ALYN CHESSELET
Brands Suit "Ridiculous"

Rejected Romeo Sues For $38

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A young accountant says he would rather win back her heart than win his $38 suit against a cocktail waitress who broke a date.

But Alyn Chesselet wouldn't agree to a date with Tom Horsley anywhere — except in small claims court, which is where they met Monday night. A judge heard each side and will rule later.

Armed with a red cardboard painting of a broken heart, the 30-year-old Horsley hauled the woman he says he still loves to court, demanding that she reimburse him for the time and travel expenses he invested in their date.

He calls his date with Miss Chesselet, 31, an oral contract. They had agreed to go to see the musical "The Wiz" together last February. He went to the musical alone and sold her ticket at the box office.

Miss Chesselet came to court accompanied by two male friends. "I'm jealous even now," Horsley said with a sigh.

"It's just ridiculous," said Miss Chesselet, who claims Horsley has been harassing her ever since they met as students in Mexico 13 years ago.

Horsley, who lives in Campbell and works outside of San Jose, wants to be paid 17 cents a mile for the 100-mile round trip to San Francisco, as well as $8.50 an hour for the two hours he wasted. He also feels Miss Chesselet should reimburse him for the $4 court fee.

"If he wins his case, women will be wary to accept dates. It will ruin a lot of people's social lives," Miss Chesselet argued.

There were pre-court insults. "He was verbally abusive," said Miss Chesselet, a waitress at Vesuvio Cafe.

"She was cold and cruel and deliberately broke the date in person to make me madder," said Horsley, a thin, bearded man. "I don't like to be taken advantage of."

In court, they were polite.

Judge Richard Figone, who will send each a copy of his written decision, looked puzzled and at times angry. "I hope someone has some legal basis for this," he told Horsley when the accountant presented Exhibit A, the cardboard broken heart.

The pair met in Mexico, when they were both studying Spanish. They parted in 1967 when she broke a date to a football game and sent him "a nasty, really nasty Halloween card," Horsley said.

Why did he pursue her again?

"I still love her as a person. She's attractive, intelligent, has a magnetic personality," he said, and sighed again.

The only quality Miss Chesselet said she finds in Horsley is his persistence. And that, she added, is annoying.

Coalition To Fight Oil Fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's efforts to meet the energy goals he outlined last week at the Bonn economic summit face a new challenge in the House, where support is growing to prohibit him from imposing oil import fees.

With a coalition of Republicans, oil-state Democrats and East Coast congressmen apparently strong enough to push through the ban over White House objections, a scheduled House vote today on the issue was called off.

The import-fee ban has already been approved by the Senate.

Meanwhile today, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., pressured the Senate to resist the stalling tactics of Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., a determined opponent of the measure to lift price controls on natural gas.

Abourezk, who vowed to continue the parliamentary maneuvering that slowed Senate action to a crawl on Monday, was not on the floor when the Senate convened today.

He had succeeded Monday in forcing the Senate to take more than eight hours to deal with a measure that otherwise might have taken less than two. He did so by objecting to the unanimous consent requests by which Senate business routinely is expedited and by demanding roll calls on non-controversial proposals.

Angered by the stalling, Byrd lectured the Senate today about "epidemic of filibusters" and the need to deal with the energy legislation. He warned that he would call Saturday sessions and possibly bring the Senate back after the November elections.

Byrd condemned the "inordinate, unreasonable tactics we saw practiced yesterday" and said that "if Congress doesn't act on this energy bill, the American people are going to hold Congress responsible."

Abourezk's stalling tactics Monday were to protest the scheduling by Senate leaders of natural gas deregulation legislation for next week — a measure Abourezk has fought heatedly for months.

He accused leaders of deliberately holding up two relatively minor but politically popular parts of Carter's 15-month-old energy plan — dealing with energy conservation and electric rate-setting — to increase pressure on the Senate to pass the proposed natural gas compromise.

So he decided not to wait until the gas compromise gets to the floor to begin his long-promised filibuster, saying, "I'm told that if you want to stop a building, you start with the foundation."

On the oil import issue, aides to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill estimated that despite an intensive last-minute lobbying attempt, the White House appears between 30 and 40 votes short of blocking the move by Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, to ban any import fee.

The administration had threatened an import fee of up to $6 a 42-gallon barrel if Congress were to recess for the year without enacting the president's proposed crude oil tax, which has been pronounced "dead" by a number of key senators.

The Senate last month approved an amendment by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., to a Treasury Department bill prohibiting Carter from using Treasury funds to impose or enforce an import fee.

This prohibition was not in the House-passed version of the Treasury bill.

Official Expects Food Price Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices are leveling off but probably will finish the year 10 percent higher than in 1977, the president's chief wage-and-price adviser said today.

For the three-person family of an average urban wage-earner, that would mean a weekly grocery bill about $5 larger than last year's $49.66 a week.

"Fortunately, the rapid rate of food-price inflation which we have experienced thus far this year is not expected to continue and the worst seems behind us," said Barry P. Bosworth, director of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability.

"It will be difficult, however to compensate for the large increases which have already taken place," Bosworth told the Agriculture Committee's subcommittee on domestic marketing, consumer relations and nutrition.

He said sugar prices have been rising rapidly because of the domestic price-support program that holds the price of sugar at twice the world price. He urged the panel not to "exacerbate this problem by enacting a new sugar program which would be even more inflationary."

Howard W. Hjort, chief economist at the Agriculture Department, said the weekly increase in the average grocery bill could be as little as $4.

Subcommittee Chairman Frederick W. Richmond, D-N.Y., said that food prices are the most visible evidence of inflation. For the poor and those on fixed incomes, he said, "the trip to the market has become a regular exercise in disbelief, shock and, all too often, self-denial."

House Sets Vote On Tax Changes

AUSTIN (AP) — Both houses of the Texas Legislature worked today on compromise packages they hope will bring an early end to the special session.

The House was in recess after the House Constitutional Amendments Committee finally approved late Monday night a much-diluted version of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's property tax relief program. The measure is ready for debate when the House reconvenes Wednesday and leaders planned a speedy vote.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said today that the Senate might debate as early as Wednesday afternoon a package, similar to the House plan, that he thought would have "overwhelmingly support of the Senate. I have talked to more than two-thirds of the Senate and they are for it."

Final decision on both packages, if approved by the Legislature, would be up to Texas voters in the Nov. 7 general election.

Hobby said the Senate measure, introduced today by Sen. A.M. Aikin, D-Paris, probably would be co-sponsored by at least 20 of the 31 senators.

Hobby said the Senate plan would call for a change in the state constitution to eliminate mandatory assessment of intangible property, plus a guarantee that household goods would be exempt.

He said he would provide for assessment of agriculture land according to productivity. It would allow a $5,000 exemption for school taxes on all homesteads, plus another $10,000 for those over 65. Taxes on homesteads occupied by those over 65 could be frozen at current rates. There would be a "truth-in-taxation" provision to guarantee taxpayers plenty of notice of any planned tax increases.

Hobby said both the Senate and House plans had been discussed with Briscoe. "He said he wanted to study them," Hobby said.

Earlier Speaker Bill Clayton said he hoped Briscoe would support the tax relief package approved by the House committee.

The proposal approved by the House Constitutional Amendments Committee will go before the entire House Wednesday morning.

"I sure would like for him to" accept the constitutional amendments package, Clayton said of the governor.

"It is a good package. It includes relief to homeownwers and the elderly, rolls back tax increases, takes care of the intangibles situation and deals with agricultural values," the speaker said after seeing the House Calendars Committee set the measure for floor debate.

Clayton said he intended to talk to the governor some time today. "We should get an indication from him" today, the speaker said.

The governor cannot veto a proposed constitutional amendment, but Briscoe could call another special legislative session if he does not believe lawmakers have gone far enough in providing the property tax relief he has requested.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee approved the measure, 8-0, shortly before 10 p.m. Monday, but only after making a drastic change.

Key features of the proposal include:

— Taxation of agricultural land according to its productive capacity rather than its value on the real estate market, a step recommended by Briscoe.

— Elimination of an old and unused provision that subjects intangibles, such as bank accounts, stocks and bonds, to property taxation.

— A requirement that a majority of the Legislature — not just those present and voting — approve any bill adding new taxes. Briscoe wanted an almost impossible two-thirds majority.

— A "truth-in-taxation" provision. Local taxes could not be increased without

Sadat Snubs Begin Offer

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat rejected a message from Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin that reportedly called for a summit meeting between them and summoned the National Security Council into emergency session on Wednesday.

Sadat's rejection of the Israeli letter, contents of which were undisclosed, coincided with Begin's first public offer to discuss Arab sovereignty of the West Bank and Gaza Strip following a five-year transitional period.

The meeting Wednesday of Sadat's National Security Council will discuss the status of the peace efforts in advance of U.S. envoy Alfred Atherton's visit to Cairo Friday.

Atherton, shuttling between Middle East countries this week, is attempting to set the groundwork for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's visit to the region early next month.

Officials said Begin's message reached Cairo around midnight Sunday "but the government excused itself from accepting it."

The message apparently outlined Israel's latest position, as decided by the Israeli cabinet, and urged the resumption of high-level talks, preferably between Sadat and Begin.

At a six-hour meeting Sunday, the Israeli cabinet rejected an Egyptian call for the return of Mount Sinai and the town of El Arish, and said this could be done only if Egypt made a "reciprocal gesture."

A high official, quoted by the newspaper Al Ahram, said Begin's "message was a mere reiteration of the Iscaeli statements of the past few days and, therefore, it was not a message in the true sense of the word."

Egypt was disappointed by the Israeli stand. Radio Cairo called it "contemptible arrogance and unprecedented political rudeness."

Begin told Parliament Monday Israel would be willing to discuss territorial compromise and Arab sovereignty on the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip five years after the signing of a peace treaty.

This appeared to be a softening of the govenment stand, but Begin said Sunday that Cairo rejects territorial compromise and wants Israel to give back all the occupied land.

Begin said Monday Israel is ready to negotiate a state of peace relations if the Arabs do not want an overall peace settlement. But he said there would be no one-sided concessions to get the talks going.

Storms Hit Wide Area Of Nation

A-J News Services

Thunderstorms that spawned more than a dozen tornadoes in North Dakota moved into Minnesota early today, bringing large hail and fierce winds. Twisters were sighted at Crookston and Warren, Minn., but no injuries were reported.

Meanwhile, Phoenix counted heavy damage resulting from a severe thunderstorm late Monday which shattered large plate-glass windows at the city's major airport terminal and seriously injured at least 14 persons. Nearly a dozen private aircraft were damaged or destroyed.

Summer returned to Lubbock and the South Plains today after Monday brought a respite from weeks of kiln-like heat and a brief reminder that fall is on the way.

The high was 86 degrees Monday, followed by a 69-degree low this morning in Lubbock, but the forecast called for temperatures in the mid-90s today and Wednesday and the low 70s tonight.

Skies were predicted to be clear to partly cloudy today and Wednesday and winds southerly at 10 to 15 mph today and five to 10 mph tonight.

"All was pleasantly quiet over the big state of Texas last night," the National Weather Service in Lubbock reported this morning.

Rain fell overnight at El Paso and along the Lower Gulf Coast.

The Texas sky was clear at daybreak today.

Area temperatures Monday ranged from 95 at Matador and 96 at Paducah to 83 at Morton and Dimmitt.

Senate Candidate Pregnant

BOSTON (AP) — "We want the people of Massachusetts to be the second to know."

MRS. ALIOTO

So read a public notice of expectancy from Kathleen Sullivan Alioto, a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, and her husband, former San Francisco Mayor Joe Alioto.

"My husband Joe and I are delighted to announce that a new Sullivan Alioto is due to arrive in February 1979," read the hand-written note, signed by Mrs. Alioto and delivered to the media Monday.

The Aliotos were married in February. It was the first marriage for Mrs. Alioto, 34, and the second for her 62-year-old husband.

Mrs. Alioto, a candidate for the seat now held by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., is a member of the Boston School Committee and is the daughter of Billy Sullivan, president of the New England Patriots of the National Football League.

Desai Doesn't Want Peace Corps

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Lillian Carter, a former Peace Corps volunteer in India, has been told by Prime Minister Morarji Desai that his nation doesn't want the organization to resume its activities there.

DESAI

A letter to the president's mother, released Monday by Desai's office, voiced the south Asian nation's desire to be self-reliant.

"We are fully aware and appreciative of the work that the Peace Corps has done in India and elsewhere," the 82-year-old prime minister wrote to the 79-year-old Mrs. Carter. "But I am sure you will agree that in the present state of awakening in the country and zeal for service which has been generated all round, we would like to do the work ourselves rather than secure manpower assistance from outside."

In the early 1970s, the Peace Corps had been accused in parliamentary debates here of links to the CIA.

Mrs. Carter, who served as a volunteer 11 years ago, gave advice on birth control at a clinic near Bombay.

On a happier note, Desai said he was glad to hear Mrs. Carter liked the sari he took to Washington for her during his mid-June visit. He said she has a standing invitation to "be our guest" in India.

Uris Cancels Trip In Protest

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Leon Uris and his photographer wife, Jill, have canceled plans to visit Russia this fall to protest the trials of Soviet dissidents, which Uris called "repugnant even by barbaric Soviet standards of justice."

Uris said in a message Thursday to his publisher, Doubleday & Co. Inc., that he would visit Russia only if he had "complete freedom to visit dissidents."

"Under present conditions," he said, "my presence could only add to the misery and danger of those courageous souls."

Uris, the author of such best-selling books as "Trinity" and "Exodus," and his wife are in Israel, where they are researching their next two books.

Kirbo Defends President

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter's image as an indecisive leader "is just the reverse of what he is and how he makes decisions," according to Charles H. Kirbo, the president's longtime friend and unofficial adviser.

KIRBO

Kirbo is described in the July 22 issue of National Journal as an unpretentious man whose old-fashioned courtliness and self-deprecating wit belies the power he wields behind the throne of the Carter presidency.

According to the article, the president turned to Kirbo for advice in the Bert Lance affair, the selection of Walter Mondale as his vice presidential runningmate and other decisions.

Kirbo, a partner in one of the largest and most prestigious law firms in the South, said in the magazine interview that Carter "insists that the public, the press and everybody else be informed about matters and that they be debated in public; therein, I think, is where he gets criticism for being indecisive."

Luckenbach To Offer Advice

LUCKENBACH (AP) — Rest easy Big Apple, delegation from Luckenbach — population 3 — is going to New York City to offer advice to Mayor Edward Koch on the city's fiscal problems.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

A group of Texans who sometimes hang out in Luckenbach will meet Aug. 22-24 at a Fifth Avenue cafe, where they'll offer Koch their services as consultants — tongue-in-cheek, of course.

"Mayor Koch will be relieved to know that we have written to Senator (William) Proxmire, who was honored with an official Luckenbach national flag, and asked him to lay off the Big Apple. We assured him Luckenbach can straighten it out," said Jack Harmon, self-appointed press secretary for the storied Hill Country town.

"Luckenbach is experienced with problems of growth. We're coping with ours. This year we had to add a double parking meter and we're putting in six flush toilets without any federal aid. It's the only way to go," Harmon added.

MISS UNIVERSE 1978 — Miss South Africa, Margaret Gardiner, wears the crown she received after being named Miss Universe 1978 in Acapulco, Mexico, Monday night. (AP Laserphoto)

Teen Wins Universe Crown

ACAPULCO, Mexico (UPI) — Miss South Africa — chestnut-haired, blue-eyed Margaret Gardiner, 18, of Cape Town — is the new Miss Universe and the first African to win the title of the most beautiful woman in the world.

The statuesque model, poet and short story writer triumphed over 74 other hopefuls at the Acapulco Arena Monday night but was so surprised at her victory, she momentarily froze and was led to her wicker throne by Miss USA, who came in second.

Miss Lesotho, Joan Libuseng Khoali, charged early today the pageant was "unfairly judged."

"There were prettier girls, especially in regards to figure," she said.

Miss Khoali's homeland is adjacent to South Africa.

The silver crown was placed on Miss Gardiner's head by the 1977 Miss Universe, Janelle Gommissiong, Miss Trinidad and Tobago, the first black to win the title.

The 135-pound Miss Universe is 5-feet, 10½ inches tall — one of the tallest contestants in the pageant — and measures 38-28-38, the most naturally endowed.

She is a published poet and short story writer who plans to model until she is 21, then study journalism.

The first runner-up was Miss USA, Judi Andersen, 20, of Honolulu. The second runner-up was Miss Spain, 21-year-old Guillermina Ruiz, followed by Miss Colombia, Shirley Saenz, 18, and Miss Sweden, 17-year-old Cecilia Rodhe.

The other seven semifinalists were Misses Ireland, Israel, Holland, Mexico, Belgium, Peru and Chile.

Before the finals, Miss Gardiner said her life's ambition is "to represent my country internationally." She said the person she most admires is Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African surgeon who pioneered heart transplants.

The winner told UPI in an interview last week that a black could be chosen Miss South Africa if she "had the beauty, charm and intelligence."

She said the grueling contest had taught her to be patient and that "being a celebrity is hard work."

Miss Gardiner said she kept a diary during since her arrival in Mexico for the contest and plans to write an article on the experience.

Following a coronation dinner Monday night attended by the other Miss Universe contestants, Miss Gardiner's schedule today included a photograph session while she has breakfast in bed and a news conference in front of a waterfall at a hotel.

Before the final selection, the 75 Miss Universe contestants Monday night went through their chorus line routines and Mexican hat dance for the guests and reporters attending the pageant at the arena, which was decorated like a Mayan temple.

New Jersey Court Releases Reporter

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Myron Farber's indefinite jail term for contempt was cut off at just seven hours when a New Jersey Supreme Court justice stayed a sentence meant to coerce the New York Times reporter into releasing his notes on the "Dr. X" murder case.

The 40-year-old reporter was smiling as he left the Bergen County Courthouse with his attorneys Monday.

Justice Morris Pashman ordered Farber's release pending a review of the stay by the full court. He ordered him to surrender today to the Bergen County Sheriff pending court action.

Defense attorneys for Dr. Mario Jascalevich maintain that Farber's notes are essential to their case.

Farber's articles led Bergen County authorities to renew their investigation of a series of mysterious deaths at Riverdell Hospital in Oradell 12 years ago.

Jascalevich, referred to as Dr. X in Farber's stories, is on trial on charges he murdered five patients with the muscle relaxant curare. If convicted, he could face up to five consecutive life terms.

Farber and the Times were convicted Monday of civil and criminal contempt for defying a court order to surrender the notes for a confidential inspection by the trial judge, William Arnold.

Superior Court Judge Theodore Trautwein had ordered Farber jailed until he turned over the notes and fined $1,000 on the civil contempt. On the criminal contempt, he fined the reporter another $1,000 and sentenced him to six months in jail, to be served after the civil sentence was completed.

The Times received a $100,000 fine on the criminal contempt conviction and an additional fine of $5,000 for each day it failed to turn over the notes.

The criminal contempt, resulting from the defiance of Arnold's order to turn over the notes, was meant to be punitive. The civil contempt was aimed at forcing release of the notes.

Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, president and publisher of the Times, commented in New York, "The Times will of course support Myron Farber as he maintains the confidentiality of his sources. This is what a free press is all about. And, if Judge Trautwein decrees that the Times is to pay $5,000 a day for this privilege, so be it. Bad law doesn't last very long."

Pashman stayed the payment of the newspaper's civil penalty, but said it would continue to accrue until the Supreme Court acts.

Earlier Monday, a three-judge appellate panel sitting in Newark stayed the criminal penalties assessed against Farber and the newspaper.

"There is nothing in my notes that would establish the defendant's guilt or innocence for the trial court," Farber told the court before sentencing.

"What is at issue here is not Dr. Jascalevich's right to a fair trial ... nor is the issue my right to place myself above or outside the law. I have no such right and I seek none," he said.

"The issue, I believe, is the right of the public to be informed through its press in accordance with the First Amendment of the United States Constitution."

Unions Claim Poor Management At Conrail Costing Taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor management at Conrail is costing taxpayers millions of dollars a year in additional subsidies for the railroad, according to two unions.

Meanwhile, as members of the unions were testifying before a congressional committee Monday, the co-author of California's Proposition 13 objected at another hearing to heavy federal spending on Amtrak.

Amtrak provides government-subsidized passenger service while Conrail, also federally supported, primarily offers freight service along a 17,000-mile rail system in the Northeast and the Midwest.

Richard F. Morrett Jr., an engineman and member of the United Transportation Union, charged before a subcommittee of the House-Senate Economic Committee that Conrail management is guilty of "complete ineptness."

He said that in one case a train crew was transported more than 100 miles by cab from Fort Wayne, Ind., to Coleheur, Ind., where it began its work day.

That type activity was costing Conrail $165,000 a month in the Fort Wayne area for taxi service, Morrett said.

Paul Gann, co-author with Howard Jarvis of Proposition 13, which slashed property taxes in California, told a hearing of the Interstate Commerce Commission that it was "time to get Amtrak's hand out of the taxpayer's pocket."

Gann spoke at the 51st and final hearing the ICC has held around the nation on a plan to cut back Amtrak service by reducing the route structure from 27,000 to 18,900 miles.

Gann called for a national referendum or poll on Amtrak subsidies.

He said the cost of subsidizing Amtrak could be as much as $10 billion by 1982 and added that it's fine for people to take the train but they and not the taxpayer should pay for the ride.

"I was astonished to learn that Congress is now in the process of voting about $1.2 billion for fiscal year 1979 for Amtrak, and a provision which effectively blocks the Department of Transportation from restructuring the system to save taxpayer dollars," he said.

In the Conrail hearing, Albert A. Terriego, vice president of the Transport Workers Union, charged the railroad was making extensive use of outside contractors for work that could be done less expensively with railroad-owned euipment. In some cases, he said, Conrail winds up paying even though no work is performed.

He said his union has concluded that Conrail "is literally giving away an estimated $180 million yearly to outside contractors" for wreck-clearing work. Terriego said Conrail could perform the same work for $20 million a year, including $6.5 million to purchase 30 100-ton mobile cranes needed to clear wreck debris.

John L. Sweeney, a Conrail vice president, however, told the committee Conrail figures showed the railroad spent only $8.3 million last year to pay contractors for wreck-clearing work on its 17,000 mile system.

Sweeney said Conrail has its problems but denied allegations of widespread mismanagement.

Amtrak Machine Rivals John Henry

SOUTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — John Henry, the steel-drivin' man who battled new-fangled steam drills in ballads of praise, would have had an unbeatable adversary in the P-811, a $1.5 million track-laying machine that Amtrak hopes will smooth its rails and speed travel.

Amtrak plans to replace 75 miles of ties between Boston and New York this year, and a total of 424 miles between Boston and Washington by 1981.

The P-811, the nation's first such machine, was put on display Monday as it churned and chugged its way along a passenger line through southern Rhode Island's Great Swamp.

The bright orange giant, a quarter-mile long, carries a crew of 160.

"It permits you to take a really bad track and replace it. When it leaves, you have one of the best railroads in the world," said Louis Thompson, director of the Amtrak Northeast Corridor Improvement Project.

A century ago American balladeers, taken by the grandeur of the country's westward push on rails, praised the muscle of such characters of legend as John Henry, who vowed to die with his hammer in his hand competing with the steam-driven drill.

The words and lyrics came from the men known as gandy dancers, who worked up a mighty sweat with picks, hammers and crow bars as they hammered rails and sang songs.

The new diesel-powered machine doesn't sing, but it rips rails and ties from railbeds and replaces them as it chugs along.

The machine, which weighs about 168 tons, was built by the Canron Rail Group of Columbia, S.C. About 15 similar machines are in use in Europe, Canada and Australia.

Officials say the machine can replace track 3½ times as fast as workers can by hand. At top speed, it replaces a mile of track a day.

The tracks and other improvements on the New York-Washington run will cut the 3-hour, 20-minute train ride to 2 hours, 40 minutes by February 1981, Thompson said. The five-hour Boston-New York run will take 3 hours, 40 minutes.

Schedule changes will not be made for some time, but riders will notice the smoother road bed on the new ties immediately, railroad officials said.

The current work began at Wood River Junction in Richmond, R.I., June 26 and will finish in Readville, Mass., at the end of the year.

The P-811 lifts the metal rails slightly, spreads them apart to expose the ties, scoops up the ties with a large gear mechanism that looks like a waterwheel and drops in new concrete ties from a long conveyor belt.

The machine then pushes the rails back together, a worker drops a rubber pad between the rail and the concrete tie and the machine drops the rail down on the tie again.

Grain Reserve Continues Climb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The size of the nation's three-year, farmer-owned grain reserve has taken another climb upward, reaching a level of nearly 564 million bushels as of July 21, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

A week earlier, grains on reserve were nearly 552 million bushels.

This past week there were nearly 371 million bushels of wheat on reserve, 120 million bushels of corn, 29 million bushels of oats, 26 million bushels of barley and more than 17 million bushels of sorghum.

The grain reserve takes wheat and feed grains off the market for up to three years or until market prices reach levels of optional or mandatory release of reserves.

Victim Of Cerebral Palsy Soon To Be Millionaire

SEATTLE (AP) — John Ribelin, crippled by cerebral palsy since birth, felt left out when he was a youngster, so he turned to business and now is working on making his first million dollars.

"When I was in grade school I used to watch the other kids play baseball, basketball and football. I could never join them," recalled Ribelin, 24. "Then I discovered I could buy things to entertain myself and have fun."

He left school after the sixth grade to work for his father, a logger at Clallam Bay on the northern edge of Washington's Olympic Peninsula.

At 16, discouraged over his inability to play musical instruments, he turned the handicap into a profit by managing a rock band.

At 22, he "retired" from the music business and opened a used-car lot in Port Angeles. A lucky car deal led him to land investment.

Now he controls $800,000 worth of property, has recently vacationed in Hawaii and just ordered a $28,000 custom-built luxury convertible.

His goal is to make a million dollars by the time he is 30 — "the first million," he adds with a grin.

He attributes his success to "drive" and a "good horse-trading sense."

"Anything John wants to do — if he wants to do it bad enough — he'll do it. That's just John," says Wendy Gree, 22, his longtime friend and assistant.

Ribelin's instinct for "horse-trading" proved itself three years ago, when he advertised a fancy car he owned in a Seattle newspaper.

A Kent land investor, Grant Wiley, saw it and offered Ribelin some land in exchange. A friendship and business partnership evolved. Wiley helped set up John Ribelin Enterprises in Lynnwood, a Seattle suburb.

Social Workers Help Prostitutes Find New Lives

By BJORN EDLUND

MALMO, Sweden (UPI) — Four social workers, in a unique experiment, have taken to the streets to help prostitutes find a new life.

"We went down to Hookers' Lane and handed the girls leaflets describing who we were and what we could do for them," said Britt Inger Lind, one of the workers in the project financed by Malmo city, the social Ministry and the Crime Prevention Committee.

Miss lind and Torsten Fredriksson work on Kungsgatan, the main drag. Stig Lursson and Sven Axel Mansson man the group's office.

"We help them to find a job, and an apartment. Our main task is to be available for counsel at all hours," Larsson said.

"I was astonished at how easy it was to get someone away from prostitution," Miss Lind said. "A job, a place to live, someone to talk to — and chances are good they leave prostitution."

Larsson said some 20 prostitutes, out of an estimated 200 "regulars" and some 200 more that walk the streets occasionally, have opted for a new life since the two-year project started Sept. 1, 1977.

Miss Lind said Malmo's prostitution racket hardly compares to that in Stockholm, the Swedish capital.

"Though 50 percent of the prostitutes here work in cars because they were kicked out of their apartments last year when the house owner was taken to court, the girls say Malmo is almost idyllic compared to Stockholm," she said.

"Prices here — 100 kroner ($21.50) — are a third of those in Stockholm, and many prostitutes say that puts less pressure on them," she said.

Larsson said that 500 prostitutes noted by authorities since 1972 averaged 18 to 25 years old. He said the highest known income of one was $5,500 per month, but most girls take in between $880 and $1,500 monthly.

Soliciting is illegal in Sweden, but prostitution is not.

"Any man living with a prostitute is a pimp, because he helps spend her money," Miss Lind said.

"All pimp-prostitute relations we have seen are built on affection rather than force."

Miss Lind said the four-person force has "undercover agents" at the employment and housing agencies, finding jobs and apartments without revealing the former profession of the applicants.

She said a previous prostitute working as a waitress was fired when a customer recognized her and told the restaurant owner of her past.

"We told the girls from the start we work on their terms. If they want help with tax returns, we do their tax returns," Miss Lind said.

Larsson and Mansson are collecting material for their doctoral theses in addition to their counseling.

Generals Battle In Israel

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A war of the generals is under way in the Israeli cabinet with Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon sniping at each other at every opportunity. Aides to both men carry on the battle underground.

Sharon, the hero of the 1973 October war, is thought to be eager for Weizman's job. Charges have been leveled at Sharon und his aides for trying to sabotage Weizman's negotiations with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and War minister Mohammed Gamassy.

Analysis

For example, Sharon's aides allegedly planted an exaggerated account of Weizman's tearing a peace poster off a wall in Prime Minister Menachem Begin's office and allegedly leaked the substance of the Sadat-Weizman talks.

Restrictions On Leftists

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Authorities have banned a prominent leftist writer from traveling overseas as part of a clampdown on Marxist journalists suspected of publishing anti-government articles abroad.

Leftist sources say Mohammed Odeh was about to board a flight to London when he was recalled at the last minute and notified he could not travel outside Egypt.

Egypt's prosecutor-general also is investigating seven other writers, including Mohammed Hassanein Heikul, formerly the influential editor of the newspaper Al Ahram, for allegedly participating in the anti-government campaign.

UNRWA Irks Arafat

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Arab sources say that Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat is angry at the decision of the United Nutions Relief and Works Agency to move its headquarters from Beirut to Vienna.

The sources say that Arafat spent the better part of a lengthy talk with U.N. secretary General Kurt Waldheim in Damascus recently complaining about the planned U.N. move.

Waldheim promised Arafat to take his objections into consideration, but as far as is known in Beirut, the move is still on.

The bulk of UNRWA's Beirut staff is Palestinian and the move will hike unemployment among Palestinians in the region.

Arab Interpol Proposed

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (UPI) — A group of Arab countries, including Egypt and Saudi Arabia, are quietly considering a plan to set up joint police forces, styled after Interpol, the international police organization.

Arab governments, under this scheme, will cooperate in giving chase to criminals throughout the Arab world by means of exchanging information and police experts.

Some press reports suggest the new force may have a special branch for combating "destructive political movements" in Arab countries — an indirect allusion to Communist groups.

Gamassy Complains

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Egyptian War Minister Mohammed Gamassy has complained to Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman about the publication of the content of diucussions between Weizman and President Anwar Sadat in Austria.

Gamassy sent a cable to Weizman expressing bitterness about the lack of secrecy and leaks to the Israeli press that appeared even before the cabinet had an oportunity to discuss the Sadat-Weizman talks. The defense ministry said it was not responsible for the leakage.

One leak said Sadat agreed to an Israeli military presence in the occupied West Bank of Jordan as part of a peace accord. Cairo immediately denied the report.

Billy Graham Denies Tax Law Violations

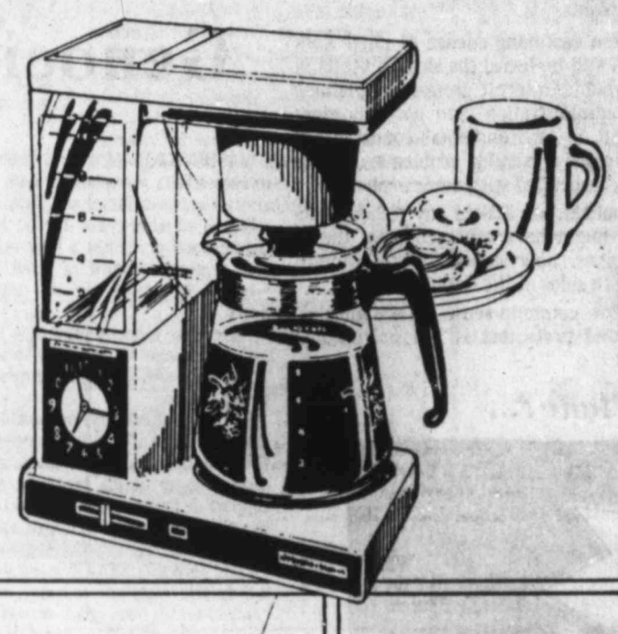

MONTREAT, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham has denied a report of possible improprieties or violations of federal tax laws in the purchase of a tract of land near Asheville, N.C., by his World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund.

An aide to Graham issued a brief statement in which Graham said the report was "filled with unsupported and untrue innuendoes and insinuations." The Charotte Observer had said the purchase of the 1,050-acre tract by the Graham organization for $2.75 million raised questions about the value of the property and compliance with IRS laws.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Seabrook In Hot Water

THE NUCLEAR Regulatory Commission's ruling that construction of a nuclear power plant in Seabrook, N.H., be halted by this weekend is described editorially by The New York Times as "the regulatory debacle of the decade."

The epithet is well deserved. After years of hearings, demonstrations, judicial decisions and regulatory rulings, the $2.3 billion plant's fate still is uncertain.

IT'S BEEN more than five years since the builder, the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire, submitted its application to the NRC.

Construction of the plant began in 1976, after the utility got tentative approval from the EPA for its plan to cool the plant with ocean water and then discharge the heated water back into the sea.

But environmentalists contended that this might be—emphasis, "might be"—harmful to unspecified marine life. So in November 1976, the EPA regional office withdrew its approval and the following February the NRC suspended Seabrook's construction permits.

The company appealed to EPA administrator Douglas Costle, who eventually ruled in its favor. The NRC then reinstated the construction permits. But there was a court challenge to the Costle decision and last February a federal court of appeals overturned it on procedural grounds.

THE EPA NOW must hold new hearings on the question of whether to allow ocean water cooling at Seabrook.

The NRC's ruling says that construction of the plant cannot be resumed until the EPA completes its review and until the NRC in turn has considered possible alternative sites in light of the EPA decision.

Company officials said that the construction delay will cost about $15 million a month, not counting lost income to approximately 1,800 workers who will have to be laid off.

THE CONTROVERSY surrounding the NRC's ruling could lend support to an administration proposal unveiled March 17 to streamline the licensing procedure for nuclear power plants.

Above the deafening silence of idled work crews can still be heard the shrill protests of so-called public interest groups complaining that the administration plan not only gives short shrift to environmental concerns but fails to remedy existing problems, real or imagined, associated with nuclear plants.

The brouhaha has stalled any remedial action that might have emerged from the licensing plans, now stalled before committees on both sides of the Capitol.

You know, common sense among society's self-anointed protectors is not so common anymore.

Gold Canopy Cradles Newborn

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Kenneth May and One Man's Opinion will return after a brief intermission.)

WASHINGTON—Space research paid for by your tax dollars is returning some life saving benefits for newborn babies and burn victims in a number of unexpected ways.

Most exciting of these involve the development of new equipment to help weak, sickly and prematurely born infants increase their chances for survival at birth. Medical experts say that the most critical period of an infant's early life is the first six to 12 hours after birth.

To help the newborn through this critical period, a "golden canopy" has been developed as an aerospace research spinoff which provides uniform, controlled warmth to the infant's cradle.

Warmth is vitally important to all newborns, particularly premature babies; they lose heat more rapidly than adults because they have greater surface area in comparison with body mass.

THE NEW CRADLE warmer is based on technology in heated transparent material developed by Sierracin Corporation, Sylmar, California. The original application was in heated faceplates for the pressure suit helmets worn by pilots of a National Aeronautics and Space Administration reconnaissance and weather research plane.

In their joint space research with NASA, Sierracin advanced the technology for other applications, among them the helmet faceplates of Apollo astronauts and the cockpit windows of the NASA X-15 supersonic research vehicle.

Adapting the technology to hospital needs, Sierracin teamed with Cavitron Corporation, Anaheim, California, which produces the cradle warmer and two other systems employing electrically-heated transparencies.

NOW BEING USED FOR routine post-delivery care and post-operative recovery, the cradle warmer is a canopy atop the infant's bassinet.

The canopy is composed of laminated layers of transparent plastic, which encase a thin film of gold called Intrex. This coating is electrically conductive; when energized by electricity, the canopy emits low energy radiant heat over the infant's entire body.

A special feature of the equipment is a skin sensor which allows temperature control adjusted precisely to each baby's individual need. The cradle warmer has no noise-producing elements for heat generation, and there is no burn hazard to infant or nurse.

The radiant warmer offers the additional advantage of total visibility. Since blankets are unnecessary, the baby lies naked in its cradle and the transparent canopy permits constant observation for changes of color or other indications of distress.

THE "GOLDEN CANOPY" has literally saved the lives of thousands of newborn babies, according to NASA scientists and hospitals which are now taking advantage of this development from space research.

The Sierracin-Cavitron research team has produced another application for the heated transparency technology: The Apollo Radiant Warmer, a system designed specifically for patients suffering serious burns.

An important matter in burn treatment is keeping the patient warm to counter hypothermia, a state of low body temperature characteristic of serious burns. Sheets and blankets cannot be allowed to come in contact with injured areas, so it was formerly necessary to suspend coverings over hoops encircling the patient's bed. Even so, burn victims complained of cold.

THE PROBLEM INVOLVED more than discomfort; shivering uses up large amounts of energy, energy needed to fight infection and to renew damaged cells. Energy expenditure also causes unwanted weight loss.

The Apollo Radiant Warmer, an over-bed canopy that works like the cradle warmer, eliminates the need for hoops and blankets. It provides a controlled thermal environment which contributes to more effective treatment by significantly reducing shivering and energy expenditure.

In a number of instances, physicians say, it is literally a life saver.

TO IMPROVE the quality of photos sent to Earth by unmanned spacecraft, NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory developed a computerized image enhancement process that brings out detail not visible in the basic photo.

JPL is now applying this technology to biomedical research in its Medical Image Analysis Facility, which employs computer enhancement techniques to analyze x-ray films of internal organs, such as the heart and lung.

A major objective is study of the effects of stress on persons with heart disease.

Holmes Alexander:

Genocide Comes In Black, Too

WASHINGTON—Big and baffling is how the foreign affairs connoisseurs look upon the deal in aircraft between Israel and Taiwan.

Big in numbers, no; for 60 Israeli-made Kfir fighter-bombers is not a fleet—though enough to give a good account of itself against invasion—but a big move on the international chess board.

Carter has blocked off a few Soviet chessmen, and to change the analogy, sort of played the "Chinese card," which (naturally) he said he would not do.

But the bottom line now reads that the President has done a couple of nice things for two anti-communist nations, Israel and Taiwan, recouped some of his losses in American Jewish support at home and reminded the world that we haven't deserted and betrayed Taiwan after all.

THE JEWISH STATE some years ago founded a domestic warplane industry, but Carter had to contribute an executive waiver to the present deal because the Kfir has General Electric engines and can't be unconditionally traded.

Taiwan couldn't get another sale of American fighters without stirring up Red China, so Carter let Israel swing the deal.

It's an under-the-table way of playing the (Red) "China card" against Brezhnev because it tells the USSR leader that Carter may not be such a stupe after all.

Who does Carter think he is, the Kremlin must wonder, Tricky Dick?

OR DOES HE THINK he's Woodrow Wilson, another godly peace-lover? Wilson moved us closer to war by methods somewhat similar to this three-cornered aircraft deal.

Wilson had an Anglophile Ambassador in London, Walter Hines Page, who had to find a way to make Great Britain innocent of stopping American merchant ships, so with Wilson's connivance, he got the French Navy to do it and avoided having a fuss with the Admiralty.

Today it's not so different.

If Carter goes on finding stealthy ways to support small anti-communist countries, it's going to bring off anther Frank Church-type exposure of our intelligence apparatus, which would come in the autumn of a renewed Cold War, or/and additionally, Carter's adeptness at bungling will lead into the thicket that the Farewell Address warned against—entangling alliances.

These are risky death dances at which only the master diplomats, like Talleyrand and Kissinger, know how to call the tunes, and which born-again Baptists are apt to entangle us with allies of no worth at all.

Actually, the United States has only two muscular nations which have the same interests as we do, and which would wreak punishment on a common enemy. West Germany, with the old Prussian spirit, would at least make the Soviet Union rue the day they forced a fight on us.

The other big nation, without too many, if any, scruples against nuclear weapons, is South Africa. The black threat to Pretoria has brought the same racial grievances that Israel in the past has suffered. Genocide can as easily wear a black face as a jack boot.

As an unreconstructed isolationist, who believes our foreign policy ought to strive for industrial, agricultural and scientific self-sufficiency, and who believes that color television and deluxe motor cars are not the staff of life, I would just as soon we went Spartan in our living, had no allies outside the Western Hemisphere.

But the dream of full independence, economic as well as political, long since ended in a dreadful awakening, and I suppose life must go on. But it will make a lot of Americans nervous if Carter gets the idea that he's a born-again world statesman.

Sylvia Porter:

Crooks Can Cash In On Your Bank Card

IN CALIFORNIA, a computer error by an electronic banking device put more than $30,000 into the savings account of a cafeteria worker. The man quickly withdrew the money and disappeared.

He is being sought on charges of grand theft.

In Washington, D.C., a "money-matic" machine went on the blink one weekend and dispensed money to customers seeking withdrawals. The computer recorded the account numbers but not the totals each person had drawn.

Some customers could not—or would not—recall how much they had withdrawn.

DURING THE introductory phase of several 24-hour banking center terminals in New York City, some customers left their machines before they had shut down.

On one occasion, an observant con man noted a customer's identification code and, with the machine still running, he withdrew $1,000 from the customer's account.

The relatively new electronic banking devices—automated tellers, "money-matic" machines, "24-hour banking centers," cash dispensers, etc.—are neither totally fail- nor fraud-proof.

What's more, the developers of the devices had not foreseen many of the problems. Thus, to avoid electronic banking mishaps:

* GET A PERSONAL demonstration and explanation from a bank official on how the computer device operates. This will help make sure that you operate the machine correctly and that the services will be a convenience, not a headache.

* Do not write your personal identification number or code on your transaction card or anywhere else it might be observed, stolen or misplaced. Memorize it!

With some systems, if you forget your number or code, you must select a new one. It's totally confidential, with not even the financial institution keeping a record of it.

* Do not lend your transaction card to anyone and do not reveal to anyone your personal identification number or code.

* WHEN USING A computer terminal, be sure the machine has turned itself off and that you have your card before you leave.

* Depress all keys of the machine firmly and slowly to make certain your message gets across correctly. Most systems are designed to operate relatively slowly so you can keep up.

* Ask for and keep receipts of transactions you have made.

Once you know these receipts are accurate, you have the records against which you can compare your monthly statements and help settle any disputes.

* ALWAYS MAKE AN entry into your checkbook after you have completed a transaction.

Because you can make deposits, withdrawals or transfers from savings to checkings (or vice versa) so quickly, it is easy to forget to make the proper notations in your checkbook.

* Avoid, if you can, using cash dispensing machines in low-traffic areas late at night or other odd hours. Despite protections for the computers, you could be a target for a crook.

* Check your balance periodically on the computer to be sure its record squares with your own—but make allowances for any checks or deposits which may be outstanding.

Not all systems are connected directly to the institution's main computer. These terminals record your transactions on, say, magnetic tape—and this tape is periodically pulled from the machine and fed into the central recording facility.

Because of various laws, these systems do not automatically credit your deposits or withdrawals, but act as a "banking mailbox."

* BECAUSE MANY systems limit the total you can withdraw at any one time (say $100 every three days) and you know you'll need more than this while you're traveling for a stated time (say $300 every week), your bank often will upgrade your withdrawal limit.

This will depend on your status as a customer and the bank's policies.

* If you have problems to discuss with a "live" bank official, use the telephone attached to many computers. Don't wait until you get your monthly statement to explain discrepancies.

John D. Lofton:

Who Cares If Pupfish Perish?

WASHINGTON—I have plenty of things to worry about, and not necessarily in the following order: the SALT talks; Russian and Cuban involvement in Africa; exploding Pinto gas tanks; NATO; grasshoppers eating Nebraska; the Mideast; Sen. Brooke's divorce;

Joan Kennedy's alcoholism; whether the White House okayed the use of President Carter's photo in Emery Air Freight's national ads; increasing youth crime; the "China card"; Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell's chances of going to jail; and the aging of India's leadership.

BUT THERE IS more. During the past few weeks, in a flood of press releases, the Interior Department has implicitly asked me to agonize over the endangered status of a whole host of critters, such things as:

The Santa Cruz long-toed salamander; the San Francisco tree lupine moth; the Kern primrose sphinx moth; the Dakota skipper butterfly; the Callippee silverspot butterfly;

The Oregon silverspot butterfly; the Karner blue butterfly; the Palos Verdes butterfly; the painted snake-coiled forest snail of Tennessee; the Iowa Pleistocene snail of Florida;

The Virginia fringed mountain snail; the Chittenango ovate amber snail of New York; and last and certainly least, the flat-spired, three-toothed land snail of West Virginia.

Most recently, the Interior Department informs me that "for the first time ever," an animal—the one-and-a-half inch Tecopa pupfish native to the Amargosa River near California's Death Valley—is being removed from the endangered species list because it is presumed to be extinct.

In a touching eulogy, Asst. Interior Sec. Robert Herbst says that the passing of this animal is "depressing" and "disconcerting." But is it really?

NOW, LET ME MAKE my position crystal clear: I love animals. Among my dependents are: a dog (Sugar); a cat (Frisky); and two hamsters (Rocky and Adrien). I fully understand the sentiment behind Coleridge's verse:

"He prayeth well, who loveth well,
"Both man, and bird, and beast;
"He prayeth best, who loveth best,
"All things, both great and small"
"For the dear God who loveth us,
"He made and loveth all."

And when John Ruskin said: "There is in every animal's eye a dim image and gleam of humanity, a flash of strange light through which their life looks out and up to our great mystery of command over them, and claiming the fellowship of the creature, if not of the soul," I think I know what he was talking about.

I WOULD NEVER support the intentional wanton extinction of any harmless plant or animal. But, at the risk of sounding like Marie Antoinette, I must say that I just can't get excited because the aforementioned critters have been inadvertently endangered. So what?

I understand, in the John Donne-ian sense, how one could feel that no pupfish is an island and the death of even one diminishes us all.

But in a real, practical sense, why should anybody give a damn if the Tecopa pupfish has, as a species, bought the farm, so to speak? When I put this question to Herbst, who was still in mourning, he replied:

"Well, it's symbolic, you know. It's a sad commentary when any species disappears because of man, whether it's an eagle, elephant or a buffalo."

He says that while the Tecopa pupfish has no known value now, years hence it might be found to have some use. Thus, "we should never knowingly allow anything to become extinct."

When I point out that this reasoning could be used to argue against killing weeds, he laughs, saying, "That's possible."

The reason the Interior Department is wasting your money and mine sending out press releases on the decline of the Santa Cruz long-toed salamander is because of the ridiculously inflexible 1973 Endangered Species Act, which says that no federal funds may be spent on any project likely to destroy any species of plant or animal life.

This literally means, as P.J. Wingate points out in the Wall Street Journal, that no federal money could be spent to eradicate such life forms as the polio virus, the anthrax bacillus, the anopheles mosquito, or the diamond-back rattlesnake.

IT IS TIME, indeed past time, that the Endangered Species Act be reformed.

Very soon, the Senate will vote on a measure, sponsored by Sens. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and John Culver, D-Iowa, which would set up a seven-member commission to grant exemptions from this act if the value of a project "clearly outweighs" the benefits of conserving a given species. The Senate should pass this change.

Never again should an important project like the $120 million Tellico Dam be delayed solely because its construction might do harm to a fish like the tiny snail darter.

Panel Suspends JP In Lamesa

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Embattled Richard Don Nelson Dawson County's 33-year-old justice of the peace, has been suspended from office without pay by the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

On July 13 a Dawson County grand jury returned four indictments against the Lamesa peace justice who is scheduled to begin his second term in office in January.

Nelson was indicted on one count of misapplication of public funds and three counts of burglary.

Currently free after posting $8,000 in total bonds, Nelson was arrested June 28 in connection with the alleged theft of more than $5,000 worth of merchandise from Amos Supply, a general purpose store in Lamesa.

The indictments allege that Nelson burglarized the store twice, on April 20 and again on June 27. He also is charged with the June 27 burglary of the Dick Amos residence.

A fourth indictment was brought against Nelson for allegedly misapplying March 16 "a thing of value belonging to the government...public funds, to wit, U.S. currency that had come into his possession by virtue of his employment."

County auditor Donald H. Stephens has confiscated Nelson's books and records and is conducting a ticket by ticket audit, with the assistance of the firm of Mathews and Mathews.

Maurice Pipkin, director of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct, said from Brownsville Monday he knew of no appeal open to Nelson, who will remain suspended without pay pending the outcome of criminal proceedings.

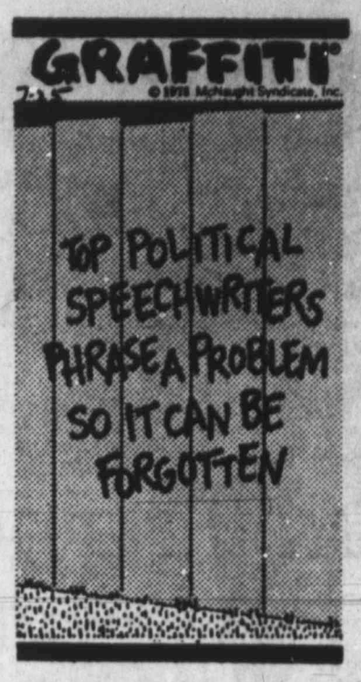

Pipkin said the commission is "empowered" by the state constitution to take such action and the statute "doesn't provide for any appeal. We simply employ the tools of our trade," he said.

He noted that the action against Nelson is the "first time we've employed that particular sanction."

On Nov. 8 last year the commission was given the authority to "suspend with or without pay any state judge indicted in state or federal court pending the outcome of those indictments."

If acquitted of the charges against him, Nelson would be eligible to collect back pay, Pipkin said.

The commission, made up of two district judges, two appellate judges, two lawyers and four laymen, meets in closed session in Austin.

Chamber Seeks Maid Of Cotton

Maid of Cotton applications are now available at the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce office.

The applications must be filled out and returned to the Chamber of Commerce no later than 5 p.m. September 12. The contest will be Oct. 6-7.

Any girl between the ages of 19 and 23 who has never been married and was born in a cotton producing area may enter. Applicants also must be 5 feet 5 inches tall or taller.

The winner of the South Plains Maid of Cotton contest will compete in the Maid of Cotton finals in Memphis, Tenn., in December.

Local Republicans Back Robbins' Senate Race

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Grand Canyon-sized chasm between District 75-A State Rep. Joe Robbins and Lubbock County Republicans appears to have been bridged.

After asking Robbins less than a year ago not to run again as a Republican, the county Republican executive committee recently passed a resolution supporting the full slate of GOP candidates "without exception."

Robbins is the Republican candidate for state senate and will face E.L. Short in the general election.

The resolution passed by the executive committee is directed at publicity surrounding Robbins' problems with the executive committee, as well as at rumors that former Republican gubernatorial candidate Jim Granberry will replace Robbins as the state senate candidate.

Last September local Republicans became distressed with Robbins' announcement that he was drafting legislation to create a state income tax. Party embarassment over Robbins' arrest for public drunkenness in Austin in 1976 and Robbins' seemingly pro-Equal Rights Amendment stance rubbed salt in the party's wound.

The executive committee issued a statement saying Robbins' views on a state income tax "are not the views of the Lubbock County GOP" and encouraged the television broadcaster "not to run as a Republican in the next election."

However, since that time, lines of communication have been opened between Robbins and local Republicans, and the state representative has become more responsive to his party's philosophy.

The executive committee, composed of all county precinct chairmen, has a somewhat different membership now than the executive committee which censured Robbins last fall.

Bill Deal voted with the rest of the committee to disavow Robbins, but he was a strong supporter of the resolution passed recently backing all GOP candidates.

Why the change of heart?

Deal compared Robbins' censure to disciplining an employee. "It doesn't mean you can't change your mind," he said.

Just as an employee is corrected, then he begins doing what the employer wants, Robbins has begun representing the Republican Party, Deal said.

"Joe realizes he was wrong," he said, adding the move to censure the legislator "got the point across.

"It was the right thing to do at the time," Deal said. "The executive committee felt it had to make Joe responsible to what we stand for."

Deal said Robbins is "doing a very responsible job in Austin" and said the party is communicating with Robbins better than at the time of the disavowal.

The "vast majority" of Lubbock County Republicans will support the entire slate of GOP candidates, including Robbins, Deal predicted. However, he admitted there remains a minority which is "opposed to Joe's election."

Deal said another reason for the committee's resolution of support is "talk around that Joe is just filling a spot on the ballot for Jim Granberry.

"That's not true," Deal said. "Granberry was one of the most vocal spokesmen for the resolution.

"Granberry had the opportunity to run and he didn't," Deal said.

County GOP Chairman Ruth Schiermeyer said the resolution "shows the party's stong, united support behind all candidates.

"Joe is very strongly working with us and we're very strongly working with him," she said.

"He's making an effort to represent the feelings of the party."

The resolution supports "the outstanding slate of Republican candidates in the November elections" and states the GOP candidates "more accurately reflects the conservative mood of our citizens than do the liberal beliefs of their Democrat opponents."

Continental Says Probe Underway

HOUSTON (UPI) — Continental Oil Co. has confirmed that it is involved in an oil-pricing investigation by the U.S. Attorney's Office in Houston.

"I am aware that the federal authorities are investigating certain matters associated with past federal regulations for petroleum products," said Howard Blauvelt, Conoco chairman and chief executive officer, Monday.

Blauvelt, who said the dollar amount involved is less than $2 million, said Conoco had been cooperating with federal investigators for more than a year.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in Houston has refused comment on reports of the inquiry other than to confirm that there is an oil-pricing investigation underway.

Increase In Budget Expected By County

Not counting some $2 million in expenditures for the new $3.6 million Lubbock County Jail, the preliminary 1979 county budget is about $450,000 over this year's figure.

Most of the increase is from a 6-percent across-the-board salary increase that the commissioners are considering for county employees.

The commissioners will spend about $3.1 million on the new jail next year and will receive only about $1 million in federal revenue sharing money to pay for it, a revised budget summary released by County Auditor Dale Gallimore Monday showed.

He said after the day-long regular meeting and budget hearings that money will be transferred from the general fund to the revenue sharing fund temporarily to meet the construction expense. Then revenue sharing funds will be transferred back to the general fund in 1980, Gallimore said.

After its first revision, the 1979 budget shows $8,325,442 in revenues and $10,253,939 in expenditures with the jail expense and the salary increases.

The first budget prepared by Gallimore two weeks ago estimated year-end cash balances of $5.8 million this year and $5.85 million next year. He said Monday that new projected balances for the county public treasury had not been computed.

The budget this calendar year is for $7,949,627.

Notable among the new budget facts are the inclusion of an $18,000-per-year office administrator that Criminal District Attorney-elect John T. Montford asked as an addition to his staff and about half of the salary increases that Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard asked for his subordinates.

The budget gives raises of about $50 per month to deputies when Blanchard asked an average raise of $100.

The commissioners worked through the revised document Monday afternoon after handling their regular meeting agenda Monday morning.

Department heads are scheduled to begin appearing before the court in mid-August to discuss the budget deliberations.

Degree Marks Tech Milestone

The College of Business Administration at Texas Tech University has marked a milestone with the school's 100th Doctor of Business Administration degree being awarded to Rajesh (Tony) Kakar.

The first D.B.A. was awarded at Texas Tech in 1968. Approximately 10 degrees each year have been presented since then.

Kakar's degree was in business statistics with minors in accounting and production management. He has accepted a faculty position at Arizona State University and will begin teaching management science and statistics there this summer.

While at Texas Tech he taught courses in the College of Business. He also worked as a research assistant in the department of agricultural sciences, where he was a computer consultant.

Kakar received the master's degree from the University of Delhi in 1972, and the master's of science in statistics from Texas Tech in 1976.

Veteran Newsman Dies In Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Roy Grimes, a veteran newspaperman who had been an administrative assistant to Sen. William Moore of Bryan in recent years, died Monday. He was 70.

Grimes had been hospitalized for the past several weeks. A friend said he died of kidney failure. Funeral services were tentatively set for 10 a.m. Wednesday in Austin, with burial at Bastrop, 30 miles from here. Grimes was a descendant of Jesse Grimes, signer of the Texas Declaration of Independence.

Grimes was born in Port Arthur and began his newspaper career on the San Antonio Express in 1928.

THE PLAINS EXPRESS BANK
22 Tellers:
18 motor bank lanes,
4 commercial windows and another Teller 24.

Plains National is growing. Since our charter was granted in 1955, we've launched four major construction projects to keep pace with our growing list of customers.

The newest building is the Plains EXPRESS bank — a drive up / drive thru banking facility across 50th Street from our main building. The EXPRESS bank is just what you'd expect: it's a place for fast, efficient banking service. There are 18 motor bank lanes and space for almost 200 automobiles. There are 4 commercial windows inside for change and deposits. And the bank's second Teller 24: the automated teller that can cash a check, accept a deposit or transfer funds every day of the week, every hour of the day and night, 365 days a year.

When you need fast banking service, come to the EXPRESS bank. When you need a bank, come to Plains.

Farmhands Congregate In Austin

AUSTIN (UPI) — A group of Texas farmworkers was still gathered on the steps of the Capitol early today, hoping Gov. Dolph Briscoe would discuss with them their request to allow the special legislative session to give workers collective bargaining rights.

Claudio Ramirez of Pharr and Jose Rodriquez of Alamo sat on a bench by the Capitol. Both said they had been up most of the night, along with about 50 others.

"We took the people to a rectory for them to get bathed and cleaned up," said Ramirez, a small elderly man sporting a straw hat.

A priest held a prayer session with the group shortly after midnight. The group spent most of the night quietly hearing stories from some of the older people of the union.

Ramirez and Rodriquez said they would remain on the steps of the Capitol until Briscoe agreed to meet with them.

The group came to Austin for a House Committee's hearings on problems of migrant workers, but TFU director Antonio Orendain complained only half the eight members of the committee attended the earings.

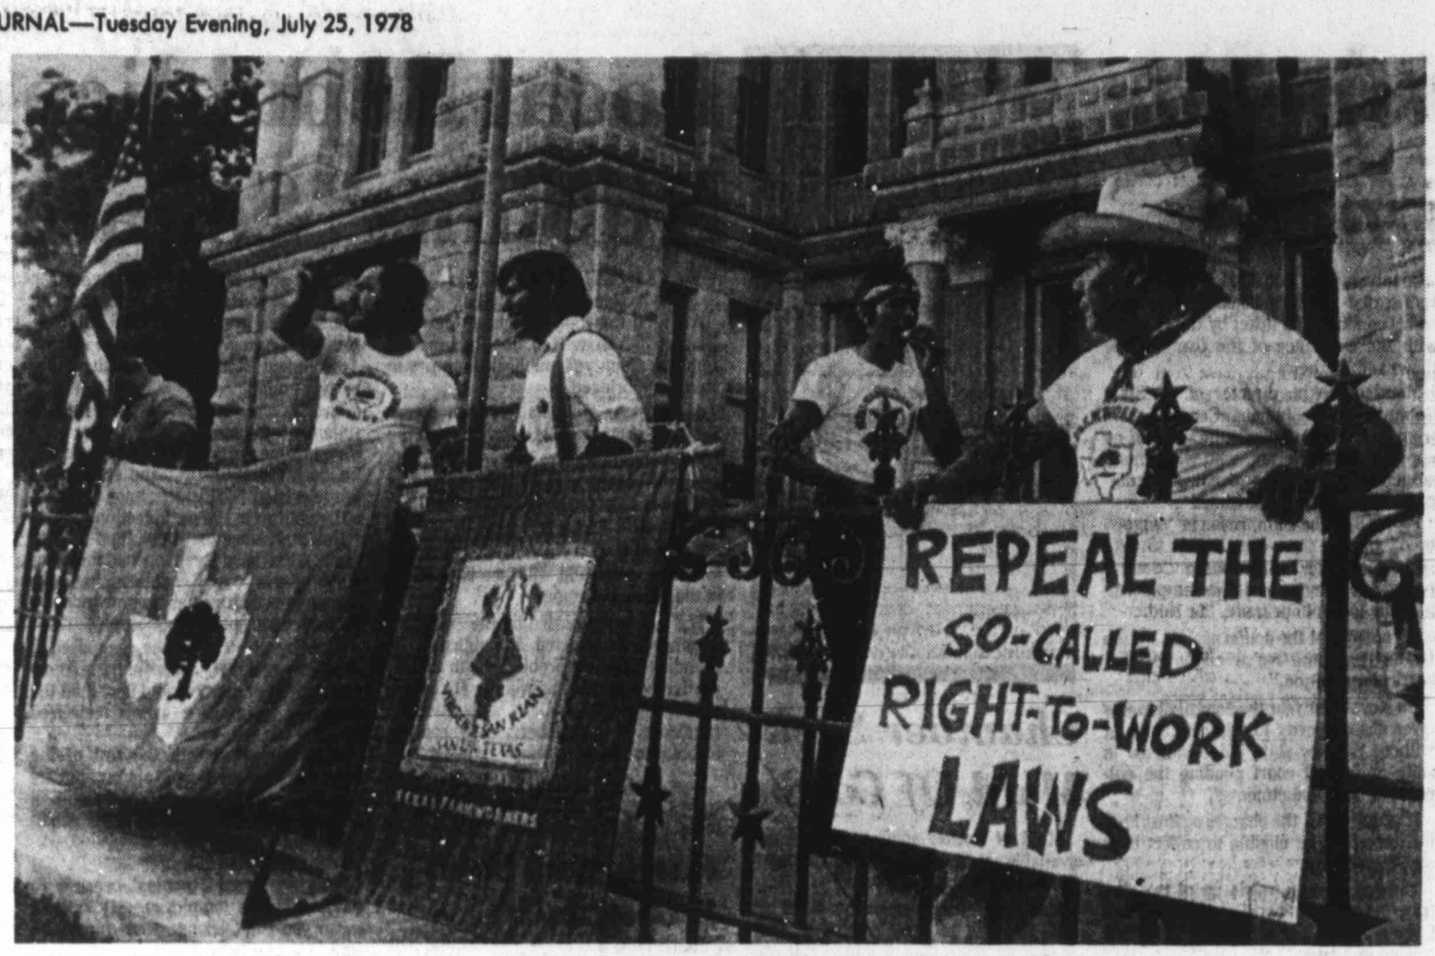

Orendain said he hoped the group's presence on the Capitol steps would persuade Briscoe to grant them an audience.

"This is the only way we can lobby for ourselves," Orendain said. "We hope after he sees us four or five days here at the Capitol day and night he will let us in.

"Last time he invited us in for coffee and doughnuts," Orendain said, referring to an April 1977 meeting with Briscoe in the governor's mansion. "Maybe this time he will invite us in for a business discussion.

"He has the authority to put that (collective bargaining rights for farm workers) on the agenda," he said. "If we talk to him, maybe if we're lucky he will put us on the agenda."

Orendain said about 35 workers would camp on the Capitol grounds Monday night, then decide today when others arrive how long to continue the vigil. He said the farm workers also may stage a hunger strike to draw attention to their demands.

GROUP GATHERS AT CAPITOL — Several members of the Texas Farm Workers Union display flags, banners and signs as they maintain their vigil in front of the State Capitol in Austin today. The vigil is intended as a peaceful protest of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's refusal to meet with the group, according to Antonio Orendain of San Juan, director of the union. (AP Laserphoto)

San Antonio Strike Continues

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Forty wildcat strikers risked automatic dismissal and arrived early at the city's garbage collection centers to jeer the tense non-union workers who would make their rounds under police escort.

City Manager Tom Huebner, saying "I mean business," had said refuse collectors participating in the illegal strike would be fired immediately.

Members of the San Antonio Refuse Collectors Association called the strike during the weekend to demand better working conditions and a 9.3 percent pay increase rather than the city's 6 percent raise.

Only 60 of 313 garbage workers reported for work Monday and left garbage collection centers more than an hour late. When they did leave, 40 pickets shook their fists, shouted and threw rocks at the garbage trucks as they left with police cars.

Police chased one striker two blocks and arrested him for throwing a rock at parked automobiles of workers manning the trucks. Other police and union officials held back a group of angry strikers as the arrested man was taken to jail.

Only about one-third of the city's garbage was collected Monday and officials urged residents to take the refuse to several parks where police-protected garbage trucks were stationed.

About 30 collectors reported for work Monday but said they feared threats and reprisals and would not work. Huebner said the threats would be considered and those who reported would not be dismissed.

Refuse collector Gumecindo Morales said he received a threatening phone call Sunday night.

"They said if they didn't get us here in the yard, they'd get us at home," he said.

The city manager's office told employees who continued to strike Monday that they were automatically fired, a move that could result in as many as 250 firings. However, only the 106 workers Huebner fired Sunday officially had been dismissed.

"I mean business. I will not be intimidated," Huebner said of the firings. "I don't intend to back down. This time it's going to stick."

Councilmen Rudy Ortiz and Bernardo Eurste called for Huebner's resignation, accusing him of racism because most of the dismissed workers were Mexican-Americans and blacks.

"It would have been more difficult if there had been a goodly mixture of Anglos," Eurste said.

Mayor Lila Cockrell called the racial allegation absurd and said she supported Huebner's methods.

Fifty new workers arrived early at City Hall to begin processing for the new jobs and were expected to be at work by today or Wednesday, and Huebner said a full staff could be hired within a month.

City Councilman Heny Cisneros criticized Huebner's handling of the problem and said the walkout could have been averted.

"You don't treat people like animals. It's easy to fire people. It doesn't take any imagination," he said. "I'm convinced there are non-wage, non-economic solutions to this problem."

Cisneros suggested the city should have obtained a court injunction against the strike.

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees has refused to honor the strike because its members accepted the 6 percent figure.

The strikers were optimistic they would get their jobs back.

"They might have some people (non-union workers), but they won't last too long," said striker Daniel Hernandez. "Everybody's going to get something out of this."

"If the city employees let this happen and let city officials get away with it, they'll never get anything else," added striker Edward Pena.

Texas law prohibits work stoppages by public employees, although several have occurred in recent years in various city departments.

About 25 members of the city's Animal Control department — also members of the San Antonio Refuse Collectors Association — also walked out Monday in support of the garbage collectors.

Limitations Statute Runs Out In Case

DALLAS (AP) — The federal statute of limitations expired at 12:01 a.m. today on the Santos Rodriguez murder case, which frees former Dallas policeman Darrell Cain of any worries he might have had about federal civil rights prosecution.

"Everyone should be reasonably satisfied with the outcome, because it was looked into fairly. It was reviewed more than any other case. Whether you like the outcome or not, it has been fairly reviewed," said Phil Burleson of Dallas, one of Cain's attorneys.

Mexican-American leaders failed in their bid late last week to persuade Justice Department officials to file federal civil rights charges against Cain, who shot a 12-year-old boy to death in July, 1973, as the youth sat handcuffed in the rear seat of a squad car.

They had protested his five-year prison sentence by a state court jury as too light.

Burleson said he has not talked recently with Cain, who works in the diagnostic unit of the state prison, but "I am reasonably sure he's relieved not to face prosecution. In my correspondences with him, it was a matter of concern. I'm sure he's greatly relieved."

Ruben Sandoval of San Antonio, the Rodriguez family counsel, said although he and others feel the Rodriguez case has gone unvindicated, the civil rights struggle among Mexican-Americans is still alive.

"Contrary to what people say, this case will not set the Mexican-American community back as far as civil rights violations are concerned. Instead, it has set us forward," he said.

"This case epitomizes police brutality, but unfortunately Santos Rodriguez will have to pick up the tab for other cases that will show the bigotry of police officers who deal with minorities."

Cain, who was fired and convicted of murder after the incident, has almost four years remaining on the five-year sentence he was assessed, but his lawyers said he has already met with the parole board about the possibility of getting out early.

"At this point, it's up to them to make a decision. When that decision will be made, I don't know," said Mike Gibson, another of Cain's lawyers.

Burleson said the parole board should block out any outside influences in ruling on Cain's request for parole.

"I would hope the parole would have the same criteria for Darrell as any other person. 'Has he earned it?' is the question that should be asked. It's up to them and only them. And it shouldn't be up to outside influences to determine," Burleson said.

Burleson pointed out that the Justice Department official who made the initial decision not to prosecute the case — and subsequently recommended the same to Attorney General Griffin Bell — was Drew Days, a black.

"Mr. Days is well aware of the circumstances and, I think, would be more attuned to civil rights than most. It certainly doesn't look whitewashed to me."

Lozano Jury Takes No Action

ODESSA (AP) — For a state grand jury and the district attorney here the Larry Lozano case is "over and done with" in Ector County.

District Attorney John Green and grand jury foreman C.L. Selinger made that ruling Monday after the panel failed to indict anyone in connection with the death of inmate Larry Lozano in the Ector County jail last January.

"We have no bills and no comment," he said, adding that the grand jury had considered all the evidence and testimony to date in the Lozano case and had concluded its investigation.

But an Ector County jailer, who has given a statement to investigators that reportedly concerns treatment of prisoners in the jail and could shed some light on the Lozano death, appeared before the grand jury for about an hour Monday, then resigned his job.

Gabriel Perez had no comments on his grand jury appearance other than to say that he had answered all the questions. On the subject of his resignation, he said he felt he was getting the "cold shoulder" from fellow workers in the sheriff's department.

Sheriff Elton Faught said he had not requested the resignation and indicated the jailer's job would have remained his if he had chosen to keep it.

Lozano died Jan. 22 while an inmate in the Ector County Jail. Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught said it appeared he had committed suicide by banging his head against an inch-thick pane of glass on the door of his isolation cell. A justice of the peace later held an inquest into the death and ruled it accidental.

But still others have claimed the young Mexican-American man was beaten to death by law enforcement officers.

Lozano's death has been the subject of numerous local, federal and state investigations; an inquest into the cause of death; a federal grand jury probe into civil rights violations; and an investigation by the state grand jury.

The state panel was in attendance at the April inquest that ruled Lozano's death accidental. The federal grand jury met in Midland last week and recessed without revealing its findings, which were to be forwarded to the Justice Department for further action or study.

One other possible avenue of investigation remains open — a probe into misdeameanor violations of the state official oppression statute that would be conducted by Ector County Attorney Mike Atkins who has said he is waiting to see the outcome of the other investigations.

The grand jury Monday made no recommendations to the county attorney.

Green said the grand jury looked into the case again because Perez' statement was not available until recently.

Bell Makes Change In Request

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s request to delete $174,160 from its rate hike request will be included in the rate case record Thursday at a Public Utility Commission hearing.

The amount has been linked to allegedly improper equipment purchases and leases made by a former Bell employee now under criminal investigation by the U.S. attorney in Dallas.

At its Thursday hearing, the commission will set a date for a final order in the $214 million rate increase request.

The company asked the commission to delay issuing a formal order July 14 until further information was available on the questionable funds.

Commissioner Alan Erwin said the regulatory agency must reopen the Bell hearing to include the deletion request in the record.

Four Persons Killed In Airplane Crash

PETALUMA, Calif. (AP) — Four persons were killed when their small plane crashed in fog just south of Petaluma Airport, the Sonoma County Sheriff's office said.

Witnesses saw the single-engine Piper Cherokee go down Sunday night at a spot about 40 miles north of San Francisco, and the bodies were pinned in the wreck for several hours. There were no survivors, said Lt. Jerry White.

Jurors In Webb County Indict Laredo's Mayor

LAREDO (AP) — The district manager for Central Power & Light Co. faced arraignment today on third-degree felony bribery charges stemming from goods and services allegedly provided without cost to former Mayor J.C. Martin Jr.

Carlton Whitworth of Laredo, the company itself and Martin were indicted Monday by a Webb County grand jury that convened on June 30 to look into alleged influence peddling.

The indictment said Martin accepted labor and materials without charge from the utility "on the representation and understanding that he would be influenced to set rates."

The company denied any wrongdoing, saying labor and services to Martin and 14 other customers were provided as a "public relations allowance." Company officials said area or security lights for 15 customers in the Laredo district were relocated without charge.

W.N. Woolsey of Corpus Christi, general counsel for CPL, called the indictments against Whitworth and CPL "frivolous and totally irresponsible." He said he saw absolutely no connection between CPL and Martin, whose 24-year tenure as Laredo mayor ended in April with a decision not to run again.

Martin, to be arraigned at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, was unavailable for comment. A woman who answered the telephone at his residence Monday night said he was not at home.

The investigation began after a Laredo radio station, KVOZ, received copies of receipts from CPL files that detailed three instances of labor or other services provided to Martin without cost.

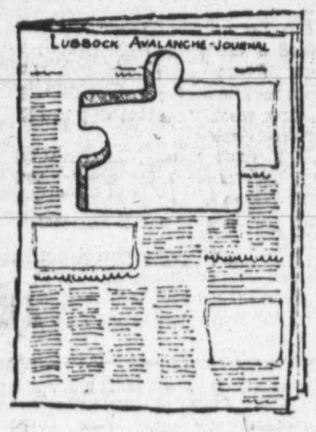

One was for a hot water heater installed at the mayor's house, a second was for outside lighting at his ranch and the third was for temporary lighting at his daughter's wedding reception.

Martin faces sentencing Aug. 4 in Brownsville on federal mail fraud charges that resulted from a grand jury's probe into reported street department misdoings.

Martin pleaded guilty to using warrants drawn against city funds to purchase paint and other construction materials for his ranch house.

Ag Officials Studying Ways To Hike Corn Price

WASHINGTON (AP) — he Agriculture Department is lookin at ways to boost the farm price of co but has not yet decided how to proced, according to a senior official.

Howard Hjort, USDA ector of economics, said that he leand toward larger participation by cor farmers in a three-year grain reserv program but has not ruled out a nuber of possible actions aimed at boostin corn prices.

"With those prices wakening the wa they have, we're lookin at anything an everything that can be done," Hjort sa Monday in an intervie with AP repo ers.

The farmer-owned grain reserves aimed at taking part of the nation's cess 1977-crop wheat and feed gra from the free marke by storing it forp to three years or unil higher prices tiger their release.

In a report Monday, the departmit said the reserve so far includes abt 370.9 million bushels of wheat. The ginal goal was to have at least 330 n- lion bushels of wheat stored by farmers plu about 670 million bushels of corn an other feed grains.

ut corn has dribbled slowly into the rserve program and amounted to about 120 million bushels as of July 21, plus lesser amounts of other feed grains.

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, last week urged Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland to take action on raising corn prices which, he said, have dropped to less than $2 a bushel in most Iowa markets, about 28 cents less than the cost of producing corn.

Clark said that one step could be for USDA to re-open the loan program for 1977-crop corn for an additional 60 days so that farmers can put more of their grain under loan and thus remove it from the market.

Clark also wants the department to make "a solid commitment" to the goal of getting at least 550 million bushels of corn into the three-year reserve program by Oct. 1 when the new 1978 crop will be ready for harvest.

Hjort said that he and other USDA officials "are taking a look" at Clark's proposals. But Hjort indicated that he thinks getting more corn into the three-year reserve would have more market price impact than if the 1977 loan program was reopened.

The 1977 corn loans, the amount farmers can borrow from USDA by using their grain as collateral — are for nine months. Thus, Hjort said, loans made on corn last October are beginning to come due now, meaning that farmers will repay the loans or let the Department take over their grain to satisfy what is owed.

Applications for the corn loans were shut off on May 31. Clark said the deadline was "largely arbitrary" and should be reopened.

But Hjort said there is a question on whether there would be a greater impact on corn prices with a re-opened loan program or with efforts to get more grain in the three-year reserve.

Under the reserve program, corn prices at the farm would have to rise to $2.50 a bushel before the grain is released for sale on the open market.

Hjort said that he thought more market price impact could be generated by farmers by putting additional corn into the reserve.

Earlier this year, it appeared to many grain producers that the department emphasized getting wheat into the reserve program over corn. Hjort said that this may have been the case and indicated that the department would step up its efforts to get more corn placed into the reserve.

Food Prices Up 77 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices American consumers pay have gone up about 77 percent since 1970, not so fast as in many other countries of the world, according to the Agriculture Department.

Based on a 1970 index of 100 percent, U.S. retail food prices in March average 177 percent of the base, says the "Agricultural Outlook" report for July. Only three countries for which food price statistics are available showed lower gains: West Germany 145 percent; the Netherlands 162; and Belgium 176.

The greatest increase in food prices since 1970 was in Argentina where inflation over-all has been high for years.

Argentina's food price index this spring was 35,134 percent of what it was in 1970, the report said.

Some other countries' food prices, based on the 1970 index, recently were: Canada 199 percent; Australia 207; France 209; Sweden 211; Japan 215; Denmark 217; South Africa 222; Italy 261; Mexico 295; United Kingdom 307; and Brazil 734.

"Food price indexes are obtained from official government sources and, because they are based on local currency prices, they are, for the most part, not directly affected by exchange rate fluctuations," the report said.

U.S. Farm Bureau Lambastes OSHA

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Citing the billions of dollars required to comply with government regulations, the American Farm Bureau Federation has called for a moratorium on new government controls.

And the federation is heading a drive to have the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) eliminated as a government agency.

"We believe OSHA is merely a burden on the taxpayers," Allan Grant, a California farmer and head of the farmers' group, said on Monday during a press conference.

Grant and about 500 other federation staff members from 49 states and Puerto Rico are in Memphis for a week-long conference. The meeting opened on Monday and will continue through Friday, when Earl Butz, former secretary of agriculture, is to speak.

The group's moratorium is directed at such agencies as OSHA, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Food and Drug Administration.

Grant said it costs billions of dollars each year to comply with regulations imposed by those agencies and others.

"And they don't account for one bit of production," he said. "All they do is cost money — and these costs must be passed on to the consumer."

Grant also cited the government's ban on a chemical designed to control the fire ant.

"Recently, I was in Mississippi and learned about some amputations that resulted from fire ant bites," he said. "This is more serious than people think. We need a chemical to control fire ants."

Grant, a member of President Carter's trade advisory commission, also discussed the importance of foreign trade — including the Communist bloc — to the American farmer.

"I think we should sell our farm products to whoever will buy them — Russia, China, or anybody else, if it benefits the United States," he said.

But Grant also warned that foreign nations' reluctance to offer concessions to American agricultural commodities could mean trouble for international trade negotiations in Geneva.

"We have given just about all we had to offer," he said.

"Some of their protections for trade with the U.S. expire in January. There had better be a deal, otherwise there'll be a chaotic situation."

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Speculative selling triggered moderate to sharp declines in grain prices on the Chicago Board of Trade Monday.

Wheat, corn and soybean prices lost the gains they registered late last week with news of a sharp dollar decline against foreign currencies.

Favorable growing conditions with rain over the weekend in corn and soybean regions combined with predictions of moderate export demand to push soybean prices 12 to 16 cents lower, with the largest drops shown in near contract months.

"The market just retraced Friday's rally. I guess people had the weekend to think things over," said a market analyst.

Police Receive Reports Of Rape, Sexual Abuse

Alleged incidents of rape and sexual abuse were part of a midsummer outbreak of violence in Lubbock early today.

A 33-year-old woman told police a man came to her eastside front door shortly before midnight Monday. After she rejected his invitation to go out with him, he reportedly returned to a waiting car driven by another man. The woman said she heard a car drive away and, thinking the two men had gone, walked around to the back of the house.

The victim told officers someone suddenly grabbed her arms from behind, dragged her across an alley, threw her to the ground and began tearing away her clothing. The woman reportedly struggled until the assailant picked her up and dropped her to the ground, knocking out her breathless.

She said the man then grabbed her by the throat and raped her.

After the attacker left the scene the woman called police and was taken to Health Sciences Center Hospital.

A 26-year-old woman said she was sleeping on a living room couch about 4 a.m. today when she was awakened by a man touching her.

Reports indicated the woman told the intruder she would submit if he would allow her to sit up a bit. When he consented, she jumped through an open window.

The resident, who was cut as she went through the window screen, ran to another house on the same property and awakened her parents, who called police.

Reportedly, the man had gotten inside the rear apartment by removing another window screen. However, it was unknown how he left the residence.

In recently reported burglaries, Roger Lynn Juno of 2117-C 15th St. said someone walked through an unlocked door at his apartment Monday and got away with $905 worth of stereo equipment.

A stereo, television set and necklace, in addition to some groceries, comprised the haul for whoever cut a window screen at Mrs. E.W. Hester's 3006 25th St. home Sunday.

According to Barbara Green of 2315 17th St., rear, a burglar pried her front door during a 10-minute period late Monday and made off with a $1,200 stereo.

Whoever kicked in a back gate and broke through a window at Wayne Groce's 3103 28th St. home Monday reportedly stole $1,500 worth of property, including two televisions and a stereo.

Attempts at moderating a civil dispute Monday went out the window as one Lubbock policeman became the target instead of the investigator of a city man's fury.

In one of two attacks on police officers Monday, a city lawman said he was investigating a domestic disturbance in the 6300-block of 25th Street when a man pulled a knife and began waving the weapon at him.

The incident began about 4:05 p.m. when a 24th Street resident told police the knife-wielding man had her furniture inside his home and had threatened to "kill the first person that came through that door."

On investigating, the man told the officer he had bought the furniture from the woman but had not been given a receipt or bill of sale. When the officer told him to contact a lawyer, he said, the man indicated he wouldn't give up "without a fight" and pulled the knife from his pocket.

After a 15-minute standoff in which the officer drew his revolver, the man finally dropped the knife and was arrested for aggravated assault on a police officer.

But, earlier Monday, another city policeman didn't get away from his harrowing experience as easily.

Just after midnight, police said, the officer patrolling the 700-block of East Broadway noticed a brown 1969 Cadillac without a proper inspection sticker.

The officer said he pulled the vehicle over and asked the 41-year-old woman driver for her driver's license. Reports indicate the woman presented the requested material but pulled it back before the officer could get her license number.

When he asked again, and she refused to give him the license, the officer said he told her he would have to arrest her for failure to identify herself.

With that, he said, she became enraged and kicked him in the groin.

After a short struggle to get the woman handcuffed that eventually required the aid of another officer, the policeman said a nearby store owner came to assist.

After the woman eventually was handcuffed, another scuffle ensued before she finally was booked into Lubbock County Jail on charges of aggravated assault on a police officer, failure to identify and resisting arrest.

Officers who weren't being attacked, meanwhile, were seeking two Mexican-American men suspected of trying to rape a 24-year-old Amarillo woman.

The woman said she and her husband had car trouble in the area of 19th Street and Avenue Q about 12:15 a.m. Monday when two men stopped to assist.

The men carried her spouse to an area near 4th Street and Avenue A and ordered him out of the vehicle, she told police, and then returned to the disabled car for her.

After convincing the woman that her husband was waiting at a car rental firm for her, the woman said she went with the men.

She said she was driven to an area near North Quaker Avenue and Clovis Road and told, "We've got plans for you."

One man took a .38-caliber revolver from her purse, she said, and threatened her before the second man persuaded him to let her go.

A 23-year-old Elkhart Avenue resident told officers Monday a man she met in an elevator at the Human Development Center at 1201 Texas Ave. Saturday robbed her of $300.

The woman said the man, about 28-to-35-years-old, asked if she knew where he could buy drugs. When she said no, he showed her a knife and a pistol in his clothing and grabbed her arm.

She said the man drove her to a club near 10th Street and Avenue C and then to Buffalo Lakes where he tried to undress her. After a struggle, she said, the man gave up and drove to Mackenzie Park about 8 p.m.

Telling her he had to go home, she said he fled on foot with about $300 taken from her purse.

Benjamin Hinojosa of 3221 Duke St. told police he was walking in the area near Erskine Street and Gary Avenue about 11:10 p.m. Sunday when a vehicle pulled up beside him and an unknown man shot him in the leg. He was treated and later released from the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Suspected Robber Nabbed At Home

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In what was almost a comedy of errors, a ski-masked bandit made off with more than $300 from Furr's Supermarket at 50th Street and Boston Avenue early today. The suspected robber managed to get to his driveway, then he went to jail.

Diane Buckner said she was checking her cash in the market's office shortly after the midnight closing when a man wearing a white ski mask walked in.

He told her to be quiet and he announced "this is a holdup," but that was as far as he got verbally as the clerk ran screaming from the office area.

The 22-year-old checker said the next thing she heard was the sound of breaking glass as the robber pushed a shopping cart through a door to get out of the store with the cash.

Minutes later, two Lubbock Police Department junenile officers, Lt. Bobby Duncan and Sgt. Bobby Barker, heard the radio description of the robber and his getaway vehicle.

At 66th Street and University Avenue they noticed a car matching the description nearly collide with another vehicle as it headed south. Activating their red lights and siren, the officers followed the suspect several blocks to the driveway of what turned out to be his home.

After verifying that the driver matched the description of the bandit, police found a .22-caliber automatic pistol, as well as a clip containing 10 live rounds of ammunition, under the front seat of the auto. Police also recovered the allegedly stolen money from the man's front pocket.

The 18-year-old suspect was issued a traffic ticket and escorted back to the scene of the heist, then to Lubbock County Jail.

Later, as two other juvenile officers, Cpl. Frank Treadway and officer Ronnie Overby, were questioning the suspect at the jail, they reportedly received information that the white ski mask had been dropped in a dumpster not far from the holdup site. A short time later police recovered a paper sack containing the item reportedly used in the robbery.

As investigators questioned witnesses at the store, a new employee said he had seen the man wearing the white ski mask at the other end of the building a short time before the heist and spoke to him. However, the young man said he did not think anything was wrong, and, apparently, the stranger then went to the front of the store where he confronted the clerk.

Reports indicated the suspect apparently entered the market before its closing and then hid in the rear storage area until shortly after midnight.

Ironically, police said, the heist was the second such experience for the clerk, who was the victim of another robbery several months ago at a convenience store.

Jurors Decide Acosta Guilty

A 137th District Court jury deliberated five minutes today before returning a guilty verdict against a 42-year-old Lubbock man.

Judge Robert C. Wright scheduled a punishment hearing for Phillip Lozano Acosta, of 2110 Duke St., No. 101, this afternoon.

Acosta was charged with the March 30, 1977 burglary of a mobile home in New Deal. Five juveniles also were implicated.

Fred Harkey, a farmer, told the court he saw a car drive near his barn, and he began watching it with binoculars. The car drove to the nearby mobile home of Epifanio Cisneros, and its occupants loaded a television set, guns and other goods into the trunk, according to Harkey.

Harkey said he followed the car in his pickup to North University Avenue, where he was able to copy down the license number and telephone the sheriff's department with the information. Lubbock police stopped the car containing Acosta and the youths a short time later.

Workshop Slated By Zoning Panel

Planning and Zoning Commission members will meet with the Urban Design Advisory Committee at noon Wednesday in the Emergency Operations Center in city hall to discuss an historic preservation ordinance.

The ordinance, which the advisory committee has worked on the past 19 months, is set for a public hearing before the Planning and Zoning Commission on Aug. 3.

A public hearing was scheduled on July 13, but a notice of the meeting was never posted.

The ordinance would give the city authority to prevent the destruction or significant alteration of historically significant buildings or sites.

Wilderness Proposal Rejected By Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The potentially oil-rich Arctic National Wildlife Range on Alaska's North Slope won't be designated a wilderness if a Senate Energy Committee has its way. The committee on Monday rejected 12-7 an amendment by Sen. John A. Durkin, D-N.H., that would have put the range off limits to development.

Several senators expressed concern over how to protect wildlife habitat while attempting to determine potential of oil and natural gas reserves.

Friends Say Jordan Opposed To Drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Friends say Hamilton Jordan was scolding people about marijuana and cocaine long before President Carter told him to order White House staffers to leave drugs alone or leave, period.

"I call him one of those 'death on drugs' people," said Terry O'Connell, a former Carter campaigner. "He'll tell you every horror story in the book about the dangers of putting poisonous things into your body."

Jordan read a directive from Carter to the 11 members of the president's senior staff Monday, ordering them to tell their aides to avoid drugs or "seek employment elsewhere."

Carter said he wanted his orders understood by all White House employees "in no uncertain terms."

The directive followed the resignation last week of Dr. Peter G. Bourne, the White House adviser on drug abuse who admitted writing a false prescription for a potent sedative, Quaalude.

Bourne later was quoted as saying there was a "high incidence" of marijuana use by White House staffers and occasional use of cocaine.

"I expect every member of the White House staff to obey the law," Carter wrote in his directive. "Whether you agree with the law or whether or not others obey the law is totally irrelevant. You will obey it, or you will seek employment elsewhere."

"If you want to hear a lecture, just tell Hamilton how great you think cocaine is," said O'Connell, who socializes with his old friends from the campaign. "He's very puritanical on that subject. He lambastes people on the use of drugs."

John Golden, a college roommate of Jordan's from Georgia and now a fund-raiser with the Democratic National Committee, agreed. "No one would dare use drugs in front of Hamilton. He would get real upset about that."

Another White House aide said, "The drug of choice in this administration seems to me to be beer."

Jordan's fondness for beer, bourbon and amaretto — a liqueur — has been well chronicled, including an incident last winter in which he reportedly spat a drink on a woman in a Washington bar. Jordan and the White House denied it.

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, announced Carter's orders to the staff in a presidential memo that began: "I am deeply concerned over recent reports that some members of the White House staff are using illegal drugs."

Powell was asked whether there was any inquiry to determine if the reports were well founded. "I know of no responsible way to conduct an investigation," Powell said.

"I see grass at parties, now and then, but that's all I see," said Golden.

"I have been at parties where people are off huddling in a corner somewhere passing a joint around," said O'Connell. "But I would not call those people from any of the important key positions at the White House. Believe me, no one is a habitual user of drugs."

White House staffers and Georgia insiders also questioned Bourne's sources of information, pointing out that he was older than most of the Carter crowd and moved around in the fancy social circles that most of the younger administration workers avoid.

"I don't know what he would know. He never hangs around with any of us," said Scott Burnett, who works in the White House scheduling office. "He had a completely different set of friends. He was more with the Washington social crowd than with the Georgians."

Pat Caddell, President Carter's pollster, said, "I haven't seen anybody using cocaine when Peter Bourne was around. But even if I had I would never say anything. It's a serious story to accuse people of using illegal drugs. Besides it's private. It's like talking about people's sex lives."

City Veterans Set Meeting

AMVETS, a veterans organization which admits both men and women, will have an organizational meeting at 10 p.m. Saturday in the KoKo Inn.

American Veterans of World War II, Korea and Vietnam who served between Sept. 16, 1940, and May 7, 1975, are eligible for membership.

A national representative for the organization and state AMVET officials will be on hand for the charter presentation and swearing in of officers.

AMVETS has a nationwide network of service officers who can assist veterans with preparation of claims or any other problems with the Veterans Administration or other government agencies, a spokesman said. The organization also keeps an eye on bills coming before Congress which may be of concern to veterans.

Organizations for wives and children of veterans are available for AMVETS members. The posts offer community service programs, patriotic activities and hospital programs as well.

AMVETS' present membership is 200,000, represented through 1,110 posts across the country. Membership for veterans is $10 a year and veterans currently enrolled as students pay only $4 a year.

Changes Eyed In Cattle Grade System

Dr. Robert A. Long, animal scientist at Texas Tech, is participating in a National Cattlemen's Association (NCA) advisory meeting this week in Denver.

The meeting is focusing on the pros and cons of proposed changes in the feeder cattle grading system.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) recently sponsored an experiment to determine the relationship between feeder cattle frame, size and muscling, feedlot performance and the final slaughter grading.

Using data collected from the feeder cattle, selected for frame size (large, medium and small) and muscling (very thickly muscled, slightly thickly muscled and inferior muscling), the USDA is considering changing the current feeder cattle grading system, from one based on predicting the final slaughter grade to one based on actual cattle frame size and muscling as the animals enter the feedlot.

Long has been involved for some time in research with the objective of finding better methods of predicting performance, optimum slaughter time and carcass value among feeder cattle.

Large frame cattle need to be fed a longer period of time than small frame cattle to reach optimum slaughter quality, Long said. The cattle should be seperated as they come into the feedlots according to their frame size and muscling.

Long's research has been directed toward determining how to group the incoming feeder cattle in order to separate them according to optimum time in the feedlot.

The end result of the NCA advisory meeting, according to Gene Schroeder, chairman of the NCA feeder cattle grading subcommittee, will be in the formulation of the NCA position on the proposed feeder cattle grading changes.

Superintendent Ed Irons says it's a conservative budget, and school trustees may be about to prove him right. They spent five hours Monday studying the $47.8 million fiscal plan — and deleting nothing.

School board president Charles Waters nevertheless said he has "high hopes" for a tax cut. He said his colleagues may "take steps in that direction" when they reconvene today for another work session.

Waters said he has "a few ideas" for trimming proposed expenditures. He said the school board simply may order Irons to reduce the budget by a fixed amount or percentage.

But even without such a slash, Irons' budget seems to hold promises for tax reduction. For one thing, it contains surpluses of $2.5 million in the general fund and $2.6 million in the debt-service account.

School trustees may decide to rebate some of this money to taxpayers via a tax cut. For every $1 million the "carryover balances" can be reduced, the school district's tax rate could be lowered eight cents from its present $1.58 per $100 valuation.

A major increase in Irons' proposed budget is for implementation of the Lubbock Independent School District's court-ordered integration plan. For example, cost of bus operations is projected to increase from about $215,000 to about $725,000.

Part of this is offset, however, by a $90,000 reduction in school aide salaries (bus drivers will double as aides) and a $50,000 increase in state transportation funds.

Integration is by no means the only budget increase proposed for the coming year.

The proposed budget includes:

—Salary increases of about seven percent. Most of the pay raise (4.5 percent) would come from the state. Irons has suggested that local funds be used to supplement state funds another 2.5 percent.

—Twenty-two additional classroom teachers. This would allow the district to lower its pupil-teacher ratios to 24.5-to-1 at the elementary level and 21.8-to-1 at the secondary level. Also, the added personnel would enable the district to initiate eighth-grade reading programs at six junior high schools.

—Two additional counselors. With reorganization of present staff, the district will be able to place full-time counselors in 13 elementary schools to aid children with learning disabilities.

Irons said the district's overall proposed budget increase amounts to 6.3 percent — much less than in previous years. He said this was accomplished by trimming personnel in such areas as special education aides.

State-set minimum salaries are being raised slightly. That fact, coupled with teachers' advancing a step on the experience ladder, will yield salary increases of $370 to about $700.

In addition to the state salaries, the Lubbock district pays teachers $500 to $1,000 more. Irons has suggested raising these "local increments" — possibly $200 to $300 — to provide teacher pay raises of about seven percent overall.

Teachers themselves have asked for much larger increases. Waters said he believes the superintendent's suggestion is "reasonable."

Irons called his proposal a "very, very minimal raise."

Teachers who have reached the top of the experience ladder would get state-mandated increases of only about $130 if the school board doesn't pitch in any local funds.

Teachers To Get Boost In Pay Under Proposal By Ed Irons

Here is a summary of major changes in Lubbock Independent School District expenditures proposed by Superintendent Ed Irons for the coming year.

Teacher salaries: $1.63 million increase. This provides a 7 percent pay hike (4.5 percent from the state for most teachers plus 2.5 percent locally for all teachers). It also includes hiring 22 more teachers.

Bus driver salaries: $366,349 increase. To implement court-ordered integration, the district plans to hire 48 more drivers, change their workday from five hours to eight hours and create a new pay scale.

Instructional equipment: $325,492 increase. This would allow replacement of wornout equipment at all schools ($268,318); and purchase of electronics equipment for Dunbar-Struggs High School ($128,900), cooperative vocational program equipment for Dunbar-Struggs ($30,000), piano laboratories for the "magnet programs" of Dunbar-Struggs and Iles Elementary ($22,525), typing labs for Matthews and O.L. Slaton junior highs ($36,000), and language labs for Mackenzie Junior High ($6,400).

School maintenance employee salaries: $216,075 increase. This provides for reclassification of 10 positions and a new salary schedule.

Insurance: $212,645 increase. The district expects an increase in unemployment insurance ($150,000) and in property insurance.

School administration salaries: $111,984 increase. This includes a pay raise commensurate with the teachers', plus hiring another assistant principal.

Renovations: $105,300 increase. The district plans to renovate lighting at Monterey High School and replace the gym floor at Dunbar.

Tax collection: $94,379 increase. The city-school tax office is planning to mount a delinquent tax collection drive. Also, the district wants to raise its current-year collection rate from 95 percent to 97 percent.

Increase in workmen's compensation for maintenance employees: $90,614.

Additional subsidy for athletic programs: $71,644.

School site purchase: $63,000. As per its integration order, the district plans to buy a 20-acre site for a new junior high school south of Loop 289 at 82nd Street and Avenue N.

Counselor salaries: $59,038 increase. This provides for a state-local pay raise and addition of two counselors.

Increase for natural gas: $57,850.

Instructional administration: $51,910 increase for state-local pay raise.

Increase in workmen's compensation insurance for bus drivers: $46,908.

Replacement of school maintenance equipment: $41,190.

Increase in workmen's compensation for teachers: $40,310.

Salaries of coordinators, consultants and librarians: $35,518 increase for state-local pay raise.

School clerical salaries: $31,638 increase. This provides for pay hikes and hiring 6 more clerks.

Electricity cost increase: $30,000.

Student supplies: $29,601 increase.

Health insurance for teachers: $26,318 increase. Premiums on district-paid insurance coverage went up in January.

Bus drivers for special education students: $24,983 increase. Their jobs would be restructured similar to other bus drivers.

Gasoline: $23,910 increase for the 40 buses needed for integration.

Student trips: $22,862 increase.

Office equipment replacement: $21,645. This would provide for equipment for offices, auditoriums, gymnasiums and cafeterias.

General administrative salaries: $21,135 for state-local pay raise.

On the "minus" side of the ledger, Irons has proposed an $88,925 decrease in salaries of monitor aides, previously used for cafeteria and general school duties. This would be accomplished by cutting 56 monitor aides and transferring those personnel units to bus driver positions.

Also proposed is cutting 28 special education aides and eight kindergarten aides, for a reduction of $71,851. Administrators said the special ed aides were cut, in part, because the state has reduced personnel allotments in this area.

Several other budget areas for next year also reflect decreases, but primarily because of emergency expenditures that the district made during the 1977-78 school year.

For example, the district tapped its current year's budget for $697,060 for 40 integration-related buses; and $100,495 for radios and seat belts for those vehicles.

The district also has spent $287,480 from 1977-78 funds for renovation — $182,500 at Iles and Dunbar-Struggs (mostly to enlarge and modify classrooms) and $51,000 at the Southeast Elementary School site (which is being converted into a bus depot).

Many Washington Buses Put Back Into Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — A wildcat strike that has crippled the capital's transit system since Thursday showed signs of ending today, but there was little relief for weary commuters who were unable to tell if their particular bus routes were operating.

A spokesman for the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority said about three-fourths of the 1,500 to 1,600 buses normally in service for the morning rush hour were back on the streets.

The biggest problems were reported on suburban Virginia routes served by Metro's Alexandria Division, one of eight in the transit system.

But the spokesman, Cody Pfanstiehl, said it was impossible to tell how many commuters would wait for a bus that wasn't coming because all divisions were affected to some extent.

The uncertainty caused many of the system's half-million daily commuters to spend another day navigating massive traffic jams.

Metro's commuter rail system was in operation for the second straight day. It carried fewer passengers than normal on Monday.

On Monday night, homebound commuters suffered through the worst traffic jam since the walkout began. At the peak of the rush hour, only 186 buses were operating.

The strike began as a protest over Metro's withholding of a 20-cent hourly cost-of-living raise. The issue will be decided by arbitration under a speeded up timetable approved by a U.S. district judge.

But strikers also want blanket amnesty for the 23 transit employees suspended for strike activities. So far, Metro has refused.

An officer of Amalgamated Transit Union Local 689 said that police will be present today at all bus garages and at entry terminals for subway employees.

Rodney Richmond, secretary-treasurer of the local, added that officers will ride the buses and subways to protect drivers.

The union is not supporting the strike. Management officials claim a minority of drivers are intimidating the majority who want to work.

Historic Mansion Once Social Center

Where to go after the party at the White House? For 150 years, the answer was, go across Lafayette Park to Decatur House, of course — if you had been invited, that is.

And, where to go after touring the White House today? Why, to the Decatur House, of course, and the public is invited.

A historic house museum owned and operated by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, Decatur House is a handsome three-story Federal-style mansion built by Commodore Stephen Decatur with prize money he was awarded for his victory over the Barbary pirates.

Visitors today find the first floor decorated in the style of the Decaturs in 1820, while the second floor reflects the Victorian tastes of another family, the Beales, who lived there from 1871 to 1893.

Visitors also find the enduring classic symmetry dictated by the architect, Benjamin Henry Latrobe, who designed sections of the Capitol and the White House.

Commodore Decatur and his wife occupied the house for little more than a year during which it was one of the city's social centers. All of this came to an end in March, 1820, when Decatur was fatally wounded in a duel with Commodore James Barron.

During the ensuring half century, the house was put to several uses and had many distinguished occupants. It served as the French Legation, and then as the Russian Legation. Three secretaries of state — Henry Clay, Martin Van Buren and Edward Livingston — lived there, and so did John Gadsby, a hotel and tavern proprietor. Five Congressmen were also among the house's occupants prior to the Civil War when the Federal government expropriated it to serve as the Commissary-General's office.

Decatur House's second major period began in 1871 when it was purchased by Mary Edwards Beale, wife of General Edward Fitzgerald Beale. It remained in that family until it was given to the National Trust in 1956. The second floor today contains many reminders of the colorful general. The California state seal is inlaid in the floor — reminder that Beale and Kit Carson in 1848 had carried to Washington the news of American victories in the Mexican War and the accession of California, and that Beale then had made a second trip to bring samples of California gold to the capital.

Oil paintings show the camels which he persuaded the government to import from Tunis for service in the New Mexico Territory.

The general's son, Truxtun Beale, a diplomat, inherited the house in 1902. After his death in 1936, his widow, Marie Oge Beale, continued to live there and her annual supper for the diplomatic corps was a highlight of the social season.

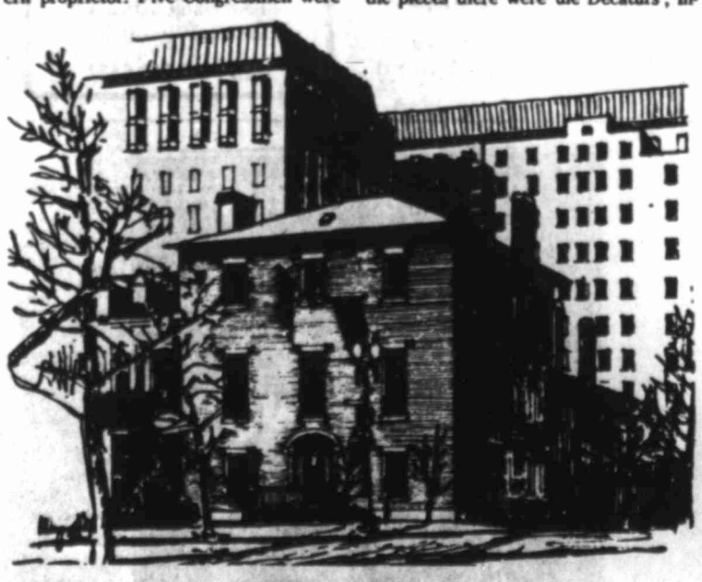

Today visitors emerge from the Decatur House with a vivid knowledge of the contrast between lifestyles at the beginning of the nineteenth century and at its end.

The Beale's second floor is characterized by rich fabrics, upholstered furniture, elaborate carvings and heavy drapes.

The Decatur's first floor is far more sparse with most of its furniture of delicate and elegant line. Some but not all of the pieces there were the Decaturs', including the bed on which it is thought he died of his mortal duelling wound.

Those are there to be seen by all visitors.

There is another reminder of the Commodore that few have ever seen, and none in living memory. It is said that Commodore Decatur's ghost has been seen, floating through the drawing room doors, in his hand a black box containing the duelling pistol that caused his death at age 41.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

Most neophytes know a considerable amount about holdup plays. But once in a while there is a concealed combination that tends to fool even relatively experienced players.

The bidding was straightforward. South showed his balanced 19-20 points with a jump rebid in no trump, and North raised confidently to game.

West made the normal lead of his fourth-best heart, East played the queen and declarer won the king. Since there was no way to make nine tricks without the diamond suit, declarer ran the nine. East won the king and returned a heart, and West took four heart tricks to defeat the contract one trick.

Had declarer held the ace of hearts instead of the king-jack, he would certainly have made the contract. He would have held up the ace at least one round, and the contract would have been safe. If hearts were 4-3 and East had a heart to return after winning the king of diamonds, that would have meant that the suit was breaking 4-3 and that the defenders would get only three heart tricks and the king of diamonds.

Declarer should have realized that, once East had followed with the queen, his king-jack were equivalent to an ace. All he had to do to ensure his contract was to duck the first heart trick.

Whether or not West wins the heart continuation with the ace, declarer is safe. When East gets in with the king of diamonds, either he will be exhausted of hearts, or the suit will represent no danger.

We admit that declarer might be conceding an extra trick with this maneuver. But surely that is a small price to pay to guarantee a vulnerable game.

SPOTLIGHT ON... Family News

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I'm another one of your readers who never thought she'd be writing to Dear Abby, but here I am.

I found out recently that my husband went to a massage parlor, and needless to say, he received more than a massage for his money. He didn't tell me on his own, but I found out about it because he charged it! Can you believe this? When I confronted him with the evidence, he said he had planned to tell me, but he just hadn't gotten around to it.

We've been married for six years and nothing like this has ever happened before. He asked me to please forgive him, and he promised it wouldn't happen again.

I've always considered myself to be a forgiving person, but I can't seem to swallow my pride and leave this incident in the past where it belongs. Also, I have an inferiority complex, and this hasn't helped matters any.

I know you're no psychiatrist, Abby. And maybe I need one. Meanwhile, I'd appreciate some ideas on how to get over this hurt.

SLOW TO HEAL

Dear Slow: The only way to get over a hurt is to not dwell on it. Drive those "poor me" thoughts out of your mind and think of something else. Time is your best ally.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman whose friends consider her some kind of freak because she doesn't drive a car could have been written by me — but wasn't.

I learned to drive early in life, but I gave it up for the following reasons:

(1) I don't really like to drive, which is reason enough in a world where we have to do so many things whether we like them or not.

(2) I'm afraid to drive with all the drunks, kooks, dopes and plain incompetents who are out there killing and maiming other motorists.

(3) I have slow reflexes, and I lack confidence in my ability to handle a car expertly.

I recently observed my 65th birthday, which is more than can be said for thousands of teenagers who were killed in automobile accidents because they couldn't wait to get their driver's licenses.

So should anyone be so ill-bred as to ask me, "Are you too stupid to drive a car?" I shall reply, "No, I'm too smart!"

DON'T DRIVE AND STILL ALIVE AT 65

Dear Don't: If more people were as smart as you, we'd have more "alive at 65."

• • •

DEAR ABBY: DESPERATE IN DENVER complained that her relatively young husband has lost interest in sex. He hasn't. He has lost interest in HER.

He won't go to a doctor because he knows there's nothing wrong with him, so he'd look pretty silly. He is getting it somewhere else. I hope she finds out about it sooner than I did.

MAD IN MADISON

Dear Mad: Judging from my mail, you are in the minority. Most women don't want to know. If they did, they'd see the obvious.

• • •

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Additional Care Helps Prevent Food Problems

ST. LOUIS -"A little extra time and care will got a long way towards helping to prevent spoilage or even food poisoning when preparing certain types of salads for your summer picnics and barbeques," says Cynthia Keller, a food scientist and microbiologist.

"There is no reason for ham, egg, tuna, chicken or macaroni salads or coleslaw to be spoiled by bacterial growth if the food is properly prepared and stored," she explained. "Actually, homemade salads are generally safe because they are most often eaten right after they're made. The problem of food poisoning, which is caused by bacteria, can arise when salads are held for a period of hours at warm temperatures before they're eaten."

Certain conditions must exist before the mayonnaise-based salads and cole slaws become food poisoning hazards.

The salad can be contaminated with a type of food poisoning bacteria - via ingredients, utensils, containers, or people. Also, the salad must have a low acid content that can support the growth of food poisoning bacteria. Finally, the salad must remain at a temperature conducive to the growth of such bacteria.

There are a number of precautions that can be taken to prevent the growth of bacteria in homemade salads:

— "Don't leave any of these types of foods above refrigeration temperature for several hours at a time," the scientist said. "If bacteria are present, they can multiply and reach harmful levels in a matter of hours under improper storage conditions."

— Most commercially prepared salads, Miss Keller explained, are usually formulated so that the product's high acid content prevents the growth of food poisoning bacteria. The chemical preservatives used in these salads are aimed primarily at inhibiting the growth of yeasts and mold — micro-organisms which can grow in a high-acid environment and at lower temperatures than bacteria.

— "Common sense is the best tool of all," she said. "Use clean utensils, containers and food preparation areas."

— "Make sure you use good quality ingredients. In fact, use plenty of good quality mayonnaise or salad dressing in the salads. Despite what many people may think, mayonnaise and salad dressings do not increase the potential of spoilage or health hazards. Instead, because of their high-acid content, these ingredients retard the growth of spoilage organisms and food poisoning bacteria."

STAR BILLING — Fashion spotlights handbags and suits for fall. The suit moves into this season's fashion picture, and handbags are more structured, with leather the primary material used. Convertibles in hand-to-shoulder-to-clutch designs make the best accompaniments, with touches of smoke Lucite horn, tortoise or wood handles to complete the look.

Moscow Olympics Goal Of American Gymnast

By MARGARET NELSON

DURHAM, N.H. (AP) — Every day Denise Walker spends at least three hours in the gym — balancing, vaulting, running, stretching and tumbling.

With the single-minded intensity of a champion gymnast, she jumps confidently from the floor onto a 3-foot-high balance beam practicing moves that will draw gasps of admiration from audiences.

Her goal is the 1980 Olympics.

The 17-year-old freshman at the University of New Hampshire sees little of what makes up the life of most of her classmates. Her mornings might belong to the classroom, but her afternoons are filled with balance beams, uneven bars and the sometimes tedious repetition of exercise.

"I saw my first hockey game this week because I ook a day off, but I don't have time to be involved in extra-curricular activities," she said.

Denise's soft voice and slight 5-xot-2, 90-pound frame give an appearance of frailty that is immediately dispelled when she hurls herself from bar to bar on the uneven bars.

Her tentative conversation is punctuted with shy smiles. But her large blue eyes are unwavering, revealing the tenacity that marks her gymnastic performances.

She has devoted most of the past six years to gymnastics. In exchange for missed teenage pleasures she can say she has traveled across the country and competed against some of the top women in the sport.

Her skill on the balance beam, and in particular her ability to perform a front walk-over on the width of the beam, is a delight to crowds and earns her almost perfect scores at meets.

She fell just short of qualifying for the U.S. Olympic team in 1976. Now, she only looks to 1980.

"I put together the best performance I possibly could then. Of course I was disappointed, but it wasn't the end of the world," she said.

Her coach says she could be Olympic material even though in 1980 she will be 19, several years over what is considered the prime age for female gymnasts.

"It is a realistic goal as far as she is concerned, if she is willing to make the sacrifices, and the sacrifices are considerable," says Lou Datilio, coach of the UNH women's gymnastic team.

Denise says she follows no special diet to maintain her weight. "I eat what I want until I start gaining weight."

But it is her slight frame and flexibility which allow her to exhibit the grace that characterizes many famous Olympic contenders such as Romania's Nadia Comaneci.

"She can perform almost perfectly on the balance beam with little warm-up. And even when she is having a bad day and occasionally falls, she just gets right back on the beam with no fear," says Datilio.

The UNH team has won all its meets this year, even though it faced much tougher competition than in the past.

Denise's career in gymnastics began when she was 12 and took a local tumbling course. The course led to a competition, which she won. The competition led to gymnastics camp, which led to a full-time commitment.

At 13, she began attending gymnastics school in New Haven, Conn., as a full-time student. While at the Muriel Grossfeld School, she began participating in national competition.

The concentration and cross-country travel have left her with a poise and apparent sophistication beyond that of her classmates. She feels that the disciplined life of a gymnast has helped her mature.

"Gymnastics has had a definite effect on my personality. Since I was 12, I have been totally responsible for myself," she says.

Actress Enjoys New Life Style

She opted out of the celluloid rat race, married in London and has two children.

Statistics Show Pneumonia Presents Summer Threat

NEW YORK (Special) — To most of us, pneumonia seems a wintertime affliction — a penalty paid for wearing too light a coat on a bitter December evening, a nasty pay-off collected for a February cold ignored. But pneumonia is a summer threat, too.

And, while exposure to inclement weather is often the prelude to the onset of the disease, scientists are convinced each individual's level of resistance is the real determining factor.

Most surprising, newly-released statistics reveal, is the discovery that as many as 40 per cent of the nation's pneumonia cases develop in the late spring and summer, between April and September.

That means that as few as 60 per cent occur in the fall and winter between October and March.

Moreover, according to a recent report by the National Center or Health Statistics in Washington, D.C., unlike major life-threatening diseases which tapered off somewhat, deaths attributed to pneumonia rose some five per cent from 1975 to 1976, claiming close to 54,000 lives and assuming the unenviable rank as the nation's fifth leading killer. (In descending order, the most lethal causes were heart disease, cancer, strokes and accidents.)

Pneumonia is misunderstood in other ways as well. Once an illness that instilled fear at the mere mention of its name, pneumonia now triggers only momentary uneasiness in most of those who develop it or who know someone who has. After all, the majority of Americans believe, penicillin and other antibiotics have upended the illness and brought it under total control.

Actually, while the death rate from pneumonia has been slashed dramatically from what it was before the antibiotics, cases of pneumonia are frequent as ever. As many as 3,190,000 cases may have occurred in the U.S. in 1978 (since pneumonia's not a reportable disease, these figures are government estimates) — and that means as many as 1,270,000 cases over the April-September span.

Pnuemonia, of course, is a broad term for severe lung inflammation caused by many different bacteria and viruses. The most common bacterial form of the disease is pneumococcal pneumonia, which has been estimated by experts to claim many thousands of lives each year.

As might be expected, the people at increased risk from pneumococcal pneumonia are either 50 and over (especiall in the 65-plus category) or are affected by a chronic problem such as heart or lung disease, diabetes or kidney failure. People with spleen troubles (a major complication for sickle cell anemia sufferers) are also more vulnerable than normal to pneumococcal pneumonia.

Happily, science has come to the rescue. Unlike penicillin, which is administered to treat pneumococcal pneumonia, a new vaccine, which helps protect against the disease, is now available.

Clinical tests demonstrated that the vaccine is highly effective against the types of pneumococcal pneumonia that cause more than 80 per cent of all cases.

Because the disease does crop up during the spring and summer, vaccination of those in the increased risk categories should, if their doctors concur, be carried out as soon as possible.

Further, the vaccine cannot be administered if the recipient is suffering from a temporary respiratory or other infection. As most of us know from first-hand experience, such infections frequently grab a foothold in the fall and winter, making the warmer seasons the right time for the preventive shot in appropriate patients.

As with any vaccine, side effects may occur, and only a doctor can determine whether vaccination is right for a particular individual.

Beyond the all-important human terms, pneumonia takes its toll in other ways as well. During 1976 alone, treatment costs for all types of pneumonia exceeded a billion dollars. An incredible 600,000 man-years were also lost.

And, those losses occured year-round. Pneumonia doesn't hibernate.

COOKOUT SAFETY

A few simple rules will insure that your cookouts are always safe: never add liquid starter after coals are ignited, never use gasoline as a starter fluid, keep young children and pets away from the grill area, wear heavy cooking mittens and avoid wearing loose clothing.

RIOT'S AFTERMATH — Warden Thaddeus Pinkney of the Pontiac, Ill., Correctional Center gestures as he describes damage done by rampaging inmates during a weekend riot in which three guards were slain. According to prison officials and independent critics of the American penal system, overcrowded prison conditions lead inevitably to violence. (AP Laserphoto)

Prison Officials Blame Riots On Overcrowding, July Heat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prison officials and critics of the penal system say they weren't surprised by two recent prison riots that took six lives. The mix of stifling July heat, overcrowded cells and boredom made the outbreaks all but inevitable, they say.

"We've asked ourselves why it hasn't happened sooner," said Raymond Olsen, an assistant director of the American Correctional Association. "Prisons are rotten places and with overcrowding you've got a rotten place to have too many people."

Three guards died in a riot at the Pontiac Correctional Center in Illinois and two inmates and a guard were stabbed to death in an outbreak at the Georgia State Prison in Reidsville during violence over the weekend.

The Illinois facility, built for 600 inmates, now houses about 2,000. The Georgia prison, intended for 1,100, holds almost 2,500.

Many officials and prison authorities surveyed by The Associated Press acknowledge similar violence wouldn't be surprising at any prison where inmates are packed together in oppressive heat with little opportunity for privacy and recreation. Sexual and racial tensions are likely to be near the flashpoint, they say.

But Alvin J. Bronstein, who heads a prison reform project for the American Civil Liberties Union, said he has an "intuitive feeling" that prison conditions in many states have improved since the notorious Attica riot in upstate New York in 1971.

In some states, federal judges have ordered state officials to correct overcrowding, to separate hardened criminals from more youthful offenders and to alleviate other sources of trouble. The prison reform movement in the 1970s also has attracted a number of activist lawyers like Bronstein who have kept up the pressure for change.

But a major influence on prison populations, officials say, has been the trend by judges to hand out stiffer sentences that keep criminals in jail longer.

In New York State, for example, the prison population this month is 103 per cent of capacity. There are 20,084 inmates in the state system, up from 12,400 just five years ago.

To cope with the increased tensions of overcrowding, states like New York have hired more black and Hispanic guards, liberalized rules on prison mail and made special allowances for religious diets.

But many feel the potential for trouble has changed little.

"There's a get-tough attitude, with heavier discipline and more use of physical force," said Lanny Walter, head of the Prisoners Legal Service in Albany, N.Y. "I think it's going to incite trouble."

In contrast to many state systems, Minnesota's program frequently is cited by reformers as perhaps the most progressive in the nation, one that stresses teaching literacy and job skills to inmates and moving them to community-based facilities in preparation for their return to the civilian population.

Orville Pung, executive state assistant corrections commissioner, said, "Essentially Minnesota has faced a pretty stable situation in terms of the population. Our institutions are not at capacity, inmates have individual cells and idleness is not a problem."

But even in Minnesota, where racial tensions are minimal, Pung says the potential for violence is great. "We don't want to give you the impression that we don't have problems. They're volatile institutions even under the best of conditions."

The tensions of prison life are heightened in some regions where groups that are minorities in the general population constitute a majority behind prison walls.

In the Georgia state prison that was the scene of violence last week, nearly two out of three inmates are black. The racial problems became so acute, with murders common, that a federal judge ordered inmates separated by race.

Perhaps the most dramatic example of the potential for race war in the cellblock is found in California.

Two rival Mexican gangs, the Mexican Mafia and the Nuestra Familia, were formed in prisons there in the 1950s. And their power is so great now that officials try to keep them apart by sending members of the two gangs to different prisons.

"Just to belong to the Nuestra Familia is a capital crime as far as the Mexican Mafia is concerned," said one California prison official.

Efforts to relieve overcrowding by building new prisons generally face tough political obstacles.

"You never hear about anybody trying to get elected by promising to improve prisons," Olsen said. "It's not a good issue."

With the passage of the tax-cutting Proposition 13 by California voters last month, any drive for expanding or modernizing penal institutions may be dampened further.

Local Man Faces Indecency Charge

Charges of indecency with a child have been filed against a 23-year-old Lubbock man in connection with an alleged July 16 attack on an East Lubbock boy.

Bond for John Henry Jenkins of 3602 Yucca Ave. was recommended at $50,000, the district attorney's office said today.

A 13-year-old youth said he was followed by a man and then attacked as he walked to a store near his home. He told police he offered to pay his attacker to leave him alone, but was able to escape only after he hit the man in the head with a brick.

Pontiac Residents Pay Last Respects To Men

PONTIAC, Ill. (AP) — Residents of this small central Illinois town lined up two abreast for a block Monday night waiting to pay their last respects to two of three prison guards slain during a riot.

The line moved slowly through the front door of the Raleigh Harris Funeral Home where Robert Conkle, 22, and William Thomas, 49, were waked before they were to be buried today.

Gov. James R. Thompson, who was whisked through another door, also paid his respects as did state corrections officials and uniformed colleagues of the fallen guards.

Stanley Cole, 47, the third victim of Saturday's rampage at the medium security Pontiac Correctional Center, was waked in the nearby town of Cullom, where Thompson also paid respects.

"I did tell Mrs. Thomas that my hope was the same as hers, that something positive would come out of this," said Thompson. He said he promised he would do everything he could to make the prison system safer.

"It was her fervent hope that all of us could do something to improve conditions in the penitentiary," Thompson said. "If that would come to pass she would consider it the most fitting memorial to her husband."

Thompson also visted two injured guards at St. James Hospital. He spent about 15 minutes talking to Dale Walker and Sharon Patchett.

"The two officers I've just visited are very brave and very dedicated people," the governor told reporters afterwards. "For Sharon Patchett to lie there in her hospital bed with 100 stitches and talk about going back into the pentitentiary, which she said she is determined to do, she is a very brave and dedicated woman."

He said he told both guards he would talk with them again about specific problems at the prison.

A third injured guard, Danny Dill, is hospitalized in Peoria.

Reporters were not allowed to acompany Thompson on his visits Monday night.

However, he met with reporters in a conference room at the hospital.

"I can't promise to make prisons safe in Illinois, and I can't promise it won't happen again," he said.

Thompson called for a review of the Unified Code of Corrections, which he said placed more restraints on prison officials in their dealings with inmates.

But, he added: "You can't run prisons by brutality. You just can't. It breeds more violence."

Ex-Aide To Solon Says Suit Will Help Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shirley Davis is $10,000 in debt and says her hometown treated her as an outcast. But she says she has no regrets about suing former Rep. Otto Passman four years ago when he fired her, saying he wanted a man for the job.

"Women have been shortchanged in the business world," she said in an interview here shortly before a fund-raising benefit staged for her by the Capitol Hill Women's Political Caucus.

"I think my suit will enable other women's skills to be used, will help their lives to be more productive, will help them to enjoy life more," she said.

Last week, she petitioned the Supreme Court to hear her case, after mixed rulings in lower courts.

The caucus says her fight is a symbol of the legal limbo faced by the 16,000 congressional employees, who have no recourse in discrimination cases because Congress exempted itself from the civil rights laws it imposed on the rest of the country.

House Democratic and Republican leaders are on record as supporting Passman, contending that members of Congress are immune from suits by employees.

Mrs. Davis said hers has been a lonely, expensive fight opposed by most of her friends and relatives in Passman's former Louisiana district. She said his influence worked against her finding another job until last month.

Four years later, she insists, "I don't have any regrets. I would do it over again. I still think I'm right."

At one point, she thought she might have to leave Monroe, La., where she had worked for the previous 12 years, if she was to work again. But she stayed because she owned a house and had relatives there.

Last month, she got a $400-a-month job in a real estate agency — and even then the Passman suit was an issue that the five owners debated extensively before hiring her, she said.

She said potential employers told told her she was qualified for their jobs but they didn't want to antagonize Passman, who represented the area for 28 years until being defeated in 1976. He has been indicted by a federal grand jury for his alleged involvement in the Korean influence buying scandal.

She denied anger motivated her suit.

"I had been in the business world 30 years. I had been the solo breadwinner for my family for 30 years," she said. "I was very well aware of discrimination against women for 30 years before they began to coin phrases for it," she said.

Her husband was killed in an auto wreck and she worked fulltime to support her two young children.

She had worked less than six months for Passman in his Washington office, after being hired to replace his top aide who was retiring.

The congressman wrote her a letter praising her as energetic and capable but saying that because his office load was increasingly heavy "I concluded that it was essential that the understudy to my administrative assistant be a man."

She filed suit two months later.

Judge Stagg Steps Down From Trial

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Tom Stagg, hoping to avert allegations of impropriety, has removed himself from the bribery-tax evasion trial of former Louisiana congressman Otto Passman.

Stagg recused himself from the case Monday because his brother-in-law John Savage is senior partner in Savage, Moore, Miles and Johnston, a Monroe accounting firm that included Passman among its clients.

U.S. District Judge Earl Veron was assigned to the case.

"It would appear that if John Savage is a witness, it might be better that I recuse myself," Stagg said in a statement issued from his office. "I don't think anybody can fail to be aware that judges want to avoid impropriety or any appearances of impropriety."

Veron acknowledged the case was sent to his court but said he could not immediately set dates for hearings or other proceedings.

"All I know is the case has been assigned to me," Veron said. "It was just phoned to me and I've been in court all day."

Asked whether he had any family or business conflicts that would force his removal from the Passman case, Veron said, "Not that I know of. I don't know of any, period."

Unemployment Up In City

Unemployment in the Lubbock area increased from 3.3 percent in May to 4.4 percent in June, the Texas Employment Commission reported today.

Officials attributed the gain in joblessness to the school vacation period and the large number of new entrants into the job market.

The latest unemployment figure represents a slight increase over the 4.2 percent recorded in June of last year.

Total resident employment last month declined from 97,720 to 97,110 while the labor force increased from 101,020 to 101,540.

The TEC expects the 4.4 percent jobless figure to be the lowest of the year and predicts resident employment will hit 100,000 by the end of the year.

Restaurant Reopens In Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Sirloin Stockade Restaurant where six persons were found slain July 16 reopened for business Monday to a heavy luncheon crowd and a line of job-seekers.

The victims — five employees and the owner of a janitorial service — were executed in the walk-in refrigerator here about 11 p.m. July 16.

Employees of other restaurant in the chain and company officials worked in place of the slain employees Monday. Several other employees of this restaurant, and others in the chain, have refused to return to work, all citing fear as the reason.

But for everyone that left, several jobseekers were waiting to take over. And, like four of the victims, most of the jobseekers were teen-agers.

Jeff Brown, 16, and Joe Defour, 16, both of nearby Moore, were two of some 25 applicants at the restaurant Monday.

"We need the money," Brown said, adding he didn't care if he had to work nights. "We don't think they'll (the killers) be back. I don't think there's a risk anymore."

But he added: "It would still be an eerie feeling to walk into that walk-in freezer. I'd probably have to go back there sometime. I think I'd stop and wonder everytime someone came into the restaurant late at night."

Employees spent two days scrubbing the cold storage room where the six bodies were found before the state Health Department ruled it sanitary.

The restaurant was busy during the noon hour Monday as customers and employees from the shopping center behind the restaurant filled the place.

"I hope they don't lose business," said Steven Bacon, 26. "I eat here regularly. I'd hate to see a business go down because of what happened."

Bacon said he didn't think there were many curiosity seekers at the restaurant Monday.

"Oh, I think some came out of curiosity, but not many," he said.

Wes Gant, vice president of the chain, said it is too early to tell if business has been hurt by the slayings.

"I don't know what influence it (the killings) had," Gant said. "I think business will become more normal as the sensationalism wears off."

No Progress Made In Chess Matches

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Russian champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi played to a quick draw today in the fourth game of the 13th World Chess Championship.

Karpov, playing white as he did in the second game, offered Korchnoi a draw after 19 moves and 90 minutes of play.

It was the fourth draw in the four games, and Argentine grandmaster Miguel Najdorf said half-jokingly: "I believe there will be 2,000 games more."

American grandmaster Robert Byrne, analyzing the game with Najdorf in the press room, said: "It was a repetition of their second game, essentially." Raymond Keene of England, one of Korchnoi's seconds, agreed.

Karpov opened with his favorite Ruy Lopez pawn to king 4, and Korchnoi responded with an open defense, just as they did in the second game. In fact, the first 13 moves were exactly the same.

In the 14th move, Korchnoi deviated from his second-game play of queen's pawn to queen 5 and moved his bishop to king's rook 4. Experts thought this might spark a surprise attack by the 47-year-old challenger, but no attack developed.

The end of the game became evident in the 16th move when Korchnoi kept his bishop moving against Karpov's defensive knight. Repeated movements of the bishop and knight ended what the experts termed a dull and uninteresting contest.

The 27-year-old champion and his 47-year-old challenger, who defected from the Soviet Union in 1976, played to draws in the first three games. Under new tournament rules, drawn games do not count in the scoring.

The first player to win six games takes home ths richest purse in chess history, $350,000. The loser gets $200,000.

The auditorium at the new $3.5 million convention center in this tropical mountain resort 130 miles north of Manila was nearly empty today, as it has been since the start of play one week ago.

Tickets were being given "to all deserving enthusiasts." Opening prices were about $70 each, but they have since dropped to $7.

The two last played in 1974, when the Karpov won by one game. It was that victory that eventually gave him the world championship in 1975 when American Bobby Fischer refused to defend his crown.

Fourth Draw

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Following is the move-by-move play in Tuesday's fourth game of the world championship chess match between champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union and Viktor Korchnoi, a Soviet defector. The match ended in a draw.

Stock Mart Chalks Up Small Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market squeezed out a small gain today in moderate activity dominated by airline issues.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up .35 at 831.95.

Gainers held a 4-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Dow Jones' average of 20 transportation issues climbed 1.36 to 231.35, aided by strength in airline stocks.

Among issues high on the active list, American Airlines rose ½ to 14⅞; Eastern gained ⅜ to 14⅜; TWA 1¾ to 24⅛; Pan Am ¼ to 7¾; and Braniff ¼ to 15⅛.

The air transport companies have been enjoying heavy traffic recently, and second-quarter earnings reports from the industry have come in well ahead of earlier projections by analysts. Eastern today reported second quarter profits of $1.15 a share, against 8 cents in the like period a year ago.

In addition to such favorable fundamentals, Robert Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. observed, "In a dull market, speculators and others tend to get behind one or two groups."

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .01 to 54.89. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .42 to 152.08.

Volume on the Big Board came to 10.54 million shares at noontime, against 10.01 million at the same point Monday.

Strike Vote Authorized By Local

By The Associated Press

A militant New York postal worker union local that led a week-long nationwide mail strike in 1970 has authorized its members to take a strike vote following the firing of 122 picketing postal workers at two bulk mail centers.

Meanwhile, the wildcat strikes at the bulk mail centers in Jersey City, N.J., and Richmond, Calif., that have been sparked by unhappiness over the proposed new postal contract, today entered their fourth day despite warnings from Postmaster General William R. Bolger of possible further firings and legal action against the strikers.

Chief Postal Service spokesman Walter Duka urged patrons to continue using the mail to send letters. He said there were no delays in the delivery of first class mail.

The executive board of the New York Metro Area Postal union, the local of the American Postal Workers Union, agreed unanimously Monday night to have its 26,000 metropolitan area members vote on a strike at various locations over the next several days.

And the executive board of the 8,000-member Branch 36 National Association of Letter Carriers voted unanimously to support the Metro members if they decide to strike.

Postal workers in individual locals in at least two cities, St. Paul, Minn., and Portland, Ore., held meetings Monday night and voted informally to reject the proposed nationwide contract and to support a strike if it occurs. The official ratification vote is not scheduled to begin until next month, and the balloting Monday night will not be considered in the final tabulation.

A spokeswoman in Washington for three of the four unions that represent the nation's 545,000 postal workers said today that the unions had not been informed of the informal votes and that no official ratification votes had been taken. Distribution of the official ballots depends upon movement of the mails.

The actions came following the U.S. Postal Service's dismissal of 80 wildcat strikers at the New York Bulk and Foreign Mail Center in nearby Jersey City on Sunday and Monday, and 42 workers on Monday at the West Coast facility in Richmond, outside San Francisco.

The National Post Office Mail Handlers, Watchmen, Messengers and Group Leaders Amalgamated Local 300, AFL-CIO, the third major postal union in the New York area, has not publicly announced its stand on a strike.

Leaders of the West Coast workers urged them to return to work because the strike is unsanctioned.

San Francisco federal Judge Stanley Weigel directed 10 union stewards to show cause today why they "shouldn't be punished for contempt of court for violating and disobeying" his order enjoining the walkout through Aug. 3.

Bolger said Monday that he would fire any other postal workers who walked off the job and warned strikers could be subject to felony actions because federal law prohibits strikes by postal workers and other U.S. government employees.

An estimated 60 percent of the postal employees scheduled to work at the New York bulk center were on the job for the evening shift Monday, a Postal Service spokesman said.

Senators Accept Amendment

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Scott was worried. He could foresee the day when Soviet nuclear missiles would be streaking toward the United States and he was determined that no whooping crane or ivory billed woodpecker would block the U.S. response.

The problem as Scott saw it was the Endangered Species Act, the federal law that protects plants, animals, birds and fish which are in danger of extinction.

"Suppose a bird of some endangered species was in front of an intercontinental ballistic missile," the Virginia Republican told the Senate. "They could not release that missile.

"To me that would be a ridiculous offense.

"I do not believe any commander worth his salt would pay attention to the Endangered Species Act. I think he would go ahead and release the missile, but he would be disobeying the law and he would be subject to a fine of $20,000 and imprisonment of up to a year."

The people responsible for launching the U.S. nuclear arsenal can rest a little easier. The Senate accepted Scott's idea and amended the act to exempt them.

Garn Ready For Fight

Just a minute, Susan B. Anthony and Miss Liberty, what about George Washington?

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, is prepared to fight any plan to create a new dollar coin if it means removing dollar bills from circulation.

"If we are to have a new dollar coin that does not bear the image of Washington, then we must keep the dollar bill," said Garn in a press release.

Feminists want a women's image on the new coin.

Treasury Department officials have told Congress on several occasions they have no intention of eliminating the dollar bill if Congress approves a new dollar coin.

But suspicions linger that the days of the dollar bill would be numbered if the coin is a success.

Sense Of Humor Helps

If your claim to fame is being president of the Fertilizer Institute, it helps to have a sense of humor.

And Edwin M. Wheeler has one which enabled him to give a Senate committee the following assessment of the annual shortage of rail cars:

"There are four things that happen every year which signal the arrival of spring. They occur every year without fail.

"First, the swallows come back to Capistrano.

"Second, the Farragut Square Park at noontime is full of the city's young ladies and oglers thereof.

"Third, there is a railroad car shortage.

"Fourth, there is a formal congressional inquiry into the rail car shortage problem.

"Accordingly, one can say that Spring 1978 has officially arrived because all four events have again occurred and right on schedule."

Solon Wins 'Award'

The award for the most esoteric sentence uttered by a politician in 1978 goes to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y. Although July might seem a bit early in the year for such an honor, it is hard to imagine anyone topping Moynihan's remark about the sculpture "Isis." Said the New York senator:

"Isis achieves an aesthetic transubstantiation of that which is at once elusive yet ineluctable in the modern sensibility."

Vetoes Annoy Carter

President Carter recently voiced some displeasure at the growing number of legislative vetoes being written into laws by Congress.

The vetoes not only annoy the president, in some cases they are hopelessly confusing the members of Congress who are not always certain whether to vote "no," when they support something, and "yes," when they oppose it.

A House committee got into a terrible tangle when it tried to endorse one of President Carter's reorganization plans. After some discussion of whether the proper vote whould be "yes" or "no," Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., voted, "I think so."

Seniors Bill Advances

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House-Senate conference committee is the next stop for legislation to extend the meals-on-wheels program and other aid for senior citizens.

The Senate on Monday voted 82-2 in favor of a $2 billion two-year extension for senior citizen programs, including the meals served at homes and community centers. The House approved a separate version of the bill.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said the $225 million designated for meals for the homebound elderly is an "unacceptable increase" in the federal budget.

The Senate legislation authorizes $475 million in fiscal year 1979 and $545 million in fiscal 1980 for all nutritional meals for the elderly and the handicapped.

The increase in the meals program was sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who said his amendment would finance 215,000 meals daily to elderly shut-ins during fiscal 1979 and 258,000 in 1980.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be reluctant to bargain for better terms tomorrow, but try to present yourself so that it doesn't appear too self-serving or you'll tarnish your image.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) No matter how difficult it appears, honor your pomises to the letter tomorrow and you'll gain greater respect and fulfillment than you anticipated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone might renege tomorrow on a promise, but if you keep the faith all will right itself better than when this person was involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You may have to make a rather difficult decision tomorrow. If you're convinced it's best for all concerned, stick by your guns.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Singleness of purpose on worthwhile projects will lead to a successful day. Ignore negative types who'd throw cold water on your works.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan. 19) If your better judgment isn't in control at all times tomorrow, you could get involved in something that will cost you more than it's worth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A family matter will be popping up. It will require your cool head and a firm hand to straighten out. Don't pass the buck.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may have the opportunity to be of service to someone. Do so willingly. This person will repay you later in larger measure than you will give tomorrow.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Ways will present themselves to firm-up your position materially. Take care, however, not to hurt a friend in you eagerness to take advantage of the situation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) One who is anxious to help you is confused by your methods. Clarify your aims. You'll spare yourself some uncomfortable mements.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A solution to a serious problem can be found tomorrow if you exercise a little patience and tolerance. Trying to go in two directions will confuse the issues.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could save yourself a lot of grief and/or money tomorrow if you ask advice from an older or more experienced person when dealing with a new project.

Your Birthday

July 26, 1978

This coming year you will expand and build upon foundations you've already laid. You patience and persistence will reap rewards that up until now appeared impossible.

Siamese Twin Girls' Condition Stable

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Siamese twin girls were in stable but guarded condition at Children's Hospital following a 15-hour operation to separate them.

A hospital spokesman said a team of eight specialists performed the operation separating Melissa Ann and Jamie Lynn Shumate of Sesser, Ill., on Saturday. The twins, born last Dec. 19 at Good Samaritan Hospital in Mount Vernon, Ill., to Marilyn Shumate of Sesser, were joined at the pelvic area.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Tuesday July 25, the 206th day of 1978 with 159 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its last quarter.

The morning star is Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

American artist Maxfield Parrish and actor Walter Brennan were born on July 25 — the artist in 1870 and Brennan in 1894.

On this day in history:

In 1866, Ulysses S. Grant became the first American officer to reach the rank of general in the U.S. Army.

In 1952, Puerto Rico became a self-governing U.S. Commonwealth.

In 1972, Democratic vice presidential nominee Thomas Eagleton, a Missouri senator, disclosed he had had psychiatric care for "nervous ailments" in the 1960s. Presidential nominee George McGovern removed him from the ticket and replaced him with Sargent Shriver.

In 1975, Turkey said it would (and later did) halt all activities at U.S. military installations in that country because of a six-month arms embargo imposed by the United States after the Turkish invasion of Cyprus.

A thought for the day:

American statesman Daniel Webster said, "Let our object be our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country."

POPULATION RISES

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's population increased 0.9 percent in the year ended March 31, passing the 114 million mark, the government announced. The population of Tokyo dropped by 0.6 percent to 11.3 million. It was the second consecutive yearly decline for the capital.

U.S. Dollar Plunges Again

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. dollar took another sharp drop on the Tokyo foreign exchange market today, reaching a new low of 195.30 yen and closing at 195.525.

The closing rate was 3.425 yen below Monday's close and nearly five yen below Friday's.

The American currency also slipped against major West European currencies at the opening of European markets. But rates were steadier there.

The dollar opened in Tokyo at 197.95 yen after plunging Monday through the 200-yen "psychological" barrier for the first time and closing at 199.05. More than half a billion dollars was traded in the first three hours, and the total spot volume for the day was a massive $819 million, only slightly less than Monday's $900 million.

Traders said the Bank of Japan bought at least $100 million to try to check the yen's rise. This was only a fourth of the central's bank intervention in the market Monday, estimated at $400 million.

The drop in the dollar prompted a statement from Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, who said it was due chiefly to the lack of a monetary policy in the United States and other foreign countries and to the failure of the U.S. Congress to approve President Carter's energy legislation.

Japanese traders said the remainder of the week will be crucial to the yen. The United States is expected to announce another large trade deficit with Japan on Wednesday, and it is believed Washington may start making stronger demands for Japan to curtail its exports and increase its imports.

One trader said the dollar might hit 180 yen by October. The economic journal Nihon Keizai Shimbun reported after a survey that Japanese businessmen feel they can still make a profit if the dollar drops to 190 yen.

The fall in the dollar's yen value — 46 percent since the first postwar devaluation Aug. 27, 1971, and 26 percent since last September — is due mainly to Japan's large trade surplus. This produces a dollar surplus on the Tokyo market.

The fall of the dollar against the yen accelerated Monday as it circled the globe. The closing price of 199.05 in Tokyo was followed by 197.90 in London and 197.68 in New York.

Prices of the dollar in major European currencies also declined on European exchanges Monday, but they pulled back a bit in New York. The dollar closed there at 2.0440 marks, compared with 2.0395 in Frankfurt; 4.40 French francs, compared with 4.3945 in Paris, and 1.78 Swiss francs, compared with 1.77195 in Zurich. The British pound sold for $1.9275 in New York, compared with $1.9324 in London.

New York dealers attributed the recovery to profit-taking, and one trader said, "The dollar can't go down day afer day without leading to some buying."

Morning rates in Europe today included 2.0388 marks in Frankfurt, 1.7695 Swiss francs in Zurich, 4.39 French francs in Paris and $1.9325 for the British pound in London.

Gold also slipped slightly after soaring to $195 an ounce in London and $195.375 in Zurich, nearing its all-time peak of $197.50 on Dec. 30, 1974. The morning prices today were $194.375 in London, a drop of 62.5 cents, and $194.875 in Zurich, down 50 cents.

"Clearly, the weakness of the American dollar is fueling the speculative element in the market," said the London Financial Times.

Carter administration officials still predicted better days ahead for the dollar, in part because of agreements reached at the Bonn economic summit. Both Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and Treasury Undersecretary Anthony M. Solomon indicated they think the dollar will strengthen in the long run.

"I think the important thing about foreign exchange markets are underlying conditions, and the United States economy continues on a good track," Blumenthal said.

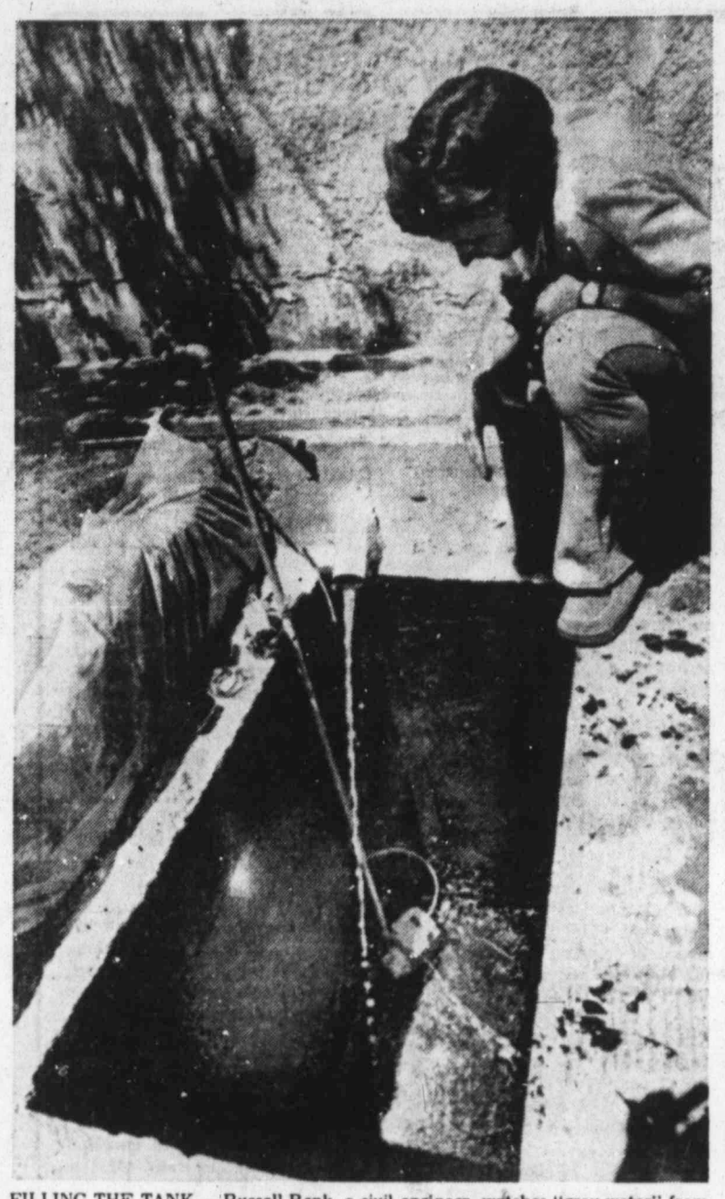

Solomon said the U.S. trade deficit should narrow during the remainder of the year. He said Japan, which had a $14 billion surplus in its trade with the United States last year, will increase its imports and that it has put a lid on exports to keep them at the same level as last year.

Dollar-spenders abroad tightened their belts some more. A 300,000-yen monthly rent in Tokyo, which would have come to $1,027 in January 1977 at 292 yen to the dollar, now will be more than $1,500.

In Paris, a simple lunch with wine that cost $5 three years ago now costs $8. A liter of beer that cost $1.75 at the Munich Oktoberfest four years ago now sells for $2.17.

TAKES ANOTHER DROP — Clerks in a Tokyo currency dealer's office follow the massive trading on the foreign exchange market today as the U.S. dollar takes another sharp drop. The dollar has hit record lows against the Japanese yen the last two days, which has also triggered a selling wave on the European markets. (AP Laserphoto)

Tax Credit Proposal Defeated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee voted 24-11 today against a proposal to ease the burden of increasing Social Security taxes by granting a special temporary income tax credit.

The debate on the Social Security issue diverted the committee from its consideration of a $15-billion income tax-relief bill.

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., brought the Social Security issue to the Ways and Means Committee with a proposed amendment for a temporary 5 percent credit against income taxes, designed specifically to ease the extra load of payroll taxes.

Gephardt told the committee the credit would be worth $30 next year to the person earning $10,000, thus more than offsetting the $8 increase in Social Security taxes he or she faces.

For the employee earning $20,000, the credit would be $60, not completely offsetting the $82 increase in Social Security tax, Gephardt said.

He proposed the credit for two years, which he said would give Congress time to consider a more basic revision of Social Security financing.

This amendment and others came before the committee despite an appeal from Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., that the panel stick to the basic issues in the bill it is considering, especially how to resolve disputes over taxation of capital gains.

Ullman promised an opportunity to consider other tax changes once the committee has finished its work on the pending bill.

One of the measures before the Ways and Means Committee deals with capital gains in a way that President Carter has said he could not approve. Nevertheless, a majority of the tax-writing panel apparently is prepared to vote for it.

But House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said Monday that, in any case, he is sure the House will be given a chance to vote on a version more to Carter's — and his own — liking.

However, the committee also must deal with a variety of amendments that could destroy the near-consensus on the $15 billion tax cut and perhaps even sink the whole measure.

For example, educational and charitable institutions are pressing hard for the new tax bill to allow deductions for contributions to those groups, even by taxpayers who otherwise use the standard deduction.

Another possible tax topic which could further slow the going is a plan for adjusting income tax brackets to offset the effect of inflation and while adding special provisions for small businesses.

Time is beginning to press as the tax bill must navigate the House, a Senate Committee, the Senate itself and a House-Senate conference after the committee does its work. Congress plans to adjourn by Oct. 7 and the House has scheduled a three-week August-September recess before then.

Some members already are beginning to talk of the possibility that no agreement can be reached this year.

Taxation of long-term capital gains — the profit on sale of stock, real estate or other assets held at least a year — continues to be the most troublesome sticking point.

Carter Stresses Embargo Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter "very strongly" urged Democratic congressional leaders today to support resumed U.S. arms shipments to Turkey and to oppose a move to pave the way for future economic dealings with Rhodesia, a spokesman reported.

Press secretary Jody Powell told reporters that Carter stressed his position on the two foreign policy questions during a regular breakfast meeting with the leaders.

The Senate is nearing a vote on the two controversial proposals.

The 3-year-old arms ban against Turkey would be lifted under an amendment to the $2.8 billion foreign arms sales authorization bill now under consideration.

Proposed amendments to another bill would relax the United Nations-imposed sanctions against Rhodesia.

The Turkish proposal calls for an immediate end to the ban imposed by Congress in retaliation for Turkey's 1974 invasion of Cyprus, at the same time equalizing U.S. military aid to both Turkey and Greece at $175 million in fiscal 1979.

Powell said the Turkish embargo should be lifted because its continuation threatens "the very integrity of NATO, the southern flank." Turkey, which borders on the Soviet Union, is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

But Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., the House Democratic whip and a leading supporter of Greece, said he continues to oppose lifting the Turkish embargo despite the president's urging.

He said Carter is making a mistake by proposing resumption of arms shipments, undercutting his own policies in favor of human rights and in favor of controlling U.S. arms shipments overseas.

"The government of Turkey has not moved one inch on the island of Cyprus since after using arms supplied by the United States, in violation of American law and in violation of our bilateral agreement with Turkey," Brademas told reporters.

Carter calls the lifting of the arms embargo the most important foreign policy issue still before Congress this year, but opponents contend the proposal is "nothing new — the same old language dressed up."

That pronouncement by sources close to Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., appeared to assure a narrow showdown vote. They estimate that the Senate is divided 46-46 on the issue, with eight members uncommitted.

Administration sources agreed that the voting would be close, perhaps settled by one or two senators.

The original ban, which was total, later was modified to allow arms sales of up to $175 million a year to Turkey because it is a NATO member. However, the administration contends even that has not prevented serious deterioration in Turkey's capacity to anchor the southeastern flank of the NATO alliance.

The White House further contends that the embargo has not enhanced negotiations for a Cyprus settlement and the denial of bases in Turkey has damaged U.S. abilities to monitor Soviet activities.

An amendment, sponsored by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, would hold Turkey's aid at the $175 million level and boost Greece's from $140 million to $175 million.

While Turkey's military aid would not be increased in fiscal year 1979 and Turkey would receive the amount it has received under the embargo, it could be considered for additional aid after fiscal 1979.

Byrd said the Carter administration has agreed to the compromise amendment.

It also would require presidential "certification" that specific human rights protections in Cyprus had been adhered to as a condition for future arms aid.

Human rights protections also figure in the Rhodesia proposals. One amendment being considered would lift the embargo if the president found the Rhodesian government willing to attend an "all-party conference" with black guerrilla groups on the future of the country, and if free elections were held.

Publicly, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter had no comment Monday when asked about the amendment, which was a compromise put forward by Sens. Clifford Case, R-N.J., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

But privately, officials said they might have no choice but to accept something like the Case-Javits amendment if they wish to defeat a proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Strike Looms At Braniff

DALLAS (UPI) — A Braniff International spokesman says the airline is not anticipating a strike despite a 99 percent vote by flight attendants to walk out.

The Association of Flight Attendants Monday said more than 1,300 attendants had approved the strike proposal with only 11 rejecting.

"Mediation is in recess this week and will reopen next week," the spokesman said. "Progress is being made and the company is very confident an agreement will be reached very soon.

"We are not anticipating a strike. We feel the contract will be satisfactorily resolved."

The Braniff contract became open for change last August and has since been under negotiation.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A bomb blasted the entrance of the Iraq Embassy early Monday for the second time in five months, the embassy reported. An embassy official said the door and front wall were damaged but there were no injuries.

DISCUSS PROPERTY TAX — Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, right, and Leroy Weiting, D-Portland, discuss Peveto's bill revising property taxes in the state, a key item in the current special legislative session. notice and public hearings. Voters could repeal a tax increase by referendum.

Disregarded was Briscoe's request for California-style initiative and referendum on taxes.

Committee members voted 7-2 for the Legislature to set by law — rather than lock into the Constitution — the amount of homestead exemption from school taxes that Texans would receive.

Briscoe had proposed exempting $10,000 of the assessed valuation of homes from taxes, with persons 65 and older getting $20,000. Committee chairman Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, had changed that to $10,000 of market value — not assessed valuation — because Briscoe's method would erode school district tax bases too much.

Rep. Bob Hendricks, D-McKinney, persuaded the committee that the Legislature should have the flexibility to change the exemption to keep up with inflation.

Legislators also would decide how much the state should pay school districts as reimbursement for taxes lost due to the homestead exemption.

Von Dohlen warned that "biennially we will be faced with demands to change the law." He said this would divert the Legislature from other issues.

He later indicated an attempt would be made on the floor to put a dolloar amount for the homestead exemption in the Constitution.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, failed, 6-2, to eliminate the majority-of-the-Legislature requirement for tax bills, saying there was no need for it. He noted that Texas ranks 46th in state and local taxes as a percentage of personal income.

"What sends a shiver down my back is we could have an income tax with 51 votes (a majority of the House quorum of 100 members)," said Rep. Bob Close, R-Perryton.

"I consider it a tip of the hat to what I believe is the biggest problem of any governmental body, and that is demagoguery," Bryant said of the majority requirement.

"The Senate's not going to pass it anyway," Hendricks said.

"I don't think we ought to pay tribute to the politician who got beat running for governor or the politician who is in the speaker's office (Speaker Bill Clayton)," Bryant said.

The committee also rejected, 6-3, a proposal by Rep. Luther Jones, D-El Paso, to condition the constitutional amendment on enactment — including Briscoe's signature — of the Peveto Bill.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, is working for legislation consolidating property tax appraisals in one office per county, with the state setting appraisal standards.

Jones said he doubted Briscoe would sign the bill unless it were tied to the constitutional amendment on property tax relief.

Joe Robbins Raps Demos

Rep. Joe Robbins of Lubbock today assailed the Legislature's record in the special session and fired off a blast at the Democratic leadership.

The Republican lawmaker told The Avalanche-Journal, "It is now apparent that the Legislature gave all the tax relief it intends to last week when both Houses passed bills to remove the sales tax from utilities and to cut inheritance taxes. These provide no meaningful immediate relief."

Robbins added that the Democratic leadership of the Legislature "has shown itself to be unwilling or unable to respond to the wishes of the people for meaningful limitations on government taxes and spending."

He said Republican members are on record as supporting limitations on state and local taxation, and asserted that, "We intend to force the Democrats to show their true colors" during House debate this week.

Farmers Union Raps Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Farmers Union says the Carter administration has won a "first step in dismantling" the Agriculture Department in a Senate Governmental Affairs Committee vote on governmental reorganization.

Preliminary approval of Carter's plan was provided last Friday when the committee voted in favor of a bill to create a new Department of Education and to shift various USDA child nutrition programs to the new agency.

"This is just the opening wedge," said Reuben L. Johnson, NFU director of legislative services. "If child nutrition is shifted out of USDA, it will encourage those who want to shift the soil conservation and forestry programs into the Department of Interior and the food stamp program — if it is converted into a cash handout — to the surviving Health and Welfare Department. Community development also could be destined to be shifted into the Department of Commerce."

Johnson's comments were included Monday in NFU's weekly newsletter.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Readers Offer Suggestions For Uses Of Newspapers

By SHARI LEWIS

There may be some people who think that the only use for a newspaper is to train the dog — but not our Kids-Only Club column readers. Annette Lanier from Bellevue, Wash., writes: "If you run out of wrapping paper and you're going to a party, use the Sunday comics to wrap the gift. It sure makes a fun and attractive looking package."

And a friend from the Bronx said, "My friends and I like to play 'Quicksand" on the beach or at the park. We each put down two sheets of newspaper, and stand with one foot on each sheet. It's a race. You bend over (standing with one leg, on one sheet of newspaper — and lift the other foot off its paper. Grab that sheet of paper and move it forward as far as you can and then put your foot down on it. Lift the other leg and move that paper forward. If you foot touches the ground it's like 'Quicksand' and you're out. The first one to the end mark is the winner."

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: If a man built a house with four sides, each having a southern exposure and a big bear approaches, what color is the bear, and why?

South Africa Frees Four Dissenters

EAST LONDON, South Africa (AP) — Four black men who were detained during a massive crackdown on anti-government dissent last October have been released, the South African Press Association reported Saturday.

The four were members of black rights organizations and although free are barred from making public statements or appearances. The newspaper The Post has reported that about two dozen detainees have been released since October, but 22 persons remain imprisoned.

Rose Aims For New Record

THE BIG SWING — Pete Rose, of the Cincinnati Reds, follows through on the swing that gave him the hit in the seventh inning of the game in New York Monday that tied the National League record for hits in consecutive games. Rose will be trying to break the record for hits in consecutive games tonight in New York. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOHN NELSON

NEW YORK (AP) — "Tomorrow, oh tomorrow! He'll battle tomorrow," promised the world's foremost expert on Pete Rose.

"He wants to get that baby over."

The words were those of Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson, but they almost certainly express the sentiment of the 37-year-old Rose, who will try to break the modern National League record by hitting in his 38th consecutive game tonight.

Rose tied the record of 37 set in 1945 by Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves in the Reds 5-3 victory Monday night over the New York Mets. Rose went 2-for-5, singling in the seventh and ninth innings and scoring each time.

"It's funny," said Rose. "In this streak, it seems like whenever I get on base I score. Tonight, I got on twice and I scored twice."

Before getting his first hit, however, Rose let the tension build. In the first inning he lofted an easy fly to Mets center fielder Lee Mazzilli after taking a called strike. In the third, Rose faked a bunt for a ball, took a second ball, looked at a strike, fouled off a pitch and then grounded into a force play to shortstop. With men on first and second and one out in the fifth, he again flied to Mazzilli, this time a little deeper, on the first pitch from Mets' right-hander Pat Zachry.

"When I came up in the seventh, I thought to myself that I had hit the ball solid twice, straight up in the air," said Rose. "I figured I'd have one more at bat."

The switch-hitting Rose fouled off the first pitch trying to bunt, took a ball wide, and then singled sharply to left, his off-field, again hitting against Zachry. "I fouled off that bunt, and that brought Lenny (Randle, the Mets third baseman) in so close we could shake hands," said Rose. "Then I hit a change-up to left field."

Rose was asked what he thought when he saw the hit leave his bat and he answered in typical Rose fashion. "I was going to make a big turn at first in case the ball took a bad hop," he said.

Rose's seventh-inning hit came with one out. Mike Lum then singled, Joe Morgan walked and George Foster drove Rose home to give the Reds a 3-2 lead. After the Mets tied it 3-3 in the bottom of the seventh on Tim Foli's RBI triple, Rose did not get up again until the ninth. He led off with another single and scored the winning run in front of Lum's fifth homer of the year.

Rose's second hit came off Mets reliever and loser Skip Lockwood, 7-8, who had relieved Zachry after Foster's RBI single. Ironically, it was the combination of Zachry and Lockwood that stopped Rose's second-longest streak of the year at 10 games on April 30 at Shea.

Tonight, Rose faces another Mets right-hander, Craig Swan, and again there is irony in the situation.

Rose said the only flukish hit in his streak came off Swan when he topped a pitch into the plate and beat it out for a single.

After Rose's record-tying hit, the crowd of 35,939 that had chanted "Let's Go Pete" as he came to the plate, gave Rose a 1½-minute standing ovation. He doffed his cap three times before Lum could come to the plate and Rose said he made the gesture on the advice of Mets first baseman Willie Montanez.

"Willie told me to take off my hat or we'd be there all night."

When asked if the streak had made him superstitious, Rose said no, that he had even changed bats in the seventh inning.

"After my first three times up, I used a different bat," said Rose. "It was a little newer and it felt good. I had used it in batting practice."

Rose then was asked if Holmes said anything to him before the game.

"He just thanked me for making him a big leaguer again," said Rose, in a reference to the relative obscurity that shrouded Holmes until Rose got close to his record. "He told me to try to go to left field, but don't tell that to Zachry.

"I just hope I can show that much class," Rose said.

Zachry not only was mad as a hornet after the game, he was on crutches. He had injured his left foot when he kicked a helmet in anger after leaving the game.

Zachry said he got Rose out three times on fastballs and then tried experimenting with the change-ups.

"What we did was dumb. It was stupid," said Zachry, who was protecting a 2-1 lead provided by solo homers by Mazzilli and Steve Henderson until the sixth inning, when Dave Concepcion drove in his second run of the game.

"The hit didn't bother me. What hurt about it was the pitching," said Zachry.

Patterson Visits At Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Vanderbilt University assistant football coach Bob Patterson has appeared before a university committee screening candidates for athletic director, a Nashville newspaper reported today.

Patterson, now an assistant at Texas Tech, spoke with committee members Monday, The Tennessean said in today's editions.

Patterson came to Vanderbilt in 1963 as a defensive line coach. He served 12 years before moving to Texas Tech with Steve Sloan, presently head coach at the University of Mississippi.

The newspaper said Patterson is the first person with previous experience at Vanderbilt known to have been interviewed by the screening committee.

Clay Stapleton has said he is resigning the athletic directorship at Vanderbilt effective Aug. 31. Stapleton served five years in the post at the Southeastern Conference school.

Martin 'Pulls Trigger' On Career

By FRANK BROWN

KANSAS CITY (AP) — When he suspended Reggie Jackson last Monday, Billy Martin cocked the gun. When he sharply criticized the outfielder, Martin in fact aimed it right at his own head.

And when he sniped at Yankee owner George Steinbrenner Sunday night, Billy Martin pulled the trigger on his career as manager of the New York Yankees.

"I knew it would be just a matter of time," said Kansas City Royals pitcher Larry Gura, who "escaped" the Yankees in 1976. "You just knew, knowing Billy. He never sticks around one team very long."

There had been one season with Minnesota, three with Detroit, two with Texas, and just nine days less than three years — three tumultuous, tension-wracked years — with the Yankees before what's left of Billy Martin resigned Monday.

Tearful, trembling, ultimately unable to speak, Martin said he resigned to salvage, as he put it, "my health and mental well-being." He was replaced by former Yankee pitching coach Bob Lemon.

Terms of the contract with Lemon have not been decided, Yankee President Al Rosen said.

"It was just a matter of time," said New York first baseman Jim Spencer.

"It's baseball, I guess," said Yogi Berra.

"It's a complete shock," said Yankee utilityman Paul Blair.

"It's the best thing," said Whitey Herzog, the Royals' manager. "I feel life's too short to put up with all he's been putting up with. I don't think he's been looking too good lately. I noticed when I was with him during the All-Star break and in New York last week."

Rosen called it "health reasons," and Yankee center fielder Mickey Rivers said, "Billy was taking care of all our problems and maybe it just wore him out."

But everyone seemed to know that no other option existed after Martin told two newpapermen traveling with the team that Jackson and Steinbrenner "deserve each other. One's a born liar (Jackson) and one's convicted (Steinbrenner)."

Steinbrenner, convicted in 1974 of making an illegal campaign contribution, had countenanced the ongoing turmoil that surrounded Martin's Yankee career — including the near-fight in Boston last year between Jackson and his manager.

But he had a clause written into Martin's contract that prohibited public criticism of the owner. When that clause was defied, Martin was finished.

"I couldn't let any employee of the New York Yankees say things like that about the front office," said Rosen, who spoke with Lemon by telephone about 10:30 p.m. EDT Sunday night after being informed of the comment.

The financial end of Martin's contract will be honored through 1979 — $80,000 this year and $90,000 next — while the low-key Lemon holds the reins of the stubborn stallion called the Yankees.

"You never really know how hot the kitchen is until you get in it," said Lemon, who is expected to start checking his thermometer tonight.

"I really don't care who the manager is," said left-hander Ron Guidry, who seeks his 15th victory in New York's first game under the Hall of Famer. "I do the job the best I can, no matter who's running the club.

"It was Billy's decision to make, but I guess one of them (Martin or Jackson) was going to have to go somewhere," said Guidry.

"The differences between Reggie, Billy and George probably cost him his job," added outfielder Lou Piniella.

If it did, nobody would say it. Steinbrenner, accepting Martin's apology for the "other guy's convicted" quotation, said, "I am grateful to Billy for his contributions as manager of the Yankees. He brought us a championship. I think Billy knows of our concern for the well-being of his family and himself. We wish him luck."

"What do you want me to say? That Billy's a bad man? That I'm 'free at last' like in the slave days? No way," said Jackson, whose return from suspension Sunday apparently sparked the explosive outburst of temper Martin unleashed in the presence of newsmen at a Chicago Airport.

Monday, in his final words to the public, Martan denied the words attributed to him.

Martin gained a reputation as a fighter, on the field and off, and lived up to it as often as possible. But this time, he had to surrender to the sobs that shook his body.

The final sentence was "... and most of all, the fans, for their undying support." Then he had to be led away.

In his place will be the 57-year-old Lemon, who managed the Royals for three seasons and the Chicago White Sox last year before being replaced by Larry Doby last month.

Baseball Players Voice Praise For Former Yankee Manager

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Billy Martin's colleagues gave him rave reviews for the most part after learning of the explosive manager's resignation as manager of the world champion New York Yankees.

Martin submitted his resignation under pressure to the club Monday after verbally blasting Reggie Jackson and owner George Steinbrenner. His resignation ended almost three seasons of controversy as the Yankee skipper.

"If you're strong enough to play for Billy Martin, you're strong enough to play for anybody," said Roy Howell of the Toronto Blue Jays who played under Martin as a rookie with the Texas Rangers in 1974.

"At the time, I was 20 years old. He's tough on young players. He drives them. He pounds them," said Howell, who was a member of this year's AL All-Star team. "He'll embarrass them in front of 50,000 fans one minute and he'll shake your hand the next. He demands more than 100 percent."

"Martin came up to me during the All-Star game and said, 'Now you know why I jumped all over you. You made it.'"

Texas Rangers owner Brad Corbett, who fired Martin in 1975, said that the two are now friends and he would welcome Martin back into his organization.

"I would give him a job in the front office but not as manager. I'm happy with the manager I have now. Billy and I have our differences squared away and we're good friends now."

But Kansas City left-hander Larry Gura, who never saw eye-to-eye with Martin while pitching for New York, hopes he'll never have to play under Martin again.

"I guess he just talked with George (Steinbrenner) and decided to resign. You haven't heard the last of him.

"He never sticks around one team very long," continued Gura, "Knowing Billy, it was just a matter of time. I just hope he doesn't get with the same team I'm with in the future, wherever that might be."

Detroit center fielder Ron LeFlore, who got his start when Martin, as Tigers' manager, gave LeFlore a tryout while he was doing time in a Michigan prison, called Martin too good a manager to be out of baseball.

"If Billy didn't give me the opportunity to try out, I probably wouldn't be in baseball today. I'm sure he'll be back."

Veteran Willie Horton, now with Oakland, remembered Martin when he played for him in Detroit.

"I'm very sorry to see it. He's helped me over the years and I think he's the best manager in baseball," the 35-year-old Horton said. "He's a manager like Charlie Driessen and Casey Stengel. I wish him the best."

"Managing the New York Yankees is the toughest job in baseball," said Minnesota first baseman Rod Carew, who won the batting title while playing under Martin in 1969 with a .332 average.

Carew's teammate, Roy Smalley, who played for Martin in Texas, said, "I don't know if he's self-destructive or not. I don't know much about psychology, but he gave me my start in Texas."

The Rangers' Mike Hargrove, who served under Martin in Arlington, enjoyed playing for him because of his aggressiveness. "He gave me my chance in the big leagues. I'm certainly surprised that he resigned because he's the kind of guy who'll tackle a buzzsaw."

Anderson Pays $250 Fine After Meet With Feeney

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Feeney, president of the National League, and Sparky Anderson, the Cincinnati Reds manager, met Monday night to exercise their rights.

Feeney's rights prevailed and Anderson left satisfied — and $250 poorer.

Anderson was fined $250 by Feeney after the Reds' skipper was ejected from a recent baseball game with the Los Angeles Dodgers. Anderson said he was upset with the penalty and wanted to meet with Feeney.

"Nothing really happened at the meeting," Anderson said. "We discussed it, sure. He has the right to fine me but I have the right to ask about it."

Before the meeting, Anderson had said he was upset with the fine because Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Don Sutton was only reprimanded after his recent ejection.

Sutton was ejected by umpire Doug Harvey from a game against the St. Louis Cardinals for pitching baseballs that Harvey said had been defaced.

Anderson had said earlier that if he was not satisfied with the result of his meeting with Feeney he would formally protest the fine. He was asked what was the result of the meeting.

"It's nothing different than has happened every other time I've been fined," said Anderson. "I can't understand why everybody is making such a big deal about it."

Anderson had said he thought the fine was excessive for a first-offender. The manager was ejected last week by umpire Dutch Rennert over a call at first base.

Texas Tickets Exhausted

If you're looking for a reserved seat for the Texas Tech-University of Texas game in Jones Stadium on Sept. 30, you might have trouble finding one.

Tech ticket manager Carol Baker reported Monday that her office can no longer accept reservations for tickets to that contest. Mrs. Baker said that presently, the only remaining tickets for that game are for the grassy slope at the north end of the stadium.

A FUTILE EFFORT — David Pena, shortstop for the Northwest all-stars, snags a grounder on a hard bounce before making a successful throw to first base for an out in the sixth inning. Pena scored the only run in a semifinal match with Wolfforth Monday in District 2 action. However, the score failed to provide the victory edge as a pitcher disqualification forced NW to forfeit the game. Wolfforth, declared a 6-0 winner, will meet Dixie all-stars tonight at 7:30 for the District championship at Maxey Park. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

Wolfforth, Dixie In Finals

By SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

David Haygood fanned ten batters—including six in the first three innings—to send the Dixie all-stars into the finals of the District 2 Tournament with a 18-0 shellacking of the Post all-stars Monday night.

Although Lubbock's Northwest all-stars downed Wolfforth 1-0 in seven innings in the night's opener, they will not meet Dixie for the championship tonight at 7:30, because of a rule violation that led to a 6-0 forfeit. The tournament games are being played at Maxey Park.

A Little League rule forbids a pitcher hurling in two consecutive tournament games, and LL officials ruled Monday night, after checking with national LL officials in Williamsport, Pa., that Northwest hurler Shon Walker had pitched two straight games. Thus the Monday night game was forfeited to Wolfforth.

"It is unfortunate that the ruling went against the (Northwest) kids, but we have to stand by the Little League rules," Bob Brand, District 2 administrator, said Monday night.

The game between Wolfforth and NW actually saw only 1 run scored, prior to the official ruling which reversed the on-field decision.

The teams were in a scoreless tie when Junior Flores hit a single to shallow centerfield to score David Pena for the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Both teams played stingy defense with NW collecting only three hits and Wolfforth managing two. NW left 10 batters stranded on base.

Each pitcher collected five strikeouts. Walker pitched for Northwest, and Grady Sanders was the Wolfforth pitcher.

The winner of the District 2 tourney will meet the District 5 (Abilene) winner in bidistrict play in Snyder next Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Monday night's losers will play tonight at 5:30 p.m. for third place in the tournament.

In the nightcap, Haygood's mound effort was aided by an explosive offense that managed 6 runs in the opening frame and 8 runs in the third inning.

Kyle Gaylor opened the game for the home Dixie team with a ground-rule double. Kevin Short drove the speedster home with a single and the third batter—Billy Lance—followed with a 2-run homer.

Short, who finished the evening with two singles and a home run for 3 RBIs, connected on his homer in the second-inning for the lone score in the inning.

Gaylor, the second baseman, led the scoring in the third-inning with a RBI double. Short followed the act with an RBI single and Haygood added an RBI double. Scott Smith slammed a 3-run triple, and Charlie Briggers concluded the third frame scoring blitz with a run-scoring single.

Cheers For Pete Rose Fill Shea Stadium

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

The jeers have finally turned to cheers for Pete Rose at Shea Stadium.

"I couldn't believe that chanting," said the Cincinnati infielder. "It was quite a feeling inside. I wish I could have called time and shaken hands with each one of them."

What they were cheering about Monday night was Rose's accomplishment of tying the modern National League record hitting streak of 37 games. Rose smashed two singles to help the Reds beat the New York Mets 5-3.

Hitless in his first three times up, Rose came to bat with one out in the seventh inning and many in the crowd of 35,939 began cheering, "Let's Go, Pete."

That's exactly what he did — he went to left field with a Pat Zachry pitch to tie the record set by Tommy Holmes with the old Boston Braves in 1945.

Zachry said that Rose got the historic hit on a changeup — one he called a "dumb" pitch.

"I kicked a helmet, I was so mad," said the bearded right-hander, who injured his foot enough to force him out of the game. He later had to walk on crutches.

"I was stupid enough to throw Pete three changeups in a row — now I've fouled myself up."

The applause that Rose received was sweet music to a man who had long been a villain to Mets' fans. Five years ago, Shea Stadium fans pelted the Cincinnati player with debris and booed him after he was involved in a fight with Met shortstop Bud Harrelson during the National League playoffs.

"Nah, those weren't the same fans that threw bottles in 1973," Rose said. "They all retired."

In other National League games, the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the Chicago Cubs 3-2, the Atlanta Braves trimmed the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1 and the Houston Astros nipped the Montreal Expos 6-5.

After hitting his significant seventh-inning single, Rose led off the ninth with his second hit of the game. Mike Lum then lofted a fly ball into the right field bullpen for his fifth homer of the year and the Reds' winning runs.

Manny Sarmiento, 9-6, the fourth Reds' pitcher, was the winner, while Skip Lockwood, 7-8, lost the game.

Rose lofted routine fly balls to center fielder Lee Mazzilli in the first and fifth innings and grounded into a force play in the third. It was only the 12th time during his streak, which began June 14, that Rose had gone hitless through five innings in an attempt to break Holmes' record.

The Mets tied the game 3-3 in the seventh. After one out, Elliott Maddox singled and Tim Foli, who had doubled earlier, tripled down the left field line to drive in the run.

Dodgers 3, Cubs 2

Dave Lopes' bases-loaded single with two out in the ninth inning broke a tie, leading Los Angeles over Chicago. Steve Garvey started the Dodgers' winning rally with a leadoff double off loser Donnie Moore, 5-3.

Garvey was sacrificed to third, Joe Ferguson was hit by a pitch and pinch-hitter Lee Lacey was walked intentionally to set the stage for Lopes' game-winning hit.

"Not a lot of guys are clutch hitters," said the Dodgers' Reggie Smith, who hit a two-run homer for Los Angeles, "but Davey is one of them. It's confidence more than anything. He's developed late in his career, but he's in his prime now."

Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda praised Lopes as "one of the best clutch hitters in the game. He lives for those kind of situations. He has so many key hits for us this year."

Braves 5, Phillies 1

Biff Pocoroba's fourth-inning, two-run homer led Atlanta over Philadelphia, snapping a five-game Phillies' winning streak. Rookie Bob Horner slammed a one-out double in the fourth and Pocoroba followed with his fifth home run of the season for a 2-0 lead against Phillie starter Jim Lonborg, 7-8, who hasn't won since June 28.

Dale Murphy singled and Rod Gilbreath tripled for a third run, giving the Braves more than enough runs to win.

Eddie Solomon, starting only his third game of the season, earned his third victory in seven decisions with relief help from Craig Skok in the eighth.

Astros 6, Expos 5

Rafael Landestoy's two-run single capped Houston's six-run ninth inning as the Astros rallied from a five-run deficit to beat Montreal. Landestoy's hit was Houston's fifth of the inning and 16th of the game.

Enos Cabell's fourth hit of the game, a run-scoring double, drove in Houston's first run of the inning off reliever Mike Garman. Jesus Alou followed with a sacrifice fly off losing pitcher Darold Knowles, 2-3.

Pinch-hit, run-scoring singles by Wilbur Howard and Julio Gonzalez added a pair of additional runs before Landestoy drove his game-winning single to center.

Landestoy Makes Prediction Come True To Beat Montreal

HOUSTON (AP) — Rafael Landestoy has a better reputation as a baseball player than as a clairvoyant, but he may be receiving more recognition in both areas following Houston's latest victory.

"I told Pepe Frias (Montreal second baseman) that we were going to win the game 6-5 before we even scored a run," said Landestoy whose two-run single helped a six-run Astro ninth inning rally as Houston broke a seven-game losing streak with a 6-5 decision over the Expos Monday night.

"Pepe told me I was crazy," said Landestoy who walked to open the inning before moving to second base on a single by Terry Poole.

"When I came up with the winning runs on base, the only thing I wanted to do was make contact and try to hit the ball on the ground."

Landestoy's hit, the first game-winning hit of his brief major league career, followed a run-scoring double by Enos Cabell, a sacrifice fly by Jesus Alou and run-scoring singles by pinch-hitters Wilbur Howard and Julio Gonzales.

For Cabell, who collected three hits in addition to his ninth-inning double, the victory was especially gratifying.

"I don't like to lose even if we're 50 games out of first," Cabell said. "If I had gotten five hits and we had lost, the hits wouldn't have meant a thing."

The Expos took a 4-0 third-inning lead against Astro starter Mark Lemongello on a sacrifice fly by Andre Dawson, RBI singles by Ellis Valentine and Tony Perez and Larry Parrish's run-scoring double.

Ken Forsch, 5-4, hurled the ninth for Houston and surrendered a run-producing single to Chris Speier, but escaped with his third victory over the Expos in the last 10 days.

"The team's been playing bad lately," said Gary Carter, as the Expos dropped their fourth consecutive game. "I've been playing bad too, and when things go bad, things like this happen."

Darold Knowles, 2-3, surrendered three of Houston's six runs and was tagged with the loss.

'No-Name' Manager Leads Pennant Race

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe Altobelli has a lot in common with the two managers whose teams are chasing his San Francisco Giants in baseball's best pennant race.

"Sparky Anderson, Tommy Lasorda and Joe Altobelli. None of us were well-known names as players. Maybe that helped us become big league managers," Altobelli said during a weekend series against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"Maybe it's because we have the ability to bounce back from failure. We spent a lot of time in the minor leagues, and that's what you have to do there — keep going back to the drawing board," he said.

Altobelli played in more major league games, 166, than either the Cincinnati Reds' Anderson (152) or the Los Angeles Dodgers' Lasorda (26). And he also spent more time in the minors, as player and manager, than the other two.

He won International League pennants with Baltimore's Rochester (N.Y.) farm club his last four seasons in the minors and may have been considered an understudy to the Orioles' Earl Weaver, another manager whose playing career was undistinguished.

"I got this job because I had some successful clubs, and that was because the Baltimore scouts signed some pretty good players," says Altobelli, 46, whose off-season home is in Rochester.

He also got the Giants job, before the 1977 season, because the St. Louis Cardinals grabbed Vern Rapp, who was sought by the Giants and who lasted less than 1½ seasons with the Cards.

Altobelli's 1977 team finished fourth, 23 games behind the champion Dodgers, in the National League West and he looks back on the season as "probably the most educational year of my career."

He recalls, "I had to find out things about our players and also about other players in the league. I hadn't seen 10 of the 12 ballparks in the league."

It was back to the drawing board in spring training this year, when the Giants' general manager, Spec Richardson, made the big trade for pitcher Vida Blue.

The team has been in first place all but two days since May 12, mostly because Blue is the big man on the best pitching staff in the league. The hitting attack featuring Jack Clark, one of the sport's best young players, and 40-year-old Willie McCovey also is greatly improved.

The resulting improvement in attendance has been the most spectacular part of the Giants' 1978 story. The team that drew 700,000 fans all of last season could hit the one-million mark today.

"Spec has done a hell of a job," said Altobelli. "All the players he went out and got contributed something almost instantaneously, starting with Vida Blue and Mike Ivie."

North Coach Sees Lots Of Scoring

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — North Coach Don Beck of Perryton figures the Astrodome's $1 million scoreboard will get a good workout during the 46th annual Texas High School Coaching Association North-South All-Star football game.

"I think both teams are going to move the ball," said Beck, whose North stars will meet the South Saturday night in the Astrodome in the wind up of the weeklong coaching school.

"With the restrictions placed on defenses, it'll be high scoring," said Beck. "That will be a problem for us because we normally use a multiple defense (at Perryton) and it's the same for the South."

South Coach Doug Ethridge of Port Neches-Groves must cope with a basic defense plus teach a new offense to his probable starting quarterback, Dickinson's Donnie Little, the state's top schoolboy prospect last season.

Little, a master of Dickinson's veer offense last season, is learning the power-I offense but Ethridge figures Little will be ready for the challenge.

"The kid's got a great attitude and attitude is important in a game like this," Ethridge said. "He throws the ball real well too."

Ethridge isn't sure what to expect from his team.

"We've got great size in our linemen and quickness in our backs but it's hard to say what kind of game we'll have," Ethridge said. "The only handicap the South will have is me."

Beck's North team will operate a veer offense and the likely triggerman will be Sherman's Randy Wessinger.

"He's a very intelligent kid with a mind like a sponge," Beck said of Wessinger. "He retains everything and that's important in a game like this."

Little rushed 1,613 yards and passed for another 1,581 last year as Dickinson won 13 straight games en route to the Class 3A state championship. Wessinger completed 196 passes for 3,342 yards and rushed 1,670 yards during his schoolboy career.

The all-star basketball teams also held two workouts Monday at Hofheniz Pavilion, where the North-South game will be played Friday night.

The South team coached by Odessa Permian's Al Oglesby suffered an immediate setback when high scoring Terry Teague of Broaddus received a sprained ankle in the first workout. Oglesby said Teague would be held out of Tuesday's drills.

Registration started today with THSCA officials predicting attendance will top the record of 7,081 set at Dallas last year. The annual coaching school has set attendance records in each of the last 24 years.

Haley, Fairley Martinez Claim 'Stars' Honors

Competition in the womens' division of Lubbock SuperStars gets under way at Maxey Park next Sunday.

All the womens' divisions will in the last day of the second annual Superstars event. The events begin at 2 p.m.

The mens' competition concluded last weekend with Chuck Haley winning first place in the 37-39 age group. He edged Tommy Patterson by half a point. Patterson finished second with 50 points and Lynn Lafon was third with 49.5 points.

John Martinez grabbed first place in the 40-42 age group with 64 points, followed by Don Pirkle with 61.

In the 43-and-over bracket, Jerry Fairley was first with 54.5 points. Mike Higgins finished second with 52.5 and Gene Coppin with 44 points was third.

Mason Faces Third Clinic

Danny Mason, Texas Tech golf coach, will leave here Sunday to participate in his third golf workshop in a month.

Mason, the area consultant for the National Golf Foundation, will join 60 other teachers at Pinehurst, N.C., for a week of intensive training. The list of other golf teachers includes nationally regarded pros Bob Toski and Jack Fleck.

Mason completed last week a golf workshop at Tech for graduate students who will join the golfing ranks following graduation. He also participated earlier this summer in a graduate-course workshop for high school golf coaches. The high school session was held at Junction.

All the workshops were affiliated with the National Golf Foundation.

Happy Royals Up Victory Streak

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

In the past two American League Championship Series, the New York Yankees defeated the Kansas City Royals in five games and it was generally noted that Yankees Manager Billy Martin outmanaged Kansas City field boss Whitey Herzog.

Despite those playoff losses, the Royals' players stand behind Herzog 100 percent. And now they know Martin won't be outmanaging Herzog in this season's playoffs.

The fiery Martin resigned Monday, several hours before the Royals rallied to beat the Yankees 5-2. Martin's downfall was precipitated in part by his inability to get along with his players, a problem Herzog hasn't encountered.

"Whitey is honest," said pitcher Larry Gura, an ex-Yankee who always was at odds with Martin. "That's the best thing about him. He lets you know where you stand."

Right now, the Royals stand atop the American League West. They've won 10 in a row, including Monday's triumph over New York, their fifth in a row over the defending world champions. They're a happy club.

"If you can't play for Whitey, you have no business being in the major leagues," added All-Star third baseman George Brett.

Brett was one of the heroes for the Royals, driving in the winning run with a single to left off reliever Sparky Lyle in the seventh inning. Brett's hit followed pinch-hitter Steve Braun's two-out double, which Thurman Munson dropped in right field.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston and Minnesota split a doubleheader, the Twins winning the first game 5-4 and the Red Sox the second 4-2; Detroit bested Oakland 4-1; Chicago beat Milwaukee 4-1; California outlasted Cleveland 5-4 in 16 innings; Seattle swept Toronto 1-0 and 7-2 and Baltimore overcame Texas 10-6.

Twins 5-2, Red Sox 4-4

Boston broke a five-game slide with its nightcap victory as Carl Yastrzemski knocked in the 1,500th run of his career with an single in the sixth inning. After a long standing ovation, Carlton Fisk belted Minnesota hurler Geoff Zahn's next pitch for a three-run homer.

"It was nice to get the ovation here because this is where I started my career back with the Minneapolis Millers (in 1960)," said Yastrzemski, a 17-year veteran. "It was nice to get the RBI but it was more pleasing to get a hit because Zahn was pitching a whale of a game against us.

"I didn't want to tip my hat immediately and I think the commotion broke Zahn's concentration. On the next pitch he gave up a homer to Fisk."

Mike Torrez was ejected in the first inning of the second game when he argued too vehemently on a balk call that scored the Twins' first run.

"I've done that a 1,000 times and I did everything like I normally do, so it wasn't a balk. I can tell you that," said Torrez. "It was a lousy call and I told the umpire (Greg Kosc), so he thumbed me."

In the opener, Rod Carew's pinch-hit two-run double in the sixth gave Minnesota the triumph.

Tigers 4, A's 1

Rookie Kip Young won his first major league start with a six-hitter before about 50 of his friends and relatives, and Rusty Staub slammed a two-run homer for Detroit.

Young, a Bowling Green University product who was selected in the 23rd round in the 1976 draft, retired 15 of the last 16 A's he faced.

"I didn't feel too confident after the draft back in '76," said Young. "But I said, 'Well, they gave me an opportunity and I'll just see what I can do.'"

Staub tied Boston's Jim Rice for the major league RBI lead with 81.

White Sox 4, Brewers 1

Steve Stone four-hit Milwaukee as the White Sox broke a nine-game losing skein.

"I came up with a new pitch, a forkball, and I used it a lot," said Stone. "I got a few guys out throwing it. The idea came from watching too many of my balls going out of the park."

Angels 5, Indians 4

Dave Chalk's single scored Don Baylor after Baylor had been hit by a Jim Kern pitch in the 16th inning.

"I told the guys that if he came inside, I was going to have to get hit," said Baylor. "I turned my arm and it hit me right below the elbow. I've been hit there so many times that now it just gets numb for a moment and it doesn't hurt."

Baylor had his 23rd homer earlier in the game.

Mariners 1-7, Blue Jays 0-2

Seattle swept a pair, winning the opener on Rick Honeycutt's three-hitter and the nightcap with Craig Reynolds hitting a pair of doubles and Leon Roberts homering.

Orioles 10, Rangers 6

Lee May's two-run single and an RBI hit by Pat Kelly, the 1,000th safety of his career, keyed a five-run ninth inning rally for Baltimore.

Efren Herrera Still Unsigned

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Place kicker Efren Herrera stayed away from camp in his contract dispute, but officials of the Dallas Cowboys announced that starting offensive tackle Pat Donovan has agreed to terms on a multi-year contract.

Terms and length of the contract were undisclosed.

As the Cowboys headed toward Saturday's annual intrasquad scrimmage in California Lutheran's football stadium, all five top draft choices worked out in pads Monday, the first time that's happened since training camp began.

Larry Bethea, the No. 1 choice from Michigan State, joined the afternoon drills, which included heavy hitting among the offensive and defensive linemen. Bethea has been troubled by a bruised ankle since camp opened two weeks ago.

Tom Rafferty, the starting right guard, suffered an injured calf and had to leave the afternoon session. Team doctors said they expected to learn today how serious the damage was, but they said it did not appear to be serious.

Only two rookies were unable to work in pads Monday. They were free agent defensive backs Dave Elliott from Presbyterian and Mike Kramer of Alabama.

Housing Standards Administrator

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

Variable Interest Rate Called 'Loan Sharking'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federally chartered savings and loan associations may soon grant some mortgages without fixed interest rates, unless the federal agency that regulates the institutions gets a red light from Congress.

Opposition is expected on Capitol Hill to the variable rate mortgages, which the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said on Monday it wants to allow homeowners as an alternative to conventional mortgages.

The chairman of the House Banking Committee's consumer affairs subcommittee, Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., says the proposal, which would allow interest rates to fluctuate with market conditions, amounts to "legal loan sharking."

The prospect of ever-higher interest rates, Annunzio says, means consumers could suffer under the plan.

The board, however, says regulations aecompanying its proposal would protect consumers.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, sent the agency a letter expressing his "shock" at the proposal.

And the National Association of Home Builders said the plan would "add to the already escalating cost of housing, preventing increasing numbers of families from acquiring homes."

The agency withdrew a proposal to allow variable rate mortgages in 1975 when Congress appeared ready to ban it.

Unless Congress disapproves, the board can allow the new financing scheme in 60 days "where needed to preserve competitive balance," meaning that it would initially be felt only in states that allow state-chartered institutions to grant variable rate mortgages.

But agency officials foresee the idea spreading if more state regulating boards approveariable rate mortgages.

The House Banking Committee voted 24-20 last month to allow the alternative mortgages where state-regulated institutions already have permission, but an effort is expected on the House floor to kill that legislation.

The board proposal included several regulations which it said would protect borrowers.

The regulations would:

—Allow interest rates to rise no more than one-half of a percentage point a year, with a maximum interest rate over the life of the loan 2.5 percentage points beyond the rate for the very first payment.

—Let a borrower choose a standard, fixed-rate mortgage if he preferred.

—Allow only one change a year in the monthly payment.

—Provide that at least half of an institution's home mortgages be of the conventional type.

The bank board also proposed allowing homeowners to make relatively small mortgage payments in the beginning with compensatingly higher payments later.

The board estimated the graduated payment method, if implemented throughout the country, would allow 2.5 million more families to own their homes.

But the change, as with the variable rate mortgages, would initially be allowed only in states already granting the option.

With a graduated-payment mortgage, a home buyer begins paying off a mortgage with relatively small payments that increase gradually as, presumably, his ability to pay grows.

Opponents of the plan contend, however, that home buyers would wind up paying more because of the higher balance on which interest would continue to be paid.

The board's plan would require that homeowners be told the difference they'd pay in interest.

Payments could increase a maximum of 7.5 percent of the first year's interest rate per year for up to five years. Monthly payments for the remainder of the mortgage could not be more those of the fifth year.

Seventeen states now allow savings and loans they charter to offer one or the other of the two financing plans. They are California, Connecticut, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Washington and Wisconsin.

The board said it would also consider approving two other mortgage alternatives for individual savings and loans if the alternatives were needed to preserve competition.

One is the rollover mortgage, which would require long-term maturities to be refinanced at three-year intervals. The other is the reverse annuity mortgage, allowing older families to receive some of the equity back on their houses.

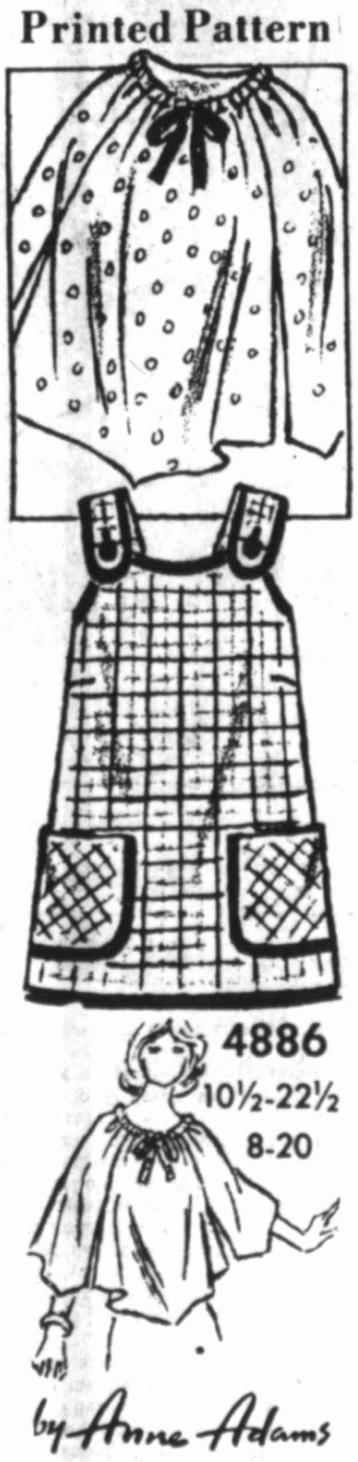

Four-fifths of the nation's savings and loans are federally chartered.

Man Enters Guilty Plea In Murder

A 33-year-old father of eight children pleaded guilty Monday to the 1976 murder of another man outside a Posey cafe.

Santos Vidales, of Lubbock, could be imprisoned for five to 99 years or life for the gunshot slaying of Porfirio Florez Martinez, 39, a Slaton-area farm laborer.

District Judge John R. McFall recessed a punishment hearing in 237th District Court until he receives a presentencing report from a probation officer. At the judge's discretion, Vidales could be given a probated sentence of not more than 10 years.

Vidales, who waived his right to a jury trial and took the stand as a state's witness, admitted he shot Martinez shortly after midnight on July 17, 1976.

The victim died later at Methodist Hospital.

Prosecutor Rick Howell read the statements of witnesses outside Helen's Cafe in Posey. They said Martinez was about to leave when the defendant, who had played pool with him earlier, called him over to his pickup truck. When Martinez reached the truck, Vidales shot him with a .22-caliber rifle.

"Did you know what you were doing," asked Howell. "I think so," answered Vidales.

"Did you mean to kill him?"

"No, sir."

Judge McFall, in questioning Vidales prior to the brief trial, cautioned the defendant that he was eligible for probation only by virtue of having no previous felony convictions.

"There is no guarantee of probation," the judge said, "and it is very rare in cases of murder."

West Target Of 'Roast'

After years of lampooning Lubbockites, their football teams and alma maters, through his cartoon characters, Lubbock's Mayor-Cartoonist Dirk West is scheduled to be on the receiving end when the Lubbock Chapter of the American Diabetes Association sponsors a Dirk West Roast next month.

The roast is set for Monday, August 14, at 8 p.m. at the Cold Water Country building.

A group of Lubbock citizens will take over the task of "roasting" the mayor. Cost for the evening, which includes the Roast, dinner, champagne and a dance, is $50 per couple with the Diabetes Association sharing in the proceeds.

Roastmaster for the event will be Bill McAlister. Also on the program will be Carolyn Jordan, Carroll McDonald, Jay McClure, Jim Sexton, and David Yirak, each roasting and toasting the mayor. Roy Bass and Jay Harris also are scheduled to add their comments, Leslie Thurman, Miss Lubbock, and Janis Geddes, will provide special music. Don Caldwell's orchestra will play for the dance.

Tickets are available, the sponors announced, at the Cold Water VIP room, Malouf's downtown store and Hemphill-Wells South Plains Mall location.

Church Notes Rise In Contributions

ATLANTA (AP) — The Presbyterian Church reports that although its national membership declined by .9 percent last year, contributions to the church increased by almost 18 percent during the same period.

Contributions in 1977 were $245.2 million, up $37.2 million from 1976. That represents an average contribution of $280, up from $236 in 1976, according to figures released by the Office of the General Assembly. At the same time, the church's membership declined by 7,923 to a total of 874,897.

DR. LAMB

Borderline Diabetes?

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I went to my internist for my annual physical. My blood sugar was elevated so the doctor had me take the glucose tolerance test. He said I was a borderline diabetic.

What bothers me is that I was on the Weight Watchers Diet until the day I took the test. He didn't tell me to go on a special diet for the test. I told the doctor this and he said it didn't make any difference as this diet isn't drastic.

I have read several articles that said this could cause the test to read like a person had diabetes. It has been three years and I have had blood tests every three months. They have all been well within the normal range. What is your opinion of this?

DEAR READER — You have raised a good point. I'm not sure what your doctor meant by your being a borderline diabetic as these terms are used differently by different people. However, it is true that if you have been on a weight-losing diet or any diet that restricts carbohydrate intake, and then take a glucose tolerance test you may get results that look like a person has diabetes.

In fact, in the latest edition of one of our textbooks of medicine ("Harrison's Principles of Internal Medicine," 7th Edition) the diabetic specialist states specifically:

"It is mandatory that the patient be on a preparatory diet containing 250 to 300 grams of carbohydrate for three days before testing; otherwise a decreased carbohydrate tolerance may be observed, known as starvation diabetes."

Your doctor probably felt that the Weight Watchers Diet had enough carbohydrate in it to minimize this effect. Nevertheless, I would prefer to see all patients who are not known diabetics and who are going to have a glucose tolerance test be sure that they hav an adequate amount of carbohydrate each day for at least three days before testing. This can be in the form of starches, breads, even candy bars, whatever is needed for a three-day period to get the body used to handling large loads of carbohydrates.

The reason this happens is that a person who has very little carbohydrate in his diet loses the ability to produce insulin rapidly if he is then challenged with an unusually large amount of glucose or sugar from any source. Even our body chemistry has to be exercised to work regularly in proper fashion.

The other reason that your doctor may have thought you had a problem could have been if you had a high fasting blood glucose level, as you letter implies. In that case the diet would not be of particular importance.

However, a diagnosis of diabetes is not properly made on the basis of a single isolated elevated blood sugar or even one abnormal glucose tolerance test. Since your sugars have been in the normal range ever since, I see very litter reason for you to be concerned about it.

Since you are obviously interested in diabetes, I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention and Management. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Homosexuals Win Ordinance In Connecticut

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Following months of controversy, the Hartford City Council voted 5-2, with one abstention, to adopt an ordinance prohibiting discrimination against homosexuals.

Action on the ordinance had been stalled repeatedly during recent months as opponents and supporters of the measure waged vigorous campaigns.

The ordiance, which requires that all city contracts include pledges by contractors not to discriminate in hiring on the basis of a worker's sexual preferences, was approved without council debate Monday night.

The measure also prohibits discrimination by the city on the basis of sexual preference.

Council Majority Leader Richard Suisman, who co-sponsored the ordinance with Deputy Mayor Nicholas R. Carbone, said Hartford was the first city to endorse a gay rights ordinance since a recent wave of public opposition against measures that outline homosexual rights. The issue heated last year when Dade County, Fla., repealed a homosexual rights ordinance following a campaign waged against the measure by singer Anita Bryant.

While the council considered the controversial ordinance, a small group of conservative Roman Catholics, known as the Blue Berets, sat in the audience.

A leader of the group, Maria Pressamarita of East Hartford, said, "We did all we can. Now they will reap what they sow. The council sold the people of Hartford down the drain," she said, adding, "They have gone against God."

The group had strongly opposed the ordinance.

Dental Laboratory Reports Gold Heist

NEW YORK (UPI) — About $100,000 in gold used to fill teeth was stolen from a Manhattan dental laboratory over the weekend.

Police said Monday burglars broke into the Restor-A-Dental Labs Inc. and took 80 ounces of gold, which would fit into an attache case, from two safes.

They said the burglary took place between 8 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Monday.
