Six Americans killed by Salvadoran gunmen

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Gunmen disguised as Salvadoran soldiers sprayed two crowded outdoor cafes with automatic weapons fire, killing at least 13 people — including four U.S. Marines and two other Americans, officials said.

All the Marines at the cafes Wednesday night were embassy guards in civilian clothes, said U.S. Embassy spokesman James Williams. The United States has Marine guards at all its embassies.

Four Guatemalans and five Salvadorans also were killed in the attack, Williams said earlier. Williams said two Marines escaped injury. He said it was not clear if the attack was directed at the Marines.

"At this point it appears to have been an act of random terrorism," he said. He characterized the gunmen as "a squad of guerrillas dressed as though they were members of the Salvadoran armed forces."

Officials of Wang Laboratories in Lowell, Mass., said that two of its American employees were killed in the attack.

Myra Barradas, Wang spokeswoman, identified the men as George Viney, based in Coral Gables, Fla., and Robert Alvidrez, based in Lowell. She said the company had no further information.

The Pentagon identified three of the Marines as Sgt. Thomas T. Handwork, 24, of Boardman, Ohio; Cpl. Gregory H. Webber, 22, of Cincinnati, Ohio; and Sgt. Bobby J. Dickson, 27, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Handwork's father, J.R. Handwork of Beavercreek, Ohio said his son had recently re-enlisted with the Marines. Handwork said his son, the oldest of five children, wanted to be a Marine "since he was old enough to talk and walk."

Witnesses said many of the injured were taken away by relatives or friends before ambulances arrived.

The Marines were seated at a sidewalk table when the gunmen "pulled up in automobiles, hopped out and began spraying" patrons of the cafe located in Zona Rosa, an area of nightclubs and restaurants in the capital. They escaped in a pickup truck, Williams said. He said there were between six and 10 assailants.

A cafe employee said a group of Marines and several women were seated at three tables in two adjoining cafes.

A waiter said that when he first saw the assailants, he thought they were conducting a military document check. The assailants said nothing and customers didn't react until the shooting began, he said. It lasted about 15 minutes, he said.

Screaming people threw themselves on the ground or ran inside the restaurants. More than an hour after the shooting, blood mixed with spilled beer and ice on the ground and once-white napkins were stained red.

Witnesses said some of the victims were shot in the throat and legs, a.

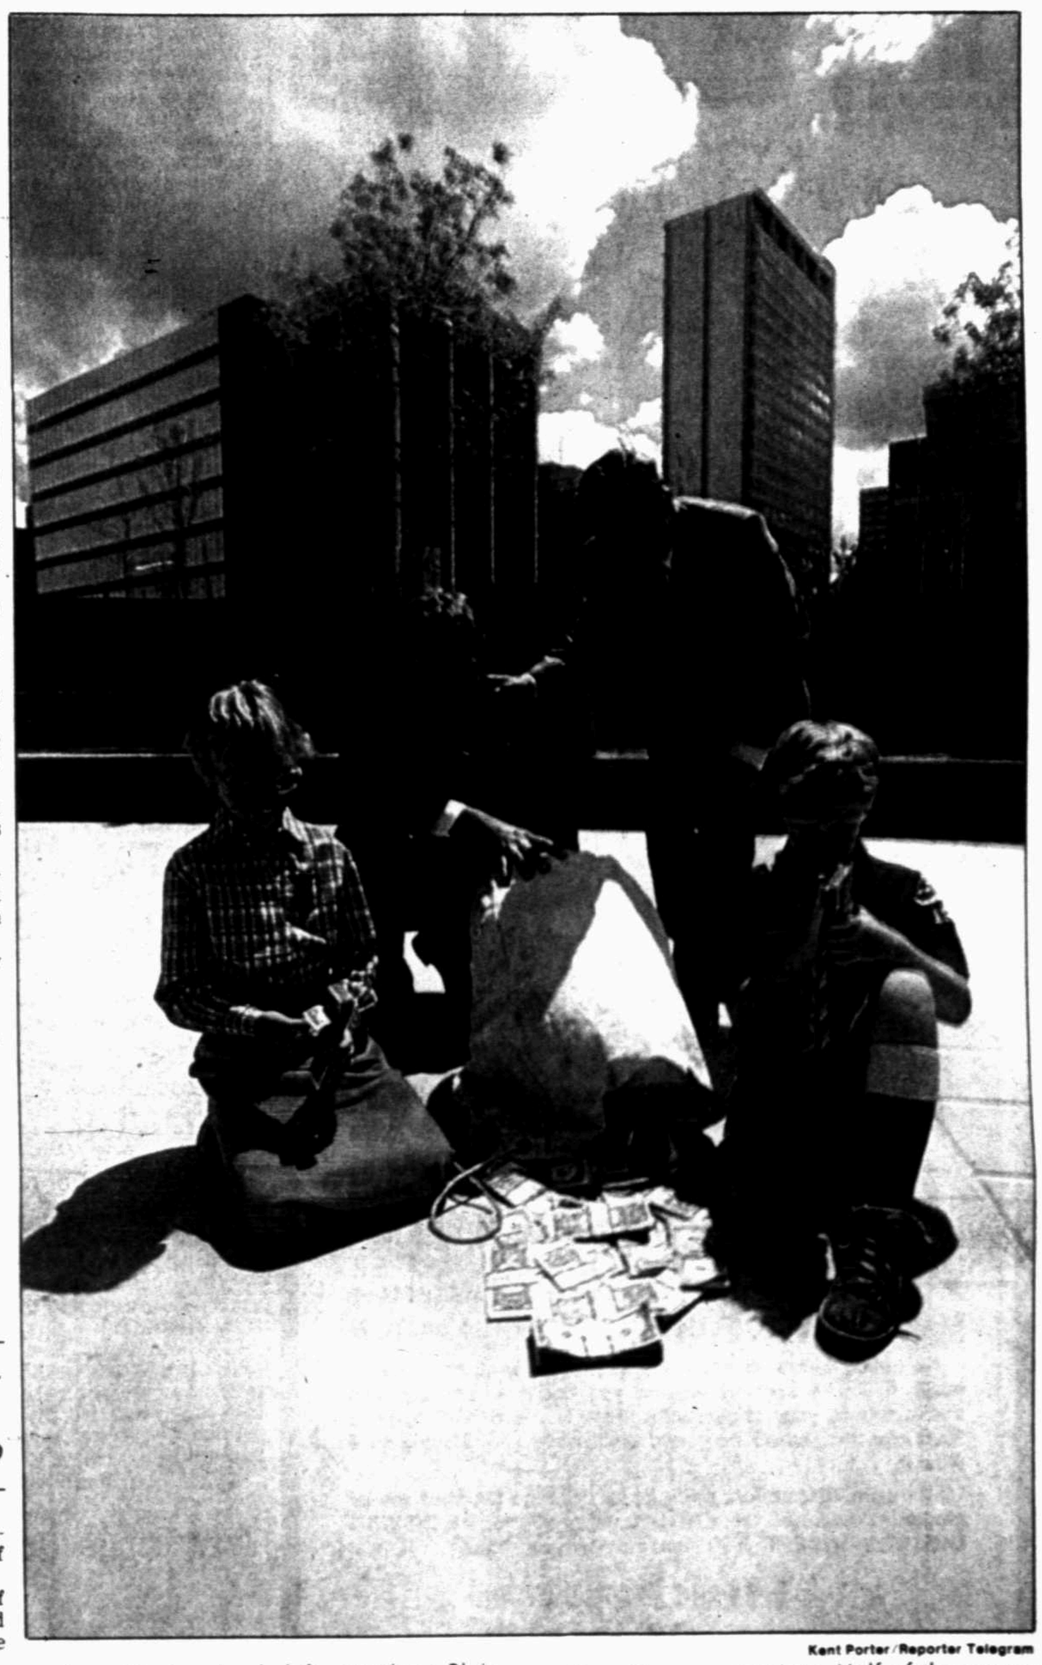

qhad part of their faces shot away. Some of the bodies were covered with red tableclothes and candles were placed around the bodies while authorities identified them.

About 20 minutes after the shooting, police cordoned off an area of about 2 square miles around the restaurant, which is located near the U.S. ambassador's residence.

In Washington, Robert C. McFarlane, assistant to the president for national security affairs, said the United States must "assist the Salvadoran government and make sure we bring a halt to this kind of outrage."

He said he did not envision the use of American military force in El Salvador but said "U.S. assistance is justified."

Berri says he will produce some of the hostages tonight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militia leader Nabih Berri said he will present some of the 40 American hostages from a hijacked TWA airliner to the press at Beirut airport tonight in an apparent effort to show they are not being ill-treated.

"We will show them to the press tonight at Beirut airport at 8 o'oclock (1 p.m. EDT," he told reporters. But he did not make clear whether reporters will be permitted to question the hostages.

Earlier, Akef Haidar, a spokesman for Berri's Amal militia, told The Associated Press that the hostages were "in a very good situation."

He said 37 passengers from the hijacked Boeing 727 who were spirited away from the plane to secret locations in Beirut to prevent any rescue mission and he said they "are kept in eight or 10 places."

He declined to say where the hideouts are, but said all the hostages were in good condition.

"They're eating well and have TV sets in their rooms. They are getting good food. There's always a menu in Arabic and in English. They have a taste for Lebanese food. Everything for them is fine."

Haidar added, "They talk all the time with the hijackers, talking politics and asking questions about the Shiite philosophy and the Shiite religion. Some of the discussions are of a very high level."

Berri, Lebanon's justice minister, has emerged as the chief negotiator between the hijackers and the United States and his Amal militiamen are guarding the hijacked plane where the three crew members are being held.

He also has said he has control of, or access to the other hostages, and has insisted that he will not release them until the chief demand of the hijackers is met — that Israel release 700 Shiite Moslem prisoners taken from south Lebanon during the Israeli army occupation that ended early this month.

Report: Prices up .2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices edged up just 0.2 percent last month, dampened by a second straight drop in food costs and an easing in the springtime gasoline price surge, the government reported today.

Besides the slowing in gasoline price increases, new and used car prices fell, making transportation costs in general "largely responsible for the moderation" in the overall calculation, the Labor Department report said.

Private analysts said such low inflation figures could continue through the summer and that no really big surges are in sight for the rest of the year.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department estimated that the economy is growing at an annual rate of 3.1 percent in the still-unfinished second quarter.

Taken together with the CPI calculation, the GNP, which was up from a small 0.3 percent growth in the first quarter, suggests the possibility of renewed economic growth without a rekindling of inflation.

The 3.1 percent rate, which will be revised several times, was better than most projections and holds out hope that the economy could yet exceed a 3 percent growth rate for the year. The Reagan administration forecasts growth of 3.9 percent for all of 1985.

In May, today's Labor Department consumer price report said, food prices fell 0.1 percent following a 0.2 percent decline in April and no increase in March. Prices had fallen through the preceding nine months.

May's food price decline included decreases of 1.2 percent for meats, poultry, fish and eggs and 1.1 percent for fruits and vegetables.

On Wednesday, a forecast from Standard and Poor's Corp. suggested the trend of low or nonexistent food-price gains would continue. That report said a warm, moist spring had raised chances for bumper crops later in the year, meaning no supply problems that could drive prices higher.

Today's Labor Department price report said gasoline costs rose 0.5 percent in May, much less than the 3.1 percent April jump that had helped drive the overall Consumer Price Index up 0.4 percent for that month. Gasoline prices have risen 7.4 percent in the last three months but are still 11.2 percent below their peak level of March 1981.

Transportation costs, including the gasoline increase, were down 0.2 percent after rising 0.8 percent in April. New car costs fell 0.2 percent and used car prices were off 1.4 percent. Auto financing charges declined 1.4 percent, their sixth straight decline.

Law could effect MISD's racial balance

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Legislation dictating the manner in which Texas school districts would establish school boundaries was among 50 bills that failed to receive a gubernatorial stamp of approval this week.

But state and local education officials aren't so sure Texas schools are out of the woods yet.

Representatives of the Midland Independent School District charge that House Bill 1543, introduced by Rep. William Messer, D-Belton, and approved by both the House of Representatives and the Senate, would have destroyed the ethnic balance among racially integrated schools if it had become law.

Gov. Mark White refused signature of the bill, along with 49 others during a lengthy veto session Sunday.

What worries MISD officials is a rider (amendment) which appears in the 1985-86 appropriations bill that White signed after the measure passed both State houses.

The rider dictates that state appropriations be used in such a way that children assigned to an elementary school be assigned to the same junior high and senior high schools.

It reads, in part, "It is the intent of the Legislature that the funds herein appropriated for allocations to local schools be used to the greatest extent possible by local schools in such a way that children assigned to a school for the elementary grades are assigned to attend the same junior high school, or middle school, whichever is appropriate for a given school district.

"Furthermore, it is the intent of the Legislature that districts use these funds in such a way that students assigned to a middle school or junior high school are assigned to attend the same senior high school. School districts that do not assign students in this manner are to report these exceptions to the Texas Education Agency."

The original bill specified that if a district assigns fewer than 30 percent of its students to any single elementary, junior high or senior high school, the student not assigned to the majority is entitled to transfer.

In addition, 100 percent of the students attending a junior high school must be assigned to a single high school if they had attended a particular elementary school. Non-assigned students would have been eligible to transfer to the senior high school where the majority were assigned.

The intent of the legislation is to prevent the splitting of peer groups at various schools due to a reported increase in discipline problems, crime, drug and alcohol abuse, and suicide among school-age children, according to Messer.

Its purpose is to "reduce the effect of those problems on school assignment within a district," Messer said.

In either case, the legislation could be "damaging" to school district desegregation plans across the state if it is enforced, according to MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Baressi.

Shooting victim charged with guard's murder

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 33-year-old Midland man who remains in serious condition in Midland Memorial Hospital was charged Wednesday with the murder of a 25-year-old security guard Sunday night at a racetrack southeast of town.

Armed guards were posted by Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter outside the hospital room of Ruben Bujanda, 1105 W. Kentucky. Bujanda was shot five times Sunday night during an incident which left security guard James Belis dead and security guard Charlie Coleman Jr. hospitalized with five stab wounds.

Although a hospital spokeswoman said Bujanda was still in serious condition this morning, "He was well enough to be moved to a room (from the intensive-care unit), and we were apprehensive that he would abscond on us," Painter said.

HOSTAGES

Gunmen inside the hijacked Boeing 727 fired over the heads of reporters at the Beirut airport today after a Lebanese reporter tried to sneak aboard the plane by posing as an airline attendant. The captain and his two crew members said they are aboard, surrounded by many gunmen.

Berri also said he had accepted a Swiss offer to use its territory to hold any exchange of the American hostages.

Berri made the disclosure after meeting with Swiss Ambassador Jean-Paul Ramsiere who delivered a letter from Swiss Foreign Minister Pierre Aubert saying, "Switzerland puts all its potential at the president's disposal to contribute to resolve the hijack tragedy."

"We have accepted this offer for the exchange of the hostages in (Israel's) Atlit prison for the plane hostages on Swiss territory if the others (Israel and the United States) accept this," he said.

Gunmen hijacked the plane last Friday on its way from Athens to Rome, and since have released most of the 153 passengers and crew. They killed U.S. Navy Petty Officer Robert Dean Stethem of Waldorf, Md.

"Trick, journalist," hijackers screamed when they spotted the Lebanese reporter's camera this morning. The reporter rode onto the tarmac in a food van and carried fruit up the steps to the plane.

He ran down the staircase as a gunman appeared at door of the plane and shot over his head. The gunman then turned his AK-47 assault rifle on other journalists and photographers on the tarmac and fired a few shots over their heads.

Some sprinted indoors and others dived for cover. There were no injuries.

"What is this? Are you playing tricks with us?" an angry hijacker later asked the control tower. "I want all newsmen out. One has filmed me shooting. I want that film confiscated and sent to the plane."

On Wednesday state-run Beirut radio quoted a government official as saying, "There is no danger to the lives of the hostages for the time being," but that a solution must be reached "before things deteriorate."

It did not identify the official, but the state radio, located in west Beirut, is influenced by Amal.

Berri received a message from Pope John Paul II urging a peaceful solution, an aide said. But Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro denied it, saying there was "neither a telephone call, nor a letter" from the pope to Berri.

During his general audience on Wednesday, the pope had called for prayers for "a quick and peaceful resolution (of the hijack crisis) without any more victims."

The radio quoted the official as saying President Amin Gemayel was in touch with Berri and U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew in an effort to resolve the stalemate.

An Israeli official in Jerusalem today reiterated that release of the Shiites depends on the situation in southern Lebanon. He said Israel sees no linkage between the hostage situation in Beirut and the release of the Shiites.

Speakes: 'No deal' for hostages' release

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says his administration is using "all credible influence" to free 40 Americans captured in Beirut, but his chief spokesman Larry Speakes says there is "no unsaid, unspoken deal" for their release.

From Reagan on down, administration officials continued to emphasize Wednesday that the United States is dead set against making concessions to the terrorists holding hostages seized last Friday in the hijacking of a TWA jetliner.

The president, addressing the national Jaycees convention in Indianapolis, said, "We are continuing to do everything that we can to bring all credible influence to bear to get our people freed and returned home safe and sound."

But he added, to cheers from the delegates, "We must not yield to the terrorist demands and invite more terrorism. We cannot reward their grisly deed; we will not cave in."

The Navy diver killed by the hijackers, Robert D. Stethem, 23, of Waldorf, Md., was to be buried today at Arlington National Cemetery.

Following Reagan's speech, White House spokesman Speakes told reporters aboard Air Force One that "There are things in motion that could bring some benefit."

Speakes would not elaborate except to say the United States had been in touch with several governments and factional elements in the Middle East and had received "positive responses from most."

But, he said, "There is no unsaid, unspoken deal."

In other developments:

—The Senate voted to give the Reagan administration $2 million to begin putting weapons-carrying "sky marshals" on international flights by U.S. airlines.

—Secretary of State George P. Shultz told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that U.S. "determination to bring the hijacking to a successful and speedy end remains unwavering" and that the United States has received the support of Syria, Tunisia, Iraq, Egypt and Jordan.

—Richard Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the administration policy was "a campaign of pressures designed to get their (the hostages') release by the network of contacts which we are working, have been working very intensively since the airliner was first taken."

—The Rev. Jesse Jackson met with Robert Oakley, head of the State Department's office of counterterrorism and then urged Israel to release its 700 Shiite prisoners in exchange for the hostages. "It's a risk to release hostages under these conditions" but "an even greater risk not to release them," Jackson said.

—Donald Regan, White House chief of staff, speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One coming back from Indianapolis, was asked whether the International Committee of the Red Cross might play a role in resolving the crisis. He said, "We don't know as yet." Reagan meets today with Alexander Hay, president of the committee, but Regan said this meeting had been scheduled before the hostages were taken.

—Former Reagan Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., addressing the Naval War College in Newport, R.I., said the United States fails to respond to such crises adequately because of "bureaucratic terrorism" within the Reagan administration. "We have the courage, we have the capabilities to deal with terrorism," Haig said.

When Rep. Gary Ackerman, D-N.Y., asked Murphy if the administration would seek retribution against the Shiite community in Lebanon, Murphy replied that Shiites make up 40 percent of the Lebanese population, or about 700,000 people.

"Have you ruled out retaliation against the Shiite community?" Ackerman asked.

"Yes, I stop there," Murphy said.

Reagan, following his talk to the Jaycees at the Indiana Convention Center, spent eight minutes backstage with the parents of one of the hostages, James Hoskins Jr., 22, of Indianapolis. They had asked to see him. Regan, the chief of staff, told reporters Mrs. Hoskins pleaded with the president not to do anything that would cause hostile acts against the hostages. The president replied that he was very mindful of the safety of the hostages.

Earlier, after meeting with members of the Mooresville, Ind., Chamber of Commerce, Reagan told reporters, "there are things I just can't talk about" regarding U.S. efforts to free the hostages.

Shultz, asked what would happen if the Red Cross asked Israel to free the Israeli-held Shiite prisoners, said, "I don't think that we should get involved in anything that has the aspect of bargaining with terrorism."

Car packed with explosives blows up in Tripoli

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A red Volvo car packed with explosives blew up outside a candy store in the northern port of Tripoli where Moslems had gathered to buy sweets for a feast, killing at least 60 people and wounding 100, police said today.

Rescue workers searched through the rubble of the building all night for more victims and divers scoured the nearby Mediterranean Sea for bodies thrown into the water by the blast. Among the 60 dead were two mutilated bodies pulled from the sea today, rescuers said.

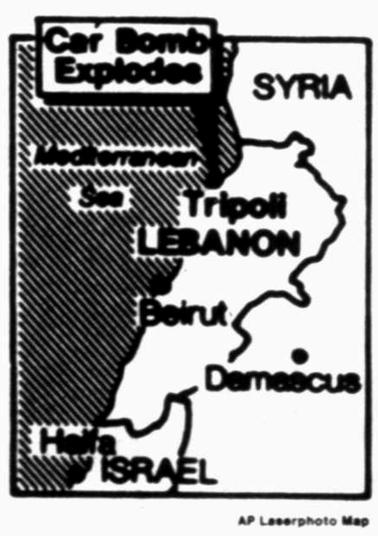

Police earlier reported the explosion late Wednesday killed 33 people, wounded 95. State-run Beirut radio earlier reported 75 dead and 150 wounded in the car bomb. Other Beirut stations said as many as 65 people perished in the blast.

Police could not immediately confirm the radio's higher casualty figures but officials said the death toll could climb.

Also Wednesday, Red Cross workers evacuated 103 wounded Palestinians from Beirut refugee camps under a cease-fire that ended an assault by Shiites trying to oust Palestinian guerrillas.

A team of high-ranking police officers arrived in Tripoli today to investigate the bombing, the radio said.

Police said the car was rigged with an estimated 275 pounds of explosives, levelling the six-story building that housed a candy store.

AP Laserphoto Map

The store was crowded with scores of customers buying sweets to give relatives and friends in celebration of the end of the Moslem fasting month of Ramadan.

There was no immediate indication who was responsible for the explosion. For nine years, Tripoli has been the scene of bloody fighting between rival Moslem militias. The fighting ended last December when the government deployed 1,200 soldiers in the city under a peace plan worked out with Syrian assistance.

In Amman, Jordan, Yasser Arafat's mainstream Palestine Liberation Organization charged today that Syrian intelligence agents engineered the car bombing, but gave no proof of its accusation.

Syria supports PLO dissidents trying to unseat Arafat. It also supports the Shiite Amal militia that struck at the Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut to prevent the PLO from rebuilding the power base it lost in Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a native of Tripoli, has been spending the Islamic holiday at his mansion in Bekaasfrin near the city.

President Amin Gemayel contacted him today to condemn the "criminal and cowardly act whose target was innocent people," the state radio reported. He also put all government health agencies on alert to deal with the casualties, the radio added.

Tripoli, about 40 miles north of Beirut, has a mostly Moslem population of 500,000.

Dozens of deadly car bombings have occurred in Lebanon in recent years, including one last Friday in Beirut that killed 23 people and wounded 36.

The wounded Palestinians were evacuated from the Bourj el-Barajneh and Chatilla refugee camps.

Two convoys of 16 Red Cross ambulances carried 45 wounded, mostly men, from Bourj el-Barajneh, while 58 casualties, including four children, were evacuated from Chatilla, International Red Cross officials said.

At least 35 of the Chatilla wounded were reported in critical condition. Ambulances at first had difficulty entering the camp because of sporadic sniping, said militiamen on Chatilla's fringes. In Bourj el-Barajneh, a few shots and a grenade blast rang out.

Appeals court ruling upheld

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday upheld an appeals court ruling which reversed a Midland County trial court award to four couples in a dispute of lot purchases.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary M. Chastain and three other couples brought suit against Charles Koonce and J.P. Stroud on grounds that they had purchased lots for residential use, and that a commercial enterprise had been permitted on an adjoining lot contrary to promises made regarding use of the property.

The trial court jury found that Koonce and Stroud had committed "an unconscionable action or course of action in regards to use" of the lot (on which an oilfield pipe storage yard was built), the Supreme Court said.

However, the appeals court ruled the jury finding of "unconscionability" wasn't supported by the evidence.

The Supreme Court agreed, saying, "we must find evidence not simply that Koonce and Stroud took unfair advantage of the purchasers but that the advantage was grossly unfair."

The couples had brought suit under the Deceptive Trade Practices - Consumer Protection Act. The Supreme Court ruled they did have standing to sue under that statute.

PRICES

For the first five months of 1985, prices overall are rising at an annual rate of 3.9 percent, department analysts said, a pace virtually identical to the 4 percent for all of last year.

And as long as the economy in general continues to grow at a sluggish rate, which economists are expecting for some months to come, retailers will find it difficult to raise prices.

The May inflation report provided these details on consumer prices:

— Within the food category, grocery prices fell 0.4 percent, including a 2.6 percent decline in beef prices, putting beef costs 5.9 percent below their level at the end of last year. Grocery food prices fell for the fifth straight time. Both restaurant and alcoholic beverage prices rose 0.5 percent, their biggest gains this year.

— Housing costs were up 0.6 percent after rising 0.4 percent in April. Costs rose 1.0 percent for both homeowners and renters, while maintenance and repair costs declined 0.5 percent.

— Fuel oil prices, which are part of the housing calculation, declined 0.5 percent following a 3.3 percent April increase at the tail end of the winter heating season in much of the country.

SCHOOLS

Dr. James Mailey, advisor to the MISD Board of Trustees, said "The application (the legislation) would result in enrollment patterns and racial balances of the schools that would be in substantial variance from the policies and desires of the Board of Trustees and their efforts in the desegregation of the school district."

Further MISD research has revealed that the legislation's potential impact would result in the possible transfer of 78 students (56 Anglo, 20 Hispanic and two black) from San Jacinto Junior High and 10 (Anglo) students from Alamo Junior High to Goddard Junior High School by 1987.

The potential impact also would result in the possible transfer of 149 students (143 Anglo, five Hispanic and one black) from Midland Freshman to Lee Freshman High School; and the possible transfer of 445 students (429 Anglo, 15 Hispanic and one black) from Midland High School to Lee High School by 1988.

"The full exercise of the right of transfer over the next full three school years would result in substantial differences in the size of the enrollment and the racial balances of the two senior high schools," said Mailey.

Although MISD Board of Trustee President Bill Jackson said he is "not overly concerned" about the amendment found in the appropriations package, he acknowledged that some legislators might try to "force" school districts to comply.

James Crow, manager of governmental services with the Texas Association of School Boards, said an estimated 60 Texas school districts could be effected by the enforcement of such an amendment.

"The rider is not nearly as specific as the bill. So, we're not as concerned about it as we were the bill. It's hard to tell what type of action will be taken in regards to its enforcement," Crow said.

When asked if he believed the amendment would be enforced, Jackson replied "I'm not too worried about it. Then of course, anything's possible."

MURDER

Reportedly, Belis and Coleman were trying to break up an argument over a bet when the shooting began.

"The best we can determine is (Bujanda) and Belis were wrestling with a weapon and the weapon discharged several times," said Painter, who added that other suspects may yet be arrested: "We're still talking to witnesses and we're investigating further."

Belis, of Odessa, was shot once in the head about 8:30 p.m. His gun was missing, and no weapon was found at the scene. Coleman, 1121 E. Chestnut, is listed in fair condition at Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said. He was reportedly unarmed.

How Bujanda could have shot Belis after being shot five times himself, or how Belis could have shot Bujanda five times after receiving a fatal gunshot wound in the head, was left unexplained by Painter, who declined to give further details about who shot whom in the incident until the investigation is complete.

The racetrack, at county roads 1140 and 120 south of Interstate 20, was being used by Raul Pena Jr., County Road 140S, for races each Sunday afternoon. Pena said he charged $2 admission, but operated no betting windows. Belis and Coleman were there to watch the gate and keep cars from being parked in the road, according to a Pace Security employee.

Toxic waste burning in Gulf opposed

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Texas Gov. Mark White, at a Wednesday Senate hearing, said the Environmental Protection Agency is "hasty and premature" in moving toward issuing permits to burn toxic wastes in the Gulf of Mexico.

White said EPA research is inadequate and faulty and its process is not logical. He questioned why.

White asked: "Is it because of external pressures on the EPA to begin issuing permits to impatient but aggressive potential applicants? Or is it because the Maritime Administration took a high-risk financial gamble by providing $55 millon in loan guarantees for the construction and testing of two incineration ships?"

Chairing the hearing, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he is "skeptical" of plans to begin large scale waste burning at sea. He said the hearing, and another on July 17, when government witnesses will speak, are designed to review the regulatory process and look into allegations of favoritism.

STATE

"An activity that unreasonably threatens the health and welfare of our people or threatens damage to Gulf Coast resources is clearly not acceptable."

— Sen. Lloyd Bentsen

Bentsen said, "An activity that unreasonably threatens the health and welfare of our people or threatens damage to Gulf Coast resources is clearly not acceptable."

Governors and attorneys general of at least three Gulf Coast states — Texas, Alabama and Louisiana — have threatened to file suit in federal courts if EPA issues permits.

The Gulf of Mexico is currently the only site designated for ocean incineration and under EPA's proposed regulations permits could be issued within a year.

Texas witnesses, including a representative from Attorney General Jim Mattox' office and pro-environment citizen activists, noted that contamination could be seriously harm such "clean industries" such as fishing, shrimping, tourism and real estate. They said varied and delicate ecological systems and structures could be harmed by an accidental toxic waste spill on the ocean and suggested alternate means of waste disposal.

"If it is so safe, why not burn it on the shore?" White asked.

In May, 1984, EPA postponed issuing burn permits after witnesses at hearings, including two at Brownsville, expressed strong opposition.

Applicants for burning permits wish to make Lake Charles, La., the home port for their incinerator ships and to store waste there while waiting for transportation to open sea.

Mrs. Raymond D. Fuljenz of Lake Charles distributed copies of letters, petitions and news stories reporting on an EPA hearing there in April where citizens fought the proposal.

Representatives of At Sea Incineration and Chemical Waste Management, the two ocean incineration companies applying for burning permits, claimed recent reports by the Science Advisory Board and EPA researchers found at-sea burning to be safe and necessary.

Jerry Neel, a vice president for Rollins Environmental Services, a land-based incineration company operating near Houston, said the need for ocean incineration has been exaggerated.

Sanctuary director sentenced

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A federal judge today sentenced the former director of a shelter for Central Americans to two years in prison after the woman, accused of hiding a Nicaraguan in her car trunk, said she would continue violating immigration laws.

Lorry Thomas, 41, former director of Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito, told U.S. District Judge Ricardo Hinojosa that her religious convictions would prompt her to continue helping Central Americans fleeing their war-torn region.

Hinojosa said he had no choice but to sentence her to prison.

Ms. Thomas pleaded guilty May 30 to hiding Raul Dominguez, 28, in the trunk of her car. The two were arrested May 12 at the Border Patrol checkpoint at Sarita, about 70 miles south of Corpus Christi, authorities said.

In a pre-sentence investigation, Ms. Thomas said, "I have done this many times before and I will continue to do it."

Hinojosa told the defendant that there were other ways to help Central Americans, but breaking the law was not one of them. He ordered Ms. Thomas to surrender to authorities on June 27 to begin serving her sentence.

But the judge said he would give Ms. Thomas 120 days to reconsider her statement about continuing to break the law. Hinojosa said that if she did change her position, he would consider reducing the sentence.

Ms. Thomas had faced a maximum five years imprisonment and a $250,000 fine. Ms. Thomas, the third shelter worker to be jailed for transporting illegal aliens, has been replaced at the shelter.

She was released on $20,000 bond after refusing for two weeks to be released on a personal recognizance bond because the Nicaraguan initially was denied bond.

Contaminated milk recalled by Southland

WACO (AP) — Southland Corp. has recalled about 40,000 gallons of milk from stores in Central Texas and the Dallas-Fort Worth area after a random sampling of milk delivered to a Dallas dairy showed traces of an antibiotic that could cause a rash to someone with a low tolerance for it.

Kirmon Smith, director of the division of milk and dairy products of the Texas Department of Health, said milk tested in a Dallas Oak Farms dairy plant contined more antibiotics than allowed by standard milk regulations.

Milk containing the antibiotic, which was determined to be penicillin or a derivative of penicillin, was placed on shelves late Tuesday afternoon and voluntarily removed by 3 or 4 a.m. Wednesday, said Doug Reed, assistant manager of public relations for Southland Corp. in Dallas.

"It shouldn't be taken out of proportion. I don't feel there is a health problem," Smith said.

Anyone with Oak Farm white milk dated June 29 and chocolate milk dated June 30 has been asked to return the milk for a refund or an exchange, Reed said.

It is unlikely many customers purchased the milk, Reed said. The milk was on the shelf only a few hours, and the 7-Eleven stores' policy is to place the freshest mlk at the back of the shelf, he added.

The milk from the plant was distributed to areas in and around Waco, Killeen, Temple, Gatesville and Dallas-Fort Worth, Reed said.

Consumption of the milk shouldn't cause a serious health problem because of the small amounts involved, Smith added. The typical reaction to penicillin by a person with a low tolerance is a rash, he said.

If the levels are high enough, Smith said, an exposed person would go into anaphylactic shock.

By late Wednesday, Department of Health officials still were tracking the source of the contaminated milk and knew only that it had been delivered to the Dallas milk plant on Saturday.

Reagan wins approval for chemical weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — After three years of defeats, President Reagan has finally won House approval — with strings attached — for new U.S. chemical weapons.

"I've got President Reagan's tire tracks down my back," Rep. John Edward Porter, R-Ill., an opponent, said after the House voted 229-196 Wednesday to permit new nerve gases two years from now under certain conditions.

Those strings include a requirement that America's NATO allies formally request that the weapons be built and stored in Western Europe.

The Republican-controlled Senate approved new chemical weapons two weeks ago, but without the restrictions attached by the Democratic-run House. A conference committee will iron out the differences, but Porter said he expects the restrictions to be dropped.

"The NATO hurdle would be insurmountable if it remains," Porter said after the vote. "But it won't. It'll be dropped in the conference."

For three years, the House had refused to approve building gas weapons, continuing a moratorium begun in 1969. It rejected arguments by Reagan that the weapons were needed to offset a threatening Soviet chemical arsenal.

The Senate twice approved the weapons, but the House position had prevailed in the conference sessions.

Porter credited Reagan with "a masterful job of lobbying," noting the president met at the White House on Monday with a group of 40 House members.

The Army wants to build binary weapons, so named because they would be composed of two chemicals kept separate until they mix after a shell is fired or bomb dropped.

The Pentagon says binaries would be safer than the current stockpile of aging weapons stored in eight states and Europe.

The House approval also included restrictions that require the Army to store the binary components in separate states and closely restrict any shipments or transports.

Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., told his colleagues that "we need to be able to counter the Soviet threat" with new U.S. weapons.

Police concerned about Walker's contacts

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — While military officials assess the damage an alleged Soviet spy ring did to national security, local officials have been trying to mop up the stains left on their community by the accused kingpin of the group, John A. Walker Jr.

They have been concerned over the extensive network of contacts among local police that Walker apparently built over the years through his detective agency.

Interviews with detectives, police and lawyers in the area over the last week suggested that Walker was known as a fairly effective if occasionally overzealous detective in a profession not always squeaky clean.

"Johnny was real good in his day. He came up with the kind of information we asked for," said Nash Bilisoly, a lawyer who has represented insurance firms but who quit using Walker four years ago for running an illegal credit check in a case.

The Norfolk Police Department last week fired one officer and forced another into early retirement because of their association with Walker and his firm, Confidential Reports Inc.

A lawyer close to the internal police probe said more firings were expected. Between eight and ten city policemen did work on behalf of Walker, said the lawyer, who spoke only on condition he not be identified.

The fired officer, Pamela K. Carroll, had been Walker's girlfriend and a detective licensed to his agency.

Jack Bernard, a 21-year veteran of the force who said he was ordered into early retirement, reportedly suppplied Walker with confidential information from the central records division where he worked.

Police gave no official explanation for the removal of the officers, but when the internal investigation started last month, Chief Charles D. Grant said it would focus on unauthorized checks of criminal and driving records of individuals Walker was investigating.

FBI and police have speculated that Walker might have used the confidential information to blackmail potential recruits for his spy ring. But there has been no indication that police involved with Walker had any knowledge of his alleged espionage activities.

Walker's brother Arthur J. Walker, 50, and John's son Michael L. Walker, 22, both from the Norfolk area, have also been charged, along with John's Navy buddy Jerry A. Whitworth, 45, of Davis, Calif.

Whitworth, facing a single count of conspiracy to commit espionage, faced a hearing today in federal court in San Francisco. A trial date was expected to be set.

According to other detectives and lawyers in the insurance claim field in which Confidential Reports specialized, the use of illegal record checks by detectives is common.

"Police traditionally compromise confidentiality on a day-to-day basis," said Tom Collins, a director of the Investigative Files detective agency in Norfolk.

ACLU sees silver lining in ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil libertarians say they see a silver lining in a Supreme Court ruling that strengthened the doctrine that provides government officials with protection from civil rights lawsuits.

Mark Lynch of the American Civil Liberties Union said the decision, in a case involving former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, was "terrific" in that it stopped short of giving Cabinet officials the same absolute immunity the court provided presidents in an earlier ruling.

"There was a real danger" the court would grant absolute immunity to government officials, Lynch said, because it "has been according such deference to the government in national security cases."

Wednesday's ruling was a victory for Mitchell, who was sued for authorizing an unlawful 1970 wiretap.

By a 5-2 vote, the court said the former Nixon administration official was immune from suit because only after the wiretap was installed did courts "clearly establish" that it was unlawful.

The ruling allows government officials to block any such suit before trial if the officials can show they had reason to believe they were acting lawfully.

But without such a showing of "good faith," officials could still be forced to pay Americans whose rights they violate, said Justice Byron R. White for the court.

Pentagon probing more contractors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is investigating 45 of the nation's defense contractors — including nine of the top 10 — for allegations that include bribery, kickbacks and bid-rigging, according to Defense Department documents.

A list identifying 36 of the corporations was prepared by Defense Department Inspector General Joseph H. Sherick at the request of Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., who released the report today.

The list includes such huge contractors as McDonnell Douglas Corp., Rockwell International Corp., Lockheed Corp. and Boeing Co.

Dingell, who has said the administration should be more aggressive in prosecuting contractors, is sending letters along with the list to other House members in advance of House consideration of military procurement measures.

Police search for man seen running from Frankfurt airport before blast

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Police said today they were searching for a young man seen running from the terminal shortly before a bomb blast that killed three people at Frankfurt airport.

Police spokesman Franz Winkler said the man was seen jumping into a dark blue Mercedes sedan Wednesday afternoon and speeding away from continental Europe's busiest airport.

No one had claimed responsibility for the bomb, he said. "The actual target of the attack is still not known," said a second police spokesman, Karl-Heinz Wagner.

Investigators tentatively identified two children killed in the blast as a 5-year-old Australian boy and his 3-year-old sister, he said. A man killed in the attack was thought to be Portuguese, Winkler said.

The mother of the dead children is believed to be one of the 18 people hospitalized with serious injuries from the blast, he said. At least four of the 18 were in critical condition, Wagner said.

Winkler said the identifications were "tentative because there is still a slight possibility of a mix-up." He refused to elaborate and declined to provide the names of the victims.

Twenty-four other people received less severe injuries.

Police said among the injured were at least one American, a Greek, five Iranians, a Yugoslav, a Moroccan, five Pakistanis, 10 Germans and several Australians. Nationalities of the rest of the injured had not been confirmed, they said.

Hesse State Police spokesman Klaus Knut said the bomb was probably made up of "several kilograms" of explosives in a suitcase left near a waste paper basket. He said investigators had discounted earlier reports the bomb had been placed in the wastepaper basket itself.

He said the bomb detonated near the Lufthansa airlines information booth in departure hall B. Knut said the explosive was a type produced for military and commercial use, but declined to elaborate.

Meanwhile, the mass-circulation daily Bild newspaper reported that an anonymous telephone caller contacted its Cologne office and threatened more bombings.

A voice, "probably that of a young woman" was quoted by the newspaper as saying: "Attention, attention. Attack on the Frankfurt airport. It will continue," Bild said.

Frankfurt police said that they were not aware of the Bild report and could not immediately comment on it.

Hundreds of passengers threw themselves to the ground as the blast ripped through the cavernous hall, and some of the injured ran screaming from the scene until they collapsed, eyewitnesses said.

Khmer Rouge guerrillas claim strike in capital

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Communist Khmer Rouge guerrillas today claimed to have struck the vicinity of Cambodia's capital of Phnom Penh twice in the past month, killing or wounding 13 Vietnamese.

Khmer Rouge radio, monitored in Bangkok, said the guerrillas tossed four hand grenades into a downtown market on May 30, killing or wounding 11 Vietnamese, and later killed two Vietnamese in an attack on a market near the capital.

Israel split over border dispute with Egypt

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's coalition government has split along party lines over how to resolve a border dispute with Egypt, and officials say the argument could bring down the government.

The argument Wednesday involved Israel's strategy for dealing with prospects for Mideast peace talks.

Officials said Prime Minister Shimon Peres, head of the Labor Party, and Likud leader Yitzhak Shamir, who is foreign minister, failed to reach a compromise on whether to submit to binding international arbitration in the Sinai Peninsula border dispute, as Egypt has demanded.

Peres, hoping to set the stage for talks with Jordan and Palestinians, is willing to go to arbitration.

But Shamir insists on non-binding "conciliation" talks through an agreed mediator.

Prison change

Running the Texas prison system is no cakewalk. It's a demanding, all-consuming, thankless occupation. So it comes as no surprise that Ray Procunier who ran the Texas system through 13 of its bloodiest months has stepped aside, saying he "just ran out of gas." It's the kind of job that will do that to a person.

The job now falls to Lane McCotter to attempt to bring a semblance of order to the prison system, which has been racked by violence. With this year less than half gone, 13 deaths have occurred in violent attacks. Last year, a total of 25 people were killed in the system. McCotter's job is not an easy or enviable one.

Prisons are not pretty places. In prisons, one sees life at one of its lowest levels — tortured, angry individuals in a caged society with little hope, little ambition. They are the refuse of society, yet society wants to help them — if possible. It wouldn't be realistic for society to expect prisons in which there is no violence; but neither should society expect any rehabilitation to take place in a prison system in which 25 people can be killed in one year. Obviously, there are still changes to be made before the prison system is acceptable.

During Procunier's tenure, he brought about changes in the Texas Department of Corrections that one day may pay off in a less violent prison population. For example, he replaced many of the wardens, formalized training procedures for guards and reorganized the entire department.

But those changes will not result in a less violent atmosphere anytime soon and, without a doubt, the siege of violence continuing in the prison system will continue for months or years to come.

Perhaps McCotter can bring about the eventual change that Procunier had initiated. Every Texan should hope so — for the sake of society outside the prison walls as well as the society on the inside.

Movies are your best entertainment!

That was the slogan of the motion-picture industry until some wag pointed out the first letter of each word spelled "MAYBE."

The industry was chagrined, but not for long. Now, if a movie makes money, Hollywood believes it must be top-notch entertainment, and there's no MAYBE about it. Instead of artistic creativity, there's artistic reproductivity: for example, "Rocky," "Rocky II," "Rocky III," "Rocky IV," ...

There's a growing list of these movie serials, including three each of "Jaws," "Halloween," "Star Trek," "Smokey and the Bandit," "Superman," "Porky's," "Amityville Horror" and "The Road Warrior." There are two of "Godfather" and five of "Friday the 13th."

Actually, these repetitions are not new to Hollywood. Many of the early films were serials — the cliff-hanging "Perils of Pauline," for example. There were 36 Tarzan movies, starting in 1918. Charlie Chan and James Bond kept coming back.

Don't put repetition down. If moviegoers were not enthused, there would be no lines at the box office. As long as the public responds, there will be more and more of the same. Would you believe "Rocky XXXVI"?

Another View:

Keep door locked

Les Aspin, that self-described military reformer who heads the House Armed Services Committee, is concerned that moves to reform the Pentagon might be going too far. "We're in a very, very dangerous situation," he said while trying to explain why he would exempt top Pentagon officials from a law keeping them from leaving the Pentagon to work for defense contractors.

As laws go, this one hardly seems to inspire fear: According to a General Accounting Office survey, two of every three Pentagon employees who jump ship to work with private contractors don't bother to report it, as the law requires. Given such contempt, the actions of Rep. Aspin and his colleagues on the House Armed Services panel whose votes approved the exemption seem gratuitous. Why bother, after all, with a formal exemption if de facto practice takes care of the problem?

Why bother, indeed? There's a real danger here, but it's not a result of going overboard on reforms. The lock on the so-called revolving door was placed to discourage the conflicts of interest that arise when Pentagon employees involved in procurement deal with contractors who hold out the promise of lucrative salaries as rewards for those who don't make waves. As Rep. John E. Porter, R-Ill., put it, the revolving door is one major reason "we see $650 ashtrays, $1,000 plastic cups and $7,000 coffee pots."

If the law served no purpose, it would make sense to do away with it altogether, rather than simply exempting the brass. But it serves a good purpose. That it is not enforced is no reason to kill or weaken it by exempting the ones who, in fact, are most vulnerable to the abuses it is designed to avert. The Defense Department must be shown Congress takes violations of its laws seriously. To open the revolving door even a crack sends it absolutely the wrong signal.

— The St. Louis Post-Dispatch

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 20, the 171st day of 1985. There are 194 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 20, 1782, Congress approved the Great Seal of the United States.

On this date:

In 1632, the English Crown granted the second Lord Baltimore settlement rights to an area surrounding Chesapeake Bay, most of which would later become the state of Maryland.

In 1756, in India, a group of British soldiers was captured and imprisoned in a suffocating cell that became known as the "Black Hole of Calcutta." Most of the men died.

In 1837, Queen Victoria ascended to the British throne following the death of her uncle, King William IV.

In 1863, West Virginia became the 35th state admitted to the Union.

In 1893, a jury in New Bedford, Mass., found Lizzie Borden innocent of the ax murders of her father and stepmother.

In 1948, the variety series "Toast of the Town," hosted by Ed Sullivan, premiered on CBS television.

In 1963, the United States and Soviet Union signed an agreement to set up a "hot line."

'Urgent' computer still on hold

WASHINGTON — In the apparently endless chronicling of Pentagon waste, it's the $640 toilet seats, $400 hammers and $600 ashtrays that get the headlines. Less sensational, but far more wasteful, are the unpublicized delays and cost overruns on the Pentagon's big-ticket items.

Jack Anderson

One of these is CAMIS, the Continental Army Management Information System, on which the Pentagon has already spent enough to buy more than 66,000 overpriced ashtrays with no discernible results.

After three years of development and expenditures topping $40 million, the fancy computer system is still many months and millions of dollars from even reaching the drawing board.

How important is CAMIS to national security? An internal memo from the Army Forces Command chief of staff put it this way:

"The need for CAMIS can be simply stated. Without it, the Army cannot perform the functions needed to mobilize the (reserve) force; redistribute personnel, equipment and materiel by priority; and prepare units for deployment within the time frame demanded by national strategy."

But for all its urgency, the CAMIS project has bogged down in the very first of its preliminary stages: figuring out what the computer system should be able to do when it's eventually built and programmed.

Our associate Donald Goldberg obtained hundreds of pages of internal Army documents detailing the project's problems. With the help of Joe Burniece, an analyst with the Project on Military Procurement, a private watchdog group, the story has been pieced together.

As envisioned four years ago, the computer system was to cost about $600 million from start to finish. Surveying the appalling extravagance to date, sources involved in the project now predict glumly that the ultimate cost is sure to be well over $1 billion.

In 1982, the Army chose Rehab Group Inc., a Washington-based company, to do the basic "brainstorming" for CAMIS under a Small Business Administration "set-aside." But the General Accounting Office ruled that Rehab was too big to qualify for the special small-business treatment, so Army officials gave Rehab a sole-source contract, arguing that it was the only firm that could do the job.

Army attorneys questioned this reasoning but were ignored. When other officials insisted that the project be opened up for competitive bidding as originally planned, the brass created a separate computer project — and gave Rehab a sole-source contract.

By the spring of 1984, Col. Luther Crum, then-director of the Army Automation Management Office, wrote a memo to the chief of the Army Reserves charging that the CAMIS project was out of control. Detailed plans were "essentially non-existent," he charged, and even the amount of money already spent was impossible to figure out.

"Adequate controls over the sole-source contractor, Rehab, are lacking," Crum complained. "They are in control, rather than being controlled."

Crum's recommendation that Rehab's contract not be renewed was ignored, and the company is now in the running for yet another slice of the CAMIS pie.

SCANDAL OF THE WEEK: There's a law on the books that requires a cutoff of U.S. aid to countries that permit illicit narcotics to be smuggled into the United States. But political and diplomatic considerations always seem to override enforcement of the law. Mexico, for example, refuses to extradite drug smugglers for trial in U.S. courts. Yet no one hints that U.S. aid to Mexico should be curtailed. In Bolivia, the U.S. Embassy has refused to give a visa to a Bolivian government official who was going to tell Congress about drug investigations he had conducted. The embassy feared his testimony would implicate members of the current Bolivian government.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST — The Soviet Embassy invited some 60 House administrative assistants over for an evening of caviar, vodka, cold cuts and cultural exchange. The House staffers saw a movie about Moscow and engaged in a question-and-answer session with their hosts. It was the first time such a group had been invited to the embassy since 1974, and some of the congressional staffers were "a little goosey," confided one source, about fraternizing with the Soviets. Just to be safe, they cleared the affair with the FBI, the CIA and the State Department.

MINI-EDITORIAL: After our recent columns on spies who sell out their country for money, a few of our sterner critics accused us of being no better. "How many of your pieces refer to a 'top secret document' or a 'highly classified report?'" one reader asked. Our response: Most of them do. But as investigative journalists, we cannot tolerate censorship. And the government often uses its classification stamps to censor the news. We consult security experts who help us separate security information from censored news. As patriotic Americans, we don't print secret information that might harm national security. We never will.

GEORGE F. WILL

Special Forces fight special fights

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Once again the name of this Army base, with its special resonance as home of the Special Forces, has risen to the surface of the nation's consciousness. As the hijackers took TWA's aircraft to Beirut, elite elements of Fort Bragg's forces took off for the eastern Mediterranean. Because of these Special Forces and other elite units, this base is a reminder of the constant war against America that Americans only intermittently acknowledge.

George F. Will

The Special Forces suffered disproportionately and undeservedly from the Vietnam bitterness. John Kennedy expressed his admiration for elitism and his interest in unconventional warfare by making the green beret a symbol of excellence. But the intellectuals who followed in Kennedy's slipstream shed their convictions — if they had such — when they lost their patron. They had applauded, and even written, the rhetoric that underlay Kennedy's revitalization of the Special Forces. "We shall go any place, bear any burden, pay any price ...." In a twinkling they became disparagers of the rhetoric and, in two twinklings, of him. At Fort Bragg, they keep the flame that his sycophants abandoned.

Some Americans, mesmerized by the "lessons" of Vietnam, as they choose to misunderstand them, regard the Special Forces as a fuse that leads to an explosive involvement of U.S. conventional forces. The theory is that Kennedy's misplaced confidence in counter-insurgency put America on the slippery slope into the Indochina quagmire. These same Americans continue to regard the Special Forces as the thin end of the large wedge of U.S. involvement.

The men in the ranks of the Special Forces have a dramatically different and almost prosaic conception of their profession. They are, indeed, trained and equipped for, among other things, short-duration, high-violence missions. However, their primary duty, which keeps them busy around the world, is long-term and nonviolent. It is teaching internal defense to Third World nations under attack.

Founded in 1942, the first Special Forces unit was trained for sabotage operations in Norway. But it fought its fiercest battle near Naples. The problem has always been to match the Special Forces' competence to a mission. Today the focus is on MTTs — Military Training Teams — that are conducting training around the world, serving as "force multipliers" for the West. If Special Forces are successful in one-tenth of their training efforts (and they do much better than that), it is a bargain at the price, which is one-tenth of one percent of the defense budget.

Army officers know that joining the Special Forces takes them off the Army's traditional career path. Perhaps they are too acquainted with bullets, and not sufficiently schooled in the arts of bureaucracy for today's military. As a Defense Department supporter of Special Forces says, the Army has a long record of preferring people like McClellan, Pope and Burnside before stumbling upon the Grants and Shermans who win the wars.

Nevertheless, the Special Forces have high morale, for two reasons. First, many are volunteers four times over. They have volunteered for the Army, for airborne training, for the Special Forces and for some special skill, such as underwater operations or free-fall parachuting. Second, they know they may be used, as in Grenada. That operation is still paying incalculable dividends in morale. As one Green Beret puts it, a tank driver at Ford Hood, Tex., knows that he is part of general deterrence but that he will not see action unless there is a major war. Some of Ft. Bragg's units know they may be winging off to Cyprus at the first word of a hijacking.

However, there are three aspects of anti-terrorism: prevention, rescue, retaliation. When prevention has failed, decisions must be taken quickly, and generally by other governments, to make rescue even remotely possible. If the tires of TWA's jet had been shot flat when it first landed in Algiers, before the two terrorists acquired armed helpers and flew on to a safe haven in Beirut, there might have been a moment in which the Delta force from Fort Bragg could have been used.

As for retaliation, we have the necessary military assets. We have the requisite information regarding appropriate targets — Syrian — belonging to a nation that is culpable, in this sense: It could stop much of the Lebanon-based terrorism if it wanted to. We lack — at least we have lacked — only the political will to act. It is not the military's fault that when terrorists throw down gauntlets to the United States, U.S. policy has been to hope that they run out of gauntlets.

ART/BUCHWALD

Buchanan Cuomo's top voice man

There was joy at the "Cuomo in '88" headquarters.

Bellweather, one of Cuomo's political advisers, said, "Did you read the papers? Pat Buchanan has called the governor a 'glib, fast-talking lobbyist for a reactionary liberalism that would kill tax reform in its crib.'"

Art Buchwald

"Gov. Cuomo's not upset by that?" I said.

"He has to pretend he is. But behind closed doors he's thrilled that Buchanan has selected him as his No. 1 target. Any Democratic candidate would give his eyetooth to be on the receiving end of so much name-calling."

"I'm sure Pat isn't doing it just to get Cuomo nominated in 1988," I said.

"Maybe yes, maybe no. We're not about to find out what causes Buchanan's temper tantrums. Listen to this from Pat, 'Cuomo's incessant invocations of the poor, the downtrodden, the ill, almost invariably turn up as preambles to budget requests that would augment the power of his own political class — the welfare statists.'"

"What are welfare statists?"

"I imagine they are people in a state of welfare. The way we figure it, Buchanan considers Cuomo the President's most formidable enemy when it comes to tax reform. Reagan no longer wants to make state and city taxes deductible. If the governor can rally support to permit people to keep their state and local tax deductions it would be a big defeat for the White House. That's why Buchanan is resorting to personal attacks on the governor."

"The tax reform bill must mean a lot to Pat."

"Frankly, the governor believes Buchanan couldn't care less about tax reform except that it gives the President an opportunity to go out on the stump and maintain he's fighting a lonely battle against Washington. But the White House still needs a real person to attack. So Pat has declared Gov. Cuomo the Administration's No. 1 Democratic devil. Gary Hart should be so lucky."

"It's hard to believe that Buchanan, as smart as he is, would help Cuomo run for President."

"All I know is what I read in the papers," Bellweather said. "Let me read more of Buchanan, 'Your Governor is a statist, instinctively hostile to the idea that the people can manage themselves, instinctively cordial to the aggrandizement of government power. This President is a standing affront to that kind of politician.' Later on he says, 'Now we approach the wellsprings of Mario Cuomo's seemingly inchoate rage. The dirty little secret of the American Left is that it is interested in power, not people.'"

"That's strong stuff," I said.

"A Democratic candidate for the presidency would kill for that kind of endorsement from the White House," Bellweather said.

"Then the governor is not going to ask the President to make Buchanan knock off the rhetoric?"

"On the contrary. We're trying to find ways of making Pat keep it up until '88. We want all his bile to be directed at Cuomo for the next two and a half years."

"Suppose Buchanan realizes he's helping the governor and not hurting him. Do you think he'll then knock it off?"

"Not Pat. He's an ideological slugger, and Cuomo is a great target for him. If we planned our campaign to bring the governor along to this stage we couldn't have done it any better. As far as the Democrats are concerned, anyone who gets Pat Buchanan upset has to be one helluva guy."

"I can see how delighted you are with the high profile for your candidate. But there is something frightening about an official in the White House fulminating against a governor just because he doesn't agree with a tax reform plan."

"Not to worry. Everyone knows that Pat has a short fuse. The more rage he shows the less people will take him seriously. From our viewpoint he can do no wrong. We're so grateful to him that when Buchanan gets canned for putting his foot in his mouth, we're going to ask him to work for us."

Westmoreland Glass closes doors

GRAPEVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Triumphant but $65 poorer, Robert Lloyd gently collected a fragile, 20-year-old milk glass candelabra from the auctioneer's table. Only one month earlier, he'd grabbed the candelabra's mate for just $35.

"When that was made it went for $4.50," the auctioneer said.

The sale underscored what had become ironically obvious early in the Westmoreland Glass Co.'s series of inventory auctions: going out of business can be very good for business.

"If we could (ordinarily) get anything like the prices we get at these auctions, we'd be in production," plant manager Tim Valentine said ruefully.

For 95 years, craftsmen of the once family-owned Westmoreland Glass Co. molded, crimped, etched and painted thousands of varieties of vases, candy dishes, trinket boxes, candleholders, statues and tableware.

Westmoreland's traditionally styled, homey products weren't "art glass" in a class with Tiffany products, said auctioneer George Paich, but were sold in gift shops, dime stores and department stores for daily use.

To collectors like Lloyd, of Export, and Paula K. Bland of Munhall, Westmoreland's glassware was "really the ultimate in glass...very unusual, very functional," Mrs. Bland said.

"They seemed to give so much detailed attention to their glass...it was just unsurpassed," said Barbara Shaeffer, publisher of The Glass Review, a monthly collectors' magazine in Marietta, Ohio.

But to the average consumer, less finished and cheaper machine-made glassware served just as well as Westmoreland's hand-pressed products, Valentine said.

"The only way to survive is to really educate your customers," he said, walking between glass-laden tables at a recent auction in Westmoreland's red brick factory about 30 miles east of Pittsburgh.

In May 1984, after several years of losses, Westmoreland cooled its glass furnaces for the last time and laid off the 100 employees left from a peak workforce of about 235. Lingering hopes of a restart were ended in October, when the company put its cast-iron molds, aging equipment and plant building up for sale.

Westmoreland opened in Grapeville in 1890. It was one of hundreds of hand-pressed glass factories that located in southwestern Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and northern West Virginia in the late 19th century because of abundant natural gas, used to fuel the huge, walk-in furnaces in which cauldrons of glass were melted.

But depletion of the gas deposits, competition from machine houses, higher labor costs and, most recently, cheap imports gradually drove most of the region's hand-made glass plants out of business.

"There are skills that are just dying with Westmoreland Glass," mourned John Schnupp, 55, who began working for Westmoreland at age 16 in 1945 and "rose through the ranks" to become production manager.

Mrs. Shaeffer could think of only about half a dozen plants left in the area still hand pressing or blowing glass.

"There are skills that are just dying with Westmoreland Glass," mourned John Schnupp, 55, who began working for Westmoreland at age 16 in 1945 and "rose through the ranks" to become production manager.

From its original wooden-framed buffing wheels and mold presses to its domed, brick walk-in furnaces, Westmoreland's more than 4,000-square-foot factory is a museum to glassmaking.

"As far as the methods of glassmaking, there was very little change" since the factory's founding, Valentine said.

Glass was mixed and poured into a cast-iron mold fitted in a wooden press, which then was clamped shut to shape the glass to the mold. The molded glass was then crimped, pinched, stretched or swung to achieve the final shape.

In West Texas, widely scattered thunderstorms western mountains tonight, otherwise sunny today and Friday and fair tonight. Warmer. Lows tonight 60s. Highs Friday 90s except near 104 Big Bend and upper 80s mountains.

In North Texas, partly cloudy tonight with a slight chance of thunderstorms. Partly cloudy and hot Friday with a slight chance of thunderstorms east. Low tonight 69 to 73. High Friday 90 to 96.

In South Texas, partly cloudy with scattered thunderstorms south and along the coast tonight and Friday, with heavy rain possible tonight. Lows tonight mostly 70s except upper 60s Hill Country. Highs Friday 90s west and inland south to 80s along the coast.

Warmer weather expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders can expect warmer temperatures in the Permian Basin area Friday as forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport call for fair skies with a low in the upper 60s tonight, becoming sunny with a high in the upper 90s Friday. Winds will be from the south at five to 15 mph, increasing to less than 20 mph Friday.

Wednesday's high of 85 was 22 degrees below the record set in 1951. This morning's low was nine degrees above the 1973 record of 52.

STATE

A few scattered showers and some thunderstorms were reported early today along the upper Texas coast and light showers dampened a small part of South Texas and the coastal bend.

Skies were partly cloudy to cloudy over the southern half of the state and clear over the northern half.

Forecasts called for widely scattered thunderstorms over the mountains of West Texas, along the coast and over other portions of South Texas today. Elsewhere clear to partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures were forecast.

Highs were to be mostly in the 80s and 90s, ranging upward to near 100 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Friday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled across the Southeast today frwm the mid-Atlantic states to the Louisiana coast, and a flash flood watch was posted through the morning for Texas' southern tip.

Winds from the storm system felled trees and power lines in Baxley and Homerville, Ga., Wednesday night, the National Weather Service said.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered over the Rockies across the Plateau to the northern Sierra Nevada. Winds were clocked at 52 mph at Reno, Nev., 48 mph at Rawlins, Wyo., and 44 mph at Boise, Idaho.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms reaching from south Texas across southern Georgia and Florida. The weather service also predicted scattered thundershowers over the northern Plains and more rain for northern New England and upstate New York.

Fischer supplies relief on mound

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The biggest relief at Angels Stadium these days seems to be that the disastrous first half of the Texas League season is over.

But quietly, steadily, the Angels have developed a new form of relief, one they hope will help them rebound from the disappointing first half.

His name is Todd Fischer. Slowly, steadily, Fischer has earned the job as the Angel stopper. He is the finisher. The one who closes the door on opposing rallies in the late innings.

The ugly 29-37 record and nine game difference between first-place El Paso and cellar-dwelling Midland is erased, both teams begin again with 0-0 records tonight as the second season begins. The Angels travel to Beaumont kicking off a six-game set and a 12-game road trip, and everyone has high expectations in the second half race. Fischer is one reason why.

In 12 games since arriving with the club on May 18, Fischer has won four, saved three and lost none. His earned run average is a wisp-thin 1.24. In one stretch of the Angels latest homestand, "Fish" finished four straight ballgames. On the fifth night, with Fischer taking a deserved night off, the pen allowed 10 runs in the final three innings blowing a 3-1 lead and taking an embarrassing 11-3 defeat.

"BEFORE 'FISH' we didn't have a legitimate stopper late in the game who could absolutely come in and hammer the door shut," Maddon admits. "He has consistently done that. We will use Fischer exclusively in a stopper's role in the second half."

The job landed in Fischer's hands almost by default. All season, Maddon has looked for combinations and consistency in his pitching staff — both from his starters and out of the pen. In the last month, since Fischer was acquired from the Oakland system after a five-week stint in the Mexican League, the Midland bullpen, not including Fischer, has allowed 56 earned runs in 61⅔ innings for an ERA of 8.17.

The starters have fared somewhat better with an ERA of 4.49 over the same span. The need for a stopper is obvious.

IN SHORT, Fischer was the Angels' bullpen the last month.

And in Fischer, a 24-year-old righthander with a truckload of confidence and a good make up of pitches, the Angels have found their man. Standing only about 5-10 and weighing about 165 pounds, it is Fischer's attitude that makes him an imposing figure on the mound.

"I never let anything bother me out there on the mound," Fischer said. "Just give me the ball and let me throw. I don't worry about who is up there, I don't have a memory of who is who and what they did against me last time.

"I think it helps me because I have no fear out there. I just go right at them it don't matter who they are. Sometimes I beat them, sometimes they beat me."

Lately it has been Fischer coming out on top more often than not. But it's been a while coming for the Fort Meyers, Fla., native. He was signed as a free agent by the A's after two years at Edison JC in Fort Meyers, just a day after signing a letter of intent with the University of Miami.

HE SPENT three years in the Oakland organization in Idaho Falls, Madison (Wisc.) and Albany (N.Y.), the first two as a reliever, then in Albany, someone decided to make him a starter. Coming off knee surgery in the spring of 1984, "Fish" lost his first four starts and then took a pair of no decisions.

Cubs round first in fight for night play

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A plan to let the Chicago Cubs play night baseball at Wrigley Field if they make the National League playoffs reached first base Wednesday in the Illinois General Assembly.

The House, 85-25, gave preliminary approval to an amendment that would suspend a state law barring night ball at Wrigley — the only major league ballpark without lights — so the Cubs could install temporary lights for post-season games.

The ban on night games would still apply to regular-season contests.

The amendment needs another round of approval in the House before moving on to the Senate. The Cubs also are expected to continue legislative efforts to overturn the ban altogether.

The Cubs and major league owners have been pushing for permission to play night games at Wrigley because of the increased television revenues generated by the larger viewing audience.

The Illinois Supreme Court is weighing the team's request that it overturn the state law as well as a Chicago ordinance preventing night baseball at Wrigley.

The city ordinance could be waived with a special permit, said Rep. John Cullerton, D-Chicago, sponsor of the temporary-lights amendment.

Opponents of lights at the 37,-00-seat Wrigley Field argue the neighborhood is not equipped to handle a nighttime influx thousands of fans and cars.

"This would allow for 37,000 people who've been drinking ... to empty out into a community that's approximately the size of Champaign (population about 60,000)," said Chicago Democratic Rep. John Cullerton, sponsor of the amendment. "It's like a giant beer garden being let out into a small community."

Dodgers, Guerrero end Hawkins streak at 11 wins

Associated Press

Andy Hawkins, baseball's hottest pitcher, was finally grounded. And perhaps it was fitting that the game's hottest home run hitter, Pedro Guerrero, was the man who brought him down.

Hawkins, who had won his first 11 decisions, served up a leadoff home run to Guerrero, who has hit 10 of his 14 homers in June, to start a four-run Los Angeles Dodger rally in the bottom of the seventh inning that resulted in a 5-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.

"I'm never going to forget this streak," Hawkins said Wednesday night. "This has been a very big part of my life. It's been a dream come true. I was relatively unknown until now, and I've basically been picked apart for the past five or six weeks and it's been nice. Now I won't have to deal with you guys (the press)."

Earlier, another of the National League's premier hurlers, New York's Dwight Gooden, was hanging on for dear life. But he worked out of a ninth-inning jam and pitched the Mets to a 1-0 victory over the slumping Chicago Cubs.

"I WAS just missing the pitches," Guerrero said of the first two games of the Dodgers' showdown with the Padres, whom they trail by four games in the NL West. "There was nothing wrong. I was still swinging the bat well."

"I thought Hawkins pitched well, probably as well as he did in those first eleven," said Mike Marshall, who had two of the Dodgers' six hits. "Jerry Reuss just pitched better."

Reuss, 5-5, earned the victory, allowing only three hits over seven innings. Ken Howell pitched the final two innings for his seventh save.

Hawkins, 11-1, enjoyed the best start by a National League pitcher since 1959, when Elroy Face went 17-0 for Pittsburgh en route to a 19-1 season.

After Guerrero broke a 1-1 tie with his leadoff homer, the Dodgers got run-scoring hits from Dave Anderson and pinch-hitter R.J. Reynolds and scored another on an error by San Diego left fielder Carmelo Martinez.

Hawkins would not fault himself on the Guerrero home run.

"Give him credit. He hit a pretty good pitch," Hawkins said. "They're not paying him a million dollars a year for nothing."

MEANWHILE, AT Shea Stadium, Gooden was struggling, but Manager Davey Johnson had seen enough of his bullpen recently to determine that the Mets would live or die with their ace right-hander.

"It was his game to win or lose," said Johnson, mindful of a recent 1-6 road trip during which New York's bullpen was totally ineffective. "Besides, if I'd have taken him out in that situation, they'd have lynched me."

Indeed, they — 51,778 fans, the largest Shea Stadium crowd in nearly eight years — might have.

In a similar situation Friday night, Johnson pulled Gooden after the 20-year-old pitcher had thrown 146 pitches. Doug Sisk and Jess Orosco failed to hold a one-run lead and the Mets dropped a 5-4 decision to Montreal.

Gooden, after surrendering hits to Keith Moreland and Ryne Sandberg to start the ninth, got Leon Durham and Richie Hebner on pop flies, then ended the game by striking out Thad Bosley to hand the Cubs their eighth straight loss.

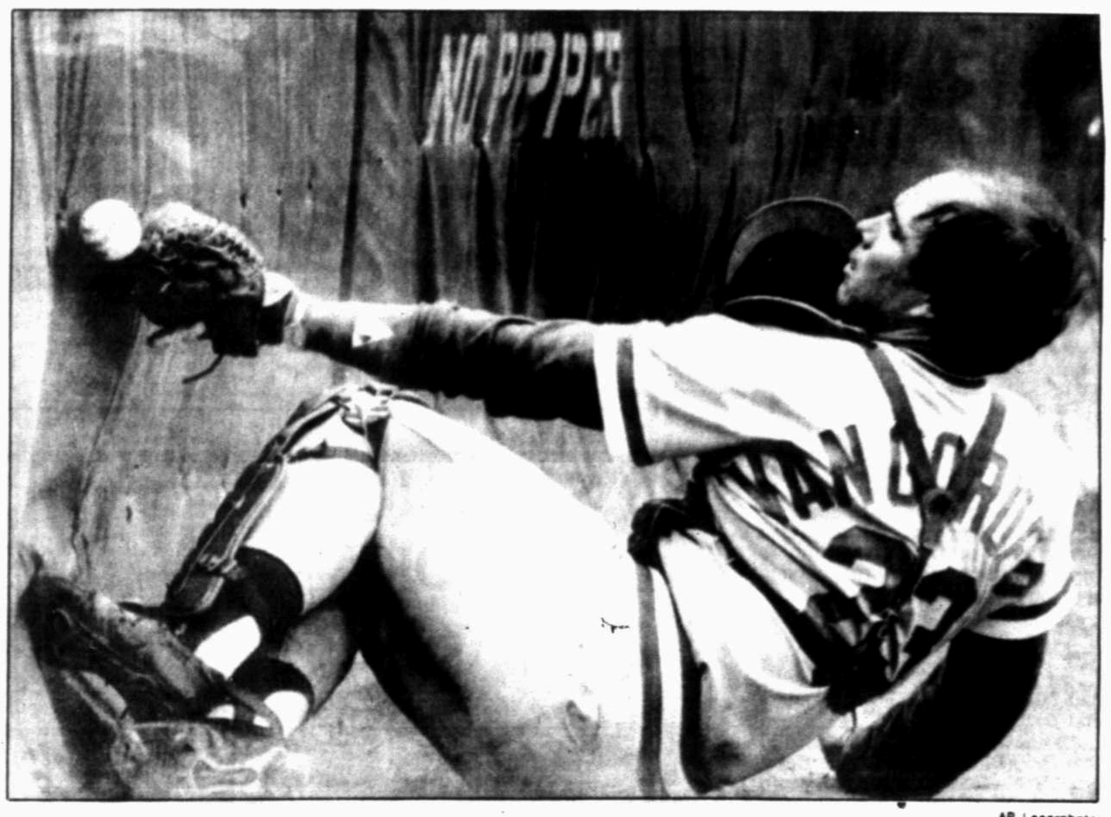

"All I had left, I was going to let it go right there," Gooden said of the fastball he threw by Bosley.

Gooden, 10-3, now has three shutouts, six complete games and a personal four-game winning streak. He struck out nine, walked two and scattered six hits in lowering his major league-leading earned run average to 1.66. He also leads the majors with 125 strikeouts.

The Mets have beaten the Cubs, with whom they complete a four-game series today, on three complete-game victories, the first two by Ron Darling and Ed Lynch. The last time the Mets did that was in August, 1976, with Jerry Koosman, Jon Matlack and Tom Seaver the pitchers.

Blanda more than durable old man

By TOM KLECKNER
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Before you take George Blanda for granted, don't. You may remember him simply as the old man who played with men young enough to be his sons, but don't. George Blanda was more than that much more.

This is a man who began his professional career with the Chicago Bears in 1949 during the age of two-way players and did it all — quarterback, place-kicker, punter, linebacker and safety.

This is a man who played professional football for 16 years after announcing his retirement from the game in 1959.

This is a man who, when released just before his 49th birthday, felt he still had two good years left in him. This is a man who, at age 57, still plays racquetball and handball to keep in shape.

This is a man who backed up Sid Luckman when he came into the league and Kenny Stabler when he left. This is a man who missed only four games in 26 years.

OF COURSE, there's an explanation for Blanda's longevity.

Said the man who played more games (340) and scored more points (2,002) than than anyone else in NFL history, "You get smarter as you get older."

And Blanda was. He discovered aerobics and jogging 25 years ago, long before they became fashionable.

"I always felt that by keeping the legs in shape and staying in good condition, you're chances of succeeding are a lot better," said Blanda, who espoused some of his theories at a recent sports medicine seminar at the Coastal Bend Hospital in Aransas Pass.

But even smart, old men have their heroes.

"My hero is Gordie Howe," Blanda said, referring to hockey's all-time leading scorer. "Here's a man who played with his kids. He played outstanding hockey for 29, 30 years. That's unbelievable!"

So is Blanda. The statistics (1,911 completions in 4,007 attempts for 26,920 yards and 236 touchdowns; 335 field goals; and 1,943 extra points) tell only part of the story. The rest comes from Blanda but you'll need more than one sitting with the Hall of Famer, who spends his time these days working on his 3-handicap golf game in La Quinta, Calif.

Oh, the stories Blanda could tell of western Pennsylvania, where more than a few sporting legends hail from. Or the University of Kentucky, where Blanda played blocking back in the old Notre Dame box formation under Bear Bryant and learned how to win.

"(It takes) hard work, tenacity, discipline, guts, blood sweat and tears. You've got to pay a price to win, and some people don't want to pay that price."

How about the Chicago Bears of the late '40s and '50s? What a Hall of Fame outfit that was — Blanda, Luckman, Bulldog Turner, George McAfee, George Connor, Doug Atkins and Bill George all coached by Papa Bear himself, George Halas.

Texas Topic

BLANDA COULD entertain you with tales of the American Football League's early days.

Returning to football at age 33 after a short year of retirement, Blanda once threw seven touchdown passes in a game and 36 in a season for the Houston Oilers as they won the first two AFL titles, and then said, "For the sheer enjoyment of football, I enjoyed those seven years in Houston, because I played football for all of them."

But nothing can top Blanda's last nine years in professional football all spent with the Oakland Raiders or that wondrous 1970 season when he came off the bench to win or tie five straight games in the final minutes. Now that is a story.

"I really relate to the '70 season, mostly because of all the dramatic moments," Blanda said. "It was like someone wrote a script. You wouldn't have believed it if you saw what was happening every week."

For those of you too young to remember, let's take a quick trip back to that enchanted season. It began innocently enough when Blanda, at age 43, relieved Daryle Lamonica and threw three touchdown passes and kicked a field goal in a 31-14 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The next week, he kicked a 48-yard field goal with three seconds left to forge a 17-17 tie with arch-rival Kansas City.

Then came the dramatic climax. Coming off the bench once more, Blanda threw a touchdown pass with 1:34 to play and then kicked a 52-yard field goal as time ran out to give the Raiders a 23-20 miracle against the Cleveland Browns.

What were once miracles became part of the routine when Blanda's touchdown pass with 2:28 remaining gave Oakland a 24-19 decision over Denver the following week and a field goal with seven seconds left beat San Diego, 20-17, the week after.

"That year made my whole life because it changed my whole life," said Blanda, who was named the AFC's Most Valuable Player that year. "Instead of a broken-down old player, people realized, 'Hey, you're a pretty good football player.' All of a sudden, I had the publicity, the articles, the television commercials ... they asked me to do this, to do that. Prior to that, I had played 21 years in the league and no one knew or cared about me."

A SIDE NOTE: the Raiders reached the AFC championship game later that year Blanda's ninth of 12 championship game appearances and though they were beaten by the Baltimore Colts 27-17, Blanda provided all 17 points with two TD passes and a field goal.

Angels mend pitching

As Midland's Angels head into the second half of the Texas League West Division race, fans can't help but wonder if things can get any better for the Haloed ones, who finished in last place in the first half.

Manager Joe Maddon,the perennial optimist, feels things can't get any worse and is hopeful that with the addition of two new pitchers, things will get better. After all, during the first half, the Angels played as though governed by Murphy's Law.

"The way I look at it," says Maddon, "We will actually have three new pitchers to start the second half. Bob Kipper sat out the first half and now that he's ready to throw again, it's equivalent to having a new pitcher join the club."

The thing that buoys Madden's hopes most of all is that two of the pitchers—Kipper, who started the season with California, and newcomer Doug Banning, are "power" pitchers, "And that's something we haven't had, somebody who could throw it by the hitter."

MADDON had Byron Kemmerling, the newest addition to the relief corps, in Salem and Peoria, the newest addition to the relief corps. The Northern Colorado reliever replaces plucky Eddie Delzer, who seemed to lose his touch the last few weeks and could not douse the flames when he came into the game as the late inning fireman. Perhaps the Cal State-Fullerton lefthander will regain it at Redwood.

"Kemmerling is a slider-sinker ball pitcher and in this park that should help him," appraised Maddon. "And we have to get Todd Fischer some help."

One of the Angels' problems in the first half has been the bullpen. "The pitching was the big disappointment in the first half," says Maddon. "We definitely scored enough runs to win more games, but we couldn't stop the opposition in the late innings."

Midland played 25 one-run games and lost 14 of them, a disturbing number since most were lost after the chore of protecting a lead had been turned over to the bullpen.

OF COURSE, the bullpen admittedly has been overworked. The relief corps was never at full strength.

"With the addition of Kemmerling and Banning, that means we can return Spiro Psaltis to the bullpen," Maddon explained, "And with Julian Gonzalez throwing again, that should lighten the load." Gonzalez, after four wins and two saves in the season's early weeks, has been on the shelf since and in the few appearances he has made it is painfully evident that he's searching for that early season form.

Scott Cannon hasn't been much help since arriving. In his last three appearances, amounting to 3⅔ innings, he has walked 11 batters and if there is one thing a relief pitcher must do, it's come in the game and throw strikes. The former Pan American University pitcher's ERA is on the way to outer space at 16.85.

No, Maddon, hasn't given up on the big righthander, "We're just going to have to work with him and get him out of it. He's a power pitcher and can help us in the second half."

MADDON would also like to get Reggie Montgomery and Billie Merrifield untracked at the plate. "We've got to get Reggie back to where he was earlier in the season and Merrifield, he's struggling, but he did the same thing last year and wound up with 29 homers.

"And our offense was hurt when we lost Mark McLemore for two weeks. We just didn't score when he wasn't in the lineup."

But despite all of the other problems, the pitching injuries were the ones that hurt the most. Gonzalez, Kipper, Fred Wilburn, Psaltis, Byron Price, Doug McKenzie and Don Timberlake all lost time.

"We were never really able to set a rotation," says Maddon, "And we had no stopper, someone we could count on to give us the win that would stop a skid."

On the final day of the first half, there was little encouragement in this area. Timberlake had to retire because of shoulder tightness and before the final game with El Paso, Angulo was on the shelf for at least one turn.

But perhaps the biggest stumbling block to the second half is the El Paso Diablos. Billy Joe Robidoux, Glenn Braggs, Joey Meyer and Jesus Alfaro have combined to knock in more than 200 runs in half a season, more than 50 each. This is an awesome offensive lineup and perhaps the real surprise is that the Diablos didn't win the first half by more than two games.

The Angels face a rugged second half start with six games at Beaumont and then six at El Paso, if Maddon can get some of his pitching problems solved and some hitters back on track during this ordeal and compile a respectable break-even record in the process, perhaps there is hope in the second half.

Crosby Pro-Am making move to North Carolina

MACON, Ga. (AP) — The Bing Crosby National Pro-Am is moving to North Carolina next year, and preliminary plans call for amateur teams from each state to compete for nearly $5 million in prize money.

According to Kathryn Crosby, the prize money from the unusual tournament format will benefit charities in the players' home states, said Harley Bowers, sports editor for the Macon Telegraph and News, in a column published Wednesday.

He reported that Crosby is completing plans for the tournament with Ben Langella, a bank executive in the San Francisco suburb of Millbrae, and William Sullivan, the executor of the Crosby estate.

Langella said estimates of the amount of money that will be raised for the charities run to "at least $5 million." A cable television company has offered $1 million for TV rights with the possibility that all four days of the event would be televised, the newspaper said.

The trio discussed plans for the tournament last week in the Crosby home in Hillsborough, a suburb of San Francisco, and the official announcement of the tournament's format is expected later this summer.

MSU booster denies player payoff charge

NEW YORK (AP) — A former employee of one-time advertising executive William B. Tanner says Tanner provided Memphis State University basketball players with money, cars and "pseudo jobs," according to the latest issue of Sports Illustrated.

Asked how much money was involved, Harry Davis, former vice president and controller of the William B. Tanner Co., told the magazine, "How does $1,500 a month sound?"

Tanner, one,of the founders of the Golden Tigers booster club, has denied the charges.

Tanner sold his company about two years ago and it is now known as Media General Broadcast Services. He began a four-year federal prison term June 10 after pleading guilty to three counts of understating personal income and one mail-fraud count.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal recently quoted Jeff Battle, who played basketball at MSU from 1978-81, as saying he and other players had been given money by boosters and coaches.

An unidentified source also told SI that the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service have been looking into the gambling habits and possible debts of Dana Kirk, Memphis State's head basketball coach, stemming from his association with the Colonial Country Club.

Kirk has refused to answer questions about the allegations, but last Friday he appeared before reporters to deny that any players had been paid at Memphis State during his tenure.

Attempts to reach Kirk Wednesday were unsuccessful. His secretary said he was not in his office and he did not return several telephone calls.

A federal grand jury began an investigation last April into gambling in the Memphis area, and the Colonial has been one of the places suspected of gambling and bookmaking activities.

A source, described as close to the grand jury, also told the magazine that the panel was looking into the possibility that several games, including the 52-45 loss to Villanova in the Final Four, were fixed.

In addition, the NCAA is investigating possible recruiting violations and improper payments to Memphis State athletes, and Memphis State President Dr. Thomas Carpenter has ordered an investigation into the school's athletic program.

The magazine said Kirk had an affection for high-stakes gin rummy games and that a source told SI that unidentified individuals at the Colonial have won and lost as much as $3,000 in gin-rummy games in an evening. Kirk, former Memphis State Athletic Director Billy "Spook" Murphy and a number of the school's athletic boosters are members of the club.

Davis, who now lives in Phoenix, Ariz., provided the FBI with the information that led to Tanner's arrest and, ultimately his guilty pleas to fraud and tax evasion charges.

He told SI that there is "no question" Tanner gave Kirk money for his own use. Davis also said that Tanner provided money for the "procurement and support" of players.

Spagnolo wins Worst Avid Golfer title

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If America's Worst Avid Golfer tournament wasn't golfing's finest hour, there was no question it was the sport's longest.

Angelo Spagnolo shot 257 bad strokes to win the dubious title of America's worst recreational golfer Wednesday at the Tournament Players Club course, one of the country's most difficult.

The 31-year-old grocery store manager from Fayette City, Pa., lost about 60 golf balls along the way, almost half of them on the difficult 17th hole, which is nearly surrounded by water.

Spagnolo appeared to be only the second-worst golfer, behind Jack Pulford, until he shot a 66 at No.17. Pulford, a 48-year-old restaurateur from Moline, Ill., finished with a 208.

"I just came unglued on 17," said Spagnolo, who sank 27 balls into the water before he was forced by course officials to walk around the green and putt down a narrow cart path to the flag.

"There was a big hum in my head on 17. I kept hearing my son saying 'Dad' and laughing," said Spagnolo who was awarded a crystal trophy and a tacky green-plaid sports jacket.

Claiming the distinction of best of the worst was Kelly Ireland, a 42-year-old trial lawyer from Tyler, Texas, who boasted a 179. Course par is 72.

Originally scheduled to start at noon, tee time was set back to 10:57 a.m. to make sure the two twosomes had enough daylight to finish 18 holes. While an average game on an average course lasts somewhere around four hours, the brave denizens of weekend golfing perservered for a few minutes more than seven hours.

"It's better to be the best of the worst than the worst of the worst," Ireland said, adding that he wasn't sure of his title until the end.

Sponsored by Golf Digest magazine, the America's Worst Avid Golfer tournament was designed to show that average players can have fun even while ending up with scores that look more like four-round totals.

"The golf course is just terribly tough for a person who can't shoot straight," said Jay Fitzgerald, president of Golf Digest. "They've made some awful golf swings. They aren't going to the U.S. Open."

Watching the seemingly endless slices and whiffs were a handful of spectators, mostly family members of the four men who were chosen to help encourage the bad golfers of America to keep a stiff forearm and a firm constitution.

Joel Mosser, a 45-year-old stockbroker from Aurora, Colo., led, or trailed depending on one's perspective, after the front nine with a 75. Ireland was second with an 89, Spagnolo third with 99 and Pulford brought up the rear with 104.

At times, some of the play looked as though it could have been featured in a B-rated horror movie. The statistics were evidence: 102 balls lost in the water, 124 penalty shots and 17 wiffs.

"I play a little putt-putt," said 7-year-old Don Spagnolo. "I play better ... as bad as he's doing."

The four contestants were selected from 627 nominations nationwide. Candidates had to be men of reasonable physical ability who play at least 21 rounds of golf a year.

The search for the worst golfer also brought attention from some of the nation's biggest news organizations.

Dave Winner, who directed a CBS Sports camera crew around the course, said "This will be the only tournament you'll ever see that has more cameras than contestants."

Tisdale ready to take on pro challenge

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Wayman Tisdale, the Indiana Pacers' first-round pick in Tuesday's National Basketball Association college draft, said Wednesday he's ready to make the transition to professional ball.

"I love a challenge," Tisdale said at a news conference at Market Square Arena. "I'm really a guard in a big man's body. It'll be an adjustment, but I feel I can do it."

Tisdale, who flew into Indianapolis Tuesday night, was joined by family members, including his father, the Rev. Louis Tisdale, and his mother, Deborah. Also attending the conference were his brothers William, who was his teammate at Oklahoma, and Weldon, who will serve as his agent along with Tom Collins.

"Even before the lottery, I would have preferred to play at Indiana," Tisdale said. "I felt going to the LA Clippers (who had the third pick) that I would be competing against the Los Angeles Lakes."

Tisdale said another reason he was eager to play with the Pacers was that "people in Indiana really appreciate their basketball."

The Tulsa native said he has already had one pleasant experience in Indiana.

Tisdale was a member of the U.S. Olympic basketball team that played an exhibition game last summer in the Hoosier Dome.

"Except for winning the gold medal, playing at the Hoosier Dome last summer was the most exciting thing — in front of 67,000 people," he said. "I felt playing in those exhibition games before we played in the Olympic Games got my feet wet as far as what I could do against the other pro players. Maybe that's one of the reasons I came out a year early."

Tisdale, who dropped out of Oklahoma this spring after his junior year to pursue his career, said he planned to eventually return to school.

"My parents were behind me in what I did, but I promised them I would go back and finished my education. I would have graduated on time if I had stayed. It'll be in my contract that I go back and get my education," he said.

The 250-pound, 6-foot-9 Tisdale was the first player to be named first team All-American his first three years in college. He finished his college career as the 9th leading scorer in NCAA history, averaging 25.6 points and shooting 57.8 percent from the field and 66 percent from the free throw line.

He was named Big Eight player of the year as a freshman and was the all-time conference leading scorer in January.

Tisdale said he had been pleased with coaching from another Hoosier, Indiana Coach Bob Knight, during the Olympic Games.

"Coach Knight got more out of me than anybody. He probably got more out of me in two weeks than some coaches did in two years, " Tisdale said. "But I enjoyed it. I think I kept the other players up a lot."

Sator is Rangers' magna cum coach

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — In his inaugural address as the New York Rangers' 20th coach, Ted Sator talked about "direction, guidance and discipline" and the value of "surface tension," befitting a magna cum laude graduate of Bowling Green in health and physical education. But after 45 years of the Rangers being unable to win the Stanley Cup, he was quickly asked his timetable for being the magna cum leader of a team that would win the silver chalice that now resides in Gretzkytown.

"It's really difficult to put a year on that," Sator said. "But the bottom line is pursuing the Stanley Cup and we're not going to let up until we capture it."

In other years, the 17 previous Ranger coaches made virtually the same promise. But none kept the promise. Only the first two Ranger coaches ever guided a Stanley Cup champion — Lester Patrick in 1928 and 1933, then Frank Boucher in 1940, back when hardly anybody noticed. But now everybody has noticed that the Rangers haven't won the Stanley Cup since 1940. And during the last 45 seasons, the Rangers have qualified for the Stanley Cup final only three times — under Lynn Patrick in 1950, Emile Francis in 1972 and Fred Shero in 1979.

Of their previous 17 coaches, the Rangers have had only three with a winning record in more than 100 games behind the bench — Emile Francis over his three terms, Fred Shero, and Herb Brooks, who had a 131-113-42 record until he suddenly departed late in January, midway through his fourth season.

ON THE premise that a coach's success depends on the quality of his players, the Ranger frustration of 45 years is primarily an indictment of the organization rather than the coach. And now Ted Sator's success will depend primarily on the players supplied by the organization that is now being directed by Craig Patrick, a son of Lynn and a grandson of Lester.

"We believe," Craig Patrick said Wednesday, "that Ted Sator will be the most successful coach in the quickest amount of time than any man in the business."

The quicker the better, especially for Patrick whose contract as general manager is believed to expire after next season. If the Rangers don't show some progress under Patrick's choice as coach, Patrick's job will surely be in jeopardy. Until now Patrick has not shown the force or the flair of a successful National Hockey League general manager. But if Sator gets the Rangers off their treadmill to oblivion, Patrick will deserve the credit for choosing him.

Ted Sator was merely the latest new face to be paraded through the Hall of Fame lounge as the new Ranger coach. A handsome new face, to be sure, with wavy black hair and a Hollywood profile worthy of a young Burt Lancaster — but still a new face.

For more than a decade, the Hall of Fame lounge, its walls adorned with familiar faces on plaques honoring athletes and administrators who flourished at the Garden, might as well have had a trap door behind the lectern where new Ranger coaches were introduced. Sooner or later Larry Popein, Ron Stewart, John Ferguson, Jean-Guy Talbot, Fred Shero and Herb Brooks disappeared.

NOW THE Rangers have hired Sator — an assistant coach with the Philadelphia Flyers the last two seasons, before that a head coach in Sweden who had championship teams in the last three of his five seasons there. He has attended hockey clinics in the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

If nothing else, Sator is a career coach who has studied and learned how to be a coach; he's not an ex-player whose name got him the job. Sator hasn't played hockey since knee surgery ended his career as a wing with the Long Island Ducks in 1972 shortly after being farmed out by the New York Raiders of the World Hockey Association. As a youngster in Utica, N.Y., he spent much of his time at the nearby rink where the minor-league Clinton Comets played.

"They finally put in permanent seats there," he recalled, laughing, "because once a week the fans threw the folding chairs on the ice."

He remembered the Montreal Canadiens as "the shining team we used to look at then." To him, the Rangers "didn't start to make a real impression until the early 70s when Vic Hadfield, Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle were scoring all those goals." That Ranger team went to the cup final against the Boston Bruins in 1972, but sagged in the next few years. Then in Fred Shero's first season, the Rangers went to the 1979 cup final against the Canadiens, only to sag again.

"We want to improve every month, every year, so the Stanley Cup is not a product of change, it's a product of evolution," Sator said. "One of the things we have to guard against is a hasty approach."

Sator, of course, is taking over a Ranger team that skated on a treadmill to oblivion last season — a quick loss to the Flyers in the playoffs after having finished fourth in the Patrick Division with a 26-44-10 record, which ranked 16th among the 21 teams.

With their 62 points, the Rangers weren't looking up at the Flyers, Islanders and Washington Capitals as much as they were looking over their shoulders at the New Jersey Devils, who had 54 points.

"One of my jobs with the Flyers was to put together the game plan," Sator said. "Against the Rangers, we wanted to take away center ice, we wanted to jump their defensemen and force their defense into making an error, force the defense to make a pass a little quicker than they wanted to. We were able to create a gap between their forwards and defensemen, trapping two of their forecheckers."

WHATEVER SYSTEM Sator creates with the Ranger personnel, he wants it to be his system.

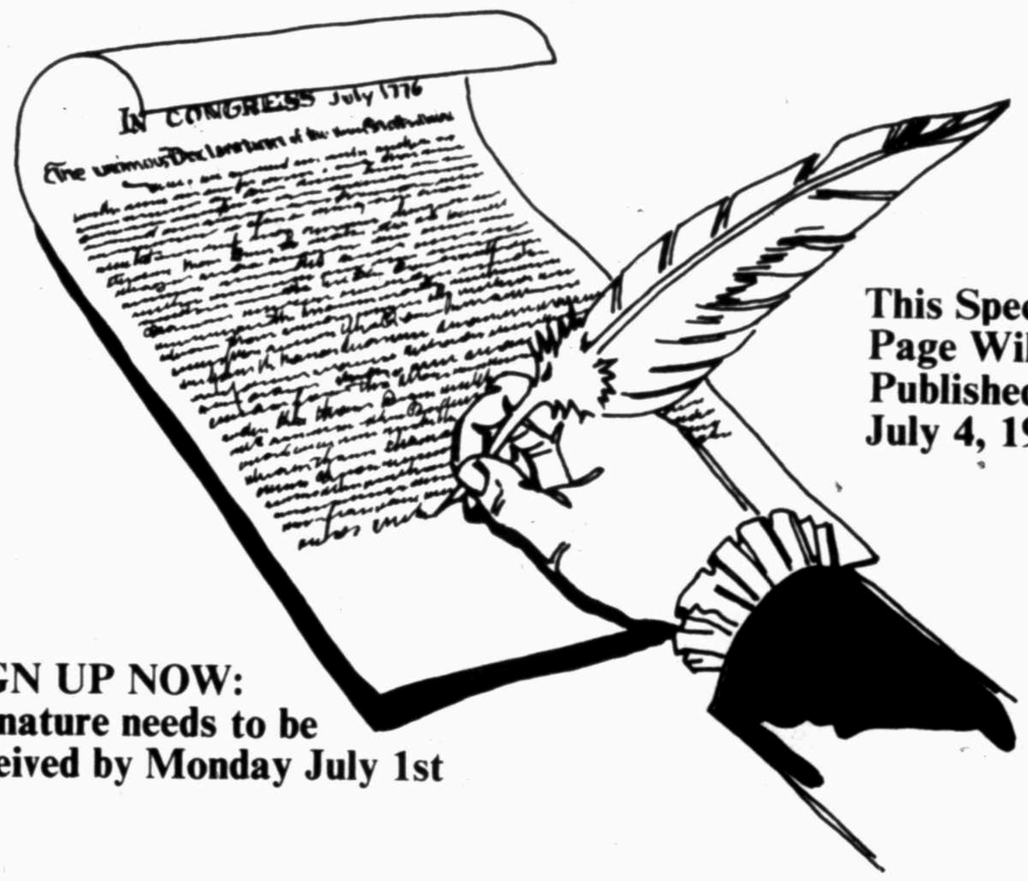

"I've found if you copy somebody else's success," he said, "you implant the impression that you're second best."

Sator also minimized the value of goon hockey, mentioning, "I don't think toughness can be equated with a fossil imprint on the boards when you hit somebody. Toughness is taking and giving a hit to make a play." And to help the Rangers make those plays, he already has two assistant coaches in mind.

"Two guys," Sator said, smiling, "I would go to war with."

If he goes to a Stanley Cup celebration with them, even better.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, June 21, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: New career opportunities are on the horizon. Financial considerations influence a choice you make in October or November. A delay could prove to be a blessing in disguise. Remain patient. An influential person will make good on a promise. A winter vacation proves very romantic. Variety is not only the spice of life but a source of inspiration. Be open to new ideas. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Chicago Cubs ace Rick Sutcliffe, actresses Maureen Stapleton, Marlette Hartley and Meredith Baxter Birney, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler, Jane Russell, Seattle Seahawks executive Mike McCormack, author Mary McCarthy. Britain's young Prince William turns three today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Paperwork and correspondence can be handled quickly today. A friend supplies you with the facts and figures you need to clinch a deal. Romance requires greater tact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Expect the unexpected! Your versatility lets you cope with almost any situation. Work tensions increase if you are too opinionated or overly demanding. Do not let your impulsive generosity hurt you financially.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your allies play a key role in your success. Heed their advice. Expect to be paid for your creative efforts. Romance requires more of your time and attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): At all costs, avoid dissension at place of work. Better public relations will win higher-up's approval. New financial rewards are featured. Resist an urge to pursue the impractical.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not let minor setbacks dissuade you from seeking new outlets for your creative talents. You have something very special to offer! Humor helps you win a difficult individual's respect and affection.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial affairs require careful handling. Stick to projects already underway even if friends come to you with a "sure-fire" scheme. Track an ugly rumor to its source.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New procedures and budgets hold special appeal. Be willing to revise a plan to satisfy partner. Group social activities are favored. Attending a social event this evening could lead to new romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid criticizing sensitive friends and family members; your comments could do more harm than good. Loved ones need your loving encouragement. Entertain in a simple but elegant way!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A distressing experience involving a young person could teach a valuable lesson. Write or call an old friend who is very much in your thoughts. Reading or listening to music relieves tension.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An appointment may have to be postponed until late next week. Welcome the opportunity to bone up on your facts and figures. Ending a relationship brings more relief than sorrow!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A stranger's advice could puzzle you. Trust your instincts. Your intuition is right on target! A sudden decision to go away for the weekend will delight your family.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A new approach helps you solve an old problem. Count on receiving some good financial news by midday. Casual gatherings hold more appeal than formal affairs. Wear something glamorous.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Suppose you hold Q-x in a suit opposite A-x in dummy, and you can't afford to lose a trick. Your legitimate chance of finding a singleton king is so slight that you may as well not consider it. A better shot is to lead the queen and hope the player on your left has the king and not the jack, and fails to cover. This play is known as a "Chinese finesse," perhaps because you have to be inscrutable when you lead the queen.

Sometimes, however, the lead of an unsupported queen has auxiliary advantages. Consider this hand, where North-South reached an optimistic slam. North's jump to game with his distributional hand is hard to fault, but South should have pulled in his horns in view of his weak suit and void in partner's suit.

A spade lead would have ended the hand rather early, but West passively opted for safety. Declarer ruffed the club opening lead and immediately led the queen of hearts — not to take a Chinese finesse, but because the only legitimate way to bring in the trump suit without losing a trick was to find East with a singleton jack and West with K-9-5. The jack would be pinned, and declarer could finesse the eight on the next round.

However, since declarer could easily have a six- or seven-card suit on this auction, West elected not to cover the queen. Declarer followed with a trump to the ace, and great was the fall thereon. A club ruff set up the suit. Although declarer still had to concede a trick at the end, the slam was in the bag for a very satisfactory result.

Viewers get feeling they're in space

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronauts go into space routinely, but relatively few others can experience flying a space shuttle, floating weightlessly around the cabin and viewing the blue-and-white spectacle of the Earth below. Until now, that is.

Vicarious space travelers will be able to get a sense of living and working aboard an orbiting shuttle from the comfort of a theater seat following the premiere Friday of a colorful new film on spaceflight.

Opening initially at the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum here, the new giant-screen film called "The Dream Is Alive" will take the space experience to more than 45 specially equipped theaters worldwide.

Shown on a 50-foot-high, 75-foot-wide screen with stereo sound, the film not only shows the preparations, launches and landing of shuttles, but also gives viewers a sense of living and working inside the vehicles.

The film, much of it shot by astronauts using special camera equipment taken on three shuttle missions in 1984, was sponsored by the museum and the Lockheed Corp. The museum contributed $700,000 to the $3.6 million project and the aerospace company picked up the rest.

President and Mrs. Reagan led a guest list of dignitaries Wednesday night at a preview of the 37-minute feature.

Produced by IMAX Systems Corp. of Toronto, the movie was shot with cameras using film frames 10 times larger than standard 35 millimeter film. This allows it to be projected on giant screens, like the five-story tall one in the Washington museum's theater.

The film is the latest in a series of giant-screen movies produced by IMAX for the museum, and some, such as the earlier "To Fly," have become mainstays at science museums around the world.

Graeme Ferguson, president of IMAX and producer-director of the film, told a news briefing that he created the movie from 90 minutes of footage shot in space and more taken on the ground.

Concert to benefit homeless

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedians Bill Cosby and David Brenner will headline a benefit concert for the 270 people left homeless by the fire that engulfed a neighborhood when police tried to evict the MOVE radical group.

Rockers Robert Hazzard and the Heroes also will perform at the show July 2 at the 13,500-seat Robin Hood Dell East amphitheater, promoter Toni Nash said Wednesday. The event's chairmen are basketball star Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers and tenor saxophonist Grover Washington Jr.

Bill Cosby

Washington and his band, Pieces of a Dream, will be unable to perform because of a previous engagement, Nash said.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — When people think of music in New Jersey, they think of Bruce Springsteen and Frank Sinatra, says Hugh Wolff. He wants them to also think of the New Jersey Symphony.

"I've become increasingly convinced that the New Jersey Symphony is at a critical point in its history," said Wolff, 31, who was named the orchestra's music director Wednesday. "I think the potential is there to leap to national prominence."

The Harvard-educated pianist, composer and conductor will take the podium for the first time as music director on Aug. 28 for an all-Tchaikovsky program featuring violinist Itzhak Perlman.

The New Jersey symphony plays about 140 concerts each year statewide.

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — The gift of a 2,500-year-old vase to Britain's Prince Charles has been defended by a Sicilian political leader who is under fire for handing it over.

Rino Nicolosi, president of the Sicilian regional government, said Wednesday that the vase, dug up at an archaeological site, came from a private collection.

Acting on behalf of the region, Nicolosi gave the vase to the prince last month when he visited Italy with Princess Diana.

Before deciding on the gift, Nicolosi said, officials consulted with historical authorities to determine what he termed "an absence of constraints."

Three Communist members of the Italian Senate have questioned the propriety of giving an art object of historical value to a foreign guest.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It was a case of the right office but the wrong state.

Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr was introduced to the U.S. Jaycees on Wednesday as Alabama's chief executive. Convention delegations from both states stood up and cheered.

The slip of the tongue came from Gram Hopkins of Jackson, Miss., executive vice president of the national Jaycees organization, who introduced officials sharing the dais with President Reagan.

For the record, George C. Wallace is the governor of Alabama.

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Singer Harry Belafonte drove nearly five hours over rough roads to see self-help projects runs by this food-short African country and found no one home.

Belafonte, envoy to Africa from the artists who made the "We Are The World" record in aid of famine relief, visited the drought-stricken Shinyanga region 600 miles north of the capital Tuesday.

However, he said Wednesday before meeting with President Julius Nyerere, no Tanzanian official or even curious villager was present to show him around.

An embarrassed Tanzanian government spokesman attributed the mixup to a breakdown in communications.

LONDON (AP) — Elton John has earned more than $19 million in royalties alone in the 18 years since he signed with music publisher Dick James, a music company lawyer said in the rock star's suit against James.

Elton John

John, 38, claims James exercised undue influence in getting John to sign an unfair contract when he was an unknown 20-year-old. James denies it.

John's lyric writer Bernie Taupin, who also is suing James, made $1,380,858, the court was told Wednesday.

James's lawyer, George Newman, said in the High Court in London that James' companies made $14.5 million on John's records and music.

He said the figures do not include money John made by performing.

CUBS

Cullerton, whose district includes Wrigley Field and who was supporting night games only after the regular season, said the problems would be "multiplied a thousandfold by night games."

Lawrence Gunnels, vice president and legal counsel of Tribune Co., which owns the Cubs, said the temporary lifting of the ban does not go far enough.

"The Cullerton bill doesn't do us any good at all. It would be impossible to play night ball for only post-season games using temporary lights," said Gunnels.

He said the Cubs might not know until the last game of the regular season whether they qualify for the playoffs, and money might be spent for lights unnecessarily.

Chicago Mayor Harold Washington issued a statement urging legislators not to tamper with the city ordinance. He said legislative interference in such local matters would set "a very bad precedent" and "lead to a wave of special interest groups going to Springfield seeking to outflank local ordinances."

The Cubs have been pressured by Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth to install lights or play post-season games in another park, possibly in another city. Ueberroth made a special stop in Springfield last month to meet with legislators.

"The message of Commissioner Ueberroth was very clear — that the only need of major league baseball today is the ability to play night games during post-season play at Wrigley Field," said Democratic House Speaker Michael Madigan of Chicago.

Opponents of the amendment contended lawmakers could drive the Cubs from Wrigley Field, and out of the state, by limiting their ability to play night games.

"Wrigley Field is one of the finest sports facilities in the country today," said Rep. Mike Tate, R-Decatur. "It would be an absolute crime for this General Assembly to force a business out of that stadium."

The Cubs were in third place in the National League East going into Wednesday night's game against the Mets in New York.

The amendment was attached to an unrelated bill concerning environmental permits.

Giants 5, Reds 2

Bob Brenly called his performance a hit-or-miss proposition, and he wasn't kidding.

"I hit two on the nail and missed six completely," said Brenly, who knocked in four runs with two homers and struck out twice. Brenly's three-run homer in the third capped a four-run inning off Cincinnati's Mario Soto, 8-6, and he added a solo shot, his seventh, off Tom Hume in the eighth.

Dave LaPoint, 3-6, who worked the first six innings, and Scott Garrelts combined for a four-hitter.

Phillies 1, Cardinals 0

"It was like an older car with a few dents," the 42-year-old Koosman said, referring to himself and a knee operation he underwent May 8. "We fixed the dents, changed the oil and are ready to go again."

Koosman, looking as sharp as ever in his 601st major league game, pitched six innings before giving way to hard-throwing Don Carman, who got his second save.

Expos 4, Pirates 3

Montreal's Jim Wohlford reached reliever John Candelaria for a pinch single with two outs in the eighth inning to score Vance Law, who had tripled off Jose DeLeon, 2-9, earlier in the inning.

Tim Burke, 3-0, pitched 3 1-3 innings of one-hit relief and Jeff Reardon recorded his major league-leading 20th save with a scoreless ninth.

Astros 7, Braves 3

Craig Reynolds had three hits, including a home run, as Houston pounded four Atlanta pitchers for 14 hits in support of Joe Niekro, who collected his 197th career victory.

Niekro, 4-7, the Astros' all-time winningest pitcher with 139 victories, scattered 12 hits. Frank DiPino worked the final 1 1-3 innings.

Reynolds led Houston's attack with a single, double and home run.

FISCHER

Although he finished with a 4-9 record with four saves and a 4.73 ERA, the A's grew disenchanted with Fischer. "After having a couple of good years with them, I got the impression they were trying to bury me in spring training."

Caught in a numbers game, Fischer was optioned to the Mexico City Tigers in the Mexican League to open the season.

"I spent a few days feeling pretty bad, the water messes up your system. I think the water here (in Midland) tastes worse, down there it doesn't taste bad, it just messes you up.

"I WASN'T getting much work down there so I came back to the states and called the A's. Pretty soon they'd worked out a deal with California. It seemed like a good opportunity, I started out well and they've been going with me ever since."

Fischer's confidence seems to be contagious among the other pitchers on the staff, especially the starters. There is a tendency to be more confident in the late innings knowing that "Fish" is in the bullpen if he is needed.

"He's really come around as the stopper in the late innings, shutting people down," Doug McKenzie, a starter, admits.

"I sense that if a starter knows I'm bringing Fischer in, he feels a little better about it," Maddon says. "At the beginning of the season, there were no clear cut roles. I gave everyone the chance to be the stopper and no one surfaced. Now 'Fish' has, and everyone will work, more or less, to set him up.

"It's his make up, the way he feels within himself and his attitude in general that are his strongest points. And combined with his pitching ability, it makes him tough to beat."

The Angels are betting that with Fischer leading the way from the bullpen, the rest of the Midland club will also be tough to beat.

BLANDA

Blanda's career lasted five more seasons. He scored as many as 100 points in 1973 and threw his last touchdown pass — to Cliff Branch — against the Dallas Cowboys the following year, but when he missed all five field goal attempts from outside the 40-yard line in 1975, Blanda was given his release during the following training camp.

Ironically, Blanda departed the game with a 98 percent mark of success in converting extra points, missing only 16 in 1,959 attempts. Five years later, he was inducted into the NFL's Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

"The problem is when you get older, you can't have an off-year," Blanda said. "They'll say you're too old ... so never have an off-year when you're over 40."

Weaver happy to get out of town

Associated Press

After three straight losses to the New York Yankees, Earl Weaver was happy to get out of town...even if that town was Baltimore.

"I'm glad we're leaving," the Baltimore manager said after Wednesday night's 10-0 loss to the Yankees. "People paid good money the last three days, and watched two of those (10-0 games). Two of the games were no-contests."

During the three-game series, the Yankees pounded Baltimore pitching for 44 hits and outscored the Orioles 26-4. The Yankees collected 14 hits in the final contest, with Ron Hassey belting two solo homers and Dave Winfield a two-run shot among his four hits.

"They hit everything we threw up there," said Weaver, who lost his third straight game after a three-game winning streak last week at the start of his second stint as the Orioles' manager.

Don Mattingly contributed run-scoring sacrifice flies in each of the first two innings as New York took a 6-0 lead off Dennis Martinez, 5-4, and reliever Ken Dixon.

Hassey homered to launch a four-run rally in the second and hit another in the third. Winfield singled in each of the first two innings, the second producing a run, and hit his eighth homer with a man aboard in the sixth.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 1

Jim Clancy scattered seven hits in seven innings and George Bell hit a two-run triple to lead Toronto over Milwaukee, snapping a six-game losing streak for the Blue Jays.

Clancy, 3-4, walked four and struck out five through seven innings before being relieved by Gary Lavelle in the eighth after Ted Simmons led off with a double. Lavelle got out of that inning, but needed last-out help from Bill Caudill, who registered his 10th save.

The Blue Jays reached Pete Vuckovich, 2-5, for all the runs they needed in the third inning, when they scored three times. Bell's triple capped the uprising.

Indians 2, Angels 0

Bert Blyleven pitched a three-hitter and retired the final 24 hitters and George Vukovich hit a two-run single to snap a scoreless tie in the sixth as Cleveland beat California.

Blyleven, 6-6, struck out seven and didn't walk a batter while pitching his eighth complete game and fourth shutout of the season. The shutout was the 50th of his career.

With one out in the Indians' sixth, Jim Slaton, 4-5, walked Mike Hargrove. Brook Jacoby singled Hargrove to second and, after the second out, Tony Bernazard drew the seventh walk issued by Slaton to load the bases. Vukovich then drilled a single to drive in the game's only runs.

Rangers 5, Mariners 4

Wayne Tolleson drove in Larry Parrish with a sixth-inning sacrifice fly to lead Texas over Seattle.

The Rangers entered the sixth inning trailing 4-3 and had not had a hit since the first. But Pete O'Brien broke the streak with a leadoff single, Gary Ward grounded into a fielder's choice and Parrish walked, chasing Frank Wills, 2-1.

Royals 3, Twins 2

Hal McRae hit a solo home run and doubled in another run to power Kansas City over Minnesota.

Tigers 9, Red Sox 3

Lou Whitaker and Kirk Gibson each belted homers and drove in three runs to back the combined eight-hit pitching of Walt Terrell and Aurelio Lopez as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Boston Red Sox.

Lopez used to be the Tigers' stopper until last year when Willie Hernandez came on the scene. Hernandez is out with a stiff neck right now, however, so Lopez has been pressed back into service.

Lopez pitched 1⅓ innings of no-hit ball to close out the contest Wednesday night and earn his fifth save and second in as many nights.

Starting Pay: $9.20/hr.

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Distribution Clerk, Machine Exam at the Midland Post Office. APPLICATIONS ARE BEING ACCEPTED INDEFINITELY BEGINNING JUNE 17TH.

4½-HOUR WORKSHOP
Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

NOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan; men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only the Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.

- You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal exam review.
- You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose in Europe early today in sluggish trading. Gold bullion prices drifted lower.

Dealers said the dollar was moving within a narrow range as investors awaited the U.S. government's so-called flash estimate of the gross national product for the current quarter.

Estimates of GNP, the total retail value of the country's goods and services, can affect interest rates and thus the dollar's value. Speculation that the flash estimate would show reviving economic growth helped pull the dollar up in New York late Wednesday.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday included:

—3.0380 West German marks, up from 3.0190.

—2.54025 Swiss francs, up from 2.5272.

—9.2650 French francs, up from 9.2150.

—3.4245 Dutch guilders, up from 3.4045.

—1,940.50 Italian lire, up from 1,931.25.

—1.36525 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3645.

The British pound fell to $1.2965 from $1.3105.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 247.37 Japanese yen, up from 246.95 yen. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 247.60 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $322 an troy ounce, down from $324.75 late Wednesday.

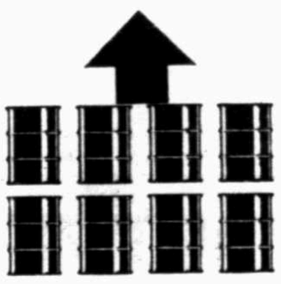

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $322.15, down from $325.50.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold lost $2.66 to close at a bid of $322.66.

Gold was quoted at a bid of $321.75 in New York late Wednesday.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $6.28 an ounce, down from $6.445 late Wednesday.

Cost of living drops second month in a row

By MELLA McEWEN
Business-Oil Writer

The cost of living dropped in Midland for the second month in a row at the rate of 0.1 percent, according to figures released by ClayDesta National Bank today.

The cost of living in Odessa fell 0.8 percent in May, following three consecutive months of increases for Odessa's expenses.

The annualized inflation rate for the two cities is 0.8 percent for Midland and 4.1 percent for Odessa. During the past three months, the cost of goods and services in Midland has declined a very slight 0.04 percent, while goods and services in Odessa have risen 1.0 percent over that same period, said David Jones, president and chief executive officer of the bank.

"Increases measured for food away from home, clothing, utilities, medical, food at home and housing were all offset by the computed May decreases for transportation in Midland," Jones said.

Food away from home costs increased in Midland for the third month in a row. May shows the greatest of those increases measured at 1.4 percent. Meals prepared with fish are primarily responsible for this upward motion, reversing their own two-month trend. Overall, eating out costs 2.5 percent more than it did three months ago.

Clothing prices in Midland increased 1.2 percent in May, after these costs dropped for the two previous months. However, despite this month's trend, these costs have gone down in Midland 3.6 percent over the last three months.

Utility bills rose 0.9 percent by the end of May, continuing April's increase for these costs. "Local gas rates rose 1.9 percent, adding onto April's 9.0 percent rise," stated Jones. Electrical fuel adjustment charges for Midland also increased by 0.7 percent, although water rates remained stable for the fourth month in a row.

Over the last three months, utilities have increased a total of 2.2 percent.

Midland's medical expenses rose 0.6 percent, reversing April's decrease. The increases are primarily due to higher dental care costs, and higher prices for over-the-counter drugs.

Over the past three months, medical expenses here increased 0.7 percent

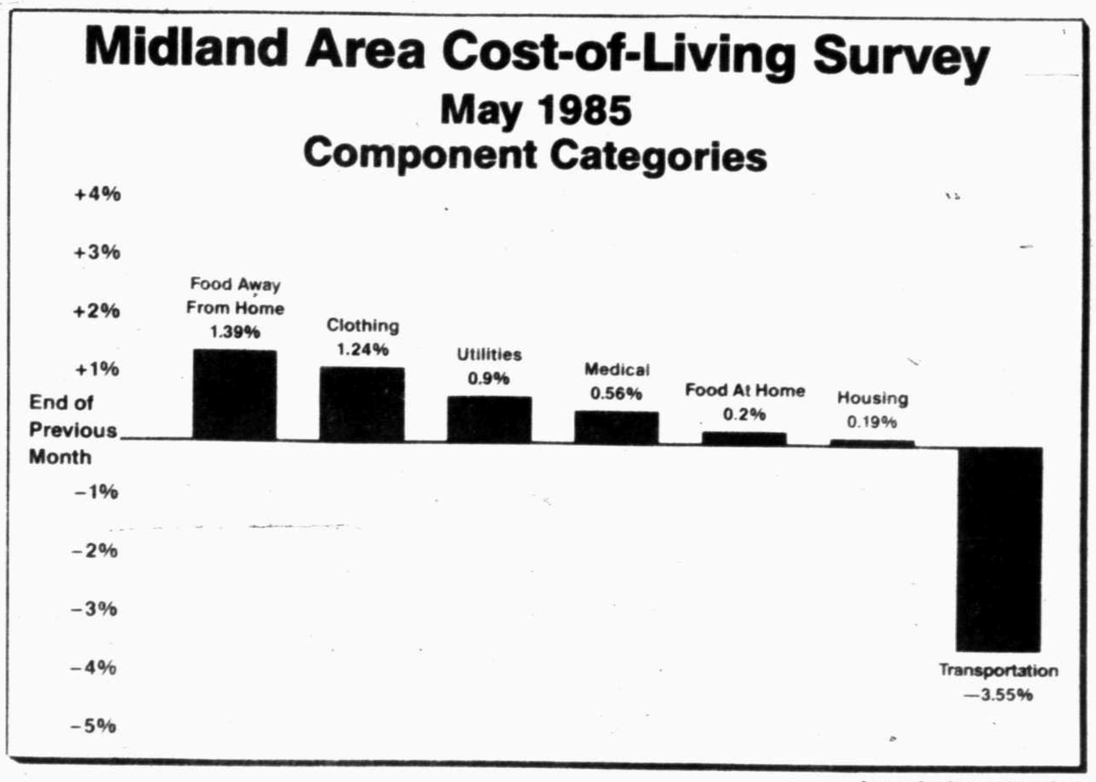

Food at home costs for Midland rose 0.2 percent. Jones said "Decreases measured in Midland for produce and meat prices were offset by increases for shelf items and alcohol. This is a complete reversal of Midland's April trends."

Over the past three months, Midland food prices have increased at a computed rate of 1.2 percent.

Housing expenses for Midland also increased, caused by slightly higher rents in the Midland area. This increase was calculated at 0.2 percent for May. This is the second month that an increase has been shown for this category.

Over the last three months, Midland housing expenses have increased 0.8 percent.

Transportation costs decreased for the second consecutive month, at a rate of 3.6 percent for May. This decrease is due primarily to a second month of lower automobile maintenance costs. This was offset by a second month of higher gasoline costs for Midland.

GNP reports 3 percent growth while personal income declines

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. economy, showing signs of picking up steam from a nearly flat first quarter, is growing at a 3.1 percent annual rate, the government estimated today.

In issuing its so-called flash estimate for the gross national product, the government's broadest economic measure, the Commerce Department revised first quarter GNP downward from 0.7 percent to 0.3 percent.

Meanwhile in other reports, personal income decreased slightly while spending rose and mortgages could hold steady or drop over the next few months.

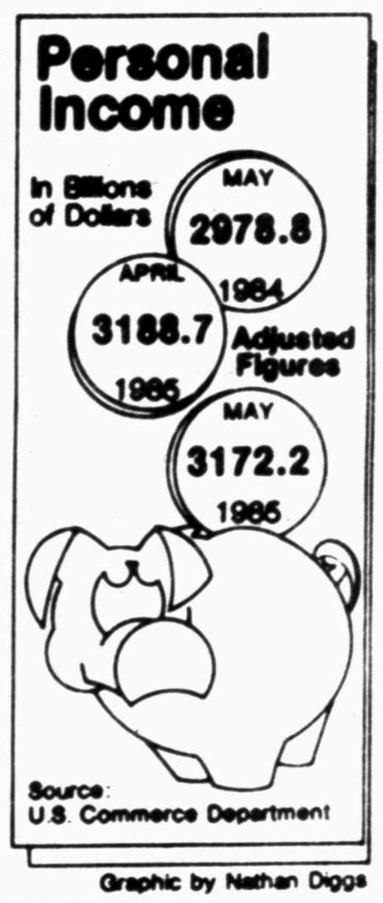

"Mortgage interest rates at worst will stay flat and possibly continue to decline for at least several months," Mark J. Riedy, president of the Federal National Mortgage Association, said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Standard & Poor's Corp., a New York-based business information company, said it expects consumer price inflation to hold steady at last year's rate of 4 percent and may even slow through most of next year.

Separately, an economist for the Claremont Economics Institute of Claremont, Calif., said he expects inflation may move even lower for the rest of the year as the economy revives.

Michael Bazdarich, vice president for Claremont's forecasting and advisory services, said he also expects the long-term trend in interest rates to be lower, while rates may rise slightly later this year.

Meanwhile, the government said that Americans' personal income declined 0.5 percent in May, while personal consumption spending advanced 0.7 percent.

Graphic by Nathan Diggs

The Commerce Department said income fell $16.5 billion to an adjusted $3.172 trillion annual rate after rising a revised 0.7 percent in April.

A one-time retroactive wage payment to postal employees and unusually large subsidies to farmers contributed to the April increase, which was revised upward from 0.6 percent, mostly because of later data on farm payments.

On the home loan rate issue, Riedy said that mortgage rates, averaging 12 percent, may drop to 11.5 percent before increasing slightly — but not above 12 percent — by year's end.

The "tremendous drop" in rates for fixed-rate 30-year mortgages from last July's level of 14.5 percent has made adjustable-rate mortgages less popular with home buyers, Riedy said.

Adjustable-rate mortgages offer buyers a lower initial rate, but if interest rates go up, monthly payments increase.

In another report, the Labor Department said that consumer prices rose a moderate 0.2 percent in May, held down by a second straight drop in food prices and an easing in recent gasoline price hikes. For the first five months of the year, prices were rising at a 3.9 percent annual rate, virtually matching the 4 percent gain for all of 1984.

Coupled with the consumer price report, the GNP calculation suggests the possibility of renewed economic growth without a reigniting of inflation.

The first quarter GNP growth rate was the smallest since a 0.9 percent decline in the third quarter of 1982, before the current recovery got underway.

House bill under way to abolish Synfuels Corp.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five years after Congress gave the Synthetic Fuels Corp. billions of dollars to develop new energy sources, a move is under way to abolish the agency and put its projects under the Energy Department.

The fossil fuels subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee on Wednesday voted without dissent to send to the parent committee a bill that would kill the controversial Synfuels Corp. and reduce money to be devoted to synthetic fuel plants from the $6.2 billion the corporation has left to a maximum of $500 million.

In addition, the plants no longer would be aimed at producing for the market, but simply would demonstrate the commerical feasibility of synthetic fuels.

The $6.2 billion would revert to the Treasury, though the corporation still could commit some of that before final congressional action.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla, one of the sponsors of the abolition bill, told the subcommittee, "It is time to cut our losses and put an end to what I believe is the most wasteful and unproductive agency in the federal government."

It was "not a vote on whether or not we will have synthetic fuels," but rather "a vote on the most efficient, productive and least costly manner" for the government to help private industry develop the necessary technologies, Synar said.

The corporation was given $14.9 billion in 1980 as part of a $20 billion effort to produce massive amounts of liquid fuels from unconventional sources.

Congress at the time was acting under the pressure of gasoline shortages triggered by the cutoff of crude oil shipments from Iran by that country's revolution in 1979.

But critics charged the corporation was laced with cronyism, a slow pace of work and excessive salaries, and was completely excessive in scale in view of the persistent oil glut and falling prices that developed after 1981.

Previous abolition efforts have always failed, but last year Congress took back more than $6 billion from the corporation in two bites.

The bill would instruct the energy secretary to wind up the corporation's business in 90 days.

Future aid to private projects would be limited to 60 percent of the cost, any price supports for production could not exceed 25 percent of the market price and Congress would get 90 days to veto any projects above $20 million.

The vice chairman of the corporation, former Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., who opposed the corporation as a House member, picked up that point at a news conference before the vote.

"I know pork-barrel politics would not enter into decisions on Capitol Hill, but there are skeptics," he quipped. "We think Congress was right with respect to this structure back in 1980 and we don't think it should be changed."

Official says cooperation needed to promote industry

Hearst Austin Bureau

Austin — More cooperation between the private and public sector, and a structure to promote that cooperation, would help Texas with its industrial development efforts, the former executive director of the Texas Economic Development Commission says.

Harden Wiedemann stepped down June 15 as TEDC director, but says he'll continue his efforts for economic development as a volunteer-including an attempt to raise up to $15 million for a comprehensive marketing and advertising campaign on behalf of Texas through the end of the decade.

Wiedemann took over the TEDC post in September, 1984, previously serving as director of the Governor's Office of Economic Development.

"We've made some major headway at the agency in terms of getting the public sector side of economic development in Texas on a more competitive basis," Wiedemann says.

He notes TEDC restructured operations last year to reflect Texas' "six different economic regions," and is sharing data "more closely" with the Comptroller's Office.

"We have a number of new programs," he notes, but says, that "one thing missing right now" is a "very strong business coalition that supports the state in its recruitment efforts."

That occurred, on an ad hoc basis, with the successful attempt ot attract MCC, the computer "think tank" to Texas. But Wiedemann says, "We want to institutionalize that public-private partnership."

TEDC came out "very well" overall in the recent legislative session, being one of the very few agencies that wasn't cut–and in fact receiving some small increases in programs, according to Wiedemann.

The agency also has some new responsibilities, he notes, including providing staff for the Texas World Trade Council established by legislation by Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas.

TEDC also will be involved with enterprise zone designation at the state level and with a new technology training board. That new board, Wiedemann explains, is to design and implement "high-tech training programs for incoming high-tech businesses."

TEDC also received the transfer of the Texas Film Commission from the Governor's office, and will have responsibility for allocating authority to issue industrial revenue bonds under the cap imposed by Federal regulations.

That cap--$150 per person per year--won't have any immediate effect in Texas, Wiedemann says, because "we won't bump the cap soon...Eventually, it is going to impact us. We won't be allowed to issue all of the industrial revenue bonds we would like to."

TEDC also was given authority to retain some fees ($1,500 per issue) on bonds, giving the agency about one-half million dollars annually to administer the program.

Wiedemann says he would like to see some changes in State law and policy to help bring more industry to Texas. "We are at a competitive disadvantage in that we can't exempt new plants and equipment from the sales tax," he says, "whereas other states provide a total exemption." In a major new plant he feels the sales tax can be a significant amount.

"And in high-tech businesses," Wiedemann comments, "equipment becomes rapidly obsolete...and turnover is high."

Campbell's denies farm union's charge

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Campbell Soup Co. had no ulterior motives in revealing a secret agreement designed to end a 6-year-old boycott by a farm workers' union, a company spokesman said.

The agreement calls for representatives of growers for Campbell and the Farm Labor Organizing Committee to form a commission by July 1 to set up rules for elections that could make FLOC the collective bargaining agent for some farm workers in Ohio and Michigan.

After Campbell confirmed existence of the agreement, signed May 13 after mediation by the National Council of Churches, FLOC President Baldemar Velasquez said Campbell had broken its word by announcing the agreement.

He said Campbell was trying to undermine boycott support announced this week by bishops of Ohio's Roman Catholic dioceses.

"We deny it," Campbell spokesman Scott Rombach said. The company discussed the agreement only after questioned about it by reporters, he said.

Under the agreement, Campbell will encourage growers to send representatives to a commission headed by John T. Dunlop, a former U.S. secretary of labor and Harvard University professor.

Campbell will not require growers to take part or require them to let FLOC hold union authorization elections on their farms.

Dunlop is to choose commission members, four each representing the growers and FLOC. FLOC says it represents 6,000 to 7,000 farm workers, many of them migrants who work in Ohio and Michigan.

The boycott began in 1979 after Campbell, based in Camden, N.J., said it would not bargain with farm workers because it did not directly employ them.

Campbell repeatedly has said the boycott did not affect sales.

Businessmen plan trip to estabish Mexican contacts

From Staff Reports

Twenty local businesspersons will visit Chihuahua, Mexico, July 16-19 to expand both the American and Mexican markets and develop business contacts between the city and the Permian Basin.

Robert Chapa, chairman of the trip, said there is still room for several more travelers. He said he is looking for businesspersons whose work is compatible with businesses in Chihuahua.

The cost of the trip, sponsored by the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, is expected to be about $100 per person. This covers the cost of transportation to the Mexican border. The Mexican government is expected to pick up the costs while in Mexico.

For more information, phone Jill Berg at the Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Two of the nation's leading makers of minicomputers, the Data General Corp. and the Hewlett-Packard Co., became the latest victims of the prolonged computer slump this week, saying that slow sales were forcing them into major cutbacks.

In Westboro, Mass., Data General said that it would lay off 1,300 employees indefinitely and shut down its U.S. manufacturing plants for five days next month. The company also predicted an operating loss for its third fiscal quarter, ending June 29, although it did not estimate its magnitude.

Hours later in Palo Alto, Calif., Hewlett-Packard said it would close all of its American business facilities, except sales and service offices, for the first week of July, affecting about 45,000 employees.

The moves marked the latest signs of a deepening downturn in the computer industry that no one predicted and no one can fully explain. Several other makers of minicomputers — midsized systems selling from $100,000 to $1 million — have also announced layoffs and predicted losses. Last week, in forecasting lower earnings for the year, the International Business Machines Corp. said its minicomputer business was the hardest-hit segment of its product line.

IBM's disclosure that it no longer expected "solid growth" in 1985 sent technology stocks into a tailspin late last week. Monday's announcements of layoffs and plant closings sent them down further, although some stocks recovered a bit at the end of the trading session.

Data General closed down 50 cents, to $32.75, and Hewlett-Packard declined $1.25, to $32. IBM lost another point, to $120.125, while Data General's neighbor on Boston's Route 128, the Digital Equipment Corp., fell $1.625, to $91.375.

"It's really very simple: Business is lousy," Edson D. de Castro, Data General's president, said in a telephone interview Monday. "Demand has been deteriorating since January, and we still have seen nothing to indicate it would turn around." He added that sales in Europe — which so far have been the one bright spot for major computer makers — are "also beginning to wind down."

Analysts viewed Monday's announcements as a further indication that an industry recovery is unlikely this year. Computer industry executives have also come around to that point of view, after earlier hopes of a recovery in the second half.

Moreover, officials at both Data General and Hewlett-Packard said Monday that there was growing evidence that the downturn was beginning to feed on itself.

"A number of our competitors are also big customers," said Robert Wayman, vice president and chief financial officer of Hewlett-Packard, which makes both minicomputers and instruments used in high-technology manufacturing. "IBM is a big customer, so is Apple," he said, indicating that sales to those companies were beginning to slow as cost-cutting measures there took effect.

Data General said that the layoffs, affecting about 7 percent of the company, would cut across its executive, managerial and manufacturing work force. The five-day plant closing, set for the week of July 8 to 12.

PBGC offers oil-related classes

The Permian Basin Graduate Center is offering three oil-related courses to the public.

A "Well Control Refresher" course, designed as a one-day review for students who have completed an approved Well Control School, will be held on June 24, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Instructor for the course will be Larry Chapman from the University of Southwestern Louisiana Petroleum Training Services. A $190 fee will be charged.

"Well Control School" will be held June 25-27 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The course will cover the most widely used methods and technology of well control. Larry Chapman will also instruct this course and the fee is $250.

A course entitled "Part I: Components of Geographical Data", designed for people breaking into the geological phase of the oil industry who require a better understanding of geological data, will be offered June 25-26, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The course will also cover the responsibility of the geological assistant or secretary. Brenda Machost Carpenter, President of the Petroleum Technicians, Inc. will be instructing the course. The fee is $195.

All of the courses will be held at the PBGC Building at 105 W. Illinois in Midland. Interested persons may call 683-2832 for registration or further information.

GNP

The second quarter estimate, which will be revised at least three times as later data become available, affirms analysts' predictions that the economy is picking up in the second quarter.

The 3.1 percent rate was better than most projections and holds out hope that the economy could yet exceed a 3 percent growth rate for the year.

The three major private forecasting firms have revised their growth predictions to levels below 3 percent based on the first quarter weakness.

The Reagan administration's official forecast is still for a 3.9 percent growth rate for all of 1985, although some Cabinet officers have said informally it may not be that high.

A recent slide in interest rates, some of it engineered by the Federal Reserve Board, has raised expectations of stronger growth in the second half of the year.

Before today's GNP report, there had been widespread speculation that the Fed would ease credit even further.

The initial strong second-quarter figure, however, is likely to temper that expectation.

The economy has grown 2.3 percent over the last 12 months compared to 7.5 percent growth for the comparable 12 months of 1983-84.

Weakness within the manufacturing sector, which continues to suffer from foreign competition, has been blamed for much of the lackluster GNP performance in recent months. Today's report held out hope that may be easing.

While net exports fell sharply in the first quarter, today's report said they are expected to decrease only moderately in the second.

Consumer spending, credited with keeping the U.S. economy going, is expected to increase 'substantially"in the second quarter, today's report said.

The implicit price deflator component of the GNP report, a key factor in determining the final growth rate, is expected to increase 3.2 percent in the second quarter compared to a 5.4 percent increase in the first quarter.

In providing the figure, the Commerce Department cautions that it is not an accurate measure of actual price changes because it measures changes in composition of consumption as well as price changes.

In a companion report, the Commerce Department said after-tax corporate profits fell 2.8 percent in the first quarter.

New financial planners association forms

A recent meeting of the International Association of Financial Planners resulted in the forming of a new chapter for the Permian Basin.

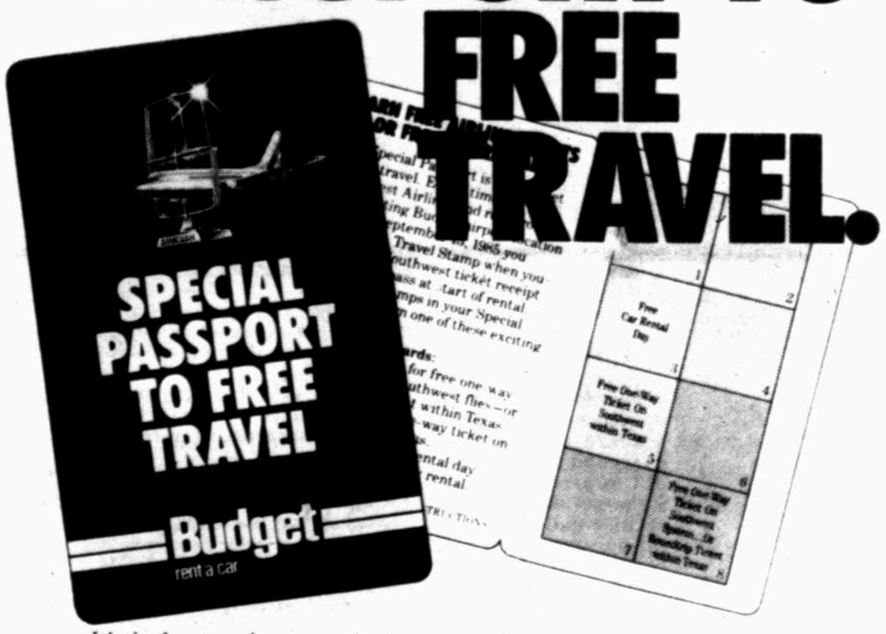

Prior to the addition of the new chapter, area members belonged to the West Texas Chapter in Lubbock, according to group spokesperson Connie Hobbs.

Hobbs indicated that the membership felt that a base of 300 financial professionals in the area warranted a local chapter.

The Association is committed to providing excellence and high ethical standards to the client.

The new Permian Basin chapter will meet on the last Thursday of each month at alternating sites in Midland and Odessa. For more information, contact Viola Melton at 367-3700 or Mike Tandy at 685-5000.

Horton guilty in attempted capital murder

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 244th District Court jury this afternoon was expected to begin deliberations on the punishment of a 17-year-old former Permian High School student who was convicted of attempted capital murder Wednesday.

The jury of eight women and four men heard final arguments by prosecution and defense attorneys, began deliberations about 3 p.m. and returned about 30 minutes later with a guilty verdict for Robert Earl Horton in connection with the Nov. 2, 1984, sexual assault, beating and stabbing of the wife of former Odessa Police Chief Jack Tomlin.

The 60-year-old victim, Marion L. Tomlin, was the final prosecution witness before the prosecution rested its case Wednesday morning. Mrs. Tomlin described how Horton, whom she had identified, had come to the door of her 1634 Everglade home twice. The first time, she said, he asked to use her phone so he could call his mother to get a ride home. The number he gave her, she testified, was a wrong number and he left, but later returned and forced his way into her home.

District Attorney Eric Augesen, in his final argument, told jurors Horton twice raped Mrs. Tomlin, then demanded money. When he found she had no money, Augesen said, Horton became angry and belligerent, beat her over the head with an oak chair, shattering it, and then stabbed her in the back with a pair of scissors he had taken away from her. Augesen also claimed that while Mrs. Tomlin was lying on the floor, Horton thought she was dead, and he kicked her several times.

Describing Mrs. Tomlin as "very tough lady," Augesen recalled how she had fought with her assailant. Mrs. Tomlin had testified she had tried to gouge her attacker's eyes out, tried to bite him, then grabbed a pair of scissors, which he took away from her.

One of Horton's court-appointed attorneys, Richard Alvarado, responding to a statement made by Assistant District Attorney Preston Stevens in his closing argument, said, it was not his intent "to raise a smokescreen," only to ask jurors to follow the law. He pointed out that while Horton admitted when he took the witness stand that he was under the influence of drugs and did not remember the attack, that is not considered a mitigating circumstance under Texas law.

Alvarado noted Mrs. Tomlin did not say Horton stabbed her during the course of the sexual assault, nor did she say he cut her during that time.

"Intent is very important," Alvarado said, referring to the wording of the indictment against Horton. "He did not become angered or belligerent until he learned Mrs. Tomlin had no money." Alvarado argued Horton did not enter the Tomlin home with the intention of killing Mrs. Tomlin.

The Odessa attorney pointed out that in initially qualifying jurors, Augesen had told them Mrs. Tomlin had been stabbed "multiple times," while the Medical Center Hospital doctor who treated her testified she had been stabbed only once.

Alvarado urged jurors to find Horton not guilty because facts, as presented by the prosecution during the course of the trial, raised "reasonable doubt."

New vaccine for spinal meningitis offered in Midland

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A new vaccine found to be successful in preventing spinal meningitis is now being offered by area physicians, according to pediatrician Dr. Prem Gupta.

"We got the vaccine June 1 and have vaccinated about 15 children so far," said Gupta.

The vaccine, Haemophilius b Polysaccharide (HiB), is manufactured by Praxis Biologies who has researched the product for "five to six years" and is distributed by Mead Johnson Inc.

"The vaccine was released across the country about three to four weeks ago and was tested on animals and humans and was found to be safe," said Gupta. "So far there have been no serious side effects or deaths reported."

Gupta said that although the HiB virus has been identified for some time and several other vaccines are being produced, none have approached the HiB vaccine for purity and effectiveness.

"The vaccine may cause redness or swelling at the injection point and a 24-hour fever, but this effects less than 50 percent of the population," he said.

Gupta is recommending that all children ages two to six years get the vaccine.

"Children in large group situations such as day care centers or large families are particularly susceptible to the disease and should get the vaccine at 18 months," he said. For maximum benefit, the vaccine must be given between 18 months and six years of age, he added.

"It is very uncommon that a child over six years of age would get spinal meningitis."

The inoculation, which costs the patient "anywhere from $16 to 25" is only required once during a lifetime.

According to Gupta, the HiB virus can cause several other afflictions including epiglotittis, joint infections and pneumonia. But the killer remains spinal meningitis.

"It's as common today as polio was in the 1930s," he said.

Spinal menigitis, according to Gupta, "is a swelling of the coverings of the brain." The disease often kills it's victims, said a report from the vaccine manufacturer and may occur in "about one in 200 children."

The HiB vaccine has been proven to be 90 percent effective in preventing HiB-related diseases, said the report.

While the vaccine is being used by Midland physicians, the city health department does not have it.

"We don't have the vaccine yet," said Erin Wall of the Midland Health Department. "The state health department supplies all our vaccines and we haven't heard anything from them yet."

Gupta speculates that this is probably because the vaccine has not yet been approved by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"As soon as it gets approved by the CDC, it will probably be mandatory by state health agencies," said Gupta. "Right now they are probably waiting to see the results in the schools and see if there are any problems."

Gupta predicts that "in about a year" the THD will offer the vaccine.

Armed robbery suspect caught by FBI in Wyoming

By FRANK TROMBLEY

ODESSA — The second of three suspects in the June 6 armed robbery of Odessa's InterFirstBank drive-in/walkup facility at East 7th Street and North Jackson has been arrested at a Cheyenne, Wyo., motel, FBI officials announced here late Wednesday afternoon.

Ron Hoverson, special agent in charge, said 38-year-old Tyler Davis Bingham, identified earlier this month as the "triggerman" in the robbery, was located and arrested about 2 p.m. Wednesday by Cheyenne police and FBI agents.

Hoverson said Bingham was to have been taken before a U.S. magistrate in Wyoming late Wednesday for arraignment on bank robbery charges and to have bond set. The El Paso-based Hoverson said Bingham would be returned to Midland as soon as possible. Extradition proceedings would not be necessary, he added.

Still sought in connection with the robbery, during which a reported $12,000 was taken, is 36-year-old Antonio Martinez Rivera, described as a Hispanic male, about 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighing about 120 pounds.

Known by the nickname of "Fish," Rivera is said to have a scroll tattoo on the back of his right hand and the letter "A" tattooed in the web of his left hand.

Hoverson asked that anyone having information as to the whereabouts of Rivera contact either the FBI office in Midland or the Odessa police "crimes against persons" section.

The robbery occurred shortly after noon, June 6, when a man carrying what was described as a nickled-plated revolver approached the teller at the walk-up window and demanded money. The teller complied and the man fled on foot in a southeasterly direction with the money she gave him.

A 39-year-old Odessa man, Margarito Camacho, arrested June 7, has remained in the Midland City Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond on charges of violating federal bank robbery statutes.

Funds established to help children pay medical bills

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

A Fort Stockton boy and a Midland girl have two things in common.

They are both three years old. And they both require life-saving surgery for which they have no funds.

The two, Luis Levario and Andrea Huffman, have yet another common link in the chain of events leading to their present situation. They both have caring friends and relatives who have set up trust funds to help pay for the staggering medical costs that await them.

One especially concerned relative of Andrea's is her grandmother, Ann Huffman of Midland.

"Andrea was born with a heart murmur and we just found out two weeks ago that she would need surgery," said Ms. Huffman. "She has a hole in her heart but the doctors think they can fix it."

According to Ms. Huffman, the surgery will cost "around $20,000."

Ms. Huffman's daughter and husband have some insurance, but it won't be enough to cover the expense, she said.

Her response has been to set up a trust fund at a Midland bank and set up donation cannisters throughout the city. Her fund raising efforts, however, started at Ritz Theater Corporation, where she works.

"Everyone in the company knows Andrea," she said. "We set up cannisters at the theaters and several other places. We've had a real favorable response."

Donation sites include Castle Gap Jewelry, Diccicio's Gulf, Desert Inn, Beer Barn Liquors and Smitty's Barber Shop.

Further fund raising efforts have resulted in the opening this week of a trust fund account at Texas American Bank. Interested donors may contact Mary Rawls at the bank.

'Progress' hasn't always lived up to its name

Despite everything, I'm not totally sold on progress. For one thing, I'm not sure exactly what progress is, outside of change that's not "backward." A switch to the old is backstepping and regression, say the purveyors of progress. And a change to something new that has certain advantages, conveniences and unforeseen (or undisclosed) disadvantages is progress.

Progress just within my extended 39 years has been:

— Chunking cumbersome mechanical calculators for electronic mini-wizards.

— Prolonging human life with herbs, drugs, machines and the courts.

— Replacing propeller-driven airplanes with jets.

— Uprooting gas, electric, coal and wood stoves and replacing them with microwave ovens.

— Talking in terms of liters instead of horsepower.

— Using ballpoint pens instead of fountain pens and pencils.

— Getting divorced without being shunned by the clergy, most of the righteous, and the community.

— Replacings sins with indiscretions and mis-judgments.

— Worrying more about today than the eternal afterlife.

— Hijacking airliners instead of kidnapping a baron's heir.

— Going to movies in a dismal, depressing cracker box instead of a grand old theater such as the Yucca.

— Getting buried in a cemetery without tombstones.

— Substituting cyanide for the unwieldy electric chair, the showy gallows and noose, and the report of the rifle.

— Replacing the hammer and clatter of typewriters with the clicks and hums of "word processors" and plastic terminals.

— Phasing out steam locomotives and all of their romance, wasted energy and soot and replacing them with diesel-electric engines.

— Making the incendiary bomb old-fashioned and obsolete by introducing the atomic bomb.

— Replacing the super destructive powers of the atomic bomb with the mega destructive powers of the hydrogen bomb.

— The ability to destroy destruction.

— Hopping around the moon, collecting moon rocks, photographing Mars and Venus and other heavenly bodies.

— Littering the space about the Earth just as we've littered and polluted the Earth's rivers, highways, cities, oceans and, indirectly, the Arctic and Antarctic.

— Trying to save the nation's symbol, the bald eagle, which is threatened by the progress of free enterprise.

— Getting our bodies of water and envelope of air polluted by industrial might.

— Allowing radio, television and all the video contraptions to interfere with reading, playing, mischievous and other intellectual pursuits.

— Taking life too downright seriously.

— Et cetera.

Now, no one is particularly interested in converting me to a disciple of progress. It would serve no real purpose, as I haven't the money nor the inclination to buy into computer chips and space-age gimmicks. I'll fling myself headlong into backward-ness, since that's more difficult and less practical than marching onward.

You see, I can't see that so-called progress is making any favorable impact on humanity. About all it's doing is causing a re-structure of the economy and expediting the exploitation of our earthly and heavenly resources. That's probably neither good nor bad but is just changing the form of things.

Jane Leslie

Clean Midland Director Jane Leslie chosen for state media advisory board

From Staff Reports

Jane Leslie, executive director of Clean Midland, Inc., has been appointed to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation Media Advisory Board. The advisory board will be responsible for the selection of the advertising agency for Keep Texas Beautiful's anti-litter media and public awareness campaign.

The objective of the $2 million campaign is to reduce litter along state highway rights-of-way. Currently, the highway department spends some $20 million each year picking up litter along state highway rights-of-way. The cost is increasing by 17 percent to 20 percent annually.

This media and public awareness campaign is part of a four-pronged, sustained litter reduction program. The other elements of the program, which will be financed by an additional $2 million, include a statewide selected traffic enforcement program (STEP) which will apply additional enforcement efforts against litter violators at specifically identified, highly littered locations. Secondly, it will provide funding support for Keep Texas Beautiful, which recently affiliated with Keep America Beautiful, Inc. (KAB) to form a statewide umbrella organization over all accredited KAB community litter programs in the state.

Thirdly, will be funding of a statewide community incentive program where landscape funds will be awarded to winning cities in the Governor's Community Achievement Awards Program. Cities are judged on their achievements in preventing and reducing litter in their communities.

Midlanders take medals in Firefighter Olympics

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Unlike real Olympics contenders, Midland's entrants get paid.

To fight fires.

Eleven firefighters from the Midland Fire Department recently returned from the Third Annual Firefighter Olympics, held in San Antonio.

"We had eleven medalists this year," beamed Eddie Klatt, battalion chief and table tennis champion reknown.

Klatt brags about his teammates with the pride of a coach.

"Dave Feliz is our resident athlete," he said. "He won two gold medals — one for the 10,000 meter run and another for the 800 meter run."

"We all get kind of sick when Dave starts working out near us," he said with a grin.

Felice, who won gold medals in the same events last year, is a past state champion in the mile for Pennsylvania and ran in the Boston Marathon in 1983.

"I'll be running in it again next year," he said.

Klatt also brags about 50-ish Wayne Kerley.

"We all got kind of tickled about Wayne getting a silver in the 100 meter run in the Grandmaster division."

The Olympics are divided into several division according to age groups. Those 29 years of age or younger compete in the Open category. Seniors (ages 30-34), Masters (ages 40-49) and Grandmasters (50 plus) are the other three categories.

The Midland group scored well, according to Klatt — two gold, three silver and six bronze medals.

Medal winners include: Bowling — Buster Davidson (bronze), Floyd Danley (bronze), Lee Pittman (bronze); Table Tennis — Charlie Jezek (silver); Doubles: Eddie Klatt (bronze), Elva Cargile (bronze); Track and Field — Robert O'Donnell (bronze, high jump); Reginald Rankin (silver, long jump); Dave Felice (gold, 10K meter and 800 meter) and Wayne Kerley (silver, 100 meter).

Klatt stated that this year's participation has been successful.

"There's been more and more men getting involved because of our physical fitness program," he said. "We feel that the better physically fit we are, the better job we can do."

Klatt estimated that more than 800 firefighters participated in the Olympics this years.

He also has hopes that the event will be held in Midland sometime in the future.

"The Olympics will be held in Fort Worth next year, but we're hoping that maybe in 1988 we can get them here."

Cash-stuffed envelopes reported stolen

From Staff Reports

Two cash-stuffed envelopes with a total of $8,000 were taken in two separate burglaries reported Wednesday to law-enforcement agencies.

A white envelope containing $5,500 in currency was reported stolen from a file cabinet sometime between June 11 and Tuesday by Cynthia Atyia of West Bay Exploration, 3000 N. Garfield, according to police reports.

In a separate burglary, Oscar M. Villin told Sheriff's deputies an envelope containing $2,500 was taken from his mobile home in an alley between county roads 1123 and 1123½. The burglary occurred sometime between noon and 5 p.m. Wednesday, reports said. Also taken was $17 in loose change.

In other reports, Charlotte Clemons, County Road 1180, reported the theft of three tires from her 1979 Dodge pickup over Tuesday night. The tires were worth a total of $360, reports said.

Jim Adams, 3609 Caldera, reported the burglary of a $249 cassette-stereo from his 1977 Olds Cutlass sometime between 1 a.m. and 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Amber Holt reporter the theft of a $100 gold necklace, a $70 ring and other items worth a total of $405 from3207 W. Wadley, sometime between 10 a.m. and noon Wednesday, reports said.

Linda Atlee reported the theft of a $300 wedding ring from the hand of her mother, Magee Smith, after Ms. Smith died May 10 in Midland Memorial Hospital. The ring was taken before the funeral home arrived to pick up the body, Ms. Atlee told police.

A $250 radar detector was reported taken from a 1982 Ford van belonging to Lacy & Byrd Inc. The van had been parked at 3313 Dentcrest, reports said.

Shirley Torrans, 3417 N. Midland, reported the loss of two $1,000 rings and other items worth a total of $2,900 from her purse, which was stolen June 13 from the pool area of her apartment complex while she was swimming.

A $150 gas range, a $150 refrigerator and a $50 air-contitioning unit were reported taken from a unit at the Crestwood Apartments, 601 Watson, by a tenant who moved out sometime in June. The suspect's new address is known, and the investigation continues, reports said.

Roger Moore Contracting reported the loss of a $100 ceiling fan and a $589 range with griddle and burners from a construction site near County Road 130 and FM 715. The burglary occurred on June 13, reports said.

Abell-Hanger endows chair

From Staff Reports

The Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland has provided $500,000 toward establishing an academic chair in nautical archaeology at Texas A&M University, the world's foremost center for such studies.

The gift will establish the George T. and Gladys H. Abell chair in nautical archaeology. The holder of the academic position will be named at a later time. The award is one of the largest ever made by the Abell-Hanger Foundation, which has supported numerous projects including the founding of the Midland Petroleum Museum and Hall of Fame.

Texas A&M became the leading institution for the study of nautical archaeology in 1976 when the Institute of Nautical Archaeology, a nonprofit scientific group, became affiliated with the university. Through the INA network, Texas A&M has been able to send researchers and graduate students around the world to map, record, excavate and study shipwrecks and other nautical sites such as bays and ports.

"As a historian, I understand the impact on mankind of the early seafaring explorers and traders and how they later encouraged the search for the new world of the Americans," said Texas A&M President Frank E. Vandiver. "We are extremely grateful to the Abell-Hanger Foundation for this gift which will allow us to study in more detail the story and life of those who took the ships."

"A generous gift such as this which will help establish an academic chair specifically for nautical archaeology is almost a once in a life time opportunity and we are very excited at the prospect," said Texas A&M professor George Bass, often referred to as the father of nautical archaeology.

Man drowns in Odessa pool

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An 18-year-old man, pulled from a pond in Westview Park in far west Odessa Wednesday afternoon, was pronounced dead nearly two hours later at Medical Center Hospital.

According to Ector County Sheriff's Captain Gene Kloss, Charles Hazelwood, 10900 W. University, was swimming in the Westview pond behind Murray Fly Elementary School when he apparently went underwater. Hazelwood, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dean Hazelwood, was transported to Medical Center Hospital where emergency-room personnel tried unsuccessfully to revive him. He was pronounced dead at 5:25 p.m. Peace Justice Manuel Valles ordered an autopsy.

Kloss said the pond at Westview Park, which is fenced and normally locked, is a posted non-swimming area.

Twelve-year-old hit by van while riding bicycle

From Staff Reports

A 12-year-old Midland boy was treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital Wednesday after being struck by a van while riding his bicycle, according to police reports.

Jeffrey Hinojos, 208 W. Jax, was riding north on Big Spring about 4 p.m. when he was struck at the intersection of Big Spring and Parker by a 1975 Dodge van driven by Angelia Rodriquez Yharte, 405 W. Parker, according to reports.

In other reports, Rebecca Gill, 5101 N. A, was treated for smoke inhalation and released after a couch caught fire in her apartment, the Fire Department said.

The fire was apparently started by a cigarette, fire reports said. There was damage to the couch and smoke damage to the apartment.

The 13-year-old Midland boy injured Tuesday when he fell out of the back of a pickup remained in critical condition this morning, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Michael Corbin, 3208 Thomas, received head injuries when the wind blew him out of a pickup driven by his uncle, Donald Cole, with whom the boy was staying. The accident occurred in the 3900 block of Holiday Hill Road. The boy was holding a piece of plywood-like panelling when the gust of wind struck, reports said.

John Levi Squyres, the 5-year-old Midland boy injured Monday night in a bicycle-and-car accident at Midland and Leddy, was listed in fair condition this morning, the spokeswoman said. He had been struck by a 1973 Chevy pickup driven by Lindell Scott Carson, 312 Willowood, reports said.

FUNDRAISERS

According to Ms. Huffman, Andrea, the daughter of Russell "Buddy" and Diane Wayne, will be undergoing open heart surgery in the second week of August at Fort Worth Children's Hospital.

Fund raising efforts are also under way for Luis, who has suffered from a liver disease since birth. The son of a welfare mother and victim of Biliary Atresia, Luis is currently on a donor's list to receive a new liver at Dallas' Children's Medical Center.

The cost is estimated at more than $100,000.

Past fund raising drives in Fort Stockton have raised more than $58,000, but according to Cynthia Baiza, a community service aide for the Permian Basin Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center in Fort Stockton, the town's residents have approached the "burn-out" stage in donating to the cause.

Ms. Baiza responded by writing a letter to a Johnny Urias, a friend who runs a Midland Feedstore.

Urias agreed to try and help raise funds in Midland by incorporating the cause with his second annual "Customer Appreciation Bar-B-Que".

"We thought it would be a good way to raise some money to help Luis," said Urias, a native Fort Stocktonian and owner of Adobe Wells Trading Post, south of Midland.

Urias will be accepting donations at the event to be held at 1 p.m. at the feedstore, located two miles south of I-20 on the Rankin Highway.

"We're going to have the band, 'Checkpoint' here, free beer and barbeque and lots of dancing," he said.

Jurors ignored Alvarado's urgings and found Horton guilty as indicted.

Horton faces a possible prison sentence of five to 99 years or life and a fine of up to $10,000, with prosecutors urging imposition of the maximum sentence during the punishment phase of the trial, which began at 9 a.m. today.

Forum on precincts set for tonight

From Staff Reports

The fourth and last in a series of scheduled public forums is set for 8 p.m. tonight at the Midland County Election Administrator's Office, 709 W. Washington Ave.

The purpose of the forum is to collect voter suggestions as to whether the County should redraw voting precinct lines following the switch from an at-large to a single-member district voting system.

MARK ROYER

Mark and Kandy Royer have been active in Utah evangelism for ten years. At the age of fourteen, Mark moved with his family, to Roosevelt, a small Mormon community in Eastern Utah. Mark's father had come to establish a church in a community 97% Mormon, where the gospel of Christ had seldom been preached.

Mormon seminary was taught in the high school, and it was while enrolled in such a class that Mark felt the need to reach his friends with the message of God's grace. Mormonism teaches salvation through progressive works and ceremonies. Mark gently shared the message of salvation by God's grace and our faith in Him. Kandy, a fifth generation Mormon, and vice-president of the Mormon seminary, became a Christian, stirring up the once closed community. Through the ministry of Mark and Kandy several other high school students were saved.

Upon Mark's return from Christ for the Nations Bible School, in Dallas, Texas, he and Kandy were married. At age 19, they accepted the pastorate of Roosevelt Christian Assembly.

While pastoring the Roosevelt Christian Assembly the past seven years, they have also been instrumental in helping establish new Christian outreaches and churches in Vernal, Orem, Provo, Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservation, Coalville, and Heber City. The most recent is a new work in Bountiful, Utah. Only five months old the church has over 100 in attendance each week. Mark's brother, Gary Royer, is the pastor.

Mark explains his concept of ministry in Utah, is to present in love the message of the gospel to the lost. Whether they be Mormons, members of one of the many Indian tribes, or anyone who has not heard about Jesus.

The Royers have three children, Matthew, Amber, and Daniel.

Lasers used in heart surgery

HOUSTON (AP) — Heart surgeons pioneering in the use of laser beams say the high-intensity light beams eventually could replace scalpels but they caution that they're not yet willing to abandon older, proven methods.

Lasers have been used in recent years for eye, skin and genital tract surgery and for cancer treatment. But experiments at the Texas Heart Institute are the first time the carbon dioxide laser has been used in coronary surgery.

The laser, a gun-shaped instrument two feet long and weighing about a pound, is being used during bypass operations to remove plaque deposits from coronary arteries.

Coronary laser techniques are only experimental because they have yet to establish a success record comparable to traditional bypass surgery, but limited experiments show great promise, doctors said.

"The success rate of the bypass at the Texas Heart Institute is about 98 percent. The laser is unknown. To use it any other way would be malpractice. You have to crawl and then walk before you can run. We've just taken the first step," Dr. Lee Sutter, an engineer with the California-based Directed Energy Inc., which designed the device, said Wednesday.

The laser has been used on three patients since January, said Dr. James Livesay, the only surgeon who has permission from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to use the laser for cardiac surgery.

Each of the three patients, Livesay said, suffered from two blocked coronary arteries, with blood flow restricted by 75 percent to 99 percent. The laser was used to remove the blockage in the vessels.

Tests done a week after laser surgery showed that five of the six arteries were open and "much improved," Livesay said.

The laser technique will be used on 17 other patients with severe heart disease during the next 18 months, Livesay said.

Obstructions in coronary arteries traditionally have been surgically treated by opening the artery and removing the blockage, by doing a bypass, or by using a balloon inflated in the artery to compress the blockage.

"Now we are on the horizon of a new era in cardiovascular surgery," said Dr. Denton A. Cooley, who has performed thousands of bypasses as surgeon-in-chief of the heart institute. "Ultimately, it may replace the scalpel."

In performing the laser procedure, a three-inch needle at the end of the laser gun is inserted into the artery, which is about the size of a drinking straw, and the intense beam of light vaporizes the obstruction.

Livesay said routine use of the laser in heart surgery will require years of research and that its use should not add costs to the bypass procedure.

"The laser could modify the way we approach arterial disease in the future," he said. "Current advances in medical laser technology could reduce the need for heart bypass surgery in more than 170,000 Americans who undergo this surgery every year."

Necker: High, 'just kind of there' during teen-ager's kidnapping

Amy McNeil

ALVARADO (AP) — A 21-year-old man who claims to have been high on amphetamines says he was "just kind of there" when a teen-age girl was kidnapped earlier this year.

Daniel Walter Necker Jr. of Mesquite testified Wednesday that at the time of the Jan. 11 abduction he had been taking the drug regularly for about a week to 10 days.

"I was doing it every day. All the time. I wasn't sleeping none," Necker said. "I wasn't participating in the kidnapping. I was kind of just there."

Necker spoke in his own defense during the second day of testimony in his trial on charges of aggravated kidnapping. He is accused of abducting Amy McNiel, 13, and of holding her for two days while trying to receive a $100,000 ransom from her father, a prominent businessman.

Both the defense and the prosecution closed their cases Wednesday afternoon and the jury was expected to begin deliberations after closing arguments today.

James Wesley Foote, 34, of Arlington, and Michael Lynn Mills, 28, of Dallas, were convicted in March of aggravated kidnapping and sentenced to life in prison.

George Thomas Barnes, 21, of Dallas in April was found incompetent to stand trial, and Lisa Ann Bouvier, 19, of Balch Springs is awaiting trial.

Foote is Necker's uncle.

Necker said a rift occurred after Barnes said the girl should be killed. Necker said his uncle gave him a gun to make sure none of the others tried to harm the girl, he said.

But Miss McNiel testified earlier that she never saw any indication of a split between the people that were holding her and said Necker did not appear to be defending her against any of the others.

Frequently near tears, Miss McNiel identified Necker as one of the people who held her captive for 2½ days. She said he frequently had a gun while she was being held at Foote's Arlington home.

During a running gunbattle with law officers on East Texas highways, she said, Necker would hold the steering wheel while Mills, who was driving the car, fired a gun out the window.

Miss McNiel was rescued unharmed at the end of the chase.

Customs Service gaining 76 positions

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Customs Service today is expected to announce 76 new positions for Texas, according to Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. Five inspectors and two import specialists will be assigned to Laredo.

"The Customs Service has had great difficulty in meeting service demands with limited personnel," Gramm said. He said he has worked for two months with Customs Director William Von Raab to secure additional officers for the state.

Money for the new positions will come from an internal transfer of funds, Gramm said.

In recent days, Congress has shown it wants to increase appropriations for Customs beyond the Reagan administration's requests.

The full House last week approved a supplemental 1985 spending bill containing $12.5 million for Customs, $6.2 million more than requested by the administration for pay increases to prevent layoffs.

Man, 77, indicted in mercy killing

HURST (AP) — Although a grand jury has indicted a 77-year-old man for murder in connection with the mercy killing of his wife, a prosecutor says it's unlikely the man will be sentenced to a long prison sentence.

"It's hard to speculate. There's a real good chance something could be worked out," Davis McCown, a Tarrant County assistant district attorney, said Wednesday.

A Tarrant County grand jury returned a murder indictment Tuesday against Hilmer Sallander, who is accused of strangling his 72-year-old wife, Dorothy, on March 24 to end her suffering from Alzheimer's Disease.

Alzheimer's Disease is a fatal brain disorder characterized by gradual, then total, loss of memory and reasoning power. The disease's victims often become helpless and uncontrollable.

Sallander has been released on $5,000 bond, authorities said Wednesday.

A Florida jury recently sentenced an elderly man who shot his wife, also a victim of Alzheimer's Disease, to 25 years. Sallander could be sentenced to from five years to life, prosecutors said.

Death may be linked to cheese

FORT WORTH (AP) — Health officials are trying to determine if a California brand of cheese implicated in 31 deaths, including that of a Houston infant, may have contributed to the death of a Fort Worth woman.

Luz Romero, 83, died at 1 a.m. Wednesday at St. Joseph Hospital in Fort Worth, said Dr. Nancy Bowen, assistant health director for the Fort Worth-Tarrant County Health Departments.

The cause of death had not been determined, said Susan Pearson, public relations manager at the hospital. Ms. Romero had been hospitalized since June 16.

An autopsy was to be performed today, a spokesman for the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's office said.

Her family said that shortly before Romero became ill one week ago, she ate cheese made by the California company whose products are linked with the deaths. Lab tests showed that she was infected with Listeria monocytogenes, which caused the deaths in California.

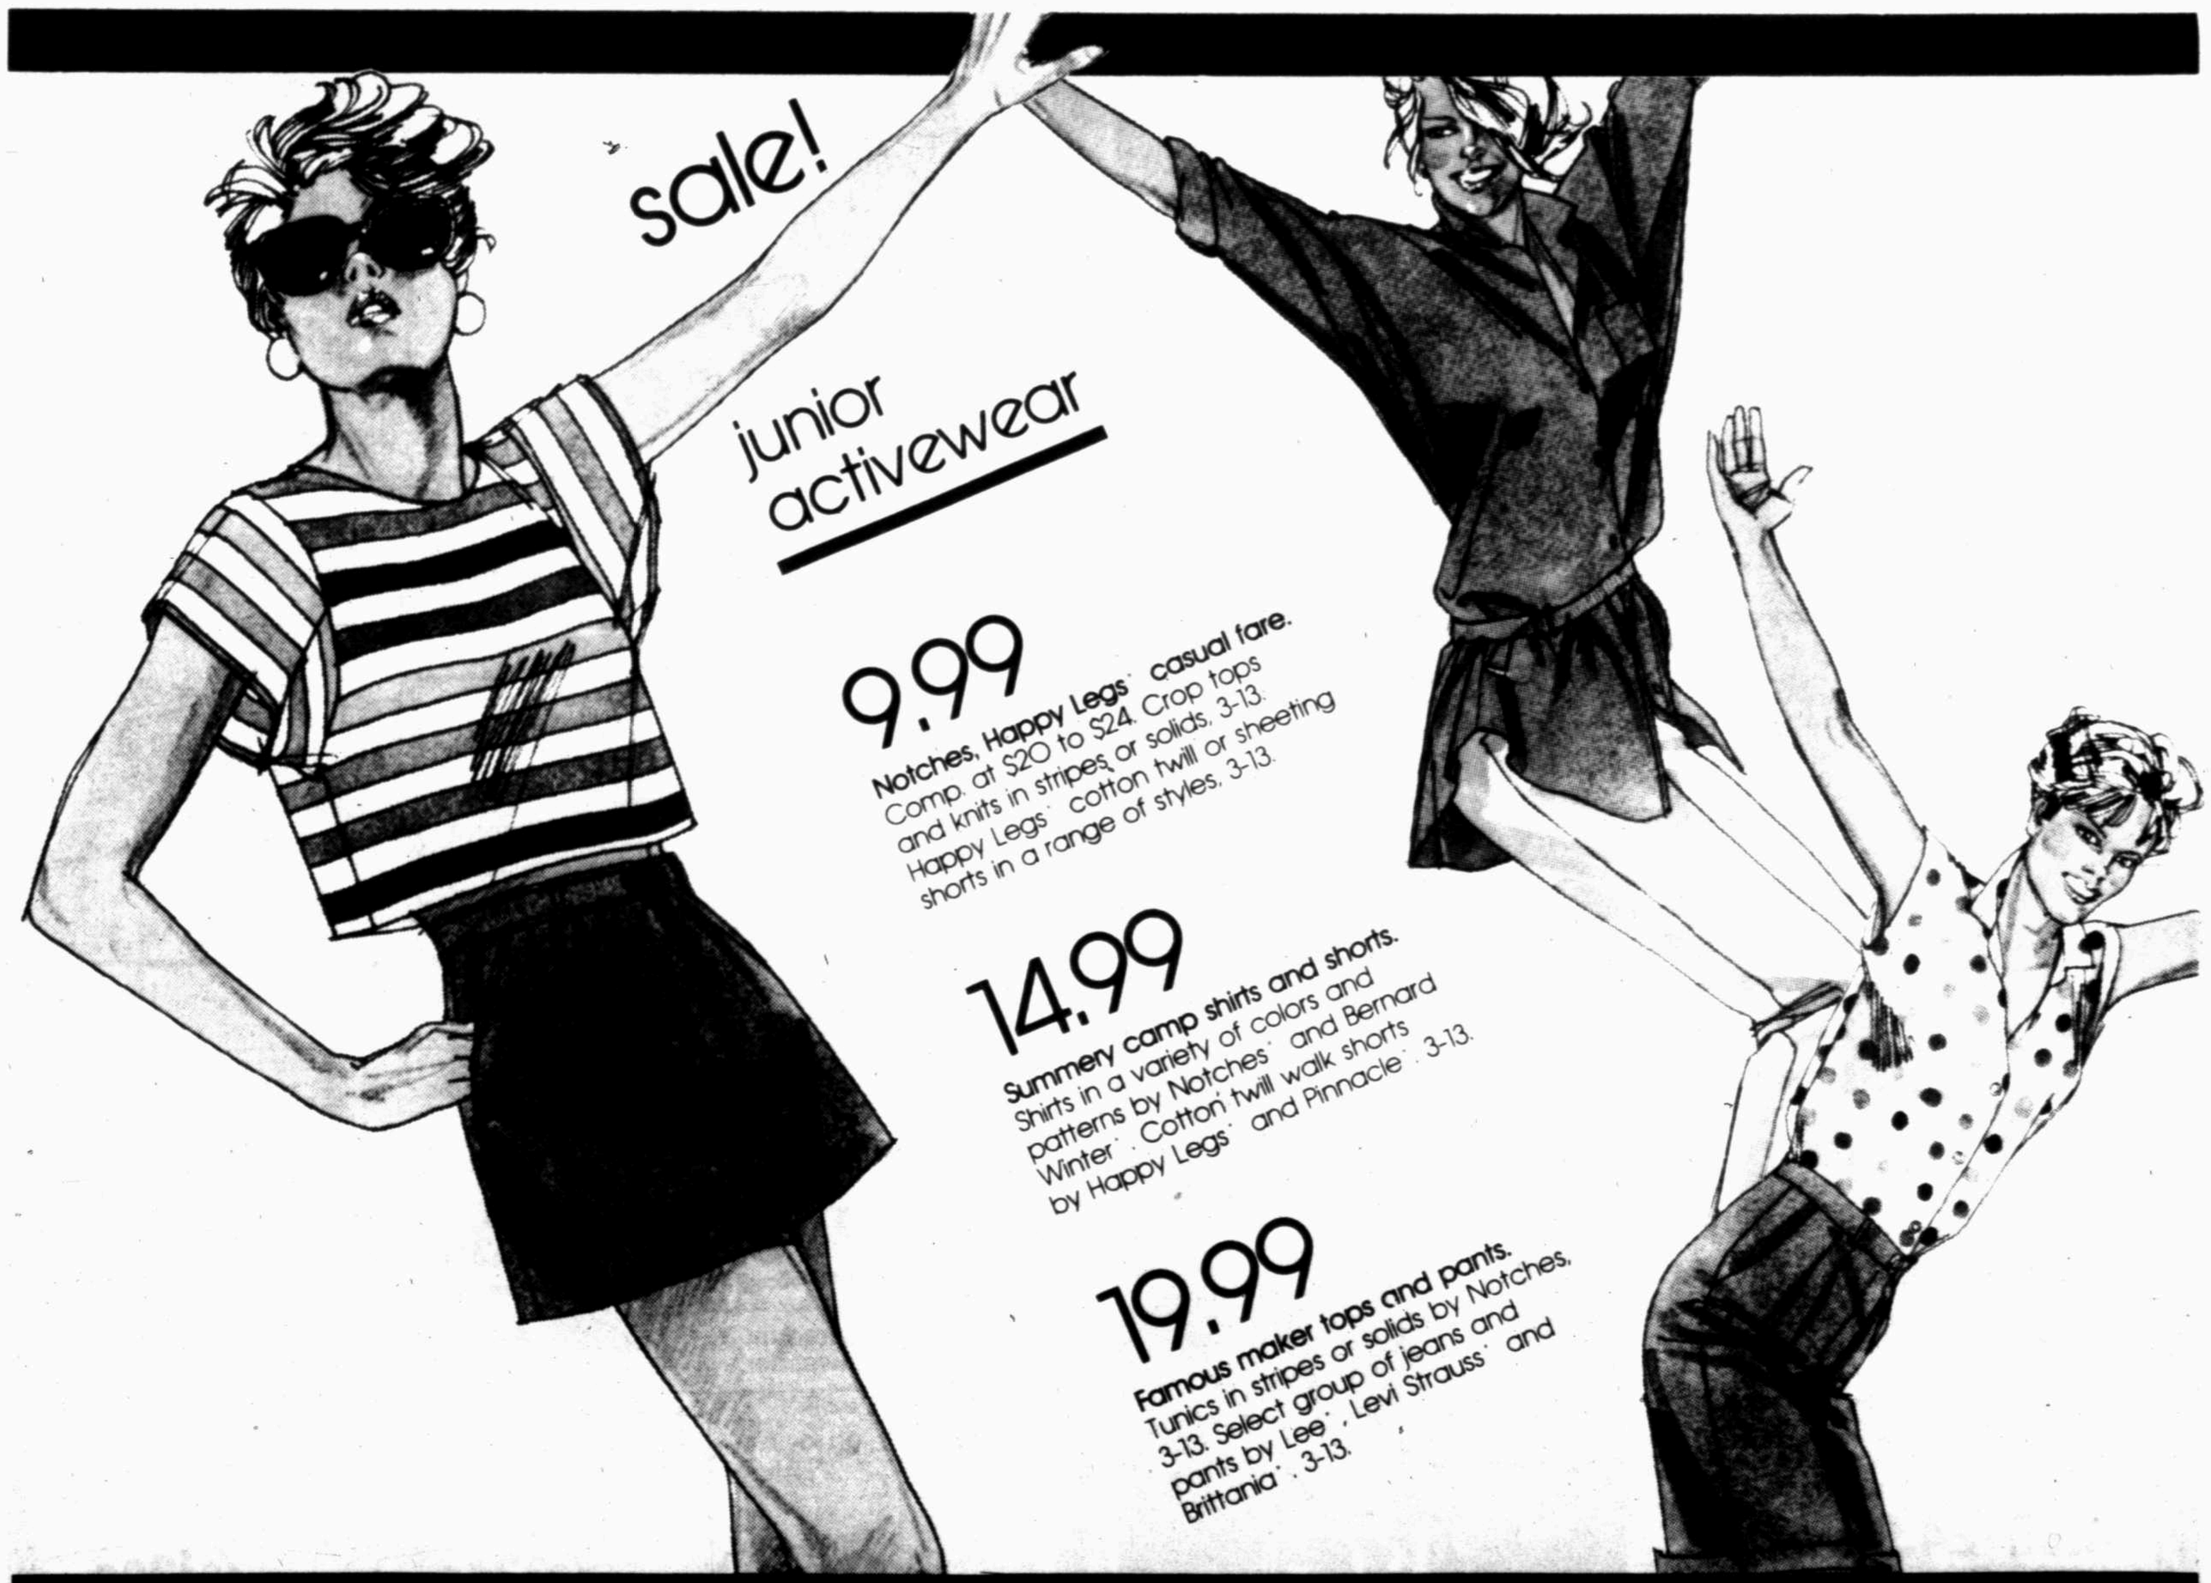

Contaminated cheese linked to earlier deaths was produced at Jalisco Mexican Products Inc.

Police examine cache of weapons

DALLAS (AP) — Police have asked the Army inspector general's office to help determine the source of a large cache of stolen military weapons uncovered more than a year ago in Dallas.

"Here's a million dollars worth of stuff — rockets marked 'U.S. Army,' — and we don't know where it came from," police intelligence Capt. Greg Holliday said.

Police confiscated weapons ranging from gun ammunition to rockets, as well as military uniforms, from a house in east Dallas and another residence in nearby Rockwall.

McFarlane: U.S. faces 'time of testing'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's national security adviser said today the slaying of six Americans in El Salvador and the hostage crisis in Beirut show it's a time for testing the United States, and "action is justified" in the wake of the Salvadoran attack.

Robert C. McFarlane, assistant to the president for national security affairs, said the United States must "assist the Salvadoran government and make sure we bring a halt to this kind of outrage."

In San Salvador, four U.S. Marines and two other Americans were among at least 13 people killed Wednesday night when gunmen disguised as Salvadoran soldiers sprayed two crowded outdoor cafes with automatic weapons fire, U.S. officials said.

McFarlane said he did not envison the use of American military force in El Salvador, but said "U.S. assistance is justified."

Asked to spell out further the type of action he meant, McFarlane added, "Well, action to make clear that there is a price to pay among the terrorists for this kind of thing and our own efforts to assist El Salvador specifically and their efforts in that direction."

McFarlane said he called Reagan during the night and informed him of the attack.

Talking with reporters as he arrived for work, McFarlane said no one has claimed responsibility for the attack.

"We're going to be joining the El Salvador authorities in trying to find those responsible," he said.

Asked if there were any connection between the slayings in El Salvador and the Beirut hijacking ordeal in which 40 Americans remain hostage, McFarlane replied: "I think it's a time for testing. This kind of thing is not unprecendented in El Salvador, but it's the kind of thing that may be seen in the current climate as a time to test the United States, and I think action is justified."

McFarlane was asked about Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin's statement that the hostage situation is primarily the United States' problem.

"Terrorism is generally an international problem," McFarlane said, and requires the efforts of everyone to bring it to an end. "Israel's history against terrorism is very good."

Rabin, interviewed Wednesday night on ABC-TV's "Nightline," said, "I believe that the problem is an American problem. The hostages are American. They were caught on board of an airline that carries the United States flag. The United States government has to make up its mind. What do they want to do?"

Hijacking alters Americans' travel plans

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

A half-million Americans were expected to visit Greece this summer, but the TWA hijacking and concerns about Athens airport security have many travelers canceling or changing plans and one airline has suspended flights to Greece.

Pan American World Airways announced on Wednesday it was suspending its daily flight from Frankfurt, West Germany, to Greece until at least June 26 — longer if security is not improved. The daily flight connects flights from Los Angeles, New York and Washington to Athens.

Both the State Department and President Reagan have issued warnings about lax security at Athens International Airport, where two Shiite Moslem gunmen apparently boarded TWA flight 847 last Friday.

About 40 American hostages remained in the custody of Shiite Moslem gunmen in Beirut today.

Travel organizations around the nation reported that many Americans — some planning overseas trips for the first time — were now fearful of traveling to southern Europe and the Middle East.

"This year has been touted as the biggest year for European travel ever," said Howard Fine, president of Miami-based Costa Cruises. "It is affecting the first-time travelers who are a little more skittish than the veteran traveler."

Travel agents have booked 450 berths on Costa ships "specifically transferring over from cruises that left from Athens," said Fine. Travelers are opting for Italy, Scandinavia and even Alaska, he said.

In accusing the Greek government of lax airport security Tuesday night, President Reagan warned Americans of dangers in flying through Athens and encouraged U.S. airlines to stop using the airport there until the government beefs up anti-hijacking measures.

TWA spokesman David Venz said the airline was considering the president's suggestion, but would not make "rash decisions." And the Israeli national airline, El Al, reported it was getting calls from people who wanted to switch from other airlines because of El Al's reputation for tight security.

Olympic Airways, the Greek airline, would not say whether it was getting calls from concerned travelers.

The Greek government — which has had rocky relations with the United States in recent years — accused the United States of using Greece as a scapegoat for the hijacking of TWA flight 847.

But security concerns at the Athens airport are well known, said a spokesman for the International Air Transport Association, a Montreal-based organization that represents 138 airlines worldwide.

Reagan learns harsh realities of terrorism

An Analysis

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Let terrorists be aware that when the rules of international behavior are violated our policy will be one of swift and effective retribution. We hear it said that we live in an era of limits to our powers. Well, let it also be understood there are limits to our patience."

That statement by Ronald Reagan less than a week after he took office in January 1981 symbolized the change of command from Jimmy Carter, whose presidency ended up mired in the quicksand of the Iranian hostage crisis, to a tough-talking new president determined to build up the nation's military might and signal the world America was reasserting its strength.

But in the years since, terrorists have taught Reagan the harsh reality that even giants are not immune to the painful sting of the scorpion. And at his news conference this week, the president showed he has learned that one of the traditional values American leaders must respect is the sanctity of innocent life aboard a hijacked jetliner.

When contemplating the use of "immediate force," Reagan said, "you have to say: 'Wait a minute...With a dozen hijackers on board armed with submachine guns, how could you possibly attempt anything without knowing that those guns would be turned first on the victims within the plane?' "

The hostage crisis is hardly Reagan's first lesson in the limits of American power.

His decision to pull the Marines out of Beirut in February 1984 without their having accomplished any of the objectives he had set for them was a demonstration that a president can't necessarily solve a problem merely because he is willing to use force. And in that case, the attempt cost 264 American lives.

As he patiently fielded one question after another about the hijack drama Tuesday night, Reagan expressed sympathy for the view so often stated by his conservative constituency that America should strike back at terrorists. And he explained why it is not that easy.

"I could get mad enough now to think of a couple of things we could do to retaliate, but I would probably be sentencing a number of Americans to death if I did it," the president said.

"Retaliation in some peoples' minds might just entail striking a blow in a general direction," Reagan said. But he added, "If you just aim in the general direction and kill some people, well then, you're a terrorist too."

"I'm as frustrated as anyone," the president asserted.

The alternative, then, is not what one might expect from a tough-talking, action-oriented leader: "I have to wait it out," Reagan said, "as long as those people are there and threatened and alive and we have a possibility of bringing them home."

When President Carter tried that, Ronald Reagan was one of the many clamoring for him to do something. And when Carter finally did act, eight Americans died in an abortive rescue attempt.

Ex-Norwegian diplomat convicted of spying

AP Laserphoto

Former Norwegian diplomat Arne Treholt, shown seated between two police officers in an Oslo, Norway, court, was convicted Thursday of spying for the Soviet Union and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Arne Treholt, who held high posts in the Foreign Ministry and other government departments, was convicted of spying for the Soviet Union today and sentenced to the maximum prison term of 20 years.

Chief Judge Astri Rynning, who read the sentence to a packed and tightly guarded courtroom, said the former diplomat was found guilty on all but one of the more than 40 counts lodged against him in a 15-page indictment.

The acquittal involved a charge of passing to Iraqi intelligence agents names of possible Norwegian contacts.

"The sentence is unanimous on all other points," he said. Treholt did not react visibly to the announcement of the conviction and sentencing.

The 20-year prison term was the maximum sentence under Norwegian law.

Treholt also was ordered to forfeit $50,000 confiscated from a Swiss bank account and another 700,000 Norwegian kroner, or $80,000, prosecutors said he earned by spying. He was ordered to pay more than $11,000 in legal costs.

Treholt, 42, was undersecretary of state in the Foreign Ministry and had held high positions in other government departments during a long government career.

He was charged in 1984 with violating civil and military security laws. Prosecutors say he passed on information about NATO troop deployments, NATO intelligence reports on world trouble spots and confidential accounts of talks between Norwegian and world leaders.

Prosecutors had asked for the 20-year sentence and forfeiture of the money they claimed Treholt made by passing sensitive information to the Soviet Union and Iraq.

German: Police '99 percent sure' skeleton is Mengele's

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — A West German consular official says his country's police are "99 percent sure" that a skeleton exhumed in a Sao Paulo suburb is that of Nazi death camp doctor Josef Mengele.

Meanwhile, Douglas Catan, a spokesman for the Sao Paulo coroner's office, said results of tests to identify the skeleton could be announced Friday. He said a team of Brazilian, West German and American experts have been studying the remains nearly non-stop.

The West German official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said Wednesday that "two dozen indicators" used in attempts to identify the Nazi war criminal were positive, including "the pattern of the story, the testimony, what was found in the grave."

"Our experts are 99 percent sure that the body dug up at Embu is Josef Mengele," he said. "All the evidence and all the tests obtained so far indicate it is the real Mengele."

Later Wednesday, however, assistant city morgue director Jose Antonio de Mello said positive identification of the skeleton may not be possible.

"It could be that we cannot give a name to the remains," he said. Israeli officials and several Nazi hunters also have said they are skeptical of reports the dead man is Mengele.

Mengele, who would be 74 if alive, is blamed for sending more than 400,000 people to their deaths at the Auschwitz prison camp in Poland during World War II. He was known as the "Angel of Death" for conducting grisly experiments on living prisoners.

The skeleton purported to be his was exhumed June 6 from a grave in the small town of Embu, 17 miles outside of Sao Paulo. Wolfram and Liselotte Bossert, Austrian immigrants, have told police a man they believe was Mengele was buried in the grave after drowning at an Atlantic Ocean resort on Feb. 7, 1979.

Food can't be delivered to famine victims

By MORT ROSENBLUM

EL GENEINA, Sudan (AP) — U.N. field workers are racing against the rains to move famine-stricken refugees because, the workers say, food promised by American officials months ago could not be delivered across Sudan.

"Some people will die on the road, but we must save the rest," said Ekber Menemencioglu, coordinator for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in the western desert outpost of El Geneina on the Chad border.

"It is a terrible gamble," said Menemencióglu, who is trying to move 15,000 Chadians in open trucks to Umballa, 95 miles over sand and road track that takes 12 hours to travel. At any time, rains may seal them off for months from grain shipments.

On a far wider scale, nearly two million Sudanese and another 100,000 Chadians face starvation in this western region of Darfur after three years of drought, according to international relief authorities. Some are already dying.

Relief experts fault the U.S. Agency for International Development and the European Economic Community for relying on a railroad that was not able to meet its commitments to get food into the region.

U.S. officials dispatch grain regularly to Port Sudan, and it moves by road to the White Nile railhead at Kosti. But just 10 percent of the planned 1,800 daily tons has been reaching Nyala, 560 miles down the track, to be trucked around Darfur.

"It is crazy that all the food we need is in the country," said Menemencioglu. "The Americans have been generous, but they relied only on the railroad, and now we can't wait any longer."

He added: "There are negotiations and meetings, but there is no food. We're talking about life, not sacks of potatoes."

"Everybody knew you couldn't depend on the railway," said Richard Copeland, overseas coordinator of the British agency Oxfam.

Racial violence growing in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Anti-apartheid clashes escalated today as the second bomb in 12 hours exploded in downtown Durban, and three police officers were injured slighlty when a grenade was thrown at them near Cape Town, police said.

No one was injured in the 7 a.m. blast in Durban. But an explosion Wednesday night in a trash bin outside a beachfront cafe in Durban shattered 28 windows and slightly wounded two white patrons, police said.

Near Cape Town, three police officers were wounded when a black man suspected of involvement in previous guerrilla attacks hurled a grenade at a police patrol in Guguletu, a black township.

The man threw a hand grenade and fled as three officers approached to arrest him, said Lt. Attie Laubscher, Cape Town police spokesman. The three officers suffered minor injuries.

A police patrol killed one of two suspected guerrillas in a clash Sunday near South Africa's northeastern border.

The two black men threw hand grenades at four policemen who confronted them near Pafuri, north of the Kruger National Park in the northeast of the country near the Mozambique and Zimbabwe borders, said police headquarters in Pretoria.

A policeman was hit by shrapnel and lost an eye in the conflict, officials said. A number of grenades were seized after the clash.

The government has accused the outlawed African National Congress, fighting to overthrow white-minority rule, of stirring up unrest in the townships, which has left more than 400 dead in 10 months of rioting.

Agca: Letter sent to U.S.

ROME (AP) — Papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca testified today that he sent a cryptic letter to the U.S. Embassy in Rome, suggesting he had some connection with American officials, because he wanted to "blackmail" the U.S. government into supporting him.

Agca, serving a life sentence for shooting Pope John Paul II, also said he had hoped to obtain U.S. citizenship and a possible extradition.

The Turkish terrorist spoke at the trial of three Bulgarians and four Turks charged with helping him in the May 13, 1981 assassination attempt in St. Peter's Square. Only two of the Turks and one Bulgarian are in custody in Rome. The others are being tried in their absence.

Judge Severino Santiapichi, after taking Agca through a step-by-step description of the day of the shooting, asked Agca to explain a letter he sent to the U.S. Embassy.

The letter, written Aug. 5, 1983, was sent to the military attache at the embassy. It contained several cryptic remarks, such as: "You told me to talk so I am talking," and, "To avoid all obstacles I am writing you in Turkish this time."

Americans' bodies identified

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Two badly decomposed bodies unearthed this week have been identified as those of American men who disappeared from a restaurant Jan. 30 and apparently were killed by drug dealers, a Mexican official said.

A spokesman for the American consulate, however, said the families of the two men are seeking further forensic evidence.

Juan Antonio Yanez, a spokesman for the Jalisco state attorney general's office, said Wednesday that forensic experts had positively identified the remains as those of John Walker of Minneapolis and Alberto Radelat of Fort Worth, both in their 30s.

He said the experts based their conclusion on dental records and items found with the bodies, including a watch and a medal.

Walker's wife, Eve, and Radelat's father, Dr. Felipe Radelat, visited the morgue Wednesday, and Yanez said they also made a positive identification.

Thailand to return plane

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand will return a passenger plane that two Laotian pilots flew to Thailand last July in a bid for political asylum, a Thai military officer said today.

Air force spokesman Group Capt. Deparb Soucksakit said the Soviet-made Antonov-2 would be handed over next Wednesday at the Thai air force base at Udon Thani, 280 miles northeast of Bangkok.

Two Laotian pilots and six engineers were to come to Thailand and fly the plane home, he added.

He said pro-Western Thailand was returning the plane as a gesture of "good neighborliness" toward leftist Laos.

Nicaraguan Embassy burns

WASHINGTON (AP) — A deliberatly set fire did $30,000 to $50,000 in damage to the Nicaraguan Embassy early today, District of Columbia fire officials said.

Fire and police officials said the building was broken into, and the fire started when towels and a chair in the embassy's anteroom and an adjoining bathroom were set afire.

"It was entirely deliberate," said FBI agent H. Allen Witzgall.

An embassy spokeswoman, Sarali Porta, said the embassy considers "this a direct result of high-level threats by the Reagan administration against Nicaragua."

Reluctant winners get 'bad-ad' awards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The red envelopes were ripped open and trophies handed out just like Emmy or Oscar night, but the winners of the "first annual" Harlan Page Hubbard Memorial Awards weren't on hand to note their selection — for the year's most deceptive or misleading advertising.

Instead, the makers of Dexatrim diet pills; R.J. Reynolds Co. cigarettes, Skoal tobacco, Miller beer, Volvo automobiles, String Along toys and Uniden telephones, plus the Beef Industry Council, will have to pick up their gold trophies — each topped with a lemon — sometime later.

Named for a pioneer in the advertising of patent medicines, the Hubbards were awarded in eight categories recently, selected by a coalition of consumer and health groups.

Reporters and photographers jammed the event, though some of the tension usually present at awards announcements was missing thanks to news releases handed out in advance, listing the winners.

The event preceded the advertising industry's annual Clio awards, in which it honors the best ad campaigns of the year.

The bad ad awards were instituted, said Bruce Silverglade of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, because of laxity on the part of the Federal Trade Commission.

He said the groups hope to pressure the FTC to renew its efforts to police deceptive advertising and at the same time to warn consumers of the misrepresentations of the marketplace.

An FTC official denied any reduction in the agency's efforts.

"We do not share the premise that we are doing less in the area of advertising regulation," said Wallace Snyder, FTC associate director for advertising practices. "To the contrary, regulating advertising is one of our priority issues at the FTC."

The first Hubbard went to Dexatrim diet pills, which had been chosen by the Women's National Health Network. The group charged that Dexatrim ads claim safe weight loss, but fail to warn consumers that the product contains the chemical PPA, which may raise blood pressure and thus should not be used by people with hypertension.

Dean Siegal, a spokesman for the manufacturer, Thompson Medical Co., challenged the women's group, stating that no scientific evidence exists linking PPA and hypertension.

Siegal added that the Dexatrim ads state that the product should be used only in accordance with the directions enclosed, and those warn that persons with hypertension should consult a doctor before using any medication.

The Coalition on Smoking or Health made the second award, criticizing R.J. Reynolds Co. for its ad, "Of Cigarettes and Science," which questioned a scientific study linking smoking with heart disease.

Reynolds spokesman David Fishel said his company has offered to respond to any questions raised by the FTC. 'We only urge members of the group to read the scientific criticism" addressed in the ads, he said.

The Council on Alcohol Policy was critical of Miller beer ads featuring the winner of the Indianapolis 500 race, which the group said tend to associate alcohol with driving a race car.

"The Miller High Life commercial featuring Danny Sullivan in no way connects drinking and driving," responded Miller spokesman Steve Forsyth. "At no time in the commercial does the driver endorse or handle our product. Miller in no way condones drinking and driving or alcohol abuse of any kind."

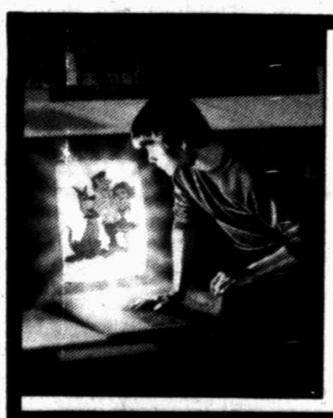

Volvo was named in the auto category for its ads for the 760 Turbo, which the Center for Auto Safety charged could tend to encourage reckless driving because of the high-speed action depicted. This was particularly distressing because of the change from the past in which Volvo ads have tended to feature the strength and safety of their cars, said Dan Howell of the Center. Volvo officials declined to respond to the criticism.

In the food category, Center for Science in the Public Interest renewed its criticism of the Beef Industry Council's "Beef Gives Strength" campaign.

These ads imply that beef is a healthy food, the center's Bonnie Liebman charged, while failing to note the presence of fat in red meats, which has been linked to heart disease and cancer.

Outing set to 'Texas,' Palo Duro Canyon

ODESSA — Continuing Education at Odessa College and Journey World are co-sponsoring a three-day trip to Palo Duro Canyon, the Panhandle Museum and the dramatic outdoor musical "Texas," July 19-21.

Cost is $99, excluding meals. Transportation by All-American Travels Motor Coach, tickets for "Texas" and accommodations at Amarillo's Days Inn are covered by the $99 fee.

The musical "Texas" is a romantic portrayal of Texas panhandle history. The company of 80 actors and singers traditionally present an exciting rendition of the struggles of the settlers and the politics, business and celebrations of the era. Open for 19 seasons, 1½ million people have attended the production.

Participants will meet at OC at 8:30 a.m., July 19. The group will stop for lunch in Lubbock and will travel on to spend Friday and Saturday nights in Amarillo. A shopping trip has been planned for that Saturday morning at an Amarillo mall. The group will see "Texas" Saturday night.

The group will leave Amarillo at 10 a.m., Sunday, July 21, and travel to the Panhandle Museum, Canyon, and return to Odessa that evening.

Participants must register by 7:30 p.m., Monday. For more information or to register, contact the continuing education office at OC, 1-335-6580.

Amy Grant

Amy Grant will be singing at Six Flags

ARLINGTON — One of the top gospel recording stars in the United States, Amy Grant, will join vocalist Philip Bailey in concert Saturday at Six Flags Over Texas.

At 25, Miss Grant has already won three Grammy Awards and numerous Dove Awards, the Gospel Music Association's Grammy equivalent. Her gold album, "Age to Age," is the most successful album in the history of contemporary gospel music.

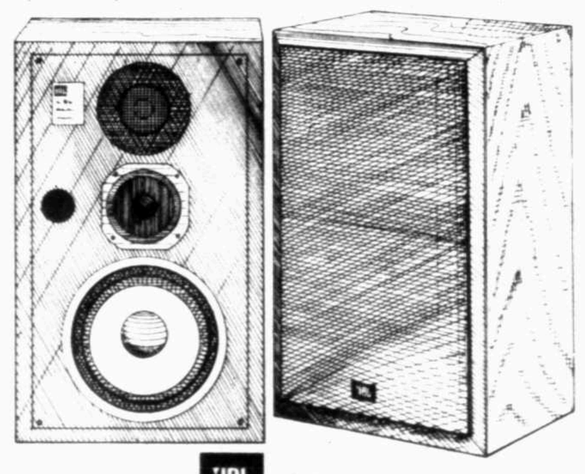

Her most recent album release is "Unguarded."

Bailey, star vocalist for the group "Earth, Wind and Fire" will open the concert at 8 p.m. in the theme park's festival concert area. He is perhaps best known for his hit singles "Make Us One" and "The Wonder of His Love."

An additional charge of $3 for the show will be added to the Six Flags regular ticket price of $14.95. Park admission for children under 42 inches tall is $7.95. Children age 5 and under are not subject to the additional concert fee.

Six Flags operating hours Saturday will be 10 a.m. to midnight.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Witnesses meet here

More than 4,500 Jehovah's Witnesses from Texas and New Mexico are meeting today through Sunday at Chaparral Center.

A total of 112 "Integrity Keepers" district conventions of the group will be held in a selected 59 cities. Stanley Weigel, spokesman for the world headquarters in New York City, said the events are expected to attract over one million delegates.

Frank R. Garig, convention manager for Midland, said of the convention theme, "There has been a gradual diluting of strict Bible laws and principles for many years so that now many people do not know what to believe."

Garig cited the following as examples: "The Bible says God hates a divorcing, but the divorce rate has never been higher. It says flee from fornication, but the world is fleeing toward fornication. God's law stated that those causing an abortion must forfeit their life for the life of the aborted child. Crimes such as robbery, murder and rape are all in violation of God's commandments."

He added, "So those claiming to be Christians must rightly ask themselves if they are keeping integrity to God's stated will and commandments."

Art entries invited

AUSTIN — The Texas Fine Arts Association invites all artists living in Texas to enter TFAA's Texas Annual 1985, designed to showcase the best contemporary work of Texas artists.

Juror for this year's competition, formerly the "Texas Only," is Michael Ennis, art critic for "Texas Monthly" since 1977, and frequent contributor to national art magazines. Deadline for receipt of entry forms and slides is July 22.

Handling fees range from $7 for one slide for TFAA members to $30 for seven slides for non-members. Cash prizes of at least $2,000 will be awarded by the juror.

The Texas Annual will open Oct. 5 at Laguna Gloria Art Museum, Austin, where it will be on view through Nov. 3. At the time Ennis selects awards, will choose a traveling show which will tour to art museums and galleries statewide. To request an entry form, contact TFAA, P.O. Box 5023, Austin, Texas 78763, or call 1-512-453-5312.

The TFAA is a nonprofit statewide visual art organization composed of working artists and supporters of the arts.

Services include organizing a variety of exhibitions which open at Laguna Gloria Art Museum and other sites in Austin, touring selections from these exhibitions to communities throughout the state, providing a wide range of services to its 18 statewide chapters, including health insurance at group rates, and presenting an Annual Artists' Conference.

Membership is open to all. Contact the association at the above address for information on other services and membership benefits.

Centennial Fair set

The Midland Suburban Lioness Club is having a Centennial Fair from 3 - 9 p.m., June 29, at the location of the first fairgrounds and racetrack in Midland, 2010 Rankin Highway.

Barbecue sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade desserts and drinks will be available. Continuous entertainment, including children's game booths, hay rides, cake walks and clowns will be part of the fair. Prizes will be awarded in the following competitions: horseshoes, washer pitching; hula hoop, cow-chip throwing and pool.

At 7 p.m., a country and western band will provide music for dancing. A raffle for a numbered "Spirit of Midland, Texas" Centennial print will be held.

Proceeds go to Lioness' community projects, such as Lions Crippled Children's Camp and the Lions Eye Bank.

Cost of admission is $3 in advance and $4 at the gate. Children under 12, accompanied by an adult, get free admission.

Admission includes a barbecue sandwich or two hot dogs. For ticket information call Norma Reece, 684-7188; Debbie Hanson, 685-5088; or Marge Shaw, 682-0315.

Circus comes to town

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus will be returning to Midland for its second appearance after a six-year absence.

There will be four big shows of "The Greatest Show On Earth" at the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center Tuesday at 2 and 8 p.m. and Wednesday at 2 and 8 p.m.

Tickets are on sale at Chaparral Center's box office, and at Sears at Midland Park Mall and Odessa's Permian Mall. For more information, call Chaparral Center, 684-9811.

"The Greatest Show On Earth" brings to Midland such thrilling acts as Miguel Vasquez, "The Flying Vasquez," the first human ever to complete the quadruple somersault from the bar to the hands of a catcher. Wade Burck faces the savage fury of rare Burmese white tigers. Highwire heroism is displayed by the Tzekovi Troupe.

This circus brings 300 of the world's greatest circus performers to Midland.

Wilkison exhibits

Traditional representational Southwestern landscapes of watercolor and oils by John Wilkison are on display through July 28 in the Museum of the Southwest's Stable Gallery.

An example of American realism, Wilkison's work has been critically acclaimed for its remarkable sensitivity to the mysterious and elemental forces of nature, the qualities of human character and individual loneliness.

His work focuses on the Southwestern part of the United States. He has said, "I feel that the landscape of this region has the mystical qualities I seek to portray in my paintings."

Wilkison is a founder and member of the Southern Watercolor Society, and a member of the National Watercolor Society. Wilkison has held numerous one-man shows, has been a participant in many invitational museum and group exhibitions, and has works in public and private collections throughout the United States.

His paintings have won several awards including, Southern Watercolor Society, NWS, William Anhalt Award and AWS, Antoinette Graves Goetz Award.

The Museum of the Southwest is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Piano students play at convention

Midland piano students who are members of Student Affiliate of Texas Music Teachers Association performed in Houston Monday for the TMTA's 71st convention at the Shamrock Hilton.

Presented at the convention each year is a Texas-American composer program, during which this year's students from Midland performed two selections written by Dallas composer William Gillock. More than 1,000 students from various Texas cities performed a 10-piano ensemble program Sunday and Monday. Each student participant qualified by audition and through passing the TMTA's theory tests.

Elementary level students from Midland who performed included Melinda Butts, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Butts; Sherah Bembinster, the daughter of Tom Bembinster and Carol Bembinster; Susan Crowley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crowley; Adair Rogers, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Rogers; Jason Whitt, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitt; Andy Bianchi, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bianchi. Ensemble team director was Lou Nelle George.

Junior high level students were Melanie George, Les Stark, Cari Claiborne, Dani Dunn, Kristi Haggard, Christine Watson, Susan Crowder, Krista Gaulden, Michael Leung, Christina Leung, Austin Bill and Amy Davidson. The team was directed by Joy Finley.

Tammi Bill competed in the Vocal Solo Competition and Christina Leung competed in the piano Junior Solo Competition.

Teachers of the students who performed in Houston are Ms. George, Ms. Finley, Harriet Motter, Elizabeth Roweck, Dorothy Matthews and Ruth Ann Griffin. Other Midland music teachers who attended the convention were Pamela Bristol and Lyndol Taylor.

'Creature' will show at UTPB

ODESSA — The Office of Student Life at University of Texas of the Permian Basin is bringing back movie night at the pool with "The Creature from the Black Lagoon," at 9 p.m., July 3.

"This offers the perfect family entertainment," said Woody Kupper, director of student life. "Everyone should bring their rafts and discover a unique way to spend a night with his or her friends and family."

This 1954 classic is a modern-day tale of beauty and the beast. A mysterious tropical lagoon is inhabited by a prehistoric man-monster that belongs to a tradition of mistreated, misunderstood movie monsters — the creature.

The showing is free.

Demolition Derby roars in July

The 1985 Demolition Derby, sponsored by the Midland Suburban Lions Club, is set for 8:30 p.m. July 13 at Twin Cities Speedway.

Total prize money to be awarded is $1,500. In addition to prize money, special awards, including 6-foot trophies, will be given.

Admission to the derby for spectators is $6.50 for adults, $2 for children ages six to 11 and children under six are admitted free.

Twin Cities Speedway is located 15 miles west of Midland on Highway 80. Gates open at 5 p.m. for the July 13 derby.

Entry fee for a car in the derby is $25 per car. Team entries are accepted.

In addition to the derby, a spectator drag will be held. In this event, those spectators who want to participate may enter the car they drove to the track.

Pre-entry deadline for cars is July 12. For more information, call J.A. "Monty" Coldwell, a member of the Midland Suburban Lions Club, 683-8541.

Fandangle slated for June 27-29

ALBANY — The taming and settling of the frontier west as "seen through the eyes of frontier children" will be relived in the 47th production of the Fort Griffin Fandangle during six performances Thursday through Sunday, June 27-29.

The annual production, created in 1938 by Albany playwright Robert Nail, relates through narration, song and dance the story of the settling of this part of West Texas during the final decades of the 1800s. The show is presented in the Fandangle Association's outdoor theater, one mile west of town. The cast is made up of 250 local citizens who began working as early as February on the production.

Tickets can be reserved by calling the Fandangle's ticket office, located in the depot building at Albany, 1-762-2525 or 1-762-3642. Ticket prices range from $3 to $7 per person and need to be purchased or reserved in advance. If available, tickets will be sold at the door.

During Fandangle, downtown store windows are traditionally decorated with antiques and other items from the western frontier time period. Several restored homes and buildings are open to the public on performance days, including the 102-year-old Shackelford County Courthouse.

In addition, pipe organ concerts are given continuously from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. each evening in the Matthews Memorial Presbyterian Church, one block west of the courthouse square. Barbecue dinners are also available from 5 to 8 p.m. each day on the courthouse lawn. The meals are catered by Joe Allen's Bar—B—Que of Abilene for $5.25 per adult and $3 for children under three.

One special attraction for visitors is the Old Jail Art Center, which recently completed a large expansion and remodeling project. The art center will feature a special Fandangle "Women of Albany" exhibit.

The annual Fort Griffin Fandangle Parade has been scheduled for 6 p.m., June 27.

Eating of raw meat causes dangerous disease

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. In reference to this column some time ago about the eating of steak tartar and hence the safety of eating raw meat, you may not be aware of toxoplasmosis, a disease responsible for more birth defects than herpes, rubella and syphillis combined. The primary method of infection is the ingestion of uncooked or undercooked meat. Even meat which is prepared under the most sanitary conditions may have this parasite present. G.T. Dadakis, Greenwich, Conn.

A. Toxoplasmosis is a parasitic infection which humans can acquire in one of two ways — through direct contact with infected cat feces or through the eating of raw or undercooked meat and meat products or unwashed vegetables.

It is estimated that one-third of the population in the U.S. has been exposed to toxoplasma organisms without realizing it, with symptoms misdiagnosed as the flu or mononucleosis. I know now that I had it as a teen-ager. The doctor called it cat fever. At the time we had five cats, a flock of chickens and a vegetable garden, an ideal scenario for infection.

A pregnant woman who becomes infected has a 30 to 40 percent chance of passing it to her fetus. Approximately 3,000 infants are born with it annually, and according to a Department of Agriculture background paper, 5 percent to 15 percent of these infants die. Those babies who live through it have varying degrees of permanent damage to the brain and/or eyes.

Cats, because they eat wildlife, are the principal carriers of toxoplasmosis. The organisms get in the feces, the feces are buried, and grazing or scratching animals rout around in the soil or sand and pick up the organisms.

Infection can also result from working or playing in contaminated soil, and cockroaches can transport the organisms directly to food. Infection has also been traced to the drinking of raw goat's milk.

The Centers for Disease Control of the U.S. Department of Health recommends that beef and lamb be cooked until pink or grayish-pink, and that pork and chicken be cooked until completely white. The organisms are more prevalent in pork and lamb. Freezing reduces the amount of organisms but does not assure their elimination.

In addition to eating only thoroughly cooked meat, pregnant women should wash their hands after handling cats especially before touching food, they should have someone else empty the cat litter box, they should keep indoor cats inside and not feed them raw meat, and they should not allow outdoor cats or strays into the house.

If you want to eat raw meat or steak tartar, do so at your own risk. A pregnant woman, however, should not eat raw or undercooked meat or drink unpasteurized milk.

Q. Would you tell me what temperature you should set your refrigerator and freezer for a safe temperature? Richard Patterson, Stamford, Conn.

A. As a general rule, the freezer section of your refrigerator should be 0-F. or less, according to the American Frozen Food Institute. At 0-F. frozen foods last the longest. The refrigerator section should be 38- to 40-F. Use a thermometer and adjust the dials until you get the correct reading.

If you have a one-door refrigerator, chances are you won't be able to get the freezer section down to zero. Instead it will probably read anywhere from 10- to 20-F. Some frozen foods begin to thaw in this range even though the packages feel hard. It is recommended that you use these foods within a period of several weeks, whereas at zero the food will last for months.

If you have a separate household freezer, whether chest or upright, the same temperature applies — zero degrees F. or lower.

Q. The romaine lettuce I buy in the supermarket has an oily feel to it which I thought was normal until I bought some last summer from a local gardener who doesn't use sprays on his vegetables. What is sprayed on romaine to give it that oily feel, and how do I get rid of it? Are these pesticides? Norma Bundt, Santa Rosa, Calif.

A. Paul Vossen, a farm advisor with the University of California's cooperative extension, says that romaine lettuce is not treated with any pesticide or post-harvest treatment that causes an oily feel to the leaf surface. Romaine, says Vossen, has a naturally oily feel to it that develops with time. The less fresh it is, the oilier it gets.

Vossen states that occasionally consumers confuse romaine lettuce with butter head lettuce. Butter head lettuce has a very oily feel and texture to the leaf. A variety of this lettuce called "Boston" when grown quite large looks just like romaine.

Q. Does the white and tan meat from a tuna fish come from the same fish the way light and dark meat come from poultry? Also, which is supposed to be better, white or tan tuna? P.B., Port Chester, N.Y.

A. No tuna has both white and tan meat. "The Encyclopedia of Fish Cookery" by A.J. McClane tells us that there are six species of tuna which come to us in fresh, frozen and canned form. The white meat is derived only from albacore. The light tan meat used in the canning industry comes from the yellowfin tuna, skipjack and small bluefin.

As with poultry, whether you choose white or dark tuna is a matter of preference. White tuna has a more delicate flavor.

READER RESPONSE: Some time ago a reader asked this column whether colored toilet tissue was bad for the environment in that the dyes would leach into the water system. James Basilico, an official of the Environmental Protection Agency, responded, saying that colored tissue does not appear to offer a pollutional threat to the environment because most of the dye stays with the paper, which then settles down with the rest of the sludge. A reader contested this with the following:

Dorothy Forscott, Millville, N.J.: "Sludge containing the dyes may not be getting put into the waterways, but it's being dumped on farms in New Jersey, up to 50 tons per square acre, which pollutes the fresh water aquifer under the soil. Most of South Jersey is only a few feet above sea level. Toxic chemicals and heavy metals are also being dumped.

"Maybe the coloring is only a drop in the bucket to you, but not to us in South Jersey and across the country. Scientists now know that chemicals and other types of poisons come up into the plants to be harvested for animal and later human consumption. 'Resource' companies are dumping sludge containing coloring, etc., all over South Jersey. The runoff from the sludge eventually gets into the waterways and into seafood. No one needs coloring on their tissues, so why not advocate stopping it?"

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Sweetener's 'whang' obviously artificial

By LINDA ANDERSON

In the never-ending search for new customers, many food manufacturers are cashing in on the fitness-and-low-calorie-eating craze by marketing foods sweetened with the newest "miracle ingredient," NutraSweet. Every day new boxes and packages boast "New! Better Than Ever! Now Sweetened with NutraSweet!" It's beginning to get boring.

About a year ago Jell-O brought forth new blue boxes of their famous gelatin in low-calorie, NutraSweetened form, which was found to taste (and shimmy) surprisingly like real Jell-O, but with fewer calories and only a little artificial-sweetener whang.

Now, the Jell-O folks are at it again. They have introduced blue boxes of Jell-O pudding, sweetened with their favorite artificial sweetener. Like regular Jell-O pudding, the low-calorie variety is available in chocolate, vanilla and butterscotch. And maybe more.

The adults, teen and children testers checked this new product against ordinary high-calorie Jell-O pudding for taste, texture, price and advertising accuracy.

Label advertising claims the product is "sugar free," which it is, and "new," which it is, and that it is sweetened with NutraSweet brand sweetener. Which it is. And for convenience of consumers interested in calorie counts, the label compares sugar-free Jell-O instant pudding at 100 calories per ½-cup serving, with regular Jell-O instant pudding, 160 calories per serving.

The box also contains instructions for making pudding with a mixer or with a shaker, and for making pie. All methods are embarassingly easy. But label information also makes a bold-face warning: "Not recommended for use in recipes requiring baking."

A 1.5-ounce, four serving package of NutraSweetened Jell-O pudding costs 59-cents. Regular Jell-O pudding in a 3⅛-ounce, four-serving box costs 49-cents. While the boxes are the same size, the difference in product weight has to do with the difference in the weights of NutraSweet and sugar. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

The tasters tested the chocolate flavor of low-calorie pudding, because chocolate is their Number One favorite.

One adult, who is limiting his sugar intake, thought the artifically sweetened Jell-O was OK; the children tasted it and decided it was more fun to use for finger-painting than for eating; the teen thought it was "disgusting!"

The other adult could taste the artificial sweetener, even though NutraSweet's after-taste supposedly isn't to be associated with saccharin. The product tasted just like "diet food," and most of it went down the garbage disposal.

If a dieter is really desperate for something sweet, or if he can't live another minute without chocolate, or if the "whang" of artificial sweeteners doesn't bother him, maybe that dieter could enjoy a big batch of Jell-O sugar-free instant pudding.

But for 100 calories per serving, I can think of other things I'd much rather have.

Freeze food wisely

By DENESE R. ALBRACHT

Many people have discovered that freezing is a quick and simple way to save the surplus from their home gardens and help stretch the family food budget. With a freezer, there is no out-of-season for fruits and vegetables.

Home-frozen foods can have color, flavor, texture and nutritive values much like the fresh product, if recommended practices are followed.

Whether freezing produce for the first time or just brushing brush up on old techniques and learning what's new, here are a few pointers:

— Set the freezer temperature to maintain high quality frozen foods for any time — must be 0-F. or below.

— Select high-quality products to freeze. Freezing can only maintain the quality of the product, not improve it.

— Use proper packaging materials designed especially for freezer use. Materials should be airtight, moisture- and vapor-resistant, clean and durable, and not add flavor or odor to the food.

Suitable containers include standard freezing or canning jars, polyethylene freezing bags, rigid plastic containers designed especially for freezing and heavily-waxed cardboard freezing containers. Heavy-duty aluminum, freezer paper or plastic freezer films with overwraps are sometimes used for corn-on-the-cob.

When freezing garden produce, follow recommended practices for best results. Additional information about food preservation is available at the Extension Office.

Glass containers researched

ALFRED, N.Y. (AP) — Glass bottles have been steadily replaced by cans and plastic containers in recent years. But glass makers hope to regain market share for their products if research at the College of Ceramics at Alfred University is successful.

Researchers here are trying to develop a glass coating that will make glass bottles lighter and far less breakable. These new glass bottles will be recyclable and will not affect the taste of the product, they said.

DEAR ABBY

Mom gives precious gift

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, on the morning of Mother's Day, my two teen-age daughters gave me a lovely gift. That evening I decided to join my neighbor in running because I had started to put on a little weight. At 39, what seemed to be a good idea turned out to be an impossibility. I couldn't even run half a block — I couldn't even breathe. When I got home I lit a cigarette and didn't have enough breath to take a deep drag.

I suddenly knew I had to face the facts. I had been a smoker for 20 years, never over a pack a day — just a moderate smoker. For years my daughters had been after me to quit because they learned in school that smoking was damaging to one's health. I put out the cigarette, went to my daughters, and told them that since they had given me something lovely for Mother's Day, I was going to give them a present — a mother who would do everything she could to live as long as possible.

I have not smoked since then. The first few days were difficult, but I had given my daughters a gift I couldn't take back.

It's been two years since that Mother's Day, and I have never felt better in my life. You may change this letter any way you wish, but please print it, Abby. The gift of not smoking is one that parents can give to their children (or their spouses) that will be appreciated above any other. — KAY H. RITCHIE, MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR KAY RITCHIE: Thanks for an excellent suggestion. Children could give their parents the same gift, too.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to offer a solution to "Out of Luck," whose grandmother had promised the same piece of jewelry to several members of her family. Here's how we handled that problem when my mother promised her pendant to me (her daughter) as well as to several grandchildren (I had no children, but my sister, now deceased, had three):

I suggested that on the anniversary of my mother's death, the pendant should be "passed on" on the basis of age. The first year, I had possession, then it was passed on to my oldest niece (hers for a year, whether she wore it or stored it), then to my nephew, for the use of his wife and/or daughter, then to my youngest niece, and finally back to me.

The process will be repeated — I hope to eternity — among grandchildren, great-grandchildren, ad infinitum.

Certainly it makes possession of the coveted pendant far more valuable for a limited time than if it belonged to any one of us permanently and resulted in hard feelings. — IN LUCK IN COLORADO

DEAR IN LUCK: Thanks for an excellent idea. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Tangibles often cause more problems than they're worth. I had three sisters and two brothers tearing each other's eyes out over a silver teapot. When they discovered it was pewter and worth about $15, they lost interest. — SFM IN NYC

DEAR ABBY: I can feel for that 83-year-old woman who didn't know how to leave one ring to two equally deserving daughters.

I had the same problem with one ring and three deserving daughters. My solution: I took the ring to a reliable jeweler, had him refinish it to look like new, then I had him make two copies. I put them in separate boxes and gave one to each daughter. No one had hurt feelings, and no one knows who has the original. — PROBLEM SOLVED

DEAR ABBY: A number of years ago, we bought a home in a nice, quiet, high-class neighborhood. Now one of our neighbors has made it look like a cheap flea market! She has one yard sale after another, which brings a lot of people in front of my house as well as hers.

Believe me, she doesn't need the money. The traffic is annoying, and so is the noise. And it looks terrible!

Last summer she started selling vegetables from their small backyard garden, with signs all over the yard. Now I think this is really tacky!

I am annoyed! What can I do outside of filing a complaint with the city? I am told by other neighbors that this enterprising neighbor manages to stay just within the law. — LOVE THY NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: If your enterprising neighbor manages to stay within the law, there is nothing you can do. Ask a lawyer if a yard sale qualifies as "an attractive nuisance."

DEAR ABBY: What should a woman do when a man gives her an engagement ring while proposing marriage, and she doesn't like the ring? Don't get me wrong, I love the man, but I don't care for the ring. Must I wear the ring the rest of my life and not let on that I don't like it? Or should I ask him, as tactfully as possible, to exchange it for a style more in keeping with my taste?

I've heard several opinions. My mother said she'd kill me if I opened my mouth. — CONFUSED IN QUEENS

DEAR CONFUSED: Be honest with him. Tell him you love him and know he wants to please you, so if it's possible to exchange the ring, you'd like to go with him and select one more in keeping with your taste. And tell your mama that Abby says if you're old enough to take a husband, you're old enough to make your own decisions.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

By LINDA TRUITT

The Statue of Liberty will be 100 years old in 1986. Those interested in preserving the Statue and Ellis Island are trying to raise $230 million by July 4, 1986. Plans are to have the Statue ready for a centennial celebration.

Many citizens have considered contributing to the restoration, but if they aren't careful, their donations may go into the wrong pockets without benefiting the Statue at all.

This information about three fund-raising efforts may be helpful for those who participate in the restoration:

— The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation was formed in 1981 "to restore, preserve and protect the Statue itself, and American Museum of Immigration and Ellis Island." In 1983 the Foundation signed an agreement with the Department of the Interior (responsible for maintaining the Statue through the National Park Service) making it the primary fundraiser. Of the more than $19 million raised by the Foundation in 1983-84, 96 percent came from contributions. Twenty-four percent of that amount was spent on administration and fund raising, 32 percent on program services and 44 percent was not spent.

Contributions to the Foundation are deductible as charitable donations for federal income tax purposes and can be sent to P.O. Box 1986, New York, N.Y. 10018.

— Donations made to "We Can Help" were not tax deductible since the IRS does not recognize the organization as a charity. Promoters claimed the organization was working with the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, but since the Foundation does not contract with outside organizations to raise money, it does not control how much of each donation it will receive, if any.

— National Historic Mint, a New York-based mail order firm, has been advertising locally that we can "Help Save the Lady" by ordering the "...Statue of Liberty Double Eagle Commemorative..." for $18. The ad claims that for each commemorative sold a donation of $1 would be made to the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation.

The Ellis Island Foundation has stated that "no funds generated as a result of their unauthorized promotions, which capitalize on the Foundation's restoration efforts, will be accepted." National Historic Mint sent the Foundation a check for $100,000, which was returned with a statement that additional contributions would also be returned.

The company also made a $150,000 donation to the Department of Interior, National Park Service, which was inadvertantly accepted for deposit. The Department has indicated a reimbursement check would be issued to National Historic Mint since it is the Department's policy not to accept donations for restoration of the Statue of Liberty generated by commercial solicitations unless the solicitation is conducted in participation with the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation. The company has indicated it will not accept the return of its donation.

Battle against roaches continues

By ANITA LEWIS
Hearst News Service

It's scant comfort to realize that only seven of the more than 50 different kinds of roaches that thrive in the United States prefer to live indoors, particularly when one realizes that a healthy pair of German roaches (which along with the brown-banded roach are the most common roach pests) can produce 100,000 little ones in a year. And they can go without food for weeks.

"You can't starve them out," says University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Agent Pamela King. "They eat practically anything, live on things people don't. But you don't have to ~~have them~~ everywhere. If you spot one or two a week, that's not a major problem. But if you play Roach-a-Rama — turn on the lights and hit them with a broom, that's another matter."

And if by chance you spot an albino roach, you've got real trouble. These devils, who have just shed their skin, choose to go public because all the hidey-holes already are filled up with squatting relatives.

Brown-banded roaches are light-brown and mottled, one-half inch long when mature. The German cockroach is black or dark brown and one inch to one-and-a-quarter inches long. Both are apt to live and breed anywhere in the house, but the German roach prefers kitchens and bathrooms.

THE FEMALE German carries an egg capsule with 36 offspring for about a month, dropping it just before the eggs hatch. Other types carry their egg capsules for only a day or two, then glue them to some object in a protected place. About a dozen roaches hatch from each of these capsules after incubating for one to three months.

King is a firm believer in "cleanliness is next to roachlessness. The more clutter you have, the more places they have to hide."

Clean first and spray second, she advises, expressing concern that insecticides often are used indiscriminately around children, pets and food. Clean every nook and cranny to find nesting spots, she says, and then eradicate with insecticides.

Along with cleaning out cupboards, closets, drawers, bookcases and virtually every conceivable indoor harborage, you also must seal off your territory. Cockroaches can invade from outdoors, in infested containers or from adjoining homes or apartments. Ideally, all cracks in floors, walls, baseboards and door frames need to be sealed with putty or plastic wood.

ONCE YOU'VE sealed off entry points, it's time to find the hidey-holes and nests. Enter a dark room quietly, turn on the lights and watch where the roaches run. Some favorite hiding places are: Around the kitchen sink and drainboard; in cracks around or underneath cupboards and cabinets, or inside them, especially in top corners; around pipes or conduits, where they pass along the wall or go through it; inside the motor compartment of refrigerators; behind mirrors and on closet and bookcase shelves.

Also keep a lookout for signs of silverfish and firebats. They are partial to foods high in protein, sugar and starch, and delight in cereals, moist wheat flour or any paper that contains glue or paste, as well as sizing in paper (check the wallpaper) and bookbindings. They're also fond of starch in clothing and rayon fabrics. Unfortunately, these critters can go without food for months and the females are ready to lay eggs in any season.

Both silverfish and firebats are slender and wingless and are covered with scales. Both have two long, slender feelers at their head and three long, tail-like legs at their hind end. Each rear appendage is nearly as long as the body. They are active at night and hide during the day.

ONCE YOU'VE located nests and favorite foraging routes, you'll probably need to spray. But go easy. Liquid insecticide pump sprays are better and safer to apply than aerosols. Effective insecticides against roaches include chlorpyrifos (Dursban), diazinon, malathion, propoxur and ronnel. For silverfish and firebats, you can use propoxur, chlordane, diazinon, linane, malathion or ronnel.

All except the last two should be used to treat limited areas only. Don't treat entire floors, walls or ceilings. Rather, apply pesticides only along baseboards, under cupboards and where roaches and other pests hide. Avoid treating any surface where food is prepared and don't use insecticide in storage spaces that contain food.

Before spraying, take food off shelves and remove drawers so that food and utensils won't be contaminated. Apply enough to moisten surfaces thoroughly, but not so much that it drips or runs. Use a paintbrush for cracks along baseboards. Before replacing food and dishes in cabinets, allow the spray to dry. Carefully wash shelf surfaces, avoiding removing insecticide from the cracks, or cover shelves with paper before replacing items.

One discouraging note: Many roaches have built up resistance or immunity to common poisons.

EXPERTS DON'T recommend boric acid or Borax. These act slowly, are less effective than other insecticides and are usually more successful in places where there is little else for the roaches to eat, such as office buildings.

One new line of defense is the bait trap. The makers of COMBAT Roach Control System, which appeared on the market about a month ago after 10 years and $15 million in research, claim it is an odorless, inexpensive ($3 for 12 traps) "feeding station" that attracts bugs with its sweet, greasy, poison-laden "cookie." A day or two after feasting on the cookie the roaches die. The dozen cookies last about three months.

The inventor claims tests show it works in from 80 percent to 99 percent of cases. The University of Maryland is currently testing its effectiveness.

Study links clove cigarette ingredient with toxic effects

By DENNIS MCLELLAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Preliminary results of an ongoing study of the possible toxic effects of smoking clove cigarettes show that eugenol — the major component of cloves — can be lethal to animals when administered directly into the lung, the Los Angeles Times has learned.

The independent study by the American Health Foundation in Valhalla, N.Y., provides the first scientific report that links eugenol with observations by physicians on the toxicity of the faddish, pungent-smelling imported cigarettes from Indonesia.

Between March 1984 and May 1985, the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta reported, it recorded 12 cases of severe illness possibly associated with smoking clove cigarettes.

(The CDC did not mention the case of Tim Cislaw, a 17-year-old Newport Harbor, Calif., high school student who developed shortness of breath shortly after smoking a clove cigarette early last year and eventually died of respiratory failure. In March, Cislaw's parents filed a $25 million lawsuit claiming that the sellers, makers and importers were, among other things, negligent in supplying "dangerous and defective" cigarettes.)

SYMPTOMS IN THE 11 patients who were hospitalized, according to a CDC report, included pulmonary edema (blood- or fluid-filled lungs), bronchospasm (a constriction of the air passageway) and hemoptysis (coughing up blood).

Minor symptoms reported to the CDC include nausea and vomiting, increased incidence of respiratory tract infections, worsening of chronic bronchitis and increased incidence and severity of asthma attacks. Mild coughing up of blood, the report noted, has been reported with particular frequency.

"In a laboratory setting we've shown that symptoms reported by individuals who smoked clove cigarettes — such as spitting up of blood and bronchopneumonia — can also be observed with animals that have been treated with eugenol," said Edmond LaVoie, associate division chief of environmental carcinogens at the American Health Foundation, a nonprofit, independent research foundation funded primarily through the National Institutes of Health.

"We found extensive damage occurring to the lungs of the animals in which we have instilled various doses of eugenol," LaVoie said. "This provides further evidence that the toxic effects reported for some individuals may be related to the smoking of clove cigarettes."

LaVoie said the rats that died during the experiments generally died from hemorrhaging and a fluid build-up in the lungs. He declined to reveal what the lethal doses of eugenol are until the foundation has completed an additional study on other animals and has repeated its study on rats.

THE RODENTS in the study were given various doses of eugenol into the lung via the trachea, which LaVoie acknowledges is not the same as inhalation. Although the study also will include experiments on inhalation of eugenol, LaVoie said that administering eugenol through the trachea is "one of the most direct routes we have available for determining the possible toxic effects of a chemical in lung tissues for small rodents.

"The fact that we see such evident toxicity certainly raises a great deal of concern regarding the health effects of clove cigarettes."

Dr. Sue Binder, a medical epidemiologist for the Center for Environmental Health at the Centers for Disease Control, acknowledged that "the findings that have been described to me suggest the symptoms of these animals are similar to what has been described in some of the cases that have been reported to us."

But, she said, the study's preliminary findings don't "prove that the diseases observed in the cases reported to us are caused by smoking clove cigarettes."

"ANIMAL EXPERIMENTS can be very useful in indicating possible toxic effects of chemicals in man," she said, noting, however, that rodents may have different susceptibilities than man and that the way eugenol was administered in the study was through the trachea and not by inhalation of cigarette smoke.

"Therefore," she said, "the results of these small animal experiments do not prove that eugenol caused the illness in our reported cases but suggest it may have been responsible."

LaVoie agreed that the study does not prove that eugenol caused the illnesses reported to the CDC but, he said, "I think with the information in hand — the CDC report and the additional data we have — you're getting to the point where there's enough information where there may be an issue of responsibility and possibly liability. The health effects of clove cigarettes are being questioned.

"With regard to the possibility of a difference between administration through the trachea versus inhalation, when you see an acute toxic effect by tracheal administration one cannot ignore the likelihood that a similar effect is likely to occur by inhalation. In each instance you're hitting the same target tissue."

CLOVE CIGARETTES — also known as kreteks — have been sold in the United States since the late 1960s, but it wasn't until about four years ago that they became a fad, and imports jumped from an estimated 15 million in 1980 to about 150 million in 1984, according to industry sources. (Clove cigarette sales still are relatively insignificant compared to the estimated 650 billion conventional cigarettes sold in the U.S. annually.)

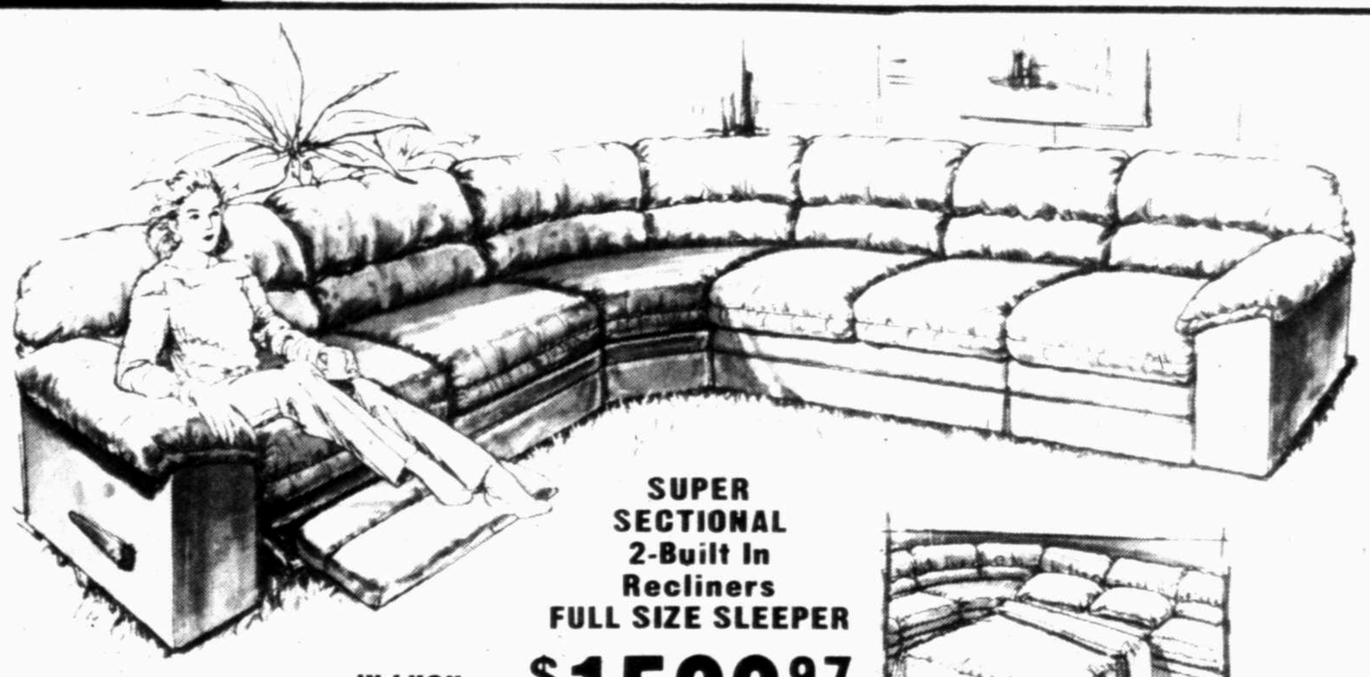

Although considered by many smokers to be a low-tobacco substitute for conventional cigarettes, the imports actually contain about 60 percent tobacco and about 40 percent cloves — and almost twice as much tar and nicotine as moderate tar American cigarettes.

Eugenol, a chemical that serves as a weak anesthetic and has been used by dentists as a pain reliever, is listed on the Food and Drug Administration's "Generally Recognized as Safe" list of substances. It is, however, only presumed safe when consumed orally in its unburned form. Little is known of its safety when burned in a cigarette.

PANOS GEORGOPULO, president of G.A. Georgopulo and Co., a New York clove cigarette importer, said he could not comment on the American Health Foundation's preliminary findings because he hasn't seen a report of the study. "We have to know how the tests were conducted and a lot of imponderables," he said.

Official: Report suppressed in WWII internment case

SEATTLE (AP) — The U.S. War Department suppressed evidence that the detention of Japanese-Americans during World War II was unnecessary, a former government official testified in a trial that could determine the constitutionality of the internments.

Edward Ennis, a Justice Department official, said the department had prepared two versions of a report used in arguments before the Supreme Court.

The War Department withheld one version, citing national security, and made the other version available to Justice Department. The testimony came in the case of Gordon Hirabayashi, a Seattle native convicted in 1942 of failing to obey a curfew for Japanese-Americans and failing to register for evacuation to an internment caop.

The U.S. Supreme Court upheld those convictions a year later.

Hirabayashi is now before U.S. District Judge Donald Voorhees, seeking to have his convictions overturned and to win a judicial review to explain how and why the evacuations and internment of Japanese-Americans occurred.

Much of his case is based on documents obtained through the Freedom of Information Act. Hirabayashi's lawyers, Camden Hall and Rodney Kawakami, say the documents prove the government altered or suppressed information.

Hall questioned Ennis Wednesday about differences in two versions of a report by Army Gen. John L. DeWitt, commander of the western military command, outlining the military's reasons for supporting evacuation of Japanese-Americans.

Justice Department lawyers had argued before the Supreme Court that internment of all Japanese-Americans was necessary because there wasn't enough time for individual hearings to determine which ones might be security risks.

But an earlier version of the DeWitt report said time was not a factor and that the evacuations were ordered because there was no way to separate loyal from disloyal Japanese-Americans.

Ennis testified he did not know of the existence of the earlier version of the report until this week. He said documents were "deliberately withheld from us" by the War Department on grounds that they were classified.

The argument that time was not a factor would have left the Justice Department in the position of arguing that due process could be denied solely because some dangerous people might be among the multitude. That, Ennis said, "is a very dangerous position to take before the Supreme Court."

Earlier, he had testified that the federal government failed to tell the Supreme Court about intelligence reports indicating that mass evacuations and internments weren't necessary.

Ennis said he wrote a memo to then-Solicitor General Charles Fahy suggesting the information be included in briefs to the high court. Failure to do so, he wrote, might be considered "suppression of evidence."

Senate panel delays action on Reynolds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 17-0 today to postpone action on the nomination of William Bradford Reynolds as associate attorney general.

The move came after it became clear that votes were lacking to send the nomination to the Senate floor with a favorable recommendation.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a strong supporter of Reynolds, moved to report the nomination to the Senate without a recommendation. But ranking Democrat Joseph Biden Jr. of Delaware countered with the successful motion to postpone the vote for a week.

Biden said he did not want the panel to send the nomination on to the floor unless it voted on a favorable or negative recommendation.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said the president had no plans to withdraw the Reynolds nomination.

The Republicans, who control the committee 10-8, lost their advantage when Sen. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania said he would not vote for a favorable recommendation of Reynolds but would support a motion to report the nomination without a recommendation.

Specter, who acknowledged he was under pressure from the Reagan administration to support the nominee, told his colleagues, "The full Senate should be allowed to speak."

Specter said he was "very much concerned" with Reynolds' sworn testimony before the committee which Specter said was misleading.

He specifically cited several examples where Reynolds did not testify completely about his position in several legal cases involving the civil rights division he headed.

Specter said he also was concerned that Reynolds "has by pattern placed himself above the law" by asking more than 50 jurisdictions to modify consent decrees because of his interpretation of a Supreme Court ruling — an interpretation that has been rejected by three federal circuit courts.

Study finds link between 'legitimate violence,' rape

DURHAM, N.H. (AP) — Western states have the highest levels both of "legitimate violence" and of rape, while the Northeast has the lowest, say two researchers who link acceptable, non-criminal violence and rape.

"A social climate which endorses the use of physical force to attain socially approved ends is definitely a factor in the incidence of at least one violent crime — rape," said Murray Straus of the University of New Hampshire.

Straus and Yale University sociologist Larry Baron devised what they call a state's "violence index," including corporal punishment in schools, National Guard enrollment and spending, popularity of violent TV shows and violence-oriented magazines and the ratio of executions to murders.

Straus and Baron said they found the highest levels of "legitimate violence" and the highest number of rapes per 100,000 people in the West and the lowest levels in the Northeast. The South was second in both.

The results do not mean necessarily that people who read violent magazines or favor capital punishment also are likely to be rapists, Straus said. But he said the more a society accepts physical violence as a means to a legitimate end, the greater the likelihood "that this legitimation of force will be generalized to other spheres of life where force is not socially approved."

Baron said Wednesday that the study represented the final chapters in a book on rape. The two researchers have been studying rape statistics for about three years "to see if we can understand and predict and perhaps make recommendations how to prevent rape," he said.

"Our main objective was to see why there is such wide state distribution on crime, especially the crime of rape," he said. "It really is incredible.

"Most people, I bet, believe that it's the same about everywhere, that if you're a woman you're as likely to be raped in Rhode Island as in Colorado, but that just isn't true.

"There is a remarkable difference among states in rape and we are trying to find out the reasons."

Straus and Baron said that four of the top 10 states in reported rapes — Nevada, Florida, Colorado and Louisiana — also are in the top 10 in legitimate violence.

Seven of the 10 with the lowest rape rates show the lowest violence readings. They are Kentucky, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Iowa and Maine.

However, Utah, ranked first in legitimate violence, and Wyoming, ranked third, were 27th and 28th, respectively, in reported rapes.

Straus, director of the University of New Hampshire's Family Research Laboratory, said the findings were presented at a recent national conference of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The study used state-by-state Nielsen ratings for programs noted by the National Coalition on Television Violence as having the highest numbers of violent incidents — "Charlie's Angels," "Incredible Hulk," "Dukes of Hazzard" and "Fantasy Island."

Magazines considered in the index included Guns and Ammo, Heavy Metal and armed forces publications.

Cancer survival rates misleading

BOSTON (AP) — New evidence that earlier diagnosis of cancer artifically improves survival figures is "distressing," because it suggests that apparent advances in treatment of the disease are statistical illusions, a study today concludes.

Researchers found little difference in the survival of people treated for lung cancer over the past 30 years, even though new techniques that spot the disease sooner make it seem as though victims live longer.

"These results are distressing because they suggest that the contemporary improvement of survival rates, at least among patients with lung cancer, is a statistical artifact," the researchers wrote.

Lung cancer is the nation's biggest cancer killer. It will take the lives of an estimated 126,000 people this year.

Figures compiled by the National Cancer Institute seem to show that the survival of lung cancer victims is improving. In the early 1960s, 8 percent of white victims and 5 percent of blacks survived for five years. By the early 1980s, this had risen to 13 percent for whites and 11 percent for blacks.

Black elected to AMA board

CHICAGO (AP) — Election of the first black to the American Medical Association's board of trustees is a landmark for the AMA and will lead to more minority participation in the 260,000-member organization, AMA delegates say.

Dr. Lonnie R. Bristow, a specialist in internal medicine from Berkeley, Calif., on Wednesday became one of 14 trustees, who oversee a $125 million annual budget.

"I think it's a landmark," said Dr. Audley F. Connor Jr., a delegate from Chicago. "The fact that he won on the first ballot means he pretty well had a majority. What was surprising to me was the support he had from the South, the Southeast and the Southwest parts of the country."

Dr. Roland A. Gandy Jr., also black and an AMA alternate delegate from Toledo, Ohio, agreed. "When you go back in history, we couldn't even belong to the county societies — and therefore were not eligible to belong to the AMA — in the Southern states, as little as 20 years ago," Gandy said.

"For this reason, blacks to this day do not really belong to the AMA in large numbers. I think the doors are open now," he said.

Mayors attack Reagan budget

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The nation's mayors shelved party differences to attack President Reagan's budget and tax proposals, saying the plan would leave cities floundering financially.

"I think our messages are clearer than they have been for a long, long time because we are more together on the issues than we have been for a long, long time," said New Orleans Mayor Ernest Morial, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

The mayors, at the end of their five-day meeting here, urged Congress Wednesday not to forget the cities as it considers Reagan's proposals.

The 160 mayors approved resolutions urging Congress to continue three programs that Reagan wants to cut: deductions for state and local taxes on federal personal income tax, general revenue sharing, and the tax-exempt status of municipal development bonds.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
STATE OF TEXAS

To all persons interested in the Estate of Nathan A. Smith, Deceased, No. 7947, in the County Court of Midland County, Texas:

On June 19, 1985, Ralph C. Smith filed an Application for Determination of Heirship and Issuance of Letters of Administration in the above entitled and numbered cause, and requested that the Court determine the heirs of Nathan A. Smith, Deceased, and their respective shares and interests in such estate.

The Application will be heard and acted on by the Court at 10:00 a.m. on the first Monday next after the expiration of ten days from date of publication of this citation, this being July 1, 1985, at the County Courthouse in Midland County, Texas. All persons interested in said estate are hereby cited to appear at or before the time set for said hearing by filing a written answer contesting such Application should they desire to do so. Said written answer should be filed in the office of the county Clerk of Midland County, Texas.

The officer serving this citation shall, in compliance with the law, serve it by publication once in a newspaper of general circulation in this, the county in which such proceeding is pending for not less than ten (10) days before the return day hereof, exclusive of the day of publication, and the date of publication said newspaper bears shall be the day of publication.

If this citation is not served within ninety (90) days after the date of issuance, it shall be returned unserved.

GIVEN UNDER MY HAND AND SEAL OF OFFICE, this the 19th day of June, 1985, at office in Midland County, Texas.

ROSENELLE CHERRY
County Clerk of Midland County, Texas
