raider game plan was simple — get the ball to Bubba.

Rallying Rebels claim WT Relays

ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

ODESSA — For most of Saturday afternoon it looked as if it would be a rough meet for the Midland Lee track team at the West Texas Relays.

But as quickly as things turned sour on coach Sam Volpe, the tide turned and the Rebels walked away with the first-place prize by a mere 2½ points, 89½-87, over Odessa Permian. Midland High finished seventh with 30 points.

Among Lee's usual arsenal of individual winners, most noteably sprinters Walter Jones and Marq Brackens and recently miler Mike Garza, none topped the 17-team field in their specialties. But the first-places the 400 and 1,600-meter relay teams claimed were enough to vault the Rebs to victory.

THE LEE girls, paced by two-first places by Diane White and one by Tami Woodbury in the hurdles, finished fourth with 58 points, while MHS was right behind in fifth place with 54. The Permian girls ran away with the title by racking up 119 points.

Permian had built an imposing lead in the boys' competition, also, by dominating the field events — many of which were held Friday. But with some gutty second and third place finishes, and the strength of the relays, Lee pulled back into the hunt.

The wnning 400 relay team was comprised of Harold Woods, Brackens, Chris Kenney and Jones. The 1,600 relay team was Brad Cooper, Craig Swearingen, Quintus Hampton and Jones.

"The relays count double (20 points) and that made up the difference," Volpe said. "We didn't practice all week but I think most of the kids competed well. We only got 4½ points from our field events, that's why we thought we were out of it.

"The key to it, though, was Quintus in the 300 intermediate hurdles and (Mike) Garza in the mile," Volpe said of a pair of second place finishes (eight points each) late in the afternoon. "We counted on them for thirds."

THE CLINCHER was a poor fifth-place showing by the Panthers in the final event — the 1,600 relay. Permian collected just four points for that effort while Lee earned 20 for first-place.

ATLANTA — Kenny Smith scored five points in the final minute to pace sixth-ranked North Carolina over No. 18 North Carolina State, sending the Tar Heels into the Atlantic Coast Conference championship against Georgia Tech today.

North Carolina, making its 15th appearance in the ACC title game, took the lead for good on a Steve Hale jumper with 3:05 left to play at 48-46.

Smith, who led North Carolina with 16 points, then cemented the victory with three free throws and a dunk in the final 33 seconds.

Former Midland College All-America Spud Webb, who scored 12 first half points, led North Carolina State, 20-9, with 13, hitting only a free throw in the closing minutes.

ATLANTA — Mark Price scored 24 points to lead a quartet of Georgia Tech scorers in double figures as the top-seeded and ninth-ranked Yellow Jackets knocked off No. 7 Duke.

Tech, 23-7, led 32-26 at halftime but Duke, 22-7, behind the hot-shooting Jay Bilas and Johnny Dawkins, finally caught the Yellow Jackets and went ahead 42-41 on a Dawkins' jumper with 11:02 remaining.

Tech's Bruce Dalrymple, however, knocked in a 15-foot jumper to give the Yellow Jackets the lead for good 24 seconds later.

Tech, whose 23 victories tied the school record for most in a single season first set by the 1970-71 squad, played without starter Duane Ferrell, who suffered ligament damage in the Yellow Jackets' 55-48 victory over Virginia in the ACC opener.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Tim McCalister and Anthony Bowie kept Oklahoma together while Wayman Tisdale sat out most of the second half with fouls, and the fourth-ranked Sooners withstood a furious bid by Iowa State in the title game of the Big Eight postseason tournament.

Tisdale, the three-time Big Eight player of the year, scored 14 points in the first half to help the Sooners to a 34-33 lead, but went to the bench when he collected his fourth foul less than 90 seconds into the second half.

Iowa State's David Moss made a quick jumper to bring the Cyclones within one point at 36-35, but the Sooners managed to hold the lead and build it to four at 63-59 when Tisdale returned with 5:19 left.

With a school record 21 victories, Iowa State retained hopes of an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament when invitations are announced today.

San Diego 87, UTEP 81

EL PASO — Senior center Leonard Allen scored 18 points, including 11 in a four-minute second-period stretch, to carry San Diego State over Texas-El Paso to win the postseason Western Athletic Conference tournament.

The victory boosted the Aztecs' record to 23-7 and automatically ensured a berth in the NCAA playoffs.

Allen, who got only one point in the UTEP-dominated first half, poured in 11 as the Aztecs went from a 63-59 deficit with 8:55 remaining in the second period to a 71-66 lead four minutes later.

After the Aztecs' strong scoring spurt, Texas-El Paso could never regain control of the game.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Two-time Pacific Coast Athletic Association Player of the Year Richie Adams scored 23 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas over Fullerton State in the 10th annual PCAA Basketball Tournament.

The Rebels led all the way in raising their record to 27-3 and earning an automatic berth in the NCAA Basketball Tournament, which begins next week.

Memphis St 90, Florida St 86 OT

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Baskerville Holmes pumped in 24 points, including a retrieve of a missed shot at the end of regulation, as fifth-ranked Memphis State needed an overtime period to outlast a determined Florida State in the Metro championship game.

Wichita St. 84, Tulsa 82

TULSA, Okla. — With Xavier McDaniel powering in 34 points and pulling down 13 rebounds, Wichita State outlasted a furious Tulsa rally for the Missouri Valley tournament title.

The victory gives the Shockers, 18-12, the league's automatic berth in the NCAA tournament. Tulsa fell to 23-7 and also expects an NCAA invitation.

Guard Mike Arline and Karl Papke added 12 points each for Wichita State. Midland's Herb Johnson added 16 points and 13 rebounds for the Hurricane.

Kleine, Hogs muscle Mustangs

DALLAS (AP) — Freshman reserve Byron Irvin scored 18 points and Joe Kleine muscled in 17 to carry Arkansas into the finals of the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic with a 68-55 victory over Southern Methodist Saturday.

Texas Tech, the regular season SWC champion, advanced to Sunday's 2:08 p.m. title game earlier Saturday with a 72-63 victory over Texas A&M behind guard Bubba Jennings, who scored 23 points.

Arkansas is now 21-11 for the year, while SMU tumbled to 22-9.

The Mustangs rallied from a 13-point deficit to cut the margin to 39-37 in the second half on a Carl Wright jump shot before 14,185 fans in Reunion Arena. But the Razorbacks were equal to the pressure as Kleine came back with five points and Irvin hit two quick buckets.

SMU center Jon Koncak scored nine points and had 11 rebounds in his duel with fellow Olympian Kleine — who had two rebounds — before fouling out with 1:59 to play. Wright led SMU scoring with 20 points.

Arkansas' tenacious man-for-man defense kept the Mustangs' run-and-gun out of gear as the Razorbacks' built a 31-20 halftime lead.

The 20 points represented SMU's lowest scoring in a half this season. The previous low was 21 against Rice.

Williams Mills added 11 points for the balanced-scoring Arkansas attack.

Terry Williams came off the bench to score nine points for SMU before he fouled out with 4:12 to go.

The winner of the SWC Classic is automatically assured an NCAA playoff berth.

Georgetown massacres Redmen

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-ranked Georgetown, despite getting only 18 minutes of playing time from All-America center Patrick Ewing because of foul trouble, defeated second-ranked St. John's 92-80 Saturday night to win the Big East Conference tournament title for the fourth time in six years.

The defending NCAA champion Hoyas will carry a 12-game winning streak and a 30-2 record into the NCAA basketball playoffs next week. The Redmen, regular-season Big East winners, were beaten for the second time by the Hoyas in 10 days and dropped to 27-3.

The game was marred by five technical fouls, two each against the head coaches, John Thompson of Georgetown and Lou Carnesecca of St. John's — all in the first half.

With 7:16 remaining in the second half, reserve Ron Rowan of St. John's and Reggie Williams of Georgetown were ejected for scuffling.

Michael Jackson led five Georgetown players in double figures with 19 points, followed by Bill Martin with 18 and David Wingate with 17.

Georgetown never trailed, leading 47-40 at halftime, and by as much as 14 points in the second half when the Hoyas built their lead to 78-64 on Martin's three-point play with 8:03 remaining. The closest St. John's could get after that was 84-76 on Chris Mullin's field goal and two free throws with 2:40 left.

Ralph Dalton, Ewing's 6-foot-11 backup center, played effectively in the All-America's absence, scoring nine points and grabbing eight rebounds. The 7-foot Ewing had 11 points while Williams tossed in 14.

Mullin scored 25 points to pace the Redmen, but was virtually silent after intermission when he scored only six of his points. Bill Wennington added 16, Walter Berry 14 and Mike Moses 10 for the Redmen.

In the first half, the Hoyas took a 22-13 lead, but Mullin was able to cash in at the free throw line after Georgetown's Perry McDonald was called for an intentional foul. Thompson was slapped with his first technical. Mullin made three of four free throws and before play resumed, Thompson was hit with another technical. Mullin sank two more free throws and Wennington drove in for a layup to bring the Redmen within 22-20.

The score was tied at 26 and 28, but after that the Hoyas led the rest of the way.

Georgetown previously won the Big East championship in 1980, 1982 and 1984. Georgetown and St. John's have been the only teams ranked No. 1 in the nation this season. The Redmen replaced the Hoyas after a 66-65 victory on Jan. 26, but the Hoyas moved to the top again after crushing St. John's 85-69 Feb. 27.

REBELS

Individually, Jones ran his fastest 200 of his career (21.63) but was nipped at the tape by Clarence Seay of El Paso Andress. Seay won both the 100 and 200 in meet record times.

Brad Cooper finished second in the 400 (50.10) to join Garza and Hampton with their runner-up finishes. Garza ran his best time in the 1,600, 4:31.26, and Hampton ran a 38.96 in the low hurdles.

The Bulldogs were paced by second-place finishes by shot-putter Darrell Davis, 55-11¼, and Randy Simmons in the 110 high hurdles, 14.30.

For the Lee girls, it was White who again set the pace. Competing despite a taped ankle that she sprained last week at the ABC Relays in Big Spring, White again won the triple jump with a 37-0 on Saturday and she took the long jump Friday with a leap of 17-3¾.

Also competing for Lee for the first time this season was sophomore Tami Woodberry in the 100 low hurdles. Woodberry missed the bus to last week's meet and by the time her mother had dropped her in Big Spring Rebel coach Janice Baulch had scratched her in the lineup.

Woodberry made no mistake Saturday. She sprang from the blocks to a lead even before the first hurdle and strolled to an easy victory in 14.85, nearly two seconds ahead of the next runner.

"I had a feeling she might run away with it," Baulch said. "She won her heat by about 20 yards in prelims. I knew she could do it, she has real good form and good speed. And she works hard at it.

"She doesn't do any other events but run the hurdles. She did the high jump last year and thought it was too dangerous. But if she gets 10 points (first place) for me, I'll take that any day of the week."

Midland coach Brenda Mitchell would be more than happy to take a first-place in the 1,600 any time from sophomore Amy Cumings. Cumings did just that Saturday, leading from start to finish to cross the line in 5:45.16, nearly 20 seconds better than her pace last week.

The MHS relay teams also fared well on the day. The 1,600 relay team of Faye Daugherty, Abby Green, Tina Knight and Ethel Edwards breezed in second at 4:11.19. The 800 relay took third and the 400 relay was fifth.

TECH

"It's great to have guys who will pass Bubba the ball and who are not jealous of him," Myers said. "I'm proud of our other guys for their unselfishness."

JENNINGS was named the SWC Player of the Year in balloting by writers and broadcasters at the tournament.

"I'm not sure I deserve it," said Jennings. "There's a lot of great players in our conference."

Asked who they would like to play in the finals, Jennings said "I guess I'd rather play SMU since Arkansas has all their fans here. Either way it's going to be a tough game."

Metcalf said the Aggies lost the game in the first half.

"It's awfully hard to come back from our first half mistakes and Tech's sensational (72 per cent) shooting but we did," said Metcalf. "We cut it to three points then we would take a poor shot or miss a crucial free throw. Our man to man full-court press got us back in the game.

"Tech is a great champion of our conference and they will represent us in the NCAA's well," Metcalf said.

Metcalf said it appeared A&M's chances of an NCAA bid were dim.

"They say they took politics out of the selection process but I don't believe it," Metcalf said.

Remember '81

Owners, Players reflect on last baseball strike

By JOHN NELSON

NEW YORK (AP) — A recurring theme runs through the current labor negotiations between baseball's owners and players: Remember 1981.

During that summer four years ago, a vitriolic dispute over free agency caused a mid-season strike that brought the game to a standstill.

It was unprecedented in baseball and, despite strike insurance, cost major league club owners a lot of money. Players felt the bite as the paychecks stopped coming, and fan backlash was instant and unmistakable.

Attendance in the second half of 1981 was down an average of 2,500 per game, and a study showed that fans had lost their pristine regard for the nation's pastime. Their heroes, after all, did not play "for the love of the game" alone.

"We stayed out 50 days. We could have stayed out a year and 50 days," union head Don Fehr recalls. "I hope that lesson has been learned because lessons can be as expensive to teach as they are to learn."

THE CONTRACT that resulted from the 1981 strike expired last Dec. 31. Since November, a management team headed by Lee MacPhail and a union team headed by Fehr have been negotiating to replace it.

Neither side is willing to rule out the possibility of another strike, but both agree that at least the tenor of these negotiations is more positive than it was four years ago.

"My own feeling is there won't be a strike," says MacPhail, who took over as president of the Player Relations Committee from Ray Grebey on Jan. 1, 1984, after 10 years as American League president.

"I don't base that on the issues. It's just my feeling that neither side wants a strike. Both sides learned it can be very damaging and that both sides can sustain a strike ... my big hope is that we will not have a strike."

Several factors may have contributed to a more-trustful atmosphere this time. Among them are a change in leadership on both sides, a less-aggressive stance by owners, and the success the two sides had in negotiating baseball's joint drug program last year.

GREBEY, a former management negotiator for General Electric, was voted out as Player Relations Committee president when owners decided to go with a baseball man. MacPhail says it was a conscious decision because owners saw "a lack of communication."

Marvin Miller, former top aid with the steelworkers union, retired as executive director of the Major League Players Association after the strike. After a one-year reign by Ken Moffett, a federal mediator in the 1981 strike, Fehr took over the union job on an acting basis in 1983.

Fehr had been union counsel under Miller, who now acts as an adviser, and some suggest Miller still pulls a lot of the strings. Fehr calls Miller a "minister without portfolio, or a minister with all the portfolios, I don't know which." While Miller still is influential, especially with players, Fehr is not a puppet leader.

"Not that it was anybody's fault, but there was a little personality conflict between Marvin and Ray," MacPhail says. "In the early stages, it wasn't too bad. I think it affected things a little bit, but you have to remember, the issues played a part, too.

"If you can keep the proper climate — I don't know if that helps — but if you don't have the proper climate, it can make things even harder. I think this time, both sides are making an effort to keep that climate."

Fehr believes the issues, not a Grebey-Miller feud, were preeminent in causing and prolonging the strike. He says the Grebey-Miller confrontations "may have made it louder," and "the manner in which (Grebey) conducted negotiations was not pleasant, but I don't feel he did anything the owners didn't want."

THE ONLY real issue in 1981 was free agency. Owners wanted a system of compensation for the loss of free agents, and they would not relent. They got their system, but it was less effective than they had wanted.

"The clubs took a more aggressive posture last time," MacPhail says. "They were trying to get player compensation, which the players felt was an attack on free agency. The union was a little tense.

"The owners had made three assumptions. One was that free agency was important to the clubs. Another was that there would be some fan support for their position. A third, and one on which they erred badly, was that the players wouldn't sustain any long strike."

NEGOTIATIONS on the last contract actually began more than a year before the strike, but the free-agency issue was postponed until 1981.

"It was a stormy summer in 1980," Fehr remembers.

"We finally postponed the owners' most aggressive issue ... but it was clear from the day we settled in 1980 that we wouldn't get any compromise from Ray Grebey.

"We used to laugh, because we'd ask each other every day if the owners' proposal had changed by as much as a comma. Of course, it hadn't. We knew there'd be a strike. It was an aggravating year, full of hostility. It evolved into a street fight, and the players became resolved to it."

As tempers cooled and personalities changed in the intervening 3½ years, a new problem began to erode baseball's image. In 1984, both management and union officials realized that drug abuse among players and the negative publicity from it must be addressed. Baseball's joint drug program was born.

Witt captures second straight

Figure Skating

TOKYO (AP) — Defending champion Katarina Witt, performing with steely determination to the graceful strains of Gershwin, came from behind Saturday to win her second straight world figure skating title.

American Tiffany Chin won the bronze despite a fall, finishing behind Soviet Kira Ivanova.

Witt, 19, the Olympic gold medalist from East Germany, was third entering the final event at the six-day World Figure Skating Championships. But she mustered up a dazzling performance in her freestyle program before a crowd of 5,700 at Yoyogi Stadium to push Ivanova into second place and Chin into third.

Witt was the only skater to wrest a gold from the Soviet Union, whose team garnered top places in pairs, men's singles and ice dancing categories.

Elena Valova and Oleg Vasiliev, pairs skaters, captured the first Soviet gold Wednesday, followed by men's champion Alexander Fadeev on Thursday and ice dancers Natalia Bestemianova and Andrei Bukin on Friday.

A fourth and final medal was also within the Soviets' grasp Saturday, with Ivanova, 21, entering the final event in the lead.

"I'm really happy," said Witt. "It think it was my best performance."

Witt, who said she'd like to try for a third straight championship next year, won near-perfect marks from the panel of nine judges. For artistic impression, she earned five 5.9s of a possible 6.0.

Witt said she knew the final competition was tight between herself, Ivanova and Chin.

"All three had a chance to win, so I tried my best," she said.

Chin, 17, of Toluca Lake, Calif., skated last among the women and said she was "generally happy" with her performance because she "didn't feel any pressure — it all went smoothly."

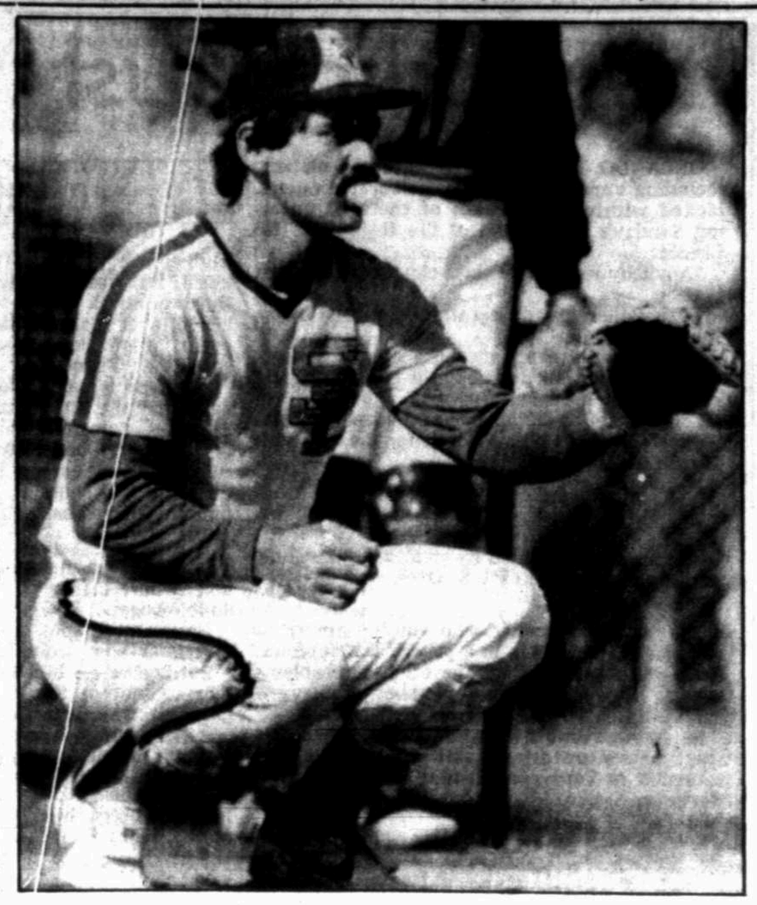

But Chin admitted she was "a little disappointed" that she had slipped from a second-place ranking to third after the final event.

Anna Kondrashova of the Soviet Union was fourth. Debi Thomas, 17, of San Jose, Calif., finished fifth after faltering on three jumps.

West Germany's Claudia Leistner was sixth, followed by the Soviet Union's Natalia Lebedeva, France's Agnes Gosselin, and Canada's Elizabeth Manley and Cynthia Coull.

The skaters Sunday planned to give an afternoon exhibition performance at the stadium before heading back with their teams to their countries.

Earlier this week, Brian Boitano, 21, of Sunnyivale, Calif., won the bronze medal in men's singles and Judy Blumberg, 27, and Michael Seibert, 25, of New York City, captured the bronze in ice dancing.

Time no longer ally of Grieve

TEXAS RANGERS

"In Cliff, we gave a lot of money for a 37-year old guy and that's gotten a lot of criticism. If he doesn't come through, it won't look great."

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — As minor league director for the Texas Rangers until last Sept. 1, Tom Grieve could make a decision on a player then wait five or six years to decide if he'd been correct.

But Grieve is starting his first full season as the Rangers' general manager following an off-season of major changes, and his decisions already are being analyzed.

Grieve signed three free agents — designated hitter Cliff Johnson and pitchers Dave Rozema and Burt Hooton — and obtained catcher Don Slaught and second baseman Toby Harrah in trades.

"As a farm director, the decisions you make don't really show up until several years down the road," Grieve said. "These decisions, we'll know mid-way through the season.

"Can Cliff Johnson provide us that power, whether Burt Hooton can be a successful pitcher, whether Don Slaught is a good catcher ...

"We'll know all those things and so will everybody else and the decisions will be analyzed all year long. I won't second guess any of these decisions because I thnk we acquired good players."

AT THE end of the disastrous 1984 season, Grieve sat down with his coaches and scouts and came up with a list of the Rangers' immediate needs.

Grieve wanted a starting catcher, a regular designated hitter, improvement in the middle infield and added pitching depth, especially in the bullpen.

And all the Rangers had to give up was a lot of owner Eddie Chiles' money.

"We didn't give up anything to get these guys," Grieve said. "While we risked salaries that we are paying these guys, the only players that we gave up were Danny Darwin, who would have been a free agent after this year and Billy Sample, who didn't want to be here."

Johnson, unable to get a long-term deal with Toronto, his 1984 team, signed a three-year, $2.1 million contract with the Rangers. Hooton, shuttled to the bullpen by Los Angeles last season, has a two-year deal.

"In Cliff, we gave a lot of money for a 37-year old guy and that's gotten a lot of criticism," Grieve said. "If he doesn't come through, it won't look great."

THE BEAUTY of the plan, Grieve says, is that the Rangers will be able to benefit from the veterans while bringing along their younger players.

"The way we want to build a foundation is through our minor league system," Grieve said. "It's (signing veterans) kind of an interim kind of thing to buy us some time while our minor leaguers develop.

"So, hopefully, these veterans will give us a chance to be a little more competitive this year, have a good team and give us time to kind of sneak some youngsters into the lineup over the next couple of years."

Grieve hopes Slaught will fill the catching void.

"We felt to get a 25-year-old kid that was developing as a catcher, had potential to be a good ofensive player, was something we couldn't turn down," Grieve said. "There's not many good catchers in baseball and if we had a chance to get one, you have to do it."

Rozema and Dave Stewart will be expected to add heft to the bullpen that was so lacking in last year's seventh place finish.

"We had no one who could come into the game in the middle of the game and hold the other team and give us a chance to get back in the game," Grieve said.

"This year we signed Dave Rozema as a free agent and bought Greg Harris from San Diego and we feel both of those guys will add significant depth to our bullpen."

TRADING Sample to the Yankees in exchange for former Ranger Harrah was Grieve's latest move.

"Billy Sample didn't want to play for us anymore and we were glad to get rid of him, just as he was glad to leave," Grieve said. "While there are probably 25 teams in baseball that think Toby is done as a player, based on his last year, the Rangers aren't one of those teams."

Grieve also is convinced that Hooton has recovered from knee injuries that have hampered his career.

"It took a draft choice (second round) to get Hooton and that was thought through a lot," he said. "That's a gamble."

But Grieve will know soon if it was a winning gamble.

Rookie's homer ignites Tigers

Exhibition Baseball

Rookie Nelson Simmons' home run triggered a four-run rally that lifted the defending World Series champion Detroit Tigers to a 7-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox in exhibition baseball action Saturday.

In other games played Saturday on the Florida spring training circuit, Floyd Rayford clubbed a three-run, ninth-inning homer to give the Baltimore Orioles a 5-3 win over the New York Yankees, and Jerry Reuss pitched three innings of shutout ball and stroked a homer in the Los Angeles Dodgers' 7-0 victory over Sansung of Korea.

Jeff Burroughs and Kelly Gruber each hit two-run homers to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 7-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Steve Rogers began his comeback from an off year with three innings of shutout ball in the Montreal Expos' 4-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves, and Mike Stenhouse contributed a two-run single to the Minnesota Twins' 6-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

In another game, Kansas City bested Edison Community College 4-1.

In Arizona's Cactus League, Mel Hall drove in the winning run with a bases-loaded single in the ninth inning as the Cleveland Indians shaded the San Francisco Giants 5-4, and catcher Jody Davis singled in the winning run in the seventh inning as the Chicago Cubs beat Milwaukee 3-2.

A double by Kirk Gibson gave Detroit a run in the first off Boston starter Dennis Boyd, but Boston tied it Jim Rice's long homer in the fourth.

The Tigers took a 3-1 lead in the seventh when Larry Herndon, who doubled, and Chris Pittaro, who singled, came around to score on wild pitches by Boston reliever John Henry Johnson.

An inning later, Simmons homered off relief ace Bob Stanley, and the Tigers added three more runs on a single by Rusty Kuntz, a double by Dwight Lowry, an intentional walk and singles by Ron Johnson and Pittaro.

Last year with Triple A Evansville, Simmons an outfielder, hit .307 with 22 homers and 83 RBI.

Rayford, a seventh-inning defensive replacement, connected off Yankee reliever Joe Cowley as Baltimore overcame a 3-1 New York lead. A solo homer by Larry Sheets made it 3-2 and Mike Young singled and Len Sakata reached on an error in the ninth to set the stage for Rayford.

Reuss, a left-hander who experienced arm problems much of last season, pitched the opening three innings against the Koreans visitors and his three-run homer highlighted a four-run Dodger uprising in the second inning.

Dave Stieb, who signed an 11-year contract for a reported $25 million on Friday, pitched three innings for Toronto, allowing one hit and striking out three White Sox batters.

Burroughs, purchased from the Oakland A's during the off-season, homered against Chicago starter Tom Seaver in the first inning. Gruber, who played most of last season for Syracuse in Class AAA, homered off Ron Reed in the seventh inning.Ron Kittle homered in the seventh off reliever Bill Caudill for the only White Sox run.

Rogers, saddled with a 6-15 record last season, struck out two and allowed two hits in three innings for the Expos. Montreal got the only run it needed in the second when U.L. Washington singled, stole second and scored on a single by Mike Fitzgerald.

The Twins exploded for five runs in the first inning of their Grapefruit League opener against Houston. The Twins put together four singles and two walks off losing pitcher Charlie Kerfeld. Stenhouse drove in two with a single to center and Tom Brunansky, Gary Gaetti and Tim Teufel each had run-scoring singles.

Four Twins pitchers held Houston to five hits. Starter Frank Viola allowed the only run, the result of a pop-fly double to left by Harry Spilman and two groundouts.

A single by Jerry Willard and walks to Geno Petralli and Julio Franco set the stage for Hall's game-winning hit off Giants' reliever and loser Frank Williams. Jim Siwy picked up the victory with two scoreless innings for Cleveland.

Curtis Strange chips on to the green on the 18th in Bay Hill Classic. Strange has a 208 after three rounds and shares first with Fuzzy Zoeller.

Bay Hill Golf

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — There are 24 players, including some of golf's more celebrated names, locked within five strokes of the lead entering Sunday's final round of the Hertz Bay Hill Classic.

"Anybody within five shots can win," said Tom Watson.

Fuzzy Zoller already is a winner, at least by his own reckoning.

"I'm a winner every morning when I can get out of bed and walk and go to the golf course and swing a club," he said .

Zoller made birdie on five of his last six holes for a 66 that lifted him into a tie for the lead with Curtis Strange.

A few months agao he could do none of those things. He could not get out of bed. He could not walk. He could not swing a club.

His career, highlighted by victories in the 1979 Masters and last year's U.S. Open, was in jeopardy.

The easy-going Zoeller, who won the American national championship in a playoff last summer, twice was hospitalized with severe back problems later in the year and, in September, underwent major surgery.

He didn't swing a club until January, didn't start heavy practice until last month and returned to Tour competition less than three weeks ago.

And now, with a 208 total, five shots under par for three trips over Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club course, he is tied for the lead. Strange, winner of last week's Honda Classic, tied him with a third-round 68.

Zoeller's success, his high standing in this event, "might surprise some people, but it doesn't shock me," Fuzzy said.

"I played in pain so long, got so accustomed to pain, that the little aches and pains I have now, the pains of healing, don't bother me.

"Listen, I've been hitting the ball well. It's just the little mental errors I make. I know I'm gonna hit some bad shots, at least until I can get my mind to where I can concentrate for 18 holes," he said.

One of those mental lapses came on the sixth hole, where he drove into the water and made double bogey-7.

"It was a bad shot," he shrugged. "It was a shot that deserved a double bogey."

But Zoeller hit it close to the flag on the back, scoring four of the five birdies in his closing burst after his approach shots had come to rest less than eight feet from the cup.

While the rebounding Zoeller was making his move at the end, those same tough, finishing holes extracted their toll from some of the game's more celebrated names.

Andy Bean, in a tie for the lead, hit into the water on the 18th and made double bogey.

Tom Watson, within a shot of the top, 3-putted from 8 feet on the 16th. "A stupid mistake," he said.

And Greg Norman, the Australian shark-shooter who now owns a home on this course, kept his ball dry but took four strokes to get it on the putting surface at the 18th and fell three off the pace.

Watson and Bean, Andy Magee and Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion, shared third, two shots back of the co-leaders at 210. Magee had a 68, Bean 69, Nelson and Watson 70.

They were followed by Norman and six others at 211, very much within striking distance. Norman had a hard-won round of 70.

He was tied with Dan Pohl, whose 64 was the best round of the tournament, Mark Lye, Keith fergus, Payne Stewart, second round leader Paul Azinger and Corey Pavin. Lye had a 68, Fergus 69, Stewart 70, Pavin 72 and Azinger 74.

Seve Ballesteros, the British Open titleholder who started the round three shots off the lead, struggled to a 75 and was at 215.

After matching par over the front side, Zoeller began his run at the top with an 8-iron shot to three feet on the 13th. A 2-iron stopped within four feet of the cup on the next hole and he made it three birdies in a row with a 7-iron to six inches on the 15th.

The 16th went to a par, and he holed a 35-footer on the 17th and closed it with an eight-foot birdie putt on the 18th.

Bonnie Lauer in strange position

LPGA UNIDEN

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Bonnie Lauer, who's won just once in 10 years on the women's golf tour, found herself in a strange spot after Saturday's third round of the $330,000 Uniden Invitational.

"I don't think I've ever led going into the final round," Lauer said after firing a 4-under-par 68 to break away from the field.

"The only tournament I won, I think I was three shots behind going into the last round," she said, trying to recall that distant victory, eight years ago.

Lauer's three-round total of 209, 7-under-par over the 6,085-yard Mesa Verde Country Club course, gives her a four-shot lead over Alice Miller heading into Sunday's final round.

Lauer was the LPGA's Rookie of the Year in 1976, but, after winning the Patty Berg Classic the following year, she failed to live up to that early promise.

She'd been bothered in recent years by a nerve problem in her wrists, which affected her sense of touch in both hands. But that problem, Carpel Tunnel Syndrome, was corrected by surgery two years ago.

"My hands feel fine now," she said. "I had lost a lot of my touch."

Lauer, who had drawn a small gallery Saturday until she started widening her lead, said she hoped for a large following for the final round.

Arkansas hogs indoor again

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NCAA Track

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Mike Conley, wearing his patented silver spikes, won both the long and triple jumps Saturday for the second consecutive year, leading the University of Arkansas to its second straight men's title in the record-filled NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships.

With Conley accounting for 20 points again, the Razorbacks totaled 70 points, 32 more than they did last year in capturing the title for the first time in the meet's 21-year history.

Florida State, led by a world indoor best in the triple jump by Esmeralda Garcia and a victory by Michelle Finn in the 55-meter dash, was the surprise winner of the women's title, with 34 points, two more than runner-up Texas.

The 22-year-old Conley, a senior from Chicago, won the triple jump for the third year in a row with a leap of 55 feet, 11¾ inches, and took the long jump for the second consecutive year, at 25-10¼. Overall, he has won a total of seven NCAA titles, including the two he won outdoors last year.

While Conley was the dominant individual — the only athlete to win two events — there was numerous other outstanding performances, as three world indoor bests were broken, three American records were cracked, four collegiate marks were shattered, 18 meet marks fell and one meet record was equaled in the 30 finals.

One of the most impressive showings was by Willie Caldwell of Baylor, a senior from Killeen, Texas. The rangy Caldwell sped to a world indoor best of 1 minute, 1.24 seconds in the men's 500-meter race, clipping two-hundredths of a second off the mark of 1:01.26 set this year by Mike Armour of Georgia Tech.

The other two world bests came in women's events.

Garcia, a native of Brazil, twice broke her mark in the women's triple jump, winning at 44-4. She had come into the meet with a world best of 43-3½ and bettered that first with a jump of 43-7¼, before producing her winning effort.

Villanova's 3,200-meter relay team of Kelly Toole, Debbie Grant, Joanne Kehs and Veronica McIntosh established the other world best, clipping more than six seconds off the old world indoor best with a time of 8 minutes, 33.60 seconds.

"Kelly's job was to get the lead," said Villanova Coach Marty Stern. "Then, there were three greyhounds following her."

The "three greyhounds" all recorded personal relay bests, with Grant timed in 2:06.9, Kehs in 2:08.8 and McIntosh in 2:05.6.

The marks by Caldwell, Garcia and Villanova also were collegiate records, as was the 1:47.26 clocking by Eastern Michigan's Earl Jones in the men's 800 meters.

Those performances by Caldwell and Villanova also were American records, along with the 42-9½ second-place finish of Dorothea Bates of the University of Southern California in the women's triple jump.

The other men's meet records were posted by Arkansas' Paul Donovan in the 1,500 (3:43.48), Michael Franks of Southern Illinois in the 400 (46.27), Joe Dial of Oklahoma State in the pole vault (18-6), Sam Graddy of Tennessee in the 55-meter dash (6.12), Wisconsin in the distance medley relay (9:39.4), Kevin King of Georgetown in the 3,000 (7:51.46), Gawain Guy of Rice in the 1,000 (2:22.01), and Southern Methodist in the 1,600-meter relay (3:08.50).

Brigham Young University's Soren Tallhem of Sweden matched the meet record in the shot put at 69-8½.

The remaining women's meet records were broken by Oklahoma State's Christine McMiken of New Zealand in the 3,000 (8:58.68), Lillie Leatherwood of Alabama in the 400 (53.12), Clemson's Tina Krebs of The Netherlands in the 1,500 (4:17.85), Mary Moore of Washington State in high jump (6-3), Cynthia Green of Grambling in the 500 (1:10.46), and Christine Slythe of Louisiana State in the 1,000 (2:42.23).

Texas powers past Tech

DALLAS (AP) — Junior forward Fran Harris scored 23 points and Cara Priddy added 13 to power No. 1 Texas to an 82-62 win over Texas Tech in the Southwest Conference Women's Post-Season Tournament championship Saturday night.

The victory gives Texas a 27-2 record and an automatic berth in the women's NCAA tournament that begins later this week. Seventeenth-ranked Tech dropped to 22-7.

Harris scored 13 of her game-high point total in the first half as the Lady Longhorns raced to a 26-12 lead with 7:56 remaining before intermission.

Sharon Cain, who led the Red Raiders with 16 points, scored 12 in the opening period to help Tech cut the halftime deficit to 39-32.

Andrea Lloyd contributed 12 points to the Texas cause, while Tech was paced by Camille Franklin with 13 points, Tricia Clay with 12 and Lisa Logsdon with 11.

Houston Madison's Wendell Nibbs slam dunks for two points against Conroe in Class 5A championship game at Austin Saturday.

Madison razes Conroe, 89-59

AUSTIN (AP) — Led by Sean Gay's 21 points, Houston Madison rolled to an 89-69 victory over Conroe to complete its undefeated season and take its first Class 5A title at the UIL Boy's State High School Basketball Tournament Saturday night.

Gay was a perfect seven-for-seven from the floor to lead the 40-0 Marlins, while Cedric Brown and Patrick Crocklin added 14 points apiece.

The Tigers, 34-3, were plagued by turnovers and poor shooting — they hit only 26 of 67 shots from the floor and 17 of 32 from the free-throw line.

Conroe's 27 turnovers led to 24 points for the Marlins, and Madison added insult to injury by outrebounding the taller Tigers 45-32.

Maurice Wright paced Conroe with 21 points, followed by Kelvin Smith with 17.

Madison took the lead for good with 7:14 left in the second quarter on a Gerry McGee basket that made the score 22-20. The Marlins stretched the lead to 43-31 at the half and exploded for 24 points in the third quarter to lead 67-51 going into the final period.

State Playoffs

Bay City holds off Tors, 65-63

AUSTIN (AP) — LaBradford Smith and Hart Lee Dykes combined for 43 points to lead Bay City to a 65-63 victory over Lamesa and its first Class 4A title game victory after four shots in the UIL Boy's State High School Basketball Tournament Saturday.

The Blackcats lost in the championship game in 1979, 1980 and 1982 before capping this season with a 35-1 record and their first title.

Jerry Mason paced Lamesa, which finished the season at 28-6, with 25 points and 10 rebounds. Smith led Bay City with 23 points and Dykes added 20 points and 15 rebounds.

Bay City fell behind early, then outscored the Golden Tornadoes 15-1 in the final 3:02 of the first period. The Blackcats stretched their lead to 38-24 at the half.

Jerry Mason and his brother Chris, who finished with 18 points, each scored 12 in the second half to cut into Bay City's lead.

Jerry Mason pulled the Tornadoes within two, 65-63 with eight seconds left. But teammate Gilbert Arredondo couldn't connect on two long shots as time ran out.

In other UIL action Saturday, Sweeny overcame Brownsboro 55-43 in 3A, Grapeland won its first-ever state title with a 63-56 victory over Morton in 2A and La Poyner defeated Nazareth 47-43 in overtime in Class A.

Sweeny, paced by 16 first-half points from senior Kent Baugh, took its first state basketball championship since 1954 with a 55-43 win over Brownsboro in 3A play.

Baugh finished with 18 points, followed by Bennett Fields with 15. Sweeny finished the season at 31-3, while Brownsboro was 30-5.

Tony Jones' 27 points led Grapeland to its first-ever state basketball title with a 63-56 victory over Morton in 2A play.

Jones, a 5-foot-8 University of Texas football recruit, dominated play all over the court, adding eight rebounds, five assists and two steals to his game-high point total.

Keith Hawkins was high scorer for Morton with 16 points, followed by Jimmy Moore and Jerry Joyce with 12 each. The Indians closed their season at 26-10; Grapeland raised its record to 32-3.

La Poynor's Daryl Street scored a three-point play with 25 seconds left in overtime to clinch the 47-43 win over Nazareth in the Class A final.

La Poynor took the lead for the first time in the nip-and-tuck game, 38-36, on Randy Herd's 20-foot jumper with 2:25 left in the fourth quarter. But regulation ended with the teams tied at 40-40.

The Flyers' victory gave La Poynor, 31-6, its fourth state title. The Swifts' loss, their second straight in the championship game, also spoiled the Joe Lombard's second straight attempt to become the first coach in Texas to take his girls and boys teams to the championship in the same year.

Lombard's Swiftettes won the girls' title last weekend, but the boys' squad finished its season at 28-6.

Tose agrees to sell Eagles

From Wire Reports

FOOTBALL—An apparent agreement will allow Miami auto dealer, Norman Braman to by the Philadelphia Eagles from Leonard Tose. Charles M. Golden, Braman's Philadelphia attorney, said, a hitch had developed in structuring the tax aspects of the agreement to fit Tose's needs. Golden said reports that Braman will pay $65 million for 100 percent of the Eagles "are in the ballpark."

The thorniest part of the sale agreement is structuring it to minimize Tose's capital gains liability and to protect Braman against incurring other tax liabilities, Golden said. A capital gain is the increase in value of an asset received when it is sold. Tose paid about $16 million to acquire 99 percent of the club in 1969. He has since withdrawn all $16 million, and an additional $8 million. That means he would ordinarily be liable for the 20 percent capital gains tax on the entire $65 million, since he has already recuped his orginal investment. Tose would be liable for tax on the $8 million extra he withdrew. With a capital gains tax levied on $73 million — the purchase price plus the $8 million withdrawn — Tose would owe the IRS $14.6 million...

BASKETBALL—Herb Brown, coach of the CBA's Puerto Rico Coquis and the CBA's 1984 Coach of the Year, has been suspended for five games and fined $500 for bumping a referee during a game March 4. The suspension is the longest in CBA history and the fine is the largest against a coach in the CBA's 39-year history. Brown will not be paid for the duration of his suspension. The CBA said Brown bumped referee Ken Mauer and pulled and yanked on his whistle chain during a game between the Coquis and the Albany Patroons, which Albany won 129-111...

Basketball not No. 1 in Kentucky

By ANNE S. CROWLEY

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Basketball will take a backseat to commerce for many people in the Kentucky Bluegrass when the sport crowns a new collegiate champion here next month.

During the 4½ days of the Final Four, there will be 22,000 people to squire around and entertain, 297,000 meals to prepare and serve, 40,000 game programs to sell and 35,000 souvenir cups of soft drinks to peddle.

Managers at Rupp Arena, site of this year's Final Four, expect the fans to gobble up 15,000 hot dogs, 27,500 ice cream cones and 7,000 boxes of popcorn during the semifinals and finals.

The food is small potatoes, though.

Tournament organizers hope the event will pour as much as $15 million into the local economy, and they believe it will pay dividends in tourism, conventions and economic development for years to come.

"THIS is extremely important to the community. We certainly want to put our best foot forward," said Tom Minter, president of the company that runs Rupp Arena. "We want to show ... that a community capable of hosting the Final Four is capable of hosting a whole lot of organized activities."

The business community that built a hotel partly to secure Lexington's tournament bid has donated $450,000. Donors of large amounts were rewarded with prime seats for the semifinal and championship games March 31 and April 1.

The University of Kentucky received more than 130,000 applications last spring for the 6,600 tickets that went on public sale.Nearly 3,000 locals, shut out of the games, have volunteered to drive, guide and otherwise assist the basketball visitors.

NCAA's FINAL FOUR

Jim Smither, executive director of the Lexington Convention and Visitors Bureau, estimates that each visitor will stay 4½-5 days and spend at least $100 per day for hotel rooms, meals, souvenirs, tours and drinks.

"Everybody in the community will touch some of that money," Smither said."The beauty of that money is that it's earned in other communities and spent here. We're not going to build any schools for those people, or streets or sewers. We're not going to have to spend it on welfare or unemployment. All we have to do is receive it, say thank you, be nice and hospitable and look forward to getting them back here again."

SEATTLE, which held the 1984 championships, is in that stage now.

"It's the best thing I've ever been involved with," said Bob Bushman, chairman of Seattle's host committee. "We booked a lot of business because of it ... People exposed to us who had no idea we could handle anything that big. They thought Seattle was a little tiny town up near Juneau."

Bushman said Seattle officials believe $20 million was spent during Seattle's Final Four, but they don't know yet how it affected tourism.

The American Society of Travel Agents delivered a plum by booking its huge annual meeting for Seattle in 1987, partly because the agents were impressed by a $150,000 salmon barbecue the host committee threw during the tournament, Bushman said. And the tournament wi return to Seattle in 1989.

Lexington organizers — who like to boast tha with the University of Kentucky's winning trad tion, the championships are finally coming t the center of college basketball — hope for sim lar success.

"The mayor says it very well: Seattle baked th cake and we're going to put the icing on it," sai Fred Hynson, Lexington's commissioner of gen eral services and executive director of the NCA host committee.

EVERYONE from the chief justice of the stat Supreme Court, who heads Lexington's host com mittee, to Mayor Scotty Baesler, to the staffs o motels miles away will be touched by the tourna ment.

Lexington has 5,000 hotel rooms, most of which are committed to the NCAA, competing schools out-of-town press and the National Association o Basketball Coaches. But NCAA officials estimate that the tournament requires more than twice that many rooms. Thus, motels in nearby Frank fort, Winchester, Richmond, Berea and Danville are heavily booked, and many fans will stay up to 80 miles away in Cincinnati or Louisville.

That, Smither saidd, gives visitors a variety of possibilities for touring in their spare time: Horse farms, whiskey plants, historic battlegrounds, museums, a Shaker village, tobacco warehouses, covered bridges and the state Capitol, in addition to shopping, movies and other city activities.

"LEXINGTON is an ideal location and we have the facilities. ... They'll discover one of the most delightful cities in America," Smither said. "And how many times do you want to hold your meeting in an Atlanta, a San Francisco or a Miami Beach? We offer something different."

Ted Battles/Reporter-Telegram

Taking the gondola trail with ski area base seen in the valley. New Mexico's Sierra Blanca, boasting the best snow around this winter, is a favorite haunt of Texas skiers.

Telemark turn back on slopes

CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. (AP) — Sometime in the 1860s, in a Norwegian town called Telemark, a ski jumper figured out how to carve a smooth, graceful turn in the snow.

It was, ski experts say, the beginning of skiing as a mode of transport, a new way of warfare and, ultimately, a billion-dollar sport and big business.

Today, high, rigid plastic boots, skis edged with metal and surer safety bindings have made it possible for just about any one to fly down the slopes. But this winter in the Rockies, the old telemark turn is making a comeback.

The graceful genuflect of a skier's knee turns the skis through either light powder or snow that is crusted and wind-swept.

Enthusiasts are foresaking safety release bindings and the high boots that give good ankle support in favor of the three-pin binding, lower-cut boots and skinny skis usually seen in old movies or on today's cross-country tracks.

Steve Cook views telemark skiing as a different technique, one that opens more challenges and back-country terrain to an accomplished Alpine skier.

Kris Pogoloff says it is the way he learned to ski.

"I've only skiied Alpine six times in my life," he said. "And the only reason I'm doing that is to qualify for the ski patrol."

A good Alpine skier shoots down the mountain with skis, feet and knees parallel. Turns are made by subtly shifting weight and controlling ski edges. An accomplished skier appears as smooth negotiating huge bumps and deep powder as on an intermediate cruising run.

Telemark skiers cut a different figure entirely. Because only their toes are held on their skis, they turn by bending one knee deeply, throwing their weight to the other ski and carving the turns with what appears to be alternating genuflecting motions.

A telemark turn, like an Alpine parallel turn, is graceful, but far more active.

Rick Borkovec, the 35-year-old director of Nordic skiing at Crested Butte, insists telemarking is not a sport in itself, only another tool of a back-country skier.

Keeping the heel free from the ski allows easier climbing and skiing along flat surfaces, he says. And the telemark turn makes even the most imposing slope manageable.

Unlike some Nordic enthusiasts, Borkovec thinks both Alpine and telemark equipment have their places.

"I like all the aspects of skiing," the former Western State College racer said. "I still like downhill and I do it when I'm skiing the mountain here. The telemark technique is for the back country."

"If I'm skiing powder, I'll telemark. If it's hardpack, I'd rather have my downhill gear," he said.

Telemark skiers like the way the technique opens up the back country, enabling them to ski on just about anything in the Rockies.

"I like to ski powder or even cut-up crud as much as I can, and here you have to hike for it," said Tom Bielefeld, 29, a New York state native who has lived in Crested Butte six years.

As for learning to ski the hard way, he said, "if you want to become a good skier, skiing 150 days a year is the way to do it."

TED BATTLES

In answer to demands, Texas' own ski resort...

Reader demands for a first-hand report on Texas' ski resort and a continuing quest for something called "spring skiing" and its accompanying delights led the indomintable Herr Eng Boen to the frosted slopes of Sierra Blanca, burdened with its heaviest snow fall in 10 years.

Despite its heart-of-New Mexico location, it is, in fact, Texas' ski resort, a discovery made not without some anxiety and apprehension.

As for spring skiing, the regretful conclusion is that it simply isn't so, an unfounded myth like the whimsical tales that Northwestern and Columbia played in the Rose Bowl or the Chicago Cubs once won a pennant.

It took three years to screw up the courage to try spring-skiing after being caught high up in the Kachina Basin at Taos in a blizzard accompanied by stinging 60 to 100 mph winds. The day of arrival, it had been 80 degrees in town and college-break skiers were returning from the slopes with the kind of skin pigmentation that had the folks out at the Pueblo envious.

THE AFTERNOON I arrived at Ruidoso, skiers that night at the restaurant wore what looked like white eye-masks over their red faces. From town, the sun had glared demandingly, "Why aren't you up here getting your tan?" I wondered if I'd even need a jacket the next day and where was the suntan oil?

It turned out to be a cruel joke. The next day, Sierra Blanca was socked in solid with clouds. At the top of the mountain, it was windy, cold and I was groping down trails I'd never been on before blind.

Apache Bowl was a complete whiteout. I couldn't even find the trail. Occasionally, there were vague forms in the mist. As long as they were moving, I knew they weren't trees. And when they were gobbled up in the whiteness, voices that kept fading like a distant radio signal were used to find the way.

Spring skiing? Never again, unless...

ALTHOUGH Ruidoso is only 270 miles from Midland, one of the raps is the weekend crowds and long lift lines. It's one reason, I usually go to Taos on a free weekend, despite the extra 200 miles.

If you can get away during the week, Serria Blanca is a rewarding experience. In fact, as one of the rental shop proprietors remarked, "It gets so you wish there were some lines so you could rest between runs. You can get as many trips down as you want."

I've always found that one of the bonuses of riding the lifts is rapport with the stranger beside you. At Sierra Blanca, I rode to the top with a chair partner only twice, once with a young lass whose tongue would have shamed a drunken sailor, and then with a guy who wanted to get off.

Only on the gondola ride to the top were there companions, all of them Texans, except for one trip. And some of the interesting tidbits....

From a San Antonio stockbroker, "It takes me 6½ hours to get here from San Antionio. I lose most of my time after I get to Fort Stockton."

From an Austin insurance man, "It takes me 10 hours, but I don't push it."

From the head of an El Paso family, who make weekly visits, "From the time I back out of my drive way, it takes three hours".

And then there was the trip up on which there were no Texans. The young lady across made some remark about, "I suppose you are both Texans." The guy next to me said no. She pursued saracastically, "I'll bet you are from Lubbock. Texans come up here once and go home 'skiers'".

"No, I'm from Albuquerque. I usually ski Santa Fe or Taos, but the snow is so good here. I had to check it out."

"What about Sandia Crest?" the lady from Ruidoso asked, "I hear they have good snow this year."

"Let me tell you about Sandia. It takes 18½ minutes to get to the top on their only lift and, if you aren't careful, you'll ski to the bottom in less than two minutes."

WHEN SHE got around to me, I was afraid to admit I was a Texan, especially with the gondola window half open. "I just stopped over in Texas on my way here from Stowe, Vt.," I stretched a small grain of truth about as far as it could be stretched.

Surprisingly, she was familiar with Stowe. "The people out here (the ski base) are having the biggest year in a decade, but things aren't so good in town. Everybody is eating baloney sandwiches. Nobody is eating out. Ruidoso could take some lessons from Stowe. It has 27 restaurants, not fast foods, but every kind of European dining you could desire." I guess that's about the right ratio for a village of 534.

But it didn't sound like the Stowe I knew as a kid when I helped with the haying on an uncle's farm in the summer. Stowe is now a jet-set hangout. But until the von Trapps came and skiing became really big, it was just a picturesque New England village. The big excitement was when Ralph Waldo Emerson summered in the hotel atop Mount Mansfield and later when Lowell Thomas would do his Friday night newscasts from Stowe so he could ski on the weekend.

The guy next was asked how the Sierra Blanca cracking whip access compared to the Santa Fe corkscrew. The young lady never let him answer, bristling indignantly, "This is the longest, most winding and steepest in the world." Neither of us disputed her. Talk about cliff-hanging drives.

BUT it was skiing, not conversation that prompted the Sierra Blanca visit.

One of the nice things about Sierra Blanca was that I discovered I was an expert skier.

I don't know whether I've improved that much or was doing a better job of keeping my shoulders pointed down hill or the runs are actually easier.

At any rate, I skied everything on the mountain. The best lift was the Lincoln, which goes almost to the top and leads to a nice variety of diamond runs such as Incredible, Terrible, Mescalero, Caliente, Roy's Run, Upper Snow Park, and Gondola and Lincoln Lift runs.

It's enough to keep you busy all day and leave you too exhausted at night to go out and eat. If Sierra Blanca was easier, my muscles refused to admit. Anybody got a baloney sandwich for supper?

SWC tourney still not SRO hit

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
An AP Sports Analysis

DALLAS — You could have stepped right up on Thursday and, for $15, bought yourself a ticket to the championship game of the 10th annual Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic.

That little fact, less than 24 hours before the tournament began on Friday in Reunion Arena after the craziest regular season in SWC history, says a lot.

It emphasizes that the SWC is still struggling with its image of football and spring football as the top two sports in the league.

Why else would the national television networks, including the All-Sports cable network ESPN, ignore the SWC tournament title game on Sunday?

One reason is that the SWC is not yet a thump-thump brand name.

ATLANTIC Coast Conference projects the image of hoops, sneakers, and rainbow jump shots.

SWC imagery is more oval ball than round ball. So SWC basket boosters will had to settle for television by Raycom, a regional outfit that dutifully scheduled telecasts for each and every game.

The SWC product is improving rapidly but getting the word around is still like trying to win a triple overtime game with a mid-court push shot at the buzzer.

"This is one of the best five leagues in the country and we still have to fight for attention," says Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "It's becoming frustrating trying to promote the league."

Sutton says the SWC deserves four teams in the NCAA playoffs and adds "there's no justice" if the league doesn't get them.

However, the SWC traditionally has a tough time getting teams into the tournament although it has had excellent past success.

For example, Houston has been in the Final Four the last three years. Southern Methodist lost by only a point to eventual champion Georgetown last year.

The SWC had three teams in the NCAA Tournament last year but the ACC, Big East, and Big Ten conferences each had five or more.

"You guys need to help us out and be a lot more positive," Sutton says to the media.

A RECENT SWC press conference ended up being a pep rally for what the league had done against outside teams this year.

Baylor Coach Jim Haller ticked off some of the results "Let's see, Texas is No. 7 in the SWC and beat Southern California the Pac 10 leader, and SMU beat ACC co-champion North Carolina, and Houston beat Southeast champion LSU, and Rice beat Notre Dame and SMU beat Big Eight champion Oklahoma...."

It was like the SWC basketball coaches felt compelled to chest beat to journalists who had been covering them all year.

We're talking semi-paranoia here.

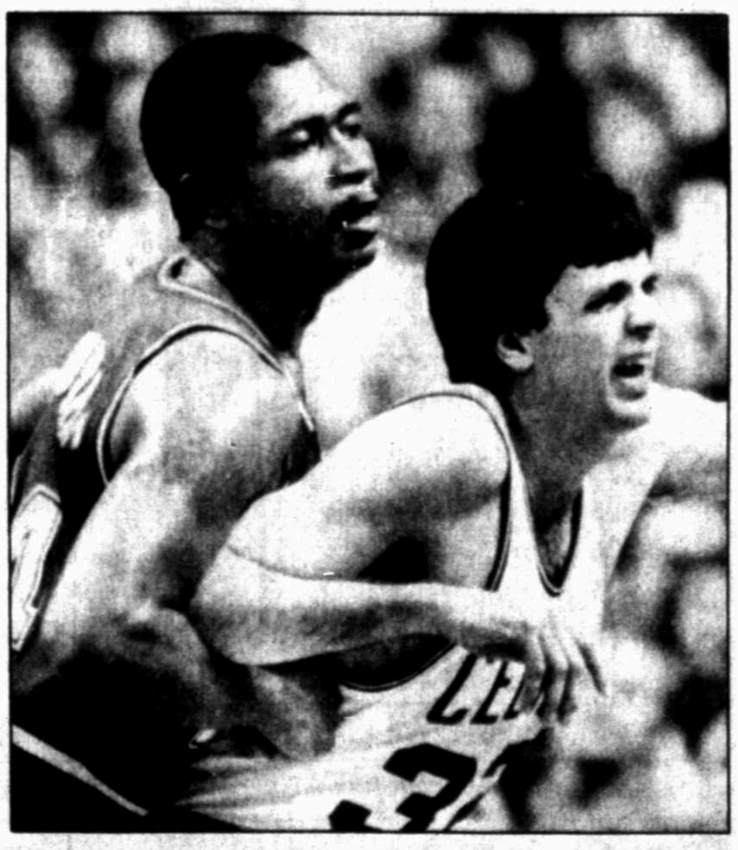

The SWC Post-Season Classic is still supposed to be the primary vehicle for putting the league product in the fast lane of NCAA basketball.

However, if at least the championship game isn't televised nationally, who will know out there beyond the borders of Texas and Arkansas?

This calls for some drastic action.

Why doesn't the SWC pool its money and pay ABC, NBC or CBS to televise its title game nationally?

THERE'S no rule against it. While the Big Ten and Pac 10 sleep (they don't even bother to have a tournament) the SWC could be polishing its image at their expense.

Boston Celtics' Kevin McHale, right, has been on an NBA scoring binge with 56 and 42 point outbursts.

Baby boy ignites scoring outburst

By HOWARD ULMAN

BOSTON (AP) — Way up in northern Minnesota, Gary Addington picked up his telephone last Sunday night and dialed Kevin McHale's home in the Boston area. The long-distance friends had a special event to discuss.

"The first thing I asked him about was the little boy," said Addington, McHale's basketball coach at Hibbing (Minn.) High School. "I just mentioned his good game" after chatting about the baby.

That afternoon, eight days after Michael Kevin McHale was born, his father had set a Boston Celtics' single-game, regular-season record with 56 points against Detroit. But even after McHale poured in 42 more points Tuesday night against New York to establish a club record of 98 points in two consecutive games, no one was billing him as the second coming of Wilt Chamberlain.

OPPORTUNITY, not a surprise visit from a genie who suddenly bestowed magical shooting powers upon the 6-foot-10 forward, was responsible for turning Boston's supersub into a super scorer.

Cedric Maxwell's knee injury that required surgery made McHale a starter. In his 52 National Basketball Association games this season before Maxwell was sidelined, McHale averaged 17.4 points and 30.4 minutes. In his first nine games starting in Maxwell's place, he averaged 27.9 points and 41.1 minutes.

"What everyone on this team realizes is that Kevin is perfectly capable of scoring 30 or more a night when he gets the playing time," Boston guard Danny Ainge said.

McHale's short turnaround jumper is tough to stop. He's a tiger on the offensive boards, often tipping in teammates' missed shots. His 57.2 field goal percentage leads Boston.

But until last Sunday, his high game in more than 4½ years with the Celtics was just 33 points.

The opportunity to roll up eye-popping point totals also eluded him in high school and college.

"The most points he ever scored in a high school game was 27 or 29. It was an exceptional team," Addington said. "We had a lot of scoring power besides Kevin."

He went on to star at Minnesota, where he never scored more than 32 points in a game and averaged 15.2 points for his collegiate career.

"Nobody could have a game like this in college because of the zone," Detroit's Isiah Thomas said after McHale broke Larry Bird's club record of 53 points. "Because of it, you don't get to show how good you are. He was really good in college."

MAXWELL'S injury finally gave McHale the opportunity to fill up the basket. Other injuries enhanced his opportunity.

Detroit played Sunday without sidelined forwards Dan Roundfield and Kelly Tripucka, while Kent Benson was ejected early in the third quarter. New York played Tuesday night without ailing forwards Pat Cummings and James Bailey. Louis Orr hurt his ankle in the second quarter and didn't play again.

Neither team was left with a player who could guard McHale.

After his two big games, Chicago "held" McHale to 22 points in a 107-104 victory Wednesday night.

"They double-teamed me more than they have in the past and I didn't have that many shots," McHale said. "It's not often you'll see a low-post player continue scoring a lot of points because the opposition will make adjustments from game to game."

Player invited to Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Three-time champion Gary Player of South Africa and two-time champion Severiano Ballesteros of Spain head the list of foreign golfers invited to participate in the 1985 Masters golf tournament.

Player, who won the Masters in 1961, 1974 and 1978, and Ballesteros, who won it in 1980 and 1983, were among 13 foreigners invited Saturday to play in the Masters, which will be held April 11-14 at the Augusta National Golf Club.

Hord W. Hardin, chairman of the tournament, said the selection of the foreign golfers was based "on our judgment of ability to provide competition for the U.S.A. players."

Unlike the foreign golfers, Americans invited to participate in the Masters must earn their invitations through a fixed set of 14 qualification regulations, Hardin said.

Four of the 13 foreigners will be making their first appearance in the Masters. They include Ian Baker-Finch of Australia, winner of the 1984 Western Australia Open and the 1984 New South Wales Open;

Winning, it's the only thing that counts

"If you aspire to the highest place it is no disgrace to stop at the second, or even the third." — Orations of Cicero, 55 B.C.

In 1851, in the waters off the south of England, the definitive word on finishing second was delivered by the members of the Royal Yacht Squadron Club just after they had been beaten in a regatta by the invading schooner, America.

Queen Victoria digested the news and then signaled: "Who was second?"

Back came the embarrassed message: "Your Majesty, there is no second."

It is a notion reinforced by a generation of American football coaches. "Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing," is ascribed to Vince Lombardi, but the chances are that the line was first uttered by Napoleon at Waterloo or Hannibal in the Alps.

AMERICANS don't consider not winning a disgrace, exactly. They just kind of avoid discussing it. It isn't as if it were the non-winner's fault. It's as if he has some infirmity you pretend not to notice — like an elephant man or cross-eyes. You try to talk around it.

Someone once said — it was probably an owner — that it was better not to have gone to the Super Bowl at all than to have gone and lost.

Coaches who go and lose "Can't win the big ones," according to the whispers going around about them.

If you're in the company of Dan Marino and Don Shula this winter, make book on how many times the subject of Super Bowl XIX does not come up. The weather, the situation in the Middle East, and tax reform will all take precedence over football. It's as if they had a mortifying communicable disease that polite people don't talk about.

Which is why I was enormously cheered recently to note where a triple-jumper, of all people, is about to strike a blow for second finishers everywhere.

Mike Conley, who was probably America's best triple-jumper, if not the world's, going into the '84 Olympics, sprained his ankle on his first jump at the Games and finished second, by three inches, to Al Joyner, winning the silver to Joyner's gold.

A tragedy, right? Something to be quickly forgotten, put out of the mind, concealed like some past indiscretion?

Not exactly. Not according to Conley's way of thinking.

He did something that, to my knowledge, has never been done before. He took to showing up at meets in an outfit of silver — silver shoes, silver skivvies and, of course, his silver medal.

CICERO WOULD have understood perfectly. Shula might not.

What Mike Conley was saying was, "Hey, look at me! I was one of the top three people in the whole world at what I do. Better than all but one guy! Isn't that terrific?! How many people you know can make that statement?"

Heretofore, silver medals were something you threw in a trunk and tried to forget. After all, they were a reminder of how close you had come to immortality. And missed.

How many people will remember who was second to Carl Lewis in any of his '84 gold-medal victories? Does the name Kirk Baptiste mean anything to you? Sam Graddy ring a bell? Do you remember that Mack Robinson, Jackie's brother, was within a tick of Jesse Owens in Berlin in 1936? Who was second in last year's Kentucky Derby? Whom did Lincoln beat in 1864?

Mike Tully is another case in point. In 1978, Tully was America's, and one of the world's, best pole vaulters, consistently over 18 feet. Even 19 feet was in range.

Like a lot of Americans, he lost interest, to say nothing of form, when the boycott of the Moscow Games was ordered. He dropped out for 18 months.

NOW, POLE vaulting, like diamond cutting or playing golf, is a skill that has to be renewed and refined or it is lost. It calls for a precise set of maneuverings that depend for execution on endless repetition.

The pole vault was an event that was never lost by America in the Olympics until 1972, and has not been won by America since.

So, when Tully geared up for one more campaign in 1982, a lot of people thought it was a waste of time that might better be spent on his budding film career. After all, the Russians were scraping ceilings in indoor meets in Europe, the French had their own facility just for vaulters. Tully frequently had to rig up his own crossbar in an empty lot and hope the owner didn't show up.

The 1984 Olympics burst on such a shower of gold medals for Americans that the original telecasts sounded like recruiting posters. The chauvinism got so shrill that one swimmer, who only got a gold medal and not a world record, too, w thrown into a fit of depression.

In this atmosphere, Tully n rowly lost out to an undersiz Frenchman in the pole vault. wasn't so much out-jumped as o strategied. The French vaulte winner Pierre Quinon and bron medalist Thierry Vigneron, mane vered him into a box where he h to pass at the dangerous height of feet 10 1/4 inches, then try 19-1/4.

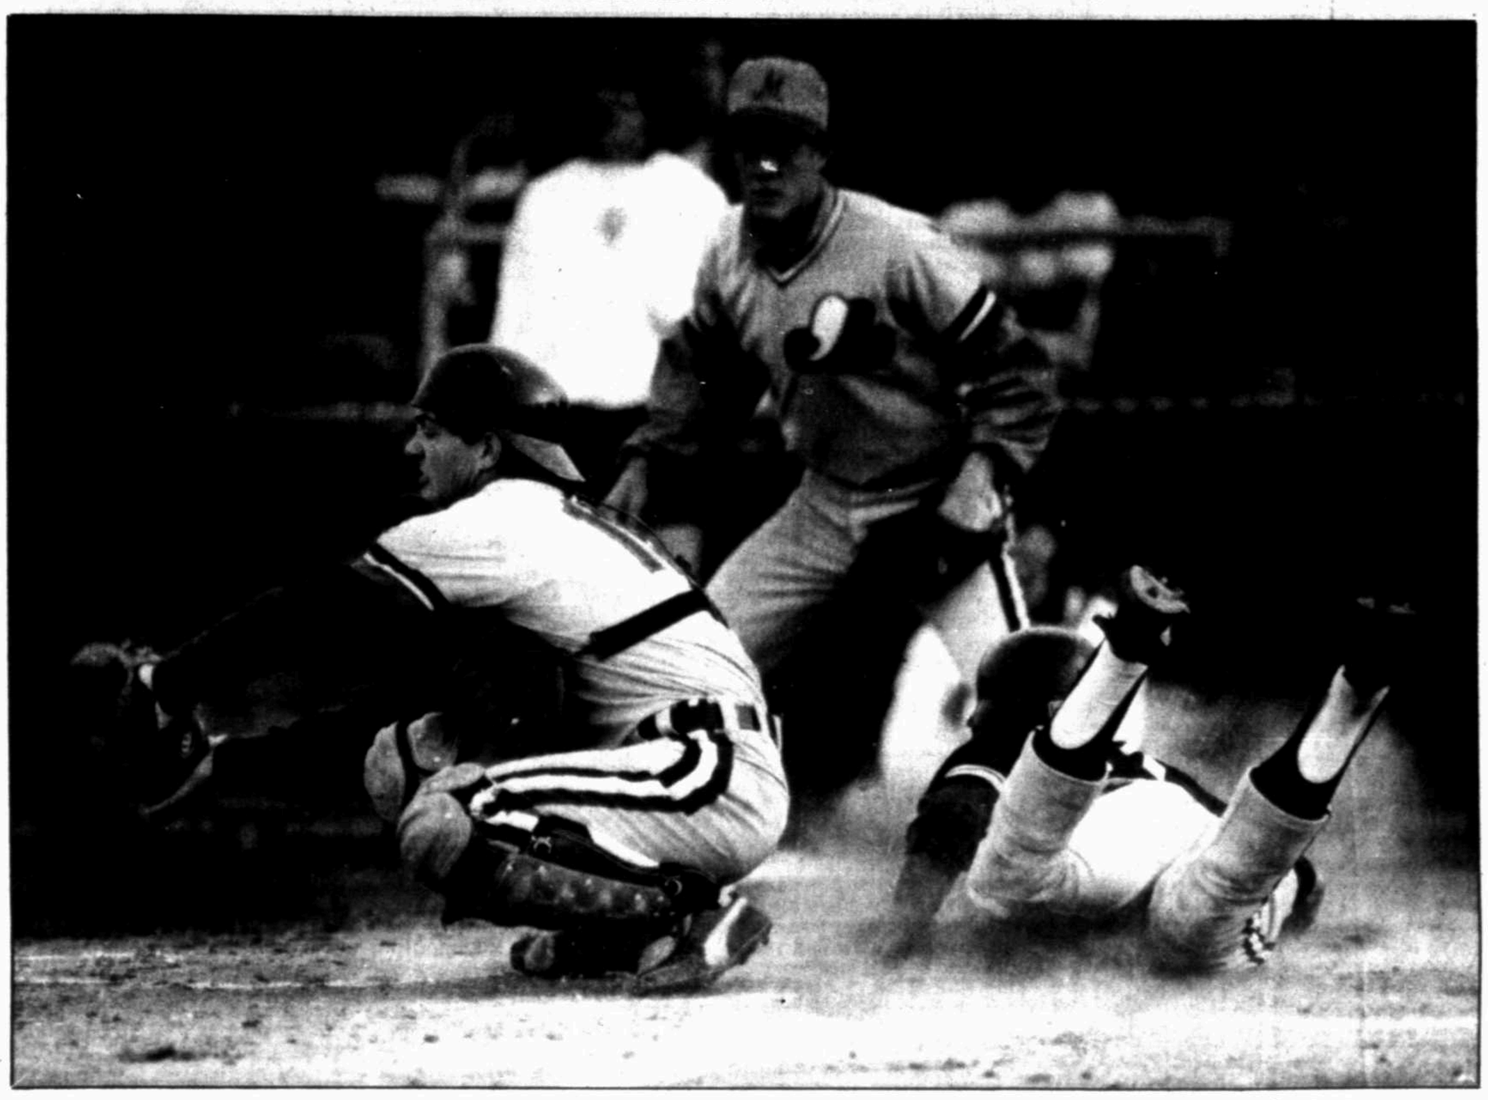

"The 18-10 1/4 would only ha tied me and we would have had go at 19 anyway," Tully said, shru ging.

Tully missed his 19-foot jumps and his gold medal. But his accor plishment was one of the top feats the U.S. team.

Silver is a precious metal, to Cicero was right. Yes, Your Majest there is a second, and we are proud

Stallions stomp Renegades, 34-10

USFL

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback Cliff Stoudt passed for two touchdowns and ran for another as the Birmingham Stallions easily rolled to a 34-10 victory over the winless Orlando Renegades Saturday night.

It was the third straight loss for the Renegades, formerly the Washington Federals. Birmingham is now 2-1.

The only damper on the evening for Birmingham came when leading rusher Joe Cribbs left the game in the second quarter with what was believed to be a broken finger.

The only bright spot for the Renegades came early in the first quarter when they took the lead for the first time since moving to Orlando this season.

With just 5:43 gone in the game, Jerry Golsteyn hit William Miller with a short pass in the right flat and the 5-foot-9, 190-pound running back turned it into a 45-yard touchdown play.

Birmingham tied the game later in the quarter, mounting a 62-yard, 10-play drive with Cribbs bursting through the left side of the line for the final 13 yards before a crowd of 25,831.

Orlando took a 10-7 lead when Jeff Brockhaus kicked a 22-yard field goal with 7:45 left in the first half.

From there on it was all Birmingham.

On the Stallions' first possession after the Orlando field goal, they marched 77 yards on 14 plays. Stoudt, a former Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback, hit Smith with the first of two scoring passes, this one covering 8 yards.

Birmingham continued to move the ball well on its next possession. This time the Stallions, getting the ball with 1:12 left in the half, moved 29 yards to the Orlando 31 from where Danny Miller kicked a 48-yard field goal to make the half-time score 17-10.

The Stallions added a 40-yard Miller field goal on their first possession of the second half, then did not score again until the final period.

Nine plays after an interception Stoudt sneaked in from the one and Miller's extra point kick ran the score to 27-10.

Birmingham's last score of the evening came when Stoudt spotted Smith open behind the Renegade secondary. Smith, an 8-year pro from Michigan, caught the ball in full stride and completed the 43-yard touchdown play.

Lloyd, McCray power Rockets

NBA

From Wire Reports

SAN ANTONIO — Lewis Lloyd and Rodney McCray scored 24 points each to power the Rockets past the San Antonio Spurs 123-117 Saturday night.

The Rockets had six players in double figures as they registered their third win in four tries against San Antonio. Houston improved its record to 38-26, while the loss dropped the Spurs to 32-33.

San Antonio had the game's top two scorers, Mike Mitchell with 39 and Artis Gilmore with 35, but they were the only Spurs in double figures.

Joining Lloyd and McCray in double-figure scoring, Ralph Sampson scored 20 points, Akeem Olajuwon 18, Robert Reid 12 and Mitchell Wiggins 10.

Lloyd hit 15 points in the first quarter to lift Houston to a 36-32 lead after one period. But with Gilmore collecting 19 points and Mitchell 17, the Spurs led 63-61 at halftime.

After 11 lead changes and 15 ties in the first three periods, Houston never trailed in the fourth quarter, although the Spurs tied the score twice. The last time was at 1:09 on a 20-foot jump shot by George Gervin.

Jazz 111, Bulls 105

CHICAGO — Darrell Griffith scored 40 points to lead the Utah Jazz. Griffith, who came within one point of his season high, helped the Jazz overcome a 19-point deficit early in the second quarter and better its season record to 31-33.

The Bulls were paced by Orlando Woolridge's 35 points.

Knicks 131, 76ers 129

NEW YORK — Bernard King scored a game-high 42 points and put in a rebound with three seconds left in the second overtime as the New York Knicks defeated Philadelphia, 131-129.

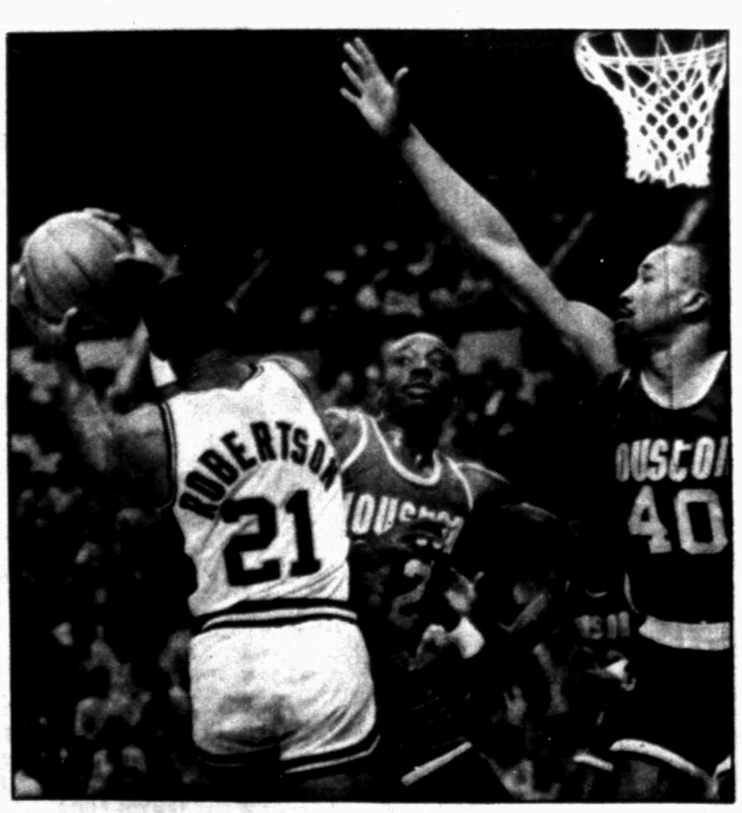

The Knicks, who fell behind by 17 points in the second quarter, rallied to break a five-game losing streak. The loss dropped Philadelphia two games behind the first-place Boston Celtics in the Eastern Conference's Atlantic Division.

Pistons 115, Hawks 113

ATLANTA — Kelly Tripucka hit a pair of free throws with five seconds remaining to cap a 16-point fourth quarter in Detroit's win over Atlanta.

Atlanta, behind a career-high 48-point performance by Dominique Wilkins, led most of the game and took an 86-84 advantage into the final period.

But Tripucka scored seven points during a 10-2 Detroit surge that gave the Pistons a 109-105 lead with 1:47 remaining. Wilkins then scored six points to help the Hawks tie the score three times before Tripucka's free throws iced the victory.

San Antonio's Alvin Robertson finds his way blocked by Houston's Lewis Lloyd and Larry Micheaux (40) in NBA action Saturday night.

MONTEREY

"Our pitching, that's a misnomer. It was really what you call throwing. One time I looked up and saw an 11-0 lead and the next thing I knew it was 11-8," said MHS coach Tim Whalen.

MONTEREY AND Lee each placed four players on the All-Tournament list. For the Rebels, Dirk Bergoon was named utility infielder; Tuey Rankin, outfield; George Matta, pitcher; and Mike Small, designated hitter.

Monterey's Brian Christensen was picked at first base, Mike Eckels, third; Doug Welch, utility outfielder; Jimmy Webster, catcher.

For Thomas Jefferson, Morris Moss was named the tournament's Most Valubable Player while teammates Mike Moscfrey, pitcher; and Toby Behave, outfield, were also selected to the All-Tournament list.

Midland High's Darren Thorpe, second base, and Kenny De La Garza, shortsop; and Amarillo Tascosa's Paul Dominguez, outfield, were also selected.

CHAPs

Stone was pleased that Coleman was given the MVP trophy. "That's just fine with me because Vernon epitomizes what our team is all about. He's one who has to work for everything he gets."

Chuckie Graves, who had 21 points on Friday against Amarillo, came back with 10 against McLennan was the third Chap honored as an All-Tournament selection.

Tony Wright, who had an outstanding tournament, came in with 14 points while Eddie Frazier had 12 points and a team-high seven rebounds.

Goudeau, who missed sending the game into overtime, led the Highlanders with 19 points, but he hit only 7-of-21 shots from the field. Terrence Woods, who eliminated Odessa College Friday with a buzzer-beating 20-foot bomb, scored 16 points after being held to a meager two points in the first half. Donald Harvey had 12 points.

McLennan coach Ken DeWeese took the loss in stride. "We just let them get too far ahead, but I think we made a great run at pulling this thing out of the fire. We had a good shot and it didn't go. The one Friday went, so I guess we died by the same sword, so to speak."

MC's Wright said, "we made a lot of dumb passes and turnovers late in the game, but we hung on. All I know now is one more game and we are on our way to Kansas."

TOURNAMENT NOTES: McLennan's Woods and Mike Martin, who was held to three points by the Chapse, were All-Tournament choices. Others were: Eric Chin and Mark Benoit, Odessa College; Mike Sanders, Amarillo; David Lynch, Grayson; and Eddie Newell, New Mexico Junior College.

Lon Morris and Laredo are currently involved in a Region XIV best two-of-three playoff. Laredo won Saturday night in Laredo to tie the series at 1-1. They meet again Tuesday in San Marcus, a neutral site. That will give Coach Stone a chance to scout his next opponent. Stone said, "We'll have to decide Tuesday when and where we will play the bi-regional game. I think it will have to be no later than Thursday or Friday. The national tournament starts the following Tuesday."

Amarillo referee Ron Jones, who called Saturday night's Region V final, said that AC women's coach Kelly Chadwick and men's coach Mark Nixon have been released by the school. "It's my understanding that Amarillo is dropping basketball due to a $1.8 deficit at the school," said Jones. That means Midland's 79-66 vicgtory over the Badgers Friday was the last junior college basketball game for Amarillo College.

"We were keying on him," Chicago's Michael Jordan said. "Every time he got the ball, we doubled down on him."

THE FACT McHale started only 56 of 328 games in his first four NBA seasons didn't keep him from being noticed. He averaged two blocks and 6.3 rebounds per game in those campaigns and was a member of the East all-star team last season, when he won the league's "Sixth Man" award as the top substitute.

"He's one of the top 10 players in the league," Chicago Coach Kevin Loughery said.

"He has tremendous reach and plays with his arms in the air," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "He plays like an 8-footer."

Still, Maxwell is a strong defensive player and rebounder, and probably will start when he recovers. McHale said that being the latest in a long line of outstanding Celtic sixth men doesn't bother him.

"It's a team game. You don't win by starting," he said.

Maxwell expects to return to action within two weeks, and Boston Coach K.C. Jones isn't saying if McHale will return to the bench.

"There's no need to deal with that now," he said. "You get into the future, you miss the present."

McHale hasn't been missing much in his present but — 56 points or no 56 points — he has a pretty good idea of what will happen when Maxwell is healthy.

"When Max comes back," he said, "I'll be relegated to my bench role."

Lee freshmen win title

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Lee Freshman ran to four meet records enroute to the Optimist relays' team title here Saturday.

The Little Rebels posted a team total of 145 points, 44 better than runnerup Big Spring and nearly double third place finisher San Angelo Lakeview's 77.

Two of Lee Freshman's victorys came in relay events, the 400 and 1600-meters and all four came from only five runners.

On the 400 relay, Durian Jenkins, Jimmy Fennell, Dennis Sterling and Joe Woodard ran to a record time of 45.29 while the 1600 relay of Jenkins, Fennell, Woodard and Marcus Mayberry set the mark at 3:39.77.

Individually, Fennell crossed the finish line in a record time of 15.61 in the 110 high hurdles while Woodard set the best mark in the 200 run at 23.72.

Other Lee Freshman first place finishes went to: Sterling, 300 intermediate hurdles, 44.09; and Davais Conners, shot put, 40-6¾.

The victory is the second in a row for Lee Freshman. Last week the Little Rebels won top honors in San Angelo.

Tots steal limelight at Chinese recital

PEKING (AP) — One contestant wouldn't stop playing until he was lifted off the piano stool; another wouldn't start without his doll.

Even though their feet dangled high above the pedals, tots stole the limelight Saturday at the first children's piano contest in Peking.

Contestants marched onto the stage at the Central Conservatory of Music's big auditorium, made little bows to the audience and were lifted onto the piano stool, their feet far above the pedals of the black grand piano.

After bricks were piled up to support their legs, there were a few false starts and wrong notes, but most played with confidence and flair.

One 5-year-old, Tan Xiaotang, didn't want to stop after his required three pieces. He kept playing until an official came and lifted him off the stool. He bowed solemnly in his yellow suit and departed.

Dashing off passages of Mozart and Schubert along with specially composed Chinese set pieces, the 93 finalists aged 12 or younger competed for prizes such as musical instruments, tape recorders and metronomes.

Winners were to be announced Sunday.

Co-sponsored by the conservatory, Peking Culture Bureau, Chinese Musicians' Association and various media, the contest surprised organizers by attracting 304 entries. The 106 children in the pre-school age group included four 3-year-olds.

Piano playing, and especially Western music, was considered bourgeois and decadent during China's leftist 1966-76 Cultural Revolution but they're now enjoying a boom.

Wang Yuxi, 4½, whose father is a cellist and whose mother is a pianist with the People's Liberation Army song and dance troupe, came out with a red bow in her hair and soon captivated the audience.

"Our aim is to develop the children's intelligence through music and to discover young talent," said Jin Aiping, principal of the Children's Music School.

Irish cardinal concerned over U.S. support for IRA

BOSTON (AP) — Cardinal Tomas O'Fiaich, Ireland's highest ranking Roman Catholic cleric, says he "gets along splendidly" with Protestants, and condemned the outlawed Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland.

"We are very concerned about U.S. support to the IRA," O'Fiaich said Friday. "Irish killing other Irishmen only broadens the terror."

O'Fiaich, 61, head of Ireland's 3.7 million Catholics, was winding up a week-long visit that included stops in New York, San Antonio, Chicago, Worcester, Mass., and Boston before leaving for home Saturday.

O'Fiaich said that except for Ian Paisley, Northern Ireland's militant Protestant leader, the other Protestant leaders "are good-living, God-fearing, and I get along splendidly with them."

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Iceland has turned down a Soviet demand to ban a festival of films by director Andrei Tarkovsky, who defected from the Soviet Union in 1984, Iceland's main daily newspaper, Morgunbladid, reported Saturday.

The newspaper quoted the festival organizer as saying the presentation of six films by Tarkovsky started on schedule Saturday at Reykjavik's 900-seat University Theater despite a Soviet threat to sue on grounds Moscow owns the copyright to the films.

Tarkovsky defected in Italy last July because, he said, Moscow refused to renew a three-year permit to live and work abroad. His wife was with him but his 14-year-old son in the Soviet Union has been refused an exit permit.

Jon Ottar Ragnarsson, whose committee arranged the festival, said Foreign Minister Geir Hallgrimsson urged the group to go ahead with the program.

"It is known that the Russians have tried to make life difficult for Tarkovsky," Ragnarsson said. "They claim the copyright on all films but they offer us no opportunity to buy any rights. They obviously want this festival killed."

KENT, Ohio (AP) — If Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca will agree to speak at Kent State University this spring, members of a campus group promise to donate any proceeds from the event to one of his favorite charities: restoration of the Statue of Liberty.

Students have collected about 5,000 signatures on a petition urging Iacocca to come to the campus.

Robert Heath, a Chrysler spokesman, said Saturday he didn't know about the request and didn't know if Iacocca had heard about it. "He gets a tremendous number of requests for speaking engagements — they come in all the time."

Grace Battaglia, a student adviser, said the Students for Free Enterprise estimate they can raise $40,000 to $50,000 for the statue if Iacocca, chairman of a national campaign to restore the Statue of Liberty, agrees to speak.

"It's amazing, the amount of support on this campus for Iacocca," said Robert Trumble, dean of the College of Business Administration.

Peter Boon, a business professor and adviser to the student group, said the students decided to try to bring Iacocca to campus because "he's a figure of outstanding performance in free enterprise."

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz, who says he shot four youths on a subway train out of fear they were threatening him, has complained about news media attention, but the publicity also has caused trouble for a man unconnected with the case.

David Fleeger, who resembles Goetz, says he has been mistaken for Goetz four times and was chased through the Times Square subway station Thursday night, the New York Post reported Saturday.

"They saw me and they yelled, 'There's Bernhard Goetz!' and they started cursing and running after me," the Post quoted the 26-year-old architecture student as saying."I ran and ducked into a store."

"This is the fourth time this has happened," said Fleeger, of Manhattan. "The whole thing is very upsetting."

Goetz shot four teen-agers on the New York subway on Dec. 22 after one of them asked him for $5, police said. He has been indicted on illegal weapons possession charges.

Fleeger told the Post he was growing a beard, and may ride taxis rather than the subway until he can disguise his face.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — When Nathan Pritikin committed suicide last month after decades of advocating a no-fat diet to reduce the risk of heart disease, his arteries "were amazingly clean for a man his age," a pathologist said Saturday.

Pritikin died at Albany Medical Center Hospital Feb. 21. He was 69. Pritikin was at the hospital for leukemia treatment with an experimental drug when he slit the blood vessels near his elbows.

Dr. Jeffrey Hubbard, an Albany pathologist who performed the autopsy, said Pritikin "had, for a 69-year-old man, very little arteriosclerosis," a thickening of the arterial walls linked to heart disease. "His arteries were amazingly clean for a man his age."

Pritikin, who was diagnosed in the late 1950s as suffering from heart disease, devised a diet based on daily exercise and consumption of fruit, vegetables, whole grains and low amounts of dairy products and other fatty foods.

Pritikin established the Pritikin Longevity Center in Santa Monica, Calif., which he used as a base for his preachings in favor of a stringent low-fat diet.

Haydon no longer kept in isolation

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Murray Haydon, the world's third permanent artificial heart recipient, is no longer in isolation, and visitors can see him without donning surgical masks and gowns, officials said Saturday.

"He's reached the point in his recovery where they can open the curtains and people can be admitted to the room without having to go through all the sterile procedures," said Robert Irvine, a spokesman for Humana Inc.

Dr. William DeVries, who implanted Haydon's plastic and metal heart Feb. 17, believes Haydon, 58, can get more exercise now, and doctors can start thinking about moving him from Humana Hospital Audubon's coronary care unit, Irvine said.

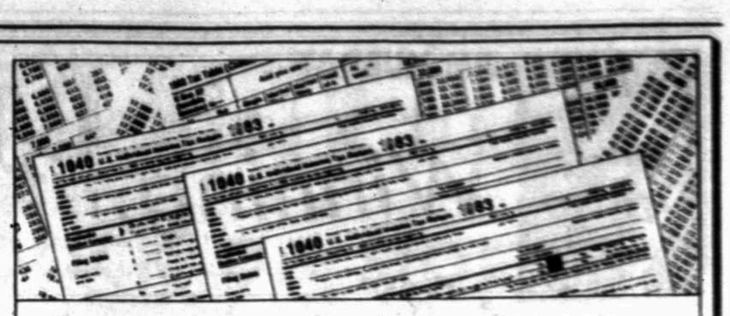

No date has been set for that move, he said.

Haydon was alert and eating well Saturday, a week after surgeons reopened his chest to correct bleeding. Doctors stitched up a tiny hole in Haydon's right atrium, and X-rays have shown no significant bleeding or drainage problems since the second operation, Irvine said.

Haydon is out of bed several times a day, and is visited often by his wife, Juanita, Irvine said.

William Schroeder, Haydon's only living peer, was doing well and visiting with his family Saturday, Irvine said.

The 53-year-old Jasper, Ind., man was expected to ride his wheelchair around the hospital halls Saturday to continue to build up his strength.

Murdoch to launch evening London daily

LONDON (AP) — Australian newspaper publisher Rupert Murdoch announced Saturday he would launch a new evening daily in London this year, hoping eventually to turn it into a round-the-clock newspaper.

The paper, to be called The Post, will be printed at a new plant in London owned by Murdoch's News International company, according to the announcement. It said the editorial director and coordinator of the project will be Charles Wilson, deputy editor of Murdoch's Times of London.

Murdoch owns Britain's largest-circulation daily and weekly, The Sun and The News of the World, plus the country's top-selling quality weekly, The Sunday Times, and The Times. The Times circulation has increased 23 percent in the past 12 months.

At present the London Standard is London's only evening newspaper.

Producer scraps plans for film of massacre

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A producer has called off plans to make a film about last summer's massacre at a McDonald's restaurant, in which a gunman killed 21 people, after emotional pleas from victims' relatives.

"This movie will not be made by me — ever," said Larry Spivey. "This project was dead when the the first family member said they didn't want to make it. I endorse their decision, concur with it and understand it."

"The movie should not be made without the blessings of the community, and up until Thursday evening I had not spoken to any of the victims," he said Friday. "I'm sorry."

Spivey canceled his plans after meeting with victims' families and other residents of the border community of San Ysidro, where James Huberty opened fire, killing 21 and wounding 19 others before being shot to death by police.

Adelina Hernandez, whose youngest son, Omar, 11, was among the victims, pleaded with Spivey not to make the movie, saying at Thursday's meeting that it would represent more emotional punishment.

Too often, Mrs. Hernandez said, she has already seen the stark image of her son's death. A picture of Omar lying crumpled on the pavement, his legs tangled in his bicycle, appeared in newspapers throughout the country.

"I beg you not to make this movie," Mrs. Hernandez said. "I see this as a useless movie.

"He's going to be on the screen," she said of Huberty. "That man was not only an assassin, he was a thief. He stole many things that were precious to us...He is not deserving of all the attention he is getting."

Enriqueta de Vuelvas, whose daughter, Aridelsi, died, said so far she had avoided seeing television accounts of the massacre.

"I continue to see my daughter as she left that day, smiling, happy," said Mrs. de Vuelvas. "It would be terrible if one day, not knowing what was on television, I saw the movie (about the massacre)."

Spivey listened as, one after another, the victims' relatives pleaded with him not to make the film.

He said he would give some of the profits from his next film to help build a park at the massacre site. McDonald's demolished the restaurant after the killings.

Earlier, Spivey blamed the San Diego City Council for "creating a lynch mob mentality against me and my film."

On Monday, the council unanimously passed a resolution opposing the production.

But Spivey said, "I feel I've been mistreated by the city. I'm a responsible, sincere individual and my film would have been a deeply sensitive statement about the victims of a senseless tragedy."

Director's Guild presents award for best director

NEW YORK (AP) — The Director's Guild of America, with four foreigners among its five nominees, on Saturday was to present its award for best director of 1984.

The award often foreshadows the Academy Awards — in the 36 years since the directors' prize first was awarded, it and the Oscar have differed only twice.

The nominees for the Guild award included:

— Czech-born filmmaker Milos Forman, for "Amadeus," about a Viennese court musician who became Wolfgang Mozart's implacable enemy because he felt it was unfair of God to give musical genius to a silly boy.

— Britain's David Lean for "A Passage To India," a movie version of E.M. Forster's novel set in British-ruled India.

— Robert Benton for "Places In The Heart," the story of a woman who fights to keep her children and her farm in Texas after her husband is killed.

— Britain's Roland Jaffe, in his first feature film, for "The Killing Fields," about revolution in Cambodia.

— Canadian Norman Jewison for "A Soldier's Story," about a murder at an Army camp in the South during World War II, and a black officer's investigation.

Jewison is the only nominee of the five not also nominated for an Academy Award.

With 11 nominations each, "Amadeus" and "A Passage To India" lead the list of nominations to the 57th Academy Awards.

WHY SETTLE FOR LESS THAN A BUICK?

Why should you...even if it's a small car you're looking for? You're exactly the person Buick had in mind when it designed the 1985 Skylark. A serious driver who wants practicality and affordability tempered by comfort and convenience. The very things Buicks have long been noted for...as well as for roominess and quiet and the security of a well-built car. They're all here in the '85 Skylark. Drive one today.

Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?

INTRODUCING EVERYTHING A STATION WAGON WAS NEVER INTENDED TO BE.

If you buy the new Volvo 700 Series wagon because you intend to haul things around, you're in for a big surprise.

Because its capacity for hauling things is only one of the impressive things about this car.

You realize that the first time you take it around an S-curve, and discover it can outhandle many sports sedans.

Or step on the gas leaving the lumberyard, and experience what a Volvo fuel-injected overhead cam engine can do.

Or notice that the long trip to the weekend house doesn't seem so long anymore. Thanks to orthopedically-designed seats. And a highly sophisticated Dolby* sound system.

The Volvo 700 Series wagon offers a level of comfort, styling and performance you never expected to see in a wagon.

Because at Volvo, we believe you can't have a great wagon. Unless it's also a great car.

The Volvo 700 Series wagon comes with one of the few unlimited mileage, 3-year limited warranties in the business. See your Volvo dealer for terms and conditions. *TM Dolby Laboratories.

The 700 Series Wagon by Volvo.

The Waldrons

Text by Linda Anderson

Suzy and Dale Waldron's Victorian farmhouse in Green Tree has been a lot of hard work to build and furnish, but they believe it was worth it.

There's no place like home — and for Suzy and Dale Waldron the old saying has a special meaning.

The Waldron's home in Green Tree is one of a kind. Not only did the couple act as their own contractors, building the house "totally from scratch," Mrs. Waldron said, but every room is graced with family treasures and antiques.

The Victorian Farmhouse was built 3½ years ago. Mrs. Waldron said her sister Marie, an interior designer from Houston, provided invaluable assistance in the building and decorating of the home. "My sister got us the floor plan in Houston," she said. "Then we made a lot of changes and embellishments to bring it up to where we wanted it."

"We were the first ones to build a Victorian house in Midland. I just had to do it by trial and error method."

To keep her home as accurately Victorian as possible, Mrs. Waldron filled it with antiques, everything from baby carriages to 150-year-old flow blue porcelain pieces.

The quality of the past is treasured at the Waldron's, but it's not all for decoration. The baby carriage, for example, is put to good use when the Waldron's 2½-year-old grandchild visits.

One wall in Mrs. Waldron's upstairs workroom is lined with an antique piece of tin the couple saved from a building in Slaton which was being torn down. "A lot of our friends go to Europe to get antiques," she said. "We go to Slaton. I got some good things in Lamesa."

Her Lamesa finds include an antique fireplace, which is now in her living room, and a 150-pound solid bronze fireback built into the kitchen island area. "They used to put them in the backs of fireplaces."

An unusual Swiss antique granite and brass bed is the center of attraction in an upstairs bedroom.

Not all of the treasured items in the Waldron home are antiques, however. Momentos from the childhoods of the couple's two children, including toys and shoes, are in several rooms.

The home's family room contains a wooden rocking horse made by Mrs. Waldron's father. A "crazy quilt" made by Waldron's grandmother hangs over the banister. A collection of tennis trophies won by Mrs. Waldron is displayed in her workroom. "I used to play a lot of tennis until I had a bad motorcycle accident ... It was the second time I ever rode one."

An old-fashioned wooden telephone booth containing a real telephone and instructions to "deposit a dime or two nickels" provides a touch of nostalgia to the kitchen-gazebo area. And unique Valentines add a romantic touch in several rooms. "I used a lot of Valentines in my house," Mrs. Waldron said. "I just picked them up at flea markets and framed them."

Interested in several crafts, Mrs. Waldron created most of the stained glass in her home, "except the front door." A large, colorful, cheerful scene in the kitchen window was her first stained glass project.

She paints and quilts and enjoys woodworking, pottery, and Scherenschnitte, the German art of paper cutting. And she plays the banjo. "I just like a lot of things."

Much of the detail work which makes the Waldron home so spectacular was also done by Mrs. Waldron. From carving gingerbread fretwork for the bathrooms to etching the glass in kitchen cabinet doors, she has given her home a uniquely personal touch.

The work was difficult and time-consuming. "I hand-trimmed 120 rolls of wallpaper. That's a lot of rolls of wallpaper! ... I'd trim at night and hang by day. ... I cut 1200 fishscale rounded shingles for the front of the house."

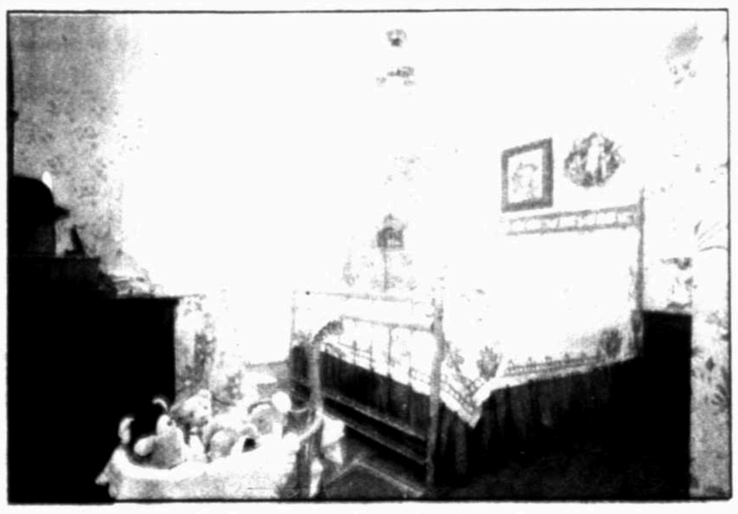

But the hard work is what made the difference for her — the difference between Mrs. Waldron's house and Mrs. Waldron's home.

A solid bronze 150-pound fireback in the kitchen island is one of the family's prizes antiques.

Mrs. Waldron creates much of the craft work which gives her home its charm in this room, her workshop.

An upstairs bedroom is furnished with a Swiss antique granite and brass bed.

The focal point in the Waldron's inviting living area is an antique fireplace the couple brought from Lamesa.

DEAR ABBY

Secrets shared too freely separate sisters

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I come from a very large family, but there is one sister with whom I have always been particularly close. I'll call her Mary. We've always confided things to each other that we wouldn't share with anybody else.

About six months ago, I learned that Mary had been telling a close male friend of hers some of the very personal things I had shared with her. When I confronted her, she admitted betraying my confidence, tearfully apologized and promised it would never happen again.

I told her I forgave her but didn't feel that I could ever confide in her again. She said she understood my feelings and didn't blame me.

Mary continues to confide the most intimate details of her private life, hoping I will reciprocate. I just can't. The trust between us is gone.

When we're together with the family, Mary's laughter is forced, her brightness is artificial, and she is obviously ill at ease in my presence. The family has picked up on this and keep asking me what is wrong. When I refuse to tell them, they see me as the one who is to blame.

How do I answer my family's questions? And how can I make Mary return to her natural self? — BETRAYED

DEAR BETRAYED: Be honest with yourself. Although you told Mary you forgave her, you really haven't. She senses this and is frantically trying to cover her remorse by putting on a happy face. You owe your family no explanations. Please work on forgiving your sister. Who among us doesn't need to be forgiven?

DEAR ABBY: My husband went to a dentist for a new set of dentures. The terms were cash in advance, so my husband paid him.

Well, unfortunately, my husband died unexpectedly, and I was so upset I never got around to calling the dentist to tell him to stop work on the dentures.

When I called him a few weeks later, he told me it was too late, the dentures were already finished.

I told him I didn't have any use for them, and he said neither did he, but since they were paid for, somebody might as well pick them up.

Abby, don't you think under the circumstances I'm entitled to some kind of refund? — MONEY WASTED

DEAR WASTED: I'm sorry your husband died, but the dentist who made the dentures invested his time, talent and material in them and is entitled to the full price. Under sad circumstances such as these, some dentists might refund a token sum, but it shouldn't be expected.

DEAR ABBY: I want the whole world to know that I haven't had a cigarette for 58 days! I am very proud of myself because I'm 64 years old, smoked for 30 years and used to smoke three packs a day.

When I was smoking, what griped me the most was the way nearly everyone was so patient with the drug addict and the lush, but nobody had any sympathy for the smoker. Believe me, Abby, it is just as hard to give up nicotine as it is to quit drugs or booze.

I will never smoke again because I feel 100 percent better, and best of all, I'm no longer a slave to a dirty, destructive, expensive habit. — EX-SMOKER IN MARLBORO, MASS.

DEAR EX-SMOKER: Congratulations. What a message from someone who actually lives in Marlboro country!

Flirting is natural act; expert flirting is art

Hearst News Service

To flirt or not to flirt: That is not the question. All of us flirt; some are just better at it than others. The real question is: What exactly is flirting and how do we become better at it?

Social flirting, etiquette experts agree, should be an end, not a means. There should be an innocence to it that leaves a person feeling flattered but not flustered, happy but not hassled. But where is that fine line when there are no rules and not everyone is operating at the same level of expertise? All of us have run up against expert flirts, but how many of us really know how to handle it? And how many have dished it out but were unprepared for the unintended results?

Ambiguity is a key factor in the art of flirtation — it's what makes it both fun and frustrating. What did that wink mean? What about that swinging ankle or that lingering sidelong glance? Is he preening or just adjusting his tie? Is she standing so close because she's hard of hearing or because she's interested? Flirting boils down to sending and receiving these subtle and not-so-subtle messages, and half the fun is figuring out the other person's intentions.

"There are no cut-and-dried rules to flirting, so there's room for lots of misinterpretation," says San Antonio clinical psychologist Bill Patton, who's made a habit of studying nonverbal communication.

"This misinterpretation is what gives flirting a bad reputation — many times it leads to something that's not intended. Flirting is really about leaving the other person with a positive impression of yourself and wanting more. But because there are no common guidelines, it gets confusing because everyone doesn't have the same definition of flirting."

Author/astrologist Joyce Jillson hopes to take the guesswork out of flirting once and for all in her new book, "The Fine Art of Flirting" (Cornerstone Library, $5.95), which is billed as "the one and only complete guide for would-be flirts of all sexes."

Jillson describes the successful male flirt as someone who is comfortable in his environment, speaks in a soft voice, has good manners, is curious about a woman and wants to know her opinions, is affectionate and supportive, is protective and knows that little things count. She says the successful female flirt is kind, discreet, successful but not competing, has a self-confident walk and a feminine laugh, primps, makes slow, catlike movements and never offends a man's sense of pride or masculinity.

Beyond these descriptions, Jillson's flirting bible covers everything from the married flirt to flirtophobia to great flirts in history to flirting at the salad bar. But it's her "10 Commandments of Flirting" that offer the most pertinent information to novices:

— Thou shalt smile.
— Thou shalt show generosity.
— Thou shalt approach flirting partners as thou would a friend.
— Thou shalt nurture.
— Thou shalt show concern for a third person or idea.
— Thou shalt censor thy thoughts and actions.
— Thou shalt always keep something in reserve.
— Thou shalt remember the power of touch.
— Thou shalt make mistakes.
— Thou shalt make memories.

Midland Symphony Guild presents 21 debutantes

Twenty-one high school girls will be presented by the Midland Symphony Guild Tuesday night at the Midland-Odessa Symphony concert at Lee High School Auditorium.

Escorted by their fathers, the debs are daughters of active Symphony Guild members who have been in the guild at least one year. As training in community service the girls must be active members one year before presentation. Their responsibilities include collecting tickets, ushering at symphony concerts and assisting with various guild activities. After presentation they will continue their service until high school graduation.

Symphony Debutantes have been presented since 1963. Following the concert the debs and their families will be honored at a reception. The concert is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. Season tickets will be valid for admission and single tickets will be sold at the door.

WHAT'S NEW IN WINDOW COVERINGS

The word for window treatments in 1985 and beyond is lavish. The staff at windown decor, who recently attended the World of Window Coverings trade show in New Orlean's Rivergate Convention Center, reports on some of the deocrating trends and products that will determine window stylings and energy savings for months and years to come.

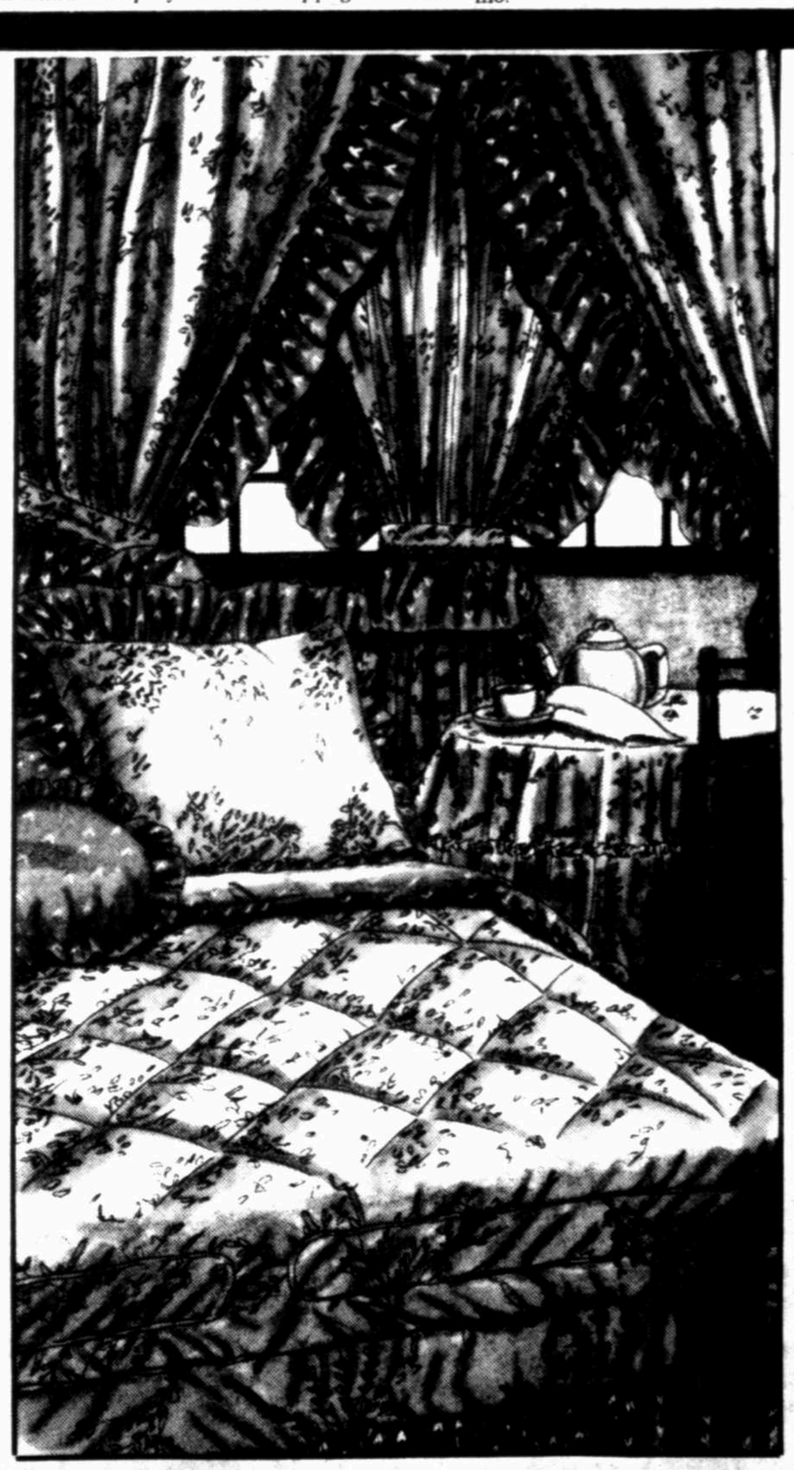

Over 190 manufacturers and distributors for the window coverings industry displayed merchandise and ideas for every type of treatment and decorating preference. They showed a myriad of new patterns, weaves and colors in their elegant fabric and alternate window treatment collections.

The popular "soft look" of custom and ready-made draperies featured stylish balloon headings as well as the more conventional pinch-pleated and shirr-ons. Top treatments for added luxury were much used. They consisted of intricate swags. padded cornices, festoon valances and balloon toppers. A variety of new fabrics were used for popular Austrian, Roman and pleated shades.

The choice of materials, patterns and colors in alternate window treatments was extremely varied also. The "lavish look" fashion trend was evident in the various materials used for vertical blind louvers, in new colors for mini-blinds and in exciting shade patterns.The layered look, using both soft and hard coverings to achieve a unified treatment, is an increasingly favorite window dressing. For extra luxury and energy-savings, many such treatments now add fancy swags and valances.The staff at Window decor is anxious to show and tell customers about the new lavish look for windows. For more information or free estimates call 685-0875.

Lifestyle policies

The following are policies for publication of stories and announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the story is to run. For example, an item to appear in Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within five days of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

The Reporter-Telegram has forms for announcements of engagements, weddings and anniversaries.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Portraits of the future bride and bridegroom in one photograph may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Diamonds may be girl's best friend, but not best investment, says magazine

Associated Press

Diamonds may be a girl's best friend, but they are not her best investment.

Diamond prices rocketed from 1978 to 1980, reaching a high of $64,000 for a top-grade one carat stone, according to an article in the Connoisseur, but today the price of that stone has dropped to $12,000.

The outlook for the future — even as far ahead as five years — is not good. Diamond prices do not appear to have stabilized or bottomed out. If some long-threatened bankruptcies in Antwerp, the world's diamond trade capital, come to pass, things may get worse.

Diamonds are the most common of all precious stones, although they enjoy an image of great rarity and value. About 80 percent of all diamonds mined are used for industrial purposes; only 20 percent are pure enough in color and clarity to be used in jewelry. Diamonds that are most colorless and have fewest internal flaws, or inclusions, are rarest and most valuable.

But to the naked eye, stones ranging in price from $1,000 to $20,000 per carat often look identical. Only with a loupe — a 10x magnifying eyeglass — can the tiny inclusions and variations in color that mar some stones be seen.

That meant buyers had to take a dealer's word for a stone's quality, and not all dealers are honest. One solution was to issue certificates from independent laboratories recording the precise properties of a stone.

Since certificates could be switched, some dealers sealed the stone in a transparent case along with a microfilm of the certificate.

That eliminated switching, but left open the question of varying laboratory standards. Only one laboratory enjoys the confidence of the entire diamond investment community — the Gemological Institute of America. Even it has been known to err.

Jewelers can laser out inclusions so the flaws are hard to spot even under magnification. A $1,000 stone can be treated by laser for $35, then sold for $2,000. Some dealers disclose laser treatment; others do not.

Diamonds also can be irradiated to improve their color. While an occasional pink or canary yellow diamond of just the right color can be valuable in its own right, usually diamonds are ranked on a scale from pure white to muddy brown.

Parents may influence marriage relationships

Hearst Feature Service

Many married couples are haunted by the ghosts of their parents.

People tend to seek the kind of relationships in their marriages that they had with their parents or observed in their parents' marriage, reports Jeffrey Blum, a psychologist from New Canaan, Conn., in a recent issue of Redbook.

"For example, if a woman is lucky enough to have had a terrific relationship with her father," Blum says, "she may recreate this fine relationship with her husband in her own adult life."

"If, on the other hand, that early relationship was unhealthy or destructive, a woman may unconsciously create that same unhappiness in her marriage."

Some people pick partners who possess some of the same negative traits their opposite-sex parent exhibited — someone cold, perhaps, or weak — in the subconscious hope that in marriage they will be able to rectify what was "wrong" in their relationship with that parent.

"Another way in which we may recreate old patterns is by projecting all the negative characteristics of our opposite-sex parent onto our spouse," Blum explains.

"To complicate matters, the mar riage partner then may resent th spouse for those very traits, even i they are imaginary.

"I participate in this 'negativ transfer' by assuming that my wif is angry at me about something have done, when in fact it doesn bother her at all," Blum says.

"For example, I am so sure tha my wife will be upset about some thing I plan to do — such as goin alone to spend an evening with ol college friends — that I start actin sneaky about it way in advance. My sneakiness does upset her — even though she originally felt fine about my plans to see my friends.

"At times this pattern becomes so obvious to me that I wonder if I actually want my wife to become angry so that I can absolve myself of my guilt over seeing my friends alone or because anger is familiar and comfortable to me — part of my own early experience of love."

Communication is the key to getting rid of childhood ghosts. Blum suggests man and wife each write for 20 minutes on a subject such as "What makes my partner angry" or "Why my spouse loves me." He says there may be wide discrepancies between what your partner thinks and what you know to be true of yourself.

AT WIT'S END

Trivial Pursuit may be behind divorce rate

By ERMA BOMBECK

On a good day, marriage is a fragile institution.

It's beset by money problems, battered by mood shifts, and badgered by in-laws who only want what is best for you.

The game of "Trivial Pursuit" could force a marriage over the edge. After all, what is a union but a series of unimportant, petty, insignificant things of no consequence that drive you nuts.

I'm not overreacting. Prof. Teal Bennett of Tulane University Medical Center says people have three basic fears: dying, going crazy and making a fool of yourself. He believes you can plug "Trivial Pursuit" into the third fear.

I will go one step farther. I don't think you know a man until you've played "Trivial Pursuit" with him. You may think you do, but you don't.

The man who held your hand tenderly through 16 hours of labor with your first child is the same man who will shout at you in front of a group: "What do you mean, you don't know how many stars are in Orion's Belt? If it were jewels in Joan Collins' belt, you'd know."

Somehow, it upsets me to realize that a man who cannot remember the date of my mother's birthday remembers that Wilt Chamberlain made 23,924 rebounds in his career.

I have never played a game of "Trivial Pursuit" with him in my life that as soon as the question to me leaves someone's mouth, he doesn't mumble, "She doesn't know that."

"How do you know I don't know that?" I ask.

"Look, anyone who doesn't know what candy bar is made in Hershey, Pa., cannot possibly know what is the largest gland in the human body."

"You don't know me THAT well," I charge. "Besides, it's the liver."

"You guessed."

"I did not guess. I just remembered your family history."

And I'll tell you something else. If I had known before "Trivial Pursuit" that I was sleeping next to a man who stored such inane things as what mammal has a bill, webbed feet with claws and lays eggs, and what appears when the sun activates your melanocytes ... I'd have stayed awake all night.

As we climbed into bed the other night after playing the game, we were not speaking.

"I knew the answer all the time," he said. "I just wanted to think about it and be sure."

"I don't want to discuss it," I said.

"Don't you think I know what Erma Bombeck says the grass is always greener over?"

It's a good thing he didn't know the fourth basic fear of people: Fear of killing one's husband over a stupid game!

Med school enrollments down first time in 37 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer students were admitted to the nation's medical schools in fall of 1984 than the year before, according to Ob.Gyn. News.

The medical journal reports that 16,395 students were admitted to the 127 U.S. medical schools in 1984, a 0.5 percent decline from the 1983 enrollment. The number of applicants was 25,994, a slight increase over the 1983 figure and the only annual increase in the applicant pool since 1974-1975.

According to the publication, the total number of medical students enrolled in the nation's schools decreased from 67,327 last fall to 67,016 this past fall — the first time in 37 years that total enrollment has gone down.

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

The drama and pageantry of the opera were brought to the Tall City recently under the auspices of the Midland Opera Theater and First City National Bank. Texas Opera Theater, based in Houston, performed Verdi's "La Traviata" here as part of a tri-state tour of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. For those of us who enjoy most of our opera on Saturday afternoon radio live from the Met, it was a thrilling experience to see quality professional opera performed out here in "the hinterlands."

Chatting with Nancy (Mrs. Buddy) Anguish, president of Midland Opera Theater, during intermission, I was interested to learn that there is a strong possibility that TOT will return next fall with the familiar and exciting "Carmen" and that Johann Strauss's "Die Fledermaus" is already on the schedule for February of 1986.

Among those spotted in the audience were Jerry King, vice president with the sponsoring First City, and his wife, Rhonda; Dorothy Perkins and her mother, Emily (Mrs. Joseph M.) Perkins of Eastland; Carol and Jack Steele, Joann and Dr. John Foster, Lynda Kay and Carlton Beal Jr., Jackie and Wilson Comola and Ruth (Mrs. Harvey) Conger.

A cocktail buffet at the home of Louan and Dr. Glenn Rogers honored the "La Traviata" patrons prior to the eight o'clock curtain. Special guests included Mary Sue (Mrs. Henry Clay) Koontz of Victoria, chairman of TOT's board of directors, and TOT staff members Nancy Griggs and Amanda Berleigh, both of Houston.

THE WELCOME MAT is out for Senior District Judge Ray L. McKim and his wife, Helen, who recently moved to Midland from Odessa. Sharing an office suite with his son, Ray L. McKim III, a certificed professional landman, Ray will practice as an attorney at law and oil and gas adviser.

Long active in Odessa's church and civic circles, Helen continues her involvement with the American Cancer Society. Currently serving on the state board's Special Events Committee, she has held other offices on the district and state levels. A music lover, she served for 22 years as organist at Odessa's Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord and organized and continues to direct the church's bell choir.

Despite their many ties to Odessa, the McKims are happy to be near their son and his wife, the former Gina Lucchi, and are enjoying becoming acquainted locally.

RETURNING THURSDAY from First United Methodist Church's annual ski trip were a "small" group of 109 youth and adults. Traveling by three chartered buses, they enjoyed four days of skiing at Winter Park, Colo., during Spring Break.

This event marks the high point of the year for the Junior and Senior High United Methodist Youth Fellowships.

The trip's sponsors were Angela and DA Harral, Mary and Ron McFadden, Alice and Grady Jones, Lois (Mrs. Bernie) Hagins, Wilson Heidelberg, Dave Roberson, Bette Carole (Mrs. Bob) Koen, Jane and Brad Kisner, Curt Pollock, Bill Branson and Judy (Mrs. Larry) Lusby.

PEGGY AND PAUL ANDERSON were joined recently by their daughter and family, Karen and Ted Reichert and sons, Beau, 8, and Dustin, 4, of San Marcos, on a 14-night Transcanal Cruise. Flying from Dallas to Los Angeles, they boarded the new descendant of TV's "Love Boat," the Royal Princess, for its inaugural voyage. Their itinerary included Acapulco, the eight-hour transit of the Panama Canal, Cartagena, Colombia, the Caribbean's Aruba, Antigua and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. They disembarked at San Juan, Puerto Rico, for a three-day tour before flying home to Texas.

Peggy and Paul had the unique experience last June of seeing the Royal Princess being built in Helsinki, Finland, the largest shipbuilding center in the world. The ten-story ship is spectacular, with many luxurious touches, including picture windows in lieu of portholes. They particularly enjoyed room-service breakfast each morning on their private veranda behind a sliding glass door.

The clear weather was great for viewing and picture taking. After crossing the Gulf of California, they followed the Mexican coastline, passing the port of Manzanillo, the Sierra Madre mountain range and the snow-covered summits of the Colima and Safa volcaoes, before anchoring in Acapulco Bay for a day.

The most exciting day at sea was their passage across the Gulf of Tehuantepec off Mexico, were they encountered sudden 70 m.p.h. winds, which stopped eight hours later as abruptly as they began. The ship rode the rough seas quite smoothly, and according to Peggy, its officers handled this inaugural voyage crisis most capably. Following the coasts of Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua, the ship arrived at the Panama Canal for its eight-hour transit, which Peggy says was the most interesting portion of the cruise and which left them marveling at the engineering feat involved in building the Canal.

Their favorite port of call was the island of Aruba, in the Netherlands Antilles, which reminded them in many ways of West Texas, with its oil refineries, barren sandy soil and dry climate. However, there was a diversity with the exotic plants, the beautiful sandy beaches and crystal clear waters, and picturesque Dutch-gabled houses with roofs of red-orange tile. The people were charming, as was their island home, a port the Andersons would like to visit again.

Phi Mu Founders' Day scheduled

The Phi Mu Midland-Odessa Alumnae chapter, along with more than 90,000 other members of Phi Mu fraternity across the country, will celebrate the 133rd Founders' Day of this women's organization.

Local festivities will include a luncheon and Founders' Day ceremony at 11:30 a.m. March 23 at Green Tree Country Club. New officers installed will be Paula Beshears, president; Ann Gilbert, vice president; Karen Vest, secretary; Betty Moore, treasurer; Melissa Thompson, Panhellenic delegate; and Susan Motyka, social service chairman. Phi Mus not contacted may make reservations by calling 683-2244.

Each member will contribute one penny for each of the 133 years since the organization was founded March 4, 1852 at Wesleyan College in Macon, Ga. These donations are given to a Memorial Fund which annually awards scholarships and loans to qualified students.

Cornea transplants restore vision

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — The eyesight of nearly 20,000 Americans each year is being restored or improved by the use of cornea transplants.

The cornea was one of the first human tissues to be transplanted successfully, and the number of transplants performed annually has tripled over the last five years, an eye bank association reports.

DENTAL HEALTH UPDATE
Philip O. Warlick D.D.S.

TONGUE THRUST

QUESTION: What is tongue thrust, what are its effects and can it be treated successfully?

ANSWER: We swallow about 2,000 times a day. Each swallow produces about six pounds of pressure from the tongue. During an incorrect swallow, the tongue force is exerted fully against the front teeth which are not equipped to withstand that constant pressure. This results in their being pushed out of alignment. Also, it may prevent new teeth from erupting properly. In order to correct this problem, tongue-thrust therapy (called myofunctional therapy) is used for both adults and children. It can be overcome but requires full cooperation from the patient.

COUNTRY IRISH CHARM

Create the fresh charm of an Irish country cottage with delectable foods geared to that most Irish of holidays, St. Patrick's Day.

Building scene upon scene, feature a selection of tantalizing foods with a touch of the Irish. Shown here is a menu serving six that is based on foods that grow green naturally.

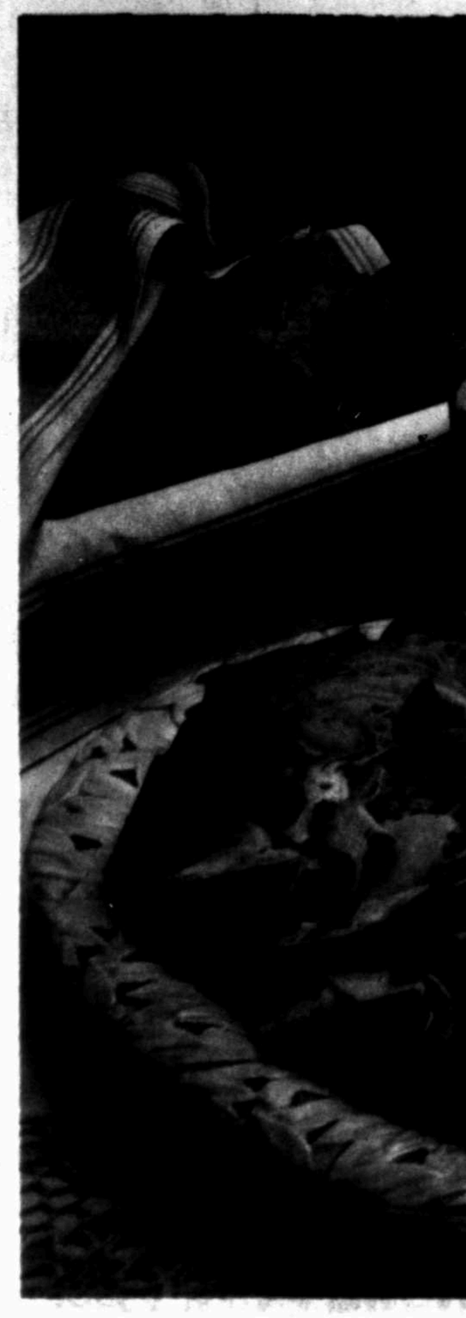

St. Patrick's Buffet Salad takes a gentle cue from the traditional holiday fare. New potatoes, marinated in a sprightly vinaigrette dressing, are combined with tender slivers of delicious artichokes, and served up with crisp, springy wedges of iceberg lettuce. Rolls of thinly sliced corned beef complete this attractive main-dish salad.

A fragrant bread is the ideal accompaniment to the salad and California Pistachio Bread Twist is an especially appealing choice.

Kiwifruit Gelato puts the final polish on this classically simple holiday menu. Best of all, it is totally prepared in advance.

All sizes of artichokes in the marketplace are mature and ready to use whole, stuffed, halved, or sliced, as in the St. Patrick's Buffet Salad. Look for artichokes that are heavy for their size. Occasionally the artichokes in the marketplace will have bronze-tipped petals. These artichokes have been "winter-kissed" by frost which enhances their mellow flavor.

Select kiwifruit that yield slightly to gentle pressure. Firm kiwifruit will ripen if left at room temperature a few days.

ST. PATRICK'S BUFFET SALAD

(Shown)

- 1-1/2 pounds small boiling potatoes
- Salt
- Water
- Mustard Vinaigrette Dressing
- 2 artichokes, sliced and cooked*
- 1/2 cup frozen peas, thawed and drained
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 12 (1 oz. each) thin sliced cooked corned beef
- 6 iceberg lettuce wedges

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water to cover; simmer about 25 minutes or until tender. Drain; cool slightly. Cut into 1/4-inch slices. Pour half of Mustard Vinaigrette Dressing over warm potatoes; refrigerate until cold. Gently combine artichoke slices, peas, parsley and potatoes. Roll up corned beef slices. Arrange on platter with potato mixture and lettuce wedges. Pass remaining Mustard Vinaigrette Dressing. Makes 6 servings.

Mustard Vinaigrette Dressing: Combine 1/2 cup oil, 1/3 cup white wine vinegar, 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard, 3/4 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon each pepper and sugar; mix well. Makes about 3/4 cup.

To Prepare Artichokes: Bend back outer petals of artichoke until they snap off easily near base. Edible portion of petal should remain on artichoke heart. Continue to snap off and discard thick petals until central core of pale green petals is reached. Cut off top 2 inches of artichoke; discard. Cut off stem; reserve. Trim off outer dark green layer from artichoke bottom and stem; rub all surfaces with lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Quarter artichokes lengthwise. Remove small prickly-tipped petals and fuzzy centers; rub again with lemon. Cut artichoke and stem into thin lengthwise slices. Add 2 tablespoons water and dash salt; cook, covered, over medium heat about 5 minutes or until water has evaporated and artichokes are tender.

CALIFORNIA PISTACHIO BREAD TWIST

(Shown)

- 1/4 cup finely chopped, shelled natural pistachios
- 1/4 cup butter, softened
- 1 tablespoon each finely chopped shallots, chopped parsley and lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon basil, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon medium-grind pepper
- 1 package (16 oz.) golden wheat yeast bread
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 tablespoon water

Combine all ingredients except bread mix, egg and water; mix well. Prepare bread mix according to package directions. After first rising, punch down dough and divide into 3 equal portions. Roll each into 12 x 3-inch strips. Spread pistachio mixture down center the length of dough leaving about 1/2-inch border around edges. Pinch edges together along the length of dough to form 3 "ropes." Place on greased baking sheet; braid "ropes." Tuck ends under. Let rise, covered, as package directs. Combine egg and water; and brush on braid. Bake at 350°F. 30 to 40 minutes or until bread sounds hollow when tapped. Makes 1 loaf.

KIWIFRUIT GELATO

(Shown)

- 2/3 cup sugar
- 1 cup water
- 4 to 6 kiwifruit, pared and halved
- 1/4 cup brandy

Combine sugar and water. Bring to boil over high heat; boil 5 minutes. Cool. Process kiwifruit in food processor or blender to equal 1-1 2 cups. Add sugar syrup and brandy to pulp. Pour into 8-inch square baking pan; freeze about 3 hours or until mixture begins to harden. Turn partially frozen mixture into chilled mixer bowl; beat until smooth, light and airy. Freeze about 2 hours longer or until firm enough to scoop. Serve immediately. Makes 6 servings.

If your salute to the Irish is an appetizer party, the sweet, green harvest of artichokes, kiwifruit, pistachios and iceberg lettuce are equally at home. Here's a tangy spread spiked with green bits of pistachios, skewers of tender shrimp and emerald-hued kiwifruit, savory chicken wrapped in crisp iceberg lettuce and whole artichokes to serve with Green Garden Dip. Top of the evening to you!

LETTUCE-WRAPPED CHICKEN

- 3/4 cup julienne-sliced leek
- 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon oil
- 1 cup shredded cooked chicken
- 1/2 cup diced tomato
- 2 tablespoons dry sherry
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon thyme, crushed
- Dash pepper
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 15 to 18 large iceberg lettuce leaves

SKEWERED KIWIFRUIT AND SHRIMP

- 1 pound (about 32) raw medium shrimp
- 2 cups water
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 teaspoon bottled hot pepper sauce
- 4 large cloves garlic, crushed
- 3 lemon slices
- 2 sprigs parsley
- 10 peppercorns
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 large bay leaf
- 4 kiwifruit, pared

Shell shrimp; reserve shells. Bring reserved shells and all ingredients except shrimp and kiwifruit to boil; simmer 15 minutes. Add shrimp; boil 1-1/2 to 2 minutes or until shrimp are barely cooked. Remove shrimp from liquid. Strain and reserve liquid; cool to room temperature. Return shrimp to cooled stock; refrigerate about 2 hours or until served. Cut each kiwifruit into 16 chunks. Skewer 1 chunk kiwifruit, 1 shrimp and another chunk kiwifruit on each skewer. Makes about 32 appetizers. Recipe can be halved.

ARTICHOKES WITH GREEN GARDEN DIP

- 1/2 cup each mayonnaise and dairy sour cream
- 1/2 cup minced fresh spinach leaves
- 1/4 cup minced parsley
- 1 tablespoon minced green onion
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano, crushed
- Dash cayenne pepper or bottled hot pepper sauce
- 2 artichokes*

Combine all ingredients except artichokes; mix well. Remove and reserve outer petals of artichokes. Discard small inner petals and fuzzy centers. Cut bottoms into bite-sized pieces and arrange in center of serving plate; ring with reserved outer petals. Serve with mayonnaise-sour cream mixture. Makes about 1-1/3 cups dip.

To Cook Artichokes: Pull off lower, outer petals of artichokes; snip off tips of remaining petals. Cut off top third of artichokes; discard. Cut stems to 1 inch or less. Stand prepared artichokes in pot with 3 inches of boiling salted water. If desired, oil, lemon juice and seasonings can be added to cooking water. Cover and boil gently, about 30 minutes or until petal near center pulls out easily. Drain.

PISTACHIO SPREAD

- 1 package (8 oz.) Neufchatel or cream cheese, softened
- 4 ounces Monterey Jack cheese, softened
- 3 tablespoons chopped green onion
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- Dash garlic powder
- 1/8 teaspoon bottled hot pepper sauce
- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped shelled natural pistachios

Blend cheeses, green onion, lemon juice and garlic powder in blender or food processor until smooth. Fold in pistachios. Pack mixture into crock or serving bowl; cover and chill. Remove from refrigerator at least 30 minutes before serving. Makes about 1-2/3 cups.

Serving Tip: Serve with sliced French bread, crackers or fresh vegetables.

Parents: The other victims if SIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Soon after Carolee Daly found her baby dead in her crib, she began a litany familiar to most other Sudden Infant Death Syndrome parents:

The if-only's.

"If only we had got up a lot earlier. Why did I have to sleep in until 7 that morning? Why couldn't I have gotten up at 6:30?"

"I should have known she needed me. ... In the middle of the night she might have called out to me and I didn't hear her."

"Somehow, going through her birth and giving her life," she recalls thinking, "I should have kept her alive."

The "if-only's" are part of the turmoil that strikes parents of SIDS victims, according to Jean Scully, director of the SIDS Center at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. A knowledgeable and sympathetic ear can help them through the guilt and other trauma.

But some well-meaning reactions from family members and friends only make it worse.

Ms. Scully, who telephones SIDS parents on Long Island within 24 hours of the death, often finds them in shock and disbelief, with an overwhelming sense of guilt. She tries "to help them understand it's not their fault, there's nothing they could do," she said.

Other people may not be so helpful. In Olathe, Kan., Mrs. Daly, whose 5½-month-old daughter died three years ago, recalled that some people seemed to minimize her loss, implying essentially that "my grief must be smaller because my baby didn't live very long."

"A child is a child is a child."

Well-meaning people may also say they know how the parent feels, said Camille Wortman, psychology professor at the University of Michigan at Anne Arbor. But parents don't buy it.

People may also voice suspicions of child abuse or neglect, or make other ill-informed diagnoses. "Nobody can understand why a perfectly normal, healthy-looking baby can just die for no reason," said Kathy Paulson of the International Council for Infant Survival.

Besides offering to help with chores like cooking, laundry and caring for other children, Ms. Scully said, "The right thing to say is, 'I'm here, I care, I want to help you in any way I can. I'll listen.'"

'Dynasty' dolls command star prices

If you think "Falcon Crest" is a new toothpaste for birds or that "Dallas" is merely a city in Texas, this product is definitely not for you.

But for prime time TV soap opera buffs, the unveiling of two new "Dynasty" dolls should be big news.

World Doll-Eugene Doll & Novelty Co. of Brooklyn, N.Y., which in the past has introduced expensive Marilyn Monroe and Elvis Presley dolls, is cashing in on the "Dynasty" craze with porcelain dolls representing two of the show's leading characters

Only 10 of each doll will be made, the company says, and will sell for $10,000 apiece.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Nourishing sprouts can be grown easily

By ELVIN McDONALD

I'm mad as helleborus and not going to take it anymore: Last week a book packager called begging me to work miracles — overnight of course — for, get this, "... an author who is not a writer."

When I read the "manuscript" I saw enough red to charge a sitting bull: Much of it had been copied (or worse, miscopied) from Ronaldo Maia's masterful — and original — "Decorating with Flowers" (Abrams, New York, 1978) and from a book in which my photographs were used lavishly but, you guessed it, I was never paid.

This morning I am asked to review a so-called "new" book about vegetable gardening by yet another author who is not a writer. A few years ago a book on house plants from this person had a familiar sound; phrases, sentences, even paragraphs, had been lifted from the writings of yours truly.

By my estimation there may be yet three of four of you out there who need a book about vegetable gardening. Here are some names and honest authors who will not let you down, in no particular order, and not necessarily a complete list: Derek Fell, Neil Sperry, Mel Bartholomew, Jim Bennett, Tom Eltzroth, Jim Wilson, Kate Rogers Gessert, Rosalind Creasy, Geri Harrinton, Lois Burpee and the publications of Ortho, Sunset, HP Books and the Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

Ironically, the type of food gardening accessible to the most people is the least publicized: Growing sprouts, for living food that is chock full of vitality, costs pennies to produce and is ready to harvest within days.

Headquarters for this kind of information is Jeff Breakey, editor and publisher of a six-times-yearly "sproutletter," and creator of the "Complete Sprouting Chart," currently available from my Reader Service. Whether you have in mind some sprouts to nourish yourself and family, or growing in commecial quantities, Jeff is the source.

For a sample copy of Jeff's "Sproutletter" send $2 to Sprouting Publications, Box 62, Ashland, Ore. 97520. The "Complete Sprouting Chart," with alfalfa seeds to get you started, is $2 postpaid from Elvin McDonald Reader Service, 225 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Elvin McDonald is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

Mary Lyn Ratcliff

Ratcliff to be guest speaker

Mary Lyn Ratcliff of Fort Worth will be guest speaker at the March luncheon meeting of Green Tree Ladies Association. The meeting is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. March 19 at the main dining room of Green Tree Country Club.

A public speaker for 25 years, Ms. Ratcliff has taught education courses at the Tarrant County Junior College and self-improvement courses in high schools. Included in these courses are etiquette, make-up skills, clothes coordination, posture, good health habits and other personality development techniques. She will speak on "A Pampered Wife Makes A Pitiful Widow."

For luncheon reservations members should call 694-8413 by March 13. Cancellations must be made no later than March 15. Cost of the luncheon will be $10.

Optometrist: 30-day lenses really overnight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long-wear contact lenses can be a boon to many people, but one of the nation's leading optometrists warns that problems may still develop if the lenses aren't removed regularly and cared for.

"People get into trouble because they see the ad, or the term 30-day lens, and they say 'Oh, I can wear this lens 30 days.' I think it's a potential troublemaker, so to speak. I like to call a 30-day lens, an overnight lens," said Dr. Harold E. Davis of Chicago, chairman of the American Optometric Association's contact lens section.

"I don't really think there is a 30-day extended wear lens per se," Davis said in an interview. The length of wear for any lens depends on the tolerance of the individual, he said, and can be worked out with the eye doctor.

The extended wear lenses generally contain water and allow passage of oxygen through the lens to the eye, allowing them to be worn longer than the older style hard lenses.

But any lens has a tendency to degrade over time, warns Davis, and "the greatest potential for complication, and there is a significant potential for complication, is if patients ... are not monitored carefully."

Lenses should be checked anywhere from two to four times a year, Davis suggested, particularly with the high water lenses where tiny bits of debris that get into the eyes can damage the surface of the lens.

Unfortunately, Davis explained, some people have begun to consider contact lenses as a simple consumer product like cosmetics or jeans. "And really, they're really not. They're a scientific, prosthetic device that should be monitored by a professional."

"It's the old story. I tell my patients, 'Would you wear your underwear 30 days without removing it?' The eye is a dirty place."

With regular checks, he said, the average soft lens used daily should last a year to 18 months, although some can stay in use for two years or more.

In coming years, he said, disposable lenses could even become an option.

"Now, that will occur when the price of lenses drops," he observed.

Asked if contact lenses have been developed to the point where anyone can be fitted with them, Davis said that is generally the case.

Christian Women's Club to mee

Midland Christian Women's Club will meet for buffet luncheon and program at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Deena Harral, the club's music chairman, will present the musical entertainment. A singer who has toured Texas with the gospel group "Special Delivery," Ms. Harrall has sung backup on several albums. She will be accompanied on the piano by Kathleen Janssen.

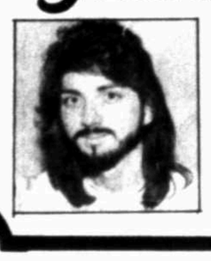

Alexa Davis and Lynn Hassell of Kalamazoo and Birthdays Too will present a program on children's birthday party ideas.

Guest speaker will be Jennifer Askew of Odessa Christian Women's Club. A home economist, Ms. Askew has served a director of volunteers for a loca hospital.

Cost of the luncheon will be $10.75. Nursery for pre-school children will be povided at Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, 2800 Mogford. Mothers are asked to bring sack lunches for their children. Luncheon and nursery reservations must be made by Monday by calling 694-4202, 689-6633 or 683-5665. Reservations not cancelled must be honored.

The club is interdenominational, has no formal membership and is open to all interested women. For more information call 697-2936.

France: Dream vacation from spas to shopping

World War II liberation of French spa commemorated

By CARL IRVING
Hearst News Service

VITTEL, France — In autumn 1984 at the old Victorian Hotel d'Angleterre in this French spa, some aging British and Americans gathered in memory of a welcome moment 40 years before. In small groups, they reminisced about the arrival of the French soldiers wearing American uniforms, displaying the tricolor and the Cross of Lorraine.

Until then, for five endless years, Vittel had been a prison for most of them. The Germans had turned the spa into a prison during World War II for more than 3,000 civilians from Britain and the United States who had been trapped by the German invasion of France in 1939.

When elements of the second division of the Free French army arrived to open the gates, the commander, Gen. Leclerc, made a memorable speech. Britain, he said, had offered his troops a haven in 1940, when they were forced to flee France. The United States had provided arms for the French forces to enable them to take part in the liberation of France four years later.

"Je suis heureux qu'il soit donne a un general francais de vous rendre la liberte," he said. ("I am happy that it has come to pass that a French general has given you freedom.")

ASIDE FROM THIS moment in the spotlight of history, Vittel is best known as a watering place with broad popularity among French and Belgian vacationers. Except for those who were there four decades before and an occasional reminder, such as the grand memorial a few miles up the road, Vittel has resumed its role as a classical kind of Continental spa.

As Americans, we are somewhat familiar with more internationally noted names, such as Baden Baden in Germany and Bath in Britain. Even at such spas, few of us do more than give them brief looks by way of a walk through the central grounds. Vittel is worth a visit for that alone, but it's also worth absorbing a bit of the flavor of what has continued to represent a favored European style of vacation resort.

Vittel represents a tradition intact — except for intervals during certain wars — since Roman times. This type of center avoids grandiose claims about miracle cures. There are promises of combining exercise with certain mild treatments not much more threatening than taking the local waters. A brochure, while avoiding wild claims, gives assurance that obesity, gout and rheumatism may be eased or even eliminated by sipping those waters.

ALONG WITH the customary daily deliveries of wine to the rows of Victorian guest houses and hotels which line Vittel's quaint streets come cases of plastic bottles containing the Vittel mineral water, a well-known label throughout France. And along with the waters, one who comes for the cure is expected to take exercise and to socialize. At Vittel, there are lots of tennis courts, a golf course, polo field, harness racing track, winding paths for walking and a casino — for another kind of exertion.

But if you visit off-season, chances are you will find the casino and most hotels and pensions closed, except for the majestic d'Angleterre. Without crowds, Vittel and its carefully tended walks and groves takes on a distinct air of sweet melancholy which can be very soothing to the nerves of a harried traveler.

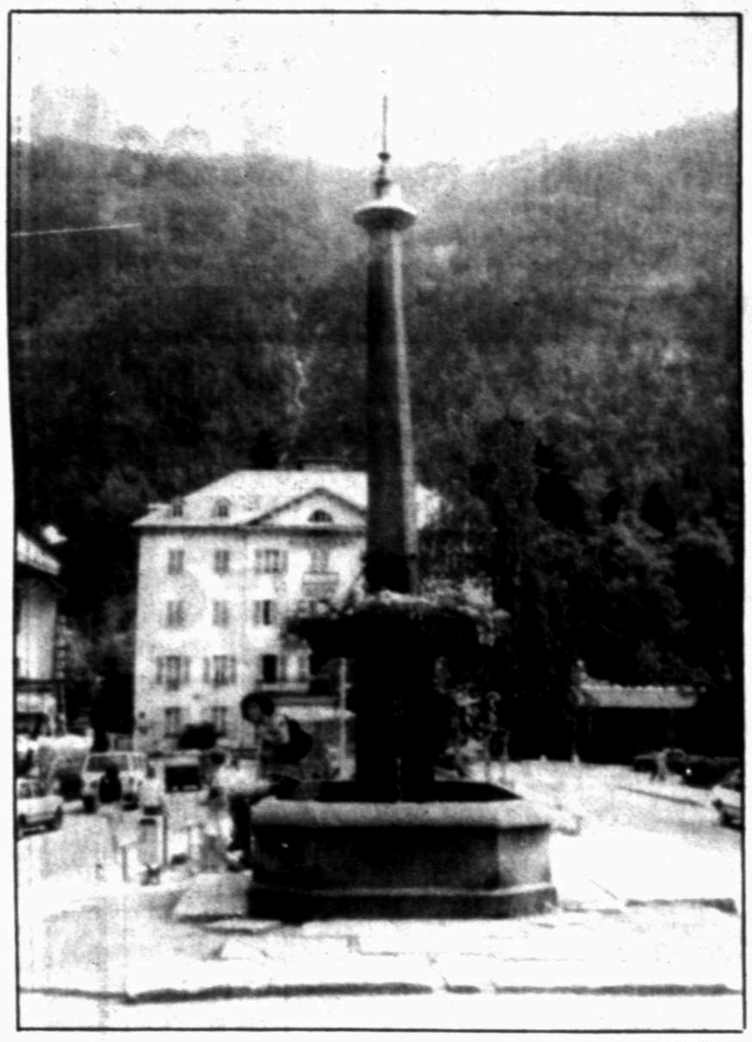

Nobody rushes past with tennis rackets, golf clubs, bikes or horses. The Grand Hotel is silent and locked, and so are the glass houses with fountains and faucets, baths and exercise rooms where European health seekers congregate in season. The setting seems somehow familiar — like a scene from a beautiful and faintly sad movie, featuring long, tree-lined vistas, carpets of fallen leaves along deserted paths, rooks cawing among bare branches.

And to complete the pervading sense of having somehow wandered into the setting of a tale of remembered romance, there was the dining salon. This was a great hall — a ballroom, really — which, because so few guests were on hand, was set with tables at only one end. We were served an excellent meal in hushed elegance perfectly in keeping with the surroundings.

American tourists expected to flock to Europe again

Hearst News Service

If you want to chat with your next-door neighbors this summer, you may have a better chance of seeing them under the Eiffel Tower than over the backyard fence.

A flood of Americans clutching their all-powerful dollars is expected to sweep across the Continent again this summer, and the European Travel Commission — which always estimates on the conservative side — is planning for more than 6 million U.S. tourists and businessmen in 1985. That's half a million over the record number that visited last year.

Blame this rush for culture and good times on the muscle of the dollar, the resurgence of the U.S. economy and, according to European travel experts, the increased ease of making the trip — more direct flights from more U.S. cities.

The dollar continues to climb against European currencies, and Herman Krueger, head of the European Travel Commission, says the dollar's purchasing power continues to outstrip inflation rates in European countries. The combination means Americans will get top value for their bucks.

The number of Americans visiting Europe in 1984 took an eye-popping 17 percent jump over 1983. The ETC is projecting a 7 percent increase in 1985, but wouldn't be surprised if it went into double figures again.

During last year's midsummer crush, the wire services sent back horror stories of Americans smacking into each other on the sidewalks of Europe's big cities and clumping together in great clots at the popular tourist sites. Some folks will have the same unhappy experiences again this year, but there are ways to avoid them.

"We like to suggest that people travel in the off-season, which we call the 'lively months' of September and October," says Krueger, who directs the German National Tourist Office for North America as well as the ETC. "The weather is still nice then, there are fewer tourists, it's even more affordable (because many high-season prices drop around that time), and you can get more cultural events such as ballet and opera, which are open again after being closed for the summer."

If you're set on summer, it's imperative that you plan ahead and make as many arrangements as practical before you go — the earlier the better. Hotel reservations will be a must in major metropolitan areas.

Naturally, an increase in the tourist trade brings with it an increase in the number of criminals who prey on travelers. Recent reports cite more activity by pickpockets and purse-snatchers, particularly at the popular tourist gathering spots in Italian and French cities.

According to victim accounts, the scam may involve: 1) a lot of pummeling and patting by seemingly friendly youngsters; 2) the dumping of food or spraying of paint on a tourist, who then is fleeced by a "good Samaritan;" or 3) a "deranged" gypsy leaping on a tourist and lifting a wallet while in the midst of a screaming/drooling "fit."

Travel to Kenya from South Africa limited

By 'GENE BURKE
Copley News Service

TRAVEL ADVISORY: KENYA — The State Department advises that Kenyan regulations regarding travel from South Africa to Kenya are as follows:

American citizens traveling to Kenya from South Africa or whose passports show South African visas will be admitted so long as they have not stayed in South Africa for three months. The presence of South African markings in the passport no longer means automatic denial of entry. U.S. citizen residents in Kenya wishing to transit or visit South Africa for a short time must apply for an exit visa from Kenyan Immigration at least 30 days before departing Kenya. The fee is ksh 1,000 (approximately $65) for each visit. Non-citizen residents of South Africa may be admitted to Kenya only with the prior approval of the principal immigration officer in Nairobi. South African citizens will not be admitted to Kenya.

Q. We have our passport applications ready to file, but are confused as to where to sign our photographs. We signed on the margin on the front of the photo, but this application states to sign the photos in the center on the reverse. Which is correct?

A. You should sign your photographs in the center on the reverse as the application sets forth. You will be receiving the new, computerized type of passport which does not allow for a signature on the front of the photograph.

Q. We are wintering in the Southwest and are wondering if we can get our passports here or wait to get them when we return home?

A. You may file for a passport at any post office authorized to accept applications or at a county clerk's office accepting passport applications. You need not wait to file in your home state.

If you wish personalized information about passport requirements, send your questions to 'Gene Burke, c/o Passport Agency, 11000 Wilshire Blvd., Room 13100, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024.

European tours commemorate World War II victory

By MORRIS D. ROSENBERG
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

May 8 — VE-Day — will mark the 40th anniversary of the Allies' victory over the Axis Powers in Europe in World War II. Among battlefield tours planned this year will be a number commemorating that event, including:

— "VE-Day plus-40," April 24-May 9. This tour will "retrace the major lines of the Allies' advance" from England through France into southern Germany and ending in Berlin. It is offered by ICTS-Inter-Continental Travel Systems, with deluxe motorcoaches provided abroad.

Participants will visit London, the Southampton staging areas for the assault across the English Channel, the D-day invasion beaches of Normandy in France, Paris, Strasbourg, Munich, Hitler's "Eagle's Nest" hideaway at Berchtesgaden in Bavaria, and both West and East Berlin. The return flight is from West Berlin — or individuals can make their own air reservations and extend the visit. A historian-guide will escort the group and local guides will be added along the way. Land cost (accommodations and most meals) is $1,850 per person, double occupancy. (The cost does not include air fare, but space has been reserved — and can be booked separately — on British Caledonian Airways for the transatlantic flight to London.)

More information: ICTS-Inter-Continental Travel Systems, 4133 Taylor Street, San Diego, CA 92110, (619) 299-4217 (collect for bookings only), or (800) 227-3800, Extension ICTS, to receive a brochure. Or see a travel agent.

— "Victory Tour of Europe," a 14-day package with departures on June 13, July 11 and Aug. 8. This trip will travel "roughly along the line" marking the link-up of American and Russian forces at the war's end. The operator is Northstar Tours, the military tour arm of Boon-Erik Tours Inc., using Lufthansa Airlines and deluxe motorcoaches.

Highlights will include Nuremberg, Munich, Dachau, Innsbruck, Obersalzburg, Berchtesgaden, Salzburg, Manthausen (a concentration camp near Linz), Vienna, Prague, Dresden and both Berlins. Tours are fully escorted by Ray Cowdery, military expert and author, and both arrival and departure are via Frankfurt. Cost from New York: $1,759 per person, double (including transatlantic air fare, accommodations and all meals except lunches).

Northstar also is offering again its comprehensive, escorted 13-day "Invasion Tour," which follows the route of the Allied D-day invasion of Europe from Normandy to the Rhine River in Germany on deluxe motorcoaches. There will be seven trips between May and September. The carrier is KLM Airlines, using Amsterdam as the European gateway and departure point. Cost from New York: $1,499 per person, double (including transatlantic air fare, accommodations and all meals except lunches).

More information: Boon-Erik Tours Inc., 430 First Ave. North, Minneapolis, Minn. 55401, (800) 322-2378, or write Ray Cowdery, P.O. Box 803, Lakeville, Minn. 55044-0803.

1985 Europe's 'Music Year'

By JAMES T. YENCKEL
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Europe has dubbed 1985 the European Music Year, and travel officials are calling it the "biggest-ever musical celebration," a year-long extravaganza of music of all types throughout the continent: from rock to Rachmaninoff and beer hall to concert hall.

Two years in the planning, the celebration is a bonus for transatlantic travelers in 1985, since many of the presentations — musical jamborees and massed spectacles — will be free. Europe, of course, already has a busy calendar of annual music festivals, but a number of offerings — including commemorative concerts in Cologne's recently renovated cathedrals — will be one-time only events.

The festivities, which also include seminars and lectures, coincide with the 300th anniversary of the birthdays of composers Johann Sebastian Bach, George Frederick Handel and Domenico Scarlatti, all born in 1685.

The musical year gets underway in March with the International Bach Festival in Leipzig, East Germany, concentrated near the composer's birthdate of March 21. Bach lived and worked in Leipzig for much of his life.

Among the performing groups are the Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields and the Washington Bach Consort, the only U.S. organization invited.

Actually, the Bach festival is not an official European Music Year event, since it takes place in Eastern Europe, and the Music Year has been organized by 23 West European nations and Yugoslavia. But Bach's birthday must be included in any list of Europe's major musical happenings.

Among other special attractions are a museum exhibition in Madrid on "Scarlatti and His Era" from September to December and a major Handel festival in London from July 12 through 22.

One of the liveliest events of the year is expected to be a "day of music" on June 21, the beginning of summer. Performances are planned not only on many of the continent's famed stages but in the streets, parks and squares of towns, villages and cities throughout Europe.

France has a popular tradition of an annual day of music, but this is the first time all of Europe will join in. In Ireland, for example, bands from all over the country will join in a grand open-air concert in Dublin.

The year's list of presentations is lengthy, since something is happening almost every day. For detailed information:

— A calendar of major events of the European Music Year (to date; it's still growing) can be obtained from the European Travel Commission, 630 Fifth Ave., Suite 610, New York City, N.Y. 10111.

— The musical events in a specific country can be obtained by contacting that country's national tourism office in New York City. These offices also should be able to advise on how to arrange for tickets, and they can provide the names of any tour organizers offering music-related tours.

Among the music tours available to Europe:

— "Understanding Bach": A series of three packages to the Leipzig Bach festival, designed by Odyssey Tours Inc. of Santa Monica, Calif. Each package varies in which of 14 medieval and baroque cities of East and West Germany and Czechoslovakia are visited, but all three come together for a week at the Bach festival, March 19-27.

During that week, participants will have tickets to six major performances and are invited to attend seminars by visiting artists and to join tours to sites identified with Bach's life and work.

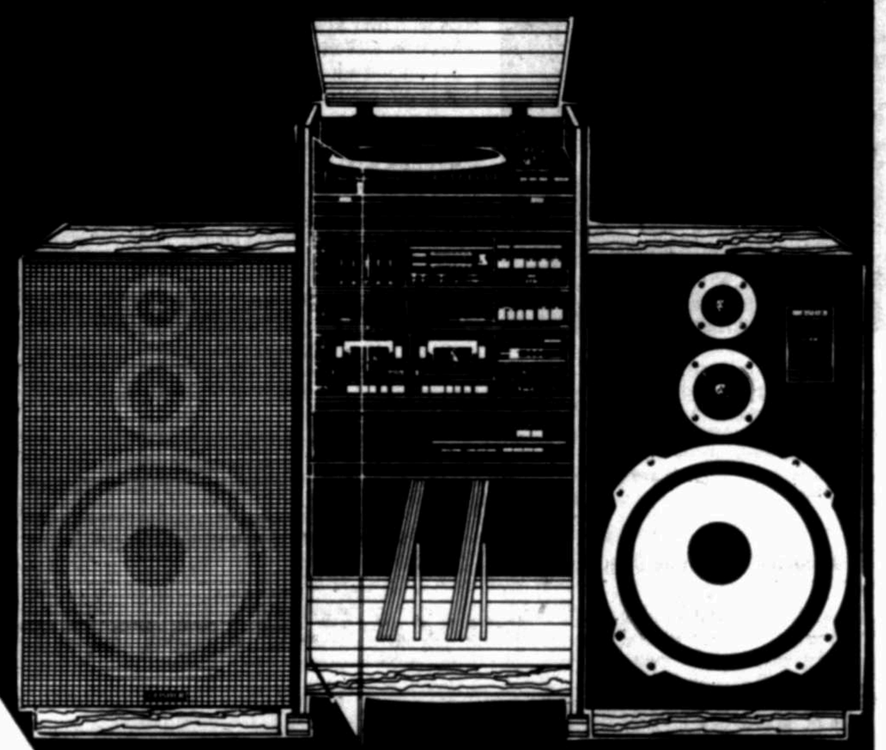

Leaders on the Leipzig packages are American concert opera singer Mordecai Bauman and Michael Rubinovitz, who produces audio-visual materials for the Metropolitan Opera Guild.

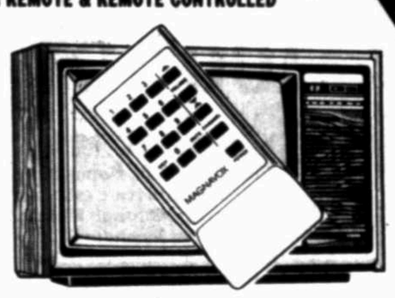

Tours depart March 11 for 22 days ($3,195 per person double occupancy for air fare, lodging, two meals daily); March 15 for 22 days ($2,695); and March 15 for 18 days ($2,395). For more information: Odyssey Tours Inc., 1831 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 120, Santa Monica, Calif. 90403, (800) 654-7975.

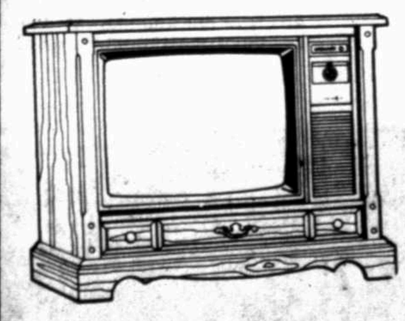

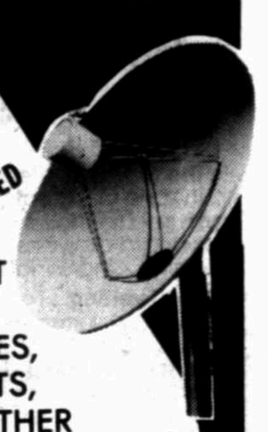

— A Day at the Bach Festival: Dailey-Thorp Travel of New York, which specializes in music tours, has scheduled one week in Dresden, East Germany, for the opening of the rebuilt Semper Opera House.

The tour departs March 21, and the cost is $1,753 per person double occupancy for lodging, meals and excursions (air fare extra). For information: Dailey-Thorp Travel, 315 West 57th St., New York City, N.Y. 10019, (212) 307-1565.

Texas Trivia serious business for Texas entrepreneur

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Here's one for ardent pursuers of trivia.

Name the Texan who has dreamed up, started, quit, lost, litigated or been duped out of the following careers and enterprises: Texas Taxi limousines, a newspaper, screenwriting, playwrighting, a video movie center, one of Texas' biggest Moped dealerships and the Texas Trivia game.

The answer is Kirk Dooley, a fast-talking, slap-'em-on-the-back, gee-whiz, 30-year-old whose colorful career, if recited, might confound even the deftest of auctioneers.

"I've never had a nine-to-five job, and I don't know if I ever will," Dooley said recently as he reclined in his latest office.

Since July 1984, he says, his company has sold more than 30,000 editions of his Texas Trivia game, a regionalized take-off on the parlor passion of Trivial Pursuit. Texas Trivia is sold in 600 stores in 10 states.

The questions run the usual gamut of obscure facts and lore. Examples:

—"Where was Conrad Hilton's first hotel?" (Cisco, Texas).

—"Who holds the record for the most points scored in a basketball game in Dallas' high school Dr Pepper Tournament?" (Don Meredith, who later went on to be a professional football player and TV actor and announcer).

The game's self-proclaimed object, of course, "is to win." And that, in the finest Texas tradition, means wresting control of everybody else's scoring disks and becoming a millionaire.

Dooley insists he is not really interested in becoming a millionaire himself. He says he just wants enough cash to live on and be able to continue working on his business enterprises.

First it was Mopeds, mini-motorcycles with pedals. "I'd seen them in California and thought I could be the first one in Dallas to sell Mopeds," Dooley said.

That business went bust after changing federal regulations closed a loophole that exempted Mopeds from the safety and licensing requirements imposed on motorcycle owners.

In the meantime, Dooley started another business — "The first video specialty shop in Dallas," he said. That one died when his partner piled all the inventory and cash into a truck one night and drove off.

He recalls saying to himself: "We've had the good ideas, there's no question. Now we've just got to make the business end of it work out. If I could come up with something that had no competition ...."

Then came Texas Taxis, a fleet of Cadillac Eldorados with longhorns on the hoods and horns under them that played "The Eyes of Texas." There were big cigars and Lone Star beer for the male customers and yellow roses for women.

Among his most famed customers were the stars of the television hit show "Dallas." "You can't get a taxi like that in New York or Los Angeles," actor Larry Hagman, who plays the devious J.R. on "Dallas," said in 1982. "It's Texas all the way."

Dooley later sold the limousine company to get back into his first love of writing.

Taco Villa to sponsor trivia contest

Hundreds of trivia enthusiasts from all over the West Texas area will team up in March to play the nation's most popular board game - Trivial Pursuit to raise money for the Easter Seal Society of the Permian Basin.

The day long Trivial Pursuit Challenge, scheduled for Saturday, March 23, is one of several fund-raising special events sponsored by Taco Villa, Inc., to benefit the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center located in Odess and Midland. Under the guidance of the Selchow and Righter Company, the United States manufacturer of the trivia game, the Trivial Pursuit Challenge will be held on March 23 at the Odessa Hilton, 5200 East University in Odessa, beginning at 10:00 a.m. Entries fees for the challenge are $10.00 per player, with teams consisting of from one to four players. Entry fees are tax-deductible and will go to the Easter Seal Society of the Permian Basin.

Prizes will be awarded to team players from a series of exclusively designed Trivial Pursuit memorabilia such as coffee mugs, books, T-shirts, and game editions, plus Taco Villa beach chairs and food prizes.

"Selchow and Righter's generosity is enabling us to raise money here in the Permian Basin," adds Craig Van Amburgh, Director of Marketing for Taco Villa and Challenge coordinator. "This event will give the local Easter Seal Society a unique opportunity to provide vitally needed health care services and have a lot of fun doing it! We are glad Taco Villa can be a part of it." Spectators are invited to witness this "war of the wedges" and cheer for their teams for a $1.00 admission fee.

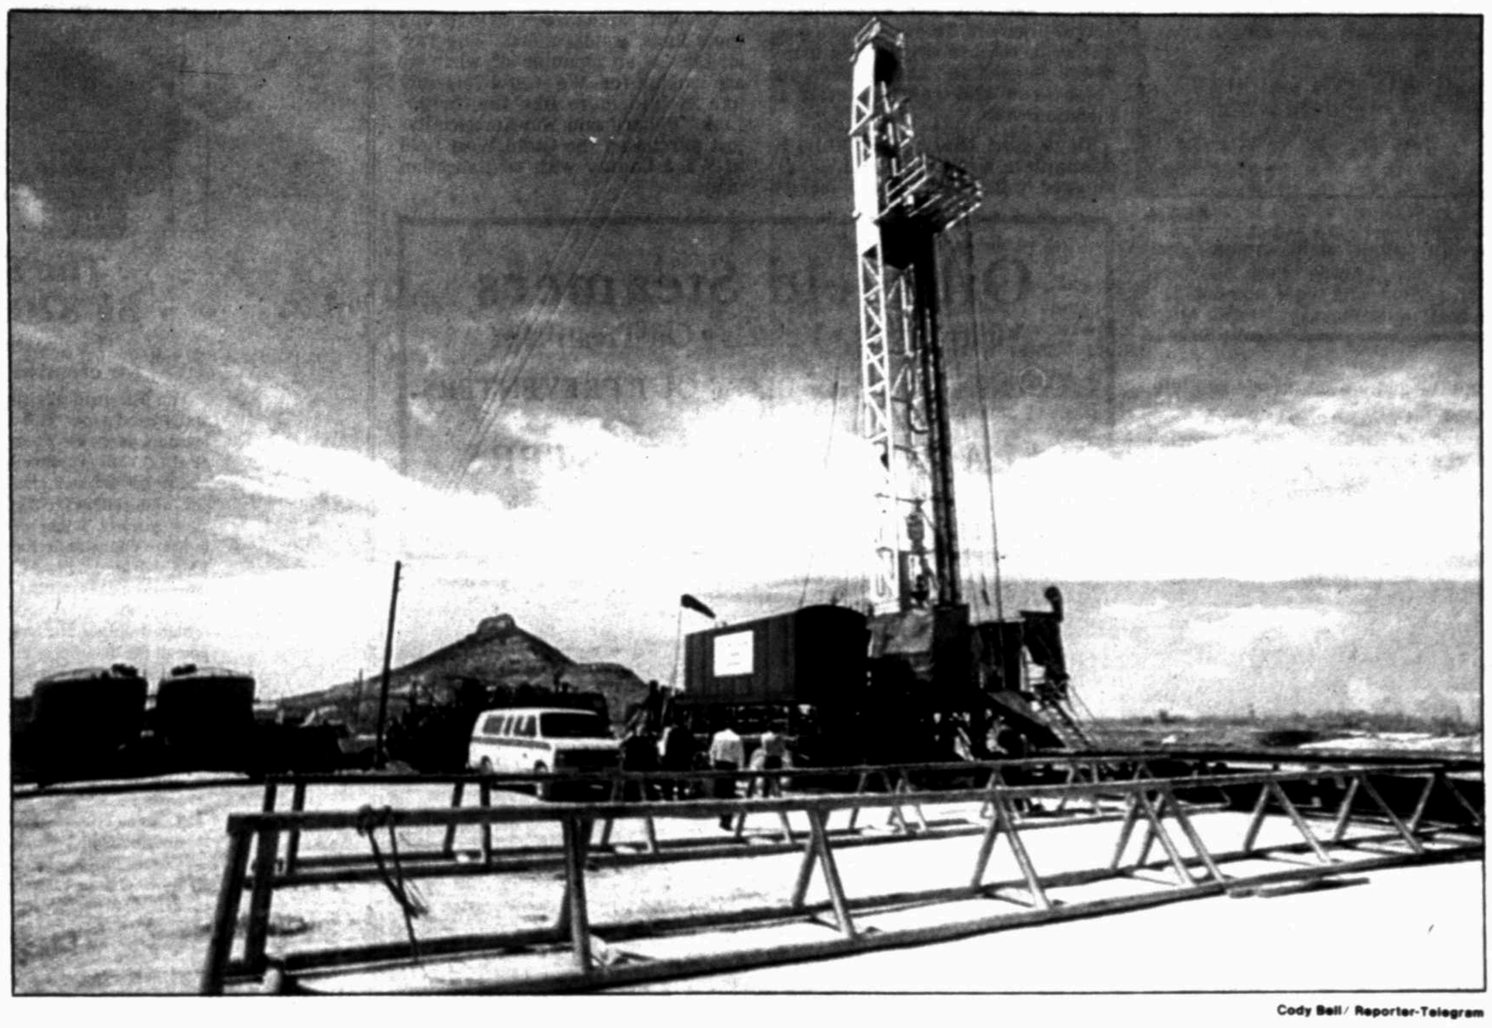

Registration information and tournament regulations are available at all Taco Villa restaurants in Odessa, Midland, Hobbs, Big Spring, Andrews, Monahans, Lamesa and Ft. Stockton. Pre-registration for the Trivial Pursuit Challenge will be accepted through Thursday, March 21, and can be made by contacting Craig Van Amburgh or Johnna Davis at 915-563-4290. Official deadline for all entries is 10:00 a.m. at the Odessa Hilton on the day of the tournament. The Odessa Parks and Recreation Department will also assist in the organization of the Challenge.

Trivial Pursuit is the registered trademark of Horn Abbott Ltd. (Canada) for the game manufactured and distributed in the U. S. under license to Selchow and Righter Company, Bay Shore, N. Y. Selchow and Righter Company, founded in 1867, is the country's oldest privately-owned game manufacturer.

UPS gets TRC nod

AUSTIN - On a two-to-one vote the Railroad Commission Monday denied motions for rehearing in the United Parcel Service case, reaffirming its order of January 21 granting the company authority to transport packages from point to point within the state.

Chairman Buddy Temple and commissioner Mack Wallace voted to deny the rehearing motions filed by some 39 truck and bus companies which protested the UPS application. Commissioner James E. Nugent voted to grant the rehearing requests.

'Fixer-Upper' oil field pays off

Repair and flooding of Taylor-Link will jump production 3,000 barrels

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Buying old and run down homes and fixing them up for profit has long been a formula for success in the real estate industry. Now, Mid-America Petroleum Inc. and partners are applying that same formula to the oilpatch, hoping to improve their fortunes in the oil field "fixer-upper" business.

The joint venture group in which Mid-America is the operator has bought the Taylor-Link field in Pecos County with the intention to fix-up, waterflood and increase production by about 3,000 barrels per day.

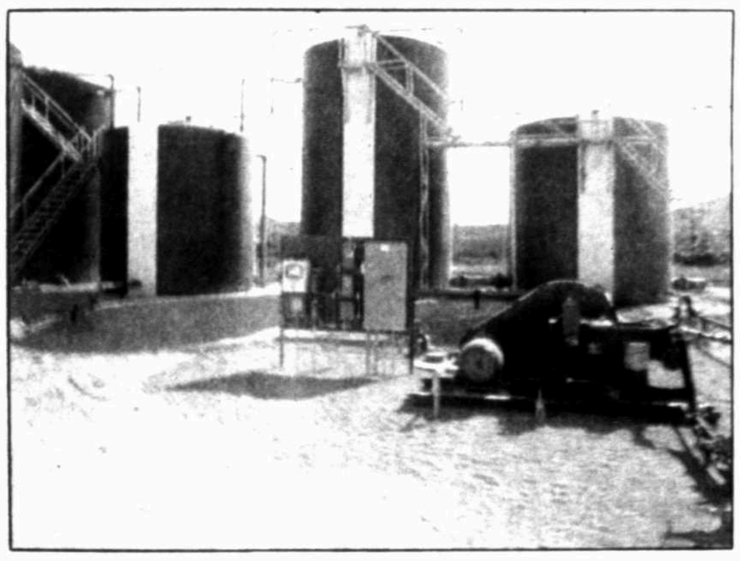

Partners in the venture are: Dan Krausse, Dallas, the former president of Champlin Oil Co., with a 23 percent interest in the project; Nashville industrialist, Dan Maddox, also with 23 percent and Petrus Oil Co., Dallas, the oil firm of H. Ross Perot, which has taken a 21.5 percent interest. Mid-America has retained a 27 percent interest and Gordon Knox, Mid-America chairman and principal stockholder, has joined for 6.5 percent on his own account.

"A lot of people would look at a field like the Taylor-Link and run from it," said Mid-America President and Chief Executive Officer, Michael Pollard, "but we able to see good economics in the project despite all the repair work that needed to be done."

DISCOVERED IN 1929 and operated for many years by Pan American, the 1,700 ft. San Andres (Dolomite) field similar to the Yates field of Pecos County, only smaller. The field was developed on 10-acre spacing by cable tool and many of the wells had initial potentials of 400-2,000 barrels per day, but over the years primary production declined as did the field. In 1983, the field surpassed 10.5 million barrels of production, but the surviving 50 wells in the field were only producing an average of 2 barrels per day, and many of them were in poor mechanical shape. Another 45 wells in the field had already been plugged.

It was prominent Permian Basin oilman, Gordon Landreth, who proposed the idea of a waterflood in the Taylor-Link. Landreth, whose family had been working interest owners in the field, had kept extensive notes on the field and had long thought it to be an excellent waterflood candidate if it could be acquired, according to Pollard.

Acquisition would prove to be no easy task. Besides the low production and poor mechanical condition of the field an even greater problem existed that had frightened off a number of would-be developers. The production in the field was held by 127 working interest owners, mostly small operators in the McCamey area. But despite all the negatives and the lack of good geological data, Mid-America and partners chose to aggressively pursue acquisition of the field.

The Taylor-Link waterflood will use a central production facility, above, under construction.

"ACQUISITION WAS the hardest part," said Pollard. "It took over a year to acquire the leases from a smorgasbord of entities, but we now own 90 percent of the working interest in the field. We offered the working interest owners three options in acquiring the field: to sell, farmout or join as a working interest owner."

Phase one of the project, following acquisition involved getting reservoir data, which with the exception of primary production records and the Landreth notes was almost non-existent. Fifteen wells were drilled, the reef was cored and open hole logs run. The reef was found to be about 65 foot thick with a porosity of 11-12 percent and good oil saturation. "The results were as good or better than we had expected," recalled Manny Sirgo III, Mid-America Exploitation Manager. Based on analysis of the reservoir

Securities firm failure to hit cities

Withdrawals could cause chain reaction

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Depositors in Ohio lined up to withdraw deposits guaranteed by a failed Florida securities company, and cities across the nation that did business with the firm could be affected by its collapse, officials say.

"It's like musical chairs," Thomas Tew, the court-appointed receiver for Fort Lauderdale-based ESM Government Securities Inc., said Thursday. "When the music stops, some will be left standing."

On Thursday, Securities and Exchange Commission officials said they would ask a federal judge to lift a freeze on the sale of ESM securities. They argued that otherwise, some clients of the failed firm could be in financial trouble.

"There are some cities that are in bad shape, that need to liquidate these securities in order to meet payroll," said Michael Wolensky, regional administrator for the SEC.

Of the 38 cities, counties and pension funds that loaned money to ESM in exchange for securities, about a dozen do not have collateral in their possession and could feel the pinch, The Miami Herald reported Thursday.

A federal judge ordered the company closed Monday after auditors discovered that ESM had borrowed $1.6 billion from its customers, loaned out $1.3 billion, and did not have the $300 million difference.

The SEC said the company had given incorrect and incomplete information to its customers, shifting its losses around to affiliates to avoid detection.

In Cincinnati, depositors of Home State Savings Association, worried they might lose their money because ESM loaned money to Home State, lined up to withdraw money Thursday.

"I don't want to take my money out of here, but I've come to get it," said an 80-year-old woman who declined to identify herself as she waited at a Cincinnati branch office of the savings association.

Home State borrowed $670 million from ESM in a complicated financial deal called a repurchase agreement. The thrift turned over an amount of government securities as collateral, and its depositors' fears arose because those securities may now be irrecoverable. But state officials say the money is safe.

About 150 depositors stood in line at two Home State branches Thursday.

City officials in Beaumont, Texas, were forced to postpone a $32 million bond sale set for next week when they were placed on a credit watch because the city had $21 million invested in ESM.

In Florida, Pompano Beach could lose $11 million, or one third of its total investments, while Tamarac has $7 million invested, or 40 percent of its total.

Also among possible creditors of ESM were the Arizona Retirement System; the Memphis, Tenn., City School Board Retirement System; the Bank of the South; Ohio State University; and the cities of Tempe, Ariz.; Birmingham, Mich.; Tulsa, Okla.; and Toledo, Ohio, the Herald said.

New energy library to boost Midland's status

In this constantly changing oil industry, where companies are lost almost like clockwork to mergers and failures, much valuable subsurface information may also be lost.

But thanks to the West Texas Geological Society there may soon be a repository for all those old logs, cores, samples, well data and other valuable subsurface information. Being organized separately, but under the blessing and guidance of WTGS, is the Midland Energy Library, a non-profit corporation.

"It will be a state-of-the-art library," says Sara Robbins, who has been active with the project. "Eventually, we hope to have a depository of computerized information that would allow geologists not only from the Permian Basin but all over the nation to tap into the system with their own computer system for log and well information. It would be a tremendous savings of time to local operators who have to put a man on a plane and fly him from Austin to Midland to look at logs."

ACCORDING TO SOURCES the library would serve as a depository for geological, geophysical and engineering data of the Permian Basin, and would contain far more extensive files of information than any existing library. It would also provide facilities for a public library devoted to the collection and preservation of scientific and engineering data including electric logs, (both large and reduced scale) well cards, scout tickets, sample logs, mud logs, paleontological data, land topographics, maps, aerial photos, and land satellite surveys. It would also include: drill stem test data, production data, water analysis data, drilling reports, well cuttings and cores.

It is hoped that much of the information will be donated by major oil companies who are thinning out or abandoning their own data for lack of storage space or as a result of duplication created by mergers. The library, however, anticipates purchasing much of the information from a variety of sources.

VISITING GEOLOGISTS would be able to use the library on a day basis, while the academic community (students, teachers and researchers) and the public would have free access to it. Those using it professionally, however, would pay an initiation fee of $300 and a monthly dues fee.

The location for the proposed Midland Energy Library will be in downtown Midland, which was the preference of a majority of WTGS members polled.

At the present, the library committee is conducting a charter membership drive and expects to launch a campaign to obtain start-up funds as well as data from companies who would have an interest in the facility. The committee also anticipates receiving assistance from certain foundations created by oil wealth, which will make funds available for specific needs. The library is now in the process of accepting memorials.

According to Sara Robbins, the response has already been overwhelming with new applications. "There is a tremendous need for another library," she says, "because Subsurface Library is full and has a membership waiting list."

Operation of the facility will be under the supervision of a board of directors of 15 members, with two seats being held for representativesof major oil companies. Other groups represented on the board will be the Permian Basin Geophysical Society; Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists, Permian Basin Section of Society of Petroleum Engineers, and West Texas Geological Society. The other eleven directors will be nominated by the board of directors.

THE PROPOSAL for an international-class energy library in Midland is a good one. Midland is an oil center, simply because it is an oil center, and such a facility will go a long way toward Midland nailing down its reputation as a world-class petroleum center — the leader for the rest of the nation and industry to follow.

Dooley said he also is working on a history of Highland Park and neighboring University Park and has gotten a job offer from his brother to sell houses and an invitation to become majority owner of magazine.

OIL FIELD

Mid-America expects to recover an additional 7.4 million barrels of oil above primary and through secondary, at a finding cost of $2.70 a barrel.

Said Sirgo: "When you can find oil for less than $5 a barrel, you have a lot of room to work with. That is substantially below the industry average of $11 a barrel finding cost."

IF THE PARTNERS of the Taylor-Link joint venture stand to profit, the University of Texas Lands System stands to profit even more. Located entirely on University lands, the 1,500 acre field is expected to yield to the University an additional $35 million through primary.

Mid-America has put a price tag of $20 million on the project from acquisition through development, with a good portion going for development. When completed the waterflood project will have 54 producers and 67 injectors. To date 29 new producers have been drilled and many of the plugged and abandoned wells re-entered and re-completed as injection wells.

Sirgo said that being able to recomplete some of the 1,700 ft. plugged wells with a well service unit and reverse unit had proved a savings for the venture. "So far we have been successful in recompleting about two out of three of the plugged wells. If we can get down on them, we set a liner, but if not we plug it from top to bottom and drill a new well."

WHEN WATER INJECTION begins in the project some time this summer about 20 million barrels of outside make-up water from the Trinity aquifer will be required. As the flood begins to respond, production is expected to leap from 100 barrels to 3,000 barrels per day within two years.

Then after secondary will come tertiary. "We will start immediately to formulate tertiary plans," said Sirgo. "There were 60 million barrels of oil in place in the field. Primary took 10.5; secondary will take 7.5, and that still leaves a lot of oil in place."

Does Mid-America foresee the oilfield "fixer-upper" business as a continuing corporate effort?

"I would say we are looking along those lines," said Pollard. "The Taylor-Link is an example of what we are looking for. We would certainly like to find more like the Taylor-Link." Pollard said Mid-America has just purchased the Quito West field in Ward County with revitalization plans.

a zoom copier that's really easy to use!

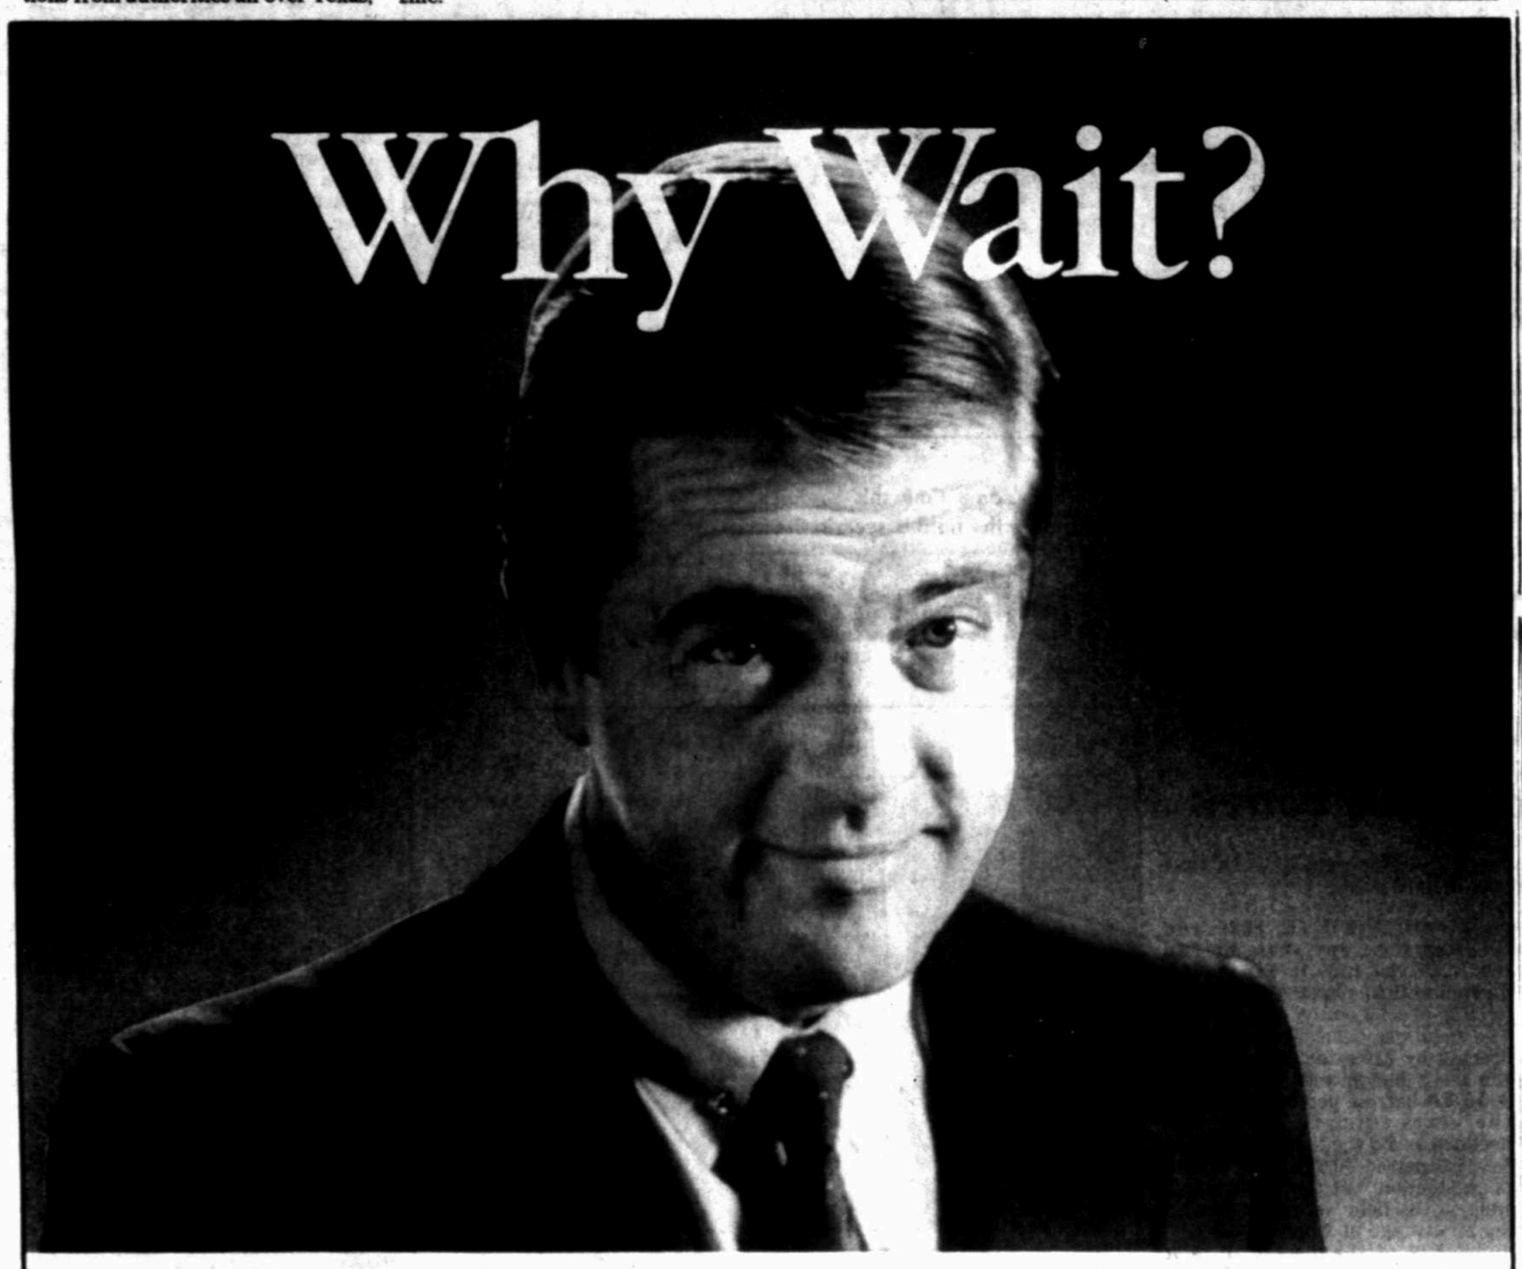

The Sharp SF-8200 VMR
The creative copier for creative businesses.

You'll dramatically cut down on wasted time and wasted paper with this significant advancement in automatic zoom copying. The Sharp SF-8200 VMR (Variable Magnification Ratio) reads your original, chooses the proper paper size, and switches to the correct paper cassette automatically. When reducing or enlarging, just indicate your size preference and the SF-8200 VMR will automatically select the best copying ratio and makes perfect copies, in various colors if you wish.

Stated simply, the Sharp SF-8200 VMR gives you all the benefits of zoom copying in a machine that's as easy to use as the simplest basic copier. Even easier!

★ Makes larger or smaller copies as easily as same-sized copies.
★ Handles odd sized originals with ease.
★ Size for size reproduction of originals as large as 11" x 17" or as small as 4" x 6".
★ Does all critical steps in reducing or enlarging automatically.
★ Copies in red, blue, black or brown with quick change cassettes.

YOU ARE INVITED TO AN IMPORTANT FREE SEMINAR

DUE FOR A LUMP SUM PAYMENT WHEN YOU RETIRE OR CHANGE JOBS?

ROLL IT OVER TAX DEFERRED.

LET JERRY SMITH, MIKE MOORE, AND J. F. BELL, MERRILL LYNCH ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES, TELL YOU WHY.

At this seminar, you'll learn how the Merrill Lynch IRA rollover plan helps protect your lump sum profit sharing or pension plan distribution from current taxes — and gives you the flexibility to keep your assets growing tax deferred.

You'll find out how you can take the lump sum, put it into a Merrill Lynch Individual Retirement Account, and simply continue your tax deferment — including any subsequent IRA gains and earnings — until you want to take it out. Which you can do without IRS penalty—at age 59½.

And why you must act within 60 days in order not to lose this tax deferment.

Other advantages

Avoiding current taxes is only one benefit. Another is the Merrill Lynch rollover IRA itself.

Unlike most, it lets you keep any stock you receive in your distribution. And gives you genuine flexibility. You select your IRA investments — from stocks and bonds, to money market funds, government securities and more — and you can shift investments anytime your goals change or new opportunities arise.

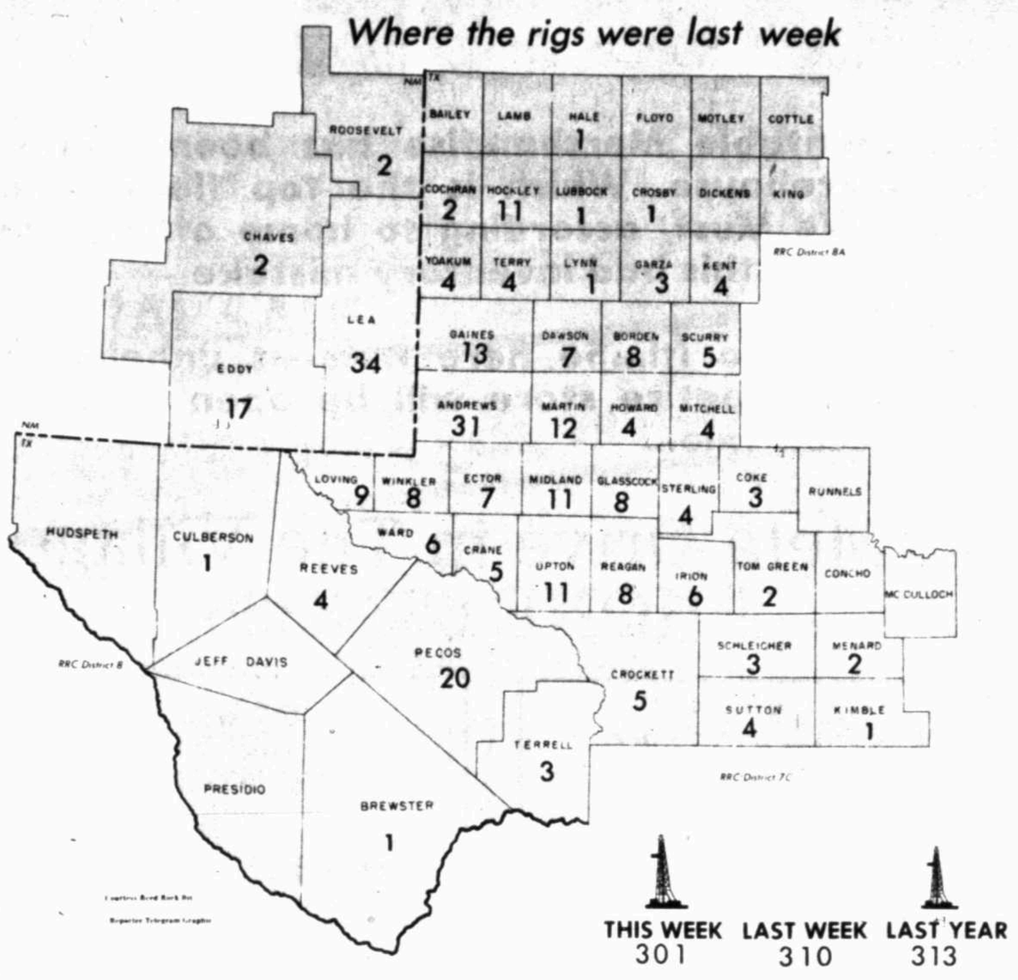

To take complete advantage of our vast IRA rollover experience, be sure to attend this free seminar. Reservations are important. To make yours, mail the coupon or call today.

Rig counts continue to slide

Rig activity in both the Permian Basin and the U.S. continued to slow this week.

Locally, Midland County gained three rigs, putting 11 to work this week. Ector County added two rigs, raising the total to seven rigs. Andrews County held steady at 31 rigs. Martin County added two rigs, raising the count to 12/

Menard County saw some new activity, putting two rigs to work this week. Pecos County added three rigs, for a total of 20 rigs this week. Two rigs moved out of Lea County, leaving 34 rigs at work within county lines.

For the week, the rig count is 301. A week ago the count was 310. A year ago the count was 313.

Nationally, the state of Texas lost ground as 23 rigs left this state, leaving 760 rigs working this week. New Mexico lost three rigs, putting 68 rigs to work presently. Oklahoma lost 27 rigs, lowering the count to 243. Louisiana lost two rigs, for a total of 298 at work this week.

Alaska lost one rig, leaving 22 at work this week. Three rigs moved out of California, lowering the state's count to 76. Canada gained 17 rigs, for a total of 415 this week.

For the week, the count is 2,011. A week ago the count was 2,143. A year ago the count was 2,277.

Crude oil distribution most complex of systems

Editors Note: This is the third in a series of four question and answer interviews, on the subject of energy economics, conducted with Waylon Griffin, Phd., professor of marketing at University of Texas Permian Basin.

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

You have described the crude oil distribution system as a world-wide supra-system. What do you mean by that?

That means simply that the system is a commodity distribution system unlike that of any other distribution system in the world. It is a gargantuan system, so complex that it is almost beyond comprehension. It is a system that is intricately a part of the welfare and survival of every nation.

What do you mean by survival?

Oil is a war commodity — always has been and probably always will be — the enery policy we have or do not have is directly related to the ability of the U.S. and all nations to make war. An army can go for days on an empty stomach. It cannot go one inch on an empty tank. The Department of Defense, State Department, CIA, White House and Congress has had a hand in the shaping of the oil industry for many years, and will probably continue to do so. Oil is linked to all political systems all over the world. Its absence, availability or abundance has a direct and immediate effect upon political systems.

Is it true that American tanks and planes may be using Russian and Libyan oil from this giant distribution system?

Yes it is. Oil is fungible. That is, one tanker load is just like another. Once a tanker of oil is graded and put into the world system, we cannot tell our oil from the oil of our enemies. Oil in a tanker is also unbranded. That means there is no price differential based on where oil was produced. We can't call West Texas intermediate a higher grade and command a higher price for it, simply because a barrel of oil from Iran can be refined into the same products. Oranges may be sweeter and more expensive, depending on where they were grown, but not oil.

What does affect the grading and pricing of oil?

Bassically the two things that affect the grade of oil are API gravity (thickness of the oil) and the amount of sulphur in it. West Texas sour crude has a higher sulphur content and sells for slightly less. But, beyond grade there is no essential difference. What affects the price of the oil are transportation fees and broker fees.

How did this complex, world-wide crude oil distribution come into being?

It is basically a creation of the major oil companies, and I may say that it is a tribute to the majors. We can now move oil from almost any point in the world via pipeline or tanker at a nominal price. For instance, a barrel of oil can be shipped from the Persian Gulf to Houston for less than a dollar. There is also a very complex exchange system a work within the system. One refinery that needs a certain amount of a certain grade of oil will exchange an equivalent of a different batch to another refinery. Millions of dollars of oil are traded over the phone every hour. Sometimes a barrel of oil will be traded three or four times before it gets to its final destination.

Are refined products traded and exhanged in much the same way?

Yes. Brand X may supply Brand Y service stations in Utah, where Brand Y has no refinery, while Brand Y supplies gasoline to Brand X service stations in New Mexico. It is a very complex, but effecient system. While there is certainly a great deal of competition, there is also much cooperation.

Since the Permian Basin produces so much oil does it have the ability to influence prices in this giant system, like OPEC?

No. How much oil the Permian Basin produces or doesn't produce has nothing to do with the price of oil. The Basin and the rest of Texas already produces at 100 percent of market demand factor, and has done so by the order of the Texas Railroad Commission for the past decade. It cannot prudently produce any more. Neither the Permian Basin nor OPEC have enough market share to affect oil prices; both are controlled by the world market, because oil truly is a world commodity. If OPEC is on one horn of the oil price dilema, the Permian Basin is on the other.

Banks unite to share automated tellers

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — A group of some of the largest banks in the New York area said this week they had joined in a three-state network that will allow millions of customers to use automated teller machines of any member bank.

Known as the New York Cash Exchange, or NYCE, the system initially permits customers of five New York banks — Chemical Bank, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., Marine Midland Bank, The Bank of New York and Barclays Bank of New York — as well as Union Trust Co., based in Stamford, Conn., to make cash withdrawals and balance inquiries at any of the group's automated teller machines.

For customers of those banks, the service is available today. The National Westminster Bank U.S.A. and Goldome customers will gain access to the network within the next few weeks. More than 75 other banks in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, including the Chase Manhattan Bank, have signed letters of intent to join the group, said Leonard E. Malkin, a vice president at Manufacturers Hanover who serves as chairman of NYCE All banks in the region are permitted to join, he added.

The network's eight founding banks operate more than 800 teller machines at 650 locations in New York and Connecticut, and their customers hold 2.5 million automated teller cards. By the end of this year the group expects to service 3.5 million customers of 100 banks with 1,000 teller machines throughout the three-state area.

Notable for its absence from the group is Citibank, which has about 635 teller machines in 249 locations in the metropolitan area, more than any other single bank. Citibank's retail strategy is heavily dependent on its automated teller system, and several bankers said Wednesday that the formation of the NYCE poses a competitive challenge to the Citicorp unit. Citibank chose not to join, according to NYCE officials.

Local and regional teller machine networks are fairly common in other areas of the country, and several nationwide networks are in operation. But in New York, where automated teller machines came into widespread use later than in many other sections of the country, bankers have been reluctant to join a local network because of the high degree of competition in the retail banking field.

"There are so many big banks and the competition is so intense that they don't want to share their products," said one banking industry analyst, who asked not to be identified.

"This is tantamount to Macy's talking to Gimbel's," Malkin acknowledged. But he added that the experience of other networks around the nation has reassured NYCE members that they will not lose business to the competition. "None of us is concerned that a customer is going to leap into the arms of another bank" just because he has access to its teller machines, he said.

To use the system, a customer of any member bank who has a bank machine card, or a Mastercard or Visa credit card issued by one of the network's members, goes to any teller machine in the system and inserts the card and enters a personal identification number, the same as at the customer's own bank's machines. The customer can withdraw cash, make a balance inquiry or get a cash advance with the credit card. The customer's card even opens the door to the secured area where many teller machines are located.

The banks' computers have been programmed to identify transactions by customers of other banks, and to route the necessary information — the customer's name, account number and, for example, the amount of cash requested — to a central computer, which routes it to the customer's bank for verification.

Economists predict bankers to deny loans to 8 percent of farmers

Hearst News Service

Economists estimate that bankers will deny loans this planting season to 8 percent to 15 percent of the nation's farmers. They say 45,000 to 90,000 growers will have to try to get credit from suppliers, sell off some equipment or put seed in the ground without fertilizer. Within the year, many probably will have to give up their farms.

The number of loans on which farmers can't meet payments is reaching dangerous proportions at many banks throughout the Farm Belt. Small banks are failing at their highest rate since the Depression. And although the industry admits the crisis stems as much from management problems as from economic pressures, it agrees the farm crisis has triggered a shakeout in banking.

"In a lot of these communities, the banker, merchant and farmer are very close," said Fred Hagemann, president of the Federal Land Bank. "The banker may have closed his eyes a little bit, hoping against hope, but he realizes now there is no one there to bail him out. When the farmer says, 'You won't take my land,' the banker says in his mind, 'You won't take my bank.'"

Twenty-five of the 76 banks that failed in 1984 were farm banks, which regulators define as having at least 25 percent of their portfolios in farm loans. In Iowa, where banks have been hardest hit, the number for which delinquent loans exceeded total capital increased 357 percent between June 1983 and June 1984. In the first two months of 1985, three Iowa banks have shut their doors.

Banks in the Midwest are typically small, closely held organizations with less than $50 million in assets. A study by Keefe, Bruyette and Woods Inc., a bank securities firm, said the failures do not represent a large share of total banking assets in any Midwestern state, but characterized the rate of increase in their number as "alarming."

The seeds of today's crisis were sown in the '70s, when the dollar was weak, exports were high, and farmers expected land values to keep soaring. And inflation helped hide management mistakes, said Hagemann, who is also a past president of the Iowa Independent Bankers Association.

"It all comes back to you sooner or later, when the great cover-up of inflation is no longer there. I think people managed by inflation, not by ability. There was never enough cash flow through the production and sale of crops to make the loan work, and to pay it back on a regular basis."

Many industry observers lay the blame for farm banks' troubles squarely on the shoulders of the bankers themselves.

"Fraud is part of it; mismanagement is part of it," agreed Milos Konjevich, regional director of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in Minneapolis. "I have yet to see a bank fail strictly because of the economy."

Other bankers say accusations of mismanagement are unfair.

"Any time the collateral loses 50 percent of its value, I don't care how smart you are, you're going to have problems," said John Foley, assistant vice president at Hawkeye Bankcorporation in Des Moines. "There are a lot of good, independent bankers out there who are hurting."

The loosening of federal controls over banking has been an added pressure on farm banks, which once operated in a fairly sheltered environment.

Burlington Northern Inc., Meridian Oil consolidate

HOUSTON (SWN) — The consolidation of Burlington Northern Inc.'s oil and gas exploration and production businesses into Meridian Oil Inc., a new wholly owned subsidiary, was announced Thursday by Thomas H. O'Leary, vice chairman of BNI.

Meridian Oil's President and Chief Executive Officer is Joseph E. Reid, who joined Burlington Northern in 1984 and was formerly president and chief executive officer of Superior Oil Co.

Reid said, "The combination of El Paso Exploration Company and Milestone Petroleum Inc. has created a significantly larger and more flexible company." Meridian Oil has an interest in approximately 9,000 productive wells, located in the major petroleum basins of the United States. Revenues in 1984 were over $400 million and operating income was $181 million.

On the basis of domestic reserves, Meridian Oil is expected to be the nation's largest independent producing company. At year end 1984, the company had reserves of 2.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and 45 million barrels of oil. These reserves are approximately 480 million barrels of oil equivalent on a BTU basis. Meridian estimate s 1985 capital expenditures of $320 million, a 45 percent increase over 1984 levels. The company has 750 employees.

The coporate headquarters will be located in Houston. Regional offices are in Amarillo, Houston, and Midland, Texas, and Billings, Mont. Other offices are in El Paso, Texas, Farmington, N.M., and Denver.

Burlington Northern Inc. is a transportation and natural resource company headquartered in Seattle. Its other principal subsidiaries include Burlington Northern Railroad, El Paso Natural Gas Co., El Paso Hydrocarbons Co., Meridian Minerals Co., Glacier Park Co. and Plum Creek Timber Company Inc.

Marshall Hill

Sandi Bolton

Exxon U.S.A. has announced the retirement of four employees.

WILLIAM E. NOLAN, retired as a technical advisor in the Midcontinent Division, Joint Interest Group, located in Midland.

In 1961, he joined the company in the Fullerton Unit near Andrews. Engineering assignments followed in Hobbs, N.M. In 1964, he transferred to Division Engineering, Midland. In 1967, he moved to the Joint Interest Group.

Nolan, a native of Newport, Ky., received a B.S. degree in civil engineering from the University of Kentucky.

LUBY W. BELL, a native of Houston, retired from the company after 39 years of service. He was assigned as operator in the Midcontinent Division, Midland District, in Midkiff.

In 1946, he joined the company in Natches, Miss. He worked in various areas of Louisiana and in 1950, he transferred to Wink and Odessa. In 1963, he moved to the Midkiff area.

EVERETT E. "TEX" ELLIOTT retired with 40 years of service. He was assigned as drilling superintendent in the Midcontinent Division, Southern Drilling Operations in Midland.

In 1943, he joined the company in New London. He transferred to West Texas in 1959. In 1972, he joined the Southeastern Division and six years later, he returned to Midcontinent Division and joined drilling operations in Midland.

He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina. He is a resident of Fort Stockton.

JAMES P. MERRIMAN has retired from Exxon Co., U.S.A. with over 36 years of service. He has been assigned as Division Staff Engineer in the Midcontinent Division, LaBarge Project, in Midland.

In 1948, he joined the company in Hobbs, N.M. He has also worked in Midland, New Orleans, Houston, areas of California and Fairbanks, Alaska.

MARSHALL HILL was appointed general manager of the Midland Hilton on Jan. 8, 1985. He first came to Midland in May 1982, as the hotel's comptroller.

Before coming to Midland, Hill's hotel background includes assignments with Hilton Hotel Corp. in El Paso, Puerto Rico and Mexico City.

SANDI BOLTON, an 18-year resident of Midland, was recently promoted to the position of administrative assistant to the general manager of the Midland Hilton.

She joined the hotel as executive secretary in March 1984. She previously was the leasing agent for Lincoln Property Co.

Robert T. Sakowitz, chairman of the board and president of Sakowitz, Inc., announces the appointment of ALAN MERRITT to the position of general manager of Sakowitz in Midland.

Merritt's retail experience began in 1966 with Goldsmith's Department Store in Memphis, Tenn., where he was a sales associate, operations manager and men's sportswear buyer. In 1977, he became director of operations for Selber Bros. Department Store in Shreveport, La. By 1978, he was promoted to store manager and later to regional store manager for Selber Bros. in Tyler and Longview.

Merritt managed the Sanger Harris Department Store in Tyler for three years before accepting his current position of general manager of Sakowitz in Midland.

Bieber: Shift to Far East could end U.S. subcompacts

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s plan to move a larger share of its business to the Far East signals "the beginning of the end of small-car production in the United States" unless Congress intervenes, the head of the United Auto Workers union says.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca announced Thursday that Chrysler was canceling a major domestic expansion plan and asking its Japanese partner, Mitsubishi Motors Corp., to triple to 287,500 its shipments of small cars for sale here under the Dodge and Plymouth names.

The announcement came a week after President Reagan said he would not ask Japan to extend voluntary quotas on auto exports when they expire March 31, a decision that is expected to mean increased shipments by the Japanese.

United Auto Workers union President Owen Bieber, who attended the Chrysler meeting as a member of the board, called Iacocca's move Thursday "a disturbing aftershock to President Reagan's reckless and ill-advised decision."

"As the UAW predicted, opening the floodgates to Japanese imports is signaling the beginning of the end of small-car production in the United States unless Congress takes decisive action," Bieber said.

Iacocca called the move "Plan B," which was drawn up in the event that Japan lifted its import quotas.

"The American market is now wide open to foreign cars and foreign components," Iacocca said. "To compete with both American and Japanese automakers, we have to ... go to the Far East — and fast."

Iacocca said that Chrysler had canceled plans to expand its U.S. capacity by adding a plant in Indianapolis or Morton, Ill., for assembly of its popular compact vans, and had decided not to put a subcompact product — code-named the P-car — into its Belvidere, Ill., plant.

The P-car will be built at half the planned quantity at an existing plant in Sterling Heights, Iacocca said. The car will be slightly bigger and costlier than planned to shield it from the crowded subcompact car market, he said.

Chrysler also has set up an overseas unit for purchasing less-costly automotive parts and the seeking of overseas joint ventures, Iacocca said.

"Obviously we are disappointed with Chrysler's apparent decision," said Indiana Gov. Robert Orr and Lt. Gov. John M. Mutz in a joint statement. "We feel the door is not closed on this issue, and we will keep trying."

U.S. Rep. Bob Michel, R-Ill., in a statement released through an aide, blamed the administration for "dropping the ball on trade issues."

"I fully intend to keep the heat on the administration to act more aggressively in resolving our trade problems so that we can create a better climate for American industries and create more jobs for American workers,"

Michel said, however, that blaming Reagan's decision on the Japanese quotas for Chrysler's action was oversimplifying the situation.

Iacocca said he would visit South Korea, where Chrysler has an office in Seoul, and Japan next month. The company also builds vehicles in Mexico. The company recently announced plans to expand production at the Mexican plant, but no new plans were announced for there or Korea.

Agency puts Toledo's bond rating on credit watch

Associated Press

A New York bond-rating agency has put the city of Toledo's bond rating on a credit watch following the collapse of ESM Government Securities Inc.

However, a city official said Toledo is not in any financial danger.

ESM Securities of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., was ordered closed Monday by a federal court because it was insolvent.

Toledo had placed $19 million in short-term funds with the firm. That represents about 25 percent of the $75 million Toledo regularly puts in short-term investments.

The city's credit watch was one of four issued Thursday by Standard & Poor's Corp. because of the ESM failure, but it did not immediately change Toledo's A general obligation bond rating, the agency said.

Toledo's involvement with ESM "could have credit implications," but any rating change would not come for 90 days, said Richard Larkin, managing director of municipal finance for Standard & Poor's.

Toledo would have to pay more to borrow money if it received a lower rating.

Standard & Poor's also put a credit watch on Pompano Beach, Fla.; Clark County, Nev.; the Clallam County Public Utility District in the state of Washington, and Beaumont, Texas.

All of those entities had made repurchase agreements with ESM as a way of earning interest on short-term cash at hand. ESM was one of the nation's three largest specialists for making repurchase agreements secured by Treasury bills or other government securities.

City Treasurer James Kasch said Thursday that Toledo had to sell about $1 million in securities prematurely to meet cash needs this week. Kasch said one of Toledo's repurchase agreements was due Monday and others were due during the week. Some are not due until next year, he said.

The city's $19 million in repurchase agreements with ESM were frozen because of ESM's closing.

Toledo may lose some money because of its inability to reinvest the frozen funds, but Kasch said, "The city is not in any financial jeopardy."

Securities and Exchange Commission officials in Fort Lauderdale said they were concerned about cities holding ESM securities after lending the firm money.

Michael Wolensky, regional administrator for the SEC, said Thursday that he would ask for a court order to allow securities issued through ESM to be sold.

Sale of the securities was blocked by a federal court-ordered freeze. Wolensky said about a dozen cities, counties or pension funds could be in financial trouble if the freeze is not lifted.

The collapse of ESM also caused a run on Home State Savings & Loan Association branches in southern Ohio, despite assurances from state and bank officials that the institution is not in any danger.

Dollar causes little confusion in Japan

New York Times News Service

TOKYO — If the strong dollar has prompted head-shaking all over Europe, it has caused little more than a bit of tut-tutting here.

Last fall, the yen stood at about 240 to the dollar, overvalued by many estimates. Since then, however, it has dropped steadily, and it closed Friday at more than 260 to the dollar.

This decline, however, has prompted no aggressive government measures, other than occasional market intervention by the Bank of Japan. The bank's new governor has periodically complained about the yen's depreciation, but his hints that the bank might take action to raise interest rates have not been borne out.

Nor will they be soon, a senior official of the bank said last week. The reason: Japan's strong economic fundamentals and low inflation. The government predicts a rate of growth exceeding 4 percent in the next fiscal year; exports are up by 17 percent and continue to grow, and inflation is negligible.

Japanese officials do not rule out possible long-term problems if the dollar remains strong — protectionism, disruption of the bond market, inflation, and damage to import-dependent industries in Japan such as oil, petrochemical, and electrical companies.

But for now, business — at least for exporters — is booming. For the first time in 36 years, Japan recorded a trade surplus in January, traditionally a deficit month.

"What is most important in the long run is the fundamentals," said Heizo Takenaka, a senior economist with the Ministry of Finance. "Overall, we cannot find any bad aspects, demerits of the strong dollar."

Government officials and economists do see some trouble signs ahead, however. Although weak commodity prices for a while offset the decline in the yen for importers of oil, the pain is beginning to be felt. David Gerstenhaber, an economist with Jardine Fleming Securities Ltd., said the wholesale price index increased by 1.4 percent in January from the previous month because of higher-priced imports, an indication of possible inflation ahead.

And with Japan continuing to post large trade surpluses, a weak yen will only aggravate trade friction.

Problem banks increase 40 percent

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The number of banks that have financial problems and need special scrutiny has increased by almost 40 percent since the end of 1983, federal regulators say, and they expect the number to climb still higher this year.

The Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. reported record numbers of problem banks, 793 on the comptroller's list as of Jan. 31, and 901 on the FDIC list as of the end of last week. "Those numbers will continue to grow throughout this year," C.T. Conover, the comptroller, predicted in an interview on Tuesday.

"There are now three times as many banks on our problem bank list than when I took office in late 1981," he said. He added that 33 banks on the list were in "danger of failure" as of the end of January, compared with 21 banks 13 months earlier.

The comptroller's office said that the list had at least three money center banks, the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago, the Bank of America and the First National Bank of Chicago.

Speaking of the majority of the banks on the list, Preston Martin, vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said that "these tend to be small banks which represent a small proportion of the total assets of the banking industry; this does not imperil the banking system at all."

"The number of banks on our list is going to continue to go up, possibly peaking" this year, said Robert Miailovich, an assistant director of bank supervision at the FDIC.

All three of the federal government's banking regulators — the comptroller, the FDIC and the Federal Reserve Board — maintain a list of their regulated banks that need close scrutiny and discipline to correct problems that can range from high levels of delinquent loans to bad management practices. While the FDIC and the comtproller's office publish their figures, the Federal Reserve does not and refuses to discuss anything about its list.

There is substantial overlap among the three lists. The FDIC, in particular, has the most comprehensive list because it includes all of the nation's 14,700 federally insured banks and some large FDIC-insured savings banks. The Fed's list includes the 1,000 state-chartered banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System, and the comptroller's list includes 4,700 commercial banks with national charters.

Investors demanding liquidity to keep standby emergency funds

Copley News Service

Liquidity, safety, convenience and the highest possible yield — these are the characteristics most investors are demanding in the account they use to keep their standby emergency funds, or accounts where they are parking money for an upcoming, major expenditure.

But finding the account is hard work. About the time you get the down payment money on that new Mercedes stashed in an 8 percent money market account, up crops an ad for 12.5 for a Ginnie Mae fund which promises liquidity. But there are differences to watch for.

Money market accounts have the advantage of being insured up to $100,000 by the federal government, you can quickly open one at your corner bank, S&L or company credit union, and when you want cash, you can get it out just as easily. There are no sales charges.

The bad news — yields are somewhat lower than other liquid accounts, and despite deregulation, the minimum deposit may be higher.

Though minimums vary, a quick check around town reveals that most financial institutions require at least $1,000 and many ask for as much as $2,500.

Rates on those accounts are running between 7.8 percent to 8.6 percent, with slightly lower returns on money market checking or accounts with under $2,500 balances.

Both Ginnie Mae and tax-free funds are being heavily advertised, with annualized yields sometimes as high as 12.5 percent. They do offer liquidity, though somewhat less of it, and though not insured, a certain degree of security.

First, the security issue. Government National Mortgage Association certificates (Ginnie Mae's) are backed by "the full faith and credit of the United States," but the funds themselves are not. However the safety of all funds is ranked and carried in various publications, including Money magazine, Barrons and Forbes.

With a minimum investment of $100, several brokerages are offering Ginnie Mae funds with a monthly dividend, and the ability to redeem all or part of the shares at the current net asset value at any time without withdrawal penalties.

Banks promote automatic tellers with prizes

Hearst News Service

By merely using a bank automatic teller machine, Jeanette Wallace, 29, a medical technologist in Irvine, Calif., won a two-week trip to Paris from Wells Fargo Bank.

Kelvin Manney, 30, assistant manager at San Francisco's Cathedral Hill Hotel, had five minutes to withdraw as much cash as he could from a Bank of America ATM, resulting in a $3,800 jackpot. He won the prize for being the 1,000th person to use the ATM at Opera Plaza.

As incentives to get customers to use ATMs, institutions are giving away microwave ovens, cameras and TVs in the same way gas stations used to give out green stamps and trinkets. That's because banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions and retailers have installed almost 60,000 ATMs nationwide in the last decade at a cost of $1 billion.

Banks view ATMs as a way to cut overhead and labor costs. The Bank Administration Institute in Rolling Meadows, Ill., said each ATM transaction costs a bank 27 cents to $1.43, depending on how the bank computes its expenses. And many banks say that an ATM transaction costs half as much as one made by a teller. ATMs eliminate costs such as teller benefits and the additional time that teller transactions involve. ATMs have allowed Bank of America to eliminate nearly 1,400 teller jobs, reducing its tellers to 9,900.

Banks also see ATMs as a vehicle to woo new customers with convenience because many ATMs are open 24 hours a day. But only a third of the nation's consumers use ATMs, according to the BAI, a nonprofit research group.

Safety groups want recall of transmissions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of citizen groups, claiming 104 people were killed in the last four years because of faulty Ford transmissions, are promising a grass roots campaign to get the government to recall the vehicles.

Government investigators over the years have received several thousand reports of accidents in which the transmission suddenly slips from park to reverse. The accidents include as many as 300 or more fatalities — depending on the source of the figures — in which people were run over by a driverless car or truck.

Ford repeatedly has claimed no safety defect exists and has argued that the transmissions of other cars also occasionally slip from park to reverse. "It is beyond argument that these accidents ... typically result from errors made by inattentive drivers," Helen O. Petrauskas, Ford Motor Co.'s vice president for environmental and safety engineering, said in a statement Wednesday.

In late 1980, Ford agreed to distribute a dashboard warning label that advised caution because the transmissions could unexpectedly shift from park to reverse.

The labels were sent to owners of more than 21 million Ford cars and trucks built between 1966 and 1979 in exchange for the government agreeing not to pursue a recall order.

Government and industry officials estimated about 13 million of the vehicles remain on the road.

The current controversy stems from disagreement between various citizen and auto safety groups, including the Washington-based Center for Auto Safety, and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration over whether the 1980 settlement has been successful.

The Center for Auto Safety and 19 other local and national groups claimed Wednesday that the rate of fatalities stemming from the transmission problem has increased since the warning labels were issued. They distributed a list of 104 people who they said were killed since 1980 because a Ford transmission slipped from park to reverse.

"It's clear the (warning) stickers have not worked," Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety, wrote Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole. He later told reporters: "The only way to stop the slaughter is to recall the killer Fords."

But Diane Steed, administrator for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, disputed the figures provided by the Center and said the agency has been able to confirm only 51 fatalities since the warning labels were distributed.

She insisted in a telephone interview that the fatality rate "has dramatically fallen" during the last four years.

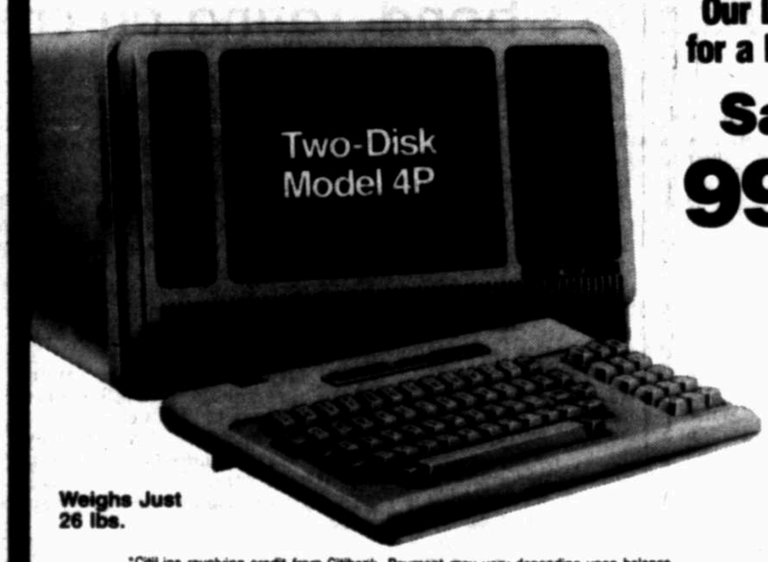

While the petition asking for the case to be reopened will be reviewed, Ms. Steed said she saw no evidence at this point that would warrant reopening the matter.

If no action is taken, Ditlow said the coalition of citizen and auto safety groups would file suit to force the agency to recall the cars.

Pamela Gilbert, an attorney for the U.S. Public Interest Research Group, which along with various state affiliates claims a membership of 500,000 people, promised "a national effort" to pressure NHTSA into ordering a recall "and prevent more needless death and injury."

Meanwhile, the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, has begun its own review of NHTSA's monitoring of the 1980 settlement, which requires the agency to determine whether the warning labels were successful.

Automobile, computer industries behave alike

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — Everybody knows the automobile industry is tired, old, dumb, eastern and a symbol of rusted-out smokestack America. And the computer industry represents a youthful, glistening, brainy, electronic, westward-facing vision of the future.

But if they are so different, how come they behave so much alike?

Perhaps it is inevitable. The computer is supplanting the automobile as our favorite inanimate object; kids brag to their friends about the family's new Apple IIc instead of the Buick Roadmaster.

About 3,000 auto companies, many of them in people's garages, have started and failed in this country. Now, we're down to four U.S.-based car manufacturers. Meanwhile, we have about 500 computer companies and 4,000 software outfits, many of them still in people's garages. A few years hence, everyone says, we'll be down to a handful of computer makers.

ONE REASON SO MANY people leaped into these industries is that they thought Americans would buy every car and computer that was cranked out. People were buying so many cars in the 1920s that the auto moguls geared up for imminent sales of 6 million cars a year. Alas, that level wasn't reached until 1955, and car producers by the hundreds fell by the wayside.

Commenting on the shakeout accompanying last year's disappointing small-computer sales, computer industry consultant Edward Yourdon says: "The analogy of Detroit's hysterical optimism with personal-computer sales should be an obvious one."

The small-computer industry is cheerfully embarked on the same marketing trickery by which Detroit and its dealers have managed to antagonize millions of Americans over the years: the irrelevant starting price.

You're hard-pressed to find the $4,995 car you saw hawked in the newspapers. And a computer won't even run at the starting price. A computer without software (that'll be $495 extra, please) is like a car without a steering system. The external disk drive is the turbocharger of the computer industry; the color monitor is the vinyl roof. In both industries, that's where the money is.

Meanwhile, it is possible to "test drive a Macintosh" (though there apparently haven't been many takers of that marketing offer by Apple Computer Co.). As car buffs can get lusher floor mats from an auto-parts store, techies can buy an independently made keyboard instead of the factory one. Someone in Santa Barbara, Calif., has introduced the "Brown Book," a guide to used-computer prices similar to the used-car "Blue Book."

APPLE MADE A BIG SPLASH by giving thousands of computers to schools and colleges, figuring that those kids would demand Apples at home, too. The gimmick recalls Detroit's bargain-rate distribution of millions of cars over the last 30 years for driver-education programs, familiarizing teen-agers with its cars.

Car and computer people share views on the issues of the day, such as how important they are to civilization. Their answer in each case: very.

While many computer executives publicly eschew any notion of Detroit-style import protection, it should be noted that Silicon Valley hasn't yet been passed up by the Japanese. But this country's high-tech trade balance is in the red this year for the first time. Consultant Yourdon predicts that, as computers become as politically powerful as autos and steel, they will demand, and get, government barriers against computer gear from Nepal, or wherever they're paying workers the worst wage.

ON WAGES, DETROIT is borrowing ideas from Cupertino. It was 22 years ago when Fairchild Camera & Instrument Corp., the semiconductor pioneer, started exporting jobs to Hong Kong; Atari carries on the tradition with its video games. Now, small-car production is moving to low-wage Japan, Korea and Mexico.

Meanwhile, Japanese software, if less creative, is reputed to be much more reliable than U.S. software. Is that an echo? The Japanese, in fact, have been buying American computer textbooks for years, just as they've been touring U.S. auto factories. They apparently pay close attention: California's Tandon Corp. last month accused Sony Corp. and Mitsubishi of infringing its floppy-disk-drive patent, as General Motors Corp. in 1978 accused Toyota of infringing its catalytic-converter patent.

Of course, the GM of the small-computer industry is International Business Machines Corp. Ford Motor Co., which built the first car for the masses in 1908, is mirrored by Apple, which pioneered the computer for Everyman in the late 1970s. The Chrysler Corp. counterpart in small computers is less obvious, but maybe it's Compaq: Both are in third place, and both have had to deal with repeated consignment to oblivion.

GM and IBM waded into the markets created by Ford and Apple and dominated them in short order, extinguishing small competitors with economies of scale and marketing clout. Even their customers are similar, one gathers: slightly stodgy, inclined toward the safe choice. If you can't trust GM and IBM, whom can you trust?

Kelly Services celebrates Kelly Week in grand style

Barbara McConnell, branch manager of Kelly Services' Midland office, announces that March 11-15 is Kelly Week. In all fifty states Kelly Offices will be celebrating this special week like it's never been celebrated before!

For the very first time in conjunction with this celebration Kelly Offices are donating temporary time to selected charity organizations.

That's right! Customers nominated their favorite charities just a few weeks ago. Charities were even allowed to nominate themselves. Then on March 1st winners were drawn from all the nominations.

This year's winners in our area are (drum roll, please) American Cancer Society, Hospice, Muscular Dystrophy Association, and Midland Rape Crisis Center. Each of these organizations is receiving 16 hours of free temporary service from Kelly's fine clerical, light industrial, or marketing divisions.

To find out more about the big Kelly Week Celebration call 689-9801.

Barbara McConnell, Midland branch manager of Kelly Services, presents Marcy Ritchey, director of the American Cancer Society, and Betty Crooker of the Midland Rape Crisis Center with certificates for free temporary services. This special presentation is being made in conjunction with the celebration of Kelly Week, March 11-15.

Be sure to stop by Bill and Joan Lewellen's display at the Home and Garden Show held in Chaparral Center next weekend. They'll have their siding, windows and patio covers on display for you to see.

Lewellen's takes care of your home exterior needs

Offer ends today!

That's right Lewellen's incredible offer to pay your January heating bill was scheduled to end today, but Bill says you can still take advantage of the special by calling 686-8007 on Monday, March 11. All you have to do is let him install storm windows throughout your home and he will reimburse you for your January heating bill (the portion of your bill which applies to heating your home). Best of all, with Diamond storm windows, you will be able to enjoy lower heating bills for years to come.

Home and Garden Show

Don't miss the big Home and Garden Show at Chaparral Center on March 15, 16, and 17. The show will be open from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Friday, and 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Be sure to look for Lewellen Construction and Home Improvement Center's display. They will have their siding, windows and patio covers on display for you to examine.

Do-It-Yourself Storm Windows

Lewellen's has the perfect storm window deal for all those do-it-yourselfers who like to save money. Lewellen's will have storm windows custom made for any home and let that handy man handle the installation. rices start at just $39 per window.

Paint vs. Maintenance-Free Exterior

It's that time of year again-time to get out and survey the exterior of your home. Is the paint beginning to crack, blister or peel? Is the fascial board showing signs of rotting? Are you thinking of calling the painter for an estimate?

Joan Lewellen says, "Consider these facts: Based on re-painting every three years at $1,200 per paint job, in twelve years (four paint jobs) you would have spent $4,800. Allow five percent a year for inflation and you'd have spent $6,058.87. Now, let's look at 30 years (ten paint jobs) with the first job costing $1,200. Allow five percent inflation per year and your cost comes to $25,289.96!"

Lewellen's average maintenance-free trim job costs between $2500 and $4500, and the material they use has a LIFETIME GUARANTEE on the finish. It's guaranteed NOT to crack, blister or peel-all the things that are happening to your paint right now!

Check your last paint bid, then call Lewellen's and they'll give you a price to compare it with. In today's economy you can't aford to throw money away!

Call Lewellen's for all your exterior home-improvement needs or go by Lewellen's Home Improvement Center at 1811 W. Industrial.

Digicon announces $1.8 million loss in second quarter

HOUSTON (SWN) — Digicon Inc. announced today that operations for the second quarter ended January 31, 1985 resulted in a net loss of $1,859,000 or $.42 per share compared with a net loss of $10,426,000 or $2.61 per share in the same period last year. Revenues in the current quarter were $45,642,000, an increase of 10.8 percent over the same period last year. The current quarter's results include an extraordinary charge of $340,000 or $.08 per share equal to the reversal of the income tax benefit of loss carryforwards of a foreign subsidiary utilized in a previous quarter.

For the six months ended January 31, 1985, revenues increased 17.2 percent to $96,379,000 from $82,253,000 and the loss was reduced to $5,282,000 or $1.26 per share compared with a loss of $20,793,000 or $5.25 per share last year.

Edward R. Prince, Jr., Chairman and President, said, "The improvement in operating results noted earlier this year generally continued during the second quarter, particularly in the Company's data acquisition and data processing operations. Higher levels of utilization and efficiency evident during the first quarter continued during the early winter months although weather related downtime began to increase late in the quarter. Sales of proprietary data remained strong during the quarter and, as a result, the carrying value of our proprietary data inventory has now been reduced to approximately $1,500,000, all of which is offshore data. Additional sales, particularly of land data, can be expected to have a positive impact on future periods' profitability. During the quarter, the Company sold its interest in its New Orleans-based subsidiary, Tensor Geophysical Service Corporation. The sale was in accordance with the original agreements under which Tensor was established and resulted in a gain of approximately $2,100,000.

"Through the first half of the year, the Company achieved its objective of maintaining positive cash flow. The previously announced $12,500,000 equity infusion from NL Industries, Inc., augmented by cash flow generated by operations, enabled Digicon to reduce its bank borrowings by approximately $17,500,000. While bank debt can be expected to increase somewhat this spring due to seasonal fluctuations, we expect to continue to benefit from reduced interest costs during the remainder of the year.

"Although we are not pleased reporting a loss, we are satisfied with the improvement shown during the first half of the year. Nevertheless, our expectations for the second half remain cautious. Weather related disruptions, giving rise to reduced efficiency, have continued during February and early March. More disturbing, however, has been the recent decline in exploration activity, the primary determinant of our operating results. As instability in the price of crude oil persists and the pace of oil company mergers continues, many of our customers have cut back or deferred spending plans, and earlier expectations of modestly increased exploration budgets in 1985 have been reduced to the anticipation of flat exploration spending levels at best. Both rig and crew counts are near their 1984 lows and any realization of improved prices for our services may be deferred indefinitely. Maintaining the high levels of utilization and efficiency evident thus far in 1985 will be difficult during the third quarter. We continue to monitor the requirements of our customers and will modify our operating capacity as needed to assure that we have attained the most efficient cost structure possible."

Digicon is an advanced-technology oil services company providing geophysical exploration services to the oil and gas industry. The Company also sells and licenses specially configured computing equipment and related software for geophysical data processing.

Sunshine, Woods announce merger

DALLAS (SWN) — Sunshine Mining Company and Woods Petroleum Corporation announced today that they had entered into a definitive agreement providing for a merger of a wholly-owned subsidiary of Sunshine into Woods. Under the terms of the merger agreement, each share of Woods common stock will be exchanged for $5.00 in cash, 1.50 shares of Sunshine common stock and one share of newly established Sunshine preferred stock. The aggregate price for the acquisition of all shares of Woods common stock by Sunshine amounts to approximately $305 million. The newly established Sunshine preferred will have a stated value of $9.25, subject to adjustment depending on the market price of Sunshine common prior to the merger, and will pay a cumulative quarterly cash dividend in an amount equal to 10 percent per annum of the stated value. Sunshine may redeem the preferred at its stated value after the first year and is required to redeem 10 percent of the issue each year commencing on the sixth anniversary date. The merger is subject to approval by the shareholders of both Woods and Sunshine and various other customary conditions. Bear, Stearns & Co. and Lehman Brothers are serving as financial advisors for Woods.

Sunshine also announced that, in addition to the approximately 25 percent of Woods common stock it had previously agreed to purchase pursuant to contracts signed with the Voss and Woods families of Oklahoma City, and Woods' directors, Larry D. Hartzog, W. B. Voss, Alta M. Voss and Robert S. Bowers, it has purchased approximately five percent of the Woods shares in the open market. Woods also granted Sunshine an option to purchase an additional 2,150,000 newly issued Woods shares (or approximately 18.5 percent) at an exercise price of $25.00 per share, upon the occurrence of certain events.

In Dallas, G. Michael Boswell, Chairman of the Board, President and Chief Executive Officer of Sunshine Mining Company, stated that he was pleased that Sunshine and Woodsdere able to agree upon the terms of a merger, and that "Woods is a well managed company and I look forward to working with its extremely able management team."

In Oklahoma City, V. Lee Powell, President, Chief Executive Officer and Chairman of the Board of Directors of Woods Petroleum Corporation, stated that "the Board of Directors of Woods believes that the proposed merger is the best alternative for Woods and its stockholders.

E-Systems, Litton reveal contract

DALLAS (SWN) — E-Systems has announced a $3.5 million contract from Litton Data Systems for the production of digital plotter spares and replacements for the Army's TACFIRE program.

The parts will be produced by the company's ECI Division at St. Petersburg, Fla.

TACFIRE is the Army's Tactical Fire Director System which automates firing instructions to field artillery units.

Under earlier contracts with Litton, the ECI Division has produced and delivered 154 TACFIRE units. The current contract calls for three complete units plus sub-assemblies representing the equivalent of six additional units and various replacement parts.

The plotters provide Army field commanders with graphic over-views of battlefield situations. Each plotter in response to computer inputs is capable of printing stored siMls at the rate of three characters per second.

E-Systems is a major worldwide developer and producer of high technology electronic systems.

GM recalls 2,700 Trans Ams

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has announced it is recalling 2,700 of its 1984 and 1985 Pontiac Firebird Trans Am cars for free replacement of special 16-inch cast aluminum wheels.

GM said Wednesday that the castings were too porous and thus not as strong as they should be, particularly around the hub.

Oil operators report 51 discovery wells

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas oil operators reported 51 discovery wells in February, and gas operators reported 89 discovery wells last month, says the Railroad Commission.

Oil discoveries in February included two in the San Antonio area; three near Refugio; four in Southeast Texas; six in South Texas; two in East Central Texas; four in East Texas; 11 in West Central Texas; five in the San Angelo area; one in the Midland area; two near Lubbock; seven in North Texas; and four in the Panhandle.

A total of 431 dry holes were reported in February.

Southwest names new vice president of schedule planning

DALLAS (SWN) — Herbert D. Kelleher, chairman of the board and president of Southwest Airlines, today announced that Paul J. Quinn has been named as Southwest's new vice president-schedule planning.

As head of the schedule planning department, Quinn will be responsible for the planning, implementation and management of Southwest's intricate flight schedule and the strategic deployment of 29 additional Boeing 737-300s to be added to Southwest's fleet over the next five years.

Quinn joined Southwest Airlines 12 years ago as a flight dispatcher and most recently held the position of dispatch superintendent. Prior to joining Southwest, he was a flight dispatcher for American Airlines for 12 years. Quinn is also the immediate past president of the Southwest Airlines Employees Association, an employee group he was instrumental in forming three years ago.

OF MIDLAND's HOMES

In 1983 we were proud the Midland Reporter-Telegram was being read in 79.3% of Midland's homes. But the latest Audit Bureau of Circulation audit has been completed and the figures released. We're prouder than ever.

This year our penetration in the Midland market has climbed to 82.4%, an impressive gain!

We know other media boast about their "gross rating points"... their" listening audience"...their "cume"... but we're proud of the results we get for our advertisers. Your advertising message in the Reporter-Telegram gets results and we know one reason is because it is now reaching more people than ever before... 82.4% of all Midland households.

And that's not all. During this past August more than 450 different retail businesses chose the Reporter-Telegram as their advertising vehicle...a whopping 26.5% increase in accounts over August a year ago. September is looking even bigger.

In 1983 your Midland Reporter-Telegram was a great advertising investment... In 1984 It's even better!

She's come a long way

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features Syndicate

Memphis-born, Bel Air-bred Cybill Shepherd, a cover girl at 17, who, untutored in acting, made her screen debut in "The Last Picture Show," went on to star in such films as "The Heartbreak Kid," "Taxi Driver," "Daisy Miller," "At Long Last Love" and "Silver Bears," then turned her back on Hollywood and returned to Memphis to get back to basics.

Unlike many of her contemporaries, here is a young woman who's a real survivor — personally and professionally. She has a new series Sunday nights on ABC called "Moonlighting." Ms. Shepherd, always one to grow, has, with her small daughter Clementine, worked out a lifestyle which proves her to be someone who knows what she wants and where she's going. For example...

"The idea of finding Mr. Right, a mate for the rest of my life, is something with which I don't even faintly concern myself," she says, smiling candidly.

"I'm really pleased... with my life," she says. I enjoy having relationships with more than one person. Also this is the first time in my life I've been single.

"For eight and a half years, I lived with Peter (Bogdanovitch, the director who discovered her and became her Svengali). For the four and a half years of our marriage, I lived with David Ford, the very nice guy I wanted to be the father of my child.

"So this is the first time I've lived on my own. Not alone, of course, but with my darling Clementine, now 5½, and I love it. It took me a long time to find a life of my own. I don't want anyone taking it away from me. I guard this independence fiercely!"

There it is, right on the line. Ms. Shepherd on screen, most recently in "Secrets of a Married Man" with William Shatner, may convey the sensual seductress, but for real, she's a strong (not tough), fresh-faced young woman determined to live on her own terms.

"Maybe because I had to do so much growing up in public, had to make all my mistakes in public — I'd just been an everyday kid who liked to sing. I started singing at 8. This was my family legacy.

"MY PARENTS loved jazz and the big bands like those of Louis Armstrong and Count Basie and Glenn Miller. I grew up in that music. My father taught me. He was a good singer. He still is. By the time I was 16, I was studying music."

She had no career plans. It just happened. She was ("would you believe?") Miss Teenage Memphis; the Stewart Modeling Agency saw some photographs of girls in the local papers, and Ms. Shepherd became a model..."which is where I developed this dislike for modeling. It's so boring. Not the money. The money's not boring.

"And it was on the cover of a magazine that Peter saw my picture. I was the one with just the right look, the right quality, the right age at the right time. So they tested everybody, but I was the one who went off to Texas to film 'The Last Picture Show.'

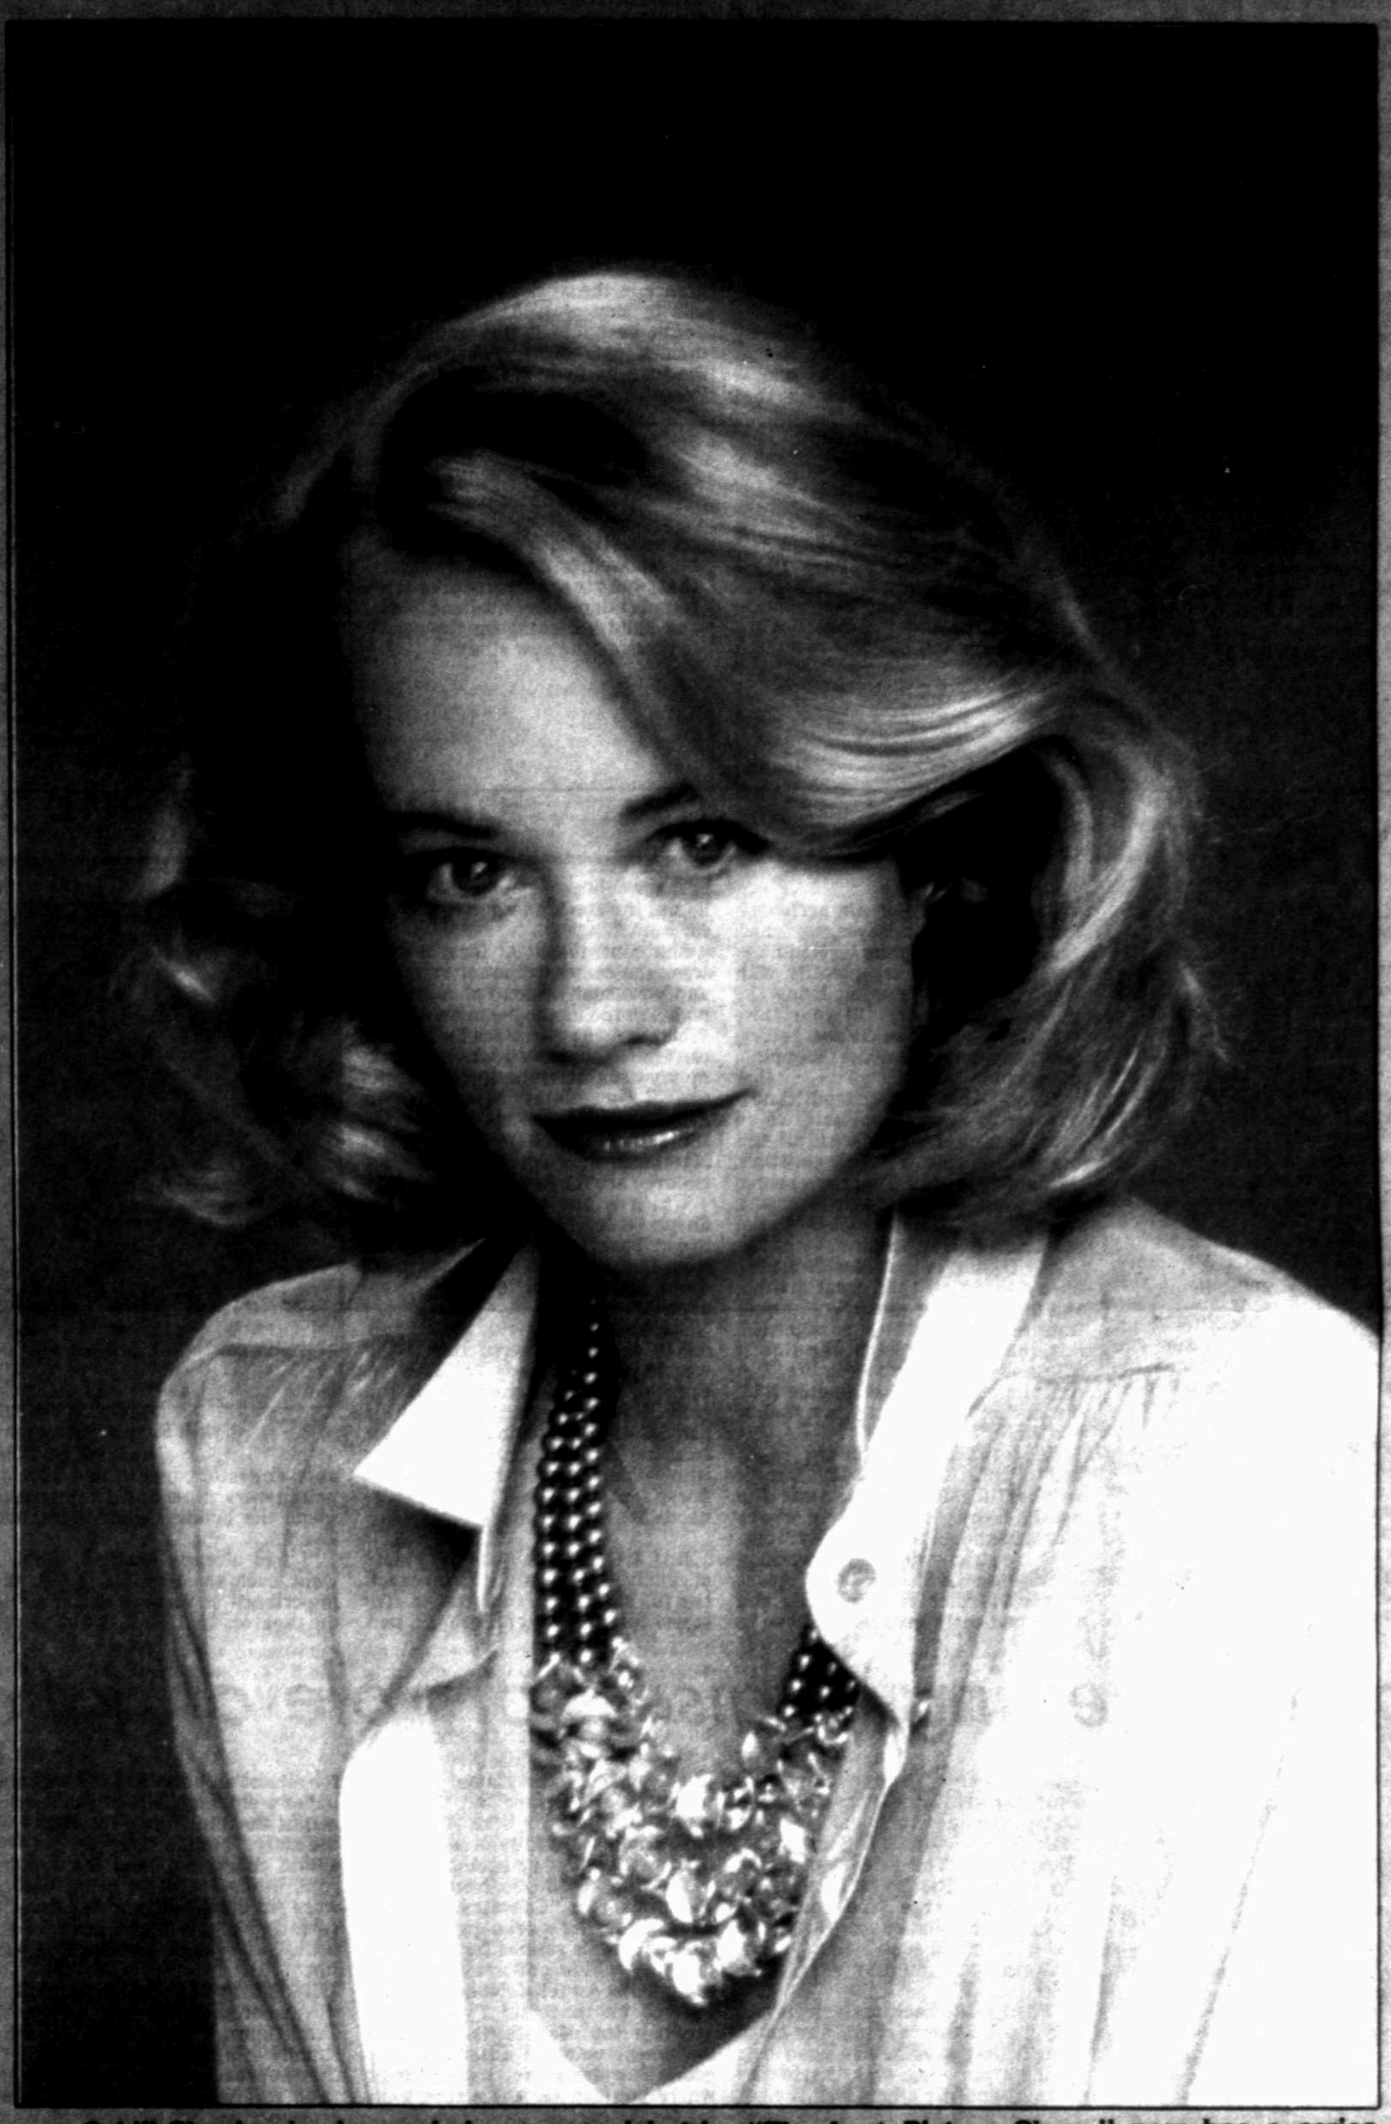

"I was in fast company. Peter is great, a really great director, and I trusted him. Such good actors and actresses: Cloris Leachman, Eileen Brennan, Ellen Burstyn. I find actresses much easier to get along with than actors. They care. I know that sounds unbelievable, the legend being that actresses are fiercely competitive. But these were the greatest. I started at the top and have been working my way down ever since."

She likes that line. She loves writing, reading voraciously and knowing a good line when she hears one. She gives you a bright, forthright grin.

It was the kind of beginning that could have gotten her lost very quickly, but she didn't get lost. She stayed with Peter, lived in Bel Air, was guided to the right projects.

For "The Heartbreak Kid," she had Elaine May as director; for "Silver Bears," she had Ivan Passer. With Peter she also filmed "Daisy Miller" and "At Long Last Love." She became fascinated with directing.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. I absolutely adore French actor Alain Delon. Is he considered a playboy? Does he have someone special in his life? He was in California last September; does he live in this country now? Is he still making films?

Montclair, Calif.

A. He was born in the Paris suburb of Sceaux on November 8, 1935 and was supposedly so unruly as a child that he attended practically all of the schools in the southern suburbs. At 17, he joined the army and was sent to Indochina, where he spent four years.

Upon his return, lacking any clear idea of what to do with his life, he hung around Paris's artsy St. Germain-des-Pres district with actor friends and they persuaded him to try to make it in films.

A talent scout spotted him and shortly afterward, he found himself in Rome meeting movie producers. One offered him a seven-year Hollywood contract if he improved his English, but he turned it down, preferring to return to Paris and start his film career there.

This he promptly did, with several dubiously titled movies:

Alain Delon

"When the Woman Interferes," "Be Beautiful, But Shut Up" (co-starring fellow newcomer and later box office rival Jean-Paul Belmondo) and "Women are Weak."

His first major hit was "Christine," co-starring the late Romy Schneider, with whom he had a much-publicized affair in the early '60s. (The press even covered his departure: He left her a rose and a note, "I'm sorry.")

Later films seen in this country include "The Leopard," "Borsalino," "The Adventurers," "Texas Across the River," "Mr. Klein" and the recent "Swann in Love."

He is still making films via his Adel Productions in France; some should find their way over here. He does have someone special in his life.

According to an associate, he usually does. "Alain has never lacked for female attention," he explains, which could be construed as confirming his status as a playboy. He was married, though, to actress Nathalie Delon; they have a son, Anthony, 20, who has shown a rebellious nature like his father.

Regarding his California visit: He was in town to promote his two fragrances: "Le Temps d'Aimer" for women and "Alain Delon for Men," which were blended according to his specifications. He has a new men's fragrance in the works, set to go on sale in May of 1986, so he'll no doubt be back in this country then, if not before. The rest of the time he lives in Geneva and France.

Q. I am probably Pat Benatar's numero uno fan in the world and I want to know, now that she and Neil are expecting, if she will be going on tour after the baby's born?

Nancy Lindsted
Orland Park, Ill.

A. She plans to. The baby's due this month, and Pat has been working for the last few months on material for a new album to be released in September. After that, barring any unforeseen complications, she, husband Neil and child are going on the road to promote the new album.

Jane Pauley

Q. Please settle an argument for us. One friend says that Jane Pauley had previously been married and had a miscarriage; my daughter says that Ms. Pauley had never been married before she married Garry Trudeau. My husband suggested writing to you. Also, what is the name of Cher's daughter?

Mrs. Edith K. Genereux
North Cape May, N.J.

A. Your daughter wins. "Doonesbury'" creator Garry Trudeau is Jane Pauley's first husband and the miscarriage in question — actually, there were two: one in 1981, one in 1982 — occurred within that marriage. They are now, though, as you're probably aware, the parents of twins.

Regarding Cher: Her daughter's name is Chastity Bono.

Lilian Gish

Q. Is Lillian Gish is still working?

A.W. Smith
Weiser, Idaho

A. Indeed she is. The 90ish actress just completed an episode of "Huckleberry Finn" for TV, and according to an aide she is definitely in the market for other movie or TV work if it materializes. In the meantime, she's been lecturing at various colleges and cultural institutions around the country on the subject of her long, accomplished career.

Q. I'm curious about actor Charles Martin Smith whom I saw recently in "Starman" and "Never Cry Wolf." Wasn't he also in "American Graffiti?"

Denise Braun
Fresno, Calif.

A. Yes, he was. He was Terry the Toad in both the original and the sequel, "More American Graffiti." In the sequel, his character went to Vietnam and had extremely difficult physical scenes; the fact that he performed them himself, Smith thinks, led to his casting in "Never Cry Wolf."

That film took three years to complete and while doing it, he became so attached to the Vancouver area that he formed a production company in Canada. His next film projects, while not firmly set, will probably be done there. The first one, a contemporary fantasy, is called "The Jack."

CYBILL

"Living with Peter for eight and a half years, I lived through the different stages of each picture he directed, not only the three I was in, but five others. I saw them in all stages — the first cut, the second cut, the third cut. It was an education. Peter is a great teacher. He has taught every actress, every actor with whom he's ever worked.

"I was surrounded by geniuses. Orson Welles was a house guest on and off for years. John Ford, Howard Hawks and Jack Benny were constant friends. Directors, actors, artists, musicians...I felt myself growing every minute. Very exciting. I did four albums for Intercity Records. Not really good. The Cole Porter was bad. It made me want never to sing Cole Porter again.

"BEST WAS THE one I did with Stan Getz, 'Mad About the Boy.' I was in an album with Ben Webster and Sara Vaughan. Starting at the top again. I've been working on another album now for five years, but this time it has to be right. It's evolving slowly."

She was part of the Bel Air crowd at the very rich Bel Air parties — not unlike Maddie Hayes, the character in "Moonlighting." "Maddie is an ex-cover girl I can identify with who has been a jetsetter, living the plush life. You can fill your time that way — exercise classes, getting your hair done, traveling, shopping, going out.

"I've lived in Bel Air, and I know the sort of thing — oh, here we go again, another party with all the beautiful people. You can get stuck in that framework. There are people like Peter who have interesting friends, but there are also all the same rich, boring people.

"My feeling is that Maddie hasn't been having all that great a time, and one morning she wakes up and finds that her business manager has left the country with her liquid assets. It's a comedy adventure. The first thing I must do as Maddie is go out and close down my tax shelter businesses.

"It's a fun series if you can call it fun to work 19 hours a day. But it's wonderful. Most of the time I'm really happy to wake up every morning and go to the set. My weekdays are strictly devoted to working and being with Clementine. We have dinner together every evening and go to bed early because we have to be up, she for kindergarten, myself for work."

She continues, "At least once a week she comes to the set to watch, and we usually spend a couple of nights in the motor home on the set. Wherever we are, we read a lot. You can't have too many books, and luckily my daughter inherited the appetite. It's absolutely wonderful to have this child. The most important thing that ever happened to me. Marriages may come and go, but children are forever."

Which is one of the reasons Ms. Shepherd left Hollywood. The need to get back to basics, to get away from Hollywood, to learn a lot more about acting, about love and about herself.

She'd married David, a Memphis fellow she'd met when they were working on "The Lady Vanishes" in Europe. He was a member of the crew. She was going to have this baby. It was time to do an about-face from her name in lights and advisers who wouldn't hear of stage work ("It doesn't pay, darling!") or motherhood ("It's not the image, baby").

BACK IN Memphis she has plenty of family — 24 relatives, to be exact: two full sisters, one full brother, five stepsisters, four stepbrothers, parents and stepparents and lots of youngsters. She and Clementine spend the holidays back there, and love it.

Cybill Shepherd

"I had already learned, when I went back to Memphis in '78, the importance of survival. I wanted to do theater. In L.A. I could never have done it. They don't want you in theater. You make too little money, get no publicity. You might as well be dead. But I talked with my friends Cloris and Ellen, and they agreed with me. There are times when you have to go against making money when the best investment is yourself and your talent.

"I was always aware of the dangers of rejection and even more, perhaps, of the dangers of acceptance. It can be very destructive when you start to think you're infallible, when you become too insulated. How do you deal with the problems that sexy goddesses like Jean Harlow and Marilyn Monroe ran into?

"I'm not putting myself in their class, but I do share somewhat in that quality — half innocence, half hooker. It's a little scary. Sometimes you get a lot of resentment. The only way to get even with that is to survive.

"There is a tremendous relief when the center of the universe switched from myself to my child. It involved a lot of responsibility and worry and caring; but it is worth all of that. I have a lot of contemporaries who haven't had children. They would like to, yet they feel they've waited too long, not biologically, but psychologically.

She explains, "For me, the time was exactly right. David and I were in love and wanted a baby. I went with my own feelings and didn't even think of my career. Thank goodness. And I was so lucky in choosing her father. Actually choosing a husband and choosing a father are two separate things. You can't get rid of a father.

"David and I are still close friends. We both wanted this child, and we had a wonderful time during our marriage.

"WHEN OUR marriage ended, we were determined to let our divorce affect her as little as possible. And it has worked out. David lives right near us. Clementine spends her weekends with him, and he has qualities that are very important for a child — patience, an enjoyment of the simple things of life. He's such a good person."

There is no bitterness in Cybill Shepherd. She has only good to say about David and about Peter. "We have both been through a lot, Peter and I, since the time we were together. We'd changed and grown; so I think we appreciate each other as friends and hope we always will. I certainly hope we'll work together again some day."

Jordan getting praises for role of killer in 'Mean Season'

By DAVID ELLIOTT
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "One bonus of being seen as a supporting actor," attests Richard Jordan, "is that you don't get blamed much if things go wrong."

Jordan, 46, not only is not getting blamed, he's getting more praise than anyone in "The Mean Season." The mixed-bag thriller about a Miami reporter (Kurt Russell) who becomes the chosen mouthpiece for a psychotic killer (Jordan) is not setting many critical houses on fire, and early box-office returns are spotty. But chalk up another fine performance for Richard Jordan.

In the early '70s his solid, Irish good looks and elegantly crisp under-playing (which held its own even opposite Mr. Soft Sell, Robert Mitchum, in "The Friends of Eddie Coyle" and "The Yakuza") put Jordan on the verge of becoming a leading man, even a star. "But then I had a little bad luck," he says, not sounding particularly wistful or regretful.

"I had leads back to back in two 'big' movies that weren't any good, though they seemed like good bets at the time. One was 'Raise the Titanic,' and the other...well, I can't even remember the title now! Nobody went to see them. And of course, the most visible person usually catches the blame, not the producer or director but the star actors. So I took my licks. And then did some plays, and television. Now things are picking up again."

You may recall him from the hit TV miniseries "Captains and the Kings," and he's even prouder of "the enormous ratings for 'Les Miserables,' which got a 44 opposite 'Charley's Angels.' Nobody ever figured on that! But I've turned down a lot of television work because I want to do something good. You know, not those things where you can see the actors waiting for the checks."

In "Mean Season" he isn't seen on screen, except in shadowed profile, for almost an hour. Yet his baritone builds a chilling character that commands the film. "He's the motor of the story," Jordan notes of the psychotic character, "and it's a juicy role, though a lot of other actors were put off the part by being just a voice and the back of a head for an hour. I saw it as a challenge. It was fun."

He shares the fun, in a sinister way, when the killer first appears as a full figure, dressed up as a shabby rummy in a trailer park. "They left that approach up to me," he says, "and so I went down to the local drugstore and got whatever makeup stuff you can get in a drugstore. I did a job on my face, and then the costumer and I stuck a foam belly on me, with gaffer's tape. I walked out on the set and nobody recognized me. They thought I was a bum. When they did recognize me, they went crazy. And then, later, it was fun to see just how nice and normal I could make the guy look."

Nice and normal doesn't seem to be Jordan's stock in trade right now. He researched Gary Gilmore and other star crazies for this part, and feels "the man isn't really looking for celebrity. The film maybe overdoes that angle. Like most of them, he's in a helpless compulsive misery and actually wants to get caught."

As for the film's controversial press angle, he feels "it does address something important — how far should a reporter go. But that it doesn't answer the question it poses is not to me a detraction. It's enough to dramatize it. I'm definitely not against the press. I would rather have the press telling us about the invasion of Grenada than President Reagan reporting it solo."

Jordan is even more impressive as a corrupt Florida politician in Victor Nunez's "A Flash of Green," co-starring Ed Harris and Blair Brown. "Flash of Green" was one of the best works in last year's New York Film Festival, then seemed to fade into oblivion.

'Dining Room' a delicious feast

By GEORGIA TEMPLE

Georgia Temple

Midland Community Theatre's production of A.R. Gurney's "The Dining Room" offers connoisseurs of fine vignettes depicting the changing lifestyles and mores of upper middle class white anglo-saxon protestant families a veritable feast.

Picture a formal dining room complete with Waterford crystal, finger bowls, bone china, Belgian linen and a crystal chandelier, then consider the following:

—A grandfather saying to one of his grandsons, "Everyone who sits down with me at this table wants something...Do you want to be self made or do you want others to make you?"

—A father's reaction when his son Charlie, who is in grade school, tells him that his teacher Miss Kelley said the government must create jobs during the Depression to help feed those in the bread lines. He commands Charlie to tell Miss Kelley, "If the government keeps handing out money then no one will want to work, then there will be nobody to support private schools, then Miss Kelley will be standing in the bread lines." Moments before this father was admonishing Charlie about his lack of social graces by saying, "Half of life is learning to meet people."

—A mother telling her daughter she can go to her junior cotillion Saturday night, where, of course, she will meet all the right people, or go to see the play "Saint Joan" with Martha, her old maid aunt. After time and again expressing the desire to go to the play, and the mother pointing out the poor judgment in that decision, the daughter says, "Saint Joan wouldn't go in a million years." The mother replies, "Look what happened to Saint Joan." Then she confides to her daughter in a tone expected to make her see her foolishness that Aunt Martha's risque behavior when she was young ruined her life. Too.

In "The Dining Room," the dichotomy of the White Anglo Saxon Protestant ethnic is portrayed in vivid, stinging flashes which often reach out and lull the unsuspecting into WASP's safe familiarity before striking the blow. This two-act play is always humorous, sometimes funny and often poignant.

Profanity is present as it suits the occasion.

The six-member cast does an exceptional job of working as a unit, moving in and out of the multitude of characters they play with ease.

Cast members include Bonni Chambers, Ann Perkins, Chrysti Scoville, Jess Kozman, Mykel Mengert and Michael Trost. Each adds to the composite picture forming one of the most professional, slickest ensemble units I have seen at MCT.

The production, which is MCT's entry into the Festival of American Community Theatres, is directed by Michael Spicer.

However, there are problems. The gorgeous set, designed by David Layman, is marred by a chandelier hung too high. And the lack of program notes on the play and the playwright is inexcusible.

Gurney (Albert Ramsdell, Jr.) is an American playwright who was born in Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 1, 1930. He was educated at St. Paul's School, Concord, N.H., and has a bachelor of arts degree from Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., and a master's of fine arts from Yale University Drama School, New Haven, Conn. He has been a member of the faculty at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge since 1960, and a professor of literature there since 1970. He is the author of, among others, numerous plays, a screenplay and two novels.

The action in this play takes place solely in the dining room and moves back and forth in time without apparent plan, however, the tie that binds is Gurney's portrayal of archetypal American ideas toward the family unit, children and life attitudes. It is a fast-paced play composed of numerous overlapping vignettes and yet the audience still has the opportunity to know the characters well even when they are onstage for just a few minutes. The playwright knows the limitations of the medium in which he is writing and how to use them to the best advantage.

Gurney has said of theater: "What attracts me about the theatre are its limitations as well as its possibilities. Indeed, its best possibilities may lie in its limitations. I am as much concerned about what to leave out as about what to put in.

"Offstage characters and events give a kind of pressure and resonance to what is shown onstage. In fact, offstage for theatre itself are the infinite possibilities and resources of film and television.

"Anyone who writes plays these days must want to explore the very restrictions of this enduring medium. I am particularily drawn to it because I like to write about people who themselves are beginning to stretch our and feel the walls."

From the warm response of Friday night's audience, it's obvious that those wanting tickets to this production, which has already been extended to March 23, need to get tickets now.

Competition winners will perform with symphony

Performing winners in this year's National Young Artists Competition, held in January in Odessa, will return to perform with the Midland-Odessa Symphony at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Midland's Lee High School auditorium and at 8 p.m. Thursday at Odessa's Bonham Junior High auditorium.

The yearly competition is sponsored by the symphony. This year's winners were pianist Lori Sims, Bloomfield High School, Bloomfield, Colo., and violinist Maya Iwabuci, The Community School of Performing Arts, Los Angeles, Calif., both secondary level; and violinist Lucia Linn, Rice University, and pianist Remi Fujisawa, the University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, Ohio, both college level.

Other winners, chosen from the 12 finalists out of a field of 41 competing entries, were Laurie Lane, Texas Tech University, voice; and flutist Adrienne Inglis, The University of Texas at Austin, winds divisions.

The 12 finalists split winnings of $7,000, the bulk going to the performing winners. The expenses of the performing winners when they return are paid in addition to their winnings.

The competition is held under the joint direction of the Midland and Odessa symphony guilds and rotates yearly between the two cities. Chairman for this year's NYAC was Pat Simmons of the Odessa Symphony Guild.

This is one of the few competitions in the United States that allows applications from students in secondary schools as well as those at the university level.

Judges for this year's competition were Edward C. Purrington, general director of the Tulsa Opera; Samuel jones, professor of conducting and composition of the Shepherd School of Music, Rice University; Dr. Donald Portnoy, violinist, founder of the American Arts Trio, faculty member of West Virginia University and conductor of the University Community Symphony Orchestra; Nina Lelchuck, pianist, former professor at the Moscow Conservatory where she received a doctorate in music in 1965; and Michael Greenburg, music critic from the San Antonio Express.

Single admission tickets will be sold at the door.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Reservations being taken for annual Jazz Classic

Midland's ninth annual Jazz Classic is set for the Holiday Inn Country Villa Oct. 1 through 6. Some 20 nationally known jazz musicians will provide the nightly entertainment.

Nightly performances begin at 8 p.m. and end at midnight. The Oct. 6 performance will run from 2 to 6 p.m.

Tickets are not sold at the door. They can be purchased from the Midland Jazz Association, P.O. Box 3790, Midland, 79702. For more information call Max Christensen, 682-5334. A limited amount of seats are available and reservations are now being taken.

Ticket price is $125 for the six performances. Single performance tickets are not available; however, it is possible to share a ticket if the ticket holder does not wish to come to each performance. Reservations for seating outside of the sponsor table area is sold on a first-come basis. Those wishing to sit together need to make their reservations at the same time.

Musicians invited to attend the 1985 Classic include: Jack Lesberg (who is also the musical director for the event), Milt Hinton and George Mraz, bass; Dick Hyman, Dave McKenna and Ralph Sutton, piano; Butch Miles, Gus Johnson and Jake Hanna, drums; Joe Wilder, Jack Sheldon and Ruby Braff, trumpet and flugelhorn; Carl Fontana, Bill Watrous and George Masso, trombone; Flip Phillips and Scott Hamilton, tenor sax; Bud Shanks and Chris Wood, alto sax and flute; Johnny Mince and Kenny Davern, clarinet; Tal Farlow, guitar; and Red Norvo, vibes.

One-man show presented

A direct descendent of the famed explorer Merriwether Lewis, historian, artist and author Thomas Mails developed a life-long interest in North American Indians. The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is presenting a one-man show of Mails' work in the Stables Gallery March 17 through April 28.

The exhibition opens to the public with a free reception from 2 to 3 p.m. March 17. Museum members are invited to a private reception noon to 2 p.m. March 17.

Included in the exhibition are many of the original paintings and drawings used as illustrations in several of Mails' books. Executed in accurate detail, these works serve as important documents of Plains and Pueblo Indian culture.

Mails is producing an illustrated history of the Cherokee Indians for Doubleday with a projected publication date of 1987. He is also writing a screenplay for a major motion picture that portrays the Crow Indians of Montana during the critical years of 1868-1877.

Closing today at the museum is the exhibit "From the Tree Where the Bark Grows: North American Treasures from the Peabody Museum, Harvard University." This basketry exhibit is in the Thomas Gallery.

All exhibitions at the museum are free and open to the public.

River trips planned

TERLINGUA — Far-Flung Adventures has announced the entertainment lineup for its spring "River Music" series in the Rio Grande Canyons of Big Bend National Park.

"River Music" takes participants on a guided three-day, two-night rafting trip. They are joined by a noted entertainer who will play evening concerts around the campfire. Days are spent negotiating the limestone gorges of the Rio Grande. Nights are spent in riverside camps. Gourmet meals, hors d'oeuvres and cocktails are served each day.

Steven Fromholz, the Austin radio personality who hosted the inaugural event in 1982, returns for a Thursday through Saturday excursion in Mariscal Canyon.

Jerry Jeff Walker makes his first Big Bend appearance in nearly 10 years with a March 30 through April 1 date in Santa Elena Canyon. Walker will be joined by chef Pat Brown of the Gage Hotel who will be in charge of the campfire kitchen.

Balladeer Bobby Bridger, like Fromholz a frequent river performer, is scheduled for May 3-5.

Far-Flung Adventures is a professional river outfitter based in Big Bend. Trip cost is $350 per-person and includes all the necessary gear except personal sleeping bags and clothing.

Information and reservations may be obtained from the outfitter by writing Far-Flung Adventures, P.O. Box 31, Terlingua, Texas 79852 or calling 1-371-2489.

MC teachers to do duet

Two Midland College music faculty members are presenting a duet art song recital at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, MC campus.

Dr. Michael Jordan, MC's music coordinator, and Janice Archer, adjunct vocal instructor, will perform at 8 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. Admission is free and the public is invited to attend. A reception will follow.

Jordan and Ms. archer have planned a program of classical duets. They will be singing in several languages.

Jordan, a baritone, attended the universities of New Mexico, Colorado and Michigan. He debuted professionally at the Kennedy Center, Washington, D.C., and has appeared with the Detroit Symphony and the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

Ms. Archer is a soprano who attended Hastings College, Nebraska, and the University of Missouri. She studied in Austria, France and Germany in master's classes. In Midland College's first opera production, "Die Fledermaus," she sang the role of Rosalinda. She also appeared as a vocalist in the motion picture "You Never Gave Me Roses."

Jordan and Ms. Archer will have feature roles in Midland Opera Theatre's production of Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in April. As a tribute to Midland's Centennial, the opera will be re-set in West Texas as "Johnny Murphy."

School auditions slated

DALLAS — The National Academy of Arts is holding auditions in 19 cities throughout the United States and Puerto Rico in 1985.

An audition is scheduled for March 17 at the Nathalie Krassovska School of Classical Ballet, 5731 Richmond Ave. Check-in time is 1:30 p.m.

Petrus Bosman, director of dance and artistic director for the National Academy of Arts, and Mary L. Moore, president, will conduct the audition. Students auditioning will participate in a two-hour ballet technique class, including barre and center work, and pointe work for girls.

Auditions are required for admission to the accredited residential high school program. Partial and full time tuition scholarships are available.

In addition to the residential high school program, the National Academy of Arts also offers a summer dance program for junior high and senior high students. Auditions are not required for the summer program, however, admission priority is given to students who audition and tuition scholarships are granted on the basis of audition.

Dance students interested in obtaining information about the National Academy of Arts, founded in 1972, and audition applications may write to Barbara Fletcher, director of admissions, National Academy of Arts, 17 East University Ave., Champaign, Ill., 61820.

Gallery to host reception

To mark Saturday's opening of "TRIPTYCH," Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St., will host a benefit reception on behalf of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children. Co-sponsor of the evening's festivities is the Midland Junior League.

Gallery 1114 is Midland's only contemporary co-operative art gallery. "TRIPTYCH" is an exhibition of ceramics by Sharon Seay, drawings and weavings by Deborah Hamilton and mixed media pieces by Ruth Hill Radcliffe. All are members of Gallery 1114. Their works will be featured in the central exhibition area of Gallery 1114, while works by other members will be on display throughout the Gallery.

From 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday silent bids will be accepted for each of the works donated by members of the gallery. Works range from watercolors by Warren Taylor, ceramics by John Harmon, photographs by Mike Banschbach and mixed media pieces by Cristi Branum, as well as selections from the "TRIPTYCH" exhibition.

At the conclusion of the reception, a bid will be selected at random for each of the donated works. All proceeds will go the the Center for Battered Women.

Students' work exhibited

An exhibit of art work by graduate students from the University of Texas-San Antonio opens Monday at Midland College's McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building.

Included in the exhibit are 40 to 48 two-dimensional works, mostly drawings. The show represents the work of eight students. Selections for the exhibition were made by Steve Reynolds, UT-San Antonio art professor.

"This is the first time we have had an entire exhibition comprised of works by university graduate students," says Warren Taylor, MC art instructor and chairman of the college's exhibits committee. "It should be an exciting collection, and one that will present some of today's contemporary thinking about art."

Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. sunday.

Kite contest planned

The second Windlands Park Kite Contest is scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday.

The contest is limited to two events per person. Pre-registration deadline is 1 p.m. Friday. Awards will be given.

The events by age groups are 6 and under, most unusual; 7 to 10, prettiest; and 11 to 12, ugliest. Open, no age requirement competition will be held in the following categories: most colorful, longest tail, best hand-made kite, best store bought kite, highest and 50 yard dash with kite.

The contest is sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department. For more information call 683-4281, ext. 317.

Exhibit at Midland Mall

Western artist and watercolorist Kenneth Cargle will bring his works to Midland Thursday through Saturday for an exhibit at Midland Park Mall. The show will be open during Mall hours.

A resident of Canyon, Cargle has painted professionally since 1982. He maintains a private practice in marriage and family therapy in Amarillo and is an ordained minister and pastor of the First Christian Church, Disciples of Christ, at Claude.

Cargle works principally in watercolors that mirror the Western frontier of a past era. Self taught, cargle has exhibited extensively during the past three years in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado.

Midland Arts Association's Spring Arts Show opened to the public Thursday at the Midland County Exhibit Building, East Highway 80, and continued today from 1 to 5 p.m.

Dorothy Peterson of Roswell, N.M., formerly of Midland, served as judge for the show. Entries were accepted into the show from Midland and the surrounding area. Some of the art work is for sale.

MAA is also hosting a flea market in conjunction with the art show. There is no admission charge.

'Marvel meat' cheaper, leaner than ground beef

By JANET LORIMER
King Features Syndicate

When I decided to cut back on ground beef, I had severe mental withdrawal. What, give up meat loaf, spaghetti and lasagna? I can't bear it! Then I discovered Marvel Meat. That's what I've started calling lean ground turkey because, thanks to this marvelous meat, I can now have the best of all possible worlds. Consider:

Ground turkey is so lean there is almost no fat to drain off. That makes it healthier. To show how lean it is, I made a meat loaf with two pounds of ground turkey and when it was cooked, I had one tablespoon of fat to drain off. Contrast that with the fat content of ground beef.

Ground turkey strongly resembles ground beef in color so it looks just as appetizing. It browns nicely but will be a shade lighter when cooked.

Because of the low fat content, you don't have to brown the meat first in order to drain off excess fat. That eliminates a step in cooking and makes it easier to cook with.

The fine consistency of the meat is such that you don't have to worry about your meatballs or meat loaf cracking and crumbling during the cooking process. It holds its shape beautifully and the cooked meat is much nicer to slice.

Cost? A pound of lean ground turkey costs less than a pound of the cheapest cut of ground beef. You are paying for almost pure protein with no wasted fat content, so you are getting your money's worth, for a change. In fact, I find I use less ground turkey in my recipes because there is no wasted fat, so I save even more money.

Taste? Ground turkey has a mild flavor that does beautifully in a variety of dishes. Because of the mildness, it does not overwhelm the herbs and spices you may want to use.

So saying, here is a selection of dishes that traditionally use ground beef but have been converted to lean ground turkey.

MARVEL MEAT LOAF
2 pounds lean ground turkey
½ cup milk
2 eggs
2 to 3 slices whole-wheat bread crumbs
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon finely minced fresh parsley
Dash oregano
Dash salt and pepper
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Mix all ingredients thoroughly in large mixing bowl with your hands. Form meat mixture into a loaf and bake, uncovered, in loaf pan or oven casserole at 350F for about 1 hour or till done.

MARVEL MEATBALLS
1 pound lean ground turkey
1 egg
⅓ cup milk
Dash thyme
2 slices whole-wheat bread crumbs

In large mixing bowl, mix all ingredients thoroughly with your hands. Form meatballs about 2 inches in diameter and set aside in the refrigerator.

Wine Sauce:
2 tablespoons butter
½ clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups chicken stock
½ cup white wine
Dash paprika
Dash salt and pepper

In large saucepan, melt butter and add garlic. Saute till tender, then add flour slowly. Continue stirring till butter/flour mixture is smooth. Slowly add chicken stock, stirring constantly till mixture is smooth.

Add wine, paprika, salt and pepper. Stir over medium-high heat till mixture begins to thicken. Add meatballs carefully to hot sauce. Reduce heat to simmer. Cover pan, and continue cooking slowly for about 30 minutes or until meatballs are cooked. Serve meatballs with wine sauce poured over them, either on rice or alone.

MARVEL STUFFED MANICOTTI
1 cup ground turkey, uncooked
1 cup whole-wheat bread crumbs
2 eggs
1 cup Jack cheese, grated
1 tablespoon olive oil
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon marjoram
⅛ teaspoon oregano
⅛ teaspoon thyme
½ teaspoon sweet basil
½ teaspoon parsley flakes
3 cups spaghetti sauce
1 cup water
1 package manicotti noodles, uncooked

In large bowl, mix turkey, bread crumbs, eggs, cheese, oil and seasonings together thoroughly for stuffing mixture. Set aside. Mix spaghetti sauce and water together and pour ⅔ cup diluted sauce into the bottom of a shallow baking dish (space the noodles out in a single layer about ½ inch apart to allow for swelling during cooking.)

Now stuff each uncooked noodle with stuffing mixture. Lay the stuffed noodles on the sauce in the pan.

When all noodles are stuffed and in the pan, pour the remaining diluted sauce over them. Cover pan tightly. Bake at 375 degrees for about 1 hour or until pasta is tender.

Makes about 4 servings of two stuffed noodles per serving.

These noodles are large, tubular pasta, about 3 inches long.

One of my cookbooks identifies them as manicotti and another as rigatoni. However, a noodle of this shape by any other name would taste just as delicious!

Marvel Spaghetti Sauce
½ cup finely minced onion
1 clove garlic, finely minced
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ pound ground turkey
1 (16-ounce) can tomatoes
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1 tablespoon sweet basil
½ teaspoon oregano
Dash salt and pepper

Saute onion and garlic in olive oil till tender. Add crumbled raw turkey and cook, stirring well, for about five minutes. Add tomatoes with juice, tomato sauce and seasonings. Simmer for about 25 minutes.

MARVEL LASAGNA
3 to 4 cups spaghetti sauce
1 package lasagna noodles
1 cup cottage cheese
2 cups Jack cheese, grated
2 to 3 hard-boiled eggs, sliced

Prepare spaghetti sauce with ground turkey as indicated. While sauce cooks, prepare noodles according to package directions. Drain noodles and lay a layer of noodles across the bottom of a greased shallow baking dish. Next, mix cottage cheese and Jack cheese together. Spoon cheese mixture in an even layer over the noodles.

Lay hard-boiled egg slices on top of cheese mixture. Pour sauce over everything and bake at 350 degrees for about 20 minutes.

MARVEL CHILE CON CARNE
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup onion, finely chopped
½ clove garlic, minced
½ to ¾ pound lean ground turkey
1 (16-ounce) can whole tomatoes with juice
4 cups cooked kidney beans, drained
Dash salt and pepper
Chili powder, to taste (start with 2 teaspoons)

Melt butter in large saucepan and saute onion and garlic until tender. Add turkey and saute until meat is cooked. Add tomatoes, beans and seasonings. Continue cooking for about an hour over low heat.

MARVEL CURRY CASSEROLE
¾ pound lean ground turkey
1 (8-ounce) can tomatoes
1 cup cooked brown rice
2 tablespoons chopped onion
⅔ cup pineapple tidbits, drained
¼ cup raisins
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon curry powder, or more to taste

Brown the meat in small saucepan. Blend meat with other ingredients and spoon into a 2-quart oven casserole. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serve with any or all of the following condiments: grated coconut, sliced bananas, chutney, chopped peanuts.

Scarab long a powerful symbol

The scarab beetle, sacred to the Egyptians, was a strangely protected symbol that survived for centuries as an amulet protecting against disease and misfortune.

Until recently in some parts of Africa, women wore it as a guarantee of fertility. It also was said to ward off malaria, the evil eye and snakebite.

Book does justice to its subject

"Louise Bogan, A Portrait," by Elizabeth Frank. 460 pages. Illustrated. Knopf. $24.95.

By JOHN GROSS
New York Times News Service

Louise Bogan, who died in 1970, disapproved of the self-dramatizing confessional poetry that she saw coming into vogue in her last years. Not only was she naturally reticent; she also believed that the true poet "represses the outright narrative of his life." Instead of exploiting his personal history, he uses his art to set it at a distance; subjective feeling is recast as seemingly objective myth. And this was an ideal that she did her best to live up to in her own work. She had set down her experience, she once wrote, "in the closest detail. But the rough and vulgar facts are not there."

To reconstruct such a life is a difficult task. It calls for exceptional empathy and insight, and for the ability to set imaginative work in its biographical context without reducing it to mere documentation. Fortunately, Elizabeth Frank, who teaches at Bard College, has risen admirably to the challenge. Her book is a model of its kind, and one that does full justice to a remarkable woman.

What were the "rough and vulgar facts" that are the biographer's business, if not the poet's? The most devastating of them were beyond doubt the events of Louise Bogan's childhood. She was born of Irish stock in Maine in 1897 and grew up in a succession of rooming houses and temporary homes. Her parents were ill-matched; there were fearsome quarrels, and her mother not only had a long series of lovers, but — impelled by who knows what twisted motives — took her small daughter along with her to her trysts. Louise loved her and felt an urge to protect her, but she also suffered permanent damage. For much of her life, she was to be racked by rage and jealousy, to alternate between tenderness and sudden spasms of cruelty.

Yet the sources of her strength showed themselves in childhood as well. Early on — she may have been as young as 8 at the time — the sight of a vase in which someone had placed a bunch of marigolds gave her an overwhelming sense of illumination. She understood the impulse of pleasure that lay behind the way the flowers were arranged. "And I knew the flowers — their striped and mottled elegance — forever and for all time, forward and back. They were mine, as though I had invented them."

In other words, she had grasped the possibilities of art. She went on to start writing poetry, and by her mid-teens it was becoming clear that she had found her vocation. She had a knack for drawing, too, and she idolized her art teacher until the fatal afternoon when she caught sight of her "with a greasy paper bag in one hand and a half-eaten doughnut in the other." Her romantic ideal had been betrayed, and "with perfect ruthlessness I rejected her utterly."

A Review

After a year at Boston University, she dropped out in order to get married, but in spite of having a daughter to whom she remained closely attached, she was soon at odds with her husband. By 1919, she was living by herself in Greenwich Village and embroiled in a love affair with a young Irishman who felt he had a mission to call attention to the needs of the poor by shoplifting and then testifying in court to their plight. He was eventually committed to an insane asylum, but malicious gossip about the episode kept cropping up for years and adding to her sense of vulnerability whenever it did.

Her second marriage, to the writer Raymond Holden, lasted much longer than her first, but it was increasingly punctuated by fights and outbursts of jealousy, and Holden's devotion to her couldn't make up for — indeed, tended to underline — the relative weakness of his personality. Within a few years, she was showing distinct signs of paranoia, and in the early 1930s she spent two spells in the hospital under psychiatric care.

She emerged from the second of them a good deal mellower, and "as cured as she was ever likely to be." But old griefs and afflictions were always liable to flare up again. When she visited Ireland in 1936, for instance, she was seized with a sense of horror; it never seems to have occurred to her, as Miss Frank say that the conspiratorial faces s thought she saw on every side we ghosts from her mother-dominat past.

At least the episode had a happ outcome. The man who came to h rescue while she was on her trave — an electrician from Inwood Upper Manhattan — became h lover, and their affair lasted eig years. She regarded it as a succes although she seldom mentioned and never introduced him to he friends.

Painful though her life often wa it is much less gloomy to read abou than a bare outline might suggest. was lightened by friendships wit such notable figures as Margare Mead (who wrote a poem about her and Edmund Wilson (who set her of on a long and distinguished caree as a reviewer); by her fairly cheerfu affair with Theodore Roethke, 1 years her junior, and by the toug humor of such things as her accoun of James Thurber, who met her at party and told her they ought to se more of each other. "He has a glas eye, poor dear. Anyone who falls fo me is sure to have something miss ing."

Above all, of course, there is the poetry, which Miss Frank analyzes at length, and with considerable skill. When she compares it to that of George Herbert or Gerard Manley Hopkins, she claims far too much for it. But at its best, in such poems as "Hypocrite Swift" or "Song for the Last Act," it bears the impress of a formidable personality.

Novel might put reader to sleep

A Review

"Bright River Trilogy," by Annie Greene. Simon & Schuster. 256 Pages. $14.95.

PHIL THOMAS
Associated Press

Save your money — $14.95 plus sales tax is a bit high to pay for sleeping pills. And that is what Annie Greene's "Bright River Trilogy" does best — put the reader to sleep.

Oh, it does have some few saving graces such as a nice bit of writing here and a rather well-made character there but for the most part "Bright River Trilogy" is an exercise in tedium.

The story is narrated by three women, but it might as well have been one since their speech and thought patterns are very much alike. What they think and talk about is a man named Darcy Blunt.

The women are Lilly, she is Darcy's mother; Jessie, a young woman whose life is changed considerably by Darcy, and Ellen, an even younger woman who loves Darcy even though she knows he is "unreliable, unapologetic, only working half the time and drinking the rest of it."

Yes, Darcy, this is your life, and a sorry thing it is as related by the three women it has had the most effect upon.

'Maxwell's Train' has believble plot

"Maxwell's Train," by Christopher Hyde, Villard Books: 272 pages; $15.95

By KAY JARVIS-PROKOP
Copley News Service

A Review

Harry Maxwell had given up the nightmarish life of a drug courier between Morocco and New York and Bogota and Miami.

He wanted a good night's sleep and the feeling that he would live through the next 24 hours, so he took a train cleaner's job.

But a year of sweeping out the Amtrak rail cars used in the Northeast Corridor running from Washington D.C., was beginning to pall.

One day he spied an odd car among the Pullman Standards and discovered that it was used to send out weekly shipments of new currency from the Bureau of Printing and Engraving for the Federal Reserve banks in New York and Boston. Thirty-five million dollars' worth.

So Harry contacts a few friends from the old days and they lay a complex plot that will set the four of them up for life and put them high on the list of great train robbers.

Meanwhile, an FBI agent whose high blood pressure had resulted in his being shuffled off to a minor government agency in Washington, comes across some communiques that convinced him that a major terrorist group is on its way to the United States. That's considered improbable by those he talks to and the information is shelved.

There is, in fact, a deadly, well-trained group arriving on the East Coast led by a beautiful woman, Annalise Shenker, who is known worldwide for her vicious fearlessness and her impeccable planning. Their target: the Amtrak run carrying $35 million and the completion of the first successful international terrorist attack on American soil. The two groups — each unknown to the other — choose the same run, both intent on taking the money.

Christopher Hyde thunders along with this thriller, adding fascinating characters and complexities as he goes. There is the former FBI agent, whose research is the only information available on whom the terrorists are and what their form of operation may be.

If you've never heard of anthrax, you'll be introduced to it by the terrorists, who carry eight canisters of it with them. A virulent, fast-growing bacillus deadly to both man and animal, it is only one of the devices used to keep the train moving and the troops at bay.

There are passengers on the highjacked train — Harry Maxwell not among the least of them — who know their only chance for survival is counterattack. There is also a group of high-level foreign diplomats aboard. And there are betrayers.

As the train — now grisly with its blacked-out windows and a body strapped to the front handrails of the engine — moves slowly through the labyrinthian network of rail lines toward the Canadian border, two governments grapple desperately with their own bureaucratic networks to find a solution.

The author not only weaves a credible plot that is up-all-night reading, but also introduces the reader to the intricate world of North American trains — yes, even the romance.

Spending weekends alone doesn't have to be boring

By MOLLIE FERMAGLICH
King Features Syndicate

It's happened again. It's Friday afternoon and you have nothing to do this weekend. You've already filled your annual quota of blind dates (one) — and can you help it if you actually believed the guy you went out with last Saturday who promised to "call you soon"?

Face it: You're all alone. But don't worry — the prospect of entertaining yourself need not be frightening. Boring weekends are largely the result of poor planning. You could even look forward to being alone if you prepare for it.

Friday night

Step I. Find someone to blame for your having to spend the weekend alone. Almost anyone will do — your mother for not breastfeeding you, your high school sweetheart for going east to college — but the best candidate for scorn and loathing is yourself.

This is the perfect opportunity to bemoan your cellulite, impending crow's feet or the fact that even the chubby girl in Accounts Payable has a boyfriend! Once you feel sufficiently sorry for yourself, you'll be open to try anything.

Step II. Accept your friend's invitation to meet for a drink after work. Visit a bar near your office. Pay $2.50 for a Bloody Mary with too much celery and not enough vodka.

Take special note of the men in Sansabelt slacks and those in three-piece mint-green suits that probably came with extra pants. Prayuilt-up tension and stress in a good, healthy sweat, while gathering strength by noting all the women in the locker room with worse bodies than yours.

Or go to the local bowling alley and see how many men you can meet named Nick, Frank and Spike. It probably won't make you feel better, but it will show you far worse fates than being alone on a Friday night.

Step IV. Make a shopping list and go directly to your nearest supermarket. Ignore the women's magazines' advice to treat yourself to "gourmet snacks." Save the Scandinavian crackers and Bulgarian lumpfish for guests and head for the cookie aisle.

This could be an exceptionally long weekend, so buy as much junk food and as many artificially colored soft drinks as your refrigerator can hold. If you're embarrassed, tell the checkout girl that you're expecting the local elementary school over.

And to take care of guilt, place one container of plain yogurt in your cart; you can easily ditch it on the tabloid newspaper rack on your way out.

Step V. Double-lock your door and relax. Try not to answer the telephone this weekend. Yes, this could be the weekend that Robert Redford calls — but if you aren't home, you will be more desirable.

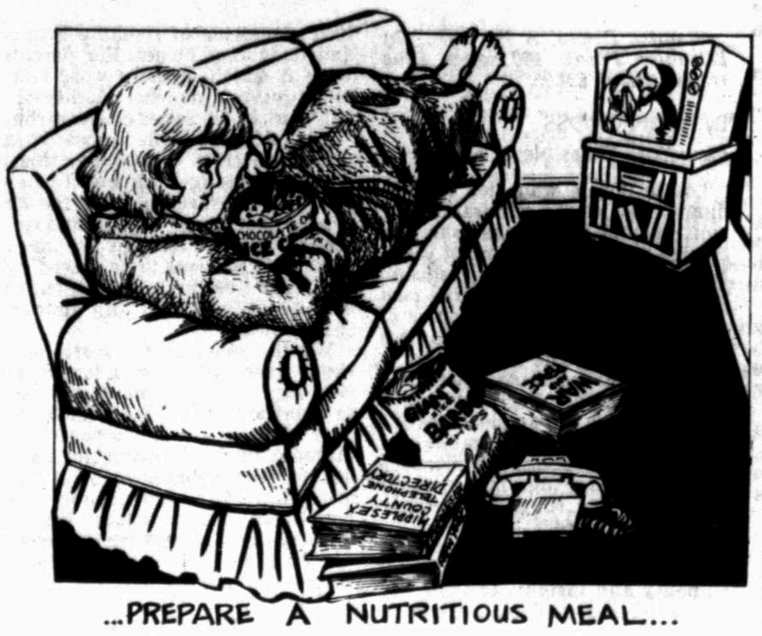

Step VI. Put on your terry-cloth bathrobe with the coffee stains on it, sit down and make a list of even less inviting places you could be right now:

— boring parties,
— dinner with married friends,
— any bar that lets women in for free before 10 p.m.

Step VII. Prepare a nutritious dinner. Now, wrap it in plastic wrap and go directly to the chocolate chip ice cream. Eat it right out of the container — the last thing you need this weekend is dirty dishes.

Step VIII. Turn on the television set and try to figure out why Dick Van Patten seems to have a better social life than you. Watch made-for-TV movies and wonder why all the good movies are on at 4 a.m. Try to figure out who gets Channel 68.

Step IX. Get into bed and put on an all-night radio talk show. Call in. Ask the host if he's got a brother who's off tonight.

Step X. Sleep.

Saturday

Step I. Wake up, check the clock and go back to sleep until noon. If you have trouble doing this, try watching "Sunrise Semester."

Step II. Rise and shine! Shower or don't shower — only you'll know!

Step III. Finish dressing, pack your wallet with credit cards and prepare for a shopping spree. Go to a department store. Get a free cosmetic makeover without being guilted into buying $87 worth of the product.

Try on hats. Don't buy "one-size-fits-all" anything. Ask the out-of-work model hired to demonstrate perfume how she feels spraying strangers.

Step IV. Stop in a card 'n' gift shop. Buy greeting cards for upcoming birthdays. Avoid cards that say "I Wuv You This Much" and people who buy them.

Step V. Visit a shopping mall art exhibit. Do not, however, purchase any of the paintings or drawings; you are merely alone, not insane.

Step VI. Take yourself out to dinner! Try to avoid the following conversation as it really isn't necessary:

You: What do you want tonight?

You: I don't know, how about you?

You: Well, we had Chinese last Thursday...

You: Well, you know me, I could eat Chinese seven days a week...

Eat wherever you like, but do yourself a favor and stay away from any place that serves a hamburger/cottage cheese/cling peach platter.

When the waiter asks "How many?" don't be embarrassed. Tell him the truth. If this is your first time dining alone, however, you might want to try:

1) "Two — I'm waiting for somebody."

2) "My lover and I eat separately."

3) "I'm Julia Child."

After you've been seated, request a menu and take time to read it. There are certain items you should keep away from. For example, why draw needless attention to yourself by ordering a dish that requires donning a lobster bib?

Instead, choose the shrimp cocktail — there's no one to whom you have to offer one of your four tiny shrimp. Eat at a leisurely pace.

Order the exotic drink that comes with an umbrella or a free tote bag. Ask what the "fresh fruit of the day" is, but go with the seven-layer cake.

Step VII. OK, it's Saturday night and you really don't want to go home yet. Why not check out one of those singles' mixers you've been curious about for years?

Choosing between a "Sophisticated Singles' Bash" and a "College-Background-Only Oldies But Goodies Get-Together" may be difficult indeed, but your main criteria in picking a dance should be that it is located as far away from your neighborhood as possible.

Whether you choose to go home with someone whose pants don't reach his ankles is your business, but there's no need to advertise.

Step VIII. If you prefer total anonymity, take yourself to a singles' bar. Do not bother making statements like, "I've never been here before," because no one will believe you. Plan to stay until the point when you realize that the best-looking guy is the bartender and that he'd be more interested in your brother than you.

Step IX. Of course, you may choose to go directly home after dinner. A wise choice. Relax, take off your shoes and put on any record that was not purchased by dialing a toll-free 800 number. Clean out your linen closet and discard "Birds of North America" dish towels.

Step X. Beautify yourself. Trim cuticles. Apply Misty Plum nail polish. Remove Misty Plum nail polish. Have a facial.

Step XI. It should be way past 11 p.m. by now. If you're still awake, put on music and do calisthenics. This will either relax you or bore you into a fitful sleep. If neither occurs, run down to the neighborhood deli and price three-bean salad.

Sunday

Step I. Wake up, get dressed and go out to buy the Sunday paper. Spend the next hour trying to figure out why your paper has three real-estate sections and no entertainment guide.

Step II. Treat yourself to Sunday brunch. Pay $8.95 for a ratatouille omelet, which will inevitably sound better than it tastes. Do the Sunday crossword puzzle. Ask neighboring diners if they know a seven-letter word for "Celtic melon balls."

Step III. Go for a walk in a neighborhood park. Trip joggers. Feed caramel popcorn to pigeons. Watch the strolling couples. When you see a particularly attractive, seemingly happy couple, tell yourself, "She's probably boring" and "I'm sure he stinks in bed."

Step IV. Visit a museum. Use your eight-year-old college identification card for a discount rate. Go to the gift shop and buy commemorative coins.

Step V. It should be late afternoon by now. Head home. This is a peaceful time of day — use it to catch up on your reading. Take down that dusty volume of "War and Peace." Open to page one and begin. Wake up and begin again.

Offspring adds new dimension to dating game

By KAY MARIE PORTERFIELD
King Features Syndicate

Kristin's heart pounded like a jackhammer as she approached her first date after the divorce. Her mouth was dry, her palms damp and her knees shook. The whole week leading up to the "big night" she wondered what to say, how to act.

She needn't have worried. When the man who'd asked her out arrived at her apartment, 7-year-old Jenny greeted him at the door by telling him he was at the wrong address. Once that hurdle was overcome, 3-year-old Michael bit Mr. Right on the leg, sending him howling out the door.

Kristin sent the sitter home and spent the evening wondering whether her kids and a social life were mutually exclusive.

Two years after his wife left him, Ron had the courage to try a committed relationship with Susan. Although they didn't live together, they did spend most of their time together, including the weekends Ron's kids visited. His younger daughter, Becky, quickly took to Susan, but the older girl, Barb, resented her.

Ron became a placater when Barb called Susan names and glared at her sullenly. He also began to worry what would happen to Becky's sense of stability if he and Susan ever broke up.

Because he was so wrapped up in his children's feelings, he ignored Susan's, and his worst fear came true — she walked out on him. Now he's decided to hold off relationships until his daughters are grown.

DATING, EVEN when you don't have children, can be as scary as walking across a mine field. Add offspring to the dating game and you set loose a different set of variables.

When we've turned for answers to self-appointed single parent advisers, chances are we've heard and read some confusing answers, such as: 1) Don't introduce your kids to your dates. When too many people come and go in their lives, they get confused and insecure; 2) Always introduce your kids to your dates. Otherwise they'll think you're hiding something and become confused and insecure.

While it is true that loyalty conflicts and jealousy can turn dating into a disaster, they don't have to if you learn to handle them properly. Even though occasionally children may act less than civilized around our romantic interests, most single parents do learn to cope.

A recent study revealed nearly half of all single parents say their kids don't have any problems or hang-ups about their dates. Twelve to 15 percent of the parents queried didn't bring their dates home. Most of the kids who were less than delighted reacted with indifference or reserve.

Only 9 percent of women stated that their kids were angry about their dating, and a mere 3 percent of the men indicated such anger existed.

Even more encouraging news is that kids seem to put up less of a fuss as they grow older. Undoubtedly, Parents Without Partners kids who are used to group activities with lots of single moms and dads around will find it easier to adapt to a parent's dating than the child whose parent suddenly, after no social life at all, starts playing the dating game.

Whether or not you should introduce your children to your dates depends on common sense more than anything. After all, you know your own children better than the experts.

RIGHT AFTER the divorce, children's emotions are still raw and their insecurity levels high. Expecting them to be cordial to our dates at this time may be asking too much. They have enough to deal with without our demands that they accommodate a new person in their lives. There's really no need to burden our kids with the task of welcoming a string of casual dates into their lives.

That doesn't mean hiding or sneaking around. It does mean using restraint. When a relationship develops into a friendship and that person of the opposite sex becomes an important part of our lives, then it is time to make introductions.

One mistake some single parents make is to have unrealistic expectations about how their children will feel about the new man or woman. Nothing starts more trouble than expecting that Nora or Johnny are going to like that person as much as you do.

Their having immediate bonds of affection is an unrealistic wish. It is realistic to expect the kids to behave as politely as they would to any adult. Sometimes all it takes to allay a child's fears is to talk with him about the relationship and make your goals for behavior clear.

Planning ahead can make the first "family date" run more smoothly. It's foolish to arrange an elaborate and extended time together for the first encounter. Everyone, including your date, needs a face-saving excuse to call it a day if stresses start to run too high. A picnic in the park is better than a day-long expedition far from home.

Pick an activity both adults and kids can enjoy and one that doesn't put anyone, including yourself, on the spot to provide sparkling conversation. If you're all doing something, whether it's watching a movie or making pizza, chances are the activity will get you over the rough spots.

Even with the best of planning, be prepared for trouble should it arise. The two biggest reasons for children's anger and acting out when it comes to parental dating are loyalty conflicts and jealousy over the amount of time we're spending with this new person.

WE'VE ALL heard the joke about the young child who drives Prince Charming away by asking, "Are you my new daddy?" Most kids don't verbalize that question, but many of them do wonder if the new man or woman is a candidate to replace their biological parent.

Feeling loyal to their parent and perhaps harboring some strong fantasies that Mom and Dad will patch things up and get together again, there's bound to be some resentment. When a date tries to act like a child's parent rather than a friend, it can provoke a pitched battle.

You'll need to reassure your kids that their biological parent is irreplaceable, that even should you marry eventually, a stepparent isn't the same as a parent. At the same time you need to let kids know, especially the younger ones, that when men and women like each other, they want to spend time together — but that doesn't mean wedding bells are in the offing.

Although your children don't have a right to know all the details of your relationship, they do have a right to know just how serious it is. You may need to take your date aside and explain that it might be a good idea to "back off" with the kids until they have a chance to get used to him or her.

It's your responsibility, too, to handle the discipline, not your date's. Research shows that family "outsiders" can't be effective disciplinarians until they've developed a friendly relationship with the child. Asking a date to discipline puts them on the spot and practically guarantees conflict.

Be aware that in single-parent homes, kneed to give them even when they're not asked for, explaining that it's possible for you to love more than one person and that your love for your child and your feelings for the man or woman in your life are different.

CAUGHT UP in the first flush of romance, it's easy to forget that the kids feel left out and may question their future with you. We need to keep doing things alone with our children in addition to the times we include a date in family plans.

It's very important, as well, not to give our kids power over whom and when we date. If we look at bringing a date home with fear and trepidation, much as we did when we were younger and had to introduce our dates to our parents, our kids pick up on our insecurities.

Children missed when they leave

By DOTTIE VENNARD LAMM
King Features Syndicate

This morning I woke up thinking about a conversation I had with a mother of three boys who joined us for a weekend holiday last month.

"I don't know if I'm abnormal, but I just don't miss my kids when I'm gone," said the mother, whose boys are all under 7. "It's not that I don't think about them — I do — and I have to feel they are going to be well cared for, but once I'm gone, I just don't miss them."

Well, I don't miss my kids when I'm gone either. Correction. I didn't miss them when they were that age.

I remember when Scott was exactly 1. Dick and I left him with the grandparents and went to Mexico for a week. Our first holiday sans child. I was ecstatic. Dick was depressed. "Suppose he takes his first step?" he worried. "He won't — that's at least a month away," I answered, eager to be gone.

Now, when the babies were tiny, it was different. The infant/mother bonding process is a physical as well as emotional need. It pulls each with the force of gravity.

When my babies were really babies I breastfed them, cuddled them in a Snugli while doing light chores, and seldom went out nights on the three days I worked outside the home. But after that mutually dependent and divinely nourishing period of infancy, I found I could leave them without compunction.

Maybe it was the feeling of "neverendingness" that allowed me my physical distance and emotional space without guilt. I knew that when I came back from whatever trip, the tears to dry, the noses to blow, the hugs to give, the games to play, the "no's" to say would still be there. Day after day. Year after year. Never stopping. Never ending. Forever. Or so it seemed.

School would start in the fall and stop in the spring. Family ski trips — white respites from the weekend workathon — would structure the winter. A special family vacation excursion would mold the summer. Halloween would follow Halloween. Christmas follow Christmas with cyclical regularity. And wherever we spent the latter, we would spend it intact, together.

But suddenly, things changed. Our two dependably predictable kids became teen-agers, quickly and decisively, in one month's time. The 14th birthday marked the change for him, the 11th for her.

All at once, family vacations were resisted. Ski weekends were tolerated only if friends could come, too. Even Christmas was mildly scorned.

And they distance themselves from us not only in their absences, but even in their presence. With adolescents, if tears are shed they are likely to be hidden behind closed doors. If joys are experienced they are shared, not with us, but over the phone, with friends.

Our "no's" are defied no longer with one loud wail of two stamped feet, but with the seasoned, reasoned verbosity of a trial attorney. Anger and scorn seem the only emotions worth wasting on parents.

Now on trips away from home I do miss my kids. I find myself thinking: Wouldn't Scott have liked this seafood restaurant? Wouldn't Heather have loved this beach?

Now you can see full length uncut motion pictures in your living room—without commercials—when you want to!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Monday, March 11, 1985

By Jeane Dixon

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Things are shaping up nicely now. Do nothing to rock the boat. Give negative people a wide berth. The financial outlook is brighter than ever. Your thoughts turn to someone who had a positive influence on you. It is not too late to rekindle a romance. Everything comes to those who are patient. Avoid making too many demands too soon. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Australian newspaper publisher Rupert Murdoch, bandleader-TV host Lawrence Welk, ABC White House correspondent Sam Donaldson, civil rights leader Ralph Abernathy, the Minnesota Twins' Brian Oelkers, the Seattle Mariners' Phil Bradley, music's Mercer Ellington, actress Dorothy Gish.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone may try to involve you in an office dispute. Remain neutral. A financial success help save a foundering friendship. A husband-wife business team makes great strides.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good luck accompanies those taking business trips today. A new alliance boosts your power or status. Your ability to write meaningful letters and memos makes you very successful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reactivate an old program after making a few modifications. A change of environment will help you find the solution to a problem. Cooperate with another Gemini -- your goals are similar.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Greater financial security depends on your making some hard decisions in the near future. Expert advice is worth the cost, even if you must pay top dollar. Romance is a source of delight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romantic partner may need reassurance. A small gift or box of candy could do the trick. Free-lance assignments give you both valuable experience and extra cash. Give an unusual offer further consideration.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An attractive member of the opposite sex could throw you a curve. Back off a bit. You cannot afford to take your job responsibilities lightly if hoping to advance your career.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your hunches are right on target. An older person who heaps extra work on you is planning to reward you for your efforts. A raise or promotion is possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Look for new challenges. A last-ditch effort to nail down a special job, proves successful. You feel like celebrating this evening. Choose your companions with care. Indiscreet talk could hurt your career.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Several interesting job offers come your way. Go slow; it might be better to stay put. A child does you proud. A scholarship or special honor makes this a red-letter day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone from your past plays a major role in a future success. A relative can be either a nuisance or a blessing in disguise! Stand your ground on a financial matter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A unique business opportunity calls for a change in tactics. Romance is especially happy for those singles contemplating marriage. Taking the long view will bring the best results.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone from out of town could pay you an unexpected visit. Postpone travel. You need to get out and socialize more. A flirtatious person could try your patience. Curb your temper.

THE TALE OF THE SEVEN OF HEARTS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Both vulnerable. East deals.

NORTH
♠ 9 7 5 4
♡ 7
◇ K Q 7

WEST
♠ K 10
♡ A Q 9 5 4
◇ 9 3 2

EAST
♠ Q J 8 6 3 2
♡ 6
◇ 4

SOUTH
♡ K J 10 8 3 2
◇ A J 10 8 6 5
♣ Void

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
2 ♠	3 ♠	Pass	4 NT
Pass	6 ◇	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

He was a grizzled veteran of many campaigns. Despite a slight limp caused by a stray bullet at Anzio, there was a spring in the step of the Seven of Hearts as he strolled away from the game in the company of a select band of admirers.

"Cannon fodder, that's all we are and all we are meant to be," he thundered. "I know that, occasionally, we win a trick by ruffing or by becoming a long card in a suit. But for the most part we are stationed in the front line to be mowed down by the enemy.

"In my long career, only once can I remember when I won a trick in my own right early in the play. What made the escapade even more satisfying was that it took place in the semifinals of the world team championship.

"East's opening two spade bid might look a bit strange to you, but I guess anything goes at the world championship. Our player in the South seat elected to make a strong takeout with his cue-bid. North's jump to four no-trump was not Blackwood. Instead, it showed a good hand with the values concentrated in the minor suits. Hence South's leap to six diamonds.

"West led the king of spades, and when dummy appeared declarer realized that he was not going to have a cakewalk. After winning the ace of spades, it was tempting to cross to the table with a trump and lead a heart. However, that was unlikely to gain anything and declarer was reluctant to use up one of his few entries to dummy so early in the play.

"Instead, he elected to lead a low heart from his hand. West could see no reason not to follow the old adage of 'second hand low' and, to everyone's surprise, I won the trick!

"The rest was simple. Two hearts were sluffed on the top clubs. Now two clubs were ruffed, the second high, to provide entries for two heart ruffs on the board with the king and queen of trumps. A spade ruffed high was followed by a diamond ruffed with the seven. This high crossruff established the defenders' nine of trumps as a trick, but that was all the defense could get. Six diamonds bid and made!"

Champion smelt eater eats 79 fish

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — Darwin Weber eats smelt only once a year, but when he does, he downs enough of the small, silvery fish to maintain his reputation in these parts as champion smelt eater.

Weber downed 79 finger-sized fish last week to win the smelt eating contest in this Columbia River city downstream from Portland, Ore., even though he floundered toward the end as the effects of dieting and a two-year layoff left him shy of a personal record.

The contest marks the return each year by millions of smelt to the Columbia River to reproduce.

Weber, at 5 foot 11 and 185 pounds, had lost 15 pounds since he ate 90 smelt in 30 minutes in 1983 — a personal best. And he admitted that he may have been out of practice, because of the cancellation of last year's contest.

"I only eat them once a year, so it might have made a difference," he said.

Still, the 37-year-old resident of nearby Longview left competitors green around the gills.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

Aid in identification of the problem

Explore treatment and recovery modalities available to the alcoholic and family

Demonstrate the need for a comprehensive aftercare program of recovery for the alcoholic and family

DID YOU KNOW?

In Texas, more than 664,650 adults abuse alcohol. Each one, in turn, affects a minimum of four other people - spouses, friends, children, employers, fellow employees.

One out of 10 workers, from laborer to company president, is an alcoholic or has a serious alcohol problem. More than $1 Billion is lost yearly to Texas employers due to employee alcohol problems.

At least 50 percent of all traffic accidents resulting in fatalities are alcohol related. Up to 40 percent of fatal industrial accidents, 69 percent of drownings, 83 percent of fatal fire fatalities and 70 percent of fatal falls nationwide are alcohol related.

Alcoholism ranks second as a cause of suicide in the U.S.
