City Council Expected To Cut Budget, Levies

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although members of the Lubbock Property Owners Association may not get the city council to cut taxes by 25 percent, the council probably will make additional budget and tax cuts Thursday in response to the local tax revolt.

The nearly 2,000 association letters which arrived at city hall Monday definitely will have an impact on council action, Mayor Dirk West said.

West noted the group does not represent a majority of the city's taxpayers, but said their thinking certainly is representative of the majority.

But the mayor said he wasn't so sure about the association's specific requests, like the 25 percent tax cut.

At the current tax rate, the owner of a $45,000 home would face a bill of $810 for both school and city taxes. A 25 percent cut in city taxes would produce a savings of about $90 a year, but West said that would lower a house payment by less than $8 a month.

"It's not a very significant impact on a household budget," he said. "I don't think that's what they want."

The reduction is the rough equivalent in price of two theater tickets and less than the price of eating out, West pointed out.

However, a 25 percent tax cut would remove $4.3 million from the city's general fund and have a "rather significant impact on city services."

When the council convenes in a budget work session Thursday, West said it will be looking for additional ways to cut the $71.9 million budget without any specific percentage cut in mind.

"We'll be looking at areas where cuts would have the least impact," he said. Cuts will not come in the "protection of life and property — not in fire or police protection," he said.

Areas where cuts are possible include library service, parks, brush pickup, Health Department increases and weed control.

The council will be looking for "those services and expenses that would have the least impact on the majority of citizens," he said.

To aid in that evaluation, West said City Manager Larry Cunningham is preparing statistics on what services would have to be cut back to achieve a 25 percent tax reduction.

But West said "it's apparent a cut in taxes can't only come from the city." Without mentioning the school district by name, the mayor said such a cut "has got to involve other taxing entities.

"The city has been the whipping boy so far on this tax revolt and there is no fat in the city's budget to start with," he said.

He theorized most people think of the City-School Tax Office only as the City Tax Office, so the city gets all the blame.

But the school district, with a higher tax rate than the city, received 53 percent of all property taxes collected, he noted.

Explosion In Spain Kills 100

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — A butane gas explosion ripped through a campsite near Tarragona on Spain's Mediterranean coast today and left at least 100 dead. Officials estimated that the death toll might climb as high as 180 and the list of injured to 200.

Police said the blast killed "about 100" but sources at the civil governor's palace said the dead "could number around 180."

Officials said more than 500 campers were at the site and the victims included entire families. Many were believed to be French and West Germans.

A police officer said the scene "resembles hell or what we think hell is like."

Witnesses said some bodies were recovered from the Mediterranean, 100 yards away, where they had been hurled by the force of the blast.

Police said the exact cause of the explosion was not known, but they believed the butane gas was in a truck.

A policeman who was at the camp at the time of the blast, said: "It has all been terrible. All of a sudden a terrific explosion burst out and flames engulfed us.

"Cries came out from everywhere. People could be seen running in all directions to their safety. Some were ablaze. And we were helpless to do anything.

"I'll never be able to get rid of these horrible sights no matter how long I live."

Busing Plan, Taxes Target Of Petitions

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With hundreds of volunteers, a local anti-busing group today started circulating petitions to force a vote on propositions to cut city-school taxes so low that Lubbock won't be able to implement its court-ordered integration plan.

Municipal and school officials doubt the legality of the strategy, but the group — called We the People — is undaunted.

"We're enthusiastic and ready to go. I don't think we'll have any trouble getting the required number of signatures on our petitions," said Lenda Tarlton, a founder of the organization.

"We've had a good reaction as far as taxpayers are concerned. They're worried about high taxes and where their money is going. They especially don't want it to go for busing."

Mrs. Tarlton said 150 to 200 members of We the People met Monday night in Hodges Community Center to kick off their campaign. They hope to get the City of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District to call special elections on proposed tax rollbacks.

According to the city charter, the group believes, if 10,000 signatures can be obtained within the next two months, the city will be forced to hold such an election.

Mrs. Tarlton said that while school officials can't be forced to call an election on the proposition, "they should consider it carefully."

We the People wants to limit the tax rates of the city and school district to 80 cents per $100 valuation. The city's proposed tax rate for 1978 is $1.33; the school district, which hasn't begun public budget sessions for the coming year, has a rate of $1.58.

The organization also would dictate priorities for city and school district spending. Predictably, in the group's suggested proposition for the schools, court-ordered busing is not a priority.

Today, We the People issued a statement on its petition drive:

"By petitions and the signatures of 10,000 people, an election must be held. If our local city government and school board can prove that their present budgets can be completely justified, then we may be defeated in that election.

"We plan to give them that opportunity.

"Let anyone come forth that will show us forced busing has improved social tensions and in particular the quality of education. Let anyone prove to us how an excessive evaluation of property does anything to improve our community's wel-

BOB BULLOCK
Faces DWI Charge

Police Arrest Bob Bullock

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock was arrested in north Austin early today and jailed on a police complaint of driving while intoxicated, Lt. Freddie Maxwell, police public information officer said.

"He was in jail a very short time, but he was booked like anyone else," said Maxwell. "He was booked, fingerprinted and photographed and then released to his attorney to appear later."

Maxwell said Bullock and his attorney re-appeared early today before Municipal Judge Alberto Garcia and released on a personal recognizance bond.

Legislators Bar Hearings

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas House members for the second consecutive day refused to suspend rules and allow immediate public hearings on a series of proposed constitutional amendments involving tax breaks for farmers, ranchers and homeowners and establishing limits on government taxing authority.

Without the rules suspension, the House Constitutional Amendments Committee cannot begin public hearings on the proposals until Monday — almost one-fourth of the way through the 30-day special session of the legislature called by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to act on his proposals for $1.1 billion in tax relief.

Today's motion by Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, chairman of the committee on constitutional amendments, to suspend the rules and permit hearings to begin Wednesday was favored in an 81-50 vote, but failed to get the necessary two-thirds majority.

A similar motion failed Monday.

Hearings in both the House and Senate were to begin this afternoon on bills repealing the sales tax on residential utility bills and raising the inheritance tax exemption. House members agreed Monday to suspend rules for hearings on the utility tax repeal, and the Senate does not have a rule requiring five days notice be posted before public hearings can be held.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, said suspension of the rules to permit hearings on the proposed constitutional amendments would be a terrible mistake, despite assurances from Von Dohlen that the committee would take no votes on the proposals before Monday.

"It would be the height of mistake in haste to take all these proposals under a rules suspension," Bryant said. "They affect every political subdivision in the state of Texas, and most of those subdivisions don't even know they have been introduced."

Senators met as a committee of the whole today to hear a summary by Legislative Budget Board officials of the state's financial condition,and differences in the tax burdens in Texas and California, where voters recently triggered a national movement for tax relief.

The House vote on the rules suspension indicates Briscoe's tax relief proposals lack widespread support in the special session, and as many as four of the seven proposals may fail.

Speaker Bill Clayton conceded several of the governor's proposals to reduce taxes and restrict future taxing authority of state and local governments face tough opposition during the special session.

"I figure if we get by with 50 percent or better that's doing pretty good."

He said he expects particularly tough opposition to Briscoe's proposed constitutional amendments requiring a two-thirds vote to raise state taxes, giving citizens the right of initiative and referendum on tax issues, and limiting the power of local governments to increase taxes and spending.

Briscoe told the legislators Monday it was his duty to recommend the tax relief proposals, and their duty to pass them.

"I discharge my duty under the constitution of Texas by placing before you a specific agenda for tax relief," he said.

"Now, as the people of Texas and indeed the nation watch, each of you must discharge your duty under the constitution. It is now for you to act upon this agenda. In my opinion, the taxpayers of this state will not be satisfied with half measures or tokenism from their elected officials. They want and deserve substantial legislative relief."

Legislators applauded politely at the beginning and end of Briscoe's speech, but not one of his proposals drew applause during his address.

Briscoe said his tax relief program is the largest ever considered by the legislature.

Previous special sessions called by Briscoe have lasted no more than 10 days, but a number of legislators indicated Monday they expect the tax relief session to last a full 30 days.

Prosecutors Build Cases Against Two Dissidents

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court accused dissident Anatoly Shcharansky today of passing secret information to newspaper correspondent Robert C. Toth of the Los Angeles Times.

In Kaluga, 100 miles away, the wife of Alexander Ginzburg, on trial for anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, was ejected from the courtroom twice today.

She was told to leave the courtroom after an outburst in the morning session during which, she said later, she shouted at a prosecution witness, "God will be your judge." She was thrown out of the afternoon session after refusing to promise she would not interrupt the proceedings.

Shcharansky, 30, a computer expert and Jewish activist, faces the death penalty on a charge of spying for the United States. Ginzburg, 41, also a Jew, faces 15 years punishment. Both men have pleaded innocent and their trials have raised protests around the world.

In a gesture of American support, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will meet in Geneva later this week with Shcharansky's wife, Avital, an American official said in Washington. Vance, who over the weekend condemned Soviet actions against Shcharansky and other prominent dissidents, will be in Geneva for arms talks with Soviet Foreign Miniser Andrei A. Gromyko.

A court official in Moscow read reporters a statement saying a secret session of the Shcharansky trial was told he provided "intelligence and other information" to a foreign correspondent who, "as established by competent bodies, is an agent of one of the Western military intelligence services."

The official, Magomet Pirbudagov, did not mention the correspondent's name, but cited articles about parapsychology and genetic engineering written by Toth.

Toth was interrogated by Soviet police before he left Moscow a year ago about his contacts with Shcharansky. In a statement Monday from Washington, Toth denied working for any intelligence agency and called the allegations "nonsense."

According to Pirbudagov, Shcharansky helped the foreign correspondent make contacts in the scientific community here and distributed his questionnaires to scientists. He said Shcharansky confirmed the evidence of investigators about his contacts with the correspondent.

He said the court also heard about an article Toth wrote, with Shcharansky's help, suggesting that the locations of secret enterprises could be deduced from the workplaces of Jews who were denied exit visas on national security grounds.

The trial was closed, barring even Shcharansky's relatives, and there was no way to corroborate the official report.

In Kaluga, Mrs. Ginzburg said the judge ordered her from the courtroom when she shouted: "It's a lie, everything this man says is a lie," during the testimony of Arkady Gradoboyev who called

Congress Warned Of Threat To Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy faces continuing trouble despite a drop in unemployment, but probably will not slide into recession, the director of the Congressional Budget Office said today.

Alice M. Rivlin, the director, told the House Budget Committee the outlook for inflation has worsened from earlier projections, and slower economic growth seems to be in the cards through 1979.

"This is a difficult call, but given our policy assumptions, CBO does not believe that current economic trends point to a recession," Mrs. Rivlin said in testimony.

The policy assumptions include a tax cut of about $15 billion, with some stimulus for business investment, and a Federal Reserve policy that would not permit much more increase in short-term interest rates nor squeeze down credit too sharply.

The CBO analysis is generally in line with other economic assessments, but is more optimistic than some. Two leading economists in a report for the Brookings Institution last month estimated there was at least a 50 percent chance of a recession. And Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said in a mid-June speech that the United States is headed for a recession if progress is not made against inflation in the next six months.

The CBO is forbidden by law to make recommendations, but is directed instead to report to Congress on the likely effects of different policies.

Mrs. Rivlin said the tax cut contemplated by the administration "more than offsets the effects of rising payroll taxes and fiscal drag on disposable personal income and should help sustain consumer spending."

She noted that proponents of a much larger tax cut are pressing for a congressional vote. This is the Republican-backed proposal for a reduction of about one-third over three years in personal income tax rates.

"Conventional economic analysis indicates that, as a result of such a policy, the budget deficit would rise sharply," she said.

She noted that backers of the bill argue that "large tax cuts increase incentives to work, save and invest to such an extent that the cuts would pay for themselves ... and, therefore, would not be inflationary." She added, however, that "CBO does not know of any empirical evidence for (this) view."

Mrs. Rivlin said her office's specialists expect economic activity to grow at a rate of 3.5 to 4.5 percent during 1978, but think the economic growth will slow by about one-half of 1 percentage point during 1979. By the end of that year, unemployment, which was 5.7 percent last June, would range between 5.2 and 6 percent.

"The most unpleasant side of this scenario is the outlook for prices," she said, predicting a rise in the Consumer Price Index for 1978 of 6.8 to 7.8 percent, "substantially above the 6.6 percent rise during 1977."

And prices will continue to rise rapidly during 1979, she said, though probably not at the steep 1978 rate.

Mrs. Rivlin said the principal impetus behind rising prices will be labor costs, as workers press for wage gains because of past inflation.

Contributing to the outlook for slow growth are reduced spending on housing, in part because credit funds have shrunk; lower prospects for spending by consumers, who are thought to have bought heavily in recent months to hedge against future price rises; and slower investment by business.

But CBO found encouraging signs that a recession would not develop. These include the prospect that a tax cut will offset rising Social Security withholding; some regulation changes that might produce more housing funds; the chance of rising exports because of the dollar's drop in international exchanges; and indications that businesses have not let production outrun sales.

Jarvis In Demand

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Proposition 13 author Howard Jarvis is in such demand he can't even find time to appear in court on a drunken driving charge.

JARVIS

The 75-year-old Jarvis arrived for his Monday trial, but was promptly excused so he would not miss a Chicago talk show engagement.

"It's not unusual," Jarvis told reporters as he left Municipal Court. "I'll be back tomorrow unless the airplane lands in Lake Michigan."

Jarvis, who left his lawyer in charge of jury selection, did find time to declare himself innocent of driving while intoxicated. He has pleaded guilty of driving without a valid driver's license.

Jarvis says the charges — which carry a maximum sentence of six months in jail and a $500 fine — have not affected his credibility.

"I was in Michigan the other day," he said. "They were 30,000 signatures short (for a petition seeking a tax-cutting proposition similar to California's) and when I left they had 80,000 extra."

Singer Loses Bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Olivia Newton-John can't break with MCA Records, a court has ruled.

The star of the movie "Grease" claims the record company hasn't provided enough promotion for her albums. She also says her name was used without her permission to promote such things as McDonald's hamburger discount program.

Judge Norman R. Dowds ruled that Miss Newton-John, 29, could not record albums or perform as a recording artist for anyone other than MCA under her contract expires in April 1982.

Frampton Recovering

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock star Peter Frampton is "out of bed and moving about" at Lenox Hill Hospital, two weeks after he suffered a broken arm, fractured ribs and cuts in a car accident in the Bahamas.

FRAMPTON

On Monday, hospital spokesmen termed the singer's progress as "excellent," but they wouldn't say when he would be released.

Frampton lost control of his car on a rain-slick highway June 29. He was flown to New York the next day.

Sophia Visits Rome

ROME (AP) — Now, a visit to Rome by actress Sophia Loren makes headlines.

It never was that way — until 16 months ago when, on her last trip here, she was detained at Leonardo Da Vinci Airport for nine hours as police interrogated her on a currency export matter. She and her husband, Carlo Ponti, have since been charged with illegally transferring $12 million in Italian lire out of the country. Trial is scheduled for October.

Her visit Monday went a lot smoother, the Italian news agency ANSA reported. Now a French citizen, Miss Loren, 43, arrived by train from Paris, visited a film studio to try on costumes for her upcoming Lina Wertmuller film and then quickly returned to the French capital.

Miss Loren, who won the Academy Award as best actress in the 1961 film "Two Women," will appear with Marcello Mastroianni in Miss Wertmuller's new movie.

Donna Fargo Still Ill

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Country music singer Donna Fargo is still suffering a viral illness that makes portions of her body numb. The malady has forced her to cancel a Sept. 14 appearance at the Kansas State Fair, fair secretary Bob Gottschalk said Monday.

MISS FARGO

No replacement has been named.

Miss Fargo originally canceled 2½ months of scheduled performances because of the illness. She did want to fulfill late summer commitments, Gottschalk said.

Bandit Mails Payment

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Pawn shop owner Edward Camp found $600 in the mail as payment for three pistols. Nothing unusual there — except that the pistols were stolen in 1975 by a gun-wielding, disguised bandit.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

"This is to pay for three guns taken in late June or early July of 1975, for this I am truly sorry," read the note of apology sent by the unidentified, guilt-ridden robber.

The money arrived Monday with the apologetic note. The note had no signature and the plain envelope, postmarked in Boston had no return address.

"That was three years ago and I still don't believe it," said the stunned Camp. "I pretty well fell through the floor when my shop manager showed me (the letter) ... I was so astonished and bewildered at first that I thought about framing them."

At the time of the robbery, Camp said, the stolen pistols were worth $459. Now, they're valued at $793.

"I don't care about the difference," said Camp, who has operated the pawnshop since 1941. "And I don't believe I'd press charges against the guy ... I think the man just got religious. The good book got to him — that's what I think."

Sen. Brooke Endures Long, Hot Summer

By SHELLY COHEN

BOSTON (AP) — It is a long, hot summer for U.S. Sen. Edward W. Brooke, who always looked so cool on Washington's society pages.

Six months ago, this 58-year-old Massachusetts Republican, the only black to sit in the U.S. Senate since Reconstruction, was among the most popular politicians in his state.

Now, a half-dozen Democrats want to challenge him for his seat, and he travels the state campaigning hard — shaking hands, hugging and kissing, bussing the cheeks of hundreds of middle-age women.

But unlike other candidates, lately he grants no interviews and answers few questions from reporters.

State officials are investigating whether Brooke committed perjury in his divorce case. The Senate Ethics Committee is inquiring whether he made false statements in a financial disclosure report.

The essence of his problem is this:

Two months ago, prompted by newspaper reports that began with leaks from a daughter, Brooke admitted "misstatements" on sworn documents in his divorce case. A judge granted his wife the right to reopen the case, and asked the county prosecutor to determine if Brooke had committed perjury.

Meanwhile, fellow senators began asking whether Brooke had violated the Senate ethics code that Brooke had fought for.

On Monday, the Middlesex County prosecutor declined to answer the question of whether to prosecute for perjury, pleading lack of jurisdiction, and tossed the question to his counterpart in Suffolk County. The divorce case was handled in suburban Middlesex County, but Brooke's deposition was given in Boston, or Suffolk County.

So, while there is no formal accusation against Brooke, the damaging questions could linger, unanswered, until election day.

Brooke, meanwhile, has tried and failed to lay the controversy to rest — and has succeeded in pointing out painful ironies in his life.

Last spring, as he bared his finances to the press, Brooke confessed it had been 16 years since he had last lived with his wife, Remigia, "as husband and wife." That would have been 1962, when to the outside world everything seemed to be going Brooke's way.

It was the year he was first elected attorney general of Massachusetts — the only Republican to win statewide office in 1962.

And it was the year that he, with his wife and then teen-age daughters, Remi and Edwina, moved from the largely black Roxbury section of Boston to the affluent suburb of Newton.

He was the "Negro holding the highest elective office in the nation" at the time, a national figure. He was a spokesman, sometimes a target, for others of his race.

But Brooke never became a "black politician." Though a product of segregation, he was a moderate, even when militancy was loudest.

Light skinned and green eyed, with a fondness for opera, he moved easily in Boston's white society.

Brooke was the son of a Washington, D.C., lawyer, raised in a tree-lined, middle-class black section of that city. He went to segregated schools right through graduation from Howard University in 1941.

Called into the Army on Pearl Harbor day, he entered an all-black combat unit as an ROTC-trained second lieutenant.

Then, in Italy working with the resistance movement, he met Remigia, the white woman who would become his wife and who to this day calls him Carlo, his wartime code name. They married in Boston in 1947 while Brooke was attending Boston University Law School.

After several unsuccessful tries for elective office, Brooke made a reputation as a corruption-fighter, first as the appointed chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, then as the state attorney general.

But his private finances were getting him into trouble even then.

In 1964, two years before he was elected to the Senate, federal tax officials claimed he failed to pay income taxes on some $12,000 in legal fees earned from 1959 to 1961. Blaming a bookkeeper, he declared: "I live modestly and money has never been my God."

And living modestly is a claim he would have trouble making today.

His assets before his divorce settlement were estimated at more than $1 million — nearly all acquired during his 12 years in the Senate, and including a home in Newton, a home on the island resort of Martha's Vineyard, a home and property on the Carribean island of St. Martin, and an apartment in the Watergate in Washington.

Records from Brooke's senatorial campaign show a fondness for fine restaurants. The fund also spent $8,000 on antiques for a Beacon Hill apartment that doubles as campaign office and in-town stopover spot.

But Brooke's wealth has not separated him from the black community, which knows he supports low-income housing and abortions for the poor. On such issues, he has made his greatest impact in the Senate.

So when his divorce and tangled finances grabbed attention during this election year, Boston's black community rallied to his defense.

Some 31 black civic and political leaders called a news conference to defend him, and to point to his record: the first Republican to call for the resignation of President Richard Nixon; his opposition to Nixon's nomination of G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court; his advocacy of the "Brooke Amendment," which now limits the rent public housing tenants can pay to 25 percent of their income.

Americans Think Russians Their Equal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new reading of national attitudes suggests that Americans for the first time think of the Soviet Union as their equal in terms of international power and importance.

It also suggests the American people have the greatest amount of trust and confidence in themselves, their military and their young and the least amount in the federal government, the CIA, and labor unions, which traditionally rank lowest among 18 national institutions.

That snapshot of the national mood comes from Potomac Associates, a public policy research group which every other year engages the Gallup organization to measure America's hopes, fears and attitudes.

The newly published report, "State of the Nation III," by William Watts and Lloyd A. Free, is based on polling conducted in May 1976, but Watts said he believes the trends uncovered then are running even stronger now.

He said the country's most dramatic change since 1974 is "an increased sense of nationalism." This is reflected in a heightened fear of war, a willingness to spend more on defense, a fear the United States is mishandling foreign policy.

Americans ranked 18 institutions in terms of trustworthiness this way: the American people themselves, military leadership, young people, the American system, the mass media, state government, the FBI, the federal judiciary, local government, politicians, congress, the federal executive, business and industry, government officials generally, federal foreign policy, federal domestic policy, the CIA, and labor unions.

The poll showed Americans gave higher priority to defense spending than in 1974, when Vietnam was a more current and more bitter memory.

A majority felt the United States should remain the most powerful nation even if that meant going to the brink of war.

The pulse-taking suggested the people are more upbeat about their personal situations than about the country's.

In 1974, six out of 10 did not expect their own prospects to improve over the next five years. In 1976, 57 percent — nearly six out of 10 — did anticipate improvement.

But the portion who felt the country had gained ground in its relations with other nations fell from seven Americans in 10 in 1974 to fewer than half in 1976.

A cross-section of 1,071 adults was polled. They ranked the power and importance of the United States and the Soviet Union on a scale of 1 to 10.

In 1974, those polled put this country at 8.8 and the Soviet Union at 7.8, though they saw the gap diminishing in the future.

In the new poll, Americans concluded the Soviet Union had become the virtual equal of the United States and was likely to remain so, or even to pull ahead.

Those who wanted defense spending increased or maintained rose from 57 percent to 71 percent in the two polls.

The new poll also indicated Americans are not automatically against big government. They are willing to see the government spend more — on some projects.

What they supported most were heavier spending to develop self-sufficiency in energy, to help the elderly, combat crime and cut water pollution.

But only half said they would spend more to improve the situation of lack Americans (possibly reflecting a feeling that lacks have advanced significantly), and fewer yet would spend more to supporr the United Nations, help underdeveloped countries or provide arms to U.S. allies.

Of the problems that worry people, the danger of this country becoming engaged in a major war was cited more often in 1976 than in 1974.

So was unemployment, the educational system, the need for a strong military, maintaining respect abroad and communism.

Less concern was expressed about improving mass transit than in 1974, the year of the oil embargo.

Boy Saves Hotel Guests

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fire investigators say a 14-year-old boy from Peoria, Ill., sounded the alarm and awakened guests in time to flee from a resort hotel fire that caused an estimated $250,000.

Brett Derais told authorities he was sitting with other guests near the swimming pool about 20 feet from the north wing of the Catamaran Motor Hotel in Mission Beach just after midnight Monday. That's when "we saw a flash and smoke" and then flames spitting out of the roof," he said.

"Then I ran to the tower building and pulled the fire alarm," the boy recalled. Young Derais returned to the burning wing of the hotel and joined three other guests in knocking on doors to awaken and alert sleepers, many here for today's major league All-Star baseball game at San Diego Stadium.

Police said there were no injuries and no panic.

Investigators have tentatively blamed the fire on wiring in a storage area containing a newly-arrived shipment of mattresses. The blaze destroyed three rooms and left smoke damage throughout the wing.

Derais said, "The flames shot out and actually reached the pool. The entire parking lot looked like it was on fire.

"I wasn't scared," the boy said, "but I was nervous."

His older brother, Brian, said that after Brett awoke him, "we went back in the room and got our clothes and things out. But they almost locked my dad in the room in the confusion."

Another guest, Lee Glick, 18, of Spring Valley, N.Y., said he heard "screaming and people yelling."

U.S. Army To Keep Vintage M-1 Guns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army plans to keep almost one million World War II and Korean War era M-1 rifles and M-1 carbines rather than destroy or sell them to private gun clubs.

Army Secretary Clifford L. Alexander Jr. announced Monday about 760,000 rifles and 204,000 carbines will be retained while another 500,000 will be junked. The Army will continue to sell about 600 M-1 rifles annually to qualified persons, Alexander says.

Fuel Plane Stays Ready To Answer Red Alert

By ROBERT MacKAY

CHICAGO (UPI) — Unbeknownst to most people using the world's busiest airport, a military airplane sits on one of the runways 24 hours a day, ready to take off within minutes of a threatened attack against the United States.

The alert aircraft at the military side of O'Hare International Airport is attached to the Strategic Air Command, but is manned by the Illinois Air National Guard. The guard took over the job at O'Hare on Jan. 1.

The duty of the KC-135 tanker — a military version of a 707 — is to refuel an attack aircraft while both planes are in flight.

"We have one we call cocked-and-ready," Air Force Lt. Col. John Gura said. "It is standing there ready to go. When we say cocked, we mean all the switches that can be are already turned on. It sits on the ready ramp while the crew is stationed in the alert facilities."

Gura said the plane can be airborne "within minutes" after a warning signal is sounded.

Each plane has a four-to five-man crew, Gura said, and most of them are commercial airline employees.

"The Air Force is assigning more and more of its aerial refueling support to reserve and guard forces," Gura said. "It's a cheaper way to do the same job for us. The Air Force now does not need such a big, vast amount of people."

He said a missile launched from the Atlantic would take only 15 to 17 minutes to hit the Chicago area.

"The role of that KC-135 is that it has a certain B-52 that it is married to and it must go up and meet that buddy and refuel it over northern Canada so that the B-52 can continue on its mission.

"If it doesn't meet the plane at specified coordinates at a certain time, one B-52 has to turn around and come back."

Gura said there are about 15 other non-military airports in the country in which reserve or guard units have taken over the refueling duties of SAC.

Illinois Air National Guard Maj. Kevin Jeffery, who flies for United Air Lines, has occasionally volunteered for the 24-hour alert assignment at O'Hare.

"After several hours of studying your sortie, then eating lunch and dinner and watching some TV, it's time to get some sleep. It's not so bad," Jeffery said.

When the alarm buzzes, he said, the men run for a truck, which takes them to the airplane. The plane is immediately readied for takeoff. All that takes about 2½ minutes, he said.

Undersea Placement Set For Sensor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite numerous obstacles, scientists will place an experimental sensing device 1,500 feet under the sea floor to see if it improves studies of the earth's crust and monitoring of earthquakes.

The device will have to withstand underwater pressures of tens of thousands of pounds per square inch; it will be difficult to position in such a deep hole and it won't be easy to get it out, National Science Foundation officials said.

Oil Shale Seen As Solid Fuel

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — For years engineers have searched for cheaper ways to extract oil from shale rock and tarsands, but a combustion expert says it might be more practical to burn oil shale rock and tarsands as solid fuel like coal.

This intriguing view is offered by Wallace Markert, Jr., a Babcock & Wilcox Co. vice president at Alliance, Ohio. Markert is specifically concerned with the problems of fluidized bed combustion of coal. He operates a small fluidized bed furnace and his company has a contract with Electric Power Research institute for a more extensive fluidized bed evaluation project.

The fluidczed bed process (the term derives from an original use of the method to get fluids from coal) is most familiar in connection with coal gasification projects but Markert said the immediate aims of present fluidized bed programs have nothing to do with coal gasification.

In the United States, the process is used to get the sulfur out of the coal in the initial combustion by combining it with limestone to make calcium sulfate, which can be removed with the ashes and makes good landfill.

Markert said Europeans also are much interested in fluidized bed combustion but for a different reason. "They see it as a means of burning a wide variety of fuels more efficiently," he said.

Markert foresees a convergence of the American and European purposes in the technology. "We are bound to realize if fluidized combustion becomes completely feasible, as I believe it will, it will enable us to burn cleanly any kind of solid fuel, coal, lignite and peat, and to treat oil shale rock and tarsands as solid fuels without extracting the oil."

He said tarsand could be burned in a fluidized bed furnace just as it comes out of the ground but oil shale rock would have to be pulverized. Mining either as solid fuel would be cheaper than extracting oil from them and would not present nearly as many ecological problems in the regions where the deposits are found, Markert said.

Folks in western oil shale regions are concerned over the threat to their water supplies from the processes of extracting oil from shale rock locally.

Oil already is being produced in substantial quantity from Canadian tarsands but Markert said there is plenty of tarsand that could be mined and shipped as solid fuel.

The economic and technical feasibility of fluidized bed combustion for power plant boilers remains to be completely proven. The big problem, Markert said, is to learn all the variables so the temperature of the process can be rigidly controlled for long periods. A fluidized bed furnace has to operate at relatively low temperature and in a narrow range of temperature for long periods or else the limestone cannot absorb the sulfur. And there are some other technical problems.

At present it also appears that fluidized bed combustion is more suitable for small and medium-sized power plants than giant installations. The low temperature requires the use of more extensive boiler tubing to get the requisite amount of steam energy. So the control problem gets more difficult as the furnace and boiler get bigger.

Rusting Car Serves As Man's Home

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Less than a block from the multi-million dollar Indiana Exposition Center, the 1961 Valiant Harry Dawson uses as a home sits rusting away. Dawson, 72, reckons that he, like the wreck, is going nowhere.

The car has rotten tires, sloughed off fenders and a bumper that bends upward from the one point where it still is attached to the frame. It sits on a loading dock near the White River. Trash litters the inside of the car but some blankets and other bedclothes are in the back seat Dawson uses for a bed.

Since the car is on private property and Dawson has permission to be there, police leave him alone except to stop by sometimes to see that he's all right.

"I don't know how long I've been living here," he said, noting this was not the style of life he used to follow. Dawson said he once traveled the Midwest as a successful salesman of food products and had a house on the city's north side.

Now he lives in a car going nowhere and says, "I eat what I can," sometimes a couple of candy bars and some chewing gum are a day's food supply.

"Going from first class hotels and first class food to this is a change," he said grufly. "You can figure it out."

Dawson, who claims his trip downward started in 1952 when sinus problems led to an operation, said he didn't want to talk about what happened to his career. He did say he is an Army veteran and blames the Army and government bureaucracy for part of his troubles.

"I didn't get to sleep until dawn," he said. "I got sinus trouble that busted loose last night and made me bleed all night. It's the Army's responsibility, but the Army doesn't always do everything its supposed to."

He said it had been five years since he had seen a doctor about the condition, and "I don't even know if the doc is still alive. I haven't had the money to go."

Dawson said he knows he is entitled to Social Security payments, but scorns the bureaucracy that runs the system.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Saddle's On Wrong Hoss

IT IS SAFE to say this Democratic Congress never dreamed when Jimmy Carter was elected that one day he would line up with Richard Nixon against them—and in a case stemming from Watergate, no less.

Yet that is precisely what has happened as a result of Mr. Carter's determination to go to the mat with Congress over use of the legislative veto—a provision tacked onto many laws giving either or both houses, and sometimes just one committee, power to veto regulations or specific actions undertaken by the executive branch.

EVERY PRESIDENT since Herbert Hoover has complained about the legislative veto device so Carter, who insists it "is an unconstitutional intrusion upon the power and responsibility of the executive branch," has plenty of company.

But unlike his predecessors, Mr. Carter is trying to prod the Supreme Court into settling this long-standing squabble between Congress and the executive branch and he has chosen a case involving Richard Nixon's tapes and papers as the test vehicle.

His choice both astonished and irritated congressional Democrats, who regard it as further proof of the magnolia administration's lack of political sensitivity. Indeed, the Nixon case does seem a peculiar vehicle, legally as well as politically.

It stems from a law enacted in 1974 to assure that the government would keep control of the former President's tapes and documents and that the public would be given access to same.

Three times, the General Services Administration drafted proposed regulations for handling of the Nixon materials. Three times, those regulations were vetoed either by the House or Senate.

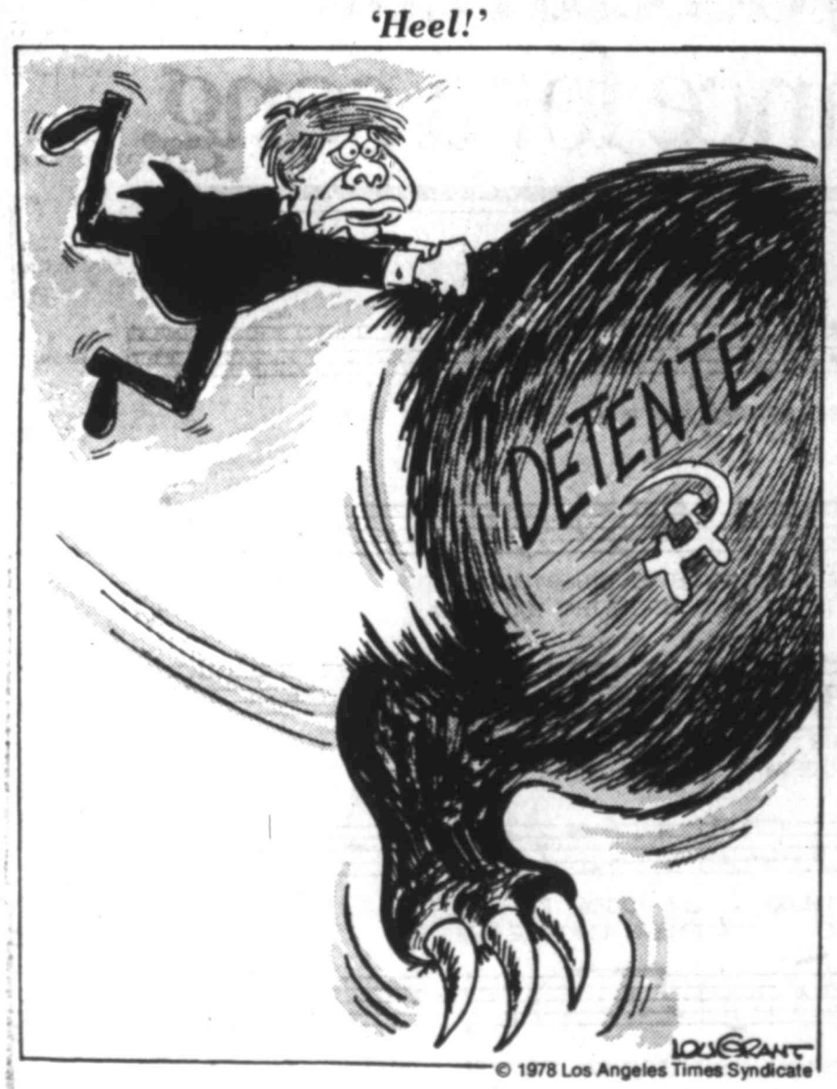
WHILE ALL this was going on, Nixon went to court seeking to have it declared unconstitutional. Among other things he cited the inclusion of the legislative veto as grounds for striking down the statute.

A year ago, however, the Supreme Court upheld the law, making no mention of the legislative veto provision. It was the third case in recent years to raise the constitutionality of the veto device, and the third time the Supreme Court has ducked the issue.

The whole matter now is back before a U.S. District Court in Washington. It's pretty evident from past cases that the Supreme Court has no desire to get caught in the middle between the President and Congress.

Not only has Mr. Carter antagonized Congress by choosing Nixon's case as the test of the legislative veto, but he's also managed to saddle up a horse that lost this race once and is an odds-on favorite to do so again.

'Heel!'



ONE MAN'S OPINION

Bakke To Basics

BECAUSE I was in Washington the day the Supreme Court handed down its Allan Bakke decision, I am of course unusually well qualified to interpret the meaning of it all.

It's the same as though you had been in New Jersey the day Edison invented the light bulb. You would have immediately grasped the significance and understood how it would work simply because of your nearness to the light.

I therefore say with complete assurance that lawyers all over the country are reading more —and less—into the Bakke decision than is there.

It will do for the legal profession what secondary recovery does for the oil business: Open up a whole new generation of income.

Stripped down to its essence, though, the Bakke decision is really quite simple. All the Supreme Court said is this:

"Use common sense."

A MEMBER OF a minority race can't just walk in and demand, or be given, a special privilege simply because of the color of his skin, the Court said on the one hand.

His race can be considered, though, the divided Court added, in school admissions programs—but only as "simply one element, to be weighed fairly against other elements."

This means that affirmative action programs are acceptable to help the racially disadvantaged compete but these programs can't be abused to deny any other individual (specifically, a white male) his own right to equal protection.

In view of the closeness of the vote and the emotionalism that surrounds the issue, this is a Solomon-like decision.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., in fact, was the swing vote in an otherwise 4-4 divided Court in getting racial quotas outlawed on the one hand and the concept of affirmative action preserved on the other.

THE IMPORTANCE of the decision can best be judged by considering what would have been the effect had the Supreme Court ruled against Bakke.

A white student who was denied admission to a California medical school because of his race, Bakke would have suffered personal discrimination had the school not been ordered to admit him on his merits.

There would have followed a field day of reverse discrimination in jobs and public programs as well as in education.

Justice Powell, the only member of the Supreme Court to go beyond the 1964 Civil Rights Act and cite the Constitution, put it this way:

"Preferring members of one group for no reason other than race or ethnic origin is discrimination for its own sake. This the Constitution forbids."

"Societal discrimination," he added, "does not justify a classification that imposes disadvantages upon persons like respondent (Bakke), who bear no responsibility for whatever harm the beneficiaries of the special admissions program are thought to have suffered."

A special admissions program can be justified, Powell wrote, only if it "treats each applicant as an individual" and makes race only one of several factors to be considered.

"Such qualities could include exceptional personal talents, unique work or service experience, leadership potential, maturity, demonstrated compassion, a history of overcoming disadvantage, ability to communicate with the poor or other qualifications deemed important," Powell said, "...without the factor of race being decisive."

Critics say this invites hypocrisy in affirmative action programs but what it does is puts blacks and browns on equal footing with whites.

It opens the door of opportunity to them without tainting them forever with a suspicion that they might not have made it if they hadn't been given preferential treatment because of their race.

THE BAKKE DECISION, then, marks a turning point. It puts the civil rights movement on sounder footing.

It guarantees that the concept of equality won't be destroyed in the process of securing it for those who have suffered from discrimination in the past.

True, the decision invites further litigation to define the limits to be put on affirmative action programs but that is not unusual. The original school desegregation case of 1954 still is being tested constantly.

The importance of Bakke is that it puts the Supreme Court on record that racial quotas and "goals" are a semantic distinction meaning the same thing and that such quotas and goals are in violation of the Civil Rights Act.

Justice Powell, writing for himself, put it this way: "The guarantee of equal protection cannot mean one thing when applied to one individual and something else when applied to a person of another color."

That, I predict, points the direction in which the Bakke decision will lead the country.

Paul Scott:

Ray Has Way To Have His Say

WASHINGTON—James Earl Ray, the convicted killer of Dr. Martin Luther King, is going to finally get his chance to tell his story over nationwide TV and radio—that is if he still wants the national forum.

The House Select Committee on Assassination is offering Ray the top billing in five days of public hearings set to begin Aug. 14 into the King assassination and the handling of its investigation by the FBI and local and state law enforcement officials in Tennessee.

Since his public admission of guilt and life sentencing in a Tennessee State Court, Ray personally has hinted in letters to members of Congress, including Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, that others were involved in the King assassination.

WHEN CONTACTED in the past, however, Ray has refused to testify unless allowed to come to Washington and appear publicly before a Senate or House Committee without having first to reveal his proposed testimony in advance of the hearing.

With no way to check out the accuracy of what Ray might say in advance of his public appearance, members of Congress including Eastland have shied away from giving the convicted killer a national forum.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the Select Committee on assassinations, has now sent word to Ray that he can testify on his terms. Although committee investigators have questioned Ray in his prison cell, they still don't have any idea of what he will say.

THE COMMITTEE'S invitation to Ray was indicated in a memorandum which Stokes is circulating to members of Congress. In detailing plans for a series of public hearings in the fall, Stokes reported:

"The schedule now contemplates holding approximately 20 days of hearings into each assassination. The first five days of the public hearings planned are on the assassination of Dr. King...

"The hearings will be concerned with Dr. King's activities in Memphis in 1968 his assassination and the involvement, if any, of Mr. James Earl Ray in the assassination. An effort will be made to secure the testimony of Mr. Ray in public sessions at that time. Other hearings will involve the assassination of President John Kennedy."

By including the words "if any" in the sentence regarding the involvement of Ray in the assassination, Stokes has raised speculation that his committee may be planning to show that others were responsible for the killing of King.

The Stokes Committee has scheduled 18 days of public hearings in September to consider evidence uncovered in the assassination of the late President Kennedy.

While Stokes isn't saying anything publicly, other committee members reveal privately that none of the new information obtained by their staff so far upsets the Warren Commission's finding that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin.

The investigations of both the Kennedy and King assassinations by the Stokes Committee is expected to be completed by the end of the year. A final report is expected to be made to the full Congress early in 1978.

James Earl Ray's public testimony could be a major factor in shaping both the tone and content of the committee's final report on the assassination of King.

Slips Aren't Showing In Top Sales, Girls

NOTE: SCHIEFFELIN & Co., the nation's largest privately owned wine importer, employs a woman as brand manager for its prestigious Marquis de Coulaine wine.

NOTE: Merrill Lynch, the largest financial services company in the U.S., is now actively recruiting women brokers in all its 300 branches across the nation.

NOTE: Pitney Bowes, one of the country's top manufacturers of business systems and mailing equipment, reports that today 11.1 percent of its 2,700-person sales force is female, up from a mere 3.4 percent as recently as 1974.

IF YOU ARE A career-oriented woman, concentrate as never before on sales as your entry into the business community, for today, the traditional roles for women in sales (in real estate, in retail stores) have been vastly expanded.

You are just as likely to be selling manufactured and wholesale merchandise, stocks and bonds, consumer goods and consumer services.

And while we, the women, have a long way to go before we come even near to parity, our progress is indisputable.

Are you the right person for sales? Honest answers to the following questions will give you the guidance you seek.

* CAN YOU HANDLE rejection, cope with occasional "dry spells"?

"You must be able to handle the inevitable no and keep yourself going when sales aren't good," advises Deborah Bynum a Pitney Bowes sales representative.

"Women must be able to accept criticism and not take it as a personal defeat," adds Judy Werbitt, a former teacher who has been a Merrill Lynch stockbroker since 1974.

* Can you work effectively without supervision, arrange your own schedules, make your own customer calls?

"I like being in business for myself," Bynum volunteers. Another former schoolteacher, she says she sees "no limitation to my career as I did when I was a teacher in the New York City school system."

* Can you fit into an area that interests you? Do you feel comfortable about the products and the company that makes them?

"The growth area is definitely marketing," insists Margaret Stern, brand manager for Marquis de Goulaine wine. "I would encourage women to get solid marketing skills before going into the sales end."

* CAN YOU HANDLE whatever travel may be required? Are there adequate travel allowances for you? How will your travel affect your family relationships?

If you are deeply concerned about your earnings potential, the only square answer is that it can vary widely.

At Pitney Bowes, for instance, if you are a sales representative and you meet your assigned quota, you can earn in excess of $20,000 per year. The company also will pay you a salary during your training period.

At Merrill Lynch, Judy Werbitt sees "no limit on my potential. I enjoy sales, I set my own goals, provide my own incentives."

While few companies require a college degree, many women who are successful in selling urge you to go to college.

"Get a bachelor of arts degree and start as a salesperson with a distributing house," Stern says. "Then move over to the importing firm. Along the way, gather as much knowledge as you can about wines."

"I WOULD SUGGEST that women who want to go into sales should study business administration.

"This can help them begin their sales careers on an equal footing with their male compatriots," Lillian Boncich, another Pitney Bowes sales representative, declares in obvious agreement about the value of college.

For more information on sales careers for women, write to the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20210, or to Catalyst, 14 East 60th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Carter's Mad At Silk Hatters

WASHINGTON—At his June 26 press conference, President Carter delivered an opening statement that neatly combined a little demagoguery, a little populism, and some old-line liberalism. In the process, he revealed something of himself.

The President's purpose was to denounce proposals now pending in the House to cut the tax on capital gains.

In one version, sponsored by Wisconsin's William Steiger, the present 49 percent would be reduced to 25 percent; in another version, sponsored by Oklahoma's James R. Jones, the rate would drop to 35 percent.

Carter attacked both of them.

Eighty percent of the benefits, Carter complained, would go to those taxpayers with earnings of more than $100,000 a year. Three thousand millionaires, he said, would get tax reductions averaging $214,000.

NEITHER HE NOR the American people would tolerate a plan that provides huge tax windfalls for millionaires and two bits for the average American. And he added:

"That underestimates the intelligence of the American people."

Later on in the press conference, responding to questions, he again lashed out at "very rich people" and "very wealthy taxpayers." He was indulging himself in an absolutely no-risk exercise, attacking millionaires.

He was echoing an American political tradition that goes back to Teddy Roosevelt's indictment of "malefactors of great wealth," and to William Jennings Bryan and the "cross of gold."

THE PRESIDENT'S populist rhetoric opened a small window upon his philosophical heart of hearts. Outwardly Carter often exhibits a stout conservatism.

Down inside, seldom revealed, is the liberal's conviction that if money is to be spent, the government should spend it.

That is what this controversy over capital gains is all about. The Steiger bill would cost the Treasury perhaps $2 billion in fiscal '79, the Jones bill maybe $1.1 billion.

After that, because of the economic activity generated by additional capital, it is anybody's guess. It is a highly plausible theory that within a couple of years, the temporary loss in tax revenues would be more than offset by gains.

What of these "huge windfalls" to the very rich?

Carter, who is very nearly a millionaire himself, knows perfectly well that the tax savings would be reinvested.

WHAT ELSE IS THE millionaire to do with his $214,000? Hide it under his mattress? Put it in a cookie jar or coffee can? Send it to Switzerland and pay the Swiss to keep it on ice? Nonsense.

I have known dozens of millionaires and I never met a mattress millionaire yet.

Reduction of the capital gains tax would have the effect of releasing hundreds of millions of dollars for investment in the private sector.

Why not? This was the sourpussed complaint of Yale University against the Korean student's casino ball. It did not occur to Yale that the student's $45,000 would benefit cooks, waiters, busboys, musicians, bartenders, the suppliers of lobster and beef and booze.

CARTER IS EQUALLY obtuse, or hostile, in the matter of reducing the tax on capital gains. What rankles Our Leader is that he couldn't spend the money on federal programs; the filthy rich would spend or invest the savings to suit themselves.

Carter wants no part of tax reductions that would insult the intelligence of the people. He implied a veto if Steiger or Jones should pass.

But it is quite possible that the American people understand the nature of equity capital better than Carter supposes.

The people want jobs; the people want to see money changing hands; and the people increasingly resent government's pervasive role in our economic life.

My guess is that the people enjoy a little snowball demagoguery now and then; it keeps the juices flowing. But the people know kid stuff when they see it, and that's what Carter fed them.

Summit Meeting May Help U.S. Pocketbooks

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although Americans might not be aware of it for awhile, the economic summit conference President Carter attends in Germany this weekend could help put money in everybody's pocket — or take it out.

A successful summit, for example, could:

— Halt the slide in the value of the dollar, thereby putting a stop to the upward price spiral of such imported goods as Japanese-made appliances and automobiles.

— Help prevent a new recession and an increase in unemployment in the United States by strengthening the overall world economy.

— Contribute to an increase in U.S. energy prices, something the Carter administration wants in order to reduce oil imports.

An unsuccessful summit could have the opposite effect, and most certainly would increase the odds of a recession.

The economic summit, the fourth in four years, will be held in Bonn July 16-17. Besides Carter, others attending will be the leaders of France, Great Britain, Germany, Japan, Italy and Canada.

Here are some questions and answers prepared by The Associated Press to help explain why the Bonn summit is being held — and what people should and should not expect expect from it:

A: There is no guarantee it can prevent one, but it can reduce the chances of a recession. And if one does occur, a successful summit can soften the blow.

It could do this if the leaders of the seven nations agree to coordinate their economic policies so those countries that have room to grow economically do so, thus helping those who need to slow their economies.

Q: What countries are you talking about?

A: The Carter administration would like to see Japan and Germany do much more to stimulate economic growth than they have been doing. Both countries have large trade surpluses, and both have fallen short of their own growth targets. And their inflation is low; in Germany, for example, prices are increasing only about 2.5 percent a year.

The United States, on the other hand, is suffering from a serious inflation rate — more than 10 percent a year at its present pace — and inflation appears to be worsening. There is general agreement that Carter needs to slow the economy to help relieve pressures on prices.

Q: How would it help the United States if Japan and Germany expand their economies?

A: It is hoped they will increase their imports from the United States and other countries, which would create more jobs in exporting countries. It might also cause them to export less by increasing demand at home, which would mean their goods wouldn't be competing so much with U.S. products.

If it all works as the Carter administration wants, the nation's export industries would take up the employment slack that might be created by slower economic growth at home.

Q: How will the dollar be influenced by the summit?

A: In two ways. If Japan and Germany speed up their economies, it should reduce their trade surpluses, which would help the dollar. If the summit induces Congress into passing Carter's energy legislation, which would increase oil prices, that might also help.

The decline in the dollar has been blamed both on the surpluses of other nations and on this country's huge trade deficits. Since oil imports are a major factor in the U.S. trade deficit, an increase in energy prices should reduce imports — and the trade deficit.

The dollar's decline has been greatest against the currencies of countries with the largest trade surpluses. It has dropped about 26 percent in value against the Japanese yen and 20 percent against the German mark in recent months.

Q: How can the summit help get the energy bill through Congress? It doesn't have any authority over Congress, does it?

A: Of course not. Congress is free to go its own way, whatever the summit leaders decide. However, Carter has been counting on getting a psychological push for the legislation from the summit, since leaders of other nations say the lack of a tough energy program in the United States is causing everybody problems.

There is reason to believe Congress would look favorably on faster economic growth by Germany and Japan, so Carter may try to strike a deal — trading approval of the energy legislation for a speed-up in economic growth by those countries — and hope Congress would go along.

Q: How can the summit help agricultural exports?

A: Negotiations at Geneva on a new world trade agreement are hung up over the refusal by Europe and Japan to lower barriers to imports of U.S. farm products. Everybody considers the trade agreement important, and U.S. negotiators hope they can achieve a breakthrough on the farm question at the summit.

Q: How will we know whether the summit is successful? Those fancy communiques don't always mean much, do they?

A: That's true. A lot will be written about the summit communique, but Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal says the true test of the summit will be in whether it influences economic policies in the year that follows.

Q: Were the three earlier summits successful?

A. Tangible results from the French, Puerto Rican and English summits were skimpy. France produced an agreement for flexible currency exchange rates, and the London summit succeeded in getting the Geneva trade negotiations off dead center.

But U.S. officials say the meetings are valuable in giving each leader an insight into the problems and priorities of the others, whether anything else is accomplished or not.

Army Files Charges In Two Deaths

FORT JACKSON, S.C. (UPI) — Two Army drill instructors have been charged with causing the deaths of two recruits at the sprawling Fort Jackson basic training base last month, and the army says a full investigation is now under way.

The Army announced Monday that Sgt. Willie L. Alexander and Sgt. 1st Class Lawrence Chapman Jr. were charged with dereliction of duty, involuntary manslaughter and maltreatment of the teen-aged recruits, who died of cardiac arrest due to heat stroke on their first day of basic training June 29.

Col. James G. Garner, head of the Judge Advocate's office at Fort Jackson, said the two are charged with "giving excessively strenuous and prolonged exercise to trainees contrary to the policy of Fort Jackson. It is the policy at Fort Jackson not to give physical training during periods of extreme heat."

The two recruits, Pvt. Wayne Krassow, 18, of Cygnet, Ohio, and Pvt. Lester Watts, 18, of York, S.C., both collapsed the evening of June 29. Temperatures that day had risen to the upper 90s.

Both were assigned to Company A, 3rd Battalion, of the First Training Brigade, and Garner said both drill instructors were charged in both deaths.

As a result of the preliminary investigation, Garner said a full court-martial has been recommended. That decision will be made after a formal investigation, which Garner likened to a civilian grand jury proceeding, currently underway.

Officials refused to discuss the precise physical training experienced by the recruits the day they collapsed.

"In order to assure those men a fair judicial process, we cannot comment on this investigation," Garner said. "We realize the public is looking to Fort Jackson for the answers — there is no coverup, and the facts will come out."

The Charlotte Observer quoted four recruits in its Monday editions as saying the platoon members were forced to run several hundred yards in front of their barracks with 75-pound to 100-pound duffel bags at about 3:30 p.m. on the day of the deaths.

The observer quoted one recruit as saying, "It like near killed all of us it was so hot."

LEGION RETURNS — Christian Sandstrom of Philadelphia displays the programs to be used at this week's Pennsylvania American Legion convention in Philadelphia. Legionnaires Return To Philadelphia

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — William Stokes spent 41 days in a hospital fighting Legionnaire's Disease which he got while attending the 1976 convention of the Pennsylvania American Legion here.

The mysterious germ killed 29 people, sickened 150 others, and frightened the nation. But now Stokes, who lost his right leg when he stepped on a World War II land mine, is coming back to Philadelphia for another state Legion convention that starts today — and isn't afraid at all.

"I don't think it's going to happen again," he said, laughing, during a telephone interview from his home in Jeannette, about 40 miles east of Pittsburgh.

The deadly outbreak caused the biggest germ hunt in the nation's medical history, and also forced the closing of the world-famous Bellevue-Stratford, where the Legion activities had been centered. The sickness hit after the convention was over.

More than 15,000 Legionnaires and their wives return for the first time here and Adjutant General Edward Hoak, said: "We don't have any apprehension about coming back to Philadelphia."

Last year the Legion met in Pittsburgh. The state's two biggest cities are the only ones with hotel space available for the convention, and they alternate each year.

"We're looking for no problems at all, and I don't think there's anybody who is nervous about it," Hoak said, although he acknowledged that security would be strict at the Sheraton hotel.

"Everybody must show a delegate card to get into meetings," he said, because many still believe the pneumonia-like bug may have been deliberately planted in the food or water, or spread through the air conditioning ducts.

The federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, which mobilized the medical detectives, said it is sure the disease is caused by a bacterium and that it can be treated effectively by an antibiotic called erythomych. But the scientists have failed so far to come up with a quick diagnosis to prevent the death of 15 percent to 20 percent of its victims.

Since the Philadelphia outbreak the center has found 258 isolated cases in 37 states, and believes the so-called Legionnaires' germ may be the cause of 40,000 undiagnosed pneumonia cases annually.

"I'm sure the Legionnaires are going to look carefully at what they eat or drink, especially in the hospitality rooms," Hoak said.

To James E. Flowers, who spent 13 days in intensive care and lost a close friend to the disease, "it seems like it never happened."

"I can't quite put it into words," Flowers said when contacted in Latrobe. "It's like a nightmare, something you want to forget."

About the convention? "I think it will be like any other."

Which means, of course, a lot of fun-making and drinking, a lot of politicking and speechmaking, a whole batch of resolutions designed to make life a little more enjoyable for America's veterans, and a big five-hour parade to wind up the four-day festivities.

"I'm going to have a good time," Stokes said. "I figured it was just one of those things."

What bothers Stokes, though, is that "when anybody gets sick today, and they can't explain it, they call it Legionnaire's Disease."

Congress' ERA Backers Drop Plans For Vote On Extention

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite their massive weekend rally at the Capitol and their persistent pleas to congressmen, backers of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment are coming up short in their struggle for a seven-year extension of the life of the proposal.

Congressional supporters of the ERA had intended to bring the subject before the House Judiciary Committee for a vote today, but scrapped plans when it became clear they lack the votes.

Well-placed congressional sources concede privately it appears unlikely they ever will be able to get a majority of the 34-member committee to agree to the proposed seven-year extension without changes.

As a result, current efforts appear aimed at assembling a majority of committee members behind a compromise four-year extension that the leaders of women's groups will grudgingly accept.

"That would not be a retreat," said one member of Congress who favors the extension.

Thirty-five states have ratified the proposed ERA, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex. Under current law, ratification by three more states is required by next March 22 if the proposal is to become part of the Constitution.

With the deadline only 8½ months away, ERA backers are asking Congress to give states until 1986 to act.

A crowd estimated at 55,000 to 100,000 marched in Washington on Sunday to dramatize their plea, capping the day with a rally at the Capitol.

Backers of the ERA say as many as 5,000 people stayed in Washington on Monday to lobby their congressmen.

Publicly, top leaders of the women's movement as well as congressional backers say they still hope to win approval for the seven-year extension.

And one woman, Allie Hixson of Greensburg, Ky., said, "I don't think any reasonable man will want to go down in history as the man who stood between women and the Constitution."

But one source said Monday a proposal for a seven-year extension would fail by four or five votes in the House committee, and a vote on a four-year extension would result in a tie.

Other proposed changes would enable states that already have ratified the ERA to rescind their approval. Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., a member of the House Judiciary Committee, announced plans Monday to push such a proposal when the panel considers the question.

ERA backers say they will fight it.

Three states — Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska — have voted to rescind their earlier approval of the proposed amendment, but the legality of their action is in dispute.

In the Senate, meanwhile, no action is expected on the measure until the House committee votes.

Investigators Use Recording

MIAMI (AP) — Authorities searching for a four-engine cargo plane apparently stolen from Miami International Airport say they will try to identify a taped voice in an effort to learn who took it.

Metro Detective Richard Cataldo said Monday that voice communications between the unknown pilot and the control tower taped when the DC-6 took off from the airport early Sunday will be studied in hopes someone will recognize the pilot.

The converted Navy C-118, still wearing white and gray paint scheme, had about 700 gallons of fuel aboard when it was stolen, authorities said. The plane, with civilian registration N44670, is owned by Cliff Petit of Ligon Air in Indiana and leased to Harry Woods for a Miami-Dominican Republic cargo route.

Cataldo theorized the pilot might have made a short flight to refuel before continuing.

Although the plane is not the type generally used to import illegal drugs, authorities have not ruled out that possibility. The FBI and the Drug Enforcement Administration were notified and were assisting in the case.

Cataldo said, "There are a lot of people in this area checked out for this type of aircraft."

IN ROCKEFELLER AUTO ACCIDENT — The wrecks of two of the three automobiles involved in an accident that killed John D. Three-Car Wreck Kills John D. Rockefeller III

By HENRIETTA LEITH

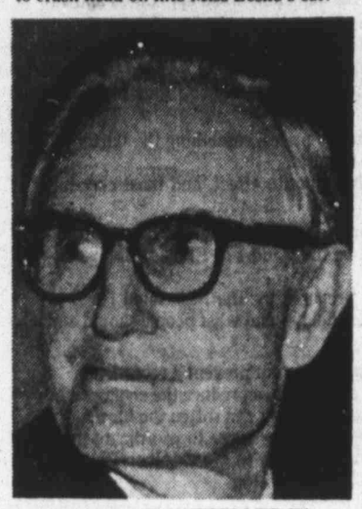
POCANTICO HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — John Davison Rockefeller III, the quiet philanthropist who busied himself with Asia, population control and the performing arts while his brothers and son were making names in business and politics, was killed in a three-car crash on a curvy rural road.

Rockefeller, 72, died instantly Monday in the accident about a mile from the Rockefeller Pocantico Hills compound in Westchester County about 30 miles north of Manhattan, police said.

He was a grandson of John D. Rockefeller, the oil magnate who built the family fortune, brother of former Vice President and New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, and father of John D. Rockefeller IV, the governor of West Virginia.

Police said Rockefeller was in a 1965 Mustang driven by his secretary, 38-year-old Monica Lesko, when the crash occurred on a winding two-lane road about 6 p.m.

Police said a car driven by David Low, 16, of nearby Briarcliff Manor swung wide on a curve and sideswiped a third car, then plunged across the center line to crash head-on into Miss Lesko's car.



JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER III

Low, a high school senior who was taking driver's education this summer, was also killed. Miss Lesko was in fair condition in the intensive care unit of a hospital. A woman driving the third car was listed in good condition.

Rockefeller's son was in Washington when he learned of his father's death. He joined his mother, Blanchette, at the family compound.

Rockefeller was the eldest of the five sons of John D. Rockefeller Jr. Winthrop, who became governor of Arkansas, died of cancer in 1973, and their only sister and eldest child in the family, Abby Rockefeller Mauze, died three years ago, also of cancer.

While Nelson and Winthrop devoted themselves to politics, brother Laurance concentrated on conservation and business, including resorts in the Virgin Islands and Wyoming, and David became president and chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, third largest bank in the United States.

But the brother who carried the name synonomous with fabulous wealth sought neither more wealth nor power, and spent his life on such pursuits as friendship with Asia, population control, arts in education, and, finally, the performing arts.

In 1956, when the sprawling Lincoln Center, home of the Metropolitan Opera, the New York Philharmonic and many other theater and musical groups, was in the planning stages, Rockefeller was asked why he was getting involved in "show biz."

He replied that his travels had led him to believe "in art, and the exchange of art, as vital in helping international understanding," and he thought it was important to offset the belief among people of other countries "that the emphasis in our country is on the material side."

Born in New York City, Rockefeller attended the Browning and Loomis prep schools before going to Princeton, where he was voted "most likely to succeed" by his 1929 graduating class.

In 1931 he was named a trustee of the Rockefeller Foundation, set up by his grandfather in 1913 "to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world," and in 1952 he succeeded John Foster Dulles as chairman of the foundation when Dulles was named secretary of state by President Dwight Eisenhower.

In the same year, Rockefeller was elected president of the Japan Society and went to Japan to discuss setting up an international cultural exchange center in Tokyo.

Rockefeller's interest in Asia also led to the establishment of the Asian Society and its headquarters in New York. Asia House, for further cultural exchange. His own foundation, the JDR III Fund, concerned itself primarily with Asian culture.

His concern over population problems led him to help set up the Population Council and serve as its chairman and to get the signatures of 30 world leaders on a Statement on Population presented to the United Nations in 1967.

Rockefeller was married in 1932 to Blanchette Ferry Hooker, a Vassar graduate whom he met while they were both doing social work with the poor and young delinquents in New York City.

In addition to his wife and son, he is survived by three daughters, Sandra Rockefeller, Hope Aldrich, and Mrs. Mark Dayton, and six grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete, a family spokesman said.

Rockefellers' Impact Involves More Than Wealth

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rockefellers, more than a family of mere multimillionaires, have helped shape American life since the turn of the century in education and the arts, urban development and environmental conservation, and politics.

The patriarch, John Davison Rockefeller, was born in 1839 in Richford, N.Y., the son of a small trader, and by age 19 had established his first partnership in Cleveland, in produce and commission.

A second firm, Andrews, Clark & Co., was formed in 1863 for a sideline business — oil refining, which became the cornerstone of the Rockefeller fortune.

During the 1860s Rockefeller and his brother built two oil refineries in Cleveland, and by 1870 the firm was organized as the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, with John D. Rockefeller as president.

The healthy oil firm prospered, using mergers, favorable railroad rates, rebates and other devices to obtain 95 percent of the oil refining business in the country by 1882. It also had interests in iron mines, lumber, manufacturing, transportation and other businesses.

Rockefeller's business methods were not illegal at the time, but after Congress passed the Sherman Antitrust Act, his firm, then known as the Standard Oil trust, was challenged in court. The supreme court of Ohio declared the trust illegal in 1899, and it was then placed under a holding company, Standard Oil of New Jersey, which was declared illegal by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1911.

In the meantime, Rockefeller had been turning over most of his business affairs to his only son, John D. Rockefeller Jr., and had moved the family back to New York, where its political influence has remained strong all this century. The senior Rockefeller established the current family estate, Pocantico Hills, near Tarrytown, a northern suburb of New York City.

When he died at his winter home in Ormond Beach, Fla., in 1937, Rockefeller had a personal estate estimated at $25 million, even after giving away an estimated $530 million for social causes and leaving untold millions in trusts for his children and other relatives.

Much of the children's trusts consisted of stock in Standard Oil. Upon his death, Rockefeller held only one share, worth $43.94, in the firm that made him the richest man of his day.

John D. Rockefeller Jr., who lived from 1874 to 1960, entrenched the family fortune in most of the business and philanthropic investments that have lasted to this day. Among them are:

—Rockefeller Center, the 18-skyscraper mid-Manhattan business and office development where the family has its offices.

—A $5 million gift to help build the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, New York's showcase theater for opera and ballet.

—A $10 million gift of the Cloisters, a branch of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art featuring Medieval European art, most of it donated by the family.

—Humboldt State Park in California, donated to the state to preserve its redwood trees.

—About 15,000 acres of sugar pines in Yosemite, donated to the federal government for the national park there.

—Controlling interest in Chase Manhattan Bank, the country's third largest bank.

John D. Rockefeller Jr. was the father of the current generation of Rockefeller businessmen — the five brothers who have shared in controlling the family millions with their older sister, Abby, who died three years ago.

The oldest son, John D. Rockefeller III, 72, the least publicized of the five, was killed in an auto accident Monday.

His son, John D. Rockefeller IV, announced the death. "Jay" Rockefeller has been governor of West Virginia since 1971. He decided in 1966, during his first campaign for the state legislature, to break the Republican family tradition and enroll as a Democrat.

The second of the five Rockefeller brothers, Nelson, 70, was the leading politician, upsetting incumbent New York Gov. W. Averell Hartiman, also a millionaire, in a re-election bid in 1958. Nelson won four elections for governor, using the state's non-election years of 1964 and 1968 in futile attempts to win the Republican nomination for president.

He retired in 1973, saying he was through with political office, but Gerald Ford, after taking over the presidency from the disgraced Richard Nixon, persuaded Nelson Rockefeller to become an appointed vice president. Rockefeller later announced he would not be a candidate for a full term as vice president.

The third brother, Laurance, 68, made his career in philanthropies, especially conservation efforts, and as a businessman in aviation. Among his contributions was 34,000 acres of mountain valley land at Jackson Hole, near the Grand Teton peaks in Wyoming, to the federal government.

Among Laurance's early aviation investments were refinancing Eddie Rickenbacker's fledgling Eastern Air Lines, now one of the country's major carriers, and financing of McDonnell Aircraft Corp., now a major military plane producer. Later investments were made in nuclear power, space and other technical fields.

Winthrop Rockefeller, following the example of his older brother Nelson, entered politics late in life in Arkansas, where he moved after leaving the Army following World War II.

In 1964, he campaigned for governor of Arkansas, which previously had elected only two Republican governors since Reconstruction. In this election, too, the Democrat won, but Rockefeller was back in 1966 and was victorious, remaining in office until 1970. He died in 1973.

The youngest of the five Rockefeller brothers is David, 63, who has been president and chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank since 1960.

Solon Deplores Data Leaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Ohio senator says the oil industry stands to make millions of dollars by getting advance word on government regulations while consumer groups lack access to the same data.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said at a Senate Energy Committee hearing Monday that Energy Department "internal documents are being leaked routinely to the oil industry."

Metzenbaum presided Monday over a committee session studying leaks to the American Petroleum Institute, an oil industry trade group.

Four department employees admitted to the senators that they leaked information to the institute, but denied doing anything illegal.

"It was unprofessional and unethical," one of the four, Scott Bush, told the committee.

Bush, deputy assistant administrator for regulations, said as a result of the controversy, procedures at the Energy Department have been tightened.

In a memo to his superiors and in testimony to the committee last month, John Iannone of API said he was privy to inside department information.

He listed names of a number of his governent contacts whom he said gave him information, including Bush; Peter Holihan, an industry specialist; and another department official, Gerald Emmer.

All three admitted providing information to the institute, as did Charles Perry, a petroleum engineer for the department.

President Keeps Eye On Weather

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, like a lot of his predecessors, keeps a close eye on the weather forecasts.

He has the military office provide him with a five-day weather forecast, not just for Washington, but also for Plains, Ga., and Camp David, Md.

The same was true of John Kennedy, who had weekend forecasts for Hyannisport, Mass., and Palm Beach, Fla.; Lyndon Johnson got the Texas Hill Country forecasts; and Richard Nixon was clued in on the weather at Key Biscayne, Fla., for short hauls, and San Clemente, Calif., for longer stays.

Trickster Dick Meets RN

Political prankster Dick Tuck, now writing for New York Magazine, showed up in Hyden, Ky., to cover former President Nixon's triumphant return to the public spotlight.

Tuck made his fame in the 1960 presidential campaign harassing Nixon on behalf of John Kennedy's candidacy. The Nixon team did not forget, and later said many of their "tricks" in 1972 were in the same vein as Tuck's operation.

But Nixon apparently is a forgiving soul. During his 24-hour visit to Kentucky, he gave Tuck an interview and also autographed his "RN" memoirs for Tuck, signing the book: "To Dick Tuck — love — Richard Nixon."

Tuck, who seemed quite enthralled with Nixon, who so flattered he told everybody he could about it.

The 'Prying' Press

Sometimes White House reporters wonder what it's all about. President Carter has a staff that is zealous in the protection of his so-called privacy.

Every move by the press is orchestrated from Press Secretary Jody Powell's office so the impromptu is rare, and Carter is protected at all times from the "prying" press.

But in an interview with a group of editors, Carter said he did not object to constant press coverage. Actually, it is never constant. The president can slip out of the White House any time he chooses without being covered, and he has on occasion.

Carter said he thought the American people sense a president "does get tired, that I need just as must recreation now — fishing, playing tennis, walking alone in the woods, being with my family — as I did when I was a farmer. We do have adequate privacy here in the White House when we want it, and at Camp David when we want it.

"I don't get much privacy at home in Plains and when I go on vacation, which I obviously haven't tried yet, we don't get as much privacy."

The president said he did not "deplore or regret the attention focused on me as an actual interest on the part of the American people."

"My private family life is completely adequate," he said.

Carter and his family are close, and they are an entity in themselves. If they entertain close friends, the press rarely knows about it. Most of their outside social life follows the demands of protocol.

John Kennedy said the White House is not a place to make new friends — and that seems to apply to the Carters.

No Opinion On Opinions

The White House has an interesting way of handling the public opinion polls that are published. The press office never comments on them. Lately they have not been comforting.

When asked recently, Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum said, "I think we will maintain our fairly consistent record of not having comments on the individual polls."

New Oxford Book Causes Alarm

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Since 1585 the Oxford University Press has watched over literary tastes and the mother tongue with the fastidious concern of track stewards maintaining proper dress and decorum in the royal enclosure at Ascot.

Mulligan's Stew

Fancy my shock then, the other day, when opening at random a volume of poetry from this prestigious house, the last bulwark against vulgarity, and finding a poem with the opening line:

"A Lesbian girl of Khartoum..."

And right next to it another that began:

"A vice most obscene and unsavoury Holds the Bishop of Balham in slavery..."

Even that refined British spelling of unsavory could not contain my utter disbelief at the source of such ribaldry, until I realized that this was the "New Oxford Book of English Light Verse," chosen and edited by Kingsley Amis, a learned and witty gentleman who writes mystery stories on the sly.

Amis first burst forth on the British literary scene, like fireworks over the House of Parliament, with the publication in 1954 of "Lucky Jim," an acidly funny novel that since has been followed by two dozen volumes of fiction, verse and criticism. Now comes this marvelous compendium of comic stanzas that is not so much a sequel to The Oxford Book of Light Verse selected by W. H. Auden in 1938 as a direct contradiction of it.

Auden in those days was freighted with a political philosophy that governed his choice of what was light verse along lines of what was socially significant and accessible to a proletarian audience. Amis aims lower, toward the belly laugh, which is where light verse belongs, and scores higher, although he admits choosing his handful of naughty limericks "with reluctance."

Noel Coward and Edward Lear are here side by side splitting with Thomas Hardy, T. S. Eliot; Samuel Johnson and Lord Byron.

Parody, satire, nonsense rhymes, even a few witty lines from the colonies find their place, although more space is given to making fun of American poets than quoting many of them.

There is Lewis Carroll's devastating parody of Longfellow's "Hiawatha," with the hapless brave portrayed as a photographer taking a family picture in that familiar sing-song meter:

"From his shoulder Hiawatha

But strangely, erroneously, another deft knock at Longfellow is entitled "After Emerson":

"Lives of great men all remind us
As we o'er their pages turn
That we too may leave behind us
Letters that we ought to burn."

"Gods chase
Round vase.
What say?
What play?
Don't know.
Nice, though."

Amis manages to ressurrect a poem I have been hunting for since high school days, the one that begins, "An Austrian army awfully array'd, Boldly by battery besieged Belgrade" and continues all the way through the alphabet without breaking step to its conclusion:

Zeno's, Zimmermann's, Zoroaster's zeal,
Again attract; arts against arms appeal!"

This sort of thing, Amis points out in his introduction, makes much more stringent demands on the writer's technique than so called "high" or classic verse because it admits of fewer mistakes. "A concert pianist is allowed a wrong note here and there;" notes the editor, "a juggler is not allowed to drop a plate."

Few plates or clinkers are dropped in this sunny anthology, where even Benjamin Jowett, the great Oxford Greek scholar and vice chancellor, is pelted on his pedestal:

"First come I; my name is Jowett.
There's no knowledge but I know it.
I am master of this college:
What I don't know isn't knowledge."

We cling to the belief that the English, especially the Victorians, are a prudish lot with no sense of humor, but Lewis Carroll, who among many other delights wrote "Twinkle, twinkle, little bat" and made a laughing stock of the poet laureate, Robert Southey, with his "You are old, Father William," was busy photographing naked pre-pubescent little girls long before Vladimiar Nabokov discovered "Lolita."

And A. E. Houseman, when not engaged in Shropshire lyrics, could be droll on a subject that today would bring the women's libbers down on his neck:

"When Adam day by day
Woke up in Paradise
He used to say
'O this is very nice.'
But Even from scenes of bliss
Transported him for life
The more I think of this
The more I beat my wife."

The current poet laureate, Sir John Betjeman, is a master of light verse. Witness the lady's prayer he overheard in Westminster Abbey during the blitz:

"Gracious Lord, oh bomb the Germans.
Spare their women for Thy Sake
And if that is not too easy
We will pardon Thy Mistake.
But gracious Lord, whate'er shall be,
Don't let anyone bomb me."

There'll always be an England and an English literature as long as the Oxford University Press can wrinkle its high brows into a grin configuration and allow the poets to discourse learnedly on the besetting sin of the Bishop of Balham.

AROUND THE CAPITOL

Proxmire, Burns Become Poetic

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wrote Arthur Burns of William Proxmire:

"I wonder about Prox
"The Capitol's wily fox.
"Why does he roar
"When others snore."

Wrote William Proxmire of Arthur Burns:

"We miss his human and happy gripe,
"In fact we even miss his pipe."

Those bits of rhyme seem far removed from the debates between Proxmire, the ascerbic chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, and Burns, the crusty economist who headed the Federal Reserve Board.

For years they sparred over their differing views on monetary policy.

The latest exchange between the Wisconsin Democrat and the Republican banker occurred when Burns sent Proxmire "a bit of doggerel I found among some papers I have been sorting out."

In his bit of doggerel about Proxmire, Burns lamented:

"Why does he rave
"When the rest of us slave?
"Why does he thunder
"Against this or that imagined blunder?
"And why does he let anger fly
"At the good old Fed's every try?"

To which Proxmire replied:

"With Burns at the Reserve
"The Hill got what we deserve.
"But what we yearned for
"Was not what Arthur Burn-ed for.
"Now that Arthur did depart
"We have lost our brain — if not our heart."

Burns' successor as head of the Fed, G. William Miller, has no known reputation as a poet. When Miller's nomination was before the Banking Committee, he inspired no verse from Proxmire.

The committee endorsed Miller by a vote of 14 to 1. The negative vote was cast by Proxmire.

Watergate Anniversary

Last June 17, was the sixth anniversary of the burglary at Democratic National Committee headquarters. No one baked a cake or made a speech to mark the occasion, so the award for the best unintentional reminder of the break-in goes to the Republican National Committee.

Nearly three weeks after the anniversary, the Republicans held a news conference to promote the Roth-Kemp tax cut bill as a major campaign issue in congressional elections this fall.

Alan Greenspan, top economist in the Ford administration, was explaining the economic theory supporting the tax cut. It was a typically hot summer day in Washington. The room was crowded.

Someone opened a window and set off a burglar alarm. Greenspan gamely tried to carry on, despite the wailing of the alarm and wisecracking references to Watergate.

It was no use. He quit for a few minutes while everyone waited for a maintenance man to turn off the alarm.

Pike Pokes Fun

Since Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., decided he'd had enough of Washington and was going to retire from Congress, he has taken delight in poking fun at some of the more obvious congressional foibles.

His latest target was the July Fourth recess, which the House prefers to call "home district work period."

The congressman noted that the House quit for the holiday on June 29, a Thursday.

In a news release, Pike noted:

"A 4th of July recess does not mean you get the 4th of July off. It means you get the week surrounding the 4th of July off. Plus the preceding Friday. It's a good deal."

Expenditures Approved For Public Broadcasting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting have approved a number of new expenditures for public radio and television programming.

At its regular July board meeting, the board of directors authorized expenditures including $700,000 for a nationally distributed morning service by National Public Radio; $100,000 for a new NPR drama project; $800,000 for new television productions; and $425,000 for video tape equipment for stations in Alaska and Hawaii, so programs beamed there by satellite can be taped and broadcast at better local times.

Search Continuing For USDA Deputy

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another search is going on to find a deputy secretary of agriculture, a job that has been vacant for almost half the time since the Carter administration took over 18 months ago.

The new search was launched after a prime candidate, Gene A. Triggs of Yazoo City, Miss., asked the White House last week not to consider him further for the $57,500-a-year post, the No. 2 job in the Agriculture Department.

Triggs, who initially said last Friday that he decided against the job primarily because of the high cost of living in Washington and the emotional strain of uprooting his family, acknowledged the following day that an arrest here more than two years ago on a charge of sexual solicitation also played a role in his decision.

Court records show that Triggs gave his salary as $30,000 a year at the time he was arrested by an undercover policewoman on March 12, 1976. The charge was dropped on April 14, a month later.

Triggs, in his statement last Saturday, said that it was a "clear case of entrapment and false arrest" after he was stopped by a woman who asked for a date after he left a downtown hotel here to get some shaving supplies.

"I told her no, chastised her for her profession and kept walking," Triggs said. "She followed, and when we reached the corner where a police car was parked, she said, 'You are under arrest for soliciting.' "

The White House knew of the incident, he said, but proceeded with the appointment process "on the assumption that this was a matter of little or no consequence" to his nomination.

Triggs' name was sent to the White House as a nomination candidate by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland but with an understanding that he had to clear a security check before making a final recommendation that the Mississippi man was the person for the job.

The position became open Jan. 28 with the resignation of John White, who became chairman of the Democratic National Committee. White, who was sworn in as deputy secretary at USDA on March 17, 1977, served about 10 months in the post. It has been open the remainder of the time.

Triggs had substantial support from the Mississippi delegation in Congress, a source said Monday, asking not to be quoted. It was thought that, after months of sifting through more than a score of possible candidates, White's successor had been nailed down, the source said.

"I don't think there is any one name in sight at this time," the source said.

According to others around Bergland, a new deputy is sorely needed to help take the load from him in running the department and to ride herd on other senior-level executives, including assistant secretaries, who reportedly are disagreeing at times over who is in charge of various departmental turf.

Approval Given To Pest Plan

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado legislators say they aren't convinced hordes of grasshoppers are ravishing the state's wheat and corn fields, but still took preliminary action to initiate a multi-million dollar program to eradicate the pesty insects.

After a lengthy floor session, several committee meetings and caucuses, the House gave initial approval to a bill appropriating up to $2.75 million in state taxpayer dollars for an insecticide spraying program.

It was the first day of a special emergency session which Gov. Richard Lamm called to deal with what he called the state's worst infestation of grasshoppers in 20 years.

After the lengthy day of work, most legislators were asking where the grasshoppers were.

"I really feel we're being swept up in the hysteria of the grasshopper scene without adequate evidence," said Rep. A.J. Spano. "It seems strange to me we haven't been beseiged with people down here asking us to come to their aid. I haven't had a single person tell us they need this kind of thing."

Legislators asked farmers and ranchers from the infested areas to travel to Denver today to explain first-hand how serious the problem actually was.

Under the legislation given preliminary approval, the voluntary spraying program could be carried out only in areas of up to 8,000 contiguous acres. Owners of at least 75 percent of the land would have to approve the action, and the cost to farmers and ranchers would have to be collected by the county commissioners.

British To Buy 19 Boeing Jets

LONDON (AP) — British Airways said Monday it will buy 19 American-made Boeing 737s — worth $225.6 million — and take delivery on some of the planes before the end of next year.

The announcement came just a few days after several European airlines announced that they would buy versions of the A-300 airbus, manufactured by a European consortium.

Analysts said the purchases of the airbuses — which are somewhat larger than the 737, could mean trouble for Boeing, which does not make an equivalent of the A-300.

The approval for the state-owned airline to buy the Boeing 737s came from Industry Secretary Edmund Dell, who also disclosed that British Airways may also buy a lesser number of planes from British Aerospace Ltd., the nationalized aircraft maker.

Ag Study Says Land Available

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study by the Agriculture Department says that much more prime farmland could be brought into crop production than has been lost to urban development and other non-farm uses in the last decade.

If the land was brought into production, it could boost the output of corn, wheat and soybeans sharply, the report said.

The study by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service said Monday that a 1975 survey shows that there are 78 million acres of land "with a high potential for cropland development" if it is needed to produce the nation's food and fiber.

However, the report said that only 15 million of those acres — which not now are in crops — have no problems which might hamper their switch into cropland. Problems include high water tables, forests, lack of dependable water and high erosion hazards.

Between 1967 and 1975, about 4.5 million acres of prime farmland — the most productive types — were switched from crops to urban and water uses, the report said.

There are about one billion acres of land in farms in the United States.

Based on studies by the Soil Conservation Service, 384 million acres of land meet the criteria for prime farmland, including 250 million acres of cropland, 77 million acres of pasture and range, 43 million in forests and 14 million in "other" categories, the report said.

"Most of the high-potential land, 62 million acres, is currently classified as pasture and range," the report said. "Another 13 million acres are classified as forest and 3 million acres as other land uses."

Although the amount of forest land potentially suitable for crops "is too limited to have a serious impact" on the forest industry if it was converted to crops, the switch of high quality pasture and range to cropland in some regions could affect the livestock sector, it said.

Regionally, the northern plains, Corn Belt and the Southeast each have more than 10 million acres of high-potential land.

"Translated into crop production, these high-potential acreages could mean as much as 33 percent more corn production or 43 percent more soybean production in the Corn Belt, 45 percent more wheat production in the northern plains, 350 percent more soybean production in the Southeast and 100 percent more wheat production in the southern plains," the report said.

Currently, large surpluses of grain have forced the Carter administration into requiring farmers to take land from crop production this year in order that they may qualify for federal price support benefits. About 22 million acres have been signed up to be idled under the programs.

Free single copies of the report, "A Perspective on Cropland Availability" AER-406, are available from ESCS Publications, Room 0054-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Tax Relief Urged For Farmers

AUSTIN (UPI) — The United States is feeding much of the world, but state agriculture officials say the nation soon will not be able to feed itself unless tax laws are changed so that farmers can stay in business.

T.A. Cunningham, president of the Independent Food & Energy Producers, Inc., Monday said ranchers and farmers needed tax relief to attract new investors into the agriculture industry.

"The present return on ranching investment is not enough to encourage new investors in this area," said Cunningham, testifying before a Senate subcommittee considering reform of agricultural tax laws during the special legislative session to consider taxes.

"If we are to provide the food necessary to feed this nation and most of the world, it is essential that policies be adopted that will provide incentive for those who are already actively engaged in agriculture."

Several witnesses testified before the Senate Subcommittee on Agriculture, urging farmland no longer be taxed on the basis of how it can be used for something else.

"It is grossly unfair to tax people making their living from the land on the value of that land for residential, commercial and industrial use," said Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown.

Brown said 12,000 farmers had gone out of business, bringing the total number of farmers in the state to 197,000. He said at least part of the reason for the decline was that Texas farmers and ranchers pay 8 percent of their income in property taxes while other taxpayers pay only 4 percent of their average income.

The subcommittee is conducting hearings to consider a constitutional amendment that would provide ad valorem taxation of agricultural property and timber land based on the land's productivity rather than its value.

The proposed constitutional amendment is included in the tax-relief package Gov. Dolph Briscoe submitted to the special session of the Legislature.

Brown told subcommittee chairman Bill Patman, D-Ganado, the Legislature should investigate pending legislation to assure that proper tax relief is given to ranchers and farmers.

He also said the subcommittee should check into how much Texas land is owned by out-of-state and foreign investors. Brown said ownership of Texas land by outside investors was not a problem but could be in the future.

Statement Links Girl To Robbery

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A statement was introduced into evidence today in which defendant Stacy Staggs admitted helping engineer the April 27 shotgun robbery of an Avenue Q motel.

A slender, 17-year-old Brownfield girl, Miss Staggs — who, according to a detective, made a reference to "feeling like Bonnie and Clyde" after being taken into custody by police — is accused of aggravated robbery in connection a hold-up at the Imperial 400 Motel at 910 Avenue Q.

The case was expected to go to the seven-man, five-woman jury in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court this afternoon after final arguments by attorneys.

Prosecutors rested their case against Miss Staggs after introduction of the signed statement, and the defense produced no testimony.

Detective Randy Ward today read to the jury the statement purportedly signed by Miss Staggs one day after the offense.

The statement indicates a hold-up plan was hatched by the defendant and a 16-year-old male companion in Brownfield.

"We needed some money and decided to pull a robbery," the statement reads.

The document says Miss Staggs procured an old, disassembled shotgun which belonged to a relative and gave it to the 16-year-old. The statement says the duo decided "to go to Lubbock and rob a motel."

According to the statement, Miss Staggs and her male friend carried through their plan, picking the Avenue Q motel partially because of the location of a nearby alley.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Bonner Smith asked Ward about Miss Staggs' attitude when he interviewed her.

Ward then said the defendant seemed calm.

"She made references to feeling like Bonnie and Clyde. . ." Ward stated.

In testimony Monday, attendant Larry Anderson identified Miss Staggs as one of two persons who had robbed him.

Anderson said the only thing he was thinking of while being robbed was the possibility of "that big ball of fire" coming from the barrel of a sawed-off shotgun — and the possibility of dying.

"I am positive that is the person," Anderson said of Miss Staggs.

Later testimony indicated the shotgun allegedly used in the hold-up was inoperable.

Anderson said he became suspicious after a young man and woman entered the motel about 10 p.m.

He said he started to reach for a pistol he kept behind the counter when the man, dressed in an Army fatigue jacket, suddenly produced the sawed-off shotgun.

"He said: 'This is a holdup — want all your (expletive deleted) money," Anderson testified.

The witness said the woman he identified as Miss Staggs then took the money. He said she also spotted the loaded pistol behind the counter and took it.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Bonner Smith asked Anderson to describe the female bandit's demeanor. "Very, very calm and very confident," Anderson said.

On cross-examination, Anderson indicated he had not seen a weapon on the female when the holdup was announced.

Police testified that they were looking later that night for suspects in a Volkswagen bus because of information given them by Michael Cooper, whose apartment residence faced an alley behind the motel.

Cooper testified he had seen the bus in the alley about 10 p.m. and informed police of it when they responded to the robbery call.

Police Cpl. Robert Westmoreland Jr. said he and another officer stopped a Volkswagen van later that night near 34th Street and Slide Road.

Admitted before the jury was a purported oral statement of the defendant's. Westmoreland said officers were advised by radio that about $160 was believed stolen in the robbery.

According to Westmoreland, the defendant stated: "(Expletive deleted) — we didn't get that much."

Cpl. Tom Smallwood Jr. also identified the defendant as an occupant. He testified that he found a loaded pistol and an unloaded sawed-off shotgun inside the van.

Smallwood said the shotgun was not operable.

Treatment Ordered For Boy

BOSTON (AP) — The state Supreme Court has ordered chemotherapy continued for leukemia-stricken Chad Green and ruled the state can intervene when parents reject the only treatment proven effective.

The ruling Monday, the latest in a six-month court battle, upheld a Plymouth County Superior Court ruling barring Diane and Gerald Green of Scituate, Mass., from treating their 2-year-old with only a natural food diet.

Claiming the drugs offer a substantial chance of cure with minimal side effects, the Superior Court also had awarded temporary custody of Chad to the Department of Public Welfare to guarantee the treatments are administered.

"While recognizing that there exists a private realm of family life which the state cannot enter," said the Supreme Court decision, "we think that family autonomy is not absolute, and may be limited where, as here, it appears that parental decisions will jeopardize the health or safety of their child.

"Parental rights ... do not clothe parents with life and death authority over their children," said the opinion written by Chief Justice Edward Hennessey.

In appealing the lower court ruling, the Greens claimed that the chemotherapy treatment administered by Massachusetts General Hospital caused harmful emotional and physical side effects.

Attorney George Donovan of Hull said the Greens would now press a federal court suit against cancer specialist Dr. John Truman of Massachusetts General and the Welfare Department.

U.S. District Judge Edward Caffrey had delayed action on the federal suit until all state appeals were exhausted.

The family claims that forcing the treatment upon their child is a violation of their civil rights.

Medical testimony at the Superior Court trial indicated Chad's chance of survival is over 50 percent if he undergoes a three-year chemotherapy regimen.

Mrs. Green said that nutrition specialists and physicians from around the country will testify on the value of "metabolic" therapy during the federal court proceedings.

Board Eyes Median At Intersection

The Citizens Traffic Commission today recommended that a median be placed at 38th Street and University Avenue which would allow 38th Street traffic only to turn right.

Area residents several months ago requested that the commission examine the intersection for a possible traffic signal, but Bill McDaniel, city traffic director, recommended traffic be "channelized" through the use of a median.

Within the past two years the intersection has been the site of 16 accidents.

McDaniel predicted the restriction of through traffic would be "a very controversial thing." He said the median would cost between $2,000 and $3,000 as compared with a signal which would cost the city approximately $20,000.

In other action the board voted to recommend that no parking be allowed on Hartford Avenue between 44th and 45th streets. The no parking zone was requested by area residents at last month's CTC meeting because students from Monterey High School were parking in the block.

Two requests for traffic alterations will be studied by the board.

A request from Gilbert Herrera for a 20-mile per hour school zone on Avenue Q near O.L. Slaton Junior High School will be considered when the board learns of school action on a previous CTC request that the school yard be fenced.

The commission had asked the school district to install the fence to keep students from crossing Avenue Q except at the light at 32nd Street.

The commission also voted to monitor the pedestrian situation after school begins in the fall.

Residents on 32nd Street between Indiana and Quaker avenues will be surveyed to determine their feelings about restricting parking to only one side of the street.

John Morehead, an ex-officio member of the board, requested that the parking be limited to only one side to allow for smoother traffic movement.

The survey also will indicate how far residents would like the parking restricted.

The commission denied a request from Mrs. Jewel Roberts for a four-way stop on Monterey Drive in the vicinity of 55th or 56th streets.

Instead, the commission voted to recommend increased police surveillance and enforcement on the street to remedy a speeding problem on Monterey Drive.

In other action, the CTC recommended that a new driving course for habitual traffic offenders be implemented on a one-year trial basis.

OSHA Plans 'Fresh Start'

CLEBURNE (AP) — Inspectors from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration planned to get a "fresh start" today on their investigation of an explosion at a munitions plant here.

One worker was seriously injured in the blast Sunday at the GOEX plant. He was listed in fair condition at a Fort Worth hospital Monday.

OSHA representatives were prevented from inspecting the GOEX munitions plant Monday, according to OSHA spokesman Les Gaddie of the Dallas office.

"But there's really no problem," Gaddie said. "We didn't consider it being rejected. Plant officials said they would have to consult with the president of the company and that sounded reasonable."

The president, who is on a European vacation, was not reached. However, Gaddie said the firm's board of directors agreed to allow an investigation to start today.

Four employees were killed in an explosion April 20 at the GOEX plant. An inspection after that blast resulted in OSHA issuing six violation citations.

Ghandi's Arrest Possible After Reports Filed

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian government took a preliminary legal step today that could lead to the arrest of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and her son Sanjay.

Six reports detailing the government's investigation of abuses allegedly committed by Mrs. Gandhi's fallen regime were filed with P.K. Jain, the chief metropolitan magistrate. Jain could order the 60-year-old politician's arrest or merely summon her to court, a government spokesman said.

It was the first legal move against Mrs. Gandhi this year resulting from a government inquiry into alleged misconduct during the 1975-77 emergency called by Mrs. Gandhi when thousands of her critics were arrested.

"It's only a political gimmick," said Frank Anthony, Mrs. Gandhi's lawyer. "The government has been advertising this for weeks."

At her New Delhi residence, the former prime minister shrugged off the news with a remark that "instead of solving the problems of the people, they (the government) are trying to divert attention."

The filed reports disclosed that Mrs. Gandhi is accused of playing a role in the illegal detention of opposition leaders and others, including an 82-year-old elder statesman, Bhim Sen Sachar. Sachar, who died this spring, had written Mrs. Gandhi an appeal for democratic rule.

The former prime minister, who resigned after her electoral defeat in the 1977 elections, was arrested on different charges last October but released the next day on a magistrate's finding of insufficient evidence.

Prime Minister Morarji Desai's government has moved cautiously ever since Mrs. Gandhi's brief detention was criticized as inept handling of the case.

Experts Study Way To Move Rail Tankers

CONYERS, Ga. (AP) — About 500 evacuees prepared to spend a second night with friends or in an emergency shelter, while hazardous materials experts laid cautious plans to move four derailed tank cars today.

The residents were evacuated Monday when 24 of the 64 cars in a Georgia Railroad train bound from Atlanta to Augusta derailed in suburban Rockdale County, 30 miles east of Atlanta and three miles east of Conyers. Four of the cars carried hazardous substances.

No injuries were reported, a railroad spokesman said, and the cause of the accident was unknown.

Under a broiling sun Monday, firemen sprayed water on an upside-down propane tanker to ward off any explosion.

"It is an extremely dangerous, life-threatening situation we have here," Rockdale County Assistant Fire Chief H.W. Jones said. "We have the potential for an explosion at any moment that could send a fireball over a one-half-mile area."

Two cars hauling a liquid aluminum alkaloid, volatile when mixed with water, appeared to survive the derailment intact, said the railroad spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

The fourth tanker ruptured when it landed on its side, spilling synthetic fatty alcohol into a stream. Bill Fleming, an official of the state Environmental Protection Division, said the town of Porterdale, about 10 miles downriver, shut its water intake to avoid using the contaminated water.

A heavy equipment plant within sight of the wreckage was closed and all residents within a mile were sent from their homes.

In Letart, W.Va., meanwhile, a derailed Chessie System tanker was leaking caustic soda today, but authorities said it posed no immediate threat to about nearby 150 residents.

The leaking tanker was one of seven derailed cars. Six of the cars contained vinyl chloride, but were not leaking, a Mason County sheriff's spokesman said.

Cause of the accident, the third near here in recent months, was under investigation.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Prices Maintaining Upswing

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued the upswing of the past three sessions with a small gain today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up .60 at 817.39 after an 11-point rise in the past three trading days.

Gainers held a 3-2 lead over losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers tended to view the advance as a technical rally after the decline of the past four weeks, which erased about half the gains recorded by the Dow Jones industrial average in the spring.

Some chart-watching analysts said buying was encouraged by the Dow average's ability to hold above the 800 level last week.

Wall Street's attention, meanwhile, was beginning to focus on summit talks scheduled to begin Sunday in Bonn, West Germany, among leaders of leading industrialized nations.

British Petroleum led the active list, up ½ at 16⅜ amid unconfirmed reports that the company had made a new oil discovery.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks edged up .07 to 53.62. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .44 to 147.14.

Volume on the Big Board came to 11.95 million shares at noontime, up from 8.66 million at the same point Monday.

Dollar Drops Against Yen

TOKYO (AP) — The dollar dropped slightly against the Japanese yen in calm trading Tuesday as some banks appeared to be awaiting the results of next week's summit talks of leading industrial nations.

The dollar closed at 201.475 yen, down from 201.525 yen Monday. After dropping to 200.975 at last Wednesday's close, the dollar had rallied to 203.325 yen last Friday.

Dealers said demand for the dollar was somewhat higher than usual Tuesday as Brazilian government concerns converted the proceeds of a yen bond issue into dollars.

Most foreign exchange market participants expect further dollar selling pressure after the summit talks in Bonn, West Germany. They believe the talks will not produce anything to help confidence in the dollar.

City Official Sidetracks Housing Bid

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Concerned about its eventual possible cost and miffed because the city council had not seen the proposal before, Carolyn Jordan today sidetracked approval of a request seeking "neighborhood strategy area" designation.

"Inherently, I like programs that aid housing, but I can't believe they don't eventually cost us," the councilwoman told her fellow board members at the South Plains of Association of Governments (SPAG) meeting.

The item which drew more than a half-hour of debate and comment is a proposal to seek a designation from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) which would provide rental subsidies.

Jim Story, of Lubbock's urban-renewal agency, said that no commitment of funds is necessary on the part of the city, just a commitment of purpose aimed at upgrading housing in the Canyon Lakes-Dunbar area of northeast Lubbock.

Once the designation is received from HUD, owners of rental property in the area would work with the federal government in determining qualified tenants for the apartments and houses.

"There is no grant money to this," said Story. "It's to identify a neighborhood." According to Story, the program is different from rent subsidy projects such as Green Fair Manor in that publicly owned housing is not involved.

"The assurance of rent subsidies would help motivate landlords in the area to bring their properties up to standard," said Story. "Right now, it's run down to the point of low occupancy."

James E. Lancaster, a Lubbock County commissioner and treasurer of SPAG, said the subsidy, in effect, made the program appear to be a kind of public housing, part of "a never-ending cycle."

Another county commissioner, Coy E. Biggs, said, "When you deal with HUD, they come along and tell you what you need for parks and schools and services."

"That's another issue," said Story.

"It's all our money," said Biggs.

Story also said the project designation had received unfavorable comment from the area office of HUD and that Mayor Dirk West had written to request that the matter be for forwarded to HUD's cental office in Washington, anyway.

"If we show any hesitancy on this matter now, then it will really red-flag it at HUD," Mrs. Jordan said as she proposed consideration of the item be tabled for a month.

"The mood of the city council now is not to spend any money," she said, referring to its current job of setting a budget while under pressure from property owners to cut taxes. "I guess I'm a little more cautious than I was last month."

The SPAG board gave favorable recommendations to two other projects in Lubbock involving rental subsidies, but they apply to new construction.

One construction plan, consisting of 40 three and four bedroom dwellings at 24th Street and Albany Avenue, is subject to a change in zoning for apartments. Federal funding from HUD amounts to $1.2 million.

Another project, with a cost not yet determined, entails new construction of 66 units at 74th Street and Avenue X and 78 units at 56th Street and Chicago Avenue.

Elevators Told To Provide Safety Plans

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to curb deadly grain elevator explosions, operators will be required to submit extensive safety plans to the Agriculture Department, Assistant Secretary P. R. Smith announced today.

Smith's announcement came on the opening day of the International Symposium on Grain Elevator Explosions being held at the National Academy of Sciences.

"I have directed the Federal Grain Inspection Service to include in its inspection operating instructions a requirement that elevator operations submit a written operations plan that will detail its procedures regarding maintenance, housekeeping, safety, security and evacuation procedures for each facility," Smith said.

"That plan will be reviewed, approved and monitored by the safety officer for its achievement of reducing hazards in the elevator to the lowest possible level.

"The reduction of dust levels will be one of the main objectives of the plans. We will not mandate what kind of equipment or systems are to be used — but only that it be done," the Agriculture Department official continued.

"The submission and implementation of these plans will be a condition of receiving and keeping weighing and inspection services," he said.

The two-day symposium will discuss the causes of elevator explosions that have killed 85 persons since 1976. Last December, two explosions within a five-day period claimed a total of 50 lives in Louisiana and Texas.

"These explosions cost us about 10 percent of our export elevator capacity on the Gulf Coast, in addition to the tragic loss of life," Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, said in a speech opening the symposium. "They raise again the question of control of these explosions in the most poignant way possible."

Clark challenged the symposium to question the role of government in grain elevator operations, saying "the federal government's rules are at least partly to blame for some of the dangers of grain explosions."

Questions About Scout Deaths Still Unanswered

By GEORGE BOOSEY

PRYOR, Okla. (UPI) — A Cherokee woodsman who eluded law enforcement officers for more than four years by living in caves and hiding with friends and relatives will stand trial for the 1977 sex slayings of three Girl Scouts.

The decision to bind Gene Leroy Hart, 34, over for trial on the three first-degree murder charges concluded one of the longest preliminary hearings ever held in Oklahoma.

It was a history-making hearing and provided the first real clues to what went on during the early morning hours of June 13, 1977 — the day young Lori Farmer, Doris Denie Milner and Michele Guse were killed at Camp Scott near Locust Grove.

But some questions remain unanswered:

— What weapon was used to kill the Farmer and Guse girls? Both died of "blunt trauma to the head," but no weapon was introduced into evidence during the 14 days of testimony. Was it the crowbar found along a fenceline behind the tents in the Kiowa unit? Was it one of the many hatchets turned over to the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation for analysis?

— Where were the girls killed? Blood was found in one-half of the tent in which the girls spent their last night. Does that mean only two of the girls were slain in the tent? The body of the Milner girl was lying out in the open while the bodies of the other two girls were zipped in sleeping bags. Was she killed later?

— How did the killer get the bodies from the death tent to the place where they were found 150 years away? Law enforcement officers traced the route they believe taken by the killer, but nobody knows how many trips he made, or at least they are not saying now.

— Who wrote a note found in April 1977 at the Girl Scout camp threatening the lives of young campers? Was it a cruel hoax or was the killer alerting the Scouts to what was to come the following June?

The answers to these questions may come during the trial or trials for Hart, who was moved to the state penitentiary at McAlester at the conclusion of the hearing. Hart will be arraigned July 18 and a trial date could be set then.

The setting of a trial date could be the next controversy in the case. District Attorney Sid Wise of Claremore, who is running for state attorney general, said he would like to beging trying Hart next month. Wise, a "staunch believer in the death penalty," coordinated the investigation and he wants to prosecute the defendant.

Chief defense attorney Garvin Isaacs would rather wait until January. He said he needs the time to prepare a defense for his client.

Wise charges Isaacs is just trying to delay the trial.

"From the very first day he walked into the courthouse he began asking for delays and he has been doing it ever since," said the district attorney, who has a penchant for bullet-proof vests and derringer pistols.

The ruling last week by Judge Jess Clanton was anti-climactic. Isaacs and his partner, Gary Pitchlynn, did not present a "defense" during the hearing. Instead, they used the hearing for "discovery" purposes in an attempt to find out what evidence the prosecution would bring up during the trial.

"We just wanted to find out what they had," said Isaacs, the young chief defense attorney for Hart. "They tried to make us gamble at first by putting on a minimal case."

The prosecution did not approve of the defense strategy. District Attorney S.M. "Buddy" Fallis Jr. of Tulsa, who joined Wise in prosecuting the case, charged the defense was conducting a "fishing expedition."

The focal point of attention during the hearing was on Hart and the families of the victims.

The defendant, usually dressed in knit golf shirts, sat quietly at the defense table listening to the testimony and taking notes on a yellow legal pad. He often conferred with Isaacs and Pitchlynn and suggested questions for the witnesses.

During court recesses and during his walks back and forth between the courtroom and the jail, Hart would smoke cigarettes, smile and talk with law enforcement officers guarding him. He often waved to members of his family, who sat on a reserved bench on the east side of the third-floor courtroom.

Sitting across the aisle from Hart's family were relatives of the victims. In many ways the hearing appeared more difficult for them than anyone else.

"It's hard being here every day listening to what happened to our child," said Sherri Farmer. "It's hard sitting in a courtroom with the man who might have don it."

The hearing attracted large crowds. Seating in the small courtroom was limited to about 100 people, so the others would walk down the street to the Graham Community Building, where they could watch the proceedings on closed-circuit television monitors. This was the first time a courtroom proceeding has been televised in Oklahoma.

A spectator at the hearing was Sheriff Pete Weaver. Hart escaped from his Mayes County Jail on Sept. 16, 1973.

Bakke Decision Fails To Alter National Policies On Minorities

Analysis

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Before we get talked to death about the Supreme Court's Bakke decision, two facts ought to be recognized: It did not establish equality in college admissions; and it does not clash with either national policy or practice.

In the first instance, the ruling specifically endorsed giving minority applicants an advantage in selecting students to fill classes with limited space.

Justice lewis Powell, the swing man on the decision, cited admission systems that give special weight to an applicant's racial or ethnic background along with other qualities such as academic standing, leadership potential and athletic ability. Such plans, he said, stand the test of "equal protection" that numerical quota systems do not.

The system the court threw out was like a card game which Bakke could win while playing against other whites, but never against blacks. The kind of plan Powell approved would require everyone to play in the same game, but permit the dealer to give minority students an extra card.

To some people this looks like one of those legal fictions that judges and lawyers love but defy lay understanding. Why, the non-lawyer might ask, is it illegal to establish a numerical quota for minority students but okay to establish admission standards that are intended to achieve the same result?

Obviously, this isn't equality. It favors minorities. And we know the reason: to attempt to rectify the injury of decades during which the benefits of American society were denied to blacks and other minorities in this country.

What we need to face is that this policy of giving an edge to minorities is not some whim of bureaucrats or judges, but a commitment of the entire United States government.

It is the result of the civil rights protests of the 1960s, the great national debate that they provoked and a series of presidential actions, judicial rulings and congressional enactments intended to end discrimination and to varying degrees rectify past wrongs.

In one way or another, every elements of national government — Congress, the federal courts and the presidency — took part in development of the policy before Allan Bakke ever went to court. The Bakke decision provides guidelines for the application of the policy, but does not change its substance.

National policy providing benefits to particular groups is not a new concept. For years, we have given military veterans extra test points in civil service examinations. We favor American companies in awarding government contracts. We give an edge to economically distressed states and localities in allocating federal grants. We provide aid to the physically handicapped.

All of these programs help specific people and, in areas where resources are limited, can be said to discriminate against others. We do it because, after examining the values that underlie our society, it is right.

Senator's Wife To Tell Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joan Kennedy says a detailed account of her bout with alcoholism will be published in about two weeks by a national woman's magazine.

The article will tell how she became addicted and the therapy program she follows.

In a recent interview, the wife of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., made her first public admission of the problem, saying she hasn't had a drink in a year.

"I've talked about it with my friends and they're bored silly, but I've never talked about it publicly before," she said.

Mrs. Kennedy, who spoke by telephone, said she has been living in Boston since February, attending full-time music courses at Lesley College of Fine Arts.

"I didn't want to go part time or just take a few courses," she said. "I did that in Washington. I'm going to summer school now and spend most weekends at Hyannis (Mass.)," where the Kennedy family has a compound.

Shark Sighting Scares Bathers

Swimmers Eye Record Attempts

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The battle lines have been drawn for what could be history's most sensational swim. On one side is Diana Nyad, a 28-year-old author. On the other is Walter Poenisch, a 64-year-old former cookie baker. The battle: an attempt to swim from Cuba to Florida.

Miss Nyad, of New York City, has applied for, but has not yet received permission from the Cuban government to set off July 21 on a 130-mile, 60-hour swim from Havana, Cuba, to Marathon, Fla. A spokeswoman for Miss Nyad, Marcie Rudell, said she had a telegram from the Cuban government saying that the application was being processed. She said no delays were expected.

Poenisch, of Grove City, Ohio, said he applied for his visa 10 years ago and received it in March.

Miss Nyad, who trains from a North Miami Beach penthouse, will be surrounded by a $43,000 shark cage, a well-trained support team and an NBC camera crew for her swim.

Poenisch has done his training from a one-room efficiency apartment in Fort Lauderdale. When he starts his Havana-to-Fiorida swim sometime in the next two weeks, he will be accompanied by his wife, Faye, his boat captain and a 22-year-old diver who will be needed if a large shark tests Poenisch's chicken-wire cage.

Miss Nyad plans her swim as a cap to a career of sanctioned marathons, which do not allow flotation devices, flippers or snorkels. Poenisch earned a spot in the Guinness Book of Records with a 1976 swim of 122½ miles in the Florida Straits and has a history of swimming stunts that includes towing five rowboats filled with people for a mile while his hands and feet were shackled.

"I don't want to get into a competition with Walter Poenisch," Miss Nyad said. "What he does are stunts. It isn't marathon swimming. There's no comparison ... It's apples and oranges."

Poenisch, who will use flippers, a snorkel and a flotation device, claims Miss Nyad is cashing in on his idea and that what she proposes is impossible.

"She's never done ocean swimming before. She may be great in fresh water, but she doesn't know what it's going to be like.

"The body can't stand being in the ocean that long. I think the longest anybody could stand would be 30 to 40 hours."

His swim will be less than 120 miles and will take advantage of as many ocean currents as possible.

"I'm going to try and make my swim as fast as possible, and I'll stop when I hit Florida, no matter where in Florida," he said. He has not set a date for his swim, preferring to wait for a "perfect day."

Rene Mujica, second secretary of the Cuban Interests section, said in a telephone interview recently that he thinks there is a good chance Miss Nyad's swim will be approved but said, "Mr. Poenisch's cause has more appeal because he is doing something to help the relations between our two countries."

Poenisch is billing his swim as "the Swim for Peace" and as an expression of friendship between the two nations.

"His swim will not end the differences between the two countries, but it is an effort," Mujica said.

Texas Airline Buys National's Stock

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas International Airlines Inc. said Monday it had purchased 790,700 shares of common stock of National Airlines Inc. and is considering the possibility of seeking control of National.

Texas International spokesmen said, however, there were "no current plans to acquire additional shares or to seek control. It (Texas International) does, however, intend to review its interest in National on a continuing basis."

The statement released from the airlines' Houston headquarters said the purchased about to 9.2 per cent of National shares outstanding.

Trials Cloud Vance's Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flew to Geneva today to see if he can make headway in slowing the nuclear weapons race, despite steadily souring relations with the Soviet Union.

Trials of top Russian dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg clouded an already complicated Vance mission, but he said the imperatives of preventing nuclear annihilation left him no alternative but to go ahead with the negotiations.

But while in Geneva, Vance will meet with Shchransky's wife, Avital, in a gesture of support for Shcharansky and other Soviet dissidents, said a U.S. official who declined public identification.

Over the last several months the two superpowers have made only halting progress toward a treaty to limit their long-range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles.

As Vance prepared for his meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko on Wednesday and Thursday, the Carter administration weighed a decision on ways to protect U.S. land-based missiles from potential Russian assault.

This is likely to add to existing differences between the two sides on how to restrict development and deployment of new missiles and what to do about the Soviet Backfire bomber.

The missile-protecting technique under consideration is a sort of "shell game." Thousands of extra holes would be dug for the American Minutemen. Then the missiles would be shifted from silo to silo periodically to hide them from the Russians.

Despite this tentative step to shore up U.S. defenses, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., let fly in the Senate with a blistering attack on U.S. negotiating strategy.

Jackson, who has a hardliner reputation, said the Carter administration was inclined to one-sided arms agreements with the Russians.

"It is high time we stopped the dangerous practice of entering into unequal deals with Moscow in the misguided notion that Soviet leaders will reward our generosity with restraint in international affairs," Jackson said.

A fellow Democrat, Sen. Thomas McIntyre of New Hampshire, shot back that Jackson was "carping about a treaty that we haven't seen yet."

But Jackson, in a separate interview, called the decision to have Vance meet with Gromyko while Shcharansky and Ginzburg were on trial "the wrong signal at the wrong time."

Vance's response, at a news conference, was to "respectfully disagree."

The secretary of state condemned Soviet authorities, as he had in unusually strong terms over the weekend, and said the trials "raised serious questions" about Moscow's compliance with the human rights guarantees of the 1975 Helsinki agreement.

But he said the weapons-limitation negotiations "stand on their own two feet and have a special quality."

"We are dealing," Vance said, "with negotiations that affect the national security of our nation and the well-being of the world in general."

At the White House, meanwhile, the trials were branded as a "repressive action which strikes at the conscience of the entire world."

The criticism was leveled by press secretary Jody Powell, who also said they were "a sign of weakness on the part of those very forces of oppression and injustice. ..."

After Vance concludes his talks with Gromyko, he will join President Carter at an economic summit meeting in Bonn, West Germany, and then go to London for Mideast negotiations July 18 and 19.

Those talks, with Foreign Ministers Mohammed Kamel of Egypt and Moshe Dayan of Israel, are designed to break the deadlock over moving toward a peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

On the table are Egyptian and Israeli proposals as well as a U.S.-promoted "declaration of principles" to govern future negotiations between the two sides.

"The proposals on both sides have deficiencies," Vance said. "On the other hand, they have positive elements. ...

"We believe we should build upon these positive elements. We believe further that there is additional common ground which can be found."

Senate Refuses To Kill Costly Plane For Navy

By a 68-22 vote, the Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., to delete the entire $983 million proposed for the first production models of the F-18 fighter-attack planes in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The F-18 issue is shaping up as perhaps the only major contest in a $36 billion weapons authorization bill which moved onto the Senate floor Monday. The measure, as amended so far, calls for spending $585 million more than the Carter administration proposed but $1.8 billion less than the House recently authorized.

The Senate Armed Services Committee added nearly $2 billion for an aircraft carrier that has been opposed by the administration, and the proposal seems headed for Senate approval.

Hart argued that "from every standpoint, the F-18 will not be an asset but a liability to the Navy." He said the Navy does not want the plane, a claim challenged by Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev.

Cannon said the plane "has the complete support of the Navy." He said he received a hand-written note Monday from Adm. Thomas Hayward, chief of naval operations, saying, "I give my strong personal support to the F-18, A-18 (the bomber version of the plane) program."

Armed Services Committee Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., said there are differences of opinion between the civilian and uniformed sides of the Navy over the plane. He supported the aircraft, saying "it touches so many parts of our preparedness program ... we cannot turn back on this plane at this time."

In the opening debate, there was no sign of opposition to the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier added to the bill by the Armed Services Committee over the administration's objections. The House has voted overwhelmingly to build a 1,000-foot-long nuclear carrier.

The administration, while still officially opposing the ship, has not mounted much of a campaign against it, according to sources who asked not to be named. Supporters say the ship probably would be the last large-deck carrier to be built.

Hart, in a prepared Senate speech, argued that the F-18, which has not gone into production, is dependent on large carriers and would lock the country into building more such ships. He also said it has lost its cost advantage over the F-14 fighter.

Among the F-18's supporters are Sen. Edward Kennedy and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., both of Massachusetts, where the F-18 engine would be produced by General Electric. Other strong supporters include members of Congress from Missouri, where the airframe would be built, and California, home of Northrup Corp., a major subcontractor on the project.

Kennedy's office said he would oppose Hart's amendments on grounds that the aircraft's performance has won wide acclaim and — contrary to Hart's assertion — is relatively inexpensive to build.

Traffic Deaths Reach 47,671

WASHINGTON (AP) — With drivers increasingly ignoring the 55 mile per hour national speed limit, the death toll on U.S. highways rose to 47,671 last year, an increase of 4.7 percent over 1976, the Department of Transportation reported Tuesday.

The DOT cited several factors for the increase but said the major reason was that more than half of America's drivers are breaking the speed limit.

Taxes, Busing Get Challenge

fare and well being," the group said.

The statement concluded, "Our desires are very simple: let us have a voice in our government."

The organization said it "cannot condone governmental control of our children's future nor oppressive taxation for excessive bureaucratic waste."

"The people are ready for something — something tangible. I think a vote is what they want. We must get back to the point where people have some control over their government," Mrs. Tarlton said.

She said if city and school officials can justify their budgets, "then they have nothing to fear."

The group's proposition for the city government would require municipal tax monies be spent "first" on police, fire protection, garbage collection, water and sewer service, parks, streets, libraries and public transportation.

The proposition for the school district would require school taxes be spent "first" on "classroom teachers, instructional material, libraries, trainable handicapped, vocational classes and educable mentally retarded."

Mrs. Tarlton said the organization hopes to cut city-school taxes, which she says are so high — in light of recent property revaluation in the southwest quadrant — that "people are having to sell their homes."

And the group wants to ensure that the school district doesn't have enough money available to implement its court-ordered integration plan. The plan would require busing about 2,000 elementary children and several hundred secondary students a day beginning this fall — an aspect We the People detests.

"We do know that there are some cities that have escaped busing by not having the money to do it," Mrs. Tarlton said. She cited Syracuse, N.Y., as an example.

However, school officials say federal courts simply do not let school systems off the hook when they run out of money. They say the local anti-busing group's approach won't work.

The group's proposals would cut city-school tax revenues about in half.

City and school officials have several legal questions about the proposals. They say some of the proposals, such as a policy on how to assess property, probably are unconstitutional.

Some members of We the People say that if the school system won't call a tax-cut election, there may be another way to go about it.

They say that under state law, the school district — by a petition of 50 voters — could be forced to hold an election on whether to dissolve its status and put the schools under the auspices of city government.

That way, the group members feel, they could control school expenditures through the city charter.

Also today, the number of complaints before the city-school tax equalization board continued to be light — despite the howling of tax protest groups over property reappraisals.

Twenty-six homeowners had signed up to address the board by midmorning. The board heard 34 cases Monday.

Tax Revolt To Bring New Cuts

the budget was "a cheap shot," West said.

"None of us on the council are professional politicians — we don't even make our living as city council people," he said.

"We serve because we want to do something for the city," West said.

As for the association's demand that property taxes not be levied on automobiles, the mayor said it's not up to the city.

State law requires the city to tax all personal property, including cars, he said. Some cities interpret this to mean furniture, jewelry and bank accounts should be taxed, in addition to homes and cars.

"This city wisely has chosen not to even start that practice," West said.

If Lubbock stopped taxing automobiles, the action probably would be challenged as unjust taxation by those who own commercial vehicles, West predicted.

The mayor said the council already had granted one of the association's requests — an increase in the homestead exemption for the elderly.

The council tentatively approved an increase from $3,000 to $5,000 in the exemption which gives "a good tax break for those in small houses."

However, elderly owners of $70,000 homes "are not going to get much help" from the increased exemption, he said.

But, West said the association requested a "substantial increase" in the homestead exemption, without specifying what substantial means in dollars and cents.

West feels the council should be responsive to the demand for a tax cut, but he is concerned "overreacting" could hinder the city's future growth.

"Lubbock is a growing, vibrant city because its citizens always wanted the best," he said, adding he hopes the city continues on the same track.

West and members of the council plan to meet with association board members at 9 a.m. Saturday in what should be "a very productive meeting," the mayor said.

"I have some questions I want to ask them, like 'What services do you want cut?'," he said, and predicted the board members likely will have some questions ready for the council.

But anyone who accuses West of failing to understand property owners' plight regarding ad valorem taxes better look out — the mayor's property valuation increased more than 60 percent.

Prosecutors Build Cases

dissidents "hoodlums and bandits."

Kaluga court official Georgy Novikov said six defense witnesses would testify in addition to 18 for the prosecution. He said the testimony of two of them today, Valentina Kuznichova and Leonid Rozenov, substantiated prosecution points in the case. They rebutted accusations in Ginzburg's dissident writings that psychiatric hospitals are used for political purposes, and that dock workers in the city of Riga once struck over meat shortages, he said.

In the street outside, Mrs. Ginzburg said: "This is not a trial but a cruel reprisal. He looks half dead."

In his briefing on the Shcharansky trial, Pirbudagov clearly referred to Toth when he said: "The above-mentioned foreigner was worming out information that is not subject to publication in the open press on the Soviet space research program and on classified information in the field of sociological research and parapsychology.

"It was with Shcharansky's assistance that the above-mentioned agent of a military intelligence agency had from the autumn of 1976 several meetings with a Soviet scientist who knew secrets, and tried to get from him information on the ultimate results of his classified research. The foreigner was detained in the act of obtaining such materials at their last meeting."

Both Shcharansky and Ginzburg were leading members of the Helsinki civil rights group formed to publicize Soviet violations of the human rights provisions of the Helsinki accords on European security and cooperation. Shcharansky also was a leader of the Jewish emigration movement, while Ginzburg was the paymaster for the fund which exiled novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn supplies to help families of political prisoners.

President Carter, who has made a cause celebre of the Shcharansky case, hid the chorus of foreign criticism.

Couple Plans Zoo Wedding

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Jody Sussman and Kurt Metzger can't understand all the fuss over their marriage plans Sunday.

They will be married in the Cincinnati Zoo's gorilla exhibit.

"We wouldn't think of getting married anyplace else," Miss Sussman said. "It was the first and only place that came to mind."

Only a narrow moat will separate the couple from the gorillas at the zoo's outdoor display area.

"We both love the zoo so much and we go there as often as we can," Miss Sussman, a 25-year-old legal secretary, said.

"My parents were pushing for us to be married at their house, but we want our wedding to be for the bride and groom," Metzger, 31, said. He works for the U.S. Census Bureau in Sterling Heights, Mich.

"We both have a tremendous love for animals and wanted to be married in a place that means the most to us and that's the zoo," he added. "I think it's going to be great to get married in front of gorillas. I prefer them as wedding guests over a lot of people I know."

Teen Suspected In Theft Of Tech Museum Items

A 16-year-old Lubbock youth was arrested Monday on suspicion of stealing $3,500 worth of turquoise jewelry from the Texas Tech University Museum.

After Lubbock police got a call from Tech authorities, they went to the place of employment, and later, to the home of the named suspect.

Reports indicated officers from the two police agencies recovered five pieces of the allegedly stolen goods at the residence. Museum officials said 21 items, including several bracelets, rings and necklaces, were missing from their inventory.

The boy was turned over to juvenile authorities late Monday.

In recently reported break-ins, Jay Russell Addington of 1629 16th St., No. 329, said whoever pried his door Monday made off with a rifle, pistol and knife. Police were given the name of a suspect.

A Johnson House Motel employee discovered a vending machine burglary at the 4801 Ave. Q business Monday.

According to reports, $165 in change was taken after the cigarette machine was pried.

According to the victim, the stranger entered the store about 9 p.m. asking for change for a $100 bill. Although the attendant did not have enough cash in the register for the transaction, she reportedly offered to do the favor with her own money from her purse.

About 15 minutes later, reports showed, the suspect returned and, as the clerk was waiting on a customer, grabbed the employee's pocketbook and ran west from the scene.

Lubbock County Sheriff's Department deputies continue to investigate the Friday incident in which a 12-ton, a 10-ton and a 6-ton roller, a rock spreader and two pneumatic rollers were vandalized near New Deal.

Pat Patterson of the Henry Stafford Construction Company said miscreants apparently climbed aboard the machines, started their engines, then rammed them into each other.

Dennis R. Badgett of 6106 Kenosha Ave., who said he'd been victimized by vandals previously, told police someone shot his female cat with a BB-gun Monday before drowning the animal.

Kelly Hogan of 2220 Knoxville Ave. said someone broke through his front door Sunday or Monday then swiped his stereo system valued at $1,000.

Mito Perez of 3224 Baylor St. had similar problems during the same two-day period when intruders gathered up his television and stereo, together valued at $500.

Though nothing was taken during an apparent attempted burglary at the Bowman Lumber Co., 8301 S. University Ave., manager Joe Swan said $500 worth of damage was inflicted. Swan said a plate glass door had been smashed.

Joe Dale Wunneburger, manager of the Pizza Hut at 4206 19th St., could sympathize. Someone broke a plate glass window there Monday, causing $200 damage.

Two contractors also were victimized by burglars recently.

Curtis Whorton of 5102 40th St. said someone broke into his pickup truck during the past three days and stole a $700 paint spraying rig, while Jimmy Huron, a sheetrocker, reported the theft of $400 worth of tools.

First 'Test Tube Baby' To Be Born In Britain Within Three Weeks

By DONALD M. McNICOLL

LONDON (AP) — A "test tube baby" will be born by Caesarian section at Oldham, in northern England, within three weeks, medical sources predicted today.

David Sanders, a spokesman for the British government's Medical Research Council said there is no single authority on the existence of a live test tube baby, but he said it was generally accepted this will be the first one. "But no one can claim with absolute certainty one way or another," the spokesman said.

The mother, identified only as "Mrs. A." is reported to be 32 years old and married to a railroad worker in his late 30s. In nine years of marriage she had been unable to conceive.

A successful birth would climax a dozen years of work by Dr. Patrick Steptoe, 65, a gynecologist, and Dr. Robert Edwards, 52, a Cambridge University physiologist.

The test tube technique is designed for women who cannot conceive because of obstruction in the fallopian tubes that carry eggs from the ovaries to the uterus.

It differs from cloning, the creation of a child from a single cell of one parent, in that the test tube method uses a male sperm and a female egg. There is no record of a birth by cloning, and the claim by writer David Rorvik in his recent book "In His Image" that he knew of a successful cloning is generally regarded as unfounded.

The book's publisher J.B. Lippincott Co. has been sued in the United States by a British research scientist and biologist who says his reputation for knowledge in experimental embryology was injured by the unauthorized use of his name in the book.

The suit was filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia on behalf of Dr. J. D. Bromhall of Oxford, England. Bromhall is seeking $7 million in damages, plus an unspecified portion of the profits from the book on the grounds that part of the profits derived from use of his name.

The scientist claims that Rorvik published, without authorization, excerpts from Bromhall's doctoral thesis which explores the possibility of human cloning. He seeks a court declaration that the book is a "fraud and a hoax, that is fiction and not nonfiction."

There was no immediate comment from Lippincott.

The doctors found they could fertilize a female egg with male sperm in a test tube that was an extremely complicated piece of glassware. They then planted the fertilized eggs into the wombs of women who had been trying in vain to become pregnant.

Women using the technique became pregnant but miscarried, usually within a few weeks of implantation.

She and her husband spent a lot of money seeing consultants about her failure to conceive. It was established that the fault was not her husband's but a defect in her fallopian tubes. That led them to the Steptoe-Roberts laboratory, where Mr. A.'s sperm was used to fertilize an egg from Mrs. A. in a test tube containing a culture medium. After four days the fertilized egg was inserted into Mrs. A.'s womb.

Some branded the experiments as an interference with nature and said they might lead to a test tube breed of mankind.

Steptoe said: "All I want is to help mothers whose child-bearing mechanism is slightly faulty."

The Central Ethical Committee of the British Medical Association endorsed that view at a special meeting last week.

Dr. John Dawson, secretary of the committee, told reporters: "Used responsibly, the technique offers no ethical difficulties for doctors."

But he warned that if a fertilized egg were implanted in a "host mother," not the wife of the husband "that would be a different matter."

Sanders said there has been a previous claim of living test tube babies.

"Three years ago at the British Medical Association meeting one fellow got up and said he knew of three test tube babies who were alive and well and living in Europe," Sanders said.

"This naturally caused an uproar and proof was demanded to back up his statement. No proof was forthcoming and it was subsequently dismissed. The accepted feeling is that there is no test tube baby."

Woman Bids Farewell To Family

OCALA, Fla. (AP) — Mary Worlds bid a tearful farewell to her family and was led to jail as the governor, state attorney general, Parole Commission and the U.S. Civil Rights Office independently reviewed her conviction of a crime she swears she did not commit.

The 29-year-old mother of two was given a prison smock and the number 150121, then locked in a cell Monday at Lowell State Prison for Women to begin serving a three-year term for aggravated battery.

The black woman was convicted by an all-white jury in 1977 of burning a patient with a cigarette at Sunland Training Center, a state institution for the retarded at Marianna where she was a supervisor.

A subordinate, Eudora Conner, accused her, saying she witnessed the burning incident but did not intervene, seek medical attention or report it for four months.

A doctor who did not examine the patient until six months afterwards testified for the state. But he said he could not be certain cigarette burns caused the discoloraion on the woman's arm.

Seven of Mrs. Worlds' co-workers who tended the patient said they found no evidence of burns.

Attorney General Robert Shevin ordered a review. So did Gov. Reubin Askew. Federal civil rights officials from Atlanta interviewed Mrs. Worlds last week and opened their own investigation. The state Parole Commission said it had no jurisdiction until she was jailed, but would be reviewing the case, too.

"All I know is I have two kids back home who need me and I'm here for something I didn't do," Mrs. Worlds sobbed.

Earlier in the day, she cried as her husband, John, put his arm around her and escorted her from the house.

"It's going to be all right, Mama," said Mrs. Worlds. "You got to take care of my babies for me," she said. Her children are Reginold, 11, and Stephanie, 7.

Mrs. Worlds was whisked from the courthouse and taken by sheriff's deputies nearly 300 miles to Lowell.

Six hours after her arrival she had been processed through orientation and issued prison garb.

"I've been designated a crybaby by the other inmates," said Mrs. Worlds said as her first day in prison drew to a close. "I hope and pray that people on the outside don't forget me."

Victim's Family Files Lawsuit

Relatives of a 27-year-old man killed in a Plainview accident have filed a $15 million damage suit.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court Monday asks $5 million in actual damages and $10 million in exemplary or punitive damages.

Juan Jaquez Juanes reportedly was killed Oct. 2, 1977, at a Plainview grain storage facility.

Plaintiffs — described in the suit as Mexican citizens — include Juanes' widow and four children between the ages of two and eight.

Defendants in the suit's first cause of action include Southwestern Public Service Company; Conlee Grain, Inc.; Conlee Seed, Inc.; Donald Conlee, Douglas Conlee, J.D. Conlee and Ronald Douglas.

According to the suit, Juanes died from electrical shock after a grain auger came into contact with exposed uninsulated wiring.

Defendants named above owned, constructed, maintained and operated the plant and grain storage facility and installed exposed and uninsulated wiring, the suit alleges.

The suit says Juanes was employed by Conlee Seed, Inc., and/or Douglas.

Mail Workers' Pay Hike Rate Highest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal workers now bargaining for a new contract have been getting raises at a rate far higher than other federal workers, the General Accounting Office said today.

The testimony by the congressional auditing agency to a Senate subcommittee agrees with statements made by Carter administration inflation fighters during the negotiations between the Postal Service and its four labor unions.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service entered the talks Monday between the Postal Service and several unions.

"The average salary (including benefits) for bargaining employees has increased from $8,513 in 1970 to $17,331 in 1977, a 104 percent increase," GAO official William J. Anderson told a Senate panel that is considering a bill to make significant changes in the 1970 law that established the Postal Service.

Before that law, postal salaries were set by Congress and were comparable to those of Civil Service workers. The 1970 Postal Reorganization Act gave the postal unions the right to collective bargaining.

Anderson testified that before reorganization a postal employee and his job-level counterpart in other government positions were equal at $7,202. In December 1977, the postal wage at the same job level was $14,307 versus $10,955 for the Civil Service worker, Anderson said.

The unions have asked for pay increases, including cost-of-living allowances, that together would come to about 14 percent at the current inflation rate during the first year of a proposed two-year contract.

Wayne L. Horvitz, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, entered the talks Monday that are up against a July 20 contract expiration date.

"I am hopeful that the presence of Mr. Horvitz will move the talks off dead center," President Emmet Andrews of the American Postal Workers Union said.

Deputy Postmaster General James Conway, the chief Postal Service negotiator, said through a spokesman that tentative agreement was reached on a no-strike provision similar to that in the current contract.

Conway also reported some progress on work rules and added "constructive discussions" have been held on union recognition and discipline procedures.

Meanwhile, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall indirectly criticized administration inflation fighters who put public pressure on unions to reduce wage demands.

Without mentioning names, Marshall said such pressure can cause labor unrest and antagonize union leaders.

Aides acknowledged the inflation fighters were the targets of Marshall's remarks to an economic development conference. The chief administration anti-inflation aides are presidential adviser Robert Strauss and Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

The American Postal Workers, the National Association of Letter Carriers and the mailhandlers division of the Laborers International Union are bargaining jointly with the mail service.

The three unions have asked for wage increases of $1,100 per worker in the first year of a proposed two-year contract, and $865 the second year. This would be in addition to a proposed liberal cost-of-living clause.

The National Association of Rural Letter Carriers is negotiating separately.

Woman Wins Money Suit

CHICAGO (UPI) — After more than four years, finders is finally keepers for Bernice Paset.

The Illinois Appellate Court Wednesday ruled the suburban Wilmette woman who found more than $6,000 four years ago in a bank's safe deposit section can now call the cash her own.

Mrs. Paset found the money on May 8, 1974, sitting on a chair in an examination booth at the Old Orchard Bank and Trust Company in Skokie, the booth was located in the bank's safe deposit section.

When Mrs. Paset notified the bank of her find, she was told she could have the money if no one claimed it within a year.

Advertisements then were placed and bank deposit owners were notified, but one year later the money still had not been claimed.

When Mrs. Paset tried to collect, the bank told her the money had not been "lost," but rather, "misplaced" by the owner. Bank officials said the bank had to retain the find until its rightful owner claimed it.

Mrs. Paset filed a suit in Cook County Circuit court against the bank, but judge Irwin Cohen ruled in favor of the bank.

However, the appellate court Wednesday reversed Cohen's decision, and said the Illinois statute concerning lost and found money applied to Mrs. Paset's case.

Banker Assessed Prison Term

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A former Home Federal Savings Loan Association vice president has been sentenced to one year and one day in federal prison in connection with an alleged scheme to swindle a Texas bank out of nearly $2 million.

Richard E. Taylor, 41, of El Cajon was sentenced Monday by U.S. District Judge Howard B. Turrentine. Taylor was convicted last March of wire fraud by a federal jury.

Taylor and Dennis Wittman, 41, of El Cajon, a former partner of La Jolla financier Allen Glick in the Saratoga Development Co., were indicted last summer on conspiracy charges by a fedeal grand jury.

Wittman died May 29 of an apparent heart attack. He pleaded guilty to wire fraud while the grand jury was deliberating in his case.

Both Taylor and Wittman were accused of using interstate telephone lines in a plot to induce Continental Bank of Texas to loan $1.97 million to a Wittman-controlled firm.

Small Fiji Islands Show Village Life

SUVA, Fiji Islands (UPI) — While most tourists to Fiji visit the main island of Viti Levu, more are heading to the many smaller islands offering unspoiled glimpses of village life.

Regular cruises by schooner and ketch visit the Yassawa group north of Lautoka, stopping on the way for island style barbecues — meat baked in an earth oven and served on palm leaves.

Visiting the island villages is a real introduction to how Fijians have lived for centuries in thatched huts with elaborately designed woven floor mats.

Sickly Workers Studied

CINCINNATI (AP) — In the American workplace, a medical phenomenon known as "hypersusceptibility" is coming under increasing examination.

Hypersusceptibility is a common term for persons developing an illness because of a genetic, environmental or acquired defect.

Researchers are finding that some causes can be found in factories, workshops or manufacturing plants — and they're beginning to do something about it.

"It used to be that industry would just be interested in protecting the worker over an 8-hour day, 40 hours a week. Now there's a greater awareness of the importance of the working environment," said Dr. Stuart Brooks of the University of Cincinnati's Department of Environmental Health.

"They probably realize the economic benefits of not having the cost of retraining," Brooks said.

Types of hypersusceptibility are many and varied, Brooks said. For instance, a worker in an asbestos plant who is a heavy smoker has a 100 times greater chance of developing lung cancer than a non-smoker in the same occupation.

Also, certain workers in production of enzyme detergents can suddenly develop a form of asthma, or some pregnant women who work closely with lead stand a greater chance of having their babies develop blood defects, he said.

Research on hypersusceptibility has been going on for several years but only recently has industry become involved — sometimes not as a totally cooperative participant.

"In many of our studies, management is kind of forced into going along," said Brooks, a leading authority on occupational health.

"We've come across quite a few cases wher industry and management aren't exactly exuberant about us coming in."

Brooks said the scope of the problem is difficult to determine because of the number of illnesses involved.

Also, some workers may feel no effects for several years and then suddenly develop symptoms.

"It's like the person who eats strawberries for years and then eats strawberries one day and breaks out in a rash. The body sometimes works in strange ways," Brooks said.

In 1976, investigators from the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health were called in to evaluate potential hazards associated with the use of certain polyurethane foams at a plant of Kenner Products Co. in Cincinnati.

The investigation was sparked in part by employee complaints of breathing problems, coughing and skin irritations.

Brooks, working with the institute, determined that a process at the toy maker's production line produced an element known as TDI, which can have an asthmatic effect on some hypersensitive workers.

DR. LAMB

Controlling Gout

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had my first attack of gout two years ago. At that time I ate quite a bit of whipped cream and then sometimes later the same thing happened so now I avoid it. Improper shoes will upset me as well as walking. My last test showed a high uric acid so I must watch my diet. On top of that my cholesterol count is quite high which means watching that as well.

After comparing the two diets there is very little I may eat. Is there anything you can suggest? Except for high blood pressure, which is under control, with medication, my health is very good.

I am 70, weigh 125 pounds and am 5-foot-3. I am a widow and live alone and enjoy life. I still mow my own lawn and do lots of gardening. I don't smoke or drink. I had to give up coffee and all drinks containing caffeine several ago. I like meat and have wondered if that would be harmful. I do trim off all the fat. I would appreciate any suggestions you might have.

DEAR READER — Injury can sometimes cause acute attacks of gout in gouty prone individuals. That's probably shoes caused you to have an attack.

Because of the availability of new medicines over the past several years the diet to control the uric acid is not considered as important as it once was. The majority of the uric in your blood stream is formed by your own cells and does not come from the food that you eat. With medicines, the amount that's produced by your cells can be controlled much more effectively than any control by dietary measures.

Nevertheless it is still important to limit your calories and stay thin and not to eat high-fat rich foods. In fact fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries resulting in heart attacks and strokes is a frequent complication of gout so today greater emphasis is placed on eating a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet and keeping your weight down.

To this end it would be perfectly all right for you to eat a moderate amount of lean meat with all the fat removed and to avoid fat. Of course it would be better to broil or boil it and avoid frying. You can use chicken; if you remove the skin you'll get rid of a lot of the fat from it, and you can of course use fish.

The old gout diets particularly limited the organ meats and you wouldn't eat many of those anyway if you're trying to stay on a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet for other health reasons.

I'd also like to suggest that you be careful not to go on a crash diet. Rapid excessive weight loss can cause an acute attack of gout also. So if you want to lose weight, you should do it gradually. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 2-3, on gout to give you more information on it and what the various medicines do and how to live with it.

Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Crystals May Affect Balance

By WILLIAM SILBERG

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Studies of tiny crystals in the inner ear may show physicians how to treat the loss of balance often experienced by the elderly.

University of Michigan anatomist Muriel Ross says the loss of the microscopic clumps of crystals, called otoliths, may be the reason so many older people lose their balance and suffer debilitating falls.

Many doctors previously had described the loss of balance in the elderly as due to a loss of blood circulation.

Dr. Ross and her colleagues in the UM School of Medicine found that the tiny clumps of calcite deteriorate with age, possibly explaining why so many people in their 60s, 70s and 80s often lose their balance.

The crystals add weight to the balancing system contained in the innear ear, she said, making it more sensitive to gravity.

"We now know that the crystals do degenerate with age. This is a regular aging process," the researcher said in an interview. "As a result of that work, we are beginning to look at the crystals in a slightly different way."

The degeneration of the crystals, which are slightly larger than a red blood cell, apparently results from the action of a chemical solution in the inner ear, she said.

Dr. Ross said the research involved after-death studies of inner ear crystals from fetal stages through advanced age.

Science Today

The crystals were examined with an electron micropscope, which magnified them 3,000 times.

The crystals were observed to grow both in number and size from the fetal stage into youth. However, degeneration began at age 50, with the crystals starting to show signs of pitting and etching.

By age 70, the researchers found, the tiny otoliths had nearly vanished from the inner ear.

Dr. Ross recently reported her findings to an international meeting in Sweden of the Barnay Society — researchers concerned with the function of the inner ear's balancing system.

If doctors can better understand the chemical interactions that cause the crystals to dissolve, a reversal or treatment of the process eventually may be possible, she said.

"It may be that, even after we have discovered the cause of the chemical changes in the liquid, nothing can be done other than to observe it as a consequence of aging," she said.

"It also might be possible in the future, through a special diet supplement or other means, to maintain this chemical balance in the inner ear and thereby preserve people's equilibrium despite age."

Little attention has been paid to this particular aspect of the otoliths and Dr. Ross acknowledged her research, while possibly holding great promise for future treatment, is not terribly glamorous.

Insurance Panelist Undecided

AUSTIN (AP) — Ned Price, a cautious and deliberate man, has emerged as the State Insurance Board's swing man on whether to raise Texans' homeowners insurance rates.

The board was expected to vote on homeowners rates Monday, but postponed action, apparently to give Price more time to make up his mind.

"I can't say whether it will be one or two days or one or two weeks," said chairman Hugh Yantis.

Yantis said he personally was ready to vote immediately to give Texans their third straight year without a change in rates.

He said companies are making more money each year as premiums rise to keep pace with rising home values. He also said 80 percent of the homeowners business is written at reduced rates.

"On what I presently know, I think there would be a small increase. . . . The inflation rate has been such that you know those things (home repair items) are more," Manford said.

Price said he simply hadn't made up his mind but predicted the board would be able to announce a decision "in a matter of days, and a few days at that."

Yantis and Manford are subject to Senate confirmation if the special legislative session that began Monday lasts at least 10 days. Yantis is in serious trouble because his hometown senator, Lloyd Doggett of Austin, opposes his confirmation.

Manford might also have confirmation problems. Former board chairman Joe Christie, a self-styled consumerist, urged Gov. Dolph Briscoe not to reappoint him.

Price answered "no comment" when asked whether the confirmation issue had anything to do with the delay.

"You should do your job however it affects it. I think you have to live with your conscience," Manford said of the confirmation question.

Yantis was asked whether he felt his record on the board had blunted Doggett's criticism that he favored large corporations over consumers.

"I think it has," he said, but he refused to say whether he had found a senator to sponsor his confirmation.

A board vote on homeowners rates was expected last Thursday, but was postponed.

The board's public hearing on property rates was held Feb. 22. Its staff recommended a 13.1 percent average statewide increase in homeowners rates.

Rates have been unchanged since July 1976. Last year, the board ordered a slight overall decrease in overall property rates but suspended it when companies sought a rehearing.

Even if homeowners rates do not rise statewide, some changes might occur if the board approves an industry request to adjust premium levels to reflect losses more accurately.

Board actuary Gaylon Daniel said the proposal would cut rates on houses insured for less than $15,000 or for more than $42,000. Between those two figures there would be increases of as much as 6.7 percent.

County Gives Jail Pacts

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County commissioners awarded contracts Monday for the new county jail, and construction on the 18-month, $3.6 million project is expected to start in a week to 10 days.

Furr's Construction Co., winner of the general construction contract, will start work about five days after performance and payment bonds are arranged and the contract is signed, Stephen Ruten, company vice president, said this morning.

Edwin Stephens of Maeker & Stephens architectural and engineering firm, the company hired by the county to supervise the project, said contract preparations will begin today.

The commissioners awarded the contracts Monday afternoon.

One of three proposed 90-man cell blocks will be left unfinished to hold the cost within the $3.8 million the county will get in federal revenue sharing money through 1980.

The contracts for electrical and mechanical work, general construction and equipment, which means mainly jail cells and related machinery, come to $3,340,500.

Additional costs of about $240,000 for architectural fees and $50,000 for kitchen equipment will bring the total expense to about $3.6 million.

The contracts were awarded to Furr's Construction Co., $1,420,934 for general construction; O.W. Chisum Co., mechanical $568,025 for mechanical work; Row-Wall Electric Co., $315,460; Pellerin Laundry Machinery Co. of Kenner, La., $26,081; and Roanoke Iron & Bridge Co. of Roanoke, Va., $990,000 for detention equipment.

Downtown traffic and parking will be affected.

Avenue G will be taken up by the new jail area from Broadway to Main Street.

taken up by the new jail area from Broadway to Main Street.

The construction site will occupy a third of the widths of Avenue F from Main to Broadway; Main from the front of the present jail to Avenue F; and Broadway from Avenue F to the southeast corner of the county office building at Broadway and Avenue G.

A contractor is allowed by law to take up to one-third of a street.

Architect Arnold Maeker said the main effect on the streets will be to eliminate parking in those locations.

Construction east of the existing jail should start by late this month, Maeker said.

The new jail was made necessary when U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward ruled the present jail unacceptable in the spring of 1977.

Moving to accept the separate low bids for everything but the detention equipment, Commissioner Alton Brazell said, "I don't mind making it (the motion). That federal judge told me to, and I know what the alternative is.

"Let this be a lesson to you," he said. "If you get involved in writing a national constitution, don't give too much power to the federal courts. Don't give judges the power to legislate."

Roanoke had the second-lowest bid for substitute or less expensive cells and machinery. The low bid of Willo Products Co. of Decatur, Ala., was adjudged untenable because it would have necessitated hiring seven to 10 more deputies to supervise the jail and would not have represented a long-term savings.

The combined bid of Page & Wirtz Construction Co. of Lubbock of $2,465,000 for everything but detention equipment was considered because of concern that the

Citibus Deficit Solutions Mulled

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Mindful of the budget-cutting mood of both the City Council and the public, the Lubbock Transit Advisory Board discussed Monday possible solutions to the Citibus system's operating deficit.

The discussion focused on a consultant's report and recommendations on ways to reduce the deficit, expected to cost the city $270,000 this fiscal year.

The deficit could be reduced by about $35,000 (half city funds), the report says, primarily by reducing some routes at midday.

The realignment of some routes is recommended, including the suggestion that more routes serve South Plains Mall, but board members seemed less than enthusiastic about many of the route suggestions.

As for the suggestion that some midday service be reduced, Ernie Prenevost, manager of Lubbock Transit Corp., said cutting midday service sometimes backfires.

Although it has increased revenue per mile on some routes, Prenevost said more often the reduction eliminates morning and afternoon riders, as well as midday riders.

In rating each Citibus route by revenue per mile, the consultant ranked the Arnett Benson route first and the Melonie Park route last.

The Arnett Benson route earns nearly 34 cents per mile, while the Melonie Park route earns only 8 cents per mile.

However, even the most "profitable" routes lose money, the study shows. The Hub Homes route had the lowest loss with a $9,252 deficit each year. The greatest deficit appears on the Melonie Park route with an annual loss of $43,973.

Transit coordinator John Wilson noted the most successful routes were shorter routes and ones serving North and East Lubbock, while the Southwest Lubbock routes were both longer and less successful.

Transit board members said they have received numerous complaints of empty buses circulating in Southwest Lubbock.

The consultant's report, designed to assess the performance of Citibus since routes were curtailed last September, also reveals a fare of 89 cents per passenger would be necessary for the bus system to break even.

But "public transit cannot be expected to produce a profit," the study concludes. "While some cling to the view of public transit as a business that should pay its own way, public transit should more equitably be viewed as one of several public services such as police or fire protection, recreational facilities, sewage treatment, and other functons provided by a city government," the study says.

Although the bus system cannot make money, the study says "efficiency and effectiveness in the delivery and use of transit must be optimized to the extent possible in order to keep the deficit at a reasonable level."

However, board member Bill Dean noted, taxpayers generally do not refer to Citibus "in the same breath as the police department."

"No one accepts the fact that public transit just doesn't make money," he said.

Although the board took no action on the consultant's report Monday, board members asked Wilson to prepare four alternatives before the next meeting:

—Increasing revenue by raising bus fares.

—Operate at a minimum level, but not

Ector Inmate's Mother Claims Immunity Deal

ODESSA (UPI) — An Ector County jail inmate has told investigators he witnessed the death of a Mexican-American in the jail, but now the inmate's mother says the county sheriff is trying to make a deal with her son about his testimony.

In a telephone conversation with Justice Department officials, Anita Molinar said her son, Orlando, 21, was offered immunity if he would "cooperate" in his grand jury testimony concerning the death of Larry Lozano.

Mrs. Molinar said Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught had offered her son immunity from attempted murder charges if he would help clear the department.

Faught has denied the allegation.

Mrs. Molinar said she talked Friday with Dan F. Rinzel of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division in Washington, and had filed a complaint saying Faught discussed the possibility of immunity with her son.

Rinzel confirmed the conversation with Mrs. Molinar but refused to elaborate "since I'm bound by law not to talk about federal grand jury proceedings."

Mrs. Molinar first discussed the contact between her son and the sheriff in a meeting of the Concerned Citizens for Justice Committee, a group which contends Lozano's civil rights were violated in the period following his Jan. 10 arrest until the night he died in the jail Jan. 22.

Molinar, still held in the jail, reportedly has told investigators he witnessed violations of Lozano's civil rights and he was present the night Lozano died.

Faught Monday denied Mrs. Molinar's allegation, adding he will not seek immunity for anyone in the case. He said Monday was the first time he had heard the charges.

Faught initially attributed Lozano's death to injuries he inflicted upon himself by battering his head against a window of a jail cell door. An Ector County coroner's jury ruled in April the death was accidental, but that Lozano died of injuries he received while being restrained by law officers the night of his death.

Wet-Dry Battle Now Confused

ABILENE (UPI) — The battle between "wet" and "dry" forces over the sale of liquor in town became more intense and more confusing Monday with the County Commissioners Court first declaring the dry forces the winners of a recent election and then changing their minds and deciding they weren't sure who won.

In unofficial tabulations, wet forces won a June 17 local option liquor election by 131 votes, which signalled an end to more than six decades in which it was illegal to sell alcholic beverages in the city of Abilene.

But by another split vote and against the advice of the panel's legal adviser, the commissioner's court Monday morning threw out ballot box 19 from Wylie (a small community south of Abilene), saying a boundary dispute rendered the votes invalid.

Meeting again Monday afternoon, the commissioners then declared the dry forces winners by a narrow 35-vote margin.

But meeting once more Monday, the commissioners finally decided they might have made a mistake in throwing out the Wylie votes, rescinded all previous action and agreed to meet Friday to go through it all again.

Last week, leaders of the wet forces filed suit against the commissioners, trying to force them to canvass the election results and declare the wet forces victors.

Historic Landmark Gives View Of Famed Artist's Life, Work

"I live here six months of the year — in heaven," the famed sculptor Daniel Chester French once remarked to a visitor to this summer home. "The other six months of the year I live, well — in New York."

The idyllic setting to which French was referring was Chesterwood, the studio and summer residence in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts where he worked for more than three decades. Chesterwood is now a National Historic Landmark that is owned by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, a private, nonprofit organization. It is open to the public from May 1 through Nov. 5.

Perhaps no home has had a closer relationship to its owner than Chesterwood to Daniel Chester French. The artist crated and personally cared for the extensive garden. One of his closest friends, architect Henry Bacon, designed a sculpture studio according to the specific needs and desires that French expressed.

It was in this studio, completed in 1898, that French created many of his most famous works, including the seated Lincoln that each year awes three million visitors to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. Plaster casts of that work, a model of the Concord, Mass, Minute Man statue, and French's last work, the magnificent marble Andromeda, are still on display at Chesterwood.

The studio was uniquely French's, incorporating many features he invented and that enabled him to become one of the most prolific and best-known American sculptors of the late 1800s and early 1900s. Large skylights in the studio ceiling provided ample natural lighting for the delicate work of modeling clay. When they were nearing completion, French mounted his statues on a railroad car, which he and his assistants pushed along a set of railroad tracks through huge double doors. In this way the artist could view his work in full sunlight, as it would be seen after it had been installed in a park or public place. Today, French's sculpture can be seen in 21 states and Paris, France.

Vistors to Chesterwood find much the same experience as those French frequently entertained between 1898 and his death in 1931. He liked to bring friends to his studio and kept a large reception room there for their comfort. Today the studio displays more than 100 plaster models, bronze statuettes, tools, books, drawings and other items.

French and architect Bacon were longtime companions and working partners. They teamed up to create the Lincoln Memorial, Bacon designing the building and French the sculpture, as well as many other sites in the United States.

So when in 1900 French decided to build a summer home for himself to replace the old farmhouse he had purchased a few years earlier, he again turned to bacon to design a Colonial Revival style house.

French's choice of the Berkshires for his summer studio and home was based on the natural beauty of the area — dotted with wildflowers in spring, rich in green vegatation in summer and alive with the rusts and golds of autumn.

In addition to the house and studio, the 120-acre estate includes a barn, the only remaining building from the original working farm French purchased. In 1962 the barn was remodeled into an exhibition gallery by Helen Douglass French, AIA, a relative of the artist. It serves as a museum with exhibits related to the American arts.

After French's death, his wife, Mary, continued to use Chesterwood as her summer residence. When she died in 1939, the property became the permanent residence of her daughter, Margaret French Cresson, who bequeathed it to the National Trust for Historic Preservation in 1969.

Intimate glimpses of the life of one of America's greatest creators of public sculpture, panoramic vistas of the Berkshire mountains, quiet walks through gardens and forests, even a clay modelling area where visitors can try their hand at sculpting — it is hard to say which is the finest attraction at Chesterwood.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago I falsified my age on my driver's license. (I deducted three years from my birth date.) I am now 62, and I look every year of it.

I am actually entitled to some senior citizen benefits, but my driver's license says I'm only 59!

In order to change the birth date on my driver's license, I have to write to the State Department of Motor Vehicles. I haven't written to them because I'm terrified of the consequences. I've never been in any kind of trouble in my entire lifetime, and I have an unblemished driving record.

Will I lose my license? I can't have that happen! Will I be arrested? Will I have to pay a stiff fine? What will my punishment be?

Please find out what's in store for me. If the penalty is too great, I'll leave well enough alone and forget the benefits. I don't want to go to jail, but I think they may have to lock me up in a mental institution if I have to worry much longer over this mess I got myself into years ago. Has anyone else ever had this problem?

If you use this letter, for heaven's sake, please change my name.

WORRIED

Dear Worried: Many others have had this problem, and if that's the worst crime anyone ever committed, we'd all be saints.

Simply provide proof of your real age to the Department of Motor Vehicles (a copy of your birth certificate is considered acceptable documentation), and all will be forgiven and forgotten.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: At the bottom of your column you say, "You'll feel better if you get it off your chest," so I am writing to get something off my chest.

I get along OK with my mother-in-law, although deep down I've always had the feeling that she never really liked me.

What bugs me most about her is this: When she calls our house and I answer the phone, she says, "Let me talk to Dennis!"

She never asks me how I am or anything.

I don't have the nerve to tell her to her face how much this irritates me, but if I were to pick up the paper one day and see this letter in your column, it would really make my day.

SOMEBODY WHO FEELS LIKE NOBODY

Dear Somebody: I'm glad that I was able to make your day.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Recently I received an invitation to a bridal shower that was to take place four days after the invitation had been mailed.

I hardly knew the bride-to-be, and besides, the shower was being held in a city 350 miles away! To me, it was a blatant request for a gift, since it was obvious that I couldn't possibly attend. Feeling as I did, I didn't respond (even though the invitation was R.S.V.P.), nor did I send a gift.

Later, my mother said I showed poor manners by not sending a gift, and she felt I certainly should have responded to the R.S.V.P. I say no one ever expected me to come, and they showed poor manners by even sending me the invitation under those circumstances.

Can you settle this argument for us? Is it proper to send bridal shower invitations to people you know can't possibly attend?

UNDER FIRE IN OREGON

Dear Under Fire: Your mother is half right. You showed poor manners in not responding to the R.S.V.P. However, a gift is always optional under these circumstances. No one is required to give one.

Opening lead: Nine of ◇.

After South opened two no trump, North employed the Stayman Convention in an attempt to locate a major suit fit—with his unbalanced distribution, the hand rated to play better in a suit. East took advantage of the vulnerability to introduce a lead-directing bid, and when South showed his major suit, North had just enough to raise.

West led the nine of diamonds, complicating life for declarer. (On any other lead, declarer would have to exercise only a modicum of care in the play to virtually ensure his contract.) Declarer won the ace of diamonds, drew three rounds of trumps and led a club to the ten. East won the king, cashed a diamond and exited with a spade. Declarer tried the finesse, and ended up losing a spade, a diamond and two clubs for down one.

Declarer's line would have succeeded if West held both missing club honors, but that was not too likely in view of the bidding and the fact that West did not lead the king of clubs. What declarer did overlook was the possibility of a club finesse!

After drawing trumps, declarer should have led a low club to the eight in dummy. If this loses to the nine, declarer can concede another club, ruff two clubs in dummy and then fall back on the spade finesse for his contract.

As the cards lie, the eight of clubs will force the king from East. The best East can do is cash a diamond and shift to a spade. Declarer rises with the king and leads another club to the ten, which drives out the ace. Now declarer can discard two spades from dummy on the queen and jack of clubs, and then ruff his losing spade in dummy. That will hold his losses to a diamond and two clubs.

Priorities Eliminate 'Superwoman' Myth

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Carole Suphlina says its time for women to stop trying to live up to the "Superwoman" myth.

"I don't know why modern day cliches are harder to fight than the traditional ones," she said. "We all laugh about the blushing bride and pink and white babies. But somehow the idea of being a 'Superwoman' maintains itself. We read about it all the time. And we fantasize about other women being more capable than we are."

Mrs. Suphlina, 35, is a wife, mother, and worker. She has an 8-year-old daughter, Alexandra, and an infant son, Nicholas Oliver. She is director of human relations here at Marymount Manhattan College.

Four years ago, Mrs. Suphlina decided to go to work. She then began discovering the difficulties of combining her job with family responsibilities.

"My response as a 'Suprwoman' was overcompensation," sh said. "It didn't matter if I came home tired at night, I told my daughter, 'Let's play,' and weekends, 'Let's do.' I didn't have a spare minute to myself."

Now Mrs. Suphlina says she has learned that she has chosen three very diverse roles — that of wife, mother and worker — three very demanding roles that take a lot of her time and energy.

Mrs. Suphlina said she had also learned that she had her own physical and emotional limitations.

"I just can't be everything all the time to everybody, including myself," she said. So, Mrs. Suphlina now tries not to do everything all at once. She tries to pick out "priorities."

Mrs. Suphlina says part of the "Superwoman" myth is that "every Superwoman is super-organized" — and is therefore able to handle her various roles with ease.

"Well, I like to think I am organized, and yet what used to constitute just changes in my life when I was home with my daughter now constitute upheavals. Babysitters get sick, children get sick, babysitters quit for better jobs.

"My daughter's school closed for a week last year because of the energy crisis. I was organized, she was supposed to be in school. And that's where the craziness comes in. Because there's a constant need to remake your time, rebudget your time, again and again," she said.

There's another myth that Mrs. Suphlina would like to get rid of. The one that says "having a job makes a woman more interesting to her husband."

"Well, my skills have sharpened since I went to work. My intellect has grown, and you know, I hope it's true, I hope I am an intersting person. But I hope that I was an interesting person before I went to work, as a matter of fact.

"And as much as I may be more interesting as a person, the day-to-day intimacy of a marriage is much more difficult to maintain when both you and your husband are absorbed in your work, you're both tired, or you simply don't see each other. And that's true many nights, especially if you're trying to work out child care on a standard basis," she said.

Despite her busy life, Mrs. Suphlina finds time to appear on panel discussions about women and work, sponsored by a national cosmetics company. And she is actively involved in the founding of the Manhattan Center for Children of Divorce, an interest she gained while teaching a college course about divorce and children.

Does Mrs. Suphlina regret her decision to go to work?

She is emphatic: "Absolutely not. If by some fluke of fate, I became independently wealthy, I would continue to work. I don't want to trade my children in. And I like being married."

Genealogy Class Seeks Indian Heritage, Ancestry

PROVO, Utah (AP) — In the Rocky Mountain town of Provo, Utah, the Indians are hunting again — but this time for their ancestors, in what is believed to be the first class for teaching Indians how to search out their roots. Eleven tribes are represented in the Indian genealogy class at Brigham Young University.

"Contrary to what most people believe, there are many records available from which Indians may find genealogical information," said Dr. V. Robert Westover, assistant professor of Indian education at BYU.

"Most of the history of the tribes has been written by non-Indians because the tribes did not have a written language," added Westover. "Of the five so-called 'civilized' tribes — Cherokee, Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek and Seminole — only the Cherokees had a written language, and that was after 1800. Today more than 200 tribes have written languages, though."

Where do they start?

First they need to check with their relatives for information, said Westover, then determine their tribal affiliation. The Indian census rolls (1884-1940), available on microfilm, should be checked next, then the records of the National Archives and Federal Record Centers of the region in which the tribe in question is located. Last, a check of the records of churches which may have been active in missionary work among the tribe in question may be helpful.

"A possible additional benefit from the search: students whose ancestors are on the tribal rolls may receive financial aid for college. Some tribes even have allotments coming from tribal businesses or from leasing oil, gas or mineral rights," said Westover.

Although records are available, there are still some problems in tracing Indian genealogy, he added.

"For example," he explained, "there is a scarcity of birth, death and marriage records for Indians. Indian census started in about 1880. Records prior to that time are mostly from tribal rolls, land allotment records, church or mission records and hospital records.

"Most Indian families have kept word-of-mouth histories of their families, but some of the older Indians' religious beliefs forbid talking about the dead. This often makes them reluctant to tell researchers about their ancestors."

One major difficulty for the Indian genealogists is that the kinship classification may vary among different tribes. In the same generation, the term "father" may apply to an uncle, father or stepfather. "Sister" could mean first cousin, half-sister, daughter or sister.

"Curiously enough, when my students fill in pedigree charts they almost always place their mother above their father. The father was responsible for protecting the family and obtaining meat," Westover said.

The Mormon Church is currently microfilming the Indian records at the National Archives, and about 2,500 rolls of microfilm should be at the Genealogical Library of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) in Salt Lake City within a year. The Genealogical Society is also purchasing four to five million pages of Indian documents from the Oklahoma Historical Society. Microfilming of Indian records is also being conducted from private Indian collections, church mission records, Bureau of Indian Affairs and tribal records, and the public archives of Canada.

Mix together in small bowl flour, dry soup mix and dry salad dressing mix. Rub mixture over entire chicken, including inside cavity. Place excess mixture in cavity. Place coated chicken in baking bag; tie bag loosely and pierce holes in top. In shallow baking pan, place chicken-in-the-bag. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Excellent served hot or sliced cold.

THOUGHTS ON DESIRE

"The face the most fair to our vision allowed
Is the face we encounter and lose in the crowd,
The thought that most thrills our existence is one,
Which, before we can frame it in language, is gone."

Use of Meat, Poultry Drippings Cuts Cholesterol, Saves Money

NEW YORK (UPI) — Have you estimated recently how much of your food budget goes for butter, margarine, cooking and salad oils and solid shortenings? Apart from cutting your consumption, there's another way to save money on fats.

Grandma knew it well. She used meat and poultry drippings for cooking to add flavor, avoid waste and save money.

The British, many Europeans and even the Chinese follow the custom today. One favorite family-style recipe for Chinese cabbage calls for stir-frying the vegetable with rendered chicken fat, then steaming it briefly.

The only drawback for some people is the cholesterol count of animal fats. But you can minimize that by using rendered animal fats in combination with vegetable oil or a low-cholesterol type margarine.

The cholesterol content of such rendered fats is low: 11 milligrams per tablespoon for chicken, 12 mg. for lard and 13 mg. each for beef, turkey, duck, lamb, veal and goose fat, according to John Weihrauch, a research chemist at the USDA Consumer and Food Economics Institute in Hyattsville, Md.

Chicken, beef and lamb fat are the most flavorful; duck and goose fat are white and the blandest.

Weihrauch said the cholesterol count of vegetable oils is zero. And, of course, the polyunsaturated fat content varies from neutral to high, depending on the vegetable from which each oil is obtained. He said sunflower seed and safflower oils are "about as polyunsaturated as you can get" and corn oil is close behind.

Butter, being an animal fat, contains 12 mg. cholesterol per pat — about 1 teaspoon.

The cholesterol count of margarines varies according to the amount of animal fat each contains.

Skylab Still Has Orbit Problems

HOUSTON (UPI) — Scientists worked overnight to reposition Skylab, which for the third time has tumbled out of an attitude intended to keep it orbiting until a space shuttle crew can boost it higher of control is crash to earth.

Johnson Space Center spokesman Charles Redmond said officials expected to correct the problem within two days, although more of Skylab's thruster fuel — which might be needed later — would be used up.

A weekend power failure while Skylab was on the dark side of the Earth shut off on-board computer systems and slowed gyroscopes holding the spacecraft in minimum drag orbit through the outermost atmosphere.

As the power was failing, a loss of tracking due to ground equipment failure at stations in California and Spain prevented scientists from taking corrective action until it was too late, Redmond said.

Skylab's power-supplying solar panels lost their ability to lock onto the sun. The spacecraft, last used in 1974, now has its nose pointed toward Earth and is orbiting lengthwise, dragging against the outer atmosphere.

If not re-oriented, it would start to wobble and slow toward an uncontrolled re-entry into the atmosphere from its current 240-mile high orbit.

"We call it an ill-timed chain of unfortunate circumstances," Redmond said. "Apparently fate doesn't like what we're trying to do. But all is not lost."

Redmond said flight controllers planned to reorient Skylab as soon as computers restart, solar panels lock back onto the sun and power monitors indicate there is enough stored electric energy to restart gyroscopes.

"Then it will e a simple ballgame," he said. "We've done it before."

Redmond said the space craft had enough thruster fuel to accomplish the re-orientation, although scientists had hoped to use no more before arrival of a space shuttle sometime in 1979.

"It's not a real problem. We have enough fuel for reserve and the maneuver," Redmond said.

He said the trouble started Saturday when the spacecraft permanently lost the second of eight power conditioning groups, which convert solar power into battery energy. Another had failed last week.

Controllers reprogrammed the six remaining power groups and thought the rearrangement would carry Skylab around the dark side of the Earth, when it draws no power from the sun. The power proved inadequate and systems, including the gyroscopes, started shutting down.

Redmond said further reprogramming of power systems should insure the success of the save-Skylab mission, which involves space shuttle rendezvous and use of a remote-controlled rocket to lock onto and move Skylab.

"But if this happens repeatedly, you get to the point where you don't have enough power," Redmond said.

Skylab, first reoriented June 11, tumbled out of orbit a few days later and again late last month. Each time, controllers brought it back into the desired flight profile.

BLOWOUT — Robert D. Doyle of Martinsburg, W.Va., walks into a House oversight and investigations subcommittee hearing in Washington Monday with a Firestone 500 radial tire he says blew out over the past weekend. Though not on the schedule, Doyle was invited to testify before the panel, which is hearing testimony on the Firestone 500 radial the Transportation Department wants recalled. (AP Laserphoto)

Tire Safety Hearing Prompts 600 Letters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a House subcommittee investigating the safety of the Firestone 500 steel-belted radial tire says the hearings have prompted more letters — about 600 — than any other probe, with 70 percent of the writers complaining about the tire.

Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., concluded hearings on the Firestone 500 by saying that "clear indications of a safety problem ... continue to mount" against the tire.

His comments were made Monday as his investigations subcommittee concluded a series of hearings on the tire, which the Transportation Department said over the weekend has a "safety-related defect" and should be recalled.

Firestone, which estimates there are more than 13 million of the tires on the road, maintains there is no safety problem. A final determination on whether to order a recall will be made after a public hearing Aug. 7.

Witnesses at Monday's hearing including company officials, who defended the tire, and one consumer who brought the shredded remains of his tire to the hearing room.

Robert Doyle of Martinsburg, W.Va., said his tire blew out last week while driving to Ohio, and that the steel belt had whipped the underside of his auto, causing about $240 in damage. He said the tire had been driven only 15,000 miles.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said it has looked into almost 7,000 consumer complaints dealing with "more than 14,000 individual tire failures, 29 deaths, more than 50 injuries and hundreds of property-damage accidents."

But John Floberg, vice president and general counsel of Firestone Tire Rubber Co., defended the tire, and said debate over its safety has caused a major financial setback for his firm.

"I do know we have been hurt to the tune of scores of millions of dollars," he said.

A recall would cost Firestone millions of dollars more since, under federal regulations, the company would have to replace — free of charge — every tire sold within the past three years.

Thomas Mertz, Firestone's director of trade sales, acknowledged that the company had an adjustment program for the Firestone 500 that was more liberal than that of competitors — "to ease the shock (of replacement costs) so the customer would stay on radial tires."

He said many of the tire failures are caused by too-low pressure in the tires — a suggestion rejected by Moss.

Tires identical to the Firestone 500 are sold by Shell Oil Co. dealers under the brand name "Super Shell Steel Radial," and by Montgomery Ward Co. as the "Grappler Radial 8000." They also would be covered by any recall.

Group Seeks Improved Rail System In Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Supporters of improved railroad service say the U.S. government should improve its Amtrak train system, especially in Texas, instead of cutting it back to save money.

The "train fans" — as they called themselves — delivered their message Monday at the opening of a two-day public hearing in Dallas sponsored by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Purpose of the nationwide hearings is to gather citizens' comments on Department of Transportation proposals to trim the entire Amtrak system from 27,000 miles to 18,000 miles and eliminate two Chicago-to-Texas routes.

Most of the more than 50 witnesses Monday said Amtrak has failed financially because it has provided shoddy service and poor schedules and relied on outdated equipment.

James Hoffmeister of Houston, chairman of the Texas Association of Railroads, said Amtrak schedules "have made it simply impossible to get around Texas by train."

He said frequent, high-speed service on a Dallas-Houston-San Antonio route would be profitable.

James Gough of the Houston chapter of the Texas Association of Railroad Passengers, said Amtrak's level of service is too low to pay the cost of the corporate structure that runs it.

Gough said he flew to the hearing from Houston because riding the train would have required him to miss two days of work.

Other witnesses, especially older ones, recalled the golden era of railroads.

"The railroads are responsible for this country being what it is — or was," said Burt C. Blanton of Dallas, who rode the rails 400,000 miles before retiring from work.

Another witness who supported expansion and improvement of Amtrak was Robert Wagar of Dallas, who worked for Amtrak for about a year. He said his job was "frustrating."

"I used everything from rubber bands to bubble gum to keep things working," he said, recalling numerous mechanical failures on the train where he worked as a dining car waiter.

Longview Mayor Bob Maness said his city's survival 100 years ago was due largely to the coming of the railroad. He said Longview will fight to keep passenger service there.

If anything, Maness said, Congress should improve Amtrak's passenger service. He said Longview's 4 a.m. boarding time on the Inter-American train — one of two DOT wants eliminated — has done little to encourage ridership.

R.E. Foiles, vice president of Trailways Inc., the bus company, was one of a few offering the opposing view. Armed with statistics and projections, Foiles said the government must add $2 for every dollar paid by an Amtrak customer to keep the railroad running.

"Amtrak had a $530 million operating budget last year," he said.

Foiles said if Amtrak is to be continued, it should be confined to sections of the country where it can break even. He said the 7-year-old servce has been a "costly failure in most places."

Hearing officer Jim Tuite said a second public forum will be conducted in San Antonio Wednesday. The hearings will continue across the country until Sept. 30 when results are reported to the ICC. The agency will consider the data and make its report to Congress by Dec. 30.

Community Claims Government Lied

CALLIHAM (AP) — Back in 1971 the future looked pleasant, though not glistening with progress, for the self-sufficient folks in this South Texas community.

The wants were simple.

"We put down our mobile home. We planted our trees and everything. I figured by the time I was old we'd have shade," said H.E. Sewell. "Now they tell us we'll have to go."

The 20 families that still live here and the community itself will soon be gone. Calliham, once a bustling small town, will be merely the setting for memories in the mind's eye of those who grew up here in the brush country.

The community will be replaced by nothing. Federal officials have calculated the area will be needed for the Choke Canyon Reservoir to gush into in case of flooding.

Last weekend about 500 former residents came home for one last look at the swimming hole, the old Rice Drug Store and the other things that make up their recollections.

There was bitterness mixed with the nostalgia.

"If they'd told us the truth right at the beginning...but they've been lying to us here lately," said Henrty Shenkir, a McMullen County commissioner. "You know, when the federal government people start lying to you, why..."

Calliham residents don't appreciate the way the federal officials went about planning the community's doom.

"We read about it in the paper after it was over," Bobby Shannon, who now lives in Tilden, said about a 1973 congressional subcommitte hearing in Three Rivers.

Herman Smith, like Sewell, put up a new home here several years back.

"At the time, they were figuring on building the dam further down, you know. Nobody thought this would happen," he lamented.

The federal government will buy the locals out and will set up New Calliham, a mile to the south.

Some of the residents here say the government has lied about the need for the land.

"If we'd stuck together and decided to stay, we'd have stayed, because this place isn't going to go under water. That's a lie," charged Shenkir.

The commission and others doubt the estimates that say Callihaam would be five feet under if the reservoir flooded.

"They changed the engineering to get us off. That's another lie," Shenkir said.

Callihan was once a busy place. Gaslights lit the two-block business district in the brighter days. There was a plank sidewalk, and the town boasted three hotels and four beer joints. The local high school enrollment was 300.

But the boom years of oil and gas exploration ended and World War II marked the beginning of a slow decline.

Nevertheless, the residents remained proud and enterprising. They never incorporated, but the community managed to provide services and facilities.

But the hard work and community spirit will go largely unrecognized by the federal government. It plans to seize the gym without compensation because Calliham is not a city and does not own the property on which the building rests.

It was in that gym that Calliham residents, past and present, gathered Saturday night to swing around the floor to the musical backdrop of "Cotton Eyed Joe."

"I guess we're just like ants to the federal government," Shannon said. "They're so big and they don't even see us."

Marijuana Dealer Hits IRS on Tax

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Kansas City man filed a complaint in U.S. District Court Monday, charging that the Internal Revenue Service illegally collected $339,945 in income taxes from him.

The IRS says the taxes levied against Charles D. Bremson, 25, were based on income from the sale of marijuana.

A letter sent by the IRS to Bremson states the tax was based on a taxable income of $512,250 in marijuana sales between January and May. In the letter, it was estimated that Bremson allegedly sold 600 pounds a week at an average price of $295 a pound from Jan. 1 to May 13.

Bremson was charged May 15 in Kansas City, Kan., with intent to distribute and conspiracy to distribute marijuana, hashish and hashish oil.

Soils Hamper Cotton Roots

What this means, says the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station's Dr. C.J. Gerard, is that "shallow reservoirs" of available water in these soils must be replenished frequently during dry spells when cotton is blooming and fruiting if high yields are expected.

Gerard found that similar conditions can exist in the vertisol or fine-textured, shrink and swell soils of South Texas.

The scientist, based at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Chillicothe-Vernon, points out that soils with shallow reservoirs are those with limited capacity to hold water. What moisture there is, is used quickly when the cotton plants are blooming and fruiting and the weather is dry.

Citibus Mulled

The alternatives are in anticipation of questions by the council or by citizens at a public hearing on a $3.3 million capital grant.

The grant hearing was scheduled for Thursday's council meeting, but indefinitely postponed when council members and city staff decided the timing was wrong.

But the council's decision on the grant application should be indicative of whether they want to remain in the bus business.

"If they don't vote for it, it means they don't want a transit system," Wilson said, because the city will be unable to replace its current buses.

The timing was also wrong, the board decided, to hold a planned promotion in August when a trip to Hawaii was to be given to a Citibus rider. That promotion was put on the "back burner" indefinitely.

Jail Contracts Awarded

Together, the Page & Wirtz and Roanoke bids were $3,455,000, and Maeker said his fee would be no more than an additional $40,000 and probably would not be appreciably more with separate bids.

The one-level, 58,600-square-foot jail will have a capacity of 240 inmates including a 60-inmate holding or temporary incarceration capacity.

Building the extra cell block and increasing the capacity to 330 would have cost an extra $700,000.

Maeker said after the first set of bids for detention equipment was opened June 22 that a reduced-capacity jail probably would become overpopulated soon after it was completed in early 1980.

He said later that it could not be accurately predicted when the extra capacity would be needed.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw and Commissioner Jim Lancaster of Idalou said last week in a preview of their deliberations Monday that it should not be needed for at least five to 10 years.

The commissioners would have had to draw from other county funds to pay the extra cost had they decided to build a complete jail.

However, they were advised by County Auditor Dale Gallimore that $255,000 in interest in five years could be made on the money unspent in the cut-down project.

Before making their decision, they also inspected equipment models of Willo, Roanoke and Southern Steel Co. of San Antonio in trucks outside the county jail.

In other business Monday, the commissioners made plans to open budget hearings at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. The hearings were slated to open Monday afternoon but were postponed when the jail deliberations took all afternoon.

Criminal District Attorney-elect John T. Montford is scheduled to come in sometime Tuesday to discuss his proposed budget, which he indicated Monday to the Avalanche-Journal is ambitious and somewhat more costly than the current one under D.A. Alton Griffin.

Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard will ask $160,000 more for 10 more deputies and an average raise of about $100 a month for everyone in the department, he said last week.

Shaw said Monday that Blanchard had not been scheduled to appear before the commissioners court but will appear as the various department heads are called in to discuss their proposed budgets for calendar 1979.

The 1978 Lubbock County budget is for $7,949,627, including about $1 million in revenue sharing expenditures.

The commissioners Monday heard Carl Morris, business officer for the Texas Department of Human Resources in Lubbock, ask if the county would pay a $20-per-month rent increase on the department office in Slaton, where the county has been paying $145 to help support the work of five department staff members.

They declined to pay the recent increase when Morris said the state would pay it if they would not.

Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton said he wanted the office to stay open, and Morris indicated that its various operations will not be interrupted.

ALLAHABAD FLIGHTS

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Indian Airlines has added a new jumbo jet to its fleet and opened the city of Allahabad, ancestral home of the Nehru family, to flights. Allahabad also is a holy city for Hindu pilgrims. It is the site of a splendid fort and the "undying banyan tree," which was remarked on by the Chinese traveler Hsuen Tsang in 640 and which Hindu priests claim is immortal.

FAA Gives Honor To Reese Man

Maj. Robert M. Negley Jr., air operations officer for T-37s at Reese Air Force Base, received a certificate of appreciation from the Federal Aviation Administration at a noon meeting Monday at the Reese officers club.

Presenting the award for Negley's "many professional contributions to the FAA's aviation safety programs," was Richard L. Failor, chief of the Air Traffic Division in the FAA's Southwest Regional Headquarters in Fort Worth.

Negley, who has been at Reese since 1973, was lauded also for "his enthusiastic support of and participation in accident prevention programs, design of communications materials to educate aviation groups in safe flying practices and his expertise in the development of a Terminal Radar Service Area for Reese Air Force Base."

As air operations officer, Negley's responsibility has included designing the local flying areas for the basic training jet and also the procedures to get to and from areas safely.

Negley will be leaving Reese this month to attend the Air Command and Staff College at Maxwell AFB.

The FAA certificate is signed by Henry L. Newman, director of FAA's Southwest region which includes Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Also attending the award luncheon were Brig. Gen. Kenneth R. Fleener, assistant director of operations for the Air Training Command; Col. Joseph H. Brotherston, deputy commander for operations at Reese; and Col. Bobby R. Bagley, commander of the 64th Air Base Group at Reese.

Similar certificates were presented on five other occasions over the past year, including three to Lubbock men for their "extraordinary heroism in rescuing a trapped pilot from a burning aircraft."

Negley is an Ohio native who grew up in Montclair, N.J., and attended Colgate University before entering the Air Force through the ROTC program.

He served as administrative officer at Grand Forks AFB, N.D.; won his wings at Vance, AFB, Okla.; and was an instructor pilot at Lardeo AFB before going to Thailand where he flew the OV-10 as a forward air controller.

During his year in Southeast Asia, he also served as flight commander and flight examiner. He has "just under 3,000 hours flying time" and 110 combat missions.

Solar Flares Related To Power Problems

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — If powerful solar flares continue to erupt on the sun through Friday, power outages could occur and radio transmissions used in air traffic control could be affected, a federal official says.

Carl A. Posey of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said the Earth and sun will be aligned in such a way by Friday that expected solar flares could disrupt the Earth's magnetic field enough to cause such problems. Scientists recorded on Monday the largest flare since 1974 and solar forecasters say it could be a sign more are on the way.

Lubbock Eludes Century Mark

A-J News Services

The mercury topped 100 degrees in parts of the South Plains Monday, but in Lubbock it was a comparatively spring-like 96.

Fair skies in the mornings and partly cloudy skies in the afternoons are expected for today and Wednesday, and the wind should be southerly at 10 to 15 mph today and light and southeasterly tonight.

The low tonight should be around 70, weathermen said.

Today's early morning low in Lubbock was 75 degrees, but central and East Texas were uncomfortably hot during the night.

Dallas was the hottest city in the state with an overnight low of 85.

Record low temperatures brought frost into portions of lower Michigan and upper Illinois early today, while much of the nation, from the northern Plains to the East Coast, got a respite from hot and humid weather.

In Detroit, this morning's low temperature was 45 degrees, which broke a record set in 1945 by two degrees. And in Chicago, the temperature fell to 50 degrees, which broke a 105-year-old record for the date.

Elsewhere in the nation, heavy thunderstorms dropped rain over southwestern Missouri, and flash flood warnings were issued for several counties.

Other thunderstorms were scattered over southern Florida, the central Gulf Coast region, Kansas and the central Rockies.

Southeastern Colorado received a few showers as did an area from Montana to New Mexico. Some large thundershowers lingered over Louisiana, the Virginias and northern New England.

Walus Surrenders Citizenship Papers

CHICAGO (AP) — Frank Walus, who was found to have lied to immigration authorities about his life as a Gestapo agent, has surrendered his U.S. citizenship.

Walus, 55, turned in his naturalization papers Monday and is now a resident alien subject to deportation. The government said it will delay any attempt to deport him until he exhausts appeals from Judge Julius J. Hoffman's ruling that Walus concealed his World War II activities while applying for citizenship.

Walus said in a prepared statement Monday that Hoffman prematurely stamped him a Nazi.

In a civil bench trial in U.S. District Court, Hoffman found Walus guilty of lying about his background when he applied for citizenship. Hoffman denied Walus' request for a separate jury trial to determine if Walus committed war crimes.

Hoffman in May ordered Walus stripped of his citizenship after hearing witnesses identify Walus as a German Gestapo agent who murdered Jews in Poland during World War II.

Walus' attorney, Charles W. Nixon, turned the naturalization papers over to the U.S. attorney's office Monday, then distributed a statement quoting Walus as saying:

"This is just the sort of thing which happened in the past in the courts of Nazi Germany, and it is happening now in places such as Uganda. While the physical resemblance may not be all that close, Judge Hoffman's macabre antics on the bench are just as vicious to the fellow on the receiving end ... as those of (Ugandan dictator) Idi Amin."

Walus, who retired on a medical disability, testified he was a forced laborer who worked in Germany throughout World War II.

Four farmers from Germany testified that Walus worked on their farms, and insurance records were presented into evidence indicating that Walus was working in Germany.

HUD Plans To Improve Public Housing Projects

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is ready to spend $209 million to spruce up public housing projects and forestall the "spectacular failures" some projects suffered in the past.

Housing and Urban Development Secreatry Patricia Harris announced plans for an interagency "Urban initiatives" program involving her department and the Labor, Justice and interior departments "to improve management and living conditions in the nation's large public housing projects."

"Although troubled projects represent only a small percentage of the vast public housing inventory," Mrs. Harris told a news conference Monday, "the problems they generate loom very large for the tenants who have to live in them."

HUD officials estimated that some 200 of the nation's 14,000 public housing projects are "critically troubled."

They said the new program will be limited to the large public housing agencies with 1,250 or more units. Mrs. Harris said some 152 public housing authorities, representing 55 percent of all public housing in the United States, would come under the Urban Initiatives program.

"The popular image of the 'failure of public housing,' is misleading," HUD officials said. "to be sure, the program has had its failures, some spectacular ones."

But they said the image of the purposeful blowing up of public housing projects as in the famous case of St. Louis' Pruitt-Igoe complex "is not a valid symbol of the program."

Under the four-department program, the $209 million will be spent as follows:

— $159 million for a targeted rehabilitation program to upgrade public housing projects below acceptable conditions in structural design, general building and grounds conditions and project security.

— $15 million for a management assistance program to identify and correct management deficiencies wich may have led to the deterioration of the projects.

— $32 million for an interagency anti-crime program to improve the security and stability of the projects.

— $2.5 million for an "urban partnership" program to improve relations between city governments and housing authorities.

Mrs. Harris said public housing serves approximately 3.4 million people in 1.2 million dwelling units in 2,700 communities overall. Approximately 37 percent of the occupants in public housing is white and 63 percent is from minority races, according to HUD officials.

She said troubled projects resulted from inadequate initial design, financial difficulties, management problems, crime and vandalism and neighborhood conditions — all problems the new program is designed to combat.

'Grandparents' Day' Voted By Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John J. Flynt, D-Ga., has two granddaughters and is principal House sponsor of a national day for grandparents.

But his House colleagues ignored any thoughts of conflict of interest Monday by voting 362 to 8 to set aside the first Sunday after Labor Day for grandparents.

LESS RED TAPE

WASHINGTON (AP) — There should be less red tape in replacing lost Social Security or other government checks if a bill that passed the House becomes law. The bill, which passed unanimously Monday, would drop a key requirement for replacement of checks. No longer would a claimant have to promise in writing to reimburse the government for amounts of more than $200 if two checks eventually are cashed.

Child Abuse Centers Get More Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is increasing its support for centers to help child victims of sex abuse and incest.

The National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect, a Health, Education and Welfare Department agency, is being helped by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to finance the centers to ease "devastating" reactions to sex abuses that leave fear and unjustified guilt scars that may never be erased.

Government officials said centers created for child victims of parental beatings have found increasing numbers of sexual abuse victims.

More centers are being added to deal with sexual abuse alone, providing medical and psychological treatment for the victims and counseling for their families, government officials said.

"I know it was before I went to kindergarten," said one young girl in the report released Sunday. "I would wake up when I heard his footsteps and scream and pretend I was having a nightmare so I would wake up the rest of the family ... I am so afraid. I feel guilty about everything ... "

James Gregg, acting LEAA administrator, said "clearly, there is a national problem that requires a coordinated approach."

He said many youngsters are victimized by the same offender, frequently a relative or family friend, and the result can be devastating.

More than 90 percent of the child victims treated at a Seattle, Wash., center are young girls; virtually all the offenders are men; and one-third to one-half of the cases involve incest, the LEAA report said.

Lucy Berliner, assistant director of the Seattle center, said, "many of the kids went to great lengths to keep their mothers from knowing ... the offender told the child she was to blame or would be blamed if it were known."

"If you live with an ugly secret like that for several years it can have serious consequences," said Mrs. Berliner. "Some of the damage from incest is irreparable. How can you give a child back her childhood?"

Other centers for sexually abused children are operating in Washington, D.C.; San Jose, Calif.; Hartford, Conn.; Minneapolis; Tacoma, Wash.; Austin; Philadelphia; Knoxville, Tenn., and Boston.

"It's a tough crime for authorities to deal with," said Gregg. "Sex crimes against children are so distasteful — so horrifying — that people react like ostriches."

But he said once help is offered, "more families come out of the closet and seek treatment."

Pelican Population Increase Reported

AUSTIN (UPI) — The number of brown pelicans along the Texas Gulf Coast has almost doubled since last year, the Parks and Wildlife Department reported today.

Brown pelicans were common on the Texas coast several decades ago before the emergence of DDT and other persistent pesticides, but consumption of fish contaminated with pesticides caused thin egg shells and low reproduction among the birds.

"Of course, a bad storm could hurt nesting efforts this year, but so far the situation looks encouraging," Smith said.

He said the nesting pelicans this year are expected to exceed last year's production of 34 to 37 young.

Home Loans Interest High

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're buying a home with a conventional mortgage, be prepared to pay the highest interest rate since record-keeping began in 1963.

The average home buyer last month paid an effective conventional interest rate of 9.46 percent for a new house, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Monday. The previous high was 9.37 percent, recorded last May and in December 1974.

The average new home purchase price last month was $62,900 and the average loan was $46,100 for a 28.3-year term, the board reported.

For previously occupied homes, the effective interest rate last month was 9.47 percent, an increase from the 9.37 average in May.

The effective interest rate combines the interest rate on the contract, initial fees and charges. The rates have risen steadily since April 1977, when they were 8.94 percent.

Interest rates insured by the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration recently were raised from 9 percent to 9.5 percent.

Colorado Blackout Affects Thousands

DENVER (AP) — Nearly a quarter of a million homes and businesses in Colorado were left without electricity for a half hour after a failure in the power grid connecting several Western states triggered a series of outages.

The source and cause of the failure Monday have not been determined, but it started outside Colorado, said Bill Warner, a spokesman for Public Service Co. of Colorado.

Blue Seeks Victory For 'Other Side'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pitcher Vida Blue and outfielder Reggie Jackson, teammates for so long on the controversial Oakland A's, are in and out of the spotlight for tonight's 49th All-Star Game.

All-Star games for both leagues when he opens on the mound for the Nationals.

"Some youngster on the plane told me I was the last winning pitcher for the American League," Blue commented, and then laughed, "I already knew it."

He was the starter and winner in 1971 when the AL took a 6-4 victory— with Jackson smashing a tremendous home run over the roof of Detroit's Tiger Stadium— and also started in 1975 when the NL won 6-3 in its current domination of the midsummer classic.

Monday night, however, Jackson became the fifth player to withdraw from the American League squad when he telephoned manager Billy Martin and reported that he was running a fever of 102-103 degrees.

Jackson was promptly replaced by his New York Yankees teammate, third baseman Graig Nettles, who himself had been scratched Sunday with a bruised toe.

Jackson is the only AL starter to pull out, but the junior circuit also has lost catcher Thurman Munson, infielder Rick Burleson and outfielder Carl Yastrzemski.

The National League lost starting catcher Johnny Bench, who has been suffering from a bad back in recent weeks. Ted Simmons of St. Louis will replace him.

The NL has won six straight, 14 of the last 15 games, 19 of 21 and leads the series 29-18 with one tie. American League president Lee MacPhail calls the recent result "embarrassing."

Manager Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers, in naming a hurler from arch-rival San Francisco, said Blue's knowledge of American League hitters was a factor, but added, "I think he is the best pitcher in the National League."

Blue, with a 12-4 record, opposes Baltimore's Jim Palmer, 10-7, who was Martin's choice to start for the American League in the 8 p.m., CDT, game before a sellout San Diego Stadium crowd of 55,000 and a national television audience.

Palmer was less than enthusiastic over his starting assignment. On Monday, the right-hander underwent treatment in Los Angeles for a sore left shoulder and commented:

"I don't really want to start. I started last year and I embarrassed myself and now I'm hurt. But somebody has to do it."

Martin's starting lineup will have first baseman Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins leading off, followed by George Brett, Kansas City, 3b; Jim Rice, Boston, lf; Richie Zisk, Texas, rf; Carlton Fisk, Boston, c; Fred Lynn, Boston, cf, replacing Jackson; Don Money, Milwaukee, 2b, and Fred Patek, Kansas City, ss.

Lasorda, whose Dodgers lost to Martin's Yankees in the 1977 World Series, will have Pete Rose of Cincinnati at third base, followed by Rose's teammates Joe Morgan at second base and George Foster in right field. Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia plays left field and bats cleanup. Then come Steve Garvey, Los Angeles, 1b; Simmons, c; Rick Monday, Los Angeles, cf, and Larry Bowa, Philadelphia, ss.

Neither manager revealed substitution strategy except Martin, who said, "I'll bring in my left-handed pitchers when Tommy brings in his left-handed hitters."

Ron Guidry, who won 13 games before losing his last start with the Yankees, had been expected to be the starter for the AL, but Martin said his ace hadn't shown his usual velocity in recent outings.

"Our players really want to win this one," declared the Yankees' manager. "This is the first time in recent years that the AL really wants to win."

President MacPhail said, "I can say the recent results have been an embarrassment, a league as superior as we are to lose as many as we have."

There was criticism of the fans' voting in determining the team, but the Dodgers' Garvey said he favors retention of the system and said, "There is no greater honor than playing with your peers in this game."

In 1974, Garvey won a starting position as a write-in and wound up as the game's Most Valuable Player.

Blue was asked if he remembered his performance in 1971 and replied, "Oh, yes. Johnny Bench hit a homer off me, and Hank Aaron hit his first extra-base hit in an All-Star game."

Aaron's "extra-base hit" also was a homer.

ALL-STARS?—San Francisco Giants pitcher Vida Blue hams it up with a man dressed as a chicken during a very informal All-Star game workout at San Diego Monday. Blue will be the starting pitcher for the National League in tonight's game; the chicken will not be in the lineup. (AP Laserphoto)

Who's No. 1?

HERSKOWITZ

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. I know it's little early to ask about college football, but I have three questions: What teams are preseason favorites for the national championship this season? Who are the prime Heisman Trophy candidates? What university holds the atttendance record for an intrasquad game?

—Fred Smith, Conway, Ark.

A. The national title is likely to depend on two games—Notre Dame-Penn State and Notre Dame-USC. USC is the top favorite.

The leading Heisman prospect is Charles Alexander of LSU, coupled with Charley White of USC, both runningbacks. (The Heisman winner probably should be outside linebacker Jerry Robinson of USC, the best college football player in the country, but defenders never get the honor.)

Until we learn differently, the intrasquad game honor goes to Arkansas, which drew 44,000 fans this spring. Tennessee thought it was going some in 1977 when 26,300 showed up.

• • •

Q. I have a bet going. Could you please tell me how tall Steve Cauthen is? Also, where can I write to him?

—Jean G., Troy, Mo.

A. Cauthen is 5-foot-1 and weighs 97 pounds. You can write him care of Belmont Park, Post Office Box 90, Jamaica, N.Y. 11417.

But he may be too for you, dear. The trainer of Affirmed, Laz Barrera, says: "Maybe some people don't understand. Steve Cauthen is no 18-year-old. He's an old man. Sometimes he makes me believe in reincarnation. Maybe he's had another life, where he was a leading rider for 50 years. That's how much he knows about his business."

On the other hand, that's the horse business Barrera is talking about, not fillies of the human variety.

Q. If Bump Wills of Texas makes the All-Star team, won't that be the first time a father (Maury) has been followed by a son in that game?

—Eldridge Holt, Owensboro, Ky.

A. There have been a couple of pairs ahead of the Wills father-son duo. Bob Boone, the Philly catcher, made it in '76, 20 years after his dad Ray did with Detroit as a third baseman. Cleveland third baseman Buddy Bell was also honored in '73, long after his father Gus had made it four times.

Q. I thought by now something would have been written about Tuffy Leemans being inducted into the NFL Hall of Fame at Canton, Ohio. I personally have taken a ribbing through the years when I have tried to recall his exploits as a player for the New York Giants. He was a halfback, passer, runner and kickoff returner. He made me a fan for life. More than once, when the Packers, Bears or Lions came to the old Polo Grounds, he would break the game open. I hope they show some old films of his movements.

—Gellen Gregory Jr., Houston.

A. Leemans was the second-round draft choice in the first NFL draft of 1936, out of George Washington. Wellington Mara, now the owner of the club, scouted a game in which Leemans demanded his attention, against Alabama in 1934.

Leemans was 6-foot-0 and 200 pounds, and he led the league in rushing his rookie year, with 830 yards. He was All-NFL year and also in '39. He had an eight-year career.

Arnie, Nicklaus Admire British Open Layout

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — "If you were going to build a new course, you certainly wouldn't build one like this," said Arnold Palmer.

"If I tried to lay out another course like this one, people would laugh at me and say, 'Call that a golf course?'" said Jack Nicklaus.

They were all talking about the Old Course at St. Andrews, cradle of the game and mecca for golfers the world over. On Wednesday, St. Andrews stages its seventh British Open since World War II and its 22nd since the Open was first played 120 years ago.

Both Nicklaus and Palmer hastened to get the record straight— they weren't guilty of high golfing treason.

"It's a very subtle course— though some people might call it by other names," said Palmer, who played his first Open at St. Andrews 19 years ago. "To play it properly you've got to take a great deal of thought."

"I think it's fabulous," said Nicklaus, who like Palmer is a two-time Open winner. Nicklaus won in 1970, the last time the Open was played here.

"You've got to accept it for what it is —the home of golf. Some people may say it's the worst course they've seen. It isn't, and I love it," Nicklaus said.

Bean arrived here Sunday after an overnight flight from the United States. Three hours afterwards he made his first acquaintance with the course and shot a 4-under-par 68 in practice.

"I must admit that when I first saw it I thought it was rougher than we expect in the U.S. But the more you play it, the more you learn to respect it," he said.

St. Andrews is a course, windswept most of the time, without trees, with gorse lining the fairways and with hidden sandtraps and undulations to catch the unwary.

Nicklaus and Tom Watson, who won the Open in 1975 and again last year, are joint 6-1 favorites to win this time.

Hubert Green and Lee Trevino, the last man to win twice in a row, are at 14-1 with Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, Gary Player of South Africa and Tom Weiskopf at 16-1.

The first two rounds will be played in groups of three, with the first round starting Wednesday.

St. Andrews Course Brings Cheers, Tears From Pros

By WILL GRIMSLEY

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — If the fabled old course at St. Andrews happened to lie in the United States, they would plow it up and build a string of condominiums on it.

She's hardly a pretty creature, and certainly not a nice one—this stretch of whin and gorse and shot-making agony that lies beside the North Sea, the seat of the Royal and Ancient Club, cradle of the game.

But she's St. Andrews, she's special and she's opening the doors this week to the world's best professional golfers, gathered for the 107th British Open championship.

Bernard Dawin, the great British golf historian, spoke of her in frightening terms but marveled that she was wooed by "a town given wholeheartedly to golf—the butler, baker and candlestick maker."

Thirty-two years ago, slammin' Sammy Snead took one look at her and said, "Back home in Virginia, you wouldn't plant beets on a place like that." He won in 1946 and never came back.

Bob Jones was an American whiz kid of 19 when he first set eyes on the craggy old dame in 1921. He took a 43 for nine holes, blew his stack and told friends, "I don't care if I ever play this course again."

In subsequent years, he fell in love with her, won the British Amateur here for one of the four crowns in his 1930 Grand Slam and became an idol of the local populace.

Gene Sarazen landed in Hell bunker on the 14th hole many years ago, took a horrendous eight and blew himself out of contention. For one passing moment, he prayed the course would be engulfed in a tidal wave.

Tom Watson, the young Kansas City shotmaker with the Tom Sawyer look, got his first view of ancient St. Andrews last weekend prior to defense of his title and admitted he was impressed and dazed.

"I don't know whether to hate it or like it," he said.

Tom used the neuter gender. Most golfers and most historians personalize —and feminize— golf courses. Jones once said of Augusta National, site of the Masters: "She is like a fickle woman. You can't push her around. Treat her gently or she'll leap up and bite you."

But Augusta National drapes herself in a cloak of majestic pines. She wears garlands of dogwood, azalea and wisteria in her hair and necklaces of finely fashioned sand around her throat. Most American golf courses are similar —marvelously coiffeured and manicured.

The old lady of St. Andrews is, by comparison, a hag. She hasn't fixed her hair or done her fingernails for centuries. She is just the way God and nature fashioned her. Let no one dare touch a hair on her shaggy head. It's against the law of the township of St. Andrews.

She is austere, even grim. She is flat-chested. There are no rolling hills. There's not a tree on the premises— only knotty growth of whin and gorse that line the fairways once mowed by grazing sheep.

The elements have been her architect. She has been shaped by the fierce winds blowing in off the North Sea. Her 110 bunkers were made by these blasts and burrowing animals.

Her hazards are many and unique—swilkan burn (creek), crossing the first fairway; Kitchen, Hell, Grave and Ginger bunkers on the 14th; Walkinshaw's Grave on the 13th; the Principal's Nose on the 16th, Valley of Sin on the 18th; 14 greens shared on both the outgoing and incoming nines.

But no golfer dares shun her. To court her and survive—that's a mark of immortality. Bob Jones knew it. So does Jack Nicklaus.

Northeast, NW Claim City Crowns

It was an all-Northeast Little League show in the city minor Little League champinships Monday night, and the winner was the league's Braves entry.

For the minor leaguers, the tournaments finished the 1978 season. But for the major league all-star teams, the playoffs leading to the national tournament at Williamsport, Penn., will begin next week.

Gerulaitis Advances Theory Of Letdown

NEW YORK (AP) — He wasn't exactly complaining, but Vitas Gerulaitis had a lot of excuses— legitimate ones, but excuses that nevertheless point to the difficulty of staging one of the world's richest sporting events right after Wimbeldon.

Gerulaitis, the 23-year-old local favorite who made it to the semifinals at Wimbledon last week, played an uninspired match and got by Australian Phil Dent 6-1, 7-6 in the opening round of the Forest Hills Invitational.

The Invitational is a $300,000, three-group, round-robin event staged for the first time this year by World Championship Tennis. It offers a first prize of $100,000, which equals the top prize in the Grand Prix Masters as the biggest in tennis.

But falling the week after Wimbledon and the same week as the World Team Tennis All-Star match, the timing is not particularly conducive to spectacular tennis.

"It's a little difficult now," Gerulaitis said, wiping away the effects of a hot, muggy evening match. "We've just gotten off airplanes. We don't know what we're doing yet."

There were other problems. Gerulaitis was just getting over strep throat picked up in England. The surface is clay, the pace of which is considerably different from the slick grass in England. And the Invitational is being played with light, unpressurized balls.

"It doesn't go on your strings," Dent said, complaining of the way the ball seemed just to carry itself away. "It's just gone."

Victor Pecci, the little known clay-court player from Paraguay, concurred. But at least he'd provided a little excitement: a first-round upset —an easy one at that —over veteran Ken Rosewall, 6-3, 6-1.

He ran up a 5-0 second-set lead before Rosewall offered any real resistance. The 43-year-old Australian won his only game by saving match point. Pecci, 22, served out the match easily, however, allowing Rosewall just one more point.

Still, it was not an enthralling evening for a crowd officials said numbered 3,800 people. That was far below the 12,000-seat capacity of the great old horseshoe stadium at the West Side Tennis Club, home for six decades—until this year —for the U.S. championships.

"Of course, it's not going to be so good for the first years," Gerulaitis said. "Obviously if they (tournament officials) don't have a Borg or a Connors, it isn't going to be the greatest. Just wait til they get one under their belt."

In the meantime, John McEnroe will play John Newcombe and Wojtek Fibak meet Billy Martin in today's second round. Dent was to play Rosewall and Ilie Nastase was to meet Peter Fleming tonight.

Farquhar Turns In 72 In Trans-Miss Qualifying

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Tway, the No. 5 member of Oklahoma State's NCAA championship golf team, grabbed the spotlight Monday from his teammates in the first of two qualifying rounds for the 1978 Trans-Miss golf tournament.

The 19-year-old Marietta, Ga., amateur fired a four-under-par 67 at Brook Hollow Golf Club, where more than half the qualifying field had scores in the 80s and 90s.

OSU's top player, Lindy Miller, missed an eagle by an inch on the 18th hole and settled for a tap-in birdie for a 70, one-under-par on the more wide-open Las Colinas Country Club, a few miles away at Irving.

Another OSU player, Britt Harrison, came in at one-over 72 and former Mexican Amateur champ Rafael Alarcon shot a double-bogey on No. 17 and a bogey on 18 to finish with a three-over 74. Both Harrison and Alarcon were at Las Colinas.

The field of 400 of the nation's top amateur golfers played in 102-degree temperatures. The best 64 after today's second qualifying round will compete in match play at Brook Hollow that begins Wednesday and continue until two finalists battle in a 36-hole final Sunday.

Two former Walker Cuppers — John Grace of Fort Worth and John Farquhar of Lubbock— were among six who had 72s at Las Colinas. With them were John Paul Cain of Houston, a former Texas Tech golfer; Harrison, Dale Blackburn of Houston and Jimmy Adams of Port Arthur.

Grace hit the water on a par-3 hole, couldn't find a place to drop, and came back to the tee to hit another shot. It landed on the green 20 feet from the pin, and he sank the putt for a bogey-4.

Kenny Huff of Dallas led the field at Las Colinas, matching Tway's 67. The only other sub-par rounds of the day were a 69 by John Shackleford of Austin, 69; Andy Blossom of Stockton, Calif., 70; and Gary Pinns of Winston-Salem, N.C., 71. Shackleford and Blossom were at Las Colinas and Pinns at Brook Hollow.

"I wasn't trying for any kind of super round. I was just trying to hit it in the fairway and onto the green, and I happened to hit a few close enough that I made the putts," said Tway, who offset two bogeys with four birdies and an eagle.

"It was one of my better rounds in competition," he said.

NOAH'S ARK CAPSIZES—Hydroplane driver Noel Waters survived this spectacular accident during a weekend regatta on Black Lake, near Olympia, Wash. Waters was at the controls of Noah's Ark when the speedboat became airborne while running at near-record speed, nosed up, flipped upside down and threw the driver from the cockpit as it returned to the water. Both driver and boat hit the water tail-first, and Waters was not seriously injured. (AP Laserphoto)

City Youth Enters Western Junior Meet

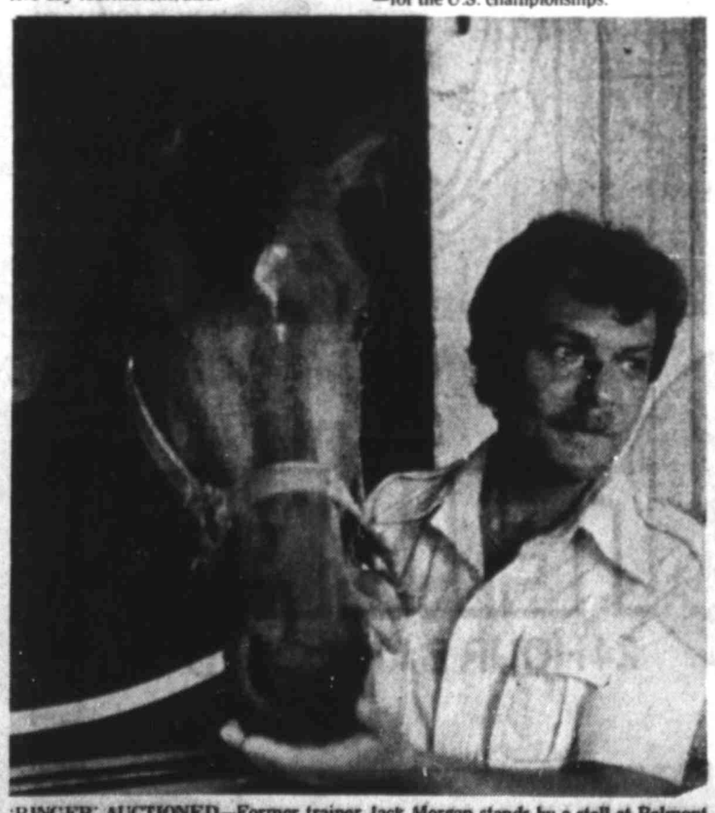
ALBUQUEQUE, N.M. (Special) —More than 300 hundred junior golfers will be competing for the 61st Western Junior Golf Championship which begins today at the University of New Mexico Golf Course in Alburquerque.

Several golfers from the West Texas area—including Mike White, a 17-year-old youngster from Lubbock—have qualified for the preliminary rounds of qualifying.

The golfers will play in qualifying rounds today and Wednesday. The top 64 players after 36 holes will advance to the match play which begins Thursday. The champion will be crowned Saturday.

Heading the list of potential favorites in the tourney is last year's runner-up David Abell of Wake Forest. Bobby Clampett, who was the low scoring amateur in this year's United States Open is entered, also.

Other entrants from the West Texas area include Chris Adkins, Kyle Kolls, and Ross Vaughan from San Angelo; Kelly Eng, Mike Young, Kyle Rowland, and Jim Kern, all of Midland; Mike Dawson and Mike Waller of Fort Stockton; George Yocum of Hereford, and Mike McCord of Wichita Falls. Arthur Romero, from Roswell, N.M., will play in the five-day tournament, also.



'RINGER' AUCTIONED—Former trainer Jack Morgan stands by a stall at Belmont racetrack in New York Monday with the horse that was auctioned off as Lebon although he was thought to be Cinzano. The South American horse that won at Belmont last Sept. 23 and touched off the highly publicized "ringer" scandal was bought by Morgan Monday at auction for $10,000. (AP Laserphoto)

LCC Signs Final Baseball Recruits

Three days earlier Hays inked Ernest Day, a Lubbock High standout, to a letter-of-intent.

Hix hit .512, led District 5-AAAA in doubles, and stole 11 bases. He played third base and shortstop for the Panthers.

Wolfe hit .345 for Duncanville, which made a fourth straight appearance in the state baseball tournament. A designated hitter in high school, Wolfe will be tried at catcher by Hays.

Other LCC recruits include Bob Nottebart, a catcher from Galveston Junior College. His father, Don, pitched in the major league for the Houston Astros and Cincinnati Reds. Bob Nottebart played his high school ball at Houston Westbury.

Shortstop Lewis Stephenson of Richardson Pearce, who hit .340, and outfielder Greg Watts of Abilene Cooper, who hit .320, also have signed with LCC.

Day, a centerfielder, hit .470 as a senior for the Westerners and played in the Texas High School All-Star game in Houston last month.

Hays added three new moundsmen to the team. Heading the list is New Mexico all-stater Chris Cook, a southpaw from Deming who was 13-2 with a 0.84 ERA. Kevin Burks of Burkburnett, a 16-3 moundsman for the Class AAA state runners-up, and Nowell Delgado, who was 10-4 with 0.44 ERA for victoria, also signed with the Chaparrals.

Chester Wins On Last Try

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Wayne Chester came from behind on the last throw Monday night to defeat leader John Handegard 216-152 in the final game and win his first Professional Bowlers Association title, the $60,000 Salt Lake Open.

Chester, a 25-year-old lefthander from San Mateo, Calif., was among the leaders throughout the final games of the tournament but never led until the final ball was thrown.

All-Star Voting: A Mistake?

By HAL BOCK

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It is time to change the All-Star voting procedures to make this mid-season game a more meaningful collision between the American and National leagues.

On paper, the idea of turning the vote over to the fans was certainly a good one and you can't argue with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's well-intentioned efforts in that direction eight years ago.

But, sadly, the fan vote has become little more than a popularity contest with familiar names receiving the strongest support. That doesn't always produce the very best performers in the first half of the season. And isn't that what the All-Star Game is all about—a game between two teams of current stars?

The most flagrant example of name-voting this year was the selection of Johnny Bench as the National League's starting catcher. More than 2.4 million fans voted the honor to the Cincinnati catcher, most of them casting ballots while Bench was in a hospital with back problems.

In the last six weeks, while his vote total was mushrooming, Bench played in no more than a half dozen games. He was elected on his reputation for past accomplishments, and it is to his credit and good sense that he is passing up the game, allowing Ted Simmons to start behind the plate for the National League.

Analysis

There are other examples of voting injustices. Don Money is starting at second base for the American League, despite the fact that he's rarely appeared at that position this season. Jeff Burroughs, leading the NL in hitting, was 11th among outfielders because the ballot listed him at first base. He compounded that problem by playing for a mostly anonymous Atlanta team that lacks the glamour and exposure of other clubs.

Players in both leagues generally agree that the fans are doing a poor job with the All-Star voting franchise.

"I'd be lying if I said I liked it," said Simmons, who polled 600,000 fewer votes than Bench despite batting .311 for the first half of the season to .224 for the Reds' receiver. "John has been a great player and deserves everything that comes to him. But I've played well and I deserve to make the club and start."

Thanks to the good judgment of Bench and Lasorda, Simmons will do exactly that tonight.

Boston's Jim Rice agreed with Simmons.

"I hate to look up and see guys on the team who are not having good years," the Red Sox slugger said. "I think players who are having good years at the time of the voting should make the team."

If the fans lose the All-Star vote, who gets it? The players?

"If we vote, I want my team's shortstop, Freddie Patek (the AL starter), so I'll vote for the worst guy in the league at his position," said Kansas City's George Brett.

That way, while a player can't vote for a teammate, he can certainly hurt the top competition for his buddy's position by denying the other guy deserved votes. Obviously, that's not the answer.

There is another possibility, though. The Most Valuable Player, Cy Young Award and Hall of Fame elections are conducted by the Baseball Writers Association of America. If the writers can be trusted with those important awards, wouldn't it follow that they could do a decent job on the All-Star voting as well?

The fans and players might not be thrilled with the idea, but writers do a pretty good job on their other voting tasks. Why not this one, too?

Carew's Jump To National Not Unlikely

By MILTON RICHMAN

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — All-Star games are nothing new for Rod Carew. This is his 12th and, naturally, every one of them has been with the American League.

The way he hits, he's already a good bet to play in his 13th All-Star game a year from now, except that by then he very likely will be on the National League squad.

As matters stand, he and Minnesota Twins' owner Calvin Griffith are no nearer a solution to their contractual stalemate than they were four months ago, when they were so far apart there was little or no use for either one to speak to the other about it.

With time running out and Carew having publicly announced he intended leaving the Twins at the end of next season, which will be his option year, Griffith tried to make a deal for him with an American League club last month but was unable to get enough for his six-time batting champion.

So Carew was taken off the market, and he will finish the season with Minnesota. But as soon as the World Series is over and the next inter-league trading period opens up, Griffith will make the best deal he can with a National League club.

The chief reason the Twins' owner will go outside his own league is because he'll probably be able to get more for Carew that way. Another reason is because in that way his 32-year-old first baseman can't readily come back to haunt him.

The Cincinnati Reds took pretty much the same course when they traded their MVP Frank Robinson to the Baltimore Orioles, with whom Robinson promptly turned around and won himself another MVP award.

In the interest of harmony for the next three months, Griffith and Carew have agreed not to discuss their problem in public and that's why whenever anyone asks Griffith, who is at this All-Star game, whether there's any chance he still might sign Carew, he says he has no comment.

"He and I have an understanding," Griffith said. "Neither of us will talk about it until the season is over."

When asked if he saw even the slightest possibility the stalemate might be settled, he shook his head and said, "I don't see how."

That answer evoked the next rather obvious question. Since he has the necessary time in to veto any deal he doesn't like, does Carew have any particular preference to which National League club he wishes to be dealt?

"People can say you're a great player, but if you don't play on a winning team, it's no fun," continued Carew, who has never been in a World Series.

"Billy Wiliams is a good example of that. He was a great player, but in all the years he played with the Cubs he never was with a winner. When you win, it's fun; when you don't, it's depressing.

"They said I was asking for an outrageous salary. But I don't think it's outrageous. And besides, it isn't the money.

"I don't want to be the richest man in the world. I simply want to be compensated for the things I do, the things on and off the field. Yet, that isn't the uppermost thing in my mind. When you play for a club and it doesn't win, it's hard to be there and not get results."

So Carew merely goes about his work and says nothing about what he has a pretty good idea will happen this fall.

"What I do now is shut up," he said, with a small smile. "Sometimes that's the best way."

Auerbach Maintains Silence On Future

BOSTON (AP) — Now it's Red Auerbach's turn to keep new Boston Celtics owner John Y. Brown in the dark.

Former owners of the Buffalo Braves, Brown and silent partner Harry Mangurian, swapped National Basketball Association teams last week with Irv Levin, who is moving the Buffalo franchise to San Diego.

"I've received what's been described as a 'very attractive' offer," Auerbach said. "But attractiveness is in the eye of the beholder. I want to talk to him about it."

Auerbach also says he's had a variety of job offers. He won nine NBA titles as coach of the Celtics from 1950-66 and was front office chief for the last four Boston championships.

The Celtics' general manager was in the midst of a rebuilding plan when Levin and Brown made their deal.

The controversial trade sent Kermit Washington, Kevin Kunnert, No. 1 draftee Freeman Williams and rights to Sidney Wicks to San Diego. In exchange, Boston received Marvin Barnes, Billy Knight and Nate Archibald.

Brown, who arrived in town Monday, said, "I think I can work with Red. I know people say I'm tough to work for, but Red has worked under a lot of owners. I am an active owner, yes, but I never go as far as getting involved in the lineup or the coaching."

As far as the trade is concerned, Brown said, "We got rid of two players (Kunnert and Williams) nobody ever got to see here, and a third (Washington) who has been in the league four years and has proven himself to be limited. . . I know Marvin Barnes has had his problems in the past, but he's married now and maybe living close to his home (Providence) will be the best thing for him."

Boston finished with its worst record in history last season— 32-50—and missed the playoffs. But Auerbach recently negotiated new contracts for coach Tom Sanders and assistant K.C. Jones, both former Celtics players.

Shoemaker Lauds Forego

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Willie Shoemaker, whose more than 7,000 winners make him the winningest jockey of all time, Monday called the retired Forego "easily one of the best horses I've ever ridden."

Forego was retired less than $62,000 short of becoming the first racehorse to reach the $2 million mark in career earnings.

"It's too bad it had to happen now," Shoemaker said at Hollywood Park. "But I'm sure that the man (trainer Frank Whiteley) did what he thinks is best for the horse."

Forego, an 8-year-old gelding, was retired because of gimpy legs. He won $1,938,957 to $1,977,896 for Kelso, who was retired in 1966. Forego tried to surpass Kelso's mark in the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park on July 4 but finished fifth in a six-horse field.

Ironically, Forego's retirement eased a possible ticklish situation for Shoemaker, who might have been forced to choose between Forego and Exceller, a top stakes horse being sent east from California. Shoemaker is Exceller's regular rider.

SA Escapes Loop Cellar

By The Associated Press

San Antonio climbed out of a tie for the Texas League West cellar Monday by defeating Midland 8-6.

The only other league action saw Jackson's winning streak climb to 12 with a 2-1 victory over Shreveport in 14 innings. Tulsa at Arkansas was rained out.

San Antonio broke open a 5-5 game with a three-run seventh inning. Alex Taveris sent in what proved to be the Dodgers' winning run with a two-run single.

The win went to Dave Stewart, 10-8. Rick Sander received credit for his first save of the year. Lee Smith, 7-5, took the loss for Midland.

BASEBALL

SAN DIEGO — Vida Blue and Jim Palmer were named as starting pitchers for tonight's 49th All-Star game in San Diego. Reggie Jackson, voted a starting outfielder for the American League team, has been removed from the roster because of illness. He will be replaced by his New York Yankee teammate Graig Nettles. Jerry Remy, the second baseman of the Boston Red Sox, was added to the American League squad as a replacement for injured teammate Rick Burleson.

SAN DIEGO — Milwaukee's Larry Hisle was named American League player of the week for his .400 average with four homers and eight runs batted in last week's action for the Brewers.

TENNIS

NEW YORK — Vitas Gerulaitis defeated Phil Dent 6-1, 7-6 in the inaugural match of the Forest Hills Invitational tennis tournament. Victor Pecci of Paraguay routed Ken Rosewall of Australia 6-3, 6-1 in another first-round match. The $300,000 tournament, a World Championship Tennis event, is being played for the first time. Officials announced that 3,800 attended the first night's matches at Forest Hills, far below the 12,000-seat capacity of the old horseshoe stadium, site until this year of the U.S. Open. Twelve men are playing in three round-robin groups for a $100,000 first prize.

CINCINNATI — Defending champion Harold Solomon won his first-round match 6-1, 6-2 against Terry Rocavert in the $125,000 Western Tennis Championships. In other first-round matches, Raul Ramirez of Mexico defeated Alvin Gardiner of Astralia 6-2, 6-1; Pat DuPre defeated Terry Waltke 6-4, 4-6, 6-2; Steve Krulevitz defeated Pancho Walthal 6-3, 1-6, 6-3; Larry Turville beat Glenn Golden 6-2, 6-1 and Eric Friedler beat Hubertas Hoyt 7-5, 6-0.

HORSE RACING

NEW YORK — Forego, the second winningest horse of all-time, has been retired by his owner, Mrs. Martha Geary. Forego finished with lifetime earnings of $1,938,957, just $39,000 short of Kelso's all-time mark. Sore legs, always a problem for the eight year-old gelding, were cited by trainer Frank Whiteley as the reason for the retirement. The last race for Forego was the Suburban Handicap on July 4, where he finished fifth in a six-horse race.

BOXING

BOSTON — Tony Petronelli, Bridgewater, Mass., outpointed Jimmy Montague, Northern Ireland, 10, welterweights; Dave Ramalho, Lowell, Mass., outpointed Jimmy Farrell, Rockland, Mass., 12, featherweights; Ron Drinkwater, 216, Malden, Mass., stopped Joe Belmure, 247, Lowell, Mass., 5.

Hodson Joins Chargers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Chargers open training camp Wednesday with coach Tommy Prothro hoping to make his 1978 offense what his defense became last season, incredibly improved.

The Chargers jumped from No. 22 in total defense in the National Football League to No. 6 in 1977. Their transformed pass defense soared from next to last in the league to No. 1 in the American Conference and sixth best overall.

But at the same time, San Diego's "Thunder and Lightning" offense was a whimpering drizzle, though the Chargers managed to finish at 7-7 for their best record since joining the NFL in 1970.

Prothro expects about 50 players from his 71-man roster, including some 20 free agents and rookies, to report to camp at the University of California at San Diego.

As a first step toward his killer offense, Prothro brought in Ray Perkins as San Diego's fourth offensive coordinator in four seasons. Perkins, an all-America receiver at Alabama, played in two Super Bowls with Baltimore.

And Pat Hodgson, 34, is a full-time receiver coach. Hodgson, a graduate of Georgia, has been on the Chargers' coaching staff two weeks after resigning as coach at Texas Tech.

Among reporting veterans will be defensive back Ken Reeves, who is beginning his 13th season. Reeves, who has 37 career interceptions, signed as a free agent last week after playing out his option with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Draftees to report include John Jefferson, a highly regrded wide receiver from Arizona State, guard John Choma, linebacker Blake Whitlatch, end Charlie Rice, tackle Milton Hardaway, running-back Rickey Anderson, cornerback Cliff Featherstone and defensive tackle Henry Bradle.

Veteran quarterback Dan Fouts will also be in camp.

The Chargers' annual rookie scrimmage with the Dallas Cowboys is scheduled for July 19 at UC Irvine, and the following day San Diego veterans who were excused from early workouts are scheduled to report.

Phillips Likes Earl's Habits

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Earl Campbell, the No. 1 draft choice in the National Football League this year, went through his first workout Monday with the Houston Oilers in their training camp here.

"He has great work habits. He catches the ball well and he runs with extremely good balance," said Oiler coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips about the Heisman Trophy winner. "But, then, if he wasn't I wouldn't have made the trade."

The Oilers traded tight end Jimmy Giles and two draft choices to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in return for the first shot at the University of Texas running-back.

Phillips said Campbell, unlike some other touted rookies, is embarrassed by all the attention coming his way. But he said the other players didn't mind his being in the limelight.

When asked whether he would feel obliged to play Campbell because of the large financial investment the Oilers have in him, even though he might not work out as well as hoped, Phillips said he wasn't worried about that possbility.

"The investment in Earl has already been made. The biggest mistake you can make is by playing someone who doesn't deserve to play," he said, "but I don't think that will happen."

The Oilers will play an intrasquad controlled scrimmage game Saturday on the campus of Angelo State University.

Cowboys

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Free agent Gene Washington turned in the fastest 40-yard dash time Monday during the Dallas Cowboys rookies and young veterans' first practice session of the 1978 National Football League training camp season.

The 5-9, 169-pound Georgia wide receiver sprinted the 40 in 4.44 seconds with closest competition coming from another free agent—6-0, 196-pound defensive back Kenny Randle of Southern Cal, who ran a 4.53.

The 65 players also ran a mile and a half with Tim Abney, a 6-1, 170-pound free agent defensive back from Lincoln, Mo., clocking in at 8:51.

Bills

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Rookies, free agents and a couple of veterans got a look at new Buffalo Bills' coach Chuck Knox in the opening day of extensive practice at Niagara University.

A number of players commented on a feeling of optimism that appeared to pervaded those working out despite dismal records two years straight.

Lions

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Luther Bradley, the Notre Dame defensive back who was the Detroit Lions' top draft choice, is the only rookie still unsigned today by the National Football League team.

Michigan's Dwight Hicks was one of two draft choices to come to contract terms Monday with the Lions. Hicks was the Lions No. 6 pick in the college draft.

Also coming to terms was No. 5 pick Amos Fowler, an offensive guard from Southern Mississippi, team spokesman Brian Muir said.

Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles coach Dick Vermeil said Monday training camp early birds are only doing themselves a favor—unless they like riding the bench.

Vermeil invited 16 second stringers, along with rookies and free agents, to report to the National Football League club's training camp on Sunday, five days before the rest of the squad.
