Survey: 22.8 percent of teens use marijuana

Results concern local leaders, affirm need for community awareness campaign

By Meredith Moriak
mmoriak@mrt.com

Nearly one in four sixth- through 12th-grade students in Midland County admitted to using marijuana in spring 2013, according to survey results released Thursday at the Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

More than 2,500 students in Midland and Greenwood ISDs took the Texas Prevention Impact Index survey last spring, and 22.8 percent of students — 24.3 percent of males surveyed and 21.6 percent of females — admitted to marijuana use in the 30-day period prior to completing the survey.

In 2008, only 13.3 percent of students admitted to using marijuana.

Though males still account for the majority of marijuana users, the number of female respondents who smoke marijuana increased nearly 50 percent from 2012 to 2013, according to survey results.

Other results yielded from the 200-question survey, which is paid for annually by the Midland Coalition and conducted by Research and Education Services of Houston, showed that more than 1 in 4 students surveyed consumed alcohol and admitted to binge drinking during the 30-day period preceding their survey completion in spring 2013.

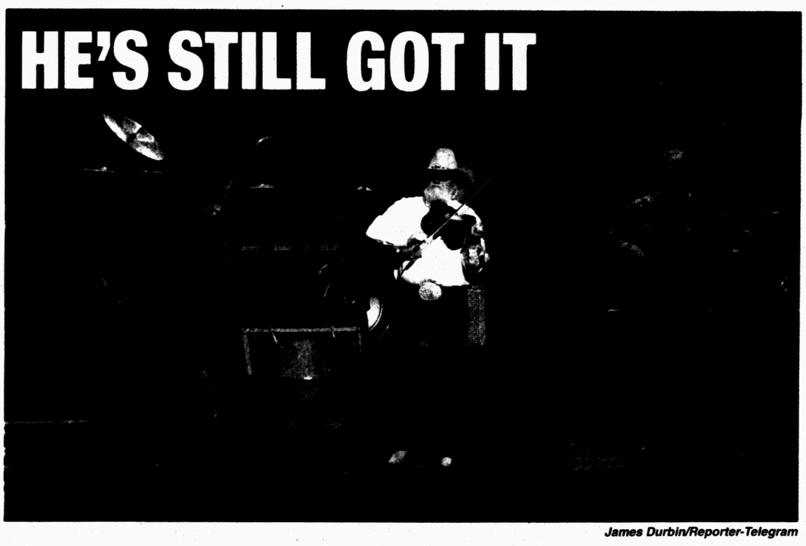

Of those surveyed, 26.3 percent said they consumed alcohol, 28.6 admitted to binge drinking, and 10.2 percent admitted to taking prescription drugs that were not prescribed to them.

The majority of students who consume alcohol, smoke cigarettes and use marijuana and smokeless tobacco started using at age 12 or 13 — in sixth or seventh grade — according to survey data.

Results also show the percentage of students who feel schools enforce rules on drinking decreased significantly from 2012 to 2013.

This year only 66 percent of students felt like rules were enforced, compared Charlie Daniels Band performs Thursday at the Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center.

Fiddle and guitar icon Daniels dazzles at Wagner Noel

By Nick Wendel

■ REVIEW

The crowd that trickled Thursday night into the Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center to see Charlie Daniels Band represented an incredibly wide range of ages, reflective of the 76-year-old man hanging onto his youthful spunk that they came to see.

Daniels, an outspoken conservative, capitalized on a West Texas audience with similar political views, drawing a couple of impromptu standing ovations for his critique of the American government. But his patriotism flavored the evening, including a Pledge of Allegiance, a song dedicated to military members and even a NASCAR reference.

Despite a white beard, and obvious limited mobility, the fiddle and guitar icon pumped energy into the theater,

Regulator: Production could double by 2020

Houston Chronicle

Booming resource plays that show no signs of slowing could push Texas' crude oil production to 4 million barrels per day by 2020, doubling its 2012 rate, a top state industry regulator said Thursday.

That would "put us in league with some of the biggest oil producers on the planet," said Barry Smitherman, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, at an oil and gas conference hosted by Bloomberg.

Smitherman spoke during a morning panel on the outlook for U.S. oil production and prices, kicking off a tightly packed day's worth of industry insight at the Museum of Natural Science in Houston.

The statewide rush to produce the high-priced commodity could push production levels to 2.5 million barrels per day by late 2014, he said. And the Eagle Ford Shale in South Texas, which "shows no sign of abating," could jump from 600,000 barrels per day to 900,000 barrels per day in the next few years, he said.

"Every time I have a presentation, my numbers are outdated by the time I put the slides together," he said.

The United States' increase in oil production — which jumped to 6.5 million barrels per day in 2012 from 5.4 million barrels per day in 2010 — has kept

JACK LADD: A LEADER AMONG MEN

UTPB dean dies at age 63 after long illness

By Lindsay Weaver
Odessa American

If you knew Jack DeVere Ladd Sr., you were one of the lucky ones.

His friends and colleagues are remembering Ladd, who died Tuesday evening following an extended illness, as a compassionate leader in the Permian Basin community and at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"In life there are always some people I think about that when you look up and see them coming, you think, 'Well, this is going to be great,'" said Tom Parks, a retired professor at UTPB and friend to Ladd.

"He was so pleasant. He took such pleasure out of life. And he helped you enjoy life, too, with his attitude and perspective on things," Parks said.

Ladd, 63, was the former director of John Ben Shepperd Public Leadership Institute, a longtime attorney in Midland and dean of the UTPB School of Business.

Ladd is survived by his wife Constance Susan and four children, Jack DeVere Jr., Glen Ross, Constance Catherine and Doug Smith. Ladd was a sixth-generation Texan. He was born in Big Spring on Dec. 25, 1949, to Walter DeVere Ladd and Tiney Ida Smith Ladd. His service will be held 2 p.m. Monday at First United Methodist Church.

A resident of Midland, Ladd joined the university in 2004 as the director of the JBS Public Leadership Institute and in July 2007 became the dean of the School of Business that later changed to the College of Business and Engineering under his leadership.

"Nobody will be another Jack Ladd. No one has his personality, his ability to work comfortably in the academic and business world," said professor Bill Fannin, also UTPB's former provost and vice president for academic affairs.

Ladd helped to build the energy management program at UTPB to offer more courses that tie the energy industry and business industry together. Fannin said changing the face of the school took a strong leader not someone who hid behind walls. The school has been a leader in the online MBA program for 12 years and he was a visionary among faculty.

"There will be others who do a good job, but nobody to provide his type of leadership," Fannin said.

The task was certainly daunting, Fannin said, to transform the engineering program under the new title of the College of Business and Engineering. Ladd's undergraduate degree was in business coupled with a law degree from the University of Texas, but even without an engineering background he exceeded expectations, Fannin said.

Ladd practiced law for 28 years as a corporate and securities attorney at Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin and Browder Inc., according to archived Odessa American stories. He served two terms as chairman on the State Securities Board through appointment by Gov. Rick Perry, and appointed by then-Gov. George W. Bush to the Educational Economic Policy Center.

Ladd has also served on the boards of the Hillander School in Midland, president of the board of trustees for First United Methodist Church of Midland, president of the Boys and Girls Club of Midland and was member of the Board of Governors of High Sky Children's Ranch.

UTPB President David Watts extended his condolences and reported the news to the UTPB community Wednesday.

On Thursday, Watts said Ladd was a compassionate and caring man.

"He was willing to learn new things and bring his accumulated skills to a whole new set of responsibilities," Watts said.

Parks, who worked with Ladd those few years he spent at UTPB, said in his own 75 years of life Ladd was a rare breed.

"The heartiest laughs I've ever had, was with Jack," Parks said. Ladd was a great storyteller, too, Parks said, and he didn't make up his stories.

"He was in love with life. His stories, his experiences were absolutely wonderful," Parks said. Through Ladd's work as the director of the JBS Public Leadership Institute, Parks called his efforts there "remarkable."

"To him, leadership wasn't a theory it was a working reality. I learned a lot by being at his side," Parks said. "Just a true treasure."

Davis campaign disavowing robo-call using her name

The Wendy Davis campaign is disavowing a robo-call asking people to donate to an organization called Foundation for Justice for All.

Democratic strategist Matt Angle said the group has ties to conservative groups and is not associated with the Davis campaign in any way.

Foundation director, Marquita DeJesus, told The Associated Press that her progressive group is making the calls and asking people who support Davis to give her foundation money. But she also said she is not in touch with the Davis campaign or working with them.

The foundation has raised money across the country using recordings of President Barack Obama, but only recently created a political action committee.

Opposition groups sometimes pose as allies to raise money. A San Antonio man said he felt duped after donating.

Former state Rep. Miller enters ag commissioner race

Former state Rep. Sid Miller has joined the race for agriculture commissioner.

The Stephenville Republican announced Thursday that he would seek the statewide office responsible for regulating the farm and ranching industry.

Miller served in the Texas House of Representatives from 2001-2012. He attracted statewide attention for authoring a bill requiring doctors to conduct a sonogram before performing an abortion.

In the race for the Republican nomination, Miller faces party attorney Eric Opiela and Uvalde Mayor J. Allen Carnes. Current Agriculture Commissioner Todd Staples is running for lieutenant governor.

Miller is a farmer, rancher, cattle feeder and commercial nurseryman. He said his experience as a lawmaker and rancher makes him the best candidate.

Businessman sentenced in corruption case

A federal judge in El Paso has sentenced a Michigan businessman to two years in prison for his role in a scheme to fraudulently secure contracts with the El Paso Independent School District.

U.S. District Judge Frank Montalvo also ordered Gary Lange to pay $2.89 million in restitution.

The 61-year-old from Haslett, Mich., pleaded guilty to conspiring with business partner Joseph O'Hara, of Albany, N.Y., along with Associate Superintendent Tomas Gabaldon and Trustee Sal Mena, to obtain a software contract for the district's special education program. Gabaldon received $100,000 in bribes, while Mena got a $5,000 kickback.

O'Hara has been sentenced to three years in prison and ordered to pay $2.89 million in restitution. Mena drew a three-year prison term, while Gabaldon was sentenced to four years in prison.

BELTON

Deliberations begin in gun trial

A Central Texas jury has begun deliberations in the trial of a Fort Hood soldier arrested for carrying an assault rifle in public.

Jurors deliberated about eight hours Thursday in the Belton trial of Army Master Sgt. Christopher Grisham. Deliberations resume today.

Grisham is charged with misdemeanor interference with the duties of an officer. A Temple police officer responding to a report of a man carrying an assault rifle arrested Grisham in March. Grisham was hiking with his 15-year-old son, who was working on a Boy Scout merit badge. The officer has testified he worried about Grisham's reaction after approaching him.

TxDOT: Top 25 toll jumpers together owe more than $3M

Associated Press

EL PASO — The state of Texas says Ronny Williams owes more than $236,000 in toll road fees. It also says Mandy Dyment has accrued more than $217,000 in unpaid tolls over more than 10,000 transactions.

The two top a list of 25 drivers the state's transportation department says owe the most toll fees, but some on the list dispute the claim. The list was released Thursday in an effort to recoup tens of thousands of dollars in unpaid transactions on state-owned toll roads.

Collectively, the 25 on the list owe the state slightly more than $3 million of the $27 million TxDOT says is owed by drivers. Officials said they sent notices to 28,000 motorists and gave them until noon Wednesday to arrange a payment plan.

The top 25 offenders could find their names on the TxDOT website Thursday.

Dyment said she was shocked to learn she owes $217,619.79.

"It's not accurate — that's just insane," Dyment said in a phone interview with The Associated Press. She has since contacted TxTag — the agency that issues the auto-pay tags — to work on the issue.

Contact information for Williams was not immediately available.

Another driver on the top 25, Judy Blundell, of Tyler, said, "There must be a crossed wire somewhere." TxDOT says Blundell owes $141,755.21.

Blundell, an architect and artist, said she had to answer several calls from reporters about someone with her same name in that city of about 100,000 residents, located 100 miles east of Dallas.

"My TxTag account is in good standing. I think they are in error."

TxDOT said it may ban drivers who owe fees from toll roads and impound their vehicles if the drivers are stopped by police. Officials plan to also notify county tax assessors to block vehicle owners from renewing their registrations.

Veronica Beyer, a spokeswoman for TxDOT, said that there is also the option to refer unpaid fees to collection agencies and reporting the offenders to credit bureaus. Also, under a new state law enacted this summer, the state can sue those who default on their payment plans and recover attorney's fees, investigative and court costs, on top of the outstanding balances.

Beyer said they've tried using collection agents and filing criminal complaints with justices of the peace against many top violators, but results have not been widely successful.

"It's just mass numbers. We have some complaints and some people show up, but some still choose to ignore it. I think (naming the top offenders) is a last-ditch effort" by the state, said Travis County Justice of the Peace office manager Cindy Mueller. Not paying a toll fee is a Class C misdemeanor.

Driving through a toll booth once without paying the 50 cent toll can add up over time to a fee of hundreds of dollars. Once the owner of an offending vehicle is identified, bills are mailed twice to them and then a violation notice is sent. With mailing costs, administrative fees and justice of the peace court fees, an unpaid toll can turn into a $448.50 fee in slightly more than 200 days.

MISD substitute arrested on indecency with a child charge

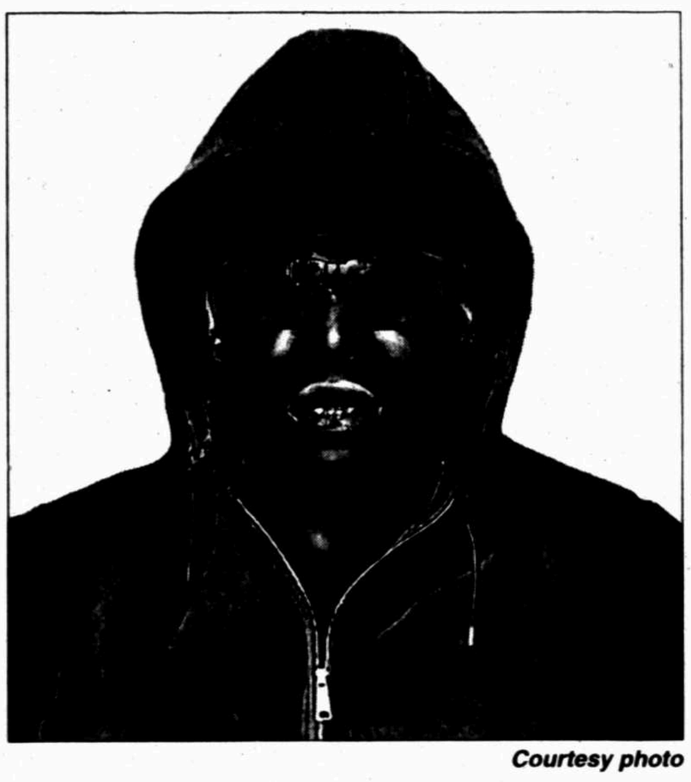

A Midland ISD substitute teacher, Juan Leovardo Melendez, 62, was arrested Thursday by the Midland Police Department on a charge of indecency with a child at an elementary school.

City of Midland public information officer Sara Higgins said Melendez was transported from an MISD elementary school to the police station where he was arrested.

"Because of the circumstances surrounding this case, I will not give any more information, but I did want you to know this had occurred," MISD Superintendent Ryder Warren said.

FBI releases sketch of bank robbery suspect

Courtesy photo

The FBI released this sketch Thursday of a man they suspect robbed Compass Bank in Odessa.

The FBI has released a sketch and details of a man wanted in an Odessa bank robbery.

The robbery occurred at about 11:30 a.m. Oct. 11 at the Compass Bank, 1330 East Eighth St., where a man approached a teller with a plastic bag and a note, demanded money and said he had a gun, according to an FBI press release.

The man left the bank with an undisclosed amount of money and fled on foot in an unknown direction. No one was injured in the robbery.

The man is described as a black male in his late 30s, about 5 feet, 6 inches tall, with a thin build and braided hair. He was seen wearing a black hat, a dark gray hooded sweatshirt and prescription glasses beneath sunglasses. He also had gold-colored trim around his front teeth, according to the press release.

The FBI and Odessa Police Department are investigating the case. Anyone who was in the vicinity of the bank and/or has information regarding the robbery is asked to contact the FBI at 432-570-0255 or Crime Stoppers at 432-333-TIPS.

Law enforcement continue search for fugitive after raid

Several law enforcement agencies are looking for a Midland fugitive after raiding a building where he was last seen.

The Lone Star Fugitive Task Force is looking for Joseph Caddell, 37, who is wanted on a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Caddell

Midland County SWAT and U.S. marshals were dispatched at about 9:30 a.m. to a building in the 5400 block of East County Road 75, said Gary Painter, Midland County sheriff.

Authorities were stationed there for several hours as the building's front door was secured from the inside, Painter said. The authorities deployed tear gas into the building after creating an opening in the front door before entering the building. Caddell was not found on the property and is still at large, Painter said.

Painter said a robot also was deployed to investigate the area before breaching the building. He said houses in the area were evacuated as a precautionary measure during the incident.

Anyone with information about Caddell is asked to call Midland County Sheriff's Office at 688-4600 or Midland Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

MPD: Man arrested after infant tested positive for cocaine

A second arrest was made Wednesday after Midland Memorial Hospital officials found cocaine in a 23-month-old boy's bloodstream, according to court documents.

Andre D. Harris, 20, of Midland, was being held Thursday on a $100,000 bond for a state jail felony charge of abandoning or endangering a child with criminal negligence.

Donishia S. Bowers, 20, was previously arrested on Oct. 11 and was being held on a $10,000 bond for a second-degree felony charge of abandoning or endangering a child with imminent danger of bodily injury. She posted bond and was released on Sunday.

Harris

A Midland detective responded to the MMH emergency room at about 5 p.m. Friday after cocaine was found in the boy's blood.

The child, who had suffered a seizure, had been transported to MMH by his mother after he appeared to have ingested something and was acting "irregular," according to Bowers' arrest report.

Bowers left the boy and his 3-year-old brother in her bedroom while she took some toilet paper to her boyfriend. When she returned, she said the boy was making gestures toward his mouth and was drooling all over himself.

The detective found a small portion of a plastic bag containing cocaine residue on the dresser. The residue on the dresser also tested positive for traces of cocaine. The detective said he also found a loaded, .38-caliber revolver in a box on top of a bedroom counter.

The detective said he knew Bowers' boyfriend, Harris, sold narcotics. Bowers said she did not know that the bag with cocaine residue was on the dresser but did not seem surprised that the cocaine was in her room or that her son ingested it. He said Bowers did not seem concerned that a loaded firearm was in her bedroom within her children's reach, according to the affidavit.

The affidavit does not state if Harris is the children's fathe.

If convicted, Bowers faces up to 20 years in prison. Harris faces up to two years in prison.

MPD: Man pulls knife on clerk during assault, found hiding in a field

A Stanton man was arrested in a field Thursday after he pulled out a knife during a robbery at a 7-Eleven convenience store, according to court documents.

Cody Lee Wood, 30, was being held Thursday on a $76,100 bond for a first-degree felony charge of aggravated robbery and a class A misdemeanor charge of theft between $500 and $1,500.

Wood

Midland police responded to the robbery at about 12:54 a.m. Thursday in the 110 block of West Wadley Avenue.

The alleged victim said Wood came into the 7-Eleven store and displayed a knife to the clerk and demanded money from the register. Wood took about $80 cash and fled the scene in a white pickup. Wood was located at about 2:26 a.m. hiding in a field behind the Stripes convenience store at 2109 S. Midkiff Road, according to his arrest affidavit.

Wood was arrested on a theft warrant and he confessed to being involved in the robbery, according to the report.

If convicted, Wood faces five to 99 years in prison for the first-degree felony charge and up to one year in prison for the misdemeanor charge.

Study: Good night's sleep cleans out gunk in brain

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — When we sleep, our brains get rid of gunk that builds up while we're awake, suggests a study that may provide new clues to treat Alzheimer's disease and other disorders.

This cleaning was detected in the brains of sleeping mice, but scientists said there's reason to think it happens in people too.

If so, the finding may mean that for people with dementia, and other mind disorders, "sleep would perhaps be even more important in slowing the progression of further damage," Dr. Clete Kushida, medical director of the Stanford Sleep Medicine Center, said in an email.

Kushida did not participate in the study, which appears in today's issue of the journal Science.

People who don't get enough shut-eye have trouble learning and making decisions, and are slower to react. But despite decades of research, scientists can't agree on the basic purpose of sleep. Reasons range from processing memory, saving energy to regulating the body.

The latest work, led by scientists at the University of Rochester Medical Center, adds fresh evidence to a long-standing view: When we close our eyes, our brains go on a cleaning spree.

The team previously found a plumbing network in mouse brains that flushes out cellular waste. For the new study, the scientists injected the brains of mice with beta-amyloid, a substance that builds up in Alzheimer's disease, and followed its movement. They determined that it was removed faster from the brains of sleeping mice than awake mice.

Associated Press

In this undated photo provided by the University of Rochester Medical Center, Dr. Maiken Nedergaard, left, points to images of brain scans of mice joined by her colleague Lulu Xie, of the University of Rochester Medical Center.

The team also noticed that brain cells tend to shrink during sleep, which widens the space between the cells. This allows waste to pass through that space more easily.

Though the work involved mouse brains, lead researcher Dr. Maiken Nedergaard said this plumbing system also exists in dogs and baboons, and it's logical to think that the human brain also clears away toxic substances. Nedergaard said the next step is to look for the process in human brains.

In an accompanying editorial, neuroscientist Suzana Herculano-Houzel of the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro said scientists have recently taken a heightened interest in the spaces between brain cells, where junk is flushed out.

It's becoming clearer that "sleep is likely to be a brain state in which several important housekeeping functions take place," she said in an email.

The study was funded by the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke. In a statement, program director Jim Koenig said the finding could lead to new approaches for treating a range of brain diseases.

DANIELS

rallying the droves of those who saw him in his younger days and those who only have heard stories of those younger days. He finished the evening by playing the most popular tune of his career, "The Devil Went Down to Georgia."

Possibly the most emotional moment of the show was when Daniels, spotlighted alone on his stool, played an acoustic version of and old Christian hymn called "How Great Thou Art."

Daniels also took time to praise Johnny Cash for going out of his way to help Daniels get into the music business when he had first moved to Nashville. Daniels followed the heartfelt speech with a full-band rendition of Cash's famous "Folsom Prison Blues."

The band's familiarity with one another was obvious. At one point, Daniels broke a fiddle string just as he was about to begin a solo, and the rest of the band improvised and finished the song seamlessly.

Country duo Sundy Best opened the show, featuring a guitar and box drum. The band's Appalachian influences and unassuming presence easily won over the eager crowd to begin the evening.

The concert sold close to 70 percent of the available seats.

SURVEY

with 79.9 percent last year.

PDAP administers the survey annually, and results from the 2013 survey were presented Thursday by REDS Co-Director Neely Kim.

Though those in attendance were troubled by the results, Kim reminded community leaders that it often takes years to change cultural norms and perception.

"In community work, things take a long time to change and sometimes the needle only moves a little bit," Kim said, citing how many years it took for smoking to be considered harmful and for the public's perception regarding harm to change.

PDAP offers free presentations on a variety of topics including drug, alcohol and tobacco use to public and private schools each year, said Kim Henderson PDAP's prevention program director. Teachers and counselors simply have to call PDAP to schedule a presenter.

PDAP is scheduled to spend a significant amount of time in schools talking about drug prevention during Red Ribbon Week, which kicked off Thursday in Austin and runs Oct. 23 through 31.

Earlier this year, the Midland Coalition, which is run by PDAP, appointed a committee to organize a community-wide educationally based campaign on the effects of marijuana use, Henderson said.

The group plans to host a kick-off event in January and target different segments of the community — elementary-aged students, teenagers, elderly and ethnic groups — throughout the year, Henderson said.

For more information about the results from this year's survey, call PDAP at 685-3645.

AMERICANS LACK UNDERSTANDING OF KEY ENERGY ISSUES, POLL SAYS

When it comes to natural gas, Americans are enthusiastic. But when it comes to the hydraulic fracturing process that makes it possible — not so much, according to a national survey on energy issues released Thursday.

In the poll conducted by the University of Texas, more than 80 percent of respondents said they want the federal government to push development of natural gas.

But among the 40 percent of survey respondents who said they were familiar with hydraulic fracturing, only 38 percent supported the technology, down from 45 percent six months ago.

The conflicting responses to the survey reveal persistent confusion over the renaissance of natural gas production in the United States. Oil and natural gas production has soared in the last five years, driven largely by advances in hydraulic fracturing and horizontal drilling.

"What we're seeing is the real disconnect between energy and the American public," said Sheril Kirshenbaum, energy poll director for the University of Texas, in a written statement. "In some instances, ideology may influence attitudes, but there's unquestionably a lack of understanding across a broad swath of energy issues that affect each of us."

Critics say hydraulic fracturing — injecting water, sand and chemicals into reservoirs to force out oil and gas — requires excessive water use and might cause environmental harm. Supporters praise it as a way to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by providing an abundance of natural gas, which emits less carbon than other fossil fuels when it burns.

The survey respondents tied their support for natural gas mainly to its lower carbon emissions, with more than half saying it's beneficial for that reason.

They're also enthusiastic about renewable energy. Nearly 9 out of 10 said the government should promote renewable technologies.

However, the poll found that Americans have become less engaged in energy issues overall. About 62 percent of those surveyed in September said energy issues are important, compared to 67 percent a year earlier. And the percentage who said they are interested in energy issues dropped to 47 percent in September 2013 from 52 percent a year earlier.

Still, financial concerns remain at the forefront. Nearly three out of four respondents expect the portion of their household budget spent on energy to increase within the next year.

The online survey, which the University of Texas has conducted every six months since September 2011, polled 2,144 people weighted to reflect national demographics between Sept. 5 and Sept. 23.

Panel: Discharge Marine captain in urination case

The Associated Press

QUANTICO, Va. — A U.S. Marine Corps panel is recommending that an officer be forcibly discharged for failing to supervise a group of snipers who posed for a video while urinating on the corpses of Taliban fighters in Afghanistan.

The panel of three colonels issued its ruling Thursday against Capt. James V. Clement after a three-day hearing at Marine Corps Base Quantico. The panel found Clement's performance of duty was substandard. Two lieutenant generals will now review the recommendation and determine whether Clement should be given an honorable discharge.

The video widely viewed on YouTube shows four Marines from Camp Lejeune, N.C., in full combat gear urinating on the bodies of three Afghans in July 2011. One Marine looks down at the bodies and jokes, "Have a good day, buddy."

It took place during a counterinsurgency operation in the Musa Qala district of Helmand province and caused outrage in the Middle East and received international condemnation.

Defense lawyer John M. Dowd maintains Clement, who was not present during the incident, is a victim of political correctness and improper meddling by top officials at the Pentagon.

"The action by the board is contrary to the overwhelming evidence that Capt. Clement did an outstanding job as the radio operator on a large and very dangerous sniper patrol which was a complete success," Dowd said, adding that 12 enemy combatants were killed with no Marine casualties.

Dowd said Clement will pursue all administrative and judicial remedies to overturn the decision.

Three enlisted Marines shown in the video have already been punished.

Staff Sgt. Edward W. Deptola pleaded guilty to multiple charges in January and was demoted one rank to sergeant.

Staff Sgt. Joseph W. Chamblin, who pleaded guilty in December, was reduced in rank to sergeant and fined $500.

Sgt. Robert W. Richards pleaded guilty in August and was reduced in rank to corporal.

Five other Marines were given non-judicial punishments

The urination video surfaced on YouTube around the same time as other incidents that infuriated many Afghans. American troops were caught up in controversies over burning Muslim holy books, posing for photos with insurgents' bloodied remains and an alleged massacre of 16 Afghan villagers by a soldier.

The United States now has 52,000 troops in Afghanistan. The U.S. and its NATO allies agreed in November 2010 that they would withdraw all their combat troops by the end of 2014, but they haven't decided on the scope of future missions in the country and the size of any force remaining after that.

New charges filed in Blackwater shootings

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department on Thursday brought fresh charges against four former Blackwater Worldwide security contractors, resurrecting an internationally charged case over a deadly 2007 shooting on the streets of Baghdad.

A new grand jury indictment charges the men, who were hired to guard U.S. diplomats, in a shooting that inflamed anti-American sentiment abroad and heightened diplomatic sensitivities amid an ongoing war.

The guards are accused of opening fire in busy Nisoor Square on Sept. 16, 2007. Seventeen Iraqi civilians died, including women and children. Prosecutors say the heavily armed Blackwater convoy launched an unprovoked attack using sniper fire, machine guns and grenade launchers. Defense lawyers argue their clients are innocent men who were ambushed by Iraqi insurgents.

The guards were charged with manslaughter and weapons violations in 2008, but a federal judge the following year dismissed the case, ruling the Justice Department withheld evidence from a grand jury and violated the guards' constitutional rights.

The dismissal outraged many Iraqis, who said it showed Americans considered themselves above the law. Vice President Joe Biden, speaking in Baghdad in 2010, expressed his "personal regret" for the shootings in declaring that the U.S. would appeal the court decision.

A federal appeals court reinstated the case in 2011, saying now-retired Judge Ricardo Urbina had wrongly interpreted the law. Prosecutors again presented evidence before a grand jury, and U.S. District Judge Royce Lamberth gave the Justice Department until Monday to decide what to do with the case.

The defendants include Dustin Heard, a former U.S. Marine; Evan Liberty, a former U.S. Marine; Nick Slatten, a former U.S. Army sergeant; and Paul Slough, a U.S. Army veteran.

Slatten is charged with 14 counts of voluntary manslaughter and 16 counts of attempt to commit manslaughter; Liberty and Heard are charged with 13 counts of voluntary manslaughter and 16 counts of attempt to commit manslaughter; and Slough is charged with 13 counts of voluntary manslaughter and 18 counts of attempt to commit manslaughter. All four were also charged with one count of using and discharging a firearm during and in relation to a crime of violence.

The defendants are charged under the Military Extraterritorial Jurisdiction Act, a statute that allows the government to prosecute certain government employees and military contractors for crimes committed overseas. Defense lawyers have argued that the statute does not apply in this case since the guards were working as State Department contractors, not for the military.

Common Application says it has fixed lags

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Computer problems have plagued a popular online college application system, causing admissions delays. But operators of the program said Thursday that they had fixed a large chunk of the problem.

After a rocky roll-out of a new online computer program, Common Application said it fixed two big snags that had left students across the country struggling to file applications before early admission deadlines.

Common Application allows students to apply to multiple schools at once; more than 500 colleges and universities accept it, and it is run by a nonprofit with the same name.

It has been inundated with user complaints about technical glitches since a new online system was rolled out Aug. 1. Some students have complained about being unable to log in and to tell if their payment had been accepted. College admissions offices have had problems retrieving documents they need within the system.

In response, some colleges and universities such as Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C., have delayed early admissions deadlines.

Scott Anderson, senior director for policy with College Application, said the organization made two major fixes to problems Wednesday night. One fix related to payment problems and the other to difficulty some students had using the system with a Chrome browser.

Anderson said they anticipate about 800,000 students will use Common Application this year — about a 10 percent increase from last year — and already more students have successfully submitted applications this year than last year at this time.

"For applicants going forward, I think we really have addressed the major issues that they are seeing," he said.

Ashley Memory, senior assistant director of admissions at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, which extended its early action deadline about a week to Monday, said the admissions staff already has noticed that things have been going better since Wednesday. She said they are having daily meetings to discuss the situation and could extend the deadline again if necessary, but they are hopeful they won't need to.

"We have noticed that things have been going smoother, and we have been able to upload about 10,000 applications into our system," Memory said.

On Thursday, however, many students were still posting complaints on the organization's Facebook site related to technical problems. Some advised others to submit an application in the middle of the night to avoid problems.

Ruth Lohmeyer, a school counselor at Lincoln Northeast High in Lincoln, Neb., said she's telling her students not to take any chances. She's warning them to give themselves plenty of time to submit an application.

Debate about Redskins' name is all about usage

■ Sometimes language evolves. That should be the case with the name of the football team.

CHARLES KRAUTHAMMER
Washington Post Writers Group

In the matter of the (Washington) Redskins. I don't like being lectured by sportscasters about ethnic sensitivity. Or advised by the president of the United States about changing team names. Or blackmailed by tribal leaders playing the race card.

I don't like the language police ensuring that no one anywhere gives offense to anyone about anything. And I fully credit the claim of Redskins owner Dan Snyder and many passionate fans that they intend no malice or prejudice and that "Redskins" has a proud 80-year history they wish to maintain.

The fact is, however, that words don't stand still. They evolve.

Fifty years ago the preferred, most respectful term for African-Americans was Negro. The word appears 15 times in Martin Luther King's "I have a dream" speech. Negro replaced a long list of insulting words in common use during decades of public and legal discrimination.

And then, for complicated historical reasons (having to do with the black power and "black is beautiful" movements), usage changed. The preferred term is now black or African-American. With a rare few legacy exceptions, Negro carries an unmistakably patronizing and demeaning tone.

If you were detailing the ethnic composition of Congress, you wouldn't say: "Well, to start with, there are 44 Negroes." If you'd been asleep for 50 years, you might. But upon being informed how the word had changed in nuance, you would stop using it and choose another.

And here's the key point: You would stop not because of the language police. Not because you might incur a Bob Costas harangue. Not because the president would wag a finger. But simply because the word was tainted, freighted with negative connotations with which you would not want to be associated.

Proof? You wouldn't even use the word in private, where being harassed for political incorrectness is not an issue.

Similarly, regarding the further ethnic breakdown of Congress, you wouldn't say: "And by my count, there are two redskins." It's inconceivable, because no matter how the word was used 80 years ago, it carries invidious connotations today.

I know there are surveys that say that most Native Americans aren't bothered by the word. But that's not the point. My objection is not rooted in pressure from various minorities or fear of public polls or public scolds.

Growing up, I thought "gyp" was simply a synonym for "cheat," and used it accordingly. It was only when I was an adult that I learned that gyp was short for gypsy. At which point, I stopped using it.

Not because I took a poll of Roma to find out if they were offended. If some mysterious disease had carried away every gypsy on the planet, and there were none left to offend, I still wouldn't use it.

Why? Simple decency. I wouldn't want to use a word that defines a people — living or dead, offended or not — in a most demeaning way. It's not a question of who or how many had their feelings hurt, but whether you want to associate yourself with a word that, for whatever historical reason having nothing to do with you, carries inherently derogatory connotations.

Years ago, the word "retarded" emerged as the enlightened substitute for such cruel terms as "feeble-minded" or "mongoloid." Today, however, it is considered a form of denigration, having been replaced by the clumsy but now conventional "developmentally disabled." There is no particular logic to this evolution. But it's a social fact. Unless you're looking to give gratuitous offense, you don't call someone "retarded."

Let's recognize that there are many people of good will for whom "Washington Redskins" contains sentimental and historical attachment — and not an ounce of intended animus. So let's turn down the temperature. What's at issue is not high principle but adaptation to a change in linguistic nuance. A close call, though I personally would err on the side of not using the word if others are available.

How about Skins, a contraction already applied to the Washington football team? And that carries a sports connotation, as in skins vs. shirts in pickup basketball.

Choose whatever name you like. But let's go easy on the other side. We're not talking Brown v. Board of Education here. There's no demand that Native Americans man the team's offensive line. This is a matter of usage — and usage changes. If you shot a remake of 1934's "The Gay Divorcee," you'd have to change that title too.

Not because the lady changed, but because the word did.

Hail Skins.

GUEST VIEW

West Texans, UTPB to miss Jack Ladd

Odessa American

Jack Ladd was a beloved mentor of students and a man who helped lead the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in ways that won't easily be replaced.

His death on Tuesday leaves our part of the world a little less bright than it was before.

The charismatic Ladd was always quick with a smile and a handshake to the many people he encountered during life. His astute leadership at UTPB and focus on the energy industry are why the business and enfineering programs at UTPB are top-notch.

Ladd joined UTPB in 2004 as the director of the John Ben Shepperd Public Leadership Institute, and by July 2007, he was dean of the School of Business.

His leadership saw the school become the College of Business and Engineering following accreditation in business with AACSB International and later with ABET for the mechanical and petroleum engineering programs.

As UTPB President David Watts put it, it was Ladd's expertise and leadership in both engineering and business that led to a focus on the energy industry. He was much beloved by faculty and students as a caring mentor who urged others on to success.

Watts called Ladd's impact on students, faculty and staff "enormous."

Ladd is also noted locally for bringing former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to Midland College in October 2006 as part of the JBS Roundtable Series.

Ladd was a lawyer who attended Texas Tech but finished his education at the University of Texas at Austin with a bachelor's in business administration.

He was a former partner of the Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder firm in Midland and a family man who couldn't be kept down even by a massive stroke in 1998. Rehabilitation at HealthSouth in Midland allowed him to rebuild his strength.

His early years were spent in Midland where he became an Eagle Scout, the highest of Scouting's honors. Later he would win the Silver Beaver Award and the Order of the Arrow, God and Country.

He spent his life wearing many hats well — volunteer, educator, attorney, dad, businessman. He will be missed by both Midland and Odessa and certainly by the UTPB faculty.

Ted Cruz goes down swinging

■ The Republican darling resembled a sore loser taking out fellow party members and setting back the conservative movement.

DANA MILBANK
Washington Post Writers Group

Ted Cruz did not lose gracefully. The young senator from Texas, after just nine months on the job, had managed to drag down his Republican Party to historic unpopularity. But as Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., went to the Senate floor Wednesday afternoon to announce a deal that would begin to repair the damage Cruz inflicted, the renegade couldn't resist one more poke at his leadership.

As McConnell was speaking on the floor about his compromise to end the government shutdown and to avoid a federal default, Cruz marched up to the bank of TV cameras outside the Senate chamber to deliver his own statement. CNN's Dana Bash told him that the news networks were airing McConnell's speech live. "Do you want to wait until the leaders are done?" she asked.

Cruz did not want to wait. He launched right into a condemnation of the deal McConnell had negotiated. "Unfortunately, once again, it appears the Washington establishment is refusing to listen to the American people," the Texan intoned, his protruding chin bouncing as the vitriol poured from the lips above it. "The United States Senate has stayed with the traditional approach of the Washington establishment of maintaining the status quo."

CNN pulled away from McConnell when the sore loser began talking.

The amount of wreckage Cruz has caused in such a short time is truly awe-inspiring. He has damaged his party, hurt the economy, lowered the nation's standing and set back the conservative cause. But appearing at the Capitol on Wednesday morning, he wore a broad smile as reporters and cameras surrounded him to learn what further mayhem he was planning.

"Will you filibuster?" called out Nancy Cordes of CBS News.

"I'm heading to this meeting now," he replied, referring to a session held by McConnell outlining the compromise.

"Was your fight against Obamacare worth it?" asked Politico's Seung Min Kim.

"As I said, I'm heading to this meeting now."

He walked slowly — the better to savor the attention — as reporters clamored for information. "Will you try to block this?" "What's your plan?" Reporters and photographers slammed into one another. A tour group was pressed up against a wall. "Oh my God!" a woman screamed.

Cruz's stroll across the second floor of the Capitol was a tour of the disruption he had caused: Past the office of Sen. John Cornyn, the fellow Texas Republican whose re-election Cruz has refused to endorse; alongside the Senate chamber, where he spoke for 21 straight hours last month; past the office of McConnell, whose leadership he had undermined; and down the hall toward the office of House Speaker John Boehner, of Ohio, against whom Cruz had encouraged a rebellion. At a dinner at Tortilla Coast restaurant Monday night, he encouraged House Republicans to resist Boehner's attempts at compromise. "Cruz-Led Conservatives Put Boehner in Double Bind" was Wednesday's headline in Roll Call.

As they filed in to hear McConnell's compromise, Republican senators made little effort to conceal their frustration with Cruz. "This has been a very bad two weeks for the Republican brand, for conservatism," said Sen. Lindsey Graham. of South Carolina.

Cruz did make one gesture that acknowledged he may have gone too far: He said he wouldn't use procedural hurdles to delay a vote on the debt-limit bill, a move that could have forced the nation into default. "I never had any intention of delaying the timing of this vote," he told a clump of reporters as he emerged from the Senate session, even though he had declined to disavow such a delay when asked only an hour earlier.

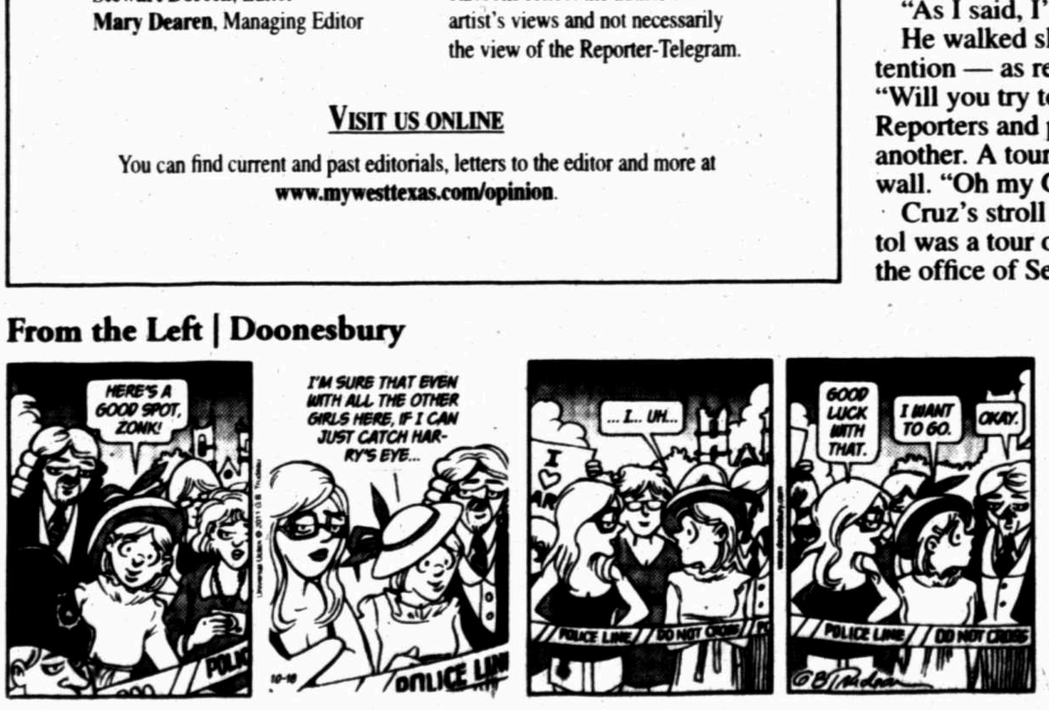

But otherwise, Cruz refused to admit defeat. "The American people rose up and spoke with an overwhelming voice and at least at this stage Washington isn't listening to them," he said. "But this battle will continue." (Actually, what's overwhelming is the 70 percent of Americans who think Republicans put politics ahead of the country in the shutdown.)

Cruz left the reporters after a few minutes, but when he noticed the TV lights and microphones outside the Senate chamber, he stopped and reversed himself. After repeating his statement for the cameras, he took a question from CNN's Bash, who pointed out that there has been "a lot of bruising political warfare internally, and you've got nothing for it."

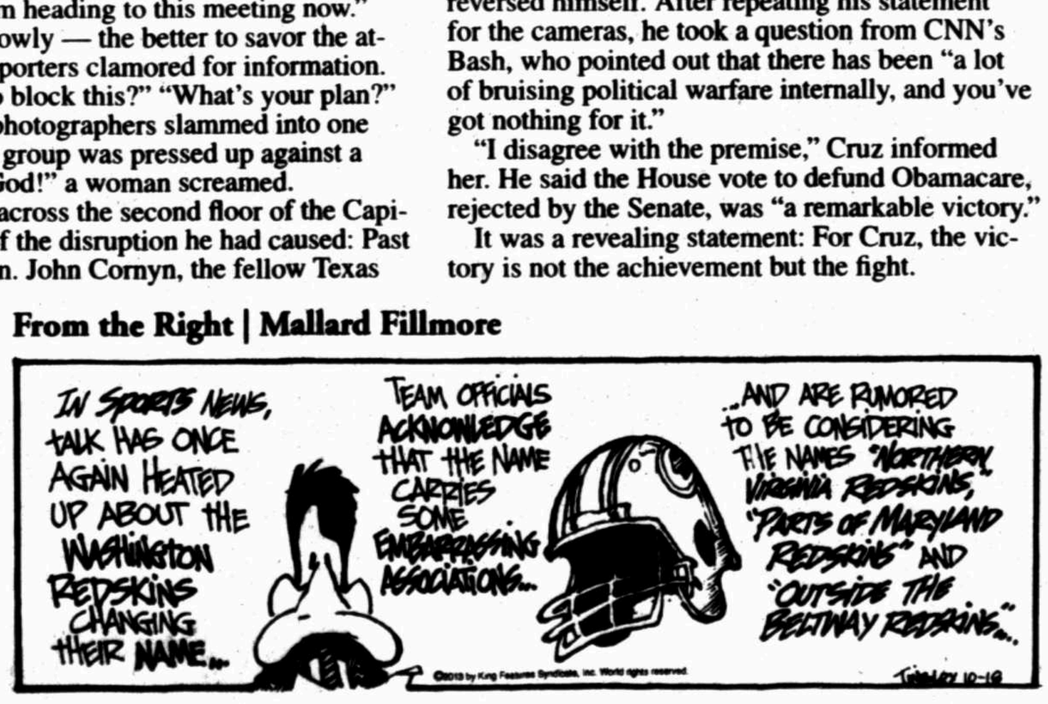

"I disagree with the premise," Cruz informed her. He said the House vote to defund Obamacare, rejected by the Senate, was "a remarkable victory."

It was a revealing statement: For Cruz, the victory is not the achievement but the fight.

Amid GOP struggles, Jeb Bush focuses on education

Associated Press

BOSTON — As his party struggles through the latest Washington crisis, former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush is calling on elected leaders to improve a national education system he says is "woefully behind the times."

Bush, who has not ruled out a Republican presidential bid in 2016, endorsed school vouchers, performance-based pay for teachers and the end of teacher tenure among other reforms on Thursday, the first day of an education summit in Boston hosted by his nonprofit organization. He also chided critics of the so-called common core curriculum, which sets uniform benchmarks for reading, writing and math.

"What I want to hear from them is more than just opposition. I want to hear their solutions for the hodgepodge of dumbed-down state standards that have created group mediocrity in our schools," Bush said. "Criticisms and conspiracy theories are easy attention grabbers. Solutions are hard work."

Bush said the GOP should focus on the success of Republican governors and not on Washington, where party leaders are plagued by infighting. Polls suggest that Americans overwhelmingly disapprove of congressional Republicans' handling of the latest budget standoff.

"Republicans win when we focus on economic growth that creates jobs and when we reform how government works so more Americans have a chance to pursue their dreams," he said "The mirror opposite of what is going on in D.C. is the reform and ideas coming out of the states."

Bush is focusing on education policy in particular as he weighs his political future.

"Public education has become a labyrinth of political, bureaucratic and union empires that depend on a captive population of students and minimal quality control," he said. "Empires do not go quietly into the night."

Obama's budget win has strings attached

■ ANALYSIS

By Julie Pace
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — By most measures, President Barack Obama emerged far stronger than his Republican adversaries in Washington's latest fiscal fight. He gave away virtually nothing and his hard-line tactics exposed deep divisions among Republicans and growing public frustration with the GOP.

But Obama's victory came with strings attached. Under his watch, big swaths of the federal government were shuttered for 16 days, forcing hundreds of thousands of workers off the job and restricting many services. The nation was brought to the brink of a default for the second time in two years. And Congress' last-minute deal generated yet another round of looming deadlines on the same issues, with no guarantee that Republican opposition to Obama's objectives will be dampened in any way.

"What comes next is very unpredictable," said Steve Schmidt, a Republican strategist. "The notion that this group of people is going to be chastened by this, while it seems obvious, is uncertain."

Indeed, there's little consensus among Republicans about how to proceed in the aftermath of the budget crisis. Some conservatives who demanded changes to Obama's health care law in exchange for funding the government have signaled they're ready to dig in for another fight. Among them is Kansas Rep. Tim Huelskamp, who said Republicans may have "lost the battle, but we're going to win the war."

But other GOP lawmakers are demanding that their party make a course correction.

"Hopefully, the lesson is to stop this foolish childishness," said John McCain, the longtime Arizona senator.

Republicans will have to quickly settle on a strategy. The deal that ended this month's standoff only keeps the government open through Jan. 15 and extends borrowing authority through Feb. 7, though emergency measures may give the administration another month before reaching the debt limit. The agreement also requires bipartisan negotiators to issue a report by Dec. 13 on broader budget issues such as spending levels, deficit reduction and entitlement reforms — all matters over which the White House and congressional Republicans have long been at odds.

What happens during this next round of deadlines will help clarify whether Obama's October win has done anything to alter the political dynamic in Washington or whether it was an isolated achievement.

The White House said the president is entering the next phase of the debate with a similarly unyielding strategy. Aides said he is willing to make concessions as part of a larger budget deal but won't let Republicans make funding the government or lifting the debt ceiling contingent on certain outcomes.

Some GOP leaders had assumed Obama would abandon that hard-line stance during the most recent debate. Many were taking their lessons from the last budget and debt fight in 2011, when Obama indeed made concessions to keep the government open and avoid a default.

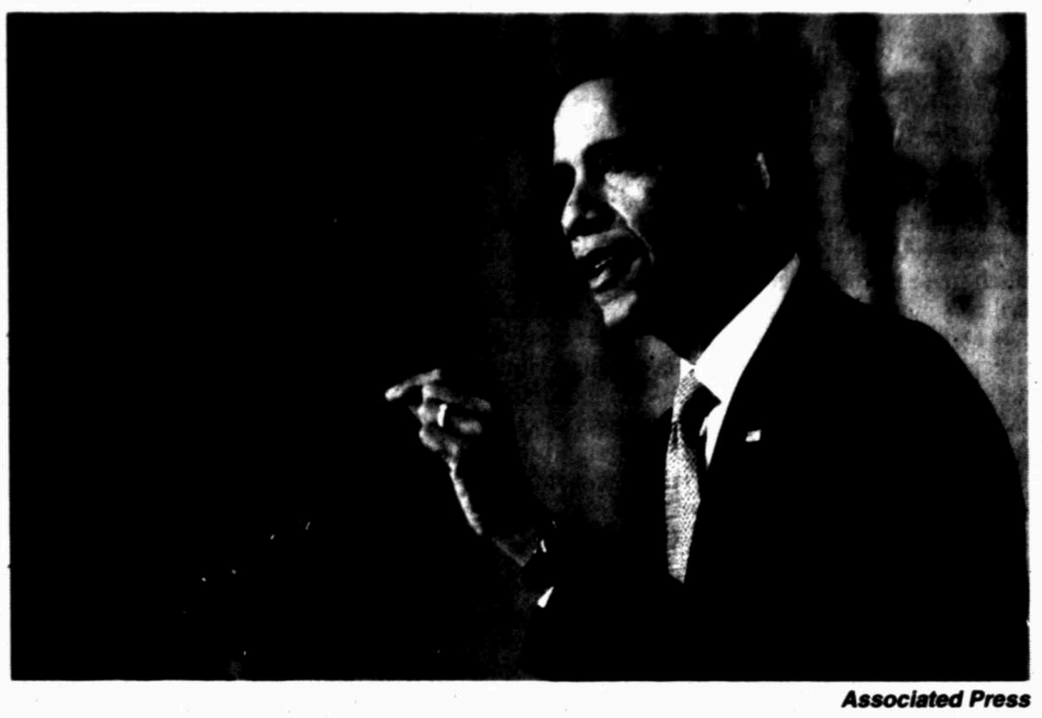

But Republicans misread how political shifts in Washington over the past two years had affected the president, and in particular how Obama's resolve had been stiffened by the fact he doesn't have to run for office again. Staunch conservatives also ignored warnings from more moderate Republicans, who argued that Obama would never agree to changes in the health care law that remains his signature legislative achievement.

"A fundamental flaw — and probably the biggest flaw — was that they were negotiating for something that wasn't really negotiable," said Patrick Griffin, who served as President Bill Clinton's legislative affairs director during the 1995 government shutdown.

The start of the government shutdown coincided with the start of sign-ups for the "Obamacare" law's health insurance exchanges — a rollout that was marred by widespread problems. In an ironic twist, the Republican insistence on shutting down the government in order to make changes to the law wound up overshadowing its glitches and a glaring embarrassment for the president.

The result of the Republican miscalculations: a wave of public opinion polls showing that the GOP took the biggest hit as the budget war dragged on. A Washington Post-ABC News survey released Monday found 74 percent disapproved of the way the Republicans in Congress were handling negotiations over the federal budget, up 11 points since just before the shutdown began. Views on how Obama and congressional Democrats handled the budget battle tilted negative but did not change significantly over the course of the shutdown.

Despite their dour approval ratings, Republicans may again try to test whether Obama is willing to hold his hard line in the new year. But Obama — long a believer in the power of public opinion — is banking that the anger Americans aimed at Republicans in recent weeks will persuade them to shift course.

President Barack Obama speaks in the State Dining Room of the White House in Washington on Thursday. Lawmakers voted Wednesday to avoid a financial default and reopen the government after a 16-day partial shutdown.

1.8M-year-old skull gives glimpse of our evolution

Associated Press

DMANISI, Georgia — The discovery of a 1.8-million-year-old skull of a human ancestor buried under a medieval Georgian village provides a vivid picture of early evolution and indicates our family tree may have fewer branches than some believe, scientists say.

The fossil is the most complete pre-human skull uncovered. With other partial remains previously found at the rural site, it gives researchers the earliest evidence of human ancestors moving out of Africa and spreading north to the rest of the world, according to a study published Thursday in the journal Science.

The skull and other remains offer a glimpse of a population of pre-humans of various sizes living at the same time — something that scientists had not seen before for such an ancient era. This diversity bolsters one of two competing theories about the way our early ancestors evolved, spreading out more like a tree than a bush.

Nearly all of the previous pre-human discoveries have been fragmented bones, scattered over time and locations — like a smattering of random tweets of our evolutionary history. The findings at Dmanisi are more complete, weaving more of a short story. Before the site was found, the movement from Africa was put at about 1 million years ago.

When examined with the earlier Georgian finds, the skull "shows that this special immigration out of Africa happened much earlier than we thought and a much more primitive group did it," said study lead author David Lordkipanidze, director of the Georgia National Museum. "This is important to understanding human evolution."

For years, some scientists have said humans evolved from only one or two species, much like a tree branches out from a trunk, while others say the process was more like a bush with several offshoots that went nowhere.

Even bush-favoring scientists say these findings show one single species nearly 2 million years ago at the former Soviet republic site. But they disagree that the same conclusion can be said for bones found elsewhere, such as Africa. However, Lordkipanidze and colleagues point out that the skulls found in Georgia are different sizes but are considered to be the same species. So, they reason, it's likely the various skulls found in different places and times in Africa may not be different species, but variations in one species.

To see how a species can vary, just look in the mirror, they said.

"Danny DeVito, Michael Jordan and Shaquille O'Neal are the same species," Lordkipanidze said.

The adult male skull found wasn't from our species, Homo sapiens. It was from an ancestral species — in the same genus or class called Homo — that led to modern humans. Scientists say the Dmanisi population is likely an early part of our long-lived primary ancestral species, Homo erectus.

Tim White of the University of California, Berkeley, wasn't part of the study but praised it as "the first-good evidence of what these expanding hominids looked like and what they were doing."

Fred Spoor at the Max Planck Institute in Germany, a competitor and proponent of a busy family tree with many species disagreed with the study's overall conclusion, but he lauded the Georgia skull discovery as critical and even beautiful.

"It really shows the process of evolution in action," he said.

Spoor said it seems to have captured a crucial point in the evolutionary process where our ancestors transitioned from Homo habilis to Homo erectus — although the study authors said that depiction is going a bit too far.

The researchers found the first part of the skull, a large jaw, below a medieval fortress in 2000. Five years later — on Lordkipanidze's 42nd birthday — they unearthed the well-preserved skull, gingerly extracted it, putting it into a cloth-lined case and popped champagne. It matched the jaw perfectly. They were probably separated when our ancestor lost a fight with a hungry carnivore, which pulled apart his skull and jaw bones, Lordkipanidze said.

The skull was from an adult male just shy of 5 feet with a massive jaw and big teeth, but a small brain, implying limited thinking capability, said study co-author Marcia Ponce de Leon of the University of Zurich. It also seems to be the point where legs are getting longer, for walking upright, and smaller hips, she said.

"This is a strange combination of features that we didn't know before in early Homo," Ponce de Leon said.

Associated Press

David Lordkipanidze, director of the Georgia National Museum, displays the ancient skull and jaws of a pre-human ancestor at the National Museum in Tbilisi, Georgia, on Oct. 2.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

FOOD DRIVES
Several local groups have held food drives or are planning food drives to benefit the Jubilee Center. Volunteers have collected canned goods at the military recruiting station, Midland Christian School, First Presbyterian Church's Fall Festival, Midland RockHounds, Weaver, Rockwater Energy, Midland Downtown Farmers Market, Concho Resources and Hillander School. Food drives are planned at Trinity School and Fannin Terrace Baptist Church Women's Ministry. For more information about Jubilee Center, visit jubileemidland.org.

Who do you think is a good neighbor? Do you know of an individual, business or organization thatrecently has made a significant contribution to the community through service, support or kindness. Report good deeds to Megan Buck at mbuck@mrt.com for inclusion in this space.

IN NEED

DRIVERS NEEDED
American Cancer Society is in need of drivers for the Road to Recovery program in Midland and the surrounding areas. Volunteers will drive people to and from treatment. ACS also is looking for people to register for its CPS-3 research study Nov. 20-21. For more information, visit cancerstudytx.org.

Nonprofit, charitable and religious organizations are constantly in need of volunteers, funds and resources. If you know of an organization in need, email mbuck@mrt.com and we'll help spread the word.

Muslims gather for prayer Tuesday at the Muslim Association of West Texas to celebrate Eid al-Adha.

Muslims celebrate 'Eid al-Adha,' festival of sacrifice

By Ragini Venkatasubban
ragini@mrt.com

Muslims around West Texas gathered Tuesday morning to celebrate "Eid al-Adha," the festival of sacrifice, with prayer and a feast.

"This is the happiest day of the year for Muslims," said Dr. Shihab Diais, imam, or worship leader, of the Muslim Association of West Texas.

The holy day marks the end of the Hajj pilgrimage to Mecca in Saudi Arabia, one of the five pillars of Islam along with faith, fasting, prayer and charity. Muslims gathered at the masjid, their place of worship, on Midland Drive to pray and listen to a sermon by Diais, followed by a feast at Midland restaurant Shahi Tandoor.

The festival is usually celebrated with the sacrifice of an animal — often a goat, sheep, lamb or cow — to give thanks for God's mercy, Diais said. Muslims in North America and Europe either seek out farms or slaughterhouses or send money to their native countries for the sacrifice.

"This is a day in which we remember Allah and all the favors he has bestowed upon us," Diais said.

Eid al-Adha is known as the "second Eid." The first Eid, "Eid al-Fitr," is celebrated at the end of the monthlong sunrise-to-sunset fast of Ramadan, which took place in August.

John G. Hyde Memorial Ride for a Cure planned for Saturday

By Ragini Venkatasubban

Kim Rhodes and John Lewallen are looking forward to the day they don't have to organize the Ride for a Cure anymore.

It would mean a cure for cancer had been found, Rhodes said.

If you go

JOHN G. HYDE MEMORIAL RIDE FOR A CURE 2013
11 a.m. Saturday
Ride begins at DoubleTree by Hilton Hotel, ends at CAF hangar
Free and open to the public

But until that day, the two will continue coordinating the 10-mile ride, which brings together the American Legion Riders of Post 119 for a memorial ride in honor of former Midland Judge John Hyde, who died of cancer in 2011.

The ride began in 2009 and has been held annually ever since. Last year, the ride was re-named "John G. Hyde Memorial Ride for a Cure" to commemorate Hyde, who par-

K-LOVE president speaks at Midland fundraiser

By Ragini Venkatasubban
ragini@mrt.com

Gary Luft moved to Midland 16 years ago, a few months before K-LOVE Christian radio started broadcasting on 90.5 FM.

"It's what we wake up to in the morning," he said. "My wife — it's about all she listens to. We are so blessed by it."

Luft, a math teacher and basketball coach for Midland ISD, said he enjoys the "positive, inspiring tone" of K-LOVE — which president and CEO Mike Novak described as "God's ministry."

Novak visited Midland on Tuesday evening to raise money for future expansion of K-LOVE. The invite-only fundraiser sought donations from people who benefit from listening to K-LOVE and want to help fund the station's expansion into other cities. The event raised $12,000 of the $75,000 goal.

Much of K-LOVE's funding comes from its twice-yearly pledge drives in the spring and fall, Novak said. The fall pledge drive ended a few days ago.

Midland's event was focused on raising money for small markets of 150,000 people or less, said Randy Rich, K-LOVE vice president of philanthropy. No specific area has been identified for expansion yet — funds raised will be put toward future use in any state, not necessarily Texas.

K-LOVE has about 450 signals in the U.S. and 28 in Texas. The newest signal will be added in Kerrville, a city of about 22,000 in central Texas.

Novak said the purpose of K-LOVE is to encourage people toward Jesus Christ, with a focus on music. This is the first time such an event has been held in Midland.

The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

Psalm 46:11 (KJV)

When life throws you a major curveball, like the loss of a job, home or relationship, it can be hard to recover. You may not feel like you can go on, but fortunately, God is there. When all appears to be lost, you can count on God to comfort you and give you the strength to carry on.

Worship at First
FIRST CHURCH
We believe that the encounter with God's love makes a difference, a difference we call "holy." We call that encounter worship, and we believe that worship is at the heart of everything we are, everything we do. It makes a difference in all of our other encounters. Experience God's love at First United Methodist Church.
TRADITIONAL Prefer worship based in tradition? Join us at 8:30 and 10:45 a.m. every Sunday in the sanctuary.
CONTEMPORARY Desire a fresh encounter with Christ through contemporary liturgy and music? Contemporary worship is for you each Sunday at 10:45 a.m. in the fellowship hall.
Our doors are open. Join us this Sunday for many opportunities to encounter Christ.

And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

1 John 4:16

Do you know God's love?
And if you do know
God's love, do you believe in the love
God has for you? If you do, you have something better than all the money in the world. You have the peace of mind that comes with knowing
God is in control of your life and
He has you in the palm of His hand.

Sister Antonia Brenner, 79, known as the "prison angel," waves as she leaves the chapel at the La Mesa State Penitentiary in Tijuana, Mexico, in 2005. Brenner died Thursday after a long illness. She was 86.

Brenner, nun to Tijuana prison inmates, dies at 86

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Antonia Brenner, an American nun who was raised in Beverly Hills and abandoned a life of privilege to live in a notorious Mexican prison, died Thursday. She was 86.

Brenner died at the Tijuana convent of Eudist Servants of the 11th Hour, which she founded, said Sister Anne Marie Maxfield.

Brenner had been ill with a weak heart and myasthenia gravis, a neuromuscular condition.

Brenner first visited La Mesa State Penitentiary in 1965 on a trip to provide medicine and supplies to hospitals in Tijuana, just across the U.S. border from San Diego.

She moved into the prison 12 years later when she was 50, holding individual counseling sessions, leading pep rallies at the prison church, and doing countless small tasks for inmates over decades.

Known as "Prison Angel," she lived in a cell with a view of the guard tower. Located at the end of the dark hallway, it barely had room for a cot, desk and folding chair.

She moved out in her final years as her health declined but remained a regular presence at the prison and a beloved figure among Tijuana's powerful and powerless until she died.

Brenner was born Mary Clarke in Los Angeles, the second of three children. Her father made a fortune selling office supplies to defense contractors during World War II. The family lived in Beverly Hills and had an 11-bedroom, ocean-view summer home in Laguna Beach, south of Los Angeles. Later, she moved to Ventura County, her last home before the prison.

After two failed marriages, Brenner immersed herself in charity work and was deeply influenced by a Los Angeles priest named Anthony Brouwers. When she became a nun in 1977 — 13 years after Brouwers died — she named herself Sister Antonia in his honor.

Brenner didn't hesitate to intervene in thorny conflicts at the prison, which is marred by a history of violent clashes, including one in 2008 that left about two dozen inmates dead.

"I'm effective in riots because I'm not afraid, I just pray and walk into it," she told The Associated Press in 2005. "A woman in a white veil walks in, someone they know loves them. So silence comes, explanation comes and arms go down."

Brenner also counseled and supported prison guards and police, creating Brazos Abiertos, or Open Arms, a group that provides financial support and holiday meals to families of slain Tijuana police officers.

Alberto Licona, Tijuana's deputy police director and president of Brazos Abiertos, said Brenner founded the group in 1997 after an inmate confided in her about killing a police officer and she sought to help the victim's family.

Her biggest legacy is with the murderers, drug smugglers, thieves and other convicts at La Mesa. She brought bandages, soap and medicine and left with messages to their loved ones.

In 2007, the city renamed for her a street adjacent to the prison.

"Even when her health was in decline, she always found time to attend to them," Licona said.

LOS ANGELES

Character actor Kumar Pallana dies in Calif. at 94

Before Wes Anderson directed his first feature film, he'd hang out at an eclectic coffee shop in Dallas where he met a 70-something yoga teacher — Kumar Pallana — who was like a one-man Ed Sullivan variety show. To entertain customers in the cafe owned by his son, Pallana would juggle, do magic tricks and perform a vaudeville staple: plate spinning.

Anderson and his buddy, actor-writer Owen Wilson, made Pallana an offer. "They said they were shooting a movie and 'Are you interested in being-in it?'" said Pallana in a 2004 Los Angeles Times interview. "I said 'yes.' They were nice kids."

The movie was "Bottle Rocket," which launched not only Anderson's and Wilson's careers, but that of Pallana, who stole scenes as a bumbling safe cracker. The diminutive Pallana, who spoke with a rich Indian accent, went on to do numerous character parts in films — including three more directed by Anderson and one by Steven Spielberg — and television shows. He continued with his scene-stealing, even when up against big names such as Tom Hanks, Gene Hackman and Bill Murray.

It may have seemed an unlikely second career for a senior-citizen yoga teacher, but Pallana's son, Dipak, said his father already had plenty of experience. "My father had been in show business since he was about 16," Dipak said. "He loved performing, and he did it up until the end."

Kumar Pallana, 94, died Oct. 10 at home in Oakland, Calif., where he lived with his son. Dipak said his father, who had been in good health for his age, collapsed while getting ready to go play bridge with friends. In addition to his son, Pallana is survived by a daughter, Sandhya, of Dallas, and a grandson.

As recently as August, Pallana shot a TV pilot in New York, Dipak said, and was looking forward to more work. Asked during a 2004 interview with Backstage West what he wanted of his career, he answered, "I want more job. I want to die entertaining."

Pallana was born Dec. 23, 1918, in the city of Indore in central India. His father eventually became a car dealer, and the family prospered until Pallana's brother was arrested for aiding in the fight against British colonial rule.

"My father lost his business," Pallana said in the Times interview. "Our house was locked up, and we had to leave." Pallana dropped out of high school and eventually made his way to Bombay with the aim of being an actor, but he couldn't make it past the gate of movie studios.

He went to community gymnasiums to train as an acrobat. "Old-timers," he said, showed him how to do balancing tricks, leading to his act in which he would place chairs on bottles and then do routines on top of them. He added numerous other feats as he toured festivals in the area and in Africa.

In 1946 he came to the United States and toured widely as Kumar of India, playing Las Vegas and other resort cities. He also took the act to several television shows, including "The Ed Sullivan Show," "Captain Kangaroo," "The Mickey Mouse Club" and the hyperkinetic "The Pinky Lee Show."

Pallana again tried the movies, but the only roles he got were as walk-ons in westerns such as "Broken Arrow" with James Stewart. "Oh sure, I got work," he told the Dallas Morning News in 2004, "but I played a different sort of Indian."

The constant traveling put a strain on his marriage, so the family settled in Dallas. "My father had done yoga as a young man — the balancing he did was an extension of that — and he started teaching yoga," Dipak said. Pallana opened a yoga studio in 1966, long before the wide acceptance of the practice. "He used to say people didn't know the difference between yoga and yogurt," his son said.

Settling down in one city did not ultimately save the marriage. Dipak's parents divorced in 1979.

After graduating from college, Dipak started his cafe, the Cosmic Cup, and his father taught yoga on the upper floor. The coffee shop was also a venue for local performers, including Pallana.

After "Bottle Rocket," Anderson used Pallana in his next effort, "Rushmore" in 1998, in which he played a school groundskeeper who delivered the key line, "Best play ever, man."

Probably Pallana's most memorable part in an Anderson film was as Pagoda, Gene Hackman's valet, in the 2001 "The Royal Tenenbaums." Pallana also played a small role as an old man on a train in the Anderson film mostly set in India, the 2007 "The Darjeeling Limited."

Spielberg cast him as an eccentric airport janitor in "The Terminal" (2004) that starred Hanks. Pallana, at the suggestion of the star, juggled rings in that film.

Pallana, who often played a comically quiet character on screen, was known to speak energetically and rapidly when recalling his past. And he was always ready to entertain. "Even if it was just a small group, he would do some magic, tell jokes, spin some plates," Dipak said. Just like when he was Kumar of India, the main goal even in movies was to entertain.

"To make the people happy, to forget their problems," Pallana told the Oakland Tribune in 2008. "Then, to me, I'm doing my job.

"But to act is a God gift."

SEATTLE

Jerry Heldman, eccentric jazz performer, dies at 76

Northwest jazz lost an exceptionally talented and eccentric figure last week when bassist/pianist Jerome "Jerry" Heldman died of pneumonia.

Heldman was the proprietor and also a performer at the Llahngaelhyn, a legendary coffee house located in the fairy-castlelike building just south of the University Bridge that hosted jazz from 1965 to 1968.

Heldman died Oct. 11 in Yacolt, Wash., after he was bedridden for two years with heart failure and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. He was 76.

The Llahngaelhyn was known for all-night jam sessions, where touring musicians such as pianists McCoy Tyner and Chick Corea and saxophonist Roland Kirk dropped by, and local players such as bassist David Friesen, guitarist Larry Coryell, saxophonist Carlos Ward and guitarist Ralph Towner cut their teeth. The late Seattle beat poet, Jesse Bernstein, was also a regular.

"The Llahngaelhyn had a very great influence on the music in this place," recalled Friesen in a book about Seattle jazz history.

Born Feb. 24, 1937, in Fargo, N.D., Heldman was raised in Seattle, attended West Seattle High School and served in the Air Force from 1955 to 1959. After returning to Seattle, Heldman got a desk job with the Seattle Police Department, but he quit when his work came into conflict with his life as a jazz musician.

Self-taught, Heldman played bass with the Seattle Jazz Quartet and the Playboys, an early Seattle rock band. During the 1962 World's Fair, he was the drummer for a rock band at the Roll Inn Tavern. In 1965, he moved into an apartment above the Llahngaelhyn and started hosting jazz sessions.

The bohemian scene at the club could be bizarre. Heldman, who according to his daughter, Caroline, had "undiagnosed mental-health issues," became notorious for wearing a tinfoil hat to deflect alien "rays."

"Late in life, he admitted to me that he heard and spoke with voices, both ofangels and God," wrote Caroline in a blog post about her father's death.

At the Llahngaelhyn, Heldman met University of Washington student Julia Selvidge, and they married in 1965.

Though part of the hippie counterculture, Heldman also became a born-again Christian and, thinking to escape what he saw as Seattle's corrupting drug culture, he moved to Ridgefield, where he worked for the Ridgefield Parks and Recreation Department.

After moving to nearby Yacolt, he worked for three decades as a janitor at Tektronix, in Vancouver, Wash.

Heldman continued to play music, notably at the Columbia Gorge Hotel, in Hood River, Ore. For the past few years, he had been leading services at Yacolt Full Gospel Community Church.

The Heldmans raised and home-schooled six children, bringing them up in a strict, sheltered environment, unexposed to TV. His daughters were not allowed to wear pants or cut their hair until they were teens.

"As a dad, he was an unrepentant but ultimately failed misogynist," recalled Caroline, a feminist political-science professor at Occidental College in California. "I got a spanking for bringing home Betty Friedan's 'The Feminine Mystique.'"

But while conservative about gender roles, he "undermined his overt sexism by being a proud and supportive parent," she said, and he was progressive about race.

"Every time 'Roots' came on, we wheeled out the TV from the garage," she said.

He was also generous to a fault, picking up hitchhikers and sheltering the homeless, even when he had little to give.

Heldman is survived by his wife, Julia; five daughters; one son; and seven grandchildren.

A memorial is planned for Nov. 11, but the location has not been announced.

ticipated every year until he died, Rhodes said.

"John always made time for everybody, even when he was going through chemo at the race," she said.

This year's ride will take off at 11 a.m. Saturday at the DoubleTree by Hilton Hotel. All riders are welcome to participate — most ride motorcycles or antique cars, Lewallen said.

Riders will ride by the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial and conclude at the Commemorative Air Force hangar. The first 300 people will receive a free meal by Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang at the hangar, followed by a celebration with two bands and a silent auction.

All funds raised from the ride will benefit the American Cancer Society, Post 119 and Gifts of Hope Houses of Midland and Odessa.

The ride is "more than a memorial — it's a celebration of the people that have beat cancer," Rhodes said. Every rider will receive a T-shirt with a "letter to cancer" that Rhodes wrote on the back, vowing to find a cure.

"There really isn't anybody who hasn't been touched by cancer," Rhodes said. "We'll ride till we're old and gray. We will ride until we find a cure for cancer."

Mormons pushing church stance on homosexuality

By Brady McCombs
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY— Wendy and Tom Montgomery went door-to-door in their California neighborhood in 2008 campaigning for the passage of an anti-gay marriage proposition. They were among thousands of faithful Mormons following the direction of a church that spent millions on the cause.

Then they learned last year that their 15-year-old son is gay — a revelation that rocked their belief system.

Now, Wendy Montgomery is leading a growing movement among Mormons to push The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to teach that homosexuality isn't a sin.

They are hopeful. The Utah-based church's stance on homosexuality has softened considerably since it was one of the leading forces behind California's Proposition 8. A new website launched this year encourages more compassion toward gays, implores them to stay in the faith and clarifies that church leaders no longer "necessarily advise" gays to marry people of the opposite sex in what used to be a widely practiced Mormon workaround for homosexuality. In May, church leaders backed the Boy Scouts' policy allowing gays in the ranks. Some gay Mormons who left or were forced out of the church say they are now being welcomed back — even though they remain in same-sex relationships.

It may seem like negligible progress to outsiders, but Mormon scholars say 2013 has been a landmark year for the religion on gay and lesbian issues.

"For those who have been around as long as I have, to have Mormons and gays in the same sentence is quite something," said Bob Rees, a visiting professor of Mormon Studies at the Graduate Theological Union and the University of California, Berkeley.

Still, the church has only gone so far. Church apostle Dallin H. Oaks reiterated this past weekend during a biannual conference that human laws cannot "make moral what God has declared immoral." The church website, launched in December, reinforced that while same-sex attraction itself isn't a sin, succumbing to it is.

The contrasting messages from the church have left many Mormons struggling to figure out where they stand.

Wendy Montgomery is among them. Her world changed after she read her son's journal in early 2012 and learned he was gay.

"It made me question everything," said Montgomery, 37, of Bakersfield, Calif. "I'm looking at this 13-year-old boy who is totally innocent and pure and an amazing kid and I think, 'Either everything I know about homosexuality is wrong, or my son is not really gay. And, he's obviously gay.' I kind of had to unlearn everything I had learned."

Wendy and Tom Montgomery set out on a grueling six-month spiritual journey as they reconciled their love for their son, Jordan, with the teachings of their lifelong faith. They let family, friends and church mates know he was gay and established that they wouldn't tolerate any harsh treatment of their son.

They remain faithful Mormons, but have switched congregations after enduring ridicule from friends and fellow church members.

One woman told Montgomery her children should be taken away from her and given to somebody who follows the teachings of the prophet. Montgomery and her husband had to step down from their church positions — he was the assistant bishop and she was a Sunday school teacher to teens — after parents flooded the bishop's office with complaints that they were teaching homosexual propaganda that would turn other kids gay.

Their story is featured in a documentary made by the Family Acceptance Project at San Francisco State University. The Montgomerys found the organization after getting frustrated with church therapists who told them Jordan was just going through a phase. The organization works with conservative religious families to help them navigate their doctrines while also accepting their gay children.

Caitlin Ryan, the project director, has written a pamphlet specifically designed for Mormons that has been distributed throughout LDS churches in Utah. She said she believes the church is now paying attention to research that shows suicide has been a major issue with LGBT Mormon youth for decades.

Jordan Montgomery says in the documentary he had suicidal thoughts and was mortified of his parents disowning him.

Wendy Montgomery said she doesn't know how long her son will remain in the church, but steps taken in the past year have given her hope that church leaders will one day reverse their stance that homosexuality is a sin.

"There are so many that grew up in my situation, in conservative, religious homes that are being taught this," Montgomery said. "It's just not accurate. It's not right. And it's so damaging to the kids."

Mustangs' Talley comes back strong after injury

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Dakota Jones still has a hard time figuring out why Reid Talley plays so well at defensive end even after a year and half of playing and practicing on a daily basis with the soft-spoken sophomore.

Talley

Talley was an all-state selection a year ago, and was a key part of the Mustangs' offensive line as a sophomore before a major injury to his right knee ended his season before the TAPPS Division II state championship game.

Talley, though, is just a little more than 10 months removed from surgery on his knee and has picked up right where he left off last year as one of the team's top defenders.

And while Jones, a 6-foot, 195-pound senior, has been recording plenty of tackles himself on the opposite side of Midland Christian's defensive line, Jones said he gives the edge to Talley on who is better and he's still trying to put a finger on why Talley has been so successful.

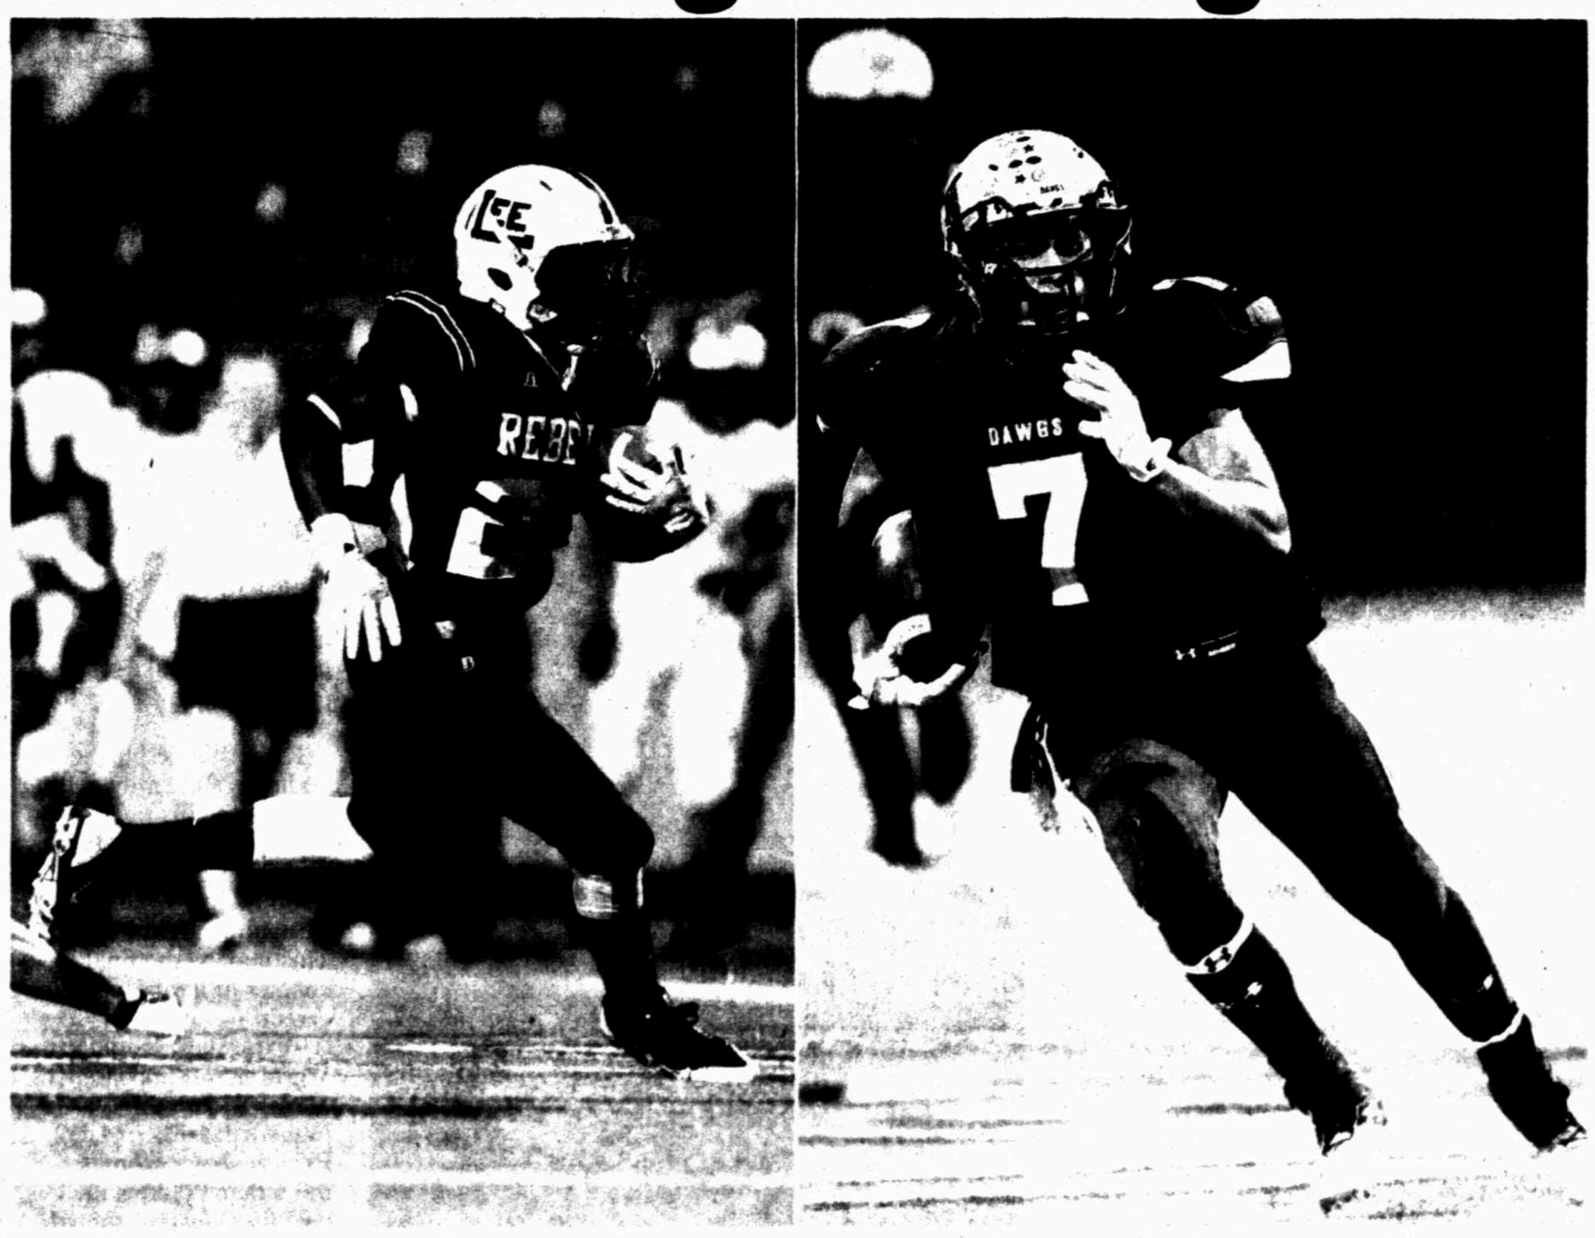

"I've never been able to figure out why he's so good ... I know he works really hard and that's why he's so good, but besides that he doesn't have the physical attributes of a typical defensive end," said Jones, who has 32 tackles this season, including four for a loss. "He still does more than what a typical defensive end would do, and I've never figured it

Lee and Midland High fight for supremacy once again today at Grande.

Midland High, Lee set for another showdown

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

Lee and Midland High appear to be headed in two drastically different directions. But none of that will matter when the two teams step onto the field at Grande Communications Stadium today.

Kennedy

Martinez

That's the nature of a true rivalry game. The fact the Rebels (5-1, 4-0 in District 2-5A) are sitting atop the district standings undefeated in 2-5A play, while the Bulldogs (3-3, 2-2) have lost two straight in humiliating fashion simply doesn't matter once the ball is kicked off at 7:30 p.m.

"They're always dangerous," Lee senior linebacker Cade Kennedy said of Midland High. "It's always going to be dangerous in a rivalry game. After them losing a couple games, they're going to be hungry for a win, but we are too."

It would be easy to write off the Bulldogs after seeing them outscored, 114-35, the last two weeks, and typically back-to-back losses of that nature would present some challenges in getting prepared the following week.

Lucky for the Bulldogs, it is Lee they've been formulating a game plan for the past few days.

"Since it's Lee, it's not that hard (to regroup)," Midland High senior free safety Xzavier Martinez said. "We've got to prepare mentally, prepare physically in anyway we can."

No matter how the rest of the season might turn out for either team, the bragging rights at the heart of this game remain important. After all, most of the players on each team have at least one person on the other squad they consider a close friend, a guy they spent their youth playing sports against or with, go to church with or hang out with outside of sports and school.

"I know a lot of those guys from Lee," MHS senior Jason Raughton said. "(Bragging rights are) important. Everybody remembers their senior year. Either you beat your crosstown rival and still talk about it, or you have a chip on your shoulder and you don't bring that up."

But beyond the bragging rights lies an important game in 2-5A. For the Bulldogs, the situation isn't quite dire yet, but another loss would take more of the control they have over their fate out of their hands.

And the Bulldogs know one win can quickly turn around playoff forecast.

Hall of Legends members to be inducted tonight

The fourth class of the Midland ISD Athletic Hall of Legends will be inducted before the start of tonight's Lee and Midland High football game at Grande Communications Stadium.

Former Lee boys basketball coach Paul Stueckler, former Midland High boys basketball coach Jack Stephenson, former Lee football player Larry Molinare and the 1997-1998 Midland High boys basketball team will be inducted in this year's class.

The ceremony will take place after the dinner at Citibank Ballpark.

From staff reports

"We're going to have to come out with our best effort, but we're coming in and we have nothing to lose," Raughton said. "They're at the top and we're kind of at the bottom. We have nothing to lose. We can come into the game and play the hardest we've ever played and good things will happen."

For the Rebels, it's about remaining alone atop the district standings — a spot few pictured them being in at the beginning of the season. After missing the postseason in three consecutive seasons for the first time since multiple teams from the district have been allowed into the playoffs in the program's history, Lee entered the season anxious to make a return to the postseason.

A win today would be a big step in the

Rangers say playoffs begin tonight against Sweetwater

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

Only two games into the District 4-3A part of its schedule and the Greenwood football team knows that there's very little room for error left for it this season.

As far as the Rangers (2-4, 0-1 in district) are concerned, their playoffs begin tonight when they host Sweetwater (2-4, 0-1) at J.M. King Memorial Stadium. The winner of this game will be very much alive for a spot in the postseason, while the loser will be in a deep hole with three district games remaining.

"The playoffs start now for us," Greenwood senior linebacker Austin Satterfield said. "We still have a lot of big games coming up, so this is definitely a big game."

"Nobody likes to lose," added fellow senior linebacker Brandon Brown. "Just like last year, our playoffs started that Saturday when we walked in (for the team meeting). We're basically in the playoffs."

Satterfield

Brown

The Rangers were in this same position at this time last year as they were coming off a loss to Monahans in the district opener. The Rangers went on to go 3-2 in district play and go three rounds deep in the Class 3A Division II playoffs.

This time, the Rangers are coming off a disappointing 42-14 loss to Monahans where not many things went right against the Loboes on the road. Unlike last season, the Rangers are a younger team, which means the leadership of the seniors on this team will be especially important to get them through these trying moments.

"I think (the younger players) feel like they let the team down, but together as a team we all had our screw-ups (last week)," Brown said. "We just have to tell them to remain confident. Our job as seniors is keep them focused and be a role model on and off the field."

Satterfield said just like any game it's important to move on to the next game regardless of a win or a loss. He believes that this team has a much different approach and attitude since the beginning of the year to do just that.

"I think people are kind of down on themselves because our season hasn't gone as well, but I think we're a

Lady Mustangs lose in 5-set thriller

From staff reports

FORT WORTH — Fort Worth Christian came back from a two-set deficit to beat Midland Christian in a five-set thriller 31-33, 33-35 25-21, 25-20, 17-15 on Thursday.

Three of the five sets were decided by two points as Midland Christian fell to 31-6 overall and 9-3 in TAPPS 1-4A.

The win by Fort Worth Christian puts it in a tie for second place in the district with Midland Christian. Fort Worth Christian still has a match left with Lubbock Trinity, and depending on that outcome, Midland Christian will finish in either a tie for second or in third place. The Lady Mustangs' district season is complete.

Carleigh Moore had 29 kills, and seven blocks Morgan Ashton had 17 kills and 33 assists, Madi Blanchard had 27 digs, Bailey Wright had 22 digs and Megan McClendon added 21 digs for the Lady Mustangs.

UTPB volleyball team tops St. Mary's in 4 sets

From staff reports

SAN ANTONIO — The UTPB volleyball team defeated St. Mary's University in four sets 21-25, 25-21, 27-25, 25-23 on Thursday.

UTPB (7-15, 4-6 in Heartland Conference) was led by Melissa Lusk with 17 kills, Terra Peil and Ryley Carman each had 10 kills, Taylor Harmon had 23 digs, Ariana Gallardo had 26 assists and Ariel Fralick added 23 assists.

The Lady Falcons won despite a .195 hitting percentage and 21 hitting errors. St. Mary's had a .205 hitting percentage but 23 hitting errors.

Nolan Ryan retiring as CEO of Texas Rangers

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Nolan Ryan is leaving the Texas Rangers again, stepping away from his CEO role 20 years after ending his Hall of Fame career as a pitcher.

In what the team had called a retirement, Ryan said Thursday that he is resigning as chief executive of the Rangers in a move effective at the end of this month. He is also selling his ownership stake in the team to co-chairmen Ray Davis and Bob Simpson.

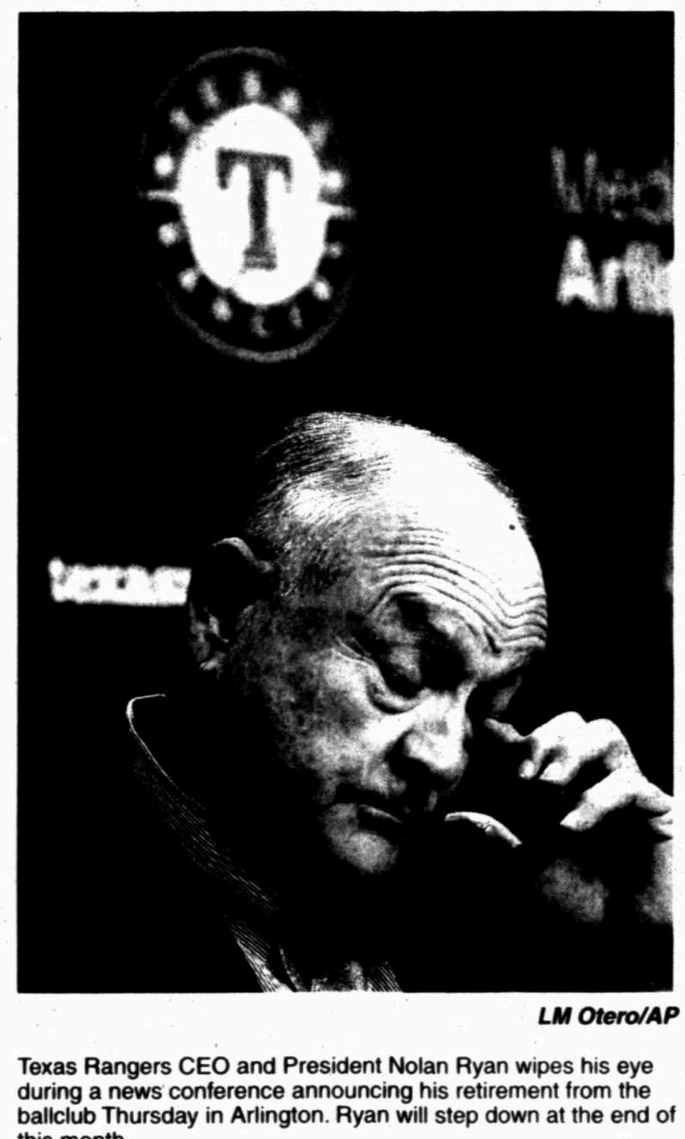

"It closes a chapter of my life in baseball," Ryan said. "I feel like it's time for me to move on to other things. It's been a decision that weighed on me heavily, but I feel like it's the right decision. ... At this point and time, it's the correct thing for me to do."

Asked about the difference in the team announcing that he was retiring and him calling it a resignation, the 66-year-old Ryan paused and then said he wouldn't be the CEO of another major league team and called this perhaps the "final chapter" of his storied career in baseball.

Ryan's older son, Reid, became president of the Houston Astros earlier this year. Nolan Ryan dismissed any speculation that he's leaving the Rangers to join his son and another of the teams he pitched for and worked for in the past.

The move takes effect Oct. 31.

Ryan became the 10th president of the Rangers in February 2008 when he was hired by former owner Tom Hicks. Ryan added the title of CEO three years later. He was also part of the ownership group that acquired the team in August 2010, months before its first World Series.

LM Otero/AP

Texas Rangers CEO and President Nolan Ryan wipes his eye during a news conference announcing his retirement from the ballclub Thursday in Arlington. Ryan will step down at the end of this month.

Ryan's departure comes less than a year after ownership gave general manager Jon Daniels and chief operating officer Rick George new presidential titles and took the president's title from Ryan.

Davis insisted the change in Ryan's title earlier this year was just that.

"From a corporation standpoint, Nolan's authority didn't change at all," Davis said. "On all major decisions on baseball, Nolan made all final decisions."

Ryan said the title change wasn't a factor in his decision.

"I don't look at it from that perspective," Ryan said. "I just look at it from where I am in life and what I want to do going forward and that's what really drove my decision."

George left in July to become the athletic director at the University of Colorado. Daniels attended the news conference at Rangers Ballpark, but left without speaking to reporters.

Davis said the ownership group is disappointed with Ryan's decision but understands it. Simpson said he tried to talk Ryan out of leaving.

"You don't wake up one day and make a decision of this magnitude," Ryan said. "It was something I've been thinking about on and off for a while now. Just felt like it was probably time for me to move on."

Ryan said he planned to go home and enjoy getting back out to his ranch "and doing things I haven't done for six years now. ... I don't know what a year from now might bring. This may be the final chapter of my baseball career."

Texas made its only two World Series appearances during Ryan's six seasons in the front office. The Rangers have averaged more than 90 wins the past five seasons, though they missed the playoffs this year after losing an AL wild-card tiebreaker game to Tampa Bay.

"During times of significant change for the franchise, Nolan has been a constant — accessible, dedicated and an icon to his fellow Texans who love our game," Commissioner Bud Selig said. "Nolan's unique perspective as a legendary player and an accomplished executive has been invaluable to the Rangers franchise."

Ryan's name has been synonymous with the Rangers for decades.

The major league strikeout king with 5,714 spent the last five seasons of his playing days in a Rangers uniform, getting his 300th victory, throwing the last two of his record seven no-hitters and getting his 5,000th strikeout. He retired as player after the 1993 season.

FROM STAFF REPORTS

BIG SPRING VS. SNYDER
When/where: 7:30 p.m., Memorial Stadium, Big Spring
On the air: KBEST FM (95.7), KBYG FM (106.3), Big Spring
Records: Big Spring 4-2, 0-1 in District 4-3A; Snyder 2-4, 1-0
Last game: Abilene Wylie 37, Big Spring 35; Snyder 41, Sweetwater 14
Last meeting: Snyder defeated Big Spring, 31-21, but Big Spring owns a 31-25-1 record in the all-time series.
Weather forecast: Temperatures in the lower 70s at kickoff with a 30 percent chance of isolated thunderstorms, getting down to the upper 50s at the end of the game.

Three things you need to know

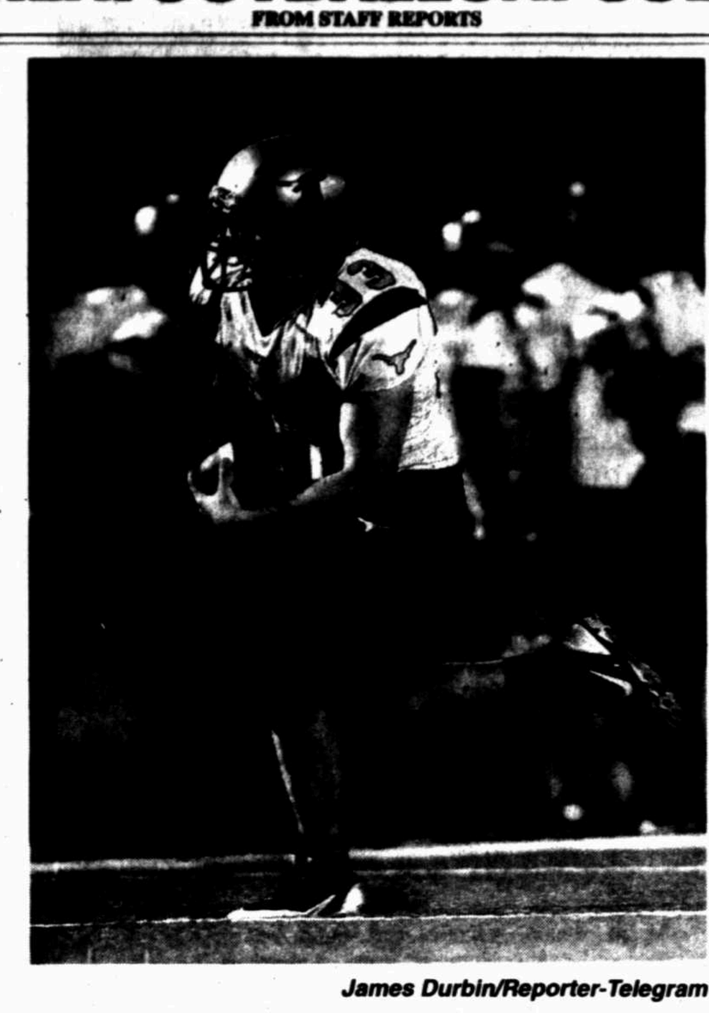

■ Big Spring is coming off a loss but the Steers came back from 21-0 down in the first quarter and 30-7 down in the second quarter to have a chance to win it at the end. Senior K Devin Roberson missed a 42-yard FG attempt with less than a minute remaining as Wylie escaped with a victory. Junior QB Tobyn Tannehill had a big game as he passed for 280 yards, rushed for 146 yards and accounted for four TDs for the Steers.

■ Big Spring looks to snap a 12-game district losing streak tonight. Steers coach Phillip Ritchey said a district win would do a lot for his team as far as taking off some pressure.

■ Snyder only had a 7-0 lead at the half against Sweetwater but rolled in the second half. Senior RB D'Vincent Allison (5-10, 170) rushed for 261 yards and four touchdowns, while senior QB Skillet Rinehart (5-10, 155) rushed for another 137 yards and two TDs.

"They have a very deceiving record," said Ritchey of Snyder. "They have one of the best running backs we've seen since the Lubbock Estacado back (Robert Johnson), a big offensive line and their quarterback is a good runner. We can't take them for granted and we can't turn the ball over. We've had too many turnovers recently, so we've got to take care of the ball."

Next: Big Spring at Sweetwater, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25; Monahans at Snyder, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25

Big Spring's Garrett Wigington runs the ball against Andrews on Sept. 20 at Mustang Bowl in Andrews.

ANDREWS VS. LEVELLAND
When/where: 7:30 p.m. Friday, Lobo Stadium, Levelland
On the air: KACT FM (105.5), KACT AM (1360), Andrews
Records: Andrews 2-4, 0-1 in District 2-3A; Levelland 4-2, 0-1
Last game: Lubbock Cooper 46, Andrews 21; Lubbock Estacado 35, Levelland 14
Last meeting: Andrews defeated Levelland, 52-32, last year and owns a 24-11 record in the all-time series.
Weather forecast: Temperatures in the mid 50s at kickoff, getting down to the lower 40s at the end of the game.

Three things you need to know

■ Andrews looks to break a three-game losing streak tonight after a district-opening loss to Lubbock Cooper last week. Cooper scored 20 unanswered points between the second and third quarters and had 455 total yards.

■ Andrews lost senior QB Shane Dolgener early in last week's game to a knee injury and his status for this game and for the rest of the season is unknown. In place of Dolgener, junior Jase Hammack — who played a lot last year when Dolgener was injured — was 22 of 44 for 217 yards passing with two touchdowns and one interception.

■ Levelland is also coming off a loss in the district opener as Estcado scored 28 second-half points after only leading 7-0 at the half. The Lobos had only 222 total yards of offense.

"They're going to try to control the ball as they are big up front," Andrews coach Ralph Mason said of Levelland. "They're also going to try to get into a lot of different formations defensively and they come after you."

STANTON VS. CRANE
When/where: 7:30 p.m., Buffalo Stadium, Stanton
On the web: www.myelave.com
Records: Stanton 5-1, 1-0 in District 3-2A, Division II; Crane 6-0, 1-0
Last game: Stanton 16, Coahoma 14; Crane 41, Reagan County 14
Last meeting: Crane defeated Stanton 23-13 last year and has won the last nine meetings
Weather forecast: Temperatures in the lower 70s at kickoff, getting down to the mid 50s at the end of the game with a 10-20 percent chance of rain.

Three things you need to know

■ Stanton is coming off a win over rival Coahoma in its district opener. The Buffaloes had to come from behind from a 14-7 halftime deficit. RB Estevan Chavez (5-8, 155, Soph.) had 142 yards rushing and one touchdown on 20 carries, while QB K.J. Glaspie (6-1, 175, Jr.) was 16-of-28 passing for 164 yards with one touchdown and no interceptions.

■ Stanton coach John Peterson said the fact that his team had faced adversity before helped his team overcome a tough start against Coahoma. Peterson added that the offense stayed balance and the defense started making plays in the second half.

■ Crane rolled to a victory over Reagan County in its district opener. QB Charles Tapia (5-10, 170, Sr.) completed 7 of 8 passes for 165 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions, while RB Gunner Tatum (5-11, 210, Sr.) rushed for 213 yards and one TD on 19 carries.

"They're a good team," said Peterson about the Golden Cranes. "Coach (Naldo) Esparza does a good job of getting them to play a good, sound, clean game. Their size is a concern, they've got some big kids."

Next: Stanton at Alpine, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25; Coahoma at Crane, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25

COAHOMA VS. SONORA
When/where: 7:30 p.m., Bulldog Stadium, Coahoma
On the air: KBST-AM (1490), Big Spring
Records: Coahoma 1-5, 0-1 in District 3-2A Division II; Sonora 5-1, 1-0
Last game: Stanton 16, Coahoma 14; Sonora 43, Alpine 33
Last meeting: Coahoma defeated Sonora, 27-21, in overtime last year to snap a five-game losing streak in the series.
Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with temperatures in the lower 70s at kickoff, getting down to the mid 50s at the end of the game with a 10-20 percent chance of rain.

Three things you need to know

■ Coahoma dropped its district opener against Stanton as the Bulldogs had a 14-7 halftime lead before Stanton made its comeback in the second half. The Bulldogs rushed for 249 of their 287 total yards.

■ Coahoma coach Trey Gardner said he's been encouraged from his team the last two games as the Bulldogs have cut down on their mistakes and have shown plenty of fight for a young team still growing.

■ Gardner said Sonora, which outlasted Alpine in its district opener with 571 yards of total offense, is as good or better than last year's team that went to the Class 2A Division II state semifinals. Gardner added that the Broncos are big and fast.

"We've got to be able to tackle and hold on, and we've got to find a way to sustain some drives," Gardner said. "Even though it's not our strength, we're going to have to throw the ball some in the flats. Even as young as we are, we can play with these guys. I know our kids will give us great effort for four quarters."

Next: Coahoma at Crane, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25; Reagan County at Sonora, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25

NO. 7 RANKIN VS. ROTAN
When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Griffith Stadium, Robert Lee
Records: Rankin 6-0, Rotan 3-3
Last game: Rankin 54, Ropes 52; Rotan 61, Robert Lee 60
Last meeting: Rankin 96, Rotan 50 in 2012
Weather forecast: A temperature of around 68 degrees is expected at game time with a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms. The chance for rain will decrease as the game progresses as the temperatures could dip into the upper 50s.

Three things you need to know

■ The Red Devils had a bye last week as they will now finish the season with four consecutive games. This game was originally scheduled for last Friday but was moved to today and also moved from Sterling City to Robert Lee.

■ Rankin had a wild game against Ropes two weeks ago as the Red Devils needed a last-second touchdown to win. Junior Rodriguez scored the winning touchdown with three seconds remaining.

■ The Yellowhammers enter today's game winning their last two games against Robert Lee and Spur. Rotan competes in Six-Man Division I District 7.

Next: Fort Davis at Rankin, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25; Rotan at Highland, 7:30 p.m. Oct. 25 different team now," Satterfield said. "We definitely need a win. That would help us out."

From 1C

In order to get that win, the Rangers know that they have to slow down a Sweetwater team that's going to throw a lot more than the Loboes, which runs the wing-t. Junior quarterback Kaegan Jeffery has completed 61 percent of his passes for 1,688 yards with 22 touchdowns and only five interceptions.

"We know they're going to try to throw it deep," Satterfield said. "I think we can shut them out this week. We just have to play our coverages and play the run well."

Brown added that the Rangers have to keep their heads up, no matter what kind of adversity they may face tonight.

"Even if the offense doesn't score, we still have to keep everybody confident," he said. "I think that was one of the big things we dealt with last week. When our defense stopped them and our offense didn't score our defense got down on themselves. We can't do that."

The Rangers also know that they can't afford too many more losses if they want to get back to the postseason.

GREENWOOD VS. SWEETWATER
When/where: 7:30 p.m., J.M. King Memorial Stadium
On the web: www.audiosportsonline.net or www.greenwood.esc18.net
Records: Greenwood 2-4, 0-1 in District 4-3A; Sweetwater 2-4, 0-1
Last game: Monahans 42, Greenwood 14; Snyder 41, Sweetwater 14
Last meeting/series: Greenwood defeated Sweetwater, 31-13, last year, but Sweetwater holds a 5-3 edge in the series dating back to 2000.
Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with temperatures in the lower 70s at kickoff and a 10 percent chance of rain, becoming a little windy as the game goes on and getting down to the mid to upper 50s at the end of the game.

Five things you need to know

■ Greenwood looks to shake off a rough outing against Monahans last week. The Rangers turned the ball over six times and had trouble finding consistency on both offense and defense. Senior QB Anthony Salas (5-9, 165, Sr.) had mixed results in his second varsity start as he was 11-of-23 passing for 128 yards with three interceptions. After a slow start, RB Braydin Moreland (5-8, 165, Sr.) led the Rangers with 59 yards rushing and one touchdown on 10 carries.

■ Greenwood coach Shad Hanna said he's frustrated about his team's fast start but hopes the Rangers got out the jitters from their first district game.

"Practices are not quite as upbeat after a loss but I think their spirits are fine," said Hanna about his Rangers. "When you lose it forces you to look in the mirror and force yourself to make some changes."

■ Hanna said the Rangers are healthy and should get DB Jose Hernandez (ankle) back this week after missing the last three games.

■ Snyder only had a 7-0 halftime lead against Sweetwater before the Tigers scored 34 points in the second half to run away from the Mustangs. Sweetwater had 304 total yards and four turnovers in the loss. Junior QB Kaegan Jeffery was 15 of 24 for 185 yards with one touchdown and two interceptions. Jeffery also led the team with 46 yards rushing on 10 carries.

■ Hanna said the Mustangs are talented with a lot of speed.

"We both have to win on Friday," Hanna said. "We have to stop their passing game and move the ball on offense."

MUSTANGS

out. But he does really well at it. He doesn't stop ... he just doesn't."

Talley has done well again this season, but so has Jones. The two have helped to bookend a defensive line that has been a disruptive force for the Mustangs this season. The duo are expecting to be disruptive again as Midland Christian takes on TAPPS Division II, District 1 rival Fort Worth Christian at 7:30 p.m. today at Mustang Field on Homecoming.

Midland Christian's defense is on pace to allow the fewest points in school history with 17 allowed, and through seven games the Mustangs are giving up 141 total yards a game.

And these two, along with TD Reeger-North, have been a big reason why those numbers are so low.

Both Jones and Talley possess the height to gain leverage where needed, but both have quickness that gives offensive lineman fits. They've disrupted offenses so much that the two are making tackles that are sometimes reserved for linebackers.

"They are making plays, and making tackles," Midland Christian coach Greg McClendon said. "They make most plays, even though they may not make the most tackles. They are making the play and then getting back out there and making the tackle."

Talley said the major key for both players is their quickness, but also playing in a defensive scheme that allows them to make the plays.

"The way our defense works out, it sets up the (defensive ends) pretty good," said Talley who has 34 tackles, including two for loss this season. "Everyone on the defense has a big chance to make some big plays and do good."

Jones and Talley said they have some back and forth about who makes the most tackles in a game, but that's just fun banter for a pair of players that are making an impact for a defense determined to keep teams out of the end zone.

"I think with our group we really enjoy working hard, and we don't dread the fact that we are going to have a two-hour practice. We enjoy working hard," Jones said. "It's something that our coaches harp on all the time."

Last meeting/series: Midland Christian 28, Fort Worth Christian 16 in 2012
Weather forecast: Partly cloudy with a game time temperature of around 70 degrees expected; the wind will pick up as the game progresses with temperatures in the lower 60s

Five things you need to know

■ The Mustangs continue to rewrite the school's passing record book this season. Mason McClendon threw five touchdowns last week and now has 34 for the season. McClendon broke his own school record, which he set last year at 29.

■ The Mustangs held the Lions to minus-9 yards rushing in last week's victory and overall Midland Christian has held teams to just more than 141 total yards a game.

■ Midland Christian has not allowed a point in three district games this season.

■ Fort Worth Christian took a break from district play last week to take on Class 2A Brock. The Cardinals had 237 yards rushing on 16 carries in the victory.

■ Caleb Stone leads Fort Worth Christian in rushing with 394 yards and three touchdowns, and is averaging just less than nine yards a carry.

BREAKING DOWN THE RIVALRY: MIDLAND HIGH VS. LEE

THE X-FACTOR

LEE

ARON DOBBINS

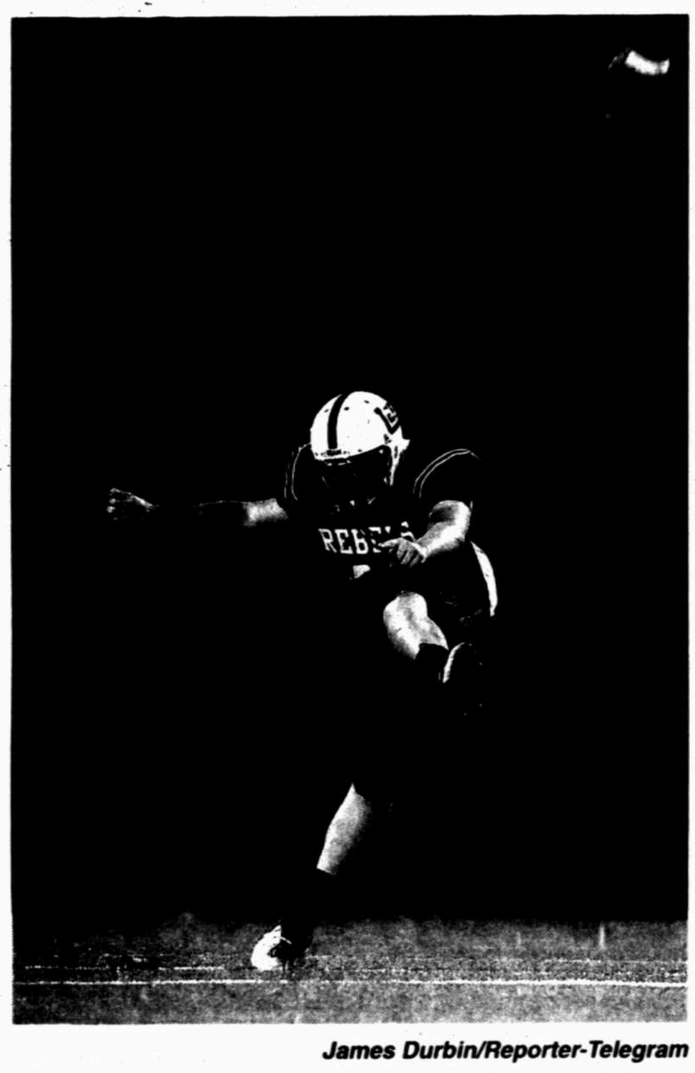

While Lee's passing has been putting up the majority of Lee's offensive numbers, Dobbins' ability to run the football will be important if the Rebels are to win. The Rebels faced pressure from Abilene High's defense last week, and you can bet that film will be watched by Midland High's defensive coaching staff. Dobbins has proven his effectiveness at times this season, and he has breakaway ability.

DEFENSE
NATHAN BAILEY AND THE DEFENSIVE LINE

Bailey was the lone returning starter on Lee's defensive line and has had a solid season so far. If Bailey can find a way to contain Midland High's running game, and force the Bulldogs to throw that could help the Rebels defense.

SPECIAL TEAMS
ANGEL ALVIDREZ

Alvidrez has plenty of leg, and he may have to use all of it against what is possibly the district's most dangerous return game — both punting and kickoffs. Alvidrez can put kickoffs in the end zone, but has struggled a little with punting the last few weeks. His ability to put kickoffs in the end zone and get good punts could help Lee win the field position battle.

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Lee's Angel Alvidrez kicks off against El Paso Coronado on Aug 30 at Grande Communications Stadium.

MIDLAND HIGH

OFFENSE
THE QUARTERBACK

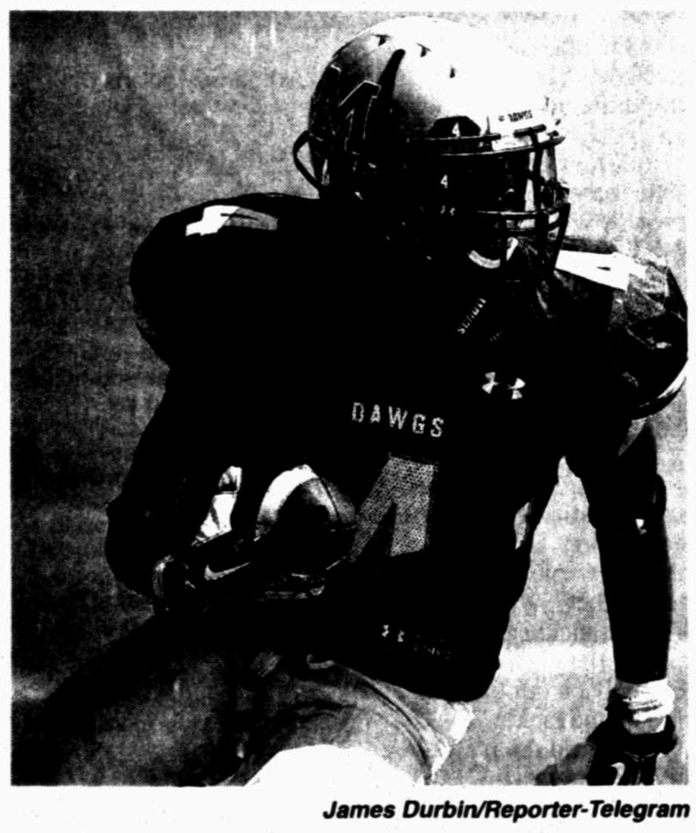

It's a known fact that the Bulldogs have had some struggles at this position throughout the season, but there is probably no time like the present to put together a good game under center from whoever that may be. Sam Grimes, Preston Howey and Ryan Goodrum have all seen time this year, and if one has hot a hand it could be the difference in the Bulldogs winning the game.

DEFENSE
BRADY WATSON AND DEFENSIVE LINE

Watson returns this week after missing three weeks with a knee injury and he certainly will be a presence for the Bulldogs on their front. If he can put pressure on Caden Coots and also keep Lee's running game in check, it will give the Bulldogs' defense a chance to get off the field.

SPECIAL TEAMS
DEANDRE GOODLEY, MAZELLE JUSTICE AND XZAVIER MARTINEZ

This trio can make big plays on both sides of the ball, but it could be on special teams where they may make their biggest impact tonight. Lee showed itself to be vulenerable to returns last week, and all three have the speed to give the Lee special teams coaches plenty of gray hairs. If one of these three can break one, whether it's for a touchdown or not, it could be a momentum changer.

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High's DeAndre Goodley runs against El Paso Americas on Aug. 31 at Grande Communications Stadium.

MATCHING UP

QUARTERBACK

Caden Coots has certainly been the model of consistency during the district season, while Midland High has still not settled on a firm starter. Playing quarterback boils down to confidence, and Coots has plenty of it right now.
ADVANTAGE: LEE

RUNNING BACK

If there's been a bright spot to Midland High's offense, it's been the running backs this season. Lance White and Darius Reed have had productive games, but so has Lee's Aron Dobbins and Simeon Mayberry. Dobbins has gained some tough yards this season, and is also a big play threat. Plus, the addition of Mayberry gives the Rebels a nice change of pace.
ADVANTAGE: PUSH

WIDE RECEIVERS

This position boils down to production, and Lee's receivers have had plenty of it through district play this season. Meanwhile at Midland High, the quarterback issues have kept their receivers from having much production this season. There have been glimpses, but right now Lee's more consistent quarterback play gives it more chances to make plays at the wide receiver position.
ADVANTAGE: LEE

OFFENSIVE LINE

This is possibly the toughest category to judge because the guys up front sometimes go unnoticed. Both squads have some size, and have had some solid games up front. Despite the Bulldogs' issues under center, they have blocked well both running and passing. Meanwhile, Lee had some struggles running the football and can struggle against quick defensive lines.
Advantage: MHS

DEFENSIVE LINE

The return of Brady Watson certainly makes the Bulldogs' front four more formidable, but the Bulldogs allowed 383 rushing yards to Abilene Cooper last week with quarterback Lorenzo Joe. Caden Coots isn't the runner that Joe is but Lee's running game has shown effectiveness this season. Meanwhile, the Rebels have allowed a 100-yard rusher once in district and much of that success has been due to the play of the Rebels on the front line. This week, though, will be a different challenge because MHS has a formidable power running game.
ADVANTAGE: PUSH

LINEBACKERS

Both linebacking corps are filled with playmakers as Midland High is led by Mason Montgomery with 82 tackles and Lee's Brives Turner with 67 tackles. It's tough to find a clear favorite in this one but expect MHS No. 44 (Montgomery) and Lee No. 33 (Turner) to be around the ball plenty tonight.
ADVANTAGE: PUSH

SECONDARY

The Bulldogs' secondary is active and fast and Xzavier Martinez leads the team with three interceptions, and for the second time in three weeks will face a team bent on throwing the ball. Meanwhile, Lee's secondary has made some key plays in spots but has not forced many turnovers and given up yards against Abilene Cooper and Abilene High.
ADVANTAGE: MHS

KICKERS/PUNTERS

The Rebels have enough soccer players on the roster that finding a kicker or punter hasn't been a problem, Lee has had some solid consistency at this position. Angel Alvidrez has been solid with touchbacks, and Brady Roper's field goal was the biggest one of his season so far. Meanwhile, Midland High has had trouble finding some consistency at both positions this season.
ADVANTAGE: LEE

RETURN GAME

The ability of DeAndre Goodley and Xzavier Martinez is something that makes them dangerous and Goodley has shown that this season. Lee had solid returns last week against Abilene High, but the Bulldogs' breakaway ability gives them an advantage in this category.
ADVANTAGE: MHS

TODAY IN 2-5a

ODESSA PERMIAN AT SAN ANGELO CENTRAL
When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, San Angelo Stadium
On the air: KHKX FM (99.1)
Records: Permian 2-4, 2-2 in 2-5A; Central 6-1, 4-1
Last game: Permian 38, Amarillo Tascosa 23; Amarillo Tascosa 48, Central 27
Last meeting/series: Permian 48, Central 38 (2012); Permian leads series 33-10-1.
Weather forecast: Clear skies with a game time temperature of 67, dipping into the upper-50s as the night progresses. No chance of precipitation.

Three things you need to know

- Central is coming off its first loss of the season after committing seven turnovers against Amarillo Tascosa last week. Those turnovers were ultimately the downfall for the Bobcats, who still managed 400 yards off offense.

Before the loss to Tascosa, Central had turned the ball over eight times in six games.

- Permian is coming off a bye week, but its last game was also against Tascosa. The Panthers fared much better against the Rebels, but it took two TDs in the final seven minutes for the Panthers to pull away.

Tascosa pulled within 24-23 with 11:16 left to play, but a 3-yard TD run by Mikortan Fields and a 71-yard TD pass from Heath Wood to Dylan Hooper allowed the Panthers to seal the victory.

It was one of Permian's better offensive performances of the season as the Panthers racked up 506 yards on what is statistically the top defense in District 2-5A.

- Wins against Permian are rare for Central, which would make a victory over the Panthers tonight an even bigger deal. Not only would they keep themselves in the race for the 2-5A title, the Bobcats would also have their first win against Permian since 1997.

AMARILLO TASCOSA AT ABILENE COOPER
When/where: 7:30 p.m. today, Shotwell Stadium, Abilene
Records: Tascosa 2-4, 1-3 in 2-5A; Cooper 5-2, 4-1
Last game: Tascosa 48, San Angelo Central 27; Cooper 49, Midland High 14
Last meeting/series: Cooper 42, Tascosa 0 (2012); Cooper leads series 7-1.
Weather forecast: Cloudy skies with a game time temperature of 63 degrees, dipping into the lower 50s as the game progresses. Forty percent chance of scattered thunderstorms persisting throughout the night.

Three things you need to know

- Tascosa is coming off a major upset in District 2-5A after knocking off San Angelo Central last week.

The Rebels forced seven turnovers in the victory and then controlled the game with their triple-option run offense. They had 381 yards on the ground led by senior quarterback Tucker Davidson's 135 yards and three TDs. Davidson — a Texas Tech baseball commit — also threw for two scores.

- This matchup is between the most prolific offense and stingiest defense in 2-5A. Cooper is averaging 520 yards per game on offense led by senior quarterback and University of Texas commit Lorenzo Joe. Joe has thrown for 1,252 yards and nine TDs and is second in the district with 1,007 rushing yards and 14 TDs.

Tascosa is allowing 349.8 yards per game on defense, despite giving up an average of 34.3 points per game. The point total is largely due to an inconsistent offense that has turned the ball over or gone three-and-out putting the defense in a compromising situation.

Still, the Rebels are plus-5 in turnover differential this season, compared to plus-3 for Cooper, whose defense rarely produces turnovers. Although, the Cougars did force Midland High into three turnovers last week.

- This is only the second time Tascosa and Cooper have met as district opponents and just the ninth time the two teams have played in the history of the two programs.

Tascosa owns just one victory over Cooper, 21-20, in a 1990 non-district game.

MEMORABLE GAMES

1967
LEE 10, MIDLAND HIGH 8

In a breakthrough year the Rebels posted their first winning season (7-3) and defeated the Bulldogs for the first time.

In front of a then Midland-record 13,000 fans the game was scoreless until the fourth quarter, when a field goal and a 10-yard touchdown pass from Gregg Frazier to Mark McIntosh gave Lee a 10-0 lead with three minutes remaining.

MIDLAND HIGH 35, LEE 21

Though the season would end bitterly for the Bulldogs due to the famous "coin toss," Midland High opened District 4-5A play by defeating Lee for the second time in 15 years.

Dwane Roberts ran wild for the Bulldogs, scoring five touchdowns including a 102-yard kickoff return in the second quarter.

After a 41-yard scoring run from Lee's Farris Strambler, who amassed 185 yards in the game, Roberts and Midland High scored 28 unanswered points.

The Bulldogs set a school record that season with nine wins but were shut out of the playoffs when they tied Lee and Odessa Permian for the district title.

LEE 35, MIDLAND HIGH 28

The game is known best for "The Interception".

The Bulldogs had a possible playoff berth at stake and were trying to hand Lee its first loss of the year in the regular season finale. They were 10 yards away from the tying touchdown when a pass from Laynce Nix was intercepted by Lee's T.J. Glover. Alledgedly, Nix called an audible at the line of scrimmage on the decisive play.

As it turned out Midland High provided the Rebels with their closest contest of the 1999 season. Lee went 15-0, won its second consective state title and was crowned national champion by USA Today.

MIDLAND HIGH 49, LEE 0

With a definitive stomping the Bulldogs ended a 51-year playoff drought, 13 consecutive years of frustration at the hands of Lee and kept the Rebels out of the playoffs for the first time in nine years.

In what was Midland High's most one-sided victory against its crosstown rival, the Bulldogs outgained the Rebels, 375-131, and forced four turnovers. Six different players scored touchdowns for Midland High in the first rivalry game played at Grande Communications Stadium.

The Bulldogs ended the season with a school-record 12 victories and advanced to the state title game.

MIDLAND HIGH 28, LEE 20

After three straight lopsided games, the Tall City schools finally staged a competitive contest at Grande Communications Stadium. Neither team ever led by more than the eight-point final margin.

The running games dominated, as both teams completed only three passes apiece. Lee took a 20-14 lead late in the third quarter when Trent Hines scored on a 15-yard run on his only carry of the night.

But the rest of the game belonged to Midland High. The Bulldogs ran the ball 17 of their next 18 plays, taking the lead on a touchdown run by Baron Batch, then forcing a three-and-out by Lee and clinching the win on a 10-yard run by Ralph Riggins.

MIDLAND HIGH 20, LEE 13

Both teams entered this game looking for their first victory of the season. Through three quarters at Grande Communications Stadium it appeared Lee had the game in hand with a 13-6 lead. Two MHS touchdowns later turned the fate of the game in the Bulldogs' favor.

The game was truly a game of two halves and concerns mounted in the aftermath about Lee's conditioning late in games.

The Rebels opened the scoring with a touchdown midway through the first quarter and added another touchdown five seconds into the second quarter.

But the Dawgs converted a field goal as time expired before the half and carried that momentum into the second half.

A Lee fumble early in the fourth quarter turned the tide as MHS took over in Lee territory and put its first touchdown on the board. After forcing a three-and-out on Lee's next drive, MHS overcame a second-and-20 situation to march down the field and punch in the winning touchdown on a 1-yard Jerome Ellis run.

SHOWDOWN

From 1C

Rebels achieving that goal.

"We don't even think about being in first place right now," Kennedy said. "Each week, it's about a process. It's not about who we're playing, it's about us. Our first goal is getting to the playoffs and then we'll set some more goals after that."

But being atop the district has instilled a feeling in the team that Rebels junior running back Aron Dobbins says goes beyond simple confidence.

"I don't know if it's so much confidence, it's just more like a trust," Dobbins said. "We just trust in our process and we trust in each other and it all clicks. We're really excited about where we are right now and we're not going to let anybody take that away from us."

But Midland High will try, as the Rebels know very well heading into tonight's Tall City Showdown.

Tigers on brink of elimination after Boston wins

By Larry Lage

Boston leads series, 3-2

DETROIT — Miguel Cabrera hobbled through a stop sign, gently colliding with the catcher for an easy out at home.

Anibal Sanchez showed none of his no-hit stuff, Detroit's first shaky outing from its rotation in the AL championship series.

And yet the Comerica Park crowd had a chance to roar Thursday night when Prince Fielder came to the plate in the fifth and seventh innings. But each time, Fielder failed to come through and cheers quickly turned to jeers for the slumping slugger.

Fielder extended his postseason drought without an RBI to a career-long 65 at-bats and that helped Boston hold on for a 4-3 win and a 3-2 series lead that put the Tigers on the brink of elimination.

"He's had some good at-bats, doesn't have a lot to show for it, and some not so good at-bats," Tigers manager Jim Leyland said. "I still feel good something big could happen at any time."

The rotund first baseman doesn't deserve all the blame, but he's going to get a lot of it — especially if Detroit doesn't win the last two games in the best-of-seven series.

Tigers owner Mike Ilitch gave his OK to sign Fielder to a $214 million, nine-year deal last year to replace the then-injured Victor Martinez, expecting him to produce at the plate.

Fielder simply has not, often swinging early in counts for weak grounders that make fans in the Motor City groan.

He hasn't driven in a run during the postseason in 17-plus games since the opener of the 2012 ALCS against the New York Yankees. The longest RBI drought of his career during the regular season was with the Milwaukee Brewers during a 44 at-bat skid in 2008, according to STATS.

That from a five-time All-Star who's averaged 111 RBIs in his last seven seasons.

Fielder, though, wasn't Detroit's only problem in its third one-loss loss of the series, a defeat that put Boston within one win of the World Series.

Cabrera, who can barely run, in part because of a lingering groin injury, wrecked the Tigers' first chance to score in Game 5.

Cardinals need 1 more big start from Wacha

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — For four straight starts, Michael Wacha has been all but untouchable and appeared totally oblivious to the stakes.

The St. Louis Cardinals need one more just like that from the pressure-proof rookie to get to the World Series for the second time in three years.

Wacha outpitched NL Cy Young front-runner Clayton Kershaw in Game 2 and the Cardinals won 1-0 on an unearned run to take a 2-0 series lead. They're matched again in Game 6 Friday night, the precocious right-hander and the lefty who'd be at the top of anyone's list to work a must-win.

This time, the Cardinals lead the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

"I just expect Michael to go out and do what he's done, just like the rest of our guys," manager Mike Matheny said. "Stick with what you've done all along the way, and don't ignore and don't deny the excitement."

The Dodgers brought the series back to St. Louis by muscling up on offense, with Adrian Gonzalez hitting two of their four homers in a 6-4 Game 5 victory Wednesday.

Runs figure to be hard to come by in Game 6, although pitchers won't have shadows as an ally with a 7:37 p.m. CDT start. Game 2 had a late afternoon start with shadows creeping across Busch Stadium especially in the early innings and lights providing no real help, plus there was fatigue from the Cardinals' 13-inning win to open the series.

"I think you'll see both clubs get better at-bats just from the standpoint of vision," Dodgers manager Don Mattingly said.

Mattingly was hopeful both Hanley Ramirez (ribs) and Andre Ethier (ankle) would benefit from a travel day Thursday and be in the lineup.

"Andre, I expect to play. He just seems to get a little stronger," Mattingly said. As for Ramirez, who was hit by a pitch in Game 1, "We don't feel like he's getting any worse. It's just a matter of how the game goes for him."

The game

GAME 6 OF NLCS
LOS ANGELES AT ST. LOUIS

When: 7:07 p.m. today
Location: Busch Stadium, St. Louis
TV: TBS

The Cardinals didn't work out either, taking a bit of a mental break.

"We've had a lot of these lately," Matheny said. "Going back and forth I can feel a little jet lag. The guys aren't going to forget how to hit, forget how to throw."

Kershaw is the major league ERA leader three years running and worked the Dodgers' division clincher against Atlanta on three days' rest. He gave up just two hits in six innings of Game 1 and was ready to go long before the Dodgers' bats came alive.

"I don't really think about the what-ifs," Kershaw said. "I always assumed I was going to pitch Game 6."

Kershaw has a career 1-2 postseason record despite an impressive 2.88 postseason ERA.

"All we have to do," Gonzalez said, "is score for him."

Wacha is 2-0 with a microscopic 0.64 ERA in the postseason, allowing just six hits in 14 innings with 17 strikeouts. Counting his last start of the regular season, when he was one out shy of a no-hitter, make it 3-0 with an 0.42 ERA.

Slim leads have been of no concern, with the Cardinals totaling five runs in those games.

"Just this whole postseason ride has been amazing," Wacha said. "Hopefully we can just keep it going."

He knows how tough the opposing pitcher is, but says that can't be factor.

"Kershaw's a tough pitcher, obviously, and you saw that in his last start," Wacha said. "But I try not to worry too much about who I'm facing.

"Just try to approach it like any other start and just worry about myself, really."

Both are hard throwers from Texas who got to the majors fast. Kershaw was 20 when he made his debut in 2008 and Wacha was 21 and hadn't been in the system a year when he opened with seven strong innings against the Royals in May.

"He obviously handles himself pretty well," Kershaw said. "I don't think nerves is going to be the issue for him."

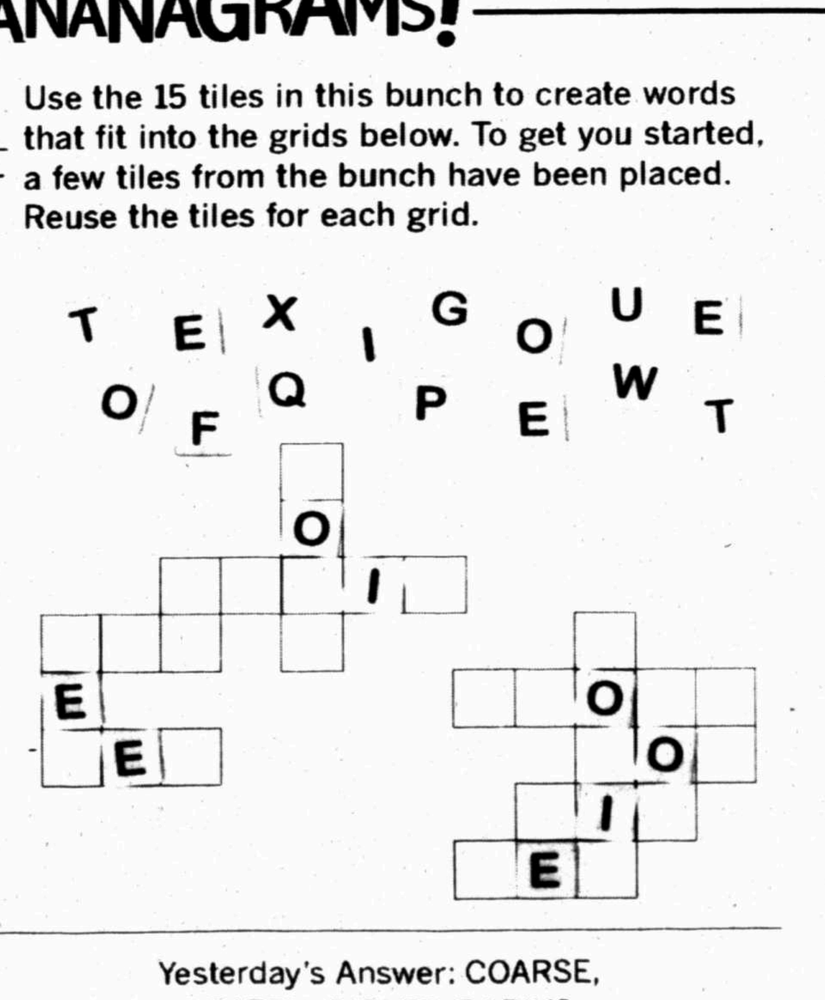

The Dodgers are trying to become the 12th team to rally from a 3-1 deficit to win a best-of-seven series. The Cardinals squandered a 3-1 series last fall against the Giants.

Game 7 would be Saturday night, and another rematch. The Dodgers' Hyun-Jim Ryu worked seven innings of three-hit ball in Game 3 to outpitch Cardinals ace Adam Wainwright, who got no help from a shaky defense.

Q: Why do some clouds look almost black?

Very dark looking or black clouds are probably those that contain a lot of rain in them and part of a thunderstorm, said Brent McRoberts, of Texas A&M University. "In general, the severity of a storm is related to cloud height, which is why dark clouds are usually an indicator of bad weather. Storms moving in from the west during the afternoon and evening hours will appear even darker. This is because the angle of the sun means light must travel a farther distance from the top of the cloud to the base of the cloud. Also, clouds composed of bigger droplets tend to absorb more sunlight than those with smaller droplets. Some experts say if a cloud is 3,000 feet or so thick, very little sunlight will pass through it, so it appears to be a dark-looking cloud."

Siblings are hurt by discovery that grandpa plays favorites

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My sisters and I just realized after comparing notes that our grandfather, who has been giving us an allowance for many years, gives each of us a different amount. We don't understand why he would do that unless he is playing favorites. Mom says it's because he's allowed to give each of us a certain amount per year for tax purposes, but it still doesn't explain why the amounts are all different.

We are a year apart in age, and the differences are substantial. Mom said Grandpa does this with her brothers and sisters, too.

Why wouldn't he give each of us the same amount so that it doesn't cause hard feelings? I know it's his money to do with as he pleases and we're lucky to get any at all, but knowing this has caused hurt feelings. We don't feel comfortable asking him, but we'd like to understand. What can we do? — LACKING "WHY"

DEAR LACKING "WHY": Having never met your grandfather, I can't speculate about what his motives might be. While it's not a good idea to look a gift-grandpa in the mouth, the only way you're going to get the answers you and your sisters are looking for would be to ask him. However, if you do, make sure to phrase the question in a nonconfrontational way — and be prepared for whatever his answer might be.

DEAR ABBY: I am the 49-year-old single dad of an incredible 7-year-old daughter. I have been separated from her mother for four years. Since that time my ex has had a few relationships, one of which produced another child.

Three months ago she met a new man and has decided to get married, even though their courtship has been brief. I'm trying to minimize the impact on our daughter, but everything I say to my ex comes across as toxic. Any suggestions? — CONFLICTED FATHER IN NORTHERN VIRGINIA

DEAR CONFLICTED FATHER: There is nothing you can do to control your ex's behavior. But you are right to try to minimize the impact on your little girl. Do not allow her to be caught in the crossfire of your anger and her mom's defensiveness. While I, too, question your ex's judgment in marrying someone she has known for only a short time, there is nothing to be gained by "spewing toxin."

In your interactions with your ex, think before you speak, count to 10 to mellow your tone and focus on the fact that YOU are the stabilizing force in your child's life. It's your job to remain strong and steady.

DEAR ABBY: I recently broke up with a man I had dated for more than two years. While we were together he gave me many gifts of jewelry.

Yesterday when I was dressing to go out, I started to put on a necklace that went with my outfit, then hesitated because it had been a gift from him. I knew I'd be seeing him that evening and that I would be meeting his new girlfriend.

Would it have been OK to wear the necklace? Most of the things he gave me were animal-related because he knew I love animals. If someone asks me where I got it, as they often do, what should I say? I don't want to jeopardize the friendship we have or my potential friendship with his girlfriend. — MIXED UP IN THE SOUTH

DEAR MIXED UP: An appropriate answer would be, "It was given to me by a friend." Your question implies that you decided against wearing the necklace that day, and I think you used good judgment.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

Many experts believe that a two-level overcall in a minor suit, with borderline values, is a losing proposition. South, who obviously held a different view, overcalled two clubs, and West made a trap pass. East-West were playing Negative Doubles, which means that a double by West here would have been for takeout, not for penalties. In an auction like this, for those who play Negative Doubles, opener must re-open through the two-level with less than three cards in the overcalled suit. That re-opening bid should be double whenever he has a reasonably balanced hand, except for the shortness in the opponents' suit. This way you can still penalize bad overcalls like this one.

East duly re-opened with double resigned to playing in hearts should West bid that suit. West completed his plan by passing and two clubs doubled was defeated four tricks for plus-1,100. Was South's overcall the worst thing the opponents did on this board? No! What was North thinking when he passed this hand out in two clubs doubled?

He should have re-doubled at his last turn. This low-level re-double when your side has been doubled for penalties is called an SOS Re-double. At duplicate bridge, if you make a double contract you already have a top board, so re-doubling to increase your score is needless. A top is a top. This re-double says, "Partner, we are going to get killed in this contract. Please try something else." That something else might get killed also but it hardly matters. A bottom is a bottom. At least you tried. That would have gotten North-South to two hearts on this hand, which can't be defeated!

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, Oct. 18, 2013:

This year you often will have to decide between doing what you think will work and doing what you want to do. You will discover that your emotional voice has more power, as it reflects an inner depth and caring. If you are single, relating could be far from easy. You could experiment with being docile, verbal, non-combative, etc. If you are attached, as a couple, you often are on opposite ends of an issue. Try to reach a compromise so that each of you will have a chance to make a final decision. Respect your differences, and you will be on cruise control. ARIES is strong and domineering.

ARIES (March 20-April 19) ★★★★ You are a sign that is likely to feel the eclipse today. In any case, you most definitely will if you were born around April 18. For many of you, it could create a sudden change in the next month — for the better. Do not resist that which you cannot change. Tonight: Do your thing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You will be full of get-up-and-go today, but there seems to be a problem that is subconscious. Keep searching within yourself to see if there is an unaddressed issue. Take your time before making any statements or commitments now. Tonight: Get some extra R and R.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ You want to have more fun in your life. In pursuit of this goal, a friend could be distancing him- or herself more quickly than you realize. This person might not want to take part in this adventure. Be open to different types of entertainment with this person. Tonight: TGIF!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★ Pressure keeps building between a personal matter and a financial or business issue. You do not need to make a choice right now; you simply need to prioritize and go with the flow. Nothing will be resolved today. Just hang in there or call it an early day. Tonight: A force to behold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Follow your gut today. Emotions could run high, and a true representation of where you are coming from can be understood only from this level. Take a walk, listen to music and/or detach from your daily routine with another preferred method. Tonight: Relax to good music.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Dealing with investment sources might put you in a tizzy. Right now, don't do anything with today's active eclipse. You only will be causing yourself a problem. Give yourself at least a week. Tonight: Intrigue a loved one with a seductive clue or a statement of intention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ An eclipse in your opposite sign could find you exhausted and tired. What might be best is not to get into the moment, and detach from it instead. Others are even more volatile than usual. Strap on your seat belt. Tonight: Say "yes" to an innocuous invitation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Be ready for a change in your daily schedule. A situation could evolve that you cannot and should not say "no" to. Don't be surprised if others express their disappointment in not getting together. Be flattered, and don't become triggered. Tonight: Take care of yourself first.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Your creativity flourishes, entertains others and permits unusual ideas to pop up. Emotionally, you might want to be contrary or controlling. Understand that you will not get anywhere with that type of behavior. Tonight: Be naughty and nice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You could be slightly more challenging than you think. You are determined to have a domestic situation go a certain way. The other person involved is determined to have things his or her way. Let go of any must-haves for now. Tonight: Others need your time and attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ You actually might use too many words in an explanation. When you present something in this way, it makes it seem as if you are feeling guilty or covering up. In your case, neither assumption would be right. Remember, the less said, the better. Tonight: Deep into a conversation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ If you must take a money risk, make it small. That way, if you lose, there will be no lasting pain. You could encounter a difficulty with a friend or loved one about a financial situation. Why let it happen? Tonight: Play the role of peacekeeper. Keep your wallet hidden.

IPO to give investors a stake in running back

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Here's a new twist on fantasy sports: A San Francisco startup is offering a chance to bet on the moneymaking potential of star athletes.

The unusual investment opportunity kicked off Thursday with an IPO filing proposing to sell stock for a stake in the future income of the Houston Texans' Arian Foster, a top running back in the National Football League.

The initial public offering hinges on a deal requiring Fantex Holdings Inc. to pay Foster $10 million in return for a 20 percent share of his remaining contract with the Texans, his endorsement income and any other future money tied to his football career. Those earnings could include potential broadcasting jobs that Foster gets after his playing career is over. It doesn't include money Foster would make if he pursues a career unrelated to football.

Fantex plans to sell about 1 million shares at $10 apiece to pay Foster and cover other expenses. The tracking stock won't trade on a major stock exchange; instead, it will be bought and sold on a trading platform set up by Fantex, which was co-founded last year by Silicon Valley entrepreneur Buck French.

Foster, who is in his fifth season with the Texans, is just the first player in what Fantex hopes will become a diversified line-up of star athletes. Foster declined to comment citing Securities and Exchange Commission regulations.

The company is aiming to do IPOs featuring players in professional baseball, basketball, hockey and golf, as well.

"Our philosophy is to work with people who we believe have interesting brand attributes that we can work with and they can work with us," said French who got rich during the dot-com boom after selling a software company to Siebel Systems. "You don't have to be a superstar. I could see us working with big names and no-names. The question is do they have attributes to build a brand for the long haul."

At least one person associated with Fantex knows something about a long sports career. John Elway, the former Denver Broncos quarterback who is now executive vice president of football operations for his former team, is a member of Fantex's parent company, Fantex Holdings.

This isn't the first time that a public figure has bet on his future moneymaking potential in the securities markets. British rocker David Bowie famously sold shares in his future earnings with the issue of "Bowie Bonds."

Just like any securities investment there are risks. The marketability of professional athletes can go through wild swings if they become embroiled in scandals, as superstars such as bicyclist Lance Armstrong and golfer Tiger Woods have proven. There's also no guarantee that athletes will have long playing careers.

Foster, 27, already has suffered injuries to his knees and hamstring that have sidelined him in previous seasons and limited his ability to play in other games. He also has been plagued by an irregular heartbeat since he was 12, according to the IPO filing.

So far, Foster has remained healthy enough to be one of the main cogs on the Texans, a team that was widely expected to be a Super Bowl contender. It's been a disappointment so far this season with a 2-4 record.

Fantex is betting it can help Foster line up a lot of lucrative endorsements, as well as help him make money after his career is over. The Texans signed Foster to a five-year contract that will pay him $23.5 million during the period covered by the Fantex IPO. He also could earn up to $2 million in bonuses, depending on his performance, according to the IPO filing. He's also lined up endorsement deals that could pay nearly $700,000.

If Foster collects the maximum amounts from his Texans contract and current endorsements, Fantex would receive about $5 million.

Toyota recalls 803K vehicles for air bag defect

Associated Press

DETROIT — Toyota is recalling 803,000 vehicles in the U.S. because their air bags or power steering could stop working.

The Camry and Camry hybrid, Avalon and Avalon hybrid and Venza from the 2012 and 2013 model years are affected.

Toyota said water from the air conditioning condenser can leak onto the air bag control module and cause a short circuit. That could illuminate the air bag warning light, disable the air bag or cause the air bags to deploy inadvertently.

The power steering assist function could also become inoperable if the air bag control module is damaged, making the vehicles harder to steer.

Toyota knows of two minor injuries, but no accidents, related to the defect.

Owners will be notified starting next month.

Toyota dealers will repair the problem for free.

Oil prices fall

The price of oil nearly fell below $100 a barrel for the first time in more than three months Thursday as relief faded over a U.S. deal to avoid a default on its debts.

Benchmark crude for November delivery slid as low as $100.03 before recovering a bit to close with a loss of $1.62, or 1.6 percent, to $100.67 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil last traded below $100 a barrel on July 3.

Oil gained more than $1 a day earlier, driven by optimism over the eleventh-hour deal reached by leaders in Congress to reopen the government through Jan. 15 and increase the nation's borrowing authority through Feb. 7. The rally lost momentum, however, as investors assessed the impact of the 16-day partial shutdown of the government on the economy and worried that the deal only postpones the debt problem.

"More important for oil markets, S&P estimates that the closure of the government will result in a 0.6% reduction in Q4 GDP growth," wrote Addison Armstrong, senior director of market research at Tradition Energy, in a note to clients.

Also helping to push prices lower was the improvement in negotiations on Iran's nuclear program between the Islamic Republic and six world powers. The two sides agreed to meet again in Geneva in November.

Iran's oil exports have dropped substantially over the past years because of U.S.-led economic sanctions, one of the reasons usually cited by analysts for rising oil prices.

At the gas pump, the average price for a gallon of gasoline stayed at $3.36. That's 15 cents lower than a month ago, and 40 cents cheaper than at this time last year.

Texans starting Abilene Wylie grad Keenum at QB vs. Chiefs

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Case Keenum, who hasn't played in a meaningful game since he was in college back in January 2012, will start at quarterback for the Houston Texans this Sunday in one of the tougher environments in the NFL.

Keenum will make his first appearance in a regular-season game against the rugged defense of the undefeated Kansas City Chiefs at Arrowhead Stadium, where the fans just set a Guinness record as the noisiest outdoor stadium in the world.

So be it: Keenum will start for Matt Schaub, who is out dealing with injuries to his right ankle and foot, and will try to help the Houston Texans snap a four-game losing streak.

"We're struggling, and we're looking for a spark," coach Gary Kubiak said. "I think he deserves an opportunity to go out there. It's a tough place to play. It's a tough place to get your first start and all that good stuff. But I'm not sending him out there by himself. I'm sending him out there with his football team and the guys understand that."

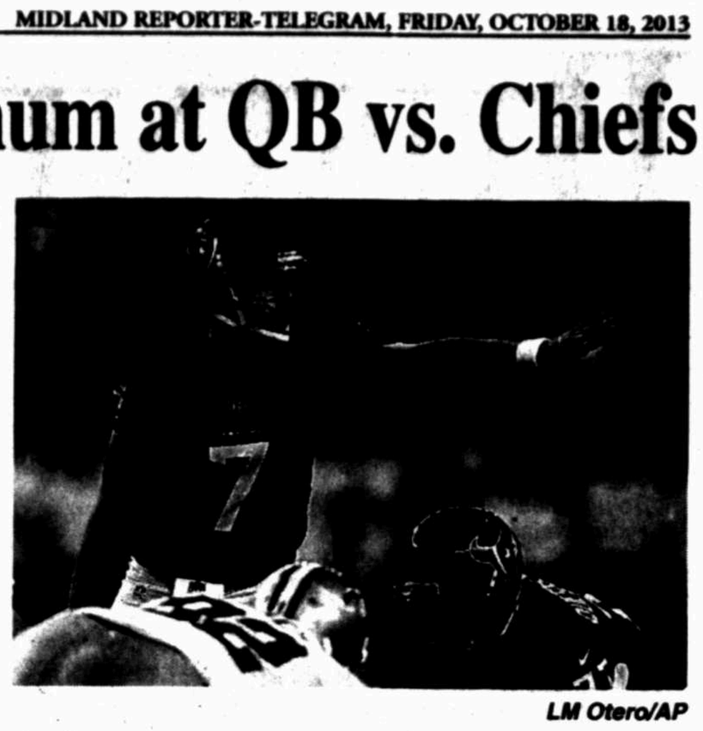

Keenum was a record-setting quarterback at the University of Houston before spending last season on the practice squad. The undrafted free agent has played in several preseason games, but hasn't played in a game that counted since leading the Cougars to a 30-14 win over Penn State in the TicketCity Bowl on Jan. 2, 2012.

Keenum said he prepares for practice and preseason games the same way he got ready for games in his college career, so nothing will change for him this week.

"It means just as much to me every rep I take, but obviously the games are definitely different," he said. "I guess I can officially say this is the best NFL defense I've ever played, so this is going to be a big test."

The Texans (2-4) have been hurt by penalties, turnovers and other mistakes during their skid. Kubiak chose to go with Keenum over backup T.J. Yates, who led Houston to its first playoff win two years ago when Schaub was hurt. He struggled Sunday after Schaub was injured, throwing two interceptions, the first of which was returned for a touchdown.

Now they'll look to Keenum to help them get back on track. He isn't daunted by the challenge and is used to being the underdog. He said that people have doubted him his entire life.

Wilson, Lynch lead Seattle past Cardinals

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Russell Wilson was a loser in his NFL debut in Arizona 13 months ago.

Not so Thursday night.

Wilson threw for three touchdowns, Marshawn Lynch rushed for 91 yards and the Seattle Seahawks beat the Cardinals 34-22.

The Seahawks (6-1) intercepted two of Carson Palmer's passes, converting both into touchdowns, and sacked him seven times, twice by Chris Clemons, who had been questionable for the game with a hyperextended elbow.

Winston started at right tackle and was part of a 34-22 loss to Seattle. The Cardinals' offense struggled with 234 yards of offense, including a paltry 30 yards rushing. Carson Palmer was also sacked seven times by the Seahawks defense.

Jones shrugs off criticism over Ratliff deal

By Tom Orsborn
San Antonio Express-News

Jerry Jones used humor Thursday to dismiss critics claim that his decision in 2011 to give Jay Ratliff a five-year, $40 million contract extension was the worst he's made during his 25 seasons as owner of the Dallas Cowboys.

"Well, if I had a legal pad and could show you all the decisions I've made ever, it's not the worst one I've ever made," said Jones, who punctuated his comments with a smile.

Ratliff received a $10 million signing bonus when he agreed to the extension, which kicked in this season. All told, he pocketed a guaranteed $18 million from the deal.

In return, the Cowboys received zero snaps this season from the four-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle, who was cut Wednesday after failing the physical needed to remove him from the physically unable to perform list.

During a 12-minute news conference at club headquarters in Irving, Jones said the decision was best for both parties. Citing legal matters involving the right to privacy regarding health matters, Jones and coach Jason Garrett declined to address claims made by Ratliff's agent that the nine-year veteran's injury was way more severe than the club's characterization of it as a sports hernia.

Ratliff underwent surgery last December for what agent Mark Slough said was a "vicious" injury involving tendons being torn from the pelvic area. The timetable for recovery was a year, Slough said.

"I have a long history of having an appreciation for guys who give it up and work and play through pain, and I do with Jay," Jones said. "So it is disappointing that that great career of his has to end. As it turns out, all great players have to have a time.

"…I know he gave us great effort. He's a tremendous competitor…We regret it has ended on any kind of sour note."

Jones said the silver lining in cutting Ratliff is that it helps the team realize "help is not on the way" for a defensive line ravaged by injuries.

Since the start of training camp, the Cowboys have lost three ends to season-ending injuries, including Pro Bowler Anthony Spencer, and could be without franchise sack-leader DeMarcus Ware (quadriceps) when they play at Philadelphia on Sunday for the NFC East lead in a battle of 3-3 teams.

"We needed him when we had him, and we need him now that we don't have him," Jones said of Ratliff.

Despite the club's unceremonious dumping of him, Ratliff will be remembered as one of the team's greatest draft picks. Chosen in the seventh round out of Auburn in 2005, the Georgia native earned trips to the Pro Bowl from 2008-20011 while playing nose tackle in a 3-4 scheme.

The Cowboys envisioned him anchoring Monte Kiffin's 4-3 defense, so much so that they traded down in the 2013 NFL Draft in the spring to select center Travis Frederick late in the first round rather than grabbing Florida defensive tackle Sharrif Floyd at No. 18.

Injury report: Despite missing practice a second straight day Thursday, Ware told reporters he will be a game-time decision Sunday…Running back DeMarco Murray (knee) also missed practice for a second consecutive day… Wide receiver Miles Austin, who has missed two games this season with a hamstring injury, got the day off after practicing Wednesday.

Chiasson, Stars hand Sharks 1st loss

Associated Press

Stars	4

DALLAS — Cody Eakin tied it at 12:58 of the second period and rookie Alex Chiasson scored in the shootout to lift the Dallas Stars to a 4-3 win over San Jose on Thursday night that ended the Sharks' perfect start to the season.

Chiasson was the only one of the six skaters to score in the shootout, beating Antti Niemi by firing a shot just inside the right post.

Chiasson is Dallas' leader with four goals in six games this season. For his NHL career, he has 10 goals in 13 games.

The Sharks (6-0-1) fell one game shy of tying the best start in their history, last season's 7-0 beginning.

The Stars outshot San Jose 31-29 in regulation. The Sharks took all five shots in overtime but couldn't beat goalie Dan Ellis even though Dallas was short-handed for the final 1:02 of overtime.

San Jose, which scored eight power-play goals in its first six games, was 0 for 5 against Dallas.

San Jose took a 1-0 lead just 9 seconds into the game. Off the opening faceoff, Tyler Kennedy skated along the right wing and shot the puck past Ellis for his first goal this season.

Dallas tied the score on Tyler Seguin's rebound goal at 16:44. His third goal extended his personal points streak to five games.

The tie lasted barely a minute. The Sharks took a 2-1 lead when Matthew Nieto skated to the top of the slot and fired a shot off the right post and in at 17:52.

Dallas outshot San Jose 12-11 in the period. Each team failed to score on two power plays.

The Stars tied the game again twice in the second period. At 1:53, Trevor Daley scored his first goal on a rebound of Eakin's shot. Eakin scored his second goal of 2013-14 to tie the game 3-3 at 12:58.

Daley was involved in another goal at 12:31 of the period when San Jose's Patrick Marleau attempted a wraparound. The play was first ruled a save by Ellis. A review showed that the puck had gone off Daley's skate across the goal line.

The goal was the sixth this season for Marleau. He and Pittsburgh's Sidney Crosby are the only NHL players with at least one point in all seven games this season.

Nineteen seconds before the second period ended, the Stars' Antoine Roussel and the Sharks' Matt Irwin received major penalties for fighting.

The Sharks had entered the game averaging better than 41 shots on goal per game and allowing less than 24.

Niemi has played every minute of the Sharks' schedule to date.

NOTES: Kennedy's goal was the fastest recorded against the Stars franchise during its 47 seasons in Minnesota and Dallas. The earliest goal in San Jose's 22 seasons was by Stephane Matteau 8 seconds into a game against St. Louis Jan. 11, 2000. . Sharks right wing Adam Burish, a 7-year veteran, had back surgery in Los Angeles to correct a disc problem. . Dallas' Ray Whitney's two second-period assists gave him nine during a six-game scoring streak (all assists) against the Sharks.

J.J. Henry shoots 60 in Las Vegas

By Keith Freeman
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — J.J. Henry made a 50-foot eagle putt from the fringe on his final hole Thursday for an 11-under 60 and a one-stroke lead in the Shriners Hospitals for Children Open.

Henry had nine birdies at TPC Summerlin in the lowest round of his career. The two-time PGA Tour winner broke the course record and was a shot off the event mark of 59 set by Chip Beck in 1991 at Sunrise Golf Club.

Henry began play on the No. 10, and birdied Nos. 12 and 15-17 on his first nine. He added birdies on Nos. 2, 4-6 and 8 before eagling the par-5 ninth.
