Tax reform 'switch' doesn't close session

Farm bill, spending still await action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm price support legislation and an omnibus spending bill to keep government operating for the next nine months remained unresolved as Congress continued a slow, frustrating march toward Christmas adjournment.

Much of the government was operating today under another stogap measure Congress passed Tuesday to give congressional negotiators time to work out a revised version of a $570 billion omnibus spending bill. The House overwhelmingly rejected the bill Monday night.

The stopgap measure, which President Reagan signed late Tuesday, expires at midnight Thursday and was the second such bill Congress has had to pass in less than a week.

Other measures awaiting last-minute action included an emergency rescue package for the $70 billion Farm Credit System, the 37-bank network that is the nation's largest farm lender. The Senate passed it with minor changes Tuesday night and House approval was expected today.

Also pending was a sweeping five-year agriculture package providing about $52 billion over the next three years for crop price and income support programs.

While Congress was trying to wrap up its work, Reagan administration officials and legislators alike were voicing frustration over the unpredictable, crisis atmosphere that has engulfed deliberations over fiscal matters for months.

"Truly the system has broken down," complained White House budget director James C. Miller III.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the necessity for repeatedly passing stopgap bills was "a mess. And we could get into other four letter words and make it even stronger."

Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the assistant House minority leader, was angry about the length of the session and the need for emergency legislation, saying, "It's beginning to look like Christmas again.... Every year we do this. Over and over we go again. It's a part of the Christmas season."

Oilmen not thrilled by action in House

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Tax reform started with a bang last May when President Reagan went on national television to plead for support and ended in the House Tuesday night with a whimper — a voice vote approving the most massive tax code overhaul in 40 years.

Last week, oilmen in the Permian Basin rejoiced after the House refused to consider the tax reform bill, believing they had killed a bill they felt threatened the industry.

"It was the power of persuasion of the president over the American people," commented Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "We had pretty much defeated the bill when we came back from Washington, and the President's visit revived it."

He said that although he would like to see changes in the bill's oil and gas provisions, he doesn't think the industy is going to get any help.

"We can only hope someone makes changes in the bill toward fairness for the American people, and for simplicity. That's the best thing," Spannaus said.

Spannaus said he expects the rig count to be affected, saying if it doesn't change in the next month, it's because it's a new year and the companies have new money for drilling.

"We have the depletion allowance taken away, and Intangible Drilling Costs taken away after the point of completion, and tax credits taken away. It can't help but have an effect on this area. We wouldn't have fought this so hard if we didn't think it would have an effect."

"All we can do is wait and see how the Senate reacts, and hope the president gets the bill changed or vetos it. There's still an air of uncertainty. It's going to be another long, drawn out affair," Spannaus said.

Shopping mall, tennis courts gain City Council approval

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Ground should be broken for a new shopping mall within 60 days at the western edge of Midland if the company behind it continues to sail over hurdles as easily as it did two of them Tuesday at a City Council meeting.

In addition, Midland tennis players will be getting a new eight-court complex, citizens will gain assistance in the Crime Prevention and Crime Stoppers program and residents along Maxwell Street won't see a drainage channel carved into the middle of their street yet.

Permanent zoning for Deauville Mall, to be located on the southwest corner of the intersection of Highway 191 and Loop 250, and the preliminary plat for the accompanying Westridge Addition were approved by the council. The zoning calls for 39.55 acres of a shopping center and 30.8 acres of Agriculture Estates.

The mall is being built on land owned by the SBC Corporation, which was represented by Doug Henson. Bob Lucas, senior vice president of Deauville, said the groundbreaking for the 500,000 square-foot mall should take place in 60 days with the opening planned for Oct. 15, 1986.

WITH 40-50 percent of the space pre-leased now, Lucas said by the opening it should be up to 80 percent occupied. Major stores now include Sam's, a wholesale store that is a division of Wal-Mart; Ross, a family apparel store; Federated Electronics; a food court; and a six-screen United Artists theater.

On the "free-standing pads" surrounding the mall will be four full-service restaurants, according to Lucas.

"The major national retailers are extremely excited about coming to Midland," he said.

The new tennis complex will be constructed on the "Hill property" west of Midland High School, according to George Logan, director of parks and recreation.

The plan for the city and Midland Independent School District sharing the cost originally showed the courts to be laid end-to-end.

ClayDesta closing on hospital purchase

From Staff Reports

ClayDesta Regional Medical Plaza Development Corporation announced today it is closing on the purchase of the assets of Parkview Hospital from Hospital Corporation of America of Nashville, Tenn.

The closing will take place Friday in Dallas.

According to spokeswoman Julie Faubel, approval for the sale of the hospital was granted by the Federal Trade Commission on Monday.

"As a result of the sale, the name of the hospital will be changed to Physicians and Surgeons Hospital," according to a news release from ClayDesta. "Financing for the purchase is being provided through the sale of Health Facilities Development Revenue Bonds issued by the City of Midland's Health Facilities Development Corporation and approved by the City Council at its Dec. 17 meeting. The bonds have been purchased by MBank of Dallas."

Plans include renovation of the current Parkview facility, new services and construction of a replacement hospital.

"The ultimate goal of ClayDesta Regional Medical Plaza Development Corporation is to build a new first class hospital at ClayDesta Plaza, which is estimated to take two years to complete," according to the release.

"Upon completion of the new medical facility, the corporation plans to convert Physicians and Surgeons Hospital into a rehabilitation hospital or support facility for the new hospital."

County will 'make it' financially

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County most likely will not fall into bankruptcy 'n 1985.

"We're going to make it (financially)," said County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin. "It's going to be close. It may be as close as it was last year."

The county, which began 1984 with an $11.5 million budget, spent $10.7 million and ended up at year's end with a relative pittance — about $200,000. Revenue fell short and the final budget was $10.9 million instead of the $11.5 million.

The $200,000 represented less than a week's operating costs, Jarnagin said.

"We don't have a wild, fluctuating curve or disbursements," said the auditor.

Six months ago, he predicted the county would have insufficient funds to end 1985. The 1985 budget is pegged at $13.1 million. The 1986 budget, funded by ad valorem taxes, fines, fees and other revenue, is $14.286 million.

"Very seldom do we spend all of our budget," Jarnagin said. "If everybody had spent what was in their budget, we wouldn't have enough money to pay" all the county's bills.

Unlike the federal government, Texas and state subdivisions, including the counties, cannot budget deficits.

Were the county to run out of funds, then some of the county's services would stop.

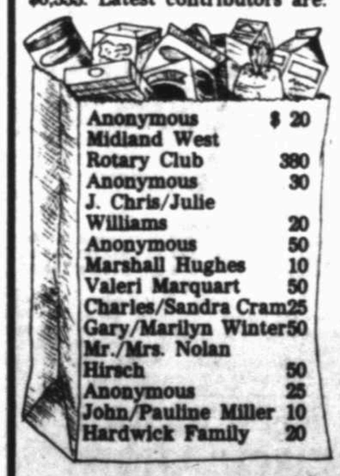

Jarnagin said the county's 25 department heads had not been "extravagant in their spending."

"They have used pretty good discretion in their spending," he said. "We have throughout the years made all department heads aware of conservation of funds and not to buy unless it's needed."

Creed grew from meeting at Nicea

EDITOR'S NOTE: This third installment of a five-part Christmas series about the development of Christian doctrine deals with Athanasius and the formulation of a basic, lasting affirmation of Christ's divinity — the Nicene Creed.

Birth of Christian Doctrine

A five-part series

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Escorted by Roman troops, a new bishop arrived in the ancient, cosmopolitan Egyptian capital of Alexandria, center of philosophical, literary and scientific learning. The occasion drew a murmurous, resentful crowd.

"Make way," the military tribune ordered, swinging about with his command staff as the carriage rolled through the street. Altercations, hostile shouts and shoving broke out, soon turning into massive rioting that swept the city.

Through the rampaging din, there throbbed a strange, heartfelt cry, "There was no time when he was not."

It was a theological point, the odd catchwords of a passionate conviction about Christ, that he shared God's eternal being, always existing, that he was not just a momentary creature, encapsulated in a passing, earthly season.

However, a forceful challenge had arisen to that concept, posing a subtle yet fundamental attack on the very foundations of the faith, denying Christ's essential divinity. The new bishop represented that reductionist view.

He had been sent by a meeting of bishops at Antioch, instigated by the new Roman emperor in 339, to replace Alexandria's popular and staunchly orthodox bishop, Alexander, whom it had deposed. His ouster stirred a factional explosion among the people.

That violent disorder, reflecting the intense feelings smoldering about the issue, came 14 years after it presumably had been settled at a landmark church assembly — the first universally ecumenical church council at Nicaea in 325.

That council was a "turning point in Christian history," writes British theologian Frances Young.

However, before its conclusions became generally accepted, the disavowals of it kept boiling for another half century, have done so sporadically since, and still pop up in cases today.

At stake was a keystone of Christianity — the basis of its monotheistic devotion to one universal God, considered self-expressed in humankind through Jesus, with the effectiveness of his work of redeeming people regarded as dependent on his authentic divinity.

Without that underpinning, the whole faith structure was seen as crumbling.

The critical threat to it loomed in the fourth century as Christianity emerged from centuries of harsh persecution and sought to clarify and refine its thinking about the convictions that had sustained, inspired and fortified it.

At the forefront of the theological battle were two clergymen of Alexandria. Athanasius was a short, somewhat stooped, efficient young deacon and secretary to the city's bishop, Alexander, when the conflict began about 318. Arius was a tall, courtly, eloquent and artfully sophisticated pastor of an influential suburban congregation.

Arius argued that God created Christ in time, the highest human creature, yet a creature, different from divinity, not all-knowing and eternal, but finite, subject to change, theoretically, either toward virtue or vice, like other humans.

"Since there cannot be two gods, it follows that the son is a creature," Arius contended.

Shultz ends terrorism tour with visit to Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz left Belgrade today, completing a six-nation European tour in which he urged better international cooperation against terrorism.

Shultz labeled his eight days of low-key public appearances a "learning experience," especially about Eastern European countries such as Hungary, Romania, and Yugoslavia. He also visited Britain, West Germany and Belgium.

Before boarding his plane, Shultz said, "It has been a very useful exchange of views," and added, "we touched on just about any subject."

Seeing the American flag flutter atop a light tower over the airport, the secretary of state said he appreciated the gesture as "a very positive symbol of relations between our two countries."

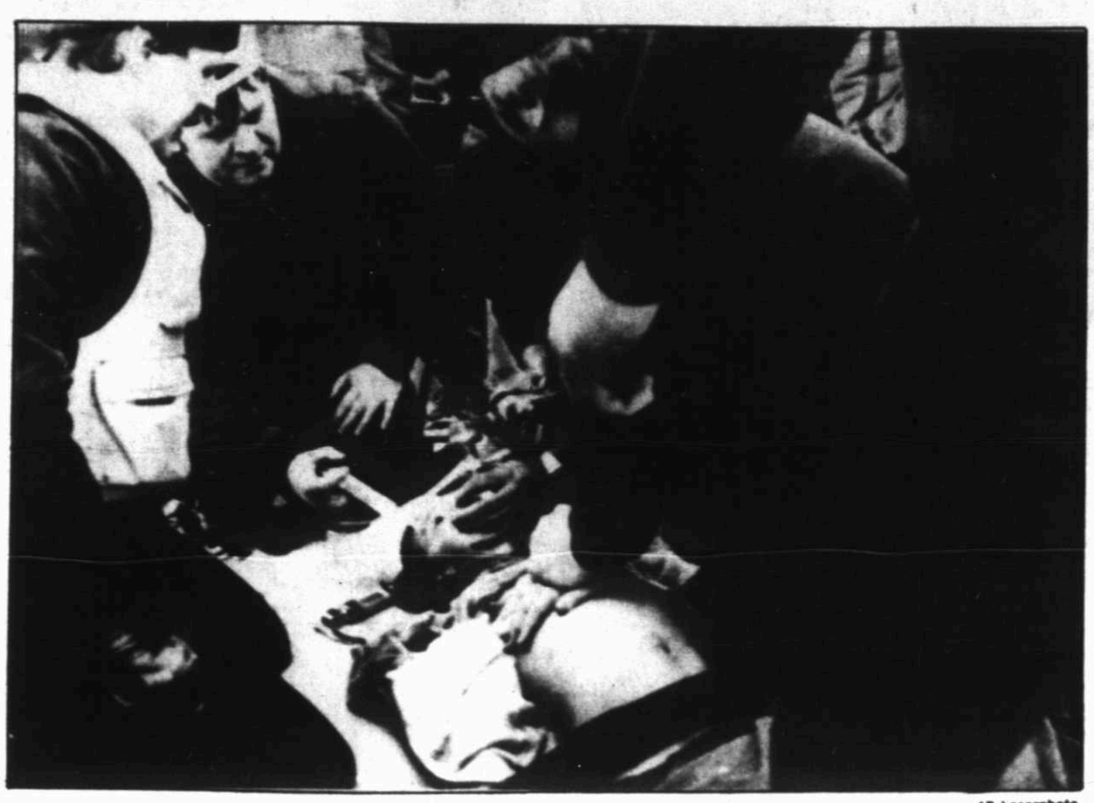

Yugoslav Foreign Minister Raif Dizdarevic braved cold and windy weather to see Shultz's plane take off. Those present applauded.

On Tuesday, Shultz strongly admonished countries to stop giving terrorists "a place to hide."

The secretary of state angrily slammed his hand on the table at a news conference at Dizdarevic's suggestion that the causes of terrorism be considered in deciding how to treat terrorists.

The incident occurred at a news conference in which Shultz and Dizdarevic were asked about the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro in October by Palestinians. An American tourist was killed.

Treated by emergency medical workers following his rescue from a farm pond near Newark, Ohio, is 9-year-old Jeremy Ghiloni. The boy was rescued after about 45 minutes under water.

Boy pulled from pond still alive

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 9-year-old boy clung to life today, listed in "very, very critical" condition after rescuers pulled his seemingly lifeless body from an icy pond where he had been under water for about 45 minutes.

"He could go either way right now, but we'll all pray to God that he turns for the better," Jeremy Ghiloni's uncle, Tim Ghiloni, said Tuesday night.

"His heart's beating on its own now, and he's still in pretty bad shape, but that's a lot better than it was," Ghiloni said.

Jeremy was in the intensive care unit at Children's Hospital in a drug-induced coma to prevent any further brain injury from the near-drowning, said nursing supervisor Susan Cunningham.

Ms. Cunningham said the boy's condition was "very, very critical," and that doctors were not available for comment.

She said some doctors who worked on the boy, son of Monica and Thomas Kashner, stayed with him during the night to monitor him.

Jeremy was pulled from the pond in Newark, Ohio, about 30 miles to the northeast, about 9:20 a.m. Tuesday. Ghiloni, 32, said he reached the scene as rescue workers tried to revive the boy with cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

"I was very impressed with the way they worked on him," he said. "They weren't there just to do a job; they were there to save a boy's life. The way they worked...they did their best.

"They worked on him like he was their own son."

Mike Packham, one of two firefighters who pulled Jeremy from the pond, said rescuers detected a pulse and took the boy to Licking Memorial Hospital in Newark.

When he was taken to Children's Hospital about 12:20 p.m., his body temperature was about 75 degrees, said hospital spokeswoman Pam Barber. Normal body temperature is 98.6 degrees.

Hopes for the boy's recovery hinged on a physiological phenomenon known as the "mammalian diving reflex," which is triggered by the body's immersion in cold water.

The reflex, which is present in humans shortly after birth but diminishes with age, stops the body's breathing and diverts blood from the skin, muscle and gut, sending it to the heart, lungs and brain.

The boy was taken to an operating room and placed on a heart-bypass machine, which drew blood from the body, warmed it, and then returned it to the body, she explained.

Ms. Barber said the boy's heart was beating on its own Tuesday night.

Because he was in the coma, doctors did not know if there was any brain damage, Ms. Barber said.

Ed Maharg, chief deputy for the Licking County Sheriff's Department in Newark, said Jeremy apparently was playing on an ice-covered portion of the pond when he fell into a section about 10 feet deep.

Maharg said about a half-dozen children were nearby, waiting for a school bus, when the accident occurred.

House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said he was astonished that the Republican leadership did not ask for a roll call vote after he called for the voice vote and pronounced, "The ayes have it."

Customarily, the minority leader or a member of the leadership team stands at their table, ready to request a roll call, but this time no call came.

House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., came to the floor to explain that he was in his office, expecting to have 15 minutes to reach the floor when the buzzer sounded signaling a roll-call vote.

Some Republicans were privately delighted that they did not have to publicly defy their present and vote against the bill or annoy their constituents in Middle America who are viewed as tax reform's primary beneficiaries.

Others, however, denounced O'Neill, who they implied deliberately cut off a roll call.

A vote earlier in the evening signaled that the bill — which some had declared dead last week — had a chance of passage. On the "rule," under which the bill would be brought to the floor for debate, the vote was 258-168, a turnaround from last Wednesday when the House voted 202-223 against the rule.

Last week only 14 Republicans, out of 182 in the House, voted for the rule.

Yesterday, after President Reagan made a pilgrimage to the Capitol to plead behind closed doors with Republican members, 70 Republicans joined 188 Democrats — the same number of Democrats who voted for the rule last week — to bring the bill to the floor.

On another key vote yesterday, the House defeated a Republican-sponsored tax measure, an alternative to the bill produced by the Ways and Means Committee, that also reduced rates on individuals and corporations while limiting deductions but was more generous to business. That vote was 294-1333.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, a member of the Republican leadership team, played a big part in defeating the rule last week and, before the vote, thought he had a good chance of winning again.

A candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Texas, Loeffler has been a strong supporter of the Reagan's initiatives — until the president joined forces with House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., to churn out a tax reform bill.

Loeffler refused to buy the president's argument that if the Republican-controlled Senate fails to "improve" the bill, to make it more nearly resemble the one he sent to Capitol Hill last March, he will veto it.

"What the president asked was that we move the process and vote for a bill he wouldn't sign. There is no way I would run that risk," Loeffler said. "It was a skunk last week, and it's still a skunk."

"We worked as hard as we possibly could to gather votes to defeat the tax bill, because of its severe effects on oil and gas production and economic growth, and because it was neither simple nor fair," Loeffler said after the bill passed.

"The president has promised to veto the bill unless substantial changes are made by the Senate, and I intend to do everything I can to see that this bill is either vastly improved or else laid to rest. Texas and America do not need this legislation in its current form," Loeffler said.

BUDGET

Further, the auditor said the Commissioners' Court — County Judge Bill Ahders and the four commissioners — has been "responsible" in budgetary matters.

"And I can say that with all sincerity. I'm not politicking anybody."

Jarnagin did note the county in 1985 had "unexpected" expenditures, including about $130,000 spent to date in transferring Midland County Jail inmates to other West Texas county jails due to the local jail's overcrowded conditions.

Jarnagin noted commissioners did authorize funds for computer systems, studied and recommended by 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin, for the judiciary. Funding was by line-item transfers from departments.

"People (department heads) were willing to forego some of their other needs" in order to muster 1985 and 1986 funds for computers for the courts, prosecutors' offices and the clerks of record.

In planning the 1986 budget, commissioners had opted to forego budgeting for expensive new and needed heavy equipment for the county's Road and Bridge Department.

Jarnagin, who has described the budget as "austere," noted the commissioners did allow for an across-the-board 3 percent pay raise for the county's 350 employees. In doing so, the commissioners cut the non-payroll part of the budget by a blanket 2 percent. "No department was exempt," he said. The payroll makes up about 50 percent of the budget.

Each year, Jarnagin said, it is not uncommon for department heads not to spend all of their allotted funds.

County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, for example, last year "gave back" to the county's treasury $56,154.45 of his 1984 budget of $343,692.

"I don't believe in spending just because it's there," Dettman said. "You have to be careful with taxpayers' money. That goes without saying."

Dettman said his 1985 budget will not be drained totally and that unspent funds will be "relatively close" to what he gave back last year.

The county judge is the county's chief budgetary officer. And the Commissioners' Court must approve any county money expended.

"The department heads are reasonable, conservative people," Jarnagin said, and they are responsive to the commissioners' advice "that they be reasonable in their spending habits."

COUNCIL

The tennis center complex will involve a different layout of courts and will include bleachers for spectators. Under this plan, the cost for each entity went up to $116,000.

Midland is short seven tennis courts for the number of residents and students who want to play, according to Logan. And the courts at MHS are in such bad condition they are dangerous. "Outlaw tennis is the only kind being played at MHS. People shouldn't be playing here; they could get hurt. It's easy to trip," he said.

With the city sharing in the cost, the courts can be used by all Midlanders, Logan noted. Architects on the project are with the Vandergriff Group.

CUTTING THE Northwest Drainage Channel through Maxwell Street was a third part of a proposal for opening up areas along the channel that had dammed up water and caused flooding during two heavy rains in October. In November, the council approved taking out the I Street bridge and Whitney Street.

But on Tuesday the council deferred doing the same at Maxwell Street, which would have eliminated a through street for residents in that neighborhood. Instead, city staff will prepare a report of what expansion work needs to be done on bridges along the drainage channel and supply a cost estimate. The council will consider it for a bond package.

Fred Baker, director of public works, said if the Maxwell Street crossing is kept, he suggested a box culvert which would cost $130,000. But a bigger crossing, similar to the bridge on Garfield Street, is needed that would cost $700,000.

"The development of the Blakemore property upstream (on Midkiff Road) will put a load on that crossing," he said. In addition to Maxwell, Midkiff and Haynes bridges need to be widened to allow flow of more water. Estimated cost on each is $700,000, $700,000 and $200,000, respectively.

"But if done all at once the price tag goes down dramatically," Baker said.

"I suggest deferring it one more time for you to put a package together with the numbers," said Councilman David Godfrey. "If we go to the bond market to do this, I'm not sure we won't want the money to do it all."

ALTHOUGH THE Police Department has been short five officers all year, the council voted to add two positions to handle the Crime Stoppers and Crime Prevention program. Making the request for the two employees was David Cobos, who handles the programs for the Sheriffs Department. "The Crime Stoppers program has been extremely successful. We're averaging 108 phone calls a month on tips. What we need is another officer," he said.

Although Councilmember Katie Heck suggested hiring one person and waiting until a management study on the Police Department is completed, the council chose to add the two slots.

Arguing against the plan was Councilman Steve Davidson. "Let's be recognizeable of the fact the patrol division is short," he said.

In other matters the council approved a drainage plan for Silkwood Addition that would see an inverted crown street used for draining water, added a school crossing guard at Fairgrounds Road and Oak Street and changed the school zone hours for Trinity School, OK'ed the zone change for the Museum of the Southwest's expansion program and amended an ordinance concerning definitions of junk vehicles and enforcement of those rules.

Dallas bar owner dies

DALLAS (AP) — Joe Miller, whose namesake bar was a gathering place for journalists, politicians and city officials, died Tuesday of cancer at the age of 52.

The Toronto native was a man who hated ferns, pastel colored drinks and salad bars, but loved people and football.

A memorial service is scheduled in Dallas at 2:30 p.m. Thursday.

Lublin university independent of Poland

LUBLIN, Poland (AP) — The only independent university in Eastern Europe is here in Lublin, where Poland's first Communist government was proclaimed in 1944.

The Catholic University of Lublin has thrived in this setting for 67 years, the past 41 in a country whose official ideology opposes everything it stands for.

During World War II, while the Nazis were systematically erasing Lublin's vibrant Jewish culture immortalized in the stories of Isaac Bashevis Singer, a former resident and the winner of the Nobel Prize for literature in 1978, they also were imprisoning teachers and students from the university. Some were executed.

The university staff held clandestine classes throughout the Nazi occupation before the school reopened in 1944.

The university, known by its Polish initials KUL, is the only institution of higher education with a curriculum that is completely independent.

Pope John Paul II, the former Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow, taught ethics at KUL for 25 years and is one of the university's most prominent backers.

The school bestowed an honorary doctorate upon the pontiff during his pilgrimage to Poland in 1983 at a special ceremony in Warsaw, the national capital 90 miles to the northwest.

KUL is dedicated to teaching a Christian outlook, and has a highly regarded department of theology. It also has departments of law, philosophy, humanities and social sciences.

"We teach Marxism," remarked one administrator, "with criticism, of course."

The school is funded by the Roman Catholics of Poland and about 500,000 people who are members of the Friends of KUL and similar fund-raising organizations in Europe and North America.

About a third of its 3,700 students are priests and nuns doing graduate work. The remainder are young adults from all over Poland who have to satisfy more stringent entrance requirements than they would for country's nine state-run universities.

One out of every seven applicants is admitted to KUL compared with one out of four to state schools.

The first independent student union in postwar Poland was organized at KUL in 1973.

A member of the student union was in Warsaw a few days Poland's recent Parliament elections to distribute a statement by the group supporting a voter boycott, which had been urged by the banned Solidarity trade union movement.

"We are," the student said, "the only independent student self-government body left in Poland."

New laws on higher education enacted by the government over the summer effectively dismantled democratically elected student groups at state-run schools.

KUL goal is to serve the needs of the church and to educate future generations of the Catholic intelligentsia in Poland, which is 90 percent Catholic and has been the Vatican's Eastern bastion for 1,000 years.

The central courtyard is dominated by a bronze statue reproducing a moment in 1978 when Pope John Pope II, just after his election, received his onetime mentor, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, the Polish primate. Wyszynski attempted to kneel before the pope, but the pope held his arms and refused to let him. Wyszynski died in 1981.

Virtually all of the new Polish bishops appointed by John Paul since he became pope attended KUL.

"The students who leave here are investments in Poland's future," said the Rev. Stanislaw Nogy, a professor of theology at KUL for 27 years and a close friend of the pope. "We must strengthen their Christian beliefs and instill in them a feeling of responsibility toward the church."

Even students who say they are not practicing Catholics acknowledge the school's special place in Poland.

"I don't think we will ever forget what we learned here and we will go on living that way," said Joanna, a 22-year-old third-year student of English. "This is a school where students get a friendly reception."

KUL owes its existence to two momentous events in history — the end of World War I and the 1917 Russian Revolution.

Before the war, in what is now Leningrad, a seminary existed to train Polish priests for work in that part of Poland governed by the Russian czar. The seminary's doors were shut in 1917.

A year later, Poland regained its independence after more than 100 years of partition, and the new Soviet authorities instructed the seminary's rector to take the school back to Poland.

The rector, the Rev. Idzi Radziszewski, opened the Catholic University of Lublin the same year. It has been in Lublin ever since, owing its existence to the orders of an official from the new Soviet government in Moscow.

"You cannot understand Polish affairs without understanding the element of paradox," Professor Nogy commented.

Claus' curls

A man with a frosty white beard — and wearing both a red suit and jolly disposition — was spotted recently at a Salem, Ore., hair salon. Some observers reportedly thought it was Santa Claus himself, while other identified the man as Cannon Beach actor Dallas McKennon. In any event, the man in question was having his hair lightened for a special appearance at a Japanese department store, sponsored by the Oregon Economic Development Dept.

Mall's singing Santa Claus has scared kids humming happier tune

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Youngsters who come crying in fear usually leave humming a different tune after a visit with the singing Santa Claus at the Topanga Plaza shopping mall in Canoga Park.

Robert Schick, 66, wears the regular red suit and white beard and works out of a "North Pole" covered with plastic snow. But instead of just ho-ho-ho's, Schick belts out bouncy renditions of "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" and other Christmas tunes that draw applause from parents and grins from the kids.

"I like to sing, and I got the idea it would work out if Santa sang Christmas songs," said Schick, a retired sales promoter from Florida who took the $5-an-hour, part-time job to give him something to do during his monthlong visit with his daughter in Canoga Park for the holidays.

"They open up and talk a lot more after I sing. They just light up when they hear a familiar song. In some cases, I think it brings an extra child or two to Santa," Schick said, and the parents agree.

"It's great. It helps the kids. They're familiar with singing and with the words to Christmas songs. It's a great idea," said Lydia Lewis as her 1½-year-old son, David, bounced on Schick's knee to the tune of "Santa Claus is Coming to Town."

Teri Feld of Reseda lingered to listen after her son Christopher, 3, finished his visit. "He's the best Santa I've ever seen," she said.

Penny Riffel, who helps supervise photographers snapping pictures of children with Santa, said Schick is one of six Santas working at the booth, but the only singer.

"At first we were kind of embarrassed over his singing," Ms. Riffel said. "But the mothers liked it. And now we like it too."

Cinde Christopherson, another picture-booth supervisor, said the children, especially older ones, often sing along with Schick. "If they're afraid, it stops their crying instantly," she said.

CREED

"Christ's limitations are exactly ours, and likewise Christ's benefits and glories are exactly ours," Arius maintained, insisting that this didn't mean a "demotion of the son, but a promotion of believers to full and equal status as sons."

It was an appealng, skillful argument and Arius composed jingles for people to sing "on the sea, at the mill and on the road" to popularize his viewpoint.

Athanasius blasted Arius as "dancing and joking in his blasphemies against the Savior." "Ario-maniacs," the supporters of Arius were called, afflicted with an "Arian plague."

It reduced Christ to a subordinate "demi-god," Athanasius said, making for "two gods," both "supreme and secondary" gods. He charged Arius with a "dualism and heathenism" that would "destroy the whole doctrine of salvation."

"No creature can redeem other creatures," he said, maintaining that redemption requires God's direct presence "in and for his creatures," something impossible for a mere "glorified creature" as Arius portrayed Christ.

The analytical, strongminded Athanasius argued that the lessening of Christ implied that deity and humanity are incompatible, separating God from his world, like some philosophical Greek "absolute" and not the living, biblical God who acts within history.

Christ's divinity doesn't mean the son is "identical with the Father" but "in full possession of whatever belongs to the Father," Athanasius wrote in the long years of struggle over the issue.

Called the "champion of orthodoxy," Athanasius five times was banished from Alexandria, where he became bishop. He alternately was expelled and then restored as the tides of church and imperial power shifted in the seething controversy.

At one time, in exile and seeming totally deserted, he issued his famous defiance, "Unus Athanasius contra mundum" — him alone against the world.

The conflict churned for about 60 years across the entire Roman Empire, bursting with bitter accusations and invective.

The emperor Constantine I, who had first recognized Christianity as lawful, was baffled by the swelling fuss. He dispatched his court bishop with letters both to Arius and Alexander, appealing to them to calm their differences.

The letters didn't help. To Christians, the question was basic and vital, despite the emperor's dismissal of it. Either God and Christ possessed a oneness that "exists everlastingly," declared a meeting of bishops in Antioch, or Christians would seem to worship two gods.

To deal with the dispute, the emperor in 325, from July 14 to 25, convened the first ecumenical church council at Nicaea in Bithynia, near Constantinople, and he himself presided over it.

About 300 bishops, many of whom had been tortured, blinded or crippled in past persecutions, attended. Most were from the East, with only six Western bishops present, not including Rome's aged bishop Silvester I. Two priests represented him.

Also present in the central building of the royal palace was a "vast concourse of lower clergy," seated in tiers on either side, reports historian Eusebius.

On entrance of the emperor, a glittering figure in jewel-encrusted brocades, all rose and stood until he seated himself on a golden throne.

He admonished that the issue must be settled for the peace of the churches and health of the republic.

Like most assemblies, it included a right wing, led by Alexander, accompanied by his young deacon Athanasius, a predominant middle group led by Eusebius, bishop of Caesarea, and the left, represented by Arius himself.

He proposed his own creed rejecting Christ's deity, and the council tumultuously rejected it, bishops rushing forward and tearing it apart. Then Eusebius proposed a compromise creed, speaking of Christ as "God from God, light from light," but not as one essence with God, as the eventually approved creed put it.

That Nicene Creed, which in its final form has stood ever since as the standard of belief in Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches throughout the world, with only minor literary refinements since, and recited each Sunday in liturgical churches everywhere, reads:

"We believe in one God, the Father Almighty, maker of all things visible and invisible; and in one Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the only begotten of the father...God from god, light from light, true God from true God, begotten not made, of one substance with the Father, through whom all things were made, both things in heaven and things on earth, who for us men and our salvation came down and was made flesh, and became man, suffered, and rose on the third day, ascended into heaven, and will come to judge the living and the dead.

"And in the Holy Spirit."

The council then hurled a series of "anathemas" at those who said the Son of God was of "another substance or essence," that he was "created, changeable or alterable" or that "there was a time when he was not."

Athanasius, champion of that outcome, termed it a "true monument and token against every heresy."

However, a significant addition was made to the final phrase by the church's second ecumenical council in Constantinople in May 381 to delineate that undefined "Holy Spirit."

This second council was precipitated by partisans denying the divinity of the Holy Spirit. "Pneumato-machi," they were called, "Spirit-fighters."

The new council appended decisive phrases, saying:

"And in the Holy Spirit, the Lord, the giver of life, who proceeds from the Father ('and the Son,' — the so-called "filioque" subsequently attached by the Western church), who with the Father and the Son is worshiped and glorifed, who spake by the prophets.

"And we believe in one catholic and apostolic church. We acknowledge one baptism for the remission of sins, and look for the resurrection of the dead and the life of the world to come."

The supplementary section completed that enduring bastion of Christian belief, the Nicene Creed.

At the time, however, it didn't include the "filioque," added two centuries later by the Western council of Toledo in 589 without consulting Eastern churches. It has caused prolonged friction since, figuring in the eventual split between Eastern and Western branches of Christianity in 1054.

However, back between the ecumenical councils of Nicaea and Constantinople which worked out the basic Nicene Creed, feuding long had rumbled over Nicaea's assertion that Christ and God are of "one substance (essence)."

Arians, getting more extreme, switched from saying Christ was only "like God" to saying he was "unlike God." They accused Athanasius, who had become Alexandria's bishop, of black magic and murder and when these charges proved false, of seditiously blocking grain shipments to the capital.

Five times, under changing imperial powers, Athanasius was banished, his ouster repeatedly touching off protesting riots. Once, he escaped hired assassins. Each time he was restored, the people joyously celebrated, only for him to later be exiled again.

An uncompromising, dauntless man, he spent 17 years altogether in exile out of his 43 years as bishop, devoting his last seven before he died in 373 to voluminous writing in defense of that centerpiece of Christian belief, the Nicene Creed.

"The great enlightener," contemporaries called him. "The cornerstone of the church of God."

But firming up the creedal foundations would require more probing thought, more debate and further councils. For while Nicaea had affirmed Christ's full deity, another dimension of his perplexing, singularly abundant being remained to be adequately set forth — his full humanity.

STATE

Defense to move for directed verdict in nursing-home case

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Defense lawyers say they will move for a directed verdict of innocent for a nursing home corporation and five workers, all charged with murder-by-neglect in the death of an elderly woman.

The motion will be taken up Jan. 6, the day the trial resumes after a Christmas recess that began Tuesday.

The state rested its lengthy case Tuesday against Autumn Hills Convalescent Centers Inc. and five of its current and former employees.

They are charged with murder in the Nov. 20, 1978, death of Elnora Breed.

The elderly woman died 47 days after she entered an Autumn Hills nursing home in Texas City.

"My opinion is or has been that they have not been able to establish evidence proving the allegations in the indictment," said attorney Roy Barrera, who represents the corporation.

To prove murder, Barrera said, the prosecution had to show the defendants knew "to a reasonable certainty that their actions would result in death."

But Assistant Attorney General David Marks said he felt good about the case he presented.

"I feel positive about where we left off," he said.

Marks, who called 42 witnesses, said a number of them were powerful.

"There were a few witnesses shaken by cross examination. Nevertheless, their total credibility was not destroyed," he said.

The final state witness was Bexar County Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio, who testified Mrs. Breed died "as a result of poor nursing care. She was starved. She developed decubitus ulcers (bedsores)."

DiMaio said nurses at Autumn Hills should have seriously questioned a doctor's order for a 600-calorie-a-day diet for Mrs. Breed.

Such a diet, he said, amounted to starvation.

"Are you aware that her doctor wanted that dietary order and has adamantly stuck by it, even to this day?" asked defense lawyer Roy Minton.

"Yes, sir," DiMaio said.

"You disagree with his judgment?" Minton said.

"I think he disagrees with the whole medical community," DiMaio said.

Nurses at Autumn Hills, he said, should have called the doctor and "if he said he wanted to continue that order then they should have called the state nursing board and said there is something really wrong here.

"You can't be just good Germans and obey orders. That was settled at Nuremberg. If it's wrong, it's wrong," DiMaio said.

The medical examiner also insisted that Mrs. Breed did not have cancer at the time of her death, as the defense has claimed.

He discounted diagnoses of colon cancer that appeared on most of her medical records. He said her medical records showed no other indication of such a cancer.

"When you put down carcinoma of the colon (on medical forms) it's done all the time by doctors who don't take the time to write up the chart correctly," he said.

Hance ready to match tax record with White's

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial hopeful Kent Hance says he is anxious for voters to compare his record on taxes with that of Democratic Gov. Mark White.

Hance, the former Democratic congressman who switched parties earlier this year, said he has supported tax cuts while White backed last year's $4.6 billion tax hike to fund school reforms and highway improvement.

"We have a record that speaks for itself. I co-sponsored President Reagan's tax cut in 1981...That is the record as the largest tax cut in the history of the country," Hance told the Austin Republican Forum on Tuesday.

"You can compare that with Mark White's record of the largest tax increase in the history of this state or any other state."

Hance said the 1984 sales and motor fuel tax hike came after White had been "running those ads that say, 'I promise I won't raise your taxes.'

"We have saved the ads and you'll be able to see those ads again," Hance told a laughing audience.

"Mark won't think it's as funny as you do, but we think it'll be fun, it'll be exciting and allow people to be reminded of what he said at the time he was running in 1982."

In an interview, Hance later said he hasn't viewed the ads to which he referred. He refused to say when his campaign might use them.

"We'll save that for a little later. We'll surprise everybody at the right time," he said.

Pressed for details, Hance said, "It goes back to some of the ads that some of my supporters have, they taped his ads. The implication is very strong that he wouldn't raise taxes...I think it will be fascinating to watch. My people have looked at them and they're very convinced."

Hance also said he favors some relaxing of the no-pass, no-play rule which has been sharply criticized by high school coaches and some parents.

The rule, strongly defended by Democrat White, says students failing any course will be suspended for six weeks from all extracurricular activities.

Hance said he thinks six weeks is too long. He also suggested a penalty — such as an extra study hall — for students who aren't participating in any extra activities and still fail a course.

"I strongly support the no-pass, no-play concept," he said. "I would veto anything that's just watering it down to where it's wiped out. There are two adjustments I think need to be looked at.

"Six weeks is a long period of time on first offense. If you were looking at three weeks or something like that, there's an incentive for the youngsters to bring their grades up immediately," he said.

Meese, Mexican official discuss drug trafficking

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — More meetings on mutual problems of drug trafficking, immigration and other issues are planned between Attorney General Ed Meese and his Mexican counterpart, Meese says.

Meese and Sergio Garcia Ramirez wound up several hours of talks early Tuesday and then met with reporters.

They said they discussed ways to crack down on drug trafficking, stem the smuggling of third country illegals into the United States and the ongoing investigation into the slaying of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

"There will be more meetings," Meese said. "We have found they are very productive."

The meeting was the third for the two men and the first in San Antonio, selected because it is at a midway point between the capitals of the two countries.

"What we have proven in this meeting is there is total agreement in our objectives and how they will be met," said Ramirez, speaking in Spanish through an interpretor.

"I think we will never be satisfied until we can say we've totally eradicated drug trafficking," he said. "But for the time being we are satisfied with the progress we have made.

"However, there is still a great deal to be done by our two countries," said Ramirez, appearing on the podium with Meese and John Gavin, the U.S. ambassador to Mexico.

Ramirez said his country is taking steps to improve the effectiveness and integrity of police forces on the border.

He also said a bill has been introduced in the Mexican congress that would allow the seizure of property purchased with drug profits.

Meese said the two countries are working on creation of a database for use in a joint crackdown on drug trafficking.

The attorney general said an international database would be "very similar to what we have among our own federal agencies."

The United States has been pressing Mexico to work harder to eradicate drugs and trafficking across the border.

Ramirez defended his country's efforts to crack down on corruption among law enforcement officers.

"Drug trafficking generates corruption. This is true wherever there is drug trafficking and wherever there are addicts," he said.

"In Mexico, wherever corruption has been exposed, perpetrators have gone to trial," he said.

Meese said he is convinced the Mexican government is committed to a full investigation in the Camarena slaying and to prosecuting the man charged in the killing.

The United States has been pushing Mexico to proceed with the prosecution.

"As an old prosecutor myself, you never are satisfied until you have all the defendants convicted and in prison," Meese said.

"But as far as cooperation, we have made significant progress," he said.

Meese said the two also discussed the "smuggling of third country nationals."

"This is a priority because it is a favorite way to get terrorists into the country," he said.

Working fathers suffer 'Superman Syndrome'

AUSTIN (AP) — While considerable attention has been paid to the "Superwoman Syndrome" working mothers face, men attempting to be "super" fathers have gotten little help, says a University of Texas expert.

"The focus has been on how hard life is for women in dual-career families," said Dr. Lucia Gilbert, associate professor of educational psychology and author of a new book on men in two-career families.

But fathers today are much more involved in raising their children and thus struggling with the "Superman Syndrome," she said.

"A lot of men don't want to be the kind of fathers their fathers were — a bit distant. They want to be available to their children and to develop an emotional closeness with them," she said.

This is a difficult time of transition for such fathers, Ms. Gilbert said.

"These fathers are unsure whether they are doing the right thing. They have to teach themselves. They don't have a role model to follow," she said.

Ms. Gilbert has offered some guidelines for men considering a dual-career family with children, and for fathers already suffering from the Superman Syndrome.

— Couples are most satisfied in dual-career marriages if they discuss the issue of parenting before marriage, she said.

"Before you have a child and even before you are married, thoroughly discuss your attitudes and expectations about how children should be raised. Talk with your wife or potential wife about the parenting roles you and the mother of your children will play, so you don't get divorced after the children come," she said.

— If possible, space children three or four years apart in age, since the most stressful time in a family is when children are very young and require the most attention, Ms. Gilbert said.

— Consider having just one or two children.

"In the past, you couldn't have only one child because everyone thought such a child would be maladjusted and lonely," said Ms. Gilbert.

However, she said, recent studies have shown that only children turn out just as well as others in terms of independence and achievement in school.

Ethiopian villagers line up for grain from Texas

GODA KILE, Ethiopia (AP) — In the dusty yard of a small feeding center here, villagers line up for rations of grain donated by the people of Texas.

"If you had been here last December you would have seen people dying on the road," said Mulatu Tafese, a field director for Save the Children (USA). "But no one has died here for months now."

The Texas food came here under Project Tejas, which has raised more than $680,000 since last March 1 for Ethiopian famine victims. State employees contributed $113,000 to the project, while other donations came from farmers, school children and labor unions.

The Goda Kile storehouse is crammed with sacks of grain, all of it from the United States and much of it bearing a map of the state of Texas with a shock of wheat and a state AFL-CIO emblem.

"This was donated by the children of Texas," Mulatu said, picking up one of the empty bags and grinning.

The center here — 158 miles northeast of the capital, Addis Ababa — is one of 178 run by Save the Children (USA) in the Shoa Region of central Ethiopia. It serves about 4,000 people, giving monthly rations of 33 pounds of grain per person.

Mulatu Tafese, a field director for Save the Children (U.S.A.), shows one of the sacks which held Texas wheat in Goda Kile, Ethiopia.

AP Laserphoto

Overall, Save the Children serves 365,000 people in the region, 65,000 more than it originally planned for, Mulatu said.

To keep people from flocking from afar to set up villages near feeding centers, the agency has opened centers near established villages. It has meant building 372 miles of roads to reach some areas, Mulatu said.

A Japanese freighter, the Iris, carrying 3,266 metric tons of Texas hard red winter wheat and 56 metric tons of powdered milk donated by the people of Texas arrived in mid-November at the Red Sea port of Assab.

The ship sailed from Corpus Christi, Texas, in September and arrived at Assab, Ethiopia's biggest port, on Nov. 12.

The food was purchased with part of the $680,000 raised through Project Tejas.

Despite ideological differences with Ethiopia's Marxist government, the United States has been the biggest single donor of food, providing about 445,000 metric tons of grain, about a third of the total donation of 1.2 million metric tons.

Mulatu, 35, an Ethiopian, said as many as 100 people a day were dying in Goda Kile a year ago. Save the Children also has kept records of deaths and births in the area it covers.

Things have improved greatly, he said, picking up a smiling child. But he quickly cautioned that Ethiopia's food crisis has not yet passed.

"These people need food help for one year more," he said.

Africa overall is in better shape than it was a year ago because there have been good rains in some areas.

The Food and Agriculture Organization, a Rome-based United Nations agency which has monitored the famine in Africa, recently pared its emergency list from 21 countries to six.

Ethiopia is one of the six countries still in need of emergency food aid. The others are Angola, Botswana, Cape Verde, Mozambique and Sudan.

Oklahoma inmates hold hostages, demand better living conditions

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — State troopers and sheriff's deputies ringed the maximum-security Oklahoma State Penitentiary today as authorities sought the release of seven guards held hostage by about 80 prisoners who went on a rampage, stabbing three guards.

"The officers will not be harmed unless they come down here storming people," one inmate told radio station KNED today in a telephone interview broadcast live on the Oklahoma News Network.

"We have been assured no harm will come to us," said a man identified as a guard by the inmates, who said they were sharing coffee and cigarettes with the hostages, who had been dressed in prison blues like the inmates and would not be immediately distinguishable from convicts if the prison were stormed.

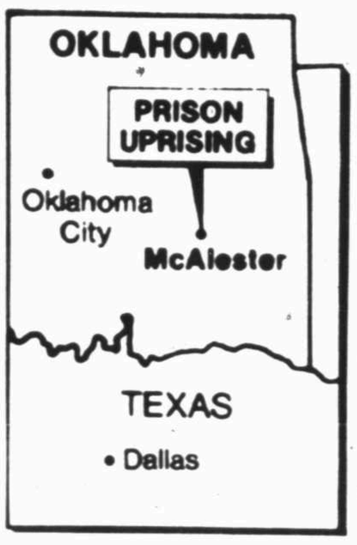

"We're not setting a time limit" on the negotiations, Corrections Department spokeswoman Joyce Jackson said late Tuesday night. "The safety of the officers is our main concern."

Corrections officials early this morning allowed three reporters selected by lottery inside the prison to talk with the inmates. The three were an Associated Press writer, a television cameraman and a radio newsman.

Jackson said the reporters had not been allowed to speak to the inmates early Tuesday because the prisoners and negotiators had been unable to "come up with an agreeable situation."

"They're still working on it," she said.

Windows were broken and power to the fortress-like prison temporarily failed Tuesday night after the inmates rioted in "A" and "C" wings, taking control as they were being returned to cells from dinner, Jackson said.

AP Graphic

"They were refusing to go back to their cells and verbally became disruptive," said Dan Reynolds, an administrative assistant to Warden Gary Maynard. "And then the next thing I knew that they had taken several corrections officers hostage."

The prisoners released three guards, who required surgery for stab wounds.

Hostage negiotators met today with a handful of inmate spokesmen who demanded better food and educational and recreational programs, and the right to wear civilian clothes, Jackson said.

Several inmates, apparently talking with KNED from a control room, discussed their grievances. "We just got sick of it. I mean you can only kick a dog so many times before he takes a snap at you," one prisoner said.

One inmate said fewer than 100 of the 600 prisoners have jobs, and that "an individual cannot provide necessities need to live as a human being...shampoo, soap, deodorant...creates stress within us."

Inmates said there was no recreation and no opportunity "for a person who does want to make a better life for self even if in the pen."

"We have done everything but get on our knees to these people (prison officials) to do something," another inmate said.

Outside the prison, about 100 Oklahoma Highway Patrol troopers and deputies of the Pittsburg County Sheriff's Office remained on guard.

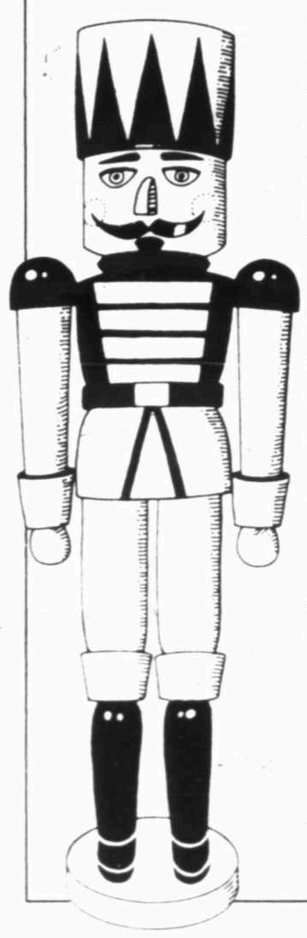

Reynolds said five hostages were taken in one unit and two hostages were taken in the second unit. The 10 negotiators divided into two groups.

The six men and one woman taken hostage were locked into cells and were not harmed, said state Rep. Frank Harbin, whose district contains the prison.

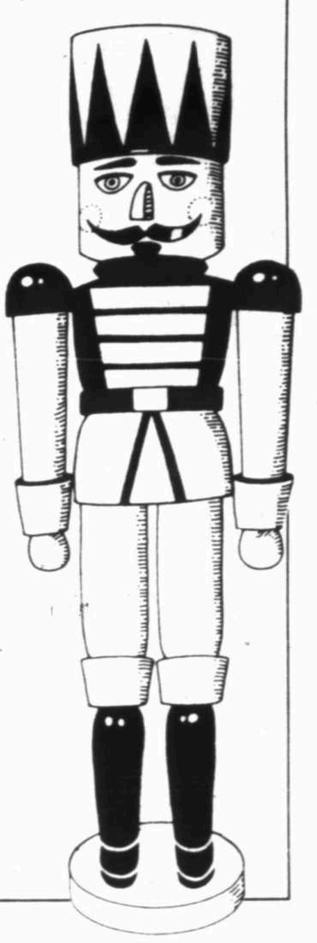

"They busted windows and took over the control room in the new part of the prison," said Harbin, adding that the more violent outbreak was in the new "C" wing. The inmates seized a control room as well, he said.

"There's quite a bit of property damage," to the two wings, which are some distance apart, said Mike Weeks, dispatcher for the McAlester detachment of the highway patrol.

WE NEED MORE THAN A FEW GOOD TOYS!

On December 21st Toys For Tots, The Marine Corps, KMID, KWES, KNFM, and Midland Park Mall will join together to provide a drop-off point for Midlanders and out-of-town shoppers to leave toys for needy children. Live remote broadcasts from 2:00-5:30 p.m. on KMID TV and KNFM and KWES Radio will encourage listeners to DROP BY MIDLAND PARK MALL, SHOP and SUPPORT the Toys For Tots program. This event will take place on the stage in front of J.C. Penney. Toys or cash will be accepted. Every child that donates a toy will receive a balloon and candy cane. Santa will arrive by the Midland Sheriffs' Department helicopter at 2:30 p.m. to bring toys for the Toys For Tots program. And don't forget the Midland Fire Department's robot who will be at the mall to entertain the children.

AIDS drug approved for childhood virus

NEW YORK (AP) — A drug that is being widely obtained by AIDS patients in Mexico has been conditionally approved in the United States for use against an infection in children — but in a form that may make it unsuitable for use by AIDS patients, officials say.

The drug, called ribavirin, was approved this week pending certain changes in its proposed labeling, Brad Stone, a spokesman for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said Tuesday.

It is the first of the many experimental AIDS drugs to receive even conditional approval. At present there is no treatment for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, although there are treatments for the various infections and cancers that result from the failure of the immune system the AIDS virus produces.

Final approval of ribavirin could come in a matter of weeks, Stone said.

The drug is being approved for treatment of infants with respiratory syncytial virus, or RS virus, a common infection that can be fatal in premature infants and in those with heart or lung disease, said Dr. Caroline Breese Hall of the University of Rochester Medical Center in New York.

FDA regulations allow doctors leeway in the use of approved drugs, meaning they could prescribe ribavirin for their AIDS patients once it is approved. But the drug is being approved in an aerosol form meant to be inhaled by infants, which might make it impractical for use with AIDS patients, Stone said.

"I see this as a positive move," said Dr. Stephen Caiazza of New York, an AIDS specialist. "The medicine is already being used widely on an underground basis" by AIDS patients who purchase it in Mexico, Caiazza said.

The approved aerosol form will, however, "do no good at all," he said.

ICN Pharmaceuticals of Costa Mesa, Calif., the parent firm of ribavirin's maker, Viratek, had no comment on the FDA action.

In a separate development, the FDA said that Dr. Michael Scolaro and colleagues at St. Vincent Medical Center in Los Angeles had applied for permission to give AIDS patients a combined therapy of ribavirin and Isoprinosine.

Isoprinosine is a stimulator of the immune system, and ribavirin is an anti-viral agent. Some researchers believe that such drugs must be used in combination to kill the AIDS virus and to restore the immune cells the virus has destroyed.

AIDS is caused by a virus that attacks certain white blood cells called T-4 lymphocytes, a central component of the body's immune system.

Both ribavirin and Isoprinosine have been under study separately for treatment of AIDS, but the studies have not been completed. Isoprinosine has also been widely obtained in Mexico by AIDS patients, Caiazza said, to be used in combination with ribavirin.

Combination studies with other drugs for AIDS patients are under way at the National Institutes of Health, Stone said.

Isoprinosine has been available in limited quantities in the United States since mid-May to doctors who requested it from its manufacturer, Newport Pharmaceuticals of Newport Beach, Calif.

Under a compassionate use provision of the FDA's regulations, doctors could obtain the drug for their patients although its effectiveness has not been shown, said Luana Kruse, a spokeswoman for Newport Pharmaceuticals.

About 70 patients are being treated, she said. She had no comment on the St. Vincent proposal to combine Isoprinosine with ribavirin.

School keeps AIDS victim out

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP) — Despite a state order that 14-year-old AIDS victim Ryan White be allowed to return to school, the local school board has voted unanimously to fight to keep the boy out of classes.

The eight-member Western School Corp. board's vote Tuesday came on the first anniversary of the date White was diagnosed as having AIDS, said his mother, Jeanne White.

The board said it would appeal the order to protect the health of the boy and the 2,400 other students in the system.

"The AIDS puzzle is incomplete," said school board President Daniel Carter, holding up a poster of a semi-complete jigsaw puzzle with the word "AIDS" across it.

"We know for a fact that AIDS patients are particularly susceptible to diseases such as meningitis and tuberculosis," Carter said. "Is it possible that an AIDS patient could carry one of these other communicable diseases undetected into school? I don't know. Does anyone?"

White, a hemophiliac, contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome through a tainted blood transfusion and was unable to return to class until April, when school officials said he would have to repeat the seventh grade.

Because he had missed so much school, and during the summer, school officials announced he would not be readmitted this year because of the deadly disease which attacks the body's immune system.

White's mother filed suit and he has been following classwork at home through a telephone linkup.

On Nov. 25, state hearing examiner Kathleen Madinger Angelone ruled White should go to school when his health permits, in accordance with state Board of Health guidelines for children with AIDS.

False reports sap resources of child abuse investigators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American public, overreacting to graphic news accounts of beaten, starved or sexually abused children, is jumping to conclusions and reporting suspected child abuse where at times none exists, an authority says.

Nationwide, 65 percent of all child abuse reports eventually prove to be false, Douglas J. Besharov, director of the American Enterprise Institute's Social Invention Project, said Tuesday. In 1973, 35 percent of those reports were deemed groundless.

"This flood of inappropriate cases is not just unfair to the parents who are investigated, it also creates real danger for children who are in true jeopardy," he said. "These children who need to be protected are getting lost in the avalanche of new cases."

"We're asking people to make a distinction here...asking people not to report every bruise they see. In the long run, more people will be protected if we're more careful."

People falsely accused of child abuse are striking back, often with lawsuits, he noted. The organization, Victims of Child Abuse Laws, was formed a year ago to help wrongly accused parents protect themselves, and it now has more than 3,000 members in 38 states.

"We are very angry," said Mary Lou Bauer of Hampton, Minn., a cofounder of VOCAL who said she and her husband were falsely accused of neglecting their adopted children. "This could happen to anyone. Anyone can misinterpret an action as sexual abuse if it's a caress, physical abuse if it's a spanking, emotional abuse if it's a lecture."

False reports put innocent families through the anguish of an investigation and also overwhelms the limited resources of child protective agencies, Besharov said.

"There has been an understandable but counterproductive overreaction to child abuse cases. As a result, large numbers of families are being put through child protective investigations when they ought not to be," he said.

Besharov, whose findings were published last week in the Harvard Journal of Law and Public Policy, said the public must be educated about what should be reported. He said people should "be careful — don't report on flimsy evidence" such as a single bruise or a brief change of behavior. He said the guideline should be, "If you think the child is in serious danger, then you should report."

Other recommendations:

— The news media and politicians should cool rhetoric about child abuse. Besharov said graphic news stories about children beaten, starved or sexually assaulted make people too eager to "do something" about the problem.

— Hotline workers should screen calls. Half the states prohibit hotline workers from making judgments about suspected abuse, so all reports are treated as true. "Anyone can report and trigger an investigation," he said.

— Federal and state laws must be modified to discourage reports without basis. He said in all but six states it is a crime not to report suspected child abuse. To protect themselves, doctors and social workers are overreacting and reporting even marginally suspicious cases.

FTC may drop investigation of health spas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is being urged to end its investigation of the health spa industry and drop the regulations it has been considering for a decade.

A spate of spa closings and charges of high-pressure sales tactics and other problems in the 1970s got the commission interested in spas, and regulations first were proposed in 1975.

But the commission staff on Tuesday recommended dropping the rules as unnecessary.

"Health spas have been a continuing consumer problem in one form or another," Amanda Petersen, acting director of the Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection, told a press briefing. "The challenge is determining what can be done."

She said the proposed regulations do not address the major problem, and, meanwhile, half the states have instituted their own regulations.

The primary consumer problem being encountered today is the closing of spas, in many cases leaving consumers with paid memberships and no place to use them or to obtain refunds.

"Spa closings can be a problem," Ms. Peterson acknowledged. "But a lot of the reasons for closing are not violations of FTC law. These can be poor management, bad location, loss of interest" or other reasons.

On the other hand, the FTC is very interested in shady operators who solicit memberships and collect money with no real intention of opening spas, she said. In those cases, the agency can take action under fraud laws, and has done so in the past, she said.

The proposed rules would not cover such instances, she said, since their main provision requires spas to offer members pro rata refunds if they cancel their membership for any reason.

This actually could have an adverse effect both on spas and consumers by causing spas to raise fees and possibly forcing some to close as members demanded refunds.

West German Cabinet agrees to negotiate Star Wars role

WORLD

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Cabinet agreed today to begin negotiations with the United States for a role in the controversial "Star Wars" space weapons research project, government sources said.

Bonn will seek an agreement protecting the rights of West German companies participating in the program and guaranteeing that Americans share with German scientists the project's technological advances, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The sources stressed that the West German government will not subsidize Star Wars research. They told The Associated Press the negotiations were expected to start next month.

A formal announcement was expected later in the day.

The sources said the Cabinet believes NATO needs to discuss the effect of Star Wars on the Western alliance's strategy, and will urge that such discussions start in February.

Kohl had announced Tuesday, even before the Cabinet decision, that Economics Minister Martin Bangemann would lead the West German negotiating team. The government press office said Kohl made the appointment early because he expected the Cabinet would make a "clear decision without major conflicts."

The Cabinet meeting was scheduled after months of public squabbling over whether West Germany should take part in the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly called "Star Wars," to develop space weapons and shields against incoming nuclear missiles.

West Germany's opposition Social Democrats and Greens categorically reject Star Wars on the grounds it could dangerously intensify the U.S.-Soviet arms race.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, a liberal Free Democrat in Kohl's coalition government, has voiced strong doubts about the program. But he indicated in a newspaper interview earlier this month that his party and Kohl's conservative Christian Democrats had reached a compromise on the issue.

Bangemann is chairman of the Free Democrats, the junior partner in the governing coalition.

The Reagan administration has invited all its NATO allies to take part in the $26 billion program, but only Britain has accepted so far.

Kohl's government has said previously that West German companies are free to join Star Wars-related research on an individual basis, but no companies have done so.

Successful negotiations with Washington could make participation more attractive for West Germany's private sector, which boasts several leading high-technology companies.

However, in a radio interview following his press office's statement, Kohl said "security policy and not technological grounds will be the determining factor in a German commitment" to a Star Wars role.

He said while the program carries important technological implications that "we must consider," the U.S. government had conceived Star Wars because it was "a matter of security."

Genscher and other critics in Bonn have suggested that West Germany's carefully developed ties with East Germany and other Soviet-bloc countries could suffer if the government signs an agreement to take part in Star Wars.

Last week Genscher called on the NATO alliance to undertake a comprehensive study of the research program's potential impact on East-West relations.

West Germany, militarily and economically the most important American ally in Europe, has been under steady pressure from the Soviet bloc not to enter the U.S. program.

The issue also has strained the usually warm relations between West German and France.

Latin debtor nations want interest cut

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — The region's 11 most indebted nations, declaring that "Latin America must grow again," called U.S. proposals for almost $30 billion in new loans insufficient and urged a reduction in world interest rates.

Foreign ministers and economics ministers of the so-called Cartagena Group, formed in June 1984, announced the "emergency proposals" Tuesday after a two-day meeting.

The 11 Cartagena countries owe $340 billion of Latin America's $360 billion foreign debt.

The ministers said their countries' foreign debt burdens have stalled economic growth and threaten democratic governments.

"The lack of growth in our region...opens the door to instability and social tensions and compromises the consolidation of democratic processes," the ministers said in their statement.

"Latin America must grow again. This is the ineludible obligation of its governments to their people," they said.

A major reason for the meeting was a proposal U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker made last October. He suggested that commercial banks increase their loans to the 15 most deeply indebted Third World countries by $20 billion over the next three years, and that the World Bank and regional development banks boost their lending by $9 billion over the same period.

The Cartagena statement said the Baker plan is "a positive step in recognizing the principle of co-responsibility for solving the debt problem (and) the need for growth in debtor countries."

But they said the plan was insufficient because the credits foreseen were not enough to ensure growth. They also said clarification was needed on what conditions would apply to the new credit.

The Cartagena proposal also called for a 20 percent annual increase over the next three years in loans from the World Bank and the Interamerican Development Bank, while the Baker proposal foresaw a total 50 percent increase over the three-year period.

The debtor countries also appealed for a "return of real interest rates to their historical levels" and a reduction of banks' risk margins.

"By not reducing interest rates, any debt-refinancing effort is neutralized and new debts are accumulated at an unsustainable speed," they said.

Their statement included the following proposals:

— There should be a "separation of current and future debt" and special repayment terms for new debts that are contracted to pay off old ones.

— The ability of the International Monetary Fund to compensate debtor countries for declines in export income should be bolstered and the IMF should ease its loan conditions to allow for economic expansion.

— Industrialized nations should restructure debts for those countries that need it.

— Limits should be established on the net transfer of a country's resources in accordance with the country's economic growth.

— Limits also should be established on debt servicing in relation to export income that would be "compatible with the development needs and the social and economic requirements of each country."

The statement said a committee of representatives from Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, and Venezuela was established to monitor the progress of the proposals.

Other members of the Cartagena Group, which takes its name from the Colombian city where the first meeting was held, are Bolivia, Chile, Ecuador, the Dominican Republic, Peru and Uruguay.

"If the measures proposed are not together adopted, the region will be placed in a situation of extreme gravity that would necessarily oblige it to limit the net transfer of its resources to avoid greater social and political instability," the statement said.

Argentine Economy Minister Juan Sourrouille was asked if that meant debt payments might be unilaterally halted or limited.

Feminist mayor challenges Brazilian traditions

FORTALEZA, Brazil (AP) — Maria Luiza Fontenele, a twice-divorced feminist and leftist activist, has been elected mayor of Fortaleza, upsetting the dominant national party in this traditionally male-dominated, conservative city in Brazil's impoverished Northeast.

"I am a born challenger," the mayor-elect said in an interview with The Associated Press. "The people finally decided they had enough of the old system. They understood that I understood what their problems were, so I won."

Practically unknown before, Ms. Fontenele has been featured on national magazine covers and Brazilian TV networks since her election Nov. 15.

"I fell out of bed when I heard the result," said Ulysses Guimaraes, speaker of the Brazilian House of Representatives and president of the Brazilian Democratic Movement, whose candidate she defeated by 11,000 votes.

The 43-year-old U.S.-educated sociologist takes office Jan. 1 as mayor of Brazil's fifth-largest city, population 1.5 million, the capital of Ceara state. She upset candidates backed by the region's so-called "colonels," old-time political bosses representing a rich, powerful elite.

Ms. Fontenele ran on the ticket of the small, independent, pro-socialist Workers Party, which until now the "colonels" had considered little more than a nuisance group. Pre-election polls had her coming in third.

Ms. Fontenele mobilized thousands of volunteers from labor unions, universities, the Roman Catholic Church, neighborhood councils and women's groups. She borrowed money from friends.

She is one of two women to win mayoralties in the November elections. The other ran as a stand-in for her husband, who was ineligible for re-election, and won on the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, the official political organization of the military government that stepped down this past March.

Few women hold any high political office in Brazil.

Politics in air

The political winds are blowing again and the political tempo is picking up in Midland, evidenced by a number of candidacy filings for both the April city and school election, and the May state primaries.

In the last few days, several individuals have announced intentions to seek various political offices. That's significant although not particularly extraordinary because the filing period hasn't opened yet and won't until January.

Regardless, prospective office-seekers are anxious to make their candidacies known as early as they can without stepping over the line of what is deemed politically tasteful and wise. That date varies considerably. Some candidates prefer to make their intentions known early to obtain as much media and public exposure as possible. Others are more inclined to hold back, not announce their intentions too quickly, but rather, to wait and assess the field for the particular office they want to seek before making their candidacy known to the public.

Of course, there are predictable ramifications to the timing of announcements. Early candidacies, predictably, tend to breed costly campaigns while later announcements may keep campaign expenses down and, in particular situations, even stimulate voter interest.

For years Midland has had a deserved reputation as a "political town." A Republican stronghold with a strong Democratic influence in its past, the city has witnessed any number of active party showdowns for county offices. It isn't uncommon to see strong intraparty rivalry in the Republican and Democratic primaries.

City offices — mayor and council seats — are, of course, not partisan, but that doesn't mean the positions go lacking for candidates as a rule. Midland is fortunate in having an active political citizenry that brings to most elections a greater degree of citizen and voter participation.

That's good because it keeps issues out in the open and necessitates strong leadership from both candidates for office and those elected to serve.

The filing period for next year's city and school election begins Jan. 20 and runs through Feb. 19. The filing period for precinct, county, state or U.S. offices begins Jan. 4 and continues through Feb. 3.

We encourage all those interested in serving their fellow residents to join the others who have already made their candidacies known and toss their hats in the political ring for either election. Furthermore we encourage all the candidates to stick to the issues and keep their campaigning clean.

National economy up

As yearend nears, it's customary in the news business to make lists of the top news stories of the previous 12 months. When 1985's are listed, one big one that should be included is the continued growth of the U.S. economy — on a national level at least.

The expansion has been steady. For instance, the U.S. Commerce Department recently reported that economic performance rose 0.3 percent in October. An organization of purchasing agents chimed in with a similarly optimistic report for November. Its index advanced to 53.3 percent, prompting Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the National Association of Purchasing Managements Business Survey Committee to say:

"The continued improvement in the economy is encouraging. The impresssive growth in new orders virtually assures a good fourth quarter."

Retail sales were up last month. The Commerce Department announced a jump of 1.1 percent, due largely to lively activity in department stores and autos. Total sales for November were $115.9 billion, compared to $1.3 billion in October.

Locally, the economy has continued at a depressed level, largely because of the lower price for oil as a result of the volume of oil now on the world market. But the Permian Basin economy typically follows the national economy by several months.

Nationally, these figures by themselves may not mean much to the average American. Put together with others, however, they spell faith in an economy that can mean much in 1986 and 1987. That's why it's one of the biggest stories of the year.

Another View:

A merger to compete

What kind of company is best adapted to worldwide business competition? The General Electric Co. is buying RCA because, it says, the combination will be splendidly equipped to compete on an international scale.

Behind this dramatic merger you can discern the lessons that GE extracts from its own considerable experience in international markets, and from the successes of the big Japanese companies.

The interesting question here is whether GE is drawing the right conclusions from the Japanese case.

As GE says, it wants to become less dependent on the manufacture of mass-produced products such as light bulbs and washing machines. Instead, it wants to move more heavily into advanced technology and services.

The big Japanese companies, as GE reads their record, have benefited enormously from a highly protected home market in which they develop the momentum to launch their highly effective leaps into foreign markets.

How does an American company compensate for the lack of a protected home market? It looks, apparently, for businesses that are not subject to foreign competition.

For one example, RCA's NBC television network. For another, RCA's communications services. GE has concluded that life in the world markets is going to be full of ups and downs, and RCA's television and communications revenues will provide a welcome financial stabilizer.

But if there are theoretical benefits in this kind of diversity, there are also practical dangers.

GE is one of the more skillfully managed companies in the world. But the experience of conglomerated companies in the past couple of decades suggests that it becomes increasingly difficult to run a corporation well when it acquires widely differing kinds of businesses.

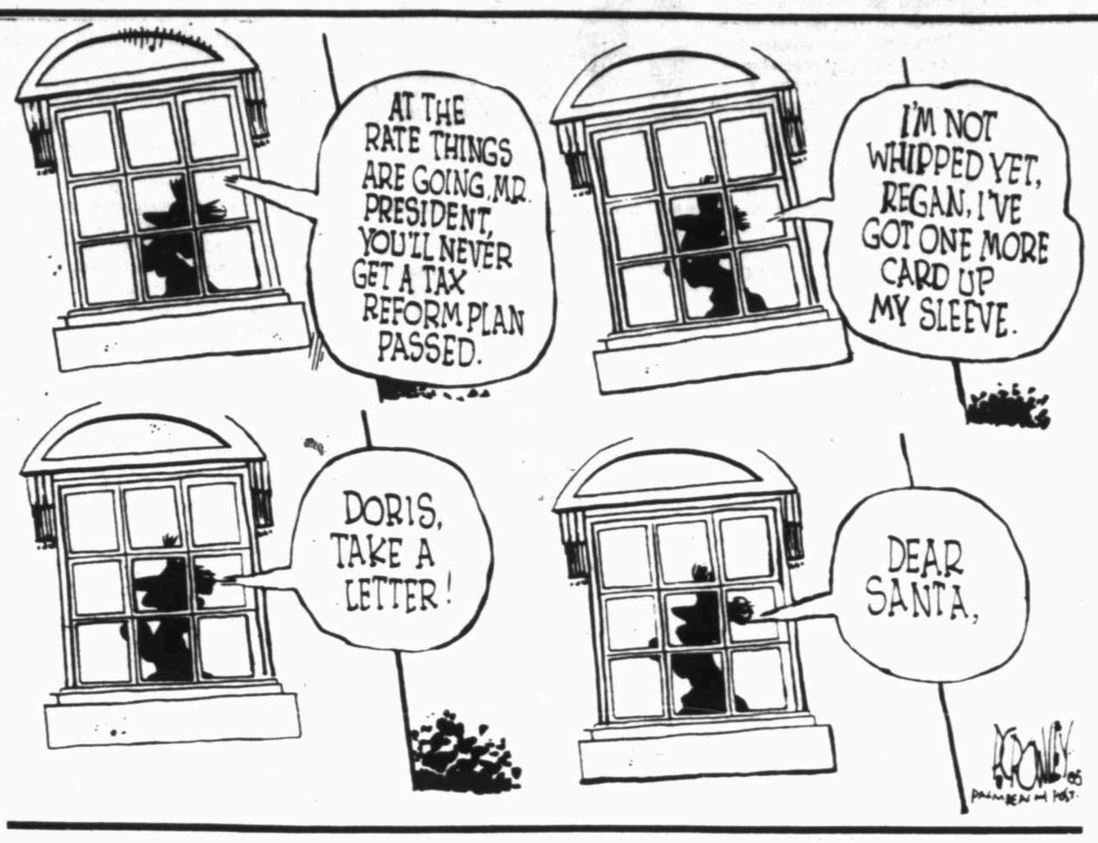

If GE succeeds, it will set an influential pattern in American business. But success is not a sure thing.

One customer with real grounds for uneasiness is the Defense Department. For some time there's been a trend toward concentration in the defense industry, and both GE and RCA are major contractors.

This merger gives the Pentagon additional cause for concern that it is becoming the captive of a few very large companies.

Otherwise this merger does not seem to pose any large or insoluble threat to competition. It will be carefully examined by the Justice Department and a couple of congressional committees, but there are not many points at which the two companies' product lines overlap.

Thanks for (ouch) the memories!

The hit number of last week's Kennedy Center Honors show was a rousing tribute to Bob Hope. Veterans from our past wars came on stage, identified where they had seen Hope entertain, saluted and said, "Thanks for the memories."

Art Buchwald

It is almost impossible to have served in any U.S. conflict since Pearl Harbor without having seen Bob Hope.

My memory goes back to 1944. I was stationed on a piece of coral in the Marshall Islands with 3,000 marines, soldiers and Seabees. We were in charge of guarding empty sea lanes for a war that had passed us by. We lived in tents, played volleyball, produced homemade raisin whisky and made souvenirs of Japanese flags, which we sold to Navy ships anchored in the lagoon.

The important thing to remember is that our tent had no floor. This made it quite muddy during the rainy season, which made our toes go squish, squish in the night.

With the rainy season approaching we decided to take action and get ourselves a wooden floor. The question was how to do it. Cooper said the Seabees had plywood stashed away on the western side of the island. Brinkerhoff said the Army always left their truck keys in the ignition. Farhart reported he could "borrow" all the tools we needed from the Air Force armory. The rest of us became part of a commando group whose mission was to capture the plywood without the Seabees being any the wiser.

The operation was a success and by dawn the wood was stashed in our tent. The next step was to get the floor built before the Seabees discovered the theft.

First we leveled the ground and laid out the foundation with two-by-fours (also stolen). This took us the better part of the morning. We whistled while we worked until Schulman rushed in and yelled, "Bob Hope is on the island with his show!" Half my tentmates dropped their tools and started to change clothes. "Hey, guys, we have to get the floor done," I said.

"They say he brought five showgirls," Schulman said.

The other half dropped their tools.

"Hold it," I said. "If we don't get this floor laid the Navy MPs will find the wood and we'll not only lose it but be chopping rocks in the brig."

Carroll said, "We've been deprived of everything that is good about America. Don't make us give up Bob Hope too."

I told them, "This is a gift from heaven. We can install the whole thing while Hope is performing. Please, guys, you can see Bob Hope and showgirls any day of the week. But how often can you get a brand-new plywood floor?"

Cooper said, "I'm going to the show."

Farhart nodded, "My mother would never forgive me if I didn't go."

Brinkerhoff said, "We owe it to all the people who have made the USO what it is today."

I didn't want to do it but I had no choice. Somebody had to beat some sense into them. I stood in front of the tent, raised my fists and said, "Anyone who wants to go to the Bob Hope show has to fight me first."

Cooper shrugged his shoulders and hit me in the stomach. While I was on one knee Brinkerhoff got me in the jaw. Schulman sent a roundhouse to the ribs, and Farhart tried to see which eye he could close first. Then Cooper started to play soccer with my groin.

In one way or another they all made their point and there was nothing for me to do but fold up my tent and follow my "buddies" to the show.

We came back three hours later, our morale soaring and our faith in American women restored. It only took us until midnight to lay the floor. It was a day I will always remember. So, Bob, even though my groin still hurts, thanks for the memories.

Iran was behind '84 hijacking

WASHINGTON — One year and two weeks ago today, U.S. intelligence intercepted a telephone conversation that established beyond any doubt Iran's behind-the-scenes control of Lebanese Shiite Moslem hijackers who subsequently murdered two Americans and brutally tortured two more.

Jack Anderson

Yet, to this day, the tough-talking Reagan administration has taken no retaliatory action against the fanatically anti-American regime in Tehran that was responsible for the atrocity.

The "smoking gun" conversation took place shortly after noon, Tehran time, on Dec. 4, 1984, just a few hours after four armed terrorists had hijacked Kuwaiti Airways Flight 221 and forced it to land at Mehrabad airport in Tehran. The phone call was intercepted by the National Security Agency.

On one end of the line was Ayatollah Mohtashami, Iran's ambassador to Syria. U.S. intelligence later learned that Mohtashami had participated in the meeting in Lebanon at which the hijacking was planned.

On the other end was an unidentified official of the Iranian foreign ministry. The hijacked plane was sitting on a runway at the Tehran airport.

Part of the conversation was garbled, but the implications of the deciphered discussion between the two Iranian officials was clearly grasped in Washington.

The crucial statement came during a discussion of the airliner's possible move to Beirut. Mohtashami, in Syria, said: "Just as we told you in Telex 22206 of 2 December, America brought its Marines to Lebanon. They might intervene in this matter."

U.S. intelligence analysts immediately realized the significance of this remark. It meant that the warning about the Marines had been transmitted by Mohtashami more than a full day before the Kuwaiti plane was hijacked in the early hours of Dec. 4. The Iranian ambassador clearly knew the hijacking was about to occur, and had warned officials in Tehran by cable not to overlook the possibility of Marine intervention if the plane was diverted to Beirut.

Having repeated his warning about possible U.S. response, Mohtashami proceeded to recommend in the phone conversation that the plane be flown to Beirut anyway. Pro-Iranian Shiite militia would be able to withstand any rescue attempt by the Marines, he explained.

Under the protection of the Shiite militiamen, according to the transcript of the conversation, the hijackers could then "take revenge on the VIPs one by one at a specific time so that Kuwait might agree" to the hijackers' demands. The Lebanese hijackers wanted Kuwait to release 17 Shiite terrorists imprisoned for 1983 bombings there.

The identity of "the VIPs" soon became tragically clear. The plane stayed in Tehran, but two American officials of the Agency for International Development — Charles Hegna, 50, and William Stanford, 52 — were shot several times and thrown out the plane door to the tarmac 20 feet below. When they moved, the terrorists shot them to death as if they were holding target practice, according to a chilling account by Nathan Adams in Reader's Digest.

Two other Americans on board — AID employee Charles Kapar, 57, and businessman John Costa, 50 — were savagely tortured. Hijackers jumped up and down on Costa's back, cracked three ribs by beating him, extinguished a cigarette in his ear, burned his face with another cigarette and set his hair afire. Kapar was choked with a rope, pistol-whipped and beaten till two ribs were cracked, teeth were broken and his face was swollen; he was also burned on the face with a cigarette.

After six days of hell, Iranian police seized the plane. The U.S. government, though fully aware of Iran's complicity, issued only a mild, grumbling protest complaining that Iran hadn't done all it could have to prevent the bloodshed.

WATCH ON THE PENTAGON: The Army's computer problems continue apace. Former soldiers owe the Army more than $55 million paid to them by mistake after they left the service. The problem is an information gap in the main finance computer. Letters are routinely sent out asking for repayment, but with little success. To an old soldier, when the eagle screams on payday, that's it.

THE DOPE TRAIL: A huge new cocaine refining factory has sprung up in the jungles of Suriname, and drug experts suspect it's a replacement for a plant seized in Colombia last year. Like that one, the Surinam facility has uniformed soldiers on guard, but it's not known if they're government troops sent to protect the industrial investment or just renegade soldiers. The new coke factory is processing about the same amount of cocaine as its Colombian predecessor.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Over the years we've gotten to the point where nothing in those fancy holiday mail-order catalogs surprises us. But one item this year really has us wondering. It's a tea-bag sachet that releases fragrance when it's boiled. Called "Holiday Kitchen," it will allow the user to "enjoy the warm, homey aroma of holiday baking without slaving over a hot stove." Fine and dandy, but what happens next? If you're alone, how do you avoid deep depression as you nosh your store-bought goodies? Or if you've impressed guests with your apparent culinary skill, how do you get them to leave without a sample?

RUSSELL BAKER

Ho hum, here comes Halley's

NEW YORK — Please don't think me blase when I say the approach of Halley's comet does not make my pulse flutter. It is a simple case of disillusion. A few years ago I got terribly worked up about another comet and had my heart broken when it failed to show up.

Russell Baker

That comet was named Kohoutek. Sure, Kohoutek was out there somewhere. People with access to the Mount Wilson Observatory could even see it. But to us of the naked-eye set, Kohoutek was a dud.

My children were then young enough to be flabbergasted by my wisdom, or so I thought, and I had filled them with a great deal of wisdom about this Kohoutek which we would soon see in glorious flashing color with our own naked eyes. When we did not soon see it the children demanded to know where it was.

Finally, growing impatient myself — for the newspapers, after the excited frothings of their astronomy experts, had fallen ominously silent — I sighted it one twilight in the Maryland sky. I was driving an interminable turnpike with the whole family sealed in a sedan when I spotted a beautiful light hovering over faraway Baltimore.

"There it is," I cried. "Kohoutek."

All the children responded at once in chorus: "That's not a comet. That's just Venus, the evening star." I have had no use for comets since.

The Boston Globe's distinguished nature disquisitionist, M.R. Montgomery, says this attitude is appropriate, since Halley's comet is merely a chunk of ice flying predictably eccentric orbits around the sun.

I cited Montgomery last week to a person very dear to me when she said I must be thrilled about the approach of Halley's comet. "Far from it," I said. "It is merely a piece of ice, and its arrival at this time is a rather dull mathematical inevitability."

This thoughtless outburst produced signs of dismay in the young woman. Interpreting them immediately with absolute accuracy, I instantly added, "Nevertheless, I wish with all my heart that I had binoculars or a telescope so that I might observe this astonishing phenomenon of heavenly refrigeration."

This retrieved an awkward situation, for the sweet child, slavishly obeying the current avalanche of advertising advice on what to get dad, hubby or gramps for Christmas, had obviously bought either a telescope or binoculars to help me enjoy Halley's comet to its fullest.

Ah well, I thought, it will be easy to burble happily about either binoculars or telescope when the gifts are opened since with either one I can sit on the roof and stare at the craters of the moon while the rest of them are glued by "Knot's Landing" to the TV set.

Two days later a young man who is very close to me telephoned. "I guess you're really excited about Halley's comet, right?" he said.

"Right, absolutely right," I said. "The only reason I have insisted on living to my present advanced age is so I could catch Halley's comet this time around."

Well, perhaps the girl was giving me binoculars and the boy a telescope. With a telescope I could sit on the roof and see the rings of whichever planet it is that has the rings. I should know its name, I suppose, but life is too short to master both the solar system and the wines of Bordeaux, and though I am uncertain which planet has the rings I know exactly which wine should be drunk while examining such planets through a telescope.

That night a third child visited, ostensibly to ask me whether it would be ostentatious to serve a 1961 Chateau Margaux with chicken pot pie. I sensed his true purpose, and replied:

"How can you expect me to cope with difficult wine questions when I am in a paralyzing dither over the coming of Halley's Comet?" He left happy.

A few minutes later my wife arrived home carrying a telescope-shaped shopping bag.

By bedtime my godmother and Aunt Dolly had both phoned to confirm their suspicions that the approach of Halley's comet had me more excited than any phenomenon since the scene in "Hell's Angels" in which Jean Harlow appeared in a bathrobe.

After Christmas, up on the roof, I shall be well equipped in case a similar scene is playing behind some uncurtained window in the neighborhood. So will a lot of other dads, husbands, grampses, godsons and favorite nephews, thanks to the late Halley. Science these days may be just one piece of depressing news after another, but in almost every instance it also offers some small reward for mankind.

Survivors mourn victims of crash

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SHARM EL-SHEIKH, Egypt — On the seaward side of a barren, sun-bleached hill at the southern tip of the Sinai Desert, the surviving members of 3rd Battalion, 101st Airborne Division, gathered Monday to mourn the 248 soldiers and eight crew members killed in last week's crash of a chartered Arrow Air jetliner.

The mourners, 400 paratroopers taking time out from their peacekeeping duties in the Sinai, were not dressed in their Sunday best but in battle fatigues and combat boots. Some cried when a soldier with a guitar got up and sang "When Peace Like a River," a song written by an American missionary whose wife and children were lost at sea.

A poem by Chief Warrent Officer Allen Bruce, whose best friend was aboard the ill-fated flight, was also read. Entitled "Solace," it spoke of the tears that everyone felt when "the word came that I had lost my dear friend."

Later, from high on a ridge overlooking the gathering and the Gulf of Aqaba, seven riflemen fired three volleys of shots out to sea and a lone bugler played "Taps."

The mourners included about 220 members of the 101st, who are themselves to return home this week, as well as their replacements, senior officers and other members of the 11-nation peacekeeping force known as the Multinational Force and Observers.

The victims of last Thursday's plane crash in Gander, Newfoundland, were the third contingent of peacekeepers returning to the United States since mid-November after completing a six-month tour of duty in the Sinai.

Maj. Steve Roy of Montgomery, Ala., the battalion's senior surviving officer, eulogised the dead soldiers as heroes for "the cause of peace, men who came here to the Sinai and gave their utmost in every way" to help Egypt and Israel abide by the terms of their 1979 peace treaty.

'Too early' to assess cause of crash

GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — The chief investigator into the crash of a U.S. military chartered DC-8 says it is too early to determine whether an engine "thrust reverser" had been deployed during take-off, possibly causing a fatal loss of speed.

The reverser on one of the plane's four engines was found damaged, Peter Boag, chief investigator for the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, said Tuesday. However, he told reporters, "It is too early to attach any significance to these observations."

All those aboard, including 248 American soldiers and eight crew members, were killed in the crash last Thursday at Gander International Airport.

The transfer of the soldiers' bodies to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware was to be completed today. American C-141 Starlifter transports have been carrying the bodies in groups of 35.

Thrust reversers extend over the rear of a jet engine upon landing and direct the exhaust forward, slowing the aircraft.

"Investigators have observed that the right-hand outboard thrust reverser has separated at the lower hinge area," Boag said. "The reverser doors also show signs of impact damage on their leading edges."

He also would not comment when asked whether a sudden deployment of the reverser would be consistent with the finding that the jetliner reached a peak speed of 190 mph on takeoff, then began slowing and veering to the right before it crashed just beyond the end of the runway.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Jews protest soccer matches on Sabbath

RAMAT GAN, Israel (AP) — More than 2,500 Orthodox Jews demonstrated Tuesday night against soccer matches on the Sabbath and in support of religious political parties that threatened to leave the government over the issue.

The protest was ordered by the 15-rabbi Council of Torah Sages, which directly controls two political parties in Prime Minister Shimon Peres' coalition government. Zvi Glasner, the demonstrators' spokesman, told The Associated Press that the council ordered six members of the 120-seat Parliament to quit the government if its demands were not met to halt Sabbath soccer.

The soccer stadium is located close to an ultra-Orthodox neighborhood and the rabbis say the games on Saturday would disturb the Sabbath peace. Israelis work a six-day week and Saturday is their only day off.

The stadium is the new home of Tel Aviv Maccabi, one of the country's top soccer teams, which moved to the suburban location this season to accommodate more spectators. Last week 12,000 fans cheered their team to victory.

The demonstrators chanted loudly outside the Great Synagogue under a banner proclaiming "The Sabbath — the spirit of our life. We shall give our souls to maintain it." The Council Sages silently watched from a grandstand position on the synagogue steps.

Following the demonstration, Interior Minister Yitzhak Peretz said on Israel television that Peres had agreed to stop the games.

Waite renews efforts

LONDON (AP) — A spokeswoman for the Church of England says Terry Waite, a representative of the archbishop of Canterbury, will return to Lebanon on Friday to renew his efforts to free Americans held captive there.

The spokeswoman, Eve Keatley, said Tuesday that Waite also will try to contact the kidnappers of other hostages held in Lebanon.

Mrs. Keatley said Monday that Waite had left Britain on a secret mission the previous day and would return Tuesday. She said he did not go to the Middle East, but did not elaborate.

Female slaves rescued

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — A government official said more than 100 Bengali women who were being sold as slaves were rescued by police, and 40 alleged slave traders were arrested in a recent crackdown.

Ghous Ali Shah, chief Minister of Sind province, told legislators Tuesday in a written statement that authorities had set up special squads to halt a slave racket that preys on illegal immigrants.

He said slave traders have been helping women from Bengladesh get across the Pakistani border illegally from India, promising them jobs. The women then are sold in Pakistan as wives and domestic servants, he said.

He did not comment on newspaper reports that police and government officials have been involved in the slave racket.

Teen commits suicide

TOKYO (AP) — A 14-year-old girl jumped from the top of a four-story building in a Tokyo suburb after she was caught stealing comic books, police said today.

The girl, whose name was withheld because of her age, died in a hospital Tuesday of injuries suffered in the jump the previous evening, said Shunsuke Shinohara, spokesman for the Chiba prefectural police.

Extended forecast

Friday through Sunday

West Texas: Mostly fair Friday through Sunday. Cold nights. Warmer Friday afternoon except southwest. Cooler Sunday afternoon except southwest. Panhandle Highs mid 50s Friday warming to near 60 Saturday cooling to low 50s Sunday. Lows 20 to 25. South Plains: Highs mid 50s warming to lower 60s Saturday cooling to mid 50s Sunday. Lows lower 20s to mid 20s.

Warmer days due

From Staff and Wire Reports

Slightly warmer temperatures are expected in the Midland area Thursday as the high is expected to reach near the 50 degree mark, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for fair skies and a low in the mid-20s tonight warming Thursday to a high in the upper 40s. Tonight's winds will be variable at 5 to 10 mph, becoming southeasterly Thursday at less than 10 mph.

Tuesday's high of 57 was 20 degrees below the record set in 1962. This morning's low was 10 degrees above the 1981 record of 14.

STATE

Scattered rainshowers, triggered by an area of low pressure over the northwest Gulf of Mexico, continued to dampen much of the Texas coastal waters this morning.

Otherwise, cloudy skies dominated much of South Texas, while fair skies covered the rest of the Lone Star State, according to the National Weather Service.

Temperatures during the predawn hours had chilled into the 20s across the far West, while the 30s and 40s were common elsewhere. Readings in the 50s were confined to the Rio Grande plain and lower Valley.

Temperature extremes at 4 a.m. ranged from 16 degrees at Marfa to 52 at both Laredo and the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station, the weather service said.

In the forecast, North Texas should be fair to partly cloudy and colder through Thursday with lows in the 20s and highs in the upper 30s to lower 40s.

West Texas should be fair through Thursday with lows ranging from the middle teens in the Panhandle to near 30 in the Big Bend. Highs should be near 40 in the Panhandle to the middle 60s in the Big Bend.

South Texas skies should be cloudy with a chance of rain tonight, but those clouds should decrease by Thursday. Lows should be in the 20s and 30s, while highs should be in the 40s and 50s.

NATION

The Plains and Great Lakes region bore the brunt of a snow-packing Canadian storm today that pushed wind chills to 60 below zero, set a record low and prompted heavy snow warnings and widespread travelers' advisories.

The storm, which dropped into the Plains Tuesday, spread snow across the central Plains and middle Mississippi Valley.

'Dogs, Rebs seek five-game stand in San Antonio

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland High and Midland Lee basketball teams get out of school two days earlier than their Christmas break classmates as they head to the three-day, 28-team San Antonio Optimist Classic tournament Thursday, but you can classify this as a working vacation.

And work it will be if the Rebels and Bulldogs can wade through some of the stiffest competition of the season. The two teams are guaranteed a minimum of three games each, which is the attractive portion of the tournament, but it is possible to play five games if you gain a Final Four berth.

Year in and year out, this tournament is one of the toughest in the state and one of the largest. It will be a stern test for both teams.

Midland High, 6-4 on the season with three of those losses coming by forfeit because of playing an ineligible player, opens the tournament at 7:30 p.m. Thursday against San Antonio Holmes while Lee faces San Antonio McCollum in another 7:30 p.m. contest.

In second round action, MHS will face either the winner or loser of the Austin McCallum-San Antonio Madison game on Friday while Lee will square off against either the loser or winner of the Smiley-San Antonio Fox Tech game.

Both MHS coach Jack Stephenson and Lee coach Paul Stueckler said information on the first round opponents was sketchy early in the week, but both were looking forward to the tournament challenge.

"I know that Holmes recently won an 18-team tournament and now has two more fine athletes in Terry and Kevin Cash, brothers who played on the football team that just got eliminated last weekend by Houston Yates," said Stephenson. "It's always our goal to get in five games when we go to this tournament. We didn't do it last year, but we did the year before."

Stueckler said of McCollum, "I really don't know much about them, but I will know more by the time we play. I have some friends in San Antonio who will be giving me a scouting report. We would just like to go down there and win some games."

In this tournament, Stephenson is hoping to see the team that defeated Hobbs, N.M., instead of the team that lost to Snyder in games last week.

"I felt really bad about the team when we played so poorly against Snyder last week, but then we come back and beat Hobbs in Hobbs, I got really excited again.

"You just don't beat Hobbs in Hobbs very often. Usually, you just hope to keep it close. It was way back in 1970 that a Midland team won a game in Hobbs, N.M. We've had some humilating losses in that gym."

Stueckler would like to see the defensive part of his team's attack come to the front over the weekend.

"We're playing decent ball on offense, but we haven't been aggressive enough on defense. We're just too passive on defense. All we've been trying to do is outscore people and we've got to do a better job without the ball," said Stueckler. "I would really like to see our kids come out and play hard on defense. That's certianly one area I'll be watching in this tournament."

Even though there is the matter of this weekend's Optimist Classic and two tournaments on Dec. 27-28, District 4-5A play isn't that far away. MHS will play in the Lions Club Classic in Kerrville and Lee will be in the McMurray tournament in Abilene next weekend, but District 4-5A play opens Jan. 2 with Lee hosting San Angelo at Chap Center and MHS travelling to Big Spring.

With that in mind, Stueckler and Stephenson have already made scouting forays to see some of the other 4-5A squads.

"Paul and I went to the Abilene tournament last Saturday and saw several of our district teams play," said Stephenson. "Abilene Cooper defeated Abilene High by two points in overtime to win the tournament. The district looks a whole lot like last year, which means the district race ought to be a lot of fun for the fans and not much fun for the coaches."

Stueckler agreed, "I think the district is just like last year. Obviously, Cooper and Abilene High are close in talent and San Angelo has a fine team. And when district opens, we face San Angelo on a Thursday and turn around and travel to Cooper."

Tigers rally past stubborn 'Horns, 72-65

Associated Press

AUSTIN — If Texas can't be broken as Louisiana State Coach Dale Brown says, his Tigers at least left behind one heck of a crack.

Brown's No. 9-ranked Louisiana State took off after a sluggish first half to cruise past Texas 72-65 Tuesday night in a non-conference college basketball game.

"This was our hardest victory," Brown said after the Tigers rallied from a 35-28 halftime deficit. "Texas is hard to play because they're fundamentally sound. You can't break them."

It appeared that might be true for a while as the Tigers got off to a slower start than usual. But then Nikita Wilson and James Williams heated up.

"Wilson and Williams dominated play for them in the second half," said Longhorn Coach Bob Weltlich, whose team lose a one-pointer in overtime last week to No. 8 Oklahoma. "They played real good position and got the ball in to Wilson."

Wilson scored 23 points and Williams had 15 points and eight rebounds in the game.

"They are a very quick, very athletic team," Weltlich said. "When you get behind you are not as aggressive and that's what happened to us."

In the out-of-character first half, 8-0 LSU shot a dismal 29 percent from the field and was outrebounded 23-15.

Wilson hit just two of three shots in the first half, but was five of six in the second. Derrick Taylor, who finished with 16 points, gave LSU its first lead, 41-39, with 13:47 left in the second half.

Wilson then scored 13 points in the final 11:42 as the Tigers stretched their margin to as much as 10 points, 61-51, with 6:01 left to play.

Patrick Fairs' 18 points and nine rebounds led Texas, now 3-4.

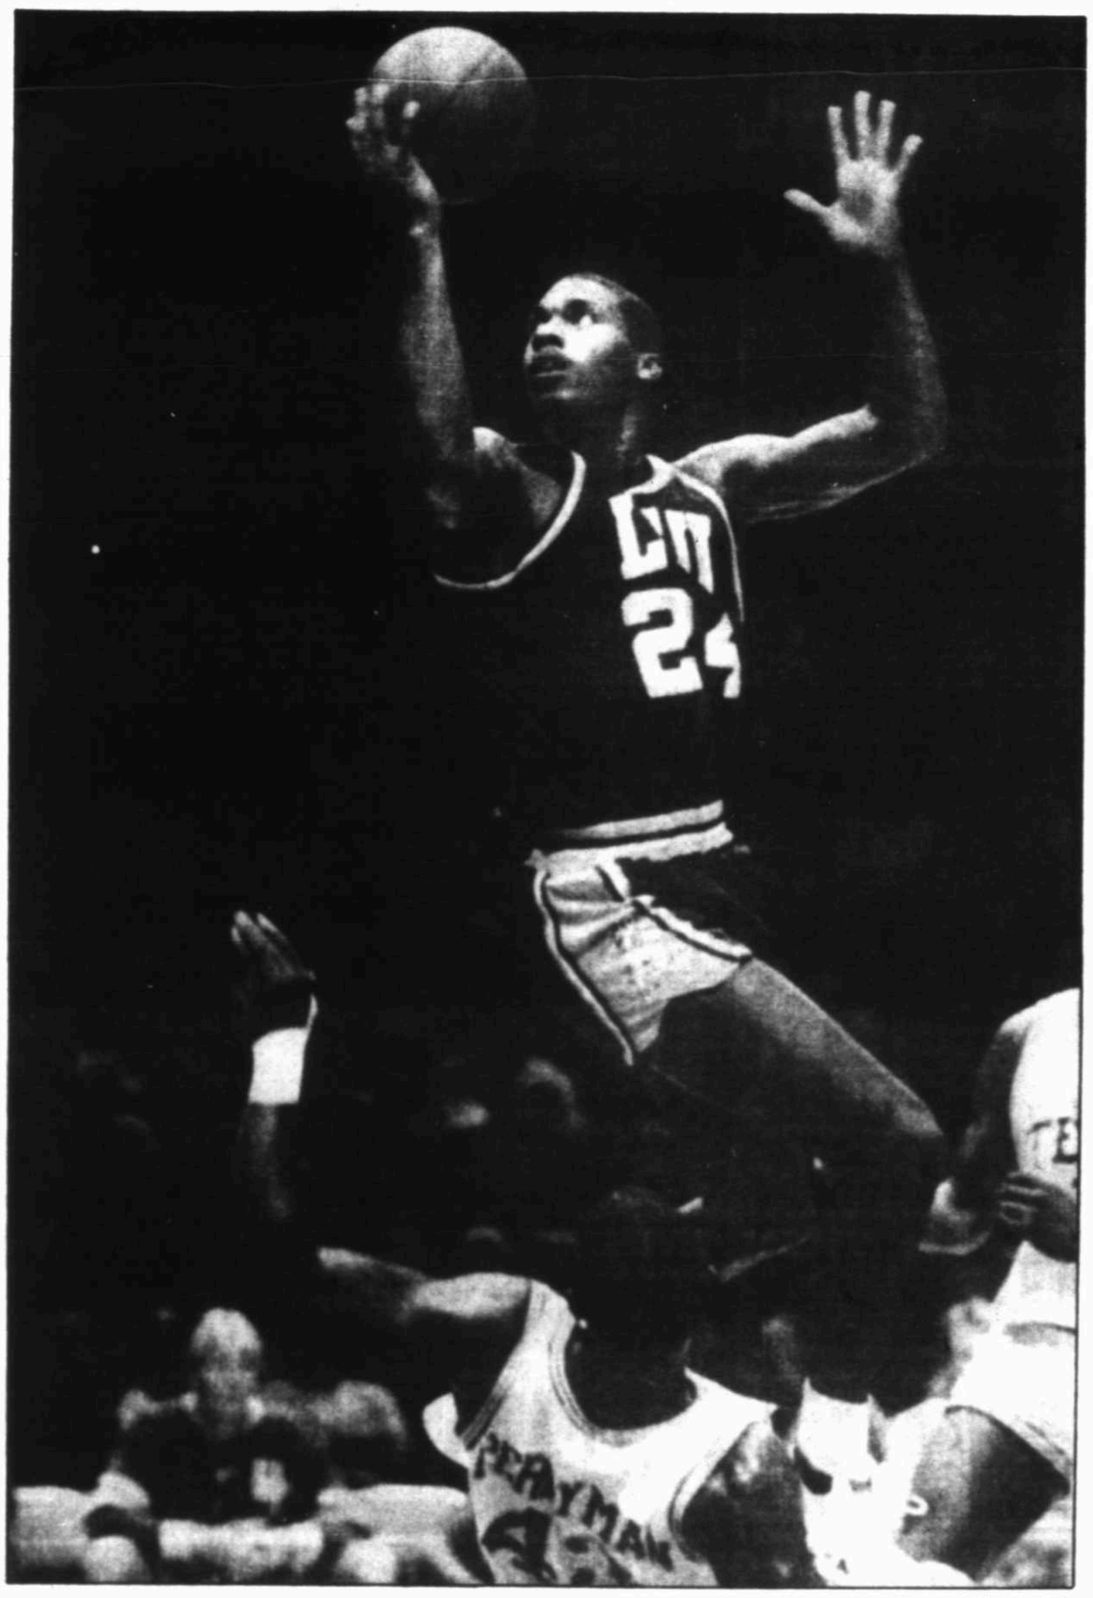

Houston Baptist 86, Texas A&I 56

HOUSTON — Junior guard Fred Goporo scored 24 points including eight of eight free throw attempts to lead Houston Baptist over Texas A&I.

The Huskies, 5-4, broke on top early and never looked back. A 19-7 spurt late in the first half pushed Houston Baptist to a 37-21 halftime margin.

HBU shot 58.8 percent from the field for the game thanks to a blistering 64 percent in the second half.

Texas A&I, 3-6, was led by Randy Smith with 14 points.

Heels nip Dolphins to remain perfect

Associated Press

The Big, the Bad and the Still Perfect. That's what the North Carolina Tar Heels were at Jacksonville.

Dean Smith's top-ranked team couldn't shake the pesky Dolphins until the final minutes Tuesday night, when freshman Jeff Lebo hit a 15-foot jump shot with 1:57 to go and Kenny Smith sank two free throws to clinch a 69-65 victory.

"When we came here, I said we'd be happy with a one-point win and I guess we got more than that," said Dean Smith, whose tall Tar Heels couldn't use their height advantage against the aggressive jumpers from Jacksonville. The Dolphins, who had no starter taller than 6-foot-7, battled North Carolina on the boards all night.

"Defensively, we gave up 14 points on second shots in the second half. That's a record against us," Smith said. "I'm tired of hearing about our height advantage.

"We can't beat anyone giving up as many followup shots as we did."

No one has beaten the deep Tar Heels this year. North Carolina upped its record to 8-0, thanks greatly to Kenny Smith's 18 points and Joe Wolf's 13 rebounds. The poised Tar Heels never cracked despite a boisterous crowd of 10,117.

The Dolphins, 5-2, got 16 points from Willie McDuffie and 14 by Danny Pearson and led by as many as five points after intermission.

"I was thrilled by our inspired play," Jacksonville Coach Bob Wenzel said. "A little mistake here or a little mistake there. If they miss a free throw or something like that, it was a chance for us to beat the No. 1 team in the U.S. This was a fantastic game for us, despite the fact we lost."

In other games involving ranked teams, it was seventh-ranked Georgia Tech 96, Old Dominion 86; No. 9 Louisiana State 72, Texas 65; No. 10 Memphis State 73, Mississippi 56, and No. 14 Alabama-Birmingham 69, Cincinnati 63.

Also, Hampden-Sydney College Coach Don Thompson was relieved of his post after eight of his players petitioned the president of the college for his removal. Thompson, who had coached the Division III Tigers for 12 years with a record of 155-125 going into this season, was 1-6 this season. Athletic Director Wil Chassey said assistant coach Joe Lammay will replace Thompson for the rest of the season.

The players held a closed meeting prior to Tuesday night's practice and would not discuss the matter.

College Roundup

Top Ten

Leading only 47-43 at halftime, Georgia Tech spurted early in the second half as freshman Tom Hammonds scored 10 of his 22 points in the first eight minutes.

Mark Price added 20 points for Tech, mostly from long range, Bruce Dalrymple had 19 and Duane Ferrell 18.

Keith Thomas led the Monarchs with 22 points and Kenny Gattison added 20.

Memphis State, a Final Four team last spring, used its aggressive defense to subdue Mississippi. The Tigers, now 8-0, were led by 7-foot center William Bedford, who scored 23 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

"This was an interesting game in that it was a teaching game," said Tigers Coach Dana Kirk. "We were not shooting the ball well so we went with defense and won with defense."

The Tigers also got 11 points and 10 rebounds from forward Vincent Askew.

Second Ten

Steve Mitchell's 20 points and a tight full-court press turned things UAB's way. The Blazers went on a 12-2 run in the second half, sparked by the aggressive defense which held Cincinnati to 28 percent shooting from the field in the second period.

"We think our defense was superb," UAB Coach Gene Bartow said. "I think our defense and rebounding wore them down and that was the difference."

Unranked

David Boone had 21 points and Kerry Trotter 20 as Marquette downed Minnesota 74-63. The Warriors, 4-2, led all the way in handing the Gophers only their second defeat in 10 games.

Vernon Maxwell hit for 25 points as Florida took intrastate rival Miami 81-64, clinching the game with a 17-6 spurt late in the first half.

Todd Lichti's 20 points paced Stanford over Harvard 78-62. Mark Cline's two free throws with two seconds left clinched Wake Forest's 64-61 win over Georgia Southern.

Loyola, Ill., an NCAA tournament team last year, continued to struggle, falling to 1-7 with a 71-66 loss to South Carolina. The Gamecocks were led by Darryl Martin's 18 points and 11 rebounds.

Angels, KUFO team up for '86 season broadcasts

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

West Texas is in for a "new sound" on the airwaves this summer, and Charles Campbell of radio station KUFO-FM is betting it will like what it hears.

Campbell, the new General Sales Manager at KUFO-FM, has worked out a broadcast deal with the Midland Angels of the AA Texas League to air all 136 regular season games, 68 home and 68 on the road, and any possible playoff action.

KUFO-FM (104.7 on the FM dial, or 94.4 in downtown Odessa) has invested about $40,000 in the first year of the agreement, which is renewable by the station each year. It is the first such deal worked out with the Midland professional team.

"We are very pleased that KUFO will be the first station to broadcast a complete season of professional baseball in the Permian Basin," Campbell said. "As a regionally oriented station, we feel that KUFO can provide excellent coverage for all Angel fans. We want everyone in West Texas to know what is happening at Angel Stadium.

"Personally, I've been jumping up and down since we made the deal. I'm a sports enthusiast and done a lot of research into it. I think it will change the listening habits of a lot of people in the area."

MIDLAND ANGELS General Manager Bill Davidson and Assistant GM Matt Perry helped Campbell in his search for the play-by-play broadcaster for the Angels' games while they were at the winter baseball meetings in San Diego last week.

The winner and new sports director and play-by-play announcer of the Midland Angels sports network is James W. Smith, formerly of KARR—FM in Seattle. Smith will be joined by color commentator Al McPike for home games, but will handle road contests by himself.

"We're billed as a regional station and the Angels are a regional ball team," Campbell said. "I'm really, really excited about Angels baseball. KUFO is Angels baseball in 1986."

Campbell said the agreement was hammered out in principal between he and Davidson in about 30 minutes.

"MY BOSS heard Bill (Davidson) speak at the Rotary Club and talked to him about advertising," Campbell said. "When I came here about four weeks ago and talked to him, he said nobody in town was interested in broadcasting the games but one station — and they didn't have the coverage area necessary.

"I couldn't believe that in a town with 18 radio stations it was a bit ridiculous that no one wanted to broadcast the No. 1 summer sport."

In 1985, the Angels' first season in the Tall City, Midland set a franchise attendance record of 127,836 spectators despite a disappointing season in the win-loss column. With additional promotions and hopes of a more competitive ballclub, Perry and Davidson have their sights set on a 150,000 total.

ANGEL DUST: The addition of a local broadcasting outlet will require the refurbishing of an already cramped Angels pressbox. The existing booth will be remodeled to accomodate a second radio booth on the southeast end to go with the booth on the northwest side.

Another hoped-for improvement, the addition of a second tier of billboard advertising in left field, has been put on the back-burner for the time being. McCallum signs $14,688 deal

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Napoleon McCallum, Navy's record-setting running back who probably could have commanded a prime salary as a professional football player, is now gainfully employed as a Navy ensign earning $14,688 a year, plus benefits.

McCallum donned his new uniform quickly Tuesday after receiving his degree and his commission as an officer in a special ceremony attended by about 250 people.

Asked if he still harbors hopes of a pro career after he finishes his mandatory five years in the Navy, McCallum brushed his hands over his new Navy blue jacket with the gold buttons and gold braid and responsed with a smile, "I like the way I look in this uniform."

In a more serious vein, McCallum said he will make his decision when the time comes based on the way he feels about football.

"I think if I want to, I can make it (in pro ball)," he said.

If McCallum had any doubts about the decision he made as a sophomore to stay at the academy, he didn't show them.

His father, also Napoleon McCallum, a farmer from Milford, Ohio, said he had absolutely no regrets about encouraging his son to stay at the academy.

"This is a great place. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity," the elder McCallum said after he and his wife, Virginia, watched the graduation.

"Just to look at him now, I'm proud of the outcome," the beaming father said.

McCallum shared his special day Tuesday with one other midshipman, Bernard Mimms Jr. of Richmond, Va., whose graduation was delayed a semester because of time he lost fighting, and winning, a battle with testicular cancer.

Degrees and commissions as military officers were awarded to McCallum and Mimms by Rear Adm.

Mojo, Yates square off for 5A title

Associated Press

Odessa Permian and Houston Yates, two teams with rich football traditions, headline a slate of five championship games this weekend that will wrap up the 1985 high school football season in Texas.

Permian and Yates will meet at 12:30 p.m. Saturday in Texas Stadium at Irving for the Class 5A title that Permian shared with Beaumont French last season.

The game will be televised live and can be seen locally on KTPX-TV, Channel 9.

A victory would give the Panthers their fifth state title and third of the past five seasons. It also would make Permian the first team to repeat as state champion in the state's big school classification since Austin Reagan in 1967-68.

Yates, which finished the regular season atop the Associated Press 5A rankings, wants to become the first Houston school to win state since Lamar captured the trophy 32 years ago, in 1953.

In other state title matches next weekend:

— Tomball and Sweetwater play for the 4A championship at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth.

— Daingerfield and Cuero fight for the 3A crown at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Baylor Stadium in Waco.

— Electra and Groveton clash for the 2A trophy at 7 p.m. Saturday at UTA Stadium in Arlington.

— Goldthwaite and Runge meet for the 1A title at 8 p.m. Friday at Georgetown.

The six-man championship was decided last weekend. Jayton's Jaybirds won their 28th straight game since joining six-man ranks, disposing of Christoval 64-14 in a game highlighted by the 450 yards and eight touchdowns of runningback Trey Richey.

PERMIAN KICKED a field goal as time expired to beat Cypress-Fairbanks 10-7 in the semifinals. The Mojo completed a pass to the Cy-Fair 13 in the game's final minute to get the penetration they needed to win a game that was tied, 7-7, but head coach John Wilkins said he "wouldn't have been able to live with myself" if he hadn't gone for a clear win.

He had his team call time out with four seconds to play to set up the field goal for the 10-7 win.

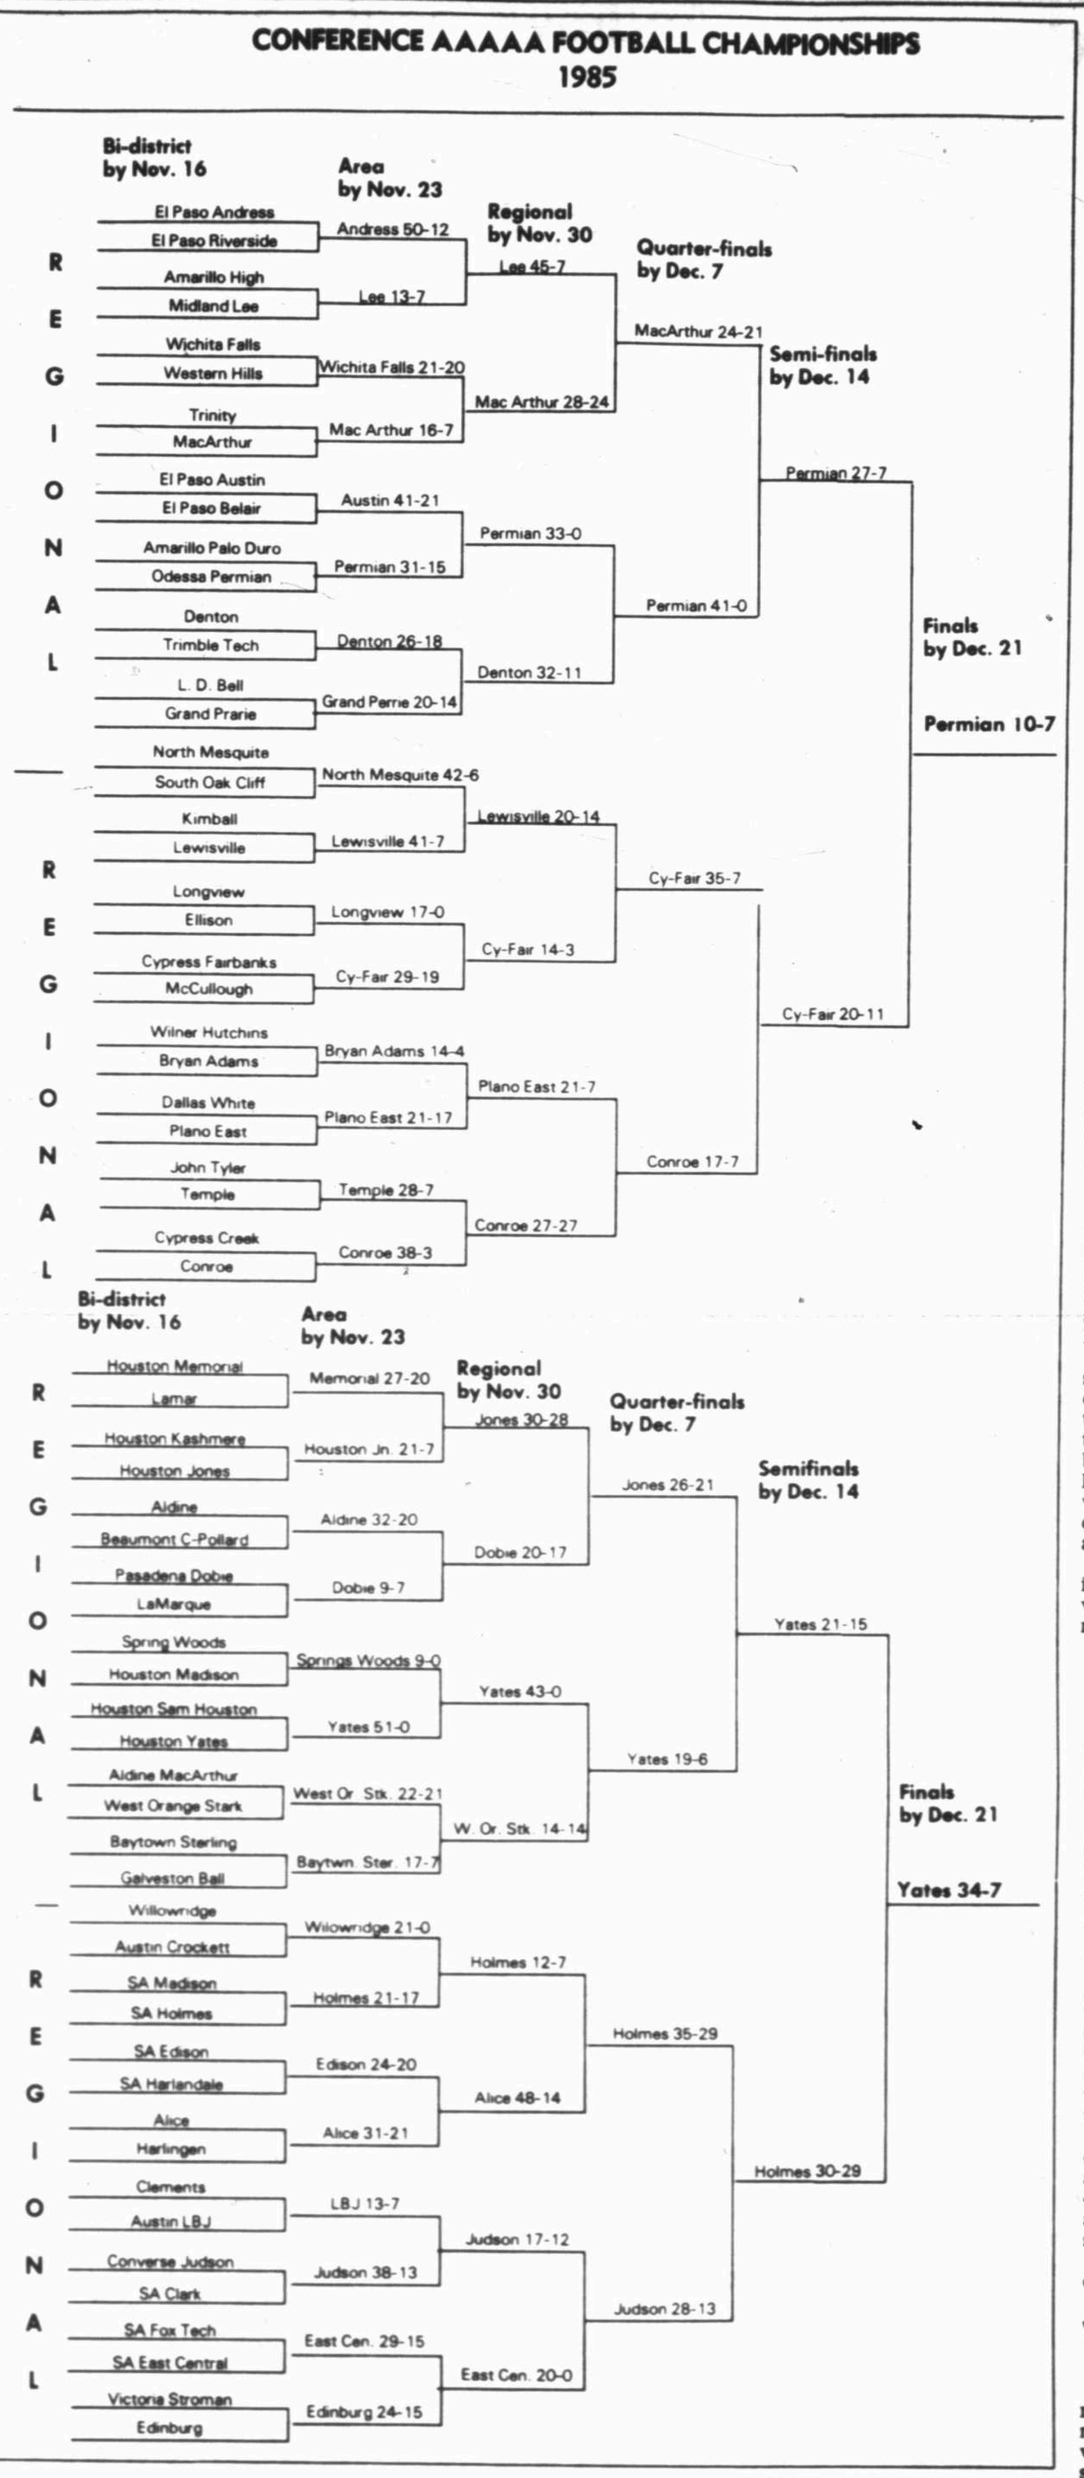

On the other hand, Yates won easily, routing San Antonio Holmes, 34-7.

Tomball, the No. 1-ranked team in 4A at regular season's end, advanced to the championship game by beating New Braunfels 32-21. Sweetwater scored late in the game for a 21-21 tie with Austin Westlake and advanced on a 7-4 penetration edge.

In the 3A semifinals, Daingerfield defeated Vernon 20-12 while Cuero defeated Van Vleck 38-36 on a field goal in the game's final seconds. Van Vleck had rallied from a 35-14 deficit to take the lead, but Cuero battled back.

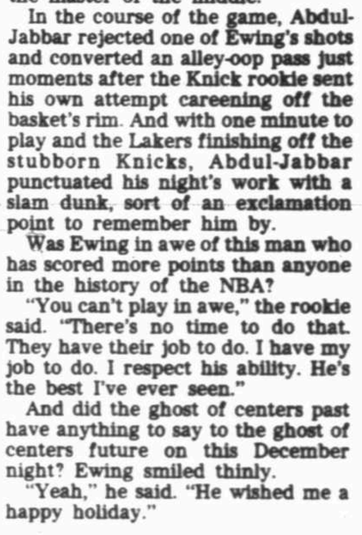

In 2A, Electra lived up to its season-long No. 1 ranking by easily defeating Hamlin 35-19, and defending state champion Groveton beat Shiner 21-8.

In 1A, Goldthwaite eliminated No. 1-ranked and defending champion Munday, 23-7. The Moguls, who had won 30 straight games encompassing all of the 1984 and 1985 seasons, had to play without quarterback Dent Offutt, who suffered a separated shoulder in Munday's quarterfinal victory over Wheeler. Runge won the other berth in the 1A championship game by beating previously undefeated Italy 7-0.

SI names Jabbar Sportsman of Year

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

Charles Dickens would have loved the confrontation.

It was sort of a basketball version of A Christmas Carol, the ghost of centers past...and present...against the ghost of centers future...and maybe present, too.

There was, however, no Tiny Tim in this holiday tale.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, at 38 in the twilight of a magnificent career and still good enough to be named Sports Illustrated's Sportsman of the Year, faced 22-year-old Patrick Ewing for the first time Tuesday night. The formal introductions were taken care of early in the game between the world champion Los Angeles Lakers and the New York Knicks.

Less than three minutes after he had won the opening tap, Abdul-Jabbar was anchored in the pivot with Ewing leaning over him, looking like a kid peeking out from behind the Great Wall of China. The ball came inside and Abdul-Jabbar's huge body began to move right.

Ewing reacted immediately, springing like a coiled cobra. Suddenly Kareem's weight shifted to the left. His right arm was extended, looking like a jet plane's wing span, the ball cradled in his hand. With a soft, smooth motion, he launched his signature shot, the sky hook, up and over Ewing.

Swish, and how do you do, Patrick.

Later, Ewing was asked his reaction that that impressive bit of business. He clutched his head with both hands and said, "I thought to myself, 'Oh man, how am I gonna stop this?' "

You don't and he didn't.

Abdul-Jabbar sent six more of those rainbow shots through the hoop in LA's 105-99 victory and by the end of the evening, Ewing had reached some important conclusions about the greatest scorer in National Basketball Association history.

"You know he's going to shoot the sky hook," he said. "That's a given. I don't think there's any way to stop that. When he gets it, you have to try to take him as far away from the basket as possible. I just tried to push him away. I did an OK job, but there were lots of mistakes, key mistakes on rebounds where I had the ball and let it get away."

Still, Ewing did not come off badly in this first meeting with the man who has become the dictionary definition of an NBA center. In fact, the Knicks' rookie outscored Special K 28-26 and outrebounded him 9-8.

Abdul-Jabbar was impressed with the young man who had battled so gallantly against him. "He's an excellent player," Abdul-Jabbar said. "He's played this (pro) game less than two months and he's already learned this game very well. He's a fine young center."

It was the first time Ewing had ever seen Abdul-Jabbar play in person. There are better ways to meet the master of the middle.

In the course of the game, Abdul-Jabbar rejected one of Ewing's shots and converted an alley-oop pass just moments after the Knick rookie sent his own attempt careening off the basket's rim. And with one minute to play and the Lakers finishing off the stubborn Knicks, Abdul-Jabbar punctuated his night's work with a slam dunk, sort of an exclamation point to remember him by.

Was Ewing in awe of this man who has scored more points than anyone in the history of the NBA?

"You can't play in awe," the rookie said. "There's no time to do that. They have their job to do. I have my job to do. I respect his ability. He's the best I've ever seen."

And did the ghost of centers past have anything to say to the ghost of centers future on this December night? Ewing smiled thinly.

"Yeah," he said. "He wished me a happy holiday."

Bosox claim Stewart in deal with Orioles

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox believe they have strengthened their bullpen by acquiring veteran right-hander Sammy Stewart from Baltimore, but the team's general manager says he is not through dealing.

"We're still going to go out and get a lefthanded reliever somewhere between now and spring training," Lou Gorman said Tuesday. "If we can do that, our bullpen has turned around completely in the past two years. I think it will be as good a bullpen as the Red Sox have had in some time."

Stewart, signed in 1975 by the Orioles where he has compiled an overall major league record of 51-45 with 42 saves and a 3.47 earned run average, was obtained Tuesday for shortstop Jackie Gutierrez.

"We felt Stewart was a guy who could really give us some stability in the bullpen," Gorman said. "We've now got Bob Stanley, Steve Crawford, and Stewart, who pitches 135-140 innings a year, and we've got Tim Lollar."

Stewart was 5-7 with a 3.61 ERA with nine saves in eleven chances in 1985.

Gorman said Gutierrez became expendible when the Red Sox swung a trade with the Milwaukee Brewers at the baseball winter meetings that sent relief pitcher Mark Clear to the Brewers for utility infielder Ed Romero.

"We've got Romero to play short, third and second, with (Glenn) Hoffman the regular shortstop, so we felt Jackie was in a position to move at this time."

Gutierrez batted .218 in 103 games for the Red Sox in 1985.

Wayland Baptist coach resigns

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Dave Ketterman, coach of the NAIA No. 1-ranked Wayland Baptist University women's basketball team, has resigned for unspecified personal reasons, school officials say.

"My reasons are personal and I would appreciate being relieved from my current contract and pursue a course I feel would be in the best interests of my family and myself," Ketterman said in the statement the school released Tuesday.

WBU Athletic Director Sylvia Nadler said the resignation was accepted and that the NAIA team, which last played Saturday and won't play again until Jan. 10.

Youth nips vet but can't stop Lakers

Associated Press

At a sold-out Madison Square Garden, a few blocks away from where some of the world's largest department stores are showing their Christmas best, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Patrick Ewing were displaying their own gifts.

Abdul-Jabbar, the all-time leading scorer in the National Basketball Association, and Ewing, the newest in a young generation of centers, met for the first time Tuesday night and showed each other their best.

Ewing outscored Abdul-Jabbar 28-26 and outrebounded him 9-8, but the veteran's team, the Los Angeles Lakers, got the long end of an equally close game with a 105-99 victory over Ewing's New York Knicks.

Did the two 7-footers have much to say to each other?

"He wished me a happy holiday," Ewing said. "You can't play in awe. There's no time for that. They've got a job to do and I've got a job to do. But I respect his ability. He's the best I've ever seen."

"I just tried to keep him from getting high percentage shots," said Abdul-Jabbar, who played 33 minutes to 45 for Ewing. "He's a fine center and he'll be around a long time. When he gets more seasoning, he'll be a very, very good center."

The Lakers-Knicks game looked like a possible mismatch, with Los Angeles owning the best record in the league and scoring a NBA-high 123.7 points per game to a league-low 93.9 for New York.

The Knicks slowed the game down to their accustomed pace, forcing the Lakers into a half-court game. But as Lakers Coach Pat Riley says, the Los Angeles half-court game features Abdul-Jabbar and his famous sky hook.

As every center before him has found out, Ewing had no defense for the sky hook, as Abdul-Jabbar used it to score seven of his 10 baskets.

"When he took his first shot, I thought to myself, 'Oh, man, how am I going to stop that hook?' I don't think there's any way to stop that sky hook," Ewing said. "When he gets the ball, you want to take him as far away from the basket as you can. I did OK, but I made a lot of key mistakes."

NBA Roundup

Spurs 126, Trail Blazers 118

Artis Gilmore scored a season-high 29 points and Mike Mitchell 26 to lead San Antonio over Portland.

Steve Johnson added 24 points and Alvin Robertson 22 to give the Spurs four players with more than 20 points.

Gilmore had 13 points to help the Spurs take a 10-point lead late in the first quarter, and he added 11 down the stretch to keep his team ahead. Clyde Drexler scored 10 of his 26 points and Kiki Vandeweghe 10 of his 23 to spark a third-quarter rally for the Trail Blazers.

Rockets 98, Cavaliers 94

Houston kept the lead in the Midwest Division as Lewis Lloyd scored 25 of his career-high 38 points in the second half against Cleveland.

The Cavaliers led by as many as 13 points in the third quarter and took an 80-73 lead into the final 12 minutes. But Cleveland managed just 14 points in the final period as the Rockets put together 9-0 and 10-0 streaks during the quarter.

Lloyd, who was 15-for-23 from the field, hit two free throws with 25 seconds left to make the score 98-94.

Roy Hinson led the Cavaliers with 24 points, and World B. Free added 23.

Bulls 116, Celtics 106

Boston lost for only the fifth time as Orlando Woolridge scored 37 points for Chicago.

Woolridge hit his first eight shots in the second half for the Bulls and hit the middle basket during a run of six straight points that extended a 104-103 Chicago lead to 110-103 in the final minute.

Dennis Johnson and Kevin McHale led the Celtics with 25 and 24 points, respectively, but Larry Bird scored just 12 points and was 5-for-17 from the field.

Kings 132, Pistons 121

Reggie Theus led a 41-27 fourth quarter for Sacramento, scoring 16 of his 27 points against Detroit.

The Kings took a 40-25 lead after one period, but lost that advantage in the second quarter when Detroit outscored Sacramento 42-26 for a 67-66 halftime lead. Vinnie Johnson had 15 points in the period to lead the Pistons' rally.

Suns 104, SuperSonics 99

Larry Nance scored 31 points and James Edwards 29 for Phoenix, which survived a 15-point second quarter against Seattle.

Edwards scored 17 points in the first quarter as the Suns led 33-22, but the SuperSonics, with Jack Sikma scoring 14 of his 26 points, outscored Phoenix 31-15 in the second period for a 58-48 halftime margin.

Hawks 104, Nets 103

Eddie Johnson's jumper and two free throws in the final 36 seconds lifted Atlanta past New Jersey.

After Darryl Dawkins' layup gave the Nets a 101-100 lead with 1:49 left, there was no scoring until Johnson's basket with 36 seconds left. Dawkins then missed two free throws and Johnson's two free throws made it 104-103 with eight seconds remaining.

Jazz 106, Bullets 98

Utah snapped Washington's 10-game winning streak at home as Adrian Dantley scored 30 points and rookie Karl Malone 25.

The Jazz led 82-73 going into the final 12 minutes, but Washington scored the first eight points of the fourth quarter to cut the deficit to one.

76ers 102, Pacers 96

Julius Erving, starting his second game at guard, scored a season-high 28 points and Charles Barkley added 18 points and a career-high 20 rebounds for Philadelphia against Indiana.

The Pacers trailed by as many as 12 points in the third quarter, but they closed the gap to three four times in the fourth period, the last time at 94-91 on a jump shot by Herb Williams.

Nuggets 122, Warriors 114

Denver handed Golden State its ninth consecutive road loss as Alex English scored 31 points and Calvin Natt 27.

Andrews beats Snyder in 2-4A opener

From Staff Reports

ANDREWS — In a battle od District 2-4A unbeatens, Andrews was the sole survivor. Holding off a furious Snyder charge in the fourth quarter, the Lady Mustangs came away with an 80-76 victory.

The victory improves Andrews to 9-0 overall, 1-0 in 2-4A play. Snyder fell to 12-1, 0-1.

"It was a pretty high scoring game," said Andrews coach Sam Johnston. "It was fast and furious. They've got some outstanding athletes. They are good.

"I expected it to be a close game but I didn't expect it to be that high scoring."

Andrews took a 21-16 lead in the first quarter and punched it out to a 44-28 margin at the half and increased it to 70-49 after three. Snyder outscored Andrews 27-10 in the final frame, but couldn't overcome the 21-point deficit.

Andrews will continue 2-4A play on Friday when the Mustangs travel to Sweetwater for an 8 p.m. game. Sweetwater is also unbeaten with a 13-0 record.

Devils shoot fast, beat Flyers, 7-4

Associated Press

It's not often that the Philadelphia Flyers have been out of a game as early as the first period this season, but that was precisely the case against the New Jersey Devils.

"You can't have a period like that against anybody," Philadelphia's Mark Howe said after the Devils scored five goals in the first period en route to a 7-4 pounding of the Flyers in Tuesday night's National Hockey League game. "It doesn't matter who you are playing. You can't get down five goals to anyone."

The Flyers, the Patrick Division leaders with one of the NHL's best records, came into the Brendan Byrne Arena in East Rutherford, N.J., riding a three-game winning streak and looking to hand the Devils a fourth straight loss.

"We got a couple of goals and they got down on themselves and that gave us more momentum," said Greg Adams, who scored two goals during the Devils' five-goal explosion. "We caught them off guard. They have been playing well and thought they could just show up and take the game away from us."

Paul Gagne added a goal and two assists during the Devils' game-breaking first period. Aaron Broten also had a goal and two assists as New Jersey beat Philadelphia for the second time in as many games this season.

Tim Kerr and Per-Erik Eklund scored power-play goals in the second period while Ilkka Sinisalo and Brian Propp added third-period goals to account for the Flyers' scoring. Kerr's tally was his 29th of the season and 18th on the power play, both tops in the league this year.

NHL Roundup

Islanders 7, Sabres 3

Pat LaFontaine scored twice and Mike Bossy added a goal and three assists as the Islanders pounded Buffalo. Bossy's goal was the 494th of his career, tying Buffalo's Gil Perreault for 11th place on the all-time scoring list.

For the fourth straight game, Denis Potvin was frustrated in his attempt to overtake Bobby Orr's career scoring record for defensemen. Potvin scored his 915th point on Dec. 7 to tie the mark set by the former Boston Bruin great, but has come up dry since.

Islanders goaltender Billy Smith played a key role in the victory with 39 saves on a night when the Islanders were outshot 42-23. The Islanders' defense snuffed out all five Buffalo power-play opportunities, including three in the third period that virtually secured the victory for New York.

North Stars 6, Red Wings 3

Keith Acton scored two goals to key Minnesota's victory over Detroit. The North Stars pulled away to a 4-1 lead in the second period on Acton's power-play goal at 10:20 and a shorthanded goal by Dirk Graham at 19:09 for their eventual winning goal.

The Red Wings rallied within 4-3 with 1:16 to play on an unassisted goal by Steve Yzerman, but Acton scored his second goal of the game 28 seconds later on a two-on-one break with Tony McKegney.

The loss was Detroit's sixth straight.

Blues 8, Jets 6

Joe Mullen's second goal of the game with just under eight minutes remaining killed a Winnipeg rally and lifted St. Louis over the Jets.

The goal, Mullen's 17th of the season, came 42 seconds after the Jets' Mario Marois pulled Winnipeg to within one goal at 6-5 with a 45-foot shot that eluded St. Louis goaltender Greg Millen.

The victory extended St. Louis' lead to eight points over Chicago in the NHL's Norris Division while improving the Blues' record to 4-1-1 in the last six games.

Dale Hawerchuk had a goal and four assists for Winnipeg, while recently acquired Ray Neufeld scored two goals.

Penguins 4, Flames 3

Mike Bullard scored two goals and Pittsburgh withstood a late charge to edge Calgary. Pittsburgh held a 4-0 lead midway through the second period, then watched the Flames score three times in the game's final 30 minutes.

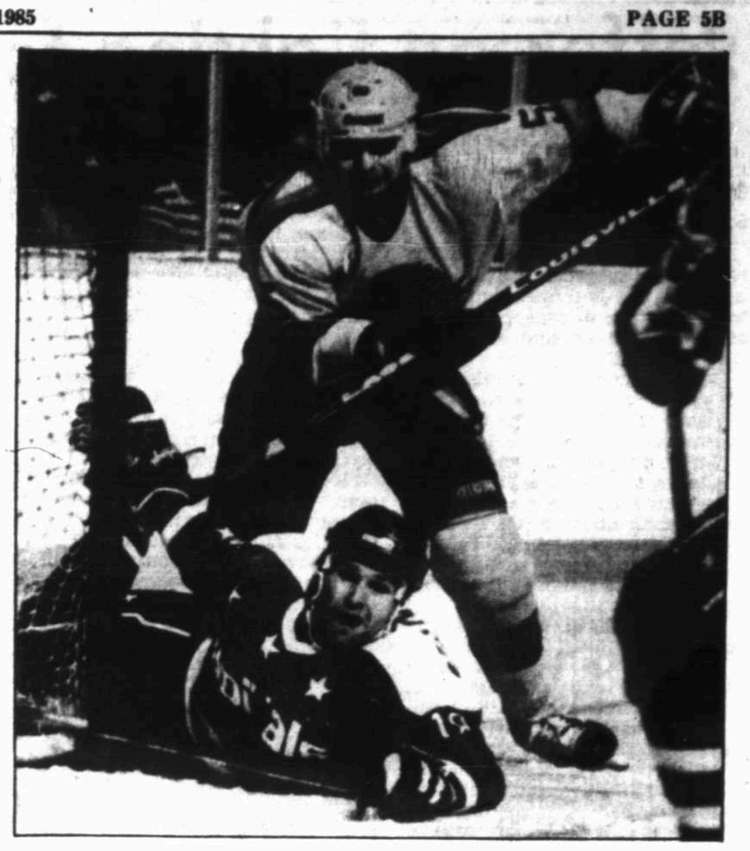

Bullard scored in the first and second periods, his second goal of the night and 15th of the season giving the Penguins a 4-0 lead at 6:49 of the middle stanza.

The Flames outshot Pittsburgh 15-6 in the third period and 35-27 in the game.

Capitals 4, Canucks 4

Bengt Gustafsson's unassisted goal early in the third period allowed Washington to come from behind and tie Vancouver in the NHL debut of Canucks goaltender Wendel Young.

Gustafsson grabbed a bouncing puck in the Vancouver end and banked a shot in off Young's goal stick at 2:01 of the third period. Young and Washington netminder Pete Peeters both made several difficult saves in the third and overtime periods to keep the score deadlocked.

Faust expected to take head coaching job at Akron

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Former Notre Dame football coach Gerry Faust, barring any 11th-hour complications, apparently will be named today as head coach at the University of Akron.

"Coach Faust will be visiting us today, and by the afternoon, at the press conference we've scheduled for 1:30, we would hope to have reached a favorable decision," University President William Muse told ABC radio sports Tuesday night.

"Coach Faust is originally from Ohio, where he was one of the winningest high school football coaches . . ." Muse said. "We feel he's a winner and would have the potential to develop a very strong 1-A football program for us."

Muse, while not saying specifically that Jim Dennison would step down, said the Zips' coach "has indicated an interest in assuming a position of associate athletic director.

"He's completed a winning record and had a winning season this year, so it's an ideal time to move out of coaching and into administration," Muse said of Dennison.

Dennison, who posted an 8-3 record last season, could not be reached for comment.

Cleveland television station WEWS-TV reported Tuesday night that members of Dennison's coaching staff have been told they won't be back next year. The station said at least one assistant coach was told that Faust would be hired to replace Dennison.

The Zips made the NCAA Division I AA playoffs last season. Under Dennison, they are 80-62-2.

WEWS-TV later reported that it understood that Dennison has already applied for the Bowling Green State coaching job left vacant after Coach Denny Stolz resigned to become the head coach at San Diego State.

Charles R. Larson, the academy superintendent, who described them as "young men who have demonstrated significant courage, different kinds of courage but significant courage."

Larson praised McCallum for his football exploits that included 26 Naval Academy records and a national college record for all-purpose career rushing.

He also lauded Mimms for the perseverance that saw him through four operations, months of chemotherapy and a fight with Navy medical personnel who didn't think he was medically fit to be commissioned as a Marine Corps lieutenant.

Mimms learned last spring that he would be allowed to graduate, but that he couldn't go on to a career as a military officer.

The Pentagon agreed this month to a commission for Mimms, but only after he wrote to President Reagan saying that if the president could run the country after colon cancer, he could serve as a Marine Corps officer.

Larson said the Naval Academy "supported him all along, and we're glad the medical corps finally agreed."

McCallum said he was pleased to share the day with Mimms.

"I might have gone through a lot, but he went through a lot more," McCallum said.

Most midshipmen are required to complete their work in four years, although a few are given extra time, generally for medical or physical reasons.

In McCallum's case, the extension was granted by Larson so he could play a final year of football after a broken leg wiped out most of his senior year.

Larson said his decision was made "because of all he has given . . . to the Naval Academy by his commitment to stay here."

At the time McCallum decided to stay at the academy after his sophomore year and accept a five-year commitment for military service, professional football scouts already were giving him high marks. Other colleges were ready to recruit him if he decided to leave the academy.

COLLEGE—

Darryl Ivery's two free throws with 1:15 left lifted Tennessee-Chattanooga to a 48-47 win over Mississippi State. The Moccasins were down 23-4 with 7:15 left in the first half but rallied as the Bulldogs were plagued by 22 turnovers.

Guard Rodney Davis was 6-for-6 from the field and 8-for-8 from the free throw line as Northern Illinois registered its first win over a Big Ten foe in four years, beating Northwestern 76-70.

Cedric Hill scored 30 points, including a key basket that sent the game into overtime and a 20-footer with one second left in the extra period to clinch Southwestern Louisiana's 66-64 victory over Auburn. Chuck Person had 31 points and 12 rebounds for Auburn.

Glen McMillan of C.W. Post, a Division II powerhouse from Greenville, N.Y., was allowed to play in the Pioneers' 73-69 victory over Sacred Heart after a State Supreme Court order was served on the school. McMillan, who scored 16 points, had been declared ineligible and missed three games pending an NCAA review concerning outside competition prior to his admission to Post.

Jefferson fighting for return

'I've got incentive to be All-Pro again'

By CHRIS COBBS
Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO — As he jogs near his residence in suburban Dallas, only a mile from the Cowboys' complex, he has ample time to ponder the chain of events that brought him home early this fall.

"It's different being here this time of year," John Jefferson said. "Friends ask what you're doing. It doesn't feel so good.

"I try not to show it, because that's not going to change anything. But there's no doubt I've got the incentive to be an All-Pro again. I want it so bad. I want to put a good light on the end of my career. I sure do want to straighten this thing out before I retire."

This thing has got a lot of people confused.

Two years ago, Jefferson was a Pro Bowl-caliber pass catcher. Now, at 29, he is without a job and without a simple explanation for how it came to this. There is no suspicion of drug involvement, according to several pro football insiders, but, beyond that, there is no consensus on whether it's his desire, his skills or both that have faded so swiftly.

There is a certain irony in the path that has led him back to Dallas, where he was a high school star in the early 1970s.

DURING HIS senior year at Arizona State, Jefferson learned that the Green Bay Packers were considering drafting him. Unmoved by the ghost of Lombardi, and dismayed by the prospect of running post patterns in the snow, he appealed to his coach, Frank Kush, to call the Packers' Bart Starr and persuade him to draft someone else.

Kush agreed, provided that Jefferson would speak to Starr. The strategy worked, sort of.

Jefferson wound up being selected by the San Diego Chargers, for whom he played three years, twice leading the NFL in touchdown receptions and becoming one of the most popular athletes in the city's history. He became the first NFL receiver to surpass 1,000 yards receiving in each of his first three seasons.

Hoping to cash in with a renegotiated contract, his agent, Howard Slusher, got into a holdout struggle with Eugene Klein, then the owner of the Chargers. The dispute ended with Jefferson's being traded to the Packers, and this time there was no Kush to intervene.

Jefferson spent four bittersweet years in Green Bay before playing out his option and eventually winding up in Cleveland this season for a span of eight forgettable games in which he caught only three passes. The Browns cut him last month, and Jefferson, a man with a carefree exterior masking a deep reservoir of pride, repaired to his home in Dallas to nurse his ego and reshape his future.

HE ENJOYED three banner seasons with the Chargers from 1978 through 1981, with reception totals of 56, 61 and 82. He led the NFL in touchdown catches twice.

His first two years in Green Bay, where James Lofton was ensconced as the deep threat, Jefferson's totals dipped to 39 and 27. Even so, his willingness to run routes across the middle and his bubbly spirit made him an instant team leader. He recovered with 57 catches in 1983, but in his option year, 1984, Jefferson caught only 26 passes catches before his exodus.

His anemic production with the Browns this season wouldn't constitute even a bad game in years past.

Still, it's hard to find anyone willing to completely dismiss his future.

"I see John frequently, and he looks lean and trim, probably the best condition I've ever seen him," said Gil Brandt, chief scout for the Dallas Cowboys. "My feeling is that he wants to put this year out of his mind and get a fresh start."

Charlie Joiner, a former teammate in San Diego and still one of his closest friends, said that Jefferson was shocked by his sudden dismissal in Cleveland.

"He's hurting right now," Joiner said. "He'll keep it inside, because he's such a happy-go-lucky guy. The thing for JJ is to be mentally ready right now. I believe somebody will get him. He's just too young to retire. He can still play in this league."

A comeback won't be easy, though, according to San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts.

"JJ's got to be willing to start all over," he said. "He has to be willing to accept whatever comes along. He'll probably never find another system like he had in San Diego."

The Chargers would have little or no interest in bringing back Jefferson, according to Ron Nay, chief scout and adviser to owner Alex Spanos. "Things can change, but right now there's no place for him," Nay said. "I don't know how fast he is anymore, and I don't know where he would fit into our team."

Jefferson's decline apparently was more related to incompatibility with the Packer and Brown offenses than to any other single factor.

By his own account, Jefferson had differences with a member of the Packer coaching staff whom he didn't name. "I just had to get out," he said.

Kush, who has stayed close to Jefferson through the years and is now coaching the Outlaws, said that Jefferson's problems were with Lew Carpenter, the Green Bay receiver coach under both Starr and Forrest Gregg, who replaced Starr after the 1983 season.

"He didn't think John had enough speed," Kush said. "Well, John's never been a sprinter. But he knows how to get open and he's a great possession receiver. He just didn't fit into Lew's system, I guess."

Carpenter said otherwise.

"If he had a conflict, I don't know who he meant," Carpenter said. "I worked with him every day and never knew of any conflict. The problem he had here was mental. He still has a lot of talent left, and if he works hard he can still be a fine player. It's just a matter of getting ready in his own mind."

Joiner pointed out, however, that the Packer passing game was geared to Lofton. "The quality plays went to Lofton," he said.

Jefferson left Green Bay as the No. 12 receiver in Packer history with 149 receptions.

He also left without another destination clearly in mind. The Cleveland Browns eventually met his asking price, about $400,000 for a one-year deal, but his absence from training camp exacted a price of its own.

There is another dimension to Jefferson's decline, as Kush sees it. Greed is part of it, and so is the failure to perceive the importance of personal chemistry. Kush dumped the blame in the lap of Howard Slusher, one of the most criticized and successful agents in professional sports.

"John was a victim of what transpires in the NFL when an agent is more concerned about money than the personality of a player and team," Kush said. "There is more to it than just making a buck. I'm talking about chemistry and cohesiveness.

"John needs to be in an environment where he's comfortable, and San Diego was ideal for him. He had the right chemistry there."

There's no question Jefferson enjoyed a special place in the Charger offense, alongside Joiner and Kellen Winslow, the other chief targets of Fouts' prolific right arm. He also had a special place in the feelings of Charger backers, who responded wildly to the sight of Jefferson running onto the field, jumping and waving a white towel.

There seems no question that Jefferson must pick his next team with care, as far as that's possible for an unemployed receiver who's nearing 30 and is used to making a healthy salary.

There is a chance he could price himself out of business, in Brandt's estimation. Jefferson's next contract would likely be based on incentives: If he plays and starts, one figure; if he catches a certain number of passes, a higher figure; if his team makes the playoffs, more rewards.

There is some doubt, though, how Jefferson would react to such incentives. His San Diego contract was dotted with them, and he hated their existence.

"The incentives nearly destroyed me," he said after he had been traded to the Packers in 1981. "I worried about money so much. I worried about how many balls Charlie and Kellen were catching. I had to be a statistician as well as a football player."

Kush, who said he would be interested in signing Jefferson, believes the player has the tenacity to make a comeback.

After leaving the Chargers four years ago, Jefferson seemed to have a pretty good handle on himself and whatever the future would bring.

"I'm going to play as long as I can, but I'm not going to get shoved around," he said at the time. "I won't show up just to be on the sidelines. Can't be in no man's freak show."

Dallas' finish better than Landry expected

IRVING (AP) — Tom Landry, who has walked the sidelines through each of the Dallas Cowboys' 26 seasons, has to reach back a decade to find a team effort to compare with that turned in by his current crew.

The Cowboys came into 1985 off one of their worst seasons, a 9-7 finish that kept them out of the National Football League playoffs for the first time since 1974. There was little reason to expect a quick turnaround; Landry figured on a fourth-place finish in the NFC East.

"We had a long way to go," Landry admitted.

He said the Cowboys' "outstanding goal" when the season began was to win the division and return to the playoffs.

With a 28-21 victory over the New York Giants last Sunday, Dallas improved to 10-5, clinching its first NFC East crown since 1981 and qualifying for the Super Bowl tournament.

"This could be as satisfying a year as the one we had in 1975 — if we make it to the Super Bowl."

The 1975 club, coming off that last non-playoff season, included a dozen rookies among its numbers, yet made it to the Super Bowl.

The question this week, however, isn't whether the Cowboys can make it to Super Bowl XX on Jan. 26. It is whether pride will be enough to help the Cowboys overcome what the oddsmakers figure will be a blowout on Sunday in San Francisco against the 49ers. Landry is counting on it.

"We're the National Conference Eastern Division champions and we ought to act like it," Landry said.

The Cowboys are whopping eight-point underdogs for the game, which starting quarterback Danny White is expected to watch from the sidelines while nursing a badly bruised left shoulder.

"We could be in for a tough football game," Landry said. "It's been a disappointing season for the 49ers and they can get a wild card if they beat us. It will be quite a challenge.

"We need to play well whether we win or not. We need to feel good going into the playoffs."

Gary Hogeboom is expected to start at quarterback with Steve Pelluer, the third-stringer who directed the game-winning drive against the Giants, as the backup.

"This will be a good chance for us to use Gary because if White isn't 100 percent we won't use him," Landry said. As for Pelluer, Landry said: "I'd kinda like to put Pelluer in to see if the real Pelluer shows up. It was amazing that he played as well as he did against the Giants."

Pelluer had never played in a National Football League game until Sunday, when he took over as White and Hogeboom went to the sidelines with injuries. Pelluer marched Dallas 72 yards for the touchdown that gave the Cowboys a 28-14 lead.

The victory moved Dallas into a playoff spot opposite the Los Angeles Rams. The game will be played either Jan. 4 or 5. The date and site will be determined by the outcome of each team's final game. It would be played in Los Angeles unless the Cowboys beat San Francisco on Sunday and the Rams lose to the Los Angeles Raiders on Monday night.

Landry said playing for the home field advantage "has never been a motivational factor in the past. I doubt it will be one this time."

However, the Cowboys have already lost four games on the road this year.

White was quoted as saying the Cowboys "owed" the 49ers a thrashing. San Francisco cost Dallas a trip to the Super Bowl in 1981 with a 26-27 victory over Dallas in the NFC title game.

"I don't hold grudges too much," Landry said, "but anybody who played in the 1981 game would like to win this one. That was a long time ago."

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose in European trading early today despite U.S. government reports of a widening of the balance of payments deficit and a drop in new home construction. Gold prices fell.

Foreign exchange dealers said the dollar appeared to have shaken off a temporary decline after the Commerce Department said the U.S. third quarter deficit widened to $30.45 billion from a revised $27.7 billion and housing starts dropped 12.2 percent in November.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 201.65 Japanese yen from 201.72 yen at Tuesday's close. Later, in London, it was quoted at 202.90 yen.

In London, the value of the British pound fell to $1.4355 from $1.43785 late Tuesday.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.5075 West German marks, up from 2.5045

—2.1075 Swiss francs, up from 2.1012

—7.6825 French francs, up from 7.6675

—2.8257 Dutch guilders, up from 2.823

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $319.75 a troy ounce, down from $321.50 late Tuesday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $321.10.

In Zurich, the bid price was $320.30, down from $321.50 bid late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $1.29 to close at a bid $320.89.

In New York on Tuesday, gold fell $1.75 to a late bid price of $320.75.

Silver bullion prices fell in London to a bid price of $5.795 a troy ounce, down from $5.86 bid late Tuesday.

Trade measure rallies during third quarter

Associated Press

The widest measure of U.S. trade hit a near record $30.5 billion in the third quarter, according to the latest government statistics.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that the deficit in the current account jumped by 9.9 percent in the third quarter over the $27.7 billion imbalance suffered in the April-June quarter.

In other economic news Tuesday:

—Housing construction was reported to have plunged 12.2 percent in November, the sharpest drop in six months, despite the lowest mortgage rates in six years.

—The Labor Department reported that unemployment rates in October were above those of a year earlier in 25 states, even as the national rate fell from 7 percent to 6.8 percent on a seasonally adjusted basis.

—The new comptroller of the currency said efforts to gain permission for commercial banks to enter new lines of business are being hampered by a crisis in the savings and loan industry.

With the latest trade figures, the nation has gone deeper into the hole as a net debtor country.

The current account, also known as the balance of payments, measures trade not only in merchandise but also in services, a category which includes investment flows between countries.

Since 1982, the merchandise trade deficit has mushroomed and the disparity between U.S. investments abroad and foreign investments in this country has shrunk.

These changes turned the United States into a net debtor this year for the first time in 71 years. Commerce Department officials said it is likely that the United States at the end of September was in debt to the rest of the world by $33 billion.

On another matter, it reported that new housing was constructed at an annual rate of 1.55 million units in November, the lowest pace since April 1983.

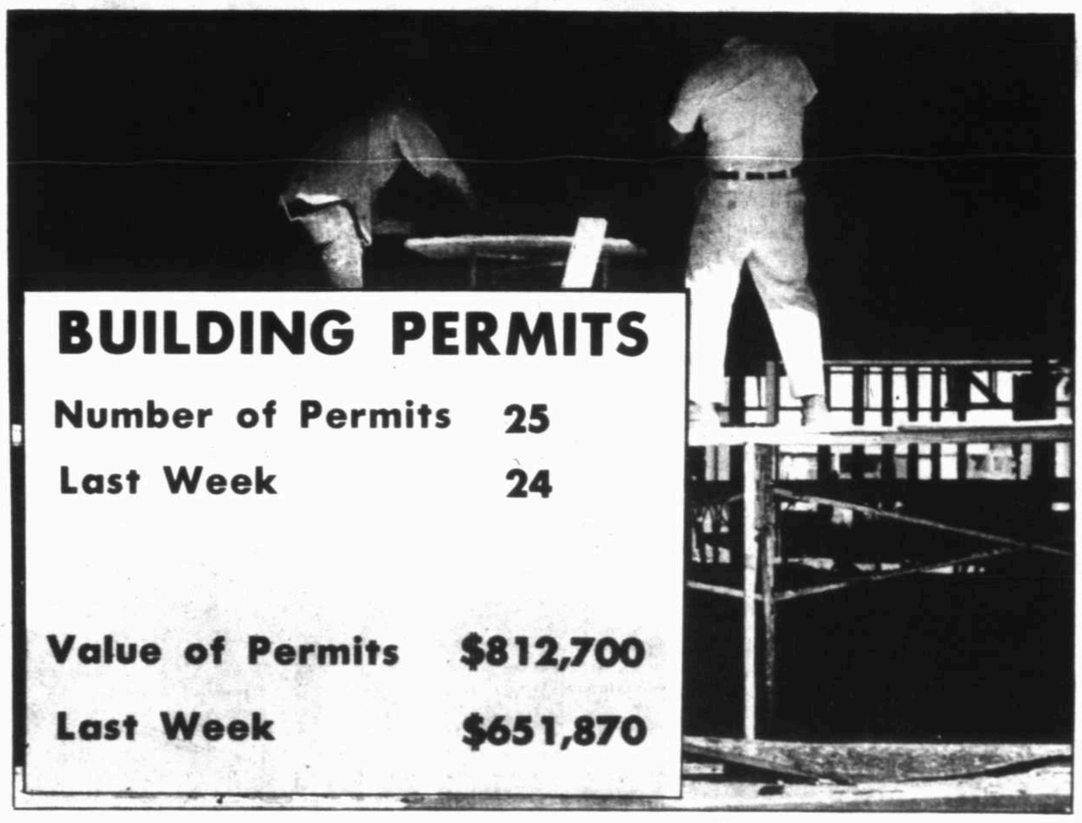

Housing starts had risen 9 percent in October following a 7.1 percent September decline. The November setback was the largest drop since a 13 percent fall last May.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said that while unemployment increased in half the states between October 1984 to October 1985, nine of the remaining 25 reporting declines in unemployment had declines of one percentage point or more.

The largest decreases were in West Virginia, which dropped 2.9 percentage points to 12.5 percent, and Alabama, down 2.6 percentage points to 7.9 percent.

New Hampshire had the lowest jobless rate among the 50 states in October, at 2.6 percent. West Virginia and Louisiana, which was at 10.9 percent, were the only two states with double-digit unemployment in October, the same as a year earlier.

On the banking industry, Robert L. Clarke, who took over as supervisor of national banks two weeks ago, said he favors giving banks more leeway in the business activities they can engage in as a way to enhance their profitability — as long as care is taken to safeguard the safety and soundness of the banking system.

Building permits issued in Midland this week remained stable over last week's total of 24. Twenty-five permits were issued this week at a value of $812,700.

Business failures in Texas jump 57 percent over 1984

DALLAS (AP) — Business failures in Texas are running 57 percent higher than a year ago and reach into almost every key sector of the state's economy, a Dun & Bradstreet study indicates.

The service, finance and real estate industries were hardest hit by that increase, and Houston business bankruptcies doubled during the period, according to the figures released Tuesday.

Although the Dallas economy remained healthier than that of the state as a whole — failures rose only 19.7 percent — construction activity and the number of new businesses incorporated statewide also declined.

"No matter how you slice it, 1985 has been a tough year for businesses in Texas," said Joseph Duncan, Dun & Bradstreet chief economist.

"The stress in the oil patch has overflowed into the state's other industries and, given the current outlook for the petroleum sector, things probably won't get much better in 1986," he said.

Duncan noted, however, that the high number of failures grew out of a big economic growth rate over the past three years.

"The business expansion has been driven by entrepreneurial activity, and of course not everybody made it."

Through the first 11 months of 1985, failures rose to 4,427 from 2,816 a year ago. Dallas' failures rose to 352 from 294, while Houston's increased 98 percent to 1,374 from 694 a year ago.

Nationally, there have been 52,846 business failures so far this year, up 8.6 percent from 1984. Duncan said Texas was one of the nation's leaders in business failures for the year.

On an industry basis, the most dramatic increase in Texas failures occurred in the services sector, which includes education, health care and marketing. Bankruptcies there shot up 188 percent to 1,163 from 404 last year.

Building permits remain stable

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

There were 25 building permits issued by the City of Midland during the week of December 9 to December 13, totaling $812,700. Last week, the city issued 24 permits worth $651,870.

Permits were issued this week for seven new residences, primarily in the northwest part of Midland, ranging in cost from $140,000 to $76,000. Three of the homes, ranging in price from $140,000 to $90,000, are located in the Green Tree Country Club Estates.

Two of the seven are located near Loop 250, off north Midland Drive and Norwood Street, and one is in the Saddle Club South development, which is a hot property, according to builder Jim Leonard. "I had the first house in there four months ago, and now the area's almost sold out." He said another fast-developing area is the Blakemore property north of San Miguel Square on Wadley.

Leonard's business has been very good this year, he said. "With interest rates lower, people are buying new homes. It's having a ripple effect - people are getting out of apartments into smaller homes, and people in smaller homes are moving up to bigger homes."

He noted that people are more inclined to buy new homes, because buyers would rather take a chance on a new home that they know, where everything is still under warranty. "They're more comfortable with a new home," he commented.

Most of the homes he's built are presold custom built houses, Leonard said, commenting that he doesn't build as many speculation houses as he once did. Although business has been good, he's cautious. "We have a cloudy future, and we have to see what's going to happen with oil. If it goes down, then we might, too."

"I don't know about the other builders, but people aren't complaining like they were last year," he noted. "The builders that have survived have good reputations and are probably doing well."

MidCon stock down after initial surge

From Staff and Wire Reports

NEW YORK — MidCon stock was down to $61.57 Tuesday, and continued trading at that price today, following a surge in price Monday after Wagner & Brown of Midland and Freeport-McMoRan of New Orleans announced a stock offer to acquire control of MidCon.

The stock of the Midcon Corp. rose by $1.625 Monday after the two energy companies announced an offer to buy the company for $62.50 a share, or a total of $2.7 billion. The stock closed Monday at $63.375 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Only last week, Midcon completed a $1.14 billion acquisition of United Energy Resources.

Said Joel L. Reed, chief financial officer of Wagner & Brown, said in an interview: "We are very much interested in acquiring Midcon. We think it is the premier natural gas pipeline in the United States today."

But some analysts were skeptical. Forster Corwith of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. said the tender offer "looks low to me; $72 is the value I'd put on it for a takeover, and it's certainly low in Midcon's estimation of its own worth."

Corwith said that the two bidders might in fact be hoping for another company to offer to buy Midcon at a higher price, which would give them a profit on the shares they already hold.

Reed said that WB Partners, the vehicle created by the two companies for the takeover attempt and which is owned equally by them, now holds about 1.9 million shares of Midcon, 4.9 percent of the 41.5 million fully diluted shares outstanding.

He said WB Partners's holdings included the stock of United Energy Resources that Midcon gained in acquiring that company.

The tender offer for Midcon, whose headquarters are in Lombard, Ill., was made in an advertisement in The Wall Street Journal Monday.

Wall Street had been expecting an attempt to buy the company for months, and the stock had been climbing accordingly. Word that Wagner & Brown had been accumulating shares of Midcon in preparation for such an action grew particularly strong last week, causing a sharp run-up in the stock.

Reed said the bidders had called O.C. Davis, Midcon's chairman, president and chief executive, Monday morning to discuss the offer, but "nothing of substance" was said during the brief conversation.

He said they had not yet received a formal reply to their offer. "We certainly hope there won't be any resistance," Reed continued. "We think our offer is very attractive."

A spokesman for Midcon, who asked not to be identified, said the company as reviewing the offer and "a number of other options." The spokesman declined further comment.

Don C. Bustos of Duff & Phelps Inc. of Chicago said he expected Midcon to fight a takeover attempt tenaciously and successfully. "People who know Midcon well know they want to be king of the hill in the pipeline business," he said. "They feel they've earned that position."

News sources have reported, however, that MidCon views the stock offer has hostile and will resist the offer.

Bustos added that Midcon had the financial ability to repel the takeover attempt. "I don't think they'll succumb to anybody," he said.

Research center offers real estate software

By SUSAN LINDSAY

When a business opportunity occurs, the TEXAS REAL ESTATE RESEARCH CENTER (TRERC) at Texas A&M University wants to make sure that new investors have the knowledge to make a wise decision.

The center now offers computer software packages on mortgage options, real estate investment, home refinancing and home purchasing versus renting.

"We want to get our software out to the public at minimal cost. We urge users to copy the programs and share them with other interested people. The software was developed as a by-product of the Center's research," says Ted C. Jones, a research associate with TRERC.

The alternative Mortgage Instruments package assists in the analysis and comparison of different mortgage instruments by simulating Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARMs) and calculating payment schedules and effective interest rates. The program provides for negative amortization and price-level-adjusted mortgages and other variables.

The Investment Analysis software program includes a model for investment analysis of income-producing properties, depreciation schedule calculation, rate of return calculations and variable and fixed-rate mortgage amortization schedules.

A third package, Refinancing Software, examines the decision of whether or not to refinance a home mortgage at lower interest rates. The program considers interest rates, terms of existing and proposed new mortgages, closing costs and other relevant factors. The software estimates break-even dates with refinancing both with and without income tax considerations.

Residential Buyrent Software aids prospective homebuyers in deciding to rent or purchase a home. It considers rental rates and other rental costs plus associated growth rates, changes in property values, resale expenses and other relevant factors.

The programs are offered on 5 1/4 inch IBM-DOS and MS-DOS formats and come with documentation and installation instructions. The four packages are menu-driven and require a minimum of 128K RAM, at least one floppy diskette drive and a printer.

The $20 cost per package includes documentation and shipping.

A store catering to plant lovers has opened at the Midland Hilton Hotel. MICHAEL'S FLOWERS AND GIFTS, INC. sells flowers, gifts and cards.

BoSa International, Inc., of Tuscon, Ariz., has purchased over 100 WINCHELL'S DONUT SHOPS from the Denny's Corp., including the shop located at 700 N. Big Spring in Midland.

This acquisition represents the entire Winchell's chain of stores operating in Texas, Ohio, Illinois and Minnesota. BoSa intends to operate these units as company-owned BoSa Donuts Shops until each franchise can be sold to a local owner.

When people think of BMW, they often think of yuppies. But, BMW OF NORTH AMERICA is trying to change that image with its new "Quality Continuation Plan," designed to lure "non-yuppies" into buying older models of the German car.

Beginning next year, all BMW models dating from 1980 to 1985 with less than 75,000 miles will carry a 12-month, 12,000-mile warranty such as is usually reserved for new models. Prices for the used cars will also be a third of the cost of a new model.

DEVELOPMENTS

Eight wells staked in Mitchell field

From Staff Reports

D.L. RAY, INC. has staked eight wells in the Iatan East Howard field of Mitchell County.

Four of the wells are on the T.L. McKenna "B" lease; three are on the T.L. McKenna "D" lease, and one is on the "E" lease. All eight are located in Block 29, T-1-N, T&P survey; six are in Section 46 of the block, and the other two are in Section 45. The wells are located six to seven miles southwest of Westbrook, and have a proposed depth of 3,500 ft.

Midwest begins drilling program

OKLAHOMA CITY — (SWN) Midwest Exploration, Inc. has announced the completion of arrangements for a three well exploratory drilling program in West Central Texas, with operations expected to commence in Mid-January, 1986.

The wells in the play will be located in Menard County, and will be drilled deep enough to test the Ellenburger formation. Principal drilling targets, however, are the multiple sandstone and limestone formations of the Pennsylvanian age. Production in the area occurs in several different sandstones of the Cisco, Canyon and Strawn zones, while the Canyon and Strawn limestones have also produced in some of the fields in the area.

Conference to look at areas of opporunity

The theme for this year's Coopers & Lybrand annual energy conference is "Opportunities for a Troubled Industry." The conference will be held in Denver December 17 through 19. Keynote speakers will include Richard Lamm, governor of Colorado; Richard Dole, chairman of Coopers & Lybrand's National Energy Program; Robert Harston of the Denver-based Petroleum Information Corp.; Lawrence Winston of the Angeles Corp.; David Leuschen of Goldman Sachs & Co.; Thomas Petrie of The First Boston Corp.; Arthur Smith, president of Lavalin, Inc. of Calgary, Canada; Arthur Carlson of the Trust Company of the West and David Jones of Samuel Montagu & Co. of London. Speakers will address issues ranging from the overall state of the industry and fundraising to exploring master limited partnerships, other areas of opportunity for the industry and international sources of capital.

Commission approves rate hike for Amarillo

AMARILLO — The Texas Railroad Commission has approved a rate increase for Energas Co. for its Amarillo service area. The rates approved generate an additional $3.4 million in revenue, $2 million of which had been allowed at the city level and implemented in September. The additional $1.4 million is approximately a 3.69 percent increase above current levels.

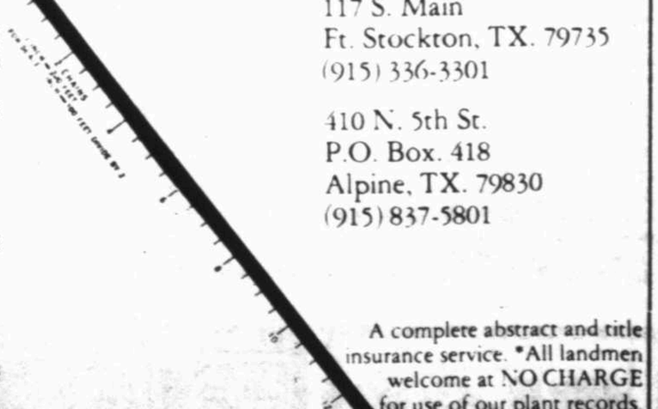

For the average residential customer using 10 Mcf per month, this decision will result in a $1.23 increase per month.

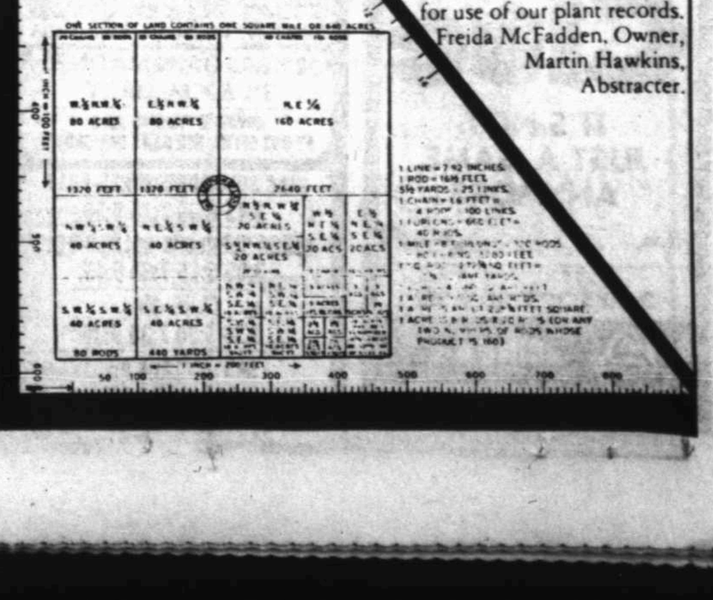

Union Texas confirms discovery in Gulf

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum has announced that test conducted on a second well drilled on Vermilion Block 237 in the Gulf of Mexico confirm the discovery of significant natural gas reserves the company made there earlier this year.

The confirmation well, called the Vermilion 237 No. 2 well, tested at a combined rate of 15.6 million cubic feet of natural gas and 230 barrels of condensae daily from three productive zones between 10,088 feet and 11,566 feet. The gas and condensate were tested through varying choke sizes with flowing tubing pressures greater than 4,200 pounds per square-inch.

Swedish government puts unlimited oil, gas theory to test

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

STOCKHOLM — It was one of planet Earth's most violent encounters.

About 360 million years ago, a giant meteor slammed into the ground north of here with such force that it apparently shattered the crust of the Earth to a depth of 40 miles — all the way down to the molten core on which the continents float.

As it turns out, the violent collision also created a natural laboratory for modern-day scientists to re-examine long-held theories about the origin of oil and gas.

Today, the gaping wound created by the meteor is healed. A lush forest now covers the area, known as the Siljan Rings because of the crystalline lakes at the crater's rim. There is now scarcely a hint of the violent event of long ago.

The drama is now indoors, in the form of a wide-ranging debate that is at times scientific, at other times philosophical and political. It revolves around a plan by the Swedish government to drill a deep natural gas well in the Siljan Rings area, about 150 miles north of Stockholm. The Swedes hope to find commercial quantities of gas there, even though conventional petroleum-industry wisdom says they should find no more than a trace.

If they find it, many long-held beliefs about the origin of oil and gas will be called into question. It would mean that there is virtually an unlimited supply of fuel deep within the Earth to light our cities and run our factories.

Only a few experts outside of Sweden believe that there is any chance the Siljan Rings will yield much gas, considering the overwhelming evidence that oil and natural gas are byproducts of the decay of organic substances — primarily plants and primitive organisms trapped in basins of sedimentary rock.

Though few in number, the maverick experts have been vocal, and they found a very willing listener in the government of Sweden, a country with no known oil or gas reserves. At first the government had planned to put up nearly all of the $25 million the project is expected to cost. But as criticism of the unorthodox project mounted, some political leaders grew concerned about the possibility of looking foolish.

Changing course, the government ordered the federal power agency, Vattenfall, to raise 65 percent of the money from municipalities and private corporations that need the gas. The deadline has come and gone twice, but now it seems likely that the money will be there as soon as some questions are resolved over the degree of control investors will have over the project.

"We are optimistic that we will be able to do it," said Rune Brorsson, project manager for Vattenfall, who had hoped to begin drilling the well to a depth of at least three miles by last October. The drilling is expected to take about a year.

Brorsson is well aware that nearly the entire petroleum industry believes the effort will fail. "We have emphasized (to potential investors) that this is a high-risk project," he said in a recent interview at the Vattenfall headquarters near Stockholm.

The prime mover behind the project is neither a Swede nor an oilman. He is Thomas Gold, an astrophysicist at Cornell University who believes discoveries in astronomy during the last decade call into question the widely held theory that oil and gas are the product of organic decay.

Hydrocarbons — the basic components of oil and gas — have been shown by a new generation of astronomical instruments to be abundant throughout the universe. If the moon and comets and planets that have never known life are rich in hydrocarbons, Gold reasons, why should we think they occur in huge reservoirs on this planet only as the result of organic decay?

For more than a decade now, Gold has been attacking petroleum experts who refuse to accept his ideas. "It would mean they would have to turn their backs on their life's work," he says.

Gold believes that oil and gas reservoirs are formed not through organic decay, but by the slow migration of hydrocarbons to the surface from deep within the Earth.

"There is nobody in the business who, from the scientific point of view, takes his theory seriously," said Martin Schoell, a geochemist with the Chevron Oil Field Research Co. in La Habra, Calif. "The only people he is attractive to are people who are not in the business, because it is an extremely attractive hypothesis."

But Gold has done his homework well, winning the support of the Gas Research Institute, a trade group for the U.S. natural gas industry. The institute is funding part of the research in Sweden, subject to reimbursement if commercial quantities of gas are found. And evidence is turning up that at least partly supports his theories.

Even Gold's critics admit that he is not easily dismissed.

"It's so easy to lose against him," said Schoell, who once debated Gold in a symposium in London. "If you come up with evidence, he jumps off to another subject. You cannot tie him down."

Gold argues that methane (natural gas) and other hydrocarbons were trapped in the Earth's molten core 4 1-2 billion years ago. Some hydrocarbons make their way to the surface through fissures in the crust, forming reservoirs of oil and gas and coal when they reach an impermeable layer of rock near the surface, he says.

As evidence, Gold points to methane and other gases vented into the atmosphere by volcanoes.

The experts yield only slightly on that point. "Nobody would refute that some gas comes from deep Earth, but you have to evaluate it volumetrically," said Brian Horshfield, a geochemist with the Arco research center in Houston.

Geochemists argue that while the Earth undoubtedly vented methane early in its history, it does so today only in traces.

Many skeptics, convinced that significant quantities of methane will not be found, are rooting for Sweden to complete the well in the Siljan Rings. Some have snidely branded the project "Fools Gold."

"All the hard evidence points against it," said geochemist Alan Jeffrey of Global Geochemistry Corp. of Canoga Park.

That includes mountains of evidence collected over the years not to refute Gold but to help the oil industry go about its business of finding petroleum. Geologists have no reason to doubt the organic origin of oil and gas because the trail left by organic decay has led them to hydrocarbon reservoirs all over the world.

"You find it (oil and gas) where you expect to find it," said Chevron's Peters.

Four arrested in alleged oil siphoning scheme

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Four men were arrested in Southern California's San Bernardino County Tuesday on charges of tapping into an oil pipeline and systematically siphoning off more than $4 million of crude oil for resale to independent oil refineries.

The pipeline is owned by one of the subsidiaries of the Atlantic Richfield Co.

The FBI had set up surveillance of the alleged siphoning operation as part of an investigation into the theft of more than 10 million gallons of crude oil over a three-year period.

Calling the case one of the largest thefts of crude oil in U.S. history, Assistant U.S. Attorney Fred D. Heather described a sophisticated scheme in which the defendants allegedly leased their own oil tanker trucks and passed themselves off as a legitimate oil company.

The FBI disclosed in one court document that the defendants even had their own underground pipeline connecting to the interstate pipeline owned by the Four Corners Pipeline Co., an Arco subsidiary.

Arrested at their San Bernardino County homes Tuesday and later released on $50,000 bail were Mose Allen Geter, 44; two sons, Mose Allen Geter Jr., 25, and Christopher Darrin Geter, 23, and Konrad Edi Prager, 35.

Although he died earlier this year in St. Louis, James Wade Stone, who leased the trucks and set up companies under the names of Octane Petroleum and Cherokee Oil Co., also was named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

According to an 11-count federal indictment charging conspiracy and interstate theft, the elder Geter leased land next to the underground Four Corners pipeline, which pumps 50,000 barrels of crude oil a day between Long Beach, Calif., and Red Mesa, Utah.

The indictment charged that Geter and his two sons were involved with Prager in establishing their own line to a tap on the Four Corners pipeline. The bootleg line ran underground about 200 yards to a metal shed on the 40 acres of high desert land leased by Geter in the Morongo Valley, about 90 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

While Stone allegedly obtained the leases for the trucks, Geter was accused of paying a driver, his two sons were charged with loading and driving the trucks, and Prager also was accused of doing some of the driving.

Although the indictment itself gave no hint of how the investigation began, an FBI affidavit filed by agent Joseph Schaal for a search of the Morongo Valley property last January disclosed that the FBI became involved after a probe by Four Corners into unusually heavy oil losses on the pipeline which at first could not be explained.

Beginning in September 1984, a Four Corners engineer in Long Beach, Myron C. Howard, began investigating the losses, conducting pressure tests on various stretches of the pipeline and noticing periodic pressure losses, indicating systematic tapping.

According to Schaal's affidavit, Howard determined that someone was taking about 100 to 200 barrels of oil at a time out of the pipeline, about enough to load one tank truck and trailer. By December 1984, company investigators working with the FBI had spotted the point of the pipeline tap and observed a Cherokee Oil Co. truck at the Morongo Valley location.

At the advice of the FBI Laboratory in Washington, Howard added a trace chemical to the crude oil flowing through the pipeline. Besides Schaal's own surveillance last Jan. 7, other FBI agents followed a loaded Cherokee Oil Co. truck to Long Beach the following day.

According to the FBI affidavit, the truck unloaded its crude oil at the MacMillan Ring Free Oil Co. in Long Beach. Employees of that company provided the FBI with a sample of oil from the truck, and it was found to contain the chemical trace, the affidavit said.

Geter and his three co-defendants appeared Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate George L. Martin in Yucca Valley, near Morongo Valley, and could not be reached for comment later. They are scheduled to appear before U.S. Magistrate John Kronenberg in Los Angeles Monday for formal arraignment.

Company uses solar power for salt production

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma can thank the presence of a prehistoric ocean that nestled between the Rocky Mountains and the Ozarks for its abundance of oil, and the same phenomenon left the state awash in salt deposits, too.

Now the Minneapolis-based Cargill Inc., a huge diversified industry best known for its ties to the grain industry, is tapping the ancient salt source using a process that has been around for eons: the sun.

A salt producing facility just southwest of the Woods County community of Freedom utilizes solar power to evaporate 10 huge ponds and gather up the remaining salt.

"We like to think that salt mining using the sun is the oldest male profession," jokes plant manager Keith Long.

The reason for the location of the Cargill facility in the far northwestern Oklahoma county is threefold, according to Long: "lots of flat ground, availability of brine and good, hot weather, all of which are in great abundance in northwestern Oklahoma."

Underneath Oklahoma, running from Kansas to the Texas Panhandle are three geological formations in which brine is plentiful, the Cimarron, Wellington and Flowerpot, on top of which sits Freedom, and, 175 miles to the north, Hutchinson, Kan., where salt production is the leading industry.

The Cargill facility opened in September and now employs 33 people, running one shift. Additional workers are brought in for the "salt harvest" from October through December, and plans are to increase production to 200,000 tons annually with three fulltime shifts, Long said.

Company officials said the Freedom plant is the only inland solar salt plant east of the Rockies. There is another in California, and a much larger one in Australia.

Cargill also operates other plants in Louisiana, Hutchinson, Watkins Glen, N.Y., and one in California.

Long said solar power is the least expensive method to recover salt from brine. The other methods include undercutting mining — the chief operation done in the Hutchinson area — and evaporation, which relies chiefly on steam and other forms of fossil fuels to provide the power.

"Anywhere there is oil, technically there is going to be salt in some form," Long said. "They both come from the same source — the ocean — since oil, fossil fuel, is old decayed sea life."

Most of the salts gathered from the Freedom plant are used for industrial uses — such as water softeners — and for agriculture.

This is not the first time such a procedure has been done in the area. In 1919, Santa Fe Salt and Ezra Blackmon both opened up plants in northwestern Oklahoma.

"Then, at 90, Blackmon decided to stop working," Long said, and Cargill bought his 1,900-acre site and facility.

"But we essentially rebuilt it from the ground up," he said. "Where Blackmon operated 4,000 tons maximum a year, we plan to do much more than that."

OPEC gets a taste of being against the ropes

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

It is ironic and more than a little satisfying to see OPEC pleading for assistance in its vain hopes of preventing a collapse in oil prices.

Tuesday, the president of OPEC issued a you'll-be-sorry warning to the non-OPEC oil producers — notably Mexico, Norway and Britain — saying that the bottom could fall out of the market unless they do their share in restraining production.

Artu Hernandez Grisanti, who is also the Venezuelan minister of energy and mines, warned that OPEC will fight for its share of the market, hinted at a price war with the non-OPEC producers and said "we feel that OPEC has been left alone to support the weight of an unstable market, while non-OPEC countries, especially the major producers, have been stepping up their output."

Isn't that terrible.

In effect, OPEC, which for a decade has been disturbing the sleep of the world with threats of higher oil prices, is now threatening it with lower oil prices. Of course, if oil prices really collapse, if they were to fall to $3 or $4 a barrel, it would be a frightening shock to the world financial system.

But so far, OPEC's attempts to rally world support for this notion don't appear to be making much progress.

Meanwhile, American policy makers don't appear ready to take some rather obvious advantage of OPEC's disintegration. If it is really serious about reducing the federal deficit, Congress now has before it a relatively easy way to increase government revenues.

It can simply raise taxes on oil and gasoline commensurate with declines in prices. And, presto, you have what every politician dreams of: an invisible and painless tax. The idea has three attractions. It wouldn't raise prices. It would reduce the deficit (a 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline levy would produce about $10 billion a year).

And it would also discourage Americans from going on another energy-wasting binge which could hasten the day when OPEC will be back in charge.

But in the 1970s, when higher gasoline taxes could have actually prevented higher gasoline prices and hastened OPEC's demise, Congress repeatedly fled from the idea. And besides, there are still a lot of people in Washington who subscribe to the myth that the budget deficit, which arose out of excessive tax cutting, can now be eliminated through reduction of expenditure alone.

Massey near completion of liquidation pact

TORONTO (AP) — Massey-Ferguson Ltd. says it has almost completed an agreement with lenders to spin off 60 percent of its combine manufacturing and foundries division, a move which the company's chairman called a "shot in the arm" for the operation.

About half of Massey's $600 million in long-term debt would be changed into a mixture of common and preferred shares under the proposals, Jack Nowling, Massey's head of communications, said Tuesday.

The company also intends to consolidate all aspects of its combines operation at its Brantford, Ontario, plant. It will close or sell its 40 farm equipment retail stores and pull marketing and support staff out of Des Moines, Iowa.

Labor may drop payment for loss of organs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is considering dropping a requirement that the government make lump-sum payments to civilian federal employees for the work-related loss of seven parts of the body, including male sex organs, breasts, kidneys and lungs, a union official said.

Still in the discussion stage, the proposal covering 2.6 million civilian employees in the federal work force is being considered on the basis that the seven organs are not necessary for the production of income, according to sources in the department, who spoke Tuesday only on condition that they not be identified.

Group says Saturn union violates federal law

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of predominantly non-union contractors says a labor agreement in the construction of General Motors Corp.'s new Saturn auto manufacturing plant violates federal law because it restricts the job to union subcontractors.

Associated Builders and Contractors Inc. said Tuesday the construction manager for the Saturn Corp. project, Morrison-Knudsen Co. of Boise, Idaho, signed an agreement with the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department that will result in the exclusive use of union subcontractors.

Judge reserves decision to dismiss GAF suit

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — A federal judge has reserved decision on a request by GAF Corp. that a lawsuit charging it with violating federal securities and anti-trust laws in its attempted takeover of Union Carbide Corp. be dismissed.

GAF argued Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Jose A. Cabranes in New Haven that Carbide's lawsuit, filed Monday, was improper in that it should have been made as a counter-claim to GAF's action against Carbide in a New York federal court.

GAF's lawsuit aimed at toppling Union Carbide's defense to GAF's $4.3 billion takeover bid is scheduled to be heard Wednesday afternoon in New York by U.S. District Judge Andrew Pollack.

Caramel Chestnut Tart

Chestnuts: Not just for open fires

From Staff and Wire Reports

Winter swirls in with its own culinary expectations: the table laden with burnished game and crackling pork, rich, buttery greens and golden orange gourds at dinner time. And chestnuts.

Roasted chestnuts, chestnut purees, chestnuts braised, boiled and baked are certainly seasonal, traditional and cozy, but they can also be very bland. When these same chestnuts are teamed with sugar, butter and chocolate, however, they become memorable even into the summer months.

Although classified as nuts, chestnuts must be cooked in some manner before being eaten. In the United States chestnuts are most often roasted to be munched while sitting by a flickering fire.

In Europe, however, they are used as a vegetable and as a fruit. They are pureed to be pooled alongside game, to thicken soups and also to flavor and sweeten many desserts.

Chestnut desserts have always been very popular in France. Chestnut purees are frequently used in dessert crepes and souffles. It is a rare cookbook that fails to include at least one sweet chestnut treat; they know the nutty flavor of chestnuts is at its best blended with sugar and cream.

If the thought of preparing fresh chestnuts is too daunting, there are on the market two kinds of canned chestnut purees, a sweet one made of pureed glazed (or candied) chestnuts (creme de marrons glaces) and an unsweetened version.

But if you are going to go it alone and puree the chestnuts yourself, remember that chestnuts are always cooked twice; the first time to facilitate peeling, the second to tenderize. Also buy about ¼ pound more chestnuts than required in case every chestnut is not perfect.

A healthy chestnut is plump and shiny; its outer shell comes off easily after roasting. Discard any imperfect nuts (those that are wizened or have mold or black spots on them).

There are various ways to prepare them for peeling. For the skillet method, cut a cross-shaped slit in the chestnuts with a sharp knife and put them in a skillet with enough oil to coat them. Stir and cook over moderate heat for about 10 minutes. Remove shells and skins with a sharp knife as soon as you can handle them. The heat of the chestnuts facilitates the process.

You can deep-fry the chestnuts by cutting all around them with a sharp knife. Place a few at a time in a wire basket, or sieve, and immerse in deep fat heated to 375 degrees until the peel opens of its own accord. Drain chestnuts well on paper towels.

To boil them, slit each shell and place them in boiling water to cover. Boil 20 minutes, drain and cool. Peel off shells.

Or roast the chestnuts, after coating them with oil, in a 450-degree oven for 20 minutes. Remove shells and skin.

In each case, note that the larger the slit, the easier it is to shell the nuts.

For a sweeter taste, simmer the shelled nuts in a sweetened, vanilla-flavored milk until they are tender. The nuts are then ready to eat whole or pureed. Below is a recipe for sweet chestnut puree that can be incorporated into many delicious desserts. Although making your own chestnut puree is beyond the call of duty, the fresh homemade taste is delicious and therefore tempting.

SWEET CHESTNUT PUREE

1 pound chestnuts
Oil for coating

For easiest peeling, always cut a cross on the flat side of a chestnut.

Then, cut completely around the outer rim between flat and curved side of the nut before blanching, boiling or roasting.

2-inch piece vanilla bean
1 cup hot milk
½ cup sugar
¼ cup water
Dash salt
1 tablespoon softened butter

Slit the chestnuts with a sharp knife and put them in a skillet with an oven-proof handle with enough oil to coat them. Bake in a 450-degree oven for 20 minutes. Remove the shells and skins with a sharp knife. Chop coarsely and cook, along with the vanilla bean, in hot milk for 20 to 30 minutes, or until chestnuts are very soft. Remove vanilla bean. Force chestnuts through a ricer, or puree them in an electric blender. Put sugar, water and salt in a small heavy saucepan. Stir and cook slowly until the mixture begins to boil.

Cover and cook rapidly 3 minutes, or until the steam has washed off any sugar crystals which may have formed around the sides of the pan. Cook, without stirring, until a soft ball forms when a little of the syrup is dropped in cold water (or to 234 degrees on a candy thermometer). Do not let the syrup brown. Blend the syrup with the chestnut puree, beating vigorously until a thick paste is formed. Cool to lukewarm and stir in the butter. Store in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator and use as needed. Makes ¾ to 1 cup puree.

Try this folded in dessert crepes or just topped with whipped cream and chocolate.

Pastry:
½ cup butter
¼ cup brown sugar, packed
1½ cups flour
1 tablespoon milk
1 square (1 ounce) semi-sweet chocolate
1 teaspoon shortening
Chestnut filling:
1 pound peeled chestnuts
3 eggs
¼ cup brown sugar, packed
1 cup dark syrup
2 tablespoons rum
2 tablespoons melted butter

For pastry: cream butter with sugar. Blend in about half the flour, then milk and remaining flour. Press dough into bottom and sides of deep 9-inch tart pan. Melt chocolate with chocolate with shortening over hot water and spread over bottom of pastry.

For chestnut filling: turn chestnuts into saucepan with ¾ cup water, bring to a boil, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Drain, cool and chop coarsely. Turn into prepared tart pan. Beat eggs and sugar together. Add remaining ingredients, and beat just until well-blended. Pour over chestnuts.

Set tart on baking sheet with sides. Bake on lower rack of moderately hot oven (375 degrees) 50 to 60 minutes, until set in center. Cool on wire rack. Remove sides of tart pan and place tart on serving plate.

If desired, pipe whipped cream around of tart shortly before serving.

MONT BLANC

2 to 2½ pounds chestnuts, shells slit
Salt to taste
2½ cups milk (approximately)
⅓ cup sugar
1 vanilla bean
2 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks, lightly beaten
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
¼ cup confectioners' sugar

Boil the chestnuts for 10 minutes in salted water. Cool them slightly. Peel them, removing both the outer shells and the inner skins.

Put the chestnuts in a saucepan, cover with the milk and add the sugar and vanilla bean. Simmer for about 1 hour, or until the chestnuts are tender. Remove the vanilla bean.

Drain the chestnuts, reserving the milk, and puree them through a sieve into a bowl using a pestle or heavy wooden spoon. Add a little of the hot milk to give the puree a smooth consistency. Stir in the butter and egg yolks. Form the puree into a mound on a serving plate and refrigerate for at least 3 hours. Pat into a mound or force through a ricer for a less compact effect.

Whip the cream with the confectioners' sugar. Serve the dessert very cold, covered with the whipped cream. Serves 6.

WHAT'S COOKING

Family opens house to friends

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Anne Lee

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

For Midlander Anne Lee and her family, Christmas is a time of giving in more ways than one. For the past 10 years or so, they have had an open house on the afternoon of Christmas Day, for friends who have no families of their own.

The couple started this tradition "when our son was a baby, because we didn't want to leave the house on Christmas," Mrs. Lee said. From 50 to 300 people each year attend the gathering, she added.

The menu usually consists of ham, turkey, tenderloin of beef with rolls, several kinds of salad, some cheeses and "the rest are all sweets, mostly cookies, breads and candies that I make all through December ... things I can freeze," said Mrs. Lee. She likes to keep the meal "simple yet different and tasty" because of her busy daily schedule. Mrs. Lee has her own business, Warm Touches, and employs 53 women to make music boxes which are sold to about 400 stores all over the country.

The Lee family's own Christmas dinner is another annual tradition. Each Christmas Eve, the couple and their three sons have a formal, candlelit dinner of Cornish game hens and wild rice, yam and apple casserole, homemade rolls and pecan pie, Mrs. Lee said. After dinner Lee reads "A Visit from St. Nicholas" to the children, and his wife reads them the Christmas story from the Bible.

The Christmas tree is another family tradition enjoyed each year. "It has to be eight to 10 feet tall just to hold all our ornaments," said Mrs. Lee. "Almost everything on it has been handmade. We collect them (handmade ornaments). They have been sent by friends all over the country."

This year Mrs. Lee was in charge of the menu for the Family of the Year program. The following three recipes — some of the hors d'oeuvres she prepared for the celebration — are ideal for any holiday gathering.

PECAN CHEESE BALL

½ pound old English cheese
½ pound sharp Cheddar (finely grated)
½ pound blue cheese
2 packages (8-ounces each) cream cheese
3 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons onion, chopped fine
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons chopped pimento
½ pound pecans, ground

Soften all cheeses at room temperature and mix thoroughly with electric mixer. Add Worcestershire sauce, onion, salt, pimento and half the pecans. Mix well and chill. Shape into one large ball or four small ones. Roll in remaining pecans. Serve surrounded with crackers and thin rye bread. Cheese ball freezes well.

CRAB MOUSSE

2 tablespoons plain gelatin (2 envelopes)
½ cup cold water
1 can cream of mushroom soup
½ cup minced celery
½ cup minced onion
1 cup mayonnaise
1 pound or 2 cans crab meat

Add gelatin to water. Heat undiluted soup and add gelatin. Add celery, onion, mayonnaise and crab. Mix well. Put into one-quart mold and refrigerate three to four hours. Serve with crackers.

WATER CHESTNUTS AND BACON

2 cans water chestnuts
Soy sauce to cover
Brown sugar
1 pound bacon

Soak water chestnuts in soy sauce two hours. Roll in brown sugar. Wrap in ½-slice bacon and secure with toothpick. Place close together in 9½x11-inch baking pan. Bake at 225° for two hours or until bacon is crisp. Serve hot.

Turkey recipe answers question asked by Julia Child

Associated Press

The following recipe for roast stuffed turkey is an answer to the question Julia Child poses about her bird in the introduction to her new cooking video: "Gosh, what am I going to do with that?"

JULIA CHILD'S ROAST STUFFED TURKEY
(12 servings)

14-pound turkey

FOR THE STUFFING:
½ pound (1 cup) sausage meat
2 cups each chopped onions and celery
2 eggs, lightly beaten
8 cups fresh white bread crumbs, toasted lightly and tossed with 4 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
Freshly ground pepper
1 teaspoon or more sage

TO COMPLETE:
Oil for basting turkey (about ¼ cup)
1 cup each roughly chopped carrots and onions
1 teaspoon butter
3 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons port

To prepare the turkey: Remove fat, giblets and neck from cavities of turkey. Cut off elbow nubbins.

To prepare turkey stock: Place neck, gizzard, heart and nubbins in water to cover by 1 inch and simmer 1½ to 2 hours. Strain, degrease and refrigerate. You will want 3 cups — add chicken stock if necessary.

For the stuffing: In a frying pan, brown sausage meat lightly. Remove it, leaving fat in pan; add the onions and saute until tender; stir in celery and cook 2 to 3 minutes. In a big bowl, mix onions and celery with the sausage, eggs, bread crumbs, salt, pepper and sage. Taste and correct the seasoning. Stuff turkey cavities; truss; rub turkey with oil.

To roast: Place the turkey, breast side up, on an oiled rack in a roasting pan, and place in a 325-degree oven. Baste every 30 minutes with oil, then with pan juices. After 3 hours, strew chopped carrots and onions in the bottom of pan. Turkey is done when an instant meat thermometer, inserted through the thickest part of the breast, registers 180 to 185 degrees.

Remove turkey and let it rest before carving.

If you have friends who like "health food" breads, you may want to try this recipe and give one loaf away. The orange and prunes yield delightful flavor and the latter are a good source of dietary fiber.

ORANGE-PRUNE BREAD

⅛ cup orange juice
⅓ cup water
12-ounce package pitted prunes, coarsely chopped
6 tablespoons butter, cut in thin pats
2 cups stirred all-purpose flour, spooned and leveled
1 cup stirred whole wheat flour, spooned and leveled
1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 large eggs, beaten
Finely grated rind of 1 large orange
1 cup walnuts, coarsely chopped

In a 3-quart saucepan stir together orange juice and water. Bring just to the boil. Remove from heat; stir in prunes and butter until butter melts. Cool to lukewarm; reserve in saucepan. In a medium bowl stir together all-purpose flour, whole wheat flour, brown sugar, baking soda and salt.

In a small bowl beat eggs until yolks and whites are blended; add to prune mixture in saucepan along with orange rind; mix well with a wooden spoon. Add flour mixture and walnuts; stir to moisten flour mixture.

Turn into two greased and floured 8½x4½x2⅝-inch loaf pans. Smooth tops. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake inserted in center comes out clean — 35 to 50 minutes. Let stand on wire racks for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out; turn each loaf right side up; cool partly. Wrap each loaf separately in foil. Allow to stand for several hours before slicing at least ¼-inch thick.

Note: To glaze the loaves, use 1 cup confectioners' sugar mixed with 1 to 1½ tablespoons orange juice; top with walnuts.

Nut rolls sweet treat at brunch

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

BRUNCH FARE
Eggs, Kippers & Toast
Fruit, Sweet Rolls & Coffee

RAISIN NUT ROLLS
2 packages dry yeast
½ cup warm water
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla
¾ cup butter
2½ cups all-purpose flour
4 egg yolks
Filling, see recipe

In a small bowl dissolve yeast in water; stir in sugar and vanilla. In a medium bowl cut butter into flour until particles are small; add yeast mixture; stir well. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating well with a wooden spoon after each addition.

Cover and let rise in warm draft-free place until doubled — 1 hour. Turn out half the very soft dough on a well-floured surface; roll out to a 12- by 9-inch rectangle.

Spread half the filling to 1 inch from edges. Roll up from 12-inch side; seal well. Place seam side down on buttered cookie sheet. Repeat process with other half of dough. Let rise as previously — 1 hour.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden brown — about 30 minutes. Makes 2 large rolls.

Filling: Mix together ¼ cup soft butter, ½ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar, ½ cup chopped walnuts and 1 cup raisins.

Meet
J. Robert Anderson,
philanthropist.

He's not a millionaire. In fact, he's not even rich. But he gives.

Most of the giving in this country doesn't come from the wealthy. Almost half of it comes from people who earn less than $20,000 a year. Everyday, ordinary people. Like the guy down the street. Or your next-door neighbor. Or 100 million others who, every year, give unselfishly just to help people.

And while those who give may sometimes go unnoticed, their contributions don't. Because in this country, when a lot of people give, it adds up to a lot.

It helps fund important research. It helps run community church programs. It helps support local charities. It helps people out.

There are so many things in this country that could use your hand. Your time, your talents, your money. What you give isn't so important. That you do give is.

Because you don't have to be rich to be a philanthropist. You just have to care.

TEXAS ★ CELEBRITY ★ RECIPE

(By RUSSELL M. GARDNER and CHRIS FARKAS)

"There are only three things to remember about the Sesquicentennial: Don't worry, be happy, feel good!" — Larry Hagman

LARRY HAGMAN'S COUNTRY QUICHE

1 (2-pound) bag frozen french fries
1 large yellow onion, finely chopped
½ pound butter
1 box frozen mustard greens
1 dozen eggs
1 pint heavy cream
1 pound cheese
Salt, to taste
Pepper, to taste
Nutmeg, to taste

Saute frozen french fries and onion in butter until light brown, turning frequently. Grease a large Pyrex, copper or ovenproof dish 9x13 inches by 1¾ inches. Parboil mustard greens and drain. Set aside. Beat eggs and cream as if for omelet, and set aside. Grate cheese.

Layer half the potatoes and onion in pan, add all of the mustard greens, half cream mixture over top. For second layer, add rest of potatoes and onion, then cheese with fork so egg mixture will soak in. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour.

Serve alone, with salad or baked ham. You can also dice the ham, leftover steak or chicken and put into the casserole. The nutmeg is very important.

Note: Spinach may be substituted for mustard greens.

Last-minute lemon cookies handy for holiday cooks

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you need an exceptionally good cookie for the holidays that is easy to make at the last minute, we highly recommend these Lemon Oat Bars.

We found the recipe for them in "Helen Corbitt's Cookbook" (Houghton Mifflin), first published in 1957 and still in print. It was written by the late Helen Corbitt, who was director of the Neiman-Marcus restaurants in Texas.

When we tried the Lemon Oat Bars at my house, my tasters were enthusiastic about them. Helen Corbitt herself said they were her favorite cookies.

LEMON OAT BARS

14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
⅔ cup butter, softened
1 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
1½ cups well-stirred all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup quick-cooking oats

Grease a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan.

In a small bowl whisk together condensed milk and lemon juice until blended; stir in lemon rind; reserve.

In a medium bowl with a wooden spoon beat together butter and brown sugar; sprinkle with flour and baking powder and stir until blended; stir in oats — mixture will be crumbly.

Spread half the flour-oat mixture in the prepared pan, patting it down; spread lemon mixture over top; sprinkle with remaining flour-oat mixture.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until brown around edges — about 25 minutes. Place on a wire rack to cool for 15 minutes. Chill before cutting into bars. Cover and store in refrigerator. Before serving, let stand briefly at room temperature.

Adapted from "Helen Corbitt's Cookbook" (Houghton Mifflin).

Yule fare varies around world

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Many of our British cousins eat turkey on Christmas, but the roast goose of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" has also long been a favorite alternative.

In case you decide to try goose this year, I advise you not to cook a wild one that has swum in salt water and has subsisted on seafood. The meat tends to be tough and the flavor is fishy. But geese raised domestically, or those which feed on rice, are usually good.

The French have a big meal after church on Christmas Eve to usher in the holiday. Baked ham is a favorite, but many people shun meat that night and serve eel baked on a bed of leeks, moistened with white wine.

In Germany, where wild game abounds, hunters try to bag a deer or wild boar.

In Brazil, below the equator, Christmas comes during their summer and usually people serve a fish pie on Christmas Eve and celebrate the day with a picnic.

There are other differences in Latin America. In Nicaragua, for instance, the Yuletide feast is often built around a platter of tamales.

In Sweden, where the Yule roast may be ham, a featured dish is highly flavored red cabbage.

The African nations have ideas of their own for Christmas feasting. In Ethiopia, for instance, raw meat is a Yuletide delicacy. In Ghana, they feast on goat and in Algiers, it is roast pheasant, which would doubtless go well in this country.

In Norway, delicious teacakes are served during Christmas Day.

In Armenia, the villagers eat no meat for a week before the Yuletide, and no food at all on the last day. On Christmas Eve, after church service they serve a supper dish such as this Boulgeur Pilav.

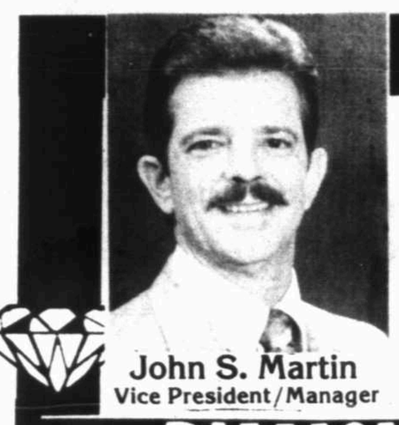

BOULGEUR PILAV

¾ cup raw lamb, diced
3 cups water
2 teaspoons salt
1 cup rice or cracked wheat
Small onion, chopped
3 tablespoons melted butter
¼ teaspoon pepper

Put cubes of meat into a saucepan with water and salt. Let boil until meat is nearly done. Add rice or cracked wheat and cook 30 minutes, not allowing stock to reduce below 2½ cups. Brown finely chopped onion in butter and pour over meat. Add pepper. Set aside for 15 minutes to settle before serving.

Traditional Southern cake lightened for today's tastes

By CECILY BRONSTONE
AP Food Editor

Lane Cake is a traditional Christmas dessert in many Southern homes.

A New Jersey cook, Theresa Kreinen, recently revised the recipe to reflect today's nutrition standards. The original three-layer cake was made with five egg whites, the yolks used in the filling. Theresa reduced the size of the cake to two layers and thickened the filling with cornstarch and only two egg yolks. The new version is still delicious.

LANE CAKE

2 cups stirred cake flour (lightly spooned and leveled)
1¼ cups sugar
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
10 tablespoons butter, softened
⅔ cup milk
1¼ teaspoons vanilla
5 egg whites, at room temperature
Filling (see recipe)
Boiled White Frosting (from a standard recipe)

Grease and flour two 9x1½-inch round cake pans.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer at low speed, mix together flour, sugar and baking powder; add butter, milk and vanilla. Scraping bowl constantly, beat until blended. At high speed, beat 2 minutes; add egg whites; continue beating at high speed for two minutes longer. Pour into prepared pans.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 20 to 25 minutes. Cool in pans on wire racks for 10 minutes. Loosen edges and turn out of pans onto racks; cool completely; split each layer in half. Place one layer on a serving plate, crust side down. Spread with ⅓ of the filling. Repeat with remaining cake layers and filling, but end with last layer of cake crust side up. Frost with Boiled White Frosting. Cover with a tent of foil or a cake cover. Store in a cool, dry place. If refrigerated, allow to stand at room temperature for several hours before serving.

Note: Cake may be baked in two 8x1½-inch round cake pans. Bake 25 to 30 minutes.

Filling:

In a 2-quart saucepan stir together ¼ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons cornstarch and a pinch of salt. Gradually stir in 2 cups milk, keeping smooth; whisk in 2 slightly beaten egg yolks. Stirring constantly over medium-low heat cook until boiling and thickened. Remove from heat. Stir in 3 tablespoons bourbon. Turn into a medium bowl; cover surface with saran without pressing down on it. Refrigerate just until cool. Fold in 1 cup raisins finely chopped. Makes about 3 cups.

Make your own corn relish at home

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

HOME CORN RELISH

10-ounce jar sweet pickled gherkins
8¾-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup finely chopped seeded cucumber
2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped sweet red pepper

Drain gherkins, reserving ¼ cup liquid, and coarsely chop. Stir together gherkins, corn, onion, cucumber, green pepper and red pepper. Refrigerate, tightly covered, for at least 1 hour to blend flavors. Makes about 2½ cups.

Nutritional tips offered for holiday dinners and leftover eating

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Nutrition doesn't have to be neglected during the holidays, says Dr. Harry Prebluda.

Prebluda, an advisory editor for ChemTech magazine, who frequently speaks about nutrition to civic groups, offers these tips:

— Put citrus peel into foods. Grated lemon and orange peel provide dietary fiber and vitamins and can add a tasty zest to cookies, cranberry sauce and other holiday favorites.

— To cut down on food intake, use a salad plate instead of a dinner plate. This makes smaller portions appear larger.

— Make a frozen turkey taste fresher by rubbing the outside with lemon.

Brandy pork roll delicious fare for special dinner

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DINNER FARE

Brandy Pork Roll & Yams
Broccoli, Salad & Rolls
Apple Crisp & Beverage

BRANDY PORK ROLL

2½ pound smoked boneless pork shoulder butt
Whole cloves
⅓ cup apricot preserves
¼ cup 80-proof brandy

Cook butt in water according to wrapper directions; drain and insert cloves at 1-inch intervals over surface. Place butt on a sheet of foil in a small shallow baking pan; cup foil fairly close to butt. In a small saucepan gently heat apricot preserves and brandy, stirring, until preserves melt; pour over butt. Bake in a preheated 450-degree oven for 10 minutes. Cut into slices, spooning preserve mixture over them. Serve hot.

FDA approves test-market of 'revolutionary' cheese

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has granted a temporary permit to a Newburg, Ohio, company that clears the way for the test marketing of a revolutionary new cheese.

The agency approved the Great Lakes Cheese Co.'s request to begin distribution of a newly formulated grated cheese which contains powdered cellulose, a highly processed form of wood-based saw dust.

The company states that the unusual ingredient is being used as an anti-caking agent.

The action is precedent setting because the combination of powdered cellulose with grated cheese is the first commercial pairing between the wood-based substance and dairy products.

However, the ingredient has been used since the mid-1970s in so-called high-fiber breads, the first of which was Continental Baking Co.'s Fresh Horizon.

Most mayonnaise safe

Federal experts say mayonnaise isn't a villain when it comes to food poisoning. While all mayonnaise-based salads should be kept on ice, commercial mayonnaise actually slows the growth of many food-poisoning bacteria because it contains acid. However, homemade mayonnaise using a bland recipe without added acid, such as lemon juice, must be kept cold.

Fudge sauce ideal for topping favorite ice cream

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

HELEN CORBITT'S FUDGE SAUCE

½ cup butter
2¼ cups confectioners' sugar
⅔ cup evaporated milk
6 squares bitter chocolate

Mix butter and sugar in top of double boiler; add evaporated milk and chocolate and cook over hot water for 30 minutes. Do not stir while cooking. Remove from heat and beat. You may store in refrigerator and reheat as needed. If you wish to have a thinner sauce add cream, but do not add water.

DEAR ABBY

Girl fears losing man who is afraid of love

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 and the guy I am involved with is 20. We work together, spend most of our time together and have a beautiful relationship. (Yes, we have had sex. He was my first.)

The problem: I'm in love with him, but at the beginning of our relationship he told me not to get too serious because he wasn't looking for a serious commitment. He said if I fell in love with him he would have to end our relationship and just be "friends" because he wouldn't want to hurt me for anything.

Abby, it's hurting me to hide my feelings. I want to tell him how I feel about him, but I don't want to lose him. What should I do? — HEARTBROKEN IN MOTOWN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Mature people do not play games; they are honest with each other about their feelings. I suspect that the young man is keeping his distance because he is afraid of being drawn into more of a commitment than he can handle at this time. Tell him how you feel. And if you lose him, you will know it was sex he wanted — not love.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in reply to "Confused" relative to the hastily written "Thank you" on the back of the check. Your comment — "It's still an acknowledgment" — is a copout response. I sent my niece a check as a gift, and she scribbled "Thank you" on the back, so I scribbled, "For what?" under her "Thank you" and returned it to her.

She soon replied, thanking me for the money, but, more important, for reminding her of her lack of manners.

We're still the best of friends and we both profited. — FROM THE OLD SCHOOL

DEAR FROM: Be fair. My comment was, "While your quick and easy acknowledgment of your gift was barely acceptable, it's still an acknowledgment." And it was.

DEAR ABBY: I am having thigh-reduction surgery (suction lipectomy) in three weeks. I am a basically honest person and don't know what response I should give people when they ask if I've lost weight, etc. I do not wish to tell them I've had surgery (I feel this is a personal matter), but I don't wish to lie either. Can you offer any suggestions? — HONEST

DEAR HONEST: If people ask you if you lost weight, say yes. (Actually, it is an honest answer; you did lose weight.)

If people ask, "What happened to you?" reply, "I got rid of some fat." (You did, but you don't have to say how.)

If anyone asks, "How did you do it?" you can say, "It wasn't easy."

Program encourages employees' input

MONTVALE, N.J. (AP) — A "quality-of-work-life" program that encourages store clerks to take part in business decisions has helped a Philadelphia supermarket chain to rejuvenate store sales.

A&P says the program, which calls for regular meetings of clerks and management, is part of a successful restructuring of its Super Fresh subsidiary and has increased profitability.

KISS A ZUCCHINI

The snappy taste of RO★TEL Tomatoes and Green Chilies makes every casserole a taste delight.

Royal Zucchini Parmesan

1 lb. ground beef
2 onions, chopped
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 (10 oz.) can RO★TEL
1 (8 oz.) can tomato sauce
1 (6 oz.) can tomato paste
1 green onion, chopped
1 bell pepper, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
4 medium-size zucchini, sliced cross-wise about 1/4 inch thick
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Saute ground beef and onion in salad oil until meat is brown and crumbly. Add RO★TEL Tomatoes and Green Chilies, tomato sauce, tomato paste and green pepper. Simmer for 10 minutes stirring occasionally. Blend in Cheddar cheese, oregano, salt, pepper and garlic salt. Add zucchini. Simmer another 10 minutes. Put into an ungreased shallow 3 quart casserole and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake at 350° for 45 minutes. Makes 6-8 servings.

Pick up a can or two today and kiss your favorite dish with RO★TEL Tomatoes and Green Chilies.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, December 19, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Be more conservative in the months ahead and a long-cherished dream could come true. An unsuspected talent becomes obvious. Your employment opportunities multiply. Do what you know is right for you and your family. Your optimism and generosity make you very popular. You believe in living life to the fullest! A flirtation could hurt mate more than you suspect. Be careful not to jeopardize a special relationship. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actress Cicely Tyson, "Spenser: For Hire" star Robert Urich, producer-TV host David Susskind, Detroit slugger-broadcaster Al Kaline, the California Angels' Geoff Zahn, singer Edith Piaf, tennis' Stan Smith.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to drum up new business and sign contracts. An old friend offers good advice. Postpone changing anything connected with jointly-held funds.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take inventory of what you have accomplished this year. It may be time to enter a new field or form special partnerships. Entertaining business associates at home proves highly successful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concentrate on planning and scheduling today. It is not yet time to launch a new project. Friendship and finance will not mix well now. Keep a romance exciting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone you trust could be trying to deceive you. Get your home better organized. A neighbor or relative offers to babysit. Show your appreciation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not sign anything until you have read all the fine print. An indecisive attitude could bring a project to a standstill.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Delays are to be expected. Ask permission to work at home. You will be able to accomplish more in quiet surroundings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Visit the stores early if going Christmas shopping. You can get some real bargains now. Keep receipts in case you have to make returns. Call friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Mate or partner could be in an unpredictable mood. Avoid asking too many questions or you could spark a confrontation. You benefit financially when a business associate does a complete about-face!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Routine affairs dominate the morning hours. A creative project can be sold for a handsome profit if you are willing to part with it. Review a plan to see if you have overlooked anything.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An influential person is impressed by your managerial skills. Extra personal effort will bring that coveted raise or promotion. Make certain your work is not interfering with a happy family life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A great day for obtaining advice from knowledgeable people. Creative and artistic efforts will be richly rewarded. Developing interests of your own strengthens your marriage.

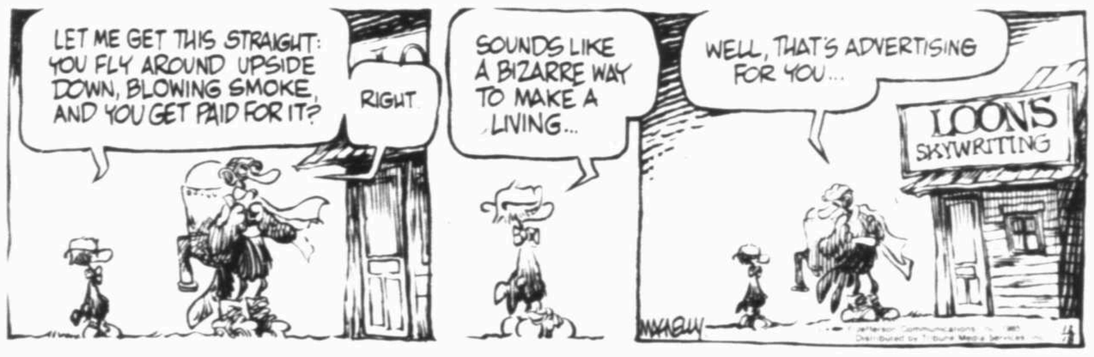

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New proposals merit careful consideration. Your regular work brings the greatest rewards. A loved one's impulsive behavior could upset certain social plans. A compromise is the best solution.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Have you ever wondered how you would fare in a world bridge championship? If you have, you can take heart from today's hand, played in the qualifying rounds of the Venice Cup, emblematic of supremacy in women's bridge.

South's opening two club bid was artificial and forcing. West elected to rob the opponents of bidding space with a barrage bid of five clubs, with dramatic results. South tried one club cue-bid too many, and succeeded in convincing her partner that she had a genuine club suit. West, convinced that she could defeat seven clubs but little else, wisely decided to pass. East, who had some hope of defeating seven hearts but nothing else, now chose to come to South's rescue by doubling seven clubs. South was eminently correct in judging that that contract was unlikely to make, so she took the opportunity to correct to seven no trump. East, who had doubled South out of a slam that couldn't make, now chose to double her in one she could.

It would be fitting if we could report that justice was served and that South coasted home in seven no trump. That contract depended only on declarer guessing who held the queen of diamonds. There seemed to be two clues: West's club preempt showed length in that suit and, therefore, she was likely to be shorter in diamonds; and East's two doubles suggested that she might have the missing queen. In any event, declarer won the opening club lead, crossed to dummy with the ten of spades and finessed the ten of diamonds. A delighted West won the queen and cashed seven club tricks (yes, East did remember to unblock the jack) to collect 1,500 points.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

'The Refrigerator' Perry warms up to promote firm's long underwear

WASHINGTON (LAT) — It isn't exactly a photograph of the pin-up-poster variety like the one with Baltimore pitcher Jim Palmer in his sexy briefs, but William "The Refrigerator" Perry has his own underwear ad.

In this one the Chicago Bear poses appropriately with a real bear. Perry is promoting long underwear, and given the brutality of Chicago winter, it's understandable.

It seems that the Bears' equipment manager, desperate for a set of long underwear that would fit the substantial defensive tackle, called the Royal Textile Mills for help.

Someone there looked up and said, "That would make a great ad: 'We Keep the Refrigerator Warm.'"

So Perry and a 100-pound trained bear (which next to Perry resembles a lap dog) posed for the ad that will appear in trade publications and in sporting-goods stores.

Who knows how well a poster might sell? Palmer had better not rest on his laurels.

L. Pavarotti

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The last time renowned tenor Luciano Pavarotti appeared at Philadelphia's Spectrum, he got 11 curtain calls at the huge arena that is normally home to the city's professional basketball and hockey teams.

The 18,000-seat arena was sold out, so Philadelphia Opera Company officials decided to arrange for an encore performance. Pavarotti will perform "The Verdi Requiem" with the winners of the Opera Company of Philadelphia-Luciano Pavarotti International Voice Competition and a 400-voice chorus on April 5, said Margaret Everitt, the company's general director.

Proceeds from the concert, with Lorin Maazel of the Munich Philharmonic Orchestra conducting, will be split between the Opera Company and Business Leadership Organized for Catholic Schools.

• • •

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Singer Paul Anka has been chosen grand marshal in the Krewe of Endymion's Carnival Parade, which gets the Crescent City revved up for Mardi Gras.

Endymion, the city's largest Carnival organization, will parade 27 large floats and 10 smaller ones through the streets Feb. 8, the Saturday before Mardi Gras, a spokesman said Tuesday. The theme will be "What Might Have Been" — a satiric spoof of politics and life in New Orleans.

Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca, ramrod of the drive to refurbish the Statue of Liberty, will ride a float resembling the statue, officials said.

• • •

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Veteran director Martin Ritt was teased by celebrities about his trademark jumpsuit in a star-studded tribute to the 72-year-old filmmaker's half-century in the movie business.

Ritt, whose films include "Hud," "Sounder," "Pete & Tillie" and the new "Murphy's Romance" starring Sally Field, always wears jumpsuits while shooting and at most social events.

"I'm thankful for the day, I'm thankful for the lunch and I'm thankful for all my friends coming here," he told the 150 guests who viewed a montage of his films at Chasen's restaurant Tuesday. Miss Field led a series of tributes to Ritt that included testimonials by Walter Matthau, Eli Wallach and Mary Steenburgen.

• • •

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Waylon Jennings, who has written such country music hits as "Are You Sure Hank Done It This Way?" and the theme from "The Dukes of Hazzard," will be honored by the Songwriters Guild of America.

The guild announced Tuesday that it is saluting the country star for his contributions to songwriting and his encouragement to aspiring songwriters.

Jennings will be presented the award Jan. 13 during the 6th annual National Songwriter Awards on a syndicated television special at the Tennessee Performing Arts Center.

• • •

HILVERSUM, Netherlands (AP) — Dutch grandmaster Jan Timman delighted a home crowd of some 1,000 chess devotees by winning the third game of his exhibition match against world champion Garry Kasparov.

Tuesday's victory, which came after 41 moves and five hours of play, shortened the world champion's lead in the six-game encounter to 2-1. Timman, third on the international rating list behind Kasparov and former Soviet world champion Anatoly Karpov, is considered to be the best chess player in the West.

"The whole idea was a miscalculation," Timman said afterward, explaining that his attack had been premature and he should have lost.

"I know, I know," moaned Kasparov. "That's why I tried so hard for a win. I took too great a risk."

M.T. Moore

CHICAGO (AP) — Alderman Richard Mell, whose threatened lawsuit over the use of the name "Chicago Post" persuaded Mary Tyler Moore's new TV series to rename its fictional newspaper, is being asked to stop using the name himself.

Mell, who has published a neighborhood newspaper, the Chicago Post, for two years, threatened to sue when he learned that CBS' "Mary" was going to use the name for a newspaper. MTM Productions Inc. switched the paper's name to the Chicago Eagle.

But now Mell has received a letter from an attorney representing Chicago Post, a video production company, warning him to stop using the name. An attorney for the company, Patrick Tallon, said it registered the name with the state in December 1983, before Mell starting using it.

"If his trademark had validity," responded Mell, "we'd never have gotten a trademark."

NEW YORK (LAT) — New York Times columnist Tom Wicker has signed with Random House to write a major biography of Richard M. Nixon that will focus mainly on the former president's foreign-policy achievements and what led up to them.

Wicker, who was the Times' Washington bureau chief from 1964 to 1968, just before Nixon became president, pointed out that Nixon's political career spanned four significant decades in the nation's history.

During that period, Wicker said, Nixon was involved in more important foreign-policy development at a higher level than any other American.

His first administration saw the opening of relations with China, SALT I talks and the beginning of detente.

The publishers expect the yet untitled Wicker book to be published in 1987. Wicker is the author of 11 books, his most recent a Civil War period novel, "Unto This Hour," published in 1984.

OVER 450,000 TEXANS SERVED IN VIETNAM.

3,244 WERE KILLED IN ACTION.
161 ARE STILL MISSING.

JOIN US IN BUILDING A MEMORIAL TO HONOR THESE BRAVE AMERICANS.

You can be a part of the continuous effort to build a statewide memorial honoring those Texans who served in Vietnam. Through the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, a chartered, nonprofit organization, your tax-deductible contribution will assist in the construction and maintenance of the $2.5 million Texas memorial.

The memorial, located on the Texas State Fair Grounds in Dallas, will consist of four granite tablets bearing the names of those killed in the war. A reflecting pool will surround the memorial, while an eternal flame burns over a tablet inscribed with the names of those soldiers still missing in action. Landscaped gardens covering approximately two acres of the Texas State Fair Grounds will encircle the monument and provide an area for quiet contemplation and reflection.

Your support is needed for this statewide memorial to become a reality. So send your tax-deductible donation today to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund of Texas – and build a memorial honoring these brave Americans.

Republican activist chosen as elections administrator

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The Midland County Elections Commission has selected Bettye F. Calvert to replace the late Janeice Builta as Midland County Elections Administrator.

Ms. Calvert, 58, was selected in a 3-2 vote over 37-year-old Kenneth Arp, a salesman for a Waxahachie computer firm.

"She's worked around the election process for many years," said County Judge William B. Ahders, who joined County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry and Midland County Republican Chairman Kelly Fish in voting for Ms. Calvert.

Midland County Democratic Chairman Janet Massey and Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield voted for Arp, but the vote was not along party lines; Ms. Cherry is a Democrat and Ms. Shuffield is a Republican.

"I asked to be recorded as voting against Betty Calvert due to her background with the Republican Party," said Ms. Massey. "This is a position where it's a necessity to work closely with both parties during the primary and we had qualified applicants who had not been active in either party. However, Betty assured the commission she would be fair and non-partisan, and as long as this holds true, I congratulate her and look forward to working with her."

Ms. Calvert has long been active in Republican politics, working on the campaigns of such GOP stalwarts as George Strake and Ernest Angelo Jr., and serving as housing coordinator at the 1984 Republican national convention in Dallas.

"I think I'm qualified for it (her new position)," Ms. Calvert said this morning. "I won't have any trouble handling that office on a non-partisan basis."

Ms. Calvert, who has been working for Industrial Maintenance Contractors Inc., said she has already resigned her posts on Rep. Tom Loeffler's Midland steering committee and the Republican Women's Club's political action committee.

"I feel she'll be most objective in her work," said Ahders. "I know the commissioners join me in wishing her great success."

The county commissioners have no role in approving Ms. Calvert's selection other than to approve her $28,000 salary, according to County Attorney Mark Dettman. Ms. Calvert will begin her duties Monday after all the election commissioners sign a resolution appointing her.

"She's coming in at a difficult time because we have an election that's coming up shortly," Dettman said. "She has her work cut out for her, but I'm confident she'll be able to handle it with ease."

Ms. Calvert, who beat out seven other applicants besides Arp, said she has no regrets about leaving partisan politics behind and concentrating on the mechanics of the election process.

"I firmly believe that our voting right is our greatest right," she said. "I promise that I will serve the citizens of Midland County to the very best of my ability."

Ms. Builta died last month after serving as elections administrator since 1981.

Council rejects request by Hispanic chamber

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

After operating for a year with no money and no executive director, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce will have to continue its business without money from the city.

Roger Robles, Hispanic chamber president, asked the City Council Tuesday for money to fund an executive director, secretary, office space and their projects from the city's hotel-motel tax. But the idea was rejected by the council because the city is into its third month in this fiscal year and the money from that tax already has been allocated to other groups. They also warned Robles that funding 70 percent of the Hispanic chamber program with hotel-motel tax revenue is "a very tenuous thing."

Getting the lion's share of the hotel-motel tax is the Midland Chamber of Commerce Visitors and Convention Bureau.

The Hispanic Chamber's plan is to pay $24,000 a year for an executive director, $11,000 for a secretary, $5,000 in taxes and fringe benefits for the two, and $3,600 to lease office space. Lesser amounts were cited for programs, such as setting up a twin city in Mexico, attracting international trade shows to Midland and getting Midland Regional Airport designated as an international port of entry.

With the assistance of the Convention and Visitors Bureau and the Holiday Inn, Midland will be hosting the 1988 state convention of Hispanic chambers of commerce, he said. In addition, two seminars were sponsored by the Hispanic chamber and were attended by all segments of the community.

Mayor G. Thane Akins, pointing out the hotel-motel tax has been budgeted for this year, said the tax is a "very tenuous thing. One year it was so down we had to cut all the entities that shared in that tax. To fund any more we'd have to involve the hotel-motel association. It puts you on thin ice. It's like cities who have depended on a lot of federal funds in their budget; now they're laying off people and cutting back services."

Councilman David Godfrey suggested Robles talk with the hotel-motel association here and get their support to raise the tax from 6 percent to 7. The mayor said the Hispanic chamber "has a good track record" and should demonstrate that it can bring in outside people, such as the 1988 convention.

Akins also questioned some of the Hispanic chamber's proposed projects and suggested the organization could work in conjunction with other groups that already are trying to address some of those, such as the international port of entry at the airport.

The twin cities proposal needs more than just the Hispanic community working on that project and should involve a large segment of the community, said Akins.

Godfrey argued that giving money to the Hispanic chamber would lock the council into giving money to any group. "If a black chamber forms you're almost locked into giving them money. The Midland chamber is supposed to cover all groups."

"The Midland chamber has its priorities and it serves the majority of its members," said Robles, pointing out those priorities might not always be the needs of the east side. With 114 members, the Hispanic chamber includes a wide variety of companies, he said.

Councilwoman Oralia Corrales said it is to the Hispanic chamber's credit "they have been in operation for a year without asking for help. These people have worked so hard and have come so far in one year."

And even though she asked that some type of funding be found, the council denied the Hispanic chamber's request.

Detoxification center's rules to be changed

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

With less than two weeks to find a solution, the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board of Trustees approved a temporary measure to bring Johnson Detoxification Center into line with new state laws affecting alcohol treatment facilities.

During the Tuesday monthly meeting, the board listened to MHMR Program Director for Midland County Ken Wolf list the changes needed to avoid coming into conflict with regulations established by the Texas Commission on Alcoholism.

"As of Jan. 1, we'll be illegal if we continue to detox people at Johnson Center," said Wolf. "The staff members have come up with a program to make sure that no one who is intoxicated is admitted after Dec. 27.

"Our objective is to have an effective screening procedure to keep from admitting intoxicated persons."

Director of MHMR Clyde McLean told the board the TCA is requiring facilities like Johnson Center to be "medical models."

"This would mean an additional $150,000 would be necessary to complete the fiscal year," he said. Most of the expense would go "primarily for personnel."

Johnson Center, 502 N. Carver St., currently serves as a non-medical detoxification center.

Wolf suggested a double screening procedure involving staff members and the center's psychiatrist.

"There will be an initial interview and observation process, but no Breathalyzer test due to the expense and length of lab work turnaround," he said. "Staff members will look for signs of intoxication through mental, physical and cognitive signs and if the client 'passes,' they will be admitted."

In addition, a psychiatrist will interview the client by the next day at the very latest and this will be used as a backup interview, he said.

Under the new format, the center will be a 9 to 5, Monday through Friday center with no more emergency "middle-of-the-night-admissions," he said.

Wolf said most of the late-night admissions are intoxicated persons.

"The new format will be an intermediate, or halfway house, program which will serve as an aftercare service — to introduce clients to Alcoholics Anonymous, provide them with alcoholic education and help them make the transition," he said.

Wolf added that persons who do not pass the interview and appear intoxicated will not be admitted.

"We're talking about only those people who have completed detoxification somewhere else," he said.

"Like where?" asked Chairman William Pettit.

"Like a motel or at the Midland Memorial Emergency room," he replied.

Wolf said people transporting the intoxicated person to Johnson — policemen, friends or relatives — will be responsible for taking them elsewhere for detoxification. He also stated that if any current resident of Johnson Center becomes intoxicated while staying at the center, they will be discharged.

Pettit argued that the policy of admitting only non-intoxicated persons could "turn into a bedding-down type situation."

"What's to keep us from becoming like the Salvation Army, where anyone who needs a place to sleep just shows up?" he asked.

Wolf agreed that "there would be some mistakes."

"Probably 5 to 10 percent of them will try to con us. They'll just be guys who need a place to flop for the night," he replied.

The changes in policy stem from recent legislation that gave the TCA jurisdiction over alcoholic services, said McLean recently.

"For years, the Texas Department of MHMR assumed the responsibility of treating alcoholic patients," he said. "But with the enactment of Senate Bill 601 (the Texas Alcohol and Drug Abuse and Services Act), the TCA was given the authority to provide or control all alcoholic services for state agencies. The problem is when the Legislature gave them the authority they didn't appropriate any funds to go along with the authority."

According to Lucille Gray, director of licensure for the TCA, the legislation made licensure of detox centers mandatory.

"Detoxification can be very dangerous, especially if you don't have the medical backup and nursing supervision," she said.

McLean, however, has concerns about where indigent alcoholics will go to sober up.

"I feel that there are a lot of people who won't get sobered up now," he said. "And of course, a lot of them will probably sober up in motels, under bridges and places like that."

McLean estimated that Johnson Center treats about 26 to 40 people per month.

Students, parents to get surprise from MISD

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland school students who are failing courses midway through the third six-week grading period may wish to race to the mailbox come Saturday.

In addition to the seasonal holiday greeting cards and over-stuffed packages, many children or their parents will discover another surprise: Interim Progress Reports courtesy of the Midland Independent School District.

According to Becky Ferguson, MISD coordinator of communications, IPRs previously were sent home with students and were to be returned with a parental signature. However, many of the reports never reached parents, so MISD has decided to increase its efforts — via the U.S. Postal Service — to notify them when their child is failing in school.

Mrs. Ferguson said the first IPRs to report failures midway through the third six-week grading period will be mailed Thursday. The IPRs should arrive in the mail on Saturday.

The new procedure is part of a "continuing effort to ensure parents and teachers work together for students' success," Mrs. Ferguson said.

"We want parents to know of student achievement problems so they can help students get back on track," said Maridell Fryar, director of secondary education. "Teachers can provide extra help and tutoring, but the schools can't do it alone — we need the help and interest of parents."

Mrs. Fryar said the new procedure is justified because MISD no longer has the manpower to follow up on students who fail to return progress reports. The district also has absorbed "enough feedback" from parents who claimed their child failed to deliver the IPR.

"We as administrators have had enough feedback to do something about it," she said.

MISD has always made a practice of notifying parents when their child is experiencing difficulties in school, according to Mrs. Fryar.

But, she added, the state now requires that schools not only inform parents but also provide written verification when doing so.

Mrs. Fryar estimated that one-third of the IPRs failed to reach parents during any given six-week reporting period.

"Secondary school students are not stupid," she said. "We just finally decided that we would have greater assurance that parents were receiving them (IPRs) if we sent them through the mail."

Pecos jury awards coach $1.5 million for injuries

From Staff Reports

PECOS — A 143rd District Court jury Tuesday deliberated about an hour and a half to decide a 36-year-old high school football coach should receive $1.5 million for injuries he received while working on a Conoco oil lease in 1982.

The civil lawsuit filed against Evans Oilfield Construction and Roustabouts Inc. by Odessa attorney Warren Burnett was heard by Reeves County District Judge Larry Fuller and a jury of 10 women and two men. The suit also named Lance Evans of Pecos as an officer of the firm.

According to Elisa Vasquez, Burnett's co-counsel, Donald Ivey, who became freshman football coach and teacher in the Reeves County school system this year, was employed by Conoco in 1982 when an accident occurred as a result of alleged negligence on the part of the Pecos-based construction firm.

The suit alleged Ivey was on the Conoco lease, trying to bleed down a blowdown line on a CO2 injection well and the line began to whip and beat Ivey, who suffered back, knee and head injuries that caused him to spend a month in the hospital and undergo back and knee surgery.

The suit contended the oilfield construction firm, which installed the blowdown line under a contract with Conoco, was negligent by failing to stake down the line and this resulted in injuries to Ivey that have prevented him from resuming his duties as a pumper for Conoco, Ms. Vasquez said.

Jurors heard three days of testimony in the trial last week and reconvened Tuesday after a weekend recess to hear final arguments in the trial.

The attorney for Evans Oilfield Construction and Roustabouts Inc., Bruce Cochran of Dallas, did not indicate if the company intends to appeal.

City goverment's past on display at City Hall

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

It may not be the same as hanging out dirty laundry for all to see, but the city government's past will go on display in January.

A display case purchased by the Downtown Rotary and Midland West Rotary clubs will be installed in the foyer between the City Council Chambers and City Hall when it arrives from New York City in January. Gregg Holmes announced the purchase during a council meeting Tuesday.

As a member of a City Secretary's Advisory Committee established to explore Midland's city records "that reflect the city over the last 100 years," the group felt citizens should have an opportunity to learn more about their local government.

The committee consisted of Holmes, Bertha Sanchez, Mary Jane Young, Beatrice Hurd and Dr. Weldon Horton. The latter member has "committed a lot of time to restoration of these records," said Holmes.

"Once we started reading a lot of these old records, we felt it important to have some means to display them to the general public...to help Midlanders be conscious of their past and future.

Best gifts range from son's birth to 'Babes in Toyland' doll

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Once you pass a certain age and come what some people refer to as nature," the Christmas holidays em to blur into one another, losing eir distinctiveness.

What once was the most awaited liday of the year suddenly bemes an endless chore of shopping prepare for the big day.

Despite the change in Christmas it seems to come with age, most ople can remember a special gift m a particular Christmas.

Twelve Midlanders were asked, hat was the best Christmas gift 've ever received?"

"My son. He was born Christmas Eve," said Betty Crooker, who requested that her street address not be published. The assistant director of Midland's Rape Crisis Center said her "best Christmas gift" will be 26 years old this Christmas.

"A trip to South Carolina and going to visit my family," said Beverly Johnson, 2701 Whittle Way. Ms. Johnson, a media director with a local ad agency, said visiting her family in Charleston "is always one of the best presents."

"Money. I can generally buy what I like," said accountant Reed Markee of 4201 Andrews Highway.

"My telephone," said Tina Crawford, 2512 E. 11th Street in Odessa.

Ms. Crawford, a homemaker, said she received her white, donut-shaped phone when she was a teen and liked to spend a lot of time on the phone.

"An '83 Buick Riviera," said Donna Cadell, a homemaker who lives on Missouri Avenue. That best gift came last year, she said.

Homemaker Delphia Fletcher, 3412 W. Louisiana, said a collection of crystal figurines was her best Christmas gift. Ms. Fletcher says she collects crystal animal figurines.

"When my little girl was old enough to realize what Christmas was," replied Beverly Robarge, Route 3, Box 449. Her daughter was 2 when she began to understand the holiday, she said.

"I guess it was a car. I got it when I was 16. A brand new Pontiac. It was a great gift," said Ann Hover, who is a homemaker and lives on Sinclair.

"Probably it would have to be my wedding, because I was married on the 20th," said Daryl Murphy.

Tom Mann, 10 Bristol Court, said his best Christmas gift was a roll top desk he received when he was about 10.

Cindy Abel said her best gift was, "A 'Babes in Toyland' doll. She had pink hair and was dressed like a ballerina."

Kathi Young, 1610 N. L St., also said a doll she received when she was 8 or 9 years old was her best Christmas gift.

"A doll, a princess doll. It was really a real big surprise and I was really good that year," said Ms. Young, who works as a secretary.

Banker's wife walks to safety after kidnapping

KERRVILLE (AP) — The pregnant wife of a Kerrville banker freed herself and walked to safety after an armed kidnapper left her tied up in a wooded area and demanded that her husband pay a $100,000 ransom, police say.

An armed, masked gunman abducted Gay Haufler, 28, from her home about 11 a.m. Tuesday after forcing her to call her husband, Mark Haufler, at his office, FBI officials said.

The kidnapper failed to show up at the Interstate 10 location where the banker had been told to leave the ransom money, but FBI agents were questioning two men seen in the area.

Officials had set up surveillance where the money was left, but called the operation off at about 7 p.m. after television camera crews arrived, police said.

FBI agent Patrick Cowley said Mrs. Haufler, who is seven months pregnant, was not harmed in the incident.

She had managed to free herself from her bonds and flagged down a passing motorist about 6 p.m. on Texas 16 as she walked toward Kerrville from a wooded area where the kidnapper had driven her in the couple's station wagon.

"We're very glad she's safe and sound," Cowley said. "She's the prime concern in something like this."

The gunman also did not harm the Haufler's 4-year-old daughter, Megan, whom authorities found hiding under her bed in the Haufler home, Kerrville Police Chief L. Scott Evans said.

Haufler, a longtime employee of Shreiner Bancshares Inc., received the call from his wife at his office in the Charles Shreiner Bank in downtown Kerrville at 11:10 a.m., authorities said.

After contacting Kerrville police, he took $100,000 in cash to a telephone booth near the telephone company in downtown Kerrville, where he received the next part of a series of instructions from the kidnapper.

Haufler was finally told to drive to a spot on Interstate 10 west of Kerrville. The banker dropped off the money between 12:30 p.m. and 1 p.m.

No one showed up to retrieve the money, Cowley said.

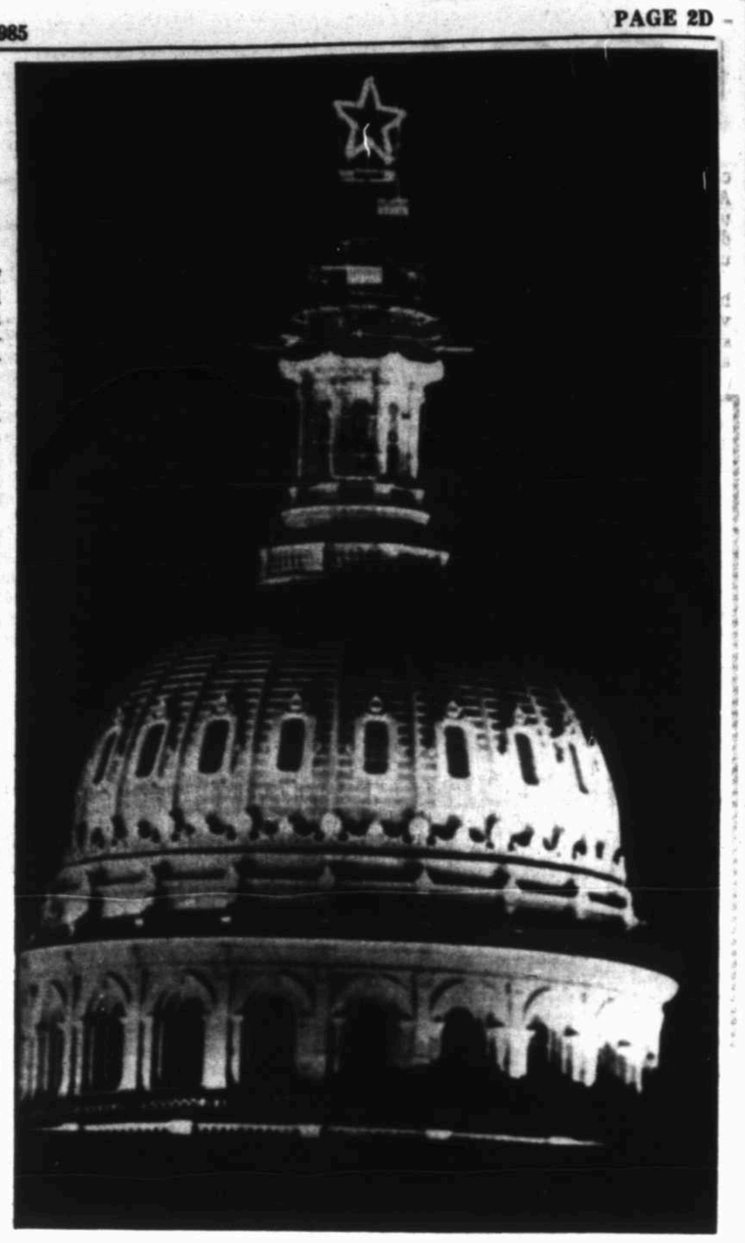

"The people either changed their mind, got cold feet, or saw something they didn't like," he said.

The Haufler's car was found on a dirt road a mile north of Interstate 10 and a half-mile west of Texas 16, police said.

In a similar incident, Kay Lane, the wife of InterFirst Bank Austin chairman Robert Lane, was tied up Dec. 9 by a gunman who forced his way into the couple's west Austin home after posing as a flower deliveryman.

She was bound with tape by the man, who then called her husband at the bank and demanded a $200,000 ransom.

The extortionist left the home, and Mrs. Lane freed herself and called her husband to tell him not to pay the ransom. The extortionist never appeared at the place where the ransom was to be paid.

When the Goddess of Liberty statue atop the Texas Capitol was removed for repairs Nov. 24, it left a vacant spot in a prominent place. Monday the spot was filled by an illuminated star, adding to the Christmas spirit in downtown Austin.

Goddess of Liberty under guard after 'veiled threat'

AUSTIN (AP) — A 24-hour guard is being kept on Texas' Goddess of Liberty statue because of a "veiled threat" from a religious group, state architect Roy Graham says.

Graham told a House committee Tuesday that a religious group near Irving implied it might try to damage the statue because it considers it, and the Statue of Liberty, "graven images."

The goddess was removed Nov. 24 from atop the Capitol and was taken to the American Foundry at Rhome, north of Fort Worth, for cleaning and repair. The metal figure, which perched on the Capitol for 97 years, will be recast and a duplicate put back in place.

"She is under 24-hour guard in a warehouse," Graham told the House Committee on Cultural and Historical Resources.

Although no one has bothered the statue, Graham said there was "a veiled threat" in a pamphlet distributed by a religious group in Irving shortly before the goddess was taken down.

But the fundamentalist minister who said he made the statement to which Graham referred called the architect's actions "ridiculous" and denied he ever advocated illegal destruction of the statue.

"I made the statement that if I was to go down to Austin and take a rope and throw it to the top of the state Capitol and pull that thing down, they would put me in jail because they care more for that goddess than they do for humanity," the Rev. Donald Orand told The Dallas Morning News.

Orand said he made the statement during a tent revival sermon in Garland and the sermon was printed in a pamphlet and mailed last month to Gov. Mark White and members of the state Legislature, the News said.

Midland pharmacist gets probation in drug case

From Staff Reports

A 42-year-old Midland pharmacist was sentenced to 10 years probation Tuesday by 142nd District Court Judge Pat Baskin after pleading guilty to possession of a controlled substance and possession of a stolen prescription.

"Drugs are taken to make you feel better. You've got to decide on some other basis that you're going to feel better not taking them," Baskin told James C. Murphy, who was arrested Sept. 10 while working in the pharmacy at Furr's on Big Spring Street and Scharbauer Drive.

"It's in your hands, and your hands have not proven to be that strong in recent times," said Baskin, warning Murphy he would be sent to the penitentiary if he violated the terms of his probation.

Murphy received 10 years probation for each charge, both of which were third-degree felonies with a penalty range of two to 10 years and a fine up to $5,000.

"He's not proud of himself," said defense attorney Stephen Blythe of Temple after Murphy described his problems with drug abuse. The defendant had been caught with five capsules of Demerol, a pain-killer.

"He is on rock bottom — he is fighting his way back up," Blythe said. "The man has learned his lesson."

A representative of the Texas State Board of Pharmacy testified that Murphy is a good candidate for rehabilitation through the board's impaired-pharmacist program, and might eventually get his pharmacist's license back.

But First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado asked Baskin to impose some prison time on Murphy.

"Because he is a professional, he should have known better," Rosado said.

FAA says it will probe airlines' maintenance

DALLAS (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration says it will investigate maintenance practices of every major U.S. air carrier in the wake of big fines levied against some airlines, it was reported today.

The probe is to begin within the next year and is intended to see how well airlines are maintaining their fleets seven years after deregulation began, the Dallas Times Herald reported in a continuing series of stories on air safety.

Already this year, FAA investigations have resulted in a $1.5 million fine against American Airlines for poor maintenance, and a proposed $284,000 fine against Continental Airlines for pilot training and maintenance violations.

During the last year, a special evaluation at Northwest Orient turned up a long list of record-keeping and other paper-work problems. A United Airlines audit has been completed with criticism of the carrier's practice of delaying repairs, and audits at Western and Eastern airlines are under way.

Anthony Broderick, the associate FAA administrator in charge of aviation standards, said the Eastern and Western evaluations are part of the overall maintenance investigation.

"What we have done is decided that we are going to make a formal attempt to schedule all airlines through and coordinate those inspections across the board," he said.

Some airline critics believe maintenance problems have become even more critical this year, the newspaper said.

Investigators are studying maintenance factors in the Aug. 22 runway fire that killed 54 in a British Airtours 737 at Manchester, England, and the Sept. 6 crash of a Midwest Express DC-9 at Milwaukee that killed all 31 aboard.

But the airline industry is adamant in defending its maintenance programs, and Thomas Tripp — spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the 30 largest U.S. airlines — said none of them compromised maintenance to save money.

"We have not seen evidence that our maintenance systems and programs have any major faults or systemic disorders," Tripp said. "Even during the worst times, the deepest parts of the recession a few years ago, we had the same level of maintenance as we have today."

But according to federal documents, improperly maintained airplanes are used to fly passengers on hundreds of flights, and officials are finding problems even in routine inspections.

Federal documents obtained by the Times Herald show Southwest Airlines paid a $40,000 penalty in 1983 for flying five Boeing 737s on 2,234 flights without repairing rusted floor beams, partitions and bulkheads near lavatories.

The FAA has created special audit teams, composed of FAA employees and national experts, to carry out the new inspection program after admitting it might not have enough inspectors for routine examinations that check airlines for proper plane maintenance.

"It turns out that over the last five or 10 years, in part because of staffing shortages, the agency has only looked at areas it thought had a problem," Broderick said.

Though denying that it had operated unsafe aircraft, American has added 250 mechanics and pledged to hire another 300 before year's end.

Correspondence obtained by the Times Herald show Eastern pilots are worried the airline is delaying repairs on planes and then forcing those jets into the air.

Computer stolen from Burger King

From Staff Reports

A computer and printer worth a total of $1,000 were reported stolen from a Burger King restaurant at 4805 N. Midkiff in one of several burglaries reported to local law-enforcement agencies. The burglary occurred early Tuesday, reports said.

In other reports, a $150 rifle was among items totaling $395 reported stolen Tuesday from the home of James Gary Smith, Star Route B, Box 133, according to reports.

Also among the items taken in the Tuesday burglary of the home near County Road 300 East were an $80 shotgun and an $80 cassette player, reports said.

Michael Anthony Wynn, 1323 E. Estes, reported the loss of a $400 watch and a $250 cable box in a Monday burglary, reports said.

A $1,500 tape machine was reported stolen by Bill Crites, Route 11, Box 1126, from the bed of his pickup. The theft occurred Dec. 11 while the pickup was parked at 2800 W. Illinois, reports said. Also taken was a $200 pump.

Researchers find computers cheaper than wind tunnels

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Aeronautical researchers at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base have found they can use computer models to test aircraft designs, at about one-10th the cost of using wind tunnels.

Since the days of the Wright brothers, researchers have used wind tunnels to test airframe designs by subjecting scale models to airflow examinations.

Now, a research group led by Joseph J.S. Shang at Wright-Patterson's Aeronautical Systems Division is using a hookup to a National Aeronautics and Space Administration computer in California to do the tests in less time and more cheaply.

Recently, Shang's group simulated a flight of the X-24C, an old Air Force aerospace research vehicle, at six times the speed of sound. The Air Force had conducted wind tunnel tests on the X-24C's airframe in 1974 and the data were still available for comparison.

Shang said his researchers had found differences of only 2 to 5 percent when they compared their findings with the original wind tunnel results.

He said the X-24C wind tunnel tests would cost $500,000 today. The computer simulation cost $56,000.

The complex computer program needed for the tests must be able to simulate the interaction of shock waves that develop around an airframe moving at six times the speed of sound.

Shang, an aerodynamicist who has been conducting wind tunnel research at Wright-Patterson since 1967, said computer technology only recently has made such simulations possible. His group uses a Defense Department data network to hook up to a computer at NASA's Ames Research Center to perform the tests.

Shang's group of six to eight researchers is one of only two in the nation that has been able to simulate all aspects of a flight at once, including airflow around a vehicle. The other group is at NASA's Ames Center.

He calls the technique "computational aerodynamic simulation," or a "numerical wind tunnel."

The computer model resembles a video game. Colorful graphics show airflow patterns and gradations of temperature and pressure on the aircraft's surface. Improvements to the system eventually will allow the researcher to move the image about on the screen by using a steering stick.

U.S. TV to broadcast British Christmas Lessons and Carols

NEW YORK (AP) — Within the soaring, reverberant walls of King's College, Cambridge, simple songs work best — a clue, perhaps, to the popularity of the yearly broadcasts of the Ceremony of Nine Lessons and Carols from Britain.

Nothing could be simpler, nor more moving, than the sound of a single boy soprano opening the service with the first verse of "Once in Royal David's City." And to many ears, no sound surpasses the glory of a skilled choir of men and boys cutting loose in the acoustical splendor of the chapel.

This year, Americans will be able to hear the service live on Christmas Eve at 10 a.m. EST courtesy of American Public Radio, and then see it by tape delay at 10 p.m. EST on PBS television affiliates. APR affiliates are also allowed to rebroadcast the service once.

While the service is well worth seeing — the 15th-century chapel of King's College is one of the wonders of late Gothic art and the choristers are so darned cute in their starched collars — the music is really the thing.

The ceremony is digitally encoded and relayed by satellite. However, says Nick Nash of APR, "It sounds better in living rooms in California than it does in the chapel."

The service of Lessons and Carols has the feeling of something ancient, however, the tradition goes back only a century — and not to Cambridge.

The service was invented in Truro, a cathedral town well off the beaten path in southwestern England, in 1878. King's College adopted the service in 1918, and in 1919 set the tradition of opening with "Once in Royal David's City." However, credit for the worldwide fame of the Nine Lessons and Carols belongs to the BBC, which began broadcasting it in 1928.

Recordings of the service, under the direction of Sir David Willcocks, are Christmas perennials on radio and in record shops.

This year's service includes several familiar carols: "Ding Dong Merrily on High," "Adam Lay Ybounden," "While Shepherd Watcheds" and "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing." But the choir's current director, Stephen Cleobury, is mixing in some modern material, including "Jerusalem Rojos for Joy" — if composer Judith Weir has completed it by then.

Other less familiar music will include: "The Oxen," by Phillip Radcliffe; "One Star," by contemporary opera composer Peter Maxwell Davies; "Joys Seven," set by Cleobury; and "Bethlehem Down" by Peter Warlock, an early 20th century composer.

APR has broadcast the service since 1979, when Nash negotiated U.S. rights from the BBC.

Nash said the idea was planted several years ago when he telephoned his father on Christmas Eve, and caught him listening tearfully to a recording from King's. "It was the innocence of the kids' voices that just got to him," he said.

That sound is rarely heard in this country, except in a very few churches or when a choir goes on tour. In Cambridge, however, one can hear it almost every day.

King's College Choir sings at an Evensong service every weekday afternoon, and listeners have ample time after that service to walk up King's Parade to St. John's College to hear the choir in its gloomy 19th-century chapel. Daily services are also the rule in English cathedrals — all them splendidly sung and poorly attended.

The Carol services, however, seem to be gaining in popularity.

"There is something fulfilling about knowing you are virtually part of a worldwide congregation," said Nash.

He recalled a letter from a woman in suburban Minneapolis, who lost track of everything while listening to the choir. "I burned my sweet potatoes," she said, "and didn't care."

Reagan's persuasive powers rescue tax overhaul bill

By MIKE ROBINSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan jawboned his way to the rescue of his tax overhaul effort with his dramatic visit to Capitol Hill and a campaign of persuasion that lasted until the final hours, GOP lawmakers say.

"He called me in the cloakroom this morning," Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., said Wednesday after the House reversed its action in refusing even to consider the tax bill.

Dornan was among 56 GOP vote-switchers who cleared the way for House approval of the tax bill Wednesday night. Reagan called to ask his support.

"I said, 'Mr. President, this is so important we have to discuss it in the Oval Office,'" Dornan said. "He said, 'Bob, can't we talk this out on the phone. They've got me booked wall to wall.' I said, 'This is so important, it has to be the Oval Office.' He said, 'Okay, Bob, one o'clock.'"

And if Reagan had denied him the audience?

"I still would have voted for it if we had talked it out on the phone," Dornan said. "He has never said no to me." This time it was mutual.

If there were Republicans with qualms remaining about a vote for the Democratic-drafted measure, it didn't show: the House shunned a roll call and passed the bill on a voice vote and sent it to the Senate.

Unlike last time, however, the House approved the preliminary rule needed to take up the bill on a 258-168 roll call. Voting yes were 188 Democrats and 70 Republicans. Voting no were 58 Democrats and 110 Republicans.

Only 14 Republicans voted to consider the bill last week, prompting House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., to pronounce the measure dead unless the president could round up 50 to 75 votes.

Like other vote switchers, Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., praised Reagan's pilgrimage to Capitol Hill on Tuesday to urge the House Republican Conference to muster more support for the bill.

"I was looking for a reason to help him and he gave it to me," Hyde said. He asked Reagan at the GOP Conference meeting to pledge a veto unless the final version contained a $2,000 exemption for all taxpayers and features designed to promote business growth.

Reagan gave that pledge.

"I said, 'Mr. President, I'm very cynical about the Senate, but I'm not cynical about you.'" He switched.

Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., said that even before last week's vote she had promised Treasury Secretary James A. Baker to back the House plan — with the caveat that she would oppose any final version produced by a House-Senate conference committee if it ended deductions for state and local taxes.

"But nobody was talking about the rule (to consider the bill)," she said. She said she was irked at the rule's restrictions on amendments and voted against it in "a routine procedural protest," never dreaming the preliminary measure might fail.

"I was stunned," she said. "It was a legislative fluke."

Within hours, she and other GOP lawmakers were at the White House listening to Reagan's appeal. "I wanted to say, 'Mr. President, I think you're right that the process should move forward, but as far as I'm concerned state and local tax deductibility are off the table.'"

While waves of GOP lawmakers were being ushered into the White House, presidential legislative liaison Marion B. Oglesby set up a lobbying operation in the Capitol adjacent to the office of House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill.

And Baker stalked potential vote switchers across Capitol Hill. He found Rep. George M. O'Brien, R-Ill., at a 7:30 p.m. reception for industrial-state lawmakers hosted by Rep. Nancy L. Johnson, R-Conn.

Baker knew O'Brien from 1980 when he was manager of Vice President George Bush's run for the GOP presidential nomination and the Illinois lawmaker was an enthusiastic Bush backer. He now put the arm on O'Brien.

"Jim Baker said the president needed me," O'Brien said. Reagan "has been my leader for a long time. I don't really feel comfortable voting for the bill, but if it got to a one-vote margin, I think I'd have to bite the bullet. He's my top gun and I think I owe him one."

Lawmakers scoffed at any suggestion that public works projects or any such traditional blandishments were dangled as a lure to potential vote-switchers.

"It's not like the president comes down and says, 'Do you want a dam in your district,'" said Rep. David Martin, R-N.Y., who did not switch his vote. "That's not the way the president operates."

A top Republican aide, speaking on condition he not be quoted by name, did say that in a meeting in Michel's office, White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan told lawmakers that "You want to have the president out there" at campaign time. "Michel said nothing," the staffer said.

A number of lawmakers and aides said House members felt ruffled at the manner in which administration offficials did most of their dealing with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and other Democrats whose party controls the House.

They said they noticed a new "sensitivity" to Republican concerns after GOP lawmakers sent the White House a message in the form of defeating the rule.

"I don't make any point that our fur was appropriately stroked" after the rule failed, "although that is a big deal with some people," Hyde said. "The prima donna factor is important in politics."

House passage of bill celebrated, criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief author of a sweeping tax overhaul bill celebrated its House passage with champagne and President Reagan hailed it as a historic step toward tax fairness, but opponents complained that House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill had pulled a parliamentary fast one.

The House, on a voice vote late Tuesday, passed a broad overhaul of the income tax code, sending it to the Senate for action next year and salvaging what Reagan described as the top domestic priority of his second term.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means committee, celebrated the vote with champagne, to the cheers of a platoon of lobbyists who worked with his panel on the bill.

"We just couldn't put this bill to bed," he said. "It was an active piece of legislation."

"No longer will taxpayers be forced to pay their taxes while their neighbors get off without paying a dime," said Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., whose own tax plan was a model for Reagan's. "It's a true victory for the American people."

Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., said, "This bill moves toward the goal of requiring corporate America to pay its fair share of America's overall tax burden."

Not everyone was celebrating.

Some Republicans protested after the rapid voice vote that O'Neill had moved too swiftly in declaring the measure passed.

O'Neill said he acted because he no one stood up to request a recorded roll call, adding that he was "awed" by the turn of events.

After O'Neill declared the bill passed, Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, got up and asked for a recorded vote — a request that requires unanimous consent once action on legislation has been completed. But Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., blocked the move by objecting to Archer's request.

The White House, which worked hard to salvage the measure after it was derailed by the House last week, welcomed Tuesday's action.

Reagan personally lobbied GOP members to keep the measure alive so the Republican-run Senate could work on it next year, and promised at least 50 Republicans would vote for the measure.

"Today, the House of Representatives moved us one historical step closer toward a new tax code for America. I congratulate the members of both parties who worked together to enable the long and arduous process of tax reform to go forward," the president said in a statement.

"We now look to the Senate to move quickly and to make all necessary changes to ensure that the final bill is unequivably pro-family, pro-jobs and pro-growth."

Provisions of three tax overhauls compared

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — Three plans for overhauling the federal income tax were under discussion in the House on Tuesday but only two of them were voted on.

The bill recommended last May by President Reagan was talked about only as a benchmark. It was used as the pattern for the other two but, in effect, rejected by the Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee.

The House considered the committee plan and the substitute put together by Republicans, picking the committee plan on a voice vote late Tuesday.

Here is a comparison of major provisions in the three plans:

— Tax Rates. Reagan: 15 percent, 25 percent and 35 percent. Democrats: 15 percent, 25 percent, 35 percent and 38 percent. Republicans: 15 percent, 25 percent, 35 percent and 37 percent. Under Reagan's bill, a couple could have taxable income, after deductions, of up to $70,000 before moving into the 35 percent bracket; under the Democratic plan, that threshold would be $43,000 and under the GOP version, $65,000.

— Exemptions. Reagan: $2,000 a person. Democrats: $2,000 for non-itemizers, $1,500 for itemizers. Republicans: $2,000 for all but the 10 percent who would be in the top bracket.

— Standard deductions. Reagan: $2,900 for single people d.g $4,000 for couples. Democrats: $2,950 and $4,400. Republicans: $2,828 and $4,600.

— Two-earner couples. All three plans would end the special deduction designed to offset part of the "marriage penalty."

— Interest. All would continue full deduction of mortgage interest on the principal home. Reagan: Limit non-business interest deductions to the sum of $5,000 plus an amount equal to investment income. Democrats: Limit to $20,000 (couple) or $10,000 (single) plus interest on a second home plus investment income. Republicans: Generally the same as Democrats' except no consumer interest — credit cards, car loans and the like — could be deducted.

— Itemized Deductions. Reagan: Repeal deduction for state and local taxes paid. Democrats: Retain that deduction in full. Republicans: No deduction for sales tax. Other deductions — except for charity and mortgage interest — would be lumped together; the first $1,000 and 70 percent of the rest would be deductible.

— Fringe benefits. Reagan: Tax the first $120 per year of employer-paid health insurance, the first $300 for family plan; the first $50,000 of group life insurance premiums and $5,000 of death benefit. Democrats: Keep benefits tax-free. Republicans: Tax first $50,000 of group life insurance.

— Retirement. Reagan: Allow spouse who doesn't work outside the home the same $2,000-a-year maximum contribution to Individual Retirement Accounts available to the employed. For a couple, that would mean $4,000 a year. Repeal 401(k) plans that permit a worker to forgo receipt of a portion of wages and have employer put it aside into a pension plan. Democrats: Keep present $250-a-year limit on unemployed spouse's IRA; keep 401(k) but limit annual contribution to $7,000. Republicans: $2,000-a-year IRA for unemployed spouse; limit 401(k) to $11,000 a year.

— Capital Gains. Reagan: Tax 50 percent at top rate of 17.5 percent. Democrats: Tax 58 percent at a top rate of 22 percent. Republicans: Tax 55 percent at top rate of 20 percent.

— Minimum tax. All three bills would toughen special levies aimed at requiring profitable corporations and wealthy investors to pay some tax regardless of how many deductions they use.

— Investment credit. Reagan: Repeal this provision, under which the government pays 10 percent of the cost of certain equipment. Democrats: Repeal it. Republicans: Allow 5 percent credit for purchase of U.S.-made equipment.

— Depreciation. The three plans would reduce present benefit, which permits businesses to recover through the tax system the cost of machinery and buildings. Republicans' generally would be most generous, Democrats' least generous, and Reagan in between.

— Corporate rates. Reagan: Top rate of 33 percent, lower rates for small business. Democrats: Top 36 percent, better rates than Reagan's for small business. Republicans: Top rate of 33 percent, phased in over five years, with same rates as Democrats for small business.

— Meals and entertainment. Reagan: Permit business-meal deduction of $25 per person plus half the excess; no deductions for most entertainment, including sports tickets. Democrats: Deduct 80 percent of meals and entertainment. Republicans: Same as Democrats'.

The Thurmond bill, which is more to the NRA's liking, would ban sales of the bullets imported or made after the measure became law but would allow bullets currently in stock to be sold.

After the House vote, Hughes said the fight is not over yet.

"The National Rifle Association still opposes, and is expected to attempt to eliminate in the Senate or in conference, the (House) provision which bans the sale of several million rounds of already existing ammunition," Hughes said. "I intend to fight to retain these provisions."

Hughes said there would have been "an all out fight" in the House "if police organizations weren't all together in support of the bill, and working on individual members. They're on the warpath."

NRA spokesman Dave Warner said he expects his organization to remain neutral if Thurmond accepts the House version.

Commissary cigarette change deleted

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — A Senate plan to force an increase in cigarette prices at military exchanges and commissaries has been deleted from the Pentagon's fiscal 1986 budget, according to a Virginia congressman.

But the budget still includes a new provision that would force exchanges and package stores to purchase their liquor within the state where they operate, eliminating the savings the Pentagon now achieves through nationwide purchases, added Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va.

Daniel, the chairman of the readiness subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee, agreed to discuss the status of the unusual amendments on Tuesday as Congress struggled to pass a continuing resolution that would fund the Defense Department as well as other agencies in fiscal 1986.

House and Senate conferees had reached an agreement on the Pentagon's portion of that bill last Friday, but it was subsequently rejected by the House. The dispute centered on the total appropriation for the Pentagon, however, and no further changes involving the exchanges and commissaries were expected, Daniel indicated.

The issue of cigarette prices arose last month, with Sens. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, and David L. Boren, D-Okla., touching off an unusual battle pitting issues of health against military benefits.

The Senate proposed to force commissaries and exchanges to sell their tobacco products "at the local prevailing price," excluding state and local taxes. It would have done so by reducing the fiscal 1986 appropriation of $606.1 million for the commissaries by $77.7 million and ordering the Pentagon to make up that amount by raising tobacco prices.

"It makes no sense to be subsidizing the sales of these products and encouraging servicemen and women to use them by keeping their prices 20 to 35 percent lower on base," Boren argued.

The Pentagon counter-attacked, calling the plan a "dangerous precedent" that could undermine the manner in which military commissaries are funded as well as their value to servicemen as a form of compensation.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger charged the amendment would "establish the precedent of decreasing savings to the service member to offset the appropriations for commissaries."

When the matter went to conference, Daniel said he asked the House conferees to squelch the Senate plan and they succeeded in doing so.

"Smoking was not the issue," Daniel said. "The principal issue here was we didn't want to establish by law that you could start selling one commodity above cost in a commissary."

The House conferees did not enjoy the same success on the alcohol issue, however, Daniel said. Senate language that would require the exchange systems to buy beer and liquor inside the states where they operate was retained.

"That will cost an extra $10 million," Daniel said. "It seems to me contradictory.

"On one hand, we say with weapons we want them competed and bought at the lowest possible price, but now we turn around and say we don't want to compete this. Of course, some were looking at the extra revenue for states that will come from these purchases."

Daniel also said the House conferees had succeeded in staving off a flat ban on the construction and operation of fast-food franchises on military bases.

Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., has pushed such a ban on grounds the on-base franchises compete unfairly with merchants in surrounding communities. At his insistence, the Pentagon was already facing a moratorium on construction of restaurants pending completion of a new study by next spring.

Daniel said the conferees decided to stick with that language in the appropriations bill, rather than accept language added to the Senate version by Mattingly that would have flatly banned further spending.

British economist warns of U.S. debt levels

By CARL HARTMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, which now owes other countries more than $30 billion, could be $1 trillion in debt by 1990 if present policies continue, according to a study made public today by a British economist.

"From being the world's largest net creditor nation in 1982, it would be the world's largest debtor by 1986, and by 1990 its external debt, at over a trillion dollars, would substantially exceed the total debt of the developing countries," economist Stephen Marris says.

Marris outlined his views in a book-length work, "Deficits and the Dollar: the World Economy at Risk," written under the sponsorship of the Institute for International Economics, a private study group based in Washington.

U.S. officials on Tuesday calculated that last Oct. 1, the total U.S. foreign debt reached about $30.5 billion — possibly as high as $33 billion — and was growing by about $10 billion a month. At that rate, the United States would become the world's biggest debtor country next year, passing Brazil with its $103 billion debt to foreigners.

The World Bank estimates that the total debt of poor countries will be nearing $1 trillion at the end of 1985.

Marris bases his calculation on the international price of the dollar at the end of October, which dropped about 20 percent since February. As the dollar drops, so does the price of American goods to buyers in other countries, so that U.S. sales and earnings increase.

But because those earnings have been small, and U.S. savings are small too, the United States has been borrowing the savings of other countries.

Marris finds that the United States is still spending almost 50 percent more abroad than it earns, and accumulating foreign debt faster than any other developed country has ever done. He says the dollar has to go down a long way — another 25 percent to 30 percent — to prevent that deficit from getting worse.

"A time is bound to come, as the dollar's decline gathers momentum, when foreigners' willingness to invest their savings in the United States dries up faster than the U.S. economy's need for them," he says. "This may not happen until the dollar has gone quite a long way down. But when it does, a 'crunch' will develop in U.S. financial markets, and the economy will be headed for trouble."

By then he expects U.S. debt to have reached $400 billion or $500 billion, under the most optimistic scenario.

He sees even more trouble if the dollar goes down by too much: a doubling of inflation, higher interest rates and the worst economic situation since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

The solution to the problem, he said, is to trim the budget deficit — "the only certain way to increase U.S. savings to make up for the reduced supply of foreign savings."

Marris says that if other major industrial countries, particularly Japan, West Germany and Britain, stick to their present policies, a sharp drop in the price of the dollar would have "unpleasant consequences." He also sees a chance of greater prosperity for them.

"Paradoxically, by provoking such a strong and unsustainable rise in the dollar, Reaganomics has created the potential for a 'Reagan miracle' in Europe and Japan of the kind enjoyed by the United States in 1983-4," Marris says.

He thinks those nations could cut taxes and let their money supply grow. But he warns they could prosper in the long run only "if Europe and Japan did not make the same monumental mistake as the Reagan administration" — the mistake of letting budget deficits mount.

Marris is a former economic adviser to the head of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, a Paris group that links the governments of the United States and the other industrialized countries.

U.S. will have new gold coins in circulation by October

WASHINGTON (AP) — General-circulation gold coins will be offered for sale by the United States for the first time in 53 years, beginning next October, under legislation signed by President Reagan.

Reagan on Tuesday authorized the minting and sale of gold bullion coins with face values of $50, $25, $10 and $5. The $50 coin will contain 1 ounce of gold. The $25 coin will contain one-half ounce; the $10 coin one-fourth ounce; and the $5 coin one-tenth ounce.

The selling prices will fluctuate with the gold market and will not be tied to the nominal dollar designation on the coin, designed in large part to attract investors and collectors.

Gold was selling in New York on Tuesday at $320.75 a troy ounce.

The coins will be legal tender for their face value but will be sold by the Treasury Department at the higher market value, plus minting, marketing and distribution costs.

Profits from the sales are to be used to reduce the national debt.

Gold for the coins is to come from gold mined in the United States during the previous year, if available for no more than the average world price for the precious metal. If gold is not available at that price, gold already owned by the U.S. Treaury could be used.

In a statement, Reagan said that provision would effectively prohibit the Treasury from using gold held in U.S. reserves in producing the coins.

He said that would block "a potentially major source of revenue" at a time when the United States is trying to cut its budget deficit.

Reagan said he would work with Congress to win authority for the Treasury secretary "to use gold from sources, including the nation's reserves, that the secretary deems necessary or appropriate."

A model of a proposed $500,000, 90-foot-tall sculpture for downtown Pittsburgh as a tribute to the city's steel industry, has critics going wild.

Pittsburgh sculpture draws steely criticism

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A $500,000, 90-foot-tall abstract sculpture hailed as a tribute to the steel industry by supporters and dubbed by critics "a bird on a broken bar stool" dominated today's agendas of the City Council and Art Commission.

The nine-member commission gave tentative approval to the sculpture in a 4-2 vote on Dec. 7, and was hoping to make a final decision this afternoon.

"I want everybody to stand up and be counted," said commission Chairman Harold Corsini. "We want to clear the air. We want to tie up all the loose ends.

"There's a lot of diversity of opinion about it. The complaint I've heard most is how can you spend a half-million dollars on a sculpture that is a tribute to the steel industry when our steelworkers are starving?"

"It looks like a discarded windmill. We're getting a hunk of junk," said Councilwoman Michelle Madoff.

"I picture a huge piano stool topped by two hockey sticks mounted on a pivot," George Gazzam of Mount Washington said in a letter to one of Pittsburgh's two major newspapers.

"Seattle has its Space Needle. St. Louis has its arch. Pittsburgh may get a bird on a broken bar stool. Shame! Don't let it happen," wrote James McNally of McMurray.

Art adviser Alice Snyder, who proposed the project, hoped it would become the city's "signature piece" and symbolize "the history and energy of Pittsburgh through the appropriate use of materials and design."

The National Endowment for the Arts has contributed $50,000, the maximum possible, and Ms. Snyder has solicited $430,000 in private and corporate donations. The city council was considering donating $20,000.

The proposed work by New York sculptor Mark di Suvero is earmarked for a traffic island in Gateway Center, near where the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers converge to form the Ohio.

City officials say part of the controversy stems from sketches of an early model.

"It's a rough rendering," said Louise Brown, the city's director of parks and recreation. "I think it's very exciting. I'm not even sure I'll like it, but I think the magnificence, the grandeur will be truly exciting."

Her enthusiasm was not shared by everyone.

"One extinct smokestack from an idle U.S. Steel mill would be just as attractive and probably more symbolic," Dara Pozzuto of Forest Hills wrote in a letter to the editor.

NATION IN BRIEF

MacDonald conviction upheld

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court today upheld the conviction of Jeffrey MacDonald, a former Army doctor who was found guilty of the 1970 murders of his wife and two daughters.

"In much greater detail than we, the district judge considered every contention that MacDonald advanced...," said the 11-page opinion from the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. "There is no basis upon which any ruling in this case by a meticulous district judge can be overturned."

MacDonald was convicted by a U.S. District Court jury in Raleigh, N.C., in 1979 of fatally stabbing and bludgeoning his pregnant wife, Collette, 26, and his daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, while he was stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C.

He has insisted the slayings were committed by a band of drug-crazed hippies who invaded his home and chanted, "Acid is groovy; kill the pigs."

Major oil slick taints Mississippi

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For the second time in four weeks, a major oil slick has developed on the Mississippi River because a towboat rammed a railroad bridge that spans the river just south of Cape Girardeau in southeast Missouri.

U.S. Coast Guard officials said an accident Tuesday caused 180,600 gallons of No. 4 crude oil to spill into the river, creating a slick that stretched for 30 miles downstream towards Cairo, Ill.

The spill was labeled "a major pollution incident" by Chief Petty Officer Gregory Devore of the Coast Guard office in St. Louis. It was the second from an accident involving the railroad bridge, which is about 10 miles south of Cape Girardeau at Thebes, Ill.

Doonesbury lampoon spears law

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Posh Palm Beach's controversial worker indentification law, lampooned earlier this year by cartoonist Garry Trudeau, is unconstitutional, a federal judge has ruled.

The law required blue-collar workers to get fingerprinted and photographed and to carry identification cards while on the island town.

Palm Beach's ID card law received national attention this summer when it was compared to South Africa's "pass" law in the comic strip "Doonesbury."

More than 2½ years after Ignatius Wallace and Rochelle Vana, both of West Palm Beach, challenged the law, U.S. District Judge Norman Roettger this week ruled that the 45-year-old law imposed a burden on interstate commerce that outweighed local security interests.

You are hereby commanded to appear and answer before the Honorable 318th District Court of Midland County, Texas, at the Courthouse of said county in Midland, Texas, at or before 10:00 o'clock a.m. of the Monday next after the expiration of 20 days from the date of service of this citation, then and there to answer the petition of Dick Lee Pace and Carol Ann Pace, Petitioners, filed in said Court on the 13th day of December, 1985, being Cause No. DR-17,819 on the docket of said Court, and entitled, "In the Interest of A Child," the nature of which suit is a request to terminate the parental rights between Dorothy Gail Morris, the mother of a baby boy born November 14, 1984 in Tom Green County, Texas. Additionally, the Petitioners are seeking termination of all rights as between the unknown father and the minor child and to adopt the child.
The Court has authority to enter any judgment or decree in the child's best interest which will be binding upon you, including termination of parental rights, determination of paternity, consequent termination of all rights to the child, appointment of a conservator with authority to consent to the child's adoption, and to approve the legal adoption of the child by Petitioners.
ISSUED AND GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND SEAL OF SAID COURT AT MIDLAND, TEXAS, THIS 13th day of December, 1985.
CLERK OF THE DISTRICT COURT OF MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS
By: Mary Smelser, Deputy
