Midland Police Thwart Attempt To Take Over Bus

MIDLAND (UPI) — A 23-year-old man took over a Greyhound bus with 36 people on board, drove it two miles from a bus terminal to a police roadblock and then scuffled with police, slightly injuring one officer, officials said.

Officer Terry Lowe suffered a sprained finger while taking the unarmed suspect into custody.

Police said the bus, en route to Los Angeles from Atlanta, had just pulled into the unloading ramp at the Greyhound terminal when the passenger left his seat and took the driver's place.

"I was outside unloading the bus and the bus started to move," said the driver, J.H. Davison of Abilene. "I ran back toward the door to see if I had forgot to put on the brake, and the bus drove off."

The suspect drove west along the route the bus was scheduled to take. The original driver ran inside the terminal and notified police, who immediately began a search for the bus.

The passengers were not sure what was happening.

"Nobody on the bus knew what was happening at first, but we knew something was wrong," said Daniel Fields, a passenger from Los Angeles.

Two miles west of the terminal, the suspect was forced to halt the bus or strike a police car blocking the roadway. He refused to open the door of the bus as police approached.

Fields said he slipped forward and unlocked the door from the inside.

"I knew if he didn't open the door that sooner or later the police would open fire, so I just opened the door," the man for Los Angeles said.

The suspect began a struggle when police attempted to arrest him and continued to fight officers as he was taken from the bus.

Passengers reacted calmly to the events, considering the circumstances, a witness said.

"Two women appeared to be a little upset, but there was no hysteria aboard the bus," the witness said. "One guy was asleep and apparently he slept all through it."

Sgt. Mike Roberts said, "I couldn't tell you what promoted him to drive off with the bus, but I don't feel he was trying to hijack it or anything like that. I'm glad it was brought to an end like it was. It was a situation that could have turned pretty bad, but fortunately everything worked out as we had wanted it to and nobody was injured."

RAIN DETERS DEMONSTRATORS — The area around the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, which usually is crowded with thousands of Iranian demonstrators or curiosity-seekers, was unusually quiet Thursday after an all-day rain. Militant students holding 50 Americans hostage inside the embassy continued to defy government officials, who have proposed release of some of the hostages before Christmas and favor visits by their families. U.S. To Hike Pressure On Khomeini

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is prepared to call for world economic pressure on Iran to try to gain the release of the 50 Americans held hostage in Tehran, U.S. officials say.

Hodding Carter, the State Department spokesman, said the United States is "not interested in bringing down any government, destroying the integrity of any nation, interfering with the security of any group."

Rather, he said, "we are interested in release of the hostages, and that is the point of our policy to date."

He deferred to the White House to announce the specific actions against Iran.

An announcement was expected at the White House in mid-afternoon. Debate in the U.N. Security Council would begin after Christmas.

The pressure tactics could range from a tight trade embargo to a selective boycott of strategic items.

U.S. officials said the Soviet Union has not indicated yet whether it will go along with a U.S. request, although the officials said they expected Soviet support. A Soviet veto in the Security Council could upset the American plan.

With U.S.-Iranian relations crumbling, there is strong incentive for the Soviets to work toward the best relationship possible with their oil-rich, strategically placed neighbor.

But Carter, the State Department spokesman, emphasized Thursday the moral imperative the administration sees in putting the issue before the United Nations.

"We believe this is a matter of such importance that the world community will be asked to address it, whether or not every member of the community is willing to respond affirmatively," he said.

Although Carter shied away from disclosing the U.S. timetable, other sources said there was an good chance of a decision today. The request would be put to the Security Council soon after Christmas, the officials said.

The hostages have been held since Nov. 4 when militants seized the embassy, demanding the return of the deposed shah, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, for trial. Pahlavi left the United States Saturday and is now living in Panama.

Meanwhile, the Washington Star reported today that the administration wants the hostages to remain silent if they are forced to stand trial as spies.

Quoting unidentified U.S. officials, the newspaper said the administration now feels that if the Iranians go ahead with threats to try the hostages, the United States will denounce the proceedings as a violation of international law, refuse to participate in them, and try to get word to the hostages to keep silent.

In related developments Thursday:

—The administration branded as "cruel hoaxes" hints from Iranian officials that some of the hostages might be released by Christmas or that their relatives would be permitted to visit them.

Spokesman Carter, reflecting growing frustration within the administration, condemned the "up and down" tactics in Tehran as "a game played with people's emotions and hopes."

—James R. Schlesinger, former defense secretary and CIA chief, said the administration should have set a deadline for the return of the hostages, coupled with "the immediate mobilization of forces."

Schlesinger also said Iran should have come under some type of "punishment" if it did not meet the deadline. White House press secretary Jody Powell termed the remarks "at variance with what we see as the best policy to pursue."

Consumer Prices Soaring

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prices Americans pay for goods and services rose 1 percent in November, pushing the Consumer Price Index to more than double the level it was a decade ago, the government reported today.

The November increase, the same as that in October, marked the 11th consecutive month with an increase of about 1 percent, the Labor Department said.

Prices rose by 1.1 percent in May, 1 percent in both June and July and 1.1 percent in both August and September.

If prices rise as much in December, the nation will end 1979 with prices 13 percent higher than they were at the start of the year. That would be the worst inflation since 1946, when World War II price controls were lifted.

"The same things that are kicking the index now will be pushing it in December, too," said Labor Department economist Patrick Jackman. "It won't edge off for a while."

More than half the increase last month was blamed on sharply higher housing costs, Jackman said. Mortgage interest rates and home prices have risen sharply since Oct. 6, when the Federal Reserve Board moved to tighten credit.

At the same time, gasoline and fuel oil prices rose more moderately in November than in recent months, the report showed.

The Labor Department also reported today that workers' average earnings decreased 0.2 percent from October to November because inflation outpaced hourly earnings.

The earnings a married worker with three dependents had left to spend after taxes fell 0.3 percent in November and were down 5.1 percent from November 1978.

The fact that prices consumers are paying have more than doubled during the 1970s could be seen in the Consumer Price Index figure, which is a measure of what has happened to the prices of a fixed "marketbasket" of goods and services.

In dollar terms, this means that Americans last month were paying $227.50 for goods that cost them $112.90 at the end of 1969, or $100 in 1967, the index's base year.

The previous doubling of prices took 24 years, from 1945 to 1969. This time, it took just 10 years. Prices have not doubled that fast since the decade of 1910-1920, when World War I caused widespread shortages of goods, one government analyst said.

Jackman said he was not optimistic about either housing prices falling in the near future or fuel-price increases remaining moderate.

"Our statistics on conventional mortgage interest rates lag one month," he told a reporter. "This report reflects October mortgage rates. We know the effects of the Federal Reserve action carried through into November, and we'll see that in next month's report."

He added that recent crude oil price increases approved by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries "will put pressure on gasoline and fuel oil prices again, at least by January."

Goodfellows Get Boost From Generous Donors

"Bless them, bless them all — the men, the women, the groups and especially the children. They are helping. I just knew they would."

Chief Goodfellow was knee-deep in mail filled with donations to make Christmas possible for almost 10,000 Lubbock children needing Goodfellow help.

"Bless all the students in Room 110 at Roscoe Wilson Elementary School. Those wonderful kids sent $25 to help other children instead of giving each other gifts. That's the real Christmas spirit — and, it's from children to children. Now, that makes 10 more children I won't have to worry about this year." At $2.50 a Christmas sack, Room 110 played Santa to 10."

There were other letters, other special gifts, like the $500 check from the F.O.E. No. 3435 Auxiliary and a $100 check from students at J.T. Hutchinson Junior High School, who voted to send proceeds from a talent show to the Goodfellows.

"Lubbock always did have a heart, and it's passing on to the coming generation. Maybe Christmas will be there for every child on Christmas. Now, I'd better start making my other list, the list of volunteers to take all these sacks to all these children early Christmas. About 4:30 a.m. ought to be time enough."

Any Lubbock Santas wishing to help, with money to make the Christmas sacks possible and with time to get the sacks delivered Christmas Day, may write Chief Goodfellow at P.O. Box 491, Lubbock 79408.

Panhandle Bracing For Storm

A-J News Services

A rapidly developing winter storm was heading toward West Texas today, bringing the prospect of colder weather and a chance of rain or snow for the Panhandle Saturday and Sunday.

Forecasters saw little chance of a White Christmas for the Lubbock area, although lower temperatures are likely throughout West Texas during the holiday period.

Temperatures will dip into the teens in the north and the 20s in southern portions of the area the first of next week, with a slow warming trend due by midweek. Highs should range from the 30s in the north to the 40s in the south.

Temperatures should be in the 60s today and near 60 on Saturday.

A National Weather Service spokesman said, however, there was little chance of snow or any other moisture for Christmas at the present. "We just don't have a good wind arrangement to bring the moisture down."

Earlier, weathermen had predicted a chance of showers for the weekend, but that has now been removed from the forecast. The extended outlook merely says there's no chance of any significant precipitation.

The current forecast calls for temperatures in the high 60s today and Saturday and in the high 30s tonight, which the National Weather Service noted will be the longest night of the year.

The South Plains sky will be partly cloudy today and Saturday.

Winter officially arrives at 5:10 a.m. Saturday. From that point until 11:47 a.m. June 21, the start of summer, the days will get longer and the nights shorter.

Travelers Will Find Gas Costly, But Available

By JEFF McCASLIN and NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Despite the energy crisis and the usual year-end airline crunch, Lubbockites with holiday travel plans shouldn't have many problems getting to their destinations — either by road or by air.

Gasoline should be relatively easy to find — although perhaps less easy to pay for — except possibly on Christmas Day, and, despite the usual solid holiday bookings, airline spokesmen say chances of flying standby are "excellent."

Motorists got a grim reminder, however, of the hazards of holiday travel on the roads. The Department of Public Safety estimates that 67 persons will lose their lives on Texas highways during the Yuletide holiday.

A DPS spokesman in Lubbock said all troopers will be assigned to road duty starting at 6 p.m. tonight, when Operation Motorcide swings into full gear during what officials believe will be the largest movement of vehicles in Texas this year.

"I think they're all going to be rolling," said Lt. Fred Marshall, DPS safety education officer, who believes many people will be taking to the highways to visit relatives because they are worried about future availability of gasoline.

Operation Motorcide will end at midnight Christmas Day. The name for the operation was coined by the DPS in the early 50s in an effort to reduce holiday fatalities resulting from drinking, recklessness and speeding.

Marshall warned motorists to drive with extreme caution over the Christmas holiday because the highways will be overcrowded with vehicles, many of them driven by those who have had a bit too much holiday cheer.

According to a spot check this week by the American Automobile Association, Texas motorists should have no trouble finding gasoline over the weekend, but the AAA advises motorists to

Woman Told To Give Up Kids For Live-In Lover

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Marriage is a risky business, and people who choose to live together out of wedlock should not be forced to give up their children, says the lawyer for a woman ordered to give up her three daughters after her lover moved in.

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled Thursday that Jacqueline Jarrett's ex-husband, Walter Jarrett, who went to court when he learned his former wife was living with a man, should have custody because Mrs. Jarrett had no plans to marry her lover.

In a split decision, the court said Mrs. Jarrett's conduct "not only violates the statutorily moral standards of the state, but also encourages others to violate those standards, and debases public morality."

"We are not convinced that open cohabitation does not also affect the mental and emotional health of the children," the court said.

Two justices of the seven-member court dissented, saying the courts "are well advised to leave to the theologians the question of the morality of the living arrangement in the case."

"I feel (the ruling) is a violation of fundamental constitutional rights," said Michael H. Minton, attorney for Mrs. Jarrett, saying he would appeal.

Minton said the ruling would force single parents with children to get married if they want to live with a lover, and "marriage is one of the riskiest professions in the country."

Arthur M. Solomon, attorney for Jarrett, said the ruling was the first of its kind in Illinois, and said it ran counter to decisions handed down in a number of other states.

Apparently,"Illinois remains somewhat more conservative in these matters than some other states," he said.

The court ruled in September that a woman who lived with a man for 15 years and had three children by him out of wedlock was not entitled to a property settlement when they split up.

Elderly Twins Freeze To Death

FAIRFIELD, N.J. (AP) — As outdoor temperatures dipped to the 20s, a steam boiler shut down and twin 80-year-old women froze to death in their home, officials say.

Police said the nude bodies of Lola Heyboer and Lila Jeffreys were found after a concerned neighbor called authorities.

Authorities said they did not know why the women were not wearing clothes. Police have ruled out suicide.

An autopsy revealed the sisters died of exposure to the cold, said Assistant Essex County Medical Examiner Graciella Lanaras.

According to police, the temperature inside the house plummeted when a steam boiler shut down because of insufficient water. When a plumber called in by police filled the heater, the heat came back on.

Carey Trapped In Elevator

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Hugh Carey left a posh Fifth Avenue party because he had to attend another party, but instead became the star attraction at an unexpected event.

CAREY

Police raced through the icy New York streets when summoned Wednesday night with a call of "VIP trapped in elevator," but arrived after Carey had already been rescued by his aides.

Carey was apparently not upset by the temporary inconvenience.

Woman Gets Spock's Ears

ENGLEWOOD, Ohio (AP) — Louise Stange has the ultimate souvenir for a Leonard Nimoy fan — a pair of Mr. Spock ears.

"I really treasure them," said Miss Stange of the flesh-colored pointy objects that helped turn Nimoy into the character of Spock in "Star Trek."

If anyone should have a pair of Spock ears, it should be Miss Stange. For more than 12 of her 29 years she has been president of the Leonard Nimoy Association of Fans, an international fan and service club.

In October of last year, she was invited to Hollywood to watch production of "Star Trek — The Movie." But the shock didn't end there. She found out she was going to be an extra in the movie.

The best parts of her trip were visiting with her hero on the set and seeing herself in the movie. She was invited to the gala charity premiere in Washington, D.C., earlier this month.

"It was like a dream," she said.

Daddy Warbucks Heading West

Reid Shelton, who played the role on Broadway for 1,189 performances of "Annie," is heading for Los Angeles to take over the part in the West Coast company.

Shelton, who sang "We'll Get a New Deal for Christmas," in the hit Broadway musical has signed a one-year contract for the California production. His part on Broadway will be taken by John Schuck, a film and television actor who made his Broadway debut in July playing the role during Shelton's vacation.

Champagne Out of Reach

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — Jim Stevens dove into a 1,700-gallon tank Saturday and was still there nearly a week later.

Lighter Side Of Today's News

His partner, Alan Cunningham, canceled a champagne coming-out party for him Thursday night, when Stevens had planned to surface with the record for staying underwater.

Stevens, armed with aspirin, vitamin C and diaper rash ointment, dove into the tank, hoping to break the Guinness Book of World Records record he thought was 126 hours and 30 minutes. That would have meant he could come out at 7:45 p.m. Thursday.

"But we got some new information this morning that last year in August a new record of 141 hours and 24 minutes was set," Cunningham said Thursday night at the Odyssea Diving Center. " ... 144 hours is the mark he's shooting at now."

Cunningham says he's keeping the champagne cold. Stevens isn't likely to want water for awhile after he surfaces.

Catarac Surgery Brings Sight To Blind Couple

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pedro Feliciano lost his son to a robber's knife in 1971 and swore he'd never return to New York City again. He broke his promise this year — and got his wife and vision back in time for Christmas.

A beaming Feliciano, 74, sat at New York Eye and Ear Infirmary in Manhattan Thursday, only a month after relatives persuaded him to return to the city that brought his family suffering and pain.

He had good reason to smile. He and his wife, Anna, separated for a year by blindness and ill health, have reunited.

After three operations each, both can see their youngest grandchild, Eva, for the first time.

One tragedy brought another. It was Anna Feliciano's mourning, the family believed, that ruined her eyes.

Actually, cataracts were growing on Mrs. Feliciano's eyes. Her husband, who had lost a leg to diabetes, also began to lose his vision.

Doctors in Puerto Rico had pronounced Mrs. Feliciano, totally blind for five years, a hopeless case. But the couple's daughter, Maria Flores, believed the miracle of American medicine could restore her mother's sight.

OPEC Deadlock May Create Oil Market Turmoil

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries left Caracas still arguing over the prices they failed to agree on, raising the prospect of continued turmoil in world oil markets if petroleum demand doesn't start to slow down.

The dispute raging within the 13-member cartel, which produces nearly two-thirds of the non-communist world's oil supply, centered on a bottom price for oil and the issue of how much each producer can tack on to the base.

"Some countries are doing their best to keep prices down, but we are not in a position to give oil free of charge," said Ali Akbar Moinfar, Iran's oil minister and along with Ezzedin Ali Mabruk of Libya a leader of the cartel's price militants.

But Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti still held out some hope that a settlement could be reached when the cartel has its next meeting sometime during the first quarter of 1980.

Despite "enormous differences, in the very near future — even nearer than some of you think — we will reach agreement on prices," Calderon Berti told a news conference after the four-day winter OPEC meeting ended Thursday.

"We can't convert OPEC into a bazaar," like the chaotic spot market where oil prices recently have soared to above $40 a barrel, he said. But he added: "We'll have to see how the market develops next year. Each country may go as it wants."

Venezuela was one of three countries joining Saudi Arabia in raising the base price of its oil from $18 to $24 last week before the conference began.

But Libya and Nigeria raised prices for their high-quality oil to $30 from $26.27, and Iran went up $5 to $28.50.

For a while Libya, Nigeria and Algeria offered to virtually forgo price hikes if Saudi Arabia were to lift its base price by another 10 percent to $26.40 for a 42-gallon barrel.

That compromise was never reached because the Saudi oil minister, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, argued the ailing world economy couldn't absorb more increases. In 1980, he said, "There definitely will be a recession. I think there will be a glut of oil on the market."

But Iran's oil minister countered, "It's not good to give consumers very cheap and plentiful oil" because they will then have no reason to conserve energy.

He also threatened to cut Iran's production from its estimated 3.5 million barrels daily, declaring, "We will drop the price or we will drop the oil (production), and I see the second result."

The price increases already announced, coupled with a $2-a-barrel increase by Indonesia to $25.50, and expected increases by Algeria, Iraq, and some smaller members, will boost OPEC's average price to around $26 a barrel, up nearly 20 percent from a month ago and up nearly 100 percent in the past year.

The increases are expected to add as much as a dime to the price of a gallon of gasoline or heating oil in the United States, analysts said.

Because the United States is so oil dependent, anything that means higher prices is going to have a negative effect on the economy. The U.S. Energy Department estimates the latest round of oil price hikes could add a percentage point to America's inflation rate next year. The rate is currently 13 percent.

And according to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, the increases will swell the industrialized world's balance of payments deficit to $50 billion next year from an earlier forecast of about $31.5 billion.

Cartel Price Increases To Hike Cost Of Gasoline, Heating Oil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Secretary Charles Duncan says Americans will be paying 4 to 8 cents a gallon more for their gasoline and 3 to 7 cents more for home heating oil, thanks to the latest round of OPEC price increases.

But Duncan, reacting to OPEC's impasse over a crude oil pricing policy, told reporters Thursday the oil-consuming countries might be able to stabilize oil prices by curbing consumption and dampening the spot market.

The volatile, high-flying spot market has reflected unchecked consumption and uncertainty about oil supplies, said Duncan.

He said he was encouraged by signs of gasoline conservation in the United States and expected the 20 leading consuming nations to take further steps to reduce their oil imports when the International Energy Agency meets in March.

Although the energy secretary said unified OPEC prices would have been "very desirable," his comments about oil price trends in the coming year seemed almost optimistic in view of recent OPEC hikes ranging from 15 to 33 percent.

Many oil analysts foresee a slump in the spot market, where an estimated 20 percent of OPEC oil is now traded. Some believe unprecedented high oil inventories coupled with recession in the consuming nations may soon produce an oil glut to relieve pressure on prices.

Ed Rothschild, director of the Energy Action consumer group, said the world may scrape through 1980 without further price increases.

But Walter Levy, a New York petroleum analyst, said prices will hinge on the behavior of the spot market and restraint on the consumption that bids it up.

"The final analysis will depend on self-restraint, international cooperation and perhaps allocation of crude oil by consuming countries," he said.

Despite oil stockpiling, unforeseen supply interruptions or threats or actions by the producers to cut production could "sooner or later trigger that mad rush" to buy on the spot market, Levy warned.

Les Goldman, assistant energy secretary for foreign affairs, said the absence of unified OPEC oil prices would make it easy for a producer to hike his price to whatever he thinks the market will bear.

A State Department spokesman, who also took a pessimistic view, said OPEC's failure to agree on an end to market chaos could "signal a return to bilateral deals" between oil producers and consumers.

"The spectacle of their not being able to get together on a price speaks for itself," said spokesman Dave Passage. "It signals the fact that as an organization, even some of its members think it's done sufficient damage, that they have chosen not to participate."

Duncan said recent OPEC price hikes have raised the cost of imported oil — which was selling at $13 a barrel at the start of the year — to $28 or $30.

"Under the most optimistic circumstances, these increases represent $80 to every man, women and child in the United States," he said.

NASA Conducts Mock Space Shuttle Flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — On television, Buck Rogers was speeding through space in pursuit of 25th-century villians. Back home in 1979, Kennedy Space Center officials were still having problems just conducting a simulated flight for their new space shuttle.

Finally, after five postponements, the Columbia — similar to the craft in the Thursday night NBC television series, "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" — was fired "into space" in a simulated launch.

And soon, the craft was functioning as it would if it were 175 miles above Earth. Former Navy Capt. John Young and Navy Cmdr. Robert Crippen, who will be the primary crew for the shuttle's first actual mission, were in the cockpit during the mock flight.

"We had a successful run all the way through the final orbit," said George Page, director of shuttle operations. "In our evaluations, if it looks as good in analysis as it did in real time, we will be very happy."

The shuttle is a reusable craft designed to be sent into space on a rocket, then coast back to Earth after performing such missions as launching satellites into orbit.

The space shuttle is considered a key to national defense in the future because it could help verify Soviet compliance with arms control agreements.

The program, once slated for a 1979 space mission, has been plagued by technical difficulties for months and now isn't expected to get into orbit before 1981.

Officials said they hoped to conduct more tests today.

NASA had planned to begin a five-day series of simulated flights last Sunday to put the orbiter and its equipment through a variety of space conditions, including emergencies and a simulated reentry into the Earth's atmosphere.

Officials said all of this week's delays were caused by equipment involved in the simulation, but that all the equipment that would be used in an actual launch performed well.

"There's no chance of continuing through the holiday," said NASA spokesman Dick Young. "I would expect they want to complete the planned series of flights sometime early next year."

Politics Made To Order

POLITICAL CONSULTANT Bill Russo said it, but it could just as well have been George Orwell: "You are dealing with people's perception of reality...what people believe to be true is true."

Russo was speaking at the American Association of Political Consultants annual meeting on the theme of politics in the new decade. It is surely appropriate that in the middle of that decade lies 1984, the year Orwell made infamous in his prescient novel on thought control.

The occasion attracted dozens of campaign managers to Washington to consider the prospects for politics in the 1980s. Said political columnist Robert Walters:

"They talked about...imagery being more important than reality and about their 'brave new world' in which candidates (can be) effectively packaged, programmed and promoted."

A CATALOG OF the options available to a candidate accused of unethical, immoral or illegal activity was offered. The best defense against an attack is "I didn't do it," participants decided.

Overwhelming evidence of guilt might require a modified "I did it, but it is not like you think."

Finally, there's the basic apology-type television spot where the message is a sympathy-evoking "I did it but I'm sorry."

In any event, said Walters, the consultants understood the criteria for deciding which approach to take involves no particular respect for candor "but rather the tactical and strategic demands of the campaign."

Russo recalled last year's campaign waged on behalf of then-Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., accused at the time of an assortment of charges from perjury to Medicaid fraud.

THAT ASSORTMENT "could create real problems" in a political race, mused Russo. But Brooke's professional managers found a solution.

"We made a decision to de-emphasize Ed Brooke—to take him out of the campaign—and emphasize instead the Ed Brooke record," said Russo.

Another consultant warned against assuming that the way to reach high-income, well-educated "upscale voters" is to offer them detailed positions on issues or intricate philosophical arguments.

All of these efforts at manipulations are only thinly justified by Russo's rationale that chicanery is necessary because "politics is not very important to very many people."

Santa Rides Again

ANY DAY NOW, says My Neighbor Twice Removed, he expects the Iranian foreign minister to say the American hostages won't be set free until the TV announcers learn and agree on how to pronounce Ghotbzadeh.

If we could charge the Iranian ministry of propaganda for all of the free time it's gotten on American television, they'd owe us a 10-year supply of oil.

Headline: "Chicago Mayor Skirts Strikers."
That's a woman for you.

LEGITIMATE concern for the welfare of 50 Americans held hostage in Tehran is shared by all, but the U.S. House of Representatives has cheapened that concern by throwing money at it.

The House voted, 369-4, to award "appropriate financial compensation" to the hostages upon their release.

I submit that "appropriate financial compensation" is fully covered by the salaries they're paid. They were in Tehran doing the jobs they'd hired out to do.

But they ought to be paid extra, Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y., said, and certainly more than the $5 a day extra that American POWs in Vietnam were paid.

Texans Jim Collins, Ron Paul and Marvin Leath, and Rep. Larry McDonald of Georgia, were the only ones voting against the monetary award.

DEAR SANTA,

Please bring Texas Tech a new president. And, this time, make sure it's one that'll work in this community and last longer than three years.

Rep. Kent Hance needs a new Congress that doesn't cost so much to operate.

Stay clear of the Health Sciences Center Hospital. Those guys are looking for someone like you on a year-around basis.

Please bring Gov. Bill Clements a new Big To-Do about Nothing. The last one kind of blew up in his face.

The Lubbock City Council needs a bag full of new streets and statues to go with all the names it has for them.

LUBBOCK COUNTY commissioners have a brand new jail. Please fill it full of baddies for them.

Drop off some goodies in Washington. Too many of the ones we've sent up there have gone bad.

Forget about taking gifts to all of the Presidential contenders. There are too many of them for you to get around to in one night.

You should have Christmas dinner with Lubbock firemen. They believe in double helpings.

Please bring Texas Tech Athletic Director Dick Tamburo a new name plate. One big enough for Mayor Dirk West to see and remember.

Whatever you do, Santa, don't bring Supt. Ed Irons another suit. He spends half of his time in the courthouse already.

There's a guy with a beard in Tehran that we'd like to see surrounded by American ships, planes and guns that shoot.

Bring Ted Kennedy an erector set so he can rebuild his bridges.

President Carter needs an oil company all his own. So's he can lust in his heart over obscene profits.

BE SURE TO BRING Ralph Nader a gag gift.

Finally, Santa, give all Americans peace and joy, then throw in all of the material blessings they want and send the bill to Congress, c/o the White House.

An election year's coming up and they'll just charge it all to the next generation.

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

Christmas Made To Be Shared

WASHINGTON—What a lovely season Christmas is. From the core tale of a little Judean family to the medieval carols to Handel, Dickens and Crosby, it has its own layers of tradition, its peculiar colors and sounds and fragrances.

You could never explain it to anyone who hadn't experienced it. In that sense Christmas is intensely private, even though its privacy embraces a whole civilization.

A funny thing, privacy. People often confuse it with secrecy. But secret things are things we hide, things we would wish not to share. Private things in their nature can only be properly shared with certain people.

You can't share them with outsiders even if you try. Parenthood is private: your child can be anyone else's friend, but nobody else's child. To be private is to be special.

OUR CIVILIZATION IS based on privacy—that is, based on respect for the things that are special to each of us.

You might say we have a public commitment to privacy. And though the Christmas season abounds in public festivities, it peaks, cozily, in the home.

On Christmas our scattered tribes abandon routine and business, and cluster together in an ancient familial jollity that survives, somehow, the dissipations of a year in the modern world.

Christmas is the day when we naturally gravitate to the very people in all the world who appreciate us most—often for reasons we can't fathom and they can't explain. But love is to be enjoyed, not understood.

As we have commercialized Christmas, so we have secularized and thinned out the idea of privacy. But both Christmas and privacy are rooted in religion—specifically in Christianity, whose own roots are in Judaism.

EVERY MAN IS unique, not as a snowflake is unique, but as an image of God, each creature a special expression of his Creator. The commandment against murder means, among other things, that a man's inconvenience to us has no bearing on his value to God.

In our time militant secularism has killed and oppressed untold millions. And continues to do so. Yet even in the West many people persist in seeing religion as the real menace to human dignity, a concept bequeathed by religion itself.

There is a special taboo against affirming religion as truth. The secularist culture has taught Jews that it is arrogant to claim to be a chosen people, Catholics that it is dangerous to claim to be the one true church, Protestant Christians that it is ethnocentric, and maybe imperialistic, to claim a mission of converting the heathen.

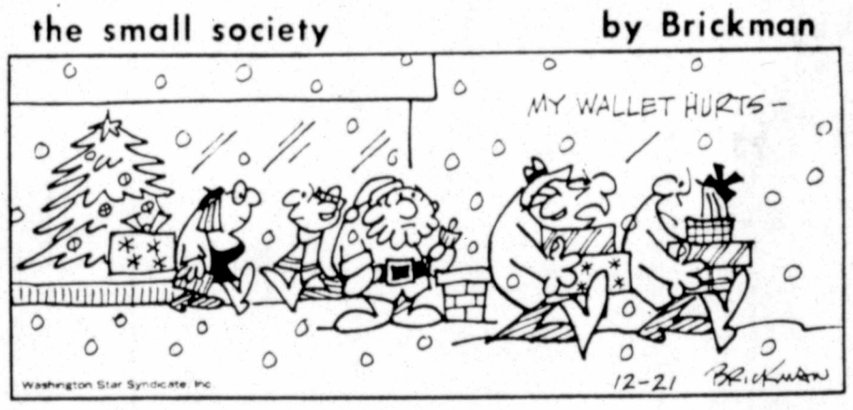

Because religious people are generally polite people, they tend to feel they should avoid giving offense by channeling their energies into uncontroversial things like social work.

Spiritual life, like family life, can't be robust unless it is shared. It can't be shared unless it is informed by a sense of truth, of mission, of specialness.

The problem of religion in the modern world is to find a vital middle way between the fanaticism of a Khomeini and the aridity of the World Council of Churches.

For good and evil, the year has been dominated by religious forces. Faith has already built a civilization. As that civilization suffers decay and assault, this Christmas season, the question is whether faith can restore it.

Sylvia Porter:

Not Many Will Escape Downturn Of The '80s

WASHINGTON—We are entering the new decade of the 1980s in a deepening downturn—with its depth, duration, breadth and impact on each of us to depend on a wide range of forces that cannot yet be foreseen.

The housing industry—most basic of all our industries, because it affects so many other fields, ranging from furniture to appliances, home furnishings to lawn mowers—is clearly into a major slump, with layoffs and bankruptcies on the rise.

New orders from industry are slipping and inventories are not moving so fast from business shelves into consumers' hands. The auto industry's plight needs no elaboration.

The Commerce Department's index of "leading indicators"—figures which telegraph in advance trends in the U.S. economy—is heading down. Consumers in general are up to their ears in debt and can add little, if any, to retail sales.

JOBLESSNESS REMAINS LOW but unemployment always lags behind the realities in our economy. Meanwhile, inflation is raging in the double-digits, interest rates are at steep levels and oil prices remain in an upsurge. Hardly a bag of economic "goodies"!

(1) The 1980 downturn will be deep, broad, of unpredictable duration and cleansing:

If the governors of the Federal Reserve Board have the courage to maintain strict control over the supply of credit in a do-or-die effort to brake the psychology of inflation which is eating away at the foundations of our economic system and to save the U.S. dollar before it collapses and drags down the world's monetary structure with it.

IF THE POWER centers in U.S. labor and business grasp the imperative need of reviving productivity in our country so we can at least resume a position of economic equality (not leadership) among our industrial competitors in West Germany and Japan.

(2) The 1980 downturn will be shallow, short and lead quickly to a resurgence of even more intolerable inflation:

If the Federal Reserve Board caves in to election-year pressures and opens the credit spigots to help end the recession.

If the White House and Congress adopt free-spending tax policies to stop rising unemployment and reduce bankruptcies.

But let's now make some assumptions—which must be made if we are to look beyond today into the more distant tomorrow. Let's blueprint the most optimistic scenario that I think can be drawn.

We do adopt common sense economic policies that will spur business investments to increase productivity...Relax regulations which are strangling initiatives and raising costs while not adding appreciably to a safer, cleaner environment...

Revise our tax structure to reward rather than penalize the risk-taker, encourage saving and discourage reckless borrowing...Finally get on the way to becoming self-sufficient in energy.

ON THE BASIS of these assumptions, the credit squeeze will soften fairly rapidly; interest rates will fall back into ranges under which we can live and prosper; our horribly outdated plants and equipment gradually will be replaced with factories that are competitive with those of the nations the U.S. rebuilt with our cash after we "won" World War II; the productivity of our workers will resume its centuries-long upward trend, permitting rising paychecks and profits side by side with relatively stable prices; the standard of living of the average U.S. family will stop sliding and begin to climb again.

The decade of the 1980s, which starts so sadly will then brighten. And we will enter another great era in U.S. economic history—an era of healthy, sustainable growth, an inflation rate low enough to be the equivalent of stability in a dynamic economy (2-4 percent a year), interest rates with which we can live and a revitalized dollar sharing with other currencies the burden of financing expanding world trade instead of bearing the load alone.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Energy Plans Short-Circuited

WASHINGTON—For the past several weeks, Congress has been stumbling, fumbling, limping and panting to complete some kind of energy legislation—almost any kind of energy legislation—before closing up shop for Christmas. It has not been an inspiring performance.

What is needed, it seems to me, is for the lawmakers simply to take the advice of old George Mason in his Virginia Declaration of Rights. His advice was frequently to "recur to fundamental principles."

What is our purpose? Especially in the light of recent events in Tehran and Caracas, our goal can be seen more clearly than ever.

It is to make tbe United States significantly less dependent upon imported oil, and to promote the development of our energy resources here at home. In a related area, we must seek to relieve the economic burdens on the poor.

HOW DO WE go about achieving these aims? We recur to such fundamental values as free enterprise, common sense and American ingenuity.

We get government off the backs of the companies best equipped to resolve our problems. And we begin by accepting this basic reality—that the era of cheap energy has ended.

President Carter's program has its good and commendable elements, but it has suffered from the very beginning because of its over-reliance upon the mechanisms of government.

If Congress had acted years ago to eliminate the stifling, suffocating blanket of federal price controls and regulations, we would not be in the fix we're in today.

Let me offer an example of the idiocy that afflicts us. The Washington Post disclosed a few days ago that the Department of Energy had worked up a case for criminal prosecution against certain executives of Texaco and Sun Oil.

This was their supposed offense—that they had conspired to open up several otherwise inoperative wells in order to bring the average production per well in a particular field to a point below 10 barrels a day.

THE EFFECT WAS to reclassify the entire field, and thus to increase the permissible sales price from $4.50 a barrel to $10. The DOE complained that there was "no economic justification for this activity other than the financial benefit that would flow to the owners."

And the DOE wanted to bring the purported criminals to trial.

It would be interesting to know how many thousands of man-hours of bureaucratic time went into this particular piece of nonsense. The Department of Justice of course refused to prosecute.

There would have been no prospect whatever of impaneling a jury that would find guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. On the contrary, a jury might have voted a resolution of praise for companies ingenious enough to outwit the federal regulators.

MY POINT IS that this is precisely the kind of impediment that has prevented the oil companies from doing what they are best equipped to do under the free enterprise system.

If it were not for Carter's obsessive rage against the "obscene profits" of the producers—a rage manifested in his "windfall profits" bill—we could free the companies to get on with the job.

The President is on the right track, more or less, in his companion bills to expedite energy projects and to encourage the development of synthetic fuels.

Yet here, again, his thrust is blunted by impenetrable layers of rules, regulations, submissions, approvals and all the rest. With oil soaring past $30 a barrel on world markets, the day swiftly approaches when alternative fuels will be economically competitive.

All that is required is to free the capital and the ingenuity that alone can make the system work.

AS A CONSEQUENCE of the price hikes on oil at Caracas, the price of gasoline will go up by 10 to 15 cents a gallon.

For most families the increase will be bearable, but we must look to the day when steadily mounting prices will impose a severe hardship upon poor persons, especially in rural areas, who have no alternative to the automobile. Means must be found to ease their burden.

The elements of a sensible energy program are simple. It has been a dispiriting experience to watch the Senate breathing hard in the gaseous diffusion of a filibuster, and to observe conferees quarreling over labyrinthine provisions of complicated bills.

We can get to the goal of relative self-sufficiency, but it will take forever the way we are crawling now.

Oil Prices Certain To Continue Upward Spiral

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Back when President Carter proposed his so-called "windfall-profits" tax, the world market price of oil averaged $16.25 a barrel — and what seemed a ripoff then looks like a bargain now.

April's prices are December's memories, and the only certainty is that the upward spiral will continue.

While Congress struggled over the domestic oil tax, which probably won't reach Carter's desk until next year, world oil prices have vaulted past $22, then $24, toward $30 a barrel.

It took nearly seven months to get action on the bill in the House and Senate, and a compromise version must be fashioned and approved in both houses before the measure can become law.

Whatever the flaws of the tax measure, that's a lesson in what is wrong with U.S. energy policy. It is being fashioned so slowly, and so tardily, as to play into the hands of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Carter says the tax bill approved by the Senate is too low; conservative senators and the oil industry say it is too high. Either way, it is not a conservation measure, and the administration still is groping to find one that can be enacted.

The president announced April 5 that he is phasing out price controls on domestically produced oil, which were due to expire Sept. 30, 1981. Carter asked Congress to tax away half the extra revenue the U.S. oil industry will gain with the lifting of price controls. He wants the revenue used to pay for development of alternative energy sources, improvement of transportation systems and relief for low-income Americans beset by rising fuel prices.

Carter projected tax revenues of $297 billion over the next decade. That's guesswork, as the higher the price goes, the more money the tax would reap.

The House passed its version of the bill June 28. The Senate passed a scaled-down tax Monday night, and the two branches now have set about fashioning final terms. Carter wants the tax stiffened.

He will get the tax, but neither he nor Congress is through with the energy problem. Price decontrol, which is supposed to increase U.S. production, and the tax, which is supposed to finance other energy programs, represent at best only a small part of the answer.

Even with signs that consumption is leveling off, the import bill keeps going up, draining dollars and fueling inflation. The effort to reduce that trend has come full circle, with the administration now considering a new oil import fee as a conservation measure.

Former President Gerald R. Ford used such a fee in his energy conservation effort, until Congress blocked him. Ford now says that three presidents in six years have been unable to get a real handle on energy policy, and blames regional, parochial and provincial alliances in Congress for the roadblocks.

Analysis

Carter calls them special interests, but it comes down to the same thing.

One of those interests is political. Steps to compel conservation are not steps likely to gain votes.

The administration had floated the idea of a stiff new gasoline tax to discourage consumption, but Congress balked.

Its leaders said there was virtually no chance Carter could get a new gas tax. Nor was there any real prospect the administration could gain approval of gasoline rationing as a conservation move. Carter's only authority in that area is a standby rationing plan to be used in the event of a 20 percent shortage, and then subject to congressional veto.

"We have to pass a bill that is politically acceptable without damaging the oil industry," Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., said weeks ago as the Senate began considering the "windfall" tax.

But no one has been able to find a politically acceptable formula, on that or on steps to compel conservation. The search continues.

That hasn't kept the Senate from congratulating itself upon passage of the domestic oil tax, which Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd called momentous.

"This bill is an important step toward energy independence," Byrd said. "In this atmosphere of heightened concern for our national security, this legislation will go a long way toward insuring our nation's future."

It may, but there still is a long way to go.

GSA Tightens Control Over Furniture Buys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's purchasing agency says it will clamp down on new furniture buying after a charge that 78 Washington-area warehouses are chock full of usable government chairs, desks and filing cabinets.

Rowland G. Freeman III, head of the General Services Administration, said that the agency is creating a computerized system to keep track of government furniture and is putting future furniture purchases on "a strict needs-oriented basis."

Freeman's announcement came several hours after Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., charged that the government spent $1.2 billion on new furniture in the 1970s while the 78 warehouses were filling up with usable furniture.

Chiles, chairman of a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee on federal spending, blamed the problem on government bureaucrats who discard older furniture and use taxpayers' money to buy the "shiny new" models.

Chiles and two other senators toured one of the warehouses, showing reporters rooms piled high with discarded government furniture and equipment.

Although much of the furniture was in need of repair, some appeared in good condition and a number of pieces were still in unopened shipping cartons.

Besides chairs, desks and filing cabinets in usable condition, the warehouse contained electric typewriters and scientific equipment. On one shelf sat two seemingly new microscopes that had been declared surplus and stored at the warehouse since 1977.

"Why can't we use them?" asked Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo. "If the government buys microscopes and uses microscopes, why do we warehouse microscopes?"

Hunches Important In Mineral Mining

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — American and Australian geologists believe they have found huge surface deposits of chromium and cobalt in Papua-New Guinea that in time could relieve the world's dependence on South Africa, Rhodesia and the Soviet Union for these strategic metals.

Exploratory drilling is under way on a concession on the Ramu river near the New Guinea deep water port of Madang by the Nord Australex Limited Partnership, in which Nord Resources Corp. of Albuquerque, N.M., is top partner.

Dr. Edgar H. Cruft is chairman of Nord Resources, a company that also is in oil and gas, titanium pigment ore and kaolin, the clay used for paper coating. He told UPI the Papua-New Guinea deposits contain upwards of 5 percent chromides, 1.3 percent nickel and perhaps 0.2 percent cobalt. Because of the high price of the cobalt, it might prove the most valuable.

The minerals are found in alluvial soil, Cruft said. His company has spent about $1 million drilling shallow holes — 150 feet or less — to test the deposits.

Cruft said only a limited area has been tested so far and several thousand square miles remain to be explored.

Although many persons think of chromium only in terms of shiny trim on automobiles, buildings and many manufactured products, it is essential for making stainless steel, which is 16 percent chromium. The high technology of modern industry could not survive without stainless steel. Cobalt also is a highly important steel alloying element.

Cruft said no estimates have been made for the proven reserves of chromium and colbat in the Papua-New Guinea deposits but that to complete the exploration and develop mining and ore concentrating operations probably would involve a minimum investment of $500 million.

Nord Australex acquired the concession from Mt. Isa Mines, Ltd., an Australian company that was interested in the cobalt and nickel content of the alluvial soil rather than the chromium. Nord's interest in the concession is 51 percent.

MINIATURE MANGER — George Duquette of Sturbridge, Mass., works on "Bethlehem at Sturbridge, Mass.," Duquette's miniature recreation of the village where Christ was born, which started out as a coffee table display. But in 20 years it has spilled beyond the manger and now includes almost 1,000 townsfolk and animals, plus buildings, trees, mountains, even a desert. (AP Laserphoto)

Nativity Scene Recreated In Basement Of Home

STURBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — George Duquette always wondered what the first Christmas was really like. So over the past 20 years he's recreated that nativity scene in his basement.

It sits on a 50-foot-by-5-foot platform in front of a 90-seat theater the 53-year-old retired printer built in the basement of his split-level home. Outside, the huge letters "BETHLEHEM" on the side of his house welcome visitors as they enter a 30-space parking lot.

At least once a day, Duquette gives an hour-long sound-and-light show aimed at recreating the feeling of the first Christmas, and the life and death of Jesus.

"It started as a small coffee table display for my family," Duquette said. "I never expected this.

The idea was to "freeze a moment in time" at that first Christmas, he said. Accordingly, an old man holds a freshly-killed chicken, a shepherd tends his flock and a Roman soldier tries to calm his horse.

The model strives for detail and authenticity: The plywood base is covered with dirt and clay from the Holy Land, and the wire mesh and plaster mountains follow the topography of the area.

A tiny lamb has real Persian wool that Duquette glued on with tweezers, one curl at a time. There is a small bird's nest with eggs in it, and satin underwear on the wise men.

Plaster figurines have clay wrinkles, or hair that comes from real people including Duquette's daughters.

Changes Set For Building

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal guardian of civil rights for the handicapped is putting its own house in order by modifying its headquarters to make a gymnasium and television studio accessible to people in wheelchairs.

The modifications will be made on two freight elevators and the second-floor lobby of the Hubert H. Humphrey Building, headquarters for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW and the General Services Administration, the government housekeeping agency that runs the building, were prodded to make the changes by a small, unobtrusive enforcement unit known as the Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board.

Although the board operates as a separate unit, it technically is a part of HEW. It has responsibility for seeing that federal and federally-funded buildings and facilities provide access for disabled Americans. It can order corrections where necessary and withhold or suspend federal funds.

But nearly every case has been negotiated quietly, as was the one involving the Humphrey Building.

The building is fairly new — it was constructed in 1976 — but the board reported 30 violations of accessibility standards two years ago.

The agencies were willing to lower public telephones, lower cafeteria condiment shelves, widen parking spaces, modify restrooms and lower fire alarms in the name of accessibility.

But the negotiations hit a snag when it came to the elevators. The accessibility question arose when a credit union was added to the second floor of the building.

The credit union's offices blocked ready access from passenger elevators to the gymnasium and television studio which are on the same floor. Persons in wheelchairs or on crutches were forced to use two freight elevators, a practice the board found to be demeaning. Moreover, those elevators weren't available for passengers when they were being used to haul freight.

HEW and GSA weren't willing to install another elevator. That might have cost as much as $500,000. So a $7,000 compromise was reached in which the two agencies promised to modify the elevators by Aug. 1, 1980.

The modifications include a five-foot-square turning space, control buttons no more than four feet from the floor, an emergency telephone no higher than four feet, raised letters and numbers on the identifying controls, and readily available emergency information.

The refurbished elevators also will have special doors, non-slip floor surfaces, baked enamel walls and hooks for hanging protective wall blankets.

The elevators still will be used for both passengers and freight. But HEW has agreed to schedule the movement of freight items at times other than peak hours of use for the gymnasium.

Panel Approves Of Limits On Disaster Loans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate conferees tentatively agreed to limit multi-million dollar disaster loans to farmers, but the millionaire farmers whose loans sparked the action will continue to get federal loans.

A House-Senate conference committee this week put a $2 million limit on Farmers Home Administration disaster loans to individual farmers this fiscal year.

It agreed to reduce the ceiling by $500,000 a year over three years.

By fiscal 1983, a farmer would be able to borrow no more than $500,000 to compensate for losses to crops from drought, flood or other disasters. The phase-out would eliminate adjustment loans, which enabled farmers to refinance farms following disasters.

Current law places no ceilings on disaster loans by a federal agency with a mission to help small- and medium-sized farmers. Lack of a ceiling enabled a farmer in Kern County, Calif., to borrow nearly $17 million in disaster loans.

Congressional action was spurred by a "60 Minutes" program this fall which described several large loans to millionaire farmers.

Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., said, "I think the whole country was shocked" by the show's revelations.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said he was totally unaware of the large size of the loans.

"I just don't happen to think the Farmers Home Administration was set up to service that kind of borrowers," he said.

Federal disaster loans were not to be made unless farmers were denied credit from private sources, but critics said the credit test was loosely administered.

The multi-million dollar loans also were made at subsidized interest rates, with interest on smaller loans for actual crop losses at just 5 percent, which would continue under the compromise.

Interest rates for larger adjustment loans have been in the range of 8 to 9.5 percent. The conferees agreed interest rates for adjustment loans should be negotiated between a borrower and the government, based on the borrower's ability to pay.

At the urging of Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., the conference approved a grandfather provision to permit recipients of existing multi-million dollar loans to continue borrowing operating capital.

The moon is moving toward its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Mercury.

The evening star is Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.

Soviet Premier Josef Stalin was born Dec. 21, 1879.

On this date in history:

In 1620, the Pilgrims set foot for the first time on American soil at Plymouth, Mass.

In 1942, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the validity of six-week divorces granted in Nevada.

In 1968, Apollo 8 blasted off for moon orbit carrying Frank Borman, James Lovell and William Anders.

In 1975, six terrorists burst into a Vienna meeting of oil producing nations' ministers, killed three people and held 70 hostages, including 11 OPEC Ministers.

A thought for the day: British poet Richard Trench said, "We kneel, how weak. We rise, how full of power."

Train Collision Scatters Fowl

One chicken, freshly dressed, flew through the cab of the train, surprising the engineer.

The driver of the truck, William Waxler of Crawfordsville, Fla., said he failed to see the oncoming train this week even though police said the crossing signals were working.

Waxler was not injured.

Prostitutes Complain Of Police Brutality

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Ladies of the evening in South America's largest city want to organize with the help of a women's liberation group that says they can live better the union way.

Sao Paulo's prostitutes are demanding an end to police arrests, a designated portion of the city for themselves where they can practice the world's oldest profession in peace and, eventually, their own union.

"We want to work in peace. We're just out to take care of our clients," one prostitute, who called herself Branca, said this week at a meeting of prostitutes with the Association of the Brazilian Woman, a woman's rights group.

"I don't make any money during the week," she said. "I make my profits Fridays and Saturdays, but then the police come and don't let people work. I've been jailed many times, beaten and robbed," she added.

But lately, the prostitutes complained, their job has become dangerous.

Hundreds held a rowdy late night protest march outside the chief of police's office last September demanding punishment for a student who allegedly brutally murdered one of their own.

And last week, prostitutes began complaining of police brutality, adding the police were also demanding bribes from them.

The fight between hookers and the law "is an old war from before the time of Jesus Christ," criminal lawyer Flavio Marx told the gathering of prostitutes.

Marx is a prominent lawyer who successfully fought the extradition of suspected Nazi war criminal Gustav Franz Wagner earlier this year.

He agreed to a request from the Association of the Brazilian Woman to give the hookers legal advice on how to defend themselves.

Marx said hookers should first concentrate on fighting police arrests, and explained Brazilian law permits arrests of hotel owners and johns who use prostitutes, but not the women.

Number Of Iranian Diplomats In U.S. Unknown

WASHINGTON (AP) — One week after ordering Iran to reduce its diplomatic representation in the United States, the State Department says it is unsure how many, if any, Iranian diplomats have left the country.

The only thing the department knows for certain, officials said Thursday, is that there is now a list of 35 accredited Iranian diplomats. The list used to have 218 names.

Government officials say they have no way of checking whether the other 183 Iranians have stayed in the country illegally or have gone back to Iran. They are not even sure whether they have stopped working at the embassy in Washington and at consulates around the nation.

Asked why the department did not have more precise information, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter replied: "Because we live in a democratic society, restrained by the courts and our own laws."

Officials said some of the Iranians who had been working at the embassy had asked for more time to arrange for their belongings to be shipped. Others, they said, had legitimate visas entitling them to stay in the United States for other reasons.

Whether the embassy has reduced its staff or not, it continued Thursday to publicize allegations that there is a "campaign of intimidation and victimization of Iranians in the United States."

The charges are contained in a four-page press release the embassy has mailed to newspapers throughout the United States.

The embassy alleges dozens of abuses of Iranians, ranging from beatings to a charge that "The notorious 'No Dogs, No Negroes' sign has been changed to 'No Dogs, No Iranians' at the entrance to many restaurants."

In no instance does the embassy document the charges or offer names of the people allegedly abused. "We are not giving out details for obvious security reasons," said embassy official Hussein Ava.

Ava acknowledged that he had no documentation for allegations such as the one about the restaurants. "People have told us this, and we believe it is true," he said.

A check by The Associated Press found some of the charges had validity.

At the University of Oklahoma, for instance, the Iranian student center was fire bombed last month, with minor damage to the front door. An Iranian student at Oklahoma City University was struck with a club by American students.

In Corona, N.Y., masked men fire bombed and vandalized an Islamic mosque Nov. 17, even though the mosque is a worship center for Sunni Moslems, rather than Iranian Shi'ites.

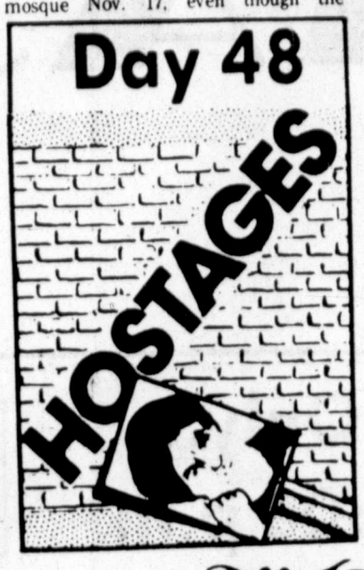

Other allegations were denied.

Los Angeles County Sheriff Peter Pitchess said charges that his deputies helped beat up a group of Iranian demonstrators were "too ridiculous to respond to."

At the State Department, Carter said he had no way of knowing the truth of the general charge that some Iranians were being treated worse than the American hostages in Tehran.

"We have no way of knowing how the hostages are being treated," he said, noting that the Iranians have refused to allow neutral observers to visit all 50 hostages.

Carter said there "have been instances of mistreatment of Iranians, but I am not aware of any surge of incidents involving Iranians. My impression is that there has not been widespread physical abuse."

Kin Of American Hostages Find Waiting Hard During Holidays

By The United Press International

The families of the American hostages held in Iran have suffered through a month and a half of painful waiting filled with false hopes and frustration. Now they are accepting the truth — the hostages won't be home for Christmas.

There is Mrs. Dorothea Morefield, who is waiting in San Diego for her husband, Richard, the U.S. consul-general in Tehran.

"I'm sure Dick will be released okay," she said. "But it is so hard to be patient ... especially in December."

There are Phillip and Gloran Lewis and three of their children waiting in Homer, Ill., for news of their son, Paul, a Marine sergeant. "I just hope he gets home one of these days," Lewis said. "I know he won't be home for Christmas."

Bill Lewis, 12, wears a white armband in honor of his brother and never takes it off except to bathe.

Mrs. Lewis, feeling the strain of uncertainity, has stopped talking to the many reporters who call and visit their home in the small community 15 miles southeast of Champaign.

"My wife won't talk to anybody. She hands the phone over to me. It's really bothering her a lot more than it is me, her and our daughter," he said.

And there are Zane and Dorothy Hall in Little Falls, Minn., who are waiting for word of their son Joseph, an Army warrant officer. They start and end each day by watching news programs.

"We keep hoping something will happen. But nothing ever does. It is the same thing every day ... confusing reports ... and we just don't know who or what to believe. It has been a few days since we last heard from the State Department and so we are kind of in the dark."

The State Department says the confusion coming out of Tehran is purely intentional.

Spokesman Hodding Carter said statements by the Iranians "change and change and change and at this point it is just a game that is being played with people's emotions and their hopes and I don't want to contribute to that."

Iran Students May Sue Counter-Demonstrators

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Five Iranians who sat in silent protest on the steps of City Hall while counter-demonstrators rushed them and tore up their picture of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini now say they might file suit against the leaders of the mob.

The Iranian students were holding a sit-in and hunger strike on the City Hall steps Dec. 12 when counter-demonstrators roughed them up and ripped their picture of the ayatollah. The students were jailed shortly afterward on a charge of obstructing a public passageway and continued their nine-day fast while in custody.

They ended their hunger strike Wednesday when they were released from jail.

Thursday, they told a news conference through spokesman Mohammed Kamiab they were considering legal action against those who bulled their way into their demonstration.

The students claim the counter-demonstrators, led by local disc jockeys Ricci Ware and Jud Ashmore, violated their right to demonstrate.

The students also told reporters they would continue their efforts to seek a demonstration parade permit for protest marches against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

The students also said that while they were in jail the guards "tortured them" on the first day by placing food in front of them.

Shortly after the deposed shah of Iran arrived at Lackland Air Force base to recover from cancer surgery in New York, Iranians attending college in San Antonio began seeking the parade permits to demonstrate against him.

The city consistently refused to grant those permits, though it has not indicated whether it planned to change its policy now that the shah is in Panama.

The five Iranians began their protest of the city's policy Dec. 10.

Star To Stay Aglow Until Homecoming

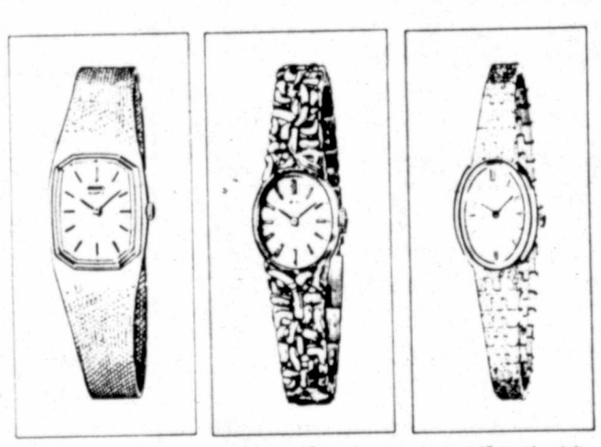

EL PASO (UPI) — A Christmas star that shines down from a mountain overlooking the city will stay lit until the 50 Americans held hostage in Iran are released, the head of El Paso Electric announced.

The 459-foot wide star, annually placed on Mount Franklin by the utility company during the holiday season, will shine every night until the hostages are freed, EPE President Evern R. Wall said Thursday.

Commerce Secretary Appointee Faces Opposition

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

There could be some dirty linen tossed around Washington when the nomination of Philip M. Klutznick to be Commerce secretary comes up for confirmation.

Klutznick, a Chicago real estate developer who has a distinguished background as a leader of Jewish groups and as a government official, also has a number of people mad at him.

Mad enough, in fact, to file lawsuits that charge he and others misused their connections with a New York bank that failed and left small shareholders holding the bag.

The shareholders have sent letters to chairman Howard Cannon of the Senate Commerce Committee, chairman William Proxmire of the Senate Banking Committee and Vice-President Walter Mondale, describing Klutznick's appointment as a "colossal blunder" and asking that it be held up until his activities at the bank are investigated.

Kluznick told us he doesn't think there is any merit to the complaints — that he never misused his position at the bank, that he tried to get some money back for the smaller shareholders and that he, too, lost his entire investment.

The bank is American Bank & Trust Co., which was closed by the New York State Superintendent of Banks in 1976 and sold to Bank Leumi Trust Co., of Israel. Klutznick had been chairman of ABT several years before, but at the time it failed he was chairman of Continental Trade Bank of Geneva, Switzerland, which owned 76 per cent of ABT.

At the time of the failure, an application was pending to transfer control from Continental to David Graiver, an Argentinian who allegedly looted $40 million from ABT while state bank examiners were checking the books. Graiver was reported to have died in an air crash in Mexico, but there are many people who don't believe he did.

The complainers are led by Wallace Cohen, an attorney in Washington, who says Klutznick encouraged his group to invest in ABT, made improper loans from the bank and abandoned them when the bank failed.

Klutznick says he wouldn't do that sort of thing and that he never encouraged anybody but partners in his real estate firm to invest in ABT. "Some people think that because I made a lot of money, everything I do is right, so they follow along," he told us.

He says his loans from the bank were perfectly proper ("They were not very significant and they were fully collateralized," his son Samuel told us) and that there wasn't any money left to return to the shareholders.

As part of his bid to buy ABT, Graiver paid Continental $14 million. When the bank failed, Continental refused to return the money, which is claimed by ABT trustees, the shareholders, Graiver's estate and others.

Cohen claims Klutznick, as chairman of Continental (he says he did nothing more than preside at board meetings) had a "fiduciary obligation to (ABT's) minority shareholders" to return the money.

Klutznick, on the other hand, says "The contract (of sale) didn't vest any powers to claim the money on behalf of ABT. I did go to Geneva to try to get some of the money, but the Swiss weren't about to let it go. I have no idea what's happened to that money now. Even if they had given it back, 76 percent of the money would have gone right back to Switzerland because of Continental's ownership of the bank."

Klutznick resigned from Continental soon after. He says it was two days after ABT failed. Cohen says, "It was after we pushed him and it was more like a month."

Among the other charges is one that Klutznick and his partners borrowed money from ABT to build a hotel in Jerusalem, which Cohen claims netted them a big profit. Klutznick says that the hotel has never been sold, so there isn't any profit, and that the chief financing came from Chemical Bank, not ABT.

"Jerusalem Hotel Associates had overdraft privileges at ABT and had drawn down $600,000 when the bank failed," Samuel Klutznick said. "Father paid in his share of that loan when the bank closed."

It isn't certain how much of a fuss Klutznick's accusers intend to make when the Senate hearings open. Many of the people involved in the lawsuits are old friends of Klutznick's (or at least they were before the bank failed).

But, as Cohen's letter indicates, some of them aren't planning to let the event pass unnoticed.

Experienced Farmers Aid Rookies

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — A dozen North Dakota farmers, most of them over 70 years of age, are visiting hundreds of farms to give rookies in the business a sympathetic ear and advice on how to keep going through the uncertainties of feeding the nation.

"I've been a farmer practically my whole life," says Arthur Knudtson, 76, of Donnybrook. "We had problems back then, and we have problems today, too."

Knudston is one of 14 North Dakota farmers in a pilot project sponsored by Volunteers in Service to America.

"We're trying to help the small farmer so the family farm does not become a relic of the past," says Douglas Johnston of Denver, whose agency, the Farmers Home Administration, is handling the program.

"We realized older retired people are probably one of our stronger untapped assets," he said in a recent interview. "These people survived the Depression and two world wars, and they're willing to share how they survived with the new farmers of today."

Knudtson, whose son has taken over his cattle and grain operation, recalls the Great Depression as a time in which "everybody seems to have been in the same boat. The government helped a bit, and we had our cows, milk, eggs and meat. If you have to, you can get along with a lot less."

The volunteers act as listening posts, soliciting the most serious problems facing young farmers today. Each will visit 250 to 300 farms during their year's service.

"I guess transportation is probably the biggest problem we find," Knudtson says, "like railroad cars to transport grain to market.

"Transportation was never a serious problem before," he says. "A farmer could always sell his grain locally. Every branch line, every little town had two or three elevators in it."

He also says farmers today are concerned with rising production costs. "The profit margin, if there is any, is very small," he says. "The price of machines and fertilizer is up, and the price of fuel is way out of sight."

Sometimes "it takes a little convincing" to get young farmers to open up to the volunteers, says Rudolph Wagner, 78, of Goodrich.

"But that's the only way we can get the problems out here down to Washington," he says.

Balloons Form Christmas Tree

By SHARI LEWIS

Before the real Christmas tree arrives, make your own. Form a ballon tree on the wall by attaching green or red balloons with tiny bits of cellophane tape. Use double faced tape, or roll a little circle of regular tape, sticky side out. Place a single balloon at the top, three in the next row, five in the next and so on. Two or three balloons up and down form the trunk.

This is likely to be the only Christmas tree you'll ever own on which a branch might deflate!

And have the world's safest indoor snowball fight: Each kid gets a lot of white balloon snowballs. Everybody blows up his or her balloon and stands against the wall. One at a time, each player lets go of the balloon, and as the air escapes, the snowballs zing around. Then each player stands on the spot where his or her snowball landed. The person who has "thrown" the snowball the farthest is the winner.

ANSWER: Wiglets!

ANSWER: Unclers!

These two are not my fault. They were sent to me by Lia Wetkin of Ottawa, Canada, so if you don't like them, don't tell me, tell her!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Can you make five odd numbers add up to 20? (Look for the answer in Sunday's Kids-Only Club column.)

Window Shades Help To Cut Heat Loss

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

At no time since the country became energy-conscious have manufacturers flooded the market with so many varieties of energy-saving products as during the past few months.

Items have included new types of insulation, weatherstripping, heat reclaimers, windows, venetian blinds, draperies and various other kinds of fuel-saving articles. All, in some way, are designed to keep warm air inside the house and cold air out of it in one period of the year and the other way around at another time.

One study, conducted by the Illinois Institute of Technology, concluded that the mere act of lowering and raising window shades at the proper times of day and season could cut fuel costs for cooling and heating. The scientists calculated that lowered shades blocked out up to 54 percent of the sun's rays and hot air that normally gets into the house through the windows in the summer in a moderate climate. They further said that shades kept inside up to 31 percent of the indoor heat that normally escapes through windows in cold weather.

Now comes a new study and a new conclusion: that a simple do-it-yourself project can substantially increase the ability of a window shade to prevent the passage of air through a regular glass window. Fitting a wooden slat at the bottom of the shade into side tracks installed inside the window frame is said to improve window-shade heat loss reduction by 17 percent to almost 40 percent, depending on materials.

This conclusion was reached by David Buchanan, associate professor of Design and Environmental Analysis, after a series of laboratory tests at Cornell University under a grant from the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers.

In comprehensive tests to measure the decrease in heat normally lost through an uncovered glass window, Buchanan found that the fairly common vinyl-covered opaque cotton shade reduced heat loss by 31.5 percent. When the shade was fitted into the side tracks, the heat loss reduction was 37 percent. With shade materials that allowed more heat to escape than the opaque shade, adding side tracks meant an even greater difference. A vinyl-coated translucent shade went from 26.2 percent to 36.3 percent in heat loss reduction, while an all-vinyl shade's performance went up from 24.8 percent without tracks to 34.6 percent with tracks.

Side tracks can be made with wooden slats, glued or nailed vertically to the window frame with a half-inch clearance in which to fit the shade's sides. A metal or plastic U-channel can perform as well. The best and easiest to use is a plastic U-channel that can be easily forced open.

Maker Of Yule Wreaths Begins Work In July

INVER GROVE HEIGHTS, Minn. (AP) — Seventeen years ago, Joe Ahern was a 23-year-old student who needed some extra money. He had a friend who needed Christmas wreaths.

So Ahern founded Evergreen Industries and made 500 wreaths in his garage.

"Now, with a full crew, we can produce that many in an hour," said Ahern, whose company has become one of the largest hand-made Christmas wreath and garland businesses in the Midwest.

"This year we produced well over 200,000 wreaths of various sizes," Ahern said.

The business has doubled in the last three years and he said he expects it to double again in the next five years. Now too big for garages, the company is housed in a new 15,000-square-foot building where up to 400 teen-agers and 40 to 50 women work from mid-October to mid-December to produce the natural wreaths, ropings and swags from balsam fir boughs.

"It's a busy eight weeks, very hectic. We put in 12-to 15-hour days with people working 3-to 5½-hour shifts," Ahern said in a recent interview. He said students average $300 to $500 for the period.

For Ahern, however, the work begins in July when he heads to the Black Hills of South Dakota to pick Ponderosa pine cones. He supplements those with cones from Alabama lob lolly and slash pine trees. The boughs come from northern Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and Canada.

Each wreath is made by a bough cutter and an assembler working together, then pine cones, holly berries and a decorative bow are added by another worker. A fast team can make up to 20 small wreaths in an hour, Ahern said. His workers use between 12 and 15 tons of boughs a day.

The wreaths, sold in 30 states, range from one to six feet in diameter and wholesale costs range from $2.25 to $34.95, Ahern said.

"We sell primarily to nurseries, garden stores and cemeteries, and almost half of our business is involved with fund-raising organizations such as the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts," said Ahern, whose wife handles the books for the company.

"The market is there," he said. "It's just a matter of getting them out on time.

Dairy Price Supports May Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dairy farmers may see federal milk price supports raised an additional 6.6 percent next spring, a sharper increase than some Agriculture Department experts predicted several months ago.

The increase would be mandatory under law, which calls for an adjustment April 1 — midway in the dairy marketing year — to reflect changes in costs of producing milk over the preceding six months.

Officials say they are not sure at this time what impact the increase will have on retail milk prices later in 1980, but the higher support will prevent them from dropping precipitously at the farm level.

Price supports were set as of Oct. 1 at $11.22 per 100 pounds of milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat that is sold to make cheese, butter and nonfat dried milk. That rate, which will be in effect until next spring's adjustment, represented a boost on Oct. 1 of 6.8 percent from the support of $10.51 that had been in effect.

The adjustments in milk supports involves a formula that links the rates to parity, the indicator which, at 100 percent, theoretically would give farmers the same buying power they had in the period of 1910-14.

But as production expenses rise, so does the parity price of a commodity.

President Carter recently signed a bill that continues for two more years a requirement that the milk support be set each Oct. 1 at no less than 80 percent of parity. It also calls for a semiannual adjustment the following April 1 to reflect any changes in production expenses over the previous six months.

Back in September, when USDA was working on the new Oct. 1 support level, officials projected that the mid-year increase due next April 1 would be an estimated 4.5 percent, boosting the minimum guaranteed dairy farmers then to about $11.72 per 100 pounds of milk.

However, this week, USDA said a 6.6 percent increase now appears likely next April 1, which would boost the basic milk support to $11.96 per 100 pounds, an increase of 74 cents from the current level.

Dairy farmers do not get direct federal payments under the support program, but USDA agrees to buy surplus butter, cheese and nonfat dry milk at prices high enough so dealers can afford to pay producers the minimum rates specified.

With increased production this year, actual milk prices recently have been at or slightly less than the federal support rate, a situation that USDA experts say appears likely to continue in 1980.

The department said written comments about the semiannual milk support adjustment due next spring can be sent by Feb. 18 to Robert R. Stansberry, Procurement and Sales Division, ASCS, USDA, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

China Could Be Major Exporter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says China could be a major new foreign supplier of mushrooms for Americans if the United States grants it most-favored-nation trade status.

China "has never exported significant amounts of mushrooms to the United States" because of high tariffs that boost their costs, a report said this week.

But if most-favored-nation status — recommended by President Carter and now being considered in Congress — is approved, U.S. import duties on Chinese mushrooms would be reduced sharply, it said.

"While there is little information available on this industry (in China), exports of canned mushrooms are expected to rise substantially in the long term," the report said.

The United States is the world's leading canned mushroom market and is second only to West Germany as an importer.

In the 1978-79 mushroom marketing year that ended last June 30, U.S. domestic production was shown at 205,100 metric tons, as measured on the basis of fresh weight.

Imports of canned mushrooms, the report said, totaled 58,400 metric tons, and dried mushrooms 6,500. That made "apparent consumption" of mushrooms last year about 270,000 metric tons.

Thus, it said, imports accounted for about 24 percent of the U.S. mushroom consumption in 1978-79.

Taiwan supplied 50 percent of the imported canned mushrooms last year, South Korea 32 percent and Hong Kong 15 percent, the report said.

Candidate Qualifies For Federal Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission has approved Lyndon H. LaRouche's application for federal matching funds for his presidential campaign.

LaRouche announced his candidacy earlier this year as a member of the U.S. Labor Party but then decided to run as a Democrat. To qualify for federal funds, a candidate must raise at least $5,000 in 20 different states in gifts of no more than $250 each. "I am voting for this solely on the advice of the general counsel that we should certify ... unless we have found patent irregularities which suggest the possibility of fraud," said commissioner Frank P. Reiche. "Thus far, no such irregularities have apparently been found." LaRouche sued the FEC after it rejected a similar request in 1976 and that case is still pending before the Supreme Court.

Consumer Agency Viewed As Paper Tiger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission is viewed as a "paper tiger" because its rules do not permit it to act quickly enough on the public's behalf, says an agency official.

Stuart M. Statler, a commissioner of the independent regulatory agency, also charged Thursday that the regulations permit special interest groups to manipulate the panel.

The commission is looking into the criticisms, said Susan B. King, who heads the agency which sets safety standards for consumer products.

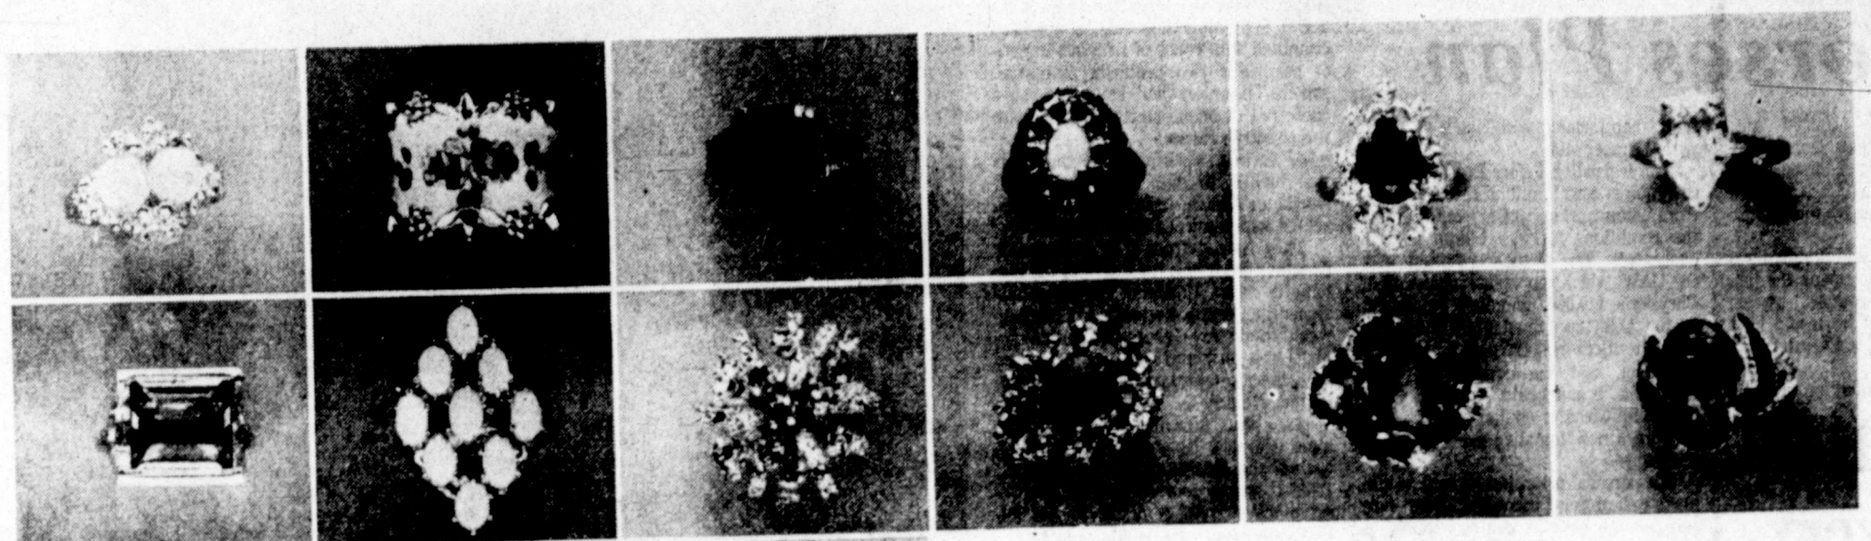

The CPSC is considered a "paper tiger," Statler charged, because of "self-imposed bonds which prevent the agency from consistently acting in a timely manner on the public's behalf."

The regulations he cited were ones for handling petitions from industry and the public and for enforcing the "Sunshine" and Freedom of Information Acts.

In the past three years, industry or trade groups have generated more than 75 percent of the petitions handled by the agency, Statler said. That, he contended, runs counter to Congress' intention.

Rhodesian Factions Sign Peace Treaty

LONDON (AP) — Rhodesia's warring leaders signed a fragile peace settlement today, promising independent black rule for Britain's last African colony after 14 years of rebellion.

A British spokesman said the signing went off "without a hitch."

With Britain's Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington presiding, the ceremony brought together Abel Muzorewa, a black bishop-turned-politician, and Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, co-commanders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla armies.

The documents they signed bind them to accept a package of agreements providing for an early cease-fire, a series of carefully defined transitional arrangements preceding countrywide elections by late February, a new constitution and then establishment of an independent Zimbabwe ruled by the black majority for the first time.

After the 15-minute ceremony, Carrington said the signing represented "an end of war and enmity."

He said: "It is essential the parties realize this is a solemn and binding agreement."

Carrington, alongside Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, was placed in between the two groups in Lancaster House, where the marathon peace talks began September 10. This is a palace crammed with relics of Britain's imperial past. For two centuries monarchs, princes, premiers and statesmen have conferred or been entertained here with this country's rulers.

A curious assortment of onlookers was invited to witness the encounter which, in African terms at least, represented something of a watershed.

They ranged from U.S. Ambassador Kingman Brewster, the doyen of the diplomatic corps, Mauritian High Commissioner Sir Leckraz Teelock and Commonwealth Secretary-General Shridath Ramphal, to a former Royal Air Force pilot with the most prosaic of names: Ian D. Smith.

As prime minister, Smith was the man who led Rhodesia into rebellion against the British Crown on Nov. 11, 1965. It was a doomed attempt to preserve the supremacy of his 230,000 fellow-whites over the 6.8 million blacks.

Four hours after Smith's unilateral declaration of independence, former Labor Prime Minister Sir Harold Wilson rose in the House of Commons and catalogued a variety of punitive reprisals. None impressed the black states of Africa. They demanded the use of British force to crush Smith's rebellion and they took Wilson's refusal as a symptom of Britain's unwillingness, or impotence, to act against a group of white recalcitrants numbering less than half the population of Sheffield, an average-sized English Midlands city.

Within two months Wilson's government had, with United Nations' authority, imposed an oil embargo and other sanctions against Rhodesia. But, as a state investigator later established, by the spring of 1966 British oil companies themselves were busting sanctions in clandestine fashion and against the law.

In time, despairing of effective British intervention to reassert legal authority, Rhodesia's blacks began to act directly. Formation of the Patriotic Front unified two long-feuding political parties under Nkomo and Mugabe who, themselves, had for years been jailed.

Their guerrilla movement was launched seven years and 20,000 lives ago against the sophisticated air and land forces of the Smith government, which was helped by neighboring South Africa. The white-led Rhodesian forces took their anti-guerrilla operations into neighboring Zambia and Mozambique, where the guerrillas had their bases and their Cuban and Soviet trainers.

Head Of Union Endorses Plan

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers union President Douglas A. Fraser today reluctantly endorsed a federal aid plan for Chrysler Corp. that requires wage concessions by the company's workers.

But even though he said the plan was "absolutely essential" to saving the jobs of the company's workers, Fraser stopped short of saying he would push for ratification of a new Chrysler contract.

"Whatever the (negotiating) committee is comfortable with, we'll go along with," Fraser said.

The legislation before President Carter requires $462.5 million in concessions from union workers at Chrysler as one of the conditions for $1.5 billion in loan guarantees. The October contract with the UAW, which represents almost all of Chrysler's 110,000 unionized employees in the U.S., contained $203 million in wage sacrifices over the next three years.

Fraser said the committee would meet Jan. 2 and could reopen negotiations with Chrysler on Jan. 3 or 4, wrapping up a new tentative pact in two or three days.

His personal priorities, he said, would make cost-of-living increases, health care and pension benefits contract items, to be kept unchanged if at all possible.

Some local union officers have speculated the union would give up its members' 20 paid days off in 1981 and 1982, estimated to be worth $200 million or more to the company.

Earlier in the day, General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy, an initial opponent of federal aid to Chrysler, welcomed the aid plan.

"As a Detroiter, this is good news," Murphy said in a statement.

"We have always known Chrysler to be a strong competitor. We respect their management and we hope to continue our relationship with Chrysler as a supplier, as a customer and as a competitor."

Congress on Thursday sent to President Carter a bill authorizing $1.5 billion in guaranteed loans for Chrysler, the largest federal bailout of a U.S. corporation in history.

When Chrysler first sought help last summer, Murphy opposed it on the grounds that a free-enterprise system ought to allow failures to fail.

Later, he said he favored loan guarantees if that were the only way to save Chrysler.

Pastor Held On Slavery Charges

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Federal agents have arrested the pastor of the Church of God and True Holiness for violating slavery laws, following charges that some church members were beaten and whipped and forced to work at a chicken plant without pay.

The Rev. Robert A. Carr also has been charged with conspiring to violate involuntary servitude laws. He was arrested on Thursday in Compton, Calif., authorities said.

Also indicted by a federal grand jury were Carr's daughter, Gloria Cain, her husband, Larry, and Jimmy Conyers, all reported to be members of the church. None had been arrested.

The church, based in Durham, has been investigated by at least six federal and state agencies over the last two years.

The indictments allege that some church members were subjected to beatings and whippings, forced marriages and forced labor at a Raleigh poultry plant, said U.S. Attorney H.M. Michaux.

In addition, the four are accused of forcing members to perform various chores and holding members against their will, he said.

Some church members claim food stamps and welfare checks were taken from them and used by church leaders, the Durham Morning Herald reported.

The church was founded in Wilson and moved to Durham in 1974. A branch of the church was discovered in Florence, S.C., and another was reported in Birmingham, Ala.

The indictments allege that church members were forced to work at Cross Poultry Co. in Raleigh.

Former church members have said that a church leader picked up cash payment for the work weekly but never turned the money over to them, according to the Morning Herald. Company officials were not available for comment on the allegations.

Calvin Hester, a former Wilson County deputy, said that after his wife became a member, she was persuaded to abandon him and their 4-year-old child, the newspaper said. He said she had not been seen since.

Tapes Pinpoint Santa's Trip

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — The North American Air Defense Command says copies of its taped recorded tracking of Santa Claus' journey from the North Pole to Earth were given to 480 broadcast outlets in three countries.

Sgt. Dick Chase, a NORAD spokesman, this week said the tapes that have been produced since the mid-50s, were supplied as a public service to radio and television stations in the United States, Canada and France.

He said about 3,500 broadcast stations, furnished the tapes in previous years, were expected to use them this Christmas season.

The tapes consist of five reports averaging about 1½ minutes each which pinpoint Santa's location as he makes his annual trek to Earth.

Chase said the tapes were usually played on Christmas Eve.

Boeing Successful On Missile Flight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boeing has logged its eighth successful cruise missile flight in a 10-flight competition with General Dynamics for a billion-dollar defense contract, the Air Force says.

A spokesman, Lt. Steve Davis, said Wednesday the unarmed AGM-86B was launched Tuesday from an Air Force B-52 bomber for a brief flight over the Utah Test and Training Range southwest of Salt Lake City.

The Air Force contract calls for 3,000 of the cruise missiles. On Dec. 6, a General Dynamics cruise missile crashed in the Los Padres National Forest, 13 miles from Ojai, Calif.

Khomeini Issues Order For Visits To Hostages

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today ordered that Christian clergymen be invited to pay a Christmas visit to the hostages at the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The clergymen apparently will be Americans or other foreigners, and priority will be given to blacks.

The order ended days of speculation over whether Iranian authorities would honor recent promises to admit neutral observers to the embassy and to allow clergymen to hold services for the hostages or at least visit them during the Christian holiday.

The official Tehran Radio interrupted its normal newscast to broadcast the brief order to the Revolutionary Council by Khomeini.

"On the occasion of Christmas the Revolutionary Council is to invite a number of Christian clergy to come to Iran so that American hostages may celebrate Christmas in peace," the Moslem clergyman-revolutionary leader said.

"Due to the proper reaction of black clergymen toward the Islamic revolution, priority should be given to them."

A spokesman for the militants occupying the embassy immediately confirmed the visitors will be admitted to the compound.

"Yes, of course we will admit them," he told a reporter. "We had already made preparations of our own, and these we will announce on Christmas Eve."

Earlier today, a top Khomeini associate was quoted as calling for release of the 50 U.S. Embassy hostages, but the Moslem militants holding the embassy rebuffed him and insisted their American captives will go on trial.

A Kentucky couple who visited the embassy predicted, meanwhile, that the 47-day-old U.S.-Iran crisis would be over within 60 days.

In other developments, an Iranian official reported that supreme leader Khomeini and his Revolutionary Council had a "very good" discussion of the hostage situation at a special meeting Thursday. And the embassy militants said they would allow their prisoners to make special Christmas telephone calls home.

Khomeini associate Sadeq Khalkhali, former chief Islamic prosecutor, was quoted as saying in an interview in Qom with the London Times: "I regard these people (the hostages) as innocent. They are our guests. I want them to be released and (to) go back to their homes. Even if they are spies, that is not enough reason to keep them.

"Every embassy has spies in it. We cannot execute any spies according to Islamic laws. Even if we try the hostages, we do not want to condemn them. We want to condemn Carter and the American government," Khalkhali said in a reiteration of a statement he made last week to The AP.

Asked about Khalkali's statements, a spokesman for the embassy militants told The Associated Press they were "his own opinions."

"We are following Imam Khomeini and the Iranian people. We are only responsible for our own announcements," the militant said.

He said the student position was that because the deposed shah went from the United States to Panama instead of back to Iran to face trial, the hostages will be tried as spies.

"The trial will be decided by Imam Khomeini with the people," the spokesman said.

The Washington Star, quoting unnamed U.S. sources, reported that the Carter administration wants the hostages to remain silent if they are put on trial and may not provide them with lawyers. There was no immediate official comment by the Carter administration on the report.

The Kentucky couple, John and Louise Smiley of Mount Sterling, are here on a 10-day "friendship" visit. They posted $120,000 in bond for arrested Iranian student protesters in the United States last year and have developed contacts among the militant students here. They openly sympathize with the Iranians' demand for return of the exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Smiley said it was President Carter who "has them (the hostages) under lock and key by not returning the shah."

A student friend took them into the embassy compound Thursday to meet some of the militants, but they did not see any of the hostages.

A militant spokesman told a reporter today that the hostages "from now on ... will be allowed to phone relatives regularly, solely for the coming of Christmas." He gave no details. The militants already allow some hostages to make calls irregularly to the United States.

The official Pars news agency quoted Interior Minister Hashemi Rafsanjani as saying the hostage situation was among the topics discussed at the special Revolutionary Council meeting Thursday, but he declined to elaborate.

U.N. Sanctions

al arguments on the administration's appeal of a lower court ruling that said the government's deportation program against Iranian students here illegally was unconstitutional.

The United States, at the behest of U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, delayed seeking sanctions against Iran to allow Waldheim to continue "intensive discussions" with Iranian representatives in New York.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, on a fast-paced tour of five capitals last week, gained strong support from U.S. allies in Western Europe.

And on Thursday, reversing stinging American criticism, Carter said Japan was now giving full cooperation to the U.S. drive to free the hostages.

Still, a trade embargo must be virtually air-tight to succeed. Sanctions against Rhodesia, for instance, failed to ruin the breakaway British colony's economy because South Africa aided its beleaguered neighbor.

The United States, on its own, is boycotting Iranian oil and has frozen Iranian assets in American banks.

DPS Puts Maximum Force On Highways

stay on main thoroughfares if they're traveling on Christmas Day, especially in New Mexico.

Carolyn Edwards of the AAA in Lubbock said most gas stations in eastern New Mexico will remain closed from 6 p.m. Monday through Tuesday, Christmas Day. However, most major truck stops along interstate routes will be open.

In Texas, 25 percent of all gas stations surveyed by the AAA said they would be open Christmas Day, but that their hours may fluctuate according to holiday traffic patterns.

Although most airline flights are booked solid through the holiday week — as usual — airline spokesmen in Lubbock report chances of flying standby are "excellent."

"Many people make reservations on four or five flights and then don't cancel the ones they don't need," explained Steve Rogers of Southwest Airlines. "No-shows" usually average 20 percent, he said, but during the Christmas holidays they can be up to 30 percent.

Rogers advised Southwest standby passengers to arrive at the airport two hours before flight time to join the standby list.

Braniff International, Continental and Texas International representatives advised passengers wanting standby seats on those airlines' flights to call the reservations desk first, "then come out to the airport, because we don't always know until five minutes before flight time if there will be space."

All airline spokesmen said reserved passengers should allow extra time at the terminal — ideally one hour — due to heavy holiday traffic.

Airport parking could cause delays of up to 20 minutes, says Lubbock Aviation Director Marvin Coffee. Although more parking spaces are available this year than last, bad weather held up completion of a 740-space structure, which officials had hoped to have half-completed for the Christmas rush.

"The main thing to do is allow extra time (to look for a parking place) because of the congestion," Coffee advised.

Long-term parking costs $2 per day, while short-term airport parking is $3 per day. Short term parking spaces are closer to the terminal.

Exxon USA and Getty Refining and Marketing Co. have ordered their company-operated stations to open for holiday motorists, but most gas outlets run by independent dealers were expected to close for Christmas and New Year's.

Exxon said its company stations nationwide will pump gas during the holidays for the same number of hours as on normal weekdays, athough the operating hours may be adjusted to accommodate holiday traffic patterns.

The Exxon order, however, applies only to its company stations, which make up less than 5 percent of its 22,000 outlets nationwide.

Exxon and other major oil companies surveyed Thursday said they did not control the hours of the bulk of the stations selling their gas, which are operated by independent dealers.

Getty, in newspaper ads appearing today, said its 77 company-operated gas stations in eight northeastern states will be open this weekend and Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

Motorists traveling on interstate highways and other major arteries should have an easier time of finding a fill-up, since station contracts with governmental agencies usually require holiday operations.

The holiday gas picture is complicated by supply problems. Many dealers are running low on their December gas allocations and stations that might otherwise open are closing their pumps to stretch supplies until January.

Atlantic Richfield, Gulf, Mobil, and Standard Oil of Indiana said holiday hours were up to individual dealers who operate mostor all of the outlets selling their gas brands.

"Probably most of them are going to be closed," said a Gulf spokesman.

Negotiating Committee Tackles Problems Of Oil Profits Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and House negotiators, their decisions destined to play a major role in shaping energy policy for the 1980s, are trying to decide how to distribute a $227.3 billion "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry.

Although the tough choices that will shape that policy were postponed, Thursday's agreement on the overall limits of the tax gave the committee the major breakthrough Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House delegation, said is necessary to show that Congress is serious about enacting the tax.

"Unless we make this type of compromise ... we could be here from now to February or March and still not get anywhere," said Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the conference committee.

The compromise tax, when combined with existing state and federal taxes, would take back from the oil industry about 79 percent of the $1 trillion consumers are expected to pay in higher energy prices in the 1980s because of President Carter's decision to end price controls on U.S. crude oil.

After existing taxes are deducted, the actual "windfall" to the oil industry would be about $440 billion over the decade. The compromise would take about 49 percent of that.

The House delegation accepted the compromise on an unrecorded vote, with only one or two members opposing it. The vote of the Senate delegates was 6-3.

President Carter proposed a windfall tax to gain political acceptance for his decision to phase out price controls on U.S. crude oil. That decision will mean higher consumer prices, and the tax would take part of the money back from the oil industry and use it to help lower-income Americans pay rising energy costs and to finance development of alternate fuels.

Carter was quoted earlier in the week as saying that splitting the difference between the $178 billion tax passed by the Senate and the $277 billion version approved by the House — which is just what the conferees did — would not be enough. However, the president stopped short of threatening to reject such a split.

The shape of national energy policy will be decided in large part by how the conference committee spreads the tax burden among the parts of the oil industry.

For example, one of the toughest decisions will be on how stiff a tax to impose on oil yet to be discovered. Economists say a heavy tax on that oil might force the industry to step up investments in other forms of energy, while a light tax might provide the incentives that could lead to greater exploration for oil.

Too, as part of its version, the Senate approved more than $30 billion worth of tax incentives aimed at encouraging homeowners, landlords and businesses to conserve energy and at expediting production of new fuels. The House approved no such spending programs, and how that difference is settled could be a factor in the national energy policy.

Even as the conferees agreed on the size of the tax, the Congressional Budget Office was issuing new estimates of how the separate House and Senate bills would affect oil production. But production would drop from today's level of about 8.5 million barrels a day under either version, the agency said.

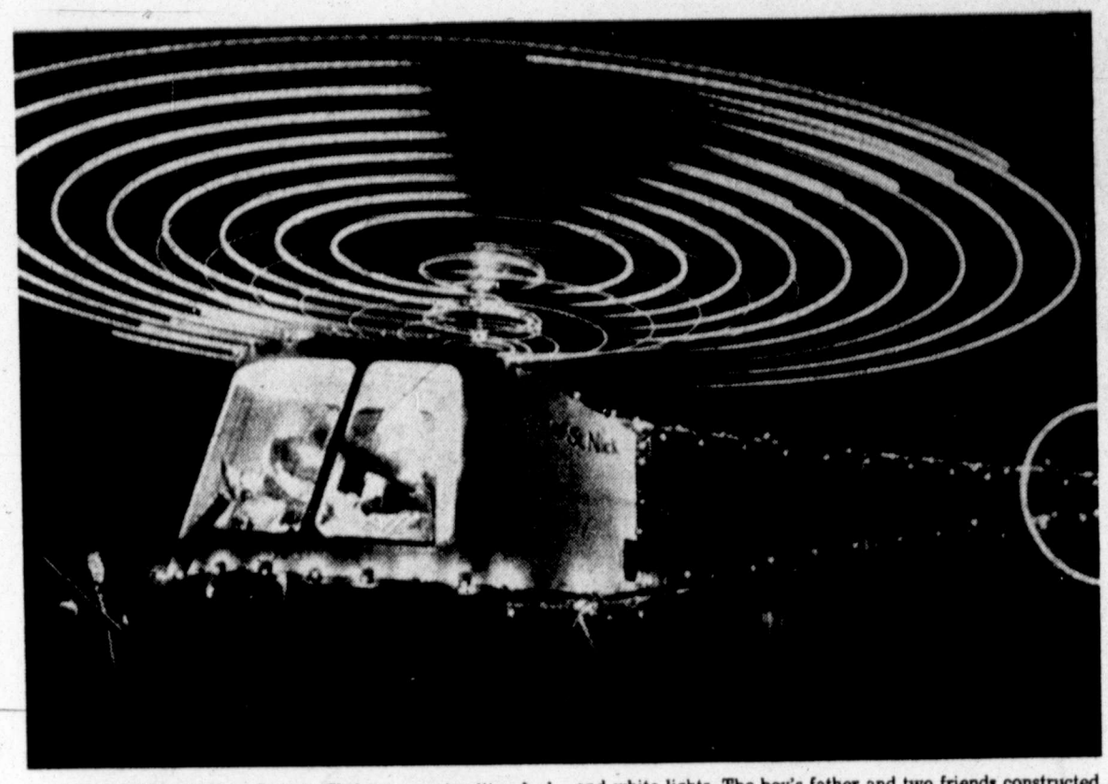

If prices were decontrolled without imposing a windfall tax, the budget office said, production in 1990 should total 7.9 million barrels a day. It estimated provisions of the House bill would result in production of 7.1 million barrels a day while provisions of the Senate version would allow 7.5 million barrels a day.

By that reckoning, the compromise would mean production of about 7.3 million barrels a day.

The tax would take away a portion — depending on the type and location of the oil involved — of each price increase above current levels. While applied to revenue rather than directly to profits, the tax ultimately would reduce industry profits. Thus the commonly accepted name: "windfall profits tax."

The conferees also agreed to repeal a 1976 change in inheritance taxes known as carryover basis. The change was so complex that Congress had never allowed it to go into effect.

It would have imposed income taxes on the full increase in value of inherited property from the time it was acquired by the deceased until it was sold by the heir. Repeal would allow the tax only on the increase in value from the time the property was inherited until it was sold.

Safety Board Releases Findings On Air Crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board ruled today that the crash of the DC-10 jet in Chicago was triggered by a 10-inch crack in an engine mount and concluded that American Airlines must shoulder the major blame for the worst U.S. aviation disaster.

The board cited the airline for maintenance practices which it said caused the crack. But it also said that the plane's manufacturer, McDonnell Douglas Corp., and the Federal Aviation Administration must also share some of the blame.

American Airlines Flight 191 crashed on takeoff from Chicago's O'Hare International Airport last May 25 when the left engine ripped away and somersaulted over the wing. The plane stalled, rolled to the left and plunged onto an abandoned airfield. All 271 persons aboard the plane and two on the ground were killed.

The board, after two days of discussion leading up to the final decision, adopted a probable cause that said the separation of the engine resulted from the damage induced by American's maintenance practices.

Listed as contributing causes were McDonnell Douglas' design of the engine mount, or pylon, which the board said made it vulnerable to damage, and deficiencies in the FAA's inspection and reporting systems.

The board's investigative staff had proposed that the crash was the result of the damaged pylon, and that the roles of McDonnell Douglas, American and the FAA all should be listed as contributing causes.

However, the board felt strongly that the airline should share a greater portion of the blame, and added this sentence to the finding of probable cause:

"The separation resulted from damage by improper maintenance procedures which led to the failure of the pylon structure."

Board member Francis McAdams also recommended that the design deficiencies of McDonnell Douglas be part of the probable cause. However, he was voted down by the four other members, who cited the safe operating record of DC-10s that have been maintained according to McDonnell Douglas' recommended procedures.

The safety board also made eight recommendations to the FAA, urging improvement of many of its inspection, reporting and design certification practices.

Since the Chicago crash, American and McDonnell Douglas have been blaming each other for the accident. Following the board's report, Donald Lloyd Jones, American's senior vice-president for operations, said the airline did not agree with the finding that the company's maintenace practices should be part of the probable cause.

"We do not agree with that," he said. "We felt our maintenance practices were proper in light of what we knew at that time."

He said McDonnell Douglas had never warned American that its procedure might be hazardous.

William T. Gross, a McDonnell Douglas vice president, told reporters after the meeting that the manufacturer believes the DC-10 was properly designed and certified.

He declined direct comment on the board's finding that the pylon design was a contributing cause, but said: "I believe the board's probable cause states clearly what caused the accident."

For the most part, the safety board adopted its investigators' findings on the accident.

The investigators said the crash was triggered by a 10-inch crack in the rear bulkhead of the left wing engine pylon, one of the points where the pylon attaches to the wing.

When the crack gave way, they said, the engine ripped away and somersaulted over the wing, extensively damaging hydraulic fluid lines and electrical cables. Without the cables, cockpit instruments were disabled that could have warned the crew the aircraft was about to stall.

In a stall, a plane's wings do not produce enough lift to support the plane and it literally quits flying.

Firm Offers Compensation To Relatives

CHICAGO (AP) — Christmas Day will mark exactly seven months since an American Airlines DC-10 dropped an engine, twisted grotesquely in the air, then crashed, snuffing out 273 lives and savaging the financial security of thousands of others in a roaring fireball.

The May 25 crash at O'Hare International Airport crash — the worst in U.S. aviation history — faded from public horror to private grief.

Now the crash is back in the public eye, with release on Thursday of a government agency staff's findings and recommendations on its crash investigation and with mounting lawsuits aimed at compensating the victims' survivors.

Since the disaster, 102 suits for damages have been filed in federal courts and about six in state courts, says attorney John Kennelly, who represents 30 plaintiffs.

"I expect another 100 damage suits to be filed," Kennelly said. "I've been contacted by at least 25 other people."

A settlement of $950,000 has been reached in one case, Kennelly said, and he expects the others to average from $500,000 to $700,000.

American Airlines has offered settlements to 225 relatives of crash victims, says Robert Alpert, senior vice president in charge of airline claims for United States Aviation Underwriters, which is handling claims arising from the crash.

One stipulation proposed by American and McDonnell Douglas, manufacturer of the ill-fated plane, was that if plaintiffs agree to waive claims for punitive damages, American and McDonnell Douglas "shall not contest their liability for compensatory damages."

Alpert said several cases "are ready for trial now on the issue of compensatory damages. As soon as the court has an opening for a trial date American and McDonnell Douglas are prepared to go to trial."

Alpert refused to say how many of the American offers have been accepted. Persons who have received offers have until Jan. 10 to accept or reject them. For juvenile plaintiffs, the date is Jan. 31.

Conceivably, their decisions on whether to waive punitive damages could be affected by the staff report of the National Transportation Safety Board, released Thursday.

The report apportions blame for the crash among American, McDonnell Douglas and the Federal Aviation Administration.

The jetliner crashed after losing its left engine. The NTSB staff report says a 10-inch crack in the rear bulkhead of the engine pylon, where the engine attaches to the wing, was caused by American's improper maintenance procedures.

The report also says the McDonnell Douglas pylon design was faulty, and the FAA failed to keep track of maintenance procedures. Other airlines had reported pylon cracks to the FAA before the Chicago crash.

But one attorney says the NTSB's ruling "will not affect the civil litigations in any way."

Philip Corboy, who represents 25 plaintiffs, said a federal statute prohibits use in court of any report affixing blame. However, investigators named in the report may testify in crash suits as to what they think caused the crash, Corboy said, as long as they do not testify about whose fault they think it was.

"Some of our clients will accept the stipulation and others will not," Kennelly said of the offer on compensatory and punitive damages. "It's a tradeoff. To pursue punitive damages could take three or four years. And then you may not win."

Another likely delay, Kennelly said, stems from a separate DC-10 case pending in the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Los Angeles.

That case — based on the 1974 crash of a Turkish Airlines DC-10 into a forest outside Paris, killing 346 persons — will determine whether punitive damages can be awarded in wrongful death cases. The defendants are McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics, both located in California.

Kennelly said the Los Angeles case probably would have to be decided before punitive damages are awarded in the American Airlines cases. He said he hoped for a ruling within six months.

Earlier this month, two federal judges issued a ruling that Corboy called "a major victory" for plaintiffs in the Chicago crash.

U.S. District Judges Hubert Will and Edwin Robson ruled suits should include interest from May 25 to the time the damages are decided.

That, said Kennelly, should remove the incentive for insurance companies to delay cases in order to earn interest on money that they must eventually pay out in damages.

Chicago Transit Workers Ordered Back To Jobs

CHICAGO (AP) — For the first time in five days, commuters streamed into the city today aboard buses and rapid transit trains after striking transit workers returned to work under court order.

Authorities said the buses and trains were operating at near-capacity.

The 11,000 Chicago Transit Authority workers abandoned picket lines Thursday night after Judge Donald J. O'Brien ordered them back to work and directed that they get an immediate 24-cent-an-hour raise.

O'Brien also ordered the transit authority and the Amalgamated Transit locals to submit their dispute to binding arbitration, mainly over the issue of cost-of-living pay adjustments.

His action brought to an end a strike that had forced 1 million daily commuters to find other ways to work and caused concern among merchants during the Christmas shopping season. It was the city's first transit strike in 57 years.

Don Yabush, a CTA spokesman, said 100 percent of the bus service and "near normal" train service had been restored for the morning rush hour. He said most of the workers had shown up for their shifts Thursday night.

Commuters were given free rides during the rush hour, but the transit authority said regular fares would resume at mid-morning. Officials had said they expected full service restored within 48 hours after the strike ended.

"We're doing this as a 'thank you' to commuters who had to put up with a lot during this trying time," Yabush said.

Cleanup Of Oil Continues On Mississippi

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Coast Guard today worked to clean up more than 150,000 gallons of black crude oil that spilled into the Mississippi River in the fiery collision of a tanker and a tugboat with two barges in tow.

The Coast Guard said river currents and traffic dissipated most of the pollution quickly.

"Ol' Man River has looked after itself for many years," Coast Guard spokesman Tom Pearson said Thursday, "and it's doing a great job on its own."

Pockets of oil remained today under the wharf adjacent to the burned M.V. Pina, which collided with the barges late Wednesday and spilled enough fuel to set a 1-mile stretch of the river ablaze. But a 10 gallon-a-minute leak from a 100-foot long, 10-foot high gash in the tanker was halted.

Five people suffered minor injuries in the accident.

The 740-foot tanker, docked on the east bank of the river, was scorched from bow to stern on the port side.

Coast Guard spokesman Bob Brown said today 168,000 gallons of the Pina's 2.4 million-gallon cargo of crude either burned or spilled into the river.

"Big vaccuum trucks are going to pull that out of the water," Brown said. "We're setting an angle boom in the river around Myrtle Grove, which is about 60 miles downriver from New Orleans, that will direct the oil into an area to The Gulf Strike Team set up booms to keep the oil near the ship, but concentrations of crude were visible beneath wharves in the downtown New Orleans area. Pearson said those "pockets" of oil would be scooped up by the vacuum trucks and posed no hazard.

The anti-pollution squad also set up diversionary booms downriver at Irontown in Plaquemines Parish to collect any oil that floated with the current.

Firemen Denounce Lubbock Officials

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Firefighters Association angily denounced city officials Thursday night for making "false accusations" concerning the association's battle for a 15 percent pay raise and collective bargaining rights.

Approximately 100 firefighers and family members attended the meeting at the South Plains Electric Co-op, which was held to "counter the erroneous, misleading statements and outright falsehoods that have been emanating from the City by premeditation or ignorance," according to a letter prepared by the Local 972 of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

The firefighters' annonyance largely centered around a report prepared by City Manager Larry Cunningham in which he concludes that giving firefighters collective bargaining rights would be "expensive, time-consuming and very divisive," and the proposed 15 percent pay raise "would create more problems than we could cope with." The two issues will be presented to Lubbock voters in a special election Jan. 19.

At the Dec. 13 City Council meeting, Cunningham told the council, "We certainly have seen to it that our firefighters are paid enough to retain them, to recruit highly qualified replacements and to keep their buying power well ahead of inflation."

Association members took Cunningham to task, arguing that with an average 13 percent rate of inflation, the proposed pay raise of 5 percent would result in a pay deficit of 8 percent between Jan. 1979 and Jan. 1980. The members blasted Cunningham's report, saying, "a more twisted interpretation of the actual facts would be more difficult to imagine."

The firefighters also contended that the money cut from the city's original pay raise proposal of 9 percent down to 7 percent went "into the parks department for such items as extra fertilizer."

Other bones of contention between the association and Cunningham included the city manager's statement that the firefighters association, in seeking collective bargaining rights, had misrepresented what the right would mean. Cunningham contended that, "the whole realm of working conditions could be negotiated," adding that the bargaining

Council Takes Action To Launch Bond Program For Mortgages

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Prospective homebuyers could have an easier and cheaper time securing mortgage financing next year as a result of City Council action Thursday. But to put the program into effect, Congress will have to act on pending legislation.

The council took initial steps at the special meeting to launch a tax-exempt bond program which would provide mortgage loans for low-and moderate-income persons.

Whether such a program becomes a reality in Lubbock is largely up to Congress which is debating ways to restrict the issuance of tax-exempt bonds.

A bill now under consideration by the U.S. House would prohibit any such bond program in Lubbock by requiring cities to have begun the program before April.

However, there is talk the bill may be amended on the House floor to change the April deadline to Dec. 31.

To ensure the city would qualify if such an amendment becomes law, the council appointed a board of directors to a non-profit' corporation which will govern the bond program.

The six board members and incorporators are Councilman Bill McAlister; M.B. Smith, executive secretary of the West Texas Home Builders Association; Brownie Brownlee, executive secretary of the Lubbock Board of Realtors; Mario Perez, owner of Superior Color; Leota Alexander, Lubbock attorney; and Al Caviel, pharmacy owner and member of the Lubbock Housing Authority board.

The council also approved an application for a non-profit corporation charter from the Secretary of State for the Lubbock Housing Finance Corporation.

However, Mayor Dirk West emphasized everything the council does on the bond program must by qualified with a big if until Congress determines what, if any, restrictions will be placed on the bond sales.

"When Congress gets through we'll be ready to go," West said. "If we don't

Radio Static Encourages Sound Sleep For Children

NEW YORK (Special) — Parents who tiptoe around the house Christmas Eve and wrap presents in silence might be better off if they turned on the radio, says the Better Sleep Council. And, rather than Christmas Carols or lullabys, the Council recommends between-stations static to encourage sound sleep among the young.

Recent research indicates that continuous, monotonous noise tends to soothe very young children, reports the Council, an organization that makes available information about sleep and sleep research.

"Contrary to intuition, repetitious noise at a moderately intense volume has a calming effect on infants," says Dr. Michael Levy, a research psychologist at the University of Florida. "The louder the noise is, the more quieting it is on the very young child."

When babies are exposed to "white noise", which is comparable to the noise in an automobile traveling at 60 miles per hour, they tend to sleep for longer periods of time and cry less when they are awake. "White noise" is a manufactured sound that involved all frequencies audible to humans. Its effectiveness lies in the "lack of information" in the stimulus. Many people utilize a "white noise" by turning on the fan portion of an air conditioner when going to bed.

"Actually, the frequency of the noise doesn't matter as long as it is repetitious and moderately loud," says Dr. Levy.

Dr. Levy is working with Dr. Yvonne Brackbill, at the University, to see how the effects change as children get older. However, preliminary evidence in their current research indicates that the quieting effects of noise tends to decrease with age. In the older person, the type of noise may make the difference.

Helping your child get to sleep on an exciting night like Christmas Eve may be easier if you try to emphasize of familiar elements of your unchanged nightly pattern such as reading a story, brushing teeth and tucking in dollies, advised the Council.

Other tips from the Council for making bedtime in general a more enjoyable experience for children are:

* Take the time to study each child's individual sleep patterns. If one seems to function perfectly well on less sleep than another, make a note of it and don't force unrealistic bedtimes on a child who isn't sleepy. A good way to determine sleep patterns is to awaken the child at the same time every morning and over the course of a few weeks, the child will begin to "express" sleepiness during the evening at a consistent time.

* Make the bedroom environment conducive for sleep. Too many action toys and unfinished projects in view look tempting to even a sleepy child. Tidy up and put away such temptations.

* When your child is in bed, check the mattress and foundation to see if they're able to offer proper support and sufficient space to move freely. Look to see if the body is firmly supported, especially around the hips and shoulders.

Other advice for parents and for people in general is contained in a booklet just published by the Council, "A Guide to Better Sleep." It explores some of the basic knowledge about sleep and gives suggestions for helping people better understand their own sleep needs and problems, based on the latest sleep research. Copies are available for $1 from the Better Sleep Council, 1270 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020.

At Wit's End...

George Collins, a friend of mine, once accused me of having one of the greatest mathematical minds of the ninth century.

It was a sexist remark. He said it wasn't, but was based on women's inability to grasp the logic and the scope necessary to comprehend a reasonable solution to a problem.

Last week, George and I saw three of my friends, Judy, Maralee and Thelma, and they asked us to join them for lunch.

When the check came, George reached out to claim it, but it was too late. What ensued was to have a permanent effect on George's life.

Judy: "The bill comes to $35.17. Does anyone have a calculator? The battery in mine is dead. Great, let's see, Thelma had the BLT and was that a cup of soup at 85 cents or a bowl at a dollar?"

Thelma: "Cup, but that doesn't include the bar bill. I had the Tequila Gunslinger."

Judy: "And Erma had the omelette and the tossed salad."

Erma: "Don't forget the Roquefort was 10 cents extra and I had the Perrier Spritzer."

Judy: "Right. Since George is our guest we'll split his lunch which came to $6.42, divided by four which comes to 1.605 each, not counting tip or tax."

Erma: "Look, why don't I pay for the parking and you can take that out of my part of George's meal?"

Thelma: "I got a better idea. We'll go look at draperies and I'll take a shower curtain home on approval and get the ticket validated."

Judy: "Terrific idea. Maralee, what did you have?"

Judy: "It looks like SW with a question mark."

Maralee: "The waitress made a mistake. I said I'd have the sweetbreads if they didn't look gross, but she brought me a fruit cup so subtract $1.10."

Judy: "Let's see, Thelma and I split the dessert which is $1.35 divided by two."

Thelma: "I ate your crackers, so let me pay for all of it."

Maralee: "Let me pay for the dessert because I owe Judy for two raffle tickets."

We pushed away from the table. The tip was piled neatly under a glass. The entire transaction had taken place in less than 35 seconds.

George was numb. "Do you mean to tell me you go through that every time you have lunch?"

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 26-year-old single man. Last year I fell in love with a 19-year-old girl I'll call Laura. I moved in with her and everything was fine until we got into a dumb argument and I broke her nose. She kicked me out, and refused to have anything more to do with me. I really loved her and begged for another chance, but she changed her phone number and the locks on her doors and told me if I ever came near her she'll call the police.

Well, about five months later I heard tht Laura was pregnant, so I went to her and told her I wanted to face up to the responsibility of fatherhood, but she said the baby wasn't mine, and she wanted no part of me.

After Laura had the baby, I went to the welfare people (they paid for the delivery) and they wouldn't tell me a thing! Not even if my name was on the baby's birth certificate. I couldn't believe it. Here I was trying to assume full responsibility for my child, and I wasn't allowed to.

I finally went to a lawyer to find out if I had some rights as a father. The lawyer said, "Not as long as the mother denies that you are the father!"

Now I'm trying to prove that I'm the father. I've taken blood tests, but Laura refuses to talk to me Abby. If I'm the father, and I'm sure I am, I have as much right to be a part of that baby's life as Laura has. What can I do about it?

DENIED MY RIGHTS

Dear Denied: Only one who is thoroughly conversant with the law can tell you what your rights are. If you aren't satisfied with the lawyer you consulted, find one you think is more competent.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old boy and I think my sister is gay. She is 12 and so is her "friend." My sister and her friend, who is also a neighbor, are always together. They take showers and baths together, and even go to the bathroom together!

They dress alike and call each other before they leave for school in the morning to see what the other one is wearing. They go to school together and come home together.

They sleep together at least once a week.

Me and the neighbors think it is sick. Should I tell my parents or what?

NORMAL

Dear Normal: Don't tell your parents what you suspect because you're probably wrong. Some girls — if they're lucky — have a best friend with whom they form a very close relationship. They're inseparable — like "lovers," but it's not a love affair, only a warm friendship.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old Army man stationed in South Korea. I've been here for a year and have another year and a half to go. Life isn't easy in this outfit. We're on 24-hour guard. We eat out of cans and sleep in tents and stay combat-ready at all times.

When there's mail call, you should see those young soldiers run to see if they got anything. Abby, it is sad to see so much repeated disappointment as they hang their heads and slowly walk away empty-handed.

Why don't Americans who have relatives and friends in Korea write to these kids? I've never seen such a bunch of forgotten soldiers anywhere. Some of these guys are 17 amd 18, and have never been away from home before.

I'm lucky. My people write to me often, and my Mom even sends me cookies which I share with my buddies.

Abby, you wouldn't believe how one letter from home can make a rough day better. Please ask your readers to write to their young men in the service wherever they are, but especially in Korea.

And don't ever stop writing your column. We get it in the Stars and Stripes and the Korean Times, too. You are the only contact some of these soldiers have with home. Love you.

ALLEN

Dear Allen: I'll print your letter as a timely plea to the folks back home. Readers?

Parents Advised To Use Caution When Selecting Christmas Toys

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

NEW YORK (WNS) — Many hazardous toys have been taken off the market in recent years, but parents still must approach the Christmas shopping season with caution. Serious injuries and even deaths have resulted from either poor design or irresponsible marketing of certain toys.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that 140,000 persons were injured seriously enough last year through toy-related accidents to have visited hospital emergency rooms. Mishaps ranged from cuts inflicted by poorly constructed toys to injuries suffered in falls involving toys to children swallowing small pieces from toys and games.

The CPSC sets safety standards for specific kinds of products, but parents shoulder a great responsibility in determining whether a particular toy is safe for their children. The buyer should examine it for sharp points or brittle parts which could shatter and expose jagged edges. It is also important to match a toy with a child's level of skill.

Many toys are sold with the manufacturer's age group recommendation, but such guidelines are not absolute. Children mature at different rates and parents must use discretion. A toy consisting of small pieces might be fine for children ages 8-11, but it may be dangerous for a 3-year-old.

Carefully choose toys for the very young child (under 3). The CPSC says toys for children in this age group should not contain pieces small enough for a child to swallow. A three-month CPSC study on small parts injuries to children under age 10 found that almost half of an estimated 3,800 injuries between December 1976 and February 1977 were suffered by children under age 3; more than 50 children under 3 have died in accidents involving small parts.

As of Jan. 1, 1980, a new regulation will ban from sale a product small enough to fit entirely inside a truncated cylinder measuring 1¼ inches in diameter by 2¼ inches in depth. The ban covers such toys designed for an infant's use as crib and playpen exercisers and squeeze toys, etc. For a detailed list, write the CPSC, Washington, DC 20207.

The CPSC now prohibits the sale of pacifiers and rattles with parts small enough for the infant to choke on. In addition, rattles must be constructed so they will not break into small pieces.

As was cited earlier, one of the more dangerous types of toys are those which fire projectiles. In addition to the chance of choking death, serious eye injuries can result through carelessness or abuse. If such toys are bought, the child must be made aware of their potential hazards if misused.

Tricycles ridden by especially young children deserve a special word of caution. The trike, inherently unstable, overturns easily. Those with low centers of gravity are less susceptible to this. Look for wheels that are widespread. Also, examine the trike to see if it has any sharp or protruding edges. Pedals and handlebars should be covered with a non-slip surface.

Trikes do not have brakes, so warn the child not to ride on an incline and avoid making sharp, tight turns. Look for solid construction enabling the trike to withstand a reasonable amount of abuse without failing.

One of the most important considerations when purchasing a bicycle is that the child fits on it. Do not buy one that is too large, for the child won't be able to control it. And always emphasize obedience of traffic laws.

Other popular and sometimes dangerous toys include roller skates and ice skates. Roller skates sent approximately 90,000 persons to emergency rooms last year. The high speeds which can be attained add to the severity of the injuries. Of equal importance is proper technique and good fit. Buy quality equipment which fits the child now; skates aren't for "growing into." Wearing protective gear (helmet, elbow pads, knee pads, etc.) can reduce the number and severity of injuries. Discouring "stunts" and fooling around also helps.

Electrical toys pose special hazards. Safety regulations governing these toys have been in effect since 1973, but parents must decide whether they are suitable for their children. To help them, the CPSC requires manufacturers of such toys to label them with data regarding age group and potential hazards.

If an electrical toy is bought, teach the child how to use it properly and safely, including the right way to connect electrical toys — by holding onto the rubberized plug, rather than by tugging on the cord.

Supervision may be necessary with some toys. Proper maintenance is important with most toys, especially electical ones. A broken or frayed cord or connection may lead to shocks or burns.

The CPSC has passed many stringent regulations controlling the toy industry. Manufacturers must meet these regulations so that hazardous products are not sold. However, parents bear the responsibility of teaching their children safe play habits and choosing the proper toys for them to play with.

The holiday season should be a joyous time. Don't let it turn into a tragic one.

The Cavendish Invitation Pairs is the only U.S. event which, each year, attracts a powerful field that includes some of the great players from other lands. From the 1979 event, Eric Kokish of Montreal reports this fine defensive play by his partner, Peter Nagy, also of that fair city.

The bidding needs some explanation. North's overcall of two clubs was not a normal cue-bid — it was a Michaels cue-bid, announcing a hand with at least nine cards in the majors, but of indeterminate strength. South's jump to three spades was invitational, and North, who could not have had much more, went on to game.

Nagy made his normal opening lead of the king of clubs, and Kokish, seeing no points in a shift, encouraged by playing the four, concealing the three. West continued with the ace of clubs, and this time East furnished the six.

West took time out to consider the defense. It was obvious that his partner held nothing, for otherwise he would not have started to encourage clubs — the three of clubs was missing and it was certain that his partner held it. The ace of spades would furnish the third defensive trick, and the only hope for a fourth trick was to win a second trump trick.

To accomplish that, Nagy continued with a third round of clubs. Declarer won in his hand and immediately led a low trump. But there was no deflecting Nagy from his assigned task. If his partner held the ten of trumps, the contract was doomed. Nagy rose with the ace of spades and continued with a fourth club. Whether declarer ruffed high or low, the defenders were bound to score a second trump trick.

Two-time Cavendish champ Alan Sontag also found this thoughtful defense.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. RESPONSIBILITY

For children, learning about responsibility in the home is a prerequisite for accepting responsibility in the larger environment, says Diane Welch, a family life education specialist with the Texas Agricutural Extension Service.

Polaroid Introduces New Film

By SANDY COLTON
Associated Press Writer

In the past few weeks I've been introduced to several interesting new items, some not yet on the market. I'd like to tell you about.

Polaroid Corp. has just introduced a new SX-70 film called Time-Zero Supercolor. It is now being sold only in Florida at Orlando and Daytona but should be available throughout the U.S. some time in 1980.

The film is sharper, more true in reproducing the original colors, and it processes faster than the present-day SX-70 film. The picture begins to appear in seconds, looks finished in about a minute and is finished in 90 seconds as opposed to the five or more minutes with regular SX-70 film.

To come up with the improved film, Polaroid practically reinvented it. It will no doubt put Kodak in a catch-up position. The film is designed to be used only in cameras that accept the SX-70 films — like Polaroid's One Step, Pronto Sonar and SX-70 Sonar models.

Canon's jumped the gun again on other manufacturers with their newest Gee Whiz, what-else-can-they-automate camera. It's their new AF35M camera which should be on the market around the first of the year.

Imagine, if you will, a camera that not only automatically determines the exposure as you take the picture — with or without the built-in flash unit — and that automatically focuses on your subject (via a brand new infrared device), and automatically winds your film as you make each exposure and then, when you've finished the roll, rewinds the film.

Add to it a few other handy items like a self timer-prefocus switch. Want to take a picture of yourself? Just press the switch down and 12 seconds later the shutter trips. But suppose you want to compose a picture and bypass that automatic focusing device, like a picture of someone standing at the edge of the picture in sharp focus looking over the Grand Canyon. Press that same switch down. Then when you've centered the small focusing circle in the center of your view screen on your side subject, press the shutter button. That locks in the focus. Now move the camera to recompose the picture so your subject is at the edge and press the shutter button again to take the picture. The infrared sensor will ignore the horizon and remember that close up subject. What will they think of next?

Look for it in camera stores around the first of the year with a price tag somewhere in the $200 range. It looks like a good bet for someone who wants to step up from Instamatics if they can afford the price tag.

For the more serious photographers there are a couple of interesting new gadgets on the market now.

Spiratone has just come out with a new flash unit called the Spiralite Repeater that will keep up with those autowinders and motor drives, up to five frames per second. If you don't like waiting around for your flash to recycle, this one's for you.

Alone, with just four AA batteries, it will keep up with an F2 motor drive at five frames per second for five to 10 flashes before it starts to skip. And an accessory battery pack and you'll get 15 or more, depending upon distance and battery condition. Another accessory called an S-switch makes it possible to trigger the flash while the camera is in the bulb or time position for stroboscopic effects.

It's a hot shoe flash and can't be used for bounce lighting but would make a dandy addition to any pro's bag for those times when he needs to get a bunch of pictures in a hurry. You'll find it in the latest Spiratone catalogue or ads in the latest camera magazines. The flash sells for $79.95, accessory battery pack for $24.95 and the S-switch for $6.95.

Again for the pro or more serious amateur who knows that through-the-lens metering systems are not always the answer, there's the new Seconic L-438 spot meter. It's small, fast and easy to use, with a tremendous range.

Set your ASA (it runs from 6 to 6400) and choose the degree of spot you wish to use (3, 4, 6 and 10). Look through the full-frame viewfinder and you'll see a small circle corresponding to the spot you've selected. Center the spot on what you wish to measure and press a button. A servo motor adjusts the f-stop and shutter speed scale to give you a variety of combinations to choose from. Lens apertures range from f-1 to f-90, speeds from 60 seconds to 1-4000th of a second.

Great for those tough-to-measure situations like a spotlit subject on stage. It lists for $295 and is available at camera stores now.

New Stamps From Gibraltar Dedicated To Dual Purpose

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

As the year 1979 comes to a close, we note that this has been one celebrating many anniversaries and important events, particularly the International Year of the Child. It will be remembered for a variety of stamp issuances by nations all over the world commemorating this universal appeal.

Gibraltar has issued a set of six stamps dedicated to a dual purpose — the International Year of the Child and Christmas. According to Gibraltar postal authorities, that small country boasts a true international flavor because of its location at the southern tip of the European continent. African stampsfeature children from all corners of the earth — an African child, a Chinese child, a child of the South Sea islands, an American Indian child, a child of Scandinavia, and one adhesive showing all five children depicted on the other stamps encircling a religious scene. Each stamp bears the same value and the inscription "Christmas 1979" plus the Queen Elizabeth II crown emblem.

It is not too late to get some inexpensive philatelic items available at selected post offices throughout the U.S. as well as by mail order from the Philatelic Branch in Washington, D.C.

The 1979 Mint Set costs $5.25 and contains 30 stamps, including 12 single issues, four blocks of four stamps and two single Christmas stamps. Each Mint Set, enclosed in a protective envelope, has clear acetate strips to display and protect the items in one packet.

The three-sided Mint Set cover features a dramatic montage of artwork representing stamps in the set. Imaginative scenes of Olympic competitions, portraits of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Robert Kennedy, Albert Einstein, John Steinbeck and Will Rogers plus creative illustrations for the 100 capsule stories describing a wide range of stamp subjects.

If your local post office does not have the Mint Sets for sale, you may address mail order requests to: The Philatelic Sales Branch, Washington, D.C. 20265. There is a $5 minimum order requirement and a 50 cents handling charge per mail order.

Year-end also means football bowl games and that is cause for special philatelic tribute by the International Stamp Collectors Society. To mark a pair of special games — the Rose Bowl and the Super Bowl both being held at Pasadena, Calif. — a commemorative cover has been prepared. The cachet shows a gridiron scene with the caption "Pasadena, California. January 1980. America's Football Capital. Home of the Rose Bowl and the Super Bowl." The cover will have a special hand cancellation of Jan. 1, 1980. One of the stamps will be the 6-cent intercollegiate football centenary issue of 1969. The covers cost $2.95 each. Write to "Football, International Stamp Collectors Society, 6253 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90028." Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

Imaginative Characters Inexpensive To Create

These imaginative little characters are fun and inexpensive to create. Once you learn the basic pinch and sew technique, you can put a variety of facial expressions on your dolls. Step-by-step directions and diagrams guide you in every detail of their making.

The open air bakery group pictured here makes quite a conversation piece. People of all ages will enjoy their old-country charm and appeal. Another interesting display piece is the Dowager — she can be governess, a grandmother, or an old Indian tribeswoman. Sunbonnet Susan is one the kids will want to play with. She is 18 inches tall, soft and loveable.

Materials used for these and other projects are: styrofoam, nylon panty hose or cotton batting for stuffing, cardboard, yarn, thread, needle, fabric, moveable eyes, etc.

To obtain this 15-page booklet entitled Pinch and Sew Character Dolls, No. HA35, please send $2.25 (includes first class postage and handling) by check or money order to:

Bisque Doll Sure To Delight Child

If your Christmas gift list this year includes a doll for a special youngster, keep in mind a few guidelines as you shop.

Consider the child's age. For very young children, simple dolls such as rag or stuffed dolls are best. As the child grows older you can choose from the more sophisticated models. But if you choose a doll that "does something," make sure the child is able to manipulate the pull strings, winding keys, or whatever is required to make the doll act. An even older child may appreciate a costume doll — one that is dressed in period fashions or simply pretty clothing. A gift of such a doll may even be the start of a life-long collection.

Consider the child's personality and interests. Some children are intrigued by anything old-fashioned looking, while others have a more contemporary bent. Also, very imaginative children "talk" to and play with their dolls for hours on end while others may need a starter such as a doll that talks first. There are a number of talking dolls on the market today.

Don't forget the matter of safety. Never give a young child a doll — or any toy — that has sharp or jagged edges or small pieces that can be removed and swallowed. Try to find one that's sturdy and well-made. There's nothing more disappointing to a child than a toy that breaks after only a few hours of play.

Here's a beautiful old-fashioned doll that's sure to delight a child or collector. And it's one you can assemble yourself. This replica of a famous antique comes in a kit which includes bisque doll head with finely painted features, arms, legs and instructions with pattern for assembly. You can also make the christening outfit shown for this 14-inch tall doll with an exclusive pattern designed by Dorothy Hurst.

For bisque baby, order kit No. 11243 for $11.99 plus $1.95 for postage and handling. For dress pattern, order kit No. 01044 for 99 cents plus $1.45 for postage and handling. Creative Home Crafts is required to pay and collect sales tax in Texas.

Replace Packing To Fix Leaky Water Faucet

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — I have seen considerable material about replacing a faucet washer when the faucet is leaking, but nothing about what to do when the leak is coming from the nut on the outside rather than from the regular water outlet. When the faucet is turned on, water pours from under the nut. How can this leak be stopped?

A. — First, as with any faucet repair, shut off the water before doing anything else. There usually is a shutoff valve under the fixture. If not, you will have to close whatever valve controls the water to that line. Loosen the packing nut (the one you mentioned) with a wrench, turning it counterclockwise. If you turn the faucet handle as though turning on the water, you will be able to remove the stem from the faucet, after which you can get off the nut. Use an awl or something sharp to dig the old packing, a cord-like material, from the inside of the nut. Replace it with a similar packing, which can be purchased from a hardware store if you have none on hand. Screw the nut back onto the stem.

FAMILY WEEKLY

Now in the final week of the International Year of the Child no one has better represented it than Danny Kaye. This week, FAMILY WEEKLY reports a conversation with this gentle Pied Piper who is the personification of UNICEF, the United Nation's international children's organization. His affinity for children and they with him has led him around the world in a kind of universal kindergarten of laughing togetherness. But there is far more to Danny Kaye than grandpa to the kiddie set. For those who remember his earlier career as the masterful clown will come thoughts of Walter Mitty and Hans Christian Andersen. He is a complicated man who has remained a child at heart. Learn more about this man-child in FAMILY WEEKLY.

Jonestown Families Share Pain

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jynona Norwood, a young mother, lost 27 relatives in the mass suicide-murder ritual at Jonestown last year. She's determined not to let the Christmas season claim any more tears from others who shared in the tragedy.

"We're trying to reach people who are going to be depressed, suicidal, people who lost people. We're letting them know we're here, don't despair," said the 28-year-old Miss Norwood.

She says this Christmas, for many of the grieved relatives, will really be the first celebration since the November 1978 tragedy.

"We couldn't have Christmas last year because of the shock," she said. "Last year was too close."

Miss Norwood, the mother of a 9-year-old boy, has arranged for a flower-laying and hymn service on Christmas Eve at Evergreen Cemetery in Oakland, where many of the 913 victims of Jonestown are buried.

And she and several counselors will take telephone calls that day from persons who might feel neglected or sad.

"People from Texas, Seattle, all over, call me when it's their (dead) child's birthday or on the anniversary when they went to Jonestown," Miss Norwood said in a recent interview. "I get calls after midnight. I just know they're hurting at Christmas."

Miss Norwood, who counted her mother among the dead at the People's Temple compound of the Rev. Jim Jones, said she wanted to do something else for the holidays, but waited at first for someone to offer to help. No one volunteered.

She also organized a church service last month to mark the first anniversary of the deaths.

The memorial "went pretty well," said Miss Norwood. "Some people got up to express their feelings but some didn't. Some were afraid and some were ashamed. Those people need to be reached by something more personal."

ACLU Defends Man Told To Remove Mural

DENVER (AP) — The state American Civil Liberties Union, seeking to dismantle a nativity scene on the steps of city hall, said Thursday it will defend a man ordered to remove a religious mural from the side of his house.

The religious painting covers an exterior wall of Gary Montesano's two-story home. Montesano, a born-again Christian, was ordered by the city in June to remove the painting because it violates seven city zoning ordinances.

Meanwhile, the ACLU has been embroiled in a court battle over the city's nativity scene, arguing it violates the constitutional doctrines of separation of church and state.

On Monday, a federal judge ordered the city to remove the nativity. A panel of the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday granted the city a stay, and on Wednesday, Colorado ACLU lawyer Jonathan Chase asked the appeals court to reconsider the stay, arguing the city had failed to show evidence that anyone would be irreparably injured if the scene were dismantled.

James Joy, state ACLU executive director, said if the appeals court doesn't rule on the request quickly, the ACLU will ask Supreme Court Justice Byron White to intervene.

Garbage Man Faces Jail, Fine For Scavenging Yule Gifts

CHERAW, S.C. (AP) — The clothes and shoes were castoffs and were not in perfect condition. But that didn't matter to Raymond Sandsberry Jr., who earns $112 a week driving a garbage truck.

He took them home from the local dump to give as Christmas presents to his wife and seven pre-teen children.

Now he faces a jail term or a fine.

Sandsberry, 33, was arrested for trespassing for picking up several items of discarded clothing and shoes at the Chesterfield County landfill.

"It's going to be hard" to have a merry Christmas with the thought of his Dec. 27 appearance in magistrate's court lingering in his mind, he said Thursday.

He could be fined $100 or jailed 30 days. That's the maximum penalty for the misdemeanor charge on which he was arrested Wednesday. He was released on a $200 personal bond.

A landfill operator telephoned police after he saw Sandsberry take the items, which had been discarded by a local department store.

Sandsberry said he found three or four windbreakers, "about three pairs of little children's shoes and a pair of shoes that fit me, two coats and a pair of ladies' pants." The clothes were new but "had little rips in them" and some of the shoes were nicked, he said.

"It was pretty nice stuff. I would have given it to my children," he added. "I figured that he wouldn't care if I got them or not."

Sandsberry, a driver for a private trash collection firm, said when he went to the landfill with a load of trash, a truck from the department store was there. A man tossing out clothes and boxes of shoes "told me it was nice stuff."

He said he had no idea he was breaking the law when he took the items. "I asked the man (landfill operator) and he bowed his head. I thought he meant that I could have them."

Chesterfield County Administrator Clayton Caldwell said Sandsberry was charged because of state regulations prohibiting private citizens from removing items from landfills.

"Violations of this type could cause the state to close the landfill if they so desire. Private citizens sifting through the solid waste in the landfill pose a safety hazard," he said.

Persons have been seriously injured at landfills because bulldozer operators could not see them or hear their shouts above the noise of the machinery, he said.

Hotline Listens To Christmas Woes

"He said he didn't know if he could get through the holidays," said Gary Rowe, spokesman for the church organization that sponsors The Yule Connection.

"He was alone. We knew he had to get involved with something. He wound up helping our volunteers on the hotline."

The Yule Connection is a 24-hour, pre-crisis hotline in service from noon today through noon Dec. 27. Sponsored by the Church Federation of Greater Chicago and WTTW, Chicago Public Television, the line registered 3,000 callslast year, "1,900 of them serious calls," said Rowe.

"Statistics show that this time of year suicides escalate, family crises increase, criminal behavior is magnified and emotional tensions cause feelings of alienation from holiday festivities," he said in a recent interview. "Especially affected are the elderly, the poor, the young singles, the widowed and the divorced."

Answering calls at the television station are trained volunteers who have an index of all known resources in the area. They can provide everything from a sympathetic ear to information on where to obtain clothing, food, toys and help in the neighborhood.

"Perhaps most importantly, the volunteers help callers find ways to get actively involved with other people and holiday activities. Every shift is also backed up by a psychologist who will handle emergency calls," said Rowe.

"I think it is the anniversary syndrome that magnifies child abuse, wife beating and suicide potential this time of year," he said. "People who have broken off family relationships look back and recall the family Christmases that used to be and are saddened and disturbed."

Of the 1,900 serious calls last year, 47 percent involved emotional needs, relating to alcohol and drugs, said Rowe. About 30 percent involved physical needs of some kind — companionship, toys, food, housing, legal aid. Twenty-two percent involved sheer loneliness, and 1 percent related to suicide.

Rowe said several callers last year were from people outside Illinois who had heard about the line and just needed someone to talk to on Christmas day. About 60 percent of the calls came from persons over 60 years old, and 22 percent were persons in their 20s.

Solon Labels Pro-Gun Yule Card Tasteless

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pro-gun lobby sent members of Congress a different sort of Christmas card this year — one depicting a smiling Santa Claus standing in front of a fireplace with a pistol in his hand.

"It's supposed to be a picture of Santa showing the gun he's giving to children," John M. Snyder, chief lobbyist for the Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, explained Thursday.

Snyder said the card reflects "true, traditional American values" and, he maintained, the fact that many parents give their children guns at Christmas.

However, Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y., a leading advocate of gun control, denounced the card as "one of the most tasteless greeting cards this or any other holiday season has ever produced."

Bingham said the card was particularly tasteless "during a religious holiday season which extols peace, love and brotherhood."

He added that it also made him wonder what the citizens committee would send next year.

"After all, how does one follow a Christmas card picturing Santa Claus fondling a handgun?" Bingham asked. "Perhaps next year, it will be the baby Jesus playing with a handgun in his manger."

Snyder, who calls Bingham "totalitarian" in his pro-gun control stance, said guns are a "traditional Christmas gift" with possibly several hundred thousand being put under Christmas trees each year.

Snyder said the card was one of two designed for the committee. The other, he said, showed a Western figure on a horse with a gun in his holster and a bright star over his head.

He added that the cards were intended to promote the principle that Americans have the right "to keep and bear arms."

Snyder said about 300 cards of each type were mailed by the committee. He said cards were sent to all 535 members of Congress.

QUILTING BEE — Wolffarth Elementary School sixth graders display one of the quilts that the art classes made as Christmas gifts for their homeroom teachers. Each square of the old-fashioned covers bears the school emblem and the name of the student who embroidered the square. Art instructor Debbie Burch said some students created their own stitches. Gift Shows Students' Handwork

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Tempera paint drawings on construction paper and $1 bottles of toilet water were outclassed on the list of top gifts-for-teacher this year by four full-sized quilts carefully created by some amazingly adept sixth grade hands.

Upper-grade art students at Wolffarth Elementary School today presented their homeroom teachers with handmade quilts made of squares stitched by each student.

Each square bears the Wolffarth Wildcats school emblem and the name of the student who embroidered the square. One of the squares bears the name of the recipient.

The project seemed a difficult undertaking at first to Mrs. Burch, but it turned out to be "not hard at all."

The art instructor had never made a quilt, but she picked up some pointers from her grandmother's quilted creations and expanded on the principle of liquid embroidery that she had worked with in previous art classes.

Mrs. Burch did the machine work and some stitching on the quilts but her students did the handwork. "I found the boys more excited about it than the girls were," she said. "Their handwork was much neater."

She said the biggest problem with the project was "getting them to finish what they started. Kids will tackle something and think it's real neat, but if it's not finished it's worthless."

The art instructor said she tried to think of a project for the youngsters that would be a group effort. "I believe in teamwork." She added that the quilting project "was more for the kids than the teachers."

The youngsters themselves appeared enthusiastic about the project as they applied the finishing touches to their gifts, but they were reluctant to take much credit for their hard work. "Mrs. Burch deserves the credit," said red-headed Teresa McGlaughn. "It was all her work."

"We wanted to give her a quilt," added Rene Rodriguez, "but she said no."

Local Resident Stabbed In Fight At Nightspot

A Lubbock man was stabbed in a fight outside a club at 50th Street and Avenue H about 2 a.m. today, according to police.

Harrol Jerry Holley, 32, of 2102 38th St., Apt. 5, suffered a stab wound under the left rib cage. He was taken to Methodist Hospital, where he was listed in satisfactory condition this morning.

The victim told police he was stabbed by a man he knew only as "Don." The suspect was described as a tall, thin white man, about 35, with red hair. He was last seen wearing a black cowboy hat and blue pants.

Reports indicate that after Holley was wounded, he drove to an Avenue A truck stop and was waiting for another person when he fell unconscious out of his chair.

In other activity, a man reportedly walked into a couple's house in the 5200-block of 17th Street about 10:30 p.m. Thursday and threatened to kill them with an automatic pistol.

The 32-year-old man said the suspect pointed the weapon at him and said, "You sit down. Don't say nothing."

Police said the gunman then walked up to the complainant's wife, 37, kicked her and threatened her with the pistol.

The husband said he was going to the aid of his wife when the suspect turned to him and again ordered him to sit down, saying, "Don't move, don't say a ——thing or I'll blow your brains out."

The man then told the woman he was going to blow her brains out and "put them in a box," according to reports.

However, police indicated the pistol-wielding man left the residence without injuring the couple. The suspect was described as a tall, 45-year-old black man, who was last seen wearing a sweat shirt and green pants.

A Lubbock policeman said he struck a man who was resisting arrest inside a restaurant at 30th Street and Avenue A about 9 p.m. Thursday. Officer L.W. Casey said the man, who allegedly was intoxicated and causing a disturbance, was about to take a swing at him.

The 50-year-old suspect cut his forehead on a glass door after Casey struck him, but the injury was not serious, according to police.

The man was taken to the county jail and booked on suspicion of disorderly conduct, public intoxication and resisting arrest.

The 51-year-old Lubbock woman with whom the man was arguing inside the restaurant also was jailed on suspicion of disorderly conduct and public intoxication.

A 33-year-old woman was jailed about 9:30 p.m. Thursday after she allegedly caused a disturbance at 34th Street and Avenue N and damaged a police patrol car.

Police said they spotted the woman fighting with two other persons in a parking lot at the Veterans of Foreign Wars headquarters. The woman was told to quiet down, but refused, according to reports.

While officers were attempting to place the woman in their patrol car, she kicked the vehicle, causing about $100 damage, police said.

Someone threw a trailer hitch ball through a glass door at Varsity Book Store, 1305 University Ave., about 11 p.m. Thursday and made off with $3,100 in class rings, according to reports.

Police dispatched to the scene found the door shattered, but no one inside. Store manager Robert D. Davenport said 25 rings, valued at between $85 and $265 each, were missing.

Parts of the store had been ransacked, according to police.

Robert F. Cole of 3704 Ave. R told police his house was burglarized between 6 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. Thursday and $642 in property stolen, including guns and Christmas presents.

Watches and records, totaling about $610, were taken in the break-in of Daniel Estrada Reyes' 920 E. Rice St. residence between 7:30 P.m. and 10 p.m. Thursday, police were told.

The Lubbock station manager for Continental Airlines told police a carton of liquid crystal display (LCD) watches is missing from the airlines freight area at the Lubbock International Airport.

John Patterson told investigating officers that five cartons of the watches arrived in Lubbock on Sunday. When the watches were delivered to the Texas Instruments plant here, however, the delivery man noticed he only had four cartons.

Police reports indicate the watches, which were chrome plated, were valued at about $1,750.

New Mexico Police Capture Escapee

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — With the help of a couple he held hostage, an escaped convict who terrorized the community for almost two weeks has been recaptured without incident, and residents say they are breathing easier as a result.

Harmon Lee Ellis was recaptured Thursday by a rookie state police officer at a roadblock 45 miles southeast of Santa Fe. Ellis had stolen his getaway car from George and Alice Milner who he held hostage briefly earlier Thursday.

Mrs. Milner was injured slightly, but the couple, tied up with panty hose, managed to escape and notify police.

It was the second hostage incident since Ellis escaped Dec. 9 with 10 other prisoners. Last weekend, he held an elderly man and wife captive for more than 30 hours before they escaped.

"We're all going to sleep easier now," said Santa Fe resident Lesly Carr after the convicted armed robber was captured. "That sounds great."

Three other inmates who fled in the largest prison break in state penitentiary history are still at large. Police said one of them was spotted last week and could still be "lying low" in the Santa Fe area.

Police said Milner and his wife were taken hostage when they went to an unoccupied house next door to their home to make a security check for the owner. Mrs. Milner suffered a superficial cut above her right eye when she was first grabbed by Ellis, police said.

Police detective David Leyba said Ellis jumped the Milners, then forced them at knifepoint to go to their home where he tied them up and stole their car.

Leyba said Milner grabbed a pair of surgical scissors, cut the couple's bonds and notified police immediately.

FFA Donates Fruit To City Rest Homes

The Coronado High School chapter of the Future Farmers of America today donated 80 pounds of fruit each to four rest homes in Lubbock, chapter reporter Ray Stephens said.

He said the oranges, apples and grapefruit that the chapter had left over from their annual citrus fruit sale will be distributed to University Manor, Colonial Nursing Home, Quaker Villa and Francis Hospitality House.

A raccoon weighs only about 2 ounces at birth and is grayish brown. Its distinctive black mask and the rings on its tail don't appear until a few weeks later, says National Geographic World magazine.

Homebuilder Offers No-Frills Houses

DALLAS (UPI) — A Dallas-based housing developer has cut out the frills, eliminated some space and designed a line of three-bedroom houses that is aimed at getting the average family back into the new home market.

Centennial Homes, whose typical line of development homes range in price from the mid-40s to mid-80s, announced this week it had begun building a line of houses with price tags — from the mid-30s to high 40s more typical of pre-inflation times

Company president Frederick E. Roach said the firm decided to try selling a more basic home because its typical houses were too expensive for about 50 percent of the available market.

Roach said prices were cut by eliminating excess hallway space and second dining areas.

"We tried to squeeze the house into a more reasonable size," Roach said. The seven models — all with three bedrooms — range in size from 1,060 to 1,269 square feet, compared to 1,400 to 2,220 square feet for their regularly priced homes.

"We're using the same basic quality of materials, but we've left out things like garbage disposals and dishwashers. There's carpeting only in the living area and master bedroom and the rest of the house has vinyl (floors)."

Market research indicated single-family, detached homes with a brick veneer were a requirement in the area, along with full size lots. The new homes will meet all those specifications, Roach said.

Six prototype homes already are under construction and groundbreakings for other developments were expected to begin within 60 days throughout the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Roach acknowledged acquiring reasonably priced land was critical to the project's success.

Town Enjoying Christmas

CHRISTMAS, Mich. (UPI) — It's that time of year again in the town where it is Christmas all year long.

Every year around Thanksgiving, holiday mail starts pouring into this community of about 300 located near the Lake Superior shore in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

The mail, mostly pre-addressed and stamped Christmas cards, will be canceled by hand with the "Christmas, Mich.," postmark and sent on to its destination by postmaster Richard Miller and his wife, Sharon.

For six years the Millers have been receiving the thousands of holiday cards and letters from people in several Midwestern states who want the special postmark on their seasons greetings.

Miller serves as postmaster for a $1 per year salary. It's his wife who does most of the hand-stamping in the couple's party store.

"We had some cards in November and even as early as August a few people that were up here left us a few Christmas cards," Mrs. Miller said. "But around Thanksgiving is when we usually start getting them."

PRESSING THE FLESH — Presidential hopeful Sen. Edward M. Kennedy greeted an unidentified supporter Thursday while touring the Market Street area of Portsmouth, N.H., with Mayor John J. Woley. Kennedy is on a pre-holiday two-day campaign swing through the Granite State. (AP Laserphoto)

Kennedy More Critical Of Carter

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and top Carter administration officials are swapping distinctly un-Christmaslike charges as the Massachusetts senator steps up his criticism of the president's energy policies.

Campaigning in New Hampshire Thursday, Kennedy charged the president with being "absent without leave" in the nation's fight against escalating OPEC oil prices.

And in a charge that provoked sharp responses from Carter's top spokesman and from Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, Kennedy declared in a prepared speech: "Incredibly, (Miller) has been busy asking OPEC to raise oil prices rather than warning it to restrain them."

Kennedy toned down the remarks somewhat when he delivered them before the Rochester Chamber of Commerce, saying, "Did the secretary of the treasury, Mr. Miller, on his recent travels to Saudi Arabia and the Middle East countries, ask to hold the prices down? No."

Although his spoken remarks differed from his prepared text, aides said Kennedy stood by his allegation that Miller asked the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise prices.

Kennedy leveled his allegations on the first day of a two-day campaign trip to New Hampshire where he is favored to defeat Carter in the first state Democratic primary Feb. 26.

Kennedy arranged to continue his campaigning today, scheduling visits to Concord, Manchester and Nashua before returning to Boston for a return trip to Washington on Saturday.

Kennedy's charges provoked a tough response from presidential press secretary Jody Powell, who practically accused the Massachusetts senator of lying.

"It seems to me that the senator's campaign statements are becoming increasingly shrill and irresponsible," Powell said. "It seems to me that a United States senator, particularly one that aspires to the highest office in the land, has an obligation to tell the truth."

Miller also denounced Kennedy and said that during his trip to the Middle East last month, "I strongly urged price restraint and moderation."

Asked by reporters to respond to the administration, Kennedy dismissed Carter's press secretary's criticism, declaring, "I'm not running against Jody Powell."

As for Miller, Kennedy cited a Nov. 26 article in The Wall Street Journal in which he said Miller was reported as stating "he didn't mind that the (OPEC countries) would be raising their prices."

As he did in his speech, Kennedy also criticized the Carter administration for failing to send a representative to this week's OPEC meeting in Venezuela.

Rules For Candidate Debates Announced

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Republicans will sit and Democrats will stand when the presidential candidates meet for a debate in Des Moines next month.

Jame Gannon, editor of the sponsoring Des Moines Register and Tribune newspapers, announced details of the debates Thursday saying the major differences between the two events will involve time limits.

The GOP debate Jan. 5 will last two hours, and the Democrats' debate Jan. 7 will last 90 minutes, he said. Each GOP candidate will give a three-minute summation of his remarks, while the Democrats will take two minutes for summaries.

Both debates are to be nationally televised, and each starts at 8:30 p.m. EST.

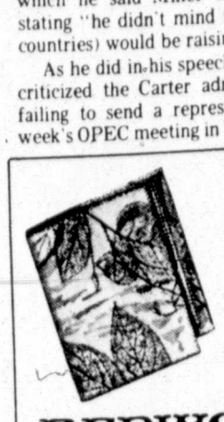

Gannon said the number of Republican candidates has forced that debate to be somewhat different than the Democratic one.

Republicans scheduled to debate are Reps. John Anderson and Philip Crane of Illinois, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, former United Nations ambassador George Bush, former Texas Gov. John Connally and Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas. Ronald Reagan has refused to take part.

President Carter, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., and Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts will take part in the Democratic debate.

The Republican debate will include an 80-minute questioning period by a panel of four journalists. Prior to the debate, the candidates will draw lots to determine in what order they will be questioned.

After questioning by journalists, members of the audience will be given about 20 minutes to question the Republicans and 22 minutes to quiz the Democrats. Then, each GOP candidate will get three minutes to make a closing statement, while the Democrats take two minutes.

First Lady Predicting Victory For Husband In Iowa Caucuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter, ignoring attempts by her husband's campaign aides to lower expectations in the Iowa precinct caucuses, is predicting victory.

"I predict that Jimmy Carter is going to win the precinct caucuses with your help," the first lady told several hundred supporters at a rally in Davenport.

The event Thursday capped a 12-hour trip to the state where precinct caucuses Jan. 21 will provide the first real test of strength between Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the fight for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Earlier this week, Carter campaign aides had made a point of saying that — while the president could afford to lose the caucuses — a victory was "crucial" for Kennedy, who has billed the caucuses as the first real test between himself and Carter.

Mrs. Carter visited five towns during her third campaign trip to Iowa, spending as much time traveling on deserted country roads from town to town as she did at the events, which drew large crowds.

At each stop, the first lady gave her standard campaign speech, stressing her husband's legislative accomplishments, his willingness to face "tough" issues and his "calm, measured" handling of the Iranian situation.

But she added a new line about his strong support for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution, apparently to counter criticism that Carter has not done enough to help get it ratified.

Mrs. Carter also inserted a new reference to Carter's morals.

"His moral leadership the past three years has been preparation for his handling of the Iranian crisis," she said.

Mrs. Carter said it "laid the foundation for the unified response of the American people" to the holding of 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

The first lady asked everyone to attend the precinct caucuses, stressing their importance, and apologized for her husband's absence.

"I think you understand why he can't be here," she said, adding that the Iran crisis is preventing the Carters from spending Christmas at home in Plains, Ga., for the first time since 1953.

Connally Says President Helped By Iran Crisis

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — President Carter's re-election campaign has benefited from the Iranian crisis, largely because comments from presidential candidates have been muzzled to prevent danger to the 50 American hostages, says Republican presidential hopeful John Connally.

"For 45 days, it has been impossible to focus on political activities," Connally said.

However, the former Texas governor warned, if the president and Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, another GOP candidate, "conclude it is proper to make Iran a political issue, then I don't know why they would expect the rest of the candidates to exercise restraint."

Connally appeared at a Thursday night fund-raiser here, one day after he and wife Nellie celebrated their 39th wedding anniversary.

There cannot be one set of rules for the president and minority leader and another set for the rest of the candidates, Connally declared.

Noting a White House aide had leaked a suggestion of a possible naval blockade of Iran, Connally said, "if any of the other presidential candidates had done that the president would have chastised us."

Ford Working For Change In Primary

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former President Gerald Ford has been working quietly — but very actively — to aid an initiative drive seeking to abolish California's GOP winner-take-all primary, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

Republican front-runner Ronald Reagan is viewed as the chief benefactor of the present system, in which the presidential candidate with the most votes in the GOP primary gets all 168 California delegates.

Earlier this year, forces loyal to the former California governor blocked efforts at a state GOP convention to change to an "open primary" system, in which delegates are allocated on a proportional system based on the percentage of votes each presidential candidate receives.

Backers of the open primary then began collecting signatures to put the question on the June 1980 ballot.

Ford has started to help them raise the nearly $500,000 that may be needed to fund the drive, the newspaper reported.

Polls indicate the initiative would pass easily if its supporters can get the required 380,731 signatures by Dec. 28. If approved, the open primary would go into effect immediately — determining the system used next year.

The Times reported Ford has been contacting wealthy political contributors and asking them to support the petition drive with contributions ranging up to $30,000.

Bob Barrett, Ford's top aide, said the former president has been making a number of calls to wealthy contributors because he believes the open primary is a "good government" issue.

"California is in a very, very, very small minority in terms of not supporting it (proportional delegate selection) already," Barrett said.

Normally, signature drives try to get at least 500,000 signatures in order to have the required amount validated by officials. Organizers of the open primary campaign said they already had from 250,000 to 350,000 signatures.

Plants Find Niche In Inhospitable Antarctica

By AL ROSSITER JR.

TAYLOR VALLEY, Antarctica (UPI) — For as far as the eye can see, there are no signs of life in the unique, windswept dry valleys of southern Victoria Land.

Yet some of the toughest plants in the world have found their niche in this inhospitable land where temperatures often drop to minus 60 degrees Fahrenheit and where there are four months of total darkness annually.

Not only is it cold here, but it also is a desert with only a few inches of snowfall annually. The winds are so fierce streaming off upland glaciers that tough rocks are sculptured in unmistakable aerodynamic patterns.

To withstand these harsh conditions, lichens and algae have taken cover in porous rocks and beneath 16-foot thick covers of permanent ice in "oasis lakes" in some of these valleys.

A team of divers led by Dr. George M. Simmons of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute has found thick mats of algae on the floors of two lakes in Taylor Valley.

The algae are reddish-brown in color to absorb as much sunlight as possible to maintain their photosynthetic processes. Only one-tenth of 1 percent of the sunlight penetrates the thick ice and reaches the lake bottoms.

On one recent series of dives, Simmons and Dale Andersen, wearing rubber suits that trapped an insulating layer of air next to their bodies, plunged through a hole 3 feet wide and worked about 15 minutes in water 5 feet deep beneath the ice.

They collected samples of the algae in glass jars and took them into a hut on the shore of the frozen lake for analysis. The researchers are camped for the summer about 50 yards from the front of an alpine glacier creeping slowly into the valley.

The microbial plants that live in rocks are found mainly in a layer of sandstone along the walls of the spectacularly scenic dry valleys.

A team of scientists led by Dr. E. Imre Friedmann of Florida State University has found that the organisms live about one-tenth of an inch beneath the surface of the rock.

Friedmann said these hardy life forms usually exist in three layers. On the op is a dark layer of a fungus. A white fungus lives beneath that and then there is a green layer of algae.

The organisms survive, Friedmann said, because the porous rocks in which they live trap light, heat, water and even nutrients from the environment.

The photosynthetic plants obtain carbon from the atmosphere and Friedmann said they apparently get nitrogen that has been transformed into biologically useful compounds by auroral activity in the upper atmosphere.

During the long, dark winters here, Friedmann said the plants are freeze dried and remain dormant until "awakened" by the sun and heat of the Antarctic spring.

These are extremely slow growing plants — some of the slowest growing known in the world — and Friedmann said their age is unknown. Each cell could be as old as 10,000 years old.

Last In A Series

Before the space agency's Viking spacecraft landed on Mars, the dry valleys were compared with what scientists thought might exist on Mars. The Vikings found that the martian deserts were colder and drier and had far less atmosphere.

No evidence of life was found on Mars, but Friedmann said if the Vikings had landed in the dry valleys, they also would not have found life because the Antarctic life exists not in soils that Vikings would have tested, but in rocks that were beyond Viking's analytical capability.

Even if the Viking could examine rocks, Friedmann said the robot would have to be able to select the right rocks for analysis. And the Viking would have to study the rock from the northern side, and it would have to know how deep in the rock to look for organisms.

Does this mean that rock life may exist on Mars?

It is possible, but not likely, Friedmann said.

Retiree Fights City Hall Over Water

WILLISTON, N.D. (AP) — Henry Bruins decided he didn't want Williston's mandatory garbage collection service, so he stopped paying.

Now the city has retaliated by cutting off his water, and the 62-year-old retired painter is ready to fire the next salvo.

"I'm debating about drilling a well," Bruins said this week. "I think it was unconstitutional to do it, but they did it."

For the past month, Bruins, who has paid his water bill in full, has been filling tanks in his basement with water from a neighbor, although "it's not convenient."

Bruins estimates the water table is 50 to 60 feet below his home and said he has bought his own drilling equipment.

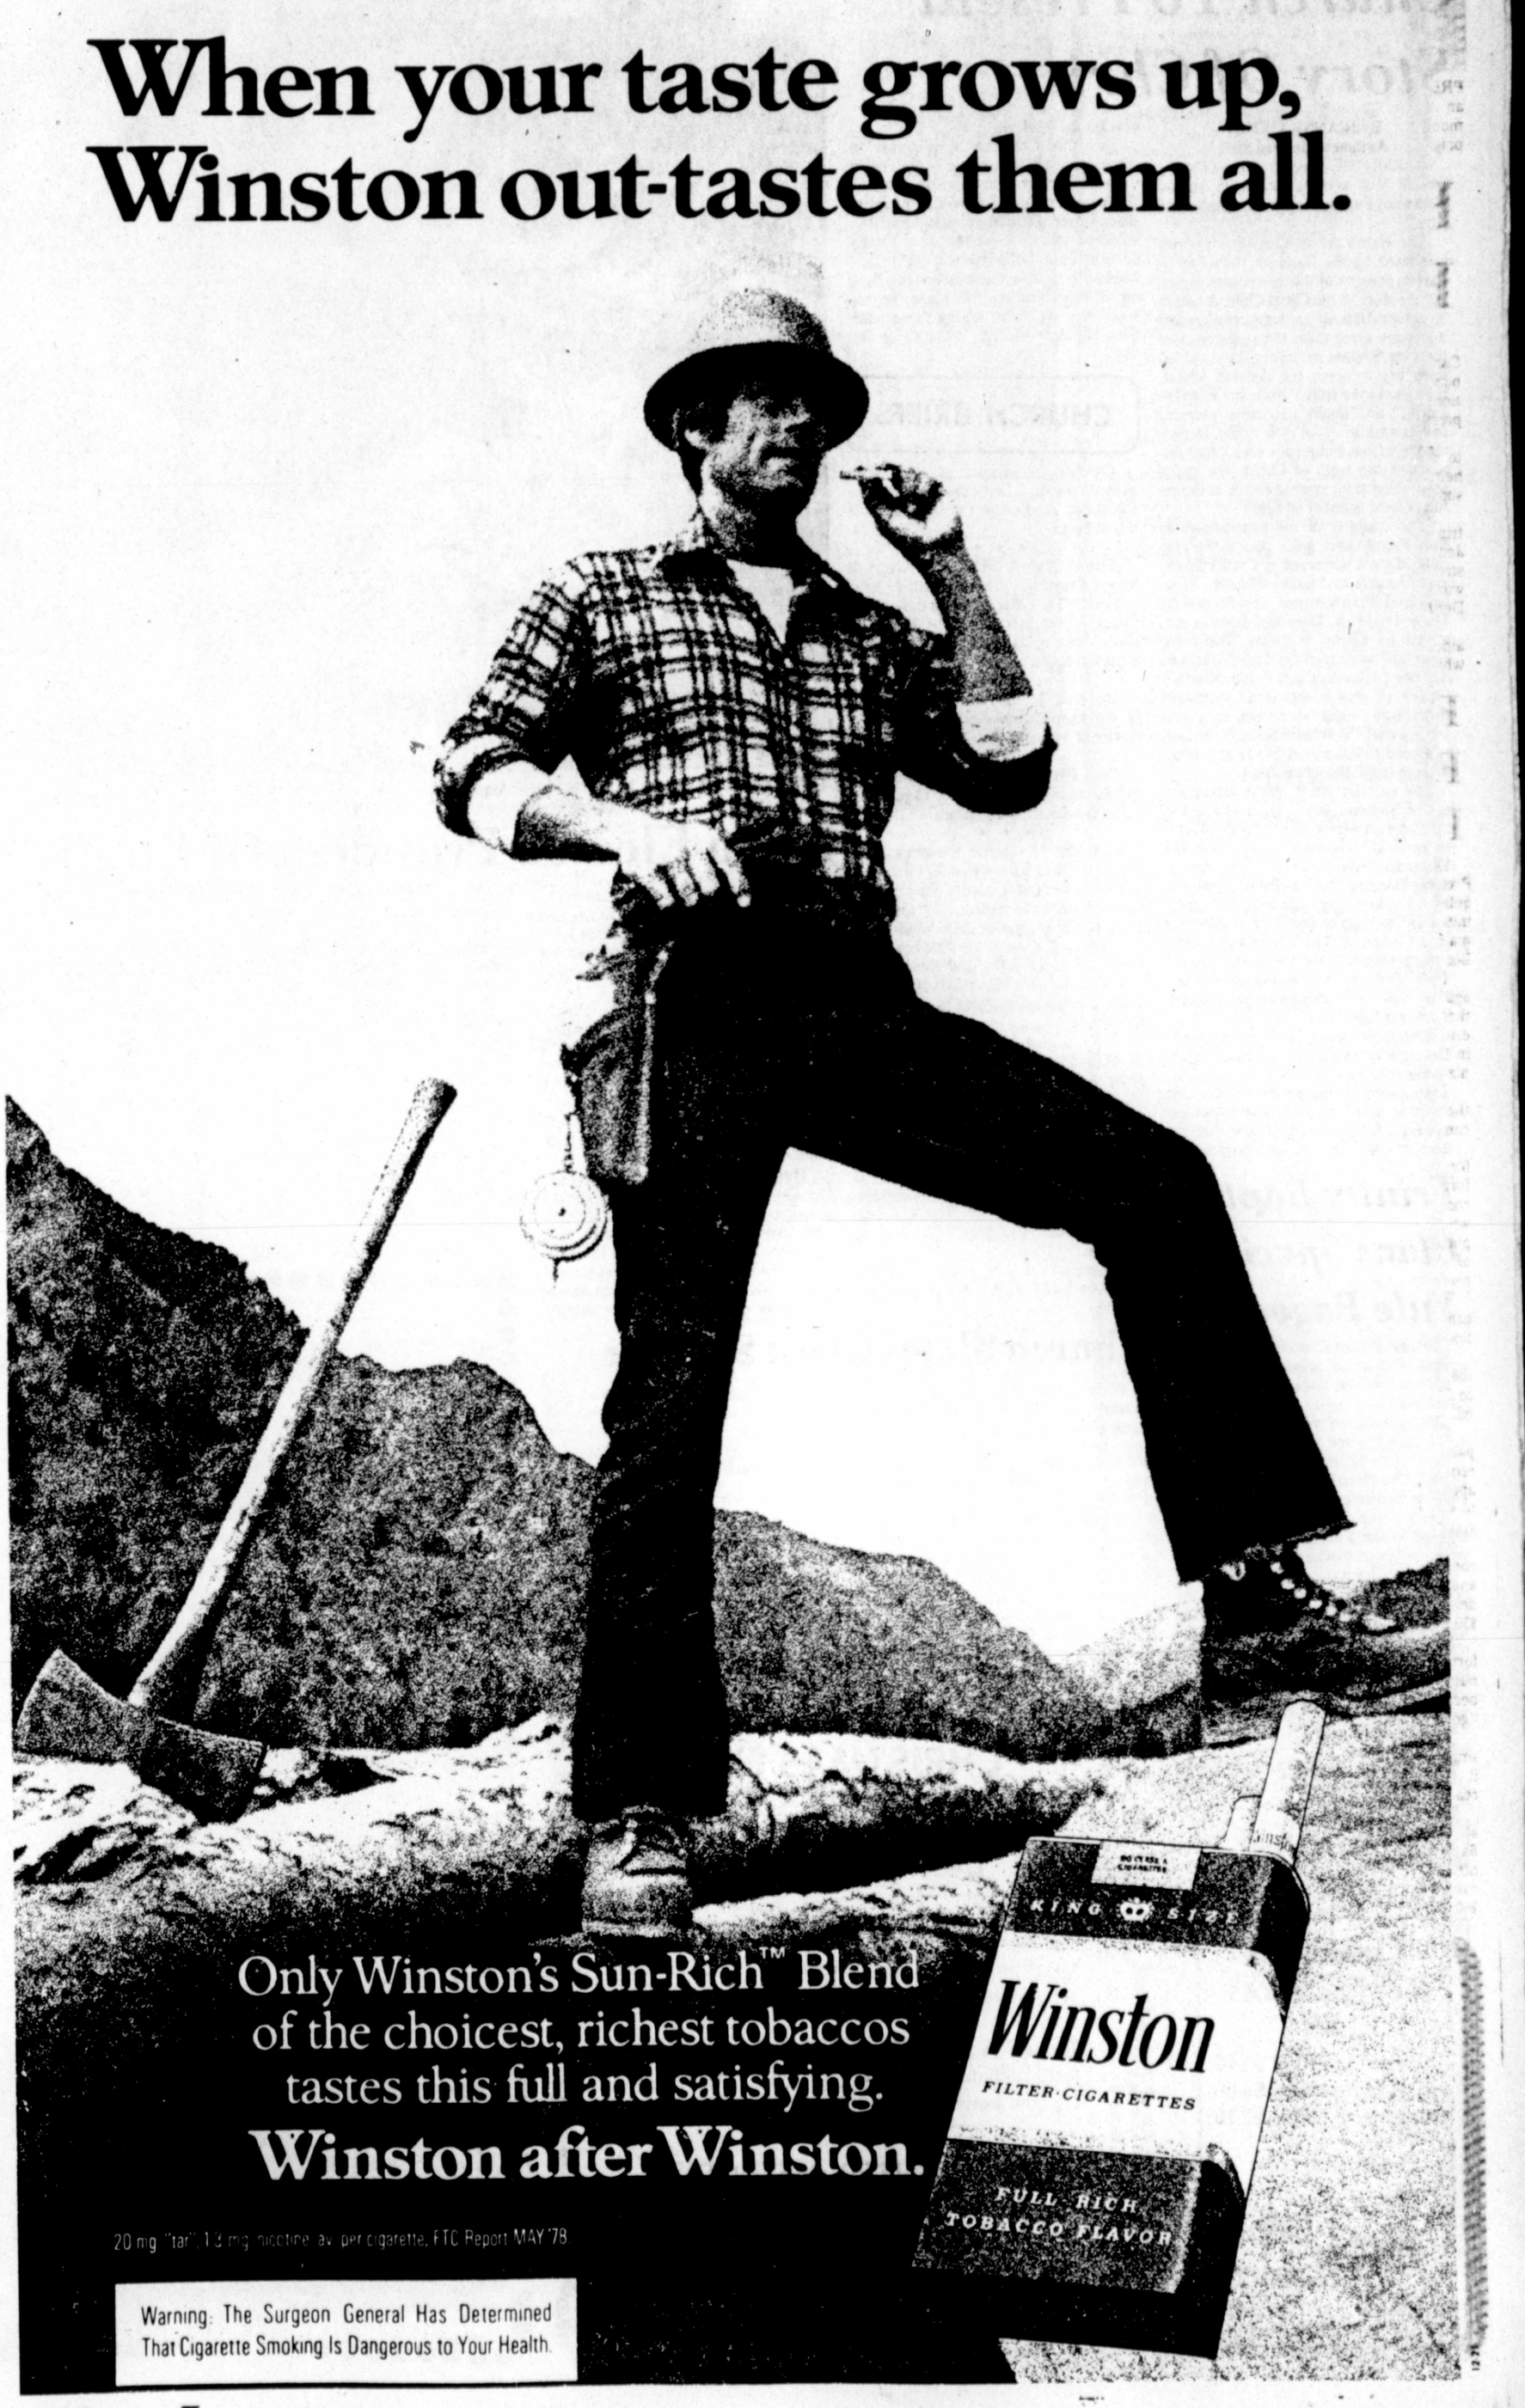

The Williston native stopped paying the $2.75 a month for garbage collection a year ago.

"I have very little garbage to haul out," he said. "If I accumulate enough to make it worthwhile to go to the city dump, I'll haul it and pay whatever they ask. But that's only once every three or four months."

City Auditor Jordis Larvick said an ordinance provides that no one may refuse the city's disposal service and everyone must pay for it whether they use it or not.

Baptist Leaders Told World Situation 'Critical'

NEW ORLEANS (Special) — Charles Malik, one of the signers of the United Nations Charter, soberly told Southern Baptist leaders that "the world situation is critical. We are facing very serious issues. We may be heading for a great turning point in history while we sit here.

"Jesus Christ is the only hope," the world statesman told the churchmen here.

Malik chided Americans for seemingly being interested in freedom for the hostages held in Iran when there are "a half-dozen problems infinitely more important" to history and the world.

"I believe that upon Christians today evolves the historic task of awakening the world to the fact that Christ is the only hope. The full responsibility is on Christians," said Malik, a Greek Orthodox.

Malik, 73, from Lebanon, was president of both the United Nations General Assembly and the Security Council. He also was co-chairman with Eleanor Roosevelt of the Human Rights Commission. Currently, he is professor emeritus of the American University in Beirut.

"To awaken the world to the fact that Jesus Christ is our only hope, Christians can do three things," he said.

"First is a deepening of our own lives and trust in Jesus Christ. This means prayer, Bible reading and repentance," he said, adding that Christians also must seek repentance on a national scale because God calls on nations to repent as well as individuals.

"Second and most difficult, is to acquaint yourselves with the history of the church. That way you get a sense of world Christianity and historical Christianity and not just parochial Christianity."

"Third, and vastly more difficult, I ask you to promote fellowship between youselves and other existing Christians in humility and trust. I do not believe any Christian church or denomination is alone capable to facing the magnitude of the challenge, but I believe and am certain that Christians together can route the devil and his work."

Malik stunned the Southern Baptists with his assessment of world conditions and American response to it. He chastized Americans for their preoccupation with the hostages in Iran.

"All I read in your paper is about the hostages. If all you are concerned about is the release of your hostages, then the rest of the world is confirmed in its opinion that you do not care about the rest of the world, but only about yourselves," he declared.

He said a number of problems are infinately more important to the world and to history than the release of 50 American hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"The first thing more important is the question of the flow of oil from the Middle East," he said. "Eighty-five percent of the oil of the world comes from there. The question is how we preserve the safety of the flow of oil to industrialized nations."

Another issue, he said, involves Soviet penetration into the Middle East.

"There are two questions: Is the Ayatollah Khomeini in power in Iran? If he is not, then who is?"

Malik said he does not believe that Khomeini is ruler in Iran, but is "the ruled rather than the ruler." He said he believes the students who are disciples of Marxism are the real power.

Another issue is the failure of Westerners to understand Islamic thought and the resurgence of Islam, he said.

"For the first time since Pearl Harbor, this country is united as never before. This moral and political unity that has been forged as a result of the crisis in Iran is a God-send. Please do not squander it...waste it...dissipate it only on the hostages. It would be a terrible waste if this nations's unity were sold only for the release of the hostages," he said.

That unity is necessary, he added, if America is to be the power it must be in the world.

"At the rate by which you have been rrtreating, doing nothing, or doing precious little and then congratulating yourselves that you have done even that little, is it any wonder that you are in the mess that you are in, in Iran?"

He criticized American belief that the nation can withdraw unto itself. "Fortress America is finished. Fortress America, much as you cherish that notion, is an illusion."

Malik pointed to the fact that "every square inch on earth is only 15 minutes from any other place on earth and can be reached with tremendous nuclear power."

"Economically, it is impossible for Americans to withdraw from the world. There is no self-sufficient country in the world today. Americans must face that fact."

Malik told Southern Baptist leaders that "the great world conflict today is between freedom and totalitarianism. The issue is between the freedom of man and what liberates him and lifts him up in his dignity, and what enslaves him and diminishes his stature.

"There have been instances of free people getting enslaved, but not in one instance in the past 34 years have there been enslaved people becoming free. There are revolutions for servitude, but where are the revolutions for freedom?"

In the conclusion to his speech, Malik urged Chrisins everywhere to unite so that a "continuing moral and spiritual and intellectual message can be offered to this drifting, thirsting world about to go to pieces. The world is so hopelessly lost in humanism, materialism, relativism, cynicism, legalism, rationalism, atheism and self-worship."

"Jesus Christ is the only hope for the world," he concluded.

Church To Present Story Of Christ

By JEANNE LIVELY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

NAZARETH (Special) — Holy Family Church will present its eighth annual Christmas Pageant today and Sunday at 8 p.m.

The eighth annual Christmas pageant presented by the Nazareth Holy Family Parish, consists of thirteen scenes depicting the story of the Christ Child. A cast of 40 actors, 10 acolytes, seven readers and a 35-voice choir takes the audience from the time Simeon confronts Mary and advises her to leave the convent school, then shows the Holy Family in "Flight to Egypt," and finally has them returning to Nazareth to make their home. Depicting the sacred and joyous events that surrounded the birth of Christ, the entire production from start to finish, is the result of local talent of all ages.

The majority of the parishioners of Holy Family have some part in the pageant. Mary is portrayed by Cyrilla Brockman, Joseph by Stanley Maurer, Elizabeth by Lillian Venhaus, and Gabriel by Albert Hartman. The child Jesus is portrayed by Shawn Wilhelm. The three kings are portrayed by Carroll Gerber, Raymond Huseman and Kelvin Kleman. Dozens of others appear as shepherds and village people. In an especially dramatic scene, the Roman Soldiers are sent by Herod to kill babies of the area in an attempt to kill the infant Jesus.

The pageant choir, under the direction of Noreen Carson, provides musical interludes between the scenes. Among the musical numbers to be rendered are Weigard's "Ave Maria," "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by J.S. Bach, "Praise to the Father" by Gounod, "Soldier Search" written by the Donna Birkenfeld and "Chosen by God" written by Noreen Carson. Organists for the production are Alma Conrad and Sharon Brockman. They will be accompanied by Winifred Wagner on the piano.

Jimmy Schulte is stage director with Florence Brockman as assistant. Father Stanley Crocchiola is the adviser. Ethel Schmucker is in charge of costumes, Jim Hoelting of lighting and Irene Wilhelm of makeup. Stage managers are Dorothy Kleman and Mary Ehly and prop manager is Danny Schilling.

This Christmas has no pretense, no commercialization; only an overall effort to make Christmas memorable and real. The people of Nazareth will be happy to share their Christmas with you this weekend at 8 p.m. in the Holy Family Catholic Church. Everyone is invited and admission is free. Persons coming from out of town who wish to make reservations may do so by calling these numbers: 945-2229, 945-2574, 945-2261 or 945-2540.

Allen Elected President Of Baptist Commission

FORT WORTH (Special) — Jimmy R. Allen of San Antonio, immediate past president of the Southern Baptist Convention, has been elected president of the Radio and Television Commission of the SBC.

Since 1968, Allen, who hopes to begin his new duties Jan 15, 1980, has been pastor of the 9,500-member First Baptist Church of San Antonio, the sixth largest SBC church.

Fred Isaacs of Cosby, Tenn., chairman of the Radio and Television Commission's trustees, announced Allen's appointment Dec. 11.

Trustees pledged their full support to the 52-year-old Allen, who was elected unanimously to succeed Paul M. Stevens, commission president for 26 years, who was forced by trustees to retire last February. They made Stevens' retirement effective Oct. 31 but relieved him immediately as chief administrative officer. Harold E. Martin, executive vice president, who has since left for a teaching post, and Charles P. Roden, a long-time commission employee, have served as interim chief administrators during the search for a new president.

Isaacs said Allen will receive a salary of $45,000 per year, plus a 10 percent annuity contribution of $4,500 and $9,600 in housing allowances.

"We have 35,400 congregations of Southern Baptists across the nation," said Allen, who has served as pastor of four churches. "Each of these represents potential avenues of communication, counseling and intensifying the sharing of the gospel."

A priority of the commission will be to increase assistance to churches already using radio and television, siad Allen, who has been involved in innovative uses of televison during his ministry in San Antonio.

Allen has had an unusual combination of backgrounds in ministry and media. For four years he hosted a youth discussion and music program on KMOL-TV, San Antonio.

Trinity Baptist Plans Special Yule Pageant

Trinity Baptist Church will present a special Christmas pageant Saturday at 7:30 p.m. on the stage of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The production will feature a cast of more than 150 and is directed by Elene Harger. This is the fourth year Trinity Baptist Church has presented such a pageant for the community.

Unique sound, lighting and music will be used to blend and shift alternately between action on two large stages.

The pageant moves from the contemporary to the traditional. "We are appealing to that large common audience who enjoys the traditional account of the birth and life of Jesus set in a contemporary setting," Mrs. Harger said. "This has a broad family appeal and children and adults alike will recognize and enjoy the major themes of the pageant," the director saud.

There is no admission charged and persons from Lubbock and the South Plains area are invited to view this year's pageant, according to the Rev. Bob Utley, pastor of Trinity Baptist. Doors open at 7 p.m.

Church Slates Guest Speaker

Sammy Oppenheim and Larry Kuykendall of El Paso will be the guest speaker and singer Sunday at the 10:50 a.m. service of the First Church of the Foursquare Gospel, 3115 2nd St., according to an announcement by the pastor, Phil Demetro.

Kuykendall grew up in Dexter, N.M., and was graduated from the University of Texas at El Paso. He is now a music teacher in Ysleta. He has recorded an album entitled "What Kind of Man."

Oppenheim was graduated from L.I.F.E. Bible College in Los Angeles and for 10 years was Youth Director and National Youth Representative. He has traveled throughout Latin America and Canada speaking to conventions and camp meetings. He is currently the leader of a Messianic Jewish organization in El Paso called Ben David Fellowship.

The body of a nobleewoman of ancient China was almost perfectly preserved after more than 2,100 years in an airtight tomb. Archeologists found that the tomb contained layers of earth, white clay, and charocoal, covering a large wooden box encasing six coffins that nested one inside the other, the National Geographic Society says.

Government Issues New Warning On Saccharin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heavy users of saccharin or cyclamate, whether they smoke or not, significantly increase their chances of contracting bladder cancer, warns a new government report.

The National Cancer Institute report released Thursday characterizes the two controversial sweeteners as weak carcinogens that enhance the likelihood of bladder cancer.

The study was done at the request of the Food and Drug Administration, the agency that tried to ban saccharin as a food additive in 1977.

The study, the largest of its type ever conducted, was based on interviews of more than 9,000 people about their habits over a period of 15 months. It cost $1.5 million and was supposed to help resolve the controversy over the safety of saccharin.

SIMILARITIES

The feet of a California Condor are similar to the feet of a turkey, in that they have toenails instead of tallons.

Figures for the study population as a whole show a statistically insignificant increase in risk from the use of artificial sweeteners.

But its subgroup studies indicate that:

—People who have six or more servings daily of a sugar substitute or two or more eight-ounce diet beverages daily have a 60 percent increased risk of bladder cancer.

—Men who smoke two packs of cigarettes a day and women who smoke one pack daily have an unspecified greater risk of bladder cancer.

—Women who don't otherwise have a great chance of developing the cancer but who make heavy use of artificial sweeteners stand a 60 percent greater chance of bladder cancer than non-users.

FDA commissioner Jere Goyan said the new study will be evaluated before the agency decides how it will proceed. But he said the new report "is consistent with previous animal studies which concluded that saccharin is a weak carcinogen."

Sidney Wolfe, director of Public Citizen Health Research Group, hailed the report as "another nail in the coffin of saccharin."

"Many people don't know that cigarettes also cause bladder cancer," said Wolfe. "If you are worried about cigarettes and bladder cancer, you should be worried about saccharin and bladder cancer."

Robert H. Kellen, president of the Calorie Control Council, a trade group, said outside specialists should evaluate the study's relevance to human saccharin use. He also cautioned against focusing on results for the subgroups identified by the institute in its report.

But those subgroup results are just what the institute's report said need to be focused upon.

Public outcries against the proposed saccharin ban led Congress to postpone it for 18 months. Although the 18-month moratorium has expired, the FDA has not resumed the steps leading to a saccharin ban pending the outcome of studies on the subject.

Cyclamate was banned in 1970 after it was linked with bladder cancer in animal tests. Saccharin thus is the only artificial sweetener approved for marketing in the United States.

Bladder cancer is three times more common in men than women and more common among cigarette smokers and workers exposed to certain industrial chemicals. It is the sixth most common kind of cancer, afflicting about 15 persons in each 100,000.

The FDA, which released the report, characterized the findings as preliminary since they do not differentiate between saccharin and cyclamate.

The study was designed in such a way that no evaluation of sweeteners during pregnancy or in early youth was possible.

Goyan said he still is concerned about the widespread use of artificial sweeteners among young people. The state of research is such that the impact on that population group may not be known for as long as 30 years, he said.

Space Agency Fighting To Save Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — An ambitious proposal to fly a spacecraft past two comets has run into budget problems, and the space agency is fighting behind the scenes to save it.

Just a few weeks after the National Aeronautics and Space Administration asked researchers to propose experiments for the mission, the agency and scientists find themselves lobbying hard to save the project, sources said this week.

The much-publicized proposal for an unmanned craft to sweep past Halley's comet and later rendezvous with comet Tempel 2 hit a snag at the Office of Management and Budget.

Although NASA officials will not talk publicly about the problems, sources who asked not to be named say the White House budget office cut from the agency's proposed fiscal 1981 budget about $15 million in critical start-up money for the comet spacecraft's new type of propulsion system. Fiscal 1981 begins Oct. 1, 1980.

If NASA cannot get the money put back, officials say privately, the agency will have to propose a simpler fly-by mission to just Halley's comet. Such a mission would be much less valuable scientifically, they say, noting that there would be no guarantee of money for even that less ambitious mission.

NASA is particularly concerned about the comet spacecraft because it says the propulsion system that would be used for it is essential for future planetary missions. And because the comet mission would involve the European Space Agency, canceling the dual-comet shot may have adverse effects on international cooperation in the future, the sources said.

NASA and concerned scientists have been talking to high administration officials about the problem.

"NASA is trying to make sure the people involved understand the implication of what they are doing," said a scientist who asked not to be named. "If you don't develop the propulsion system, not only do you give up the best comet mission of the 20th century but you also jeopardize other missions."

At issue is the Solar Electric Propulsion System, called SEPS. This system of ion drive produces small but continuous thrust from a tiny amount of fuel. This, in turn, allows spacecraft to reach high speeds and maneuver extensively without the weight and volume handicaps of conventional rockets.

The proposed comet mission, estimated to cost between $350 million and $450 million, would be launched in July 1985. The craft would come within 81,000 miles of Halley and launch an instrumented probe, made by the Europeans, to the comet's head.

WALT DISNEY'S Madam Mim's Christmas Grudge

Missing Dog Back Home For Holidays

UNION CITY, Tenn. (AP) — St. Nicholas had been missing since Halloween when he was found trapped in a hole near the home of his owner, 7-year-old Clint Joiner. Now the emaciated dog — a Christmas gift last year — is back home for the holidays.

"I really don't want anything else for Christmas," Clint, a second grader, said after he was reunited with the golden retriever.

Nick, the pet of the Bill Simrell family, was found last weekend in a two-foot by three-foot hole in a wooded lot. He was allowd to go home this week after spending several days under medical treatment.

Dr. George Davis said he had known trapped pets to survive as long as 30 days with water, but Nick's 45-day ordeal was the "Lord's work."

The dog's physical condition when he disappeared, plus several rains which provided him with water, contributed to Nick's survival, Davis said.

Nick's disappearance Oct. 30 prompted the Simrell family to advertise on radio and in newspapers, offering a reward for the dog's safe return.

"Nick always went jogging or biking with us every afternoon," Linda Simrell said. "When we called him on Halloween Day, he didn't come. We searched everywhere, on foot, by bike and by car and we just couldn't find him.

Senate Panel Says Arson Becoming Modern Plague

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arson for profit is becoming a modern plague and a Senate subcommittee says the only hope for a cure is more cooperation among federal, state and local agencies.

Their failure to work together "has helped to nurture an arson epidemic," the Senate investigations subcommittee said this week.

Arson fires are killing 1,000 Americans annually and costing insurance companies $1.6 billion, the panel said in a report issued after a year-long investigation.

"Long thought by the public to be a sporadic act of greed, arson has evolved over the past decade into a way of life in many metropolitan areas," the report says.

The subcommittee headed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., is recommending that Congress make arson a federal crime.

Many local fire companies lack the expertise and resources to deal with the escalating problem, the report says, adding that "the involvement of federal law enforcement agencies is a logical national strategy to deal with arson and the impact of this crime on the nation as a whole."

It says unless the insurance industry does more to discourage arson fraud, "arson for profit will continue to be a lucrative criminal enterprise."

From 1970 until 1977, the annual number of arson fires doubled to 240,000, according to American Insurance Association estimates.

In Los Angeles, the subcommittee report says, losses due to deliberately set fires totalled $10.5 million between July and December 1978, a doubling of the previous year.

It says the "arson plague has already ravaged hundreds of thousands of commercial and residential acres" in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Detroit.

Most of the fires strike rundown areas in big cities, the report says. There is "terror, dislocation and financial ruin for thousands of families" in areas where arsonists do their work and an estimated 10,000 persons are injured each year in arson fires.

Landlords and other building owners who see property values dropping in the inner city frequently overinsure their properties, then pay to have them torched to obtain a quick insurance settlement to avert further loss, the report says. Some fires also are ordered by organized crime figures, it says.

Oil Price Violations Near $10 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department has issued new charges of oil pricing violations against seven companies, bringing the total value of alleged violations to nearly $10 billion.

The latest allegations turned up by the department's audits of 15 major refiners between 1973 and 1976 totalled more than $1 billion, department officials said this week.

These "notices of probable violation" marked completion of initial audits of the seven companies, the department said, adding that it plans next year to begin extending its audits to additional companies and to post-1976 transactions.

Most of the charges brought so far have been challenged by the companies and still must be resolved through departmental reviews or in the courts.

The department noted that none of the latest round of civil actions contend that the oil companies willfully violated the regulations.

The department alleged pricing violations of $370.6 million by Shell Oil Co.; $168.3 million by Continental Oil Co.; $208.4 million by Atlantic Richfield Co.; $68.4 million by Marathon Oil Co.; $20.5 million by Chevron USA; $31.3 million by Texaco Oil Co. and $154.1 million by Standard Oil Co. (Ohio).

The companies have 30 days to file formal responses to the complaints, which cover the complete scope of petroleum products.

Bruce F. McCall, Conoco vice president for U.S. marketing, said the charges against that firm involve the department's mistaking a few legitimate transactions for violations. It then "multiplied it by 10" to charge violations over a 10-month period, he said.

Atlantic Richfield denied the allegations, accusing the Energy Department of "a politically motivated program of claiming headlines with big numbers but little substance."

Sohio also said the department's new allegations were invalid and pledged to challenge them in court.

Controversy Surprises Dornan

By JAY PERKINS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert K. Dornan says he just can't believe people consider him controversial.

After all, he represents middle-class political virtues.

After all, he's a "gentleman about protocol."

After all, all he did was to denounce a fellow member of Congress in a chamber where — though it may be tinted with irony — the normal reference is to "my esteemed colleague" or some similar genteel phrase.

So just who is Rep. Robert K. Dornan and why is he saying these things about Ted Kennedy? And about Rep. Robert Drinan, the Massachusetts Democrat who is a priest yet? And about Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California — "Governor Moonbeam," he calls him. And about Gov. Hugh L. Carey of New York?

Why does this self-described non-controversial Republican from California call Kennedy a "phony" and the "dregs of the earth" and take the floor of the House to say the only member of Congress to swim the Chappaquiddick Channel was not Ted Kennedy but Robert K. Dornan?

Why did he pay an unannounced visit to the parents of Mary Jo Kopechne, the woman who died in the auto accident with Ted Kennedy at Chappaquiddick.

Robert K. Dornan. Born New York City, of Irish-Catholic background. Age: 46. Former occupation: fighter pilot, talk shot host, television producer, lecturer, with periodic excursions into jobs as a stunt man, actor, water softener salesman and gymnastics instructor.

Politics: conservative Republican. Outspoken foe of abortion. Strong supporter of defense spending and of the aerospace industries that make up his district.

There are some who say Dornan has a skin as tough as that which covered his famous uncle, the late Jack Haley, when Haley played the tin man in the "Wizard of Oz."

There are none that compare him to the cowardly lion of the same movie.

Dornan, says one congressman who asked not to be identified, is a man who sees things in black and white.

"I think the Congress is better for having people like Dornan," the congressman says. Then he quickly adds: "It would be unlivable if all 435 of them were like him."

He makes words such as "disgusting" sound like something that just crawled out of a sewer. He spits out "phony" as if he can't wait to get the word away from him.

Of his image as controversial, he says "I find it curious because the issues that I represent are the majority issues represented by middle Americans in this country. I think it's controversial for Jerry Brown to appear before a homosexual gathering while he's running for the presidency."

As to why he has criticized Kennedy, he says "I fenced for a while. I always liked the elegance of the beginning French charge to your opponent — en garde.

"I'm a Republican, I'm a conservative. He's a Democrat, he's a liberal. We're both Irish-Catholics. I'm pro-life. He's one of these phonies that says, 'I'm against abortion because I believe that's a being with a soul, an eternal soul given to it by God, but'" — and Dornan's voice rises to a roar as he spits out the word with obvious sarcasm — "'but, I think we have to fund it federally in the government.'

"Now I respect all the atheists in the House and all those of different religious persuasions and beliefs who believe it is not a human being because what they're doing is controlling population, social engineering, saving welfare dollars ...

"But those in this House who can see that it's an immortal human being and then go ahead and pay to kill it anyway, that's the height of ugly hypocrisy and phony political expediency.

"So I have to concede, en garde, up front, that I'm sickened by Drinan — I call him Father Death — by Kennedy, by Carey of New York and by Gov. Moonbeam — this flaky getting weirder by the minute governor in California — because they all brag about their Catholic education. They're disgusting and I don't mind using strong language."

Dornan's first attack on Kennedy came Oct. 30. It caused Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, to question whether Dornan violated House rules by attacking a fellow member of Congress, and Dornan later removed any referenee to Kennedy in his remarks that were printed in the Congressional Record.

It was in that speech that Dornan claimed to be the only member of Congress to ever swim the Chappaquiddick channel — a swim Kennedy says he made after the accident in which Mary Jo Kopechne was killed.

Dornan says he swam the Chappaquiddick several days after the Kennedy accident because he wanted to see if it was possible.

"What I was trying to do was to see as a competitive swimmer in a bathing suit at noon just how big a challenge this was to do at night with all your clothes on, supposedly in shock from an accident," Dornan said. "Well, I almost drowned doing it. I was convinced then that he had never negotiated that channel by swimming it at night."

Doran took the floor again several days later to again discuss Chappaquiddick but avoided mentioning Kennedy by name. He says he's "leaning heavily away" from taking the House floor again to discuss Kennedybut doesnt completely ule it ou.

He adds: "I don't think Kennedy has character and I don't want him to be president ... Why shouldn't I discuss a character flaw and a coverup that precludes ever his running for this job."

Sub Expensive To Maintain

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — It has cost the Navy more in the last five years to keep the nuclear submarine Nautilus operating and to deactivate it than it cost in 1955 to build the vessel, figures released by the Navy show.

The Navy said this week it will request $13.3 million in the 1981 budget to deactivate the vessel, the nation's first atomic submarine, and another $7.6 million to prepare a site for it at the Washington D.C., Navy Yard, where it is planning to place the submarine on public display.

The Navy estimates it will cost $600,000 annually to maintain the Nautilus as the centerpiece to a submarine museum.

Researchers Need More Money

By JOHN S. LANGDON

HERSHEY, Pa. (UPI) — The head of the team that performed China's first heart transplant stood in the Hershey Medical Center, built by a capitalist candy bar, and talked about getting by on his own tight budget.

Dr. Dong Fangzhong led four of his Shanghai colleagues here on a United States tour funded by American Quakers to see a Hershey Medical Center transplant team's progress toward achieving a totally artificial heart.

Dong said the Chinese have much to learn from U.S. transplant specialists.

Dong and Drs. Lin Yanzen, Ye Chunxiu, Zhang Shize and Lu Deyuan — all of Shanghai's Second Medical College — came to watch Dr. Walter Pae plant a mechanical heart pump in a 160-pound calf.

The Hershey transplant team, headed by Dr. Williams S. Pierce, has been developing the fist-sized pump since 1975. Two years ago they began using an external pump — known as a left ventricular assist device — as a last hope procedure with human open-heart surgery patients.

Two of the center's early human patients lived five days, a young woman survived 14 months and a 56-year-old man who used a pump temporarily last June now is back at work.

Calves, used for LVAD implant research because of their size and gentle nature, do not enjoy such post-operative longevity because of secondary infections and their more rapid growth rate.

The Hershey team's goal is perfection by 1990 of an artificial heart for use by human patients awaiting a live heart transplant.

"Our heart patient lived 109 days," he said, "and died from avoidable rejection. We didn't do a good job.

"We have to learn a lot from over here," said Dong, who took post-graduate training at both the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, and St. Marys Hospital, Huntington, W. Va., in the 1940s.

"And when we go back, we won't have as good equipment and we don't have enough funds at hand.

"Our country isn't in debt," Dong said, "but we can't spend beyond our limit, and we can't ask for money like you do.

"We have to get by."

Hershey Medical Center's 350-bed, all private rooms hospital, medical college and research center has a total staff of 2,500, a current annual budget of $85 million — all stemming from an initial $50 million gift to Pennsylvania State University by the Milton S. Hershey Foundation in 1963.

Dong said Chinese medical research "was not a high priority during our cultural revolution ... but our government now encourages us to do more transplants."

He said Chinese medicine has helped raise the estimated life span of his nation of approximately 1 billion persons to double the 1939 figure of 35 years "and so we too are becoming a nation of older persons."

Asked whether Chinese doctors are accorded privileges equal to the average pre-tax income of $63,000 a year enjoyed by U. S. doctors, Dong said "at my age there are more privileges and a better way of life.

"For the average doctor in China, the rewards are about the same as for a professor or factory worker."

New Test Can Detect Leukemia Relapse

BOSTON (UPI) — Cancer researchers have found a method of predicting relapses in patients suffering from a deadly form of leukemia, a study published this week reported, but it was not known if the earlier detection would improve cure rates.

Acute myeloblastic leukemia, a blood and bone cancer, accounts for about 25 percent of all leukemias and is most commonly found in adults. Even with the best possible treatment, it can be fatal in less than two years.

But a study appearing in the New England Journal of Medicine describes a test to detect leukemia cells in the bone marrow of patients with the deadly disease while it is in remission — months before outward signs of a relapse appear.

The research was conducted jointly at the Toronto Western Hospital and the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond on patients with acute myeloblastic leukemia.

Er. Michael A. Baker, of Toronto Western, cautioned it was too soon to tell if early detection of a relapse will improve patient survival.

"If one can detect relapse in advance there is something you can do about it," he said in an interview. "We hope we can apply early treatment, but that has not yet been tested."

He said anti-cancer drugs will cause AML to abate in about one half of all patients with the disease. "The longer the remission lasts, the longer the patient can stay alive," he said.

But, Baker said, by the time doctors see clinical signs of the disease it generally has advanced to a stage where chemotherapy is not as effective.

The doctors screened 26 AML patients over a period of six months with a special antiserum.

By applying antiserum to samples of the patients' bone marrow, the doctors were able to predict relapses in all but five of the patients an average of 3.7 months before they occurred.

"Each month when a patient comes to the hospital he has a sample taken from inside the bone marrow," Baker said.

The antiserum is formed by treating laboratory mice with human leukemia cells and thereafter it can "recognize" human leukemia cells. It is extracted and washed over the patient's bone marrow sample.

DR. LAMB

Low Blood Sugar Attacks

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am very concerned about by husband. He is 70 years old and has had a gallbladder operation. About 15 years ago he had a bleeding ulcer and they removed three-fourths of his stomach. He was told to eat frequent small meals but he didn't. He was also told it would affect him if he ate sweets. On and off it did bother him but he's never eaten a lot of sweets.

When it does bother him, he feels worn out and doesn't even realize at times where he is. He then eats soda crackers, salted or unsalted, and in about 20 minutes it is gone. But it has become more frequent. He just had a physical but he didn't mention this to the doctor and will not go back. He is fine otherwise. He eats honey in place of sugar and has for years. There was a time when he went through gallons in a year but he has cut down.

He sometimes gets these reactions when he's driving and he always carried crackers. He's also had this reaction when he hasn't had anything other than honey and cereal and fresh fruit.

DEAR READER — Your husband should talk to his doctor about it, but yourstory sounds like he's having low blood sugar attacks. That's not too uncommon after a person has had a large amount of his stomach removed.

The very small stomach dumps the food rapidly into the small intestine. The normal size stomach is a food reservoir and lets out a little bit of food at a time. Because the food is rapidly dumped out of the small stomach, this is called the "dumping syndrome."

The sudden dumping of sweets into the small intestine causes them to be rapidly absorbed into the bloodstream and, in turn, results in a rapid rise in blood sugar. There is an excess pouring out of insuline and the blood sugar then falls too low. This general mechanism is why our husband's doctor didn't want him to eat sweets and recommended that he eat frequent small meals.

Another tip in your letter is that he has these attacks after he has had nothing but crackers and honey. Some people think honey is a health food but the truth is it has the same sugars in it that table sugar does. It's absorbed very rapidly into the blood stream and can cause the rebound low blood sugar reactions just the same as table sugar would.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-9, Low Blood Sugar: Hypoglycemia. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter I'm sending you explains, during low blood sugar attacks you can be disoriented and have mental changes or confusion.

Since your husband is 70 years old, it could be that some people would say that his responses are just because of his age. That's not always true. About one out of five such reactions on older people is, in fact, related to underlying medical problems. One of these can be low blood sugar. That's why individuals with symptoms that some people like to call "senility" deserve a competent, complete medical evaluation rather than being simply neglected.

ELIZABETH BARCLAY
Body Possibly Found

Pair Awaits Identity Of Girl's Body

DALLAS (AP) — Grief-stricken parents waited anxiously while medical examiners sought to confirm today that the decomposed body found dumped alongside a country road was that of a 7-year-old Dallas girl abducted two months ago.

"This is just not fair," said the father of Elizabeth Lynn Barclay, "why such a beautiful, loving girl should have to end her life this way, scared and away from the family that loves her.

"It's also not fair since the man who did this is still out there. We have tried all the time not to think bad of him. But now I have nothing but hate for him," David Barclay said.

A farmer, hauling a load of hay, stumbled across the remains Thursday of a small girl hidden in tall grass off a secluded gravel road near Wills Point, said Lt. B. G. Maroney of the Dallas Police Department. Animals had strewn some of the bones across the roadway, he said.

Maroney said clothing — white shorts and a red, white and blue halter top — found on the body matches that worn by the Barclay girl when she was abducted near her Dallas home Oct. 23.

Maroney noted the body was "so badly decomposed" that Dallas County medical examiners will be forced to rely on the child's dental records in order to make positive identification.

Elizabeth was abducted as she walked to a store to buy some ice cream with her 3-year-old brother, Scott, and a 5-year-old companion, J.R. Potter.

The two other children were unharmed and told police a husky black man in his early 30s kidnapped the blond-haired little girl and threatened to "take her and throw her into the water."

Officers checked alleyways, gravel pits, lakes, creeks and rivers, while 13 tactical squads combed the immediate area without success.

Replacement Named To Sanitation Post

Max Cunningham, administrative assistant to the director of water utilities the past five years, has been named city sanitation superintendent.

As sanitation superintendent Cunningham will supervise a department that collects and disposes of residential, commercial, institutional and industrial waste.

Ex-Coach Loses Fight Against School

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A federal judge has ruled in favor of the Morton school district in a $465,000 suit brought by former basketball coach Dan Smith.

Judge Halbert O. Woodward ruled this week that Smith is not entitled to any compensation from the school district or from individual board members and school employees named in the suit.

Smith alleged in the suit, filed June 1, 1978, that his contract was wrongfully terminated and that he was deprived of his right of academic freedom guaranteed in the first and 14th amendments to the United States Constitution.

He was asking $225,000 for loss of income and damage to his reputation, and $240,000 in punitive damages — $75,000 from school board member Dexter Nebhut, $75,000 each from former school superintendent Marlin Dodds and his wife Katheryn and $5,000 each from board members Herbert F. Greener, Robert Yeary and Raymond Lewis.

Smith claims in the suit he was ousted because he refused to show favoritism toward the son of former school board president Nebhut, and because he supported the rights of black athletes to play in proportion to their abilities.

"This court does not find or conclude that there has been any denial or interference with the plaintiff's (Smith's) academic freedom in this case. . ." Woodward's opinion states.

Nebhut testified in Woodward's court Dec. 7 that he had contacted Smith to find out whether the junior varsity team had enough uniforms after his son had not been allowed to travel with the team to Odessa.

Nebhut said he also contacted Dodds about the incident. Dodds in turn told Smith to "travel all boys on the squad regardless of race, color or creed."

Woodward wrote that the firing did not result from the incident, and that even if it had, Nebhut's actions did not constitute interference with Smith's academic freedom.

Nebhut and other board members named in the suit maintained Smith's contract was not renewed for the 1978-79 school year because Dodds, high school principal Garland Cavitt and junior high school principal Robert Lee did not recommend renewal.

Dodds had testified Smith mixed together gate and concession receipts at a basketball tournament and had reportedly used profanity against Cavitt. He also said Smith exhibited bad sportsmanship at basketball games and was unable to get along with other school employees.

Woodward, in the opinion, also dismissed Smith's complaint against Mrs. Dodds, whom Smith claimed was a major advocate of his firing.

Smith claimed Mrs. Dodds had told some Morton residents about an incident in which Smith had left town as a result of problems with his wife Sharon.

"The court further finds that this particular incident and the reference to it by Mrs. Dodds did not have any bearing or or in any way cause the board not to renew the plaintiff's contract for 1978-79," Woodward wrote. He also said the court found "no conspiracy or agreement" among board members to spread rumors about Smith.

Smith was first hired as basketball coach for the 1976-77 school year. His team won the class AA state championship that year.

Firefighters Claim Statements False

The association countered by saying news media handouts and brochures outlined that the Fire and Police Employee Relations Act only requires city officials to sit down and talk to the firefighters and that arbitration is not mandatory.

Cunningham said the negotiating process "would make the fire chief a figurehead and undermine the budgeting process of a dozen high-ranking fire department personnel."

But, association members wanted to know what dozen high-ranking personnel Cunningham was referring to.

"Counting the District Chief rank and above, there are only nine people. The district chiefs have very little if any input into the capital or physical asset budget, and even the chief of the department has no input into the employee package of the budget!" a prepared association statement said.

In response to Cunningham's charges that the collective bargaining right would allow labor leaders to determine salaries and "would render our personnel department useless in our efforts to keep our salaries competitive with other cities," the firefighters said city officials would not be forced into anything.

"In fact, a member or members of the council could be part of the city's negotiating team and the council would have to approve any agreement that was produced through the negotiative process," firefighters said.

Association members also argued with the city manager's statement that the elected City Council "should be responsible for determining all city pay scales and benefits, because it is the City Council that is responsible for setting the tax rate and other charges that finance all budgeted expenses."

Firefighters, however, said, "Under the current budgeting process, the council considers all the capital projects before it lobks at the employee package. Only after the pet projects have been funded are the employees considered — if there are any funds left."

Cunningham's report also said if a negotiated agreement were rejected by the City Council, a decision would be made by an outside arbitration board. But, firefighters called that claim "completely false" and said it "indicates complete ignorance of the law."

The association referred to Section 10 (b) of the Fire and Police Employee Relations Act, which states, "Although the policy of this Act favors and encourages the parties to elect voluntary arbitration, nothing contained herein shall be deemed a requirement for compulsory arbitration."

Absentee voting on the firefighters' pay and bargaining rights issue begins Dec. 28 in the City Secretary's office.

A similar meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at the South Plains Electric Co-op for those firefighters and their family members who could not attend Thursday night.

Council Action May Aid Homebuyers

take action, we might not be able to."

West and Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan emphasized the council had taken no irreversible action in creating the nonprofit corporation.

"We want to go ahead with it with the understanding we're not going beyond the point of no return," Mrs. Jordan said.

"If we want to call a halt, we can."

West said the mortgage bond program "in no way affects the finances of the city and places no liability on the city or the (corporation) board."

Also at the meeting, council members suspended for 120 days the effective date of a rate increase requested by the South Plains Electric Cooperative so the council can determine whether the rate hike is justified.

The co-op applied to the Public Utility Commission last month for an average 10.45 percent rate increase to become effective in January.

However, the PUC also has suspended implementation of the new rate schedule pending a Jan. 30 hearing on the rate increase request.

Full Gospel Sets Yule Program

The Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship of Lubbock will sponsor a special Christmas program at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Memorial Civic Center.

Sammy Oppenheim, spiritual leader of Havarat Ben David, a Messianic Jewish organization in El Paso, will present a Messianic Jewish Passover during the program. The Messianic Jews are believers in Christ.

"Although it's not Passover, it is a beautiful teaching and will help us understand better what the Lord's Supper means, what Christmas means," Oppenheim said.

Appearing with Oppenheim will be soloist Larry Kuykendall, who also is active in the Ben David Fellowship in El Paso. Kuykendall will sing a variety of Jewish ballads and Judeo-Christian songs.

The program is open to the public.

Jesus Reaches Manhood, Faces Exalted Calling

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

There is now way of determining when he came to know it, or how. There is no way of finding out whether the knowledge came to him instantaneously or gradually, or what particular circumstances or event may have disclosed it.

But it imbued the young man of Nazareth, "... there is another who bears witness to me ..."

The details of that realization are deeply inaccessible. But at some point, he recognized it. There came a day, and he was certain. Some time before Jesus reached his finished manhood, he knew.

"The Father is in me and I am in the Father ... I came not of my own accord, but he sent me."

It was a stunningly awesome fate to confront.

"My yoke," he would call it. It was if he had been made both sovereign and servant at the same time, both everything and nothing. He canceled out himself. "I seek not my own will, but the will of him who sent me."

Yet there was no avoiding it; it fastened on him inescapably, irresistibly. On him, had "God the Father set his seal."

Every youth, as he matures, passes through the strained turmoil of discovering his own individuality, of peering hard at himself with that new critical faculty, as if it observed from outside himself, judging his own person.

It is a strange, sensitive stage, and often a painful one, laden with surprises, even at oneself. "A young man is like a colt that whinnies," says the Talmud. "He paces up and down; he grooms himself with care ..." He puzzles, explores, seeking his bearings.

The sounder the man, the more he begins to know what and who he is and where he is going, even if only dimly. Normally, even the best vision remains partial.

But in one case, it was complete — in the complete man. That did not make the going easy, only sure. The prospect, considering the character of men about him, was plainly excruciating.

In Christian belief, Jesus is considered fully human, subject to the conditions of finite existence, sharing men's nature, needs, delights and travail, but also a perfect projection of God — the divine functioning flawlessly in the flesh.

It was a stupendous, yet devastating identity to bear. It exalted him incomparably. "All mine are thine, and thine are mine." Yet it demolished him, subsumed him in another. "... the son can do nothing ... only what he sees the Father doing."

At some point before Jesus took up his predestined vocation, the man who had reared him as an earthly father died. Old Joseph didn't live to see the lightning impact of the life of the young one whom he had guarded so fiercely. Legend says Joseph lived to the age of 111 and describes the deathbed scene at the family's meager abode in Nazareth.

Mary sat at his feet and Jesus at his head. The old carpenter clutched the youth's hand. "I requested thee, O my beloved son, to be quiet in all things." He apologized for once pulling Jesus' ear in shushing him. Jesus wept. Mary stroked her husband's feet and legs, which grew cold.

Brethren and sisters were summoned and as numbness and pain seized Joseph, lamentations filled the house. Sitting beside the body, Jesus closed the dead Joseph's eyes. Neighbors came and mourned until the ninth hour. After washing and anointing the body, they buried him there in the hills of Galilee, it is related.

Jesus, who had toiled and sweated with him there in the woodworking leanto, now faced his own calling.

Aware of the pattern of his own growing up, he later — in talking to the apostle Peter, — cited the curious changing outlook of that progression into responsible manhood:

"... when you were young, you girded yourself and walked where you would; but when you are old, you will stretch out your hand, and another will gird you and carry you where you do not wish to go."

The direction may be hard and heartbreaking, but the good man, true to that inner summons, accepts it. It may seem forlorn, giving up self-gratifying ends, but there is no real profit if a man "gains the whole world and forfeits his life."

After Joseph's death, Jesus still had to provide for his mother, a duty he fulfilled until his own death, when he turned the task over to an apostle and kinsman, John. But he also had to set his own course.

In the world around him, all sorts of "ways" beckoned. The military-occupied land, bled by taxes, outraged by heathen incursions and smoldering with incendiary ferment, had given rise to many movements of collaboration and protest.

There were the devout, studious separatists, the Pharisees, shunning secular affairs of rulers and the masses; the dagger-carrying underground, the Sciarii; the activist demonstrators, the Zealots, with their motto, "no rule but God!" There were the collaborationist priesthood, the Sadducees; the legal, acamic functionaries, the Scribes; the shaven faithless youths, the Herodian party, and numerous withdrawn monastic sects, including the sternly disciplined Essenes, sequestered around the Dead Sea.

Jesus himself, as he entered manhood, spent much time alone in prayer, apart from the fracious babble. It may have been this, in part, that caused Nazareth neighbors to start looking on this once-favored youth as an odd, disturbing one. Also, in the pricing Jewish tradition in which he was raised, young men were supposed to marry by about 18. Not to do so was considered peculiar. "Cursed the man who, at 20 years, was not married," the saying went.

But Jesus grew older, 24 ... 27 ... 29 — and still did not marry. Although women ultimately proved to be among his most loyal, unflinching friends in crisis, he went his solitary way, hearing that primordial, prodigious call: "Before Abraham was, I am."

It was as if he were totally at home in this world, loving its beauty and feeling its agonies, yet also bearing a universal embrace. It was a lonely path. "No one knows the son except the Father, and no one knows the Father except the son ..."

Last In A Series

Yet, no matter how harsh the rejections and blindness, "he who has sent me is with me; he has not left me alone." It was up to him, as man, to manifest in natural terms which men understood the supernatural concern they did not understand. "I will make it known, that the love with which thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them."

That passion glorified, yet effaced him. "Not my will, but thine." Strangely, in receiving "all authority," he gave up all of himself. "He who believes in me believes not in me, but in him who sent me ... My teaching is not mine, but his ..." He was captive to the "other," yet thereby liberated from the suffocating cell of self. "The truth shall make you free."

He also foresaw the consequences of that supremacy in surrender. "He who finds his life will lose it ..." As St. Paul described it, Jesus "did not count equality with God a thing to be grasped, but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being born in the likeness of men ... He humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even death on a cross."

And that was his mission. "For God so loved that world that he gave his only son ... For their sake I consecrate myself, that they also may be consecrated in truth."

More than any descriptive words, it was his behavior that distinguished him. In his early decisive struggles of conscience, in which he determined the road he must follow, he spurned pride, the will-to-power which subtly affects ordinary men. This singular difference about him was dramatized in his temptations by the devil in the preparatory period before his ministry began.

In those curiously revealing passages, Jesus is tempted to turn stone into bread, to make a sensational leap to draw acclaim and a huge following, to assume governing power — none of these things evil in themselves — yet each appealing to man's egotistic impulses.

Jesus' refusal ran contrary to the age-old, self-seeking twist in man. Instead, he chose that alarmingly selfless course, leading not to adulation (the mirage we all pursue), but to the most degrading form of death, crucifixion.

When he preached his first sermon in his hometown of Nazareth, his neighbors were infuriated. "The spirit of the Lord is upon me," he said, "because he has anointed me to preach good news to the poor ... to proclaim release to the captives ... to set at liberty those who are oppressed, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord."

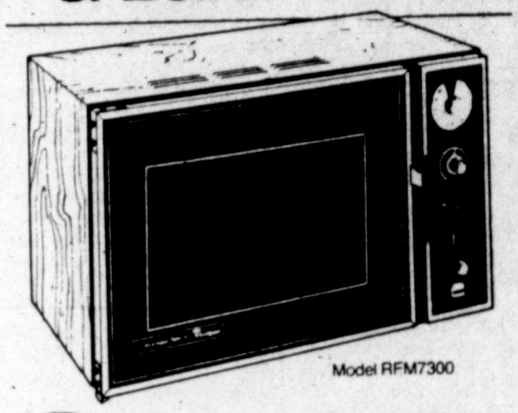

They ran him out of town. So began the public life of the babe of Bethlehem — the true man, the "man for others."

Troop's Sufferings Recorded In Book

WASHINGTON (AP) — High energy costs may be forcing you to pass a cooler winter than in the past, but this discomfort likely doesn't compare to the wintertime sufferings of George Washington's revolutionary troops.

The National Park Service has available a major new book discusing Washington's winter quarters at Morristown, N.J.

"Morristown: The War Years, 1775-1783," is a pictorial history put together by the Eastern National Park and Monument Association. The 108 color photos detail the Morristown park area with recreations of revolutionay scenes included. The text consists of quotations from letters, diaries and other documents from the people who endured those hardships.

The book costs $9.95 for soft cover and $15.95 in hardback and can be purchased from the Morristown National Historical Park, P. O. Box 1136R, Morristown, N.J., 07960.

Center Detects Solar Flare

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Solar forecasters said a major flare has been detected in the southeast quadrant of the sun and could signal the development of larger flares later in the month.

The flare began at 4:02 p.m. CST Wednesday and reached a maximum at 4:11 p.m. CST, Said Joe Hirman, chief forecaster for the joint National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration-Air Force Space Environmental Services Center.

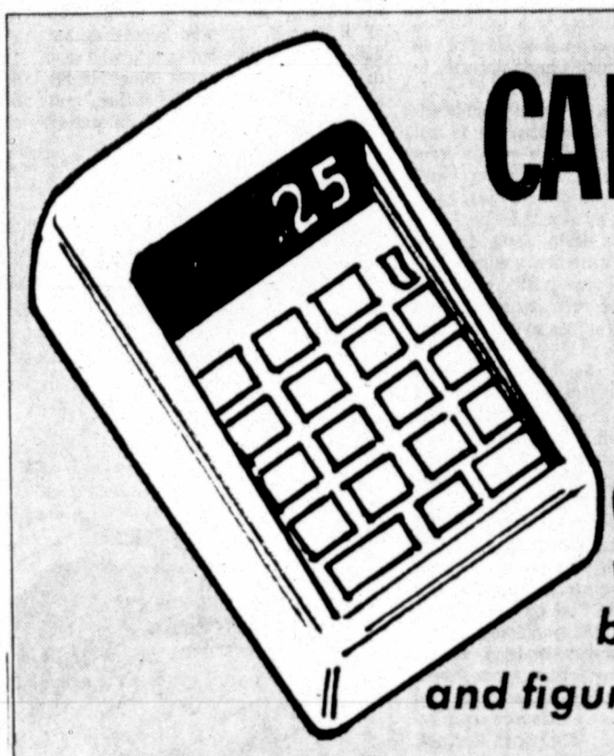

Hirman said the flare occurred in an active sunspot region and was classified as the smallest of the major size of eruption. He said the flare was accompanied by a moderate burder of radio frequency energy.

The activity was the first major burst seen recently in the sun's southern hemisphere and could signal a new surge of activity, he said. The sunspot region was growing and could produce more large flares during December, he said.

When Christmas time comes rolling by,
They say St. Nick takes to sky!
But what have we, this snowy year?
He drives a car- not his deer!
And so, dear friends, tis this we pray...
That he drives with care his 4-Door sleigh;
that he doesn't skid when the sky is sleeting
So he may bring this Holiday Greeting:

MERRY CHRISTMAS, HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Texas Insurance Board Suggests Rate Cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — State Insurance Board staff members have proposed rate cuts that would save a borrower $43 in credit life, health and accident premiums on a $6,000 loan.

The board will consider the reductions in February, along with rules to curb some abuses in the credit insurance business.

Rate reductions would amount to about 14 percent for credit life and 10 percent for credit accident and health insurance. The board has not changed rates since March 1, 1974.

The premium for the usual credit life policy would drop from 58 cents to 50 cents per $100 loaned. Credit accident and health premiums would drop from $3.86 to $3.46 per $100.

Credit life insurance on a typical four-year $6,000 automobile loan would cost $120, compared with $139.20 now. A borrower would pay $207.60 instead of the current premium of $231.60 for credit accident and health coverage.

Borrowers buy credit life insurance to assure payment of a debt if they die.

Credit accident and health coverage keeps up the payments on a loan if a borrower is disabled by illness or injury.

One new rule proposed by the board staff arises from its investigation of the activities of Houston promoter Aubrey Jerald Gordon, who operated as a middleman between credit insurance companies and lending institutions.

An Austin district judge enjoined Gordon last week from engaging in any form of insurance business and put his insurance enterprises — The Phoenix Companies and Eagle Financial Services — in permanent receivership.

Insurance Commissioner E.J. Voorhis has contended Gordon's computers were programmed to conceal from companies the true state of their premium collections and claims.

The proposed rule would limit the ability of insurance companies to delegate their tasks to middlemen and make them responsible for the actions of the middlemen they hire.

It also would require delivery of the home office copy of a credit insurance policy to the insurer within 30 days. Voorhis contended Gordon did not submit all policies to the companies he served.

"The design is for the companies to be very prudent about such dealings," said board attorney Doyce Lee.

An insurance company would be prohibited from depositing money in a bank in return for the bank's agreement to write its credit insurance with that company.

Airline To Offer 'Peanut Passes'

WASHINGTON (AP) -Texas International Airlines is getting ready to issue as much as $22 million worth of "peanuts holiday passes" to lure travelers to its flights.

"We want to get people who have already made their plans to come and fly on Texas International," TIA spokesman Gerry Gitner said Thursday in announcing the promotion.

The plan calls for travelers who have already purchased tickets for holiday flights from other airlines on routes flown by Texas International to book passage on TIA flights instead.

The ticket must have been issued by Thursday for a flight between Saturday and Jan. 14.

The consumer would use his ticket from the other airline to board the TIA flight. He later would receive a "peanuts holiday pass" that could be cashed in to travel on TIA flights between Jan. 15 and April 30.

The pass would be made out to the value of the ticket the traveler had purchased from the other airline.

"We want to acquaint people with our discount program and we think this is a good way to do it," Gitner said. "We think once they fly us, they'll come fly us again."

He said TIA reservations clerks will advise participating travelers to cancel their reservations with the other airline.

The Civil Aeronautics Board approved the plan Thursday after deliberating "for quite a bit," CAB spokesman Mark Kahan said.

He said the board was concerned that the announcement of the plan before a busy holiday weekend might wreak havoc on ticketing and reservations departments.

Approval was granted after concluding that the plan was manageable, Kahan said.

"The carriers are big boys," he said. "The benefits to the consumer are quite clear."

Gitner predicted that the airline would have as many as 150,000 seats available through Jan. 14. If the program is used to its maximum capacity, he said, about $22 million of passes could be distributed.

The "holiday passes" can be redeemed for reserved seats on flights from noon Monday through midnight Thursday and from noon Saturday through noon Sunday.

The airline said the passes would be mailed to travelers about three weeks after their holiday flights.

The pass can be used for more than one flight. A pass given for a Washington-Houston flight, for example, could be used for tickets on more than one shorter flight.

Gitner said the plan did not stem from a drop in TIA business. "Our reservations are the highest they've ever been."

Freight Train Idle When Crash Occurred

ORANGEFIELD (AP) — A freight train was standing still on the tracks when it was struck by an Amtrak train because of congestion caused by an earlier derailment, Southern Pacific Railway officials said.

The Texas Railroad Commission has begun an investigation into the cause of the wreck between the 13-car passenger train and the 141-car freight train.

Fifty persons on Amtrak's Sunset Limited, including 13 children and six Amtrak employees, were injured in the crash Wednesday night. They were treated for bumps and bruises and released from three hospitals in the Beaumont area.

Amtrak bused the 125 passengers on the New Orleans to Los Angeles train to Houston Thursday morning where they were placed on another westbound train.

"We struck a standing train in a rainstorm, but the real question is — why was the freight train standing there?" said Amtrak spokesman John Jacobson of Washington. "I'm not suggesting this freight train was the guilty party, but obviously there is something unusual about a freight train standing in front of a scheduled passenger train."

In Houston, Southern Pacific spokesman Tony Aleman acknowledged the freight train was standing still at the moment of impact, about 9:30 p.m.

Engineering Courses Offered At Colleges

Engineers from West Texas and Eastern New Mexico may enroll in any of four engineering courses to be offered at Amarillo College and Frank Philips College, Borger, this spring by the Division of Continuing Engineering Education at Texas Tech University.

The program leads to the master's degree in engineering and is offered primarily for practicing engineers seeking professional development, said Jo King, director of Continuing Engineering Education at Texas Tech.

The Amarillo College program will offer an industrial engineering course, "Advanced Engineering Economic Analysis," and a systems course, "Analysis of p.m.," Jan. 7, in the college's Technology Building, room 310.

The program at Frank Phillips College will offer an industrial engineering course, "Decision Theory and Management Science," and a mechanical engineering course, "Solar Energy Engineering." Registration at Frank Phillips College will be in Room 12 of the Administration Building at 6 p.m., Jan. 8.

First class meetings for all four courses will be at 6 p.m., Jan. 15.

The program was initiated in 1966 to comply with requests from professional engineers employed in area industries. Fifty-three engineers have received master of engineering degrees through the Continuing Engineering Education program.

Additional information may be obtained from Continuing Engineering Education in the College of Engineering at Texas Tech University.

Three Face Indictments In School Lunch Scheme

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Three persons prominent in a poor school district face indictments related to an alleged scheme in which government money for a lunch program was siphoned into a slush fund used to buy microwave ovens, stoves and other home appliances.

The Bexar County grand jury Thursday indicted former Edgewood School Board president Guadalupe Vela on two counts of tampering with grand jury witnesses; school board member Beatrice Zamora with one count of witness tampering; and food salesman David Banks with five counts of theft of more than $10,000.

Prosecutors in the continuing investigation of the primarily Mexican-American school district said the indictments stem from a scheme in which part of the government money allocated for the school lunch program was put into a slush fund for electrical appliances.

Officials said the investigation showed federal money was spent for microwave ovens, washers and dryers, stoves, mixers and dining sets, which ended up in private homes of some current and former school officials.

The scheme involved falsification of financial books to show federal money was spent for food when it actually was kicked back into the slush fund, prosecutors said.

About 94 percent of the students in the Edgewood district qualify for lunches at either a reduced price or free.

In 1974 the Edgewood school district received national attention in a suit to receive more money. It successfully claimed rich school districts with high taxes were better able to finance quality education than poor districts with low property tax rates.

In years since that court ruling, several school officials have been indicted on various charges alleging theft of funds and property.

35 Jailed For Smuggling Marijuana

GALVESTON (AP) — Thirty-five persons remained jailed today for allegedly smuggling 50 tons of Colombian marijuana into the United States, authorities said.

The suspects were arraigned Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Frank G. Waltermire on charges of importing marijuana and conspiracy to possess and possession with intent to distribute.

The complaint, filed in Galveston federal court, noted the suspects had been charged with smuggling 50 tons of the illegal weed into the country, but said that amount could be far less than the total quantity seized by law enforcement officials.

The Drug Enforcement Agency had estimated between 100 to 150 tons of marijuana had been confiscated on Wednesday night at a public marina near Freeport.

The suspects were rolling 100-pound bales of marijuana from an oil field supply boat to six tractor-trailer trucks on a conveyer belt when law enforcement officers arrived, said Harry Stiles of the Brazoria County Sheriff's Department.

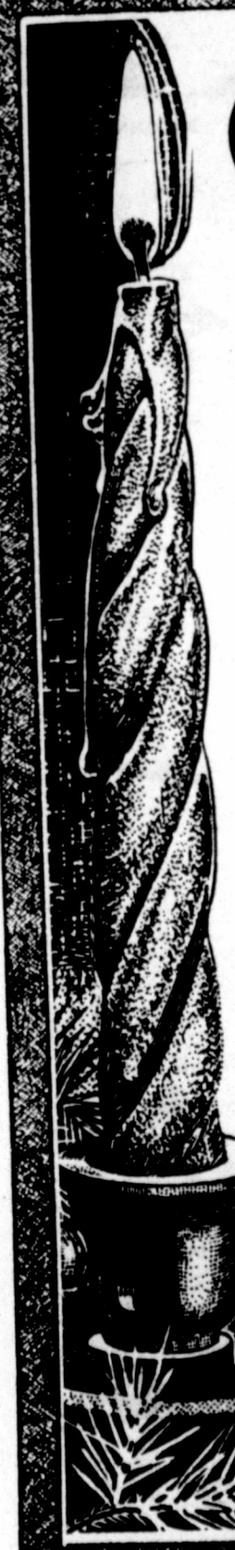

At an estimated street value of $40 per ounce, sale of the marijuana could have netted $128 million, Stiles said.

Bonds were set at $250,000 for Glenn R. Owensby, 37, of Shiner; Albert A. Berry, 50, of the Caymon Islands; Fred W. Zimmerman of Bellaire; Richard Yates, 29, of Austin; Miguel Lozano, 29, and Alfonso Barkear, 41, of Colombia; Vincent E. Damion, 40, of Florida; Edd J. Martin, 40, and Phinous Stockton, 52, both of Mississippi.

Bonds were set at $100,000 for 26 others including Texans Jack K. Buskirk, 32, of Dallas; Jud Wallbridge McCormack, 29, of Houston; John T. Folger, 29, of Austin; and Kyle T. Kalish, 29, of Spicewater.

Others arraigned included Danny Sherman, 22, of Richmond, Miss.; David E. Jenkins, 27, and Travis E. McLaughlin, 28, of Jackson, Miss.; and Jackie Jenkins, 29, Larry P. Daniels, 23, Walter D. Sartor, 25, Stanley Beckton, 34, Albert E. Crowder, 29, and Roger L. Swin, 29, all of Mississippi.

The group also included Robert A. Jones, 28, Bakersfield, Calif.; Harold Becton, 32, Major Beckton, 36.

TODAY'S SELECTED STOCK PRICES

InflationRate News Hits Stock Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slipped a notch today following word that inflation continued at a two-digit annual rate last month.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials eased 1.53 to 841.41 in the first two hours.

Losers held a 6-5 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government reported this morning that the consumer price index rose 1 percent in November, maintaining the 12-13 percent annual rate of increase that has prevailed since the start of the year.

The news came as no surprise. But some Wall Streeters have been dismayed lately by signs of persistent strength in economic activity, since most believe a slowdown is necessary to cool inflation.

There were reports today that preliminary figures show a 1 percent rise in the Gross National Product, after adjustment for inflation, in the fourth quarter. Not long ago many analysts had been expecting a decline in the broad measure of economic activity for the last three months of the year.

Chrysler was unchanged at 7⅜ in active trading. House and Senate conferees agreed Thursday on a $3.5 billion aid package for the financially ailing automaker.

Gold Prices Inch Higher In Europe

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices inched higher in Europe today while the dollar held steady in light trading.

At mid-morning, gold was selling for $478 an ounce in London, up from Thursday's close of $468.50. In Zurich, gold was trading at $476, up from the Thursday close of $474.

Gold opened in London at $475 an ounce. The morning "fixing" price was $474.90.

Gold hit record closing highs on Wednesday of $488.50 an ounce in London and $489 in Zurich. Gold peaked at $496 during the day in both markets before easing near the close.

Paris — 4.0725 French francs, up from 4.0550.

Amsterdam — 1.9095 Dutch guilders, down from 1.9120.

In London, it cost $2.1960 to buy a British pound, as compared to $2.19975 on Thursday.

The dollar was largely unchanged in Tokyo Friday, ending another calm trading day at 239.00 yen compared with the previous day's finish of 238.95 yen as operators weren't sure how to read the outcome of the just-ended general meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

The U.S. currency was generally firm in light trading. It never fell below its opening rate of 237.50 yen and peaked at 239.10 about midday. It traded in a narrow range for the rest of the day.

Dealers attributed the dollar's firmness to steady commercial demand and tight supply in the Tokyo market.

They said market participants are watching how overseas markets will react to reports out of the meeting of OPEC, where the delegates failed to agree on a new official price.

Measure Seeks Paperwork Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration proposed today new legislation to cut the paperwork required of small-business owners who sell their securities to large investors.

The measure would reduce disclosure statements that the Securities and Exchange Commission now requires, provided that the investors buy at least $100,000 worth of the securities.

The proposal is aimed at making it easier for small-and medium-size businesses to raise money by selling their own stocks or bonds.

Present disclosure requirements are costly and have had the effect of preventing small businesses from raising capital in the public securities markets, according to a White House statement.

Solons Back Klutznick

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate confirmed by a 74-0 vote Thursday night President Carter's nomination of Philip M. Klutznick of Chicago as secretary of commerce.

Klutznick, 72, a lawyer and investment banker, served as a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations in 1957, 1961 and 1962.

With the rank of ambassador, he served as a member of the U.N.'s Economic and Social Council.

He succeeds Juanita Kreps, who resigned the top position in the Department of Commerce.

He has a wide variety of government and business experience but is particularly noted for his background as a housing developer.

A Democrat, Klutznick served as commissioner of the Federal Housing Authority under Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman.

The president had sought a businessman of international stature to lead the Commerce Department, which is being given the main task of promoting sales of American products abroad.

A native of Kansas City, Mo., the new commerce secretary studied at the University of Kansas and the University of Nebraska before receiving his law degree from Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., in 1929.

Klutznick has been a heavy donor to the Democratic Party, with Federal Election Commission records showing he gave $1,000, the legal maximum, to Carter's 1976 campaign.

Wheat Council Studies Transportation Facilities

By RODERICK TURNBULL
Kansas City Board of Trade

KANSAS CITY — Transporation, or the lack of it, has become a worldwide problem in the movement of grains. The continued expansion in grain exports indicates that the difficulties will escalate in the years ahead unless steps are taken to improve transportation facilities.

The International Wheat Council in London, the Administerative Office of the International Wheat Agreement, has undertaken a study of the transporation facilities in the principal grain exporting and importing nations around the world. A report has been made covering results obtained in the study thus far.

One chapter is devoted entirely to the situation on receiving imports in the Soviet Union and it indicates that country should be able to handle the business projected for this marketing year.

A copy of the report has been received by the Kansas City Board of Trade. The report notes that world trade in grain and oilseeds increased from about 95 million metric tons 10 years ago to 200 million metric tons in 1978-79. Last year's exports put a strain on the transportation facilities of several countries. Bad winter weather in the Northern Hemisphere was one cause.

World trade is expected to increase another 25 million metric tons in the current 1979-80 year. This would be a new record, of course.

"In the final analysis," the report states, "it probably will be the weather in the Northern Hemisphere during this coming winter which will once again determine whether the highest level ever of trade in grains and oilseeds will be reached."

The Wheat Council analyzes the situation in each of the major exporting countries. Highlights of the various reports follow:

The United States — The U.S. has more than tripled its grain exports since the early 1050's and the volume will be boosted again this year. The increase in grain movement has, for the most part, been accomplished smoothly, although the transporation system has undergone strains in 1978 and 1979. With the advantage of many ports, the U.S. can shift shipments from any port where there is trouble to another someplace else.

The U.S. runs into troubles on some of its rivers from ice when the winter weather is severe. A lock and dam on the Mississippi at Alton, Ill. is a drouble spot that often slows barge traffic. Most grains still moves through Gulf ports. Storage space in the U.S. has been adequate and is increasing. The actual capacity of the U.S. transporation and port system is unknown but authorities are convinced port elevators could handle more than recent record levels.

Any limits on U.S. exports likely would come in problems in moving grain from farms to the ports. A reason often cited to explain America's ability to cope with the larger volumes of grain exports is that the handling and marketing is in the hands of the private trade.

Canada — This nation, the world's second largest wheat exporter, has to overcome considerably logistical problems in moving grain into export positions. Grain must be moved great distances and during the winter, shipments must cease on the Great Lakes because of ice. Ports on the Pacific remain open in the winter, but rail lines have to traverse the Rocky Mountains and are liable to blockages by snow or rock falls.

Freight lines on these lines are governed by arrangements going back to the end of the last century. These low rates are regarded by the railways as a disincentive to improve their facilities and, in particular, to increase the supply of boxcars for grain transporation. Canada's grain export volume has been held down by its transportation problems. Storage space is considered adequate. Canada's grain exports hit a record in 1977-78 at 22 million metric tons, but dropped back to 18 million in 1978-79.

The Canadian Wheat Board has ordered 2,000 steel hopper cars for delivery this marketing year and the two main railway systems have embarked upon a program to refurbish 3,000 boxcars, but the Council report says it would take 10,000 more to handle the grain movement over the next five years. The official Canadian grain export target for 1985 is 30 million metric tons.

Australia — Grain exports by Australia have doubled over the last two decades. Wheat usually accounts for 80 percent of total grain shipments. Permanent storage facilities are regarded as adequate to cope with all but the biggest crops. A program of expanding the facilities is in progress. Movement of wheat from farm to market is handled by the Australian Wheat Board. Most grain is moved by rail. Inland transportation problems have been a limiting factor on Australian exports.

Australian ports in April 1976, handled 1.7 million metric tons of grains, but it is rare when the average wheat shipments exceed 1 million metric tons in one month. The Wheat Council report indicates the ports should be able to handle Australia's largest crops (and exports), but they have been beset by labor problems. Also, ships have been having difficulty in getting fuel in Australia. The immediate outlook is that exports in this marketing year will be limited to 10.5 million metric tons.

Argentina — This nation is growing as an exporter. It is selling wheat, corn, grain sorghum and soybeans overseas. Argentina has a relatively small storage capacity, particularly on farms. An effort is underway to improve this situation. Improvements also are being made at ports. In fact, the Wheat Council report suggests current port facilities probably could soybeans never have reached 20 million. The Argentina government is pressing for greater grain production. In the last few years, the main factor limiting exports has been the lack of grain availability. Down-the-road, Argentina plans to expand its export facilities, assuming producting also is boosted.

"It is evident," the Wheat Council report states, "that the (export) problems associated with logistics are being vigorously tackled by the exporting countries. They are taking urgent action to improve their existing handling and transportation systems, which will have to be working at full capacity if the volume of trade projected for 1979-80 is to materialize."

Groups Preparing For Upcoming Livestock Show

Four-H and Future Farmers of America members from Lubbock County are preparing for the Junior Livestock Show Jan. 13-15, according to Lubbock County extension agent Randy Upshaw.

"Youths have been feeding and caring for their animals for the past year," Upshaw said. "They will competing for awards as well as qualifications for the premium auction sale."

Animals will arrive at the Panhandle South Plains Fair grounds Jan. 13. AAArds will be presented in steer, lamb and swine divisions.

Syd Conner, Garza County extension agent, will begin judging the swine at 8:30 a.m. Jan. 14. Steer competition will follow the swine show and lambs will be judged at 8:30 a.m. Jan. 15. Joe Wise, Dawson County extension agent will judge the lambs and swine producer Joe Tarter will place the swine.

The premium acution sale will begin at 6 p.m. Jan. 15 with businessmen from the county bidding for the youths' animals. Proceeds from the sale go to the individuals and are often used to finance projects for the next year or to continue an education after high school.

FIRST WIN — Congratulations were extended recently to Lubbock Christian College's first-ever crops judging team and their coach for a third place win at a Texas A&M contest. The time period of the allleged conspiracy extended from as early as March 1967 until at least December 1974. As a result of the alleged unlawful conspiracy plaintiff and other members of the class were compelled to pay substantially higher prices for retail alcoholic beverages purchased at these retail stores than they would have paid in the absence of such a conspiracy to the injury of the plaintiff and the members of the class. Recovery of money damages is sought for three times the amount of the alleged overcharge on the purchases made from the defendants by plaintiff and the members of the class. Recovery is also sought for attorneys' fees and costs of this suit. Officials May Be Unaware Of Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some northeastern and midwestern states consistently fail to take advantage of all the money they are entitled to under federal rural development programs, according to a group of House members.

State officials might not be fully aware of the programs, the congressmen said.

The two regions have 41 percent of the nation's rural population but only 28 percent of the rural households with incomes below the official poverty lines, the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition said.

Population and poverty are two principal factors in the legal formulas used to distribute funds under the Farmers Home Administration rural-development programs.

A 43-page study released this week by the group said that the 18 states in the regions received 34 percent of the 1977 community water and waste treatment money and 32.8 percent of the business and industrial development funds between 1974 and 1978.

New England has consistently exceeded its share of business and industrial loans and grants because of a few states' ability to get large amounts, the study said. Mid-Atlantic states have consistently gotten smaller industrial grants than they could have, it added.

Rep. James L. Oberstar, D-Minn., co-chairman of the group, said, "Local officials might not be aware of the existence of some ... programs or the availability of funds."

But, he added, FmHA offices in some states, such as Pennsylvania, might be understaffed and that could be a reason for their not obtaining all the money they could.

The study was prepared by the Northeast-Midwest Institute, an arm of the 213-member coalition, under a contract from the New England Regional Commission, a federal-state planning group.

It found that Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Ohio "have not taken advantage of the funds available to them" under the business and industrial loan program and that Delaware has never used money available to it under an industrial development grant program.

"Vermont, Maryland and Wisconsin have not taken full advantage of the money available to them under the water and waste disposal loan program," it added, "nor have Rhode Island and Illinois taken full advantage of their community facilities loan funds."

Southern states received slightly more than 45 percent of the funds in both categories. They have not quite 38 percent of the rural population but almost 51 percent of the rural poor.

Committee Studying State's Diesel Shortage

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Members of the House Agriculture Committee say it is strange there is plenty of diesel fuel from Texas for farmers in Iowa but Texas farmers may lose crops next year because of a diesel shortage.

"Although Texas farmers are troubled, many farmers in other state have an abundance of diesel," Rep. Pete Patterson, D-Brookston, told a news conference recently. "In Iowa, for example, jobbers are phoning their customers to inquire if their tanks can hold an 8,000-gallon transport load of diesel at 65 to 72 cents a gallon. This fuel reaches Iowa via pipeline originating in Houston."

Patterson said farmers paid 14 cents a gallon for diesel in 1975 and while diesel prices have jumped 500 percent since then, farm commodity prices have stayed about the same.

He said that since the U.S. Department of Energy lifted all diesel allocation priorities for agriculture in July oil companies are allowed to sell diesel for whatever price the market will bear.

Some firms are voluntarily continuing some allocations to long-time customers but they are not adding any new customers.

"As a result," Patterson said, "the companies are selling more diesel on the spot market. The price of allocated diesel is from 60 to 70 cents a gallon, while the spot market price is from 90 cents to $1.14 a gallon.

Rep. Forrest Green, D-Corsicana, chairman of the committee, said his committee is "perturbed to say the least. There is plenty of supply in the open market, which is really a black market to the farmers ... We think this is highly suspect, maybe an effort to drive up the price. The committee will be delving into this."

Patterson said the diesel "is going somewhere else, we don't know where" instead to farming operations.

Fertilizing Early May Save Farmers Money

COLLEGE STATION — Texas farmers might be able to save some money as well as get a jump on the 1980 crop year by fertilizing cropland early.

"The possibility of shorter fertilizer supplies and much higher costs next spring should provide some incentive for farmers to put out fertilizer early for next spring's crops," said Dr. Charles Welch, soil chemist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Increased crop acreages, export demands and reduced fertilizer production have caused a decline in fertilizer inventories, Welch pointed out. This, coupled with an increasing transportation problem, makes it uncertain and difficult for many local fertilizer dealers to obtain fertilizer to maintain a desired inventory level.

Fertilizer prices are going up due to increased production costs, inflation and market pressures, he added. By planting time next spring, some fertilizer materials such as anhydrous ammonia and ammonium phosphate may cost twice as much as last spring.

"With expected higher fertilizer prices, it is especially important to obtain soil tests and all available agronomic information for using fertilizers efficiently for next year's crop," Welch said. "Now is a good time to start planning for an effcient fertilization program."

Soviets Boost U.S. Grain Order With New Purchase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly one million metric tons of additional U.S. grain has been bought by the Soviet Union, boosting total orders for 1979-80 above the huge amount exported last year, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The latest orders included 790,000 metric tons of wheat and 150,000 of corn, all for delivery through next Sept. 30.

Officials said the latest sales boosted to almost 15.8 million metric tons the amount of grain sold to the Soviets for the 1979-80 period, including about 10.6 million of corn and 5.2 million of wheat.

Shipments of corn and wheat in the year that ended last Sept. 30 totaled about 15.7 million metric tons.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

The United States told the Soviet Union earlier this year that it could buy up to 25 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat in 1979-80, the fourth year of an agreement committing Russia to buy minimum quantities annually.

Under the agreement, the Soviets must buy at least six million metric tons of the two grains annually, up to a maximum of eight million. If more than eight million is wanted, the Soviet Union must get U.S. approval.

Since U.S. grain stockpiles are so huge, the Soviet Union has had no problem getting permission to buy above the limit specified in the agreement.

Tech Student Scores Horse Show First

Texas Tech University's Charles Hemphill of Coleman won first place among 85 participants at the recent Northeast Regional Collegiate Horse Judging contest.

The event, held this year at Harrisburg, Pa., is one of the largest all-breeds contest in the country. Seventeen universities fielded five contestants each.

In team events Texas Tech won first place in the performance section and second place overall. The University of Connecticut-Storrs won first place in overall team events with 2,318 points, while Texas Tech secured 2,312 points.

Hemphill was second in performance and held the same place in the confirmation or halter section. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Hemphill.

Other Texas Tech participants were: T. Maureen Roberts of Indianapolis, Inc., Suzanne Lukowski and Craig Wood, both of El Paso, and Karla Jackson of Anahuac.

The Texas Tech team was coached by Dr. James C. Heird and David Whittaker of the Department of Animal Science.

Cotton Abundance Lowering Prices

COLLEGE STATION — Cotton, cotton everywhere — is pushing prices down. So farmers must sharpen their marketing skills to get the most for their crops.

"This year's bumper cotton crop in the U.S. will likely mean lower prices in the months adead," says Dr. Carl Anderson, cotton marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "All indications point to a sizeable increase in carryover stocks by next August, the end of the marketing year."

According to the specialist, cotton prices held up fairly well during the summer and fall due to limited supplies from the 1978 crop, strong export demand and this year's late crop. However, larger supplies of 1979 crop cotton are entering the marketing channel as the harvest season progresses, causing downward pressure on prices.

Faced with this situation, what can producers do?

"They can follow several strategies," said Anderson. "One option is to sell now and avoid storage and interest costs of holding cotton. Another is to establish a price and arrange delivery at some future date. A third strategy is to hold cotton and sell later. A final alternative is to put the cotton under CCC (Commodity Credit Corp.) loan programs and hope prices go up."

Producers must base their choices on a number of factors, such as anticipated price movements, financial positions and willingness to face the risk of lower prices.

"In making their marketing decisions, producers should consider the main forces that will affect market prices," he said. "A big factor is that producers in Texas as well as most other states traditionally sell most of their cotton in December and January. This can cause a market glut in a matter of weeks."

Anderson looks for the export demand for cotton to remain strong although sales could peak early. He looks for domestic demand to soften in the first half of 1980 as the nation's growing recession cuts into the demand for textile products.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Rumors of Chinese buying and technical market factors boosted wheat futures Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Exporter and apparent commercial buying in corn spurred price increases in that trading pit as well, an analyst said.

Speculation about Soviet Union was seeking soybean oil on world markets and the talk of the Chinese interest in wheat were widespread on the trading floor although the Chinese rumor had been circulating earlier this week. Neither rumor was confirmed.

The Agriculture Department this week reported dry conditions and a lack of sufficient protective snow cover in the winter wheat belt, another background supporting factor.

At the close, soybeans were unchanged to 2 cents higher, January, $6.67¾; wheat was 4½ to 7¼ cents higher, March $4.51¾; corn was 1 cent to 3¾ cents higher, March $2.86¼; and oats were 1 cent higher across the board, March $1.58¾.

Cattle Futures Close Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 37 to 67 points lower led by August with prices at the day's lows. Sales totaled 24,296 lots Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The market slipped after gaining 70 early on short covering and other buying.

Late liquidation seemed to be primarily evening up ahead of Friday's pig crop report and the extended holiday weekend. The commission house with a cash cattle connection was an active seller in the late trade.

Deliveries total 1,215 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 106½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were firm to off 50 cents with the best top $69.50 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Slaughter was 120,000 head. About 3,300 head are expected at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 135 lower to 17 higher on 1,668 lots. August was down the most at the day's low with only April higher. The market ran into aggressive selling after rising 72 early.

Initial support stemmed from light feeder arrivals and firm tone to cash trade. Late selling followed reaction in live cattle futures and seemed to be evening up ahead of the pig crop report and coming holiday weekend.

Cash feeders were steady to up $4 with the best top $105 at Oklahoma City. The major markets are expecting about 1,500 head today.

Hog futures closed 42 higher to 10 lower on 6,998 contracts. August was up the most after rising 80 with only June lower. Earlier, April slipped 15.

Prices eased from highs when cattle futures weakened but bounced back at the finish. Further sharp cuts in hams also touched off selling as did evening up ahead of the pig crop report. Support came on mostly higher cash hogs despite heavier runs and gradually decreasing slaughter ahead of the holidays.

There have been 40 deliveries thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to off 4 at 60 to 66 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to weak with the best top $40.50. Kill was 317,000 head. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to total 26,500 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 57 to 135 lower led by February at the day's lows. Sales totaled 9,574 lots.

Cowboy Makes Toys For Handicapped Children

The body survived; but his heart did not. It was permanently touched by the handicapped youngsters who had sought his autograph in dozens of hospitals.

Powers never forgot those kids, nor did he forget the half-dozen times his bronco-riding landed him in a wheelchair.

Now he makes toys for handicapped children and wheelchair attachments for crippled adults.

A self-taught welder with a third-grade education, Powers tinkers in his warehouse, shaping steel into colorful playthings. He designs them to build muscle control and coordination as well as capture children's imaginations.

"If you could see what happens, right in my shop, when a kid sits on one of my toy cranes," says Powers, 51, "it could bring tears to your eyes."

The Madrid Clam Shovel, his first toy, was created 15 years ago for a retarded child. It has a tiny cushioned seat in front of handles that operate a miniatue crane.

"Every kid likes to play in the dirt, but some of them can't," Powers says. "With this toy, a child can dig the dirt up, turn over here to his little red wagon and drop it in. It takes a lot of coordination."

Powers has built more than 400 toys since, most of them custom-made for children with particular disorders.

"You see these kids and the sort of things they're deprived of," he says. "I don't like to build two of anything because there are so many things needed for crippled children."

Among his contraptions is a sand shovel that takes two children to operate. It was inspired when he learned retarded youngsters often have a difficult time playing with others.

"I stay away from electricity or any kind of motor," Powes says. "They need coordination to build up muscles. And if you put in batteries and stuff, they price themselves plum out of the market."

Powers' toys range from $60 to $350, and many now are in children's hospitals across the country.

"His hands were all drawn up to his chest and he could barely grab the handles," Powers remembers. "But he learned to operate the thing in 10 minutes. He got more of a kick out of that."

Powers runs his company from behind a nicked desk that supports a telephone and wind-up alarm clock.

The shop punch press is named "Big Betsy." "Sparky" and "Junior" are painted on two other pieces of heavy equipment.

"My workers seem to understand that better," Powers says. All five of his employees are physically or mentally handicapped.

Powers was a regular on the rodeo circuit when he was 15. Those adventures included numerous publicity stops at hospitals — and a few other hospital stops to repair broken legs and a fractured hip.

He retired at 34, became a welder and built a business in New Mexico to manufacture rodeo equipment. In his spare time, he built toys.

As the rodeo equipment company grew, Powers enjoyed it less. So he moved to Dallas and became an engineer for a hospital.

But doctors found cancer in the cowboy's body. They gave him two months to live — that was five years ago.

The scars of surgery swipe across his face and chest today. But, he says, "I got 'er whipped."

He moved to his boyhood home of Wichita, leased the warehouse and bought a farm. Business is so good these days that Powers says he could "sell 10 times what I'm selling now." He recently decided to sell part of the business to a larger company, leaving him free to create.

Writer Offers Toast To Christmas Help

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Before the last drop of cheer drains from the wassail bowl, won't someone please raise a toast to those unsung supernumeraries of the holiay season — the Christmas help.

Through thick and thin, wrap and tie, cash and credit card, children lost and bargains found, address unknown and C.O.D., they've managed somehow to move Santa's cargo out of the warehouse and under the tree.

Mulligan's Stew

But when the rush is over, when the commissions and the bonuses have been handed out, when the Old Man makes his inevitable Christmas Eve closing speech, they're left standing alone and unwanted, broken ornaments fallen from the tree.

Come, is there none to sing them a carol, send them a card, wish them the best of the season they saved once again from failure? Could there be a Christmas without them — or us, really, since I number myself among that forgotten legion of seasonal mercenaries. (Bloomingdale's, Basement Luggage, Class of 1949. Also, '50 and '51, when I moved into ladies' lingerie.)

Without us, who would wrap those gifts, weigh those parcels, tote that mail, drive those trucks and louse up that cash register? Who would peddle those ludicrous Christmas ties, suffer the real slings and arrows of the toy department, put up with the lady in the fourth floor walkup who ordered six garbage cans and thought she'd choose the green one?

Who else could be enlisted, on such short notice, to trim the courthouse tree, deck with holly the downtown lamp posts, tinkle the charity bell, swell the anthem for the Salvation Army with an extra trombone, laugh like a loon for 10 hours a day in a red flannel suit and itchy nylon beard so some candy-sticky, runny-nosed urchin can carry his belief in Santa into another year?

None but the Christmas help.

So, what say you? Won't some selfless shopper find it in his or her heart at this happy season, this rolling time of the year, to lift a flagon and wish the best and many more to all those unnamed heroes who signed up for a short hitch in Santa's army and are about to be de-mobbed?

If there is none, then please allow me, in behalf of all the old alumni at Bloomingdale's and those who toil now into the night in those crowded aisles of holiday joy and strife.

For this slender verse, a little harpsichord music from the piano department might be in order:

Before the last drop
Drains from the cup, Please permit me
Boldly to stand up,
And taking my glass,
Hold it aloft In honor of those,
Who'll soon be laid off. From each permanent staffer,
All walkers of floors, From all buyers and bosses,
With names on their doors, From each surly shopper,
Each mischievous whelp, The crowd on the exchange line,
Swapping china for delft, Even shoplifters,
Denuding the shelf, All bid Merry Christmas
To our Christmas help! Come back next year,

Agency Predicts Drop In Steel Shipments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shipments of steel products from U.S. mills could decline 5 percent next year, mainly because of drops in automobile production and construction, the Commerce Department has revealed.

By 1984, the agency predicted, domestic shipments will be 8 percent higher than the estimated 100 million tons this year "but below the peak of 111.4 million tons in 1973."

The analysis of the $50 billion U.S. steel industry will be contained in the department's annual publication, U.S. Industrial Outlook, scheduled for release in January.

An excerpt from the book seems to confirm some of the worries expressed by the steel industry in recent months.

Late last month, U.S. Steel Corp. announced that it planned to close operations at 16 locations and lay off 13,000 workers.

The steel company blamed allegedly excessive anti-pollution requirements, low-priced imports and inadequate domestic prices for its problems.

Among the Commerce projections for 1980:

— Raw steel production could decline 3 percent to an estimated 130 million tons.

— Employment could fall 4 percent to 434,000.

— Imports are likely to drop 6 percent to 15 million tons. Imports represented 18.1 percent of the steel consumer in the United States in 1978; they should account for about 14 percent in 1979 and 1980.

Much of the expected decline in the steel industry next year is blamed on a slowing of the nation's economy.

Sanders Helps Raiders Outlast Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (Special) — Texas Tech rallied from a 10-point second-half deficit and survived a flurry of Vanderbilt free throws to take a thrilling 89-86 overtime victory here Thursday night.

The Raiders are now 6-1 on the year, but of all their wins, this one has to rank as the toughest. The Raiders saw starters Ralph Brewster and Jeff Taylor foul out in the second half and then watched Kent Williams depart the same way in overtime.

But the Raiders got strong bench performances from Thad Sanders — who hit the shot that sent the game into extra points — and Leslie Nichols. Dwight Williams also came off the bench to come up with a steal that set up Sanders' shot that tied the game at 78-78.

"This was a great win for us," said Tech coach Gerald Myers, "because we played poorly in spots and very good in spots and still won. We were down by 10 with six minutes to go and we kept our poise.

"We had six players score in double figures — that's got to be encouraging," said Myers. "The guy who grew up tonight, though, was Leslie Nichols. Les played about 15 minutes and he played good. He looked relaxed and he played good defense."

Myers also had praise for Sanders, the Raiders' sixth man who finished the game with 12 points. Four of those points came in overtime. Ben Hill had his biggest scoring outing of the year as he led the Raiders with 21 points. David Little had 15, Taylor 13 and Brewster added 10.

It was another good shooting night for the Raiders, who connected on 66 percent of their efforts while the home team could find the range on only 42 percent of their efforts. Tech dominated the boards, hauling down 41 (Brewster had 10 of those) to Vanderbilt's 28.

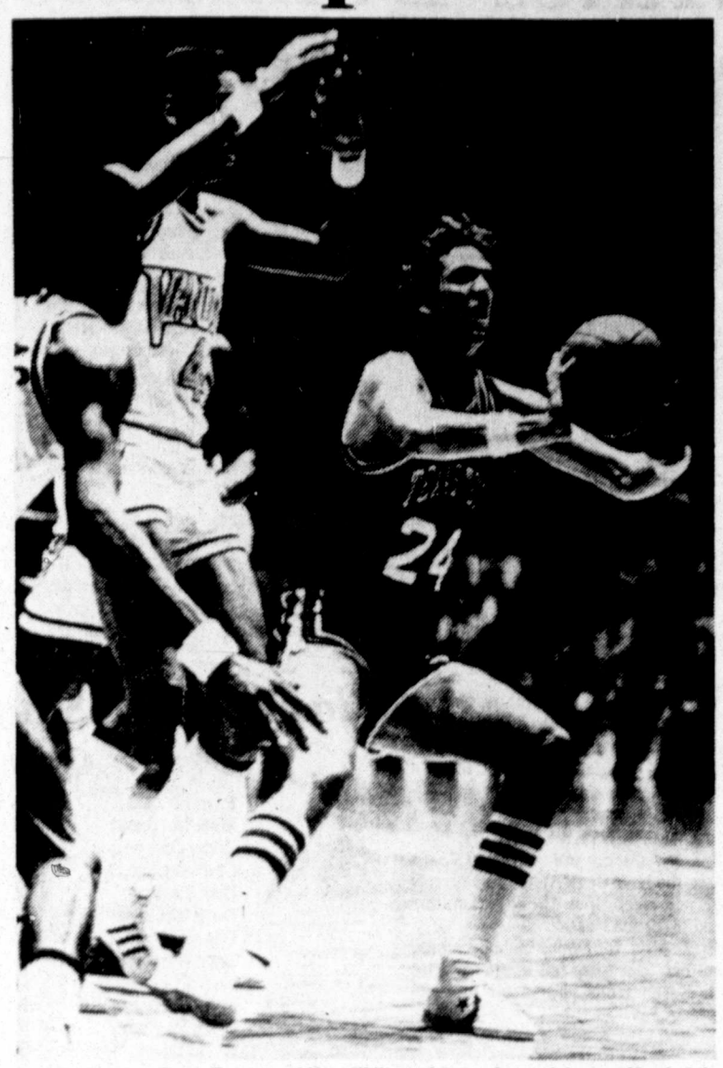

With the Commodores owning a 64-57 advantage, the Raiders were forced to watch Vanderbilt reel off 14 straight free throws in the final minutes. But the Raiders kept chipping away at the Vandy lead. Hill scored two buckets to make it 72-69 and then Little came up with a three-point play to cut it to 74-72.

Little got two more free throws to keep the Raiders in range, and Kent Williams connected on a pair of clutch free throws to make it 78-76. That set up Dwight Williams' dramatic steal and then Sanders connected from 15 feet with 27 seconds remaining to tie it at 78.

The Raiders took a 7-point lead in the overtime period, but again Vanderbilt came back. The Commodores narrowed it to 3 but couldn't find the range on several laset minute attempts.

Longhorns Favored In Sun

EL PASO (AP) — Washington coach Don James says his team will have "to get some breaks" if the Huskies are to beat a Texas team that should be favored in Saturday's Sun Bowl clash.

Both squads scheduled light workouts today, looking for a way to gain the competitive edge in a game Texas coach Fred Akers considers a "toss up."

"I don't know how this game could be anything but a toss-up," said Akers.

"I don't think anyone should be favored in this game," echoed Washington defensive tackle Doug Martin.

Oddsmakers disagreed and rated the Longhorns a touchdown pick over the Huskies. And James said Texas would have to be favored by "that or more."

"I think we're going to have to get some breaks, get a little fortunate and play as well as we can," said James.

"Our defense is going to have to play great football. We're going to have to have a good kicking game and a very minimal amount of turnovers."

Both teams are expected to compete in the nationally televised Sun Bowl without their leading running backs.

Longhorn A.J. "Jam" Jones and Husky Joe Steele will sit out the game along with Texas' best receiver Johnny "Lam" Jones, who is recovering from a knee infection.

"We just want him (Walls) to go out and get the job done," said Little.

Little did not play in Texas' last two games because of a foot injury but says he thinks he is ready to play.

"I've missed a lot of contact and after I get the hit again and get the feel of the game, everything will fall back into place," said Little.

Washington offensive tackle Phil Foreman says, "I haven't seen teams pass on Texas as much as we might try in the game."

Sunny skies and temperatures in the 60s are forecast for the Sun Bowl game. The 33,122 stadium seats are sold out and should be filled by the 11:30 a.m. CST kickoff.

Amarillo Girls Trip Coronado

Marcey Dale pumped in 18 points to lead the Amarillo Sandies to a 42-33 girls' basketball win over Coronado in the CHS gym Thursday night.

The loss dropped Coronado's won-loss record to 7-9. The Mustangs will attempt to up that mark when they return to action in the Slaton tournament later this month.

Four girls, Terri Stroud, Tammy Payton, Pattie McFarren and Laura Richards, all scored 6 points each to pace CHS' scoring attack. No one scored in double figures for the Ponies.

Replacement Selected Top NFL Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Haslett, who stepped in as a starting linebacker with the Buffalo Bills when Tom Cousineau trotted off to Canada, was named today the National Football League Defensive Rookie of the Year by The Associated Press.

Haslett, an inside linebacker in the Bills' 3-4 defense, was named on 25 of the 84 ballots cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, three from each NFL city.

"I'm really happy. This is a great Christmas present," said Haslett. "I owe a real debt of gratitude to my linebacker coach, Tom Catlin, and all of my defensive teammates."

Linebacker Jerry Robinson of the Philadelphia Eagles received 17 votes and defensive tackle Dan Hampton of the Chicago Bears received 16 as Haslett's closest challengers.

"We're delighted to learn of Jim's selection," said coach Chuck Knox of the Bills, who drafted Haslett out of Indiana (Pa.) University in the second round. "Jim made the transition from small college to professional football with amazing speed. His emergence as the NFL's top defensive rookie is a credit to the energy and hard work he was willing to devote from the opening day of training camp to the final game of the season."

Haslett, a 6-foot-3, 230-pound native and resident of Pittsburgh, stepped into an unusually difficult situation. The Bills' — and NFL's — No. 1 choice was Cousineau, an all-America linebacker out of Ohio State, and he got all the publicity, especially after he scorned Buffalo's contract and accepted one from the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

"If Jim had been at Ohio State for four years, it would have been very interesting to see who the first player picked was," said Norm Pollom, the Bills' director of college scouting.

Even after Cousineau left, it was his name — not Haslett's — that was on the fans' minds in Buffalo. Haslett clearly resented being thought of as merely a fill-in for the departed Cousineau and refused to discuss it.

It is, of course, pure speculation as to how Cousineau might have done — but Haslett did just fine. He was second on the Bills in tackles with 124, 75 of them solo. He had two pass interceptions, both of them in New England, with the second one in overtime paving the way to the Bills' 16-13 victory. Haslett also recovered two fumbles and forced two others.

Plainsmen Blitz Estacado 50-40

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

About the best thing you can say about Thursday night's Monterey-Estacado basketball game is that it's on the books.

The Plainsmen outscored Estacado 14-2 down the stretch to take a 50-40 win. All but four of those points came on free throws.

In fact, of Monterey's last 27 points — a string extending back into the third quarter — all but 10 came from the charity line.

As if watching foul-shooting practice wasn't bad enough, the first half of the game ended with Estacado atop a majestic 11-10 lead. The Matadors shot 21 percent in the first half, Monterey 24.

The game began to show signs of life in the third period, but only compared to the first 16 minutes. Still, neither team shot worth an old boot but the rapidity with which the lead changed hands made it exciting anyway.

In the third quarter alone, the lead changed hands six times and was tied once.

The teams swapped buckets at the start, but John Jones scored a free throw and then a basket for Estacado at 4:01 to put the Mats up 18-14. That didn't last long. Trav Clardy hit a pair of free throws for Monterey and Gregg Thomason added a field goal at 3:10 to knot the score again.

Preston Davis got a free throw for Estacado, but Clardy scored back-to-back buckets, the last at 2:16, to put Monterey up 22-19.

Kenneth Cade made a field goal to pull the Mats within 1, and Clardy and Jones swapped pairs of points to send the game into the final period that way.

Kenneth Cade made a field goal to pull the Mats within 1, but Clardy connected on a 3-point play to open the lead back up. Jones made a long field goal at the buzzer to send the Mats into the fourth period down by 2.

And that's pretty much how the rest of the game went, up until Monterey's final run. The lead changed hands seven times and was tied another five during the first six minutes. After that, it was free-throw practice for the Plainsmen as the gym emptied.

Clardy led all scorers with 19 points and Ian Hyslop got 16 more for Monterey. Davis and James Barnett tied for Estacado's high point man with 11 each.

Mules Dominate AA All-South Plains Squad

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal sports Staff

Muleshoe, which started the 1979 football season with apparently little more than a quarterback, an energetic coach, some good athletes and a lot of mania, has the edge on this year's Class AA All-South Plains team.

The Mules, who wound up winning District 3-AA and advancing to the regional round of the state playoffs, placed five players on the squad, as well as furnishing the Player and Coach of the Year.

Mike Northcutt, the Mule quarterback who one coach went so far as to describe as "the best player we've faced in the last five years," won Player of the Year honors.

At the same time, Mike Wartes took the Coach of the Year award. All Wartes has done in his two years at the Muleshoe helm is win 19 games and back-to-back district championships.

The key to those two winning seasons, no doubt, is Northcutt. The 6-0, 175-pound quarterback averaged an unbelievable 7 yards every time he called his own number.

He completed 39 of 73 passes with only three interceptions for 714 yards. Then he also carried the ball 125 times for an additional 657 yards. He scored 17 touchdowns, nine through the air and eight on the ground.

He is joined in the backfield by teammate Zeke Pecina, Seminole's Ricky Greene and Tahoka's Clifford Oages.

Pecina was a gutty, tough little runner. He gained 615 yards on 134 carries, despite standing only 5-7 and weighing 150 pounds. More importantly, he was a devastating blocker and contributed to many of Northcutt's runs.

Greene and Oages, on the other hand, are two fleet college prospects. Greene stands 6-0 and weigh 180 pounds. He gained 1,332 yards on 165 carries, an average of almost eight yards a carry.

No single team dominated the 1979 all-South Plains team. Slaton and Muleshoe have five players each while Littlefield and Seminole have three, and Idalou two.

Only four players repeated from last year's team, Northcutt being the most obvious. Other two-year players are Idalou's Dennis Green (at guard last year but tight end this year), and linebackers Sam Whalin (Muleshoe) and Dale Demel (Littlefield).

Only three players made the team both ways. Whalin, in addition to his linebacking honor, is also the first-team kicker. Also, Slaton's David Lacey and Craig Mayberry were picked to both the offensive and defensive lines.

HALE CENTER WINS PAIR

RALLS TAKES TWO

Barry Quintan hit 22 points as Petersburg downed Ralls 68-53 in a District 4-A contest. Jeff Jones paced the Jackrabbits with 16 points.

BYU Risks Undefeated Record

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Unbeaten Brigham Young University, out to defend some dignity after being torpedoed by Navy last year, turns quarterback Marc Wilson loose on Indiana's kiddie korps defense tonight in the second Holiday Bowl.

A year ago, the Cougars entered the game as favorites but their 23-16 loss damaged the claim that the Western Athletic Conference can hold its own with any league.

While Indiana coach Lee Corso contends that BYU's 1979 club could challenge Big Ten kingpins Ohio State and Michigan, the ninth-ranked Cougars need a resounding victory to quiet WAC detractors.

FORSAN, PLAINS SPLIT

Christie Adams scored 16 points to Pace the Forsan girls' to a 65-46 win over Plains. Sonja Nance had 29 for the losers — now 0-2 in loop play. Forsan is 2-0.

B. Palmer scored 10 points to lead the Plains boys' to a 44-35 victory and a 1-1 district record. Dale Ernest had 12 points for Forsan, now 0-2.

Led by Wilson, a first-team All-America choice, the Cougars can become only the third team in the WAC's 17-year history to go unbeaten. Arizona State, now in the Pacific-10 Conference, achieved it twice. BYU is an eight-point favorite.

"The key to the game is defense," said Corso, who guided the Hoosiers to a surprising 7-4 finish this year. "BYU's players move very well, they have good coaching, they are very sophisticated.

In an era of high-powered running games, BYU prefers to pass.

"I think the big difference is the emphasis we put on passing first and running second," said Edwards. "Not many other teams do that because, first, before you ever try it, you have to make sure you have a sound defense."

DC TRIPS FRENSHIP

Denver City evened its District 5-AA mark at 1-1 with a narrow 63-61 win over Frenship. David Milligan was the Mustangs' leading scorer with 18 points. Jim Travis paced FHS with 18 points. The Tigers are also 1-1.

SLATON SWEEPS

Slaton beat Cooper in both the girls and boys games to open the District 5-AA basketball season with a bang.

Cynthia Robinson got 19 and Esolita Whaley 18 to lead the Tiger girls past Cooper 56-32. Jackie Briggs got 16 for the losers.

LSU Captures 'Chess Match' From Porkers

By The Associated Press

It was the former Thursday night, in what coach Dale Brown called a "chess match," as the seventh-ranked Tigers edged No. 20 Arkansas 56-55 in a game at Little Rock.

"We had to beat a ranked team on the road, using ther style,' said Brown. "That's quite an accomplishment."

The Tigers were forced to switch from their usual high-powered style when DeWayne Scales and Durand Macklin both ran into first-half foul trouble.

"When Macklin and Scales got into trouble, we had to kill the clock," said Brown. "The clock was our opponent more in the first half than Arkansas. We thought we'd kill the clock and get Macklin and Scales back in for the second half."

The game wasn't decided until the last two minutes, when Eathan Martin delivered a free throw at the 1:29 mark. Scales wound up with only six points and Macklin didn't do much better, with 11.

"Arkansas is a class team," said Brown. "They've got good talent, a great coach (Eddie Sutton) and a great crowd. I was surprised. I didn't think they were that good."

The LSU-Arkansas game was the only one Thursday night involving ranked teams.

Elsewhere, Florida Southern ran off 18 straight points in the second half behind John Ebeling and hammered Florida 98-75 for its first-ever victory over the Gators. It was the first meeting between the schools since 1959.

Ron Charles collected 19 points and 15 rebounds as Michigan State trimmed Detroit 63-57; Keith McCord's 21 points powered Alabama-Birmingham past Oklahoma City 89-73; Rich Semeta hit a desperation 30-footer at the finl buzzer o give the University of Charleston a 68-67 triple-overtime victory over Eastern Kentucky, and Murray Brown scored 28 points as Florida State whipped Minnesota 112-91.

Also, Jerry Beck tossed in 19 points to power Middle Tennessee over Rio Grande 77-45; Calvin Garrett poured in a game-high 24 points to lead Oral Roberts past Tulsa 99-84, and Bruce Atkins and B.B. Flenory had 18 points apiece to lead Duquesne over Stetson 76-67.

Deacons Reach For Tangerines

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The coaches in Saturday's Tangerine Bowl football game between LSU and Wake Forest expect a wide-open scoring carnival featuring 80 to 90 passes by three top quarterbacks.

"You know, we threw a ton of passes (56) against Tulane," says coach Charley McClendon of LSU, "so I wouldn't be surprised there will be that many thrown."

McClendon has two quarterbacks — Steve Ensminger and Dave Woodley — who have combined for 2,042 yards.

On the over side, coach John Mackovic has slinging Jay Venuto, who set several passing marks in the Atlantic Coast Conference in leading Wake Forest to an 8-3 record. Venuto finished the season with 2,432 yards and 16 touchdowns via the aerial route and was named ACC player of the year.

"Wake's going to move the ball," says the veteran McClendon. "We just can't let them control the ball. We have to control it."

Tulane Tackles Penn State

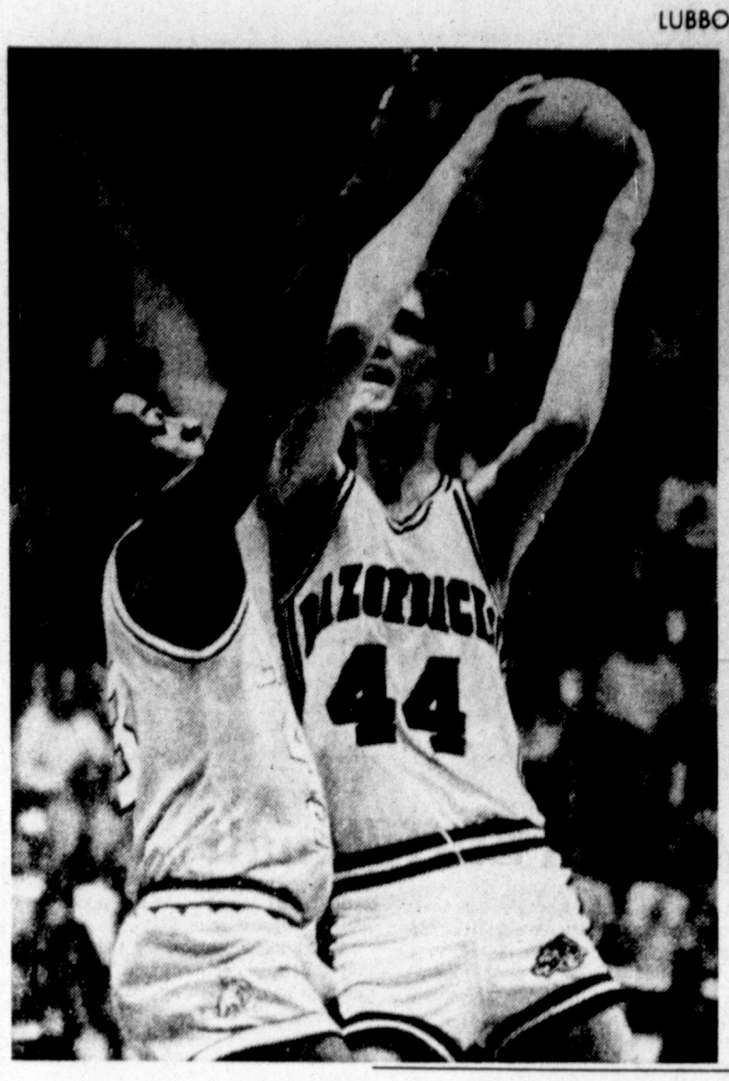

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Tulane University, enjoying its first winning campaign in six years, takes on one of college football's major powers Saturday in the Liberty Bowl against Penn State, whose 41 consecutive non-losing seasons are a national record.

But this year, Tulane is a surprising 9-2 and owns a No. 15 ranking in The Associated Press poll. The Green Wave earned its first postseason appearance since 1973, while Penn State struggled to a 7-4 record and wasn't ranked in the Top Twenty after the regular season despite a ninth consecutive bowl trip.

"This is a big game for us," Penn State coach Joe Paterno says in the wake of a season that included severe academic and disciplinary problems for the first time in his brilliant 14-year reign. "Our whole attitude has been toward getting the kids together with some goals and some pride. We're a young team, but you can only be young for so long."

The Nittany Lions have been in a New Year's Day bowl game eight times in the last 11 years but Paterno is taking this Liberty Bowl as seriously as any of them, so much so that he has held closed practices since arriving in Memphis on Tuesday.

"We felt we had the promise of a good team early with a good defense that would help us get through those early games while the offense grew," Paterno says.

PRESSED — LSU's 6-9 center, Greg Cook, puts the defensive pressure on Arkansas' Scott Hastings, but the pressure was too strong; Cook was charged with fouling in the first half of Thursday night's battle of nationally ranked teams at Little Rock. Hastings scored 13 points for the Porkers who fell to LSU 56-55. Cook scored 7 points for LSU. (AP Laserphoto)

Holzman Finds Pie Throwing Distasteful

By The Associated Press

They served cream pie at San Diego, but New York Knicks coach Red Holzman was in no mood for dessert.

"I've never seen anything like this before," said Holzman as he surveyed the remains of one of sports' zanier promotions — a halftime pie-throwing contest that delayed the start of the second half of the Knicks-Clippers game for about 50 minutes.

With the Clippers leading 62-58, the possibility of a forfeit arose as crews of ballboys with towels tried to clean up the remains of the 60 cream pies that were tossed at local TV sportscaster Ted Leitner in the halftime spectacle. The gooey pie filling made a mess of the playing surface under one of the baskets.

"The referees feel that they have to try to play," said Holzman. "It's not my responsibility. I didn't throw throw those pies."

Referee Lee Jones said there "wasn't a chance of a forfeit. What we had was a floor that was unplayable the first three times we tried. Holzman's contention was that the floor was hazardous to his players. We were just going to make sure the surface was playable."

When play finally resumed, the Clippers went on to beat the Knicks 128-118 behind 32 points by Lloyd Free and 24 points and 17 rebounds by Swen Nater, offsetting a pro-high 37 points by Bill Cartwright, New York's rookie center.

The game was tight until the final eight minutes, when the Clippers outscored the Knicks 27-16 to pull away.

In other NBA games Thursday night, the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Kansas City Kings 120-109 and the Atlanta Hawks topped the Detroit Pistons 122-103.

Holzman felt the delay was unfair to the Knicks, who were starting a West Coast road trip and were not yet used to the normal three-hour time difference.

"This is 1:30 in the morning for our club," he said as he leaned against a lockerroom wall after the game. "It takes the starch out of you. I was getting tired myself, and I didn't do a thing.

"It's the privilege of the home team to run a promotion. They must have thought it would help the gate. The only thing I can compare it to is the backboard thing with Darryl Dawkins."

Holzman said the Knicks would file an official protest because of the conditions. That announcement, shortly before the second half began, drew a cheer from the crowd of 6,843 at the San Diego Sports Arena, which apparently was upset by the delay.

"I guess the buck stops here," he said. "We're here for a total entertainment package. The idea was ours, and Ted thought it would be a good promotion. You don't know how these things are going to turn out. We didn't know it would get out of hand and delay the game.

"I've gotten different reactions so far. I've had people come up to me and say we ought to this more often and other people tell me that this was an outrage."

Bucks 120, Kings 109

Reserve Junior Bridgeman scored 17 of his 23 points in the second half as Milwaukee snapped Kansas City's eight-game winning streak and climbed one-half game ahead of the Kings in the Midwest Division race.

"It was the biggest game of the season," said Bucks coach Don Nelson said, explaining that the victory came against "a good team playing really the best basketball of anyone in the league, except Boston."

Pistons 122, Hawks 103

CLEAN-UP OPERATION — San Diego coach Gene Shue carries a pair of towels as he watches ball boys clean up the debris from a pie-throwing contest held in conjunction with Thursday night's game with the New York Knicks at San Diego. McGinnis To Appeal Stiff Penalty

NEW YORK (AP) — Irwin Weiner, agent for Denver Nuggets forward George McGinnis, says he plans to appeal the decision by NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien to suspend McGinnis for 10 days without pay as a result of his collision with a referee.

"We have 15 witnesses who saw the accident and will testify that it was just that — an accident," said Weiner, referring to the incident with referee Jess Kersey during a game in Seattle Sunday night.

McGinnis, 6-foot-8 and 235 pounds, and Kersey, 5-10 and 165, collided as they were running upcourt and Kersey was knocked to the floor. Although he was able to finish the game, Kersey was later taken to a hospital where it was diagnosed that he had suffered a mild concussion.

"Anybody who knows George knows he is not the type of person who would deliberately knock an official down or injure him," said Weiner. "We will appeal this. They are declaring George guilty on the basis of what one of their scouts said."

Weiner was referring to Lou Soriano, the official NBA observer assigned to the game. The collision occurred away from the ball and there is no film or videotape of the incident.

Nonetheless, in announcing the suspension Thursday, O'Brien said, "The evidence obtained pointed overwhelmingly to the conclusion that the collision was deliberate on McGinnis' part."

A statement released by the league said O'Brien's decision came after "a thorough investigation by NBA Director of Security Jack Joyce, which involved questioning of McGinnis and numerous witnesses of the incident," including Soriano.

Under NBA rules, any player or coach guilty of intentional physical contact with an official is subject to automatic suspension for a period to be determined by the commissioner based on the particular circumstances.

Pep Talks: Good Or Worthless?

Analysis

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — One of the news items which particularly intrigued me lately concerned a sports psychologist who seems to feel football coaches are handling their players all wrong.

The man voicing this theory is Keith Henschen, a professor at the University of Utah, and he insists coaches are wasting their time by trying to fire up players with loud and emotional pregame and halftime locker room talks.

Henschen says the coaches should spend more time teaching their athletes to stay calm under pressure instead of attempting to psych them up by means of violent outbursts and noisy harangues.

"That's unwise," he says. "What the players actually need is training to reduce tension rather than increase it."

Possibly, he has a point there, but there are some players you can talk to all day and all night in the manner Henschen suggests and all you'll get out of it is a dry throat.

From talking with players about this subject and even having heard a few of these tirades myself, I'd have to conclude it doesn't make a whole lot of difference how a coach handles a player in the locker room. The game isn't played there, it's played on the field.

And that's where that ubiquitous one-eyed monster, the TV Camera, suddenly becomes a far more important factor than anything the coach possibly could've said in the locker room. Once a player comes out on the field and realizes the camera is on him, that camera generally dictates, at least to some degree, the way he will perform.

How else do you explain a player spiking the football or doing a tap dance in the end zone after he scores? He didn't get that from any locker room talk.

"I was so damn silly the first time I began playing football in college," one NFL veteran confides.

"When one of the coaches said, 'Do it. I did it. If he said do it a thousand times, I did it also. They kept driving it into your head over and over — you must make 10 yards in four downs or the ball goes to the other team."

In the old days, it was a relatively simple matter for a coach to reprimand, chastise or even suspend a player. Today, it isn't that easy. Such action can arouse the entire student body or the alumni in college ball, and in the pros, the players have their own association to stand up and holler for them.

You've probably read or heard stories about how some coaches forced players who fumbled to take the ball to bed with them years back. Some of those stories were true.

"I can remember a running mate of mine in college playing as a freshman, who fumbled the ball seven times in our first three games," says Buddy Young, a former star at Illinois, later with the pros and now an aide to Pete Rozelle in the commissioner's office.

"This fellow was a shot putter and a discus thrower and he had a pair of hands that looked like bear paws, but he had trouble holding on to the football. He was such an outstanding runner, though, that the coach wanted to keep him on the football team.

"He made him carry the ball from the time he got up in the morning until he went to bed at night. It didn't help much. The coach found out it was an exercise in futility."

Buddy Young is a thoughtful, sensitive individual. For the benefit of some of those players prone to fumble today, I asked him if he'd explain the proper way of holding the ball and he was happy to do it.

"The tip end of the ball should be held in the palm of the hand, tucked in close to the body between the elbow and the shoulder," he said. "The ball should be carried on the side away from the opposing tackler.

"By that, I mean if you're up against the right sideline, the ball should be held in the right hand. If a tackler is in front of you and you make a right cut or a left cut, the ball should be shifted to the other hand, depending which way you cut."

And what if there happen to be tacklers on both sides?

UNM Admits Lax Practices

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — With the start of yet another investigation, the University of New Mexico today began a long climb from the depths of scandal to an athletic program which its president said would be "exemplary."

The new probe — by the UNM athletic council — was spurred by a top official's admission that the university had been lax in the past regarding the handling of academic requirements and opportunities for athletes.

Other investigations by a federal grand jury and the university began after FBI agents converged on the campus Nov. 28, probing alleged bribery and mail fraud involving a basketball player's academic transcript from a junior college.

Results of the scandal so far included the ouster of two basketball coaches, ineligibility or suspension of seven basketball players and three football players and forefeiture of one basketball and six football victories.

Dean of Admissions and Records Robert Weaver, in an internal letter which was leaked to the news media Thursday, told the council athletes at the school had received special academic favors, including unearned grades.

Bucs' Lee Roy Selmon Picked Top NFL Defender

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — After his first try at football, Lee Roy Selmon was ready to quit. The sweat pants didn't fit and the calisthentics seemed too hard for the pudgy Oklahoma farmboy.

"I went home and cried on mama's shoulders and told her I didn't like the sport anymore. I wanted to quit. She listened. She was sympathetic. But she told me to keep trying."

It was 12 years ago when Selmon, then 6 feet tall, 170 pounds, reported to to Eufala Junior High School football practice.

He gave it another try, and he hasn't stopped trying since.

Today, Selmon is the National Football League's defensive player of the year in a poll by The Associated Press. He was the runaway choice of 84 sports writers and broadcasters — three in each league city — who gave him 38 first-place votes.

The 6-foot-3, 255-pound defensive end, Tampa's initial collegiate draft choice in 1976, was the foundation of the NFL's top-ranked defense this season. The Bucs allowed the fewest points in the league and won the NFC Central Division title.

Selmon had a career-high 117 tackles, led the Bucs with 11 quarterback sacks, recovered two fumbles — returning one 29 yards for a touchdown — caused three other fumbles and blocked three kicks.

As awesome as he is on the field, he's docile and modest out of uniform.

"My getting the honors is the direct result of what we did together," he said. "And I'm happy to be part of it. I think it's a tribute to the team more than it is to me. That's where it all starts.

"I can't say it was like a dream come true because I never dreamed of it."

Veteran line coach Abe Gibron says: "He's one of the greatest defensive ends to ever play the game. The word superstar is overworked, but at his position he has no peers."

In off hours, Selmon is running, working out or studying his play book. He's worked hard to get to the top.

On Saturday before a game, he says, he spends his time getting mentally prepared.

"You seldom have to raise your voice to Lee Roy," says Gibron. "That's because he seldom makes a mistake. He has natural speed, agility, balance and quickness. He knows how to use his leverage when he is to get under somebody."

Second in the AP pool with 10 votes was Mike Reinfeldt, Houston's free safety, followed by middle linebacker Jack Lambert of the Pittsburgh Steelers with eight.

Others receiving more than one vote were Steelers' outside linebacker Jack Ham and Los Angeles defensive end Jack Youngblood with 5 each; outside linebacker Robert Brazile of Houston, 4; linebacker Bob Swenson of Denver, 3; and Pittsburgh defensive tackle Joe Greene, Denver linebacker Randy Gradishar and Denver cornerback Louis Wright, 2 each.

Campbell Gets AP Offensive Player Award

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers running back Earl Campbell received 29 post-season awards following his record-breaking 1978 season when he became the first rookie since Jim Brown in 1957 to win the NFL rushing title.

Campbell's response was to repeat as the NFL rushing champion with 1,697 yards and to set NFL records with 368 carries and seven consecutive 100-yard games in one season.

Campbell was named Thursday as NFL's Player of the Year by The Associated Press and because of the added attention this year, Oilers backfield coach Andy Bourgeois says Campbell's 1979 campaign was even more amazing than last year.

"Every team we've played this year put great emphasis on stopping Earl," Bourgeois said. "They spent their week working on gang tackling, pursuit and keying on Earl. And for him to accomplish what he has this year to me is greater than his rookie year."

Campbell, earlier named the NFL most valuable player by The AP, broke the NFL record of six consecutive 100-yard performances by Cleveland's Jim Brown in 1958 and tied by Pittsburgh's Franco Harris in 1972. Campbell's 368 rushes broke the 1977 standard of 339 by Chicago's Walter Payton.

The former Heisman Trophy winner also tied NFL records with 11 100-yard performances in one season and 19 touchdowns in one season. O.J. Simpson had 11 100-yard games with Buffalo in 1973 and Green Bay's Jim Taylor scored 19 touchdowns in 1962.

Campbell gained 1,450 yards to win the NFL rushing title last year and his two-year total of 3,147 is the most ever by an NFL back in his first two seasons.

The Oilers will follow Campbell into the playoffs for the second staight year Sunday when they host Denver in a first round wild card game in the Astrodome.

Looking back on his first two seasons, both Campbell and Bourgeois see improvement.

"At this point in the season I feel better and more healthy than last year," Campbell said. "That comes from experience."

Campbell received 39 of the 84 votes cast to beat out San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts with 34. Fouts was also runnerup to Campbell in the MVP voting.

Others receiving votes were quarterbacks Brian Sipe of Cleveland, Jim Zorn of Seattle and Roger Staubach of Dallas, rookie running back Ottis Anderson of St. Louis and guard John Hannah of New England.

Pair Aids Sufferers Of Professional Burnout

BALTIMORE (AP) — The job was getting to the ambulance attendant. He felt disturbed by the recurring tragedy, isolated by the long shifts. His marriage was in trouble. He was drinking too much.

One night it all blew up.

He rode in back that night. His partner drove. Their first call was for a man whose leg had been cut off by a train. His screaming and agony was horrifying, but the second call was worse.

It was a child beating. As the attendant treated the youngster's bruised body and snapped bones, he thought of his own child. His fury grew.

As they lifted the man into the ambulance, their frustration and anger came to a head. They decided to give the wino a ride he would remember.

The ambulance vaulted over railroad tracks at high speeds. The driver took the corners as fast as he could, flinging the wino from side to side in the back. To the attendants, it was a joke.

Suddenly, the wino began having a real heart attack. The attendant in back leaned over the wino and started shouting.

"Die, you mother!" he yelled, "Die!"

He watched as the wino shuddered. He watched as the wino died.

By the time they reached the hospital, they had their stories straight. Dead on arrival, they said. Nothing we could do.

The attendant, who must remain anonymous, talked about that night at a recent counseling session on "professional burnout" — a growing problem in high-stress jobs. The startling story was recounted by counselor Mark Kiefaber.

Although shocking and extreme, the man's story has elements shared by most sufferers of burnout, Kiefaber said.

Kiefaber and a friend, Martin Katzenstein, both have faced burnout, Kiefaber as a counselor for the mentally handicapped, Katzenstein in a halfway house for disturbed adolescent girls.

Now they are traveling around the country giving lectures and workshops on what burnout is and what to do about it.

The two are focusing on health services because they feel burnout is a "chronic problem, particularly among nurses."

"You'd be amazed at some of the things that go on in hospitals which are caused by burnout — negligence ... withholding of treatment," said Kiefaber. "It's shocking."

Why do people burn out? Two things, they say: Constant stress coupled with a lack of independence, a feeling that the individual has little effect on the overall product or service.

Other causes, they say, are a feeling of isolation from fellow workers, inadequate staffing and long, continuous hours of work.

Now Kiefaber, 30, and Katzenstein, 34, are exploring how stress workshops could be used in areas other than health services, such as for potentially abusive parents. Child beating, they say, is a result of a parent's inability to cope with stress.

Kiefaber said they also have "been asked by the Republican Senatorial Committee to come in ... and I don't mean to work with the senators, but with the staffs."

"There is an incredible turnover in Washington ... Many of the staffs are in absolute chaos ... and morale is low," he said. "The committee feels it is its No. 1 problem." That project has not yet begun.

The workshops started 1½ years ago, after health care counselors heard Kiefaber speak on aging and were so impressed they asked him to set up a workshop on any subject.

Fresh out of college with a clinical psychology degree, he took a job counseling at a hospital clinic. He took on a heavy caseload, 200 patients, and with overwork lost track of several individuals. One was hospitalized without his knowledge and died before Kiefaber could get him transferred back to his hospital.

"I was completely overwhelmed with guilt, and as I look back on it, unjustifiably so," he said.

He decided to find another job, but the search took a year. In that time his whole personality changed.

"I became hostile; had problems with my wife. I got into gallows-type humor," he said, the same kind of sick humor that prompted the attendants to take the drunk on the fatal ride.

AVOIDING BURNOUT — Mark Kiefaber follows a bit of his own advice on ways to avoid "burnout" by relaxing in a Baltimore park with his lunch. Kiefaber and a partner give workshops across the country on changes people can make in their lives to better cope with stress. (AP Laserphoto)

Suspect Details Drug Peddling

NEW YORK (UPI) — John "Johnny C" Conaghan, who reportedly supplied cocaine to White House Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan, says he peddled drugs for years at Studio 54, the Manhattan discotheque.

Conaghan pleaded guilty Tuesday to one charge in a 10-count indictment alleging he took part in a conspiracy to distribute narcotics.

Conaghan admitted to Judge William Conner that he sold cocaine and pills in Studio 54 and another disco on the average of three nights a week for 2½ years. He said he made between $750 and $1,000 a week on the sales. He faces up to five years in prison and a $15,000 fine at his sentencing on Feb. 6.

Conaghan was arrested in early October outside Studio 54 shortly after describing to a television audience what he said was his role in supplying Jordan with cocaine during Jordan's visit to Studio 54 in June 1978.

Jordan has denied the claim, which is being looked into by a special federal investigator.

Conservation Techniques Shown

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press Writer

On a single autumn day, 468 acres on parts of six West Tennessee farms were given a face lifting to fight serious soil erosion and improve water quality.

The massive, model all-volunteer project, one of the largest ever undertaken on one day, named "Operation Save Our Soil," drew nearly 7,000 persons, with more than 4,000 taking the two-hour demonstration tour on conservation practices. Farmland production has been suffering greatly in the area from erosion.

"Actually," says James L. Bilyeu of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation at Nashville, "more than 20 best management practices were installed" on the adjoining Gibson County farms near Dyer.

The work was on the farms of Bob McCurdy, involving 166 acres; Lloyd Collins, 109 acres; Beulah Bond, 36 acres; Charles Harrison, 37 acres; Robert Watson, 75 acres, and Floyd Jones, 45 acres.

Demonstrated were debris basins, diversions, conservation cropping, contour farming, crop residue use, hayland planting and management, pesticide use and pest management, access roads, timber stand improvement, Johnson grass control, wildlife food plot, soil profiles and land classification.

There were also soil test analysis, proper application of fertilizer, rip rap drop structure, grassed waterway, mulching, filter strips, streambank protection, fish pond and pasture renovation, field rearrangement, vegetable production, food preservation, biological pest control, no-till soybeans, terraces, fencing and beautification.

Scores of pieces of earth-moving equipment, seed, lime and other items were volunteered.

The pilot project was planned as a model for erosion control, part of a six-phase program to battle soil erosion and stream pollution on 80,000 West Tennessee acres. It is designed to improve about 450 farms, funded by the Tennessee Valley Authority, federal and state agencies and participating farmers. It could be used in other parts of the country.

Jack Carter, eldest son of President Carter, attending the September SOS project, talked about possible tax incentives to start such work. U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland also attended.

"Generally," Bilyeu said, "farmers seem to feel that the conservation systems installed are essential to prevent or reduce soil erosion on cropland. However, they also believe that some program for government cost-share and-or tax incentives will be necessary for implementation by the average farmer."

Officials said the project was "unique in that it was completed on one day with all volunteer funding and in the spirit of an old fashioned community barn raising."

West Tennessee is described as the state's "breadbasket," with 6.8 million acres between the Tennessee and Mississippi Rivers. Much of the state's corn, soybean, cotton and truck crops are grown there. Soil losses from erosion are 40 to 60 tons per acre per year — in some cropland 100 tons. It is replaced by nature only at about 5 tons per acre per year. Agricultural leaders consider soil erosion Tennessee's No. 1 conservation problem.

Plans are to have 80 active demonstration farms in 1980. All landowners in the areas will be asked to participate in the program for a six-year period.

Under federal legislation, the nation's waters are supposed to be fishable and swimmable by the mid-1980s.

An effort is being made to create an awareness of the soil erosion and water quality programs by the public, landowners and farm operators.

Holiday Plants Poisonous, Center Warns

DENVER (UPI) — Holly is jolly. Poinsettias are festive. Mistletoe is romantic. And all three holiday plants are poisonous, the Denver Poison Control Center advises.

During the 1978 Christmas season, the center had 139 poison cases due to the ingestion of poinsettia leaves and the 1977 holiday was a high for mistletoe poisioning with 63 reported, nurse Cheryl Donnelly said this week.

She said the center received 87 calls last year for poisonings due to holly, Christmas tree needles and other miscellaneous items. She said holly was eaten less frequently because of the sharp spines.

The poinsettia, a common holiday gift, produces a sap that irritates the skin and mucous membranes, Miss Donnelly said. The plant's toxicity has been overrated, but consumption can cause severe stomach distress, she said.

Mistletoe, hung in doorways to induce a kiss, can cause nausea, abdominal pain and vomiting in small doses and seizures, hypertension and cardiac arrest when eaten in large quanities, Miss Donnelly said.

"Although the plant is usually hung high, eventually it dries out and the berries drop onto the floor," she said and added most of the poisioning cases involved children. "The Poison Center recommends that people get plastic mistletoe."

A considerable number of calls was received last year due to children eating gift wrap, ribbon, tinsel and flocking, she said. The high incidence of poisonings involving children was due to families visiting homes not geared to small ones.

"People are so busy and preoccupied with holiday festivities that they forget to take precautions. There is a decrease in the awareness of safety and children aren't as well supervised as they should be," she said.

Pet Mexican Eagle Stolen From Zoo

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Pancho, a tame Mexican eagle, has been stolen from his roost at a nature park on Lake Merritt.

Officials said this week that someone sheared through the fencing and took Pancho, a black-and-white Cara Cara which had delighted park goers for the past 11 years.

Carter Patiently Seeks Peaceful Answer

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Iranian nightmare goes on with no end in sight. No one at the White House, from President Carter on down, has any idea when it will be over.

The irrationality of the diffuse statements coming from Tehran and the lack of a firm fix on the power center contributes to the confusion among Washington policy makers. They believe Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini wields the most power at the moment, but he seems to be feeling his way.

Even he, in his commands and flaming rhetoric, seems loath to challenge the militant students who may listen to him on occasion, and may not.

Carter said in a recent interview that the status quo is "unacceptable" and that he does not want the crisis in Iran to become a way of life. He says he will keep the pressure on and keep turning the screws.

As long as the United States has reason to believe none of the 50 American hostages has not been physically harmed, Carter will continue to seek a peaceful solution through diplomatic and political means.

His tactics, so far, include the economic weapon with the freezing of Iranian assets and blocking oil imports and the further prospect that a prolongation of the crisis may lead the United States to seek worldwide economic sanctions through the United Nations.

The administration's success in summoning world public opinion to its side is evident with the demand for the release of the hostages by both the U.N. Security Council and the Court of International Justice.

Assistant Secretary of State George Vest has been spending a lot of time disabusing political columnists of the notion that the European allies just have not been there when needed. He claims that the European leaders "have done everything we asked them to do."

They also have been working behind the scenes to aid in the release of the hostages, but their cover cannot be blown for two or three years, he says, without doing them harm.

According to press secretary Jody Powell, who sits in on the top secret Iranian crisis meetings, Carter has other cards up his sleeve, and has not exhausted his peaceful options.

Washington Window

Throughout the pages of American history, presidents have been judged on how they met the extraordinary challenges and rose to the occasion. Carter was going along, low in the popularity polls, and struggling to establish a viable bid for a second term.

But there has been a turnaround in the nation's perception of his leadership abilities. He has brought the American people around to his way of thinking that patience, as he put it, is "the better part of valor."

UPI Official Announces Louisiana Appointment

DALLAS (UPI) — The appointment of Royal A. Brightbill as regional executive for United Press International in Louisiana has been announced by Southwest Vice President Travis M. Hughs.

Brightbill, 39, has served in both domestic and overseas assignments with UPI. He learned to speak Mandarin Chinese during six years in the Air Force prior to joining UPI In 1969.

He was a member of UPI's coverage team for Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's visit to the United States last February and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's visit in 1976.

Before moving abroad, Brightbill worked at Raleigh, N.C., served as bureau manager in Charlotte, N.C., and was assigned to New York. His overseas service in Brussels, Athens and London included coverage of the October 1973 Mideast War.

Brightbill returned to his native New Orleans in 1975 and a year later became manager at Baton Rouge where he covered three regular and three special sessions of the legislature and numerous other aspects of state government and politics, including the recent election of Louisiana's first Republican governor in more than a century.

Hughs said Brightbill will continue to be based in Baton Rouge.

Brightbill, a graduate of Louisiana State University, is married to the former Gwen Delatte. They have two children.

Magazine Endorses Bush For President

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bush has won the endorsement of Forbes magazine, which said the Republican has the experience and ability to be an "effective, undemagogic president."

Editor Malcolm Forbes, in his Fact & Comment column in the Jan. 7 issue, which comes out next Wednesday, calls the former congressman, diplomat and party leader the best of the candidates from both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Mrs. Gandhi Seeking Comeback In Crucial January Election

Re-election of former Prime Minster Indira Gandhi would bring back her authoritarian style of government. A vote for Charan Singh or Jagjivan Ramand means more of the the bickering and horse-trading that have riddled India's government for the 30 months since Mrs. Gandhi's ouster.

The worst-possible scenario is that no leader will emerge from the Jan. 3 and Jan. 6 balloting with the mandate to tackle India's mounting troubles.

Inflation is galloping along at about 19 percent. The worst drought in decades threatens to wipe out India's food surplus. Industrial production is declining in the face of labor unrest, a steep fall in power generation, port congestion and transport bottlenecks.

A lack of strong political leadership has spurred HinduMoslem turbulence of a severity unseen since the British withdrew from the subcontinent in 1947.

The elections, 2$ 1/2 years ahead of schedule, are the result of former Prime Minister Morarji Desai's resignation last summer following mass defections from his Janata Party.

Singh, finance minister in Desai's Cabinet, then formed the Lok Dal (People's Party) and became prime minister with the help of Mrs. Gandhi's faction of the Congress Party.

But even before Singh could face Parliament, Mrs. Gandhi pulled the rug out from under his feet because he refused to drop court cases against her and her son, Sanjay, for crimes allegedly committed during her 20-month emergency rule.

Fed up with wheeling and dealing by politicians, President Sanjiva Reddy dissolved Parliament and called new elections, an exercise that will involve 360 million voters.

Mrs. Gandhi, who ruled for 11 years, appears to have real political momentum. Her opponents forged an alliance under the Janata banner to defeat her in March 1977 elections but are now in disarray.

She has managed to draw into her party many of her detractors and has formed alliances with other enemies.

The party platforms contain several identical promises, but Mrs. Gandhi's theme for the elections is "One nation, one leader. Vote for stability."

It could backfire on her because Indians, particularly in the north, have not forgotten the excesses of her emergency rule. Fundamental rights and judicial powers were curbed, the press was censored and hundreds of political opponents including Desai and Singh were arrested.

Villagers are still angry with her for her family planning program, under which thousands of Indians were forced to submit to sterilization.

Top-Rated Soap Opera Seeks New Cast Members

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The word went out that 16 new cast members are being sought for the soap opera "The Young and The Restless," currently rated No. 1 among daytime dramas.

Producer John Conboy is expanding the 30-minute series to a full hour and needs the services of a bunch of young actors, mostly in their teens and early 20s to make the expansion possible.

The opportunities the show represents for young performers is irresistible — a generous weekly paycheck, national exposure and hard-to-get experience.

Conboy has interviewed 150 youthful actors and hasn't come close to filling any of the roles.

He is hampered by the fact that some teen-age roles must be played by actors 18 or older who must look 15 or 16 to get around California child labor laws.

For every young actor and actress he interviews another one or two are screened out by his casting associates. Conboy, a former actor himself, knows about rejection. But he can't allow compassion or sentiment to enter his thinking.

"There must be thousands of young actors in the 18-to-25 age bracket," Conboy said during a break in a full day of interviewing prospective stars. "Because they haven't any track record I depend on a trick to cast young, inexperienced people.

"I study their off-screen personalities. If they really turn on, light a fire, express themselves well and excitingly in my office, then I know they'll do the same thing on camera.

"When I was producing another soap opera back in New York — 'Love Is A Many Splendored Thing', I hired Paul Michael Glaser (later the star of 'Starsky and Hutch') on the basis of his off-screen personality.

"The people who come in to talk to me had better be glossy, the kind of performers who attract immediate attention.

"If viewers are going to be looking at them five days a week, they'd better be good looking as well as talented. And I expect them to be good listeners, too.

"If I were looking for experienced performers, the casting job would be a great deal easier. Established actors have done enough things to give you a pretty good idea of what they can do."

Conboy mentally eliminates most young performers the moment they enter his office. Their appearance or attitudes or both are wrong.

Those who do pass a cursory inspection often fail during the reading or screen test because "their acting technique" shows, according to Conboy who adds that too many youngsters are badly trained.

"Young people absorb bad habits from their theatrical coaches," he said. "They accumulate theatricality from teachers. Their techniques are unnatural.

"The success of 'The Young and The Restless' is due to the fact that the kids in the series don't know how to be dishonest in front of the cameras.

"Casting a soap is different from other series in some respects but not in others. There are certain types that follow a pattern, especially with women.

"If I'm casting a girl from the wrong side of the tracks, she must have a big bosom because women with big chests are made to appear to be more salacious than other women.

"You rarely see a flat-chested actress playing bawdy roles. It just seems to be one of the unwritten rules of theater, movies and television. On the other hand, uptight, puritanical women are almost always flatchested.

"Facial beauty is an enormously important part of casting a soap opera because we shoot tight, close-in one shots of performers which show every pore of their skins. The point is to see what is going on in their eyes.

"The young men I'm looking for must be handsome or sexy looking. Like the actresses, they must have good bodies because we play as many scenes as we can in soaps with people undressed.

"We play on the fantasies of our viewers by putting our characters in settings where there are legitimate reasons for undressing — in bed, showers, hot tubs, swimming pools, karate classes or gyms.

"So we have to find young actors and actresses who are 'hot' to look at, exciting, sexy.

"In the final analysis, people who tune in soaps like to watch attactive young people. You find the same thing is pretty much true of prime time performers. I think you see better looking people on TV than in movies.

"Viewers also would rather see good looking older people than they would unattractive performers. You've got to provide fantasy if you expect viewers to tune in.

Connally Officially Enters NH Primary

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John Connally has become the seventh presidential candidate to enter New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary election Feb. 26.

Connally's son, John Connally III, filed petitions and the filing fee Wednesday, saying he believes his father will either defeat Ronald Reagan — considered the favorite — or run a close second.

Teen-Ager Survives Golden Gate Jump

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 17-year-old youth who jumped from the Golden Gate Bridge into San Francisco Bay is the 12th person in history to survive the 210-foot plunge, authorities said.

Todd Sherratt of San Anselmo was listed in good condition at Letterman Army Medical Center after Wednesday's jump. Robert E. Lee IV, a ranger for the Golden Gate National Recreational Area, tossed Lee a life ring and he swam to shore with it.

"Aunt Nell brought Itsy-Poo to see you!"

PBS To Present 'Joy Of Bach' Sunday

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — I once knew an old fellow who could play "Dixie" and "Camptown Races" by thumping his skull with the knuckle of his index finger. Had he been able to play Bach's "Fugue a la Gigue," he could have been on TV.

"The Joy of Bach," Sunday on PBS, includes Bach interpretations on the piano, harpsichord, guitar (acoustic and electric), violin, steel drum, Moog synthesizer and harmonica. Its purpose is to celebrate the enduring universality of Bach, whom cellist Pablo Casals called "the god of music."

"How can this man come across the centuries with such gusto?" asks host Brian Blessed. "How can this man, from a time of brass and marble and weight and faith, certainty in a creator, still come across to us in this age of plastic and programming and the inexorable grip of a mechanistic universe?"

My, that question alone is worth the watching.

The adaptability of Bach's compositions is nicely underscored by a series of montages, cutting to three different choral performances of one piece, and from harpsichord to piano to Moog synthesizer on another.

Bach fans will revel in this, and will appreciate the little biographical sketches featuring Blessed as the maestro. Non-fans of Bach are likely to be at least intrigued by the energetic variations (there is even a disco version of Bach).

Says Blessed: "We can do almost anything to Bach..." Yes, except skull-thump him.

Writer Praises Sherrill Milnes' Performance In Met's 'Rigoletto'

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Mariella Devia, an Italian soprano who sounds as lovely and fresh as a little brown thrush on a spring morning, made her Metropolitan Opera debut this week as Gilda in "Rigoletto."

Added to that delight was the fact that any time a title role is sung as well as Sherrill Milnes sang Rigoletto it's a glorious evening in the opera house.

Miss Devia's voice isn't loud but it carries, without shrillness. She held her own in duets with both Milnes and tenor Neil Shicoff and her final pianissimo high note in the third act quartet was exquisite.

She is a native of Imperia, Italy, and made her opera debut in 1972, at Spoleto, since then engaged by Italy's leading theaters, plus Brussels, Frankfurt and Munich.

Milnes played Rigoletto subtly, not doing the expected thumping around the stage. And he didn't look repulsive, a humped shoulder not very exaggerated and gray hair with a bald spot but nicely framing his face. In the first scene, his nastiness and emotional nature glided by this viewer, unperceived. Then we began to take Milnes' Rigoletto primarily from his rich voice where it was concentrated.

New Yorker Shicoff, as the Duke, was uneven. He varied from sounding like a brilliant Italian tenor to very good to serviceable, with an average of very good.

Julien Robbins of Harrisburg, Pa. in his debut season at the Met, made a strong Monterone. It's a small part but needs to make a strong impression, because Monterone puts the curse on Rigoletto. Another important part is the assassin Sparafucile, sung by Jerome Hines. Made up like a death's head and with supersecure low notes, Hines was, in a word, great.

New York Critics Pick Best Picture Of 1979

NEW YORK (AP) — "Kramer vs. Kramer," a new film about a couple's fight over their son, squeaked past the surprise hit "Breaking Away" to be named Best Picture of 1979 by the New York Film Critics Circle.

Dustin Hoffman, who co-stars with Meryl Streep in "Kramer," was named best actor in the results, announced this week, of the poll of 26 critics. He far outstripped the next runner-up, Peter Sellers of "Being There," which opened in New York today.

Miss Streep won the best supporting actress award for "Kramer," which opened in New York on Wednesday, and for her role in "The Seduction of Joe Tynan."

Sally Field was named best actress for her role as factory worker "Norma Rae," edging out Bette Midler, who starred in "The Rose."

Hostage's Family Makes Plans For Christmas

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Christmas just won't be the same this year at the Richard Morefield home without their father to give the annual yuletide reading of "How the Grinch Stole Christmas."

This is not the first hostage tragedy for the family. In March 1976, the Morefields' eldest son, Richard Jr., 19, was shot to death after being held hostage by gunmen in a restaurant in Alexandria, Va.

"Richard Junior has been with us in spirit for four years," Dorothea Morefield said. "Richard Senior is also with us in spirit, but in a different way. We know he'll be back."

Kenny Morefield, looking solemn for a 13-year-old, nodded agreement as his mother said, "My family and I feel that we, the United States, must let Iran know that these men are the focal point of our national interest.

"It's important that Americans remember these men and don't allow them to slip into the background. It's important they be kept before the public as individuals, not abstractions."

The other Morefields are Steven, 15, who lives at home with Kenneth and Mrs. Morefield; Betsy, an engineering senior at the University of Virginia, and young adults Bill and Dan, who "batch" in a nearby apartment.

They will all gather in the comfortable townhouse in the Tierrasanta section of North San Diego on Christmas Eve with Morefield's mother and sister, who are San Diego residents. Kenneth will substitute for his father in the reading of the family favorite, "How the Grinch Stole Christmas."

Morefield read the Dr. Seuss classic one Christmas when the children were small and the custom was born. Bill reads a biblical passage and Betsy does "Mrs. Willoughby's Christmas Tree."

Mrs. Morefield said her husband had a physical examination in June before departing for Iran, and takes no medication, so she was not unduly worried about his physical health.

"But he's not at all athletic," she said as Kenneth laughed at the thought. "He's a bridge player, and his hobby is making hook rugs like this one; and in his office he had one of the great seal of the United States."

She showed the letter she received from Tehran the day before Thanksgiving. It was hand-printed in block letters in black ink. It said:

"Dear Dotty,

"I feel quite well. Don't be worried about me. I am OK. I hope the children are helping you as best they can. I love you. Richard."

There was a footnote:

"Sorry this letter is written by Moslem students. (Excuse us)."

Mrs. Morefield doesn't know what to make of the "Excuse us," but finds it encouraging.

"What the president is attempting seems to be the only way to bring the hostages home safely. It is harder to use patience than force, but I don't feel force could get them out alive and that's our only interest," she said.

"I used to be such an organized person. I would plan things and do them. Now I don't plan anything. I just live one day at a time."

She gave up her hospital administrative job when her husband was abducted "to be with the boys, and because I couldn't do justice for my employer. My mind wasn't in it."

The Morefields are relatively new in his hometown of San Diego, and don't know too many people. The neighbors know who they are because of the media assault.

"The neighbors have been most considerate," Mrs. Morefield said.

She termed "very supportive and reassuring" the president's decision to keep the White bhouse Christmas tree in partial darkness in honor of the hostages, and local prayer vigils for the hostages held in Balboa Park and at halftime of the San Diego-Denver NFL Football game.

At a State Department briefing in Washington for families of the hostages, she was given instructions on how to cope with stress.

"They said to keep busy," she said. "I keep busy and I can tell you that housework is no more rewarding with stress than without it."

The Morefields have been married 25 years; he has been in the foreign service 24 years. They have lived at a number of foreign posts, including Colombia and Uruguay where leftist terrorists kidnapped for ransom to finance their activities. Sometimes the victims were Americans.

"You couldn't help but talk about the possibilities, and my husband and I both felt that the U.S. policy of not negotiating (with kidnappers) made it safer; but no one ever discussed the possibility of a government holding hostages. One expects the basic rules of international diplomacy to be followed," she said.

"I'm sure Dick will be released okay," Mrs. Morefield said. "But it is so hard to be patient ... especially in December."

MASKED SLAYER SOUGHT

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A masked gunman who "knew exactly who he wanted to hit" was sought by police Wednesday after he burst into a restaurant-bar and opened fire, killing two employees of a mental hospital and a third man who used to work there. The 20-second burst of gunfire Tuesday night wounded three other people, police said.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Does anyone know what Elvis Presley's last words were? And will they be revealed in any article, magazine or newspapers? — Elaine R., San Jose. (Also similar letters and cards from hundreds of other Presley fans.)

A: Yes. The Ladies' Home Journal, in its November '79 issue ran copyrighted prepublication excerpts from "Elvis: We Love You Tender," a biography to be published by Delacorte Press in January, revealing that Elvis asked God "to help me to get back when I feel down like this." His stepbrother and aide, Rick Stanley, one of the authors, also claimed that Presley was hospitalized between 1973 and 1975 "to dry out from drugs" not the publicly announced reasons of health.

He said that Presley's drug habit was developed in the Army, and that in 1972 the singing star started injecting drugs instead of just taking them orally. Rick asserted that he and his brother David injected Presley "all the time" and that then Elvis became "addicted for sure."

Further disclosures in the Journal excerpt of the biography by Dee Presley, Bill Stanley, David Stanley and Rick Stanley, include: On any given night, if you had frisked Elvis onstage, you would have found a four-shot derringer in his boot or behind his belt buckle."

Rick, who overcame his own drug habit, stated about his stepbrother: "I've never seen anybody who could take (drugs) like that. You just don't do dope like he did and live through it."

David Stanley thinks there might have been a "strong possibility" that Elvis overdosed on his medication when he got up that morning. It had, after all, been "known to occur," (the excerpts stated) "and he (David) recalls several times when he found Elvis unconscious on his bathroom floor in similar instances."

Rick further noted: "Presley was bedridden during the daytime that last year. We'd fly to a city and he'd get into bed as soon as we got there. We'd get him up to do the show. Back on the plane, he'd get right into bed again."

Presley had an affair with his stepbrother Billy's 18-year-old wife Ann while he was still married to Priscilla. The affair "shocked Billy's family," stated the biography.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 19620, Irvine, Calif. 92714. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Atheist Exempt From Taking Oath In Trial

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair will not be required to swear to God in an oath prior to testifying this week at the trial of a man accused of shoving a pie in her face.

Hunter's attorney unsuccessfully argued this week that court rules required Mrs. O'Hair to testify under an oath in which she swears to God that her testimony is true. Municipal Judge Thomas Mescall, who rejected the attempt, also turned down a motion that would have allowed Mrs. O'Hair to be questioned about her religious beliefs.

Mrs. O'Hair filed the misdemeanor charge against Hunter after she was hit with a pie Oct. 23 during an organizational meeting for an atheist group at an Albuquerque hotel.
