Iraq pushes U.N. limit

Bush condemns Baghdad, warns Saddam

■ U.S. to send Patriot missiles, 1,300 troops to Saudi Arabia.

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Iraq on Tuesday detained 44 U.N. inspectors for the second day in a row and accused them of being CIA spies as the crisis over Iraqi compliance with U.N. cease-fire terms appeared to be coming to a climax.

Troops surrounded the inspectors, who parked their cars in a circle to protect themselves and the videotapes of documents said to show details of Iraq's secret nuclear weapons program, its foreign suppliers and top Iraqi directors.

The U.N. Security Council late Tuesday demanded that Iraq immediately release the weapons inspectors, but in a television interview from Baghdad, the chief inspector said there was no sign Iraq was lifting the siege.

President Bush condemned Baghdad's "unacceptable behavior," and warned Saddam Hussein not to "miscalculate" as he did during the Gulf War.

"We don't want to see any more anguish inflicted on the Iraqi people, but overriding that is the international community's determination that these resolutions be fully complied with," Bush said in New York.

Underlining U.S. displeasure, a senior Pentagon official said 100 Patriot missiles and 1,300 troops would be sent to Saudi Arabia to ease that nation's concern over rising tensions in the Persian Gulf region.

And the 15-member Security Council unanimously adopted a statement insisting that Iraq release the inspectors and allow them to take whatever documents they feel they need.

Council statements do not carry the weight of resolutions, which may be enforced under international law. The council was expected to wait for Iraq's response before deciding whether to accept U.S. offers of helicopter gunships and warplanes to accompany U.N. in-

COST CONUNDRUM

Hospital tries to balance its expenses, care

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

Fact: Underused hospitals will continue to close — 440 over the next five years.

Fact: Insurers who pay for health care are expected to start demanding proof that high-tech, expensive tests and procedures actually work.

Fact: Health costs will account for 13 percent of this nation's gross national product by 1996 or $3,600 per American vs. $2,400 today.

Fact: Physicians unable to charge higher fees (in hospitals) probably will begin to do more procedures in their own offices. Doctor clinics and hospitals will compete.

At Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, the handwriting is on the wall — control costs now or face a growing population in search of health-care alternatives.

Dr. Larry Oliver, a nephrologist and chairman of MMH's utilization management review committee, is one of a number of physicians look-

Space is at premium in emergency room

By Chris Van Wagenen

Pick a night. Any night. Chances are the emergency room at Midland Memorial Hospital is bursting at the seams with patients seeking medical attention for everything from rashes to car injuries.

"I've been here four years and it hasn't gotten any better," said Dr. Lee Feierabend, an emergency-room doctor on duty recently. "There are times when we're waiting for space that we could be doing a lot more."

Feierabend's remarks are typical of what doctors and nurses face in the cramped quarters that make up E.R.

"I guess the most frustrating thing is when you have critical patients that need to be in a bed and we're handling heart attacks or other major trauma in the hallway."

Agreeing with that was Dr. Paul Best, director of MMH's emergency services. "We've had sick people being treated in the halls simply because we've had no place to put them because there were people even more sick in the (treatment) rooms."

According to the American College of Emergency Room Physicians, one emergency-room bed should service about 2,000 people a year. "We have eight rooms, so that would amount to 16,000 (patients). But we're seeing more than 30,000 a year," Best said.

Memorial officials say they're well aware of the problem, and, in fact, have addressed it in their long-range expansion plans that call for devoting up to 28,000 square feet to a new E.R/outpatient wing.

But that wing is at least two

CRITICAL CROSSROADS

When it comes to tackling the health care needs of the community, it's the hospital that must meet the challenges. In part four, hospital officials initiate management controls aimed at holding down costs. Unfortunately, that's not the case in the emergency room, where patients receive basic health care at a staggering price.

Kidnappers free Briton Jack Mann

■ Action raises hopes for further releases.

Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — In another breakthrough in the hostage crisis, kidnappers freed 77-year-old Briton Jack Mann on Tuesday after holding him for 865 days, and a Shiite Muslim leader said an American hostage may soon follow.

Walking painfully and stooped over, Mann was led by officials into a packed news conference at the Syrian Foreign Ministry, where he angrily denounced his captors for chaining him and ordering him around.

"This morning I started another dreadful day. . . . I wondered how many more months I've got to stay. . . . I wondered how much longer, how much longer, how much longer. Wondering how many more months I've got to stay here," the white-haired, former World War II pilot said in a hoarse, anguished whisper.

"My voice has gone after 2½ years of chaining, of saying: 'Do this, do that. Don't do that!' or 'Be quiet!'" Mann said, banging his hand on a table to illustrate the orders from his kidnappers.

Asked if he had any news of the other hostages, Mann said, "None at all." He started to continue, but British Ambassador Andrew Green interrupted.

At one point, Mann began a long explanation of how he was kidnapped in Beirut, but Green again cut him off when he started to meander. Mann sat quietly while officials made speeches.

As he was led from the room, he appeared dazed and disoriented by the bright television lights.

Senate passes bill to extend jobless benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a $6.1 billion Democratic measure Tuesday that would extend jobless benefits for up to 20 additional weeks, ignoring a threat by President Bush to veto the bill.

The lawmakers approved the legislation on a 69-30 vote, two more than what would be needed to pass the bill over a presidential veto.

Democratic leaders said they hoped the Senate and House could agree to a compromise version of the measure and send it to Bush as early as next week.

New book brings Rhett, Scarlett back with the wind

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Alexandra Ripley may be the first author to receive second billing on the cover of her own book. But the book is the sequel to "Gone With the Wind," and Ripley isn't about to complain about her name appearing below Margaret Mitchell's.

"There's a voice in this book and that is Margaret Mitchell's, that's what I was after," Ripley said in an interview Tuesday, a day before the scheduled release of the long-awaited "Scarlett: The Sequel to Margaret Mitchell's 'Gone With the Wind.'"

"It's such an easy shot; people can be so clever. 'Margaret Mitchell would have never done this.' 'This should have never been done.' When bad reviews start coming in, I could say they won't bother me, that's a lie; they will bother me. I'm just hoping to get more good reviews than bad reviews."

The book runs 823 pages, about 200 less than "Gone With the Wind." It closely follows Mitchell's style, with much of the action taking place from Scarlett's point of view.

And Ripley keeps Scarlett moving: from Melanie's funeral in Georgia, to an attempted reconciliation with Rhett in Charleston, to a journey to Ireland and the start of a new life.

Does Scarlett find a way to get him back? You won't find out until the last few pages. Other information, however, can be safely divulged:

■ Mammy dies shortly after Scarlett returns to Tara from Melanie's funeral. Rhett shows up to pay his respects, but rebuffs Scarlett and quickly returns to Charleston.

■ Ashley and Scarlett agree to be just friends and she even helps introduce him to the woman he ends up marrying.

■ Scarlett meets many of her relatives from both sides of the family and becomes especially close to her cousin Column O'Hara, a priest and a militant opponent of British rule in Ireland.

■ Scarlett and Rhett have a very brief fling in Charleston and she later gives

Health Care in the '90s CRITICAL CROSSROADS

Dr. Paul Best consults with an emergency room patient's family physician before proceeding with his treatment plan.

HOSPITAL: Containment falls on many

ing for new ways to cut costs without compromising care quality.

"The cost of medicine over the years hasn't been driven up by hospitals or physicians, but by uncontrolled factors."

Oliver said companies producing everything from high-tech equipment to pharmaceutical products have exaggerated the problem by trying to please ever-demanding stockholders seeking solid returns on their investments.

Still, MMH plods away.

Using a process called utilization review, doctors review doctors, test procedures, patients and hospital employees.

Part of that involves peer pressure, whereby doctors monitor expensive test procedures to determine who's doing them and how often.

In turn, MMH is monitored by the Texas Medical Foundation, which reviews tests charged to the government in the form of Medicare.

The hospital also consistently evaluates its most costly patients — some of whom can run up bills in excess of $100,000 — to determine the earliest possible discharge date.

Utilization review is mandated by Medicare, according to doctors associated with the program. They also think it's good idea.

Dr. Chris Hall, a pathologist at MMH, said the committee serves two basic purposes: to keep a lid on health-care expenses; and ascertain that such practices are not at the expense of a patient's health.

Hall said doctors and hospital administrators have a real incentive to watch costs, if for no other reason than Medicare-mandated diagnostic-related groups (DRG), which pay a fixed rate on procedures and care.

"They (Medicare) don't care if a patient stays two days or two years, because you're still going to be paid the same," Hall said. "That's why it's in the hospital's best interests to keep these (costs) as reasonable as possible."

But government-paid patients aren't the only ones reviewed. According to Hall, the committee looks at those who are independently wealthy and insured as well as the self-employed and medically indigent.

"One of the things we do here is make certain every step of the way that the same standards apply to everyone. We take a uniform approach to all people, no matter what their financial status is."

In addition to case management, laboratory tests also are reviewed on a regular basis.

Hall said part of his job is to advise physicians on what's needed for diagnostic workups, and where such tests can be done at the lowest possible rate.

"It's possible to spend a tremendous amount of money as far as lab testing goes. I think that results from two situations. The first is defensive medicine (malpractice). As long as physicians are running scared, you're always going to have that problem. The second reason is lack of continuity. We have a fragmented health system in this country."

Hall said that because there's no central bank containing a person's life-long history, patients actually can be tested repeatedly for the same symptoms if they move from doctor to doctor.

Like a number of hospitals around the nation, Memorial continues to make significant strides in the area of outpatient care.

According to Dr. Brian Mohr, a Midland cardiologist, more patients now spend less time inside a hospital.

He said that in cardiac catheterization procedures, patients spend six hours in a hospital, opposed to three days a few years ago.

"Hospitalization for a heart attack used to be three weeks. Now, if you keep someone longer than seven days, people get upset, so I think we've come a long way."

Mohr said physicians as well as hospitals constantly must raise the question of whether a given illness necessarily requires hospitalization.

"Every physician has to ask those kind of questions of him or herself everyday," Mohr said.

Agreeing was former hospital president and chief executive officer Ray Branson, who left MMH in August after 11 years.

"In a way, physicians are helping other physicians managing their patients efficiently, which in turn has resulted in shorter lengths of stay. . . . This is dramatically true in the case of Medicare."

But patients aren't Memorial's only target of cost containment.

Premiere Health Plan — a preferred provider organization started in October 1986 — is a network of Midland physicians who treat MMH employees as well as employees of other large area companies.

John Holt, who heads the local PPO network, which is similar to a health maintenance organization (HMO), said Premiere is a joint venture operated by MMH and physicians.

"Our physicians adhere to a fee ceiling, sort of like Medicare," Holt said. "In that sense, we provide a cost-containment advantage."

Hospital employees who go outside the system are penalized with higher deductibles and lower reimbursement levels. There is no deductible for seeing a PHP physician.

Before Premiere, MMH depended on a self-funded insurance program, which allowed its employees to make use of providers outside of Midland.

"Midland Memorial is still self-insured, but now they've added the PPO component. Before, health-care costs were unrestrained because employees could go anywhere. There were no limits on prices that could be charged and there was no utilization management, not even requirements on second opinions," he said.

Agreeing was Hall. "What we wanted to do was create a financial incentive for employees to use the physicians we felt had the best track records where costs were concerned."

SPACE: Doctors face cramped quarters in E.R.

MMH's L-shaped E.R., which includes a hallway for a waiting room, loads up fast each night between 5 and 9, according to hospital officials. And sometimes that spells major problems.

"There have been nights down here where I haven't came close to sitting down . . . just move, move, move 12 hours straight. Sometimes, for reasons that defy description, we'll get a bunch of abusive patients in here . . . the ones who are intoxicated or fighting, who have to be brought under control by the police . . . that can make for a long night," Best said.

Joseph I. O'Neill III, president of MMH's board of trustees, said he's urged other board members to spend some time in the E.R. if they had a hard time believing that such conditions exist.

"And I welcome any other citizen in Midland to do that. Find out for yourself, that's what I did. The waiting room is a hallway. It's wholly inadequate. Do we need another emergency room? Unquestionably."

Rod Hicks, a critical-care nurse, said MMH has just three major trauma rooms and five others used for general treatment, in addition to five other beds that are set up in the hall.

Hicks said many times patients bring their entire families, who follow them right into treatment, adding to the confusion of a busy night. "When you're trying to take care of someone and they have five people in tow, that slows you down quite a bit."

Dr. James Humphreys, vice president of MMH's medical affairs, said part of the problem is that many patients who come to the E.R. have no ties to a regular physician.

And that number is growing.

"I'd say the situation has worsened over the last several years," Humphreys said.

Of those who make use of the compact setting, a survey conducted by MMH over a six-day period in February found that 28 percent of its patients were insured, 23 percent uninsured, 20 percent unemployed, while another 28 percent either held Medicaid or Medicare.

"And that sounds like a better mix than it is."

Humphreys said where Medicaid (17 percent) was concerned, the hospital receives little or no payment for patients being treated for what he described as "non-emergency" conditions.

E.R. care is also more costly — about $140 a visit vs. $40 to see a physician in a non-emergency setting.

Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, president of Midland County Hospital District's board of directors, estimated that MMH loses about $1 million a year on emergency-room care.

"The emergency room is a money pit — that's the best way I can describe it," he said. "We lose a fortune there, mainly to indigent care."

Wiesenfeld and other hospital officials hope the Community Health Care Clinic located on Delano Street will siphon off some of that flow once adult treatment begins after Jan. 1.

"We see a lot of people for what I call routine medical treatment," Best said. "It may be a sore throat or a child with an infected ear."

Because of the space shortage, doctors also say people must wait longer to see a physician.

Best said he believes the eventual expansion should answer some of those problems as well as allow the hospital to increase its staff accordingly.

Across the country, studies have shown that emergency-room usage is on the rise.

Best attributed that to a number of reasons.

"First of all, you have a significant part of the population, 28 percent, who don't have any type of insurance. Combine that with the rise in violent crime and you can pretty much understand the situation."

MMH staffs its E.R. with one full-time physician — space, again being a primary consideration.

Fererabend said it's just not feasible to have more than one doctor on duty. "It would only complicate the problem because we would be tripping over each other."

Health Care in the '90s CRITICAL CROSSROADS

Founding board continues to build on hospital tradition

Satellite specialized treatment centers like the Allison Cancer Center and the Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion are vital to the comprehensive care offerings of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff Writer

From Midland Memorial Hospital's humble beginnings in 1950, to an institution commanding a $140 million operating budget with plans to expand, the founding governors always have been there.

It is a relationship many Midlanders don't understand — a relationship that continues to grow as the hospital makes new strides in health care and related technology.

"I think the most important thing that's never been understood by this community is that no one has ever gotten a dime out of this hospital. Not the board of governors, not the board of trustees," Kenny Jastrow said.

Jastrow, president of Midland Memorial Foundation and its 40-member governing board, said the only motivation behind the hospital's founding men and women is seeing that quality care is provided to area residents.

The governors, who appoint an acting 17-member board of trustees that are directly involved in day-to-day hospital operations, came together as a group when Midlanders were depending on other cities for their health care.

"These were 25 of our leading citizens at the time, most of them money people," Jastrow said. "Over the years, they were the ones who were in a financial position to help the hospital when it needed help."

Although that responsibility changed following the 1977 election to create a hospital taxing district, the foundation is still very much involved in activities of the hospital — in particular, being there to handle situations that warrant certain fund-raising activities.

It also oversees more than $1 million in annual donations given by local residents as well as by those living outside the county who, for one reason or another, believe the hospital has made a difference in their lives.

"One of our favorite sayings over the years has been 'putting the cherry on top,' Jastrow said. "It might be a piece of equipment or something like that. . . . They (various governors) would go to their friends and that's how we would raise the money."

Ed McGruder, another member of the governing board, said he remembers hearing from other governors that when times got tough and the hospital ran into red ink, all of them would get together to "extinguish" the debt.

"This system has worked very well. It's sort of a three-legged animal, but it still works," McGruder said.

Since 1978, the foundation has raised $14 million. Those funds have been used to build such landmarks as the Allison Cancer Treatment Center and introduction of new services such as the hospital's radiological lab.

"And the foundation continues to serve that purpose," said McGruder, who remains baffled as to why attacks continue to be mounted against the governors, who, he said, only have the best interests of the community at heart.

Jastrow agreed. "The crux of the whole thing is we need to operate the way we're operating now. Is there any way for a person to come in cold and have an idea of what's gone on in the past? They (hospital district directors) have to have a method to rely on . . . people who have been in this game awhile. That's why this functions so well the way it does."

Each year the foundation receives what it calls a "wish list" from the medical staff.

It was the foundation that saw to the building of the lead-plated shell that houses the Magnetic Resonance Imaging Center at the Abell-Hangar Medical Pavilion located south of the hospital.

And it was the board of governors, according to McGruder, who convinced the Abell-Hanger Foundation to donate $1 million needed for the building's construction.

Jastrow said it isn't just people with money who have taken care of the hospital and its needs over the years. "It's that guy who gave us $1. He's just as important as the other guy who donated $1 million in my book."

As to those who view the foundation as some deep dark secret, Jastrow refuted those claims.

"That hospital is everyone's hospital," he said. "There are no secrets here. We have an audit of our books done every year. Anyone can check that. We've worked hard to make this the best hospital around."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Look for sunny skies, 80

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 80 and northeast winds at 5 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be clear with a low near 50.

Thursday is expected to be clear with a high near 80.

After an overnight low of 56, Tuesday's high was 72 compared with the record high for that date of 101 set in 1977. The record low for today's date was 42 set in 1989.

STATE

Thunderstorms raked North Texas with torrents of rain, 60-mph winds and golf ball-sized hail Tuesday, flooding streets and knocking down trees and power lines.

By late afternoon, a cold front stretched across the state from Dallas to near Junction and then to Del Rio. An upper level disturbance ahead of the front triggered the thunderstorm activity and prompted a severe thunderstorm watch for much of the state.

No tornado activity was expected with the storms but the weather service warned of dangerous straight line winds.

Winds of 60 mph were reported in Collin, Denton and Hunt counties and gusts to 70 mph occurred in Hopkins County.

Tree damage and downed power lines were reported across northeast and northcentral Texas. Some roof damage was sustained.

Golf ball-sized hail was reported near Sulphur Springs, while dime-sized hail fell across other parts of North Texas, the weather service said.

Thunderstorms also fell in parts of southeast and southcentral Texas Tuesday afternoon.

The weather service forecast clear skies and higher temperatures today in North and West Texas. Decreasing cloudiness in the south. Highs in the upper 60s in the mountains of West Texas, upper 70s in the north and 80s in the south.

NATION

Rain and storms were scattered over much of the eastern half of the nation Tuesday, with locally heavy rain across the South.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms reached across Oklahoma and northeast Texas, the lower Mississippi Valley and into the Tennessee Valley and lower Ohio Valley, the central Gulf of Mexico states, northern and southern Florida, southwestern Georgia, the Carolina coast, and southeastern Virginia.

Wind gusted to 60 mph during thunderstorms in Oklahoma, damaging some roofs and power lines, the National Weather Service said.

Hail as big as golf balls fell near Sulphur Springs, Texas, and hail an inch in diameter fell in Oklahoma at Durant, Mannsville and Dougherty, the weather service said.

Showers and thunderstorms also extended across southeastern Minnesota, central Iowa, southern Wisconsin, northern Illinois and southern Lower Michigan.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 2.97 inches at Beaumont-Port Arthur; 1.72 inches at Monroe, La.; 1.70 inches at Muscle Shoals, Ala.; 1.41 inches at Huntsville, Ala., and Tupelo, Miss.; 1.31 inches at Chattanooga, Tenn.; 1.16 inches at Birmingham, Ala.; 1.15 inches at Columbus, Miss., and 1.09 inches at Crossville, Tenn.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

LIMIT: Iraq continues to detain 44 U.N. inspectors

spection teams in Iraq.

Late Tuesday, Iraq sent a letter to French Ambassador Jean-Bernard Merimee in which it agreed to allow U.N. inspectors to use helicopters for their inspections, a major demand of the Security Council, said British Ambassador David Hannay said.

But Iraqi troops were still surrounding the inspection team at about 5 a.m. today (8 p.m. CDT Tuesday). William Nelson, one of the inspectors, said in an interview with KRON television of San Francisco that the Iraqis had allowed food and water to be brought to the inspection team.

Iraq sent another letter to Merimee on Tuesday complaining about the behavior of the inspectors, in particular the chief of the U.N. inspection team, David Kay, who is an American.

At a news conference in Baghdad, Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz accused the team leader of being "an officer of the U.S. intellience service," the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Kay called the charge "completely ridiculous and untrue." Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams called it a "ludicrous allegation."

As for Iraqi charges that they had had "trouble" from his team, Kay said, that if his team had a problem "it is because we are very close to finding out the true scope and nature of the Iraqi program."

On Monday, Kay's U.N. team was detained for 12 hours in a Baghdad building after finding what they said was evidence that Iraq has been trying to develop nuclear weapons. Iraqi troops seized the papers, and although some were returned early Tuesday, U.N. officials said key documents were missing.

When the inspectors began their work Tuesday, using a video camera at a building of the Iraqi Atomic Energy Commission, they found documents that gave a fuller picture of Iraq's secret nuclear program, detailing the people overseeing the work and the foreign companies that supplied nuclear materials, Kay said.

But Iraqi troops surrounded the U.N. team and refused to let it take away papers and film of documents gathered in the unannounced search. Iraqi officials said the inspectors would not be allowed to leave unless they surrendered the material.

Kay reported that the inspectors were holed up in six cars and a bus parked in a circle outside the commission. They were blocked from leaving by 60 armed Iraqi security men at midday, and were still surrounded more than 12 hours later.

Kay said the team had "no intention of giving up that film." The inspection teams routinely videotape and photograph the documents they examine.

Kay spoke in several live interviews with Cable News Network from Baghdad, using a portable satellite telephone. The unusual blow-by-blow account of a developing international incident seemed intended to pressure Saddam's government to back off.

"It's essential for the international community's long-term stability that inspectors have the right to freely inspect, to collect data, to remove it for analysis," Kay said.

Iraqi officials claimed the team took personnel records unrelated to Iraq's nuclear research program. On Monday, the Iraqis claimed they objected to not receiving receipts for the material.

Kay said, "We were taking information on the top personnel in the Iraqi nuclear weapons program and clandestine uranium enrichment program as well as the financial data on their procurement abroad of items for their clandestine program."

He said the team also found documents on long-range missile production.

HOSTAGE: 77-year-old Briton freed in Beirut

(From 1A)

Two hours later Mann, looking frail but cheerful, he was reunited with his wife, Sunnie, at the ambassador's residence and they left for the airport for a six-hour flight to England.

Earlier Tuesday, Prime Minister John Major of Britain said he had heard that Mann was "a little unwell," and a 10 Downing Street spokesman had said the government was "disturbed" about reports of Mann's health.

The release of Mann by his pro-Iranian kidnappers in Lebanon Tuesday kept up the momentum established by the freeing of three Western hostages in August. In all of 1990, only five Westerners were released in Lebanon.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has sought a broad exchange involving the Western hostages, an accounting of five missing Israeli servicemen and the release of hundreds of Arabs held by Israel.

Perez de Cuellar said in statement Tuesday he was "encouraged by this further step in a process which he hopes will lead to a full, speedy and satisfactory solution of the problem of all detainees and missing persons."

President Bush seemed less certain that pro-Iranian extremist groups would free the nine remaining Western hostages in Lebanon.

"I hope it's not the end of the release program," he said in New York. "There are many more. ... It's so tragic." He said the United States could not have normal relations with Iran as long as any hostages are held.

Hussein Musawi, a leader of Hezbollah, the umbrella group for most of the factions holding Westerners, told reporters in the Bekaa Valley town of Sohmor: "If things continued to proceed normally an American hostage will be released. Maybe within a week or less than a month."

He said Mann was set free "to facilitate Perez de Cuellar's mission. The other side is required to facilitate his mission too."

He apparently referred to the kidnappers' demands that Israel release 20 more Arab prisoners, or possibly Sheik Abdul-Karim Obeid, the Hezbollah leader seized by Israeli commandos in 1989.

Yossi Olmert, an Israeli government spokesman, said Mann's release was a "a positive and welcome development." But he noted that Israel still seeks word on five missing servicemen and added: "If more information comes our way, we will reciprocate."

Mann was freed at 8:40 p.m. at an undisclosed location in Beirut and turned over to the Syrian army. He was then taken to Damascus, the traditional transit point for freed hostages. Mann's wife left Cyprus for Damascus to meet her husband of more than 50 years. "I'm very, very happy," she said.

At least nine Westerners are still missing in Lebanon — five Americans, a Briton, two Germans and an Italian. The longest-held hostage in Lebanon is American Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

In addition, Briton Alec Collett was kidnapped in 1985. British officials say he is presumed dead following claims he was killed in 1986 in retaliation for British complicity in U.S. bombing raids on Libya.

Mann, a heroic World War II pilot in the Royal Air Force, had lived in Beirut for decades when he was kidnapped May 12, 1989.

BILL: Senate votes to extend jobless benefits

(From 1A)

Final Senate approval came shortly after the lawmakers rejected a pair of alternative plans Republicans had offered in hopes of showing they too are concerned about the recession.

A less generous Republican version, endorsed by Bush, would have provided as many as 10 extra weeks of compensation. It was rejected on a near-party line vote of 57-42.

The Senate then rejected a separate Republican plan to cut the capital gains tax rate and take other steps they said would prod the sleepy economy. That vote was 60-39.

"President Bush will veto this proposal," Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said about the Democratic bill. "And the veto is going to be sustained.

"And then we ask ourselves, well, what have we done for the unemployed? Zero."

But Democrats, bristling for a veto fight with the president, said the Republican plans were inadequate and said they would not water down their measure by striking a compromise with Bush.

"I'm hopeful we'll have enough (votes) to override a veto, that we'll have that kind of strength and get the job done," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, of Texas, the Democratic plan's chief sponsor.

As they have done since Bush killed a similar measure last month, they accused Bush of indifference toward the 300,000 Americans who monthly deplete the regular 26 weeks of jobless payments.

"How many more Americans must lose their benefits before this administration acts?" asked Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Bush has argued that the Democratic measure is unneeded because, he says, the recession — relatively mild to begin with — is ending. He has also complained that the $6.1 billion legislation would push the federal budget even further into the red because the government would have to borrow to finance it.

Knowing they were outnumbered and likely to lose, Republicans pressed their own proposals anyway, hoping to demonstrate that they were ready to fight the recession — and in a way they considered more responsible than the Democrats.

"Let's bring on the leeches; let's pile on the blankets; let's spread the misery," was how Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, characterized the Democratic measure.

The Democratic bill would provide 20, 13, or 7 weeks of additional benefits, depending on a state's unemployment rate.

It would cover people who have exhausted the basic 26 weeks of benefits beginning this coming Oct. 6. People who used up their benefits since last April 1 would be covered if they live in some states with high unemployment rates. The new program would expire July 4, by which time the recession would presumably be over.

The House approved a $6.4 billion version of the bill on Sept. 17 by a 283-125 margin, which House Democratic leaders boasted made the measure veto-proof. To iron out differences between the two bills, the House planned to debate the legislation again as early as Thursday.

The smaller, $2.5 billion GOP alternative, sponsored by Dole, was similar to a Republican plan the Senate rejected Aug. 2.

It would provide at least six weeks of additional benefits and as many as 10 weeks. But rather than driving up the federal deficit, the measure was designed to pay for itself from money raised by auctioning off new radio frequencies and by increasing efforts to recoup bad government loans.

Democrats said the proposal did not do enough for the unemployed. But Dole, citing Bush's support, said his plan was better because it didn't worsen the budget deficit.

"Obviously, it's not as generous as the proposal on the other side, but we pay for it," Dole said. "I think that's fairly generous to future taxpayers and future generations."

BOOK: Sequel to Mitchell's work is available birth to a girl, Katie Colum O'Hara, nicknamed "Cat." Scarlett does not tell Rhett about the pregnancy.

■ After Scarlett leaves for Ireland, Rhett divorces her and marries a Charleston woman.

■ In Ireland, Scarlett agrees to marry Britain's notorious Earl of Fenton, but her decision becomes less final when Rhett unexpectedly arrives.

"I wanted the ending to be a surprise," Ripley said. "I wanted to postpone as long as possible the answer to the big question. It's fun. I love writing and I love making up stories. I love playing games with the reader."

Mitchell, killed in a car accident in 1949, lived long enough to see her book become an international phenomenon and Academy Award-winning movie, but not to see the civil rights movement that make the world so different from the one she knew.

"Gone With the Wind" contains pages and pages of racist content, but "Scarlett" makes virtually no references to race. Ripley said she omitted slave dialogue because she found it offensive and wanted to concentrate on other matters besides racial relations.

"I do sort of avoid any black-white interaction," she said. "I didn't see that there was any need to express that. It had nothing to do with the story I was telling. That's one reason I was sort of happy to get to Ireland, where everybody was white, so I did not have that to deal with."

Ripley, 57, is the author of three historical romance novels and was chosen by Mitchell's estate to write the sequel to the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, published in 1936.

About 900,000 copies of the new book already have been shipped to stores and Ripley said a sequel to her sequel is likely. But, she added, she doesn't want to write it.

"I want to write my own books," she said. "This makes it possible for me to write my own book and have more people read them. I've become a brand name, like Campbell's soup and Ivory soap. My books, thank God, have always done well, but not like this."

Israeli dispute illustrates lack of communication

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The dispute between the Bush administration and Israel over loan guarantees and restrictions on Israeli settlements underscores the stunning lack of communication between two governments on some of the most sensitive issues between them.

"This whole crisis is symptomatic of our relationship," said an administration Middle East expert. "We have this ritualized relationship, with all of the structures of closeness, but people don't really talk to each other or hear each other, because there is no real private honesty. Everyone is afraid to be honest, because they are aware that there are some real underlying differences over the question of the occupied territories."

Interviews in recent days with many American and Israeli officials and others involved in the dispute suggest that Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir badly miscalculated when he brushed aside a Bush administration request in early September to put off a request for $10 billion in loan guarantees or face a confrontation over Jewish settlements in the occupied territories.

It is now evident that Israel's supporters in Congress have decided not to fight the administration and will postpone dealing with the loan guarantee issue until after a Middle East peace conference begins.

The lack of communication between Shamir and Bush goes back to the very first meeting between the two men in the Oval Office in April 1989, when Bush expressed his displeasure over Israeli settlement-building practices and Shamir responded, "It won't be a problem."

Shamir meant that if the Israelis really have an Arab partner for peace talks, settlements will not be an obstacle to peace. What Bush thought he heard, though, was a commitment from Shamir to slow down or stop settlement-building, and when just the opposite happened as soon as Shamir returned to Israel, the seeds of Bush's personal wrath with Shamir were firmly planted.

Bush's focus on Israeli settlements grows out of a longstanding American belief that an accord between Israel and the Arabs will only come about in a trade of land for peace, and if Israel builds housing all over the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, no trade will be possible.

The tension between Shamir and Bush dating back to that first meeting hung over their relationship. In early 1990, Israel appealed to the Bush administration for $400 million in housing loan guarantees to help resettle Soviet immigrants who were flooding in.

The guarantees sailed through Congress, but they did not become available for almost nine months while Secretary of State James A. Baker III negotiated with the Israeli foreign minister, David Levy, an unusual letter in which Israel for the first time promised not to use the money to settle Soviet Jews "beyond the green line" dividing Israel proper from the territories occupied in the 1967 War.

The expectation in Washington was that as a result of that letter there would be no increase in Israeli settlement activity of any kind, whereas the view in Jerusalem was that Israel had agreed not to spend the $400 million in the territories, but that it could spend its own money.

Reformers vote for new party

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 200 Soviet reformers in the Russian Federation voted Tuesday to create a Western-style democratic party, but some delegates at the raucous session found it falling short on statesmanship.

"A lot of these people have barley for brains," said Alexander Shornikov, a 37-year-old newspaper editor from the nearby city of Alexandrov, who criticized speakers for squabbling over the organization's name.

"Still, the party will be successful," Shornikov predicted, mostly because its patrons include former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and other reformers with wide popular appeal, he said.

Delegates debated for six hours on the second day of the two-day founding congress before adopting a liberal platform and a New Age-sounding name.

The new party is widely expected to become Russia's main democratic group.

Its platform called for parliamentary government, respect for individual rights, private ownership and a market economy.

The participants, who came from as far away as Siberia, took care to choose a name different from the Democratic Movement for Reform, founded in July.

Moscow Mayor Gavriil Popov, an adviser to the party, urged delegates to model it on Western organizations instead of the Communist Party.

"After 70 years of one-party monopoly in our country, we're still working out our antipathy toward the words 'party organization,'" said Popov.

United Way goal not unreachable

This year's United Way of Midland goal is a staggering sum — $2,753,000. That's nearly $3 million and, yes, that is a lot of money.

But before writing the goal off as unreachable, it needs to be considered in its proper perspective. To do that you must get past the dollars and look into the faces of the people the contributions serve.

The faces are those of your friends, neighbors and loved ones. The people the United Way helps through its financial support of member agencies may include the boy next door, a co-worker, even one of those in your own family. That's because the agencies that receive financial support from United Way are those which fill needs within the Midland community — Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire programs and Casa de Amigos, Midland Need to Read, the Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Palmer Drug Abuse Program and others.

There is this much need in Midland and, historically, Midlanders have met the challenge with generous donations. As the result, suffering has been diminished and lives have been altered for the better.

Will it matter if you cut or drop your United Way contributions this year? Ask the 36,000 Midlanders who are expected to receive help from the member agencies in 1992. They will tell you how it will hurt — of the hunger pangs that won't be eased, of the desperation they will feel when they seek help but find no one there, of the hopelessness they will endure.

Your United Way contributions do make a difference; your caring does help.

Yes, $2,753,000 is a lot of money but the need in Midland is great and growing. No, the United Way of Midland cannot ease all the suffering. But where Midlanders can help, they should help. In that regard this year's goal represents a challenge for Midlanders — a challenge to see whether we can meet the need.

Give generously to the United Way of Midland this year.

Gulf war's horrors weren't all shown

Now, seven months after the fact, Americans know that their troops buried thousands of Iraqi soldiers alive in their trenches. Those who didn't surrender were covered up. It was effective. It caused a lot of other Iraqis to come forward with their hands up. No Americans were killed.

It is horrible, but so are all the other ways of dying — by cluster bombs or artillery fire or cruise missiles. The result is the same as killing by other means; only the moments of terror before death are different.

The press was not allowed to witness it from the front lines. The press was not even allowed to have or show Defense Department films of Iraqi soldiers being gunned down — some of them sliced in half — as they ran from attack planes. Only the sanitary films — explosions with no people — were released.

Military censors work on the theory that such details could hurt support for the war effort, or give aid and comfort to the enemy. But there is something to be said for acknowledging reality, too, and for respecting Americans' ability to judge it.

— Dayton Daily News
Dayton, Ohio

Exercising liberty better than banning

It is ironic that, as the United States celebrates the bicentennial of the signing of the Bill of Rights, self-appointed censors are increasing their efforts to ban certain books from American schools and libraries.

According to a tally compiled by People for the American Way, the 1990-91 school year saw a sharp rise in censorship. The group documented 264 "attacks on the freedom to learn" in 44 states. That was a 33 percent increase from the previous year.

With few exceptions, those who would ban books are threatening the personal freedoms guaranteed by the Bill of Rights. Books and other reading materials that challenge the conventional wisdom should not be viewed as inherently immoral or subversive. To the contrary, this country was founded on the principle that a well-informed citizenry is the best defense against the tyranny of thought control.

The right to read whatever one chooses is fundamental to a free society. As citadels of learning, schools should be in the vanguard of defending that right.

Those who disagree with or dislike a book have only to close its covers.

Deregulation is creating monopoly

WASHINGTON — Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a former Navy fighter pilot, is in a dogfight with the big airlines. He believes that the big three — American, United and Delta — will not be satisfied until they achieve a total monopoly of the skies.

Anderson

Just three airlines carry more than half of all passengers, and the top eight airlines control more than 90 percent of the market. This is not what Congress had in mind when it deregulated the airline industry in 1978. Deregulation has become a bait-and-switch con on the customers. There is less, not more competition, and higher, not lower fares (unless you don't mind locking in your travel plans weeks in advance). Service is notoriously bad, and flights so frequently overbooked that even customers with tickets are not guaranteed seats.

"Congress did not pass airline deregulation so that the industry would become concentrated into a few mega-carriers," McCain says. "The promise of deregulation was that airlines ... would spring up and compete freely, providing the consumer with better service and lower fares."

Congressional investigators recently found, in a study of 1988 fares, that when one or two airlines dominated an airport, passengers paid 20 percent more than on routes with greater competition. Competition is likely to contract even further if any or all of the airlines that have filed bankruptcy within the last year halt operations altogether.

With the loss of every competitor, there is a cost to every consumer who travels. Some 76 percent of all domestic passengers fly on routes where only three or fewer airlines are available, and 45 percent travel on routes served by only one or two.

The secret behind the success of the big carriers has less to do with good service than something known as "slot restrictions" — a special privilege that keeps the competition grounded. Few consumers realize that access to four of the nation's key airports — Washington National, Chicago O'Hare, New York LaGuardia and New York Kennedy — is limited by a Federal Aviation Administration High Density Rule. It requires airlines serving those key airports to obtain take-off and landing reservations, or slots, before they can even contemplate using the airport. But the slots at the four airports are sold out. That happened before deregulation. And even after the industry was deregulated, the slots stayed with the same airlines.

It wasn't until 1985 that the FAA changed the rules to allow those airlines to sell or lease their slots to others, but there was never any attempt to reallocate the slots so any airline had a fair shot at them.

Congressional investigators found that consumers paid 4 percent higher fares on routes to and from those four airports. The prices are higher because a select few are allowed to buy and sell access to public air space.

According to McCain, one smaller airline that has shopped around for slots at Washington National and LaGuardia airports has found that most owners are starting the bidding at no less than $1 million per slot. And some are not for sale at all. The lucky airlines prefer to lease them for the short term, so they can control the competition. More than 70 percent of the leases have been for 90 days or less.

McCain is pushing for sweeping reforms aimed at erasing the rigged rules that favor big carriers. He blames the FAA for defending the status quo for big carriers. His bill would increase the number of landing and takeoff slots by 5 percent at the big airports, and free up under-used gates for the competition.

Leahy's become key player, senators say

WASHINGTON — George Bush is on the verge of a Pyrrhic victory. He picked a fight with Israel just before a peace conference, demanding that loan guarantees to Soviet refugees be again delayed, giving him a lever to force Israel to freeze settlements and in effect hand over the West Bank.

Safire

He knows his veto would be sustained in Congress, as all others have. He has Washington Post and New York Times editorialists behind him. In a test of strength, he would humiliate Israel and its American supporters, delighting Arab despots.

But at what cost? By inflicting unforgettable punishment, Bush would boost super-hawk Ariel Sharon in Israel, win unwanted backing here from gleeful neo-isolationists, hearten the lunatic fringe, harm his party and earn a place in history as domestic polarizer rather than global peacemaker.

Cool heads in Congress are looking for a way to avert this political Armageddon. The key player, according to senators on both sides of the aisle, is Patrick Leahy, the Vermont Democrat whose Senate committee controls all foreign-aid appropriations.

Pat Leahy is a maverick establishmentarian, a parsimonious liberal, an Italian-Irish Yankee.

His Agriculture Committee failed in its oversight of commodity credits to Iraq through the Bank of Lavoro, and he has been an implacable foe of the Stealth bomber.

He is his own man, however, and was the Democrat that George Bush counted on, after a private meeting excluding John Sununu, to delay Senate consideration of the loan guarantee to house Soviet immigrants to Israel.

Leahy delivered; the Senate version of the House-passed bill will not be taken up until Congress returns from its post-Thanksgiving recess, probably at the end of January. Nobody knows what assurances Leahy received from Bush about support of the bill in return, but bipartisan deals are rarely one way.

According to Senate colleagues who have been approached by Leahy over the weekend, here are the elements of the Leahy Compromise:

1. The $10 billion guarantee spread over the coming five years will be part of a "must pass" bill, tied to all other foreign aid including Egypt's; it will not be stand-alone legislation that can be singled out for veto, nor will it be subject to further delay.

2. For every dollar Israel spends on settlements in the West Bank, the loan guarantee will be reduced by one dollar. This answers the "fungibility" argument, which holds that guarantees for housing within pre-1967 Israel would free up money that could then be used to settle the West Bank. It enables Bush to assure Arabs that no American aid is directed to Israeli West Bank settlement.

How much of an economic disincentive would the dollar-for-dollar proviso be? Last year, Israeli spending on new settlements was about $85 million; if Israel spends, say, $100 million next year, that much in loan guarantees would be deducted from the year's $2 billion.

Whose figures would be used? The Leahy compromise envisages a Government Accounting Office continuing on-site review, not dependent on Israeli, Arab or State Department estimates.

3. The guarantee will be tied to Israeli economic reforms. This will be met with cheers from conservatives who wish Israel well and wish it to abandon old socialist economics; in Jerusalem, it will make necessary habit-breaking palatable.

According to a jowly OMB official in a baseball cap, such reforms would affect the amount needed for U.S. budgetary set-aside, which could be brought down to 5 percent of the guarantee, or $100 million a year, as credit ratings improve; Israelis say it could go as low as 1 percent.

Would the Israelis accept the Leahy approach, which permits the president to hold a million Soviet Jews hostage for four months as a negotiations whip, forces settlement spending to come out of Israeli defense dollars and dictates systemic changes? They don't have much choice.

Will Mr. Bush buy into the compromise? He could send Secretary of State James A. Baker III to the Congress with a different plan, or double-cross Leahy by vetoing all foreign aid if Israel does not follow orders at the peace table.

He might still win, but as Plutarch reported King Pyrrhus to have said, "another such victory and we are ruined."

Communications company is going downhill

I am sorry to be picking on the AT&T phone company all the time, but what else is a person to do? The greatest communications company in the world is sliding downhill fast. Note the six-hour breakdown of service last week in New York that brought East Coast aviation to a halt and long-distance calls to a dribble. It was caused by "human error," according to AT&T spokespersons who are paid to put the best light on things that go wrong.

Buchwald

"Thank heavens," people said when they read it was human error. "It could have easily been a bad dial tone."

Charlotte Martin, a communications expert, says that the public cannot blame AT&T for a human error.

"Whom do you blame?" I wanted to know.

"A person. Someone who had a fight with his wife, or lost money on a pro football game, or was bawled out by his mother for no reason at all. It's very easy for a worker to pull Switch A rather than Switch B when his heart isn't in it."

"Right, but shouldn't the phone company have a fail-safe system if someone pulls the wrong switch?"

"It does, but the company executives have been trying to save money. So when someone pulls the wrong switch, a silent alarm bell goes off in a situation room on the third floor. Unfortunately, the alarm is answered by a recording that says, 'We're sorry, all lines are busy now. Please hold on until an operator is available to assist you. If you have a complete blowout of the system, call 555-5432. If your emergency concerns the shutdown of all air traffic in the United States, dial 555-6778 and leave a message after the beep. If the accident you are reporting affects the country's national defense, go to the top of your nearest post office and yell for help.' "

Ms. Martin told me that no matter whom you call you will still get the "Ride of the Valkyries" with the recorded message.

I said, "It seems to me that if human error can do so much damage, one of our enemies could do likewise without a great cost in weapons."

She agreed, "This has always been a concern of the military. That's why it is asking for $50 billion to construct a Stealth telephone system that would surgically bomb every enemy-held pay phone in the United States."

"Life seemed so good in the old days when AT&T didn't make errors."

"They did make them, but in those times they never put anyone on hold. If something went wrong, one person talked to another person, confessed his error and it was fixed. AT&T has replaced these people with computers, and many of the computers aren't talking to each other."

"I would hate to be an AT&T executive responsible for the error last week," I admitted.

Ms. Martin laughed, "I'd rather have been him than someone stuck on a runway for six hours because the phones didn't work."

"I don't imagine things are going to get better," I said.

"The phone company is determined to correct its errors. It has installed a 900 number people can dial and hear a vice president of the company recite a prayer asking that AT&T breakdowns only happen during off-peak hours when cheaper phone rates are in effect."

Battles mar cease-fire; forces jockey for advantage

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Battles between the Serb-controlled federal army and Croatia's forces marred a two-day-old cease-fire Tuesday, as Croatia and its arch-rival Serbia each demanded the other back down.

Croatia, whose declaration of independence in late June set off the fighting, demanded that the army withdraw from its territory. The president of neighboring Serbia repeated his demand that Croatia give up lands populated by ethnic Serbs.

"If someone wants to secede from Yugoslavia, I believe that loyalty to the existing state and the right to remain in it, is stronger," Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

"Thus I believe that the Yugoslav authorities, including the army, must protect all Yugoslav citizens who want to stay in the existing state," he said.

Croatian leaders say Milosevic is behind the current fighting because he wants to extend the boundaries of his own republic as Croatia and its northwest neighbor Slovenia secede.

Meanwhile, ethnic Albanians in a southern province of Serbia said they would hold a referendum on seceding from Serbia. Leaders of the Albanian majority in the province of Kosovo said they would organize voting on independence starting this week, the national news agency Tanjug reported.

At least 100 ethnic Albanians have been killed in the past two years in clashes with Serbian security forces. Milosevic last year clamped down on the Kosovo region, dissolving its parliament.

Elsewhere, ethnic Serbs in Bosnia were urged to stay home for fear of Muslim attacks, and five members of the eight-man federal presidency met to discuss tensions in Bosnia, whose multiethnic population includes Muslims, ethnic Serbs and Croats.

Both the army and Croatia accused each other of breaking a cease-fire declared Sunday in the fighting that has led to more than 500 deaths.

"The army says the Croats started shelling the barracks, the Croats say, 'Gosh, no!' and so it goes, to and fro like a ping-pong ball," said Croatia's Information Minister Branko Salaj, of fighting in the eastern Croatian town of Vinkovci.

The army launched its most intense offensive of the conflict last week following Croatia's blockade of federal military barracks within its republic.

Air and tank attacks were reported Tuesday in eastern Croatia, and Yugoslav Navy gunboats opened fire on the Adriatic port of Split. Fighting also was reported in central Croatia.

Experts divide on possible causes of fatigue syndrome

N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — Experts who met over the weekend to evaluate recent reports on three types of viruses as possible causes of chronic fatigue syndrome said that although some data were promising, "none of the evidence is yet conclusive."

The panel also said there was no evidence to suggest that the syndrome, often called yuppie flu, was contagious.

Nevertheless, enough scientific evidence exists to warrant more extensive investigations of the viruses that have been implicated by researchers in the United States and Scotland, Dr. Anthony L. Komaroff, an expert at Brigham and Women's Hospital here, said in an interview.

Komaroff headed the meeting, which was held by the National Chronic Fatigue Syndrome Advisory Council, a private group, at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The purpose of the weekend meeting of about a dozen experts was to focus on the three types of candidate viruses: retroviruses, spuma viruses and enteroviruses.

In a step toward developing a blood test for the syndrome, scientists have begun testing 56 people in Georgia, said Dr. Walter J. Gunn, who heads the disease centers' program on the syndrome.

Of the 56, 26 have what appears to fit the agency's definition of chronic fatigue syndrome. The 30 who do not meet the definition are being tested for comparison.

The debilitating but seldom fatal syndrome is characterized by fatigue that can last months, even years; nonspecific flu-like symptoms; aching muscles and joints, and sometimes an inability to think clearly and concentrate.

The potential blood test grows out of findings, reported by Dr. Elaine DeFreitas at the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia, of a possible link between the syndrome and what she believes is a previously unknown retrovirus, a group that includes the AIDS virus.

In recent weeks, scientists at the federal disease centers have refined the Wistar technique enough to try to determine whether it will work as a reliable blood test to distinguish people with the syndrome from those who do not have it, Gunn said. Nine virologists at the centers are working on the study.

Dr. W. John Martin, a pathologist and virologist at the University of Southern California, reported discovering a novel spuma virus that he believes causes the syndrome.

He said it did not set off the classic immune response that the body develops to infection with other viruses.

Spuma viruses, also known as foamy viruses, are known to infect animals. Although one type of spuma virus has been isolated from a few humans over the last 20 years, no member of the group has been linked to human disease.

Martin said he had isolated a spuma virus from the blood and spinal fluid of 10 patients with various forms of chronic fatigue syndrome.

Suggestive evidence of the virus was detected in the blood of virtually all of 180 people with the syndrome whose blood was tested in his laboratory but in none of 170 without the syndrome, Martin said.

Martin said he made the first finding of a spuma virus last winter and told officials at the disease centers in March. He said he did not know how the spuma virus, if it is the cause of chronic fatigue syndrome, was transmitted.

Scientists familiar with Martin's work have privately expressed skepticism about his findings, saying they are preliminary at best and could represent contamination in the laboratory. Martin said he had not sent specimens for independent confirmation by scientists elsewhere.

He showed meeting participants an electron microscopic photograph of the spuma virus.

But some who saw the picture they were not sure it was of a spuma virus, or even a virus at all.

The debilitating but seldom fatal syndrome is characterized by fatigue that can last months, even years; nonspecific flu-like symptoms; aching muscles and joints, and sometimes an inability to think clearly and concentrate.

Some also said they were frustrated because he did not answer questions about the details of his findings, even when pressed to do so.

Participants said that not enough data were presented at the meeting to determine whether DeFreitas and Martin had found the same virus.

At the meeting, Dr. Peter Behan and Dr. John Gow from Glasgow expanded on findings recently reported in the British Medical Journal suggesting a role for members of the enterovirus group in chronic fatigue syndrome.

Komaroff and other experts said that if a viral cause was found for the syndrome, more than one virus would probably be found to be responsible.

City Council supports rate increase

■ Councilmen OK on first reading increases for water, sewer and garbage services.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

A water, sewer and garbage bill increase was given first-reading approval Tuesday by the Midland City Council.

Councilmen approved the increase 5-1. If approved on second reading Oct. 8, the higher rates would take effect Nov. 1, adding revenue to two self-supporting funds officials say are suffering.

"We expect anywhere from $675,000 to $700,000 in the water and sewer fund and about $80,000 in the garbage fund (each year)," said Bill Tatsch, customer services supervisor.

The base rate for water users, which includes 2,000 gallons of water, would increase from $10 to $10.50 per month. Each additional thousand gallons of water, now $1.83 per month, would increase to $1.89 per month. Sewer costs would rise from $11.67 monthly to $12.17. Garbage pickup charges, now $7.50 per month, would increase by 25 cents.

The base rate for water users . . . would increase from $10 to $10.50 per month. Sewer costs would rise from $11.67 monthly to $12.17. Garbage pickup charges, now $7.50 per month, would increase by 25 cents.

Revenues in the water fund have been cited as a means to prepare the city for its costs related to the Colorado River Municipal Water District pipeline, slated to bring water from the O.H. Ivie Reservoir to Midland.

Voting against the water rate increase was At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth, who said it seemed to be a "quick-fix" solution and may not be sufficient.

"I feel like we should have staggered the increase to encourage conservation," Faircloth said. Among other reasons for his dissent was an uncertainty that it was really needed, he said.

"I want to be sure we're not just arbitrarily relying on a rate increase. We should look to other solutions," the councilman said. "I'm willing to say this increase was probably needed, but I think we rushed a judgment on it."

Faircloth said he would like to see some changes in the way the rates are structured. Midlanders should pay sewer costs based on a ratio to the amount of water used, not a flat rate, he said.

"I don't see how we can say a single person uses as much (sewer) as a family where there are eight kids, there's no justification," Faircloth said.

Sanitation increases are slated to prepare for the cost of meeting tightening federal and state regulations. An additional fee increase would take the current per-ton

City officials discuss airport parking problem

■ City council delays decision on whether to hire a private company to run parking lot at Midland International Airport.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

When it comes to parking at Midland International Airport, city officials are considering the question: to privatize or not to privatize.

A consultant told the Midland city councilmen Tuesday they should think ahead to the terminal project's several years of construction and their possible effect on already suffering parking revenues.

Although construction is more than a year away, decisions about some of the issues surrounding the terminal project need to be made soon, said Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor.

"We're trying to anticipate what problems we might have rather than wait until we are under construction out there," he said.

Parking lot revenues — a source of needed profit at the airport — are an area of concern.

Since 1989, officials estimate the airport parking facility revenues have decreased by $200,000 annually. Some of that may be due to a reduction in overall traffic at the facility, but most of the loss is attributed to the opening of Premier Parking, a privately owned facility that caters to airport users.

City figures list parking lot revenues during 1989 as $1.6 million. By 1991, they had dropped to $1.4 million.

"Our dilemma," said McGregor, "is we're losing money to Premier now and we don't want to lose more during construction."

David N. Jones, a consultant who initiated a study of the facility in August, said several options exist for change. All efforts, he said, should be focused on lessening inconvenience for the traveler.

"This is very important," Jones said. "The people you lose (during construction) I don't think you get back very easily."

He recommended cost increases at the city-owned remote parking lot, which is commonly used for long-term parking. Local rates — at $3.25 per hour — are at least 50 cents per hour too low, Jones said.

The new terminal is planned to be built behind the current building, in the place now occupied by close-in and covered parking. Jones said continued availability of covered parking will be very important during construction.

"The first thing you should do before demolishing that parking garage is make facilities for covered parking," he said. "You don't want to alienate people who would

'Every shipwreck a time capsule,' archeaologist says

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Nearly 34 centuries ago, a royal ship sank off the coast of Turkey. The ship, stocked with luxury goods, is believed to have been sent from one king to another. The ship was considered a total loss.

In 1982, more than 3,000 years later, a young diver found "strange metal biscuits" near Ulu Burun, Turkey. George F. Bass, an archaeologist and Texas A&M professor, was summoned and he started a search near the site two years later.

On Tuesday, Bass spoke to students at Midland and Lee high schools before holding a public presentation at 7:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn.

Bass has led several other searches off the coast of Turkey, including one while still in graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania. That search was the first complete archaeological excavation of an ancient wreck on the sea bed.

His current project is the world's oldest known shipwreck. It has yielded nearly 300 copper ingots, the only known gold scarab ever found of Queen Nefertiti of Egypt, ebony, ivory, silver, amber, glass ingots, the oldest known seagoing hull and the oldest known book.

"While the gold scarab is the most important find monetarily, I consider the book to be more important historically," said Bass. The pages of the book are wooden.

Bass, who specializes in Bronze Age shipwrecks, says the importance of these findings cannot be measured.

"Every shipwreck is a time capsule," said Bass. "Artifacts from the sea bed are always well-preserved. Most of the artifacts from the Bronze Age have come from the sea."

Bass estimates there have been millions of shipwrecks in history but figures most were destroyed by the elements.

"Excavating these wrecks allows us to tell the entire history of technology," he said.

Each year before the excavating crew leaves the site, they cover the entire wreck with sand to help prevent robbery.

"This is, of course, a tedious process but it often helps. It would take a pirater several days and often the local fishermen and others will step in to stop them," said Bass.

When the crew first arrived at the Ulu Burun site they spent several weeks constructing huts with dormitories, bathrooms, a darkroom and a laboratory. He considers it a blessing that cameras were available to document their findings.

"We never anticipated that we would find so much until we arrived," he said.

Bass pioneered the concept of archaeologists doing part of the diving. After the discovery in 1960, he enrolled in a 10-week diving class at the local YMCA before going to the site.

Next month, Bass plans to travel to Syria to investigate a reported finding. Syria recently granted permission for the excavation team's visit.

Bass is a recipient of the Archaeological Institute of America's gold medal for Distinguished Archaeological Achievement. He also serves as the director of the Institute of Nautical Archaeology at Texas A&M, which he founded in 1973.

In 1988, he published his sixth book, "Ships and Shipwrecks of the Americas," and has had more than 100 published articles on archaeology.

Local jobless rate down in August

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Midland's unemployment rate inched lower in August, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

The figures show Midland's rate down a tenth of a point, to 5.5 percent from 5.6 percent in July. The rate was 5.4 percent in August 1990.

Although the jobless rate is up from last year's level, the total employment picture is improved from 12 months earlier, standing 800 ahead of last August.

Total employment dropped 700 to 46,100 from 46,800 in July; it was 45,300 a year ago. The employment decline was more than offset by the 800 people who left the labor force during the month, sending

San Angelo woman reunited with her father after 40 years

By Diane Murray
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — Darlene Robertson waited 40 years to reunite with her father.

But, if she had waited one week more, the San Angelo woman might never have seen him again.

Before this summer, Mrs. Robertson last saw her father, Sam Dentini, when she was 3 years old. Born in Trenton, N.J., Mrs. Robertson moved with her mother to Abilene when her parents divorced.

Despite the bitter divorce that separated Mrs. Robertson from her father, the San Angelo woman had some knowledge of her father.

"I have one memory of my father. He was sitting on the couch, and I was playing on the floor," Mrs. Robertson said. "That was the only memory I had."

The memory stayed with her, though.

For some time, Mrs. Robertson had wanted to find her father but kept waiting for someone else to make the first move. After her mother died, she decided she had to start making calls herself.

"I was laying in bed one night, and my brain went to work: Here's all these pictures of myself with these other people."

Mrs. Robertson called directory assistance in Trenton and asked for any listings under the name Dentini.

"The operator said, 'I have two, but one is unlisted and the other is for a Carrie Dentini.' So I called that number and I started explaining to this woman, thinking she would think I was crazy.

Mrs. Robertson had called her grandmother's house and was talking to her Aunt Virginia, who explained that Sam Dentini had moved to Florida.

"When I called, his mother had already moved, too. My father's sister was there selling the house and was about to leave herself," Mrs. Robertson said.

"If I had waited another week, there would have been no phone number to call." she

MISD students beat ACT composite score

■ Local students who took the national test in 1990-1991 recorded a composite score that was higher than the state and national averages.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midland high school students, who participated in the American College Testing Program (ACT) for 1990-91, rated a higher composite score than state and national averages, according to a report presented to the Midland school board Tuesday.

"It indicates our high school program has done a good job preparing these students to begin college," said Joe Cummins, executive director of planning, evaluation and testing for the Midland Independent School District.

The ACT, along with the Scholastic Achievement Test (SAT), are the two key academic tests used to help determine college admissions. The SAT is the predominant admissions test in Texas.

In Midland, 168 students took the ACT — 81 from Lee High School and 87 from Midland High School.

The test covers English usage, math ability, science reasoning; and includes reading passages in social studies, science, art and literature.

The mean composite score for Midland students was 21.8 compared with a national composite of 20.6 and a state composite of 19.9.

The multiple-choice test is based on a 36-point scale.

AIRPORT: Parking issue tabled

use it."

Ken Day, director of airports, said construction of a covered parking area would be second only to access roads as the terminal project begins.

Also cited as important is continued foot access to the terminal during construction. Jones said revenues could be lost if people opt to leave friends and relatives at the terminal entrance rather than parking and accompanying them inside.

Day agreed, especially in relation to the business traveler.

"Once you disrupt the user of the facility, disrupt his pattern and habit, you're asking for trouble," Day said.

Officials said one possibility is a shuttle bus that would take travelers from their cars to the terminal while construction is underway.

McGregor said high personnel costs are a problem at the facility. If the city opts to continue operating its own parking lot, it could utilize part-time employees and restructure work schedules to save money, he said.

Officials delayed a decision on the matter. Mayor Carroll Thomas said a barrier to privatizing now is the pending construction project and its associated difficulties.

"We've got a complex, unpredictable situation over the next several years," he said. "It may be hard to get a competitive bid (for a private company to run the lot)."

A decision on the parking issue might be made this spring, McGregor said.

ACT: MISD scores beat average

(From 1B)

Midland High students, with a 22 point composite, faired slightly better than Lee High students, with a 21.6 composite.

In the English section of the ACT, Midland schools both surpassed national and state scores. Midland High averaged 21.4 and Lee High, 21.2. The national average was 20.3 and for the state, 19.7.

When it came to math, Midland High students averaged 21 compared with Lee High at 20 points, which tied with the national average. Students across Texas scored an average 19.5 on that portion of the test.

Midland students scored equal to or better this year compared to last year's test-takers here.

Districtwide results in 1991 compared to the previous year are: composite, 21.8 to 21.2; math, 20.5 to 19.9; and English, 21.3 to 21.2.

Comparative results for Lee High were: composite, 21.6 to 21; math, 20 to 19.9; and English, 21.2 to 21. The Midland High results comparisons are: composite, 22 to 21.4; math, 21 to 19.9; and English, 21.4 and 21.4.

"We were very pleased that this report indicates that the students taking the ACT in 1991 have done better or as well as students who have taken it in the last five years," Cummins said.

Nationwide, more than 800,000 youngsters participated in the ACT this year. In Texas, more than 50,000 students turned out for the exam.

BILL: Council backs rate increase dumping fee at the landfill from $7 to $8, expected to generate about $36,000 per year.

If the rate increase package receives final approval, it would be reflected in billings that take place after Nov. 1. Water, sewer and sanitation costs are paid in a single bill.

A 10-percent discount will continue to reward local residents who pay their bills on time. Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the discount keeps the average Midland bill lower than its Odessa equivalent.

Residents who use 15,000 gallons of water per month — considered the "average" customer — would pay a combined water and sewer bill of $47.24, compared with Odessa's $46.48. With the discount, the Midland bill is cut by $4.72, to $42.52. Odessa has no discount for early payment, he said.

Sanitation costs in Odessa, currently at Midland's $7.50 per month rate, are slated to increase by $1 beginning Oct. 1.

Garbage pick-up costs in both cities — as across the state — are subject to a 7.75-percent sales tax.

FATHER: Woman to meet relatives said.

Mrs. Robertson's aunt offered to tell Dentini that his daughter was looking for him.

Because of concern for his health, Dentini's family waited about three weeks before telling him of Mrs. Robertson's call.

"Ten minutes after they told him, he was on the phone," Mrs. Robertson said, beaming.

"He wanted to know was I all right ... He was curious about why I was calling. Truth is, I don't remember a whole lot (about the call). I was crying too hard."

Eager to meet her father, Mrs. Robertson conquered a lifelong fear of flying and took her first airplane ride to Florida in July to meet her father and grandmother, who live in St. James City on Pine Island.

"I was very nervous (on the flight). But, I knew who he was when I saw him. I don't know. I just knew that was him when I walked off the plane."

Mrs. Robertson spent four days getting to know her father.

"It's hard to explain what Daddy's like," she said. "He loves to golf ... loves to take video movies. I like him."

The San Angelo woman is now looking forward to a family reunion Oct. 11 in Orlando, where she we will meet four aunts she hasn't seen since she was 3 years old. She has also talked on the phone and corresponded with her 36-year-old half-brother, Mark Dentini, who lives in Holland, Penn.

Mrs. Robertson is pleased with the reception she has received from her long-lost relatives. She said they all knew about her and hoped she would one day come back into their lives.

"My 86-year-old grandmother says she has been praying for 40 years that I would come back," Mrs. Robertson said.

Her relatives have told her that her father never forgot her, but health problems aborted his attempts to find his daughter.

"They said he talked about me, wondering where I was and what I was doing the whole time ... how there were several times he tried to find me. There was one time in particular, then he had a massive heart attack. He was in the hospital when he'd planned to be flying to Texas."

Mrs. Robertson is discovering roots she didn't know existed. She is being exposed to her Italian heritage for the first time. And, her father has sent her a copy of a home movie of Mother's Day 1948, when Mrs. Robertson was 7 months old.

Although Mrs. Robertson is nervous about the coming reunion, she has been able to draw a lot of support from her family and friends. Her husband, Charles Robertson Sr., will accompany her to the Florida gathering.

Inmate escapes

Staff Reports

West Texas law enforcement agencies continued their search late Tuesday for a 31-year-old Midland man who escaped from the Midland County Central Detention Facility earlier in the day, sheriff's officials said.

Manuel Granado Martinez, serving a 60-year term for burglary, left the 215 W. Industrial Ave. facility about 2:30 p.m. when there was an apparent door lock failure, officials said.

A technician had been working on an electrical panel when a malfunction caused four jail doors to be released, officials said. Martinez made his way outside the doors before being detected, officials said.

A police canine unit managed to track the escapee for five blocks before losing his scent, officials said. The sheriff's office sent up a helicopter Tuesday in their search for Martinez.

Law enforcement agencies across West Texas were notified to be on the lookout for Martinez.

The escapee was last seen wearing blue jail garb. He stands 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs about 180 pounds and has black hair and brown eyes. Martinez has a tattoo of a dragon on his right shoulder and a scar on his forehead.

Martinez, who has a history of heroin use, began serving a 60-year sentence in early August for a conviction of burglary of a habitation, officials said.

Stable condition

The woman injured in a hit-and-run accident Monday night on Highway 80 east of Midland remained in serious but stable condition at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center late Tuesday, hospital officials said.

Colleen Neary, 42, suffered internal injuries when a Chevrolet pickup truck in which she was riding, driven by Bobby Jack Baker, turned into the path of a Honda Civic station wagon driven by Dennis Worth.

Worth and Baker were not injured.

Baker faces two felony charges — driving while intoxicated and failure to stop. After hitting the Worth vehicle, Baker got out of his truck and apologized to its occupants, according to police reports.

He was stopped by a Midland police officer a few minutes later when he nearly struck the officer's vehicle at County Road 60, about three miles north of the accident scene on County Road 1130.

Baker was released Tuesday on $3,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Men sentenced

Two men, one who tried to break into a post office and the other who attempted to sell a kilogram of cocaine to an undercover police officer, were sentenced in U.S. District Court on Tuesday, federal officials said.

Edilberto Quiroz-Leyva, 20, of Odessa, was sentenced to five years imprisonment and four years supervised released for distribution of cocaine.

Quiroz-Leyva was arrested on May 31 after trying to sell the drug to an undercover Odessa police officer at the Motel 6, 200 Interstate Highway 20. He entered a guilty plea to the drug charge on Aug. 6.

Allen Dwayne Hartley, 33, of Midland, was sentenced to two and a half years in prison and three years supervised release for forcibly breaking into a U.S. Post Office with intent to commit larceny.

Hartley was arrested during the act at the 2315 W. Lousiana Ave. post office on June 29.

City of Odessa ordered to release records on employee drug testing

AUSTIN (AP) — The city of Odessa must release certain records on its drug testing of city employees, under an opinion issued by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales.

City Attorney Joel Roberts said Tuesday that the records that had been requested by the Odessa American would be released.

The newspaper sought under the Texas Open Records Act information on the city's drug testing program between Aug. 1, 1989 and March 1, 1990.

During that time period, the newspaper wanted to know the number of drug tests administered; the number that showed positive results; the number that showed positive results for illegal drug use; the number and names of all city employees terminated; and the cost to administer the drug tests.

Roberts said he released the cost information, but argued the rest of the requested records were deemed confidential by city ordinance, state law and constitutional provisions on privacy.

The attorney general's office disagreed.

"Nothing in the requested information identifies a particular individual as having tested positive or having been terminated for that reason," the opinion stated.

"The information leaves wholly to conjecture whether any or all of the named individuals who were terminated were terminated for testing positive. The public has a strong interest in information concerning public employment, and such information is ordinarily open to the public," the opinion said.

JOBLESS: Rate down

the figure down to 48,800 from 49,600; it was at 47,900 a year earlier.

Midland's total unemployment fell by 100 to 2,700 from 2,800; it was 2,600 in August 1990.

"At this time of year, it's not unusual for employment and unemployment to drop," said Mark Dermit, a labor analyst in the Midland regional office of the TEC. "The reason most often cited is seasonal and student workers leaving the work force."

He noted that figures for a year ago reflected "the rig count started to surge forward; it was the start of Operation Desert Shield, and we were anticipating higher crude prices. You have to look at this year's figures in relation to that."

Dermit said an increase in the labor force in June — as summer workers join the ranks — and a decrease in August as they leave again is a seasonal trend. While he sees no pending shocks that could affect the local job picture, "if more drilling companies (like Cactus) shut their doors, it could be a problem. But if the oil patch stabilizes, seasonal trends should hold."

But he cautioned, "You never know what the future will bring," citing last month's oil price shock from the Soviet coup and the possibility of re-intervention in Iraq. He added that another local economic influence is the weakness in the national economy and low consumer spending. "Consumers are paying off more debt and not incurring as much. If this trend continues, it could be a slow Christmas. The (national) recession is putting a damper on consumer expectations, which as you know runs everything. If consumer expectations continue low, it could be a slow fall."

Among the state's metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked eighth, tied with Abilene and Brazoria. Odessa was ranked 20th, tied with Galveston-Texas City.

Bryan-College Station had the lowest rate in the state, 3.4 percent, followed by Amarillo and Austin, each with 4.8 percent; Victoria with 4.9 percent; and, San Angelo with 5.3 percent. McAllen-Edinburg-Mission had the highest rate in the state, 15.2 percent.

Wilson plans to return to Turkey

The State

'I don't have any problems in going back. I'll be a little more careful.'

— Marvin Wilson

■ More state news/3D

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Marvin Wilson, home after being held captive three weeks by Kurdish rebels, said Tuesday he plans to return to Turkey next year to continue his search for Noah's Ark.

But first Wilson wants a taste of his wife's home cooking. The Garland man, who had traveled to Turkey to search Mount Ararat for what he believed was the site of the ark, lost 16 pounds while in captivity.

Wilson's flight, which originated in Germany, landed at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport shortly after 4 p.m. Tuesday.

"It's certainly nice to be back," Wilson said at an airport news conference. "I wouldn't recommend this kind of a vacation."

His wife, Renetta, met Wilson on the runway and escorted him to Customs while a dozen family members waited to greet him.

Wilson, 49, and four other Westerners were freed Friday and taken to the Turkish-U.S. air base at Incirlik, Turkey. The three Americans, Australian and a Briton were in good health except for cuts and bruises from walking around for three weeks, officials said.

The men were abducted Aug. 30 at a road block by the outlawed Kurdish Labor Party, or PKK, which has been fighting since 1984 for an independent state in Southeastern Turkey.

During their captivity, the men were kept on the move constantly in the rugged mountains of eastern Turkey, Wilson said.

Guarded at all times by armed rebels, Wilson said they were forced to sleep outdoors each night without blankets in temperatures that plunged to 40 degrees.

The tribesmen originally took the men captive to embarrass the Turkish government and bring visibility to their demands for a Kurdish homeland, Wilson said. But the move backfired when the American and Turkish governments took an active interest in tracking the rebels, he said.

"They'd got this tiger and they didn't know how to let go of it," Wilson said.

The Kurdish rebels who held the men hostage should be punished, Wilson said. "They certainly committed crimes and we think they need to be brought to justice," he said.

Despite the ordeal, Wilson said he intends to return to Turkey to resume his quest.

"I don't have any problems in going back. I'll be a little more careful," he said.

Wife Renetta doesn't plan on letting her husband go solo next time.

"I would go with him if I could cook or help carry dirt," she said.

Also searching for the ark were Ronald Wyatt of Nashville, Tenn., Richard M. Rives of North Carolina and Australian Allen Roberts. Briton Gareth Thomas was abducted from a separate bus.

Two soldiers searching for the captives were killed in a guerrilla ambush on Sept. 3.

In a statement released by the U.S. embassy in Ankara, the former captives disavowed any involvement with the PKK, as had been speculated in the Turkish press.

The men also denied their captors' impression that they had been part of the clash between the rebels and Turkish government.

Since 1977, Wyatt has been searching for the ark, which the Bible says made a landfall in eastern Turkey near Mount Ararat after the deluge. Wyatt has been seeking excavation permits for the site he found in 1985.

A boat-shaped rock formation located 14 miles from Mount Ararat there has attracted numerous searchers, including the late U.S. astronaut James Irwin.

Five El Pasoans murdered in last six days

EL PASO (AP) — Five people have been killed in the last six days, including a woman and her son who were slain in a neighborhood with an active Crime Watch group, police and neighbors said Tuesday.

Police identified the victims as Refugio Sustaita, 41, and her son, Manuel Sustaita, 20. However, a neighbor who called Ms. Sustaita her best friend said the son's name was Manolo.

The slayings raised the number of homicides in El Paso this year to 38, up from 35 last year. In the past six days, three other homicides have occurred: Katrina Johnson Creel Uribe, 26, of Chihuahua, Mexico, died Sept. 18 when a bullet fired from a gun in an adjacent hotel room penetrated the wall and hit her; on Sept. 21, Jerry Sanchez Jr., 16, of El Paso was shot twice in the head during a party and died as he tried to drive away; and on Sept. 22 Tomas Velasquez Jr., 24, of El Paso, was beaten during a gang fight. His body was dumped at nearby railroad tracks.

Arrests have been made in the first two cases but not in the third.

The Sustaitas' bodies were found Monday evening by a neighbor across the street who went to check on the home at the request of family members, said El Paso Police Sgt. Dwain Johnson.

The two victims had numerous puncture wounds and Johnson said they likely were stabbed with a knife. Autopsies were performed Tuesday.

"There's no forced entry. We don't rule out burglary in this, but we don't suspect burglary," Johnson said. "There were signs of a struggle, at least the boy put up a struggle before he was murdered," he said.

Police said Tuesday they had no suspects. Lt. Eddie Ortega, a police spokesman, said Ms. Sustaita had been arrested in the past for having stolen property in her home.

A neighbor who declined to give his name said the street of modest homes filled mostly with young families and retirees has a good neighborhood watch group that meets once a month.

He said police have been called to Ms. Sustaita's home and one across the street in the past.

The neighbor who found the bodies said she had known Ms. Sustaita for about a year. She said the son was unemployed and was not in school.

"I don't know why this happened. I didn't even think she had an enemy in that hated her so much to do this," said the woman, who declined to be identified.

Skinner orders abatement of jet noise by year 2000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner on Tuesday launched a drive to hush the nation's loudest jets by the end of the decade, without severely disrupting airline finances.

Skinner issued new noise reduction regulations that gave airlines the flexibility they had asked for, while promising more peace and quiet in the new century for most of the nearly 3 million Americans now exposed regularly to high levels of jet racket.

Skinner put the cost at anywhere between $880 million and $4 billion, while one industry group said it likely will be $100 billion. In any case, it likely will be paid by airline travelers through higher ticket prices, Skinner noted.

The transportation secretary said that in certain "very rare" circumstances his department would consider waiving the new rules or up to two years so as not to force financially troubled airlines out of business.

Skinner also issued new standards that likely will make it more difficult for individual airports and communities to issue more restrictive noise rules.

James B. Busey, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, said this was necessary to avoid disrupting the airline industry and 'to reduce the noise in a standard way so that noise will not be simply pushed to another area."

"These regulations provide a good balance that meets the needs of the 300 million Americans who fly, and the several million people who live near airports," Skinner said. "We're giving airlines flexibility but setting standards for them to meet. How fast that will occur will depend on the economic condition of the industry."

Noise-reduction activists expressed disappointment at the announcement, said it is heavily tilted in favor of the airline industry and asserted it will all but eliminate the possibility that local communities can impose their own noise standards at a faster pace than the federal government.

"It looks like a delaying of significant noise relief as long as possible for the convenience of the industry," said Charles Price, executive director of the National Association to Insure a Sound-controlled Environment (NOISE).

Price said the regulations appear to make it "really hard" for local communities to reduce noise through their own regulations.

"I think its going to have to be resolved by litigation," said Price, whose organization represents 35 smaller communities located near airports.

In Hempstead, N.Y., Joseph Lewis, a veteran anti-noise campaigner, said that the new policy might help neighborhoods 20 miles from an airport but "For close-in communities, it will mean absolutely nothing."

But George P. Howard, president of the Airport Operators Council, said the noise policy will provide "significant relief" to communities near airports. And he said airports retain the right to offer communities further noise protection by imposing their own restrictions.

The new noise-reduction rule will require the replacement or quieting of more than 2,200 of the nation's loudest jet aircraft by the year 2000. Foreign airlines flying into the United States also will be required to meet the new noise standard.

When the transition to quieter aircraft is complete, Skinner said, the number of people exposed to high levels of airport jet noise will be reduced by about 85 percent, from about 2.7 million to around 400,000.

Ex-workers blame shortage for fire

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A shortage of spare parts at a poultry plant where a fire killed 25 people forced workers to repair worn hydraulic lines that should have been replaced, four former employees said in a report published Tuesday.

The Sept. 3 fire at the Imperial Food Products chicken processing plant in Hamlet, about 90 miles southwest of Raleigh, began when a hydraulic line being repaired ruptured and sprayed flammable fluid on a gas-fired fryer, state investigators have said.

Former maintenance worker David Andrews said he repeatedly told plant manager Brad Roe, whose father owns the plant, that the lack of spare parts and equipment created a safety hazard.

"He would always say it was going to get better, we would get some parts later on," Andrews said. "But, it never got any better."

In separate interviews with The News & Observer of Raleigh, Andrews and fellow former maintenance workers Bill Billingsley, Johnny Locklear and Robert Long said they frequently had to repair hydraulic lines because they leaked or broke away from fittings.

A fifth worker, Roger Hall, who was Imperial's maintenance manager for six months last year, agreed that the high-pressure lines leaked but said they were properly maintained. Imperial bought spare parts when they were needed, he said.

"If something had been busted, if something was real unsafe, I feel Brad Roe, instead of risking lives, would have shut the plant down and had it fixed," said Hall, whose wife was an Imperial supervisor until the fire shut down the plant.

Imperial spokeswoman Kelly Roe in Atlanta said she was unaware of any complaints about spare parts. She wouldn't comment further.

Hall said he fired Billingsley and Long because they were unreliable and failed to show up for work several times.

Billingsley said he quit because he was fed up with the plant.

Three children slain in shootings

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Three children were shot to death Tuesday afternoon and a fourth was seriously wounded, police said. The mother of the three was taken into custody, authorities said.

As the woman was taken into police headquarters, she repeatedly cried "Please kill me," WTVN-AM reported.

The shootings occurred at an apartment complex on the city's near-east side, Sgt. Bob Douglas said.

The wounded child was taken to Children's Hospital, where spokeswoman Shirley Kline said he was in serious condition with a wound to an arm.

She said the 5-year-old child, David Warren, was not a brother of the victims.

No other information about the shootings was immediately available, Douglas said. He did not have the identities of the victims or the woman.

Gates was told of Iran-Contra suspicions, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senior intelligence officials testified Tuesday that in 1986 they clearly laid out for CIA director-designate Robert Gates evidence pointing to a White House diversion of money to Nicaraguan rebels.

The testimony by acting CIA director Richard Kerr and senior agency analyst Charles Allen differed from Gates' assertions that he couldn't recall being told of a White House role in the possible diversion.

The question of what Gates knew about the 1985-86 diversion of money to the Contras from U.S. arms sales to Iran has been at the heart of the debate by the Senate Intelligence Committee on whether to confirm Gates. Week-long testimony has failed to turn up any evidence that would stand in the way of President Bush's nominee, and confirmation is still considered likely.

But at the start of the second week of testimony, Allen's and Kerr's recollections pointed to several discrepancies.

Gates has told the committee in sworn written responses to its questions that "to the best of my recollection, Mr. Allen never mentioned to me or speculated that anyone in the U.S. government, including the ... White House" was involved in the diversion, which occurred despite a legal ban on U.S. aid to the rebels.

Allen told the panel that he had met with Gates on Oct. 1, 1986, and again on Oct. 7 to express his growing concern at increasing signs that a diversion was occurring. "Mr. Gates appeared startled and disturbed that the White House would involve itself in such dubious activity," he said.

Gates specifically expressed concern at the role played by White House aide Oliver North, Allen said. Allen, one of a handful of people who were in North's confidence from the start of the Iran-Contra affair, said Gates told him he had always admired North but that "this was going too far" if indeed a diversion was under way.

Before going to Gates, Allen took his suspicions to Kerr who was then CIA's director of analysis. Kerr testified that he passed on Allen's suspicions to Gates, probably in August, including the role North was believed to be playing.

Gates, in response, "expressed surprise" but "indicated that it would not surprise him to find that Ollie North was involved in such activity," Kerr said.

Gates has testified he doesn't recall the conversation with Kerr. Kerr said he believes Gates, and pointed to the fact that he devoted only one or two minutes to Allen's suspicions during a conversation that included other topics.

Pressed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., about what he had told Gates, Allen said, "It was clear that I implied the chain went from North to Adm. Poindexter," President Reagan's national security adviser.

Allen also differed with Gates on the amount of information he had conveyed to him about the suspected diversion.

Noriega defense, prosecution clash over evidence

MIAMI (NYT) — Prosecutors and defense lawyers clashed repeatedly on Tuesday at the trial of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, as the defense sought, for the most part unsuccessfully, to introduce evidence supporting General Noriega's contention that he regularly performed secret missions on behalf of the CIA and its allies.

Among the items rejected by Judge William M. Hoeveler was a photograph taken at a December 1983 meeting in Panama between Noriega and George Bush, who was then vice president. The prosecution also blocked efforts by Noriega's lawyers to question a former miltary aide of Noriega about ties between the Panamanian military and Israel and about American involvement in Panama's 1984 presidential election.

The restrictions are a major setback for Noriega, who went on trial at the federal courthouse here earlier this month on 10 counts of cocaine trafficking, racketeering and money laundering and faces a sentence of up to 140 years if convicted on all the charges.

The defense has not yet presented its case, but Noriega's lawyer, Frank A. Rubino, argued in pretrial hearings that while Noriega may have allowed his country to be used as a drug and arms trafficking center, he did so only at the behest of the U.S. government.

The admissibility and relevance of matters relating to national security was an area of conflict throughout the 18 months of hearings and other judicial proceedings that preceded the trial of Noriega, who surrendered after the American invasion of Panama on Dec. 20, 1989.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Both hard work and good financial luck lie just ahead. November will find you in the driver's seat where your career is concerned. Choose the best opportunities for making a profit in December. Your public appeal will increase greatly in early 1992. New medical technology improves a health condition next spring. A family reunion leads to an overdue reconciliation. Seek special favors from higher-ups in August of 1992.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: interviewer Barbara Walters, actors Mark Hamill and Michael Douglas, actress Heather Locklear.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Job dissatisfaction could make you think about quitting. You will probably do better by staying put, so adopt a new attitude. Bring thoughts and feelings into clearer focus. Your willpower is legendary.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not let a recent romantic disappointment sour you. An irresistible newcomer will enter your life soon! Be more practical about financial matters. Wishful thinking can lead you down the garden path.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not jump off into the unknown. Your regular work provides a safe haven. Make the best of improved conditions to obtain better credit. Private talks prove very profitable in the afternoon.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Tighten up on overhead and other costs if they are getting out of hand. Deception is possible in negotiations. Accept a friendly offer only after you have made all the necessary checks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Welcome an opportunity to meet new people or join a fraternal or social organization. Take stock of neglected chores. You need to clear them away before beginning another project. Make long-range plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep digging away at the things that hamper progressive thought and action. Extend a helping hand to others this evening. A special celebration could be on your agenda. Wear something truly elegant.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put your best foot forward if you want to impress friends and strangers alike. Do not allow yourself to be used by a pressure group. Romance will smile on you this week.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The spotlight is on money — income, outgo and commercial operations. This is not a good time to invest in ventures controlled by others. Avoid trying to mix business with pleasure this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Continue to be conservative when it comes to money. Salvaging old equipment will help pare costs. Distance yourself from a loved one's on-going relationship battles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not try to buck the system at home or work today. Loved ones are in no mood to compromise. You will gain nothing but confusion by indulging in wishful thinking. Be practical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Consult experts or publications on a special field if looking for a job opening. Saving cash for a rainy day is very wise. Give loved ones more TLC. They need your encouragement!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A loved one or good friend may need extra emotional support now. It is up to you to be understanding. Offer practical assistance to someone down on their luck. A dream proves prophetic.

If you are going to be an aggressive bidder, you had better learn to play your cards well if you wish to remain solvent. South read this hand perfectly to land a touch-and-go spade slam.

Once North raised spades at his second turn, South was off to the races. The five spade bid asked North about a heart control for slam purposes. Although North showed first-round control, South had bid to the hilt and was content to settle in the small slam.

West led fourth-best in partner's suit and declarer was not thrilled with the contract. Since there was a certain club loser in the hand, it would seem declarer had to rely on an even diamond split to set up a long diamond for a discard, but that was considerably against the odds.

Fortunately, there was no hurry to commit to relying on the diamond distribution. Declarer rose with dummy's ace of hearts and cashed six rounds of spades, discarding a heart and two clubs from the table. Next came the king and ace of diamonds, declarer noting that East followed with 9 J.

Declarer decided that East was following honestly and had started with only two diamonds. Therefore, declarer looked to another possibility. First, South led the last trump. West, down to the queen of hearts, 10 8 of diamonds and ace of clubs, could not afford to discard a minor-suit card without setting up the 12th trick for declarer. Thus the defender was forced to part with the queen of hearts as dummy came down to the queen of diamonds and K 10 of clubs.

Now declarer simply led a club toward the king. West was forced to win the ace and put declarer in dummy with the queen of diamonds, and the king of clubs was the fulfilling trick.

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Donald Trump is prepared to battle the Town Council over plans to subdivide his Mar-a-Lago estate and has a backup plan — just in case.

The estate could be divided into 10 lots for private homes, rather than the eight requested in Trump's original, rejected subdivision plan.

The millionaire developer would need a preservation strategy and approval from the council with recommendations from the Landmarks Preservation Commission and the Zoning Commission.

MOSCOW — Raisa Gorbachev has recovered and is walking around outside her home for the first time since the "nervous shock" of last month's coup against her husband, a presidential spokesman said Tuesday.

"As far as I know she's getting quite well, and I was told that she's starting — that she's going out in the city," said Andrei Grachev, the newly appointed spokesman for President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Mrs. Gorbachev fell ill and temporarily was unable to speak after the Aug. 18-21 coup, during which she and her family were placed under house arrest at their seaside vacation home in the Crimea.

Brain unit seen as index for recalling memories

N.Y. Times News Service

They find that the hippocampus, and nearby regions with extensive two-way connections with the neocortex, are essential for establishing long term memory for facts and events.

Marcel Proust's flood of memory when he ate the madeleine has long fascinated readers of literature and science.

After decades of research, scientists who study the brain are at last poised to explain how the brain is organized to form long term, conscious memory and later to recall a particular memory and its various components.

In the beginning of his prodigious, seven-volume novel of the mind, "The Remembrance of Things Past," Proust wrote:

"My mother, seeing that I was cold, offered me some tea. And soon, mechanically, weary after a dull day with the prospect of a depressing morrow, I raised to my lips a spoonful of the tea in which I had soaked a morsel of the cake. No sooner had the warm liquid, and the crumbs with it, touched my palate than a shudder ran through my whole body. ... An exquisite pleasure had invaded my senses. ... Suddenly the memory returns ... the whole of Combray and its surroundings sprang into being, town and gardens alike, from my cup of tea."

Proust asked of the memory, "Whence did it come? What did it signify?" And the rest of the seven volume novel explores what that memory referred to and how it might have been formed.

A provisional answer to Proust's queries has come from two California scientists.

In a paper published in the current Science, they describe the anatomical components of the brain's conscious memory system, and suggest how it operates in connecting the many separate storage sites throughout the cortex that together represent a whole memory.

The organ known as the hippocampus, they suggest, links the separate parts of a memory as it is formed, so enabling all to be evoked when the memory is recalled.

A major insight into the working of conscious memory has been gained from a patient known as H.M. who had his hippocampus removed to relieve epilepsy.

The California team has recreated H.M.'s situation in monkeys, and managed to plot in much greater detail the precise anatomical structures involved in laying down long term memories.

They find that the hippocampus, and nearby regions with extensive two-way connections with the neocortex, are essential for establishing long term memory for facts and events.

Dr. David Olton, a professor of psychology at Johns Hopkins and an expert on hippocampal memory systems, said that the work on H.M. "gave us access to the human brain and memory for the first time. That in turn gave us ways to make animal models of the same memory system, and that gave us the power to compare memory across species — comparative cognition. And finally, that in turn has given us the possibility of having real practical advances."

"We have found for example that if we look at old rats and old monkeys, their memory systems get old just as humans do," he said.

The new findings may suggests ways to protect the hippocampal cells, which are the quickest to die when oxygen to the brain is cut off.

Other damage, during head injury or aging, also may be prevented if the brain's key chemicals or repair mechanisms can be mimicked.

"This work makes practical applications a real possibility," Olton said.

The article in Science this week by Drs. Larry R. Squire and Stuart Zola-Morgan describes a concept of memory that is new — worked out over the past three decades and confirmed in elaborate human and animal studies by several scientists.

The work has shown that in both monkeys and humans, when the hippocampus and nearby tissue is damaged or removed, the ability to form new memory is lost. But it appears that only one specific type of memory is lost, the conscious memory or recall of facts and events.

Unconscious memory, including the ability to learn both mental and physical skills, remains intact. Nor is there damage to the memory used in immediate recall — that is, matters to which a person is paying current attention.

Through experiments with monkeys trained to perform a simple task requiring recall, the California scientists have traced the path of events that occur between the perception of an event and the formation of a long term memory.

A particular region of the neocortex determines that a perceived object is in motion. Once this area has begun tracking an object in space, it passes this information along to the perirhinal cortex, and thence to the parahippocampal formation or the entorhinal cortex.

These three structures are close to the hippocampus, and they channel the information through the dentate gyrus at the doorway to the hippcampus, and then through the several parts of the hippocampus in sequence.

One significant result of the work is that the amygdala, often thought to be part of the hippocampal memory system, is in fact not directly involved.

For a memory to be laid down, the nervous messages reaching the hippocampus from a particular perception must then be passed back through the medial temporal lobe and out to the relevant regions of the neo-cortex.

NOTICE OF CONSERVATORSHIP OF COMCO INSURANCE COMPANY

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-1395, effective September 18, 1991, placing Comco Insurance Company, Houston, Texas in a state of conservatorship. This company is an authorized domestic property and casualty insurance company.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5, Texas Insurance Code, the company has requested and consented to the appointment of a conservator. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts will be made to rehabilitate the company for the protection of its policyholders and the public.

If you are a policyholder of this company, your insurance coverage continues in effect for as long as you pay your premiums. If the company is rehabilitated, your coverage will continue as though nothing had happened. If the company is not rehabilitated, it may be placed into receivership or its business reinsured, and you will be so notified. In either event, contractual claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection of covered claims up to the amounts specified in Article 21.28-C, Texas Insurance Code.

Courses of action available to policyholders include continuation or cancellation of their policies. Policyholders who wish to continue their coverage need do nothing more so long as their premiums are paid. If premiums are due, policyholders should continue to pay them in the same amount and manner as in the past in order to keep their coverage in force.

To avoid possible loss of coverage, policyholders must continue to pay premiums unless and until similar insurance can be obtained from another company. Policy provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Policyholders will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, Texas Department of Insurance rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-1395. If any action should be required in the future, policyholders will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

NOTICE OF ANCILLARY CONSERVATORSHIP OF BONNEVILLE INSURANCE COMPANY

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 91-1397, effective September 18, 1991, placing Bonneville Insurance Company, Beaverton, Oregon in a state of conservatorship. This company is domiciled in Oregon, but was licensed to write property and casualty insurance in Texas.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 6, Texas Insurance Code, the company has failed to comply with the lawful requirements of the Commissioner of Insurance, is in such condition as to render the continuance of its business hazardous to the public or to holders of its policies of insurance, and has exceeded its powers as defined in Texas Insurance Code, Article 21.28-A. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company located in the State of Texas. Efforts will be made to rehabilitate the company by providing for payment of its policyholder claims in the State of Texas for the protection of its policyholders and the public.

Bonneville has no inforce policies of insurance in Texas and is not currently writing any insurance in Texas. If the company is rehabilitated, insurance coverage will continue as though nothing had happened. If the company is not rehabilitated, it may be placed into receivership or its business reinsured, and notice will be given. In either event, contractual claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amounts specified in Article 21.28-C, Texas Insurance Code.

The Ancillary Conservator is working with the Oregon Insurance Department to settle or otherwise take care of all Texas policyholder claims insured by Bonneville Insurance Company. Policy provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Policyholders will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, Texas Department of Insurance rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 91-1397. If any action should be required in the future, policyholders will be notified.

'Miracle' Bears do it again

■ Even Mike Ditka is beginning to look at his team as one of destiny.

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — The way the Chicago Bears are playing these days has coach Mike Ditka wondering about destiny.

Especially after the "miraculous" 19-13 overtime victory over the New York Jets Monday night that gave the Bears a 4-0 record.

"There was a series of miraculous plays," Ditka said Tuesday. "Anytime you win a game like we did last night makes you believe in the hereafter, the great beyond. It makes you believe, I know that.

"There was one miraculous play by Steve McMichael to set it up. Then a series of miraculous plays by Jim Harbaugh. The miraculous missed field goal. Then Harbaugh again."

The Bears had been stopped by a great goal-line stand and they were out of timeouts. The Jets took over on their 1-yard line and moved to the 34 on the running of Blair Thomas.

On the second play after the 2-minute warning, McMichael stripped Thomas and recovered the fumble at the 36. Led by Harbaugh's passing, the Bears began to move, and on the last play of regulation, Harbaugh hit Neal Anderson with a 6-yard touchdown pass. The play was reviewed, but it stood.

"I was nervous on the extra point," Ditka said.

"My only thought was the extra point," Anderson said. "The extra point is not a given thing. We had to have it to go into overtime."

They got it from Kevin Butler.

For a while, the overtime belonged to the Jets. On their second possession, they moved to the Chicago 11 on the running of Thomas and the passing of Ken O'Brien, plus an unnecessary roughness penalty against linebacker Mike Singletary.

Pat Leahy came in to kick a gimme 28-yard field goal, but missed wide left. It

MHS serves up volleyball win

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

When Midland High's serves were on target in the Lady Bulldogs' 15-4, 12-15, 15-5 win over Odessa High, they were unstoppable. When they were off, the 'Dawgs fell flat.

MHS' serves and OHS' concentration lapses were what would eventually spell defeat for the Lady Broncos Tuesday night.

Midland High's record improved to 8-4 overall, 2-1 in district. Odessa High fell to 1-2, 3-8.

In other District 4-5A action, Odessa Permian defeated Midland Lee, 15-12, 15-4, and Abilene High downed San Angelo Central, 15-8, 15-9. Bronte defeated Abilene Cooper in a non-district matchup, 15-13, 15-4.

"Every team has trouble concentrating from time to time," OHS volleyball coach Margie Ephriam said. "I can't say it's just an Odessa High problem.

"Plus the kids didn't understand some of the calls that were being made and that threw them."

Midland High's victory — be it in the first or third game, or in the match itself — was rarely, if ever, in doubt. The only factors which stood to throw a kink into the Lady 'Dogs victory celebration was a tall, effective OHS front line made up of Amy Trent, Velma Reyes and Quanna Young, and the tricky sidearmed serves of Reyes.

The Lady 'Dogs, however, came out the winners more often than not against the Lady Bronchos defensive efforts, with players like Mich Neatherlin, Donna Eaden and Sally Gibson effectively crashing through the Bronchos' front line.

Midland High jumped out to an 11-3 lead in the first game. On the final point, Eaden picked apart OHS' front line with a dink that just cleared the heads of OHS' tough front players.

With Neatherlin, Eaden and Jennifer Pirkle, all starters, sitting out the second game, MHS head coach Sonya Pittman played several second teamers.

MHS recorded several unforced errors and missed serves in the second game, eventually losing 15-12, but not before

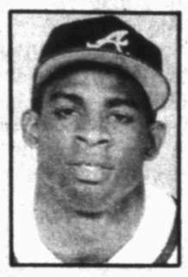
Braves summon Sanders

■ Atlanta's two-sport star returns to the diamond for the pennant chase.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Bo knows baseball, football and rehab. Deion had better know airline schedules.

In this weird and wondrous season for the Atlanta Braves, the weirdest news yet came Tuesday: Deion Sanders, who left the team eight weeks ago to resume his NFL career, will play both sports for the duration of the NL West pennant race.



Sanders

Bo Jackson, of course, became the most successful two-sport athlete of his generation with the Kansas City Royals and the Los Angeles Raiders.

But Jackson never played two sports in a 36-hour span. Sanders, from all indications, plans to do just that this weekend: running back punts for the Falcons in Atlanta Sunday afternoon; running over travelers at Hartsfield airport Sunday night; and then running the bases for the Braves in Cincinnati Monday night.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Numbers not whole story of Lee-MHS

What can we expect when Midland High hosts Midland Lee in the District 4-5A football opener Friday night at Memorial Stadium?

Williamson

Well, this is one year where the answer would seem easy. Midland Lee should be headed for a Cuthbert Street victory dance. A Rebel romp is a realistic assessment of the facts.

And the facts are:

Lee is unbeaten at 3-0, having beaten three state playoff teams of a year ago. Midland High is 0-3, having lost to two Class 4A schools, Andrews and Monahans.

The Lee defense has given up a meager 10 points and didn't give up touchdown in its first 11 quarters of play. The MHS defense has given up 72 points.

The Lee offense has scored 99 points and the MHS offense has scored only three points and still looking for its first touchdown this season.

The lack of offensive production at MHS is the most telling statistic. That fact alone has forced the Bulldog defense to stay on the field far too long. The MHS defense isn't that bad, but they can't stop fourth-and-one inside the 35-yard line forever.

The Lee defense has shown to be stronger this year than it has been in the past few seasons, and that's a major problem the struggling MHS offense will have to face Friday.

Last, Lee has won seven of the last eight games and owns an 18-10-2 lead in the overall series.

However, this is the MHS vs. Lee football game. Lee has won two of the last three games, but all three have been gut wrenchers. Lee held on for a 14-7 win last year. Lee escaped with a 32-27 victory in 1989 and lost to the Bulldogs by a 35-21 margin in 1988.

The weight of evidence still slant to the Lee side of the scales this season. If the two teams play to the three-game form we've seen this year, Lee should win easily.

Lee coach Earl Miller, however, worries about his team playing up to its capabilities. MHS coach Davis Corley, naturally, hopes his Bulldogs play above abilities thus far shown.

Miller complained that his defensive unit had spent too much time reading its press clippings prior to the game with Amarillo Palo Duro. He wasn't pleased with the defensive effort even though his team won 34-7.

Corley also feels his 'Dogs can rise to greater heights, especially if he can get his offensive line healthy.

No matter how you look at it, the Bulldogs have a tough chore ahead. Lee is the heavy favorite — and should be.

But if the Lee players spend any time reading this, things could even up a bit, especially if the Bulldogs get hungry enough.

In short, MHS needs a supreme effort. And in the past three years, at least, they have given an account of themselves.

Tickets for the game go on sale at 8 a.m. today. Jack Tayrien, Midland athletic director, expects a good crowd.

"Of course, season ticket holders, for the most part, have already purchased tickets and we will have a pretty good crowd just from that," Tayrien says.

"We'll know more after sales Wednesday morning when tickets are open to the general public. There are still a lot of tickets on both the east (Lee side) and west (MHS) sides. Just from past experience, I think the game will be a near sellout, but I don't think we will have to turn anyone away who wants to see the game."

Raw facts shouldn't keep anyone from attending this game. If it does, they never grasped the fact that this is MHS vs. Lee. It can be an underdog's dream or a favorite's springboard. MHS has little to lose — and that makes it a dangerous time for Lee, who is seeking its ninth consecutive trip to the state playoffs.

BEARS: Harbaugh turns in record passing game was the first field goal from inside 30 yards Leahy has missed since 1982. He has had four blocked from inside 30.

"We were like a cat with a lot of lives," Anderson said.

Harbaugh made the final life count. He passed the Bears downfield and hit Cap Boso with a 23-yard touchdown pass. But instant replay review ruled no touchdown and the ball was placed on the 1. The players had to be called back to the field from the locker rooms and Harbaugh was even being interviewed by a television station when the replay ruling came.

Harbaugh then took it in himself. Another review showed that touchdown should stand. End of game.

Harbaugh had a career day with 28 completions in 42 attempts for 303 yards. So Ditka got in a dig against former quarterback Jim McMahon, who is now starting for the Philadelphia Eagles. McMahon recently was quoted as saying the current Eagles are a better team then the 1985 Bears, who won the Super Bowl with McMahon.

"We're getting the best quarterback play we've had, and that includes 1985," Ditka said. "He's (Harbaugh) great and I'm happy for him."

"I'm playing as good as any quarterback in the NFL," Harbaugh said, "but there's still room for improvement."

Not much. The Bears are undefeated, although they have won all four by a total of 14 points.

"We're not as good as our record, but we've managed to get to 4-0," Ditka said. "You wonder how it has happened. The players have made up their minds to make the plays. They have pride, and sometimes they take the hokey things I say to heart.

"We have good players but I don't think we have superstars. Maybe Neal is and maybe Richard (Dent) is. To a degree that can help, not having so many stars trying to please anybody, just trying to win."

SANDERS: Only 13 RBI so far

(From 1C)

Even as the Braves try to vault from worst to first, this is weird.

How much all this will eventually trouble the Los Angeles Dodgers — who enjoyed a 1½-game lead when the Braves summoned Sanders on Tuesday — remains to be seen. The Braves' game against Cincinnati was rained out Tuesday night.

After all, it's not as if Braves general manager John Schuerholz found a 28-year-old Henry Aaron hanging around and got him a uniform. Sanders hit just .193 in his 49 games with Atlanta this season, with four homers and 13 runs batted in.

But he was nine-for-12 stealing bases, and therein lies the reason for all this. With Otis Nixon, the major league's stolen base leader, suspended for a drug violation, the Braves need all the speed they can get.

Thus the announcement Tuesday from team spokesman Jim Schultz: Sanders was being added to the roster "for the remainder of the season."

Schuerholz, at a news conference before Tuesday's game, said Sanders would be in uniform for nine of the Braves' final 12 games. He said Sanders would miss this weekend's three-game series in Houston.

"We had talked with other clubs trying to acquire a speed guy," Schuerholz said. "We decided if Deion wanted to do it, as he said he did, we'd go ahead and give him the opportunity.

"I spoke to (Falcons president) Taylor Smith as a courtesy. I called to tell him, and he just said he appreciated our calling."

"We just hope he doesn't get hurt and we want him to keep focused on football," Smith said in a statement. "We've got a big game coming up this weekend against an undefeated division rival."

"I was excited," Sanders said as he was reunited with his baseball teammates. "They were excited. My face lit up like a Christmas tree when they saw me and accepted me."

Sanders said he also was wished well by his football teammates.

"They told me to go for it," he said.

Sander said he had not talked to Falcons coach Jerry Glanville, "but I probably will tomorrow at practice."

He said he does not expect to be fined by the Falcons.

"No, I don't. I haven't done anything wrong. I'm going to be at practice, meetings and the game. What I do on my own time is my own business," Sanders said.

Braves manager Bobby Cox said Sanders will be used "mostly as a pinch runner, but knowing Deion it doesn't take him long to get anything back."

Sanders will play for the Falcons Sunday when they play host to New Orleans.

The Falcons are off the following weekend, when the Braves close out the regular season — a coincidence that apparently spawned the deal.

What had been idle speculation on the talk shows heated up Monday, when Sanders said he might be willing to rejoin the Braves, if asked. But Tuesday's developments came suddenly.

One of Sanders' agent downplayed the deal just hours before it happened.

"It doesn't make a whole lot of sense," said Barry Axelrod, Sanders' agent for baseball negotiations. "Deion hasn't swung a bat in nearly two months; I'm not sure how helpful he could be to the Braves, other than defense or pinch-running."

Third place went to Scotty Nieman, Trent Day, Bob Williamson and Dave Sellinger, also with a 58.

The tournament raised approximately $8,000 for the Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scouts.

Twins magic number dwindles

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Scott Erickson had a no-hitter until Dan Pasqua homered in the seventh inning and went on to record his 19th win Tuesday night, as the Minnesota Twins reduced their magic number to three with a 9-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Kent Hrbek capped a four-run second inning with a two-run homer off Jack McDowell (17-10), as the AL West-leading Twins took a nine-game lead over second-place Chicago with 11 to play. Minnesota can clinch a share of the division title Wednesday night, when they again host the White Sox.

As important as the game was, the Twins felt it was even more important to get a solid performance from Erickson (19-7), who had been 6-5 with a 6.75 ERA since Chicago ended his 12-game winning streak back on June 29. Erickson went on the disabled list with elbow soreness after that game and had rarely flashed his pre-injury brilliance.

But he was in total command Tuesday, finishing with a one-hitter over seven innings.

Mark Guthrie completed the one-hitter with two innings of relief. It was the 12th one-hitter — the first involving more than one pitcher — in Twins history and the first since Ken Schrom beat Kansas City on June 26, 1985.

Erickson retired the first 16 batters on four strikeouts and 12 grounders before losing his perfect game on a five-pitch walk to Craig Grebeck in the sixth. He had a three-ball count on only one previous batter and was helped by sparkling defensive plays by shortstop Greg Gagne and first baseman Hrbek.

American

Tigers 7, Indians 2

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers kept their meager pennant hopes alive and Scott Aldred earned his third major league win in a triumph over Cleveland.

The Tigers broke the game open with four runs off rookie Charles Nagy (10-13) in the first and Mickey Tettleton hit a two-run homer, his 28th, in the fifth.

Aldred (2-3), making his 10th start since his Sept. 1 recall, allowed nine hits in 8⅓ innings, including Albert Belle's 28th homer in the ninth, before he was literally knocked out of the game by a line drive off the bat of Carlos Martinez.

The ball skipped into center field and Martinez wound up with a double. Jerry Don Gleaton came in to get the last two outs.

Aldred walked two, struck out two and benefited from three double plays. Both of his previous major league wins occured in Milwaukee.

Brewers 5, Yankees 4

MILWAUKEE — Cal Eldred won his major league debut and Robin Yount tied Babe Ruth for 27th place on the all-time hit list as the Milwaukee Brewers jumped to an early four-run lead and held on to beat New York.

Eldred, the Brewers' No. 1 draft choice in 1989, went 5⅓ innings, allowing seven hits and three runs. Eric Plunk (2-5) was the loser.

Milwaukee led 4-0 by the third inning with the help of Paul Molitor's double and Yount's 2000th career single. Yount is the 37th player in major league history to have 2,000 singles and the hit was his 2,873rd, tying himn with Ruth.

Giants rally to upend Astros, 9-7

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Matt Williams homered in the fourth inning, then was hit with a pitch his next time up and ejected for charging the mound as the San Francisco Giants beat the Houston Astros 9-7 Tuesday night.

San Francisco, which rallied for seven runs in the ninth, went ahead 2-1 in the fourth when Williams hit a two-run homer off Brian Williams. The home run, his 31st, made him only the seventh player to homer in all 12 NL ballparks in one season.

National

Pirates 10, Mets 8

NEW YORK — Howard Johnson set an NL record for home runs by a switch hitter and Daryl Boston added a grand slam for the Mets, but the Pittsburgh Pirates held off New York.

The Pirates, though out-slugged, still out-slogged the Mets in a game where it rained for the final six innings. Pittsburgh, playing for the first time since clinching the NL East on Sunday, combined 17 hits, seven walks, three errors and a hit batter to win.

Cardinals 4, Expos 3

ST. LOUIS — Montreal made four errors that led to four unearned runs, and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Expos behind seven strong innings from Omar Olivares.

It was the Cardinals' 35th come-from-behind victory this season, but their first since Aug. 27.

Phillies 4, Cubs 2

CHICAGO — Andy Ashby won for the first time in six major league starts, allowing three hits in seven innings as Philadelphia beat Chicago.

Ashby (1-4) lost his first four starts and then had no-decision against Montreal last Thursday. He allowed only a single to Damon Berryhill in the fourth, a home run to pinch-hitter Derrick May in the fifth and a single to Dwight Smith in the seventh.

Mitch Williams finished with one-hit relief for his 29th save.

MHS: Bulldogs move record to 2-1 in district play the Lady Dawgs got off four straight points behind the serve of Michelle Fitts, and another five consecutive points while Leta Hamrick stood on the service line. MHS made it a respectable three-point loss after having been earlier in the game, 11-3.

That her Bronchos won the game by so little after being ahead by so much did not seem to phase Ephriam.

"A win is a win," Ephriam said. "It doesn't matter if it's 15-12 or 16-14 or 15-2."

The third game was all MHS as the Bulldogs jumped out to a lightning fast 8-0 lead. The eighth point of the game for MHS came on a textbook set followed by a perfectly placed kill by Eaden.

OHS scored four of its five points consecutively during a spurt late in the game.

A nicely-timed kill by Neatherlin capped off the win for MHS.

"When we got our serve over the net, we rallied and did some nice things," Pittman said. "We forced them into making mistakes.

"I'm always concerned when we play Odessa High. They're always very competitive. I don't think we should start ranking teams at the beginning of district, but I felt we should beat them. But we had to play well to do that."

Odessa High's junior varsity defeated MHS 15-12, 7-15, 16-14.

Midland High travels to San Angelo Central (0-2, 2-13) Saturday. Junior varsity action begins at 1:15 p.m.; the varsity will follow.

Permian downs Lee, 15-12, 15-4

Staff Report

ODESSA — The Midland Lee Lady Rebels hung tight but eventually lost in two games to Odessa Permian, 15-12, 15-4, Tuesday night in District 4-5A volleyball action.

"After we didn't show up at the gym Saturday, I was excited that we played well tonight," first-year Lee coach Anita Korder said.

"They popped us with the very first ball right down the line, but our kids bowed up and said 'We're going to hit it right back at you.' And that set the tone.

"We played well in the first game, we're just still trying to get our kids to go for the jugular."

Tiffany Grafa and Alicia Furrow were given credit for above average blocking games while Melina Milan performed well both serving and passing.

The Lee JV lost 15-9, 15-12 to open the evening's festivities.

Lee plays its next two matches on its home court, Saturday against Fort Stockton in non-district action, and Oct. 1 against Odessa High.

Arlington Lamar retains top 5A ranking

Associated Press

Prep Football

If Arlington Lamar coach Eddy Peach is excited about being ranked atop Class 5A, he doesn't show it.

The Vikings retained their tenuous grip on the No. 1 ranking after beating up on Irving MacArthur 35-7, but Peach still isn't sure what to make of this year's team.

While the defense has played well so far, the offense has been inconsistent, due mostly to a knee injury suffered by quarterback Tony Kennedy, Peach said.

Kennedy's injury forced Peach to limit the use of the option play, on which all-state back Shawn Walters gained many of his 2,202 yards last year.

Kennedy missed Lamar's second game, a 17-16 victory over South Grand Prairie. He returned last week, but "he wasn't 100 percent, so we cut down on the option," Peach said.

The offense also has been hindered by an inexperienced line that returned only two starters and averages about 220 pounds. That's down from 250 last year, when the Vikings advanced to the state title game.

"We're getting better as a football team," Peach said. "How good we are I don't know. I think you could select several people right now and say they were No. 1 and nobody could say you were wrong.

"We appreciate it as an honor, but it's just that at this point."

The Vikings will be tested over the next three weeks as they take on district rivals Weatherford, Arlington Sam Houston and Arlington, which have a combined 8-1 record.

"It's a big stretch for us," he said. "We could be out of it."

Lamar received 220 points and 13 of 24 votes for first in the poll, followed closely by Dallas Carter with 211 points and nine first-place votes. Carter remained undefeated with a 47-19 thrashing of Fort Worth O.D. Wyatt.

Fort Bend Willowridge is third, followed by Huntsville, Odessa Permian, Waco, Aldine, San Antonio Marshall, Killeen and Alief Elsik.

Elsik dropped from third after losing 26-10 to defending 5A small school champion Aldine. Elmer Brown rushed for 147 yards and two second-half touchdowns and quarterback Eric Gray added two scores to lead Aldine.

In Class 4A, Bastrop remained the top team with 234 points and 20 first-place votes. The Bears walloped 5A foe Copperas Cove 44-0 behind Anthony Hubbard's 171 yards and two touchdowns.

Houston C.E. King shot from fourth to second after its 34-0 victory over Crosby. Austin Westlake is third, followed by McKinney, A&M Consolidated, Wilmer-Hutchins, Waxahachie, Corsicana, Burkburnett and LaMarque.

Cuero retained the top spot in 3A, receiving 14 first-place votes after its 20-6 victory over Beeville. Vernon leapfrogged Sinton into the No. 2 spot after a 33-14 beating of Burkburnett. Sinton dropped to third despite its 41-6 clobbering of Robstown.

Schulenburg again is the near unanimous choice in 2A with 239 points and 23 votes for first. Garden City is tops in Class A with 18 votes for first.

West Orange-Stark (1-2) became the second No. 1 team in 4A to drop out of the poll after losing to Vidor 28-24. Dallas Roosevelt, the preseason No. 1 pick, also is 1-2 and unranked.

Corsicana coach Don Denbow isn't happy with his team, even after the Tigers knocked off Waxahachie.

The 13-12 victory over Waxahachie Friday night made Corsicana one of three teams to climb into the 1991 rankings for the first time. No. 10 Columbus in Class 3A and No. 10 Rotan in Class A also debuted.

"I'm still not sure how good this team is, and I'm still not satisfied with how we're playing," Denbow said.

Bantamweight Morales still critical after brain surgery

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Bantamweight Fernie Morales, who underwent surgery to remove a blood clot in his brain after losing a 12-round decision over the weekend, remained in critical condition Tuesday.

"He is stable but guarded," said Dick Schroeder, the director of community relations at John F. Kennedy Memorial Hospital. "He remains in critical condition, there has been no change."

As far as a prognosis is concerned, Schroeder said, "Each neurological case is unique. There is no way we can anticipate or project change or developments."

Morales, 25, of El Paso, Texas, underwent surgery late Saturday. He showed no apparent sign of serious injury immediately after his loss to Orlando Canizales, the IBF champion, earlier in the day.

Morales apparently fainted about 1½ hours after the fight at the Desert ExpoCentre. He had been knocked down in the second and 12th rounds.

Four sentenced for attack on Del Valle players, coaches

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The University Interscholastic League said it will consider further punishment against the Brenham High School football program after an attack on Del Valle players last month.

A teammate and two assistant coaches from Del Valle also were beaten after they intervened in the attack by what educators said were 15 to 30 Brenham fans as a defensive back returned to a team bus after a preseason scrimmage.

Ten people were indicted in the attack at Brenham's football stadium. Four of them — former Brenham High School students ranging in age from 19 to 23 — were sentenced Friday to 10 years in prison after pleading guilty to aggravated assault. One of the men qualified for a 90-day boot camp.

The UIL's nine-member state executive committee will review the matter on Oct. 2, executive director Bailey Marshall said. If found at fault, the Brenham school district could receive punishment ranging from a verbal reprimand to suspension of the football program.

After the attack, Brenham revised its security plans to include additional officers and lighting and escorts for visiting teams and game officials to their vehicles.

The school said it would have security officers at scrimmages as well as at regular games.

The Brenham school system sent a letter of apology to the Del Valle district.

District Attorney Charles Sebesta said some of those involved in the fight had been drinking. Some of them were involved in a fight earlier in the day with residents of the nearby town of Somerville, he said.

Prices see-saw

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished higher Tuesday after a wild session that had traders jumping at conflicting signals from Iraq and an OPEC meeting.

After opening lower, oil rallied sharply in the afternoon on fears that Iraq's detention of U.N. weapons inspectors would stir more tensions in the Middle East. But the rally was broken when Saudi Arabia indicated at the OPEC meeting that it would seek to increase crude production.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $22.19 per barrel, up 12 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas prices were mostly lower, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $1.889 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.0 cents.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar closed higher in domestic trading Tuesday after falling in Europe.

The dollar rose in New York to 133.45 Japanese yen from 132.835 on Monday.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — The stock market overcame bad news on consumer confidence and auto sales on Tuesday to post a modest gain.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed up 18.56 to 3,029.07.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady addressed the 1991 International Organization of Securities Commissions conference in Washington on Tuesday. Brady defended the integrity of the scandal-plagued government securities auctions, saying, "the system has worked."

Securities, banking scandals point out need for reform, Brady says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tandem scandals in U.S. government securities and international banking should not be used as an excuse to block Bush administration proposals to ease banking restrictions, Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said Tuesday.

Lawmakers should not act hastily in the wake of the Salomon Inc. bond trading scandal and the worldwide probe of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, Brady told an international group of stock market regulators in Washington.

Brady said the scandals pointed out the need for reform but should not be used by opponents of the Bush banking legislation to impose "new and overly burdensome regulation."

Congressional critics of the administration's banking bill claim regulators' missteps in both scandals indicate now is not the time to ease decades-old restrictions on banking. The administration seeks to allow: interstate banking, bank ownership by commercial corporations and end the division between commercial banks, which make loans and take deposits, and investment banks, which underwrite securities.

"Our enemy is the imposition of piecemeal, uncoordinated and ill-advised regulation," Brady told the opening session of the 16th annual conference of the International Organization of Securities Commissions.

Financial regulators from 50 countries attending the conference are discussing ways to unify the increasingly complex global securities market.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan told the same gathering at Constitution Hall that former Eastern Bloc nations looking to convert to market economies will have to go to the private sector for capital, just like any startup enterprise.

Consumer confidence

Index down according to research group

■ Index of consumer confidence down almost 3½ points, according to a survey of U.S. households.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Consumer confidence tumbled again in September, a grim portent for the already choppy economic recovery, the Conference Board said Tuesday.

The business-supported research group said its consumer confidence index skidded nearly 3.5 points to 72.7. The drop was the third straight in the index, which is compiled from a survey of 5,000 households nationwide and is widely followed as an indicator of consumer sentiment.

The decline raised new concerns about the economic recovery. Consumer spending accounts for about two-thirds of the gross national product.

Further bad news about consumer spending came Tuesday from Ford Motor Co., which said its car sales fell 22.6 percent in mid-September. Other carmakers also were expected to report weak sales.

"Given recent consumer confidence readings, those who expect the economy to rebound in the remaining months of the year are likely to be disappointed," said Conference Board economist Fabian Linden.

"A concerned and insecure consumer is a cautious spender," he said.

Unemployment continues to be a particular concern. Forty percent of the respondents said jobs are currently hard to get, while only 7.5 percent called jobs plentiful.

The Conference Board said the current view of jobs is the most negative since the 1982 recession.

The survey was conducted by National Family Opinion Inc. of Toledo, Ohio.

Lawmaker backs Taylor to head FDIC

■ Confirmation hearings begin for William Taylor, present director of banking regulation at the Federal Reserve.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — William Taylor's performance in overseeing regulation of the scandal-ridden Bank of Credit and Commerce International should not block his elevation to head the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee said Tuesday.

Sen. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., opened Taylor's confirmation hearing by noting that "BCCI — arguably the biggest fraud in banking history — occurred on Mr. Taylor's watch at the Federal Reserve Board," the agency where he has spent most of his career.

But, at the end of the 3½-hour hearing, Riegle told reporters, "I have not found anything there that I think is a barrier to his going into the FDIC position."

Taylor, 52, went to work as an examiner in 1961 for the Federal Reserve, where since 1985 he has been director of banking regulation, an important but low-profile position.

In July, President Bush nominated him to succeed L. William Seidman, who is leaving the highly visible FDIC job after six years of contending with record bank failures and the taxpayer bailout of the savings and loan industry.

'BCCI — arguably the biggest fraud in banking history — occurred on Mr. (William) Taylor's watch at the Federal Reserve Board... I have not found anything there that I think is a barrier to his going into the FDIC position.'

— Sen. Donald Riegle,

Riegle grilled Taylor at length about BCCI, the international bank that collapsed in June, leaving depositors stranded around the world.

The bank took no deposits in the United States but has pled guilty to money laundering and admitted to secretly acquiring the Washington area's largest banking company, First American Bankshares Inc., in 1982.

Members of Congress have criticized the Federal Reserve for failing to discover the illegal ownership transfer sooner. But Taylor said none of the documentary or financial evidence examined by the agency revealed it.

The Federal Reserve could not prove its suspicions until late last year, when it obtained a private auditor's report in London, he said.

"We have had a very, very difficult time establishing this case. We have gone all over the earth to do so," he said. "... In the final analysis, we built a strong case."

He said that so far his examiners have not turned up any proof that the Luxembourg-based BCCI exercised operating control over First American, but he stressed that the investigation was continuing.

"There's more out there; we just have to keep looking," he said.

With hindsight, the BCCI case shows that the Federal Reserve should have had a stronger investigative staff to bolster its examination and auditing. But, he said, it will remain extremely difficult to discover an offshore conspiracy to secretly transfer a bank's ownership.

On another subject, Taylor said his first priority would be ensuring the FDIC has a $70 billion taxpayer-backed line of credit in place so it can handle the hundreds of banks expected to fail over the next several year.

He said he then would search for new ways to handle the rescue and closing of ailing banks. He offered few specifics, but mentioned forced mergers and alluded to stepping in early with government assistance that is matched with private investment. That way, sour loans and repossessed real estate remain under private ownership rather end up in the government's hands.

"We can't just continue to close and close and liquidate and liquidate and have the assets pile up," he said. "There has to be a way to do things differently."

Western wear store to open in old S&Q

By Mella McEwen

Workers are busy renovating the former S&Q Clothiers location at 315 W. Andrews Highway.

The store is the new location for Lubbock-based DOLLAR WESTERN WEAR, owned by Larry Moore.

Anticipated opening is mid- to late October.

Also coming to Midland is McKAY COMPLETE HOME FURNISHINGS, to be located in the former TG&Y location at 215 W. Andrews Highway.

Diane McKay, who will manage the store for her father, store owner Howard McKay, says the new furniture store will carry a complete line of furnishings — living room, dining room, and bedroom — featuring such labels as Thomasville, Lane and Berkline. She notes that plans are for a Thomasville Gallery in the store.

McKay has stores in Monahans and his hometown of Kermit, which has been open 25 years.

Anticipated opening for the new store is around November 1.

Preparing to move is DEE JAY'S SHOES, currently in Dellwood Mall.

According to owner Don Knight, the store will relocate to Imperial Shopping Center, Wadley and Midkiff, at the end of October. He will be located between Skate Stiks and Silver's Framery and Gallery.

Knight said the new location will give him better control over the store's environment as well as a bigger space with a larger stockroom. "We'll have growing room," he said. In addition, he said, he's noticed that the new location "in in the direction the town seems to be growing."

Dee Jay Shoes has been in Midland five years.

Also on the move is COTTON PATCH COLLECTIBLES, which is preparing to leave Midland Park Mall for The Courtyard shopping center.

The owners/operators say the new store is larger and they promise a new plan for crafters.

MR. GATTIS PIZZA, 3205 W. Cuthbert, has expanded its restaurant by 2400 square feet.

Regional manager B.J. Elliott said the new addition includes a large game room that includes all the latest games, including ones featuring The Simpsons and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles as well as skee-ball and air hockey. The games run on "Mr. Gattis Quarter" tokens which can be bought for a regular quarter; games dispense tickets to the winning player, who can then redeem them for merchandise.

Gattis also has two new party rooms and offers birthday party packages for children that includes a free meal for the birthday child and a T-shirt, balloons and hats for the guests, and 20 free tokens for the game room.

MIDESSA K.O.A. CAMPGROUND, 4220 S. County Road 1290, 1.5 miles west of Midland International Airport, has completed the first phase of its expansion project.

Now the campground can accommodate approximately 175 units per night.

The campground has been open in the Permian Basin for 17 years and offers a convenience store, laundry facilities, restrooms and showers, a dump station, storage for R.V.s, a playground, swimming pool, L.P. gas and R.V. supplies.

Kamping Kabins are also available.

K mart to reach $50 billion by 1995, predicts chairman

N.Y. Times News Service

K mart Corp.'s chairman, Joseph E. Antonini, predicted Tuesday that the company's sales would reach $50 billion by 1995, up from $32 billion last year.

Antonini told analysts that profits would equal 3.5 percent of sales, or $1.75 billion, in 1995, up from 2.4 percent of sales, or $756 million, last year.

"The sales goal is achievable, but the profit goal is pretty ambitious," said Daniel D. Barry of Kidder, Peabody & Co. "If they do that, it's a pretty good number."

K mart is in the midst of a five-year, $2.3 billion program to remodel its stores and improve the quality of its merchandise. By the end of the year, 30 percent of the company's 2,200 discount stores in the United States and Canada will be new or remodeled, Antonini said.

K mart, which has been cutting costs, said it would reduce its expenses by an additional $200 million by 1995.

Pre-packaged cookie dough not homemade

By Linda Anderson

Remember, "Nothin' says lovin' like something from the oven..."? OK, add this one with it: "You don't get somethin' for nothin'." If you don't believe me, try a carton of Oven Lovin' cookies from Pillsbury. (OK, enough dropping of the "g.")

Anderson

Well, I'm always ready to try new things, so I got carton (actually, they look a lot like butter tubs or cottage cheese tubs — you know, that size and shape) of Oven Lovin' cookies (chocolate chip) and took them home to check them out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Suggested retail price is $2.69 for an 18-ounce tub of pre-mixed cookie dough, but I found them for $2.65. See, a bargain.

According to a product description furnished by Pillsbury, Oven Lovin' cookies are "three flavors of high quality ready-to-bake refrigerated cookie dough in a tub ... chock full of favorite brands of chocolate chips or candy pieces. They taste like cookies homemade from scratch. The dough stays fresh in the convenient reusable tub so that only the desired number of cookies can be baked at any one time."

The three flavors are chocolate chip (made with Hershey's Semi-Sweet Chocolate Chips), chocolate candies (similar to M&Ms, but not quite) and Reese's Pieces Candy. Oh, yeah, the company's information also claims the refrigerated cookie dough "offers a fast way to prepare fresh hot cookies" from a "Newly formulated dough recipe for a taste more like scratch than ever." (If this is a new product, how can it taste "more like scratch than ever"? It's never been before!)

We discovered that, yes, the dough was refrigerated and ready-to-bake (see above); baking was easy — just plop the dough by spoonsful on a cookie sheet and bake for a few minutes at about 350 degrees — nothing to it.

Taste test results, however, were divided firmly along the generation gap. The two youngest taste testers l-o-v-e-d the cookies, and begged for more. The older ones agreed that the cookies were fresh and warm from the oven, but they didn't taste like homemade cookies, they tasted like cookies made from refrigerated cookie dough. Which made sense.

Remember what I said about getting something for nothing? Homemade cookies take time, and taking shortcuts just doesn't do it.

Well, for $2.69 — or even $2.65 — you can probably make better cookies from scratch. It's the perfect project for a cloudy fall weekend for someone who doesn't like football.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

NEW YORK (AP) — Never underestimate the power of garlic.

The aromatic bulb has been used for centuries for everything from cures for colds to warding off evil spirits.

But garlic — and there are more than 300 varieties — is used in a wide variety of dishes. Now garlic, especially elephant garlic, is coming into its own as a vegetable.

Elephant garlic, a cousin of the onion, is much more mild in flavor and can be used in salads or sandwiches and sauteed with other vegetables. Some buds are so large — up to 6 inches in diameter — they are stuffed and baked.

Elephant garlic does not leave odor on the breath. However, this garlic has a shorter shelf life than other garlics.

Choose garlic that is firm, plump and clean. Size is not an indication of quality. Instead, the skins should be dry and papery. Garlic with soft spots should be discarded.

New-style pizza is on a roll

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Here's a spicy snack pizza that's on a roll — a bread roll that is. Hot roll mix gives these sausage-studded pinwheels a head start. For your next get-together, just stir up the convenient yeast dough while the sausage and vegetables brown. Then, roll it out, fill it up, and assemble it into two crescent-shaped loaves. The loaves will rise in 20 minutes and bake in 25. If time is short, plan ahead and follow the simple directions for freezing and reheating.

PIZZA PINWHEEL CRESCENT

1 pound bulk Italian sausage
1 cup finely chopped red or green sweet pepper
½ cup chopped onion
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (4 ounces)
2 tablespoons snipped parsley
1 teaspoon dried Italian seasoning, crushed
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water
Sesame seed (optional)

Prepare the hot roll mix according to the package directions through the kneading step. Cover and let the dough rest while preparing filling.

For filling, in a skillet cook sausage, pepper and onion until sausage is brown and vegetables are tender; drain well. Stir in cheese, parsley and Italian seasoning.

To shape each loaf, divide dough in half. On lightly floured surface roll one portion of the dough into a 10x8-inch rectangle. Spoon half the sausage filling over the dough to within 1 inch of edges. Beginning at one long edge, roll up the dough jellyroll style. Moisten and pinch ends and edges to seal. Repeat with the remaining dough and filling to make a second loaf.

Place each loaf, seam side down, on a greased baking sheet; bend slightly to form a crescent shape. Using scissors, snip each crescent-shaped loaf in 3 places from the outer edge three-fourths of the way to the center. Cover and let rise in a warm place about 20 minutes or until nearly doubled.

Meanwhile, in a small bowl stir together the egg white and the water. Just before baking, brush the egg white mixture onto each loaf. If desired, sprinkle loaves with sesame seed.

Bake in a 375-degree oven about 25 minutes or until bread is golden brown. Serve warm. Cut into slices to serve. Makes 2 loaves (8 slices per loaf).

MAKE-AHEAD DIRECTIONS: Cool baked loaves to room temperature. Wrap tightly in foil; seal, label and freeze. To serve, thaw loaf, unopened, in the refrigerator for at least 6 hours. Place the foil-wrapped loaf in a 350-degree oven for 30 to 40 minutes or until heated through.

Pizza has 'sauce-y' flavor

Associated Press

This pizza is topped with barbecued chicken, sliced red onion, cilantro and smoked gouda cheese. Marinate the chicken in your favorite barbecue sauce.

B.B.Q. CHICKEN PIZZA

1 4-ounce chicken breast, trimmed of excess skin and fat, cut into ¾-inch cubes (about ¾ cup)
¼ cup olive oil
Barbecue sauce as needed
5½ ounces pizza dough
3 tablespoons barbecue sauce
1 tablespoon smoked gouda cheese
¾ cup mozzarella
⅛ cup sliced red onions
Chopped cilantro

Saute the chicken cubes in a small amount of olive oil. Let the pieces cool. Marinate in barbecue sauce to taste.

Stretch the pizza dough to 8½ inches. Spread the 3 tablespoons barbecue sauce to within 1 inch of the edge of the dough. Sprinkle the smoked gouda over the sauce. Sprinkle 5-6ths of the mozzarella to within 1 inch of the edge of the pizza dough. Distribute about 15 pieces of the chicken evenly over the cheeses. Place the onions over the chicken. Sprinkle chopped cilantro over the pizza. Sprinkle the remaining mozzarella over the pizza to prevent the ingredients from scorching. Bake the pizza on a pizza stone or on a sheet pan in a 450-degree F oven for 8 to 10 minutes.

New York has a queen of soul food

By Mary MacVean

NEW YORK (AP) — When she came north from South Carolina, Sylvia Woods had never even stepped foot in a restaurant.

As life would have it, she became a waitress, and eventually New York's queen of soul food, reigning over most of a block amid the hubbub of Harlem's main business district.

Her kingdom is populated by neighborhood residents and Japanese tourists, performers from the nearby Apollo Theater, food lovers who truck uptown, and the likes of Jesse Jackson, Roberta Flack and Dizzy Gillespie. In short, anyone moved by the candied yams, smothered chicken or "Sylvia's World Famous Talked About Bar-B-Que Ribs Special."

It's been nearly three decades since she christened Sylvia's and she rarely cooks these days, but she still works the restaurant, going from table to table, shaking hands, saying hello.

Like a most benevolent ruler, she says, "I generate a lot of love and a lot of respect."

She hates waste, admires common sense, respects hard work well done, whether cooking or waiting tables. And she keeps handy a repertoire of slogans, many handed down from her mother, that have helped her move on and up, such as, "Keep your eyes on the ground."

From a tiny cafe with a counter and five booths, Sylvia's has grown to three dining rooms, including one for big parties, often reserved by Japanese or European tour companies to show foreigners the "real Harlem."

Some parts of the wall are paneled, some papered in green and white. But the wall barely peeks through in many parts of the restaurant for all the awards given to Woods and her family, and the photos of famous and not-so-famous patrons.

Woods' husband, their four children, some of their grandchildren and an uncle all work at Sylvia's, making diners feel as though they've dropped by a friend's place to visit.

"In a true sense of the word, for many of the patrons, it's very much like their home," says manager Clarence Cooper.

Meals are a decent deal, particularly by New York standards. The priciest dinner — pork chitterlings — is $10.95. Those ribs, served Wednesday through Sunday, are $9.95. You can also try salmon croquettes, oxtail, meat loaf, pickled beets, candied yams, okra and tomato gumbo, and sweet potato pie.

At breakfast, there's beef liver or chicken with grits, sardines and eggs, hot cakes and fried chicken. Top price: $6.25.

AP LaserPhoto

Sylvia Woods poses in her soul food restaurant, named Sylvia's, in New York's Harlem earlier this month. From a tiny cafe with a counter and five booths, Sylvia's has grown to three dining rooms, including on for big parties, often reserved by Japanese or European tour companies to show foreigners the "real Harlem."

What should a first-timer order? Certainly not ham. "Ham? You can buy ham and eat it every day. If you like pork, try the ribs. If you like beef, try the short ribs. Or the smothered chicken. Ham? Ham is an insult," Woods says over a peanut butter sandwich.

The menu hasn't changed much over the years. Now there are steaks, and fish every day, not just Fridays.

"We tried diet food. We had to throw it in the garbage. The best diet you can have is to back up from the table," Woods says. Trying to diet at Sylvia's, says Cooper, is "like getting dressed up for a dance and then you don't dance."

Ask a kitchen worker if he tires of the same food day after day. "You get tired of breathing?" is his immediate reply.

At 28, when Woods moved with her husband to New York from Hemingway, S.C., she knew nothing about restaurants but had cooked for two decades at home. She went to work as a waitress at Johnson's.

"I'd never been in a restaurant," she says, laughing now about fibbing to the Andrew Johnson Luncheonette that she knew what she was doing. She soon was found out, however, when even the commercial-size coffee urn baffled her.

"The counter seemed so huge. ... I got burned, I dropped the cup," she says. But Johnson was kind, and Woods persevered, staying there nine years, even managing the place when he went on vacation.

Eventually, Johnson decided to move upstate.

"He knew I was capable of doing most anything," Woods says. "To my surprise — and it was a surprise — he asked me if I wanted to buy the restaurant."

The price was $20,000, no small sum for a waitress married to a aviation plant worker. Her mom helped out, and Woods had some savings ("I knew there would be a rainy day — I'm a saver.")

But money wasn't the only worry: "I am a country farm girl. I could never imagine my name would be on anything in New York City. It seemed like a monster to me."

But in 1962, she tackled the monster, and renamed Johnson's to Sylvia's, later moving a few doors down to the present site. By 1979, restaurant critic Gael Greene had crowned her the queen of soul food.

Sylvia's is by no means the only place to get soul food in New York. And, in fact, some neighbors grumble a bit that Woods has betrayed them by becoming a white folks' restaurant or a tourists' spot.

Spike Lee shot a scene of "Jungle Fever" at Sylvia's, in which a black architect takes his white lover to supper there. Ironically, the waitress comes up far short of welcoming the couple. Woods says she hasn't seen the movie, but the scene is far from her open-armed attitude.

What is it that draws so many people to Sylvia's?

"I know my mother. She talks about love. I think that's true. That's the glue that attracts the workers. And the people who come to eat here feel it," says Woods' oldest child, Van. "But it's more than that. It's the hard work and the food."

Queen Woods' empire is an expanding one.

Two doors down is Sylvia Also, slated to open this fall as a blues and jazz cabaret. A cookbook is scheduled for next year, and Van Woods is negotiating for a franchise in Japan. He also has sold an option for a television sitcom, and may market a barbecue sauce.

But no matter the successes, Sylvia's is staying right at home, on Lenox Avenue in Harlem.

"We haven't forgotten from where we came," Cooper says. "That's why we'll always be here."

Microwave makes scalloped tomatoes possible in just minutes

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

They say you can't improve on the homespun favorites that Grandma used to make. Our modern-day version of scalloped tomatoes shows that indeed you can. We've added Parmesan and pecans to the crumb topping to make it tastier and we've shortened the cooking time. In your microwave oven, your version will cook five times faster than Grandma's!

FRESH TOMATO SCALLOP

1 tablespoon margarine or butter
2 tablespoons sliced green onion
⅓ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons chopped toasted pecans
5 medium tomatoes
1 tablespoon dry white wine
Worcestershire sauce

In a 2-cup glass measure cook margarine or butter and green onion, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1 minute or until crisp-tender. Add crumbs, cheese and pecans; toss gently to mix. Set aside.

Peel tomatoes, if desired; cut into ½-inch slices. In an 8-inch microwave-safe quiche dish or 9-inch microwave-safe pie plate arrange tomato slices in a spiral, overlapping slightly. Sprinkle with wine and Worcestershire sauce. Cover loosely with waxed paper. Cook on 100 percent power for 2 to 3 minutes (low-wattage ovens: 2½ to 3½ minutes) or until almost heated through, giving the plate a half-turn once.

Sprinkle the crumb mixture over the tomatoes. Cook, uncovered, on high for 30 to 60 seconds more (low-wattage ovens: 1 to 2 minutes more) or until heated through. Makes 4 to 6 side-dish servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 122 cal. (51 percent calories from fat), 4 g pro., 13 g carbo., 7 g. fat, 3 mg chol., 203 mg sodium, 275 mg potassium, 3 g dietary fiber. U.S. RDA: 32 percent vit. A, 25 percent vit. C.

DEAR ABBY

Don't wait for an invitation to help someone in need

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Concerning people who are hooked on drugs and/or alcohol, I just read a letter in the San Diego Union from the woman who signed herself, "Broke the Cycle in Dallas." I agree with the writer wholeheartedly, and with your response as well. However, I would like to go one step further: Family members CAN help "someone who doesn't want help" — someone who is in denial. Denial, and that "false sense of control" we call delusional thinking, creates havoc in relationships. However, this denial can be broken through with a process called Intervention.

Van Buren

I recommend Intervention to anyone who is frustrated by another person's drinking or using. You don't have to wait for someone to "hit bottom," which could ultimately be death.

I am a professional counselor at The McDonald Center for Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Treatment at Scripps Memorial Hospital in La Jolla, Calif. To learn more about Intervention, call a local treatment center — or call our 24-hour Parent and Teen Helpline: 1-619-458-4357. — JOHN C. SEAMAN, M.A.

DEAR MR. SEAMAN: Thanks for a potentially lifesaving letter for the thousands of people who are hooked on alcohol and/or drugs but insist they can handle it — which they cannot.

DEAR ABBY: We have a daughter who is a senior in college. She was very popular in high school. She was homecoming queen, a cheerleader and an "A" student.

In her second year of college, she started dating guys with long hair. None of them were druggies, but they were all long-hair types. We would have called them "hippies" in my day. Her latest boyfriend has a tattoo on his arm. Well, last week our daughter came home with an ugly tattoo of an eye on her ankle!

Abby, we are decent people, but I feel as though our daughter has betrayed us and all our teachings and beliefs. I know that tattoos are fashionable right now, but I am sure the day will come when she will be sorry and embarrassed about that tattoo on her ankle. I am humiliated and would like to know how much parents are supposed to take. — UNHAPPY DOWN SOUTH

DEAR UNHAPPY: You are taking this too personally; keep in mind that the ankle with the tattoo is your daughter's, not yours. Your daughter sounds like a bright, responsible young woman. Don't worry about her tattoo. Should she ever feel sorry and embarrassed, the tattoo can be covered with a cosmetic. Two of the best — Covermark or Dermablend — can be found in most department stores and some pharmacies.

This one's for everybody, from teens to seniors! To purchase Abby's new booklet, "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Denton to host '92 Special Olympics

DENTON — The 1992 Texas Special Olympics Summer Games, with 3,700 athletes and 2,000 coaches, will be held in Denton, with the city, University of North Texas and Texas Woman's University as hosts.

Special Olympics is a year-round athletic training and sports competition program for mentally retarded people.

Competitions will be held in aquatics, basketball, cycling, equestrian, gymnastics, soccer, tennis, and track and field.

The 1992 Summer Games, scheduled for May 12-15, are being moved to Denton after three years in San Marcos at Southwest Texas State University.

The Summer Games typically include up to 3,000 volunteers, and last year 1,000 family members registered. Game officials said they hope to double the number of family members in 1992.

■ Big Tex in position

DALLAS — Big Tex is in position, ready to welcome visitors to the State Fair of Texas for the 40th straight year.

A 25-ton hydraulic crane lifted the 8-foot head onto the giant cowboy's body on Monday. The raising of Big Tex is the traditional signal that the annual exposition is about to begin.

The 105th annual state fair begins a 24-day run on Friday. This year's theme is "A Celebration of America, Standing Proud."

Big Tex, who stands 52 feet tall, gets a new shirt every two or three years. This time, fair officials ordered a white one with blue fringe and red cuffs and pockets.

Big Tex was built by Jack Bridges, 81, of Lancaster, who was on hand Monday, as always, to oversee the raising of Big Tex.

■ Pair charged in fire

COFFEE CITY — A woman and her grandson have been arrested and charged in connection with a fire last May that destroyed a church, authorities said.

Ollie Harmon, 68, and James Harmon, 24, were arrested at separate Coffee City residences Monday by officers of the Henderson County sheriff's department and special agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Gentry Temple Church was destroyed in a fire May 24. Damage was estimated at $125,000.

Mrs. Harmon was charged with arson and conspiracy, and her grandson charged with arson, conspiracy and presenting a false statement to a federal agent.

Bridgett Rocell Harmon, 25, was indicted on a federal charge of misprision of a felony. Officials said although she didn't help set the fire, she concealed her knowledge of it. She is still at large, officials said.

■ Suspects arrested

HAMILTON — Two suspects were in custody Tuesday after a weekend fight in which one person was fatally stabbed and another wounded.

James Allen Townzen, 21, of Hamilton was charged with murder. Bond was set at $30,000. Cid Artecona, 23, of Granbury was charged with aggravated assault, with bond of $20,000.

The two were arrested Sunday afternoon. Justice of the Peace Walter Anglin set bond Monday.

Danny Lopez, 25, of Hamilton was fatally stabbed early Sunday. Ricky Martinez, 31, of Decatur was in stable condition Tuesday at Harris Methodist Hospital in Fort Worth, officials said.

Family members of Lopez claim he and Martinez were in the front of the Lopez home when the suspects allegedly provoked a fight.

■ 16 have encephalitis

HOUSTON — Sixteen people have contracted St. Louis encephalitis in the Houston area this summer, and officials warn another flurry of mosquito activity might surface before the season ends.

The mosquito-borne diesease has killed three people.

Harris County Mosquito Control District spokesman Norm Gruenzner warned that the mosquito season is not over.

District workers have found 48 pools of infected culex mosquitoes and are investigating another 266 pools for the presence of St. Louis encephalitis virus. Twelve of the 16 human cases were found in north Houston.

Health officials say residents should not sit outdoors near dusk or after dark and should dump any standing water to decrease the chances of mosquito breeding.

Richards trying to lure filmmakers

By Karen Potter
N.Y. Times News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Texas Gov. Ann Richards says she figures she likes movies more than any other elected official in the country.

"I don't know (why). Because I'm a country girl and we didn't have anything to do to entertain ourselves but to go into town and go to the show," Richards said Tuesday during a trip to California to lure filmmakers to Texas.

She's come to the right place.

For a movie buff like Richards, the Insider's Tour of Hollywood she has been receiving is a dream come true.

In addition to getting the star treatment from movie moguls and celebrities, Richards is getting a glimpse of life behind the screens.

In a visit to Paramount Pictures on Tuesday, Richards got to watch filming of an episode of "Brooklyn Bridge," the new TV show by "Family Ties" creator Gary Goldberg.

And producer-director Oliver Stone has invited her on Thursday to his cutting room, where he is going through the final edit on "JFK."

Though the movie is based on a book by Texas conspiracy theorist Jim Marrs, Stone has been secretive on the details of his examination of President Kennedy's assassination.

AP Laserphoto

Gov. Ann Richards and actress Debbie Allen of Houston attended a reception in Los Angeles Monday night hosted by the Texas Film Commission.

Richards was one of a handful of people invited to peek at the work in progress, said state Commerce Department executive director Cathy Bonner.

Such access is costing Richards much more than the $6.50 admission price to the movie theater.

Every day she is out of the state, she forfeits a day of pay and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, the acting governor, receives the money instead.

Press secretary Bill Cryer estimates that Richards, who earns about $95,000 a year, is giving up $1,300 for this trip under the obscure state law.

Campaign funds and regional Texas film commissions are paying her expenses in California, where she is staying at an exclusive Beverly Hills hotel that is a favorite of the stars.

Although Richards is clearly having a good time, she says that's not the point of the four-day economic development tour to woo more movies and TV productions to Texas.

"This is business. This is serious business," Richards said. "It is pleasurable to do business with people who are real nice and who are real glad to see you. And everyone out here has been so far."

Richards' own star status among her Democratic fans in Hollywood has opened doors for her. So has Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America and a former close associate of President Lyndon Johnson. He arranged several get-togethers for Richards and sat in on some of them.

When Richards met Tuesday with producer Mace Neufeld at Paramount Pictures, he gave her a football autographed by the players in his new film, "Necessary Roughness."

West Texans to vote on hospital district

MARFA (AP) — Voters in Brewster and Presidio counties will go to the polls in November to decide whether to form a two-county hospital district to support financially struggling Big Bend Regional Medical Center.

Presidio County Hospital District directors set Nov. 22 as the special election date for that county. Brewster County's district will schedule an election for the same day in a meeting next month.

In an election Friday, Presidio County residents rejected a proposal to dissolve Presidio County's hospital district. Had voters approved the proposal, the two county hospital district question would have been moot.

Supporters of the two-county hospital district say it is needed to expand the tax base for Big Bend Regional Medical Center in Alpine, about 230 miles southeast of El Paso.

The rural hospital is the only health care facility within hundreds of miles to serve Big Bend-area residents.

The hospital reported a net income of $418,000 for the period from October to Aug. 31, Administrator Richard Arnold said Tuesday. The hospital's fiscal year ends in September. During the same period last year the hospital reported a loss of $170,000.

"What it amounts to is we're in the black now ... but that doesn't mean we're going to stay in the black," Arnold said.

He said if the two-county district is approved, the hospital plans to open rural clinics that would specialize in preventive and immediate care.

"We'll try to make it so patients aren't nearly as sick when they get here," he said.

The special elections will cost each hospital district about $7,000 since the election isn't on a uniform election day in Texas.

Lawyers for 'pompon mom' request new trial

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers for the woman convicted of hiring a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival asked Tuesday for a new trial, partly because one of the jurors was under indictment.

State District Judge George Godwin scheduled a hearing for Nov. 7 on the motion for a new trial for Wanda Holloway of Channelview.

Mrs. Holloway was convicted Sept. 3 of trying to hire a hitman to kill Verna Heath, whose daughter was competing with Mrs. Holloway's daughter for a spot on the high school cheerleading squad. Sentenced to 15 years in prison, Mrs. Holloway is free pending her appeal.

The appeal is based on defense lawyers' discovery that juror Daniel Enriquez was under indictment on cocaine possession charges during Mrs. Holloway's trial, defense lawyer Stan Schneider said.

Texas law prevents people from serving on juries at the same time they have a personal criminal case before the courts.

Schneider said Enriquez answered truthfully a jurors' questionnaire that asked whether the prospective juror or any member of his family was involved in a criminal case. Enriquez answered "yes" to that question, but didn't volunteer any other information.

Also asked if he did any volunteer work, Enriquez answered, "Community service as a condition of probation," according to Schneider.

Schneider said lawyers failed to question Enriquez further. His current status was discovered when defense lawyers investigated possible criminal backgrounds on the jury in preparing their appeal.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
