Yeltsin pitches 'bombshell' debt-swap plan

MUNICH, Germany — Boris Yeltsin offered Wednesday to swap factories, energy resources and other properties for Russian debt, a startling conclusion to a Western summit that failed to chart a course for restarting the global economy.

President Bush and the leaders of Germany, Japan, Britain, France, Italy and Canada found it easier to agree on fixes for the Russian economy than to end a pronounced economic slowdown that has bedeviled their own countries.

The leaders gave their blessing to a $24 billion "self-help" package for Russia. But they declined to give Yeltsin what he sought most — a two-year deferment on $70 billion in foreign debt.

Yeltsin said he was optimistic that negotiations later this year on debt deferral would be successful. He said he was "satisfied with the results of our conversations."

Amoco to cut its work force by 15 percent

■ Effect on Permian Basin will not be significant, spokesmen predict.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

The downsizing of the domestic oil industry continued this week with three of the nation's largest oil companies announcing major cuts. However, the effect upon the Permian Basin is expected to be minimal.

Amoco Corp. announced Wednesday at its Chicago headquarters that it will cut 8,500 jobs, 15.7 percent of its 54,120 employees, by the end of 1993 and take an $800 million after-tax charge in the second quarter to cover restructuring costs.

An Amoco spokesman, however, said the effect on the Permian Basin would not be significant. Ray Thompson, Amoco public affairs advisor, said that while the overall employment trend for Amoco in the Permian Basin would be downward, as the company becomes more efficient, there is no targeted reduction figure for the Permian Basin.

Amoco's announcement was one of the largest staff reductions announced in recent months. Hughes Aircraft, Aetna Life Insurance and Digital Equipment have also announced plans to reduce thousands of jobs, and economists, stunned by the extent of job losses last month, have issued more pessimistic forecasts.

The company employs 900 in the Permian Basin at its Amoco North and South Permian Basin business units and at Amoco Pipeline. Thompson said some Amoco employees might leave the company as a result of asset sales and become employees of other oil companies. Amoco has maintained a strong divestiture program in the Permian Basin for the past two years.

Speculation about Clinton's choice reaches fever pitch

■ Convention preview/1D

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Bill Clinton said Wednesday he had not made up his mind about a vice presidential pick as he made a sentimental journey to his home town of Hope amid fever-pitch speculation about his choice.

"I can tell you categorically I have not made a final decision as of this hour," the Arkansas governor said aboard a late-afternoon flight to Hope.

Still, with the Democratic National Convention just a few days away, party insiders burned up phone lines speculating about Clinton's search. Tennessee Sen. Al Gore and Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey were the hot names on the day's rumor mill, but there were no hints from Clinton.

The head of Clinton's search committee, Warren Christopher, was in Little Rock, and the prospective running mates were asked to remain reachable through the next two days.

Texas to lose $50 million from education program

By Mary Gay Johnson
N.Y. Times News Service

Texas will lose out on $50 million from a federal program to help poor children because the government will use outdated census figures to dole out the money this fall.

The U.S. Department of Education defends the move, saying it must use 1980 data to distribute Chapter 1 money because it lacks complete 1990 figures to make new allocations. But educators bemoan the decision, and state officials say they will try to lobby for extra funding.

Texas is in a bind because the number of children who live in Lone Star beauty pageants ride high

By Indira A.R. Lakshmanan
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — The beauty of Texas women has long been glorified, from the 19th-century ideal of the cowgirl, breath-stoppingly beautiful but frontier-tough, to the more recent stereotype of the big-haired, buxom, baton-twirling, blonde cheerleader.

What has remained constant has been the fiercely held faith of many Texans that the Lone Star State grows 'em the prettiest.

It's something in the water, speculated Carol Beck-Edgar, spokeswoman for the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant.

It's the climate, countered historian Patricia Kruppa of the University of Texas at Austin: "They can get out and show their charms 12 months a year. They can't do that in Wisconsin."

The notion that Texas breeds beauties is at least humored, if not shared, by the rest of the country if the consistent success of Texan contestants in the Miss America pageant is any measure.

Beauty pageants have thrived in this state, from the Miss Miracle Mulch and Miss Turpentine Spirits titles to the grand dame of them all, the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant, which is going on in Fort Worth this week.

Texas historians, sociologists and pageant promoters maintain that these competitions say much about our culture and how we view womanhood.

"There's nothing at all considered demeaning about (beauty pageants) in most areas around here,"

Council applicants

Midlanders interested in the at-large City Council seat vacated by Mayor J.D. Faircloth on June 1 have until 5 p.m. today to submit their application to the City Secretary's office on the fourth floor of City Hall. The council will interview all applicants during a public meeting on July 14, after which the new member will be chosen. Any city resident qualified to vote is eligible for the position.

New lower fares

DALLAS — Continental Airlines said Wednesday it would cut fares an average of 25 percent on about half its flights today, bucking a price increase expected from other major airlines Friday. The Houston-based carrier said it could afford the sale, which is aimed at leisure travelers, because it had avoided the industry's 50 percent discount promotion in May and early June. The sale ends July 17 and is good for travel between July 16 and Sept. 15. Lower prices apply only to round-trip tickets and travelers staying over on a Saturday night.

Aftershock hits

BIG BEAR LAKE, Calif. — Another strong aftershock struck just east of this quake-damaged mountain resort Wednesday. It knocked homes off their foundations, broke utility lines, caused fires and injured five people, officials said. The 8:43 p.m. CDT quake registered 5.4 on the Richter scale and was centered near Big Bear, said Russ Needham of the U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo. Several aftershocks in the magnitude-4 range followed, Needham said. The 5.4 quake was felt throughout Los Angeles, 70 miles to the west.

Huerta said in the lottery ad, which appeared June 23 in several Texas newspapers. The quote from the former bingo hall worker perplexed many Texans who doubted she ever said such a thing. Expect summer sun, mid-90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 95 and south winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly sunny with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 64, Wednesday's high reached 93 compared with the record high for that date of 103 set in 1964. The record low for that date is 56 set in 1979.

STATE

Sunny skies covered the state Wednesday as temperatures soared past the 100 mark in West Texas.

A high pressure in the gulf and low pressure in the west maintained a strong flow of wind this afternoon in South Texas. Skies remained clear to partly cloudy throughout the region.

In the West, readings were mostly in the 90s with 101 recorded at El Paso.

For the North, the summertime heat continued to grip the region. Readings in the lower 90s were common elsewhere except for the upper 80s over the Big Country. Extremes ranged from 88 degrees at Abilene to 95 degrees at Waco.

Sunshine was in abundant supply although a few puffy fair weather clouds were observed in East Texas.

Fair nights and sunny days through Friday for North Texans. Lows in the lower to middle 70s. Highs in the lower to middle 90s.

The West Texas forecast summary shows partly cloudy skies tonight and Friday with a slight chance of thunderstorms mainly over the panhandle through tonight.

NATION

Stormy weather was scattered from the Plains into the Ohio Valley on Wednesday after a night of severe storms caused damage with wind and hail in Kansas.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended across Kansas, northeastern North Dakota, northwestern Minnesota, the Great Lakes, and into the Ohio Valley.

Early Wednesday, hail as big as baseballs and wind blowing up to 100 mph pummeled parts of northern Kansas, destroying roofs, snapping power lines and injuring at least six people.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SUMMIT: Yeltsin offer stirs otherwise quiet talks

leaders bemoaned the fact that "too many people are out of work" and pledged to "act together to assure that the recovery gathers strength and growth picks up."

But there was no agreement on how this would be achieved.

The summit failed even more dramatically in its biggest economic challenge, finding a way to end an impasse in a six-year effort to liberalize global trade.

The stalemate has been caused by a bitter fight between the United States and Europe over farm subsidies.

Yeltsin made his debt-swap offer in his first appearance at an annual economic summit of the world's seven leading industrial democracies.

Participants in the closed door discussions described Yeltsin's proposal, made at the end of the discussions, as a bombshell. They said he provided few details of just how much of Russia's $70 billion in external debt he would be willing to swap for the country's hard assets.

For Yeltsin, who is desperate to attract private Western investment to stop the collapse of his economy, the proposal could turn out to be significant.

"It was a bolt from the blue," said Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. He and Italian Prime Minister Giuliano Amato said that Yeltsin's surprise offer attracted a lot of attention.

"The Japanese really paid attention at that one," Amato said, imitating someone pushing his earlobes forward to hear better. Japan has previously linked settlement of a territorial dispute with Russia to increased Japanese aid to the Yeltsin government.

A senior U.S. official, who spoke on grounds of anonymity, said Yeltsin specifically mentioned that he would be willing to exchange buildings and other property, minerals and oil reserves in debt-for-equity swaps.

Yeltsin's appearance dominated the 18th annual economic summit. The Russian president and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl both stressed the friendly, non-adversarial nature of Yeltsin's appearance before the Group of Seven.

Kohl said the talks with Yeltsin had marked a "comprehensive and lasting partnership."

Before arriving in Munich, Yeltsin served notice in blunt language that he wasn't begging for charity and would not accept Western aid if the terms were too harsh. Once at the summit, Yeltsin sounded a much more conciliatory tone, sounding like a super-salesman peddling his country's considerable advantages for foreign investors.

Yeltsin told reporters that while the $24 billion aid package was important in his efforts to turn the economy around, it could not compete with the "hundreds of billions of dollars" that could flow into the country in private investments.

"When my presidency comes to an end in 1994, I trust that reform will have become irreversible in all areas," Yeltsin said.

Before leaving Munich, Bush praised Yeltsin as a "courageous leader" and brushed aside criticism that Yeltsin had at time trampled over diplomatic niceties.

CLINTON: Candidate makes sentimental journey

(From 1A)

Others who have talked with Clinton in recent days include Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, Florida Sen. Bob Graham and Pennsylvania Sen. Harris Wofford.

One senior Clinton aide said a decision was possible today but more likely Friday. Some aides continued to push Clinton to hold off on the announcement until Sunday, the eve of the nominating convention in New York.

In Washington, Gore was the focus of Capitol Hill speculation. The Tennessee lawmaker was with his family in Carthage, Tenn., and his staff said he had heard nothing from the Clinton camp. Gore, dressed casually, repeated a terse "no comment" to reporters camped out at his home as he headed for lunch with his wife and children.

While most of the rumors centered on Gore, there were, as always, some new names thrown late into the mix. Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn was one.

Hamilton spent the day working on Capitol Hill and assured reporters, "We'll know in a few days. I'm as in the dark as everybody else."

The Indiana congressman has had no direct contact with Clinton since last week, but has been in touch since then with Christopher, according to sources familiar with the process.

Kerrey flew to Idaho after a midnight meeting in Little Rock with Clinton. Sources close to the process said the 90-minute meeting went well.

Clinton broke his silence on the matter only to angrily deny published reports that his wife, Hillary, had lobbied against Kerrey because of nasty remarks Kerrey leveled against Clinton during the Democratic primary wars.

"That's an absolute lie," Clinton said before campaigning at a welfare-to-work center in Pine Bluff. "It was an outrageous misrepresentation of anything anybody said. Hillary never said anything like that."

Even in Kerrey's exit from the governor's mansion early Wednesday, the mystery and intrigue surrounding Clinton's search continued. Kerrey smiled and shook his head that he couldn't discuss the conversation and then sprinted through a Holiday Inn Express lobby to ditch the reporters who had followed him.

Clinton aides insisted that the candidate was keeping his thoughts to himself.

"I think it's in Bill Clinton's head right now, and anybody who tells you otherwise just wants to sound like they know what they're talking about," said one source.

Clinton spent the evening in Hope, Ark., using his dusty southwestern hometown as a backdrop for a Time magazine cover.

LOSE: Government to use outdated census figures

poverty has increased 39 percent statewide since 1980, census figures show. Yet funding has not kept pace, depriving tens of thousands of needy children of the chance to participate in Chapter 1 programs to improve their reading, math and language skills.

"Texas has changed significantly in 10 years. There's more low-income children, there's a higher minority population and the money is very much needed — especially when you consider the state is having trouble coming up with money for education," said Alan Bookman, director of communications for the Texas Association of Professional Educators, which represents 54,000 school employees.

"We need to keep in mind who will lose, who will suffer, and it's low-income children," he said.

Texas will see a 31 percent increase in Chapter 1 funding when 1990 Census figures are used, said Wayne Riddle, a specialist in education finance for Congressional Research Service in Washington.

Statistics help define the frustration felt by many local school officials who share similar stories: too many children in need, but not enough money to foot the bill.

For instance, the 1980 Census showed that 19,445 children age 5 to 17 in Tarrant County came from low-income families. That number jumped 48 percent in 1990 to 28,717, Riddle said.

Statewide, there was a 39 percent increase in the number of needy children from the earlier census, from 568,132 in 1980 to 791,190 in 1990, he said.

Cleta Smith, coordinator of the Arlington school district's Chapter 1 program, said: "We are only able to serve a small percentage of the kids that qualify."

But a Department of Education spokesman said the government must use 1980 Census figures because it lacks census figures from Puerto Rico.

The government distributes Chapter 1 funding by the number of children living in poverty. Most school districts determine eligibility according to whether a student receives a free lunch and through testing.

CUTS: Domestic oil industry downsizing continues

(From 1A)

Wellchem, a manufacturer of chemicals used in oil and gas production. Wellchem maintains a blending plant in Seminole and sales offices in Midland and Levelland.

"If that sale is completed," Thompson said, "we would hope that Wellchem employees would have an opportunity to go with a new owner."

The Amoco job cuts are part of a "strategic reassessment" to make the company more competitive, Amoco Chairman H. Laurance Fuller said in a statement.

Fuller said he expects the energy industry to rebound eventually. "But we have to recognize the realities of the economy today," he said.

"This is a significant move," said Eugene L. Nowak, an oil analyst at Dean Witter. "They don't want to sit around and count on being bailed out by higher oil and gas prices."

Also Wednesday, Unocal Corp. said it would streamline its operations and cut 1,100 jobs. The Los Angeles oil company earlier had announced it would cut between 800 and 1,200 jobs to lower debt it took on to repel a takeover attempt in the 1980s.

Dave Kinzelman, vice president of Unocal's Central Region office in Midland, said it is too early to know what affect the company's cuts may have on Midland, and that it would be several weeks before the final strength of each office would be known. He was optimistic, however, that Unocal would maintain a strong presence in Midland and would be one of four major offices for the oil company.

Amoco said about 5,700 employees have taken or will take early retirement or severance packages, or have left or will leave because of normal attrition.

An additional 2,800 have left or will leave the company as it sells off or closes some operations, Fuller said.

Amoco spokeswoman Patricia D. Wright said at least some of the people would be leaving involuntarily, but she didn't have exact figures.

The largest number of cuts will be in the Chicago area, where 1,100 jobs will be eliminated, Mrs. Wright said.

The elimination of those 8,500 jobs follows Amoco's cuts of nearly 1,800 jobs in 1990 and 1991.

"The human impact of our decisions is very real and very painful," Fuller said. "However, our actions also are very necessary."

He cited the decline in profits and cash flow brought about by lower prices for oil and natural gas and the worldwide recession.

Amoco is the fifth-largest U.S. oil company. It had 1991 earnings of $1.5 billion, down 22 percent from the previous year. The company had 1991 sales of $28.3 billion compared with $31.6 billion a year earlier.

Amoco said it expects the new round of job cuts and the restructuring to save the company $600 million a year.

The restructuring will focus the company's efforts on its most profitable businesses — oil and natural gas exploration and production; refining, marketing and transportation; and chemicals, Wright said.

On Tuesday, another oil giant, Mobil, announced it had cut 2,000 white-collar jobs over the past year. A portion of those previously announced cuts already had been made in Midland and the Permian Basin.

Mobil, the second-largest U.S. based oil company after Exxon Corp., employs 67,500 worldwide, with nearly 39,000 workers in the United States.

"It's part of an industry process," said John H. Lichtblau, chairman of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York of Amoco's move. "It's not the first company to cut back, and it won't be the last."

The Associated Press and New York Times News Service contributed to this report.

PAGEANTS: Experts analyze Texas enthusiasm

said historian T.R. Fehrenbach, the San Antonio-based author of "Lone Star," a history of Texas. He ascribed their abiding popularity to conservative rural values brought to Texas cities with the state's rapid urbanization since 1940.

With 60 preliminary competitions around the state, the Miss Texas pageant is one of the country's largest, Beck-Edgar said.

"It's a different heritage," she said. "We probably also have more Fourth of July parades and more debutante balls down here. That's an important part of our culture."

Michael Marsden, a professor of popular culture at Bowling Green State University in Ohio, agreed, calling the pageants "cultural harvests" that present "the ideal daughters from this year's class."

But such idealization of femininity and traditional roles for women transformed the contests from an uncontroversial national pastime to a picketing ground for feminists in the early 1970s.

Nevertheless, feminist objections to pageants on grounds that they exploit women were not as strong in Texas as in other parts of the county, said UT's Kruppa, an associate history professor who specializes in women's studies.

"Feminism is changing. There are not so many hardliners denouncing women who go into beauty contests." said Kruppa, who considers herself a feminist. "The emphasis now is more on people making informed choices and less on regimented behavior."

That's not to say all feminists have dropped their reservations about beauty pageants.

Hannah Riddering, a spokesperson for the Austin chapter of the National Organization for Women, suggested that the popularity of pageants in Texas lies in the fact that the state "is still a little different from other areas of the country in terms of how women are viewed."

"On the one hand, we have a strong woman pioneer — almost a grandmotherly type like Ann Richards — and on the other hand we have topless bars that are considered respectable places for attorneys to go for lunch," she said.

When Riddering travels to small towns she gets a sense of the "old-fashioned attitude still hanging on from the '40s and '50s," she said in a telephone interview. "And in Dallas-Fort Worth, there's still a strong element of that."

However, Riddering said she can't justify a contest that, on the one hand, touts itself as the largest source of scholarships for women while on the other judges them by how they fill out a swimsuit.

"I can't think of too many other scholarships where your bust size is relevant," she said.

The pageant no longer publishes measurements, height and weight, said Beck Edgar, the Miss Texas spokeswoman, who maintained that the swimsuit event is designed to showcase physical fitness.

Bowling Green's Marsden said there is no point in denying the sexist element in beauty contests, but said there are redeeming aspects making up for them.

"It's a way that women who wish to perform in that arena can succeed in that arena," said Marsden, who has judged and written about beauty pageants for the past 12 years. "They use it as a way to get something else.

"They've grown up with this, they're comfortable with this and they're very competitive."

Beck-Edgar, who has worked with the Miss Texas pageant for more than two decades, agreed that contestants are ambitious.

"If they use that title as a stepping stone or a learning experience to go on in life, to me it's an asset," she said. "And there are probably 60 different reasons on that stage for competing.

"Miss America has changed just like women have changed," Beck-Edgar continued. "In the '60s, a lot of the contestants were pursuing careers in teaching, nursing — typical feminine roles. Now all of those (other) doors are open."

UT's Kruppa found it ironic that the Miss America Pageant was held in 1921, less than a year after women were given the right to vote.

"The whole national beauty pageant thing started just at the same time that women supposedly had entered the national arena," she said. "It was sort of one step back, one step forward."

PROBE: Acting secretary demands full cooperation

rence Garrett III. Garrett resigned last month, conceding that a "leadership failure" had contributed to the sex-abuse incidents that occurred at a 1991 naval aviators' convention in Las Vegas.

The acting secretary, who is the son of a Navy engineer but has no personal military record, also lashed out at "an instance of arrogance which cannot be tolerated" and said the service must "look within at the need to change cultural attitudes and perceptions in the Navy and Marine Corps."

"Within the bounds of law, those whom the investigation identifies as being involved in criminal wrongdoing will be called upon to answer for their misdeeds," O'Keefe pledged.

The probe stems from an incident at the Tailhook Association's annual meeting in Las Vegas where at least 26 women — half of them naval officers — were pushed through a gantlet of drunken pilots, pawed at and in some cases disrobed.

The association, which sponsored the event, takes its name from the wire that snags aircraft as they land on a carrier's deck.

Derek Vander Schaaf, the Pentagon official in charge of the study, also is looking into how senior and lower level Navy officials responded to the assaults and whether they mishandled the service's subsequent investigations.

O'Keefe said he intends to separate himself from Vander Schaaf's investigation.

"I will not supervise, nor in any way involve myself in the investigation except to state (Defense) Secretary (Dick) Cheney's expectation and mine that every officer will cooperate fully and truthfully, without exception," he said.

During the Navy's own probes, some officers refused to allow their men to be photographed.

Lottery ad yields positive, negative feedback

By John Gonzalez
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — When 24-year-old Annabel Huerta of Abilene became the state's first lottery millionaire last month, advertising copywriters put a few excited words in her overjoyed mouth.

"Aaaaaaaaaah! Lordy, lordy. Gagagagagagduh, oh boy, oh holybajesaduhdadida. Aaah! Ah! Aaah! Da ga ga ga ga. Huba yada yada wheeehooo!" Huerta said in the lottery ad, which appeared June 23 in several Texas newspapers.

The quote from the former bingo hall worker perplexed many Texans who doubted she ever said such a thing. She hadn't. And at least one citizen wrote the state to complain about use of the word "lordy."

The two subsequent millionaires haven't been featured in such ads. But they — along with the fourth weekly millionaire who will be selected Thursday in Fort Worth — will play roles in an evolving advertising strategy designed to create "winner awareness."

"I don't think we're going to do a whole lot of winner-awareness for every single millionaire," said lottery director Nora Linares. "We're probably going to focus on the aspect of playing the game and winning $10,000 and $20,000," she said.

Even so, before Thursday's drawing, the seven finalists will be asked to sign a release form that allows the state to use them in ads. The form also limits state liability in the event of the unthinkable, like an overly excited contestant dying of a heart attack after a drawing.

The release form is required because state law partially protects the privacy of winners. The 1991 lottery law compels the state to identify winners and winnings, but only their names, hometowns and prize amounts. None of the 21 finalists who have gone through the three previous millionaire drawing process have objected to the form, which is accompanied by advice about dealing with winnings.

"In consideration for the opportunity to participate in the Texas Lottery grand prize drawing event, I hereby consent to the publication, reproduction, distribution, or other use by the Texas Lottery, their successors and assigns, of my name, photograph, likeness, words, voice and/or personal data for broadcasting, commercial, advertising or any other purpose," the contract states.

"Furthermore, I hereby release the Texas Lottery, its employees and agents, successors and assigns from any and all claims which I may have arising out of my participation in the program and any use of my name, photography, likeness, words, voice and/or personal data," the contract continues.

Then comes the grave business of a "risk waiver acknowledgement."

"The Texas Lottery has informed me of the hazards and possible consequences to my health from my participation in the grand prize drawing event. I understand that my participation in the event may be harmful to my health and that I may appoint a representative to act in my place. I hereby elect to personally participate in the event regardless of any such hazards and possible consequences to my health," the agreement states.

Such consents are vital for the state to conduct basic "winner-awareness" advertising that emphasizes the joy of winning, Linares said.

"That (joy) was really the portrayal of the (Huerta) ad. Everybody took it differently," she said.

Alicia Smith Kriese, lottery account manager at GSD&M, the Austin ad agency that promotes the instant games, said the Huerta ad proved quite controversial, but that's not the reason such ads aren't common yet.

"Because of the expense of running a full-page ad or even a smaller ad, we can't do it every week. What we are planning to do is down the road — after we have four or six (millionaires), or after we have all 12. We'll do an ad that features all 12 of them," said Smith Kriese, vice president of GSD&M.

"We're working right now on a fully-integrated media campaign — newspaper, television, point of sale, etc. — that features our winners," Kreise said.

The Huerta ad yielded positive and negative feedback at the agency, she said.

"Annabel was very happy with it, which is our most important audience in that case. And of course our client liked it," Smith Kriese said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

Expect summer sun, mid-90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high near 95 and south winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be mostly sunny with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 64, Wednesday's high reached 93 compared with the record high for that date of 103 set in 1964. The record low for that date is 56 set in 1979.

STATE

Sunny skies covered the state Wednesday as temperatures soared past the 100 mark in West Texas.

A high pressure in the gulf and low pressure in the west maintained a strong flow of wind this afternoon in South Texas. Skies remained clear to partly cloudy throughout the region.

In the West, readings were mostly in the 90s with 101 recorded at El Paso.

For the North, the summertime heat continued to grip the region. Readings in the lower 90s were common elsewhere except for the upper 80s over the Big Country. Extremes ranged from 88 degrees at Abilene to 95 degrees at Waco.

Sunshine was in abundant supply although a few puffy fair weather clouds were observed in East Texas.

Fair nights and sunny days through Friday for North Texans. Lows in the lower to middle 70s. Highs in the lower to middle 90s.

The West Texas forecast summary shows partly cloudy skies tonight and Friday with a slight chance of thunderstorms mainly over the panhandle through tonight.

NATION

Stormy weather was scattered from the Plains into the Ohio Valley on Wednesday after a night of severe storms caused damage with wind and hail in Kansas.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended across Kansas, northeastern North Dakota, northwestern Minnesota, the Great Lakes, and into the Ohio Valley.

Early Wednesday, hail as big as baseballs and wind blowing up to 100 mph pummeled parts of northern Kansas, destroying roofs, snapping power lines and injuring at least six people.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SUMMIT: Yeltsin offer stirs otherwise quiet talks

leaders bemoaned the fact that "too many people are out of work" and pledged to "act together to assure that the recovery gathers strength and growth picks up."

But there was no agreement on how this would be achieved.

The summit failed even more dramatically in its biggest economic challenge, finding a way to end an impasse in a six-year effort to liberalize global trade.

The stalemate has been caused by a bitter fight between the United States and Europe over farm subsidies.

Yeltsin made his debt-swap offer in his first appearance at an annual economic summit of the world's seven leading industrial democracies.

Participants in the closed door discussions described Yeltsin's proposal, made at the end of the discussions, as a bombshell. They said he provided few details of just how much of Russia's $70 billion in external debt he would be willing to swap for the country's hard assets.

For Yeltsin, who is desperate to attract private Western investment to stop the collapse of his economy, the proposal could turn out to be significant.

"It was a bolt from the blue," said Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. He and Italian Prime Minister Giuliano Amato said that Yeltsin's surprise offer attracted a lot of attention.

"The Japanese really paid attention at that one," Amato said, imitating someone pushing his earlobes forward to hear better. Japan has previously linked settlement of a territorial dispute with Russia to increased Japanese aid to the Yeltsin government.

A senior U.S. official, who spoke on grounds of anonymity, said Yeltsin specifically mentioned that he would be willing to exchange buildings and other property, minerals and oil reserves in debt-for-equity swaps.

Yeltsin's appearance dominated the 18th annual economic summit. The Russian president and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl both stressed the friendly, non-adversarial nature of Yeltsin's appearance before the Group of Seven.

Kohl said the talks with Yeltsin had marked a "comprehensive and lasting partnership."

Before arriving in Munich, Yeltsin served notice in blunt language that he wasn't begging for charity and would not accept Western aid if the terms were too harsh. Once at the summit, Yeltsin sounded a much more conciliatory tone, sounding like a super-salesman peddling his country's considerable advantages for foreign investors.

Yeltsin told reporters that while the $24 billion aid package was important in his efforts to turn the economy around, it could not compete with the "hundreds of billions of dollars" that could flow into the country in private investments.

"When my presidency comes to an end in 1994, I trust that reform will have become irreversible in all areas," Yeltsin said.

Before leaving Munich, Bush praised Yeltsin as a "courageous leader" and brushed aside criticism that Yeltsin had at time trampled over diplomatic niceties.

CLINTON: Candidate makes sentimental journey

(From 1A)

Others who have talked with Clinton in recent days include Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, Florida Sen. Bob Graham and Pennsylvania Sen. Harris Wofford.

One senior Clinton aide said a decision was possible today but more likely Friday. Some aides continued to push Clinton to hold off on the announcement until Sunday, the eve of the nominating convention in New York.

In Washington, Gore was the focus of Capitol Hill speculation. The Tennessee lawmaker was with his family in Carthage, Tenn., and his staff said he had heard nothing from the Clinton camp. Gore, dressed casually, repeated a terse "no comment" to reporters camped out at his home as he headed for lunch with his wife and children.

While most of the rumors centered on Gore, there were, as always, some new names thrown late into the mix. Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn was one.

Hamilton spent the day working on Capitol Hill and assured reporters, "We'll know in a few days. I'm as in the dark as everybody else."

The Indiana congressman has had no direct contact with Clinton since last week, but has been in touch since then with Christopher, according to sources familiar with the process.

Kerrey flew to Idaho after a midnight meeting in Little Rock with Clinton. Sources close to the process said the 90-minute meeting went well.

Clinton broke his silence on the matter only to angrily deny published reports that his wife, Hillary, had lobbied against Kerrey because of nasty remarks Kerrey leveled against Clinton during the Democratic primary wars.

"That's an absolute lie," Clinton said before campaigning at a welfare-to-work center in Pine Bluff. "It was an outrageous misrepresentation of anything anybody said. Hillary never said anything like that."

Even in Kerrey's exit from the governor's mansion early Wednesday, the mystery and intrigue surrounding Clinton's search continued. Kerrey smiled and shook his head that he couldn't discuss the conversation and then sprinted through a Holiday Inn Express lobby to ditch the reporters who had followed him.

Clinton aides insisted that the candidate was keeping his thoughts to himself.

"I think it's in Bill Clinton's head right now, and anybody who tells you otherwise just wants to sound like they know what they're talking about," said one source.

Clinton spent the evening in Hope, Ark., using his dusty southwestern hometown as a backdrop for a Time magazine cover.

LOSE: Government to use outdated census figures

poverty has increased 39 percent statewide since 1980, census figures show. Yet funding has not kept pace, depriving tens of thousands of needy children of the chance to participate in Chapter 1 programs to improve their reading, math and language skills.

"Texas has changed significantly in 10 years. There's more low-income children, there's a higher minority population and the money is very much needed — especially when you consider the state is having trouble coming up with money for education," said Alan Bookman, director of communications for the Texas Association of Professional Educators, which represents 54,000 school employees.

"We need to keep in mind who will lose, who will suffer, and it's low-income children," he said.

Texas will see a 31 percent increase in Chapter 1 funding when 1990 Census figures are used, said Wayne Riddle, a specialist in education finance for Congressional Research Service in Washington.

Statistics help define the frustration felt by many local school officials who share similar stories: too many children in need, but not enough money to foot the bill.

For instance, the 1980 Census showed that 19,445 children age 5 to 17 in Tarrant County came from low-income families. That number jumped 48 percent in 1990 to 28,717, Riddle said.

Statewide, there was a 39 percent increase in the number of needy children from the earlier census, from 568,132 in 1980 to 791,190 in 1990, he said.

Cleta Smith, coordinator of the Arlington school district's Chapter 1 program, said: "We are only able to serve a small percentage of the kids that qualify."

But a Department of Education spokesman said the government must use 1980 Census figures because it lacks census figures from Puerto Rico.

The government distributes Chapter 1 funding by the number of children living in poverty. Most school districts determine eligibility according to whether a student receives a free lunch and through testing.

CUTS: Domestic oil industry downsizing continues

(From 1A)

Wellchem, a manufacturer of chemicals used in oil and gas production. Wellchem maintains a blending plant in Seminole and sales offices in Midland and Levelland.

"If that sale is completed," Thompson said, "we would hope that Wellchem employees would have an opportunity to go with a new owner."

The Amoco job cuts are part of a "strategic reassessment" to make the company more competitive, Amoco Chairman H. Laurance Fuller said in a statement.

Fuller said he expects the energy industry to rebound eventually. "But we have to recognize the realities of the economy today," he said.

"This is a significant move," said Eugene L. Nowak, an oil analyst at Dean Witter. "They don't want to sit around and count on being bailed out by higher oil and gas prices."

Also Wednesday, Unocal Corp. said it would streamline its operations and cut 1,100 jobs. The Los Angeles oil company earlier had announced it would cut between 800 and 1,200 jobs to lower debt it took on to repel a takeover attempt in the 1980s.

Dave Kinzelman, vice president of Unocal's Central Region office in Midland, said it is too early to know what affect the company's cuts may have on Midland, and that it would be several weeks before the final strength of each office would be known. He was optimistic, however, that Unocal would maintain a strong presence in Midland and would be one of four major offices for the oil company.

Amoco said about 5,700 employees have taken or will take early retirement or severance packages, or have left or will leave because of normal attrition.

An additional 2,800 have left or will leave the company as it sells off or closes some operations, Fuller said.

Amoco spokeswoman Patricia D. Wright said at least some of the people would be leaving involuntarily, but she didn't have exact figures.

The largest number of cuts will be in the Chicago area, where 1,100 jobs will be eliminated, Mrs. Wright said.

The elimination of those 8,500 jobs follows Amoco's cuts of nearly 1,800 jobs in 1990 and 1991.

"The human impact of our decisions is very real and very painful," Fuller said. "However, our actions also are very necessary."

He cited the decline in profits and cash flow brought about by lower prices for oil and natural gas and the worldwide recession.

Amoco is the fifth-largest U.S. oil company. It had 1991 earnings of $1.5 billion, down 22 percent from the previous year. The company had 1991 sales of $28.3 billion compared with $31.6 billion a year earlier.

Amoco said it expects the new round of job cuts and the restructuring to save the company $600 million a year.

The restructuring will focus the company's efforts on its most profitable businesses — oil and natural gas exploration and production; refining, marketing and transportation; and chemicals, Wright said.

On Tuesday, another oil giant, Mobil, announced it had cut 2,000 white-collar jobs over the past year. A portion of those previously announced cuts already had been made in Midland and the Permian Basin.

Mobil, the second-largest U.S. based oil company after Exxon Corp., employs 67,500 worldwide, with nearly 39,000 workers in the United States.

"It's part of an industry process," said John H. Lichtblau, chairman of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York of Amoco's move. "It's not the first company to cut back, and it won't be the last."

The Associated Press and New York Times News Service contributed to this report.

PROBE: Acting secretary demands full cooperation

rence Garrett III. Garrett resigned last month, conceding that a "leadership failure" had contributed to the sex-abuse incidents that occurred at a 1991 naval aviators' convention in Las Vegas.

The acting secretary, who is the son of a Navy engineer but has no personal military record, also lashed out at "an instance of arrogance which cannot be tolerated" and said the service must "look within at the need to change cultural attitudes and perceptions in the Navy and Marine Corps."

"Within the bounds of law, those whom the investigation identifies as being involved in criminal wrongdoing will be called upon to answer for their misdeeds," O'Keefe pledged.

The probe stems from an incident at the Tailhook Association's annual meeting in Las Vegas where at least 26 women — half of them naval officers — were pushed through a gantlet of drunken pilots, pawed at and in some cases disrobed.

The association, which sponsored the event, takes its name from the wire that snags aircraft as they land on a carrier's deck.

Derek Vander Schaaf, the Pentagon official in charge of the study, also is looking into how senior and lower level Navy officials responded to the assaults and whether they mishandled the service's subsequent investigations.

O'Keefe said he intends to separate himself from Vander Schaaf's investigation.

"I will not supervise, nor in any way involve myself in the investigation except to state (Defense) Secretary (Dick) Cheney's expectation and mine that every officer will cooperate fully and truthfully, without exception," he said.

During the Navy's own probes, some officers refused to allow their men to be photographed.

PAGEANTS: Experts analyze Texas enthusiasm

(From 1A)

said historian T.R. Fehrenbach, the San Antonio-based author of "Lone Star," a history of Texas. He ascribed their abiding popularity to conservative rural values brought to Texas cities with the state's rapid urbanization since 1940.

With 60 preliminary competitions around the state, the Miss Texas pageant is one of the country's largest, Beck-Edgar said.

"It's a different heritage," she said. "We probably also have more Fourth of July parades and more debutante balls down here. That's an important part of our culture."

Michael Marsden, a professor of popular culture at Bowling Green State University in Ohio, agreed, calling the pageants "cultural harvests" that present "the ideal daughters from this year's class."

But such idealization of femininity and traditional roles for women transformed the contests from an uncontroversial national pastime to a picketing ground for feminists in the early 1970s.

Nevertheless, feminist objections to pageants on grounds that they exploit women were not as strong in Texas as in other parts of the county, said UT's Kruppa, an associate history professor who specializes in women's studies.

"Feminism is changing. There are not so many hardliners denouncing women who go into beauty contests," said Kruppa, who considers herself a feminist. "The emphasis now is more on people making informed choices and less on regimented behavior."

That's not to say all feminists have dropped their reservations about beauty pageants.

Hannah Riddering, a spokesperson for the Austin chapter of the National Organization for Women, suggested that the popularity of pageants in Texas lies in the fact that the state "is still a little different from other areas of the country in terms of how women are viewed."

"On the one hand, we have a strong woman pioneer — almost a grandmotherly type like Ann Richards — and on the other hand we have topless bars that are considered respectable places for attorneys to go for lunch," she said.

When Riddering travels to small towns she gets a sense of the "old-fashioned attitude still hanging on from the '40s and '50s," she said in a telephone interview. "And in Dallas-Fort Worth, there's still a strong element of that."

However, Riddering said she can't justify a contest that, on the one hand, touts itself as the largest source of scholarships for women while on the other judges them by how they fill out a swimsuit.

"I can't think of too many other scholarships where your bust size is relevant," she said.

The pageant no longer publishes measurements, height and weight, said Beck Edgar, the Miss Texas spokeswoman, who maintained that the swimsuit event is designed to showcase physical fitness.

Bowling Green's Marsden said there is no point in denying the sexist element in beauty contests, but said there are redeeming aspects making up for them.

"It's a way that women who wish to perform in that arena can succeed in that arena," said Marsden, who has judged and written about beauty pageants for the past 12 years. "They use it as a way to get something else.

"They've grown up with this, they're comfortable with this and they're very competitive."

Beck-Edgar, who has worked with the Miss Texas pageant for more than two decades, agreed that contestants are ambitious.

"If they use that title as a stepping stone or a learning experience to go on in life, to me it's an asset," she said. "And there are probably 60 different reasons on that stage for competing.

"Miss America has changed just like women have changed," Beck-Edgar continued. "In the '60s, a lot of the contestants were pursuing careers in teaching, nursing — typical feminine roles. Now all of those (other) doors are open."

UT's Kruppa found it ironic that the Miss America Pageant was held in 1921, less than a year after women were given the right to vote.

"The whole national beauty pageant thing started just at the same time that women supposedly had entered the national arena," she said. "It was sort of one step back, one step forward."

Lottery ad yields positive, negative feedback

By John Gonzalez
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — When 24-year-old Annabel Huerta of Abilene became the state's first lottery millionaire last month, advertising copywriters put a few excited words in her overjoyed mouth.

"Aaaaaaaaaah! Lordy, lordy. Gagagagagagduh, oh boy, oh holybajesaduhdadida. Aaah! Ah! Aaah! Da ga ga ga ga. Huba yada yada wheeehooo!" Huerta said in the lottery ad, which appeared June 23 in several Texas newspapers.

The quote from the former bingo hall worker perplexed many Texans who doubted she ever said such a thing. She hadn't. And at least one citizen wrote the state to complain about use of the word "lordy."

The two subsequent millionaires haven't been featured in such ads. But they — along with the fourth weekly millionaire who will be selected Thursday in Fort Worth — will play roles in an evolving advertising strategy designed to create "winner awareness."

"I don't think we're going to do a whole lot of winner-awareness for every single millionaire," said lottery director Nora Linares. "We're probably going to focus on the aspect of playing the game and winning $10,000 and $20,000," she said.

Even so, before Thursday's drawing, the seven finalists will be asked to sign a release form that allows the state to use them in ads. The form also limits state liability in the event of the unthinkable, like an overly excited contestant dying of a heart attack after a drawing.

The release form is required because state law partially protects the privacy of winners. The 1991 lottery law compels the state to identify winners and winnings, but only their names, hometowns and prize amounts. None of the 21 finalists who have gone through the three previous millionaire drawing process have objected to the form, which is accompanied by advice about dealing with winnings.

"In consideration for the opportunity to participate in the Texas Lottery grand prize drawing event, I hereby consent to the publication, reproduction, distribution, or other use by the Texas Lottery, their successors and assigns, of my name, photograph, likeness, words, voice and/or personal data for broadcasting, commercial, advertising or any other purpose," the contract states.

"Furthermore, I hereby release the Texas Lottery, its employees and agents, successors and assigns from any and all claims which I may have arising out of my participation in the program and any use of my name, photography, likeness, words, voice and/or personal data," the contract continues.

Then comes the grave business of a "risk waiver acknowledgement."

"The Texas Lottery has informed me of the hazards and possible consequences to my health from my participation in the grand prize drawing event. I understand that my participation in the event may be harmful to my health and that I may appoint a representative to act in my place. I hereby elect to personally participate in the event regardless of any such hazards and possible consequences to my health," the agreement states.

Such consents are vital for the state to conduct basic "winner-awareness" advertising that emphasizes the joy of winning, Linares said.

"That (joy) was really the portrayal of the (Huerta) ad. Everybody took it differently," she said.

Alicia Smith Kriese, lottery account manager at GSD&M, the Austin ad agency that promotes the instant games, said the Huerta ad proved quite controversial, but that's not the reason such ads aren't common yet.

"Because of the expense of running a full-page ad or even a smaller ad, we can't do it every week. What we are planning to do is down the road — after we have four or six (millionaires), or after we have all 12. We'll do an ad that features all 12 of them," said Smith Kriese, vice president of GSD&M.

"We're working right now on a fully-integrated media campaign — newspaper, television, point of sale, etc. — that features our winners," Kreise said.

The Huerta ad yielded positive and negative feedback at the agency, she said.

"Annabel was very happy with it, which is our most important audience in that case. And of course our client liked it," Smith Kriese said.

Lawyer attacks Communism as 'phantom government'

MOSCOW (AP) — Reading from once-secret documents, Boris Yeltsin's lawyer on Wednesday recounted 70 years of Communist terror, murder and repression and urged a court to make sure the outlawed party can never rise again.

The indictment of the Soviet Communist Party by Sergei Shakhrai, head of the Russian president's legal team, was as harsh and comprehensive as any made in the West during the Cold War.

The party was "all-controlling, all-permeating, ruthless," Shakhrai said. "Having destroyed private property, swallowed civil society and eliminated any notion of human rights, the Bolsheviks for 70 years hid behind a phantom government, legal system and popular rule."

Shakhrai spoke on the second day of a trial in Russia's Constitutional Court, a 13-judge panel that is considering a request by 37 parliamentarians to overturn Yeltsin's decrees banning the party and nationalizing its property.

The pro-Communist plaintiffs contend that Yeltsin exceeded his legal authority when he issued the decrees after last August's failed coup.

In a countersuit, Yeltsin is arguing that the party was unconstitutional — and often criminal.

Former Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev predicted in an interview published Wednesday that "both sides will be losers" because the trial is splitting Russian society.

"Is it a sound idea to put a 70-year period in our history in the dock? The period must be analyzed," he told the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta. "I am very sorry that these things are taking place, and I will never take part in the trial."

Yeltsin, who was in Germany on Wednesday seeking debt relief from the West, also does not intend to appear at the trial, according to his aides. But he clearly attaches great importance to the case.

He said last week the court would decide "the fate of Russia," because "any support for the Communists might give them a trump card for their destructive activities, which could immerse us in the chaos of civil war."

Pro-Communists began the trial Tuesday with their version of Soviet history. They said the party defeated Nazi Germany, built the Soviet Union into a great power, and served the working class.

A Siberian lawmaker defended the August coup and claimed more people died in car accidents than in Stalin's purges.

Shakhrai responded Wednesday that the party was "the 20th century's most powerful organization," a monster that repressed dissidents, assassinated its enemies and pampered its leaders.

'Having destroyed private property, swallowed civil society and eliminated any notion of human rights, the Bolsheviks for 70 years hid behind a phantom government, legal system and popular rule.'

— Sergei Shakhrai

Chief Judge Valery Zorkin tried to maintain a businesslike atmosphere in the crowded courtroom, where the judges sit under both Russia's new flag and the old hammer-and-sickle seal of the Soviet Union.

But Yeltsin's supporters could barely contain their glee during Shakhrai's rapid-fire, 90-minute speech, punctuated by quotations from the newly declassified "special file" of the party's most secret documents.

Among his accusations:

■ Even after officially giving up its monopoly on power in 1990, the party maintained a "nomenklatura" of thousands of officials who held top positions in government, education, science and industry.

■ Despite Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, the party directed newspapers not to publish information about who was to blame for the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

■ Party leaders continued to supply arms to Afghanistan, even after the Soviet Union agreed in 1990 to a negotiated settlement of the Afghan civil war.

Pro-Communist lawmaker Vladimir Bokov argued that the party as a whole did not support the August coup, although he conceded that some of its leaders were involved.

Shakhrai read what he said was a coded telegram from the party Central Committee to regional party bosses, directing them to follow the orders of the coup committee.

He then read return telegrams from party leaders in half a dozen regions declaring their full support for the coup.

Shakhrai said the party's millions of rank-and-file members were not responsible for its crimes.

Warm, windless weather raises air pollution level

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Air pollution reached danger levels in Athens on Wednesday as the temperature soared to 100 degrees, sending scores of people to hospitals with heart and respiratory problems.

The National First Aid Center said that by noon its ambulances had responded to calls by 156 people with heart and respiratory complaints.

The government's environment agency, PERPA, said that the amount of ozone surpassed the emergency level. Nitrogen dioxide also reached dangerous levels, it said.

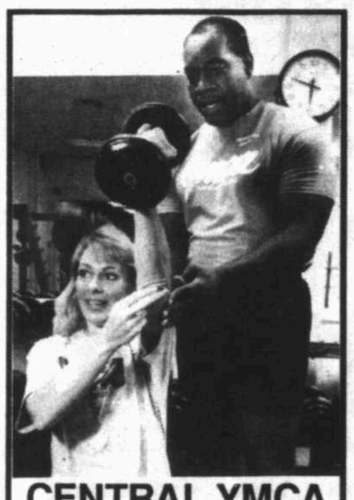

Warm, windless weather usually leads to a buildup of air pollutants in the mountain-ringed Athens area.

Conference agrees on peacekeeping roles

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — A 52-nation security conference agreed in principle Wednesday to form peacekeeping missions that would work with the United Nations to intervene in conflicts in Europe.

The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe also suspended Yugoslavia from the group for 100 days and said it would be expelled if it fails to help end the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina by then.

The peacekeeping role for the 52-nation group is to be adopted in a declaration by world leaders, including President Bush and Russian leader Boris Yeltsin, at a summit in Helsinki on Thursday and Friday.

While the CSCE was unlikely to send peacekeepers any time soon to end wars in the former Yugoslavia and Soviet Union, the declaration indicated the conference intended to expand its influence as a problem-solving group for a suddenly volatile continent.

Bush and Yeltsin flew into Finland's capital late Wednesday night after a summit with the Group of Seven leaders ended in Munich, Germany.

The 20-year-old security conference, which includes the United States and Canada as well as the European states, was formed to monitor human rights and to keep the peace between East and West during the Cold War.

But some of the member states the CSCE gained after the collapse of the Soviet empire are battling each other.

Wars have broken out between Armenia and Azerbaijan; in Moldova's separatist Trans-Dniester region; in Georgia's secessionist South Ossetia territory; and in Bosnia-Herzegovina and Croatia.

"For the first time in decades we are facing warfare in the CSCE region," said the final, 78-page document, "The Challenges of Change," approved by senior negotiators who debated all night to reach consensus.

The conference, a loose grouping of nations with no permanent staff, is streamlining its decision-making so it can move faster to head off crises and intervene in a greater variety of issues in modern Europe.

The declaration said the conference would ask NATO, the Western European Union or individual nations to offer troops and equipment for peacekeeping missions under its auspices.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization decided last month it would consider such requests if the CSCE made them. But individual states could still opt out.

The conference statement said its forces could be used to help maintain cease-fires, monitor troop withdrawals and aid refugees, but only once a cease-fire is in effect.

That would rule out immediate action in the breakaway republics of Yugoslavia, which was suspended from all CSCE meetings until Oct. 14 because its Serbian-dominated army continues aggressive action in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The United States wanted the CSCE to reject new Yugoslavian Prime Minister Milan Panic's request for a 100-day grace period to re-establish broken relations with Bosnia-Herzegovina and other breakaway republics and to end the territorial warfare that has killed tens of thousands.

But Russia held out to keep the Serbian-dominated government within the group.

Some states objected that the final document made no mention of specific wars among CSCE members — a pitfall of negotiating a document of consensus for 51 nations.

Officials meeting to approve a resolution on the 4-year-old war between Armenia and Azerbaijan "aren't even agreed on what to call the disputed region," said chief British delegate David Johnson.

Second freak tornado strikes Panama suburb

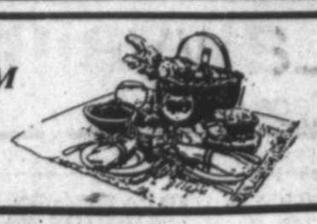

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A rare tropical tornado, the second in three days, struck a suburb of the capital Wednesday, destroying at least 15 homes but causing no injuries, authorities said.

The National Civil Defense Service said the tornado that hit the San Miguelito district shortly after midday was smaller than Monday's twister, which destroyed 400 homes and left nine dead.

Monday's tornado was the first recorded in Panama, said meteorologist David Farnum of the Institute of Hydraulic Resources and Electrification. It struck several poor neighborhoods in the capital.

Spokesman Aquilino Ortega said the second tornado could be blamed on the same low depression moving over the region.

Don't let Wills' memory fade

Elvis the Pelvis was belting out all that rock across the nation in the 1950's, but in Texas music fans were more likely to go to a dance hall or tune to a radio station playing "Faded Love" and other hits made famous by Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys.

He was the premier country music entertainer. Bob's band played jazz, blues and used a country fiddle to provide dance music. And the fans loved it.

Elvis went on to superstardom. Wills kept playing the music his fans loved — "San Antonio Rose" and "Faded Love," even though he migrated to Oklahoma after a falling out with his manager, W. Lee "Pappy" O'Daniel. Wills went on to fame as a musician; O'Daniel went on to the Texas governor's mansion. In 1975, Wills died of a stroke.

Now a group of Wills fans, intent on keeping the musician's memory from suffering the fate of "Faded Love," wants to commemorate the native of Turkey, Texas, on a new postage stamp as part of the "Legends of American Music" series.

The idea is a logical way in which to immortalize Wills' contribution to the American music scene. Elvis already is portrayed on a stamp and although "the king of rock 'n' roll" certainly deserved that honor, Wills was the undisputed "king of western swing" and deserves no less acclaim. His dance music and entertainment style were unique, and his renown widespread.

Bob Wills happened onto the music scene at a particularly opportune time — during the Depression era when people were looking for an escape from the troubles of the day. His fiddle music and trademark "Ah, haaa" injected a measure of enjoyment into the lives of people whose bleak existence offered little else of interest.

His impact on the lives of an entire generation of Americans should not be forgotten. Bob Wills was a Texan whose music lifted a generation out of the depths of despair. His memory should not be permitted to fade away.

Libertarians often draw protest votes

WASHINGTON — Understandably, you are wondering: Isn't there a fourth choice? There is, and he is the only presidential candidate foursquare against the U.N. Moon Treaty, whatever that is. Standing foursquare against things is the Libertarian Party's specialty.

Will

Its platform calls for government to cease and desist from almost everything except the repealing of laws.

The Libertarian presidential candidate, Andre Marrou, 53, has limited experience in elective office — a two-year term in Alaska's Legislature — but it ranks him above Ross Perot. Unfortunately, Marrou's scary certitude makes even Perot look like Hamlet.

Marrou says the Libertarian Party "certainly" will become the next major party, and that a Libertarian president and congress is "inevitable." He has the future figured out, as fanatics generally do.

He is balding and bearded and has been called a "cheerful Lenin." He isn't. Cheerful, that is. There hangs about him the acrid aroma of strange incense. There is, in fact, some Lenin in the clanking rhetoric by which he expresses his encompassing ideology — his life in the familiar 20th-century abode, the well-lit prison of one idea. The idea is that "government power is opposed to individual liberty." Must we still debate such sophomoric notions?

Well, here goes: Police and armies that keep bad people at bay, and roads that make practical the freedom to travel, and education that makes people competent for life in a free society, these are not "opposed to individual liberty." Besides, liberty, although very important, is not the only value. There is also justice, domestic tranquillity and a good five-cent cigar.

The Libertarians' extremism (they oppose laws setting minimum drinking ages, or banning concealed weapons, or restricting immigration) makes them unelectable, so their extremism also makes them safe recipients of protest votes. If you wonder why a million people may pull the Libertarian lever to endorse dismantling government, consider just four facts from a large universe of annoying facts:

The Bureau of Labor Statistics divides the economy into nine sectors. In seven of them, June employment declined, on a seasonally adjusted basis. There was a small gain in the transportation and public utility sector, and a healthier gain in the government sector. In sickness and in health, government grows.

When Jimmy Carter became president in 1977 there were 2.8 million employees of the federal executive branch, excluding the military. After more than 11 years of the Reagan-Bush "attack on government," there are 2.9 million, and state and local government employees have increased from 12.4 million to 15.4 million.

The Democrats' contribution to happy families is to say that there is government spending, and there is government "investing." The basic difference is that Democrats like the latter and Republicans like the former. For example, there is defense spending and there is investing in cities. Soon I expect to have the following conversation with my 11-year old daughter.

Me: What? You've spent your allowance already?

She: Heaven forfend, dear father, I've invested it.

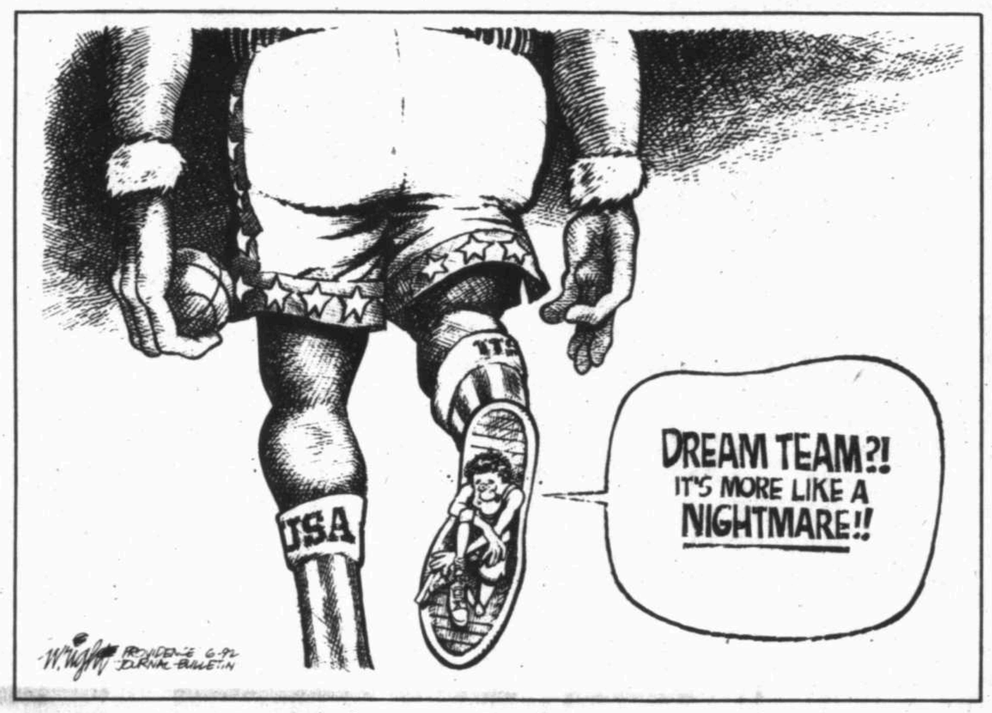

Me: You call a Guns N'Roses CD an investment?

She: Of course, and if you don't call it that, your analysis is hopelessly pre-Clinton. Mr. Clinton says that spending on education is investing. And if you think I am not learning things from Axl Rose, you have not been listening to his lyrics.

Actually, Clinton is making the worst of a good point. Not all public spending is equal in its social yield. Unfortunately, all recipients of public funds are equally ingenious in arguing that what they get (farm subsidies, Amtrak subsidies, art subsidies) is a wise "investment." And Clinton's patently political semantic sleight-of-hand diminishes confidence that economic rather than familiar political reasoning would govern spendinginvesting decisions in a Clinton administration.

All of which makes the Libertarians' frivolousness especially regrettable. Once upon a time there were politically serious third parties — Bob La Follette's Progressives, Norman Thomas' Socialists — which, by working at the margins, expanded first the nation's political discussion and then the nation's agenda. No more.

It's on to California for next major test

Despite the protestations of professional advocates, who claim that the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling (last) week on abortion rights leaves the issue unsettled, the Bush campaign cleared a big hurdle when the high court decided not to overturn the historic Roe vs. Wade decision. A woman's right to an abortion remains, although states now have the option of implementing some restrictions.

Yet don't think that George Bush necessarily waltzes back to 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. The next major testing ground for all three candidates is the fall campaign in California. The largest state in the union, it possesses almost one-fifth of Electoral College votes required for victory.

The dynamics at work there are several. First, as one astute California political observer put it recently, California is mostly a "feel" state. Either candidates and their California supporters have a feel for each other, or they don't. That may sound basic, but Time magazine recently summarized George Bush and California this way: "His weird Tex-prep political roots have always put him culturally closer to Barbara Mandrell than to Michelle Pfeiffer."

So it's on to Campaign '92's second important testing ground. The California dream is being stretched by declining real estate markets, environmental woes and urban challenges. But it's still fertile territory for politicians in search of votes.

— The Dallas Morning News

Court leaves abortion decision to individuals

The American people had counted on the nine members of the U.S. Supreme Court to decide the tough one for them.

Is it the role of the government or an individual woman to determine what is allowable in aborting a fetus?

Yet, when the Supreme Court ruled last week (July 4), it left more questions than answers.

Thus, ultimately the choice once again lies with the American people — and it lies decisively with the voters who go to the ballot box in November.

Voters who care deeply about this issue should put candidates on the spot and not let them duck out.

If voters sit this one out, they cannot justifiably complain later.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 9, the 191st day of 1992. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 9, 1850, the 12th president of the United States, Zachary Taylor, died at the White House, having served only one year and four months of his term. (Tests performed on Taylor's exhumed remains last year showed he had died of natural causes — and not poison, as a writer had speculated.)

On this date:

In 1540, England's King Henry VIII had his six-month marriage to his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves, annulled.

In 1755, British Gen. Edward Braddock was mortally wounded as his troops suffered a massive defeat near present-day Pittsburgh during the French and Indian War. One survivor was an aide to Braddock — Col. George Washington.

LESLIE GELB

Most nations have been curse to their people

Around 1776, there were about 35 empires, kingdoms, countries and states in the world. By World War II the number had doubled to roughly 70. And that figure almost doubled again to over 130 in the late 1960s. Today some 190 entities are generally recognized as sovereign nation-states.

Gelb

It is debatable whether these new entities have behaved better than the cruel and distant empires they displaced. Most nation-states, in any event, have been a curse — to their own people, especially to minorities, and to each other. For the most part, they have oppressed their citizens and preyed on their neighbors.

The main problem with almost all modern states is that they were founded on principles of exclusion — nationality, religion, culture and language. The United States, which cut the path to national self-determination and statehood with its Declaration of Independence, promised much better.

The state that sprang from this document was to be a vessel for representative government and protection of individual rights, not a vehicle for race and religion. With notable and awful exceptions, America has mostly lived up to these aspirations and acted mostly as a peace-loving nation.

Until other nation-states strike a better balance between the reasons for statehood and the rights of individuals, national self-determination will remain more a curse than a blessing.

At first, the new nation-states seemed as if they would be a blessing. National self-determination appeared to be the first claim of those seeking individual liberties and popular sovereignty in 1776. The French revolutionaries in 1789 wanted to transform France into a pedestal for liberty, equality and fraternity. The liberals who ignited the revolutions of 1848 also dreamed about realizing liberties through new nation-states.

Napoleon was quick to appreciate the awesome power of nationalism, of democratic hordes, to make war. He did so triumphantly until he overextended himself — and until others also learned to harness patriotism. Conservatives, however, soon learned to separate nationalistic fervor from national self-determination and to bind the power of nationalism to the ambitions of their states and dynasties.

Liberals, nonetheless, continued to pray for national independence. They equated liberty for the individual with liberty for nationalities. They also believed that if each nationality had its own state, then all would be satisfied and live in peace. Woodrow Wilson put those principles into practice in the 1919 Versailles Treaty. But many of the new states that resulted from the treaty honored neither liberty at home nor peace abroad.

Yet Americans in particular would not abandon the theory. After World War II, Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman compelled the European empires to shed their worldwide colonies. The two presidents believed that by eliminating empires, they also would eliminate the main cause of wars.

But again, the new small nation-states proved no more democratic or peaceful than the old empires. Indeed, the number of wars, civil and international, has probably averaged several dozen per year for the last 30 years. And very few of these ex-colonies became constitutional democracies. Hope, however, surged again in the last few years as the Soviet empire collapsed, and after its constituent national parts pledged themselves to free elections.

It is past time for Americans and others to abandon the worship of national self-determination, the belief in the unity of national self-determination and individual liberty, and the fascination with elections as a cure-all. The signers of the Declaration in 1776 understood that personal freedom and rights were more important than national independence and were indeed the purpose of independence — and that individual liberties and rights were the much harder of the two dreams to realize.

ART BUCHWALD

Public likes to see, read about criminals

The kidnaping of Exxon executive Sidney Reso, which led to his death, went down in FBI annals with that of the Lindbergh baby. The alleged kidnapers were apprehended and are being held for trial. It is time for the wheels of justice and the wheels of show biz to take over.

Buchwald

While the law is interested in punishment, others are concerned with cashing in on the dastardly act.

Zeigfried Diamond is one of the biggest theatrical agents dealing in major crimes of the century. He told me that the Reso kidnaping was a sure-fire Book of the Month, a top-rated TV miniseries or a $50 million movie. Irene and Arthur Seale — she confessed, he didn't — are the kind of criminals that Hollywood producers dream of.

His phone rang while we were talking. Zeigfried picked it up. "No, I don't have the Seales signed up yet, Harry, but I'm close, awfully close. The Son of Sam is recommending me and I don't want you to talk to me unless you're thinking in seven figures. We're predicting 'Batman' grosses — that's if we want to go the miniseries route. Our clients were hoping to make it into a four-parter with Farrah Fawcett portraying Irene Seale and Jack Palance playing her husband Arthur.

"Harry, a million dollars is not going to buy this property. What we have to sell is a love story that went awry. According to the wife, Arthur beat her up very badly for 25 years. I'm pitching a wife-abuse story with a kidnaping and a murder thrown in. We haven't even discussed foreign rights yet. If you want to get back to me, fine, but I can't hold it for you."

He hung up.

"I've never seen you so excited," I said.

"You get a story like this once in a lifetime. As you are aware, TV is attracting more and more criminals to its shows. Anyone on death row can now be booked on the evening news. I won't let the Seales go on the air without a fee. I'm getting calls from all over the country. '60 Minutes,' 'PrimeTime,' 'Current Affair' and 'Donahue' have been driving me nuts. They want to put the kidnapers on for nothing. I told them we don't do free until the book comes out."

"Has Barbara Walters checked in?"

"Yeah, but I told her I didn't care if she had done Bush, Perot, Clinton and Yeltsin. My clients want to be paid for their crimes."

"Even Barbara Bush doesn't talk to Walters like that."

Zeigfried said, "Ted Koppel also called. If either Seale gets the chair he wants to do a Town Meeting of the Air from the gas chamber."

"Any word from David Letterman?"

"Letterman is no good for convicted killers because the warden won't let them stay up that late."

"Are crime and show business as lucrative as everyone thinks they are?"

"Bigger. The American public has a hunger to read about and see people who have done terrible things. In the old days no one would put them on the air. Now we can get millions of dollars for criminals like the Seales. Of course, they need a good agent. With all the con men and sharpies in Hollywood, a murderer would be a fool to try to make his own deal."

Jordan will not bow to U.S. pressure, Hussein says

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jordan's King Hussein spoke in an exclusive interview with Ed Blanche, AP's Middle East news editor, about U.S. pressures on Jordan over Iraq.

By Ed Blanche
Associated Press Writer

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein, increasingly squeezed by U.S.-led efforts to strangle Saddam Hussein's regime, says he will not be pressured into allowing U.N. observers into Jordan to prevent strategic materials from reaching Baghdad.

U.S. officials have accused Jordan of turning a blind eye to smuggling across Jordan's desert border with Iraq. Officials have said about 30 percent of the smuggled goods are used by Iraq to rebuild its war-shattered infrastructure and strengthen the beleaguered regime of President Saddam Hussein.

"We will not be treated as suspects ... who are in need of observation and supervision," King Hussein told The Associated Press on Tuesday in an exclusive interview in the Basman palace overlooking Jordan's capital.

The United States has proposed stationing up to 50 observers in Jordan to monitor the flow of goods into Iraq, but King Hussein and his parliament have rejected the offer, saying it would violate Jordan's sovereignty.

"Jordan has been singled out and pressured to accept things that nobody else has been asked to accept," King Hussein said. "There's a tremendous media barrage resulting from a lack of intimate knowledge of what's happening."

Western diplomats and intelligence officials stationed in Amman to monitor Iraq have said significant amounts of material Saddam is using to rebuild his country are also flowing in from neighboring Syria, Turkey and Iran.

The impression in Amman is that the United States is pressuring Jordan because Washington cannot afford to get tough with coalition partners Turkey and Syria and has no influence in Iran.

Jordan backed Iraq during the Gulf War and has strong economic ties to Baghdad.

Before the Gulf War, Jordanian exports to Iraq totaled about $200 million a year. But most of that has been lost due to the U.N.-imposed trade sanctions on Baghdad.

Iraq is also virtually the sole oil exporter to Jordan and since the Gulf War, Saudi Arabia has refused to supply oil to Jordan.

Jordanians believe that as the U.S. presidential elections loom closer, Washington will find it politically expedient to pressure Jordan to counter criticisms of President Bush's handling of the Persian Gulf crisis.

"There's a tremendous effort being made to discredit this country," Hussein said. "So we've had to take ... a very clear stand against anything that further implies that this country is not doing what it should do."

Hussein said Jordan accepts U.N. Security Council resolutions imposing sanctions on Iraq but added: "We're a proud people and we will not compromise."

Izetbegovic to seek military intervention

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian officials on Wednesday pressed for U.S. military intervention, arms and money to help break the siege of their capital by Serb forces.

The officials said President Alija Izetbegovic would make the case for greater U.S. involvement in a meeting Thursday with President Bush at the European security conference in Helsinki, Finland.

"President Bush can help himself," said Fikret Abdic, a Slavic Muslim who is a member of the collective presidency led by Izetbegovic. "If he is really ready to defend his new world order here is his chance. It will either rise or fall with Sarajevo.'

"It is about time America tells us if it will support us or not so we can turn to other friends in the world," said a second member of the presidency, Stjepan Kljuic, a Croat.

The officials said more than one Western government had offered to sell Bosnia arms if the United Nations and the European Community do not intervene militarily or send weapons. They did not specify the countries.

The United States has said it could fly air cover to ensure that relief convoys reach Sarajevo, but does not foresee deeper military involvement.

Abdic said Izetbegovic, who left Sarajevo Wednesday for Helsinki, will seek to persuade Bush to support the use of foreign air power to take out the artillery besieging Sarajevo from the surrounding hills.

He said the president would also ask for enough heavy weapons to give outgunned government forces rough parity with Serb forces.

On Tuesday night, Serbian and government forces waged the heaviest battles in days, with some Serbian shells raining on the center of the city. Light flares lit up the sky of the blacked-out city while heavy machine guns and automatic weapons rattled on a hill in old town, the site of fierce overnight infantry clashes.

Sporadic artillery and heavy machine-gun fire echoed across the city as U.N. convoys shuttled food and medical supplies into, Sarajevo.

GISD names Rusty Gray to lead musicians

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

GREENWOOD — The wood isn't green in Greenwood. But the high school's colors are blue and white and the new Ranger band director is Rusty Gray.

"All right. I have a colorful name," said Gray, the former director of the Bonham Junior High School Band in Odessa.

The effervescent 29-year-old was named band director for Greenwood Independent School District on Wednesday.

A former Permian High School trumpet player and a trumpet player with the Midland-Odessa Symphony for four years, Gray plans to combine his Mojo competitive spirit with his serious musicianship skills to lead the Ranger band to new heights.

"I want the band to be a crowd pleaser and please the community first," he said. "Awards will come second."

Gray allows that it will take a strong program to please the community since West Texans have high expectations when it comes to "band and football."

"The good thing is that people before me built this band. I've watched the band on (video) tapes. They will be ready to compete next year. My challenge is to make the band go over the top and be a state competitor."

Gray said his assistant will be Candy Irwin, also new to Greenwood ISD.

A graduate of West Texas State University, where he earned a bachelor of music education degree, Gray said he was looking for a community with strong band support from parents.

"Rusty fit our philosophy to a T," said Don Dulin, Greenwood Middle School principal.

Bob Pheil, Greenwood High School principal, said, "We are looking forward to a real exciting year and we think the band will mesh well with and compliment other activities."

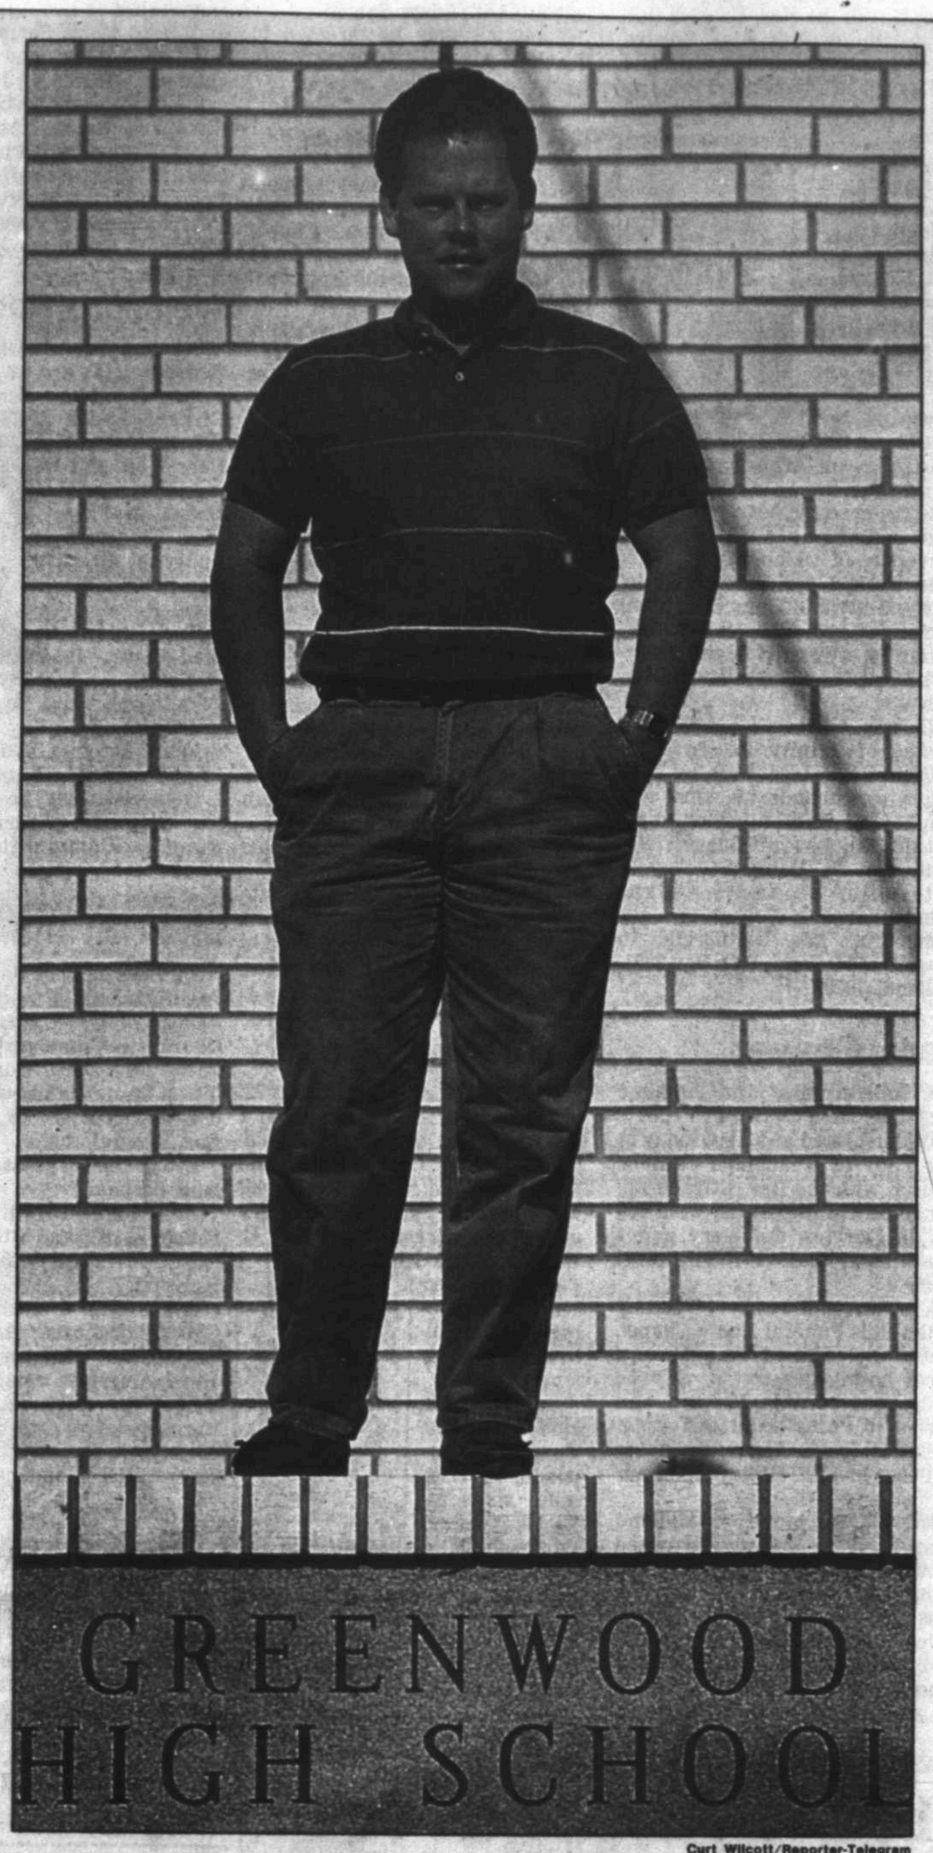

Pheil said the district's previous band director is now leading the high school band in Breckenridge.

A committee of community members and GISD personnel reviewed band director candidates and submitted Gray as its recommedation to the board, he said.

"We were pleased that Rusty Gray had worked with J.R. McEntyre in Odessa, who is very well known," Pheil said.

Gray unabashedly describes McEntyre as

ECHD board votes to hire pathologist

■ Midland officials have not yet decided to enter planned negotiations with Dr. Sparks Veasey.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

ODESSA — Plans to bring a forensic pathologist to the area were resuscitated Wednesday by the board of the Ector County Hospital District.

Board members voted unanimously at an emergency meeting to begin negotiations with Dr. Sparks Veasey, a forensic pathologist whose contract with Potter County expired July 1.

Lubbock and at least one other county have been considering Veasey as a pathologist as well, hospital officials said.

Recent discussions about securing Veasey as a joint venture between Midland and Ector counties and the hospital districts stalled apparently because of lack of commitment or funding on behalf of the Midland entities, Ector County officials said.

The hospital board made their move because of the threat that Veasey would be hired elsewhere.

"We were up against a wall with Dr. Veasey and we the hospital board decided we had to do something," said Steve Thompson, president of the board.

"It just came time to fish or cut bait and we couldn't wait on them (Midland county and hospital district) anymore," confirmed Ector County Judge Jim Jordan.

The decision for the Ector County Hospital District to give the go-ahead on the proposal took less than a half-hour of discussion by the board.

The medical examiner's office — if Veasey's services are secured — will operate under the auspices of Medical Center Hospital.

The board agreed to underwrite between $200,000 and $250,000 to offer Veasey. That amount would cover the doctor's salary, an assistant, a secretary and office expenses.

Ector County will commit a minimum of $50,000 toward the venture, Jordan said.

In addition, the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission has received about $60,000 in verbal commitments from surrounding counties interested in using a locally based pathologist, Thompson said.

Authorities identify girl's body

LAMESA (AP) — A tattoo and jewelry helped in identifying a missing Wisconsin girl found buried in a field, said authorities who were led to the grave by a man accused in the slaying.

Lamesa Police Chief G.M. Cox confirmed Tuesday that the body was that of Coni Jean Norton, 17, who had been missing since June 9. A cause of death was not released.

Norton's mother, Laurie Adams of Lamesa, said Tuesday that her daughter's body would be returned to Wausau for a funeral Monday.

Fernando Lopez, 27, a friend of Norton, has been charged in the murder. He was arrested in Boulder, Colo., June 30, returned to Texas last Friday and arraigned Saturday. He was being held in the Dawson County Jail on $500,000 cash bond.

Authorities have said Lopez directed them to the area where Norton's body was found Saturday buried in a field about five miles south of Lamesa. Lamesa is about 60 miles south of Lubbock.

Cox said a tattoo, rings, other jewelry and possibly dental records helped the Dallas County Medical Examiner's Office identify the body.

Norton lived with relatives and was a junior at Wausau East High School until March, when she moved back to Texas to live with her mother.

Water panel hears input on potential problems

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

BIG SPRING — The quest for clear, clean West Texas drinking water came to Big Spring Wednesday with a Clean River Water Act panel hearing.

The hearing was the fourth in a series of public forums around the state designed to collect public input on current and potential water problems in river basins throughout the state.

Bonnie Vasquez, 51, voiced concerns about the high salt content of West Texas drinking water, and oil pollutants and the overall effects of the water on her health.

"When will this water get so muddied, so black from oil?" she asked. "This could happen unless we do something now. It's going to happen if we're not careful."

John Taylor, president of the Colorado River Municipal Water District's Board of Directors, said the water district fought for the passage of legislation to require lined oilfield pits to prevent contamination of groundwater and for the proper disposal of brine — saltwater that is produced along with oil and gas.

State inspectors give jail five demerits

■ Despite penalties for overcrowdedness, jail commission impressed with how facility is operated.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Even though the Midland County Jail system chalked up five demerits linked to state-imposed jail overcrowdedness, an inspector with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards said Wednesday he was "impressed with the way the jail" is being operated and managed.

"They are operating under pretty tough conditions," Paul Scarborough, the jail commission's supervising inspector, told the Midland County Commissioners' Court in an emergency session to air the jail commission's report.

In readying for the jail commission's inspection on Wednesday, Midland County Detentions Capt. Richard Sexton and his jail staff "were prepared so well this year, I don't know if they could get much better," Scarborough said.

Midland's two jails — the fifth-floor courthouse facility and the free-standing detention building — are certified to legally hold 306 inmates in cells of various classifications. Because of statewide overcrowding, classifications for first-time offenders, repeat or habitual offenders, and violent and non-violent offenders are being violated.

Midland County's violations were linked to inadequate bunks and classifications and to understaffing because of the overcrowdedness.

The Midland County jails house 435 inmates, including 183 convicted felons. Of that number, 171 have been processed and are ready to be transported to Texas Department of Corrections units. But due to conditions in the state prison system, TDC is unable to receive all of the felons convicted in Midland's state district courts.

"We are at a (jail staff) level that we consider to be unsafe at times and bordering on dangerous at other times because of the crowded population," Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said following Scarborough's report on the inspection. "It's a constant battle for us to maintain control inside the cells."

As a result of the "astronomical" gain in jail population, Painter said that "there's no way that we're are going to stay within our budget as far as housing.

"If we were to get rid of prisoners that we are holding for TDC, it would bring our population down to 252" — well within the legal standards enforced by the jail commission.

"Right now, we are 129 over" the legal limit, Painter said.

Scarborough volunteered to send jail commission agents to Midland to study jail staffing "free of charge" if the sheriff requested that study. Painter said he would.

An increase in jail staffing, despite overcrowding, would help "make the jail safe again," Painter said. Due to lack of bunks, many prisoners sleep on mattresses on the floor.

"We have legislators in Austin that have fallen down on the job,"

People should take the blame for their wrongs

Todd

Blame, blame, blame.

Pass the buck.

Let somebody else, or something, take the fall.

That's the scapegoat way out of a predicament, a dilemma, a dead-end, a quandary, a troublesome situation.

Fault anybody but self, perfect self. It is those forces "out there" that cause grief. Never self, perfect self, self-righteous self that falls prey to circumstances far beyond one's control.

So, please don't ruffle pride and suggest that self ought to be responsible and accountable and mature enough to accept and admit any foul deed or misdeed by commission or omission.

Perfect self errs not.

If something goes wrong, there's bound to be something out there, maybe a stealthy gremlin, perhaps the devil on rampage or a crafty adversary, to blame. Perhaps fate intervened and inexorably plotted a dastardly course to Hades on Earth: misery, embarrassment, debt, bankruptcy, divorce, shame, guilt, turmoil, confusion, misunderstanding, failure and condemnation.

"It's not my fault, Lord, that my life's a mess," cries the sinner.

Oh, no.

Quickly, find an excuse to soothe the conscience.

"The devil made me do it."

"I just couldn't help myself."

"I was so desperately 'in love' that I couldn't control myself."

"I didn't know what I was doing."

"They made me do it."

"No one was hurt, so what's the commotion all about?"

"Well, everybody else does it."

"What difference does it make?"

"Nobody will ever know."

"I didn't have time to do it right the first time."

"Well, at the time, it seemed like the right thing to do."

"How could I have known it would turn out this way?"

"If only I had known."

"I didn't intend to hurt anybody."

"So what's the big deal?"

"It wasn't that big of a lie."

Well, well, well.

For years, I figured things went the way they went because of some uncontrollable force, such as fate, was out there mysteriously directing or misdirecting my life.

So, what could I do? What can anyone do when the whole universe is bearing down on you.

Good lives were orderly and on track because the Big Director out there already had written the script which, it seemed to me, was subject to revision.

Scripts which plotted other lives constantly were being changed. And those poor, unfortunate lives, as if acted out on stage where the props often seemed misplaced and the cues came either too soon or too late, were haplessly in disarray. The characters were riding in turbulent air, hitting the squall lines, foundering in white water, battling storm's onslaught.

Surely there is peace and harmony beyond the horizon. Maybe not. Perhaps there is more havoc.

Enough! Enough!

Life is a show, and each of us is right in the middle of it even if we hide in illusions and in shadows.

Blame no one but self.

'Tis I, Dear Lord, who is at fault.

Blame, blame, blame.

Put it on self if self is to blame, 'fess up to it, air it out, straighten up, and get along with life. Seek the sunlight of truth. Everything will be all right.

Ed Todd is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

WATER: Area residents voice their concerns

(From 1B)

Byproducts of oil production have been identified as a primary cause of water pollution in West Texas, but Taylor said since enforcement of pit and disposal rules, oilfield pollution has been reduced.

However, Lake Spence near Robert Lee, which is a source of Midland drinking water, has a high salt content due in part to brine pollution and mineral runoff in the watershed, he said.

CRMWD has spent millions of dollars to divert salt water pollution from the Colorado River basin to make the water flowing into the district's three lakes — Spence, Thomas and Ivie — less saline.

O.H. Ivie, the water district's general manager, complimented the Texas Railroad Commission and the petroleum industry for doing a "marvelous job" to reduce man-made pollution in recent years.

He said oilfield regulators and the water district "are looking down the same gun barrel," toward a target of producing clean, clear water.

Mark Hoelscher, general manager of the Permian Basin Underground Water District in Stanton, said the "new Railroad Commission (administration) is to be commended because of the solid effort they have been putting into enforcement of the rules . . . to effect good quality groundwater."

Hoelscher said the Midland district is doing a much better job enforcing TRC rules.

Dale Ferguson, a 39-year resident of the Big Spring area, expressed concern about metropolitan sludge being shipped to Texas for disposal. She cited New Jersey sludge being shipped to Tyler in Smith County in East Texas and to the controversial "sludge ranch" near Sierra Blanca, where new landowners have proposed spreading sludge from New York.

She raised the possibility of ill effects of leakage from sludge into the groundwater. There are no known proposals to bring sludge into Howard County.

Panelist Ken Manning said large metropolitan areas "are going to be looking for outlets" to dispose of their sludge.

Asked if he knew of groundwater studies of sludge-covered areas, Manning said he was not aware of any having been done.

Marilyn Read, a Howard County rancher, recommended legislation be passed "so that other states will not be attracted to Texas as a place for dumping sludge."

Ralph Hoelscher of Miles expressed concern over sloppy cementing of oil wells and the possibility of resulting pollution.

Kolleen Wilwerding, environmental quality director for the Lower Colorado River Authority, said that results of the statewide hearings will be submitted to the Texas Legislature, Texas Water Commission and the governor so that they "can go out a piece at a time and start addressing the problems."

ECTOR: Hospital district board to hire pathologist

(From 1B)

Midland County Judge Charles "Bro" Seltzer said Midland County is still interested in supporting a regional pathologist.

"Midland County has not decided not to participate but what we have resolved is that we cannot participate at the level suggested," Seltzer said.

Contributing $50,000 would not be feasible because of budget restraints and an inequitable amount of services Midland would receive, Seltzer said.

Last year, 25 autopsies and 124 inquests were conducted for Midland County at a cost of $16,951, Seltzer said. Adding other costs incurred, including shipping fees, the expense to Midland County would still be less than $50,000, he said.

Seltzer said he plans to go before the Midland City Council during their briefing session next Tuesday to discuss the prospects of contributing to the medical examiner's office.

Although the county prosecutes criminal homicides, most of the homicides or suspicious death cases are from the city through the police department, Seltzer said.

All entities involved agreed on and supported the need for a regional forensic pathologist.

"We do need a pathology lab here and we need it in the worst way," said Ector County Hospital District board member Johnnie Hooper.

If Veasey accepts the offer, the medical examiner's office may be in place by the end of July, said Medical Center administrator Michael Stephans. He added that he expects to have an answer from Veasey by next week.

If Veasey is not secured, is is possible to offer the job to another pathologist, Ector County hospital officials said.

Memorial Hospital & Medical Center President Dr. Harold Rubin, who has been the Midland hospital's representative in discussions concerning the creation of a regional pathologist's post, was not available for comment on Wednesday's developments.

JAIL: Commission members may do study on staffing

(From 1B)

Painter said. "County taxpayers are going to pay more of a load rather than spread it out throughout the state."

Recent legislation authorizes building more TDC cells to house felons.

County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer and Painter agreed that the Texas Legislature was the villain in jail overcrowding by not being foresighted enough and by not taking earlier action to build additional TDC cells.

"The Texas Legislature has done a 'tap dance' for about the last 12 years and has ignored the prison overcrowding problem," Seltzer said following the 20-minute afternoon session. "Relief from down there (at the TDC) is three to four years down line."

Meanwhile, Seltzer said the legislators are "rewriting the Penal Code, and they are going to find another way to cram the prisoners down on the counties and make it the counties' responsibility and avoid their own constitutional responsibility to house and maintain convicted felons in the state of Texas. That is not right."

By law, county jails house misdemeanor offenders, while felons are to be held in the state penitentiary.

Legislation has been proposed to raise the definition of felony theft from $750 to $2,000 and to "make credit-card abuse a misdemeanor instead of a felony," Seltzer said. Certain white-collar crimes, like forgery, and burglary of an automobile and unauthorized use of vehicles would become misdemeanors under the proposal as well.

Those changes would increase the number of inmates to be held in county jails and not state penitentiaries.

"That is not right, either," Seltzer said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Store robbery

Staff report

Police are searching for two men in connection with the aggravated robbery of Buck's Convenience Store at 3314 Loop 250 early Wednesday morning, according to police reports.

According to clerk Steve Carrasco, 35, the men entered the store and asked if they could buy some beer. Carrasco told them it was after hours and one man pulled a knife and forced him to open the cash register. Both men took an undetermined amount of cash and fled on foot, according to reports.

The first man was described as Hispanic, about 26 years old, 5 feet, 8 inches tall and 170 pounds. He was said to be wearing a plaid shirt, blue jeans and a white bandana.

The second man was described as Hispanic, about 23 years old and is described as 5 feet, 5 inches tall and 150 pounds. He was wearing a white shirt and black pants.

Murder case

Police are still "checking leads" in the Monday morning murder of City Cab driver Alejandro Rodriguez, 20. According to police, detectives have finished processing all the physical evidence from the scene.

Rodriguez was shot twice in the back of the head after dropping off a fare on Morgan Way.

Anyone with information on the crime is asked to call Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS or Sgt. B.G. Johnson at 685-7167.

BAND: GISD hires new director

(From 1B)

"the best band director in the country."

"He really built the Odessa program," Gray said.

The Greenwood Band program had about 160 students enrolled last year, according to Gray.

"It's going to be even bigger this year," he predicted.

The new band director said he grew up in Odessa, and was pleased to discover "Greenwood and Odessa people are the same type of people."

Gray said he hopes to take advantage of "the great resources in Midland, especially the symphony," in educating students.

He said the Ranger band will hit the field Aug. 3, the first scheduled band practice of the 1992-'93 school year.

"The main reason I am here is that the superintendent, the principal, the students and the community all want a great band," he said. "That's why I'm here. I'm ready to build on this program."

Cattlemen to convene in Midland

Judge sues man held in courthouse attack

FORT WORTH (AP) — An appeals judge who has sued the admitted gunman in a courthouse attack said Wednesday he hopes other victims, including wounded jurists, will join in his lawsuit.

Judge David Farris ducked under the bench in the Second Court of Appeals last week to escape gunfire. But two other judges were wounded in the attack that left two attorneys dead and another injured.

Farris said his civil assault lawsuit against George Lott seeks unspecified damages.

"How do you put a value on the pain that my family had to go through?" Farris asked. "But my damages are insignificant in comparison with the other judges' families and those of the two attorneys who died."

Farris said he understands that Lott may have personal worth of $500,000. "But that is not nearly enough to compensate for the damage he caused," the judge said.

A Tarrant County Security Team formed after the shootings agreed Wednesday to accept an offer by the U.S. marshal's office for a Washington security consultant to examine needs at the old county courthouse and elsewhere.

Staff members also suggested sealing off some building entrances and installing more metal detectors and other security devices.

"You can buy all the equipment you want to buy, but it's the personnel you're going to have to depend on," said District Attorney Tim Curry, a team member.

County Commissioner Dionne Bagsby said courthouse workers must feel secure in their workplace.

A state district judge who ordered bulletproof windows and other security measures closed her courtroom Tuesday after they were not provided. A visiting judge decided that if State District Judge Lee Ann Dauphinot's demands are not met within 10 days, a contempt hearing would be held.

"Until changes are made to make this courtroom secure, this court is closed," Ms. Dauphinot said after dismissing jurors scheduled for a sexual assault case.

She threatened to hold Joe C. Davis, deputy county facilities manager, in contempt for not complying with her security order, which also included installing a panic button in her chambers.

Lott remained in Tarrant County Jail Wednesday without bail bond on one capital murder charge. Bonds totaling $325,000 were set on three charges of deadly assault on a court participant and a weapons charge, a sheriff's officer said.

The 45-year-old Arlington attorney, who has also been charged in Illinois with sexually abusing his 4-year-old son, said in a televised confession that the courtroom attack was to focus attention on a divorce and child custody case.

Man convicted in priest's murder to remain in prison

AUSTIN (AP) — A man convicted of killing a priest has been denied a pardon despite assertions from a prosecutor who says the man could not have committed the crime.

James Harry Reyos was sentenced to 38 years in prison for the 1981 killing of Father Patrick Ryan, who was found tied and beaten in an Odessa motel room.

Former Ector County assistant district attorney Dennis Cadra, who handled the county's appeal of Reyos' case, has written Gov. Ann Richards that Reyos could not have murdered the priest.

Cadra, now a district attorney for neighboring Andrews County, has said a gasoline receipt, speeding ticket and testimony from an alibi witness placed Reyos in New Mexico immediately before and after the killing.

Despite his assertions, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles voted 16-0 against pardoning Reyos. The decision announced Tuesday means that Richards is powerless to take legal action on Reyos' behalf, the Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday.

Suspect posed with gun, loot, witnesses say

AUSTIN (AP) — Hours after the robbery-slaying of a taxicab driver, a 16-year-old youth posed for photographs with his gun and stolen loot, witnesses told investigators.

An acquaintance of the youth said he was in the cab when Alvin Bronson III, 25, was shot to death in Pflugerville early Saturday, according to Pflugerville municipal court records.

Bronson, a University of Texas student, had been driving the cab for about three weeks.

Court records say that when the acquaintance asked the youth why he had shot the cab driver, the suspect replied, "Things happen."

In an interview with the Austin American-Statesman Tuesday, the acquaintance said that he was about to pay Bronson for the ride from a south Austin motel to Pflugerville when the cab driver was shot in the back.

When Bronson grabbed his radio and broadcast an appeal for help, the youth said, the other youth shot Bronson a second time, court records say.

A third passenger also gave a similar account of the incident, according to court records.

A woman identifying herself as the suspect's mother, told the newspaper, "I could never believe my son could do something like that. If I did, I would be less than a mother. I'm devastated."

Witnesses are quoted in the court records as saying that shortly after Bronson was slain, the suspect posed for photos at the hotel with a .45-caliber pistol and about $130.

THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Good luck hastens your progress. Concentrate on implementing innovative ideas and business will prosper. Financial matters become more complicated in late fall or early December. You should be able to get a better return on your investments early in 1993. Next spring finds you learning how to assert your independence without alienating others. Casual romances are not for you. Seek a permanent commitment.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Tom Hanks and Jimmy Smits, football star O.J. Simpson, actress Kelly McGillis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Test results could be delayed. To reduce tension, keep busy. A joint project could lead to improved profits and a new alliance. Let a friend off the hook; hide your disappointment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It would be to your advantage to consult more experienced allies before making a commitment. Give priority to pursuits that will help you clear up a misunderstanding or add to your knowledge.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)1: Ask for time to mull things over before you make a new financial commitment. Careful scrutiny may enable you to detect any weaknesses in a plan. Tackle a many-faceted task with gusto.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Devising procedures that will save time and money could boost you into the top ranks. You benefit from having excellent behind-the-scenes support. Reach out to associates who share your sound values.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Those who have striven hard over a long period of time begin to see results. Your eye for detail wins the attention of someone influential. Examine the merchandise carefully if buying sale items.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Press your case with vigor and you will soon see better-than-average results. Your prospects for obtaining wider public recognition are improving.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Heed your partner now and you are unlikely to go wrong. Some of your friends may have designs on your cash. Do not let temporary obstacles depress you. Victory is close at hand!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The morning hours will probably be the most productive. Someone's attitude or behavior could cause offense this afternoon. Become a detective and investigate a business mystery.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Temptation takes many forms; identify it before it overwhelms you. Make yourself scarce when there are risks to be taken. A conservative approach should win you a raise or promotion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Someone may have designs on your assets. Take measures to safeguard your valuables. Your health benefits from the moments of leisure available to you tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An accord that is reached now should be kept top secret. It will prove more profitable and longer-lasting that way! Show a loving heart to relatives or friends in distress.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Prepare careful answers if you expect to be asked sensitive questions. A financial breakthrough is near. Taking a non-committal approach to romance could leave you alone this evening.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are great conversationalists and gifted artists. These youngsters are so sensitive to color that wise parents will allow them to choose the hue they prefer for their room. Peace-loving and flexible, these Cancerians tend to drop their plans if they encounter resistance. They feel certain that there is more than one way to achieve their aims! An ear for languages and an eye for detail make public relations, journalism and diplomacy good career choices.

How much has the game developed over the past half-century? The average player has made great strides, but although the experts bid infinitely better than did their counterparts of former generations, there has been no radical improvement in card-play technique. This hand is based on a problem that confronted Charles Goren some 50 years ago.

The auction probably would not be repeated today, although the final contract is likely to be the same. At first glance, it might seem that a winning finesse in any suit outside of hearts is needed, but the lie of the cards presents the defenders with quite a problem.

West led the king of hearts and continued with the ace. At this point, rather early in the game, West was trapped in an endplay. The apparently safe club shift would have been fatal—declarer could insert the nine and, if it was covered by the ten, would still have a club finesse in reserve. Since declarer was marked by the bidding with both pointed-suit aces, it looked as if any return would hand declarer a trick and the contract.

Goren found the only shift to give his side a chance—he led the nine of trumps! Declarer called for the queen from dummy, which held the trick. However, declarer's problems were not yet over. Was West leading away from the king of spades, or did East have the monarch? After agonized thought, declarer elected to continue with a trump to the ten. In with the king, Goren could now exit safely in hearts, and the defenders eventually collected a diamond trick for down one.

Reception marks anniversary of RFK's last political campaign

NEW YORK — One of the more coveted invitations for Sunday, the eve of the Democratic National Convention, when New York will be awash in parties, comes in the name of Ethel Kennedy, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Gov. Mario Cuomo and Mayor David Dinkins. They are inviting guests to a garden reception at Gracie Mansion to launch the 25th-anniversary commemoration of Robert F. Kennedy's last campaign. The office of the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial has been deluged with requests for tickets ($1,000 each).

"It never happens that people call and say, 'We want to come to a fund-raiser,' but it's just the opposite for this," said Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, the senator's eldest daughter and a convention delegate.

Though technically not a convention party, the event was timed to coincide with the convention because so many political figures will be in town.

On the guest list so far are Sens. George McGovern, Christopher Dodd and Harris Wofford, former New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne, Douglas Dillon, Paul Kirk, Tim Russert, Sharon Rockefeller, Carol Channing, Aretha Franklin and David Geffen.

And then there will be the Kennedy clan, including Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg, Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II and Maria Shriver. It may well be the first public social appearance of Sen. Kennedy and his new bride, Victoria Reggie.

"All the Kennedy kids will be there," said Kerry Kennedy Cuomo. "Usually we travel in packs, so whoever is in town will be there. These events are great for our family because it is a chance to get together."

They will have another oportunity Wednesday at the convention, when a film about Robert Kennedy will be shown. "My father-in-law will speak on the same night, so I'll have all my family on both sides," Ms. Kennedy Cuomo said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Reba McEntire and Vince Gill will be co-hosts of the 26th annual Country Music Association awards show Sept. 30.

It will be the third straight year McEntire has been host of the show and Gill's first.

McEntire was voted the association's female vocalist of the year from 1984 through 1987. Gill was chosen male vocalist of the year in 1991.

McEntire's hit records include "Whoever's in New England" and the current "The Night the Lights Went Out in Georgia." Gill's top songs include "When I Call Your Name" and "Take Your Memory With You."

JACKSON, Wyo. — Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, shopped, went sightseeing and horseback riding, and enjoyed a barbecue on a week-long visit to a friend's ranch next to Grand Teton National Park.

The Reagans startled locals and tourists when they strolled through town. "I've never met such a celebrity before, especially not on my birthday," a pool player at the historic Cowboy Bar told the former president.

"Well, happy birthday," Reagan replied with a hearty handshake, as Mrs. Reagan, in a denim jacket, jeans, a red scarf and hat, signed autographs outside.

Back outside, Reagan, wearing a leather jacket, blue jeans, boots and cowboy hat, waved cheerfully at a little boy riding shotgun on a stagecoach as it rumbled through the town square.

Even the National Park Service laid down its own red carpet by grading the washboard dirt road winding up to the ranch.

The Reagans planned to end their visit with Norman Sprague's family Friday.

NEW YORK — Tracy Reiner, who plays a relief pitcher and outfielder in "A League of Their Own," directed by her mother, Penny Marshall, says baseball beats acting any day.

"Learning to play baseball was the greatest thing I've done," Reiner told Women's Day in the July 21 issue.

Reiner, 28, started her acting career as a child playing bit parts in the television show "Laverne and Shirley," in which Marshall starred.

Since then she's had roles in 16 films, including "Jumpin' Jack Flash" and "Big," directed by her mother; "Beaches" and "Pretty Woman," directed by her uncle Garry Marshall; and "When Harry Met Sally," directed by her stepfather Rob Reiner.

She does not have ambitions of stardom, she said.

"I don't want to make giant films and I don't want to be a big movie star," she said. "That's too much responsibility."

NEW YORK — For the first time in 10 years, Bruce Springsteen got a little studio help from an old friend: former E Street Band guitarist Little Steven van Zandt.

A new version of the Boss' current single, "57 Channels (And Nothin' On)," features van Zandt's studio mixing efforts along with his guitar and vocals — his first work on a Springsteen track since the "Born in the USA" sessions in 1982.

"It was real spontaneous. It was a collaboration between two friends, two artists. I'm glad it worked out," van Zandt said.

Summer fashions feature looks from produce section

AP Laserphoto

This brilliantly colored pleated "leaf" dress topped with green and yellow leaf hat is part of the spring/summer ready-to-wear collection of Emanuel Ungaro. Many designers are featuring plant motifs in their summer collections.

By Francine Parnes

Some summer fashions look good enough to eat. The pick of the crop includes fruit of the vine in larger-than-life prints, lush colors and mouth-watering shapes.

Fashion cognoscenti credit Oscar de la Renta for sowing the season's first seeds. In a tribute to his native Dominican Republic, his spring runway show was studded with gaudy fruited turbans and drop earrings a la Carmen Miranda, the "Brazilian Bombshell" of the 1940s.

Alice Vickers, fashion director of Saks Fifth Avenue in Denver, says fruit motifs create a tropical fantasy. "It's a casual, summer getaway feel, like you're on vacation in the South Pacific," she says. "And the bright colors strike a note with the American woman."

Among offerings at Saks are Marisa Christina's white cotton sequined T-shirt with oversized strawberries, $78, and matching skirts, $58; and Anne Klein II's hand-knit black cotton pullover, $278, brimming with apples and oranges.

Designer Nicole Miller took her cue from the greengrocer and came up with a look-at-me loud print in 18 colors. All of the fruits from Dole appear on the pattern, along with cans and labels.

The group includes a 45-inch-square scarf, $80; a camp shirt, $145; a black silk blazer with fruit print lining, $355; and pleated shorts, $135. For men there are ties, $60, and pocket squares, $18. Prices are approximate. At Saks Fifth Avenue in New York, Bullock's in Southern California, Merry-Go-Round stores and the Nicole Miller boutique in Carmel, Calif.

"The natural colors of fruit lend themselves to the uplifting kind of artwork we do," says Bud Konheim, president of Nicole Miller. "There's no such thing as a sad fruit."

At Neiman Marcus you'll find Pareo's oversized cotton scarf with pineapples, cherries, watermelons, $30, which can be worn as a beach cover-up or a sarong, and an oblong chiffon scarf, $40, with purple and green grapes. From Sharif comes an embossed leather change purse in the shape of a pineapple, watermelon, orange, pear or lemon, about $40.

I.B. Diffusion offers a striped scoop-neck pullover with linen fruit applique, embroidery and bead detail. In ramie and cotton, it's $88 at I.B. Diffusion stores nationwide.

"People are still very much concerned with ecology, and fruit patterns are a way of preserving that pretty lemon yellow or watermelon red," says Leatrice Eiseman, executive director of the Pantone Color Institute in Carlstadt, N.J.

Besides, she says, the juicy hues are a great pick-me-up in bleak times. "In an era of a depressed economy, seeing fruits on clothing and in accessories is certainly cheering," she says. "It tweaks your funny bone."

That's where Joe Boxer's fruity cotton boxer shorts come in. For $14 you'll get glowing bananas, or blue ice cubes with lemons and oranges. At May Co., The Broadway, Macy's, Emporium and Dillard's.

De La Renta's tribute were runway props, but you can savor the flavor with fruit pins from Chanel. Brimming with vinyl blueberries and bright green leaves, they're about $150 at selected Chanel boutiques.

Chanel also offers "Enchanted Forest" beach hats — huge straws strewn with vines, flowers and fruit. They range from $2,115 to $2,605 at selected Chanel boutiques.

But you don't need a lot of green for most fruit fashions. Leggale socks with pineapples, oranges, and apples are $5.50; Jockey socks with bananas, strawberries, raspberries and grapes, $7.50 at Sox Appeal stores.

Other gewgaws include Ann Vuille's hair accessories with 3-D grapes and roses, $18 to $25 at Bergdorf Goodman, Nordstrom and Barneys.

Fashion designers make animal patterns hot new trend for fall

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Last spring, owning something in an animal pattern was a novelty. By fall, it will be unavoidable. Designers of everything from coats to lingerie in every price range have leapt on animal markings for fall.

Last week, accessories began to hit the stores. The response, as one purveyor put it, has been unbelievable.

Bloomingdale's is barely able to keep one leap ahead of the demand for its leopard-printed chiffon scarfs, selling at $42. Meanwhile, belts, handbags, hats and hair accessories are selling at a fast clip.

Henri Bendel has some of the most arresting bags, all made of calfskin stenciled to resemble leopard. A big tote by Donald Pliner is $575, and an oversize '50s-style hatbox bag from Jill Stuart is $655.

While leopard markings are the most popular, ziggy black zebra stripes stenciled on white calf are moving in.

Bruno Magli's ankle-high calfskin boots with witchy pointed toes and sexy black stacked wooden heels have just emerged at Saks Fifth Avenue. They cost $265 a pair.

It takes one powerfully stylish woman to put a menagerie of these animal patterns together and make it work. Any woman, though, can add one touch of animal magnetism and know she's captured next fall's look.

Area girl in Miss Texas Pageant

Staff report

Tatum Elizabeth Hubbard

Tatum Elizabeth Hubbard, 18, daughter of Maurice and Marcy Hubbard of Odessa, is the reigning Miss West Texas. This week she is in competition in Fort Worth for the Miss Texas crown of the Miss America Pageant.

The Miss America Pageant system is based on four areas of competition: talent (40 percent), interview (30 percent), evening gown (15 percent) and swim suit (15 percent).

Talent is judged on technique, stage presence and difficulty. Miss Hubbard will sing and dance to a Broadway-style song, "Showstopper.

Interview competition is based on current events and the contestant's knowledge of self and opinion.

Miss Hubbard is a 1992 graduate of Permian High Schol and plans to major in broadcast journalism in the fall.

Accessories lend flair to fashions

Associated Press

The traditional bandanna print cotton square has long been folded into a triangle and used as a cover-up for wet or sun-damaged hair. Now there's a whole poke full of summer accessories adapted from the red or navy kerchief with its bold paisley-and-dot geometric design. At Contempo Casuals stores nationwide are nylon tights, $8, and hair twisters, $3. A. Brod has a polyester chiffon oblong scarf, $15 at Lord & Taylor.

Gingham — typically a cotton fabric woven from pre-dyed yarns into checks — likewise is enjoying a renaissance in accessories. Talbots' catalog has a lunchbox handbag with faux bamboo handle in black or red with white, $42.

DEAR ABBY

Antibiotics used with Pill cause 'surprise'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can you imagine my surprise when I read the letter in your column about the woman who became pregnant when she took antibiotics while she was on the pill? That's exactly what happened to me!

Van Buren

When my twin sons were 3 months old, I went back on the pill. A month later, my physician prescribed an antibiotic for an infection, and you guessed it — I got pregnant immediately.

Believe me, Abby, we were not ready emotionally, financially, or any other way to have another child. We were still in a state of confusion and had our hands full with the twins.

When I recovered from the shock, I asked my doctor why the pill didn't work, and he told me it must have been the antibiotic — then he added rather sheepishly, "That information was in the insert, which you should have read."

Well, of course I had not read the insert that came with the antibiotic. I doubt if many people would — unless they had been instructed to do so.

However, today we have a beautiful — and thank God, healthy — baby girl. She was an unwanted pregnancy, but she was definitely a very much wanted child. Now when someone asks me if she was an accident, I reply, "No, she was a beautiful surprise."

Doctors should tell their patients everything they need to know about the medications they're instructed to take, and not just assume that the patients are going to read the inserts that come with it. — DONNA L. IN LEVITTOWN, PA.

DEAR DONNA: The fact that antibiotics nullify the effectiveness of birth control pills must be the best-kept secret in the science of pharmacology. Read on for one of the many letters I received with the identical theme:

DEAR ABBY: Since I do not use birth control pills, I was very much surprised when I was informed that certain antibiotics, such as tetracycline, may cancel out the effectiveness of the pill.

I also wonder how many of your readers know that certain antibiotics, such as tetracycline, can cause serious birth defects if taken during pregnancy — especially during the first trimester?

Every woman, whether she is trying to get pregnant or not, should know which medications can affect her and a possible fetus.

Abby, please advise women to ask their physicians the following questions: (1) Will the medication you are prescribing for me cause any reaction to the medication I am presently taking? (Be sure to name all of them.)

(2) Will it be dangerous to a fetus if I should get pregnant while taking this medication?

Had I asked these questions, it may have saved the life of my first child. I was in my first month of pregnancy when my physician prescribed tetracycline for a sinus infection. — STILL ASKING QUESTIONS IN MEDFORD, N.Y.

DEAR ASKING: Thank you for sharing some important information. Every physician worth his (or her) shingle will ask his (or her) patient which medications that patient is currently taking.

DEAR ABBY: I want to warn your readers about telephone calls promising awards of money or trips. The caller will talk for some time to convince you that he is sincere, then he will ask you to send a certain amount of money.

I was a sucker to this scheme, which cost me $400. I was asked to send the money Federal Express. (I think they use Federal Express so they can't be charged with mail fraud.)

I asked the party to send the information to me in a certified letter and was told they didn't do business that way. — A SUCKER IN LOCKPORT, N.Y.

DEAR SUCKER: You are very hard on yourself to call yourself a sucker; but you are very generous to warn others.

By popular request, Abby shares more of her favorite prize-winning, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: More Favorite Recipes by Dear Abby, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. AT WIT'S END

In election year, familiarity breeds contempt

By Erma Bombeck

U.S. presidential campaigns are like long engagements. The more you get to know each other, the more you are sure you don't want to spend one more week with this person.

Bombeck

Great Britain has the right idea. Their candidates for prime minister campaign for about six weeks, throw a few eggs at one another, and then everyone votes.

In America, a lot of money and time is expended — and for what? What do we really know about the men running for office?

We know that George Bush puts no importance on the saxophone vote, having refused a booking on the Arsenio Hall show. Bill Clinton can imitate Elvis Presley and is probably the one sighted in a Wal-Mart store in Indiana.

And Ross Perot .. the longer he campaigns, the more we don't know. (I still think he's the late Peter Sellers reincarnated as Chauncey, the gardener in the classic movie "Being There.")

The trip to the White House is like a death march. Candidates zoom in and out of luncheons where they never eat, get in and out of cars that they never drive, and weave in and out of crowds whom they never look at.

One thing for sure, this will go down as the year of the electronic election. You can't flip the TV dial without seeing one of them guesting on a show. Expect more of it. I can see Bill Clinton appearing on "Murphy Brown" bearing a baby gift to make a statement on single mothers. Or even Dan Quayle guesting on "Married With Children" and giving advice to Al Bundy on marriage.

Jerry Brown would do well on Chuck Woolery's "Love Connection." You get to know people on this show. George Bush would be well advised to go on "American Sportsman," where he can demonstrate his strength by pointing out that he does not wear an ear patch for nausea in rough waters.

I can even see Pat Buchanan on "Star Search," with the audience voting whether or not they want him to return. Pat Paulsen would do well to get a booking on "Jeopardy." If you are going to be taken seriously as an intellectual in this world, you have to be a returning champion on "Jeopardy."

Somehow Ross Perot is perfect for a guest shot on "Northern Exposure." I can see him in Cicely, Alaska, with erudite disc jockey Chris. Both of them could expound on the metaphysical impact of politics on the universe, with neither of them having a clue what the other is talking about.

Tape at 10.

Little League suit

PHOENIX (AP) — A paraplegic Little League coach won a court fight Wednesday to take the field for an all-star game, despite complaints from the national Little League organization that his wheelchair is dangerous.

Lawrence Anderson, who's been leading his 13-year-old players from a wheelchair in the first- or third-base coaching boxes for three years, won an injunction from a federal judge just hours before his team was to take the field.

Anderson, himself a Maricopa Superior Court judge, filed a lawsuit challenging an anti-wheelchair rule of Little League Baseball Inc. of Williamsport, Pa. The rule bars wheelchairs from the field but allows them in dugouts.

Anderson, 43, was partly paralyzed in a car accident when he was 21.

U.S. District Judge Earl Carroll found the rule violates the Americans with Disabilities Act and issued a temporary restraining order barring the league from interfering with Anderson's coaching.

AL, NL All-Stars named

Three Padres named; Ripken, Alomar brothers starters

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ozzie Smith of St. Louis was elected Wednesday to start at shortstop for the National League for the 10th consecutive All-Star game, the longest streak since balloting returned to the fans in 1970.

Also elected were Benito Santiago, Fred McGriff and Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres, the first time in 10 years an All-Star host has had as many as three starters.

And second baseman Roberto Alomar of Toronto and catcher Sandy Alomar Jr. of Cleveland both were elected for the second straight season, only the sixth time brothers were picked to start for one team.

R. Alomar — S. Alomar — Ripken — Smith

Shortstop Cal Rikpen Jr. of the Baltimore Orioles received the highest vote total at 2,699,733, the most since Montreal's Gary Carter got 2,785,407 in 1982.

Second baseman Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs led the NL with 2,434,660, the second straight season he received the most votes in his league. Sandberg is an eight-time starter.

McGriff, who edged San Francisco's Will Clark by 16,163 votes for the NL's starting spot at first base in the closest balloting, is a first-time All-Star, as are NL outfielders Barry Bonds and Andy Van Slyke of Pittsburgh and third baseman Terry Pendleton of Atlanta.

"It's an opportunity I've longed for since I was playing in Little League," Pendleton said. "It's something I wanted to achieve and I want to thank the fans, the Atlanta Braves and God."

Trevino Open's favorite

■ Lee Trevino, 1992's leading money winner on the PGA Senior tour, is happy with the site of this year's Senior Open.

By Ralph Bernstein
AP Sports Writer

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Lee Trevino doesn't think the course offers any edges in the 72-hole U.S. Senior Open.

"I don't think the course favors a long hitter, a short hitter, a great iron player or a great putter," the 52-year-old Trevino said after a practice round over the 6,700 yard, par-71 course at Saucon Valley Country Club for the tournament that opens Thursday.

"This is the type of course I like, a course built in 1920," Trevino said. "This course is right out there in front of you. It's open in front of the greens and the greens are down on the fairways. The bunkers aren't hidden away. The greens are a little more undulated for a course this old. Some must have been rebuilt, although they say they didn't."

Trevino, who has won five times and is the leading money winner this year on the Senior tour, is the favorite in a field that includes Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer.

"The bottom line is driving well, keeping the ball in the fairways and getting into position on the greens, not relatively easy position, but where you don't have to go crazy. Make some birds and avoid three putts," said Trevino, who won this tournament two years ago.

Nicklaus beat Chi Chi Rodriguez in a playoff at Oakland Hills last year and would like to recapture the feeling.

"I can't remember that. I know the feeling of what I was doing ... and I can't find that feeling," he said. "That obviously was the best round I played all last season.

"I'm not sure what the state of my game is. I haven't played very well this year. It was disappointing the way I played at Pebble Beach," Nicklaus said of missing the cut in the U.S. Open. "I got what I deserved. I'm not sure what I'm physically or mentally able to do anymore. That's my biggest problem."

He predicted that a 7-under-par 277 or maybe 288 would be good enough to win.

Jack Nicklaus exercises his bad back.

All but two of the Top 20 money winners — Mike Hill and George Archer — are at Saucon Valley. They include Rodriguez, Dave Stockton, Jim Colbert, J.C. Snead, Bob Charles, Bruce Crampton, Al Geiberger, Harold Henning and Gibby Gilbert, winner of the last two tournaments at Kansas City and Kings Island.

"Trevino and Nicklaus are good players, but they're not that much better than me," Gilbert said after a practice round Wednesday.

He said of Trevino, "when he plays well he scores real low, and when he plays bad he scores sort of low."

"But I'm playing better today than I ever did in my life from tee to green," Gilbert said.

"Trevino is the best senior player in the world today," Player said. "Any man who beats Trevino will win. Nobody can drive the ball like Trevino."

Player also said the greens were the most severe that he's ever played in any Open, Senior or otherwise.

"We've had some guys putting off the green," he said.

Angels' lose 7-3, retain 1st

■ Midland's win streak ends at five with a loss to Tulsa, but with El Paso losing as well, the Angels remain in first.

Staff report

TULSA, Okla. — The Tulsa Drillers broke a 3-3 deadlock with four runs in the bottom of the eighth inning and went on to defeat the Midland Angels Wednesday night, 7-3, in the first game of a five-game set here.

The loss snapped the Angels' five-game win streak — a steak which tied their season best — but Midland managed to retain its one-game grip on first place in the Western Division as second-place El Paso fell to Shreveport, 6-2.

Midland shortstop Rod Correia singled home Jeff Kipila to tie the game at 3-3 in the top half of the eighth inning. But the

■ Angel Box/3C

Drillers responded with a two-run home run by Jose Oliva that made a loser out of Angel starter Dave Adams (4-9).

Tulsa added two more runs in the eighth, and Midland failed to score in the ninth.

Jeff Bronkey (2-6) picked up the win in relief in the first meeting between the two teams this season.

Tulsa banged out three runs in the first off Adams, but Midland battled back with a pair of home runs.

Catcher Rey Palacios lobbed a fly down the left-field line that fooled Tulsa outfielder David Hulse and bounced all the way to the wall in the fifth inning. Palacios turned the hit into an inside-the-park home run.

And leftfielder Dan Rumsey closed the deficit to 3-2 with a solo home run over the center-field wall to lead off the sixth inning.

But after Correia's single in the eighth knotted the score, Oliva untied it by driving an Adams' offering well over the wall in centerfield. Rusty Greer, who singled with one out, scored ahead of Oliva.

It was the 11th homer of the year for the Tulsa designated hitter.

Game 2 of the series is slated for 7:30 p.m. today. Righthander Phil Leftwich (5-3) will take the mound for Midland, while the Drillers plan to counter with Chris Geis (3-3) also a righty.

Hole-in-one prizes talk of tournaments

A player sees a certain luxury automobile can be his if only he aces a certain hole. His mouth waters as he forks over the entry fee.

Patterson

Most often, a Cadillac or some other uptown type vehicle is parked on the lawn outside the pro shop at the tournament's outset, further enticing the golfer as he wonders how snazzy he'll look behind the wheel — just after his little white ball circles the entire cup and falls into the hole on his first shot.

At least that's what I dreamed about last night.

As much as golf directors at tournaments truly want to give away the grand prize for a hole-in-one, odds are not that kind to players.

But no matter the odds, the prize offered in next month's Best of the Rest X is worth the shot. Anyone who plays in the tournament, to be held August 7-9 at Big Spring's Comanche Trails Golf Course, has as many as eight chances to win the prize, a week-long trip for two to Hawaii. Even the plane tickets are taken care of, golf director Al Patterson said.

On most of the car giveaways, Patterson said, players entered in the tournament have only two chances — one particular hole each day of the tournament must be aced to receive the Cadillac for instance. This time around, if a player aces any of the four par-three holes at Comanche Trails on either the first or second day of play, he or she will board a plane bound for beautiful, exciting Hawaii (as one of those irritating game show hosts would say).

Patterson, a native of Fort Myers, Fla., came up with the Best of the Rest idea five years ago. It's a tournament for golfers who basically shoot 80 or above, although there is an open flight for players capable of shooting closer to par. In the five years of the event, a hole-in-one prize has never been awarded, but in August, with the odds up because of the number of possible winning par-threes on the course, things may be different.

"Where'd the MVP of the Super Bowl go last year? Disneyland," Patterson said. "Where's the guy or girl going who gets a hole in one at the Best of the Rest? Hawaii."

In addition, Anco Battery, of Midland, will award a golf cart to the first hole in one on the first hole.

The entry fee for this and other tournaments goes to pay premiums on hole-in-one insurance, which has in past years been as high as $2,400, Patterson said.

J.P. Everhart, a Dallas-based insurance company handling the Big Spring event, figures certain percentages before arriving at the premium price.

"They figure the yardage of the hole, the number of contestants and the number of days of the tournament," Patterson said. "If we have 200 players in the tournament, there'll be 1,600 shots at the trip over two days. That's how they figure it."

Plus, Everhart says it will pay not just for the first ace, but for any others made at the tournament.

"We love to give 'em away," Patterson said.

With the odds four times better at winning a hole-in-one prize this year, and with the tournament now pre-flighted to prevent sand-bagging — something akin to pool hustling that Patterson calls "the kiss of death for golf" — the tournament expects to again reach its capacity of 106 two-man teams rather quickly.

Slingin' Sammy Baugh played in Best of the Rest IX. And former New York Jet Don Maynard has swung a few clubs in tournaments past. With Hawaii as the ultimate incentive for playing this time, maybe even Jack "Be There, Aloha" Lord will show up.

Jimmy Patterson is assistant sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Dibble HBP drives across winning run for Chicago

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Relief ace Rob Dibble hit Rey Sanchez with a pitch to force in the winning run in the 10th inning Wednesday, giving the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The loss snapped Cincinnati's six-game win streak and gave the loss to Dibble (0-4).

With one out in the 10th, Derrick May singled to right and went to third on a single to Rick Wilkins. Dibble ran the count to 2-0 to Doug Dascenzo before walking him intentionally to load the bases. His next pitch clipped Sanchez on ther left forearm to force in May with the winning run.

The Cubs tied in the game in the ninth when pinch-hitter Dwight Smith homered off Dibble leading off the inning. It was Smith's second homer and first pinch-homer this year.

It was the fourth blown save this season for Dibble, who is appealing a four-game suspension issued yesterday by National League president Bill White for his involvement in a brawl against the Houston Astros.

Giants 4, Phillies 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Robby Thompson homered and drove in the deciding run with a bases-loaded groundout in the eighth inning as the surging San Francisco Giants defeated the Philadelphia Phillies.

After Philadelphia's Jeff Grotewold tied the score 3-3 with his third pinch hit home run in as many days — a two-run shot off John Burkett in the seventh — the Giant completed their four-game sweep of the Phillies.

Kevin Bass led off the eighth inning with a ground-rule double off reliever Mike Hartley (4-3). Will Clark was intentionally walked and Matt Williams walked to load the bases with one out. Thompson hit a grounder to third baseman Dave Hollins, who threw to second baseman Wally Backman for the force. Thompson beat Backman's throw to first by more than a step.

NL Roundup

Astros 3, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Pete Incaviglia homered on reliever Bob Patterson's first pitch in the ninth inning and also had a run-scoring double, leading the Houston Astros over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The division-leading Pirates were held to two runs or fewer for the ninth time in 11 games. The Pirates, who had beaten Houston two straight after being swept in four by Cincinnati, have scored just 19 runs in the last 11 games.

Braves 2, Mets 1

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine won his seventh consecutive decision and became the National League's first 13-game winner as the Atlanta Braves edged the New York Mets.

Glavine (13-3), who has not lost since May 22, allowed nine hits, struck out five and walked one in seven innings to end Atlanta's losing streak at three games.

Cardinals 1, Padres 0

SAN DIEGO — Tom Pagnozzi homered with two outs in the ninth to lift St. Louis over the San Diego Padres for the Cardinals' first three-game series sweep of the season.

The Padres sustained their fifth straight loss and sixth in seven games. It was the Cardinals' fourth shutout in their last 12 games.

Dodgers 1, Expos 0, 11 innings
Expos 4, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES — Montreal ended a grueling three days of doubleheaders against Los Angeles with a victory, giving the Expos a split on the day and a draw in the marathon series.

The Dodgers won the first game Wednesday, 1-0 in 11 innings.

The trio of doubleheaders was played to make up games lost during the Los Angeles riots in April. The Dodgers swept the games on Monday and the Expos won both on Tuesday.

Hapless California loses again

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle hit a tiebreaking grand slam in the seventh inning and drove in five runs as the Cleveland Indians beat California 8-4, sending the Angels to their 10th consecutive loss.

Charles Nagy (11-4) gave up four runs and seven hits in seven innings before Derek Lilliquist and Eric Plunk finished. Indian pitchers retired 13 consecutive batters to end the game.

Loser Mark Langston (8-7) gave up five runs, two of them unearned, and six hits in 6 2-3 innings. The Angels have lost 14 of 16 games, and 26 of their last 31 road games.

The Angels led 4-3 when Langston walked Sandy Alomar with two outs in the seventh. Thomas Howard then hit an infield single, knocking out Langston in favor of Mark Eichhorn. Pinch-hitter Paul Sorrento singled in Alomar to tie the game, and Carlos Baerga walked to load the bases.

Reliever Joe Grahe came in and Belle lined his first pitch over the left field fence for his 18th homer of the season.

Jays 6, Mariners 0

TORONTO — Jimmy Key pitched a six-hitter and Joe Carter drove in four as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Seattle Mariners for their seventh consecutive victory.

Key (6-6) struck out two and walked one in his first shutout this season and second complete game. It was the seventh shutout of his career.

Carter hit his 19th home run of the season in the fifth inning, a three-run drive off Erik Hanson (6-11) that put Toronto ahead 5-0. Pat Borders had singled ahead of Roberto Alomar's two-out walk.

Hanson (6-11) allowed six runs and nine hits in 6 1-3 innings as the Mariners lost their fourth straight and 15th in 19 games.

Twins 3, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — John Smiley pitched three-hit ball for 7 2-3 innings as the Minnesota Twins beat the New York Yankees for their 10th victory in 12 games.

Smiley (9-4) walked Andy Stankiewicz leading off the first and then gave up Mel Hall's 12th homer. The lefthander, who has won six of his last seven decisions, was nearly untouchable the rest of the night.

The Twins took the lead with three runs in the second off Melido Perez (8-7). After Chili Davis and Pedro Munoz led off the inning with walks, Donnie Hill delivered an RBI single. The runners moved up on a throw home and right fielder Danny Tartabull's error and Munoz scored on Scott Leius' run-scoring grounder to shortstop.

Red Sox 5, Royals 4

BOSTON — Phil Plantier lined a game-winning single in the eighth inning after a fielding gaffe by Kansas City third baseman Gregg Jefferies, giving the Boston Red Sox a win over the Royals.

Tony Pena had hit a ground-rule double and was on second with two outs. Jody Reed then grounded to Jefferies. Pena stopped running to third about five feet before reaching Jefferies.

Tigers 6, Athletics 3

DETROIT — Dave Bergman's seventh-inning single broke a 3-3 tie and Scott Livingstone added a two-run single, lifting the Detroit Tigers over the Oakland Athletics.

Cecil Fielder, Mickey Tettleton and Bergman had consecutive singles leading off the seventh off Jim Corsi. After Mark Carreon's sacrifice bunt, Livingstone hit a slow grounder just past diving shortstop Walt Weiss as both runners came home.

Brewers 4, Rangers 3

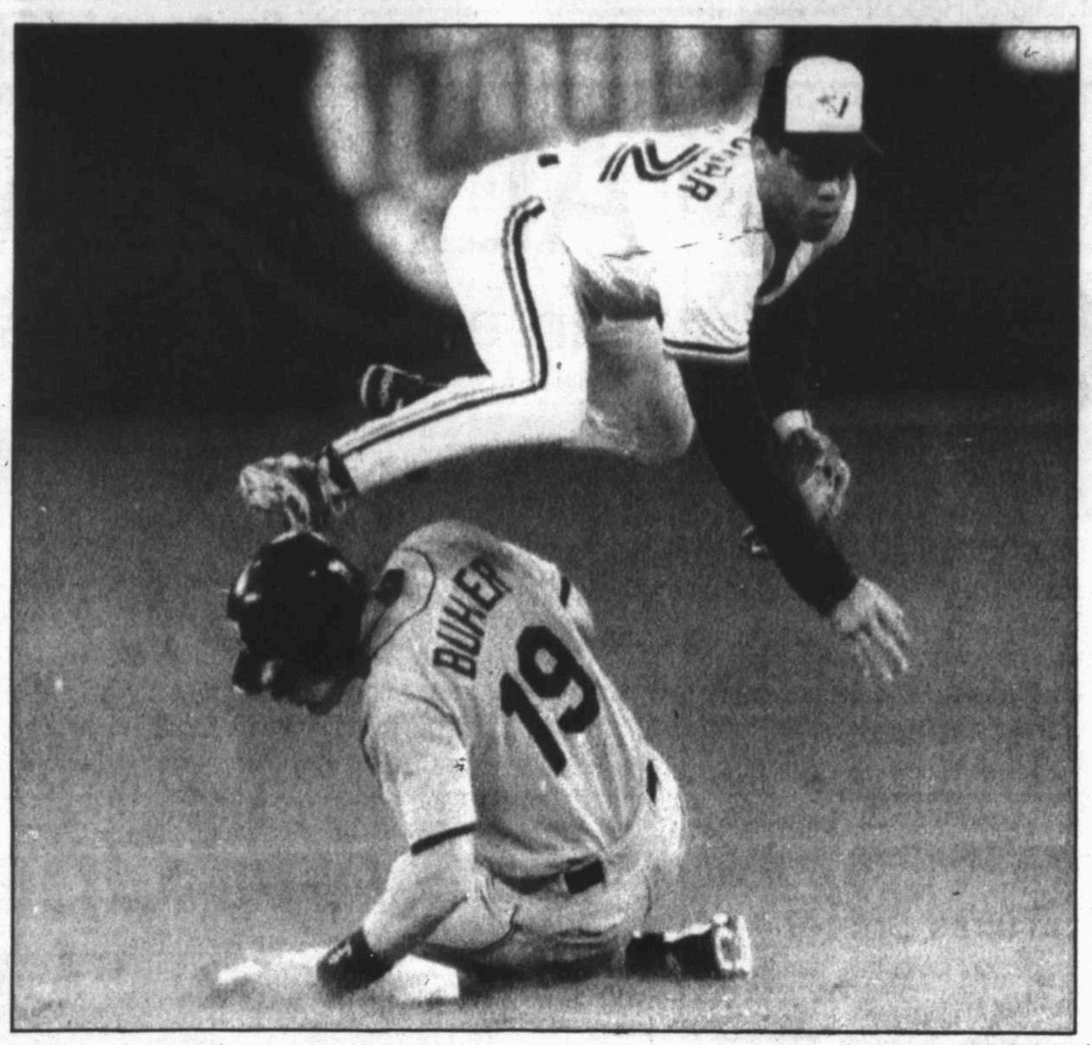

ARLINGTON — Hot-hitting Paul Molitor singled in the go-ahead run in the eighth inning as the Milwaukee Brewers rallied to beat the Texas Rangers.

The Brewers trailed 3-1 before scoring three unearned runs in the eighth.

After Jim Gantner started the rally with a one-out single, Texas shortstop Dickie Thon committed his second error of the night, booting a grounder by Scott Fletcher.

Orioles 5, White Sox 3

BALTIMORE — Joe Orsulak hit a tie-breaking homer in the eighth inning as the Baltimore Orioles foiled Charlie Hough's bid for his 200th major league victory by beating the Chicago White Sox.

Midland teams win

Three Midland teams are still in the winner's bracket in the Junior and Senior League district playoff tournaments being held at fields in Hogan Park after play Wednesday.

Senior League

The Senior League tournament opened play at Simon Field and Angels Stadium with four games as both Midland American and Midland National took opening round victories.

Midland National pounded Odessa Floyd Gwinn by a 9-1 score as Mark Holly took the victory. Raymond Martinez had a 4-for-4 night with the bat while Clay Johnston and Lance Watters each doubled in the win. Tony Alvarado took the loss for the Odessa squad. National will meet El Paso at 5:30 p.m. today at Simon Field.

Midland American outlasted Big Spring International 14-12 as Kevin Jordan and Dedrick Adams each had three hits and Kyle Carrasco added two more in the victory. Big Spring's Michael Martinez hit a homer in the game. American will test Lamesa at 5:30 p.m. at Angels Stadium today.

In other games Wednesday, the Big Spring Steers took an 11-7 win over Odessa East II and Odessa East I romped to a 24-3 victory over Odessa Salinas.

Junior League

Odessa Salinas and El Paso stayed alive in the loser's bracket with victories Wednesday at Redfern Field. Those were the only games played Wednesday.

Salinas routed Big Spring 8-2 behind the three-hit pitching of G. Berzosa while El Paso took a 9-1 win over Odessa Floyd Gwinn as J. Green tossed a two-hitter.

On Tuesday, Midland National sent Midland American to the loser's bracket with a nip-and-tuck 10-9 victory.

American will face El Paso in a survival battle at 8 p.m. today at Redfern Field. National will play Odessa East II at 8 p.m. Friday at Redfern Field. Big Spring International and West Odessa are still in the winner's bracket also.

Dortch signs with Nova University

Former Midland Lee basketballer Darren Dortch has signed a basketball scholarship agreement with Nova University of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dortch, 6-5 and 215 pounds, played with Cisco Junior College last year, averaging 14 points per game and seven rebounds. He also hit 62 three-pointers.

Nova University is a Division II school that plays in the Florida Sun Conference. Dortch will be a junior.

Dortch graduated from Lee in 1989.

Avoid the Panic of 65
Will you be ready to retire?
Chances are, you'll be more than ready. But will you be financially ready?
Current estimates indicate you'll need 60 to 80% of your annual income at retirement for each year you're retired. Sounds like a lot of money, doesn't it? But Fortis Financial Group can offer you a variety of investment opportunities to help you work toward a secure retirement.
No matter how many years you have to retirement – whether it's 5 or 40 – your financial representative can show you how Fortis retirement plans, mutual funds, variable annuities and variable universal life insurance can help you avoid the panic at age 65.
For more information on how Fortis can help you plan for a retirement you can look forward to, call today:

A&M's leading scorer killed

DALLAS (AP) — Vernon Smith, the all-time leading scorer and rebounder in Texas A&M basketball history, was fatally shot by an angry dice player who apparently mistook him for someone he'd fought with earlier, police said Wednesday.

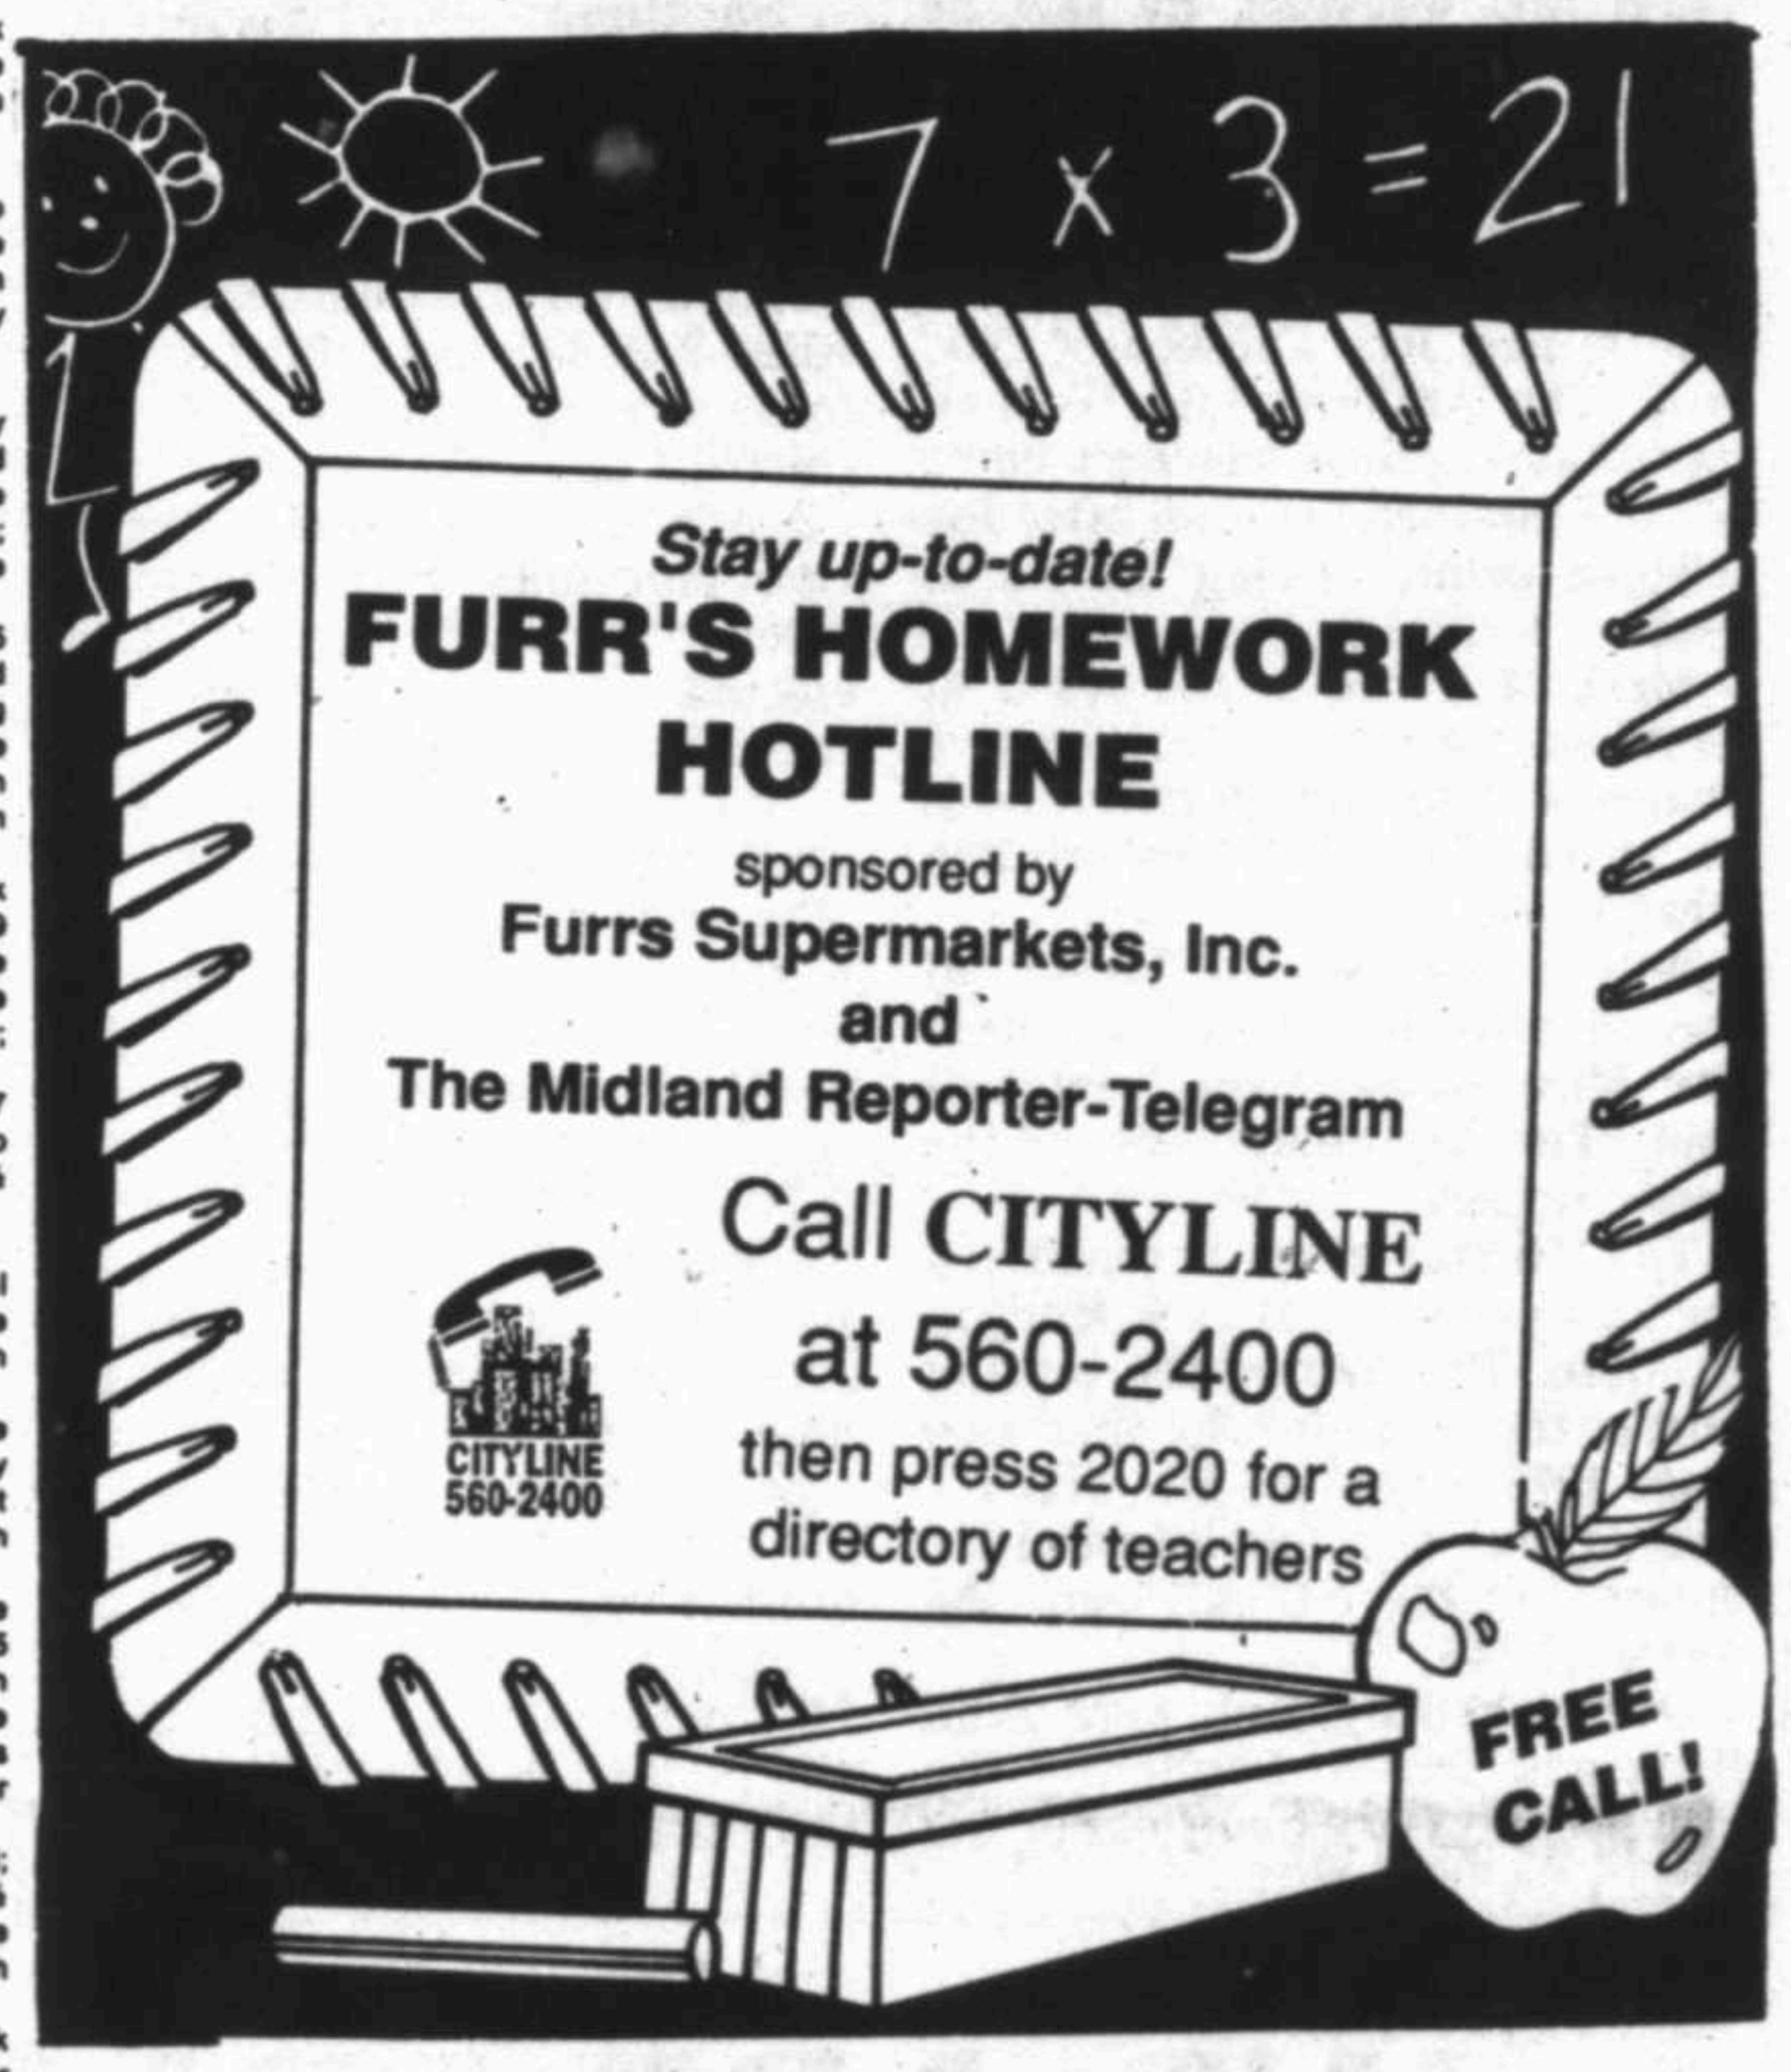

Smith, 33, was shot outside some apartments in the Oak Cliff section of the city Tuesday. Police charged Steven James Thomas, 21, of Dallas, with capital murder.

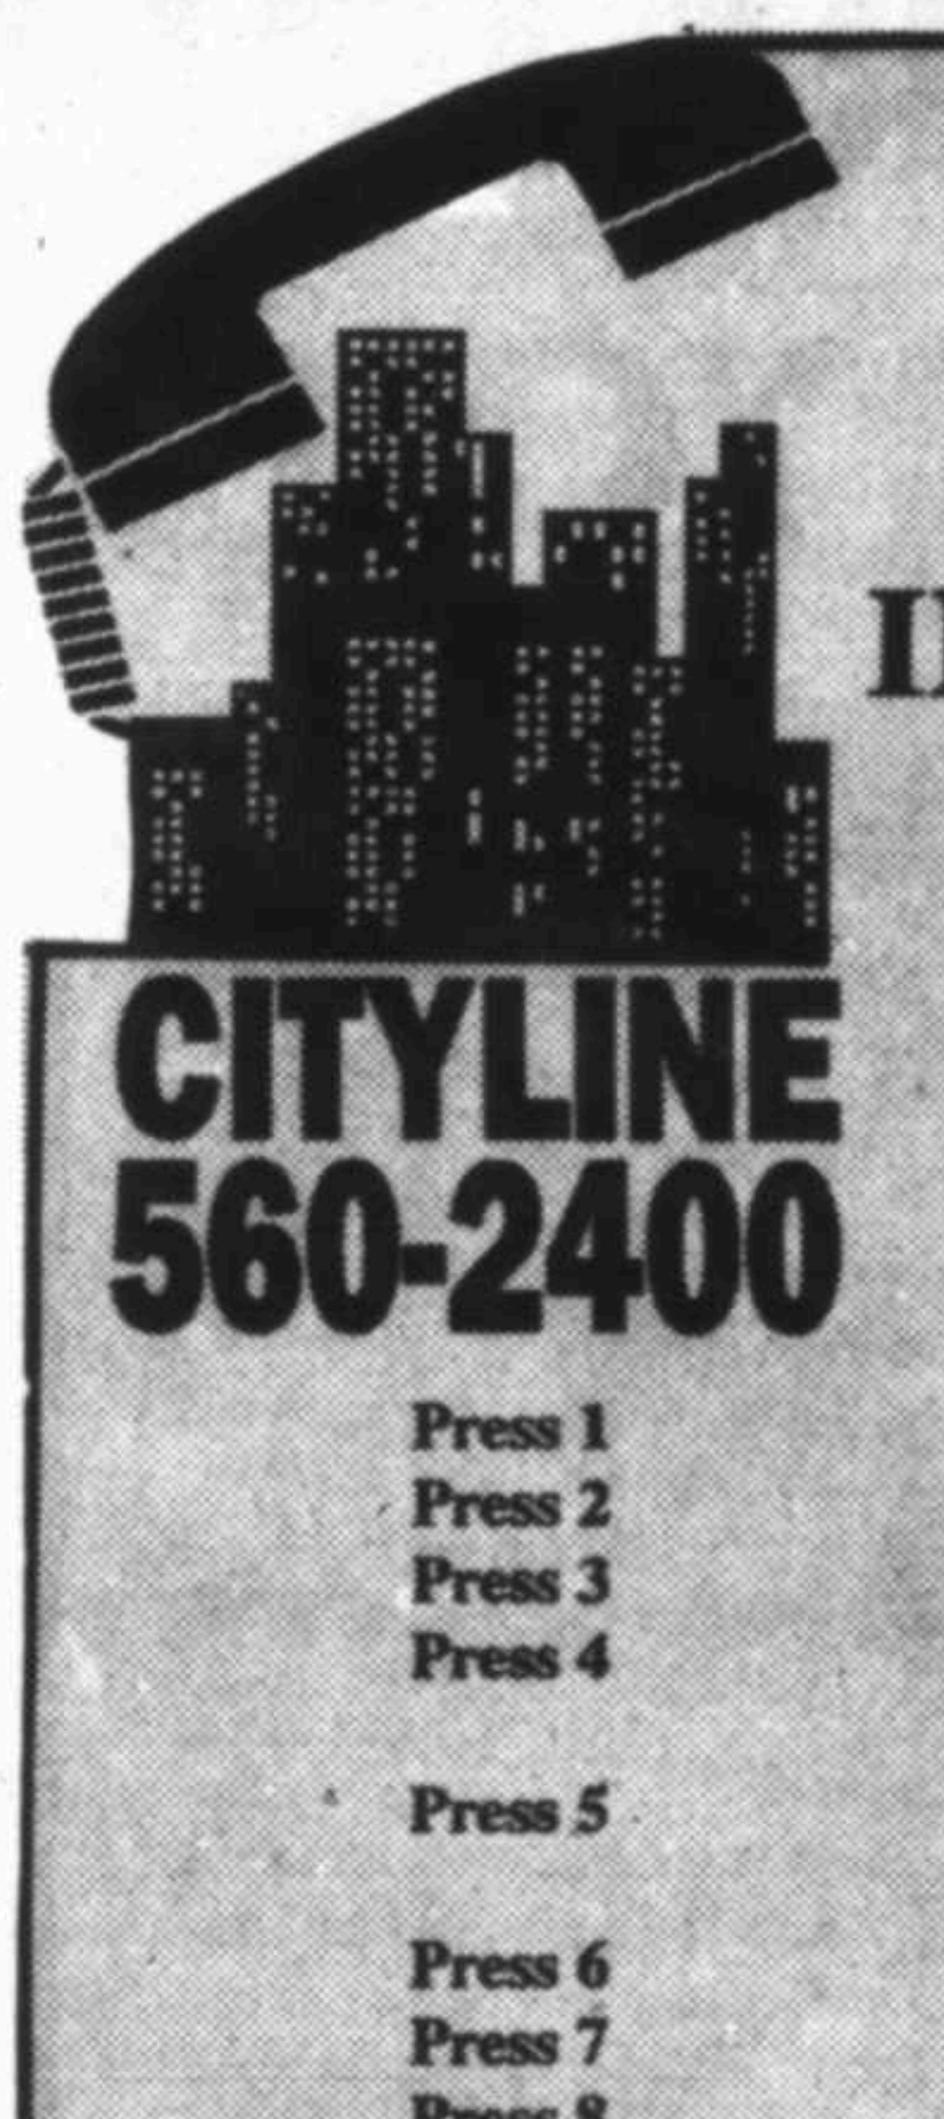

Detectives said that moments before the shooting, the gunman argued with a dice game opponent, left the game and came upon Smith sitting nearby in his car.

Schramm allegedly compared players to cattle

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, testified Wednesday that one of the members of the owners' negotiating team compared pro football players to cattle on a ranch during 1987 contract talks.

Upshaw, testifying for the first time in the month-old trial, said then-Dallas Cowboys president Tex Schramm told him there would not be free agency in the NFL even if the players remained on teams for 30 years.

"He said the players are like cattle and the owners are ranchers and the owners can always get more cattle," Upshaw recalled.

Judge David Doty ordered that Upshaw's comment be stricken from the record after NFL lawyers protested. Doty said the remark was potentially inflammatory to the jury.

NFL lawyers then requested a mistrial, which the judge denied. It was the third mistrial request by the league since the proceedings started.

Eight players are suing the NFL on antitrust grounds after the collapse of contract negotiations in 1987. A players' strike that year left the league without a collective bargaining agreement and eventually forced the NFLPA to abandon its collective bargaining in favor of a court-oriented strategy.

Upshaw said he favored total free agency after a player's contract expired. NFL lawyer Frank Rothman said that was a change from 1981 testimony, when Upshaw said the baseball free agency system was not a goal for football players.

"I was wrong in 1981," Upshaw replied.

Rothman seemed exasperated by that answer and others by the NFLPA head.

"Is that the best answer you can give me?" he asked Upshaw. "I don't want to keep beating you up on that."

Upshaw, a Hall of Fame guard, detailed his NFL career, including his first-year contract of $17,000 with the Oakland Raiders in 1967. He received a $30,000 signing bonus — "what I thought was a tremendous amount of money" — and played for $19,000 and $21,000 in 1968 and 1969.

He said his salary suffered because of the merger of the NFL and the AFL before he was drafted and there was no competition for his services.

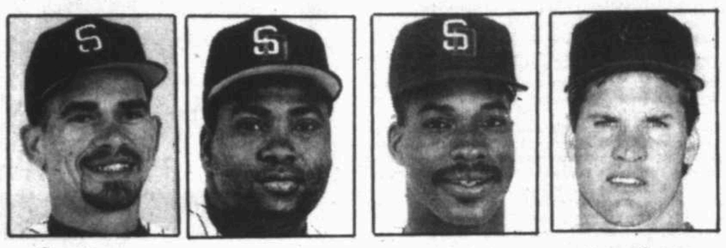

Similarly, when the USFL folded in 1985, Upshaw said players were hurt.

"When the USFL went out of business, it was a sad day for the NFL players, because the NFL was a monopoly again and salaries went down," Upshaw said.

Rothman hammered at Upshaw most of the afternoon, stressing what the lawyer said were contradictions from earlier testimony.

ALL-STARS: Sandberg, Ripken picked by widest voting margins

(From 1C)

Santiago Gwynn McGriff Sandberg

Completing the NL lineup are Santiago, elected at catcher for the fourth consecutive season, and Gwynn, elected in the outfield for the fifth time. Santiago is on the disabled list and although it was unclear whether he would be activated this weekend, he said he wanted to play in the All-Star game.

The American League lineup includes outfielders Kirby Puckett of Minnesota, Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle and Jose Canseco of Oakland. The Athletics said Wednesday that Canseco wouldn't come off the disabled list until after the All-Star game, forcing the AL to replace him.

Mark McGwire of the A's is at first base for the fifth consecutive year and Wade Boggs of Boston is at third base for the eighth straight season.

"It's always good to be one of the chosen few and to represent the Minnesota Twins," Puckett said. "I'm very appreciative of the fans' support."

The All-Star game is scheduled for Tuesday night at Jack Murphy Stadium. The Padres are playing host to the game for the first time since 1978, when the NL won 7-3. The AL has won four consecutive games, but the NL still leads the series 37-24-1.

Overlooked by fans were John Kruk and Darren Daulton of the Phillies and Gary Sheffield of the Padres. Kruk leads the NL with a .354 average, while Sheffield was second to McGriff with 17 homers. Daulton has a league-leading 58 RBIs. Detroit's Cecil Fielder, who leads the AL with 70 RBIs, was third in the voting at first base.

Smith broke a tie for consecutive elections with Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench and Carter, elected from both the Expos and the New York Mets.

"It's consistency to my craft and what I bring to it," Smith said. "I've tried to be as consistent as I possibly can, and I think that I've done that. ... When you're noted mostly as a defensive player as I am, it's really special."

The last time the host team had three or more elected starters was 1982, when Carter, Tim Raines and Andre Dawson started at Olympic Stadium in Montreal.

Sandy Alomar was elected for the third straight season, while his brother was picked for the second straight year. Canseco was elected for the fourth time, while Griffey and Puckett each were elected for the third time.

Canseco overtook Dave Winfield of the Toronto Blue Jays for the third AL outfield spot, winning 1,011,585 to 926,113. The third outfield spot in the NL also generated a close race, with Van Slyke beating former teammate Bobby Bonilla, now with the New York Mets, by 1,009,843 to 935,755.

Ripken and Sandberg won by the largest margin, in addition to receiving the highest vote totals. Ripken beat second-place Manuel Lee of Toronto by 2,312,212, while Sandberg beat second-place Delino DeShields of Montreal by 1,955,005.

"I think a lot had to with last year and the fact that I performed well in the All-Star game," said Ripken, last year's All-Star MVP. "You get a lot of attention nationally when you perform well in that one game. It seems like a lot more people paid attention to me after that."

Roberto Alomar earned a $50,000 bonus for his election, while Bonds, Griffey Jr., Gwynn, McGriff, McGwire, Pendleton and Sandberg earned $25,000 each.

Angola boss predicts a sizable loss

Associated Press

FLINT, Mich. — The coach says they'll lose by 30 points and the point guard says 50.

But that hasn't dented the Angolan national basketball team's enthusiasm about playing the United States at the Barcelona Olympics.

Angola qualified for the Olympics by winning the African zone championship in January. Team USA qualified by beating six opponents by an average of 51.5 points at the Tournament of the Americas.

There's not much argument that the Americans, led by Magic Johnson and Michael Jordan, are the best basketball team ever assembled. And Angola was the unlucky team that drew the U.S. in the Olympic opener on July 26.

The Angolan team is in Flint for exhibition games against a local Amateur Athletic Union team Wednesday night and Thursday night.

"When we won the championships of Africa we said we wanted to play the USA because they're the most powerful team in the world," coach Vitorino Cunha said. "We know we'll lose by 30 or 40 points, no problem."

Players said they were proud to represent their continent.

Nation in brief

■ Questions follow Swiss nanny acquittal

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Hours after a Swiss au pair was acquitted of killing the baby in her care, participants at her trial were raising questions about the mysteries of the case.

The judge said he was not convinced that Olivia Riner, 20, was innocent. Jurors criticized the police. The defense lawyer berated the district attorney. And the parents of the infant who was killed in a fire last Dec. 2 said their tragedy had been swept aside while, they said, their child's killer was exonerated.

Judge Donald N. Silverman of Westchester County Court said in an interview Wednesday that even if the jury had convicted Miss Riner, he would probably have set the conviction aside as not supported by the evidence.

Miss Riner late Tuesday night was acquitted of three different counts of murder in the second degree and one count of arson in the death of Kristie Fischer at the Fischers' home in Thornwood.

■ Fed seeks $170 million from BCCI banker

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board said Wednesday it is seeking a $170 million civil penalty from a director of the outlaw Bank of Credit and Commerce International for allegedly secretly acquiring control of First American Bankshares Inc.

The agency charges that Saudi Sheik Khalid bin Mahfouz, who was a BCCI director and who until recently controlled Saudi Arabia's largest bank, violated federal banking law in 1986 by acquiring from BCCI 28.7 percent of the shares of Credit and Commerce American Holdings.

That was the Netherland Antilles-based parent company of First American, the Washington area's largest bank, where former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford was once chairman.

Federal Reserve spokesman Joseph Coyne said the $170 million sought from the 44-year-old sheik is the largest penalty ever levied against an individual by the agency, although it sought $200 million from BCCI itself.

■ Police discover 10th body in Detroit

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. — A woman's body was found Wednesday in an area where police and FBI agents have said a serial killer may be operating, an official said.

Nine black woman's bodies previously have been found in or near this city, a Detroit enclave. Authorities haven't confirmed that the killings are linked, though investigators have said all the women had been strangled, their bodies dumped in abandoned buildings.

A young man searching for scrap metal found another body Wednesday in an abandoned apartment building, WDIV-TV said.

■ Poll: Three candidates are in dead heat

WASHINGTON — The three major candidates for president are in a statistical dead heat, a new NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll showed Wednesday.

The poll shows undeclared candidate Ross Perot with 33 percent of the vote, President Bush with 31 percent and likely Democratic nominee Bill Clinton with 28 percent. The poll also found that more than 60 percent of the voters questioned have reservations about their choice.

The poll was conducted July 5-7 among 1,100 registered voters. There is a 3 percent margin of error.

A recent ABC News-Washington Post poll also showed the three candidates in a statistical dead heat.

■ Police again swarm neighborhood streets

NEW YORK — Police continued beefed-up patrols Wednesday in northern Manhattan after a third night of unrest stemming from the police killing of a resident.

There were 2,000 police on the streets of Washington Heights on Tuesday night and "we're not going to scale back," Deputy Police Commissioner Suzanne Trazoff said.

Since the police shooting of Jose Garcia on Friday night, police had made 125 arrests in Washington Heights. Fifty-three officers and 16 civilians were injured, 14 buildings and 121 vehicles were set afire, and 11 police cars were damaged, Trazoff said.

The worst unrest was on Monday night, with violence in a 70-block area. One man died. Scattered violence broke out again Tuesday, resulting in 39 arrests, 25 fires and 12 police officers injured, police said.

House sends higher education bill to Bush

■ Legislation would help middle-class pay for college.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Trumpeting its allegiance to middle-class Americans, the House on Wednesday passed and sent to President Bush legislation to help them get more college loans.

The higher education bill, which Bush supports, also promised more college help for the poor. But it offered them much larger direct grants than the government has the money to deliver.

Most House members devoted their speechmaking to congratulating one another as well as the administration for agreeing to expand several student loan programs to provide "tremendous opportunities for middle-class families," as Rep. Tom Coleman, R-Mo., put it.

But almost no one directly addressed the disparity between the increases Congress authorized in Pell grants, the principal federal program of student aid to the poor, and the lack of federal money to pay for them. These direct grants, unlike the loans, count against the spending limits set by the 1990 budget act.

The bill, a product of a House-Senate conference, was passed 419 to 7. It would change two major programs of federally guaranteed loans by lifting limits on how much most parents can borrow and by letting all students, regardless of income, borrow through the other loan program. It would also experiment with having the government bypass banks and lend money directly to students.

But when Rep. William D. Ford, a Michigan Democrat who is chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, said the "maxiumum Pell grant award will be increased from $2,400 to $3,700 for the 1993-94 school year," he was being optimistic about the principal federal program of aid to students from poor families.

The bill would indeed raise the maximum theoretical amount of a Pell Grant, to $3,700 by that school year, from the current theoretical maximum of $3,100.

But the real top grant for the academic year that beings this summer would be cut from $2,400 to $2,300 under separate legislation approved last week by a House Appropriations subcommittee. The real money that goes to students comes under that committee's jurisdiction, and its subcommittee voted for the cut behind closed doors as it tried to stay within the spending limits set by the 1990 budget act.

Court expands pesticide ban to cover many in food

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Seeking to resolve one of the most difficult scientific and legal conflicts involving the nation's food supply, a federal appeals court ruled Wednesday that the Environmental Protection Agency must remove from the market any pesticides that both have the potential to cause cancer and leave residues in processed foods.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit, in San Francisco, ruled that such pesticides were covered by a 34-year-old provision of the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act that prohibits even trace amounts of any potentially carcinogenic additive in juices, breads, jellies, flour or thousands of other processed foods.

"Congress intended to ban all carcinogenic food additives, regardless of amount or significance of risk," Judge Mary Schroeder said in the decision. "The language is clear and mandatory."

The EPA, the defendant in the case, said it was considering an appeal. It had maintained that the 1958 provision, the Delaney Clause, did not apply to pesticide residues that concentrate in processed foods.

Instead, the EPA regulated pesticides under a separate law that allows small amounts of cancer-causing chemicals in foods if the chemicals' benefits to farmers and consumers outweighed the risk to health and the environment. It sought to minimize potential risk by setting strict limits on residues.

The National Agricultural Chemicals Association, the Washington-based trade group for the $5.7 billion-a-year pesticide industry, said its compounds were among the most thoroughly tested products on the market and were safe for consumers.

Grand Canyon fugitive says he's no Rambo, denies killing

PHOENIX (AP) — Danny Ray Horning, the convict who thumbed his nose at the law on a much-documented 7½-week chase through the Arizona wilderness, said Wednesday he's no Rambo — the police are just dumb.

"I'm just a nice guy," the convicted robber and accused dismemberment-killer said by telephone from the state prison at Florence.

Horning is back at the prison — this time in the highest-security unit. He was captured Sunday in a chase that started May 12 at the desert prison 50 miles southeast of Phoenix and went north to the Grand Canyon 200 miles away.

He dodged helicopters with night-vision equipment. He lost trackers and bloodhounds. And he slipped through two roadblocks sitting in the back seat of a hijacked car.

The "Rambo" tag came from the police and the media, Horning said.

"I think anybody that knows the woods at all could have done the same thing," he said. "I just went down obstacle courses that they're too lazy to go through and the dogs can't go through. ... Down cliffs, up cliffs, through nice little springs, through thick brush."

Horning had been serving four life terms for a bank robbery last year in Winslow when he walked out of state prison in Florence, disguised in a stolen white lab coat and carrying a forged prison identification badge.

On Wednesday, state prisons chief Sam Lewis fired the guard who let Horning out the gate.

Grand jury indicts 'hackers'

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — A federal grand jury Wednesday indicted five New York computer "hackers" on charges of breaking into some of the most sensitive computers used by telephone companies and major credit reporting services and disrupting or stealing their data.

Calling themselves "Masters of Disaster," or "MOD" for short, the young men are accused of engaging in a widespread pattern of computer crime. The information reportedly stolen from around the country included 176 confidential reports on consumers' credit ratings that were then sold to private investigators.

Federal investigators said that for more than two years the five men, from the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens, used their personal computers and their knowledge of telecommunications to intercept computer passwords and other access codes being transmitted over a widely used computer network called Tymnet and the private network of the Bank of America, one of the nation's largest banks.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Judge approves Rexene restructuring

Action clears way for Dallas-based plastics maker to leave Chapter 11

Associated Press

DALLAS — A U.S. bankruptcy judge approved Rexene Corp.'s reorganization and the plastics maker said Wednesday it expected to leave Chapter 11 later this summer.

Judge Helen Balick formalized the tentative approval she gave Tuesday to creditors' vote on the restructuring. Rexene entered Chapter 11 last October after missing payment on unsecured debt.

The company has not set a precise time to emerge from bankruptcy since it must first settle two claims, one involving a 1987 stock bonus plan that is the subject of a class action suit before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton.

The judge is expected to make a ruling on the lawsuit next Monday. The second claim, brought by dissident shareholders, will be reviewed by Balick July 18.

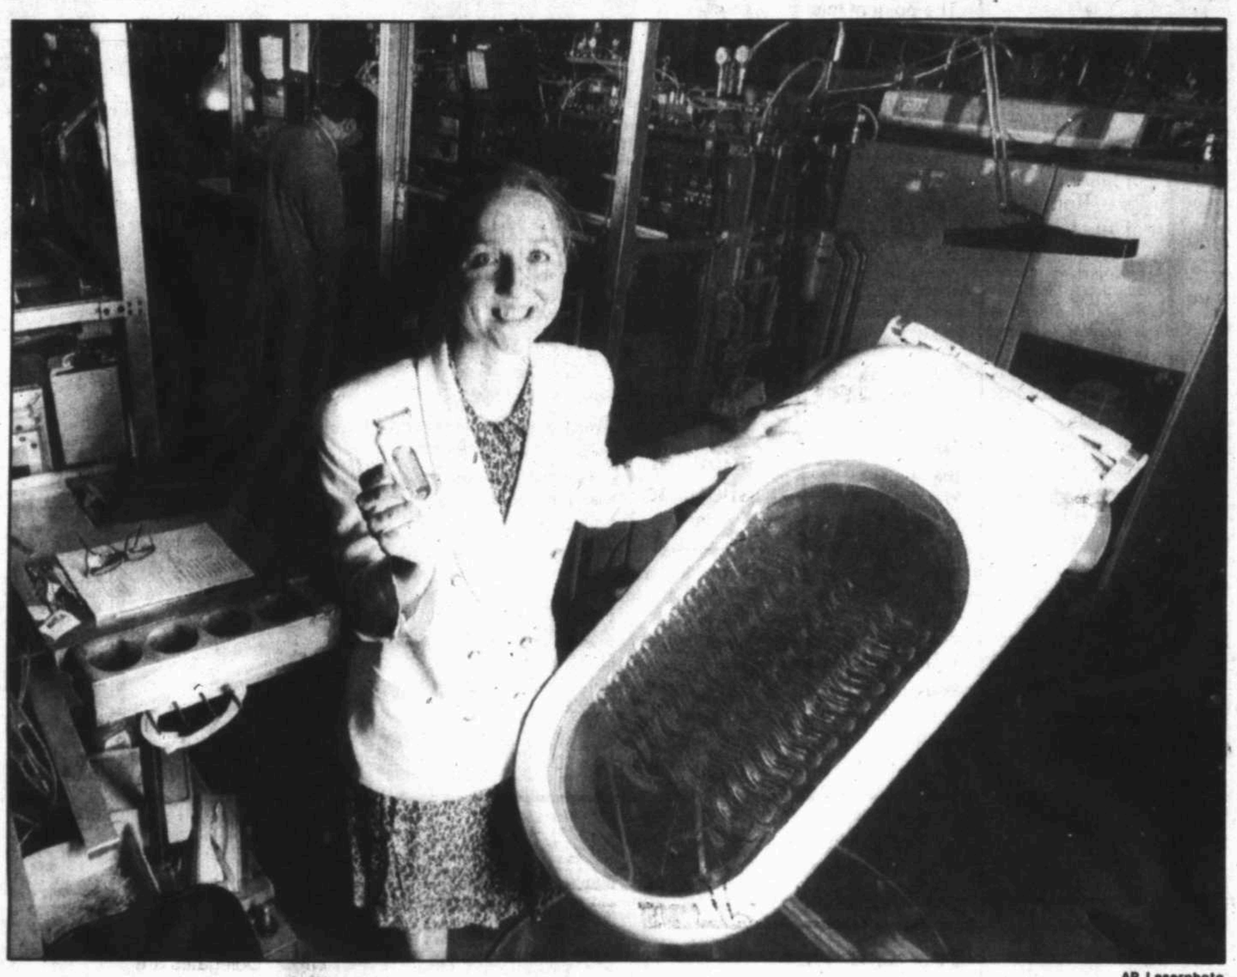

If the two claims are not "satisfactorily resolved," Rexene said it will ask Balick to give them a low priority, a move that could result in current stockholders losing all of their stake in the reorganized company.

The company said it had received a commitment from Transamerica Business Credit Corp. for $35 million in working capital once it emerges from bankruptcy.

Rexene originally filed a "prepackaged" debt restructuring plan, one already approved by most creditors. But that was modified in April to allow the company to reverse $6.8 million in interest it had accrued after entering Chapter 11.

The modification forced Rexene to seek a new vote of creditors. Documents filed with Balick Tuesday showed that the class of holders of old Rexene stock showed the most objection to the new plan. There were 219 stockholders who supported it and 76 who did not. Those who did, however, owned 3.5 million shares compared to 252,147 held by those opposed.

Dallas-based Rexene makes thermoplastic resins, film and other petrochemical-based products used in items ranging from plastic milk cartons to disposable diapers. It operates a large plant in Odessa.

Consumers remain wary, reduce debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers reduced their debt sharply in May, the government said Wednesday in a report showing Americans remain cautious about spending. It was the fourth monthly decline in a row.

Outstanding consumer debt fell at a 4 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate to $721.4 billion after an even steeper 5.9 percent drop in April, the Federal Reserve said. It was the 10th decline in 13 months.

The report revised the April drop from the 6.3 percent estimated earlier, but that nevertheless was the worst in 10 years.

Although the process of reducing debt accumulated during the go-go years of the 1980s is cramping consumers' ability to boost the economic recovery with increased spending, analysts say the reduction is necessary for the economy's long-term health.

Economist David M. Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer in New York, told the House Banking subcommittee on monetary policy Wednesday that American consumers and businesses are only half to two-thirds of the way through the process of reducing their debt burden.

New air-fare plan baffles travelers

FORT WORTH (NYT) — One of American Airline's biggest goals when it introduced its controversial Value Plan on April 9 was to bring simplicity back to what had become a very complicated air fare system.

But the carrier's announcement Monday — that it would use three different formulas to raise ticket prices on three different groups of routes — left travel agents, travelers and even some airline competitors scratching their heads.

A day later, many travel professionals were still trying to figure out exactly what American's announcement would mean for ticket prices on specific routes.

The travel experts also were wondering whether Fort Worth-based American will be forced to drop part or all of its plan to increase fares as some competing carriers refuse to go along.

Chris Miller, an analyst at US Travel, one of the nation's largest travel agency chains, said: "Fare simplification may have been the objective, but fare chaos appears to be the result."

Harken Energy unveils Venezuela venture

FORT WORTH (NYT) — Harken Energy Corp. of Grand Prairie said Wednesday that it has entered into an agreement with a large private Venezuelan conglomerate to pursue opportunities in the oil industry in Venezuela.

A wholly owned Harken subsidiary, Harken International Ltd., is to jointly operate a business venture with Organizacion de Cisneros, a 20,000-employee company known as ODC.

Harken said it and ODC plan to look at a variety of business opportunities, including oilfield services and exploration and production projects.

Harken Chairman Mikel Faulkner said the agreement "represents a significant step forward in our efforts to expand Harken's presence in the international oil and gas industry."

Harken is looking forward to "a long-time partnership with ODC," Faulkner said.

ODC's main offices are in Caracas, Venezuela and Coral Gables, Fla., with branch offices in New York, Tokyo and Madrid.

Harken said ODC has operations in North America, Latin America, Europe and the Far East. The operations involve numerous industries, including mass communications, consumer product manufacturing and distribution, computers and telecommunications, aluminum production, mining, oil and petrochemicals, real estate and investment banking.

ODC also is affiliated with Pepsi Cola of Venezuela, Harken said.

Harken, which has attracted substantial media attention with a drilling project in the Persian Gulf nation of Bahrain, increasingly is looking at foreign prospects because "that's where we feel most of the opportunities are," said company spokesman Dale Brooks.

Many American oil companies, large and small, are eyeing exploration prospects overseas because of the chance to make larger oil and gas discoveries than in the heavily drilled United States.

Harken, a 70-employee company, might be able to undertake projects in Venezuela

The rigs presently are idle because of the deep decline in U.S. drilling activity, he said.

Harken announced earlier this year that it had drilled a dry hole in Bahrain. The company is "still evaluating" a second well drilled there and may announce results later this month, Brooks said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Only withdrawals from IRA subject to taxes

By Bill Doyle

Q: Before the regulations were changed by the Tax Reform Act of 1986, I put $2,000 a year into stocks through a self-directed individual retirement account at a brokerage firm. My investment experiences then covered just about everything that could happen.

Doyle

One stock doubled; another tripled. I sold them and bought other stocks in my IRA. Two companies in which I had stock went bankrupt. A third was taken over and I received warrants. One time I collected a $1,000 dividend from a preferred stock that had been in arrears and finally paid off. Parts of dividends from some utility stocks were returns of capital. I had stock splits and reverse splits. I sold some stocks at profits; some at losses. Everything is still in the IRA, which now is worth $16,500.

I don't think I could ever figure out the tax consequences of all the IRA transactions and it would be too expensive to retain a tax expert. When I sell out the IRA, should I just figure my taxable portion to be $16,500 — or whatever the IRA's value is then?

A: Absolutely. You have no choice. That is the way you are required to do it.

From 1982 through 1986, every working person was allowed to contribute $2,000 annually to an IRA and not pay federal income tax on that money. But the tax on that money was deferred — not forgiven. When you make withdrawals from an IRA all the money you take out is fully taxable.

All those "investment experiences" in your IRA don't change the tax situation. You might have ended with a good deal more than $16,500 — or a great deal less — in your IRA. No matter the results, everything you withdraw will be subject to federal income tax.

The '86 tax law did change things by making some IRA contributions tax deductible and some nondeductible. IRA participants whose entire contributions have been deductible have fully taxable withdrawals. But IRA participants who made both deductible and nondeductible contributions apportion their withdrawals to make sure they pay income tax only on their deductible withdrawals.

Q: My husband and I are both age 62. We have numerous IRAs in certificates of deposit at various banks, because we obtained them at whatever bank was paying the highest interest rate each year. We keep absolute track of which CDs were obtained with tax-deductible or nondeductible IRA contributions. As each CD reaches its maturity date, we roll it over into a new CD at the same bank.

So that we won't have so many records to keep, is there any way we can combine the IRAs into just a few — without being penalized by the banks for early withdrawal?

A: You can't do it all in one transaction. But it can be accomplished, so that you end up with a number of CDs in one IRA — yours — and your husband ends up with multiple CDs in his IRA.

Pick a bank at which you want to have your IRA and your husband wants to have his. Then, every time an IRA CD at a different bank matures, move that money to your chosen bank.

The money can be moved either by a trustee-to-trustee transfer or by a rollover. In a trustee-to-trustee transfer, you instruct your chosen bank to get the money from the other bank and put it in a CD at the chosen bank. You never touch the money. In a rollover, you withdraw the money from the old bank and, within 60 days, put it in an IRA CD at your chosen bank.

Either way, because you move the money on each CD's maturity date, there should be no early-withdrawal penalty laid on by the banks involved. If a bank from which you make an IRA withdrawal on a CD maturity date tries to sock you with a penalty, scream to high heavens.

Prices hold

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished mixed Wednesday, influenced largely by the results of a weekly industry supply report that showed tighter domestic inventories of crude but a persistent glut of gasoline.

The August-delivery price of West Texas Intermediate settled at $21.41 a barrel, up 1 cent from Monday, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Market strategists said the only outside news affecting the market was the American Petroleum Institute's weekly supply summary, released after the close of trading Tuesday.

The API report showed that the supply of domestic crude fell 3.64 million barrels to 327.16 million for the week ending last Friday, contrary to expectations that the stockpile would increase.

This helped strengthen crude prices, which had dropped sharply on Tuesday over fear of excessive supplies and lower-than-expected demand.

Lower-grade sour crude for August delivery fell 1 cent a barrel to settle at $19.56. Natural gas for August delivery settled at $1.630 per 1,000 cubic feet, up from $1.595 on Tuesday.

Dunlap purchase

FORT WORTH — The Dunlap Co. of Fort Worth said Wednesday it has completed the purchase of a six-store retailer based in Maine.

A Dunlap executive said the company plans to keep all six stores in the Porteous, Mitchell & Braun Co. chain, retain president Aretas Stearns and 80-90 percent of the retailer's 600 employees.

Dunlap also will honor Porteous' prior committment to open a seventh store in Maine next year, said Dunlap executive vice president Tom Hoskins.

The Fort Worth company, which is privately owned, did not disclose financial information on the deal. Stearns declined to return telephone calls Wednesday, but confirmed in May that the family-owned Portland, Maine, retailer was for sale and was negotiating with Dunlap.

Dunlap said then that the deal was subject to completion of new leases for some of the stores.

Anatole tower

DALLAS — Developer Trammell Crow and his family have returned a 27-story tower of the Loews Anatole hotel to its lender because of difficulties in restructuring a $75 million mortgage.

Negotiations continue between the family with another lender to retain the tower portion of the hotel complex, The Dallas Morning News reported in Wednesday editions.

Democrats head for their kinda town

NEW YORK (AP) — With their sax-blowing nominee, penchant for discord and avowed love of diversity, Democrats should feel right at home here.

New York, in fact, is so different from the rest of the nation that after a few days even the Democrats might well ask: What kinda town is this convention city, anyway?

First, it's a tough town. Six in 10 residents say they would move if they could. Dan Quayle calls the city a disaster, and many locals agree — half of those polled recently rated the quality of life as "hellish." Ten percent checked off "heavenly."

New York is a rich town, home of Harry Helmsley, Henry Kravis and assorted Rockefellers, not to mention the leveraged buyout, the questionable write-off and the insider trade.

It's also a poor town, with a million residents — one in seven — on welfare. A quarter of the city's babies are born to teen-agers, few of them married.

On an average night, the city must put up about 1,000 homeless families in hotels. One Queens motel charges the city $150 a room and doesn't let the homeless guests use the front door.

New York is a crowded town, with almost 50 percent more people per square mile than the nation's next densest city, San Francisco.

It is also a renter's town — most people don't own their own homes, and hundreds of thousands live in apartments protected by a Byzantine system of rent control.

New York is not a driver's town — 60 percent of its residents don't even have a license. New Yorkers take the subway. Or walk.

New York is an immigrants' town — about half the valedictorians at the city's 96 high schools this year were born abroad. It is also a Nouvelle Society town, home of Ladies Who Lunch such as Nan Kempner, a sleek matron widely believed to have invented the air kiss.

New York is a trendy town. Kosher Chinese is passe. Try "Moshe Ole," an Israeli kosher Mexican restaurant on Coney Island Avenue at Avenue J.

Closed for now is "Keep Refrigerated," where management created a unique atmosphere and saved on the heating bill by leaving temperatures around freezing. City inspectors moved in after a barbecue that included live chickens and an open fire on the third floor.

New York is a dirty town. The chief form of pollution is Chinese restaurant take-out menus, one of which is deposited several times a week under every apartment door in Manhattan and certain sections of Brooklyn. For good measure, extras are dumped in the lobby.

New York is a big-hearted town. When a City College graduate student from Nanjing was hit by a car and killed while working as a deliveryman, strangers donated $3,000 to his family.

And New York is a performers' town. Bernie O'Boyle has painted murals in more than 60 Irish bars, although he reports getting paid by somewhat fewer. Mike Wilson, a Coney Island sideshow performer, made the difficult transition from Tattooed Man to Human Blockhead, a role which requires him to drive nails up his nose and pull them out.

When students of Central Park East and River East schools performed their annual violin concert in East Harlem this spring, violin virtuoso Isaac Stern was in the audience. Last year, Itzhak Perlman was on hand.

New York nominee: Can he make it anywhere?

NEW YORK (AP) — Excuse the Democrats if they don't arrive at Madison Square Garden singing "New York, New York." Four times their candidate has made it here; only once did he make it anywhere else.

Jimmy Carter landed in the White House on his first try but not on his second. And the Democrats' two other Big Apple nominees — Horatio Seymour and John W. Davis — are generally remembered only by political junkies and Jeopardy enthusiasts.

Now comes Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, set to claim the Democratic nomination at the party's July 13-16 national convention. Regardless of Clinton's electability, New York never fails to deliver a share of political drama.

Past conventions here included the dedication of Tammany Hall, the longest balloting ever, and Carter's twin victories — the first as an relative unknown, the second after a showdown with Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy.

One bit of history already is guaranteed this time. Keynote speaker Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey will be attending a convention that unfolds beneath his retired jersey — No. 24 from Bradley's days as a forward for the New York Knicks. That will be a first in convention lore.

The first Democratic visit to New York came in 1868. Incumbent President Andrew Johnson — the narrow survivor of an impeachment effort — arrived clinging to a slim hope he would claim the nomination.

"Andrew Johnson Thrown Overboard Like Blind Puppy" announced a front-page headline in The Sun after former New York Gov. Seymour and Gen. Francis P. Blair of Missouri were nominated on the 22nd ballot. Cost of the paper: 2 cents.

A sidelight that year was the dedication of Tammany Hall as a center for William Marcy "Boss" Tweed's local Democratic Party.

Tweed was convicted in 1873 of 204 counts in an indictment that accused him of defrauding the city of $75 million. But the Tammany Machine was still running Democratic politics in New York in 1924, the next time the party gathered here for a national convention.

They arrived at the Garden on June 24 during a blistering Manhattan heat wave — a move they would regret for the next 15 days.

The longest convention in Democratic history ensued: 14 candidates, 103 ballots. Urban and rural delegates were divided, Catholics and Protestants were at odds, boozers and teetotalers split.

The convention continued interminably. "As I pen these few lines, the Democratic convention is going on. Going on to where, nobody knows," Will Rogers wrote.

Confusion reigned. Keynote speaker Pat Harrison of Mississippi told the crowd, "What this country needs is another Paul Revere!" What many in the Prohibition-era crowd heard — and cheered wildly — was, "What this country needs is a real beer!"

The final resolution came on June 24. Winner John W. Davis wasn't even around when he was nominated. William Jennings Bryan, a three-time presidential loser for the Democrats, marked his last convention by getting his brother, Charles, on the ticket as the vice presidential candidate.

What finally united the divided party?

"Fatigue was the solvent. . . . When it was all over the name they shouted was 'Davis,' but the vision they saw was their own front porch," wrote Boyden Sparkes in The New York Herald Tribune.

In contrast, 1976 was a Democratic love-in. Carter arrived from Plains, Ga., to become the party's unanimous choice. The Democrats were riding high; Watergate was still fresh in America's memory.

Carter, running mate Walter Mondale and other Democrats lined up in the Garden to bash the battered Republicans and President Gerald Ford.

"I see no reason why big-shot crooks should go free and the poor ones go to jail," Carter gibed in his acceptance speech.

"We have just lived through the worst scandal in American history, and are now led by a president who pardoned the person who did it," Mondale railed.

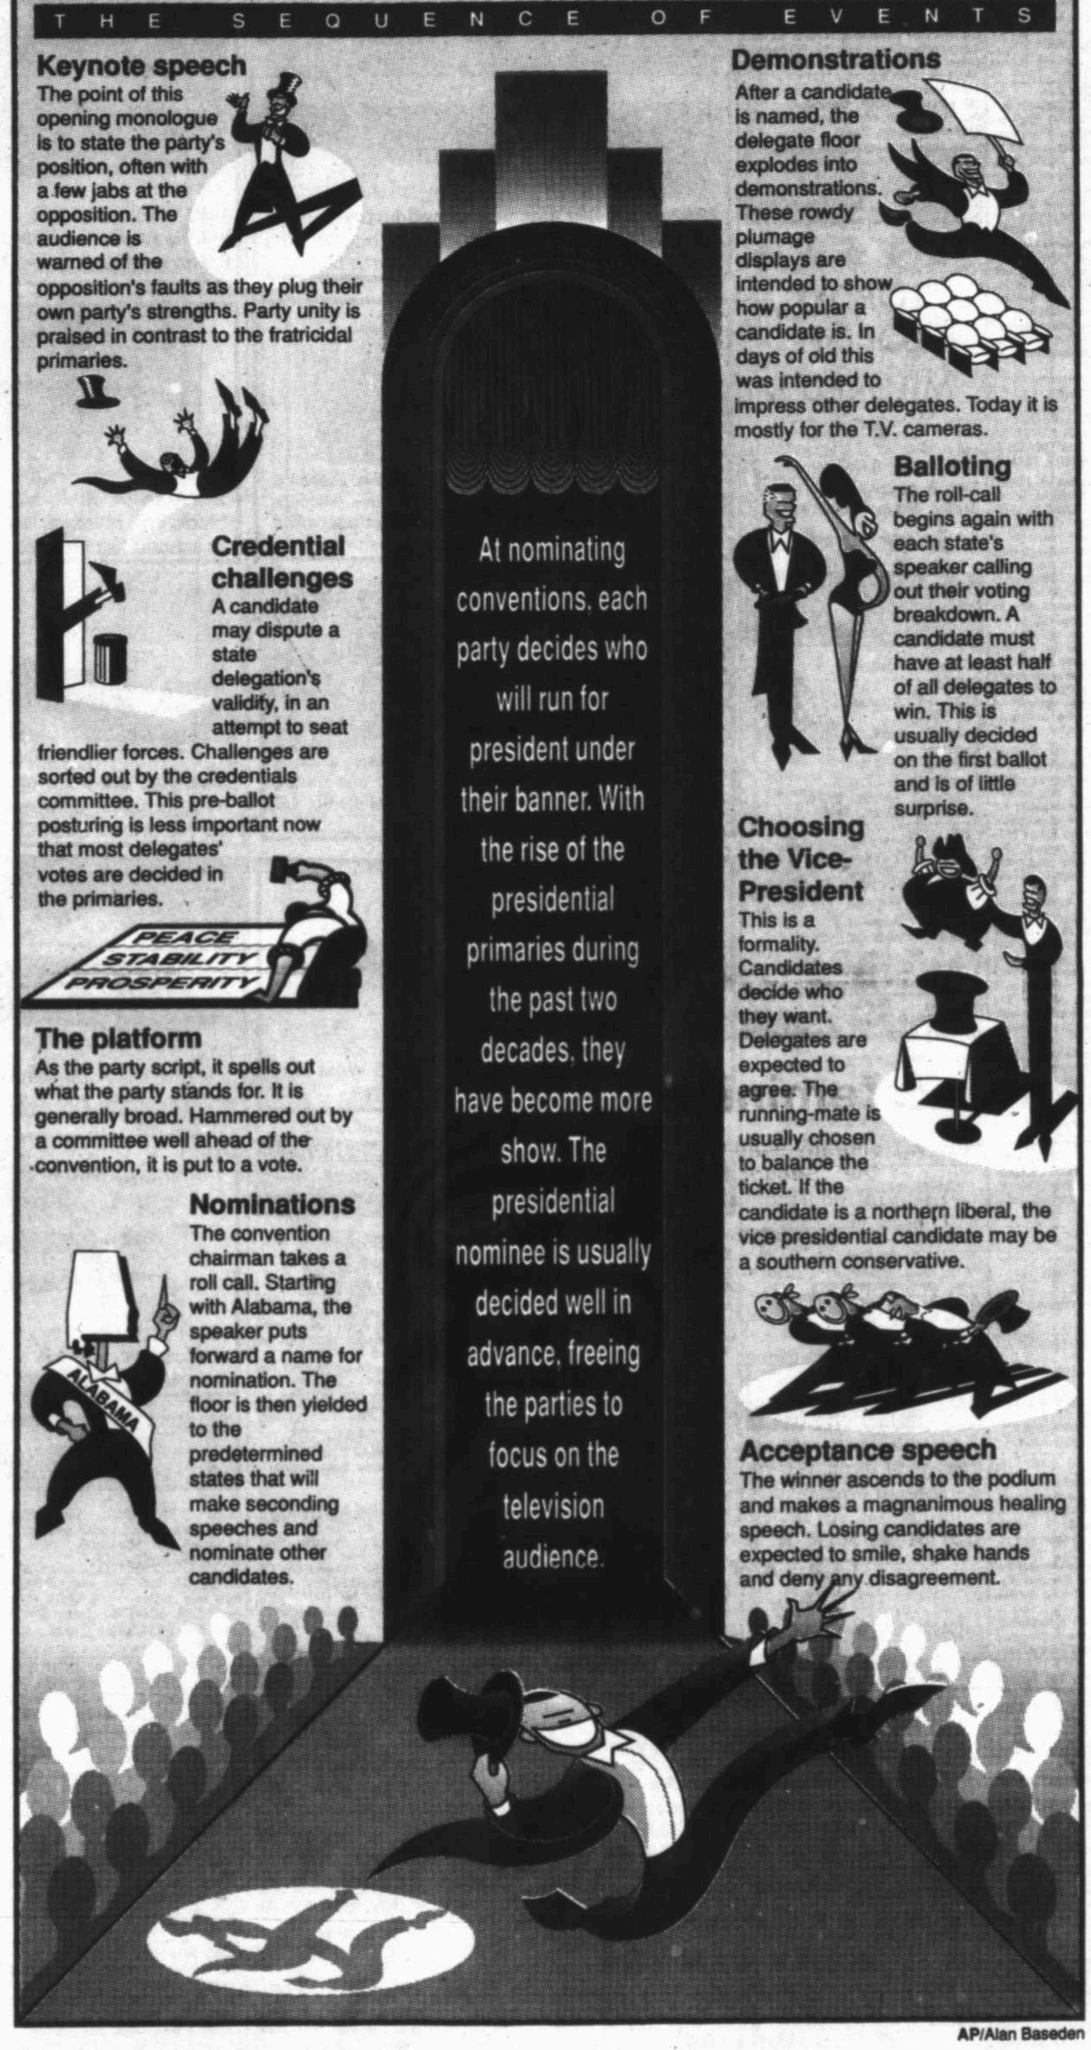

Carter rolled out of New York and into the White House — a feat he was unable to repeat four years later.

The feel-good politics of the Bicentennial convention were long forgotten by 1980, when Kennedy dueled Carter for the nomination. "We want Ted!" chanted delegates seeking to open the convention.

Kennedy managed to make his presence felt; a contentious platform debate stretched over two days as the senator's supporters pressed his liberal agenda.

Carter emerged the winner and held out an olive branch to Kennedy: "Ted, your party needs — and I need — you, and your idealism and dedication working for us."

Kennedy acquiesced. As they had in 1924, the Democrats departed in unity — only to endure a November thumping, this time by Ronald Reagan.

Convention neighborhood lacks glamour

NEW YORK (AP) — In the city that never sleeps, the area around Madison Square Garden sometimes takes a nap.

There are no tourist attractions, just thousands of commuters rushing for their trains. There are no hip, party-all-night clubs, just a lot of shot-and-a-beer bars. There are no trendy restaurants, just fast-food joints galore.

The Garden will play host to a four-day party during the July 13-16 Democratic National Convention, but the surrounding blocks go on life-support once the sun goes down. In a town with well-known neighborhoods like Harlem and Greenwich Village, this region doesn't even rate a nickname.

The Garden, which covers two blocks between Seventh and Eighth avenues, is north of Chelsea and south of Hell's Kitchen. It's above the Fur Center and below the Garment District. It's west of the East Side and east of the Hudson River.

Manhattan has 1.4 million residents; virtually none live around the Garden. Tens of thousand work there or pass through on their way home, ducking into Penn Station or the subway, leaving the streets empty and quiet each night.

It's nothing like Times Square, with its news zipper, bright lights and flashing signs. The only glitter is on the Garden's outdoor video screen, the only neon a flashing cross wishing "Glad Tidings."

So what is around? Within two blocks of the Garden, there are 23 delis, 22 fast food joints, 16 bars, 14 parking lots and 12 restaurants.

You can find Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition on 29th Street, united beneath the letters "OTB" — for Off-Track Betting. People of all colors, creeds and nationalities mingle here without problem, brought together by a single concern:

"Who scratched in the seventh at Belmont?"

There are tons of tacky souvenirs on sale. Ventura II Fine Gifts on 34th has a selection that would make the owner of any Elvis velvet painting drool.

Looking for that Statue of Liberty with the digital clock in its base? How about the New York skyline commemorative license plate? The official new York Yankees' shot glass? Ventura has it all.

The careful consumer can find plenty of bargains in the neighborhood. Two blocks from the Garden is "A Real New York Bargain," where everything costs "the unbelievable low price" of $10.

Too much? A block south is the "99 Cent Store."

Clinton's trek to convention included bumps, spills

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bill Clinton dubbed himself "the comeback kid" after pulling out a second-place finish in New Hampshire. It wasn't the first time he had demonstrated an ability to fight his way out of a political corner.

Clinton

The Arkansas governor, poised to claim the Democratic nomination at the party's national convention in Madison Square Garden, has had his share of bumps and spills.

His name has appeared on a primary or election ballot 17 times in 17 years. Twice, he lost. His career was on the ropes often.

But Clinton meticulously planned his comebacks, fought aggressively and benefited from belonging to the right party in a one-party state.

"He knows what it's like to win big. He knows what it's like to lose big. He learned both of those things here and it's helping him now," said Skip Rutherford, a longtime friend and former chairman of the Arkansas Democratic Party.

"All the campaigns, the administrative duties of the governor's office and the going up and down all these years have been absolutely invaluable in dealing with all of this," Clinton said recently.

"All of this" covers the onslaught of questions about Clinton's character and integrity that arose earlier this year in the wake of allegations of womanizing and evading the draft and his belated admission that he had tried marijuana while in college.

Clinton was 28 when he lost the first race of his political career. He won the 1974 Democratic congressional nomination in Arkansas' 3rd District but lost the general election to Republican incumbent John Paul Hammerschmidt.

For the next two years, he worked toward the next election, when he was elected state attorney general.

In 1978, he became the youngest governor in the nation at age 32, hailed as a rising star in the Democratic Party. Years later, Democratic Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia would joke that Clinton was "a bright rising star in three different decades."

Young Clinton moved aggressively in his first term as governor, too aggressively for some.

He raised motor fuel taxes and vehicle registration fees, tackled timber industry forestry practices and cooperated with President Carter's decision to use Fort Chaffee, Ark., as a Cuban refugee relocation center. The Cubans rioted.

His opponent in 1980, Republican Frank White, upset Clinton with a relentless attack built on the catch phrase: "Cubans and Car Tags." White called Clinton arrogant, and accused him of being more interested in being president than governor.

With his loss to a Republican in a state dominated by Democrats, Clinton became the nation's youngest ex-governor.

Critics pronounced his political career over but Clinton joined a Little Rock law firm and spent the next two years plotting his comeback.

He went on television in 1982 to apologize for the mistakes of his first term and promised to do better. Voters accepted his words of contrition and sent him back to the Statehouse.

Now he's the nation's longest-serving governor.

Over the years, Clinton carefully honed a national reputation through his participation in the National Governor's Association. His big break came when he was asked to deliver the nominating speech for Michael Dukakis at the 1988 Democratic convention.

The speech was a bust, embarrassingly long and dull. Cheers of relief went up when Clinton finally got to the words, "in closing."

To salvage his image, Clinton went on the "Tonight Show," where he played his saxophone and poked fun at himself with Johnny Carson.

"I wanted so badly to make Dukakis look great, and I succeeded beyond my wildest dreams," he joked.

Clinton said it was concern about his family that pulled him back from running for president himself in 1988, when daughter Chelsea was just 8.

But he still had his eye on the prize, telling supporters at the time, "For what's it's worth, I'd still like to be president."
