By Israeli Jets...

PLO Strongholds South Of Beruit Are Bombed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets blasted Palestinian strongholds south of Beirut today, ending the nine-month-old truce in a hail of bombs and rockets after an Israeli soldier was killed by a land mine in southern Lebanon.

Israel confirmed the raid, and the Lebanese government and the Palestine Liberation Organization said the jets set off fires and drew heavy anti-aircraft fire.

There were no immediate reports of casualties from the Israeli strikes, and no indication that Israeli ground troops were involved.

An Israeli communique said "the targets that were bombed were used as active bases for terrorist actions against Israel" and were used to store military equipment.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said: "We are monitoring the situation and looking at it closely." He said the United States had received "conflicting reports as to the extent of what's being done there," but did not elaborate.

The PLO said 60 Israeli F-15 and F-16 warplanes pounded the Damour, Douha and Naameh townships south of Beirut in a "criminal raid." Lebanon's state radio and television said the jets flew in four formations, and that thick palls of black smoke billowed from the bombed areas.

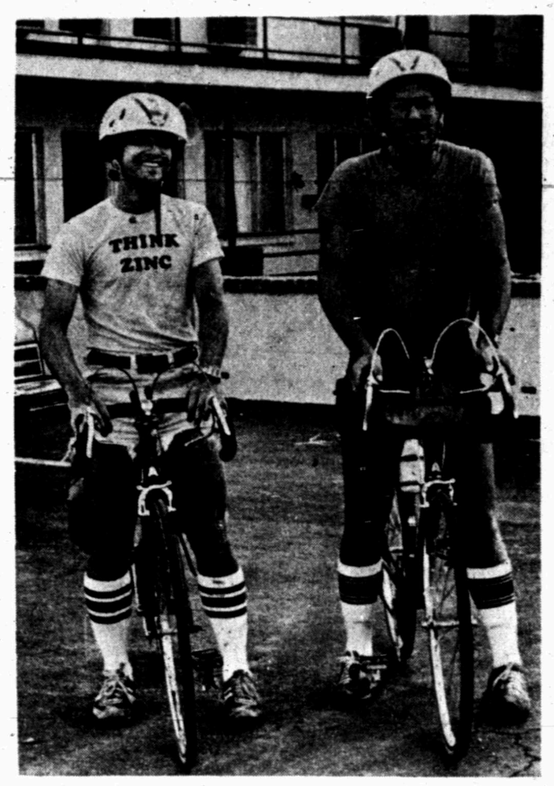

The attack began at 2:30 p.m. — 7:30 a.m. EST — and continued for more than 90 minutes. Lebanon's army commander, Gen. Victor Khoury, and the PLO said in separate statements Israeli helicopters patrolled a 50-mile stretch of the southern Lebanese coast from Beirut to Tyre as the jets went to action.

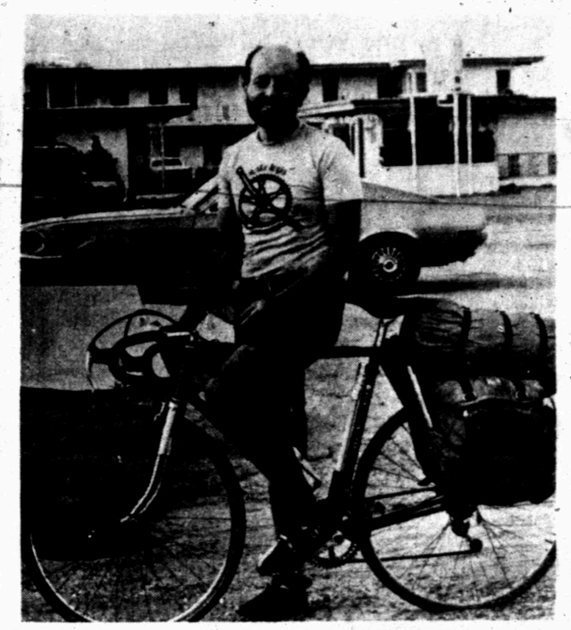

Government sources, who declined to be identified, said Syrian and Palestinian radar stations on the hills of the Douha neighborhood on Beirut's southern flank were devastated by Israeli jets.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv confirmed its jet fighters struck deep into Lebanon on bombing runs against Palestinian guerrilla targets.

It also said an Israeli soldier was killed and another was seriously wounded today when their jeep hit a land mine in the Israeli-supported Christian enclave in southern Lebanon. Israeli sources said the land mine blast was the most serious violation of the PLO-Israeli truce, which also prohibited hostile action in Christian enclave.

The cease-fire was mediated by the United States in July to end weeks of cross-border fighting. Israel has been contemplating a strike into Lebanon for weeks and Israeli jets have increased their spy flights.

VISITING CYCLERS--Bicyclers have become almost a "common" sight in Snyder recently. Ron Frenkel and Mark Ostrowski, both of Connecticut, spent Monday night here before taking to the road again, and Dandi of Nashville, Tenn. arrived Saturday and will remain for three weeks. Furious Opposition...

Evacuation Of Sinai Begins

YAMIT, Occupied Sinai (AP) — The Israeli army launched its big evacuation operation in this Sinai town today and ran into furious opposition from shouting and weeping opponents of Israel's withdrawal from the desert peninsula.

"You'll all be fighting the Egyptians here in two months," one Sinai settler yelled at the troops. "You're sentencing yourselves to death."

The army delayed beginning the evacuation until Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet completed a meeting in Jerusalem affirming its committment to the Sunday deadline for completing withdrawal.

In another development, Israeli jets struck at Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon, shattering a nine-month-old cease-fire that had been mediated by the United States.

The thousands of troops in Yamit were under orders to use utmost restraint, and they made no immediate attempt to force any of the 2,000 settlers and squatters into waiting trucks and buses. One family was seen leaving voluntarily, but the rest of those in Yamit were resisting and a few threw objects at troops and police.

Most of the settlers have departed, but ultra-nationalist squatters have moved in, vowing to resist the evacuation.

The return of the Sinai to Egypt had appeared threatened last week when Israel claimed Egypt was violating the peace treaty.

Absentee Voting Moves Slowly

Absentee voting for the May 1 primary elections is moving slowly here.

Only 49 voters had cast absentee ballots at the county clerk's office late this morning. This included 44 for the Democratic Primary and five for the Republican Primary.

Absentee voting will end at 5 p. m. Tuesday, April 27.

Three Men...

Bicyclers Visit Here

By Shirley A. Gorman

With the spring like weather comes the bicyclers, and as of late, Snyder has had more than a few pass through.

Mark Ostrowski of Fairfield, Conn. and Ron Frenkel of Fermington, Conn. spent the night here Monday. They left Los Angeles, Calif. 10 days ago en route to Daytona Beach, Fla.

Another bicycler who prefers to be called Dandi, the pen name he signs to his poetry, arrived in Snyder Saturday and will remain here for three weeks before continuing on to Colorado Springs, Colo.

Both Ostrowski and Frenkel have taken a month off in order to complete this trip. It is Ostrowski's first bicycle jaunt, but Frenkel has taken similiar trips.

Ostrowski is a social worker for the Connecticut Department of Children and Youth and he also works part time as a counselor for the Goodwill Industries Alcoholism Treatment Unit. In order to be able to take this bicyle journey he combined vacation time, plus a nine day leave of absence.

Frenkel, who has just graduated from medical school, said he was ready for a break before beginning his residency.

Both men agreed that the trip thus far has been filled with more plusses than minuses, except for Tuesday which was plagued by winds which made bicycling a bit hairy and an occasional pack of dogs that gives them a run for their money. Ostrowski has also had four flats and a broken derailer.

Frenkel said he first suggested the bicycle trip because "I thought it would be fun."

Neither men were able to get into shape prior to starting the journey due to cold weather in Connecticut.

"People have been so nice to us," they both agree. Motels have donated free lodging along the way. In fact, Travelodge in Snyder also provided a free night's lodging.

Once they said that after stopping to eat in a restaurant, Frenkel accidently left his water bottle behind. A trucker they had been talking with followed them and about 45 minutes later caught them on the highway and gave Frenkel the bottle.

Another time they could not find any vacancies in Palm Springs, so they asked a family if they could camp out in their yard. The family in turn invited them inside to use bathroom facilities and in general made the bicyclers feel very much at home.

"People are always beeping and waving at us," Frenkel said. "They are curious sometmes, but they always wish us well."

The longest they have traveled in a single day is 148 miles. "The scenery is beautiful," Ostrowski said. "We are seeing things that we would never be able to see any other way."

They took a day off and stopped at the Carlsbad Caverns.

Both Frenkel and Ostrowski have sponsors for this trip. One is a vitamin company which makes a new product called Vicon C Multi Vitamin.

When asked how a vitamin company came to be a sponsor, Frenkel responded that he had decided to write to several vitamin companies just to see if one might want to sponsor them.

Both Ostrowski and Frenkel are also helping to raise money for the Music Foundation for the Visually Handicapped. People back home in Connecticut are pledging so much support per mile tey travel.

Both are riding 10 speed bikes and basic supplies include a week's change of shorts and socks etc., tent, sleeping bag, fruit, razor, peanut butter and jelly, extra water containers, and cameras.

Ostrowksi said Frenkel planned the entire trip, including the stopover in Snyder. By Friday they expect to be in Dallas.

Frenkel does laugh about one thing. "Getting descriptions of the terrain from people who have only seen it from a car is funny. Sometimes they completely miss hills, for instance, or invent them where they don't exist. People in cars just don't pay that close attention."

Both bicyclers admit that their friends and relatives gave them mixed responses when they said they were going to bicycle across a certain part of the United States.

"We knew we would be taking a big risk," Ostrowski said.

"Up until the first night even I thought we were crazy," Frenkel said. "The last time I took a bicyle trip I said never again, but here I am. I don't know if I'll do it again or not."

"I say I wouldn't do it again," Ostrowski said. "But I don't really know." I think I'll appreciate the benefits more after I have had time to think about them."

Dandi is from Nashville,

The SDN Column

We were reading the other dav that many voters in one of the large cities of Texas are having trouble deciding which primary election they prefer. This is a problem that has not existed long in Texas. A Republican primary was a rarity until a few years ago. Now, some people are unhappy because they can't vote in both primaries. The problem usually involves local offices, since the Republican Party concentrates most of its energy on state and federal offices. This means that, for all practical purposes, those who vote in Republican primaries have no part in filling local offices.

There was a time when the best Republicans could do in this part of the country was to emphasize the individual over the party in the general election. By so doing, they were able to attract support of many Democrats in the presidential election and occasionally elect a Congressman or Senator.

Some went so far as to say that the party has no importance at all. They were wrong, of course, although candidates should be considered on their own merits, regardless of party affiliation. They were wrong because there are times when both parties have deserving candidates for the same office. And if you think party affiliation is not important in such cases, you are naive. The successful party is going to run the show, fill appointive positions and in other ways wield the big stick.

Actually, we have encountered very few voters in our time who blindly follow a party across the board. There were very few Republicans in the South in 1928, but Herbert Hoover, a Republican got the majority support for president. There were not many more in 1952, but Dwight Eisenhower scored a smashing victory over the Democrat, Adali Stevenson.

Now, we hear both parties urging their people to stand firm behind their respective nominees. The party label does amount to something in the eyes of the leaders, from the White House on down. And the parties serve another purpose---they nominate candidates. Otherwise, we probably would not have so many choices when we vote.

When the subject of the nation's economy arises and someone mentions how much more a person could buy for a dollar back in the "good old days," we usually suggest that they could still save a lot if they were willing to live as they did then. That could mean giving up various types of home appliances, television, extra automobiles. It could mean the elimination of many vacations and other trips, fancy foods, recreational activities, and reduced wardrobes.

We came across another story the other day that illustrates the point. A man had plans drawn for a new residence and submitted them to an old-time carpenter in hopes that he would take on the construction job, because he was known for quality workmanship. A few days later, he received a letter from the old carpenter, advising that the plans appeared to be defective.

"If I were to build this house the way you have it planned, you would have two bathrooms," he explained.

Mrs. Ray Named July 4 Chairman

MURRAY ANN RAY

Murray Ann Ray of Adventures Unlimited Travel Agency, has been named chairman of the annual July 4 celebration.

Her appointment was announced Tuesday afternoon at a meeting of chamber of commerce directors.

Mrs. Ray, a former chamber secretary, will succeed Wedge Turner as the July 4 chairman.

Turner was named to head a committee to study possible revision of the July 4 tractor pull arrangements. It was suggested that the chamber might work out a plan for the West Texas Tractor Pull Association to serve as sponsor of this event. The association assisted last year, but the chamber itself served as sponsor.

Brenda Hedges, chamber president, reported that applications for the chamber manager's post are still coming in. The search committee expects to meet soon, possibly late this week, to begin screening the applications.

The manager's post became vacant following the resignation of Bill Warner, effective April 9. Warner accepted a position with an Odessa bank.

Gary Terrell, local attorney, gave the board a report on procedure for establishing a non-profit foundation for the chamber. He said such an organization could serve as a vehicle for donors to make tax-free gifts, provided the funds were used for projects which qualify under Internal Revenue Service regulations. He said opportunites for approval would be enhanced if the organization had prospective donors and definite projects lined up in advance.

No action was taken on the proposal.

Reports were given on the annual chamber banquet and the Dallas Cowboys Hoopsters basketball game.

David Thompson reported that a sample of proposed new Christmas lighting equipment will be installed soon, and more detailed reports will be made at the next board meeting.

Also discussed at the board meeting was the possibility of revamping the chamber's merchants' committee.

In addition to Mrs. Hedges, Turner and Thompson, board members attending the session were Elizabeth Potts, Truett Bryan, Troy Williamson, Phil Guerry, Tommy Lay, David Hines, and Ernie Armstrong.

Child Crushed

MOUNT VERNON, Texas (AP) — A 5-year-old girl was crushed to death by a school bus Tuesday afternoon while her mother watched from the side of the road, authorities said.

Kimberly Moffett was crossing the road in front of the school bus and toward her mother when she was struck and killed, said Department of Public Safety trooper Mike Bush.

He said the girl dropped her umbrella, bent over to pick it up and the bus driver started off and drove over the girl, crushing her chest.

Mount Vernon School Superindendent Walter Sears said the Moffett girl would be the last child to leave the bus.

Bush said the accident was under investigation. No charges have been filed against the driver.

U.S. Has 'No Choice'

HOUSTON (AP) — The United States will have to support Great Britain's bid to recapture its territory from Aegentina if the Falkland Islands crisis cannot be resolved, former President Gerald Ford says.

Ford, speaking to reporters here Tuesday shortly after President Reagan's news conference, said the United States has "no choice" but to back its European ally.

"If our attempts to reconcile the differences fail ... there is no question our tilt has to be with Great Britian," Ford said.

Asked how the U.S. should respond if an inter-American defense pact was invoked, Ford said the agreement could be sidestepped because Argentina violated international law by invading the islands.

The Organization of American States voted Tuesday to convene a special meeting of foreign ministers next week to consider invoking the 1947 Rio Treaty — the western hemisphere equivalent of NATO.

Deputy Killed

TOWANDA, Kan. (AP) — A Butler County Sheriff's Department deputy was killed Monday when a loaded grain truck being pursued by authorities ran over and flattened his patrol car.

County Attorney Bill Ronan filed a first-degree murder charge and other charges today in Butler County District Court against Johnny Lee Huddleston, 30, of Austin, Texas. He also charged the truck driver with possession of cocaine, possession of drug paraphernalia, eluding a police officer and reckless driving.

Huddleston, who was held in the Greenwood County Jail after being treated at a hospital, was scheduled for a court appearance later in the day. Authorities started their pursuit of Huddleston Monday after two minor hit-and-run accidents.

Ask Us

Q.--Why is the Weekly TV News such poor quality and this week there is no sports page?

A.--Quality is in the eye of the individual reader and one would have to be more specific. If you are are referring to printing, you might have gotten a "spoil" copy. If you are referring to program listing, we obtain the information direct from the networks and various television stations. This time of year results in many reruns and program changes and the newspaper has no control over what the TV stations do. We know of no better source. Last week's omission of ESPN (sports listing) was our fault and it will be back in this coming week.

Grand Jury Clears Officers

HOUSTON (AP) — Witnesses who refused to testify "severely hampered" the case against 13 police officers who were fired or suspended without pay for allegedly harassing black hotel guests during a November raid, prosecutors say.

The Harris County grand jury did not find sufficient evidence of any criminal wrongdoing and took no action Tuesday against the seven fired and six suspended officers.

The panel's decision came less than a week after John Bales, on his last day as acting police chief, took the disciplinary action against the officers.

No witnesses testified before the panel during Tuesday's brief session. Several hotel guests testified in previous sessions, claiming they were harassed and beaten in the Nov. 4 election night raid on the Della Arpartment Hotel in the city's predominantly-black Fifth Ward.

Assistant District Attorney Terry Wilson said the witnesses' refusal to testify "severely hampered" the case. He declined further comment, saying he did not want to interfere with any appeals of the disciplinary action the officers may file with the City Civil Service Commission.

The officers have until Monday to appeal Bales' action.

What are airline stewardesses like — really?

For one thing they don't like to be called "stewardesses," anymore. They prefer "flight attendants."

The only other common denominator is their uncommonness. They are naughty and nice, more efficient and less, and range pretty to pretty unpretty.

But all stewardesses — "flight attendants" — are going to be characterized in an upcoming television program in a manner which most will resent.

Hollywood writer Ben Stein is neither cruel nor cynical, but he recognizes that some of the worst fact makes the best fiction.

Two years ago, on a flight between Los Angeles and new York, he listened attentively to a beautiful "stew" and her tale of woe about how stewardesses come from poor families, turn to flying to meet rich men and learn crafty ways to pick them up. How the rich men and the stewardesses go off to a hotel, have a torrid evening, after which she gets to go to Tiffanys or Nieman-Marcus and pick out whatever she wants.

Her story of girls, confused and lonely, often on drugs, always tired — sometimes getting mixed up with mean men, most always left alone at an airport motel while the Jack goes back to his wife in Scarsdale — her story inspired Ben to write a powerful TV special, perhaps a series, about the crazy way these women live.

But when he'd drafted the story, a trusted TV executive rejected it — adamantly. "The very idea, a story about stewardesses who are man crazy, jewelry crazy,, drugged."

He knew a stewardess who lived right next door who was none of those things.

The television executive said he was going to air, instead, a story by a woman writer about a crashed airliner and the selfless bravery of the flight crew.

But that storyline proved limp, vapid, and was never used.

Now Ben hears that the same studio executive is preparing to air his original story—

But with emphasis on the women's lib angle — a lot about how the "stews" are oppressed by the men in their lives.

In Hollywood, the more they try to film real life the more they distort it.

If generalities are ever fair, a larger than heretofore number of American girls are going from puberty to adultery, underdeveloped only intellectually.

And face it, airlines are no longer allowed employment prerogatives which used to skim the cream.

Today's cabin crews are likely to be no better than the rest of us and that is a shame.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Steer clear of situations today that require gambles or contain elements of risk. There's a possibility you might press your luck too far.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You must guard against using methods or tactics today that may be a little too heavy-handed on those in your charge. Try to get your points across with a light touch.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you expect others to respect your ideas and opinions today, you must first find merit in theirs. Discount their views and they'll write off yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be on guard today so that you won't be taken advantage of again by one who has used you in the past. Don't be too hasty in opening your wallet.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In important one-to-one relationships today, if you fail to be tactful or cooperative you could seriously disturb the alliance. Be prepared to yield.

PROCLAMATION—Beta Sigma Phi president Wanda Early and Mona Bryan, banquet chairman for Founder's Day, were present when Snyder mayor Rod Waller signed a proclamation naming April 30 Beta Sigma Phi Day. (SDN Staff Photo)

Beta Sigma Phi Slates Founder's Day Banquet

The annual Founder's Day banquet of Snyder's Lambda Kappa chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will be held Saturday, April 24, at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. The fifty-first anniversary of the organization's founding will be observed by the local chapter and all other chapters worldwide. Mona Bryan is serving as chairman of Founder's Day activities. Awards for the current year will be presented and a special message from the International Executive Council of Beta Sigma Phi will be read. The banquet theme this year is "Days of Wine and Roses."

This women's social, service, and cultural organization was founded in Abilene, Kansas on Apr. 30, 1931. Beta Sigma Phi is the largest Greek letter sorority in the world and has grown from one chapter of seven women to a sorority of 250,000 members active in 12,000 chapters in countries throughout the world. In 1982, new chapters have been formed in Korea, Indonesia, Turkey, Bahrain, and the Netherlands.

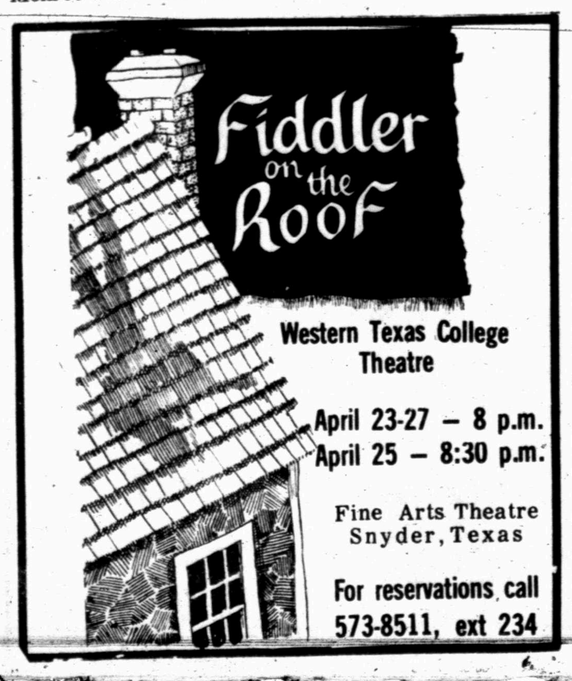

Life, learning, and friendship are the bywords of Beta Sigma Phi. Begun by Walter W. Ross, the sorority was originally designed to provide an outlet for women who, in the hard financial times of 1931, could not attend college and were obliged to stay home and support their families. Beta Sigma Phi provided a program of cultural study so they could have a chance at intellectual growth as will as social growth.

Today, hardly a charitable, health, or cultural group exists that has not been helped in some way by Beta Sigma Phi. Internationally, the chapters have created several special funds to which they contribute; the International Loan Fund, the International Endowment Fund, the Exemplar Fund, which helps support Literacy Village in India, and a college scholarship fund for members or their sons or daughters. Cultural and social activities still continue among chapters. Each year, members are provided with a different outline of study in the liberal arts. Members also plan socials throughout the year, including traditional events like Founder's Day.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald Jacoby was No. 1 on the master point list on December 7, 1941. Four years later when he played in his next tournament he was down to around 10th. He was back to third in 1950, but two years in the Far East for the Korean War found him out of the first 10. By 1959, he was back to third place but 2,000 points behind the leader, Charles Goren. He decided to really go after points and the No. 1 spot and predicted he would get there early in 1962. He did just that and went one step further. He became the first man to collect over 1,000 master points in one year.

Here is a hand from the 1962 Mid-South regionals which he won with Pat Connelly. Pat sat South and played four spades after Jacoby used a transfer bid to get him there.

Pat won the trump lead in dummy and led a diamond. West won with the queen and led a second trump to Pat's ace. Pat ruffed a diamond, led a third trump to his hand, a heart to dummy's king and a successful finesse of his jack followed by the ace. Then he ruffed his last diamond and finally led a club. West won with the queen over Pat's jack and was end-played.

As Jacoby said later, "The way to score master points is to have good partners."

Pat had certainly played like a really great partner.

"YEAH, HE'S OLD, BUT NOT NEAR AS OLD AS HE LOOKS."

For 50 Years...

Texas Man Masters Technique Of Neon Lighting

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Graves Morris Jones, 68, puts the shine on oysters and the glow on Schlitz.

For 50 years, he has trained light to run through little bent crystal tubes in a commercial art form known as "neon," a craft that has touched the signs not only of the brewing magnates but also of the oyster bar down the street.

One of the last few hand crafts still done predominantly by hand, neon sign-making combines what Jones calls "art and science."

Neon is one of five rare gases identified by the early Greeks that, when ionized by electricity, emits the familiar red-orange glow that has at times been derided as the consummate symbol of urban decadence.

Working in the looming frame shop of Sabine Neon, Jones hardly looks decadent.

His work combines the ancient trade of glass blowing — he himself is a journeyman glass blower — with a knowledge of electricity and gases.

Jones hovers around three torches, each designed to expose certain areas of the glass to the flame.

Holding the long tube over the "ribbon torch," Jones expertly creates the first bend in an "S," pulling the glass out of the fire to match it to a pattern he drew himself.

It matches the pattern, of course. After 50 years, he can put a bend in glass with precision.

Jones said neon sign-making is a relatively new art. It first gained popularity in Europe about 1914.

"The first neon sign was used in Paris at a tonsorial parlor," Jones chuckles. "That is a rich and snooty barber shop where they charge a lot of money for a shave and a haircut to take care of their overhead."

World War I cut short mass use of the signs Las Vegas made famous, but by the 1920s the first neon sign appeared in Los Angeles. It said "Packard," as in the car.

Jones himself has been a part of the neon sign tradition in America.

When Mobil Oil used a flying red horse for its logo, Jones was one of four neon artisans who shaped 500 of the service station symbols.

Working in Houston at the time, Jones found that he could make as many of the horses in three hours as any one of his comrades could make in eight hours. He talked the management into letting him make his quota and leave for the day.

"I'd make them faster than the other guys and leave," he says slyly. "I was young and single. It gave me time to frolic around."

The flying horses were particularly difficult to make because of the many curves on the wings and legs of the flying horses. "it would really be a keepsake if you could find one today," Jones said.

During the same period, Ford Motor Co. ordered neon ovals as part of its insignia. Jones said he made 4,000 quarter ovals for 500 signs by holding 5-foot lengths of glass over a torch and flipping them over to achieve the perfect bend.

The job required standing over a 5-foot torch emitting a ribbon of blue flame while wearing an asbestos apron.

It was a difficult job to accomplish and a harder one to do correctly.

And the company owner knew it. That's about the time when a "willy nilly" young efficiency expert tried to tell Jones he couldn't cool off under a tree after making about 20 of the quarter curves.

"He told me I was going to be picking up my last check," says Jones, whose master skills with neon hardly could be replaced in the young industry.

'People Are Just Tired Of Crime'...

Habitual Offenders To Face Harsher Sentences

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Jackson Monroe Martin slumped in his chair and stared at the floor. He couldn't believe he had been sentenced to 99 years in jail for indecent exposure.

"I don't think it's right for me to get that much time for that kind of crime," said Martin, whose 11 prior convictions for burglary enabled the prosecutor to ask for the long sentence.

"Maybe a fine and 30 days, or even a year in the county jail. But not 99 years!" the 42-year-old man complained at his sentencing hearing.

"People are just tired of crime," said Ron Stubblefield, the district attorney in Bryan County, Okla., where Martin received his long sentence. "And they want the repeat offenders off the streets."

Throughout the country, prosecutors are increasingly using habitual criminal codes to seek longer terms.

The stiffer punishment depends on the crime, but can range from the sentence for the next higher class offense — in South Dakota — to life without parole — in Louisiana and Arkansas.

Maine and Pennsylvania are the only states without laws or pending legislation for habitual or repeat offenders, according to a recent Justice Department study done at American University in Washington.

In Ohio, a measure by state Rep. Edward J. Orlett of Dayton calling for mandatory sentencing for some felonies unanimously cleared the state House earlier this month.

The proposed law would require judges to impose an "actual incarceration" period ranging from three to nine years on career criminals.

"Society has a right to protect itself against criminals for a specified period of time," said Orlett, who noted the bill is "the first major change in a decade in the state's criminal sentencing law."

Some law enforcement officials contend early releases by parole boards take the muscle out of prison sentences.

"One reason for the increase in the use of the habitual criminal statute is that there was a realization that a 20-year sentence didn't mean 20 years," said Pete Adams, president of the Louisiana District Attorneys Association.

"It's a better bet to put them away, these people who are constantly costing the taxpayers money. People are realizing rehabilitation is not working. The answer is long sentences."

In 29 states, the habitual criminal charge can be considered on the second felony, according to a study by the Rand Corp. Nineteen states consider the charge upon a third offense, two states consider it on the fourth and three states have increased penalties for the fifth conviction.

Another study by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency indicates that at least 17 states have enacted or have introduced within the past five years legislation directed toward getting career criminals off the streets.

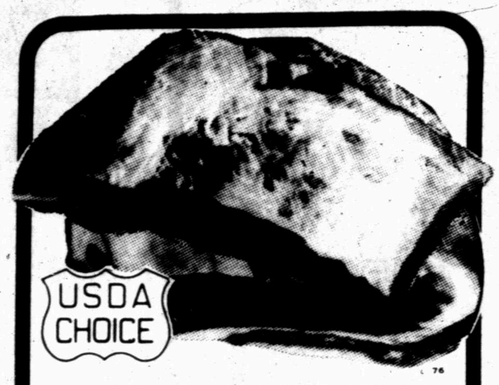

U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter, who was a district attorney in Philadelphia for eight years, has sponsored a bill that would make a third armed robbery or armed burglary conviction a federal offense punishable by at least 15 years in prison.

A study by the senator's staff revealed that robbers serve an average of three years behind bars, and a robber with prior convictions serves an average of only 3½ years.

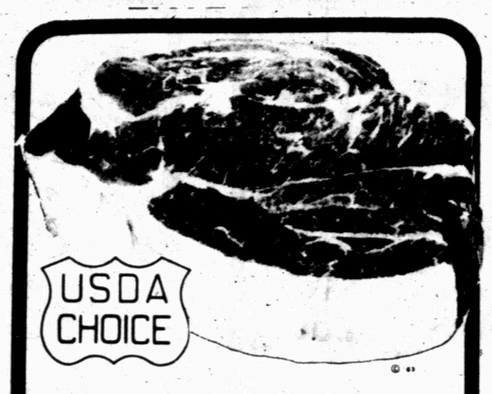

Research based on interviews after arrest revealed professional lawbreakers individually commit 50-100 robberies or 200-400 burglaries a year, said Paul Michele, a spokesman for the Pennsylvania Republican.

Furthermore, 6 percent of those arrested for robbery and burglary commit 60 percent of those crimes, Michele added.

Jim Hightower Is Master Of Drama, Uses Media

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — His scowl mirrors the bad-tempered demeanor of the Longhorn bull that stands behind him in the dusty, West Texas field.

"No More Bull," says the poster's logo, and the cowboy-booted man in the photo with his hands on his on hips is acting the part.

Jim Hightower is a master of drama, a user of media.

That skill helped win him 48 percent of the vote in his first political campaign, a 1980 run at Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent. In that poster, Hightower's arms were folded. The logo was "Enough is Enough."

Who is this macho-looking man who's fed up and meaner than a West Texas bull?

At a news conference in a Safeway parking lot, Hightower prepares to talk about farmers in a depression and consumers who are depressed.

An elderly black woman driving by stops and asks a reporter what is going on.

"Oh, I've heard him on the radio," she says enthusiastically. "Which one is he?" Over there, in the brown suit and cowboy hat. "Oh. Oh, my. He's just a little fella!"

True, Jim Hightower is not a large man, but the macho posters are meant to symbolize not the physical candidate but the big plans he has for the office he now seeks — Texas commissioner of agriculture.

The only snag may be that Hightower the media man has taken on incumbent Reagan Brown, the media's darling.

A fighter of fire ants, Brown once dipped his hand into a fire ant mound for the benefit of a TV camera — then did it again when the crew hadn't gotten the shot.

"He's been saying I'm not qualified to be agriculture commissioner, but I don't go sticking my hand down fire ant holes," Hightower tells a group of delighted supporters before a session of door-to-door campaigning in San Antonio.

The Saturday morning visits caught much of the populace unprepared for company, much less television cameras.

Hightower returned sheepishly from one house where he slipped campaign literature through a cracked door. "There are one million naked voters in San Antonio," he intoned. "That was one of them."

Most of the voters in a middle-class Hispanic neighborhood reacted enthusiastically to Hightower, the most negative response was simple confusion.

"What is it you're running for exactly?" one polite, but sleepy-eyed young man asked.

The speech quickly became familiar.

"Hi. I'm Jim Hightower and I'm runnin' for agriculture commissioner. We're gonna try to do something about those ol' food prices. You'd be for that, wouldn't you?"

Eddie Ortiz first thought Hightower a representative from a religious organization, but warmed up immediately after the campaign speech.

"I'll vote for you. I'm all for that."

Brown says Hightower is leading people astray, that the agriculture commission is largely a regulatory agency, overseeing weights and measures and pesticides, selling Texas products and advising on policy.

Hightower says that's not so.

Giant conglomerates are squeezing out the small farmers, the small businesses, Hightower says.

"Nobody's fighting back against them, and the agriculture department has the authority to fight back," he said in an interview at a restaurant after the day's campaigning. "It's been a sort of dormant office for the past five years, so I want to take it and put it to work for us."

Brown is using a tact similar to Nugent in fighting Hightower, who gained a reputation among conservatives as a wild-eyed liberal during his stint as editor of the Texas Observer.

Hightower, 39, sees himself as an "old-time populist." He says he is eminently qualified to be agriculture commissioner. He served as agricultural aide to then-Sen. Ralph Yarborough and wrote two books on food policy.

"I think I'm going to win. Our easiest job is to get elected," he said. "Our hardest job is once we get elected, will we make any difference? Will life be better for the people we're appealing to?"

Brown has complained that Hightower is running a campaign financed by "socialistic punks back East."

Broad Attack Was Rejected By Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — Former national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski says he told President Jimmy Carter to combine the hostage rescue mission with a broader attack on Iran, but Carter rejected the plan.

In an article in Sunday's New York Times Magazine, Brzezinski said he urged the broader attack to punish the Iranians for seizing the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and holding 52 Americans hostage, and to forestall a feeling of humiliation if the rescue effort failed.

The hostages were freed by the Iranian government Jan. 20, 1981 after 444 days in captivity. The rescue mission April 24, 1980, was aborted after three helicopters were disabled. A helicopter and a transport plane then crashed, killing eight U.S. servicemen.

Brzezinski said Carter rejected an attack on Iran because it would complicate the rescue and heighten international tensions.

Dear Abby

Diet Turns Dog Into Shadow of Former Self

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I live in a condo that has a rule: "No pets weighing over 17 pounds may live on the premises." When I moved here three years ago, Mimi, my French poodle, weighed 16 pounds, 4 ounces, so she was no problem.

Later Mimi put on a little weight, but not enough to make any difference (I thought) until the manager came to my door demanding to weigh her. I later learned that the reweighing of Mimi had been instigated by a neighbor who had a grudge against me because once or twice I broke the rule of no smoking in the elevator.

Well, Mimi weighed 21 pounds, so I was told I couldn't keep her at the condo. I immediately took her to the vet, who assured me that he could get Mimi's weight down to 17 pounds in two weeks, so I left her there.

Two weeks later when I picked Mimi up, I almost didn't recognize her. She weighed 16 pounds, 2 ounces, and she looked sad-eyed and listless. When I got her home she followed me around and whined constantly. Also, she ate practically nothing.

To make a long story short, Mimi died two weeks later. The vet said it was her heart, but I know it was the diet. Now I blame myself for letting that vet put her on that crash diet. It's too late for Mimi, but please print this to let animal lovers know that it is cruel and inhuman to put a dog through what I did. I should have moved and taken my chubby little angel with me.

SELFISH AND SORRY

DEAR SORRY: You meant well, so don't blame yourself. Readers, crash diets are hazardous to your health, too!

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Can you settle an argument? My husband says that Zsa Zsa and Eva Gabor are twins. I say they are not. Who is right?

WANTS TO KNOW IN WISCONSIN

DEAR WANTS: You're right. I have always known that Zsa Zsa was the older, but I wanted to confirm it, so I asked Eva.

Eva replied, "I am younger than Zsa Zsa. But, unfortunately, by only two years."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I agree with "For Equality," concerning the cost of the wedding. Yes, it certainly should be split 50-50 between the bride and the groom (or their families).

But how about the expense of courting? When the couple is dating, in almost every case the male pays for all of it. Shouldn't that be on a 50-50 Dutch-treat basis, too?

Let the feminist groups challenge the age-old tradition of the male always picking up the tab.

FAIR IS FAIR

DEAR FAIR: I'm all for the 50-50 split. Then gone will be the days when a guy buys a girl a chocolate malted and then tries to squeeze it out of her.

Cottle, Fisher, Garza, Jones, Kent, King, Knox, Lynn, Nolan, Scurry, Stonewall, & Rural Taylor
Pol. Ad. paid for by Carriker Campaign Fund, F.A. Loller, Anson, Tx, Treasurer.

STEVE CARRIKER—Steven A. Carriker, candidate for state representative from the 78th district, stopped off in Snyder Tuesday afternoon for an informal coffee and reception in the community room of the West Texas State Bank. Carriker is pictured above, visiting with local school teacher Bobbie Box. Carriker, a Roby native, is running against incumbent state representative Walter Grubb of Merkel in the May 1 democratic primary. Both men are seeking to represent the 78th district made up of Scurry, Cottle, Fisher, Garza, Jones, Kent, King, Knox, Lynn, Nolan, Stonewall and rural Taylor Counties. (SDN Staff Photo)

Heatley Endorses Carriker

W. S. (Bill) Heatley, veteran legislator from Paducah who is not seeking re-election this year, has endorsed Steven A. Carriker to replace him in the legislative seat he has held for the last 28 years.

Heatley endorsed the Roby farmer in an interview aired over Haskell radio station KVRP.

Carriker is opposing Walter Grubbs of Merkel in the race for state representative in the new 78th District. Grubbs, who is representative of a district including part of Abilene, was paired with Rep. Gary Thompson when the new district lines were drawn. He moved his residence to Merkel to run in the new 78th Districct.

Asked if he would support anyone in the race, Heatley replied, "I've met the young man from Roby. I knew his father who was in the legislature years ago and he was a fine man and an honorable man and this young man, Steve Carriker, I'm sure coming from the same stock, would make us a good representative."

The new 78th district includes much of Heatley's present district.

Kmart Observes Anniversary

The 20th anniversary of the first K mart discount department store is being celebrated now with the largest sale in K mart corporation's history.

The event began April 14 and will continue for three weeks. During the celebration, K mart cash registers are expected to ring up more than 60 million transactions.

The first K mart store opened on March 1, 1962, in a Detroit suburb. It was followed that year by 17 other stores in seven states.

Before 1962, the company had a foothold in retailing through Kresge variety stores. With 777 units, 1961 sales were $426 million. In 1981, the more than 2,000 K mart stores accounted for more than 96 percent of K mart corporation's revenues of $16.5 billion.

Today there are K marts in all 48 continental United States, Canada and Puerto Rico. K mart serves practially every large city in the U. S. as well as many smaller communities.

The Snyder K mart store opened in November of 1980. Tom Latos is the local manager.

Although the company has diversified modestly into retail-related areas, the primary emphasis remains on K mart stores. The K mart expansion program continued with 171 openings in 1981.

Founded in 1899 as the S. S. Kresge Company, K mart corporation is now the second-largest general merchandise retailer in the U. S.

Rudd Indicted In Shooting Space

DALLAS (AP) — The man accused of opening fire on passengers in a city bus last month has been indicted on one count of murder and three counts of attempted murder.

A Dallas County grand jury Tuesday returned the indictment against W.K. Rudd Jr., 37, accused of firing a .12-gauge shotgun after boarding the bus March 24. Willis Thomas, 37, was killed and three others were wounded.

The self-styled minister, carrying a shotgun, appeared at a nearby service station minutes after the shooting and asked an employee to call police.

Rudd's attorney said his client will plead innocent by reason of insanity. The charges carry a maximum penalty of three 20-year prison terms and one life term.

HEALTH
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 73 years old. Six months ago I was having great difficulty walking and lots of pain in my lower abdomen. I had tests and the diagnosis was diverticulosis, a little arthritis in my left hip and low potassium. My blood pressure holds at 140 over 70 with one hydrochlorothiazide daily.

I was put on a low residue diet, two potassium pills daily and Naprosyn for arthritis. I don't have pain now and get around better, but I really miss my salads and fresh fruits.

One of my lady friends just went through the exact same tests and he put her on a roughage diet including bran. Her physician says this is the newest treatment for diverticulosis. I would appreciate your comments on these two methods of treatment for diverticulosis.

DEAR READER — Both treatments are still used and the choice often depends upon the individual state of the patient. It is quite true that most doctors today believe that including more bulk in your diet improves bowel function. This, in turn, is less likely to cause problems with diverticula (the little pockets of the colon).

Many authorities think the build-up of pressure inside the colon from poor bowel function is an important factor in causing the little "blow outs" that are the diverticula.

But if there is an acute inflammation of one of the diverticula, like an acute appendicitis, the doctor may not want you to use bulk. The same would apply to a perforation or bleeding from a diverticulum. Your doctor may have been concerned that part of your abdominal pain meant inflammation.

In any case, you should ask him about it. Unless a doctor is very insecure in his ability, he should be able to handle questions patients have about things they have heard or read that seem to conflict with the treatment. If you read anything in my column that varies with your treatment, I would want you to talk to your doctor about it. He is in charge and responsible for your treatment.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-6, Diverticulosis, which discusses current thinking on its management. You can show it to your doctor if you wish. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you comment about hypospadias in your column? I have three sons, now adult, and two were born with this abnormality. Surgery was not necessary as their cases weren't severe. I'd like to know if this condition is inherited. How common is it?

DEAR READER — In the majority of these cases, the urethral opening is underneath the penis rather than at the very tip. When it is on the underneath side of the glans (head), it is not a major problem. But the opening can be along the shaft or even near the scrotom. There may be associated abnormalities, such as cords that bend the organ.

This condition occurs once in every 125 infants. The chances of having it are about five to 10 times greater in first-degree relatives as opposed to the general population. The cause is unknown but some instances may be related to hormones taken during pregnancy. Such infants should NOT be circumcised as the foreskin may be needed in case a repair is required.

Devotes Spare Time To Raising Cockfighters

RAGLAND, W.Va. (AP) — Amon Mahon has devoted much of his spare time over the past 20 years to raising thoroughbreds that would rather fight than run.

Mahon doesn't breed race horses, however. He raises roosters.

"Yes, and these definitely are thoroughbreds," the disabled coal miner says, as he surveys some 50 gamecocks strutting about in the side yard of his rural Mingo County home. "I've devoted a good part of my life to developing these chickens."

Mahon beamed in discussing his feisty feathered friends, each of whom resides in his very own converted oil drum. Doors have been cut into the drums, which are distributed evenly about the yard.

"Each chicken is tied to a length of string, and the drums are spaced so that they can't reach each other," he says. "If somebody would cut the strings, these roosters would have each other torn apart within five minutes."

Mahon realizes many people don't approve of cockfighting. It's illegal in West Virginia and leads to periodic crackdowns. One last February produced more than 50 arrests in neighboring Logan County.

But Mahon argues that "the media" consistently dwell on cockfighting's "most negative aspects."

"I do fight my roosters, but not in West Virginia," he says. "I belong to a private club. I won't say where it is, but the members include doctors and wealthy coal operators. The club pays taxes and hires security people to see that there are no drunks and that nobody gets out of line; we treat each other with respect."

Mahon maintains that rooster fighters are carrying on a noble tradition thousands of years old.

"Why, we've had presidents who raised gamecocks. George Washington loved rooster fighting."

Mahon also loves it, with an open and unabashed passion.

"I always loved to fight game chickens," he says. "When I was just a little boy I used to hoe corn all day long so I could earn 50 cents and buy me a Blue Cornish rooster and fight it. When I was 19, a Freewill Baptist minister gave me my first real game rooster and I've been raising them ever since."

In the arena, the roosters are equipped with steel spurs and they fight to the death.

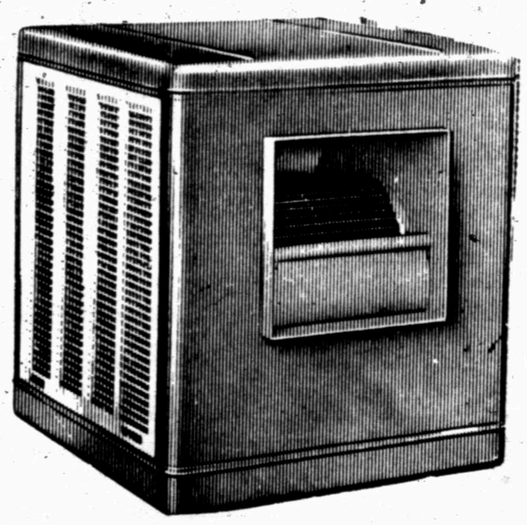

"A fight usually lasts from between 30 seconds to two minutes," he says. "Some people say it's cruel to fight chickens, but I don't think so. You know those eggs you eat in the morning? Well, they probably came from hens that had had their beaks cut off by the growers; now, that's what I call cruel. I'd never do anything like that to one of my roosters."

Amputees Make False Limbs

KHAO-I-DANG CAMP, Thailand (AP) — A unique work program in this sprawling refugee camp has become a testament to resourcefulness and self-help: Cambodians with legs severed by land mines are busy making and fitting their own artificial limbs.

A little more than 10 miles away across the Thai-Cambodian border, Cambodia's three-year-old guerrilla war continues.

But land mines, planted by both Vietnamese-led forces and Khmer Rouge guerrillas, do not distinguish between the fighters and some 100,000 Cambodian civilians huddled at the border.

Sukhom, a pretty 11-year-old Cambodian girl, was washing her feet in a pond when she stepped on a land mine that blew half her leg away.

Kong Houch, 28, was three months pregnant when she went into the forest near the encampment of Nong Samet looking for wood to repair her home. She suffered the same calamity.

Both of them are now receiving aid in this U.N.-run camp where a French and American cooperative effort has set up a workshop producing artificial limbs, and a therapy program on how to walk safely.

The French relief group, "Enfants sans Frontieres," known by the code-name SOS, teamed up with the New Yorkbased Catholic Relief Services (CRS) six months ago and they have since drawn amputees from as far away as hundreds of miles inside Cambodia, according to CRS medical recorhhh

Claude Simonno, a Frenchman from Lyons, moved among a number of amputees working at their benches in tamboowalled workshop.

"We have Khmer Rouge, Kpnlf (the Son Sann resistance faction) and Vietnamese land refugees. At first I was afraid of problems occurring, but now they work very well together," he said.

Simonno is a specialist in prosthetics — the medical replacement of missing limbs — along with five other Frenchmen and one Belgian working for SOS here.

He explained that all artificial limbs were tailor-made for their users. SOS has a main aim of getting the amputees to make their own and about half of some 30 workers are amputees, he said.

The emphasis is on natural materials that are widely available — casts are made from sawdust and glue.

"We first use bamboo, split at one end, to make the casts," added Dr. Joe Jullian of CRS, which has its rehabilitation center just next door.

"Using bamboo is a Cambodian idea, and a good one because the material is very light," he said.

Jullian, from Reading, Pa., said the CRS rehabilitation ward had accepted about 22 patients a month during its eight months of operation.

The ward's 30 beds at any one time are occupied by 15-20 amputees, mostly injured by mines and some by bullets. Some other patients suffer from spinal cord injuries or polio, he said.

Most arrive by ambulance and undergo immediate surgery at the Khao-i-Dang hospital, run by the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC).

"Our idea is to have a center in Khao-i-Dang training people ... to go to the border camps and train others," Simonno said.

He was referring to several border concentrations of Cambodian civilians, the largest at nearby Nong Samet and Nong Chan with about 40,000 each.

Funds from the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) have allowed SOS to open facilities in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh. SOS's ultimate aim was to expand from Phnom Penh to six Cambodian provinces, he said.

The problem is finance.

Of State Universities...

Reorganization Plan Proposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tuition at state universities would jump 300 percent if a tuition hike proposed by the governor's task force on higher education is adopted, a state legislator complained.

Democratic Rep. Arnold Gonzales of Corpus Christi planned a Capitol rally today to protest Tuesday's task force recommendation.

Beside tuition hikes, the task force also recommended doubling state appropriations for teacher salaries to $10 billion and reorganizing the state university system.

However, Jim Kaster, Gov. Bill Clements' legislative aide, said the proposed teacher pay hike is unrealistic and predicted the proposed realignment could not win legislative approval.

"For that kind of money you are talking about a state income tax, which the Legislature won't pass," said Kaster.

The task force said the 1983 Legislature should raise tuition to cover 8 percent of the actual cost of an education at a state university, and increase the amount by 2 percent a year until it reaches 16 percent of the cost.

Currently, the task force said the tuition paid by Texans covers just 4 percent of the actual cost of education.

Gonzales said that proposal means a 100 percent increase in 1983 and a 50 percent increase every year for the next four.

"Higher tuition will mean fewer students in the state can afford a college education," he said.

Texas residents now pay a mimimum of $50 a semester for a full course load. The task force did not offer any specifics on how much the tuition would increase. Students also pay fees, which often are much higher than tuition.

Non-Texans should pay sufficient tuition to cover 75 percent of the acutal cost, instead of the current 44 percent, the task force said.

The proposed realignment of state universities would maintain the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems but place all other univerisities into one of four regional systems, referred to as "West Texas, south of San Antonio, the upper Gulf Coast region, and North and East Texas."

Generation Of Power May Decrease At Dam

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Electricity could cost more this summer for some customers in parts of six midwestern and southern states if the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers keeps a promise made Tuesday to stop pump-back operations at Truman Dam.

Officials of the Southwestern Power Administration, the agency that sells electricity from corps projects, said Tuesday that the dam's annual power output could fall by 21.1 percent if the pump-backs are halted to stop the fish kills they have caused in the past. Such action would force the agency to buy higher-priced electricity from other sources in order to meet the summer's peak power demands.

The pump-back operation uses the dam's turbines to pump water back into the reservoir, to generate hydroelectric power again when needed. The corps said Tuesday that it would suspend pump-backs until it is sure it can prevent fish kills caused by the operation.

A ton of fish, sucked into the dam's turbines, was estimated to have been destroyed during pump-back tests last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Armstrong Poor Boy In Demo Primary Field

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Perhaps the best measure of 1982 Texas politics is that Bob Armstrong, rancher-lawyer-pilot-land commissioner, is the poor boy in the Democratic gubernatorial primary field.

"Somebody said, 'You ought to have a singing group like (former Gov.) Pappy Lee O'Daniel did. Except you could call your group Bob Armstrong and the Light Crust No-Dough Boys,'" Armstrong said during a campaign swing.

Armstrong is not a no-dough boy. His father was a Ford dealer when Ford dealers made money. His three children go to expensive private schools, including Amherst in Massachusetts and Hockaday in Dallas.

But compared to his Democratic opponents are expected to spend, Armstrong is a pauper. Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple is heir to timber and publishing fortunes. Attorney General Mark White has been able to tap big-money sources.

That leaves Armstrong with a campaign of people, faces and names. Armstrong, an affable 49-year-old, told a San Angelo supporter, "This is what I do for a living and I enjoy it."

His airborne campaign toured West and North Texas this past week. The candidate sometimes took the controls of the four-seat, single-engine Cessna campaign plane, a 1968 aircraft with a new paint job. It's owned by Armstrong and several friends, the "Pot Bellied Pilots, Inc."

Armstrong supporters along the way were enthusiastic, if not legion. The drill was similar in each town, a supporter picked up Armstrong and fed him names of people who would be at the local event.

Armstrong played the rancher role at the Mexican lunch in Lubbock. "I know what it's like to borrow to feed. I just made the decision to feed through the winter and wait for prices to go up," said Armstrong, who has a ranch in Liberty Hill in Central Texas.

The code word for Armstrong — it was heard at several stops — is "good Democrat," meaning he was willing to go down with the George McGovern and Jimmy Carter presidential ships. Armstrong headed those efforts in Texas.

Neva Hall, a white-haired, 82-year-old stenographer, said she likes Armstrong because he reminds her of Harry Truman.

It's an image Armstrong has cultivated. He spent $200,000 on TV ads showing him quoting Truman about elections not being for sale.

Armstrong said the ads have been effective. Now it may be a question of whether Armstrong can get enough money to run enough ads before May 1.

"There's no truth to the rumor that Harry Truman is now leading the governor's race in Texas," Armstrong said at West Texas Democrats' headquarters here, across the street from Snidely Whiplash's Pawn Shop.

Armstrong believes the old-fashioned whirlwind tours should be more valuable than television time. He just wants voters to remember the Armstrong name.

"I hope they'll vote for Jack Armstrong or Neil Armstrong or Anne Armstrong," said Bob Armstrong, plugging a chaw of Levi Garrett into his mouth.

"Liberals support me, moderates support me, conservatives support me. Willie Nelson supports me," he said. Nelson sent $25,000, the largest single contribution, in lieu of a Houston benefit concert that could not be arranged.

As the Lubbock stop ended, the "poor" candidate tucked campaign donation checks into his wallet.

"There's three of them. We're leaving Lubbock with a little airplane money," he said.

The Austin native said he, Temple and White have similar ideas on many issues. Their ideas, basically, are traditionally Democratic. Education is a top campaign priority with all three. The No. 1 priority is to get rid of Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

Armstrong says he has done a better job as land commissioner than White has done as attorney general or Temple has done as a state representative or railroad commissioner.

For three terms, Armstrong has run the land office, which manages state-owned lands and mineral leases on the land. The money raised is dedicated to public schools. The total has jumped from $65 million a year to $778 million a year during Armstrong's 11 years.

There were no huge crowds in Lubbock, but Armstrong seemed pleased, especially because the television cameras turned out for the news conference. Each TV news crew that shows up is worth $1,500 worth of TV ads, said Armstrong.

Excitement about the governor's race has been slow in coming, said Armstrong.

"It's been very flat up until now. I felt like I was walking through molasses," he said.

At the Lubbock airport, Armstrong acts like a kid at a car show, leaning to look into several small planes. Each one is the plane he "would really" like to have, until he looks into the next one.

Earlier, in Amarillo, the Armstrong for Governor campaign was delayed so the candidate could watch the Space Shuttle landing on television.

Armstrong piloted his plane to San Angelo. Local lawyer Sam Sparks picked him up at a hotel. Already on board the lushly carpeted van are Dain Whitworth and former U.S. Rep. Bob Gammage, two candidates for the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin.

Sparks said the first stop would be Al Celaya for County Clerk headquarters, where about 12 Mexican-Americans are meeting. Sparks said the group is leaning toward Temple, but a few handshakes couldn't hurt.

It was a quietly tense meeting, with one of the local Mexican-Americans complaining about a "great gap between the Hispanics and the Anglos" in politics.

No promises were made and no support offered. Pete Chapa, chairman of the group, thanked Armstrong for coming by to see how the group operates. Armstrong, who really did not see how they operate, thanked them.

Why the tension? Back in the van, Armstrong says, "It's west," adding that racial tension has left scars in West Texans.

More than 200 people showed up for a rally. The chili, rumored to be the worst on the circuit, is gone by the time Armstrong shows up.

Soviets Bad Guys In Nuke Race, Bush Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush today accused the Soviet Union of spurning repeated attempts to end the atomic weapons race and insisted the United States "has nothing to apologize for in its efforts to bring this nuclear madness under control."

Trying to put Moscow on the defensive in the propaganda battle over nuclear weapons, Bush said the Kremlin has a "historic record of poor cooperation in reducing the nuclear threat," beginning with its rejection of a plan presented at the United Nations in 1946 for international control of atomic bombs.

In the 1950s, Bush said, President Dwight Eisenhower unsuccessfully tried to sell Russia numerous proposals to control nuclear weapons and divert atomic use to peaceful purposes.

"Eisenhower was not alone in his frustration," Bush said in a speech. "Every American president since has heard the resounding Soviet 'nyet' to U.S. appeals to control the growth of nuclear arsenals."

Bush's speech, before a National Public Radio audience, coincided with the fourth day of Ground Zero Week, a nationwide campaign of speeches and demonstrations organized by a Washington-based anti-nuclear lobby.

The vice president said the Reagan administration welcomed a national debate on arms control and the emergence of a nuclear freeze as part of that discussion.

"Not freezing, but reducing nuclear weapons is one of this administration's highest priorities," Bush said.

In rejecting a freeze, Bush said the United States first must increase its nuclear arsenal to attain "parity with the Soviet Union, so that any negotiated freeze will not result in a U.S. or Western European disadvantage."

"Some, of course, argue that any increase of U.S. nuclear weapons or delivery systems will only motivate the Soviets to produce more and more of their own weapons and delivery systems," he said. "I don't accept that."

Over the past 35 years, Bush said, the Soviet Union has moved steadily toward superiority in conventional forces and a nuclear force advantage "in some important areas" over the United States and its European allies.

"During the past decade the United States has reduced the number of nuclear weapons based in Western Europe," he said. "In fact, our nation's nuclear stockpile is at its lowest level in 20 years.

"In response to our decade-long, de facto freeze, the Soviets have deployed more than 250 multiple-warhead SS-20s since 1975 and have begun modernization of their tactical nuclear forces with an entire generation of shorter range missiles.

"It is precisely for this reason that European leaders don't want a freeze — and have told us exactly that," the vice president said.

A freeze proposal by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., has won support of 24 senators and 166 House members.

Channels Islands...

Offers View Of History

ST. PETER PORT, Guernsey, Channel Islands (AP) — Many Americans probably know the names of some of the islands in the English Channel without realizing it.

Jersey, Guernsey and Alderney cows are named after the Channel Islands, on which the strains were developed.

Agriculture is big business in the Channel Islands — not only dairying, but growing flowers and vegetables.

The word "Guernsey" derives from the old Norman "Grenezay" ("Green Isle"), and this tells you something else about the islands. They're nearer to the French coast than they are to England. Alderney is only nine miles from France.

Day-trippers come over to Jersey from St. Malo on the hydrofoil — to shop in the dutyfree markets and sun on the beaches. Some of the islanders still speak a Norman patois.

The islands were part of William the Conquerer's Duchy of Normandy when he crossed the English Channel (Battle of Hastings, 1066) to become King William I of England. They remained loyal to the Crown when King John of England lost the rest of Normandy in the early 13th century. But they have their own parliaments, currency and postage.

The vacationer is reminded of history everywhere he goes — by forts, castles, caves used by smugglers of yore, and bunkers left behind by the German occupiers of World War II.

But there's much more than that — including beaches for every taste, and a warmer, sunnier climate than the British and others who vacation here often find back home.

On the island of Sark, two square miles in size, you have to be sure-footed to reach the rock-and-sand beaches, down winding, wooded trails. Five people is a crowd down there. Up above, you'll have explored the farms and other sights on foot, horseback or a bike, or by horse-cart. No cars allowed.

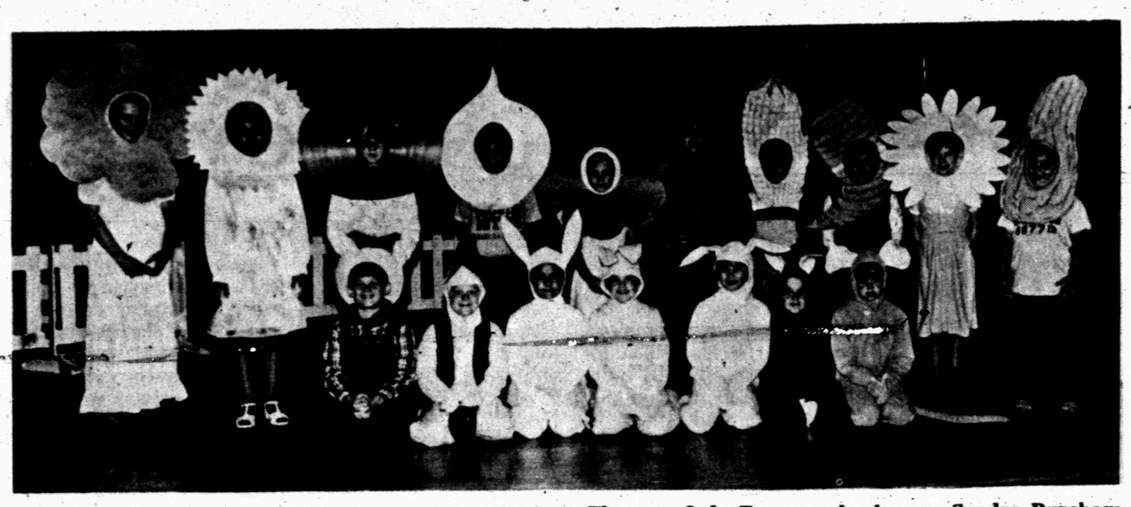

Sark is ruled in feudal style by a line of hereditary seigneurs dating back to the days of Queen Elizabeth I of England.

Jersey is the biggest of the Channel Islands — 45 square miles. At St. Brelade's Bay, there's a big, sandy beach with a boardwalk lined with little stores and lots of people, strolling along as they eat cones of rich Jersey ice cream, or sitting taking tea in the sun. But elsewhere — at l'Etaq, for instance — you can have a beach almost to yourself. And the same can be said for the other islands.

Channel Islands: other islands.

Jersey is where Lillie Langtry, the actress known for her beauty and her affair with King Edward VII, was born.

The port of Gorey, in Jersey, is dominated by Mont Orgueil Castle, with centuries of history — from 12th century St. Mary's crypt and 13th century St. George's Tower to Nazi bell bombs left over from World War II.

To Theater...

Organ Music Draws Crowds

NORTH TONAWANDA, N.Y. (AP) — Old-time music junkies from miles around find satisfaction in a grand old theater here, as organists still hold court every month on one of the world's remaining Mighty Wurlitzers.

"I guess I'm an old fogey, but I love it," said Bill Ackendorf, a self-described regular at the concerts. "I'm from the rock 'n' roll era, and I like that, but I like this, too."

From 1910 to about 1934, this Buffalo suburb was home to the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., which built the massive pipe organs for use in silent movie theaters.

Called "unit orchestras" then, the organs enabled theater managers to replace hard-to-find musicians with what amounted to a one-man band. With the advent of talking motion pictures, the organs faded in popularity.

At the Riviera Theater, a Wurlitzer installed in 1926 has three keyboards, about 3,000 pipes, 16 pedals, and 25 buttons controlling a host of independent instruments.

Along with 19 separate instrumental sounds — including drums, chimes, cymbals, marimbas, castinets, bells and a piano — are such "extras" as wolf whistles, the chirping of birds, a roaring ocean surf, the trotting of a horse and a Bronx cheer.

Since 1963, the Niagara Frontier Theater Organ Society has lovingly cared for the massive instrument, drawing performers from as far away as Germany, Australia, France, England and Japan, said Randy Piazza, its president and concert emcee.

At a recent concert, Betty Ackendorf said the usually packed house often included people from "a hundred-mile radius, 50 percent with tape recorders in their laps."

In West Germany...

Party Is Little Known

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Established political parties in West Germany used to play on fear of communism and warn against the Reds. Now, they fear the Greens.

Formed two years ago from an assortment of "alternative" and ecological movements, the Greens political party has just 20,000 members.

Most are young, aged between 18 and 35. Some are 50-or 60-year-olds determined to improve the world now that they are out of the career race and their children are grown.

They stand for more than windmills and solar energy over nuclear power. They want a demilitarized Europe over NATO and the Warsaw Pact, a humane, clean environment over the technocratic society they contend is making us ill.

In keeping with the motley assortment of membership and the Greens' proclaimed desire to be "democratic from the roots," party meetings are haphazard affairs. Women knit and breast-feed their babies and gangling, bearded youths in baggy sweaters roll their own cigarettes.

In a country where most burghers still don their finest clothes to go for their constitutional Sunday walk, the Greens' political style hardly seems destined to strike fear into the established political parties, the ruling Social Democrats of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, or the opposition conservatives, the Christian Democrats.

But they have reason to worry. In 1979, even before the Greens became a nationwide party, a "Green Alternative List" had already won representation in the parliament of one of West Germany's 11 states, the city-state of Bremen.

In the spring of 1980, the Greens surpassed the 5 percent barrier necessary to gain parliamentary seats at all in West Germany and four deputies won their way into state parliament in Baden-Wuerttemberg, the southwestern region that includes Stuttgart and Heidelberg.

In state elections in Lower Saxony this March 21, the Greens won 11 seats in the legislature, one more than the mainstream Free Democrats who are the junior partners in the Bonn coalition government.

Opinion polls give the Greens a good chance of getting into state parliaments in polls in Hamburg in June and in Hesse in September because of their increasing power to draw votes from leftists discontented with Schmidt's Social Democrats.

The shiver that is going through the institutions as a result rests on more than electoral triumphs.

For the Greens are more than a party. As one of their leaders, Lukas Beckmann, put it: "This is a movement, a way of life."

The "movement's" talk puts that in perspective. A "Green man" in West Germany is not a pub, as it would be in England, or an inexperienced guy, as he might be in the United States.

Man Collects Lawn Mowers

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — To many homeowners, lawn mowers are a necessary evil which haunt the summer months.

But to Ray Leisure, the droning of a lawn mower is a symphony he never gets tired of hearing.

In fact, the 67-year-old retired maintenance worker has 150 used lawn mowers at his home and he has turned his garage into a workshop for broken mowers.

A mountain of dead lawn mowers decorates the front, back and inside of his garage.

"That lawn mower stuff gets in your blood," he said.

Leisure gets his lawn mowers in a variety of ways. Some are dropped off at his place, others he buys, and a few are salvaged from the trash.

Of the mowers he works with, the older ones are better made, he said. The new mowers have fuel-mixing valves instead of real carburetors like the older ones, he said. Newer mowers also have plastic wheels that are "so cheap they don't hold up."

Many of the repairs he makes are a result of people's abusing their mowers by running over tree stumps and other things.

"They put more value in a $5 iron than they do in a $100 lawn mower," he said.

The coming months, when the grass begins to grow, are Leisure's busiest time of the year. During slow times, his garage workshop becomes a meeting place.

"This is a good headquarters for guys to come over to," he said. "We loaf a little, brag a little, lie a little."

Leisure said his other hobbies are fishing and watching Little League games.

One thing you won't find him doing is mowing grass.

His wife does that, he said, because, "I can't cut it to suit her."

"If you want to talk about discounts on homeowners insurance, talk to me."

Chances are, I can make low prices on State Farm homeowners insurance even lower for you.

Tigers Win, 3-1 To Hold Top Spot

PECOS—The Snyder Tigers broke a six-inning drought and scored three runs in the seventh inning to overcome the Pecos Eagles, 3-1, last night to assure themselves of at least a tie for first half honors in the District 2-AAAA baseball race.

The three-run outburst, which the Tigers generated with two base hits, a walk and a hit batsman, climaxed a pitching duel between Pecos' Bobby Rayos and Snyder's John Wilson. The Eagles had managed to put together a couple of one-base hits and a base on balls to claim at 1-0 lead in the fifth. Up that time, Wilson had handcuffed the Eagles without a hit.

Barry Davis led off the seventh with a base on balls, and Rayos then hit pinchhitter Trey Harlin with a pitch. David Rios delivered a single to send Kirk Herrley, pinch runner for Davis, home with the tying run. Rayos walked Curtis Gafford and Brent Roemisch sacrificed Harlin home to give the Tigers the lead for the first time. Wilson rapped a single to score Rios and put the game away.

Wilson gave up only three hits, including a double to the leadoff man in the bottom of the seventh, However, he struck out the next batter and got the other two outs on an infield grund ball and a fly to lft.

Rayos was touched for only four hits by the Tigers. He struck out 10, while Wilson fanned nine.

It was Wilson's seventh victory of the season against one loss. Rayos absorbed his second loss of the season. He has won four.

The Tigers, now 5-0 in district play and 17-5 for the season will host the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes Friday at Moffett Field.

Blyleven's Magic Curbs Ranger Bats

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — When Bert Blyleven is hot, no pitcher in the American League is hotter.

On good nights, Blyleven throws opposing batters a blistering 90-mph fastball with pin-point control plus what's conceded to be the best curve in the world.

In baseball, the slang term for a curve is "Charley." A good curve ball is called "Uncle Charlie."

The players call Blyleven's curve "LORD CHARLES."

"He should never get batted out of the box," said Blyleven's field boss Cleveland manager Dave Garcia. "The kind of stuff he's got, they should never string 10 or 12 hits together and bat him out of the box. I'm very pleased with him."

The occasion for Garcia's praise was a 9-4 Indian win Tuesday over the Texas Rangers. However, Blyleven did not finish the game. Garcia pulled the right hander after seven innings with Blyeven's consent.

"I threw 115 pitches in seven innings," said Blyleven, 2-0, "and I only pitched 10 innings in spring training so my arm is still in the building-up stage. Plus I had a 6-run lead — I'll turn that over to anybody."

That lead came courtesy of the Cleveland hitters and Texas pitcher Charlie Hough, 2-1, whose knuckleball retired the first ten Indian hitters, then was battered for six consecutive base hits in the fourth inning.

"I can't tell when I'm going to lose it," Hough said. "I was going pretty well, getting some guys out then I hit a groove where everything I threw went right down the middle. Bang, bang. I had good control and felt alright, I just threw some lousy pitches."

Toby Harrah extended his hitting streak to nine straight games, with a fourth-inning single that began the uprising against Hough. And heavy hitting Andre Thornton chimed in with a double and his fourth homerun of the season for three RBIs. In addition, Ron Hassey, Bake McBride and Jerry Dybzinski had two RBI apiece for the Indians.

Texas' Buddy Bell also ran a hitting string to nine straight with a two-run double in the fourth.

Braves Raise Sights After Setting Record

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sportswriter

The Atlanta Braves broke a major league record with 12 victories to start the 1982 baseball season and immediately leveled their sights at a goal they haven't reached in more than two decades.

"This doesn't mean anything if we don't go all the way," Braves right fielder Claudell Washington said.

The Braves have won their division only once, in 1969, since abandoning the city of Milwaukee 16 years ago. In fact, the Braves have not won an NL pennant since 1958, the year after Lew Burdette hurled a string of 24 scoreless innings in Milwaukee's seven-game World Series triumph over the New York Yankees.

"I'm pleased. I just hope it doesn't end here," Washington said after driving in the tie-breaking run with a triple and scoring on a wild pitch in Atlanta's 4-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Tuesday night.

The victory broke the modern major league record of 11 victories to open a season set by the 1981 Oakland A's. The Braves eclipsed the old National League mark of 10 in a row by the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers and 1962 Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday when they beat Hoston 6-5.

Cincinnati took a 2-0 lead in the second inning, giving the highly vocal crowd of 37,268 in Atlanta a brief scare. Reds pitcher Frank Pastore and Eddie Milner drove in the runs.

Chris Chambliss got Atlanta started with a homer in the bottom of the second to cut the Reds' lead to 2-1.

The Braves scored three runs in the third inning to take the lead and notch their fifth victory coming from behind. Rafael Ramirez started the rally with a homer, and, one out later, Glenn Hubbard walked. Hubbard scored on Washington's triple off the top of the center field fence, and Washington scored when Pastore threw a wild pitch.

Steve Bedrosian got the victory with 41-3 innings in relief of Tommy Boggs, and Gene Garber pitched the final three innings for his third save.

In the rest of the league, St. Louis defeated Pittsburgh 7-4, the New York Mets edged the Chicago Cubs 3-2, San Diego pummeled San Francisco 8-4 and Los Angeles clobbered Houston 10-2.

Streak Stops At 8...

Yankees Bring Chisox To Earth

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sportswriter

After flying high over the American League West, the Chicago White Sox finally came down to earth. It was quite a thud, too.

Shackled on one hit for six innings by Steve Trout, the New York Yankees broke through for seven runs in the seventh inning and went on to an 11-2 rout of the previously-unbeaten White Sox Tuesday night that stopped Chicago's winning streak at eight games.

"We didn't expect to get 16 hits on a cold night like this," New York's Lou Piniella said after a raw night in Comiskey Park. "But that's baseball. You can never tell."

Temperatures dipped into the 30s and snow flurries dropped intermittently throughout the game.

According to Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, the White Sox were under no pressure to keep their streak going. "But," he said, "we're not happy we lost. It was a game we wanted to win, especially after we had a 2-0 lead."

That was wiped out by the Yankees' big seventh, which was highlighted by two-run singles by Rick Cerone and Willie Randolph. The Yankees sent 13 men to the plate in the seventh. They collected eight singles and then scored three more runs in the ninth.

Despite the defeat, Trout said, "I was extremely pleased with my performance. You can't go undefeated all year. Somebody had to get the first loss. We were just destined to lose. Maybe this defeat will bring us back to reality."

The victory went to Yankee starter Mike Morgan, but Morgan was unable to loosen up after the Yankee's 37-minute rally in the seventh and he gave way first to Shane Rawley and then Goose Gossage and George Frazier. "He'll be all right," Yankee Manager Bob Lemon said of Morgan. "It was too cold and he just couldn't get loose. It gave me a chance to give the other guys some work, especially Goose."

Gossage faced six batters, walking three and striking out two.

Elsewhere in the AL, Seattle beat California 6-4; Detroit blanked Kansas City 8-0; Cleveland routed Texas 9-4; Boston stopped Baltimore 8-3 and Oakland beat Minnesota 4-3 in 16 innings. Cold weather postponed the Toronto-Milwaukee game.

Mariners 6, Angels 4

Gaylord Perry moved closer to the 300-victory plateau as he struck out 13 California batters to lead Seattle past the Angels.

Manny Castillo and Todd Cruz each drove in two runs to back Perry, who gained his 298th career victory and snapped California's seven-game winning streak. The 43-year-old right-hander, recording a season-high strikeout total for the majors, earned his first victory in three decisions as a Mariner.

Perry struck out every batter in the Angels' starting lineup at least once with the exception of Tim Foli in the 71-3 innings he worked before giving way to Mike Stanton.

The 13 strikeouts set a Mariner club record and increased Perry's career total to 3,359, number two on the all-time list. Walter Johnson had 3,508.

Through the 1981 season, the New York Jets had played the Pittsburgh Steelers six times in regular season play without beating them.

Area Youths In All-Star Game

Seven district-wide athletes, including three from the Snyder area, have been named to play in the annual six man all-star games, held in conjunction with the Six Man Coaching School in July.

Area competitors Kenny Riley of Hermleigh, Jym Rinehart of Borden County and James Crowder of Ira have been chosen along with Greg Beasley and Herbert Beaver of Trent, Frank Pena of Grady and Tim Stevenson of Highland.

Riley, Rinehart, Beasley and Beaver will compete in the All-Star Football Game, while the other three athletes will participate in the All-Star Basketball Game.

The football game will be held in the afternoon, and the basketball game in the evening, of July 17.

Football coaches will be Pat Mauser of Whitharral for the West team and Robert Lee of Mullins for the East. Basketball coaches will be Ken Peel of Wellman for the West and Larry Eiler of Priddy for the East.

The coaching school and all-star games will be held in Stephenville. The school begins July 11.

Nicklaus Entry Gives New Orleans A Boost

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The late entry of Jack Nicklaus and an increased purse have provided a double-barreled boost to the USF&G-New Orleans Classic, this week's stop on pro golf tour.

Nicklaus, generally considered the finest player the game has produced and the holder of a record 17 major professional titles, had not included the tournament on his personal schedule. But he filed a surprise entry shortly before the deadline last weekend.

Nicklaus has not won this season, but played well early in the year and challenged in the Masters, his last start, before a balky putter dropped him out of the top 10.

He has been second in two events, however, once lost in a playoff and ranks among the major contenders in the 156 man field that will be chasing one of the biggest prizes of the year, $72,000 to the winner.

The total purse originally was listed at $350,000. An increase to $400,000 was announced by ohe sponsors two weeks ago.

The presence of Nicklaus and the larger purse must have come as welcome news to ESPN, the all-sports cable television network. It will make its first live telecast of a PGA Tour event, providing coverage of portions of all four three rounds, beginning Thursday, and will repeat taped highlights later each day.

Although Nicklaus is in the field, Tom Watson ranks as the man to beat on the 7,080-yard, par-72 Lakewood Country Club course. And that hasn't happened in the decade of the 1980s.

Watson has won this tournament the last two seasons and is seeking a rare, third consecutive title, a feat that has been accomplished only twice since World War II. And Watson was the last to do it, sweeping the Byron Nelson Classic three years in a row beginning in 1978.

Watson, aggressively seeking to regain the money-winning crown he surrendered last season, has won twice already this year and has been sixth or better in his last three starts.

Among the leading challengers are Lanny Wadkins, who scored his second victory of the season last Sunday in the prestigious Tournament of Champions, Andy Bean and veteran Ray Floyd.

Other standouts are Bob Shearer, winner of the Tallahassee Open last Sunday, John Mahaffey and Hubert Green.

Perry Gets 298th Win

SEATTLE (AP) — Gaylord Perry moved closer to the 300-victory plateau Tuesday night as he struck out 13 California batters to lead the Seattle Mariners past the Angels 6-4.

Manny Castillo and Todd Cruz each drove in two runs to back Perry, who notched his 298th career victory and snapped California's seven-game winning streak. The 43-year-old righthander, recording a season-high strikeout total for the majors, earned his first victory in three decisions as a Mariner.

Perry struck out every batter in the Angels' starting lineup at least once with the exception of Tim Foli in the 71-3 innings he worked before giving way to Mike Stanton.

Teen-Agers May Still Sign Up

Teen-age baseball league sign-ups will continue Thursday as tryouts begin at 5 p. m. at Moffett Field.

All youngsters aged 13-15 who are interested in playing in the Teen-age league are urged to come out Thursday and sign up. More players are needed to fill the rosters of the teams. So far, not enough players have signed up for the league to operate, league spokesmen reported.

Bullets Win On Mahorn's Late Surge

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Rick Mahorn scored all 16 of his points in the second half to spark the Washington Bullets to a 96-83 victory over the New Jersey Nets Tuesday night in their National Basketball Association playoff series opener.

Mahorn, a second-year forward from Hampton Institute, shot seven for 10 in the last two quarters as the Bullets, making their 13th playoff appearance in the last 14 years, erased a 10-point, third-quarter deficit.

Dibbs Almost Too Late With Rally

DALLAS (AP) — Eddie Dibbs says he had trouble keeping his mind on his game, and has only played in five World Championship of Tennis tournaments this year.

"I just never got into it and have been relaxing most of the time in Florida," said Dibbs.

The 31-year-old Brooklyn native almost relaxed too long, falling behind 4-2 in the first set of his match Tuesday with Tomas Smid before he stormed back to take a 6-4, 7-6, 6-3 quarterfinal victory in the $300,000 WCT finals.

"I was pretty lucky to get back into it. The first two sets could have gone either way," said Dibbs.

Things went pretty much Smid's way until Dibbs reorganized his basline attack and reeled off four straight wins against the Czechoslovakian to win the first set.

The two played even in the second set, which Dibbs took in a tiebreaker 7-4.

"Winning the tiebreaker in the second set was the key for me, it would have been difficult for him (Smid) to come back and win three straight sets," Dibbs said.

Dibbs, the tournament's fourth seed, will meet the winner of Thursday's match between top-seeded John McEnroe and eight-seeded Bill Scanlon. Second seed Ivan Lendl meets seventh-seed Wojtek Fibak tonight and Jose Luis Clerc, the No. 3 seed, takes on sixth-seeded Vijay Amritraj Friday.

Dibb's victory guarantees him prize money of at least $25,000.

Smid, who was the tour's second leading money leader— earning $242,000— takes home $10,000 for the first round loss. The tournament's top prize is $150,000.

The 1982 event marks the fourth time Dibbs has been in the WCT finals, his best finish was runner up in 1978 when he lost to Vitas Gerulaitis.

Desert Gardening?...

Economical Way To Grow

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — In the high desert north of here, Sonrise Ranch harnesses the arid environment in a test of technology for the poorest of the poor.

The 6.5-acre ranch is an operation of Food for the Hungry, an international relief agency with headquarters several miles away at the city's airpark.

Darron Miller, ranch director, says its goal is to produce food for pennies, to take existing technology and make the bridge to the Third World.

Years ago, the agency's founder and president, Larry Ward, remarked while flying over a sea of flat roofs in Calcutta, India, that someday he would like to see a garden on each roof with a solar collector beside it.

That began the dream of the desert center here.

"Aridzona," as it's known, offers an environment similar to that of the East African countries where Food for the Hungry concentrates a lot of its relief work.

Simple, inexpensive and nonrevolutionary techniques — such as solar cookers and gardening projects — are put through trial runs at the ranch before the ideas are shipped overseas with Food for the Hungry volunteers.

For instance, a solar reflector panel absorbs the winter sun's rays, directing them toward a pot suspended on a redwood frame. The simple solar cooker costs $10 to $15, Miller said. If native materials are substituted for the redwood frame, the cost could be trimmed further.

It takes about 15 minutes for a pot of water to boil. If the cooker is positioned correctly toward the sun, a piece of paper can catch fire in seconds, he added.

One of the first testing grounds for the cooker is the East African nation of Somalia.

"I've got 80 illiterate wom h using it right now," said Darrell Phippen, 27, who recently returned from a 3½-month stay in Somalia.

He said the cooker can cut wood consumption in half, saving hours of work. Somalians must walk nine to 12 hours to gather a four-day wood supply, he explained.

Besides cooking, harnessing the sun also can be used to extend growing periods in greenhouses and to speed the decomposition of waste materials through dehydration, Miller said. Those techniques have yet to be tested on the ranch, which has been in operation since October.

Food for the Hungry also uses other natural resources, such as the wind and soil, to create food-production technology for the Third World.

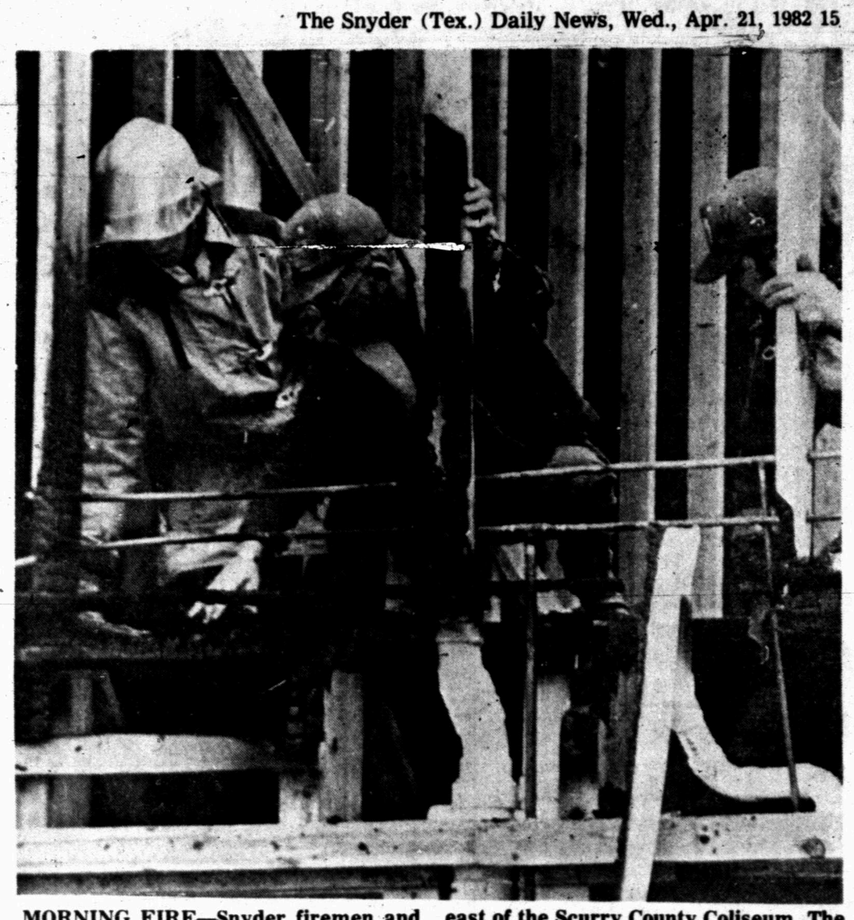

Outside the ranch house, a "French intensive" garden was being prepared — an idea borrowed from France, where urban gardens are cramped by lack of space.

A garden twice the depth of a normal one is dug and fertilized with organic materials. Three to four varieties of plants are grown in the space normally occupied by one.

Vertical gardening is another innovation being tested at the ranch. It involves positioning plants one above the other to catch water trickling down, thereby conserving water.

Sonrise Ranch isn't used to produce food for overseas shipment but rather to test technology, train volunteers and house conferences and seminars.

Volunteers must raise their own money for the trips to their overseas assignments, and the assignments are of varying lengths. They are encouraged to bring all the supplies and provisions they'll need during their stay.

MORNING FIRE—Snyder firemen and construction workers with the O. T. Tilley Construction Company worked to extinguish a small fire at the new Best Western Motel, under construction just east of the Scurry County Coliseum. The fire reportedly broke out around 11:30 a.m. Tuesday. The west wall and floor of one unit on the motel's second floor were damaged in the blaze. (SDN Staff Photo)

Tenn. and writes poetry, hence the pen name.

He left that city Oct. 10 and has been on the road, off and on, ever since.

"Periodically I run out of money and then I stop and work for awhile," he explained.

In fact, that is what Dandi is doing in Snyder, temporarily working as a cook for the Smorgasbord.

Dandi's actual road time is 47 days. Along the way he has had two accidents and sustained injuries such as a broken hand, stitches, and a broken collar bone.

He is into bicycle racing and when he arrives in Colorado Springs he will be cooking for a cycling camp conducted by the U. S. Olympic Committee under auspices of the U. S. Cycling Federation.

Dandi, a vegetarian and health food specialist, said he hopes to be of help to the U. S. cycling team.

Dandi, who is 37 years old, said he just decided to strike out because he wanted to see the country. "If I had waited until I had the money I would still be waiting," he said.

Dandi admits to being a loner and said traveling by himself does not bother him.

Of the states he has cycled through thus far, Dandi said he likes Texas the best. "Texas has the friendliest people and the nicest roads."

For someone who "has never pitched a tent before," Dandi said he is having the "most incredible experience."

Dandi first got into cycling about six years go. He has ridden about 80,000 to 100,000 miles on a bicycle. To be a racer once has to train for 200-400 miles a week he said.

"The highlight of this trip has been meeting John Howard in Houston," Dandi said. Howard is a triathalon winner and four time national cycling champion, among his other cycling honors.

Other than that though, Dandi said he did not like Houston because "of the heavy traffic."

Dandi also rides a 10 speed which has been adapted to be a racing cycle.

He said he travels from 100-125 miles a day and that it took him a week to travel from Houston to Snyder.

"I'm glad to be able to see Texas in the spring time," he said. "The bluebonnet fields around Austin have endeared that place to my heart."

He carries about 50 pounds of gear.

Dandi also hopes to be able to bicycle through the New England states. If not this trip, then perhaps the next one.
